1984: Our Love Was

by CarburetorCastiel

Summary

Steve is a closeted Brooklyn cop looking for someone to settle down with and finally have his family. Bucky is an alcoholic who works at his friend's record shop and is the only guardian of his two little sisters since their parent's died. When the youngest Barnes gets lost in Brooklyn, Steve and Bucky have a rushed but significant first encounter that ends in a promise for more. Set in the 1980s, this chronicles their days of falling in love, staying together against opposition, and fighting for what they want.

Notes

ATTENTION:
Please note that this work is meant to be seen as a sort of television show. The style of writing is very much a day-to-day (slice-of-life) episodic format with major plot points overarching over smaller points for several chapters much like seasons in TV shows. The seasons and episodes are denoted in the chapter titles. This work can be read as one very lengthy work, or can be read by seasons. This work always was meant to be seen like a long-running TV show sort of thing. It should feel more like a saga of something like a family drama and less like a very long novel. I write more movie scripts than I do novels so this flow just feels more natural to me. (However, this does NOT mean this is supposed to resemble a script at all. The ideas of it being a tv show are more akin to the plots and themes and less the actual writing and format itself. See the paragraph below explaining the semi-RP-format.) My intent with this clear outline of seasons is also to make it easy for people to either read the chapter every week or to binge read through a season at a time and then wait for the next season.

This is Co-Authored by me (CarburetorCastiel) and K. Edited by me (CarburetorCastiel). Posted here with K's permission (K does not have an AO3 at this time.) This was originally an RP and remains in a semi-RP format with dividing lines between what I wrote and what K wrote. I am Bucky and K is Steve - we took turns with other characters. WIP, Updated every Tuesday or Wednesday - either one or two chapters per update. Any questions, please contact me here or on my tumblr https://friend-lover-janitor.tumblr.com/

So much love and thanks to K for being such a great co-author and making this project with me. I love this project so much and I am so grateful to K. I think we work so well together. Literally, can't thank you enough, Love.
Bucky ran from the school down the two blocks to the police station. Becca had been waiting at the pickup entrance for her older brother when school was out but the younger one - Lilly - wasn't there with her. Bucky had frantically asked where Lilly had gone and Becca said that she assumed she stayed home sick because she hadn't seen her all day. Bucky had just come from home and Lilly was definitely not there. He was worried that she was lost in Brooklyn or had made her way to one of the other Boroughs. Or worse, someone snatched her from the school before Becca or Bucky were with her.

Bucky left Becca with one of the teachers and ran. He reached the Brooklyn police station, flung open the door and marched in. "Lilly. She's missing. My little sister Lillian Barnes. She wasn't at school and I think someone either took her or she's lost in New York or run away or who knows. Please, I need help," Bucky said in a rush to a very displeased looking attendant at the front desk. "Excuse me?" Bucky pushed when he got nothing. "She could be in danger. She's just a little kid!"

Steve had been on street duty that day when he saw a little girl with brunette hair done up in a braid wandering around the street. It wasn't uncommon for kids her age to be out and about a little too young, but Steve knew a lost kid when he saw one. He approached her and she looked to be barely keeping calm.

"Hey, Kiddo. You lost?" He asked. She nodded her head. He brought her to the precinct and let the secretary at the desk know to leave a message on the number Lilly had told him so her parent would pick her up when they got home.

Steve had barely finished the milkshake he got for the two of them when a man around his age came rushing in asking for her. "Bucky! That's my brother!" Lilly said excitedly, running over to him.

Bucky slammed his knees into the ground so fast when he saw her coming and was kneeling down closer to her level when she attacked him in a giant hug. "Dammit, Lilly. I was so fucking scared." Bucky pulled back to look her up and down and put his hand on the side of her head. "I was so worried, you weren't with Becca or at home. What the hell happened to you? Have you been walking around Brooklyn all day?"

Lilly wiped her hand across her mouth and then wiped some tears that were forming in Bucky's eyes. "I didn't want to go to school today so I thought I'd just skip but then I couldn't find my way to the park and then I couldn't find my way back to the school and then I just didn't know where I was." Lilly whipped around and pointed up at a jacked officer wearing a uniform that was just slightly too tight for him in all the right places. "This cop found me."

Steve smiled warmly as the two reunited. He didn't wish that sort of panic on anyone, but he was happy to see that they were back together without too much trouble. As an officer, there were far too many tragedies he'd encountered not to take comfort in the happy endings.
Steve patted Lilly's shoulder. "Besides the whole cutting school thing, she was well-behaved," he said to Bucky. "I picked her up and we got some milkshakes. She hasn't been here too long." Steve saw the shine in Bucky's eyes and gave him a gentle look. "Would you two like a ride home? You look like you had one heck of a day."

---

"Oh, well, the school is just two blocks down and we still need to get Becca. I think we can manage, but thank you." Bucky smiled at the man and let his gaze linger on his lips for a bit longer than he should have.

Just then Lilly pulled on Bucky's shirt and said, "No, please can we go in the police car? Becca will like it! And she can meet Mr. Steve too!"

Bucky looked from Lilly to the man who was apparently called Steve. He thrust out a hand and Steve shook it. "I'm Bucky, by the way. Thanks so much for bringing my sister here. I guess we will take that ride if you are still offering it."

---

Part of Steve's job was to notice things, so he saw how Bucky's eyes lingered on him. The man was pretty easy on the eyes and he was always a sucker for someone who cared deeply about their family. He was disappointed when Bucky declined at first but Lilly came to the rescue.

Steve shook Bucky's hand. "I'm Officer Rogers, but Steve is fine, too. The offer for the ride is still there, but I'm not putting either of you in handcuffs. You'd be surprised how many people ask me to do that," he chuckled. When they got to his car, he opened up the back for the two of them.

---

Bucky slid into the backseat and Lilly followed in after. He told Steve which school Becca was at and they went to get her. When they pulled up, she was waiting outside with the teacher since Bucky had called the school from the precinct to tell them that they were on their way.

When she saw the cop car parking in front of the school and her brother getting out of the backseat to come get her, Becca's jaw dropped. "What did I miss in the last ten minutes?" She asked and followed Bucky to the car.

"Your sister tried to skip school and got lost." Bucky took Becca's backpack and she got into the middle seat beside Lilly.

"Becca," Lilly gestured to the driver. "This is Mr. Steve. He picked me up."

"Officer Rogers, Lilly. Be polite," Bucky corrected her.

---

Steve laughed. "It's okay, Mr. Steve works too," he said. "It's something new and new things are pretty cool, right?" Lilly nodded excitedly. From the looks of it, she was happy to have been found. He asked Bucky for the address and once he got it, he headed towards their apartment. "We left a message on the home phone for her parents, but I guess you can ignore it when you get home." He glanced in the rearview mirror at the three of them. "You didn't skip school too, did you?" He joked.
Becca smiled proudly and shook her head. "No, Sir, this year I have a perfect attendance record - not even one sick day - and I intend to keep it."

"Woah, that's really impressive." Steve was genuine about it but he played it up just a little because Becca was still a kid and deserved a little extra excitement.

Bucky rolled his eyes, "Yes, she's very proud. She's following right in our father's footsteps as the academic one, aren't you, Becs?"

Becca nodded again and said, "And Lilly is the athlete like our mom was."

Lilly piped up then too, thinking that it was sharing time and anything goes, she said, "And Bucky dropped out of college." Bucky shot her a sharp glance meant to keep her quiet but she wasn't quite done. "He had to quit so we could stay a family and not be put in one of those homes."

When they started talking about parents in the past tense, Steve started to worry but then it got full-blown awkward when Lilly talked about Bucky dropping out to keep their family together. He gave Bucky an apologetic look in the mirror - not so much pity as it was being sorry that a sensitive topic was brought up without Bucky's permission. "He made a big sacrifice for you two," Steve said finally after trying to think of something to say. "I expect you to behave a little better so he has a little less to worry about, okay? So no more cutting school," he said patiently to Lilly.

Lilly pursed her lips and scuffed her foot on the carpet of the car. "Didn't mean it like that. I just didn't want to go today. Wasn't trying to make anyone worried," she mumbled.

"I know, Kiddo. I'm sure you didn't mean anything by it, but there are still consequences for the decisions you make, even if you weren't looking to hurt anyone," Steve said gently.

Bucky sunk a little further in his seat but sat up once he saw their apartment building. "This, this is us." Bucky tapped on the window. "Right here. Thanks again for the ride, Officer."

Steve pulled over and put the car in park. He got out and helped the girls get their stuff and watched them both run up the stairs to the door of the building with their keys in hand while Bucky stayed out on the sidewalk to talk to him.

"Look, I really appreciate all your help today with Lilly and the ride," Bucky started. "And I'm sorry for Lilly. She doesn't really get what is an appropriate conversation and what isn't. I'm just glad she didn't ask about your whole life's story or your family or girlfriend or how much money you make or anything. She tends to be nosy."

---

"It's okay, helping's part of the job and kids are kids." Steve was quiet for a beat before he put his hands in his pockets nervously. "You have a lot on your plate," he said. "I probably could bet good money it's been a long time since you had a night out... so what do you say one of these days, I can ask my mom to look after your sisters and we can grab a few drinks?"

---

Bucky stood up a bit straighter and grinned. "You're right, I don't really have the time to get out. Haven't gone to a club for a few years now. Used to go to Disco Dandy's all the time." He pocketed his hands and tried to keep the heat from rising to his face when he looked at Steve's chest and his eyes and his jaw and everything about him. "That girlfriend won't mind if I borrow you for a night, then?"

---

Steve couldn't help but think how beautiful Bucky was when he smiled. He kept that to himself, knowing that men liking men wasn't exactly something most people were okay with. He cleared his throat and added, "The only woman in my life right now is my mom, and we've decided to be strictly platonic. So, yeah, I'm free for a night." He pulled out his notepad and wrote his home phone number on it so he could give it to Bucky.

---

Bucky took the paper with a nod and refused to grin when Steve said he didn't have a girlfriend. It wasn't like Bucky expected this to go anywhere, but it was nicer to look at someone as handsome as Steve when Bucky knew there wasn't someone waiting back home for him. Except it also wasn't a good sign that this could be something when Steve hadn't made any visible reaction to knowing that Disco Dandy's was a gay nightclub that opened up when Bucky and Steve would have been in middle school.

---

Steve patted Bucky on the shoulder and wished him a good night. Bucky seemed like a good guy and although Steve wasn't short on friends, he was always happy to have more. Especially when they were as kind-hearted as Bucky.
Steve was excited for the phone call and when they had a night picked out, he drove his mom over so she would stay at the apartment while he and Bucky went out. She had a bag full of baking supplies so they could make cakes and cookies while Bucky was away. Steve was dressed neatly but casually enough so he didn't look too stiff. He knocked on the door to Bucky's apartment.

---

"Hey, come on in!" Lilly opened the door and ushered Steve and his mother inside. "Careful stepping around the boxes." She waved offhandedly at rows and stacks of cardboard and crate boxes filled with records.

---

Steve's eyebrows lifted at the rows of boxes. It was as if the home was a second storage for a vinyl shop. Or maybe even the primary storage, going by how many there were. Steve peeked in one and noticed it was packed full enough that pulling one record out would have been a task. His mom looked like she was holding back the urge to tidy it all up. "Hey, Girls. This is my mom Sarah. She's always wanted daughters, so don't let her take you home, okay?" He teased.

---

"Hello, Mr. Steve." Becca came up to him and shook his hand and then introduced herself to his mother. "Bucky will be right out. He had on one outfit then ran back to his room saying it wasn't good enough so he should just be a minute."

Little did any of them know, Bucky could hear their conversation through the wall and he swore to himself and said, "That little shit. I just want to look nice, right?" Bucky looked at himself in the mirror and tried to decide whether to put his long hair up or leave it down. "No crime in wanting to look nice next to an office of the law, right?"

---

Steve looked down the hall where he assumed Bucky was before focusing on Becca again. "He should have let one of you pick his outfit," he said. "That way if he's not happy with it, he at least can't blame himself."

---

"Oh, I've tried." Becca sighed. "But, no one tells Bucky what to wear. Even if it's been out of style for three years, if he wants to wear it, he's wearing it." He might come out wearing our dad's old Navy uniform just because he wants to and none of us could get him to change."

Bucky called from his room, "I'm not wearing Dad's Navy uniform, you sassy little girl." He swung the door open and stepped out towards everyone. "I'm wearing this." He gestured down his body at a shirt that was very blue and very tight in the arms and nice flared jeans with tan shoes. He had decided to go ahead and throw his hair up in a ponytail. He could always take it down later if he wanted. Bucky usually wasn't this well dressed. He actually normally hated wearing anything but t-shirts, but he really wanted to impress Steve. "And you must be Mrs. Rogers." Bucky moved to shake Steve's mom's hand and saw Steve following his movements out of the corner of his eye.
Steve wasn’t underdressed by any means, but Bucky clearly had the better outfit out of the two of them. He stared because Bucky really was gorgeous to start with and that was only accented by the smart choice of clothing. Something told Steve this was a special occasion outfit for Bucky, though, because he seemed like he was slightly uncomfortable in the tight shirt.

"Call me Sarah," Steve's mom insisted. "I expect you to have a fun evening out. My son told me you're long overdue for one of those and I won't have for you being responsible until you come back."

Steve loved his mom. Being an only kid had its perks because she got to give him all her attention. "Ready to go, Buck?" He asked.

Bucky turned to face Steve. 'Bucky' was already a nickname and not many people shortened it to just 'Buck' but it sounded nice coming from Steve's lips. Bucky nodded and grabbed his coat from where it had been draped on the couch. "Sure thing!" He kissed both his sisters on the top of the head and told them to be good for Miss Sarah to which they both emphatically promised that they would.

Bucky didn’t get quite excited until he was out in the fresh air of the evening with Steve and nothing to worry about. He hadn’t had a good drinking buddy for a few months now and the thought of drinking with a new buddy and just being able to relax for a while really got him going. Once his feet hit the pavement he rounded on Steve and asked, "So, where are we going?"

Steve doubted Bucky was a miserable guy, but he had to have been overburdened to take care of two kids at his age. Seeing him so lively and excitable was really nice. He laughed when Bucky fired out the questions as soon as they got on the sidewalk.

"Well, there's this bar that serves pretty good food that I go to for my lunch breaks. But if you want a quieter setting, there're a few restaurants I can recommend." He put his hands in his pockets and shrugged. "Really, this night is about doing what you want."

"Oh, god," Bucky started. "What I want? I haven't really gotten to do what I want in a few years." Bucky looked over to Steve. "You would not believe how many times I wanted something nice to eat but the girls insisted on pizza so pizza was what we had." Bucky thought for a moment trying to make a decision. "Well," he started again, "I think I need some drinks. And unless those nice restaurants don't mind me getting a little drunk I think the bar is our best bet. What do you think?"

The more Bucky spoke, the more Steve was amazed by him. "A bar works for me. And who knows, if my mom likes your sisters enough, maybe she can babysit another night and we can get some fancy food." Bucky sacrificed so much; Steve couldn't help but want to spoil him a little. The only person he had around to spend money on was his mom. Steve bit his lip and said, "So, uh... those records. Are you some sort of world-class hoarder, or do you sell them?" Steve asked. "I saw a few good ones there. That Bowie cover is nice."

---

Bucky flushed red in his cheeks. "Well, I guess I'm both. I collect records but I also work down at the record shop on third. I don't know if you know it." Bucky followed Steve as he turned the corner and started headed down a different road. "But I do collect an awful lot of them. That 'Aladdin Sane' original cover isn't going anywhere but in a frame as soon as I can get one for it. David Bowie is one of my favorites."

---

"I've been to that shop a few times - not too often to buy records, but because your store's neighbors have a bad habit of dealing drugs from their basement," Steve chuckled. "Bowie's great. But I think I like The Police a little better right now. For obvious reasons," he joked. Steve felt comfortable with Bucky. Usually, there was a bit of a learning curve before he was chatty with someone he just met. "So what else do you like to do? Assuming you ever get free time."

---

Bucky held in a laugh at Steve's dorky joke and tried his best not to make some snarky retort. "Well, music is my life, honestly. I was going to business school to try to start my own record label." Bucky sighed, "I wanted to discover amazing talented musicians and give them a leg up in the industry and get to say that I was a part of bringing beautiful music to as many people as I could." He sighed again because he knew that would never happen now.

---

God, Steve wasn't really the swooning type but he was totally swooning right now. He played it cool, though. He just met this guy. "I know it's not really ideal, but there are plenty of people who are successful even after they're middle aged," Steve said. "You can still go back, even if you got to wait until your sisters are adults." He nudged Bucky gently. "You're passionate about this. Life can set your dreams back, but that doesn't mean they have to stay back."

The bar wasn't too far - after a few blocks they came upon it and Steve opened the door for Bucky.

---

Bucky slipped into the bar in front of Steve and waited for him to show him where to sit. It wasn't a very large place and most of the people inside seemed to recognize Steve the second they saw his face. "Cozy place," Bucky said. He was definitely used to the bars that he frequented where there were tons of people, it was loud, and someone was always fighting somebody.

Steve gestured towards a booth near the back and Bucky walked swiftly towards it. This was nice. Just a night out with no little siblings to be in charge of and no stoner co-workers to keep track of and no goddamn noise. On top of it, the bar was playing some choice music and Bucky was more than pleased to hear it.

---

Steve was pleased to see that Bucky approved of the spot. It would've been a shame if he picked a bar that didn't suit Bucky's fancy. "Yeah, this one isn't a cop bar, but I like it." Sometimes when he needed a break from his coworkers he would eat and relax here instead. "What drink do you want? I'll get it."

---

"My god, I didn't know cop bars were a real thing." Bucky giggled. "I thought it was just a television trope. And, uh, I'll take a whiskey neat, please," Bucky answered and watched Steve walk away to get the drinks. Bucky honestly tried not to stare at Steve but it was hard to when he was wearing those pants that were loose down on the legs and tight around the ass.

---

Steve got Bucky's whiskey and got himself a beer before returning with alcohol in hand. He passed Bucky his before taking a seat. "So how old are they? Your sisters?" He asked. "Are they both pain-in-the-butt teenagers?"

---

Bucky gratefully took his glass from Steve and sipped it before shrugging and saying, "Not too much pain-in-the-butt but, yes, pre-teens. Becca is fourteen and Lilly is eleven - so basically almost a teen according to her. What about you - any siblings?"

---

Steve chuckled and sipped at his beer. His eyes briefly met Bucky's before he looked just past him. "I'm an only child. My dad passed not long after I was born."

---

"Oh, I'm sorry to hear that," Bucky said after another sip of whiskey. "Your mother seems like a wonderful woman, by the way. I noticed she brought baking stuff. The girls are going to love that."

Bucky saw a drip of beer sitting on Steve's lip and he really wanted to lean forward and wipe it off with his thumb or kiss it off or something. But then Bucky remembered himself and where he was and the company that was around him.

---

"It's alright. We all have stuff happen," Steve said. "My mom's amazing. I was telling your sisters she always wanted daughters, so she probably is having just as much fun as they are." He licked his lips clean of the beer and let his gaze settle on Bucky again. "So do you own the record store or just work there?"

---

"No, oh no." Bucky leaned back in his seat. "That would be wonderful - ideal - but no. I just work there. Clint is the owner." Bucky leaned forward in his seat again and got closer to Steve to say something like it was a secret. "Want to know something interesting about him, though?"

---

Steve leaned forward too, playing along and using it as an excuse to get closer to Bucky. "Oh yeah?
What's that?" He seemed more interested in having a better look at the man in front of him than hearing about his boss.

---

Bucky eyed Steve as he moved closer and chuckled once he was in hearing range and said, "He owns a record store but... he can't hear. He says music is his favorite thing cause he can feel the vibrations of the sound but he doesn't actually hear that well."

---

Steve looked surprised. "Oh, wow. That's actually really impressive," Steve said. "Had he always been deaf? Or did something happen to him?" He asked. Steve stretched his feet out, accidentally knocking his foot into Bucky's. "Sorry."

---

A ghost of a smile crossed Bucky's lips, "That's okay. And I don't know. I've never asked." Bucky paused for a moment and moved his hands into a fist on the table. "Hey, can..." he cleared his throat. "Can I ask you something?"

---

Steve bit his bottom lip, not sure what question Bucky would have but he supposed it couldn't hurt. He wanted Bucky to feel comfortable around him, so answering a few questions should be fine. "Yeah?"

---

"Why're you doing this?" Bucky asked steadily. "Why'd you ask me to go out for a drink with you? I know you said you thought I needed some time for myself but why not just tell me to take some time and then just go your own way?" Bucky wasn't rude in asking. He wasn't trying to be sassy or snarky or anything like that. He was genuinely just curious as to what the two of them were doing here tonight.

---

Steve paused, not really thinking that this would've been strange. But he supposed it was a fair question. "You're a good guy," he said. "I like keeping company with people who I think are good. As a cop, I see some really awful things happen. It's nice to see the best that humanity has to offer. Besides, everyone needs someone to have their back."

---

"Ah, okay, so you got a bit lonely over at your police station, did you?" Now Bucky was being snarky and playful and hoped Steve could tell. Bucky wouldn't necessarily call it flirting but it was damn close. He was starting to like this Mr. Steve and wanted to push his luck with him just a bit further before he decided that they were only ever going to be just friends. Although, if Bucky knew anything it was looks, and Steve had been giving his body some surveying looks since they had met.
"Yeah, you caught me," Steve joked, leaning back casually in his chair and giving Bucky a smile. "You know, it was the other night that was the final straw for me. I was sitting at my desk filing another report while eating doughnuts when I said to myself: Steve, you’ve got to change your life. It's time to make friends with some long-haired hippie who works in retail." He nudged him lightly to show he didn't mean anything by it.

---

"I'll tell you, man, us long haired hippies are the best company to keep. Even for a cop." Bucky took another sip of his whiskey and added, "Although, I got to say, getting to know you more, you don't strike me as the typical officer type. So what got you into it, huh?"

---

Steve smiled and shrugged his shoulders. "I like helping people. I know a lot of people do it for the power and the pay and status. But really, I just want to be someone people know they can go to for safety," he admitted. "My ma wanted me to be an artist. It was the safer option."

---

Bucky crossed his legs under the table and slide one foot so it was barely touching Steve's shin but Bucky could tell that Steve had noticed the move. "Do you still do art? I'm always impressed by creative people. Music is such a different form of art than things like painting or drawing."

---

Steve nodded. "Sometimes. If I'm on break or get off work early I will draw. It's a good way to relax, especially after a stressful day." Steve leaned his leg a little bit against Bucky's foot. "Do you play music? Or just listen?"

---

Bucky took in a sharp breath when Steve leaned into him. He knew it. This wasn't just two guys becoming friends. However, there seemed to be something blocking Steve and Bucky didn't know what it might be, but he hoped it was just the public space of a bar and prying eyes.

"I can play the piano somewhat, harmonica, guitar, and ukulele. Ukulele is a small Hawaiian string instrument if you didn't know. Pretty rad sound." Bucky seemed pleased with himself with how much he could actually do with music even if he didn’t consider himself a super talented musician or anything.

---

Steve had felt this urge a few times before, but never so strongly as with Bucky. He was pretty certain this guy was into him, but there was so much riding on this he didn't want to risk misinterpreting.

"That's four more instruments than I can play," he chuckled. "I’d love to hear you play something sometime. I didn't see a piano hiding under your boxes of stuff, so maybe some ukulele?"
Bucky grinned and moved his hands up the table to get closer to Steve without touching him. "Yeah, definitely, we can do that sometime." Bucky thought to his old house when his parents were still around and he had a piano of his own. He had sold it for cash when they had to move into the apartment they were in now. "Yeah, my piano is gone but I can play you some ukulele or entertain you with some wicked harmonica action. I've been told it's pretty attractive when I guy can serenade someone but I'm not so sure. You'll have to let me know." Bucky knew it was bold but it also wasn't direct enough that he could pass it off as asking for a friend or asking in case a girl was coming over or something like that if Steve didn't roll with it.

---

Steve couldn't believe his luck. Bucky had to be flirting with him. He was throwing all the fishing lines out there for Steve to catch the bait. He knew he had to be careful but, god, he wanted to give it a shot. He took a deep drink from his beer for a little bit of courage before lowering his voice so only Bucky could hear. "You don't need a harmonica in hand to be attractive."

---

Bucky's eyes lit up and he gave Steve a cheeky grin as he looked up from his whiskey glass. "Did it hurt you to say that? Took you a while," Bucky said low and smooth. "Not like I didn't see you looking at me the way I've been looking at you, huh." Bucky immediately chastised himself for being too presumptuous. He shouldn't push Steve, especially if there was some serious reason for this block he felt with him.

---

Steve's face heated up and he was thankful the dim lighting hid most of his blush. He would've gotten a little more defensive if Bucky's eyes hadn't lit up the way they did. He looked around to make sure nobody else was looking at them. "I'm a police officer," he reminded. "I'll get fired if anyone knows." Steve gave Bucky a bit of a pleading look, hoping he would understand why he was being as reserved as possible.

---

Bucky softened again and uncrossed his legs and polished off his whiskey. "Think there is someplace we could go be by ourselves? No one around to narc on the narc?" Bucky laughed at his own joke and met Steve's eyes. God, this guy was a dork, but so was Bucky. He felt this would be good for them both if they could have some alone time, maybe talk about some of this. Who knows?

---

As nervous as he was, and entirely too wound up over this, Bucky's joking around had Steve reluctantly giving in a bit easier than he expected of himself. "Well," he said after a bit of thought. "I can treat you to some fancy take out and we can head over to my apartment," Steve suggested.

---

Bucky stated, "Fancy take out just so happens to be my favorite," and he followed suit when Steve stood up to get going. When they were out on the street. Bucky striding next to Steve, he asked in a hushed tone. "So, can I consider this to be a secret date, then, Officer?"
Steve walked a bit nervously out but he did at least stand a bit taller when Bucky asked if it was a date. He considered being coy but... well, Steve liked Bucky and he didn't want his own fears to get in the way of a good evening together. "Only if you plan on giving me a kiss at the end of it, Bucky."

---

"Lead the way," Bucky said with a beaming glow about him. "And don't worry about it, if you deserve a kiss, you'll get a kiss." Bucky pocketed his hands to resist the urge of holding Steve's and followed after him as he trudged down the block in the cool autumn air. It was getting colder and Bucky was glad he wore a light jacket.

---

Steve thought Bucky looked so beautiful. He was so charming and confident and it made it all the easier for Steve to talk to him. He led them to a nice Mediterranean place that did take out. Steve handed Bucky the menu because he already knew what he wanted.

---

"Uh, oh god," Bucky started, staring at the menu with a confused glare. "I've never eaten anything like this I wouldn't know what to get for Mediterranean." Bucky shoved menu back towards Steve. "How about you pick for me, yeah? I don't know what any of this means."

---

"You like seafood?" Steve asked. "Have any allergies I should know about? Any weird phobias from childhood trauma?" He joked as he looked over the menu in thought about what he should get for Bucky.

---

"Yes, no, and probably," Bucky said in return and earned an eye roll from Steve. He liked how comfortable and friendly the two of them had already gotten in just a few days of knowing each other. It felt like they were just waiting for the other to smack into their life and find a place there.

---

"Fair enough." Steve ordered his regular dinner and got breaded salmon on a bed of rice with shrimp cocktail as an appetizer. When they got their boxes of takeout, Steve paid and took the bags to carry. "I don't live too far from here," he said. "We can throw some show on and talk once we get there."

---

"Okay, that sounds nice to me." Bucky walked on after Steve and took a minute to appreciate the curves and muscles of Steve's back and arms before coming up beside him and asking, "So what'd you order me?"

---

"Sorry, but it's a surprise," Steve chuckled. When they got to his apartment, he let Bucky in first before he switched on the lights and closed the door behind the both of them. It was simple, neat, and warm even though it didn't seem like Steve spent too much time in it. There was a bookshelf full of art books and other novels and an old TV that looked like it was from the sixties.

---

Off next to the television there was a record player sitting on a side table next to a box of records. Just one box, Bucky noticed. He immediately gravitated towards it once he saw it and, once he got permission from Steve, he rifled through it to see what sort of music Steve considered important enough to own. A few of them Bucky recognized like some David Bowie and The Who, but the rest were old albums of big band jazz from the thirties and forties. Bucky slipped one out of the box and held it up. "You're into some old shit." Bucky held up a hand apologetically, "I'm sorry. You're into some classic shit." He emphasized ‘classic’ to take the edge off of calling Steve's interests old.

---

Steve smiled, loving how much Bucky was a nerd about music. "Well, pardon me for stealing my dad's taste," he chuckled. "I love Irving Berlin. Especially since an immigrant was able to be one of the biggest staples in American patriotic music." He sat on the couch and started to unbox their food.

---

"So you are into music..." Bucky said and put on one of the albums to play while they ate. "That's reassuring. I don't think this would have gone very far if you weren't." Bucky was handed his box of food by Steve and he popped the lid off of it and glared down at the contents that he couldn't decipher. "What is it?"

---

Steve blushed a little at the thought of Bucky scoping his interests out as a potential boyfriend. "Um," he said dumbly. "It's baked salmon with a bread crust and rice. I got you some shrimp cocktail too. But if you don't like it, you can have my dinner instead."

---

"I... have never had salmon before." Bucky tentatively stabbed at it with his fork and tore a piece off. It was a light pink on the inside and Bucky brought it up to his mouth to try it. He chewed it off the fork as Steve watched and he let the flavor sink in. "Oh my god," Bucky said and his eyelids fluttered shut. "Goddamn, that's good food. I've had fish loads of times but nothing like that."

---

"You're joking," Steve said in disbelief. He'd been poor growing up, but his mom did her best to splurge once in a while. Thankfully, Bucky approved of the choice. "I love that place. They're great people, too." He started to eat his own dinner and every now and again, he would steal a little glance over at Bucky. "And they're pretty affordable, too. If you ever had spare change."

---

Bucky shoved another bite of salmon into his mouth and spoke through it saying, "Yeah, I might have to take the girls there sometime if they will let me. This is amazing." Bucky met Steve's eyes and swallowed. "What're you eating? If it's good I might try it next time."
Steve offered Bucky his plate so he could give it a try. "Seafood pasta. It's a bunch of different fish and crab with a light sauce," he said. Steve licked his lips once and dabbed his mouth clean with a napkin. "So, um... have you been with men before?" He asked awkwardly.

Bucky's fork was midway to his mouth when Steve dropped the question that Bucky assumed he had been holding in this whole time. He laughed out loud and ate the bite of Steve's seafood pasta, which was very good too. Bucky made a mental note to get his own dish of that next time. "Almost exclusively," Bucky declared after swallowing. The second he said it, though, Bucky regretted his brash tone when he couldn't tell what the look on Steve's face meant.

Steve knew that Bucky didn't mean to be a little crude with his answer but it didn't stop an embarrassed blush from creeping onto his face. He ducked his head and focused on his dinner while he forced himself to cool down. For a cop, he got nervous easily over some things. "That's nice," he said lamely for the sake of saying something.

Bucky set his plate down on the coffee table and scooted a little closer to Steve. "Oh, man. Look, Steve. I didn't mean to sound like... well, whatever I sounded like." Bucky felt like an idiot - an insensitive, embarrassed idiot. "I just guess I was being a bit too honest is all. I'm sorry. I get that this whole thing makes you uncomfortable." Bucky tried to tell himself to stop while he was ahead but his mouth just kept running. "And you either haven't been with a dude or you think it's sort of taboo or are scared or embarrassed or whatever..." Fuck, Bucky cursed his endlessly running monolog that seemed to spew from his mouth without warning.

Steve felt a bit silly for being so sensitive about the whole thing. He envied Bucky being able to talk so freely about his history with men. "I'm not uncomfortable. I'm scared," Steve said. "I think you're gorgeous and wonderful and I'm scared I can't keep the way I want to look at you in control or else someone will find out and I could lose everything." He looked up to Bucky with a concerned frown. "How do you do it?"

Bucky searched Steve's face for a few seconds and his lips were held open while he tried to find the right words. "Oh, Steve," Bucky began. "I used to be really scared too. When my parents were alive I was worried about what they would think of me. And when I was still in school I was worried that none of my friends would want to hang around me anymore. And I was scared someone would try to hurt me or whoever I was with at the time." Bucky slipped his leg up under himself so he was sitting with one leg dangling over the couch. "I guess I'm not so scared now because I don't have anything left to lose. My parents are both gone and they never knew. I'm not in school anymore and don't keep up with my old friends. The girls don't care who I like and just want me to be safe and happy. And my coworkers are all too stoned all the time to realize what's going on or even give a fuck." Bucky winced. "Damn, I probably shouldn't have said that to a cop."
Now knowing why Bucky wasn't scared, Steve figured he shouldn't envy his openness so much. "I know my ma won't care. But being a queer cop won't fly with the precinct or the community," he said miserably. He gave a small wave of his hand to show he didn't give a shit about stoner kids at a record shop. "I guess what makes me the angriest is that it has to be hidden at all. As if there's something wrong with us."

"Maybe telling your mother is a good place to start then," Bucky suggested quietly. "Not trying to tell you what to do but it might make you feel a bit better." Bucky reached out his hand for Steve to take and waited for him to slip his fingers in with his. "I can't relate to what it must be like being a queer cop in this world but I do understand the anger and the confusion about why people treat us like some disease."

Steve looked down in surprise at the hand that was now in his. He laced their fingers together and gave Bucky's hand a firm squeeze, looking emotional in a good way to be able to do this. He smiled and brought Bucky's hand to his lips so he could kiss the back of it. "I'm glad I can talk about this with you."

Bucky loved the little kiss Steve gave to his hand. It was really sweet. "I'm really glad I met you, Officer Steve Rogers," he said with reverence. "But I guess it's my turn to ask you if you've ever been with a man before? And it's okay if you haven't. I just sort of would like to know what I'm working with here for any future dates you might let me share with you."

"I guess we're lucky your little sister decided to be a troublemaker," Steve said. "And, uh... I've kissed a few guys, but it never amounted to anything. One of us was too scared to do anything more or sometimes the other guy did it just to experiment. That sort of thing."

"So you've never gotten further than this?" Bucky gripped Steve's hand and leaned forward to place a delicate kiss to Steve's lips and adjust himself to be even closer to Steve's side. "You know what happens after kissing or will I have to hope that I'll eventually get to teach you about that too?"

Steve's breath caught when Bucky kissed him. It was soft and sweet, but it had Steve's heart pounding in his chest. He smiled dumbly and let an arm wrap around Bucky's waist. "Well, the kisses I had involved a little more tongue," he admitted. "So you are not the person I've gone the farthest with. Yet." His fingers brushed over Bucky's side once gently to tickle him.
Bucky squirmed with the tickle and let out a giggle that he would deny later if anyone asked about it. Once Bucky righted himself again, he leaned into Steve's strong arm around him and looked into his eyes and cataloged every line of color he could see. "Can I kiss you again, Steve?"

---

Steve loved the honest intimacy Bucky gave him - his gentle tone, a small laugh, looking into his eyes - all little things that made him trust the guy so easily. He leaned forward and pressed their lips together again, this time deepening it almost immediately. He cupped the side of Bucky's face and held him steady.

---

Bucky was surprised that Steve had moved on him this time but he smiled against the kiss and let his mouth fall open to give Steve as much access to him as he wanted and was comfortable with. This was all about Steve right now. Bucky hummed into Steve's mouth when he felt Steve reach up to pull Bucky's hair from its tie so he could card his fingers through it. Bucky didn't want to go much further tonight for fear of not being able to control himself and scaring Steve off so he put his hand on top of Steve's other wandering hand that had made its way to the small of Bucky's back right above his ass.

---

Steve was a bit over excited. The last time he was able to make out with a guy, it was hiding in a broom closet at the art school he dropped out of. Here, he didn't have to rush. He licked his way into Bucky's mouth and tried touching him everywhere all at once. When he felt Bucky's hand stop the one that was trailing a bit too low, he pulled back with a bashful smile. "Sorry," he apologized. "Got a little ahead of myself."

---

"Hey, it's okay. It's all okay. Great even," Bucky reassured him. "I just know that if you get me going anymore then I won't want to stop and I don't want to pressure you into anything you aren't ready for." Bucky combed through his hair with his fingers. "You took my hair tie out." He chuckled and slipped the tie around his wrist for safekeeping.

---

"Yeah, I may just have to arrest you for harassment if you do," he joked. Steve placed a sweet kiss against Bucky's forehead. "Your hair's easier to play with when it's loose." He gave a strand of hair a very gentle tug. "Now how do you expect me to work all day tomorrow without you running in my head?"

---

"I don't expect that at all," Bucky said. "No, I'm actually counting on the opposite. Don't want you to forget about me, do I? Especially if you were planning on those other dates?" Bucky looked hopefully into Steve's eyes and saw no hesitation in them. Today was a good day. He had a pretty reasonable day at work, his sisters didn't give him too much trouble, and he got a night out that he hadn't had in a long while. On top of it all, he got to kiss a very, very good-looking Brooklyn cop who seemed to really like kissing him back.
"Yeah... yeah, I suppose you got a point," Steve chuckled. Nobody had to know that Steve was daydreaming over a man. They would just know that he was totally smitten for someone. He seemed to have forgotten about dinner and was interested in snuggling with Bucky. He pulled the man against his side and kissed his temple again. "So what kind of date would you like next?"

Bucky nuzzled up against Steve and felt entirely safe and adjusted by his side. He hadn't had this kind of intimacy for a long time. Most of the interactions he had on dates ended up just being a one night stand because Bucky was losing his mind without being touched for so long. But none of those guys seemed to want to stick around with a deadbeat record store employee with two little kids in his care. Steve was different. Bucky could feel it. "Well, guess we could go to a movie if you like? Sit in the back and hold hands where no one can see. Then we could come back here and have a couple beers and be alone and free. What do you think of that?"

Steve blushed pleasantly when Bucky snuggled with him. He played with his long hair and kept the guy tucked against his side, loving the way he just fit like he belonged there. "That sounds like a perfect date," he said. "And I'm sure my ma won't mind babysitting either." Steve paused for a moment before adding, "You know, if you ever need help with your sisters, even if it's just picking them up from school, I'll do whatever I can to help."

"Thanks, Steve." Bucky leaned his head against Steve's shoulder and listened to the big band music. "I think they both really like you. And Lilly wouldn't mind going in the cruiser again." Bucky sat up and curled his hand into a fist against Steve's chest. "You could kiss me again if you wanted."

Steve smiled over at Bucky and leaned to capture Bucky's lips in a gentle kiss. He had to keep it pretty chaste or else he would get a little excited and push his luck again. "Let's just hope she doesn't purposely cause trouble for an excuse to get a ride in the car again."

"I can never really tell with her, to be perfectly honest," Bucky said and rubbed a small circle into Steve's chest. "Some days she is fine and reasonable and other days she's acting out and throwing punches and yelling." He saw a twinge of concern pass over Steve's face and he sighed and said, "Uh, sorry. I shouldn't complain to you about that. Maybe we should get going back to my place so I can make sure the girls haven't driven your mother up a wall."

"Hey, it's okay," Steve said. "She's going through a lot and she's a kid. She can't bounce back from stuff like you can as an adult." He kissed Bucky's temple. "And I'm planning on dating all of Bucky, not just the happy part. So if you're having a bad day, you're allowed to tell me. It isn't like you have to pretend everything is fine and dandy." Steve started to pack up their dinner. "We can still head back if you want."

---

"I think that's a good idea," Bucky said and helped Steve clean up. "I know it's dumb, but I don't like leaving them for too long. It makes me antsy." Bucky readjusted his shirt and jacket and ran his hand through his hair and pulled it back up into a ponytail.

---

"That's fine," Steve said. He stole one more kiss before standing up and heading towards the door. "I got to steal you for a couple hours, so that's good enough to satisfy me until... Friday, eight o'clock?"

---

"The new Indiana Jones movie is playing still. Temple of Doom, I think it's called," Bucky said and started putting his shoes and coat on. "Did you see the first one?" He asked Steve and tried not to fall over getting his shoes on.

---

Steve playfully gave Bucky a tiny push when he bent down to tie his shoe. "I haven't seen it, no. But I can see the second one without the first one right?" Steve held the door open for Bucky and waited for him to head out before following.

---

Bucky stepped out the door and waited for Steve to lock up. "I guess it's not a problem. If there is anything you don't know I'll fill you in." Bucky straightened up and stepped a few feet away from Steve so if anyone was watching it wouldn't seem like anything was up with them. "Just a few minutes from my place I think, yeah?"

---

Steve felt his heart sink a little when Bucky had to walk a little ways off from him. When they got back to Bucky's place, it smelled like cookies and chocolate cake and the apartment was a few degrees warmer than when they left it. Steve's mom was pulling out a tray of cookies to be cooled.

---

"Bucky!" Lilly jumped on him when he came into the apartment. Bucky caught her and gave her a big hug.

"Someone's got some sugar in them, huh?" Bucky asked and nuzzled Lilly's forehead with his. "Did you have a good time? Were you good to Mrs. Rogers?" Lilly jumped off Bucky and let him go over to give Becca a hug.

---

Sarah set the tray down and walked over to the two men. "They were exactly as they should be," she said sweetly. "Did you boys have a good night out?"
Steve nodded. "Yeah, this guy eats like a wolf," he said, nudging Bucky gently.

---

"Well, you bought me food I'd never had before and I really liked it." Bucky ran his hand down Steve's arm and smiled at him. Then he pulled away a bit too hastily when he saw Sarah watching them. Bucky turned to the girls and said, "You two have got to try Mediterranean food. It was delicious and I'm sick of pizza."

---

Lilly made a face at Bucky when he suggested Mediterranean. "But I like pizza," she said stubbornly. "I'll have Mediterranean if it is on a pizza."

Steve snorted and messed up her hair gently. "Trust me that you'll like it. And you can trust me cause I'm a cop."

---

"Just cause you're a cop doesn't mean you're right all the time," Lilly said sternly. "You might be a good one but the police is filled with racists and dangerous people who work for the man."

"Fuck." Bucky squatted down to be closer to Lilly's level. "You been listening to me too much, Girl." He looked up to Steve and Sarah whose eyes were wide in surprise. "I just meant you need to only trust people who prove they can be trusted. Steve's a good cop. You can trust him, Lilly. And you trust me, right?"

---

If it was an older person saying it Steve would've been a little offended but he let out a bark of laughter, especially with how Bucky scrambled to placate her. Steve put an arm around his mom's shoulders. "Yeah, my ma raised me right," he said.

Sarah smiled and added, "He got a good spank on the behind if he ever was rude. I'll spank any cop's behind if they act up."

Steve put his face in his hand. "Mom," he sighed.

---

"I'm so sorry." Bucky turned to Steve and Sarah, "She just repeats half the shit I say all the time. And sometimes she's got to hang around the record store after school until my shift is over and those guys will tell you all kinds of stuff."

Bucky felt incredibly embarrassed. It's not like what Lilly said was anything he didn't believe but she just had no filter when she spoke and just thought everything was fair game to mention around anyone. And Lilly's mouth had definitely gotten Bucky into trouble countless times before.

---

"Yeah, well," Steve said, shrugging a little. "I guess she'll get to hear it sometime when I speak my mind about someone throwing a blanket statement on the police." He gave Bucky a chiding look to show that he wasn't upset over it but he wasn't the sort to let those kind of rants go unanswered. "I'll see you later?" He asked.

---

"Yeah definitely," Bucky said. "Let me walk you two down to your car." Down by the car, Steve opened the door for Sarah and shut it before turning to Bucky to say goodbye. Bucky was mad that he couldn't kiss him goodbye but he would just have to wait until the next time. "Listen, Steve, I really am sorry about what Lilly said. She doesn't really believe you're a bad cop or anything. She likes you a lot - I can tell. She's just a little sassy sometimes like our mother was. I had a great time tonight. Honest."

---

Steve was sad that they couldn't kiss but he didn't make a big deal out of it. He let out a sigh and said, "I'm not mad at her. But I know where she heard it from and... I'm not saying that cops aren't bad a lot of the time, but I'm not a huge fan of people talking about them completely poorly or in generalizations."

---

Bucky nodded and tried giving an apologetic smile. "I understand. I'm sorry. My dad did always tell me I need to watch what I say. Guess I need to work on my assumptions too, yeah?" He bit his lip and blinked a few times and asked, "You still want that next date?"

---

Steve reached out so he could squeeze Bucky's shoulder. "I'd rather you speak your mind than not," he said. "I'll see you on our next date. I'll let mom know to keep the night open so she can look after your sisters." He smiled at him and playfully tugged the hair tie out of Bucky's hair before getting into the car.

---

Bucky caught the hair tie before it fell and lightly cursed Steve under his breath. He worked on putting his hair back up as he turned to go back to his apartment. He was pretty worried that he had fallen hard and fast for Steve and didn't know how he was going to be able to wait for Friday to come. But right now it was back to being the adult of the house and getting his sisters ready for school the next day.
Steve called Bucky's apartment twice during the week after he got home from work, unable to wait until Friday to speak with him. When Friday rolled around, he dressed in slacks and wore a button-down with a tie. He did his hair as neatly as he could and his mom gave him a knowing look. He didn't have to tell her for her to know. The two arrived at Bucky's apartment again and Steve knocked on his door.

---

Bucky opened it this time and gave Steve a once over and smiled before inviting them in. "You both look very nice tonight," Bucky said diplomatically.

Sarah went in first and Steve followed. Bucky closed the door behind them and walked past Steve, brushing his fingertips over Steve's hip as he went. He wanted to squeeze his ass while no one was looking but he refrained.

---

"Miss Sarah!" Lilly said excitedly. She rushed over and hugged Steve's mom.

"Hello, Lilly. It's nice to see you again." Sarah said and gave Becca a wave, who looked excited to see her again but not as energetic as Lilly.

Steve kissed Bucky's cheek when he knew no one was looking. "Hey, you look nice."

---

"Thank you," Bucky whispered back at him. "I'm ready when you are." Lilly and Becca promised to be good at Bucky's request and Lilly immediately pulled Sarah towards the couch to talk. Bucky was slightly worried about what they might discuss since their only connection happened to be Steve and Bucky.

---

Steve gave his mom a hug and then walked out with Bucky. It was so tempting to put his arm around him and kiss him silly but they were out in public now. "I was looking forward to this all week," he said. "How was your day?"

---

"It was okay," Bucky said and trudged down the stairs of the apartment complex. "One of my co-workers had his girlfriend in the shop for hours today and it was incredibly annoying. He didn't get anything done and I was stuck doing double the work."

---

"That's rough," Steve said. "You shouldn't have to do someone else's work. Hopefully it's not a regular thing?"
Bucky made it to the door with Steve close behind and turned on him and had his face close to his for a split second to ask, "How was your day?" Then he slipped open the door and gestured for Steve to go through.

---

Steve scratched the back of his neck and shrugged. "It was good. Had to make a few drug busts. But I prefer those over domestic cases. Those can get messy."

---

"Domestic cases?" Bucky asked. "What's that mean exactly? Like abuse cases?" Bucky remembered when the police talked to him after his parents died. At the time, he was so confused and angry that he took out his rage on any cop who tried consoling him. He regretted it later, knowing that they were just trying to do their jobs. It was a rough time for Bucky.

---

"Yeah, things like abuse or divorce issues or sometimes it's children getting hurt. It's rough to see and people are more defensive about family issues than drugs." Sometimes working as a cop was draining. "I don't like answering domestic cases but it also means I help people that really need it."

---

"I think it's great you like helping people so much. I've never been very... giving? I guess." Bucky's life was always pretty much about him until he became in charge of his sisters. Music was his life, school was the most important thing for him, he chose to go out with his friends instead of spend much time with his family, he never gave a thought as to what his actions rot on others. Steve was so different than Bucky. But Bucky was admittedly much different now than he used to be. Maybe Steve would be good for him.

---

"Are you kidding? You dropped out of school so you could keep your sisters together. And you work your ass off to take care of them," Steve said. He gave Bucky a gentle look. "And so you know, I plan on treating you whenever we go out."

---

Bucky pursed his lips together and gave Steve a sideways look and stopped walking. "I'm not..." Bucky sighed and shook his head. "I don't need you paying for me." Bucky waved his hand around. "Don't want you thinking I'm just hanging around for some perks of getting to go out or whatever. I actually like you, you know."

---

"I want to pay for you," Steve said. "I've got a lot more money to spare, so why would I let you use what you could use for food or school supplies..." Steve trailed off and smiled at him, happy that Bucky validated that he genuinely liked him. "When you're in a better position, you can treat me."

---
Bucky wasn't so sure about it. He knew he would probably never be 'in a better position' enough to treat Steve to anything. But he also didn't want to push the issue anymore and potentially cause a fight. It was only their second date after all. Bucky made a silent promise to himself that he would pay his movie ticket before Steve could. "You like me that much that you're going to just pay for every day out like it's nothing?" Bucky asked with an edge.

---

"Yes," Steve said confidently. He heard the edge in Bucky's voice and eased up a little. "Listen, it's not like... it's not like I see you as a charity case or anything. I'm not expecting something in return. You are so amazing to me. I'm pretty comfortable now but growing up, my ma and I were poor as anything and I remember how much it helped her when others showed her a little bit of kindness."

---

Bucky nodded and looked down at the ground. "Mhmm, I understand." He looked back up at Steve and softened at the sight of his gorgeous face and the genuine look he was giving him. "I'm sorry, I'm just a little... I don't know. But we should probably get to the theater. The movie will be starting soon."

---

"If it really makes you uncomfortable, I'm not going to force you to let me pay for you. But it would mean a lot to me if you let me," Steve said. He gave Bucky a concerned look, hoping he wasn't overstepping here. However, once Bucky reminded him to get a move on, Steve started to hustle towards the theater.

---

Bucky never answered him and spent a few minutes trying to decide what to do. Steve ended up paying for Bucky's ticket anyway. They sat in the very back of the theater as Bucky promised and they sat all the way on the edge of the wall so they were in the absolute corner. No one would notice them at all back here. Before the movie started, Bucky, who had been fairly quiet, decided on what to say. "Fine." Steve looked over at him with a quizzical look. "You can pay for me and treat me or do whatever you like. But you have to find something I can do to make it up to you. You think on it and let me know."

---

The silence had worried Steve. After he bought their tickets, he kept glancing at Bucky to see if he would say anything but at long last he spoke. He let out a breath of relief and reached over to give Bucky's knee a squeeze. "Deal," he agreed. Steve actually already had something in mind. "Do you know how to dance? Like to the big band music I have records of?"

---

Bucky's eyes widened and he leaned a bit away from Steve. "Mmm, I take it back. I'll pay for my own stuff. You dance by yourself." He shook his head slightly and furrowed his brow. Bucky had tried formal dancing sometimes but he never quite got the hang of it. Club dancing, though, he could do that. You just swung your hips a lot and made sure you rubbed your ass against the thigh of someone cute.
Steve gave a small pout. "Hey, we can still come up with something else," he said. So being taught how to dance was out. Steve didn't want to pick out something that took up too much energy or time. "What about... hmm... how about you pick places around here you think are special and take me to them. You know, like pretty benches that are nice to sit on or a corner of the park that's particularly relaxing. That way no matter where I'm at work, if things go poorly I have a place I can go to cool down."

Bucky felt bad. He shouldn't have joked with Steve about that. Clearly the guy wanted to dance with someone and clearly that someone was now Bucky. The lights went down in the theater and Bucky took the opportunity of the darkness to slot his hand with Steve's. He brought his head close to Steve's and whispered low in his ear. "I'm sorry, Steve, how about we do both, huh? I'll show you a nice bench near the station and I'll let you teach me how to... dance." Bucky coughed in his throat in indignation. "But, I will complain just a little bit at first. I'll do it, for you. But I'll complain for me."

Steve felt his heart pick up when Bucky held his hand, partially because he loved touching Bucky and partially because he was worried about getting caught. "Sounds fair enough to me," he said. He didn't talk throughout the movie to be polite but Steve had a habit of turning to look at Bucky during every interesting moment to see how he reacted.

To Bucky's credit, he didn't actually forget that Steve was there. He simply became so invested in the movie that Steve sort of took a place on the back burner. He did catch Steve looking at him occasionally and the screen would light up Steve's smile so Bucky could see it from the corner of his eye. He liked being watched by Steve. It made him feel like he was the most special man Steve had ever laid eyes on and Bucky decided to pretend that he was. During intense moments Bucky would squeeze Steve's hand tightly and he hoped he didn't mind. He would apologize after the movie if Steve brought it up.

Steve really was smitten over Bucky. It was so easy to talk with him and even when they said something that upset the other, they were quick and eager to try and make them feel all right again. Steve wished the movie was longer. He liked holding Bucky's hand in public and he wanted to watch more films and Bucky reacting to them. But once the credits rolled and the lights came up, he let go of his hand. "What did you think?" Steve asked. Bucky always had thoughtful answers and Steve adored that.

"Well," Bucky leaned back in his seat and pulled his hand into his lap, already missing Steve's touch. "The first one was better. I'm sad you didn't get to see it first but that's okay. The lady in this wasn't as cool as Marian from the first one but I honestly don't know how someone could top Marian. I liked the kid in this one, though. He was fun - added a new family element that the first one was lacking. And that Harrison Ford is still sexy as ever."
Steve listened attentively. He loved how Bucky had a breakdown of everything. All Steve saw was a fun movie but Bucky could break down all the elements and explain why it was fun. He was taken by surprise a little when Bucky called Harrison Ford sexy and it showed on his face. But then he let out a laugh and shook his head. "You're really something."

"What'd I do?" Bucky asked with an intrigued smile. By this point, most everyone had left the theater but the two of them. Bucky stood up to leave so the workers could come in and clean. He didn't envy them having to clean up everyone’s crap and snacks after a movie. He did plenty of cleaning up at the record store and people left a lot of shit around.

"I spent the whole movie admiring you and you spent the whole movie admiring Harrison Ford," Steve teased. He didn't sound jealous. It was funny to him. "That, and I think you would be able to write a five-page essay about the movie if asked and all I've got it 'Well, I thought it was entertaining.'"

Bucky gave Steve a glare and said flatly, "I wasn't admiring him only. The sets and effects looked so real I was convinced this was a documentary. And the directing and the music score were perfect." Steve brushed up against Bucky's side for just a second and Bucky wanted nothing more than to jump his bones and kiss his face off right there in the theater’s atrium.

"I think I saw a bit of drool come outta your mouth, you were admiring him so much," Steve teased. "So were the effects better than the first movie?" He asked, blushing when their hands touched as they walked. He nudged Bucky gently and then held the door open so he could exit the building.

"I'm not sure. I'd have to see both movies again and compare," Bucky said with his hands up in front of him in small gestures. "I hope they make a third, though." He walked as close to Steve as he could without touching him. "So where are we going now? Your place?"

"If I had a VCR I would offer to buy the tapes when they both came out," Steve said. He looked around the street to make sure no one was in earshot before saying. "Yeah, my place. I can't wait to wrap my arms around you and kiss you silly."

"I'm perfectly okay with that, Sir," Bucky said with an edge of sass to his voice. "I was thinking about getting the girls a VCR player for Christmas but I'm not sure yet if I can. But I think it'd be a nice gift for them."
Steve smirked at the sass and had to hold back flirting in return because they were in public. "I think they would love that," he said. "Do Becca and Lilly like movies as much as you do?" He asked. "I can almost imagine all three of you going on and on about them to each other."

Bucky gave Steve a sideways glance. "Okay. Next time we are bringing the girls. You won't be prepared. The Barnes' love movies and music and stuff and talking about it constantly. We also love Star Wars far too much."

Steve shook his head. "Don't shoot me, but I've never seen Star Wars." He had a feeling Bucky would have something to say about that one. Most Star Wars fans did.

Bucky stopped in his tracks. "Excuse me?" How could he have not seen Star Wars? Those movies defined the decade, the century, all of film, probably. Bucky realized he had a major crush on someone who probably didn't know who Luke's father was. "We are fixing that as soon as we can, Steve," Bucky said sternly back at him.

"I figured you would say something like that," Steve said with a little smile. "Any excuse to spend more time with you, I'll take it." He unlocked the door to his apartment and pulled Bucky inside. He locked it just in case someone tried to come in and speak with him while he had his hands all over Bucky. "Do I still get a kiss even though I never saw Star Wars?"

"I haven't decided yet," Bucky said but let Steve pull him close to him by his hips. "What if I said you had to see every film before I kissed you ever again?"

Steve pressed his forehead against Bucky's and looked into his eyes. "I would wait," Steve said. "But I would be a pain in the ass about it and find a way to make you wish you didn't make me wait so long."

"How very accommodating," Bucky said and started to move them over towards Steve's couch. "But I won't make you do that. But if I'm going to dance for you, you have to watch Star Wars for me." He pushed Steve onto the couch and hovered over him.

As soon as Steve was pushed onto the couch, he pulled Bucky into his lap and hugged him close. "I can handle that," he said. Steve's fingers ghosted over Bucky's side as he looked into his eyes. "So does this mean I get to kiss you now?"

---

Bucky shrugged, "I suppose you can if you must." Repositioning himself so he was straddling Steve, Bucky put his hands on either side of Steve's face as Steve slowly slipped his hands under Bucky's ass.

---

Steve leaned up to kiss Bucky slowly, starting off sweet and gentle but was soon licking his way into Bucky's mouth. He gave his ass a small squeeze before sliding his hands over Bucky's back to give him affectionate, soothing touches.

---

"How much time do we have?" Bucky asked quickly and caught Steve's mouth in another deep kiss. He wanted to know how long he was going to be able to stay with Steve like this - safe and intimate. But he also needed to know how far they were going to go tonight. He didn't want to push Steve but he didn't want to stop him either.

---

"As much as you want." Steve knew Bucky would get antsy about leaving his sisters at home with someone else sooner than Steve would want to part. He nibbled gently at Bucky's lower lip and rubbed the back of his neck. "You're so handsome."

---

"Shut up." Bucky giggled and moved his hands down Steve's chest. "I really like you, Steve. But, I need to know where you see this going tonight? And what, I guess, your intentions with me are." Bucky leaned back so Steve couldn't just kiss him to keep him quiet. "It's just that I have the girls and if you just want to fool around behind closed doors or whatever then I need to know. They can't get attached to you if this isn't going to be... more."

---

Steve could tell Bucky was being serious here, so he reached for his hands and held them both in his own. He kissed his knuckles and looked him in the eye. "I'm all in with you," he said. "I know you just met me and you don't have much reason to trust me. But I hope I can show you that I'm worthy of staying around with you and your sisters."

---

Bucky thought for a second and squeezed Steve's hands. "Okay. So you're stuck with me, then?" He relaxed a little into Steve and nodded. "Not going to up and leave us?" Bucky had only really known people to leave.

---

"I'm not stuck with you. I'm just with you," Steve said. He pressed a little kiss to Bucky's cheek.
"You're such an amazing person and I feel happy when I'm with you. I get to be myself - my true self. And I'd be a big jerk if I didn't give your sisters the same care I give you."

---

Bucky flopped next to Steve on the couch and laced their fingers together. "Sorry for all the questions tonight. I've been a bit needy. We can make out again now."

---

Steve looked at Bucky and leaned over to give him a chaste kiss. "We can still talk, Buck. I want you to be comfortable talking with me. I don't want our relationship to be full of uncertainty but copious making out."

---

"I'm okay with copious making out, too, though, just so you know." Bucky leaned into Steve's side and let him play with his hair. "Where did you see tonight going? If I can ask that? I don't want to kill your vibe if you had something planned."

---

"Um," Steve said, getting a little flustered. "I don't know," he admitted honestly. "I don't want to go too fast, you know? But I mean... we're not kids, so we don't have to act like making out is the new third base..."

---

"Well, which base did you want to get to tonight?" Bucky asked and put air quotes around 'base' lightly making fun of Steve. "Because I don't want to go all the way until you are absolutely ready but I can help you with... other things." Bucky nodded his head towards Steve's crotch.

---

Steve caught Bucky's look down and blushed brightly. Bucky was dealing with a very repressed Catholic cop and it wasn't often he had people be so forward with him. He bit his bottom lip and nodded his head. "I think I can do that. So, uh... second base-ish?"

---

Bucky smiled slowly and let his eyes flutter a bit in excitement. He moved to get on his knees in front of Steve. "Has anyone ever...? For you." Bucky rubbed Steve's hips and felt him push up into the touch.

---

Steve tried to not get too worked up when Bucky kneeled in front of him. He was a bit embarrassed to admit it, but he was truthful with Bucky. "No," he answered. "Didn't feel right stringing along a girl I wasn't attracted to." And Bucky already knew that Steve never got a chance at a proper relationship with a man.
"Well," Bucky said. "Lot of pressure on me to make this good for you, then." He laughed nervously and moved his hands over the button and zipper on Steve's pants. "May I?" He wanted to double check with everything he did before he did it just in case it wasn't okay with Steve or he needed to stop.

---

Steve was already half hard from just talking about it. He wasn't sure if he should be ashamed or not for being so eager. He reached out to cup the side of Bucky's face. "Only if I get to do something for you, too."

---

"We can discuss that later," Bucky said urgently. "Right now I really want to suck you off. You do things to me, Steve." Bucky undid Steve's pants and gently released his dick. "Just need to hear you say you want it too. Need to know this is okay with you."

---

"I want it," Steve said, voice thick with arousal. He loved that Bucky wanted him and he was desperate to experience this with him. "I know you'll make me feel real good." He tangled his fingers in Bucky's hair.

---

"Okay," Bucky quirked a smile before taking Steve down all at once. He wasn't necessarily the best at blowing guys but he had had lots of practice. Steve wouldn't know the difference anyway. That was Bucky's saving grace. So long as Steve enjoyed it, then Bucky did a good job.

---

"Bucky!" Steve gasped. He wasn't expecting the man to take him all at once. His mouth was hot around his dick, which felt amazing but, Christ, it was so much all at once. His head tilted back and rested on the back of the couch. "Be gentle with me," he panted out, rubbing his neck as he tried to catch his breath.

---

Bucky eased up and stuck to just licking at the head of Steve's dick. He wasn't sure how long Steve was going to last but Bucky didn't want to give up the head and risk not being able to swallow Steve's load when he did come. This was the first blowjob Steve ever had and, by god, Bucky was going to swallow.

---

Steve gasped at the licks to his cock. "Christ," he swore softly. "You drive me crazy," Steve breathed out. His hips tilted upward by their own say. His hands scratched softly at Bucky's scalp to encourage him to continue.

---
Bucky hummed in agreement around Steve's cock and ventured to take it deeper again. He didn't go as far or fast this time, not wanting to over stimulate Steve but he wasn't going to let up much more than this. He could feel his own hard cock pushing against his jeans and screaming at him to be touched. But this was about Steve right now so he ignored the urge to pull out his own dick and stroke.

---

Steve didn't last long. His back arched and despite his best efforts, his hips still jerked forward once or twice while Bucky blew him. He was at least able to give him a few moments' warning before he came.

---

Steve tried his best to let Bucky know right before he came and lucky for Bucky he was ready for it and only choked a bit by the surprise. As he promised himself, he sucked down everything Steve gave him and pulled off of him with a pop.

---

Steve sat back on the couch, sated and panting. His lips remained parted as he tried to catch his breath and he couldn't help but look over at Bucky with an adoring smile. "Come up here and let me kiss you."

---

"Yes, Sir," Bucky said and scrambled to get up to the couch by Steve. He curled his body next to Steve's and let himself indulge in the slow sloppy making out that Steve initiated. He was obviously pretty tired and Bucky was satisfied with his work. But Bucky's own dick was still angry and leaky and he hoped Steve wouldn't notice the dark wet spot on his jeans.

---

Steve wasn't so exhausted that he wasn't going to treat Bucky back. He slowly eased Bucky back so he was lying down on the couch and Steve hovered over him, still kissing him lazily. He trailed his fingers down his chest and belly until he touched Bucky's cock through his pants. He rubbed his palm in slow, smooth circles between his legs. "Can I keep going?"

---

"Of course. Yes, please," Bucky said and his eyes lulled back into his head with the first touch on his hard cock. "Steve," His breath hitched for a second. "Don't do anything you aren't ready for."

---

"I know. I won't," Steve promised. He undid the front of Bucky's pants and shoved them down so he could wrap his fingers around Bucky's cock. He pressed hot, open-mouthed kisses over his neck while he started to slowly stroke him.

---

"Okay. That's good. Yeah, Steve." That's all Bucky could manage because Steve was going at it as best as he could. It was a little dry but Bucky didn't mind because Steve was also starting to suck hickey's into his neck and that definitely felt good.

---

Steve couldn't help but mark Bucky up a little because he was just the slightest bit possessive. He thumbed at the head of his cock as he nibbled at Bucky's neck. "You look so good like this," he murmured.

---

"You don't look too bad yourself." Bucky smirked. "Like watching you touching me." He added as an afterthought. He really was smitten with Steve. He hoped it wouldn't end up biting him in the ass.

---

Steve palmed at Bucky's balls, rubbing them firmly before going back to stroking his dick. He kissed lower and started to tease one of Bucky's nipples through his shirt. He lifted the shirt to graze his teeth over his nipple before soothing it with his tongue.

---

Bucky squirmed a little under Steve's tongue. He was severely ticklish and Steve had now found two places on his body that were sensitive to it - his side and the base of his chest. Bucky giggled and covered his mouth quickly.

---

"Bucky," Steve laughed, kissing the middle of his chest. "I'm trying to be sexy here," he chided softly, not genuinely upset because Bucky couldn't help how ticklish he was.

---

"I know. I'm sorry. Go ahead. Go ahead." Bucky gestured down at his body and let out a small laugh. "Promise I'll try not to giggle anymore." But he really couldn't promise anything with how light Steve's fingers were brushing up against him.

---

Steve kissed over Bucky's chest, but this time made sure each kiss was firm and would be less likely to tickle. He moved lower and lower until he pressed a kiss just above Bucky's hip. He gave Bucky a nervous look, hoping that he was doing alright.

---

Bucky wasn't even looking at Steve anymore. His head was back and he was staring up at the ceiling just feeling every touch from Steve. He knew he wasn't going to go all the way with Steve tonight and he tried his best to put it out of his mind because he wanted Steve so badly right now. He just kept telling himself that when they did finally do it, it would be so much better after waiting for Steve to be ready. Especially since it would be Steve's very first time. Bucky's body shivered at the thought of being the first to get to be with Steve in that way.
Steve's hand worked smoothly up and down Bucky's dick. He was glad that Bucky was so relaxed right now, but he was just childish enough to want to make Bucky look at him. He lowered himself down the couch even more and let his tongue flicker once over the tip of his dick.

"Fuck!" Bucky's head shot forward so he could see what Steve just did. He was tempted to remind Steve not to do that if he wasn't ready, but then Steve licked his head again while keeping perfect eye contact under his hooded lashes.

Steve got a satisfied look on his face when he got Bucky looking at him again. He locked eyes with him as he took what he could into his mouth - just a few inches - and he bobbed his head along Bucky's cock while sucking him off.

Bucky kept his eyes on Steve and watched his dick disappear bit by bit into Steve's mouth and then come back out again. "Steve. Gorgeous. Fuck." Bucky managed and held his own hair back so it wouldn't get in his face. Steve caught his teeth on him a couple times but it didn't hurt enough for Bucky to say anything or want to interrupt him.

Steve hadn't ever done this before and he did his damnedest to make it feel as good for Bucky as it did for him. He stroked whatever he couldn't put in his mouth.

After a few minutes in, Bucky felt really bad. He knew he was going to last a lot longer than Steve had and he thought it was kind of shitty that the first blow job he had given would be longer than it might have been if he had sucked off a fellow teenager back in high school like Bucky had. Bucky didn't know if he should stop Steve and just finish himself off so Steve didn't have to or should he just let Steve carry on.

Steve gave it his all, awkwardly blowing him while trying to be good at it. He wanted it to be good for the both of them but he could see Bucky thinking. Steve had enjoyed himself way too much to even have a single thought other than 'wow', so he took the hint. He pulled back a little, looking a bit disappointed in himself. "I'm not doing that great of a job, am I?"

"Hey, no," Bucky said quickly, "It isn't you. I was just thinking that it's your first time giving head and - you were doing well - just I was sort of taking my time coming." Bucky blushed and reached down to keep jerking himself while he talked. "Didn't think it was fair that I was making you go on for that long." He sped up his movements up and down his cock and saw Steve look down at it a couple times. "But, I'll admit, Stevie, you learn real fucking quick."
Steve gently moved Bucky's hand away when he saw the guy stroking himself. "Well, it isn’t like something you can force happen." He pressed a kiss to the curve of Bucky's jaw and started to stroke his dick again. "I want to do it. No matter how long it takes because I want to make you feel good."

"Jesus fuck, you say more sweet shit like that and it won't last much longer." Bucky whimpered at Steve's touch and pulled his face up so he could stick his tongue in his mouth. They kissed slow and deep and messy while Steve jerked off Bucky and every second of sweet making out and Steve's amazing scent pushed Bucky a little closer to the edge until he was moaning into Steve's mouth and trying to tell him that he was about to come.

Steve kissed him languidly and easily, working his hand smoothly over Bucky's dick. "Let me see you come, Beautiful," he said softly. "You're going to feel so good. And you look so good, too."

Bucky's body shivered again and he let himself release his load all over Steve's fingers and onto his own stomach. The automatic smile that was brought to Steve's lips when he felt the come running down his hand made Bucky want to shove him against the wall and suck his come off every one of Steve's fingers.

Steve felt pretty damn satisfied with himself when he saw Bucky's body tense before he released his load. He smiled and kept his eye contact with Bucky as he licked some of the come off his fingers. It didn't taste good, but that wasn't the point. "So I guess I wasn't bad after all."

Bucky reached out for Steve's hand and began kissing and licking where there was still come. "Never said it was," he said against Steve's palm. "Like I said, you learn fast, Officer. You watch a lot of porn or something?" Bucky leaned back against the couch and waved Steve on to come lay on top of him and cuddle.

Steve made a small noise and snuggled in close and wrapped his arms around him, relishing in his warmth. "I'm a good Catholic guy. I don't have any porn," he said. "All I had to do was watch the best." He winked at Bucky.

"Steve," Bucky put one hand behind his head so he could admire the man on top of him. "I hate to break it to you but I don't think good Catholic boys do what you just did. Or let other boys do what I did to you for that matter." Bucky chuckled and hoped Steve knew it was a joke. They were still new to this after all. They were still getting to know each other and know the others personalities and tolerances.

---

"Please don't say that," Steve said softly. "Even as a joke." He laid his head on Bucky's shoulder. "I do everything else right and... and truly don't believe God would disapprove of anyone who cared about another. No matter what parts they have."

---

Bucky backtracked immediately and rubbed a thumb across Steve's cheek. "Hey, what I always say is if the big guy didn't want men to have sex with men then he wouldn't have given just us prostates. And if he didn't want women fucking women then he wouldn't have made vaginas impossible to figure out unless you've got one of your own."

---

"They're not that hard to figure out," Steve said, turning his head to kiss the palm of Bucky's hand. "It's called the clitoris." Steve's mom, who had assumed he'd been straight growing up, sat him down and made sure he wouldn't be a selfish lover to any future girlfriends. "You've got a big mouth," he said in an amused tone to Bucky.

---

"Is that a complaint or an observation?" Bucky asked with a twinkle in his eye. He added, "Also, please never say 'clitoris again' - automatic turn off. You look much sexier discussing dicks." But then again Bucky figured any girl who dug some girl on girl action wouldn't want their partner talking about foreskin while they were eating her out so it was kind of a two-way street.

---

Steve pressed a kiss to Bucky's lips. "Clitoris." He purred in the most seductive tone he could manage. Another kiss. "Vagina." One more kiss. "Labia." He fell into a fit of giggles and snuggled close. He pressed his face against Bucky's neck. "What're you going to do about it?"

---

"Think I might just leave if you keep it up, Rogers," Bucky threatened and wrapped his arms around Steve. His dick was still sitting pretty outside his pants but he didn't really feel like moving to tuck it back in at the moment.

---

"No, you won't. You're too comfy right here. And you secretly think I'm rather charming," Steve answered with a confident grin. He slid a hand up Bucky's shirt and touched his abs with his fingertips.

---

Bucky feigned surprise and said, "Who told you that? That's a secret." But Steve was right. It did feel really nice to be here with Steve and to feel him run his fingers over Bucky's abs and chest. Bucky tried looking around for a clock to see what time it was. He really didn't want to leave the Well, you're really bad at keeping secrets. Luckily, that's a character flaw I'm willing to overlook." Steve saw Bucky's glance over at the clock and he kissed his cheek. "We can do this again soon. I think your sisters will start wondering how long that movie really was soon enough."

"Hey, about that..." Bucky moved to sit up and Steve followed suit. Bucky really quickly fixed himself up so his pants were properly done up again. "I wanted to ask you if it'd be okay with you if I told my sisters what you are to me now? I mean, can I tell them we are dating and more than friends?" Bucky didn't let Steve say anything yet he just kept going for a second. "They wouldn't tell a soul and they will be happy for us cause they're kind of like God, they don't care who you love so long as you're happy. But you can say no and that'd be fine but that doesn't mean they won't figure it out on their own."

Steve's face fell a bit and he looked away. He had enough experiences with Lilly blabbering that he didn't exactly trust that she wouldn't say something eventually, even by accident. It wasn't a risk he was willing to take on a kid and he hadn't even told his mom yet. "I'd rather not," he mumbled.

Bucky was silent for a second then he nodded his head and gave a sad smile. "Okay, Steve. That's fine." He tried smiling again. It was fine and it wasn't a big deal at all. Bucky just hated keeping anything from his sisters. He never wanted them to feel like they needed to keep secrets from him or be afraid to share what they are feeling so he made a point to set that example.

Steve sat up and started to button his pants back up. "I'm sorry," he said. "You can blame me if they find out. I don't want your sisters upset at you for anything." He rubbed the side of his face. "I was dirt poor. You know how hard it is to put food on the table. And now that I've got a job and built a good life for myself, I don't want to risk losing that."

Bucky sighed and shook his head. "No, Steve, I get it. I do." He placed a comforting hand on Steve's thigh. "I know exactly why you don't want to and I understand and I won't push you. I'm not upset or angry or anything. It's just something they don't get to know and that's fine. They probably know too much about me anyway."

Steve decided to grab his jacket because it got a little chilly out now that it was dark outside. "I wish I didn't have to hide. I wish it wasn't something that was even an issue. But... once they're older, we can tell them. Not for a little while, though."
"You plan on being around when they are older?" Bucky asked and tried not to sound hopeful that someone else besides his sisters was going to be a constant in his life. He also didn't want Steve to see how much it worried Bucky how long they would have to keep this from them. How could they possibly hide it from such intuitive little girls?

---

"Well... yeah," Steve said. He told Bucky he wanted to be more than just two guys who fooled around, but he supposed that Bucky may have had others give empty promises in the past. "I want to be in a committed relationship with you, Buck. I want to get to know all of you. And someday, hopefully soon, you and your sisters to be as good as family. And I know my mom would accept you all as her family, too."

---

Bucky honestly didn't know what to say to that but he felt compelled to kiss Steve so he caught Steve unprepared and kissed his lips and his cheeks and his nose and back to his lips. "I'll keep you," he said and nestled his head in the crook of Steve's neck and shoulder.

---

Steve made a surprised sound at the first kiss but melted into the rest. He threw an arm around Bucky's shoulders and kissed the top of his head. "You're special, Bucky Barnes," he said. "I'd hate to let someone else sweep you off your feet."

---

"And you're full of shit, Steve Rogers," Bucky said, "Hey, what's your middle name by the way?" One less thing to have to ask about later. One more thing he got to know about Steve. One more night of being alone together. One more kiss. One more touch.

---

Steve let out a laugh at Bucky's response. "I'm trying to be romantic here, you nut." He pinched Bucky's cheek lightly and then answered, "Grant. It was my grandfather's name." He kissed him one more time before nudging him towards the door because they had to start heading back.

---

"Grant. That's nice." They got to the door and Bucky had his shoes and coat and everything ready. "One more," he said and kissed Steve again and felt his way down his side. "One more," he repeated and kissed him again. "Last one." Another kiss. "Seriously, last one, I promise."

---

Steve was so taken by how sweet and dorky Bucky was that he pressed him against the door and cupped the sides of his face to plant a heated but loving kiss to his lips. "There's only one upside to having to hide this," he sighed against Bucky's lips. "If we could kiss anywhere we would never get anything done."
By the time they got back to Bucky's place, Bucky was so tired. He knew he still had to make sure the girls had done whatever chores they might have needed to do today and they need to have showered and brushed their teeth and Bucky had about a million other things that he needed to do before he would be able to go sleep. Steve almost had to catch him at one point just to keep him from collapsing on the stairs.

---

Lilly took one look at the sleepy Bucky before turning to Steve and putting her hands on her hips. "You broke my brother!" She scolded.

Steve rolled his eyes with a little smile. "No, I didn't, I found him this way," he joked. "Now help me get him into bed before he falls asleep on the floor."

---

Bucky honestly didn't remember even getting home. He just knew one second he was kissing Steve against a door and then the next he was at his place on his bed with both his sisters and Steve hovering over him each wearing a different shade of concerned.

---

Steve herded Bucky's sisters out of the room and told them to make sure they cleaned up any mess they made today before he came back to Bucky's room. He put a hand on his forehead to check his temperature. "You okay, Pal?" Is there anything I can do?"

---

Bucky blinked slowly and trying to focus in on Steve. He said very low and mumbling, "You can stay the night." Bucky's eyes closed and opened again several times, each time getting slower and slower to open again. He grumbled something else but Steve couldn't make out what it was he said.

---

Steve leaned down and kissed his forehead. "I've got an afternoon shift tomorrow, but I'll stay." He could get the girls off to school and back to his apartment in time to change. He stayed there until Bucky was asleep and then he went out to the girls. His mom stuck around to make sure the girls showered and went to bed. Once she went home, Steve spent a couple of hours cleaning the house to tidy up spots Bucky probably had no time to take care of. He made everyone lunches for the next day and when it was time to get the girls up, he knocked on their doors with breakfast in hand.
Bucky heard rustling and laughter coming from past his door. "Fuck," he said to himself. "Got to help girls..." He tried getting up and realized he had a raging headache. He didn't know why, though, since he hadn't gotten drunk the night before. Honestly, he figured it was stress and annoyance, both with things at home and work. He managed to get up and trudge out into the kitchen where he found his little sisters and... "Steve?"

---

Steve looked up to Bucky from his spot in the table. "Hey," he said. "You asked me to stay last night, I uh... figured you'd want to sleep in, so I got them ready for school."

---

"Don't you work?" Bucky furrowed his brow and went over to kiss Lilly and Becca on the head. "Why the fuck did I ask you to stay? No, better yet, why'd you listen?" Bucky was flustered and stressed and just a little too wound up at the moment.

---

Steve frowned, suddenly worrying that he overstepped some boundary. "I don't know. You asked, so I just... thought I'd do what you asked," he said. "I can go if you want. Their lunches are already packed."

---

"No, I meant..." Bucky cleared his throat and noticed both girls watching them closely. He had to choose his words carefully for Steve's sake. "I mean when do you work?" he asked very calmly. "I don't want you to be late because I asked an unreasonable request while I was very, very tired."

---

"I start at three," Steve said. "I've got an overnight shift tonight, so they're having me go in late." He would have just enough time to have a good nap before having to go out to work.

---

Bucky breathed a sigh of relief. "Okay, good. I'm sorry I made you stay. I don't even remember it. That's not fair of me to ask you. Let me make it up to you?" He asked and hoped Steve knew what he meant and hoped his sisters thought he meant paying for Steve's dinner or something.

---

"You don't, uh... you don't have to worry about it. This really wasn't any trouble. But if you want to, I won't stop you," Steve said.

Lilly looked over at Bucky and asked, "Do you have a hangover, Bucky?"
"No, Lil. I think it's just a stress headache." Bucky pulled up a chair between Steve and Lilly. "You remember when mom would get them? She had them worse and more often than me. I just think I didn't sleep well for a few nights and work sort of overwhelmed me the other day."

---

"Yeah, Mom's headaches were totally your fault," she said. "Me and Becca were angels." Somehow Steve didn't believe that Lilly was ever an angel. "Why don't you go to sleep earlier anyway? Becca and I know how to make breakfast. And we know how to clean up after ourselves."

---

Bucky couldn't argue with her right now. Even though he knew that they still needed some guidance when preparing for the day. And he also didn't want them not to need him anymore. Bucky turned his face to Steve and said, "I guess since they don't need me at the moment I should just go back to my bed." But he made no move to get up.

---

"Oh, they're always going to need you," Steve said. "But go to sleep anyway. You deserve all the rest you can get." He patted Bucky's shoulder in a friendly way even though he wished he could've kissed them. "I'll walk them both to school."

---

"Are you sure?" Bucky asked and couldn't help but scan his eyes over Steve's face. "They can walk themselves if you need to get going." Bucky felt bad for being so grumpy with them all when he got up and he really did want to make it up to Steve but he didn't think he'd get to today.

---

Steve shook his head. "It's fine, really," he insisted. They all finished their breakfast and Steve had the girls say goodbye to Bucky before he headed out. About a half hour later, after both girls were dropped off at school, Steve knocked on the door to come back in.

---

Bucky was lying in bed trying to get back to sleep when he heard a knock on the door. He rolled out of bed and went to answer it. He looked himself up and down and noticed he was still wearing his clothes from the day before that he had fallen asleep in. He really hoped it wasn't Steve at the door because he certainly didn't look very cute. He opened the door and there was his handsome Officer Rogers looking just as disheveled wearing the same clothes he stayed the night on the couch in.

---

"Hey," Steve said softly. He walked into the apartment and closed the door before reaching out to stroke his fingers once through Bucky's hair. "I wanted to come back and make sure you were okay," he murmured. Steve kissed his forehead gently; doing his best to make Bucky feel cared for.
"Yeah, I'm okay. Think I was just so tired." Bucky melted into the kiss and wrapped his arms around Steve. "I'm really sorry I was a grump earlier." Bucky nestled his head on Steve's shoulder and rubbed his nose against his neck.

---

"It's alright. You didn't remember last night and I'm sure it was a confusing sight to wake up to," Steve reasoned and rubbed a hand up and down Bucky's back. "You want to go lay down? You still look pretty beat."

---

Bucky nodded, "Uh huh, sure. I don't work today so I might just lay around and do nothing." He let Steve lead him to his room and to his bed and gently help him back under his blankets. "Thanks, Babe," Bucky said without realizing it was the first time he'd called Steve a pet name.

---

Steve blushed at the pet name, feeling happy to have been called it. "You deserve a day doing nothing," he said. Steve snuggled behind him and pressed his face to the back of Bucky's neck. "I'll cook a dinner for you to heat up so it's less work for you later."

---

"You don't have to do that." Bucky reached a hand back to pull Steve closer to him. "The girls can eat cereal for dinner and I'll just eat a sandwich or something." Bucky sighed and closed his eyes.

---

"Cereal for dinner? No way, they're getting a cooked meal," Steve said. He kissed the curve of Bucky's jaw and closed his eyes. "And you're getting something better than a sandwich."

---

"But I like sandwiches..." Bucky mumbled tiredly and barely felt Steve's arm come up to rest on his chest. "Think I might fall asleep on you, Stevie." Bucky wanted to turn around and face Steve and give him small sleepy kisses but he also loved the feeling of his ass cradled in Steve's crotch and Steve's strong arms holding him close.

---

"Oh yeah? What's your favorite sandwich?" Steve asked, petting Bucky's hair gently. Steve was being an utter sweetheart, loving that he was able to dote on Bucky in this way. "Also, it's okay if you fall asleep. I'll let myself out when I have to go to work."

---

Bucky hummed contentedly. "Put a little avocado in between some turkey and cheese, too much mayo on the bread, some lettuce and tomatoes if you want. Then nice white bread slices that are like pillows for your mouth..." he said and moaned a little, satisfied mumble at the thought.
Steve brushed the hair out of Bucky's eyes and kissed his face again. "Sounds delicious. You got good taste in food and in men." He smiled dumbly and pet his hair some more.

"Cheeky bastard," Bucky said and curled his hand around Steve's. "There's a nice little sandwich shop downtown a ways that's got my order on regular and everyone knows what to make when I walk in." Bucky was pretty proud that he was a regular there.

Steve squeezed Bucky's hand lightly, "Oh yeah? What's it called? Maybe I'll check it out." He loved getting to talk with Bucky and just sit and look at him as much as he wanted to.

"Rustic Rocco's," Bucky said. "You should go there. Tell them you know me and ask for what I get and then you'll know exactly what you've been missing all this time." He reached a hand back and started feeling up Steve as much as he could access very slowly.

Steve nodded his head at the suggestion. "Sounds like a plan," he agreed. "I'll go there during my break today. So long as I'm not posted somewhere super far like Queens." Steve let out a happy sound when Bucky started to touch him.

"If Martia is there tell her I still owe her for the casserole." Bucky rolled over to face Steve. "She brought us a casserole a few weeks ago when Becca was really sick. She's got a soft spot for that girl. Thinks the world of her." Bucky ran his hands from Steve's thighs up to his neck and warmed his fingers there.

"Becca is nice. I think I like her slightly better than Lilly because Lilly might beat me up one day," Steve teased.

"I can almost guarantee she will beat you up." Bucky breathed against Steve's cheek and kissed it lightly.

Steve slipped his hand under Bucky's shirt and touched his stomach gently. "What kind of casserole was it?"

"It was a breakfast casserole. You know, with eggs and bacon and cheese and some vegetables all cooked together. It's really good. And Martia makes the best I've ever had." Bucky leaned in and gave Steve’s jaw a tender kiss.

"That sounds good but you're going to have to have some of my mom's cooking to have the best food you ever had," Steve said with a happy grin. "My ma makes the best potatoes. She's straight from Ireland. Though, she's got a Brooklyn accent since it's been so long since she's been there."

"You're mom came over from Ireland?" Bucky didn't know that. There was so much he didn't know about Steve. But he was looking forward to learning it all. "How old was she when she got here?"

"She was about fifteen. She had to come here alone because my grandpa was a part of the IRA and got in some pretty bad trouble with the English," Steve said. "He'd probably be really pissed that I turned out to be a cop, actually. But it's what the Irish do here. We become cops and firemen."

"I've noticed," Bucky said and thought of all the Irish cops he'd met in New York. "But you Irish make very sexy public servants, just so you are aware." He really wanted to sleep but he also wanted to touch Steve again. Maybe he could just give him a quick hand-job while he made out with him and then he could sleep. Bucky still had to decide what he wanted to do.

"The Irish can be sexy at anything," Steve informed him. "Why do you think there are so many of us?" He chuckled and squeezed Bucky to his chest. "I've always wanted to go back to see my mom's hometown, but she says she's happier here."

"She doesn't want to go for just a week or so?" Bucky asked as he moved his hand over Steve's stomach and started to undo his pants so he could get access to his dick again. "That seems like a good vacation for the two of you."

"Nah. She doesn't like planes and she'd rather spend the time gardening." Steve felt his face heat up when Bucky unbuckled his pants. "You sure you're up for that right now, Buck?"

Bucky kissed Steve and whispered, "Just let me get you off, Steve. I want to do it. I'd love to." He emphasized 'love' so Steve would know exactly how much Bucky liked doing things like this for him. "Baby, I want to watch your face when you come on my fingers, laying on my bed together." He slipped his hand into Steve's underwear and carefully began to pull his dick free.
Steve really couldn't say no when Bucky used pet names on him and spoke to him sweetly like that.
Steve let out a soft moan when he felt Bucky's fingers on his dick. "Alright," he agreed, nosing at Bucky's neck. "You know how to make me feel good."

---

Bucky started to pump him carefully. "I'll try my best at least." He smiled and let Steve stick his tongue in his mouth and start tying his chest up in knots with the feeling. This man was good at his trade regardless of his paler experiences in comparison to Bucky's. He really did learn fast.

---

Steve breathed out Bucky's name and kissed him back desperately. He pulled Bucky flush up against him and rocked his hips into Bucky's hand to encourage more. He sucked at Bucky's lower lip before ducking his head to mark up Bucky's neck just as he had done the night before.

---

Just like before, it didn't take very long before Steve was coming through Bucky's fingers wrapped around him. Bucky pulled his hand up to his lips and started to lick the come from them and smiled at Steve as he went. Steve tasted so good.

---

Steve's eyes fluttered shut as he felt his orgasm surge through him. He forced them back open because watching Bucky lick up his come was sexier than he cared to admit. "You really know how to make a fella feel special."

---

"Wanted you to have something nice before you had to work later." Bucky's fingers were a bit damp from licking Steve's come off so he reached over Steve to grab some tissues from his side table.
"You need one?" He asked Steve.

---

Steve took a tissue and cleaned off Bucky's hand before wiping off the tip of his dick. He tossed the tissue onto the bed stand and settled back into Bucky's side. "Now all I'm going to think about at work is you in bed where I could be with you."

---

"Maybe you could come back after work and stay with me?" Bucky suggested hopefully. He figured the answer would be no because it would be too much of a risk but he wanted to ask anyway. Bucky reached for Steve's hand.

---

Steve hesitated before answering. "Can you pretend that you're sick or something and need help so the girls don't suspect that I'm coming over for the hell of it? I won't be back until around three or four in the morning."
Bucky nodded and let out a small smile. "I can do that. Feel a little sick anyway so it won't be a stretch. You're sure, though? It's okay if you don't want to, Steve. Don't want to push you too far."

"It's nice to have someone to go home to. I don't mind coming over - all I would have done at home anyway is fall asleep." He kissed Bucky's cheek and then settled down into the pillow with his eyes shut. "You make me happy. You're not pushing too far at all."

"Okay, I believe you," Bucky watched Steve's face and chest as he breathed. He looked like he was sleeping and Bucky liked the look of it so much he just leaned his face in close and stared at Steve until Bucky's own eyes couldn't stay open and he slipped into a fast sleep.
Steve napped until around noon. He slipped out of bed and hurried home to get changed before he headed out on his shift. Steve didn't show up to Bucky's apartment until almost five in the morning. He was exhausted and looked a little run down.

"Hey, are you okay?" Bucky asked immediately when he let Steve in. He looked dead on his feet like Bucky must have looked the day before. "Come sit down." He gestured at the couch and asked if he needed any water or food or anything.

Steve laid down on his side rather than sitting like a normal person. "I chased this guy by foot for over an hour," he groaned. "Took forever to process cause he had a criminal history a mile long. Why couldn't he have the decency to show up at the beginning of my shift?"

"Oh, man." Bucky brought Steve a cup of water and set it on the coffee table. He knelt down on the carpet so he was facing Steve. Just then, Becca opened the door to her room to see who was here. She was a light sleeper and must have woken up when Steve came in. Bucky made a hand motion at her to go back to her room and Steve, thankfully, had his eyes closed and didn't see it. "You want to sleep here or in my bed?" He asked and ran his fingers over Steve's still slightly sweaty hair. "You can borrow some of my clothes to sleep in too if you like. Do you want to take a shower?"

Steve sipped at the glass sideways and put it back down once he was finished with it. "I'll go to your bed if the girls won't go into your room at all. I can stay there until after they go to school." So that way they wouldn't know he was here at all. "I'll shower in the morning."

"Yeah they won't come in," Bucky said and started helping Steve up off the couch. In Bucky's room, he started pulling Steve's clothes off gently and putting them in a pile on the dresser. He managed to get Steve down to his boxer briefs and socks and figured that was good to sleep in. "Want some sweats of mine to wear?"

Steve nodded. "Yeah, that would work," he said through a yawn. He peppered kisses over Bucky's shoulder and sluggishly followed him around the room. Once he got the sweats on, he collapsed into bed and wiggled under the sheets.

"Goodnight, Steve," Bucky said and joined him under the covers. He kissed his forehead once and sought out his hand to hold. Bucky had just a few hours to be like this with Steve before the girls needed to be up and getting ready. He wasn't going to waste a moment of it.

---

Steve was out like a light. He slept right through breakfast and didn't rouse from his slumber until well after the girls were sent off to school. His hair was a complete mess and he definitely was in need of some washing up. He stifled a lion-sized yawn and sat up.

---

Bucky was waiting in the living area on the couch just listening to music and hoping Steve would wake up soon. He felt bad for the guy for being so dog tired the night before. It was great being able to have him close while he slept, though. That was certainly something Bucky had loved experiencing and on top of it, neither of the girls had asked him about who came over in the night. If they did know something, they kept their mouths shut.

---

Steve slipped out of bed and looked around for Bucky, smiling when he saw him listening to music on the couch. Steve draped himself over Bucky's lap and smiled up at him. Looking to steal his attention, Steve reached up to touch his cheek.

---

"Morning, Steve," Bucky said and leaned in towards his face to give him a quick kiss. "You work today?" Bucky had to go into work for the late shift - the close shift. He hated having to work that one because it meant the girls would have to be home alone for a few hours. At least he didn't have to go in until well past when they would be back so he could see them safely home first.

---

Steve shook his head. "Not until late. The way it works is I get two night shifts, a day off, then three day shifts," he explained. "Except this one I go in from eight at night to eight in the morning. So, is there anything I can do to help?"

---

Bucky was enjoying himself just looking at Steve. "Oh, I see. So tomorrow is the day off, then. I've not really got anything to do around here. It seems someone's tidied up when I was asleep the other day." He rubbed Steve's shoulders and smiled at him. "I've got to go to work at six so I'm just going to be here until then. Anything you want to do?"

---

"Well, I figured you had enough on your plate and the house did need a good tidying," Steve said with a shrug. "You want to show me some of your favorite albums and be lazy all afternoon? Because I could do for some of that."

---

"Sure, we can do that!" Bucky lit up but didn't yet move. He liked Steve being on top of him like this and he didn't really want to move and ruin it. "Oh, yeah, I still need to let you make me dance."
Steve loved the way Bucky's eyes lit up like that. He leaned up and kissed his cheek sweetly. "We can dance on one of your days off. If you ever have one," he snorted.

"I'll have one again eventually," Bucky said and threaded pieces of his hair together absentely. "Clint is usually pretty good about my schedule being as convenient for me as possible. He knows I'm the only one who really does anything around that place so he can't afford to lose me." Bucky chuckled. "Not that I would leave either."

Steve nodded and gently brushed his fingers up and down Bucky's arm. "If you were to go back to college, would you still work there? Like, would you try and do business outta his place or something?"

Bucky smiled, confused, and asked, "I'm going back to college?" He hadn't really considered if or when he would go back and how that would really work out for him. "Don't know if I really could do that so I don't think I've got an answer for you."

"I said if you were to," Steve corrected. "You know, hypotheticals." Not that Steve cared what sort of education Bucky had. He adored the man just as he was. Steve didn't go to college anyway. He went straight to the police academy.

"Okay, well, hypothetically speaking," Bucky began, "I'd work at the store through college then work until I could start a record company here or Los Angeles. I mean, that's wishful thinking but that would be the goal."

"And then what'll Clint do when his number one employee makes the big time?" Steve asked. "You going to send Lilly off to work for him?" Steve joked. He laced their fingers together and kissed Bucky's knuckles.

"Well, that honestly probably wouldn't be too bad for Clint," Bucky said and wrapped his other arm around Steve's back. "She could be a hard worker and even though she is loud and talks a lot it wouldn't matter since he couldn't really hear her anyway."

Steve let out a laugh at that. "They're a perfect employment match," he chuckled. "So what sports does she play?" He asked. "I know what you like, so what do they like?" He sat up a bit more so he could place affectionate kisses over his neck.

---

"Well, she's in soccer," Bucky said and lightly pushed Steve so he could get a record playing for them. "And her school just started a lacrosse program and she was first in line for it. We had never seen lacrosse this far from California." Bucky put on an album from the Ramones.

---

Steve rolled over to the side so he could watch Bucky put the music on. "Have you always lived around this area or are you guys originally from California?" He asked.

---

"No, we've always been in Brooklyn." Bucky couldn't help but sway a little to the music as he walked to the kitchen to get a snack. "But we did take a trip to California not long before our parents died to see my dad's brother and our cousins. They all play lacrosse."

---

"You know, Long Island is starting to get a real big lacrosse scene. It's a bit of a hike, but I'm sure they've got some pretty cool camps she could try out." Steve watched Bucky with a warm gaze as the man walked around. "How long has it been since your parents passed?"

---

Bucky stopped as he was washing some strawberries and grapes. He knew he'd have to talk about his parents eventually but he really didn't want to. "Uh, four years and two months."

---

"I'm sorry," Steve apologized. Maybe it was a bit too early to be asking that sort of stuff. "So it must have been a while since you guys got to see your cousins."

---

"We haven't seen any of our family since the funeral. They call sometimes. We get Christmas cards but that's it," Bucky said and brought two bowls of fruit over to the coffee table. "Our grandma lived near us for a while but she died not long after our parents."

---

"Oh, Buck," Steve said with a frown. Family meant a lot to Steve and he knew he would've been gutted if he didn't get to see his mom for years just because she lived in another state let alone if anything happened to her. "How old are your cousins?"

---

Bucky popped a strawberry in his mouth then said, "They are around our ages. Oldest is twenty, I think, then seventeen, then thirteen, then six. The youngest won't remember my parents at all when he's older."

"And how about you? How old are you, exactly? And when's your birthday so I know which day I get to really spoil you?" Steve gave Bucky a playful wink.

Bucky chuckled and said, "I'm twenty-four. March tenth. Name's James Buchanan Barnes. Born in New York, raised in New York, we will see if I die in New York." He finished and ate some more grapes.

"Okay, now all I need is your social security and bank account numbers," Steve said, pretending to pull out an imaginary pen and paper.

Bucky threw a grape at his face and said, "You ass. You're supposed to say 'Oh, wow, March is such a good month.' Or 'What a handsome name for such a handsome guy.' Then you tell me your birthday and age and social security number, Steven Grant Rogers."

Steve threw his head back and laughed. "Well, March is a good month. That's when Saint Patrick's Day is," he agreed. "And you are quite handsome, but I'm sure you've heard that already." He lounged back and said, "I'm twenty-three. Born July fourth. My social is 128-26-0023 and my bank account is 86723 with Bank of America."

"Steve!" Bucky put a hand over his mouth. "Oh my god." He laughed. "What if we had another wiretapping scandal like back with Nixon, huh? They just heard all your numbers, man," Bucky joked with wide eyes. "But, I guess with being born on America's birthday, you might just be immune to anything the government might try, yeah? America's baby boy."

Steve rolled his eyes and reached out to tickle Bucky's side. "Quit that, I got enough teasing about my birthday from my ma," he laughed.

"But I like it, Mr. America," Bucky said and giggled underneath Steve's tickling fingers. "Unfair with the ticking, Steve," Bucky added and tried to squirm away.

Steve yanked Bucky into his lap and held him put so he could tickle the hell out of him. "It's totally fair when you're being a jerk," Steve laughed.
Bucky laughed until he couldn't breathe then he was crying from the lack of air. This was definitely not fair and he swore to himself that he was going to find something that got to Steve as much as tickling got to him.

Steve let Bucky go once he felt like Bucky learned his lesson. "Next time I'll tickle you until you pee yourself," he threatened playfully. "Never poke at a guy who knows a dozen ways to bother you." Steve winked at him.

"I don't think pissing myself is very attractive, Steve," Bucky said after he got his breath back. Steve was still holding his hands above his head with one firm grip and Bucky couldn't really move. There were still songs from the Ramones playing in the apartment and Bucky noticed how happy he felt and how he really hadn't felt this nice in a long fucking time.

"That's fine. One of us has to be the attractive one in this relationship and it may as well be me." Steve leaned down and pressed a sweet kiss to Bucky's lips. He could see the happiness in Bucky's eyes and he couldn't help but want to bring more joy into his life.

"I might take offense to that if I didn't think you were so damn cute," Bucky said. "What do you want to do, huh? You can't possibly be having a good time staring at my ugly mug and listening to music.

"Well, I genuinely am having a good time doing just that," Steve said. "But..." He got a little flustered. "I was thinking, um, maybe I could give you a massage. And then get a little more practice... you know." He mimed sucking dick because he was too embarrassed to say it.

Bucky's mouth fell open in a laugh. "Alright, buddy, first step is you're going to have to tell me in words what you want to do to me. The first step to conquering the unknown is knowing what to call it." Bucky waved a hand in a go-ahead motion. "Tell me what you've got."

"Bucky," Steve huffed, making a face at him. He didn't know how to say it and sound sensual and sweet. It all felt a little too crass but he went ahead anyway. "Can I give you a massage and suck your dick?"
"Yes, you may," Bucky answered and put his hand on Steve's thigh. "But first you need to tell me in a different way. Just one more and then I'm all yours."

---

Steve smirked and rolled his eyes, “Fine. Bucky Barnes, would you permit me to put my mouth on your penis?” He asked and rubbed a hand down Bucky’s thigh.

---

"Ah, gross, Steve!" Bucky leaned back. "Why’d you have to say it like that? I expected you to ask to give me head or something not say it like that." Bucky flopped his head on Steve's chest. "Jesus Christ, Steve, you're too cute."

---

Steve cackled when he was able to gross Bucky out. "Serves you right for being demanding," he teased, slipping his hand into Bucky’s shirt to rub circles over his stomach. "There's more bad dirty talk where that came from. I'll have you squirming from secondhand embarrassment."

---

"I'm already regretting all of this," Bucky said but placed a hand over Steve's under his shirt and helped him start to pull it up over his head. "Maybe I should just tell you no," he said as he guided Steve's hand into his hair. "Tell you to leave. Make you wait." Bucky took Steve's other hand and placed it on the tie of his sweats and said, "Go ahead, Babe."

---

"Don't worry, my Ma told me not to talk with a full mouth so you won't have to hear me soon enough," Steve joked. He didn't take Bucky's pants off right away. Instead, he slid his hand under the waistband of his pants and started to grope him through his underwear. He nibbled affectionately at Bucky's ear and hummed low in his throat.

---

Bucky let his head drop onto the pillows of the couch and breathed in deeply. "Am I going to have to teach you dirty talk too, Steve?" He whispered and flexed his fingers into fists.

---

"Depends. Are you really going to trust a smartass like me to take control of the mood?" Steve asked. He sucked marks down Bucky's neck as he massaged his balls. Once he got Bucky aroused enough that there was a wet spot in his underwear, he started to strip his pants off.

---

"Good point." Bucky was breathing heavier now. "I'll be in charge of dirty talk then." Bucky watched as Steve took his pants off of him and tossed them aside. "And you can be in charge of sucking me off."
Steve moved off the couch to kneel in front of Bucky. He pressed slow kisses to the insides of his thighs and let out a soft groan, excited that he got to do this with him. He felt lucky that Bucky trusted him so much. He didn't want to rush it. He wanted Bucky to feel loved and cherished rather than that he was a quick way to get off. Steve sucked love bites onto his thighs and spent a good few minutes doing so before he looked up at Bucky through his lashes as he licked a long stripe up the shaft of his dick.

---

By the time Steve got to his dick, Bucky's inner thighs were peppered with red marks and lines of Steve's saliva. The second his tongue touched Bucky’s dick, Bucky jumped and gasped and rolled his head to the side.

---

Steve grabbed the base of Bucky's cock and held it steady while he took the first few inches into his mouth. He sealed his lips around him and started to slowly bob his head.

---

Bucky could already feel improvement in Steve's technique as he went. It was similar to last time but he hadn't yet clacked his teeth into him like he had done before. Bucky felt a sense of pride well up in him. It wasn't like he had anything to do with Steve learning how to give head but it still made him feel special that he got to be the one who Steve learned with.

---

Steve couldn't take all of Bucky's dick, but his hand worked over what he didn't put in his mouth. He moaned low so the vibrations would feel good, but he was also enjoying himself as well. All the pent up sexual frustration was being let out and there was no one better to experience this with than Bucky.

---

At the feeling of the low hum, Bucky said, "Oh, please do that again," and laid a hand softly on the back of Steve's head. "You're so gorgeous with my dick on your lips, Steve. I love seeing you like this. I'm so glad you are here," Bucky praised him and played with Steve's short hair.

---

Steve's face heated up when Bucky spoke to him and gave him compliments. He wanted so badly to do a good job for him. He slowly took just a bit more into his mouth and let out a low, unabashed moan because no one else was around to hear them.

---

Bucky flung his head back and damn near yelled, "Oh, fuck, Steve!" He could feel himself getting closer and closer and as Steve got more of his dick inside his mouth, Bucky got closer faster. "Almost... almost there."
Steve sucked him off in earnest, watching Bucky hungrily and soaking up every pleasurable expression that crossed his face. He palmed at Bucky's balls, taking just enough of Bucky's cock that he could feel the tip hit the back of his throat.

---

Knowing that Steve had gotten far enough that he was brushing up against his throat was too much for Bucky. He was coming down Steve's throat before he could warn him and he immediately felt bad for not giving him time to pop off if he didn't want him to come in his mouth and especially down his waiting throat.

---

Steve wished he had taken it with a bit more grace. The first spurt made him sputter and pull back before Bucky was totally finished and the last string of come shot onto his face. He couldn't even give Bucky a chiding look because no one would take a guy seriously with come across his lip and cheek. He quickly grabbed Bucky's sweatpants and wiped his face clean.

---

Bucky launched forward and grabbed Steve's arms and held them tight while he looked into Steve's eyes worriedly. "Oh, Steve, I'm so sorry! I didn't have time to warn you and I bet you weren't wanting to swallow or get come on your face. My god, but Steve you look so fucking sexy with a little bit of my come on your face and I hope you know that."

---

Steve had a small grimace on his face but he didn't look too upset. "You're lucky you're cute, Barnes," he said as he sat back on the couch with him. "Tell me more about how sexy I looked and I'll forgive you," he said, kissing his cheek.

---

"Your eyes were so beautiful and haunting staring up at me and your lips looked perfect stretched around me. And those gorgeous moans you gave me. And the little surprised blush when I compliment you." Bucky licked at the spot where Steve had wiped the come from his face and found some that he had missed. "You're so perfect and handsome no matter what you're doing."

---

Steve felt his face warm and he hugged Bucky to his chest. "I don't know what I did to deserve an amazing partner like you. But I'm glad that I have you in my life." He pet his fingers through Bucky's hair. "I could listen to you praise me all day."

---

"Well, we could do that or I could return the favor?" Bucky asked and moved a hand over Steve's dick. "Or would you rather just snuggle up for a bit and wait it out before you have to leave for work?"
"I kind of want to just snuggle the hell out of you," Steve said. "But in your bed. I like being under the blankets," he admitted. "But hey, if you wanted to give me a lazy hand-job while we're there, I won't complain."

---

"Sure, let's go to my room." Bucky got up and grabbed the bowls of strawberries and grapes so he could eat them in bed. "Mind if I take these with us?" He asked Steve and shook the bowls.

---

"Only if you plan on sharing them," Steve answered. He kissed the corner of Bucky's mouth and happily padded into the bedroom. He dove into bed like a damn child and snuck under the covers soon after.

---

Bucky chuckled at Steve's leap into bed and followed after him. "That was enthusiastic. My bed really that nice?" Bucky laid down and set the bowls on his chest and stomach to make a make-shift table for them to eat off of.

---

"It is when you're in it," Steve said with an affectionate smile. He stole a kiss before plucking a strawberry from the bowl and eating it. "You make me really happy, you know that? I didn't think it was possible to feel so good with someone."

---

"You make me happy too," Bucky answered and reached for some more fruit. "I wish I was able to tell everyone how much I like you, though. I wish no one gave a fuck about who was queer and who wasn't and just let us be who we are. I'd scream from the top of this apartment building that I get to make out with a drop dead gorgeous Brooklyn cop."

---

Steve played with Bucky's hair and smiled at how vehement Bucky was about adoring him. "One day," he promised. "Even if public opinion doesn't change... I want to be out. What's the point of New York making it legal if we got to hide still?"

---

"What will the precinct say when you come out?" Bucky asked and put the bowls on his side table so he could snuggle up against Steve with his head on his chest. "I mean, I know what I'll say, but what about them?"

---

"I don't know," Steve admitted. "Some won't care. And some will be uncomfortable not but be rude about it. But I know some will give me some real grief," he mumbled. "It's a shame. I'd take a bullet for any of them."
Bucky crinkled his face and asked incredulously, "Why? I mean, if they are the kind of people who'd rather tease you or force you out or see you not be yourself just to keep themselves happy... I don't see why you'd want to sacrifice yourself for them let alone be near them." Bucky finished his rant and eased up his grip on Steve's arm which he hadn't noticed he'd been squeezing hard since he started talking.

Steve noticed how Bucky gripped onto his arm but he didn't say anything. "Because it doesn't matter what they think. It matters that I do my job right and part of that job is defending them from harm," he said. "I'm still an officer, even if they don't treat me right."

"I just don't think it's fair if they don't give you the same respect that you're willing to give them." Bucky sat up and ran his fingers through his hair. "Not saying they have to like you but they shouldn't be dicks to you just because you are different from them. It's so fucking typical. People can't stand what they don't get." Bucky was getting worked up now and his mind was going blank except for his rage at thinking about anyone wanting to hurt or make fun of Steve for any reason.

"Buck, sweetheart," Steve said softly and pressed a gentle kiss to his forehead. "Life isn't about what's fair or not. It's making a difference. If they see I'm still me, even if they don't treat me like a normal person, they'll learn eventually that they were wrong. And if I don't do my job, they'll just use me being gay as an excuse for it."

Bucky sighed and touched his forehead to Steve's. "I just really like you a lot, okay? And I can't stand the thought of anyone thinking less of you or sabotaging you just because you like me a lot too." He nuzzled his nose to Steve's and added. "I know what it's like and I don't want you to experience that shit."

Steve brushed their lips together sweetly. "I'm envious that you were brave enough to come out," he said. "I'm so sorry you had to deal with people being awful to you, Bucky. But now you don't have to deal with that alone."

"Okay, but what about if people who know me start to notice I'm different?" Bucky thought to his coworkers and his sisters. He didn't have any friends so he didn't have to worry about that but what if Clint asked him who the man was who was making him smile like a dope at work. Or what if Becca asked him if it was Steve who she heard come in the other night.
Steve looked away for a moment and then said, "You don't have to say it's me. You can just say that someone's making you happy." He thought and asked, "Do your sisters definitely know that you're gay? Or do you just think they don't care either way?"

---

Bucky looked down at his hands folded in his lap. "They know..." He looked back up at Steve and nervously chewed his lip. "After our parents died, and I was responsible for the girls... we moved into this apartment because we couldn't keep the house." Bucky shuffled. "Well, I wasn't coping with the loss and automatic responsibility very well so I kind of went a little haywire. Slept around pretty heavily for about a year. Never the same guy twice. A few times it was a guy and a girl at once... By the amount of men I brought through these doors to 'hang out'," Bucky put air quotes around 'hang out', "there's no way they don't know."

---

"Christ, Buck," Steve swore. He didn't really disapprove that Bucky had so many past partners. He didn't think any less of Bucky for it, but he knew he probably would've scolded Bucky for being so reckless at the time. He was going through a lot, Steve reminded himself, and he didn't have people to help support him. "I'm a little annoyed that your sisters had to see all that," he said honestly. "But I understand." He pet his fingers through Bucky's hair. "Maybe we can let them know. Only them, though."

---

Bucky stopped Steve's hands on his head and moved so both their hands were over Bucky's heart. "Believe me, Steve, I wish they never saw a single one of those guys. I wish they never knew. I wish I wasn't so stupid to bring strangers into our home." Bucky choked in his throat and tears formed on the rim of his eyes lids. "I wish my father would have been around to tell me off. I wish I didn't have to be the reasonable one all the time. And I wish my sisters had a less selfish guardian."

---

Steve could tell that Bucky was sorry for his bad decisions and it broke his heart to see him like this. He brought Bucky's hands to his lips and kissed the backs of his knuckles. "You're only human," Steve said. "And humans are selfish and flawed." He let go of Bucky's hands so he could wipe the tears in his eyes before they fell. "And you don't have to be the reasonable one all the time anymore. You've got me now, okay?"

---

Bucky wrapped his arms around Steve's middle and sighed. "You're going to be reasonable?" He chuckled and sniffled. "Earlier you couldn't even tell me you wanted to blow me."

---

"My career is all about being reasonable," Steve said. "It's not my career to proposition myself to handsome men." He kissed the top of Bucky's head. "I mean it, though. Even if we don't work out, Buck, I'm here for you and your sisters. You deserve a friend and they deserve someone to go to for help if you're having a bad day."
Bucky gave Steve a sharp glance. "I hope you aren't expecting this not to work out because I've kind of gotten attached to you now." Bucky reached for the bowl of strawberries again and said, "The girls should be getting home in about an hour. I told them they could walk home together today." Bucky paused and assessed Steve. "Were you serious about telling them?"

---

"Well, I plan on us working out," Steve said. "But I wanted you to know that you can still count on me even if it doesn't." He kissed the corner of his mouth. Steve looked a little nervous but then said, "If they kept quiet about you, then I'll have to trust they will keep quiet about me. But... you have to swear, Bucky. Swear that they will."

---

Bucky pulled back a little and shook his head. "Steve, you're so scared and I can tell. You need to put a little faith in me if this is going to be okay. Becca and Lilly are smart. They know how the world works and who gets privileges and who doesn't. They are some of the youngest feminists I've ever met and they know when it's safe to share things and when it isn't." Bucky sighed again and licked his lips absently. "One of the older brothers of one of Becca's classmates is gay." Bucky paused. "Was... some assholes found out and beat him bad enough that he had to go to the hospital. Both his lungs were punctured and he didn't make it. The girls know that breathing a word of who I am could get me in serious danger and they can't afford to lose me too." He slipped his hand with Steve's. "I know you think I'm out but I'm really not. It's just a few people outside of the queer circle who know and they are people who would never say anything."

---

Steve hadn't come out to anyone before - even the guys he made out with, he never officially said he was gay and they just assumed he was experimenting too. When Bucky spoke about one of the kids that got beat to death, Steve got a sad look on his face and laid his head down on the pillow. He felt awful now even though Bucky was saying it as reasons to trust him and his sisters. "I'm sorry," he apologized. "I trust you guys."

---

"It's not your fault. It's just the risk that's taken when we decide to be who we are meant to be." Bucky scratched at his shoulder and breathed deeply a few times. "It's all up to you, though, Steve. If you want to tell the girls we will. I'm sure they will be thrilled. Lilly might demand you ask permission first, though."

---

Steve still looked nervous but he was determined. He wanted to show Bucky that he was serious and he wanted to be there for him through everything. Hiding something from his sisters would only be an added burden. "We can tell them today," he said. "I'm sure."

---

Bucky smiled at Steve and willed his heart not to beat too fast. He was very excited about this next step with Steve. "Okay, today then." Bucky breathed out slowly and checked his watch. "We've still got some time," he said and a mischievous grin swept over his face. Bucky sidled down Steve's body so he was hovering over his crotch. He gently placed a hand over Steve's clothed dick and asked, "May I have this?"

---

Steve looked at Bucky with his heart full and excited eyes. He felt his heart pounding in his chest in a good way. He wanted this with Bucky. The hand on his dick came as a surprise and his face heated up. "Christ, only if you plan on giving it back."

---

Bucky chuckled low in his throat and slipped his fingers past the waste of Bucky's sweats that Steve was wearing. "Did I tell you that you look fucking gorgeous wearing my clothes?" Bucky asked and started pulling the sweats and Steve's underwear down to reveal his cock.

---

"If you think I'm gorgeous wearing your clothes, just wait until you see me wearing nothing at all," Steve said with a confident smile. He was fairly modest but he felt so attractive with the way Bucky looked at him.

---

Bucky rolled his eyes and gave a quick lick up Steve's cock before pulling back off him again. Bucky straddled Steve's lower leg so he was in a good position to kneel down to his cock. He pulled at Steve's growing dick until there was some pre-come leaking from the top. Bucky wiped it off with his thumb and rubbed it into his own left nipple until it was taught.

---

Steve's hips stuttered forward when Bucky licked up his cock. His eyes drank in Bucky when he took his shirt off - he thought he was the most gorgeous guy in the world. Steve thought that getting jerked off was great but he let out a groan when he watched Bucky rub pre-come on his nipple. "What makes you even think of that?" He complained, "And why is it so fucking hot?" He reaching out to hold the back of Bucky's neck to pull him in for a kiss.

---

Bucky wiped some more pre-come from Steve and said, "I think of it because it feels good. Here." He carefully rolled Steve's shirt up to reveal his chest and began rubbing Steve's own pre-come into one of his nipples. "It's nice, right?" He asked and licked at the other nipple. Steve was fully hard now and his dick was pushing against Bucky's leg. Bucky wanted to get to it soon but he also liked watching Steve become undone from the stimulation he was giving him.

---

Steve licked his lips and watched Bucky rub some onto him and he squirmed a little because he was sensitive there. He wrapped a leg around Bucky's hip and rutted up against his thigh. "So nice," he breathed out. "What else do you think I'd like?" He asked.
"Ooh, I can think of a lot but I don't know if you are ready for them," Bucky said and moved back down towards Steve's dick. He kissed the head and licked down the shaft a few times before heading down to his balls and nosing there. "You smell fantastic, Steve," Bucky said. "I'll try one new thing with you today." He winked up at Steve and took Steve's balls into his mouth and sucked.

---

Steve leaned his head to the side so he could look down at Bucky. He was so fucking sexy down there, kissing his dick and somehow turning oral sex into something sweet. "Buck!" He gasped, hips jerking forward when Bucky sucked on his balls. "Don't stop," he moaned, fisting his hand in Bucky's hair.

---

Bucky thought to himself, 'I don't plan on it,' and kept suckling at Steve's balls and rolling them around in his mouth. Steve's dick was lying on his face as he went but Bucky didn't mind at all. He reached a hand up and started jerking Steve as he sucked his balls. With his other hand, Bucky went back to massaging his own nipples.

---

Steve didn't want to admit how hot it looked having his dick pressed against Bucky's cheek while he sucked his balls. Steve rocked his hips, fucking Bucky's hand. He reached down and cupped the side of Bucky's face and looked at him with hooded eyes. "You look so fucking hot." He blushed and then tried talking a little dirty. "How hard are you going to make me come?"

---

Bucky popped his lips off of Steve and growled low, "You'll see black, Baby." Then he took Steve's length down all at once like he had done the first time. Hand on Steve's balls, Bucky hummed down his shaft like he was testing a microphone. He couldn't wait until Steve was ready to come. He wanted to swallow again but he also wanted Steve's load to shoot on his chest or his face or his hair.

---

"Bucky!" Steve gasped out, moaning his name like it was the only word he knew. Steve's back arched off the bed and his toes dug into the mattress. He had a blush all the way down to his chest and his nails dragged slowly up Bucky's back in an attempt to try and make himself last longer. But god, Bucky was a fucking pro and Steve felt himself finishing in no time. "Buck, I'm gonna come," he gasped out breathlessly.

---

Bucky pulled off of Steve quickly and hurriedly said, "Come on my chest, Steve," and he rolled them both so Steve was hovering over him. He jerked Steve the rest of the way until he was coming in several short strands all over his chest.

---

Steve didn't need telling twice. He let Bucky maneuver him and his whole body tensed as his orgasm hit him, making him paint white strings of come over Bucky's chest. He was left breathless as he stared down at the fucking hot mess beneath him. Steve suddenly grabbed Bucky's arms and pinned them over his head as he surged forward to claim his lips in a biting kiss.

---

Bucky's heart raced when Steve moved on him so quickly and he wrapped his still clothed legs around Steve's middle. They kissed for a few long seconds before Steve was pulling back for air. "You want to lick me clean, Steve? Or you want to feed it to me?" Bucky asked, indicating the come still staining his chest.

---

Steve couldn't help the possessive growl that rumbled in his throat as he kissed down his neck. He wouldn't have thought to do either of those things if Bucky hadn't suggested it, but Steve deliberately dragged his tongue over a line of come as if it had been his plan all along. But then he swiped another with his finger and held it to Bucky's lips.

---

"Both is good," Bucky gasped out and greedily took Steve's finger into his mouth. He sucked off the come and said, "More, Steve." Bucky ran his fingers possessively up and down Steve's sides and his arms and closed his eyes to pay attention to all the feelings he was experiencing at once.

---

Steve was convinced he was dating a sex god who was also the most adorable human being on earth. Steve licked his lips and swiped another spurt of come from Bucky's chest and offered it to him. "Do you have any idea how sexy you are?"

---

"Yes." Bucky chuckled. "Turn myself on every day." He was joking, of course, but he also knew he wasn't the least sexy person so he was at least somewhat good on that front. Steve, on the other hand, was sexy in such a lovely innocent way. He could hardly vocalize anything sexual but he still opened up so much once they started doing something with each other's bodies.

---

Steve rolled his eyes at the response but gave him a kiss with a smile anyway. He raked his eyes over Bucky's body, drinking in how beautiful he was. Steve cupped the side of his face and gave him a gentle look. "I love you," he said, like it had been waiting to burst out of him. "I really do."

---

"Excuse me?" Bucky stared up at Steve with wide eyes. "You what?" He asked again and could feel his heart rate quicken again and his body clench up. He didn't know if he could believe that. They hadn't been together for long and they hadn't even properly fucked yet. How was Steve that sure?

---

"I..." Steve's face fell a little, afraid he messed up but he went for it anyway. "I love you," he said, this time meekly. He moved over to Bucky's side, embarrassed and worried he upset the man. "You... don't have to feel the same way," he mumbled. "But I know how I feel."
"Steve," Bucky cupped his face with his hands and kissed him full on the lips. He rolled on top of him so he was straddling Steve again and kept kissing him. "Steve, you've got to know that I want to say that back to you. And I'm so over the moon that you said it to me. But I can't... I can't yet. I have to think this through for a lot of reasons. I really, really like you and I want to be with you and get to the point where I feel secure enough to say that back to you." Bucky took a breath not realizing he had rushed through his last one. "I'm... enamored with you, Steve. Is that okay?"

---

Steve felt a bit better when Bucky was kissing him but there was still that lingering embarrassment. He held Bucky's hand in his own and rested it over his heart. "I wouldn't want you to feel rushed to say it, Buck. I don't expect it. Enamored is more than alright with me." He kissed the back of his hand. "But can I keep telling you that I love you? Cause I don't want you to go a day without hearing it."

---

Bucky blinked a few times then nodded slowly. "Uh, huh... That's fine." He smiled tentatively at Steve and rubbed his thumb down his neck. Just then there was a rustling outside Bucky's room and a slamming of the door. "Fuck! The girls are home," Bucky said and jumped out of bed reaching for his shirt. "Find your pants!"

---

Steve felt like cold water was dumped over his head. He scrambled and grabbed his clothes from the night before so the girls wouldn't see him in their brother's clothes. "Shit, do I wait in here?"

---

"Fuck, I don't know." Bucky was flustered and running around his room cleaning stuff up. He ran to a mirror and made sure he didn't look like he had just given a man a blowjob. "Do I smell like come?" Bucky asked and crowded Steve. "Um, just come with me and we will just pretend we were chatting in here or something okay?"

---

Steve looked around and found some lotion, which he put on his hand and smeared a little over Bucky's chest unceremoniously just so he smelled like that instead of anything else. "Bucky, I'm a terrible liar. I can't go walking up to your sisters like we didn't just do stuff."

---

"Just don't blurt out that I just had your dick in my throat and we will be fine," Bucky said. "They already know what sex is anyway." He slipped his shirt on and gave Steve a quick kiss. "Okay, let's go." He opened the door.

---

"Bucky, that doesn't mean-" Steve started to argue in a low whisper, but Bucky was already on the Lilly was unpacking her homework when she saw them. "What's he doing here? Is he paying rent now?" She asked her brother and then smirked over at Becca for approval of her wise crack.

---

Becca flicked her in the arm and Bucky put his hands on his hips, "Do you pay rent?" He asked Lilly with heavy sass. "No, you don't. I do. And Steve is my guest. And need I remind you he saved you from the jungle of New York not too long ago."

---

"Typical man. Thinks I need saving cause I'm a girl," Lilly said with a flip of her hair.

Steve barely held back a laugh but he managed. "You were two minutes away from crying and you know it," Steve shot back to her. "I could have sold you to the Brooklyn zoo instead. I bet they pay good money for mouthy kids."

---

"Plus," Bucky added and moved slightly closer to Steve. "It's got nothing to do with you being a girl and all to do with you being a kid in a big city. If it were me at your age it would have been the same thing." Becca giggled from the other side of the room at that.

---

"I don't know. Guess we will never find out," Lilly said, unwilling to admit defeat. She plopped her notebook on the table and took a seat. "So what are you and Mr. Steve doing?" She asked curiously, this time not trying to instigate something.

---

"Having a little chat," Bucky said and walked towards the fridge to get some water. "Been a pretty good day, huh, Steve? We listened to some Ramones." Bucky nodded and gestured for Steve to give his input on the day.

---

"Yeah," Steve said, his voice going just a little higher in pitch. The girls may not notice but Bucky would. "And we had some fruit," he added. "Talked a little trash about you two," he joked.

---

Steve was definitely right. He was horrible at this. Bucky was filling up two glasses of water and trying his best not to look too surprised at Steve. "Yeah, we did talk about you two a lot. Talked about lacrosse, Lilly." Bucky brought the water over to Steve.

---

Steve took the glass and fidgeted nervously. "Yeah. Did you know that lacrosse is popular on Long Island?" He asked. "That's not too far from here - it's where all the rich people with cars and back yards live," he chattered to her, hoping he was playing it cool enough.

---

"I know what Long Island is," Lilly sassed back. "Just don't like Long Island."

Becca motioned for Bucky to come over to her and Bucky obeyed. She adjusted his shirt, which was apparently askew enough to be noticeable. Bucky swore in his mind and hoped Becca wouldn't understand the implication. Instead, she looked into his eyes sadly and mouthed 'careful'. She knew exactly how many times Bucky's heart had been broken by some guy who didn't stick around and she didn't want Steve to be just another notch on Bucky's bedpost.

---

"How can you not like Long Island?" Steve asked and his eyes drifted over towards Bucky and saw him and Becca having a silent conversation. He saw a sad look in her eyes and he frowned with concern. "Is everything okay over there?"

---

"Uh, yeah." Bucky rubbed his face with his hands. "Becca's just helping me out. Right, Becs?" Bucky gave Steve an apologetic look. Becca was way too used to her brother to not know that he and Steve were together in some way. Bucky figured Becca just didn't want it to be like it was with all the guys before. She and Lilly couldn't handle that again.

---

"Alright," Steve murmured. He felt a little out of place now and he was also nervous because these kids were going to know all about him soon enough. "Do you want me to head out?" He asked. Maybe it would be better to wait for some other time or to let Bucky explain it to the girls on his own.

---

"No!" Bucky said a little too quickly and cleared his throat. "We've got plans still, right?" He asked referring to talking to the girls. Bucky guessed neither of them were very subtle because the girls were just staring at them with furrowed brows and frowns.

---

Steve looked at Bucky and then at the girls who definitely knew that something was up by now. He nodded and decided he may as well just come out with it. "Yeah we do," he said to Bucky. He looked over to the girls and apologized. "I'm sorry I'm acting funny. Your brother and I - well, we've been dating and I've been too nervous to tell you."

---

Becca and Lilly looked at each other and then from Bucky to Steve. "Is he good to you?" Lilly directed to Bucky then turned to Steve for the answer.

Becca and Bucky both sighed, "Lilly," and rolled their eyes at their predictable sister.
"Uh, well... I believe I am," Steve said, becoming a bit of a nervous idiot. "I cleaned the house and got you all set for school, didn't I? And I made dinner for all of you while he was sleeping." He looked to Bucky to confirm.

Bucky nodded and said, "Steve's good to me. I promise. He isn't like..." Bucky stopped and looked at the ground. "It's not going to be like..." He tried again and looked up to Lilly and then to Becca. He bit his lip nervously. He never really actually apologized for all the people he fucked in their home. He never wanted to talk about it.

Becca piped up then and asked quietly, "If you can promise me, Bucky, that this isn't going to be like before, then I don't have a problem." Sometimes Bucky was surprised by Becca's lack of a bullshit tolerance. She was so quiet that he would forget she had strong opinions like Lilly.

Steve wrapped an arm around Bucky's shoulders and gave him a small squeeze to show his support. He looked over to Becca and said, "I want to be here for all of you. You guys are so important to Bucky and so that means you're important to me now, too."

Becca nodded slowly and looked Steve up and down as he slid his fingers with Bucky's "Are you going to tell Miss Sarah? Or is it just a secret for us?"

Lilly interrupted, "You're not moving in here are you?"

Bucky breathed out in exasperation. "No, Lilly, Steve's got his own place. We just wanted to... I just wanted to tell you both. I hate keeping shit from you and don't you two pretend you didn't already know."

"I'll tell my mom soon. But nobody else besides that knows - and nobody else can know," Steve said. He gave Bucky's hand a squeeze, feeling a mix of vulnerability and happiness that he was out in the open to them. "Also, why would I want to move in here?" He asked. "I found dirty socks under the couch and you don't wash your dishes right," Steve teased.

"Those would be Lilly's socks," Bucky said and made a face. "All those sports produce some really terrible feet odors." Things felt normal. It wasn't like this was some giant reveal for anyone. Steve was probably the only one who this was a big deal for. Bucky looked to Steve and quickly kissed the side of his face because he could.

Steve blushed brightly when Bucky kissed his cheek. He smiled stupidly and hid his face briefly in Bucky's shoulder. He straightened up his posture soon after and then tugged lightly at Bucky's shirt.
"Can we talk in your room?" He asked, making sure that he said it in a way that wouldn't make Bucky worry.

---

"Sure, of course." Bucky nodded and turned to the girls. "There are leftover noodles in the fridge you can heat up. Remember I've got the close shift tonight so I'll be leaving in about an hour and a half."

---

Steve walked into the other room and pressed a kiss to Bucky's temple. "That went better than I expected," he admitted. "I was wondering if, uh... I mean, I'm not looking to move in but I was wondering if it would help you out if I made a habit to be around for you and the girls. Making dinners and keeping an eye on them when you're at work and that sort of thing."

---

Bucky nodded. "Well, I mean if you want to I don't have a problem with it. You might want to double check with them first, though. You can just ask them if it'd be okay if you hung around sometimes even if I'm not here. Becca will probably be a bit resistant because she remembers more of what I used to be like back then but Lilly will be fine with it."

---

Steve nodded. "I know I can't swoop in and act like I'm a part of the family, but I want to be there for all of you and help any way I can." He brought Bucky's hand up so he could kiss it. "I'll show Becca I can make an honest man out of you," he said with a wink.

---

Bucky tried to smile but looked down sadly. "Honestly, Steve, I don't know if she'll ever completely trust me with guys ever again. I'm at least glad Lilly doesn't know as much as Becca does. At least it's the quiet one." Bucky rubbed his hands down Steve's arms.

---

Steve cupped Bucky's chin and lifted his head up to give him a kiss. "I'll get her to trust me in due time. And then she'll definitely have to reconsider her stance on your taste in men," he said.

---

"Okay, Steve," Bucky said and wrapped his arms around him once more. "I wish neither of us had to work tonight."

---

"I wish so, too. But hey, I get my day off tomorrow. That's something to look forward to," Steve said.

---

Bucky stood up. "You want to go talk with the girls some more before I need to leave for work?"
Also, if you plan on getting on their good side you shouldn't mention that you haven't seen Star Wars yet."

---

Steve cuddled up to Bucky where they stood and kissed his cheek. "What do I talk about to them? Will they want to chat with me? I'm like twice their age."

---

"Just talk to them about school and their interests. Ask about their friends." Bucky remembered Steve was an only child and probably didn't have much experience with teen girls. "Just be yourself. I like you and that's all that actually matters. Oh, you could talk about me because I'm a great subject!"

Bucky joked excitedly.

---

Steve snorted and playfully messed up Bucky's hair. "You are a great subject. And an even better boyfriend." Steve sweetly kissed his lips and then led him back out by the hand to go back to the girls. Lilly would be easier to win over but he was going to have to work more with Becca. "So what are you guys learning in school?"

---

Bucky let go of Steve's hand and went to put on some music. He grabbed for a Bowie record before Lilly shouted, "The Clash, Bucky, '77 self title, please," and then turned to Steve. "I've got a project about World War II I've got to finish by next Monday." She offered as Bucky rummaged through a different box of records for The Clash.

---

Steve smiled. Lilly was like a louder version of Bucky in a way. "My granddad fought in World War II," he said. "Did you know the Irish hate the British but they fought in their army to make sure that Hitler didn't win?" His mom always told him how his grandfather complained about that.

---

Lilly lit up. "Hey, so do you know a lot about the war?"

Bucky finally got the music playing and he came back over to them and sat on a chair across the room so he could watch Steve interact with his sisters. "Lilly, maybe if you ask really nice, Steve will help you out with it, huh? It's just a paper isn't it?" Bucky leaned his body so his legs were flopped over the arm of the chair.

---

"I mean, I'm no expert. But my ma told me enough war stories from my grandfather that I think I could help out at least a little," Steve said. He snuck a kiss with Bucky before sitting at the table with Lilly. "What do you have to answer in your paper?" He asked.
Bucky smiled and wanted nothing more than to pull Steve into his lap and snuggle him. "She's got just to write about someone's story from the war. She was going to do a famous general or something but maybe the stories about your grandfather would be better?" Bucky said and reached for his water on the coffee table. He knew he shouldn't be but he couldn't help but think about the next step with Steve. They had just taken one leap today by telling his sisters and with Steve confessing his love and Bucky hoped the next big leap would be either telling Steve's mom or finally getting to have sex with Steve.

---

"My granddad is no famous general, but he's a really cool guy. He's still alive, you know. He sent my ma a few letters and I'm sure she would let you borrow one of them that he wrote from the front," Steve offered. He gave Bucky a happy smile, relieved he was getting along with her.

---

Lilly thanked Steve because that was perfect for her project then she turned to Bucky. "Okay, Buck, you may date Steve it's fine."

Bucky swung his legs back over the chair and came over to the table. "Excuse me? I may? Who said it was your decision, huh?" He flicked her in the head playfully and smiled at Steve cheekily.

---

"You hear that, Buck? I knew you were having doubts before but now that we have Lilly's approval, we're good," Steve joked back. He captured Bucky's hand and kissed it. He spent the rest of the time telling Lilly old war tales from his dad and left out anything that wasn't child friendly. A little later though, Steve knew that it was time for them to get going. "Want me to make dinner before I go?"

---

"Nah, they'll be fine," Bucky said as he was lacing up his boots. He had to walk to the record shop and it took him about ten minutes and he was supposed to clock in in seven minutes. He may have gotten a little distracted with Steve. "They have spaghetti in the fridge and carrots." Bucky made quick rounds to each one of them giving each a kiss to the top of the head including Steve. "Okay, Clint's going to kill me I have to get going."

---

"Alright. I'll see you later, Buck," Steve said. He was disappointed to see him go but he knew the guy had to work. After Bucky left, he wanted to give him a little surprise so he asked the girls what sandwich they wanted for lunch tomorrow and then ran to Bucky's corner shop to get his regular and lunch for the girls. He returned and dropped off the food. Steve had to get going, so he gave the girls his home number and precinct phone number in case of emergency.

---

Bucky was having a pretty slow day at the record shop and Clint was spending his time rearranging the slow rock section. Neither of them had spoken much yet but Bucky knew Clint noticed the way he was acting. He noticed the lighter step that Bucky had - the occasional smile that ghosted his lips for no reason. Clint was just too sneaky a person to come right out and mention it. No, he would collect some more information first - like a spy.
Steve’s relationship with Bucky only flourished more and more as time went on. Becca was still hard to win over but Lilly almost always had something to talk to him about. Today, Steve had chosen to invite Bucky on a date, this time to a museum where they could at least pose as history buffs. He showed up a little after midday to Bucky’s place.

---

"So, where exactly are you taking me, Officer?" Bucky asked and pulled Steve by his belt towards him for a kiss. "You said museum but you never said which one." He ran his fingers up through his hair and pulled it back in a loose ponytail wanting it out of his eyes.

---

"The Brooklyn Museum, of course." Steve found out that there was a temporary exhibit on the history of rock and roll, so he figured it would be a fun outing with Bucky. "Trust me on it. Have I led you wrong yet?"

---

"Not so far, but there is a first time for everything," Bucky said and slipped his jacket on. He kissed Steve on the lips once, then on the jaw, then on the neck. "Can’t we stay in where I can do this to you?" Bucky asked and licked into Steve's mouth.

---

Steve let out a soft moan at the way Bucky kissed him. He pressed himself up against the other's body and stroked his hand over Bucky's cheek. "Next time," he promised. "At my place."

---

"Okay," Bucky breathed out. "It’s been about seventy-two hours since I’ve had your dick in my mouth and I really, really miss it." Bucky moved his hands down Steve’s back and pocketed them in his back pockets so he could squeeze his ass. "Oh, well, guess we should get going," Bucky said and peeled himself off Steve to head to the door.

---

Steve's face went a bright red. He'd always been so careful about showing Bucky that he loved him and didn't just lust for him but Bucky had no problem telling Steve exactly what he wanted to do with him. "I don't know how that mouth hasn't gotten you into more trouble," he chuckled. He stole one more kiss before heading out the door.
They were standing outside Bucky's door and he was trying to get it to lock when one of his neighbors walked by. "James," He said, "Good day, isn't it?" He didn't let Bucky answer before going on, "I seem to recall you told me your sisters would no longer run up the stairs to get home. I seem to recall you said you'd make sure to tell them to stop. But, it would seem they have kept doing it. They nearly knocked me over the other day, the hooligans."

"Are you finished, Dale?" Bucky asked flatly and folded his arms.

"And who is this I keep seeing about?" Dale asked and held out his hand to Steve. "Finally made an adult friend, James?"

---

Steve frowned when this guy showed up and started criticizing Bucky's sisters for being typical kids. Seriously, who complained about running upstairs? But when the guy offered his hand, Steve smiled and shook it. "I'm Officer Rogers," he said. "The NYPD takes petty complaints very seriously. When I heard talk of two girls running around, well... I had to come here and put an end to that."

---

Bucky cleared his throat and elbowed Steve in the ribs discreetly. "I'll talk to them again, Dale. Anything else?" He hoped desperately that that would be it so he and Steve could get going but he never quite knew with Dale. One day Bucky just invited him into his house and had him sit at the table to complain just because Bucky had bags of groceries to put away.

Dale shook his head and bid the two of them goodbye before turning his back and going into his apartment. While he wasn't looking, Bucky flipped him off for good measure.

---

Steve snorted when Bucky flipped the guy off. "Pleasant man," he said sarcastically. Steve didn't think he was particularly mean, but he didn't seem like the life of the party either. "At least tell me your other neighbor is nicer."

---

"Never met her," Bucky said and started down the hall. "She's an artist and a vampire. Never comes out during the day and never talks but is always covered in paint. Only ever seen her in passing and when I waved she looked away quickly. Think she's got anthropophobia or something."

---

"Oh," Steve said. "Well, I guess she's nice, at least. Or not a bad neighbor." He was tempted to throw an arm around Bucky but refrained - just barely. "I need to show you my art sometime," he said. "I think you'd find it neat."

---

Bucky looked to Steve and said, "Steve, there is nothing I'd like more." He wanted to grab his hand and was caught up in a moment of anger because he couldn't. Bucky expected today to be a fun day but he was so pissed that he wouldn't get to hold Steve close to him at the museum like other couples would be doing. Also, he wasn't sure if it was in Steve's plan for the date to go back to his place and goof around. Bucky hoped so. He wasn't lying when he said he missed Steve's dick.

---

Steve got a bashful but happy look on his face when Bucky said that. He was going to say something back but he heard a distant shout from a few blocks away. He froze like a dog that'd just seen a rabbit and strained his ears to listen. "Did you hear that?" Steve started to walk in large strides towards the source of the noise.

---

"Steve, what... wait!" Bucky shouted after him and ran to catch up. Steve wasn't paying any attention to him now and was only quickening his pace towards the noise. Bucky was confused and worried about what was happening and about the hard scary look that came over Steve's face.

---

Steve had zeroed in and went from dopey boyfriend right to cop-mode and sure enough, he found a bunch of young teens beating down a kid with darker skin. "Hey!" He shouted. He ran right at them and the kids scattered like roaches from light. Steve was able to catch one of them by the back of his shirt. "I'm an officer of the law, son, what's your name?"

---

"Fuck!" Bucky shouted as he saw what was going down. He didn't want to interrupt Steve doing his job so he ran over to the injured kid. "Oh my god. Kid, are you okay? What happened? It's okay, we're going to help you." Bucky helped the guy sit up and told him to just take it easy as he gave him a once over for any broken bones he could detect.

---

The kid had a busted nose and cuts all over him. He looked like he was just barely holding back tears. "I didn't steal anything, I swear," he said to Bucky.

"This spic stole my watch!" The other kid exclaimed at Steve.

---

"Watch your fucking mouth!" Bucky shouted at the other kid and turned to the kid by him and apologized on behalf of the other boy.

---

"Do you have any proof of that?" Steve asked with his hands bunched in the kid’s collar.

The kid gestured wildly at the smaller boy by Bucky's side. "Yeah, just look at him!"

---

"You didn't take his watch, right? I want to fight for you but you can't make an ass of me if you actually did it," Bucky said as diplomatically as he could.
The kid shook his head. "I didn't, I swear!"

Steve couldn't lose his temper since he was a cop. He kept a good grip on the bully and pulled out his pager to call one of his on duty coworkers. "You're going to take a ride to the precinct and have papers filed for assault. There, you can call your mom or dad."

Bucky sat back on his heels and breathed out a long sigh. Neither kid looked like he was older than fourteen. So much for a relaxing day out. "Here, Kid, Bucky took the smaller kid’s hand and helped him up. What's your name then, huh?" He asked and gripped his shoulder. He knew what it was like to fight your way out of tough situations. Bucky knew what it was like to get beaten up. He felt really bad for the kid. He was probably in pain and embarrassed.

"Manuel," he said meekly. He ducked his head and wiped his bloody nose on his shirt. "Can I go home now?" He asked. Manuel was thankful for their help but didn't want to stick around for the cops to show up.

"I can't believe you're taking this spic's side!" The other boy shouted.

Steve gave him a shake. "Say that word again and I'll write you up for hate speech too."

Bucky piped up the same time Steve did but was much angrier, shouting, "What did I tell you about watching your damn mouth?" Bucky wasn't sure if Manuel was allowed to leave or not. He kind of wanted to take him to the hospital just to be sure nothing was wrong - no broken ribs or something. "Steve, can Manuel go or do we need him to call home at the station?"

"Keep an eye on this kid and I'll take a statement from Manuel," Steve said. He made sure Bucky had a grip on the offending kid before he came over to Manuel. "Hey, Kiddo. I'm a police officer, so you can tell me what happened and I'll let the fellas know at the precinct. Then we can walk you home or to the hospital if you want."

Manuel looked back to Bucky. Clearly, he wasn't interested in talking to Steve. He was probably afraid of the cops and could tell Bucky wasn't one. Bucky nodded once to indicate it was fine for him to talk to Steve. "I don't really know what happened. I was just walking home and they saw me and yelled at me. I ran but they were faster and caught me."

Steve pulled out a writing pad he always kept in his pocket. "And do you know these kids at all? Are they in the same class as you?" He gave the kid a gentle look. "You're not going to get in trouble for telling the truth. You don't have to be scared of them."

---

Bucky looked on and kept quiet. He didn't want to disturb Steve in his element. Bucky's adrenaline was still high and he couldn't help the overwhelming sense that came over his body about how sexy Steve looked being a big good cop.

Manuel spoke again slowly, "They are on my soccer team."

---

Steve's face fell. "Oh, I'm so sorry." He motioned for him to sit down. "If you wait there, we can take you home soon." Steve asked Bucky to sit with Manuel and spent the rest of the time scolding the other kid until his coworkers showed up.

---

Bucky sat in silence next to Manuel, occasionally looking over at him to make sure everything was still okay. Once the cops got there, Steve spent several minutes explaining the situation to his fellow officers. A few times, one of them would nod towards Bucky and Bucky knew they were discussing him. He wondered what Steve told them to explain why he and Bucky just so happened to be here at the time. He wondered if he even claimed he knew Bucky or if he said he was a random stranger who helped out.

---

They patiently packed the swearing, kicking kid into the back of the car. Steve walked back to the two and said, "He's got it taken care of and I gave him the statement." He turned towards Manuel and asked, "Do you want to go home or to the hospital?"

---

Manuel immediately said he wanted to go home and also said he could walk himself. Steve adamantly refused to let him but Bucky offered, "Hey, he's a smart kid. He told me he only lives a few blocks down and I don't think he'll have any more trouble on the way back." Bucky stated it more like a question so if Steve out-rightly told them no, then it would be fine.

---

Steve wasn't all right with letting the poor kid go on his own, but when Bucky told him to let him go, he sighed. Steve wrote down his home number and passed it to Manuel. "If you or your mom get any grief, I want you to call me, okay?" He let him go once he took the paper. Steve watched the kid sadly as he walked away. "Poor kid. I can't believe his teammates did that."

---

"He's different from them," Bucky said and assessed Steve. "Teenagers who don't understand 'different' just beat it up instead. He's probably a better soccer player and they all got jealous. He'll be okay. He seems like a smart kid. And I think you scared the others too bad for them to try again."
Steve looked back in the kid's direction once more before nudging Bucky lightly and heading towards the museum again. "It isn't fair," he said. "We're a nation of immigrants. This kid should be supported by his friends. It's just... incredible in the worst way."

---

Bucky nodded and started to walk on. He realized then how shaky his body was from the intense adrenaline spurt he had had during the whole exchange. He tried his best to walk the same pace as Steve and not look like he was wobbling. He had a couple rushes of memories come to him about being attacked by the baseball team in high school for 'turning their pitcher gay' - to which he responded that he was “…no pitcher, more like a catcher, if you know what I mean.”

---

Steve could tell that Bucky was feeling off. He reached out to gently hold his shoulder, figuring that was safe enough that people wouldn't stare. "You okay?" He asked. "You're shaking, Buck." Steve was seething, but this was by far milder than some of the stuff he'd seen as an officer.

---

"Uh, yeah, I'm good," Bucky said and walked a few more steps before saying, "A-actually, can we sit down for a second? I'm..." Bucky found the nearest bench and slumped down in it. He raised his hands up to his face and they were shaking so hard they practically vibrated.

---

Steve had a worried look on his face. He rushed over to sit down next to Bucky where he rested and he rubbed his back gently. "It's alright, Bucky, take your time." He had to pull his hand away when he saw some people turning the corner. He didn't want to appear too friendly with Bucky.

---

Bucky looked over to Steve and wanted to lay his head on his shoulder. "I'm sorry, Steve. That was just so overwhelming." He looked at Steve's worried eyes and felt incredibly safe with him. He rambled on, "It just made me think about when I was in high school and also what would happen if Becca or Lilly was in a situation like that and maybe they have been and I never knew and you were pretty intense and scary but also really fucking hot and I'm just overwhelmed."

---

Steve really wanted to show Bucky the exhibit, but the poor guy looked so wound up right now and he knew he needed a bit of comforting too. "Well, I have to be intense as an officer," he said. "People don't listen to easygoing cops." He sighed and looked into Bucky's eyes. "You want to go to my place for a bit? The museum can wait."

---

"No," Bucky said and forced himself to get up. "You planned this day out and I'm going to have to just calm the fuck down and enjoy myself." He stopped to think for a second. "Although, I might want to stop by a phone and call the girls to make sure they are fine."
"You don't have to force yourself to calm down for my sake," Steve said. "You're practically a dad, Buck. My ma would sit home and cry if she saw some plane go down cause she imagined how she would feel if I were up there when that happened." He tried comforting Bucky as best as he could. "We can stop for a phone call."

"I just need to hear their voices and then I'll be fine," Bucky said and started walking again. "Also, Steve," he said with a harsh edge, "If you ever want me to blow you again, don't ever call me a dad again. I feel old enough already." He made a grumpy side-glance at Steve so he would know he was mostly being a good sport about it.

He started dialing the number of their landline. He waited for a few rings and when no one was picking up he gave Steve a quick worried look and his heart started to race. Then there was a click and Becca's soft voice asked, "Hello?"

Bucky immediately relaxed and let out a huge sigh of relief. "Hey, Becs, how's it going?"

Steve was worried no one would pick up and Bucky would worry without need, but he saw the sigh of relief and was thankful that one of the girls answered.

"Bucky?" Becca sounded confused. Her brother had only just left the place. "It's... going alright. You're not already on your way back, are you?"

"Nah," Bucky said, "We just had a bit of an incident and I wanted to call and make sure you both were okay." He looked to Steve for reassurance. He wanted to joke to Becca that Steve had said he was practically a dad but he was worried it would make her dislike Steve since their dad wasn't around to fill his role anymore.

"An incident?" Becca asked. "Steve didn't do anything did he?" She sounded genuinely concerned and getting defensive for Bucky's sake. There was a faint meow in the background that got to the 'me' part and Becca repeated, “Did he?” Before the 'ow' part came.

"The fuck was that?" Bucky asked. "No, Steve's fine. Saved the day. Do you have a cat in the apartment?" Bucky said hurriedly. "Where's Lilly? Did she bring a cat home?" If Dale got wind of an unpermitted animal in the apartment, he would have a hay day.

"Bucky, Lilly knows better than to bring home a cat," Becca scolded. "She's got the TV on really loud." Neither of which was a lie. Becca and Lilly often fed this stray cat and if they happened to leave the window open while Bucky wasn't home and it happened to jump in...
Bucky furrowed his brow and thought for a minute. "Hold on, Becca." He lowered the phone so she couldn't hear. "Steve, you're a cop. Find out if she's lying about having a cat in the apartment." He thrust the phone at him and took a step closer so he could hear.

"What?" Steve squawked quietly, frowning when Bucky thrust the phone at him. "Hell, no, I'm trying to get on her good side. I'm not going to rat her out if she's lying," he said to Bucky in a hushed tone.

"You want to get on my bad side?" Bucky whispered back and shoved the phone back towards him.
"Just figure it out and then I'll decide what to do, yeah? Dale could have the landlord charge us for a pet this month if he finds out."

Steve grimaced as he took the phone and slowly held it up to his ear. "Becca?" He asked. "It's Steve.
Did you bring a cat into the apartment?"

"...No."

Steve glanced at Bucky briefly and then asked, "Is there a cat in the apartment?"

"...I don't have to answer that."

Steve nodded his head to Bucky.

Bucky took the phone back from Steve and said, "Becca, you get that cat out of there. We can't afford extra on rent this month. Steve and I will be back later. Put the cat out." He hung up then and looked to Steve and sighed.

"Bucky-" Becca started to protest, annoyed, but the phone cut off. She really didn't see the problem with letting the cat in for a couple hours every now and again, but whatever. She wasn't going to risk getting into more trouble.

"Well," Steve said awkwardly. "At least you know they're alright."

Bucky rubbed his face with his hands. "They better listen to me and put that cat out." He sighed and pocketed his hands. "I'd love for them to be able to have animals like we did when we were at our parents’ place but I just can't afford the upcharge to keep one."
Steve paused for a moment and said, "You said it was 200 a month, right?" He shrugged his shoulders up and said, "I could... I could give you that if you wanted. You don't even have to tell the girls it's from me."

"No," Bucky said flatly. "Thank you, though. I can't take that. They will have to deal with it. Maybe if I can get them a VCR soon they won't be so mad. But I can't take your money like that every month, Steve."

"Buck," Steve said softly. "You're not taking my money. Your landlord is. And if you think they'd be happier with a pet, then it's no question to me on whether I want to do it or not."

"Well, my landlord can't have your money, either," Bucky said, "And I don't know if it would make them happier. It would probably just end up being one more thing I have to take care of if they don't remember to feed it and shit."

"Alright," Steve said. "I just... I wish I could take the weight off your shoulders, Buck. There's nothing that would make me happier than making your life better and easier." Steve had already cried to his damn mom over all the things that Bucky had to deal with.

Bucky squared his shoulders and stopped Steve on the sidewalk. "Then take me to a nice museum, show me a good time, then take me someone private and ruin me." Bucky bit his lip. "That'll help with the stress."

Steve blinked dumbly at him and then nodded. "Oh...okay," he said. They arrived at the museum a few minutes later. Steve dragged Bucky past the art exhibits straight to the rock and roll history setup that they had. "I saw this in the paper and knew I had to show it to you."

"Wow, fuck yeah," Bucky breathed when they walked into the exhibit. Bucky immediately forgot about Steve and started towards a large picture of The Rolling Stones that had a lot of history and interview quotes underneath.

Steve couldn't even be offended at Bucky abandoning him. He knew how much of a nerd the guy was with this stuff, so it came with the territory. He followed Bucky around, interested in the history behind all the bands but not as much as Bucky was.
Bucky had his nose stuck in every word as he read. He would nod and make little ‘Mhmms’ when he saw something he knew and would occasionally whisper, "Huh, didn't know that." He came to a collage of pictures of The Clash and wished he could take a picture of it for Lilly.

Steve quickly found himself more interested in watching Bucky enjoy the place than he was in the exhibits, themselves. He loved how Bucky stuck his nose right against the display case to read the text and how his eyes lit up whenever he learned something new. After about an hour of Bucky almost ignoring him, Steve came up to his side. "Enjoying yourself?" He teased.

"Steve, this was perfect," Bucky said and reached for his hand before pulling back quickly. He silently cursed himself for being so careless. "Anyway, you really do know me. This was exactly what I needed for a fun day out. I should try to bring the girls here one day before it's gone. Lilly loves The Clash."

Steve stood stock still when Bucky reached for his hand and was grateful that Bucky quickly realized what he was doing. "You should," Steve agreed. "And I bet you'll enjoy reading all of this. Again. I don't think there was a single letter you didn't look at."

"Well," Bucky said, "I did sort of skim over that section for The Police. I know you love them but they're just okay, Steve." Bucky chuckled. "Anything else we want to see in the rest of the museum?"

"I bring you to an awesome exhibit and you thank me by stomping on my favorite band," Steve said dramatically then lowered his voice and added, "I'm a little more interested in ruining you than looking around here."

Bucky cleared his throat. "I am interested in being ruined, Officer. Especially after such a dramatic opening to our day, I could use something relieving." Bucky followed Steve towards the exit and watched his ass move as he walked. He was looking forward to getting his hands him as soon as possible.

Steve blushed at the knowledge that he had such an effect on Bucky. He walked out of the place with him so they could head back to his apartment. He'd decided that they weren't going to ever do anything at Bucky's place so the girls didn't have to feel uncomfortable. "So, what are you thinking for today?"
"Do you mean what am I thinking of doing to you? Or what are we having for dinner?" Bucky sassed at Steve. He had kind of hoped Steve was ready to go all the way but he also didn't want to pressure him if he wasn't. Maybe he could casually bring it up and ask him if he thought he was ready for it. Bucky was happy enough just blowing him again but he did miss full-on fucking.

"You know what I mean," Steve huffed, giving Bucky a slightly grumpy look that was still fond. He knew Bucky liked breaking his balls over talking about sex and things that related to it. "What do you want to do?"

"How about we wait until we get to your place then we can discuss it," Bucky offered. They were only about two blocks away and Bucky didn't really feel like asking Steve on the street if he was ready for sex.

"Fair enough," Steve said. He walked the rest of the way with a nervous sort of excitement. When they got into his place, he pulled down the blinds and walked over to give Bucky a huge hug and a kiss. "Been wanting to do that since we left yours."

Bucky pulled him back for another kiss and then another before letting him go. "Today was a whirlwind," Bucky said. "Saved a kid. Almost passed out. There was a cat. Ignoring you at the museum. And now here we are." He slipped his hands underneath Steve's shirt and felt the ridges of his muscles.

Steve made a happy little noise when Bucky touched him. "I'll admit that this was one of my more eventful dates. I can't promise they all will be this packed," he said. Steve cupped the sides of Bucky's face and drew him in for a slow kiss. "You look adorable when you're all into your music," he said. "It's so much fun to watch you."

Bucky leaned his forehead against Steve's for a moment and then rested against his shoulder. "Thank you for taking me to the museum, Steve. I really loved the exhibit. I wouldn't have been able to go if it weren't for you and I appreciate you thinking of me."

Steve smiled and stroked his hand over Bucky's hair, doing his best to not mess it up. "I'm always thinking about you," he said sweetly. "Don't know how you're not tired after running through my mind all day."
Bucky laughed against Steve's neck and said, "You big dweeb. I'm starting to feel really grateful I met you. And, ironically, we have Lily's antics to thank for that."

"I'm glad I met you too," Steve murmured. "You make me so happy. Life was a little too boring without you in it."

Wrapping his arms tightly around Steve, Bucky asked, "I'm a little hungry. Do you have some cereal?"

Steve snorted. "How about I cook you a real meal?" He was dumbfounded by the Barnes family obsession with cereal.

"I'm fine with cereal unless you just feel like making something." Bucky trailed his fingers across Steve's back and hummed against his neck. "I was thinking if I eat something easy and fast then it would quicker that we could get to something fun. You did promise to ruin me, didn't you?"

Steve smirked and pressed a few more kisses to Bucky's face. "Spaghetti takes ten minutes and it's more nutritional than cereal. I'm sure your poor old dick can wait a few extra minutes, Buck."

"My poor dick has been waiting all fucking day." Bucky slumped down into a chair and watched Steve work around the kitchen to get what he needed. Steve was tall but some of the higher shelves he still had to reach for and his shirt rode up a bit when he did. Bucky wanted to lick his lower back when it peeked out to greet him.

"It can wait a little more," Steve said in a no-nonsense tone that still managed to be gentle. He was a stickler about not having junk for meals. Steve could feel Bucky's gaze on him and pointedly ignored it while he pottered about making their meal. "Do you always eat cereal for whatever?"

"Yeah, usually. Cereal is easy and it's cheap." Bucky flipped through a novel that was sitting on Steve's table absently. "We usually have cereal, noodles, fruit, toast and eggs, sometimes waffles, microwave chicken." Bucky couldn't cook for shit. He could boil water and make noodles and that was about it.
"That's that. I'm cooking for you guys. I can make a week's portions on the weekend and then all you have to do is heat it up when it's dinner time. You freeze it until you want to eat it," Steve said and drained the pasta and added sauce.

---

"Steve..." Bucky started but then decided he wasn't going to win this one so he just sighed and crossed his arms. He did like watching Steve cook so maybe it would be nice. He could have Steve over while the girls were at school and he could help Steve cook if he was willing to teach him.

---

"Hush, you're getting proper food," Steve said. He made a healthy helping of dinner for Bucky and took a seat with his own plate. He leaned over to kiss his cheek before digging into his food.

---

Bucky smiled up at him and thanked him for making dinner before he started wolfing down his food as well. He didn't like admitting it but Steve was a good cook and the food was delicious and he was looking forward to having meals from him for a while.

---

Steve gave appreciative, little looks at Bucky while they ate. Bucky always ate like he was running out of time. Steve found it endearing and he leaned over to give him little kisses here and there.
When he finished his plate, Steve stood up so he could wash off their dishes. "Much better than cereal, yeah?"

---

"Yes, but I still hold my belief that cereal is good for anytime food. And you can't sway me on that." Bucky came up behind Steve and hugged his back while he washed dishes. "Can I help?"

---

Steve hummed and leaned back into Bucky's chest. "It's okay," he said. "I'll only be a few minutes.
It'll be nice if you keep holding me." Once he finished up the dishes he turned and pecked Bucky's lips.

---

Bucky hummed into the kiss and smiled at Steve. "You're really cute, Officer." Bucky felt really lucky in this moment. He got to be with Steve who was so good to him. And they had told his sisters and they were basically okay with it. Everything was pretty much going well.

---

Steve picked Bucky up and hooked his arms under Bucky's ass as he brought him to the bedroom.
"You aren't half bad looking, yourself," Steve said in a flirty way.

---
Bucky was gently dropped on the bed and Steve loomed over him. Bucky desperately wanted to get at Steve's cock but he also wanted to ask Steve if he was ready for more. "Steve... I want... I want to ask you something," Bucky said shyly. "And your answer can be 'no' and I won't mind at all."

---

Steve started kissing down Bucky's neck and he was about to take his clothes off when he heard that shy tone. Bucky was never shy when it came to this stuff. He looked up and cupped the side of Bucky's face. "You can ask me anything, Buck."

---

"I was wondering if you were..." Bucky stopped for a moment. "Well, I guess I have two questions." Bucky pulled Steve close to him and cuddled against his arm before pulling back to ask, "You're a virgin, right?"

---

Steve kind of had an idea where this conversation was going but didn't want to open his mouth and assume Bucky's questions. "Yeah, I am," Steve said, a little embarrassed but hiding it well.

---

Bucky nuzzled back into him, "Okay." He tried to stay calm but something about the whole situation was getting Bucky really worked up. He would be the very first person to fuck Steve Rogers. Assuming, that is, Steve let him be the first person to have sex with him. Bucky's brain was shooting off primal signals that he would be the first and only person to be with Steve in that way. He didn't plan on getting rid of Steve anytime soon and something about knowing he would be the only one to touch Steve sexually was really overwhelming.

---

Steve had a bit of a blush on his face that wasn't just from arousal. He stroked his hand over Bucky's chest before slipping his it under his shirt to touch him affectionately. He nudged Bucky slightly to get him to look up so he could pepper a few kisses onto his face. "You said you had two questions," he prompted cautiously.

---

"Yes." Bucky was distracted by Steve's hands on him and the bulge in his pants that had been being ignored for several minutes now. "Steve, Babe, I wanted to know if you thought – and, again, it's okay if the answer is 'no' - if maybe you were ready to... make love with me?" Bucky bit his lip in anticipation and looked up at Steve with hooded eyes.

---

Bucky looked so good right now. Steve laid down next to him but kept feeling up his torso, unable to keep his hands off him. "Can you promise me something, Buck?" He asked. "I want to... but I only want to if this isn't just fooling around." He kissed the curve of his jaw. "I love you. I don't need you to love me back right now, but... I just need you to promise that you want this to be long term."
Wiggling as close to Steve as he could, Bucky said, "Steve, I don't plan on getting rid of you unless you say it's over. I know you say it's okay that I don't say 'I love you' yet. And I'm very, very grateful that you don't want to pressure me like that. And I don't want to pressure you into sex either if you aren't ready. If you want to wait, that's fine. I can tell you I am getting closer and closer to saying it every day. I just have to be cautious. If I didn't have to worry about the girls and their feelings and needs then it would be so much different." Bucky breathed in deeply. "Steve, I'll wait for you. I'll wait a long time until you are ready because I believe this," He gestured between the two of them, "and you are worth it."

---

Steve pressed himself against Bucky and couldn't stop looking into his eyes as he spoke so honestly. He only looked down when he reached to grab Bucky's hand and bring it to his lips to kiss it. "I want to," he insisted softly, looking nervous but eager. "But, um..." he started awkwardly. "I mean. Are you usually, uh... giving or taking?"

---

Bucky's heart started to race. This was happening. This was happening with Steve. His whole body couldn't contain itself. "Honestly, Steve, I like going either way. It's whatever you are more comfortable with. And if you want to try it one way tonight and the other way some other time I'm fine with that."

---

"Can I, uh... can I be the one giving today?" Steve asked. He didn't really feel sexy with that sort of awkward way of asking, so he tried to save the mood a little by dragging his fingers lower and groping Bucky's balls through his pants.

---

Bucky stuttered at the feeling but said, "Yes, you may. I'll teach you, okay?" He cupped Steve's ass and nuzzled his head into his neck.

---

Steve pushed Bucky's pants down and nibbled at the shell of his ear. "I know how sex works, Dummy, I ain't that much of a virgin," he laughed. He knew Bucky was trying to be encouraging, though.

---

"You know what to do to get me ready, Steve? Don't want you hurting me, now." Bucky relaxed into Steve's touches and felt the slip of fabric over his skin as Steve started undressing him. His heart was pounding out of his chest like he was the virgin and he couldn't wait to get Steve inside.

---

"Well, duh. I shove everything all in at once on the count of three," Steve said in a know-it-all tone but then smirked to show he was just messing with him. "I saw the way you've been looking at me," he murmured as he reached to his bed stand for lube and a condom. "I went shopping." He gave Bucky a happy smile as he set them on the mattress.

"You already planned for this, Steve?" Bucky asked and captured his mouth in a harsh kiss. "That is so hot." Another slow kiss. "I need you, Steve. I've wanted this so long. Please."

"Well I wasn't going to let us be unprepared," Steve said breathily and moaned into the kiss. He dragged his hand down Bucky's front and rubbed circles over the inside of Bucky's thighs before grabbing the lube again and hastily pouring some on his fingers. Hearing Bucky say he needed him did things to him. "Tell me if I need to slow down."

"I've done this before. I'm good," Bucky grunted out. "Just go slow with the first and massage a lot, okay?" He moved his ass down the bed a little so he would be closer to Steve and he spread his legs out.

Steve let out a short whine when he saw Bucky spread his legs for him. "You're so sexy, Bucky," he breathed out. Steve looked him over, taking his eyes from top to bottom before he pressed a slicked finger against Bucky's hole. He teased it a little, circling the tip around the rim a few times before slowly pushing in.

Bucky keened and sat up a little when Steve pushed his finger in. "And, you're entirely sure about this, Steve?" He stuttered out. "Just need to know this is what you want and you aren't just doing it for me." He reached a hand out to feel Steve's chest as he moved his finger around inside him.

"I'm sure," Steve said. "I want you, Buck." He couldn't take his eyes off him. He pressed kisses all down Bucky's neck and across his collarbones. He moved his finger freely inside of Bucky and once he could see him get impatient, he added a second.

"Ugh, fuck," Bucky said in a desperate whisper and squirmed on the bed. "It's been a while since someone's been inside me, Babe, I am so glad it's you. I'm so happy I'm with you. Only you, Steve." Bucky was going to go on but suddenly there were three fingers and he couldn't speak anymore.

"I'll take care of you, Sweetheart," Steve said softly. God, Bucky looked so fucking good beneath him. He watched the man squirm as he opened him up with three fingers. Once he got the go-ahead, he pulled his fingers out and tore the condom packaging open. Steve's hands shook a little in excitement as he put it on and bit his bottom lip before settling back between Bucky's legs and angling Bucky's hips up a bit more. "I've got you," he promised, lining himself up and slowly pushing in.

---

Bucky knew how big Steve was from the times he had sucked him dry but he wasn't quite ready for it when it was pushed inside him. Steve was incredibly gentle, though, and tentatively started pushing in and out with slow meaningful movements. Bucky knew exactly what Steve must have been feeling. Bucky's own first time was a little bizarre but also fascinating. He was glad he got to share this with Steve.

---

It was so overwhelming. Steve's mind clouded and he didn't even try to stop the moan that left him. "Oh my God, Bucky," he gasped out. He didn't stop moving but he was nothing but gentle with him even though he wanted more. "You feel so good. Christ," he swore, leaning down to claim Bucky's lips in a heated kiss.

---

Bucky was a little surprised at the language Steve used just because he said anything like it so infrequently. "You can go harder, Steve. Not gonna break me, I promise." Bucky wanted to feel it. He wanted to feel it deep inside and harsh. He wanted to be sore the next day and know it was Steve who did it.

---

Steve dragged his nails down Bucky's sides until his hands rested on his hips. He gripped tightly to hold him steady as he started to thrust into him in earnest, making the mattress creak under them. "Fucking hell, Buck," he breathed out. Every time he buried himself inside of Bucky, Steve would roll his hips upward and force Bucky's ass into the air an inch or so to fuck him even deeper.

---

Bucky gripped the mattress tight and moved with Steve. The only thing he could think was a stream of 'finally, fuck, Steve, love, more, please, need, come' as he felt every thrust into him. Steve's dick managed to find his prostate easily and he paid attention to every hit. He reached for his own dick to start jerking himself while Steve was deep inside. Being Steve's first time fucking, Bucky wasn't sure how long he would last and he really wanted to come with Steve.

---

Steve took one of Bucky's hands and laced their fingers together before pinning it over Bucky's head. He smiled at Bucky, moaning in his ear about how amazing he felt but as he felt himself get closer to orgasm, he stopped talking and his thrusts got more erratic. When he came, he rode out his orgasm, shuddering as he slammed himself into Bucky one last time.

---

Bucky jolted when Steve came and he felt a rush of pride come over him. A couple more pulls on his dick sent him over the edge as well and he was coming on his stomach and hands. He brought the hand up to Steve's mouth and had him suck the come from his fingers as he watched with sleepy eyes. He could almost feel himself falling more in love with Steve.
Steve was quick to suck and lick Bucky's fingers clean. He didn't feel like pulling out of Bucky yet and he felt so goddamn happy. He wiped some of the come off of Bucky's belly and rubbed it onto his boyfriend's nipple. "You look good when you're fucked out."

"I feel good when I'm fucked out," Bucky mumbled and ran his fingers through his long hair. "How do you feel? Are you okay? Was this okay?" Bucky really hoped Steve was doing okay and didn't regret losing his virginity to him.

Steve peppered kisses all over Bucky's face. "It felt amazing, Buck. It's... it was better than I could've ever imagined." He grinned and settled down next to Bucky. "You're lucky I was too afraid to have sex before they legalized sodomy here. And I haven't had my eye on someone since."

"Ugh, gross," Bucky said with a crinkled up nose. "Please don't call it that. Makes me feel disgusting." Bucky rolled so he was pressed to Steve's side and he kissed a line across his shoulder to his collarbone. "Thanks for doing that with me, Steve. Thanks for choosing me to do it with for the first time."

"Well that's the legal term for it," Steve said. "And what God calls it. So what? Sodom-me. Sodom-you. I'll sodom all day." He smiled dumbly at his joke and kept smiling because Bucky was so adorable.

"Just," Bucky huffed out, "Just say anal or so help me, Steve. He tried to tickle Steve's sides and was met with absolutely no response. "You're a fucking rock," he said with a disappointed edge.

"Sodom-anal," Steve bargained. He smirked when Bucky failed at tickled him. "Come on, a cop can't be ticklish. What'll I do if a perp tries to tickle his way out of trouble?" He asked.

"I couldn't be a cop, then," Bucky said and added quickly, "And don't you fucking dare tickle me because I will leave this bed immediately." As much as he wanted to stay here with Steve forever, he knew he had to get going back home eventually. The girls may or may not still have a kitten with them and he also needed to get them food.

"Nah, you're too nice to be a cop," Steve said. "And your hair is too long to be a cop." He pet a hand over Bucky's chest and looked up at him with a lovesick expression. "You make a better music nerd anyway."

---

"You love that I'm a music nerd," Bucky defended and ran his hand through his too long hair. "But you are right about my hair." He looked at his watch. "You want to go to my place soon? The girls have been alone too long."

---

Steve pouted at the thought of having to move but he didn't want Bucky to have to worry about the girls. "I suppose. They could've invited a whole pride of kittens by now."

---

"That's is exactly what I am fearing," Bucky said and moved to get up. "We'll be doing this again, Steve," he added, giving a quick kiss to Steve's forehead.

---

Steve grinned brightly when Bucky promised more. "I count on it." When Steve got up to get dressed, he practically strutted without realizing it. Apparently, the 'just had sex' walk was a real thing.

---

"You okay there, Officer? Looks like you're a bit big for your britches at the moment." Bucky chuckled as he finished pulling his clothes on. He was just a little sore but in all the best ways.

---

Steve gave Bucky a confused look. He looked down at himself, trying to figure out what Bucky meant because Steve hadn't taken notice at all to the way he walked. "What, do I have a bulge showing?" Steve adjusted himself in his pants.

---

Bucky laughed, "No, never mind, Babe. You're so cute." Bucky grabbed Steve's hand and pulled him in for a kiss. "Are you going to be able to be cool around the girls? Not going to be painfully awkward like last time?"

---

"No promises," Steve said. "I can't become sneaky overnight. You think Becca won't like me cause I had sex with you?" He asked, getting a nervous look on his face. Steve made sure he had everything in order before heading towards the door.

---

Bucky followed him saying, "Becca will be fine. Just don't announce it and everything will be okay. She probably assumed we've been having sex this whole time so..." Bucky thought about his sisters.
He really wanted them both to like Steve. He didn’t plan on Steve leaving anytime soon so they were going to have to see him a lot for the foreseeable future. "Don’t worry about what Becca thinks too much."

---

Steve looked scandalized when Bucky said Becca probably assumed that they’ve been having sex this whole time. "But I wouldn’t ever do that without loving someone first," he said. Steve stepped out of the door and lowered his voice. "I can't help but worry. They're an important part of your life. I want them to be an important part of mine, too."

---

"Well, maybe you wouldn't, but that's not what Becca has seen from me and since she doesn't know you that well..." Bucky grunted, "It's fine, honest. They are important but what they think can't be too big of a deal otherwise we would never be happy and always be fretting about what they would say." Bucky knew from experience what it was like to constantly need reassurance from his family that they still loved him. He was responsible for his sisters and their wellbeing and he was no longer just the older brother - he had to be the authority. Being the authority was hard and made them dislike him a lot sometimes. Steve was right... he was practically a dad.

---

"Are you sure?" Steve asked. "I don't want them to resent you cause they don't like me and you're with me." He paused and said, "And for the record, if they ever do give you some sort of ultimatum and say they don't want you dating me anymore, you got to choose them over me."

---

"Steve..." Bucky stopped and bit his lip, turning to Steve he said, "They aren't going to resent me or you or be angry or anything. They want me to be happy. And Becca just needs proof that you are a good influence on me. Lilly already likes you." He rubbed his hand down Steve’s arm in a comforting gesture quickly. "And they would never give me an ultimatum. We are family. If they haven’t disowned me at my worst they won’t do it now." He smiled, "Besides, they have nowhere else to go - no one else to take care of them. They need me as much as I need them."

---

Steve just had a habit of preparing for the worst and he did that before he was on the force. His mom always accused him of being dramatic. "Alright... alright, sorry," Steve apologized. "And how can Becca not see I'm a good influence on you? You showered today, right? There. Good influence."

---

"Steve, I shower every day," Bucky said with a cheeky grin. They started walking again. "She just had to deal with too many..." Bucky hated talking about how he was before. But it was a big part of his story, and it was important to explain things to Steve. "...too many bad guys, you could say. Too many guys who used me and I let them. She just couldn't handle that again."

---

Steve still wasn't happy with the mistakes Bucky made but he was past the point of scolding him.
Bucky was already sorry. "You were in a tough place. You don't have to worry about that with me," he said. "There isn't going to be a day that passes that I don't show you how much I love you." Steve kept his voice quiet so no one would overhear.

"Okay, I believe you," Bucky said. He yawned, a little tired after such an eventful day. "I think I have some pancake mix I could make the girls for dinner," he mused to himself. "They better have gotten that cat out of there, Steve." They rounded the street corner and were just a few blocks from Bucky's place.

"Pancakes for dinner?" Steve asked incredulously. "That's breakfast, not dinner." He thought for a moment then laughed. "Also, if you think about it, it's literally a Schrödinger's cat since we don't know if they still have it or not."

"Schrödinger's cat implies that there may or may not be a dead cat in my apartment and I'd rather that not be the case," Bucky said. They tromped up the stairs to get to Bucky's, "And, Steve, we like breakfast for dinner at the Barnes'. You're just a food snob, I think."

Steve pouted when Bucky put his foot down on the whole 'breakfast for dinner' thing. He considered before saying, "Fine, but I better see at least three of the food groups involved. That means fruits or meats or eggs."

"We have apples." Bucky shrugged and unlocked the door. It was the moment of truth as to whether there was a cat around. Part of Bucky really wished they could have an animal for the girls. The rest of him was logical about it and knew that they couldn't afford it and he would be the one feeding and cleaning up after it anyway.

Becca had thankfully kicked the cat out of the apartment but she still didn't look too happy about it. She and Lilly were sitting on the couch watching TV. "Can we find a way to get Dale evicted?" Lilly asked casually as Bucky walked through the door.

"'Hello, Bucky,'" Bucky said in a mock Lilly voice, "'How was your day? Anything crazy happen like with the police, for instance? Did you go to a cool music exhibit?'" He folded his arms and answered his fake Lilly, "Yes, it was overwhelming - I almost had an adrenaline high. And, yes, it was a great exhibit and I learned a lot."

"You're with a cop. Something happens with the police for you every day," Becca commented smartly.

Lilly, on the other hand, exploded with jealousy when Bucky spoke about the music exhibit. "You got to go to a music exhibit? Did they have The Clash there?" She asked excitedly.

---

Bucky gave Steve a look when Becca sassed him. It was expected at this point. "Yeah, there was some pretty rad collages of pictures of The Clash and some early demo recordings that you can't buy anywhere." He leaned over the back of the couch to give both sisters hugs. "And to answer your question, no, we can't get Mr. Peterson evicted."

---

Steve grinned, glad that he got to avoid daily sass from Becca for now. "Can you take us to the museum?" Lilly asked. "Becca and I both got good grades all week. And you made us give up our cat, so we deserve something so we're not sad."

---

"You both got good grades?" Bucky emphasized 'both' and looked at Lilly intently. "You're going to have to show me them, Lil. I know you weren't passing math or science about two weeks ago. And it wasn't your cat to give up anyway. It's a stray or some old person's cat." Bucky put a hand to his temple already getting a small headache. "How about we discuss the museum some other time." He turned to Steve. "I'm sorry I just need to go lie down for a bit. Will you hang around here for just a few minutes? You can eat pancakes with us."

---

By Lilly's terms, getting a C or B minus was a good grade because it was passing. By Becca's terms, an A was the only acceptable grade to be called golden. "Fine," Lilly sighed dramatically.

Steve nodded his head at the request, pretending like it was the first time he heard it. "Sure," he agreed. "Lead the way."

---

Bucky went towards his room, Steve following him worriedly. Once there, Bucky flopped on his bed and curled up in a little ball. "Just need a couple minutes. I'm sorry, Steve. Can you just hang out with the girls for about five to ten minutes and then I'll be back out?" Bucky pulled a blanket over himself and made a low groaning sound. "Then, pancakes."

---

Steve frowned in concern but didn't fuss too much over Bucky. He was a grown man; he could deal with it and would come to Steve if he needed help. Steve headed back out and took a seat next to the girls. "So," he said awkwardly. "Did you guys name the cat?"

---

"Lilly Jr.," Becca said. "Even though it's a guy and it's not a fair name." She crinkled her nose and cocked her head to the side, "Bucky in his room?" She asked before getting up to go check. Lilly watched her go with a frown and tried to get her to leave him alone.
Steve gently patted Lilly's shoulder to let her know to let Becca do her thing. Steve wasn't going to get in the way of Becca and Bucky or else she may think he'd done something wrong.

"What did the cat look like?" He asked Lilly.

---

Lilly and Steve kept talking as Becca quietly opened Bucky's door. "Bucky?" She asked tentatively. "You okay?"

"Mhmm," Bucky answered and rolled over to face her. "Head just hurts. What's up?"

"Why's Steve here again? Thought he'd not be coming around by now." Becca crossed her arms and sat on the bed. "You're really into this one, aren't you?"

Bucky sat up, "Yeah, I am." He gave her a gentle hug then got out of bed. He figured he shouldn’t wait ten minutes to make his sisters’ dinner. Lilly would be starving pretty soon. "Let’s go have pancakes."

---

Steve happily chattered with Lilly about the cat and perked up when he saw Bucky and Becca coming out of the bedroom. He was definitely head over heals for the man and looked relieved that he didn't look under the weather too much or upset. "How’s it going, Buck?"

---

"Still a little headache but I should be fine," Bucky said and pulled a sweater of his off the back of the couch and put it on. "You ready for pancakes, everyone?" He asked and managed a small grin. "We will teach Steve that breakfast for dinner is delicious."

---

Steve naturally went to look for some medicine for Bucky and found some ibuprofen in the cabinet. He got two pills out and a glass of water for Bucky and left it on the counter for him. "I don't doubt that it's delicious. I doubt that it's nutritional."

---

Bucky noticed the medicine and quickly took it giving Steve a grateful look. "I think we value delicious over nutritious in this household." Lilly nodded in agreement as she started setting the table. "Besides," Bucky said in a low voice so Steve was the only one who could hear. "Pancakes might win over Becca. Who knows?"

---

"You can have delicious and nutritious," Steve defended lightly. But as soon as Bucky whispered that it could win Becca over, Steve suddenly seemed more interested. "So what can I do to help cook?" He asked.
"Well, Lil can wash some fruit and chop them up if you want to help me mix the pancake stuff," Bucky offered and reached for Steve's hand. "See? We are doing fruit just for you." He said and squeezed his hand and started pulling supplies out of the cupboards.

"Good. Fruit is good for you guys. Helps young girls become tough, young women." Steve held Bucky's hand and followed him happily around the kitchen. "And it fills you up so you don't overeat on junk food."

"Are you trying to turn me into a Rogers? Because Barnes' like food that is bad for us." Bucky pulled Steve in for a quick kiss to the cheek before starting to pour the mix into a bowl and add the eggs. "Want to mix those together and I'll get milk?"

Steve mixed the ingredients together and hummed in thought, “Maybe I am, Bucky Rogers. Kind of flows well don’t you think?”

"Bucky Rogers does not flow well," Bucky said and put some milk into the bowl. "Steve Barnes... now that flows," he joked as he turned the stove on and put a skillet on top. "You want to start cooking those?"

"James Buchanan Rogers sounds good, though," Steve said pleasantly. "Besides, I kissed you first so I get dibs on what last name we have." Steve coated the skillet with some butter and started making tiny pancakes.

"That's definitely not how it works." Bucky nudged Steve and gave a pout. Also, he was pretty damn sure that he kissed Steve first, but he didn’t want to argue the point. He really, really liked this one. He might even love this one but he still needed time. He should probably discuss this whole thing with the girls too on his own before anything did get more serious. "And, if we are going by that logic," Bucky leaned in close and whispered, "I gave you head first and I think that tops kissing."

Steve blushed brightly but quickly turned to whisper back, "I stuck it in you. That tops all." He kissed the tip of Bucky's nose and smirked proudly. He made a plate full of a dozen or so pancakes before making more.
Bucky let him think he had won because Steve just looked so cute with that edge of pride. Bucky didn't tell him that if it weren't for him then Steve would still be a virgin and that is the real trump card. "Alright, I think that's all we need for now," Bucky said to Steve and then called the girls over to eat. They sat down together and Steve somehow got placed between Lilly and Becca, across from Bucky.

---

Steve looked at each of them. He was so happy to be here right now. He turned to Bucky and asked, "Do you guys pray or anything before you eat?"

---

Lilly already had a fork full of pancakes halfway in her mouth when Steve asked about praying. Bucky cleared his throat and said gently, "You can feel free to pray, Steve. We don't mind." He wasn't going to pray with him but he wasn't going to tell him no. Bucky and his sisters weren't the church-going type and they didn't grow up in an Irish Catholic home like Steve did.

---

Steve hadn't ever sat at a table that didn't have some sort of ritual before eating and he felt a little silly being the only one praying. "It's okay," he said. Steve would just pray a little longer before bed. "Did the pancakes come out okay?"

---

Bucky noticed a tick of awkward disappointment in Steve's tone but he decided he would address it later if he needed to. "Yeah, I think they are great," Bucky said and looked to Lilly who had already scarfed down half of her plate, "Lilly doesn't seem to mind them. Becs? What do you think?"

---

"It's okay," Becca said in a noncommittal tone. She shrugged her shoulder up and went back to eating.

Steve picked at a few pieces of fruit. "So what's everyone's day like tomorrow?"

---

Bucky gave Steve an apologetic look about Becca. "It's Sunday tomorrow. Lilly has practice. I've got work in the morning until three. Becca... I don't know what Becca is doing."

"Nothing," Becca piped up, "I was going to go to the Natural History Museum with my friends but they can't."

---

Becca was moody. Teenagers tended to be moody, but Steve wasn't really used to having little siblings like Bucky was. Steve shrugged it off. "Do you want me to go with you?" Steve offered.
"Yes, brilliant!" Bucky said and shoved Becca gently. That would give the two of them some time to get to know each other. "You can take your notebook and write down what you wanted to know and Steve will be there so you won't be alone." He gave Steve a hopeful smile and mouthed 'thank you'.

---

Becca didn't look as thrilled as Bucky was, but she supposed a day out with Steve wouldn't kill her. And she really wanted to go to the museum. "Alright," she said. "But I don't want to wake up too early."

---

"I'm sure Steve doesn't mind when you wake up," Bucky said and rubbed his foot against Steve's leg under the table. This felt good being here with his sisters and Steve together and not hiding who they were to each other.

---

Steve smiled and gently nudged his foot back against Bucky's. "Yeah, I don't mind. You just call my apartment when you wake up and I'll head over," Steve said. "And if you ask nice enough, maybe I'll bring something from the diner."

---

"I can just eat cereal," Becca offered.

Bucky laughed at that thinking that Steve was probably worried no one in his family ate anything else. "Becs, it's okay, Steve doesn't like us eating cereal all the time. He's happy to bring you some food. I'll just pay him back later for it," Bucky said and shoved more pancakes into his mouth. He looked over at Lilly who had managed to get some syrup in her hair.

---

Steve got up and wet a napkin so he could pass it to Lilly to clean off her hair. "Yeah, you didn't get the memo, Becca, but I'm cooking for you all from now on."

---

"But we like cereal," Lilly said as she took the wet towel.

Bucky gathered up his plate and cup and utensils and took them over to the sink. He checked the time and noticed it was probably getting time for the girls to have their showers and wind down before bed. He hoped Steve would stay with him tonight but he wasn't going to pressure him if he couldn't. It would be more convenient for him to take Becca to the museum tomorrow if he was here, though.

---

"And I like candy but that don't mean I should eat it all the time," Steve said wisely. He watched Bucky clean up and admired his ass. When Bucky finished and sent the girls to wash up, Steve came up behind him and gave him a hug. "Has your headache gone away, Beautiful?"

---

Leaning back into the hug, Bucky said, "Yeah, it's all gone. How are you? Feeling a bit more confident with the girls?" He turned to face Steve and held him close with his hands cupped around his ass. "Also, thanks for helping me make food."

---

"A little bit more confident, yes. Do you think Becca is more convinced that I want to stay?" Steve smiled as he looked into Bucky's eyes and then he pecked his lips. "And don't worry, I'll make you food any time. 'Food is love', that's what my ma always said," Steve explained.

---

"Becca probably more convinced, yes. Doesn't mean she's pleased about it yet. She wants me to be happy but she always wants to pick who I'm happy with. She can't have it her way all the time." Bucky rubbed his palms down Steve's chest and abs. Being a cop meant a lot of working out for Steve and Bucky appreciated the results.

---

"Well, I would prefer her approval," Steve said. "But I'm not going to let her walk all over me to get it." He kissed his cheek and smiled. "You're really having fun with my muscles there, hippie," he teased fondly.

---

Bucky snorted an indignant laugh. "It's because I like them so much. And you aren't ticklish so I can do this and it won't bug you."

---

"Well I guess I got to keep working them out just so they stick around for you," Steve said and eased his hands lower down Bucky's body.

---

The girls were both in their rooms with the lights out and everything was quite. Bucky kissed down Steve's neck then asked, "I'd really like you to stay tonight if you would?"

---

Steve made a pleased noise at the kisses and hugged him closer. "If it would make you happy, I'll spend as many nights with you as you want."

---

Bucky blinked slowly a couple times and bit his lip. "I want them all with you. Every night with you." He clasped onto Steve's hands and led him to his bedroom. Bucky sat on the bed and hugged Steve around the hips. He nosed at Steve's crotch and started to pull at his pants.

---
Steve felt his heart skip to hear that. Any sign of commitment from Bucky made his feelings soar over the moon. "Fuck," he swore when Bucky was already pulling his pants off. "How could I say no?" He chuckled breathlessly, petting Bucky's hair. "When I got you to fall asleep with."

---

"I like it when you swear, Officer," Bucky said and tugged at Steve's boxer briefs. "Shows me I've gotten under your skin. Makes you more like me. I love that." He now had a hand around Steve's cock and was slowly pumping it. He wanted Steve in his mouth tonight and maybe tomorrow he could see if Steve would let him top.

---

Steve was quick to get hard. Knowing how much Bucky wanted him did things to him. Wonderful things. His hand rested possessively on the back of Bucky's neck and he looked down at him with nothing but love and desire. "You know me," he hummed. "Which means you can get under my skin whenever you damn well please."

---

Bucky started licking up Steve's shaft and took the head in and swirled his tongue around. He was licking and sucking for about two minutes before there was a loud thump and a shrill "Bucky!" coming from Lilly's room. Bucky popped off Steve quickly and wiped his mouth. He got up off the bed and went for the door hurriedly.

"I'll be right back," Bucky said and zoomed out the door, shutting it behind him hastily.

---

Steve had been really getting into it, hands in Bucky's long hair, and soft moans spilling from his lips so he jumped out of his skin when Lilly yelled for her brother. "Buck?" He asked worriedly. Steve wanted desperately to go help but he couldn't just go out there with his dick hard in his pants.

---

It was several minutes before Bucky was quietly sneaking back into his room. He came over to where Steve was waiting on the bed and sat down next to him. "Lilly had a bad nightmare." He scooted closer to Steve and rested his head on his shoulder. "She gets them pretty bad every so often. More so since our parents have been gone."

---

Steve was almost able to be presentable to go out there to see what happened. He pulled his pants back up and sat on the bed debating what to do. Thankfully, Bucky came in before he had to make a decision. "Oh," he said as he wrapped an arm around Bucky's shoulder. "Poor kid," Steve sighed. "Does she have a stuffed animal or safety blanket?"

---

"Oh, she's got plenty of animals and a nightlight. Just doesn't seem to help her that much." Bucky said, "When she was younger she had to share a room with Becca because he was so scared. They only really slept in separate rooms after we moved in here." Bucky looked on at Steve's face and then down at his pants. "Steve, I'm sorry. I shouldn't have even instigated it tonight. When we are here, there is always a potential of the girls needing me and I should have just waited for the early morning or something."

---

Steve still looked concerned and had a thoughtful expression, like he was trying to figure out how to help with the nightmares. Maybe he could ask his mom tomorrow if she had any ideas. Steve kissed Bucky's temple and said, "It's okay, Sweetheart, I'm not upset." He rubbed a hand up and down Bucky's back. "Why don't we just cuddle and talk until we fall asleep?"

---

"Sure, that's fine with me," Bucky said and curled up against the pillows. "Come here," He gestured for Steve to curl up against his side and he yawned as Steve adjusted himself. "I hope she sleeps the rest of the night because I'm way too tired to get up again to help if she has another nightmare."

---

Steve fit against Bucky's side like he was meant to be there. "She may need her brother, but I can try and calm her down if you'd like me to." He stroked his fingers through Bucky's hair and kissed his face. "Like I said, I want to help you guys as much as I can."

---

Bucky hummed at the soft feeling of the kisses and smiled. "You might be able to, yeah. Though, I should go with you the first time. She can get a little disoriented and I don't know if she would recognize you at first. Might make her scared." Bucky yawned again and closed his eyes. "If you want some pajamas you can borrow a pair mine," he said as he stripped down to his underwear and yanked the covers on top of himself.

---

"We can do that," Steve agreed. So that way in the future they could take turns helping Lilly out. "It's alright. I've slept enough times in my day clothes to still be comfy." He kissed Bucky a few times and asked, "Do you think Lilly would like sharing a room again?"

---

"Lilly I'm sure would be fine with it. Becca, on the other hand, would object. She has gotten used to her own room these past few years. And trying to change it up on her would probably invoke the subtle quiet wrath that is Rebecca Barnes," he said as put his hair up in a ponytail.

---

Steve snorted at the thought of an angry Becca. "Something tells me that it's something I won't want to invoke. What's the worst thing she's done when she was pissed?" Steve asked.

---

"Uh, well, I guess..." Bucky thought for a second. "One time she was so mad and neither of us were paying attention to her and arguing with each other instead. She's just so quiet it's easy not to realize when she's trying to talk over you. So she smashed a plate against the wall..." Bucky chuckled, "No one would have ever expected it. It shut me and Lilly up immediately."

---

"Oh my god," Steve said, equally impressed and horrified. "What a little villain," he laughed. He stroked his hand over Bucky's arm and looked up at him. "Funny question, but when was the last time you went for a checkup? Or brought the girls to one?" He asked.

---

"You mean like a physical? Like at the doctors?" Bucky asked. Steve nodded. "Uh, well, I don't know. The girls probably had one four years ago and I had one in high school once." Bucky stroked Steve's hair and ran his fingers down the skin of his neck. "Why? You going to make me go just like you're making me give up cereal and be a Rogers instead of a Barnes?" Bucky joked at Steve.

---

Steve nodded his head. "Pretty much," he said. "The doctors can catch something before there's a problem. Or let you know an easy fix to something you thought could never go away." He nuzzled Bucky affectionately. "It would give me a lot of peace of mind. Wouldn't it be easier to find out with a checkup that Lilly needs her tonsils removed rather than having to rush her to the emergency room? And I want to make sure you live as long as possible so I can spend more years forcing you to eat cooked meals and hiding your cereal."

---

"Lilly needs her tonsils removed?" Bucky asked confused. "How can you tell?" He didn't think that was something you could really see. He thought it was more an inconvenience that some kids had pain enough to have them cut out.

---

"What? No, I was just using that as an example. I don't know anything about tonsils," Steve said with a small endearing smile.

---

"Steve, I don't know if we could go to the doctors. We don't have any health passes so we wouldn't be able to just afford a trip. And I don't want you paying for that shit too."

---

"You guys are orphans. Even if you are not covered by social programs since you are an adult, I know they will be. And I'd happily cover stuff for your visits because I want to know that you're okay." Steve rubbed his hand on Bucky’s chest.

---

Bucky turned his face away from Steve. He hated the word 'orphan'. Too many well-meaning adults called his sisters that right after he acquired full guardianship - like they had no one left - like their parents wouldn't always be with them in some respect. "I don't know, Steve. We can find out if they can see the doctor but, if I can't, I don't want to have to been indebted to you for something like that."

---

Steve felt bad when Bucky turned his face away, having a feeling that the word 'orphan' wasn't something that he liked to hear, even when someone meant well. "Bucky," he said softly. He laced their fingers together. "I'm not offering all this to have you be indebted to me. I'm offering because I'm so in love with you and I want us to have a happy, comfortable life together. We're a team now. Sometimes, I'll be doing all the stuff. Some things will be all you. And some we get to contribute together."

---

Bucky sniffled and squeezed Steve's hand. "Would they even let you pay for me? We aren't family, we aren't married, and I don't think they'd let you pay for someone who is a stranger to you in their eyes. The government doesn't like shit like that. Messes with the system they have going on."

---

"They don't have to know I'm paying for you," Steve said. "All I have to do is give you cash. You put it in your bank account or pay them with it. Say it was money you saved up from work. Or that you sold a few records." Steve kissed Bucky's temple. "If they don't know anything about me, I doubt you'll get in trouble."

---

"You're really going to make me go to the doctor, aren't you?" Bucky asked nervously. "What if I need you there?" He blinked a couple times and put his forehead to Steve's. He didn't want to admit that people like doctors terrified him. The idea of somebody like that being in control of him and probing around his body and testing him made him squirm.

---

"I won't force you, Buck. But it's the smart thing to do, Baby. What if you've developed something from stress or working so hard? Hell, what if one of those guys gave you something you didn't know about?" He cupped the sides of Bucky's face and kissed him. "I'm only a phone call away. If you get nervous, find the nearest pay phone and I'll answer. Or if you want me there, we can tell them we know each other from church."

---

Bucky snorted. "Church! I'd rather say you're my cousin. No respectable doctor or nurse is going to believe I could even step foot in a church without bursting into flames." Steve did have a point about those guys, though. They might have given him some sort of VD that he wasn't aware of. If that were the case, he would want to know so he could get it taken care of and make sure Steve was fine too.

---

"Fine, cousin," Steve snorted. "But it'll make me feel weird the next time you blow me after that. Incest isn't a sort of thing that my ma told me I was allowed to do," he teased. Steve snuck in a kiss. "It really means a lot to me that you're at least considering going for a check-up."
"I'm not really your cousin, you dope," Bucky said with a flash of a smile. "But, yeah I'm considering it. We will get the girls there first, okay? I'll tell them it was my idea so if they get mad it'll be on me not you." Bucky laughed to himself and added, "Oh and Steve... if I'm practically a dad, you're clearly practically the mom. You've been hounding us about food and stress and doctors for days."

Steve nuzzled Bucky gently and smirked. "I'll be the mom, I don't care. My Mom is amazing and showed me all the best ways I can take care of people." Steve didn't get wound up like Bucky did at the parental role.

Bucky huffed to himself and closed his eyes. "Think it's time for sleeping, Steve." He tried opening his eyes again but it didn't work. Bucky was dog tired and his brain was entirely gone from him at this point. He mumbled low and quietly, "Night, Babe... love you," and fell asleep.

Steve's face lit up like a damned Christmas tree when Bucky told him he loved him. He nuzzled his neck affectionately and stayed up for another half hour or so just admiring Bucky until he fell asleep. When he woke up, Steve's arms were still wrapped tightly around him.
Bucky stirred softly and woke up with a headache. "Fuck me..." He breathed with a frustrated, pained tone. He rolled away from Steve and put a pillow over his head. He had to go in for work in about an hour. He was going to leave Steve and his sisters to go grumpily shuffle records and boxes around and wait for people to come in.

---

"Hey, Baby," Steve said gently. He reached out and massaged his shoulder gently to try and help ease his pain. "Do you want me to give you some pain medication?"

---

The only answer Bucky gave was a low groan and a deep sigh. He would need about half the bottle to help this morning. He tried sitting up and when Steve asked again he nodded and started slowly stripping his clothes so he could shower. Bucky couldn't remember the night. He was so tired. All he knew was he tried being sexual with Steve but Lilly had a nightmare that interrupted them.

---

Steve got up and found some pills and got Bucky another glass of water. He interrupted Bucky in the shower to give it to him. "Have you gotten headaches like this before, Baby?" He asked. "Is there anything I can do?"

---

Bucky was feeling a little better with the rush of water over him. "Yeah, but I usually don't get them this bad." He took the pills and downed the entire glass of water before handing it back off to Steve. "I don't really know what's going on... guess I'm more like my mom than I thought I was." Bucky tried a short laugh. "Can you just go make sure Lilly is awake and getting ready for practice?"

---

Steve took the glass and had such a worried look on his face. He had questions, but Bucky asked him to go take care of Lilly. "Alright, Baby," he agreed. "I'll be back soon." Steve went over to Lilly's room and knocked on the door. "Hey, Kiddo, can I come in?"

---

Bucky stayed under the water for longer than he should have. He was idly turning the temperature from scorching hot to freezing cold. It felt really nice and seemed to be helping send his headache away. He slowly turned the water off and got out of the shower. He stood naked and wet in the bathroom and just let himself feel the air around him. Bucky heard soft voices coming from Lilly's room and he could pick up the occasional phrase like, "You have to go to practice" and "Bucky won't mind if I skip today" and "Maybe you should double check."

---

"Lilly?" Steve called again softly, a little concerned from the voices on the other side. "Lilly, I'm coming in." He gave her a few moments before he actually opened the door to see what was going on. "Lil?"

---

Lilly was sitting on her bed by herself with her window wide open and her rucksack on the ground by the foot of the bed. She gave Steve a sad look and hastily got up to toss her bag into her closet.

---

Steve caught the look and felt his stomach drop. "Hey, Lil," he said gently. Steve sat down on the bed as well to be less imposing but didn't sit too close to her. "What's the matter, Kiddo? Why's the window open?"

---

"Nobody," Lilly said quickly then made a face scolding herself quietly, "I mean, nothing's the matter. Just don't want to go to practice today. Not feeling well." She paused. "Where's Bucky?"

Bucky was just dressed and gathering what he would need to take with him to work. It wasn't much - just his wallet and keys and a jacket. He figured Steve would have been back by now and he got a little worried that Lilly hadn't been cooperating.

---

"Lil, you can't lie to a cop," Steve said patiently. He got up and went to the window to see what was going on. He was always amazed at how thick people thought he could be. He looked out the window and caught some young boy trying to sneak off down the fire escape but Steve grabbed him by the collar of his shirt and hauled him back in. He held the poor kid up in the air as he gave Lilly a deadpan look to start explaining.

---

Just then, Bucky turned the corner from his room to Lilly's and saw the scene before him. Steve was holding a kid by the back of his shirt and Lilly was sitting on her bed dressed for the day and looking guilty. "The fuck?" Bucky said under his breath, "Who the hell is the kid?" He noticed Lilly's bag sticking half way out her closet. "Where the fuck do you think you're going, Lilly?"

---

"Bucky," Steve said sternly, certainly not approving of Bucky swearing at his sister. He didn't like swearing around kids but hadn't said anything just because this wasn't his house. But when they got swore at, he had to say something. "Let her explain fully and no interrupting," he said.

---

Bucky shot Steve a warning glance indicating that this was still his house and his family and would deal with his sisters however he thought appropriate for the situation. "She's got about a minute to explain herself," Bucky said crossed his arms. "Who's the kid, Lilly?"

---

"He's on my lacrosse team," Lilly started. "Lives on Long Island," she added with a jealous hint to her tone because of the big houses and yards that she didn't get to see in Brooklyn.
Steve may have toed the line but he didn't regret it. He set the boy down but gave him a look that promised he would get caught if he tried to run off again. "You're going to need a bit better explanation to get yourself out of trouble," Steve prompted.

"He was going to let me stay at his place for a few days," she said and started picking at her sleeves. Bucky blinked a few times. Then asked with a sad and angry lump in his throat, "You were going to run away again?" He sighed and went to his sister slowly. "I thought we had gotten past this." He leaned down to give her a long gentle hug that showed he still loved her and understood but he was just a little mad. Bucky took a step back and looked at his watch. "Goddammit, I need to get to work."

Steve wanted to cry but he held it in. It hurt him to know what running away would do to Bucky. "It's okay, Buck. Go to work and I'll take care of the kids," he said. He very nearly went over to kiss him but remembered that the boy was there. "You two," he said to Lilly and the boy from Long Island. "Are going to practice and then going to the Natural History Museum with Becca today. I'm not going to risk taking my eye off you until this whole running away business is taken care of."

Bucky cleared his throat and rubbed his palms into his eyes. "Lilly, be good for Steve. If you must act out, save it for me later, okay?" He sighed and walked towards the door. "Steve, you're okay with... taking care of this whole thing?" He asked and Steve nodded. "Thank you." Bucky smiled weakly and left Lilly's room to go to work.

Steve had no idea how Bucky managed to do this all on his own for over four years - the poor man. He gave him a wave goodbye and then told Lilly to get her lacrosse gear ready. He looked down at the boy and asked, "What's your name, Son?"

"Thomas," the boy answered.

Lilly packed up her lacrosse stuff grumpily and plopped it on the foot of her bed when she was ready. "Can't believe Bucky left you in charge. He never trusted the other ones like this, why should he trust you?" She added with an indignant glare to Steve. She didn't mean it, of course, she was just so frustrated.

Thomas asked meekly to Steve, "Are you another brother?"

"Because I'm a cop and I've dealt with scarier things than angry, little sisters." Steve was stern but he still wasn’t going to push buttons because he was afraid of Lilly outing him in frustration. "Cousin," Steve corrected Thomas. "I came over to take Becca to the museum today cause her friends couldn’t go." It was a good enough excuse. Speaking of, he had to tell Becca the change of plans.

---

Becca was just waking up as Bucky was leaving and she stood in the doorway of her room to stop him before he slipped out. "What's going on?" She asked.

"Lilly was going to run away again," Bucky said as he bent down to tie his shoes.

"And you're still going to work?" Becca asked. "Shouldn't you stay here?"

"Can't just cancel the day whenever Lilly feels like fucking with things." Bucky strode towards the door and bid Becca goodbye. "I'll see you later. Have a good time at the museum with Steve."

---

Steve walked towards the hallway but still stayed where he could keep an eye on Lilly. "Becca, I'm really sorry but the museum is going to have to be pushed back until after Lilly's practice and we are bringing Lilly and her friend with us," he said apologetically. "You can pick what we have for dinner to make up for your wait, alright?"

---

Becca gave a confused look to the two kids hiding in Lilly's room. She repeated Bucky's sentiment with a, "Who the hell is that?" and pointed at the boy.

"Thomas." The boy waved.

"Steve, Bucky just left," Becca said. "I think he should've called in and told Clint he couldn't work because of an emergency. He should be here."

---

"Becs, Bucky would've stayed if he could. But if he misses a whole day's worth of work, then he has even less money to buy you food or keep the roof over your head," Steve said patiently. "If he called out for every emergency he had, Lilly would have no home to run away from." He reached out to nudge her gently. "Besides, I've got it under control. This little event is nothing compared to my high-speed chase last summer."

---

Bucky arrived at work a little late and one of his stoner co-workers quipped, "Barnes is late!" when he quickly slipped through the door. Bucky flipped him off and went in the back to shuck off his jacket and throw on his nametag. One of the people he worked with had tried to play a practical joke and scratch off part of the 'B' so it looked like an 'F'. So 'Fucky' was always ready to work.

Bucky ran into Clint on his way to the floor and signed that he was sorry he was late and there was an emergency. He didn’t need to sign because Clint was an expert lip reader but he still liked to do it to keep in practice. Clint nodded and said it was fine - he was never angry with Bucky. Bucky spent the entire day worrying about his sisters and Steve. During his break, he dialed his house to see if they were there.

---

When Bucky called, Steve had just gotten back from a long day out. He tried to entertain Becca while Lilly had her practice but she wasn't really warm to his conversation. She was a bit happier once she was at the museum but then Steve had to deal with Lilly being moody at him for being dragged around. Thomas was the only one who didn't shit on Steve at some point during the day.

Becca answered the phone before Steve could even put their bags full of takeout dinner on the table. "Hello?"

---

Bucky let out a sigh of relief. "Becca, hey! Is everyone home? Can I talk to Steve please?" He moved a box around with his foot absentmindedly and drew circles on a piece of paper.

"Steve is occupied making sure Lilly and Thomas don't try running off," Becca said back. Bucky heard Steve's voice through the phone but couldn't make out what he had said. It was just a few seconds until Steve was on the line with him.

---

Steve unpacked the food and got the silverware on the table. When he was given the phone, he took it and held it up to his ear. He was already emotionally exhausted but he didn't want to give Bucky any reason to worry while he was at work. "Hey, Buck," he said sweetly. "How's work going for you?"

---

"Better, now that I'm on break," Bucky said. "I'll be home in about two hours." Clint walked into the break room then and sat down at the small table with a cup of coffee. "Did everything go okay today?" He hoped Lilly wasn't too much trouble and he hoped Becca didn't try to quietly and sweetly rip Steve limb from limb.

---

"Everything is going alright so far," Steve said. "Thomas is getting picked up by his parents in an hour. We're just about to eat and I picked up some dinner for you, too." Steve's voice dropped to a lower volume and he said, "I miss you. I'm looking forward to seeing you come home."

---

"Fuck, I sort of forgot about Thomas," Bucky said offhandedly and stretched his legs out on the chair in front of him. "And I miss you too," he said before noticing Clint staring at him. "Like I said, I'll be home in about two hours. Maybe sooner if Clint will let me go," Bucky said and shot a quick smile at his boss and best friend who shook his head once with an apologetic frown. "I guess not."

---

"You don't have to leave early," Steve said. "The world won't end over here if you show up home at your regular time. How about you do your best to relax for the rest of your time there and we can catch up later tonight?” He offered.

---

Bucky nodded as he said, "Yeah, that's fine. Just wish I was home with you all right now. Sort of want to have a talking to with that Thomas kid." Bucky paused. "Wait... what did you tell him? Did you say you were a babysitter or something?" Bucky let out a laugh at the idea of a full-time nanny Steve - his big cop as a full-time nanny.

---

"Go easy on Thomas. I think he was just trying to help his friend out and he was even fibbing to his parents to try to protect her," Steve said. "He's been really well behaved, outside of the whole running away thing." He smiled and said, "Told him we were cousins. I think he thinks all of the others were brothers or something. You should check with Lilly about that."

---

"Oh, I'll be checking with Lilly about a lot of stuff when I get to her," Bucky said and stood up. It was almost time for him to go back to work. "She's got to explain herself to me still. She hasn't tried this shit for over a year. Last time, it was Becca who caught her as she tried going out the fire escape. The time before that it was her soccer coach who found her all the way in Manhattan in Central Park with a tent."

---

"I'm so sorry you have to deal with that stress," Steve said. It made him scared to think of any kid running off where there were rapists and murderers all around. "At least now you've got an officer around who has close ties with the missing persons team so if she runs off she won't be gone for long."

---

"I just think she gets down on herself too easily. She gets it in her head that we would be better off without her around so she just up and leaves." Bucky sighed and checked his watch. Time was up. "Anyway, I need to go. I'll see you soon."

---

After a while, Steve sent Thomas off on his way with his parents and set Lilly up at the kitchen table to do her homework. Becca was watching TV on the couch and Steve moved to sit next to her. He shifted his weight a bit nervously before glancing over. "Hey, Becca," he said softly. "Can I talk to you about Lilly?"

---

Becca gave a sideways glance to Steve then nodded before turning her attention back to the television. "What about Lilly?" Then she added, "Is Bucky almost home?" She wanted it to sound to Steve like she wasn't going to let him be her new brother or let him and Bucky become the parents of the house.
"Becca," Steve said with a frown. He could see her tone and body language. "I'm your brother's partner. I'm not trying to take over your life. I'm trying to help him out and I want to help you, too. I don't want you to feel forced to like me, but don't let Bucky see it, alright? He's got enough on his plate." He crossed his arms. "My question is: did Lilly want to run away because of me?"

---

Becca bit her lip and turned her body to face Steve. "Not really, I guess. Not exactly." Becca paused and looked to Lilly who was still trying her best at her math homework completely unaware of the two of them. "As much as I can figure from what I know about Lilly... she felt like an extra wheel - like a burden. She does that sometimes. She'll say something about leaving us alone so no one has to worry about her anymore. Maybe she felt like she was pushed out by you."

---

Steve's face fell a little. He was relieved that it was nothing he'd done personally but he felt awful that a little girl would feel like extra weight to her family. "Thank you for telling me," he said genuinely. "And what about you?" He asked. "You ever feel pushed out?"

---

Becca scoffed. "I'm the damn glue of this family," Becca swore. "Without me, Bucky would've probably had his guardianship removed and he would be lost and alone without us." She turned back to the TV. "Don't you worry yourself about me, Steve. Bucky may be the adult but I take care of him more than you know."

---

"Hey," Steve said sharply, giving her a scolding look. "If you have a problem, you talk about it. Bucky breaks his back to take care of you two. It's real easy to sit there and criticize when you're not the one who has to watch two kids and do the work that two parents usually split between them."

---

"Yeah?" She said with a bit of fire behind her eyes. "And who parents Bucky, huh? A new guy every couple days and new scars from the fights down at the bar?" She noticed Steve's confused face and laughed. "He hasn't told you about the nights he'd stagger home drunk and bleeding and I'd wake up and have to clean him up."

---

"No, he hasn't told me that. He's told me how you've had to see him at his worst and how he regrets every second of it," Steve said back at her. "He knows he was wrong for it. And it ain't fair you had to take care of your brother after losing your parents, but you have to play the cards you're dealt. So here's your new hand, Becca. I love your brother. He's part of my family now, which means you are too. I'm not your brother. I'm not your parent. But you can sure as hell bet I'm going to make sure all of you are taken care of to the best of my ability. If Bucky goes out and gets in a bar fight, it's my job to take care of him."

---
Becca's face crinkled up in confusion. "You love him?" She asked simply. She hadn't really considered that. She knew that Steve and Bucky kept saying that Steve was going to be sticking around for a while but she just figured one day he would be gone. Love was a different thing. She didn't think anyone besides her family had ever loved Bucky before.

---

"Of course I do," Steve said firmly. "It would be so wrong of me to put myself in your lives like this if I didn't love him." He frowned at the thought of Becca thinking that he was putting up with them for the sake of being able to screw around with Bucky. "If he got hit by a car tomorrow and needed someone to feed him and help him go to the bathroom cause all his bones were broken, I would do it. Because I love him that much."

---

Becca nodded slowly. "And he loves you?" She asked more cautiously - almost sympathetically. She had seen the way Bucky went through partners and she didn't know if Steve was the one Bucky had decided to keep around because it was convenient or because he actually felt the same way back.

---

"I'm pretty sure he does," Steve said. "He said it last night, right before he fell asleep. He was really tired so he maybe said it by accident. But I'm sure he'd say it again." Steve got all dreamy talking about the one little 'love you' he got from Bucky.

---

Becca pursed her lips and looked at the TV again. "Okay, fine," she said with little emotion, which was her own way giving the two of them her blessing. "I just want Bucky to be happy. And if you're part of that..." she trailed off and folded her arms unable to continue.

---

Steve couldn't believe his ears. Becca was actually giving them her approval. Steve wrapped his arms around her and gave her a bear hug. "You're a good sister to your brother."

---

Becca squirmed under the hug as there was a rustling of keys at the door. Bucky opened it with his head down staring at his shoes. He said, "I tied these motherfuckers when I left the store and I walk about seven blocks and they are untied again - stupid useless goddamn laces."

---

Steve let Becca go so her pride wouldn't be ruined by Bucky seeing her being hugged by his boyfriend. "Hey, Beautiful," Steve said happily. "You got to tie it in two knots. It doesn't look as pretty but it won't come apart every few blocks."

---

Bucky closed the door and took off his shoes and jacket. "Maybe they should make the ties better to begin with," Bucky grumped. He went over to the kitchen table where Lilly was working and he squished her against him in a big hug. "Please tell me you were good to Steve today?"

---

Lilly grunted softly when she was hugged. "I didn't run off on him," she answered back. Lilly still looked sorry for trying to run away again but she didn't seem to be too open to talking about it either.

---

"Okay, thank you for not running off on him," Bucky said diplomatically but didn't let up on his hug. "We are going to have to discuss this later but right now I'm hungry and tired and I really want to kiss that man over there." Bucky went for Becca first and gave her an equally big hug before turning to Steve and pecking him on the lips.

---

Steve patiently waited his turn and smiled happily once he got his kiss. "I got you your favorite," he said. "Becca picked the place we went to." Steve stood up and excitedly trotted into the kitchen so he could show off the dinner he got for Bucky. "Take a seat and I'll heat it up for you."

---

"What?" Bucky smiled and watched Steve bounce around the kitchen. "What'd you get me, huh?" He had had a pretty long day at work and worrying about Lilly all day didn't help. He was very happy to be home and eating dinner with Steve. Soon he would be able to get his hands on him too.

---

"Your favorite," Steve repeated. "Want to know how I know it's your favorite? Cause anything is your favorite when you're this hungry." He popped it in the microwave and got a glass of water for him. "It's chicken parmesan and pasta, by the way," he answered.

---

Bucky groaned and took the water. "Ugh, I love chicken parmesan pasta. How'd you know?" Steve was right, though, Bucky did scarf down his food pretty much every time they were together. He was in a constant state of wanting to eat more.

---

"Becca may have ordered it for you. I just paid." Steve pulled it out of the microwave and put it on the table for Bucky. He kissed Bucky's temple and stood behind him to gently massage his shoulders. "So how was work?" He asked.

---

Bucky blew on a forkful of food before shoving it in his mouth and swallowing. "The same as usual. My coworkers were mostly being idiots. Clint asked me about a thousand times who I was on the phone with during break. And I still don't have a new name tag so I am still 'Fucky: Reporting for duty!'"
Steve blushed, still a bit nervous about being found out but after realizing how happy he was with Bucky, he wasn't so scared. "Well, Fucky is a fun name to say," he teased. "When is Clint replacing it?"

---

"He claims he ordered a new one but I think he secretly thinks it's too funny to replace." Bucky took another few bites of food. "Hell, for all I know he's the one who did it in the first place. I wouldn't put it past him, the cheeky bastard." He looked up into Steve's eyes, "Anyway, how was today? How was the museum?"

---

"It is kind of funny," Steve murmured. "The museum was nice. I think Becca dragged it out a little cause she enjoyed having some peace and quiet. Lilly kicked butt at her practice today, too," Steve reported. "They kept me busy."

---

Bucky chuckled, "Did you feel like a soccer mom?" He always felt out of place when he went to Lilly’s games. There were so many parents standing around or sitting in the stands and then there was Bucky and Becca sitting off to the side quietly cheering for Lilly but trying not to bring too much attention to themselves. Bucky had never been to one of her practices, though, so Steve had him beat there.

---

"A little bit - I'm not gonna lie, I was a little upset at myself for not bringing orange slices for everyone. The kids were really working hard out there." Steve shrugged his shoulders and took a seat next to Bucky. "I'd like to go see a game sometime."

---

"Orange slices?" Bucky asked with a giggle. "The next game is in a few days, I think." Bucky poked Lilly's arm to get her attention. "Would it be okay for Steve to come to your game? Your soccer game, I mean. We don't have to come to your lacrosse scrimmage." He looked back at Steve. "Apparently her team isn't good enough for us to come watch yet - according to her."

---

"Her lacrosse team has her on it. That makes the team good enough to watch in my book," Steve said enthusiastically.

Lilly groaned. "Noooo," she protested. "Just go to my soccer game, okay?"

"Cool," Steve said brightly. He leaned his head on Bucky's shoulder. "Do you want me to stay over again? Cause I have work in the morning. I can go and grab a change of clothes quick..."

---

"I don't want to keep you if you need to be home tonight," Bucky said and kissed the top of Steve's head. "It's up to you." He ate some more of his food and wrapped one arm around Steve's middle. "Thanks again for looking after them today and bringing food home. I really appreciate it."

---

"I'd like to spend some more time with you," Steve said and smiled when Bucky hugged him and he leaned forward to kiss his cheek. "Anything for you. Now, how about you get some quality time with your sisters and I'll be back in a little bit after I've gotten what I need for tomorrow?"

---

"Sure." Bucky nodded and let go of Steve. As Steve was turning to go, Bucky grabbed his hand and pulled him back. He suddenly had a flash of worry in his eyes. A sense of dread came over him and he thought about what happened with the kids and cops the other day. He also thought of his parents and losing them and how dangerous Steve's job must be and on top of it, he was gay and gay people got targeted. "Be careful coming home, okay?"

---

Steve saw the worry in Bucky's eyes and he gave him a tight, protective hug. "I will, Sweetheart," he promised. "I love you." He kissed the top of his head and went back home. Steve packed a duffel bag full of clothes, feeling ambitious and deciding that he should keep an extra few changes at Bucky's place anyway just in case he stayed other unplanned nights there in the future. He came back almost an hour later and knocked on the door to be let in.

---

Becca let Steve inside since Bucky was arguing with Lilly about homework. There were shouts about how sports and academics need to be balanced and "No, it doesn't matter that I dropped out of college, Lilly! You are still in school!" and protests that school was stupid and for snoots like Becca.

---

Steve smiled fondly when he heard the bickering. He gave Bucky a kiss before going over to Lilly and ruffling her hair. "If you're stupid, then you're going to have to rely on some man getting a job to provide for you," he said smartly to her.

---

Lilly was quick to combat Steve's words, "I don't need academics. I can just go pro and be an Olympian. And who says I end up with a man. I might want a woman, you didn't even think of that, did you?" Lilly kept on as Bucky let out a forced laugh, "And maybe I'll just work at a record shop or be a cop, huh? I don't see either of you in school."

Bucky stood up and started backing his way towards his room and making big gestures to Steve to follow him. Lilly glared at him as he went. "We won't win. Let's just go make out instead."

---

"Less than one percent of kids who do sports go pro," Steve said. "So I guess you've got a better chance at going pro than getting a good grade." He gave her a teasing wink and mouthed 'Do your homework' before following Bucky to his room.
Bucky closed the door behind Steve and pulled him to sit on the bed. He gently took Steve's hands in his and said quietly, "So... I had to learn from Becca that I might have said 'I love you' while I was asleep." Bucky paused and looked sheepish. "Did I really do that?"

Bucky looking shy was so fucking adorable. Steve nodded his head. "Yeah. I'm not going to lie. It was really nice to hear. But I also figured you were sleepy and... and didn't really know what you were saying."

"I was sleepy but..." Bucky squeezed Steve's hand. "I know what I said. I'm a little disappointed that the first time I said it wasn't more magical or memorable for you but... I really do love you, Steve." Bucky repeated himself like he was just realizing the truth of his words, "I love you, Steve. And I'm sorry, I wanted to say it sooner but I needed to know that this was stable enough. I have to think about my responsibility to the girls."

"How can it not be memorable for me?" Steve asked with a fond smile. "I was falling asleep next to the love of my life after having a wonderful day with him. It was memorable for me, Buck." He looked so happy to hear Bucky say those words again anyway. "And I know the girls are important. I wouldn't expect any less of you."

"I love you," Bucky said again and nuzzled his nose against Steve's. "I love you." He brushed their lips together. "I love you, Steve Rogers." Then he was sitting in Steve's lap and holding on to the side of his face with a twinkle in his eye.

Steve, the goddamned dork, got all teary-eyed and wrapped his arms securely around his boyfriend. "I love you, too." He slipped his hands into the back of Bucky's shirt. "You make me so happy, Bucky Barnes."

They held each other there like that for a while until Bucky reluctantly sighed and said, "I should probably get the girls ready for bed. Tomorrow is Monday and you know how Becca can't be a second late. They still need to shower and I need to make their lunches." Bucky groaned. "But I don't want to get up. I just want to stay here with you."

"I'll still be here when you get back," Steve chuckled. "I don't know how you do it. I was so damned exhausted by noon. And if one was on my side, the other had to be going off on me for something," he snorted.
"This is why I'm tired all the time, Steve." Bucky shrugged. "And why I get so many fucking headaches." He reached out for Steve one more time to give him another kiss. "If you fall asleep before I get back I won't blame you. Thanks again for handling everything here while I was gone. You make a good nanny."

"And you make a good dad," Steve shot back with an obnoxious grin, knowing how Bucky hated being called that. He got changed into pajamas while he waited for Bucky to return. Steve managed to still be awake by the time Bucky came back in.

Bucky slowly sneaked into his room and started stripping off his clothes. He hadn't said a word, just got naked to his bones and flopped onto the bed. "Can I call in tomorrow and say I'm sick, Steve?" He asked and scratched his chest absently. "I have the stupid mid-shift and I can't handle it."

Steve blushed deeply when Bucky got naked without warning, but he certainly wasn't complaining. He cleared his throat. "I mean, nothing's stopping you. But what's the point of calling in sick when I won't be around to pamper you?"

"I guess that's a good point. But I could be sleeping if I'm home." Bucky rolled to face Steve and he scooted his hips closer to him. "Which shift did you say you had, again? Morning shift?" Bucky traced delicate circles on Steve's side.

Steve nodded. "Morning shift," he confirmed. "Wish I could sleep in late with you, but I'll probably be gone before you wake up." He put his arm around Bucky and let his hand rest over his ass. "At least we have tonight together."

Bucky moved with Steve's arms so he was pressed up against him. "We do have tonight," Bucky said with a tired smile. "Have you decided that ass is yours, Steve?" Bucky asked as he felt calculated movements over his flesh.

Steve still wasn't used to being flirted with but he loved it. "I mean, I did call dibs on it," he joked as he gave Bucky's ass a little squeeze. "Need me to write my name on it in marker?"

"I'd rather you didn't." Bucky laughed, "might rub off on my underwear. Then all of them will say
'Steve's.' He yawned once and tried to cover it up with his hand. He was really tired after such a long day of work but he also really wanted to stay up and just talk with Steve.

---

"Cool, then I'll get free underwear, too," Steve said and pressed their lips together. He started to rub little circles over Bucky's back. "Why don't you get some rest, Beautiful?"

---

Bucky closed his eyes and nuzzled into Steve. "Okay, I will." He hummed a bit to himself and said. "Night, Steve. I love you." And he felt like a weight was lifted again when he said it. Steve might be the one shy about coming out but Bucky was definitely shyer about saying 'I love you'. But now, he had done it. And it felt so right.
Steve found himself staying over Bucky's more nights than not. The only time he went home was so the neighbors wouldn't get suspicious or so that he could leave Bucky to have family time with his sisters. Tonight, Steve came over still in uniform looking thoroughly worn and a little upset.

---

"Hey, what happened? You okay?" Bucky asked as Steve let himself in with the key Bucky had made and sat in a heap at the table. The girls were both asleep by now and Bucky had been waiting up for Steve and listening to a new record he had gotten. "I'll get you some water."

---

Steve took off his overcoat and sat at the table with a heavy sigh. He didn't look like he really wanted to talk but he also didn't want to keep anything from Bucky. "I had to shoot someone," he said quietly. "And I don't know if he's going to make it or not."

---

Bucky sat down immediately next to Steve and took his hand. "Do you want to tell me what happened or do you just want to forget it for now?" Bucky pushed the glass of water closer to Steve to encourage him to drink at least some of it.

---

"I don't know," Steve said. He squeezed Bucky's hand and took a drink because he knew Bucky wanted him to have some. "He was going to shoot my partner and I was so far away," Steve said. "I only wanted to stop him, but I didn't mean to get him in the chest. I just keep seeing it in my head over and over."

---

"Steve, you were just doing your job," Bucky tried. "Getting him anywhere else wouldn't necessarily have stopped him. You were protecting your partner." He paused a moment, unsure what to say to help. "What do your superiors say?"

---

"They're congratulating me," Steve said tightly. "Saying I deserve a promotion, but I don't think murder is worthy of a promotion. I could have been better, Buck. I could have taken more time to aim or maybe I could have run faster. I don’t know."

---

Bucky sighed and leaned his head against Steve's shoulder. "You did what you could. Your reflexes and instincts did what they thought was best for the situation. And maybe you didn't kill the guy. You said yourself he could make it." Bucky felt lost, like the day he was granted guardianship of his sisters. He didn't know what to do. This was new territory. Bucky had no idea what police officers went through at work. All Bucky did was stack records and tell people not to smoke around the Steve flinched a little when Bucky leaned his head on his shoulder. He wasn’t in a cuddling mood. He felt like he should have his senior officer shout at him until his ears rung. "I should go home," he mumbled as he stood up. "They may go there for statements or something."

Bucky had no idea what to say. He didn't think Steve should be alone but he also didn't want to stop him from leaving if that was really what was best right now. "Steve..." Bucky whispered. He reached out for him but his hand aborted the motion quickly and he brought it back down to his lap. He felt useless.

"Sorry," Steve said. "I should've just gone home in the first place and called." He was just so caught up in his own head that he didn't know what to do. "I'll see you soon. Stay safe," He hurried out without making eye contact with Bucky.

Bucky sat in silent shock at the table for a few minutes. There was a lump in his throat and his eyes were fixed on a scar in the tabletop. Eventually, Bucky stood and wiped his face whispering, "Jesus fuck..." under his breath and then going to the phone. He dialed Steve's number but didn't hit call yet. Bucky waited another minute or so before deciding to put the phone back and just go to bed.

Steve had tried for a few days to get back to work but when he got news that the person he shot had died, he immediately put in a request for a vacation. He was too embarrassed to admit that he felt too awful to pin the badge on his chest. After the second day of Steve being a shut-in, Bucky received a call from Sarah.

Becca came knocking on Bucky's door early one morning with the phone in one hand. She shook him awake and handed it to him. "Hello?" Bucky asked and rubbed the sleepy grit from his eyes. "Hi, Mrs. Rogers, no I haven't seen or heard from him in days." Bucky waved Becca off sleepily and rolled to get out of bed.

"James, I know you and Steven are good friends," Sarah said ‘good friends’ with a pushy, knowing tone, "So I was just wondering if you wouldn't mind going over and checking on him."

"Mrs. Rogers, I don't know if Steve even wants to see me." Bucky hadn't heard from Steve this whole time. He didn't even get a call saying he made it home safe. Bucky was just a little pissed and a lot worried.

"Of course he wants to see you," Sarah scolded, but it didn't have too much heat to it. "He's unhappy right now. The young man he shot passed away in the hospital the other day," she explained. She only knew because she had called to check in on Steve and Steve was too good of a son to ignore a call from his mom. "You will cheer him up. I can come by in a half hour to look after your sisters."

---

"Oh no," Bucky lamented, "He hoped so badly that he would live." There was no point arguing anymore with Steve's mom so he consented to go see him while she stayed with the girls. They promised to be good and Bucky left them some money in case they all wanted to go out to dinner. He figured that a Rogers would be cooking for them, though, so it probably wouldn't have mattered.

Bucky walked across the couple of streets it took to get to Steve's and he made his way to his apartment getting more and more nervous as he went. What if Steve told him to fuck off and leave him alone?

---

When Bucky knocked on the door, there was some hesitation before a shuffling of feet could be heard. Steve opened the door dressed in the same sweats and hoodie he'd worn for three days. He was surprised to see Bucky but he really should've expected him to show up sooner or later. "Is someone watching the girls?" was what came out of his mouth.

---

"Your mom," Bucky said as he pushed past Steve into the apartment. He took in Steve's appearance as he shut the door. He looked like he hadn't slept for a week and was living off of crackers. Bucky wanted to hold him close. He wanted to kiss him and tell him it was all right. He wanted to make him eat something then get him to rest. He wanted to get him showered and into something new and clean. What Bucky settled on was the defense mechanism he used with his sisters, which was misdirected frustration and swearing, "What the hell, Steve?"

---

It didn't take a genius to figure out his mom must've sent Bucky over to check in while she kept an eye on Becca and Lilly. Steve felt a little subconscious when Bucky looked at him because he knew he was a mess right now. So when Bucky swore at him, he shrugged and moved to grab his blanket from the couch to cover himself as he sat down. "I'm allowed to have bad days."

---

"Bad day?" Bucky spit out, "Try almost a week!" He folded his arms and blew some hair out of his eyes. "Almost a week with no word from you, Steve. You didn't show up at my place, you didn't tell me when you found out about the guy, you didn't even call to say you got home safe that night! I've been fucking worried about you!" Bucky felt the lump in his throat again and couldn't quite figure out why he felt like crying and smashing things against the walls.

---

Steve was feeling awful but he was still a stubborn mule at heart and Bucky yelling at him wasn't going to make him apologize even though he did feel bad for worrying him so much. He knew how much the poor guy had on his plate. "Nothing was stopping you from picking up the phone and calling me. You waited until my mom stepped in," he shot back.
"I tried, Steve," Bucky said. "I was going to call right after you left and tell you to get your ass back home to me. But, I thought if you needed your space then I needed to give it to you." Bucky let out a shaky breath and noticed a bad headache starting to form.

"Well, don't complain about me doing the same thing you did," Steve mumbled. If he had ignored phone calls from Bucky it would be another story. "You don't have to have a solution for everything, Buck. Some things can't be fixed. You can't un-kill a person."

"I felt so useless. There wasn't anything I could do to help you and I hated myself for that. It felt like before with..." Bucky was going to say how it felt like when his parents died and all he could do was sit around and stare at the walls and hold his young sisters close to him.

Steve looked up at Bucky and had an idea where his sentence had been going. "Come here." He said and held his blanket open for Bucky to come cuddle up next to him.

"No, I don't want to," Bucky grumped and furrowed his brow. "If we are in this together, Steve..." He trailed off again. "I can't lose you, too," he said finally after a long pause. "And you going off alone and us not communicating with each other and it taking your mother to get us to see each other counts as me losing you."

"What? That doesn't count," Steve said strongly, narrowing his eyes. "I'm allowed to grieve. I fucking killed someone, Bucky. Do you know what that feels like? I couldn't talk to your sisters when we fucked around, you really think I could handle them finding out about me taking someone's life? It's barely been a week. You didn't lose me. It's not like I ran off and didn't leave a forwarding address."

Bucky gritted his teeth and nodded slowly. "I need to go home. I've got a terrible goddamn headache getting worse every second." He felt a drip fall onto his cheek and he couldn't tell if his eyes were watering because he was fighting with Steve, because he was thinking of his parents, or because of the pain in his head.

"There's medicine in the bathroom. Good seeing you, Buck," Steve ground out aggressively and then laid down on the couch with his back to Bucky. He hated seeing Bucky hurt and upset like this. But he really didn't have the capacity to be giving right now.
Bucky blinked slowly and felt a bit nauseated. He trudged to Steve's bathroom and opened the little mirror cabinet. He found the bottle of pills and grabbed it from the shelf. Bucky tried opening the top but it wasn't working. It was taking too much effort and it hurt too much for him to look down. Bucky's body then decided it had given up so he gently slid down the wall to sit curled up against the bathtub, cradling the pill bottle.

---

Steve was on high alert from the argument so when minutes passed and Bucky was still in the bathroom, he knew something was wrong. He got up and walked over to see what was going on. When he saw Bucky curled up against the tub, his heart broke and he knelt down next to him to wrap Bucky up with one of his arms and held him to his chest. He opened the pill bottle with his other hand. "I'm sorry."

---

Bucky let Steve put a few pills in his mouth and he obeyed when he was told to swallow. He looked up into Steve's eyes and felt the tears streaming from his own. He knew now it had to be from the pain. This was by far the worst headache he had ever gotten in his life. He sent a silent prayer to Steve's god for letting this happen while his sisters weren't around to see it. Bucky gripped onto Steve's shirt and croaked out, "Steve..."

---

Steve set the pills aside and picked Bucky up in his arms. He carried him over to his bed and laid him down gently. Steve sat next to him and stroked his hand through Bucky's hair and massaged his scalp. "Do you need to see a doctor?" He asked, looking worried.

---

Bucky's eyes were closed and he was trying to only pay attention to the lovely feeling of Steve rubbing his head. "Well, you were going to make me see one anyway," Bucky swallowed through a tight knot in his throat. "Guess sooner than later might be a good idea." He made a mental note to schedule something for as soon as he could be seen. Maybe someone could give him a better answer about why his head revolted against him all the time. If Steve still went with him, he wouldn't be as nervous.

---

Steve leaned down to press a soft kiss at the bridge of Bucky's nose. "I wish I could do something right now to help ease the pain," he said softly. "If it gets too much, I can take you to the hospital, okay?" He kept petting his hands through Bucky's hair in an attempt to comfort him.

---

Bucky reached his hand up to hold Steve's face. "We're alright, aren't we?" He asked and ran a finger over Steve's lips. "You need time, that's fine. Just tell me that you and I are okay." Bucky could live with Steve needing some distance and time to sort out what happened. He could live with waiting for him to feel better again no matter how long it took. He just needed to know that this event hadn't changed the two of them together.
Steve kissed Bucky's finger. "We are always going to be alright, Buck," Steve promised. "I just need time." His face fell again, now not as distracted by Bucky and remembering the weight of what he did. "I don't know if I should be a cop anymore."

Bucky held his hand in place on Steve's face and reached his other hand out to touch his thigh. "But, you love being a cop. You live to help people. It's your job and your life. You saved Lilly and brought her back to me. You defended a kid who was just a little different from the other kids. Steve... what would you even do if you quit the force?"

"But I'm not helping anyone if I'm killing them. That kid was eighteen. I know he was going to shoot my partner, but what if he didn't have anyone who cared enough to set him right? What if I could have talked him down the straight and narrow?" He frowned. "I don't know what I'd do. That's why I haven't decided yet."

Bucky wasn't aware that the guy was just a kid. He was closer to Steve and Bucky's ages then he thought at first. He was closer to Becca's age then to Bucky's. "It isn't healthy to beat yourself up with a bunch of what-ifs and should-haves," he offered and rolled on his side towards Steve. His head wasn't hurting as much as he had been but he still wasn't completely fine.

"I can't help it," Steve mumbled. He laid down next to Bucky and rested his head on the pillow and looked over at him a little helplessly. "I always used to think that I could get away without ever having to use my gun."

"Have you never fired in the field before?" Bucky asked as he tried to decide whether to reach out and touch Steve or leave him be. "Steve, that's part of being a cop." He wanted to hold him close to his chest. Bucky wanted to take Steve back to his place and just listen to music on the couch or watch some TV and just be.

Steve shook his head. "Never - not even a warning shot. And I've been in some bad situations before," he said. "I wouldn't have cared so much if he had lived."

Bucky closed his eyes for a second and noticed his headache was significantly better. "If you wouldn't have fired then he might have hurt your partner and you and who knows who else." He tried to make Steve see some sort of reason in all of this but it was mostly a lost cause. Steve was just going to have to work this out on his own.
Steve looked down and didn't answer. He knew that he saved his partner's life but he still felt pretty damn awful. He ran his fingers through his hair once and sighed heavily. "Do you think I would be this upset over it if I were straight?"

Bucky shook his head quickly in confusion. "What do you mean? What's that got to do with anything - especially saving your partner?" There was a deep-set sadness behind Steve's eyes and Bucky was slowly letting it settle in that Steve might not be okay for a long while.

"I don't know," Steve murmured. "It's just... all the other guys in my department are straight. And they seemed fine when they've had to shoot someone. Some come from the army and have killed before, too."

"Steve, they are fine with it because they don't care as much as you." Bucky didn't want to go into a long rant about his disdain for policemen and how he thought it was filled with mostly bad guys and a few good ones like Steve. Bucky refrained from saying anything about 'the man' around Steve.
"They don't care as much about the lives they have been tasked to help and you do."

Steve hesitated for a little bit and looked Bucky over skeptically. "So we aren't extra sensitive because we're gay?" He asked. As liberal as Steve and his Ma were, it didn't stop him from being exposed to all sorts of homophobia and doubting himself for it.

"No, Steve," Bucky laughed. "I'm gay as fuck but I'm also pretty callous, right? If it isn't about my sisters or you I don't give two shits." Bucky gently ran a hand down Steve's arm. "Gay doesn't mean extra sensitive. I've slept with plenty of gay men who pushed me around and used me and shit to know that that stereotype is false. You are just sensitive to this because you are you."

"You're also sensitive," Steve reminded. The guy got headaches whenever he was stressed out. And he worried about his sisters after being away from them for a half hours. Steve only doubted their health on their sexuality out of sheer ignorance. He sighed and nuzzled Bucky gently. "Sorry," he apologized. "I guess I was being dramatic. That's a gay thing too, isn't it?" He gave Bucky a small smile to show he was joking.

"Yes, Steve," Bucky said flatly and rolled his eyes. "Once you realize you're gay you automatically become a drama queen." Bucky ventured to take Steve's hand in his and held it over his own heart.
"I'm sorry I yelled at you earlier. I should have reigned it in but I didn't and I won't make excuses for it."
Steve wouldn't lie and say that it hadn't hurt when Bucky yelled at him instead of trying to immediately support him when he was down and out. But he also was being difficult and appreciated that Bucky stuck around. "It's okay," he said. "You're here for me. That's all that matters, Buck."

"I also can't promise it won't happen again but I will try harder not to do that to you again." Bucky said, "Just ask the girls, I have a bad habit of going from zero to angry in ten seconds. But, yes, I'm here for you and I'll be here for you for whatever you need."

"I appreciate you being honest, Buck. I'd rather the honesty than setting me up for disappointment later," Steve said and wrapped his arms around Bucky tightly and kissed him. "I love you, Sweetheart."

"I love you too, Steve." Bucky sighed out and let his tired eyes drift closed. "What do you want to do now? What's best for you? You can come home with me or I can leave or..." He trailed off. He hoped Steve would choose to come home with him and stay the night but he also knew that Steve might not think it was a good idea.

Steve paused in thought and decided, "I think I should be alone tonight," he said. He knew Bucky wanted him to go back to his place. And a part of Steve wanted to, but he needed space to think. "I'll sleep over at yours tomorrow?"

Bucky nodded and gave a weak smile. "Okay, Steve, that sounds good." He got out of the bed and pulled his hair back in a ponytail low on his head. "I got to make sure the girls listened to your mom and went to sleep on time. Lilly was a little over energetic today so I hope she wasn't too much trouble."

"She's Lilly, she's always trouble," Steve said fondly. "Love you, Buck. Thank you for coming by."

When Bucky got back home, Sarah was in the middle of teaching the girls how to make chocolate chip banana pancakes. "Hey there, Dearie. How is my son?" She asked.

Bucky sighed when he saw both sisters wide awake, un-showered, and about to eat sugary pancakes. "He's going to need some time but I believe in him to pull through," he said and went to hug Lilly and Becca. "Thanks for sort of making me go over there, Mrs. Rogers. I think he and I both needed to be forced into seeing each other for a bit so we could work it out." Bucky hoped he didn't sound too fond when he talked about Steve. He had a pretty secure notion that Sarah already knew about them - or was possibly told by Lilly - but he didn't want to assume.

---

"I'm glad to hear that. I must say I'm surprised he didn't come over to spend the night again," Sarah glanced out the window. "Bless his heart. He's so careful with everything but he always forgets to water the plant I gave him. He spends so much time here that I've been sneaking over while he's at work so I can keep the damn thing alive."

---

Bucky cleared his throat nervously and shoved his hands in his pockets. He gave Becca a quick glance and she gave him a shake of the head indicating they had no part in whatever Sarah thought was going on. Bucky figured he would just say the most neutral thing he could in regards to what Steve's mother had said. "Well, I'll tell him to make sure to water the plant more often so it can survive."

---

Sarah eyed Bucky with that mom look before she rolled her eyes at all three of them. "Oh, for heaven's sake," she said. "With Steve's inability to fib and me knowing my son better than anyone else in the world, do you really think I wouldn't knows you two are canoodling?" She asked. "You don't have to hide it from me."

---

"Uhhh..." was all Bucky's mouth let him say. Becca's eyes were jumping between Bucky and Sarah and Lilly was laughing nervously to herself. "Well..." He tried again. "We..." Words weren't working for him at all. Bucky made a pained noise and then finally said, "You got to tell him that you know."

---

Sarah shook her head. "He will tell his mother when he's ready," she said. She wasn't going to make Steve feel self-conscious by letting him know she knew his secret. When he was comfortable, she knew he would tell her.

---

Bucky nodded. He thought it might do Steve some good knowing he doesn't have to worry about telling his mom. "Is this okay with you?" He asked slowly. Not that her opinion would make a difference to Bucky but it might to Steve and that's what Bucky was worried about.

---

Sarah walked over so she could give Bucky a hug. "Of course I'm okay with this," she said, all sweet and motherly. But then she added, "I've always wanted more children to boss around."

---

Bucky chuckled and hugged her back. "In that case, do you want to boss these two off to get ready for bed?” He asked and pointed to his sisters who were already grumbling about having to go to sleep.

---

"It would be my pleasure,” Sarah said. She finished up putting the pancakes away to be stored and eaten the next day. Afterward, she herded the girls into the bathroom so they could wash up and get to bed.

---

Bucky went to a box of records and took out a slow album to play. He set it up and laid on the couch and thought of Steve. He still needed to learn how to dance. His headache now gone and the girls doing what they needed to, Bucky let himself relax a bit and before he knew it he was asleep.
As promised, Steve came over the next day after work. It'd been a weird day back but he was glad that he was able to start moving forward with his life. When he got to the apartment, he had a paper bag tucked under his arm that he carried gingerly.

---

Bucky let out a big sigh of relief when Steve came home. He rushed to him and kissed him lightly but with as much love as he could. Then he noticed the bag under Steve's arm. "What's that?" Bucky asked and nodded towards it curiously.

---

Steve smiled into the kiss, pressed closer to Bucky, pulled out a bouquet of roses from the bag, and offered it to Bucky. "For you."

---

Bucky took them and gave a small confused smile. "What's this for?" He asked and peeked through the roses. Bucky had never been given flowers before except when his parents died and it felt really nice to have this small romantic gesture from someone as caring as Steve.

---

"Cause I love you," Steve answered with a soft smile. He kissed Bucky's cheek and ran a hand up and down his arm. "I wasn't sure what your favorite flower was, but I figured roses were a safe choice."

---

"I don't think I have a favorite flower but I like these ones because they're from you." Bucky knew it was a little cheesy but he didn't much care. He went to put the flowers in some water. He didn't have any vases so he just used a pitcher. "How are you feeling today, Babe?"

---

Steve pet a hand over Bucky's hair and smiled over at him. "I'm feeling better. I went back to work today. They've got me at desk work for the next two weeks before they put me back in the field." Steve didn't mind that.

---

"That's good, right? Sort of gives you some more time." Bucky hugged Steve's middle and rested his head against his shoulder. "I missed you so much, Steve," he whispered into Steve's shirt. "I hated not having you around."

---

Steve nodded. He felt a little bad for being away so long. "I'm sorry," he apologized. "I don't think I'm going to withdraw myself like that again." He kissed the top of Bucky's head. "I missed you too."

---

"Even if you do, I'm still here for you," Bucky said and detached himself from Steve. He went over to the couch to grab a blanket and wrapped himself up. He was in his sleeping clothes and was very cold. It was definitely getting closer to winter. "You want to shower and go to sleep? Or you want some food?"

---

Steve smiled and said, "I'm kind of feeling like just changing into pajamas and cuddling up next to my favorite guy." Once Bucky was wrapped up in his blanket, Steve scooped him up and carried him bridal style to the bedroom.

---

Bucky protested slightly at being lifted off the ground but he stopped once he felt safe in Steve's arms. Steve gingerly laid him on the bed and starting undressing himself to get changed. Steve looked slightly bashful still while he got naked in front of Bucky even though they had been in far more compromising positions together.

---

Steve gave Bucky a cocky grin in response to the protesting but he soon grew sheepish once it was time to undress. He still was a modest person. He kept his back turned as he changed and once he was in a tank and sweatpants, he laid down next to Bucky and gave him a kiss.

---

"Time to sleep?" Bucky asked hopefully and wrapped around Steve. "It's been a long week," Bucky said even though it was only just Wednesday. Lilly had a soccer game coming up and lacrosse practice all week and Becca was going to have a big chemistry project due soon, too.

---

Steve nodded. "I'd like that," he said. "Hopefully starting tomorrow I'll be able to go back to helping you out." Steve pet a hand up and down Bucky's back. "I'm sorry I haven't been around as much as I should."

---

"It's okay, you were hurting and needed time." Bucky said, "I could have been far more understanding and patient than I was." He yawned and ran a hand through his hair. "It's okay you weren't around to help. I have been doing this for a while now," he said with a chuckle. "Just so long as you come to Lilly's soccer game tomorrow."

---

"I'm less than a year older than you..." Bucky mumbled in retort and quickly fell asleep. He slept a lot better with Steve by his side and it surprised him because, before Steve, he slept perfectly okay but then after Steve came into his life he couldn’t sleep without him.

Steve woke up early the next day and left Bucky a little love note to wake up to once he left for work. He worked through lunch so he could leave early and turn back up at Bucky's house well before Lilly's game.

When Steve came back home, Lilly was a nervous wreck and Becca was dancing quietly to herself in the corner to some David Bowie music trying to keep out of the way. Bucky was giving Lilly fruit and water and trying to get her to calm down. This happened before every game. She was always so worried that she was going to mess up and ruin the whole game for everyone.

Steve hadn’t experienced pre-game Lilly before, but he knew the family well enough to know that Lilly and Bucky being frantic while Becca occupied herself was nothing new. "Hey," he greeted them. "What's the matter, Lilly?"

"I can't go to the game!" Lilly shouted in response. "I can't play tonight."

Bucky thrust out an apple slice to her and said, "Yes, you can and you will." Then he turned to Steve. "This happens every game. She's excited for days then gets anxious about it right before." Bucky slumped his shoulders and let out a shallow sigh.

"Anxious? About what? You're twelve," Steve said incredulously. "This game is hundreds of years old, Lil, chances are you're not the worst player this sport has come across," Steve reassured, nudging her.

Lilly seemed to take the bait for a second before realizing a greater horror, "What if I disgrace hundreds of years of soccer tradition?"

Bucky groaned and looked to Becca who was still ignoring them and swaying by herself. "Lilly, we've got to leave for the goddamn game in five minutes. We've been over this before and I'll say it again. You're gonna kick the other team’s ass and this year you all are bringing home that glorious fucking season trophy."
That certainly wasn't where Steve had seen this going. He groaned and looked over to Bucky with an expression that said 'how do you do this?' Before letting Bucky deal with Lilly on his own. "Hey, Becca," he said, going to the more reasonable of the Barnes sisters. "Is that the new album?"

---

"Older one. Aladdin Sane," Becca replied and pointed on the cover sitting propped up against the player.

Bucky managed to get Lilly up on her feet and he started pushing her towards the door with her gear bag in tow. "Okay, we're moving! Anyone who's coming needs to come now because I don't know how long this push is going to last."

---

Steve took Becca’s arm and playfully tugged her to the door when Bucky announced that they were on the go. He was incredibly excited to go to Lilly’s game. He never had little siblings to watch in sports and he had always been too small and sick to play sports himself.

---

The four of them trudged down the block and eventually made it to the park with Lilly basically doing okay. She improved immensely once she saw her teammates and she ran to them happily. There were sets of removable bleachers set up and Becca led the way over to them. Bucky stayed close to Steve but was careful not to touch him.

---

"So is Thomas on the soccer team too? Or just lacrosse?" Steve asked as they took their seats. His leg rested against Bucky's but he held back from having any more contact. "He was a nice boy, that kid. You should be nice to him."

---

"I should do a lot of things," Bucky said simply. "And, no, he's just on the lacrosse team." Becca sat on the other side of Bucky and yawned. She had been up late the night before working on her chemistry project so she was beat. She leaned into her brother and put her head on his arm. Bucky wasn't going to be surprised if she fell asleep during the game.

---

Steve looked around before whispering quietly into Bucky's ear, "I can tell you what you should do to me tonight." He pulled back with a smirk. When he saw Becca falling asleep on Bucky, he took off his jacket to put over her shoulders.

---

Becca stirred a little then adjusted the jacket with a quiet, "Thank you."

Bucky turned his head to Steve and whispered low and jokingly, "This is a children's sports game, Officer, that sort of talk isn't appropriate." But Bucky was more than happy to imagine just what exactly Steve wanted Bucky to do to him when they got home.
Steve smirked when he was scolded. He turned his attention to the game and whenever Lilly got control of the ball, Steve would stand up and cheer her on loudly. He didn't mean to but he usually ended up being the loudest of everyone present.

Becca was startled out of her nap when Steve yelled and she tossed Bucky a look that said 'control your boyfriend' before sitting up and folding her arms against her chest. Bucky loved seeing Steve get so excited for Lilly and it sort of did feel like they were being proud parents watching their kiddo play soccer together. Bucky didn't let himself entertain that thought for too long, though.

When Lilly's team won, Steve was hollering and cheering so loudly that even some of the parents on the team were a little embarrassed by him. Some got a kick out of him, though. "Did you see that?" Steve asked, shaking Bucky's arm.

"I did," Bucky laughed at Steve and steadied the man. Lilly's team came running over to the bleachers to greet their parents and adoring fans like Steve. Bucky stepped off the bleachers and bent down with his arms outstretched so Lilly could smack into him in a big hug. "That was amazing, Lil!"

Steve watched Bucky and Lilly happily. A few parents came over to greet him and ask who he was, so he just introduced himself as their cousin. They all liked him well enough even though he'd been a bit overenthusiastic. "Can we go out for ice cream?" He asked Bucky.

Bucky was aggravated that Steve had to call himself their cousin. He was mad because he wished they could just be open about their relationship and he was also mad because Steve - the most honest guy he ever met - was forced to lie for Bucky. But, Bucky consented to them getting ice cream and he slung Lilly's gear bag over his shoulder to carry while they walked.

Steve usually was an awful liar but for the safety of their relationship, he easily feigned that they were family. As they walked away from the field, Steve patted Lilly's arm. "You did great, Kiddo," he said. "She really was amazing. Wasn't she, Buck?"

"She always is." Bucky smiled and gave Lilly a high five. "So, we can get ice cream before dinner but what do you all want afterward? And please don't say pizza, I am sick of pizza." They were closing in on the ice cream shop and Becca was once again leading the group.
In response to what they wanted for dinner, Lilly said pizza, Becca said Chinese, and Steve said gyros all at the same time. Steve laughed and then gave Bucky a look. "Time for you to be the tiebreaker."

Bucky rolled his eyes and said, "Jesus, you guys are all over the place." He already ruled out pizza and gyros were too fancy in Bucky's opinion. "Chinese," he said and clapped his hands together. "Becca wins."

"Well, now I see who you love more," Steve jokingly lamented in a dramatic tone. He held the door to the ice cream parlor open for them. "Becca, why did you have to sabotage my dinner choice?" he teased.

"No one likes gyros, Steve," Becca said and walked through the door without a 'thank you'. Bucky thanked Steve and flicked his sister on the top of her head.

"Maybe you and I can get them next time, yeah?" He offered to Steve and gave him a loving smile. "What ice cream are you getting?"

Steve nearly put an arm around Bucky but he held back from doing so and felt a bit awful that he couldn't. "I'm thinking vanilla with sprinkles," he said. Steve could be a very plain person sometimes. "You?"

"That's so boring," Lilly said and stood in between Steve and Bucky. Lilly was a very outgoing person but she could also get pretty shy in public and sometimes she needed to be close to Bucky or Becca to feel safe.

Bucky held her to him and shook her a little. "Steve can get whatever he wants, even if it's super lame," he said.

Steve stuck his tongue out at the both of them for criticizing his choice of ice cream. Once the orders were put in, he paid and took his own to eat. "So when is your next game, Lilly?"

Lilly was too far into her ice cream to answer so Becca piped up and said, "She's got a lacrosse game in three days that none of us are allowed to attend."

"I'm attending whether she likes it or not," Bucky added through a bite of cookie dough ice cream.
"I want to go too," Steve insisted. He nudged Lilly gently. "Come on, I’m your biggest fan," he said, grinning. "I was louder than the both of these guys combined. I hardly heard a chirp outta these two birds," he said as he gestured to Bucky and Becca.

"Well, Becca, was asleep and I was too embarrassed by you to say anything," Bucky said to Steve. "But, yes, if you can convince Lilly to let us go then we can all go again in a few days."

Lilly groaned and hit her head against the table. "Becca never has to deal with this pressure."

"Excuse me?" Becca started. "Let me tell you about pressure..." The girls droned on and started bickering while Bucky looked to Steve and gave a low sigh.

Steve was amazed at how the girls could go from totally amicable to bickering endlessly within moments. "Makes me wish I had siblings," Steve sighed to Bucky. He finished his ice cream and threw the napkin in the trash. "I always wanted a little brother or sister."

"Well, now you've got these two around so that should help fix that desire," Bucky said and finished his ice cream too. He stood up and started pulling his still arguing sisters by the arms to get up. Lilly had finished eating long before Steve and Bucky but Becca was still working on it. Bucky decided she could walk and eat because now he was really craving Chinese food. "Take-out sounds great cause then we can go back home and be ourselves," Bucky huffed out as he gently brushed up against Steve's side when he walked out the door.

Steve nodded in agreement. "Yeah, I can't wait to be embarrassingly affectionate with you," Steve said in a quiet voice to Bucky. When they got to the Chinese place, Steve made sure to complain about how much better gyros were to Becca before placing his order.

Becca simply ignored Steve and kept looking at Bucky almost to say 'why do you keep him?' Bucky ordered for himself and Lilly who was decidedly pissed at not having pizza. He refused to let Steve pay since he got the ice cream and Bucky claimed it was only a fair trade off.

Steve didn't argue too much over not being able to pay. He insisted only once after Bucky said no before letting it go. He mimicked Lilly’s pout and said, "Lilly, don’t be so upset. You get pizza every day. I'm sure you'll have it soon enough."
"Not every day," Lilly chided. "Just a lot of days."

Bucky and Becca carried their bags of food because Lilly had taken residence as Steve's human backpack. Bucky tried hard not to look at him too much because Steve giving his sister a piggyback ride was too damn adorable for him to take and he wanted to smack that dumb grin off Steve's face with a kiss.

---

"A lot of days is pretty much every day," Steve countered. He let her ride piggyback on the way home, occasionally bouncing his step more to give her a bumberier ride. He never gave her too rough of a time because she smacked his shoulder whenever he bounced too much. Once they were inside the apartment, Steve carefully dumped her flat on her back onto the couch. "Today was a nice day out, you guys."

---

"Yeah, it really was," Bucky said and attacked Steve in kisses after he got his hands on him. He missed touching him so much when he wasn't allowed to. "Steve..." Bucky breathed and put his forehead to his. "Want to just go to my room for a bit?" Bucky really wanted to make out like high schoolers and hold Steve's hand and pretend that they were the only people around for miles.

---

Steve had kind of been looking forward to eating dinner but when Bucky said his name like that and looked at him with that expression, he couldn't say no. "Alright," he said, grinning like an idiot. He stealthily grabbed Bucky's ass before rushing into his room.

---

The second the door was closed, Bucky was all over Steve licking into his mouth and running his hands down his back to cup his ass. He moaned into the kiss and adjusted his stance knocking over his lamp. "Shit, fuck, oops." Bucky started laughing and had to pull away from Steve because he was chuckling so hard.

---

Steve missed Bucky on him immediately. He picked up the lamp quickly and brought the two of them together again. He lightly brushed his fingers over Bucky’s crotch and thighs and bit his lip gently.

---

Bucky moaned low and quiet and kissed him for a few minutes but then forced himself to pull off of Steve. "Okay, let's get back out there. We should eat with the girls."

---

Steve made a disappointed grunt. "Why drag me in here then make me go back out when I'm just starting to have fun?" He complained. Steve tugged him back down into bed and grabbed his ass while he kissed him a few more times before finally letting him back up.
"I'm sorry, Babe, I just needed to touch you a little bit. We were out so long today in places that we weren't allowed to hold hands or kiss and I just got worked up and upset," Bucky said quickly and tossed a jacket at Steve in case he was cold. "After the girls go to sleep we can continue this full-force."

---

Steve's expression softened and he kissed Bucky one more time. "One of these days we won't have to hide," he reassured. "Tonight we are totally touching each other everywhere." He got up and held the door open for him.

---

"That's what I like to hear," Bucky said and strode through the door. Becca and Lilly were already eating their food and Bucky wasn't surprised. He was sure he had kept them waiting too long. He sat at the table and pulled Steve's chair out next to him and started handing his food to him. Bucky leaned into Steve a little and said, "You can pray, Steve, I don't mind. I know you like to."

---

Steve looked bashful when Bucky offered for him to pray. He set his food up on the table and folded his hands together. He said grace, thanking God for the people he loved and praying for them all to stay in good health. Lilly looked at him like he had five heads but by the time he was done, she had ducked her head back into her dinner.

---

"Thanks, Steve, that was nice," Bucky said and gave a genuine smile. It felt good to do even the small things like that for Steve. He knew it all went a long way and he wanted to be the best, most accommodating, most understanding boyfriend that he could possibly be for Steve.

---

Steve still looked a little embarrassed to be the only one saying prayers but he felt better for being able to pray before his meal. Steve leaned over and kissed Bucky's cheek before taking a bite of his dinner.

"Bucky, my class is going to Ellis Island tomorrow. Can I have twenty bucks?" Lilly asked.

---

Bucky breathed tightly through his lips and reached into his pocket. "You sure you need that much?" He asked and began sifting through his wallet. "When did I sign a permission slip for Ellis Island?" He added as an afterthought. Bucky pulled what he had and it only added up to seventeen dollars but he gave it all to Lilly.

---

"Don't need that much, but I always ask for more than what I need cause you always have less, which happens to be exactly what I need," she said smartly. "And I forgot to have you sign it so I forged your signature last week," she added.
Bucky's eyebrows shot up on his forehead. "You forged my - fuck, Lilly. You can't do that shit. That's just making bad habits." He looked to Steve to back him up on this even though he knew there was no way she was listening to either of them anyway. She'd already done it so there wasn't anything he could do to fix it now. "How'd you know how to do my signature convincingly anyway?"

Steve shook his head disapprovingly at Lilly as she said, "I practiced a lot. It takes a lot less time to study one signature than to study for all the tests you would've had to sign if I failed."

Steve rubbed a hand over his face. "You can't do that, Lilly. You need to be responsible."

"And just how many tests have you failed that I don't know about?" Bucky asked sternly and stared at Lilly. Becca was quietly looking on and eating her dinner like she was watching a train wreck of a movie playing right in front of her. "You know the drill is to bring me your grades every week. All of them!"

"What, so you can yell at me?" Lilly demanded, raising her voice back at him. "I'm not Becca. We all can't be as perfect as Becca. So long as I pass for the year, who cares if I fail a couple of tests?" She said. "You got to drop out."

"I had to drop out because Mom and Dad died and I had to take care of you!" Bucky stabbed a finger in Lilly's direction and shook his head at her. His eyebrows were furrowed and his eyes were blazing mad. Lilly made a move to get up from the table and Bucky quickly gritted out, "Sit down."

"Well, they were my mom and dad too!" She snapped back. Steve felt a little awkward in this conversation but he gently rubbed a hand over Bucky's back. "You never let us talk about them," Lilly defended. "You don't get to be the only one sad about it, Bucky."

"I never said you can't talk about them!" Bucky said and gripped a hand on Steve's thigh for support. "The fact remains that I have to play their role now for the two of you and that means getting a little firm where grades are concerned. Do you think Mom wouldn't be a little pissed that you forged my signature and lied about bad test scores?"

"Well, we won't ever know what Mom would think cause she's fucking dead!" Lilly said in a stubborn shout.
"Lilly -" Steve tried to interject calmly but Lilly pointed a finger at him to stop him.

"You're not my brother and you're not my parent," She huffed out.

---

"Lilly, I think you should go to your room and calm down for a bit," Bucky said with tight lips. "We can discuss this later. You can take your dinner if you want."

Lilly got up with her plate and kicked her chair back under the table. "So goddamn unfair," She murmured and sauntered off to her room again.

Bucky looked to Becca who was looking pretty upset by this point, "You okay, Becs? I'm sorry about all that."

---

Becca had her head ducked into her dinner and didn't respond at first. "Well, she has a point," she said evenly. "You don't tell us we can't talk about Mom and Dad. But you get weird whenever we do and change the subject." She pushed her plate away, not hungry anymore. "And you used to be fun. We kind of lost a brother."

---

It was Bucky's turn to get up from the table and he slowly and evenly stood and took his plate to the sink to wash. He didn't respond to Becca as he just quietly cleaned his plate then went to his room saying, "I'll be back in a little while." He felt bad for leaving in the middle of such an ordeal and leaving Steve out there alone with Becca but he just needed a few minutes alone. He crawled into his bed and hugged a pillow to his chest. He hated having to be the authority in the house. He hated not being the fun older brother anymore. He wasn't cut out to be a parent to his sisters.

---

Steve wanted to go comfort Bucky but he understood needing a few minutes to gather oneself. He would join him soon enough, but he would give him some space. He looked over at Becca and shifted awkwardly before asking, "Do you think it would make you guys happier if I was your guardian so Bucky could be your brother again?"

---

Becca gave Steve a confused and offended look. "No," she said flatly and took another bite of her food. Then she sighed and looked back up at Steve. "I didn't mean it like we lost him, too. I just mean it's hard to want to listen to him since he isn't our parent and he used to be our cool older brother who was headed through school to be a record producer. Now he's at a dead-end job and probably won't ever finish school and he's sad a lot and a little difficult to deal with sometimes." She looked Steve up and down. "You do make him happier, though, Steve."

---

Steve apologized, "Sorry, I just... I want to do everything I can to make you guys happy - all of you. I've lost one parent and know how much it hurts. I can't imagine losing both." He sighed. "Think he would ever go back to school if he could?"
"I don't know. Probably not," Becca said and got up to wash her plate too. "I think even if he was given the opportunity, he's sort of given up on that dream by now."

Steve sighed. He stood up and gave Becca a brief hug. "You're a good kid. I'm going to go check on your brother. Give a holler if you need anything." He headed into the bedroom and saw Bucky lying there. He gave him a sad look and went over. "Hey, Beautiful." He sat down and put a hand on his shoulder. "You are doing a good job, you know that, right?"

Bucky flopped his head into his pillow and mumbled something incoherently. He didn't much feel like he was doing a good job at the moment. He sat up suddenly and clung to Steve in a hug. "Today was such a normal day just going to the game and getting ice cream and it was fine. I should've just let it go that Lilly forged my signature."

Steve wrapped his arms around Bucky strongly. "You did what you thought was right," he reassured. "But, Baby, maybe it would be for the best you let some things go," he said. "I'm not saying to stop caring. But maybe try to not be the parent anymore," he said. "Big brothers can give guidance too."

"Big brothers don't have to constantly look after their little sisters. Big brothers don't end up with two dependents so suddenly. Big brothers get to be fun and I have to be my parents." Bucky balled a fist into Steve's shirt and shook a little. "I miss them so much, Steve," he said. "I wasn't even in town when they died. I didn't get to say goodbye."

Steve held Bucky tightly against his chest, wishing he could wash away all the grief. He kissed the top of his head. "Tell me about them," he prompted gently. "I've always wondered what they were like."

Bucky breathed in deeply and thought for a moment before deciding to talk. "Basically, they had the same personalities as Lilly and Becca. My mom was outgoing and loud and couldn't keep a secret and always running around and playing with us. My dad was quiet and reserved and wicked smart and hated being interrupted from a good book." Bucky paused. "Sometimes it hurts how much the girls are like them. And I hate saying that." He wiped a hand across his eyes as he concluded, "Guess I'm a bit of both my parents. I don't know."

Steve ran a hand over Bucky's chest and listened. He would interrupt once in a while by kissing his cheek but otherwise let Bucky talk. "They sound like they were wonderful," he said. "What was it like when they told you that you were going to have a little sister?"

---

"I cried," Bucky said. "At first I cried cause I thought it meant I was going to go to new parents, but they sorted that out quickly. Then I cried because I was excited about it. I was already nine and didn't have siblings yet so it was nice to finally have one."

---

Steve giggled a little when Bucky admitted that he thought he was getting new parents. He stroked his fingers through his hair and snuggled him some more. "You are such a good brother, Beautiful," Steve sighed. "Do you think your parents would have liked me?"

---

Bucky pulled their bodies down so Steve was lying on top of him. "They would have loved you. You're exactly their type of person - loyal, kind, generous, in love with me, funny, adorable, perfect, gentle, honest." Bucky kissed Steve in between each compliment and ran his hands down to hold Steve right on his lower back. "I love you, so they would have loved you, too."

---

Steve blushed deeply at the compliments and ducked his head into Bucky's neck. "A yes or no answer would have sufficed," he said shyly. He rubbed a hand up and down Bucky's side and asked cautiously, "What if we moved in together? I can be around more often and I'm barely at my place anymore as it is. It's smarter money-wise, too."

---

Bucky's eyes went wide and he smiled a surprised little grin. "Really? You want to..." He flipped them quickly so Steve was under him this time and he started sucking on his neck between saying, " Fucking yes, let's do it."

---

Steve was worried about moving too fast but... really, he wanted to go to sleep and wake up next to Bucky every day of his life. When Bucky got excited and flipped them over, Steve let out a giddy laugh and pulled Bucky down so their chests were pressed together.

---

Bucky stopped abruptly and sat up so he was straddling Steve. "Well... we will need the okay from the girls and you'd have to move in here instead of the other way around. Is that okay?"

---

"I'm so okay with that, Bucky. I wouldn't want the girls to have to deal with another move," Steve said. "I don't have much at my place and whatever doesn't fit, I can sell."
"Don't sell your shit." Bucky shook his head. "I'll just have to ditch some records. It'll be fine. Probably needed to clean out some of the ones I don't listen to anyway." Bucky was going to have to really think about which ones he needed to sell or donate to the shop but he would do it for Steve. What he was most worried about was getting the okay from the girls. It would have to be asked at just the right time and very carefully.

---

"If I want to keep it and there's no room, it can go to my mom's house," Steve said. He pet his fingers through Bucky’s hair lovingly. "We will figure it out. If the girls are okay with it, then we can go forward from there," he said with a big old grin. "I love you."

---

"I love you too, Steve," Bucky said and nuzzled Steve's cheek with his nose. "Now, I should probably go check on Lilly and get the girls to bed. Then I think you and I should have a shower together." Bucky bit Steve's lip playfully and then kissed him. "You can chill out anywhere you like. Here or the couch or kitchen. I'll just be a bit."

---

Steve nodded, perking up at the thought of getting to shower with his wonderful boyfriend. He leaned in to kiss Bucky one more time and waited for him patiently on the bed. He sent a little prayer in hope Lilly wouldn't give Bucky a hard time.

---

After twenty long minutes, Bucky returned to his room where Steve was still sitting on the bed holding a Barnes family photo album and gingerly flipping through the pages. "The girls are both in bed. Lilly's still pissed, Becca apologized for what she said." Bucky gently took the photo album from Steve's hands and put it back on his dresser. He didn't have the energy to deal with pictures of his parents at the moment.

---

Steve had been thoughtfully enjoying seeing the photographs of a young, carefree Bucky with his parents and giving his baby sisters kisses but he understood why Bucky put it away. "It will all pass," Steve said. "And things will get better." He reached out to take Bucky's hands in his. "I want you to think of something we can do together purely for you. When you think about it, let me know and we can make a day of it."

---

"Sure..." Bucky said and gave a slight smile. "I'll do my best to think of something good." He gave Steve's hands a little squeeze. "Now, I believe we have somewhere to be." Bucky pulled Steve up off the bed and towards the bathroom attached to Bucky's bedroom. He loved these quiet unrushed moments with Steve. He wanted so many more of them. Once they moved Steve in, he could have that.

---

Steve followed Bucky into the bathroom. Once inside, he slowly pulled Bucky's shirt off and pressed slow, open-mouthed kisses over his newly exposed chest. His hands moved down to undo the front of Bucky's pants and he slid those off as well.
Bucky was down to his briefs and socks as he pushed Steve against the wall and stuck his hands under his shirt as he kissed him. He pulled back then and stripped off the remainder of his clothes before tugging on Steve's and saying in a low voice, "Off." Steve was so perfect with the little embarrassed blush he got on his face. "You're so fucking cute."

Steve loved having someone be so interested in him. He had been so confident kissing Bucky but as soon as the man started to show an interest back, he got all bashful. He shrugged his shirt off and shyly started to undo his own pants.

Bucky slipped into the shower and watched Steve finish undressing quickly. "Water might be a little cold at first since Becca just showered, too." He warned and reached out for Steve's hand. He pulled Steve into the shower with him and turned on the water. There was a rush of cold and Bucky swore under his breath before it heated up to a comfortable temperature.

Steve shuddered and huddled close to Bucky when the rush of cold water hit him. "Fuuuuck," he cursed. He swatted lightly at Bucky's chest. "Why didn't you let me wait until it was warm, you big jerk?"

"Oh, you're a tough guy. You can handle it, punk," Bucky said and held Steve. "Feels nice now at least." Bucky reached for the soap in the slightly cramped shower and started rubbing it down Steve's chest and arms. The shower wasn't big enough for anything sexually adventurous but Bucky thought he might be able to give Steve a soapy hand job at least. He hadn't yet decided. They also could wait until they were back in bed and just do it then.

Even though the shower wasn't big enough to do much, Steve could at least suck little marks onto Bucky's neck, so he took the liberty of doing so. "Such a cruel boyfriend. Assuming I'm not sensitive just cause I've got muscle. Well, I've got news for you, Mister. Cause the strongest muscle is my heart," he teased.

"You're such a dweeb," Bucky breathed and kept soaping up Steve's body. "But you are very muscly. Like pretty damn muscular. Like I can't handle thinking about your body sometimes that's how muscly you are. You're so handsome. So fucking gorgeous and you're mine." Bucky got closer as he talked until he was rubbing a hand down to cup Steve's ass and Bucky's erection was pushing against his stomach.

Steve let out a laugh as Bucky admired him shamelessly. He shook his head and pressed their lips together. "You're a dork," he said fondly. Steve's hand trailed from Bucky's chest down to his dick and started to stroke his fingers over it. Steve didn't realize it but he was giving Bucky the biggest set of bedroom eyes.
Bucky hummed into the feeling of Steve's hand on him. God, he missed this. They hadn't really done anything since before the shooting incident. Bucky needed Steve. He needed to be all over him. "Wait, Steve," Bucky said and stopped his hand. "I want to come with you. You want to dry off and go to bed? We can pick this up there."

Steve made a little pout when Bucky stopped him but he sure as hell wasn’t going to complain about fooling around together. "I guess I can wait a few more minutes," he said dramatically, smirking to show he was kidding. "Hurry and wash up."

"Yes, Officer." Bucky obeyed and started quickly washing himself. When he went for the shampoo, he picked up the bottle and gently grabbed Steve's hand. He poured some shampoo into Steve's palm and then turned away from him. "You mind helping me out?" He asked low and quiet.

Steve smiled adoringly at Bucky and started to wash his hair, massaging his scalp and kissing his shoulders. "I love you so much. You've got no idea," he said in a dreamy voice. "Can't wait until the girls say that I can move in."

Bucky had never had anyone wash his hair like this. Anytime he cut it, he did it himself so he'd never even gone to a salon - too expensive. He loved the feeling of the massage Steve was giving him. "You sound pretty confident that they are going to agree to this, Steve."

"If they say no I'll find a way to convince them. Free puppies for life, all the cats they can fit in here, no homework ever," he joked. Steve nibbled affectionately at Bucky's ear. "I've got it all planned."

"Oh, yeah," Bucky laughed, "Sounds like a real good plan to let them have animals running around all over the place." Steve finished up with Bucky's hair and Bucky stood under the water to wash out all the soap before he turned off the stream and hugged Steve close just to feel his wet body on his before he got out and dried off.

Steve wrapped a towel around his own waist and then started to fuss with Bucky, carefully toweling his hair dry and dusting the droplets off his shoulders. He smiled and brushed his fingers down his spine before walking into the bedroom. "So are you going to touch me now or what?" Steve asked playfully in a rare show of confidence as he flopped back on the bed.

Bucky immediately felt desire for Steve well up inside him and he jumped on top of Steve gracefully so he was sitting with his ass on Steve's thighs and his legs on either side of Steve's chest. "You got to tell me what you want me to do. I need direction," Bucky growled lightly as he spoke. "Explain exactly what you need from me."

---

Steve smiled up at Bucky and ran his hands along his sides in appreciation. Bucky looked so good sitting on him, bare as the day he was born. "I want..." he paused to think. They could do anything. "I want to do everything," he said. "But tonight..." Steve blushed and pulled him down against his chest. "Can we make love to each other tonight?"

---

Bucky smiled slow and bit his lip. "Yes, of course," he said as he locked eyes with Steve. "I'd like nothing more." He brought a hand up to run a thumb across Steve's lips and cheeks. "Do you want to do me again like last time?" Wow, it surprised Bucky that they had only actually had sex once. "It's up to you how we do it. I'm fine either way."

---

Steve's eyes lit up and he kissed Bucky's fingertip when he ran it over his lips. He looked over at him and pulled the blankets over the both of them. "Would you like a turn on top?" He asked shyly. "I see the way you stare at my ass."

---

"Your ass is the stuff of dreams, Babe," Bucky said and nodded in agreement with himself. "I would love to be on top tonight but only if you are completely sure you want to. It's your first time like that and I don't want you rushing in if you aren't sure, okay?" Bucky let his fingers run comforting circles on Steve's skin. He knew that the first time being penetrated could be pretty nerve-wracking and Bucky didn't want Steve to be anxious.

---

Steve, admittedly, was a little tense. Especially because, when he'd been on top, Bucky had been so tight and that was after fucking most of Brooklyn. He drew Bucky in for a slow kiss and smiled sweetly at him. "I want to feel the same connection you did with me last time," he said. "And I want to give all of myself to you."

---

Bucky groaned and said, "I love you so fucking much, Steve. And if you are sure, I promise to be so gentle and open you up wide so it doesn't hurt at all." He started kissing down Steve's body and he moved under the blankets still talking between kisses as he got further and further down. "I'll make sure to lick you open and stretch you out so you'll be ready for me. I'll treat you so right, so good, just like you did for me."

---

Steve blushed deeply at the promises Bucky gave. It still felt a little taboo to him since he was a good Catholic boy who promised he'd save himself for marriage. It killed him that he couldn't marry Bucky if they wanted to, but he pushed that thought out of his head. "Lick me? Is that normal?" He asked dumbly, lifting up the blanket to watch Bucky.

---

Bucky was sucking a hickey into Steve's inner thigh when the blankets were lifted off of him. He pulled his head up and tucked his hair behind his ears. "Yes, licking is normal," Bucky said and pointed at the dresser. "Will you hand me that hair tie? And it's called rimming, Steve, or eating ass, eating someone out..." He trailed off and gently pushed Steve's legs apart. "I forgot you haven't watched porn. I shouldn't be surprised you don't know."

---

Bucky looked so damned good between his legs. Steve scrambled to grab Bucky a hair tie and reached down to give it to him. Steve's dick was already curled over his stomach, hard and aching. "Do they have books on this stuff?" He asked. "I don't think it's a sin to read a how-to." But he knew porn was a no-go for God.

---

Bucky speedily pulled his hair back on his head in a small looped bun. "Probably. Don't know," Bucky said. "I always just rented porn. I don't think God would mind you watching if it was purely for educational purposes." Bucky chuckled to himself and adjusted so he was rested his head against Steve's thigh. He palmed softly against Steve's hole and stared at it.

---

Steve snorted. "You don't even go to church, how would you know what God would mind? Besides, the only naked man I want to see is you." Steve shifted a little and spread his legs a bit more when he felt Bucky teasing his hole. He reached down to stroke his hand over Bucky's hair.

---

Instead of a snarky response back, Bucky moved his hand away and give a quick lick to Steve's hole once. He watched it clench up quickly at the feeling and he knew he was going to have to really coax Steve into relaxing enough to let him do what he needed before he could actually get inside him. Bucky wasn't intensely well endowed or anything, but the first time was going to feel pretty odd for Steve.

---

Steve made a quiet noise when Bucky licked over his hole. It felt weird, having something wet lave over him there. But all Steve had to do was close his eyes and imagined what Bucky must look like, face pressed against his ass and readying him to have sex. Once he did that, he felt himself relaxing a little more.

---

Steve surprised Bucky by letting himself relax enough for Bucky to start licking around him with purpose. He spent about two minutes just wetting his hole and getting Steve ready for his tongue to press in. When he did finally stick his tongue inside Steve, he went cautiously and listened intently for any indication from Steve to stop.

---

Bucky was being remarkably patient. He remembered when the roles were switched and he could barely wait to get Bucky opened up. By the time Bucky had chosen to push his tongue inside, Steve was dying for the man to make the next move. "Christ," he swore, digging his heels into the bed. He scratched his nails gently along the back of Bucky's neck. "Feels different," he said, his voice a little shaky from nervousness. "But good."
Bucky continued to move in and out of Steve with short thrusts of his tongue. After a bit of this, he ventured to stick a finger in and he pulled his mouth away so he could wiggle his first lubed finger in up to the knuckle. Bucky sucked more marks into Steve's inner thighs while he was quickly but gently working in a second finger next to the other one.

The first finger was uncomfortable but it didn't hurt. When Bucky started to work the second finger in, Steve's hand flew to hold onto his shoulder to get him to slow down but it was more out of fear of the unknown that he did that. Steve eased up and eventually let Bucky keep going. "Talk to me," Steve breathed out, touching the side of Bucky's face now that he was using his fingers more than his tongue.

"What do you want to hear?" Bucky asked and worked Steve opened much slower now. He hoped he hadn't hurt Steve at all. It was pretty surprising to feel fingers inside you like that. "I'll say anything you like. I can talk about how beautiful you are, or how much I love you, or what I'm going to do to you, or what life will be like once you move in."

Steve had a blush that went all the way down to his chest. He felt so overwhelmed by how much Bucky loved him and how perfectly they fit with one another. "Tell me about what our life will be like," he said. "I want to know if you're always so beautiful in the mornings."

"I'm definitely not a good sight in the mornings." Bucky laughed. "But, you'll see for yourself soon. And you'll get to be here with me for breakfast every day. And you can come home to me every night. And I'll learn how to dance so we can hold each other and listen to your records. And when we have the apartment to ourselves we can mess around anywhere we want. And this bed will be our bed and not just mine anymore. And this home will be our home. And you'll be mine and I'll be yours..." As Bucky spoke he managed to massage and scissor Steve open enough to comfortably get a third finger inside.

Steve was just the sort of idiot who loved talking about a future together more than dirty talk during sex. He was more excited than a man should be about having his address changed to share Bucky's and to make coffee for the both of them in the mornings. "Yes," he breathed out, writhing a little on the bed. "Buck, please. I'm so ready."

"You sure?" Bucky looked up at Steve with cautiously excited eyes. "I can keep fingering you open for a bit longer if you need it?" He added and kept pumping into Steve. Once day he would get his fist inside Steve and massage his prostate so he saw stars.

Steve nodded eagerly. "Wanna kiss you," he said. "I need you inside me. I'm ready for it," he insisted. Steve wanted Bucky to feel good and, god, Bucky had waited so long and was so good to him for not making him feel any sort of pressure to do this sooner.

---

Bucky nodded along with him and crawled back up so he could kiss Steve. He was sure he tasted like Steve's hole and he hoped he didn't mind. He broke off the kiss soon after he started and worked on lining his dick up with Steve's ass.

---

Steve didn't give a damn what Bucky tasted like. He kissed him hungrily and pulled him closer with a strong grip. "I love you," he breathed out. Steve bit his bottom lip nervously as he felt Bucky line the head of his cock against his hole.

---

One more nod from Steve was all Bucky needed before he was gingerly pushing inside and feeling the tight heat of Steve's ass pulling him in.

---

"Oh -" Steve gasped out. When Bucky pushed inside, Steve gripped his shoulders hard enough to bruise. "Oh my god, Bucky!"

---

"Too much?" Bucky asked hurriedly, "Does it hurt? I can stop." He didn't pull out of Steve but he didn't move at all either. He watched his face for any signs of pain and put his hand down on his hips for stability. Steve's fingernails were digging into his skin and he was going to be shocked if he didn't have marks for a few days afterward.

---

"No, don't stop," Steve said breathlessly. "You feel good." His nails dug into Bucky's back a little bit and he tried rocking his hips slightly. "Go easy please," he said. "But, please, keep going." Steve already felt so full.

---

Bucky nodded and started to ease out of Steve before easing back in. He vowed to make this a slow quiet fuck that just showed Steve how much he loved him. He wasn't going to go rough or fast. He was just going to take his time making love and loving Steve and thinking about their future and feeling his firm body underneath him and that tight hold around his dick.

---

All he could think about was Bucky. Steve felt so open and vulnerable with Bucky's dick spreading him wider than he'd ever been, but he loved the intense connection it formed. Steve looked up at Bucky with big, shining eyes. His lips remained parted, panting softly because Bucky had him so worked up even though he was being gentle. "You can go faster," he said softly. "I know you want to."

---

"Don't want to hurt you," Bucky breathed and watched his dick slide in and out of Steve. He liked watching it disappear and seeing his body tap against Steve's every time. He was glad they had waited this long. They waited a while for their first time and at that time Steve was already in love with Bucky. Now Bucky was in love with Steve, too, and it was just their second time. Bucky hadn't had many real relationships before and none as calculating and sweet as what he had with Steve.

---

Steve's body was coated in a thin layer of sweat. It hurt a little - he didn't expect it not to - but it felt so fucking amazing both physically and emotionally. He had his arms wrapped tightly around Bucky and every time Bucky pushed back in, Steve let out a quiet moan. When Bucky found just the right angle that hit his prostate, his whole body reacted and felt himself get closer and closer to orgasm. "Bucky," he moaned, kissing him messily. "I'm so close, Baby."

---

Bucky kissed Steve back and his movements stuttered as he did. "Come whenever you like, Babe," he said and licked down Steve's throat. "I want to see it all over you. Want to know I made it happen - that I helped you feel so good." Bucky felt like a whole different person with Steve. The other people he had fucked before were one night stands and rough bangs just to get off. With Steve, Bucky wasn't even concerned with whether he was going to come or not, he just wanted to satisfy his boyfriend.

---

Steve wished he could come up with the things that came out of Bucky's mouth. Within moments, he was seeing stars and he came messily over his stomach and chest. His muscles fluttered and clenched around Bucky's dick. Steve was still dazed and out of breath but he pulled Bucky in for a smothering kiss. "Wanna feel your come in me."

---

Bucky gasped through clenched teeth. "Oh, fuck, Steve, are you sure?" Bucky asked and he couldn't help that he sped up his thrusts just a little more. He tore his nails through his hair to pop the hair tie off. It flung across the room in the dark and he figured he wouldn't find it until the next time he cleaned. He just needed to feel his hair down on his shoulders while he fucked into Steve.

---

Watching Bucky let his hair down to fuck him was hotter than Steve ever would've imagined it being. He had to throw his arm over his face to cover his mouth as he cried out Bucky's name. He did his best to keep quiet, but he was sensitive after his orgasm and everything felt so fucking good. He wrapped his legs around Bucky's hips and used them to pull Bucky in closer after every thrust. "I'm all yours."

---

Bucky bit his lip hard as he came deep inside Steve. He felt hot streams of come spill out around his dick and line the walls inside his boyfriend. He lowered himself on top of Steve but didn't pull out yet. He just let himself relax on top of him and lick into his mouth after breathing out a quick, "Fucking love you."

---

Steve nearly got hard all over again just at the feeling of Bucky coming inside of him like that. He looked so good when he orgasmed and Steve loved that he was able to make him feel so good. He gave Bucky a happy, fucked-out smile and raked both hands through his hair. "That felt amazing."

"Love you," was all Bucky managed to say again. He pulled out of Steve and replaced his dick with his fingers inside Steve. He wanted to feel him wet with his come. Bucky moved his fingers around a bit before taking them out and laying next to Steve with one leg heaped over him protectively.

Steve thought Bucky was done when he pulled his dick out but was surprised and a little aroused by him fingering him one last time. He didn't even mind the feeling of the come and lube leaking down his thigh. He turned to face Bucky and he scratched his nails gently over the leg that was draped over him. "Someone's a protective bear right now," he teased, patting the leg. "Making sure no one else swipes me up while I'm vulnerable?"

"Making sure you don't up and leave me," Bucky said with eyes closed. Part of him was still used to the men he screwed getting up and getting out right after he finished. He knew that wasn't Steve but he was just a bit scarred from it still. "We need to talk to the girls as soon as we can. I need this to be your home as soon as possible."

Steve cupped the side of Bucky's face and kissed him slowly. "You're too important for me to let go." He tangled his fingers idly in Bucky's hair. "Do you think the girls wouldn't want me living here?" He asked.

"I think they will say yes but be a little annoyed. Then after they realize that none of their stuff or their rooms are going to be taken away or changed then they will warm up to it. Then eventually they will get used to you being here all the time and probably feel safer with a strong police officer around," Bucky said. "I know I feel safer with you here."

"What're you talking about, my first order of business is to move them into the living room and take both their rooms for myself," Steve joked and kissed Bucky's face all over, loving that he could do this. He looked deeply into Bucky's eyes and made a promise, "I'll keep all of you safe."
The day for Steve to move in finally came. Bucky had been waiting for about a week since they got the girls to agree to it. It really didn't take much for them to sign off on the whole thing. Bucky made a plea to them about his happiness and Steve suggested that if he paid the extra money on rent then they might be able to get an animal. Bucky wholeheartedly disagreed but the girls were already on board as he complained.

---

The only thing that wasn't clothes or art supplies that Steve brought over were a few records, some journals from his father and grandfather, and the plant his mom gave him. So moving in wasn't too long of a process for him. He couldn't help the big grin on his face as he set his box of belongings down. "Hey, Buck. I got some presents for you," he said as he held out a somewhat large bag. It had home stuff in it, like a welcome mat and a toothbrush holder that looked like a record player. Just some dumb household things that Bucky didn't have but it made the place more of a home.

---

"Why'd you get me things? You're the one moving in here. I should have gotten you a housewarming gift." Bucky kicked himself for not thinking of that sooner. But he took the bag anyway and started pulling things out of it.

---

"Because your house doesn't have useless house things," Steve answered. He didn't have them in his old place and now that he was moving in with his boyfriend, he wanted to have homey, little things.

---

The welcome mat was a nice surprise but Bucky didn't think it was necessary. The Barnes' didn't really welcome people into their home much. The toothbrush holder was really clever and cheesy and Bucky had to give Steve several open-mouthed, laughter-filled kisses when he found it.

---

Steve kissed Bucky back and smiled adoringly at him. Then after a few moments he took a deep breath, smiled at Steve, and said proudly, "Hey, I told my mom about us."

---

Bucky's eyes got wide and a long slow smile spread across his face. "I'm so happy you did. What'd she say?" Bucky knew, of course, that she knew already, but Steve might not know. He was glad they were both on the same page now. It was killing Bucky knowing that Steve's mother knew and Steve still assumed she didn't.

---

"She says she's happy that I found someone that I love," Steve said, smiling back at Bucky. "And that she expects you all to come over for Thanksgiving." Steve felt so lucky to have a supportive mom and that she was already welcoming them all into the family. "It feels good to talk about you to her."
"I'm really proud of you, Steve. That must have been difficult for you to do." Bucky started sifting through his boxes of records so he could rearrange them. He wanted to put Steve's on top so he could find them easily in Bucky's mess of a collection. He assessed the mountain of record crates and said, "You know what Becca told me the other day? She wants to get a piano. You know what I said? 'Where the fuck are we going to put it?'" Bucky huffed loudly.

Steve let out a laugh. "What about a keyboard?" He asked. "Let her figure out how she can fit it in her own room. Those things are small enough." He walked behind Bucky and put his hands on his hips. "We could always get rid of the record collection and put a baby grand right here," he joked.

Bucky pinched Steve and said, "I love you, but don't even joke about trashing my collection." He turned in Steve's arms to give him a kiss. "She might go for a keyboard. We can see." Then a thought occurred to Bucky. "Hey! You should come to the shop sometime and see it. You can meet Clint. You just can't arrest any of my coworkers."

"I promise I won't arrest anyone for their, uh... medicinal drugs," Steve said then gave Bucky a sad little look of concern. "But do they know you have a boyfriend?" He asked. Steve didn't know if he was completely out in the open with his coworkers or if they just didn't give a shit who Bucky was with.

"Clint knows because Clint is really good at getting secrets out of me and he is my best friend," Bucky said. "But, I'm pretty sure half my coworkers don't even know my name isn't actually 'Fucky' so, I'd be surprised if they even notice you come in." Bucky understood if Steve didn't want to come into the shop, though. He might be wary of people saying shit to him about being gay or whatever. Except, that Bucky really wanted Steve to see where he worked and he didn't even have to say anything about how he knows Bucky. He wanted his boyfriend to meet his best friend.

Steve just wouldn't introduce himself as Bucky's boyfriend unless it was to Clint in private, he decided. And he could tell that it was important to Bucky for him to see where he worked. "How about I surprise you at work one of these days?" he offered.

Bucky nodded, "A surprise works for me. Now, what do you want to do on your first day in your new place? You can teach me to dance or we can cook something or we can fuck or we can go for a walk or just be lazy. It's up to you. Becca and Lilly won't be home for another three hours."

"So many options. I wonder how much we can fit into those three hours," Steve said and nibbled at Bucky's neck. "I'd like to dance a little with you and then depending on how we feel, we can figure out which surface we want to screw on."
Bucky grinned like an idiot. "I like that plan." He walked over to the player and asked Steve which of his big band records he wanted. Steve came over and picked one out. Bucky watched him as he said, "I really like you being here. And I'm so happy you're going to be here with me every day."

Steve picked a slower song that had a little bounce so it would be easier to dance to but not boring. "I'm real happy too," he said with a big grin. "You make me feel on top of the world, Buck." He put Bucky's hand on his shoulder and his own hand on Bucky's waist. "I never would have thought I would have this - my own family."

"Barnes-Rogers or Rogers-Barnes?" Bucky asked and let Steve lead him in the dance. Bucky kept looking at his feet and Steve kept turning his chin back up to look at him instead.

"Rogers-Barnes because it sounds better," Steve said and grinned as he moved Bucky smoothly around the room. He really was so pleased to be here with Bucky.

"Rogers-Barnes," Bucky agreed with a smile and tried his best to keep looking at Steve and not the ground. "This is difficult," Bucky gritted out. "Club dancing is easier. Not so much stepping."

"It'll get easier. And it's more sophisticated than club dancing which is just clothed, standing sex," Steve said and held Bucky a little bit closer.

Bucky moved with Steve and it was getting progressively easier as he went. "Can I ask why you love dancing like this so much?" Not that Bucky didn't like dancing with Steve, but Bucky hadn't done slow dancing since he was at a middle school prom dancing with some girl and staring at the quarterback's ass. That poor girl probably had a shitty night.

"My ma said my dad was at his most romantic whenever he took her out to dance," Steve said. "I wanted to be able to make someone feel the same way my dad made my mom feel." He kissed the tip of Bucky's nose.

"Well, I don't know how romantic I'm really being since I can't do this properly," Bucky said apologetically. He vowed to practice with Steve enough so he could get better and be the perfect dancer for his perfect boyfriend. "I do love being this close to you, though," he added and rested his head on Steve's shoulder. "My big strong officer."

"You're giving it your best shot. That's enough of a romantic gesture for me," Steve said. He kissed him quickly before dipping him low and kissing him again. "You got to learn how to dance so you can dance with your sisters on their wedding days."

---

Bucky giggled at the quick dip and the rush of blood that went to his head. However, when Steve mentioned his sisters’ weddings, he shook his head with wide eyes. "No way. They aren't getting married. They aren't growing up. I won't dance or have to walk them down the aisle. They are going to be my baby sisters forever." Bucky was semi-joking but also sort of being real. He was pretty bummed out whenever he thought about his sisters growing up and being adults and leaving him. He was more like a parent than he realized.

---

Steve chuckled at Bucky. "Don't worry, Beautiful. I'll bring my gun home to scare off any boys or girls who want to take them away," he teased. "You really are such a dad," he said, slipping his hand up Bucky's shirt. "And you're so good to them. But remember you still got to pick that thing you want to do so you can have a day to be you."

---

Bucky groaned. "Oh, Babe, I don't know what I want. My life is just the girls and you and music and work - in that order. I can't think of anything at all." He felt as Steve's hand made it's way all the way up his abs to his chest and he was rubbing over a nipple. Bucky's shirt was pulled up by Steve's arm and he got goose bumps all over his exposed skin.

---

Steve lightly pinched Bucky's nipple because he knew he was sensitive there. "I'm going to find something for you," he said in a determined tone. "A whole day dedicated to treating you. Remember the museum? You had so much fun doing your own thing that day. All I did was follow you from exhibit to exhibit."

---

"I loved that day. The adrenaline rush and kitten nonsense, aside, of course," Bucky said and started teasing his fingers on Steve's belt. "I have sort of an idea but I don't know if it would even be possible." He kept one hand tucked in between Steve's belt and his pants and the other hand took residence in one of Steve's back pockets.

---

Steve got close and couldn't help brushing his hips against Bucky's while they slow danced. "Oh yeah?" He asked, and then leaned down to kiss him sweetly. "Tell me what it is."

---

"What if we went on a fishing trip?" Bucky said timidly. "We could rent a cabin and stay for a few days. Just do some fishing and swimming." Bucky bit his lip. "But I don't know because you'd have to get days off work. And who would watch the girls? And I don't even know if you like fishing or cabins or being out of the city," Bucky rattled off anxiously and huffed.
Bucky was so fucking adorable when he got all shy like that. Steve cupped the sides of Bucky's face and drew him in for a slow kiss. "I'll make it happen," he promised. "As soon as it gets warm again, we can spend an extended weekend together upstate. My mom can watch the girls." Steve wasn't a huge fan of the outdoors but he wasn't going to say it to Bucky if this was what he wanted.

---

"Steve..." Bucky started in protest but decided to let it go. "Is it okay? We don't have to." There was only really one reason why he thought about it. "My father used to take me on fishing trips when I was a kid. We would go for a few days at a time and just spend quality time at the lake. He liked the quiet and the air. He got to just relax and read for a while every day. I know that if he were still here he'd want to take the two of us with him sometime. I was thinking we could go for him."

---

Steve was now surer than ever that he would take Bucky out for a fishing trip. "Oh, Buck," he said, his face softening into a sympathetic and loving look. "I couldn't imagine a better way to spend a few days away with you." He kissed his forehead and gave him a smile. "Where did you guys used to go?"

---

"Well, we went to Seneca but that's too far away for us to go," Bucky said. "I won't be able to go very far away from the girls. I'll worry way too much." The record had stopped playing and they were just standing there holding each other in the living room. Bucky was getting antsy and he really wanted Steve's body all over his.

---

Steve wasn't going to argue with Bucky over it, but he was determined to find a way to have Bucky go to the same spot that he went to with his dad. Maybe he could find another place nearby that his mom could stay at with the girls so Bucky wouldn't worry. She had retired early anyway and wouldn't mind helping out. He smiled when he saw how antsy Bucky was. So he leaned in to nibble on the shell of his ear. "Where do you want to fuck?" He asked.

---

"Jesus, I love when you swear, Steve. It's so hot and it makes me feel like you're picking up on my habits and I love that." Bucky was rocking his body against Steve's and holding him close at the same time. "I don't care where. I just want you inside me this time. Want you to christen your new home by coming in my ass."

---

"I know you like it," Steve said with a grin. "And you really are a bad influence on me," he added teasingly before picking Bucky up like he weighed nothing. He carried Bucky to the bedroom only so he could grab the lube and then brought him into the kitchen and set him down on the counter. "I'm the boss in the kitchen now," he said with a cocky grin as he unbuttoned Bucky's pants.

---

"Yes, Sir," Bucky said eagerly as he watched Steve work his pants off. "Does that mean no more pancakes and cereal for dinner?" He slipped his shirt off and let it fall to the ground beside Steve. They would clean up everything later before the girls got back anyway.
"Only when I allow it," Steve said. He wouldn't really be a dictator over dinner but he figured he may as well be a little authoritative just so Bucky could see him be at least a bit assertive. He knew Bucky liked that. Steve kissed down Bucky's neck and chest and tugged Bucky's nipple lightly between his teeth with a little growl.

"Fuuueeking hell, Steve," Bucky gasped out and wrapped his legs around Steve's waist. "You're wearing too many clothes. I want them off." He cock was already getting hard and his heart was racing like a high schooler getting kissed for the first time. Every sexual encounter with Steve was exciting and surprising for Bucky.

Steve's hand smoothed down Bucky's side and he grabbed a handful of his ass. He loved making love with Bucky, but he also was starting to understand that a little bit of mindless sex wouldn't hurt either. It felt good to take what Bucky wanted to give instead of pussyfooting around it. He shed his shirt and he worked his pants off so he was standing naked in front of him. "Better?"

Bucky nodded and bit his lip. God, Steve was gorgeous. He was so cut and built and hard and it felt so good having his body pressed against his own. "Now, open up my ass and fuck me raw," Bucky demanded and spread his legs wide. He tugged on his dick a few times before leaving it alone in favor of lasting to come while Steve was balls deep inside him.

As confident as he looked showing himself off to Bucky, Steve still got a bit shy when Bucky demanded to be fucked. But, god, Steve wanted it and couldn't say no with his boyfriend spreading his legs for him. Steve tugged him off the counter and spun him around so he was bent over it with his bare ass exposed. Steve dove right down, spreading his ass cheeks with his hands so he could lick a stripe up from Bucky's balls to his hole. He swirled his tongue around the ring of muscle before thrusting it inside.

"Okay, yes, fuck!" Bucky gasped out in surprise. He wasn't expecting Steve to rim him. It was a nice surprise, of course, but he still wasn't ready for the feeling. "Just work your tongue for a bit and then start adding fingers." Bucky guided Steve since he knew he'd never done this particular act before. "If you don't like it you can stop and just go for fingers and lube."

Steve knew how good rimming felt, so he was eager to return the favor for Bucky. Hearing him approve of it made Steve decidedly happy. "Hey, Babe?" Steve purred, biting Bucky's ass gently. "Unless it's to moan or shout my name, you shouldn't be saying anything," he said with a cocky, little grin. Bucky was definitely rubbing off on him. Steve took his time working Bucky's ass open with his tongue. When he had his hole wet enough, he pushed one finger inside of him and started to thrust it in and out.
Bucky couldn't manage any words back to Steve so he shut up and let him work. He was getting more and more impatient by the time the first finger was inside him. He rocked back on it as Steve fucked it into him. He'd never done it in a kitchen but he sure as hell liked it so far.

---

Steve pushed a second finger inside of him and spread him apart so he could stick his tongue back inside and lick him deeper. He couldn't help but let out a little moan, so aroused by the fact that Bucky would willingly give everything up to him. Steve couldn't handle waiting anymore and he pulled his fingers out so he could coat them liberally with lube and spread it over his dick. "Are you ready for me, Buck?" He asked gently.

---

"Yes, always," Bucky said urgently and started pumping himself again. "Want to feel you slide in my tight ass and split me open. I want to feel you now that I'm all yours and no one else gets to feel what I feel and no one else gets to love you like I do." Bucky wasn't quite sure when his dirty talk started to meld with gooey love declarations, but it was probably somewhere around the second time they made love together.

---

As much as Bucky influenced Steve, Steve was also pleased to hear that he was starting to make Bucky out to be almost as big a sap as he was. Steve laid his chest over Bucky's back and kissed the shell of his ear. "You always know what to say, Beautiful." He rested his cheek on Bucky's shoulder and slowly guided himself inside of him. Steve let out a low moan, having nearly forgotten how good Bucky felt around his cock. His hips stuttered forward, snapping up automatically so he was balls deep inside of him.

---

Bucky let out a slight wince at the quick draw into his ass. It only hurt for a second, though, and then he was encouraging Steve to move quickly after he pushed in. Bucky did feel stretched and kept thinking how this was the perfect way to welcome Steve to his official new home for the first time. "Steve, Baby," Bucky whimpered out, "I love you so much. Welcome home."

---

Steve noticed the wince and felt bad for rushing it. He made sure to give Bucky time to adjust and he slowly rubbed a hand over the small of his back to help ease him. He looked down, admiring Bucky from his ass to his face. "We are going to have such a good life together, Buck." He kissed right between his shoulders. "Every day is going to be better because I get to wake up next to you."

---

"You're such a dweeb." Bucky chuckled and rolled his hips back. He ran his fingers through his hair and held it in a ponytail. He forgot to grab a hair tie and his hair was flopping in his face. He decided to give up on it and just let it fall where it wanted to as Steve started to pull out to thrust back in.

---

Steve noticed Bucky try and put his hair up but he had no hair tie. Steve had gotten into the habit of keeping one on his wrist for the times Bucky forgot one or the one he had snapped, so he reached out to gently pull Bucky's hair back and tie it up. He then put his hands on Bucky's hips and started to fuck him slow and deep, working his way up to a faster pace.
Bucky didn't have time to thank Steve before he was fucking him in such a good way that he didn't want to interrupt with words. He would just mention to Steve later how much he liked that Steve was prepared with whatever Bucky needed. There were two hands on his hips and a warm dick inside him and Bucky felt so safe and secure and loved.

Steve let himself get a little lost in how fucking amazing Bucky felt. His ass gripped his dick and the friction was electrifying. One of these days he had to stay home and just fuck him on and off all day. But after a few minutes, Steve realized he hadn't been considering Bucky's pleasure all that much and he was quick to wrap his hand around Bucky's cock and stroke it in time with his thrusts. "Want to feel you come, Baby."

Steve was lasting a lot longer than the first time and Bucky was impressed and pleased. His body made a jolting movement when Steve wrapped his hand around his dick. It felt great having the stimulation inside and outside of his body. "Come with me, Steve," Bucky said. "Come deep inside me, please. Want to feel it leaking out."

Steve moaned low in response. He picked up his pace, trying to hit Bucky's prostate, and bit down on his shoulder when he felt his orgasm rip through him. He rode it out, erratically pushing his hips into him and shoving his come deeper into Bucky's body.

Bucky was already on the edge but when Steve bit him hard on the shoulder his come exploded from his dick and coated Steve's fingers and shot a bit onto the counter. He quickly grabbed behind him to hold Steve's ass so he wouldn't pull out. Bucky basked in the afterglow of his orgasm and clenched his muscles around Steve a few times to feel the come slipping between the two of them.

Steve made a soft, aroused noise when Bucky held him and kept him inside him as his muscles worked around his dick. "Fucking Christ," he swore, groaning as he saw the come leak out around his dick. "You look so good, Baby."

Bucky reached back and rubbed around his hole before standing straight. Steve pulled out as he went and Bucky handed him some paper towels to clean himself up. "I'll be right back. Got to go to the bathroom and clean up," Bucky said and took short strides towards his room. Even though he could still count on one hand how many times they had fucked, Bucky loved every one of them.

Steve watched Bucky with a happy smile as he retreated to the bathroom. He cleaned himself up and got dressed before he obsessively cleaned the countertop where they'd just fucked so no one would know. He couldn't stop smiling because this was his life now.
Bucky went to the bathroom and stared at himself in the mirror for a while. He looked like he'd just gotten fucked for sure. The girls would be home in about another hour or so. He started wiping himself clean with his towel and sticking an end inside his ass to soak up Steve's come. His fingers were super sticky so he washed them thoroughly before going to his closet to get a new set of clothes on. He pulled on a pair of jeans and looked through his sweaters. Nothing really intrigued him to wear so he looked in the box of Steve's tops that they hadn't unpacked yet and found a dark red Henley that he decided was warm enough to wear.

---

Steve washed his hands and combed his fingers through his hair so he was at least somewhat presentable. He went over to check on Bucky and smirked when he saw him in his sweater. "I move in for not even an hour and you're stealing my clothes."

---

Bucky tucked his hands into his armpits because they were pretty cold. "Here, wear one of mine," he said and scanned over his closet again. He found a nice grey and black striped sweater that was a bit loose on him so it should fit Steve nicely. He tossed it to him and said, "I should probably pick up my clothes from the kitchen floor."

---

Steve put the sweater on and shook his head with a laugh as it pulled across his chest. It fit but didn't have much room to spare. "You probably should. Wouldn't want to give the girls a reason to kick me out."

---

Bucky quickly went to the kitchen and swiped his clothes off the ground. He dumped them in the laundry and went back to Steve. "What do you want to do now? If you want us to have a good home cooked meal for your first night then I guess we should start preparing it so we can put it in the oven when the girls get home."

---

"Sounds perfect to me," Steve agreed. "I've been thinking about making some baked potatoes and grilled chicken for a little while," Steve added after a moment of thought. He kissed Bucky's cheek and hurried off to cook.

---

"You want my help?" Bucky followed him to the kitchen. "Or am I allowed to lay on the couch, listen to The Clash, and watch you cook?" Bucky sort of hoped for the latter but he wouldn't mind helping Steve out. "Kind of want to stare at your ass while you bounce around your new kitchen. It'll probably be adorable."

---

"I love it when you call this my home. My kitchen..." Steve turned and kissed the tip of Bucky's nose. "But it'll sound even nicer if you call it 'our home' and 'our kitchen'. Now go put on your music and enjoy the view, hot stuff."
Bucky picked an album and started it playing. He flopped on the couch on his back and folded his arms over his chest. "You look really good wearing my sweater, by the way," Bucky said and stared at the way it pulled tight across Steve's chest and arms. "You also look really good in our kitchen." Bucky emphasized 'our' and smiled at Steve.

---

Steve beamed at Bucky and nodded. "It's nice to share everything - even our clothes," he said. Steve started to prepare and season the chicken with whatever little herbs he could find. "I'm so happy, Bucky," he said. "I knew you were someone special right from the start."

---

Bucky blushed a little. "Shut up," he said with a grin and tugged the hair tie from his head. He ran his fingers through his hair and mused, "I was thinking about cutting my hair. I like it long but it's also sort of a nuisance at times. Not sure yet. What do you think?" He made eye contact with Steve when he swiveled around sharply and stared at him. "What?"

---

Steve had a hard time believing that Bucky was going to actually cut his hair. "But you love your long hair." Steve kind of liked it long, too. But it was Bucky's hair and Steve didn't want him altering himself for his sake. "But I think you're going to look very hot either way."

---

"I mean, I haven't decided yet," Bucky said and twisted a chunk of hair around his finger. "But I do really like it like this." He hummed to himself. He wasn't going to cut it. There was no way he would be able to work up the nerve. He had had it that long since he stopped cutting it when his parents died and he left college. Since then he just trimmed it up occasionally so it stayed near his shoulders.

---

"What am I going to grab on to when I'm fucking you from behind?" Steve joked. He cut a slit into the potatoes and put them into the oven to start baking. "Even if you regret cutting it, it'll grow back soon enough anyway. What'll it take? Three months?"

---

Bucky moaned low. "Dammit, Steve. Well, I guess that's that. I can't cut it. I like the thought of you pulling it too much." Bucky squirmed a little on the couch and took in Steve's taught ass when he bent down to the oven. "Guess I'll just chop off the dead ends and call that good." Bucky checked his watch. "Becca's going to be happy you cooked this. She loves potatoes. Lilly will complain but eat the chicken anyway. They should be here soon."

---

"You should have let me know that. I would have picked up more potatoes," Steve said. "What is Lilly's favorite food that isn't pizza?" He could bake a pizza but he had a feeling she preferred a pizzeria to homemade stuff.

---

"Who fucking knows..." Bucky chuckled, "That girl complains about anything home cooked you put in front of her. I'd say she complains the least about spaghetti, though. Mom used to make us something homemade and then just have some hot dogs for Lilly. We would be eating something delicious like lasagna and there's Lilly with some mac and cheese."

"That's adorable," Steve said with a dumb smile. "She's a pain in the ass sometimes but I love it," he added. "Well, if she wants mac and cheese while we have some amazing food, then so be it. Or spaghetti. I don't care. I just want to make her happy."

Bucky got up and moved to the kitchen table to sit. "You don't have to make her happy, you know that, right? I'm the only one you actually have to make happy." Bucky smiled a cheeky grin at Steve.
"I'm the one that counts. She can eat the chicken and be perfectly fine." He put his chin in his hands and watched Steve. "How'd you learn to cook anyway?"

"Yes, I know. But when they're happy, you're happy. So I'm going to make your sisters happy too." Steve paused his cooking so he could kiss the corner of Bucky's mouth. "And you really think a single mom would let her son be lazy and not be able to cook for himself?"

Bucky shrugged, "I'm betting some moms aren't as great as yours. The girls love her, by the way.
Becca thinks the world of her. Told me that she was inspiring. Inspiring for what, I don't know."
Bucky yawned. How could he be tired already? It was a bit of a big day but they still had a lot of it left.

Steve couldn't stop grinning when Bucky complimented his mom. "I love her," he said fondly.
"She's always been amazing. And she loves your sisters, too. She'll be happy to know that they find her inspiring." He turned back to cooking and let out a happy sigh. "I know she's not a replacement for your parents, but I know she will treat them like her own."

"Steve, I know I said it before, but I'm so proud of you for talking with your mom about us," Bucky said and got up to clean off and set the table. "I'm glad she gets to know and be on board with this.
And I think it was really good for you, too." He paused to think, "Do you think you'll tell anyone else?" Bucky expected the answer to be a flat no. Steve had already made it clear how careful they had to be. Some people would probably start to notice, though, now that his address is changed and his roommates are all one family. You don't just move in with a family for no reason.

Steve smiled happily when Bucky insisted that he was proud of him. He felt good to make Bucky proud and it felt good that he could call his mom at the end of the day and gush about his wonderful boyfriend but he wasn't sure about telling anyone else. "I don't know," he said. "I don't think I should. It's one thing for my mom to know. I just can't let others know."

Bucky nodded solemnly. "Right, I understand." Maybe it was because he couldn't tell his parents about Steve or because he loved him so much that he wanted everyone to know, but he was just a little disappointed. "Well, I mean, at least it's easy to keep track of who all does know. I can count them on one hand."

---

Steve paused and then said, "You can tell Clint." Clint was someone who had no connection to anyone Steve knew besides Bucky and it was someone Bucky was around often enough and it must be hard for him not to talk about his boyfriend to his best friend. "Since I'll be visiting anyway."

---

Bucky smiled shyly. "Sounds like a good idea. When you visit I'll introduce you as my boyfriend to Clint." Just then there was a rattle at the door indicating one of the girls used their keys to get in. Lilly flung open the door and it slammed against the wall. Becca winced at the noise and followed in after, automatically causing an ironically loud argument between them about Lilly needing to learn how to be quiet.
Steve was absolutely loving his life with Bucky. Every night he would call his mom and gush about his boyfriend. There were plenty of times at work where he nearly talked about Bucky when the others spoke about their wives and girlfriends. He held back then but one day he decided to come out about it. His heart pounded and, god, he was scared, but when one of his coworkers asked why he moved out of the apartment, Steve was honest. He clocked out early and rushed back home to let Bucky know.

---

"Hello, my handsome officer!" Bucky called from the couch when Steve opened the door. Bucky got up and meandered over to give Steve an open mouthed kiss. "Lilly is at practice and Becca is studying with some friends." Bucky traced lines on Steve's shoulders with his fingers. "How was work, Baby?"

---

Bucky was so sweet and loving but Steve was still a little distracted. He was shaking a little and when Bucky asked how work was, he blurted out, "I told my coworkers - about us," he said and held Bucky's hand nervously. "Nobody... nobody got angry with me."

---

Bucky pulled back with furrowed brows. "Excuse me?" He said in surprise. "You told... what, Steve? I thought you weren't going to. I thought you were scared you'd lose your job." Bucky placed a comforting hand on Steve's cheek. "Tell me what happened. How are you feeling?" Bucky knew he was rambling and being a bit hovy but he also knew that this was huge for Steve and he might be a little shell-shocked at the moment.

---

Steve rubbed at his face and felt his eyes well up with tears. "I couldn't hold it back anymore. I couldn't stand being quiet while everyone else got to talk about their wives and their relationships. I love you, Bucky. You are the light of my life and it hurt too much to keep it inside." He wiped his eyes. "I'm just scared someone won't be okay with it."

---

"Hey, hey," Bucky said quickly and gave his best hopeful smile. He wiped Steve's cheeks of the tears that had fallen there. "I love you so much, Steve. And I'm beyond amazed and proud of you every single day and especially right now." He led Steve to the couch and sat him down. Bucky straddled his lap and held Steve's face in his hands to kiss him. "I won't let anyone hurt you. You're mine and no one can take you away. You did a good, brave thing today, Steve. Do you believe me?"

---

Steve leaned into Bucky and tried to smile at him but it came out a little pained. "Natasha’s response was pretty good. She tried to make things lighter since it was a little tense. She said it was just like a gay guy to make a dramatic scene.”
"Bit of a stereotype, but it seems like a benign response so I'll take it." Bucky kissed Steve again and leaned their foreheads together. "How are you feeling? Do you need anything?" Bucky held Steve close to him and tried to be as safe and secure as Steve needed him to be at the moment. "You know I love you, right? And even if someone gets pissy about it, that isn't going to change how I feel about you."

---

"I feel guilty for not letting you tell anyone but Clint and then I went and blabbed to all of my precinct," Steve admitted and put his hands in Bucky's shirt and looked up at him. "You are so amazing, Bucky," he said. He kissed his cheek gently. "I wouldn't have been able to do this without you."

---

"Don't beat yourself up about that, Steve," Bucky said and followed one of Steve's hands with his own to hold over his heart. "The only other person I know in this city is Clint so there really isn't anyone else I could tell even if I wanted to." He wasn't sure how much that would help Steve feel better but he at least tried. "Did your chief say anything to you about it?"

---

Steve shook his head. "I wrote him a letter explaining what happened today and left it on his desk. He was out sick today and I wanted him to hear it from me before anyone else. So... I guess I'll find out tomorrow if I still have a job or not."

---

"Steve..." Bucky sighed and rested against him. "If you do lose your job, it will be okay." He didn't know that for sure. "You'll find another job." There wasn't any guarantee for that. "We are going to be just fine." For all Bucky knew, they could be beaten in an alley the next time they went out. Then who would take the girls? "You've got me and the girls and your mom and that's all that matters."

---

"It won't be okay," Steve said. "I can't be a burden on you," he said. "I'll find a job, but it won't be okay." He knew what sort of danger this could be. As a cop, it would be so easy to get hurt on the job and have them make it look like an accident. "Can we not talk about it anymore until I know if we are safe or not?"

---

Bucky gave Steve a pained, concerned smile. "Sure, let's not discuss it any more right now. How about we just make some sandwiches and eat them in bed together. I have some whiskey hidden around here if you want a drink." Bucky had more like four bottles of whiskey, several six packs of beer, and one bottle of vodka. Bucky had a bit of a problem but he would never admit to it. "Then we can watch some TV or read or something until we need to sleep."

---

Steve nodded his head. "That sounds like a good idea. I would love to get a little tipsy with you. Maybe even jerk each other off a little cause I really need to relax," Steve admitted. He picked Bucky up as he stood and carried him over to the kitchen.
Bucky loved it when Steve picked him up like that. It made him feel like a rag doll in his strong arms. "We have turkey, cheese, ham, mayonnaise, tomatoes, lettuce, I think some roast beef," Bucky said as Steve let him down. "What should I make for you? Also, the whiskey is in the laundry room in the cabinet behind the detergent. The girls don't do laundry ever so they'd never find it."

---

Steve went to find the whiskey and chuckled at the stash behind the detergent. He had only seen Bucky drink a few times but sometimes when he came home from work, Bucky smelled pretty heavily of booze. But that wasn’t on his mind at the moment. He brought the bottle back to Bucky and hugged him from behind with it in his hand. “Found it.”

---

Bucky started on Steve's sandwich and decided to make himself the same thing. When Steve came back with the bottle he grinned and had him pour some into his mouth. A bit slopped on his cheek but Steve was quick to lick it off. "So sandwiches and whiskey, then jerking each other off, then TV?" Bucky asked as he finished up Steve's sandwich and handed it to him.

---

"That would be perfect, Buck." Steve picked up the sandwich and took a bite from it. "Love you, Beautiful," he said appreciatively. Steve was beyond grateful for such a wonderful, thoughtful, caring boyfriend. "Let’s go."

---

As the laid in bed and ate their food, Bucky made sure to rub his leg against Steve's a lot. He hoped it would start getting him worked up so they could start the sexy stuff as soon as they were done. "I know you said you wanted to relax and so you suggested jerking each other off..." Bucky invaded Steve's space a little and said in a low growl, "But I was thinking instead maybe I could fuck you so deep and hard that you forget all about it." He leaned back again and waved his hand vaguely. "Of course, that's just a suggestion."

---

Bucky rubbing his leg against Steve’s was doing wonders. Steve was already half hard in anticipation that he already couldn't wait to finish his sandwich and get a little drunker. But when he suggested fucking him, Steve's head turned. There wasn't even any thought needed. "God, please do."

---

Bucky nodded slowly and took a long drink from the bottle. "Take your time with your sandwich. I'll still be here." He drank a bit more and handed the bottle back to Steve. "Always right here for you," he added and smoothed out the wrinkles on Steve's pants. "Do you still like it here, Steve? With us? You're not missing your old apartment or anything?"

---

Once he had the bottle back, Steve took a deep drink from it. It was very rare that he wasn't sober but he figured he had a good reason to drink today. "I love it here," he said. "I don't miss my old place for a second. Sure, it was nice. But this place is more of a home to me than that one ever was."
Bucky, having finished his sandwich, hugged Steve's legs so his head was resting in his lap. "Good. I want you to be so happy here," Bucky pinched Steve's thigh gently. "Do you want to see what else I have hiding in this apartment?" He asked with a sensual edge to his tone.

---

Steve finished his sandwich and pet his fingers through Bucky's hair. He looked down at him with a curious expression. "What're you going do, Barnes, seduce me with your record collection?"

---

"Pardon you, but that collection is sexier than both of us combined," Bucky joked and stood up from the bed. "But, no, I have something a bit better for this situation." Bucky opened his closet doors and stood on his toes to reach up to the highest shelf. He pulled out a dark navy blanket and unfolded it. His back was to Steve so he couldn't see what Bucky was hiding until he took the object in one hand and turned around swiftly. Bucky was standing there biting his lip in a grin and showing off a large smooth black dildo.

---

Steve craned his neck to try and see what Bucky had but he didn't catch a glimpse of it until Bucky brandished it for him to see. His eyes went wide and his face turned red in embarrassment. "Bucky!" He scolded, "What're you doing with that in your room?" He looked around as if he was making sure no one else could see what Bucky had. "Why would I even use that when I have you?"

---

Bucky set the dildo on the bed and started undressing himself. "Oh, that's not for you Steve." He unbuttoned his shirt. "That's for me." His pants were on the ground. "I'm gonna sit on that and then you're gonna sit on me and ride me until I come up inside you. Then I'll pull out and if you want you can take the toy out and come inside me while I'm open."

---

Steve knew that Bucky was trying to be sexy and introduce new things, which he really was fine with, in all honesty. However, Steve wasn't a huge fan of the dildo. "But… I want to be the only thing inside of you," he said stubbornly.

---

Bucky pouted, "Steve, you can't detach your dick and fuck me while I fuck you," he complained, standing naked at the foot of the bed. He refrained from stroking himself but his dick was pointing out towards Steve in a highly accusatory way so he tried to redirect it to point as something else.

---

"Well, if you want something in you then how about you just ride me instead," Steve bargained. He reached over to wrap an arm around Bucky's waist and pull him back into bed. "Come on, Baby," Steve just liked the thought of being the only ones to penetrate each other. "I don’t want to use it."

---

Bucky growled in defeat. "Are you going to make me throw out my dildo?" He massaged Steve's chest and made as best an angry face as he could.
"No, that'll be a waste," Steve said. "Turn it into a hat rack or a hair tie holder." He started to undress and hoped he hadn't hurt Bucky's feelings or turned him off from sex at the moment.

"You aren't much fun, Rogers. It's a good thing you're cute." Bucky hovered over Steve's erection but didn't touch. "I guess it's up to you who fucks who but I figured if you wanted to relax I could just do all the work."

"If you're the one riding me, you're pretty much doing all the work," Steve said. "And fucking you is pretty relaxing for me."

"You're a little punk, Steve," Bucky said in retort and then glanced at the dildo again, "I'll just hide it back in the closet before I decide if I'm going to keep it and toss you or toss it and keep you." Bucky sat up and started stroking himself and Steve at the same time. He was a little off-balance and both his hands were occupied. "Decide - you or me. Who gets it up the ass?"

Steve gave Bucky an apologetic smile. He didn't want him to get rid of anything that was his just because Steve didn't like it. Steve let out a little moan when Bucky started to stroke him. "You do this time," he said. "But I promise next time I'll let you fuck me."

"Okay, but I'm going to be a pillow princess and make you do all the work. It'll help relieve your tension," Bucky said and flopped back on the bed. He gracefully kicked the dildo off the mattress so Steve wouldn't have to touch it. Bucky was going to just keep it in the closet and just not use it. He couldn't get rid of Phillip. They had been through so much together.

Steve snorted and got on top of Bucky and rolled his hips. "You are such a brat," he said fondly. He grabbed the lube from the nightstand and coated his fingers with it before reaching between Bucky's legs. "It's one of the reasons why I love you." He teased Bucky's hole with one finger, not pushing in yet.

"Hey, Steve," Bucky started with a bold tone, "to make this faster you can just go ahead and start with two fingers. I can take it. Feels pretty good to have the little stretch and burn too." He wanted to really feel it this time and he wanted to get on with it so Steve could wreck him and get some relief too.

Steve's mouth went dry at the suggestion and he nodded. He leaned down and started biting lightly at his neck as he eased two fingers inside him. "Is that good, Baby?" He watched Bucky's face carefully as he pushed in a third right away.
"Yes, fuck, yeah, that feels great," Bucky breathed and squirmed down on the fingers. "Feels really good. Move a little more, please," he requested urgently. "One of these days I'm going to have you fist me before you fuck me." Bucky's eyes were closed tight and he concentrated on his breathing as Steve fucked in and out of him with his fingers.

Steve moved his hand quickly, aroused as all hell by the slick noises being made as he fucked Bucky open with his fingers. "Christ, you can fit a whole hand in?" He looked down at Bucky's hole as it easily took three of his fingers. He spread them as wide as he could inside of Bucky and watched his reaction. "Do you like being stretched wide?"

"It's one of my favorite things." Bucky agreed. "I love being filled up. Feels somehow secure and grounding. I'll bet you'll love getting your fist inside me, too." Bucky bit his lip and rolled his head to the side. "I'll make sure to show you a lot of new things, Baby."

Steve poured a little more lube around Bucky's hole and licked his lips when it became easier to move inside and out of his boyfriend. He pushed his pinky inside, now spreading him wide with four fingers. "I want to see it now," he said thickly. "I want to make you come with my fist and then fuck you deep."

"Yes, Sir!" Bucky said excitedly and adjusted so Steve had even better access. "Go a little slower with that fourth one - really take time to stretch me, okay?" Bucky guided him again and hoped Steve wouldn't be embarrassed or anything. Bucky just didn't want it to hurt and he had been with a couple guys who got overzealous about it. Steve was different from them, though.

Steve was excited to give Bucky what he wanted but he knew better than to go too fast. He remembered how sweet Bucky had been taking his time to open him up. "I got you, Baby," he promised. He kissed his stomach down to his dick and licked the length of Bucky's cock as he eased his four fingers in and out, twisting his hand a little with every thrust.

Bucky gasped at the stimulation in his ass and dick. "You're so good to me, Steve. I love you so much." He breathed out and pulled his knees up. "I can't wait to wake up to you every morning." Bucky wanted to watch Steve so he leaned forward and piled the pillows up so he could relax and still see what was happening.

Steve wanted desperately to fuck his boyfriend, but it was just as satisfying to watch him get taken apart slowly. He looked down as Bucky's hole took all four fingers readily. He kept that up for a few minutes, just easing his hole open like that. But when he was sure Bucky could take more, he began to add his thumb with the rest of his fingers.
Bucky moaned out loudly and stared at Steve. "You're getting really good with your fingers, Steve. Better and better all the time." He paused and felt Steve trying to move inside him more. After a bit, he flicked over Bucky's prostate and Bucky jolted his hips up. "Do that again. Hit it harder."

Bucky looked so good all riled up and wanting more. He kept his hand at that angle and started working it in deeper, moaning softly as he watched his hand start to disappear more and more into Bucky's ass while his longest fingers kept jabbing into Bucky's prostate. "God, look at you. You're amazing."

Bucky couldn't speak at all anymore and willed his leaking dick to hold out for a long while so he could feel every thrust against him. Bucky wasn't sure how deep inside him Steve was but he could feel him getting further little by little. His prostate was so sensitive and his dick was sticking up about to shoot come.

Steve watched his entire hand breach Bucky's asshole, staring in amazement as he pulled it out to his fingertips only to push back in past his wrist. "God, my entire hand is inside of you, Buck." He curled his fingers so he would massage Bucky's prostate. "Let me feel you come."

Bucky's vision blurred when Steve pulled out only to shove back in again. A couple seconds longer of Steve working his prostate had Bucky arching up off the bed. He came hard and fast with a loud shout of "Fuck, Steve!" and his come landed all over his stomach and abs. He flopped back on the bed and rolled his eyes back. He had to stay still after the shock to his system. That was definitely the hardest he had come in a long fucking time.

Steve kept moving his hand unrelentingly, wanting to see Bucky make a mess of himself. And, god, it was so worth it. Steve moaned low at the sight of him arching off the bed and the feeling of his muscles spasming around his wrist. Steve gingerly pulled out and kissed his thighs. "You look so good. Are you okay?"

All Bucky could do was nod quickly and run a finger through his come. He held the finger up to Steve so he could feed it to him. He let out a shaky breath and moaned a little. "That was fucking fantastic, Babe," he said finally, "Give me a minute then you can fuck me into next week."

Steve licked the come off of Bucky's finger with a soft hum of approval. "I never would have thought you could fit so much inside of you. Makes me feel less bad about shoving my dick in you when you can take a whole hand."
"Was that fun for you?" Bucky asked a bit shyly. "Cause it was for me. Haven't come that hard in probably about a year." He sat up and stuck his hand over his hole. It was covered in lube and all ready for whenever Steve wanted to fuck him. Bucky got on all fours and stuck has ass out for Steve. "This is a better position for you to rail me."

---

Steve grabbed some tissues from the nightstand and cleaned off his hand, which was a slick and sticky mess. "I'm a little floored," he said, eyes glued on Bucky's ass. "The best foreplay I could get, to be honest." Steve got behind Bucky and leaned over to kiss between his shoulders. "Ready for round two?"

---

Bucky nodded and wiggled. "Yep, I'm good to go." He reached back and spread his ass for Steve. It was gaping open and ready to take him. Bucky was sure Steve wasn't going to last very long after all this. Bucky had noticed how hard Steve was while he was fisting him. "Do what you need to do to me," Bucky said in a low growl with heavy eyelids.

---

God, it was so fucking sexy to have Bucky on all fours, holding himself open for him. Steve couldn't wait any longer and he pushed himself inside easily. "Fuck," he swore, hips moving quick and hard, so thankful that Bucky was open and ready because it would've taken a lot of willpower to go easy.

---

Bucky steadied his hands on the bed as Steve went fast and rough. He was still fucked out from his orgasm and couldn't help Steve out. He just held himself balanced on the bed and let Steve go at it. Bucky laid his head down on the pillows after a bit so he was entirely relaxed. He felt bad for not really participating but he was so worn out and Steve didn't seem to mind.

---

Even though Bucky was beat, Steve did his best to make it good for him. He reached down and played with his balls and angled his hips to make Bucky most comfortable. "I'm so close, Buck- I'm gonna-" his orgasm ripped through him and he grabbed Bucky's hip tightly and slammed him back on his dick so he could push his come as deep as he could.

---

Bucky choked out a moan and rocked back on Steve. He held his head up and cried out again. Steve pulled out and laid next to him and Bucky curled up in his arms. "How do you feel, now? I'm tired as fuck. We might have time to nap before the girls come home."

---

Steve held Bucky tightly in his arms and kissed his face over and over again. "I feel so much better, Baby. All thanks to you," he said. He sighed happily and tucked Bucky's face against his chest. "What did I do to deserve such a wonderful boyfriend, huh?"

---

Bucky shrugged. "Don’t know.” He asked himself the same question all the time. How did he, Bucky Barnes, manage to land the most perfect man he had ever met in his life? Bucky smiled over at Steve and squeezed him tight for a second and said with a laugh, “I certainly am amazing.”
Steve's chief had responded the next day by calling him into his office. The long story short was that he didn't give a damn about what he did in his spare time so long as he wasn't too flamboyant about it and didn't let it affect his work. Steve considered that a win. Things were good for a week after that - his coworkers were supportive or were trying their best to come to terms with it, which he was fine with. But one day, he didn't come home. Bucky's phone rang about an hour after Steve was supposed to show up and Sarah was on the other end.

"What happened?" Bucky said urgently. He could already tell that something was wrong. It was in the way she had said 'James, it's Sarah.' It was the feeling he had in his gut all day - that tight energy building each second he hadn't heard from Steve. It was in the way Becca looked at him earlier and told him he looked nervous. He knew something had happened before it even did.

"Steve was hurt on the job today," Sarah said in a tone that suggested Steve had been hurt worse than a mere broken bone. "I just got the call from the precinct... they're... they're prepping him for surgery now." It was clear she was trying to keep as calm as possible.

"Surgery on what? Where is he? Which hospital? Brooklyn General or Mount Sinai?" Bucky picked up the telephone receiver and moved as far as the cord would let him to tug on his shoes and coat. After Sarah told him which hospital he said thanks and hung up. He turned to his sisters on the couch "Steve got hurt. He's at Brooklyn General. Are you two okay by yourself until I get back?"

"How hurt is he?" Becca asked, keeping calm even though she was afraid for both Bucky and Steve. Lilly instantly stood up and frowned. "Did Steve get shot?" She asked, looking visibly upset. She'd been bratty at him the last time she saw him and was afraid that she wouldn't get to fix that.

"I don't know if he's shot or what happened. All I know is he is going in for surgery and I need to be there when he wakes up." Bucky kept his voice steady and calm for his sisters but inside he was dying with worry. "If you need me, call the hospital. Don't open the door to anyone and don't leave. There is still some soup that Steve made in the fridge you can heat up. I'll call you later after I see him." Bucky hugged both his sisters quickly and told them he loved them before heading out the door and locking it firmly behind him.

Lilly's bottom lip quivered but neither of the girls fought Bucky about leaving. When Bucky got to the hospital, Steve was already in surgery. Sarah got up from her chair and pulled Bucky into a tight hug, crying quietly on his shoulder. It had been hard holding herself together. "Steve was shot," she said. "The bullet is lodged next to his spine. They don't know the extent of the damage until after surgery."
Bucky held her close and clenched his jaw. "Do we know how it happened?" He gritted out. "Will he be able to walk? Where's his chief? Where's a nurse?" Bucky wanted to shake someone and yell at them. He needed to know exactly what was going on. He needed to be right there for Steve. Bucky felt like this was somehow his fault.

"I am a nurse, Bucky," she said, rubbing his back gently. She obviously wasn't Steve's nurse, but she knew how these things went. "And the best thing you can do for him is sit here with me. Look," she said, going over to the chairs where a file was with his x-rays that she had been given. "Here," she said as she gave it to him. "The bullet didn't penetrate any organs," she said. "He could make a full recovery if all goes right. But where the bullet is stuck can potentially paralyze him."

Bucky gasped and touched the x-ray gently like it was actually Steve. "I need to know who did this," he said and turned to sit down clumsily in a chair. "I promised him. I promised Steve I wouldn't let anyone hurt him. Now he's been shot in the fucking back and I can't do shit to help him except sit and wait and worry."

"Oh, Bucky..." she took one of his hands and held it in her own. "He was breaking up a trafficking ring. He was shot by a criminal, there's no way any of us could have prevented that." There wasn't any hint of foul play yet - not until Steve woke up.

Because he wasn't family, Bucky wasn't allowed in Steve's room until they got verbal consent from him. His mother promised that she would get a nurse the second Steve woke up so they could have him approve Bucky. Once all that was over, he rushed over to Steve and clutched his outstretched hand. "Steve, my god, Baby, I was so fucking worried."

Steve had been put in a medically induced coma for a day so any internal bleeding wouldn't happen. The following evening he finally woke up dazed and disoriented. When his mom got Bucky, he reached out to hold his hand but Steve's grip wasn't as strong as it normally was. "I'm sorry," he apologized, voice rough. "I...I don't know how things got that bad. I was supposed to have backup."

Bucky kissed Steve's hand gently and shook his head, "What do you mean? You didn't have another officer with you?" He pulled up the chair so he could sit close to Steve. Sarah was sitting across from him on the other side of Steve's bed and looking on at them with kind, concerned eyes.

"I did. Brock was with me and he was going to take the west entrance while I entered the east," Steve said. "Is he okay? Was he hurt?"

Sarah shook her head. "You were the only one shot."
Steve was relieved, then confused, and then he got a hurt look on his face and shook his head a little. "Buck, can you help me to a phone?"

---

"Steve, I don't think that's a good idea. You need to stay here and rest," Bucky said with a knit brow. "I can call someone if you need me to. I need to call the girls anyway so I can do that for you first." Bucky offered but Steve didn't look very pleased with the suggestion. Bucky waited for an answer.

---

Steve was quiet for a moment and he wiped a tear from his eye. His mom came over and tucked the blankets around him and brushed her fingers through his hair. It was automatic for her to comfort him even though Bucky was there. "Can you ask Chief Fury to come down? And can the girls come visit?"

---

Bucky bit his lip pensively and nodded. "I'll call the station right now. Then I'll go pick up the girls, okay? They will be glad to see you. I'll be back very soon." He kissed the top of Steve's head and smiled cautiously at him trying not to cry as well. "I love you, okay? You got to know that, yeah?"

---

Steve closed his eyes when Bucky kissed him and he gave Bucky a little smile so his boyfriend wouldn't look so sad. "I know you do. There ain't a day that passes that I don't know that." He rested his cheek against the pillow, feeling a bit tired and worn.

---

It took Bucky a lot longer than he would have liked to get on the phone with Steve's chief and then go get the girls. By the time they got back to the hospital together, Steve's mother was waiting out in the hall and Chief Fury was inside Steve's room talking with him. Lilly and Becca ran to Sarah and gave her a big hug but Bucky was curious about what they were discussing that Sarah needed to be out in the hall.

---

Sarah didn't like getting left out of the room but she allowed it to happen because Steve asked her to. She hugged both of the girls tightly and kissed the top of their heads. "Aren't you two a sight for sore eyes?" Fury left the room a few minutes later. He looked between Bucky and his sisters before nodding once at them and walking out.

---

Bucky didn't like the look Fury gave them but there was nothing he could do about it and the next thing he knew, Lilly was barging into Steve's room and yelling about how she was so sorry she was rude to him last time she saw him. The other three followed in after her and Bucky took in Lilly's pleaded eyes and Steve's soft chuckle at her. "Lilly, give him some space."

---

The hospital room had been too serene and quiet. Steve didn't realize how dependent he'd gotten on the constant chaos and noise in his new home. "Hey, hey. It's okay. You don't think I can ever stay mad at you, can I?" He gave Lilly a weak hug and pet the top of her head. "The doctors say I can go home in a few of days. But I can't work for a while."

---

"How long is a while?" Bucky asked nervously and took the seat by Steve again. "I can ask Clint if I can have some time off to take care of you at home." Bucky wrapped his hands around Steve's and glanced at Becca as she pulled another chair up next to Bucky to sit in. She quietly said hello to Steve and gave a weak shy smile.

---

"Hey, Becs," Steve said with a tired smile. He felt truly loved to have his entire family around for him. He looked back to Bucky and said, "At least two months. Fury says he's processing the paperwork so I get disability pay. Hopefully, it kicks in before my savings run out. And you don't got to take time off for my sake."

---

"Disability?" Bucky asked. "Does that mean you won't be able to go back in the field when you get better? Or is it just a precautionary thing?" Bucky wanted to get Steve alone for a few minutes. He wanted to kiss him a lot and ask what he talked to Fury about.

---

"It's too early to tell," Steve said. "I have to start a physical therapy program as soon as I am discharged. They'll know more as time goes by." Steve looked like he was handling the news well but that was probably because he was determined to make a full recovery. "Guess I'll just be around the house more often."

---

"Okay, and we will do whatever we need to help you." Bucky nodded to the girls who agreed enthusiastically back. He checked the time and noticed it was around time for dinner. He reached into his pocket and pulled out his wallet. Handing some money to Becca he said, "How about you ask Mrs. Rogers very nicely if she will take you both to the cafeteria to get some dinner?"

---

Becca took the money and Lilly scoffed at it. "As if Mrs. Rogers would take our money for anything. I call keeping the change!" Sarah smiled at them and ushered them out, knowing that Bucky wanted some alone time. Steve moved nervously on the mattress, knowing Bucky would want some answers.

---

Bucky just stared at him for a few seconds before he broke down. "God, Steve, how did this happen?" Tears started welling up in his eyes. "I'm so fucking glad you're alive. When your mom called me I..." He went to worst-case scenario because that what he always did. "I thought I lost you too."

---

Steve's lip quivered and he pulled Bucky into a light hug, unable to move much and unable to withstand much pressure on his torso. "I'm so sorry, Bucky. I swear... I fucking swear I would never go into danger without taking the proper precautions. I've done this type of bust so many times and it
"What happened?" Bucky pushed and locked eyes with Steve. "What did you talk to Fury about? I know something went wrong. I can tell. Please, you have to tell me." He felt a tear fall down his face and he ignored it as it made its merry way down his chin and neck.

Steve looked away, a little reluctant to respond but he couldn't hide anything from Bucky. He stiffly reached out to dry the trail left behind by the tear. "I think Brock abandoned me in there so I would get hurt," he said quietly. "I hope I'm wrong, but I can't think of any other reason why he'd leave so suddenly."

Bucky's eyelids fluttered in anger and he held his mouth open in a quiet snarl. "Who is Brock? Your partner on the force? Is that what you told Fury? Is he going to do something about it?" Bucky didn't realize he was shaking until Steve clamped a hand on his shoulder to try to stop him. "Goddammit," he spit out in anger at this whole thing.

Steve could see Bucky getting angry and he didn't blame him. Steve probably would've been livid if he wasn't so thankful that he was alive right now. "Buck, I need you to keep calm, please," he said. "Fury says he'll do an internal investigation." But anyone who knew cops knew that an internal investigation usually meant nothing.

Bucky didn't even try to stop the tears this time. He just let them fall and he shook and held Steve. "I'll fucking kill him," Bucky growled. He didn't mean it, of course, but he was already convinced this was no accident and someone had to be held accountable for what happened. He could have permanently paralyzed Steve.

"Hey, Baby, it's alright," Steve reassured softly. He rubbed Bucky's back and gave him a sympathetic look. "I've been thinking about this all day. And, you know, maybe it's a sign from God that this happened. I don't know what it means, yet. But maybe this is a blessing." It was a cruel injustice, but Steve was the sort of man to try and find the best in things.

That just flared Bucky up even more. "A sign from God?" He asked incredulously. "And what the fuck is God trying to tell you? And don't give me any of that anti-gay church shit." He didn't mean to take his anger out on Steve but he honestly couldn't handle anything at the moment. His emotions were all heightened and Bucky's brain was itching for a fight.

Steve winced when Bucky snapped at him. He looked hurt and offended that Bucky didn't believe in Steve's faith that there could be some good that could come from this. "Maybe that coming out was a mistake," he said, "and that the world isn't ready for us to be open. So this was a warning before something worse could have happened." Which, to Steve, was merciful because God wanted him alive. "Or maybe he wanted me to be home for the girls if they needed my help when I otherwise would've been at work. Or maybe he wanted to remind me that I have a family at home now and I can't ever think myself invincible on the job."

---

Bucky clenched his teeth together. "I like the last two much better than the first," he said in bitterly. He wasn't quite done with putting up a fight. "What if it isn't a sign from God? What if it's just that some prick you work with decided to make it convenient for you to get hurt or killed just because he doesn't like you anymore?"

---

"God could be working through that one prick I work with," Steve said tensely. His heart rate monitor was beeping a little quicker but not dangerously fast. "Regardless, I will ask for a transfer if that's the case. I'd rather be alive with my family working at another precinct than risk it to prove a point to some jerk."

---

Bucky heard the monitor and flicked his gaze up at it. He conceded with a sharp nod and said, "Guess you're right," just because he didn't want a nurse barging in wondering why his monitor was screaming at her that there was a problem.

---

"Of course I'm right. That's why I got the badge. I'm always right," Steve said it in such a stubborn way it was ridiculous but he also would've given in to Bucky at some point because he didn't have it in him to argue today. He kissed his cheek softly. "I'm sorry I upset you."

---

Bucky closed his eyes and melted into Steve. "It's my fault. I have no right to argue with you while you're like this. You didn't do anything wrong. You're just trying to be positive. Which is more than I can do. All I want to do is find that Brock asshole and beat the shit out of him."

---

Steve pet his fingers through Bucky's hair. "Do you want to know what makes me the angriest about all this? The poor guy lost his wife and kid in a car accident a few years back. I went over there every day for a month to cook him dinner and do his shopping until he was back on his feet."

---

Bucky pulled a remorseful, upset face. "Car crash," he said and let out a humorless laugh. "That's how my parents died, too." Bucky stood up. "I'm sorry, Steve, I got to..." He shoved a thumb towards the door. "I'll be back soon." He left without another word.

---

Steve looked apologetically at Bucky when he explained that his parents died the same way. He hadn't gotten Bucky to tell him much about how they died until now. He felt so fucking useless not being able to help or follow Bucky out when he left. So he just put a hand over his bullet wound and closed his eyes with a defeated sigh, hoping Bucky would return to him soon.
The evening shift was starting to clock out for the day and the graveyard shift was taking over when Bucky came ripping through the building angrily demanding to see Rumlow. "Hey, Asshole!" Natasha yelled at him. "You got a problem with one of our men, you can stand in line and file a formal complaint with our administrative office." She clearly didn't know who Bucky was.

---

Bucky twitched and shouted back across the room. "Where the fuck is he? He put Steve in the hospital! Steve could have died, dammit!" Bucky's fists were clenched at his sides and his whole body was shaking furiously. He looked the woman up and down and tried to decide if he would try to push past her if she tried to stop him or if he would let it go or have to fight her too. He hoped he wouldn't have to fight her off too.

---

Natasha paused for a moment before a look of realization dawned on her. "You're Steve's boyfriend," she said. There had been rumors about what happened when Brock came back from his case early and Steve got shot but nobody thought too much of it. "Stop making a scene and come in here," she said, nodding at an empty interrogation room.

---

Bucky grumbled but followed her anyway. He wanted to make a scene. Everyone should know what happened - what that piece of shit did. "I want him prosecuted," Bucky said flatly once the door was closed. "Or at the very least I want his badge."

---

"There's this thing called ‘due process’," Natasha said. "You can't go throwing accusations about a goddamn police officer letting another officer get injured on the field." She crossed her arms and asked, "Does Steve believe that there's foul play?"

---

"Yes, he does," Bucky pressured but stopped. "He also doesn't know I'm here." He rubbed his face. "I don't even know what my plan was in coming here. I thought about fighting Rumlow or yelling at Chief Fury or asking for Steve to be transferred or something." He looked at the woman and sighed, holding out a hand, "I'm sorry. I'm Bucky, by the way. I'm usually more pleasant than this but my boyfriend's just been shot."
"Listen. Fury may not be the cuddliest man on the planet, but he's the first black chief in this precinct. You think he'd tolerate his officers turning on each other?" Natasha shook her head. "If there's something up, he will sniff it out." She extended her hand to shake Bucky's. "Natasha," she greeted. "Is Steve doing alright? I've been at work since I heard the news that he was shot. I planned to come by the hospital as soon as I'm done here."

---

Bucky sighed, "He's okay. He is awake and on a lot of medication for the pain. They said he should be able to make a good recovery. There was a potential of paralysis but that looks unlikely now." He pocketed his hands in his jacket. "I'm sorry for yelling and being a dick just now. I'm sure that's a great first impression of Steve's boyfriend... I should probably get back to him."

---

Natasha gave him a teasing smile. "It's fine. The gays are known for being dramatic anyway," She said it in a way that was light so Bucky would know she was just trying to be a dick back at him and didn't actually have a problem with his sexuality. "Give him my regards. I'll visit soon."

---

Back at the hospital, Bucky trudged up the stairs to Steve's room and thought about what to say about running off. He felt really bad for just leaving and not saying anything. But he knew Steve would try to stop him if he knew he was going to the station. The girls and Sarah were all back with Steve and eating dinner. Everyone got quiet when Bucky entered the room and said nervously, "Hey."

---

Steve was trying to nap in the room when Bucky returned and Lilly was munching on dinner while sitting on the edge of his bed. "Steve talks in his sleep, do you know that?" Lilly said loudly. "I had a whole conversation with him and everything."

"I'm still awake," Steve mumbled.

"See?" Lilly pointed out.

---

Bucky rolled his eyes and pulled her gently from the edge of Steve's bed. "I think you are being too loud for him to actually get to sleep, Lil." Bucky sat back down by Becca and she handed him a packaged box of hospital food. "Thanks, Becs," he said as he opened it to eat. He didn't realize how hungry he actually was. He hadn't eaten anything since he got to the hospital the night before.

---

Steve peeked an eye open at Bucky and smiled lazily over at him. He looked happier now that he was back. "Where did you go, Baby?" He asked, reaching one hand out for him. Sarah already claimed Steve's other hand.

---

Bucky took it, abandoning his box of food for a moment. "Uh..." he shifted uncomfortably in his seat. "The - the station," he offered with a nervous edge to his voice. He added a nod for good measure and tried not looking at Steve. He didn't want to see the disappointment or confusion that was bound to be in his face.

---

"Bucky!" Steve scolded, his eyes snapping open. He frowned at him and he would've sat up if he could. "What did you do? Who did you talk to?" Sarah rubbed Steve's shoulder to calm him down.

---

Bucky looked to Sarah and the girls quickly and asked Steve in a low voice, "Can we talk about it in private later, maybe?" He rubbed Steve's hand with his thumb but Steve's pulled it back with a frown and knit brows. Obviously, Bucky wasn't going to get out of this very easily.

---

Steve wasn't happy that Bucky went to the precinct. Not just because he didn't want to rock the boat but also because he didn't want Bucky getting attacked or arrested because they knew who's boyfriend he was. "Fine."

---

Bucky sat back in his chair and felt shame and anger at himself welling up inside him. "I'm sorry, Steve," he stuttered out and stared at his lap. "I don't know what I was doing. It was stupid and I fucked up." He scanned the other faces in the room. Lilly and Becca were wide-eyed watching and Sarah was listening with her eyes averted respectfully. Guess they were doing this now after all. "I met Natasha. She sends her regards. Said she'll be over to visit sometime."

---

"I don't want you to be sorry, Buck. I want you to not do something rash like that again," Steve said calmly but with a clipped edge. He hated seeing Bucky upset and he understood that he'd been hurt but he also made a stupid decision. "Did Natasha say anything smart to you?"

---

Bucky nodded, "Yeah, called me a dramatic gay." He chuckled. "I'd be offended if I hadn't proven her right." He gripped Steve's hand again. "I'm a really spontaneous stupid ass sometimes, Steve. And I'll refrain from getting involved at the precinct from now on."

---

"I don't know if it's safe there anymore," Steve said in a soft tone. "I don't want you to get hurt, too, Baby."

Lilly pounded her fist into her palm. "I'll kick their ass for you. They can't beat up a little girl. The papers would go nuts!"

---

Bucky tackled Lilly in a hug and gave her a noogie. "You're going to beat up a police officer, huh? Take him out with your lacrosse stick?" He laughed and tickled her. Then he sighed and said, "I'm thinking the two of you should probably get back home. You have school in the morning."

---

Steve smiled up at the two of them and then looked over to his mom as if to say 'See how amazing they are?" He motioned for Becca and Lilly to give him a hug and kiss. "I'll be home soon, okay?"

---

Becca was incredibly gentle but Lilly was a little too rough with her hug. Bucky stood and said, "Baby, I'll be right back. I got to get them to bed and then I'll be back while they are asleep then I'll see them off to school in the morning." It wasn't going to be a very comfortable night for Bucky. He would just be sitting by Steve's side and watching the clock so he wasn't late to take the girls to school. He had already called Clint to get another day off so he was good to be here all day the next day.

---

Steve really wanted Bucky's company so he didn't even put up a fight about Bucky going so far out of his way. His mom stayed and chattered with Steve until Bucky returned. At that point, she gave both Steve and Bucky a hug and kiss goodbye so they could be alone.

---

Bucky kissed Steve slowly and then sat back in his chair. He locked eyes with him and held his hand over his heart. It still wasn't quite real to Bucky that Steve was here in the hospital. He figured he would open his eyes and it would just be a bad dream. He thought the same thing when his parents died. "Steve, I'm so sorry, again."

---

Steve put his hand over Bucky's and looked up into his eyes. "I know you meant well, Buck. I can't get mad at you for that. You just have to be smarter about your anger. You could have gotten hurt today and then what would we do?"

---

"I would have been in a hospital bed with you and no one would have been there to take care of the girls." Bucky sighed.

---

Steve brought Bucky's hand to his mouth so he could kiss the back of it. "My mom would have taken care of the girls. But she also would have swat you half to death with a newspaper for being dumb."

---

"See? I promise I can think through things when I'm not angry. It's just I wanted to get him back so badly. I love you so much and I went a little crazy. You make me really fucking crazy," Bucky said and bit his lip thinking about what he would have done had he met Rumlow. It wouldn't have been good.

---

Steve smiled when Bucky insisted how much he loved him. "I kind of noticed," he said with a smile. "You are so good to me, Bucky. I'm sorry you're stuck in a hospital with me right now."
"I'm just sorry you're in the hospital and not back home with me," Bucky said. He knew Steve would eventually be fine and be able to go back to work but it was still scary and he was in such pain right now. "How are you feeling? Can I get you anything?"

---

"I feel like I've been shot," Steve huffed, pouting a little. He was good with handling pain even though everything hurt right now, but he didn't like to be sick or injured. "Giving me another kiss will make me feel better," he suggested. "And let's switch jobs," Steve joked. "You can carry the gun and I'll deal with the stoners."

---

"Yes, I'm sure all the stoners will take kindly to a cop around and the precinct would definitely hire a long-haired gay hippie," Bucky joked back and gave Steve another gentle but meaningful kiss. He was so worried he was going to hurt Steve more if he was even the slightest bit rougher.

---

"It's a flawless plan," Steve snickered and made a soft sound into the kiss. He wrapped an arm around Bucky and sighed. "Think we can find a way to make you fit in this bed with me?" he asked.

---

"No," Bucky said sternly. "I don't want to hurt you more. I want you to heal as fast as you can." He checked Steve's morphine drip and the bottle of clean water they had brought for him. "Do you want some water, Steve? Need me to get a nurse for you before you fall asleep?"

---

Steve got a kicked puppy look when Bucky refused to get into the bed. He understood why, but it still hurt a little. He wanted to snuggle with him. "No, it's okay," he murmured. "I guess we just have to do our best to make ourselves comfortable for the night," he sighed.
"Steve's coming home today!" Bucky shouted in the apartment making Becca jump at the outburst. "Steve's coming home!" Sarah was bringing Steve over at any time and Bucky was readying the apartment to be as danger-free as possible. He knew it wasn't like bringing a baby home from the hospital but he still wanted to be extra safe with him.

---

Steve didn't realize how much stairs sucked until he was recovering from a bullet in the back. Sarah opened the door for him and Steve arrived on crutches with a big old smile. "There's my favorite family," he said happily as he walked through the door. "You guys cleaned up!"

---

"Steve!" Lilly shouted and went over to give him a soft hug.

Bucky followed quickly and kissed Steve's face all over. "I'm so fucking happy to have you back home." He said, "Here, come sit down. I'll make us all some food. Or at least I will try my best to." Bucky scampered over to the couch to grab a blanket and he draped it around Steve as he sat down at the table.

---

"Hey, you guys," Steve greeted happily. He kissed the top of Lilly's head and then stopped Bucky to get another kiss. He grinned brightly over at his mom, who looked pleased that Steve had such a good home life here.

"I'll make dinner," Sarah offered, not so subtly hinting that she didn't believe Bucky was the best cook.

---

Bucky held up his hands in surrender. He wasn't going to argue with anyone who wanted to cook for him today, especially Sarah. "Becs, will you play one of Steve's records?" Bucky asked and ushered for her to come over once she was done. "His is the box right on top."

---

Lilly didn't complain about Steve's music for once. Steve reached out for Bucky's hand and pulled him in close. "Hey, Love," he murmured softly. "Looking forward to having me home all the time now? I can try to spoil you more."
"Yeah, right." Bucky chuckled. "You're going to be sitting and recovering and not doing anything strenuous and I'm the one spoiling you now." He kissed Steve again and whispered low in his ear so no one could hear, "That means no sex or anything for a while, too."

---

Steve whined softly. "This is the worst thing about being shot," he complained. "Not even a little." he fell quiet when Lilly came over to sit with them.

"Bucky, can I stay home from school to take care of Steve?" She asked.

---

Bucky grabbed Lilly and held her in his lap. "No. You have to go to school. I don't even get to stay home from work to take care of Steve. Unfortunately, he may be here on his own a lot sometimes." Bucky leaned his chin on Lilly's shoulder and watched Sarah cook dinner. "Besides I think Steve would agree that you need to focus on your academics a bit more anyway."

---

"But what if Steve gets lonely and sad? Or if he needs help?" She protested.

Steve smiled and tugged on a lock of her hair. "I'll be fine, Kiddo. My mom can come over to help and Bucky's right. You need to be more diligent with your academics."

---

Lilly rolled her eyes and huffed. "Whatever. Like I said, I'm going to be a professional women's soccer player. I don't need science or math or English or history or anything."

Bucky's eyes went wide. "Are you failing all of those classes?" He shook his head. "Never mind, we will talk about that later. Now's not the time." He looked to Sarah. She already had to see Steve and Bucky fight at the hospital not long ago. She didn't need to see Bucky fight his sister too.

---

Sarah made everyone a full plate of food once dinner was ready. She gave Lilly a look and said, "Don't you want to know the history of soccer? Or learn science to figure out the best way to kick a ball? What about math so you don't get put in jail for accidentally misfiling your taxes?"

---

Lilly went to her own seat next to Becca and became engrossed in discussing the history of soccer with Sarah. She was already highly versed in that particular matter. Bucky laced his fingers with Steve's and started eating his food with his non-dominant hand. He wasn't getting much food in his mouth but he wanted to be touching Steve.

---

Every few bites, Steve would offer a forkful of food for Bucky to eat from to help him out. Once dinner was over, Sarah cleaned up and insisted on making lunch for the girls for school the next day. "What time do you have work tomorrow, Buck?" Steve asked.

---

"I've got close shift again," Bucky said and grumbled. "So I'll be here for the morning but I'm leaving around three." He really hated the close shift. It meant he wouldn't see the girls back home safe and he wouldn't be back in until after one in the morning. "I can ask Clint if I can close up early."

---

"You don't have to worry about closing up early, Baby. I can handle waiting until you get back. Maybe the girls and I can find something fun to do," Steve said sweetly, giving Bucky an encouraging kiss.

---

"You better not play board games without me," Bucky teased with a pout. "I have a vendetta against Becca with that damn train track game."

---

"We could play Scrabble. You don't like big words anyway," Steve teased back. Becca giggled a bit at the joke even if it was at her brother's expense.

---

"Yeah, good point. I really do hate Scrabble." Bucky stood to get himself some iced tea from the fridge. "Anyone want tea?"

---

"Some tea would be lovely," Steve said but Sarah shook a finger at him.

"Doctor says no caffeine for two weeks," She corrected.

---

"Dammit, Steve, no caffeine!" Bucky said remembering what Sarah had said when she gave him the low down on what the doctor had told her. Bucky poured himself some tea and came back over to the table. "Mrs. Rogers, can you write down everything the doctor said so I can be sure to follow it when you aren't around?"

---

Steve whined and looked to his boyfriend and his mom. "Come on, you guys. Everyone knows that the doctors just make stuff up so you freak out over everything and come back to them for more checkups," he complained. Sarah swatted her son with a paper before writing it all down for Bucky.

---

"Steve, I know what you're doing and playing into my conspiracy side isn't going to work this time," Bucky said and hovered over Sarah as she wrote.

---

"I'm telling you, Bucky, we should really stick it to the man this time," Steve tried once more but to no avail. He huffed but behaved for the rest of the night.
Once the girls were off to school the next morning, Steve gingerly made his way into the kitchen. "Hey, Buck," he said softly. "Would it be alright if I had Natasha over some time?"

---

"Um..." Bucky cleared his throat. "I'm fine with that but depending on when she comes over I might not be here." He shrugged. "It's your place, too, now so you can have people over. Just if I'm not here, give the girls fair warning first because Becca doesn't like people coming over unannounced. She gets a little frantic."

---

Steve nodded. "I'll let her know," he promised. "Natasha's just bringing some of the stuff from my locker back home since I won't be around for a while. And she's bringing paperwork for me to file for disability in the meantime." He paused and then asked, "Does Becca get frantic cause of how you used to be?"

---

Bucky bit his lip and nodded slowly. "I'm guessing so. I kind of fucked up her trust in people and myself and I don't know how long it'll take to get better. It's just residual emotions, I think." He started making Steve an omelet and he glanced at a framed picture on the wall of his family back when his parents were alive. He wanted a new picture on the wall right next to that one with Steve in it. "She should be fine with Natasha, though. I have a weird feeling that they might get along."

---

"Who knows? Maybe she would've had trust issues regardless," Steve said. He was trying to keep Bucky from blaming himself too much. "I think she would like Natasha, too. Natasha doesn't put up with anyone's shit and she's as smart as she is tough."

---

"She's like Becca except she talks." Bucky laughed and added, "Will you apologize to her again for me about the other day? I still feel like an ass for yelling at her." Bucky thought about Natasha and the chief and Rumlow and if anyone had figured out yet if it was foul play like Steve suspected or not.

---

"Oh, Natasha doesn't accept apologies," Steve said in a matter-of-fact tone. "But I doubt she will hold a grudge. She's a reasonable person." Steve had a lot of respect for her for many reasons. "She does accept good vodka, though."
Bucky made a loud short laugh. "I guess we will always be at odds then because I cannot afford to buy good vodka. I can offer her a shitty beer or cheap wine or some of my good bourbon if she wants that. That's all I got." Steve's omelet was ready and Bucky placed it on the table before making his own breakfast.

Steve waited for Bucky to finish making his food to eat instead of eating alone. "She's a good person. I think she will find it in her heart to forgive you. If anything, I think she's happy that I have someone who gets emotional over me."

Bucky sat down with his plate and said, "And by emotional you mean irrational and crazy." He was about to take a bite of his food before it occurred to him that Steve might want to pray before breakfast too. He certainly had some stuff to ask God to help him out with. "You pray before every meal or just dinner? Never noticed before."

"I pray before every meal," Steve said. "I have to give God my thanks for seeing that I have food and a home and that I lived long enough to make it to the next meal." He gave a little smile. Steve shifted a bit nervously and asked, "I've been, um... thinking. I, uh... I know you're not religious. But because we can't get married legally I was wondering if maybe someday... if I could find a priest willing to do it, would you want to get married in the church at least?"

Bucky's heart clenched and he blinked rapidly a few times. "Uh... Wh- what?" He couldn't manage anything other than that. Of course, Bucky had been thinking about his life with Steve and how he planned for Steve to be around for the rest of his life. He also thought about how it was ridiculous and unfair that two men couldn't be married just because it made people uncomfortable. But he never thought that Steve would suggest something like that. For one, Bucky didn't even know that 'married in the church' was even a thing. Did that mean that to God they would be married? Or would it be more like an honorary title? Also, wasn't it sort of the church that prevented Steve from wanting to act on his sexuality anyway? "Steve, what's that even mean?"

Steve ducked his head shyly, nervous as all hell and feeling bad that he was getting Bucky worked up. "I mean... getting married in the church means that at least God knows we're married. So when we pass on, he'll reunite us. And it'll mean that someone down here knows we're married, too. It'll take years - decades, maybe - for laws to pass for the state to recognize us as married. But if we can find one priest who believes in our marriage, that's all we need."

Bucky breathed out slowly as he nodded, thinking this all through. Steve was right, he wasn't religious, but he could go to a priest and a church if it was what Steve needed to do. He wasn't sure about being married to Steve, though. Bucky was notorious for fucking up and making everything bad again. And what he had with Steve was so good he was just waiting for one big mistake of his to ruin everything and have Steve packing his shit to get the fuck out. But Bucky also wanted this. He wanted this to last and be perfect for Steve. He cleared his throat and said, "Okay..."

---

Steve reached out to run a hand down Bucky's back. He knew Bucky loved him but he could hear the hesitation in his voice. "Buck, if you don't want to or you're not ready, we don't have to," he said gently. "It's just... I wanted to hear your thoughts on it before I started going around to churches asking priests to marry a couple of gay guys."

---

Bucky turned to Steve and placed a cold gentle hand on the back of his neck. "I want it, Steve, I do. I'm just terrified that I'm going to fuck it up. You know me. You know what my life has been like. You know that I'm really good at ruining everything and being a bit of a hot head and causing fights or trying to get my way," Bucky rambled off his flaws as he stared into Steve's loving eyes that never left him for a second.

---

"Baby," Steve said softly as he leaned in to kiss his cheek. "If you fight to get your way and your way involves staying with me, then I know for sure I want to do everything I can to be your husband," he said. "You make mistakes - that's human. And when you fuck up again, like all people do, I'll be there to help."

---

Bucky smiled cautiously and willed himself not to jump on Steve and make out with him. Instead, he gave him a light kiss and said, "I love you, Steve Rogers." He ran a hand through his hair and leaned back. "There is one thing you have to do, though, after you find the priest that is going to do this for us."

---

Steve couldn't stop smiling at all the affectionate touches Bucky gave him. He slipped a hand under Bucky's shirt and kissed him some more. "Anything," he promised.

---

Bucky let Steve feel his way up his chest and smirked. "Oh, you're gonna like this, Officer." He tuck his hair behind his ears and took Steve's face in his hands. He gave that cheeky grin again. "You have to propose to me," He said simply. "Full on, down on your knees, some sort of ring, 'Will you church-marry me, James Buchanan Barnes?', and then you wait for me to answer and look all nervous like you don't think I'll say yes."

---

Steve’s eyes lit up, “Of course, I will,” he said. “I’ll bring you flowers and have one of the girls ready to take pictures and I’ll take your hand in mine and wait for you to look at me and then I’ll get down on one knee. Then I’ll make us a wonderful dinner and we can make love nice and slow afterward and we will have a perfect life together and get old together.”

---

"Alright, Babe, you can’t get too sappy on me. I could still say no," Bucky teased and kissed Steve's cheek. "Thought you’d like that, though." He paused and looked to the side. "I never thought I’d get proposed to in my life... Never mind, I don't think I can handle it. Just tell me when to be at the church." Bucky shook his head at the sudden overwhelmed feeling he had.

---

"Nope." Steve laughed at Bucky. "I'm proposing to you someday, James Barnes, whether you like it or not." He was a stubborn mule and wanted to really spoil Bucky with a good proposal.

---

Bucky groaned in defeat. "Guess it was sort of my idea." He stood to get Steve's medicine because, now that he ate, he could take it. He brought it over with a tall glass of water and the list of things to remember that Sarah wrote down. "Your mother has some of the clearest handwriting I've ever seen."

---

"Of course she does. She had to write out prescriptions and all that. If her handwriting was misread, it could kill someone." Steve grumbled as he took the medicine but didn't put up a big fight over it.

---

"Good point," Bucky said. "Alright, Babe, you've got about seven hours before I need to go to work. I say we watch a bad movie then you can nap while I clean up Lilly’s mess in the living room then we can really carefully cuddle until I have to leave.
A few days passed and Bucky would soon find himself answering the door for Natasha, dressed in civilian clothes but still looking just as lethal in her casual clothing. She looked into the living room briefly and seemed unsurprised by the clutter. "Is Steve in?"

---

Bucky looked her up and down and said, "He's taking a nap. You can come in and wait for him." He let her in and closed the door behind her. She wasn't shy in heading for the couch and gracefully sitting down. "You want something to drink? Or some snacks? Or I can just go wake Steve up?"

---

"Nah, don't wake him," she said as she made herself at home right in the living room. "A sandwich would be nice, though. I'm starving," she said with a shrug. "You can give Steve a message for me if you wouldn't mind."

---

"Sure what's the message? And what sort of sandwich?" Bucky asked and started pulling out all the sandwich stuff he had in the fridge. The fridge and the cabinets were decidedly fuller and had a healthier selection now that Steve was living there. He really was serious about them eating better and not eating cereal for dinner anymore.

---

"An everything sandwich," Natasha said. "With Russian dressing, if you have it." They probably didn't, but she would try. "Well, I figured Steve would be happy to know that Fury is taking the situation seriously," she said. "And while that happens, the rest of the precinct believes him."

---

Bucky mumbled 'Russian dressing' under his breath as he looked in the fridge. When Natasha gave her message he shot back up. "So they think it's foul play, too? They think Rumlow did something intentionally?" Bucky’s heart was picking up pace and he almost forgot about Natasha's sandwich entirely.

---

Natasha nodded her head solemnly. "A few officers overheard him trying to get Steve kicked out a day or so before it happened," she said. "And as soon as the investigation started, he had a few choice words to call Steve. I'm sure you've heard it all before."
Bucky nodded in anger. "I'm sure I have... God, I want to fucking destroy that man for what he's done to Steve. He can't do much on his own and has to have medicine four times a day and he walks slowly and we can't have sex or anything until he's healed." Bucky finished slapping Natasha's sandwich together and brought it over to her mumbling, "We don't have Russian dressing."

---

Natasha was conflicted as well. On one hand, Rumlow was a good officer who saved everyone's life at least once. On the other, Steve didn't deserve any of this either. "How is he?" She asked softly. "He gets stir crazy real bad. And he can have a bit of a temper sometimes, so don't take it personal." Luckily, Bucky hadn't had to see Steve truly mad yet.

---

"He's doing okay so far. I think he's started to get more and more antsy every day." Bucky sat in the chair across from the couch. "I don't know if Steve's crazy goes higher than mine so I think it'll be fine. He deals with my crazy at least one a week. Hell, you know what it's like."

---

"Crazy, huh?" Natasha asked with a raised eyebrow. "Well for the longest time, you were outnumbered by two little girls," she joked. "Anyone would go crazy from that." She nibbled delicately at her sandwich. "He's a lot happier with you," she said. "I knew he was seeing someone just by the way he walked the day after he met you."

---

"Yeah?" Bucky asked with a shy grin. "I love him, you know. If that means anything to you as his friend, I really truly love him." There was a soft shuffling coming from his bedroom and Bucky thought Steve might be getting up from his nap. He'd be glad to see Natasha if he was awake.

---

"Ugh, no need to be gross about it," she complained, though it was clear she didn't want to hear anyone gushing about their significant other and not because of the gay part.

A minute or so later, Steve slowly made his way out of the bedroom with the help of his crutches. "Oh, hey."

---

"Hey, Steve." Bucky's face lit up and he stood to help him take a seat next to Natasha. "Do you want a sandwich or something? You need your medicine in about a half hour and you need to eat first." Bucky turned to head to the kitchen and started making a sandwich for Steve anyway.

---

Steve made a displeased sound at the reminder of his medicine. He hated feeling so useless and weak. He was a little embarrassed to be down and out in front of his colleague but Natasha didn't tease him. "I brought some stuff from your locker, by the way," Natasha told him. "And papers for disability."

---

Bucky listened in while they talked and he didn't make a sound. He wanted to see if Natasha would tell Steve what she had told him or if she would just have Bucky do it later. He was also curious to see how Steve acted around his coworkers. Not that he thought he would be that different, but it would be interesting to see.

---

Steve got a bit into police mode around Natasha. He sat up a little straighter and spoke more properly. Natasha didn't tell him about Rumlow but she did reassure him that the precinct wished him a quick and full recovery. "I'll come over for dinner next week," Natasha said, totally inviting herself over. "I'll bring takeout." She looked up at Bucky and said, "I'm not asking for permission cause you yelled at me once."

---

Bucky handed Steve his sandwich and said, "I respect that, and I'm sorry again. Also, it's Steve's home now, too, so he can have anyone he likes over." Bucky paused and looked at him. "No, you may have anyone over who isn't a handsome man. No cute boys while I'm not around."

---

"So does that mean Thor isn't allowed over?" Natasha asked. She looked over at Bucky and said, "That guy is a big beefcake. Total wall of muscle."

Steve was a little reluctant to eat right now so he just took the sandwich and set it on the coffee table. "As if I could ever even think about anyone but you, Buck."

---

Bucky kissed Steve's head and said, "Eat, Punk." He brought the medicine over next and sat it on the coffee table with some water. "Food then drugs." He sat back down and crossed his leg on his lap. "Natasha, what do we need to do with the disability papers?"

---

Steve stared at the sandwich before mumbling, "I'm not hungry."

Natasha picked up the folder and showed Bucky the papers. "He has to fill out that he was shot and sign it down there. He can't mention anything about Rumlow, just that there were plans for backup and backup failed. Don't mention foul play or any of that or else disability services may give him the runaround."

---

Bucky nodded and said that he would make sure they got them filled out as soon as possible. "Where do I need to take them after he's filled it out?" He gave Steve a look and then pointed at the sandwich. He wasn't going to let him out of it that easy. Unless he felt like throwing up, he was eating that damn sandwich.

---

Steve gave Bucky a heated glare but didn't say anything because he didn't want to get into a spat in front of Natasha who said, "I'll pick it up and take it to officer affairs for you guys. While I'm sure most people wouldn't bother Steve, I figure it'll be safer for me to turn it in."
"Probably a good idea because I don't have the best track record in the precinct, I'm sure." Bucky checked the clock. The girls would be home any minute. "Natasha, are you staying for a while? You can stay for dinner. My sisters are probably headed home now," Bucky said and glanced at Steve and the entirely uneaten sandwich. "Fucking hell, Steve." He breathed out quietly.

---

"It's alright. I've got a cat at home that will scratch the furniture if I stay out for too long. I'll come by in a few days to pick up the paperwork and steal more food from you." She gave them both a brief hug goodbye before heading out.

---

Bucky locked the door behind her and came back to hover over Steve. "Why aren't you eating? Are you sick?" He asked in a sternly concerned voice. "You need food before medicine and you need medicine so you don't hurt. Please eat."

---

"I'm not hungry, Bucky," Steve complained. "I'm tired and I don't want to shove food down my throat that I don't want. The medicine isn't making a difference anyway," he said moodily. He didn't want to concern Bucky by being too grumpy but he also didn't feel much better from when he first came home.

---

"Steve, the medicine makes it so you don't feel the pain as much," Bucky said and rested a hand on his thigh. "I know you're sick of this and you don't want to eat but please, please eat for me. I promised your mother I'd watch out for you when she wasn't here and so I have to make you eat."

---

"I said I'm not hungry," Steve said tensely. "There's no point in eating if I'm going to throw it up later. Or make my stomach too uneasy to eat dinner tonight." Steve frowned and looked away. "Missing one meal isn't going to kill me, Bucky, you don't have to worry."

---

Bucky frowned at Steve. "Have you been throwing up lately, Steve? How long has that been happening? Why didn't I know?" He stood to look for the doctor's phone number. "I should call your doctor about that. That can't be good. Maybe it's a side effect of the medicine."

---

"Buck, goddammit, I haven't thrown up but I will if I force myself to eat something I don't want!" Steve bristled and his voice was raised but not so loud that he was shouting. "I want to be with my boyfriend right now, not a nurse."

---

Bucky clenched his jaw and squared his shoulders. "You want me to make you something other than a sandwich?" He gritted out. "And I am your boyfriend, Steve. But I'm also in charge of your recovery and that means being vigilant with what we need to do to get you better. I'm only doing this because I care about you and want a quick recovery."
"No. I don't want anything to eat right now," Steve grumbled. He rubbed at his face. "I know you care, Bucky, but I can't stand being babied all the time. I'd rather fall on my ass than have anyone help me walk around here again. It's maddening."

"Maybe I will let you fall on your ass, yeah? Let you feel how much that's gonna hurt! You have a fucking bullet wound in your back, Steve! Try to loosen up on your damn pride for awhile and let us help you for once." Bucky was getting pretty mad. It seemed to him that Steve was only happy when he was taking care of Bucky. And that thought made Bucky feel small and weak.

"Won't hurt as much as being shot in the first place," Steve retorted, stubborn as ever and being even less malleable because Bucky was raising his voice. "Just cause I'm not hungry for one fucking meal doesn't mean I'm on a slope to killing myself over it."

"Excuse me?" Bucky whispered with furrowed brows and folded arms. "Steve, I think you might want to reconsider your words and who you are talking to." Bucky turned around sharply and headed for his room to get changed. The girls would be home soon and he needed to get to work in an hour and he wasn't going to wear the sweats he had on.

Steve slowly stood up, glaring at Bucky's back as he left and went to get the plastic wrap from the cabinet. He wrapped up the sandwich and tossed it in the fridge, hating how long it took him to do every fucking thing. When Lilly and Becca came home, he pretended to be too tired to talk and just laid down on the couch.

"Bucky!" Lilly called down the hall. "I'm hungry!"

Bucky swung open his door and rushed out into the kitchen. He tried to smile at the girls and be polite and calm. "Okay, Lil. What do you want?" He opened the fridge to see Steve's freshly wrapped sandwich and he pulled it out with a grimace and handed it to her. "Eat Steve's sandwich." He offered and slammed the fridge shut again. He headed towards the door, slipping on his shoes. "I'm going to head to work early and take the long way. I need a walk," Bucky said to Becca who was closest. He opened the door and quickly escaped, locking it behind him.

Steve was generally unresponsive all evening. He felt bad for upsetting Bucky but he still felt justified for not eating when he wasn't hungry. Lilly made her best attempt at a grilled cheese for his dinner and Steve sat on the couch and waited up for Bucky to return home from work.

After Bucky got out of work around one in the morning, he took another long walk around the city and ended up at a bar. He drank several rounds of whiskey and some beers that a lady who was flirting with him all night bought. They had short meaningless conversations and she left once he started complaining that he was taking care of now three children - one of which was a grown ass adult man with solid pride that he wouldn't shake. After a while, Bucky stumbled back home and checked his watch - 4:37 - before opening the door and walking into the dark apartment.

---

When an hour passed after Bucky was supposed to be home, Steve started to panic. He called the precinct and asked frantically if anyone matching Bucky's description had turned up or was brought to a hospital. Even though they said they would let him know, he called every hour. When Bucky finally came in, Steve nearly cried with relief. "Bucky, what the hell happened?" He asked, standing a little too quickly and grimacing at the shot of pain that went through his body.

---

Bucky looked towards the source of the outburst with a confused haze and his eyes adjusted to focus on Steve over by the couch. "Steve..." He breathed out like he was surprised to see him. "Went drinking," he said simply and nodded his head causing himself to get dizzy. He started towards the cabinet and pulled out a box of cereal. Sticking his hand in to munch on some, he shrugged at Steve.

---

"You went drinking? Fuck, it's almost five in the morning!" Steve whispered harshly at him. "You don't think to tell me first so I didn't sit up worrying that you got tracked down by the asshole who left me to die? Or that you got mugged or something?"

---

Putting the cereal box down, Bucky made an offended face and said, "I gotta tell you where I'm gonna be now, Steve?" He gestured down his body with his hands and wobbled a bit. "I'm home now, aren't I? No one killed me." He didn't realize how loud he was actually speaking and he also didn't hear Becca tiptoe into the hallway to listen in on what was going on.

---

"No, but you should tell me when you're not coming home right away so nobody worries about where you are. And keep your voice down." Steve was livid and upset but he didn't want to have Bucky wake the girls. "Please, just come to bed."

---

"I don't want to," Bucky said with a childish edge. He folded his arms and leaned against the counter. "I don't work tomorrow. Maybe I'll just go back to the bar." He shivered where he stood and touched his chest. He must have slopped some beer on his shirt because it was damp and cold.

---

"No, Buck. They're probably closed already," Steve said. He slowly walked over and touched Bucky's arm. "Baby, come to bed with me," Steve tried to tempt. He hadn't ever seen Bucky get this drunk before and he was upset that he couldn't stop him if Bucky refused to stay.

---

"I said I don't want to," Bucky snapped back. "You can't make me either because you did the same thing to me earlier over a fucking goddamn sandwich!"
"Not eating when I'm not hungry isn't the same as getting piss drunk and staying out to ungodly hours," Steve growled back.

Bucky slipped nimbly away from Steve and flopped over on the couch. Then he noticed Becca hiding in the shadows of the hall. "The fuck are you doing up?" He asked with curiosity and a gentle sort of drunken annoyance.

Steve's shoulders went stiff when Bucky spoke to Becca the way he did. He didn't know she was even awake until Bucky said something. He rushed over as quickly as his body would take him and he gave her a soft hug. "It's okay, Becca," he said. "I'll make sure he gets some sleep. You go rest up, okay?"

Becca let Steve hug her, but, when he let go, she went over to Bucky saying under her breath, "I know how to do this." She leaned over Bucky and grabbed both his arms. Then she pulled him up and standing and leaned him against her. Bucky didn't even protest, he was so compliant as she started walking him towards his room. Once they were there, she got him inside the shower and pushed him so he was sitting down in the tub bowl.

Steve had followed and was watching Becca as she turned on the water. "Cold!" Bucky yelped and Becca ignored him.

Steve felt awful that Becca had to be the responsible one when he was supposed to be the one looking out for them. Bucky had been doing so good and it made Steve wonder if this was going to be the norm every time they had a fight. He sat down on the closed lid of the toilet and put a hand over his middle as he watched the two with sad eyes. "Becca, are you sure you don't want me to help?"

"No, it's better to just let me," She said and watched Bucky with disappointed eyes. After another minute under the water, she turned it off and started toweling Bucky's long hair dry. "I usually just leave his clothes on and push him into his bed with the towel around him but you can take off his clothes if you'd rather not be next to him all wet and cold." Becca sounded like a professor or a doctor explaining something complex to a group of pupils. Bucky hadn't spoken since the water stopped except inaudible mumbles from underneath the towel.

Steve looked down at her as she explained everything. He hugged her again and did his best to make her feel like someone was watching out for her. "Thank you, Becca," he said softly. "I'll take care of him from here." Steve tilted her head up so she would look at him. "Your brother loves you a lot, okay? And not everyone can handle stress as well as you do. I'm going to do my best so you don't have to see him like this again."
Becca nodded and left Bucky in Steve's care. Bucky got up of his own accord and wrapped himself in the towel like a blanket before slowly inching out of the bathroom and towards his bed. "Sleepy," he muttered and sat on the edge of the bed staring at Steve. "And I'm cold."

---

Steve was so angry at Bucky for going out and worrying him sick. And he was even more upset that Becca had to see this all over again. But when Bucky was shivering on the bed looking absolutely pathetic, he couldn't fight him. "Come on," he sighed as he got out some warm pajamas. "Let's get you changed and we can cuddle up."

---

Bucky nodded and wiped his face on the towel. "No cuddling. Don't want to hurt you," he said as he started peeling off his clothes. "Got to be gentle with Steve," he added in a haze. Once he was naked, Bucky reached a hand out for Steve to give him the fresh clothes.

---

Steve handed Bucky his clothes and sighed softly when he continued to mumble in his drunkenness. "You're allowed to hold me, Baby," Steve said. "You can still be gentle with me."

---

Nodding, Bucky got into bed and curled up in a ball near his pillow. He was still shivering as Steve took his time getting in beside him and wrapping himself around Bucky. "Night, Baby." Bucky whispered. "Hope you still love me..." he added with an odd clarity before quickly slipping off to sleep.

---

Steve couldn't stretch his body out to completely envelop Bucky like he usually did, but he was at least able to wrap his arms strongly around him for a good cuddle. "I'll always love you, Buck." He fell asleep a while after Bucky did. When morning came, he felt like shit since he didn't get much sleep.

---

Bucky took his sweet time in waking up, but once he did, he was met with a raging headache and everything seemed too bright. It didn't feel like his normal hangovers. This felt worse. Like one of his stress headaches on steroids - probably affected by the alcohol the night before. "Jesus, fuck," Bucky gasped and a few tears ran down his face at the pain in his head.

---

Despite feeling like shit, Steve got up so he could send the girls off to school and made sure they had everything. He returned to bed and frowned when Bucky looked like he was in such pain. He hobbled over for some medicine and a glass of water so he could wordlessly offer it to Bucky.

---

Obediently, Bucky took the medicine and the water and swallowed it quickly. "Feels like my head is splitting open," he said low and quietly to Steve. "Like someone's got a turkey saw in my brain." He reached slowly for Steve's hand and gripped it tight once he had it.
Steve considered not responding to Bucky but he decided that the silent treatment didn't solve anything. "Do you remember anything from last night?" Steve asked as he gave Bucky's hand a squeeze.

Bucky sniffled and his lip quivered a bit as he thought. Of course he remembered. He remembered stumbling home at nearly five in the morning. He remembered yelling and swearing and being a shit to Steve. He remembered Becca and being put in the shower like old times. He remembered getting into bed and not knowing if Steve would even join him. Instead of saying all this, Bucky just asked, "You think I'm a bad guardian, don't you?"

Steve shook his head. "No, I don't think that," he said softly. "I'm very disappointed in you, Bucky. I won't lie about that. But I know you'd give up everything for your sisters." He brushed his thumb over the back of Bucky's hand. "We have to talk about what happened last night and why it came to that point. Because we need to help you through it."

Bucky rolled so he wasn't facing Steve. He could feel himself starting to cry from the pain, hating himself, and knowing that Steve and Becca were both disappointed in him. "Told you I was going to fuck up again," Bucky choked out through the lump in his throat. "Jesus, I promised Becca she'd never have to do that again." He paused and wiped his eyes. "Surprised she didn't slap me like last time. She was probably too fucking tired to be angry."

"And what did I tell you I would do when you messed up, Buck?" Steve asked as he reached out to pet a hand through Bucky's hair. "I told you I would help get you through it. So we are going to have to find a way to make things right with her. You're going to have to apologize and prove to her that you have plans to make sure it won't happen again."

Bucky rolled back, not giving a damn that Steve see him crying. "Becca's not forgiven me after all the time I spent doing okay so she's certainly not going to forgive me after this."

"Well, you have to apologize regardless of whether you think she's going to forgive you or not because she deserves an apology," Steve said.

Bucky sat up too quickly and his head throbbed. "I don't even really remember what it was that pushed me over the edge. I just remember hiding in my room until the girls came back and then leaving. Then I had a shit time at work and thought it was an okay idea to go to a bar."

Steve sighed and made Bucky meet his gaze. "Did it occur to you at all last night that staying out so late would worry us, Bucky? Why did you have to go to a bar when you had a rough time?"

---

"I don't know why I went," Bucky said. "I just wanted too. It's what I used to do." He thought about back when he would go out every other night and come home late. Back then, nothing was okay and he was incredibly self-destructive. He wasn't sure if he did it because he liked it or because he knew that it was reckless and he already felt like dying all the time anyway. He stared up into Steve's eyes and gave a weak pathetic smile. "I'm really sorry, Steve."

---

"Bucky, I don't mind if you go out late and get drunk if you let me know. But it's worrisome if you don't give anyone a heads up and you only do it when you're upset." Steve stroked his fingers through Bucky's hair some more. "I was so mad last night. You woke Becca up when she should've been able to have a peaceful sleep." He sighed. "I'll stock the fridge with booze if you want to get drunk. But you can't go back to doing this - for your sisters' sakes."

---

Bucky nodded and sniffled. "She's got to be so disappointed in me. She told me the other day that she was proud that I was doing better. She said she thought being with you was helping me. Now I go and fuck up and bring her into it..." Bucky looked off in the corner of the room. "I wish my parents were here."

---

"You can make it up to her. She loves you and if you own up to it, it's better than shying away from her." Steve sighed and kissed Bucky's forehead. "I wish your parents were here, too, Baby. It's not fair that you have so much responsibility."

---

Bucky melted into the kiss and wished Steve would keep going. He felt terrible and just wanted to be held and loved, but he knew he didn't deserve that. "My headache has calmed down a little now." He wanted to ask Steve if he had taken his medicine but he also didn't want to go into yet another fight.

---

Steve saw how Bucky leaned into the kiss so he kissed him a few more times. "I'm glad you're feeling better, Baby." He cupped the sides of his face and looked into his eyes. "No matter what, I'll always love you. Okay, Buck?"

---

Bucky nodded and bit his lip absently. "I'm really sorry, Steve." He got off the bed then and started striding out towards the laundry room with purpose. Steve followed curiously and watched as Bucky rummaged in the cabinet for the bottles of whiskey and beer he had hidden. Bucky nodded and headed for the kitchen.

---

Steve followed slowly and wasn't sure what to think when Bucky took the booze. "Why don't you take a day out with Becca?" He suggested. "Treat her to something nice that you know she's wanted to do but hasn't asked for."

---

Wordlessly, Bucky screwed off the top of the bottles and unceremoniously poured the contents out into the sink. Then he moved to the cabinet above the fridge and reached as far back as he could to find the triple sec, which he dumped right alongside the whiskey. Next was the wine in the fridge and he lined up the bottles next to the others after the contents were gone. There was one more hiding place behind where he kept the vacuum and it had several tiny bottles of liquor taken from hotel rooms.

---

Steve watched with a sense of pride as Bucky poured out everything. When all was said and done, he walked over to hug him from behind. "I'm so proud of you, Baby. I know Becca will be too."

---

Bucky nodded and detached Steve so he could turn to face him. "I'm done. No more. I'll go to the places I have tabs and close them this weekend." He didn't consider himself to have a drinking problem necessarily, but he could tell that it was enough of an issue that he was causing hurt to his family.

---

Steve smiled and drew him in for a slow kiss. "You're doing the right thing, Bucky. I'm always going to support you, okay?" He hugged him close again. "You don't have to deal with anything alone ever again." Steve wanted Bucky to have a happy life and be able to deal with the bumps along the way.

---

"I love you, Steve." Bucky said and kissed him. "Now, can I make you any food?" He asked cautiously and flat. He didn't want to make it sound like he was forcing him to eat if he didn't want to eat but he also wanted to give him the option if there was something Bucky could make for him.

---

"Yes. You can make something for me to eat because I'm hungry this time," Steve said and took a seat at the table because he was a little exhausted already. "I didn't mean to get so angry with you yesterday. I wasn't feeling well and didn't want to be forced to eat."

---

"We just need to work on communicating better or something because you didn't want to eat but I wanted you to have your medicine," Bucky said and opened the fridge. "Reheated pasta, soup, a sandwich... cereal, pancakes, eggs... or I can go out and get something really fast," he offered and looked to Steve.

---

"I had my medicine later when Lilly made me a really...interesting... version of grilled cheese," Steve said. "And I'll have some pasta. I think I can't ever have cereal again after watching how much you guys eat it."
Bucky pulled the pasta out and put it in the microwave. "If you are planning on being a Barnes-Rogers or Rogers-Barnes - I forgot which one we settled on - you're going to have to get used to cereal and like it." He also took the milk from the fridge and made himself a bowl of cereal because all that talk was starting a craving.

"Rogers-Barnes cause it sounds better," Steve said. He pouted as Bucky made himself a bowl of cereal. "Cereal is great if you're uncultured or a child," he teased with a playful smirk.

Bucky stabbed a finger towards his mountain of records. "I'm cultured! Look at those records, Steve." The microwave beeped and Bucky pulled the pasta out and placed it in front of his boyfriend. "I'd say I'm more cultured than you. You haven't seen any of the Star Wars movies!"

"You can't be more cultured than someone who patrols the most culturally diverse city in the states," Steve said and started to eat his food once Bucky put it in front of him. "Can we do something today?"

Bucky sat down and ate his cereal. "Of course we can. What do you want to do?" He asked and smiled at Steve. "I've already dumped the alcohol so that's not an option." He grimaced. It was going to be hard to completely quit drinking. Maybe he could convince Steve to let him have the occasional glass of something.

"Maybe we can catch a movie before the girls get home. Or we can have a nice lunch? I don't want to have to use my wheelchair or crutches so we have to do something that isn't very active," Steve said.

"Sure, you want to go see that new movie? The Terminator - I think that's what it's called. I heard it was really good. It's got good action," Bucky suggested and reached out for one of Steve's hands. "Or we could go to the bookstore. I can pick up something nice for Becca to read and maybe find something that Lilly could like."

Steve paused in thought. "Let's go get something for Becca," he said. "Maybe... I was thinking taking them to a shelter to get a cat or dog. I'll be home for some time, so now would be the best time to housetrain whatever we end up getting."

Bucky smiled sadly and sighed. "We can't afford an animal. I don't make enough and your disability pay is going towards your hospital and medicine bills anyway. The girls will be fine with a couple books and maybe some new records for Lilly. Or I could spring for a VCR player instead."
"But it'll make them happy," Steve said. "We're both smart. We can figure a way to make it work. But... if you don't want an animal in the house, I understand," he said. "Don't want to saddle you on with anything you don't want."

"I don't mind having an animal in the house. It just can't become my responsibility. It has to be their animal and their duty to care for it. That means they feed it and pick up after it and take it out to shit. I'll just buy the supplies." Bucky finished his cereal and got up to wash the bowl. "That still doesn't take care of the two hundred extra dollars a month for rent."

"Well," Steve murmured, shrugging. "It's less than what I had to pay for my own apartment. We can wait and see what my disability pay is like before we make a final decision."

"Your disability pay is going towards your medical bills," Bucky repeated sternly then he sighed not wanting to argue. "You talk with the girls, you get them to agree to take care of it and not bother me about it unless it needs more food, and I'll just pick up some more hours at work. Clint owes me a raise anyway."

"Yeah but if I have anything left over from disability, I can help," Steve said. "I get good healthcare with the police force. Because I got shot on the job, I'll only have to cover the copays." Which added up after all his visits. "We'll talk about it more in a week or so," he said.

"Okay," Bucky conceded. "So are we going to the bookstore? I need to get out of these pajamas." Bucky adjusted and realized he wasn't wearing any underwear. He vaguely remembered Steve giving him clothes to wear so he must have just forgotten any.

"Yeah, a bookstore would be nice," Steve said. "Maybe I can find you a good cookbook. Or we can find something in the culture section," he joked as he went to their bedroom to change.

"You're an ass, Rogers," Bucky said as he stripped. He found a pair of blue jeans that weren't falling apart too badly then he shuffled through the shirts he had. It was fairly chilly outside and getting colder everyday as winter grew on the city. He pulled out a deep navy sweater and an old concert t-shirt.

Steve had to be careful dressing since his wound was just starting to really heal up. Once he was dressed, he put an arm around Bucky's shoulders and pulled him in for a deep kiss. "You look so good in that sweater."
"Thank you." Bucky smiled back and gave him another quick kiss. "And you will look much better with your collar fixed," he added and adjusted Steve's wonky collar. "You sure you aren't taking your crutches?" Bucky asked and pointed to where they were leaning in the corner.

Steve nodded his head. "I'm sure. I don't want to feel like I'm sick or anything. Crutches make me feel so... inept." He opened the door and let Bucky walk out first. "You really are a stickler about neat collars, huh?"

"Well, I don't want to be seen with a guy whose collar isn't folded properly. That's just ridiculous," Bucky said and checked his wallet to see if he had enough money for their outing. He had roughly thirty dollars and figured he could get three books - maybe four - if he picked them carefully.

Steve bumped shoulders with Bucky a few times while they walked. "I was thinking about finding Lilly a book or two on some female soccer stars. What kind of books do you think Becca would want?"

"Adventure books or biographies," Bucky responded. "She's a big fan of Eleanor Roosevelt. Maybe they have a book about her." Once they reached the shop, Bucky held open the door for Steve and trailed in after him. He was immediately overwhelmed with choices and didn't even know where to begin with everything.

Steve decided they would get Becca her stuff first before worrying about Lilly. He asked one of the associates for help, who started to really obviously flirt with him while Steve awkwardly tried to pick out a book without making her feel bad.

Bucky hovered close to Steve and kept eyeing the shop helper trying his best to convey without screaming that Steve was gay and taken. They were staring at the biography section when something caught Bucky's eye and he pulled it triumphantly from the case saying, "Sacagawea!"

Steve jumped a little when Bucky exclaimed some name that Steve hadn't heard since primary school. "You think Becca would like that one?" He asked.

The assistant looked at Bucky and offered, "There's a few books about her that are a little better-rated in the women's history section."

"Steve, she'll fucking love Sacagawea." Bucky nodded enthusiastically and tucked the book under his arm. He turned to the shop helper and thanked her for the advice. "Does women's history also "Well, they're all historical women, so... probably," she said and led them over. Steve realized that they were going to have a hell of a hard time picking out from the mass of books that Becca would love in this section.

"Fuck me..." Bucky breathed out as he skimmed the books. "Steve, maybe I should just bring Becca here with some money and she can pick out which she wants." He wasn't quite sure if he could manage to pick good ones from the mass in front of him. He knew for sure he was getting a Sacagawea book. Bucky loved her and figured Becca would too.

"I guess we could do that. But I still want to get her something to surprise her at home," he said. Steve had to thumb through a few books before picking one on Eleanor Roosevelt for her. "And something for Lilly?"

"I wonder if they have a history of lacrosse book?" Bucky asked and shrugged at Steve. "Something with pictures because Lilly doesn't like reading a lot. Or we could just get her some snacks on the way home. Something sweet and sugary that I don't normally let her have."

"I think we should give her a book," Steve said. "So that way she doesn't feel like she's getting something less than Becca, you know?" He didn't want her to consider running away again or that she was dead weight.

"Clearly, you don't know the value of sugary treats to Lilly," Bucky said as he scanned the room for a sign pointing to a sports section. "Found it. I'm sure there is something in there for her." They made their way over to the sports section and Steve started looking through the books as Bucky watched his ass and held Becca's books.

Steve smiled and chuckled a bit. "Still, I don't want to risk it. Candy is cheap and we can pick it up any day." Steve braced himself against the bookshelf a few times when it became a bit much to stand for so long. But ultimately he found a book he knew Lilly would love. "Got it!"

"What is it?" Bucky asked, eyes still locked on Steve's body. He really missed fucking Steve. It had been a while and he was getting incredibly horny and worked up as the days went on. But he also didn't want to hurt Steve at all and that meant no sexual shenanigans.

"Check it out. A history of lacrosse, and it's written by a woman," Steve said as he proudly showed it off to Bucky. "Look, it even has big text and plenty of pictures. It was like this book was made for her."

---

Bucky beamed at his boyfriend. "Perfect, nice find, Steve." He looked at the two they had for Becca and the one they had for Lilly. "Should we find another something for her, too? Maybe a sports calendar?" He didn't really want to give Becca two books and only one to Lilly.

---

"You think she would like that?" Steve asked. "What about a fancy water bottle like the one the Long Island kids have? I think she was eyeing one of them but didn't want to ask you to spend money on something for once."

---

"I don't even know where to find shit like that." Bucky shrugged. "But I guess we can try to get her a fancy water bottle." He gingerly took the book from Steve and added it to the pile he had. "Are we good to buy these and head out?"

---

"Yeah let's go," Steve said and headed to the counter. "I'll pay." He handed the cashier some money and waited for his change.

---

Bucky shot Steve a glare and said through gritted teeth, "Fine." He was going to argue that Steve was hurt and wasn't working but he knew that Steve was going to bring up the disability pay again. He took the bag gratefully from the shop helper and let Steve lead the way out.

---

Steve frowned when Bucky gave him that glare. "Buck," he said softly. "It isn’t because I don't think you can pay for it yourself. It's because I love them, too, and I want to be able to spoil them just as much as you."

---

"Well, if you're getting them an animal, then I should get them these," Bucky said. "Because I'm having no part in getting the animal. Just the supplies." Bucky loved animals, especially kittens and puppies, but he couldn't let himself get attached to whatever they brought home cause he would end up taking care of it then.

---

"Well, I was thinking the animal should be from the both of us, even if all you're doing is getting the supplies. That's too big of a thing for me to take all the credit for," Steve said. He knew the girls would have a hard time getting mad at Bucky for a while if he had a hand in them getting a pet.

---

"I'm not picking it out," Bucky conceded but secretly hoped they would get a little fluff ball kitten or a rescue dog. "And I'm not training it. And if it pees on the carpet, I'm not cleaning it up. And the girls have to keep up on its vaccines and stuff. I won't keep track." Bucky continued to list off various things that could go wrong and how he was decidedly not going to be involved.

---

"Baby," Steve said softly so nobody else would hear. "I know all that. But wouldn't it be great to tell them together that we're going to a rescue and letting them pick out a pet?" Steve asked. "You don't have to choose it. Just tell them with me."

---

Bucky stopped in his tracks and looked at Steve. He whispered, "Wish I could kiss you right now." Then he let out a defeated sigh. "Just tell me what to say and I'll say it. This animal's already causing me way too much trouble. You sure some books and a fancy water bottle isn't enough?"

---

"We give them the books and water bottle today and we wait a few days to tell them about the pet," Steve said. He walked inside one of the stores and immediately found the bottle he'd been talking about. "They're going to be so excited."

---

"And you say I'm like a dad." Bucky crossed his arms and waited next to Steve as he paid. They were certainly one of the strangest parental pairs that Bucky had ever seen. An injured gay cop and a beat down hippie with a giant ass record collection. They were pretty unique.

---

"Well, you are," Steve pointed out as he paid and gave Bucky a happy smile as they walked out. I've always wanted to be a parent. Having kids now is obviously out of the question, so I got to make the most of watching Lilly and Becca grow up."

---

Bucky's face wrinkled up in a pout. "I'd raise a baby with you if we were allowed one," he said in a mumble. No one would let Bucky adopt a baby while he still had two minors in his care and no one would give a baby to Steve now that his whole precinct knew he was gay and he also officially lived with a man. It wasn't very fair. If Steve had always wanted to be a dad and have kids then he should be allowed to. Then, Bucky just felt like shit. If Steve were straight he could have that wish. But being with Bucky prevented it.

---

Steve stopped dead in his tracks. "You would?" He asked softly. He knew that it was practically impossible since no one would let a gay couple adopt. But he thought that Bucky wouldn't have any interest in raising another kid after suddenly having to bring up his sisters. Steve's eyes got all soft and lovesick. He wished he could sweep Bucky off his feet right now, but he was injured and they were in public.

---

"Yeah," Bucky shrugged out a response. "But we aren't allowed to anyway." He frowned and clenched his jaw in thought. They were out in the open but no one seemed to be paying them any mind. "If you weren't with me you could have a baby," He said slowly and sadly. "You'd get to be a
Steve gave Bucky a concerned frown. "So what if I could? If I'm not with you, it wouldn't be worth it. I wouldn't trade our relationship for anything in the world, Bucky." He didn't want Bucky to feel like he was holding Steve back at all.

Bucky just turned and started walking towards their place again. He was incredibly angry at himself and the world. If only everyone would get their heads out of their asses and not give a shit if two men or two women raised a child together or got married or grew old together or held hands or fought for their rights. He shook his head at the thought and slowed his pace so Steve could catch up.

"Buck-" Steve started, about to remind him that he couldn't walk so fast. When he caught up, he hesitated and then on a whim planted a firm kiss on his cheek. If anyone saw, they were too busy going about their day to voice any concern. "I love you."

Bucky huffed out air quickly in surprise like he was out of breath. "What... Steve?" He said and touched his cheek where he was kissed. "Let's get back home. I want to hold you really badly and tell you how sorry I am that I can't give you a child."

Steve's heart pounded nervously in his chest, but he wanted to show Bucky that he wasn't ashamed and didn't regret that they were together. When they got back to the apartment, he pulled Bucky gently into a hug. "You have nothing to be sorry for."

Bucky leaned into Steve gently and rested his head against his shoulder. "But you said you've always wanted to be a dad. And I can't give that to you." Bucky's head was starting to hurt and he really wanted something alcoholic to drink. He didn't know what else to do except hold Steve to him and try not to let himself get too upset.

"So?" Steve said. "Life doesn't always work out the way we thought it would. I have a bigger family now than I've ever had. That counts for something. And, Baby, you make me so happy." He kissed the top of Bucky's head. "You take such good care of me."

Bucky reached a hand up to Steve's cheek and he pulled him in for an open mouthed kiss. "I love you so much, Steve. And if they ever let us adopt a baby, let's fucking do it." He smiled weakly and rubbed his thumb over Steve's cheek. "I really miss this."

Steve was so happy to know that Bucky was willing to adopt a kid. He knew it wouldn't be for a while, both because they had to wait for Lilly and Becca to grow up and because nobody now would let them adopt. Steve's eyes lit up and he smiled brightly at Bucky. "Let's lay down in bed," he said. "And touch each other everywhere."

---

Bucky groaned and said, "Okay, but we have to be gentle. Like really gentle. You're still hurt and I don't want to go to the doctor and have to explain how you injured yourself again." He took Steve's hand and sent a short prayer to Steve's god that he would heal quickly and they could fuck again. He wasn't sure Steve's god would take to kindly to that request but he wanted to give it a try.

---

Steve rolled his eyes. "I'm not made out of glass. And you can barely see the wound anymore." It wasn't entirely true and there was plenty of internal damage still. He pulled Bucky into the bedroom and carefully laid down on the bed. "I can't stop thinking about making you come again."

---

"Steve, you know I want to jump your bones and fuck the lights out of you just about every day."
Bucky said, "It was getting so bad lately I considered taking Phillip out of closet and playing with him. But I knew you'd get all mad at me." Bucky stroked a hand down Steve's chest.

---

Steve gave Bucky a grumpy look at the mention of his dildo. "You could have just asked me to fist you again," he said bluntly. "I didn't get shot in the arm." He slowly took off Bucky's sweater and began to kiss his neck.

---

"It still would have been too vigorous for your back anyway." Bucky's breath picked up and he let Steve start stripping him down and kissing whatever was available.

---

"I could have just kept my hand there and let you do all the work," Steve joked. He got Bucky's torso bare and started to bite gently at his nipples.

---

"Steve, I love you so much and I'm sorry again about worrying you and staying out late," Bucky pleaded and whined at Steve's touch.

---

"I know, Baby, I know," Steve said. "I've already forgiven you." He gently rubbed a hand down
Bucky's chest and squeezed at his hips and thigh.

---

Bucky went quiet and felt Steve all over him. He really did miss this. Part of him keep saying that he should tell Steve to be more careful with himself but he also knew Steve wouldn't listen to him at all.
Bucky hummed low and gratefully as Steve licked and bit his nipples.
Steve took Bucky's pants off and rubbed his palm over his dick and made a quiet, aroused sound. "Missed your dick," he murmured. "Can I suck it? I promise I'll go easy."

---

Bucky nodded and gasped. "Yeah, only if you go easy on yourself, Baby." He adjusted on the bed and ran a hand through his hair. It had been a while since they did this at all and Bucky was worried he was going to last only about a minute with Steve on him before he was coming all over himself.

---

Steve nuzzled at Bucky's stomach and kissed down to his cock. He licked a long stripe up the shaft and took the tip into his mouth, pressing the flat of his tongue against the head of Bucky's cock and then he started to slowly bob his head.

---

Bucky let out a tight gasp when Steve started to suck him off and his hand flew to Steve's head to gently hold him. "I missed this so much," he said with lust in his voice. Today had started out terrible and quickly made itself better.

---

Steve moaned low. God, he was so fucking hard already. He missed being able to fool around with Bucky just because they could. Faintly, he could hear the sound of the girls coming home from school. He groaned and started to rush a little, working his tongue faster over the underside of Bucky's cock.

---

Bucky didn't hear the shuffling of his sisters in the apartment and he let out a probably louder than appropriate noise when Steve sped up his tongue. He really wasn't going to last very long with Steve today. He hadn't been touched like this from him in a while. It only took a few more seconds before he was tapping Steve's arm trying to convey that he was about to come.

---

Steve swatted Bucky's hip lightly to scold him for being so loud. He fucked his mouth on Bucky's dick until he was coming down Steve's throat. He swallowed him readily and licked the tip clean before pulling off. "Christ, that was good."

---

Bucky nodded slowly with eyes closed and laid there for a few seconds. "You feel okay? Not hurting at all?" He checked. Then he heard the girls. There was faint discussion coming from the kitchen and Bucky sat up. He looked at Steve's dick and whined because he probably didn't have time to take care of it. Steve would have to do it himself while he went out to the girls.

---

"I'm fine," Steve said as he wiped his mouth. He laid down and looked lazily up at Bucky. "I'm fairly certain this won't be the last time I get an erection," he said. "I'll be out in a few minutes." Steve reached into his pants and started to stroke himself.
Bucky kissed him quickly and slipped his clothes back on as best he could before scampering out of their room to meet the girls. Becca was rummaging around in the trash and Lilly was hovering over her curiously. When Bucky came over to see what they were doing, Becca was angrily taking the empty bottles out of the bin and lining them up on the counter. When Bucky asked what she was doing, Becca turned on him quickly and snarled, "Is this what you've been doing all day? Drinking more?"

---

Steve froze when he heard Becca and Bucky arguing back and forth. It hurt a little that Bucky was getting blamed for something he didn't do, but also that the first thing she did was go through the garbage. He groaned as he shoved on a thick pair of jeans that would hide his boner and he slowly made his way into the kitchen. "Becca - Jesus, Becs, he dumped it all. It's okay."

---

Becca looked from Steve to Bucky still angry as all get out. She pointed at her brother, "Is that true?"

Bucky nodded quickly and said, "Yes, that's what I've been trying to tell you. I quit. No more alcohol - ever. I dumped it down the sink. You can smell my breath if you want." He was trying his best not to yell. He really wished they could have had this conversation in a calmer setting maybe after giving out their presents.

---

Steve walked over and put a hand on Becca's shoulder. "I didn't even have to ask him, Kiddo. We had a talk about what happened last night and Bucky went right to pouring everything out," he said. Steve gave her shoulder a little squeeze. "Have a seat on the couch. We can't have you angry when you're opening up the cool stuff we got you - both of you."

---

Lilly perked up then and said, "Presents?" with a wide grin. Becca went back to being quiet and skeptical but she followed Lilly over to the couch anyway. Bucky still felt like shit. Becca had no faith in him at all and he was going to have to do a lot to prove he could be trusted again. And some presents and a puppy or kitten weren't going to fix that.

---

Steve nodded his head. He knew this wasn't going to remedy Becca's trust issues with Bucky, but this was still something to show that they loved them. He got the two bags - one with Becca's books and one with Lilly's book and water bottle. He kissed Bucky's cheek and both he and Bucky handed the girls their gifts.

---

Lilly tore into the bag and pulled out her presents as Becca slowly and methodically reached in for hers. Lilly held her water bottle up in triumph and squeaked and Becca simply stared at the books before saying, "Dad loved Sacagawea," with a faint smile.

---

Steve was happy that they liked their gifts. "Bucky picked that one out for you," he said to Becca. "We were having a hard time figuring which ones you would like. They had a whole wall from ceiling to floor of books like that."

---

Becca looked up at Steve and actually nodded to him in thanks. "Can we go back there sometime?" She asked and held her books to her chest.

Bucky immediately nodded and said, "Of course. Once you finish those two we can go get you more." He smiled at her and held out his arms for a hug. Becca hesitated but when Lilly jumped up and hugged Bucky, she joined, followed closely by Steve.

---

Steve grinned happily when Becca hugged her brother. He joined in on the group hug and kissed the top of all of their heads. "I love you all so much," he said softly. "I'm glad I get to spend more time with all of you." He let go and sat down on the couch. "So do you like Sacagawea because your dad did, too?"

---

Bucky nodded and said, "When we went on those fishing trips he always had a new book and a new story to tell me. One of his favorites to tell was hers." He sat in the chair across from the couch and pulled Lilly onto his lap and hugged her close.

---

Steve gave Bucky a warm look and carefully wrapped a blanket around him to keep himself warm. "He sounded pretty neat. Complete opposite of my dad - he was loud from what my mom tells me of him."

---

Bucky held Lilly close and kissed her head. He thought about his parents and missed them terribly. He looked up to Steve with gentle loving eyes and asked, "Do you think we should tell them about the animal now or later?"

Lilly whipped her head around to stare at Bucky. "What animal?"

---

Jesus, Lilly was on the ball when it came to stuff she wanted. "Yeah, we saw a pigeon stealing some lady's purse on the way back," Steve said, clearly lying. Lilly was unlikely to let it go, so he gave Bucky a small nod to let him know he could go ahead.

---

Bucky smiled and gave Lilly a squeeze. "Steve was thinking we could get you two a little rescue animal from the shelter to have as your very own." At Lilly's automatic yelping and Becca's surprised gasp, Bucky added hastily, "There are some rules! Steve, what are the rules?"

---

Steve watched the girls fondly. "Yes, rules. You two have to be the ones to take care of it. You have to clean up after it and schedule vet appointments if it's sick. Bucky is only going to pay for the supplies. I can help you train it since I'm here but the rest is up to you."
Becca nodded along with a serious expression and Lilly insisted that she could handle that. Bucky knew she couldn't. It would probably end up being all Becca. "Does that sound fair to the both of you?" Bucky asked and poked Lilly in the side. "Can you handle being in charge of it?"

Lilly rolled her eyes and insisted that she would help out. Bucky pushed her gently off his lap so he could get up saying that he needed a thicker sweater and headed towards his room. Becca followed after him. Clearly, she wanted to talk.

Steve watched Bucky and Becca head out to the other room. He reached out to ruffle up Lilly's hair. "You like your book, Kiddo? Bucky was the one who suggested you would like something like that."

Lilly smiled excitedly, "Yeah, I do! And I like the water bottle a lot. It's like the one the other guys on my team have." She paused then and looked towards Bucky's room. "Becca's really mad at Bucky. She told me he was out drinking last night. Don't know what she's saying in there now but she had some strong words about it on the way to school this morning."

"Your sister has a right to be mad," Steve said softly. "Your brother is doing his best but sometimes he messes up just like any of us. Becca is allowed to be upset. I don't like that she's badmouthing him, though."

Lilly adjusted and faced Steve. Nervously tugging on her shirtsleeve, she leaned into Steve slightly and asked, "Can I tell you something you can't tell Bucky?"

He hesitated at her question but nodded. "Alright. I won't tell him, but you should really tell him eventually whatever you're about to say to me."

"It's nothing like that..." Lilly started. "Becca's worried that Bucky's going to get drunk and try to overdose again like he did a few years ago. She thought he was doing better with you but then he came home drunk last night and she doesn't know what to think now."

Steve's eyes went wide. "He tried to overdose?" He hissed in a low voice. How could he - with his sisters in need of him? Steve knew that Bucky didn't handle stress in the best way but the girls already lost their parents. "Lilly, you can tell her that I'm watching over him now. And he may slip off the wagon now and again, but you guys don't have to worry, alright?"
Lilly went pale and looked sheepish. "Steve, I - I'm sorry. I thought you knew about that. I figured he would have told you." She pulled her hair out of its tie and tucked it behind her ears. "It was just after our parents died and our grandma was still alive. He'd just left school and started at the record shop." Lilly grabbed Steve's arm harshly. "Don't tell Bucky I told you about this. I wouldn't have said anything if I'd known you hadn't heard about it already."

---

Steve was so angry and sad on Bucky's behalf. He wanted to cry but he couldn't do it in front of Lilly or else she would feel even worse. "I won't tell him you said anything," Steve promised. He gave her a hug. "I'm glad you and your sister are looking out for your brother." He paused and then asked, "Is anything about this situation bothering you?"

---

Lilly looked down at her lap and chewed her lip. "Don't like it when the two of them fight. It's usually just quiet rage and dirty looks for a couple days but I still don't like it. Guess I don't mind if he drinks but Becca doesn't let me see him when he comes home drunk anyway so I don't know."

---

"Becca is headstrong and Bucky is...well, Bucky," Steve said. "Sometimes that's just how things go, but you've got me to talk to now if things aren't going so well between them." He tickled her side. "And soon you'll have a little animal friend, too."

---

Lilly giggled at Steve and gave him a quick hug before Becca popped out of Bucky's room with Bucky following close behind. They came to stand in front of the couch and Bucky looked to Steve and said, "Becca has decided that you have to come with me when I close my tabs at the bars." He put his hands in his pockets. "Even though I can handle it on my own, I told her you would join me."

---

Steve understood Becca's mistrust and didn't want to make a scene of it. "Sure," he said. "Even though you're able to do it, I think it's worth it to make Becca feel confident that it's all done." He slowly stood and wrapped Bucky up in a tight hug. He gave him an intense look and tried to think what Bucky must have been thinking when he tried to overdose, "I love you."

---

Bucky hugged him back and noticed Lilly looking away guiltily but he didn't say anything. "Becca also said she gets to pick dinner tonight."

"I want cereal, Steve," Becca said and crossed her arms. "I miss cereal."

---

"Cereal!" Steve exclaimed. "Bucky's the one that made you mad. Why do I have to suffer?" he said dramatically, but he did give in fairly quickly because he knew that Becca had to deal with a lot between last night and today and she deserved a break.

---

"Babe, you still have some soup in there I think." Bucky kissed him quickly and gave him a pout.
pretending that he cared that Steve didn't want cereal for dinner. Lilly grabbed onto Becca's arm and began asking a million questions like what kind of animal should they get and what are they going to name it and what color should it be?

---

Once Becca and Lilly were distracted, Steve sat Bucky down and cuddled up to him. He wrapped an arm around his waist and laid his head on his shoulder. "How're you feeling, Baby?"

---

"Little overwhelmed, but otherwise fine." Bucky kissed Steve's head. "Not drinking is going to be tough. I really like drinking. But I have to do it - for all of you." He held Steve close to him and ran a hand up and down his arm. He loved having Steve here and he was so glad that they at least could be open and affectionate in their own home.

---

Steve kissed Bucky's jaw. "I know it's a big step and I'm real proud of you." Steve laced their fingers together. "Just promise me something, okay? No matter how hard it gets, let me help. I don't want you to ever have to face something alone or feel like there's no way out."

---

Bucky smiled weakly and nodded. "Okay, I promise, Babe," he said and kissed Steve. "Man, I'm so tired. I think after dinner we should go to bed and just crash. I don't even want to change into pajamas. Just wiggle under the covers in this."

---

"Whatever we do now, we get to do together." Steve drew him in for a slow kiss. "I'm alright with that. But I can change you into pajamas. Or maybe just leave you naked," Steve purred.

---

Bucky nipped at Steve's lips and whispered back, "I still haven't helped you take care of something important yet today." He nodded down towards Steve's crotch. "Feel bad for not lending you a hand."

---

Steve blushed at the forwardness. "You won't hear me complain," he said. He smiled as he looked up into Bucky's eyes. "My life is better now that you're in it, don't ever forget that. No matter how much Becca yells at you."

---

"Oh, just you wait until she gets pissed off at you, Stevie." Bucky chuckled. "I don't know if you'll be able to handle it."

---

"I'll probably cry," Steve said honestly. Right now, he was just honored that she trusted him with Bucky's sobriety.

After food and nighttime duties were taken care of, Steve carefully made his way back to the room. It was a long day and he didn't want to admit how much his back was aching. "I'm so ready to not get up for hours."

---

Bucky was already stripped down to his skin and under the blankets by the time Steve got to their room. His eyes were closed and he hummed low to himself when Steve approached. "I work the early shift tomorrow so I'll see the girls off to school and I'll be back home around noon or one."

---

Steve laid down on his side and placed his hand on Bucky's stomach. "Sounds good. I think I'm going to need to sleep in. Today really wore me out," he huffed. "It was nice spending it all with you, though."

---

"It didn't start out great what with the hangover and the headache and dumping my booze and feeling like world's worst brother, but it did get a lot better." Bucky pulled Steve's hand up his chest so he was holding it just over his heart. He also backed up his body so he was nestled against Steve as the little spoon.

---

"The day got better because you chose to make a difference for yourself and your sisters. That's pretty admirable," Steve said with an adoring smile. "Maybe one of these days Becca will be as proud of you as I am right now."
Today was officially the day. They were getting their animal after school and bringing it back to its new home. Bucky had already signed the new contract with the landlord agreeing to pay the extra money every month to keep a pet inside and Becca had already set up a little spot in the kitchen for its food and water. They still weren’t sure if they were going to get a dog or a cat but Lilly was far too ecstatic about all of it to care one way or the other.

---

Steve was excited for the girls. He loved animals but he was happier that they would have something to keep them company that was theirs. "Alright, you guys, ready to go? Any idea what you two are going to end up picking? How about a big, ugly, hairless cat?"

---

"I'd be fine with that," Becca said, but Lilly pulled a horrified face.

Bucky reluctantly went with them to the shelter even though he vowed he would have nothing to do with the animal and didn't want to get attached to it. "Just so long as it's not too big, whatever you get."

---

When they arrived at the shelter, Lilly went nuts going to all the cages to see which animals were the fluffiest and cutest. Becca was a bit more reserved but she was clearly excited. "Look at them," Steve said to Bucky fondly. "They are so happy, Bucky."

---

Bucky watched Steve watching his sisters and he felt a rush of pride and love and family come over him. He really wanted to hold Steve's hand and tell him that it was so cute how much he loved Becca and Lilly. "Hey," he nudged Steve, "Thanks for convincing me to do this for them."

---

"You're welcome. You're going to end up getting attached to this animal no matter what, though. Cause you're a big sap," Steve accused with a playful grin. "What do you think they're going to end up picking out?"

---

"Becca's going to want the saddest looking cat in this place and Lilly will go for the fluffiest dog." Bucky pointed at the two of them as they roamed down the line of crates. "Then there will be a fight and you'll get to make the decision so it's not on me."

---

As if on cue, both girls came up to them to plead their case - Becca had this big, pathetic-looking cat with a lazy eye and Lilly held a squirming fluffball of a puppy in her arms. "Bucky, which do you think is cuter?" Lilly asked.
"Nope," Bucky said and jabbed a thumb towards Steve. "He's going to help you train it so he's got to help you pick." He crossed his arms and gave a definitive nod to Steve. He wasn't going to budge on this.

---

Steve looked nervously at the two girls, who he suddenly couldn't say no to. Bucky would kill him if they got both. "Well, how about you both try playing with the other animal first to see if you like it."

---

"Sounds like a good idea," Bucky said. "Steve and I are going to go sit on that bench while you two try to make the decision, okay?" He led Steve to an old bench in the corner of the room and sat down keeping on eye on the girls.

---

The girls only needed about ten minutes to make their decision. Becca came over holding the cat in her arms but there was a huge wet spot on her shirt. Even though they picked her choice of pet, she still looked sour. "The puppy peed on her," Lilly explained. There was no convincing Becca to have the dog when that happened.

---

"So, you are going with the cat, then?" Bucky asked and scratched behind its little ears. He was going to regret this pretty soon once he got attached to those big sad eyes. "I'll go sign the adoptions papers while you pick out some supplies and toys, okay?"

---

They both nodded. The cat bumped his head lightly against Bucky's palm as soon as he pet him. Lilly rushed over to find a cute collar and leash, determined that if she wasn't getting a dog, she was going to make sure the cat would take walks with her. "You're doing a good thing, Bucky," Steve said. "And you know you're going to end up wanting it to sleep in our bed."

---

Bucky let out a long sigh and looked from the girls to Steve. "That thing is too cute. I think they chose it on purpose to try to win me over on this whole thing." After the adoption papers were signed and they had the cat in a little carrier and the toys and supplies in bags, they all headed back to the apartment to introduce the little guy to its new home.

---

The cat meowed softly when it was brought outside but seemed to be excited that it was out of the shelter. "Have you girls thought up a name for it yet?"

---

Lilly mumbled, "I said it should be Lilly Junior but Becca says that's a stupid name."

Bucky grabbed Lilly and pulled her into a side hug. "It's also a boy cat, Lil."

"Boys can be named after flowers, too," Lilly huffed and pouted. "Lilly Junior is a good name."
"We should just call it Lilly so everyone has to guess whether or not we're talking about the cat or the other animal named Lilly," Steve teased.

Becca made a grumpy sound. "It's still a dumb name for a boy cat."

---

"I like Thunder. Or Doom," Bucky offered. "Or Hurricane. Oh! Hurricane the Cat! Doesn't that sound fucking amazing?" Bucky eyed the cat again and realized with shame that he was already horribly enamored with the little beast. And Steve was probably right; he probably would want to have it sleep in his bed.

---

"What about Clash?" Steve suggested. "It kind of sounds like the noises you hear in a hurricane and you all like The Clash so much."

Becca peered into the cage. "He's too fluffy for a name like that. We need to name him something refined."

---

"Fuck refined!" Bucky said. "Clash is a perfect name." But he shut up when Becca gave him a glare that said 'his name will be refined, dammit'. Bucky couldn't really think of any classier names for such a pathetic ratty cat except something snooty like 'Winston'.

---

Steve loved that Bucky was already getting so wrapped up in the new family pet. "Don't worry, Buck. No matter what Becca names him, he will always be Clash Hurricane Rogers-Barnes to us."

---

Becca and Lilly gave them both a quizzical look and Becca asked, "When was Rogers-Barnes decided on?"

Lilly piped up with, "Am I Lilly Rogers-Barnes now?" and she looked down at herself like she expected some grand change to have occurred in her.

---

Steve blushed deeply. "Um... I mean, it's not like we could ever change our names to it," He said. "But Bucky and I were just speculating whose name is first in the hyphen. I think Rogers-Barnes sounds better than Barnes-Rogers."

---

"You just wanted to be first," Becca decided with a curt nod. "Barnes-Rogers definitely sounds better."

Bucky flicked her on the top of the head. "Steve likes it with ‘Rogers’ first so that's what it is. And no, Lil, you are still just a Barnes." He also thought about the imaginary baby that they had discussed the potential of adopting. He hoped that one day soon they could have a Baby Rogers-Barnes officially.

---
"No, it sounds better and I saved the best for last," Steve defended; playfully flicking Becca's shoulder right after Bucky flicked her head. He sighed happily and once they got to the apartment, he opened the door for all of them. "Welcome home, Destroyer," Steve said to the cat, purposely calling him an obnoxious name to annoy Becca.

---

"It's not Destroyer," Becca responded as she walked into the apartment. Bucky locked the door behind them and watched Becca gingerly place the carrier in the middle of the living room and open the door. The cat didn't move an inch, it simply stared at them and occasionally made a sad little meow.

---

"Give Ripper some time to adjust to his new home. I'm sure he will be looking for cuddles in no time," Steve wrapped an arm around Bucky's waist. "I love you," he said sweetly. "Can I have a kiss?"

---

Bucky held Steve and scrunched up his face, "Um... no," he said like a brat. But he caved when Steve started to tickle him and he couldn't do anything about it. "Okay, fine, fine." He kissed Steve lightly and smiled into it. "Love you, too."

---

The cat slowly came out of the cage and sniffed at Becca's feet. He looked up at her with those big eyes and jumped up into her arms as she bent down to pick him up. "Oh, look at him."

---

"Do you have a name?" Bucky asked the cat and pet its head. "Because I'm fine with calling you 'Cat' if you don't, but I think a name would be nice." He took a little toy out of the bag and dangled it in front of the cat so it could bat at it happily.

---

"I'm still thinking about it," Becca said.

Lilly watched with mild jealousy as her siblings played with their cat. "Well, how about you let me hold him while you're thinking about it?" Lilly demanded.

---

Becca handed the cat off to Lilly and she gripped him close and beamed at his little face. "Lilly Junior is still available," she said and shot Becca a pleading look.

"Becca wants a fancy name like Serge or Morton or Raphael or Karsten," Bucky listed off names in hopes that one fancy name would catch Becca's attention and she would pick it for the cat.

---

"Raphael works," Becca said, which made Lilly scrunch her nose up in utter distaste.

"Ew, gross. Why?" She complained.
Becca kissed the cat's head. "I like it even more now."

---

Bucky's face lit up. "Finally, okay! Raphael it is! Hello little Raphael," he said to the cat and slipped his hand into Steve's. He gave him a pleased look and leaned into him. He really was glad that they could do this for the girls. And he was glad Steve convinced him of it.

---

Steve kissed Bucky's temple. "Love you," he said again to him. The cat wiggled a little to get down so he could go explore his new home. "I've never had a pet before," Steve admitted. "I used to be extremely allergic."

---

Bucky and Becca both shot Steve a concerned look and Bucky asked, "You sure you'll be fine around Raphael?" He squeezed Steve's hand and searched his face for any signs of an allergic reaction like watery eyes or red skin but found nothing.

---

Steve nodded his head. "Yeah, when I became an adult, I got a lot healthier and I wasn't allergic to a lot of stuff anymore," he said. "Have I ever shown you pictures of when I was a kid?"

---

"No, you haven't," Bucky said curiously. "I'm betting you were adorable, though."

Lilly laughed to herself and Becca smiled at her and said, "We've seen Steve's childhood photos. Miss Sarah showed them to us one time."

---

Steve turned to Becca and ruffled her hair. "She did, huh? My mom still loves to embarrass me, it seems." He looked back to Bucky and shrugged, "I guess I could be called adorable. I was also skinny and small," he said.

---

"Why? How tiny were you?" Bucky asked and poked Steve's muscular arm and abs. "Because you're pretty damn big now, Babe. Can't imagine you as little at all." He thought about himself as a kid and how he really didn't have many childhood photos of himself anywhere. He kept a lot of his parents and his sisters but he trashed several dozens of his own.

---

"Just you wait..." Steve went rummaging through their bedroom for a photo album and found a picture from when he was about fourteen and came back to Bucky. He was stick thin and short next to his mom wearing clothes that were too big for him. "Have a look."

---

"Jesus, Steve!" Bucky snatched the picture up. "You're so cute and small. How old were you? Are those your clothes or someone else's? They look way too big on you." Bucky grabbed for Steve's hand and held it tight and he hummed happily while looking at the tiny Steve.
Steve blushed. "Fourteen," he said. "Those were my dad's clothes cause my Ma couldn't afford anything at the time." They'd been ridiculously poor for a while because his mom had to stay home all the time to take care of her sick son.

"I was right, though, you were adorable. I mean, you still are, of course, but look at you," Bucky said and stared at the photo. He was going to frame this and put it next to the one of his parents' wedding. "Hey," Bucky looked up at Steve. "We need a new family picture of the four of us." Raphael meowed at them from the ground. "I mean the five of us."

Steve gasped at the suggestion. "Oh my god, yes, we do." He was grinning from ear to ear and was even getting a little teary-eyed. It wasn't like he felt like he wasn't part of the family, but this was the first picture they would all have together. "I'm sure my mom will take one."

Bucky smiled warmly at Steve and hugged him close. "Sounds like a plan, then." He was glad Steve was so excited for it. He wasn't sure if it would mean that much to him or not. "We can do that soon, then. And I'll get a nice frame for it too." He turned to his sisters. "Does that sound good to you two?"

Becca eyed Steve for a few moments and then looked back at Bucky. By this point she was pretty convinced that Steve was in it for the long haul but having a 'family' portrait made it start to get a little too real. "We're not taking the one of mom and dad down, right?"

"No, god, of course not," Bucky said and gripped Becca's shoulders. "Never. We can hang it underneath that one. Mom and Dad aren't going anywhere. I promise." He gave her a quick kiss to the top of her head and looked to Steve for some help.

As excited as he had been to take a picture all together, Steve didn't want Becca to feel like he was trying to replace the family they used to have. "It's okay if you don't want to take the picture together, Becca," he said softly. "You don't have to give an explanation."

Becca nodded and looked over to the kitchen where their family picture was hanging. "It's okay. I don't mind it," she conceded and gave Steve a quick look. "If you're in our family now I guess we do need a new picture. And Mom and Dad won't mind sharing the space on the wall."

Steve gave her a hug. "Best future sister-in-law ever. Sorry, Lilly. You got to wait to be my favorite," he chuckled. Raphael came up to Bucky and batted at his shoelaces since they were coming undone. "What do you guys want me to make for dinner that isn't cereal?"
Bucky gently picked up the cat and held him close. He really was too cute for words and those eyes were so sad. "I'd be okay with chicken and noodles of some sort." He offered and scratched the cat's head. "Or some burritos." His stomach growled and he looked to his sisters. "Chicken, Lilly?"

"Chicken," Lilly agreed. "And Mac and cheese." It was a strange combo but Steve would do it. He gave them all a kiss and then started on dinner. "I thought you said you didn't want to have anything to do with the cat, Bucky," Lilly teased.

Bucky was still holding Raphael and he looked up from staring into his eyes. "Hmm? No, I'm not doing anything. I'm just holding the little guy. He's so sad looking." He handed him off to Lilly and went to help Steve make food. And by helping, he hugged him from behind and moved with him as he went around the kitchen.

Steve smiled and looked back at Bucky with a happy expression. "Hello, Mr. Rogers-Barnes," he hummed. "I can't wait to take that family picture. Can we all have a matching theme? Like the same sweater or something like that?"

"No, Steve, we can't match," Bucky answered and kissed his shoulder. "We can all wear blue or something like that." He detached from Steve and opened the fridge mumbled something about really wanting some wine just about now. Instead, he found some lemonade and decided that would have to be good enough.

"Why not? It'd be adorable. I bet I could even make something for Raphael so he would match." Bucky would get a kick out of watching Steve attempt to dress the cat, he was sure.

"Can you even sew?" Bucky asked and drank his lemonade with a sour expression on his face to match the taste of the drink.

"A little," Steve said. "Had to mend a lot of my clothes when they ripped and Ma was too tired to do it." He ran his fingers through Bucky's hair. "And I know I've said it already, but I'm proud that you're going sober for your sisters, Bucky."

"It's really difficult and all I want right now is some vodka or something. Doesn't that sound perfect, Babe?" Bucky really was having a hard time with no drinking. It had been close to two weeks without a drink and he was not handling it well.
"What sounds perfect is keeping your sisters happy, which vodka won't do." Steve kissed the tip of Bucky's nose. "And think of all the money you're saving."

---

Bucky nodded and drank some more lemonade. "I know, I know. I just feel like I could have the occasional drink and be fine." He sat on the counter while Steve cooked dinner and lightly tapped on the cabinets with his heels. "I'm going to have to take up smoking again just to get over drinking."

---

"My mom is a nurse. You think she's going to let you take up smoking without having an earful? New studies are saying that it's incredibly bad for you," Steve said. "You should find a vice that doesn't kill you."

---

"What sort of vice isn't going to kill me, huh?" Bucky asked. "I mean that's sort of the point of it, right? To do something a little self-destructive?" He scratched a hand through his hair and looked down at his lap. He was getting a little sad and a headache was starting to form. He wasn't sure why but he wasn't feeling all right all the sudden.

---

"I mean, you can get addicted to... arcade games and waste all your pocket change. Or your new vice can be showering me with kisses." Steve leaned down to kiss him to prove how good of an addiction that could be. "We will find something that will help take that urge away, Baby."

---

"Cigarettes - that'll take the urge away," Bucky said with a pout. "Or excessive sex... maybe." He picked up an apple from the bowl next to him and started angrily munching on it talking through the bites saying, "I'm getting a headache again."

---

"Quit eating. You're going to ruin your appetite," Steve scolded and massaged Bucky's head lightly and frowned with concern. "Do you want to lay down, Beautiful?" He asked. "I'll get you medicine."

---

"I don't know, maybe. I think it's been getting worse lately since I've been trying to be sober." Bucky put his apple down obediently and pulled Steve in close for a kiss. "Maybe I'll just go take a walk in the cold air for a bit. Might do me some good."

---

"You could be going through withdrawals," Steve said. "Have you looked for a doctor yet? Or health insurance plans? You can still try for government assistance."

---

"Withdrawals? It's not like I am an alcoholic, though," Bucky defended. "And no I haven't looked for a doctor for us yet. But I should soon cause Lilly's eyesight is getting bad I think. She could use some glasses." She would protest, of course, saying she could see fine but she had been missing the ball a lot lately.

---

"You quit cold turkey. Alcoholic or not, if you were used to it being in your system, your body could be thrown off," Steve said. "We have to get all of you to the Doctor, Baby. What if Lilly gets a stinger right to the face cause she didn't see the ball?"

---

"I know." Bucky sighed. "I just hate the doctor's. It's just some guy telling me another thing that's wrong that I need to worry about and adding more money to our medical bills. And I think that half the time they are just making shit up so they get paid."

---

Steve pet his fingers through Bucky's hair some more. "I know," he said in a playful mock of Bucky. "But we can't grow old together if you have some preventable thing that goes undiagnosed for years until it catches up to you."

---

Bucky closed his eyes and groaned. "Fine, I'll go to the fucking doctor. I'll try to call someplace tomorrow if it'll make you be quiet about it." Becca came over then holding Raphael. She handed him off to Bucky and grabbed an apple to munch on as well. "Steve told me off for eating before dinner. You better watch out," he joked.

---

Becca gave Steve a calculated look before biting into the apple. "He won't tell me off. He's too afraid that I won't like him and won't let him take a family photo with us," she said casually.

She took another bite and Steve huffed. "You don't own me," Steve defended as he seasoned the chicken.

---

"I think she just proved that she does." Bucky laughed but he was also genuinely concerned that his sisters would decide that they didn't like Steve and didn't want him around anymore. It would break his heart but he would have to give him up. Not that either of them had really shown any signs of that, but Bucky was still paranoid.
A few days later, when Steve was feeling pretty decent, he decided to pay a visit to Bucky's job. He'd wanted to for a while but the walk was draining and he didn't want to risk driving under medication. He stopped at a newsstand to get a couple of small roses that he hid in a paper bag so Bucky’s co-workers wouldn't see. The little entry bell rang as Steve walked in.

---

Bucky was in the back getting some boxes of stock ready to put out on the floor. He was having a pretty shitty day because two of his good-for-nothing coworkers were just sitting at the registers chatting and not helping him at all. Clint was also working on completely redesigning the classical orchestral music section because someone had complained that they mixed baroque into the Renaissance.

---

Steve could tell by the way Bucky held himself that he wasn't having a good time. He walked up behind him and said, "Excuse me, Sir, I have a complaint about an order I received." Steve masked his voice as best he could so Bucky wouldn't recognize him until he turned around.

---

Bucky steeled himself for the conversation to come and slapped on his best fake smile and turned around slowly. He let out a scoff and smiled when he saw his boyfriend, "Steve... cheeky bastard. What're you doing here?" He wanted to grab for his hand or hug him hello or give him a kiss. No customers were in the store right then and none of his coworkers were even facing them but he figured he probably shouldn't.

---

Steve laughed and nudged Bucky playfully. "Man, I saw such resign in your eyes," he said. Retail was the worst. Steve knew how it felt. "I got something for you." He offered him the little bag of flowers. "Bad day, huh?"

---

When Bucky saw the paper bag, he really hoped it was booze but he knew Steve wouldn't be bringing that to him. He opened the flowers and gestured for Steve to come to the back office with him. "Yeah, not a great day. We've been slow and Clint has been working on a big project all day and those other two dipshits haven't been helping me restock at all."

---

Steve paused for a moment and then offered, "If you want to watch a bit of a show, I can pretend I'm on duty and do a random search on them. Think they actually got weed in their pockets?"

---

"They most definitely have weed in their pockets." Bucky nodded. "They were smoking in the bathroom earlier. Probably not a good idea to fake search them. They might freak the fuck out."
"Aw, man. But I could have gotten them scared and made them work harder here in exchange for not being turned in," Steve said.

---

Now that they were alone, Bucky pulled Steve in and gave him a quick kiss. "Want to meet Clint? He could probably use an interruption from his project."

---

---

"Now remember, Clint can't really hear but he can read lips. So you don't have to shout at him or anything." Bucky gave Steve another quick kiss then put his flowers down on the desk before heading back out to the floor. "He's going to love you, though."

---

"What if I silently mouth words to him the whole time?" Steve asked. He dragged Bucky back to kiss him slowly before they went out to the floor. He tapped Clint on the shoulder and signed 'Hi I'm Steve,' to him. Ever since he knew Clint was mostly deaf he learned a few greetings and such since he knew he would meet him eventually.

---

Bucky was impressed and admittedly a little turned on when Steve signed to Clint. Bucky knew a significant amount of sign language that he had been taught in the years working with Clint and he was so proud that Steve knew some things too. Clint signed back that he was Clint then held a hand out for Steve to shake. Bucky looked around the room once to make sure no one but his coworkers were there before signing 'This is the boyfriend.'

---

Steve shook his hand and grinned as Bucky introduced him as his boyfriend. 'Bucky say good things you,' he signed but then huffed and said out loud, “Bucky says good things about you.” He knew a few words but not all the ins and outs of signing. 'What new music?' He signed as he said, “Get any good music in?"

---

Clint waved Steve off implying that he shouldn't push himself to sign if he didn't want to. "Well, I'm having to rework the entire classical section cause some son-of-a-bitch didn't like the baroque being mixed in with the Renaissance shit. Bucky's in charge of the newest shipment," Clint said then pointed to the other two by the register. "They are meant to be helping."

---

"There's a difference between classical music styles?" Steve asked to himself. He wasn't that smart about different types of music from hundreds of years ago. "So why aren't they working?" Steve asked and nodded towards the other two in the store. "Don't they know you're deaf and not blind?"
"Yeah, but they also know that we need them around to deal with the difficult customers because Bucky and I are both two snarky bastards and Bucky's got a bit of a short temper. While they are stoned, they can handle any shit head customer." Clint stopped and looked to Bucky. "Wait, this is the cop, right?"

"Yeah, but he's not going to arrest those idiots," Bucky said reassuringly.

---

"Fair enough," Steve said. "And don't worry. So long as people aren't stealing weed or stealing money to get weed, I don't care. Too many kids are getting put in prison over it and becoming criminals while alcohol is a more harmful drug anyway."

---

Bucky gave Steve a quick hurtful look. He couldn't help but think that was meant for him - as some play to get Bucky to feel bad about even thinking of drinking again. If they were alone he would probably argue that he should start smoking pot then. Bucky wasn't going to admit to feeling a little on edge while being sober, but he really was being pretty defensive about it.

---

Steve hadn't meant it that way at all, but when he saw the look Bucky gave him, Steve's shoulders slumped a little and he gave him an apologetic smile.

Clint noticed the exchange, and while Bucky was reliable as a worker, he knew that the guy had a bit of a problem. "Bucky, why don't you take some extra time for break. Half hour, my treat."

---

Bucky nodded and thanked Clint. "Want to go get some lunch?" He asked Steve and started walking away not waiting for an answer. He really wanted a sandwich from Rustic Rocco's and he figured Steve wouldn't mind going to his favorite spot for lunch either.

---

Steve followed Bucky and touched his arm lightly. "Baby, I didn't mean to offend you with the alcohol comment," he said softly. "It wasn't directed at you. I wouldn't ever try to make you feel bad like that on purpose."

---

Bucky just kept walking and said, "You know this is hard for me, Steve. You know I hate being sober. It's way too much pressure not to drink and to make you and Becca happy and proud of me. I get so worked up with worry that I'm going to fuck up that I just want a drink even more to help ease that feeling."

---

"I know, Buck. That's why I would never try and make you feel bad for it." Steve sighed. "I'm not going to lie and say I won't be disappointed if you drink. But I know how much work it is to stay sober. My dad was never able to stop once he started," he explained. "Is there anything I can do to help?"

---
"You can let me have the occasional drink. Or the occasional night at the bar. Just sometimes."
Bucky knew that this whole thing had been his idea. He was the one who dumped his booze. But he did it for his family and he felt the slightest bit of resentment about it, which made him feel even worse as a guardian and a boyfriend. He would probably feel like that for a while until he was used to being sober.

---

Steve paused in thought and said, "I'll say yes to that, but can we add the condition that whenever you drink, I have to be around and Becca has to be out?" Steve wanted to make sure Bucky didn't go overboard and that Becca didn't fly off the handle if she saw Bucky with a drink.

---

Bucky didn't like that. It didn't feel like freedom to do what he wanted. It felt like controlled fun and that's not what Bucky was looking for. He was looking to get slammed and forget himself for a while. He liked being drunk because when he was he didn't hate himself at all. "I'll think about it."
He said with an edge.

---

"Buck," Steve said in a soft tone. "I won't ever try to force you into agreeing over something you don't want to do... but if you have a problem, please let me know." Steve gave Bucky a pleading look. "I love you so, so much. I don't care if you get drunk. I care why you get drunk."

---

"You don't know why I get drunk," Bucky said sharply. He drank because he liked it. He drank because he forgot himself. He drank because he lost control when he was drunk. He drank because he got hyper-sexual while he was drunk. He drank because his mother taught him how to love whiskey. He drank because it helped him ignore when he felt like dying. He drank because he couldn't feel the ache of his past late at night when he had nothing else to think about.

---

"I know, Bucky, and that's what worries me," Steve said. "How am I supposed to know the difference between when you drink to relax or when you drink because you're angry at yourself or something?" Steve asked. "You do so much. You deserve to relax. But if you're drinking because you're feeling awful, I want to be there to help lift you up again."

---

"Steve, I'm always angry at myself for something," Bucky nearly shouted. "I've got two kids to take care of and I'm not cut out for it and I'm worried every day that I'm fucking them up and they're both going to end up like me!" Bucky was stopped in an alley with Steve and no one else was around to hear him shout.

---

"You are cut out for it, Bucky," Steve said. "Look at yourself. You dropped your whole damn life to keep them with the only family they had. I'm a cop. I've seen some pretty fucked up kids and adults alike out here. Becca and Lilly are nothing like that," he said. "And if they turn out anything like you, I'd be proud."
"How can you say that knowing some of what I've put them through? You don't even know all of it but what you do know is enough to make me be disappointed if I were you." Bucky was feeling incredibly small and vulnerable. All he wanted was to go home and let Steve fuck him until he fell asleep in Steve's arms and then he just wanted to stay there for as long as he possibly could.

---

"You can tell me anything, Bucky. But you don't have to tell me anything until you're ready." He crowded Bucky's space a little and kissed his forehead because nobody was around to see. "Baby, why do you think I fell in love with you?"

---

Bucky looked at the ground and frowned. "I don't know. I never wanted to ask and risk you realizing you didn't know either and then you'd just leave." He moved around Steve and started walking on towards the sandwich shop. His break time was going to be over before he knew it.

---

Steve grabbed Bucky's hand and pulled him back. He got down on his knee so Bucky would see him even if he was looking at the ground. Steve winced a little since his back wasn't totally healed. "I fell in love with you because you work so hard and take so little for yourself. I fell in love with you because after you stood up for some kid you didn't know, the first thing you did was call home to make sure your sisters were okay. You lost so much, baby. And maybe you've given up on some of the dreams that you used to have, but we can do so much together. We can have new dreams."

---

Bucky's lip quivered as he looked down at Steve and sniffled back tears. He didn't deserve this. He didn't deserve Steve or his love or his generosity. He pulled Steve back up from the ground and gave him a hug and a kiss before letting go. "I love you too, Steve. And I'm sorry for all the shit I've done or pain I've caused you. And I'm sorry in advance for what I might do in the future. If you are willing to be by my side and work with me and not leave even when I screw up then I'll do my best to be perfect for you."

---

"Don't try to be perfect, Bucky, just try to do your best." Steve had to lean on Bucky for the rest of the trip because walking so much today was taking a bit of a toll and kneeling didn't help his case either.

Once they got to the shop, Steve ordered himself a sandwich as well and waited for Bucky to get his food saying, "So Clint is pretty cool."

---

Bucky picked up his sandwich and the one he got for Clint and they headed back to the record store. They would have to eat and walk because he only had about ten minutes left. "Yeah, Clint is great. I'm really glad you met him finally. I didn't know you knew some sign language."

---

"I didn't know sign language before. But I borrowed a book from the library to learn the basics... you know, like meeting someone and doing the alphabet," Steve said.
"You did all that just to meet Clint?" Bucky asked Steve with a smile. Steve was really special. He did these huge gestures like learning sign language just to make someone feel valued and special and worth his time. And Bucky couldn't help but falling more in love with him every time he did.

"Well, yeah. He's your boss and your best friend and someone you trust so shouldn’t I go out of my way a little for him at the very least?" When they got back to the store, one of the bozos hastily put out the joint he'd been smoking.

Bucky made his way over to Clint and handed him the sandwich that he had picked up for him. Then he went over to his coworkers and took the joint from them before opening it up, spitting in it and then tossing it in the trash. "We've talked about this, Reggie," Bucky said to one of them sternly. "Only out back and only during your break time. Don't make me tell you again."

Steve watched Bucky handle his coworkers and walked away with him saying, "Jeez, you spend all day at work taking care of two kids then you come home and take care of two more."

"Yes, but, at least only two of my kids smoke pot," Bucky said and looked to the stacks of records he still needed to put out today. "I've got about three more hours before I'll be home. Do you mind making dinner for the girls when they get back from school?"

Steve shook his head. "As if I'd ever mind making dinner," he said with a loving smile. "I'll make Lilly's favorite since Becca has been getting her way too much. She has me wrapped around her finger cause I want that photo together."

"Don't worry, Baby, we'll get the photo," Bucky assured him and gave him a quick kiss. "See you back home. Make sure Lilly feeds Raphael and cleans his litter. It wasn't done yesterday and Becca did it last time. Lilly already isn't pulling her weight with the cat."

Steve smiled into the kiss. "I'll make sure she does. Promise," he said. It was no surprise that Lilly wasn't helping out with the cat and he was happy they didn't get the puppy since they were more work. "Love you."

The rest of the day at the shop went slow and Bucky was ready to go home. He said goodbye to Clint and trudged on back home. When he got there, his family was all passed out in the living room with plates of leftover homemade pizza on the coffee table. Steve was asleep on the couch with Lilly curled up on his legs. Becca was asleep on a pile of blankets on the floor next to the couch. Bucky smiled and sighed and grabbed another blanket to toss on top of Lilly and Steve.
The three had kept themselves pretty occupied in Bucky’s absence. Lilly begrudgingly took care of the chores for the cat and helped Steve make pizza. When he came over to them, Bucky was quickly greeted by Raphael, who pawed at his leg lightly to be picked up. Steve peeked an eye open at the sound of Bucky’s footsteps. "Hey, Beautiful."

Bucky was holding the cat when Steve woke up. "Hey, Baby, how’s your back feeling on that couch?" He asked and rubbed a hand over Steve's head. "Let's get you into bed, okay?" He set Raphael down on the floor and scooped Lilly up in his arms. "I'll get them to bed first."

"Not that great," Steve admitted. "But I didn't want to wake her up." Steve had fallen asleep with an arm draped protectively over Lilly even though she didn't need protecting from anything here. Once Bucky scooped Lilly up, Steve carefully got off the couch.

Becca woke up once they started making noise and talking so she got up and silently made her way to her room. Once Lilly was tucked in, Bucky grabbed Steve's hand and led him to their bedroom. "How was your evening with them?"

"It was good. We watched some TV and played Scrabble," Steve said. "Lilly got really tired so she was the first to fall asleep. Then I guess I fell asleep and then Becca did," he said with a half smile. "They missed you."

"Good thing you played Scrabble and not that train game. I hate Scrabble," Bucky said. "Who won? Or did you all fall asleep too early to win at all?" Bucky slipped off his work clothes and put on pajamas before going to the bathroom to brush his teeth.

"Raphael thought the pieces would be fun to knock around so nobody won." The cat was usually good but sometimes he freaked out over the strangest things. Steve stripped down but couldn't be bothered to dress himself so he just laid naked in bed. "I love them so much. And you, Buck," he said. "Do you have work on Saturday? We should all go out to the movies."

"No, I don't work. I think a day out to the movies is a great idea." Bucky crawled into bed after having brushed his teeth and he snuggled close to Steve and ran a hand down his torso to his thighs. "It's been a long fucking day," he said with a sultry air about him as he continued rubbing up and down Steve's thigh occasionally brushing over his dick.

Steve snuggled in closer and gave Bucky an interested look as his hand brushed over his thigh and cock. "It has," Steve agreed. "I spent most of the morning trying to think of ways we could have sex
"without bothering my back," he said with a bit of a blush.

--

"That's all you did today?" Bucky chuckled and rubbed at Steve's balls. "There isn't any way we can fuck without hurting your back right now. We just need to wait it out." Bucky held the base of Steve's dick and added, "But we can do this if you want."

--

Steve spread his legs a little and pushed his hips forward into Bucky's hand. "But what if we do it with the both of us laying on our sides? Big spoon little spoon style," he said.

--

"I have no idea what you mean, Steve," Bucky said but started pulling off his pants and underwear anyway. "Just tell me where you want me, okay?" He said and kicked his pants to the bottom of the bed. He'd deal with them later.

--

Steve nudged Bucky so that he was on his side with his back pressed against Steve's chest. Steve rubbed his cock against Bucky's ass and nudged him so he bent his leg a bit. "Like this?" Steve suggested. "Have you never done it this way?"

--

"So you're just going to grind on me until you come?" Bucky asked and started stroking his own dick. "You better take it easy, Steve," he warned and turned his head back to kiss Steve then started stroking himself faster. "This just feels like I'm jerking off. I can't see you."

--

"No, Dumbass, I'm going to fuck you like this. Once I find the right angle," Steve said in a determined tone. Bucky wasn't the only one desperate for sex. "Or maybe you could ride me. You just got to take it easy."

--

Bucky did love hearing Steve swearing and that desperate tone that he wanted Bucky so much. But still, "No sex, Steve," Bucky said quickly and disappointedly. "Not until your back is all better. I'll just blow you and then jerk myself off." He really wanted Steve to fuck him and he wanted to fuck Steve back but he couldn't risk hurting Steve even more.

--

"Buck," Steve whined, putting on a pathetic tone that Bucky hadn't ever heard him use yet. Steve knew that he shouldn't have sex but Steve never did what was completely safe for him. He gave Bucky a big old pair of sad eyes. "At least we should try..."

--

"Steve..." Bucky whined back and absently pulled at his cock. "You know we can't. What'll we do if you hurt yourself during sex and then we have to go to the doctor’s? I'll be embarrassed enough for the both of us." He chided but he really wanted Steve to win out and just start opening him up anyway.

---

Steve made an absolutely pathetic sound when Bucky turned him down again. "Then what if I just fist you again?" If Steve couldn't get the satisfaction of sex then he wanted to at least give Bucky something he wanted.

---

"If you start on that then I'm going to want to let you fuck me," Bucky said and guided his ass closer to Steve's hard dick. He sandwiched it between his cheeks and made small light movements to grind against him. He was breathing heavily and his own cock was standing at attention waiting for him to do something about it.

---

Steve groaned and rocked his hips, rutting up against Bucky's ass. He dragged his nails lightly up Bucky's torso and started to tease a nipple by pinching and rolling it between his fingers. "So is that a yes?"

---

Bucky gasped out at the touch and couldn't help how he started grinding on Steve with more force. "Can you promise me you will be gentle on yourself? Go slow and careful and don't push it too much. And if you start to hurt at any time you need to stop, okay?" Bucky wouldn't admit that he was beyond desperate to fuck Steve.

---

"I promise," Steve said a little too quickly. He would agree to anything so long as it meant Bucky would let him push his luck a little. It's been torture having a beautiful boyfriend he couldn't be intimate with.

---

Bucky turned to kiss Steve quickly before saying, "How do you always convince me of things? You just do stuff to me, Steve. I want to you make love to me nice and slow and with purpose - even if it takes all night. I want to feel you. I want to know you are putting yourself in every moment."

---

Steve's eyes lit up and he kissed Bucky slowly. "I'll keep you up until the morning if that makes you happy, Baby," he hummed. "Would hate for you to ever doubt how much I love every bit of you." He carefully turned so he could grab the lube from the nightstand and started to coat his fingers with it. "Can't wait to make you feel so good."

---

Bucky nodded slowly and rolled so Steve had better access to his ass. "I love you, Steve. I hope you know that," He said and massaged his ass cheeks apart to show his hole to Steve. He was excited and grateful that Steve was going to fuck him but part of him still worried about Steve's back.
Steve made a desperate, aroused sound when Bucky held himself open for him. Steve teased the rim of his hole for a little while before slipping two fingers at once. "It's been a while since I've been inside you," he hummed. "So I'm going to make you come just opening you up before I do anything else."

---

Bucky breathed out heavily and quickly at the intrusion of two fingers. "You don't want me to come with your cock inside me?" Bucky also couldn't help but wish he was a little drunk. He liked fucking drunk because everything felt floaty and light and every thrust was more impactful than usual.

---

"Oh, I do want that," Steve purred. "So that's going to happen, too." He had plenty of lost time to make up for and making Bucky come twice in one night seemed appropriate. He slowly worked his two fingers inside and out, making sure that Bucky didn't get stretched too much too fast. "How's that?"

---

"It's good. I'm fine," Bucky said quickly and reached back to feel Steve's fingers breaching his hole. "Steve, I missed this. I missed you. I want you so bad and I know you know it. Can't help but want you every second of every day." Bucky rambled on and moved his head back and forth as Steve pumped his finger inside him.

---

Steve leaned over to kiss at Bucky's neck while he spread his two fingers wide inside of his boyfriend and curled them to find the right spot inside him. "We get to have the rest of our lives to spoil each other and fuck each other silly," he hummed softly. "And that's going to be amazing, Bucky. I won't ever stop wanting you as badly as I do now."

---

Bucky wanted to sass back that Steve wasn't going to want him when he was an old man but just then he added a third finger and Bucky's head lulled against the pillow as he breathed out Steve's name with a groan. He pulled at his dick and rubbed pre-come down from the head and wished he could have Steve's dick in his mouth while he fingered him.

---

Steve kissed over Bucky's shoulders as he finger-fucked him. "And you know what, Baby? As soon as I get better I'm sending the girls off to my mom's for the day and you're going to take off work so we can fuck each other day in and day out. We can go to sleep full of each other's come and shower in the morning."

---

"God, fuck, Steve," Bucky answered and quickened his pull on his dick. "I want that so much. I want that all that time. Want your come inside me and seeing mine leaking out of you. Want to be filled up with your cock all day. Want your hands all over me and inside me and holding me."

---

"It's going to be so good, Beautiful," Steve moaned. He tucked his pinky in and started to open Bucky up with four fingers. "You like how all that feels in your tight ass? You feel full yet?" Steve wasn't much of a dirty talker usually, but it had been a while and he was desperate.

---

Bucky nodded and rubbed at his face before pulling his hair back into a ponytail. He rocked his hips in time with Steve's movements and let his ass relax even more. "Want you, Baby. Need your dick," he said low and slow as he let his body writhe with the feelings Steve was giving him.

---

"Need you to come for me first," Steve said back. Steve was careful as he poured more lube over Bucky's hole and started to add his thumb so he could fit his whole hand inside of Bucky. God, his ass looked so amazing taking so much inside.

---

Bucky's breath stuttered out when Steve added his thumb and he had to take a moment to let his body relax and take all of Steve's fingers together. He made short moaning sounds as Steve moved his hand around and Bucky forgot to breathe deeply as he went.

---

"God, look at you," Steve hummed. "I wish you could see how good your ass looks right now, Baby, stretching to fit my whole hand in." He slowly pushed in past his wrist. He pulled out so Bucky's hole was stretched at the widest point of his hand before pushing back in, jabbing Bucky's prostate with his fingers.

---

"Fuck!" Bucky choked out when Steve's finger made contact with his prostate. "There, Steve, God yes." He let go of his cock and held his arms above his head. He wanted to see if Steve would make him come all by himself. Bucky hoped he would take the hint and work Bucky's prostate and take his dick in his other hand.

---

It took Steve a moment but he did take the hint in the end. Steve fucked Bucky relentlessly with his fist; hitting his prostate each time he pushed his hand deep inside of him. He grabbed Bucky's dick with his free hand and stroked it eagerly. Steve panted softly in Bucky's ear and he nibbled at his earlobe. "So good for me," he groaned.

---

Bucky couldn't speak. He could only breathe quickly and make pleased little noises. He curled his toes and pushed his ass back against Steve as he slammed his fist inside of him. He couldn't wait until Steve was all healed and not in any more pain because he was going to ride him cowboy style and bounce up and down on his dick for hours. He wanted to fuck Steve every day after he got better to make up for the lost time.

---

"When I'm not hurt anymore, I'm gonna fuck you so hard we'll make the downstairs neighbors think that an earthquake's happening," Steve rumbled in his ear. "You look so good, Baby. You're taking my fist so well." Steve's worked his fist in harder and harder, going rougher with Bucky now because he knew he'd have to take it slow and careful once he had his cock inside him. He teased the head of Bucky's dick with his thumb. "Tell me how much you love this."

---

"Love it!" Bucky gasped and craned his neck to look back at Steve. "Love you. Love what you to do me. Love you filling up my hole with your arm and love the way you touch inside me." He rambled out quickly and felt himself getting close to orgasm as Steve worked his hole some more.

---

"Good," he breathed out. Steve probably shouldn't do this, but he did it anyway. He moved his hand off of Bucky's dick so he could hold Bucky's hip steady. Once he got a good grip on him, he started to really fuck Bucky good and thorough with his fist, jackhammering it in and out of his ass and hitting his prostate with every thrust. Slick, wet noises rang out in the air as Steve fucked him.

---

Bucky had to shove his face down into the pillow so the noises he was making wouldn't be so loud in the apartment. He bit down and let Steve pummel inside him with his hand gripped tightly on his hip. He was going to be surprised if he didn't get little finger bruises from Steve. It only took about another minute before Bucky's body was jolting, his legs were curling up close to him, and he was coming all over his bed sheets.

---

Steve refused to slow down. Seeing Bucky get so overwhelmed was a beautiful thing. When he saw Bucky's body curl up, he knew he was close. Even after Bucky came, Steve still kept his hand deep inside Bucky's ass and he slowly massaged his prostate. "Just tell me when to stop, Baby," he said softly, carefully pushing his hand deeper inside of Bucky.

---

Bucky let Steve continue as he breathed heavy post-orgasm breaths. Steve did get gentler and let his fingertips work over the prostate with purpose for a bit longer until Bucky whispered. "Too much, little lighter please."

---

Steve nodded and pulled his hand back a little so he wouldn't over stimulate Bucky. He only moved his hand back and forth an inch or so each way and kept the movements slow and steady. "I like taking you apart like this," he purred. "Makes me feel good that I'm the only guy who can do this with you now."

---

"What would you do if I just fell asleep like this with your hand inside me?" Bucky asked with tired eyes and a deep blush on his face from being worked up by Steve.

---

Steve smiled and kissed Bucky's cheek. "I'd see if I could still make you come in your sleep. But then I'd clean you up and cuddle you all night."
"How's your back feeling, Baby?" Bucky checked and barely opened his eyes to look back at Steve for a moment.

---

Steve was a bit reluctant to answer the question because he could feel tightness in his lower back like something had twinged at some point. "It's not bad," he said, being honest without giving the whole truth.

---

Bucky nodded slowly. "You gonna fuck me now or is your back too much for that? Wouldn't mind if you fucked me slow and steady while I fell asleep. Wake up with your come covering my ass and thighs."

---

Steve groaned softly at the thought of it. It was frustrating to be so unfit right now. "I can take it slow," he murmured, easily drawing his hand out of Bucky's ass so he could rub some lube over his untouched dick. "Been thinking about you for too long."

---

"Just take it easy on yourself." Bucky yawned. "Thanks for fisting me, Steve. I really like that. Maybe one day you'll let me try it on you." He reached up to pull the hair tie from his head and ran his fingers through his long dark hair.

---

Steve was just thankful that he didn't feel inadequate because Bucky liked taking things that were bigger than his cock. "Um," Steve said, getting all flustered. "You really think I could fit your hand in me?" He grimaced a little as he adjusted himself on the bed and he lined his dick up with Bucky's ass. It was all too easy to slide in and Steve let out a low moan.

---

Bucky was quickly falling asleep when he felt Steve slide inside him. "We can try and if you don't like it we can stop. Or if you aren't taking it like I do." He mumbled out and laid still, letting Steve do all the work and move slowly in and out of him.

---

"I'll give it the old college try," Steve said, still acting like a bit of a doofus when they were talking about sex. He still wasn't entirely used to how forward Bucky was about it sometimes. But being inside of Bucky felt so goddamn good and Steve couldn't help but suck little marks onto Bucky's neck as he slowly rocked into him.

---

Bucky hummed and tried to pay attention to the calculated loving touches and thrusts from Steve. After about a minute of being held like that by Steve, Bucky slipped into a light sleep, cradled as the little spoon and being gently rocked by his boyfriend.
Steve moved a hand over Bucky's side and chest, touching him lovingly as he easily fucked in and out of his boyfriend. He huffed and smiled fondly when he noticed that Bucky was asleep. "I love you," he whispered softly. Steve gently made love to him until his orgasm came. He emptied his come deep inside of Bucky. He didn't feel all that inclined to pull out, so he fell asleep still inside of him.

---

Bucky woke up around three in the morning and tried rolling over before realizing he still had a dick in his ass. He chuckled and gently pulled himself off of Steve and headed to the bathroom. He bent over the counter and touched at his still wet and open hole.

---

Steve made a small noise in his sleep when Bucky got up. He remained asleep for a little while before the lack of warmth next to him roused him awake. "Buck?" He called out sleepily.

---

"I'm here, Baby," Bucky said from the bathroom where he was cleaning himself up. He considered taking a quick shower but he would probably wake up Becca with the noise if he did. Instead, he wiped himself down and cleaned Steve's come off of him.

---

Steve moved slightly in bed and he hurt all over. "Baby, would you massage my back a little bit when you are done?" He called and waited for Bucky to come to the bed.

---

Bucky sighed in frustration. He knew Steve was lying when he said he was fine. Coming back to the bed he said, "Steve, I told you we shouldn't have done anything yet," but he moved to hover over Steve as he rolled into a better position so Bucky could massage his lower back. "Does the wound hurt?"

---

Steve let out a relieved groan when Bucky started to massage him. "It was worth it," he said shamelessly, pleased as punch that he got what he wanted. "It feels like something's pinched," he said. "It's happened a few times but always goes away."

---

"Do we need to go back to that physical therapist and have her take a look at it?" Bucky asked in concern. "Want me to go get you some pain medication for it?" He kept lightly rubbing Steve and gently kissing at his shoulders in encouragement.

---

"Probably and yes, please." Steve sighed at the kiss before asking, "So what's it like getting a glimpse into the future where you'll have to take care of an old, retired officer after thirty years on the force?"
"It's lovely. Don't worry." Bucky kissed Steve's cheek then left to go get medicine. When he came back, Steve was sitting up and hunched over with his water bottle. "Here, take this and lay down again."

---

Steve took the medicine only because he wasn't a completely stubborn mule. On a normal day, he typically refused any extra medicine. He was just about to lay down again when he heard a knock on the door. He gave Bucky a confused look since they weren't expecting anyone.

---

"The fuck is that?" Bucky asked and quickly slipped on his clothes. He was about to leave his room when he decided to grab a jacket. "Be right back, Baby," He said and left to go see who the devil was at their door.

---

When Bucky answered the door, a tall man in a suit held up a badge to him. "Hello, I am Martin White with child protection services," he introduced calmly but firmly. "Our office received a complaint I'm here to investigate. Are you James Barnes?"

---

Bucky pulled a confused, appalled face as he said, "Excuse me? Investigate what? It's three in the morning. Who the fuck do you think you are?" There was an opening of a door from the hall and Bucky knew it must be Becca waking up from the noise.

---

"Yes, I understand it is not a normal hour, Sir, but our tip was very urgent," he said. "If you have nothing to hide, then you won't mind me coming in and asking a few questions," Martin insisted in a pushy way.

---

"I mind you coming in because my family is asleep and your 'tip' is wrong," Bucky said sternly.

Just then, there was a soft scared voice from the hallway and Bucky turned around to see both his sisters now in the hall looking on. "Bucky, what's going on?" Lilly asked shakily.

"Try to go back to sleep, Lil. I'm taking care of it," Bucky said with a soft smile but angry eyes about this whole thing.

---

The man didn't seem very convinced. "I have the authority to call for their removal if I cannot guarantee that they are not in immediate danger," he said. "So I strongly recommend that you let me in." Steve had gotten himself dressed and slowly walked into the hallway to see what was going on.

---

"What danger?" Bucky spit. "You can't take them from me! They are fine. They were sleeping soundly until you got here." Bucky stood his ground in the doorway and assessed the man again. He wondered if Steve could just arrest him for disturbing the peace or something like that.
"Bucky, is he taking us away?" Lilly asked in a panicked tone.

Steve put a strong hand on her shoulder and glared from his spot at the other officer. "Sir, I am a police officer and I can assure you that there's nothing unsafe going on here-"

He barely got the words out when Martin said, "Cops can be the worst offenders."

"Worst offenders for what, may I ask?" Bucky grit out and side-stepped as the man shoved his way into the apartment. "The girls are perfectly safe here with me. They have been for four goddamn years. What's the fucking problem now, huh?"

"Child pornography," Martin answered.

Steve immediately flared up with anger and even Becca curled her hands into fists. "Are you kidding me?" She said angrily at him. "You should listen to my brother and get the hell out of here!"

"Becca, take Lilly to your room and stay put while I handle this loathsome prick, alright? Lilly shouldn't be hearing this nonsense," Bucky said and stepped up to the man. He waited for the girls to slip into Becca's room before he turned back to the man in a dark rage. "Listen, you cocksucking motherfucker, those are my sisters, my family, my blood. I've never hurt them or done anything perverse to or around them. And you coming in here and accusing me of something as abhorrent as that is going to take a serious emotional toll on them. I'm not even sure if Lilly knows what child pornography is but now someone's going to have to explain it because she's going to want to know what sick twisted things your 'tip' suggested that I've been doing."

"Not you," Martin said, absolutely nonplussed as Bucky got in his face and got angry at him. He was used to people getting a lot angrier and more violent at him than this. "Him." He nodded at Steve.

Steve's face paled and his jaw dropped. "Me?" It made him sick to his stomach to be accused of that.

"Mr. Barnes, I'm going to have to ask you a few questions without him in the room," Martin said and put his hands in his coat pockets.

"You've got to be fucking kidding me," Bucky said and rubbed at his face. A headache was raging along the sides of his head and he felt like screaming and kicking this guy's face in and then curling up in a ball on the ground. "Who in the world told you that Steve was doing that? Was it Dale Peterson? He's mad that we got a cat. I know it."

"I'm not allowed to disclose who contacted us," Martin said. He gave Steve a look and Steve wiped at his eyes before going back to the bedroom so this could get over with. Martin crossed his arms and looked over at Bucky. "Listen, I understand this is emotional for you but I need you to be objective when you answer my questions. Most child abuse - both sexual and not - happen by a friend or family member."

---

"This isn't a child abuse case. It's some asshole lying to you to get at my family for some fucking reason," Bucky spit back. "Whoever told you that is wrong," He added and clenched his jaw together. He really wished Steve were by his side helping him. He also wished he had some medication because the whole room was starting to move around him and the pulsing in his head was getting worse.

---

"Well, it's up to my department to decide that," he said. Martin pulled out a paper from his file with a list of traits of a sex offender. "Does he show any of these behaviors?" He asked. "How long has he lived here? Where does he sleep - this apartment only has three bedrooms. Is there a lock on the girls' doors?"

---

"There's no lock." Bucky resigned to answer the questions and be done with this quickly. "He's lived here for about three months. He sleeps in my room." Bucky watched as the man scribbled down what Bucky was saying and looked down the hall at the closed doors.

---

Martin continued to grill Bucky with question after question for about an hour before he finished taking his notes. "Thank you for your cooperation, Mr. Barnes. I see no reason to remove your sisters tonight, but the investigation will remain open for thirty days."

---

Bucky nodded and locked the door behind the man as he left. He went to the couch and laid down, rubbing at his head. "He's gone!" Bucky yelled out and watched the three of them come back out into the living room. Bucky stayed on the couch and curled over on his side. He was in a lot of pain and was really confused and angry. He couldn't help the tears that slipped past his eyes absently.

---

Becca and Lilly came running out looking apprehensive and upset. They only got worse when they saw that Bucky was crying. Steve wasn't in much better shape and was trying to hide that he'd been crying, too. He sat down and put a hand on Bucky's shoulder.

"He's not taking us away, is he?" Lilly asked.

---

Bucky sniffled and looked up at her. "Not tonight apparently. But they keep the investigation open for thirty days so who fucking knows." He turned his attention to Steve. "I'm not letting them take you away, either." Then he paused and looked between Steve and the girls. "Steve, will you get me some medicine?" He asked. Once he was gone to the bathroom to get something for Bucky's headache, he pulled the girls close and said, "If anyone talks to you about Steve you have to be smart and careful. If you feel safe around Steve make that known but don't force it so it looks like you're being made to say it. Some fucking shithead is after our family and we need to work together to keep us together."
Steve had already considered moving out if that meant letting Bucky keep his sisters without the state prodding into their life. He got up and shuffled to the bathroom to find the medicine.

"Why does someone think Steve's doing bad things?" Lilly asked.

Becca paused and suggested, "What about that guy that let Steve get shot?"

Bucky nodded and smiled at Becca sadly. "I'm thinking you're exactly right, Becs. But there is no way for us to accuse him of this right now." When Steve came back with medicine, Bucky took it gratefully then stood up to get the girls back to bed. "Go back to sleep. You have school tomorrow. I'm walking you over tomorrow too. And picking you up."

Both girls looked angry that their brother and Steve were going through this and there was still the underlying fear that they were going to be taken away. They gave both men a hug goodnight and laid back down in their rooms.

Once they were back in bed, Bucky trudged past Steve to the door and slipped on his shoes and coat. "I'll be back, Steve."

"Where are you going?" Steve asked nervously. "It's dangerous to go out at this time."

"To the little twenty-four-seven down a few blocks. I'll be right back." Bucky smiled weakly at Steve and headed out. He made his way under the streetlights to the bodega and shoved a six-pack and a bottle of whiskey into his basket. He also found the store made little brownies and put those in his basket too.

When he got back, Steve was waiting at the kitchen table for him wearing a blanket around his shoulders and an upset tick to his lips.

Steve had a sinking feeling that Bucky was going to get some booze but he didn't have the heart to stop him. When he returned, Steve breathed out a sigh of relief. "I've ... I've been thinking, Buck," he said softly. "Maybe I should move out until the investigation is over. So we don't risk losing the girls."

Bucky shot Steve a look and put his stuff down on the table. He twisted off the lid to the whiskey and took a long drink from the bottle before offering it to Steve with a firm, "No," and fire in his eyes. He then opened one of the beers and started drinking it and eating one of the brownies.
Steve frowned but took a small sip of the whiskey anyway so Bucky wouldn't be drinking alone. "Then what can I do to help?" He asked. "I'm not going to sit around and let someone threaten to take away your sisters because of me."

---

"You can go talk to your chief about that good-for-nothing son of a bitch Rumlow and his big lying mouth. You know this was him, Steve," Bucky said and offered a brownie to him. He took another deep drink of the whiskey and shuttered out a sigh. He missed this so much. Why did he ever give up alcohol? Soon he'd be a little tipsy then he could get a little drunk and he'd feel fine.

---

Steve's shoulders slumped a little at the mention of the man. "I can," he agreed. "But I don't know if that will do much. We can't prove anything and Rumlow has been on the force for longer than I have. He could have plenty of people on his side," he warned.

---

"I know he did this. He tried killing you and that didn't work out so he figured he'd just destroy my family and get you locked away instead." Bucky was about a fourth of the way through the bottle and he was feeling it. He tugged Steve's arm and pulled him to the living room where Bucky laid down on the ground and cradled the bottle.

---

Steve followed and couldn't lay on the floor, so he sat on the couch next to him. "Buck," Steve said softly. "I'm going to do everything I can and then some, okay? But I need you to promise me that you won't do something rash when things get rough. Like marching down to the precinct." Steve was angry but he was good at keeping it below the surface.

---

Bucky mumbled that he liked marching down to the precinct and then drank some more. He was feeling tired and floaty and getting a little lighter as he drank more. "Don't tell Becca about this," he said and handed the bottle back off to Steve in case he wanted anymore.

---

"I won't," Steve promised. "But if she asks, I'm not going to lie to her, either." He would deflect or change the subject but he didn't feel right to lie to her face. He took one more sip and handed it back to Bucky. "Come up here with me," he said softly.

---

Bucky reluctantly got up off the ground. He wobbled a little as he crawled up on the couch and curled up in Steve's open arms. "Can't believe that motherfucker did this," he stuttered out and let his tired head fall on Steve's chest. "Gonna fucking kill him..." Raphael had been snoozing on the coffee table but he hopped up on Bucky and pawed at his face gently.

---

"No killing allowed. I'd hate for the girls to only be able to talk to you over a prison telephone." Steve chuckled when Raphael pawed at Bucky and he reached a hand over to scratch the top of his head. "The cat agrees - no killing."
"No killing - just drinking," Bucky conceded and looked down at the half empty bottle. "Should've bought two of these." His words were slurred and his eyes were closed as he felt firm hands taking the whiskey away from him. He heard it deposited on the coffee table and he dipped his head towards the noise and felt a dizzy rush come over him.

"Not too much drinking. You've already had more than you should," Steve said. "You shouldn't get into the habit of this, alright, Baby?" Steve stroked his fingers through Bucky's hair and kissed him a few times.

"I want to go to bed. Let's go back to bed," Bucky said and couldn't open his eyes again. "Have to sleep. Need to take the girls to school tomorrow." He stood up from the couch on rickety legs and immediately fell back on it again, unable to get two feet under him at all times. Steve was right. He did go overboard tonight.
The next few days were tense as all hell. During one afternoon while Steve was at physical therapy and Bucky was home with his sisters, they got a knock on the door. This time it was director Fury on the other side.

---

Bucky cleared his throat in surprise and ushered for him to come in. "Uh, hello, Sir..." he said and introduced his sisters who were both concerned and afraid at the man's presence thinking he was from child protection. "Girls, this is Steve's boss. Chief Fury, this is Becca and Lilly. Can I get you anything, Sir?" Bucky was being unnaturally welcoming and trying to figure out whether Fury was here to give him good news or bad news.

---

Becca and Lilly both hesitantly waved over at Fury but stayed polite because they were following Bucky's lead. "Is Officer Rogers in? I was hoping to have a one-on-one with him." He looked down as Raphael circled around his feet but didn't move to pet him.

---

"He's at his physical therapy session but he should be back soon. You can stay here if you like." Bucky gestured at the seat across from the coffee table and the girls both sat with Bucky and Raphael on the couch. Becca was holding the cat possessively and Lilly was on Bucky's other side holding his hand nervously.

---

Fury sat down and took a look at Becca and Lilly. "What's the matter? You're not afraid of a black man in your home, are you?" The two opened their mouths to argue but he put a hand up. "I'm just kidding. I know you got quite the scare the other night."

---

Becca nodded and scratched Raphael's head. "Do you know if that guy who tried to get Steve killed is the one who set child protection on us?"

Bucky nudged her sharply and said, "I think Chief Fury probably wants to talk to Steve about all that in private."

---

"She's allowed to ask," Fury said evenly. "I can't give you the answer," he said to Becca. "But what I can tell you is that we take these sort of false calls very seriously. And that Officer Rogers has plenty of other officers watching out for him."

---

Becca and Bucky nodded and Lilly tightened her grip on Bucky's hand. "Was this all really because some asshole didn't like that Steve came out?" Bucky asked and pulled Lilly closer to him. "It's not like Steve flaunted himself around or hit on any of his fellow officers."
"Listen, I'm not saying that it’s fair but this sort of thing only stopped being illegal a year ago. You can't expect a world full of assholes to stop being assholes just because you're allowed to do something now," Fury said. "Twenty years ago if I dared to be a cop, I'd be lynched. And someone like me could be a cop for about two hundred years prior."

Bucky wasn't about to argue with Fury over this. He was right that he was at a major disadvantage because he was black and he could tell that he understood Bucky's disadvantage for being gay. He nodded and asked, "Do you think Steve or myself or my girls are in any real danger because of all this?"

"You're a queer couple who's very happy with their lives. There's always going to be some sort of danger, be it from this or not." Fury paused when the door opened and Steve came back home. Steve looked exhausted but pleased as he walked in but then surprised to see his boss. "Sir," he said. "I wasn't expecting you."

Bucky got up and pulled Steve down to sit on the couch. He then hovered over by Becca and watched as Lilly molded herself to Steve's side for support. "Chief Fury came a bit ago to talk to you. The girls and I can go get some food down the block while you two talk if you like."

Steve wrapped an arm around Lilly and kissed her cheek. "Hey, Lil," he greeted softly.

Fury nodded in response to Bucky's offer. "I'd like to talk with you after, but I need to speak with Steve in private first."

Bucky ushered the girls off the couch and told Becca to just put Raphael in her room for now. He pulled everyone's coats from the hangers and then smiled at Steve nervously before following the girls out the door. He really hoped that whatever Fury had to say was going to be good or at least semi-hopeful but he honestly couldn't tell.

By the time Bucky had returned, Steve felt happier with the news he got even though he was conflicted on what he should do. He gave his boyfriend a little wave and Fury pointed for Bucky to sit down. "Girls, I'll need you to go to your rooms for a little bit," Fury said.

Becca pulled Lilly into the hall and they both went to Becca's room to wait. Bucky sat next to Steve and slipped an arm behind his back gently. He didn't say anything, just waiting for Fury to start. He was nervous and just wanted this to be over with. He wanted to hold Steve and kiss him and forget this whole mess.
"Steve has some things he has to discuss with you, but there are some things that I have to say personally," Fury said. "Firstly, I'm going to make the child protection case disappear. So you don't have to worry about that anymore. But I want to make something clear - as much as I want to protect you from bullshit like this, I don't want you to start expecting me to shield you from everything. I will do what I can, but I am not in the position to stretch my neck out over it."

Bucky looked from Steve to Fury. "I understand. I didn't even expect this much and I'm grateful for what you've done for us so far. And I'm also incredibly grateful that you'll help with this case." He gingerly slipped one hand with Steve's and held it firmly on his thigh. "You don't seem like that's all you had to say, though."

"I gave Steve an offer that I think you both should accept. But I want you to understand that if he accepts it, then his conditions will apply to you and your sisters as well, or else the deal will be null," Fury said pointedly. "Steve can tell you about the offer and you both can give me an answer at the end of the week."

Bucky couldn't help the concerned look he gave Steve. His mind went to worst-case scenario imagining something like they were going to go into hiding or Steve was going to have to leave them or something. But Bucky just nodded and tightened his hold on Steve. He checked his face for any reaction and just got a stone-faced look back.

Fury gave them both a nod and stood up. "Well, it was nice having this chat. Hopefully, we will see Officer Rogers back on duty soon enough." He gave them a nod and left.

Bucky immediately turned to face Steve and shook his head curiously. "What deal? What did he say to you?" He asked urgently and gripped Steve's shoulder. He moved his eyes along Steve's face and gave him a quick few kisses.

Steve grimaced a little. "He says the precinct will pay a hundred grand over ten years if we don't breathe a word about what Rumlow did. He gets transferred and an off-paper restriction order from us. But he walks free."

Bucky blinked several times and looked down. "He walks free?" He asked with contempt. He was about to tell Steve not to take the deal and to have the precinct shove it up their ass but then he decided that he needed to see what Steve was thinking first. "What do you want to do?" He asked as diplomatically and calmly as he possibly could.
"I don't know," Steve said genuinely. "That's almost nine hundred a month just to keep quiet. But Rumlow... he left me to die, Buck." His voice cracked a little. "I want to fight. I really do, but it's going to be an uphill battle and I'm worried about the girls."

---

Bucky thought in silence. They could use the money a lot. But he also wanted justice for what was done to Steve. And who knows where Rumlow would be transferred to. If it was still in New York City then Bucky wouldn't be satisfied. He wanted him out of the state. And how could Bucky trust that they would really give them that money every month? It wouldn't be the first time he saw the government screw people over.

---

"What are you thinking?" Steve asked, looking over at Bucky with a concerned frown. This wasn't the sort of decision that he would make on his own because this would affect all of them no matter which way he went.

---

"I don't know," Bucky answered. "Too much. Thinking too much." He pulled his legs up against his chest and held them there. "What's the best case scenario if we take the deal and if we don't take the deal?"

---

"If we take the deal..." Steve paused and said, "we don't have to worry about the girls being taken away and maybe we could afford our own home. We could buy a place that's ours with no shitty tenants like Dale. But if we don't... we stop Rumlow from hurting anyone else he doesn't like and we set a precedent for discrimination against gays. Maybe even get a law passed."

---

"And you're sure we can't have both?" Bucky asked and leaned back against the couch arm. "Because I like the sound of both. What about we get a house and stick it to the man? And have enough money to take care of the girls."

---

"Well, Fury isn't going to give us a penny if we talk," Steve said. "I might be able to get a settlement if he's found guilty for abandoning me," he murmured. "But that's no guarantee. And remember the risk of it. I'd have to come out in front of the whole jury." Steve would go with whatever Bucky thought best in the end but he wanted Bucky to understand how deep the stakes were.

---

"If you do that, there's no way any jury is going to look twice at you." Bucky rubbed his face and twisted some hair between his fingers. "But if we take the deal then that guy can do this shit again and maybe even try to hurt us again. A restraining order isn't going to stop him if he really wants to do damage."

---

It was possible Steve would get sympathy because he was a cop. But gay people didn't get the time of day from many. "We have a few days to think about it," Steve said. "Do you think we should tell the girls our options?"

"No," Bucky said, "You know exactly how it'll go. Becca will say to take the deal and forget the whole thing and Lilly will say don't take the deal and get revenge on the son-of-a-bitch. Then they will argue about it with Becca trying to show the logic and Lilly making threats against Rumlow." He paused. "Wow, I never realized how much I'm like Lilly sometimes."

Steve knew how it would go but he wanted to let the girls feel involved and heard. He leaned forward and brushed their lips together. "You both are real firecrackers," he said. "She's going to drive someone crazy one day, just like you do to me," Steve teased.

Bucky put his hands on either side of Steve's face and kissed him deeply. "I love you, Steve Rogers. Don't you dare forget that." He curled back up next to Steve and added, "Let's just go make sure the girls know everything is okay and we can talk to them once we have made the decision. After that, I think it's time for bed cause I'm exhausted and I just want to lay in bed with you naked and comfortable."

Steve got that dumb, happy smile on his face that only Bucky could bring about. "I love you too, Buck," he said happily. He got up and achingly walked to the girls' room. Lilly had clearly been listening with her ear pressed against the door because he heard her scamper to her bed as they approached.

Bucky flopped on the bed and pulled both his sisters close to him and kissed their heads. "I'm really sorry you two have had to go through all this recently. But just know that I'm never letting anyone take you from me and no one can threaten my family without me doing something about it." He already lost two members of his family he wasn't going to let any more go.

Steve leaned his shoulder against the doorframe and looked at the three of them. "My boss promises that you guys aren't going to get taken away and he's going to make sure that case gets thrown out," Steve said. "So we all get to stay here."

Lilly grumbled and said, "I still don't know what child pornography means." She looked to Becca with an angry expression. She must have asked and not gotten any information on the subject.

"Pretend you never heard those words, Kiddo. Your life will be better off that way." Steve gave Becca a grateful look for not telling Lilly what it meant. He knew that she probably hounded Becca all day about it.
"The important thing is that hopefully this whole mess will be over soon and we won't have to deal with this shit," Bucky said and played with Lilly's hair. "Now it's bed time. Okay? Go get showered up and go to sleep."

Lilly chuckled. "You just want to be naked with Steve."

---

Steve blushed deeply at Lilly's accusation and said, "No, we're tired, too. It's been a long day. I had a lot of physical therapy today."

---

Bucky sighed as he got up. "Give it up, Steve. Lord knows she was listening the whole time. You can't win with her."

---

"Fine," Steve said. "We're gonna go to bed and be naked and make out and it's going to be great."

---

Bucky pointed to his sisters from the doorway. "Showers. Bed. I love you." He waited for them to say it back before pulling Steve away and over to their bedroom.

---

Steve wrapped his arms around Bucky and leaned heavily into him. "At least we got good news today. That's got to count for something, doesn't it?"

---

"At least we got some good news," Bucky agreed and held Steve close to him. "Now take off your clothes and get in that bed because I want to love on you and suck you dry," he said and gave Steve a gentle push to the chest.

---

Steve blushed at the demand but was quick to comply. Steve stripped himself down before getting into bed and giving Bucky a big set of bedroom eyes. "Don't strain my back," he teased.

---

"I'll be really gentle," Bucky said and pulled off his own shirt before taking Steve's hands in his and putting them on his hips. "Let's just relax and forget all this shit for a little bit okay? I just want to hold you and just be us." He started unbuttoning his pants and waited for Steve to help him slid them off.

---

Steve nodded his head and smiled down at Bucky. "Alright, Baby. I got it," he said as he pushed his pants down. He was already half-hard just from thinking about what Bucky was going to do.
Bucky stepped out of his pants and kicked them across the room. He hovered over Steve and pulled him in for a kiss before gently leaning him back into the bed. "How are you feeling? Any pain? I don't want to have sex again because you hurt yourself last time but I can still be gentle and blow you."

---

"I feel fine so far," Steve promised. He leaned up to kiss him and stroked a hand over Bucky's ass. "Tired from therapy but no pain." He smirked. "Looking forward to seeing my dick on your lips."

---

"Then I should probably get to it." Bucky bit his lip and smiled. He shimmied down Steve's body and started stroking his cock. Kneeling down on the ground by the bed, Bucky kissed Steve's thighs and kept a steady hand on him. He took a few long moments to fondle his balls as he sucked deep red marks into his skin. "Ready?" He looked up at Steve through hooded eyes.

---

Bucky really knew how to rile Steve up. He spread his legs and made desperate, little noises as Bucky teased him. He loved being marked up by Bucky - it proved that he really was Bucky's. "So ready, Baby."

---

Bucky nodded quickly and licked a wet line up Steve's dick before taking the head in his mouth. He licked around it for a while before taking the rest of his dick into his mouth. He bobbed forward and back on Steve and gripped his own growing cock tight in his hand.

---

"Yes, fuck," Steve breathed out. His head dropped back onto the pillow and he moaned low. "Don't stop, Baby. Your mouth feels so good." It was pleasurable and relaxing as all hell to let Bucky blow him.

---

Bucky pushed forward again and let Steve's cock head push against the back of his throat. He hummed happily before pulling off and licking at the tip again. Bucky stood and crawled back onto the bed, ignoring Steve's whine when he stopped touching him. He straddled Steve lightly so their dicks were next to each other. Bucky took the lube out of the drawer and coated his hand before taking both of them in one hand and pumping together.

---

Steve couldn't help the disappointed noise when he suddenly went from Bucky's mouth all over him to nothing. But when he felt Bucky's hot dick pressed against his, he felt a bit better and he automatically jerked his hips up into Bucky's hand. "So good," he groaned, gripping Bucky's hip. "I love you so much, Buck. You're so good to me."

---

"Love you too, Stevie," Bucky breathed out and his head lulled forward. "I can't wait for you to get all better. I'm going to destroy your ass and then you are going to wreck mine and we are going to fuck for days straight." His pace had quickened on their cocks as he spoke and he watched pre-come leaking from Steve's head.

"Destroy it, huh?" Steve couldn't help but laugh a little. "I can't wait." He could feel his orgasm start to build and he dug his fingers into Bucky's hips. "Go slower, Baby, I don't want to come so soon."

"Yes, you do," Bucky growled and held them tighter. "Want to see you come for me, Steve. Come over my cock and wait for me to follow." He pulled some more until Steve was shutting his eyes and shooting come out over Bucky's fingers. Bucky pumped him through it and then let go so he could finish himself off over Steve's chest until he was coming in short spurts on Steve's chest and chin.

"Buck," Steve groaned, wanting to drag things out but it still felt good to have Bucky jerk them both off until they were messes. He panted softly as he came down from his orgasm and he wiped a streak of Bucky's come off his chin and licked his finger clean. "What's the matter, Babe? Didn't want to let me enjoy myself a little longer?" he teased.

"Not tonight no." Bucky chuckled and gently flopped next to Steve and started rubbing his come around on his chest. "You want to shower or just fall asleep like this?" He asked and tweaked Steve's nipples carefully. "Because I'm good with either."

Steve snorted and swatted at Bucky's hand when he rubbed the come in. "It's not lotion, you dope," he said. "I don't feel like getting up. I'll probably regret that decision tomorrow, though."

"But I like knowing you have my come all over your skin," Bucky protested and kept going. "Makes you smell like me too. And I really, really love that." He kissed Steve again and buried his nose in his chest. "Love you, Steve."

"You're such an ass." Steve laughed, petting his fingers through Bucky's hair. "It doesn't make me smell like you. It just makes me smell like unwashed gay guy." He scratched the back of Bucky's neck as he kissed the top of his head. "Love you too."

"Unwashed gay guy is my signature scent," Bucky said in mock defense. "Why do you think I only shampoo every other day? It's not because it's better for my hair. It's so I maintain my musk."

"You're such a hippie," Steve said fondly. "What's my signature scent?" Steve asked, giving Bucky a smile and a look that said that Bucky's answer better be good.
"Repressed Catholic cop." Bucky nodded. "It smells like communion wine and shooting ranges and... sweating in church." He sat up and curled his legs underneath him. "But only in the very best way, of course."

---

Steve threw his head back and laughed. "You're such a jerk. I love it." He smiled and touched his fingers over Bucky's side. "But my Catholicism is going to get us married one day. I'll find one priest that will let us. I'm sure of it."

---

Bucky smiled warmly at Steve. "I know you will, Baby. And I can't wait for that day. We will have your mother and my sisters with us and I'll actually wear a suit for you so I look extra nice. How's that?"

---

Steve nodded. "That would be perfect," he said. "I'll let you pick where we go for our honeymoon. Cause we have to do a honeymoon," Steve said. "I don't care where so long as it's with you."

---

Bucky's face lit up and he asked quietly, "Seneca Lake? Where my father used to take me fishing at the cabin? We can stay a few days." He pleaded with his eyes and held Steve's hands. He wasn't sure if he would like that suggestion but he hoped it would be perfect.

---

Steve had already planned to take Bucky on a regular vacation there, but if that was where he wanted his honeymoon to be, that was where they would go. "A few days? Baby, we are doing a full week at the very least." Steve squeezed Bucky's hand and smiled. "I'd love to go there."

---

"You think I can leave the girls for a full week?" Bucky laughed. "I have a hard time when they go to school every day, Steve. If we are gone for a week you are most definitely going to have to let me have alcohol so I don't start panicking."

---

"It's our honeymoon. You can do whatever you want and Becca won't be around to scold you. And you won't have to be too worried. I know my mom will keep an eye on them while we are gone," Steve said.

---

"I know, but all this with Rumlow and the child protection service has made me even more antsy about them than usual and I just never want to let them out of my sight." Bucky huffed out a sigh. "Can I have a beer, please?" He asked hopefully.

---

"I understand," Steve said sympathetically. He was a bit more confident only because he knew Fury always kept his word. "Just one beer," he conceded. "I don't want you to get into bad habits. You've been doing so well."

---

"I can drink and be fine. I promise. It won't be like before. I'll keep my head with me, Steve," Bucky said and didn't realize how desperate his tone sounded. "Trust me. You can trust me with alcohol now. I swear."

---

"Buck, I want to trust you. I really, really do," Steve said. "You just got to give me time to, alright?" He kissed him gently and gave him a small pat. "Go have your beer. I'll still be in bed waiting, alright?"

---

Bucky looked disappointed. "Don't want it anymore," he lied and rolled over on his side, facing away from Steve. It would be just his luck anyway for Becca to wake up while he was drinking and come out to see what was going on.

---

Steve sighed and draped an arm around Bucky's waist. "I believe in you, Bucky. But I'm scared," he said softly. "I've seen what drinking can do to people. I've seen what my dad's drinking did to my mom and he's been dead for decades," he murmured.

---

Bucky clenched his jaw and listened. He knew Steve was right and had more reason than most not to approve but Bucky needed something to help and he couldn't afford things like a therapist or medication and Steve already nixed weed.

---

"How come you can't talk to me about the things that make you want to drink?" Steve asked gently, not sounding accusatory in his question, just concerned. "You know I'd do anything to help you."

---

Bucky shrugged. "Don't know. I just don't like talking about them much. Doesn't make me feel good. There's just some shit you probably shouldn't know about me, Steve. Some stuff I've done or been done to me. It's not all pretty."

---

"Baby, I'm not with you so everything is pretty," Steve said. "I'm with you cause I love you to pieces. And if telling me that stuff has even a chance at making you feel better, then I want to hear it." He kissed his shoulder.

---

Bucky rolled back and held Steve's face in his hands. "I'd rather just drink," he said matter-of-factly. "I stopped some of the shit I used to do and drinking is all I had left as an escape and I just don't think it was a good idea for me to give it up."
Steve felt himself tear up. He didn't know if he was more upset that Bucky would rather drink than talk to him or that what happened to Bucky was so bad that he didn't want to speak about it. Steve just nodded, doing his best not to get too emotional.

---

"Why are you crying?" Bucky asked hurriedly and kissed some fallen tears from Steve's face. "What did I say?" He held him close and kissed his lips several times before pulled back to look at him again.

---

Steve felt his face heat up in embarrassment. He hid his face in Bucky's chest and didn't answer at first. "I just wish I could help," he said softly. "I don't know what you can't tell me, but I'm sorry that it happened to you."

---

Bucky put a soothing hand on Steve's head and kissed his hair. "It's not that I can't tell you. I'm just scared about it. About what you would say about some of the shit. Some of the reckless stuff I did. There's more than what you already know about the sex and drinking."

---

Steve knew some more than Bucky knew he did, but he wasn't going to rat Lilly out about her telling him about Bucky’s attempted suicide. "You shouldn't be scared, Bucky," he said. "It's in the past. I'll get upset and then I'll get over it. At least then I'll know what to look for and how to help you when things get bad."

---

Bucky pursed his lips and assessed Steve. He decided he could give Steve some things tonight. Not everything, but a few things. "I was a coke abuser in high school," he said with a nod of his head like it was normal for most high-schoolers.

---

Steve grimaced a little but he reached down and held Bucky's hand in his gently. "Were you getting a lot of pressure from your parents and your teachers?" He asked, doing his best to understand.

---

Bucky chuckled. "No. It's nothing quite as noble as that." He laced his fingers with Steve's and kissed them. "I had a crush on the football captain and he was an addict. I felt like I needed to try it to impress him at a party once and then I just sort of kept doing it for about two years."

---

Steve stroked his thumb over the back of Bucky's hand. "Did your sisters ever find out about that?" He asked. Steve thought he was handling this well enough, keeping the conversation open even though Steve abhorred drugs.

---

"Don't think so." Bucky sniffled. "My father was the only one who knew and only because I told him on one of our trips and he helped me get out of the habit." He smiled and added, "I was willing to tell my father that I did cocaine but I wouldn't tell him that it was because of a boy."

---

Steve kissed Bucky's forehead and smiled gently at him. "Your dad sounds like he was an amazing guy. Coke isn't an easy thing to drop. And if he got you out of using it, he must have really known you inside and out to know what would make you stop."

---

"I honestly couldn't tell you what got me to quit. I just know that when I was starting my freshmen year of college he bought me a really nice bag as a reward for sticking with it and not doing it anymore," Bucky said.

---

"Have I seen this bag yet?" Steve asked. "Do you still use it?" He massaged little circles over Bucky's back. "Thank you for talking to me about this, Bucky. It means more to me than you know."

---

"I had to sell it after they died to get Lilly new shoes for school." Bucky made a face. "She needed black buckle shoes without any holes in them. She had black buckle shoes but they had little flower cut outs and the teachers wanted perfect uniforms."

---

"I'm sorry, Buck," Steve said sympathetically. "My mom had to sell a lot of my dad's valuables... watches, belts... She still regrets that she didn't save anything for me once I was grown up, but I know she really needed the money."

---

"I understand her. It's hard raising kids on your own," Bucky said. "I've only done it for four years so not as long as her but still." Bucky paused and breathed out a sharp breath. "Well... how'd I do?
That's one more thing you know."

---

"You have twice the amount of kids she did, though," Steve said and kissed Bucky gently. "You did such an amazing job," he praised. "I don't... I don't really have any skeletons in my closet. None that I know of, at least. But if there's ever anything you want to ask me, I'll answer."

---

"That's okay, Steve. I've got a bunch for the both of us." Bucky smiled and kissed him back. It felt a little weird telling Steve about the coke problem but it was also sort of nice getting it out there so he decided to keep going. "I had an affair with a married professor when I was nineteen. He had three kids, his oldest was my age and a good buddy."

---

"Jesus," Steve swore, giving Bucky's arm a little pinch. "I think I'm more disappointed in the man who cheated on his wife with a kid who was his son's age." Steve shook his head. "I would never be able to cheat on you."

---

"He was gay as fuck but couldn't succeed in his field if he was out so he just fucked a couple of his students to get by." Bucky shrugged. "I'd never cheat on you either, Steve." He assured him. "That's a promise."

---

Steve pet his fingers through Bucky's hair and kissed the tip of his nose. "I know you wouldn't." He trusted him like that. Bucky hadn't ever given him a reason to doubt that trust.
This chapter sees them after having decided to take Fury’s deal and go with the payout instead of fighting Rumlow. (I'm not sure why we didn't write that decision but we didn't... I even checked our archives to see if I misplaced the document with the decision process but found nothing... so this is just after.)

Over the next few weeks, Steve was getting better. It was easier to walk now and he could do minor laborious tasks even though he still wasn’t cleared for duty. After some poking around, Steve was able to get Lilly and Becca to describe Bucky's bag and he went to some local pawn shops to see if they ever had one come through. After a few false leads, he finally came by one that was promising. When he knocked on the new owner's door and explained what had happened, they were more than willing to let Steve buy it back from them. He went to a party store to wrap it up in a gift bag and he came home proudly with a big smile on his face.

---

Winter was almost here and every day Bucky complained about the cold but he actually liked it a lot more than the hot. Bucky was really happy that Steve was doing better but he also didn't get to enjoy it much because he was always at work lately. He was getting a lot of late night shifts followed by the opening shift so he was only awake for a few hours at home with his family. Bucky still wouldn't let Steve try to have sex again. He was too worried after the last time made his back hurt so much. He had also missed Lilly's last game of the season because of work and she cried about it making Bucky feel like crying too. On one particularly bad day, Bucky was making food for them all because Steve had mysteriously disappeared without notice while Bucky was at work and he hadn't said when he would be back home. When he did eventually return, he was wearing the doofiest grin that Bucky had ever seen and holding a large gift bag in his hands.

---

Steve had tried to explain to Lilly that Bucky couldn't control his work schedule but she was still upset that he hadn't come. Steve had been there to root her on at least, but it wasn't the same. He knew Bucky was having a bit of a rough time because of that and his long hours, so he thought the timing was perfect for the gift. "Hey, Baby," he greeted. Steve came over and kissed Bucky's cheek. "I got you a surprise." He held the bag over for him.

---

Bucky kissed Steve and grabbed the bag from his hands. "What is it?" He asked with a confused look on his face. "It's not my birthday, is it? It would be just like me to forget," he joked and set the bag on the kitchen table. He ripped the first layer of tissue paper off and paused when he saw what was inside. "This is..." He pulled it from the colorful gift bag and held it up. "This looks exactly like the bag my dad bought me."

---

Steve just grinned brightly as Bucky opened it. "It is the one your dad bought you," he said proudly.
"Becca and Lilly described it to me. I called up the maker and was able to get the model, so I called a few pawn shops and...yeah."

---

Bucky held it out in his hands and stared at it. He could feel quiet hot tears falling down his cheeks but he didn't care. He sat down at the table and wordlessly unzipped the main pouch. Inside was a red sewn moniker of 'JBB' that his grandmother had sewn in after he got it. "This one's mine," Bucky whispered and ran his fingers over the letters thoughtfully.

---

Steve put a hand on the small of Bucky's back and kissed his cheek. "I know how important it was to you. The person who bought it didn't mind parting with it." He played with Bucky's hair gently and gave him a tight hug. "Love you."

---

Bucky dropped the bag on the kitchen table and whipped around to jump Steve in a huge hug. He kissed him furiously and held Steve close. He couldn't believe how lucky he was to somehow manage to have Steve as his boyfriend. No one else in the world would even think about trying to do this for him but Steve managed it.

---

Steve smiled brightly and returned the kiss, though Bucky was certainly more excited and with good reason. Becca came over to see what was going on and she gasped at the sight of the bag. "Whoa, you actually found it?"

---

"It's the same one, too," Bucky said excitedly and showed her his initials. "Steve found my fucking bag, Becs." He was still in shock and all he really wanted to do was have a date night as a thank you to Steve. They could order some dinner and sit around naked and then if his back was feeling okay, Bucky could fuck Steve slow and lovingly all night. Bucky whispered in Steve's ear. "You think your mom would take the girls for the night tomorrow? I want to thank you properly."

---

Steve loved making Bucky happy and he thought it a miracle that he managed to find it relatively quickly. He put a hand up Bucky's shirt to touch his stomach. "I'm sure she wouldn't mind. You taking me somewhere nice, Barnes?"

---

Bucky chuckled and pressed his forehead to Steve's. "No, we are staying in, if you know what I mean," he said just loud enough for Steve to hear. He put a hand on the back of Steve's neck and kissed him again. "I love you, Baby. You're my own perfect man and I love you."

---

Steve's face lit up and he was a cross between excited and bashful. He nuzzled at Bucky's neck affectionately after the kiss and sighed happily. "You deserve everything I do for you, Buck. Now come on, I'm starving. Let's get dinner going."
"Okay, Baby," Bucky agreed and ran off to put his bag somewhere safe before returning to finish up making dinner. He had done his best to assemble lasagna and he hoped it was at least sort of tasty to everyone. "Becca, will you get Lilly from her room so we can eat?"

Becca glanced at them and nodded her head. When she came back, Lilly came with Raphael in her arms looking miserable because she dressed him up in a suit from one of Becca's dolls from when she was little. "Look at him, Buck!"

"Jesus, Lilly," Bucky said and snatched the cat from her gently. "The poor little guy looks absolutely pissed." He set the cat on the coffee table and helped him out of the clothes before holding him close and petting him until he purred.

"But he looked so proper and refined. Just like how Becca wanted him to be." Raphael was looking at Lilly with an expression that said she was lucky he didn't scratch the shit out of her.

"You can't dress up animals in dolls clothes," Bucky said. "What if he would have clawed his way out of them and scratched you too. Then you would have had to tell Becca that her old dolls clothes were ruined and you'd have ouchies all over you."

"Ouchies? The hell, Buck, I ain't five anymore," she said with a roll of her eyes.

Steve laughed and gave her a hug. "No swearing. Not until you're eighteen," he chided softly. He led her over to the table so she would sit for dinner.

Bucky gave Steve a confused look. He personally didn't care if Lilly and Becca swore. Lord knows he swore since the day he could speak.

"What?" Steve asked, confused when Bucky gave him that look. He didn't think he had done anything off. He hadn't scolded her for real.

Bucky put the cat down and took his seat at the table next to Steve and said to Lilly, "No more playing dress up with the cat."
As they had hoped, Steve's mom had agreed to have the girls over to her place for the night. She insisted on a sleepover anyway since she missed getting to tuck in her own son and have him around in the morning. Steve promised his mom they would have lunch together on the weekend and once the girls were escorted out, he shut the door. "Buck? They're out."

---

Bucky was in their room getting himself cleaned up and waiting for his sisters to go spend time with Sarah. He had taken a shower and washed his hair and was finished shaving his face when Steve called out that they were gone. Bucky was completely naked and intended to stay that way until the girls were on their way back home the next day. He opened their door and made his way to the kitchen where Steve was searching in the fridge for something. Bucky decided to lay on the couch as seductively as he could manage so Steve could see him with his body on display.

---

Steve was excited to have a full evening getting to love on Bucky and not have to worry about staying quiet or being modest in case the girls were around. He turned to pour himself a glass of juice and caught a naked Bucky in the corner of his eye. "Holy shit, Buck," he said in shock, but his eyes were immediately taking in the sight in front of him. Steve clearly liked it. "You look like a model."

---

"You look like you're wearing too many clothes," Bucky responded with a cheeky grin. "You should fix that while I just wait here and relax." He adjusted so his legs were spread apart so his dick was lying in wait and his inner thighs looked like they wanted to give Steve a hug.

---

Steve loved how forward Bucky was. Out of the two of them, Steve was much more subtle with his advances. He did his best to give Bucky a bit of a striptease but, really, Steve was just awkward and overeager about getting himself naked for his boyfriend.

---

Bucky watched with heavy eyes and a growing sense of love and pride as Steve undressed himself. Once he was naked, Bucky patted his lap and said, "Now come cuddle me for a little bit and let me hold my adorable officer. We've got all night to just be alone and nude."

---

"So we're not putting our clothes back on at all?" Steve beamed at that and laid down over Bucky. He immediately melted into him and started kissing up his neck. "Mmm, I love you so much," he hummed. Steve ran his hand over Bucky's torso as if this was the first time he was ever allowed to touch him. "Man, I can't remember the last time we had a night to ourselves."

---

"Probably since before you moved in," Bucky said and smiled as Steve kissed across his jaw. "I was thinking about growing my beard out for a while? What do you think? I'll be even more of a hippie than I am now."

---

"I would like it. I bet it would feel real good when it rubs against my thigh while you're sucking me off," Steve said boldly. "You should do it."

---

Bucky groaned and said, "Oh, Baby, you are getting so much better at dirty talk. I'm so proud of you. You remember when you couldn't even say that you wanted to blow me? My little officer is a man now."

---

"Stop it." Steve laughed, swatting Bucky's arm lightly. "You know I was a virgin when you met me. And I'm Catholic. My mom raised me better than to talk that way like it was nothing."

---

Bucky laughed and nuzzled his face into Steve's chest. "Still proud of you, though. Imagine what you would be doing right now if you hadn't have met me. You might be home alone eating food and reading. Or jerking off by yourself. Or trying to go to the bar and stopping yourself from hitting on the cute boys. But instead, you're here with me in your new home and you're naked on top of me and your dick is hard. Don't think I didn't notice."

---

Steve blushed deeply when Bucky brought up his erection. "Yeah, yeah, we all know I was a sad and lonely closeted bachelor cop before you came rushing into my precinct like a damsel in distress," he teased. "My life is so much better now that you're in it, Baby," he hummed. "You know what would make it better?"

---

"If I fucked you nice and slow on this couch?" Bucky offered and cupped Steve's ass. "How does your back feel? Are you up to it? We can go to the bed if that's better." He was already spreading Steve's cheeks apart and running the tip of his finger over his hole.

---

Steve got flustered because he had something else in mind but Bucky's idea was far better. He already spread his legs and pressed back into Bucky's hand when he felt him tease his hole. "I'd like that a lot," he breathed out. Steve sucked a few marks over Bucky's neck. "It's been a while since you've been inside of me."

---

"Oh, I fucking know. I miss your ass so much, Babe," Bucky said and held Steve to him as he sat them both up so Steve was straddling his lap. "Where do you want to make love, Steve? Here or in bed? Either way, I'm keeping you like this so I can see your face."

---

"Couch," Steve said, moving a hand to tease Bucky's nipple between his fingers. "We can be in bed any other night. Let's take advantage of this." Steve nipped Bucky's lower lip seductively. "We never broke in the couch anyway."
"Want me to go get lube really quick or do you want me to eat you out first?" Bucky asked with his hands trailing all over Steve's body. "Because I'm good with either one. If you want me in you quick you might want the lube."

---

"Lube," Steve said. He gave Bucky a sultry look. "I want you inside me, Baby. I want to fall asleep sore and thoroughly fucked by that gorgeous cock of yours." He gave Bucky’s nipple a little tug. "Got it?"

---

Bucky's eyes flashed. "Yes, Sir, I got it. You want to go get the lube and I'll just wait here for you to come sit on my dick?" He bit his lip and looked at Steve with big eyes. He couldn't wait to be inside him again. "I promise I won't even touch myself while I wait for you."

---

"What happened to you getting the lube?" Steve teased. He stole a kiss and said, "Play with your nipples and think of me until I come back." It was easier to get up and move around now that he was healed up a lot more. He came back with the lube in hand. "You know, I heard they make all sorts of types of this stuff."

---

"Uh-huh," Bucky nodded and reached for the bottle. "Some is flavored. Apparently, I taste pretty good covered in cherry lube." He poured some out into his hand and rubbed it into his dick a bit and waited for Steve to give him access to his ass.

---

Steve straddled Bucky's hips and touched along his thighs. "Can we try that sometimes? I'm okay with having a feel for new things. So long as it's not putting stuff inside each other outside of ourselves."

---

"Yes, of course, we can try that," Bucky said happily and moved to rub a finger over Steve's hole. "One day I'll convince you to at least let me have a plug." He didn't give Steve time to answer before he was pushing his first finger inside him and moving it around with purpose.

---

Steve started to protest but what came out instead was a moan. He gripped Bucky's shoulders tightly and he leaned forward to kiss him thoroughly. "You're mistaken, Baby. I've got a little bit of a possessive thing."

---

"I'm all yours, Baby. You know that." Bucky didn't warn Steve before shoving in a second finger and fucking in and out of him. "Once you are ready I want you to sit down on me and ride my cock until I come all up inside you and you shoot your load out on me."
Steve threw his head back and moaned Bucky’s name softly. He was still new to this and having two fingers inside him was already getting him hot and needy. “You going to let me draw you? Naked on the couch with my come all over you?”

---

"I’d love nothing more, Steve." A third finger. "Are you ready for me, Babe? I want you so bad. It's been way too long. I need to be in you. Need to feel you holding me inside your ass." He worked his fingers around and kissed a line across Steve's collarbone.

---

Steve was desperately marking up Bucky’s neck and shoulders while he opened him up. "So ready, Buck," he breathed out. "Want to feel you inside of me again," Steve murmured, sounding so needy for Bucky's dick. "Gonna ride it for all it's worth."

---

Bucky pulled his fingers out, leaned back, and growled, "Then get on me, now," with a dark twist in his tone. He was getting impatient and he wanted to see Steve ride him ‘for all it's worth’ like he promised.

---

Steve quickly moved himself over Bucky's cock and held it steady. Oh so eagerly, he pushed his ass down and didn’t stop until Bucky was balls deep inside him but Steve had done it a bit too quickly for his experience. He threw his head back and let out a throaty moan. "Fuck!" He swore, gripping Bucky's arms hard enough to bruise.

---

"You okay, Steve?" Bucky asked through short excited breaths. "You can just sit there for a bit if you need time to adjust." He couldn't help the small rotating movements that his hips made in response. He was way too pleased about the whole thing even though he was sorry Steve sat down before he was entirely ready and hurt himself.

---

"Yeah... just got ahead of myself." Steve remained still for a few moments, making aroused noises as Bucky circled his hips. Finally, he held onto Bucky for support and started to lift himself up, dragging up Bucky's cock before easing back down, letting his hole swallow Bucky's dick down again.

---

Bucky opened his mouth in a desperate moan as Steve slid up and down on him. He held Steve's hips in support and watched his ass make his dick disappear. "You're so beautiful, Steve. So lovely like this sitting on my cock and holding on to me."

---

Steve panted softly, overwhelmed and feeling so goddamn good. "Keep talking. I love when you say nice things like that," he breathed out. He bounced some more on Bucky's cock, his own bobbing up and down from the movement.
Bucky nodded and smiled at Steve. "I don't know why we haven't done this position before because, god, it feels so good having you in my lap and split open on my cock. I love being so close to your body and being able to hold you and see your face as you ride me."

Steve pulled Bucky in close and pressed their foreheads together. He looked into his eyes, demanding his full attention as he rocked his hips in tight, little movements. He kept Bucky's dick buried deep in his ass as he tried to find the angle that would have him shouting Bucky's name.

"Jesus, Baby," Bucky whispered through short tight breaths. "I'm not gonna last. You're so tight tonight. I love this. I love you. Make me come, Steve. Help me come inside you please." He kissed his boyfriend and slipped a hand over Steve's dick to start pumping it as Steve moved on top of him.

Steve let out a low groan as Bucky started to stroke him. He held the sides of Bucky's face and kissed him deeply as he rocked faster. When Bucky's dick hit just the right spot, he threw his head back and cried out Bucky's name as he fucked himself faster on Bucky's dick. In no time, his muscles twitched around Bucky's cock as he came.

"Ah, fuck, Steve!" Bucky choked out when he clenched his ass around Bucky's dick. He shot his load up into Steve and Steve's ass juiced him of it all. "Steve, that was so great," he said hurriedly and flipped them so Steve was lying under him on the couch as he kissed him. He felt Steve's come squish against his skin and he whined happily at the thought of it.

Steve was exhausted already and was quite happy to lay down and be kissed by his wonderful boyfriend. He let Bucky do that for a little while before he gave Bucky's hair a little tug. "I want you to keep fingering me," he growled softly in his ear, wanting to feel full even after Bucky came.

"Oh my god," Bucky breathed. "Yes, of course," he said and reached down to shove three fingers inside Steve while he kissed him. "Do you want me to try to fist you? Or will that be too much? You can tell me to stop." He moved his fingers in and out and rubbed Steve's chest with his other hand.

Steve loved how eager Bucky was to follow that demand. He groaned softly and spread his legs for Bucky but looked a little nervous at the mention of fisting. "Do you think I'd be able to handle it?"

"It's up to you, Baby," Bucky said and nuzzled Steve. "I can just finger you like this for a while. I don't want to push you to try if you don't want to."
"Let's keep it to three for now," Steve said. "We'll see how it goes later tonight." He looked up into Bucky’s eyes and grinned.

---

Bucky kissed him and rubbed his other hand up his neck to hold him close, just feeling their bodies close together and fitting like puzzle pieces. "Love you so much. You love me?"

---

"I love you so much, Baby. I'm going to make a husband out of you. And who knows, maybe even a dad," Steve answered and grinned at Bucky.

---

"Oh my god, that's so hot." Bucky picked up the pace as he fingered Steve. "That never used to make me feel so good, Steve. I want to be your husband and be a dad with you so badly. Let's have a baby. We'll find one that needs a home."

---

Steve writhed underneath Bucky as he kept finger ing him. It was so quick after his first time coming tonight but he was already getting hard again. "Let's talk more about this when you're not finger ing me."

---

"Okay, Steve," Bucky said and slipped off of him to kneel on the ground. He took his fingers from him so he could adjust Steve to get access to his ass better. He stuck two of his fingers back in and followed them with his tongue going in as deep as he could.

---

Steve laid back and enjoyed Bucky eating him out. He reached down and played with Bucky's hair, moaning and saying words of praise. Bucky made him come again and by that point, he was definitely sated and wanted to give his ass a break. "Kiss me, Baby."

---

Bucky obediently crawled back up on the couch and gave Steve several open mouthed kisses. He had loved every second of their night in so far and he very much expected it to just keep getting better. "Did you want to draw me now or do you want some food?"

---

Steve hummed and lazily kissed Bucky. He licked his way into his mouth and tasted himself on Bucky's lips. "Let me draw you first and then we can worry about dinner," he decided. He pet a hand through Bucky's hair. "Find a pose you'll be comfy in for a while."

---

Bucky readjusted as Steve got off the couch. He decided to lay on his side with his head on the arm of the couch. "Will you put on some music before you start? You can pick what we listen to. Also, I need some water if you wouldn't mind."
Steve put on The Police because he wanted to be a little selfish and it was rare that he got to pick his music because Bucky and Lilly were record hogs. He got a glass of water and passed it over before settling down to draw. "This was a great idea."

"Am I allowed to talk while you draw or do you need me completely still?" Bucky asked and drank some of his water. He still hadn't seen any of Steve's drawings so for all he knew Steve could be more of a blue period Picasso and draw him all abstract or he could be a realist and draw him like a picture.

"You're allowed to talk. I can't imagine you being able to keep that big mouth of yours shut for long anyway." Steve winked at him and ducked his head down to draw.

"You like my big mouth," Bucky chided. "My big mouth just helped you orgasm for the second time tonight. And it'll probably do it again after we eat so I mean..." He trailed off with a laugh and watched Steve as he glanced up at Bucky and went back to drawing carefully again. "Let's talk about our kid, yeah? What are they going to be like?"

Steve's eyebrows knit together as he concentrated on drawing the outline of Bucky's body. He couldn't stop the smile as he thought of their future kid. "I don't know if we would have a boy or girl. But no matter what, our kid is going to be smart as hell."

"You sure about that? If they pick up anything from me then it won't end up being that bright." Bucky chuckled to himself. "It'll love cereal for dinner, though, I know that. And have good taste in music or so help me I'll cry."

"You're smart, Baby. Anyone who can keep two kids in line and a roof over their heads single-handedly is smart," Steve said. But if you make our kid eat cereal for dinner, I'll give it the worst taste in music," he teased.

"It'll be half Barnes and that means loving cereal, dammit," Bucky said and moved his leg before remembering he needed to stay in the same spot. "What about names? What names do you like, Steve? Supposing we get a baby that still needs a name of course."

"If it's a girl, I would want to name it after my ma," Steve said. He gave Bucky a little look when he moved his leg but then went back to drawing. "If it's a boy we can name it James. Or Seamus. What names do you think?"
"Seamus? You are Irish." Bucky laughed. "We can name a girl after your mom but I get to choose the middle name. And our boy won't be Seamus or James. I don't want a James Jr. on my hands. What about Ricky? Short for Richard."

---

"If you get to veto James Jr. and my Irish heritage, I'm vetoing Richard on the grounds that I'm not letting the kid of two gay men risk having the nickname of 'Dick',' Steve said.

---

"We'd call him Ricky!" Bucky grumped back. "Fine. No Richard. And no James Jr. for sure. What about Leland or Jeffrey? Or Steve Jr. if you want a junior." Bucky scratched at an itch on his arm and absentely stared at the wall. He was getting a little tired of listening to The Police but he did say that Steve could pick so he dealt with it.

---

"Where are you getting these name from?" Steve laughed. The two of them clearly had a different taste in baby names. "Your parents picked good names for all of you. Why can't you?" He teased playfully.

---

"Leland was my father's middle name and Jeffrey is just a nice name, you ass," Bucky said and was tempted to push Steve over but he didn't want to mess up his drawing. "Fine. Nicholas, Christopher, Brandon, Benjamin, Travis, Kenny, Peter, Marcus."

---

"Well, Leland can be his middle name too," Steve said. "I like all the other names except Brandon and Marcus," he decided. "And what sort of things do you think our son or daughter would like to do? Maybe they will be a rock star."

---

"Maybe they will be able to draw," Bucky offered and beamed at Steve. "Or be athletic like Lilly. Maybe they will be loud and pushy like her too. Or subtle and pushy like me. Or shy and quiet like Becca. Or shy and innocent like you."

---

"Buck," Steve said, pausing for dramatic effect before continuing, "They're our kid. They're going to be good at everything. And they're going to have the best traits from all of us. You think your sisters would like being aunts?"

---

"I think they'll love it. It'll be one more thing for them to pretend to be in charge of." Bucky frowned. "Although, I wish it could look like the two of us, you know? My hair, your eyes, my nose, your jaw, your lips, your ears, your laugh, your smile."

---

Steve gave Bucky a longing glance. "I wish that could happen, too." He sighed. He would've loved a baby that had long, hippie hair like Bucky and talked just like him. "Too bad science hasn't come far enough for that. It would be so nice to have a Baby Barnes around."

---

"A Baby Barnes? It'd be a Baby Rogers-Barnes. You wouldn't want a little five-year-old Baby Barnes with messy unwashed hair swearing up a storm and drinking a beer. Your little Catholic heart couldn't take that."

---

"Please, as if I would ever let our kid be unwashed and use foul language," Steve said with a dismissive wave of his hand. "Man, I'm going to love that kid so much. Just like I love your sisters, Buck."

---

"That's what I'm saying, Steve," Bucky huffed. "I'll have to be doing a lot of compromising while we raise that kid, aren't I? I have a feeling my parents raised me a lot different than you were raised. Not saying either way is right or wrong. I'll just have to not be so much like my parents and be more like you."

---

"What?" Steve asked, sounding surprised. "No, Baby, I don't want you to be like me," he said. Just because Steve wanted to be the 'by the rule book' parent didn't mean that he wanted Bucky to do the same. "Why would you think that?"

---

"Well," Bucky started. "I don't want us fighting about how to raise our kid all the time. And if I just go with what you say it'll be easier. I mean I've raised my sisters for four years my way so I can raise our baby your way and be fine. I'd hate for our kid to see us fight about something like that."

---

"Buck, I don't want you to go with my way just cause it's easier," Steve said. "Our kid doesn't have to see us arguing over which way to raise them cause we can talk about it behind closed doors. What if you have a better method for something? I don't want our kid to lose out."

---

Bucky looked at Steve for a second and decided to bypass the conversation instead. "So Sarah May Rogers-Barnes or Christopher Leland Rogers-Barnes? Right?" Or you want a different first name for the boy?"

---

"This poor kid will have the longest name ever," Steve chuckled. "I like both names," he said. "Now all that's left is to get married and find a kid to adopt," he said, as if it were that easy.

---

"Guess that's all that's left." Bucky sighed, knowing that it would take a long time for any of this to happen if it does even happen. "How's the search for the priest going?" He asked. "Also, have you talked to the girls to ask for my hand, yet? I overheard you talking to your mom on the phone about how you thought that'd be cute and a special way to include them. Obviously, I think it's unnecessary to ask for permission to marry someone these days but I kind of like it too."

---

"I've asked a few priests so far during confession. Nobody at my church seems willing and I think I'm going to have to switch churches actually." Which was a shame since he went there since he was born. Steve blushed when Bucky admitted to overhearing him talk to his mom about the whole thing. "And, no, I haven't spoken to the girls about it yet. I don't want to do anything until I find a priest first...which could take a while." He sounded sad but determined.

---

Bucky wanted to reach out and hold Steve. He knew this was hard on him. He was being rejected by one of the institutions he held so dear. His faith was important to him and being denied something this big was hard on him. Especially since he believed that God himself didn't have a problem with it. "You'll find one, Baby. Does it have to be Brooklyn? Even if we found one out in Buffalo or something, would that work?"

---

"I'll fly us across the sea if it means finding a priest who would marry us," Steve said. He was only looking in Brooklyn since he couldn't travel far while he was recovering. He finished up the drawing and passed it over to Bucky to look. It was very true to reality and Bucky looked absolutely gorgeous lying on the couch with deep shadows lining his muscles.

---

Bucky took the drawing and stared at it wide-eyed for a bit. "Holy shit," he said. "Steve, this is seriously impressive. I look hot." He rolled onto his back on the couch and held the drawing out so he could see. "How come you've never shown me your drawings before? This is really fantastic. Although I think you made my dick a little bigger than it is in reality. Are you trying to tell me something? Wish I was bigger for you, Babe?" He chuckled and glanced at his boyfriend.

---

Steve blushed at the praise. "I guess it never really came up, you know," he murmured. He was always a little hesitant to show off his artwork since he didn't know how to take a compliment. "And that's how big your dick actually is. You've got a real monster between your legs, Babe."

---

"Monster. Hah!" Bucky laughed. "It's the healthy side of average, let's say that." He reached a hand out for Steve and said, "Come here. I want to kiss you and thank you for the beautiful artwork. Then we can make some dinner or order something in."

---

Steve sat in Bucky's lap even though he was the larger of the two and he started to kiss his face and touch him affectionately. "It's better than average, give yourself some credit."

---

"Shut up, Rogers." Bucky giggled and let Steve kiss him all over. "I do love my picture, though.
Thank you, Baby." He held Steve close and nuzzled at his chest for a moment before pulling back to look at Steve. "I'm hungry. You want to cook or you want to order delivery? The Chinese place will bring us food. I'll just put on pants before they get here."

---

"Let me cook. I like cooking and I don't want to have you put any clothes on until the girls come back tomorrow," Steve confessed. "What are you in the mood to have? And I swear if you say cereal, I'm going celibate."

---

"You wouldn't dare. All I'd have to do is jerk off next to you in bed and you'd be all over me in seconds," Bucky observed. "But, no, I don't want cereal tonight. How about baked potatoes? That's easy and fast. We can get back to something more fun quicker."

---

"I would dare. All I got to do is pray to God to give me strength and I can resist temptation. He probably thinks I need a break anyway," Steve joked. He already was going to the kitchen to start on the potatoes. "You want to eat some meat with the potatoes? We have chicken."

---

Bucky smirked and said, "Dear God, hear my prayer. Please let me not want to jump my boyfriend’s bones at all times. He has an unhealthy love of cereal. Amen."

---

"You're such a jerk," Steve laughed. He rolled his eyes as he started to prep some chicken as well. "Bucky, you're going to love this. I picked up some new spices so this chicken will have plenty of favor."

---

"I know I should have tried making some sort of joke about eating your meat instead but nothing felt quite right in the moment." Bucky chuckled to himself and got up from the couch to be nearer to Steve. "But, yes, new spices sound great. I'm sure it'll be delicious."

---

Steve smirked. "It would have been too easy to make that sort of joke," he said. "You got to wait for a real good time to make a joke like that. You know, something special instead of easy." He kissed his cheek and set the chicken in the oven. "So for Thanksgiving, do you want to do something here or go to my mom's?"

---

"Well, if your mom will have us, that would be great. I know Becca likes talking with her and her place is bigger than ours." Bucky carded his hands through his hair and pulled it back into a messy ponytail. He was feeling a little cold so he grabbed his jacket from the back of one of the chairs and draped it over his shoulders.
"My mom would love that," Steve said. "She may even insist that we all spend the night so she could make breakfast too. She really loves you. I know she spends more time with the girls. But she probably would go to lunch with you anytime you ask."

---

"I'd like that. I might take her up on that. I need to discuss Baby Steve with her. Get all the details of what you were like growing up." Bucky slumped into one of the chairs by the table and stared at his drawing again. He needed to figure out where to put it. He could put it in with his photo albums but he also sort of wanted to frame it but he also didn't want the girls coming into his room and seeing a framed picture of their naked brother.

---

"I was either sick or getting myself into some sort of trouble," Steve said. "Not much to hear about there." He was sad that he couldn't ask Bucky's parents what he was like when he was a little kid. Steve saw Bucky staring at his drawing again. "You know, I could do drawings of all of you guys. G-rated ones that we could hang up."

---

"If you can get Lilly to sit for as long as I did so you can draw her, I will be impressed," Bucky said and set his drawing back on the table. "The kid can hardly sit down for dinner. And I'm always getting calls that she's a distraction in class."

---

"I'll tell her I'll help her play hooky from school one day if she sits," Steve said. "I worry about her sometimes. She's a good kid but she scares me that she won't finish school."

---

"She'll finish," Bucky assured him. "It might be hard for her but she will finish. I doubt she will go to college, though. But she'll have to finish high school." Bucky was determined to see at least both of them through high school. Even if only Becca went to college, he was fine with that. He was even fine if Becca didn't go to college but he doubted that she wouldn't.

---

"She's going to be hell for her first boss whenever she gets that first job," Steve snorted. "No matter how much you try to teach her, she's going to try and get away with as much as she can. She's like... the exact opposite of Becca in some ways."

---

"They are so much like my parents," Bucky said. "I really wish you could have met them because you'd know exactly what I mean. Becca is just like my father and Lilly is exactly like my mother. I don't know how they turned out that way and I got a mix of the two but somehow they did."

---

Steve nodded in agreement. "I'll meet your parents after we have a long and happy life together. And then I'll finally be able to see how similar your sisters are to them," Steve said.
Bucky knew what Steve believed in but he wasn't so sure about all that. He couldn't quite grasp the idea that people went somewhere after they died and you could see them again when you died too. To Bucky, it seemed like a hopeful dream that wouldn't come true. But he would never say that to Steve who believed so strongly in it.

---

Steve chattered idly with Bucky as he got dinner ready. Once it was on the table, he took a seat and looked at Bucky with a loving expression. "So what else were you thinking of doing tonight?"

---

"I have no idea, honestly." Bucky shook his head. "We could just watch TV for a bit and cuddle. Or I can try dancing again if you really want me to. Or we could play a card game for two players." He really hadn't thought this through. He should have planned some things for them to do - something fun and different.

---

"We can play backwards strip poker," Steve suggested with a smirk. "If you lose, you got to put clothes back on," he said. "Or cuddling while watching TV sounds good still."

---

"Steve, you know you're bad at poker," Bucky chided and ate some of his potatoes. "Last time we tried to play, you ended up with all of Lilly's chores for three days."

---

"I know, but it's still fun to try and pretend that I'm good at it," Steve responded. "And if I practice, I can maybe beat her eventually."

---

"I wish I had some fun talent like you do with drawing. If we had a guitar or piano I could play something but that's all I really can do." Bucky looked around to the living room as if a guitar would miraculously appear for him. "Let's cuddle and watch TV until we want to have sex again or fall asleep."

---

Steve looked Bucky over once and said, "I'd love to be serenaded by you sometime. We got to get you a guitar. Maybe Santa will bring one."

---

"Santa, Steve, really?" Bucky laughed. "Not even Lilly still believes in him and it took her a while not to. But if you were to get me a guitar I wouldn't mind. But you don't have to. All I want this Christmas is to be able to get a VCR and some tapes for the girls and find you something really nice if I can."

---

"Aw, I met you guys too late for her to still believe in Santa?" Steve had been looking forward to making reindeer paw prints and baking cookies for Santa with her. "They're gonna have a great Christmas this year. “I want to get something good for the girls as well. And you, too. Also, we've got the pay from the precinct coming in soon.”

---

"Yeah, I guess there is that," Bucky mumbled. He still felt like they might have made a mistake. He knew it was safer and more beneficial for his family to take the deal but it also meant no justice for Steve, and Rumlow got to keep working somewhere else and have the potential to do this again.

---

If he didn't have Bucky and his sisters to worry about, Steve probably would've gone after Rumlow without a second thought. "I know it wasn't an easy choice to take the money," Steve said. "But we got to make the most of it."

---

Bucky nodded and ate some more. "I know. I just hate that he didn't get any consequence for nearly killing you. He almost took you away from me and he still gets to live a normal life a few towns over and keep the same job."

---

Steve shrugged his shoulders. "I know. It eats away at me too," he said. "But I'm alive and we won't have to worry about finances for a long time. We got to count our blessings."

---

Bucky didn't like how Steve sometimes got a little churchy on him. Things like 'count your blessings' were things that people wrote in their condolence cards when his parents died. Like it was just that easy to take account of the good while you were in so much bad. "You're alive but you're still hurt, Steve."

---

"Like I said," Steve said softly. "I count my blessings. Because since I've been home from my injury, I had the time to find your backpack, and the days off to spend with you and the girls. And now we will have the money to give them a Christmas that they'll love." He gave Bucky a sympathetic look. "Rumlow will answer for what he did. And all I can do now is pray that he answers before he hurts anyone else."

---

Bucky finished up his meal before nodding and standing from the table. "It's off topic, but I have a little surprise for you. You may not like it but I thought I'd at least try. If you don't like it, you can just tell me and we can forget the whole thing."

---

Steve didn't mind the change of subject because he didn't want to risk upsetting Bucky by being overly preachy. "Oh yeah?" He asked, watching Bucky as he got up. "What is it?"

---

"I have to go get it." Bucky smiled shyly and bit his lip. "I need you on the couch with your eyes closed and you can't peek until I come back and tell you to." He quickly scampered off to his room to get the surprise ready and hoped Steve was on his way to the couch.

---

Bucky looked so cute when he got all shy like that. It made Steve smile and he was quick to hurry off to the couch. He closed his eyes obediently and didn't give in to the temptation of peeking.

---

Back in his room, Bucky rummaged around his side of the closet for the bag he had hidden towards the back. He gingerly removed the contents and hastily put them on before running to the mirror to look himself over once before going back out to Steve. "Eyes closed. No peeking. If you don't like the surprise, I'll fix it. I'll forget the whole thing and we can do something else." Bucky moved to stand in front of Steve and added, "I know we said no clothes but..." He was standing in front of a still unaware Steve wearing tight see-through green lace women's panties and an open leather jacket that hugged his arms. "You can open your eyes now."

---

Steve waited until Bucky gave him permission to open. He blushed deeply when he saw what Bucky was dressed in and poor Steve looked like he didn't quite know what to make of it. "Uh..." he said dumbly. "I mean... you look good in anything, Baby," he said as he reached out to pet a hand over Bucky's thigh.

---

"You hate it," Bucky said and nodded. "I should've figured. You're Catholic. I'll just go take it off.
I'm sorry, Steve. I just wanted to try something new," he said and slipped the jacket off as he started back towards his room.

---

"Buck-" Steve got up and grabbed his hand to stop him. "I don't hate it, Baby, I just don't...get it," he said. He tried to guide him back towards the couch. "I'm happy you wanted to try something new it's just..."

---

"It's not to get. It's just fun and sexy. Just a little splash of something out of the ordinary - something slightly taboo. Have you never worn women's underwear before?" Bucky asked and popped the jacket over the side of the couch. "Everyone tries it at least once, right?"

---

"I don't see what's sexy about covering up what I'd rather see naked," Steve said slyly in response.
He sat down with Bucky and kissed up his neck. "I never have tried women's underwear, Buck," he answered. "I don't get the point in taboo either. I thought that we weren't supposed to feel like our love is taboo, you know?"

---

"It's not our love that's taboo about it, Steve." Bucky huffed. "It's me in these." He pointed to his crotch. "Whatever." He slipped the panties off quickly and stuffed them in the pocket of his jacket.
Bucky knew Steve was a pretty ‘Plain Jane’ sort of man, and especially lover, but Bucky was a bit more adventurous and wild and doing things like wearing thongs or being tied up in bed were really exciting to him. He loved Steve but he was starting to see that he was probably never going to be tied up again and he wouldn't get to use toys again and he probably wouldn't be smacked on the ass either.

---

Steve was doing his best to be open-minded about this. It didn't exactly feel great when Bucky took the underwear off and looked disappointed. "I don't get what I'm doing wrong," Steve said in a frustrated tone. "I love you. I want to do what makes you happy and feel sexy, but I don't want you to give me that look when I don't react to something new the way you want me to."

---

"You're not doing anything wrong," Bucky said and slipped a comforting hand over Steve's thigh. "I just guess I need to get over that what I like probably isn't what you like. I mean I don't think it's fair that I'm not allowed to use my dildo but you said not to so I won't. But it just seems like every time I try to open up sexually and show you what I think is a good time you just shut it down because you aren't familiar with it."

---

"Well, you can warn me a little next time, maybe. Cause the last two new things you wanted to try, I didn't have much time to process. I'm new to this whole gay thing. And I don't mean this in a bad way, but you've been with all sorts of people. I've only ever been with you, so you've had more time to play around with things," Steve sighed. "Talk to me," he said. "Tell me something that you like that we haven't done before."

---

Bucky retreated into himself a little more. "Doesn't matter. Let's just drop it and watch TV," he grumbled and looked to Steve before adding, "You know I don't do well with talking. I'm a man of action and spontaneity, not plans and discussion."

---

Steve frowned. He didn't like that Bucky didn't feel comfortable talking. He could've just dropped it, but Steve was determined to show Bucky that he was willing to try things. He grabbed the underwear from the jacket pocket and put it on. Steve didn't feel any different but he had that stubborn look on his face.

---

Bucky's face softened when he saw the green lace pulled across Steve's crotch. "If you don't feel comfortable you can take them off." He smiled up at his boyfriend. "For the record, you look fucking gorgeous in them. But I don't want you wearing them just to make me feel good."

---

"Well, tough," Steve said. "Cause I'm only wearing them to make you feel good." It was more important to Steve that Bucky got the things that made him happy than it was to understand why it made him happy. "And the only way these are coming off is if you take them off so you can put them back on."

---
"Do you want me to put them back on so you don't have to wear them anymore?" Bucky asked. "Honestly, Steve, you can stop this. I think we need to work on sexual compromise but we don't have to do that tonight. I don't want to fight about anything else while we have our night alone. I'll just go put the panties with Phillip."

---

Steve took them off and put them back in the jacket pocket. "Alright. I'm happy to cuddle and watch some crap TV," he said. Steve pulled Bucky into his lap and kissed up his neck. "I love you, Baby."

---

"I'm sorry, Steve," Bucky answered and curled up in Steve's lap and against his chest. "I'll work on talking more, I promise." He paused then looked up at Steve and touched his face gently.

---

"You don't have to be sorry, Baby." Steve kissed his neck and played with Bucky's hair lightly. "I know you are going to work on it. I know it's not first nature. But I am here to listen when you want to talk."

---

Bucky remembered how it was helpful that one night that Steve just sat and listened to what he had to say because he wanted Bucky to be comfortable talking to him about things. He thought he should try that again. "Lost my virginity at fifteen - to an eighteen-year-old college senior. He was very kind and gentle and nothing but good to me. We were at a party."

---

Steve was surprised when Bucky started to open up but he was happy that his boyfriend was still willing to talk to him. "Did you two stay together for a little while?" He kissed his cheek. "Was it good? I don't think it could top my first time having sex, though."

---

"No, we couldn't date," Bucky said. "He had a couple other boyfriends his age and he was worried that someone would find out about me and he'd be arrested for having sex with a minor even if he was only just eighteen by a couple months. It was good for my first time, yeah. Like I said, he was so good to me. I think he just wanted me to enjoy myself and get rid of my virginity with someone who was going to care. He did that for a lot of people, I heard."

---

"Is it a normal thing for people to not care?" Steve asked with a frown. "Is it just with gay guys? Or do people usually not care if your first time is good or not?" Bucky had been so amazing to him. Steve didn't know how he would react if someone was rough or rude with him.

---

"It can be pretty typical of everyone. I knew girls who had sex with their boyfriends who they had dated for a long time who still said they had a terrible time because the guys were insensitive," Bucky answered.
"That's awful," Steve said with a frown. "Makes me more appreciative that you made sure I felt good and comfortable." He smiled and kissed Bucky's temple affectionately. "Thank you for being so sweet with me."

---

"Of course, Baby. I care about you so much." Bucky pulled Steve in for a kiss and tugged him down so Steve was lying on top of him again. "Want another one or are you good for tonight?" Bucky asked, half hoping Steve wanted him to keep making these strange confessions and half hoping Steve just wanted to fuck again.

---

Steve carded his fingers through Bucky's hair. "I think we can put off talking for a little while," he hummed. "I'm a little more than just interested in hearing you shout my name, huh?"

---

"What are you going to do to me, Rogers?" Bucky asked with a sly grin and started massaging his hands down Steve's back to his ass. "And where do you want me while you do it?"

---

"I was thinking about the shower," Steve said. "It's kind of small but if I press you up against the wall, it could work." Steve seemed confident that they wouldn't slip.

---

Bucky bit his lip and smiled. "Okay, Steve. Let's take a shower," he said enthusiastically and wriggled out from under his boyfriend to get up. "You want to grab that lube and bend me over the sink and get started?"

---

"Nah," Steve said. "I want to bend you over the sink and eat your ass," Steve stated with a wide smile. He liked talking a bit dirty sometimes and it was still the truth - he wanted to lick him open.

---

"Yes, Sir." Bucky trotted towards their bathroom with Steve in tow. Once they got there, Bucky waited for Steve to take his body under his control and mold Bucky to wherever he wanted him first.

---

Steve happily trotted to the bathroom and, out of habit, shut the door behind them. "Hands on the counter and spread your legs for me, Handsome," Steve purred.

---

Bucky obeyed and stuck his ass out a little to entice Steve. He could also see himself in the bathroom mirror and he was fully expecting for it to be pretty hot to see what sort of faces he made while Steve opened him up.

---

Steve kneeled behind Bucky and grabbed his ass firmly in both hands and spread his cheeks as wide as he could. Steve leaned in and kissed over the hole a few time just to tease him before swirling the tip of his tongue around it.

"Are you going to just play around or are you going to get it inside me?" Bucky asked with a humorous edge. He did enjoy the teasing kisses but he was also pretty damn desperate to have at least something in his ass.

"Patience is a virtue," Steve hummed. Just because Bucky complained, he purposely took more time teasing him, pressing his tongue against the muscle but not pushing in. At long last, he finally pushed one finger inside of him.

"Fucking finally," Bucky gasped out and pushed back against the finger. "More, Baby, please," he said and gave a quick look back to Steve who was staring at his finger disappearing into Bucky's ass.

"It was a brilliant idea to have a night to ourselves."

"You're just saying it was a good idea cause it was your idea," Steve chided. He pushed a second finger inside and scissored them so he could stick his tongue in the space it made.

"Ah, fuck," Bucky breathed. "Well, it was a good idea. I don't see you complaining about having some time to ourselves." He shut up then and let Steve work him open. He didn't know if he was planning on getting his dick inside him before they got into the shower or after but he knew that

Steve didn't grab the waterproof lube from the closet.

Steve didn't even know there was a different type of lube for water. He took his sweet time getting

Bucky ready and open. He pulled his hole open wide and thrust his tongue in a few more times before giving Bucky's ass a small slap. "Alright, in the shower."

Bucky gave him a look. "You want to get inside me and we will shimmy over there or are we going to use the waterproof lube? Cause there's no way I'm letting you try with a wet dick cause that can hurt."

"Waterproof lube?" Steve scoffed, clearly thinking that Bucky was pulling his leg. "Quit messing around, you dope," he said fondly as he pulled out a rubber mat he'd been meaning to put in the shower. Now they wouldn't have to worry about slipping.

"Steve, I'm serious." Bucky gave a confused smile. "What do you think the point of lube is? If water was okay to use then no one would need to buy lube anyway. We'd just wet your dick and get going." He started for their room to grab the lube and came back quickly.

---

"No, I mean the waterproof part. Why won't normal lube work? I'm a cop, not some scientist," he said. Steve wasn't going to complain so long as Bucky was comfortable and they got to have sex.

---

"Oh, it washes off. Like in no time, it's gone and you've just got an oily residue on you that doesn't really do much," he said and handed the lube to Steve. "But this stuff, won't just wash right away."

---

"Oh." Steve took it and smiled up at Bucky. He set up the shower so it was the temperature that Bucky liked. "Well, let's get you in here, Baby. I wanna finger you while you wash your hair."

---

"While I wash my hair?" Bucky grinned. "I can do that. You have a thing for my hair, don't you? It's a good thing I didn't cut it after all. I am going to grow out a beard for a bit, though, see how you like it."

---

"Yeah," Steve said with a grin. "I like the idea of you doing normal stuff while I'm inside you." Steve kissed along Bucky's neck. "Please don't ever cut your hair. I love it so much. And I would love to see a beard on you, too."

---

"You got it, Baby," Bucky said and started pouring shampoo into his hands. "Do I still look cute with my hair all wet or do I look more like a drowned rat?" He asked right before Steve stuck two lubed fingers up his ass.

---

"You look like a drowned rat," Steve answered playfully and moved his fingers inside of him. He kissed Bucky's shoulder and smirked. "The most handsome drowned rat I've ever seen."

---

"You're the worst," Bucky gritted out and started to wash his hair. "But I also love you so there isn't much I can do about it." He kept on washing his hair and feeling Steve playing around inside him. He was getting a little antsy and really wanted Steve to just get his cock in and start fucking. That was the whole point of getting in this little shower together and putting the mat down anyway.

---

Steve knew that Bucky was desperate to get fucked and that was why Steve took his time. He waited until Bucky was done washing his hair before he looked even remotely like he was going to put his dick inside him. "Can you lean against the wall and show me how ready you are?"

---

Bucky nodded and turned to press his chest to the wall of the shower. His dick was shoved against it too and he tried to not touch it. Instead, he reached back and held his cheeks apart and shoved his ass out towards Steve so he could see it open and want him.

---

"Christ," Steve breathed out. "You look so sexy." He started to stroke himself as he coated the lube on his dick. He stood behind Bucky and slowly pushed himself inside of him while he held him steady with one hand.

---

"Yes, god, Steve, Baby," Bucky said and immediately pushed back against him to pull him all the way inside. "Fuck me, Steve," he growled and shot a look behind him at his boyfriend so he knew he wasn't waiting anymore.

---

Bucky deserved to get what he wanted. Steve grabbed his hip firmly and started thrusting hard and quick into his boyfriend. Steve let out soft, little moans because Bucky's ass felt so goddamn good. "You like that, Buck?"

---

"Yes, I fucking love it. Love your cock. Love you," Bucky bounced with Steve's movements and held his hands on the wall to keep himself steady. "Want you like this every day - all the time. Want to be connected with you."

---

Steve bit marks onto Bucky's shoulder as he gave him everything he had. His balls smacked into Bucky's ass with every thrust and he could barely keep himself together. "Yes," he agreed. "We are going to get this every day, Baby. Cause we're going to be together for the rest of our lives."

---

"You and me, Steve," Bucky barely got out as Steve was pounding into him. He loved this. This closeness was so important to them both and he liked when Steve let himself lose a little control and go all out.

---

"Yeah, Baby. You and me," Steve panted out. His fingers dug in a bit more, bruising Bucky's skin a little. "God, you feel so good. You're gonna make me come, Buck."

---

"Come inside me, Steve," Bucky whispered. "Then stick your fingers back in so none of it can leak out. Will you do that for me?" He asked sweetly and pulled his hair back on his head. It was wet and sticking to his face and he was getting annoyed by it.

---

"Yes." Steve didn't last a whole lot longer. Within minutes, he was coming deep inside of Bucky. Without question, he pulled out once he milked his orgasm for all he had and he put three fingers easily inside of Bucky.
"Now turn me around, get on your knees, and suck me off with your fingers still inside," Bucky said and put a gentle hand on Steve's hip. "Please, Baby, I want your mouth on me," He begged and gripped Steve.

Steve's mouth hung open. He was all too willing to comply but Bucky's ideas still could surprise him in the best of ways. He sunk down slowly to his knees while still easily finger-banging his boyfriend. Steve leaned his face forward and licked his way up Bucky's shaft before taking the head into his mouth.

"Fuck yeah," Bucky grinned and started fucking into Steve's mouth. "I won't last long, Steve. I promise." He reached behind him to feel Steve's hand on his ass and he took another finger and encouraged it inside his hole.

Steve slipped another finger inside Bucky and met little resistance. He enthusiastically sucked him off, bobbing his head along Bucky's cock and swallowing him all the way down.

"That - that's it, Babe," Bucky said hurriedly. "I'm gonna come. I'm almost -" It took a few more seconds of Steve taking him into his throat before Bucky gasped out Steve's name and gripped his shoulders as he shot into his mouth.

Steve closed his eyes as he felt Bucky shoot hot come down his throat. He pulled back and coughed once before licking him clean. "God, you're the best, Baby." Steve didn't stop thrusting his fingers in and out of his ass.

"Kiss me," Bucky whispered desperately and looked down at Steve's loving eyes. "Kiss me. Please." An unusual sense of insecurity and fear came over Bucky and he just wanted to be held by Steve and loved and cared for. He wasn't sure where this feeling was coming from but he was anxious to be curled up against his boyfriend.

Steve obeyed immediately. He stood up and wrapped an arm strongly around Bucky's waist. The other tangled his fingers in his hair and he kissed him slow and deep. When he broke for air, Steve brushed their noses together. "I love you so much."

"I love you too." Bucky smiled weakly before adding. "Don't ever leave me. I need you now. I don't know what I would do without you, Steve." Bucky reached a hand up to start massaging the back of Steve's neck while he locked eyes with him.
Steve's face fell at the thought that Bucky would worry about him leaving. "Baby, you are so strong. You don't need me. But I still will never leave you," he promised. Steve hugged him tight and tucked Bucky's head against his chest. "Your family is my family now."

Bucky rested his head against Steve and held his hands firmly against his back. He slipped his tongue out to give a quick playful lick to Steve's chest before pulling back and asking, "You want to dry off and cuddle in front of the TV? I really want to be little spoon right now."

"Of course," Steve said. "No complaining allowed." Steve warned softly as they dried off and then picked Bucky up - which he knew would result in Bucky complaining about Steve's wound. He was working on carrying heavier things in physical therapy anyway. Steve carried Bucky to the couch and pulled the blanket over the both of them. He was a little out of breath but he still held Bucky flush against his chest. "How's that?"

"I think you overdid it, Officer," Bucky scolded but snuggled back against Steve anyway. "You could've hurt yourself and then dropped me then we both would have been in pain." He flicked the TV on and found a station that was playing 1950s sci-fi movies.

"But I didn't," Steve teased. He rubbed a hand over Bucky's chest and smiled fondly as he watched TV with him. "Is there anything I can do to make you feel for certain that I'll never leave you?" He asked. "I don't want you to feel insecure over us."

Bucky sighed and glanced back at his boyfriend. "I think sometimes I just get a little worried. It's just because people tend to either die on me or leave. And you almost died already." He paused. "I worry that Becca will go to college someplace across the country and I'll never see her. And I worry that Lilly will move out to South America to play soccer with better players. And I worry that you'll get hurt again but this time not make it. Or you'll wake up one day and realize that I'm not worth all the trouble and you'll move out."

Steve didn't have any control over whether he got hurt on the job or not. But he could reassure Bucky in other ways. "Baby, you've raised the girls better than to forget about you. It's possible they could move. But they love you and I'm sure they'd call every day and visit when they could. And why would you ever think I would feel that you're trouble for me?"

"I don't know." Bucky pulled Steve's hand up to his face and kissed it lightly before holding it to his chest. "I guess I just get so scared about it. I know you wouldn't leave me but what if I fucked up bad enough that you just couldn't be with me anymore?"
"Buck," Steve said softly, petting a hand over his arm. "You're not going to fuck up bad. You'll mess up, just like any of us will. But I couldn't ever leave you. I love you too damn much and anytime we have a fight, it won't outweigh all the good you've already given me."

---

Bucky nodded and nuzzled closer to Steve and watched some form of alien monster taking over what was supposed to be Manhattan. After Bucky went to see The Thing a few years before, nothing from the fifties and sixties looked very good with their practical effects. Mostly it just looked like weird puppets to him now. Even though he would have been terrified as a kid.
It was the beginning of December when Steve finally found a priest to marry them. It was a Presbyterian church on the Brooklyn and Queens border, which was close enough for him. Steve didn't tell Bucky yet but, instead, he took the girls out of school a little early so they could go ring shopping.

---

Lilly was more than pleased to get out of school to go help Steve. Before Becca consented to it, she made him double-check with her teachers that it wouldn’t affect her perfect attendance record. Now they were all in a shop staring at rings and trying to find something for Bucky that would be just perfect.

---

Steve picked up a really sparkly ring that wasn't too feminine but had plenty of gems in it. "What do you think of this one?" He asked. "It's got his favorite colors in it."

---

Lilly nodded her head enthusiastically but Becca said, "No way." Steve gave them both a distraught look and Becca added, "It's not about Bucky's favorite colors, Steve. It's about simplicity. He's not going to want a lot of jewels on it - just one - or even a flat metal band."

---

"But Bucky deserves better than just a plain old band," Steve countered with a pout. "What about something with nice etching on it? That way it's pretty but not overly jeweled up?"

---

"You may have either one jewel or one with etching, yes." Becca nodded and looking to Lilly who was a little lost but nodded in agreement. "But nothing yellow gold. Bucky's isn't a gold sort of guy."

---

"Who made you the ring police?" Steve joked as he nudged Becca. "I think a really nice silver would suit him. Maybe I can get it custom engraved somewhere? You know, just pick out a plain ring and get something done on the inside."

---

"I bet they engrave it here if you asked." Becca crossed her arms. "And I made myself the ring police, just so you are aware."

Lilly walked along the glass cabinets until she found some plain silver bands. "Here they are, Steve!" She shouted back at them and Becca shushed her.

---

Steve walked to where Lilly shouted. She was staring hard into the glass case and assessing each ring as well as she could. "Which one do you think looks the best, Kiddo?"
She scanned them all again before stabbing her finger into the glass and saying, "That one." She was pointing to a dark shiny metal band that had a rim of light silver down the middle so it gave it a bit of character. "You can probably engrave that one, right?"

Steve nodded and asked for one of the sales associates to pull it out of the case. Once he had it in his hands, he showed it off to Becca. "What do you think?" He asked. He wouldn't get a ring without both of their blessings.

Becca gingerly took it and rolled it over in her hands before handing it back to him. "It'll do," she said with a quirk of a smile on her lips. "What are you engraving on it?" She asked as Steve looked at it closely again.

"I'm not sure yet," Steve said. "I'm thinking I'm going to just buy the ring today and get it engraved some other time. This is something that's got to last a lifetime, so I really want to make sure I come up with something good." He paused and asked, "Hey, do you guys have birthstone necklaces?"

Lilly made a face and asked, "What's that?"

Becca laughed and waved Steve off like he was making a bad joke. Of course, they didn't have birthstone necklaces. Their parents weren't the type to get them things like that and even if they did, they would have probably sold them for food money after they died anyway.

"Come here," Steve said as he herded them to show Lilly the row of necklaces with a different stone for each month of the year. "Every month has a different gem. Like sapphire or emerald or amber," he explained. "I'd like to get one for you guys if you would like."

They girls looked on at them and found the stones for each of their birth months. "That costs money, Steve," Becca said but she was clearly intrigued by the idea as she stared at the emerald in the case. She wouldn't hate having one. She would wear it but it still cost too much and she didn't want Steve wasting his money on them.

"Most things cost money." Steve gave her shoulder a little squeeze. "But I've spoiled Bucky this whole time and I haven't spoiled you guys." He wanted them to have something to remember the day they helped him pick out Bucky's ring.

"Guess there's nothing I can do to stop you if you decide you want to buy those for us, is there?" Becca asked, sounding a bit like her brother. "But we won't be able to wear them until you give Bucky his ring anyway, cause then he will know that you have it.”

---

Steve smirked when Becca gave in. He added their necklaces to the total and paid the cashier once they were done. "You really think Bucky would know? I haven't even told him that a priest would marry us yet. I'm going to surprise him at Christmas."

---

"He might not be the most clever person, but he is observant," Becca sassd. "For all he knows right now, you are still looking and haven't even talked to Lilly and I about being church married anyway." She turned to Lilly then. "So that means keeping our mouths shut and not wearing those necklaces until after Christmas, okay?"

---

"Jeez, all right." Steve laughed. "I guess I ought to just hide them and give it to you guys as a Christmas present, too," he teased. Steve didn't mind giving it to them early so long as they didn't lead Bucky on at all. "I'm thinking about putting the box in the tree. But that may be too obvious."

---

"God, Bucky's right, you are a dweeb." Becca was being uncharacteristically talkative today. It was mostly just because she was genuinely excited about doing something like this for her brother – something that she thought would be good for him. Bucky was a challenge and Becca definitely had her issues with him but she did love him and really thought that Steve was helping him be a lot better.

---

"A dweeb?" Steve smirked. "You know, one of these days you're going to have a boyfriend or girlfriend that's just as excited as I am to pick out a ring for you and I'll do nothing but call them a dweeb, too."

---

"I'm married to my work." Becca shrugged and took Lilly's hand as they crossed the street. Lilly noticed the candy shop and tried pulling Becca towards it but was met with resistance.

---

Steve noticed Lilly trying to head for the candy shop. "Lilly, did you clean out the cat's litter box?"

---

"No. But I'm gonna," Lilly promised. "I'll do it when we get home before Bucky's back from work so he doesn't see. Raphael doesn't mind waiting."

"Yes, he does. He hates dirty litter," Becca countered.

---

Steve would've gone into the sweet shop but he couldn't if Lilly wasn't up to date on her chores. "You know you were supposed to do that yesterday," Steve said. "Becca already feeds and grooms him and the litter box has to get done at least twice a week."
Lilly wanted to snap at him that he wasn't her dad but she refrained. "I'll do it today, I promise."

The rest of the trip back home was uneventful. When they got back to the apartment, though, they were surprised to see Bucky huddled up on the couch under a blanket looking pale and sick with Raphael sitting on top of him.

When Steve saw Bucky home early, he hurried to pass Becca the bag and told her to hide it somewhere safe. He walked over to Bucky and knelt down next to the couch. "Hey, Baby, are you alright? Can I get you anything?"

Bucky's eyes barely focused on Steve. "Clint sent me home. Think I have the flu or something. Already puked nine times," he said and pulled the blanket across his mouth when he coughed. Raphael gently batted at his forehead before curling up on his shoulder again and purring.

"Aw, Buck," Steve said softly. He kissed his head and got up so he could get a glass of water and a straw. If he threw up that much he would be dehydrated. "Drink some of this, Baby, it'll make you feel better."

Bucky grumbled at the water but let Steve slip the straw into his mouth anyway. He drank some of it then pulled his head back. "Where were you guys? Came home and I was all alone except the cat. And he's decided that I'm not allowed to get up."

Steve wasn't expecting to have to answer that question and he hated lying. "We went out for a walk," he said. Which wasn't a total lie. "And Raphael is right - you need to lay down and rest up." He gave the cat a scratch behind the ears.

"I think I'll sleep here tonight, Baby. I don't want to get you sick," Bucky said and eyed Steve. "Can you get me another blanket? I'm cold as fuck. Also, if you make dinner I'll go sit in our room while you eat cause I don't think I can handle the smell of food right now."

Steve shook his head. "Hell no. You're sleeping in bed with me because I want to comfort you and make sure you're okay." Steve got up and got another blanket, which he laid over him. "I'll help you into our bedroom before dinner."

"But, Steve, I don't want to get you sick," Bucky protested before going into another coughing fit. "I hope this goes away soon. We can't afford for me to be out of work too many days in a row."
"Don't worry about money, Baby. Worry about taking care until you're better." Steve kissed Bucky's hand and started to pet his hair. "Is there anything I could do for you?"

---

"Don't know," Bucky said and reached for Steve's hand. "You want to help me into bed right now? Could fall asleep pretty quick I think." He was feeling lousy. He really needed some sleep and wouldn't mind Steve holding him until he passed out.

---

"Sure thing, Baby," Steve said. He held Bucky's hand and carefully helped him out of the bed. He carried him out and into the bedroom so he could tuck him in and make sure he was all comfy.

---

Once Bucky was wrapped up in blankets in bed, with the glass of water on the nightstand, he relaxed a bit and yawned into his pillow. "Will you stay with me until I fall asleep or do you need to go make food?"

---

"I'll stay with you," Steve answered. He got into bed with Bucky and kissed his cheek. "You're still gorgeous. Even when you're all pale and sweaty."

---

"That's gross," Bucky mumbled and curled up against Steve's side. He held his hand tight in Steve's shirt while he felt himself drifting off. "I love you, Steve," he said slowly and shut his eyes.

---

"I love you too, Buck." Once Bucky was asleep, Steve went out to cook dinner for everyone. He reminded Lilly to take care of the litter and once he got them all situated, he went back to bed and held Bucky close through the night.
Chapter Summary

This chapter finds them Christmas shopping for presents for the girls.

"How much did we decide to spend on each of them?" Bucky asked as he stared into the basket he was carrying around the bookstore. "Because Becca's books are adding up and we haven't found much for Lilly yet. And, keep in mind, I still need to get the VCR."

---

"Well, I wanted to use all of this month's pay from the precinct, so... four hundred each. We can count half of the VCR towards each of them," Steve said. Bucky hadn't been too fond of using that much money when they could've put it towards something else, but between the precinct pay, Bucky's pay, and Steve's temporary disability pay, they had more to work with.

---

"Are we really sure we want to spend that much on them? That's going to be a big fucking Christmas and it'll set a precedent so, if next year is smaller than this year, they are going to be upset." Bucky sat his basket on the ground and started rifling through the books he had already picked out for Becca.

---

Steve nodded. "I'm going to make it clear that future Christmases won't be as big as this one. But also remember that we are also going to have the precinct pay for the next ten years and by then they'll both be adults. So we could always have a Christmas this big if we wanted."

---

"We can't always use the money on things like Christmas gifts," Bucky said and put one of the books back on the shelf, deciding against it.

---

"It's just one month a year," Steve said softly. "Buck, I understand what are you thinking. Because I was poor for a long time, too. And I don't want them to forget the value of a dollar, but I don't think that we will have to worry about money anymore."

---

Bucky bypassed the conversation with a shake of his said and asked, "Where do you want to go next? We need to get some new cleats for Lilly and get the VCR. Becca is almost done but we don't have shit for Lilly."

---

Steve put his hands in his pockets and said, "A sports store would be good. I was thinking about getting a how-to book for re-lacing lacrosse sticks.”

---

"Yeah, her lacrosse stick is sort of falling apart, isn’t it? And it would probably be better for her to learn to lace her own instead of buying new ones every time it breaks,” Bucky said and headed for the check out counter.

---

"If she's going to learn some responsibility, it may as well be with something she cares about. She’ll learn pretty quick if we say we aren't buying another stick." Steve put a hand on Bucky's shoulder and grinned softly. He loved saying ‘we’ and ‘us’ and ‘our’. It felt so right. He loved that Bucky’s family was his family now and he was about to have an amazing first Christmas with his new family.

---

Bucky nodded in agreement and hoisted his basket of books onto the counter. "I still need to go shopping for you, too. I'm trying my best to find something perfect.”

---

"Becca's good at helping with gifts. She helped me pick out yours,” Steve said with a wide smile and warm, loving eyes. He was beyond excited to propose and get to give Bucky the ring that he picked out with the girls.

---

Bucky shot a grin at Steve. "Oh yeah? Is it a guitar? It better not be a piano because we literally don't have any room for one." He was thinking about getting Steve some nice new art supplies. He wasn't sure what kind he would like but he could probably ask someone at whatever store he went too. He also wanted to get him some new records from the shop sometime soon – stuff that he liked like big band music and some crooners music like Bucky’s father liked.

---

"No, it isn't," Steve said but the look on his face said that it totally was a guitar. But at least that wasn't the big surprise he had for Bucky. "What about a keyboard?" Steve asked. "Those are smaller and we could probably squeeze it in Becca’s room since she wants one anyway."

---

"If there was a keyboard in Becca’s room, she would get way too annoyed with me coming in there all the time to play on it. Maybe one day if we get a house then we can get a piano," Bucky said hopefully. He had been thinking about that a lot recently - a house and a kid with Steve. Once his sisters were grown and had their own places, Steve and Bucky could easily get a house somewhere like Long Island if they saved up now.

---

"I guess,” Steve said. He sighed dreamily at the thought of having a house with Bucky. "What kind of stuff do you want in a house? I mean, we can't do it anytime soon. But when we do, what do you like?"
"Something just big enough for us and maybe one kid if we can have one," Bucky started. "I'd like a porch. Something bright." Bucky thought about his old house back when his parents were alive. It was small but it suited their needs. It had great big window out front that let in a lot of light and Bucky used to sit and stare at the city from it.

---

Steve grinned dumbly. "You think Becca and Lilly would be upset that we got a house for the baby but not for them?" He asked. Steve was worried that they might resent the baby a little for having it so easy.

---

"By the time we are allowed to have a baby, don't you think they will be well into their twenties or even thirties?" Bucky really wanted to slip his hand with Steve's. It was cold outside as they walked down the street and he was bundled up in warm clothes but still wanted to be as close to another warm body as possible.

---

"Like hell I'm waiting that long to have a baby with you," Steve said. "I'll fight tooth and nail to get to raise a kid with you." Because he was tired of hiding, Steve reached out and held Bucky's hand firmly. "I didn't survive getting shot to not have a good life with you."

---

Bucky's breath caught in his throat and his eyes went wide when Steve grabbed his hand. "Steve..." He whispered and looked around them. "What are you doing? It's not safe. You could get hurt again." A couple people had already noticed and given the two of them strange looks. Bucky tried pulling his hand from Steve's.

---

Steve frowned when Bucky pulled his hand away. He let him, but it still stung a little. "It's not illegal," Steve said. "And it shouldn't be shameful. We may not have stood up to Rumlow, but that doesn't mean we have to hide from everyone else, too."

---

"What if someone on this street decides that they don't like what they see and attacks us, huh? Or what if someone starts verbally accosting us?" Bucky looked nervously at the faces looking on at them and tried to figure out if anyone was going to say anything. "How about we just go home for a bit? We can finish shopping tomorrow." He knew Steve was upset and Bucky was normally the type to stick it to the man and normally would have held Steve's hand proudly. Except, Steve had already been injured once because of him and he needed to think of the girls and he didn't want him and Steve getting killed before they could have that house and baby they were just discussing.

---

Steve's face fell when Bucky insisted that they go home. "I'm sorry, Buck. I swear I won't do anything else. Please, we can keep shopping," he said. He didn't want to ruin the rest of the day because he was being stupid.
"Steve, I just..." Bucky sighed and looked down. "So far you haven't had to deal with a whole lot of people throwing slurs at you or beating you up. Yeah there's Rumlow, but that's one guy. I don't want you to know what it's like when fifty people are all calling you a fag and telling you to kill yourself. I don't want you to know what it's like to have the entire baseball team gang up on you and beat the shit out of you. And that's what people who don't understand us will do. And I never want to see that pain in your eyes."

---

Steve gave Bucky a sad look. It hurt to know that Bucky had gone through all that and while it was good that Bucky wanted to spare him from that, it still made a anger burn in the pit of his stomach. "The world doesn't get to decide how I show my affection for you," he mumbled. "And you don't get to decide what I do and don't face because of it."

---

"You're sounding like me," Bucky said and gave Steve a sad smile. "Let's just finish up at these last two places and then go home where I can hold you and we can talk. We can pick up food on the way home. Becca's been wanting Chinese again."

---

Steve nodded. For the rest of the shopping trip, Steve didn't get close to Bucky and he didn't speak to him unless it was to double check a gift idea for Lilly. They got Chinese like Bucky had suggested and by the time they got home, Steve felt emotionally exhausted.

---

Bucky was getting increasingly more agitated with Steve as they went. Steve retreated into himself and was acting like Bucky had put him in time out. Bucky didn't feel like he had done anything wrong to Steve. He just didn't want their day to be ruined by a bunch of people telling them off on the street. When they got home, Bucky dumped the presents in their closet so the girls wouldn't see them and then he put on The Who and flopped on the couch. If Steve didn't want to talk then they wouldn't talk.

---

Steve lowered his head and didn't really acknowledge the girls when he set up their dinners on the table. He walked over to Bucky to kiss his head and mumbled, "I need to lay down," before retreating into the bedroom.

---

Bucky watched Steve leave and decided that he would give him about fifteen minutes before he checked on him. Becca and Lilly sat down to eat. Bucky pulled up a chair by them and dished out some of the Chinese take out on the plate Steve laid out for him. Lilly gave Bucky a look then asked, "Is Steve okay?"

---

Steve hadn't wanted to ignore the girls, but he didn't want them to see him crying. He couldn't help but lie down miserably and cry into the pillow because it was so fucking unfair that he couldn't hold his boyfriend's hand without worrying about people beating the shit out of them for it. He wasn't angry at Bucky for erring on the side of caution. But he could be angry at the world for its intolerance.
Bucky tried his best to explain without giving away what happened that they had had a bit of a squabble while they were out. The three of them ate together without either of the girls pressuring for more information and Lilly spent most of the time chatting on about her day. Once he was done eating, Bucky piled some rice, chicken, noodles, and vegetables into a big bowl and took it to Steve. "Baby, can I come in?"

"Yeah," Steve mumbled. He wiped at his eyes and tried his best to look like he hadn't just been crying, but he still had puffiness around his eyes. "I may not be good company right now, though."

Bucky sat down on the bed in front of Steve and put the bowl on the nightstand. "My handsome man..." he praised and wiped some of the wet tear stains from Steve's face. "Did I really upset you that much? I didn't mean to at all, Steve. I promise."

Steve shifted to lay his head in Bucky's lap. "It's not you," he said thickly. "It's everyone else. It hurts to know that people want us dead for loving each other. I can't even hold your hand in public without one of us getting scared about being attacked." He rubbed at his eyes again. "And it's not the bullet or the words that hurt me. It's the hate that leads to it."

Bucky put gentle hands on Steve's head and leaned down to kiss his hair. "I know, my love, it's such a hateful world we live in. But I love you. And that's all that really matters. And the girls love you and someday you'll find a priest to church marry us and we will get a house somewhere nice like Long Island and maybe even have a baby. It's just going to be us together against whatever they say."

"But it doesn't have to be hateful. And what if people never change their view unless they see us out in the street like normal people? Cause that's what we are." Steve snuggled closer to Bucky and closed his eyes. He had to hold on to the good things. He was going to propose to Bucky soon because he found that priest and they were doing this. "Can you keep talking to me about the good things?"

"Of course," Bucky said and lovingly stared down at Steve's head in his lap and his arms around his middle. "Once we find that priest and get married then we will get to go on our honeymoon. I hope you love Seneca Lake. It's gorgeous and the atmosphere is so clean. We can just have a little cabin for the two of us. Spend all day outside swimming or fishing and spend all night huddled together in the quiet of the woods. And the good part is that there's no city noise and not many people around so we can fuck as loud as we want as many times as we want. We could even have sex outside."

Steve had mailed for a brochure of the place and had already started looking through the information pamphlet to plan their honeymoon. It looked beautiful and he desperately wanted to go. "Can you tell me more about how much you and the girls love me?" he asked softly.

---

Bucky kissed his head again. "Lilly told me how she's going to miss coming home from school to hang out with you when you go back to work. She says it's been a lot of fun having you around the apartment. She also told me that you helped her with some history homework. Becca would never admit to it, but she does love you. And she knows that I'm better with you around and she never wants you to leave us. She feels safer with you here, I think. More confident in me and more confident being home alone since she's got a police officer as a future in-law."

---

With all the hate they would receive for being who they were, Steve felt better being reminded about the different ways other people loved them. He sat up and gave Bucky a tight hug. "Thank you, Baby," he said softly. "It's just... I feel like I'm letting other people like us get hurt because we're hiding who we are."

---

Bucky sighed and held Steve. "Well, I mean, people like us are going to get hurt regardless of whether we are open or not. More than likely, if we were open and got hurt or killed then it would just encourage others to keep hiding so they don't get hurt either. But I do understand what you're saying, and it kills me too that we can't be like straight couples in public."

---

"We have to stand up for our rights, though," Steve said quietly. "People will see the wrongs. Natasha says that some people at the precinct have come around for the better after they saw what Rumlow did."

---

"That's one very small precinct in a very big city," Bucky answered calmly. "It does make me feel better about you going back to work there knowing that you're going to have people on your side. But I just don't think there's much else that we can do, you know? Without putting ourselves and our girls in danger again, I mean."

---

"There has to be something we can do," Steve said quietly. "I don't want to put any of us at risk, but I'll go insane if I have to be quiet about this." He would shut up about Rumlow, because he had to, but not the rest of the world.

---

"What are you thinking, Baby?" Bucky asked and kissed Steve for a few seconds before he let him answer. He grabbed the bowl of food from the nightstand and handed it to Steve so he could eat and talk. Bucky didn't want him to forget about eating.

---

Steve took the bowl and started to eat absently. "I don't know," he said. "I was thinking about helping other people who are gay. I don't know how or how I would find others, but... I don't know. I just want to help," he said lamely.
"Okay, well we can start brainstorming that," Bucky said and bit his lip in thought. "Until we figure it out, let's just try to be happy just being together and having your mom, the girls, and our friends on our side. How's that sound to you?"

Steve nodded his head. "Alright. Thank you, Buck." He went back to eating and when he finished, Steve snuggled Bucky just a little longer. "I should go out and see how the girls are doing. I feel bad for ignoring them."

"They're fine. Lilly asked if you were okay," Bucky said and played with Steve’s hair. "Maybe we can play a board game with them before they have to go to bed? Or you and I can just stay here and talk about our future house and baby again."

Steve smiled. "I think I would like to play a board game. Have some family time, you know? And then we can talk about our future house and baby once they're in bed."
Section Summary

This is the first half of Christmas.

Steve and Bucky were woken up Christmas morning by a very excited Lilly jumping on the foot of their bed and shaking them. "CHRISTMAS TIME!" She yelped and then moved to poke Bucky in the face. "Christmas time, Bucky. Let's go! You aren't making me wait again this year!"

---

Steve was startled awake and he stared at Lilly with a bewildered expression for a few moments as he processed what was going on. He launched up to grab her and pulled her down into the bed so he could wrap her up in the blankets like a mummy.

---

Mummy Lilly was struggling to get out of Steve's grasp as Bucky rolled away from them and groaned. "Lil, just give me another hour of sleep, okay?" he asked hopefully and sleepily before pulling a pillow over his head to try to block out the noise. This was the first year since their parents died that someone new was with them at Christmas and Bucky was glad that it was Steve. It felt more like family Christmas and less sad to him that he wasn't with his parents.

---

Steve smiled and kept Lilly down just to be a pain in the ass. But really, Steve was excited for Christmas, so he was quick to turn over to Bucky, pull the pillow from him, and kiss him all over his face. "Come on, Baby, it's Christmas."

---

Bucky kissed Steve once lazily and closed his eyes. "Get Becca up and ready and then come back for me," he murmured and rolled up into a tight ball. "Also make Lilly make me tea. I'm freezing my balls off already." He looked to the clock. It was already nine in the morning and he was surprised Lilly let him sleep in two hours more than the previous year. Maybe she stayed up too late the night before and slept in.

---

Steve chuckled and ruffled up Bucky's hair. He let Lilly play with the cat and made the tea himself instead. Steve got Becca up and ready to open presents before he returned to their bedroom to a still very tired Bucky.

---

Steve came in with tea in his hands and Bucky had no choice but to get up from bed, wrap up in a blanket, and follow him back out to the living room. He yawned and sat on the couch next to Becca who was also grumpily wrapped in a blanket. The two of them could have slept for six more hours and been perfectly happy. But Lilly was sitting on the floor already shaking a present and demanding that they start opening them. "Lil, wait for Steve to sit down, okay?"

---

Steve snorted at the excitement. He'd always been the excited one Christmas morning but now that there were kids around, there was even more spirit around him. Steve picked up a guitar-shaped present to hand to Bucky - but that one wasn't the guitar. He'd only shaped it to look like one and there were a few records in belly of the package, instead. "We ready to start?"

---

Bucky took the present from Steve while Lilly tossed one to Becca. He pointed at a floppy green package labeled for Steve that had a set of brand new paintbrushes in it. "Give that one to Steve, Lilly," he said and snuggled against Becca for warmth. "Yes, we are ready."

---

Steve took the present and opened it while the girls opened theirs. He smiled brightly and gave Bucky a kiss. "These are perfect, Buck, thank you," he said softly. Steve wouldn't have spent the money on himself to buy these types of fancy brushes.

---

"I wasn't sure if you liked to paint as much as draw but I saw the state of your old brushes and figured you deserved better ones," Bucky said as he was opening his present. "This isn't a guitar." He laughed and pulled out some special edition deluxe demo recordings from The Who and The Beatles and even one from Genesis that he knew was a little more rare. "Thank you, Baby, I needed more demo recordings. I don't have many."

---

They had a good, lazy morning full of opening presents and watching Raphael play with the empty wrappers. Bucky got his guitar and some other little things and Steve got mostly more art supplies. The last present Steve had to give was a medium-sized box. Inside of it was a picture he drew of all of them together - even the cat - with a ring tied to it on the ribbon. He'd decided to engrave the ring with 'I'm with you until the end of the line'.

---

Bucky stared at the last present in Steve's hand. It was small and square and he tried very much not to get his hopes up about what might be inside. Bucky cautiously poked a finger towards it and said quietly, "Is that one for me?"

---

"No, it's for the other guy in the house named Bucky," Steve teased him. He passed it over and kissed the corner of his mouth. Steve did his best not to look too excited over Bucky opening it.

---

Bucky took in a deep breath and held it as he opened the box. Inside he found a perfect two-toned ring and a drawing of all of them together. He hadn't known what to do so he sucked his bottom lip into his mouth and bit it as he stared at the ring and willed his lungs to take normal breaths. He couldn't believe Steve had found a priest.
Steve moved down and got on one knee in front of Bucky. He took one of Bucky’s hands in his own and looked up into his eyes. "Meeting you was the best thing that ever happened to me. And I can’t imagine a better way to spend my life than being your husband." He kissed the back of his hand. "Will you marry me, Bucky Barnes?"

Bucky grinned wide and tackled Steve in a bear hug as he kissed him over and over. He completely forgot to say ‘yes’ as he was too busy cuddling up in Steve’s open arms and kissing all over his face and neck. "I love you so goddamn much, Steve Rogers," he said and felt a tight clench in his heart at the prospect of being husbands with Steve.

Steve laughed and returned every kiss Bucky had to give him. Becca and Lilly thought it was cute at first but then the two men kept going and they started to whack the two of them lightly with the cushions. "Stoooooop," Lilly complained. "Get a roooom."

"But I love him," Bucky protested and kissed Steve again. "And we're going to be church married. And we're going to go to Seneca and one day get a house and raise a baby and have old man sex." Bucky droned on as he slipped the ring onto his finger. He needed to get a ring for Steve, too. It only seemed fair. Especially since he didn't think they needed wedding rings too. That was just too much money to spend. One ring for the each of them would do.

"Gross," Lilly complained at the thought of old man sex.

Steve gave Bucky a small look for talking about sex in front of his sisters but he was too happy to scold him. Steve hugged Bucky tightly and said, "Becca and Lilly helped pick the ring."

"It's perfect," Bucky said and looked to his sisters. "Thanks for helping Steve pick it out." Bucky had so far not discovered the engraving. He slipped the ring on so fast that he didn't see it and then he spent more time locked together with Steve. "When did you find a priest? Where did you find a priest?"

Steve looked at the ring on Bucky's finger with pride. "A few weeks ago," he said. "The priest said he's already married a few gays and lesbians and that he's trying to make his church openly gay-friendly," Steve said proudly. "He's on the Brooklyn-Queens border. So we don't even have to go far."

"That's not far at all. Just a train from here." Bucky smiled happily at him and then rested his head on Steve's chest. He breathed deeply a few times and just felt the closeness of him. "Is your mom still coming over for dinner or are you going to have to call her to tell her you finally made it official?"
"Oh, she already knows," Steve said. "I told her the day I found the priest that I was proposing on Christmas. She's coming over and bringing extra cake to celebrate." Bucky was the only one out of the loop on this one.

"So I had to wait for weeks but everyone else got to know?" Bucky chastised. "You didn't even know if I was going to say yes for sure."

"Well, I didn't want you to know I would propose at Christmas," Steve said. "And I knew you were going to say yes. You love me too much."

Lilly tugged Steve a little and asked, "Can we have our necklaces now? I want to show Bucky."

Steve gave Bucky an obnoxious grin before giving Lilly his attention. "Sure, go ahead, Kiddo. You did really well keeping this a secret."

Lilly bounded away to her room to retrieve her necklace before coming back and sitting down by Bucky to show him. "Steve got Becca and I these birthday necklaces for helping him pick out your ring." Becca quietly produced hers from out of her sweater pocket and showed Bucky. She had been waiting all day yesterday and today before she got to wear it.

"Those are beautiful. Did you thank Steve for doing that for you?" Bucky asked and nuzzled Lilly's head with his chin.

Steve smiled happily at them all. "Do you have the same birth month as your mom?" He asked and then saw Lilly's frown and pulled her into his lap to hug her.

"Yeah they are both May," Lilly said and squirmed in Steve's grip.
Bucky handed the necklace back to Becca and flopped on top of Lilly. "Ugh, Lil, I'm so tired. Why didn't you let me sleep? And I'm hungry!" he complained and poked at her sides.

---

Steve played with Bucky's hair a little bit and then gave them both a kiss on the cheek. "What do you guys want for breakfast? I'll make whatever you want."

---

Bucky normally would have just said cereal except that today was special and he was also really, really hungry. "Eggs and bacon with bagel toast, orange juice and bananas. Maybe some waffles. Or pancakes I don't mind which. Oh! Chocolate chip pancakes!" He beamed at Steve with a childish grin.

---

Steve kissed him sweetly. "Sounds perfect, I'll make all of it." He wiggled his way out of their cuddle pile and headed to the kitchen to cook. Raphael jumped up in his spot and started to rub his face against Bucky's jaw, purring like a motor.

---

Bucky petted the cat and talked to him a bit while Becca and Lilly gathered all their presents and transferred them to their rooms. After a while, Bucky decided he should pile all of his and Steve's stuff too so he took all of Steve's new art supplies to the hall closet where Steve kept his easel and things and he took his records and books to his room before flopping back on the couch and grabbing for his new guitar.

---

Whenever Bucky would strum a chord, Raphael would let out a big, loud meow in response to the sound. He didn't seem bothered by the music, but more like he wanted to participate. Steve laughed from the kitchen. "You've got a fan."

---

"One fan is all I need," Bucky said and leaned back in the couch to think of a song to play. Eventually he settled on The Who's 'Early Morning Cold Taxi' and he started humming along as the girls returned to the living room. Becca went to help Steve cook and Lilly sat by Bucky and rested on his legs and sang the lyrics as he played.

---

Steve's heart swelled as he listened to Bucky play. He really could get used to hearing this all the time. Steve would occasionally dance around Becca while they cooked and once breakfast was ready, he set the table and called the other two in.

---

They had gotten through a good portion of singing and playing the entire The Who Sell Out album when Steve called them in for breakfast. Bucky scooted his chair as close to Steve's as he could and held his hand out to him. "Did you see this ring yet?" He asked and pointed to it. "We need to go get you one too."
Steve kissed Bucky's temple. "Oh yeah? You going to get me a matching one or something different?" He asked. Steve reached down so he could play with the ring on Bucky's finger, enjoying that it was there.

"Don't know yet. But I'm taking the girls since they already went with you," Bucky responded and laced his hand with Steve's. "Thank you for breakfast, Baby." He waited for Steve to pray over the meal before he started wolfing down some eggs and chewing on long strips of bacon.

"Sounds fair to me." Steve ate his breakfast after saying his prayer. Once they were done, the girls were off to play with their gifts. Steve looked over to Bucky and asked, "Can you play more music for me?"

"What do you want to hear?" Bucky asked. "Raphael seemed to like The Who. But I can probably figure out some other bands to play. Don't ask for The Police, though, because I don't have any of their songs memorized well enough to play them."

"Can you give me some Bowie?" Steve asked. He started to clean up the dishes from breakfast. "What's that song? The 'ground control to Major Tom' one?"

"Space Oddity." Bucky nodded. "I can do that one for you." He grabbed his guitar and came back over, giving Steve's ass a squeeze before sitting back at the table to play as Steve picked up. Bucky sang softly and slow and watched his fingers graze over the strings. He loved his new guitar - and his ring. Two perfect presents.

Steve grinned and swayed a little to the music. He felt himself falling in love with Bucky all over again. When the dishes were done, he walked behind Bucky and massaged his shoulders while he played. "I love you, Baby. You sound so good playing."

"I love you too." Bucky stopped playing and reached up behind him to pull Steve in for a kiss. "Do you want to go have some alone time, maybe? The girls are both distracted in their rooms. I'll put a 'do not disturb' sign on the door if you want."

"As if I could ever turn that down," Steve said with a grin. He ran a hand over Bucky's chest slowly and gave him a pair of bedroom eyes. "Let's get going, music man."

Bucky hopped out of his chair and took the guitar with him as he skittered off to their room. He tied a hair-tie around the door handle and a hook on the side of the dresser to have a makeshift lock for them. He wasted no time in putting the guitar off in the corner and stretching out on their bed.

---

Steve smiled and laid over Bucky, immediately taking his fiancé's shirt off so he could kiss over his chest. "We are going to have such a good life together," he said happily. "And we will be married. When do you want our anniversary to be?"

---

"Won't our anniversary be the day the priest tells us that God's got us covered as husbands and all that?" Bucky asked and melted into Steve's kisses. He slipped his hands into the back at Steve's pajama pants and started massaging his ass.

---

"Yeah, Dummy. So what day do you want to do that?" Steve asked with a giggle and then hummed when Bucky put his hands down his pants. He started to play with his tongue over one of Bucky's nipples. "He's around pretty much every day."

---

"Let's not talk about the priest while you're licking my chest, yeah?" Bucky laughed. "And besides, I need to get your ring first away. I'll do that this week then we are free to go whenever the girls and your mom have time to join us. What day are you going back to work?"

---

"I go back in two weeks," Steve said. They were giving him the week after New Year's off only because it was usually hectic and they didn't want to stress him out right away. Steve began to slip Bucky's pants down.

---

Bucky hiked his hips up so Steve could slip his pajama bottoms all the way off. "Okay, then let's get married sometime next week," he concluded and moved his hands in between Steve's ass cheeks. Bucky grinned and gave Steve a seductive look. "First round of Christmas sex? Or just blow jobs and wait to fuck until tonight? Which do you want?"

---

"Christmas sex, duh," Steve said, grinning over at Bucky. "I wonder how many times we can sneak off today and screw like rabbits." He began to kiss down Bucky's body, nibbling and sucking marks here and there.

---

"Not as many as I'd like," Bucky said. "So, my new fiancé, who's getting it up the ass first today?" He probably could have been more romantic but he also was pretty eager to fuck. He and Steve had the rest of their lives to be romantic. Bucky had to be a little crude sometimes or he would explode.

---

Steve laughed a bit at the bluntness of the question and he sucked a mark on Bucky's thigh. "You're taking it first," he said. "But you're going to tell me three things you'd like to try. And I'll pick which one of the three I want to do." He was going to try to open up more to Bucky and what he liked to do sexually.

---

"What? What do you mean?" Bucky asked with a glint in his eyes. He had hoped Steve would say that Bucky was going to be the one to get fucked first. He was sort of dying for Steve's dick inside him. "Like something... sexually adventurous?"

---

Steve blushed but nodded his head. "Yes, Buck, that's what I mean," he said. Steve licked a stripe up his cock. "I'm all ears this time."

---

Bucky sat up so he was propped on his elbows. "Oh, fuck yeah! Um... three things?" How the hell was he going to choose just three things that Steve could pick from to try today? Also, he probably should stick with milder stuff so he didn't overwhelm him too quickly. "Tie me to the bed, blind fold me, or maybe 69 if you would want to." He really hoped Steve would pick one of the first two.
Bucky felt like letting Steve take control of his body and having a sense of movement taken away would do that for him.

---

Those ones Steve could handle. He smiled and kissed the tip of Bucky's dick. "This morning I'm going to tie you to the bed. And next time I'm going to blindfold you." He ran a hand up Bucky's thigh. "Do you have rope somewhere in here?"

---

Bucky's erection was straining out from his body and he refrained from touching it. "Uh-huh, yeah, I have special ties meant for this very thing." He quickly rolled off the bed and rummaged in a box in their bathroom for his bed ties. He came back with four black velvet loops with heavy-duty ropes on the end. "My wrists and ankles go in the velvet and the loops tighten up." He explained and handed them to Steve. Then a thought occurred to him, "Wait do you have your handcuffs?"

---

Steve's face heated up at the sight of the velvet loops. He started to work his way through untying one of the ropes when Bucky asked about the handcuffs. He looked somewhat offended and his jaw dropped. "W-what? No, I'm not using city property for our sex life."

---

"Oh my god. Why not?" Bucky asked, surprised. "Using city property for gay sex sounds really hot," he said as Steve worked on tightening the loops on his ankles. He wouldn't pressure Steve into using the handcuffs but some day he was going to get his hands cuffed behind his back while Steve took him doggy style - even if he had to buy fake cuffs.

---

"Because I don't want to think about fucking you when I use the same cuffs to arrest some drug lord or sex offender," Steve complained. He got both of Bucky's ankles secured and then started on his wrist.

---

Bucky tried his best to arch off the bed to kiss Steve but his legs and one strapped arm wouldn't allow it. "You did a good job on these ties, Baby," he said and couldn't help how his hips jolted up so his dick could come in contact with Steve's body hovering over him.

---

Steve wasn't sure what tying Bucky up would change for sex but he was interested to find out. Once he had him all set, he kissed down his neck and played with his balls. "Look at you, Baby," he said. "You look so good all tied up for me."

---

"Yeah," Bucky breathed. He loved that Steve was going to be entirely in control and also that he was going to have to get Bucky off without Bucky helping by touching himself at all. That's what he liked best about this. He could only come when Steve brought him to the edge. "I'm so ready, Steve. Do whatever you want to me."

---

Steve grabbed the lube and showed it off as he rubbed some between his fingers. "I'm gonna treat you real well, Babe. Give you everything you want." He moved his hand down and teased Bucky's hole a little bit before easing two fingers in at once.

---

Bucky clenched his ass around the fingers a couple times just to feel them then he relaxed so Steve could open him up. "I love you so much, Steve. You're going to get to have me like this for the rest of your life." He glanced at the ring on his finger and smiled at it. He still couldn't believe Steve had found a priest.

---

Steve worked his fingers smoothly in and out of Bucky's ass. "I know I am. Going to get to listen to you sing and play the guitar, too." Steve grinned at him and used his free hand to play with Bucky's nipple. "That ring looks good on you."

---

"This ring can be the only thing I wear to bed every night if you want," Bucky said and squirmed under Steve's touch. "Baby, more fingers," he pressured and tried to look down at where Steve was touching him.

---

"I like the sound of that, Buck." Steve obliged and pushed another finger inside of him. "Want to know the best thing about tying you up?" He leaned in close and whispered, "I can play The Police all day and you can't do anything to stop me."

---

"That's cruel and unusual punishment, Officer. Don't they teach you not to do that shit in the academy?" Bucky strained to say as Steve started working in a fourth finger already. "But, really, Steve, that can't be the best thing about having me like this." He really wanted to know if Steve was enjoying himself or not. Bucky sure as hell was.

---

Steve worked his fingers freely in and out of Bucky's ass. He pulled his own pants down and settled between Bucky's legs. "You're right. I like that you trust me so much." He kissed him deeply as he pushed his dick inside of him. Steve moaned into Bucky's mouth and started to thrust, still holding on to him even though he was tied to the bed.

---

Bucky couldn't help the low groan that came from him when Steve pushed all the way inside him. He licked into Steve's mouth over and over as Steve started to rock in and out of him with purpose. "It's all you, Baby," Bucky whispered. "Only you until we die."

---

Steve fucked Bucky quick and deep. Hearing Bucky reinforce that they would spend the rest of their lives together made his heart soar. "Yes," he breathed out. "Going to make you happy for the rest of your life." Steve wrapped his fingers around Bucky's dick and started to stroke him with each thrust.

---

Finally having his dick touched made Bucky's eyes lull back into his head and he panted short breaths while Steve fucked him. His brain couldn't hardly think of anything besides Steve's hand and Steve's cock and Steve's voice and those eyes and that gentle way he held Bucky at night and the ring that he gave him and the promise they would soon make to each other.

---

"So good," Steve breathed out. "You're so good to me. God, Buck, I can't wait to get to do whatever we want every day." Steve found the angle that had Bucky arching off the bed and curling his toes in pleasure. He fucked him just like that, hard and fast until he was spilling himself inside of Bucky.

---

Bucky wasn't long to follow Steve and was soon coming all over Steve's fingers. Steve collapsed on top of him and Bucky tried to hug him before remembering the restraints. "How was it?" He panted. "Did you like doing that? Added a little something new?"

---

Steve missed having Bucky's arms around him right after sex, but he did have fun keeping Bucky tied as he spread Bucky's come around his chest like he was finger-painting on his fiancé. "Mhmm," Steve grunted softly. "I liked it, but it didn't really change much for sex. It's fun right now, though."

---

Bucky sighed and watched Steve make a mess of him. "Fine," he huffed out. "We can have vanilla Catholic sex tonight. You tried something for me, though, and I'm proud of you and love you." Bucky paused and chuckled. "'Vanilla Catholic Sex' sounds like a really weird ice cream flavor."
"Oh yeah, I think I'm converting to Presbyterianism now," Steve said with a disappointed laugh. "No Catholic Church that I found would marry us. I haven't told my mom yet, so that will be fun." Once he was done playing with Bucky's come, he slowly licked him clean.

"Oh, um..." Bucky mumbled. "Are you sure? You've been Catholic your whole life, Steve." He felt a little weird trying to start a serious conversation while he was still restrained on the bed and Steve was licking him.

"I didn't tell my mom this, but my childhood priest said that if he saw me in his mass again, he would out me as a sinner," Steve mumbled. He also hadn't told Bucky because he was embarrassed. "The other priests gave me the ‘burning in hell’ speech. But this priest at the Presbyterian Church... he explained to me how similar Presbyterianism is to Catholicism and I think my mom will understand."

"Hey, let my hands go so I can hold you," Bucky requested and nodded at the restraints. He waited patiently for Steve to undo them before he sat up and pulled Steve into his lap and gave him a close hug. "I'm so sorry that happened to you, Steve. I know how much that must have hurt you since your church is so important to you. If you want to switch to Presbyterianism then I support you and I'll sit with you when you tell your mom if you want me to."

Steve really needed that hug. He snuggled close when his fiancé cuddled him and took a deep breath. "Thank you, Buck. I know that religion isn't important to you, but I'm thankful that you're supporting me." He kissed along Bucky's jaw slowly.

"It's important to you and as your fiancé, future husband, and love of your life, it's my honor to support you in whatever you think will be good for you and make you happier," Bucky said. "No, I'll probably never go to a church service with you, but I'll never tell you not to go." Bucky kissed Steve's face when he got the opportunity and he laid back so Steve was curled up against him on the bed.

Steve smiled and reached up to tangle his fingers in Bucky’s hair. "Well, at least I get to live with the fact that I managed to drag you to church at least once in your life. Even if it was just to get married behind the state's back. I think you'll like the priest. I told him that you weren't religious and he said he'd still marry us even if neither of us were."

"That's at least nice of him," Bucky said. "It probably did help that you are a man of the church. Get your foot in there with God and stuff." Bucky rolled Steve off of him and undid the ankle restraints so he could lay next to Steve better. "What are we doing now? We should probably make sure the girls are still doing okay. And your mom will be here in a few hours. And we need to start dinner roasting at some point."
Steve kissed Bucky lazily a few times and said, "If you clean up the wrapping paper, I can get the chicken cooking in the oven so it'll be ready when Mom gets here." He sighed and stared into Bucky’s eyes. “I love you so much.”
Chapter Summary

The second half of Christmas.

Bucky was almost done throwing all the ripped wrapped paper into a big trash can when Becca and Lilly both emerged from their rooms in their snow clothes and boots. "Are you two planning on playing in the park or something? You know you aren't allowed to go there alone," Bucky scolded.

Becca stuffed her gloved hands in her pockets and said, "We're going to the cemetery since you never take us to see Mom and Dad. It's Christmas, and we want to talk to them."

---

Steve would've offered to go with them but someone had to mind the chicken in the oven or else they wouldn't be eating until a ridiculously late hour. "Buck," he said. "Would you like to go? I've got to stay in and watch the chicken."

---

Bucky thought for a moment and looked to his sisters and then Steve. "Will you go with them? I'll mind the food while you're gone." It wasn't that he didn't want to go see his parents. It was just that he always got upset and overwhelmed and depressed when he thought about standing in front of their graves. Today was a holiday and his engagement day and Bucky didn't know if he could handle the breakdown that always came from attempting to visit his parents.

---

One day, Steve would want to go to Bucky’s parents’ graves with him but today, clearly, wasn't the day. "Alright, Love," Steve said cautiously. He went back to their bedroom to change into warm clothes and he gave Bucky a tight hug and a kiss before he left with the girls. "Love you so much."

---

Becca was clearly upset as they walked to the cemetery. She grumbled directions at Steve until they came to their parents' headstones. She knelt down on the ground in front of them and said, "Merry Christmas, Mommy and Daddy. It's Becca and Lilly." She looked up at Lilly, "Say hello, Lil."

Lilly grabbed Steve's hand for support and wiped her eyes, "Hi... Bucky couldn't make it but we brought Steve."

Becca countered, "Bucky could make it, he just didn't want to."

---

Steve could feel his own throat getting tight because he felt awful that the girls had to grow up without their parents. He held Lilly's hand tightly and he kneeled down next to Becca. "Hey," he said softly to the graves. "I'll bring Bucky down here soon," he promised. "He'll have some pretty big news for you guys, and I don't want to spoil anything by saying it too early." He put a hand on Becca's shoulder and whispered, "What should I say to them?"

"You can tell them whatever you want." Becca nodded and gave a weak smile. "All they can do is listen." She stood up and pulled Lilly close to her. "They would be happy to know that you're around to make Bucky better. I know they'd like you."

Steve smiled and gave Becca a small nudge. "They don't only listen," he said. "They can talk back, but not in the same way you and I talk to each other. It could be in a breeze that cools you on a hot day or a flower you see growing somewhere they usually don't." He glanced at the graves briefly and said, "You girls should talk to them first. I'm sure they want to hear from you more than from me."

Becca nodded and ushered Lilly down to talk to their parents. As Lilly started chatting away about sports and what she got for Christmas, Becca pulled Steve a few feet away so Lilly was out of earshot. "Bucky never comes down here," Becca said with sad heavy-lidded eyes. "I think it's because he's afraid of how disappointed they would be if they knew the shit he's done for the past few years with the men and alcohol and overdosing. You're stuck with him now. That means you need to make him come here."

Steve hated seeing the sad look in Becca's eyes. No kid should be this sad on Christmas. He reached out to give her hand a small squeeze. "I'll get him down here, I promise. And... you know, you can ask me to take you and Lilly here whenever you want. I want you two to be able to see your parents, even if it's just to tell them you got a good grade on something."

Becca nodded and thanked Steve before going back over to Lilly who had pretty much exhausted her list of presents. Becca knelt back down and started discussing the books she got and how much she was learning about historical women that her dad always admired too. They stayed for a bit in silence and waited for anything - they weren't sure what. "Do you want to say anything, Steve?" Lilly checked.

Steve paused to think before saying, "I wish I got to meet you both in person. From what Bucky and the girls say, you were really amazing people." He managed a small smile. "The girls make me proud every day and you would love how Bucky plays the guitar." Steve picked up two stones and placed it on top of their graves to show respect. "Thank you for looking over them and leading them into my life."

Becca watched Steve with a growing sense of trust and admiration as he talked to her parents and Lilly started to cry again and flopped onto Steve in a hug once he was done. "Thanks for coming with us," she said and hid her face in his arm. "I know they miss Bucky but it's good for them to meet new people too."
Steve hugged Lilly close and kissed the top of her head. "You know I'd do anything for you, Lil. I'm happy you introduced me to them." He sat in silence with them for a little while before they had to go back for dinner.

Bucky was sitting at the table reading a book and listening to one of his new demo recordings from The Who. He had already hastily drank three beers that he had hidden away and disposed of the bottles in the big dumpster in the alley so no one would know.

Steve had carried Lilly piggyback to the apartment. He plopped her down on the couch and walked over to Bucky so he could kiss his cheek. "Hello, my beautiful fiancé. Did the chicken blow up while we were gone?"

Bucky pointed at the intact chicken cooking slowly in the oven. "I managed it." He smiled and kissed Steve's hand. He looked to Becca then and asked, "How are Mom and Dad?"

She folded her arms and gave him a sour retort. "Like you care."

Steve frowned at the tone Becca took with Bucky. "It's Christmas," Steve said softly. "Let's put aside our grudges for today." He did plan on having a talk with both of them about how they handled Bucky not going to visit their parents.

Bucky clenched his jaw and gave Becca a dejected look before turning to Steve. "Did you introduce yourself to them?" He asked and thought about disguising another beer by pouring it into a travel mug. Steve didn't even know he had the two six packs that he had hidden behind their extra blankets in the laundry room.

Steve played with Bucky's hair and tangled it between his fingers. "Yeah. I told them that you'll have big news for them soon." Steve could tell that Bucky had been drinking - he could just sense it. He didn't know where he got the alcohol but Bucky had it. But Steve didn't say anything or else Becca would freak out on him.

Bucky leaned into Steve's touches and hummed a bit to himself. "I bet they liked you a lot," He said absentely and closed his eyes. "When's your mom coming over? Dinner should be ready soon." He looked down at his pajamas. "I should probably put on some real clothes.

"She's coming any minute," Steve said. "Why don't you wear that new sweater I got you? It'll look real good on you, Baby." Steve kissed him gently and nudged him up. "Come on, go make yourself presentable to your new mother-in-law."

---

Bucky obediently trotted off to their bedroom to get changed. He rummaged around for the new navy and grey sweater that Steve had bought him and he slipped it on before pulling off his pajama pants and looking for his black corduroys.

---

While Bucky changed, Sarah showed up at the apartment with one bag full of presents and another bag full of home-cooked desserts. She greeted Steve excitedly, happy about his engagement, and then rushed over to hug the girls.

---

Bucky came back out to Sarah's open arms and gave her a gentle hug before showing her the ring. "I promise to get one for your son soon. He needs one so everyone knows he's spoken for," Bucky said and gave Steve a loving glance.

---

Sarah gave Bucky a warm hug and then held his face in her hands so she could give him a kiss on the forehead. "You better get that ring quick or else someone will try and snatch him up," she joked. She put a cake on the counter that she made that had the text 'Barnes-Rogers' on it.

---

Bucky laughed as Steve eyed the cake happily and then gave his mom a dopey grin. He couldn't wait for the day when the five of them went to the church and had the priest bless their union to Steve's God. Bucky wondered if Steve would tell his mom before or after that he was converting out of the Catholic Church.

---

"Mom," Steve whined with a smile. "The last names go the other way around."

Sarah looked at the cake then back to her son. "Alphabetical order looks nicer," she said. Steve pouted as he got the chicken out of the oven. Sarah rubbed a hand up and down Bucky's arm. "So when's the big day?"

---

"Sometime before Steve goes back to work," Bucky said and offered for Sarah to sit at the table. "So within the next two weeks at least. We don't know what day exactly. All we know is that it has to be after school is over for the day and on a day that you are available."

---

"Well, I'm retired. So as long as it doesn't interrupt bingo night," she joked. She wouldn't be caught dead at a bingo night. Sarah helped Steve carve up the chicken into slices. "So how has Christmas been so far?" she asked. "Have you all given each other nice surprises?"

---

Lilly and Becca started telling Sarah about all the things they got this year. Lilly made a point to tell her how this was the biggest Christmas she had had in four years. Steve was quick to remind Lilly that this Christmas was only big because this was their first one together and it had to be special. Bucky rested a hand on Steve's thigh while he poured the two of them something to drink. It was only sparkling cider and it was non-alcoholic but Bucky thought if he excused himself to the bathroom and took it with him then maybe he could slip with whiskey in it. "Steve." Bucky smiled at him. "Do you want to pray for the meal before Lilly can't take it and starts eating?"

---

"Of course, Love, thank you." Steve joined hands with his mom and said a prayer so they could all dig in. When Bucky excused himself to use the bathroom, Becca eyed him suspiciously as he walked out.

---

Bucky pulled a small bottle of scotch from his nightstand and poured it into his cup. Then he took the picture of his parents from his dresser and sat down with it. "I'm really sorry I didn't come visit you today. It just hurts too much - especially on Christmas. I'll come see you soon with Steve. He's right - I do have something big to tell you." Bucky rubbed the light dust off the picture and held his glass up in a toast to his parents. "I miss you. I love you. Merry Christmas."

---

Becca had missed Bucky talking to the picture. All she saw was the scotch on the nightstand. She angrily stormed in and grabbed the bottle. "You said you would stop!" She hissed quietly, not wanting to alert the others by raising her voice.

---

Bucky stared at her intrusion and clipped back, "I did. I hardly drink anything at all anymore. And I haven't been back to any bars except to close my tabs since that night." He reached for the small empty bottle but before he could get it, Becca angrily crushed it against the wall. There were shards of glass on the floor and some sticking to the wall and Becca's hand was bleeding from where some pieces cut into her. She stormed back out of Bucky's room before he could help clean up her hand.

---

The idle chatter at the dinner table stopped when they heard a bottle smash. Steve got up quickly to see what was going on and Becca rushed past him into the bathroom with tears in her eyes. "Buck, what's going on?" Steve asked. He then saw the bottle shards on the floor and he couldn't help the tired sigh that escaped him.

---

"I didn't hurt her," Bucky said quickly with his hands up defensively. "She got mad and smashed it herself. I swear. And she wouldn't let me help clean her hand either." His breathing was picking up and he felt the tears welling up in his eyes. "Steve..."

---

Steve rubbed his hands over his face. "I'll be right back." He went to go get his mom to take care of Becca. He had Lilly distract herself by telling her to make sure the cat was fed and then he returned to their room and closed the door for privacy. "Buck," he said softly as he walked over to hug him. "Are you okay?"
Bucky shook his head and curled up into Steve. "I wasn't getting drunk I just wanted a little bit. It's Christmas and I figured it'd be fine. Mom loved cinnamon whiskey on Christmas. This was sort of like that." He looked up into Steve's eyes. "Becca overreacted. I'm not drunk and I wasn't planning on having anything more today."

"Baby, she didn't over react," Steve said softly. "And you weren't crossing any lines, either. I believe you weren't trying to get drunk, but you have to accept that the past is going to affect her perspective on you drinking for a long time," he explained gently. "She's been hurt by it, so you have to let her react the way she feels necessary."

"Smashing bottles and hurting her hand isn't necessary," Bucky countered but rested his head on Steve's chest, feeling small and pathetic.

Steve stroked his fingers through Bucky's hair. "That's not for you to tell her." It would only upset Becca more. She needed to be able to feel the things she wanted to feel.

"You're mad at me too, aren't you? I'm sorry this happened while your mom was here. I'm sorry it happened at all," Bucky pleaded with him and his breathing started to pick up.

"I'm not mad at you, Bucky. I'm just sad that it happened, that's all." Steve kissed Bucky's temple. "I'm sure my mom will understand. And now my converting churches won't be the biggest surprise of the day."

"Fuck, Steve, Baby. I'm so sorry," Bucky said and he felt like he'd said it a million times. "I didn't know you planned on doing that today and now I've gone and fucked shit up again and your mom probably thinks I'm an alcoholic if Becca's talking to her. She won't want you marrying me at all."

Steve didn't want to say that Bucky really was actually an alcoholic because Bucky already felt guilty enough and he didn't want to add to it. And Steve didn't love him any less because of it. "My mom knows there's more than one side to the truth. And she also sees how well you take care of me," he reassured. "It's going to be okay."

Bucky held his face in Steve's chest and let out a shaky breath. "Where's Lil? Is she okay?" He couldn't help but think of the day that he woke up in the hospital with his sisters and his grandmother surrounding his bed. He had tried overdosing and apparently Lilly had been the one to find him passed out in his bathroom. He always did more harm than good.
"She's with the cat." Steve kissed the top of Bucky's head. "Let's go out there and talk with her until my mom calms Becca down. We need to face them sooner or later," he encouraged.

Bucky sniffled. "I guess I have to." He stood up and quickly downed his entire glass of cider and whiskey before nodding and heading out the door. Lilly was curled up on the couch with Raphael. Bucky felt bad for interrupting the beginning of dinner. Lilly was really hungry and now their food was going to be cold soon. "Hey, Lil," he said and scooted her over on the couch so he could sit down by her.

Steve was already starting to reheat their dinner so they wouldn't go back to a cold meal. Lilly looked up from petting the cat and she gave Bucky an upset and confused look. "What happened?" she asked softly.

Bucky pulled Lilly to him and hugged her close. He was so mad he let this happen on Christmas. "Nothing, Lil," he said and pet her head, "Everything's okay. Don't worry." He really didn't want Lilly to be against him for his drinking too. He already had Becca and Steve and probably now Sarah getting on him about it.

"Why is Becca crying?" She asked, snuggling Bucky a bit. She had already had an emotionally exhausting day after visiting her parents' graves. Steve knocked on the bathroom door to check on Becca and his mom.

Sarah let Steve in and gave him a concerned little look. Becca shot a glare at him and hissed, "Did you know?" She balled one fist and held out her injured hand in front of her so Steve could see it. Sarah had put a bunch of Band-Aids on it after taking the glass out with some tweezers.

Steve frowned at the glare and the tone Becca took with him. He shook his head. "I didn't know that he was drinking today, Becca," he said. "I'm sorry that you have to go through this."

"But you knew he was drinking again," she accused and her lip quivered. "He said he would stop and you said you'd look out for him." Becca wiped the tears from her eyes and tucked some rogue hairs behind her ears.

"Becca, I'm still looking out for him," Steve said. "He's not doing anything illegal and I can't force him to stop. But he is getting better. He doesn't go out to bars anymore. He doesn't drink nearly as much as he used to," he reminded. "He's trying so hard."
"He's a fucking mess," Becca swore and crossed her arms. "He doesn't go to visit Mom and Dad cause he thinks they'd be disappointed in him and then he goes and does shit like this that just proves him right."

---

Sarah looked a little appalled by her language but didn't say anything. Steve remained calm. "Have you ever tried to understand why?" Steve asked. "Or have you always yelled at him instead?" Steve wished he could understand why. He only had bits and pieces of it. But Bucky had such deep hurt and he couldn't possibly understand it all.

---

"I wouldn't have to yell at him if he just had some more self-control," Becca protested. "He's reckless and naive and never thinks about anyone but himself. I know Lilly told you what he did after he left college. And I know you can't think he's just not going to try that again."

---

"Becca," Steve said in a tone he hadn't taken with her before. It was dark and stern. "I'm going to pretend that I didn't hear you say that your brother only cares about himself." He paused to take a breath. "I think it's time you stop holding him to the standard that you hold yourself to. Because Bucky is not you."

---

Becca clenched her jaw tight and gave a stare down to Steve. Sarah was meekly standing by assessing the situation and trying to decide if she should interject. Becca swallowed and gritted out, "I hold him to whatever standard keeps him here with us and as our guardian. Lilly and I have no one else. If Bucky were to leave or lost us because of his behavior then we would be put into the foster care system and probably split up. I love Bucky - and I've had to deal with him a lot longer than you have - but he needs to get his shit together, Steve."

---

"Becs."

"You don't deal with your brother. And neither do I. We love him and that's all there is to it." He reached out to take her hand. "You don't have to worry about being split up - ever. I'm not going to let that happen. You're allowed to be upset with his drinking. But yelling at him won't solve anything. If you want to yell, yell about him to me."

---

Becca took her hand back from Steve quickly and pocketed it. She was stubborn as she was ruthless. "He lied to me again. He said he'd stop drinking and he didn't. He told me he'd stop bringing guys home but it took him three years. He always promises me things and breaks them within a week."

---

"He did stop. He's drinking nowhere near as much as he used to. And he did eventually stop bringing guys home, Becca," Steve said. "I'm not asking you to not be angry. I'm asking you to have faith in him. Or at least faith in the faith that I have in him."
Becca didn't have much else to say. She really was too angry to deal with this. "Whatever. He's going to fuck up again in a few days anyway. But I'm hungry and I bet Lilly is about to just eat without us if we stay in here any longer."

---

Steve had more to say but he wasn't going to get into an argument on Christmas over it. When Becca went out, the food was still staying warm in the oven and Sarah gave Steve a small look. She didn't love Bucky any less but she knew what being with an alcoholic was like.

---

Bucky jumped up from the couch when Becca came back and Lilly followed him. "Is your hand okay?" he asked quickly and reached for it. Becca held it out to him and Lilly and they look over the band-aids to make sure everything was okay. "Becca..." Bucky started. "I'm so sorry."

All Becca said was, "Save it. I'm hungry. Let's just forget it for now."

---

Steve sighed and walked over so he could give Bucky a hug and kiss. "I love you, Baby." He knew Bucky needed support.

Dinner was kind of tense and awkward. The silence was broken when Sarah asked, "So how do you plan to celebrate your wedding?"

---

Bucky wasn't eating, just holding one of Steve's hands and staring at his plate. He felt like total shit. When Sarah asked about the wedding, Bucky looked up and said quietly, "Uh, going to Seneca Lake."

Lilly, to her credit, was trying her best to make the tension dissipate. "Our dad took Bucky there a lot."

---

"That's nice," Sarah said. She looked at the girls and said, "I bet we will have plenty of fun baking and making things while the boys are gone. Or we can talk about history or find some lacrosse game at a college to watch."

---

Becca shoved some food around with her fork and said, "The library has a couple documentaries on tape that I've been wanting to check out. We got a VCR player today so maybe we can do that."

Bucky squeezed Steve's hand once and added, "We still need to pick up the Star Wars tapes and make Steve watch them."

---

"We can do that," Sarah said sweetly. When they were done eating, she stood up and washed the dishes for them. "Steve, be a dear and get the presents from the bag." Steve nodded and did as he was told. Sarah had knit each of them a sweater in their favorite colors. She had taken to knitting after retiring.
Becca and Lilly thanked Sarah for the sweaters and Lilly went off to her room to change into hers. Bucky stayed at the table as still as possible the whole time and only got up when Steve ushered him over to the couch to sit with him. All he wanted to do was to lie in bed and fall asleep. He had a pretty bad headache going and he couldn't handle Becca's cold glares anymore.

Sarah had written a card for the Barnes family, including Bucky, saying that she knew that she would never be a replacement for their parents but she still considered them her children now. Steve knew Bucky was having a rough time, so he sat with him on the couch and wrapped an arm around his shoulders. "Buck, what do you think of letting Becca spend a weekend at my mom's every now and again? So she can have her own space."

Bucky nodded and curled up against Steve. "If she wants to do that then she can do that." He wasn't going to say anything to the contrary and if Becca wanted to get away from him sometimes then there was nothing he could really do. "Was that Becca's suggestion?"

"No," Steve said. "I think she's putting too much stress on herself and she deserves some time away where she doesn't have to feel responsible over what happens in this family." Steve hugged Bucky gently. "She's really hurting, Bucky. She loves you. But she's still hurt."

"I know," Bucky said and sighed, "I told you I wasn't cut out for this," he added more quietly and rubbed his face. "I try to be like my parents but I just can't. And I try to be a brother at the same time. But when I am a brother, I'm not being enough of a parent and, if I'm being too much of a parent, I'm not being a good brother."

"Bucky, if you don't think you're cut out for this, then why do you want to have a child with me?" Steve asked in as nonjudgmental and calm a tone as he could. "You're not supposed to be like your parents. You're supposed to be you. And your drinking and drug use aren't you."

"I don't do drugs anymore," Bucky hissed at him in a low voice so no one else could hear. "You know that. It's been almost four years." He sat up away from Steve and crossed his arms against his chest. "And raising a child from its birth is different than taking over for your dead parents."

"I know you don't do drugs anymore. But just cause you don't do it now doesn't mean that Becca's healed from when you used to," Steve said. He pet a hand over his chest. "Baby, you know I love you. And you know that I believe in you. I just think that there's been so much that has already happened that Becca has zero tolerance for any bad habits now."
"Becca never knew about the cocaine," Bucky said. He still wasn't aware that Steve knew about the time he tried to overdose on pills and ended up in the hospital. "And I'm doing okay with everything else. I'm doing a lot better than I was, I mean. I hardly drink at all and you're the only man I've been with since about six months before I met you."

---

"I know you're doing so much better, Love," Steve agreed. "That's not the point I'm making. What I'm trying to say is that you've messed up and broken promises with her over this in the past. So, of course, the smallest mess-up is going to set her off. And it may not be fair to you, but this is the environment you've created because of the decisions you've made." He gave Bucky's hand a squeeze. "But I'm here to help you."

---

"My head hurts," Bucky mumbled dismissively and stared at the ground. "I just kind of want to go to sleep. Sorry I fucked up our first Christmas together." He gingerly took Steve's hand and held it up to his lips to kiss it. "Is your mom mad at me?"

---

Steve kissed Bucky's cheek. "You didn't fuck it up," he reassured. "And I won't lie... my mom doesn't like that you drink. But she doesn't love you any less." He stood up to take Bucky to their room. "I'm going to stay up with my mom and the girls. But I'll join you after everyone is tucked in."

---

In their room, Bucky waited up for Steve for a bit but he quickly fell asleep after he took some medicine for his headache. When Steve came in, it was close to one in the morning. Bucky woke up when the door opened and he sat up slowly and reached out for Steve. "Are the girls in bed?" he asked.

---

Steve got into bed and wrapped his arms around him. "Yeah, I tucked them in and everything," he said. He pressed a kiss to Bucky's cheek and sighed contentedly. "How're you feeling?"

---

"Not great." Bucky sighed and molded himself to Steve. "Found the engraving in the ring, though. I love it. You're a bit cheesy, but I love it. It's perfect for us." He rolled so he was facing Steve. "Are they still mad at me?"

---

Steve massaged Bucky's head and kissed his face gently. "I'm glad you like it, Handsome," he said softly. "They are still mad, yeah." he sighed. "We are going to have a serious talk about drinking. Becca found the six packs behind the blankets and I had to stop her from coming in and yelling at you."

---

Bucky closed his eyes and buried his face in the pillows. He knew Becca probably went looking for them. She probably checked every place that might have a hidden stash and raided what was there. "I just don't think I can stop, Steve."
"You can, Baby," Steve said. He worked his hands down Bucky's neck and over his shoulders. "I bet you thought you couldn't stop doing drugs or bringing men home, too."

"That was different," Bucky said. "It's not like I was addicted to coke - I just did it sometimes. And it was dangerous to bring strangers into the apartment and around the girls all the time. It's different," he repeated and pleaded with his eyes at Steve.

"Baby, I know it's not easy, but you can do it. They have classes and everything for it. And you have me to support you no matter what." Steve stroked a hand up and down Bucky's arm. "Drinking can be dangerous too. You can say or do something that upsets the girls or me. And it's terrible on your body."

"I'm not going to some bullshit AA classes, Steve. I'm not an alcoholic," Bucky said sternly. "And I've never been abusive to the girls or you when I've been drunk." Bucky sat up and flicked on the lamp by his nightstand. He had taken to keeping medication in the drawer in case he needed it for a headache and he contemplated taking some more even though he'd just had some a few hours earlier.

"If you're not an alcoholic, you wouldn't have such a hard time quitting, Bucky. Being an alcoholic doesn't make you a bad person, it just means you need a little help," Steve said as he laid his head down on the pillow and frowned over at Bucky.

Bucky didn't know what to say. He didn't want to admit that Steve might be right. He had known bad alcoholics in his life and he really didn't think he was one. But Steve made a good point and Bucky was just feeling like everyone was ganging up on him too much.

Steve could tell that Bucky was feeling a bit shitty. He didn't want their first Christmas together to end on such a tense note, even though he wanted to talk about how he didn't like losing Becca's favor today. "Hey," he said softly. "Give me a kiss," Steve murmured. "You're going to be my husband soon."

Bucky snuggled up to Steve and kissed him. He placed their foreheads together and whispered, "You still love me even though I ruined our engagement day? And even though I'm not a good guardian and I can't even go visit my parents' graves and I made your mom upset with me and Becca got her hand hurt and Lilly has no idea what's happening," he rambled until he was crying again.

Steve wiped at Bucky's tears and kissed his forehead a few times. "Bucky, I'm marrying you. Not some imaginary person who's perfect." He gave him a tight hug. "Don't beat yourself up. I love you
"I don't know why, though," Bucky mumbled. "I don't love me or like what I've done. I don't see how you don't leave me. I'm grateful that you don't but I just... Are you sure I'm worth all this, Steve?" He crumpled a hand against Steve's chest and stared at it.

Steve cupped Bucky's face and guided him to look up at him. He pressed their lips together and gave him a reassuring smile. "You care so much, Baby. You are such an amazing, strong man- even if you don't feel that way. You've taken such good care of me and kept an eye out for me when I was in the hospital. You've helped me through when I needed the most support I ever have in my adult life. I can trust you. And I know you love me." He kissed him again. "And soon, I'm going to promise myself to you for the rest of our lives."

Bucky really couldn't help that he couldn't stop crying. The ups and downs of Christmas Day had opened a well in him and he just couldn't get it to stop. He kissed Steve again and let his tears flow across his face. After about a minute of this, Bucky slowly and smoothly shifted their bodies so he was sitting on top of Steve still attached at the lips.

Steve wished that he could erase all the hurt that Bucky felt. He wanted him to have a happy, easy life. He stroked his hands over his back and hummed softly into the kiss. "I love you," he whispered. And then he said it half a dozen more times so Bucky wouldn't forget.

Bucky had moved to sucking harsh deep hickeys onto Steve's neck and somewhere in the mess of Steve's declarations, Bucky had ditched his shirt and Steve's hands had found their way to rest on the dimples of his lower back.

Steve moaned softly as Bucky marked him up. He scratched his nails lightly up Bucky's spine before resting on his lower back. "Say that you love me too, Baby."

Bucky popped off Steve's neck and looked him in the eyes. "I love you so much. I love you, Steve. I'm going to marry you and I'm going to be good for you. And I've never loved anyone like I love you and I never will again. You're all I need. And I'm going to make love to you tonight and every night until I die. And you're going to feel me on you wherever you go and I'm going to get you a ring so everyone knows that you're coming home to me."

Steve smiled up at him and looked so happy as Bucky confessed his love to him like that. "Sounds perfect, Buck," he said. He pulled Bucky down for another kiss. "Now make love to me. I want to feel you all night long."
Bucky nodded in agreement and wiped the last of the fallen tears from his face before shimmying out of his pants. His cock was already hard and pressing against Steve's leg. "Help me with your clothes?" he asked softly and started pulling on the dark green shirt that Steve had on.

Steve slowly slipped off his shirt and he stretched his arms up so he could show off a little for Bucky. He wanted to see a smile on Bucky's face. "Let's do something new," Steve suggested, so desperate to make Bucky forget all the drama from today.

Bucky's heart skipped a beat and he locked eyes with his new fiancé. "New like how?" he asked. Bucky was just going to fuck Steve deep and slow for a long time and make it a night of gentle meaningful love making but he couldn't resist anything that Steve was willing to try to spice things up a little bit.

"Do you want to try tying me up?" Steve asked. "Or blindfolding me?" He knew Bucky liked having that done to him but he wasn't sure if Bucky liked doing it to others. "Or do you want me to only do things when you say so?"

"No blindfolds," Bucky said quickly. "I want you to see me tonight. But if you want to try being tied up I'd love to see you like that." He let out a shuttering sigh and trailed his fingers up Steve's torso. "You'd look so gorgeous not being able to touch yourself - waiting for me to help you get off."

Steve looked a little nervous to be tied but he trusted Bucky thoroughly and he loved him so damned much. He would do anything to make him happy. He reached down to grab a handful of Bucky's ass and he kissed him deeply. "Then tie me up," he growled.

Bucky's breath hitched again as he scrambled off Steve to get the soft velvet loops that he had discarded on the other side of the room after they were used earlier. "Off with your pants, Baby," he said in a sultry tone as he stood before Steve holding the ties and sporting his hard on.

Steve watched Bucky with interest, eyes focused on Bucky's hard cock. He gave him a coy smile as he slipped his pants down, giving Bucky a bit of a strip tease. "How do I look, Baby?"

" Fucking beautiful as ever," Bucky replied confidently as he watched Steve toss his pants across the room. He went for Steve's arms first and tied them to the headboards, looking at Steve occasionally to check that he was still okay with this. Once the arm ties were on, Bucky had a shy look come over him. "Do you think, if your back isn't hurting, I could tie your legs up on the headboard too? So you're stretched to show your ass off to me?"
Steve was already flustered when Bucky tied his hands to the headboard. He gave a few tugs and made a soft sound when he realized he really couldn't touch Bucky until he was let free. He blushed even deeper at Bucky's request. "Go ahead," he said. "I want to give myself up to you."

"Steve, I only want to do it if you want to," Bucky said and started touching gently along Steve's thighs. "I'll let me get better access to you and get deeper inside you but if you'd rather be flat tied we can do that."

"Bucky, you can't tell me you can fuck me deeper like that and expect me to not say yes," Steve laughed. "Come on, let me see how good it'll be."

"Okay." Bucky licked his lips and pushed softly so he could get Steve's legs up and close to his head. Bucky tied them up next to his hands so he could still see Steve's face but also be able to get to his hole so much better than usual.

Steve's face heated up once he was securely tied against the headboard. This was definitely not vanilla Catholic sex this time. "How do I look?" Steve asked shyly, glanced over at Bucky.

Bucky parted his lips to speak but his mouth had gone dry and his throat seemed to be closing up. He looked Steve up and down and placed his pointer finger on top of Steve's taught hole waiting for him. "Ah, fuck me..." Bucky breathed out and licked his finger generously before sticking it slowly and purposefully inside Steve.

Steve let out a little moan at the first finger. "Good already, huh?" he asked. Bucky sounded like he was enjoying himself even with just this. "I wish I could touch you, though."

"Do you want me to let just your arms go? You'll sort of be able to touch me. But you have to promise not to touch your cock," Bucky said and massaged his finger in and out of Steve's ass.

"No, I want to try this first," Steve said. "Let me have another finger." He hummed softly. "I don't want you to be too gentle tonight, Baby. Not too rough. But I can handle more now, Buck."

Without warning, Bucky pushed in a second finger and let it stay there for a bit waiting for Steve to get used to it. "Keep telling me what you want me to do to you while you're like this," he demanded and grabbed the lube from the nightstand. Bucky poured some over Steve's ass and started pumping his two fingers into him and scissoring them around.
Steve arched his back off the bed and let out a low, keening sound as Bucky worked him open.
"Fuck yeah," he breathed out. "So good for me, Bucky. Want your dick in me. God, I can't wait for your come to be inside me."

Bucky was getting more and more impatient as Steve talked. He spent a few minutes tonguing Steve’s hole and getting it nice and wet with spit and lube. "Can you take me now, Baby, or do you need more time?"

Steve was hard and leaking on his stomach. "I want you now, Bucky. I can take it," he insisted. "I want that thick, heavy cock spreading me open." Steve was being freer with his words in a way that surprised even him.

"God, Steve!" Bucky gasped and lurched forward to kiss him. "I love it when you let loose like this. You're so perfect for me." He kissed him one more time before adjusting so his dick was resting on Steve's ass. Bucky lubed himself up and push his cockhead past the ring of muscles.

Steve smiled happily into the kiss and let out a moan as Bucky entered him. "Fuck yeah," he breathed out. The friction was maddening and Bucky didn't prep him for as long as usual, but Steve loved how it felt. His hands tugged reflexively on the velvet loops.

Bucky cautiously pushed all the way inside so his balls were squished up against Steve. "How's that feel, Babe? Not too deep? Do you hurt?" He checked and slowly dragged his cock back out all the way before pushing in slowly again. He could keep this calculated purposeful pace up all night if Steve wanted.

Steve turned his head to the inside of his arm to stifle the loud moan that escaped him. "Fuck, Bucky, that feels so good." His toes curled and he let his head fall back into the pillows. "Keep going, Baby."

Bucky kept doing the gradual in and out pushes for a long while until Steve looked to be just about losing his mind from Bucky going so slow. He sped up and slammed into Steve repeatedly, keeping a firm grip on Steve’s hips so he really couldn't move anywhere.

Steve closed his eyes enjoying the slow fuck that turned into a rough pace. It wasn't long before Steve was asking for more, writhing under Bucky and making desperate noises. When Bucky started to really fuck him, he let out a soft shout and arched his back. "I'm so close, Buck."
"No, no, no, Baby," Bucky voiced quickly. "Wait it out. Not yet." He clamped a firm hand around the base of Steve's dick and held tight enough that it might help keep him from orgasming too soon. "Give it a few more minutes, Steve, I'll teach you to last."

Steve let out a sound that was a cross between a whine and a groan. He wanted to come so badly and he was aching for release. He bit the inside of his cheek, eyes focused on Bucky with a determined intensity to last.

For all his talk, Bucky wasn't going to last either. His movements were becoming more erratic and jolting and he was sweating a bit with the brutal pace his hips were trying to keep up with. He would be surprised if he wasn't sore tomorrow just from being clenched to keep as steady as possible. He let go of Steve's dick and gave him a wordless nod to go ahead and come when he needed to.

The mattress creaked under the pressure from Bucky's thrusts and Steve's ass clenched down tight on Bucky's dick as he did his best to wait it out. The second he got the approval, however, Steve shot off like a damn rocket. "Fuuuuck! Oh my god, Bucky," he cried out.

Bucky had to cover Steve's mouth out of worry that he would be too loud and wake up the girls. He rode out Steve's orgasm like that and kept thrusting inside him until he felt his own rippling through his body. He didn't get much warning before he was shooting deep inside Steve and could feel the gush of it around him.

Steve was grateful that Bucky covered his mouth because it would've been embarrassing to have woken the girls up by being too damn loud. He looked up at Bucky with a thoroughly fucked out expression when he was done. Some come dribbled out of Steve's hole around Bucky's dick. "That was so good."

Bucky panted and slipped out of Steve. He moved down so he could lick his come up as it made its way out of Steve's hole. He got what was there and then untied Steve's limbs so he could wrap himself up in his fiancé's arms nice and close.

Steve turned his head so he could watch Bucky as best he could as he licked up his come. The moment his hands were freed, Steve wrapped his arms around Bucky and hugged him tight. "Love you so damn much, Bucky Barnes."

"I love you, Steve Rogers," Bucky responded and nuzzled his head underneath Steve's chin. His body was damp with sweat and Steve's come that was squishing between them. "I love you and I love that you love me and that you want to be with me forever. And I love that you love my sisters and you take care of all of us."

---

Steve stroked Bucky's hair gently and kissed the top of his head over and over. "We take care of each other now. We're a team and we're going to be the best team there ever was." He closed his eyes and let out a happy sigh. "You've made my Christmas special."

---

Bucky laughed. "I gave you an up and down, whirlwind, roller coaster Christmas. Which is all you'll be getting from here on out in the Barnes family." He breathed in Steve's scent and stretched his leg out from under him. "You want me to get us a towel to clean up real quick and then go to bed?"

---

Steve kissed Bucky a few times and then said, "Let's clean up and get to bed. I want to fall asleep in your arms. Tomorrow is a new day and I can't wait to wake up on our first day as an engaged couple."
Chapter Summary

This chapter finds them a little after Christmas.

Chapter Notes

Beginning of Season Two

Lilly was passed out asleep in her room with the cat - she had had a long day. After Becca got Lilly all settled in bed, she curled herself up on the couch with one of her new books to read. Bucky was still at work for another few hours and Steve had spent most of the day cleaning up the apartment and re-alphabetizing Bucky's record collection by artist then album.

---

Steve had given Becca her space after Christmas but now with their wedding coming up, he was desperate to make sure that she wasn’t terribly upset with him again. After he tidied the place up, he took a seat next to her. "How are you liking the book?" he asked.

---

Without looking up she said, "Did you know that a black woman was a key component in getting John Glenn into space? I'm learning about what she and the space team did to get him ready for post-atmospheric flight. I'd like to go into space one day if I can."

---

"No, I didn't know that," Steve said pleasantly. "So did your brother and I upset you so much that you want to go into outer space?" he tried to joke lightly.

---

"That's not funny," Becca quipped and flipped to the next page in the book. "Besides, I don't try running away like Lilly does. Although, one time I did take a day trip to Coney Island by myself while Bucky was at work and Lilly was at practice. But that doesn't count."

---

Steve sighed. "I know. I'm just trying to make you feel better," he said. "You know, I was thinking maybe you can spend some weekends at my mom's if you want. That way you can have some time alone."

---

"Hah!" She let out a strained short laugh, "Bucky just wants me out of the apartment sometimes so he can drink or do whatever and I won't be around. I don't think so, Steve."

---

"This wasn't Bucky's idea. It was mine," he said. "Because as much as your brother wants to be good, he probably will drink for a little while. And I want you to not have to worry or feel like you're responsible for him."

---

Becca shut her book and folded her arms against her chest. "I am responsible for him. And I have been since far before you came around. I was ten when he tried to kill himself. Lilly was only eight.
And she's the one who found him like that. I've been responsible for Bucky since then."

---

Steve got a sad look on his face when she brought up the attempted suicide. "Becs, you shouldn't have to be responsible, as a kid, for your adult brother. I'm here for you - all of you. You deserve to get to be a kid."

---

"That's nice, Steve, but I stopped being a kid when my parents died." She opened her book back up again and flipped to the page she was on, seeming to be ignoring Steve before adding, "But if your mom wants me over some weekends, I don't mind doing that."

---

"You didn't have to stop being a kid," Steve said. "You know I'm doing my best for you guys, right?
And I'm doing my best to get Bucky clean, too."

---

"I know," she confessed with a quick glance at Steve. "What I'm saying is that your best and my best might not be enough to get Bucky to stay sober. And, I mean, first, he's got to admit to himself that he actually has a problem. I know he fights anyone who suggests he might be a bit of an alcoholic."

---

"I told him he's an alcoholic. And he seemed to listen, even if he didn't admit it," Steve said. "It's going to be hard for him to give up. And he may never fully be able to," he murmured. "But he needs our unconditional love and support, Becca. If he's going to have any chance at this, he can't be afraid of you if he fails."

---

"Why would he be afraid of me?" She asked defensively. "If he doesn't know I'm disappointed then it'll never make an impact to get him to stop. We can't just give him a hug and a free pass every time he drinks cause then he will think it's okay again."

---

"He knows you're disappointed in him. You don't have to remind him," Steve said. "He won't visit your parents even when your dad forgave him for dumb stuff he's done just because he thinks they'd be disappointed in him too." Steve sighed. "Listen, as an officer, I've dealt with people a lot worse off than Bucky. And the thing I always hear from addicts is that they would've been better if they had support from their family."

---

Becca shook her head and said, "He has my support. He just needs to decide that he's going to do this and stick with it and not sneak around behind my back to drink. When he decides that he is doing this for all of us, he has my support. But I won't be cleaning up after him anymore on the days that he fucks up. That's on him."

---

"That's not unconditional support," Steve said sternly. "And that does nothing to help him, Becca. You don't have to approve of him messing up to support him through it." He sighed. "Maybe when someone falls in love with you and helps you through a mess you made yourself, you'll understand what I mean."

---

"Maybe your love blinds you to what he does," Becca snapped back. She sighed and softened then. "If you're giving him time and grace and unconditional support then you have to give me the same. That means if I do snap at him from time to time you need to just gently remind me what we are trying to do. I need time and proof before I'll believe that Bucky really will change."

---

"Becca, of course, I would do the same for you," he said. "I love you and I will always be there for you no matter what." He knew he wasn't her parent or even as much of a brother as Bucky was, but she was family to him. "Thank you for being honest with me. I really do appreciate you talking to me about this."

---

"Whatever, Steve." She sighed and got up from the couch. "I'm going to go read in my room in peace."

A little while longer, Bucky came back from work and happily trotted into the apartment holding out three VHS tapes. "I bought Star Wars!" He exclaimed and thrust them out to Steve. "I know what we are doing tonight."

---

When Bucky came back, Steve smiled brightly over at him and said, "That's great. I was planning on going out for a run, I'm sure you'll have fun with the girls."

---

"No, Star Wars together, as a family, Steve," Bucky insisted and moved to trap Steve as best as he could. "You can run in the morning. Star Wars tonight." He kissed him a few times and impatiently nuzzled his chin.

---

Steve smiled dumbly at the kisses and wrapped his arms around Bucky tightly. "Alright, alright, you win," he gave in right away. "But I want to have some alone time first. Just a few minutes."
"Okay, alone time then Star Wars," Bucky conceded and plopped the tapes on the coffee table. "Are the girls home? They haven't come say hello. I haven't seen them since they went to sleep last night."

Steve nodded. "Lilly is napping, I think. And Becca is reading a book in her room." He kissed Bucky's cheek. "I had a chat with her. I'm trying to get her to be nicer to you and I think she's going to try."

"Okay, well we will see," Bucky scoffed and slipped his hand with Steve's to pull him into their room. Bucky started taking off his clothes that he wore to work until he was down to his underwear and socks. "I need to shower before we watch movies."

"I mean it," Steve said softly as he watched Bucky undress. "I really think that things are going to get better." Steve touched along Bucky's back. "Can I join you in the shower, Baby?"

"Of course, you can." Bucky smiled and dropped his boxer briefs. "I'll get it warmed up." He went to the bathroom and turned the shower on waiting for Steve. Bucky knew Steve wanted to have a serious talk and he was going to do his best to distract him from it as long as he possibly could.

Steve knew that Bucky would try and avoid having this conversation. He didn't want to ruin a good night but he had to be a responsible adult too. So he would give into him just a little bit but he wouldn’t let Bucky get the best of him with this. Steve came up behind Bucky and ran a hand over his back. "Did you have a good day at work?"

Bucky turned and hugged a now naked Steve to him. "Yeah, it was okay. Clint was sick so I had to pretty much take care of everything. But Reggie did help with some asshole customers that I couldn't handle on my own so that was at least nice of him. How was your day?"

Steve liked to hear that Bucky didn't have too hard of a time at work. "It was good. I went down to the precinct to start setting myself back up again and to say hello while the girls were at school. I'm going to miss being around for them all the time."

Bucky hopped into the shower and ran his fingers through his hair. "You'll still be around for them, Baby. Just not all day like you have been. Don't you think it'll be nice to get back to work a bit? I know you miss it. Was Natasha there today?"

"I miss having a bit of action and surprise in my life. There's only so many things I can craft to brighten this place up," Steve admitted. "And, yeah, Natasha was there. She says hello, by the way, and claims she's going to beat you up for not inviting her to the wedding."

"Why was it my job to invite her? If anyone should be beaten up, it's you." Bucky rubbed the soap up and down his body and cramped next to Steve as he tried to get his back washed. The shower really was too small for two grown ass men to share.

Steve took the soap and started to wash Bucky's back for him. "I don’t know. I think she's just looking for an excuse to beat you up," he answered pleasantly. "So have you picked out my ring yet? I can't wait to see it."

"I might have gone when you were sleeping in the other morning." Bucky leaned forward to let Steve wash his back. "I might have it hidden somewhere in the apartment. And I might be waiting to give it to you until we can have another quiet night alone when I'm not rushed to get to work in the morning."

Steve gasped excitedly and grinned. "Aw, but, Buck, I want to see it," he complained. Steve kissed along Bucky's neck and nibbled affectionately at his ear. "Come on, let me see. We have the whole night in and I can play with it while we watch Star Wars."

"Tough fucking luck, Rogers," Bucky said and turned to kiss Steve. "I'll decide when you get it. Might be tonight, it might not be. We will see if I think you deserve it. Also, you best pay attention to Star Wars and not be distracted by anything else."

Steve chuckled at Bucky's stubbornness and he gave him a kiss on the shoulder. "Next time I get you a present, I'm going to tease you forever over it before giving it to you," he said in an empty threat.

Bucky took longer than usual to get cleaned up and after he was out of the shower he wrapped up in a towel and curled up in bed. "I could fall asleep like this," he said as Steve was toweling himself dry and giving Bucky soft but knowing looks.

"I know you could. But somebody wants to watch movies," Steve said as he laid down next to him. He kissed Bucky's face a few times and sighed happily. "I love you, Bucky."

"I love you too, Steve," Bucky said and kissed Steve on the lips for a long moment. "Guess I should probably get dressed." He got up and dried himself off, stretching out a little bit as he went. He then pulled on a pair of dark grey sweatpants and a loose navy tee - completely forgoing any underwear.
Steve watched Bucky with interest as he dressed and smiled. "Pick out what I should wear for the rest of the night," he suggested lightly. Steve propped his head up on his hand. "May I suggest, though, that I'd look good if I wore a ring."

Bucky nodded and pulled one of his own sweaters from his stash. It was purple and grey and would be very tight on Steve. He also tossed Steve his other pair of sweatpants, which were black and fuzzy on the inside. "You'll get your ring when I say so," he added as he tossed the clothes to him.

Steve pulled on the clothes, happy that Bucky picked the more comfortable sweats for him. "What if I tickle you into giving up where the ring is?"

"That's cheating and you know it," Bucky said but went to rummage around in the closet anyway. "Sit on the bed, close your eyes, and be fucking patient."

Steve gasped excitedly when Bucky told him to close his eyes. He did as he was told and squirmed in his spot, anxious and happy. He hoped this wasn't a trick and Bucky was going to give him something else. But that didn't really seem like Bucky.

It took Bucky a minute to get the small box from where he had it hidden but soon he was down on one knee in front of Steve with it in his outstretched hands. "Okay, Punk, open your eyes."

When he was allowed to open his eyes, Steve had the happiest smile on his face. He rushed forward and kissed Bucky deeply as he took the box gingerly from his hands so he could open it.

Bucky couldn't help biting his lip in nervous anticipation while Steve took the box from him and opened it up. He wasn't sure if Steve would like it or not. He had Lilly tell him what sort of rings Steve had liked best while they were shopping and he also consulted Steve’s mother, but Bucky still wasn't sure if this was quite the best one for him. "Do you like it, Baby?" He asked quietly and stared up at Steve.

Steve felt tears welling up in his eyes when he saw the ring. It was perfect - a silver claddagh just like his mom's, except hers was gold. Steve liked that his ring matched Bucky's in color. He put it on and pulled Bucky into a tight hug. "You're so good to me, Baby."

Bucky hugged Steve and inhaled his scent. "I was lucky to find that one. Apparently, they just had a couple shipped in from Ireland. I got the last one available. I didn't know if it'd be good enough for you but I hoped..." He nuzzled Steve's neck and kissed it. "I hoped you'd like it."

---

"Buck, it’s better than I could have dreamed of," Steve said in a love-struck tone. He smiled over and then looked at how perfectly it fit on his hand. "I must have done something right to deserve a wonderful husband like you."

---

"Don't know about all that," Bucky said and hopped up on the bed next to Steve. "But I'm glad you chose me. Wouldn't dream of being with anyone else. I love you so much." He moved to straddle Steve and kissed up his neck and face. "Are you happy now? Won't tickle me?"

---

Steve wrapped his arms around the small of Bucky's back and smiled up at him. "No tickling. I promise." He slid a hand up Bucky's shirt and he leaned up to kiss him again. "We should probably get the girls. Tread lightly with Becca. I interrupted her reading already and she may still be a bit cross with me."

---

"Isn't she always?" Bucky asked. He got up to get a jacket to pull on and caught sight of his dad's old navy uniform tucked in the back. He ran a hand down it carefully and wished his father could be there to meet Steve and go to Seneca with them sometime and attend their wedding. He knew his dad would have loved Steve so much. Bucky pulled his jacket on and readjusted the navy uniform one more time before closing his closet and heading out the door with Steve.

---

Steve noticed Bucky touching the uniform. Bucky never showed it to him before but he also never saw Bucky wear it, so he suspected it once belonged to his father. Steve knocked on the girls' door before opening it. "Hey, we've got Star Wars. You guys want to join?"

---

Becca put down her book and her eyes got wide. "You bought the tapes?" She asked excitedly. She slipped quietly into Lilly's room and roused her from her nap, enticing her with Star Wars. Once the first movie was set up, they all settled on the couch with Steve between Bucky and Becca as a buffer and Lilly curled up in Bucky's lap. Steve was messing with his ring again and Bucky clamped his hand over it so Steve would pay attention as the movie started.

---

Steve regretted not seeing it sooner. By the end of the first movie, he was on the edge of his seat and his mouth hung open. The best part about it was how much he thought the main character looked like Bucky. Sure, Luke was a little scrawnier and had lighter hair, but there was still a striking resemblance. Steve also loved the blush of denial on Bucky’s face when he told him this. But he could tell Bucky loved the compliment and being compared to one of his all-time favorite protagonists. "Christ, how did I never see this before?" Steve asked dramatically, throwing his arms out to gesture widely at the TV. "I'm calling my mom."
"You're going to call your mom to tell her about Star Wars?" Bucky said and Lilly giggled sleepily. "By all means, Steve, go ahead if you like. You've still got two whole movies to go through." He gave Lilly a squeezing hug. "But they can wait for another day cause my little monster is too tired and has a special school day tomorrow because she has to retake a history test before classes start up again," he said.

---

Steve paused then realized the hour and decided he should probably wait until tomorrow to watch the next one. "Can't Lilly skip tomorrow so we can watch the rest?" Steve joked.

---

"No," Becca said. "She has a test in math tomorrow as well. She forgot to tell Bucky she failed that one."

Bucky looked from Becca to Lilly. He thought for a moment. "Why didn't I know about this test? Did you study for it?"

---

"Becca!" Lilly scolded, angry that she ratted her out. She hadn't studied at all and now Bucky was going to get angry with her. "I'll be fine," she insisted. "I did extra credit homework the other day, so if I get a bad grade it'll be not so bad."

---

"What grade did you get on the extra credit?" Bucky asked in concern. "Because one or two points aren't going to save your grades in class." Bucky looked to Steve and gestured in a way that said 'help me out here'.

---

"I got… a grade," Lilly said vaguely. Becca huffed and got up to go to bed because she didn't want to be annoyed more by Lilly's lack of diligence about school.

Steve rubbed the side of his face and said, "Lilly, we are studying right now. I need you to grab your review sheet."

---

Lilly protested for a few seconds before slipping off of Bucky's lap and going to get her math things. Bucky rested against Steve for a second. "What are we going to do with her? She just won't stay focused on school." He felt responsible for Lilly's lack of academic prowess. Maybe if he had been more proactive about her getting her work done well, then she would be better off. He was at least grateful that now Steve was once again distracted by something so he wouldn't have a chat with Bucky. Bucky knew they had one coming and he was going to put it off for a long time if he could.

---

"We could get her a tutor," Steve said. "Maybe if she has someone personalize her education, she will be able to focus more." He kissed Bucky's cheek and got up so he could go with Lilly to the kitchen. He stayed up for an hour helping her through her homework and explaining everything patiently to her even though it was getting pretty late. He sent her off to bed with the sheet mostly done. He could quiz her on the walk to school.
Bucky waited on the couch while Steve helped Lilly. He was shit with math and wouldn't be able to help at all so he just curled up under a blanket and listened to his fiancé helping his little sister with her homework. After a while, he started to drift off to sleep and was jolted from the beginning of a dream by Steve’s gentle voice by his ear telling him it was time for bed.

Steve carried Bucky off to their bedroom. He laid him down on the bed gently and curled up next to him. "I think Lilly is annoyed that I made her spend so much time on homework."

Bucky wrapped himself around Steve and sighed. "She will get over it. Don't worry." He reached for Steve's hand and clasped it tightly, feeling the ring there on his finger. He couldn't wait for Steve's mom to see it. He hoped that she would like it. "Natasha can come to our ceremony if she wants to," Bucky murmured.

Steve gave Bucky a happy smile at the suggestion. "Are you sure, Baby? I know it's an important day for you, too, and I don't want you to feel obligated to have people come for my sake."

"Natasha, your mother, Becca, and Lilly - that's it," he said. “And Clint,” he added as an after thought. "But only if that's okay with you, too." Bucky pressed slow, kind kisses to wherever he could reach on Steve. He was too tired to have sex but he was never too tired to praise Steve's body a little bit with kisses and touches.

"Clint is welcome. I trust him," Steve said. "And he's your best friend." He hummed happily at the kisses and he responded by touching up Bucky's back and playing with his hair. "You're beautiful, you know that?"

Bucky came up for air to say, "You've told me," before ducking back down to where he was sucking a hickey on Steve's collarbone. He had worked his purple sweater up Steve's torso so it was bunched at his neck and Bucky had his head inside so he could access Steve's skin.

Steve couldn't help the laugh that escaped him when Bucky stuck his head up his sweater. "I know you're trying to avoid talking to me," he said calmly as he massaged the back of Bucky's neck and waited a few seconds before saying what he really wanted to say, "I’d like to go into our marriage without any secrets."

Bucky stopped and bit Steve lightly before pulling back. "You just want to talk about how I should stop drinking and I don't want to have that conversation for the millionth time." He sat up in bed and pulled an extra blanket around his shoulders.
"I actually don't," Steve said. "Not right now, at least." Steve reached up to play with Bucky's hair. "I was actually going to talk about you and your parents," he said softly.

Bucky readjusted so he could stretch out his legs on the bed. "Okay." He nodded. "What about them?" He wasn't sure where Steve was going with it but he wasn't really in the mood to get talking about his parents just to get horribly upset and have a headache.

"You don't visit them at all," Steve started. He reached out so he could lace his fingers with Bucky's. "How come, Baby?" Becca had already said what she believed, but he wanted to talk to Bucky about it.

Bucky shrugged and looked away from Steve. "Don't know," he mumbled and scratched a hand through his hair. But Bucky knew exactly why he was too nervous to go down there but it embarrassed him to admit and he didn't want Steve to think he was a terrible son for being afraid.

"Sweetheart," Steve said gently. "You know I love you and I won't judge you. It's against my religion for me to judge," he joked softly. "You can tell me."

Bucky curled the blanket around him tighter and pulled his legs in against his chest. He sighed and glanced at Steve. "They'd be so angry and disappointed in me if they'd been able to see how I acted after they died. They'd know what a terrible brother I was and how much I went off the rails instead of being here for the girls."

Steve didn't want to stifle Bucky, so he kept a little distance as he continued to pet Bucky's hair. "You've been there for them, Buck. You dropped your dreams so you could keep them together," Steve said. "I know you messed up and Becca had to step up where you lacked. But you're not a terrible brother. Not in the slightest."

Bucky scoffed and pulled away slightly. "I self-destructed, Steve. Becca - who should have been able to grieve and be a kid - had to clean me up when I came home drunk and covered in blood from a bar fight. My sick grandmother had to go to parent-teacher meetings at school because I was downtown somewhere shacked up for the day with some guy. And Lilly -" Bucky stopped abruptly. He knew he needed to tell Steve about that night when Lilly found him but he hated himself so much when he thought about it.

Steve pet a hand up and down Bucky's arm in encouragement. "You were so young still when they died and had so much responsibility thrown upon you. Nobody would handle that well, Buck. You did your best and you kept them together. You cleaned up and you're so much better for it." He sighed. "I think the only person around here who isn't ready to forgive you is yourself."

---

"I don't know if I should be forgiven for that shit, Steve," Bucky said and reached for his fiancé's hand. "I fucked up so bad and if my parents knew..." He shook his head. "You don't even know the worst of it. And if they knew, they'd chew me out for being so irresponsible."

---

Steve immediately brought Bucky's hand to his lips so he could give it a kiss. "Your dad forgave you when he found you doing hard drugs and he rewarded you when you cleaned up. Why wouldn't he do the same now?" he asked. "No matter what happened, Baby, I'll always love you."

---

Bucky stared at Steve for a hard minute, taking in his determined and aware eyes. Steve wasn't confused or curious. He fucking knew. Goddamn it, he knew what happened. "Fuck." Bucky let out a humorless laugh. "Becca told you, didn't she? When? Christmas?"

---

Steve had a guilty look on his face. "Don't get mad at her," he murmured. "She only said it cause she was worried about you." And Lilly told him even earlier than when Becca brought it up but she made Steve promise not to tell.

---

Bucky clenched his jaw and nodded slowly, not looking at Steve. He didn't know what to say. He figured Steve was probably upset with him about it. Hell, Bucky always felt like shit when he thought about it. He never really sought helped after that. He couldn't afford a therapist or anything.

---

Steve was quiet and gave Bucky an opportunity to speak first. But when he didn't say anything, Steve spoke instead. "I was angry at first," he admitted. "But then all I felt was sadness that I couldn't be there for you and the girls back then." He watched Bucky closely. "I just hope you never feel that drowned again."

---

"Of course you're angry." Bucky breathed a hefty sigh. "I almost abandoned them." He paused and picked at a fuzzy on his sweatpants. "I assume they told you that Lilly had to find me passed out in the bathroom. She was only eight. Eight years old, parents dead, sick grandmother, and a suicidal guardian near dead in the apartment."

---

"I'm not angry anymore, Buck. That feeling passed." Steve cupped the side of Bucky's face and stroked his thumb over his jaw. "It's in the past. And we have to leave it there. Have you ever spoken to Lilly about it?"
"Yeah," Bucky said and sniffled. "They wouldn't tell me what happened for about a year afterwards. But when they finally did... I almost considered giving up custody of them because I'd fucked up so bad already and they deserved better – they deserve better." Bucky sank back down into the bed and rolled to face Steve. "Apparently, Lilly's bad nightmares started getting a lot worse about right after that night. Seeing me like that traumatized her."

---

Steve leaned in to kiss Bucky’s cheek before pulling him in for a tight hug. "Do you think a therapist would help for any of you?" Steve asked. "We can afford it now. I'll be going back to my regular work pay."

---

Bucky laughed. "What's a therapist going to do at this point? We've all survived through much worse in the past few years. I think we're set." He chewed his lip and mumbled, "Nothing shakes a Barnes, apparently."

---

"A therapist could help. Because Lilly still tries to run away and has nightmares, you still don't visit your parents' graves, and Becca can't let herself be a kid," Steve answered.

---

Bucky thought for a minute. "I'll have to go visit them since you told them I have to tell them something big." He ignored the rest of what Steve said, too worried about the whole thing to think about it.

---

"I'm glad you're going to see them," Steve murmured. "I think they'd be proud that you managed to get yourself together and keep your family under one roof."

---

"Maybe," Bucky conceded and rested a hand on Steve's chest. "Becca believes that they can hear us when we talk to them at their graves. I'm not sure that's really true but it makes her and Lilly feel better at least."

---

"I think she's right. I spoke to them a lot when I visited. Told them a lot of good stuff about you and how well the girls were doing," Steve said. "I think they'd be happy you came."

---

"I think they are probably confused since I never told them I was gay while they were alive. They probably got a bit of an afterlife shock when you showed up." Bucky chuckled. "I know for a fact they wouldn't mind, though."

---

"Well, at least you don't have to worry about answering a bunch of silly questions for it. Sometimes my mom asks things and I know she means well, but it's..." Steve trailed off and laughed a little.
Bucky smiled and nudged Steve. "What's she ask? Please tell me she didn't ask you if you were top or bottom. I'd be mortified if my parents asked me that." He imagined how that conversation would go, 'Actually, Mom, Dad, I give and receive - if you know what I mean.'

Steve groaned and hid his face in the pillow. "She did. She asked how sex worked. Do you realize how awkward it is to explain how gay sex works to your Catholic mom?" He made a pathetic sound. "She also gave me an AIDS pamphlet from her old hospital and asked me to get tested."

"Okay but she's a nurse. How could she not know how gay sex worked?" Bucky laughed. "But, I have heard that AIDS is becoming a big problem. They don't know how to cure it either. Pretty scary shit."

"She worked in the ER. She was more used to car accidents than guys fucking each other into an injury," Steve said. That was quite an image. He wouldn’t really put it past him and Bucky to have a serious injury from sex.

Bucky curled up close to Steve and kissed his nose. "What else did she ask about?" He almost wished he did get to have a chat like that with his parents. He felt like he was missing out on something just a little bit.

Steve sighed. "She asked if I ever tried being intimate with a woman first. And she asked if it's just you or if I liked other guys that she didn't know about." He basically expected that question from his mother but it still hurt a bit.

"What'd you tell her?" Bucky asked and slipped an arm around Steve. "Because, I know you made out with guys before, but did she like ask if you wanted to try a woman just in case?" He looked down. "I know your mom would probably rather see you with a woman."

"Well, I told her I'd liked other guys but you are my first true love," Steve said. "It's not that she would rather see me with a woman. It's just that after I got shot, she's afraid of what other people may do to us."

Bucky held Steve's gaze. "Does she want you to leave me?" He asked tentatively. "Since you got hurt because of me, and I'm not religious, and I swear and drink, and I'm a man, and sort of a hippie, and not really what a good Catholic nurse wants for her son."
Steve looked away for a moment with a frown. "She loves you and the girls. And she knows you make me happy," he said. He didn't want to say it, but he had to be honest with Bucky. "But the drinking is a problem for her, even if she won't say it. My dad was an alcoholic and it wore her down over the years."

---

"I don't drink as much as I used to. You know I did," Bucky said urgently and rested his head on Steve's chest. "Christmas was just a disaster and I'm so sorry your mom was there to see it. I wasn't even drunk, though. I had a couple beers while you guys were gone and then about two shots of whiskey in my drink. I wasn't getting drunk. I was just having a little bit."

---

"I know you cut back, Buck. But you still have a drinking problem even if you weren't trying to get drunk on Christmas," Steve said softly, not wanting to offend Bucky. "Christmas was a shock for her." He paused and thought for a second, "Things got bad for us, too, but… not in the same way they got bad for you."

---

"What do you mean they got bad for you?" Bucky whispered, automatically assuming he was talking about Bucky. "Did your mom get upset with you because of me? Did Becca explode on you two?" He figured Becca had some choice words about Bucky and being alone with Sarah probably lent itself to a lot of time to vent.

---

"What I mean is… We dealt with my dad dying and with poverty and a bunch of other stuff, but my mom is more... proper, I guess? And she had the church to help, so we still had some sort of support even when we went through tough times," Steve explained. "So when she saw how bad times were handled here, it was a shock for her that some families don't suffer as quietly as she did."

---

"We don't suffer quietly," Bucky agreed. "We act out and we drink and smash things and yell and try to overdose or run away or barricade the door to our rooms." He touched Steve's face. "Guess your mom isn't used to Barnes'."

---

"I know," Steve said fondly. "Thankfully, I'm the one marrying you. She will get used to it over time, I think. But she's being my mom and worrying for me right now."

---

"Can I ask what exactly she's worried about? Even though Becca thinks differently, I'm not going to try to kill myself again. And I'm not going to leave you. And I love you so much and that should be enough, right?" Bucky rambled. "I just want her to feel confident that you'll be safe here."

---

Steve sighed. "Outside of the-whole-world-being-homophbic thing," he started. "She's worried that things might get real bad for whatever reason and I'd be too committed to leave you even if it was hurting me to stay."
"That could be true of anyone you could be with." Bucky was confused. "She just doesn't have confidence in me anymore, does she?" He asked worriedly. "I fucked up once - once, Steve. I haven't hurt you or abused you or been mean to you - either sober or not. What does she think I'm going to do to you?" He was getting defensive now. He tried not to, since it was Steve's mom they were talking about, but Bucky usually couldn't help getting defensive about most things.

"Baby, she knows you love me. She knows you'd go through hell and back for me. She's allowed to be worried when she comes over for Christmas and has Becca talking about how much of an alcoholic you are and how you tried to kill yourself." Steve did his best to keep calm but he was always a little protective over his mom. "She doesn't know it's not as bad as it seems."

"I'm not an alcoholic," Bucky repeated for what felt like the thousandth time. "And why did Becca have to go telling your mom about me trying to kill myself? She had no right." Bucky was up off the bed now. Pacing his way towards his closet to get some clothes to go out in. He needed a walk around the block or something. What he needed was a couple of shots and a pint or two and then a nap. But there was no way Steve would let him have that.

"Bucky," Steve said in a tired tone as Bucky got out of bed and grabbed his jacket. "Come back to bed. It's late and you know how the streets can get at night," he said grumpily.

"I just want to go for a walk. I promise," Bucky said and shot Steve a look. "I need just a few minutes by myself." He would just walk down a few blocks to the park and then come back. He wouldn't cave and go to the bar. He'd just take a walk. So he left swiftly and headed down to the bodega. Bucky was only out for about an hour but when he got home, he was too tired and a little upset and wanted to be alone, so he crashed on the couch.

When Steve heard Bucky return and not come to bed, he felt a bit angry but let him have his space. Come the early morning, he woke up to start breakfast early for everyone and saw Bucky sleeping on the couch with bottles of Coca Cola on the table. He paused and then went to Becca's room to gently wake her up. "I want you to see something."

"It's early, Steve," Becca grumbled but followed him out to the living room anyway. Steve pointed at the sleeping Bucky and at the overabundance of Coca Cola bottles on the table. She picked one up and popped off the top. "Okay?" She nodded and headed back to her room to get dressed, taking the bottle with her to drink.

"Becs," Steve huffed out softly as she took the bottle and walked away. He followed her, stopping her before she walked into her room. "Bucky and I had a disagreement last night. He went out for a walk and came back with these. Not booze," he said quietly so Bucky wouldn't wake up. "He's trying. And he's getting better."

---

"He bought soda once." Becca tilted her head slightly. "One time after one disagreement. I'll feel better if he does it again," she said and slipped into her room.

Bucky tossed around on the couch a few times before rubbing at his face and sitting up. He noticed Steve and then noticed where he had fallen asleep and then noticed all the glass coke bottles. "I sort of forgot I bought those. Probably wasn't a great idea."

---

God, Becca could be brutal sometimes. It drove Steve up a wall but he couldn’t blame her for being defensive. He returned to Bucky and sat next to him so he could cuddle with his fiancé and feel better. "It wasn’t so bad of an idea. Becca already stole one to drink."

---

"Oh, good. Sugar for breakfast." Bucky chuckled. "Hey, tomorrow’s New Year's Eve, 1985." He smiled and kissed Steve. "Are we doing anything special or just having dinner the four of us and watching the celebration?"

---

Steve smiled over at him and said, "I was thinking about making a bunch of food and celebrating just the four of us. I will make loads of snacks. Maybe even have snacks for dinner."

---

"Okay, that sounds good to me." Bucky smiled and looked at the coke bottles again. "Oh," he remembered. "That’s why I bought the soda. I knew I wouldn’t be able to drink on New Year’s so I got those instead. Try to sort of trick myself." He wasn’t going to completely stop drinking. He was going to somehow convince Steve to let him have the occasional drink or night out. Just so long as Becca wasn’t around and Steve was there then he figured he could manage to get him to agree.

---

"Smart," Steve complimented, smiling proudly at him. He squeezed Bucky's hand and then stood up. "I'm going to start making breakfast and packing lunches. Any requests?" he asked.

---

"Here, I'll help you out." Bucky smiled and got up too and scratched at his stomach. "I should hide this soda before Lilly sees it and takes it all for herself." He laughed and rounded up the glass bottles into an extra record crate so he could put them away in the laundry room shelf, just a little bit proud of himself for the initiative to buy the sodas.
On New Year's Eve, Steve sent Bucky and the girls out to go do something while he got the house ready. When they returned, Steve had it decorated with streamers and the sort and cooked plenty of desserts and a cake that had '1985' written in frosting. He was pretty damn excited for tonight and had a few games for them to play as well.

---

Bucky walked into the mess of streamers and decorations and choked on a laugh. He was very soon going to be church married to the biggest goof ball he had ever known. "Stevie, this is so nice and festive!" He said and jumped Steve in a hug. "It's great. Thank you, Baby."

---

"It gets better - look!" Steve said as he showed off a bowl full of noisemakers and poppers for them to set off when midnight struck. He even had cheesy, plastic hats that had ‘1985’ written on it and he put one on each of their heads. "This is going to be the start to the best year ever," he said confidently.

---

"Alright there, Rogers." Bucky's eyes were wide and he could see Becca in the corner of his eye taking off the hat and gently setting it down on the table. "You get into this shit, don't you?" He asked and gave Lilly a look. Lilly was already reaching for a popper, deciding it was best to give it a try before midnight.

---

Steve nodded his head. "Come on, you can't expect me to not go all-out for the year that I'm marrying you," he stated. Raphael came walking up to Bucky and gave a big, pathetic meow because Steve clipped a bow tie to his collar to make him festive.

---

Bucky picked up the cat. "Oh my god. Can no one in this house leave Raph alone?" He asked and pet his head and gave him a little kiss. "You poor baby." He handed him off to Becca and reached for Steve. "I'm marrying you in three days. Just three more days and at least the church and your god will see us as husbands. Then we just wait for the rest of the law."

---

The cat mewed at Becca once he was passed off. Steve thought that he was being a little over dramatic about the whole thing. Steve smiled and wrapped his arms around Bucky tightly. "I can't wait," he said dreamily. "It's going to be the best day of my life."

---

"Best day of mine, too." Bucky smiled and kissed Steve for a long moment. "I love you so much." He caressed Steve's face carefully. "When are we having dinner? Do we have some time for..."
Bucky bit his lip and nodded towards their bedroom discreetly.

---

Steve laughed at the nod. "Lucky for you, dinner is cake, double chocolate chip cookies, and brownies and ice cream with this new brownie recipe I found," Steve said, very pleased with himself. "So we can relax for a bit." Steve was already dragging Bucky to their room.

---

"Fucking great." Bucky shook his head with a smile and let himself be led to their room. Once they were there, Bucky gently shoved Steve against the closed door and started kissing him quickly. He was pretty damn impatient because they hadn't done anything in two days. Bucky's fingers were already unzipping Steve's pants and their lips were locked together.

---

Steve was absolutely insufferable. He knew that Bucky would want to fuck on New Year's Eve so he even bought a pair of briefs that said '1985!' and was wearing them right now. He smirked against Bucky's lips and gave his hair a little tug while they kissed. "Someone's eager," he purred.

---

"I want to usher out 1984 by riding your cock," Bucky said like it was the obvious thing to do. He could have added a 'duh' for good measure. "Now let's have it." He smirked and knelt down to pull Steve's pants off the rest of the way. He noticed the new tight fitting bright blue briefs and he felt a raised design when he cupped Steve's ass. He pushed Steve to turn around and saw the colorful '1985!' plastered on his cheeks. He chuckled, "You're a punk, Steve."

---

Steve let out a loud laugh when he got Bucky to look at the text on his ass. "You like it? I bought it just to wear for you." He grabbed at Bucky's jeans and started to take them off. "I'll let you do the honors of removing them from me."

---

"I'm not sure I want to touch those ever again," Bucky grinned cheekily. "Maybe I'll just lay on the bed and finger myself open while you take them off and get yourself ready to fuck me." He stepped the rest of the way out of his pants and quickly disposed of his shirt and socks.

---

"But I love opening you up," Steve said in a pathetic tone. He usually was more reserved about what he wanted but when Steve liked doing something in bed, he was a bit of a stubborn ox about it. "Wouldn't you prefer to have me eat you out, anyway?"

---

"You drive a hard bargain, Steve," Bucky said and flopped on the bed with his legs spread wide for Steve and his hand tugging on his cock to wake it up. "I guess I'll let you do what you want with me. You're a little pushy in bed, though, I'll have you know."
Steve drank in the sight of his fiancé on the bed working his cock for him, beyond thankful for how lucky he was to have him. "Jesus, you look so good," he groaned. He got the lube out but didn't prepare Bucky yet. Instead, he took his time to kiss and suck marks on the insides of his thighs. "I'm not pushy," he argued lightly, unaware of how stubborn he could get.

"Yes, you are." Bucky laughed and rested his head back against the pillows. "You're demanding when things don't go the way you planned, you can't handle me trying to punish you by taking things away like being able to finger me open, and you won't let me do certain things like play with Phillip or watch any porn. Admit it, Baby, you're pushy, sexually."

"What? No..." Steve started to protest but then he realized that Bucky was right. "Oh my god, I'm the controlling boyfriend," he gasped. Steve got a look in his eye that seemed to tell that he was questioning whether he was giving Bucky a healthy relationship or not.

Bucky sat up and pulled Steve into his lap. "Yeah, you are," he said matter-of-factly - not meaning anything by it, just telling it like it was. He kissed Steve's lips and hoped that his erection against Steve's hip didn't bug him too much.

"I'm sorry, Baby," Steve said. "Do you want to finger yourself, then?" Bucky would be able to see the physical strain in Steve's face for not getting the opportunity to prep Bucky tonight, but he would get over it quickly enough. Steve wasn't a total control freak.

"No, Baby, it's fine." Bucky laughed and tackled Steve to the bed. "Just lighten up a little. Let things flow. You don't have to dictate every next move for us to have a really wonderful and beautiful time making love, okay?" He moved around so his ass was close to Steve's mouth and his mouth was close enough to Steve's cock. "Go ahead and eat me out if you want."

Steve looked worried until Bucky tackled him to the bed. He was fine after that. Next time, he would let Bucky lead more. Steve dove right into Bucky's ass, spreading his cheeks and laving his tongue over the hole so he could get Bucky's ass nice and wet.

Bucky gasped at the sudden feeling on his hole and he gripped Steve's thighs tight. He wanted to do his best to blow Steve while he was licking him open so he swallowed Steve's cock down his throat and started bobbing his head up and down.

"Bucky-" Steve gasped out. It was incredibly hot to have Bucky blowing him while he ate his ass out. He pushed his tongue past the ring of muscle and once he deemed Bucky ready, he added a finger as well.
Bucky did his best not to groan too loudly when Steve stuck a finger alongside his tongue. He was, thankfully, stifled by the dick in his mouth but he knew he was still too loud. He also didn't want Steve to come before he was inside Bucky's ass so he popped off of him and scooted back so Steve's face was closer to his hole.

Bucky's mouth felt amazing on his cock and as much as he loved it, Steve was thankful that Bucky pulled off so he wouldn't come too soon. After he started to open Bucky with two fingers, he couldn't take much more foreplay. "Where's the lube?" He could've sworn he had it but he could've lost it in the sheets.

"Fuck, I don't know," Bucky said and moved off Steve to look. It had somehow made its way off the bed and onto the ground. Bucky hastily picked it up and shoved it into Steve's hands. "Here, Baby, here," he said and knelt face down, ass up on the bed for Steve.

Steve grabbed the lube and put some on his fingers. He kissed Bucky's open hole before pushing his fingers inside. "You ready, Buck? You want me to fuck you like this?" He smoothed his other hand over Bucky's back.

"Fuck me however you want," Bucky whispered and moved his hips impatiently. "Let's give 1984 a good send off," he added and pulled his hair back into a bun on the top of his head. "Need you, Steve."

Steve nodded and turned Bucky over onto his back. He stroked some lube onto his dick, hooked his hands under Bucky's knees, and pushed them up towards his chest so Bucky was folded in half. He leaned down to kiss him deeply as he pushed himself inside of Bucky.

"I like seeing your face when you get inside me," Bucky whispered and reached a hand up to card through Steve's hair. Bucky had just now started growing his beard out and it was just a stubbly little mess at the moment. He wondered if Steve would consider growing out a beard so he could see him with it. He didn’t even know if the police station would let him have a full beard.

Bucky always felt so goddamn amazing around his cock. Steve couldn't help the sound that came out of him as he eased his dick in further and further until he was balls deep in his fiancé. "I like seeing your face when I make you come on my dick," Steve purred, sucking a mark on Bucky's shoulder as he started to ease in and out of him.

"I like that you get better and better at dirty talk every day." Bucky smiled and wrapped his legs around Steve so he was as close to him as possible. "I never get tired of you. I love every minute we get together. I hope you know that."

---

Steve started to move freely in and out of Bucky. The mattress creaked under his movements as he said, "I learned from the best, Baby." He nipped at Bucky's ear and grabbed at his hips for more leverage as he fucked Bucky deeper.

---

Bucky went quiet except for the sharp gasps he made every few seconds when Steve hit his prostate. He was slowly losing focus on anything around him and was just paying attention to the feeling of Steve inside him. He loved how his fiancé could make him completely forget himself and just... be.

---

Steve kept going and had Bucky writhing beneath him. "That's right, Baby," he breathed out. "You're so good. I'm so close. Buck, Baby, I'm gonna..." Steve claimed Bucky's mouth in a kiss as he came deep inside of him. Steve moaned low in his throat and slowly rocked his hips in and out a few more times before finally pulling out. Steve stuck a finger inside Bucky, swiped some come from his ass, and wiped it off on his chest.

---

Bucky flipped them both so he was sitting on Steve's chest so he could jack himself off over Steve's face. Once he came, he rolled off Steve again and let his head drop on his chest. "Happy New Years Eve, Baby." He smiled and licked Steve once playfully.

---

Steve closed his eyes and held on to Bucky. "Happy New Year's Eve," he said in a lovesick tone. "Tell me something fun we are going to do this year."

---

"Well, in case you forgot," Bucky started, "we are getting church married and going to Seneca Lake and having our first birthdays together as a couple and maybe going to Coney Island with the girls and definitely finishing Star Wars and having a lot more sex."

---

Steve smiled and pet a hand up and down Bucky's arm. "I didn't forget about those," he said pleasantly. "What about Becca and Lilly?" Steve asked. "I want to have a family vacation together. What would make them happy?"

---

Bucky scrunched his face up in thought. "No idea. They once entertained the idea of Disney World but we never could afford it and I honestly don't know if I could handle being in a place like that and not be worried about losing one of them."

---

Disney was a bit far. Six flags was in New Jersey, but that was... New Jersey. "What about Busch
"Gardens?" Steve asked. "It's in Virginia and there's plenty of rides in it. No Disney characters but they could have fun."

---

"I mean, maybe." Bucky shrugged. "I don't really know how we would be able to make that happen but we can discuss it sometime." He rolled off the bed and grabbed a towel to wipe himself and Steve off. After they were fairly clean, Bucky resigned to get his clothes back on.

---

When Bucky got up to put clothes on, Steve tugged him back down and wrapped his arms strongly around him eliciting a huff of laughter from Bucky. "We can save up," Steve said. "It'll be great, Baby. Wouldn't it be nice to see Becca being a kid? That's my goal for this year."

---

Bucky sighed. "I think Becca's past that now. She tries to act like she's thirty every day. I don't know if Busch Gardens would help that." He paused and thought. "Maybe we can see if my aunt and uncle would take the girls for a week in the summer. They haven't seen our cousins in four years."

---

Steve gasped. "That would be a great idea," he said. "But would you be able to handle them being away for a week so far away?" Steve asked. He played with Bucky's hair. "What about you going, too?"

---

"I can't go," Bucky said. "My aunt and uncle are too conservative. I can't stand it most times. And my cousins are too young for me to connect with but Lilly and Becca are around their ages. I don't know. It's just a thought."

---

"Oh," Steve said softly. "Alright." He laid his head on the pillow and looked over at Bucky. He took in the sight of him and how goddamn gorgeous he was. "You think you might go back to school?"

---

"Back to school?" Bucky scoffed. "Yeah, right, Steve. I wouldn't be able to afford it and I've still got to see the girls through school and I have a job to maintain and what would I even do with a degree now? No, there's no point." He ran his tongue distractedly over his lips in thought.

---

"You wouldn't have to go back full time," Steve said. "You can take a class or two here and there and it'll be cheaper," he suggested. "I'm not saying it'll be easy, but we have three incomes between the two of us. And you can try to be a music producer or something in the business like you said you wanted to do."

---

"Yeah, there's no way I'd be able to be a producer anymore." Bucky rubbed his face. "And I'm older now and wouldn't fit in with the kids in the classes anyway. I mean it's not likely that many of them have shared life experiences to me." He moved to get up again. "Let’s drop it for now and go check on the girls, okay?"

---

Steve wasn't going to argue with Bucky over it. He exhaled in resignation and nodded his head. "Sure thing," he agreed as he got up and dressed himself. He kissed Bucky's cheek before opening the door. "Love you."

---

As they walked to the living room, they overheard the girls talking. Becca said, "Yeah, so that's how men do it. You understand?"

"Yes," Lilly responded, "I get both of those ways now but I still don't understand how two women have sex."

---

Steve's brain went to a screeching halt when he heard what they were talking about. He couldn't even get embarrassed about them talking about how gay guys had sex - but Lilly was entirely too young to talk about sex, period. "Becca!" He scolded in a scandalized tone.

---

"What?" Becca sassed back and folded her arms. "She wanted to know." Lilly nodded and Becca turned her attention to Bucky. "She was going to have to learn eventually, right?"

Bucky shrugged and gestured loosely at them. "I mean, yeah. I think it's better you told her than her researching sex at the library like you did at her age."

---

Catholic-raised Steve was flabbergasted that nobody else was bothered that a girl who was barely a teenager was learning about different kinds of sex. "She's too young. You are too young," he said, directing the last part at Becca.

---

"Becca's fourteen," Bucky said and shrugged again. "Plus, she knew all about sex when she was eleven. She checked out anatomy books and asked librarians how things worked. Although, I'm not entirely sure where you got your information for gay or lesbian sex because I certainly don't think they have articles in the library about that."

---

"She's still too young. She shouldn't even be thinking about sex until she is older," Steve complained to Bucky. "Maybe if she wants to learn about herself and her own body, but certainly not sex with another person."

---

"I had sex at fifteen," Bucky stated before quickly adding, "I'm not saying that Becca should follow what I did by any means. But I think learning about it and teaching Lilly is fine. They both will have to know."
"They should learn from us, but not at such a young age. You shouldn't have been up to that at fifteen," Steve defended, not mad but still standing his ground.

"I'm sorry I didn't wait to be in love first like you did." Bucky was slightly mad, feeling like he was being chastised for his decisions on sex and how he raised his sisters for not minding that they were discussing this. "It's not like they are hyper-sheltered and I don't want them to be. Mom and Dad never raised any of us that way."

"I'm just saying that fifteen is too young for anyone," Steve said. "It's not being sheltered to not be concerned with something only adults should do." He crossed his arms with a pout. "I can't tell you how many kids I pick off the streets doing things they think they're ready for."

"Steve, it's not a big deal. They are smarter than most kids and me and won't do things they aren't ready for. They won't get peer-pressured like I did cause they are stronger than I ever was." Bucky scooted closer to his sisters protectively. He sort of felt like this was his and Steve's first parenting fight. The thing was, they were his sisters and not Steve's responsibility.

Steve could tell that he wasn't going to win this argument. And by the way Bucky stood protectively over his sisters, Steve knew that it would only get messier if he kept pushing his case. He sighed and shrugged. "Fine," he ground out unhappily.

"I-I'm sorry," Lilly stuttered out and looked between the two men. "I just wanted to know. And I much rather ask Becca about it then you guys. That'd be a really bizarre conversation."

Bucky ran a hand down her hair. "It's okay, Lil. You didn't do anything wrong by being curious. And you know I don't believe in keeping things like that a secret from you."

Steve took a seat on the couch so he wasn't so imposing. "You don't have to be sorry for asking," he agreed. It was Becca and Bucky he wasn't entirely happy with. He patted the spot next to him to get Raphael to come over.

Raphael jumped up on Steve and meowed to be pet. Bucky followed Becca's gaze as she looked to Steve then at Bucky and rolled her eyes discreetly. At least she was on Bucky's side sometimes. "Anyways..." Bucky sighed and pocketed his hands. "What do we want to do for New Year's first, huh?" He wanted to drop this whole thing. He and Steve would probably have to have a similar conversation down the road with their hypothetical child in mind anyway.
Steve readily gave the cat all the pets and scratches his little heart desired. He kissed the top of his fuzzy head and shrugged his shoulders. "I have a few board games. Or we could play poker. Or watch a movie," Steve suggested.

"Uh... the girls can pick I don't care one way or the other," Bucky said. "I'll be right back." He slipped off to the bathroom to get some medicine for the little headache he could already feel. He then went to the laundry room and grabbed several of the bottles of Coca Cola that he had stashed there the day before. He was so used to drinking after an argument and he was trying to retrain himself to be okay with soda instead of booze.

While Bucky was gone, Steve looked over at Becca and Lilly. "I'm sorry," he apologized. "I know you guys don't see things the same way, but I don't think that talking about sex at your age is appropriate," Steve murmured. "I don't think you can convince me otherwise, but obviously I can't stop you either."

"You were just raised different from us," Becca said. "I know our parents told Bucky a lot of stuff when he was young. They let us swear and let Bucky drink when he was fourteen." Becca caught the small squeak of a groan that came from Steve when she explained the beginning of Bucky’s drinking.

Bucky couldn't help that he double-checked his hiding places for any hidden bottles that Steve or Becca had missed. There weren't any and part of him was grateful that he didn't even have the temptation in front of him. He brought his bottles back out to the living room and handed one to each of them as he nodded to Steve in a way that said, 'Look, it's not alcohol. I'm trying.'

When Bucky returned, Steve pulled the man down to sit next to him and he gave him a firm kiss on the cheek. "Proud of you," he said softly. He looked back at the girls and asked, "What do you guys want to do?"

Bucky conformed to Steve and leaned against him so he was mostly in Steve's lap. He pecked Steve's lips and whispered, "Sorry, Baby," apologizing for the argument.

Lilly picked up Raphael from the couch and held him up to her face. "Raphael thinks board games are a good idea." She nodded at him and turned him to face Becca. "Unless Becca wants to watch a movie?"

Steve played with Bucky's hair and pouted when Lilly took the cat from him. "Board games it is! I have Monopoly or Life. Anything else and we will have to get creative."

"I hate Monopoly..." Bucky shook his head. "So I vote for Life or that train track game of Becca's or even Go Fish. Or you all can play Monopoly and I'll play Solitaire and avoid the Monopoly
"Go Fish," Becca said. She didn't want to play Monopoly after the last fight that broke out over the game. Lilly nearly lost a tooth. Steve nodded and disentangled himself from Bucky to get the deck of cards.

They played Go Fish mostly without incident for a while. Lilly spent most of the night eating cookies and cake and soda and Bucky tried not to think about how wrecked she was going to be after her sugar high wore off. When it was closer to midnight, they all gathered around the TV and watched Dick Clark's New Year's Rockin' Eve celebration.

Steve had a fun time with the three of them but once midnight came nearer, his attention was drawn to the television screen. "Guys, it's any minute now. You got your poppers ready?" He asked the girls.

Lilly had one popper in hand and several in her lap. Becca was holding one reluctantly and had Raph curled up on her leg. Bucky was glued to Steve waiting to kiss him at midnight and not really paying attention to anything other than his fiancé.

Steve had one popper in his hand but he planned on letting it off only after he kissed Bucky. He counted down with Dick on the TV and as soon as it struck midnight, Steve turned to Bucky and drew him in for a deep kiss.

Lilly immediately hopped off the couch and started exploding as many poppers as she could before pulling Becca up and demanding that she help her make them all go off. With both girls and the cat off the couch, Bucky was able to push Steve against the arm and kiss him for as long as he wanted with his hands held snug in Steve's hair.

Steve laughed when Bucky pushed him and he closed his eyes as they shared the moment together. Time seemed to stop for Steve and he stroked his hands up and down Bucky's back until Lilly finally turned towards them once all the poppers were set off. "Get a room, you two."

Bucky pulled off of Steve and flicked Lilly in the arm. "Happy fucking new year," he said with a grin. "It's 1985!" He grabbed both his sisters and pulled them down onto the couch with him and Steve so they were all in a big family snuggle puddle. "I love you all so goddamn much."

Steve grinned widely with all of them pulled together on top of him. He wrapped his arms tightly around his family. "I'm so happy I'm with all of you," he said. "This time last year I wasn't half as happy as I am today."

---

"This time next year," Bucky said, "We will have been church married and gone on our honeymoon and Becca will be fifteen and Lilly will be twelve... and I'll be twenty-five." Bucky sighed, "Oh, god, I'll be twenty-five."

---

Steve laughed at Bucky's realization. "I'm marrying a senior citizen. Heaven help me," Steve said dramatically. "At least you'll be able to collect social security. It may be even more than you make now."

---

"Steve," Bucky eyed him in mock offense. "That is not funny, I'm a third of the way through my life. And don't be laughing cause you'll be twenty-four soon and that's officially old, I think. You won't be a young cute twenty-three year old anymore, Rogers. Well, you'll still be cute but that's just cause you're lucky."

---

"A quarter of the way through your life," Steve corrected. "We are both living to a hundred," he added confidently. "And, you know what, I'll always be a cute twenty-three-year-old," he decided. "I'm only as old as I act, you know."

---

"Oh, if that's the case, you're actually seventy-five, old man?" Bucky teased. He blocked his side with his arms so Steve wouldn't be able to tickle him if he decided that was the best course of action in response.

---

"Oh, shut up," Steve complained. "I guess that makes me your... what's the term again? Sugar Daddy?" Steve smirked and messed up Bucky's hair.

---

"Oh, god, no." Bucky made a disgusted face. "Please never call yourself that again." He kissed Steve's cheek quickly and then kissed the top of both his sister's heads. "Happy New Year, you guys."

---

Steve smirked mischievously. He waited a few seconds for silence to settle then he repeated, "Sugar Daddy," like a goddamned teenaged boy. He hugged them all and sighed. "I can't believe my family tripled in size. But we belong together. All of us."

---

Lilly looked up at Steve with pleased but sleepy eyes. "I like having you around, Steve," she said and yawned for a long moment. "So does Becca even if she doesn't like saying so."
"I never said I didn't," Becca countered flatly but snuggled a little closer in the family cuddle puddle.

"Alright, time for bed for you two." Bucky gently pushed Lilly off of him so she would start her way to her room.

---

Steve grinned from ear to ear when Lilly stated hers and Becca's approval. In response to Bucky sending them off to bed, Lilly grumbled about not being that tired. It wasn't the truth. She could hardly stand. She was just complaining for the sake of complaining. After the girls were both settled in bed, he kissed Bucky. "Here's to the best new year."

---

Bucky held Steve's head in his hands and kissed him over and over again slowly and deeply. He was beyond excited to be starting this new year off with Steve and that he was going to have every new year with him. "I really love you," he said. "You love me?"

---

Steve played with a loose strand of Bucky's hair. "I love you so much, Sweetheart," Steve said. "I love you and your sisters and the constant mess and noise that comes with living here."

---

Bucky and Steve had already planned on going to the church in three days. That would give them time to get some things ready and then give them two days afterwards before Steve had to go back to work. Sarah said she would stay with the girls the night that they get married and Bucky had made secret reservations at a fairly decent hotel for him and Steve. The new year was off to a pretty damn good start. "You want to go curl up in bed and fall asleep or do you want to watch some more TV?"

---

"I kind of just want to curl up in your arms and sleep," Steve said with a little, hopeful smile because he was a dope like that. He leaned in to kiss him. "It'd be a perfect end for the night for me."

---

"Okay, Baby, let's go to sleep," Bucky said and pulled Steve up off the couch to lead him to their room. He got into bed with a slow, tired slump and reached for Steve to join him. "I have work first thing in the morning," Bucky complained and held Steve to him. "I'd much rather stay here with you all day."

---

Steve snuggled right up to Bucky and let out a pleased sigh when he felt Bucky's arms go around his body. "I don't know how I'm going to go back to work on the days that you have off. You have an amazing amount of self-control to have gone to work every day I've been around so far."

---

"Yeah, it's true." Bucky kissed Steve's hair. "I hated having to be gone knowing you were all alone here. It was better on weekends when I knew the girls wouldn't be gone for school, too. Now I'm going to have to figure out what to do on days that I have off and you're at work and they are at school. I'm going to be all alone."
Chapter End Notes

Also, so far no one has commented on my dildo joke... Phillip the Dildo... like 'fill up'... cause it, you know, fills him up... get it? I'm quite proud of that joke.
On the day of their wedding, Steve was absolutely buzzing with excitement. He wore his best suit and spent far too long on his hair for the occasion. His mom was in similarly good spirits and borrowed a camera from a friend so she could take pictures. By the time they got to the church, Steve was almost insufferably happy. Becca had rolled her eyes at him more than once on the subway ride over.

---

Contrary to Steve, Bucky was nervous as all hell. He hardly slept the night before and spent part of the morning standing under cold water in the shower wondering if he was going to ruin Steve's life. Bucky had considered for a second wearing his father's naval uniform since he wore it for his wedding, but Bucky wasn't sure if it was taboo for a civilian to wear. So he just put on the nicest suit he owned - which still wasn't as good as Steve's. Once they were about to enter the church, he started getting calmer and more determined to be the best he could be for Steve.

---

Natasha and Sarah could see how nervous Bucky was being. Sarah had the sense to be sweet and reassuring but Natasha was just the sort of pain in the ass to sidle up to Bucky as Steve spoke with the priest at the front of the church. "Did you remember to bring the candle?" she asked.

---

Bucky's eyes went wide and he gripped her arm tightly and whispered, "What fucking candle?"

Clint, who had actually been at the church before any of the rest of them got there, came over to Bucky and signed 'She's fucking with you, man.'

Much to Clint and Bucky's surprise, Natasha signed back at him 'You ruined my fun.'

---

Natasha gave Clint a pout. "Relax a little," she said to Bucky as she smoothed a hand over his back. "You're marrying Steve, not an alien who's going to suck the fun out of life. He only does that on Thursday evenings."

---

"But what if he changes his mind?" Bucky asked quietly and stole a glance over at Steve who was still with the priest. "What if he wakes up one day and doesn't want to deal with me anymore?"

Lilly had been unusually quiet and unobtrusive so far. She was incredibly uncomfortable in churches because the only times she had been in ones were for funerals. When Bucky started back up with his worried nonsense she slipped her hand with his and held it tight.

---

"Steve is a stubborn mule. If he set his mind to marry you, he won't change it," Natasha said.

Moments later, Steve came up to them with the priest at his side. "Guys, this is Father Frank," he introduced. "Father, this is Bucky. And here are his sisters, Lilly and Becca."
The priest smiled warmly at them and shook all of their hands. "What a beautiful family you have."

"Thank you, Father." Bucky nodded awkwardly and pulled Becca and Lilly close to him for support. "My family is my world and I really admire and appreciate you for being so kind to Steve and being able to do this for us."

"If you love each other and are committed to each other, then you should enjoy the same fruits of marriage that traditional couples receive," the priest said. He walked over to put up a sign on the door that said that they were closed for the next fifteen minutes. The ceremony wasn't long and he couldn't close the whole church for too long when others sought refuge as well. "Your family may be seated," he said.

Bucky ushered his sisters to sit down with Sarah. Natasha and Clint scooted in together in the row behind them. Steve pulled Bucky up to the front carefully and Bucky couldn't look anywhere but down at his feet anxiously. It was like that first time dancing with Steve all over again. He was excited but unprepared and happy but scared.

Steve touched Bucky's elbow and gave him a gentle look. "It's okay, Bucky," Steve said. "It's going to be alright." Father Frank read out a few verses of the bible about love that were appropriate since they didn't specifically mention genders. When it was time to say their vows, Steve got a nervous, happy look on his face and he looked into Bucky's eyes. It was like Bucky was the only person who existed in the world. "A lot of people will say that we shouldn't be together. But the only person I'll listen to about that is you. And for as long as you let me be with you, I'm going to love and support you - even when I disagree with you." He squeezed Bucky's hands gently. "I'll never take you for granted, Buck. And I hope to make you as happy as you make me for every day left in our lives."

Bucky smiled and tried not to get emotional as Steve talked. Before he launched into his own vows, he looked to his sisters quickly to once more get their approval. Becca gave the slightest of nods and Lilly grinned at him. "Steve..." he started. "I surprise myself every day with how much I love you. And I can't imagine what I would do without you with me. You take me for what I am - even at my worst - and show me support and forgiveness no matter what kind of shit I pull. You've been the greatest gift I could ask for and you love my sisters as much as I do and have made my family yours as well. I may not be a perfect husband or father but I'll do my best to find guidance in my parents and your mom to help me be what you deserve. I'll love you forever and you better not forget that."

Steve, the big emotional idiot, was crying freely as Bucky said his vows. The tears silently rolled down his cheeks and all he could do was smile as Bucky confessed all the things that made Steve the happiest man on the planet. The second he had permission to kiss Bucky, he drew him into a tight hug and kissed him deeply, pouring in all his emotion.

Bucky kissed Steve back and raised a hand up to wipe tears from Steve's cheeks as he did. He got his body as close to Steve's as he could and held the back of his neck firmly so he couldn't go anywhere. There was clapping and Bucky could hear Lilly and Clint's distinct voices shouting jovially.

---

Steve smiled happily against Bucky's lips and when they parted for air he turned towards his mom and gave a happy thumb’s up. She had them take a picture with the priest, then with Lilly and Becca, then with Natasha and Clint. Then she had Natasha take pictures of her with Steve and her with Steve and Bucky. The poor priest had to awkwardly shuffle her out because he couldn't get in trouble for keeping the church closed that long. Steve thanked Frank profusely as they left. He was a regular now, so he would see him the following Sunday anyway.

---

The second they got back outside the church, Bucky's heart sank. He couldn't hold Steve's hand on the way back home and he couldn't kiss him yet. They had left one sanctuary just to be thrust back into the cold, uncaring world. And that's how their lives would go for a long time probably. "Hey," Bucky nudged Steve. "Guess what?"

---

Steve looked over at Bucky with a beaming smile. He also wished he could hold Bucky’s hand proudly the whole way back home, but that just wasn’t an option right now. "What?" he asked.

---

"You're my husband." Bucky quirked a smile back at Steve as the group of them all made their way back to the apartment. Sarah and Steve had both prepared food for them all to munch on when they got back. And Bucky had a deal with Sarah that at six o’clock she was going to make sure to get Bucky and Steve both out of the apartment on some false errand so Bucky could take Steve to the hotel he had a room already booked at. He already had them checked in and their bags with necessities and clothes for the next day were waiting for them in the room.

---

Steve grinned dumbly. "And you're my husband," he answered back happily. When they got home, Steve was all over Bucky, holding his hand and hugging him every chance he got. After they ate some food, Steve went to the bathroom to brush his teeth and was confused when his toothbrush was gone since Bucky had packed it. "Buck? Do you know where my toothbrush went?"

---

"Hmm? Uh..." Bucky looked to Sarah quickly then down at the cat. "Maybe Raphael took it. We can pick up a new one from the twenty-four-seven."

Sarah checked the time and then said, "Yeah, that's a good idea, James. The girls and I will hold down the fort just fine."

---

"What? The cat wouldn't take the toothbrush," Steve said in a confused tone. Becca smirked into her cup of tea because she knew that Bucky planned something. "But I mean, alright. I guess we can pick up milk while we're out," Steve said as he got his shoes on.
Bucky followed suit and pulled on his shoes and coat and opened the door for Steve. They walked on down the street and Bucky made a turn a block before the bodega mumbling something about making a different stop first as he continued to lead Steve towards the hotel.

---

Steve wasn't completely dumb. He was a trained officer and knew Bucky was up to something. "Hey," he said, grinning over at him as he caught on that Bucky had something up his sleeve. "What do you have planned, huh?" He nudged Bucky gently.

---

Bucky huffed out a sigh. "Don't fucking ruin it," he said with a mock pout. "Just walk with me and be a good husband, Mr. Steve Rogers-Barnes." He loved saying that now and having it actually mean a little something. No, the law didn't care that they were church married, but they cared and their family cared and so did Father Frank and Steve's god and that's all that mattered at the moment.

---

Steve beamed because now he definitely knew Bucky had something planned for him and that got him excited. "Yes, Sir," Steve said pleasantly. He had a little bounce to his step as they walked. "So Father Frank is pretty cool, isn't he?"

---

"I was super nervous around him but, yes, he was really nice," Bucky said. "I hope he didn't notice that I swore in church. I didn't mean to, but it just slipped out." He rounded another corner and now the hotel was in sight ahead of them. Just two more blocks and he could go spend the entire evening and night and most of the next day alone in a quiet room with Steve.

---

"I don't think he would mind an accidental slip," Steve said. "If you're that bothered, you could go to confession." Steve doubted it but it was fun to tease.

---

Bucky snorted a laugh and mumbled, "Yeah, I'm not going to confession, Babe. I went to church today for something other than a memorial service, I think I'm covered for a long time."

---

Steve smiled at Bucky but then noticed the hotel. He gasped and looked towards it. "Are we having a vacation night?" he asked.

---

When Steve saw the hotel, Bucky had no choice but to cave. "I worked it out with your mom, she's staying at our place tonight with the girls so we can just be alone. I know we won't get to have the honeymoon until spring so I wanted us to at least have a quiet wedding night.

---

Steve would've swept Bucky up into his arms and kissed him if he could've done that in public.
"You're so perfect," Steve sighed dreamily. "Thank you for making today even more special."

---

Bucky rushed the two of them to the hotel and up to their room. He wanted to be all over Steve as soon as possible. Once the door was locked behind them, Bucky rounded on Steve and kissed him loosely before laughing and saying, "Hey, doors that actually lock."

---

"I forgot those existed," Steve joked. He scooped Bucky into his arms and kissed him deeply. "God, you make me so happy," he said in a tone full of wonder. "This is all thanks to Lilly cutting school."

---

"I think we probably would have found each other eventually, don't you?" Bucky asked and held his hands tight against Steve's waist. "I mean, her antics might have sped up the process but I think we would have gotten to each other regardless."

---

Steve cupped the sides of Bucky's face and kissed him slowly. "Yeah, you're right," he agreed. "Maybe I would have gotten a call to pick up two stoners at this one record shop. Or Dale would have called the cops over some noise complaint."

---

"Or we could have met one night at a bar or ran into each other at a grocery store." Bucky continued. "I am really glad for Lilly and her antics, though. Because who knows how long it would have taken without her."

---

Steve picked Bucky up and then laid down on the bed with him, just enjoying himself by playing with Bucky’s hair and looking happily into his eyes. "I guess that would make her our maid-of-honor today."

---

"Guess it would." Bucky conformed himself to Steve's touch. "Don't tell Becca that, though." He held his hands on Steve's hips and kissed him slowly.

---

“What? Do you think Becca wanted to be our maid of honor?” Steve asked. He seemed pleased that Becca would have that sort of interest in their wedding. “Here, grab the room service menu. Let’s order some cake or some kind of dessert.”

---

Bucky nodded. "I don't know, but Becca certainly wouldn't want to be left out if Lilly got to be the maid of honor," he said and rolled to rummage in the side drawer for the room service menu. "You are going to let me fuck you tonight, right? Consummate this marriage or whatever they say."
Steve laughed. "Didn't we consummate our marriage about a hundred times by now?" He teased. "Of course you're going to fuck me tonight. But we got to be quiet, I don't want the next door hotel neighbor to complain."

---

"I can be quiet." Bucky bit his lip and grinned at Steve. "I prefer being loud but I won't make a sound if you need me to." He handed the room service menu to Steve and scooted close so he could read the options over his shoulder. "Ooh, chicken fettuccine sounds amazing right now."

---

"I know you like being loud," Steve snorted and looked over the choices. He had enough sex with his husband to have a good understanding of what Bucky's preferences were and just how loud Bucky could get. "Chicken isn't dessert," Steve added. "But fine, at least you're not eating cereal."

---

"Well, you can get dessert, Baby," Bucky said. "And no it's not cereal but don't think that I'm giving up on cereal for dinner. I'm just really wanting chicken right now." He pulled the phone up to start dialing the lobby to order. "What are you getting?"

---

"Get me some chocolate cake and vanilla ice cream," Steve said. He laid across Bucky's lap and smiled up at him with an adoring expression on his face. He loved Bucky so damned much and now they were finally married.

---

Bucky called and ordered for them and then snuggled back against Steve. "They said it would be up in about twenty minutes. Want to find something on TV for us to watch? I think there is a Humphrey Bogart special going on if you want to watch that."

---

Steve touched a hand to Bucky's face and leaned up to kiss him slowly. "I'm up for anything with you," he said. "My wonderful husband," Steve sighed dreamily. "I'm going to have such a good life with you."

---

"Not to bring the mood down or anything," Bucky said and licked his lips. "But, are you going to wear your ring when you work? I mean, I figure people would ask about it if they noticed - and it's a police department with people trained to notice shit. But I wasn't sure if you were planning on explaining that we were church married regardless of the law and stuff."

---

"We aren't church married, Bucky. We are married. I don't care if the law recognizes it or not and I don't care if people agree with it or not. We're married and I'm wearing my ring and I'm not afraid to tell people how much I love you," Steve said pointedly.

---
Bucky shuttered out a sigh and kissed Steve with an open mouth and hands tight on his neck. "Okay, Steve." He was scared that they were going to be targeted again or something would happen to his family because of all this but he wanted to be confident for Steve. "You're sure about that? I won't be hurt if you want to leave your ring at home so you don't put yourself in danger at the precinct again."

---

"It would hurt me if I had to hide," Steve said. "I can't stand it. I'd be holding your hand all the time if you would let me. It's not illegal," he murmured. Steve had been so scared at first but now he was determined to be out and unafraid. "I'm an officer of the law and I have other cops who have my back if people have something to say about it."

---

"Steve, I love you," Bucky said. "And I'd love to hold your hand in public and kiss you and introduce you as my husband and go to fancy dinner dates on Valentine's Day... but what would we do if one or both of us were injured or killed because of it? What about the girls?"

---

Steve's face fell and he looked away. He went quiet for a little bit and he got a bit broody. "Why do we have to talk about this?" he asked defensively. They would have to go over this eventually but he didn't want to have to talk about how he couldn't be out with his husband.

---

Bucky closed his eyes and cursed himself for bringing this shit up in the first place. Tonight was meant to be just them together in peace - no worries. He whispered, "I'm sorry, Steve," and tried to convey that he was sorry for asking about this at all and sorry he had so many concerns and sorry that he was still so scared from what Rumlow did to be confident enough to be open with Steve in public. Sometimes Bucky felt like he and Steve had molded into each other and switched places in some things. Bucky never used to be the type to care, but now he had someone to care for.

---

"I know you didn't mean to, but... fuck," Steve huffed, sitting up. "Why does it have to be like this, huh? Why do people have to care who loves who so long as we are both happy, consenting adults?" he grumbled. Steve ran his fingers once through his hair. "We shouldn't have to be afraid."

---

Bucky took Steve's hand carefully and kissed his knuckles. "If you can just give me some time to figure out how we can keep the girls safe and be open about our sexuality, I'll get on board and I'll hold your hand proudly. I just need to know that they are going to be safe."

---

Steve let Bucky hold his hand and he looked up into his eyes. "You promise?" he asked. He didn't want Bucky just to say that so he would feel better. Steve genuinely wanted to be able to be open about who they were to each other.

---

"I promise," Bucky punctuated it with a squeeze to Steve's hand. "You know I agree with you about the whole thing being unfair. And you know I'm not shy about who I am. I just got really messed up when you got hurt. And I felt like it was my fault. Give me a little more time to figure things out and then I'll be back to fighting the man like usual."

---

"Baby, it's not your fault," Steve said. "I got shot because someone was wrong and hateful. But I believe that God protected me that day. Just like he protects all of us every day." Steve knew Bucky didn't share that faith but he couldn't help what he believed.

---

Bucky nodded solemnly. "I know you do. And if he did do that then I'm grateful to him. I just can't help that I feel sort of responsible anyway." He sighed and rubbed a hand over his face. "Guess I sort of started our night out poorly, didn't I?" There was a knock on the door for room service and Bucky hopped up quickly to answer it.

---

Once Bucky got up to get the food, Steve allowed himself to be sad for a few moments. He let his lip quiver when Bucky's back was turned before straightening up. "I guess I ought to just think about how I'm going to make you happy." That'll make him feel better.

---

Bucky walked slowly back over to Steve and handed his desert to him and sat down with his chicken and several napkins. "I promise you, Baby, one day everything is going to be perfect for us. One day we will have our house and our baby and no one will bother us, and the girls and your mom will come visit all the time. Maybe I'll pick up a hobby or build our baby's crib by hand."

---

Steve's eyes lit up. "Can we make as many of our baby's things by hand as we can?" he asked and picked at his cake. "Maybe I could retire early by the time we have a kid. I've already got almost five years in. It's reasonable to retire after ten or fifteen."

---

Bucky chuckled and looked at Steve lovingly. "I mean, if you want to retire in five or ten years, then you should. And yes, we can try to make their things by hand. My dad taught me how to string my own fishing net so I've got that covered."

---

"Well, if I ever wanted a fish for a son, you're my go-to guy," Steve joked. He put a hand over Bucky's and brushed his thumb over the ring. "This is kind of embarrassing, but I always kind of dreamed about being able to be a stay-at-home dad. I like helping out and having a job, but it would be amazing to stay with our son or daughter all day."

---

Bucky felt his face lift in a dopey grin. "You're so fucking adorable. I think you'd make an amazing, loving, sexy, attentive, stay-at-home dad." He thought for a second. "What do you want to be called? By the kid, I mean. We can’t both have the same title."
“You think so?” Steve looked happy that Bucky thought that he would make a great stay-at-home dad. “We could both be ‘dad’,“ Steve said. “We will know which one of us our kid is talking to by what tone of voice. If they say it angrily, they’re talking to you. Otherwise, they’re talking to me,” he joked.

"You know I'm going to be the fun dad, so the angry tone will most definitely be directed at you.” Bucky pinched Steve's arm. "And what about ‘Pops’? Dad and Pops? Or you just want both of us to be Dad? Because I'm good either way."

"I can be the fun dad, too," Steve said in an unconvincing tone. He would be the strict one out of the two of them and he knew it. "I want to be ‘Dad’," he added. "Just thinking about some little voice saying that to me..." He had a dumb smile on his face. "Whatever works for you is fine with me."

"I guess I'll be ‘Pops’ unless I just end up not liking it then I'll be ‘Dad' as well." Bucky was finished with his chicken and he set it aside to curl close to Steve. "I like thinking about a little kiddo calling you ‘Dad’ and reaching out for you to be held. And getting excited when I come home from work and pulling my hair and trying on your clothes when you aren't looking and falling asleep in our arms..." Bucky trailed off and hardly noticed the shaking in his voice as he spoke and so desperately wanted it to be real.

God, Steve wanted all of that so bad. He ached for a son or daughter to read to every night and to watch Bucky play games with. He heard the shake in Bucky's voice and he was quick to set aside his plate so he could pull the man to his chest. "It's going to happen, Buck. And you're going to be such an amazing father."

"I'm going to try my best." Bucky nodded. "And hopefully sooner than later it'll happen." He sighed and hugged Steve and breathed him in. "I'll start getting better at playing guitar so I can sing to them to get them to sleep. And I'll start saving as much money as I can for our house."

"And their aunts Lilly and Becca will visit all the time," Steve said. "That kid will probably end up being more Barnes than Rogers since there are more Barnes people around than Rogers." He slid a hand up Bucky's shirt.

"No, I'm sure you and your mother will straighten them out to be just as much a Rogers, too," Bucky assured him and noted every movement of Steve's hand on his skin. "I figure I should learn some lullabies on guitar as well."
"I hope my mom will still be around when we have our kid." Steve sighed. A part of him worried it could take decades to be able to adopt a child and his mom may not have that sort of time. "What lullabies did your parents sing to you?"

---

"She'll be around," Bucky assured him. He didn't know that for sure but Sarah was healthy and strong and determined - just like Steve - and Bucky knew that they were going to get their kid as soon as possible. "My parents didn't sing lullabies really. My dad used to just sing some of his favorite songs to me if I was being difficult and wouldn't sleep. I got a lot of Dean Martin and Perry Como from him."

---

Steve chuckled. "I bet you're going to take your dad's approach and sing softer, g-rated versions of The Clash," he teased. "My ma used to sing me Irish lullabies. And the softer rebel songs. I didn't understand what they meant until after I needed to be sung lullabies."

---

"Do you remember them?" Bucky asked. "I'd love for our kid to hear them from you. Send the tradition down the line so they spread their daddy's Irish heritage even if they aren't Irish." Bucky wondered what sort of kid they would get. Would it be Irish anyway because of the big population around town? Or maybe Italian or Armenian or Jewish? Or maybe it would be descended from Romania like Bucky's family was.

---

Steve nodded. "My ma would hit me over the head with a rolling pin if I forgot them," he joked. She wasn't as radical as his grandfather was but she was pretty adamant about Steve remembering his Irish heritage. "A lot of Irish folk songs are fun. But also a lot have to do with hating the English."

---

"Well, maybe we can just explain that the English aren't so bad." Bucky laughed. "Hell, half the music I listen to comes from Britain anyway." He tried to think of some good bands whose songs could be calmed down into more lullaby like tunes. Maybe Hall & Oates or that new band Tears for Fears. He would definitely try to sing some old crooners stuff too like his dad did.

---

"Well, they kind of are," Steve admitted. "They enslaved Ireland, demolished their religion, killed their native language, then expected us to fight alongside them as second-class soldiers in all of their wars."

---

Bucky stared at Steve as he talked. Steve didn’t usually talk that way. "Immigrants from Britain, Spain, and France did the same thing to the Native Americans. Also, there's what America did to black people with slavery. And there's now, with racism against black and native people still and also anyone who comes from Russia or Germany or Arabia... it's fucked up, man." Bucky nodded. He usually kept all this sort of stuff inside because Steve didn’t appreciate when he talked bad about cops or the man or the country or anything. But Steve was also getting more and more aggravated with the way society worked and the unfair expectations for those who were just a little different.
Steve chuckled and kissed Bucky's cheek as he went on his rant. "I know, Baby, I know," he said in an amused tone. Although he didn't always agree with what Bucky said, he did love how energetic he got when he spoke about stuff like this. And he loved that Bucky’s hippie side just seeped into conversation. Steve got called ‘man’ a lot when Bucky had something to say. "Love you, Baby." Steve played with Bucky's hair. "So are we going to do it nice and slow tonight? Take our dear, sweet time to come or are we going to fuck each other's brains out time and time again?"

Bucky hummed and kissed Steve. "Which do you want, my handsome husband? Because I'm okay with the first fuck as married men to be slowly making love... and then give ourselves a half hour and then fuck hard and fast and messy." Bucky laughed to himself and caressed Steve's cheek. "How do we decide who's top and bottom for the first sex of our married life?"

Steve thought for a moment and absently ran his fingers over Bucky's dick through his pants. "How about whoever jerks themselves off first is the bottom," Steve joked. "Or whoever is the tallest is the top."

"Fuck you, you're taller than me." Bucky bit Steve's arm lightly. "What about whoever can do the most push-ups is the top. Fuck... you'd win that one too." He paused to think. "I don't know. I've got nothing."

Steve had an obnoxious smile on his face when Bucky mentioned push-ups. That one he could definitely win, but Bucky shut it down quickly. He had to think for a moment and then he said, "How about we call the house? If Becca picks up, I'm on top. If Lilly picks up, I am. If my mom picks up, then we flip a coin."

"Wait, so you're on top if either of my sisters pick up, and if it's your mom then we flip a coin?" Bucky gave Steve a confused look. "That gives you like 75% chance of being the top." His hands had trailed down so he was softly groping Steve through his pants as Steve's hands kept a delicate hold on his thigh.

"I was hoping you wouldn't catch that." Steve snickered. He was being unfair and he knew it. "Alright, so flipping a coin then? Or what about we turn on the radio and first person to name the title of the song playing gets to choose?"

"I'd win that one for sure," Bucky said. "If you make the calling home one fair then I'll play that one. I get Lilly, you get Becca, and your mom makes us flip the coin. I'm heads. That's even odds for us both." Bucky slipped his hand inside Steve's pants so he could get his fingers around his warm dick. "Sound good?"
Steve nodded and moaned when Bucky slipped his hand over his cock. He swatted it away so he could call home without feeling wrong for talking to Bucky's sisters while he was being groped.

"Barnes residence," he heard Lilly answer on the other end.

"Hey, Lil," Steve said. "Buck and I just wanted to make sure everything was alright there."

---

Bucky pumped a fist into the air and Steve rolled his eyes at him. Bucky pulled the phone from Steve's ear so he could listen in too. Lilly said, "Yeah, everything's fine. Miss Sarah made me spaghetti and made potatoes for Becca. Now Becca is boring Miss Sarah with a history lesson. Are you having a good time?"

---

Steve said, "Yeah, we are enjoying ourselves a lot. This hotel is real cool, Kiddo. You should have seen the size of the ice cream they brought me. I mean it was enough for both of us even with your bottomless stomach."

---

"You got ice cream?" She asked incredulously. "I want ice cream."

Bucky took over and said, "Lilly, Steve and I are going to go. We love you. Give Becca and Miss Sarah hugs for us okay, my little monster?"

---

Steve waited as Bucky ushered them off the phone and he hung up. "I can't believe you won," he chuckled, ruffling up Bucky's hair. "You're such a brat."

---

"Well, I chose Lilly because Becca only answers the phone when she absolutely has too." Bucky shrugged. So he stacked the deck just a little bit, Steve would probably forgive him once he had a dick inside him. Bucky ran a hand down Steve's torso and down into his pants again.

---

"Damn, you're right," Steve huffed. He reached over and started to pull Bucky's pants down so he could groove at his ass. "You're so perfect, Buck. Perfect husband with a perfect ass." He smiled over at him and rolled on his back so he could pull Bucky on top of him.

---

Bucky rolled obediently with Steve and started grinding down against his crotch with Steve's hands on his cheeks. "And you're my perfect husband with perfect eyes and smile and body and laugh and everything." He kissed Steve's lips and then trailed across his face. "My gorgeous love."

---

"Perfect eyes, huh?" Steve laughed and returned the kiss lovingly. "Tell me how many times you're going to make me come before we go home tomorrow," he purred. "And how late you're going to
"We're going to be up all night for sure," Bucky said and worked his hardening dick with the palm of his hand. "And I'm thinking... three times... if we can manage it. Maybe more if miracles happen." He chuckled. "Definitely more than once I know that for sure. If I'm on top this time then you've got to fuck me next time so we have to do it at least twice."

"Should I pray to God for a little help getting it up so many times?" Steve joked. He spread his legs a little more for Bucky and then pulled him in for another kiss. "Twice tonight, once in the morning," he decided.

"We better get started then," Bucky dropped his tone low and growled slightly as he shimmied down Steve's body and gripped the waist of his pants. He slowly kissed Steve's clothed thighs and then his dick before working open the zipper and tugging them down to his knees.

"I love it when your voice gets like that." Steve sighed dreamily. He reached down to stroke his fingers through Bucky's hair, and then gave it a little tug. "You look so good between my legs, Buck."

"I look good no matter where I'm at on you." Bucky moved off the bed to strip off his pants and toss them on to the chair. Bucky's boxer briefs were soon to follow and he grabbed for Steve's and jerked them off of him as well. "How do you want to be opened up - tongue or fingers?" he asked as he pulled the lube from his bag and came back over to the bed.

"We're taking our time," Steve said. "So it's got to be tongue." He liked getting off with Bucky quick and frequently at home but it was rare they got to drag things out because Bucky's sisters could need something from them at any moment.

"Tongue it is." Bucky licked his lips and set the lube down on the bed for later. "Get yourself comfortable and spread out for me, Baby," he added and unbuttoned his shirt so he could peel it off slowly. "And just so you know, you aren't allowed to touch your dick at all this time. Only I can. If that sounds good to you."

Steve shifted on the bed to get real comfy before spreading his legs. He was all set to start jerking himself off a little when Bucky said he couldn't touch himself. "Buck," he huffed out with a small pout. Just to be a brat, Steve started to fondle his own balls because Bucky didn't make those off limits.
Bucky looked at Steve with a dark glare and stopped his hand. "Those are mine tonight, too," he said and leaned in to mouth over Steve's balls for a few moments before traveling down to his hole and teasing it once with a short lick. "Your hands can touch me all they want, though."

---

"We're married now. My balls are yours every night," Steve snorted. He let out a little gasp when Bucky licked his hole. Reaching down and scratching his nails gently over the back of Bucky's neck, he said, "Keep going, Baby."

---

Bucky spent several long slow moments just kissing and licking Steve's ass and around his hole. He didn't lick inside him yet because he wanted to hold out as long as he could. Steve said they needed to be quiet - and he would be - but he wanted to hear Steve begging him to stick his tongue in. So Bucky just kept teasing him.

---

Steve knew Bucky could be a tease but minutes passed and Bucky hadn't so much as pushed the tip of his tongue in. He wondered if maybe he'd done something but he saw the look in Bucky's eyes and groaned when he realized what Bucky was doing. He spread his legs a little more and tangled his fingers in Bucky's hair. "Please?" he asked shyly. "I want you, Buck."

---

Bucky pulled away and smirked at Steve. "Because you said please," he said and then dove right back down to Steve's hole and licked a few more times before pushing his tongue in quickly and abruptly and moving it slowly in circles.

---

Steve let out a little moan and arched his back off the bed. "Yes, so much better," he sighed happily. "Perfect. I love when you open me with your tongue." Steve pulled lightly at Bucky's hair.

---

Bucky chuckled in his throat and drove his tongue in and out of Steve relentlessly. He wanted to see if Steve would demand what he wanted again, so Bucky didn't add any fingers and instead just fucked him shallowly with his tongue over and over.

---

Steve writhed on the bed, loving the attention but also desperate because Bucky wasn't moving forward. "More," he gasped out without realizing that Bucky purposely was trying to get him to ask. "Need your fingers now."

---

Bucky kissed Steve's thighs and pushed two fingers inside him at once. "You're so wonderful, Baby. I love making you come undone with my touch and then getting to be held in your strong arms afterwards. I love every bit of you. I love this bit," Bucky kissed Steve's upper thigh, "And this one," he kissed his knee, "And here," he licked a line up his inner leg, "And this part of course," he said and finally took Steve's cock head into his mouth as he added a third finger.
Steve blushed at how sweet Bucky was being. He let out a small giggle as Bucky declared his love for the different parts of his body but gasped and moaned out Bucky's name when he took his dick into his mouth. "Oh, yes," he hummed. "I'm so ready, Buck. Please, can you make love to me now?" He ran his thumb over Bucky's cheek, feeling his cock pressed against the inside.

Bucky licked around Steve's dick for a few more seconds before popping off to lube up his own cock. "If you're ready, Love, I'm ready," he said heavily and pulled at Steve to get him to scoot down on the bed. Bucky held his shaft against Steve's ass and gave him a look like he wanted to be asked one more time before he fucked Steve.

Steve thought he was going to finally have sex with his husband but when Bucky lined up his dick but didn't do anything else, he gave Bucky the biggest pout in the world. "You're such a dope. I already asked you like, three times." He laughed as he saw the cheeky expression on Bucky's face.

"Tell me again." Bucky smiled. "I love when you get needy about it." He didn't wait for Steve to say anything or tell him to fuck him again. He held Steve's hips and pushed inside fast and grunted when his balls his Steve's ass.

"I want- oooh," Steve started to ask again just because Bucky wanted him to but he cut off with a low moan as Bucky pushed inside him. He felt so full with Bucky's cock buried deep in him.

"You happy now?" Bucky asked and bent down to kiss Steve. "You love me, Baby?" Bucky's voice was airy and quiet as he started to slowly and carefully ease out of Steve and then push back in slow like molasses again. "You love getting me all worked up and desperate for you?"

Steve's legs wrapped tightly around Bucky's waist and he stroked his hands down his husband's back. "Yeah," he breathed out. "I love everything about you. I love that I get to face the world every day with you. And I love that you're my everything."

Bucky chuckled and gritted out, "You better," as he picked up the pace ever so slightly. He laid down against Steve's chest and braced his hands on the mattress so he could be closer to him as he made slow intimate movements inside his new husband.

Steve caught Bucky's bottom lip between his teeth and gave a gentle tug. "Look me in the eyes, Buck," he said in a breathy tone. "I want you to see what you do to me." Steve's face was flushed and he was clearly desperate to come but he also loved the intimacy.
"Oh, god, Steve," Bucky whimpered and kissed him deeply again. "Sometimes I get so overwhelmed by how good you are to me that I just want to cry and figure out how I managed to trick you into being mine." He tried to keep himself from going harder at Steve but he really couldn't hold back and he found himself increasing his force with every thrust.

"We were put on this earth for each other. You can't trick fate," Steve answered. He put a hand on Bucky's chest and got him to go slower. Steve was drunk on the tenderness and he didn't let Bucky go faster until they bothered were desperate beyond belief for release. When Steve came, it shook his whole body and his thighs trembled from the force of it.

Bucky let out an excited little noise when Steve came and he sped up his thrusts even more until he was shooting his come far up inside Steve's ass. He panted and flopped on Steve with his dick still inside him and kissed his cheek and neck.

Steve immediately started to pet his fingers through Bucky's hair and massage his scalp. "You are the light of my life, Beautiful," he breathed out. He couldn't stop smiling and he was on an emotional high from his orgasm. "I am going to make sure you have such a good life."

"You've said that, Steve." Bucky laughed and nuzzled up close against him. He trailed his fingers across Steve's chest and pet lightly over his nipples for good measure. "Okay, what next? Shower then snacks then round two then a nap?"

Steve kissed him again and squirmed a little when Bucky touched his nipples. "Let’s save the shower for after round two. You wanted it to be a good fuck, we may as well let it be messy."

"Alright, whatever you say, Baby." Bucky smiled and sat up. "I brought some stuff from home. - pretzels, apples, animal crackers, those little gummy candies that Lilly likes. Or we could order room service again because all you had earlier was desert and you might want some protein in you."

"Protein, huh? Is that your way of telling me I should suck you off?" Steve joked. He reached for Bucky's hand and laced their fingers together.

Bucky looked down at his flaccid dick. "Well, you might have to give me a few minutes but I'm not opposed to some head."

"You know, it's so peaceful here it almost feels too quiet," Steve said. He had grown so accustomed to having two kids around the apartment and having to cherish every small window of silent he got alone with Bucky.

---

Bucky squeezed Steve's hand once and kissed his shoulder. "Yeah, it is really quiet with no kids around, isn't it? Sometimes it's nice having a day away from the girls but I always end up missing them and worrying about them too much."

---

"It is nice. I kind of like how quiet it is for maybe about two hours. But then I start missing your sisters, too. And Becca complaining at Lilly for not cleaning out Raphael's litter again. God, I'm so glad we got the cat cause a dog would have been too much work."

---

"A dog would have been a lot of fun but there's no way Lilly would have taken any responsibility for it," Bucky said. "I really hope they are being good for your mom... maybe we should call again." He checked the time. It was just a little past ten. "They will probably still be awake since we aren't there to make them go to bed."

---

"We can consider a dog when we don't have two kids to take care of," Steve chuckled. He was a little amazed that Bucky wanted to call the girls again - it had only been an hour or so since their last phone call. But he wasn't going to discourage it. "Go ahead and give them a call," he said gently. "I'm sure they'll be happy to hear from you."

---

Bucky nodded and dialed home again. Sarah picked up. "Hello, this the Barnes-Rogers'."

Bucky chuckled and turned to Steve when he said, "Hello, Mrs. Rogers." He covered the receiver and whispered to Steve, "She still says 'Barnes-Rogers' instead of 'Rogers-Barnes'."

There was a clicked noise from Sarah and a huff of a sigh. "Bucky, quit calling. The girls are fine. Lilly is asleep and Becca is reading on the couch. Is my son boring you already?"

---

Steve groaned dramatically at his mom swapping the names. He liked the sound of his own being first. He did laugh, though, when he overheard Sarah accusing Steve of boring Bucky. "Your son-in-law is a worry wart," Steve countered from next to Bucky. "I'm the most entertaining guy he knows."

---

"It's true, he is," Bucky agreed and held Steve's hand. "And it is also true that I worry too much. Will you tell Becca to please not stay up too late and tell them both we love them?" Sarah said she would and Bucky thanked her and then hung up. He looked to Steve. "You think I worry now, imagine what it'll be like when he have our baby, huh?"
Steve brought Bucky's hand up to his lips to give it a kiss. "You'll be a mess at the slightest sign of danger," Steve said fondly. "Our kid is going to have the best dads ever," he decided. "And a pair of really cool aunts."

---

"You'll be a mess too, don't lie," Bucky said. "That kid is never going to get any time alone. I'm going to be with it constantly." He thought about Steve being retired from police work and being a stay-at-home dad. Bucky would inevitably get jealous sometimes but someone would have to work. Maybe he should go back to school. Get a degree and a career that pays better before they have a child on top of everything else.

---

Steve pulled Bucky into a bear hug. "No, we both are going to be there constantly," he corrected playfully. He messed up Bucky's hair and kissed his cheek. "You think it'll be too much to do homeschool? I don't know how I'd be able to send him or her away for half the day."

---

"Well," Bucky readjusted in Steve's arms, "if you think you can manage it then I don't see why not. I mean, there's always the question of social education and making friends but there are other ways of doing that, I guess. I think whether they are homeschooled or not is up to you, Steve. I won't be home every day to help teach so it'll be sort of like your full-time job."

---

Steve considered for a moment and said, "Maybe just until they're close to Lilly's age. I don't want them to not be able to make friends but it'll be good to start them with good study habits and all that. Besides, I'm not smart enough to teach them all the way through middle school."

---

"You're plenty smart." Bucky smiled at him. "I hope they pick up influences from Becca with studying and working hard in school."

---

"I hope so too. And I hope they're competitive like Lilly is," Steve admitted. That would be the best of both worlds.

---

Bucky rolled off the bed, took two apples from his snack bag, handed one to Steve, and took a bite from his. "You ready to fuck me after you eat that?" he asked and smirked.

---

Steve took the apple and looked at it briefly before setting it aside and staring at Bucky's cock. "I'm ready to fuck you now."

---

"Well," Bucky looked at his apple, "I'm still eating this one. Does that offer to suck me off still stand? You could blow me while I finish this then fuck me?" He licked some runaway apple juice from lips and took another bite.

---

Steve laughed and nodded his head. "I'm spoiling you already... letting you have an apple while I get you off." He kissed Bucky's lips lightly and then started to trail slow, wet kisses down his chest. He dragged his teeth over Bucky's nipple before going lower.

---

"You love spoiling me." Bucky smiled and let out a content sigh as Steve worked down his body. He was going to eat his apple slow so he could keep Steve lips all over him. What he should have done was to bring his guitar. Then he could have played as Steve gave him head. That sounded amazing to Bucky. Maybe he could try that some time.

---

As Steve got lower and lower, he took more time between kisses. He nosed at Bucky's lower belly and then licked up his shaft slowly. He lapped the head of Bucky's cock, deciding he would be a pain in the ass like Bucky was by making him ask for everything too.

---

Bucky groaned around his apple and stared at Steve. "This apple won't last long, Baby. Might want to speed things up," he said and massaged one hand on the top of Steve's head. "You know, some time I want to take a picture of you with your mouth on me so you can see how good you look."

---

Steve chuckled and kissed the tip of Bucky's cock. "How about you ask your husband a little nicer?" he chided in a singsong voice. He didn't make Bucky actually beg, though. He went down on Bucky eagerly, moaning low and looking up at Bucky through his eyelashes as he swallowed him down.

---

"Ah, fuck!" Bucky hissed in surprise as Steve took him into his mouth. He held the apple in his hand but ignored it for a few moments so he could watch Steve. "You are seriously too handsome to handle sometimes. I'm worried I'll wake up one day and will have simply dreamed you up."

---

Steve couldn't smile too well with a dick in his mouth but the corners of his lips definitely lifted up. "Keep talking sweet to me," Steve said after pulling off of Bucky's dick to breathe. He dove right back down and fucked his mouth on Bucky's dick, hand reaching down to tease his husband's balls.

---

Bucky panted a few times and bit his lip. "What do you want me to say?" he asked. "Want me to talk about how I love falling asleep by you and getting to wake up in your arms? Or how I love your gentle fingers combing through my hair or touching my lips or stuck in my ass. And it kills me when you look at me like nothing else in the world even matters. And your eyes are so attentive and gorgeous. Is that what you want to hear about?"
"Mhmm," Steve moaned in approval. He bobbed his head along Bucky's shaft and laved his tongue along the underside. His hand shot up and he scratched down Bucky's chest until he found his nipple, which he rolled between his thumb and index finger.

---

Bucky shuttered out a sigh and took several more quick bites of his apple until it was done. "Okay, apple is gone," he said hurriedly and gripped on to Steve's shoulders. "Now fuck me rough and fast like you won't ever get to again."

---

Steve grabbed the bottle of lube and slicked a few fingers up. Wasting no time, he pushed two fingers inside of Bucky at once, finger-fucking him as deep as he could. "You like it when I spread you nice and wide, Buck?"

---

"Yep," Bucky gritted out and clenched his teeth. "Go ahead with three, please. I need you quick. I can take it." He rubbed at his face and pulled his hair up on the top of his head but didn't tie it back. He wanted it to be down in case Steve would want to pull it while he fucked him.

---

Steve obeyed and was soon opening Bucky up with three fingers. Once he knew his husband was ready, Steve flipped Bucky over and put him on his hands and knees. He usually didn't go for this position but Bucky did want a rough fuck. He put one hand on the small of his back while the other guided his dick into Bucky's hole.

---

"Fucking yes," Bucky said excitedly when Steve turned him around. Bucky gladly put his face against the pillows and hitched his ass up for Steve. He braced his hands and knees on the bed and waiting for the sweet moment when Steve pushed inside him. "Ruin me, Baby."

---

Steve usually liked being sweet when making love but there was something goddamned sexy about how Bucky threw his ass up for him. Once inside, he gripped Bucky's hips hard enough to leave marks and he started to fuck him as hard as he could right away. His balls slapped loudly against Bucky's ass with every thrust and he reached between Bucky's legs to give his balls a small smack. "Like this?"

---

"Yes, fuck, do that again," Bucky demanded and panted hot breaths into the pillow. He wanted Steve to slap his ass and pull his hair and hold his cock tightly at the base. But he also didn't want to ask for those things and make Steve uncomfortable at all. He would just wait and see how it panned out and assess where Steve was at and if he was enjoying himself.

---

Bucky sounded so good when he asked him to do it again, so Steve did. The way that Bucky moaned in response had him thinking. Steve laid his chest over Bucky's back so he could purr in his ear, "Tell me to stop if you don't like this." When he pulled back, he gave Bucky's ass a firm swat that left a pink handprint in its wake.

---

Bucky gasped and then giggled maniacally. "You kidding, Babe. I fucking love that!" he assured and pushed back against Steve. "Think you can do it harder?" he asked and tried looking back at Steve to see what his face was saying in response.

---

Steve blushed deeply when he heard Bucky giggle. "Don't laugh at me," he complained childishy. He didn't want to hit too hard because he knew his strength. But the next slap that he did made an even louder sound. "Count them," Steve ordered before smacking him again.

---

"Three," Bucky said and chuckled again. He was loving this. Steve was really letting loose and manhandling Bucky a little more than usual. "Four." He bit his lip when he was slapped again. "Do you like this? Five. Because I really like this."

---

Steve had a thin layer of sweat over his body from how much effort he put into fucking Bucky so hard that there was no way he wouldn't feel it in the morning. "I only want to hear you count or say my name, Handsome," Steve said, slapping his other cheek now.

---

Bucky nodded and smiled. "Six, Steve." He bit hard on the pillow to keep himself from saying anything else until he felt the next slap. "Seven, fuck!" He could feel his dick straining with the desire to come and his legs were shaking with every hit to the prostate. He wasn't going to last much longer and he hoped Steve would be able to keep going for longer than him so he could be fucked through his orgasm.

---

Steve kept his hips at a good angle so that his dick battered against Bucky's prostate with every brutal thrust. He panted heavily and then double-timed his spanks so Bucky wouldn't be able to successfully count them quickly enough.

---

Bucky came hard and fast with his face mashed into the pillows to muffle his moaning and his legs were barely able to keep him up. He reached one hand under him to feel around for his come. He felt a little bad that he had gotten it all over the hotel sheets but he also didn't have much time to care as Steve's movements became more erratic as he was nearing his orgasm.

---

Feeling Bucky's muscles spasm around his cock was arousing as all hell. Steve fucked Bucky hard and fast through his orgasm until he came deep inside of him. Steve let out a stuttering moan before he pulled out of his husband and rolled Bucky onto his back. He then pushed two fingers inside of him, playing with his hole as he kissed up his neck.
Once Steve made it to Bucky's mouth, Bucky hungrily kissed him and lazily wrapped his legs around Steve's middle as he had his fingers inside him. "That was fucking amazing," he breathed and pulled his hair out from under his head before holding his hands against Steve's cheeks. "I love you, Steve."

---

Steve smiled and snuggled up to Bucky, being utterly sweet and affectionate even though he was gently still finger-banging him. He did that for a few minutes before pulling his fingers out and kissing him. "I love you, too, Baby. I can't wait for our future together."

---

"It's already started, you goof." Bucky chuckled and kissed Steve again. He laid there with him for a bit and then moved to get up. "Okay, Baby, shower time," he said and offered a hand out for Steve. "Damn, Steve, my legs are so shaky right now."

---

Steve chuckled at Bucky. "I guess I don't usually go that hard, huh?" He got up and scooped Bucky into his arms to carry him to the bathroom.

---

Bucky gripped on to Steve when he picked him up and pecked him on the lips. "Not usually, no. But it was great and doing that occasionally is totally okay with me if you enjoyed yourself." He started up the shower and ducked his arm under the water to wait for the temperature to heat up. "Did you enjoy yourself?"

---

Steve stooped his head shyly and frowned. "Um," he said awkwardly. "I mean, I enjoyed how much you enjoyed it," Steve murmured. "It's not... really my style." He didn't like hitting or being so rough with someone he was supposed to pamper and cherish.

---

Bucky pulled Steve into the shower with him and let the water cascade over his head. "Well, I loved it. And you did so well for me, Steve," he said and rested his head on his husband's shoulder. "We don't have to do it like all the time but if you wanted to be rough with me sometimes when you feel comfortable about it..."

---

Steve wrapped his arms strongly around Bucky and kissed the top of his head. "I love you so much," he murmured. "I'd do anything for you - including being rough. But... even though I know I'm not abusing you, I can't shake the images I've seen of husbands beating their wives whenever I raise my hand to you."

---

"Hey, hey." Bucky nuzzled Steve and squeezed him in a hug. "You're aren't abusing me. And if it feels too much like the domestic abuse cases you've seen then we don't have to do it at all, okay? I don't want you to feel like you're being a bad person, alright, Baby?"
"I want to give you what you want, though," Steve said. "I know I'm being silly about it. I heard that lots of people do this sort of stuff with their partners. But still, I don't know. I guess I'm a bit sensitive about it from being a cop."

Then we will just not do it or... just lightly. How's that? And only as far as you are comfortable." Bucky grabbed the soap and rubbed down Steve's chest. "Besides, I like anything we do together during sex. You're the best I've ever had and the most loving and you're mine forever now and we have all the time in the world to be together."

Steve smiled in relief when Bucky tried to give him a few other options. "You're so perfect, Buck," he sighed. Steve placed his hands on his hips. "I love that you're so understanding. Who would have known you could turn a Catholic virgin into a gay guy who spanks his husband."

"God, Steve, when you say it like that it just sounds awful," Bucky quipped and sighed in exasperation but smiled anyway. They washed up and then dried off and went back to the bed. Bucky covered up the come splatter with a towel before lying down again. "Steve..." He said tentatively. "Would it be okay for us to order some celebratory wedding night drinks?"

Steve heard the hesitant tone in Bucky's voice. He was naturally wary whenever Bucky wanted to drink but he didn't want Bucky to feel bad or like Steve didn't trust him to drink responsibly on their wedding night. He put a hand on Bucky's chest and gave him a reassuring smile. "Of course, Baby. You pick what we drink."

Bucky grinned excitedly and attacked Steve in a kiss. "Thank you," he said as he took the room service menu out again to see what their selection of alcohol was like. "How about a nice bottle of wine and a cheap bottle of scotch. Maybe some beer too." Bucky was getting ahead of himself as he flipped through the list. They had some nice shit available and he just wanted it all.

Steve smiled weakly. "We can try a little bit of whatever you want. But we shouldn't have too much when you've been laying off for a little while. Don't want you waking up with a hangover."

"I won't. I'm fine," Bucky assured and picked up the phone to dial room service again. He ordered just the bottle of wine and the whiskey. "I should probably get dressed so when they come up I won't be naked answering the door." Bucky pulled his pajamas from his bag, dressed quickly, and then flopped back in bed with Steve. He was probably too excited about getting to drink than he should be.
"Get undressed a little. I want to see you naked as much as possible until we have to go back," Steve said. Steve held him once Bucky in bed and he smiled over at him. "So how excited are you for the honeymoon?"

---

Bucky nodded and removed his shirt again so he was just in his pants. "I'm so beyond fucking excited you have no idea. I haven't been there in years and it'll be great to go there with you and to talk about my dad and show you all the spots we would hang out. And we can fish and swim and have a cabin to ourselves. And we can fuck outside, and under the stars, and we can be loud. And I'll teach you how to grill over a fire."

---

Steve couldn't be happier with their destination. "Your eyes light up whenever you talk about it," he said. "It's beautiful how much you love that place, Bucky. I can't wait to experience all of that with you."

---

Bucky smiled and stared at Steve. "Thanks for agreeing to go there. If my dad were here, he would have already made us go with him. He would have taught you things about the trees and the birds and how to properly skin a fish. And he would have brought books that he thought might interest you. He would tell the same stories he told me. And he would tell you how Seneca was his favorite place in the world, second only to wherever his family was." Bucky looked away in thought and worked to hold back his emotions. "I really wish they would have met you. I think they would be proud of me for finding you and they would have loved you like their own immediately."

---

Steve wished that he could've met Bucky's parents. He loved Bucky and his sisters and it would've been amazing to have a dad again and his mom would've had an even bigger family for it, too. He cupped Bucky's face and drew him in for a slow kiss. "I've met you," Steve decided. "So I've met them." He slid a hand down to Bucky's chest, right over his heart. "All the stories you have of them is more I get to see of them."

---

"Okay," Bucky croaked and kissed Steve. He felt his eyes welling up as he moved to straddle Steve as he licked into his mouth. "You make me feel so safe," he whispered and held their foreheads together. "Like nothing can ever touch me or my family again. Like one day we will all be back together. Like nothing can tear us apart."

---

It was so important to Steve that he made Bucky feel secure and loved. "I know you don't believe in it, Buck, but I genuinely believe that God is watching over all of us and keeping us safe," he said. "And I'm going to do everything in my own power to keep us all together, too. There's not a thing on this earth that can separate us."

---

"I know, Baby," Bucky breathed and chewed his lip in thought. There was a knock on the door then and he jumped. "Shit, that scared me." He chuckled at himself and went to the door. The young girl who was on the other side was pushing a cart with the two bottles on fancy display for them. Bucky took the bottles and then remembered he wasn't wearing a shirt when the girl averted her eyes from him quickly. "Uh, thanks for bringing this up." He said quickly and ducked back into the room and closed the door. "I think I embarrassed the poor thing."

---

Steve laughed and sat up so he could wrap an arm around Bucky. "That, or she might have thought that you look real sexy," he offered. "But you're all mine. Stuck with me now." He popped a bottle open and took a drink from it before offering it to Bucky.

---

Bucky eagerly took the bottle of wine from Steve and traded him the whiskey to open. "I severely hope that wasn't the case. I don't want to be ogled by teenage girls - or women in general - or guys anymore. Just you. Only you can ogle me." He took a long drink from the wine and felt his whole being give in to the tones of alcohol. He breathed deeply and shut his eyes. God, he loved this.

---

"I'll die a happy man if I'm the only one who ogles you from now on." Steve genuinely was concerned with how much Bucky was getting into the booze. He wasn't really drinking too much, but he was a little too excited to have it. He didn't really know how to say anything about it without upsetting his husband. "But what if someone is ogling me?"

---

Bucky traded bottles with Steve again so he had the whiskey, which he preferred to wine anyway. "I'll fight them," he said simply and took a drink. "First, I'll tell them they have good taste, then I'll fight them. Even if I lose, you're still going home with me so it won't really matter too much either way."

---

Steve took a sip and then laughed. "Let's not start fights over someone hitting on me before they realize I'm spoken for," he said. He set aside the bottle because he didn't want to get tipsy. He wanted to remember every detail of tonight. "Speaking of ogling, I think some kids on Lilly's lacrosse team have a crush on her."

---

"No, stop it," Bucky said and pointed at Steve. "No one has a crush on Lilly. Lilly doesn't have any crushes back. She's not growing up and neither is Becca and they are never leaving me." He huffed disappointedly and drank again. "Alright, tell me what you saw."

---

Steve laughed and gave Bucky a kiss on the cheek. "Well, I noticed a few of the boys asking to carry her equipment for her. I don't think she knew it was flirting cause she got angry. I think she thought they were suggesting she couldn't carry her own gear cause she's a girl."

---

"That's my girl." Bucky nodded. "Good for her. She's going to be the type to either never settle down because she doesn't need a partner in her life, or have a rigorous screening process for whoever is interested before she even considers it."
Steve nodded his head with a little laugh. "I think she takes advantage a little whenever they offer her candy or Gatorade," Steve said. "It's kind of funny to watch."

"Well you know Lilly. She would sell us all for a life supply of candy," Bucky exaggerated. "And Becca will be fifteen in a few months. And she'll probably start to want to date people. And then she'll have a boyfriend or a girlfriend and then she'll go off to college and then I'll never see her except when she comes home for holidays." Bucky sighed and drank some more. "Now I've worked myself up."

Steve shook his head and kissed his husband's cheek again. "Becca loves you. Sure, she may want a little space at first but I doubt she will ever go too far for too long. She knows how hard you work."

Bucky kissed Steve and held his hand. "I know you're right." He huffed and took a look at the whiskey bottle, which was now about a third of the way finished, and he was feeling it. "What are we doing now? Sleep? Or TV until we fall asleep?"

"Let's get to sleep," Steve decided. "Would really like to cuddle with my husband and have a good, relaxing end to a perfect day." He brushed their lips together gently.

They fell asleep quickly and tangled around each other. When morning came, Bucky rubbed his eyes and yawned. There was light streaming in from behind the window curtain and it was gently illuminating Steve's sleeping face. "Hey, Steve, wake up," he murmured into his ear and waited for Steve to look up at him. "There's my husband. It's our first morning waking up married, I'll have you know."

Steve made a grumpy sound at first when Bucky woke him up. But then when he came to, his eyes sparkled happily as he looked over at Bucky. "It ought to be grounds for divorce to wake up your husband so early on the first day married," he teased and he pulled Bucky into a tight hug. "God, it's so good to wake up next to you."

"You are the one who said we need to fuck in the morning so we got to get a move on," Bucky said and crowded Steve so he would be able to feel his morning wood pressing against his side. "And I'll start without you, don't think I won't," he threatened and started slowly grinding against Steve. "I'll touch myself and finger myself open and you'll have to watch me come all by myself before you can fuck me. So you better get up if you don't want that."

Steve laughed as Bucky crowded him and tried to convince him to hurry up. It was an easy choice to make. He loved having Bucky so riled up and wanting him so early in the morning. "So how's it going to happen? I get to give you your nice, slow lovemaking session? Or is it going to be a fuck this time?" He reached down and started to play with Bucky's balls.

---

"Baby, that's up to you," Bucky said and nibbled at Steve's neck. "I'm good either way." He reached back and started massaging his ass cheeks lightly with his palms. "I just want to see that messy bedhead down by my ass. So however you want to do to make that happen is fine with me."

---

Steve let out a happy purr and then abruptly flipped Bucky onto his back and in a swift motion. He bent Bucky in half by hooking his hands under his knees and pushing them up to his chest. He dove right down and shoved his tongue into Bucky's hole over and over again.

---

"God, fucking hell!" Bucky shouted out when Steve fucked his tongue inside him. "Jesus, Steve." He was panting with the immediacy of Steve's actions and how much even his tongue was putting a stretch on Bucky's tight hole. He reached down to start jerking his cock and he moved his head so he had the best view of Steve that he could get.

---

"Oh yeah?" Bucky smirked. "Prove it. I bet you won't be able to last three more minutes before you want to get your dick inside me." He squirmed a little under Steve's wandering tongue and propped his arms underneath his head.

---

It was a mistake to bet Steve something. He was a stubborn fucking mule. He hummed softly and made good work of his tongue, sometimes fucking Bucky with it while other times teasing the rim slowly. He didn't show any signs of intending to get a move on.

---

"You're going for it, huh?" Bucky asked and closed his eyes. "What do you want if you win? You got to make it good." He kept his breathing steady as Steve played around by his ass, not wanting to give in or ask Steve for more. He was going to try to last too.

---

"I get to pick music for a week if I win." Steve didn't care so much about playing his own music- he just liked the idea of having control over the record player for once. He took one of Bucky's balls into his mouth and sucked.

---

"You're-" Bucky shuttered out a breath, "You're going to have to fight Lilly for music because she's not going to just give in." He reached a hand down to fist into Steve's hair. "I thought you'd pick something sexual. At least, I would have. But you decided to get me where it hurts, didn't you?"

---

Steve smirked. "Well, I don't need to win a bet to get what I want from sex with you," he said and licked up the shaft of Bucky's cock and kissed the tip before going back to eating his ass out.

---

Bucky sighed in exasperation and checked the time after a while. It had been over four minutes of this nonsense. "Steve..." he started and growled a little at his defeat. "Steve," he pressured again. "Please. Okay, fucking fine." He sat up quickly and pulled Steve up to him before roughly pushing him on his back on the bed and straddling him. "You win, goddamn it," he said and stuck two fingers inside himself and pumped in and out quickly before pushing in a third to make sure he was ready to ride Steve.

---

Steve popped his head up with a victorious grin. "I knew you would give in," he said proudly. He crossed his arms behind his head and watched as Bucky opened himself up. "I'm so damn pleased with myself, I don't even mind that you're fingering yourself. God, you look good."

---

"Well, you weren't doing it anytime soon so I had to," Bucky said and poured some lube over Steve's cock. He slicked him up well and held himself up over it. Bucky grabbed Steve's dick and sat down on it swiftly. His hole wasn't entirely ready for all of his cock at once and Bucky winced at the slight pain he felt as he went.

---

Steve moaned low as he felt Bucky take him, but he did catch the wince. "Hey, Baby, take it easy," he crooned softly. He ran his hand over Bucky's ass and gave it a squeeze. "Just stay there for a second. Let me get a good look at you."

---

Bucky groaned softly and nodded. He tried to look down at Steve with as sensual of a face as he could manage. He didn't say anything, just rested his hands on Steve's chest and slowly moved his hips back and forth ever so slightly. His hair flopped down in front of his eyes and he tossed his head back to get it out of the way.

---

"I wish you could see how gorgeous you look right now." Steve dragged Bucky down for a slow kiss and started to rock his hips up into him. "God, am I glad you're the only person I've ever made love to. I love sharing this with you."

---

Bucky hummed happily and licked at Steve's neck as he slowly humped up into him. "I'm telling you, we need a camera. Take some pictures of each other like this. Keep them forever," he whispered to Steve and then pushed back up so he was hovering over him. Bucky pulled himself off of Steve's dick and then sat back down again quickly. "Want me to ride you like this? Or do you want to fuck me in a different way?"

---

Steve breathed out and let out a pleasant sound. "Stay like this, Sweetheart. I like watching you ride my dick. You look so damned good. Come here and kiss me again."

---

Bucky kissed Steve firmly and then let Steve's tongue slide into his mouth. While he was pressed down against him, Bucky started moved up and down on Steve's cock. "Tell me how much you love me," he requested and held his hands around Steve's neck lightly.

---

Steve moaned and couldn't help but give Bucky's ass a gentle swat as a little compromise for not liking spanking too much. "The first day I met you, I thought that you were the most beautiful man I ever laid eyes on," he said. "I couldn't believe my luck when you agreed to go out with me." Steve smiled up at him. "I fantasized about marrying you ever since our third date."

---

"You did not." Bucky laughed and kissed Steve's cheek. "Don't make shit up to be sweet." He rolled his hips back and gripped his own dick in his hand to lazily start jerking himself off as he tried to fuck himself as best as he could on Steve.

---

"I did so," Steve defended. "I loved you from the start. God, Buck, I couldn't wait to say it. I was afraid to move too fast but when we finally moved in together, I knew that I was going to get to spend the rest of my life with you." He held Bucky and rolled his hips up, angling so he was hitting Bucky's prostate.

---

"You say 'finally moved in together' like I made you wait a decade," Bucky scoffed. "Steve, we haven't even been together for a year yet." Bucky swore when Steve gripped him tight and banged up into his prostate. "Let's flip, I want to be on my back so you can rail me if you want."

---

Steve wrapped an arm around Bucky and flipped them easily. He leaned down to purr into Bucky's ear, "You don't get to ask me to tell you how much I love you and then give me sass when I say the truth." He smirked and grabbed Bucky's hands to hold over his head before he started to fuck him in earnest.

---

Bucky gasped and his eyes went wide. Flinging his head back on the bed, he yelped, "Steve, fuck, oh my god!" and choked on air. He hitched his hips up towards Steve with every thrust into him. He was rendered speechless again and all he could do was watch intently and breathe in short hurried gasps.

---
Steve rushed to kiss him to hush his shout. He rocked his hips into Bucky so hard that the bed rattled against the wall. When he came, he saw stars and he tossed his head back with a low moan. He rode out his orgasm, shuddering as he pushed in one last time.

---

Bucky managed to come just about the same time Steve did and he had to squeeze his eyes shut for a moment while he shot come onto his stomach. He milked Steve's orgasm from him by clenching his ass repeatedly around his cock. Bucky turned his head to the side, exposing his neck for Steve and sighing happily and sleepily into the sheets.

---

Steve whimpered softly when Bucky's muscles clenched down on his dick but he didn't pull out yet. He sucked a few marks onto his neck and smiled lovingly down at him. "Someone got loud."

---

"Sorry," Bucky apologized but smirked. "Someone got rough." He wrapped his arms around Steve and pulled him down against him. "That was a perfect morning fuck, Baby. I'm still peeved you won but at least you fucked me well."

---

Steve laughed happily and snuggled Bucky like he was a giant teddy bear. "You should know better than to make a bet with me and expect to win."

---

"I couldn't help it. But I got too cocky and couldn't hold out," Bucky said. "You should be flattered and thankful that I can't resist your dick."

---

"I worked my tongue off for that victory. I ought to be proud, not thankful," Steve teased. He kissed him one more time and then gave Bucky some space.

---

Bucky yawned and grabbed a tissue to wipe at the come on his stomach. "We have some time until we need to leave. Want to order breakfast?"

---

"Breakfast sounds perfect. We can take a shower while we wait for it to get delivered," Steve said and reached for a tissue as well.

---

"You can go ahead and shower. I'll order the food and then lay here and watch TV or drift off again, who knows." Bucky reached for the phone and the menu and picked out, admittedly, too much food for them to share this morning. But he didn't much care, he had no idea when they would be at a hotel together again and he was really hungry.
Steve nodded. He trotted off to go clean up. His shower was pretty brief - he didn't want to let Bucky be alone for too long on their first morning as spouses. He didn't bother to dress after he dried - Steve just waltzed back into bed and plopped down next to him. "Hey, Handsome," he hummed.

"Are you talking to yourself there, Steve?" Bucky asked and flung an arm over his middle. "Food should be here in ten minutes they said. I got us eggs and bacon and some bagels and two breakfast sandwiches. I know it's a lot but I'm really hungry and we can take home whatever we don't eat."

"No, I'm definitely talking to you," Steve laughed. He drew him in for a kiss and smiled. "We deserve to spoil ourselves a little. I don't care if it's a lot of food. You're paying," he teased.

"That is true," Bucky said and lazily made out with Steve for a few minutes before breakfast got to their door. Bucky pulled on his pants and opened the door to find a bored looking young man with a cart.

The young man peeked into the room and saw Steve under the blankets and took in Bucky's shirtless-ness. He didn't say anything, just pushed the cart towards Bucky and turned to walk away saying something about 'just leave the cart in the hall when you're done'.

Steve was quiet as he watched the transaction and the happy little smile faded from his face. He wouldn't trade Bucky for the world but he wished he didn't have to feel so self-conscious when people saw them. He let out a little sigh as he sat up. "Think he will say anything?"

Bucky pulled the cart into the room and started handing Steve his breakfast. He shrugged and sat down, taking the left over whiskey bottle from next to the bed and drinking from it. "Don't know," he mumbled and looked away from Steve. "I mean, he didn't say anything about it just then so maybe he doesn't care."

Steve took his plate and started to munch on his breakfast. "You think one day we won't have to worry so much? I mean, only five years ago it was illegal around here," Steve murmured.

"Yeah, I think so," Bucky said and entwined his legs with Steve's. "When that day will be is another question entirely." He sighed. "Let's just eat our breakfast and enjoy the rest of the time we have alone."

"Yeah, I guess I got to enjoy what we already have," Steve chuckled and kissed Bucky’s cheek before going to town on breakfast, occasionally stealing a bite from Bucky. "I wonder how much the girls missed us."
"Lilly probably missed us a little and Becca probably didn't care one way or the other," Bucky said. "You know how she is. We would have to be gone for a week before she even noticed. I bet your mom missed us more than she did."

Steve nodded in agreement. "Yeah. Oh man, my ma would get so sad whenever I didn't visit her two days in a row after I moved out. But sometimes I just got busy, you know?"

"I know what you mean. Life gets busy when you become an adult. There's practically no time for the things you need to do on a daily basis let alone spend time with family. Especially now that you've got me and two kids, you are much more occupied than before, I would imagine," Bucky said.

Steve looked down at his food grumpily. "I'll be even more occupied once I go back to work," he sighed. "It was nice being a house spouse for a little while. But I'll at least be able to help people again."

"It was nice having you at home to help the girls and cook and things. But I know how much you've been wanting to get back to it." Bucky finished his breakfast and set the plates back on the cart. They still had some sandwiches left so he decided he would wrap them up later to take them home.

Steve snuggled and lazily kissed Bucky until they had to check out. It was hard to not be all over his husband on the walk home. When they arrived at the apartment, he pushed the door open and called out, "Guess who's home!"

Lilly jumped off the ground where she had been playing with Raphael and she shouted Steve's name and nearly knocked him over in a hug. Becca quietly helped Bucky bring their bags in and murmured 'Welcome home,' under her breath. Sarah was occupying herself by knitting on the couch.

Steve grinned so happily when he got an excited welcome from Lilly. He picked her up and spun her around once before setting her down. "I'm so happy to see you," he said. "You too, Becs." He walked over to his mom and gave her a kiss hello.

Bucky hugged both his sisters and then picked up Raphael and scratched his head. "Did you all have a good night? Were you good for Mrs. Rogers?"

Becca took the sandwiches from Bucky and started eating one. "It was fine. Lilly had a nightmare so she slept in my room. But other than that we were fine."
Raphael let out a happy meow and bumped his head lightly against Bucky's chin. "They were very well-behaved," Sarah said. "You need to go out more often. I'll get to pretend I'll have the daughters I always wanted."

Steve snorted. "Thanks, Mom."

Bucky let Raph down on the ground and started taking their bags back to their room. "Well, we will be leaving you alone with them for about a week this spring when we go to Seneca," he said and tossed the last bag into the room before coming back out to his family. Steve started work again in two days and he wanted to spend as much time with him and his sisters all together as he could before then. It would be over in a flash.
The first week back at work was both rough and refreshing. Steve had odd hours that took him away from his husband and he already had three homicide cases but he felt useful again. Today, he came home a little before eight after a double and he had some flowers for Bucky because he missed him.

---

Bucky was holed up in their room with a bag of ice pressed to his face and a bottle of Smirnoff stuck between his knees. The girls had already went to bed since they had school the next day and Bucky had managed to skip the drama of telling them what happened. He was waiting up for Steve and drinking and dreading having to explain to him what went on.

---

Steve was a bit sad to see everyone in bed but he sucked it up and headed into their room. His jaw dropped when he saw the state Bucky was in and he rushed over to sit next to him and put a hand on his knee. "Baby, what the hell happened?"

---

Bucky lowered the bag of ice so Steve could see his face better. He had a pretty bad split lip and his right eye was red and bruising. His body wasn't much better with bruises of its own forming in various places and his knuckles were all crusted over with blood. Bucky thought about the truth of what happened and worried about what Steve might do in retaliation. Maybe he could just get away with a lie, "If I told you it was a bar fight, would you forgive me?"

---

Steve pet his fingers through Bucky's hair and kissed his temple before rushing off to get a wet, cool rag. "You're my husband and I'm a man of God, so I'll have to forgive you," he said. "Doesn't mean you won't hear about it from me."

---

Bucky sighed. He really didn't feel like getting chewed out for something he didn't do. He did go get a bottle of vodka after the fact, but he couldn't help it. He needed something and that was better than some alternatives. He was probably going to hear it for buying alcohol without Steve knowing and pretending he went to the bar would just add to it. Bucky took another drink from the Smirnoff and then set it on his nightstand. "I want to tell you what happened but..." he trailed off and stared at Steve.

---

Steve let Bucky have one last sip before he plucked the bottle from the nightstand and went to pour it down their bathroom sink. Bucky was allowed to have some, but he wasn't going to give him a free pass for the rest of it. He wrapped his arm around his shoulders and kissed his temple. "If you're in trouble, I don't care how mad I'll be. I want to help."

---

Bucky held back when Steve tossed the rest of his vodka. He couldn't argue with him about it today. Bucky pulled his legs up against his chest and pressed the bag of ice back against his eye. "Got jumped," he said simply and looked away from Steve. "Sort of."

---

Steve took the ice pack and held it up to Bucky's face for him. He gently massaged the back of his neck to try and make him feel a bit better. "Sort of? Who was it? Did they steal anything from you?" he asked. "What did they look like?"

---

Steve was such a cop. Bucky was surprised he didn't pull out a notepad and take down everything Bucky was saying. "Wasn't a bar fight. It was just this guy I used to know," he mumbled. "He walked down the alley behind the record shop when I was taking the trash out. He must've been headed to the bar down the block and recognized me."

---

"Why would he hit you?" Steve asked. "Did you owe him money? What's his name, Buck?" Steve was getting a bit protective and looked one step away from going down to the precinct to and filing an assault charge.

---

Bucky furrowed his brow and asked, "Why would you assume I owed him money?" Bucky tried not to be offended by what Steve might be implying.

---

"Because people beat people up because they said something smart, they screwed their partner, or they owed them money. I figured it'd be the most likely of the three cause you didn't have any reason to instigate," Steve said.

---

"Never mind." Bucky shook his head. "He was an old drinking buddy. We used to be friends, things went south about a year ago."

---

"What happened between you two?" Steve asked gently and tilted his head to the side and looked at Bucky's eye that was swelling.

---

Bucky shifted and sniffled. His head was hurting and he wanted to sleep. "I used to get in bar fights all the time and he was my buddy. He would back me up. One night we were in the men's room and he was helping me stop my forehead from bleeding. He was so close to me and I was so drunk and I kissed him. After that night, I never saw him again. He turned right around and left. He had me barred by the owner and I didn't see him again until just tonight."

---

Steve's stomach fell as he understood why Bucky had gotten jumped. He frowned and then rushed forward to hold him tightly in his arms. "Oh, Sweetheart," he said softly. "I'm so sorry." He hugged Bucky a bit too tightly because as awful as he felt for Bucky, he was livid at the man who did this to "Gentle, please, Babe, my whole body hurts," Bucky winced and rested a hand on Steve's back. He was quiet for a moment before adding, "I was throwing the shit out when I got my knees kicked in under me and hit my head on the side of the dumpster. Turned around and it's him and his already drunken self and his fist coming right at me saying shit about 'goddamn faggot Barnes motherfucker, you cocksucking piece of shit'. So I fought back and ultimately he knocked me out on the curb and left. Reggie found me a few minutes later when he came out to smoke pot."

Steve wanted to cry. He couldn't imagine the sort of hate that would drive someone to beat up someone they called a friend just because that person liked them enough to kiss them once. "What's his name?" Steve asked, easing his grip up. "What's his full name?"

"Doesn't matter," Bucky whispered and tucked himself into Steve's arms. He really didn't want some big thing coming from all of this. He didn't want Steve to get involved and for him to be in danger or for the precinct to get involved, either. They already probably thought pretty low of Bucky as it was.

"Of course it fucking matters!" Steve said, getting heated and raising his voice a bit. "I'm not letting some bastard get away with beating up my husband. Give me his name, Bucky." Steve hadn't gotten this upset and angry in front of Bucky before.

Bucky's eyes went wide and he shied away from Steve slightly. "Turn it down. The girls are asleep and they don't know about this yet." He sighed and grabbed for Steve's hand gently. "I don't want this to turn into some weird man hunt, Steve. I'm fine and I shouldn't have kissed him anyway so it's no wonder he's still pissed."

Steve saw red but when Bucky shied away, he cooled off just the slightest bit. He held Bucky's hand and looked away. "This isn't your fault, Buck. He's an asshole. If he can't handle someone liking how caring he had been to you, then he's the problem."

Bucky pulled himself up off the bed. "Can we just leave it? It's not likely that I'll ever see him around again and I'm just a little battered up." He started pulling off his shirt so he could go shower but he thought better of it, not wanting Steve to see the bruises on his ribs where he had been kicked while he was down. "I need to take a shower. I feel disgusting."

Steve gave Bucky a sad look but didn't say anything even though he wanted to insist on pressing charges against the bastard who hurt him. Steve sighed and kissed Bucky's cheek. "Let me take care of you," he said softly. "I want to make you feel better."
"Okay, come with me then." Bucky started towards the shower and lifted up his shirt a little reluctantly. It hurt to peel it off of his sore body and he grimaced when he bent down to take off his pants. Bucky stared in the mirror for a second and cataloged the marks on his body. " Fucking hell," he breathed out and ran his hands through his hair.

"Oh, Bucky," Steve said softly. It broke his heart to see him so hurt. He helped Bucky take off his pants and boxers so he wouldn't have to move so much. "Are you sure you don't want me to press charges?" he asked. "He got you so bad," Steve murmured in a quiet tone. "I'm going to take care of you, alright?"

"I'm fine, I promise," Bucky mumbled and got into the shower. "Just come help me wash my hair and then cuddle me in bed, okay? I'm really sore and tired." He reached a hand out for Steve and waited for him to get undressed to come join him.

"Alright," Steve sighed. He got undressed so he could wash them both. He was loving and careful as he cleaned Bucky's body and washed his hair. "Can I do anything else for you, Baby? Want a massage? Or maybe I can blow you?"

"I hurt too much for a massage but maybe you can give me head when I'm laying down again. Might make me feel better," Bucky said and shut the water off. He stumbled out of the shower and wrapped up in the towel before trudging back to bed and just laying down as calmly as he could.

"I'd be happy to do that for you," Steve said. He dried off and laid down next to Bucky and took him into his arms. He played with his hair for a few minutes before massaging his head. "I love you so much, Buck. I'm so, so sorry that you had to go through this." He kissed his temple. "You are such a good person and you didn't deserve this."

"I love you too. It's okay." Bucky kissed Steve lightly. "I'll be okay. I'll heal up quick probably." He rolled a little to the side and gasped at the pain in his ribs. "No, okay, I need to lay on my back. Hurts too much on my side."

Steve looked into Bucky's eyes and then gave him another kiss. "What are we going to tell the girls?" he asked. "Becca can't know about the booze, so I'll get rid of the bottle on my way to work tomorrow."

"I don't know." Bucky sighed. "I don't really know what to do. Do they have to know?" He breathed deeply and felt his lungs shake. "I don't want them to get worried about us again. Not after what happened to you. And I don't want to explain to them why this guy is so mad at me."

---

"Well, you have a pretty nasty black eye," Steve said. "And you're hobbling a little. You can't really chalk that up to falling down the stairs or tripping over something," Steve placed a hand on his head. "I don't like lying to them. And I don't want Becca to feel like we hide stuff from her."

---

"Fine." Bucky sighed. "I'll tell them tomorrow when they get home from school. I'll probably be asleep in the morning still." He started tracing lines down Steve's arms and tried to keep himself from screaming about how much this whole thing was so goddamn unfair. "Can you get me some medicine for my headache?"

---

Steve nodded and got up to get a glass of water and some painkillers. Once Bucky took the pills, he went back to stroking his hair and gently sung one of the lullabies his mom used to sing to him to try to ease Bucky into sleep.

---

Bucky was getting more and more tired as he went and having Steve hold him gently was really nice. He tiredly murmured, "This isn't a blowjob but it's nice," and closed his eyes as he felt his husband’s light fingers through his hair.

---

"I believe you asked for a head massage. If you wanted more, you should have specified which head," Steve teased. He kissed and sung to Bucky until he fell asleep. When Steve finally succumbed to his slumber, he still had his arms thrown around his husband.

---

Bucky woke up angry and in pain with a raging headache once again. Steve wasn't in their room and Bucky couldn't remember what he worked that day. The girls were probably eating breakfast or on their way to school and Bucky hoped that Steve was out there helping them get a move on. He waited a few more minutes before calling out to Steve in hopes that he was still in the apartment.

---

Lilly was the one who answered by going to the bedroom with a plate of breakfast that Steve had left. "Steve left before he got up for work, Dummy. He made us all - oh my god!" She accidentally dropped the plate. "What happened?"

---

"Fuck, Lilly," Bucky breathed and tried to sit up, holding his head. "Nothing... it's... I'm fine. Why aren't you on your way to school? You need to get going. You'll be late." He tried to wave her off but he moved too fast and hurt himself. "Clint gave me today off so I'll just be here when you get back then we can discuss it."
"It's a late start today cause of the snow," she said. Steve had seen it on the news and let them know by leaving them a note. "Who did this to you? Was it Steve?" She sounded scared. "Was it a stranger – a mugger?"

---

Becca came in then, hearing the noise and getting curious and concerned. She took one look at Bucky and her eyes got wide and scared. "The fuck happened to you?" she asked and came over to him to stare at his black eye.

Bucky groaned and shut his eyes tight. His head was still pounding. "I'm fine," he pressured again.

---

Lilly ran to get in bed with Bucky and started to look him over. "Did someone try to break in? Your eye looks all bloody." Her own eyes were shining a bit with tears as she tried to understand why her brother was beaten up. She didn't see Bucky like this like Becca had in the past.

---

Becca looked Bucky up and down and squinted at him, asking in a low quiet stern voice, "Did you get in another goddamn bar fight?"

Clenching his jaw for a second while he thought, Bucky looked up at the ceiling. "No," he said finally. "I didn't go to a bar." He looked to Lilly. "Steve didn't do this to me. No one tried to break in."

---

Becca didn't look convinced that Bucky was entirely innocent in this because he wasn't giving them a straight answer. She crossed her arms, now looking more angry than concerned that Bucky was hurt. "Then what the hell happened, Bucky?" she demanded.

---

He looked between his sisters and then gave in. He had hoped that Steve would have been around to help him explain what happened to him to the girls. Bucky really didn't want them to get worked up and worried about his safety or Steve's or their own. He turned to Becca. "You remember Donnie Manix who would bring me home sometimes after we had been out on a bar crawl?"

---

"Yeah, I remember him. He was a bit of a sleaze ball." Becca never liked him much but didn't say anything about it because he was the only friend Bucky had at the time who seemed to care that Bucky got home safe. Even though he sort of talked down to her and Lilly when Bucky wasn't awake or around.

---

Bucky nodded and gestured down at himself indicating wordlessly that this was the handiwork of Donnie Manix. "He jumped me when I was taking out trash at work last night. Didn't see him coming and we fought for a bit before he knocked me out. You remember how big a guy he was."
Lilly looked angry. "If you know who did this what are we sitting around here for? Why isn't Steve arresting him?"

Becca was confused at first why Donnie would attack her brother but then she realized. "He knows you're gay, doesn't he?"

---

"I kissed him." Bucky looked down at his hands. "About a year ago. I was drunk and we had just won a fight and he was patching me up and I just kissed him. Turns out he's still angry. He had some choice words to say about me and gay people, too." He shook his head. "I told Steve to leave it. I don't want to cause some big thing about all this."

---

Lilly was angry but she quietly cried because she was so upset that someone beat up her brother for being gay. Was this going to be a normal happening? She rubbed at her eyes. "Does everyone hit you when they find out you're gay? Why are they allowed to do this?"

---

Bucky gently curled himself around Lilly and pulled Becca over to join the cuddle. "Some people are filled with hate for what they don't understand," he said. "I don't know why, but they are. And, no, not everyone attacks me for being gay. It has happened a lot of times before and I bet it'll happen again but it's not an everyday occurrence, thank God."

---

"If it happens so often, why don't the police get involved? Steve is a cop. They got rid of that guy when he had Steve shot," Lilly said, still upset and slightly more naive than Becca was. "I'm going to kick his ass."

---

Bucky squeezed Lilly close to him in as good a hug as he could manage before it hurt. "It's complicated, Lil. It's really not as simple as having the cops get involved." He kissed the top of her head and checked the clock. "You've got to get to school now. The snow will slow you down and the delay is probably almost up. Do you want me to walk down with you?"

---

Lilly shook her head. "No, you should stay inside." She was worried about Bucky getting hurt again if he went outside. Becca gave Bucky a hug before taking Lilly out of bed and getting her to head out for school.

---

Bucky spent the rest of the day either laying in bed or laying on the couch. He listened to records or tried practicing on his guitar. Mostly, he just tried not to think too much and get himself worked up. Mostly, he just sat around and waited for Steve to get home from work. He hoped he had a good day and hadn't worried about Bucky too much.

---

Steve came home about an hour before the girls would be heading back from school. He'd picked up a new record from the store that Bucky had talked about wanting and he wrapped it up in some newspaper. He gave Bucky a kiss hello as soon as he walked in. "Hello, Beautiful. Feeling any better?"

---

Bucky looked up at Steve and smiled sadly. "Honestly, I feel a little worse today than I did yesterday. All the bruises have formed and I think I could have a fractured rib, but I'm not sure." He reached for the package Steve had under his arm and asked, "What's this?"

---

"Do you want me to take you to the hospital?" Steve asked, petting his fingers through his hair as he offered Bucky the package and said, "It's something that may make you feel a bit better."

---

Bucky opened it up and found a new record from a little band that no one had heard of yet that he had been eyeing for a while. "Thank you for this, Baby, will you put it on?" he asked and handed it back to Steve. "Also, no, I don't want to go to the hospital. I'm fine."

---

Steve put on the record and then went right back to Bucky's side so he could massage his head. "I could finally give you that blowjob," he suggested, nibbling his earlobe lightly.

---

"I'd love a blowjob, yes. And then some food. The girls already know what happened. They found me this morning when they were here during the snow delay," Bucky said and wrapped his arms securely around Steve to bring him in for a kiss.

---

Steve carefully straddled Bucky's hips and gave him a few, loving kisses. "I'm sorry you had to tell them alone. I was hoping that they wouldn't find out until after I got back," he sighed. "Did they take it alright?"

---

"Lilly wanted to start a duel to the death, like usual," Bucky said. "Becca understood why it happened and why I didn't want you to do anything. She also remembered Donnie from when he would bring me home sometimes." Bucky forgot he hadn't given Steve the name of the guy and he also didn't realize he just let it slip accidentally.

---

Steve was such a cop and he perked up a little when he heard a name. He could probably squeeze the last name out of Becca or go asking around Bucky's usual bars for the guy. "You think Lilly would be able to beat him up?" Steve asked as he gingerly kissed down Bucky's chest.

---

Bucky laughed humorlessly. "I know you're joking but she might actually get farther in a fight with him than I did. She's good at evasive movements in soccer and lacrosse so she could probably dance around him and tire him out." He tried not to make any pained noises when Steve brushed up against his ribs. He was pretty sure one or more were fractured and even the slightest touch really hurt but he didn't want to worry Steve or have to go to the hospital.

---

Steve was as careful as possible as he kissed down Bucky’s torso. He sunk down to the floor and opened up the front of Bucky's pants so he could guide his dick out. "Let's not worry about any of that for now. I want you to focus on feeling good."

---

"Okay." Bucky smiled down at Steve and brushed his hair back from his eyes so he could see him better. Bucky's beard was now coming in pretty well. It was mostly just short and dark all around but he liked it. Although, honestly, he might shave it off soon because Reggie started growing his out too after Bucky started. That kid practically pretended Bucky was his dad.

---

Steve lapped at the head of Bucky's cock a few times before sinking down and taking a few inches into his mouth. He let out a little moan and reached up to grab Bucky's hand and guide it to the back of his head.

---

Bucky cupped the back of Steve's head and lightly scratched his hair. "I love you, Baby. And no matter how much people try to hurt me or change me because of that, I will fight my best and never give up and I'll always come home to you."

---

It hurt Steve's heart to know that they had to worry about each other's safety in this way. He tried to ignore it by giving Bucky the best head he possibly could. He moaned low and deep-throated Bucky's dick, reaching down to jerk himself off while he sucked on Bucky's cock.

---

Bucky was getting a little overwhelmed. He loved having Steve's mouth on him but he was also overthinking far too much. He was thinking about Donnie and if he was going to see him around again and if he was going to have to fight him again. He was thinking about Steve and how much he had already gotten hurt because of this and how much easier his life might be if he was straight. He also thought about his sisters and how they had to continually see him getting hate for who he was and they had to see Steve injured and Becca had to deal with so much from him and Bucky was worried someone might target the girls next. He let out a quiet little gasp and finally noticed the silent streams of tears that were staining his cheeks.

---

Steve tried to keep Bucky's mind off everything. He sucked his husband until he could barely breathe and he palmed at his balls to make them feel even fuller, but when Bucky kept crying, he couldn't act like nothing was wrong. He stopped and moved to sit next to him, pulling Bucky strongly against his chest while still being gentle enough to not disturb his injuries. "Love, it's okay."

---
Bucky let himself just melt into Steve and cry into his shoulder. Way too much had happened to them lately and he had been bottling it up for too long. "I'm sorry, Steve," he stuttered through the tears and pulled his legs up into his husband’s lap. "I'm sorry for all the shit that's happened. I'm sorry we both got hurt just for being who were are and I'm sorry I can't go visit my parents and I'm sorry I drank without asking you and I'm sorry that the girls have to deal with all of this."

---

Steve couldn't help the tears that fell down his face because it hurt to see his husband so upset. But he held him and kissed him over and over so he knew he was loved and cared for. "Baby, you don't have to be sorry," he said. "I didn't sign up for an easy life with you. I signed up for a happy one, and that's what you give me every day." He sighed heavily. "What can I do to make you happy?"

---

"Never leave me," Bucky mumbled into Steve's collar bone. "Never leave me and promise we will try to get a house and a baby and we will always be there for each other." He pulled away from Steve for a moment just so he could stare into his eyes. "I love you so much," he said and held up his ring finger to him. "I'm yours forever. No one can take me away."

---

"Buck, I will never, ever, leave you," Steve swore. "We are going to raise your sisters and then we are going to get a beautiful house and an even more perfect child that we will love and nurture into such an amazing person," he reassured.

---

Bucky sniffled and kissed Steve. "Speaking of the girls, they will be home soon," he said and slowly stood up to tuck himself back in his pants. "Sorry I cried while you were sucking me off. That was probably a big mood killer for you."

---

"At least I know you weren't crying cause I was doing such an awful job," Steve chuckled. He looked up at Bucky as he stood. "You going to be okay, Beautiful?" he asked, giving him a concerned look.

---

"Yeah, I will. I'm just upset." Bucky smiled weakly and wrapped his arms around Steve to give him a hug. He just wished that he and his family could be safe and happy without having to look be so scared all the time.
In the next few days, Steve did everything he could to get Bucky feeling better and get up and running again. On his day off, Steve was ready to relax for once but he couldn't find where his Bible was. "Buck, did you move my Bible?"

---

"It's in the TV cabinet with the other books," Bucky said idly and strummed his guitar. He had been laying in bed for about an hour since he woke up just practicing and occasionally eating a carrot that Steve had left for him on his nightstand.

---

"Why'd you move it?" Steve asked as he went to go look for it there. He found it soon after, buried under a bunch of Becca's collection. "You know I don't like it when my stuff is moved, Babe."

---

"I know. I just figured I'd put all the books together so we knew where they were. I found it out on the kitchen table so I just popped it into the cabinet," Bucky replied without much interest and kept playing, glancing up when Steve returned with it in hand.

---

"That's still moving my stuff," Steve complained as he sat down near Bucky and opened to one of the passages Father Frank mentioned last mass. "I got busy making the girls breakfast and left it there so I could pick it up now."

---

"Well, you found it. It's fine," Bucky said. "Not a big deal," he mumbled offhandedly and got up to put his guitar away. He had to leave for work soon and he was still in pajamas.

---

"Yeah, but if you weren't here when I was looking for it, I wouldn't have found it," Steve snipped to him. He knew things were more chaotic around here but Steve hoped that some things would be respected, like leaving Steve's stuff alone. "What time do you have work?"

---

"I have to leave in a few minutes." Bucky furrowed his brow. "Why are so pissy? I don't see why this is such a big thing. You found it and it's not like I threw it out or anything. And don't you have two more Bibles in a box in the closet?"

---

"I'm not pissy," Steve defended. "But I have a right to be annoyed when I keep asking you and the girls to not move my stuff and then you keep moving my stuff." He looked back down into his Bible. "Also, this is my favorite one and the one I have marks and highlights in – the others don't have that."
"Okay, but you clean up all our shit all the time," Bucky said and pulled off his pajama shirt so he could put on one of his sweaters for work. "Half the time when she's going to school, Lilly can't find her backpack cause you've put it in the hall closet with Becca's and that's not where she last left it."

---

"Because they leave their stuff where it doesn't belong. Shoes go next to the mat, backpacks in the closet. I mean, if you prefer me to not clean and let the place become a pigsty then I'll leave their stuff alone," Steve huffed.

---

Bucky scoffed at Steve. "That's not what I'm saying. It's just they are kids and they are busy kids. They leave stuff everywhere so they can find it fast later. And it's not like you talked to them and set up an organization plan with them for what is supposed to go where."

---

"They're young adults who are perfectly capable of hanging their backpacks on the hooks I clearly labeled for them. I even decorated it!" Steve said. It was frustrating to have done everything he could to make the house as organized as possible so the daily mess wasn't as big as it usually was. "I've told Lilly a thousand times to hang her backpack on the hook."

---

"Telling Lilly to do things doesn't work." Bucky crossed his arms and looked to Steve. "She needs a plan and direction. And decorating a hook with her name on it and just expecting her to always put her bag there isn't a plan."

---

"I'm a grown man and she's not even a teenager yet," Steve said. "If I tell her not to leave her backpack laying around, that's all there is to it. I don't step on your toes in front of them, but you give them too much leniency." Steve had to hold back a lot of the times when Bucky was too lax about some things with them.

---

"The fuck's that supposed to mean?" Bucky snapped and glared at Steve. "I'm lenient? They are my sisters - my responsibility. I'll raise them the way I see fit. And Lilly doesn't see you as her brother or her parent so she's not going to just obey you like she would if she did."

---

"Well, the way you see fit is too soft," Steve said. He looked a bit hurt. "Lilly should see me as something considering I married you, I live here, and I make her goddamn breakfast, lunch, and dinner almost every day."

---

Bucky clenched his teeth. "Lilly and Becca already lost two parents. Marrying me isn't going to just raise you to that status for them. You're their brother-in-law, and most kids don't have to obey their brother-in-law like a guardian."
"I know that marrying you isn't a fast track to guardianship but, Christ, Buck. I make their food. I do most of the shopping. I clean. I help them with their homework. What else do I have to do to get respect from them in my own damn home?" Steve demanded.

"You're the one who wants to do all that shit!" Bucky shouted. "We were fine making our own food and cleaning our own house and shopping on our own and Becca helped Lilly with homework. I handled it all on my own! You're the one who came in and said you wanted to help us with anything you could to make things easier. You're the one who said you didn't want us eating the way we were. You're the one who started controlling stuff and changing stuff and taking over because you wanted to and you thought I couldn't do it!"

"What's so wrong with wanting to be there for you guys? Now I'm the asshole because I'm making sure they have healthy meals instead of eating cereal all the time?" Steve put down his Bible and glared. "You're going to be late for work. You'll need some time to cool down anyway."

"I'll need some time?" Bucky asked incredulously then just laughed and shook his head. "You know what, that's fine. I'd rather be at work right now anyway," he said as he tugged on his socks and then stormed out into the kitchen to get his shoes and coat. He angrily yelled "Bye, Steve!" before slamming the apartment door behind him and heading down the street.

Steve was livid. He hated not being taken seriously by the girls and having no power to stand up for himself when the girls ignored any stipulation he had. He was still in a sour mood when the girls got home, especially since Lilly threw her backpack on the floor the second she got in.

***

Work had been an absolute shit show. Bucky had to deal with angry customers all day and at one point a kid knocked over a whole display that Bucky had to put back. Reggie left early because he got sick and Clint and Bucky were left to clear up and close the store by themselves. While Clint was in the back counting the money and putting it in the safe, Bucky went to lock the front door. He was greeted with an arm stuck between the door and the wall shoving its way into the store as Bucky tried to get the lock in.

Donnie practically shoved the door open as soon as he got his arm wedged in between. He was a little drunk and was on his way home when he saw Bucky alone in the shop as he passed by the window and decided to cause more trouble. "You've got some balls to be out in public, Fag."
Bucky's eyes went wide and he steeled himself for whatever might come. "I fucking work here, you prick. And we're closed. Get out." Donnie was a bit taller than Bucky and definitely wider and stronger - especially since Bucky was still battered up from the incident the week before and most likely didn't stand a chance against him tonight.

"Well, you shouldn't," Donnie scoffed. "You ought to be in the ground or out of sight. Like all queers." He gave Bucky a little shove. "Seriously, what made you think you could kiss me, huh? What made you think I was a dick-loving faggot like you?"

Bucky winced at the impact, his ribs not able to take even a slight push. "I was drunk, Donnie. I wasn't thinking. Just like you're drunk and not thinking right now. I made a fucking mistake. You should leave before you make an even bigger one." Bucky hoped against hope that for some reason Clint would come out to the floor for something and see what was going on. There was no way for him to get his attention by yelling and if he stomped the ground to make the place shake then Donnie would for sure retaliate.

"Mistake?" Donnie snorted. "Now that I think back more, I remember all the looks you gave me. The ‘fuck me’ sort of looks." He reeled his arm back and gave Bucky a hard hit right to his head. "You should have never left whatever hole you crawled out of. Cause I'm gonna make sure you won't be able to walk out of there again." His fists went flying, relentlessly punching Bucky's face and chest over and over.

Bucky fell back against a stack of record crates and half them collided onto the ground. He tried to hold his arms up to protect his face but Donnie easily yanked them out of the way and knocked into his jaw again. Bucky went down on the ground quickly and his last thought before he passed out was how the last thing he and Steve did was fight and the last thing he said to his sisters was that they better get to bed before he started taking away privileges. Bucky opened his eyes barely enough to see Donnie towering over him and he gasped out, "Steve," before everything went black.

Donnie kicked Bucky in the ribs while he was knocked out and Clint came rushing in when he felt the heavy thud on the floor. He grabbed a gun from behind the counter and scared Donnie off with it before calling the cops. He couldn't hear the other end and kept repeating that he was deaf and they needed an ambulance at the store immediately.

Bucky woke up briefly in the ambulance and saw Clint staring down at him. He tried to reach for his arm but his fingers weren't moving and he didn't realize his arms and body were being restrained on the cot. He slipped back into an unconscious sleep and stayed that way for a long while.

Steve was in the middle of preparing dinner when the phone rang. It was the hospital and thank God he had Bucky put an emergency card with his name and their house number as the contact or else lord knows when it would've been that the hospital would've contacted him. His face went white as a sheet and he hung up the phone as soon as they were done. He did his best to remain calm as he turned to the girls. "Hey, uh... I have to run out, okay? I can see if my mom can come over."

---

Bucky was awake and laying on his hospital bed confused and in a lot of pain. Clint was sitting beside him and a nurse was talking to him about Bucky's injuries though Bucky couldn't make out what she was saying. None of his family was around and Bucky couldn't manage to speak to call out to Clint or the nurse to go get Steve and his sisters. All he could do was lay there and listen to the garbled noises around him.

---

Steve told the girls to behave until his mom came over and he rushed over to the hospital. He wanted the girls to know but he had to see how bad it was first. When he saw his husband lying barely conscious in the hospital bed, he rushed past Clint and the nurse to gently take Bucky's hand in his. "Hey, Sweetheart. I'm here. God, I'm so sorry."

---

It took a few moments before Bucky could register that Steve was standing over him. He saw his lips moving and heard the gentle but concerned tones of his voice but he couldn't decipher what his words were. Bucky's vision blurred a bit when he tried to focus in on Steve and he had to blink several times before he could lock eyes with him.

---

Bucky looked absolutely wrecked. His face was swollen and patched up from all the cuts and stitches he'd received. "I'm here for you, Baby," Steve said. "I'm here for you. Always." He kept his hand on Bucky's but he looked to Clint and the nurse. "Who did this to him?"

---

Clint shook his head and said, "Don't know his name. It was a big guy, blonde, tall. He seemed drunk and he definitely had some beef with Bucky. They seemed to be acquainted. Bucky's been passed out this whole time, he hasn't been able to tell us what happened."

---

Steve's stomach sank and his blood ran cold. He got a dangerous, fired look behind his eyes as he put together who had done it. He could kill the bastard, but Bucky needed his support first. "Bucky's awake," he said. "There's something wrong with him," Steve insisted. It took Bucky too long to react to him. Usually, he would be immediately talking to him and reassuring him he was fine.

---

Bucky was looking from Clint to Steve lazily following their movements as they spoke. He didn't understand why he couldn't hear what they were saying. He could hear the noise of talking but nothing got through and he wasn't a perfect lip reader like Clint so he couldn't figure it out that way. He raised his hands to his throat and gently pushed against it like it was broken and he made a groaning sound before trying his best to speak Steve's name.

---

"Hey, Baby, go easy," Steve said, gently easing Bucky's hands down from his neck. He spoke words of reassurance to Bucky for a little while but after a little bit, something dawned on him. He grabbed his pen and pad and wrote down, ‘Can you understand what I'm saying?’ and then showed him the note.

---

Bucky touched the paper and read it slowly. He looked back up to Steve and moved his head back and forth ever so slightly. He was getting frustrated. He didn't know what was going on. He knew that something was wrong and that he was in a hospital but he couldn't for the life of him remember how long he had been there or how he got there or what happened. "Girls?" he asked quietly.

---

'Home' Steve signed. He then wrote 'Do you want my mom to bring them here?' Steve turned to Clint and said, "I really appreciate you staying here for him. It means the world that you looked out for him."

---

Clint nodded and signed as he spoke to Steve so Bucky could see what was being said too. "I wish I could help more but I don't know who the guy was. Could be the same one from the other day when Reggie found him out back. I can go get the girls and your mom if you want me too." He finished and looked to Bucky for an answer, but Bucky couldn’t think clearly enough to give one, so he just stared.

---

"It's... it's okay, Clint. You've done so much already. If you'd like to go home, you can. I can look after him from here." Steve sat back down at Bucky's bedside and pet his fingers through his hair gently. He kept his eyes locked with Bucky's, waiting for any sign of him wanting or needing something.

---

Bucky stared into Steve's eyes for a long time until he started drifting back to sleep and his eyelids began to flutter shut. He fell asleep and had strange dreams about nothing in particular. When he woke up, his sisters and Sarah were all in the room with him and he was reminded of how they had just done this last year when Steve got hurt. "Becca, Lilly," he said with more clarity than before and smiled weakly to his sisters.

---

After Bucky had fallen asleep, Steve had decided to call his mom to bring the girls over. It wouldn't be fair to keep this from them. When Bucky woke up again, his sisters rushed over to hug him. Lilly was crying again and Becca looked upset but more put together. "Bucky, how bad did he hurt you? The nurses won't say."

---

Bucky wasn't strong enough to hug them back but he nuzzled his head against both of them in turn. He could basically read Lilly’s lips but her question confused him, he still couldn't remember what had happened, "Who?" he asked calmly and cocked his head to the side.

Becca crossed her arms and spit out. "Donnie Fucking Manix," and then looked to Steve as if to say, 'You got that, Steve, you got his name?"
Steve had a name now. He caught Becca's look and he gave her one back that promised hell for Donnie. Lilly put her hand on Bucky's shoulder and her bottom lip quivered. "When can you come home?" she asked. "I promise I'll take out the cat litter every day." It was a bit of desperate nonsense but she just wanted Bucky back home.

Bucky shook his head, getting overwhelmed. He couldn't make out what Lilly had said. He only barely understood her before but this time he was really lost. "What?" he said and looked to Steve and searched the room for the notepad from before.

"I think his hearing is going," Steve said as gently as he could. Lilly just burst into tears at that and Becca gave Steve an angry look for upsetting her sister. He scrambled to grab the notepad and he wrote, 'Lilly wants to know when you'll be home'

Bucky read it and shook his head, "Ask… nurse," he answered simply and watched his heart rate monitor going up and down as he heard the quietest beeping as it went. "Hungry," he whispered absentely. He didn't know what time it was or if he was allowed to eat but things were slowly piecing themselves back together the longer he stayed awake. He got bits and pieces of the attack coming back to him and could see Donnie's enraged face and drunken but accurate punches.

Lilly rushed out of the room and shouted, "Hey, I need a fucking nurse in here! My brother's hungry and he has to come home!" Steve looked mortified and he rushed out to drag her inside. "Let me go, Steve!" she said angrily. Sarah sat there in utter shock at Lilly's behavior.

Becca jumped up off Bucky's bed and went to help Steve with Lilly telling her to calm down and stop shouting. Bucky knew something was wrong and tried to sit up in the bed. He wished he could grab Lilly and hold her and make sure everything was okay but all he could do was watch her cry in Steve's arms and struggle to get down.

"Lilly, Bucky needs us to be calm. I know you're hurt, Kiddo, I know this is scary. But we have to think about what Bucky needs, okay?" Steve tried to reason, sitting her down in a chair and trying to get her attention.

Lilly shook with rage but listened to Steve and got quiet. Becca pet a hand through Lilly's long hair and hummed quietly in her ear.

A nurse peeked her head in then and asked what was wrong and if Bucky needed something. Becca was quick to tell Lilly to let Steve handle it so she didn't start swearing at the nurse to get Bucky some food and send him home.
"Bucky is hungry," Steve said immediately. "I don't think he's eaten since lunch yesterday. And I don't think he can hear what we're saying. He knows there's sound. But he can't understand the words."

The nurse nodded as Steve spoke and rang for the kitchen to send something up for Bucky as soon as they could. She also assessed Bucky's hearing and then went to have a talk with the doctor. When she returned, she said, "Dr. West believes that Bucky has some temporary sensory loss because of the concussion he has suffered. The doctor also says that it should go away in no more than a few weeks as he recovers and his brain fixes itself."

Steve sat with his mom, quietly waiting as the nurse spoke. Once they got the gist of it, he breathed out a relieved sigh and asked, "What can I do to make his recovery easy for him?"

The nurse squinted at Steve and asked, "I'm sorry, your name was on the emergency contact but your relationship was not listed Mr..." She checked Bucky's paperwork again, "Rogers. Are you family? A cousin or brother?" She was allowed to have people in Bucky's room who were not family that he allowed to be present but she wasn't about to just give out more information to this man who she wasn't sure was authorized to have it.

Steve glanced back at Bucky for a moment before steeling himself. "He's my husband," Steve said in a tone that dared her to question it or deny him information. "And please don't take this the wrong way. But my mom here is a nurse. And if my husband is mistreated in any way, she will know."

The nurse smiled a confused little smile and said, "Excuse me?" with a chuckle. "Um, how'd you manage that?" she asked. She saw the defensive gloss that came over Steve and the two girls and held up her hands quickly. "No, no," she assured them and bumped the door closed so no one outside the room could hear. She took a step closer to Steve and lowered her voice. "My girlfriend and I have been together for seven years. No one here knows about it."

Steve was afraid for Bucky's sake that he wouldn't get the treatment he deserved because he was gay but when the nurse came out to them, he nearly cried in relief. He went to Bucky's side and held his hand. "There's a priest near Queens who marries homosexual couples. I... I'm happy to talk more about it later, but right now I'm worried about getting Bucky back on his feet."

"Sure." The nurse smiled and stuck out her hand for Steve to shake, "Veronica," she introduced herself and then began explaining all the best ways to get Bucky better as soon as possible and what to do to take care of him.

Steve listened to the nurse and Bucky just stared at the two of them in quiet sleepy contemplation.
After a while, he tugged on Steve's sleeve and said once again, "Steve, hungry."

---

Steve listened intently but when Bucky tugged on his arm, he nodded his head. "Veronica, thank you so much. But I have to help him now." He planned on giving her the contact information to the church later. Steve took the tray that the kitchen had brought up and cut Bucky's lunch into tiny, little pieces. He stabbed a piece with his fork and then offered it to Bucky.

---

Bucky ate gratefully and rested his head against Steve's arm between bites. When he was finished, he glanced over at the girls and Sarah and then shut his eyes for a minute. He could remember now what had happened. He was locking up when Donnie came in and beat him up worse than before. He must have been found by Clint and brought to the hospital. Bucky opened his eyes quickly in worry for Clint's safety from Donnie and for the girls' safety and Steve's. "Donnie?" he asked Steve and clutched as firmly as he could to Steve's upper arm.

---

Steve grimaced at the name and then nodded his head. He got the pad and pen before writing, 'I'll take care of him.' He leaned down to kiss Bucky's forehead. "I love you," he said firmly.

---

Bucky knew what Steve was saying that time and he said, "Love you, Steve," in return before cuddling up against his pillows to drift off to sleep once more. He was lulled to sleep by the mumbled discussion of his family and this time his dreams were good.

---

Steve gave Bucky a smile and tucked him in once he was asleep. He turned to his mom and the girls. "Can you keep an eye on him? I have to make a quick errand."

---

***

Donnie Manix hardly ever left his favorite bar except to go to a different bar if the owner told him to shove off for the night. Today he was on his way from his apartment to his regular spot, taking his usual route and passing the usual bodegas as he went. He was far too sober for his liking and was smoking a cigarette to try to help ease himself before he got some drinks in him.

---

Steve headed off to Bucky's old usual bars and started asking around for Donnie. After getting a few more descriptions from them - he pretended he was on duty investigating a disturbance - he was able to have an accurate understanding of what he looked like. After a bit of digging, he started going around where he was most likely to be and he found him crossing the street on Park and 51st. He rushed across and hid in an alleyway until Donnie was passing and Steve's arm shot out to pull him into the alley and slam him against the brick wall.
---

Donnie dropped his cigarette as he was shoved against the wall and he tried grabbing for Steve yelling, "Who the fuck are you?" and "Look, man, I got no cash for ya and I don't wanna have to put you in the ground. You best think this through, fucker."

---

Steve gave him a harsh punch in the jaw and then grabbed his arm and spun him around so his face was pressed against the wall and his arm was twisted behind his back. Steve pressed his forearm across the back of his neck. "No, you should've thought this through before you laid a hand on Bucky again."

---

Donnie spit out blood onto the bricks and laughed heartily. "The little cocksucker sent his big strong daddy to defend his honor, huh? Tell me, is he as much a little bitch in bed as he is in a fight?" That earned Donnie a forehead slam to the wall and he groaned out in pain and used one leg to try kicking back at Steve.

---

Steve dodged the kick and twisted Donnie's shoulder out of its socket. "You listen to me," he hissed. "If I catch wind that you do anything or say anything to Bucky. I will find you. And I'll make sure your shoulder bone never sees its socket again."

---

Donnie gasped in pain and clenched his teeth together. He was too proud of a guy to yell for help so he stayed down on the ground where he had dropped and glared daggers at Steve. "I'll tell the fucking cops about this, Faggot. Don't think they will defend two low life ass-fuckers over me."

---

"I am the cops," Steve growled. He stepped on Donnie to keep him down. "I'm the cops, I'm the lawyers, I'm the goddamn President of the United States. Bucky is protected. Everyone is protected because I fucking say so. Tell me you understand and you're going to keep your hands and words to yourself."

---

Donnie spit on Steve's leg and smirked. "I'll admit I'm a little impressed with your strength. Didn't think queers were supposed to be fighters. That's partly why I never suspected Barnes. Just goes to show, you can't trust anyone to be a normal good man nowadays."

---

Steve dragged Donnie onto his feet just to give him another punch. He held him steady and reeled his arm back to hit him again but then he thought for a moment and then he leaned in to kiss his cheek, knowing that would bother him more.

---

Donnie squirmed out of Steve's grasp and tumbled back down to the ground, "Fuck off!" he yelled now. "Don't you have a broken baby Bucky to be tending to you? Why does this keep happening?"
he asked to himself and wiped angrily at the spot Steve had kissed.

---

Steve picked him back up and pinned him to the wall again. "Tell me you'll never hurt anyone ever again and I promise I won't go around town telling everyone how much you begged for me to fuck you harder," he growled and then kissed his other cheek. "I'll tell them all how loud you moaned my name."

---

Donnie's arm was still popped out and he couldn't choke out Steve like he wanted to. He didn't figure that this guy was kidding either. He didn't seem the type to be afraid of people knowing that he fucked men and he seemed the type to Donnie to proudly go around announcing whose ass he just had his dick in. Of course, this was just his perception of Steve but he wasn't going to risk it. "Fine," he gritted out. "Fucking fine. I'll leave Barnes alone."

---

"Not good enough," Steve said, crowding Donnie and looking like he could murder him. Steve would never, though. "You leave everyone alone. You so much as suspect two men or two women are together, you look the other way and don't say a damn word or do a damn thing."

---

Donnie tried backing his face away from Steve but found a wall close behind him. "I'll leave the fags the alone," he said with a snarl. "But if another one kisses me, man, I'm not just gonna let it happen, you hear? That's self-defense, that is, and I got a right to that."

---

"You don't lay a hand on them. You tell them to stop. You get out of there. But you don't lay a fucking hand on them or else I'll find you," Steve warned. He shoved Donnie once more for good measure and stalked off to go back to the hospital to check on Bucky.

---

***

Bucky was awake again when Steve came back and Lilly was using the pad of paper to talk to him. Becca looked up to Steve when he came back and noticed his shaking hands and the bruises around his knuckles. She pulled him back out the room before anyone else could notice Steve's hands and she grabbed one and held it up to look at it. "Steve, what did you do?"

---

Although he felt better knowing that Donnie wasn't going to hurt Bucky or anyone else, Steve felt rotten and unhappy. He hated being a bully and yet, he still felt he went too easy on a man who would rather see Bucky dead. He tried to push past Becca but she insisted that he go outside with her. "I made sure Donnie wouldn't hurt anyone," he said as he pulled his hand back.
She gave him a harsh look that mimicked one that Bucky might do and that showed just how much she and Bucky were related and how strong the Barnes genes were. "What did you do?" She asked again. "I only meant for you to have him arrested, I didn't want you to beat him half to death like he did to Bucky."

"Arresting him wouldn't have done any good. I only punched him a few times and dislocated his shoulder. I didn't beat him half as much as he hurt Bucky," Steve said tensely. He crossed his arms and glared for a moment before sighing. "Fighting him didn't work, so I just threatened I'd go around telling everyone he was gay if he hurt anyone else. I'm not proud of it. I just... couldn't have him hurting Bucky anymore - or anyone else."

Becca stared hard at Steve and couldn't hide that she was slightly disappointed in how he handled this. He was an officer of the law after all and could have easily arrested him and let the law do its job instead of going rogue.

"No," Steve said, pointing a finger at her when he saw that look. "Your brother is one of two people left in this world who have been with you through everything. And I'm not taking a risk of letting some homophobic, hateful man take him away."

Sometimes Steve acted similarly to Bucky and Becca wondered if she was the only sane one left of the lot of them. "You have to tell him what you did."

Steve looked back towards the room. "Yeah, now would be the best time. He can't get mad at me if he can't hear what I did."

"That doesn't count," Becca sassed. "Lilly's been writing things out for him for a while and he's been answering back in more complete sentences now than earlier. Hell, you can even just sign to him as best as you can if you want. Or you can wait for him to get better and find out on his own and then you'll have to deal with him being pissed that you didn't tell him first."

"Well, he's done stupider things and I've forgiven him," Steve said. "Listen, I'm not in the mood today to deal with self-righteousness. Are you going to let me go back to my husband or not?" It was rare that Steve got this snippy with Becca.

"Excuse me?" Becca said, once again mirroring Bucky's ways. "That's my brother first and foremost - your husband second. And don't you dare call what he's done stupid. You chose to forgive him and he's going to do that for you too but you have to tell him. What you should be worrying about right now is how you are going to get me to forgive you. I never pledged to love you through sickness and health or all that shit."

---

Steve let out a bitter laugh. "You'd be first in line to call what he's done stupid, reckless, irresponsible, and whatever else you've already called him." He glared at her. "I don't need your forgiveness. And frankly, I don't give a damn anymore about your approval so don't expect me trying to kiss up to you anymore." Between his argument with Bucky the previous morning, Bucky getting hurt, and his conflicted feelings about beating up Donnie, Steve was emotionally spent. He stormed back into the room and took a seat next to Bucky. He took the pad from Lilly and wrote to Bucky asking if he needed anything.

---

Instead of heading back into the room after Steve, Becca started down the hall towards the staircase. She was going to go spend some time in the cafeteria and then see if there were any babies in the NICU that she could watch through the window. She was fucking done with this madness for a while.

Lilly was a little peeved when the pad was taken from her but she moved to go sit by Sarah and let Bucky answer Steve with a solid, "Don't need anything," then he looked around again and asked, "Where's Becca?"

---

'Went for a walk, I guess' Steve wrote back. He probably should've been more concerned but he was too angry with her.

Sarah could tell that Steve wasn't good company right now and probably needed to talk alone with Bucky, so she turned to Lilly. "Hey, do you want to go to the gift shop and find something we can give to another family here?"

---

Lilly agreed and slipped her sweater back on since it was slightly cold out in the hospital and took off with Sarah.

Bucky watched them go then focused in on Steve again. "Lilly said… have concussion," he tried his best to say and blinked slowly, "And lesbian nurse?" he asked with a tick of a smile.

---

Steve nodded and then signed 'She is very nice'. Veronica had gone above and beyond for his sake, so being gay had a perk for once. He then signed 'Important' to get Bucky's attention. He might as well get this over with. He wrote down, 'I fought Donnie. He won't be a problem anymore. Becca is pissed.'

---

Bucky read the note slowly and tried to understand what it meant. "How'd you find him?" he asked deliberately, still looking at the paper. "Becca's upset why? What do you mean 'fought'?" There was a strange tonal shift in the buzzing in his ears and it took him a second to realize that his heart monitors beeps were increasing.
Steve grimaced and pointed at the monitors to show Bucky was working himself up. He ducked his head as he wrote, 'Asked around the bars. Pulled him into an alleyway.' He showed Bucky that note while he wrote the next, 'Becca didn't like that I didn't go to the precinct.'

"How bad?" Bucky asked simply and took the paper that said that he went to the bars and held it close to his face. "How bad of a fight?" he repeated more clearly and finally noticed the bruises on Steve's knuckles as he took one of his hands gently.

'He didn't get me,' Steve wrote. 'I punched him. Dislocated his shoulder. He can still walk.' he chewed his bottom lip and wrote, 'Wouldn't promise not to hurt you until I threatened to tell everyone he was gay.' He gave Bucky's hand a small squeeze, hoping for his forgiveness.

Bucky comprehended about half of what Steve said but he got the general concept. Steve had gone to defend him and their relationship and he understood what he had to do even if he wasn't proud of it. Steve was quietly watching Bucky as he read the note and after he was done he made eye contact with Steve and nodded slightly to say, "Good."

When he got Bucky's approval, Steve felt a few tears run down his face. He cupped the sides of Bucky's face and kissed him slowly. He thanked him over and over for his forgiveness even though Bucky wouldn't understand what he was saying. He turned back to write on the paper, 'I know you didn't want to go to the cops. Becca won't see things the same.'

"Where is she?" Bucky asked again and held Steve back from him a little. He was worried about her because he knew how she could get during arguments. She could be a little like Lilly - needing to storm off and hide away - or she could be like Bucky - feeling like everything was her fault and wanting to melt out of existence. "Find Becca?" he asked Steve worriedly. "It's a big hospital."

Steve nodded. "Alright." Before he got up, he picked up the pen and then wrote on one of Bucky's bandages on his arm, 'I love you' and added a little heart before going off to search for Becca. It took a while, but he found her in the cafeteria and sat down next to her. "Bucky wants to see you."

Becca wiped the tears from her face and took another bite of the giant ice cream she had bought. "Did you talk with him about what happened?" she asked and moved a cherry around in the hot fudge. "What did he say?"

Steve had been so goddamned angry with Becca but when he saw that she had been crying, the fight left him. "He said I should've gone to the cops," Steve said, looking away because he was bad at lying. "But he's willing to forgive me."

---

Becca pushed her ice cream over to Steve and plucked a wrapped plastic spoon from the bin on the table and offered it to him wordlessly. "You two just have to be more careful, Steve. This is now two times that one of you has been hospitalized just for being gay. And that's not even counting the damage Bucky took in high school. That's only two times since you've been together. Which hasn't been a year yet."

---

Steve thanked Becca for sharing her ice cream with him and he unwrapped the spoon so he could have some. "Donnie attacked Bucky out of nowhere. No matter how careful we are, there's so much hate in the world." He took a spoonful of ice cream. "But there's also so much love. Clint stayed with Bucky for almost three hours after he was attacked."

---

"Clint is Bucky's best friend - his only friend," Becca said. "He's an exception, Steve. Donnie used to be Bucky's friend. He cared for him just the same, brought him home after a fight or a bar crawl countless times. He made sure Bucky was safely in bed, sometimes he would crash on the couch in case Bucky tried going back out to the bars." She nodded. "He used to be Bucky's friend," she repeated solemnly.

---

Steve sighed softly and patted her back. "It hurts the most when friends aren't who you think they are," he murmured. "Sometimes our best friends are the ones that hurt us most and sometimes, people we thought we hated are actually the kindest." He shrugged. "You have to look for the good in the world."

---

Becca took the ice cream back and ate some more before passing it off so Steve could finish it. She stood with a resigned, "Whatever, Steve. Let's get back to Bucky," and waited for him to join her so they could trudge their way back up to Bucky's room.

---

Steve got up and started walking back. "I'm going to always protect him," Steve said as they walked. "God willing, one of these days we won't have to worry about stuff like this anymore."

---

Lilly and Sarah were back with Bucky and Lilly was showing off the candy that Sarah had bought for her while she had a lollipop stuck in the side of her mouth obstructing her words that Bucky couldn't hear anyway. Becca went immediately over to Bucky and gave him a light hug to which he responded, "You okay?"

---

Becca shrugged her shoulders in response. Both Steve and Bucky had been in the hospital for serious injuries within months of each other and this was just the beginning. This wasn't going to be an easy time for any of them. She took the paper and wrote, 'You and Steve have to be more careful.'
Bucky nodded and promised they would be. He motioned for Becca to hug him again and he pulled her in as tight as his body would allow before it hurt.

After a few more minutes of Lilly eating candy and chattering away about nothing, Bucky got Steve's attention and said slowly, "Ask nurse when I can go home."

---

Steve nodded and headed out to find when Bucky could leave. When he returned, he looked a little deflated. He wrote down "Two days, maybe three. They want to monitor your head injury." Which sucked because they were supposed to go to a museum exhibit that would now close before Bucky got out.

---

Bucky blinked a few times then murmured, "Okay, three days." He grabbed for Lilly's hand so she would look at him so he could say, "Just three days," and punctuated it with a little squeeze to her palm. She nodded and tried not to cry again. The girls would need to head back home soon. They still had school to worry about and Bucky wasn't going to be the cause of Becca's first absence.

---

Steve kissed Bucky's cheek and kept them all company until Sarah walked the girls back home. "I am going to have to head to my shift tomorrow. I've already taken off too much work," he mumbled. "But my mom can keep you company."

---

Bucky tried his best to understand what Steve said but he couldn't get it. He signed, 'Notepad' to Steve and pointed down at it. While Steve was out looking for Becca, Lilly had explained to him what the nurse had said about his concussion causing some sensory issues that should resolve as his head healed but he was still scared about it.

---

Steve kept forgetting that Bucky couldn't hear, so he wrote down what he had just told his husband. He worked his fingers through Bucky's hair and then leaned down to kiss his forehead apologetically.

---

Bucky read the note and nodded slightly. "I'll be fine alone," he said, "I have the lesbian nurse," he added with a smile.

They sat together quietly for a few minutes before Bucky decided he needed to address the argument they had had before he stormed out to go to work. 'Steve, I'm sorry for the fight.' He signed and then said, "Argument, yesterday," in case Steve didn't get what he was saying.

---

Steve's features softened and he brushed their lips together. He then wrote back, 'I'm sorry, too.' He sighed heavily and added, 'I need to stop trying to change your lives so much.' It wasn't gaining him any more respect anyway.
"Need to just work together more," Bucky said with a weak smile. He was feeling really tired and he pressed his hand to Steve's with as much strength as he could as a goodbye and said, "I need sleep."

Steve nodded his head and pressed their lips together one more time. He fluffed Bucky's pillow and then tucked him in so he could sleep. "I love you," he said firmly then touched the bandage he wrote it on. "I love you, Bucky."
During the remainder of his stay at the hospital, Bucky had become acquainted with Veronica and they had spent several hours talking back and forth with Veronica using the notepad. Mostly they discussed their partners and Bucky explained what had happened with Donnie to land him in the hospital in the first place. On the day that he was allowed to go home, both girls were at school and Steve was at work. Sarah came to the hospital to bring Bucky home and Veronica took her lunch break at the same time so she could help get him back safely.

---

Steve felt awful that he couldn't bring Bucky home and greet him, but there wasn't anything he could've done about it. Steve came home a few hours later and he rushed over to Bucky and wrapped his arms around him. "I'm so happy to see you home, Baby."

---

Bucky had been staying put on the couch since he got home and Sarah had promised to stay with him until Steve got back. She had just finished making him a snack when Steve arrived. Bucky still didn't hear everything perfectly but it was at least good enough that he could understand the words if he took a second to think about them. "How was work?" he asked Steve and leaned against him.

---

"Long," Steve said and wrapped his arm around Bucky’s shoulders to snuggle him close. He kissed his temple and gave him a concerned look. "Dinner?" he asked, not sure if Bucky wanted something cooked specifically.

---

"Anything," Bucky answered. The girls came home from school a few minutes later and Lilly yelped when she saw Bucky and went to the couch to curl up next to him. "Easy, Lil," he said, still in a bunch of pain. Becca came over and kissed his head before heading to the kitchen to help Steve cook.

---

Steve wanted to spend more time with Bucky but the girls got home sooner than he thought and they were hungry. When Becca came into the kitchen to help, Steve asked, "How was school today?"

---

Becca shrugged with a frown, "Mine was fine. Passed a test, got a paper back - I got a ninety-seven percent on it." She turned around and leaned against the kitchen counter and stared at Lilly then looked to Steve. "Ask Lilly why she's limping."

---

When she mentioned Lilly limping, concern crossed Steve’s face. He pretended that he had to go get something from his room but stopped as he passed Lilly. "Hey, Kiddo, what happened to your leg?"
Lilly, who was still cuddled up next to Bucky, looked from him to Steve. It was obvious Bucky hadn't understood what Steve had asked her so she tilted her head towards Steve and whispered in resignation. "I was fighting this kid and I was doing really well but he pushed me into a snow bank and I twisted my ankle."

---

"Why were you fighting with him?" Steve asked, taking a seat next to the two of them. "Does this kid usually give you trouble?" He gave Bucky a look that promised he would explain when they were done talking.

---

Lilly licked her lips nervously then looked to Becca for help. Becca came over and gestured for her to go on. "He's in Becca's class. His dad is friends with Donnie Manix. He overheard them talking about us and he tried picking on Becca saying that our family was a bunch of queers. She was doing fine until he said it would've been better for Bucky to join our parents in the cemetery. Then I had to step in cause Becca can't fight."

---

Steve's face fell and it drained of color as he looked over to Bucky briefly. He couldn't imagine losing Bucky. He reached out and gave Lilly's hand a squeeze. "You shouldn't have to fight anyone. Especially boys older than you are. But I'm proud you stood up for us." He let go and sighed. "There's going to be a lot of mean people. It may be best to keep your head down so you won't get so hurt. Can I get you some ice?"

---

"The fucks going on?" Bucky asked as usual. He got that something was wrong with Lilly but no one was speaking loud and clear enough for him to understand what it was. Becca went ahead and fetched some ice for Lilly's ankle and Bucky watched her intently. "What happened to Lilly?"

---

"Fight," Steve said to Bucky. He wrote down in a notebook, ‘Donnie's friend's son was instigating Becca and Lilly.’ He let out a heavy sigh and patted Lilly's shoulder. "You don't have to fight for us. You know that, right?"

---

Lilly looked to Steve sternly and then held Bucky's hand. "Yes I do," she said with conviction and nodded at him. "I was fighting for Becca and Bucky and you and me. This is my family, dammit. No one gets taken away."

---

"And what if something happens to you because of that? Your brother and sister and I don't want you to get taken away from us because some jerk was saying bad stuff," Steve explained.

---

Bucky looked on and occasionally took the papers that Becca handed him with explanations as to what the two of them were saying. He spoke up then, "How about if you have a problem at school you go to a teacher or come tell me or Steve when you get home, okay?"
"Like that'll do any good," Lilly huffed, giving a shake of her head so Bucky would know right away that she disagreed.

Steve let out a sigh and nudged her gently. "Today it's a twisted ankle. Tomorrow you could end up like Bucky. We don't want that for you."

Everything was tense. Lilly was pissed because all she did was try to defend Becca at school. She thought she had done a good job but now it seemed like no one even cared that she was willing and strong enough to fight for her family. "Fine," she spit out, "I'll just leave you and Bucky to fight for us. You both have such a good track record of coming out of things perfectly fine after all." She sassed and then stormed off to her room taking Raphael with her.

Steve grimaced and ran his fingers nervously through his hair before getting up and going to his room to grab a small spray can. He knocked on Lilly's door before walking in. "Let me talk to you for a minute," he said softly.

Lilly glared at him when he entered and held Raph close to her chest. "I was just trying to help Becca. She isn't a fighter," she defended but let Steve come into her room and close the door. "What do you want?"

"I know you were, Kiddo. I know you were looking out for your family." He sat down next to her and held out the little can. "This is pepper spray. This should never, ever be your first line of defense. But if someone harasses you and Becca and you can't get an adult to help you, this is how you get them to stop without getting yourself hurt."

Lilly took the can tentatively and examined it. She could get on board with having pepper spray. She would just threaten dumbass kids to back off by showing it to them as a warning. "Thanks..." she mumbled. "Do you have one for Becca in case I'm not around?"

"I only have one on me. But I can bring another home after work tomorrow. But I'm serious - you may get in trouble for having this at school. But it's legal for you to carry it everywhere else," Steve said. "You can't abuse having this, even if you're just threatening someone."

Lilly pursed her lips and nodded. "I'll be careful with it. I promise." She handed the cat to Steve so she could go put the pepper spray securely in a pouch in her backpack and then returned to take Raphael back. "Thanks, Steve. I'm sorry I yelled."
"It's alright, Lil," he said. "I know your heart was in the right place and it's no different from what I would've done." He gave Raphael a kiss and then passed him back to her. "I love you, Monster. Please be safe." He headed back out to check on Becca and Bucky.

---

Bucky was lying with his legs propped up on the coffee table and leaning back against the couch. Becca was braiding his hair and talking to him about her day loud enough so he could get bits and pieces of it. When she saw Steve she said, "And Steve and I are going to finish making dinner. We went with tacos tonight. Hopefully, Lilly will eat it."

---

Steve kissed Bucky's cheek and made sure he had snacks and water available before he went back to finish up dinner with Becca. He called for Lilly and had them all gathered around the table. "So I toasted all of the taco shells a little in butter and herbs to give it extra flavor," he explained.

---

Lilly stared at them and picked one up to sniff it. "Lilly, just try it," Becca said grumpily and helped Bucky get food on his plate.

Bucky said, "Pray, Steve," mostly to remind his sisters to wait for Steve to do his thing before they ate the food that Steve put time into making every day. Bucky was going to do his best to make sure he and his sisters both showed Steve a little more gratitude and respect for all he did.

---

Steve gave Bucky an appreciative smile and then gave a quick prayer, thanking God for making sure they made it to the table as a family and then asking him to look over Becca and Lilly at school. He then gave them the go ahead to eat. He gave a thumbs up at Bucky with a hopeful look to ask if Bucky liked the food.

---

"Yes, it's good, you giant dope," Bucky said to Steve and quieted down so he could eat. After he finished he got up and went to the fridge to grab a paper from under the magnets and hand it to Steve. "Veronica left her number in case we need anything. She also wants us over for dinner sometime."

---

Steve got ridiculously excited over that. "Oh my god, we get to do a couples dinner?" He beamed. Steve worried that it would be too long before they could have dinner and hang around with another couple. "As soon as you're feeling better, we have to go over."

---

Bucky didn't get everything he said, but, clearly, Steve was excited at the prospect that they might have some new friends since neither of them really had any except Clint and Natasha. "She also said thank you for the information about Father Frank."

---

Lilly wrote what Steve said down for Bucky since Steve was too excited to remember that Bucky couldn't hear him so well anymore. "I'm so glad - oh..." he signed 'Very happy. Veronica marry maybe?"

---

"I mean, she said that she wasn't sure since neither of them are in the church," Bucky answered and signed at the same time so Steve could learn while they talked in case it came in handy later. "I didn't get her girlfriend’s name, did you?"

---

Steve was always impressed with how much sign language Bucky knew. It was far better than his own. 'Laura,' Steve spelled out. ‘Also nurse.’ Steve had to spell out ‘nurse’ as well because he forgot the word in sign language.

---

Bucky signed by tapping an 'N' letter on his wrist to show 'taking a pulse' which was the sign for nurse. "Laura. Okay. Then I guess we can go to Veronica and Laura's sometime soon if you want to."

---

Steve let out a huff when Bucky showed him because it was so obvious and he couldn't believe he forgot that one. 'Yes,' he signed back. 'Do you want to?' Steve was all ready to make new friends but Bucky maybe didn't share the same sentiment.

---

Bucky shrugged and took a drink of his water. "If you want to, I will go," he answered and watched Becca start to clean up the table. Bucky wasn't good with making friends. He didn't really like sharing or talking about anything important or meaningful. Any friends he ever had had been surface friends who hardly actually knew him. They just saw his charm and humor and wanted to be around him occasionally. Clint was the only one who actually knew him.

---

Steve kind of took it that Bucky was only tolerating the meet-up for his sake. He could live with that. He would just have to hang out alone in the future if Bucky didn't want to go. 'Great!' he signed back. He leaned over the table to kiss him. 'Can you play guitar later?' Steve asked in sign.

---

"Guess I can," Bucky said. "I won't be able to hear if I'm messing it up but I can try." He let his family clear up after dinner while he went to huddle up in bed and rest. After a while, the girls went to get ready for bed and Steve came into their room after having made sure that everything was done for the night.

---

Steve was careful as he laid down next to Bucky. He missed being able to sleep next to his husband and was quick to wrap his arms around him. He brushed his lips against Bucky's cheek and signed 'Gave Lilly....' then he spelled out 'pepper spray' before signing ‘protect’.
Bucky nodded and snuggled against Steve, careful not to disturb his injuries. "Did you tell her how to use it?" he asked, "She's never had pepper spray before." Bucky was grateful that Steve thought to do that. He wondered why they hadn't done that before. Other than the school not being too pleased about kids carrying pepper spray, it wouldn't have been a problem.

---

Steve shook his head. 'Tomorrow' he signed, but the look on his face showed that he had a talk with her about not abusing the stuff. 'Kiss me?' Steve signed then leaned his cheek over for Bucky.

---

Bucky gingerly took Steve's face in his hands and pulled him in for a gentle kiss. "I love you," he said and nestled his head against Steve's neck. "Let's not go to the hospital again for at least a year. Sound like a plan?"

---

Steve hummed in approval at the kiss and worked his hands through Bucky's hair. "Agreed," he said. "Especially when..." Steve spelled out 'Seneca' and then signed 'fishing'.

---

"How long until it's warm enough for us to go?" Bucky asked and pet a hand down Steve's chest lightly. He was getting tired of the cold. Not that he wasn't used to it, and it didn't really bother him too much but he was just ready for it to be warmer and for his walk to work to not be barricaded by snow banks on every block.

---

"August," Steve joked. Ideally, they could go in late April or early May if Bucky wanted warm weather. He picked up Bucky's hand and kissed the back of his knuckles. He signed to him, 'Will stop changing house. Will let you control'. He still felt bad about their argument.

---

Bucky sighed and shook his head. "No, Baby, that's not what I wanted. I just want you and I to work together on things. We can set up an organization plan that you like that is also feasible for me and the girls to follow. They just need direction but not passive suggestions like backpack hooks. We just need to get it together and then keep it together, okay?"

---

Steve nodded his head. After a moment of hesitation, he signed, 'So I can still cook?' Steve loved making nutritious meals for them all. It made him feel good and like he was contributing more.

---

"Yes, you can cook." Bucky chuckled. "Just be the type of chef who allows cereal or pancakes for dinner every so often, okay?" He reached for his pain medicine from his nightstand and took it before sinking down into his pillow. "Alright, I'm so beat, Steve. I need sleep."
Tonight, Bucky and Steve were going to go to Veronica and Laura’s for dinner. After about two weeks, they finally found the time that lined up with all of their schedules. Between a cop, two nurses, and the only reliable closer at the record store, it was a small miracle that they found time off all together. Steve messed with his hair and put on his best button-down, wanting to make a good impression on their new friends.

---

Bucky was mostly moving around and functioning back to normal now. He could basically hear fine again but everything was just a little muffled and he and Steve still signed while they talked out of habit. He watched Steve fuss with himself and rolled his eyes a bit. "Babe, I don't think they are going to care what you look like," he said as he shuffled through Steve's cardigans to find one he wanted to wear over the blue button down that Steve told him he had to wear. Bucky didn't bother doing anything with his hair and just brushed it a little so it wouldn't be in the way. Becca had offered to braid it again but Bucky preferred it in his face.

---

"But this is our first couples dinner. We have to look presentable," Steve defended. "We can't be the sloppy gay couple. We have to be the handsome, well-dressed ones. You got the handsome down, so I have to get the well-dressed." He adjusted with Bucky's hair a little. "The cardigan you're looking for is already hanging on the doorknob."

---

"Stop messing with my hair," Bucky huffed and shook out his head so his hair fell back in place. He grabbed the dark grey cardigan and slipped it on. "What if I don't want to play into homosexual stereotypes? What if I want to be the dirty gay hippie that you know and love? I mean Veronica's already seen me in a hospital gown and broken to bits."

---

"Well, you had an excuse for looking like shit back then. Now you've got nothing but pure laziness to justify your dirty hippie look." Steve smiled and pecked Bucky's lips to show he didn't mean anything by it. "Besides, don't we kind of not fit the stereotype anyway?"

---

"We definitely don't fit the norm, no," Bucky agreed and adjusted his shirt a little. "Not that it's better one way or the other." He went to look at himself in the mirror and felt out of place in the collared shirt. He usually wore sweaters and t-shirts but never collared shirts. He felt too closed up and it was bugging him. But Steve had wanted him to wear this blue button shirt so he had to just deal with it.

---

Steve thought that the shirt looked gorgeous on his husband and it really brought out his eyes. But when he had a good look at how uncomfortable Bucky was wearing it, he sighed and walked up to hug him from behind. He kissed at his neck as he unbuttoned the shirt. "Fine, wear what makes you happy."
Bucky flicked Steve's fingers away and started buttoning the shirt back up. "No, I'll wear it," he resigned and pet his hand through Steve's hair. "I won't be pleased about it but I do like how you keep looking at me in it. And you just have to promise you'll take it off me when we get home."

---

"You just look so good in it," Steve hummed. "Shows off that chest of yours, unlike those loose shirts you wear." He nibbled at Bucky's ear and promised, "I'll take everything off you when we get home." He gave Bucky's ass an appreciative squeeze before swatting it to get him moving.

---

Bucky walked slower than Steve to Veronica and Laura's apartment. He was slightly limping still and his ribs still shook painfully when he breathed. They had to make a couple stops on the way so Bucky could sit down on a snowy bench and rest for a second. Once they got there, they were greeted by one very enthusiastic Veronica and a slightly shyer but still welcoming Laura.

---

Steve was patient and let Bucky rest whenever he needed to. He didn't rush him up and when they arrived a little late, Steve said, "Sorry we're late. I kind of took too long getting my hair right." He gave them both a hug hello and he introduced Bucky to Laura. "Your place is so nice. I love the art."

---

Bucky shook both their hands and looked around. While Steve was distracted by talking with Veronica about the art, Bucky searched around for a record player and eventually found it. He was looking it over when Laura came over and showed off her collection. It was decidedly much less than Bucky's but she had some good stuff.

---

Steve chattered with Veronica, geeking out a little over art styles until she guided him over to the record player where Bucky and Laura were. "So how did you two meet?" Veronica asked, placing an arm around her girlfriend.

---

Bucky nodded at the David Bowie albums that Laura had before easing them back into her record holder and moving to stand by Steve. "My sister ran away and Steve found her lost in New York," he said simply and gestured to Steve to give input if he liked. Steve was much more excited to be here with another couple and would probably be more apt to give both their life stories if asked.

---

"Was that the younger one who was swearing up and down the hallway to get you some food?" Veronica asked with an amused smile. She had liked Lilly even if she was a bit pushy.

Steve nodded his head. "She's a lot like her brother. She's real passionate about what she cares about and likes to swear."

---

"Both my sisters are that way. One is loud with her passion and one is quietly intense about it." Bucky pocketed his hands and leaned a little closer into Steve's space. "But, yes, we met because Lilly decided to take a day trip in New York instead of go to school and then I came barreling into the station and right into Steve."

---

Steve wrapped an arm proudly around Bucky. "I drove them all home and Bucky looked like he hadn't had a night to himself in years, so I took him out to dinner," Steve said. "We didn't know for sure that the other was gay at the start of it. We knew by the end of it."

---

"Well, I had reason to be confused," Bucky said. "You were either staring at me so much because you were gay or because you are a cop and it's just habit to analyze someone like that. But I dropped hints for you that you didn't pick up either. I mentioned Disco Dandy's, the gay club downtown, and he didn't even blink so I figured it was a lost cause."

---

"I was raised Catholic, so going to a gay club didn't even cross my mind. While it's flattering that Bucky thought I knew the city so well enough to know all the gay bars around, that wasn't the case," Steve joked.

Veronica laughed a little. "It's nice that your mom is so accepting of you two, with her being religious and all that."

---

Bucky nodded. "Yeah, she's pretty wonderful. She helps with the girls a lot and it's nice having a parent around again since mine are both gone." He gestured to the two of the women and returned the favor to ask, "How did the two of you meet?"

---

Laura gave Bucky a sympathetic look when he mentioned both of his parents were dead. "We met in nursing school," Veronica said. "I thought I was straight at the time but after I got dumped by my boyfriend, I got really close with Laura and we've been together ever since."

---

Laura gently nudged Veronica and said, "Ronnie, I think dinner should be ready now if we want to move this to the table."

Bucky noticed the nickname that Laura had for her girlfriend and he really liked it. It was kind of like how he wasn't 'James' to his sisters or Steve or Clint. Veronica was probably 'Ronnie' to their friends and family too.

---

Steve went to the table with the other two and couldn't stop the smile on his face. It felt so nice to have a couple's dinner and go out with Bucky where he could be openly affectionate. "I'm so glad you ended up being our nurse," Steve said. "I'm sure you know what it's like, but people who know we're gay aren't always the nicest. I was shot on duty and out of work for months cause my coworker locked me in a raid to die. How've you two managed for so long without getting into trouble?"
"Well," Veronica said and shrugged. "We just haven't told anyone out right about us. Two women living together is less 'out of the ordinary' then two men living together. People just assume we are sisters or spinsters or something." She paused and slipped a hand over Laura's, "Our families know, mine was understanding but Laura's family wasn't so much. They haven't talked to her since she told them she was with me."

---

Steve frowned and then said, "Well... I know it's not the same, but my mom loves having big, family gatherings. And you two are welcome over at any holiday." If their place was too small to fit them, he knew his mom would be happy to share her dinner table with them.

---

Bucky shot a curious look to Steve quickly. He really was such a welcoming guy. Which was pretty different from Bucky who could be charming but rarely invited people over for things like dinner or family gatherings. He wondered what it would be like once they had a house and Steve was a stay-at-home dad. Bucky would probably come home to hoards of housewives and their babies having a play date.

---

Steve caught the look and gave him an apologetic glance as if to ask if it was all right if he had invited them. "Bucky can be talkative if you ask him about music. Or if you tell him that The Clash aren't as good as The Police," he said to the women, nudging Bucky lightly.

---

"Steve just likes The Police because he is one. He knows their music isn't as good as the Ramones or The Clash or The Kinks or David Bowie or honestly most anyone," Bucky sassed back at Steve and took Laura's lead and started to eat. "I am sorry I'm not much company, though. I'm still in some pain so I get tired quickly and my hearing is still sort of muffled so I might not understand at first."

---

Veronica smiled politely. "We're not huge music fans, but we like to listen to some stuff," she explained. "As for the pain, is there anything either of us can get you to help?" she asked. "I can probably make a few over the counter painkillers find their way to you."

---

"No, I'm fine, honestly," Bucky assured her. "Thank you. You were very helpful at the hospital and even though I was out of it, I'm told by my family that you were very patient and understanding with us and especially dealing with Lilly. I'm just ready to be back to normal again. I made Steve promise that we won't be back in the hospital for at least a year."

---

Steve took a few more bites of his food before leaning in to kiss Bucky's cheek lightly. "Yeah. We have to stay healthy for our honeymoon. And I think his sisters have dealt with enough of their family in a hospital to last a lifetime."
Bucky nodded in agreement. Between the last two hospital stays, his attempted suicide, their grandmother’s death, and when Lilly had the flu really badly, the Barnes’ had spent much too much time in the hospital in the past four years. After they all finished eating, they move to the coffee table to sit and chat for a bit. Veronica brought out a nice bottle of wine and offered to pour some for them all. Bucky looked to Steve hopefully and bit his lip waiting to see if he was allowed to drink or not.

Steve gave Bucky a small nod to show that he was allowed a little. Some wine with friends wouldn't hurt. "Thank you so much for having us over, by the way," Steve said. "The dinner was so good. It’s weird to not be the one cooking. I usually make everything at our place.”

Bucky gratefully took the wine and had a few generous sips of it before setting it down on the coffee table so he didn't down the whole glass in front of their hosts. ”That's the real reason why I keep Steve around. I don't like cooking and I'm no good at it anyway."

Laura shrugged. "It's a lot of work and a little over rated," she said. "I like the taste of a home cooked meal, though. So sometimes it's worth it."

Steve stared at Bucky warmly and decided, "It's always worth it for me. I love providing. And now that I have three people who need good meals, I get to do it a lot."

They chatted on a while more and Bucky and Laura both went through about two glasses of wine each. After about two hours, Bucky checked the clock and decided it was about time they head home. The girls were probably not in bed and they needed to be and he was getting tired but he really wanted to fuck Steve before the night was over. They hadn't done it since Bucky was injured because he hurt too much before but he knew he could take it today. "You think we should head back?" he asked Steve quietly and pointed at the clock, "Ten bucks says Lilly isn't showered yet."

Steve was having a good time out but he didn't want to force Bucky to stay any longer than he wanted to. "Yeah, they'll probably need some taking care of," he agreed. He smiled over at the two women. "He's such a good older brother. I'm sorry we have to leave so soon, but we really had a good time today."

"Time out by ourselves or with friends is definitely limited when I have two kids to take care of," Bucky said and shook Veronica and Laura's hands before heading to the door, waiting for Steve.

Steve gave both women a hug and promised to keep in touch. He left their place with a big smile on his face. "Aren't they so nice, Bucky? We finally have a couple we can have game nights with and stuff. Maybe we can even do double dates and it'll look like we're straight."
Bucky gave Steve a sideways glance as they walked down the street in the dark of the city lit only by dull street lamps. "I don't know if any of us could act straight while we have our partners sitting right next to us on a date. You stare at me too much and Veronica likes touching Laura at all times." He chuckled and didn't notice that he was still clutching tightly to Steve's hand as they went.

Steve brushed his thumb over Bucky's hand. He wanted to hold it the whole way home, but he also didn't want to see Bucky in the hospital again. He reluctantly let go. "We could still try," he said. "I think Becca and Lilly would love to have them around. Nothing like having good female role models in their life."

When his hand was dropped, Bucky apologized quietly, finally realizing that he hadn't let go when they got outside. He missed Steve's warm touch immediately and it made him angry all over again. "Good role models? Steve, we hardly know them. They seem nice but we don't really know what they are like. Besides, the girls have your mother and Natasha as the women in their lives already."

"They're two nurses," Steve said. "And they've been together for years. They've got to be doing something right. The more role models, the better. Natasha and my mom are amazing, but you can never have too many good influences."

Bucky thought for a few minutes as they walked. "You know I just worry about them getting attached to people," Bucky relented and held open the door to their apartment building. He trudged up the stairs behind Steve and wondered if he was ever not going to fret about his sisters and try to minimize potential hurt and heartache as much as possible.

"You can't protect them from life, Buck," Steve said softly. "They're going to make friends with plenty of people they won't talk to in a year's time. What matters are the people that stay." When they got into the house, Lilly and Becca were failing at an attempt of making chocolate lava cake.

Bucky took in the mess of flour and cocoa powder and lots of goopy baking utensils strewn about the kitchen. He also noticed Raphael huddled in the corner of the counter top with what appeared to be molasses on his paws that he was desperately trying to lick off. "Jesus fucking Christ," Bucky breathed and rolled his eyes. He slowly took off Steve's cardigan and tossed it on the couch. He rolled up the sleeves of the button down and dove into the mess to start cleaning up. "Why the fuck did you think making a dessert while no one was home was a good idea?"

The mess the girls made was gigantic. But it was also endearing to Steve - it reminded him how much he loved his home and his family. Becca looked up from her mixing bowl. "I borrowed a recipe book from the library and wanted to try it out. How was I supposed to know baking powder and baking soda wasn't the same thing?" she defended. Steve grabbed some wet wipes and began to clean off the cat.

"Look at the label, Becs." Bucky sighed and shoved a finger against the bag of baking soda. "They do two different things. You're the one who's good at science, you should know." He tossed everything he could directly into the sink and passed a wet cloth to Lilly to start cleaning up the counter. "Just get the counter and the floor clean then get yourselves to bed. I'll wash all this shit before I go to sleep."

"But I'm not done baking," Becca protested.

Steve patted her arm and promised, "I'll help you two bake a cake next time, but it's late right now."

Becca scoffed as she turned to clean up. "You two are just rushing us off to bed so you can fuck."

Bucky let out a humorless laugh, "Well, thanks to your mess that I'll be up for a while cleaning, whatever plans I might have had with Steve are getting pushed back or maybe canceled since I'm already really tired and in pain... and now cranky, too."

"No one's asking you to clean it, Bucky, I'm capable of cleaning up everything myself," Becca snipped at him. "You've made messes worse than this that I've cleaned up." At this point, Steve ushered Lilly to the bathroom so she could wash up. He didn't want her to deal with her siblings fighting, either.

"I'm trying to make sure you get to bed at a reasonable time so you can wake up and get to school and won't ruin your perfect attendance that you care about so much." Bucky's voice rose as he spoke and he looked around quickly and found that Steve and Lilly had both disappeared. "And what messes are you even talking about? You haven't had to clean me up in a long while."

"Just cause I haven't had to clean you up in a while doesn't mean I haven't had to do it ever," she argued as she hastily wiped down the table. "I can handle going to bed late now and then. It's not like I'm out partying. I'm baking in my own fucking home."

Bucky was grumpily scrubbing the dishes and trying not to get anything on Steve's shirt. "It's fine that you want to bake a cake with Lilly but you know I don't like when you use the oven when no one is around. And just because you can stay up late sometimes doesn't mean you should on school nights. And Lilly for sure shouldn't be up late. It's hard enough getting her up in the morning as it is."

"Whatever," Becca said moodily before stomping out of the kitchen.

Steve got back and opened his mouth to tell her not to disrespect Bucky like that but he bit his tongue and put a hand on Bucky's shoulder. "Go rest. I'll take care of this."

---

Bucky watched Becca go and sunk into Steve for comfort for a second. "If we do it together it'll be done faster," he said and dried his hands so he could unbutton the nice blue shirt and drape it on a chair. He was just in a white A-shirt and his nice grey pants and he looked sort of like his father when he came home after a long day and wanted to lounge around.

---

Steve kissed Bucky’s neck and went back to cleaning up with his husband. "Should I have told Becca not to give you an attitude?" He wanted to support Bucky but not step on their toes.

---

"No, it's fine," Bucky sighed. "She wouldn't have listened anyway. Do you think I shouldn't have gotten so mad about all this?" he asked and gestured at the mess. "I mean, they know not to use the oven when we aren't here and Lilly needs to get to bed earlier than Becca."

---

"I think you have reason to be upset. Using the oven can be dangerous and she should've been more mindful of their bed time," Steve said. "But it is rare that Becca gets to do the things she wants to around here. It's usually Lilly who drives what we do with them."

---

"What should we do then?" Bucky asked and handed Steve things to dry. "Let Becca direct her own bedtime from now on? I mean it's hard to get Lilly to back down when she wants to do something so I don't know what would be a good solution."

---

"Becca’s a teenager and she’s in high school," Steve said. "I don't think we should give in to her but I guess she's old enough to make the right decision or live with the consequences of her bad ones. We can tell Lilly that Becca earned this freedom and if she wants it too, she has to be just as responsible."

---

"I guess," Bucky said and drained the sink after cleaning the last utensil. "She's the one who wants to keep her perfect attendance so I doubt she will be irresponsible with her sleep schedule." He leaned his chest against Steve's back as he finished drying the last of it. "And we can just do something else for Lilly maybe... I don't know."

---

Steve reached back to play with Bucky's hair gently. "We will figure something out," he said. "You've dealt with a lot worse on your own. I'm sure we will come up with an even better solution together. But right now, I'm more interested in taking off the rest of your clothes." Raphael then let out a huge, hungry meow at them.
Bucky picked up Raph and scratched behind his ears before going to dig into his food bag to get him some more to eat. "Maybe not more responsibility for Lilly. Today was her turn to feed him," he said and set the cat down in front of his bowl. He then slipped his hands into the back pockets of Steve's pants and pulled their crotchets flush together. "Sorry I already started undressing. Just didn't want your nice stuff to get dirty."

---

Steve wrapped his arms firmly around Bucky's shoulders and leaned down to kiss him slowly. "Well, I think I can forgive you so long as you let me take the rest off."

---

"I'll allow it," Bucky said and started walking backwards toward their room. "Did you have fun tonight with Veronica and Laura?" he asked as he opened the door so he could push Steve inside and towards the bed.

---

Steve nodded his head and slid his hands down to grab Bucky's ass before he was pushed down on to the mattress. "Yeah. I like being able to show you off to everyone as the best husband ever."

---

"I was doing that same thing with you." Bucky gave Steve a cheesy grin and straddled him on the bed. "You know what I realized, Steve. I got hurt right after we got married so we haven't had sex since the morning in the hotel. That's nearly three weeks now. And the blow job doesn't count since I cried."

---

Steve carefully felt up Bucky's sides, wanting to touch him but still be mindful of his injuries. "Well, I'm planning on changing that," he said. "But no crying this time, got it?" He slowly started to lift Bucky's shirt up, kissing at the exposed skin.

---

"I promise. No crying." Bucky kissed the side of Steve's head and brushed his hand against Steve's short hair. "I want your dick in me," he whispered into Steve's ear and gripped at his shoulders. He knew it wasn't the most graceful way to say it, but he was a little desperate. "It's been way too long and my body isn't in as much pain anymore so I can take it."

---

Steve let out a little moan and nodded. "Yes," he agreed. "I wanted you so bad. Now I know what it was like when you had to wait for me to heal up when I was hurt." He unbuttoned Bucky's pants and started to take them off. "I want to have you on your back so I can kiss you the whole time."

---

"Put me wherever you want me." Bucky nodded enthusiastically and lifted up off of Steve so he could get his pants all the way off. "I'm all yours, Baby, every bit of me." He rolled back onto the bed and pulled Steve down with him into a kiss. He was still a little bruised up and he had to move Steve's hands off his torso so he didn't dig into the sensitive light purple bruises scattered on his rib cage.
Steve stripped Bucky down to nothing and sucked dark marks onto his body to try to mask the bruises and such all over him. "All mine, Sweetheart. Gonna fuck you real nice. Make up for all that time I didn't take advantage of having such a handsome husband."

Bucky shuttered underneath Steve's touch and made little gentle moans with every kiss and suck from him. "You know what makes me angry? Somebody other than you got to leave marks on me and there's nothing I can do to get rid of them quicker."

"Well, no one is allowed to lay a hand on you ever again," Steve growled softly, reaching down to stroke Bucky's cock lazily. "Or else I'll strike the fear of God into them for even thinking about harming you."

"Oh my fucking god, Steve, you don't know how much I love when you talk like that." Bucky could feel his dick hardening and he started to rut up into Steve's hand as he stroked him. "I love when you get possessive and just a little irrational. I love that you would do anything to protect me and you are my perfect brave officer."

Steve wouldn't say anything that wasn't true. So he kept talking. "I'll protect you and your sisters with my life, Bucky. There's not a person on this earth who can hurt any of you and get away with it." He moved lower and lower on Bucky's body until he could take his cock into his mouth and start to bob his head along the length of it. He reached for the lube in the drawer and poured some on his fingers so he could tease Bucky's hole.

Bucky eagerly spread his legs wide open for Steve and closed his eyes to pay attention to the feeling of his cock inside Steve's mouth. He silently waited for Steve to start fingering him and he took in rhythmic, patient breaths as he hooked his legs up over Steve's back.

Steve wasted no time pushing his fingers into Bucky to work him open and ready for his cock. He gave Bucky a bit of a messier blowjob than usual, wet and desperate and barely coming up for air because he missed this so damn much. When he couldn't take waiting anymore, he threw off the rest of his clothes and started to coat his dick in lube.

Bucky bit his lip and watched Steve strip his clothes off with excited heavy-lidded eyes. "I missed your body all over mine," he said, "I missed your tongue on me and your fingers stretching me and I miss that beautiful cock of yours fucking me like nothing else ever mattered."

"Fuck, I love you," Steve breathed out. He claimed Bucky's lips in a searing kiss as he slid into his hole. He moaned into Bucky's mouth and started a slow, deep rhythm to fuck his husband thoroughly.

---

Bucky relaxed his muscles and let Steve rock in and out of him methodically. He locked eyes with Steve and just watched the subtle shifts in his expression each time he pulled out and eased back in again. Bucky was so distracted that he gasped sharply when Steve sped up ever so slightly and hit his prostate a few times.

---

"You're so beautiful," Steve said in awe as he fucked Bucky smoothly. He reached down to hold one of Bucky's hands above his head. "Just look at you. And you're all mine, Gorgeous."

---

"Stop it." Bucky grinned and looked away, "It's just the beard. It's new and exciting." He reached down with his one free hand and jerked himself off while Steve fucked him.

---

"It's all of you," Steve corrected. "It's your beard and your perfect body and your charming personality and your gorgeous eyes," Steve rattled on and on, kissing him in between each praise and letting out little moans as he went.

---

"God, I haven't come in a long while and I really don't know if I'll last, Baby," Bucky said desperately and moved with Steve.

---

Steve licked a long stripe up Bucky's neck and gave him a gentle bite by his jaw. "Let me feel you come, Baby. Want to feel your ass squeeze around my dick."

---

Bucky stroked himself faster and moved his hips up and down. Steve went harder, too, and did what he could to mash up against Bucky's prostate to help him feel good. "I love this feeling. Love being attached to you and connected. And I love having you inside me and having you take me apart and-

" Bucky came unexpectedly and his ass clamped down around Steve's cock as he shot his load over his fingers and stomach.

---

Steve drank in the sight of his husband, loving when he looked all hot and desperate like this. He pushed in deeper, muscles tensing at the peak of every thrust and he rolled his hips up each time to hit that sweet spot. He continued to fuck Bucky for a few more minutes before he spilled hot spurts of come inside of him.

---

Immediately after Steve came, Bucky flipped them so he could lay on top of him for a post fuck make out session which elicited a soft growl of approval from Steve. He felt his come squish between their bodies and it was warm and pleasant on his skin. "Steve, I love you. You know that, right? You know I'll never leave you?" he asked hurriedly between kisses. Lately, Bucky had been feeling insecure and scared that something bad would happen to them again and he wanted to do what he could to assure the both of them that nothing could take them away from each other.

---

Steve dragged his nails lightly over Bucky's back and nibbled at his bottom lip. "I know, Baby, I know," he said. "I know you're going to be with me through every sunny day and every rainstorm."

---

Bucky nodded and went back to licking into Steve's mouth. They kissed for a short while longer before Bucky moved off of him to cuddle up to his side. "Hold me," he demanded and pulled Steve's arms around him. "I was thinking," he began nervously, "that tomorrow before I go to work in the evening, we could go visit my parents."

---

Steve snuggled close to Bucky and tucked Bucky's head into his chest. "I think that's a wonderful idea, Buck," he said softly. "I really wanted to tell them we were getting married, but I wanted you to be the one to give them the news."

---

"I just..." Bucky grasped onto Steve's hand and held it tightly. "After hearing about Laura's parents disowning her, I felt like I should get the fucking courage to go talk to my parents' graves. They can't hear me anyway and they can't be disappointed with me for what I've done so I need to go see them. They need to hear from me what's been happening - both the good and the bad."

---

"It's a big step for you, Buck. And I'm so proud of you for deciding to see them," Steve said. "I think you're going to feel a lot better for going there, Sweetheart. You may not think they can hear you, but I think they will. And they'll be happy you are there."

---

"You're coming with me, right?" Bucked asked with a squeeze to Steve's hand. "I need you there and I don't want Becca as a substitute because if I chicken out then she will be harsh about it. What do you work tomorrow?"

---

"Of course, I'm going with you, Beautiful," Steve assured him and kissed the top of his head. "I have the overnight shift tomorrow. If you let me sleep in, I can go with you before I head over to the precinct."

---

"Yeah, I'll take care of the girls in the morning and then just come back to bed until you get up," Bucky agreed and yawned. "How do you feel about having your mom teach Becca how to properly make that cake she was trying to do today? We can ask her to come over while we are both at work in the evening."
Steve pouted. "But I know how to make that cake." Steve loved to do everything home-related. But it was undeniable that Becca got along with Sarah more often than with Steve. "I guess I can ask my mom. I'm sure she will agree to help."

"Well, Baby, if you'd rather teach her that's fine with me. I didn't know you could make it." Bucky placed a gentle hand on the side of Steve's face. "Do you think that Becca will ever not be constantly angry at one of us for something?"

Steve chuckled and leaned into Bucky's hand. "She's a teenager. If she isn't pissed at one of us, it's cause she's sick or she wants something."

"That sounds like her," Bucky said and kissed Steve again. "I just think she gets too fed up with having to listen to me as the authority. She hates that I'm in that role now because I never was a good role model for her anyway so now she just figures whatever I say isn't really supposed to be taken seriously."

"Well, she's just got to live with it. There are plenty of parents out there less capable than you are, but they still get respect as authority figures," Steve said. "Man, I can't wait to have a kid and leave them with Becca for the day and tell them to challenge everything she says."

"You won't do that." Bucky chuckled. "You'll get on them about being respectful to their aunts just like you harp on the girls about respecting me. But Becca will hopefully one day understand just how much of a struggle it was to take over as guardian for them and suddenly be basically a single dad of two pre-teens."

"Alright, true. Then if she has kids, I hope they give her a little hell sometimes. Just sometimes," Steve said. Becca would probably run an extremely tight ship. "You've done such a good job, Bucky. It's amazing that you went through so much but still managed to keep everyone all together."

"You've said that before, Steve." Bucky rolled his eyes. "And each time you say it, I don't get any closer to agreeing. I could have done so much better. And I will do so much better for our kid. I promise you that. They won't have to see me at my worst like Becca and Lilly had to so many times."

"I don't care if I've said it before. I still believe it," Steve said. He gave Bucky an appreciative smile, happy that he wouldn't have to worry so much about Bucky keeping it together for their kid. "I can't wait to see you cuddling our little baby in your arms."
"I want to come home after a long day at work and hold our baby while you hold me and just fall asleep secure in your arms," Bucky said. "I want to make their crib by hand and I want to teach them about music and help them name their first animal. And I want to take pictures of you helping them walk around and playing with toys or reading books."

---

Steve smiled happily. "Christ, Buck, that all sounds so perfect. I want that future with you so bad." He kissed him slowly. "We are going to have all of that someday. I pray every night that all your wishes come true. So you keep wishing for that and it will happen."

---

"Okay, I will." Bucky smiled warmly and kissed Steve for a couple long minutes. "Alright, I think it's time we both went to sleep. Especially since I'm getting up to see the girls off to school, I need to sleep as much as I can."

---

Steve played with Bucky's hair and kissed him one last time. "Alright, I'll go to sleep. Good night, Handsome." He closed his eyes and fell right asleep. He let himself relax and sleep in until almost noon, which only happened on days like these since he was typically an early bird.

---

Bucky had helped the girls to school and then went out to the store to get some things they needed like more cereal and fruit. He managed to walk past the liquor and only stare at it for a minute or so until he decided he didn't feel like getting yelled at today by Becca. However, he had picked up a pack of cigarettes and justified the purchase as a reward for not drinking. He hadn't smoked a cigarette in about a year and the first one felt terrible going through his lungs. He took the long way back to the apartment and ate some of the chocolate he had gotten in hopes that Steve wouldn't immediately notice the smell of cigarettes on his breath.

---

Steve was able to smell the smoke on Bucky right away even though he tried to cover it up. "Hey there, Mr. Nicotine," Steve teased softly after he'd gotten out of bed and kissed Bucky hello. He ran a comb through his hair and splashed some water on his face to wake up. "How was your morning?"

---

Bucky chewed his thumbnail and offered Steve some of his chocolate saying, "I only smoked two. You can check the pack. It's just for when I really want to drink and need something else. And I didn't buy any alcohol this time even though there was a price cut on some really, really good bourbon."

---

"I'm not complaining," Steve said pleasantly. "I'm happy you abstained from the booze." He took some of the chocolate and popped it into his mouth. "So what are the chances of getting a blowjob?" he asked bluntly, giving Bucky a hopeful look.
Bucky thought for a moment and slipped an arm around Steve's waist. "Promise not to tell your nurse mother about the cigarettes and I'll blow you right now," he negotiated and lightly brushed his fingers against Steve's cock.

---

"My lips are sealed," Steve promised. He pushed his hips into Bucky's hand and smiled over at him. "We got three weeks of lost time to make up for. Don't want to ruin that by being a snitch."

---

"Snitches get stitches, after all, not blowjobs," Bucky said as he guided Steve over to the edge of the bed and sat him down. "Steve," he started and rested his hands on Steve's thighs. "Would you want to maybe try sixty-nine? Or do you want to lay back and relax while I get you off? Either way is fine with me."

---

Steve tutted at him. "Here I am just looking for a nice, good old fashioned blowjob and you're mucking it up with your new-age sex moves," Steve said. He stroked a hand through Bucky's hair and said, "Let's try it."

---

"Really?" Bucky perked up and squeezed Steve's thighs. "You're going to love it. My mouth on your cock with my dick on your lips, what's not to love about all of that?" he asked and began ridding himself of his clothes hastily. "You're going to love it," he repeated and pushed Steve back against the bed so he could kiss him and stroke them together to get hard.

---

Steve let out a little laugh at how enthusiastic Bucky was about this. He already enjoyed this based on that alone. He rocked his hips slowly into Bucky's hand and hummed in approval. "Hey, aren't I supposed to get the other end of you right now?" he teased.

---

"Yes, you want to be on the bed or do you want me on the bed?" Bucky asked and let go of their dicks so he could rub his hands down Steve's arms and chest. "It's a little easier for the person on top so I don't mind being under you if you want."

---

"Let me on top for my first time at least," Steve said. "Besides, I like the sight of you under me," he added with a teasing smirk. "So come on, Handsome, let me see you all spread out and ready for me."

---

"You got it, Baby," Bucky said and quickly lied down on his back on the bed. He spread his legs slightly apart and waited for Steve to crawl up on top of him. "Scoot back just a little bit, I can't reach you," he said and tugged at Steve's hips gently.
Steve angled himself so that his hips were resting above Bucky's face. It was hard to line up at first because they were different heights. He lowered his head and started to enthusiastically kiss and bite at the insides of Bucky's thighs.

---

Bucky closed his eyes for a moment, loving what Steve was doing to him. He forgot momentarily that he was meant to be participating too and he hastily grabbed at Steve's ass and massaged his cheeks for a minute before taking the head of his cock into his mouth and licking around it.

---

Steve swore when he felt Bucky lick the tip of his cock. "Oh my god," he breathed out. This was definitely a good idea on Bucky's part. He kissed up the shaft of Bucky's dick before slowly taking it entirely into his mouth.

---

Bucky hummed around Steve's dick and leaned up into it to get as much of his length inside as possible. It was definitely more difficult for the person on their back. Of course, he could have just had them lay on their sides but it wasn't as good of a view that way. Bucky fucked his mouth on Steve's dick and gently pulled apart his ass cheeks so he could lightly rub at his tightly closed hole just for fun.

---

Steve let out a desperate, little moan when Bucky teased his hole. He kind of wanted Bucky to fuck him but he knew that wouldn't happen right now. He supported himself on one arm and started to palm at Bucky's balls while he worked his mouth over his cock, hollowing his cheeks as he bobbed his head up and down.

---

Bucky popped off of Steve just for a second to slick up his finger with spit. He took Steve's cock back into his mouth and tongued down the shaft as he gently and slowly pushed the finger into Steve's ass and started to lightly push in and out of his hole as Steve's cock pushed against the back of his throat.

---

Steve moaned in approval, sounding so fucking aroused. "Yes," he gasped out, pulling his mouth off of Bucky's dick to gasp. "Just like that." He started to suck him some more, getting a bit messy because Bucky was driving him closer and closer. His orgasm came suddenly and in no time, he was shooting down Bucky's throat.

---

Bucky wasn't ready for Steve's come and he choked a bit before swallowing. He didn't stop fingering Steve with the one lone finger yet and he sucked a little more on Steve's dick before letting it go and leaning his head against Steve's thigh.

---

"I'm sorry," Steve said in a rushed tone, then went back down to suck on Bucky's cock. He felt extra sensitive after his orgasm, so Bucky fingering his ass felt great. He reached down beneath him and began to tease Bucky's hole as well.

---

Bucky bit lightly at the skin on Steve's leg and followed it up with a lick. "It's okay," he said and flopped back on the bed. He tugged his arms behind his head. "It's really nice having your ass this close to me, just so you know. I like seeing it while you suck me off."

---

Steve pulled off to look back at Bucky and snorted when he saw how relaxed his husband looked. "You look like you're enjoying yourself too much," he joked. He mouthed sideways along Bucky's dick and licked along the vein that went up the underside. "I should take my time with this," he said thoughtfully. "I should make you ask to come."

---

Bucky chuckled and bit his lip. "That's cold. You wouldn't do that to me after I swallowed your come so nicely just now," he said hopefully and stared at Steve's ass again. "If you don't let me come I'll just have to do it myself and I know you don't like that."

---

Steve pouted because Bucky got him there. He liked being the one to get Bucky off because that's what husbands were for. He licked slowly up his cock, dragging it out as long as he could before slowly taking his dick into his mouth again. He wiggled his ass just a bit for Bucky's entertainment.

---

"Told you," Bucky said with a satisfied grin and closed his eyes again. It only took about a minute more before Bucky's hands were on Steve's thighs and he was saying hurriedly, "Okay, gonna come."

---

Steve readily swallowed Bucky's come down and he lapped innocently at the tip of his cock a few times before turning around so he could hold Bucky to his chest. "I think I found my new favorite thing that isn't just sex."

---

"Oh really?" Bucky laughed and wrapped his arms around Steve. "Sixty-nine is your new favorite thing, huh? Mr. I-was-raised-Catholic-and-new-sex-acts-scare-me," he joked and kissed Steve on the mouth so he knew he wasn't poking much fun at him.

---

"Well, I'm a Presbyterian now so I guess sixty-nine is back on the menu." Steve chuckled. "Buck, how did you deal with me before? I wasn't into anything out of the ordinary." Even now Steve was very tame but he sure felt like he dabbled in a few new things.

---

"No, you weren't," Bucky agreed. "You got real upset with me every time I tried to do what I wanted and tried to show you new things." He poked Steve's sides a little bit. "You trust me now?
You trust me to know things that you're going to like doing?"

---

"Well, I thought that I wasn't enough. You know, like normal sex was boring," Steve huffed. "But yeah, I trust you now. But I still don't want you using that damn dildo." Steve was more open sexually but still a bit possessive.

---

"Normal sex isn't boring. It's great and magical and with you, it's the best thing in the world," Bucky assured Steve. "But it can be really exciting doing something other than missionary and just trading off who is top. Our wedding night was perfect. Remember? We had a nice slow love making and then a fantastic rough fuck." He kissed Steve's neck and rolled off of him to go get dressed. "And don't remind me how lonely Phillip must be not getting touched for so long."

---

"Yeah, I suppose you're right," Steve gave in. He watched Bucky get out of bed, admiring his ass quietly. "We have sex often enough - when one of us isn't injured, at least. And I'm sure your dildo doesn't have any hard feelings about any of it."

---

"We can ask him?" Bucky teased and pointed up into the top of the closet where Phillip was stashed away. He wasn't willing to let him go yet. Not because he thought that he and Steve would ever break up and he would need it again. But because he was still trying to get Steve to cave about the whole thing. He had obeyed and not used it at all but he was going to hold out hope until he knew for sure it was a lost cause... then he would toss him.

---

"I'm not asking a dildo for its opinion," Steve said stubbornly. He loved Bucky too much to demand that he throw it out or dispose of it in a blaze of fire or something. But Steve was unlikely to change his views on it. After a moment, he also got up and started to dress. "So are we heading out now?"

---

"Yes," Bucky said and held up a patterned green sweater and a solid purple one for Steve to help him decide which to put on. "Do you want to grab a sandwich from Rustic Rocco's before we go to the cemetery?"

---

Steve pointed to the green sweater. He liked the design on it. He dressed warmly, figuring he would change into his uniform once at work so they wouldn't get stopped by people needing him. Right now, Bucky was his priority. "Sure thing."

---

They headed out and down the street towards the sandwich shop and Bucky felt fine. He wasn't nervous yet at all. But he was just getting a sandwich first so he'd probably get worked up once they were done eating. Martia was working the register when they came in and she grinned wide and waved, yelling, "Bucky Barnes, you've not come see me for weeks. I demand to know why."
Steve gave her an apologetic smile. "His doctor told him he has to watch what he eats. But after a few weeks of that, he decided that he's meant to be here for a good time and not a long time," he joked as he nudged Bucky lightly.

"These are the best sandwiches in all of New York. I'd gladly die at the hands of one of these bad boys," Bucky said and nodded to one of Martia's sons who was in the kitchen already making their sandwiches since he knew their order by heart.

Martia cocked her head to the side and frowned, "What doctor says my family's sandwiches aren't good enough for you?"

"A bad doctor, that's who," Steve answered. "But don't worry, Martia, you can expect to see us regularly around here again." He gave her a smile, then paid and thanked them once their sandwiches were ready. He nudged Bucky towards the door because he was a bad liar and didn't want Bucky to have to explain the real reason he was away for weeks.

Bucky waved goodbye and followed Steve out the door quietly. "Steve," Bucky said and flicked his arm to get him to slow down a pace. "She knows, you know," he finished and gave him a sideways glance as he unwrapped his sandwich. "About us."

"She does?" Steve asked. He stopped in his tracks and looked back at the shop. "Shit, should I go back and apologize?" If she was kind enough to treat them well, Steve felt bad for lying to her about what happened.

"No, just next time explain that you weren't aware she knew and you were just being cautious," Bucky said and walked on. "One of her sons isn't straight. Not sure if he's gay or bisexual or what but she tried setting me up with him one time. She wasn't very sneaky about it."

"Oh," Steve said dumbly, then laughed a little. "It's nice that she's trying to find her son someone good. Too bad you're already spoken for." Steve sounded a bit proud to say that and he glanced down at their rings.

As they approached the cemetery, Bucky's heart clenched and he walked a little slower. He felt a lump in his throat and his head started to hurt just slightly. His hand shot out to clench onto Steve's elbow and he gave him a look, pleading for help. Bucky hadn't been to his parents' graves since they were dug four and a half years prior.
Steve gently placed his hand over Bucky's. "It's okay, Baby," he said softly. "You'll feel better for coming here. I promise." He knew the way to their graves by now- he would swing by once a week to make sure their graves were tidy.

---

Bucky let Steve lead him over to his parents and he didn't question how he was so well versed in the route to get there. He pulled back when they approached the headstones and he could clearly read his parents' names. It took him a few moments but then he moved forward again and flopped down in a heap on his knees in front of them. Bucky completely forgot Steve was there as he let loose and started to cry with his mouth hanging open.

---

It was probably the most heart-wrenching thing Steve had seen. At least when Bucky had been attacked and injured, the anger clouded the heartbreak. But this was just pure agony to watch. He knelt down next to him and wrapped a strong arm around his shoulders. He used his other hand to brush away the hair that clung to Bucky's face from the wet tear streaks. Steve didn't say anything just yet. He gave Bucky his time to grieve.

---

Bucky's eyes fluttered shut and he gasped in a sharp breath. Sometimes he could forget just what happened to his parents and pretend they were on a long vacation and would return soon. Then he was confronted with reality and he was ripped apart all over again. Bucky let the tears cascade down his face as he reached out a tentative hand to touch the top of his father's headstone then his mother's. He leaned forward ever so slightly and choked out, "I'm so sorry."

---

Steve rubbed smooth circles over Bucky's back and he waited until he was a little less hysterical. "It's going to be okay, Sweetheart. I know they've already forgiven you." He pet his fingers through his hair. "Do you want some time alone with them? I can sit on the bench over there."

---

"No!" Bucky said quickly and stared at Steve desperately. "Don't leave me. I need you here." He entwined his fingers with Steve's and held their clasped hands on his lap as he moved his attention back to his parents to say, "So you've met Steve before. Don't know how much you've gathered about us but he's mine. My husband, I mean. It's not legal yet because America hates what it doesn't understand, but Steve's God has us covered."

---

Steve didn't mean to scare Bucky. He had only been looking to give him a little privacy if he needed it. He remained at his side and gave Bucky's hand a squeeze. "We got married right after New Year's," Steve explained. "It was really nice. And Bucky took me to a hotel to celebrate as a surprise."

---

Bucky held his ring out to the headstones and said, "And the girls helped him pick out this ring for me." He leaned against Steve and wiped the tears from his face before continuing, "I don't really know if you two ever knew I was gay. I mean, it was probably pretty obvious and you heard what my classmates said to me in high school so I'd be surprised if you didn't know. I'm sorry I never told you outright, though. I was scared. Everyone else was so harsh to me about it and it was careless of me to think that you would have been, too.”

---

"Someone who used to be real close with Bucky beat him up bad enough to send him to the hospital," Steve explained. "And I was shot because my partner wouldn't cover me and he wanted me to die." His voice was so sad. "I know you two would have been nice about it. It would have been great to have some family dinners with you. I probably would have been so nervous at first," he rambled.

---

"You would have been great," Bucky corrected and gave Steve a warm glance. "And I know Mom and Dad would have loved you so much," he added and directed himself back to his parents. "I guess I should probably tell you a bunch of stuff that you missed, right? But I don't know, the girls probably told you all the shit I've done."

---

Steve played with an end of Bucky's hair before brushing his knuckles gently over Bucky's scruff on his jaw. "Tell them anyway. I bet they miss your voice," he said. "We don't want them to hear Becca’s side of the story on everything, either."

---

"I guess that's a good point," Bucky conceded and adjusted so he wasn't kneeling, instead, sitting cross-legged in front of them. "Becca's accounts of everything have probably all been pretty accurate, though," he suggested and sighed. "I'm sure she's talked about the one-night-stands and the drinking and the fights and the countless times I've been world’s shittiest substitute parent. She's probably told you about when I was in the hospital a bit before grandma died…"

---

"She's wrong, though. You've done a great job." Steve looked back at the graves. "We're going to have a kid together," he said confidently. "Bucky's going to play music to them and sing them to sleep every night," he told Bucky's parents. "He's been through some rough times but he's better now."

---

"We are going to have a kid. Somehow we will get one and it's going to be perfect," Bucky said and brushed a hand down Steve's back. "And I want to be a lot better for that kid than I have been for the girls in these past four years. I've been better with Steve around, though." He paused and looked at the sky. "I'm not supposed to drink," Bucky added. "And it's really fucking hard especially since I've been drinking for about a decade and I really like it and it's how I cope. Guess I got that from you, Mom."

---

"He's been doing a good job staying sober. We cheat sometimes when we have something to celebrate. But he's doing so well," Steve told them. "I love him more and more every day." Steve gave Bucky's shoulder a squeeze. "Tell them about the couple we met."
Bucky cleared his throat and pulled his hair up into a loose ponytail. "Well, it’s this kind lesbian couple - Veronica and Laura. Veronica was my nurse when I was in the hospital a month ago. We had dinner at their place and I thought Steve was going to explode because it was the first couples date we had."

---

"They’re so nice. I hope we can make more gay and lesbian friends," Steve said. "But I'd be happy even if it was only ever just me and Bucky for the rest of our lives. I mean, with Becca and Lilly, too, of course."

---

"Becca, Lilly, and either Sarah or Christopher Rogers-Barnes," Bucky corrected. "That's what we've chosen for names if we get a boy or a girl. Sarah May - after Steve's mother Sarah - or Christopher Leland - with your middle name, Dad."

---

Steve smiled. "Man, I wish our kid could meet you. But we'll bring them around to come talk to you, I promise," he swore. "They're going to love you. And Bucky will tell them all about you."

---

Bucky sighed and his lip quivered. "I hate that my new family won't get to meet my old family," he said and couldn't help the tears that started again. "Steve and our baby won't get to see how wonderful you two were." He paused and looked to Steve for a moment before smiling weakly and changing the subject, "Hey, Dad, guess where we are going in the spring as a late honeymoon."

---

Steve felt bad that Bucky was so upset that he couldn't share the good things in his life with his parents. "We're going to Seneca Lake. Bucky has told me all about it. He can't talk it up enough. I'm really excited to see it in person."

---

"I'm going to show him all the places you took me, Dad," Bucky laughed and nodded. "And I'll take our baby there when they are old enough and tell them the stories you told me. And teach them to fish like you taught me. And Steve and I can help them learn how to swim in the lake."

---

"Only after they've learned to swim in the pool first," Steve insisted. "Lakes can be dangerous." He made sure no one was around before kissing Bucky's temple. "I'm happy you came to see them, Baby. I'm so proud of you."

---

Bucky leaned against Steve for a moment then stood up. "Time to go?" he asked and extended a hand to help Steve up. "Thanks for coming with me. I needed you here. It would have been maybe four more years before I did this on my own."

---
"You know I'll do anything for you," Steve said with a loving smile. "We should do this again sometime soon. And maybe we can come with your sisters as well." He paused and then asked, "Are we going to tell Becca about today?"

---

"You can tell Becca about today, I don't mind," Bucky said and started walking. "I don't necessarily want to announce it to her or anything. 'Look, Becca, I did it, get off my back.' But if it comes up we can mention it."

---

"I just think it'll make her feel better to know that you did it. When I went with them on Christmas, they both seemed upset that you haven't gone," Steve explained. "I felt bad for them."

---

"I hadn't gone because it's been too difficult to do it," Bucky said, "It's a little different being the one in charge and having to live up to your parents and not being able to handle anything. Then, on top of it, my sisters never seem to give me any slack and keep getting mad about one thing after the other and I'm just nothing like what my parents would have been for the girls in hard times." He felt like he had had to repeat himself about a million times about this. "The girls just don't get how hard this has been and how panicked I got every time I even thought about visiting Mom and Dad."

---

Steve sighed. "I know why you didn't go, Baby, and I understand. Becca can be really ruthless with you and I wish I could get her to ease up," he said. "All I was saying is that I bet they'll be really happy to hear that you decided to go today. And I hope you feel better for going, too."

---

Bucky nodded and pursed his lips. "I get it. I just feel like the second we tell them, Becca's going to have something snippy to say, don't you? I don't know. I just get the impression that I'm never going to be good enough for Becca ever again. She'll never see me like she did before our parents died."

---

"Becca will learn one day," Steve said. "Someday, she's going to mess up big time. It's going to happen, just like it does to everyone. And you're going to be there to pick her back up and then she will understand how much you do for her," he reassured.

---

They approached the record shop and Bucky stuffed his hands into his pockets. He really didn't want to work today. "I love them both so much. And I've loved being their brother and their guardian I just don't like that since I've been their guardian, I hardly get to just be their brother again."

---

"I get it," Steve repeated. "I just... I just wish I could take over that responsibility. I know it'd be weird. But I want you to get to be their brother again, you know?" He shrugged. "You deserve to get to have fun with your sisters."

---
"Steve, I love you," Bucky prefaced, "but that wouldn't work for any one of us. The girls don't listen to you as it is and I could never give them up and that would sort of feel like I was. It's a good thought with good intentions but it would tear us apart, I think."

---

"I know," Steve sighed. "I just wish you could have what you used to have with them. And I wish I didn't have to tiptoe around everything with them. Some days they love me, and some days they act like I should be grateful that they let me live with them. I went off on Becca real bad at the hospital."

---

"What happened?" Bucky asked and stopped in front of the record shop. "What did she do? Or I guess, what did both of you do? I honestly had no idea what was happening the entire time I was in the hospital. All I know is Lilly was given too much candy from your mother to keep her chilled out."

---

"Well, she was pissed that I beat up Donnie," Steve said. "She demanded that I come clean to you and that I should be worried about how I was going to get her to forgive me." Which he still felt was pretty shitty. "I forget the exact words but I pretty much told her I don't care what she thinks and I'm not going to try to be in her good graces." He shrugged. "After I spoke with you and you asked me to get her, I found her crying in the cafeteria. I lied and told her that you were upset that I went after Donnie, too."

---

Bucky sighed and hung his head, "Oh, god... alright, I'll talk to her about the whole thing later," he said and pushed open the door to the shop. "No fucking wonder she's been so shitty lately. Well, maybe she'll be more angry at you for a while instead of me, huh?"

---

Steve walked in with him - he still had some time before work. "Well, I was tired of it. I hate it, Buck. I want to have a good relationship with her, but I can't stand the way she acts like I need to be thankful she talks to me. And, god, she can be such a know-it-all," he ranted.

---

Bucky laughed and led Steve to the back room with him. "You really are an only child, Steve. Becca's a typical teenager and a typical sibling. She's full of herself right now and thinks she knows what's best in every situation. She is a know-it-all, that's true. And I'm not saying you have to roll over and take it, but maybe try being more of a brother-in-law than a parent. I have to be the parent but you don't and probably shouldn't try to be with her anyway."

---

Steve pouted. "But they already said I'm not their brother," he said. So he didn't feel comfortable trying to be their brother-in-law. It was a lot easier as a cop to be an authority figure instead. "And it wouldn't be fair to get to be their brother-in-law when you can't be their brother."

---

"Yes, it is, Steve," Bucky said and stripped off his coat and jacket. "If my parents were alive, you and I would still be married, and I'm still the brother, you are the brother-in-law. That doesn't change because I have two roles. When you came into our lives, I wasn't looking for a second parent for my sisters, I was looking for someone to love us and fill in where I couldn't. And you do that for them. You do. They do see you as family and they only said things about you not being their brother or dad because they were angry at the time. Trust me, Steve.

---

"I really just feel like they tolerate me for your sake," Steve mumbled. "Lilly's nicer but Becca can get really mean. And Lilly will follow her lead on that sometimes." He knew he was preaching to the choir here. Bucky dealt with that on his own for four years. "I guess I'll just have to trust your word on it."

---

"Steve," Bucky whispered and locked the door to the back room before pulling Steve in for a hug and kissing his cheek. "They love you. They don't tolerate you. It's just... I don't know. Becca isn't good at expressing when she cares and Lilly is too prone to following her on whatever she does. But you've seen how much Lilly gets excited when you come home. She jumps you in a hug every time you're gone for too long. She completely ignored me when we got back from our wedding night out and only paid attention to you. And Becca just... I don't know about Becca to be perfectly honest."

---

Steve leaned into Bucky's body and rested his head on his shoulder. "I know Lilly likes me when Becca isn't around to tell her otherwise," he mumbled. "I don't know. I didn't want to shut Becca out. And I don't want to make her feel like she can't come to me for help. But I can't keep giving and giving for the chance she may be nice to me."

---

"Then just back up a little, let her see that you're still around but not going to fight her or try to be her friend or whatever. I'm sure there will be something that she will need to talk about and she won't want to come to me about it and then you'll be there silently and patiently waiting for her to ask for your help." Bucky had walked them over to the table and chairs and sat them down close to each other so he could hold Steve's hands and kiss him between sentences.

---

Steve sighed. He really wished there was some way that they could just... be friendly and comfortable with each other. Becca ran hot and cold. He squeezed Bucky's hand and smiled over at him. "You always know what to say to make me feel better, Buck." He leaned in to kiss him slowly. "Thank you."

---

Bucky smiled pathetically. "Well, you didn’t really get to pick my sisters so I feel bad that you’re stuck with all of us and don’t feel welcomed by Becca. She’ll lighten up, I promise. I mean, with you around now there is no more men in the apartment, no more going to the bars, no more bar fights, no more drinking… most days. She sees what you’ve done for me so far. She’ll get better with you. I know she will."
Chapter Notes

Just want to preface this by saying that everyone is fine. Nothing terrible actually happened to anyone.

See the end of the chapter for more notes.

Over the next week, Steve gave the girls their space and focused mostly on quietly cleaning the house and preparing food. Lilly would come to him a few times to play games or help with homework, but that was the extent of it. It was around ten at night on a Friday - Lilly was asleep in her room, Bucky was doing the closing shift, and Becca, uncharacteristically, was out at a party. He was surprised to hear the phone ring but he picked it up. "Hello?"

---

"Shit, fuck, hold on." It was Becca's mumbled voice. "God, what street is this?" she said and squinted out into the dark trying to get her bearings while holding the pay phone up to her ear. "Steve?" she asked desperately, "Steve, I don't know where I am."

---

"Becca?" Steve asked, worry sinking deep within him. "Are you alright? What happened at the party?" he asked. "Can you see a street sign?" He was already reaching for his patrol map so he could scan for cross streets.

---

"Everything's too fuzzy and the lights are too bright," Becca answered and started to cry, "All I see is bar lights and some hookers." She turned around and stared at her surroundings again. "Holy fuck, am I in Chelsea?" she choked, "No, no way, that's like a three-hour walk from Brooklyn. I've only been out here maybe a half hour."

---

"Becs, it's okay. It's okay. I'm going to come get you right away, alright?" He scanned the map some more. "I need you to be brave? Ask one of the women what the address of that bar is." If Becca couldn't read the sign herself, someone could do it for her. "Do you have your pepper spray just in case?"

---

"Yeah, I got it," Becca said, "One second, there's a lady on the corner by me." She dropped the phone so it hung from the receiver and trotted over to the woman on the corner. She came back to the phone with the street name and hastily said, "Marlin's Pub, Winston Ave." and "I'm fucking cold, someone took my coat and my hat."

---

"I'm going to be over there real soon, okay? Go inside that pub and stay in the first stall of the woman's bathroom. Can you do that? You'll be warm in there and no one will bother you," Steve said.

"I'm fourteen, Steve, I can't go into a pub." Becca tossed her arm up in the air and got a little dizzy. A few of the hookers were staring at her now and the one she had talked to looked on with quiet concern. "Steve, I don't know how I got here."

"Then just stay on that phone. I'm going to hang up now and head over to you. Keep the phone off the receiver and keep talking it to it like there's someone on the other line, okay?" Steve said.

"Hmm, okay," Becca whined softly and heard the click of Steve hanging up. She immediately forgot what Steve had told her to do. Instead, she stumbled over to the pub and sat down on the ground with her back against the wall. The woman who had helped her slowly came over and stood a few feet away and, unbeknownst to Becca, stood guard over her until someone came to help her.

Steve left a note to Lilly to let her know he'd be back soon and he grabbed a blanket before rushing to his car. He switched on his patrol lights immediately and darted off to find Becca. He was able to cut through traffic but it still took nearly an hour to find her. He pulled over right in front of the sidewalk even though it was a no parking zone and he immediately scooped her off the ground into a tight hug. He gave the woman next to her a silent, thankful look.

"Steve?" Becca asked, confused. She had fallen asleep against the wall and was having a hard time remembering much of what had happened in the last few hours. She hugged him back and let herself cry into his chest. "Steve, I'm cold and hungry and I want to go home," she mumbled into his coat and then looked up at the woman then back to Steve. The rest of the hookers had scattered when they saw the cruiser pull up but this one had stayed and waited to make sure that this cop was here for Becca.

Steve pulled out all the cash in his wallet and handed it to the woman. "I'm not after any of you and I won't report," he promised. Thank you so much for looking after her." He would've spoken more to her to thank her and show his appreciation, but Becca was his priority. He wrapped both arms around her and kissed the top of her head. "I've got you, Kiddo," he said. "I brought a blanket for you. You can sleep in the back of the car and I'll make you whatever you want to eat when we get home."

Becca nodded slowly and felt Steve lift her up and gently deposit her into the back of the cruiser and tuck the blanket in all around her. Her eyes blinked shut and she tucked her legs up towards her chest to contain her warmth to a central spot. She passed out immediately once Steve started driving.
Steve kept checking on her through the rear view mirror to make sure she was okay. Steve had so many questions and he was scared that something may have happened to her between the party and Becca calling him, but he couldn't ask that yet. When they got to their apartment, he carefully picked her up into his arms again and carried her inside. He nudged open the door to her room and placed her on her bed.

---

Becca woke up when she hit her bed, jostled by the movement of Steve pulling her covers over her. "Hey," she whispered and stared past Steve at Lilly who was standing silently in the doorway watching what was going on. Becca looked to Steve and grabbed his coat sleeve and said, "Water, please."

---

Steve nodded and got up to get it. As he passed Lilly, he said, "Becca got sick. You don't have to worry." He ruffled her hair and went to the kitchen to get a glass of water and he made a quick peanut butter and jelly sandwich for her before bringing it back. "Need help sitting up?"

---

Becca sat up on her own and downed the water entirely before grabbing for the sandwich and wolfing it down as well. She was panting with the lack of breaths she took between bites. "Thanks, Steve," she said with a far away look in her eyes. "Where's Bucky?"

---

Steve put a hand on her back to support her as she sat up just in case she wobbled back. "Bucky's at work right now. He should be back in an hour or two," he said. "Do you remember what happened?" he asked gently, rubbing circles over her back. "You look like you feel a bit funny."

---

"Don't really know what happened," Becca said and leaned against Steve's supporting touches. "I was with Nicole at the party and someone tried to get me to drink but I said no and had some soda instead. Nicole was getting pretty drunk and I took her to the bathroom to throw up a bit then I went back out to the party and waited around for her to come back but then I started to feel really bad and weird so I left. I tried coming back home but I got lost somehow and ended up at that bar."

---

Steve gave her a sympathetic look. "I think someone may have put something in your drink. Nothing is hurting you, right? Do you just feel dizzy and funny?" He gave her a tight hug. "I'm so glad you got home safe. I was so worried about you."

---

"Nothing hurts," Becca shook her head and flopped into Steve's hug. "Just dizzy and sleepy and confused." She sniffled and looked up at Steve, "I change my mind, my head hurts a little bit. But that's it." She rested her head back in the crook of Steve's arm and shut her eyes. "Where's Bucky?" she asked again and started crying once more.

---

Steve frowned and gently wiped the tears from her face. "He's going to be home soon, Kiddo. Do you want me to call and see if he can leave the store early? I don't think he can, but we can try." He brushed the hair from her face and gave her another hug. "While I'm up, I can get you some more food and medicine for your head."

---

"Yes, medicine and food," Becca said and squirmed out from Steve's arms to curl back under her blankets. She had a big plush animal dog on her bed that she had since she was a kid - a gift from her parents - and she yanked it close and hugged it tightly.

---

Steve started to make another sandwich for her because it was easy and quick to make. He tried giving Bucky a call at the store. "Buck? Hey, is it real busy there right now? Is there any chance that you can come home early? Becca needs you."

---

Bucky waved to Reggie to come take over for him at the register and he went to the back room. "What do you mean? What happened? She was at that party, right?" he asked quickly and started pulling his coat on. He was coming home immediately, Clint would understand.

---

"Don't freak out, but someone drugged her at the party. I don't think they did anything to her, but she's really out of it. Somehow ended up in Chelsea and some woman looked after her until I got there," he said. "I'm doing everything I can, but she's asking for you."

---

"I'm coming home," Bucky said and hung up. He flew back out through the shop and quickly explained to Clint what had happened. He damn near ran the whole way back home and stomped up the stairs to their apartment. When he got there, he struggled with the key in the lock until Steve opened up the door for him. Bucky dumped his stuff on the ground and hustled to Becca's room. She was almost asleep curled up on her bed and Bucky went over and pet her hair. Steve was behind him and he turned to him to ask, "How did this happen, Steve? Where did you find her?"

---

"I think someone drugged her drink when she wasn't looking. Her friend was really drunk so I think she was busy babysitting her. Based on what she's told me, I don't think anyone...did anything," Steve said, his voice getting quiet. "I picked her up in Chelsea, by some shady pub."

---

"Chelsea? How the fuck did she end up in Chelsea?" Bucky kept his voice down so Becca could sleep. "So no one... hurt her?" Bucky asked and grabbed at Steve's forearm. "You're sure? She doesn't have any bruises? Didn't say anything about anyone?"

---

"She doesn't know. She thinks she didn't walk for more than a half hour." Steve placed a hand on Bucky's. "I'm pretty sure nobody hurt her. It's too early for her to show any signs of abuse but I'll keep an eye out. I wasn't going to strip search my fourteen-year-old sister-in-law for bruises."
"That makes sense. I understand." Bucky nodded and stood up to grab another blanket for Becca from her closet. "She can't have only walked for a half hour and made it to Chelsea. Unless someone dropped her off around there, she was out there for something like two hours at the least."

"I know. I'm going to call whoever lives at that house and get to the bottom of what happened. Becca didn't do anything wrong and tonight she could have been raped or kidnapped or god knows what else." Steve voice got a bit strained.

"Hey!" Bucky snapped at him quietly and held his hands protectively over Becca's ears, "Don't say that. We don't know what happened but it wasn't that. Probably just a kid being an asshole and pulling a prank. Or maybe it wasn't meant for Becca. But no one hurt her." Bucky's eyes had filled with tears and he looked away from Steve as he wiped them on his shirt. He laid his head next to his sisters and whispered low, "No one hurt my little sister."

Steve gave Bucky a surprised look when he was snapped at him but he didn't argue. He pulled Bucky into a hug and then let him go so he could lie down next to his sister. "I'm sure she's okay, Baby. Just a little shaken and tired," he reassured. He rubbed Bucky's shoulder and said, "Why don't you stay here with her? I'll stay up with you until you sleep then I'll go to our room."

Bucky nodded and moved to curl around Becca and hug her close. At least it was the weekend now and she wouldn't have to go to school when she woke up. Bucky didn't have work until the close shift also. "She's alright, yeah?" he asked Steve with pleading worried eyes and a shaky voice. "Does she know what's happened?"

"She just seemed scared," Steve said. "She cried a lot once she was home and wouldn't stop asking for you. She was ravenous, too, but I made her two sandwiches," he added. "I don't think she really knows but I told her I think someone spiked her drink." He looked over at her with a worried expression. "I'll pray extra for her tonight. Thank God nothing else happened to her."

"What was she drinking? Was it alcohol? Maybe she's just drunk or something," Bucky asked and already knew that couldn't possibly be the case. "Maybe some kid was smoking dope at the party and she was too close to it and got some in her system."

"She specifically said that she had a soda," Steve said. "And you don't get this messed up from secondhand smoke. You know that," he added. "Lilly saw me bring her in but I told her that she was just feeling sick. I think she's already sleeping in her room, but I haven't checked."
"I know," Bucky sighed. "I just want it to be anything else." He checked the time and saw that it was close to midnight. "Would you please go peek in on Lilly just to see she's okay? I'll stay here with Becs for a little while then come to bed."

---

Steve nodded his head. "Alright," he said. He brushed his lips over Bucky's temple and added, "She knew she had pepper spray, but didn't use it. So that's kind of telling me nobody went after her." He left and knocked once on Lilly's door and opened it to see if she was awake.

---

Lilly was sprawled out on her carpet with a few small plush animals and stacks of sports trading cards. She was quietly flipping through them and rearranging the stacks. She also had a binder close beside her to put the cards into sleeves and, by the looks of it, she was trying to get every one in order to put in the sleeves.

---

"Hey, Lil," Steve said gently as he crouched down next to her. "How're you doing down there? Shouldn't you be in bed by now?" It wasn't ridiculously late but she usually would be asleep by this point.

---

"Couldn't sleep," Lilly said simply and held up a card of a linebacker from the New York Giants to Steve. "Couldn't sleep and I need to finish this," she said matter-of-factly. "Why'd Bucky could home early and make so much noise? Becca's trying to sleep."

---

"He came home cause he was worried about Becca. She asked me to get him to come home early, but it doesn't look like he had anything to be so worried about," Steve explained. "He's just going to stay in her room for a little bit to make sure she's definitely okay and then we're going to sleep," he explained.

---

"Okay," Lilly agreed and slipped the linebacker into a sleeve next to the rest of the Giants. "You want to help me?" She asked and pointed to the pile of cards for the Mets. "I need them in order of position and last name. I used to have them in jersey order but that was bugging me."

---

"Of course," Steve said. He started to arrange the cards but sometimes he got the positions wrong by accident. "How've you been doing? I haven't chatted much with you outside of homework," Steve asked, trying to strike up a conversation.

---

"I don't know. Guess I'm fine," She said and reached over to move a few of the cards that Steve had put in the wrong place. "I don't like the winter. There's no soccer and no lacrosse and I'm always stuck in the apartment. And Becca's been acting even more shitty than usual. Telling me to do stuff all the time. I can take care of Raphael. I don't need reminded every day to feed him."
"You know, there are some indoor sports facilities," Steve said. "If you get your homework done, we can kick a ball around sometime before dinner one day." Steve doubted that Lilly didn't need reminding about the cat but he didn't say anything to contradict her. "She's been kind of mean to me, too. But that's kind of what family does. They get annoyed with each other but then they realize they can't live without one another."

"Becca's always been mean to me. On and off. It's just how she shows she cares, I think." Lilly shrugged, "She isn't rude until she decides that she's going to take care of you. Then she can be terrible. She's quiet and kind to everyone else but us. But it's just that she could give two shits about people she doesn't know. I remember when our cousin Frankie really pissed Becca off, she started being real nice to him and polite because she gave up on him."

"How can you show that you care by being mean?" Steve asked with a pout. "Wouldn't it be easier to show a little kindness and love to the people you care about?" He nuded her gently. "Kind of makes me feel a bit better, though. I thought all this time she hated me."

"No, she doesn't hate you," Lilly said and started on the stack of cards for the Yankees. "She just puts a lot of pressure on you to take care of Bucky now. You came along and made it so she didn't have to watch after him constantly and so now all the things she got on herself for not doing right with him, she's going to get on you for." Lilly glanced at Steve and added, "I'm not smart like Becca but I know my brother and sister."

"Great." Steve snorted. "So I'm going to be criticized for the rest of my life by someone half my age," he joked. "You can be as smart, too. If you just did your darn homework without such a fuss," he teased, tickling her side a bit.

Lilly shoved him back when he tickled her and then rolled so she was pressed up against his side so he couldn't get her again. "Becca's not half your age, she's ten years younger. I'm half your age." She looked up at him and nodded her head, "See? I'm great at math, Steve."

Steve smiled when Lilly escaped the tickle assault. "Oh yeah? If you're so good at math, then tell me why you're half my age now but you won't be half my age five years from now," he said. "Sounds fake to me."

"I don't get it." Lilly scrunched her face up in thought.

Bucky opened the door slowly then and peeked in on them. "Hey, what're you guys doing?" he asked and took in the two of them lying on the ground surrounded by sports cards. Steve had a plush elephant sitting by his elbow and Lilly's little horse was tucked under her arm.
Steve got an apologetic look on his face. "I was, uh, just helping Lilly organize her trading cards," he said. He didn't realize how long he'd been in there and how late it was getting. Lilly really should have been asleep by then. "Are you ready to go to bed, Sweetheart?" he asked, already ruffling up Lilly's hair lightly as he got up to head over to Bucky.

"Yeah, Lil, you should be asleep," Bucky said without much emotion behind his words. He was tired and honestly wasn't too worried that she was still awake. If she slept in this weekend it would be okay. Bucky slipped his hand with Steve's and said good night to Lilly before pulling him off to their room.

Steve kissed Bucky's temple gently. "Lilly is alright and she isn't aware of any of this. I'll leave it to you and Becca to decide if you should tell her," he explained. Steve kissed Bucky one more time before pulling him into bed. "How're you holding up?"

"I'm alright. I'm just worried." Bucky said and laid half way on top of Steve with his leg thrown protectively over his middle. "I wouldn't be able to live with myself if anything happened to Becca. And there's no way we are going to know for sure if she's okay until she remembers what happened."

"I was so scared when I got the call, Buck. I don't know if I'd ever be able to forgive myself if something happened to either of them on my watch." Steve frowned as he pet a hand over Bucky's arm. "I know you'd be devastated. I got the cruiser and headed down there so fast. I'm so sorry for taking you out of work early, but she needed her brother."

Bucky breathed in deeply and let off a heavy sigh on Steve's neck. He really didn't want to think about all this anymore. "I need to shower. I feel like I smell like work."

Steve made a displeased noise when Bucky mentioned showering. He just wanted to hold him for a long while until they fell asleep. "Can't that wait until morning?"

"Just let me shower real fast," Bucky said, slipped off the bed, and started to strip his clothes. "Five minutes tops." He went to the bathroom and shut the door behind him. He stared at himself in the mirror. His eyes were bloodshot and his hair was a mess. Bucky looked up at the ceiling and said, "Hey, Steve's God. If you're really there, can you cut us some fucking slack for a little bit? Just a few months without any bad shit, okay?"

While Bucky showered, Steve got out of bed to kneel at its side and pray, thanking God for watching over Becca but also asking him to prevent any more mishaps for a while because it was really stressing Bucky out.

---

After he showered and dried off, Bucky slinked back to bed and stood off to the side by Steve pointing at his bruises on his ribs. "Look, they aren't as bad now," he said and gently poked at one. "Don't really hurt too bad anymore. Just a little sore still is all."

---

"Hey, that's great," Steve said lightly. "You'll be all healed up just in time for our totally perfect honeymoon," he said. "I was thinking, maybe while we are there, we can get some lumber. Wouldn't it be great to make our kid's crib from wood from there?"

---

Bucky's eyes went wide and he cupped Steve's face in his hands, "Steven Grant Rogers-Barnes, you beautiful genius!" he said and jumped on his husband to tackle him to the bed. He kissed him on the lips then on the jaw then the neck. He was still on a bit on an emotional high and switching over to covering Steve with kisses was the best way for him to cope. Bucky held his naked legs tightly on either side of Steve's and he mouthed at his collar bone for a moment before popping back up and saying, "But how are we going to get it back home? And where are we going to put it?"

---

Steve didn't realize how much Bucky would like the idea. He thought it was a smart idea but he loved how happy it made his husband. "We could have it delivered," he said, grinning happily and running his hands over Bucky's back. He drew him into another slow kiss. "We can store it in the closet."

---

"Guess we could," Bucky said and pet a hand through Steve's hair. "I don't know if we have room in our closet, though. Also, it costs money to have something delivered. Could we rent a pickup truck and bring it back ourselves? Or is that too much money, too?"

---

"I'm sure if I ask nice enough at the precinct, someone would let us borrow their truck. There's got to be someone with something we can use to transport it. The wood will be pretty flat, so we could also just put it under all your boxes of records once we get it home."

---

"That's a good point. Just add it to the mountain. It'll blend in," Bucky agreed. "If no one at the precinct will let you borrow a truck then we will just rent one from somewhere and do it that way. How's that?" Bucky had a hand up Steve's shirt and was rubbing small circles over his abs and chest as he occasionally kissed at Steve's neck again.

---

"It sounds perfect," Steve said. He made happy little sounds when Bucky kept kissing and touching him. "I love you so much, Bucky," he said. "I can't wait until we go to Seneca together. It's going to be my best vacation ever."
"I can't fucking wait, either, Baby," Bucky whispered and pulled Steve's shirt up a little so he could lick Steve's nipples and rub his beard on his skin. "Just about a month and a half until it'll be warm enough to go." He tucked his hands underneath Steve's lower back and held him close.

---

Steve moaned softly and arched his back off the bed when Bucky teased his nipples. "I look forward to it," he said happily. "Now get some rest, Beautiful. We've got work ahead of us in the morning."

---

Bucky groaned quietly and shimmied down Steve's body. "But, I don't want to sleep. I want to make love with you." He squeezed Steve's thighs and sat up to straddle him so Steve could see and feel Bucky's erection against him. "Please, can we? It's been a long week and I just want to feel safe in your arms."

---

Even though Steve was a little worn from a panicked evening, it was pretty much impossible to say no to his husband. "Fine, but you're either the one fucking me or you're riding me." He smiled up at him and ran his hands over Bucky's legs before palming at his erection.

---

"Which do you want?" Bucky asked and leaned down to kiss Steve. "I'm good either way." He reached down to stick his hand down Steve's pants and started pulling lazily at his dick. "And we don't have to if you really don't want to. I just need to relax after having a shit week at work and dealing with motherfucking Reggie trailing after me everywhere I went and talking to me about nonsense. And then this whole thing tonight... I just want you, I want to calm down and forget everything for a bit. But it's up to you."

---

"I kind of want to be inside you," Steve hummed, letting out a little moan when Bucky started tugging on his dick. "When I have three fingers deep in your ass, I bet I can make you forget about everything except how much you love me."

---

Bucky's heart skipped a beat and he bit his lip in a smile. "Get on with it then, Officer," he said and grabbed the lube from the nightstand before lying back so he was sprawled out across Steve's legs and his ass was within Steve's reach. "You get me ready then I'll ride you like you want."

---

Steve chuckled at how eager Bucky was and he spread Bucky's ass so he could pour lube directly onto his hole. He teased the tight ring for a little bit before pushing a finger in. "You like that so far, Baby?"

---

"Yes, it's good, keep going. More," Bucky said and tucked his hands under Steve's legs as he spread his knees apart more. He was starting to feel Steve getting hard underneath him and Bucky wiggled his ass just a little bit against it.

---

Steve rocked his hips slowly up into Bucky to grind his dick against his husband. Slowly, he pushed a second finger inside of him and started to scissor him open. "Tell me what kind of sex we are going to have on our honeymoon."

---

"Every kind," Bucky said, "Rough sex, slow sex, oral, sixty-nine again, sex outside, sex in the middle of the day, sex on a fishing boat, sex by the fireplace, sex under the stars," Bucky gasped when Steve stuck in a third finger and he couldn't keep listing thing off for him any longer.

---

Steve let out a little laugh. "Aren't you worried about your dick falling off from using it so much?" He kissed him and started to press against his prostate. "Ready for my cock, Handsome?"

---

"Yes, please," Bucky whispered and got up to pull Steve from his pants. Bucky held himself open and sat down on Steve slowly, just feeling himself filling up with his thick cock as he went. "God, fuck yes, thank you, Baby, I need this." He stayed still on Steve for a second and leaned forward to kiss him.

---

Steve moaned out Bucky's name softly as he slid down on his cock. His ass felt so fucking good. Steve wrapped a strong arm around his shoulders and pulled him flush against his chest and started to fuck him hard and quick.

---

Bucky clung to Steve as he fucked him. "Thought you weren't going to do any work?" He laughed and bit down a little harshly on Steve's shoulder. He rocked with the rhythm of Steve's thrusts and his cock was mashed between their bodies and leaking pre-come on their skin.

---

"Decided you needed more distracting," Steve panted out. He groaned when Bucky bit him and gripped his shoulders with bruising force. "Want me to go slower?" he asked. Steve would do whatever Bucky wanted.

---

"No, Baby, fuck me," Bucky said and licked Steve's neck. "Or go slower. I don't care. Do what you want, but just don't stop, okay?" Bucky squirmed in Steve's grasp. "Here, let me sit up so I can get to my cock."

---

Steve let Bucky sit up but he gripped his hip with one hand and instead started to stroke Bucky's dick for him as he continued to fuck him. He panted heavily, eyes boring up into Bucky as he rocked up into him.
Bucky used his free hands to tease over Steve's nipples and rub down his sides. He loved the feeling of his husband working his cock and his ass. It made him feel loved and secure, Steve was taking care of him like he always did.

Steve let out a soft moan as Bucky teased his nipples. "Oh, fuck yeah," he breathed out. "You feel so good, Baby. Give me a kiss." He leaned up and claimed Bucky's lips in a brief kiss before fucking him even harder.

After the kiss, Bucky threw his arms around Steve's neck and sucked hickeys on his skin while Steve fucked him harder. "You glad I begged you for sex?" he asked and licked the red sensitive marks he made on Steve before rubbing his beard over it just a bit.

"Quit being so smug," Steve complained playfully before giving Bucky's ass a small swat. He could feel himself getting closer to orgasm, so he gripped Bucky's hips with both hands and slammed his cock into him, angling it into his prostate with each thrust until he was coming deep in Bucky's ass.

Bucky came when Steve did and shot his load all over Steve's stomach. He bit his lip and moved up and down on Steve's cock for a few seconds more before getting off of him and lying beside his husband. "Hey… I love you," he said in a low whisper and wiped at the come leaking down on his leg.

Steve panted heavily after their orgasms and he looked over at Bucky with a lazy smile. "I can't believe you've got me wrapped around your finger. You can make me do damned about everything."

"You love being mine," Bucky answered and kissed Steve slowly. "You know that you do. And I love being yours. And you love making love with me. So, really, I didn't have to beg you too much." He grabbed the box of tissues and started cleaning himself and Steve up. "Although, I sort of wasted my shower."

Steve smiled fondly as he watched Bucky clean the both of them up. "You'll shower again in the morning, I guess. But the girls will get pissed if you take up all the hot water," he teased.

"Ah, they'll be fine." Bucky chuckled as he tossed the dirty tissues and then sat back down next to Steve. He scratched a hand through his hair and gave him a serious look. "Becca will be okay, right?"
Steve reached out to lace their fingers together. "I think so," he said. "I think she's going to need your support for a little bit. You've been in party situations more often than her and I think she's going to need a little understanding from someone who's been there."

---

"I mean, it's pretty different though," Bucky started. "I chose to go to those parties and get fucked up. Becca chose not to drink and wasn't given a choice at all whether she wanted whatever it was that was given to her." He sighed and looked up at the ceiling. "She's such a good kid and probably will never want to drink alcohol or do any drugs and now someone's taken away her clean streak from her."

---

"I know it's not the same, but she still may like the support. And if you don't want her clean streak taken from her, we can say that the food or something made her delirious. Or she had a reaction to something. It's worth a shot if you don't want her feeling like that is over," Steve offered.

---

"I don't want to keep the truth of what happened from her either, though," Bucky said and rubbed his face harshly. "Besides she's too smart not to figure it out and then she'd be angry at us for lying, too. We will just see how she is in the morning and talk to her about it when she's ready."

---

Steve sighed and squeezed Bucky's hand. "I guess you're right," he said. "How the hell are we going to raise a kid without freaking out over everything?" Steve sighed. "I'm going to be such a damn mess. I was so afraid for Becca when she called."

---

"I'll be a mess too, don't worry." Bucky snuggled up on Steve's chest and hugged him close. "Thank you so much for getting her, Steve. I'm really glad she has you in her life to love and protect her. I can't be everywhere with them at once especially with work so I'm so grateful that you were around for her."

---

Steve smiled shyly. "I love them both so much," he said. "All of you. You make me so happy." He hugged him tightly and kissed his face all over. "Let's finally get some sleep."

---

"Okay, let's go to sleep," Bucky said and saw that it was past four in the morning. He pulled the blankets up over them and rolled the two of them so Steve was little spoon and Bucky had his arms wrapped tightly around him.

---

Steve happily slept with Bucky until morning. He woke up bright and early to make all of their breakfasts. Becca came into the kitchen groggily, rubbing at her eyes. "Hey, Becs," he said gently. "How're you feeling?"
Becca took a plate from the cabinet and started piling eggs and bacon on it. "I don't know. Better. My head still hurts a bit. I feel like I could sleep for days but I needed to get up." She poured some orange juice for herself and some for Steve and handed it to him. "Lilly and Bucky are still asleep?"

---

Steve thanked her and then nodded. "Yeah, they're both sleeping right now," he said. "Lilly doesn't know about what happened last night. I figured I'd let you decide if you want her to know or not."

---

Becca sat down at the table and gave Steve a calculated look. "I don't even know what happened really so I probably won't say anything to Lilly." She ate some of her eggs and looked down at her fork. "Thanks for bringing me home and getting Bucky back early."

---

"You don't have to thank me," he said. "You didn't do anything wrong and this is the sort of thing family does for each other." Steve gave her a little smile. "I'm just glad that you got home safe. You were smart for calling me as soon as you could."

---

"Steve," Becca started and licked her lips nervously, "What did they put in my drink? I know that's what happened... I remember some of the boys from my class laughing off in the corner of the room when I was drinking my soda but I figured they just thought I was ugly or something."

---

Steve's face fell. "Becca, you are such a beautiful person. Anyone who thinks you're ugly is straight-up wrong." He took a sip of his juice. "It sounds like they roofied your drink," he said. "If you go to a party again, I can give you some safety tips."

---

Becca shook her head and sniffled. "I'm not going to a party again. I only went because Nicole wanted me to go so badly but then all she did was drink and talk to boys anyway. At one point she was flirting with college boys like she forgot she was fifteen or something."

---

He reached out to put a hand on her shoulder. "Maybe one day will you want to go to another party – some time with close friends or something like that. You shouldn't avoid being social because of this," Steve advised. "Who hosted this party and let high school kids get drunk with college kids?"

---

"I don’t know," Becca said, "I think it was one of my classmates older brothers who invited his college buddies and let his little brother invite all of us. I just went where Nicole told me to go. Won't do that again."

---

"Well, that was very irresponsible of them," Steve said. "Listen, Becca... I know last night wasn't your fault at all but I want you to know that if you needed help ever - even if you got yourself into that situation and even if you think I'll be mad - I still want you to call me or your brother. Your safety is too important to us."

---

"I know," she said and smiled faintly, looking a lot like Bucky when he was trying to seem like everything was okay. "Steve, you and I are both used to Bucky and his... mistakes - to put it lightly - and how he really doesn't ever ask for help or sometimes even realize he needs it. I'm not him, I won't willingly get myself into something like this again but, if I do, I'll know when to call."

---

Steve patted her shoulder and smiled. "I'm glad," he said gently and slowly got up from the table. "Love you, Kiddo. Now I'm going to wake up the rest of the house so they can have food. I hate scraping the food off the dishes after it's gone cold."

---

Bucky woke up fairly easily when Steve came in. He shuffled into Lilly's room after Steve. Lilly was fast asleep under a mountain of blankets. After Steve's attempts to get her up failed, Bucky peeled the blankets back and scooped her up in his arms gently. She clung to him like a monkey and Bucky mumbled, "Alright, no more staying up at two in the morning for you."

---

Steve smiled fondly as Bucky scooped Lilly up. He wondered if their kid wouldn't be a morning person either and if Bucky would have to carry them to breakfast as well. "Yeah, she can only stay up until 1:59 in the morning."

---

"I was thinking more like ten at night," Bucky corrected and gave Steve a little push. He deposited Lilly on a chair at the table and poured her some orange juice before going over to Becca and flopping on her in a hug. Bucky kissed the top of her head and squeezed her lightly.

---

Becca leaned into Bucky's chest and let out a soft sigh. "Thanks, Bucky," she said quietly into his shoulder. She kissed his cheek, which was rare of her to do, and she went back to eating, trying to play it cool.

---

Bucky held back the emotions that threatened to boil over and make him cry again. Instead, he quietly sat down by Steve and thanked him for the food before digging in. He ate a few bites before noticing Lilly's head drooping closer and closer to the table. "Lilly," he said and poked her in the arm. "Wake up. You're going to end up wearing your food."

---

Steve got up to dampen a rag with cool water and plopped it on top of Lilly's head. "Hey," she complained, whining at Steve as she pulled it off. She was a bit more awake now at least.
"Why, Lilly, why did you think it was a good idea to be up so late categorizing your trading cards again?" Bucky asked and watched Becca feed Raphael a bit of bacon. "Steve told me you said you couldn't sleep? Did you have nightmares again?"

---

Raphael hopped up into Becca’s lap and bumped his head lightly against her chin to try and get more bacon from her. Lilly shrugged her shoulders, not wanting to admit to having more nightmares. It was embarrassing to still have trouble sleeping from it.

---

"Lil, did you have bad dreams last night?" Bucky tried again and looked to Steve. Maybe they should try to have Lilly see a psychiatrist. Bucky didn't want to have to spend the money on one for himself but if someone could help Lilly then it would be worth it.

---

"I just wanted to sort my cards, okay?" Lilly said in an annoyed tone at Bucky.

Steve frowned and reached out to hold his husband's hand. "Lilly, Bucky's just worried about you," Steve said gently.

---

Bucky tensed up and looked down at his plate like he had been scolded. "Okay, if Lilly doesn't want help then she can deal with her nightmares on her own. One less thing for me to worry about, right, Steve?" he asked and shrugged like he was bored of this whole thing.

---

"Buck..." Steve said softly. He got up and stood behind Bucky to rub his shoulders in an attempt to make him feel better. Lilly was still stubbornly keeping quiet and not apologizing. "You want to take a walk, Buck? It's a good morning for a walk."

---

"No, I'm fine," Bucky said and stood up to clear his plate regardless of having about half of his food left.

Becca gave a soft look to Steve and chewed her lip. She turned to Lilly and gently touched her arm and asked in a quiet voice, "How come you're so defensive about this today?"

---

"Mind your own damn business, Becca," Lilly said grumpily. She stood up and took Raphael so she could stomp into her room. She made sure to slam the door behind her. Steve just kind of stood there, utterly dumbfounded.

---

"Jesus...alright," Becca breathed with wide eyes. "She took the cat, too. I was holding him." She got up and began helping Bucky with the dishes, saying to Steve as she went, "Guess it's your turn to give it a shot if you want to. I'm out."

---
"Oh yeah, that's a smart idea," Steve said sarcastically. "I'm not in the mood to get bulldozed by a twelve-year-old after she just ripped through you two." Steve said. "I'm giving her time to cool off."

---

Bucky said, "She can be really sensitive about things that she thinks are embarrassing. She won't have friends over to stay the night because she's worried they will laugh at her for having a night light."

Becca nodded her head, "And I've heard her straight up lie to her friends at school about things so she seems cooler to them. She says Bucky's a musician who just got signed with this big record company and is working on his first album."

---

"That's not good," Steve said with a frown. "Why's she have to lie? Bucky's amazing just the way he is. If she's embarrassed about a nightlight or Bucky, how will she handle people knowing we're gay or that she has normal, human fears like everyone else?"

---

Becca and Bucky both laughed and gave Steve soft smiles like they were going to let him in on a secret. "Lilly has always been this way," Bucky said. "She doesn't lie about big things, just most little things. Whatever she can say that might make the conversation more interesting, she will say it. But she doesn't do it around us because we know what's real."

Becca added, "I don't think she does it to be deceptive, I think she just likes making a better story."

---

Steve blushed when they both laughed at what he said. He crossed his arms and huffed lightly. "God, she's like the opposite of what she has to be to give herself an easier time," he groaned. "That aside, how do we help her with her nightmares?"

---

"I don't know." Bucky shrugged and dried his hands. "I was thinking we could try to see if we could find a child psychiatrist for her to talk to about them. Maybe they can work some stuff out with her or give her coping mechanisms when she gets a nightmare."

---

"I think that would be the best bet. Even if she won't go, we could at least attend and try and figure out ways to help her," Steve said. "All three of us could go." He wanted everyone on board to help solve this issue.

---

Becca held up her hands and shook her head, "Count me out. It's up to you two," she said. "I'm not going."

"Alright, then just you and me, Steve," Bucky said, "If Lil won't go then we will and see what we can to help her."
"Why not?" Steve asked Becca, sounding disappointed. "It'll help Lilly. And what if you end up having a kid who needs a bit of extra help? Won't it be helpful to have gone to a child psychologist already?"

---

"I don't want to go," Becca said again. "I hate going to the doctors, even for someone else." She nodded in finality and crossed her arms. "I'll help some other way, okay?" She grabbed a soda from the fridge and popped off the top.

---

"Alright," Steve sighed. He then turned to Bucky and ran a hand over his back. "Do you want me to start looking into doctors in the area? Or do you want to be the one scoping them out?"

---

Bucky shrugged and leaned against Steve, "I don't know. Guess we can ask around. Veronica and Laura might know someone."

Just then, Lilly opened her door slowly and came out into the kitchen with Raphael. She draped the cat on her shoulder and scuffed her foot on the ground. "I'm sorry," she mumbled.

---

Steve looked over a Lilly and pet a hand over her hair. "It's okay, Kiddo," he said softly. "You just got to be more careful about what you say. You may end up hurting the people that love you the most." He nudged her lightly. "Give Bucky a hug. I think he needs it."

---

Lilly trudged over to Bucky and thunked her head on his chest as she flung her arms around his middle. She mumbled something that Bucky couldn't hear and he hugged her back tightly and watched Raph jump off of her shoulder and onto the table.

---

Steve laid his arm over Bucky's shoulder and kissed his temple. "I love you both. And Becca, too." He picked up Raphael and gave him a kiss on the head for good measure.

Chapter End Notes

I'm sorry if anyone was worried too much. I just wanted to make sure you knew that nothing horrible happened to Becca or anyone. She is safe and fine and just had a prank and a scare. We just wanted to do a scene that helped to bring Steve and Becca together a bit more.
Chapter Summary

This chapter seems them at the beginning of May about to go on their honeymoon trip to Seneca Lake.

Bucky was frantically rummaging around the house grabbing things to pack away for their trip to Seneca Lake. They were going for a full week and had a cabin reserved right on the water and he was trying to make sure he had absolutely everything ready so they could get up early and leave first thing.

---

Steve came in through the door with a big old smile on his face because he got a huge truck perfect for lugging baby crib material back in. "Hey, Gorgeous," Steve said, putting a hand on Bucky's arm. "Anything I can do to help? You're running around like a chicken without his head."

---

"You can help pull out my dad's fishing gear from the top of the laundry storage. There should be a few poles and a tackle box," Bucky said and folded up some extra blankets into a bag. He knew the nights by the lake could get pretty cold in early spring.

---

Steve nodded and did just that. "I can't believe it's already here, Buck. I bought extra film for our camera to make sure we wouldn't miss a memory." Steve planned on filling an entire album with this.

---

"That's a good idea, Baby. Take pictures while we are still young and cute and look good in swim trunks," Bucky said. "That reminds me, I couldn't find where you keep your swim stuff. It wasn't with mine in the closet. Also, make sure you pack shoes you can hike in."

---

"I don't have swim stuff," Steve said shyly. He barely knew how to swim and only learned just enough to pass the PE test to be an officer. "I figured if we went swimming I would just use my boxers or buy something up there."

---

Bucky laughed and grinned at Steve. "Come here and take off your pants. Let's see if one of mine fits you." He pulled his trunks out of his bag and held out the pair that had a large design of the American flag on it. They might be a little snug on Steve.
Steve tried the trunks on and made a face. "I feel like my balls are trapped," he said. "I think I'm going to have to buy something up there. I'll have to find some other way to get into your pants," he joked.

---

Bucky couldn't help but laugh and burst out singing, "Born on the Fourth of July!" as Steve pulled at the patriotic fabric around his balls. "I'm afraid if you got wet in those, they would never be able to come off of you. I'd have to cut you out. We can buy you some on our way."

---

"Oh, quit that," Steve huffed with a blush. "I can't tell you how much flag stuff I had to deal with on my birthdays. Ma couldn't afford to buy both birthday and Fourth of July decorations, so my birthdays were always patriotic."

---

"Sorry, Stevie, I'll quit." Bucky smirked and yanked the trunks off of him in one harsh fast motion. "Alright, get your pants back on. We still need to gather some more stuff. Did you get the truck?" Bucky tossed the trunks back into his bag of clothes and zipped it back up. Other than his toothbrush and some other things he would throw in in the morning, his bag was ready to go.

---

Steve was quick to get dressed again. "Yeah, it's huge, Buck! We could fit all the lumber we need in there. I bet it's got enough room to comfortably fuck in. But we have to lay down towels or something I don't want to leave any stains or marks."

---

"Goddamn, Steve, I love you," Bucky said and leaned over to pop a kiss to his lips. "And we are definitely fucking in that truck. Late at night, under the stars, truck bed bouncing up and down with us. I love it." He had also packed a giant woven blanket that would be perfect for laying on for an outdoor fuck. He had already decided it was the official sex blanket of the trip and they hadn't even used it yet.

---

Steve chuckled when Bucky agreed and he slid a hand up his shirt to touch his back affectionately. "This is going to be the best week ever, Buck. We are going to have to find nice souvenirs to bring back, too."

---

"I'm taking my dad's old carving knives so maybe I can work on whittling something for the girls," Bucky said. "There really aren't many shops or anything around the lake. Just a small grocery store and a tackle shop."

---

"You're real handy with wood, aren't you? No wonder you make such a good gay man," Steve joked. He kissed Bucky's cheek and started to check inventory for what they needed to go out. "Are there going to be many others around?"
"This early in May, there probably won't be too many people yet. Just the locals," Bucky said, "They really start coming in late May. We will probably see some old men fishing with their grand kids or having cookouts and that's about it. And the cabins are too far away from each other to really interact at all."

"That's great." Steve would like to meet some people and chat during the day but he wanted to really have quality time with Bucky at night. He kissed him slowly and played with his hair. "We will be the fishing old men one day."

"First, we will be the dads teaching their kids, then the uncles teaching their nieces and nephews, then the old men teaching their grandkids," Bucky said and tossed his bag towards the door so he could grab it easily in the morning.

Steve got a happy look on his face. "Oh, man. We probably will only ever be able to have one kid, but that kid has got to have a bunch of babies so we have plenty of grandkids. Becca and Lilly need to reproduce like Irish Catholics, too."

Bucky sighed. "I hope we get our kid before we are too old. And I hope that by some luck we can have more than one." He shook his head and smiled, "Anyway... we will hope that Becca and Lilly have kids. I'm thinking Becca will have some. Lilly might not. I'm also thinking that Becca would be the type to be a single mother because she wants to raise them alone. And I mean, either one of them could be a lesbian, who knows."

Steve nodded in agreement. He wanted to be a young enough dad to play sports with their kid - or kids. "You think Becca would get pregnant and leave her partner or do you think she's going to drive some poor guy away cause no one is perfect enough for her?"

"I'm thinking Becca would want a kid, ask a friend to help her out with the sperm thing, and then do the rest on her own. Or you know, those sperm banks that keep popping up around." Bucky shuddered, "Alright, we're done talking about this. They aren't having kids until they are forty at the earliest and they aren't dating until thirty-five."

"Hell no. They're having kids as soon as possible," Steve joked. "I want babies around. Like, ten of them." He wanted to be a dad and an uncle and a granddad so much. He drew Bucky in for a slow kiss and then added, "My coworker has a nice son around her age."

Bucky playfully shoved Steve away from him, "Steven Grant, do you want me to cancel this trip?
You keep talking like this and I'll go to Seneca alone and leave you here for a week." He crossed his arms and pouted. Some hair fell in his face and ruined the gruff illusion when he had to blow it out of the way.

---

"You could never leave me here while you go to Seneca," Steve said. He reached out to stroke his fingers over Bucky's jaw. "Alright, I'm done. I'm going to get dinner started. I think I've got everything we need packed."

---

"Punk," Bucky breathed and trailed after Steve to the kitchen. Lilly was lying in the middle of the living room with Raphael on her stomach. She was singing to The Who and staring up at the ceiling. Becca was kneeling by the coffee table trying her best to put together a puzzle of the Golden Gate Bridge.

---

Steve smiled as he saw the two of them minding themselves. He gave them both a kiss on the head as he passed by. "You guys excited for a fun week with my mom? She's excited to spend time with you."

---

Becca pointed at a stack of neatly folded clothes on the end of the couch. "Miss Sarah said she would teach me how to patch up the rips in my clothes. Also, she's teaching me how to make some desserts too."

Lilly sat up and Raph jumped off of her in surprise. "She told me that she's going to take us out on a day in Manhattan and go to the Central Park Zoo."

---

"That sounds real great, you guys," Steve said happily to them both. He began to pull out things to cook. "You make her really happy, you know that? I know she loves me, but she always wanted daughters. Something tells me she's got other surprises for you this week, too."

---

"Lilly and I are easy to like." Becca shrugged and smiled.

Bucky said, "Just make sure you get to school on time, and you go to bed on time, and you are good for her. I don't want the first thing she says when we come back to be, 'Thank God you're home.'"

---

Steve seasoned the chicken before throwing it on the pan. "They will be fine. My mom knows how to lay down the law. I didn't become a perfect child out of nowhere."

---

"I was born perfect," Lilly squeaked from her spot on the carpet, earning her a pillow thrown at her from Becca.

"Lilly," Bucky started, "as someone who used to help mom give you baths and change your diapers when you were a baby and I was in middle school, I can tell you for certain that you were not born perfect. You were a wiggly, angry baby who shit on me while I was washing the little tufts of baby hair on your tiny head."

---

Steve barked out a laugh. He could imagine a teenaged Bucky struggling to help his parents take care of an unruly baby Lilly. "I bet Lilly made the messiest poops too. She probably didn't have the decency to give you guys somewhat of an easy job to clean up."

---

"Okay, okay, stop it!" Lilly grumbled and rolled away from the two men. "You guys suck." She pouted and changed the record to the first Tears for Fears album, which she had recently decided she liked a lot.

Bucky helped Steve cook and just did whatever was asked of him and pretty soon they were all gathered around the table sharing family dinner before they were apart for a week. Bucky tried not to think about being away from the girls that long. The only times he had been away from them for more than a day was the two times he had been in the hospital.

---

Steve looked so happy to be here. He gave Bucky an excited, little smile and chattered happily during dinner. When it was time to tuck the girls in, Steve knew Bucky would be a bit emotional because this was the last time he would tuck them in for a week. "Take your time, Beautiful," Steve said gently. "I'll be in our room."

---

Bucky nodded and watched Steve go before ushering Lilly into her room. Becca went with him and they both sat on the side of Lilly's bed and talked for a bit before Lilly's eyes started to get droopy and sleepy. When Bucky went with Becca to her room, he asked her, "You going to be okay with me gone for a week? You'll be in charge of the apartment and taking care of Lilly and Raphael. Miss Sarah will be here, of course, but you're the top Barnes for a week."

---

Becca laid down and snuggled under her blankets. "Why wouldn't I be okay?" she asked quietly, though there was something in her face that showed that she didn't like having Bucky gone for so long. At least at the hospital, he was only a half hour walk away. Seneca was a far drive.

---

"Well, Becs," Bucky sighed and tucked his legs underneath him on the bed. "I know you've done a lot to take care of me and Lilly in the past four years. You've done a fuck ton more than you should have had to and that's my fault." He paused and pet her hair gently. "But our little monster will be all yours for a week and the only phone near us is the one in Fred's tackle shop so we may not get a message immediately if you call." Bucky bit his lip and looked at his sister. He was pretty antsy about leaving them. "Maybe we should just not go. Just wait for the summer and then all of us can go."

---

Becca leaned into Bucky a bit. "No, don't cancel your trip," she said. "You and Steve have been looking forward to this for months." She sighed. "Just drive safe, okay? And... wear safety vests when you're fishing. And don't do anything stupid."

---

"I'll try not to do anything stupid." Bucky giggled and gave Becca a hug. "I love you so fucking much, Rebecca Barnes. You're my strong, careful, protective baby sister and I've loved every day getting to see you grow up. Mom and Dad have got to be ridiculously proud of how much you've done to help me since they've been gone."

---

Becca started to hug Bucky but when he got all sappy and brought up their parents, she squirmed so he would let her go. "Alright, alright," she mumbled. "That's enough, I get it."

---

Bucky released Becca and gave her arm a squeeze before getting up. "Alright, sleep well. Steve and I will be gone before you wake up and Sarah will be here soon after that. We gave her Steve's key for the week so she can see herself in and out in case you are still asleep." He went to the door and said that he loved her one more time before heading back to Steve.

---

Steve sat up when he saw Bucky enter the room. "Hey, Handsome," Steve greeted gently. "How're they doing? Are you sure you're ready to go away?" As much as Steve wanted to go, he would never guilt Bucky into doing something he wasn't ready for.

---

"Yeah," Bucky smiled pathetically and crawled into bed with Steve. "I just might be a wreck on the second night we are there and end up going to Fred's in the middle of the night to make a phone call. I know where the old bastard keeps a spare key to the shop."

---

Steve kissed Bucky's jaw before nuzzling at his scruff. "You know I'll never get grumpy at you for trying to call your sisters. But what makes you think Fred keeps the key in the same place he did years ago?"

---

"He's kept it in the same rusted watering can on the stoop since he opened the place in '59. Most the old locals know about it and my dad certainly knew about it," Bucky said and tossed his shirt on the end of the bed. "It'll be there, don't worry."

---

"If you say so," Steve chuckled. He pet his hand over Bucky's chest. "I'm so excited to finally see this place tomorrow. It's kind of like a dream come true. You're always happy when you're talking about it."

---

"It's perfect, Steve," Bucky said and put his forehead on Steve's. "I'm so glad I get to go back and especially with you. It's so much quieter out there than in the city and it's so beautiful and I haven't gone swimming in a lake in way too long."

---

Steve looked into Bucky's eyes with a happy smile. "Well, now we get to spend a whole week together doing all the stuff we can't in a big city." He kissed him gently. "Let's get some rest. We have a big day tomorrow."
Bucky was woken up by Steve lightly brushing his hand through his hair and kissing his face. "Morning," Bucky hummed and kissed Steve on the lips. "Ready to go when you are, Baby. Just need to brush my teeth and grab some things then we can leave."

---

Steve nodded and stole one last kiss before getting out of bed. He'd already woken up a half hour ago to wash up and put their things in the car. He left a card on the table for both Lilly and Becca saying how he would miss them through the week, figuring they would have had enough mushy feelings in person from Bucky the night before.

---

Sarah had arrived earlier than expected - not wanting the girls to be alone - and she saw Bucky and Steve off. Steve drove and Bucky held the map and told Steve where to go since Bucky couldn't drive anyway. The truck had a cassette deck and Bucky had brought a small selection for the two of them. He also brought his guitar because Steve had requested it.

---

Steve found the drive pretty relaxing. He rolled the windows down once they got out of the city and glanced over at Bucky with a soft happy little look. "So what's the first thing you want to do when we get there?" Steve asked.

---

"I say we drop our stuff off at our cabin then go over to Fred's and the market and get supplies. I wonder if Fred and his wife will recognize me or not," Bucky said and held his hand out for Steve's. "How's that sound to you?"

---

"That sounds perfect," Steve said. He reached over and laced their fingers together. "So what are you going to introduce me as?" He wanted to be on the same page on their story if they weren't going to tell the truth.

---

"Well," Bucky cleared his throat. He was hoping to push this off until they were unpacking at the cabin at least. "I don't know yet. My first thought was to just tell it like it is and be strong against opposition. But then I was thinking about how we will be so far from home and any emergency rooms so if anything did happen, we wouldn't be able to get the girls and we might not be able to get the help we need anyway. Of course, that's worst-case scenario. A milder case would be, we aren't allowed in the shops and we are stuck in the cabin for a week with no fishing supplies and not much to do."

---

Steve was admittedly a bit afraid to risk another trip to the hospital. As much as he wanted to be out with Bucky, it wasn't a risk he was willing to take. "We can say we are friends. And I've never been fishing before, so you're taking me there."
Bucky nodded slowly. "Is that okay with you? Because I mean... I'll do what you want to do." He was just worried that the locals around the lake wouldn't be receptive to them even if they remembered Bucky from when he was a kid. Sometimes that even made reactions worse.

"I'd rather hide what we are than see you hurt again," Steve said. "Maybe some other time in the future, we can say who I really am to you. But I'm going there to enjoy my time with you, not look over my shoulder."

Bucky chewed his lip and then leaned across the middle seat to kiss Steve's cheek quickly. "I love you and I don't want you to forget that even though we won't be able to be open around others on this trip, okay? We are going to have an amazing time in spite of that. And I'm sure Fred and Mindy will like you a lot."

Steve nodded and focused on driving again. "Oh yeah?" he asked with a little smile. "And why would you think that is? Would it be my charming personality? My good sense of humor? My modesty?"

"Maybe a little of all those things." Bucky laughed. "And you're good with people and having good conversations and stuff. And you're sweet and adorable. And they will probably like that you're a cop - Fred's kids are all firemen or EMTs so you'll be in the same category."

Steve blushed at the compliments. "Oh, they are? Are they handsome?" he teased. He gave Bucky's hand a squeeze to show that he was joking. "They sound nice. I wonder if I'll get funny stories out of them from when you were a kid."

"You gonna trade me in for someone who isn't a dirty hippie who works at a record shop and eats cereal for dinner?" Bucky asked then added, "They might have some stories of little Bucky. Mindy used to make me cookies to take on the drive home so I'm sort of hoping she will do that again."

"Yeah, I'm thinking that dirty firemen are my type now," Steve joked casually. "Mindy’s cookies might be great, but they can’t be better than my mom's. She makes the best chocolate chip cookies I ever had."

"You know, Steve, Babe," Bucky pinched his arm lightly. "You say that about a lot of things but then you never bring me the food to try... I need to experience this food of your mom's that's literally the best you've ever had."
"Well, you like my cooking, right? I learned it from her. Now imagine my cooking but a thousand times better and that's my mom's. You can ask the girls when we get back," Steve said.

"I do like your cooking, that's true," Bucky said. It took them about another hour to get up to the lake but pretty soon they were pulling up to their cabin. The second Steve put the car in park, Bucky leaped out of the truck, ran to the edge of the lake, and stuck his hand in it to feel the water. It was pretty cold but he was still going to swim in it.

"Wow, this is really gorgeous," Steve said as he admired the view. "We get a whole week of this?" He started to unload their things. "What's the inside like, Buck? It looks so much bigger than our apartment."

"It's about double our apartment, Steve," Bucky said and trotted back over to help Steve pull their bags from the truck. "This place is amazing. I can't believe I'm back here, finally. Dad would have loved being here with the two of us."

When they walked inside, Steve's jaw dropped at how beautiful it all was. "Holy crap," he said. "All this space for just the two of us? This is amazing!" He dropped their bags and picked Bucky up to spin him around once. "You have to show me around."

Bucky squeaked when he was lifted off the ground and he clung to Steve. "Okay, okay. Calm yourself, Stevie." He pointed a finger towards the short hallway, "The bedroom is the door on the left and the game room is on the right. Kitchen is through the game room and the spare bathroom is tucked over there as well."

"I don't want to calm myself. We're on our honeymoon!" Steve said excitedly. He pulled him in for a kiss and started to explore the place like a kid on Christmas. "There's a game room? Oh my god, that's so cool!"

"Yeah, it's got a pool table that flips over into a ping pong table and some old timey board games." Bucky lead Steve to the game room and showed him the pool table before pulling him back out into the hall and towards the bedroom. "And we will sleep in here," he said and opened the door.

"Why do they add all the cool stuff inside? I thought we had to stay outside," Steve said but as soon as Bucky showed him to the bedroom, Steve tackled him to the bed and started kissing him like crazy.

"Steve!" Bucky giggled and flopped on the bed underneath his husband. He kissed him back and wrapped his legs and arms around him. "You like it here, Baby? Are you excited we get to be here alone for a whole week?" Bucky licked into Steve's mouth and kissed him for a moment longer then bit his lip gently and pulled back.

"I love it. I love this place. I love you." Steve smiled down at him and moaned softly at the sight of Bucky beneath him. "I'm so glad you wanted to take me here. We are going to have so many good memories to look back on. Starting with this one." He rolled their hips together.

Bucky's breath caught in his throat and he looked into Steve's eyes with heavy desire. "We need to get unpacked and go to the tackle shop." He nearly groaned out as Steve slowly grinded against him. "Steve... Baby... my sweet perfect husband."

"We can make it quick," Steve said. "We haven't had sex in a few days, it'll be real easy to make you come." He was like a goddamn teenager. "So I'll get us off and then we'll go to the tackle shop."

"I feel like I should be a little offended," Bucky said and then gasped as Steve's fingers trailed down his sides. "But I can't seem to find it in me." He paused and breathed deeply, unable to help how we rutted up into Steve as well. "How are we doing this? Hand jobs, blow jobs? The lube is still in my bag and I don't want to stop to go get it."

"Just a quick hand job," Steve said. He unzipped the front of both of their pants and shoved their clothes down so he could take both of their cocks in his hand. "We'll use lube some other time."

"Okay, now I'm on board," Bucky confessed as his dick hardened quickly and he was grasped in Steve's strong hand with Steve's own cock pressed against his. Bucky took Steve's other hand and gently pulled it to his lips. He took two of Steve's fingers into his mouth and started to suck them sloppily.

Steve let out a little groan as he watched Bucky sucking on his fingers. He started to thrust into his hand, hardening with each movement as his dick rubbed against Bucky's. "You're so goddamn sexy, it's criminal."

Bucky pulled Steve's fingers from his mouth with a wet pop. "You're a cop. Do something about it," he challenged and then directed Steve's wet fingers under his shirt and to Bucky's taught nipples. He looked at Steve with heavy lids and made low keening noises every few seconds to excite Steve a little more.
Steve leaned down and bit a mark onto Bucky's neck where he could hide it if he wanted. "I plan to." He pinched Bucky's nipples lightly before rolling them between his fingers. He stroked their dicks faster, gasping Bucky's name lightly. "Brought handcuffs."

Bucky's whole body jolted up and he gripped Steve's neck lightly with his hands. "Oh. My. God. Are you going to use them on me? Please, Steve, you can't mention it and then not really mean it." He rubbed his thumb up Steve's cheek and over his lip lightly. "Oh my god, please tell me we're going to use them."

Steve didn't want to use the handcuffs on a regular basis because they were city property but he figured he could make an exception for their honeymoon. "Tonight," he promised, laughing a little at how excited Bucky got over it. He rolled his hips against Bucky's and let out a soft groan. "You'll love it."

"Yes, I fucking will," Bucky said and pulled Steve's face down for a kiss. "Oh, god, Steve, I love you." He was getting closer to orgasm as Steve worked his hand over them. Bucky was betting he was going to come first especially now that Steve had him excited for handcuffed sex later that night.

Steve kissed him back vehemently and fucked his hand until he felt his orgasm crashing down on him. Steve shoved Bucky's shirt up so he wouldn't stain it as he came all over his hand and Bucky's stomach.

Bucky followed after Steve quickly and shot up over his fingers. He moaned low and long as he came and then grabbed for Steve's hand to suck their combined come from his fingers one by one. After he had cleaned his husband off, he sat up to kiss him again and lick his neck lovingly.

Steve wrapped his arms strongly around Bucky after and hugged him tight. "Fuck, I love you so much. We were put on this earth for each other."

"Mhmm," Bucky hummed in agreement and kissed Steve's neck. "It's like my ring says, I'm with you till the end of the line. And you're my giant goof of an officer and the best husband a guy could ask for forever."

Steve looked so goddamned happy to be with Bucky here, all alone where they could truly enjoy each other. "So are we going to go to the tackle shop now, Romeo?" Steve asked with a grin.
"Yes," Bucky said and reluctantly rolled out from under Steve to get up. "We need some supplies and some groceries." He zipped himself back up in his pants and ruffled a hand through his hair before slipping on a light jacket and waiting for Steve.

---

Steve stood up and stole another kiss before heading outside with Bucky. "Do we walk or do we have to drive there?" Steve asked. He gasped when he saw a deer at the edge of the trees and pointed it out to Bucky.

---

Bucky chuckled lightly at Steve and said, "It's a lot different than being in the city. More animals, more nature." He headed towards the truck, tossing the keys to Steve as he went, "It's not that bad of a walk but let's drive since I don't know what all we might buy and I don't want to have to carry a lot back."

---

"I've never seen a deer in real life before," Steve said. He got into the car and then turned it on. "Have you ever seen a bear here? I saw one at the zoo once. They're huge," he rambled.

---

"I haven't seen a bear here, no. I don't think they are around this area - mostly just in the Catskills. This is a little far north for them." Bucky helped lead Steve to the small tackle shop and the grocery. They were fairly little buildings, more like oversized shacks and they had paper signs out front that said 'OPEN' in bright red letters.

---

"Well, this is quaint," Steve said pleasantly. "Shame that there's no bears, though." He held the door open for Bucky to the shop and followed shortly. "What about otters?"

---

"You wanted to see bears?" Bucky asked, confused.

Before he could say anything else, Fred Watkins popped his head around the corner of the register and said, "By god, it's little Bucky Barnes all grown up!" He banged on the wall that divided the tackle shop from the grocery and yelled, "Mindy! Get over here, Jumpy Jamie is back!"

---

Steve was startled by Fred, but he looked at Bucky with a dumb smirk. "Jumpy Jamie?" He wanted the story behind that. Steve gave the couple a little wave. "I brought him back in one piece," he joked.

---

Bucky elbowed Steve in the ribs when he mocked him for the nickname. Mindy gave Bucky a big shaky hug and Fred shook his hand. "Fearless Fred!" Bucky smiled and gestured to Steve, "This is Steve. Hasn't gone fishing a day in his life. Poor city boy doesn't leave Brooklyn but to head to Manhattan." It was easy to morph into the way of speaking up here and Bucky felt a little giddy and free and like he was a kid again.
Steve gave them both a pleasant smile. "Bucky wouldn't stop telling me how great this place was, so I figured I had to check it out. This is the furthest I've been from home, I think. I saw a deer for the first time in my life today. That was nice."

"Bucky will teach you how to fish real nice." Fred nodded. "His daddy taught him right so you're in good hands, Son." Fred paused and looked behind the two of them briefly, "Where is Old George anyway? We haven't seen the two of you for just about five years."

Bucky gave a quick look to Steve and then cleared his throat, "My dad died five years ago in June."

Fred's expression became immediately apologetic and Mindy got teary-eyed. "Oh, I'm so sorry," he said. "Is your mom alright?"

Steve frowned and said, "She died with him." He didn't want Bucky to have to be the one to break that news too. "Bucky's been taking care of his sisters all on his own ever since."

Bucky nodded and smiled weakly at Mindy and Fred. "I'm sorry I haven't been back since then. It was just pretty hard to think of coming here without my dad. You know as well as I do how much Old George loved it here."

Mindy held up a finger and trotted back over to the grocery side and brought back her lost and found box. She pulled a book out and offered it to Bucky. "This was your father's. I've been keeping it around waiting for him to come back. There's a bookmark halfway through - I don't think he finished it."

Steve looked at the book and then patted Bucky's shoulder. "He'll take good care of it. I'm actually pretty impressed that you held onto it for that long." This couple was pretty incredible. "Do you guys want some time to catch up? I can wait outside," Steve offered.

"No, no, heavens, I'm sure you came for something in particular," Mindy said, "We will let you get back to it. Bucky, Honey, if you forget where something is, just ask." She retired to the grocery side again and Fred went back to reading the paper.

Bucky dragged Steve around the tackle shop for a bit and then the grocery, getting anything they might need. They would probably be back sometime but he still wanted to be prepared. Bucky was pretty quiet on the short drive back over to the cabin as he flipped through the book and saw his dad's distinct handwritten notes in the margins.

Steve let Bucky be for a bit, not wanting to disturb him in his reminiscing, but halfway through the drive home, he kept glancing over at Bucky as he flipped through the book. "What's it say in there?" Steve asked. "What's the book about, anyway?"
"Uh, it's a World War II novel. About a U.S. naval lieutenant in France," Bucky said and closed the book and held it close to him. "Looks like it was a gift from one of my dad's war buddies." Bucky had never talked to Steve about his father's time in the military. He was a naval officer himself in the Vietnam War until he was honorably discharged after a bad accident that damaged his spine pretty severely.

"What? You never told me your dad was a military man. My dad was one too," Steve said. "Tell me more about him. You've told me that he liked reading and was pretty quiet. But I want to know as much as you want to tell."

They arrived back at the cabin and Bucky started unloading what they had bought as he talked about his dad. "Well, he was in the navy. I have his uniform in the back of our closet - don't know if you've seen it. He was a commander. Almost made it to captain but he was shot in the back three times in Vietnam and they discharged him. He was almost paralyzed but managed to recover with a lot of physical therapy. I was ten, Becca was just born before he went back to the front and got hurt." Bucky paused and made eye contact with Steve. When Steve had got shot on the job, Bucky couldn't help but worry he might be paralyzed. Bucky figured his dad got lucky but Steve might not. He was grateful everyday that Steve made it out of that whole thing okay.

"I saw the uniform but I thought it might have been your grandpa's or something since you hadn't mentioned your dad being in the military," Steve had a guilty look on his face when Bucky locked eyes with him as he mentioned his dad nearly being paralyzed. He knew what Bucky was thinking and he felt bad for having Bucky so worried. "Did your parents tell you what their wedding was like? Where did they go for their honeymoon?"

"I saw pictures of their wedding. It was pretty small. Not as small as ours, of course," Bucky said and stocked the fridge and cabinets with their food. "They didn't take a honeymoon. Mom was pregnant with me at the time and my dad was shipping out for his second tour so they didn't get much time together until my dad took leave to come home when I was about to be born."

Steve washed down the countertops and stole a quick kiss from Bucky. "Man, he must have been the proudest dad in the world when you were born," he said. "Do you have any pictures of when they first took you home from the hospital? I bet you were adorable as all hell."

"We might have something. We can look when we get home. But mostly I think it's just elementary school Bucky." Bucky shrugged and leaned against the wall and watched Steve. "For the record, you call me 'Jamie' once on this trip, and you're sleeping outside."

Steve walked over and placed his hands on Bucky's hips. "I'm still waiting to hear the explanation for what 'Jumpy Jamie' means." He slid his hands up his sides. "You don't look like a 'Jamie'."

---

Bucky sighed in exasperation. "I was eight, my dad was taking a nap and Fred decided to take me hunting. Turns out, I hate guns. The first shot from Fred had me jumping out of my skin and running back to the cabin," Bucky said and crossed his arms. "I've been 'Jumpy Jamie' since then. And no one but Fred can call me that and not get a punch to the gut so don't test me."

---

"That's adorable," Steve said, giving him a loving smile. "Did you hide under your dad's bed?" he teased. Steve kissed up Bucky's neck affectionately. "I wonder if our son or daughter will be afraid of guns. I never went hunting before, but I know how to use a pistol."

---

Bucky flicked Steve in the head at his teasing. "Our kids won't have to worry about it because they won't touch a gun unless they decide to become an officer like you or go into the military." He pulled Steve's hips closer to his and put his hands in Steve's back pockets. They were all unpacked now so all there was to do was decide what to do first on their first day.

---

"They can't do either of those. They need a nice, safe job," Steve said. He drew him into a slow kiss and smiled. "Can we go fishing today? Or maybe just take the boat into the lake so we can look in the water? And maybe at the sky? I'd love to do that."

---

"We can do whatever you want to do, Love," Bucky said and kissed Steve. "This is our week. If you want to go out in the boat and look at the nature we can do that." He let go of Steve and ushered him towards the bedroom. "First, I have a present for you."

---

"A present?" Steve asked. "But you've already picked out all the stuff for our honeymoon. You've already given me so much." He ran a hand over his back and nibbled at his ear. "So what is it?"

---

"Okay, it's not much it's just a little thing so don't get yourself too excited," Bucky said and maneuvered Steve's hands gingerly over his eyes so he wouldn't look yet. Bucky sifted through his bag and grabbed the new sketch book and pack of assorted art pencils that he had bought for Steve. "You can open now," he said and held them out for Steve. "Thought you might want these in case you wanted to draw some of the scenery or something."

---

When Bucky allowed him to open his eyes, Steve smiled brightly and hugged him tight. "This is perfect, Baby. I'm going to fill this up all week. I think I'm going to take it out on the boat with us." He flipped through the book and touched the papers to feel the grain of it.
"I know it's not much but..." Bucky said and nuzzled into Steve's neck. "You want to take the camera with us too?" He started pulling his clothes from his bag and searched around for something to wear in the boat. He settled on a pair of ratty jean shorts and an old tight tank top.

---

"It's everything to me, Buck," Steve said as he played with Bucky's hair. "You're so perfect." He stole a kiss and said, "I'll bring the sketchbook and you can bring the camera." He watched him change clothes with interest. "What's the biggest fish you ever caught in the lake?"

---

"Once caught a fish that was ten inches long and weighed about twelve pounds," Bucky said. "I was never as good as my dad and he always got the really big ones. I also don't quite know the names of the different species of fish." He grabbed the camera and waited at the door to the bedroom. "Are you changing or wearing that?"

---

Steve looked down at himself and said, "I think this is fine to wear." He wasn't dressed fancy but he had good clothes on. "Come on, let's head out already," Steve said excitedly before hurrying out of the cabin.

---

"Goddammit, Steve, wait!" Bucky called after him. "We need to get the boat from the shed!" He hustled to catch up with Steve and directed him to the back of the cabin where there was a short shed that housed things like outdoor furniture and the boat during the winter. Bucky started dragging the boat out of the shed and towards the lake.

---

Steve was a smart guy but he was fucking clueless with anything that didn't exist in the city. He helped Bucky carry the boat over and hopped in once it was in the water but it started to shake dangerously. "Shit! What'd I do?" He put his hands on the sides to steady it.

---

"Steve, it’s called water displacement." Bucky laughed at him and carefully got into the boat and took the oars. He wasn't very good with the motorized skiff so he chose to grab the one that was manual. "Just sit and don't move too much," Bucky said and started rowing them out past the shallows and into the deeper part of the lake.

---

Steve spent hours on the boat with Bucky just drawing and lounging out across the length of it with his head in his lap. He drew a few pictures of the trees and of Bucky and once the sun started to set, he finally decided that he was ready to go in. "Thank you again for taking me here, Buck."

---

Bucky yawned and then gave Steve a pleased kiss. "You're welcome, Baby. Thanks for being willing to come here on our honeymoon." He rowed them back into land, hopped out of the boat quickly, and started pulling it onto the grass with Steve still in it. It exerted a lot of his energy and he couldn't help but fall back on his ass once Steve was safety on shore again.
Steve laughed when Bucky plopped on the ground. He got out of the boat and carried Bucky bridal style to the cabin. "So what do you want for dinner tonight, my beautiful husband?"

Bucky wrapped his arms around Steve's neck as he was carried in and deposited on the table in the kitchen. "We can have whatever. I'm okay with eggs and toast. Or cereal does sound really good right now. But I know that makes your face scrunch up in this exasperated sigh like, 'Why did I decide to marry this man?'"

Steve made that exact face as Bucky described it in reaction to Bucky asking for cereal. "You're lucky I love you," Steve sighed in a defeated tone. He pressed his lips to Bucky's before going to grab a bowl, milk, and cereal for his husband.

"You better," Bucky quipped and made himself a bowl. He was so pleased that he was finally here with Steve and he shamelessly watched Steve's every movement and stared too much at his ass just because he could and no one was around to tell him to snap out of it or get a room.

Once their bowls were poured, Steve sat down next to Bucky and began to eat. "So do you want me to be the one fucking you when you have the handcuffs on? Or do you want me to ride you?"

Bucky choked on his cereal and stared at Steve. "Well..." he started. "I guess it depends on whether you are going to let us use them more than once? Or maybe, well, honestly, I really want you to take me hard and fast while my hands are cuffed behind me. Ass up, face down, or stuck on my side." He bit his lip and adjusted his cock in his jean shorts, already getting a little aroused. "And then if you let us use them again then you can cuff my arms up above me on the headboard and ride me."

Steve loved being able to still surprise Bucky. "Sorry, Babe, we're only going to use it once." But when Bucky looked a bit disappointed, Steve nudged him. "I'm just kidding, Handsome. We'll get to both."

"That's not very nice, you know." Bucky pouted. "Maybe I won't let you fuck me after all. You'll just have to sit and watch me naked and writhing on the bed, arms behind me, body ready for you but you can't have it. How's that sound to you? Sounds pretty fun to me." Bucky grinned at Steve and gave him a cheeky wink.

"You wouldn't last like that without asking me to fuck you," Steve said. "I waited a lot longer than you did to have sex, so that makes me the patient one," he teased. Steve finished his cereal and threw an arm around Bucky's shoulders. "Take that."
Bucky considered for half a second just making it a challenge and taking him on, but he knew Steve was right. He was also incredibly frustrated that Steve brought up the fact that he waited to be in love to have sex. It felt like Steve always shoved that in his face when he was trying to get his way or maybe trying to put Bucky down. He gave him a nasty face. "You know what, Steve... just...fine," Bucky grumbled and crossed his arms. "You better fuck me really well tonight."

Steve face fell when Bucky gave him that look. "What? Buck, Baby, I didn't mean to get you mad," he said. "Was what I said that was upsetting?" He hadn't meant for his words to come off so distasteful to Bucky.

"You just always bring up the fact that you didn't have sex with anyone before me and sometimes I feel like you resent me for not doing the same." Bucky sighed and spun his spoon around his bowl absently. "I didn't know I was going to meet you or that there was anyone even out there I was supposed to be with forever."

"Baby, I don't resent you for that," Steve said, reaching for his hand. "I'm happy that I saved myself for you, but I don't resent that you had sex with other people. I had no idea that joking about it would upset you." He brought Bucky's hand to his lips so he could kiss the back of it. "I'm sorry I made you mad."

"I don't know..." Bucky sighed. "It's fine. I'm sorry, Steve. I shouldn't have gotten mad. It's just between the fuck-ups and bringing home guys all the time and being sexually reckless and, I guess, somewhat resenting myself for all of it... I just assumed you did since you've said something about it just about a hundred times."

"I agree that it wasn't a smart thing to do what you did, but I'm not upset or resentful," Steve said gently. "And now I get to know that I'm the only fuck-up you're ever going to take home from now on." Steve kissed him gently. "Also, you had experience with more people but still chose me."

"You're not a fuck-up I take home, you dweeb." Bucky rested his forehead to Steve's. "You're the only good decision I ever made. And I'm really sorry I got mad. I've just been thinking about that a lot and I projected my own frustration at myself towards you." He held Steve's face in his hands and chuckled. "See? I don't need a therapist; I just got to get really mad at myself and then get introspective. I got this."

"You've made other good decisions, too, you know. I just happen to be one of them." Steve played with Bucky's hair and kissed him slowly. He gently brushed his fingertips over his jaw before saying, "Now how about you get naked in the bedroom while I do dishes."
"Yes, Sir," Bucky said and sauntered off to the bedroom happily. First, he grabbed the official sex blanket of the trip and folded it neatly before laying it out on the foot of the bed. Then Bucky stripped down and tossed his clothes into the wooden hamper in the closet. He tried looking through Steve's stuff to find the cuffs but he came up short and just decided to wait for Steve to get them. He did grab the lube and set it on the bedside table. He was tempted to finger himself open while he waited so he would be ready for Steve's cock immediately, but he knew Steve didn't like when he did that so he refrained.

Steve only took a few minutes to clean up and he came into the bedroom soon after. "Hey there, Beautiful," he said pleasantly. "I bet you tried looking for the handcuffs." Steve had an obnoxious smirk on his face and he pulled them from his back pocket, where he had them the whole time.

"You can't prove anything, Officer," Bucky mocked back and leaned casually against the pillows with his legs spread wide. He pulled his hair back in a ponytail and hovered his hand over his dick, waiting to see if Steve would stop him from touching himself or let him get hard watching Steve undress.

Steve's hand moved to touch Bucky's dick but he decided to let him have his fun as he strolled. Steve gave Bucky a bit of a show, slowly pulling his shirt over his head and playing with his nipples a little bit before pushing his pants down.

It didn't take very long of watching Steve and jerking himself before Bucky's cock was straining out towards his husband and dribbling pre-come lightly. Bucky moaned and licked his lips as he watched, wanting to touch him but also loving the view. "My god, Steve, stop being so gorgeous. It's not fair."

Once Steve was naked, he got on his knees in front of Bucky so he could lap the pre-come off the tip of his dick. "Speak for yourself, Sexy," Steve hummed. He slowly took Bucky's cock in his mouth and swallowed him down once before coming up and giving Bucky's side a little swat. "Hands behind your back, Baby."

Bucky's eyes flashed and he scooted forward quickly and readily put his hands behind him for Steve to cuff him up. His breathing became more erratic and shallow with his excitement and he had to squeeze his eyes shut for a moment to calm down as he waited for his husband to restrain him.

"Christ, you're so easy to work up," Steve said as he cuffed Bucky's hands. Once Bucky was restrained, he moved him so his ass was up in the air. "You have the right to remain silent," Steve snickered as he smoothed his hands over his back and ass.
"Oh my god," Bucky gasped out once he was in position with his ass up and his hands cuffed securely behind him. "I'm going to ignore the cheesiness of that cop line and forgive you for being so unoriginal." He looked behind him at Steve and raised an eyebrow, "but I don't think you want me to remain silent, do you, Baby? You want to hear me screaming your name and moaning for your cock, right?"

"You're right. I don't want you to keep quiet," Steve said. He grabbed Bucky's ass and spread it open so he could dive his head down and lick his hole. He pushed his tongue inside Bucky's ass and let out a low moan before popping off of him again. "This week is going to be so good."

"Alright, you don't talk, I talk," Bucky breathed out quickly. "You eat me out, I'll talk." He was a little impatient already having had to wait all day since Steve told him about the handcuffs. Now that they were finally on him, he just wanted Steve to fuck him deep and rough and take control and he wanted it now.

Steve rolled his eyes but he obeyed. He spent a few minutes eating Bucky out and getting him nice and ready. He slicked up two fingers and pushed them inside his hole, taking his time opening him up. "The more time I take now, the harder I'll fuck you," Steve promised. "Do you want me to pull on your hair too, Baby?"

"Yes, fuck, yes please," Bucky whimpered and pushed back towards Steve. "Pull the cuffs, pull my hair, slap my ass, bite me - anything you feel like doing. I'm yours, Baby. Take as much control of me as you feel comfortable doing, okay?" He wanted Steve to exert some dominance over him but he also didn't want Steve going further than he felt okay with doing. He knew that Steve was fairly sensitive to feeling like he was abusing Bucky when they had rough sex and Bucky didn't want to push Steve at all - especially not on their honeymoon.

Steve pulled back and sucked a hickey onto the curve of Bucky's ass. He gave it a wet kiss before smacking the spot once. Steve was too sensitive to go too rough with his husband but he could also push his boundaries a little for Bucky's sake. "Tell me how much you want my cock, Buck," he said in a low voice as he slicked his dick up with lube.

Bucky tucked his face into the side of the pillow and caught a glimpse of Steve prepping his dick out of the corner of his eye. "Jesus, Baby, sometimes I want you so bad I can't breathe. I get so needy for you and my ass aches to be stretched and ruined by you. I never get tired of having your cock deep inside me and I get excited every time I see you hard for me, just like it's the first time all over again. Our first time was perfect and every time since has been perfect and I need so you bad right now, I might scream."
It was never a challenge to get hard for Bucky but hearing him talk about how bad he wanted him did the trick even better. "Fuck yeah." Steve slid a hand down Bucky's spine. "Gonna give you the best night ever." He pushed his dick in balls deep with one quick sharp thrust. Steve gasped and wanted to grind slowly against Bucky's ass but he knew his husband wanted to be fucked hard. He grabbed his waist and pulled back before slamming his hips forward over and over again, going from zero to a hundred in seconds and making the bed creak.

---

"Fuck, Steve!" Bucky yelled and had to rely on Steve's grip on his middle to keep him balanced since his hands were pulled behind him and his legs were already shaking. "Shit, son of bitch, oh my god," he rambled into the pillow and squeezed his eyes shut. Steve hadn't railed Bucky this hard much before and Bucky was having a difficult time focusing on anything but the shocks of sensations going through his body as his prostrate was hit multiple times a second.

---

Steve didn't slow down because, despite the outburst, Bucky didn't look to be in pain nor did he ask him to stop. However, he did give his side a small smack to grab his attention. "Want me to slow down, Beautiful?" Steve was already breathless from how hard he was working Bucky's ass.

---

Bucky couldn't speak except groaning and panting and he tried to give Steve a look that conveyed how much he loved this but that Steve could slow down if he needed to. Steve was pressing the chain of the handcuffs into Bucky's back and the sweat from Bucky's skin was making the metal slip around. He was more than likely going to have marks on his skin.

---

Steve could feel the sweat droplets roll down his back but he showed no signs of slowing down. He grabbed Bucky's ponytail and pulled his head back so he could kiss him messily. "You feel amazing," he breathed out before pressing Bucky's cheek down against the mattress. "Gonna make you come so hard."

---

Bucky's heart jumped and his cock twitched when Steve pulled his hair. "I love you so fucking much," he managed to gasp into the mattress. Bucky could feel himself getting close but he really, really didn't want to come yet. Just knowing that he was going to come without his dick being touched was already getting him too worked up. "Love you, love you, Steve, Baby."

---

Steve kept a tight grip on Bucky's ponytail and kept it taught in his hand, but he didn't pull so much that it would lift Bucky's head off the mattress. "Come for me, Baby. I'm not taking these cuffs off until you come twice tonight," Steve purred in his ear before biting it.

---

"Kiss me," Bucky demanded desperately and tried turning his head. "Kiss me, Steve." Some of his hair had fallen from the ponytail and was sticking to Bucky's face as he stared up at Steve and thought about how he must have done at least something right to get to have the most beautiful husband in the world and the most loving and most generous and the absolute perfect man for him. "Ah, fuck!" He came quickly and suddenly and his ass clenched down around Steve's cock while hot spurts of come layered onto the blanket underneath them.

---

Steve leaned down to kiss him again, causing himself to bury his cock deeper in Bucky's ass. He moaned Bucky's name against his lips when he felt the man's muscles spasm around him. Steve gave a few, slow rolls of his hips and came soon after him. He pulled out and laid breathlessly next to Bucky, exhausted and looking happily fucked out.

---

Bucky collapsed down on the bed, the handcuffs still securely on. He was mashed on his stomach with his face down in the pillow again and he was far too shaky and sensitive all over to move. After a minute or so, he tried adjusting and didn't get very far without the use of his arms. "Steve, you want to help me roll onto my side?"

---

Steve immediately moved Bucky onto his side and kissed him gently. "That was amazing, Bucky. I don't think I've ever gone that hard on you before, are you alright?"

---

"My legs are already sore but the rest of me is more than okay," Bucky assured him. He felt a little funny being cuffed while having a casual naked conversation with Steve but Steve did promise Bucky would come twice before the cuffs were taken off. "I really loved that, Baby. Thank you for using your handcuffs on me. Did you like it or not so much?"

---

Steve played with Bucky's hair and brushed the loose strands out of his face. "I didn't not like it," he said shyly. "I guess, I just like making you happy. And all I'm ever going to need out of sex is you being willing to do it with me. I think I'm just boring and vanilla," he said.

---

Bucky gave Steve a sympathetic smile. "Yes, Babe, you are pretty vanilla. It's just how you are. But you're never boring and I love every time we have sex no matter what we do." He wiggled forward to give Steve a kiss and crowd onto Steve's pillow. "You always excite me no matter what and you know that's true otherwise I'd never had a boner. Boners can't lie."

---

"Boners can lie. You can get a boner from a gust of wind, you dope," Steve said fondly. He kissed Bucky gently and then reached his hand down to lazily play with Bucky's balls. "But I know you're not bored with me. Although, I do get a little jealous seeing the way you look at posters of Harrison Ford. You melt like a blushing schoolgirl being asked to the dance."

---

"That's exaggeration and you know it," Bucky said with his chin turned up. He feigned frustration and pulled his leg up so Steve could fondle his balls better. "I will give you that, of the two of us, I am probably the easier one to get aroused. And I'm probably just the easier one in general - sexually, I mean. But, hey, you should be grateful, right? It's better than me being the type of husband who never puts out."
Steve nuzzled Bucky's jaw affectionately and smiled. "I'd still love every second with you even if we never had sex again. I mean, if you think about it there's going to be some point where neither if he will be able to get it up anymore."

Bucky whined, "Oh, I don't want to think about that. I want to have old man sex with you until the day we die. Hell, I mean I'm twenty-five now so I'm halfway there, right?" He tried reaching to wrap his arms around Steve, temporarily forgetting the handcuffs.

Steve snickered when Bucky couldn't move his arms. He stroked his fingers along the length of Bucky's dick. "We will have plenty of old man sex - way past when we are fifty. We'll get it up until we're at least seventy."

"Promise me?" Bucky asked and pushed out his bottom lip slightly. Steve's fingers were exploring over his cock and balls and Bucky loved the lithe touches. His ass was still wet with lube and come and he was tempted to have Steve fist him as they waited for the two of them to get erections again for round two.

"Promise," Steve swore. He kissed his lips a few times and teased Bucky's nipple with his other hand. "I love you so much," he said softly. "I'll still find you sexy even when you have a wrinkly ass."

"Speaking of my ass," Bucky cleared his throat and grinned, "I was sort of hoping I could talk you into fisting me before we fuck again? I'm assuming we are going to fuck again tonight and we're just waiting for Small Steve and Baby Bucky to get with the program..."

Steve blushed at the request but he couldn't say no to Bucky. "Whatever you want, Love," he said adoringly. He kissed him slowly before moving behind him. "You want to be on your side for this?"

"No, let me be on my back, I'll see how that goes. I want to see you. The hands might hurt so I may have to change plans but I want to try." Bucky rolled himself over on his back with his hands and arms underneath. He brought his knees up close to him and showed his ass off for Steve. "Also, for the record, 'Small Steve' was just a terrible nickname for your penis. But it doesn't reflect your actual size in any way... you are well off in that area. Thought I'd let you know. Don't want you getting self-conscious."

Steve laughed as Bucky tried to amend what he had called Steve's dick. "I figured as much. Though asking me to put my whole fist into your ass after calling it 'Small Steve' isn't great for the ego," he joked. Steve eased two fingers inside of Bucky's ass slowly and started to thrust them easily in and out.

---

"I apologize." Bucky nodded. "If I helps, that's the first time I've ever given a nickname to a dick and I was just going for alliteration. And besides, you know I love you inside me, tongue, fist, cock, I love it all."

---

Bucky was still so loose from sex so Steve was able to push in a third finger in no time. "Why not ‘Super-huge Steve’," he joked. "And ‘Baby Bucky’ won't work. What if we get a kid that looks like you? Then we can't call him ‘Baby Bucky’ without thinking about your dick."

---

"Ew, Steve," Bucky lightly kicked at Steve's arm. "But fine, Super Steve... Supreme Steve, Seismic Steve, Strapping Steve, Substantial Steve, Swell Steve." Bucky chuckled.

---

Steve snorted and leaned down to kiss Bucky’s stomach. "You're such a dope." He carefully eased his pinky in and thrust it in and out slowly. "How's that?" he asked. "Not too much at once?"

---

"No, I'm good." Bucky smiled, "Super Steve got me loose enough to take it okay." He groaned low when Steve started pushing his four fingers in and out slowly but with purpose. "This is the perfect first night away, Baby."

---

"Maybe we can try letting you fist me sometime this week. We have the whole house to ourselves so we don't have to worry about rushing or getting too loud," he said. "I'd like to see what you like so much about it."

---

"Oh my god, yes, Steve. If you want to try, I will be so gentle with you and I'll stop at any point if you need me to," Bucky said enthusiastically and pulled up off the bed slightly, trying to see Steve better. He was getting closer to having Steve's thumb inside and Bucky wanted to see as much of it as he could. "We also need to use those cameras one night, too."

---

Steve kissed Bucky's thigh as he slowly tucked his thumb in and eased his whole hand inside of Bucky's ass. "I don’t know how you do it. You're so fucking tight around my hand."

---

"It feels so goddamn good," Bucky said through gritted teeth and forced his body to relax and take Steve's hand. His cock was starting to wake up again and he didn't want to come with Steve's hand inside him. He wanted to come with Steve riding him if Steve wanted to as well. "How are you feeling, Baby?"
"I’m feeling so good, Buck. I love getting to be intimate with you. I like you giving it all up to me. I'd do the same for you." Steve thrust his hand slowly in and out of Bucky's ass. "Looks like someone's getting hard again."

"Uh-huh," Bucky sighed and stared down at Steve. "Wanted to know if you wanted to ride me tonight with the handcuffs on me still or wait for a different night to do that one? We can do whatever you want to do."

"I'll ride you into next week," Steve said. "You just let me know when you want in me. Think you can finger me with the cuffs on or should I take care of myself?" he asked. Steve thrust his hand quicker into Bucky's ass.

"God, fuck," Bucky gasped as Steve went deeper and harsher with his hand. "I want to see you open yourself up for me. You sitting there with your fingers covered in lube stuck as far as you can reach inside you and I can't do anything about it until you sit on my cock." He moaned low and flung his head back. "First, will you handcuff me to the bedpost? That'll make it easier for us."

Steve fucked Bucky with his fist a few more times before pulling it out. Bucky's ass looked so perfect on his fist as he withdrew it and he kissed his temple. "Anything you want." Steve started to look around for the key so he could free Bucky's hands. "Shit," he swore. "Where'd I put it?"

"What?" Bucky asked in a worried clipped tone. "You can't find the key? You brought it, right?" He struggled to sit up and managed to get himself leaning back against the pillows at a pretty uncomfortable angle.

"I know I brought it. Just... give me a second..." Steve scrambled for a minute or two before finally finding it in another pair of jeans. "Thank Christ," he breathed out. Steve unlocked the cuffs and then put the key on the bedside table. "How're your wrists feeling?"

Bucky’s wrists were pretty tender by now but he really didn't want to stop wearing the handcuffs. "They’re okay. My hearts beating pretty fast because I was worried I’d be stuck here naked and restrained as you went to get bolt cutters from Fred."

Steve smiled apologetically. "Sorry, Baby. Didn't mean to scare you." He clipped the cuffs around the headboard so Bucky's hands were now secured again. "That would have been awkward. I would have had to explain why Jumpy Jamie got himself in handcuffs," he teased.
Bucky shoved Steve with his foot and said, "That's it! You called me 'Jumpy Jamie'. After we have sex, you're sleeping outside!" He tried his best to sound serious but he mostly just sounded like a goof - especially with his hands pulled back on the headboard and how his dick was pointing at Steve eagerly.

"That's fine, we'll end up having sex outside next anyway." Steve laughed. He stole a kiss and grabbed the lube so he could slick up his fingers. He turned so his ass was pointed towards Bucky so the man could watch him as he began to finger himself.

As Steve started opening himself up, Bucky clenched his own ass down around nothing. He was really loose from Steve's fist and he wished that somehow he could have Steve inside him while having Steve ride him. Of course, the logical answer would be a plug or a dildo but that had been far since established to not be an option. "Steve, Baby, I love seeing you like this. How does it feel? Can you feel my eyes all over you right now?"

"Yeah," Steve breathed out. "I can always feel it when you look at me. I love knowing how I can keep your attention." Steve let out a little whine as he pushed a third finger into his ass. "You want me to face you when I ride you, Baby? Or no?"

"I always like seeing your face but whichever way is more comfortable with you is fine with me," Bucky said and rubbed his leg against Steve's. "I won't be able to help you or touch you at all with the cuffs on so it's all you, Babe."

Steve was ready to take Bucky. He pulled his fingers out and turned around so he could draw him into a slow kiss. "I want to see your face as I ride you senseless," Steve said and teased Bucky's nipples a little bit to drive him crazy. "You ready?"

Bucky squirmed underneath Steve's touch and nodded helplessly. "Yes, please, Steve, take my cock, please." His nipples were hard and Steve's gentle teasing was proving too much for him to handle. He was overstimulated in the best ways but if Steve didn't get on him soon he might just pass out.

Steve kissed him slowly and held Bucky's dick steady as he lowered his ass down on it. He let out a moan and arched his back once Bucky's cock was entirely buried in his ass. "So good," he breathed out.

Bucky groaned loudly and pulled against the handcuffs, whining when he couldn't get to Steve. "You feel so hot. So tight and warm and perfect around my cock. Jesus, I love this. I love you."
started to slowly fuck up into Steve and he whined audibly again at the feeling. "Don't touch yourself. If I can't touch you, I want to tell you when you can."

---

Steve's hand had been halfway to his dick when Bucky told him not to touch himself. He pouted but moved to hold Bucky's shoulders instead. He braced himself like that and started to rock his hips in earnest, gasping at how good Bucky felt.

---

Steve fucked himself on Bucky's dick and Bucky just stared at every part of his husband with his mouth hanging open lazily. Steve's grip on his shoulders got stronger and it hurt just enough to feel really good but not too bad he needed him to stop. "Let me suck your fingers, please."

---

Steve wasn't even aware of how hard he was gripping Bucky's shoulders. He let go of one and offered Bucky his fingers. "I love how your dick fills me up, Bucky. I want to wake up sore tomorrow."

---

Bucky had two fingers in his mouth and really couldn't answer except to nod and sloppily lick. They got into a good rhythm of Steve slamming down as Bucky rammed up and it felt so fucking good and drew a string of moans and curses from Steve. After a bit, Bucky let go of Steve's hand and said, "Touch your nipples with those wet fingers."

---

Steve teased one of his nipples that was already taught from arousal. "I'm so close, Buck. I want to come so bad."

---

"You want to touch yourself, now?" Bucky asked gently and breathlessly as Steve's bounces on his dick got out of sync with his own. Steve really was close and Bucky would let him touch himself if he needed to, he just wanted him to ask.

---

"Please," Steve gasped out, giving Bucky a desperate look. "I need it, Bucky. And it'll feel really good for you having my ass squeeze around your dick when I come. It'll be good for you, too."

---

Bucky nodded, "Give me a kiss, then you can touch your cock." His hands were starting to hurt in the cuffs and he was ready to have them off. As much as he loved wearing them, he had to begrudgingly admit to himself that he couldn't do it for as long as he had thought he could.

---

Steve gave him a searing kiss. Then, he started to jerk himself off quickly as he rode Bucky's cock. His lips parted and he leaned his head back as he came in thick, hot spurts over their chests.
Once Steve came, Bucky picked up his pace again and slammed into him repeatedly until he was coming as well with his hips up off the mattress, holding Steve up for a second before he collapsed back on the bed in a sweaty heap.

---

Steve cried out Bucky's name with every thrust. He was hypersensitive from coming already but it felt so goddamn good. When he felt Bucky's come drip down his thighs, he collapsed on top of him and then grabbed the key so he could free Bucky's hand. "Not bad for our first night here."

---

The second his hands were free, Bucky flung them around Steve and flipped the two of them over so Steve was under him now. He kissed him with a feverish but lazy passion for a long moment then ran a hand through his messy sweaty hair to pull out the ponytail. "Not bad, Steve? Not bad? This was a goddamn glorious night."

---

Steve laughed and let Bucky maneuver him as he pleased. He dragged his nails over Bucky's back and let out a happy sigh. "It was perfect," Steve conceded. "A night I'll always remember and love."

---

"You better." Bucky nipped at Steve's lower lip happily. "Let's shower and then go to sleep, okay? I'm beat and I want to snuggle with you now that my arms are free and can hold you all night."

---

Steve nodded and took a moment to get out of bed. But when he did, he picked up his husband and carried him to the bathroom. "So what's on the agenda for tomorrow, Beautiful?"

---

"I say we go fishing in the deep part of the lake then we can have sex outside then we can swim in the shallow part by the peer and then we can shower and I'll build a fire and we can grill some fish for dinner." As he was set back on his feet by the shower, Bucky nodded in confirmation, deciding this was a great plan for their second day. The shower here was at least twice as big as their shower back home and Bucky was already making plans for roomy shower sex one day of the trip.

---

"I like the sound of that," Steve said. It took him a little bit to figure out how the shower taps worked, but he got it going at the temperature that Bucky liked. "What if we don't catch any fish? Won't they get too smart after realizing how so many of their fish friends got taken away?"

---

"No, Steve," Bucky chuckled and ducked his head under the water. "Fish are pretty dumb and I'm a pretty good fisherman. We will get something, don't worry." He grabbed the bar of soap he brought from home and ripped open the plastic packaging with his teeth before lathering up his hands and rubbing them down Steve's chest.
"I don’t know about that. Animals can be smart. Fish would have gone extinct if they were that dumb.” Steve was amazing as a cop but he was clearly almost dumb as a stump when it came to the outdoors. And since he was so used to being correct in the city, he was confident he was right about this.

---

"What? That makes no sense,” Bucky started with a confused shake of his head, "Never mind, whatever you say, Love." Bucky poured shampoo into his hands and turned away from Steve to start washing his hair. "You know, that’s only the second time I’ve ever been in handcuffs."

---

Steve looked surprised at Bucky’s confession. He massaged Bucky’s shoulders while the man washed his hair. "What was the first time?" he asked curiously.

---

"Got arrested when I was nineteen,” Bucky said simply and flipped his hair forward to rinse out all the bubbles. After all the shampoo was gone he grabbed just a bit of conditioner and rubbed it into the ends of his long hair and then a bit in his beard for good measure.

---

"Wait, so you’ve never used handcuffs in bed before?” Steve asked in a confused tone. He started to wash his own hair while he waited for a response.

---

"Nope,” Bucky answered and moved so Steve could be under the water. "That was the first time. There’s plenty of stuff I haven't done yet. Sexually, I mean.” He watched Steve clean up and stared at his ass appreciatively as he did. "I've been restrained in other ways but never handcuffs."

---

Steve grinned dumbly. "That's so cool. I got to do something for the first time with you.” He kissed his cheek. "Thank you for trusting me, Baby.” He gave Bucky’s ass a squeeze. "So what did you get arrested for?" Steve asked.

---

"Of course, I trust you,” Bucky assured and kissed Steve with a grin and then took a breath in preparation for the story. "So, as most of my stories go, I was drunk as fuck and was in my buddy’s car with four other people who I didn't know. Well, my buddy was the only sober one so he was taking us home when he got pulled over for speeding. When we were stopped, I got out of the car because I needed to pee but when the officer told me to stop, I mooned him."

---

Steve laughed but then quickly covered his mouth and tried to give Bucky a scolding look but he didn’t have it in him. "Christ, you were such a terror," he said fondly. "I can't tell you how many times I've been mooned on duty."
"Either way, both times I've been in handcuffs has been because I showed my ass." Bucky laughed and got out of the shower to start drying off. "And I wasn't a terror, I just really had to pee. They didn't even let me finish peeing once I got to the station. I had to sit in the cell by myself for like three hours until they decided not to go through the paperwork of charging me with public indecency."

---

"Still a terror," Steve accused. "And at least now you've got a sexy police officer who can spring you out of jail for public indecency so we could go back home to be indecent in private." He kissed along Bucky's neck.

---

"I just realized you get mooned on the job and at home an awful lot," Bucky said. "At least my ass is one you actually wanted to see." He went back towards the bedroom and grabbed his clothes to sleep in and pulled them on. He also brought a giant old sweater to wear at night in case he got too cold.

---

"Your ass is easily in the top three," Steve teased. "Just kidding, it's the best ass I've ever laid eyes on." Steve chose to go to bed wearing nothing since he didn't think it would get that cold. However, halfway through the night, Steve ended up stealing most of the blankets and burying himself into Bucky's side.
Bucky woke early in the morning, freezing cold and with no more blankets on him. Steve wasn't generally a cover hog but tonight he had them all. Bucky carefully pulled the blankets up so he could get under them and he scooted close to Steve. He slipped his oversized sweater over Steve’s head and back so Steve was pressed up against his warm chest.

---

Steve woke up a few hours later sharing Bucky's sweater. He couldn't help but smile a little. He kissed Bucky's chest a few times before sneaking lower to suck at one of his nipples. "Good morning, Love," Steve said in a tired voice.

---

Bucky slowly woke up and slid a hand over Steve's bare ass. "Morning, Mr. Rogers-Barnes." Then he noticed his own sleepy morning wood pressed against Steve's leg contentedly. Maybe he could get Steve to give him some lazy head if he asked. But Bucky was also really hungry and might just let his dick deal with it so he could have some food.

---

Bucky didn't have to even ask him. Steve was already lazily fondling Bucky's balls. "I like the sound of that name," Steve said. "We need to get monogrammed towels and stuff. Be like the fancy people who actually have money."

---

"Monogrammed towels?" Bucky snorted. "That's not fancy, that's cheesy. What, will we get ‘Mr.’ and ‘Mr.’ pillowcases as well? ‘His’ and ‘his’ wine glasses and mugs?" He teased and pulled at the waist band of his pajama pants, ready to help Steve's hand inside whenever he wanted.

---

"And matching sweaters," Steve added. He was shamelessly cheesy and didn't care that it was a bit over the top. He eased his hand down into Bucky’s pants and started to stroke his dick in an easy slow rhythm as he kissed his way back up to Bucky’s lips.

---

Bucky looked up at the ceiling and said under his breath to himself, "You love him, Bucky. You picked this one. Now you got to live with him forever - towels, sweaters, and all. Be strong, Barnes."

---

Steve laughed and nipped Bucky's shoulder. "Quit that," he said. "One of these days you'll look back and be thankful that I made sure we were the adorable couple." He teased the head of Bucky's dick with his thumb.

---

"Last time you tried to make us a better couple, I was put into a collared shirt and had to have my hair brushed," Bucky whined. "My hair, Steve. But fine... if you want to get us grossly cute couples things then I'll deal with it. But only if you promise to have a pair of your underwear monogrammed with 'Property of Bucky Rogers-Barnes' on the ass."

"Hell, I'll get a dozen pairs of underwear monogrammed like that," Steve said happily. He scooted lower again and took the tip of Bucky's dick in his mouth and licked along his shaft just once as a tease. "What else do you want me to wear for you?"

Bucky gasped and giggled a little at the light tickle that went through his body. He gently touched the top of Steve's head and scratched his hair. "Oh, Steve, you really don't want to ask me what I want to see you wear."

"I'm up for suggestions. Except for women's clothes," Steve said. Steve lapped at the tip of Bucky's cock before swallowing him down his throat.

"I know, I know. You don't share my interest in lace panties," Bucky said and pinched Steve. "I wouldn't make you do that. But I would love to see you in my leather jacket sometime. Nothing else but my jacket and maybe a pair of biker boots. And you should really start wearing my clothes around the house more even though they are way too tight on you. Actually, no, that helps. And I want to see you cooking wearing just an apron. And maybe something that makes you look like some important professor or some shit. Also, If you'll let me fuck you while you have your uniform on I would love that."

Steve pulled off Bucky's dick with a surprised sound. "In my uniform?" He had a scandalized look on his face. "I'm supposed to serve and protect in that." He went back to stroking Bucky's dick but didn't take his eyes off him. "I'll get a fake uniform and wear that instead. I won't get a cheap one so it'll at least look real. But not my real uniform."

"That's why I said if you would let me - if. It took you long enough to be okay using your cuffs on me," Bucky said. "Maybe there are some old retired uniforms at the precinct you can have, huh? If not, we can get you a fake one around Halloween or something."

"We can figure something out. But you got to call me 'Officer Sexy' the whole time," Steve joked. He took one of Bucky's balls into his mouth and ran his tongue over it.

"How about Officer Dick Cocker?" Bucky laughed at his own joke but then shut up once Steve had his mouth on his balls. "I'll call you anything you want if you'll wear it for me." Bucky yanked on Steve's hair lightly. "Come up here and kiss me. I'll settle for your hand to finish me off. And I want to know what you want to see me wearing, if there is anything you would like."
Steve moved back up and kissed Bucky deeply as he gave Bucky a hand job. It wasn't exactly sexy or anything, but it was comfortable and intimate. "I want to see you wearing my shirts. Just my shirt and nothing else."

"That it?" Bucky asked and kissed Steve again. "Man, you ask me and I give you a list, I ask you and you say maybe some shirts." Bucky laughed.

"What? It's really sexy when you wear my shirts. Especially when your ass pokes out when you bend over to get something." Steve smiled fondly. "I like seeing you waking up in my shirt and stretching so your tummy shows. It's one of the most beautiful sights in the world."

Bucky gasped lightly at the compliment combined with the hand job. "Would you ever want me to put on the fake police uniform? Be a long-haired foul-mouthed kinky cop? Sounds pretty hot to me if it interests you at all?"

Steve didn't notice that he stroked Bucky a bit faster when he mentioned Bucky wearing a uniform. He hadn’t really considered that. "Um..." He blushed. "Yeah, I think I’d like that a lot."

Bucky's eyes gleamed and he smiled wide, "Fuck yeah. I can't wait. We need a uniform as soon as we can get one then." He was close to his orgasm and he reached a hand down to clasp over Steve's to stroke with him until he was coming between their fingers in slow but pleased bursts.

When Bucky came, Steve brought Bucky's hand to his mouth to lick it clean before sucking his own fingers, keeping eye contact with Bucky the whole time. "Love you, Handsome."

"And I love you. My god, I love you," Bucky answered and waited for Steve to finish cleaning off their hands before he jumped him and started kissing him to taste himself on Steve's lips. He broke off from him a bit later and trailed a hand down Steve's side. "Do you need me to return the favor or is Super Steve not awake this morning?"

Steve shook his head. "You can return the favor later. Maybe while I'm trying to hook a fish, you can hook an even bigger one," Steve said, nodding down between his legs. He still had a dumb grin from Bucky jumping him and kissing him. "What do you want for breakfast?"

"Punk." Bucky shook his head with a grin but rolled out of bed and followed Steve to the kitchen. He looked around in the cabinets and the fridge. Eggs and bacon sounded great but he kind of wanted to mess with Steve. "If I say I want cereal again are you going to have Father Frank divorce us?"

---

"No, I'll have him divorce us if you ask for it for dinner tonight," Steve joked. He swatted Bucky's ass and asked, "Do you really want cereal? I'll get it for you."

---

"No, I'd love eggs and bacon," Bucky said and held his ass in protection from Steve. "Just thought it'd be funny to see what you said. And you don't have to worry because it's fish for dinner tonight and, for once, I'm making the food since you can't cook on a fire pit grill."

---

"If you say so," Steve said. He started to cook up breakfast and after a bit of silence he asked, "So... I was thinking about maybe using the money from the precinct settlement to help other people like us."

---

Bucky quirked his eyebrow and leaned against the counter by Steve as he cooked breakfast. Steve was looking down into the skillet and Bucky pocketed his hands in his pajamas and said, "Okay. Um, what do you mean, exactly?"

---

"I don't know, just... setting up some sort of foundation or program to help people. I feel bad getting so much money when we let someone go who didn't deserve it and could hurt others," Steve elaborated.

---

"Are you saying you want to set up some sort of gay community foundation?" Bucky asked and rubbed a hand down Steve's back. "How long have you been thinking of this? Do you regret not going to court with Rumlow?"

---

"Yeah. Maybe a shelter somewhere people can go to. I could probably set up something with Father Frank at the church." Steve shrugged his shoulders. "And, yes, I have been really regretting it. But I also know that it was the best decision for our family's sake."

---

"Oh, Baby," Bucky's face fell and he sighed. If it weren't for him and the girls, Steve probably would have been able to fight Rumlow and get him convicted. Bucky put his hands on Steve's face and directed his attention to him so he could give him a quick kiss. "You think Father Frank will help you with that? A shelter at the church?"

---

"I think he would. We could build an annex onto the church and let people know it's gay-friendly. And we could pay for someone to mind it or, since it's a church, people can volunteer. And we could pay for the food and such too," Steve said.
"Okay, so sort of like a homeless shelter for gay people who need some protection for a bit? Is that what you're thinking?" Bucky asked. "The church does have that extra plot next to it that could be built on."

Steve nodded. "Exactly that. Not everyone is fortunate enough to have an understanding family. And Becca and Lilly could volunteer too sometimes and it'll look great on resumes for them, wouldn't it?"

Bucky nodded and smiled. His nose tingled up with the tickle that warned he was going to cry. He hugged Steve and nuzzled against his neck as his eyes got watery. "Baby, this is so important to you. I can tell you've been planning this a while, haven't you? You have such a good heart."

Steve didn't realize that he would make Bucky emotional. And Steve couldn't help but get choked up because, yeah, it was really important to him and he felt selfish for thinking of using this money for something like this when it could give their family a more comfortable life. Having Bucky's approval meant the world to him. "So you're not upset?"

"Why, why would I be upset about this?" Bucky asked and searched Steve's face. He had to wipe a quiet tear from his cheek and tried not to think about all the times he would have gone to a place like Steve's shelter when he was harassed in high school. Instead of skipping class to go smoke weed or snort coke with the burnouts and occasional jock on the football field, he probably would have just headed to the shelter.

"Because we were going to use that money to save up for a house. I mean... we still probably will have enough left over to save after we paid off the annex building but it'll set us back a bit," Steve said.

"Hey, hey," Bucky said and took Steve's hands in his. "We don't need a house. We don't. We have a perfectly good apartment that we can afford really easily between the two of us and we can stay there for as long as we need too. We don't need anything more than a place to sleep and be safe and so do other gay people. And that's what your shelter will do for so many people who don't have what we already get to have. I could never be upset about that."

"But what if we want a kid-" Steve started to remind him, but when Bucky kept showing his approval, Steve smiled. "Thank you so much. It's going to be really great, Buck. We can help so many people."

"Yes, of course, it's going to help people. And I'm here for you every step of the way, alright?"
Bucky said and ran a thumb over Steve's lips. "And we can just wait and have a kid later. We don't even have any guarantee that we will be able to get one, but we actually can do this. And this is just one more thing I get to love about you. And I'm so proud of you."

---

Steve smiled and hugged Bucky tightly. He kissed Bucky's thumb and sighed happily. "I love you so much. We can take on anything together, Baby. It'll be something you're proud of, I promise." He finished up cooking breakfast and he couldn't stop smiling now.

---

"Already proud of it," Bucky said and sat at the table and waited for breakfast. After they were finished they started getting their things ready to go fishing. Bucky made sure they had the tackle box and the rods waiting at the door before he went to get changed. He put on a pair of his swim trunks and a long-sleeved old grey Henley. "Ready to go fishing?"

---

Steve was excited like a goddamned puppy as he got dressed and headed out to the fishing boat. "Oh, I'm so ready. I'm going to catch a huge fish and it'll feed us for days." He helped Bucky carry the tackle box to the boat and hopped in.

---

"Alright, Babe, we will see." Bucky loved how Steve was acting like such a goof. He talked a big game about fishing but Bucky knew Steve wasn't going to get as much as him. Bucky rowed them out to the deep part of the lake and handed Steve a fishing pole, already set with bait on the end. "Do you know how to cast?"

---

"Of course I know how to cast. You just - do, uh. You do this and-" Steve struggled to cast it and accidentally flung the entire pole out into the lake. Luckily, it floated and Steve gave Bucky an apologetic, guilty smile.

---

"Goddamn it, Steve." Bucky sighed and rowed over to retrieve the pole. "And here I was worried you were going to hook yourself." Bucky gave the pole back to Steve and talked him through how to properly cast the line. "Just be careful."

---

Steve watched Bucky as he explained how to cast. It took him a few tries but, finally, he was able to get the hook a few yards out into the water. After about twenty minutes of not getting any bites, Steve asked, "Are you sure I did it right?" Bucky looked so serene sitting in the boat, staring off into the water. Steve couldn't help but wonder if Bucky's father was like that too. Maybe the two of them just sat quietly while they fished. Or maybe Bucky used to be different but age had made him more like his dad.

---

"Be patient," Bucky said quietly and peacefully and reeled his line back in to cast it off again. He sighed contentedly and watched the water ripple from where the hook sank in. "My dad used to hold his fishing pole with one hand and a book in the other. He would read while he gave the fish a second to decide if they wanted to bite then he'd nod, set the book down on his leg, and cast again. And that's how it would go for a few hours sometimes.

---

"Hours?" Steve frowned. He wasn't used to waiting this long to catch dinner. However, a half-hour later Steve felt a tug on his rod. "Oh my god, I think I got one! Do I reel it in now, Buck?"

---

Bucky was just putting his third fish into the bucket of water behind him on the boat when Steve shouted. "Yes, reel it in!" He nodded enthusiastically and waited for Steve's fish to pop out of the water. Once it was dangling over the boat, Bucky grabbed it close to the top to hold its head steady while he took the hook of it and then plopped it into the bucket with the other three. "Good job, Baby!"

---

Steve hadn't really noticed the fish that Bucky had captured since he was so excited that something happened. But then when he took a good look at the fish he caught, swimming in tight circles in the bucket with the others and bleeding from his mouth, a guilty look crossed his face. "Is this really fair to the fish?"

---

"I mean... they are in water and we're going to eat them," Bucky said. "It's not like we are hunters who just stuff a bear and put it in our house as a monument to our skill." Bucky could fish for food. He could not, however, fish for sport or go hunting just to kill something big.

---

"Can you be the one to kill them?" Steve asked pathetically. Bucky may have singlehandedly made Steve seriously consider being a vegetarian by taking him fishing today.

---

"Sure," Bucky said. Just then, they heard a holler from behind them and Bucky turned around to see another fishing boat coming towards them. One of the people in the boat was waving wildly and for a second Bucky thought they needed help.

The boat rowed up next to them and two old locals greeted them with a big laugh and, "Lord save me, I'll never call Fred a liar again. It really is little Bucky Barnes."

---

Steve had jumped when he heard the holler. Thank god he didn't get so bored that he asked Bucky for a quick blowjob while he waited for a fish to bite. He gave a polite wave as the two rowed over. "Bucky decided he missed the fresh air and that I needed to learn how to fish," he said. "I'm Steve, his friend."

---

"I'm Gary, and this is Lloyd," The man said and gestured to his buddy. "We knew Bucky back when he was still losing baby teeth, huh? Thought you weren't ever coming back, Son. And we're both sorry to hear about your father. Fred told us. Old George was a great man."

It took Bucky a second before he properly remembered the two of them but, eventually, he did. "Nice to be up here again. Steve is right - I did miss the fresh air."

---

"It's nice to meet you two," Steve said pleasantly. "This place really is amazing." he chattered to them. "Never left the city in my whole life. I've never seen so much wildlife and so much open space," Steve said. "Do you guys visit here too? Or do you live here?"

---

Gary spoke again, "My wife and I live next to Fred and Mindy and Lloyd and his wife rent one of the cabins damn near half the year." He looked over at Bucky and grinned, "What do you say the two of you come over tomorrow evening for our cookout? All of us are just going to eat and sit around the fire a while if you'd like to join."

Bucky hesitated and looked to Steve. He really didn't know if that was such a good idea. He would go if Steve seemed interested but he wasn't sure. "How about we think on it and I'll talk to Fred in the morning if we decide to come."

---

Steve was a bit of a people pleaser and was all set to say 'yes' just so they didn't seem rude but Bucky said they would think about it, so he shut up. He wanted to hear what people had to say about young Bucky, but it would also be a bit shitty to pretend they were straight for a whole night of their honeymoon. "Yeah, we may end up going hiking all day tomorrow and be really worn by the evening."

---

"Just make sure you don't let Jumpy Jamie take you hunting." Gary and Lloyd both laughed as Gary started to row on again saying, "Alright, you think on it and we might see you tomorrow. Have a good day."

Bucky sighed in exasperation once they were out of earshot. "I really wish Fred hadn't told everyone that story."

---

"I think it's a cute story," Steve said. "I'd love to get all the stories from them about you as a kid." He smiled. "But I'd rather spend as much alone time with you as possible, unless you'd like to catch up with them. Do you want to go to the cookout or is it better not to?"

---

"Can't you just see us at that cookout with three straight married couples," Bucky began, "Who will probably ask us about what we do for a living, how long we have been friends, if I'm dating any nice women, how the two of us met. And they will probably talk about my parents or ask too many questions about them. Or I'll accidentally let something slip about us or hold your hand or look at you too long." Bucky rambled through his little speech and was getting pretty worked up as he went.

---
Steve gave Bucky an apologetic look and reached out to hold his hand once he was sure the other guys were too far away to see. "I'm sorry, Baby," Steve said. "We can say we'll be too tired. Or that I'm feeling sick." It sucked not being able to be open about their relationship.

---

"I mean, I'll do what you want to do," Bucky said and squeezed Steve's hand. "It would be nice to talk with them all but I just think there is some risk."

---

Steve nodded and said, "Well, then let's do what I want to do. And I want to spend an evening making my husband happy. And I think I'll make you happier if it's just the two of us tomorrow night." He let go of Bucky's hand and picked up his fishing rod again. "Come on. Let's think about the good things."

---

"Okay, good things, good things..." Bucky mumbled, thinking hard. "Hey, I brought s'mores stuff for us. Have you ever had s'mores before? I was thinking we could have some tonight over the fire."

---

Steve smiled and then cast his line out again. "I've had s'mores before but never cooked over a fire. Just microwaved."

---

"Oh, it's definitely not the same. It's so much better done the right way," Bucky said and watched Steve cast his line. He was doing a lot better at it now than earlier and Bucky wondered if his dad felt this same little sense of pride in him when he learned as Bucky did now with Steve.

---

"How cool would it have been if we'd known each other growing up?" Steve said. "It would have been really fun coming up here with you and your dad... sneaking off to the boat house to make out and all that."

---

Bucky smiled warmly and leaned forward to listen to Steve. "That's adorable. We would share a twin bed and we'd wake up tangled in each other. My dad would say he was happy that we were such good friends but he'd secretly probably know anyway."

---

"You'd take me into the woods to show me cool bugs and animals. Maybe we would have gotten a little lost and worried your dad cause we got home after dinner, but we'd be too cute for him to be mad at us for long." Steve grinned. "Bet you would have had me jerking myself off a lot earlier than when I actually started. I was sixteen when I first tried cause I was so afraid my ma would know. She catches everything."

---

"I would've had your dick in my mouth by fourteen, no question," Bucky answered with a nod.
"But, now I need to know. Since you don't watch porn, I assume you didn't have any dirty magazines either. And, I don't know, did you know you were gay when you were that young? So how did you jerk off?"

---

Steve blushed deeply. "Oh god, this is embarrassing." He covered his face with one hand. "So... I, uh... So, in the church, masturbating is a sin and all that. So..." Man, Steve hadn't ever blushed this hard. "Just understand I was sixteen and raised very, very Catholic so, I... I just imagined that God said he wanted me to feel good and that's what I thought about."

---

Bucky was speechless. He blinked a few times with his mouth open in a small 'o'. He closed his mouth and cleared his throat before cocking his head to the side to say, "You... you beat it to God?"

---

"Yes," Steve said shyly but matter-of-factly. "Yes, I did." He looked out into the water, desperate for a fish to take the damn bait. "It wasn't until I made out with a guy that I started thinking about men when I... you know."

---

"Uh..." Bucky looked off into the water too, a little stunned. "Well, alright then. And when was it that you first kissed a guy? You never told me about your first kiss. Did you know before that that you were gay or was it just speculation at that point?"

---

"My first kiss was with a guy named Ted. He was nice. Liked art, so we talked a lot. Before then, I thought I was just bad at talking to girls. I didn't have good self-esteem as a kid cause I was skinny, sick, and poor."

---

"How did it happen with Ted?" Bucky asked and set his fishing rod down in the boat so he could just listen to Steve. "How old were the two of you?" It was nice having this talk with Steve. Steve knew a lot about Bucky's sexual and romantic history but Bucky didn't know much about Steve's since it was pretty limited but he was surprised he hadn't known it all already.

---

"We stayed after school to draw some landscapes. I was washing the charcoal off my hands at the sink when he came up to me and kissed my cheek." Steve smiled fondly. "I liked him well enough. He was sweet to me. But he had a bad drug addiction. It was hard and maybe I could have worked it out with him, but..." Steve shrugged his shoulders. "He got sick from sharing needles, I think. Went to the hospital once and didn't make it out."

---

Bucky's face fell as Steve talked. That could have easily been Steve and Bucky if they had known each other before. It could have been Bucky with a worse addiction than what he had with cocaine. It could have been Bucky that Steve would have wanted to try making it work with only to have Bucky die in the hospital. He didn't quite know how to feel or what to say.
Steve smiled sadly out at the water. "He was a real nice guy. He never told me so, but I think he was living on his own cause his parents knew he was gay. I think that's why he had the addiction, so I never got that mad at him." He reached for Bucky’s hand and gave it a squeeze. "He would bring me flowers every Friday. He'd sneak them in my backpack somehow."

"He really liked you," Bucky said and clutched onto Steve's hand with both of his. "You... you wouldn't have wanted to be with me if I still had a problem with coke when we met, would you? I didn't have a reasonable excuse. I got into it because I wanted into some jock's pants. If it was still a part of my life, the second you found out you probably would have arrested me and that would have been that."

"Buck," Steve said softly. "An addiction doesn't change who you are deep down. And deep down, I'm in love with the person that you are. Yeah, maybe I would've arrested you cause it's my job. But if I had the chance to get to know you, I would have fallen in love with you still."

"Are you going to leave me if I fall into it again? Or if I can't get over my drinking?" Bucky asked worriedly and his heart started to race. He hated to admit it to himself but he thought about that a lot. He worried that something would happen and he would snap and start with something illegal again at the drop of a hat. He thought about it so much he worried he was going to become his own self-fulfilled prophecy.

Steve set his pole down so he could pay sole attention to Bucky. He took his left hand and turned it over. "You see this ring?" he asked softly. "I swore before my mom and your sisters and our friends and my God that I would cherish and support you for the rest of our lives. That I will be faithful and patient for you." He kissed the ring. "I will always be by your side. Even if you get arrested. Even if you get sent to prison for life. I'll visit you as often as they'll allow me."

"I won't," Bucky choked. "I won't let myself. I can't do that to you. I'd rather die than fuck up so badly and ruin your life." He was leaning close enough to breathe against Steve's neck now. "I don't plan on it. I just get so scared sometimes and I don't trust myself not to ruin everything. I'm so sorry, Steve." Bucky collapsed in his arms and apologized like he had already done exactly what he was scared he would do.

Steve wrapped his arms strongly around Bucky's shoulders and rubbed his back soothingly. "Oh, Love." He sighed. "You have nothing to be sorry for. You're the best husband I could have asked for and you've given me so many good memories and love. Whenever we hit a rough spot, whenever things aren't the way we want them... I get to look back to the good times you've given me. And I'll have plenty more good memories in the future."
Bucky latched onto Steve and held on for a few long minutes, just breathing into his shoulder slowly. He let go eventually and pulled back. "This lake brings out the worse in me," he said. "This is where I told my dad about the cocaine in the first place. It's like Seneca can read my guilt and fears and it demands that I get them out in the open."

"It doesn't bring out the worst in you," Steve said gently. "It's like your own confessional. I go to church to reflect. You come here. It's a good thing, Baby. It means it's not eating away at you." He pressed their lips together delicately. "And now you don't have to worry about whether or not I would leave you."

"I'm still going to worry, because it's who I am," Bucky said. "But, I guess you're right, Seneca is sort of like my church. A very far away church." He sighed and looked back at the bucket of four lonely fish swimming around each other. It would be enough for the two of them to have dinner. "You want to head back in or stay out here a little longer?"

Steve looked out on the water and then nodded. "Yeah. I think I'd like to get a bit of drawing done while you do what you have to do to the fish. You got to let me say a prayer for them first, though." Steve still felt bad killing them just to eat.

"Okay, Steve, that's fine," Bucky said and started rowing back to their cabin. "We aren't going to eat them for hours, though, they will just be swimming around for the rest of the day until it's dinner time. I was thinking about swimming as well or something once we put the boat up. What do you think?"

"That sounds good," Steve said. "I guess I can't go skinny dipping now that others are out and about on the lake. Your loss," he teased, giving him a playful wink.

Bucky tilted his head with a smile, "Well, if we don't stray away from the shallow part by our cabin then it's won't be a problem. No one will come that close to someone else's property uninvited, right? Besides even if they do, we can hide under the dock until they go away."

Steve grinned. "Then I guess you won't lose out." He ran his fingers along the inside of Bucky's thigh and got up to get out of the boat once they got to shore. He helped Bucky out before picking up the bucket of fish.

"Just set it down over by the shed," Bucky said as he pulled the boat in just a bit more on land. He was already wearing swim trunks so he just pulled off his shirt and tossed it on to one of the chairs around the fire pit and waited for Steve.
Steve did as he was told but as soon as he did, a few hawks started circling over. Steve grimaced and then put the bucket inside the shed instead. He went back to Bucky's side and kissed his cheek. "Water's kind of cold, isn't it?"

"It's a bit cold, yes. But it'll be fine after you get used to it." Bucky gave Steve a kiss and then ran off the edge of the short pier and jumped into the water. He popped up a second later and shouted, "Fuck!" and shivered from the cold. He struggled in the water to remove his trunks but once he got them off he tossed them up on the pier in a wet heap and then winked at Steve.

Steve let Bucky go in first and scowled when he saw how cold Bucky looked. He was hesitant to go in but he quickly stripped and jumped in to get it over with. When he came up, his teeth were chattering. "Oh my god, oh my god, it's so cold."

Bucky quickly swam over to Steve and held him close to combine their warmth. He laughed and brushed Steve's wet hair back on his head. "We just have to get used to it. It'll be okay in a bit." Bucky felt how hard his nipples were from the cold and it hurt just a bit. "Jesus, it's cold."

"I can feel my balls making a run for the inside of my body," Steve said. "I bet they're the size of raisins right now." He gripped tightly onto Bucky and then tried to swim a little deeper into the water.

Bucky laughed and swam out further with Steve. Steve was clutching on to him really tightly and, at first, he thought it was because of the cold but then he kept trying to wrap his legs around Bucky every time Bucky would try to detach so he could go under the water again. He decided to test something out and he managed to wiggle out from Steve's grasp and down into the water quickly. When he popped back up, he watched for Steve's reaction and watched how he was swimming. He looked like a child with the way he was paddling and looked just a little scared.

Steve swam closer in to the shore where he could touch the bottom. He stopped and stood on his toes in the muddy banks and smiled as he watched Bucky explore the water like a goddamn kid. "You look about ten times happier out here than in the city," Steve said. "We need to come here more often."

"It's just so nice out here," Bucky said and floated out a little ways. "It's quiet and it's calm and there are no bright lights or sirens and not many people." He ducked under the water and swam back to Steve. "What do you say we retire here when we are old men?"
"I can't move out of the city if my mom's still alive. I have to stay close to her and she's going to live forever. She has to." Steve kissed Bucky's cheek and tried swimming a bit further out. "I could come here on weekends."

---

"We can build your immortal mother a house of her own right next to ours. And another house for Becca and Lilly to visit in." Bucky floated on the surface and let himself slowly move with the water. He lost sight of Steve when he was on his back and just stared up at the sky and the clouds.

---

"She would never want to come here," Steve chuckled. "She always told me that she wasn't to move out of the city ever. Claimed that if she ever said she wanted to, she has to be getting dementia or something."

---

"You're killing me, Steve," Bucky said. "You won't move here when we are old because your mom but she's never going to die and won't move here either." He splashed a bit in the water and murmured to himself, "I'm going to die in the city... I'm going to be old and hear a loud noise, have a heart attack, and die in the city."

---

Steve was a bit nervous but he swam over to Bucky and reached out for his hand. "You won't die from a heart attack. You're going to die at a ripe, old age in your sleep when the ceiling comes down cause it hasn't been repaired in twenty years."

---

"Why won't the ceiling be repaired in twenty years?" Bucky asked curiously. "That seems like a pretty weird way to die, Steve. We could've just had someone come fix the ceiling, you know." Bucky tucked an arm under the water to get Steve's legs out from under him and pulled him up and cradled him. It was really the only way he could carry Steve because, out of water, Steve was too heavy for him.

---

Steve laid his head on Bucky's shoulder. "Because the building zoning laws are ridiculous and we were too busy having old man sex to file the permits to get a contractor in."

---

Bucky snorted and kissed the top of Steve's head. He tasted like lake water. "So, in this scenario, are we having sex when the roof collapses and we die? Because, honestly, I wouldn't mind going out while having sex with you."

---

"Well, we would have fallen asleep right after having sex. So it'd be your last memory at least," Steve said. He played with Bucky's wet hair and smiled. "It kind of sounds morbid, but you have to die first. You've already lived through too much loss."
"What, excuse me?" Bucky shook his head, "And why is that? I don't want you having to deal with that pain when I'm gone," he said and held Steve a little closer. "What sounds morbid is that I sometimes think it was really nice that my parents got to die together because then neither had to live without the other."

---

"Well, I don't want you to be alone again. I mean, I'd rather go together. But if one of us has to go, I don't want you to have to be without me," Steve said seriously. "I don't think it's morbid at all that you thought it was nice that your parents got to go together."

---

"But, Steve, I've been alone before. I can do it again. I'll be fine. And I know you'll be covered by God or whatever so I won't have to worry about you in the afterlife," Bucky said and pressed his cheek to Steve's forehead. "I know I say sometimes that I won't live past fifty or whatever but you know I don't really mean that, right?"

---

Steve pouted. "So you're saying you'd be fine if I died? That you wouldn't miss me?" He guilted but then he pecked his cheek. "I'm messing with you, Baby. And I know you're joking. Even if you meant it, I'd keep you living out of pure stubbornness."

---

"Ah, fuck you, Rogers," Bucky said with surprised eyes and dunked Steve under the water quickly and then pulled him back up. "You know I'd miss you more than anything. Don't joke about that." He let Steve go and nudged him and got all serious, "You know I'm not going to try to kill myself again, right? You know that?"

---

Steve sputtered when he got pulled back up from under the water but he immediately got sad when Bucky brought up the suicide attempt. "I know," he said. "And I know it's not my fault, but I really wish I'd known you back then. It kills me to know that you were that upset and lost."

---

Bucky clenched his teeth together and gave a pained smile. "Yeah, I sort of feel like I had to go through it, though, to get to this place. I had to do that and have the mistakes and fuck-ups and years of sleeping around and stuff so I could be here with you. So I could be better for you."

---

Steve wrapped Bucky up in a tight hug and held him against his chest. "Well, what counts is you're here now. And I'm going to make you happy forever." He pressed their foreheads together and looked into Bucky's eyes. "And I'll make your sisters happy, too."

---

"I know you will." Bucky put his head against Steve's wet cold shoulder and hummed happily. "I love you," he said and gave Steve a long kiss once more before diving off yelling, "Okay, enough of this, let's swim!"
"I can't swim that far out," Steve said, totally chicken. He didn't know if there was an alligator in the water or something. He couldn't see to the ground when the lake got deeper.

"What do you mean?" Bucky shouted from his spot several meters out. He had wondered earlier if Steve was that good at swimming because he seemed to be staying only where he could touch and also holding on to Bucky a lot. Also, when he did float around, he mostly paddled like a kid would.

"What if a fish bites me?" Steve asked. Trust the officer that got shot to be afraid of a little fish. "I can't see the bottom. What if it's really deep?" He swam out a bit but wasn't nearly as far as Bucky went out.

"A fish is not going to bite you, Baby," Bucky said and held out his arms for Steve. It was a little deeper here and Bucky had to kick his legs to keep afloat but he knew Steve was going to be fine. "Come here, Love. I won't let anything get you."

"I'm not being a baby, I'm being perfectly cautious." Steve made a face but he swam out anyway and latched on to Bucky like a little monkey. "This is how people contract those weird bacteria that makes them lose a toe."

"Steve, I wasn't calling you a baby, I was calling you 'Baby'. It's a pet name. We use it sometimes." Bucky grinned cheekily at Steve but held his arms under Steve's ass protectively. "And if you are so worried about weird bacteria then why are you in the lake at all? Besides, you could get weird bacteria just from walking around the streets of New York anyway."

"You're in the lake, so I'm in the lake," Steve said. He kissed his cheek and then rubbed a hand down Bucky's back. "You don't get bacteria from New York City. You get viruses," he corrected.

"Uh, bacteria are everywhere. They don't stop at the city border," Bucky sassed. He held Steve close and swam just a little further out. "Alright, I'm going to put you down now. You'll be fine. You aren't going to get hurt, you can swim and I'm right here."

Steve made a pathetic sound but when the world didn't stop after Bucky let him down, he huffed. "Alright, you win. Nothing's going to get." Steve let out a surprised shout when a fish brushed up against his leg.

Bucky was attacked with Steve's flailing limbs and he had to hold them down so he wouldn't slap him accidentally. "It's a fish. It's fine. Just a little fish coming to say hello." He pulled Steve up so he was riding on his back and he started to swim closer inland so Steve would feel more comfortable.

"How is it you carry a loaded gun and chase murderers all day but you can't deal with some fish?"

---

"Because I've grown up around killers and drug dealers all my life. I didn't grow up around fish. And I don't have my gun with me. It's not good to put it in water." Steve let go of Bucky after he calmed down.

---

Once they made it back in, Bucky decided it was time to get out of the water and he climbed up the ladder onto the pier to grab his trunks that were still sitting there. "Your gun is in the cabin, right? You can go get it and shoot the damn fish who dared touch your leg."

---

"I don't shoot things for no reason," Steve said. "Not unless they're hurting someone or about to hurt someone." He climbed back up with Bucky and grabbed his shirt to dry himself off. "I think I'm going to be more vegetarian now."

---

"More vegetarian?" Bucky asked curiously, "You mean we aren't eating meat anymore?" He snagged his shirt from the chair and dried his hair off a bit before heading back into the cabin so they could shower the lake water off of themselves.

---

"No, I just mean I'm going to make more vegetarian dishes but that doesn't mean we don't have to cut out meat entirely," Steve said. He got dressed and swatted Bucky's ass. "Just don't ever take me to a meat farm or slaughter house or else I'll never eat meat again."

---

"God, no, I would never do that," Bucky said. "I mean, I considered being vegetarian before. Especially now that the corporate meat industry is getting way out of hand. So, if you want to do that, we can. I'm sure the girls won't mind, they hardly eat meat as it is."

---

"I'll think about it," Steve answered. "I don't think I want to quit cold turkey but maybe we can try and cut it out a bit. I bet it'll be healthier to have more fruits and veggies. And I've always wanted to try tofu," he said.

---

"Did you say 'cold turkey' on purpose?" Bucky grinned. "You dweeb." All this food talk was making Bucky hungry. He could really go for a snack. "What do you want to do now? We can have a quick lunch or just a snack and then fuck? Or we can go back to Fred's and call the girls and your mom."

---
Steve thought for a second. "I think we should have a little lunch, fuck, then we go check on the girls. Then we have to pretend we're going to do something so people don't ask us about joining them for dinner tonight too."

--

"Sounds like a plan to me," Bucky said and headed for the kitchen. "Are we fucking outside? Or maybe on the pool table in the game room?" he asked and pulled some stuff from the fridge to make sandwiches. "Because, honestly, both sound great right now."

--

"When we fuck outside, I want to fuck under the stars," Steve said. "So pool table would work for me. What can I make for you, Love? A sandwich? Some grilled chicken?"

--

"Well, I was thinking sandwiches," Bucky said and held up the bread. "I'll clear off the table and get us some drinks while you make them if you like." He cleaned the table of some of their stuff that they had tossed there that morning and went to look in the closet in the hall for more kitchen towels so he could wash off the table. What he found instead were several unopened bottles of alcohol sitting on the top shelf next to the parts for the vacuum. "Oh my god," he breathed and gently touched one.

--

Steve toasted the bread so it would be warm and crispy for when they ate. He heard a gasp and he went over to see what was happening. "What's going on?" he asked. "Everything okay over here, Baby?" Steve stroked his back once and caught sight of the booze.

--

Bucky gingerly took a beer from the shelf and behind it was some wine. He rolled it over in his hand and looked at the label. "This is some classic shit and it isn't even opened." he said and looked up into Steve's face. He couldn't quite read what Steve was thinking and Bucky knew he should probably just put the bottle back. After all, it wasn't his, someone probably left all this here accidentally, and he was supposed to be trying not to drink.

--

Steve frowned for a moment but then he kissed Bucky's temple affectionately. "What's the expiration date?" he asked. "Let's have one together if it's still good." Having one or two wouldn't hurt. He didn't want Bucky to feel like he wasn't to be trusted whatsoever around alcohol.

--

"Can I really?" Bucky asked, surprised and excited. "It's still good, yeah," he said and handed that bottle to Steve before grabbing one for himself. He went to the kitchen looking for a bottle opener to pop it open before Steve changed his mind. He took a sip and whined at how good the taste was. "That's some good beer. This is stuff I'd never just buy cause it's way too expensive. This is amazing."

--

"If it's as good as you say it is, we can't let it go to waste, I guess." Steve put his bottle on the table and continued to make their sandwiches. "It's not that I don't think you should drink at all, Buck. It's a matter of control and not using it as a crutch. This is our honeymoon. You're allowed to have some to celebrate."

---

Bucky drank through about half the bottle before pulling it away from his lips to respond. "I know, and I haven't been using it as a crutch lately, you know? I've been fine. Haven't gone to the bars even on the nights when I really, really wanted to. Or the times when someone invited me out with them and I knew I needed to just come home to you. I'm doing it."

---

"I know, Baby. And I'm so proud of you," Steve said. "I know it's not easy and you've been so much better." Steve set their sandwiches down and put his hands on Bucky's hips. "And that's why it's perfectly fine that we enjoy some beer together. Cause you know how to say 'no' to when you think you need it but don't."

---

Bucky nodded and leaned against Steve. "Am I allowed to get drunk sometimes?" he asked cautiously. "When it's just you and me? The girls aren't around. Not at a bar, but at home - somewhere where I won't start anything or do anything rash. Because I like getting drunk. And sometimes it wasn't as a way to cope, sometimes it was just a way to let loose, you know?" He knew the answer would probably be 'no' but he wanted to ask.

---

Steve made a little face. "Bucky…” it wasn’t fun to say “no”. “On rare occasions,” he tried to be lenient. “Cause you don’t need booze to get loose,” Steve reminded. “But I won’t say that I’d get upset if you get responsibly drunk.”

---

"May I ask what your definition of 'responsibly drunk' would be?" Bucky asked and took one of Steve's hands, trying to touch him and love on him and win him over. It was in a kitchen similar to this in a cabin on this same lake where, years earlier, Bucky's dad had hugged him and promised him he would help him with his drug issue. Now he was back and with his husband and trying to convince him to let him give in to alcohol all over again. Bucky sighed and thought to himself, 'The fuck is wrong with you, Barnes?'

---

Steve knew what Bucky was doing. He gave him a quiet look that scolded him. "Babe, if there's an inkling that I wouldn't approve of how you're drinking, then that's your hint that it's not drinking responsibly." He kissed his forehead. "Why do you need it so bad, Buck?"

---

Bucky looked down and chewed his lip. "I don't know." He sighed and looked back up at Steve. "I honestly don't know. I've tried for months to figure out what it is that keeps me coming back. I have about a million reasons but none seem like that one key thing that just unlocks all the others, you know?"
Steve squeezed Bucky's hand gently. "Is there anything I can do that makes you feel as good at being drunk? I'll do anything," Steve said. He wanted so desperately for Bucky to recover and not feel like it was such an uphill battle.

"It's not even that it feels good. Because sometimes it doesn't," Bucky said and moved to sit down at the table, still holding Steve's hand. "It's all psychological, don't you think? Like it's some placebo effect that makes me think that everything is all okay. For my mom, she drank because she had an abusive father and the memories of him hurt too bad. It was clear. It made sense. She said it helped. For me... I don't really have a reason other than it's familiar."

Steve pet his fingers through Bucky's hair. "Why don't you try exploring other options?" he asked. "Like... if you had a stressful day, you can just drag me to the bedroom and have me blow you. Or you can take up knitting. Or cleaning."

"Okay, first of all, you complain that I don't clean right so that wouldn't work," Bucky started, "Also, if I had you blow me then I'd start associating blow jobs with being stressed out and then I'd get anxiety whenever I had my dick in your mouth. And also, knitting? No."

"Drawing? Playing music? Why don't you write some of your own music, that would be a great outlet," Steve tried. He took a bite from his sandwich and sighed. "Maybe you could talk to my mom. My dad was an alcoholic. She may be able to help."

"I don't think that's such a great idea," Bucky said nervously. "I know she already doesn't like that about me and if she knew I just couldn't get over it..." He searched Steve's face carefully. "I don't want her thinking that I'm not ever going to be good enough for you. I mean, hell, we had one fucked up Christmas this year because of my drinking."

"I tell my mom everything," Steve said. "Everything," he repeated. "If she doesn't find it out from you, it'll eventually come from me. Cause I'm not ashamed of your faults and I love everything about you. And, in my opinion, Christmas was a collective fuck-up."

"Christmas was my fault, Steve, I know it was," Bucky said and took a few more bites of his sandwich. "You just say that so I won't feel so bad." He stopped and readjusted in his chair awkwardly. "Did you tell your mom everything I've told you? I mean, like everything?"

"Unless you tell me not to tell anyone, I've probably told her. I don't go running to her, but everything comes out in its own time. Sometimes it's when I'm asking her for advice. Sometimes it's when I'm asking her to say a prayer for us." Steve shrugged his shoulders. "She knows how much you mean to me. She just wants what'll make us happy."
Bucky closed his mouth tight and thought. That meant Steve's mom probably knew about his time in the hospital, his cocaine problem as a high schooler, his endless list of sexual partners, his bar fights and how he acted that night he came home drunk. Bucky was beyond mortified. His heart rate picked up and he blinked a couple times rapidly. Steve was right, though, he never asked him not to tell those things to anyone. For Bucky, it was more an understood. He was never one to tell his parents everything about himself and Bucky had made the mistake of assuming that was the same way for Steve.

Steve could see the change in Bucky's demeanor and his shoulders dropped a bit. A concerned look crossed his face and suddenly he was worried that he'd done something that broke his trust. "I'm... I'm sorry, Buck. I didn't know - I didn't think that I couldn't talk to my mom about it. You're not mad at me, are you?"

Bucky was quiet for a minute before he slowly reached a hand out to grip Steve's arm. "I'm not mad," he said simply but he wasn't looking at Steve. "I'm very overwhelmed." He nodded and grabbed his beer before getting up from the table. "I just need a minute, okay? I'm going to go sit outside."

"She still loves you," Steve said, feeling like it had to be said. "And she's proud of you for cleaning up." He slumped a little in his chair and stopped talking so Bucky could go sit outside in peace.

Bucky walked to the end of the pier and sat down so his legs dangled off the edge and his toes barely grazed the water. He set his beer down and produced a pack of cigarettes from his pocket along with a lighter. He wasn't mad at Steve. He couldn't be mad at him for talking with his own mother. He just felt really weird that there was someone other than himself and Steve who knew everything about him. He already worried about what she thought of him but now he wouldn't be able to look her in the eye.

Steve gave Bucky some time to himself but after almost an hour passed, he walked out to sit down next to him and place a hand on his back. "I told my mom well before we got married," Steve said. "Before Christmas. And she still treated you the same as ever. Christmas was... jarring for her. We never really had anything like that happen in our house. But you don't have to be ashamed with her. You're as much of a son to her as I am. Addiction and drinking won't stop me from being her son. It won't stop you, either."

Bucky leaned away from Steve so he wouldn't get too much smoke around him. "I just, I guess, I didn't know my whole life was going to become an open book for both you and your mother at once," Bucky said and put the cigarette out on the wood of the pier before pocketing the butt to throw away later. "I mean, my own sisters don't know about a lot of the things I've told you and they are my blood."
"Telling my mom is different from your sisters. They're kids. Me and my ma are adults," Steve said. He laid his head on Bucky's shoulder. "I hope that maybe one day when they're grown up, you can tell them. Because I think it's the best feeling in the world when you can trust to bare your darkest secrets to someone. Because you know they have all the tools that could really cut you down. But they won't ever do that."

Bucky was tired, he was so tired. He wasn't going to be able to just let this go and get over it. He was going to be worried and nervous around Steve's mom maybe forever. "You can't tell her about this whole conversation," Bucky said sternly.

Steve looked away for a moment because he didn't like hiding things from his mom, but he would do it for Bucky. "Alright," he said. He chewed on the inside of his cheek nervously before saying, "There's one thing that I haven't found the courage to tell her. One day I will, but I know it'll upset her."

"What is it?" Bucky asked and slipped his hand with Steve's. He really hoped this one wasn't about him. He really hoped the one thing Steve couldn't tell his mom wasn't something abhorrently awful that Bucky had done. But he also didn't want it to be something about Steve that he was ashamed of either. He would felt so bad if Steve felt that much guilt about something about himself.

"I never really told you how sick I got when I was little. I was sick almost all the time, but there were a few times the doctors tried to convince my mom to start looking at grave plots," Steve said. "It took a huge toll on her to pay all the hospital bills and medicines." His lips drew into a thin line. "Sometimes I didn't take the medicine cause I thought it'd be better if I'd just die from pneumonia already. Pretended that I'd just forgotten about it instead that I chose not to take it." He didn't consider it to be suicidal tendencies so much as offering himself to God's will. "I was happy when I survived. But it didn't stop me from 'forgetting' my medicine the next time I was sick."

Bucky listened intently and his grip on Steve's hand got tighter as he talked. "What?" It was barely an audible spoken word and Bucky himself didn't know if he had actually said anything. His eyes were locked to Steve's and he knew he must have on such a scared and concerned face, maybe even slightly horrified. "You wanted to die because you thought it could help your mom."

Steve looked so guilty. The expression on Bucky's face made his stomach sink. "Sometimes I forget that I did that cause it hurts to know that I did that. And... and I know it's not the same as what you did, but I'm still sorry I did it." He squeezed Bucky's hand tightly. "She was stretched thinner than you were. Sure, you had two kids instead of one. But she had thousands of dollars in medical bills on top of all the usual expenses. She barely slept and she would cry whenever she had to go to work instead of stay home to take care of me."
Bucky crawled into Steve's lap and held his face in his hands and just breathed deeply as he looked at him. "I am really, really happy that you didn't die of pneumonia or something else," he said and punctuated his words with gentle presses of his fingertips. "And I know you aren't proud of what you did, and I know how hard it is to tell me about that but thank you so much for telling me."

"I haven't faced the same challenges as you. And I don't deal with stress the same ways as you. But I still make mistakes and do things I'm not proud of," Steve said. "And I want you to know that I'll tell you every secret I have because I trust you. And because I feel better knowing that someone knows what I did and still loves me anyway." Steve kissed Bucky's cheek.

"I love you more every day that goes by," Bucky promised and kissed Steve full on the lips. "I love you with everything I learn about you. I love you in a way I've never felt for anyone before and didn’t know was even possible. I love you in ways that words haven’t been invented to describe yet." Bucky was crying now and Steve’s arms were wrapped securely around him.

Steve got emotional after watching Bucky start to cry after saying all of those beautiful things to him. He felt a few tears slip down his face and he kissed his husband deeply. "Thank you," he said softly. "For understanding me. For understanding everything." He closed his eyes for a moment before tilting his head back to look at the sky. "Our lunch is probably cold now."

"I don't care about that," Bucky said and gripped his hands tight in Steve's shirt. "All I want is to go to bed and make slow passionate love to you and hold you and kiss you and show you I'm serious about what you mean to me and how much I really love you and can't live without you."

Steve looked at Bucky with bright, shining eyes and smiled at him. Bucky made him feel so fucking loved every day of his life, but he still managed to find ways to make Steve feel extra special. "That sounds perfect," Steve said quietly. He kissed Bucky slowly before getting onto his feet and offering Bucky a hand up.

Once they were back in the cabin, Bucky took Steve's hand and brought him to sit down on the bed. He wanted this to be slow and memorable. He crowded around Steve and wordlessly slipped Steve's shirt up off of him before doing the same to himself. Then he pushed Steve back onto the bed carefully and climbed on top of him so he could suck deep red marks onto his chest.

Steve's breath caught in his throat. He loved any sort of intimacy he could have with Bucky, but passionate love making was certainly his favorite. He closed his eyes and arched his back to press up into Bucky. "I couldn't have asked for a better husband, Buck," Steve said softly as he touched over his back affectionately.
Bucky silently worked his way down Steve's body. When he hit pants, he got up off of him to rid the both of them of the rest of their clothes before grabbing the lube from the nightstand. "You're the most perfect man in the world, my love."

---

Steve smiled down at him and stroked the curve of his jaw. "I can't be when you already are," he said fondly. "At the very least, we're tied for first place."

---

Bucky giggled low in his throat and kissed Steve delicately. "I'll settle for that." He squeezed some lube out onto his fingers and reached down to tease Steve's hole before slowly pushing one finger inside. "I'll make love to you nice and slow, Baby. I'll take the rest of the day if you want."

---

Steve moaned softly and shivered as Bucky pushed a finger inside. "I want you to take it nice and slow. So we're both aching to come at the end of it and it'll be beautiful." He tangled his fingers in Bucky's hair as he kissed him.

---

Bucky eased his finger in and out of Steve and made out with him in that careful loving way that feverish rough sex couldn't give them. After a minute or so of one finger, he let another slip into Steve and he scissored them around just feeling Steve's strong but delicate fingers in his hair.

---

Steve breathed deeply as Bucky opened him up. His eyes were still dark with arousal but he didn't look like he was about to ravage Bucky like they would do sometimes. "I guess this is one benefit when we get a house to ourselves," he said. "Clothing optional. Every day."

---

"Don't tell me that, I'll never wear pants." Bucky chuckled and licked a wet line up Steve's stomach. He moved down his body more and more and kissed and licked at Steve's thighs. "If I go slow, can I put my tongue inside you? I won't eat you out like usual so it's not rushed, I promise."

---

Steve let out a desperate sound when Bucky licked him. "Only if you kiss me senseless after you do that," Steve said with an affectionate smile. "And I hope you wouldn't wear pants if we lived together on our own."

---

Bucky’s fingers continued to move in and out of Steve as he brought his face down close to his hole. He licked around his fingers for a few seconds before sticking his tongue inside along with them. He expertly used both fingers and tongue to work Steve more open for his cock and he pressed as far into him as he could reach.

---

Steve pet his fingers through Bucky's hair and let out soft, needy sounds. "Fuck yes," he breathed out. "I don’t know what I love more. Your mouth working me open or your mouth sweet talking me."

---

Bucky hummed happily and reached up with his free hand to grip Steve’s hip. He loved both. He loved sweet talking Steve and opening him up. And he loved kissing him. Frankly, Bucky's mouth got to have a lot of fun in their relationship and he loved every second of it. After a few more minutes, he just couldn't handle it anymore and he really wanted his dick inside Steve. He pulled out everything at once and moved to line up his cock with Steve's waiting ass. "Can I?"

---

"Yes, please," Steve said breathlessly. He had a faint blush right down to his chest and he had a thin layer of sweat on his skin from how much he wanted this. "I want to feel you moving inside of me, Buck."

---

Bucky nodded and pushed in as calmly and slowly as he possibly could. His mouth fell open at the feeling and a rush went over his body at how amazing it felt to just take his time and really feel Steve's body relaxing around him. Once he was in, Bucky gripped the back of Steve's legs to pull them up onto his shoulders and he leaned down to kiss Steve, effectively folding him in half.

---

Steve let out a low moan and then pulled Bucky down so he could kiss him deeply. "I love you. I'm so happy I'm yours, Bucky Barnes," he said breathlessly. His eyes were locked on his husband. "You are the best thing to ever happen to me."

---

"Rogers-Barnes," Bucky corrected and eased his cock all the way out of Steve as he kissed him and then pushed it back in again with a choked groan. "All mine," he whispered. "You're all mine forever. And I'll cherish you more every day." He set a calm and peaceful sort of rock to his hips and talked to Steve some more. "I'll protect you with everything I am. I'll support you through anything you encounter. I'll make love to you until I die. I'll help raise our baby with you and I'll tell them all the wonderful things I've learned about you."

---

Steve felt tears prickle at his eyes because Bucky was so perfect and he felt so blessed to have such an amazing man in his life. "We are going to raise such an amazing kid, Buck. And we are going to do everything we ever wanted to do. I'll make sure you'll never want for anything ever again."

---

"The only thing I want is you by my side," Bucky answered and pushed himself closer against Steve. He felt like he just couldn't get near enough to him. He wanted to be skin on skin but still connected to his ass. He was trying to think of the best way to position Steve so they had as much contact as possible. "I want your wisdom and help whenever I need it. And I want your body whenever you'll give it. And I want your laughter and company always." He watched Steve’s face for a few minutes as he slowly fucked him. After a while, he looked into Steve’s eyes and asked, "How are you feeling?"
Steve looked overwhelmed with pleasure and he couldn't take his eyes off Bucky even if he tried. "I feel on top of the world, Bucky," he said. He reached down to caress Bucky's ass before pushing his fingers between his cheeks to tease his hole lightly. "I'm getting close."

Bucky's eyes rolled back in his head and he shuddered out a sigh as Steve touched his hole ever so slightly. "Baby, you can come whenever you want to come. I want to watch your handsome face when you get the release you deserve with me deep inside you. I can never get enough of getting to bring you pleasure like this."

Steve loved how expressive Bucky could get when he was enjoying something. He continued to tease him until he could feel his orgasm really start to build up. When he came, his toes curled and his lips parted in a small 'o' as his dick shot thick streams of come.

Bucky watched excitedly as Steve came and smiled wide and dopey before giving Steve a quick kiss and then a lick to his neck. "That felt good for you, Love?" he asked and tightened his grip on Steve's legs. He quickened his thrusts just a little bit after Steve came and felt the warm tingle through his body that signaled his own orgasm was coming up.

"That felt amazing, Baby, thank you," Steve said. When Bucky started to speed up, he gave him an affectionate smile before touching his hip. "Slower," he commanded gently, wanting Bucky to really feel every bit of what they had together.

"Mhmm, okay," Bucky agreed and slowed down again. He leaned his head against Steve's leg and closed his eyes. His head was swimming with thoughts of Steve and the feeling of his warm perfect hole around his dick. Every part of Bucky's body was in overdrive and he felt like the only thing holding him together was the promise of getting to come inside Steve and, once he did that, he would simply fall apart next to his husband.

Steve smiled as he watched Bucky move, all relaxed and happy. He placed a hand to the back of Bucky's neck and massaged him gently. "You look so beautiful. After you come, I want to draw you," he said. "Capture the moment forever."

"You can do that, Baby," Bucky smiled, eyes still closed. He might fall asleep while Steve did it but he probably wouldn't mind. It took another minute or so before Bucky was sucking a mark on the skin of Steve's leg and coming up inside him in excited hot streams. "I love you," Bucky whispered as quietly as possible and pulled out to slump unceremoniously on the bed.
Steve breathed out a content sigh as he felt Bucky fill his ass with his come. He didn't even feel the usual emptiness after Bucky pulled out. He rolled over to grab his pencils and sketch pad so he could draw Bucky as he laid there. "Sing to me a little," he asked gently.

---

Bucky hummed a laugh and smiled over at Steve. "What do you want to hear, Love?" he asked and scratched absentely at his stomach. His dick was covered in lube and some come and he adjusted it to lie on his leg now that it wasn't sticking straight up wanting Steve. That was definitely going in the top ten Steve and Bucky fucks and Bucky hoped that Steve agreed.

---

"Sing me something soft and romantic," Steve requested. He kissed him once and started to sketch out the basic shape of Bucky's body. He couldn't help but eye Bucky's dick every now and again, like he was already considering round two.

---

Bucky thought for a moment and decided he would start with something from The Rolling Stones. He mixed a few songs together and eventually managed to go into "Something" by The Beatles just changing the lyrics slightly. He started getting pretty tired after about seven minutes of singing quietly with his eyes closed. He was part way through another song when he took a deep breath and didn't manage to get to the next line of the song before he was out like a light.

---

Steve listened to him, falling in love even more as Bucky sang to him even as he was falling asleep. While Bucky dozed off, Steve drew a few different pieces of him before taking the camera and snapping a few pictures as well. He set it down after a few minutes and laid down next to his husband so he could kiss him and then doze off next to him.

---

When Bucky woke up, it was well into the evening. He still hadn't gone to Fred's to call the girls and he wasn't even sure if Steve was going to want to cook the fish they caught or just let them go back in the water. He looked around the room. Steve wasn't there and Bucky got an odd worried pang that shot through him for no particular reason and he yelped, "Steve?"

---

There was no way in hell Steve was skinning the fish so when he woke up, he decided to try and pluck a few notes on Bucky's guitar. He was awful at it. As soon as he heard the worried shout for him, Steve abandoned the guitar on the couch and rushed into the bedroom. "You okay?"

---

"Hey," Bucky sighed in relief and held out his arms for him, "I don't know, I just got scared when you weren't here." His legs were tangled up in blankets and his heart was working on calming down again. To him, it seemed like he was becoming increasingly more dependent on Steve after sex. He was, of course, far more vulnerable with Steve than he was with anyone before him and Bucky wondered if he was finally experiencing what actual love-filled love making was supposed to do to someone. It was meant to break down any last remaining walls and mold two people together and when one was gone too soon after sex then nothing felt quite right.
Steve looked apologetic as he crawled into bed and pulled Bucky into a strong hug so he would feel protected. "I'm sorry, Love. You looked so peaceful I didn't want to disturb you." Steve stroked his fingers through Bucky's hair. "The shop is open for another hour. I was going to wake you soon anyway so you can call home."

"It's okay." Bucky curled into Steve's body and breathed easier. "I don't know why I got like that. I was just waking up and couldn't get my brain to reason that you were still around even if you weren't right there by me. It felt like those mornings when you were at the hospital and I'd wake up without you." He tenderly stroked a hand down Steve's side and shook his head, "Anyway, yes, let's go call the girls."

"I think it's sweet," Steve said. "I don't want you to be stressed, but it's endearing how much you worry for me. And everyone else you love." Steve kissed him slowly before pulling away so he could dress himself in one of Bucky's sweaters.

"I think it's sweet when you wear my clothes," Bucky said and got up to get dressed as well. The sweater Steve chose was one that was bigger on Bucky so it actually fit Steve really nicely. Bucky pulled on a pair of his pants, foregoing underwear for the time-being and then tossed aside some of his shirts to find another long sweater he could wear.

"I like the way you look at me when I wear your clothes," Steve said with a little grin. He kissed Bucky's cheek and took his hand as he walked out to the car. "I tried playing your guitar. I'm not very good at it."

"Oh yeah?" Bucky asked curiously, "You don't know any chords, what did you even do? Just strum a couple times?" He giggled and hopped into the car.

"I tried pressing a few of the wires down and it hurt my fingers," Steve said, knowing absolutely nothing about music.

"Baby, they are strings, not wires," Bucky corrected. There was a mesh pocket on the side of the door and Bucky saw a photograph sticking out of it. He pulled it out and saw a family of four smiled back at him. "This must be your coworker's family." Bucky showed it to Steve. "Reminds me that we need a new family picture."

Steve glanced at the photo and smiled. "What's wrong with the one we have?" He asked as he pulled out from their cabin. "We have Raphael included in the picture."
"Raphael isn't the problem in the picture, it's a winter one and we are all in sweaters. It's spring now and we should take a new one, right? Your mom will help us out again, yeah? I'll let you get me into my 'Sunday best' or whatever and I'll even wear a tie if you promise me sexual favors in return."

Steve brightened up immediately. "You mean we get to take seasonal family photos?" He'd assumed that it was just a once in a while thing when they got a major addition to the family like a pet or a kid. "This is perfect. We can all wear ugly patterned Hawaiian shirts," Steve said.

Bucky grimaced and gave Steve the side eye. "I refuse," he said simply. "What is your fascination in putting us all in matching ugly outfits? You wanted us to wear those terrible Christmas sweaters last time but Becca and I won out for the navy ones. And we will win again this time." He nudged Steve. "Come on, you love me in collared shirts – a nice clean button-up and a tie? You can have Becca do my hair however you want. We will be the clean, presentable gay couple you want us to be."

"I'd rather be the matching family than the well-dressed gays," Steve said. "I love matching stuff. And one of these days, I'll be able to outvote you over this. Becca will see my way eventually. Maybe if I let her pick out who gets what pattern."

"Sure, try convincing Becca - arguably the most stubborn of the Barnes'," Bucky chided. "Your best tactic will be bribery of some sort." They pulled up at the tackle shop and Bucky got out of the car. "Do you think they have been alright for your mom since we left?"

"I'll have my way one of these days. I can be stubborn too," Steve reminded. He locked the car as they headed towards the shop. "I'm sure they're all having a blast doing whatever it is they do when we are gone. And if they misbehave, my mom won't have it."

Bucky nodded and walked into the shop to greet Fred. He gestured at the phone on the wall next to a little chair and Fred waved him on. Bucky dialed home and waited. Lilly picked up with a hearty, "Rogers-Barnes Residence, who are you looking for?"

He laughed at the question and wondered how long she had been answering the phone that way. "Hey, my little monster, it's me. Steve and I wanted to call to check in on you."

Lilly made an excited noise to hear her brother. "We miss you," she said right away. "We're having lots of fun with Miss Sarah. But she doesn't tuck me in the way I like it like you do," Lilly explained. "We went to the zoo today," she explained. "How's Seneca?"
Bucky smiled over at Steve and kept talking to Lilly, "It's wonderful here. We are having a really good time. I really missed this place and I think Steve is enjoying being out of the city for a while. Do you want to say hello to Steve?"

---

"Did Steve end up swimming? He seemed pretty chicken about it." Lilly asked and chuckled at the thought of grown-ass-police-officer Steve being afraid to swim in a lake.

---

Bucky handed the phone off to Steve saying, "Lilly wants to know if you were a chicken about swimming in the lake or not. Also, your mom took them to the zoo. Tell her I'd like to talk to Becca when you are done. But you can talk to your mom first if you want to."

---

"I wasn't a chicken! I swam really deep into the lake," Steve huffed and took the phone. "Just so you know, Lil, I swam like I was born to be in the lake. But did you have a good practice yesterday? I'm sorry we can't make your game tomorrow."

---

Lilly laughed and said, "I'm sure that's what happened. And yeah practice was okay. Some of my teammates were being stupid assholes and not playing very well. I swear to god, if they cost us the game tomorrow, I'm going to start knocking heads together."

Bucky sat on the chair by the phone and waited for Steve to be done talking. Fred was behind the counter reading some sports magazine and not paying them any attention. A few people across the aisle had noticed them and were discussing something privately. Bucky sort of figured they were trying to place how they recognized him.

---

"Watch your language, Kiddo. Everyone can't be as motivated to win as you are." Steve chatted with her for a bit and then spoke to his mom before finally turning the phone over to Bucky. "Becca's on the phone for you," he said. "You caught her in the middle of reading, she might be grumpy."

---

"Well, what's new?" Bucky asked and took the phone from Steve. "Hey, Beecs, how have you been holding up? Has Lilly given you much trouble? She said you guys got to go to the zoo. Did you have fun?"

---

"Lilly's the same as usual. The zoo was all right. Saw animals," Becca said, trying to play things cool. "Miss Sarah showed me how to sterilize a wound. It was interesting. And kind of gross."

---

"What? Why do you need to learn that?" Bucky moved the phone over and said to Steve, "Your mom taught Becca how to sterilize a wound. "He directed his attention back to his sister. "You thinking of becoming a nurse or a doctor or something?"
"Well, I figured it'd be an important thing to know. We can't let Lilly have an infected cut from lacrosse if you or Steve's mom isn't around to fix it," she said in a matter-of-fact tone. "It's not that hard."

"Alright, that's a good point." Bucky nodded. "But you're sure you are doing okay? Not too overwhelmed? Don't miss us too much?" he asked and tried not to get too upset about missing the girls. "We will be home at the end of the week. You'll have to tell us how Lilly's game went tomorrow."

"Please," Becca said in a cool voice. "The world isn't going to fall apart cause you're not here for a few days. Go do gross couple things with Steve and have a good time. Call us tomorrow so she can tell you about the game."

"Alright, we will call you. I love you, Becs. Steve loves you too. If you need us, call this number and Fred will get a message to us." Bucky hung up and looked to Steve. "I think she's doing okay. Maybe missing us a little bit. Told us to call tomorrow after Lilly's game."

Steve nodded his head. "Glad to hear that everything is going fine over there. My mom is on cloud nine having kids to look after. I guess we definitely have a babysitter for our kids once we have them," he said quietly.

"Yeah, that's good to know." Bucky smiled and waved goodbye to Fred as they went. "Do you need anything from the grocery before we head back home? Are we eating the fish or are we going vegetarian instead? Because we may need more supplies then."

"We caught the fish, so we may as well eat them. It's a part of your memories from when you used to come here, so we have to do it at least once. But after that we are going vegetarian pretty much," Steve decided.

"Are you sure you want to eat them, Baby? Because you seemed pretty upset," Bucky asked again. He wanted to grill the fish over the campfire just like his dad had done but he also didn't want Steve getting self-conscious and grossed out about it if he did.

"Just don't let me watch you do it. And wash everything up really quick after," Steve said. "I can handle it. I want to experience this with you."
Bucky promised Steve that he would and they headed back to the cabin. The sun was starting to set so when they got back, Bucky went out behind the cabin to skin the fish. It didn't take very long with only four fairly small fish and he also managed to cut the meat off and into smaller pieces so it wouldn't look like an animal to Steve while he was cooking it over the fire.

---

Steve considered cooking some vegetables but he decided he would let Bucky take total control over tonight's dinner. So instead he dressed down to flannel pajamas and a button down that he left open with his bare chest hanging out. When Bucky called him for dinner, Steve came over and hugged him tightly. "Look at you, providing for me."

---

Bucky pulled Steve down by the collar of his shirt to give him a long open mouthed kiss. "I can manage sometimes," he said with a smile and handed Steve a plate of fish and some warm rice and beans that he had to heat up in the microwave first. They sat together around the fire and ate as the sun went down in the sky. "After we eat, we are making real s'mores since you've never had them."

---

Steve hummed and smiled. "That sounds perfect.” He liked the atmosphere of this place and eating around the fire. "I think when we have our kid, we should take them here together. But you should get to take them one on one just like your dad did with you."

---

Bucky ate and happily stared at Steve's bare chest as Steve stared out at the lake. He definitely wore an open shirt on purpose and Bucky was definitely going to grab the sex blanket once it got darker and they were definitely fucking under the stars tonight. Bucky snapped back to attention, "Why won't you be with us?" he asked curiously with a bite of fish hanging from his teeth.

---

"Well, I'd go sometimes," Steve said. "But I think that we both can have our own things with him or her that are special between just the two. You and your dad had something really special here. I think you should get to share that with them."

---

Bucky nodded, "Okay, what's yours going to be then?" He shoveled some more fish onto his plate and drank some of the beer that Steve had agreed to let him have with dinner. It really was good beer. Steve didn't seem to like it as much as Bucky but that was okay.

---

"I think maybe either art or baseball. I really want to be a coach for their team. Baseball would be the best but it doesn't matter to me what sport they do so long as it's something," Steve said. "Wouldn't that be nice?"

---

Bucky gave Steve a big grin. "Baseball?" he asked, "Why didn't I know you were into baseball? I think that's a great plan and I'm sure our kid will love playing sports and making art with his daddy."
"I didn't play until I joined the force. We play against the firefighters every summer," Steve said. He chewed on his food and then smiled. "It's going to be so amazing to be called ‘dad’. I can't wait, Buck."
everyone so I'm sure she will be ecstatic."

"Don't tell her, but I could probably score us enough free tickets to go once, maybe twice a month in the summer. You've only seen the bad side of dating a cop. But the summer time brings loads of benefits," Steve said. He stuck the marshmallow in the fire and let it get toasty.

"I've seen the good side too," Bucky defended. "I've seen you stop some kids from bullying one of their classmates. And I've seen you use your skills to track down the asshole who hurt me and kick his ass. And let's not forget how we met."

Steve smiled happily. "Yeah, I guess you're right. And then there's the handcuffs," he said. "You really enjoyed using those." He pulled the marshmallow up and blew it to cool it down.

"Yes, I did. And we need some fake ones of those in case you won't let me use your real ones after we get home." Bucky offered a graham cracker with chocolate to Steve and then made his own s'mores. "This is much better than 'a microwave in the city type' of s'mores."

Steve took the cracker and chocolate to make the s'mores sandwich. He took a bite and then let out a little groan. "You're right. This is infinitely better," he agreed. Steve shoved the rest into his mouth all at once.

Bucky laughed at Steve and started handing him more marshmallows to make another one. "You're so goddamn cute," he said with a matter-of-fact sort of reverie. After Steve swallowed his bite, Bucky stuck a block of chocolate in between his teeth and leaned over to Steve with it as an offering for him to take the other half.

Steve licked his lips then leaned over to take the chocolate from Bucky. Steve kissed Bucky lightly after he took it. "I love you," he said happily. "I love that you still show me new things."

"I love you too," Bucky said. "I love that you let me show you new things." He got up slowly and crowded into Steve's space. He leaned over his lap on the chair and got his face very close to Steve's without kissing him yet. Bucky rested a hand on Steve's thigh close to his dick and another hand on his chest. "If you're done with the s'mores, I've got something else I want you to eat." He knew it was a bit cheesy but Steve was going to appreciate it.

Steve got an excited look on his face when Bucky got so close. He knew that his shirt being open would make him irresistible. "I've got some s'mores left I want to eat," Steve said in an aloof tone.
He smirked as he casually ate another one while Bucky waited. But once he was done, he groped Bucky's ass and gave him a slow kiss.

---

Bucky frowned and waited. When Steve was all over him finally, he said, "You finished, now?" in a worn out tone. "Cause I can wait," he sassed and straightened up. "Eat more sweets. I need to grab the sex blanket and the lube anyway." He slipped out of Steve's grasp and trotted off back into the house. He decided to strip his clothes while he was inside and he wrapped himself up in the giant blanket so Steve would get a little surprise when he made him drop it open.

---

Steve perked up when he saw Bucky coming back covered in the blanket. "Sex blanket? Is that what you put down on the bed yesterday?" Steve couldn't help but laugh at the fact that Bucky got a blanket designated for fucking on. "Is this when we get to fuck under the stars?"

---

"Yes, it is, if you'd rather have me than the s'mores," Bucky said. A dim light from the cabin was glowing out over the grass and that combined with the fire and the bright moon made it fairly easy for the two of them to see. Bucky laid down all curled up in the blanket close to the fire and stared off into the sky. "Whenever you are ready."

---

Steve moved over Bucky and started to pull the blanket open and he gasped excitedly when he saw that he was naked underneath. "Oh, man. You are sexy as all hell," he breathed. "I love it when you surprise me."

---

"Thought I'd just get one extra step out of the way." Bucky smiled and used his legs to pull Steve down on top of him. "How do you want to do it, Baby? The lube is on my chair. You choose what we do."

---

Steve kissed along Bucky's neck and hummed excitedly, "Let's do it with you on your hands and knees. We're in the wild now, right? So let's be a little wild," he said and teased one of Bucky’s nipples.

---

Bucky was all too ready to push Steve off of him and flip so he was on his knees for Steve, his ass close to him. "I love that idea. Be as wild as you can," he said and firmly gripped his hands into the blanket. "Don't even take that long to stretch me out. Just start with two fingers and once you can get three in then I'll be good to go and you can just take me."

---

Steve grabbed the lube from the chair and quickly slicked up a few fingers. It amazed him how much Bucky could take all at once. He carefully eased two into Bucky's ass, which was so goddamn tight. "I'm not even going to take my clothes off," he said. "Gonna fuck you with just my fly open."
Bucky whined and whimpered a little bit, "And I don't get to see that?" He loved the thought of Steve being so desperate to fuck him that he just couldn't bother with being naked. He loved to think about Steve wanting to be inside Bucky immediately so he rushes through prepping his hole and just goes for it once it's good enough. He wanted to see that. But Bucky also wanted to be on his hands and knees really badly - outside, in the middle of the night.

"You'll see it some other time," Steve said. He laid his chest over Bucky's back and nibbled at his ear. "Tonight I'm going to fuck you nice and rough like I know you love." He curled his fingers inside Bucky's ass before pushing a third one in. "How's that, Buck? You ready for my cock?"

Bucky couldn't help the high-pitched keening whine that escaped his lips. "Yes, please, Steve, ruin me. Make me feel it for days. Mark me up. Bite me. Do whatever you want to me. I know you love me and I trust you. Let yourself be loose and wild because I know you'll hold me when we are done."

 Barely after Bucky finished talking, Steve pushed his cock balls deep into Bucky's ass. He let out a loud moan at how tight he was. "Fucking god, your ass feels amazing." He gripped Bucky's hips and moved at a punishing pace, balls slapping against him with every thrust.

Bucky cried out and grabbed the end of the blanket so he could bite down on it so he didn't attract attention from the nearest cabin. The last thing they needed was someone coming to investigate some strange yelling sounds. Bucky's body shook under Steve and it felt like it was getting one of the best workouts he had ever had. He kept groaning low in his throat on a never-ending chain and hoped that it was doing things to Steve.

Steve loved how affected Bucky was by this. It was fucking hot to see him grab the blanket and do everything he could to not make too much noise. Steve bit down on Bucky's shoulder as he kept fucking him at a relentless pace, showing no sign of slowing down. "That's right, Baby. Take my dick. Gonna make you too sore to walk tomorrow. And I'll fuck you again just as you're about to walk right."

Bucky whimpered again and turned to look up at Steve to show how much he was looking forward to that. He tossed his head so his hair was out of his face and he tried watching Steve's muscles and expression as he railed Bucky's ass over and over again. The scent of the nighttime air and the sound of the crackling fire made a comforting cocoon around Bucky as he got to have a brutal and hot fuck from his favorite person in all the world.

Steve reached under them so he could stroke Bucky's cock. He was so lost in how great the friction felt on his dick. He probably wasn't going to last too long like this, but, god, it felt good. He panted against the back of Bucky's neck, doing his damned best to give Bucky the fuck of his life.

---

Bucky spit out the blanket and cranked his neck so he could kiss Steve. "Bite my neck?" he asked cautiously in case Steve didn't want to. He liked experiencing tolerable pain like being stretched by a dick before he was entirely ready and being slapped or bitten or choked a little bit. He would never ask Steve to choke him because he knew that would upset him but Bucky would at least ask for things like bites or slaps.

---

Steve kissed him back and was left breathless after. And biting Bucky's neck was a request that he could honor - it wasn't so rough of an act that Steve would be uncomfortable. He sank his teeth into the curve of Bucky's neck where it met his shoulder and bit down hard enough to bruise. "Mine," he growled as an added bonus when he came back up.

---

With the blanket out of his mouth, Bucky was free to gasp and then let out one of the loudest groans he ever had when they had fucked. He didn't realize how close he was but when Steve claimed him with a simple 'Mine', Bucky came with a fury of spasms and goose bumps down his arms and legs.

---

God, Bucky sounded so fucking amazing. Steve wished he had some sort of tape recorder so he could have audio of the noises Bucky was making. "Fuck," he swore. He paused to bask in the feeling of Bucky's ass clamping down on his cock but then picked up in a fast fury until he spilled himself deep inside Bucky's ass.

---

The second Steve was done Bucky collapsed on the ground, bringing Steve down on top of him. He panted heavily and closed his eyes. Steve's weight on top of him felt really nice and he didn't want him to pull out and get up yet. He just wanted to be protectively beneath him for a few minutes.

---

Steve didn't pull out and instead laid out on top of Bucky. He kissed his cheek and jaw while playing with his hair. "That was so good, Buck." He smiled adoringly at him. "You're perfect. This is the most perfect week of my life."

---

Bucky curled his arm back to touch Steve's face. He was so tired and fucked out and his ass and legs were pretty damn sore. All he could manage was an appreciative sound of agreement as Steve talked. If he wasn't careful, he was going to fall asleep outside on the sex blanket with Steve's dick still inside him.

---

Steve continued to murmur sweet nothings into Bucky's ear until he heard a rustle in the bushes nearby. He went on high alert and was ready to spring into action until a pair of raccoons emerged and started looking around for any scraps people may have left.
"Jesus Christ!" Bucky's eyes were wide and worried, "Goddamn raccoons, I thought you were somebody coming over to see what was going on." Bucky breathed in deeply and looked to Steve for a moment. "Want to head back inside for bed?"

"What about you get some clothes on and we load the blanket into the truck and we can sleep in the back? That way we can see the stars but not be stuck on the ground," Steve offered.

"Okay," Bucky agreed sleepily and headed inside to pull on some warm pajamas and grab a few more blankets and some pillows. When he came back, Steve had the truck moved over closer to the door of the cabin and the campfire and the back was empty and ready for them to set up a nice bed.

Steve smiled and snuggled up to Bucky the second they set up the bed as cozy as they possibly could. "Perfect," he sighed happily. "I love you so much, Bucky Barnes. I'm looking forward to an amazing day with you tomorrow."

"Rogers-Barnes," Bucky corrected again and blinked tiredly, nuzzling against Steve. "What are we doing tomorrow, Babe?" he asked and closed his eyes. "I kind of want to just stay here at the cabin and do nothing. You can draw and I can whittle or something. And we can have sex on the pool table or in the shower or you can blow me while I play guitar. So many options."

"I like the idea of sitting on the porch and drawing while you whittle. We can talk and fantasize about all the great sex we will have at the end of the night and then we can bring those fantasies to life," Steve said. "Sounds good?"

"Sounds perfect to me," Bucky said and felt himself drifting off. Before he fell asleep, Bucky gripped onto Steve's shirt and said, "You can draw what you think our kid is going to look like." It was silly, of course, since they didn't know what sort of kid they might get but Bucky was dog tired and not really thinking. He just wanted a baby to hold and maybe if he had a picture of one that was supposed to be theirs then he could be satisfied for a while longer until they eventually did get a child.
Steve woke up bright and early the next morning and carried Bucky back into the house to lay on the couch while he cooked breakfast. He didn't bother to wear a shirt - partially because he didn’t feel like it and partially because he wanted Bucky to stare at him - and in no time, chocolate chip pancakes were on the table.

---

Bucky stumbled into the kitchen following the smell of pancakes. "Are these chocolate chip pancakes?" he asked with a gleam in his eye. "I love chocolate chip pancakes." He sat down and gratefully took the plate that was offered to him. "God bless you, Steven Rogers-Barnes for always cooking for me."

---

"I know you do. I don't like to make a habit of unhealthy things for breakfast, but the girls aren't here so I get to spoil you," Steve said. He kissed the top of Bucky's head before sitting down. "I love cooking for you. If only you loved matching sweaters for family pictures half as much as I love cooking."

---

"We aren't wearing ugly ass Hawaiian shirts for our family picture, Steve," Bucky said with a mouth full of pancake. He ate, admittedly, too many pancakes and by the time he decided he was done, he was full and wanted nothing more than to lay down again. But they had plans for the day so Bucky helped clean up from breakfast and waited for what Steve wanted to do first.

---

"How about I give you a quick massage before we find some whittling wood for you? It's a gorgeous day out and I can't wait to sit outside with you and watch the day go by," Steve said. "I don't think I've seen such a clear sky in my life."

---

"Oh, a massage?" Bucky asked and sat up straighter. "I'm okay with that. We can put some blankets on the coffee table in the living room and I'll lay on that."

---

Steve laughed. "Sounds good to me, Baby. You relax and I can get the table ready." He found a few plush blankets and a pillow for Bucky to lay his head on, then set it up nice and neat for him.

---

Bucky never used to like having massages but Steve had given them to him a few times before and he really liked whatever it was that Steve did to him. It also happened to usually end in a boner for him so that was a pretty good benefit of the whole thing.

---

Steve worked his hands slowly over Bucky's back and made sure to give each and every inch of him plenty of attention. "I love giving you massages. Pampering you is one of my favorite pastimes."

--

"That's pretty convenient because one of my favorite pastimes is getting pampered by you," Bucky said and smiled back at Steve. "What do you say you come up here in front of me and let me blow you while you massage me, huh?"

--

Steve blushed at the offer but he sure as hell wasn’t going to turn that down. "Hell yeah," he said. He hurried in front of Bucky and opened the front of his pants excitedly before going back to massaging his shoulders.

--

Bucky stroked Steve's dick with his hand and smiled up at him. "Pretty good way to start the day, huh?" he asked and then took him in his mouth. Steve stopped massaging for a moment and Bucky hummed around his cock happily knowing that Steve was already enjoying himself. It didn't take long for him to get hard and Bucky felt himself following suit quickly.

--

Steve tilted his head back and let out a soft groan when Bucky started to suck him off. It felt so nice to be lazily blown in the morning as they were being totally affectionate with one another. He worked his hands down Bucky’s spine and cracked a few sore joints back into place. "Keep going, Baby."

--

This felt amazing. Bucky was pretty sore from the outdoor fuck the night before and having Steve take care of him was the perfect solution. Everything was quiet and calm and sensual.

After a bit, Bucky was startled by a shuffling noise outside the cabin. He jumped a little but then chose to ignore it, assuming it was another raccoon trying to scrounge together some leftovers.

--

Steve hadn't heard anything since he was so wrapped up in how great Bucky's mouth felt. When he was about to come, he warned Bucky before he released his load down his throat. When he was done, he pulled back and kneeled in front of him to kiss him slowly. "You alright, Baby? I saw you jump."

--

"Yeah, I just heard a weird noise outside the window that sort of startled me." Bucky crumpled his face up in confusion. "It was probably an animal looking for food or something." He kissed Steve again and then rolled to get off the table.

--

Steve gave Bucky's ass a small smack and then wrapped his arm around him from behind. He kissed over his shoulder and started to jerk him off quickly. "Not done with you yet," he growled and kept Bucky in place.
"Okay." Bucky smiled and leaned back against Steve. He closed his eyes and reached a hand up to stroke through Steve's hair. "Thanks for the massage, Steve." There was another noise then and Bucky's eyes flew open just in time to see something dart out of view of the window. "The fuck was that?"

Steve went into high alert when Bucky saw something. He pulled up his pants and rushed out the door after grabbing his gun that he had in the drawer. He took a look around to see if he could find anyone there.

Bucky threw on one of Steve's shirts that was long enough to cover him and he ran outside after Steve. It scared him that Steve grabbed his gun and he didn't want Steve going out alone in case something happened. He followed Steve around to the window. There were imprints of shoes that lead up to it from the door and back again.

Steve saw the footprints and swore. "Get back inside, Bucky," Steve said. "I'll be back soon." He didn't plan on shooting anyone, but he didn't know what sort of protection he would need. "Go relax in the bedroom."

"What? No," Bucky said with a stitch in his brow. "I'm not waiting here." He knew Steve would tell him 'no' and make him stay anyway - and he would if he had to but he really didn't want to. Except that Steve was the cop and Bucky knew when to shut up and let him do his job.

"Yes, you are," Steve said firmly. He gave him a stern look before heading out to follow the footprints out towards the trail. It was easier to follow the trail since whoever it was didn't try to be sneaky. He saw a flash of clothing disappear behind the brush. "Hey!" he shouted in a deep voice and went after it.

Bucky got dressed and waited slumped up on the couch for Steve to come back. He sat quietly with a buzz of worry through his body and smoked a cigarette to keep himself from drinking while Steve wasn't there. It took about ten minutes before Steve was walking back in through the door and kicking off his shoes on the carpet. "Hey," Bucky got up quickly and came over to him. "What's going on?"

Steve came back and put the gun back into the drawer. He sighed heavily and reached down to hold Bucky's hand. "It was Mindy," Steve said. "She, uh... she saw us while you were on the table. She was coming to invite us to dinner."
"What?" Bucky asked quietly. "She saw me blowing you?" His head immediately started to swim with worst-case scenarios and what-ifs. Like what if she told Fred and they were asked to leave. Or what if some of the men decided they didn't want them around anymore and came to take care of it themselves. Bucky had a headache. "What did she say?"

---

"She... she was a bit shocked. Kind of had to talk her down a bit because she felt bad for intruding," Steve said. "She still wants us to come over for dinner," he explained. "And says she's happy for you. I'm pretty sure she means it."

---

"Hah!" Bucky laughed humorlessly, "Like hell we're going to dinner. Even if I was on the fence before, I'm definitely not going now." He flopped down on the couch and covered his face in his hands. "Fuck... maybe we should just head home."

---

"Baby," Steve said gently. "Please. We aren't going to go home early. I won't make you go to dinner, but I'm going to let this cut this amazing vacation short. I'll go down and talk to Mindy again if you don't want to go down there."

---

"Don't go talk to her. We should just stay here alone and not talk to anyone else until we leave and then not come back, ever." Bucky went to light another cigarette but decided against it and put it down. He could handle this without it, hopefully. "Jesus, she's probably going to tell her husband and everyone else and they'll all discuss us like bored housewives."

---

"Buck, she was happy for us," Steve insisted. "I'm not exactly happy that she found out. But this is your special spot - your childhood vacation spot - and the future spot for you and our child. We're not going to run away because it's the more convenient option."

---

"It's the safer option," Bucky said flatly. "It protects the both of us from physical or emotional pain of which we have had far too much in our lives just for being gay." He wasn't sure if he was so worried about this just because it was Mindy and Fred who watched him grow up and were sort of like another set of grandparents to him.

---

Steve let out a frustrated huff. "Fine," he said tensely. "I'm not going to make you do anything. I'll get you a ride home if you want. But I'm going to talk to Mindy today and I'm staying here the whole week."

---

"I'm not leaving you. If you're staying, I'm staying. This is supposed to be our honeymoon. A quiet calm stress-free vacation," Bucky went on and desperately reached for Steve to come to him. "We can go talk to her if you want to. Don't know what good it'll do but I don't want to let you go by yourself just in case, okay?"
Steve pulled Bucky into a tight hug. "I know it's supposed to be stress-free. Which is why I'm taking you down there to show you that you don't have anything to be stressed about." He kissed Bucky's forehead lightly. "I love you."

"I love you too," Bucky said and held on to Steve for a minute longer before reluctantly following him to the truck and hopping inside with a pout. "What if this isn't okay, though? What if Fred starts saying shit? Mindy might be polite about it but Fred's a man's man sort of guy. You know?"

Steve squeezed Bucky's hand protectively and gave him a stubborn look. "I'll make him stop. Because he's as good as family to you and if he's going to give you shit because of who you love, I'll tell him exactly what kind of person he is."

Bucky nodded and took a deep breath once they got to the shops. Mindy and Fred were both sitting behind the counter of the tackle shop talking and they got quiet when Steve and Bucky walked in. Mindy smiled a shy weak sort of apologetic grimace at Bucky and Fred folded his arms and said, "Jumpy Jamie!" in his booming voice like usual. He looked to Steve then and nodded, "And Surprise Steve." He looked pleased with himself for the nickname and Bucky's stomach flipped knowing immediately that Mindy had told him everything.

Steve put an arm defensively around Bucky and held him against his side. It was rare that Steve got this overprotective but he couldn't help but feel like he needed to give Bucky an extra confidence boost with this. "We came here to make sure we didn't have anything to worry about with our stay for the rest of our honeymoon."

Fred raised an eyebrow and said, "Honeymoon? Son, I think you're confused."

Bucky felt tiny. He relied on Steve to hold him close and safe and he tried not looking at either Fred or Mindy who had been a part of his life for so long and may not be for much longer depending on how this went. "We got married in a church by a priest," Bucky stated and barely looked up from the ground. "It may not be legally binding but it's spiritual, I guess."

Steve stood unmovable and proud at Bucky's side. He could get embarrassed and flustered pretty easily but to hell if he was going to let Bucky feel this small. "No, I am not confused," Steve said evenly. "We married just after the new year in a church, just like Bucky said," Steve explained. "I made the same oath to Bucky as you gave to your wife. There's no difference between my marriage and yours."

"There's a bit of a difference," Fred said and gestured vaguely with his hand. "The law won't let you do some of the same things we get to do. I'm sure you realize that, though. The world isn't much too
"You're confused," Steve said. "Because there is no difference between my marriage and yours," he insisted. "The laws do not dictate right or wrong. Nor do the laws change what my marriage is." He took a breath. "If the laws suddenly said men and women could no longer be married, would that make you any less devoted to your wife?"

Bucky squeezed Steve's hip tightly in hopes that he would get the nudge and calm down a little bit. Fred held up his hands and said, "Alright, Sonny, alright. Don't pop that vein you've got sticking out of your head." He chuckled and extended his hand to shake Steve's in a truce and asked sternly, "Are you good to our little Bucky? Treat him like he deserves?"

Steve looked mildly annoyed. He didn't like being doubted about his marriage and then treated like he was overreacting for getting a little worked up. He only shook his hand for Bucky's sake and because Fred didn't seem like he was going to say anything blatantly homophobic. "Yes," he answered, still yet to fully calm down.

Fred nodded and sat back in his chair. "You may be his lover but I knew him when he was a young one." He looked to Bucky. "Jamie, you're like one of my own sons - just a little younger than the pack, a little smaller." He turned back to Steve. "Since his father ain't around to say it, I feel obliged to let you know that if you hurt him you'll have to answer to me. Mindy told me you're a cop, but I was a lieutenant in the army - I think I could take you."

"A lieutenant? I'd be more scared if you were a captain at least," Steve sassed him, but there was a playful hint to his voice as he began to warm up again. "You don't have to worry about me hurting him, Sir. His sisters give him all the hell he needs for one household."

"We can't all be Commander like Old George was," Fred said. "Tell you the truth, I did think it was strange that Bucky put you on the phone with his sisters when you called home last night. I didn't really make any assumptions based off that, but I was curious. Homosexual lovers wasn't my first thought, I gotta say."

Mindy blushed and swatted at her husband. "Guess we both have a tendency for eavesdropping. At least Fred doesn't barge in while you two are having private time."

Steve blushed when Mindy brought up what she saw. At least she probably didn't see his dick since it was all the way in Bucky's mouth. "Well, for the rest of our vacation, you kind of have to assume that we are having private time," he said shyly. "It's nice having so much space to ourselves out here."
Bucky cleared his throat and nudged Steve. It was time to go. This had been strange enough and he was ready to go back to the cabin and hide under some blankets and forget this whole thing happened. "We should probably go. We just wanted to come talk before this got out of hand."

"We will see you later for our cookout with the others, right?" Mindy asked hopefully.

---

Steve caught the hint from Bucky and then gave Mindy an apologetic smile. "You're nice people," he said. "But I don't know the others and how they'd take to us. We came up here to relax and if we have to hide who we are to be treated like normal people at a cookout, it's probably best for us to keep to our cabin."

---

"Nonsense," Mindy said with a dismissive wave of her hand. "The wives won't care a bit and Gary doesn't pay attention to anything when there is food involved and Lloyd talks about a particular war buddy too much for him not to have probably been a little attracted to him." Mindy had a dizzying logic but she went on a bit more before Bucky caved and agreed to show up just for a bit which seemed to satisfy her well enough.

---

Steve wasn't going to be the one to say 'yes', but he was grateful that Bucky said something because he also didn't want to say 'no' again. He gave them both a wave and said that they'd see them later but he looked a little worn as they left. "You think they really wouldn't mind?"

---

"I honestly have no idea," Bucky said as he got back into the truck. "And I'm too tired now to think about it at all. I just want to go lay down. My head has been hurting for a while now." He curled up into a pathetic ball against the door. The very short drive to the cabin felt too long and the bumps on the gravel drive made his head hurt more. As well as that whole thing had gone, Bucky was still emotionally drained from worry and doubt.

---

Steve felt awful for Bucky and he wished that he could wave some sort of magic wand to make him feel better. He reached out and gave his shoulder a little squeeze. "I'll get you some medicine and you can lay down with me as long as you want." When they got back to the cabin and he had Bucky tucked neatly into the blankets, he thought for a moment before letting Bucky in on a secret. "I have a surprise for you on Friday."

---

Bucky had a cool wet rag on his forehead and his eyes were closed as he huddled next to Steve. "What's my surprise?" he asked softly and slipped his hand in with Steve's. He reached with his other hand to turn off the lamp next to his side of the bed because the light was bothering his eyes.

---

"If I told you, then it's going to ruin the surprise," Steve said sweetly. "But I figured I'd give you a little teaser about it so you have something to get you through the day." He massaged Bucky's temples to help ease his headache.
"Thank you, Baby," Bucky mumbled and took deep breaths. "Guess I'll just have to wait then." He turned over onto his side so he was the little spoon. "What do you say, after we deal with this cookout tonight, we come home, get just a little drunk and use those handcuffs once more before you've got to go back to work with them.

Steve pulled Bucky in close and kissed him a few times. His body practically swallowed Bucky's. "I think that sounds like a real good time. You want to have me fuck you like last time? Or do something else?"

"I don't know yet," Bucky said, "All I know is we are going to do it standing up if we can find a good spot in this cabin. And who is wearing the cuffs this time? Me again or do you want a try? As an officer you probably haven't been in cuffs before, have you?"

Steve hadn't even considered that he could be the one wearing the cuffs. "Any trouble I got in was never arrest-worthy if I got caught," Steve said. "If it'll make you happy, I could wear them… You know you still haven't tried putting your fist in me yet."

"Only wear them if you want to, Steve, not if I want you to," Bucky corrected and reached a hand back to touch him. "Do you want me to try fisting you tonight? And if you don't like it we will stop and you can fuck me instead? How's that sound?"

"I don't mind wearing them, Babe, it doesn't matter to me what we do." Steve kissed Bucky's hand lightly. "I want to make tonight about what you want to do. So whatever it is you want, I'll give it a try. And if I don't like it, I'll fuck you until we're both worn."

"You've made every night about what I want, though. What exactly do you want? Anything we haven't tried that you want to do?" Bucky asked. His headache was easing quickly with the medicine and he was calming down in Steve's arms with his warm body and the blankets all around him.

"Baby, all I ever want to ask for is nice, vanilla sex where I get to cuddle and kiss you. You've already given me such great lovemaking. It'd be nice to have another one of those," Steve said softly.

"Do you want to do that, then?" Bucky asked. "We can have another 'great lovemaking' instead of trying new things or using the handcuffs again. It's up to you, Baby. We have options. And if it's with you, I'm up for anything." Admittedly, Bucky was still a bit horny from not getting off this morning. Massages with Steve always got him worked up and when they were interrupted, Bucky didn't get to come.
"Can we?" Steve's voice got all quiet and yearning. He didn't care who did whom - Steve just genuinely loved being close and as intimate as ever with the love of his life. "We can do the handcuffs tomorrow." Steve rubbed a hand over Bucky's chest lightly. "You feel it too, don't you? That feeling that kind of takes over everything when we make love?"

"Yeah, I do," Bucky promised and rolled to face Steve so he could kiss him. "Feels sort of like the cosmos, don't you think? Or the best high of your life. As if the world was waiting for us to fit together just like that, in just that way." He couldn't read Steve's face and he sighed and said, "I know. I'm such a dirty gay hippie."

Steve drew Bucky into a slow kiss and smiled dumbly at him. "It's exactly like that," he said. "You're still a hippie, though." Steve played with Bucky's hair lightly. "It so... it's so amazing to me when I get to have all of you. To have a connection with you that no one else in the world gets to share. It makes me feel like the luckiest man on earth."

"It's amazing to me that I ever got to find you," Bucky said and nuzzled Steve's neck. "I didn't ever know what that feeling was or if it even existed and I thought I'd never be able to get it. My relationships before you weren't this force of nature and soul like ours is. Everything before you was a sorry excuse to try to glimpse that feeling for just a second. And nothing and nobody ever made me feel the things I feel with you."

Steve's heart pounded like he was a teenager confessing his love for the first time. He wasn't nervous but he was certainly excited to hear Bucky say all those wonderful things to him. "I'm happy you feel so strongly," Steve said. "I love you." He kissed his forehead lightly. "Do you want me to shut up so you can finally nap?"

"I would like to nap, yes, but if you wanted to do something else we can. It's been a bit of a bummer day so far," Bucky said and wrapped his arms tighter around Steve. "You decide what to do and I'll just close my eyes for a little bit until you've got it."

Steve kissed him again. "I'm going to stay with you the whole time," Steve said. "And when I decide it's time for you to wake up, I'm going to slowly undress you and suck your cock while you're sleeping. How's that for a wake-up call?"

Bucky smiled and whispered, "Yeah, I'd like that." He let out a content sigh and brought Steve's hand up to card through his hair gently as he drifted off to sleep. He dreamed of being caught out in the middle of the lake with a Steve who couldn't swim and Bucky got to be the big hero this time and bring him safely back to shore.
Steve let Bucky doze for a couple of hours. He occupied himself by daydreaming about their future kid and working together on the shelter at the church. When it drew closer to cookout time, Steve shimmied under the blankets and started to kiss Bucky's cock through his pants.

Somewhere in the back of Bucky's mind, he could register that Steve was touching him. His uneventful dreams morphed until he was stranded naked on the road hitchhiking with Steve pulling up in his cruiser to come get him. The next thing he knew, he was spread out on the hood of the car with Steve's fingers searching around inside his ass and his cock hard and pointing up at the sun.

Steve pulled down Bucky's pants once he got him hard. He licked up his shaft and moaned lowly at the taste. "Mmm, so good," Steve purred. He took the tip into his mouth and swirled his tongue over it.

The second Steve's tongue touched his cock, Bucky was wide awake with a hand to Steve's head and a groan in the back of his throat. "You weren't kidding when you said you'd wake me up like this," he said and hitched his hips up towards Steve's mouth.

Steve popped off of him for a moment, "Of course I wasn't kidding," he said before diving back down and slowly bobbing his head up and down Bucky's dick. He hummed low and brought a hand up to stroke Bucky's balls.

"Did I ever tell you how much better you've gotten at this?" Bucky asked. "You went from that cock-shy virgin Catholic to being able to deep throat me no problem in such a short time. I never thought I'd tell someone how proud I was of their blowjobs skills but I kind of want to get you a most improved trophy."

Steve had to pull off of Bucky's dick again because he was laughing too hard. "Quit making me laugh when I'm blowing you. Save your 'most improved trophy' for after you've shot your load."

"Alright, alright, I'll be quiet. Get back on there," Bucky said and hushed up. He started humming and then singing quietly "Kiss on My List" from Hall & Oates. It had been stuck in his head for a few days and it was always an appropriate song when he was with Steve. Bucky liked singing it to him and dancing around a little until Steve shut him up by giving him lots of kissing.

Hearing Bucky humming made Steve feel a lot better. They'd gotten off to a rough start this morning but it seemed like Bucky was back on his feet again. He hollowed his cheeks out as he worked his lips over every inch of Bucky's cock. Steve couldn't help but start to jerk himself off a little.
Bucky looked down at Steve's hand on his cock and touched Steve's shoulder lightly. "Want me to that? You liked 69 before, we can do it again," he reasoned and pulled the fabric of his shirt to try pulling him up.

Steve looked up at Bucky with hooded eyes and he didn't need to be told twice. He moved up and gave Bucky a slow kiss before shifting so his dick was in front of Bucky's face as he sucked Bucky off and reached a hand down to tease his husband's ass.

Bucky smiled and kissed Steve's thighs slowly and sleepily a few times before grabbing his cock and taking it into his mouth. His first thought was that he was grateful there weren't windows in this room because there would be no chance of anyone accidentally peeking in on them this time.

Steve moaned and his body let out a little shudder. He kept teasing Bucky's hole with his index finger but wouldn't push in without lube. He spread his legs a bit more and laved his tongue along the underside of Bucky's dick.

Bucky worked his mouth over Steve's length and massaged his sides as he went. His nose kept bumping into Steve's balls every time he got his dick deeper in his throat. This really was a good view for Bucky - Steve's cock and balls right up by him and Steve's ass just waiting patiently to be touched.

This was probably Steve's favorite thing to do with Bucky that wasn't just sex. He was so glad Bucky showed him this position. He popped off of Bucky's dick with a wet gasp and took his dick sideways into his mouth so Bucky's cock would bump against the inside of his cheek.

Bucky felt a warm tingle go through his body and he let go of Steve's cock to say, "I'm really close, Baby," before going right back to it. He came not long after with Steve all the way down his throat. He hummed around Steve's cock happily when he felt his hot come spurting out into Steve's mouth.

Steve moaned and licked Bucky's cock clean after he came. He kissed along the inside of his thighs and sucked a dark mark there as Bucky kept giving him some of the best head he's ever gotten. After a few moments, he started panting and groaning to Bucky that he was close before he came down Bucky's throat.

Bucky swallowed Steve's come and pet his hands across the back of Steve's thighs. He gingerly rolled Steve off of him and readjusted so his head was back up by Steve so he could give him a kiss. "Can that be my wake up call every morning?"
"I don't think so." Steve laughed, but then smirked and said, "Sometimes your wake-up call has to be me fingering you or me fucking myself on your dick." Whatever made Bucky happy, he would do it. Absolutely.

"I like all of those options, Mr. Rogers-Barnes." Bucky nodded and reluctantly got off the bed to put on clothes that he could wear to the cookout. He settled on an old concert t-shirt for The Rolling Stones and Steve's burgundy cardigan that was a little long on him.

Steve smiled adoringly at the sight of Bucky in his sweater. He got up and dressed to be the presentable gay - nice jeans, good shoes, and a button-down. Probably not the best for the wilderness, but, oh, well. "How long we got before the cookout?"

"Something like forty-five minutes," Bucky said as he checked the clock. Steve certainly upstaged him with his outfit but Bucky didn't say anything because he knew Steve liked to wear button downs and no matter how much Bucky would tell him it was too fancy for a cookout by the lake, he wasn't going to change. "What do you want to do before then?"

"How about... how about we pick out some wood you can use for whittling. You still haven't had a chance to do that," Steve said. "I want to see the stuff you can make."

"The stuff I can make is just going to be strange blobs meant to look like animals," Bucky answered. "It won't be impressive, I need to practice on it." They headed out to gather some wood and Bucky managed to find some large fallen tree branches that he could saw down to smaller pieces that he could work with.

"I'm sure you're better than you let on," Steve said. "We can also scope out anything we would want to take home to add to our baby's crib or to make little decorations out of," he suggested.

"Yeah, we still need to get wood for that," Bucky said and dragged another branch over to his pile by the cabin. "I was thinking I'd ask Clint if I could use the cellar at his place to construct the actual crib since he's got a little tool shop down there already. His mother used to live with him and she made glass mosaics down there."

"That's a perfect idea, Buck," Steve said sweetly. "Is his mom alright? She didn't pass away, did she? Just moved out?" Clint was pretty young, so if his mom passed, it would've been a real shame.
"No, she got remarried and moved to Long Island and left the whole place to Clint," Bucky said, "It's a pretty good-sized place for just one guy. I mean, it's right on the street underneath a bakery but I think Clint likes it that way."

---

Steve let out a relieved breath. "Thank god," he said. "I guess that makes him fortunate she moved out. Though, I would hate to live so far from my mom." He shrugged. "What if we end up finding a baby before we're ready?"

---

"You mean before the crib is finished?" Bucky asked and wiped his hands off on his pants. They needed to get going to the cookout and Bucky had bits of dirt and bark on him all over the place. "I mean, what's the likelihood that we get a baby for at least another five to ten years, huh? I can make the crib in a few months in my free time."

---

"No, I mean like... before we get a house. Or before the girls are grown up and moved out," Steve elaborated. "What if I find some kid while I'm on the job or something? And there isn’t a soul in the world who they could call family."

---

"I guess we will take what is given to us," Bucky said and grabbed for Steve's hand. "I think that if by some miracle we can help a child who needs a safe home then it doesn't matter if we have a house or the girls are adults, we need to help, don't you think? I mean, we don't know what opportunities we are going to get and I hate thinking of sending a kid into the system. Because that's not the best place for them. Trust me, I almost had to give up the girls to the foster system."

---

Steve squeezed Bucky's hand and nodded. "I was thinking that too," he said. "But I didn't want to just assume since you've been stretched so thin with just taking care of the girls." Steve kissed Bucky's temple. "I'm glad you were able to keep them together and with their family."

---

Bucky pulled Steve close to him and grabbed his other hand. "I want to raise a baby with you," he said firmly and smiled up at his husband. "I know I've had the girls for a while but regardless of when we get to have a baby, I want that baby, and even if it means I have three kids, that's what we will do. Okay?"

---

Steve smiled and leaned his head on top of Bucky's. "Alright," he said happily. "That sounds good to me." Steve helped Bucky pick out a few more broken branches that were pretty thick and the wood wasn't too dried out. He also found a rock that had a copper shine to it, so he pocketed it on the way back. "We should start heading over."

---

"Yep, let's get this over with." Bucky sighed and made sure his shoes were laced up. "It's only about a ten-minute walk over there so we can just go on foot instead of taking the truck. If that works for
"That's fine with me, Baby." Steve held the sides of Bucky's face and kissed him slowly to try and cheer him up. He then took his hand and let Bucky lead the way to the cookout. "Ten bucks says they ask who fucks who."

"I'm not taking that bet because you know they will," Bucky said. He was happy to have his hand in Steve's as they walked and it just felt really nice being out in nature with him like this. "Ten bucks says they ask us if we ever tried to be with a woman before."

"I bet you double or nothing that when we say 'no', they'll ask us if we're really sure that we're gay when we never were with a woman," Steve countered. "We need to have a gay question bingo."

"Ooh! Gay bingo! That sounds pretty fun actually," Bucky said, "If you get five stupid questions in a row you win the gay money pot." He paused for a second and said, "Also, you'll be the target of that question since I have actually been with a woman once. So, good luck."

"I'll just tell them that your ass is so good that there's no way any woman can compare," Steve countered. "Maybe I should give really uncomfortable answers to all the gay questions they ask."

"Uncomfortable how?" Bucky asked in concern. "Because, you know, I could just leave you there to deal with them alone and come back to the cabin if things get awkward. And I don't think you would appreciate that very much. Although, Mindy might just have you tell her sex stories all night. For some reason, she strikes me as someone who will be curious how it's done."

Steve squeezed Bucky's hand. "Don't leave me alone with them all. It's our honeymoon, we have to be attached at the hip."

"I won't leave you, Baby," Bucky promised. After a bit, they approached a clearing in the trees that revealed two cabins close next to each other and a group of people around the campfire in between, looking out at the lake. Bucky instinctively dropped Steve's hand as they approached.

Steve sighed when Bucky dropped his hand, but he let it be. Mindy saw them first and waved enthusiastically. "So good to see you boys again." She hustled over and gave each of them a tight hug, happy they ended up coming. "I was starting to worry that you two had a change of heart."
Bucky hugged Mindy and looked at the others watching them. "Well, we did promise to come for a bit and I may not be so honest but Steve's a man of his word." He gestured vaguely at his husband and already felt very awkward.

Mindy pulled the two of them over to the campfire and introduced them to Gary and Lloyd's wives and then she moved on to the last new face of the group. It was one of her sons who Bucky remembered playing with years ago when they were all really young and not yet in the army and being civil servants and things. "Oh my god, Jesse," Bucky said quietly and then stuck out a hand for him to shake.

---

Steve patted Bucky's shoulder. "Is there anything I can do to help?" he asked. "I'm a pretty good cook. I'm usually the one who makes everything at the house."

---

"No, dear, just sit and chat. Fred and I have this sorted," Mindy said. "Looks like Bucky recognizes our little Jesse so maybe you have him introduce the two of you.

"Right, Sorry," Bucky said hurriedly and gestured to the man. "Steve, this is Jesse - Fred and Mindy's youngest. He's an EMT."

---

Steve smiled and shook Jesse's hand. "Hey, there," he said warmly. "It's nice to meet you." He took a breath and said, "I'm Bucky's husband." If he didn't know already then he would know soon since he doubted Mindy wouldn't chat to her sons. "I'm a Brooklyn police officer- we work pretty closely with EMTs. We couldn't do our job without you guys."

---

Jesse's eyebrows shot up in curiosity but he didn't say anything except, "Good to meet you. What's it like being a big city cop down in Brooklyn, huh?"

Bucky grabbed a chair and unfolded it for Steve to sit down and pulled another one up for himself. Steve was next to Jesse and Bucky was between Steve and Lloyd's wife Sheila. So far, everyone was paying attention to Steve and Jesse's conversation but Bucky could just see their questions burning behind their eyes.

---

"It's pretty hectic. Wish people weren't as awful to each other as they often are. I've gotten shot. Knifed a few times before I met Bucky. Besides that, it's pretty boring," Steve joked. "What about you? I'm sure you've had to help people with some pretty interesting injuries here in axes and shotgun-land."

---

"You've been stabbed?" Bucky asked incredulously and squinted at Steve. He hadn't heard about that before. Mindy and Sheila both gave Bucky an excited look like maybe they were going to see their first gay man fight. Bucky shook his head quickly and mumbled, "Never mind, that's a conversation for later."

Jesse chuckled at Bucky but answered Steve, "Yeah, some pretty gnarly stuff happens," he said and pointed at Bucky. "Before I was an EMT the worst thing I ever saw was when Bucky broke his leg on a hike and my older brother had to carry him back for miles with it sticking at an odd angle kind of like bent the opposite way it should be bent."

---

Steve grimaced at the image of the leg. "Oh, Baby," he said softly to Bucky. "See? I didn’t know you’ve broken your leg." He looked back over at Jesse. "So did you and Bucky hang out a lot as kids?"

---

Jesse sat back in his chair, "Yeah, Bucky and my brothers and I would play a lot as kids. Sometimes Old George would be reading out by the lake so Bucky would come over to our place when he got bored."

Bucky noticed that of everyone Jesse seemed the most normal and unaffected by his and Steve’s relationship. Mindy, Sheila, and Fred were highly invested in the conversation and kept looking from Bucky to Steve curiously and Lloyd, Gary, and Gary's wife all seemed to be too occupied with their own thoughts to care.

---

"What was he like? I hear he was a bit of a firecracker when he was younger. I only met him after he mellowed out." Steve didn't pry too much into Bucky's past and what he used to be like since he didn't want to risk bringing up unpleasant memories.

---

"Who? Bucky?" Jesse laughed and readjusted in his chair. He took a sip from his beer and said, "I wouldn't call him a firecracker but he was definitely pretty reckless. And he was always swearing and taking beer from my dad’s fridge when he wasn't looking. He was bold and there weren’t ever consequences for Bucky."

Mindy piped up then and added, "You know, we really should have known Bucky was a homosexual what with the way he looked at Freddie Jr. and how he trailed him around."

Bucky flushed deep red and sank into his chair. He distinctly remembered one time pretending to need help in the water when Junior was the only one around so he would give him mouth to mouth.

---

Steve looked over at Bucky with an affectionate smile and couldn't help but smirk a little at Mindy's revelation. "Well, have you seen your son? Anyone would be head over heels for any of them," Steve said with a playful wink to her.

---

Bucky looked from Steve to Jesse nervously then over to Fred. If anyone was going to say anything, now was the time to start yelling. There was a gentle ripple of laughter through the Watkins family and Bucky sighed quietly in relief. Fred got up to start grilling and Bucky stood as well, "I'll help you," he said and went to the grill with him. Bucky watched Mindy take his place next to Steve and hoped to God that she wasn't going to start asking Steve sex questions.
Steve and Jesse chattered for a while until the food came out. He was social with Mindy as well but once his plate was made, he sat next to Bucky. "This isn't that bad," he said. "Everyone is really nice so far."

---

"I'm waiting for the other shoe to drop," Bucky said quietly into his food and gave Steve a sideways glance. "Lloyd and Gary haven't said shit to either one of us since we got here. I'm betting the second someone starts asking about us, one of them is going to have a problem."

---

"Why wait for the shoe to drop when you can lay it to rest?" Steve said. He looked over to Lloyd and Gary and waved for their attention. "I haven't spoken to you guys all night," he said in an assertive but friendly way. "I haven't offended you, have I?"

---

Bucky choked and glared at Steve. Jesus, he was asking for trouble tonight. If Bucky didn't know better, he might say Steve was fishing for someone to start something so he could defend them.

Gary blinked slowly and shook his head, "I'm sorry, my boy. I don't mean anything by it, I guess I'm just trying to figure this whole thing out." He nodded. "Before you got here, Fred and Mindy told us what happened and what you two talked about earlier with them."

---

Steve caught the glare and whispered to Bucky, "I'm not walking on eggshells for the rest of the evening." He looked over to Gary and explained, "There's not much to figure out. A lot of people overthink this whole thing. Really, what it all comes down to is I love my husband just as much as you love your wife." He then teasingly added, "Possibly more. So now that we've addressed the elephant in the room, we can go back to having some great food and enjoying this fine weather."

---

Everyone was silent for a long moment and Bucky looked down at the ground like a chastised child. Jesse was the first to speak up and he said, "Steve, could you hand me another beer?" and pointed over to the cooler beside Steve.

Bucky was about to say something - he didn't quite know what yet - when Sheila leaned forward in her chair a bit and asked, "Alright, dears, so how did you meet?"

---

Steve picked up a beer and tossed it over to Jesse. That man was a godsend right now since he was the one being the least weird about the whole thing. "I was on duty when I saw this young girl lost on the streets. Took her for ice cream and back to the precinct until her older brother picked her up." He smiled as he nudged Bucky gently. "When I saw how much this guy gave up of himself to take care of his sisters, I wanted to get to know him. I invited him out for dinner and drinks and it kind of went from there."

---

Mindy smiled and gave her husband a gentle loving look. "Well, Honey, if it counts for anything, Fred and I think Bucky is a good choice for anyone and you seem a good catch yourself."
Bucky scratched at his arm nervously and turned to Steve and quietly and uncharacteristically shyly asked, "Steve, can I have a beer please?"

Lloyd spoke up now, slightly miffed, "I can look past this whole thing for Bucky's sake. He was always a good kid. But, really? He's got to ask permission to have a beer? Did you cut off his balls, too?" He sounded angry - like he thought everything about Bucky being gay was somehow Steve's fault.

---

Steve felt bad that Bucky felt embarrassed and asked for a beer, but he got angry when Lloyd had to be a bit of a dick. He didn't want to cause a scene and make Bucky more upset, so he reached for a beer and passed it over. "I'm a recovering alcoholic," Steve lied evenly. "If you noticed, I haven't had any beer since I've been here and the day I went out for dinner and drinks with Bucky is the day I went sober. He's asking for my sake - he doesn't want to drink if there's a chance I might fall off the wagon. But today is a good day for me."

---

Bucky clenched his jaw tight and scrunched up his face in anger for a moment. He hated when Steve lied for him. Steve never lied. And the only times he had was to save Bucky or his sisters some amount of pain. Bucky put a hand on Steve's thigh and put the beer back. He wasn't sure if he should correct Steve and explain that he was the actual alcoholic or if he should leave it because it might be embarrassing for him if Bucky exposed his lie. Bucky thought for a second then cleared his throat and said, "Actually, Lloyd, that would be me. Steve's just saying that so you all don't think even worse of me then you do now. I followed in my mother's footsteps and drank just like she taught me but I took it too far and... yeah, I'm an alcoholic. And Steve helps me be reasonable with my drinking."

---

Mindy and the other wives looked touched at how they looked out for each other. Fred and Gary looked sorry for Bucky but Lloyd still seemed to blame Steve for turning Bucky gay. "Alcoholism is just liberal nonsense," he said. "If you got a job and you got a roof over your head that you support, then you're not an alcoholic." Steve bit back a comment. "Just grab a beer and tell your boyfriend to quit being such a girl about it."

---

"Lloyd!" Sheila snapped and smacked her husband in the arm. "Can't you see this is a problem for Bucky?" She got quieter but not quiet enough that they couldn't hear her say, "You remember how Old George felt about his wife's drinking."

Bucky was intensely uncomfortable. He hated that everyone was looking at him and he hated that they had to bring up his mom in whispers. He remembered the late night hushed arguments about her problems and he hated reliving it and knowing he had done the same thing. "Alright, Lloyd." Bucky shrugged and grabbed a beer. He popped it open and drank for a long moment keeping eye contact with the man. He had no idea what must be going through Steve's head but he hoped he wasn't going to hear it later for all of this.

---

Steve couldn't really get angry at him for drinking one beer, especially when Lloyd was being a jerk. "Bucky's an amazing person. He single-handedly raised two kids for the past four years. He's selfless and I don't give a damn if he drinks like his mom used to. She helped raise three amazing people and Bucky can do just the same. I just want him to know his limits."

---

Bucky slipped his hand with Steve's confidently but his body shook just slightly. Sheila stood and pulled her husband with her. "I think Lloyd and I are going to head back to the cabin for the night. He has had too much beer and I think his wits have left him."

Lloyd grumbled and complained as his wife shuffled him off but he still left without causing a scene. They all watched the two of them leave and then Jesse said, "Steve, why don't you help me get the deserts my mom made?" and gestured towards the house.

---

"I'll be right back, Handsome," Steve said quietly to Bucky before following Jesse inside. "Sorry," Steve apologized to him as they walked. "I just can't stand it when people make Bucky feel small."

---

Jesse patted Steve's back and said, "No, I understand entirely. Asked you to come help me grab desserts so I could apologize on behalf of those guys." They went to the kitchen of the cabin and Jesse pulled desserts from the counters and handed them to Steve. "They are very old men who are set in their very old ways. Tell you the truth, I knew Bucky was gay way back when. Even thought I could be for a bit but it turns out I'm just a pretty sensitive straight guy." He held up his hands in defense, "Not saying all gay men are sensitive, but, you know, it's just more unusual for straight men to show it."

---

"I appreciate the thought, but you don't have to apologize for someone else's behavior," Steve said. He picked up a tray and smiled warmly at him. "And I'm glad you're a sensitive straight guy. The world needs more sensitivity, and I don't need some other guy sweeping my husband off his feet." He nudged him playfully. "You got a girlfriend, Jesse?"

---

Jesse smiled and headed back out to the fire. "Had one, she dumped me about a week ago, actually. So I'm on the hunt if you know about nice women in this area."

Bucky had managed to finish his beer and go through a second and part of a third while Steve was gone and he was currently in conversation with Mindy and Sheila about his sisters.

---

"I'm sorry, Pal," Steve said with a frown. "I don't think I know the area as well as you do, but if I find a nice, single woman, I'll send her your way." When they got back out, Steve saw the three empty bottles next to Bucky and frowned. He set the desserts down and excused himself from Jesse so he could sit next to Bucky. "How's it going over here?"

---

Bucky slipped his hand with Steve's automatically and said, "We're talking about the girls. Catching them up on some things." He paused and glanced over to Jesse who was talking with his father now and then turned to Steve again and said quieter but with just the slightest edge, "What'd you and Jesse talk about?"
"We didn't talk about much. He apologized about Lloyd. I promised I'd try and hook him up with a nice woman cause his girlfriend dumped him last week, poor guy." Steve gave Bucky's hand a small squeeze.

"Single Jesse, huh?" Bucky breathed quietly and drank some more.

Jesse came back over to them then and sat next to Steve. "So, Steve, being a cop can't be your only interest. What do you do for fun? Have any hobbies?"

"It's okay, Buck," Steve said softly when he saw his husband take a drink. He turned back to Jesse and answered, "I love to draw. And cooking makes me happy, too. And I'm also an honorary cheerleader at Lilly's lacrosse games." Steve beamed. "What about you?"

"Oh, wow, you draw?" Jesse said, "I sculpt with clay when I can. I'm not very good but I give it a shot. Do you have some drawing here with you? I'd like to see some."

Bucky rolled his eyes and crossed his leg up on his lap before drinking some more. Part of him was screaming at himself to put the beer down but he really couldn't. All he could do was sit and listen to Jesse talk to Steve and get just a little jealous.

Steve shyly pulled a small sketchpad from his pocket and offered it to Jesse. "I wish I could sculpt. It's a lot harder and the supplies can really get so expensive. I think I'd go insane spending thirty bucks on something that didn't come out the way I wanted," he laughed.

Jesse flipped through the sketchpad, "Steve, these are really good." He looked at one of Steve's mom and one of Raphael sitting by the window and then landed on one of Bucky asleep on the couch. "Wow, this one is really good."

Bucky peeked over to see what he was looking at and saw a drawing of himself. He didn't know when Steve had done that one. "I make a pretty damn good model, don't I?"

Steve blushed at Jesse's compliment. "Thank you. I bet your sculptures are really good, too. Buck likes to whittle. Did you guys ever make stuff together?" Steve leaned over to give Bucky a kiss on the cheek and whispered to him that he was the best model in the world.

As Jesse was answering Steve, Mindy and Fred stole Bucky's attention again and he had to turn away from his husband to talk. Mindy nodded and said, "So, Bucky, Fred and I have some questions about you and Steve's relationship."
Steve tried to pay attention to Jesse but he overheard Mindy’s comment and felt like he should come to Bucky’s aid. He excused himself from Jesse and turned to join the other conversation. "Are we sure we want to hear those questions?" he asked.

---

Mindy thought for a second, "Guess you won't know until you hear them." She chuckled. "We've just never known a homosexual couple before and since we watched little Bucky grow up it's just all so interesting, don't you think?"

Bucky handed his beer off to Steve in case he wanted to drink some and said, "Well, like Steve's been saying it's all the same as your relationship except we've both got dicks."

---

Steve only took the beer because if he drank some then it was less that Bucky would drink. "Yeah, Bucky's right. I mean, I guess it's strange for you to see two guys together. But it's been happening forever and it's legal here. So we're hoping it won't be strange to people for too long."

---

Jesse scooted his chair closer to the conversation and said, "Mom, how about we don't ask them about this, yeah? It's a little weird to pry and you'd feel weird if they asked about your relationship just because it was different from theirs."

Fred sat back in his chair and said, "Well, you know, Son, in some cultures, homosexuality is seen as a gift from the gods. Certain tribes in South America would consider Steve and Bucky to be blessed and holy."

---

"Well, we're in America and, rather than blessed, most people think we're going to hell." Steve played with Bucky's hair idly. "But, go ahead with your questions, I guess."

---

Jesse nudged Steve and said quietly, "You don't have to humor them. You can tell them ‘no’."

"Now, Jesse," Fred said, "I think you're a little jealous that Steve and Bucky have our attention tonight." He laughed and swayed a little. He was noticeably drunk now. "And for the record, I don't think hell exists. If the god that my mama told me to believe in is real, then I don't think he made such an awful place. Don't you?"

---

"Well, I don't think hell is the whole fire and brimstone that some priests make it out to be. But I do believe he made hell to protect the good souls in heaven. You know, kind of like how prisons keep the bad people off the streets so the good people don't get hurt," Steve responded.

---

Bucky tensed up and shrunk in on himself. He wasn't ever comfortable discussing religion and especially since he was always terrified that those people were actually right and he would be in that fire and brimstone hell forever. He had to remind himself a lot that Steve's God had the two of them ready to be married in heaven once they are dead and he just had to do his best to try to believe it.
Jesse touched Steve's shoulder again - a move that didn't go unnoticed by Bucky. "I think that's probably pretty accurate," he said. "I know if hell was like they say then I'd be going there as well, so I like your way better."

---

Steve had a pretty good time from there after just talking with them all, but Bucky kept looking more and more miserable and annoyed as time went. He didn't really know why, but he didn't want to stay here if Bucky wasn't enjoying himself. "Hey, you want to go back soon?" Steve asked Bucky quietly once Jesse left to use the bathroom.

---

Bucky, who hadn't really let up drinking since he started, nodded at Steve slowly. "I'm getting tired," he said with a bit of a slur to his words. He gripped onto Steve's arms possessively when Jesse came back out to the fire. Jesse sat down and Bucky whispered to Steve loud enough so no one but the three of them could hear, "I want to go back to the cabin and I want you to fuck me so hard I can't walk tomorrow."

---

"Buck," Steve scolded lightly because he could tell by the look on Jesse's face that he'd heard and had been caught off guard. He gave Jesse an apologetic smile. "I guess that's my cue to leave. I'm sorry. He's just drunk. This happens. It's been really nice meeting you," he said.

---

Bucky said a warm but messy goodbye to everyone and clung to Steve for stability. Jesse stood and followed them when they started walking away from the fire. "Hey, it was really nice to meet you too, Steve," Jesse said, "And it was wonderful seeing you again, Bucky." He then leaned into Steve so Bucky wouldn't hear him ask, "Do you want me to help you get back to your cabin? Bucky's not really on his feet and I can carry a flashlight for you if you need to carry him back."

---

Steve was tempted to say 'yes' because Bucky was pretty sloppy, but he didn't want to make their problems into Jesse's problems. "It's okay," Steve said. "I appreciate it, though. Truly." He waved goodbye to everyone and wrapped an arm around Bucky to support him as he started to walk back. "How're you feeling, Buck? Can you walk a little?"

---

"I can walk," Bucky said and nodded. "Motherfucking Lloyd with his big mouth." He muttered to himself as he held onto Steve's hip firmly. "I can make my own decisions. Fucking Lloyd. Jesus. Everyone else was fine, but that prick..."

---

Steve sighed. "We're going to have plenty of people who give us shit for being gay. We can't let it get to us," he answered. "Life is too short to let people like him dig under our skin."

---

"Still some bullshit, though," Bucky said. "And Jesse with his stupid perfect blonde hair and an EMT's body." He looked down at his own body for a second and sighed. "And he's a sculpture or some shit and he kept touching you all over the place."

---

Steve frowned. "Wait, you’re mad at Jesse? He wasn't touching me all over the place. And he's straight," he answered. "Is that why you've been grumpy all night?"

---

"Yeah, he was," Bucky argued. "He kept touching your arm and talked to you nonstop. And he took you aside alone into the house. And he's in public service and is an artist. He's just a less sexy you, Steve. Don't tell me you didn't notice."

---

"Jesse is a nice, handsome man who has no interest in me, nor I in him," Steve said. "You don't have to get worked up every time some good-looking person talks to me or touches me. I'm married to you."

---

"You say that like I do this a lot," Bucky said and stopped Steve so he could hop up on his back to be carried the rest of the way to the cabin. "It's just he would be such a good match for you. And, if you hadn't met me first, you might have met him instead, you know? You've got so much in common with him."

---

Steve started, "It's not that you do this a lot. It's that-" and there it was. Bucky was getting insecure. "Baby, I don't like him like that. The only one around here that thinks that he's a good match for me is you." Steve carried Bucky piggyback to the cabin and unlocked the door. "You know I take my vows seriously and I believe that you are my soul mate."

---

Bucky slid off of Steve's back once they got into the cabin and he flopped on the couch, a little dizzy. He wasn't thinking very clearly but he was thinking well enough to manage to say, "Yeah, well you got stuck with a soul mate who's a dead-beat college drop-out, guardian of two, alcoholic, dirty hippie who works for just over minimum at a record store owned by a deaf guy who is my only friend."

---

Steve went to the kitchen to get Bucky a glass of water. "And I couldn't be happier with who God chose to pair me with. You are the love of my life and you make me so happy," he said. Steve passed Bucky the glass. "I don't want to be with anyone else. Ever."

---

Bucky sniffled and took the water but didn't drink it yet. "Hey, how come I've never seen you drunk, Steve?" He took a small sip of the water and set it down on the coffee table. "Because, I've seen you drink, and get maybe a little bit tipsy, but never as drunk as me."
"My dad was an alcoholic," Steve said. "And I saw what that did to my mom. I don't want to be responsible for doing to you what my dad did to her." He sat down and put an arm around Bucky's shoulders. "And no offense, but you do the drinking for the both of us, Baby."

---

Bucky got quiet and seemed to be sobered up for just a moment, "Am I doing to you what your dad to your mom?" He honestly didn't think he was as bad lately. He had really cut back and only drank with the go-ahead from Steve. That was a huge improvement on how he was before. But he knew he still had a problem - the dependency was still there and he just couldn't shake it.

---

Steve didn't answer right away. It was an answer in itself but after some thought, he sighed. "Sometimes," he admitted. "I know you're doing so much better, Baby. You really, really are doing an amazing job." He squeezed Bucky close. "It's times like tonight. You asked me for one. And then I turn my back and one became three. And then you just kept going."

---

Bucky nodded and curled up against Steve. "I know." He sighed. "It was so weird because the second you were out of sight, something in my brain told me I had to get through them as fast as I could before you came back and stopped me. I don't know where that came from."

---

Steve kissed his temple. "It came from the alcoholism," Steve said. "You're not a bad person for it, Buck. My dad wasn't a bad person. And I see plenty of people struggling with it when I'm on the job." He rubbed his back. "I'm not angry at you, Baby. It's... it's upsetting to me, that's all."

---

"Why can't I get it to stop?" Bucky whined quietly and nuzzled against Steve's neck. "Even now, all I want to do is go get the rest of that wine in the cabinet. It's like all the time, one thing goes wrong or someone says something to me that I don't like and I want a drink. Sometimes having a cigarette helps but I know I shouldn't get too attached to those either.

---

"I don't have all the answers, Bucky. But they have help groups for people with addictions. Maybe it can help going to those and meeting people going through the same stuff you are," Steve said.

---

Bucky closed his eyes and pulled his legs up into Steve's lap so he was in a ball in his arms. "I don't want to go to a support group. Can't we just figure it out at home? They've got to have a self-help book at the library that I can read instead."

---

"I mean, you can try the self-help book if you think you can do it. But there's no shame in going to a support group. I'd go with you if that would make you happy," Steve offered.
"I'll think about it," Bucky said and kissed Steve's neck. "Can we leave it for now? Move on to something else?" He kissed his neck again. "I don't care what we do. I'm sorry I haven't made this night very good for you. I fucked it up again."

---

"You didn't fuck anything up, Baby," Steve reassured. "Is it alright if we just go to bed now? I'm kind of tired." He didn't want to say it to Bucky but he didn't like having sex with Bucky when he was this drunk.

---

"Yeah, I'm really sleepy," Bucky said and wrapped his arms around Steve's neck. "We can just talk until we fall asleep. I'm too tired to take a shower but if I smell bad I will so you don't have to sleep next to me like that."

---

Steve picked him up and carried him into bed so he could tuck him in. He stripped Bucky of his clothes and kissed his face a few times. "Two more days until your surprise," he said. "That's got to be exciting."

---

"Is it a puppy?" Bucky asked absently and pulled the blankets up close to his face. "Steve, we can't have a puppy in the apartment we already have Raphael. But, puppies are so nice," Bucky rambled to himself quietly, his tired and drunk mind already deciding what his surprise was and already finding multiple reasons for this phantom puppy to not be a good idea.

---

“No, it’s not a puppy. We already have one animal that the girls barely take care of,” Steve said, “I kind of miss Raphael. He’s good at keeping your lap warm and eats your leftovers when you don’t want to finish your food.”

---

Bucky sighed and rolled so Steve was little spoon for now and so Bucky could rest his head in the crook of Steve's open arm. "I miss the girls," he said and breathed deeply a few times before closing his eyes and quickly falling to sleep.
The next day was just as lazy as the rest of their vacation, which was perfect. But on Friday morning, Steve had his mom drive Becca and Lilly up and they all waited in the kitchen as Steve cooked breakfast. "Buck!" he called from the kitchen. "Get dressed. Breakfast is ready!"

---

Bucky tiredly got up out of bed and yelled back, "I don't want to." But he put his sweats and one of Steve's shirts on anyway. Bucky pulled his hair back in a ponytail and rubbed his face. "What are we doing today, Steve?" he asked and walked to the kitchen. He froze in place when he laid eyes on his sisters. "What's going on? Are you okay?" he asked with big eyes and ran to pull both Lilly and Becca into his arms at once.

---

The girls hugged their brother in return and Lilly patted his back. "I knew you missed them," Steve said. "So I rented a nearby cabin for the next two days so they can come over and have a mini vacation too." Steve didn't want to cut down on their private time or else he would've let them sleep in this cabin.

---

Bucky clung to his sisters and kissed the top of their heads. "Steve, I love you so much," he said and gestured for him to come over and join the hug puddle. "You two are going to have so much fun. We can take a hike or go out on the lake. I'm sure Fred and Mindy would love to meet you. And we can have a fire tonight and eat s'mores. How's that sound?" He nuzzled them once more and then stood up straight. "I'm just so surprised and so happy to have you here. What are we doing first? Let's go do something as a family."

---

"Can we go hiking?" Lilly asked.

Becca groaned. "Wouldn't it be nicer to lay in a boat and relax? I want to finish my book," she said.

Steve rubbed a hand up and down Bucky's back. "I'll let you decide which sister doesn't get what they want," he joked.

---

Bucky sighed but smiled over at Becca. "You're so much like Dad." He thought for a second. "Maybe we can split up. I can take Becca out on the boat and I can do some fishing while she reads and, Steve, you can take Lilly on a hike. I mean, only if that works for everyone. Although, it would be nice to stick together."

---

"We can do both. Hike first and then relax in the lake after. I can even carry Becca in my arms so she can read on the hike. I don't mind," Steve smiled. "Or she could suck it up for a bit and walk."
Becca gave Steve a look and crossed her arms. "Fine. But you're not carrying me." What Becca had meant was Steve wasn't going to be the one to carry her. What ended up happening was the second they hit a hill that they needed to traverse, Becca had Bucky carry her piggyback all the way to the top.

---

Steve laughed as Becca immediately turned to being carried. He abruptly lifted Lilly onto his back and darted up the hill. "Race you!" Steve shouted excitedly to Bucky as he rushed to the top of the hill.

---

"Fucking hell!" Bucky yelped back and started pursuing Steve. "Slow down!" He tried his best but made it to the top two minutes after Steve. Panting, he set Becca down and said, "That - that wasn't a fair race. You got an early start and you had the smaller kid."

---

Steve smiled as Lilly cheered him on. "Excuses," he said. "It's not my fault you decided to be a hippie instead of a big, strong officer."

---

"Excuse you," Bucky said and stood up straight. "I am plenty strong. I lift boxes all day at work!" To prove it, he marched over to Steve and threw his arms around his middle and hoisted him up for a long moment before plopping him back down. "See? Pretty strong for a hippie."

---

Steve let out a big laugh and kissed Bucky's temple once he was set down. "You're right. You are pretty damn strong," he said. "Lilly, can you see the lake from here? We're pretty high up."

---

Lilly looked out through the trees and peered down at the lake. "How deep is the lake, anyway? I sort of want to swim but I also don't want to go in if it's too deep for me to touch."

Bucky slipped his hand with Steve's and leaned against him, still worn out. "It's not too bad close to the cabin. You're a better swimmer than Steve and he went out pretty far."

---

"She can't be a better swimmer than I am," Steve corrected. He kissed Bucky's forehead and then found a walking stick that Lilly could use while they explored. "It's just that there's really scary fish in the lake. And crocodiles."

---

"None of that is true," Bucky assured Lilly. "He just doesn't want to admit that he isn't a good swimmer. Don't worry, Baby, when I teach our kid how to swim I'll help you learn better, too." They walked on and Becca held Bucky's hand as they went so he wouldn't leave her behind. She was definitely not enjoying herself and Bucky kept promising her that they could chill out by the lake when they got back and he would make her something tasty as a snack.
"It totally is true. I don't think you want to swim in that lake. Something’s probably going to jump out and eat you." Steve shrugged casually but Lilly didn't seem convinced. "Let's head back," he said. Becca looked bored out of her mind and he felt bad.

"Sounds good to me," Bucky said as they turned to go back down the hill again. Once they got to the cabin, Becca was tired and grumpy and immediately grabbed her book and went out to the edge of the pier to read. Lilly went to put her swimsuit on and Bucky slumped on the couch with a bit of a headache. "Steve, can I have some medicine?"

"Of course," Steve said. Bucky's problem was always alcohol nowadays. He hadn’t really had issues with pills since he tried to overdose. But Steve understood why Bucky still wanted to ask. Steve got some headache medicine and brought them over. "You alright, Baby? You can lay down and I'll keep an eye on the girls for you."

Bucky took the medicine and sat up. "Lilly is just going to go for a swim but I should be out there to be the lifeguard just in case." He got up off the couch slowly. "I'll put on my swim trunks and just sit out on a chair by the pier and make sure she is fine."

"Are you sure, Handsome? I've got it under control," Steve promised. But there was no stopping Bucky. And it was probably a good thing too because if there was a problem, Bucky was definitely the better swimmer to go out and help Lilly. Steve joined Bucky outside and watched as Lilly dove right into the water the second they left the cabin.

Bucky pulled two chairs closer to the lake for him and Steve and he plopped down in one and waited for Steve to sit so he could take his hand. "Thanks for bringing them up here, Steve. This was a great surprise and they are having fun - despite what Becca might say."

Steve sat down and gave Bucky's hand a gentle squeeze. "I figured you'd start getting too antsy if you spent more than a few days away from them," he said. "And it does them some good to get some fresh air."

"I was getting pretty antsy, you're right," Bucky observed and leaned on Steve's arm. "What the hell am I going to do when they move out?" He watched Lilly swim and kept an eye on Becca at the end of the pier and sighed happily. "I love my family, Steve. The four of us together - this is perfect."

"You're going to be a huge mess when they move out and I'm going to have to keep you distracted all day." Steve brushed his fingers through Bucky's hair. "I can't believe this time last year, I was a lonely bachelor."

"We will have met a year ago in a little less than four months," Bucky said and beamed up at Steve. "What are we doing to celebrate? I mean, the girls finish school in a few weeks and then it's Becca's birthday and then your birthday and then they go back to school and then it'll be a year since we met."

"I can't believe we're several months married and we haven't even known each other for a year yet," Steve laughed. "I'd be sweating if our kid married someone so quickly." Steve thought and suggested, "As celebration, let's camp and get fireworks."

"You're the one who pulled the soul mate card after having known me for roughly a month." Bucky chuckled and gripped the back of Steve's neck to pull him in for a kiss. "But I wouldn't have it any other way." He looked out to his sisters once more and said, "We could camp in the Catskills if you wanted to. Will it just be me and you or the girls as well?"

"Well, I wasn't wrong," Steve added with a sly smile. He trailed a hand up Bucky's thigh. "We could do that. We should do what we did here. Have a few days to ourselves then have my mom and the girls come up."

"I don't know if I'll be able to get that many days away from work again so soon after this trip," Bucky said. He had also been considering taking a few business classes on the side starting in the fall but he hadn't yet talked to Steve about it so he didn't know. "We may only get a long weekend - possibly less if Becca wants to keep her perfect attendance next year too."

Steve considered for a moment and then said, "Then we can bring them. We can just wait for some time they have a sleepover someplace else so we can fuck like animals." He smirked dumbly. "How's that sound?"

"Hell, if you wanted to, we could just have them go to your moms for the weekend and we could just stay home and fuck like animals for two whole days," Bucky suggested. Of course, that would completely cut out the camping but maybe they could do that sometime in the summer while the girls weren't in school.

"Whatever makes you happy, makes me happy," Steve said in an adoring tone. "Look at them," he sighed as he watched the girls go about their business. "They're so amazing."
Bucky squeezed Steve's hand and said, "I'm really happy that you love them like I do, Steve. Nobody else ever wanted them around. People mostly tolerated them until they went to sleep. But you love us as a packaged deal - a family. And I love you."

---

"I can't imagine anyone not loving them," Steve said. "Even though they can be pains in the ass," he added with a little smirk.

---

Bucky chuckled. "Yes, but they are our pains." Lilly stayed out in the water for a little bit longer before she declared that it was too cold for her now. Becca had long since gone back inside to read on the couch and Bucky had almost fallen asleep a few times. "Steve, you said you rented them a cabin for themselves?"

---

Steve nodded. "Yeah, my mom is over there enjoying a nice coffee on the porch, probably. I figured we could have our privacy at night while still having our family close."

---

"That's smart," Bucky agreed. "Do you want to go with the girls to the grocery and then make food at their cabin and then you and I can come back here after dinner and have our privacy." Bucky stood and stretched his body, making sure that Steve wouldn't be able to keep his eyes off of his ass.

---

Steve let out a rumble of approval and gave Bucky's ass a small swat. "Making me work double," he complained. "Sure. I'll do it so long as your fist goes in my ass tonight," he said with a playful wink.

---

Bucky groaned and leaned over to kiss Steve. "Jesus, yes, let's do that please," he said and then took Steve's hand so they could gather some stuff they might need before heading out with the girls to go see Fred and Mindy.

---

After Lilly put on her dry clothes again, they all headed to the store and Mindy gasped when she saw the brood of Rogers-Barnes' come into the shop. "Fred, come look!" She said excitedly. The woman ran up to give Bucky a hug before hugging both Becca and Lilly tightly. "Look at you two!"

---

Becca and Lilly accepted the hug but looked up at Bucky with a confused glance. "Girls, this is Mindy." Bucky offered. "She's known me since I was pretty little and she's seen loads of pictures of you two from when dad would show them to her. I think she's been excited to get to meet you."

---

"If you know her so well does that mean we get free candy here?" Lilly asked quietly.

Mindy laughed at her bluntness and shook her head. "Bucky does. You've got to visit a few times before you earn that perk."
Lilly furrowed her brow, not expecting that as an answer. "Lilly, I'll just buy you some candy, okay? But Fred might give you one free bait worm if you ask nicely enough." Bucky pet her still damp hair and introduced the girls to Fred once he came up. "Steve surprised me by having his mother bring them up for these last days."

"Oh, dear, that was so sweet of you," Mindy said to Steve.

Fred crossed his arms with a smile at the sight of them. "Well, hello, there. My, don't you two have Old George's features."

Fred leaned down to shake each of the girls' hands and nodded once. Bucky stood behind them and said, "Yeah, I think Becca looks more like our mom than our dad. But Lilly definitely has his eyes." Bucky beamed at his sisters and willed himself not to get emotional. "We just came to say 'hello' and get some supplies for dinner."

Steve put a hand on Bucky's back and kissed his temple to give him his support. Fred pretended he didn't see that and nodded. "I'm glad you did. It's nice to see you all together," he said with a smile. "Come on, let me help you get your supplies."

Bucky and Lilly started going around the store with Fred and picking out various things for dinner. Becca held back and turned to Steve. "Hey," she started carefully, "Do they know about you and Bucky? You know, being together and stuff?"

Steve nodded to her. "Mindy accidentally found out and now pretty much everyone around knows," he said. "Most of them are nice or don't care. Only this guy named Lloyd was rude about it."

"What did this guy Lloyd do?" Becca asked and glanced over at Bucky to check that he wasn't hurt or limping and she just didn't notice. After both Steve and Bucky being hospitalized recently, she had decided to prepare for the worst reactions from people.

Steve squeezed her shoulder. "Just voiced his disapproval before his wife carted him off for not being nice," he said. "You don't have to worry around here, Becs. These people won't hurt us."

Becca held Steve's gaze for a moment and then nodded solemnly, "Alright, I just don't want either of you getting hurt again is all." She looked away again, pretending that she didn't actually care too much and said, "For one, we can't afford the medical bills."
"Yeah, I know. And who else will cook your meals if someone breaks my hands? And who would pay for your field trips if Bucky can't go to work?" Steve nudged her playfully. "We are staying out of the hospital for a long time. I promise."

---

Becca tossed her hair back over her shoulder and declared proudly, "Well, you know, it's just a year and a month until I can get a job of my own. I'm going to apply at the bookshops and the animal shelter."

---

"That's a great idea. Just do your best to try and not spend your whole paycheck at your job. And don't bring home a bunch of stray pets," Steve teased.

---

"I won't spend my whole paycheck at my job," Becca assured but then quietly added, "I make no promises about animals." Bucky and Lilly went to pay for their supplies and Becca watched as Mindy slipped some free candy to Lilly while Bucky wasn't paying any attention.

---

Steve smirked. "If you're going to sneak in an animal, make sure it's cute as all hell," he warned. He ruffled up her hair and helped Bucky carry the supplies out. Lilly wore a big grin cause she got what she wanted. "That went well."

---

"I think they both really liked meeting the girls finally," Bucky said. "They only ever heard about them and saw pictures. They met my mother once when she came to pick us up because our car wouldn't start. But other than that it was only me and my dad all the time."

---

Steve smiled and held Bucky's hand because they didn't have to fear anything up here. "I guess they'll be seeing them some more over the years. Becca would really enjoy reading-" he paused and asked Bucky, "Did you tell her about the book Fred found, yet?"

---

"Oh shit, no," Bucky said. "I need to, though. I'll give it to her tomorrow morning." He smiled and squeezed Steve's hand. "She'll get better use of it than I will. And Dad would have liked it to be read by somebody and I don't think I'd find the time. I'll just make sure she knows to be careful with it."

---

Becca - who had been eavesdropping - got that curious look on her face that demanded an answer. "What book did he find?" she asked. She had a feeling it was their dad's book but she didn't want to look too excited about it.

---

Bucky looked to Steve and asked, "I don't know the way to their cabin but they can take me there if you don't mind getting the book from ours? I'll just give it to Becca tonight. We will get started on dinner while you are gone."

"You got it. I'll be right back." Steve stole a kiss from Bucky and then ran off. He wrapped the book carefully in a pillowcase because he didn't want it to get scratched or dirty. When he got to the girls' cabin, they already were prepping the food and Sarah was busy making cake for later.

"Hey, Baby," Bucky said and wrapped his arms around Steve when he came in. "Thank you so much for grabbing this for me. I'll be back. I'm going to give this to Becs real fast before dinner. It should be done soon and your mom has been supervising Lilly."

Steve nodded and took over in the kitchen. His mom was happy for the brief break from the city and it was nice to be in such a lively house anyway. "How's chopping going, Lil? Got the vegetables ready?"

Lilly gave a salute to Steve and mumbled something about not wanting to break her concentration and Bucky pulled Becca aside. "Mindy and Fred found this old book of dad's," he said and unwrapped it to give it to Becca. "It was a gift from one of his war buddies and he's got writing all over the place in it. It looks like he didn't get to finish it because there is a bookmark about half way through and the writing stops."

Becca gasped when she saw the book and she took it gingerly from Bucky's hands. She was able to hold it together until she got to the bookmark and felt the weight of the fact that it never got finished. She started to tear up and then hid her face in Bucky's chest.

"Oh, hey, hey," Bucky said and held her close. "It's okay, Becca." He looked up across the room at Steve who had heard the gasp and turned to see how it was going. "I know. I thought about it too. But I think Dad would love for you to have it and finish it. Maybe you can write notes in the other half and then go tell him how it ends. I'm sure he'd like to know. And I'm sure he'd love to hear it from you."

"Alright," Becca said quietly and wiped at the tears on her face. "I'm going to go to my room for a bit," she mumbled.

"You want me to get you for dinner?" Bucky asked as she got up. She shook her head as she clutched the book and walked away. Bucky sighed and smiled weakly over at Steve. He went to help set the table and said, "Maybe I should've waited."
"She would've gotten emotional no matter what. Now she has more time to spend with the book," Steve said gently. He kissed Bucky's cheek and went about cooking dinner. They had a great family sit-down and after dinner was done and eaten, Steve started to wash up. "You want to have alone time with the girls?" Steve asked.

---

"Well, Becca went straight back to her room to read and Lilly seems to have found a puzzle in the game room," Bucky said and cuddled up to Steve. "I think I'll just help you finish cleaning up and then the two of us can say 'goodnight' and head back to our cabin."

---

Sarah came over and gave them both a hug. "You boys go enjoy yourselves. I'll take care of the cleaning." She shooed them off with a fond smile. "Be safe walking back," she reminded.

---

Bucky tried to protest slightly but was ushered out the door. They walked back as the sun was setting and saw some wildlife headed back to their hideouts and nests for the night. "What are we doing tonight, Baby? After we try fisting you, of course."

---

"I don't know. What can we do after that? Will I even be able to move?" Steve joked, nudging Bucky's side. "Maybe you can pamper me and give me a massage after. And then list all the reasons why you love me."

---

"I can do that." Bucky smiled. "How about I give you massage then I can list my love for you while you do that slow gentle deep making love to me like I did for you the other night. I know that's your favorite. And I owe you for bringing the girls to me."

---

Steve grinned. "I like that idea more," he said. "You know exactly how to make me happy, Buck." They got back to their cabin and Steve couldn't help but pin Bucky to the door once inside and kiss him senseless.

---

Bucky was startled when he was pushed against the door but he quickly got on board and licked into Steve's mouth. He held his hands on Steve's ass and pulled him in close so he could rut up against him in a slow but purposeful rhythm. "God, you're so incredible, Steve, Baby."

---

Sometimes Steve was simply overwhelmed with how much he loved and wanted his husband. He moaned low as Bucky grinded up against him and he started to slowly take off Bucky's shirt. He kissed down his neck and began to tease one of his nipples with his tongue.

---

Bucky held on to Steve tighter and moved their hips together. "Where are we doing this? Couch, bed, floor, where?” He was eager to get his mouth and hands all over Steve's naked body. He loved every inch of Steve and wanted to show his appreciation for his body every day.

"Bed," Steve decided after sucking a nice, dark mark on his chest. "I want to have as much room as possible." The floor seems uncomfortable and the couch was too cramped. "Come on," he said with an excited smile as he tugged Bucky down the hall.

Bucky eagerly followed after him and started undoing the button and zipper of his pants so he could kick them off as fast as he could. "You're the love of my life, you know that?” he said and slipped his hands over Steve's hips when they got to the room.

Steve laughed as he saw Bucky undressed already. He decided to sit on the edge of the bed with his legs open wide as he took off his own clothes. "I kind of guessed that by now,” he teased. "The whole marriage thing gave it away."

"Well, I just thought I'd remind you in case you forgot," Bucky said and helped throw Steve's clothes over to the other side of the room. He grabbed for the lube and ignored his hard cock reaching out for Steve. First, he needed to pleasure Steve and then when Steve was inside him, he could give his own dick some attention.

Steve laid back with his limbs sprawled out on the bed. He looked up at Bucky with a wide smile. "Could look at that handsome face all day. I could suck that dick of yours all day, too."

Bucky groaned low in his throat and poured some lube out on his fingers and started to warm it up. "Don't tell me that. I'll never want to go to work ever again," he said and leaned over Steve and started gently teasing a finger around his hole. "Steve, if you need me to stop at any point or decide you don't want to do this just tell me and we are done right then, okay?"

Steve wiggled impatiently as Bucky teased his hole. He reached up to stroke Bucky's arm and he smiled. "I know you'll stop if I ask, Baby. You're good to me like that." Steve dragged him down for a kiss. "Don't know if your fist will ever be as good as your cock."

"I really like being fisted but if you hate it, just say so. It isn't for everyone." Bucky kissed Steve again as he pushed his first finger inside and massaged it in and out. "Are you tighter than usual? You feel tighter," Bucky said worriedly. He was just so nervous doing this to Steve for the first time. He didn't want to hurt him and he didn't want Steve to look back on the experience and regret it all or push himself too far for Bucky's sake.
"What? Tighter?" Steve pouted. "I don't feel tighter," he said. "You sure your finger didn't get fatter?" he joked, smirking at him. "You have been eating a lot of my cooking lately." Steve tugged a strand of Bucky's hair lightly.

---

"Oh my god, maybe," Bucky said and pulled out of Steve to look over his hands. They didn't look any bigger. He looked down at his stomach. He hadn't gained any weight around his middle. He was still fairly muscular even though he really couldn't compete with Steve. "I don't think I gained any weight."

---

"Hey, put that back," Steve complained lightly when Bucky pulled his finger out. He reached down to touch himself to try and entice Bucky to put his hands on him again. "I didn't notice if you did. Was just messing with you, that's all."

---

Bucky smirked at Steve and stuck two fingers back inside him. "You shouldn't mess with a man who is currently in command of your ass," he said and pumped his finger in and out quickly. He bent down to kiss Steve and suck a hickey on his neck. "I want you to tell me each time you want a new finger, okay?"

---

"Please, you have command of my everything," Steve said with a charming smile. He pulled him in for a slow kiss and then hummed happily when he felt Bucky suck a mark onto his neck. After a little while, he gave Bucky the go-ahead for a third finger. He'd managed this before, so it wasn't too overwhelming.

---

Bucky dutifully pumped three fingers in and out of Steve and made sure to move them around as much as possible. He kissed everywhere he could easily access on Steve and marveled in appreciation at his husband’s scent and his body and the movements he made underneath him.

---

Steve moaned and arched his back off of the bed when Bucky opened him up. "How long did it take you to work up to a fist?" Steve asked. "What even made you want to take one in your ass?"

---

"You really want to hear that story right now, Baby?" Bucky asked and licked down Steve's neck. It wasn't really the type of story to tell during sex - more a post-orgasm falling asleep story. It had several elements that Steve wasn't quite fond of to hear about like Bucky's past partners and dildos.

---

"Sure, why not?" Steve asked. "Can't exactly have a romantic moment when you're trying to go wrist deep on my ass," he said bluntly. "I think I'm ready for another finger."

---
Bucky kept up with the three fingers while he said, "Alright, well," he cleared his throat and stared at his fingers going in and out of Steve. "Had a, uh, I guess you could call him a boyfriend. He bought me a pretty big butt plug and I couldn't get it in. So he had to help me out every time he wanted me to use it." He finished his story by gently pushing his fourth finger in beside his others.

---

Steve let out a groan. "No, never mind. I don't want to know," he complained childishly. He winced when Bucky added a fourth finger and he shifted uncomfortably on the bed. "Slower," he breathed out. "Why did you want a plug?"

---

Bucky barely moved his fingers and just lightly bent them at the knuckles over and over again so Steve could feel something. He whispered, "We can stop if you want to. Don't forget that." Bucky took his other hand and rubbed circles on Steve's stomach. "At that point, I hadn't actually used a plug yet but he wanted me to so I gave it a shot. I only had a pretty small dildo back then."

---

Steve didn't want to give in too quickly but, god, he didn't realize how much of a stretch he would feel with this. "Try it a little longer," Steve murmured. He put his hand on top of the one Bucky had on his stomach. "Did it feel good?"

---

"It was alright. I still preferred a fist or a dildo to a plug but it wasn't bad," Bucky said and massaged inside of Steve, stroking his thumb over the outside of his hole. Steve was still really tight and Bucky knew there was no way he was going to get his thumb inside him tonight. He would just go until Steve asked him to stop and then he would let Steve take over.

---

Steve breathed out through his nose and then let out a defeated sound when he had to give in because it really was too much. He pouted as he patted Bucky's arm. "I don't think it's happening tonight," Steve murmured. "I'm sorry, Buck."

---

Bucky pulled out gently and kissed Steve's stomach up to his neck. "Don't apologize, Baby. You've got nothing to be sorry for. You gave it a try." He kissed Steve on the lips and reached for a tissue to wipe off his lube covered hand.

---

Steve sat up and winced once. He felt a bit empty but also more sore than usual. He sighed and pressed his lips to Bucky's temple. "Thank you for trying," he murmured softly. "You still want to make love?"

---

"Only if you do, Baby," Bucky answered and wrapped his arms securely around Steve. "But if you just want to go to sleep, I understand. I don't mind either way." He kissed along Steve's jaw and then pulled back to smile at him. Sometimes Bucky forgot just how lucky he was to have Steve and then it would all hit him at once again.
"We got this whole house to ourselves. We can sleep another night." Steve abruptly pulled Bucky down and rolled him over so their positions were swapped. He kissed him deeply and smiled. "I guess I'm going to have to reconsider my no-toys ban if I'm going to have you fist me one day."

"Steven Grant, don't tease me with that if you're going to take it away later," Bucky said but quickly grabbed the lube and shoved it into Steve's hand. He was impatient to get Steve's cock inside him. He wanted Steve holding him as he carefully rocked in and out of his hole and muttered loving phrases in his ear that made Bucky's soul unravel.

"I'm not teasing," Steve protested with his usual pout. "I'm not saying yes, but I'm saying I'll reconsider." He took the lube and coated his fingers with it before rubbing gently around Bucky's hole. He kissed him slowly and added, "It would make me happier to give you what you want than to have you keep from doing something you enjoy for my sake."

"We can discuss that later," Bucky breathed as Steve pushed in the first finger. "Right now, I want you so bad it hurts and I know you feel the same." He reached a hand down to his hole and guided another one of Steve's fingers to be ready to push in. "Come on, Baby, make love to me. Show me how perfect we are for each other. Tell me how much you love me."

Steve had three fingers inside of his husband in no time. He nibbled affectionately at his ear and smiled. "I'm going to make you feel so loved, Baby. I'll go nice and easy on you until we both are aching for it and we will come together."

"That's perfect. That's exactly what we need," Bucky said and massaged Steve's upper arms. "I don't want to go back to Brooklyn so soon, Baby. Can't we stay here like this for another week? Naked and in bed with hands all over each other?"

Steve pulled out his fingers and kissed down Bucky's neck before he eased his dick inside of him. He let out a low moan and started to slowly thrust. "We have to go back, but we can still be sweet on each other all the time. And we can come back here in the summer."

Bucky gasped sharply and looked down where Steve was connected to him. His sucked in his lower lip and then let it go. "I just want to be attached to you like this at all times. This is such a good feeling. Surrounded and filled up with you." Bucky sighed and closed his eyes. "I just love you so much. And this trip ended up being better than expected even though it was rocky at times." Bucky reached up to rake his fingers through Steve's hair. "And I'm sorry again for getting drunk at the cook-out and being inappropriate in front of Jesse and just causing a mess in general." Bucky rambled. Now wasn't really the time, but he still felt terrible about letting himself be controlled by alcohol so easily and he felt so safe when they were making love, like no matter what he said, Steve would forgive him.

---

''Shh, shh,'' Steve said softly. He held the sides of Bucky's face and looked him in the eyes lovingly as he continued to move inside of him. ''You have nothing to be sorry for, Beautiful. I love you.'' He kissed him slowly, reaching a hand between them to stroke Bucky's dick.

---

Bucky couldn't help the prickle of tears on the rims of his eyes. ''I'll get better,'' he promised and held Steve tight. ''I'll get better for you and for the girls and for our baby. I have to. I just need help.'' He kissed Steve on the lips and put their foreheads together. ''I'll get better for you.''

---

''I love you as you are,'' Steve insisted. Of course, he wanted Bucky to recover, but he didn't want the man to doubt for even a second how much his husband loved him. ''Give me another kiss,'' Steve breathed out.

---

''Okay,'' Bucky agreed and gripped the back of Steve's neck so he could lick into his mouth. They spent several minutes languidly making out as Steve eased his dick in and out of Bucky and lazily jerked him off as he went. As much as Bucky loved the harsher rough sex that they did sometimes, he had to admit that he adored the intimacy of their slow sex as well.

---

Steve panted softly and moaned Bucky's name against his lips. He could feel himself getting close to release, so he put a hand on Bucky's hip to find the angle that he knew he loved. ''Close your eyes, Handsome. And let me do all the work. It's going to be so good, Baby.''

---

Bucky nodded and shut his eyes and let his body go loose and pliable for Steve. He kept quiet except for his increased excited breathing and the occasional little groan that would pass his lips. With his eyes closed and his body limp like this, Bucky could pretend he was floating and nothing bad could ever touch him again.

---

Steve alternated between kissing and nipping lightly at Bucky's neck as he brought them close to orgasm. His breathing hitched as he felt himself nearly come a few times but finally, just as he saw Bucky's expression change, Steve felt himself shooting thick spurts of come into Bucky's ass.

---

Bucky came with a little yelp of Steve's name and his ass clenched down around Steve's dick. ''Don't pull out,'' he said quickly and pulled Steve down on top of him. ''Just lay here with me for a bit. Okay, Baby?'' He pet his hands down Steve's back and whispered. ''You don't know how much it means to me that I actually found a guy who loved me enough to stay and be with me instead of getting up and leaving the second he was done coming.''

---
Steve wasn't going to complain about getting to keep his dick in Bucky's ass. He laid his chin on Bucky's chest and looked up at him with a loving smile. "You deserve everything I can give you and then some, Buck," Steve said softly. "Never in your life did you deserve to be treated like just another fuck. No matter how much of a mess you were."

---

"I love you," Bucky barely whispered and, for some reason, it felt like the first time. Maybe it was because they were on their honeymoon and he was so enraptured with Steve, but every time they had sex, Bucky got just a little bit more needy for Steve and just a little bit more dependent on his presence to hold him until he fell asleep.

---

Steve reached up to pet his fingers through Bucky's hair. "I love you too, Bucky Barnes." Steve leaned up to kiss him lightly. "Let's fall sleep, Love. I feel perfect like this with you and want to go to sleep like this."

---

"Rogers-Barnes," Bucky muttered lightly and closed his eyes. He grabbed for the blanket and tossed it over the two of them and quickly fell asleep with Steve's warm weight on top of him holding him together and keeping him safe.
Steve was reluctant to leave but all good things came to an end. They loaded up the wood and the rest of their things and drove back to Brooklyn. They had a night to recover and both Bucky and Steve left that next morning for work. At the end of his shift, Steve arrested some guy for being belligerently drunk in public and put him in a cell for processing when he saw two familiar faces. "What- Bucky?!!"

---

Bucky was leaning against the wall with his cheek pressed up against the cold bricks. Clint was lying on his back on the bench with his feet in Bucky's lap. The second they saw Steve, Clint sat up and Bucky jumped over to the bars of the cell and reached for him. "Steve, Baby, oh my god, we have been here for hours!"

---

"What the hell are you guys doing in here? It wasn't-" Steve got a nervous look, obviously scared that Bucky or Clint had been caught with some sort of drugs or maybe Bucky had been abusing alcohol and got in a fight. "What's going on?"

---

Bucky clutched to Steve's sleeve through the bars as Clint came over. Bucky sighed and said, "Some punk ass young cop that I don't know sees us at the shop, says we match the description of two burglars who've been going around all of Brooklyn lately. He arrested us. Somehow didn't smell the pot on Reggie so we got to leave the shop to him but we were brought in about four hours ago now."

---

"You're kidding," Steve said in a low tone. He couldn't believe that some cop would make a mistake like that. Steve huffed and unlocked the door and motioned for the two to come out. Just then, the young cop came running over. "Hey, the hell are you doing with my guys?"

---

Bucky was harshly shoved back into the cell by the other cop, making him stumble into Clint. "Listen, man!" Bucky grunted. "We aren't your guys! We've never stolen anything a day in our lives." He pointed a finger at Steve, "Ask him!"

---

Steve shoved the other cop back, which made a few of the prisoners in the cells next to them look on with interest. "The hell's gotten into you, Rogers?" The younger cop snapped. Steve squared his jaw. "You've got the wrong men."

The man snorted. "Let a judge decide that."

---

"Come on, man!" Clint said with a huff. He pointed to Bucky and added quietly, "You know who this is?"
Bucky rapidly signed to Clint to just let Steve handle it and the cop said, "See, Rogers? They've got their own encoded gestures like in baseball. Who knows what he just said."

A big burly man in the cell across from them piped up with, “Even I know what he just said!”

Steve went to the officer’s desk to find the file on the robbers and he rolled his eyes before coming back with it. "The culprits hit up a store last week. Bucky was at Seneca Lake, miles away from Brooklyn. Case closed."

"And just how the fuck do you know where this scum was last week, huh?" The guy snarked back and shot Bucky a short glare. Clint, at this point, had taken to standing still as possible with his arms crossed. He was highly offended and Bucky could tell.

Steve could handle a rookie mistake but he couldn't handle this level of arrogance. "Because for half the week I was balls deep in his ass and the other half he was balls deep in mine, Richard. Bucky's my husband and we were on our honeymoon. Everyone else in the precinct is well aware of that."

Clint dropped his arms to his sides in surprise and Bucky looked from Steve to Richard a few times before splitting a wide grin and holding in a laugh that threatened to bubble to the surface. Clint clapped his hand on Bucky's back and did the laughing for him as he looked on at Richard's shocked and confused expression, "Oh boy, he told you what's up, Dick."

It wasn't often that Steve talked about sex with Bucky to others, but he wasn't in the mood to deal with this guy right now. He opened up the door wider so Bucky and Clint could come out. "Now process the drunk I brought in so I can get these guys back where they belong."

Bucky flung his arms around Steve for a quick hug before slipping his hand in with his to walk out proudly back into the main hall, leaving Richard behind. Clint stretched out once they were away from the cells as if he had just gotten released from a maximum-security lock up. Bucky frowned at Steve and said, "That short little fucker tazed me. Look." He lifted his shirt to reveal the small purple bruises from where the prongs cut into his skin.

When Bucky showed the mark on his skin, Steve felt so much rage at the new officer. "What made him do that? Were you resisting arrest?" he asked with a frown. "Or being disobedient?"

"I didn't put up a fight or anything like that," Bucky said. "I may have been a little rude and descriptive with my vocabulary but he was arresting us under no grounds expect we look like what two other guys in Brooklyn might look like. Which, if you haven't noticed, there are a lot of long-haired hippies in this neighborhood."

---

"I'm going to have a long talk with him," Steve said. He didn't want to file an official report unless the other officer was being truly deviant. "I'm so sorry this happened to you two. Let me buy you dinner to make up for it."

---

Clint shook his head and said, "Before any of this happened I had plans with my mom for dinner. You just take Bucky home and get balls deep in his ass again." Clint started cracking up again as he took his belongings back from holding and left the precinct.

Bucky smoothed Steve's uniform, "Are you allowed to leave now? I wouldn't mind you getting me dinner. And also promising that the girls never hear about this."

---

Steve turned his attention to Bucky and smiled. "I was almost going to clock out anyway. And why can't the girls know? You getting mistaken for a con artist is a funny story."

---

"No, not a funny story," Bucky said and followed Steve as he went to gather his things. "It's not funny to be arrested at work in front of a bunch of customers and then tazed and then left in a cell for four hours. It's painful." Bucky showed him the mark again. "That shit hurts, Steve," he whined and added, "I think you have cause to be angry just for the fact that some other man put me in handcuffs."

---

Steve supposed it really wasn't funny when Bucky put it like that. He rubbed a hand along his back and sighed. "I'm sorry, Baby. I'll make sure Richard knows that his behavior won't be tolerated, even if he had been apprehending a criminal." He touched Bucky's wrist lightly. "Are you trying to get me to use my handcuffs again?"

---

"I might be," Bucky smirked. "You've got to give me credit for trying at least." He adjusted Steve's collar and gave him a quick kiss since no one was looking. "Are you ready to go home, now? I really want to curl up on the couch with you and take a nap until the girls get home."

---

"You mean you don't want me to take you out to dinner? I guess you really are an inexpensive date," Steve said with a fond smile. He looked even happier when Bucky kissed him. "Either way, curling up and snuggling with you sounds perfect."

---

"I mean, I'm not opposed to you buying me dinner if you wanted to," Bucky said. "Thought you may have just said that as an offer for Clint. But dinner with you and then snuggling later sounds good too. The girls can be left to their own devices for a while."

"We can get dinner to go. Less time cooking means more time snuggling. Where do you want to grab food?" Steve asked, slinging an arm around his shoulders.

"Oh, I don't know. I kind of want fettuccine, don't you?" Bucky asked as they headed to the door to leave the precinct. "We don't really go out on dinner dates much. Maybe we should eat at the place and then come home. Have some quiet time?"

"Sounds like a plan. I know a good Italian restaurant nearby," Steve said. He leaned over to kiss Bucky before they got out of the precinct then gave him a little distance after that.

Bucky followed after Steve and grumpily ran his hands through his greasy hair. He hadn't had time to wash it for about two days and he felt even grosser since being inside the jail cell for several hours. "Do I smell like a felon?"

"No, you just smell like the common criminal," Steve sassed back. "And a little bit like urine. I don't think the men I put in there care to use the toilet we've so graciously provided."

"Well, what's better than pissing on the walls of a jail cell?" Bucky said, "It's really pretty liberating." They got into the restaurant and ordered their food to take out instead of eating in and waited in the atrium for it to be ready. "What are we doing tonight, huh?"

"We do whatever you want, Handsome," Steve said. "You're the one who got tazed. I think you get to call the shots for the rest of today." Steve winked at him playfully.

"That sounds fair to me," Bucky said and scratched at his beard. "You know what? I'm going to shave my beard tonight. I think that's what made me look like a burglar. I mean, Clint already has that look, but me?" He gestured down at himself. "Wouldn't have happened when I didn't have a beard."

"But I love your beard," Steve whined. "It's nice to rub my face against." He spoke quietly enough so others couldn't overhear. "I can't stop you, but you really should keep it. It's quite nice."

"You sure?" Bucky asked and rubbed at it again. "Don't you get beard burn when I eat your ass?" He could've been a little quieter but no one was around and he just didn't give a fuck one way or the other today. He had already been arrested and tazed. He could handle it if someone had something to say.

---

"That's the best part," Steve said with a smirk. He paid for their dinners and took the bag of food. Steve held the door open for Bucky on their way out and asked, "Should I grow a beard?"

---

"Will the force let you have a beard?" Bucky asked and took the food bag from Steve to quickly double check that everything was there. There was something about some restaurants in their neighborhood always forgetting to put part of the order in. Everything was good and he walked on towards their apartment with Steve.

---

"They allow certain styles. Not all," Steve said. "I just haven't bothered because I like having a smooth face and I hate the itchy in-between beard." He shrugged. "But if you think it would look nice..."

---

"Steve, literally everything looks nice on you. You could shave your head and still probably look really hot," Bucky said but quickly added, "But please don't! I love your hair. But I would like to see you with a beard. Maybe get my own beard burn."

---

---

"I'll make you wear a wig," Bucky protested and kicked his shoes off once he got inside their apartment. "Speaking of, does balding run in your family? Because it doesn't in mine. Most Barnes men were still growing hair in the grave."

---

"I don't know. My dad died young and my grandfather doesn't send pictures. I guess you're going to have to find out in a few years," Steve said. "You going to leave me if I lose all my hair, huh?"

---

"No, I wouldn't leave you," Bucky said and set their dinner out on the table. "I will buy you some nice hats. How's that?" he asked and pulled Steve's chair out for him. "We have about an hour before Becca's study session is over and the girls get back home. I say we eat and then lay down in the peace in and quiet until they get back."

---

Steve kissed Bucky's cheek and sat down in the chair so he could eat dinner "Sounds like a plan, Beautiful. That's just enough time to list about a thousandth of the reasons why I love you."
"I'm not opposed to that." Bucky grinned and then thought, "Hey, Steve, I had an idea for a fun night out just the two of us for sometime soon. But if you don't like it or don't think it's smart then we won't do it. I'll drop it and forget about it entirely."

---

"Oh yeah? What's that? It better not be a dinner date with Phillip to ask if he's interested in a threesome," Steve teased. He took a deep drink from his soda but he was actually a little worried that’s what Bucky would ask.

---

Bucky grinned, "Aw, that's the first time you've called him by his name." He squeezed Steve's hand and said, "I kind of wanted to go to clubbing with you. Just one night to go dance with you. We can go to the gay club on queer row down in Park Slope. I just think it'd be nice to have a night out where we don't have to be surrounded by people who expect us to be straight. And I promise I won't drink. That's not why I want to go."

---

Steve brushed his fingers through his hair and considered for a moment before nodding his head. "I can't guarantee I can do club type dancing. But I'll give it a try if you really won't drink that night."

---

"I swear, Steve, water on tap is all I will have," Bucky said and punctuated his words with a tiny push on Steve's arm. "Don't you think it'll be fun? Getting to be out in more ways than one? Dancing with me, meeting other gay people. You love meeting gay people, right? You like Veronica and Laura."

---

Steve nodded his head. "No, I agree. I think it's a really great idea. I just... I'm probably going to have to get used to the atmosphere is all. But I'm sure I'll adjust quickly."

---

"I mean, we seriously don't have to go if you don't want to," Bucky said and sat back in his seat. "I just haven't gone clubbing while in a relationship and I think it'd make the experience different, you know? It was always a way to get the hottest guy to look at me and take me home. But with you there, I come with the hottest guy and already know he's going home with me."

---

"I want to go," Steve said. "I want to have a fun night out with you and... Well, I guess I also want to go so I can let whoever runs the place know that they've got a cop on their side and that there's a shelter coming soon, you know?"

---

Bucky smiled and leaned over to kiss his husband. "Mhmm," he hummed and nuzzled his cheek with his nose. "That'll be good for them to know. I mean Park Slope is only about thirty minutes from where the church is if you take the right train so they'll be able to get to the shelter easily once it's up."
Steve stroked a hand over Bucky's back and kissed him lazily a few times. "This is all possible cause of you," Steve said. "Thank you for supporting me, Baby."

"Of course, my handsome husband," Bucky said and got up from the table to sit in Steve's lap. "It's a perfect idea and you are so passionate about it and I love it and love you and I think it'll do a lot of good." He crowded Steve and started to kiss at his neck and jaw.

Steve laughed and slid a hand into Bucky's shirt. "Keep that up and I won't be able to finish my dinner. You're too much of a distraction," he said adoringly

Bucky turned slightly and spun a fork full of Steve's pasta before bringing it to his lips so Steve could eat. "But I want to be here. This is my favorite place to sit. You'll just have to let me help you finish."

Steve leaned forward and took a bite off the fork. "You won't hear me complaining. I love you in my lap, pampering me." He scratched his nails gently over Bucky's back.

"We're kind of disgustingly cute, aren't we?" Bucky asked and gave Steve some more pasta. "It's a good thing the girls aren't here because we would be hearing lots of grumping. Lilly used to scream every time our parents would kiss each other. She got over it, but it was quite a screech."

Steve let out a laugh. "I hope our kid appreciates what an amazing relationship we have together," he said. "I would want them to have someone who treats them the way you treat me."

Bucky set the fork down and kissed Steve. He hoped their kid ended up with the best traits of both of them and finds someone just as perfect as they are going to be. "You done eating? Because I kind of want to jump your bones."

"What happened to cuddling?" Steve laughed. "Not like I'm complaining." He stood up and picked Bucky up with him as he walked to their bedroom.

"We cuddle all night while we are asleep," Bucky reasoned. He pulled out some candles from the closet that he had found stuffed away in the laundry room and started to light them and put them on the dresser so they could have a soft glow around them. "Turn out the light."
Steve's face lit up when he saw Bucky candles. He bit his bottom lip excitedly as he turned out the lights and laid on the bed. "This is new."

---

Once the candles were lit, Bucky went to Steve and trailed his hands down his legs. "You want to know a secret?" he asked and moved to straddle Steve on the bed as he massaged his sides and abs. "I'm not wearing underwear."

---

Steve looked at Bucky with eyes dark from arousal. "My poor husband was stuck all day in a cell with no underwear on? It's a miracle no one else put their hands on you." He reached down to grab at Bucky's ass. "Did Clint fight off all the fellas?"

---

"I think I caught some of them staring at my ass a few times," Bucky answered and slipped his hands into the waistband of Steve's pants. "Also, people could see the outline of my cock all day and I didn't notice until Clint said something when we were in close quarters. A couple more hours in there and you might have had to bargain with some crooks to get me back."

---

Steve let out a little grumble. "My wonderful husband being a tease for any man with taste? How terrible," he scolded lightly, not meaning a word of it. "You're lucky I love you." He slid Bucky's pants down slowly and licked his lips when there was nothing underneath. "Mine."

---

Bucky's heart skipped a beat and his chest felt tight. "I love when you do that," he said. Being claimed so simply by Steve was such a turn on for him and it always went straight to his dick. He started grinding his ass back and forth against Steve's crotch, feeling his hardened cock pushing up against him.

---

"Oh yeah?" Steve was in a bit of a possessive mood. He nibbled at Bucky's ear and moaned low when Bucky grinded against him. He dug his fingers into Bucky's ass a bit harder before giving it a little slap. "You like knowing your fine ass belongs to me?" He grabbed Bucky around his middle and pinned him to the bed. "Do you want me to remind you that your dick is mine too?"

---

Bucky panted in excitement and his eyes were wide with arousal. Steve had his hands held up above his head and Bucky's pants were down over his ass in the back but still covering most of his cock in the front. A flash of an idea went through his mind, "Prove it," Bucky sneered at Steve.

---

Steve could tell Bucky was really enjoying this. He looked his husband over once before letting go. "Keep your hands above your head," he ordered. Steve got up and went to the closet. He had to dig around a bit before he found Phillip and he brought him over. "Tell me why you haven't used this."
Bucky eyed Steve as he rummaged in the closet and his eyebrows shot up when he brought the dildo over. He kept his hands above his hand as asked but moved his hips around a little on the mattress. "You mean why I haven't used him since I've been with you?"

---

"Yeah," Steve answered, gently touching his hands over Bucky's sides before teasing his nipple. "Tell me what stopped you from using him whenever you felt like it."

---

Bucky gasped a little. "Well, because I love you and you told me not to. And I'll do anything you say. I didn't want to upset you, ever. Because you were clear as to why you didn't like the idea of me using it. It would have been a breach of respect and trust for me to use it anyway."

---

Steve smiled over at Bucky and nodded his head. "Yes, and I love you so much for respecting that," Steve said. "But here's the thing..." he turned the dildo over in his hands a few times. "Kind of proves that your ass is mine. Cause I've controlled what's allowed to go inside it."

---

Bucky's breathing was shallow and frequent and needy. He hadn't moved his hands but he really wanted to get his pants off and for something to touch his dick - whether that was his hand or Steve's, he didn't care. He just wanted to be touched. His eyes were glued to the dildo and he patiently took in Steve's words. Steve did have a point. He did have control of his ass for several long months now and Bucky was always obedient about what he was asked to do or not do with himself sexually. "Steve..." Bucky choked out and his lip quivered in desperation.

---

Steve set the dildo down on Bucky's stomach and slowly removed all of their clothes, taking his time. As much as he wanted to give Bucky what he wanted, he wanted to draw this out just a little to show he was in control. "Do you want to use this today, Baby? Do you think I should let you have this in your ass again?"

---

Bucky's mouth felt dry and he couldn't help the whine coming from deep inside of him. He wanted to say 'yes', that he definitely thought Steve should let him have Phillip again. But he wanted to choose his words as carefully as possible so as not to upset the hot and sensual balance that Steve had set up so far. "I think that you make the decisions and whatever you think is best is what we will do."

---

Steve cupped Bucky's face and drew him into a slow kiss after he spoke. "Oh, Sweetheart," Steve said gently. "If you want something, don't be a people pleaser. You should have told me outright what you wanted me to do." He put Phillip back in his container and set it on the nightstand. He got some lube while he was there and spread it on his fingers. "Every last inch of you is mine, Baby." He started to tease Bucky's hole. "But never forget that you'll always have whatever you want with me. All you got to do is tell me."
Bucky flitted his eyes across Steve's face and landed on his lips. He honestly didn't mind letting Steve be in control of his body like this. It was really sexy to him and it hit some sort of kink inside him. Also, the idea of not being able to have something he wanted unless he begs for it and is given permission was just too much for him and he was almost delirious with arousal. "What do I get tonight?"

---

Steve eased a finger inside Bucky effortlessly and was quick to add a second. "You're going to get what I feel like giving you," he answered, purposely being vague. He leaned down to suck on one of Bucky's nipples while he worked his ass open. "And then you're going to put your pants on without any underwear - and without cleaning up. You're going to find a new toy at the adult shop you think I will like. And if I like it, we'll shower together before I make us all dinner. Then we will use it later. Got it?"

---

"Uh-huh," Bucky's heart was pounding in his chest harder than it ever had during sex with Steve. He could already feel sweat dripping down his back and his eyes were wide and locked onto Steve's. There was a faint yellow glow all around them from the candles and Bucky's vision seemed to blur ever so slightly around Steve's face. This was insanely exciting to him. Steve had never really acted this way before. It was intense and new and unlike Steve but also unprecedented and unpredictable in the way that Steve could be sometimes.

---

Bucky looked so fucking gorgeous and it made Steve's heart skip to see that he could still get his husband so worked up and excited. He wanted to give him everything under the sun because Bucky did so much for him. Steve wanted to go out of his own comfort zone to make Bucky happy. After he spread Bucky wide with three fingers, he slicked up his cock and pushed inside Bucky's ass smoothly. "Repeat back to me what I asked you to do, Love," Steve said softly before thrusting in deeper.

---

"Okay-God! Fuck!" Bucky yelped and flung his hands out to grip Steve's arms. His breath shook as he said, "When you're done with me, I'm supposed to get dressed again, no underwear, leaking come from my ass, and go to the sex shop downtown to get us a new toy that you'll approve of."

---

"Good," Steve growled. He wrapped an arm around the small of Bucky's back to lift his hips up as he fucked him. "Now lay back and enjoy yourself, Baby. I want you to feel as perfect as you make me feel."

---

Bucky's face was red hot and his still gross hair was sticking to his skin. "How will I know what you'll approve of though, Steve? What if I bring us back the wrong thing?" He tentatively reached for his dick but then aborted the motion, having not been given any indication from Steve to touch himself yet. Hell, he was still supposed to have his arms over his head.

---

Steve, not wanting Bucky to touch himself yet, casually moved Bucky's hands back over his head and held them there. "Then I'll send you back out until you find the right toy," Steve said. Chances were, even if Steve didn't like it, he wouldn't make Bucky take a second trip. He just liked what this conversation was doing to Bucky. Steve let out a soft, breathy moan because Bucky felt so fucking good around his cock.

---

"Jesus fucking Christ," Bucky rolled his head back so he was staring at the ceiling. "What's gotten into you, Steve, Baby?" He moaned a long string of pleased little whines and clenched his ass around Steve's cock repeatedly.

---

Steve gently brushed Bucky's hair from his face and kissed down his neck. "Just proving to you that you're mine. Just like you asked," he answered. He reached down to stroke Bucky's dick with every thrust he gave him.

---

"I believe you," Bucky whispered as he closed his eyes and let his mouth hang open. He probably wasn't a very attractive sight but he just couldn't hold himself together at the moment. "I've always been yours - just waiting for you to come claim me."

---

Steve could feel himself getting close. His thrusts were a bit more erratic and he didn't have that utterly controlled composure anymore. "I know," he said softly. "But now I can have you for the rest of our lives." He kissed at his lips. "And I won't let you down." Steve lasted a few more thrusts before coming deep in his ass.

---

The sounds that Bucky heard himself make as he waited for his own orgasm were enough to send him over the edge. Each high keening noise pushed him a little further until he was shooting up in a harsh spout of come that hit Steve's stomach as he hovered over Bucky.

---

Steve stroked Bucky through his orgasm before finally giving him permission to put his hands down. He kissed the tip of his nose affectionately and then he gave him a genuine, pleased look. "Is this alright, Buck?" he asked. "I'm not going too far, am I?"

---

Bucky gave an indignant clipped laugh. "Are you kidding?" He launched himself at Steve to lick into his mouth and moan into him. "Not too far, at all. With you, I don't think I have a 'too far'." He stared into Steve's eyes for a quiet, tranquil moment before slipped off of him and grabbing for his pants. "Want me to get going?"

---

"Just making sure," Steve said gently. "I love you too much to not double check." He relaxed and laid sprawled out on the bed. "Yeah, you go run your errand. I'll think about what dinner I'll make for the girls and I'll make some extra for us in case you feel like having second dinner."
"Okay, I'll be back, Love," Bucky said and grinned before slipping out of their room. He was a mess of sticky skin and a wet asshole but he also felt like he was on top of the world. When he was going down the stairs to head outside, he ran into the girls on their way home from school. "Hey, I just got to run an errand really fast and I'll be back. Make sure to knock first on our bedroom door if you want to talk to Steve."

When the girls got home, Steve dressed and headed to the kitchen to cook. He smiled pleasantly and waved before getting to cutting up vegetables. "How was school?"

"It was fine," Lilly groaned and flopped over on the couch. "I was told that I'm a distraction to my fellow classmates and my teacher wants Bucky to come in and have a talk about me."

Becca dropped her bag on the table and went to help Steve with dinner. "And I took my last chemistry test and then had a good study session with my friends for our history exam next week." She smiled up at Steve. "My day was better than Lilly's."

Steve gave Becca a friendly nudge when she came over to help. "Proud of you," he said and then glanced back at Lilly. "Well, what did you do that was a distraction? You know your brother can't afford to take days off from work," he said in a light but disapproving tone.

Lilly huffed and said in a mock teacher voice, "You talk too much during class and clicking pens does not create a productive learning environment and tossing paper airplanes to your friends behind my back is very rude, Lillian Barnes."

Becca turned to stare at Lilly on the couch, "Paper airplanes? Really? I spend the whole year busting my ass in school every single day and you make paper airplanes?"

Steve snorted at Becca. "Don't worry, Becca. You're the one who's going to be super smart and Lilly is going to be sweeping streets and cleaning toilets. Right, Lil?" Steve asked. "Are you going to be the best toilet cleaner there ever was?"

Lilly very quickly flipped Steve off in a way that she could get away with saying it was just a hand tick if he got upset. "First of all, being a janitor doesn’t mean that you aren’t smart. Second of all, I'm going to be famous," she said and put her hands on her hips. "Either going to become an actress or a singer or a model. Who knows?"

"If you don't do well in school how will you know someone's not conning you out of your money?" Steve asked her innocently. "You'll be the poorest singer around."
"Intuition," she replied.

Becca just laughed and started setting the table. "Just wait until Bucky hears that you want to be famous," she said with a strange reverence. "He will either shut that down in a heartbeat saying it's not a practical enough option for you or pay for your acting lessons so at least one of us can live out a dream cause he didn't get to. There is no middle option."

"Bucky would do anything to help you two with your dreams," Steve said. "But he's not dumb. You have to show him that you're willing to help yourself and that you know what you're doing." Steve set a few plates down on the table. "He loves you two so much. And so do I."

"I'm going to do it," Lilly said and came over to the table to eat. "I'm going to be famous."

"Where did Bucky go anyway?" Becca asked and poured water for the three of them. "He rushed out of here looking disgusting and saying he had to run an errand."

Steve tried to not look too pleased with himself at Becca's description of Bucky. "He had to get soap. We ran out and he needs to shower really bad. He tripped into a bunch of garbage on the way home from work."

Both girls gave Steve a look like they weren't anywhere near convinced that that was true. "Could have just used shampoo on his body if it was that urgent. At least then he wouldn't have smelled on his way to get soap," Becca said.

Lilly added, "Yeah and the bodega is only a block down so he should be back by now."

"He had other errands to run, too," Steve said lamely. "Just hush and eat your dinner. No more questions," he complained. He kissed the top of both of their heads and headed to the bedroom before he accidentally said too much.

It took another twenty minutes before Bucky was sneaking back into the apartment with a large black bag behind his back. Both the girls were in the living room working on one of Becca's puzzles with the TV droning on behind them. He managed to shuffle through the apartment to his and Steve's bedroom without them asking about the bag.

"Hey there, Beautiful," Steve said pleasantly. "Becca and Lilly were asking questions. I had to hide in here to stop them from getting suspicious." He was an awful liar and they both knew it.
Bucky set the bag down by the door and made sure that Steve couldn't see inside it from across the room before he went over to him and gave him a slow kiss. "What did you say to them to make them suspicious?" he asked curiously and stroked his thumb on the skin of Steve's neck.

---

"Told them you had to get soap cause we were out. And that you looked wrecked cause you tripped into garbage on the way home," Steve said with an apologetic smile.

---

Bucky shook his head and scoffed. "God, Steve, you are the worst at this shit," he said and then checked his watch. "It's almost time for the girls to be getting ready for bed. Am I allowed to shower before we get into anything more tonight?"

---

Steve looked at the bag with interest. "Let me see what you bought for us first," he said with a snarky, little grin on his face. Bucky wasn’t getting off that easily.

---

"You're only allowed to see two of the things I bought. The other one you'll have to just wait on," Bucky said and went towards the bag. "Close your eyes, Baby." He grabbed two things from the bag and then wrapped the other item back up before hiding it away in the closet. Bucky came back over to Steve with a bottle of strawberry flavored lube and the new toy. He was pretty excited about the prospect of getting to use a toy again - if Steve let him - but he also wanted to get something that he thought Steve wouldn't be able to resist trying. So he found a vibrator with a long cord that led to a small remote so Steve could control the intensity of the movements.

---

Steve closed his eyes as directed. When he opened them, he looked over the lube and grinned. This would certainly make eating Bucky out him a lot more appealing... not like it wasn't already. He looked at the vibrator with light confusion. "What's the cord for?" he asked.

---

"Hold on a minute," Bucky said and went to go get batteries from the kitchen. When he returned, he put them into the vibrator and had Steve close his hand around the part meant to go into the ass. Bucky took the remote and pressed it on and then kept turning to dial up so it vibrated harsher and then he dialed it back down and turned it off. "See?"

---

Steve blushed deeply when he realized what they were meant to do with it. Oh. Well, that made a lot of sense. He shyly tucked the lube and the vibrator under the pillow just to give them a hiding place for now. "Let's shower together." Which meant he approved.

---

Bucky's eyes flashed and he breathed in a deep quick breath. "That mean we're... we're going to use it?" His pupils were blown out in excitement and he started stripping off his clothes to go shower. He really was pretty gross right now what with his disgusting hair, being in a jail cell, and the dried come between his thighs.
Steve nodded with a little smile. "Yes, that means we are," he said. He turned on the taps for Bucky before undressing himself. "You're like a kid on Christmas with sex toys."

Bucky squinted. "Strange image." He hopped into the shower. The water felt amazing on his skin and he just stood letting it cascade over him as he groaned at the feeling. "You really wanted me to be a dirty hippie today, didn't you, Steve?" he called out over the roar of the water. "Making me run around Brooklyn with your come drying in my pants and my sweat sticking my shirt to my back."

Steve snickered and ran his hands down Bucky's back and helped wash him off. "You got to admit that it was fun," he said. "I know you love it when I get possessive like that."

"Ooh, yes I do," Bucky agreed and turned to kiss Steve. He handed Steve the bar of soap and then turned back around. He guided Steve's hands down his back to sit cupping under his ass cheeks. "But now you have to clean up your mess."

Steve lathered his hands with the soap and then started to clean between Bucky's thighs and in his ass. "So demanding," Steve sassed lightly. "It was pretty hot sending you out there all messy with my come."

"Yeah? Was it?" Bucky asked and glanced back at Steve. "Did you lay in bed after I left and think about me walking down the street with it leaking out of me? Did you think how I must have smelled to the people at the sex shop? Smelled like I was claimed by a big strong cock." Bucky leaned back into Steve's touch just slightly as he cleaned him up. "Or did you think about how desperate I must have looked - fucked out with my hair matted down and my clothes stuck to me, frantically searching around a sex shop for exactly what would please my husband?"

Steve couldn't help but grind against Bucky a little. Being reminded of all that was making him hot under the collar and he was half tempted to fuck his husband right then and there. "All of that," Steve groaned. He kissed Bucky's cheek and then got the shampoo to wash his hair.

Bucky hummed happily when he got a reaction out of Steve. "What do you say after we shower we lay on the couch and watch TV until the girls go to sleep and then I'll show you the third thing I bought at the shop, yeah?"

"I like the sound of that, Handsome," Steve said sweetly. He kissed Bucky's forehead and then washed his hair. "But only if you keep up that dirty talk later on."
"Don't I always?" Bucky asked and washed out his hair before turned off the shower and wrapping up in a towel. They threw on some pajamas and lazed about on the couch together while the girls showered and headed to bed. Once the lights were out and everything was quiet, Bucky pulled Steve back to their room and said, "You strip and get on the bed and I'll be right back." He grabbed the black bag from the closet and rushed to the bathroom and shut the door firmly behind him so Steve wouldn't see.

Steve loved it when Bucky tried to surprise him. He hurried off to the bed and plopped down, quickly stripping himself and tossing his clothes aside. He sprawled out and parted his legs so when Bucky came back, he would see Steve lazily jerking himself off.

Bucky hastily removed his pajamas and pulled the shirt and long pants from the black bag. He dressed as quickly as he could in the complicated outfit and then stared at himself in the mirror. Bucky looked on at a long-haired foul-mouthed officer in a tight-fitting tear-away mock policeman's uniform. He plopped the dorky hat on the top of his head and checked out his ass once more in the fabric painted onto his skin. "Officer Bucky Rogers-Barnes reporting for duty." He chuckled quietly to himself and then flung open the bathroom door.

Steve couldn't help but stare incredulously. First out of shock, then amusement, and then arousal. "Jesus Christ," he laughed as he stood up and walked over to Bucky. He crowded his space and cupped Bucky's ass tightly through the pants. "You come to arrest me, Officer?"

"That depends," Bucky said and reached down to hold Steve's balls. "You done something I should arrest you for?" He leaned forward and kissed his husband. "After all, I'm the one impersonating an officer. That's illegal, isn't it?" He started pushing Steve back towards the bed.

Steve plopped back down and grinned brightly up at Bucky from his spot on the bed. "Depends. Is it an arrestable offense to jerk off while you're in the bathroom? Cause I did that. I also checked out your ass like ten times today..."

"I think I'll let it slide just this once," Bucky said and crowded Steve by boxing him in with his arms and legs on the bed. "But you have to do something for me to get off." He put his hand on the back of Steve's head and gently pulled him closer to his crotch.

Steve smirked and slowly started to mouth at Bucky's cock through the cheap fabric of the pants. "I do, huh? But shouldn't you get that camera just in case? You know, pictures for evidence, Officer."
"Jesus, yes," Bucky agreed, slightly breaking character, and slipped away from Steve quickly to go grab the camera. He came back and promptly handed it to him. "You got to get some of me in this outfit. Then you'll suck my cock and decide who fucks who tonight. The officer fucking a criminal in lieu of jail time or the real officer teaching the impersonator a lesson."

---

Steve sat back and took a few pictures of Bucky, some full body shots and others close-ups of the bulge in his pants. Steve loved the idea of choosing who did who but right now he was more interested in sucking his husband off. He undid the front of Bucky's pants and slid his clothes off. When he took Bucky's cock in his mouth, he took a picture of himself.

---

"Give me that," Bucky whispered and took the camera. He snapped a few more of Steve with a dick in his mouth before tossing the camera on the bed for later. He just enjoyed himself for a while being sucked on by his husband. "What did you decide?" he asked and glanced over at the pillow where the new toy and the strawberry lube were hiding. He really hoped Steve didn't back down and change his mind about using the vibrator.

---

Steve bobbed his head sensually along Bucky's length for a bit. He popped off his dick and licked his lips slowly. "I fucked you this afternoon. I think it'll be fair to give you a turn to fuck me tonight."

---

"Good." Bucky grinned down at him. "I haven't been inside you in like four days or something." He touched the sides of Steve's face gently and leaned down to kiss him. "Are we still using the new vibrator? You can put it inside me and have control of the remote while I Fuck you."

---

"Do you get ass withdrawal when you don't get to fuck me for a while?" Steve joked. He winked and then started to take Bucky's top off. "We can use the vibrator, Baby. I want to see how hot it makes you."

---

"Well, it's just that I've noticed that you tend to be doing the fucking more than the getting fucked, and, yeah, sometimes I get really needy to be inside you," Bucky whined and pushed his body against Steve's once his shirt was off of him. He reached up under the pillow for the lube and the vibrator and dragged them out from their hiding place.

---

"All you got to do is tell me, Baby," Steve said sweetly. He opened up the lube for Bucky and sniffed it to see if it smelled as sweet as it was advertised. "I'll bend over for you any day of the week."

---

Bucky sniffed the lube then too and nodded in satisfaction. "Here," he said and poured some onto Steve's fingers before tearing the pants the rest of the way off of him and ditching the hat. "Open me up enough for the vibrator then I'll get you ready."
Steve wasted no time teasing Bucky's ass. He pushed a single finger inside and let out a little groan. "Fuck yeah," he purred. "You like that, Buck? Like my fingers inside of you?"

Bucky clenched his jaw and nodded. "You know I do, Baby." He let himself be eagerly fingered for a bit and then touched gently on Steve's shoulder to say, "And you're really okay with using it? I mean, I know you proved your point about owning my ass by controlling what goes in it for so long but you really didn't like the idea of anything else inside me that wasn't you," he rambled on and then took a quick breath. "I just want to make sure that this isn't going to upset you."

"I'm okay enough to give this a shot." Steve honestly didn't buy into the whole toy thing that much. But he did buy into how horny it made Bucky, which he loved to see. He supposed he could handle the toys in small doses so long as they used it together. "I want to see you desperate and aching for me. You'll still want my dick over those toys."

"Oh, Steve, Baby, I always want your dick over anything. You don't have to worry about that at all," Bucky said and tangled a hand into his hair. He waited patiently for Steve to be done fingering him and then cautiously picked up the toy and offered it up to his husband.

Steve took the toy and looked it over for a moment before kissing Bucky's cheek. He teased Bucky's hole with the tip of it for a little bit before pushing it slowly inside his husband. "Is that okay?"

Bucky nodded and grabbed Steve for another chaste kiss. He handed him the little dial remote and said, "And see? You've still got control since you've got the remote." He pushed Steve gently so he was on his back and he poured some strawberry lube onto his fingers so he could start opening him up. "You can turn it on whenever you want to."

"It's like you have a damned tail." Steve laughed. He spread his legs a bit and let out a soft sound as Bucky opened him up with his fingers. Curiously, he set the vibrator to the lowest setting.

Bucky was going to say, 'Don't make fun of my tail' but then Steve clicked on the vibrator and all he could do was shudder with the feeling and bite Steve's thigh once earning him a small shudder from Steve. Bucky then shimmied Steve's legs up so his ass was closer to Bucky's face. He squeezed some strawberry lube out onto the tip of his tongue and then surged forward to stick it inside Steve's ass.

"Fuck!" Steve gasped out, hips rising off the bed to try to get his ass closer to Bucky's mouth. "Feels so good, Buck," he moaned. Steve tugged at Bucky's hair and thrust a little.
Bucky hummed against Steve's hole and licked into him, tasting the mix of Steve and candied strawberries. After a few minutes of eating him out, Bucky detached from Steve and laid back on the bed. The vibrator was still going and his cock was sticking up happily for Steve. "Sit," he said in a low growl and pointed at his dick.

When Bucky pulled away, Steve whined softly with a pout. But that pout went away the second he knew he was getting Bucky's cock. He straddled Bucky's hips and as he eased his ass onto him. He turned up the vibrator.

"Ah, Fuck!" Bucky groaned. He knew giving Steve the remote was a good idea. He was going to use it at all the right times to get Bucky really going. "If I come first, which seems really likely, what do you want me to do to get you off? Give you head? Eat you out? You want to fuck me a bit until you come?" Bucky prattled off questions as he started fucking his hips up into Steve.

Steve moaned at how good Bucky felt in his ass. He licked his dry lips and rocked his hips desperately. "Want to have you eat my ass out," he moaned. "After it's all messy from your come."

"I'd love to," Bucky agreed and adjusted on the bed so he could pound Steve at a better angle. He glanced at the remote, hoping Steve would decide to turn it up but he didn't want to suggest it. He wanted everything to do with the vibrator to be Steve's decision and his idea. "I really missed having you ride me like this, Stevie. It's been a while."

"Has it really been that long since I rode you?" Steve played with Bucky's nipples as he rocked on top of him hard enough to make the bedsprings creak. "You should just take me one day. Take what you want rather than wait for me to quit being selfish. You don’t ever ask for what you want. Just like how you want me to make the vibrator go harder right now. I can see it in your face." Steve winked.

Bucky whined high in his throat and gripped harder onto Steve's hips. "You blow my fucking mind, Baby." He breathed and blinked slowly. "I just always wanted to make sure you were getting what you needed. I like when you are calling the shots, but if you want me to take over sometimes, I can do that for you." He paused and touched a hand on top of Steve's on the remote, silently asking him to turn it up a notch. "I'll come home from work one night, find you in our bed waiting. I'll flip you over, shove your pants down just enough so I can get to your ass. Then I'll finger you open enough to take me and I'll slip my cock out, not bothering with my clothes cause there just isn't enough time. Then I'll fuck you so you're hot and sweaty and moaning for release."

Steve was quick to turn up the remote for his husband. He moaned low and clenched his muscles around Bucky's cock as he described how he would fuck him. "Please," Steve groaned. He liked being in charge but Bucky deserved to call the shots sometimes too.

---

Bucky gasped through clenched teeth when the vibrator went up and it only spurred him on to fuck Steve harder. "Gonna start out fucking you hard from behind and then alternate between that and slow agonizing thrusts until you damn near demand that I pick one and stop teasing your orgasm. And I'll not let you take your dick out to touch. You'll have to come only from my being inside you. And if I can't get you to come before I do, then you can make me give you head to finish what I started." Bucky came somewhere during his explanation of what he would do to Steve and he thrust a few more times before collapsing down on the mattress and letting Steve settle on top of him.

---

Steve loved how every thrust Bucky gave was harder than the last. Steve was desperate to come, especially after he felt Bucky empty himself inside him. But he liked being able to cuddle with him for a little bit after Bucky's orgasm. His husband could get a little needy after sex, which he loved. He kissed along his jaw with a smile. "How are you so perfect?"

---

Bucky panted a bit and reached over to flick the vibrator off and then pull it out of him. "Ask me in a few minutes," he said hurriedly and scooped his arms behind Steve to deposit him on his back so Bucky could keep his promise and eat him out. His come was already leaking out of Steve's hole and Bucky quickly licked at it before sticking two fingers and his tongue inside to chase his come back up into Steve's ass.

---

Steve tilted his head back on the pillows and let out a deep groan. His thighs shook as Bucky's tongue soothed his sore asshole. He jerked himself off slowly, getting hot from the mental image of Bucky pushing his come back into his hole with his tongue. "You are perfect. Fuck, so good to me." Steve came a few minutes later with a harsh shudder, arching his back off the mattress as he shot up onto his chest.

---

Bucky heard Steve's gasp at his orgasm and just kept tonguing him for a minute or two. He licked a line up from Steve's ass past his shaft to kiss and lick where his come had landed. Once he was all cleaned up, Bucky cuddled on top of Steve and nestled into his arms and neck.

---

"Mmm, thank you, Baby." Steve murmured happily. He was out like a goddamned light after that. He was even snoring a little, which only happened when Steve was either utterly exhausted or completely relaxed.
Bucky woke with his legs tangled with Steve's and Steve's arms wrapped tightly around him. He glanced down at their bodies and saw the dried come and lube on Steve's inner thighs and chuckled. "Stevie, Baby, you have work today," he whispered in his ear. "Wake up, you need a shower."

---

Steve groaned miserably as Bucky tried to wake him. He didn't want to move but then he realized he never told Bucky about Lilly. "Shit," he swore, bolting upright. "You have to go to a parent-teacher meeting with Lilly."

---

"What?" Bucky asked and sat up too. "Why, what'd she do?" he asked hurriedly and checked the clock. The girls would need to be up in a half hour to make it to school. Luckily, they only had three weeks left until summer and then they all would get a break from the early mornings and early nights. "Why didn't she tell me?"

---

"Nothing big, she's just talking and making paper airplanes," Steve said. "She told me. I guess she figured I would tell you but I was kind of too busy fucking around with you to be much use."

---

"Jesus, again with the airplanes?" Bucky asked with an annoyed groan. "I knew it was a bad idea to buy her that origami book for her birthday last year. All she learned was the airplanes and never once tried a swan or whatever." He huffed and got off the bed. "Fine, I'll figure out what time I need to be there. Let's hope it's before my shift tonight."

---

Steve kissed Bucky's forehead. "Just be thankful it's not for cutting class or hurting another kid," Steve said sweetly. "I'll go with you. That way if you have to cut out early, it won't look like she doesn't have a stable home life."

---

Bucky moved to kiss Steve quickly, "Thank you, you'll be done with work around two today, right? I don't imagine the meeting will be until after school is out around three." He started pulling on pajamas so he could start on breakfast while Steve showered. "And Lilly hasn't been hurting kids, too, has she?"

---

Steve nodded his head. "I'll even come in uniform," he promised, figuring it would earn them bonus points. "And no, she hasn't been hurting anyone. Not that I know of, at least."

---

"Okay, good." Bucky smiled. "She used to have a habit of cutting kids’ hair during class with safety scissors when she was in elementary school so I was worried she found her way to a more menacing use for her skills." He headed for the door, "You shower. I'll start breakfast and wake the girls."

"Makes sense. She wants to be a model, so she had to butcher everyone else's haircuts to cut down the competition," Steve joked. He got up and went to get showered.

Becca and Lilly were already in the kitchen when Bucky came out. "Steve's not making breakfast?"

"I should be insulted," Bucky said and kissed the tops of their heads. "You had me making breakfast for four years and Steve comes in and suddenly I'm not good enough for you?" He pulled the eggs from the fridge and started making omelets. "Steve needs to shower before work and, Lilly, how come I have a parent-teacher meeting I didn't know about until just now?"

"Well, I wasn't sure if Steve was sick or something. Usually, he trips over himself to cook for everyone," Becca mumbled absently.

Lilly sunk in her chair a little and crossed her arms. "I told Steve," she said. "Not my fault he forgot to tell you."

"Lilly, Steve isn't the one responsible for going to meetings with your teacher. I am," Bucky said and plopped an omelet in front of Becca before starting on Lilly's. "What time is the meeting? Because I have to be at work at five tonight. Becca, that means letting Steve know if you're going to be out with your study group later than usual."

"Three. Or four. I don't know. I was kind of hoping they would forget," Lilly said with a wave of her hand. She dug into her breakfast and tried to pretend she didn't hear any complaint her brother had.

"Jesus Christ," Bucky breathed and rubbed his face. "Alright, I'll just call your teacher later to see when she wants me there."

Bucky made himself and Steve some breakfast and watched as Steve came trotting into the kitchen all ready for the day. He pulled him in for a kiss and couldn't help the goofy grin he got just from seeing his husband.

Steve laughed as he was pulled into Bucky abruptly and he returned the kiss happily. He ran his hand over Bucky's chest and then grabbed some food for himself. "So what time is the meeting? Three?" Steve asked.

"Yeah, sort of. I have to call and double check," Bucky said and slipped into the seat next to Steve to eat his breakfast. Bucky nudged his leg and smirked. "You fell asleep so fast last night I didn't get to ask you if you enjoyed yourself,” he said quietly.

---

Steve smirked. "I think me knocking out right after is all the answer you need."

Becca caught on to what they must have been talking about and she rolled her eyes. "Gross."

---

Bucky glanced over to her and laughed, "You don't know, I could be talking about watching a movie with Steve." He wasn't, of course, and he, admittedly, had sort of forgotten the girls were there for a second.

"Okay, what movie?" Becca asked with arms folded.

---

"A movie for people who aren't nosy teenage girls who don't know how to mind their own business," Steve teased playfully. He finished his breakfast and cleaned up the dishes. "I have to run to work. I can drive you guys to school on the way."

---

Becca rolled her eyes but got up to follow Steve out anyway. Lilly tugged on her sleeve and asked quietly, "I'm so confused. What movie did they watch?" Becca promised she'd explain later, which earned her a stern plea from Steve to not explain it to Lilly.

Bucky waited in the apartment and practiced guitar and read a book to pass the time. At one point, he felt the urge to drink come over him really severely out of nowhere so he went down to the street to smoke to try to get the feeling to go away. He knew he should probably talk to Steve about how this kept happening and try to find a self-help book soon.

---

Steve dropped the girls off at school and then headed to work. Turns out, the meeting was at three and Steve met up with Bucky and Lilly before heading into the teacher's otherwise empty classroom.

---

Bucky had a light hold on Lilly's shoulder as the three of them trudged into the classroom. She was already pouting and had her arms crossed securely over her chest. Lilly flopped into a chair in front of her teacher's desk and Bucky and Steve took the two next to her. "Good to see you," Bucky said and forced a smile at the teacher. "How's your day been?"

---

"Well, it could have been better," the teacher said. "Even though she knew we were having this meeting, Lilly still decided to be a distraction. I caught three airplanes in one class alone." She crossed her arms. "What do you plan to do about that?"

---

Bucky opened his mouth to talk then closed it again and looked over at Lilly who was staring out the window. "May I ask what she's making the airplanes out of? Is it her homework or just extra papers she has in her notebook?" It might be a silly question to ask but it would probably help him figure out something to do. If it was just notebook paper he might suggest she not be allowed to have notebooks in class other than one page for note-taking at a time.

---

"Paper. Any kind of paper she can get her hands on," the teacher answered. "She's faked your signature a few times. She is barely passing. I could fail her for the grade if I felt inclined to, but she's not a bad person and I really don't want to have to deal with another year of this."

---

"We talked about the signature forgery," Bucky said with a nod, "Didn't we, Steve? I didn't know about it until that Ellis Island trip. And Steve has been helping her with homework when he can. He was home a lot for a while and he was pretty diligent about getting her to sit down and try to focus with him."

---

"Oh, I'm sure she does what she's supposed to when she's put under a microscope. But I have thirty other kids in my class," she said. "Have you considered hiring a private tutor or sending her to a remedial school for kids who have trouble focusing?"

---

Bucky bit his lower lip to prevent himself from saying something nasty to the teacher. Lilly didn't need a remedial school. She couldn't transfer into a different place and leave her friends and her teams. He wouldn't do that to her. But he didn't really know what to do either. Bucky looked to Steve for help. Over the past few months, in particular, Bucky had started looking to Steve for his input as a sort of consulting parent and he trusted what he might have to say. They were going to eventually, hopefully, raise a child together so he may as well include him in as much with the girls as he could.

---

The teacher was being a bit blunt but she wasn't wrong to suggest that Lilly wasn't exactly a traditional learner. "She's staying in this school," Steve said firmly. "But we will go over other options at home about how we can keep her occupied in class without being a bother to you or her peers."

---

The teacher nodded and gave Steve a cursory smile. "I'm sorry, who are you, again? I was only expecting Mr. Barnes and Lilly today." She gestured towards Bucky and he felt so old being referred to as 'Mr. Barnes' by a teacher.

---

Steve hesitated to answer honestly because he didn't want to risk how Lilly was treated. "I'm a relative. My house is under renovation, so I'm living with them for a little while," he said.

---

At that, Lilly scoffed and looked down at a spot on the wall. Bucky sighed and gently touched Steve's arm for a split second. "Steve is home with Lilly a lot of the time when I have late shifts and he has early shifts so we thought it would be a good idea for the both of us to attend today."
The teacher looked convinced by the story they told. "Very well. That's all we need for today, but do know that Lilly will be in after-school detention for the rest of the week."

"The whole damn week?" Lilly asked with her mouth hanging open. "The lacrosse team was going to get some early spring practice in before we left for the summer and only meet up twice a month. I can't miss that."

"You should have thought about that before you chose to be rude in class, Lillian Barnes," the teacher said evenly to her. "Now hop to it. Enjoy what's left of your day."

Bucky thanked the teacher and promised he would talk with Lilly more about this later. He shuffled Lilly out the door with Steve in tow. Once outside the school, Bucky doubled over and breathed out an angry sigh with his hands stabilizing himself on his thighs. His head was hurting. He was frustrated with the teacher for being rude to his little sister and he was frustrated with Lilly for not being more focused in class and he was frustrated with himself for not being able to do shit about any of it. The urge to drink was back with a vengeance and something in his core was trying to plot how he could sneak off to a bar after work for a bit before coming home.

Steve could tell that Bucky was having a rough time right now, so he patted his back. "Baby, let's take a walk." On the way to the record shop, Steve had them stop at an art supply place. "Lilly, what do you think about some putty or maybe braiding yarn into bracelets to keep yourself occupied in class?"

Bucky was mostly quiet as he trailed Lilly and Steve around the art store. He would occasionally touch something that looked soft and would mumble an agreement when he was asked a question. Mostly, he wanted to curl up in bed for the evening and not deal with anyone or talk at all.

Lilly had fun looking at the different colors of yarn that she could make bracelets out of and Steve pointed out little pamphlets on how to do it. She also spent a good amount of time squishing balls of putty as she decided which she preferred.

Steve let Lilly go off on her own for a bit to decide on what she would get. He would send a letter to the teacher explaining that she would be quiet during class even if she wasn't paying attention and he'd go over her work with her at home. "Buck, you want to lay down at home and I'll cover your shift at the store?"

Bucky looked up to Steve and met his concerned gaze. He reached out and gripped his arm. "You know what I want? I want a bottle of nice bourbon and a giant blanket... and a dog." He sighed and watched Lilly weave in and out of the aisles. "I'll just tough it up at work tonight. I don't have to do any restocking today or any inventory so I can make Reggie give up his chair at the register and just sit all night."

---

Steve sighed but nodded his head. On their way to the checkout, he found a brown plush dog on the shelf and picked it up. "There you go. And we can name him 'Bourbon'," Steve decided. "I'll break out the blanket from the trip to sleep in tonight." He wasn't going to call it 'the sex blanket' in front of Lilly.

---

Bucky giggled and took the dog from Steve. "I love him, Steve," he said and held him close to his chest. "Will you and Bourbon wait up for me tonight?" He leaned into Steve so Lilly couldn't hear. "If you stay up, we can get some more use of the blanket. After work all evening, I'll be due some time with my husband to relax."

---

Steve blushed and used the excuse of paying the cashier to take a moment to calm himself down. "Of course, I'll wait up for you. And your new dog will keep me company. We got to have him sleep in his own bed, though. Once you're back."

---

They headed back out to the street and Bucky said, "Yeah, I don't really like the idea of a plush dog watching us do it. He can sit on the dresser facing the wall or in the closet." When they got to the record shop, Lilly immediately went to go talk with Reggie. They were a strange set of friends and Bucky usually had to explain to Lilly that half of what Reggie said was bullshit that he dreamed up on a drug trip and not fact.

---

Steve hung around the record shop with them for a little bit, but he did have to take Lilly home and start going over her homework. It was a bit tedious, but they got it done and Steve was able to get them ready and off to bed as well.

---

As he thought, Bucky's shift was a drag. It wasn't horribly busy but Reggie was as high as usual and as unhelpful as usual and no one else was working. When Bucky did get back home, he flung his coat haphazardly onto the kitchen table and opening the fridge for something to eat.

---

Steve emerged from the bedroom moments later and came up behind Bucky to kiss his shoulder. "Hey, Gorgeous. Are you feeling any better?" he asked.

---

"Hey," Bucky answered warmly and leaned back against Steve. "I'm better now that I'm home." He turned in Steve's grasp and held a piece of carrot up to Steve's mouth in case he wanted one too. "How were the girls for you tonight? Did Lilly get her shit together?"
Steve nibbled on the end of the carrot. "She did all of her homework. Tried to get out of it a million times, but I kept her at the table until she was done. Even Becca was getting annoyed at how long she was taking," Steve chuckled.

---

"Well, I guess that's something," Bucky said and took Steve's hands to rest them on his ass. "Were you lonely waiting for me?" he asked and started backing them towards their room. Once the door was shut behind them, Bucky grinned and said, "I want to get fucked, Steve. Do you want to fuck me? Take control of me? Show me how much you love me?"

---

Steve hummed contentedly, reached down, and grabbed Bucky's bulge through his pants and leaned down to whisper into his ear. "Always." With his hand still grabbing him, Steve steered Bucky towards the bed.

---

"What do you want me to do?" Bucky asked and sat down on the bed. "Want me to just lay back and let you direct me? Because I'll be a pillow princess if you want me to." He leaned forward and hugged Steve around the middle and breathed in his scent. He loved how Steve smelled. He had gotten used to the smell and it was hard to distinguish from his own but sometimes he could catch a whiff of it and it made him want to melt.

---

"Pillow princess? What's that?" Steve snorted. He smoothed a hand down Bucky's chest and eased him back onto the bed. "Quit smelling me, you weirdo," he teased. Steve loved it, though.

---

"Pillow princess means I'm not going to do shit. Just going to lay back and enjoy myself," Bucky said and tucked his hands behind his head. "But I'll do whatever you want me to do. Or we can just not have sex and we can go to sleep and be boring and old and wake up tomorrow and be that old married couple who reads the newspaper before going to work."

---

Steve smiled. "Be a pillow princess," he decided. "But... close your eyes." He waited for Bucky to do so before he went to his hiding spot in the room and pulled out one of the beers that Bucky came across at the cabin. He stole a few when Bucky wasn't looking and was hiding his stash for a rainy day. "Okay, open them," he said, holding it out for Bucky. "I'll fuck you nice and slow so you can drink this while we have sex."

---

Bucky's eyes flashed excitedly and he snatched the beer from Steve's hand. "Oh my fucking god," he said and popped the top to take a sip. He whined at the taste and pulled Steve down onto the bed again. "A plush dog, a beer, and the sex blanket. It's everything I wanted earlier!" he said happily and pet his hand over Steve's crotch. "You're so good to me."

---

Steve watched Bucky closely and sighed contentedly knowing that this man was all his. "I'm sorry today was stressful for you, Baby," he said as he methodically started kissing anywhere he could on Bucky.

---

Bucky held the beer close to him but only took sips occasionally so he could watch Steve work his body slowly and lovingly like he liked doing. "I just really wanted to fight that teacher. Suggesting that Lilly be put in a remedial school. Fuck that." He took another swig of his beer and watched Steve coat his fingers in lube.

---

Once he got lube on his fingers Steve slowly pushed two inside at once. "Quit thinking about her and start thinking about how nice it's going to feel when I got my dick up in your ass."

---

Bucky licked his lips and grinned at Steve. "I'm always thinking about that. You know how insatiable I can be for you. How badly I need you all the time." As Steve fingered him, Bucky moaned with his mouth open so Steve could really hear it.

---

"Someday I should just tie you down and fuck you all morning. Then I'll go to work and come back to fuck you until we're exhausted." Steve added a third finger and curled them inside of Bucky's ass.

---

Bucky gasped and hitched his body up at Steve's words. "Are you going to leave me tied down while you go to work? Leave me with my ass full of your come and wet and waiting for you to get back home?" He loved the idea. Maybe he could convince Steve to put a plug or something inside of him before he left. But that might take some coaxing.

---

"Yep," Steve said brightly. "I'll leave a glass of water with a straw so you don't get thirsty, but that's all you're getting while I'm out." He pulled his fingers out and replaced them with his cock. Steve let out a pleased groan and leaned down to kiss him slowly.

---

"What am I supposed to do while I'm here by myself?" Bucky choked out his question as Steve started to fuck him. "With my hands and legs tied up, I won't be able to touch myself or read a book or anything." He kissed Steve and hummed against his lips happily before pulling away so he could grab his beer again. Steve did give him permission to drink it while they fucked.

---

"I'll throw a record on. That should occupy you," Steve teased. "And you can think about all the ways we are going to screw each other's brains out." He kissed him deeply and then pulled back so Bucky could drink his beer. He rolled his hips slowly in and out of him, enjoying the slow friction.

---

"Records run out, Steve. They can only put so much on there." Bucky gave a half-hearted pout and took a final sip of his beer before putting it on the nightstand for later. He carded his hands up into Steve's hair and sat up as best he could with Steve's dick still inside of him. "I know I said I wasn't going to do anything, but do you want to flip so I can ride you?"

---

Steve sucked a mark onto Bucky's neck and rolled them both back without pulling out of Bucky's ass so he was now sitting on his dick. "Now I'll be the princess," he joked.

---

Bucky giggled and kissed Steve heartily. He braced himself and started bouncing up and down on Steve's cock and rolling his hips forward as he did. "I've got the dick in my ass. I think that makes me the princess still," Bucky said to himself and chuckled. "Or you are my pillow prince and I'm your loyal servant who will do anything to drive my prince crazy and please him every day."

---

Steve stared up at Bucky with dark, aroused eyes before reaching for Bucky's dick and stroking it. "How about I'm your loving, loyal husband who loves seeing you bounce on my cock?"

---

"Mmm, yes we are that," Bucky grinned and gripped at Steve's upper arms. "You're not one for pretend, are you, Steve?" he asked and caressed his face with lithe fingers as he fucked himself harder and got closer and closer to orgasm.

---

"Don't need to pretend when I got the best thing ever right in front of me." Steve arched his back and started to roll his hips up into Bucky. He came first, gripping Bucky's hips and pulling him hard against him as he shot his come up into him.

---

Bucky grinned happily when Steve came and he gently pulled off of him and headed for Steve's face. "Here, loyal husband, you want to help finish me off?" he asked and grazed his fingers on Steve's lips so he would get the idea.

---

Steve kissed Bucky's fingertip and moved to pin him to the bed again as he kissed down his chest. Steve let out a little moan as he moved down Bucky's body. Finally, he took his husband's cock into his mouth and began to suck.

---

"Thank you, Baby," Bucky said and was careful not to hitch up into Steve's mouth too soon. It didn't take very long for Bucky to come deep down Steve's throat with a muffled groan. He pulled Steve up to hold him close and kiss the side of his face repeatedly.

---

Steve snuggled close to Bucky and nuzzled him. "I love you so goddamn much, Bucky Barnes," he sighed happily. "We're compatible in every way." He wiped the corner of his mouth and laid his head on his chest. He was going to sleep securely in his husband’s arms tonight.
A few weeks past and the girls were finally done with school and in a pleasant easy summer mood. Lilly had a birthday party to go to for one of her friends out in Long Island and Bucky was invited along to mingle with the parents of Lilly's teammates - who he really hadn't spoken to much before. A bright Friday afternoon found Steve, Bucky, and Lilly out at a party with Lilly immediately jumping to her friends and Bucky feeling entirely uncomfortable off to the side.

---

Steve was the well-dressed one, as usual, and he was a bit more at ease with everyone since he often brought orange slices and extra water bottles to the games. He also socialized more with the parents during games and practices. "Whoa, Bucky, look at how big this house is. Could you imagine having all this space?"

---

Bucky nodded absently and watched Lilly telling a story to her friends with wild hand gestures and big eyes. A few of the parents came over to them then and shook Steve's hand with a smile and said something about not having seen him for a while. Steve knew their names and their kids' names and Bucky was caught in the fray as the older brother who honestly had no idea who any of these people were. It pissed him off ever so slightly that he wasn't on top of all this stuff like Steve was and Steve wasn't even Lilly's brother or parent.

---

Steve was a natural at this, like he was born to deal with parent-teacher meetings and team gatherings. He asked a few parents how their kids were and how their other activities were going, but he went back to focusing on Bucky when he saw that he looked out of his element. "You alright there?"

---

"Yeah, I'm good," Bucky said and shrugged, "I can just feel these parents judging me for barely having spoken to them at any games and never coming to practices, but here you are as the best fucking unofficial guardian around and I don't know shit about any of these people."

---

Steve was taken aback at the response. "Buck, They know you work day in and day out for your sisters," Steve said, frowning. "They don't bite, you know. Just go up and start a conversation. I can go with you."

---

"Jesus, alright," Bucky sighed and gestured towards a group of parents who were much older than he and Steve were. Most of them were in their late thirties to mid-forties and Bucky felt like the odd man out in more ways than one. "Lead the way, Steve."

---

Steve led Bucky to them and touched one of the parents gently on her arm. "Janice," he greeted pleasantly. "This is Bucky - Lilly's brother. He was just talking to me about not being able to bring plants in for Lilly's science project because of our cat. You have one, don't you? Does yours attack the plants, too?"

---

Janice directed her attention to Bucky and shook his hand. "Well, Dylan has been keeping his plants in a special plot in our garden. And our cat is indoors so she doesn't ever go out to bother them."

"We live in an apartment without a balcony or anything," Bucky said awkwardly and glanced over at Lilly one more time to check that she was doing okay. "Do you have any suggestions for that?"

---

Janice considered for a moment before saying, "Maybe you can start spraying him whenever he goes near the window sill. After a couple times being squirted with water, he may not want to go around there anymore. Then you can put the plants there."

---

Bucky shook his head slightly. "I don't really want to do that. Seems a bit mean to the little guy, doesn't it? I mean cats fucking hate water. I don't want him hating us for squirting him." He laughed to himself and said, "I've got two little girls in my care, I already have enough anger directed at me on a daily basis to add any more on top of that shit."

---

Janice's eyes widened when Bucky cursed like it was a normal part of conversation. "You've got two little girls in your care and a mouth like that? No wonder Lilly's can get rude sometimes." She crossed her arms. "Look, I know you mean well, but the cat can live with a few sprits of water sprayed at him and your sisters will do well to not have such colorful language. I'm sure you're smart and have more appropriate words in your vocabulary, Bucky."

---

Bucky clenched his jaw tight and passed Steve a look and saw no support in his eyes. "Lilly can be rude because it's in her nature. I don't think hearing some 'colorful language' is what caused that. And, yes, I am smart. I'm smart enough to know that they are going to hear those words all over the place, especially in a city like New York and I think both my sisters would agree it's not fair that they don't get to hear or use those words just because they are a little younger."

---

Steve had a hard time backing Bucky up because he didn't agree with the swearing either. Janice glanced at Steve and kept going, "It's normal to not let kids see or hear things because of how old they are. I get you're trying to treat them like your sisters and not daughters, but..." she shrugged. "All kids need a parent, and one that comes with rules, and you're what they've got."

Steve knew that this was a one-way trip to pissing Bucky off, so he patted her shoulder. "How about we talk about something else?"

---

That wasn't going to be the end of it for Bucky. As earnestly as Steve might try to redirect them, Bucky wasn't done and he didn't think Janice was either. "I'm what they've got?" Bucky asked incredulously and poked his chest. "You know why I'm all they've got? Because both of our actual parents were killed in a goddamn car crash and my sisters ended up stuck with me. I know they deserve better but no one else is around to do what I have to do and I'm not giving up my family."

---

"Bucky," Steve said softly, trying to get him to calm down.

Janice was annoyed that she was getting treated like the bad guy here. "I know you're not giving them up. Which is why you have to start being a parent instead of a brother. Kids need structure."

---

"They have structure," Bucky pressured. "Things are much better at home now then they have been for a while. I've been doing so much better than I used to and they are a lot happier." He didn't realize how much he was trying to defend himself both to Janice and also to himself. Bucky would be the first to say that he wasn't cut out for this. He would be the first to admit he fucked up all the time. But he was going to prove to himself and Janice somehow that he was doing his best. "Things are better, aren't they, Steve?"

---

"Yes, they're a lot better," Steve agreed right away. He turned back to the woman. "Janice, I know you mean well, but we all have our different parenting styles. Our kids are on the same team, which means Bucky must've done something right with bringing Lilly up. Let's lay this to rest, okay? Both of you."

---

"Our kids?" Janice asked curiously. Steve had initially introduced himself as a cousin to everyone who he met at games way back when Steve and Bucky had first started dating. It may have seemed a bit strange for Lilly's cousin to keep coming to matches and practices and be living with them, but so far no one had thought anything of it. Right now, she was mostly coming from a place of annoyance that this cousin would suggest that he knew anything about parenting teens.

---

"You know what I meant," Steve said, waving it off. "Your kid and my cousin are on the same team." He already had one blow-up with Bucky earlier that day, he wasn't going to have an outing session in a house full of suburban parents on top of that.

---

Janice looked around quietly and caught her husband's attention for a split second. "I would just appreciate it if you and Lilly both don't curse around my son or the other kids," she said to Bucky and turned to go talk with her husband - Bucky presumed, about him.

Bucky sighed and let his shoulders slump. He looked sideways at Steve and asked, "Do you think Lilly would mind leaving early? I'd much rather not be here right now."

---

Steve glanced over and saw Lilly in the middle of wrestling with one of the boys to try and see who was the toughest. "She's enjoying herself, Bucky. You can go home if you want, but I'll stick around and catch a train back with her."
Bucky didn't like that idea either. He had already solidified himself with Janice as a bad parental figure and he guessed she was going to spread around to the other parents what had happened. If he left now without Steve and Lilly it would just make his case worse. "I'll stay." Bucky decided and looked over at the coolers of drinks and wondered if there was one filled with beer for the adults or not. Probably not, at kids party like this. Bucky chastised himself for even thinking it. He knew that if there was beer he would probably already be through a six pack and a half by himself.

Steve stayed at Bucky's side so he wouldn't feel so out of place. "You have to let it go, Buck. She means well and she doesn't understand. The worse they've gone through is not getting as big of a Christmas bonus from their jobs as they expected," he said.

"I can't let it go so easy, Steve," Bucky said. "She thinks she can do better for my kids than I am. She doesn't know me or my girls at all." He paused and glared at Steve. "And you didn't do shit to defend me either. You know you're my husband and not actually my cousin, right? You're supposed to support me in front of uptight Long Island rich bitches."

"I'm not saying that she should've told you how to parent your sisters, Buck, but it's perfectly reasonable to not want you cursing around kids - be it your sisters or her kids," Steve said. "I'm not going to agree with something I don't agree with just cause I'm married to you," he said the last part quieter so others couldn't hear.

"What do you mean?" Bucky asked and glared at Steve. "They are just words. Lilly and Becca have heard them a million times from me and my parents and sometimes you, I'll have you remember. And all those other kids are going to hear those words eventually - might as well normalize them to it. Also, it's not fair to kids to prevent them from doing or saying certain things based only on the time they've been alive."

"I don't want our kid to grow up hearing those words like it's normal," Steve said bluntly. "I don't want our kid doing things someone their age shouldn't be doing. You think they should be allowed to have sex or say 'fuck' when they're seven just because they should do whatever at whatever age?"
"That's not what I said," Bucky corrected. "I never said anything about sex, Steve. You're putting those words in my mouth. My parents let us talk how we wanted and they taught us things that other parents wouldn't even mention to their kids until they were in high school and they showed us that we weren't limited by our age and our understanding."

"You said you wouldn't stop your kids from doing or saying things because of their age. Sex is a thing," Steve shot back. "It doesn't matter what your parents did because you're not in a relationship with your parents. You're in a relationship with me and I don't want our kids having a free-for-all," he said

"You don't think my parents raised us right?" Bucky asked with a snarl and quietly blazing eyes. "You think cause we weren't brought up how you were that my parents fucked up? They were amazing. Some of the most loving and understanding parents I've ever met and they didn't treat us like fragile little dolls who had to earn the right to know about the world."

Steve rounded on Bucky and glared. "Now you're putting words in my mouth," he growled. "All I'm saying is that's not how I want any kid of mine to be raised. And if you don't like it, then that's too damn bad because I'm not budging on it."

Bucky stared up at Steve. He refused to look away from him for even a second. His teeth were clenched tightly and his whole body was shaking with fists balled at his sides and sweat dripping down his spine. He stood there for a long minute looking up at Steve and hating in this moment that he was slightly taller than him. After he felt like he just couldn't do it anymore, Bucky looked away down at the ground and spit out, "You catch the train with Lilly when she's done here. I'm going back to Brooklyn."

Steve glared right down at him, taking petty pleasure in knowing that Bucky would be pissed that he was shorter than Steve was. He let Bucky storm off and when Lilly finally realized he was gone, Steve said that he had to leave early to fix something at the record store. When he got home he went right to their bedroom, hoping Bucky was either asleep or calmed down.

Bucky didn't go home. He thought about it. But there wasn't much need for him to go back to the apartment immediately since Sarah was with Becca and they didn't expect anyone back home for a while longer. Instead, Bucky wandered the streets of Brooklyn for about an hour repeatedly telling himself he couldn't go to the bar. That would just make absolutely everything worse. And as much as he kind of wanted to piss Steve off more, he knew he couldn't do that to him. So Bucky went to Clint's place. Clint had agreed to let them store their wood for the baby's crib in the workshop in the cellar. Bucky showed up unannounced, explained his fight with Steve, and then Clint watched from his spot on the stairs as Bucky got started on the crib.
A few hours later, Steve and Lilly headed home. When Steve didn't find Bucky in their room, he went to ask his mom if Bucky came home at all and he damned near panicked. His first thought was that Bucky must have gone to the bar but before he went knocking on doors, he decided to head to Clint’s to see if he happened to be there. He stopped to pick up flowers on his way and Clint let him in when he got there. Once he was down in the cellar, Steve’s heart broke a little when he saw what Bucky was doing. "Babe..."

---

Bucky was in his loose tattered jeans that he had worn to the party and he had taken off his overshirt to work on the crib in his white tank top that was wet in some areas from his sweat. His hair was pulled back tight on the back of his head and he glanced up at Steve staring down at him from the middle of the stairs. "Steve..."

---

Steve walked down to him and placed a hand on his shoulder before offering him the flowers. "I'm sorry I yelled at you," he said gently. "Can I help you with that?" He used his own sleeve to wipe the sweat off Bucky's forehead.

---

Bucky took the flowers and set them on the counter behind him. "No, I've got it," he sighed and moved some pieces of wood around absently. "How'd you know I was here?" Not that he didn't want Steve to be there, but he also didn't call the house to tell them where he had gone. Bucky was surprised Steve wasn't more angry at him for not giving someone a heads-up that he wasn't going home.

---

"Because you would only be one of two places if you're not home after an argument with me. Here, or at a bar. I'm happy you came here." Steve sighed and put his hands in his pockets. "But I wish you had told me where you were going so I didn't worry so much when you weren't around when I got home. I know what I said upset you. But these are the sort of things we need to talk about before we get our kid."

---

Bucky nodded and began sanding again. He could hear Clint moving around upstairs and he kind of wished that he would come down so they wouldn't talk about this again. Bucky figured it was just going to lead to another fight. "I was thinking of getting a nice dark brown glaze for this once it's done. Something that looks polished but still compliments the wood we chose."

---

"Buck," Steve huffed softly. "I know you don't want to hear it, but I don't want to raise our kid the same way that you were. I don't want them to grow up too soon," Steve said. He crossed his arms and didn't answer Bucky's question for a short while. But then he finally added in a mumble, "A dark glaze would look nice."

---

"Steve, you can't control how fast a kid grows up," Bucky said. He put his sander down and leaned back against the counter. "Sure, my mom might have made a better choice in not letting me drink when I was fourteen. And letting me go to college parties probably wasn't the best either but they trusted me. It wasn't their fault I wasn't a good kid. They couldn't control that I felt peer pressure so bad that I wanted to lose my virginity so I did it with an eighteen-year-old. They couldn't control that I fell so hard for a jock in high school that I started doing coke. They couldn't control that they were killed and I had to grow the fuck up fast and be a guardian. Things happen. We aren't going to be able to protect our kids from everything and we sure as hell won't be able to make their decisions for them or keep them from growing up too fast."

---

"You can control how a kid grows up. That's the whole part of being a parent. Sure, there's some bits you can't change about them no matter how much you try. But that won't stop me from controlling what I can to make their lives stable," Steve said. "I love you. You know I do. I love who you are, too. But I think the way my mom raised me is the best way you can raise a kid."

---

Bucky bounced his leg nervously and looked down at the ground. He knew Steve didn't mean it like this but Bucky felt like he was attacking his parents for not being responsible with their kids. He looked up from the ground and there were tears filling his eyelids. "So I was right," he said quietly but without anger, only hurt, "You do think my parents fucked up with us."

---

Steve frowned when Bucky started to cry. "I'm not saying that they fucked up," he said. "I'm saying I think we can do better." He spoke hesitantly because he didn't want Bucky to feel like he was shitting on his parents' memory.

---

"Steve, you think you can do better," Bucky whispered and let a silent tear slip down his face. "You've seen how I've raised my sisters. You know how I parent and you know I'll never be as good at it as you will be."

---

"Why would you think you'll never be as good at it as I would? You're the one with parenting experience, not me," Steve said with a frown. It hurt him so damn much to see Bucky so emotional and upset.

---

Bucky paused and looked back down at the woodpiles and the sketch of the crib that Steve had made a week previously for reference as to how they wanted it to look. His lip quivered and he choked on his words when he asked, "Are you having second thoughts about having a baby with me?"

---

Steve immediately pulled him into a tight hug and tucked him in close. "I would never have second thoughts about raising a kid with you. That's all I've wanted since the first time we talked about it."

---

Bucky sniffled, buried his face in Steve's chest, and held his arms close against Steve's back. He could still hear Clint moving around upstairs but now he hoped he wouldn't come down because he didn't really want Clint to see him crying right now. Bucky pulled back and looked up at his husband. "I don't want to raise our kids like your mother raised you. And I don't want to do it like my parents did either. I want it to be a blend of the best of them all but mostly just us."

---

Steve made a small face because he didn't want to upset Bucky further but he also didn't want to admit that he wanted his parenting style to be exactly like his mom because he loved how he was raised. He sighed and kissed his forehead. "The crib is looking good so far..."

---

"So far it's just cut pieces and sanded wood," Bucky sighed and picked up Steve's drawing. "But it'll be as close to this as I can get it. Hopefully soon." He set the drawing down and pulled Steve in for a long deep kiss. "I'm sorry I made a mess at the party."

---

Steve returned the kiss slowly and pet his fingers through Bucky's hair. "It's alright," he said. "Maybe next time we will find someone who will have nicer things to say."

---

Bucky checked the clock and brushed some wood shavings off of his pants. "Let's go home. I need a shower and I'm tired. And Clint is going out with some girl tonight anyway so I should get out of his place."

---

Steve sighed and took Bucky by the hand. He kissed it and then looked at the flowers. "Think we should let him have those since he probably forgot to leave time to get something nice for her?" he asked. "I'll get you more on the way back."

---

Bucky laughed and pulled his shirt back on. "Might be a good idea. He probably did forget." He snatched the flowers and led Steve back up the stairs to Clint's kitchen where he was sitting looking nice and put together reading a book and drinking a beer.

---

Steve signed at Clint to wish him luck and headed out the door just as Clint's date went to knock on it, causing her to hit her knuckles on his chest. It was Natasha. Steve stared down at her in surprise. "Nat? The hell are you doing here?"

---

Natasha cleared her throat, "Hey, Steve, Bucky. Where are you hiding Clint?"

Just then, Clint popped into the doorway by Steve and ushered Natasha in. He looked between Steve and Bucky's confused faces and said, "Oh, uh, after you two had your wedding, we got to talking and… we've sort of been talking for a few months now."

---

Steve's jaw dropped. "You didn't tell me? But we tell each other everything," he complained. But it wasn't true. Steve told Natasha everything but not the other way around. He looked over at Clint and then back at Natasha. "Are you going to get married, too?"

---

"Okay, Steve!" Bucky said quickly and gripped his shoulder. "Let's go home, yeah?" Clint gave Bucky a hug and told him that he hoped his evening had gotten better. And Bucky shook Natasha's hand before starting to drag his husband away before he could start planning the reception for Clint and Natasha's wedding.

---

"What? We got married after a few months. And they're not getting any younger," Steve answered with a casual shrug. He walked out of the house with Bucky and gave him an apologetic smile. "Sorry. I'm just happy for them."

---

"It's okay, Baby," Bucky said with a chuckle and nudged Steve. "Let's be happy for them at home. From what Clint told me about the before unnamed woman he was seeing, he's head over heels for her but she might be holding back a little bit. Clint jumps in hard when he falls in love. He probably already wants to marry her but is too scared to bring it up."

---

"Sounds like someone I know," Steve said. "I knew practically a week after meeting you that I wanted to marry you." Steve smiled lovingly at him. They walked on in silence for a bit until they got close to their building and Steve said, "You're going to be such a good dad, Buck. And you do a great job with your sisters."

---

"I just want to know that we will be okay," Bucky answered and opened the door to their apartment building. "I want to know that we will be able to work together and compromise and our kids will be fine."

---

"We're working together now, aren't we?" Steve asked softly. "I respect you as an authority figure to your sisters just like I will for our kid." Sarah already put the girls to bed by this point, so she gave them a wave from her spot on the couch.

---

Bucky nodded and slipped his shoes off quietly. He thanked Sarah for coming to be with Becca and for staying while Steve was out looking for him. "I'm going to go hop in the shower," Bucky said and left Steve to say goodbye to his mother before coming to their room. He was glad Steve came to talk to with him but he was still feeling a little lousy about the whole thing and he figured he would for a while.
On the day they planned on going out for a night on the town, Steve stopped to pick up some clothes he normally wouldn't wear. He found a tank top that was just a tad too small and wore it with slacks and suspenders, making him look a little over-the-top. "Will this work, Buck?" he asked as he looked at himself in the mirror.

---

Bucky glanced up at Steve and had to do a double-take. He blushed and swallowed the lump in his throat. "My god," he said simply. He was still standing naked by the closet trying to find what he should wear and he willed his dick to not get distracted by the taut pull of the tank top over Steve's chest and the way that the suspenders hiked up his pants just enough so he could kind of see Steve's balls pressing into the fabric.

---

"Is it too gay?" Steve asked. "I want to fit in. I've never done this before and I don't want to seem like a narc. Or that I'm trying too hard, you know? I kind of feel like I'm not gay enough cause I haven't been to one of these things before."

---

Bucky laughed and tugged his best jeans from his side of the closet and tossed them on the bed. "You'll be fine. And you look really fucking good. It's not like you're going undercover or something. This isn't Cruising and you're not Pacino. Although, you are both named 'Steve'." Eventually, he settled on wearing a dark black A-shirt that he had cut long ago so it would land just about an inch or so above his bellybutton. He then threw on his leather jacket over top for good measure and he was ready to go.

---

Steve stared at the exposed skin of Bucky's belly and he reached out to touch it. "God, there are going to be men all over you." Steve wasn't used to seeing people hit on Bucky since they really only went out just the two of them to mostly straight spaces. He was a little worried about it actually. "I should put a jacket over this so we don't get harassed on our way there, right?" he asked and gestured to his own outfit.

---

"If you want to throw on a jacket you can," Bucky said and searched around for his good boots that he liked to dance in. "I don't think we will have trouble. I usually don't. It's just a quick train down there and then everyone for a five-block radius of the club is queer."

---

Steve put on a jacket anyway because he was a little self-conscious. He said goodbye to the girls and headed out with Bucky. "Are the people nice there?" Steve asked. "Or is it mostly just a place to pick up other gay guys?"

---

"Most of the guys are nice," Bucky said. "It's like any other club or bar. There are always certain assholes. I haven't been there in so long it'll be nice seeing some of the regulars I haven't seen in about a year. Lord knows Monty will be there and you will love him. He's really short and tiny and always pretty energetic ever since he quit heroin."

---

Steve nodded. "It'll be nice getting to hold your hand in public and not have to feel worried," Steve said. "I've actually been looking forward to this all week," he admitted.

---

"Have you?" Bucky split a grin and met Steve's eye. "I was sort of concerned you were just doing this because I wanted to do it." They made their way to the train and sat down in a fairly empty car with only a few elderly women and a family of five.

---

"Well, I got to admit that I'm not sure if I'll want to go back or not. But it's something I have to try and see whether or not I like it. I hope I will," Steve chattered. He gave one of the kids a wave when he saw that the youngest was staring at him curiously.

---

Bucky smiled and sat contentedly for the rest of the ride to Park Slope. He directed Steve through the streets to Disco Dandy's and held open the door for him. The music was blaring loudly and there were already tons of guys even though it was pretty early in the night for the usual rush.

---

Steve was a bit shocked at the noise but any club would be like this. He took his jacket off and slung an arm around Bucky's waist. "Shall I buy you a drink, Handsome? Maybe it'll help me get lucky tonight."

---

Bucky smiled and kissed Steve. He was a bit surprised at the offer considering he promised Steve that he didn't want to come here just to drink. Bucky would just listen to Steve when he said it was time to stop. "Sure, Baby, I don't mind what it is. Something mixed." He watched Steve walk away and noticed a few other guys doing the same.

There was a loud squeal and then Bucky was being jumped on from behind. He fumbled for a second then held the body up. "Bucky Barnes is back, Baby!" Monty shouted from his perch on Bucky's back. "Where the fuck have you been for so long?"

---

Steve wanted Bucky to be sober but one drink wasn't going to be a big deal. Steve ordered one for himself also so Bucky wouldn't be drinking alone. When he came back with the drinks in hand, he had a bewildered look when a man jumped on Bucky's back. "Hey, who are you? What're you doing?" he asked, not upset but certainly taken aback that someone was on his husband.

---

Bucky had the biggest smile on his face as he held up Monty. "Steve, this is Monty!" he said excitedly and Monty held out his hand to Steve. Bucky gently slid the man from his back and he sort of forgot just how short he was. Another guy came up then and pat Bucky on the back and said something about welcoming home the prodigal son before walking off again.

---

"Oh, uh, alright. Hell of an entrance you made there," Steve teased lightly. "Bucky had nothing but nice things to say about you." He handed Bucky his drink. "I'm Steve, Bucky's husband." He knew Bucky wouldn’t flirt or cheat but the possessive side of him wanted people to know that Bucky was off the table.

---

Monty's face lit up curiously, "Ooh, husband? That's interesting. Did you go to like a different country to be married or something?"

Before Steve could answer, a big guy who Bucky recognized as Monty's old boyfriend Evan, came over and picked Monty up, excused the both of them, and went to go dance with him. “They must have gotten back together,” Bucky murmured.

A few other people came up to Bucky every so often and welcomed him back. Most of them he didn't remember the names of but he knew their faces. Across the dance floor, Bucky noticed a man standing still with arms crossed, staring at him intently. It was an ex-boyfriend of his named Jared. Bucky averted his eyes quickly and dragged Steve out to dance.

---

Steve followed and kissed Bucky's cheek and couldn't help but smile because he could do that here. Steve was a bit awkward on the dance floor since he really only knew ballroom dancing but he tried his best. "Everyone here seems nice," he said as he put his hands on Bucky's hips.

---

"It feels pretty good coming back and seeing all the guys again. Monty is basically everyone's best friend. I missed him." Bucky slipped his hands into Steve's back pockets and pulled him close against him before kissing Steve long and slow and deep. "You enjoying yourself?"

---

Steve whined and couldn't help but grind up against Bucky just a little bit. "I like things so far. You know, we could hang out with some of the guys here if you wanted. They're not banned from the house or anything. Except that guy. He's kind of giving you a glare. You owe him money?" Steve joked, nodding at Bucky's ex.

---

Bucky laughed shyly and said under his breath, "No, I used to date him. That's Jared. We went out for a few months about a year and a half ago." He looked around then and assessed the crowd of guys around him. He had slept with roughly a third of the men in the club and dated probably four of them. But Jared seemed to be the only one paying him any mind now that he was back. He was also the only one who didn't seem to care that he clearly came with Steve.

---

"You dated other men before me? Now I feel like second place," Steve joked and kissed the tip of Bucky's nose. "Do you think we should talk to him? Clear the air? It seems like he's got something to
"No!" Bucky said quickly. "Unless he comes up to us, let's leave it." He turned Steve so he couldn't see Jared anymore. He leaned into him to show him that none of these other guys mattered because he was going home with Steve at the end of the night.

Monty and Evan made their way over to dance with them and Monty bounced a little and said, "Evan, honey, this here is Steve. He's Bucky's man. Isn't he nice? Much better specimen than some of the trash Bucky used to go with." Evan was a severely tall fellow and wasn't very talkative - more reserved and action-oriented. He was basically the opposite of Monty and he was perfect for him.

Steve nosed at Bucky's neck and kissed him lovingly before turning to give the two other men a friendly wave. "So I've heard," Steve said. "But I'm sure Bucky had good taste before me and must have found some good guys around here." He nuded Bucky lightly. "So how long have you two been together?"

"Well," Monty started and crowded Steve, still clutching onto Evan's hand. "We dated a few years back and then split because I'm stupid and thought I wasn't good enough for Evan. Then I crawled my way back to him and turns out he hadn't seen anyone else since me cause he was waiting and hoping I'd change my mind."

Steve got a bit flustered when Monty crowded him but he couldn't help but smile at the story and how fast of a talker Monty was. "That's so romantic," he said. He looked back at Bucky and said, "That's not fair. They've got a cuter story than we do."

"No way," Bucky sneered, "You tell them our story, I have to pee." He gave Steve one more kiss for good measure and then shimmied his way through the crowd towards the bathroom. He didn't realize that Jared was watching him as he went and he didn't notice Jared slip in right behind him either.

Steve happily started to recount the story about how they met. Monty gushed about how adorable it was and tried to convince Evan that it was cuter than it actually was. Steve appreciated the thought, though. He was about to talk some more with them but he saw Jared following Bucky and he knew that was probably bad news.

The second the door shut behind them, Jared rounded on Bucky and pushed him firmly against the wall. "You miss me, Bucky?" he asked and kept his leg pinned to Bucky's crotch so he couldn't go anywhere. He held one of Bucky's arms back on the wall and used his other hand to crawl across the exposed skin of Bucky's stomach and gently graze over his abs. "You haven't been around for so long." Bucky squirmed and tried to get away but Jared was stronger than him and he kept talking. "Come on, Baby, leave that dumb blonde who can't dance and come back to my place. We had fun together. I can tell you miss it. You miss me. I've got some poppers you can sniff and help get that tight ass open for my thick cock. I know you have trouble with it and it’s definitely been a while.” Before Bucky could say anything back or wriggle out from Jared’s grasp, his lips were slotted between Jared's and Jared's hand was holding his neck a little too tightly.

---

Steve stepped into the bathroom to make sure everything was okay but his stomach dropped when he saw what was going on. "Hey!" he shouted, rushing over. "Get your hands off him!" Steve grabbed Jared by the shoulder and tore him off Bucky to throw him aside.

---

Bucky gasped for air once Jared's grip on his neck was gone. He furiously wiped at his lips to get the taste and saliva off of him. "Steve!" Bucky choked, "I didn't- It wasn't me. He kissed me. I didn't even know he was in here." He spoke quickly and desperately so Steve wouldn't think for even a second that Bucky had slipped off to the bathroom to meet Jared. "Fuck him up, Steve!" he yelled and rubbed at his sore neck and arm.

---

Steve was furious but in the back of his head, he could hear Becca's disapproval if he knocked him around. But this bastard wasn't allowed to get away with this. "You're under arrest," Steve said, taking his officer’s tone. He slammed Jared against the wall and pulled out his handcuffs from his back pocket to cuff him. "For sexual assault."

---

"Jesus, Steve!" Bucky's eyes went wide and he gripped his husband's shoulder. "You brought those with you?" He probably always kept his handcuffs and badge on him at all times. "Steve, just," Bucky pulled at his arm. "Let him go. Punch him in the face or something and then let's go home."

---

Steve didn't want to admit that he brought it in case of a jealous ex. He didn't carry handcuffs twenty-four-seven but he was a little anxious about tonight. Steve turned on Bucky with fire in his eyes. "He had you by the neck," he hissed. "He was assaulting you!"

---

"I know," Bucky said, "but I don't want to go to the station in Park Slope and have to explain all that happened. Just take him to Carl the bouncer and have him thrown out." He wouldn't be able to stop Steve if he decided that he was taking him in, but Bucky could try. He just felt so ashamed and embarrassed. Nothing that Jared did was anything he hadn't done to Bucky before. But they were dating back then and now they weren't and Bucky didn't say he could touch him.

---

Steve glared, unhappy, but he backed down. He made sure Jared could see Steve flush the handcuff key down the toilet before he dragged him out to the bouncer. He returned back to the bathroom and put his hands on Bucky's face. "Are you okay, Baby?"

---

Bucky was leaning against the sink counter and staring at the marks on his arm from Jared's rough clasp. "Mhmm," he mumbled and threw his arms around Steve. "I'm so sorry. I swear I didn't know he was coming in here. I would have had you come with me. I didn't start it. He just jumped me and told me to come back to him."

---

Steve gently rubbed a hand up and down Bucky's back. "I know, Baby," he said. "I know you'd never cheat on me. Not in the slightest." He kissed his cheek. "It scared me seeing you like that. Christ, you dated that bastard? Did he do that to you when you were together?"

---

Bucky looked away and swallowed the lump in his throat. "Kind of," he admitted and glanced up at Steve nervously. "Usually it was when I was drunk and he wanted to have sex. He was always really rough." He shook his head and added, "He told me to leave you and that he could tell I missed him."

---

"Buck," Steve said, giving him a squeeze. "I'm so sorry you had to go through that. And I'm sorry he did that again to you." He looked him in the eyes. "Sweetheart, you don't deserve that. You never did. And you don't miss him, Bucky, I know you don't."

---

"I don't miss him," Bucky confirmed and kissed Steve. "I have you. And I didn't miss him after I left him and before I met you. I would never get back with him." Bucky pushed himself off the counter and hugged Steve close one more time.

Monty came in then and said gently, "Bucky, Honey, he's gone. Carl took care of it. I slipped him some extra cash to rough him up a bit for you. Come back out and dance for a while. I'll buy you both a drink."

---

Steve looked over at Monty. "That's really sweet of you, but I think we need water instead of booze right now," he said. "You can tell me all about what Jared's teeth look like when they're knocked out on the pavement."

---

Monty laughed and grabbed both their hands to pull them back out of the bathroom. Evan was standing protectively by the door and he gave Bucky a once over when he saw him to make sure he was okay. Monty took the two of them upstairs to one of the sets of couches on the balcony while Evan went to get water bottles for them both. "Did he pull that same shit with you that he did when you dumped him?" Monty asked Bucky and gave Steve a reassuring pat on the shoulder.

"More or less," Bucky nodded. "That was worse than this time."

---

Steve frowned when he heard how Jared treated Bucky. "I can't believe there are so many guys out there like that. I see it enough in my line of work. I hate seeing it happen to people I love even more." He crossed his arms. "He should be locked up."
Bucky leaned into Steve and pulled his arm up so Steve was wrapping his arms around Bucky's shoulders. "Let's just forget it," Bucky said and nuzzled Steve's neck. "Carl is the type of guy that if you get kicked out once then you aren't coming back so we won't be seeing Jared again."

Monty nodded and moved over for Evan to sit. "And me and Bucky have both slept with the owner of this place and he likes us best so if we tell him what happened then there's no way Jared’s back in." Bucky shot Monty a pleading look to not bring up any more men he had slept with around here.

---

"Shit, then that means I got to sleep with him so I can get anything I want too," Steve said with a chuckle. He was trying to be light-hearted for Bucky’s sake. "This place seems really nice. I'm glad Bucky brought me here." He leaned his head on Bucky's shoulder. "I wish there were more places like this."

---

Bucky absently slipped his fingers through Steve's hair and smiled down at him. "You want to tell Monty and Evan what we are doing with Father Frank and the shelter? It won’t be in Park Slope but it is something."

---

"Oh, right. Bucky and I are founding a shelter," Steve said. "There's a priest at this gay-friendly church who says we can build a place in his lot to provide food and shelter to people like us when they need to get away from where they live."

---

Monty raised his eyebrows. "Like a gay safe house?"

Bucky nodded. "Basically, yeah. The main reason this all came up was because Steve was injured just for being out at work and we want people to have somewhere to go when they aren't safe at home or their jobs or something."

---

"And what if there's some kid who's kicked out by his parents? Our apartment is too small to house people but they can go to the shelter, at least," Steve said. Evan looked like he approved of the idea even though he didn't say anything out loud.

---

"That's adorable." Monty nodded at Steve, "Bucky, he's so cute!" he whined with a smile. "I love that idea. And Evan and I can help out sometime if you like. That would have been the perfect place for us a couple months ago. We took a trip in Manhattan and had to cut it short because of some assholes at a bar."

---

Steve's sobered up and gave the two of them a sad look. He hated the thought that anyone would be anything but kind to these two. "So, what happened at the bar?" he asked.

---
"Just a couple big dudes didn't like how I was dressed and how I talked," Monty said and looked to Evan. "I mean, you all might be able to blend in with the straight people but I stick out. And they, uh, made some colorful threats."

Evan nodded and grabbed Monty's hand. He quietly said, "Had to break a few noses, didn't I?"

---

"I'm so sorry," Steve said with a frown. "Listen, this isn't a 'get out of jail free' card but I'm a police officer. If you ever get into any trouble, you call me, okay?" Steve could at least make sure they weren't mistreated for being gay.

---

Monty smiled and giggled, "Oh, Sweetheart, the whole club knows you're a cop now. I don't think a soul in this place didn't hear what just happened, what with you handcuffing a regular and sending him out to deal with Carl on his own."

---

Steve made a face. "Well, I did the right thing. That bastard had his hands all over Bucky - who wanted to be left alone. He's lucky I didn't clock him, myself." He turned to Bucky and said, "I would have done it if I didn't have to answer to Becca. Also, Father Frank would disapprove."

---

"Listen, Honey," Monty said and leaned forward, "Not many people here like Jared. And I think you should've pummeled him but that's just me."

Bucky grinned at Monty and leaned into Steve. "Steve's right, though, my sister would have destroyed him if she found out." He thought about what Steve had told him of how Becca reacted when he beat up Donnie. That felt like years ago. Bucky turned to Steve again. "You thinking it's time to go home? I'd say we should dance some more but my balls kind of hurt. Jared really got his knee up there."

---

Steve wrapped an arm around Bucky and whispered in his ear, "I'll kiss them better for you. How's that?" He stood up and gave both Evan and Monty a hug. "It was nice to meet you two. Maybe we can do this another time, yeah?"

---

Bucky said goodbye and had to stand on tiptoes to hug Evan and he wondered how Monty even kissed him. Evan probably picked him up to do it. Once they were back on the train and no one was in their car, Bucky held Steve's face in his hands and kissed him slowly. "Thanks for saving me from him, Baby."

---

Steve returned the kiss and played with Bucky's hair affectionately. "You don't have to thank me. That's what I'm supposed to do. Your husband will always protect you."
"Still, though," Bucky said, "If you wouldn't have been looking out for me and didn't see him follow me in there then things could have gotten a lot worse." Bucky leaned against Steve and held his hand tight. "I'm sorry it happened and I'm sorry you had to deal with it and I'm sorry I couldn't stop him from kissing me."

---

"Baby, it's not your fault. You don't have to be sorry for anything." Steve brought Bucky's hand to his lips. "And you don't have to ever worry about me doubting that you'll remain loyal to me. I know you love me too much to do that."

---

"I do love you. So fucking much," Bucky said and hurriedly kissed Steve again. Once they got back home, they slipped into the apartment quietly and Bucky went straight to get some cold water for them both. "You think the girls are both still awake since we weren't here to tell them to sleep?" Bucky whispered and handed Steve a glass of water.

---

"Becca is probably asleep and Lilly is probably organizing her baseball cards because she thinks she can get away with it this late." Steve sipped at the water. "You want to make a bet whether I'm right or not?"

---

"Lilly organized those cards not long ago, though," Bucky said and glanced towards the hallway curiously. "Alright, what are we betting with? I'll take you on, Steve." He placed his water down on the counter and shucked off his leather jacket because he was a little too hot in it tonight.

---

"She re-organizes them every week depending on if she wants them by team, last name, or position," Steve said. "So I bet you a back rub with a happy ending that I'm right."

---

"Oh, come on," Bucky scoffed and crossed his arms. "Make it a bit more fun than that. We do massages with 'happy endings' all the time." He moved towards Steve and pressed against him. "Come on, Baby."

---

"Well, maybe I want to have a massage and happy ending and don't want anything too fun," Steve chided. "What did you have in mind, huh? What fun stuff do you want?"

---

"Well," Bucky looked away with nervous eyes. "I was shoved around a bit tonight by an ex and don't feel so great about myself or the things I've done and I want you to mark me up and claim me and show that I'm yours and I'll never have to go be stuck with someone like Jared again." He looked up at Steve finally. "I mean, I know we will be together forever but you know how I can get and I'm just feeling sort of... I don't know."
Steve looked over at Bucky and considered for a moment to keep up the bet. But instead, he grabbed Bucky's ass and then picked him up. He carried him into the bedroom and closed the door with his foot before pinning him down to the bed and sucking a dark mark onto his neck. "Mine," he rumbled low, moving his hand down to grope between Bucky's legs.

---

Bucky breathed in sharply and held onto Steve very tightly. "I love you." His voice broke and he felt the prickly sensation in the tip of his nose that warned that he might start crying. "I love you," he repeated and slipped the suspenders off Steve's shoulders. "I need you."

---

Steve pulled Bucky's pants down quickly and took his shirt off right after. "You're all mine, Bucky Barnes," he purred in his ear. "I'm always going to take care of every need you'll ever have." Steve grabbed the lube from the nightstand and started to slick up his fingers. "Nod your head so I know you know that."

---

Bucky nodded eagerly and held his bottom lip in an attempt to stop himself from tearing up. He sniffled and moved his hands up to lay crossed above his head. He watched Steve warm up the lube on his fingers and he waited patiently for him to start opening him up.

---

Steve eased two fingers inside of Bucky at once. He knew his husband was getting emotional, so he kissed him deeply as he worked his fingers in and out of him. "I got you, Handsome. Gonna make you feel so good."

---

Bucky whimpered slightly in response and nodded again. He reached down to touch where Steve's fingers were sliding in and out of him and he used his other hand to ball into Steve's shirt and tug, indicating that he wanted it off. "Tell me you love me," he whispered and locked eyes with Steve.

---

Steve paused so he could remove his own shirt. "I love you so much, I can barely breathe sometimes. I love waking up every morning with you in my arms. I love making love every night." He worked his own pants off.

---

Once Steve's pants were off, Bucky was on him. He sat up quickly and gripped Steve's hips and swallowed down his cock. He hummed around it and worked his tongue over the slit repeatedly. Bucky made sure to spread his legs and lean back well enough so Steve could still get to his ass to finger him as best as he could in this position. Bucky guided Steve's hand back to his hole and pressed his fingers against it so he would get the idea.

---

"Fuck!" Steve swore, arching his back when Bucky went down on him. His face flushed and it only took a moment before he took the hint. He opened Bucky up with three fingers now. "Take all of my cock, Baby."
Bucky obediently took him deeper and bobbed his head with his tongue pressed against the vein on the underside. Steve couldn't really get into Bucky's ass very much and it was more of a shallow thrust of fingers but it was doing the job well enough. After a minute or so, Bucky pulled off, wiped his mouth, and looked up at Steve with big expectant eyes. He carefully laid back on the bed and pulled his knees up so he was showing off his wet hole. "Fuck me.”

There was no way Steve could hold back when Bucky presented himself like that. Steve covered Bucky entirely with his body and pushed in so he could fuck him, going balls deep before pulling out and doing it again.

Bucky grimaced slightly at the initial thrust, having not been patient enough to let Steve open him up all the way. It only burned for a second and the stretch felt really nice after that. He wrapped his arms and legs around his husband and starting quietly singing into his ear as he held on tight and felt Steve's cock pull in and out of him.

Steve rocked easily in and out of Bucky’s ass, feeling his heart swell with love for him as the man sang in his ear. "You feel so good, Buck. Let me hear your sweet voice some more.”

"Okay,” Bucky whispered and panted slightly. He thought for a moment for a good song that Steve probably knew. He settled on "Wild Horses" from The Rolling Stones because he was pretty sure that Steve liked that one. He changed it up a bit as he sang. It sounded a little different than the original but Bucky liked his version better because it was all about him and Steve.

Steve reached between them to stroke Bucky's dick with every thrust and he let out soft, desperate noises. He loved it when Bucky sang to him like this. They stayed like that for a few minutes, just making love and breathing each other in. "I'm so close, Baby. Gonna come deep in your tight ass cause you're mine. Mine alone.”

"Do it,” Bucky gasped and pulled Steve down for a quick, hot, sloppy kiss. "Show them all I'm yours and no one can touch me like that anymore.” Bucky wondered how crazy it was that he sort of wished Jared could see Steve fucking him right now. He fantasized about Steve cuffing Jared to something in the bathroom at the club and then taking Bucky right there. Thinking about all that probably wasn't a healthy way to deal with what happened, though, and Bucky knew it. He just felt so gross and dirty after what happened at the club.

Steve stared Bucky down, looking him in the eye and kissing him senseless as he finally came. Steve's thrusts became erratic until he stilled, feeling sated and happy that he was able to give Bucky something that made him feel safe and complete.
Bucky smiled a relieved quick wisp of a smile as if he was worried that he wouldn't be enough to make Steve come even though he had done it so many times before. "I love you," he said again and stroked his dick faster until he was shooting his own load unto his stomach. "Don't pull out, yet. Just lay on me."

Steve saw the relieved look on Bucky's face and drew him in for a kiss. "You are so beautiful. The sex is always going to be amazing, even when we are wrinkly and old. You always know how to make me happy, Bucky."

Bucky pulled Steve down on top of him, needing to feel his weight protectively over him. "Why do I get more and more needy for your touch after sex?" he asked and nuzzled his nose into Steve's skin. "Every time we finish, I need to hold you or be held and it's just getting more desperate as time goes on."

"It's because having sex connects us. We're soul mates, so we bare ourselves to each other when we make love," Steve answered. "It's a beautiful thing, Bucky. I adore it."

Bucky loved it too. And he did agree with Steve, but he felt it was probably also because of all the people who left him right after they had finished with him. Bucky's brain was getting overexcited that Steve wasn't like all those others. His brain and body recognized that Steve would stay and hold him and then Bucky's body demanded to be held.

"Even if I'm angry at you, even if you did something to really piss me off... I'd hold you and comfort you if you wanted to be held. Cause you deserve having someone who takes care of you. Got it, Buck?" Steve reassured.

"I got it." Bucky nodded. "You can pull out now. Think we should shower and then go to sleep. I'm pretty sure I will need to pick up some supplies tomorrow for Becca's birthday in a few days. My girl is going to be fifteen, Steve. Fifteen!"

Steve pulled out and used a tissue to clean them both up. "Soon she's going to be applying for jobs and looking at colleges," Steve said. "She may be turning fifteen but she's practically thirty already."

Bucky threw his hands to his face and whined, "Oh my god, Steve. What if she acts like me at fifteen? Fuck..." He worriedly looked to his husband, "She's not going to end up like me, right? She's so much brighter and more sensible than I was."
"Becca gets angry if you tie your shoelaces wrong. You think she's going to go chasing after dumb college boys?" Steve asked and kissed Bucky's forehead. "She's not you. And even if she is exactly like you, she's still a good person."

Bucky sighed and glared at nothing, "Is it my fault that no one taught me to tie my shoes until the fourth grade? It's hard to do right, Steve." He sat up slowly and scratched his chest. They both needed to shower and get the come and club smell off of them. And Bucky knew neither of them would feel like getting up any earlier than usual to do it in the morning.
On Becca's birthday, Steve took off early from work so he could decorate the apartment with the things Bucky had picked out a few days earlier. A little stack of presents awaited her on the kitchen table with a book-shaped cake right next to it. "You think this is too much?" Steve asked.

---

Bucky adjusted Steve's collar and then picked up Raphael before he could paw at the cake. "No, I think she will like it." He smiled and grabbed Steve's hand. "The girls and your mom should be back from the movie anytime now. Remember, Lilly is probably in a bit of shitty mood."

---

"Why is Lilly in a shitty mood? She's going to get a cool party for her birthday when it comes," Steve said. "Or does this have to do with school or sports?" He made sure the pile of gifts was perfect for the third time.

---

"Well, she doesn't like other people's birthdays because she doesn't get a present. But she doesn't like Becca's birthday in particular because Becca has the same birth month as our mom and Lilly doesn't," Bucky said and plopped the cat on the couch just to watch him scamper back over and onto the table with the cake.

---

Steve huffed when the cat tried to get at the cake again. He picked the little guy up and kissed the top of his head. "Did she always have an issue with Becca having been born in the same month as your mom?"

---

"Yes, but it wasn't really that bad until they died," Bucky answered and picked up a strawberry from the bowl. "She wouldn't care if all of us shared a birth month with one of our parents and she wouldn't care if none of us did but since only one of us does then she thinks it's unfair. Which, of course, Becs didn't choose to be born in May."

---

"That's a bit shitty," Steve said. "Becca shouldn't have to feel bad over something she can't help." He got out a cat treat and fed it to Raphael so he wouldn't go after the cake so much then he set him down. "How long until the girls get here?"

---

"Anytime now, I would think." Bucky curled his arms around Steve and kissed his neck. "And you know Lilly, she isn't always very rational and isn't always the nicest about what she wants. But don't worry about Becca, she stopped giving a fuck what Lilly thought about her birthday years ago."

---

Steve smiled and nuzzled his husband affectionately. "Fair enough." He had his hand halfway down to Bucky's ass when the girls came through the door. "Becca!" he said brightly. "Happy birthday!"

"Happy birthday, Becs!" Bucky called and picked up his sister in a hug until she protested and demanded to be put down. "How was the movie with Miss Sarah? Was it a good way to spend your birthday?"

Lilly had a grumpy face on and she tried not looking at the cake - that did not have her name on it - on the table. She also glanced at Becca's stack of presents and when she found that there was at least two less than Lilly's own birthday the year before, she quirked a satisfied grin.

Becca smoothed her clothes down and gave Bucky a mildly annoyed look for picking her up. "It was nice. Miss Sarah got us popcorn refills, too. I've eaten so much today, I barely have room for cake." She saw Steve's disappointed look and quickly added, "but I will have room soon!"

"Maybe after you open presents then you will be ready for cake, huh?" Bucky offered and pulled out a chair at the table for Becca to sit down so she could start unwrapping. The rest of them followed suit and sat down and Bucky slipped in next to Steve and held his hand to whisper, "Becca's first birthday with you here. Are you happy about that?"

Steve gave Bucky a pleased look. "I'm looking forward to many more birthdays together," he said. "It's so great to have a big family like this." Steve grinned like an idiot. "I can't wait to see what my first birthday with you is like."

"You don't have to wait very long, it's coming up soon, Baby." Bucky leaned his head on Steve's shoulders and watched Becca carefully ease the wrapping paper from her first gift. Bucky and Steve had gotten her several books and a fancy new notebook. Also, a nice pair of shoes she had been eyeing at the store the other day.

Becca was in pretty good spirits and gave both of them a hug once she was finished opening her gifts. "Lilly, look! These are the shoes I've wanted forever!" She was being a bit annoying on purpose because she was looking to get on her sister's nerves.

Lilly rolled her eyes, slumped back in her chair, and eyed the cake. "Can we have some cake now?" she asked with an irritable pout and crossed arms.

"Well, there is one more present coming with Clint and he should be on his way," Bucky said and ran his hand down Lilly's hair. Bucky had made a deal with Clint to do him a few favors in exchange for one of Clint's extra electronic keyboard pianos he had laying around at home.
Lilly huffed and pouted some more while Becca gave her an obnoxious smirk. It was rare she was this petty but Lilly had been pretty annoying all day and now was payback time. Clint showed up with a big box in his arms before world war three erupted in their home. "Someone take this from me," he grunted. "It was a bitch to carry up the stairs."

---

Bucky jumped up to help him bring it inside and he plopped it in the living room. "Alright, Becs, this is the last one. Then we can have cake. And Clint can have cake." Bucky nodded to him.

"Alright, good, because it wouldn't be fair to let me see the cake and not give it to me," Clint said and Lilly nodded her head in agreement.

---

Becca quickly opened it up and she gasped loudly when she saw what was inside. She looked for a moment like she was going to jump up and down but she quickly cooled down and settled for a hug. "Thank you, Bucky!"

---

"You're welcome, Becca," Bucky said. "Thank Steve and Clint too. Especially Clint since he dragged it all the way from his place." Becca nodded and gave each of them a hug in turn as Bucky started lighting the candles on her cake.

---

Both other men got a hug and Steve couldn't stop grinning because it was such a rare thing to get love from Becca. After they sung happy birthday, Steve said a little prayer and served cake. "So did you do anything at school with your study buddies for your birthday?"

---

"Micah had a birthday just before summer started so we sort of celebrated both our birthdays at once since we weren't going to be in class for mine." Becca ate her cake happily and glanced over at Lilly who was halfway through her piece and staring at the cake like she wanted more already.

---

Steve put an arm around Bucky's shoulder and pulled him in for a quick kiss. "That's cool," he said to Becca. "Did you guys get each other books or something?" he asked as he started to cut another piece of cake for Lilly.

---

"No, we didn't give each other anything." Becca shrugged. "We just said 'happy birthday', shared some snacks, and then studied for our last exams."

"You're so boring," Lilly said quietly and took another bite of cake.

---

"She's also going to get to go to college on scholarship cause she's boring," Steve defended Becca gently to Lilly. "How did studying for your exams go, Lil? Did you pass all your classes?"
"Yes," Lilly shot back and then stabbed at her cake before adding, "mostly."

Bucky sighed and looked to Steve, "She passed most of them but she has to have a math and science tutor starting in the fall for next year so she doesn't fall behind too much."

---

"Well, why not in the summer? You'll be less overwhelmed than if you had extra class time in the fall," Steve suggested. "I could find some tutor center with a cute boy or girl as your tutor and you can impress them."

---

"Impress them with what? Her inability to spell basic English words?" Becca asked and snorted a laugh at her sister.

"I passed my English exam!" Lilly corrected and shot Bucky a look to back her up. Bucky just closed his eyes tight and rubbed his face. Every damn year they had to fight on Becca's birthday.

Clint came to the rescue before it could escalate. "Becca, show me where you want your keyboard set up and I'll put it together for you."

---

Steve reached out to give the end of Becca's hair a light tug to get her to stop instigating so much. She was able to put it aside when she was allowed the distraction of setting her keyboard up.

"She can be such a bitch sometimes," Lilly complained. "And I'm allowed to use that word cause I'm a girl."

---

Bucky bit his lip and refused to look at either Steve or Sarah. Sarah was always uncomfortable when any of his family swore and Steve had made it abundantly clear not long ago how he felt about kids swearing. "How about we don't call our sister that?" Bucky asked Lilly and pet her hair. "She's our family and we wouldn't like it if she called us names."

---

Steve had to use a great deal of self-control to not give Bucky an 'I told you so' look at Lilly's swearing. "She calls me names all the time," Lilly answered back. "Calls me 'stupid' all the time. Says I'll never graduate junior high let alone high school. Why can't I get angry?"

---

"Angry is fine," Bucky said and rested his arm on the back of Lilly's chair. "But calling her a bitch isn't so nice. Remember a while back when she was yelling at me and said all sorts of mean shit and called me names? You know what day I'm talking about. And it really hurt but I didn't call her names back because that doesn't solve anything."

Lilly leaned into Bucky and said quietly, "That the day she wished you were gone instead of Mom and Dad?"

Bucky adjusted uncomfortably and cleared his throat, not looking up. "Yeah, that's the day."
Both Steve and Sarah's head snapped over at Bucky. Steve immediately reached out to hold Bucky's hand. "Are you kidding me? She said that?" Steve looked like he had half the mind to stomp in and scold Becca even though it had happened ages ago.

---

"Yeah." Bucky nodded and looked at the table. "We all thought it at one point or another, just that Becca was so angry that day that she decided she would finally say it. I don't remember what started the fight, but I'm pretty sure she was angry with me for a good reason."

---

Steve frowned. "That doesn't matter. It's wrong to say such a thing. It's wrong to wish your own brother was dead." His bottom lip trembled just a bit because he couldn't imagine what Bucky must've felt to hear something like that said to him especially from his own family.

---

Bucky sighed and got up to give Steve a tight hug. "Baby, you're more upset about this than you should be. More upset than I am. It's Becca. You know how she can be. And it was a while ago."

Clint and Becca appeared back into the kitchen then and Becca curiously asked, "What can I be like?"

---

Steve rounded on Becca and looked like he was ready to give her a piece of his mind but he bit his tongue and shook his head. "Nothing," he said tensely. "Is your keyboard all set up?"

---

Becca nodded with a confused look on her face. "Yeah, Clint got it all together." She glanced over at Bucky and Bucky simply gave her a look that said if she really wanted to know then he would explain it later.

---

Clint looked the most confused out of all of them but gave them all a little wave goodbye. "Nat is coming over later so I got to clean my house. See you all later."

---

Bucky welcomed the change of topic and gave Clint a hug. "Thanks again for coming over with the present. And I hope you have a good time with Natasha." After Clint left, Bucky started cleaning up the table as Becca took the rest of her presents to her room and Lilly stole another piece of cake even though Bucky had just told her she couldn't have another.

---

Steve casually pulled the plate from Lilly's hand. "Your brother said 'no'." Lilly shot him a glare that had Sarah laughing a little as she said her goodbyes and saw herself out. After his mother was gone and Lilly was sulking in her room, Steve helped Bucky finish clean up and he kissed his cheek. "You did a good job for her birthday, Baby. She loves that keyboard."
"I know," Bucky sighed and started pulling Steve to their bedroom. "And this year was a lot less of a fight between the girls than last year. There was a frosting incident that ended in Becca's hair being gummed up with cake and frosting and Lilly's shirt being ruined by cranberry juice."

---

"You're joking," Steve said. "Sometimes I'm thankful I was an only child," he chuckled. He kissed Bucky's hair and took his own shirt off so he could change into something more comfortable.

---

Bucky stripped down before pulling on a loose long-sleeved shirt of Steve's that was long enough on Bucky to cover most of his ass. "Yes, well, now that you know what it's like having little sisters, it doesn't surprise me you're a tiny bit grateful about that." Bucky gripped onto Steve's hand and pulled him to sit on the bed with him. "I wanted to talk to you about something."

---

Steve tugged at the string on a pair of sweats from the precinct and he gave Bucky a curious look when Bucky pulled him down to sit on the bed. He stroked his fingers gently over Bucky's hand and leaned over to kiss him. "What do you want to talk about?"

---

"I was thinking," Bucky started and bounced his leg up and down anxiously. "I was considering maybe trying to go back to school." He said it slowly and with a cautious edge so if Steve thought it was a terrible idea then he wouldn't feel like he was crushing Bucky's dreams by telling him so.

---

Steve's face lit up. "Baby, that's a wonderful idea," he said brightly. He squeezed Bucky's hand lightly. "You know I'll support you any way I can. I'll pick up extra shifts at the precinct so you can work fewer hours and focus on class. I can get a night job a few days a week."

---

Bucky grinned and leaned into Steve. "I haven't decided for sure yet. I'm still going over my options. But Clint said I could switch to all morning shifts if my classes are night classes or all evening shifts if they are early. You won't have to do extra work. I don't want that."

---

"Well, just know that if you need time off, I'll pick up extra shifts for you." Steve smiled and kissed Bucky's forehead. "Look at you. Gonna be a smart college man," Steve praised.

---

"Maybe a college man," Bucky corrected. "I still need to apply and try to see if I can get a student loan and decide if this is even actually what I want." He held Steve's face in his hands and kissed him. "But it's good to know you are okay with it if I decide to do it."

---

"Of course, I would be okay with it. I'd be a jerk if I held you back from following your dreams," Steve said. He kissed him back and smiled. "You looking to do music management still? Or something else?"

---

"Just some sort of business degree, I think," Bucky said and yawned before tugging Steve down to lie beside him. He positioned himself on the bed and pushed Steve lightly so he would spoon him. "I'm really tired. Want to talk about it some other time and just go to sleep?"

---

Steve chuckled and wrapped his arms around Bucky. He pressed a kiss to his temple and let out a happy sigh. "Sure thing. I love you, Bucky," he said and moved his hand up and down Bucky's stomach as they fell asleep.
Half-way through the summer, on a hot June morning, Bucky was sitting on the couch fully dressed and cradling a soda waiting for his family to wake up. He hadn't slept the entire night before and had alternated between sitting in bed watching Steve sleep and laying on the couch staring at the wall. Today marked the five-year anniversary of his parents’ deaths. Steve had already convinced him that the four of them should go to the cemetery together to talk with their parents and pay their respects. Now Bucky was waiting around anxiously thinking over in his head all that had happened five years ago and all the ways he failed as a guardian since.

---

Steve was the first to wake up. When he found the bed empty, he made his way to the living room to find Bucky on the couch. Raphael hopped up and curled up in a little ball on Bucky's lap as Steve moved to sit down next to his husband. "Hey, Baby," he said softly. "Can I do something to make you feel any better?"

---

Bucky shook his head and grabbed Steve in a desperate hug. "I usually drink today." He sighed and took Steve's hand gently. "I'll probably just be like this all day - the girls too. Just hold me until they wake up and then I'll help you make breakfast... if they even feel like eating."

---

Steve held his husband tightly and tucked Bucky's head into his chest. "I'll hold all of you as long as you need me to," he promised. "I know it's a tough day, Baby." Steve paused before hesitantly asking, "I was thinking... maybe you guys can tell me stories about them. There's so much I don't know about them and it'll help keep their memory alive."

---

Bucky waited a long moment to respond. "We can try, yeah," he said simply and quietly and rubbed at his tired eyes. He had already cried a lot in the night and he was going to be doing more the rest of the day and, on top of it, he didn't sleep so his eyes were burning and puffy. "I can't believe it's been five years."

---

"I know. It's been a long time without them. But you have done so much, Baby. You've had to adapt and carry so much weight and you did such a good job," Steve praised. "Even with your faults."

---

Bucky pet a thumb over Steve's lips and arched his head up to kiss him. "I could have done better. And I know that. You know that, too, and so do the girls and my parents. I just miss them so much. Sometimes I can forget that they are really gone and just imagine that they are on a really long vacation or something and they will be coming home soon."

---

Steve squeezed Bucky tighter to his chest and let out a heavy sigh. "I'm so sorry you have to go through this, Baby," he said softly. Minutes later, Becca and Lilly came trudging out of their rooms looking miserable.

"Hey, girls," Bucky said softly and got up to pull both his sisters into a tight hug. They stood there all clinging to each other for a long time, just breathing in each other's presence and finding comfort there. "Do you want anything to eat or no?" he asked tentatively and kissed the tops of their heads.

"Not really," Becca murmured. Lilly didn't look too hungry either.

Steve felt a bit awkward standing there in the middle of their sorrow. "Um..." he said, then he huffed out a little sigh. "Do you girls want any hot chocolate then? Or maybe a smoothie?"

Lilly shook her head and picked up Raphael before stretching out on the ground by the couch and staring up at the ceiling. Becca curled up into a tight ball on the couch and pulled a blanket over herself and watched Lilly pet the cat. Bucky's breath shuddered out his lungs and he could feel himself about to cry again. "I'm going to go have a smoke outside. I'll be right back."

Steve bit his bottom lip, feeling pretty damn useless because he couldn't make his family feel better. After Bucky left to have a smoke, Steve went over to Becca. "Do you want to talk at all?"

Becca silently slid her gaze up to meet Steve's and she blinked slowly before grabbing his hand and pulling him down onto the couch. Wordlessly, she adjusted so she was lying out across the couch, with her head in Steve's lap and her hand still desperately clutched onto his.

Steve let himself be used as a pillow. He used his free hand to gently stroke his fingers through her hair. "I love you very much, Becca. And you too, Lilly." Steve looked out to the door Bucky had left from. "I want to help all of you as best I can."

A few minutes later, Bucky came back. He was crying and his hair was tucked behind his ears. One cigarette had turned into three and he may have yelled a little too harshly at a kid on a bike who almost ran over his foot. "Hey," Bucky mumbled when he returned and went over to touch each one of his family on the face to be reassured that they were all there and all safe.

Steve made a motion for Bucky to come sit next to him. He kissed his cheek and laid his head on Bucky's shoulder. "Do you guys want some time alone? I know I'm the newcomer to all this."

"No, please don't leave us." Bucky shook his head emphatically and seized Steve's other hand that Becca hadn't taken. Lilly decided to join them all on the couch and she curled up in the crook of Bucky's arm and held the cat close to her chest. Both the girls managed to fall asleep and Bucky let them stay like that for a while until he decided it was a good time to get dressed and ready to go down to the cemetery.

---

Steve kept awake and acted as a pillow for Becca and Bucky. When they finally got up to go to the cemetery, he dressed up and brought his notebook with him. "Can we stop at a church on the way back? I want to light a candle for them. It'll be quick and you guys don't have to come in."

---

Becca and Bucky exchanged looks and then nodded solemnly. "Yeah, Steve, that's really nice of you," Bucky said and took his husband's hand. "We probably won't go in, but we appreciate what it means that you want to do that for them."

---

Steve led the way down to the cemetery and didn't talk much. When they got to their graves, Steve put an arm strongly around Bucky and held him to his side. "I'm so proud you came here."

---

Bucky nodded and leaned into Steve as his sisters sank down in front of their parents’ graves. They had brought flowers and Becca had brought the book her father left at Mindy's shop in Seneca. Lilly brought a framed family picture and set it up by the graves while they talked with them.

---

Steve picked up a rock and tore out a paper from his notebook that had a prayer on it and a promise that he would look after their kids. He set the paper under the rock on their graves. "What's your favorite memory of them?" Steve asked them.

---

Lilly was the first to offer hers. "They took me out to the park and taught me how to ride a bike. But when they put the helmet on me, Dad accidentally pinched my neck in the clasp. I cried a lot and then that night they let me have two bowls of ice cream and I got to sleep in their bed."

---

Steve smiled fondly and brushed his fingers through her hair a few times. "Did you get a lot of stuff you wanted just cause you cried?" he asked. "Or did it only work that once?"

---

"Sometimes it worked. It worked on Dad a lot more than it worked on Mom." Lilly smiled and brushed some dirt off the headstones.

Becca held Lilly's hand and said, "The first academic competition I ever won was a spelling bee. They were both there and Dad had spent weeks helping me learn so many words that they might throw at me. He was almost thrown out at one point because one of the teachers thought he was mouthing the answers to me but he was just trying to spell along. He actually had a few incorrect but I never told him that."
"Your dad seems like he was a real smart guy," Steve said. "I bet he helped you all out with practically everything. Did he help you with your science projects too?"

---

"Yeah he did," Becca said and looked up at Steve. "Except, sometimes he got confused on certain terminology. History was always more his speed than science was. Although, he did always like chemistry."

---

"I never understood chemistry. I never got past any science that wasn't necessary for my job. Physics is really hard too," Steve said with a shrug. "What about you, Buck? What's your favorite memory of them?"

---

Bucky had been crying and holding tightly to Steve. He cleared his throat and glanced up at his husband for a moment, "Uh... the day Lilly was born. My grandma came and got Becca and me and took us to the hospital to see Lilly. I remember Becca's face when she got to hold her for the first time. My mom was so tired and she fell asleep while we were all there and Dad had me stay with her while he and Becca went for food. The two of us got to eat on hospital trays and we thought it was pretty cool."

---

Steve looked fondly over at Bucky. "Figures that your favorite memory centers around your sisters," he said. Steve dried the tears from Bucky's face. "They'd be proud of the brother you've become, Bucky. I know I would be." He gently rubbed his back. "I could only imagine how excited you were to hold Lilly, too."

---

Bucky smiled sadly at Steve and kissed his cheek. "Lilly was squirmy," he said and Becca nodded. "Tried to jump right out of my arms just about every time I held her. Mom wrapped her up in her blanket as securely and tightly as she could without hurting her and it still didn't help much."

---

"Looks like Lilly was never able to sit still," Steve said, reaching down to squeeze Lilly's shoulder lightly. "Except now she's too big for us to try to keep her still." Lilly shrugged, totally not sorry for being so active.

---

"Steve," Bucky said timidly and held both Steve's hands in his. "Do you mind if I have a second to talk to the girls? After that, we can go home if they are ready." He was ready to leave this place. He would rather be back home looking at their family photo album and being curled up on the couch with his sisters.

---

Steve nodded and gave them all one more hug before stepping back to give them their space. "Take as much time as you need." Steve wandered a little ways away so they wouldn't feel like he was hovering.
Bucky sat down in between his sisters and pulled them close to him. "Doesn't feel like five years, does it?" he asked and wiped the tears from his sisters' cheeks. "I miss them so much and I know you do, too. But they can hear us here. And they love us so much. And I love you both so much and I promise I'll do better. I'll keep getting better and eventually make you proud of me, too." He was talking both to his sisters and his parents and himself. Neither of the girls said anything - just buried their faces in Bucky's side and cried. After a few minutes, Bucky waved Steve back over.

Steve's heart broke watching how upset they were but he stayed back until he was beckoned back over. He kissed the top of each of their heads and sighed. "It'll be okay, you guys. I'm sure they're glad we took the time to see them today."

"I'm ready to go if the girls are," Bucky said quietly and stood up. "Need to talk to you about something really quick, Steve, while they say goodbye." He slipped his hand with Steve's and pulled him aside a little ways away from the girls.

Steve did the sign of the cross in front of the graves and then walked back with Bucky and gave him a curious and worried look. "What's up, Baby?"

Bucky chewed his lip but kept his eyes on Steve's. "I wanted to do something today but I wanted to hear what you had to say about it first. And if you don't think it's a good idea then I won't." He rolled his jacket off of his shoulder and rubbed the skin on the inside of his upper arm. "I was thinking of going to get my parents' wedding date tattooed right here."

Steve was admittedly taken aback since they hadn't ever spoken about tattoos before. But he shrugged his shoulders and pressed a kiss to Bucky's temple. "If you want to do that, then I think it's a great idea."

"I... I don't want to do it if you'd rather me not to or you think it's a bad idea. That's why I talked to you first," Bucky said quickly. "So tell me honestly if it's okay or not okay?"

"I think it's a wonderful idea, Bucky," Steve said. "It's a nice thing to remember them by. And if you want a tattoo, you should get a tattoo. It's not like it's going on your face. Do you want me to help you design it?"

Bucky nodded and pulled Steve in for a kiss since there was no one around. "Yeah, that'd be really great. And you're sure it's okay with you?" He wanted to be really sure. He didn't want Steve to look at it for the rest of their lives and be annoyed at seeing it on Bucky's skin.
"Baby, it's your body and it makes you happy. Even if I didn't like it, it's you're decision to make." Steve paused then added, "And for the record... I think tattoos are sexy."

Bucky smiled and nosed at Steve's neck. "Okay, I'll do it then," he said as he pulled Steve back over to his sisters. "Are you both ready to go back home?" He didn't want to take them away if they weren't ready but Bucky was getting uncomfortable being in the cemetery again. He really didn't like coming here. He'd only done it a handful of times.

The girls agreed to go home and they all gave last goodbyes together. Steve hugged Bucky tightly and then walked them all out of the cemetery. He stopped quickly at the church to light a candle and say a prayer and he came out looking a bit more at ease. "You want to stop for dinner or do you want me to cook something at home?"

"Don't want food," Becca mumbled and held onto Lilly's hand. Lilly nodded in agreement and they all just went home. Becca immediately sequestered herself in her room and Lilly took up residence on the couch with a bottle of water and their family photo album. Bucky headed to his and Steve's room quietly.

Steve didn't try to push them to eat even though he didn't think it was good for them to go without. He followed Bucky into the bedroom and laid down with him so Bucky was the little spoon. "I'm here for you, Baby. It's okay to cry if you need to."

"Think I'm all cried out," Bucky said and pushed back against his husband. "I got a head start last night around two in the morning with the crying so…" He chuckled and turned his head to look at Steve. "Today's just really, really tough."

Steve nodded and kissed Bucky's cheek. "I understand, Buck. It was really hard for the first few years too when my dad died. But I was too young to really know him so it didn't hurt as much."

"I'm sure it was still incredibly painful," Bucky said and kissed Steve. "Losing a parent is really hard." He ran his hand through his long hair. The ends were getting really ratty and dry and it was long enough that it hit his shoulders, which wasn't where he usually kept it. He slowly got up off the bed, headed to their bathroom, and grabbed his scissors from his drawer.

"You want me to help you cut it?" Steve offered as he moved to sit up. "I was pretty young so I didn't really understand what happened to my dad at first. It was kind of a hollow feeling for a while until I finally could accept it."
Bucky started cutting the dead ends off his hair but then stopped when Steve walked over to him. He handed the scissors off to Steve so he could do it for him. "Sometimes I really miss that hollow numb feeling right after it happens where you can't really wrap your mind around it. It wasn't real for a few months. You know?"

Steve grabbed an old t-shirt and laid it over Bucky's shoulders to catch the cut strands of hair. "Yeah, I understand," he said softly. "That's one thing that makes me sad about having a kid... cause one day we won't be there for them anymore."

Bucky glanced at Steve in the mirror. "Don't think about that," he cautioned and reached a hand back to rub Steve's leg. "When we do die, it'll be when we are really old and our kids are all grown up and have grown kids of their own too."

Steve frowned at the thought of leaving their grandkids too. "I'm sorry," he apologized. "How about we talk about something nicer. Like that cops versus firefighters game that's happening next month..."

"Mhmm." Bucky smiled and bit his lip, letting Steve take his mind off of things. "Are they going to give you a tight skimpy uniform like I requested?" he asked and rubbed Steve's leg a little more. "And, your birthday is coming up. Your first birthday with me. And I'm going to do my best to make it perfect for you."

"No. No tight skimpy uniform, but most of us will be shirtless by the end of it. It's a macho thing. We all try and claim we're the buffer team," Steve said. Really it was going to be an afternoon of eye candy for Bucky. "And don’t you worry, I’m excited to get to have my first birthday with you. I know it will be perfect. You planning stuff already?"

Bucky groaned and blinked slowly thinking about two teams of hot sweaty muscular public servants taking off their shirts with his husband right in the middle of them all outshining the rest. But he came back to it when Steve changed topics again to his birthday. "I'm sort of planning. Having a bit of a hard time figuring out exactly what to do."

Steve finished up cutting Bucky's hair nice and evenly. He rolled up the t-shirt and figured he'd take care of the hair clippings in the morning. "So many good things you can do with me, huh? You know I'd be happy with anything."

"Yeah, I know," Bucky said and turned to kiss Steve. "But I just want it to be the best birthday you’ve ever had.” He brushed some hair off his neck and said, "Do you want to help me design the tattoo now?"

---

Steve nodded and grabbed his sketchbook. He was glad he could help his husband with something like this. A memorial tattoo was a beautiful idea and Steve wanted to be a part of it. "So what kind of stuff do you want in the tattoo?"

---

"I want it pretty simple. Just the date with maybe a nice little design around it?" Bucky said and twisted his finger around his hair. "But, I’m not an artist. What do you think would look nice?"

---

Steve drew a few designs with different styles of text to see which one Bucky liked most. Then he started to draw little designs separately such as hearts, angel wings, line patterns, and other things in case Bucky wanted those bits of flare added to the tattoo as well.

---

Bucky watched Steve as he got pretty into it. He drew some simple ones and then some slightly more complex ones. Bucky settled on one that had the date neatly scrawled with a fancy curling line pattern and flowers directly underneath it. "This one. I want to do this one."

---

"Alright," Steve said, leaning over to kiss him. "We can make an appointment and I'll go with you," he decided. "Do you want the girls to know about it before or after?"

---

"Well," Bucky said and looked away from Steve. "I already have something scheduled for about an hour from now and I was just going to cancel if you didn't want me to do it." He looked back to Steve and frowned before cautiously saying, "And I kind of wanted to go alone. Also, I don't think the girls should be left alone today and I think it would be best if you were here while I go out."

---

"Jesus," Steve snorted and he couldn't help but laugh a little. He wasn't upset that Bucky had something planned already but he did look a little sad that he couldn't go with him. "Okay," he said. "I hope it goes well, Baby."

---

"Thanks." Bucky kissed Steve slowly and ran his fingers through his hair. "And thank you for helping design it."

Bucky left a little later to go get the tattoo made. Everything went smoothly and it turned out really perfect and it didn't hurt nearly as much as he expected it too. Once he got back to the apartment, he stood outside for a second and admired the tattoo. What he ended up doing was the design that Steve had made with his parents' wedding date and then below it, he had the artist do a similar design for his and Steve's wedding date. Bucky smiled down at his arm and then covered the tattoo back up and headed inside.
Steve kept up while Bucky went out and made sure the girls were taken care of in case they needed anything. When Bucky came back, Steve walked up to him and put his hands on his hips while he gave him a gentle kiss. "Hey there, handsome. How did it go?"

Bucky kissed Steve back and wordlessly revealed the tattoo to him and held his arm out so Steve could see it better. It was red all around it and it burned pretty bad but Bucky loved it. He was really glad he did it. Not that he would ever forget his parents’ or his and Steve’s wedding anniversary, but this just felt really good to do for himself, Steve, and for his mom and dad.

Steve saw Bucky's parents' date first and smiled but then he saw their own wedding date and gasped. He surged forward and gave him a searing kiss. "Buck, that's beautiful," he said softly. "I love it."

Bucky giggled and held Steve close. "You like it?" he asked and grinned happily. "That's kind of why I didn't want you coming with me. I didn't want you to know I was doing ours, too." He rested his head underneath Steve's chin and kissed his neck. "I really love it. Thanks for being on board."

Steve gently scratched his nails up and down Bucky's back. "It was a nice surprise," he said softly. "If you need help taking care of it, let me know." He kissed his forehead. "You want to lay down now, Baby? I'd like to just hold you for a bit."

"Yeah, let's go lay down," Bucky said and smiled softly. This was the first anniversary of his parents' death where he found himself capable of smiling. This was the first time he didn't feel completely lost and irresponsible. This was the first time he went with his sisters to their graves instead of staying in his room all day while they fended for themselves. "I'm ready for today to be done. Mom and Dad are probably ready for us to get back to normal and stop being so upset."

Steve nodded and took Bucky by the hand to go lay down. He tucked them both in and snuggled close, happy to see that Bucky had smiled at least once. "Then let's put today behind us," he said and tucked Bucky against his chest as he closed his eyes to sleep.
"Jesus Christ, it's Steve's birthday," Bucky mumbled under his breath and looked through the fridge for something to make a good breakfast with. Bucky had done his best to prepare for the day but he kept getting himself so worked up about making it perfect that he ended up not being able to plan it at all. He decided to just start with breakfast and see where the day went from there.

---

Steve woke up minutes after Bucky had left when he realized his favorite source of warmth was gone. He shuffled into the kitchen and ruined Bucky's plans to bring him breakfast in bed. "Good morning, Gorgeous," Steve said as he hugged him from behind.

---

"Hey, Baby." Bucky turned in Steve's grasp and kissed him. "Happy twenty-fourth birthday." He nuzzled under his chin and then went back to making breakfast for Steve. "How about you sit down and I'll finish this for you. And then, if you want to, we can have your first round of birthday sex before the girls wake up and before your mom comes over."

---

Steve smiled happily, looking very interested in getting in as much sex as possible throughout the day. "Sounds perfect. What're you making me? Think maybe we can eat it while we get undressed?"

---

"Well," Bucky looked down at the skillet. "It's omelets. So I suppose we could eat naked in bed and then have sex when we are finished," he offered and stole another glance at Steve. He was so beautiful and perfect in every way. Sometimes Bucky couldn't believe that he had Steve all to himself.

---

"We can manage that," Steve said confidently. He took a seat in the chair and couldn't help himself. He spread his legs and waited for Bucky to notice that he had his hand in his pants already stroke his cock to wake it up.
Bucky sprinkled some bacon and various chopped vegetables into the omelet and said, "You know, before you came around and taught me how to actually make omelets. I used to just pile up the insides on a plate and drape the flat egg on top." Bucky chuckled at himself and turned to look at Steve. He sucked in a sharp breath when he noticed Steve lazily pumping himself in his pants while glaring at Bucky's body. "Dammit, Steve," Bucky whispered and watched Steve's crotch and the gentle movement under the fabric.

---

Steve had a big smirk on his face as Bucky chattered all husband-like and domestic. When Bucky finally realized what was going on, Steve looked positively shameless. "You love it," he said happily. "You're great at-" Steve gasped sharply through his teeth, "making omelets now."

---

Bucky groaned softly and clenched his jaw. He forced himself to turn back around and finish cooking breakfast. But he caught himself looking back at Steve a few times too many just to make sure he was still touching himself. "What, uh, what else do you want to eat with this?"

---

"Sausages," Steve said, all too pleased with himself and his terrible pun and insinuation. "And I'm not just saying it as a joke." He got up and held Bucky's hips so he could grind lazily against his ass whenever he stood still.

---

Bucky closed his eyes slowly and pressed back against Steve. "There's already bacon in the omelets. You want more meat?" he asked, knowing full well he was setting Steve up for another sexual comment if he chose to take it.

---

"Yep," Steve growled, nipping at Bucky's ear as he slid his hand down the front of Bucky’s pants. "And then I'm having this meat." He was totally taking the bait on that joke and if Bucky thought he was just going to let it pass, he was sadly mistaken.

---

The comment was a bad attempt at sexy humor but Bucky still appreciated what Steve was getting at. Bucky's body shuttered and he reached back to feel Steve's solid build holding him up. "Grab the sausage for me - and I mean the ones in the fridge." He loved when Steve got a little extra randy and mischievous with foreplay.

---

Steve groped Bucky's dick anyway one last time before getting to the fridge and pulling out the package of sausages. He kissed Bucky's cheek gently and then put his hand on his ass. He couldn't keep his hands off him, apparently.

---

"Tell me what you want me to do to you, Birthday Boy." Bucky put the omelets on the plates and started cooking the sausage. "It's your day. Anything you want." His tentative plan for today was to have sex after breakfast, then spend time with the girls and Sarah, then later take the girls and Steve to see some fireworks - it was the Fourth of July after all - and then fuck Steve again and go to sleep. But he wasn’t sure if that was a good enough day and he wasn’t sure if Steve would even like that plan.

"Well," Steve hummed, "I was thinking maybe we could use the flavored lube and I can eat you out. Then I can fuck you on all fours and then later tonight, you can make slow, sweet love to me."

Bucky gasped quietly and nodded. "Mhmm, yes, let's do that." He finished making breakfast and grabbed both plates. "Come on, go get naked in our room so we can eat. You've got me too worked up for much pomp and circumstance but I am hungry."

Steve laughed and walked into their bedroom. He undressed with lightning speed and took his plate. He laid it on his stomach so he could eat it lazily and watch Bucky get undressed as well. It was rare that Steve was ever sloppy or ate in bed. But he was desperate to get his tongue on Bucky so eating his food a little quickly didn’t bother him. And he wasn’t even being that messy.

Bucky stared at Steve's dick while he ate his breakfast. When he was almost done, he eased his hand over top of it to gently thumb at the head with one hand while he finished off his egg with his other. "You feel any different now that you are twenty-four?"

Steve made a little noise when Bucky teased his dick. "Don't feel much different. But I feel happier that I get to spend my birthdays with you now." He smiled and set his plate aside once he was done. "Come here."

Bucky clattered his plate down on top of Steve's and rolled to lay sprawled out across his husband. "Happy birthday, Baby. I should thank your mom later for making you so perfect. Also, I should ask for some stories of Baby Steve."

Steve kissed Bucky slowly and then started to grope at Bucky's ass. "Go ahead and ask. I was an adorable baby," he said. Steve reached for the flavored lube and popped it open. "She can't embarrass me."

"Where do you want me?" Bucky asked and licked a line up Steve's neck. He looked over at his tattoo again and gently prodded at it. He had had it for a little less than a month now and he loved seeing it. It felt so good to have it there. And it was a perfect decision to put his and Steve's wedding date there as well.
Steve groaned low and arched his back to grind up against his husband. "I wanna do sixty-nine," he said. "Except I eat your ass instead of swallow your dick." He nudged Bucky lightly to make him move. "I see you admiring your own tattoo, by the way."

---

"I just really like it." Bucky smiled and moved obediently into position for Steve. "Do you still like it, Babe? I think it's terrific. Maybe you can get one too, yeah? Would you ever do that?"

---

Steve spread Bucky's ass apart and started to tease his hole with his lubricated fingers. "I love it," he said then paused because he never really thought about getting a tattoo before and it wasn't something he would rush into doing. "What do you think I should get?"

---

"You could get the same thing with our wedding date if you wanted to." Bucky smiled and made sure to give Steve room to get to his ass. "Or something like that. I mean, you don't strike me as the type to get tattooed but how great would it be if we had matching ones, huh?"

---

Steve pushed a finger inside. "I'll think about it," he said honestly. Steve wasn't going to promise something to Bucky he wasn't sure he would actually do. He leaned forward to lick a stripe up from Bucky's balls to around his finger. "Let's focus on my birthday right now."

---

"I'm only focused on you today, Baby," Bucky said and took Steve's dick gently in his hand and guided it towards his mouth. He started slow and just licked around the head for a long time before sucking it into his mouth and really getting into it.

---

Steve moaned low in his throat when Bucky took his dick into his mouth. He took his time working Bucky's ass open with his fingers. After getting two fingers inside of him, he spread his fingers apart and pushed his tongue into the space between them.

---

Bucky hummed around Steve's cock and took it all down so he was nosing at Steve's balls. He pulled off after another minute or so and said, "I don't want to keep going and risk you coming before you can fuck me like you planned."

---

Steve angled his hips up a bit, pressing himself just a bit deeper into Bucky's mouth before sitting back. "No faith in me to have a little stamina, huh?" Steve flipped them over suddenly so Bucky was underneath him with his chest against the mattress, eliciting an adorable surprised little yelp out of Bucky. He swatted his ass sharply. "Ass in the air."

---

"Yes, Sir," Bucky said, quickly got on all fours, and stuck his ass up for Steve eagerly. "I'm ready for you, Baby." He reached back and held his ass-cheeks apart. "Did it taste good using the strawberry lube?"

---

Steve groaned softly at Bucky's willingness. It was hot to watch him hold himself open like that too. "Tasted almost as good as you do." Steve held his dick steady as he pushed inside of Bucky. "I can't believe I used to be so embarrassed to talk about sex with you." Steve made a pleased noise as he slid balls deep into Bucky's ass.

---

Bucky moaned and mashed his face down into the mattress to stifle himself. Then popped back up after a second and braced himself on the bed so Steve could fuck him. "Do you realize that in a little over a month, we will have been together for a year? A year, and we have come this far."

---

Steve thrust his hips back and forth easily. He closed his eyes and tilted his head back as he started to really get into the feeling of Bucky's ass squeezing his cock. "Imagine what we will accomplish in five years if this is what we do in one."

---

Bucky smiled and breathed deeply. "We will set up the shelter, see Becca off to college, maybe get a baby." He looked back at Steve and bit his lip. "I love you, Steve. I have for almost a year and I will for the rest of our lives."

---

Steve reached down so he could start stroking Bucky's cock as he snapped his hips a little rougher against Bucky's ass. "I'd do anything for you, Buck," he panted out breathlessly. "Going to make sure every year is better than the last."

---

Bucky nodded and moved to rest his head on his pillow again. He came a little earlier than he usually would have and he panted hot breaths against his hand as Steve kept fucking into him in a hard but intimate way.

---

Steve stroke Bucky through his orgasm and once Bucky was milked dry, he pressed his hand on the middle of Bucky's back strongly but carefully to make him lay back down. He gripped his hips firmly and started rocking faster into him, making Bucky move an inch or so higher with every thrust before reeling him back in. He buried himself deep inside his husband as he came a few minutes later.

---

Once Steve was done, Bucky hastily rolled out from under him and said, "Here, come here," under his breath and pulled Steve up to hold him close to his chest. He kissed Steve's face like he wouldn't get to do it again and held his hand over his heart.
Steve's heart skipped a beat and when Bucky was done kissing him. He looked him in the eyes with an utterly smitten expression. "What did I do to deserve you?" He breathed out. "You are so good to me." He put his hand over Bucky's. "You make me so happy."

"You're so perfect, Steve," Bucky said and put their foreheads together. "You've helped me so much and I don't know what I would do without you. And I can't wait for every birthday after this one. And our baby's birthday - whenever that will be. Whenever we can have a baby."

Steve loved how much Bucky wanted to have a baby. It was cruel that they probably wouldn't be able to adopt for years to come. "Our baby is going to be so perfect. It's going to get so much love. You're going to be great for them." He kissed Bucky sweetly. "How's the crib coming along?"

"It's going really well," Bucky said. "Getting some pieces carved out. Clint sits down there on the stairs and talks to me as I work. Lately, it's been all talk about Natasha. He's pretty into her. Has she said anything to you about him lately?"

"Natasha doesn't talk to me much about personal stuff that makes her feel vulnerable," Steve said. "Which means she's really into him. She's a lot more reserved so she doesn't talk about that stuff unless she has to."

"Yeah, Clint is definitely not a reserved sort of guy so I hear about how great Natasha is all the time." Bucky squeezed Steve and kissed his head. "Think it's time to get dressed and get the girls up. Your mom will be here pretty soon."

Steve whined when Bucky mentioned having to get dressed. He hugged him close and sighed dramatically before getting up to put on clothes anyway. "My mom's got this candle she burns every year. It's massive and counts all the way to a hundred years old."

"What does that even mean?" Bucky asked curiously "Like a giant ass birthday candle?" He pulled a pair of jeans and a t-shirt on and ruffled his hair before tugging it back on his head. He scratched at his short beard and yawned. Man, he could go back to sleep and snuggle Steve all day.

"Yeah. It's numbered one to a hundred and she burns a new number on each birthday for every new age I turn. So we're going to burn to twenty-four," he said. "We can get one for our baby," Steve decided. "It's kind of nice to have."

"What if you live past one hundred?" Bucky asked and ran his fingers down Steve's sides. "You'll run out of candle to burn.” Bucky hated to think about it, but he knew it was pretty likely that he would die before Steve. The amount of damage his body took with cocaine and alcohol problems and also smoking, he was looking at probably seventy years old at the latest.

---

"Then I'll get another candle and start over," Steve said. He got dressed in one of his police t-shirts and a pair of jeans. "Maybe I'll get one for you and I'll burn the candle down to how old you are now."

---

"Maybe we can burn it and have candlelit sex like we did that one night a while back?" Bucky said and kissed Steve. "You liked that. Just the warm glow all around us. It might take a while to burn a hundred year candle down a quarter of the way."

---

Steve made a sound of approval. "Yeah, I really liked that night. It was really romantic." He got a dreamy tone in his voice because he loved that romantic crap. He kissed the tip of Bucky's nose. "Ready to go?"

---

"Yes," Bucky nodded and opened the door. "Which one do you want to wake up?" he asked and gestured at the two still shut doors to his sisters' rooms. "Make sure to say that your mom is coming and food will be made shortly. That should help to get them both up."

---

"You get Becca. I can handle Lilly," Steve said. She was usually more vocally grumpy but he could get her mood turned around better than Becca. He knocked on the younger one's door and walked in. "Hey, Lil. Guess who's coming over."

---

Bucky heard Lilly complain and say, “I don't care” before hearing it was Steve's mom then she changed her mind and started shuffling out of bed.

Bucky went to Becca's bed and said, "Miss Sarah is coming over for Steve's birthday. I'm sure she will love seeing you. And Steve could use a birthday hug." Becca did a fair share of cursing Bucky under her breath but she eventually did roll out of bed and found Steve. She flopped on him in a hug and mumbled a short and sleepy ‘happy birthday’ before letting go and slipping onto the couch.

---

Steve loved how much the girls liked his mom. And lord knows his mom adored them too, even with their cursing. He smiled dumbly and hugged Becca in turn. "Love you guys," he said sweetly. Just as he was about to hug Bucky again, there was a knock at the door.

---

"Here, I'll start making some food for the girls," Bucky said and ushered them towards the table. He wanted Steve to be able to relax and talk with his mom instead of worrying about making the girls breakfast like he usually did.
Sarah came in and went over to her son, kissed both cheeks, and hugged him tightly. "Happy birthday, my baby boy," she said to him. She set his present on the table and snuck Becca and Lilly each a candy bar.

"Hello, Mrs. Rogers," Bucky said and smiled at her. "Would you like anything to eat? I'm just going to make omelets for the girls. Steve and I ate earlier." He glanced over at Lilly who had a chocolate bar sticking out of her mouth and he hoped she thanked Sarah for bringing that for her.

"It's alright. I ate breakfast before coming here." Sarah walked back over to Steve and gently fixed his hair. She always babied him more than usual on his birthday. "What do you boys have planned?"

"Well, I was thinking we could go out to dinner later all of us, then go watch fireworks, and then come back home and... go to sleep." Bucky laughed at himself quietly for not being very smooth in covering up the fact that he and Steve were going to have sex after they got back home.

Steve blushed deeply when Bucky wasn't subtle in the slightest. And he got even redder when his mom gave him a look and said quietly, "You two better use protection." He didn't have the heart to tell her that they never did. The girls giggled at how red he was, too.

Bucky cleared his throat and produced two plates of omelets for his sisters. "Eat and stop laughing," he said with a tick of a smile and messed up their hair. "Of course, if Steve doesn't want to go watch fireworks we don't have to."

Lilly glared up at Bucky and said, "But, we watch fireworks every year."

"I like the fireworks," Steve said. He kissed Bucky's cheek and grabbed a few crackers to snack on. "I love getting hot dogs and ice pops on the street and sitting back to watch the sky light up."

"Me too!" Lilly said happily and started vacuuming down her omelet. "Dad used to put me on his shoulders while we watched because there were too many people around. I love the Fourth of July."

"Well, now there's another reason to love it," Bucky said and leaned into Steve. "We can get ice pops and hot dogs and also a birthday cake somewhere, okay?"

Steve leaned his head on Bucky's shoulder and smiled happily. "Sounds like a plan." He laced his fingers together with Bucky's and felt his heart swell happily. "I love you," he said to him. When it was time to go out, Steve was all excited. It was his first birthday with his new family, with Bucky.
Okay, Steve, where do you want to get dinner before it starts getting dark enough for fireworks? Bucky asked and looked back at Sarah and Becca who were bringing up the rear of their group. Becca liked fireworks well enough but sometimes the noise of it made her anxious so she was going to be sticking close to Sarah or Bucky all night.

"I want to go to the diner," Steve said. "The one that has the milkshakes that are way too big." He had a bit of a bounce in his step. "Is that alright with everyone else?"

"Yes, that's good." Bucky smiled and squeezed Steve's upper arm just once discreetly and then let go. "But, Lilly, you just had some chocolate and if you want some of Steve's birthday cake then you can't have a milkshake, too. You have to pick."

Lilly whined. "Why can't I have both? It's Steve's birthday and America’s birthday, so I think it's enough of a special occasion to have extra desserts," she bartered.

"Do you want to actually manage to sleep tonight, Lil?" Bucky countered and pinched her lightly. "Steve and I won't be able to watch TV with you until you fall asleep. And Becca will be out the second we get home."

"Well, how about you guys wait a whole half hour to have sex to make sure I'm asleep before you be all gross and married," Lilly said bluntly, making a face at her brother.

"No thanks!" Bucky beamed back at her. "Still, that's too much sugar for you. You'll be up all night and then you'll crash in the morning and be an upset mess for two days." He looked to Steve to back him up on this. He had seen Lilly when she was sleep deprived. It wasn't good for anyone around.

Steve nodded. "Your brother is right. Too much sugar is a one-way trip to unhappiness - and rotten teeth. You don't want to be a toothless old lady, do you?" Steve asked.

Lilly huffed and ignored the both of them. Once they got to the diner, the five of them sat together at a booth. Bucky and Steve squished together in a corner so they could hold hands between them without anyone noticing. Lilly and Becca both flanked Sarah and Lilly tried convincing her to convince her brother to let her have both a milkshake and some cake.

"How about you get one bite - just one bite - of my cake so you can at least taste it?" Steve bargained. He was about to talk to Bucky when he saw a little three-year-old wandering around and his officer’s training kicked in. He calmly got up from their table and crouched down next to her. "Hey, Kiddo, you lost?" She nodded her head. Steve alerted one of the waitresses that he was going to keep an eye on her while they looked for the mother. He sat the kid on his mom's lap and took his seat again. "Looks like we have another guest."

---

Bucky watched the little kid looking anxious as all hell sitting with them. "Hey," he said softly and reached a hand out to her. "It'll be okay. Someone will find your parents, alright?" He reached into his pocket and pulled out a pen and then handed her a napkin so she could draw on it if she wanted to.

---

The kid didn't talk much during the meal, though she did sit up and pull Lilly's plate over to start eating fries from it when Lilly was distracted checking her pockets to make sure she brought money for a few firecrackers. Steve burst out laughing once Lilly realized her food was hijacked. The mom came over in a frenzy just as cake arrived and thanked them over and over again for taking care of her daughter. "That mom sounded like you when I first met you," Steve teased Bucky after they left.

---

Bucky chuckled and gave Steve a warm look. "Oh, leave me alone, Officer. You fell in love with me that day, don't tell me otherwise." He looked off at the young mother holding her child close to her chest and he smiled. He knew was it was like to be scared out of his mind looking for Lilly all those times she ran off. It was good to see them reunited.

---

"I won't deny it. How could I resist those charming eyes and that smile you have?" Steve wished he could go back in time and relive their first date together. It had been so perfect. Sarah smiled at the two of them because she knew how happy Bucky made her son.

---

They all finished up eating and then headed out into the city to find a good spot to sit to watch fireworks. Lilly was bursting with energy, having managed to have most of her milkshake and about half a piece of cake. Bucky had to hold her hand to keep her right next to him and not bounds ahead of them.

---

Steve was so excited to be out in the streets amongst everyone. Once it started getting dark, Steve bought a sparkler for each of them and for a few kids that were about to use their own money for them. He used his lighter to light them all and he smiled over at Bucky. "Enjoying yourself?"

---

"Always, when I'm with you," Bucky said and took a sparkler from Steve. He had a thought as to whether he could light a cigarette using a sparkler but he decided that was probably an accident waiting to happen so he didn't bother testing it. He leaned into Steve and said quietly, "And tonight once we are back home, I'm going to give you a little present I made and then I'll make love to you so nice and slow you'll forget your own name. How's that?"
Steve was thankful it was dark out because it helped hide his blush. "I like the sound of that." They stayed out pretty late. Lilly was dead on her feet by the end of the day so Steve ended up carrying her back as they walked his mom home before heading back to their apartment.

---

When they were home, Bucky took Lilly from Steve and tucked her into bed. Becca grumped her way to her room saying something about not disturbing her until noon the next day. "You want the present I made you, now?" Bucky asked once they got to their room. He slipped his hands up Steve's shirt. "It's small and not that great but I hope you'll like it."

---

Steve put his hands on Bucky's hips and kissed the tip of his nose. "I'm sure whatever you got me is perfect, Baby. I want to see it." He slid his hands down to Bucky's ass and gave a light squeeze.

---

"Okay, come here," Bucky said and pushed Steve back. He plopped Steve on the bed and made sure he closed his eyes. Bucky hadn't been entirely sure what to get for Steve. He had enough art supplies at the moment and there wasn't anything that he really needed. So, instead, he did some carving. First, he made a small deer out of some excess wood that he had from the crib. And then he took a few small planks and carved a little wooden plaque that had Steve's favorite Bible verse on it. He had had to look through Steve's Bibles and double check with his mother and Father Frank but he did find it. "Okay, here," Bucky said and handed him the small deer and held the plaque to his chest, hiding the words.

---

Steve had complete and utter faith in his husband to pick out the best birthday gifts. And he wasn't led astray. Steve opened his eyes and recognized the color and grain of the wood from their baby's crib and he beamed at it. "Bucky, this is beautiful!"

---

Bucky nodded to the deer, "Made that because you got all excited about the deer we saw up at the lake." He fiddled his fingers on the edge of the wood plank still held tightly to his chest.

---

"In my defense, deer are pretty and I hadn't seen one in real life before." Steve looked it over, turning it around in his hands and getting a better view from all sides. Then he noticed Bucky was holding something else. "What's that?"

---

"This, I thought we could hang at the shelter once it's up," Bucky said, flipped it over, and thrust it into Steve's hands nervously.

---

Steve read the verse on the plaque and he started to tear up. Bucky was so goddamned thoughtful, making these by hand and finding Steve's favorite verse to a religion Bucky didn't even believe in. And it was going to the shelter Steve was going to build, too. He put both gifts gently aside and he hugged Bucky with crushing strength. "I'm so fucking lucky I have you."
"Lungs, Babe," Bucky choked out. "Need to breathe." He chuckled once Steve let up and he pushed him back onto the mattress to lay on top of him and kiss him. "Do you like your presents? Was it a good birthday? I mean, it's not over. We still have something left to do tonight."

"Bucky, today was amazing," Steve said in a soft, happy voice. "I loved everything we did. I loved spending it with my new family. It feels so good being together." He slowly started to take Bucky's shirt off. "Now, make love to me."

"Patience, Baby." Bucky bit his lip and put Steve's hands on his lower back. He licked across Steve's neck and grabbed at his shirt too. "I got to get it up first." He grinned and tossed Steve's shirt away from the bed and slipped his hands down the back of his pants to massage at his ass. "Do you want candles tonight, too? Because I still have them and it'll only take me a second."

Steve was so, so ready for Bucky to take him. Everything felt right. "Yes, please," he said. "I love the soft lighting. And it makes the room warm in a way that you can't get without them."

"Okay." Bucky kissed Steve once more and stripped himself of the rest of his clothes so Steve could watch him move around the room naked while he set up the candles. He had seven lit before came back to bed and starting kissing so slowly and carefully down Steve’s body, leaving marks wherever he could.

Steve licked his lips and he watched Bucky hungrily as he took his time to really set the mood for the both of them. And he was beyond happy when Bucky came back to touch him again. He held him against his body and moaned softly as he was kissed. "Yes. Keep going," Steve murmured, dragging his nails softly over Bucky's back.

Bucky mouthed from Steve nipples down past his hips and onto his inner things. He didn't want to touch Steve's cock. He didn't want it touched until his own cock was buried inside Steve's ass. Bucky sucked a deep red hickey on a soft bit of skin right where Steve’s thigh folded into his crotch. "Talk to me?" Bucky whispered quickly then pushed Steve's legs up so he could start licking his way to Steve's ass.

Steve's breath came in quick, short intakes as Bucky teased him and kissed lower and lower on his body. "Buck-" he moaned softly, arching his back. "I need you so bad," he moaned. "I love it when you take your time with me and make me feel special. No one else can make me feel like this."

"More," Bucky demanded softly and pulled Steve’s cheeks apart to lick once sharply at his hole. He had already grabbed the lube and put it on the edge of the bed. He coated two of his fingers generously as he licked some more at Steve. Finally, he stuck both fingers in together and let Steve have a few seconds before he pulled them back out carefully.

---

Steve spread his legs a bit more and let out a moan as Bucky started fingerling him. "You make me feel happy like I've never been before," he said. "And when we're apart I ache to see you again." He laid his head back on the pillow as he dragged his nails lightly through Bucky’s hair. "You're everything to me."

---

Bucky fingered Steve gently and slowly and rested his head on his thigh. "We will never have to be apart for very long for the rest of our lives, okay? It's you and me, Baby. You're mine and you're perfect and you are everything I will ever need." He stuck a third finger in. "And I was so lost before you and I'm so grateful you found me."

---

Steve looked down at Bucky with eyes blown dark with arousal. He licked his lips and moaned Bucky's name again when he pushed another finger in. "You're so good to me, Buck. And you're so good to your sisters. And you do such a great job keeping us all together."

---

"I love you," Bucky whispered against Steve's skin and glanced up at him. "Happy birthday." He pulled his fingers out and moved to line up with Steve's ass. He held him open and gently eased his dick all the way inside so he had Steve bent in half and Bucky could reach to kiss him lazily but, at the same time, desperately.

---

Steve closed his eyes and tilted his head closer as Bucky entered him. "Love you so fucking much," he gasped out. He gripped Bucky's shoulders and moved with him. "Keep going."

---

Bucky nodded and eased out of Steve and back in again. Steve wanted slow lovemaking so that's what he would get. Bucky took one of Steve's hands from its grip on his shoulder and brought it to his lips to gently kiss it over and over again before lacing their fingers together and pushing their hands into the pillow above Steve's head.

---

Steve opened his eyes and looked up at Bucky's face as they moved together. "You always know what to give me," he breathed out. "Tell me how much you love me."

---

"I love your wonderful expressive eyes and how I can usually tell what you are thinking." Bucky reached down with his free hand and added his pointer finger in Steve’s ass in alongside his dick. "And I love your laugh and how sometimes it's just a short little snort but sometimes it's big and loud. And I love how passionate you are about the things that matter to you. And I love that you don't give up easy or let yourself be pushed around. And I love that natural kind disposition you've got about you and how being a cop has given you with skills to help others like you helped that little girl and her mother today. I love absolutely every bit of you."

---

Steve's heart just expanded with love for Bucky. It felt amazing to have someone be so in love with him and care so much about the little details that made Steve who he was. He cupped the side of Bucky's face and looked him in the eyes, panting softly as he felt himself get closer to orgasm. "Keep going. Baby, keep going," he gasped.

---

Bucky nodded and breathed deeply in time with his slow thrusts into Steve. He really paid attention to the feeling of Steve's ass around him and how the head of his cock slipped easily out but caught just slightly at the entrance of his hole. "Come for me, Steve," Bucky said quietly and watched Steve's face carefully.

---

Steve moaned low and arched his back as Bucky kept thrusting into him. "Fuck, yes," he gasped out. He loved the feeling of Bucky's cock stretching his rim over and over again. He came hard, spilling come all over his abs. He gripped Bucky's shoulders tightly as he moaned his name.

---

Bucky grinned wide as he saw streams of come fall onto Steve's stomach. He lifted Steve's ass up off the mattress and held him up. "Can I fuck you harder until I come or no?" Bucky asked, still giving soft, slow, methodical thrusts to carry Steve through his orgasm.

---

Steve looked happy and fucked out but he wanted Bucky to get what he wanted too. And lord knows he liked taking it however Bucky would give it to him. "Fuck me hard, Baby," he said sternly.

---

"Okay," Bucky gasped excitedly and immediately started pounding into Steve so he could hear the harsh slap of balls on ass. It didn't take very much time before Bucky was biting down on his lower lip and pushing as far inside Steve as possible to come in hot spurts inside his husband's ass. "God, you're so beautiful," Bucky said and hugged Steve to him without pulling out.

---

Steve writhed and dug his fingernails into Bucky's shoulders and cried out Bucky's name as he fucked him nice and hard. When Bucky finally came, Steve was a panting, sweating mess. "Fuck," he swore. He drew Bucky in for a searing kiss. "I love you. God, that was so good."

---

"Good birthday sex?" Bucky asked through gasps of breath. He rolled them so he was flopped on the bed and Steve was lying right on top of him. Bucky let his arms fall in a heap next to him but he tangled his legs with Steve's and kissed wherever he could reach on his husband.

---
"Amazing birthday sex," Steve declared happily. He kissed along Bucky's neck with a big smile. "Thank you for a perfect day, Buck. It really meant a lot to me." He paused and added, "It was really special."

---

"Good," Bucky smiled and kissed Steve. "Now roll to your side. Birthday boy gets to be little spoon tonight and I'm very tired." He draped himself around Steve and held him tight against him. His arm was on Steve's chest and his leg was tucked securely across Steve's hips. It didn't take very long for the both of them to fall asleep warm and comfortably wrapped up in each other.
A few days after his birthday, Steve had been on a drugs bust and it was pretty typical - a bunch of junkies all holed up in one home wasting their life away as they spent more time high than sober. Steve and his team burst into the house and the people scattered like roaches from light. They were able to catch a few but there were so many, some got away.

Afterwards, he did a sweep of the place to look for any drugs or weapons that he could collect. His heart stopped as he checked the back only to find a baby in a stroller by the dumpster. The mother probably got away and didn't want to be weighed down with something that couldn't get by on its own.

The poor thing started to cry, so Steve took him gently into his arms and rocked him. Steve took the baby with him to the precinct and called Bucky to let him know he'd be late. After a bit of digging, he figured out who the mom was and found a relative who might be able to take him. An hour later, he knocked on her door.

---

The woman opened the door and found a tall, blonde, and thoroughly stressed-out looking police officer standing with her nephew in hand. "What did they do this time?" she asked bluntly and ushered Steve into her apartment. "My sister and that lousy husband of hers are always into something. You want some water, Officer? Or is this a different sort of house call? 'Your sister died in police custody from an overdose' sort of house call."

---

Steve was a bit shocked when the sister already expected some sort of trouble. He hugged the baby closer and stepped inside, taking a look around. She wasn't living completely middle-class, but she seemed to have her act together by the look of her house. "We did a drugs bust and she split before we could apprehend her," Steve explained. "She left him behind," he added in a sad tone as if he couldn't imagine abandoning your own child. "You're his only relative and I was hoping you could be his guardian. Her husband is in custody and she will be, too, once we find her."

---

The woman scoffed and gave Steve a look like he was joking. "Excuse me? I can't take care of him. My sister has only let me see him once and that was when he was born. It's not like I've been 'Aunt Alison' these four months or anything." Alison touched her nephew’s head carefully, he was asleep in Steve's arms. "Besides, I am in graduate school and I teach several undergrad classes. I am never home and wouldn't be able to afford a nanny for him while I'm not around."

---

"Please," Steve said with a hint of desperation in his voice. "He needs his family." He looked down at the adorable baby in his arms. "I know you didn't ask for him and I know you have your life, but sometimes we have to give up what we want so we can give those we love what they need." He took a breath and said, "My husband dropped out of school when his parents died so he could take care of his sisters. He kept his family together because the foster system isn't a good place. And now he's going to go back to school soon."
"Your husband, Officer?" Alison asked curiously like she was interested in what sort of gossip fodder she may get to share with her friends later. A gay Brooklyn cop claiming he had a husband would be an interesting conversation starter. She gave Steve and the baby a once over.

---

"Yes, my husband, ma'am," Steve said firmly. He wasn’t prepared to argue his right to marriage with a woman he didn’t know. He was working on convincing her to take this baby.

---

"Look, Officer, regardless of what your partner may have done, I can't necessarily take the same route. I'm almost finished with grad school and I can't drop out now to take care of the child my sister should be taking care of. And I can't simply pick up where I left off later down the road."

---

Steve was heartbroken that she was turning away this little infant who needed help. He was such a perfect, little boy. He wasn't making any sort of a fuss at all. Steve snuggled the baby protectively. "If you're not going to take him, then let me," he said. "You're his guardian by default right now. And if you're not willing to take him, your choices are to put him in foster care or assign a new guardian. So let me raise him."

---

Alison looked at Steve for a long moment with contemplative eyes. "Why do you want him?" It wasn't like Steve knew the family or had any particular investment in them or this child. "I mean, you don't know any of us at all. You just arrested his father and are looking for his mother. Why would you rather have him instead of let him go into the foster system?"

---

"Why wouldn't I want him?" Steve asked. "Look at him. He's perfect." The baby made a little noise and Steve was quick to rock him gently again in his arms. "My husband and I want kids, but no agency will let a gay couple adopt. And as a police officer, I’ve seen what the foster system does to kids. Even at its best, the kids still come out feeling like no one ever wanted them. I don't want that happening to him."

---

"You want to adopt my nephew?" Alison asked carefully and leaned against her kitchen counter. "Really? You, a cop, wants to adopt the son of two drug pushers? And what would your partner have to say about that?" It was clear that Alison wasn’t convinced by Steve entirely but she also wasn't in any way going to be the one to take care of the baby.

---

"I don't care if his parents had been murderers. That's not his fault," Steve said strongly. "And my husband will love him. He's already building a crib by hand even though we knew there's no guarantee we would ever be given children. And when this baby is old enough, my husband will take him fishing where his dad used to take him. We will love this baby and care for him."

---

Alison nodded and crossed her arms. "His name is Rocky. It's terrible. You can have him if you promise to take better care of him than my sister could and you change his name the second you get a chance. Give him a good name, not the name of someone whose parents were doped out of their minds when he was born."

---

Steve's heart stopped when she agreed. He nodded his head enthusiastically and fought back the happy tears that threatened to fall. "I promise," he said, already an emotional wreck. He kissed the top of the baby's head and said, "I'll need you to sign a few papers giving over parental rights. But I swear we are going to give him such a good life."

---

"Yeah, anything you need." Alison smiled cautiously and pet her nephew's head once. "I assume his parents have no right over him given the severity of the crime and jail time they could be facing, right? I'm just saying, you'll want to make sure this is a full adoption from me to you so neither of them tries to come back years later and claim him. They cannot be trusted to raise a child."

---

The baby cooed softly when his head was pet and Steve's heart melted. "They're looking at twenty to life. And all parental rights are forfeited when a baby is found in such a dangerous environment," he said. "I'll make sure they can't come to get him even though he'll be a legal adult by the time they're out." Steve hugged her and thanked her one more time before heading back to the cruiser and loading his new son into the baby seat he borrowed from the precinct's lost and found. He called in for the end of his shift and went straight home. He cradled the baby to his chest as he opened the door and called out, "Buck? Are you home?"

---

"Becca's room!" Bucky hollered back. Becca and Lilly had both decided to go to the park for a while and Bucky had decided he could handle it if they went on their own for just a little bit. Also, Clint's place wasn't too far and he had them go let him know that they were around, just in case. Right now, however, Bucky was searching for one of his jackets that he was pretty sure Becca had snatched when she did laundry the last time.

---

Raphael meowed curiously at the bundle in Steve's arms and circled Steve's legs as he walked into the bedroom. "Hey, can you hold this for me?" Steve asked as he passed the baby over to Bucky.

---

"What-?" Bucky's eyes were wide but he hastily dumped the clothes he was holding and gingerly took the baby from Steve. "Whose baby is this? What's going on?" he asked and looked down at the sleepy little boy in his arms. His first thought was that someone on the police force needed a babysitter for the evening and Steve was the first in line to offer to help.

---

Steve kissed Bucky's cheek and wrapped an arm strongly around Bucky's waist. He leaned his head on his shoulder and looked down at their boy. "He's ours," Steve said, still barely able to believe it. "He's our son now, Buck," Steve told him. "His parents are going away for a long time and his only relative says she will sign the parental rights to us."
"Uh... huh?" Bucky looked from his husband to the baby and back again. "E-excuse me? What are you saying to me right now, Steve?" He couldn't help the confused, flustered stitch in his brow or the set face that warned Steve that if this was some sort of weird joke that he didn't think it was funny and he didn't appreciate it in the slightest.

"I'm saying...." Steve turned to look at Bucky seriously. "This is our son. This is Christopher Leland Rogers-Barnes and we get to raise him. We get to be dads now, Bucky." A happy smile came across his face. "Isn't this wonderful?"

Bucky tightened his hold on the baby and locked eyes with Steve desperately. "Someone's giving him to us? We get to have him? This is our son?" he rambled for a second and felt the sting of tears in the corners of his eyes. "What happened on that raid today, Steve?"

Steve nodded his head excitedly. "Yeah, Baby," he said. "We get to keep him." He sighed. "We arrested his dad. Drug possession, illegal weapons, trafficking. His mom fled and left him behind. Aunt wouldn't take him. She wouldn't do for him what you did for your sisters."

Bucky sat down on Becca's bed and cradled the baby softly back and forth. "Christopher Leland, we are going to love you so much," he whispered through his tears and watched as a few fell and made wet marks on the blanket that he was wrapped in. Bucky looked up to Steve quickly. "Oh my god! We need baby clothes and diapers and something for him to eat, and a crib. My crib! I'm not finished with it. Where will he sleep? Steve?!

Steve smiled adoringly at their son and kissed the top of Bucky's head. "I can go out and get some supplies while you get to have some quality time with our boy," he said. "We can pull out a drawer from our dresser for tonight and put in a pillow and blanket. That's how my ma had me sleep at first."

"That's not safe!" Bucky's eyes went wide as he stood back up and passed the baby off to Steve. "I'm going to go to Clint's and finish the crib and then he and I will bring it here and then I'll go to the store and get what we need for the baby then I'll be back." He rushed through his list and rummaged in his pockets to check for some money. "Steve, we have a baby!"

"My ma wouldn't have done it if it wasn't-" Steve started to say, but Bucky was already running around to get baby things ready and it really was adorable. Steve didn't have it in him to stop him. "Alright," he said, cuddling their son. "I know, Buck. I know, we have a baby. And you are already such an amazing dad, you know that?" He tossed Bucky his wallet for him.
Bucky caught the wallet and flicked through the cash. He figured he had enough there to get what they would immediately need. He stopped for just a moment and stared at their son for a long, quiet moment. "He's really ours," he said in disbelief and caught Steve in a sudden kiss. "I'll call you from Clint's house." Bucky kissed the baby's head gingerly and whispered, "I love you so much, Christopher. I always will."

---

Steve smiled adoringly at Bucky. The baby cooed up at Bucky when the man spoke to him and Steve wondered if Christopher ever got any attention in the few months he'd been alive. While Bucky was out, Steve spent the time talking to his son and telling him about what life was like here even though he knew the baby didn't understand a word of it.

---

By the time Bucky had finished he crib and made sure it was sturdy and safe, it was well into the evening. He had gone to the store before going to Clint's just in case he went too long and all the shops would be closed. He had to promise Clint that he would bring him a tub of ice cream the next day at work just so Clint would help him cart a baby crib to his apartment in the late hours of the night.

---

Steve had made a sling out of sheets and was wearing Christopher on his chest while the baby napped. The second Bucky got back, he rushed over to him and kissed his cheek. "Hey, Beautiful," he said. "He's been an absolute angel, Bucky. But do you have diapers? He needs to be changed."

---

"Yeah, of course," Bucky said and produced a bag of diapers from inside the crib. Clint helped Bucky haul the crib the rest of the way into the apartment and he said a quick 'hello' to Steve and the baby before explaining how tired he was and that he needed to head out. As Bucky waited for Steve to return from changing the baby, and he laid out each outfit on the table that he had bought. Mostly they had dinosaurs on them but his favorite was a little American flag onesie that was on sale since the Fourth of July had just passed.

---

Steve came back, walked up behind Bucky, and chuckled. "Buck, these are adorable." Christopher stared wide-eyed at the two of them because he wasn't used to being awake and talked to so much. He licked his lips and wiggled a bit in Steve's arms. "Which one do you want him to wear his first night home? These T-Rex ones or the flag?"

---

"You choose, Baby," Bucky said and took Christopher from Steve carefully just because he needed to hold him again so he knew this wasn't all just a bizarre whirlwind of a dream. "What did the girls say when they came home? I'm sorry I missed that. But I have a finished crib!"

---

Steve smiled as he passed Christopher over. He loved holding their little boy but Bucky barely got to spend any time with him so far. "I didn't tell them yet," Steve said. "Figured I'd wait until you got home. I hid him in the bedroom with me when they came in and I let him nap during dinner."
"They don't know?" Bucky asked and looked into the hall at the two closed doors to his sisters' rooms. "Think we should wake them up and tell them? I mean, if Christopher starts crying in the middle of the night then they will wake up and know anyway."

Steve shook his head in response. He felt bad for hiding it but he wanted Bucky to be with him when they told them the news. "I guess we should wake them. I'm sure they won't be too grumpy when they know why."

"Okay!" Bucky jumped up excitedly and said, "You go to our room and put him in that T-Rex onesie and I'll get both girls out on the couch - possibly with a midnight snack so they don't try to kill me."

Steve nodded and took Christopher into the room to change into his new clothes. He blew raspberries on his belly to try to make him laugh but the baby was more confused as to what Steve was doing to him. Becca and Lilly grumpily made their way to the couch and when Steve brought the baby out, Lilly asked, "The hell is that?"

"It's called 'a baby', Lil," Bucky said. He took Christopher from Steve and went to kneel in front of the couch with him in hand. "He's your new nephew. His name is Christopher." Bucky beamed up at his sisters and took in their sleepily bewildered expressions.

Becca stared, not even the slightest bit convinced. "Who let you adopt a baby when you're not legally married and you already have two dependents? Is this a joke?" Lilly wasn't interested in the logistics. She just leaned forward quickly so she could look at the baby and play with his feet.

"Well," Bucky said and held Christopher out to Lilly a bit. "You both are my dependents, not Steve's. And he is an officer of the law in good standing so the baby will probably only be Steve's. At least, that's what I'm assuming the court will allow. Steve adopts him and I help raise him."

Christopher made quiet noises at Lilly and reached out for her. "Can I hold him?" Lilly asked. The baby was pretty damn cute even though he looked a bit underfed. Becca crossed her arms and looked him over.

Bucky had Lilly sit back in the couch and showed her how to hold the baby properly. He sighed and glanced over at Steve. Bucky sort of figured Becca didn't think this was such a great idea given Bucky's track record with being their guardian. Not that she necessarily didn't want them to have a child, but Bucky figured she thought it was a good idea for them to at least wait until she and Lilly were out of the house.

---

Lilly smiled as Christopher cooed and wrapped his little hand around the finger she wiggled in front of him. Steve looked to Becca and said softly, "Becca, you can trust us to take care of him. You've got a beautiful nephew now who's going to love you so much." Steve sat down and put an arm around Lilly. "He's a good baby. And he needs a family."

---

Bucky hugged Steve and looked at Lilly holding tightly onto the new baby. "He's got Dad's middle name," Bucky said in hopes of getting Becca to soften just a bit. "I don't know what he is called right now but we are naming him 'Christopher Leland'."

---

"He had a crappy name before this," Steve said. "His aunt hated the name, too." Christopher let out an unhappy screech at Lilly when she tried to pull her hand away. "He's getting louder the longer he's here," Steve said. "That's a good sign. When babies are neglected, they tend to not cry or make any noises because they learn that no one is going to come for them."

---

"That is good he's warming up then." Bucky smiled and held Christopher's hand. "And he's ours," he whispered and looked up at Steve again. "And I hope that you both will grow to love him and like being his aunts." Bucky reached out to squeeze Becca's hand. "It'll be fun being an aunt, won't it?"

---

Becca shrugged her shoulders in response and then headed back to her room. "I'm going back to bed."

Steve sighed and focused on the baby instead. "How about you play more with him tomorrow?" Steve suggested to Lilly. "It's getting late and Bucky hasn't had a chance to hold him much."

---

"I'm not done," Lilly protested and hugged him tighter. "Becca and Bucky got to have little siblings and I didn't." Bucky let her hold him for a while longer until Lilly's eyes were fluttering shut with sleep. He gently took the baby back and ushered Lilly to her room.

---

Steve loved how much Lilly wanted to hold their son. He didn't put up much of a fight because he wanted to encourage both girls to give Christopher attention. "You can hold him plenty more tomorrow," he promised as Bucky sent her to her room. When his husband returned, Steve stood up and kissed him gently. "I love you so much. I wouldn't have all this - I wouldn't have a son - without you."

---

"We have a baby," Bucky breathed and leaned into Steve with Christopher cuddled between their chests. "A baby, Steve," he repeated and pulled Steve to him in a kiss. He started for their bedroom, where Clint and Bucky had pushed the crib off into the corner.

---

Steve nodded his head. "Look at how much he loves you already, Buck," he said gently. Christopher had his thumb in his mouth as he rested his head against Bucky. "He knows you're going to give him everything he needs. We got to give him as much attention as we can to make up for lost time." He kissed Bucky's forehead. "How're you feeling?"

---

"I feel perfect." Bucky said quietly and let a rogue tear fall down his face. "I never would have thought that this would happen this fast. Our estimate was something like five to ten years and here we are with a baby whose next relative wants us to have him."

---

"His hair is pretty blonde. He might have hair like yours and eyes like mine," Bucky said and grinned at Steve. "Also, we did say that we would take whatever child came our way that needed us. And he needs us. And we want him."

---

Steve nodded and brushed his finger over the tip of the baby's nose. "It's kind of scary having responsibility for such a vulnerable life," he said. "But we can do it together."

---

"You'll get used to it," Bucky said with a quiet smile and smoothed a wrinkle in Christopher's onesie. Bucky had had two little sisters who both showed up when he was old enough to help take care of them and hold them and feed and change them. Steve hadn't ever had a sibling or a baby in his care. It really was a transition getting used to taking care of an infant but Bucky had every confidence in Steve. If Bucky could do it when he was a kid, Steve could do it now.

---

Christopher closed his eyes and made a tired sound as he started to fall asleep. Steve loved all the little noises their son made. He held Bucky gently in his arms so he wouldn't squish the baby. "You look good holding him," Steve said. "You want to put him to bed and sing him his first lullaby?"

---

"Yeah," Bucky said and moved to lay the baby in the crib. "Wish he could sleep in our bed with us but that's really not safe for a baby this small." Bucky made sure all the corners of the tiny mattress were tucked in so Christopher wouldn't accidentally tangle himself in the night. "Oh, hey!" Bucky thought and jumped up to grab the little plush dog that Steve had bought him months before. "He can have Bourbon." He placed the dog securely in the farthest corner from the baby and pat its head.
"I'm sure he will sneak into our room plenty once he's old enough to run around. We might wake up to him in our bed a lot," Steve said. Christopher gave out a big yawn and snuggled into the mattress. "Maybe we can get some more toys for him tomorrow. I still have to call my mom to let her know. She's probably suspecting something is up because I haven't called her at all today."

---

"Steve, she's going to think you're hurt again," Bucky chastised. "You always check in with her." He ran his fingers along the smooth grain of the crib and smiled. He usually wasn't so proud of things he made, but this one he had to give himself credit for. "Hey, so what is his legal name right now?"

---

Steve leaned his head on Bucky's shoulder. "Rocky," he said with quiet disgust and looked at his son who was nowhere near a ‘Rocky’. "It's like a dog's name."

---

"Rocky?" Bucky repeated with an indignant laugh. "As in Balboa? Boy, his biological parents must have really loved that movie. I wonder if their next kid was going to be Apollo. Don't worry, though, Little Bean," Bucky whispered down at the baby. "You're ‘Christopher’ now."

---

Steve smiled and kissed Bucky's cheek. "I doubt they used his name much anyway. The poor kid probably was only fed enough to keep him from crying. With the way he looks at us when we are talking to him, it's like he's never been held and cared for before."

---

"It shouldn't take us very long to get him to a healthy weight for his age," Bucky reassured Steve. "Becca was horribly underweight for about eight months but then she just sort of sprung back to normal. The good thing, too, is that he is so young and tiny that he won't remember those first few months without being cared for."

---

"Babies always got to know something. They say that the first year of their life can determine their personality for the rest of their life," Steve said. "And he could have developmental problems cause his parents were using drugs during the mom's pregnancy. What if he has fetal drug addiction? How do we fix that?"

---

"We will just do what we can to help him if and when any issues show themselves," Bucky said calmly and took Steve's hand. "And I don't believe that about the first years. No way does the first year determine personality." There was a small hiccup from the baby and Bucky noticed he was sound asleep. He wondered how long it would be until he woke up and needed food. He and Steve probably had a solid two or three hours of sleep ahead of them before he needed them again.

---

Steve nodded. "No matter what, I'm going to love him so much," he said. "And he's going to get all the help he needs," he continued. Steve looked down at their sleeping son before looking back at Bucky. "Should we go sleep while we can before he wakes up?"

---

"Yes, please," Bucky said and pulled Steve to the bed. He stripped off the jeans and t-shirt that he went to Clint's in and just curled up in bed in a pair of boxer briefs. They laid cuddled up to each other for a long minute. Bucky felt himself drifting off, the excitement of the past several hours was finally catching up with him. "I love you, Steve. We have a baby, now," Bucky mumbled into Steve's chest and then fell asleep.

---

Steve wrapped his arms strongly around Bucky and kissed his face over and over again. He pet his fingers through his hair until he fell asleep. A few hours later they would be woken by Christopher crying from hunger.

---

"I got him," Bucky said tiredly and squirmed out of Steve's grasp. He picked up Christopher from his crib and bounced him lightly back and forth to help calm him down so he could get him some food. Bucky looked up into the doorway and there was Becca looking mad as all hell with her braided hair falling out of the knot in the back.

---

Steve was ready to get Christopher but Bucky was already on it. Instead, he went to deal with Becca. "You were a baby once, too," he said as he walked up to her. "If you want, I can get you a good pair of earplugs or something."

---

Becca ignored Steve and stomped back to her room. This would probably be a frequent occurrence until they all got used to having an infant in the house. Although, Lilly was such a heavy sleeper she may never be bothered by his crying. Bucky took the baby out to the kitchen to get him a bottle and then he came back and stretched out in bed to feed him.

---

Christopher hungrily grabbed at the bottle Bucky held over for him. Steve sighed and sat back next to Bucky. "You're a natural at this."

---

"Here," Bucky said and transferred the baby to Steve and handed him the bottle. "I'm just used to it from having siblings. Whenever my dad was at work I would help my mom with the girls. Especially if she was having a bad headache and needed to lay in her room."

---

Steve cradled the baby in one arm and had his attention focused entirely on their son as he held the bottle up for him. "God, Bucky, he's so amazing," he breathed out. "He's a perfect little thing, isn't he?" Christopher looked up between Steve and Bucky as he sucked on his bottle.
Bucky snuggled up next to Steve and gave Christopher one of his fingers to clutch on to. "When do you think all the official stuff will go through so he is your adoptive son? It's probably different when the parents are going to prison and not dead like mine."

---

"I don't know. But one of the guys at the precinct adopted so I can ask him for advice," Steve said and leaned his head on Bucky's shoulder. "Tell me more about when you helped raise your sisters."

---

"What do you want to know?" Bucky asked and yawned quietly, making Christopher stare up at him curiously. He was almost done with his bottle and would need to go back to sleep soon. A part of Bucky was immensely worried that there was going to be some complication with the adoption and Christopher was going to be taken from them before he even had settled into his home.

---

"Tell me more about what they did as babies. I never had siblings so I don't know what it's like," Steve said. Once the bottle was done, he set it aside. Christopher started to fuss over it being taken away and Steve looked at Bucky for help.

---

Bucky hadn't even thought to pick up a pacifier at the store. "One second," he said and hurriedly twisted the cap off the bottle and gave it to him to suck on. "I'll get some pacifiers from the store tomorrow. Shit, Steve, we both work tomorrow. Someone needs to be here with him."

---

"I can call off," Steve suggested. "I'll go to my mom's to introduce him and we can rely on her to watch him in a pinch. We have to start looking around for babysitters we can trust, though. I'll go through all of New York before I ask Becca to look after him. She'll murder us." Christopher sucked happily on the bottle top in the meantime.

---

"I'll talk to Clint about seeing if we can hire a new guy so I can be there less," Bucky added. "And Becca might do it for the rest of the summer if we pay her well enough. Guess we can always ask. Or I think Veronica has a teenage niece who is saving up for college so we may be able to ask her."

---

"Do we know how responsible her niece is? I don't want to leave Christopher with someone I don't know inside and out," Steve said. The baby's eyelids were already starting to droop. "Aren't I supposed to make him burp? Is it safe to let him fall asleep right after eating?"

---

"He's alright," Bucky reassured him and took Christopher from him gently and laid him down so they were chest to chest. "We can just hold him like this for a bit so if he does have any reflux then he can help it out of his system. But then he will sleep again. That's all he is going to do for a while. Sleep, eat, poop, cry."
Steve got up so he could grab his pencil and sketchbook. He started to draw Bucky and his son. "I'm so glad I have you. I'd be going nuts over everything cause I've never done this before," he said. He reached out to pet a hand over the baby's little back. "Lilly's taken to him."

---

"I sort of thought she would. She didn't get to have a little sibling like Becca and I did. I hope Becca warms up to him soon, though," Bucky said and felt Christopher shiver. All things considered, he was a pretty quiet baby. He was pretty tiny too, for a five-month-old. But it wasn't anything that Bucky and Steve couldn't fix. They would get him healthy as soon as they could.

---

Steve laid down next to Bucky and kissed both Bucky's and Christopher's temple. The baby made a little noise as if he was slightly annoyed that he was distracted from going to sleep. "He's too cute to ignore. Becca's got to turn around soon," he said. "I can see Lilly being a bit reckless with the baby by accident, though."

---

"Yeah, we will have to watch her with him," Bucky agreed. "She probably doesn't know her own strength around an infant." He sighed and checked to see that Christopher's eyes were shut and he had slowed down sucking on the cap of the bottle. "Alright, I think he's ready to lay down to sleep again." Bucky got up and carefully deposited the baby back into the crib and slowly took the cap out of his mouth. He could tell Christopher must be really tired because he didn't even open his eyes or whine in protest.
When morning came, Steve checked to make sure the baby was still asleep. Then he made French toast for breakfast and woke up the girls as gently as he could. Although, Becca was pretty pissed about being pulled from sleep once again.

---

Bucky woke up to an empty bed and a dim light shining through the bottom of his door. He rolled to face Steve's side of the mattress and sighed disappointedly when Steve wasn't there because he really felt like having some morning cuddles. He sat up and saw Christopher wide-awake in his crib, staring up at the ceiling, and wiggling around. "Hey, Little Bean," Bucky said and scooped him up to take him to the kitchen to see Steve.

---

Christopher immediately cuddled against Bucky's chest when he was picked up. Becca and Lilly were already eating when Bucky came in but Steve was waiting for Bucky to start. "Hey there," Steve said, lovingly. He kissed his son and then his husband. "Want me to hold him so you can eat?"

---

"You go ahead and eat first, Baby," Bucky said and yawned. "I'm still waking up and he should eat first anyway." He held Christopher to his chest with one hand and got a bottle put together with the other. "Hey, Steve, guess what," Bucky said as he sat back down and adjusted the baby so he could feed him.

---

Steve started to cut up his food to eat. He looked up from his breakfast and asked, "What? We have a son?" He smirked playfully because Bucky couldn't stop saying it yesterday and Steve loved his excitement.

---

Bucky looked down and mumbled to Christopher, "Your father stole what I was going to say. That's rude." But he flashed a small smile up at Steve anyway. Also, it felt really good being able to call Steve Christopher's dad. That's all that Steve and Bucky had been thinking of for so long - getting to be dads together.

---

Steve let out a laugh and leaned over to kiss Bucky's head. Becca rolled her eyes at them and said to Lilly, "I bet you ten bucks they don't last a month before they ask one of us to babysit him."

---

"Lilly, don't take that bet," Bucky said and pointedly didn't look at Becca. "We will probably need some help until we figure out some sort of arrangement of our work schedules. I'll need to cut back hours or something. God knows I won't be able to do school now."
Steve's head jerked over when Bucky said that he wouldn't go back to school. "Bucky, but you wanted to go back," he said. "Don't give up that dream so fast, we can make it work somehow."

"Steve, there's no way," Bucky answered and nodded down at the baby. "We can't both be working and have me attending classes and expect to be able to take care of him the way we need to. It's not a big deal. I was a little scared about going back anyway. This is more important."

"What if I retire early?" Steve asked. "It won't be as good of a payout...but we would have enough for a few years. And by the time you graduate, I can start looking for a new job or go back to being a cop," he said.

"No," Bucky shook his head. "You're not doing that. You love your job. And I know you, you wouldn't be able to have a regular part-time retail job or something like mine. You'd go crazy." Christopher made a grumpy noise and Bucky noticed he'd made short work of his bottle and he was mad that it was all gone.

Steve got up to make more baby formula. "I love my job. But I love you more and I want you to be able to chase your dream."

"I gave up on it a long time ago," Bucky reminded him. "I wasn't even sure what I was going to do once I got my degree. It's not like I have a plan or a new dream. Nothing's being taken away from me. It's just how it is."

When Christopher saw the extra bottle, he wiggled in Bucky's arms and reached for it. "Still," Steve said. "It's something you wanted to do."

Becca rolled her eyes and said, "It's too late to go back to school. People say it's ten times as hard if you've taken a break."

Bucky sighed, getting slightly exasperated that Steve wouldn't let it go. "It was hard enough deciding that Becca and Lilly were independent enough now for me to be able to go back. But now that there is a completely dependent baby in the mix, I can't do it. I'm not going back."

Steve got a bit upset over how quickly Bucky changed his mind about school. He frowned as he passed the bottle over for Bucky to keep feeding Christopher. "You can do it. You're just giving up," Steve said grumpily. "And you should be more supportive of your brother," he scolded Becca.

Both Becca and Bucky gave Steve the same sour Barnes expression but for different reasons. But they both thought better of adding to the conversation. Instead, they focused themselves on something else. Bucky was too tired to argue and Becca just didn't care enough.

---

Steve huffed and crossed his arms. "Whatever," he said in an annoyed tone. He felt like it was a bad idea for Bucky to give up so quickly and he knew that his husband wouldn't want to hear Steve continue to lecture. He cleaned up their breakfasts and took Christopher so Bucky could have his food.

---

Bucky ate in silence and occasionally looked up at Steve. After a few minutes, the girls left the table to go to get dressed for a day at the park together. Bucky put his fork down on the table and sat back. "Steve," he began, "why are you mad that I don't think I should go to school?"

---

Steve held Christopher in one arm as he wiped down the countertops with the other. "You gave it up to raise someone once. You shouldn't have to again. I don't think you should be so quick to drop out."

---

Bucky took Christopher back from Steve cause he didn't like that he was trying to focus on two things at once. "I hardly even started to think about it. It's not a big deal. What was I even going to do once I got a degree, huh? Start at a low-level position at some Manhattan corporation and be miserable in my job every day?"

---

"I don't know, Bucky. Whatever you wanted to do to start. Be a guy selling records for the band you manage. Or producing music. Stuff you love," Steve said, frowning at him.

---

"What I love is my family. And my family just got bigger and my family needs me." Bucky clutched onto Christopher as if someone was trying to take him away. "I'm not going back to school. I can't. I never expected to go back anyway so this doesn't change anything."

---

The baby gurgled absently up at Bucky and reached for his shirt collar curiously to play with it. "I still think it's a bad idea," Steve said. "But I guess I have no choice but to accept it."

---

Steve was done wiping the counters now and Bucky gave the baby to him. "I'm going down to the curb to smoke. I'll be back in a minute," he said in defeat and slipped on his shoes. He just needed a couple minutes to shake it off. Sometimes Steve could get unduly worked up over what Bucky thought were little things. He had a bit of a headache and he hoped it went away before he needed to head to work.

---
Steve sighed and took Christopher back. He waited for Bucky to come back and just walked Christopher around the living room. He kissed the top of the baby's head and bounced him lightly in his arms. It was a bad move because as soon as Bucky walked back in, Christopher threw up all over Steve's shirt.

---

"Come here," Bucky said and laid the baby on a few towels on the counter for a second to wipe his mouth off. "I'll go the store before I get home tonight and buy a few pacifiers and some burping cloths and some other things I forgot." Christopher started to cry and Bucky rubbed at his temples trying to get his headache to calm down.

---

Steve took his shirt off and picked up the baby to try and get him to stop crying. "Shh, shh, it's okay," Steve ushered softly. "Your dad's here." He looked over at Bucky and asked, "Are you sure? I'm going out today."

---

Bucky gently pressed the baby against Steve's bare chest. "Skin to skin contact is important for babies - especially if they are upset," he said and pet his hand over the soft fuzzy hair on Christopher's head. "If you decide to go get supplies then just call me at work to tell me. We need a stroller and a carrier for sure. Some baby towels and that bright pink children's soap that is good on soft young skin."

---

Steve made a mental note to pick all that up as he hugged the baby close to him with Bucky's prompting. "Oh," he said. "That's a lot," he said. "I'll get it all, I promise."

---

Bucky reluctantly got dressed and headed to work. It was pretty slow all day so Bucky had a chance to tell Clint all that had happened the night before and that morning. Much to Bucky's annoyance, Clint basically agreed with Steve and said that Bucky should try to figure out how he could make school still work. But Bucky had made up his mind. For once, Reggie was Bucky's saving grace because the second he showed up, Bucky was able to go back home.

---

When Steve had brought Christopher over to his mom's she nearly had a heart attack and she wouldn't stop crying. She took her grandson and her son out shopping for plenty of baby stuff and broke out Steve's old things for the baby to have as well. Both were at the apartment letting Christopher wiggle around on a little play mat when Bucky came home. Sarah came up to Bucky and wrapped him in a tight hug. "Congratulations!"

---

"Hi, Mrs. Rogers," Bucky said and hugged her back. "I see you met Christopher. And I see you all went shopping." He sat down next to the playmat and watched the baby wiggle happily on his stomach. "And hello, Little Bean. Did your Daddy and Grandma buy you new things?"
Christopher squealed loudly at Bucky, recognizing him as the primary food-giver. Steve smiled adoringly at the baby and then back over to his husband. "He loves his dad, doesn't he?" he said. "So are you going to be ‘Dad’ or ‘Pa’? Or something else? We forgot to discuss it."

---

Bucky gave the baby one of his fingers to squeeze with his tiny fist and he looked up at Steve and Sarah. "Well, I suppose I could be ‘Pops’. My dad called his father ‘Pops’. Might be nice to use it too." He looked to Sarah and nodded. "And what do you want to be called as the grandmother?"

---

Steve kissed Bucky's cheek and then nodded. "‘Pops’ is good," he agreed. "And Ma and I already decided ‘Nana’ works for her," Steve said. "How was work?"

---

Bucky nodded and smiled. ‘Nana’ it was. His mother always wanted to be ‘Gran’ or ‘Granny’. His dad wanted to be ‘Papaw’. Bucky looked down at the baby. It had only just really occurred to him that Christopher was only going to get one grandparent. Bucky's parents didn't get to be grandparents, let alone see their own children to adulthood. Bucky sighed and tried to give a half-hearted smile to Christopher. He glanced up at Steve and said, "Yeah, work was fine."

---

Steve saw the sad look in Bucky's eyes. He didn't know what caused it, but he was quick to rub his back encouragingly. Christopher reached up at Bucky and let out a big noise to get his attention so he could be picked up.

---

Bucky picked up his son and moved so he was leaning back into Steve's chest. "Sorry, I was just thinking about my parents," Bucky said and stared up at Steve. "Wish they were here, you know?" He sighed again and looked over at Sarah. "Guess that just means you'll have to be here as often as possible to fill the gap for Christopher."

---

Steve played with Bucky's hair gently as he took care of their son. Christopher looked happy to be held and he stopped wiggling so much. "Of course," Sarah said. "I've been waiting for quite some time for Steve to give me grandchildren."

---

"Well, now you have this precious boy," Bucky beamed and patted Christopher's back gently. "Do you want to hold him, Mrs. Rogers, while I go get a snack for myself?" He stood and handed the baby off and asked Steve if he wanted anything to eat.

---

Sarah cradled Christopher and rocked him lightly in her arms. "He's such a beautiful baby," she sighed happily. "I missed being able to do this with Steve. This sweet boy is going to grow up too fast."
"I think we will have to invest in a good camera so we can take more pictures of him every day," Bucky said and brought some strawberries over to Steve. "We may have missed the first few months of his life but we aren't missing the rest of it. Are we, Steve?"

---

Steve thanked Bucky for the strawberries and tried to hide them as he ate because he didn't want Christopher seeing and trying to get at them. "Not going to miss a second of it," Steve decided. "He's a good kid. I'm so thankful I was the one on that drugs bust."

---

Christopher gurgled and tried reaching up towards the ceiling fan. Steve had brought Bourbon the plush dog into the living room and Bucky snatched it up off the floor and shook it in front of the baby's face. "When did he eat last, Steve?"

---

Christopher reached for the dog but as soon as he got it in his hands, he let it drop and started smiling up at Bucky. It was absolutely adorable. "An hour before you got here. Ma fed him while I cleaned."

---

Bucky picked the dog back up and plopped him on Christopher's tummy. "He should be alright for a bit then." He slipped a hand with Steve's and said, "Mrs. Rogers, do you want to see the crib I made for him? It's in our room."

---

Christopher pulled the dog up and started to stick the ear into his mouth. "Steve already showed me. You did a fantastic job making that for him," she said, getting up to hug him again. "And I know it's not the same, but you're allowed to call me 'Mom'. Or at least 'Sarah'."

---

"Alright, sorry... Sarah." Bucky nodded and hugged her back. Sarah headed out, leaving the two of them with the baby. Becca and Lilly were still out as well. "Steve, Baby, are you still frustrated with me for this morning?"

---

Steve took his shirt off once his mom left and held Christopher to his chest since Bucky said skin to skin contact was very important. He didn't mind the baby drool that dripped down on him. "A bit," he said honestly, though there was no heat to his voice.

---

"Can I do something to make it better?" Bucky asked and pressed himself to Steve to kiss his neck. He wrapped his arm around Steve, right underneath Christopher's curled up legs to help hold him up. "I don't want you to be mad about my decision."

---

Steve rested his cheek on top of Christopher's head gently. "You could change your mind," Steve mumbled in hopes of making Bucky reconsider. "Wouldn't it be worth it to be your own boss? You could take Christopher to your office and spend plenty of time with him there."

---

Bucky sighed and kissed Steve's jaw. He decided not to answer. It would just make things worse. He really didn't think he should go back to school. Bucky cuddled up to Steve in silence for a few minutes. After a while, he ran his fingers through Steve's hair and said, "Kiss me, please."

---

Steve didn't respond either because he was too caught up with the baby. But when Bucky asked, he turned his head to capture Bucky's lips in a gentle kiss. "Tell me about your day," he said softly, trying to put the disagreement past them.

---

"Uneventful," Bucky said and flopped back on the couch. There weren't many customers. It was mostly Clint and I talking and eating pretzels." Christopher was asleep on Steve's chest and Bucky smoothed the soft baby hair on his head. "Want to put him down for a nap and we can have a little quiet time before he needs us again?"

---

Steve stood up slowly and headed to their room. He kissed Christopher a few times before laying him in bed and tucking him in. Steve hovered over the crib for a few moments before turning back to Bucky. "Did you want to cuddle?" he asked.

---

"Yes, please," Bucky said and took off his pants and shirt before slipping into bed and waiting for Steve. Once Steve laid down, Bucky nuzzled into him, kissed his chest, and rubbed his hand over Steve's abs slowly and deliberately.

---

Steve wrapped an arm around Bucky's shoulders and stroked his fingers through his hair. "I love you," he murmured to him. "I feel so blessed to be able to raise a baby with you."

---

"I love you, too," Bucky said and licked one of Steve's nipples. His hand trailed down a little farther down Steve's torso. "You want to let me get you off?" He asked, a bit shy, and made circles with his thumb on Steve's skin. "Christopher is asleep and we have some time before the girls get back home."

---

Steve licked his lips and he could feel himself getting aroused against his better judgment when Bucky licked one of his nipples but he gave Bucky an apologetic look. "I'm not really in the mood," he said hesitantly. "I'm sorry, Buck. I'm a bit tired."

---

"Okay," Bucky said quietly and pulled his hand away. He rolled in bed so he was laying on his back. Maybe it was because of their minor argument about school that Steve didn't feel like being sexual with him. Steve didn't usually deny Bucky's advances. It had only happened a handful of times and Bucky could never quite figure out what prompted it.

---

Steve felt an awkward silence pass between them. He sighed and turned to give him a kiss. "It’s nothing you did wrong," he reassured. "I'm just not feeling it right now." Steve stroked his fingers through Bucky's hair. "The permits just went through to construct the shelter, by the way. Father Frank has a few volunteers building it."

---

Bucky rolled again so he was facing Steve but he didn't touch him. "Do they have an estimate on how long it will take to get it constructed?" he asked and tucked a hand under his cheek on the pillow. "I can talk to Monty and Evan and see if they can start helping with organizing things like donation drives to get the supplies we will need."

---

Steve leaned forward to press his lips to the tip of Bucky's nose gently, then to his forehead. "That would be great," he said. "The building is meant to be finished three weeks from once the construction starts. Getting toilets and showers up will take longer but until then, we can have those pop-up showers and portable toilets."

---

"Have you decided what to call the shelter, yet?" Bucky asked. Steve had been tossing around some ideas for a while but so far hadn't informed Bucky if he had made a final decision or not. Bucky was no help in naming it either. He couldn't think of anything he thought was good enough to offer to Steve as an option.

---

Steve shrugged, still unsure. There was one idea he hadn't run past Bucky, though. "What about the ‘George Barnes Memorial Home’?" Steve asked. "Or maybe we could name it after both your parents?"

---

"What?" Bucky lifted his head up off the pillow and propped himself up on his elbow. "Steve..." he tried again, not really able to figure out what to say. "You would name your shelter for my father?"

---

"Why wouldn't I? He's my father-in-law. He helped get you back on your feet during your addiction just like we can help the people who come in get back on their feet," Steve said. "But if you don't like the name, that's okay."

---

"Goddammit, Steve," Bucky gasped and tackled him to give him a heavy, wet kiss. "I love it. Old George would love it too. He'd get all flustered and embarrassed and try to talk you out of naming it for him but the second it was open he would go around telling everyone he knew just how proud of you he was."
Steve let out a little laugh as Bucky tackled him but he returned the kiss passionately. He wrapped his arms around him and held Bucky to his chest. "It would've been so nice to meet your parents when they were alive," he said. "I wish Christopher got to meet them, too."

"I really wish you both could meet them too," Bucky said with a pathetic little smile. "You're sure you want to name the shelter for my dad? It's your shelter. You don't have to do that just for me. Okay?" He kissed Steve again and clung to him tightly. "I love you so much."

"This isn't just my shelter, Baby. It's not supposed to be owned or operated just by me. It's got to have a little piece of everyone to be a home." Steve kissed Bucky gently again. "So I think naming it after your dad would be perfect."

"Okay," Bucky said and moved to straddle Steve so he could comfortably and lazily make out with him to his heart's content. "You surprise me all the time, Love. You know that? Sometimes I can't predict what you are going to do."

Steve smiled against Bucky's lips and nibbled affectionately on his lower lip. "I'm supposed to do that, Baby. That's part of being a good husband." He ran a hand up and down Bucky's back. "I wouldn't have been able to do this without your support."

"Guess you were right about something good coming of the whole thing with Rumlow," Bucky conceded and held Steve's face in his hands. He remembered that was one of the first things that Steve had said - that maybe there was a reason for it. He was right. The money they got from that was going towards this shelter.

Steve smirked because he couldn't help himself. "I told you so," he said brightly. "We can help dozens - maybe even hundreds of people. And after a few months, we will go back to having most of the settlement money to take care of our son and other expenses."

"Don't be cocky," Bucky teased and bit Steve's shoulder softly. All the making out had gone straight to his dick and he moved off of him so Steve wouldn't feel him getting hard. Steve had made it clear he didn't want to do anything then. Bucky would just wait for it to pass or sneak off to the bathroom when Steve was distracted later.

"I'm allowed to be a little cocky. Especially when I find that having faith hasn't led me astray," Steve said. He didn't expect Bucky to believe in God but he still enjoyed it when his own beliefs proved true. "One thing I'm not sure about is if we should have it openly gay or keep it as more word of
"I think that is something you should discuss with Father Frank," Bucky said and held Steve's hand. "He would probably have better ideas and guidance about that. My only concern would be that if it's not strictly known to be a haven for gay people then we could get people seeking shelter who treat the gay ones poorly for who they are and that's the opposite intent."

"I'm not sure if we will be attacked often or if people will leave the shelter alone even if they knew it was for gay people," Steve said. "But keeping it hidden risks people who need it maybe not knowing about it."

"Those are all valid things to consider," Bucky said and tucked his head under Steve's chin. "How about the next time you see Father Frank you both discuss the options and you can pray on it and things and see what you want to do."

Steve smiled a bit because usually prayer wasn't used for a decision like this but he appreciated Bucky's suggestion anyway. "Sounds great, Baby. Thank you," he said softly. He drew Bucky in for a slow kiss before he heard the girls return home.

Bucky threw on a pair of pajamas because he didn't want to put his work clothes back on. He looked into the crib to make sure Christopher was still asleep and then he trudged into the kitchen where Lilly had her leg propped up on the table and Becca was putting an ice pack on her ankle. "Lilly twisted her ankle," Becca said when Bucky came over to ask what was wrong.

"How did it happen?" Steve asked as he went to get some ibuprofen for the pain. Lilly was always getting herself into some sort of trouble so he hoped it wasn’t anything like that.

Lilly wiped the tears from her face and said, "I was running in the park and got my foot caught in a hole that a dog dug. And it twisted and it hurts so bad."

Bucky pet Lilly's hair and gave her a gentle hug. "It'll be better soon. And at least it happened now before you go back to school and have soccer and lacrosse practice again."

Steve was such a sucker whenever either of the girls cried. He was just as bad with Christopher. He kissed the top of her head and went back to the freezer for an ice pop even though she wasn't supposed to have it until after dinner. "If the swelling doesn't go down then we can take you to the doctor tomorrow."
Lilly took the plastic off the popsicle and found that it was only her second favorite flavor. But she ate it anyway.

"I can go grab your ankle brace if you still have it?" Bucky asked Lilly and glanced over to Becca like she might have a better knowledge as to where it might be hidden in the mess of Lilly's room.

---

Becca sighed and walked off to Lilly's room to dig through the mess and bring back the brace. Just as Bucky started to put it on, Christopher woke up and started crying for someone to get him. Steve rushed to get the crying baby and soothe him.

---

"Hey, Little Bean," Bucky said when Steve came back with the baby. "Your Aunt Lilly hurt her ankle. Are you crying because you feel bad for her or are you crying because you need food?" Bucky joked and gave Christopher a big smile.

Lilly whined from her seat at the table saying, "Can I hold him, Steve? Please."

---

Steve kissed the baby's head and tickled his belly to get him to calm down. It seemed like he was just looking for attention since he was quick to quiet down. Steve had Lilly sit up properly before he gently passed the baby over to her. "Be sure to support his head."

---

"I got it," Lilly waved Steve off and held the baby close. "When does he start talking?" she asked and looked to Bucky.

Bucky smiled and leaned against Steve. "A while still, Lilly. He will mostly make indistinguishable noises for a bit before he starts being able to say any words."

---

Christopher cooed up at Lilly and grabbed at her ponytail. "I bet he will be able to say your name before Becca's," Steve said. "It's kind of hard for kids to make the 'k' sound. Kind of makes me curious to see what he's going to call Becca at first."

---

"Well," Bucky said and looked over at Becca who was standing off to the side watching Lilly carefully to make sure she wasn't holding the baby wrong. "Lilly did 's' sounds instead of 'k' sounds so for a while Becca was 'Bessa' and I was 'Bussy'."

---

"That's pretty darn adorable," Steve said. He looked over at their son, who currently was trying to shove Lilly's hair into his mouth and whining whenever he couldn't get it in there. "At least we know 'Pops' and 'Dada' will be easy to say."

---

"Those should be, yeah." Bucky smiled and grabbed Steve's face gently to kiss him. "I'm going to go make room in our dresser for Christopher's clothes and things. I'll be back." He glanced down at Lilly and the baby once more and gave them both a kiss on their foreheads and headed to his and Steve's room.

---

Steve looked over at Becca, who was still eyeing Lilly cautiously. Once Bucky left, Steve sat down next to her. "What can I do to make you feel better?" Steve asked her. He wasn't going to bend over backwards for her but he wanted to make some sort of peace.

---

Becca looked over at Steve quickly then back to the baby. She didn't really want Lilly to be involved in this conversation so she said quietly, "I just have some concerns about Bucky and I don't know if this was such a good idea."

---

Steve turned away from Lilly a bit so she wouldn't overhear. "What concerns?" Steve asked. "He's been sober for a long time. He's been responsible and hasn't gone out on benders or gotten into trouble by his own fault. I know he used to be pretty bad before, but I really think he's turned himself around."

---

"Steve," Becca started and sighed. "There's no way that he isn't going to just snap one day. Maybe he is home alone with the three of us and he has a headache and the baby starts crying and he can't handle it and he has a breakdown. Which, his breakdowns usually end in him drinking or something. Also, you both have jobs and can't be here all the time. And I know that Bucky's brain is just waiting for something to really set him off so it can make him give in to his alcoholism again."

---

"I have faith in your brother," Steve said. "I believe so wholeheartedly that he's going to do right by you and Lilly and Christopher." Raphael hopped up on Lilly's lap as well to lay himself over the baby, allowing him to grab at his ears. "And even if you don't trust him, trust me. If Bucky somehow becomes utterly inept at parenting - which won't happen - I'll retire. I wanted to be a stay-at-home dad anyway."

---

Becca watched Christopher rub Raphael's head and make happy little noises at the cat. "I just know what he's done before and I don't want another kid coming into the mix just to get hurt by Bucky's issues and the things he can't control."

---

"People make mistakes," Steve said. "Your brother was in a lot worse of a situation before than he is now and he won't have to face that alone again." He sighed and asked, "Do you know where Christopher came from?"

---

"You found him the other day on the job," Becca said absently and took a drink of water. She hadn't cared much to sit around and hear the whole story or anything so she hadn't asked when they brought him home.
"Both of his parents were drug addicts. His dad was trafficking drugs and weapons and his mom abandoned him to escape when we arrived. She also has a few armed robberies under her belt." Steve crossed his arms. "He's underfed, neglected, and I'm sure they were using while she was pregnant with him. No matter how much Bucky may mess up, Christopher is in better hands."

Becca watched Christopher yawn and curl into a ball in Lilly's arms. She looked to Steve and said quietly, "I'm sorry. This is safer than growing up with that. Bucky would never leave us like that. Even at his worst. He always made his way back home." She gave Steve a short quick hug and then pulled away so he couldn't hug her back.

Steve was surprised by the hug but he wasn't complaining. He tried not to laugh at how quickly she pulled away because he knew that would annoy her too. "I know Bucky hurt you. And I'm not asking you to forgive him right this second. All I'm asking is that you understand that he loves all of you. And his mistakes don't change that fact."

"I know that," Becca said. "It was just hard that for so long I was the one taking care of him. Now that I don't so much anymore, I'm just constantly paranoid that something will happen and I'll have to go back to that. You understand where I'm coming from?"

"I understand where you're coming from," Steve repeated back to her. "And I'm promising you that I'm going to be here to clean up all the messes so you don't have to. He's your brother, but he's also my husband. I married him for better or for worse, just like he did with me."

Becca nodded, crossed her arms, and looked down. "Yeah, but what about if you decide you don't want to be here anymore? What if you leave him? He will be even worse than before and it'll be all on me then."

Steve's mouth hung open in surprise. "Becca," he said, a little offended and hurt but he did his best to remind himself that she maybe didn't understand how seriously he took his vow. "I promised to you and Lilly and Bucky and my mother and God that I would love him until the day I die. That's a promise I only make once in a lifetime because it's a promise I am going to keep."

Becca was young but she wasn't naive. She understood that people could say a lot of things and make a lot of promises and then just as easily break them. "It's not because you've done anything to show me you don't want to stay. But... it's just hard thinking someone wants to stick around with all of us for that long."
"Why is it so hard to think that?" Steve asked. "I love you all so damn much, Becca. You have no idea, do you?" He got up so he could bring his keepsake box from his room over to her. "See this? It's the ticket stub from the first time I brought you to the museum. And here's the receipt from the first time I took you and Lilly out to ice cream... and here's the picture the four of us took at the carnival..." he passed it over to her. Steve saved literally every possible thing he could. He had so much in his keepsake box that he was close to needing a second one. "Meeting Bucky is the best thing that happened to me. I need you to believe that."

---

Becca stared at the picture for a long time. Steve looked happier than anyone else in the world, with a giant grin on his face and his eyes lit up. Bucky was smiling softer and looking over at Steve with an expression like he couldn't believe this giant dweeb man was his. And Lilly had a big soft pretzel in hand and was smiling at the camera with her hair in her face. Becca was the only one who looked like she wasn't actually enjoying herself. She was vaguely smiling but her eyes looked dead. A strange wash of anger at herself came over her and she wanted to yell at the Becca in the picture to just smile like she meant it. She was lucky that Bucky was able to take her and Lilly into his custody so they didn't have to go into the system or be separated. And she was lucky Steve came around to help Bucky and support him in getting to where he was now. And all she could do was sit around and wait for the other shoe to drop.

---

Steve knew that Becca rarely let herself truly have fun or let her guard down. He'd tried so hard this past year to change that but she was still scarred by what she had to do in the past. "I hope one day you'll be able to trust us," he said. "I want you to be happy, Becca. I love each and every one of you unconditionally." He hesitated before mumbling, "I sometimes get the feeling that you think you won't be happy or able to stop worrying until both you are grown up and out of the house."

---

Becca barely nodded in response, her own way of agreeing without having to vocalize it. She held up the picture and said, "Do you have another copy of this that I could have?" She wasn't sure why she wanted it but she did. Maybe if she saw it around then it would remind her that she was allowed to let herself relax and be happy with the family she did have. Regardless of whether she thought Steve would leave them or that getting a baby may not have been ideal at the time, they were in the family now and Becca should let herself enjoy her family while she had them.

---

Steve shook his head. "I don't. But you can keep that one." He already closed the box so Becca couldn't slip it back in easily. "I have lots of pictures in here anyway." He patted her shoulder twice before going to put the box back under his bed. He returned and gave her another quick hug. "Do you want to try holding your nephew?" Steve asked.

---

"Guess so," Becca said and looked over at Lilly who was still clinging to him tightly. He was asleep and slowly suckling a pacifier. "If Lilly will give him up for a little bit," she said loud enough so her sister could hear.

---

Lilly pouted and considered arguing to keep him but she had to use the bathroom anyway. She carefully let Becca take the baby before hobbling off. "He really is a sweet boy," Steve said.

"He's a whole lot quieter than Lilly was as a baby," Becca said and played with Christopher's tiny fingers. "She screamed from the time she was born until she was three. I swear."

Bucky came out into the kitchen then and said, "Okay, Steve, the first two drawers of the dresser are all his clothes and things. He really doesn't have much. I should take him to the store on my next day off and get him some more things."

Steve was so happy that Becca was finally holding Christopher. He looked over at Bucky and gestured at them for him to look. "Maybe we should make a list of what we have and what we need so you have an easier time finding things."

Bucky nodded and agreed that a list would be a good idea. "Hey, Becs," he said and squatted down by her and the baby. "He's pretty great, isn't he? Quieter than Lilly was."

Becca smiled and said, "I was just saying that to Steve."

Christopher opened his eyes when he heard Bucky's voice and he looked over at him. He smiled and buried the side of his face into Becca to try and ground himself as he wiggled excitedly. "He's such a sweetheart, too. I think he kind of likes you best, Buck," Steve said.

Bucky came over to the baby and held his hand and gave him some happy smiles. "That's just because he knows I'm a pro at babies. Also, I made his crib. All he knows right now is who is the one who gives him things he wants."

Christopher started to coo and gurgle some more up at Bucky. "I'm a bit jealous," Steve said. "I'm almost always shirtless when I hold him now to get him to bond more with me." Becca held the baby a little tighter so he wouldn't fall.

Bucky went over to Steve and snuggled up to him and gave him a kiss. "Don't worry, Baby. He loves you. Also, kids allegiances change so much at this age. Becca would only want my mom to hold her for about a week and then Dad would be home alone with her for a day and she would cling to him and not let Mom touch her. It's just how babies do things."

Steve wrapped an arm around Bucky and nodded. "I guess," he said dramatically. Steve was clearly hoping for his son to be happy to see him twenty-four-seven, but he wouldn't sulk too much over it. "I'll get that list made for you," he said before going to get his pen and paper.
The whole process took a month and that was with paying extra and cashing in a few favors for an expedited procedure... but Steve was able to officially adopt Christopher and, as an added bonus, name Bucky as a secondary legal guardian as well. The name change had gone through a few days before, but this was the news he and Bucky had been dying to get. He came home one day from work with the envelope in hand. "Hey, Buck! You want to have a family dinner tonight? As in, go out to eat?"

---

"Of course, Steve," Bucky said absentmindedly as he was trying to get Christopher to stop wiggling around so he could finish changing his diaper. "The girls will probably like that a lot. We haven't gone out for a while. Where were you thinking?"

---

Steve walked over and played with the baby's hands to distract him. "I was thinking maybe the diner, but I'm okay with anything. We've got something to celebrate today and I wanted to go out, you know?"

---

Bucky quickly finished with the diaper while Steve had Christopher occupied. He sat back and rolled the baby onto his tummy so he could wiggle around on the ground for a bit. "What are we celebrating?" Bucky asked and gave Steve a quick kiss.

---

Steve passed the envelope over to Bucky once Christopher was settled. Raphael ran over to Christopher and started batting at one of the rattles because he liked the noise. "Open it, Buck," he said excitedly.

---

Bucky yawned as his opened the envelope. It had been a long day with his sisters and the baby. He read the letter and slowly his eyes widened as he realized what it meant. "Oh my god," he breathed out and looked over at Christopher. "Oh my god!" he yelped and stared at Steve. "He's ours now?" Bucky picked up the baby and held him between himself and Steve. "Steve, are we legally dads now? Oh my fucking god."

---

Steve pulled Bucky into a tight hug and made sure not to squish the baby between them. He kissed his face over and over and then smiled. "I know, Sweetheart, I know. Nobody can take him away from us now." He drew Bucky in for a slow, meaningful kiss. "And now... now you're his guardian, too. It's not just me." He looked down at their son. "You hear that, big guy? You're with us now."

---

"Our precious little boy," Bucky said and kissed Steve again and then kissed Christopher. "Steve, if you want to cry you can," Bucky said and swiped at his own tears forming in his eyes. "Christopher, if you want to cry you can. But do it quietly, please. Pops has a headache from your earlier screaming."

---

"I cried the whole way home," Steve admitted shyly. Christopher reached up and tugged on Bucky's shirt and mindlessly babbled at him. Steve kissed Bucky again and smiled. "He was ours from day one. But it feels so much better knowing no one can take him."

---

"I feel a lot more confident in his safety." Bucky nodded. "Did his biological aunt have anything she needed us to know? Is she hoping to visit him sometimes or is this a strictly closed adoption?" Bucky knew his biological parents were not allowed to come visit or claim him later but he didn't know about the aunt.

---

"She didn't want to have anything to do with him," Steve said sadly. "Wouldn't hold him or even consider caring for him when I brought him over. She even suggested making it a closed adoption because she didn't want his parents near him."

---

"Okay." Bucky nodded. "That does make it simpler for us." He stood with Christopher and took him over to the kitchen to get him a new bottle. "He's already getting bigger and heavier," Bucky said and waited for Steve to come over so he could hold him. "He looks a lot healthier now, I think."

---

Steve took Christopher and kissed his cheeks. "It's amazing how different he is from the first day. He's got little baby rolls now. And he's a heck of a chatterbox," Steve said. Christopher was still talking nonsense at the both of them.

---

Bucky smiled and watched his boys. "Earlier, he stuck his hand in my mouth while we were playing on his mat," he said and grabbed one of Christopher's smaller plush animals and handed it to him. "Steve, I love him," Bucky repeated for what felt like the thousandth time. And he would say it a billion times more.

---

"Maybe he was trying to get you to shut up," Steve teased. Christopher immediately threw the toy on the ground and squealed with delight when Bucky went to pick it up. Dropping things was his new favorite game as of late. "Also, there was never any question in my mind as to whether you loved him. I see the way you look at him when he's sleeping or eating or playing around or doing just about anything. You're such a good dad."

---

"I can be a better dad," Bucky said. "I promise. I'll make all of you really proud of me. I'd do anything for you and for him and my sisters. And I know I haven't been so good in the past but I'm not going back to that."
"I know, Sweetheart," Steve said. "I have all the faith in the world in you." He leaned in to kiss his husband slowly. "I trust you so much. And I'm already proud of you." Christopher started reaching for Bucky, fussing and whining.

---

Bucky slipped his shirt off and held the baby to his chest so he would calm down. Christopher settled quickly and repeatedly hit his palm on Bucky's collarbone lightly. "I guess I need to get to the point where I'm proud of myself, you know? And get Becca to be proud of me."

---

Steve pet his fingers through Bucky's hair before kissing Christopher's head. "I had a heart to heart with Becca a little while ago. I think she's starting to trust you more than she used to."

---

Bucky sighed and gave a small little smile. "Thanks for talking with her," he said and pulled Christopher's hand from his hair. "He has hardly napped all day, Steve. It's been such a long day here. Parents are supposed to sleep while their babies are asleep but he woke up every time I finally drifted off."

---

"Then how about you take a quick nap before we go out to dinner? I'll watch after our perfect, little boy." Steve took Christopher back and pecked Bucky's lips. "Go get your beauty sleep."

---

"Okay," Bucky chuckled. "Need to stay handsome for my husband, don't I?" He yawned again and gave Steve another quick kiss. "If Christopher calms down and wants to actually nap, feel free to come cuddle me," he added and then trudged to their room.

---

Steve played with the baby and sung him nursery rhymes until Christopher was ready for some down time. He tucked him in to sleep with one of his stuffed animals and then joined Bucky in bed.

---

Bucky was asleep but when Steve curled around him, he woke easily and rolled to face him. "Is Christopher asleep finally?" he asked and lazily draped an arm around Steve's middle. "Don't know how long that will last but let's enjoy it while it does."

---

Steve nodded and kissed along Bucky's neck affectionately. "I'm okay with that plan," he said. "You want to get off? Or are you tired?" Steve asked. They didn't have much time to be intimate nowadays.

---

"Mhmm." Bucky nodded. "If you want to. It's been close to two weeks. Sleepy hand jobs or you can fuck me while I drift off. I do like that a lot." He yawned again and looked over at the crib to make sure the baby really was asleep.
Steve rolled over to grab the lube from the nightstand and started to coat his fingers. "I kind of want to be inside my husband right now," he said and pulled Bucky's pants down to start to finger him right away.

Bucky gasped and let his eyes roll back in his head. Steve hadn't had his dick inside him for around a month now. The last few times they did anything it had been Bucky inside Steve or the time that it was Bucky giving Steve a blowjob that was cut short when Christopher woke up and started crying. "God, Steve, I love your fingers."

"You'd love anything at this point," Steve teased lightly. "It's been so long since I've done this for you." He rolled his hips against Bucky's thigh to rut against him as he opened him up with two fingers. He scissored them inside Bucky before adding a third.

Bucky nodded and bit his lip. He reached back to feel Steve's fingers in his hole. "Okay, dick, please," he breathed and batted at Steve's hand. "I'm ready, forget the fingers. Lose your pants, Babe." He was desperate. He would admit it. But he was also tired and wanted to feel as much of their time together before he fell asleep and Steve would have to finish inside him on his own.

Steve quickly stripped his pants off and covered them both with the blankets so Christopher wouldn't see anything if he woke and so Bucky would be warm and cozy. He slowly pushed inside of him and moaned against Bucky's neck at how incredible he felt. "God damn, how could I go a month without this?"

"I don't fucking know," Bucky whispered and held one of Steve's arms against his chest. "I love you so much. If I fall asleep, I'm sorry, and also, just keep going. I'll want to wake up with your come leaking out of my ass."

Steve smoothly moved in and out of Bucky's hole, angling his hips upwards at the end of each thrust to go in as deep as he could. "Gonna fill you up with so much come, Handsome. Got to remind you that you're mine."

"I'm all yours," Bucky said and moved Steve's hand down to grip his cock. He really didn't feel like doing any work this time. Steve was wide awake and didn't seem upset in the slightest to have Bucky limp and needy for him.

Steve rocked his hips easily into Bucky, going deep but not rough so Bucky wouldn't be kept awake any longer than he wanted to be. He sucked dark marks onto Bucky's neck and licked down to his collarbone. "You want me to drag this out, Baby?"

---

"Either way is fine with me," Bucky said and carded a hand through his hair. "I'll enjoy whatever you want to do. Just call me more nice names. Tell me good things. Hold me close like this." He whined a little, shut his eyes, and hummed deep in his throat happily.

---

"Alright," Steve said. He held Bucky's hip with one hand as he fucked him a little rougher. "You feel so fucking good, Baby. Can't wait to do this more cause lord knows it's been too long since I last made you mine. Going to make you feel good every damn day of your life."

---

Bucky went quiet and braced himself as he was fucked. He growled a bit when he finally came and shot out over the sheets. It didn't take much since he hadn't gotten off in so long. He panted and relaxed so Steve could keep going and Bucky's eyes blinked closed occasionally. "Been way too long."

---

Steve didn't slow down when Bucky came. If anything, he went faster as he felt Bucky's muscles clench down on him. Minutes later, he was filling Bucky's ass with his own come. He sighed happily and collapsed on top of Bucky, keeping his dick inside of his ass.

---

Bucky giggled with a deranged sort of satisfaction having finally had sex again after so long. He reached back and touched Steve. Steve was sprawled out on top of him with his cock holding his come inside Bucky's ass. "Let's fall asleep like this. Christopher is asleep and the girls can fend for themselves for dinner. We have cereal."

---

"But what about going out for dinner?" Steve asked with a little pout. "I want to celebrate officially becoming Christopher's dads," he said. Steve kissed up Bucky's neck and stroked his hands down his sides.

---

"Oh, right, I forgot," Bucky said sleepily and nuzzled into his pillow. "Give me an hour to sleep some more then we will go, yeah? What do you say? Christopher can wear that new outfit we got him a few days ago."

---

"Sounds perfect," Steve said. He lazily stroked Bucky's limp cock a few times before letting him relax. Steve napped peacefully on top of Bucky before Christopher started squealing at them for attention a while later.

---

Bucky was startled awake and he rolled Steve off of him. He quickly shimmied out of bed and slipped his pants on to grab the baby. Bucky brought him back over to the bed and laid him on his chest and stroked his back gently. "Christopher says it's time to go to dinner, Steve."

---

The baby giggled happily when he was picked up and balled up his fists to hit excitedly against Bucky's chest. "Oh yeah? Are we going to let him tell us what to do all the time now?" Steve joked, playing with his son’s foot.

---

"Basically," Bucky said and transferred the baby to Steve. "Children control their parents until they are about three. It's true. We are screwed for a while." He chuckled and got up to get dressed for dinner. While Steve got dressed, Bucky changed Christopher into his new little outfit that made him look like a small professor with little corduroy pants and a fake tweed jacket.

---

"Oh my god, he looks so cute," Steve gushed, smiling happily. "He's such a little gentleman." Steve kissed the top of Christopher's head and then took Christopher from Bucky and kissed his cheek. "I love him so much, Bucky. We get to have the next twenty years raising him."

---

Christopher promptly smacked his hands on Steve's face when he was picked up and he let out a roar of a giggle after he did. "Little Bean, why are you hitting Daddy?" Bucky asked and got his face close enough for Christopher to do the same to him. "I think he likes being here with us, Steve. I was worried it would take him a while but he's taken to us really well."

---

Steve scrunched up his face when he was hit, but the loud giggle that ensued after was too fucking cute to get mad at. He kissed the baby’s cheek then blew a raspberry, making him squeal and squirm away from the ticklish feeling. "He really has," Steve agreed. "It hurts me to think how he was neglected before. He's such a good boy. And he loves to smile and laugh and be a goofball."

---

"None of that matters now," Bucky said and held his husband and his son in a big hug. "We have him now and we won't let him be treated like that again and he is safe and loved and wanted." He sighed and looked down at the baby. "We still need to have a discussion about what we are going to tell him when he is older and asks where he came from and why he has two daddies."

---

Steve nodded his head. There was no way in hell that Christopher would ever feel anything less than absolutely loved. "Shouldn't we tell him the truth from the beginning?" he asked. "I'm not afraid to tell him that we found him and decided to keep him."

---

"I mean that's ideal," Bucky said quietly. "Let's discuss it some other time. Let's go have dinner now." He adjusted Christopher's shirt and gave him a pacifier. "I'll get the girls if you get his diaper bag and a bottle or two made up."
"You got it," Steve agreed. He got the diaper bag ready and hurried over to make the bottles for their son.

"Hey, where are we going?" Lilly asked as she saw Bucky and Steve getting stuff ready.

"Going to dinner," Bucky said and knocked on Becca's door. He opened it once he got the go ahead and said, "Becs, we are going out for dinner tonight. Steve said he wants to go to the diner but I bet the three of us could convince him to go someplace else."

Becca perked up because they didn't go out for dinner often, especially after they had the baby. "Can we go to the Italian place instead?" she asked. Lilly seemed all for Italian as well.

Steve showed up with Christopher in his arms and the baby bag on his shoulder. "We ready to go?"

"Steve, Baby, I think you're a little outnumbered," Bucky said and took the bag from him so he didn't have to carry two things. "The three of us want to go to the Italian place a few streets south of here - the one Becca likes a lot."

Steve only looked slightly disappointed that they weren't going to the diner. But he didn't care enough to argue. "Alright," he said. "Italian place it is. So long as we're all together, I'm happy."

"Sounds good to me." Bucky grabbed his keys and locked up the apartment. "Steve, next time we can go to the diner. But today is a special celebration so that deserves some special dining options."

"I guess," Steve said dramatically as he adjusted the baby in his arms.

"What are we celebrating?" Lilly asked loudly. "We're not getting another baby, are we? We don't have much space left and I called dibs on getting a puppy next."

Bucky tackled Lilly in a hug and tickled her sides before letting her go. "No puppies right now. And no more babies for the time being. We are celebrating that Steve got the official documentation for Christopher's adoption. He is now legally Steve's adoptive son and I'm a legal secondary guardian."

Becca looked pleasantly surprised that the paperwork went through. She didn't think that it would be so quick and easy to have it done. "Wow, really?" she asked.

Lilly grinned excitedly. "So that means he's officially our nephew?"
"Yeah!" Bucky smiled at his sisters and looked over at the baby who was clinging to Steve's shirt and making excited, indecipherable noises. "His name is now officially ‘Christopher Leland’ and he is our legal son and your nephew. And he is so happy to be here. Look at him." Bucky poked Christopher's little arm and received a gurgle of a laugh in return.

Steve thought it was so cute when Christopher seemed to understand when good things were going on around him. "He is so smart," Steve praised. "Might even become smarter than you, Becca. Watch out for him," he teased. He tickled his baby's feet before leading them out of the apartment building.

Becca just pulled a face and refrained from saying whatever it was that she was planning on saying. Bucky had the baby bag slung over his shoulder and Becca close by him. As they walked down the street, he and Becca took the lead and were a few feet ahead of Lilly and Steve. Lilly grabbed Steve's elbow softly and said, "Hey, I want to be Christopher's godmother."

Steve was taken by surprise and he felt a flutter of joy at Lilly's admission. He shifted Christopher into one arm so he could hug her with his other. "I think you would make a wonderful godmother. But I have to talk it over with Bucky first. Have you spoken to him about it?"

"No," Lilly said and watched the baby as he stared at the buildings around him. "I thought of it this morning. Becca said it wouldn't count because I'm not Catholic. But I just think she's mad cause she didn't think of it first. You know?"

"Well, she could've been mad. But she's also right. You have to be Catholic to be his godparent since I'm technically still Catholic," Steve said. "You don't need to be super religious. You just have to pass a few steps to be confirmed."

Lilly sighed and looked ahead at Bucky and Becca. "But I saw on a TV show once that this kid had godparents that weren't Catholic." She huffed again and shoved her hands in her pockets in defeat. "Fine, never mind."

"That's a TV show, silly," Steve said. "Don't feel so defeated so quickly. It's not that hard to join the church. And you're not obligated to practice after the ceremony is done," Steve reassured.

"I don't know if Bucky would want me doing that," Lilly said and lumbered on. "I don't know. I'll think about it." She ended the conversation there and skipped to catch up with her siblings as they were opening the door to the restaurant.
Steve frowned but decided to leave it as a conversation for another time. He walked inside and asked for a table for four with a baby seat. The hostess thought Christopher was adorable and complimented how cute he was as they were seated.

"Thanks," Bucky said as he made sure Christopher was securely in his seat and it wasn't going to topple over or anything. He still kept his foot securely behind the back legs of the chair just to be safe.

The waitress handed out menus and directed her attention to Bucky instead of Steve as she said, "Your son is adorable. How old is he?"

Steve felt happy that the waitress thought that Christopher looked enough like Bucky to assume that he was his biological father even though his hair was much lighter. "Actually," Steve said with a light tone, "He's both of ours." Steve gave her a little smile. "We're having dinner to celebrate the adoption papers going through. He's five months old now."

"Uh... oh... okay," the waitress stuttered out and gave a surprised little smile and nodded and said, "Well, congratulations to both of you then." She looked to Lilly and Becca and seemed like she was going to ask if they were their kids too since they looked too old to be the children of such young dads but she decided against it. "What can I get started for you all today? Any drinks or appetizers?"

Steve saw the look over at the girls and he answered for her, "They're his sisters." Steve asked for a coke and some garlic bread as an appetizer. He let the girls and Bucky put their order in. "Do you have children?" he asked the waitress.

She wrote down the order and ripped the paper from the top of her pad. "I watch my baby cousin sometimes if that counts. But I get to leave her with her parents when she acts out." She chuckled and excused herself to go get their order in and brings their drinks.

Bucky nudged Steve's leg under the table and smiled. "That went okay."

Steve looked over at Bucky and smiled. "Yeah. No fuss. No dirty looks. I can handle when someone isn't expecting us to be open. I know it's not typical."

"Let's just embrace the good responses because those are going to be pretty rare," Bucky said and gave Christopher a toy to play with because he was getting a little annoyed with being stuck in the chair. Once they all had their food laid out on the table, Bucky held a bottle for Christopher while Steve ate.
Steve was about to take a turn feeding Christopher but Lilly quickly volunteered to do it. "So it seems like he looks more like you than me. Think it's going to stay that way? Baby's physiologies change a lot."

Lilly traded seats with Bucky so she could feed Christopher and Bucky sat down by Becca and said, "I think it's just the eyes. His eyes do look like mine. But some kids eyes change color so he may look completely different once his new hair comes in and if his eyes change."

Lilly praised Christopher as he drank from the bottle. Steve loved how good she was with him. "No offense, but I kind of hope he looks like me," Steve said with a laugh. "You have younger relatives that look like you. I don't have anyone but my ma for a family resemblance."

"I'm not offended at all. I hope he looks like you, too," Bucky said and smiled at his husband. He heard an upset cough from Christopher and looked to find that he had spit up a little on his shirt and he was looking down at it like it was personally offending him.

Steve laughed at his son and wiped him off with a napkin. "Such a messy baby," he said fondly. "You'll get the hang of it," he reassured his son. When their dessert came, Steve swapped with Lilly to mind the baby. "This is so great, Buck. We can do this whenever we want."

Bucky nodded and ate some of his food while Steve helped Christopher eat properly. "Does your mom know that the adoption was finalized?" Bucky asked.

"I called her from the precinct when I got the papers," Steve said. "She would have come, but one of her friends was called in to the hospital and she's visiting her." He grabbed Christopher's hand and kissed the back of it.

"Oh, god, is everything okay?" Bucky asked hurriedly. He knew Sarah wasn't really that old all things considered, but she was retired and her friends may be around the age where they start having more medical issues. And Bucky, for one, knew how much it hurt to see someone you cared about in danger.

"Everything will be fine," Steve said. "She needed a liver transplant for a while and she finally got a donor... so it's actually a good thing she got called to the hospital."

"Okay." Bucky nodded and relaxed again. "Good, I'm glad everything's fine. I guess we will just see your mom sometime soon, then. She wanted to help show us some exercises for when babies start learning to walk. Oh! Also, we need to start doing sign language while we talk to him. That's a great way for kids to communicate what they need until they learn to talk. And it'll be a good skill for him to have later.

"Sign language? That's a great idea. It would be perfect to have him be able to talk with Clint," Steve said. "You think it'll hinder him from talking normally? Like he won't use regular words because he can sign it?"

"No, no, he'll be fine," Bucky waved it off and took another bite of his food. "If he sees that we talk out loud while signing, then that's what he will get used to and when he can talk he'll try doing that too."

"Yeah, I suppose you're right," Steve said. "He's a smart boy. He'll pick it up in no time." He looked back over to Christopher and signed 'hungry'. "Are you hungry, sweetheart? Or is your belly full?"

Christopher just watched his daddy's hands move through the word. He looked up at Steve and giggled, reaching for him with small eager grabby hands. "He doesn't like staying in one spot for very long," Bucky observed.

Steve's heart melted and he smiled happily when Christopher grabbed for him and he snuggled the baby against his chest. "I love that he's such an active little guy," he said. "He and Lilly will go running around all day playing games."

"You think he will be athletic?" Bucky asked and started cleaning up the table as best as he could. He always stacked the plates and made a mountain of trash on top and did his best to wipe down the table. He wanted to make cleanup for the workers be as easy as possible. He understood how annoying it could be to clean up after messy customers. "I wish I knew more of his biological family history."

"I'm sure he will be athletic," Steve said. "Are you going to be a baseball player, Bean? Or maybe a soccer guy?" He kissed Christopher's cheek and then thanked Bucky for tidying up the table. "Also, I could give you a rap sheet about a mile long for his family history," Steve joked.

"That's not the type of history I'm looking for," Bucky huffed in exasperation. "I mean things like traits and talents passed down through generations. Medical history and certain genetic markers to look for. That sort of stuff. I mean, what if he has a predisposition to something that we don't know about and we don't catch it in time and he gets really sick?"
Steve took the check and paid it off, giving their waitress a handsome tip. "I can get their medical records if there are any," he said.

"I just don't want anything to happen to him because we didn't know what to look for," Bucky said and took Christopher so Steve could carry the bag and their leftover boxes. "I figure they would have given you any family history they had when the adoption was finalized. They probably don't have any."

"It's only given if the parents volunteered the forms. So I have to subpoena for the records...if there are any. Or with luck, his aunt will give me some information based on what she knows," Steve explained. Christopher blew spit bubbles for a little bit before babbling gibberish at Bucky.

Bucky used his sleeve to wipe his son's mouth and he stopped Steve so he could grab a pacifier from the bag. He popped it into Christopher's mouth and the baby contentedly sucked on it and stared up at Bucky. "Okay, how long do you think it will take to get them?"

"Quicker than the adoption papers...a week, maybe two at most." Steve shifted the bags into one hand and headed back home. "The one thing I worry about is addiction running through his family." The baby reached up and pressed his hands to Bucky's mouth for a second to get his attention. Christopher loved all the attention and affectionate things his dads did for him - he thrived on it, actually.

Bucky nodded and kissed Christopher's face several times. "I know. I'm worried about that too. Or about what damage might have already been done from whatever exposure he had while his mother was pregnant with him." Lilly and Becca were a little farther ahead of them so Bucky felt comfortable saying, "But, he will have us. You, who has been helping me with my current addictions, and me, who has conquered some past addictions." He sighed. The truth of the matter was that if Bucky ever had a kid biologically, the kid would probably get some of those things from him anyway. He had kind of been prepared for that potential a long time ago.

Steve nodded and managed a little smile. "Yeah... I know we will be able to help him through any hardship he encounters," Steve said. "And he's got two awesome aunts to support him, too."

"And his Nana," Bucky added and held Christopher close to rummage in his pockets for the apartment key. For the rest of the night, they all mostly lounged around the apartment until it was time to go to sleep. Lilly had asked to hold the baby and she fell asleep on the couch with him snoozing on her stomach.
Steve grabbed his sketchbook and sat in the armchair so he could draw Lilly and Christopher sleeping snuggled up together. He loved it. "She wants to be his godmother, you know," Steve said to Bucky.

"Lilly does?" Bucky asked and gave a confused look to Steve. "She's not Catholic."

Becca nodded and whispered, "That's what I told her, too. Doesn't count if you aren't Catholic and just cause she saw it on TV that's not how it actually works."

"She could join the church," Steve suggested. "She doesn't have to actually believe in it but it's just a few tests to learn the prayers and a few Psalms. She makes communion and confirmation and then she can be his godmother. After that, she doesn't have to attend church a day in her life if she doesn't want to."

Bucky scoffed and looked at Becca who had the same thoughts going through her head as he did. "And you, Steve, are comfortable with Lilly bullshitting her way through Catholic orientation knowing full well she doesn't care about anything she's actually saying just so she can be the godmother of our kid?"

Steve just shrugged his shoulders. "Well, she's actually going to have to learn about Catholicism to pass the tests," he said. "Which is more than she's doing now in regards to religion. And it'll bring her closer with Christopher if she's his godmother." Steve didn't see an issue if she did all the work and decided she still wasn't going to pursue Catholicism.

"She's not doing that," Bucky said absently and picked at a loose string on his shirt. "She can't learn the things she needs to for school so I don't think she'd be able to do the same for this. And we aren't religious and never have been and I don't think Lilly has the desire to explore religion either. And isn't this new church with Father Frank a Presbyterian church or something? But, you're still Catholic?"

Steve looked a bit hurt that Bucky was so quick to shut it down. "But she wants to be his godmother. If she's willing to put the work in for it, why should we stop her? She doesn't have school for a few months anyway."

"I'm not saying I'd stop her," Bucky corrected. "I'm just saying that the likelihood of her actually doing all that is really slim. She probably only wants to be his godmother because of those things she saw on TV. Or maybe she's just trying to solidify herself in the line-up if anything were to happen to us and Christopher needed a new guardian."
"Well, I know she probably will give up halfway when she realizes she has to put in actual work. But she also told me that you probably wouldn't let her do it. Her words, not mine," Steve said.

---

Bucky gave Steve a look, "Why did she say that?" he asked quietly but sternly. His family had never been religious and they weren't usually treated well by those who were. His mother was chastised by the church-going moms for not taking them to church and for drinking around her children and being too lenient with their rules. His father was criticized for not being a leader and the head of the house and letting his wife lead instead. And Bucky was picked on by the kids of the church-going parents for any number of things.

---

"I don't know. She's the one who said it," Steve mumbled. "Listen, I don't care if you guys are religious or not. All I'm saying is that if Lilly genuinely wants to be Christopher's godmother, then we should support her." He crossed his arms. "I know she's not very responsible. But maybe this will help her mature a little."

---

Bucky huffed and glanced at Becca who was quietly listening but also silently judging. "It's her decision," Bucky said and looked back to Steve. "But don't be surprised if she doesn't go through with it or if she comes home and complains about the problems of the institution of organized religion in modern society. You know she likes doing that and I know you don't like hearing it."

---

Steve nodded and looked over at the two of them. His religion meant a lot to him and having Lilly consider being a part of it even just for Christopher's sake meant a lot to him too. She didn't have to believe in any of it to learn about it. "I want Christopher to at least be baptized and make his communion and confirmation."

---

"I know," Bucky said and nodded. "We talked about that a while ago before we had him. You remember I said I was fine with that?" He felt like this whole thing was getting a little too close to an argument for his liking and he really wanted to just shut it down before it got out of hand and just head to bed.

---

"Just wanted to make sure," Steve said. He was getting a little defensive, unnecessarily so, but he couldn't help it. He got into a mood sometimes. "I'll keep an eye on them if you want to go to bed. I'll take care of it when he wakes up and send Lilly off to her room."

---

Bucky checked the clock and sighed. "No, it's pretty late. We should all be in bed right now. You and I need to sleep while we can until he wakes us up." Becca slipped off to her room and Bucky gently pet Lilly's hair and nudged her arm to get her awake. Christopher was still asleep lying on his stomach on top of her.
Lilly groaned and complained about being woken up. Steve carefully lifted Christopher and rocked him in his arms. He went and laid him down in his crib then got undressed so he could lay down in his own bed. When Bucky joined him, he reached out for his hand. "I'm sorry for giving you an attitude."

---

Bucky dragged the covers up over them and rubbed his leg against Steve's. "It's okay. You really care about this and that's fine. And I know you want Christopher to have those similar experiences that you did with growing up in the church. And I'm even okay with you taking him to church with you. I just also want him to know that the bad things people say about us or him or what they claim that God thinks, aren't true and he doesn't have to believe them. I don't want him learning to hate himself for things that they said are wrong about him or us."

---

"I'm taking him to Father Frank's services, only. He doesn't allow anyone to spread hate under his watch. And he openly speaks out to advocate for couples like us," Steve said. "He really is a good man. I know you would like him if you ever hung out with him in a non-church setting..." Steve sighed and nuzzled Bucky lightly. "I hope Christopher doesn't get bullied because of us."

---

"I hope he doesn't either," Bucky agreed. "But we will teach him how to handle it if he does. And besides, his daddy is a cop and his Aunt Lilly likes to throw punches, and his Aunt Becca could kill a man with a solid glare."

---

"And he's got a pop that's tough as all hell and can find ways to make them regret making fun of his son," Steve said. He drew Bucky in for a slow kiss. "I love you, Handsome. I think it's time to get some sleep."
After giving him a bath, Bucky put Christopher in a little outfit he had just bought that looked like a baby baseball uniform. Today was the first baseball game of the firefighters versus the policemen and Bucky bought Christopher the uniform specifically for the occasion. Bucky himself was wearing a pair of his shorter, tighter shorts and a plain green t-shirt that was a little short so it rose up to reveal skin when he moved. Once the baby was dressed, Bucky picked him up and tickled his tummy. Christopher squealed and opened his mouth to reveal two front teeth just starting to pop through. "Oh my god," Bucky breathed. "Oh my god. Steve! Steve! Come here!"

---

Steve had just finished changing into his team uniform when Bucky suddenly started making a fuss. He came rushing over, worried at first but then he saw Bucky point at Christopher and he gasped when he saw the little teeth poking through his gums. "Oh my god! Look at you, big guy! You're getting your teeth in! Look at how big you're getting! We are going to need to get you teething toys."

Christopher kicked his feet out excitedly.

---

"Teeth!" Bucky laughed happily. "Teeth, Steve! Look at them. He's got the most precious little teeth in the world." He stared in awe at their son and wrapped his arm around Steve before he realized that he had his uniform on. Bucky pulled back and looked his husband over. The uniform looked gorgeous on him. He could see every muscle in Steve's arms and legs and his ass was cupped perfectly in the spandex material. Bucky swallowed and said, "After the teeth, that's the most amazing thing I've seen today."

---

Steve was still grinning like an idiot when Bucky complimented how he looked in the uniform. "Oh yeah? You going to do something with this later, Buck?" he asked and pressed himself against Bucky's side.

---

Bucky covered Christopher's ears and said quietly, "I already talked to your mom. She's taking the girls and Christopher tonight. When you and I get home, you're going to rail me in that uniform while you are dirty and sweaty and nasty from the game. If you win the game, think of it as victory sex and give it your all. If you lose, think of it as the consolation prize and take your frustration and turn it into power. How's that sound, Baby?"

---

Christopher made an unhappy, impatient noise and batted at his pops' hands. Steve blushed at what Bucky said but by no means was he objecting. "Fuck yeah," he swore since the baby's ears were covered. "Gonna make you come so hard tonight. You'll be all worked up from seeing a bunch of handsome men sweat in tight uniforms."

---

"I know," Bucky groaned and released Christopher's ears and played with his fingers. "I'm both very excited for this and also really dreading it. It'll be my own sweet torture." He chuckled and grabbed Christopher's bag. The girls were already with Sarah and weren't coming to the game so it was just Bucky and the baby going to see Steve play.

---

Steve smiled. "Today is perfect for me. I get to spend all night alone with my amazing husband, but this is the first time I get my own cheering section at the game. I'm going to really have to do my best with you two cheering on the sidelines for me." He kissed the tip of his son's nose. "I love you, Little Bean."

---

"Well, I'm putting out whether you win or not so you don't have to worry about that," Bucky said and grabbed a little hat for Christopher so the sun wouldn't burn his face. "Although, this will be the first night without Christopher and I don't know how well the two of us are going to handle that."

---

Steve's face fell a bit as he looked to his son. "Oh, man. I didn't even think of that." Christopher knew his grandma pretty well now so he wouldn't be with a stranger, but he worried how his little boy would handle being away. "You think he will be worried that we abandoned him?"

---

"No, I think he will be okay," Bucky reassured Steve. "He doesn't cry when we leave the room so I don't think he will start to get upset until it's been a while. And he won't be alone so he will know that he isn't being left again. He's a smart boy, aren't you, Bean?"

---

Christopher cooed up at his pop and reached up to tug his hair with a happy giggle. "I'm still going to worry. I'm going to need you to really distract me, Handsome," Steve said with a smile.

---

"I've got it covered," Bucky said and tugged his hair out of the baby's tight fist and handed him a crinkle ball to squeeze instead. "And besides, we can tell your mom that if he starts to seem like he isn't doing okay without us then she can call us and we will come get him immediately."

---

Christopher put the ball in his mouth and drooled all over it. "Sounds like a plan, Buck," Steve said happily. He felt more at ease knowing he could bring his son home the second any one of them got upset. "So are we ready to go?"

---

The second they got to the baseball fields, Steve hustled over to his precinct and started doing warm-ups with them. The firemen were on the other side doing the same. Bucky scanned the small set of bleachers and saw Clint sitting by himself. Bucky held Christopher close and made his way up to him. "What are you doing here?" Clint pointed across to the police team at Natasha who was swinging around a bat and popping bubble gum.

---

Steve practically pranced around on the field and would look over at Bucky in the stands to make sure he still had his attention, like a goddamn puppy making sure he still had his human's approval. Clint chuckled and played with one of Christopher's hands. "He's getting big," Clint said. "Are those teeth coming in?"

"Yeah!" Bucky said and pointed at the two little teeth poking through. "I found them this morning. We will need to get some teething toys for him soon." Bucky watched Steve warm-up and could have sworn that his husband was purposefully facing away from him so he would see his ass every time he bent over in a stretch.

"He's going to get so grumpy. I hear babies cry a lot cause it hurts them when their teeth come in. Also, it'll hurt you when he starts biting when you piss him off," Clint snickered.

Christopher squealed excitedly when Steve ran up to the fence to say hello. "Water break time. You guys enjoying yourselves?" Steve asked.

Bucky hopped off the bleachers and went to the fence so Christopher could reach out to Steve. He giggled and mashed his hands on his daddy's face. "We are having a good time. Christopher doesn't really know what's going on but there is a lot to look at so he is occupied exploring. He's not the only one who doesn't know where to look, either." Bucky's eyes had been jumping from the policemen's side to the firefighter's side since they got here.

Steve smiled happily and kissed Christopher's hand through the fence. "Oh, you know exactly where to look," Steve teased. He got called by one of his teammates and waved at Bucky as he ran off. Christopher started to whimper and cry in Bucky's arms because his daddy went away.

"Hey, hey, Bean," Bucky said and bounced the baby a little in his arms. "It's okay. Daddy is going to play some baseball. But I've got you and Clint is here too." He got a couple concerned looks tossed his way while Christopher was calming down. Eventually, he settled and just started hiccupping from his outburst. Bucky worried that if Christopher was this upset because Steve walked away from him, then maybe they shouldn't have him stay at his Nana's that night.

Christopher made miserable noises until he finally calmed down and became interested in trying to get Bucky's shirt into his mouth. The game started soon after and it was clear both sides were trying to get away with as much as possible, doing dirty moves that weren't exactly bad sportsmanship but also not exactly nice either. "Christ, they really are competitive," Clint said to Bucky.

"Yeah, did you see Natasha straight up punch that guy in the throat earlier?" Bucky asked in disbelief and stared attentively at the game. Steve had been doing really well. He made a couple home runs and he was getting progressively sweater as the game went on. So was everyone else. The pitcher on the firemen's side had long since removed his shirt and a couple guys on the benches held there shirts up past their stomachs to get some airflow around them.
"Yeah, that's why I love her," Clint said with a warm tone and a love-struck gaze as he looked over at her. "Don't tell her I said that."

Steve took off his shirt towards the end of the game and he gave Bucky a playful wink. When he got his next hit, he rushed down the baseline and slid into second base. He got a few cuts from it and was now dirty as all hell, but he knew Bucky would love it. They ended up winning the game and they naturally celebrated by dumping ice water all over each other.

Bucky whimpered and bounced his leg up and down impatiently as he watched water soaked police officers tackling each other or grumpily peeling their shirts off and tossing them to the ground in a wet heap. Clint had been holding Christopher and Bucky took him back so he could go over to congratulate Steve.

Steve was all wet and scraped up but a little less dirty after the water. He felt amazing after winning the game and having his husband and son there to watch. His precinct had his back, so Steve felt confident enough to hold the back of Bucky's head and draw him in for a slow kiss. He took Christopher from Bucky and kissed his cheek. "Hey there, Bean!" he said excitedly. "You see that Daddy's team won?" He bounced him gently in his arms and smiled over at Bucky.

A few guys from the firemen's side gave them surprised looks and a couple looked like they were going to come speak their mind but Natasha decided to snag a few officers and go over to say 'good game' to the firemen as a distraction. "You looked amazing," Bucky said as his eyes ventured lower and lower on Steve, taking him in. Steve was always sexy to him but add in the fact that Steve was now a father and that just made him even more irresistible. There was something primal about the way Bucky reacted to seeing Steve be so paternal and loving.

Steve cuddled his son. He was a big old teddy bear when he was excited and had Christopher in his arms. "You always look amazing," Steve said. "You want to hang around a little longer? I bet I can grab a baseball for Christopher and see if he can throw it at all."

"He's barely six months old," Bucky laughed. "He's just going to try to put it in his mouth."

An officer came over to them and slung a dry towel over Steve's shoulders. "Good game, Rogers," he said and then noticed the baby. "Who is this?" he asked excitedly and shook Christopher's tiny hand.

Steve glanced over at his coworker. "This is my son," he said proudly. "His name is Christopher." The baby squeezed his fingers around the officer's hand.
"Hi, there!" The officer said and grinned at Christopher. He turned his attention to Bucky. "You must be Bernie. I'm sorry, I'm newer at the precinct and haven't met you yet."

"Close," Bucky said with a strained smile. "It's Bucky."

---

Steve covered his mouth to stifle his laugh. He knew the officer was being friendly but it was still funny that he mistook Bucky's name. "Buck, this is Lionel. As you can see, he's new. Fresh out of the academy just in time for the game."

---

Bucky shook Lionel's hand and then took Christopher from Steve. He was going to ask Lionel how he liked working at the precinct but he was called away. Bucky said, "Steve, I'm going to take him to your mom's place and then I'll meet you at home. I know you said you all usually go for drinks afterwards so if you want to go get a few drinks and then come home, that'll give me time to do some cleaning up." He emphasized 'cleaning up' so Steve would know he meant that he was going to get himself and their bed ready for dirty sweaty baseball sex. Then he added as a mumbled afterthought, "I don't look like a 'Bernie', do I?"

---

"No, you don't look like a 'Bernie', Baby," Steve said and pouted a little when Bucky took their son. "Daddy will miss you, Little Bean. Be good for your nana, okay?" He snuggled him one last time and then headed out with the guys. He took an hour or so but he went home early so he could meet up with Bucky. He was admittedly just a little buzzed from a few drinks by the time he got home. "Sweetheart! I'm home!" He called out as he shut the door behind him. "How was dropping Christopher off?"

---

Bucky shouted from the bedroom, "He cried a bit but he's fine. I promise." Bucky was laying in bed wearing one of Steve's shirts and the tightest pair of underwear he could find at the store that he could still manage to fit into. His dick sort of seemed like it wanted to rip the dark navy fabric at the seams and be released. Bucky had also taken a ball cap and threaded his ponytail through the back. When Steve came into the bedroom, Bucky was sitting so Steve could see his cock straining in the briefs. Bucky blew a big bubble of the gum he was chewing and he popped it with a smirk.

---

Steve came into the bedroom expecting a good sight but he didn't expect something this good. "Fuck," he swore, immediately sobering up just by looking at his husband. "Jesus, Bucky, you look so goddamn good." Steve got onto the bed and practically nosedived between Bucky's legs. He sucked on the bulge through Bucky's underwear and reached his hands up to sneak under his shirt.

---

Bucky giggled to himself and jerked his hips up slightly. "That kind of tickles, Steve," he said and grinned at his husband whose hair was matted down with sweat.

---

"I'm starting to suck at your dick and you tell me it tickles?" Steve asked in an incredulous tone. "Just give me some credit here."
Bucky nodded and stared at the baseball uniform on Steve and moaned a little. "You look sexy as all hell wearing that." He looked down at his own little put-together outfit. "What would you do if I played baseball wearing this, huh?"

Steve hooked his fingers on the waistband of Bucky's underwear and mouthed at his cock some more. "I'd fuck you on third base on your hands and knees if you did."

"Oh, god," Bucky gasped. "That's really hot. What if next time you play the firemen, I come in as an alternate wearing just these tight ass briefs and the ball cap? All the eyes of all the guys on me waiting to watch me hit the ball out of the park and run all the way to home."

"I would let all the other guys stare all they want. Cause I know you wouldn't do anything with them and I'd get to have you show off what they all can't have and that only I can," Steve purred and ran his hands up Bucky's thighs. "God, you're like a dream."

"What would you do then?" Bucky asked quietly and took the hat from his head to let his hair down. He slid his hands down Steve's chest and around to his back and held a tight grasp on his ass. He licked at his neck too and tasted the tang of sweat there and he was starting to get just a little impatient to have Steve take him.

"I'd carry you home and fuck you into next week," Steve said. He got the lube and started to tease Bucky's hole with his fingers. "Kind of like what I'm about to do with you," he said. "You want me to be rough, Baby?"

"Yeah," Bucky clipped and nodded desperately. "I don't want to be able to walk tomorrow." He quickly spit the gum out and tossed it into the trash. He lifted his shirt up just slightly so Steve was getting just a tease of his abs. "Remember, keep your uniform on."

Steve pushed a finger slowly inside Bucky's ass and bit the inside of his thigh. "I'll make you have to call out sick," he chuckled. "Keep you in bed all day and fuck you over and over until we get the kids back home."

"I'll call Clint right now if you want me to," Bucky said and threw his head back. "Although, he is probably at home having Natasha ruin him too." He shrugged. "That's okay. Reggie can run the store with the new kid tomorrow."
"Leave Clint alone for tonight," Steve chuckled and pushed in a second finger as he sucked a mark on the inside of Bucky's thigh, right next to where he bit him. "We can call in the morning."

---

"Okay," Bucky grunted and lifted his leg to bring it to rest on Steve's shoulder. "Also, you have no idea how hard it is to think of catcher and pitcher baseball sex jokes while you are fingerling me. You’d think it would be easy. It's like you force my mind to go blank with just your touch."

---

"That means I'm doing my job right," Steve offered as he pushed his pants down just enough to expose his dick and start to slick it up with lube. "You want to be on your stomach or back, Love?"

---

"I want to be face down, ass in the air for a while. Then I want to be flipped so I'm on my back and I can see you in that uniform while you come," Bucky smirked. "How does that sound? And you can be as rough as you want to be, Baby. I know you don't like too much but you can pull my hair or slap my ass and stuff."

---

Steve nodded. Without any hesitation, he easily flipped Bucky over and he yanked his hips up to put his ass in the air. Steve gripped him tightly before pushing into his ass in one smooth movement that didn't end until he was balls deep. "Gonna give me some good victory sex, Baby?"

---

"Yes," Bucky breathed and looked back. "I'll give you everything you want. Just tell me what you need. I'm yours." He reached back and felt Steve's still clothed legs and a shudder ran through him. "Ruin me, Steve."

---

Steve started fucking into Bucky at a punishing pace, unrelenting and rough. His balls smacked loudly against Bucky's ass and he panted heavily as he laid his chest over his back. "Want to hear you moan my name."

---

Bucky bit down on his own arm and squeezed his fist into the sheets of the bed. He screamed a bit in his throat - the desperation to get fucked finally coming to a head - muffling it with his arm before taking a deep desperate breath and saying, "Jesus, Steve, Baby! That's so good. You're so good to me. Steve! Harder." He bit his arm again and gripped the headboard with his other hand.

---

Steve panicked at first when he heard the little scream but when Bucky asked for more, he was quick to give it to him. He started spanking Bucky with every thrust, barely able to keep up. "Say my name again."

---

"Steve!" Bucky shouted and arched his back. "Steve, Steve, Steve, Baby, fuck me!" He found one of Steve's hands and carded it into his hair. "I love your cock. I love being fucked open by you. You give me everything I need, Steve."

---

Steve leaned his head forward to bite the side of Bucky's neck hard enough to mark him. He loved making Bucky desperate and needy. He sounded so fucking sexy like that. When he felt himself get close to orgasm, Steve flipped Bucky over like he weighed nothing and locked eyes with him as he kept pounding him into the mattress.

---

Bucky's eyes were wild and blown out in arousal. His chest was so tight and his heart was beating so fast. He wrapped his legs around Steve's middle so he could get deeper inside him. "Steve, Steve, I'm almost there," he gasped and rushed his hand up and down his dick. When his orgasm hit, he squeezed his eyes shut and yelped with the force of it before going limp under Steve.

---

Steve fucked his husband through his orgasm and he came shortly after. With a few final, harsh thrusts, Steve spilled inside of Bucky. Exhausted, he laid back down on Bucky with his dick still inside his ass and his sweaty, dirty uniform scratching against Bucky's bare skin. He panted heavily against his neck while he stroked his sides. "You okay?"

---

"Mmm, shh," Bucky whined and held Steve close. "I want to ask for something but I don't want you to be mad at me," he said quietly and squeezed his ass around Steve's cock intermittently. "Are you satiated and tired enough for me to ask?"

---

Steve let out soft, pleasurable noises when Bucky's ass squeezed around his cock. "You're worrying me," Steve mumbled tiredly as Bucky prepared him for the question. "Get it over with and ask already."

---

Bucky nodded and kissed Steve once. "I bought a butt plug and I was wondering if you'd let me wear it tonight while I sleep. That way your come stays inside me and when we wake up, you can fuck me again and I'll be ready for you." He sighed and bit his lip, waiting. "You can say 'no'."

---

Steve wasn't entirely for the idea. But he was trying to be more open-minded about all this. Admittedly, Steve was having a bit of a hard time. "Why would you buy one when you know I don't like you using them?" he complained. "How big is it?" Maybe if it were small enough he would let it go since he wouldn't get jealous of being replaced.

---

"Not that big," Bucky said. "And it's not like I used it. I haven't touched it since I got it. I wasn't even going to the shop for myself. I was with Clint. He was getting things for..." Bucky cleared his throat. "He needed something and he said he felt weird being the only one buying something. But, seriously, I didn't use it. And I don't have to ever use it if you don't want that."
Steve let out a little huff and pulled out. He made a motion with his hand to show Bucky that he could go and get the plug, but Steve kept his eyes away so he wouldn't watch if Bucky did choose to get the plug. "Was he really getting something that embarrassing?"

"Oh yeah." Bucky nodded but didn't move off the bed yet. He could tell Steve really didn't want this but he just didn't want to tell Bucky that he wasn't allowed. So instead, Bucky took Steve's fingers and pulled himself up on the mattress so he could stick them back inside his ass. "Natasha is into some hardcore things. I have a lot of respect for her. She's getting Clint to try so much he's never done before."

Steve let Bucky move him as he pleased. When Bucky spoke about Natasha getting Clint to explore, he cringed and huffed out, "Ugh, Natasha..." as if he was ready to scold her the next time he saw her. "Am I weird for not being into any of this stuff?" He looked down at his fingers that were inside Bucky and asked, "Didn't you want the plug?"

"I did want it but you don't," Bucky said and pet Steve's head. "So I'll just not. And I don't think you're weird. I think you are very happy with what you know and like. And you are still that little vanilla virgin Catholic. But I knew that. I had to learn that quick and I think I've been good so far at being careful with you about this stuff. You're not weird or abnormal or anything."

Steve wrapped his free arm tightly around Bucky's waist. "I'm sorry I'm not into the same stuff you are, Baby," he sighed. He wished he were. "You are doing a good job at understanding." Steve kissed along Bucky's jaw and then suggested, "Listen... if you want to use the plug or Phillip or whatever else you've got when I'm not around, do it. I just don't want to know about it."

Bucky smiled and gave Steve a long pleased kiss. "Thank you, Baby," he said and nuzzled into Steve's neck. "But, no, I'm not doing that. That's not what you really want and it'll be killing you all the time wondering whether I'm doing it or not. I know you, Steve. You'll drive yourself crazy."

Steve smiled guiltily because he knew he would constantly doubt himself and wonder if Bucky was unsatisfied with him. "Yeah, I guess you're right," he sighed and cleared his throat to change the subject. "So did you have a good time at the game?"

"Yes, I did," Bucky snuggled closer to Steve and held his face in his hands. "You were so sexy out there. And you played so well. And Christopher had a great time. There was a lot going on and he was just trying to take everything in. He did get frustrated a few times when he lost you in the mass of people. Also, he really liked Clint. Clint let him put his hands in his mouth."
Steve smiled happily at the praise and snuggled Bucky lovingly. "I like playing baseball. I really hope Christopher wants to do it so I can be his coach. Wouldn't that be great?" He pet his fingers through Bucky's hair gently. "We got to get him to call him 'Uncle Clint,'" Steve said.

---

Bucky smiled at the thought and then frowned. It just hit him that the girls and his son weren't here. He didn't know what they were doing or if they were all okay. "You want to call your mom? See how everyone is doing?"

---

"You want get on the phone with my mom too?" Steve asked and nosed at Bucky's neck. "I was thinking the same thing.

---

"Yes, I need to talk to my kids and make sure everything is fine," Bucky said and rolled his eyes, "I know. I'm such a dad. But now I actually am a dad so my paternal tendencies are validated." He huffed and slipped out of bed. "Come on, let's go call your mom."

---

"You're such a sap," Steve teased and stood up so he could make the call. Sarah answered, expecting the new parents to check in. "Hello, boys," she said. "Christopher is already sleeping. Lilly tired him out after the game."

---

"Did he eat for you?" Bucky asked and held Steve's hand. "Sometimes he doesn't like eating if we aren't there. Lilly tried once when I was taking a nap and he just wasn't having it. Also, were the girls good for you? Didn't make things too hard on you today?"

---

"No, he did not eat," Sarah admitted. "But I imagine he will give in when he's hungry enough," she added. "Steve was a stubborn baby sometimes, but all babies give in at some point, usually well before you have to worry." Steve was worried anyway. "The girls behaved themselves. We went out to dinner together."

---

Bucky looked to Steve whose face said that he wanted to go over there so his son could eat. "He will be okay, Steve," Bucky reassured. "But it's up to you if you want to go get them. I'm fine either way." He offered the phone to Steve so he could talk to his mom if he liked.

---

Steve talked with his mom for a little while and as much as he wanted to get their son, he told himself that they all needed to get used to spending the night separated from each other. After a little while, he sighed and hung up. "I miss them already..."

---

"I know. It's rough," Bucky said and hugged Steve to him. "Take it from me, it doesn't get easier.
Everyone just gets older." He sighed and banged his head onto Steve's shoulder. "I can't believe Christopher has little teeth already."

---

Steve chuckled and shook his head a little. "I'm dying to hear him talk. I want to hear what's going on in that adorable head of his. Won't that be great, Buck? After that, he's got to stop growing, though."

---

"I wish that's how it worked," Bucky said. "I'd make it so you and I don't get any older and the girls don't grow up and leave me and Christopher stays a happy little baby." He sighed. "But, I can't make that happen. And I think I'd miss being able to see Christopher go through the same milestones that the girls did."

---

Steve pouted. "We already have teenagers. I'd be happy with a toddler forever. That's why I married you," he joked and kissed Bucky's lips gently. "What was the best milestone you got to watch?"

---

"Watch yourself, Steve," Bucky warned half-heartedly as he thought. "Becca's first 'A plus' was a big deal. We went out for pizza as a family. Lilly's first day of preschool. She cried when Mom left her there but then she enjoyed herself so much during the day that she got mad when she had to come home." Bucky smiled and listed off a few more. "Lilly's first soccer game, the day we got a family dog, the first time they rode bikes by themselves. There's so many important things."

---

Steve imagined being able to put Christopher's good grades on the fridge and sending him off to school every day. It would be so great. "I never knew you had a family dog," Steve said. "When we get a bigger place, we're definitely getting a dog." As if Raphael sensed what they were talking about, he hopped onto the bed and meowed at them.

---

Bucky pet the cat and scratched behind his ears. "Do you think we will ever get to have any more kids? I know it wasn't certain we were ever even going to get Christopher but do you think a few years down the line, something like this could happen again and we could get another child?"

---

Steve laughed a little. "We just got one and you're already looking for a second?" Steve wanted lots of kids, but, now that he had Christopher, he would feel guilty splitting his attention between several babies. "I mean, it's possible," he said. "I could always come across some other kid with parents going to prison."

---

"I mean, we don't always have to get a kid because of that." Bucky laughed and squeezed Steve's arm. "I'm just saying, I want Christopher to be able to have little siblings like I did. I want him to get to be a big brother and hold his little sister and know that she's going to need him and love him."
Steve felt his heart melt as he imagined Christopher growing up into the perfect big brother. "Oh," he sighed happily. "That would be amazing..." he shrugged. "We could always hope Clint and Nat have an accident and want us to keep the baby," he joked.

"God, if they do, there's no way Clint is letting that baby out of his sight," Bucky said. "He will be like the cool dad who is really laid back but still trails after his kids everywhere they go." Bucky chuckled. "No, but there are tons of ways that another child could find their way into our lives."

"He'd be a good dad. Natasha wouldn't know what to do at first. Probably would hate it until she figured out how to be a mom and then she'd be great." Steve smiled. "Who knows? Maybe they'll let gay couples adopt at some point. Especially since we already have a kid."

"That's what I'm going to hold out hope for." Bucky sighed. "Or maybe there is an accident like what happened with my parents and there isn't anyone to take the child and we can do that."

Steve nodded. "Whatever it is, I want to give more kids a good home. And for Christopher to have more siblings," he said. "I'd love to see you with a kid in each arm and one hanging on each leg."

"That's four," Bucky's eyes went wide. "And assuming Christopher is old enough not to be held by the time he gets a sibling, that's a total of five. How many kids are we having, Steve?" Bucky honestly wouldn't mind if Steve said that they wouldn't stop until they reached a dozen. He loved having Christopher and being a dad and he loved seeing Steve so happy to be a dad too.

"As many as we can handle," Steve said. "I love kids, Bucky. I love being a dad so much. Think of all the things we can do with them... playing board games and teaching them how to write. Or helping them with dancing or sports."

Bucky smiled and kissed Steve slowly. "I love you, Baby. And I'll have as many kids as you want to have. We will eventually need a bigger place but we will deal with that later." He kissed down Steve's neck and then licked back up. "I kind of want to go again," he whispered and let his hand gently rest under Steve's balls. "You want to go again?"

"You're the best," Steve said happily. "I knew I married the right man." He purred when Bucky licked his neck and teased his balls. Steve's dick started to harden at the attention. "Yeah. You want it rough again?"
Bucky bit his lip and nodded. "Yes, but I also want to do whatever you want to do. And if you want to be fucked this time, or do sixty-nine or shower sex or whatever… You pick." He licked into Steve's mouth while Steve thought and he waited for his answer.

---

"I think I want to pin your hands above your head and fuck you nice and slow," Steve said and kissed him, dragging his hands over Bucky's chest. "And then we will sixty-nine. And then we will finger each other in the shower."

---

"Jesus, okay, Steve," Bucky gasped and pushed his crotch against Steve's leg. "I don't know if I'll be able to last through all of that but I'll do what I can. Do you want the bed ties to keep my arms up over my head?"

---

"I think that'll be fun," Steve said. "Then I'll get to use my hands for other things." Steve kissed him a few times and then got up to get the silk ties. "We will take our time and I'll keep you up all night," he said.

---

Bucky nodded wordlessly and moved his hands up above his head, waiting for the ties. "Steve? If you want to use your mouth on me for a few minutes before you fuck me, that would be really nice. I like seeing your head down by my ass."

---

Steve hummed as he took his time tying Bucky's hands up. "You would like that, huh?" He smirked and slowly kissed down his husband's body. "You want me to lick your hole good and open?"

---

Bucky groaned. "Do whatever you want with me. Just do something fast cause I'm going to start whining if you take any more time." He wrapped his legs around Steve and pouted. "Please, Baby, come on. Give me your tongue, please. I want you."

---

Steve dove down and spread Bucky's cheeks apart with his hands. He licked around the rim, tasting his come before pushing it inside, thrusting it in and out of Bucky's hole, which was pretty loose from their earlier round.

---

"Thank you," Bucky's voice squeaked a bit and his hands tried to reach down to hold Steve's head. He looked at the restraints and whined. He really did love this. "Steve, fingers," Bucky whispered and moved his legs up closer to his body so Steve could get at him better.

---

Bucky was so fucking adorable sometimes. Steve was quick to oblige and he put two fingers into him while he continued to lick him open. Once he knew Bucky was ready, he shifted higher on the bed and slid his dick easily into Bucky's ass. "So goddamn good for me, Buck."

---

"I love you," Bucky whispered and tried once again to reach out for him. "Okay, you need to come closer to me so I can kiss you, please." He waited for Steve and then once he got his lips on him, he kissed him so desperately.

---

Steve moved up to kiss him slowly and gently as his hips rocked steadily in and out of Bucky's ass. "Wrap your legs tighter around me, Sweetheart. Want to feel how eager you are."

---

Bucky accommodated Steve and squeezed his thighs around him. He sighed contentedly and closed his eyes. He liked the slower fucks that Steve liked to give him. It gave him a chance to think about it as they went. It gave him time to really let it sink in that he gets to be with someone like Steve.

---

"Perfect," Steve breathed out. He moved his hips slowly and dragged his nails along the outside of Bucky's thigh as he went. "There's some benefit to having the house to ourselves," he purred. "Get to keep you all to myself."

---

"And we can be loud and walk around naked," Bucky added. "Remember that first time we took a whole night and your mom had the girls? I had to teach you that waterproof lube was different from regular lube."

---

Steve laughed. "Don't remind me how innocent I was," he complained. "I don’t know how you had the patience for me. I guess I'm worth it," he teased.

---

"You are worth it," Bucky agreed. "And just think of all the things you’ve done in the past year with me. We’ve had sex about a thousand times, right? We even had outdoor sex by the lake. That's pretty big."

---

"A thousand? Christ, we might have," Steve groaned. "That's so much sex." He reached between them to stroke Bucky's cock in his hand. This time last year, Steve hadn't even had sex once. "Where's someplace new you want to fuck?"

---

"I don't know," Bucky said quickly and flung his head back. "I can't think when you touch my dick like that, Baby. Where do you want to have sex?" His eyes fluttered open and he focused in on Steve who was staring at him intensely with hooded eyes.
Steve took advantage of the moment and sucked a mark onto Bucky's throat. "The beach," Steve said. "We can go to Coney Island one night. Have nice, sweet sex under the docks," Steve purred. He could feel himself getting close to orgasm and his hips stuttered forward.

---

"Oh god, yes, let's do that." Bucky smiled and squeezed his ass around Steve. "I love that idea." Steve kept his pace and his hand on Bucky's cock and Bucky's body didn't give much warning before he was exploding his come out through Steve's fingers.

---

Steve stroked Bucky's dick and milked out every last drop of come from him. When Bucky was dry, Steve gripped his hips with both hands and fucked Bucky nice and deep until he came a second time in his ass. He pulled out, but only to finger Bucky idly as he looked down at him with an adoring smile. "How long until round three?"

---

Bucky was breathless and he kept tugging on the restraints. "Sleep now, sex in the morning," he whined and glared at the ties. "I'll wake you up with my tongue in your ass this time, how's that? But right now I want to be held and I need this damn ties off so I can touch my husband."

---

Steve laughed a little and used his free hand to untie Bucky's hands. After Bucky started to snuggle him, Steve pulled his fingers out of his ass and nuzzled at Bucky's neck. "Mmm, I love you," he mumbled. "Thank you for an amazing night."

---

"I love you too," Bucky whispered and licked Steve's neck once playfully before curling up closer against his chest and sighing. "You're so perfect." He smiled to himself and quickly drifted off. He dreamed of Christopher being in school and Steve's shelter being completed and ready to open and getting a dog and teaching his son to swim and play games and ride a bike.
The next morning was full of lazy morning sex in the shower. They stayed in bed a little longer than they should have but soon enough they got dressed and went to pick up the girls and their son. Steve kind of hogged Christopher because he missed their little boy and he was having a grand time making funny noises at him.

Once they got back home, Lilly marched straight to her room and slammed the door. Becca sighed and rubbed her face and Christopher looked alarmed at the noise. "Did something happen at Sarah's?" Bucky asked Becca and stared at Lilly's shut door.

Becca nodded and said, "She got her first period. It was a pretty big ordeal. Lilly said something about being a 'goddamn fucking early bloomer.' Then she yelled about it not being fair and she cried herself to sleep."

Steve quickly kissed the baby's cheek when he saw the surprised look just in case Christopher felt like he was about to cry. He then looked a bit awkwardly up at Becca when she brought up Lilly getting her period. He had bought pads and tampons before so it wasn't like he thought it was taboo, but Steve had no clue how to try and comfort Lilly over it. "Is it really that early for her to be getting her period? She's almost a teenager."

"She's twelve," Becca said and crossed her arms. "She's the average age. But she had another good year if she was lucky."

"Yeah, but, Becca, you were a bit later than average," Bucky added. "Lilly is right on time but just doesn't want to be." He sighed. "I can't decide if I should go talk to her or let her have alone time."

"My mom said it was normal for girls to get theirs at this age, though. It's when they're eleven or younger that it's a bit too early..." Steve thought for a moment and then asked, "Did my mom talk things over with her? Or did you, Becca?"

"Yeah we did what we could," Becca said and rummaged in the fridge for a snack. "But Lilly really didn't want to talk about it. She was pretty angry about the whole thing and you know how she gets when she is mad."

Bucky sighed, "Here, Steve, let's take Christopher to her. She likes holding him so maybe that will help some."

"Are you sure it's a smart idea? You don't think she's going to be mean cause she's upset?" Steve pouted a little but ultimately decided that Christopher was the best bet at cheering her up. He knocked on her door and walked in. "Hey, Lil? I need you to watch Christopher for a bit. Can you
Lilly wiped her eyes and wordlessly held out her arms to take the baby. She held him close and rocked him a little bit before looking up at Steve and Bucky and saying, "He wouldn't eat last night. All three of us tried but got nowhere with him."

Steve gave a worried frown. "So he still hasn't eaten since yesterday?" Christopher made content, little noises and buried his face against Lilly's chest.

"Not since Bucky dropped him off," Lilly said and pet Christopher's head. "He was hungry and he cried to get food but then once he had the bottle in front of him he refused to drink any of it."

Bucky sighed, "We need to figure out how to break that habit. Lilly, do you want to come sit in the kitchen and hold him so we can get a bottle for him?"

"Poor little guy," Steve said gently, petting the back of Christopher's head. Lilly didn't want to get up but she stood up anyway and carried Christopher over to the kitchen. He started to bounce excitedly in her arms, knowing that this is where they ate.

Bucky prepared a bottle for him and he started whining and grabbing for it the second he realized what his Pops was doing. "I'm coming, Bean, hold on." Bucky chuckled and handed Steve the bottle so he could take Christopher and feed him. Bucky sat down at the table by Lilly and said, "Becca told us what happened. How are you feeling?"

The baby was so predictable sometimes. Steve took him into one arm and held the bottle with the other. Christopher hungrily sucked down the food. Lilly gave Bucky a moody glare when her brother asked about her 'situation'. She clearly wasn't in the mood to talk about - probably not ever. "Did you make me hold the baby just to drag me out here?"

Bucky shrugged. "Pretty much, yeah." He nodded and took Lilly's hand gently and she let him hold it even if she was mad about it. "I don't know what you're going through right now but I'm here for cuddles if you want. Or we can make brownies or something. Are you in any pain?"

"I'm not dying, Bucky. It's just a period," she said grumpily. "Do me a favor and quit talking about it." Lilly didn't like Bucky making such a big deal over it.

Steve kissed Christopher's head. " Aren't you lucky, baby boy? You don't have to get a period."

Lilly glared. "Steve!"
Bucky sighed and rubbed his face. "Don't get her going, Steve." He sat back in his chair. "I just wanted to make sure you were okay because you stormed right to your room and didn't even say anything and I heard you had a rough night last night."

"She's been a brat to me in the past, I'm allowed to be a brat sometimes," Steve defended in a pleasant tone back to Bucky.

"I storm into my room all the time," Lilly countered to Bucky.

"Oh, god, I have four children," Bucky whined and looked at the ceiling. "Alright, Lil, if you don't need anything then just go be upset and come get me if you change your mind. And, Steve, work with me here," he said with a little desperate laugh.

Steve smirked and blew a little raspberry on Christopher's cheek. "I'll behave now," he said. Lilly stood up and went back to her room without much more of a fuss. "Do we know yet if she uses pads or tampons? Can kids her age even use tampons?"

"I don't know," Bucky said and shrugged. "I assume that comes later. Becca always just asks for some cash to go get her own when she needs them so I'm betting she can talk to Lilly about it." He looked at Christopher and sighed. "Clint and I were talking yesterday about how we are going to need to get some teething toys for Christopher. And he's going to be a lot more grumpy for a while as they come in."

"I don't want them to feel uncomfortable about their periods around us. I don't mind going out and getting stuff for them," Steve said. He cradled Christopher and snuggled him to his chest. "And there's no way our beautiful boy could be grumpy. But I agree. We need teething toys for him."

"Can I hold him for a bit?" Bucky asked and looked sadly at his son. He hadn't yet got to hold him since they got him back from Steve's mom's place. "Then I'll help you make some dinner if you like. I don't work tomorrow so I will take Christopher to get some teething toys and I'll see if I can't find something nice for the girls too so they don't feel left out."

Steve passed Christopher over when Bucky asked for him. The baby reached up immediately to pull Bucky's hair. He had a habit of doing that. "You going to get Lilly a teething toy too?" he joked.

"I thought you said you were going to behave," Bucky replied tiredly and glanced at Steve. "I might buy Christopher some sort of rope toy, too. Try to get him to quit yanking on my hair. He's strong and it hurts."

---

Christopher smiled at his pops, waiting for him to smile back. "I hear that babies have a pulling phase until they get to their biting phase. In a few months, you'll miss the days that he tugged your hair."

---

"No, I'll be pleased," Bucky said and sat back and rested the baby on his chest. "That means he will start hurting both of us and it won't be just me anymore. You'll get to suffer right alongside me, Babe." Bucky smirked and looked down at Christopher. "Be sure to bite your dad more than me. I've already lost a good chunk of hair from you."

---

When Bucky started talking to the baby, Christopher smiled excitedly and wiggled happily in his arms. Steve loved how happy Christopher got when he was given attention. "Ouch... wishing harm on your own husband. You wound me."

---

"No, I'm wishing for fairness," Bucky said. "Here, come here and I'll tug your short little hairs and then you'll understand." While he talked, Christopher's hand wormed it's way back up to Bucky's head and he took a fist full of dark brown hair and tried pulling it towards his mouth.

---

"I'll pass." Steve grimaced when he saw Christopher go for Bucky's hair again. "Oh, Sweetheart, leave your pop alone," he said gently. As soon as Steve tried to get him to let go, he made a loud, unhappy noise and tugged harder.

---

"Ow," Bucky groaned and managed to get the clump of hair from Christopher's tiny fist. He quickly pulled his hair back into a bun on his head. The baby's eyes went wide and he tried to get at the bun but when it proved impossible, he pouted and started to cry, letting out angry loud sobs.

---

Steve hurried off to go get a rattle for him in an attempt to calm him down. "Hey, Bean, this is a lot more fun than Pop's hair." Christ, this baby had a set of lungs on him. "He's really in a mood today, isn't he?"

---

Bucky nodded and held the baby out to Steve. "Take him. I need to get some medicine. I have a headache." He waited until Christopher was in Steve's arms and then he quickly went to their bathroom and downed a few pills. When he came back, Steve was on the ground with the baby trying to get him to stop crying and focus on his plush dog.

---

Steve tried to console Christopher by giving him all his favorite toys, but he didn't want anything to do with them. "Come on, baby boy..." Steve said, giving Bucky an apologetic look for not being able to calm him down. Finally, Steve tried putting his finger up to his lips and Christopher looked down at it before chewing on it, quieting down.

---

Bucky sighed and flopped down on the couch. "I guess the grumpy teething has already started, huh? Do you want me to find a pacifier and maybe try to trade it for your finger?" He was tired. He and Steve didn't get a whole lot of sleep the night before and then they got all their kids back home and had to handle tiny crisis after tiny crisis.

---

"I'll let him do this. I don't know if a pacifier is meant for teething," Steve said. He laid on the floor and pulled Christopher onto his chest, letting the baby keep gnawing on his finger. "You want to take a nap, Buck? I can keep an eye on things."

---

"Mhmm," Bucky nodded once and stood up from the couch. "Wake me up in an hour so I can watch Christopher while you make dinner, okay?" He stretched his arms back and went to bed to nap. Sometimes he forgot just how much work a baby was. He hadn't had a baby around for so long. But he had Steve to help and he couldn't do this without him.

---

Steve nodded and spent a little over an hour playing with the baby and giving him plenty of love. Christopher was in a better mood by the time Steve woke Bucky up from his nap. "Love, Buck, I got to make dinner."

---

Bucky woke up slowly and rolled to face Steve. Christopher was reaching out to Bucky so he sat up in bed and took the baby from him. "Okay, Little Bean, you want to try to take a nap on Pops for a bit?" he asked and laid the baby securely on his chest and held his arms under his bottom. "Let's go lay on the couch so we can be with Daddy while he cooks."

---

Christopher babbled at Bucky and wiggled happily on top of him. Steve kissed them both and went to the kitchen. Raphael jumped on top of Bucky's belly as well and curled up next to the baby as he said, "Papapapapapa."

---

"Hey," Bucky said excitedly and looked at Christopher. "That was almost a word, wasn't it?" He gently held both the baby and the cat and went to the kitchen quickly. "Steve, listen to this." He set that cat down and rubbed the baby's back. "Do it again, Christopher? Show Daddy what you just did."

---

Steve was in the middle of chopping up the chicken breast when the two came into the kitchen. Christopher shoved his little fist in his mouth and drooled all over it as he smiled up at Bucky. "What'd he do?" Steve asked.
"He made noises that sort of sounded like words," Bucky said with a pout and gingerly took Christopher's hand from his mouth. "Do it again, Bean. Papapapapa - like you did before." Bucky waited and got nothing. He shook his head as the baby just put his hand back into his mouth. "I swear. It was like a word."

Steve smiled fondly and walked over to kiss Bucky's cheek. "I don't think he's going to talk for a little while, Buck," he said. "He probably doesn't even know what he's babbling."

"But it sounded like a word," Bucky protested softly and watched with disappointment as Steve went back to making dinner. Christopher grinned again and showed his new little teeth off before trying to reach up for Bucky's hair that was still pulled tight into a bun. "No hair, Christopher, please," Bucky said and sat at the table.

Steve turned back and laughed a little at his boys. "Were the girls big hair pullers like him? I never saw a baby so obsessed with hair."

"Not really, no," Bucky said. "And the only one with long hair back then was my mother and she almost never had her hair down. It was always either in a tall ponytail or a braid. I remember the first time my hair was long enough to be braided. I was so proud and my dad took a picture of Mom and me together with our braided hair. I might still have that one somewhere."

Steve smiled. "I bet you were real adorable at that age," he said. "Maybe I should braid your hair for you now. Do it French style and all that. I always thought those looked nice," he said.

"Do you know how to braid hair?" Bucky asked quizzically. Becca usually braided his hair whenever he needed it that way - which wasn't often. Sometimes the three of them had the rare occasion where they had a braiding train going with Becca braiding Bucky's into a tight short German braid and Bucky braiding Lilly's long hair loosely off her shoulders.

"Of course. Becca taught me how months ago," Steve wanted to learn so he would be able to better help the girls. "We could let Christopher grow his hair long and braid it just like you did with your mom and sisters."

Bucky smiled proudly at Steve. "You're so cute," he said with a gleam in his eye and then looked down at the baby who was almost asleep on his chest. "I think letting Christopher's hair grow long would be adorable. A little toddler with long blonde hair, getting it in his face, and learning how to brush his own hair when he's a little older."
"He's going to have such beautiful hair, Buck. It's so bright already. Imagine when he's got a proper, full head of hair." Steve thought Christopher would be the most beautiful boy. "Lilly will have fun playing with it. I'm so happy she's so good with him."

---

"She really is," Bucky agreed and watched Christopher's eyes blink open slowly, trying to fight the urge to sleep. Dinner was ready soon after that and Lilly grumpily made her way back out to the kitchen with Becca in tow. Lilly was clearly still upset and Bucky thought it was best to just leave her be for a while as he fed a very sleepy Christopher while Steve had his dinner.
Steve had been determined to get the shelter going before the end of the summer. He wanted it running and known about in the community before autumn when things started getting cold. Today happened to be the big day and Steve was hurrying to get his family ready for the opening event. "Becca! Did you get all the blankets and books sorted? Lilly, I need you to have the care packages all dressed with ribbon."

"We got it, Steve, calm the fuck down," Becca snapped back and kept folding blankets. The past few days had been a strain for her with dealing with Steve. She wanted to help but he was sort of driving her up a wall. And she also didn't think it was fair that half the time when they were at the shelter working, Bucky was off in the corner watching Christopher and didn't have to deal with Steve and all the tasks.

Bucky grabbed Steve quickly and gave him a short kiss, "Hey, everything will be wonderful. Try to stress a little less." Christopher agreed with a stream of loud nonsense and hitting Steve's arm.

Steve apologetically smiled at Becca to show that he hadn't meant any harm or agitation. He turned back to Bucky and sighed. "I've never done this before. I just want to make sure that we have everything these people are going to need." They finished up the final touches on what they were bringing with them and then Steve loaded all of the supplies into his cruiser and then came back up to the apartment to collect his family. "Hey, little boxer," Steve said to Christopher when the baby hit his arm again. "You ready to go out there and save the world?"

"You know, Steve," Bucky said and took his hand. "I think it'll be really important for people to see the two of us together with our son. It'll help prove that nothing about us is wrong and people like us can live happy lives, you know?" He paused and ran a hand through Steve's hair. "I'm really, really proud of you, Baby. For this whole thing and all that you do for me and our family."

"I think so too, Buck. They'll see that having a family is possible and that couples like us can make real good parents," Steve said. He was just bursting with joy and energy. "I couldn't have done this without you, Bucky." He drew him in for a kiss. "Let's go. We got to get this show on the road."

Bucky piled the girls and Christopher's car seat into the back of the cruiser and made sure the baby was securely fastened before he slid into the passenger's side by Steve. On their drive over, Bucky could tell just how nervous Steve was. His leg was bouncing up and down and his fingers wouldn't stop tapping on the wheel. "Babe, Steve, it'll be perfect, really."

Christopher loved going for car rides, so he wiggled happily in his seat while his dad drove. "I won't be able to relax until the event's over," he said with a nervous laugh. "Father Frank says there's already half a dozen people who are waiting to use the shelter."
"That's good!" Bucky said excitedly. "That's exactly what we want. And Clint and Natasha are coming to support you. And Evan and Monty will be around later after they pick up some more towels and soap because I forgot to. I'm sorry again about that."

"Clint and Nat are the best," Steve sighed happily. "And better late than never. I'm thankful for any help."

When they got there, Father Frank laughed a little when he saw Steve running around to set up like a chicken without a head. The priest went up to Bucky and asked, "Has he been like this all day?"

"He was worse this morning," Bucky nodded and shook the priest's hand. "He just really wants this to go off without a hitch. You know how he gets. And I just want to thank you again for helping Steve do all this. He really admires you and trusts you and I think it's really important that he sees someone else in his faith that believes that nothing is wrong with him for being who he is."

"For a man who can take command at the drop of a hat, he can sure get nervous over such little things." Frank shook Bucky's hand back and smiled at the baby in Bucky's arms. "Hello, Christopher. Thank you for coming today," he said sweetly to the baby. "Would you like me to hold him so you can set up?"

"I would say 'yes'," Bucky said. "But he is going through this phase right now that if someone he doesn't really know is holding him he starts to cry. His nana is on her way so I can just hold him until she gets here and then help Steve. How much time do we have before it's officially open?"

Frank smiled and patted Bucky's shoulder. "We open in an hour. I'm having volunteers cooking lunch for everyone in the kitchens right now," he said.

By the time that hour arrived, the rest of the guests arrived and there were a good amount of people Steve and Bucky wouldn't recognize. Some were there to take shelter and others were friends of those in need. "Bucky, there's so many people here," Steve said nervously.

"Hey," Bucky said quickly and got Steve's attention. "That's good. We want that. This is a great turnout for the opening day, Steve." He leaned into him and kissed his cheek. "Go talk to people. Introduce yourself so people don't think there is some weird cop hanging out in the corner like you're doing right now."

Steve nodded determinedly and went out to start to mingle with the new faces, trying to act confident and reassure everyone else. After a short while, Bucky was approached by a tall man with hair that was turning grey on the sides. "Is that your son?" he asked.
Bucky looked up. He had been focused on Christopher and hadn't seen the man come up close to him. "Oh, yeah, sorry. This is Christopher. I'm Bucky." Bucky adjusted the baby and held out his hand to shake. Christopher made an upset little growl sound and hid his face in Bucky's shoulder. "Sorry, he's pretty wary of strangers lately. How did you hear about the shelter?"

---

The man looked excited to interact with the baby and was a little disappointed that Christopher refused to look at him. He shook Bucky's hand anyway. "I'm Tim," he said. "I was getting a drink at the club and overheard some guys talking about it... my wife kicked me out of my home a few months ago when she found out I used to date men and lean more towards that orientation than in her direction. Turned my whole family on me and it's been tough getting back on my feet."

---

"I'm really sorry about that," Bucky said and patted the man's arm. He saw Steve out of the corner of his eye and he was looking over at him. Bucky dropped his hand from the man's shoulder sheepishly and pocketed it. "Well, that's one of the reasons we started this shelter. So you're welcome here and you'll be able to work on getting yourself settled again. Do you have kids too?"

---

Tim gave a sad smile and nodded his head. "Two boys and a girl," he replied. "Haven't been allowed to see any of them." Tim rubbed at an eye because it killed him that he couldn't see his children over this. He put a hand on Bucky's shoulder. "I already owe you so much," he said. "I lost my job cause I was depressed. Knowing someone out there cares like this...it gives me hope again."

---

Bucky saw Steve again looking on but he didn't want to shake the man's hand off of his shoulder and seem rude. "I've got two girls and a boy," he said instead. "The girls are my sisters. I have guardianship of them." Bucky looked over at the plaque on the wall that read 'George Barnes Memorial Shelter' with a few versus underneath it. "And Christopher is mine and Steve's. Steve is the one who started the whole shelter." Bucky nodded towards his husband. "He's the officer over there."

---

Tim looked over to Steve, who was getting approached by a woman dressed in something similar to a police uniform but not quite. "He's cute," Tim said. "You're cute too," he added with a wink.

---

"Mhmm," Bucky hummed awkwardly and gave a short nod. He couldn't really tell if he was being flirted with but he really hoped Steve didn't think he was returning the sentiment or anything. He glanced again over at Steve who was engrossed in conversation with this woman who was standing a little too close and was a little too touchy. "I'm sorry, Tim, if you would excuse me, I need to go check on something with my friends over there." Bucky slipped off towards Natasha and Clint and grabbed Natasha's arm. "Who's that over by Steve?"

---

Natasha rolled her eyes with a groan. "Tish," she said. "New dispatcher and her voice is too damn high to be telling us what to do. She's like a Chihuahua. Also, she completely refuses to believe that Steve's actually gay," she said with distaste in her voice.

---

"Huh," Bucky mused and watched the woman interact with his husband. "She's kind of touchy, isn't she? And Steve... isn't really doing anything about it." He clenched his jaw and looked to Nat. "Is that the person Steve's been talking about for two weeks? I've just been hearing about some really nice new kid."

---

"He only likes her cause she's the only person at the precinct who lets him go on and on about his son. Everyone else runs off. He gushes for way too long," Natasha said. "He doesn't realize she's got the hots for him."

---

Bucky watched Tish again. She was touching Steve's lower arm and was awfully close to him. "Maybe I'll just go set things straight then," Bucky said and looked to Clint and Natasha for approval.

Clint chuckled and said, "Or not so straight, huh?" Bucky grinned and handed Christopher to Clint so he could slink up close to Steve.

---

When Bucky came over, Steve smiled happily and turned so he could kiss his cheek. "Hey, Beautiful," Steve said. "This is Tish. She's new at the department and we were just talking about Christopher."

---

Bucky held out his hand to the woman and grasped tightly to Steve with his other. "I'm Bucky. You've probably heard about me," Bucky said with a twinge of harshness in his voice. "Do you like the shelter? Steve named it after my father."

---

Tish shook his hand. Because of his automatic distaste for her, Bucky had kind of been expecting her hands to be cold and clammy and generally unpleasant but her skin was warm and soft with a thin layer of lotion. Somehow, that was worse. "Oh, yes. Steve's friend," she answered with a tight nod.

Steve put an arm around Bucky. "Husband," he corrected with a happy little smile.

Tish looked around the place and nodded. "It's nice. It's a good thing to give shelter to people that need it."

---

Bucky furrowed his brow and pursed his lips. He did not like the way Tish was looking at him - like he was a problem to be eliminated. And he also didn't like how she looked at Steve - which was much softer but also very hungry. "Gay people like myself and Steve need a lot of support and protection right now." He emphasized 'Steve' and gave her a pointed look.
Tish treated Bucky like he was hardly there, like he didn't stand a chance against her. "Well, I hand knitted pillow covers for the shelter," she said. "Steve's already thanked me for it. He brought me some cookies into work the other day," she said coolly.

"Yeah, Buck," Steve said excitedly. "The pillows look really nice now."

"Great," Bucky said flatly and then gave Steve a kiss. "I'm going to go feed our son." He left to get Christopher from Clint and sat at a table by himself. After a long while, Tim came over and sat down by Bucky. "Are you having a good evening so far, Tim?" he asked with a defeated sigh.

Tim saw the look on Bucky's face. "I am, yeah. You don't look like you are." He paused and leaned in closer. "Listen. Your husband doesn't seem to be giving you much attention. Maybe if you let me flirt with you, you can make him jealous. We don't have to do anything."

Bucky scoffed and gave Tim a look. "Thanks, I guess. But he's not the problem." Bucky sighed and looked at Tish who was laughing wildly at something Steve had said. "It's that tiny nuisance of a woman. She's got a thing for Steve apparently. Steve probably has no clue that she's even flirting with him. He can be dense about those things sometimes."

Tim looked over at Steve and Tish. "Isn't he a police officer? And he can't tell when some chick thinks she can fuck the gay out of him?" He snorted. "It's kind of endearing that he's so oblivious to that kind of thing."

"Well, I think Steve just has a hard time imaging anyone having a crush on him so he doesn’t know how to spot it. I'm pretty sure the only reason Steve noticed I was flirting with him was because I was severely obvious about it," Bucky said. "But, then again, so is Tish. I don't know. Steve's also an exceedingly polite person. So even if he knows what she is doing, he probably doesn't have the heart to tell her to stop."

"Not very fair of her to do that with you guys. I mean, I'm flirting but I'll back off if you ask me to," Tim said. "And I don't come on too strong." He smiled and nudged Bucky lightly. "I can distract your husband so that lady can't talk to him."

Bucky laughed and smiled at Tim. At least this guy was real enough to admit he was flirting. "That's okay. Thank you, though. You're here to seek refuge, not to keep short bottle-blonde women away from my husband." As Bucky was talking, Christopher reached up and tangled his hand in Bucky's hair. He gave it a sharp tug then. "Fuck! Ow!" Bucky yelped and Steve looked over at him from across the room. "Christopher, please release my hair," Bucky pleaded and tried balancing the boy on his knee and getting his hand out of his hair.
Steve's head snapped up when he heard the yelp. He ran over and carefully took Christopher's hand out of Bucky's hair. "No," he said firmly to the baby. It was cute at first but now Christopher was really starting to pull hard and it was hurting Bucky. "That's enough tugging from you." When Steve used that low tone with the baby, Christopher started to tear up and cry.

"Jesus, okay," Bucky breathed and stood up. "I'm going to take him outside for a bit so he doesn't cause a scene in here."

The second Bucky left, Tish hightailed it back over to Steve. "Bucky seems kind of annoyed at your baby, Steve. He was a little rude to him. Don't you think?"

Steve frowned when Bucky walked away and looked sad that he couldn't help out more. "What?" He looked down at Tish in confusion. "No. He's great with Christopher. Our son just needs to start learning what hurts his pop."

"Still," Tish said and cocked her head to the side slightly. "I wouldn't have cursed around a baby. Or in a church shelter. That's kind of uncalled for." Neither of them noticed Tim quietly observing from a few feet away - like he was taking notes to tell Bucky all about it later.

"He doesn't mean to swear and he's getting better at it," Steve said. "This whole shelter wouldn't exist without Bucky's help, so he's allowed to swear in it, I guess." He sighed and gave her a look. "Please, I love my husband. I'd really like it if you don't talk poorly of him."

Tish shrugged. "I mean no offense, honestly," she said with her words dripping like honey from her lips. "How about we get some food and forget about it?" She grinned at Steve and then noticed Bucky coming back inside with Christopher now calmed down. Tish nudged Steve over to the serving line where Becca and Lilly were both helping dish out plates.

Steve followed after Tish to get some food but as soon as he got the chance to, though, he took his food to sit with his family. "Do you have a headache, Buck? I can hold onto Christopher."

"Yeah, I do," Bucky sighed. "But, go ahead and eat, Baby. I'll pass him off to your mom when I get hungry. You have people to talk to." He thought, If Tish will even let him mingle with other people. "I could really go for a cigarette right now. Or three."

Steve chewed on his food thoughtfully and said, "You seem nervous, Bucky. Is there anything I can do?"  Becca and Lilly looked at each other because they'd seen how Tish shadowed Steve all night.
"Nah, man," Bucky said offhandedly and regretted it almost immediately. Steve knew something was up and Bucky always pulled out what Steve called his 'hippie speak' whenever he was trying to play things cool. "I mean, no, I'm fine... I'm fine." He sighed and looked down at Christopher who was happily sucking on his fingers and staring up at his Pops.

Steve knew something was wrong the second Bucky went to ‘hippie speak’. But he didn't push Bucky to talk more about it. Instead, Steve suggested, "We should probably say goodbye and head back after we eat. I'm kind of tired."

"Are you sure?" Bucky asked and replaced his son's hand with a pacifier. "We can stay longer. It’s fine. We already have about seven or eight people staying tonight in the bunks. Have you had a chance to meet them all? I saw Father Frank introducing himself earlier."

Steve nodded. He wanted to stay and help with things longer, but Bucky was more important to him. "I met them all. I'll come over tomorrow anyway," he said. "After today, I think we all need a good rest."

"Okay, let's go home after we eat then," Bucky agreed and pet Christopher's head. "Our Little Bean should probably sleep soon anyway. He's had a big day, too. Met a lot of new people. Monty and Evan bought him a new toy."

"Oh yeah? What did they get him?" Steve asked. Tish sat away from the group of them, but she was still eyeing Steve every so often regardless of Natasha and Clint’s best attempts to distract her.

Bucky took the toy from the bag. It was a crinkly elephant that made noises when he was squeezed. Christopher immediately dropped the pacifier from his mouth and started whining and reached for the animal. "Baby Boy, why are you so grumpy today, huh? That's just about the third time you've spit out your pacifier."

Steve thought it was a little adorable how much Christopher liked his new toy. "Evan and Monty know how to win a kid over." He picked up the pacified and dusted it off. "You think he's going to have issues being considerate? He seems a bit...one-track-minded. Or is this just a baby thing?"

"It's a baby thing," Bucky reassured him. "All babies are selfish and one-track-minded. He will grow out of it once he learns more and gets more self-aware and stuff like that." He handed the baby off to Steve so he could go get some food really quick. He noticed Tish watching him walk away.
Christopher calmed down once he had his new toy. "You were a determined, little boy as well," Sarah told Steve to reassure him.

Becca got up to follow Bucky. "What's up with that lady that keeps staring at us?" she asked.

Bucky lowered his voice and said, "She's the new dispatcher at the police station and she wants to get in Steve's pants." He went through the line with Becca right beside him. "She's been on Steve all day and Natasha said she's like this at the precinct too. I do not like her."

"Steve's told her he's married, right?" Becca asked, frowning. She couldn't see Steve cheating but she was surprised that he didn't shake her off by now with how proud he was to have the family he did. "What are we going to do about it?"

"I don't think we can do anything about it," Bucky said. "Steve has made it clear who I am to him and Natasha has told her about Steve's coming out event last fall and then about Rumlow and the aftermath. She's just a wickedly persistent woman. But I'm hoping she will give up once she realizes that she doesn't have any of the parts that interest Steve."

"That's really annoying," Becca said, frowning over at Bucky. "She's a home wrecker. Except Steve won't do anything." She sat down and eyed Tish moodily throughout the rest of their meal.

Bucky leaned into his sister and whispered, "I could probably blow Steve right here and she wouldn't let up." Becca made a face and Bucky apologized with a laugh. "It's okay, Steve said we are going home soon so we won't have to deal with her any longer." Although, it did make Bucky uncomfortable knowing that she was at work with Steve all the time.

Once Steve finished his food, he made his rounds around the place. He thanked the volunteers for their hard work, thanked their friends for coming, and wished all those staying at the shelter a comfortable visit, and gave Father Frank a huge hug. Tish ran over and gave Steve a hug too and a peck on the cheek before bouncing off. Steve frowned but didn't make a scene before heading back to his family.

"Fucking bitch," Bucky and Becca whispered at the same time. Bucky gave his sister a look and smiled weakly. At least one other member of his family saw what this woman was trying to do. He looked across the room and saw Clint and Natasha staring wide-eyed at Tish's boldness. And Bucky also noticed Tim who was waving him over. "Hold on, I'm going to go say goodbye to Tim. I'll meet you all at the car."
Steve came back to Bucky's sisters just as Bucky left to go say bye to Tim. Tim chuckled and shook his head when he saw Bucky come over. "She's a piece of work, isn't she?"

"Tim, did you ever see Alfred Hitchcock's movie Strangers on a Train?" Bucky asked and glanced back at Steve who was gathering Christopher's things to take home. "Maybe we can do something like that. You kill Tish and I'll kill someone for you." Bucky shook his head. "But, seriously, I'm not the only one who thought that kiss on the cheek was a little much, right?"

Tim laughed and then shook his head. "I'm not killing someone who works around a bunch of cops. No matter how awful she is. But, yes, that kiss was totally too much," Tim agreed. "Does this mean I get to give you a kiss on the cheek, though?"

"No, no it does not. Sorry." Bucky smiled and patted Tim on the shoulder. "I hope you get what you need here at the shelter and you can get back on your feet soon. I'll be around some days and so will Steve. It was nice to meet you."

Tim snapped his fingers. "Aw, damn. Worth a shot," he chuckled. "I look forward to seeing the both of you. Thank you again so much for what you do."

Tim went back to help clean up the dishes and Steve wrapped an arm around Bucky as soon as he came over. "Hey there."

"Hey," Bucky leaned into Steve and kissed his neck. "Let's go home, please. I'm tired and that headache hasn't really gone away. And I have to open the shop tomorrow morning. Reggie is still sick. And I want to fuck you really well before we go to bed."

Steve kissed the top of Bucky's head. He couldn't help but let out a little rumble of approval. "Yes, please," he said eagerly. "We got to put Christopher in his playpen, though. I don't like doing that when he's awake in our room."

"I know the drill, Steve," Bucky said and pinched his side. "But it's been almost a week and I'm anxious." He shuffled everyone out to the cruiser and got Christopher into his car seat again and plopped his new elephant toy on top of him so he had something to play with.

Once everyone was situated, Steve drove to drop his mom off before bringing everyone back to the apartment. Christopher wasn't entirely grumpy but he kept making noises as if he was asking for a longer car ride.
"I know, Bean, you're sleepy and you like the car," Bucky got Christopher from his car seat and held him on his hip so he could grab his diaper bag. "Let's go upstairs and you can sleep, okay?" He cuddled his son and yawned. "Big day for everyone."

---

Christopher laid his head against Bucky's chest and whined as he was picked up. He didn't fuss much after and the second that Bucky laid him down, he was asleep. Becca and Lilly both went to their rooms to do whatever it was that they wanted and Steve walked up behind Bucky. "Today was amazing all thanks to you."

---

Bucky leaned against Steve and reached a hand back to grab Steve's arm and bring it to his chest. "I think Christopher exhausted himself pretty thoroughly today," he said and watched their son breathe deeply. "He was pretty whiny too. I think he knew you were occupied so he was being a little jealous for attention." Bucky turned and hugged Steve around the middle. "I'm really proud of you, Steve. The shelter is perfect."

---

Steve leaned forward and kissed Bucky's jaw. "It's nice seeing him develop a personality...even if it's a grumpy one." He cupped the sides of Bucky's face and kissed him slowly. "I am so happy to have you at my side. I can't wait to help more and more people."

---

Bucky clung to Steve and breathed him in. "I feel like I didn't get to see you all day," he whispered into Steve's chest. He didn't say anything about Tish. If Steve didn't bring it up, Bucky wasn't going to. "Did you meet Tim? He was really nice. His wife kicked him out because she found out he wasn't totally straight. He has kids too."

---

Steve stroked his hand down Bucky's back and kissed him a few times as Bucky cuddled up to him. "I met him, yeah. I almost cried when he told me his story. I couldn't imagine not being allowed to see my kids. I feel awful if I don't see Christopher for a few hours."

---

"I hope he gets settled soon," Bucky said and let his hands drift down Steve's body. "We also forgot to talk to Father Frank about a baptism for Christopher. I know you wanted to do that soon." He held Steve's lower back and nuzzled his neck gently.

---

"I was thinking a little later in the fall. The leaves will be orange and it'll look gorgeous," Steve said. He smiled and kissed Bucky again. "So are you going to make me yours tonight or not?"

---

"Yes," Bucky said and rubbed his hands over Steve's ass. "Was waiting for you to give me the good ahead." He started walking Steve backwards towards the bed. "Your ass is mine, Steve. You know that right?" Bucky damn near growled and laid Steve back on the mattress. "I'm going to finger you until you can't speak and just when you think you're going to come, I'm going to stop and let it pass before I fuck you. If you want, Steve."

---

Steve loved to be possessive in bed but it was also really nice when Bucky was possessive right back - which was a rarity. And when he spoke dirty like that it drove him wild. "Fuck, yes. Please, Buck. I know I'm yours. Wouldn't ever doubt it."

---

"Good," Bucky said and stuck two of his fingers on Steve's lips so he would get the hint and suck them. He hummed low in his throat and used his free hand to palm at Steve's cock in his pants. "I hardly got to touch you today. I feel like I spent more time trying to find where you ran off to than actually being with you."

---

Steve obediently sucked on Bucky's fingers and moaned softly. Once he got them nice and wet, he started to undress Bucky. "Looks like I got to make up for lost time today by being all over you tonight. How's that, Husband?"

---

"You better," Bucky smirked and lifted his arms so Steve could slip his shirt off of him. "Help me with your pants," he said hurriedly and started fumbling with Steve's uniform. "Too many goddamn buttons on this thing."

---

Steve smirked as Bucky fussed with his uniform. "But you like how I look in it, so it's worth it," he said smartly. Once they were both naked, Steve pulled him down for a hot, slow kiss and rolled his hips up against Bucky.

---

Bucky groaned and licked into Steve's mouth. He popped off of him and gasped for air. "God, Steve, sometimes I forget how you taste. It's like if I don't have my mouth on yours every hour or so, I lose it." He mouthed at Steve's jaw and rubbed his stubbly trimmed beard against Steve's neck. "Here, Baby, let me get to that perfect ass of yours."

---

Steve grabbed Bucky's ass tightly and squeezed. He moaned low and grinded his hips up into his husband. Steve then smirked and started to gently push Bucky down lower, spreading his legs wide open so Bucky would have easy access to him.

---

"Thank you," Bucky whispered and reached for the lube. He put two of his fingers back in Steve's mouth while he fumbled to get the snap lid open. "There we go," Bucky said and took his fingers back to coat them in lube. "How tight are you tonight, Steve? It's been a long while since I've been inside you."
"Pretty damn tight, I'd guess," Steve said, kissing Bucky's fingertips as he pulled them away. He looked up at him and guided Bucky's fingers to his ass. "It'll be like it's the first time," he joked.

---

"Need me to go as slow as I did that day?" Bucky asked and teased one finger around Steve's hole. "I was just going to push you and get in so I could take you apart with my fingers, but I can go real slow like that first time. If you want."

---

"No," Steve said. "I want you to make me yours. Take me apart and push me," he growled, looking into Bucky's eyes. He knew something upset Bucky today and while he didn't know what it was, he knew he could make him feel better with this.

---

Bucky grinned and bit his lip, "Okay, Baby, I will." He pushed his finger all the way inside Steve and watched his face carefully. He loved how expressive he was when they were having sex. Bucky loved the way Steve's eyes barely shut and his mouth opened in a tiny gasp. He loved the crinkle in his forehead when he was trying to decide if he was ready for another finger. He loved when Steve licked his bottom lip just slightly as he watched Bucky watching him.

---

Steve drank in all the attention that Bucky was willing to give him. It felt so good being able to be the sole thing that Bucky focused on. "You're staring," Steve observed fondly as he watched Bucky watching him. "You like what you see?" He gave Bucky's ass a small swat.

---

Bucky smiled softly and then his face got dark and serious. "I love you, Steve," he said quickly and stopped moving his finger inside him. "You know I'll give you anything you ask for, right? You don't need anyone else." He rested his free hand over Steve's abs and then laughed at himself. "Sorry, it was just a long day. And I really missed touching you."

---

Steve was confused when Bucky went from needy and horny to completely serious. He whined when Bucky stopped finger-fucking him and he dragged him down for a kiss. "I know you would," he said. "Now quit being a sap and fuck your husband. Save it for cuddling."

---

"Coming from you, that's funny, Steve," Bucky said as he pushed in a second finger quickly. "You're the biggest sap I've ever met." He vigorously pumped his fingers in and out of Steve so he could add a third as soon as possible. "You want to tell me what you need tonight?" he asked and hooked his fingers to push against Steve's prostate. "I want to make sure you're getting what you need before I get what I need."

---

Steve arched his back and dug his fingers into Bucky's skin as the man pumped his fingers in and out of him. "Fuck-" he swore. "I want your dick. I want you to make me come so hard I see stars. And then I want you to hold me after."
Bucky quickened his pace so his arm kind of hurt with the effort. "You want to come before I fuck you or while I'm inside? I'll let you decide. How's that?" He looked down at Steve's ass then back up to Steve's face and smiled. "You're so cute like this."

"Jesus, Buck, you're going to pull a muscle," Steve said, laughing just a little as Bucky fucked him so hard with his fingers that his whole body rocked with each thrust and he had to fist his hands in the sheets. "I want you to try and fit as many fingers as I can handle. Then I want to come with your dick in me."

Bucky answered by slowing way down and pouring more lube over Steve's hole. He carefully eased his pinky in alongside the other three fingers and gently moved them in and out and spread them apart just slightly as he went. "How does this feel?" he asked and watched the crinkle in Steve's forehead get deeper. "I can stop."

Steve's brows knitted together as Bucky pushed a fourth finger inside of him. He blushed all the way down to his chest and arched his back off the bed. "Makes me feel so full, Buck," he groaned. "Keep going..."

"Okay," Bucky whispered and kept opening Steve up. "You haven't taken my fist before so if you need me to stop, tell me." He wanted to be really careful with Steve. The last time they tried this, he only got about this far and then couldn't handle anymore. Bucky made sure to pour more lube over his hand and gingerly slip his thumb into the fold of his palm and push in.

Steve was painfully hard and leaking pre-come all over his belly. When he felt Bucky add his last finger in, Steve cried out Bucky's name softly but didn't ask him to stop. Overwhelmed, he threw an arm over his face to hide how much it was affecting him. "Oh, Buck... just a little more. Go easy."

Bucky nodded and breathed with Steve, gently moving Steve's arm off his face. "Let me see you," he requested and started spreading his hand slowly open. "You've got every finger, Baby. How does it feel? Are you okay?"

Steve looked so vulnerable when Bucky moved his arm away. His pupils were blown wide and he looked up at Bucky, utterly fixated on his husband. "It feels so..." he gasped out, then paused to moan. "I feel so full and tight and stretched." He spread his legs a bit more and writhed under Bucky when every movement of Bucky's hand felt earth-shattering to him. "Gonna make me come too soon."
"Tell me to stop and I will," Bucky said and quit moving his hand while he waited for Steve's answer. Steve looked wrecked. Part of Bucky felt weird for seeing him like that - the roles were usually reversed between them. But part of Bucky needed to see this some more and greedily soaked in the knowledge that only he could do this to Steve. No tiny blonde woman could ever elicit this raw of a reaction from Steve. "You're beautiful."

---

"Don't stop." Steve made Bucky fist him slow and deep, making him moan helplessly and cry out some more. He had to have Bucky use his other hand to stifle him so he wouldn't wake the kids. When Steve felt on the edge of coming, he nudged Bucky. "Take it out," he gasped. "Want your cock." He looked like he was about to cry from pleasure.

---

Bucky was eager to comply and he very carefully removed his hand and stuck his cock inside of Steve. "Baby, I'm going to fuck you hard and fast, okay?" he said and put his arm up close to Steve's mouth. "Bite my arm to keep yourself quiet. Make me have to explain to Clint tomorrow why I have bruises like human teeth."

---

Steve was panting so fucking heavily when Bucky pulled his hand out and replaced it with his cock. "Please," he groaned, rocking his hips all ready to fuck himself on Bucky's dick. "I want you so bad."

---

Pressing in as far as he could go, Bucky held himself steady with one hand on the mattress. He pulled out all the way very slowly and just let himself feel the drag. Then he slammed back in and stared down at Steve as he started at an intense, rough pace. The both of them had already been sweating but Bucky could feel it running down his back now.

---

Steve thought he was ready but he clearly underestimated how fast Bucky was going to go. His teeth clamped down on Bucky's arm and he practically screamed Bucky's name in desperate pleasure as Bucky slammed into him. His hands gripped on Bucky's shoulders and he dragged his nails down his back.

---

Bucky couldn't help the bubble of excited laughter that escaped his mouth. He had never gone this hard on Steve before. It probably wouldn't become a regular occurrence but he really needed it tonight. "You're so perfect. You're so gorgeous and a mess for me and I love it and I love you," Bucky rambled and pummeled into Steve over and over. "Show me your come. Let's see it. Don't try to hold off any longer."

---

Steve couldn't speak. All he could do was moan Bucky's name like it was the only sound he knew how to make. And when he came, his vision went white. Steve could've sworn he passed out for a second there but when his orgasm was over, the muscles in his body quivered, on a chemical high from what Bucky was doing to him.
Bucky laid his chest down on top of Steve and held him close and secure as he fucked him for another short minute and then finished off deep inside of him. He was so ready to orgasm as well that he bit Steve's shoulder when he came. Steve was a little too out of it to care but Bucky still apologized several times after he let his shoulder go.

Bucky may as well have fucked the brains out of Steve because he couldn't form a coherent thought after that. He laid there, boneless and panting beneath Bucky. His hair was an absolute, sweaty mess. After he caught his breath, Steve reached up to check over Bucky's arm, which had clear red teeth marks in two arching semi circles. "I think I'm going to have to take a sick day tomorrow. I'm so exhausted, Baby."

"Maybe you should," Bucky said and cradled Steve's head. Steve deserved a little break from work especially since he planned on checking on the shelter tomorrow once his shift was over. Bucky also wouldn't mind Steve not being sent to Tish's territory right after being so vulnerably fucked. "Are you okay, though?"

Steve leaned into Bucky's hand and gave him an adoring look. "I'm fine... just exhausted now. I don't how you're so perky cause I feel like I just ran a marathon." He gave Bucky a weak, little tug to make him come down for a kiss.

Bucky kissed him until neither of them could breathe anymore. They pulled away from each other and Bucky rolled off of Steve. "Honestly, Baby, I don't know why I've got this energy either." He flung an arm around Steve. "How about I spoon you until you fall asleep. And then I'm going to go down to the curb and have a smoke and then I'll come back to bed."

Steve nodded tiredly at Bucky. It didn't take long for Steve to fall asleep. He was out within minutes and was snoring a bit louder than he usually did when he was tired. When Bucky moved to go smoke, his snoring stopped for just a moment before picking back up.

Bucky spent longer outside than he planned. When he came back upstairs, Christopher was awake and sitting up in his crib just looking around. "Oh hey, Little Bean," he said and picked him up. "Here, Daddy's asleep and the sheets are dirty but you and I can just sit right next to Daddy on top of the blankets. How's that? But let's be quiet so we don't wake him up."

Christopher had woken up while Bucky was out and tried looking for his parents. Everything had been so quiet. When Bucky came in, he smiled and batted his hands lightly on Bucky's chest. "Papapapa," he murmured, looking up at his pops.
"Oh my god!" Bucky whispered happily. "You did it again. Steve, he did it again," Bucky looked over at his sleeping husband. "And you still haven't heard it. That's definitely a word. Christopher, you're saying 'Papa' I know you are."

---

Christopher smiled happily and clapped his hands together when Bucky got excited. "Papapapapa!" he said loudly at Bucky.

The excitement next to him had Steve wake up. He slowly popped an eye open and made a tired noise. "What's going on?"

---

"Steve, he's saying the word again. He's saying 'Papa'. Listen." Bucky quieted down and sat Christopher on Steve's chest. Instead of talking, Christopher flopped forward and snuggled his face on Steve's neck and made a happy gurgling noise.

---

"Buck..." Steve whined because he was so tired and didn't really want to be woken up. He wasn't angry and it was adorable to have Christopher snuggling him like this but he was so beat. "He doesn't know how to talk yet."

---

"I heard it," Bucky said. "You don't believe me." He hit the back of his head softly on the headboard and made an indignant noise. "I swear he said it." Bucky looked back down at their son who had adjusted to being curled up in a ball and was making high-pitched little whines. Bucky scooped him up and said, "Go back to bed, Steve, I'm going to give him a half of a bottle so he will get tired again."

---

"I think you're making words from his nonsense. He will talk soon enough," Steve said then fell back to sleep.

Once Bucky picked up Christopher, the baby smiled happily up at him. "Papapapa," he said again at him.

---

"God," Bucky breathed in quiet frustration. "Why can't you do that when your daddy can see you?" he asked Christopher with a wide smile and a light tone so the baby wouldn't think he was upset with him. "Let's get you a bottle and then go back to sleep. Maybe tomorrow you will talk to your Dad and he won't think I'm crazy."
Weeks had gone by. Christopher was getting increasingly grumpier about his teeth. He was in a lot of pain with them growing in and he screamed and cried a lot more than usual. The girls had started back up in school and Bucky could hardly keep anything straight anymore. To top it all off, Tish from the precinct was still hitting on Steve. Natasha would sometimes tell Clint things that happened between them and then Clint would automatically tell Bucky at work the next day.

Bucky hated to even admit it to himself but he occasionally worried that maybe Steve had feelings for Tish too. One of the pieces of evidence he had to support his theory was a package they received outside their door. It wasn’t mailed - it was dropped off. There wasn’t a name on it so Bucky opened it to find a brand new sweater with the tag still on but the price cut off. Tucked in the neck of the sweater was a highly suggestive letter from Tish to Steve.

---

Steve came home after a long day at work with a box full of teething toys for Christopher. The baby was crying in his playpen even as Bucky tried to console him. "Buck, I got some of that numbing stuff for his gums," Steve said as he walked over to him. "You think we should give it a try?"

---

"Hey," Bucky mumbled and focused only on Christopher. Without looking up, he held out his hand for the numbing stuff. He did his best to get it inside the baby's mouth and once he was through trying, he handed him a teething toy and Christopher calmed down quickly after gnawing on it for a bit. Bucky looked up at Steve and cleared his throat. "You got a present today. It wasn't labeled, so I opened it. It's a sweater... from Tish." Bucky refrained from saying that he happened to read the entire letter. Which was so eloquently written that it infuriated Bucky that he wasn't clever enough to write a love letter for his own goddamn husband that would have matched that one.

---

Steve rubbed Bucky's back while he took care of Christopher. He let out a relieved sigh when their son calmed down. "Oh?" Steve perked up a bit. "That was nice of her. It's getting colder and I mentioned to her I was thinking about getting warmer clothes."

---

The pleased little wash that came over Steve's face didn't go unnoticed by Bucky. "Mhmm," he hummed and looked back down at their son. "I could have gone and gotten something for you. I actually know what colors look nice on you - and pumpkin orange is not one of them. Your hair is too light for it."

---

"I know you could've," Steve said. "She was only being thoughtful. Maybe I should make her something as a thank you," he murmured to himself. "What do you think, Buck? She said she likes chocolate chip cookies."

---

Bucky huffed and rolled his eyes up towards the ceiling. "Sure, Steve. Make her cookies. Write her a thank you note. Or just give her a high five at work and call it a day." Christopher tossed a toy up towards Bucky but it didn't get far. Bucky handed it back and held up his hand in case the baby felt like throwing it again.

---

Steve frowned at the tone that Bucky took with him. "What's the problem?" he asked. "You've been acting grumpy all the time whenever I talk about work. I don't know what's happened that's made you upset."

---

Bucky scoffed. "You know what it is. Don't act like you don't see it. Natasha's told Clint who has told me everything that happens at the precinct with Tish. Guess when it comes to her boyfriend, Natasha isn't so unwilling to share."

---

"Bucky, Tish is just a nice person. She listens to me at work and she doesn't have family around here, so I listen to her. We're friends. That's it. I don't get why you don't trust me," Steve said firmly.

---

"She sent you a fucking sweater!" Bucky sneered. "Out of the blue. It's not your birthday. It's not Christmas. She just sent you a goddamn present." Bucky got up quickly and showed the wrapping to Steve. "And it wasn't mailed here. It was hand-delivered. Meaning she knows where we live and she was here looking for you but you weren't in. She's going after you, Steve. Can't you see that?"

---

Steve glared. "She isn't," he defended. "And even if she was, there's no way in hell that I would be interested in her. Even if I was attracted to her - which I'm not - I would never break my vow with you."

---

"Not interested in you?" Bucky asked and picked up the letter to read parts from it. "'Sometimes I feel like God meant for me to work at this precinct in this city just so I could meet you.'" He paused and searched for another. "'Do you remember that day I said you should accent with orange because it would compliment the soft blue of your eyes? And then you marked an orange highlighter on your hand for fun? And you claim to not be funny.'" He scanned the other side. "'Hope the sweater keeps you warm so you don't have to come up to my desk all the time to keep asking to raise the thermostat. Or, better yet, don't wear the sweater to work because I'll miss you too much if you stop coming to say 'hello' throughout the day.'"

---

"She believes in God. So what? People are brought to each other for plenty of reasons," Steve said. "We're good friends. I'd be upset if I suddenly stopped seeing Natasha at work. Tish just has a more flowery way of saying it."

---

"Her beliefs aren't the problem here," Bucky said. "I don't think Father Frank has a crush on you and he has said before that he thinks it was God's doing that you found his church. And that's not flowery writing. That's a goddamn love letter. I don't even say shit like that to you."

---

"She knows I'm happily married. You know I would never cheat on you," Steve snapped, angry that Bucky was getting upset over a present someone gave him. "You want me to get rid of it? I shouldn't have to, but I'll do it if you're going to be ridiculous about it."

---

"Fuck you, Steve!" Bucky shouted. "I'm not being ridiculous. And if we are talking sacrifices here, how about the shit I'm not allowed to do because you said 'no'. Huh? And I get upset over a woman - who is clearly in love with you - giving you a sweater and you think I'm being ridiculous? I didn't even ask you to get rid of it! Those were your words."

---

Christopher started to cry when he heard their voices rising at each other. Steve looked a cross between angry and hurt. "I don't know how many times I've told you not to curse in front of the baby!" he huffed angrily as he scooped Christopher up to cradle him in his arms. "The stuff I say I don't like you doing is entirely reasonable. No cursing in front of the baby. No getting wasted when things get hard. That's not the same as getting jealous over a sweater." He picked it up and headed for the door. "I'm taking this to a donation box. Figure out dinner for you and the girls."

---

Steve took Christopher with him and slammed the door behind him. Bucky took deep angry breaths and pulled on his coat and shoes. Then he took a piece of paper and wrote a note to Becca that he was going out for a bit and not to expect him home until late. He snatched his wallet and his keys and headed out towards the subway.

---

Steve walked to the subway and took a train to the church, where he donated the sweater to the shelter. He took Christopher to the zoo just before closing to see a few animals before going home and giving him his dinner. Steve didn't have an appetite. After he laid their baby boy to sleep, Steve stayed up nervously waiting to see Bucky home safe.

---

A while later, Bucky trudged into the apartment and shucked off his jacket. All the lights were out and it seemed like everyone was probably asleep. He carried a bag in one hand and his near-empty cigarette pack and his keys in the other. He tiptoed into his and Steve's room and stopped when he saw Steve sitting up with the lamp on and arms crossed.

---

Steve let out a breath of relief when Bucky came into the room. "Christ, you worried me," he said quietly so they wouldn't wake the baby. "It's one in the morning, Bucky. Where've you been?"
Bucky moved closer to the bed and tossed the bag down by Steve's legs. "That's your color. Not orange," he said tiredly and started stripping off his clothes while Steve took the dark marine blue knit sweater from the bag. "I'm going to shower. I smell like Evan and Monty's place." And by that, he meant smoke. The three of them had smoked a lot. Monty drank a lot too but Bucky managed to hold his own and didn't have anything.

Steve frowned, feeling bad that Bucky felt like he had to go get Steve a sweater now. He was tired and had work the next morning, but Steve stayed up while Bucky went to shower. He changed so that the only thing he was wearing was the sweater that Bucky got for him. "Can we talk?" he asked softly when Bucky came out.

Bucky took in the site of Steve sitting patiently on the bed with the sweater fitting him perfectly. He was right, that was Steve's color. "No," Bucky said simply. Dropping his towel, he walked over to the closet and pulled out a set of clothes to sleep in.

Steve's bottom lip quivered a bit. He couldn't remember the last time Bucky was this mad at him and he hated going to sleep upset at each other. "Please?" he tried.

"Why?" Bucky asked and pulled his pants on. He steeled himself to not be affected by how sad and vulnerable Steve looked. He didn't want to talk, though. Steve had called him jealous and ridiculous and didn't believe a word he said to him. And he thought he knew what he was talking about when he said sacrifices and assumed Bucky meant things like swearing and drinking. That's not even scratching the surface of what Bucky meant. No, Steve hadn't listened to Bucky earlier and Bucky didn't feel like listening to Steve now.

"Because I can't sleep knowing the last time we talked was an argument." What if something happened to them during the night? Steve wouldn't be able to live with himself. "I'm sorry that I upset you and made you angry, Bucky. You don't have to forgive me tonight, but could you at least tell me you love me before we go to sleep?"

Bucky put his hands in his sweatpants' pockets and came over to the bed. "I do love you. That's the whole reason we were in this mess today. If I didn't love you, there wouldn't have been an argument." He wiped the brimming tears from the corner of Steve's eyes and then situated himself on his side of the bed, under the covers and facing away from Steve.

Steve nodded his head. He couldn't help the single tear that slipped out. When Bucky laid down, Steve scooted forward and draped an arm around his waist. "I love you too, Bucky. I'm lucky to call you my husband. I'm really sorry."
Steve had to go to work early the next morning. He made lunch for Bucky and left a love note for him. At work, Steve decided to try and avoid Tish for Bucky's sake. Steve couldn't avoid her for long though. When he took a break for lunch with Natasha, so did Tish. She inserted herself in their conversation and sat right next to Steve, thigh to thigh. Natasha got up after she finished eating and went back to work on a big case she had. This was Tish's time to strike. "Officer Rogers," she said and shoved him lightly. "You have been ignoring me all day."

---

Steve immediately got flustered. He was an awful liar. He considered for a moment making up an excuse but then he decided he may as well be honest. "Bucky was upset about the note you left with the sweater yesterday," he said apologetically. "I thought it was very sweet of you, but he doesn't feel the same. I was just trying to give some space, you know? I don't want Bucky to be upset. It's nothing against you, honest."

---

"Oh..." Tish blinked, surprised. "What was the problem with it?" she asked as innocently as she could. "I just thought it was a nice sweater. My way of saying 'thank you' for how kind you've been since I've gotten here." She smiled like she was trying to apologize but pressed her leg into Steve more.

---

"And I appreciate the sweater, truly. It was thoughtful and genuine," Steve said. "It's just... Bucky thinks that you're crossing some sort of line, you know? He doesn't get that the two of us are just friends. You know I'm a married man and you're too nice of a person to try and take someone who's married."

---

Tish scoffed and looked slightly offended but there was a gleam of something darker in her eyes. "That's ridiculous. So you aren't allowed to be my friend anymore because Bucky told you that you can't? That's not healthy, Steve."

---

"What? No, he never said that I couldn't. And usually, Bucky isn't like this..." Steve trailed off for a moment. "Listen, Tish, we can still talk. But maybe we can lay off the surprise gifts for now. Just until Bucky's more confident about what we are."

---

She nodded and gave a weak smile. "Okay, that's fine. Whatever makes you happy, Steve. You can just wear the sweater around here so Bucky doesn't know. How's that?" She chuckled and patted Steve's thigh lightly. "And maybe I can do something for you to make it up to you for getting you in trouble with him."

---

Steve just told her that Bucky didn't like her so there was no way in hell he was admitting to donating the sweater. "I think wearing that around here is a uniform violation," he joked instead. "It's alright, Tish. You don't have to do anything unless it'll make you feel better if you do."
"I guess you're right," she said. "But, just don't cut me out, okay? You're just about the only person here who talks to me. It was weird getting the silent treatment today." Tish stood from the table and waited for Steve to walk her back to her desk.

---

Steve nodded. "I promise I won't. I'm sorry I avoided you earlier," Steve said and stood up. He walked her back to her desk dutifully and gave her a smile. "I'll see you around, okay?" Steve gave her a little wave and went back to work.

***

A couple days passed and Bucky had calmed down a bit. Steve hadn't talked about Tish at all to him and neither of them brought up the fight again. Bucky had had a really long day at work and was sound asleep on the couch with Christopher napping on top of him when Steve finally got back home from his late evening to night shift.

---

Steve came home and melted at the sight in front of him. He loved it when Christopher napped on top of them. He walked over and kissed each of their foreheads. Steve was going to leave them be for a little while, so when the phone rang he hastily picked it up so they wouldn't be woken. "Rogers-Barnes residence."

---

Bucky blinked his eyes open slowly at the hushed tones Steve was using over the phone. At first, he thought it was sweet that he didn't want to wake up Bucky and the baby but then he realized that Steve wasn't talking to his mom but was on the phone with Tish. Bucky glanced at the clock. It was past midnight and that was the way too late for someone who is just a work friend to be calling Steve.

---

Steve gave Bucky a look like he was caught in something he shouldn't be doing. He gave an apologetic and guilty smile before trying to rush Tish off the phone. Once he hung up, he walked over back to Bucky. "Hey, I didn't mean to wake you."

---

Bucky didn't say anything. He just looked at Steve for a long disbelieving moment. He didn't need to ask what she was calling this late for. Bucky knew what that was. Bucky had gotten those calls before. The late night desperate, lonely phone call begging him to come over. 'Just slip out for a little bit, please. I need to see you.' Yeah, Bucky knew exactly what was going on. He cleared his throat and gave Steve an unconvincing smile. "Let's go sleep. I'm so tired."

---

Steve gingerly picked up Christopher so he could lay him down in his bed to sleep. "Her television wasn't working," Steve said quietly. "She asked me to come over and fix it, but I told her she should call a technician tomorrow. We had a talk about boundaries the other day," Steve explained as they went to the bedroom.
"Right," Bucky said, defeated. He slipped into bed and sighed. Bucky hated himself so much in that moment. He hated himself for not being enough for Steve. And he hated himself for not stopping all of this nonsense weeks ago. "Night, Steve."

"I mean it," Steve said urgently. "Nothing is happening between us. You have to trust me." Steve was ready to fight tooth and nail to prove it, but he knew that Bucky would only get upset with him. So he shut up and laid down without any further argument.

The next morning at the record shop was slow. Bucky and Clint were pretty much able to sit around and stare at the walls. They sat in bored silence for a long time until finally Bucky took a deep breath and said quietly, "Steve's cheating on me."

Clint turned his head when he saw Bucky's lips move. "What?" he asked. When Bucky repeated himself, he frowned. "Are you sure?" He had heard a hell of a lot about Tish between Bucky and Natasha but it was shocking to hear that Steve would cheat.

"Yeah," Bucky sighed and faced Clint. He signed as he talked, "Tish called the apartment really late last night. And Steve made up some bullshit about her needing something fixed or whatever. And she sent him a present about a week ago. A nice new sweater with a love letter tucked inside."

"Jesus," Clint said, giving Bucky an empathetic look. "I'm so sorry, man." He reached out to squeeze his shoulder. "What are you going to do about it? What's going to happen with Christopher and your sisters?"

"I don't know." Bucky nodded solemnly and choked back tears. "I guess the first thing is I need something solid to prove it. Because Steve just denies everything I've said and tries to convince me that they are just friends."

Clint knew that this must have been killing Bucky and he was so fucking mad at Steve for ruining the amazing relationship that they had. They hadn't even been married for a year yet. "I can have Nat listen in. We can try to catch them meeting up."

"Okay, I like that," Bucky agreed. He was desperate at this point. He just needed one thing to show Steve that he knew what was happening. "The worst part is that Steve keeps telling me to trust him. And I know that he probably just doesn't want to ruin things with me because we have the baby. Also, he would miss my cock. I know he would. What is Tish going to do? Buy a strap-on and fuck Steve? No way."
"We're gonna nail the bastard," Clint said. "Are you going to break up with him after we catch him? Or are you going to try and work it out?" He knew that being cheated on hurt like hell but he knew how Steve could make Bucky happy too. "Also, Tish is too straight for a strap-on."

"Honestly..." Bucky stared out the window. "I don't know. I don't want to lose him. He's my world. But how am I supposed to trust him ever again, huh? I'll have to break up with him, won't I? God, but we have the baby and I don't want Steve to take my son from me, too. And we just built the shelter." Bucky mashed his face into his hands. "Fuck, Clint, I don't know what to do."

Clint slung an arm around Bucky's shoulders. "I hope you two can work past this. But Steve's also an asshole for doing this to you and you deserve a partner who respects you."

Bucky sighed and leaned against Clint. "I always thought it would be my fuck-up that would end this. At least then I'd only have myself to blame." He glanced down under the cash register and found a sealed plastic bag. He snatched it and held it up. It had four joints all rolled and ready. "Reggie isn't very good at hiding these. You want to smoke, Clint?"

"I don't want to smoke. I can't have all three of us high," Clint said. "Why don't you take the day off, buddy? I'll call it a sick day and I won't tell Reggie you took his joints."

Bucky nodded and thanked Clint. "I'll talk to you later. Let me know what Natasha says when you talk to her about this, yeah?" He pulled on his coat and slipped the plastic bag into the inside pocket. He would call up Monty and see if he wanted to get stoned with him while Evan was at work.

Later that day, Bucky talked to Clint again. "Hey, Bud. Come by the shop beforehand if you can make it, but I need you to meet me by the north exit of Prospect Park at seven. Steve and Tish are going back to her place after their shift."

Bucky put Becca in charge and headed to the shop before seven. Clint was waiting in the back and he had on a dark jacket and a black cap and big combat boots. He looked like he was the world’s worst robber. "The fuck are you wearing, Clint?"

"I'm incognito. We can't have Steve recognizing that we are following him. He's a cop. He's supposed to notice these things," Clint said. He gave Bucky a hat and sunglasses to wear. "I brought a camera with me."
Bucky put on the hat to cover up his pretty distinguishable hair but he didn't take the sunglasses. "I'm not feeling good about this, Clint." Bucky sighed and picked up the camera. "What did Natasha tell you earlier?"

---

"She said Tish came by Steve's workstation to invite him over. They talked for a while and she couldn't hear what was said in between but he said ‘yes’," Clint explained.

---

"Fuck, alright let's go," Bucky said and handed the camera back to Clint. He didn't want to be the one to hold it. "Nat told you where Tish lives, right?" He didn't really feel like tracking them down on their way back from the precinct. He would rather just wait somewhere in hiding by her place.

---

"She looked in their records. Probably how Tish got your address as well," Clint said and motioned for Bucky to follow and they ended up staking out a spot across from a brownstone. "Damn, she's loaded..."

---

"I'm pretty sure she's actually been to our place before. I think with Steve," Bucky said. "Steve didn't seem surprised that she knew where we live." The whole time, Bucky was feeling gross. None of this was how he wanted to spend an evening. "If she's got so much money why does she even need to work at the precinct anyway?" Bucky asked and sat back on his heels.

---

"Who knows? Maybe she's one of those rich kids where the parents kicked her out to try working for a little before they go back to spending their inheritance," Clint offered.

Tish arrived home a few minutes before Steve got there. Steve came carrying a small bouquet of flowers. Tish had told him that her aunt passed away and she needed some company to help pack her things to send to her cousins.

---

Bucky watched Steve and his heart broke. "Flowers," he whispered and then turned to Clint. "You know, at least they aren't roses. Steve brings me red roses all the time. Tish gets pink carnations." It was supposed to make Bucky feel a little bit better but it didn't. They watched Tish welcome Steve inside and they could see into her window and towards the kitchen where she had been making them something to drink.

---

When Steve knocked on the door, Tish called for him to come in, so he did. Bucky was able to see her take her shirt off as Steve walked in the door before heading out of sight. "That fucking bastard," Clint swore angrily. "I should beat him."

---

"Fucking Christ," Bucky buried his face in his hands. He felt like he was going to throw up. "Let's go, Clint. Take me back home." He pulled on Clint's jacket and tried to get him up. "I can't be here any longer. Let's go." Clint pulled Bucky away even though he had half the mind to knock the door down and give Steve a piece of his mind.
Sometimes, things get worse before they get better.

When Steve saw Tish topless, his jaw dropped and he was furious. "What the hell is going on?" he spat out and backed up against the closed door.

"Come on, Steve." Tish smiled and moved closer to him, reaching for his hand. "You want this as much as I do." She gently slipped a hand on Steve's neck and gave him a chaste kiss. "Take me."

Steve firmly pulled away and looked at her angrily. "No!" he snapped. "I can't... I can't believe you! You lied about your aunt just to get me here? After I told you I wanted space?"

Tish scoffed and looked Steve hard in the eyes. "You mean to tell me that you haven't been staring at me for weeks? And flirting right back when I did?" She crossed her arms. "If you're afraid that Bucky will find out, don't worry. We will be discreet."

"No. I don't have any interest in you," Steve said flatly. "God, I can't believe Bucky was right about you!" He tossed the flowers aside and found a throw blanket to put over her so he wouldn't have to look at her. "Don't talk to me ever again outside of what's necessary for work, got it?"

"Well, fuck you, too, Steve!" she yelled and threw the blanket at him. "I care about you! I thought you cared about me. I came to your charity thing. I bought you gifts. I talk about your son with you!" She pulled her shirt back on and shoved Steve hard in the chest. "Fuck you!"

"I did care about you as a friend! But all you wanted was to take me from my husband. Who I told you all the time I was happily married to!" Steve was hurt and angry. He lost a friend today and now Bucky would be smug about being right, probably. She also hurt Bucky in the process.

"Get out of my house," Tish said firmly and started pushing Steve hard again. "You fucking cocksucker! I would have been good for you! I would have been what's right for you and you ruined all that!"
Steve was beyond hurt and angry, now. He didn't even want to argue with her about how awful she was being to him. He stormed out and stomped back home, pushing through the door. "Buck?" he called out, needing to vent and get this off his chest.

---

After Clint had brought Bucky back home, he had packed up one of Steve's bags with enough stuff for to last him for a few days. Then Bucky cradled Christopher and sat on their bed and waited for Steve to come back home. He was back a lot sooner than he had expected. When Steve walked into their room, he glanced at the bag. "Go stay at your mom's place for a couple days, Steve," Bucky said in a flat, tired tone.

---

Steve was having an absolutely awful time now, but he was in for a whole world of worse. He paused and looked at his packed bag in confusion. "What...?" He frowned. "Why?" he asked with a pained crack in his voice. "What happened?"

---

Bucky swallowed the lump in his throat and locked eyes with Steve. "I saw you with her," he said sternly but quietly - no wrath in his voice, just defeat. "I need a few days to figure shit out and I think it's best if you go to your mom's while I do."

---

"Where? When?" Steve asked. "I didn't do anything with her, Bucky! That's what I've come here to tell you about." Steve's voice broke a little at the end of the sentence. "You got to hear me out."

---

Bucky held Christopher close to him. He was asleep and Bucky didn't feel like accidentally waking him. "Please... god, Steve, please stop making excuses and trying to hide this shit. Just go. We know what we saw. Please just get out of here."

---

Steve's eyes immediately filled with tears. "I don't know what you saw. But whatever you saw was wrong," he said thickly. "I would never run around on you. Ever." He wiped at his eyes. "Can I hold Christopher before I go, at least?"

---

Bucky clenched his jaw and looked down at his son. "He's asleep." He looked back up at Steve. "You can kiss him goodbye just don't wake him up." Bucky looked up at the ceiling and felt tears silently cascading down his face and neck. He didn’t even want to look at Steve right now.

---

Steve walked over and bent down to kiss the top of his head. "Your dad loves you, Bean," he said softly to their son. "I'm going to show you you're wrong about what happened, Bucky." He grabbed his bag and walked out, crying freely but silently as he walked to the shelter instead of to his mom's.
Bucky watched Steve go. After a while, he laid Christopher down in his crib and pushed the whole thing up right next to his and Steve's bed so Bucky could fall asleep with Christopher right there beside him.

The next day, Bucky slept in late and woke up to Lilly prodding at his arm and Becca feeding Christopher. "Bucky, where's Steve?" Lilly asked when he woke up.

---

Lilly had noticed that something was up when she woke up to no breakfast cooked or lunch made for any of them. When Bucky didn't answer at first, she poked him again. "Bucky," she said impatiently. "I asked where Steve is."

---

Bucky sat up and rubbed at his eyes. They were tired and swollen from all the crying he had done in the night. "He's at his mom's," Bucky said and reached for Becca to give him Christopher. "Do you two mind just having cereal before school? I really don't feel like making anything."

---

"Why?" Lilly asked. "Is Miss Sarah okay?" Lilly wasn't as perceptive as Becca was, who already knew that they must have had a pretty bad fight if Steve was away and Bucky had been crying all night.

---

"Yeah, Sarah is okay, don't worry." Bucky sighed and looked down at the baby who was staring up at him like he knew that everything wasn't okay. "Listen, Steve isn't going to be around for a few days, okay? It's just us again for a bit. I have work tomorrow so I'll just take Christopher with me."

---

"Yeah, but why did Steve go?" Lilly pushed.

Becca huffed and nudged her. "Just drop it, stupid," she said, making Lilly glare at her. Becca looked back at Bucky and asked, "You're not going to go to the bars while he's gone, are you?"

---

Bucky shook his head. "I can't do that to you." He stood and picked up one of Christopher's blankets and laid it on his back. "Come on, let's get ready for school. You two should be out of here in about twenty minutes."

---

Becca sighed and stood up to go get ready. Lilly complained the whole way out, but she went to school on time at least. Once the girls were gone, Christopher began to cry for attention.

---

"I know, I know, Little Bean," Bucky said and brought him to sit on the couch with him. Bucky cried as Christopher did and he wondered what Steve was doing then. Was he with his mom? Was he thinking about Bucky? Did he just go back to Tish instead?
Lilly came back a little after school was let out and she dropped her backpack at the door and went to find Bucky. "Hey, what gives?" she asked. "Steve wasn't at Sarah's. She didn't even know he was supposed to go over."

---

Bucky looked up from his spot on the ground. Christopher had decided today was the day he was going to start crawling around the place so Bucky had been supervising. "What?" he asked and then leaned back. "Oh my god, I knew it. He went back to her place."

---

"Went back to whose place?" Lilly asked. "Wait... are you talking about that dispatcher lady you, Becca, and Clint hate? Why would Steve go back there?" she asked, making a face.

---

Bucky waited for Christopher to make his way to him before scooping him up and going to the kitchen with Lilly. "Let's drop it, okay? I need to go find Natasha or Clint. Can you watch Christopher for just an hour?"

---

"Why are you lying to me about Steve?" Lilly asked in an annoyed tone, more angry that she was out of the loop than that Bucky wasn't telling the truth.

---

Bucky sighed and gave Lilly a hug. "I'll tell you about it later. Thanks for watching him." He left and headed straight for Clint's place. Bucky knocked on the door and waited for Clint to open it. "Hey, Buddy, I need a drink. I promised Becca I wouldn't go to the bar so I need to sink a couple beers with you and then go home."

---

Clint opened the door and let Bucky in. "Yeah, sure. But no more than two," he said. "I can't let you fall off the wagon when you've come so far already," he said. He pulled out a pair of beers for them.
"How's it going?"

---

"Fucking awful," Bucky said and flopped onto Clint's couch with his beer. "I told him to leave. I packed him a bag and told him to go to his mom's for a few days. Lilly must have gone to Sarah's because she comes home and tells me that Sarah has no idea what she was talking about. I bet you anything Steve is at Tish's place right now. I fucking packed him a bag and sent him right back to her. I basically told him to take a long weekend from our marriage and go fuck that home-wrecker."

---

"What the fuck," Clint swore. "I can't believe that. All you got to do is say the word and I'll beat him up. Also, I know a bit about plumbing. I can sneak into her cellar and flood her house," he offered.

---

"Thanks, Buddy," Bucky sighed and downed one of the beers in its entirety. "I don't think that's necessary, though." He didn't say that if anyone was beating Steve up for this shit, he wanted it to be him. "I don't know what to do, Clint. I told him I needed a few days but what am I going to do when he calls and asks if I've had enough time to think? Do I break up with him or do I just work past this shit to keep our little family together?"

---

"I don't know, man. I don't think I would be able to deal with someone pulling that shit on me. Have you guys talked at all? Or has it been all arguing?" Clint paused and then added, "Have you spoken to her at all?"

---

"I haven't spoken to her, no," Bucky said and popped open the second beer. "And I didn't have the energy to speak to Steve. When I told him that we saw them together, he just tried to feed me more bullshit excuses and I just couldn't handle it." He worked through the second beer and slammed it on the table. "Let's get drunk, Clint. Come on. Just a little tipsy and then we will call it a day and I'll go home."

---

Clint finished his first drink when Bucky was done with the second. "I don't think that's a good idea," he said. "Remember you have to stay in moderation. No matter how much this sucks."

---

"Clint," Bucky said sternly. "There are three things I need right now to help me not feel like total dog shit. Cocaine, sex, or booze. I am not letting myself go back to coke and I'm not having sex with anyone until this whole thing is settled and I've moved on. Please, let me drink."

---

Clint frowned and stared at him for a long time before standing up and grabbing him another beer. "You're staying here until you sober up," he said. "I'm not letting your sisters see you sloppy."

---

Bucky gestured with his hand vaguely in agreement and then took the beer. He couldn't stop himself from thinking about Steve. Was he as much of a wreck as Bucky was? Or was he cuddled up with Tish and getting over the whole thing pretty quickly? Bucky loved Steve. He loved him. And he was pretty sure even after this, he was still going to love him until he died and... and that didn't feel fair to him.

***

Steve tried to pretend everything was okay while he was at the shelter but he really didn't have it in him. He hid away from anyone who may have recognized him from the event and he didn't say anything to Father Frank. All he did the whole day was lay in the bed in the furthest corner and not move.

---

Tim had been around the shelter for a long time now. He was actively looking for a new job and an apartment but it was pretty tough. Today wasn't any better, he was told he was under-qualified for a job he thought he had a real chance at. So he decided he would just go to the bunks and take a nap.
Instead, he found a man in the back corner of the room curled up on one of the mattresses and staring at the wall. "Hey, man, are you okay?"

---

Steve didn't move when he was spoken to. At first, he considered not even responding. But he didn't want to be rude, so he sighed. "Not really," he answered honestly. "Am I in your spot? I can change beds if this one is yours." Steve only picked this one because it was the most out of the way.

---

"Hey," Tim hovered over him. "Steve?" he asked and touched Steve's shoulder. "Hey, what are you doing here? You remember me from the opening day? I was talking with your husband a lot that night. You might not remember me."

---

Steve turned around a little when Tim touched his shoulder. He stared for a moment and then slowly sat up. "Tim? You're the guy with the kids." He rubbed at his face tiredly. "Of course, I remember you. How are things?"

---

Tim sat down next to Steve. "Forget about me. What are you doing here crying in a corner? Where's Bucky? Is he okay? Is your son okay?" He reached to grab the box of tissues from the nightstands that were in between every bunk and he handed the box to Steve.

---

Steve grabbed a tissue and wiped at his eyes. "He thinks I'm cheating on him," he said. "Kicked me out of the house for a few days... but I would never. I would never even consider it and he doesn't believe me. And he's so hurt, too."

---

Tim patted Steve's shoulder and then took his hand back, not wanting to linger. "That woman who was all over you on opening day?" he asked and crossed a leg underneath him on the bed. "He was upset about her that night, too. He didn't like the way she was flirting with you."

---

"Yeah... I thought she was my friend, but all she wanted was to get in my pants and try to fuck the gay away," Steve said. "I didn't believe Bucky when he told me that she was looking for more. And now he won't believe me when I tell him I didn't do anything." His bottom lip quivered. "I really believed she was my friend."

---

Tim handed him another tissue and thought for a second. "I believe you, Steve. You seem like a pretty trusting person and I can understand why you thought she was just your friend." He looked away and then back to Steve. "Look, man, you got to go to Bucky - as soon as you can. Don't let him take a few days. He will decide what he wants to do and if that means breaking things off with you then it'll be hard to change his mind once it's made up. Find a way to get him to let you back inside. Ask a friend to help you out. Do something. But don't stay here and worry about it. Go make him believe you." Tim laughed. "And you know I'm giving you the best advice I've got because I stand to gain nothing by helping you, but potentially a lot by not helping. With you out of the way, I would be free to swoop in and have Bucky. So, trust what I'm saying to you. Don't wait for him, figure out how to get back to him."

---

Steve stared at Tim as he spoke and he didn't respond at first but eventually he nodded his head.
"You're right," he said. "I... god..." he wiped at his eyes again. "I need to get out of here and back to the precinct. There's got to be footage of Tish tricking me into believing her aunt had died so I would come over."

---

"Hey, if worse comes to worst," Tim said and held out a hand for Steve to shake. "I'll talk to Bucky about it. I'll tell him what you've been telling me. I'll say it again, I don't even know why I'm helping because Bucky's sort of perfect and I'm pretty mad you found him first. But I would hate to see your relationship broken apart like this. You both deserve to be happy."

---

Steve grabbed Tim's hand and pulled him in for a tight hug. "You're the best, Tim. I'm blessed to have met you." He leaned back and combed his fingers through his hair and tried to will himself to look less emotionally wrecked before grabbing his bag and heading to the precinct to find Natasha.

---

Natasha was working later than she should have been. There was a big mess of a case and somehow she got stuck with all of it. When Steve came up to her in one of the debriefing rooms, she huffed out a sigh and looked away for a second. "What do you need, Steve? I'm really busy."

---

"I need you to find some footage for me," Steve said. "Of my office, yesterday, around two o'clock.
Right after lunch," he said urgently. "I'd do it myself but I don't have the authority to access it on my own."

---

"What the hell are you rambling about?" Natasha asked and looked up at him, annoyed that he was interrupting her. "You look like shit. Why don't you get Tish to help you find your footage? Oh, right, she doesn't have that clearance either. Why do you need it?"

---

Steve was confused for a moment and then he realized. "You're in on it..." he breathed out. "Holy shit! You fucking helped convince Bucky that I was cheating on him? Are you kidding me!" His voice raised almost to a shout, causing a few heads to turn. "I can't believe you. I need the footage to prove to my husband that I didn't touch that woman."

---

"Don't talk to me like that, Steve," Natasha snapped. "He didn't need any convincing and he was the one who came to us. He told us what he knew and I told what I knew and Bucky pieced it together for himself. Then he and Clint saw you at her place - you with the flowers and her all shirtless."
"I will talk to you like this," Steve barked back. "Because you should've had my back. You should've known me well enough to know I'd never cheat on anyone." Steve started to cry all over again but he was pissed now. "I brought her flowers because she told me her aunt died. If you watch the footage at my desk you'd see I told her I wasn't going to go to her house until she lied about her dead aunt." he let out a bitter laugh. "Fuck. What does it even matter? I still can't believe you didn't trust me."

Natasha spit out a laugh herself. "She has been all over you for weeks. She bought you a sweater. Bucky read me the love note she wrote you, and now this. What were we supposed to think? And people don't usually just drop their clothes when someone comes into their homes like she did. Your husband has been a fucking mess and Clint's at your place taking care of him right now. You're my friend, but the evidence was stacked against you." She paused and looked at Steve. "Let's see those tapes, prove me wrong and then we will go to Bucky."

"That's all the crap she did, Natasha," Steve pressed back. "If someone kept throwing themselves at Bucky, I wouldn't blame him for what they were doing." He headed towards the security footage room and expected Natasha to follow. "You're a real shit friend, you know that? Cause even if the evidence were stacked against you, I would have your back. I wouldn't stage a stakeout with Clint to spy on you. Bucky wouldn't be a mess if you guys didn't run around behind my back and encourage his paranoia. You guys know how insecure he can get!"

"What about that late night phone call, huh?" she countered. "Bucky said you talked quietly and hung up looking guilty as all hell. And you didn't seem too interested in getting her to stop flirting with you or touching you." Natasha entered the codes she needed to access the security camera footage. "What time was it?"

"She was asking me to come over and fix her TV. I said 'no' and I hung up because I knew Bucky would be upset if I so much as talked to her about the weather," Steve said. "I didn't think she was flirting with me. I thought she was being nice and understood I was happily married." He hovered over her as she got to the footage tapes. "Around two."

Natasha forwarded the tapes to a little before two and stopped as she saw Tish slinking up to Steve's workspace and leaning against his desk. "Was this it?" she asked Steve and stared at the tape, intently watching Tish's mouth moving.

"Yes," Steve said quickly. "She asked me if I could have dinner at her place. I told her 'no'. You can see me say that," he defended. "I told her that she had to stop talking to me outside of work cause it was upsetting Bucky and that's when she claimed her aunt died and she needed help."
Natasha watched in silence until Tish bounced back off to her desk. Natasha paused the tape and swiveled her chair to face Steve. "Okay." She nodded. "You tell me one more time you never did anything with her and I'll help you with Bucky."

---

"I never did anything with her," Steve said. He looked so hurt and heartbroken that Bucky and his closest friends worked against him to try and prove something that wasn't true at all. "I would never cheat on Bucky."

***

Clint had let Bucky have a few more beers at his place. But when Clint had gone to go use the restroom, Bucky pulled out Reggie's joints and smoked two of them before Clint got back. That was when Clint decided he needed to get Bucky back home and in bed.

When they got there, all the kids were asleep and there was a note from Becca explaining that Lilly had given Christopher a bath and he went to sleep easily but he hadn't eaten for them. Clint had Bucky sit down at his kitchen table and was pouring him a glass of water when Steve unlocked the door and came in with Natasha.

---

Steve was eager to go home and prove to Bucky that this was all a huge misunderstanding so they could hopefully move past this. But he couldn't help but get a bit angry when he saw Bucky drunk and high in the kitchen and the rest of the family nowhere to be found. They didn't go to bed this early unless they didn't want to be up. "Bucky," Steve said. "I didn't do anything with Tish and I can prove it to you."

---

Bucky stared up at Steve but didn't say anything. Clint came up behind him and said to Steve, "He's a bit drunk... and just a little bit high. I didn't realize he still had some of Reggie's smokes on him and he snuck it while I wasn't looking."

"Steve's home," Bucky observed and took one of Steve's hands. "God, I missed you. But you fucked me over. How could you do this to me?"

---

"I'm still mad at you," Steve answered back at Clint quietly, not holding venom in his voice but certainly a promise to give him hell later. The second Bucky took his hand, Steve stepped closer to him and gave Bucky's hands a light squeeze. "I didn't do anything to you, Bucky. I have videotapes to prove it. Natasha saw them."

---

Bucky blinked slowly, "I saw her undressing in front you. Unless you have a videotape of you not fucking her after she got naked for you, then I don't really care."

---

"Why don't you care, huh? Are you that obsessed with blaming me for something I didn't do that you won't hear me out?" Steve was hurt. "Do our wedding vows mean nothing to you?" He looked at Natasha for help. "Tell him about the video, Nat."
Natasha stepped forward and put a hand on Steve's shoulder. "Take it easy on him, Steve. He looks like he's out of his mind right now. He probably hasn't been high in ages and it's messing with him badly." She paused and picked up the water, "Bucky, drink this water. Rehydrate yourself." She looked back to Steve. "We got to wait for him to sober up a little more before he will listen."

Steve was so disappointed that Bucky got drunk and high not even a day after Steve was kicked out. "You guys let him get like this. You look after him while I go check in on my son."

Christopher was lying on his back in the crib, fast asleep. The clothes he was wearing were clearly put on backwards and he didn't have Bourbon the plush dog in his crib like he did every night. He looked peaceful but also like he was having some upsetting dreams.

"Oh, Sweetheart..." Steve murmured softly. He went over to him and gently stroked a hand over the baby's hair. "Hey, Little Bean. Your dad is here. He loves you so, so much."

Christopher blinked awake at the gentle touches. Once he realized who was hovering over him, his eyes flew open and he reached out to his dad. He had a giant smile on his face and he wiggled and kicked his feet and shouted, "Dadadadada!"

Steve's face lit up when he saw his son smile and reach up for him. But when he spoke, his heart skipped a beat. "Oh my god!" He gasped. "Yes! Dada's here!" he said excitedly as he scooped him into his arms. "Such a smart boy!" In that moment, Steve forgot all about their fight and ran out to bring Christopher to Bucky. "Bucky! Listen!" He turned to Christopher. "Hey, Bean. You going to say 'Dada' again?"

Bucky watched their son and held one of his tiny hands. Christopher giggled wildly and shouted at Bucky, "Papapapa!"

"I told you!" Bucky yelped happily and stood to kiss Christopher's head. "Steve, didn't I say so? I said that he's been saying that for a few weeks now!" Bucky was coursing with excitement and was so pleased that Steve finally heard what he heard. He was still a little light in the head and all his brain was telling him to do was to take his husband and son into his arms and kiss the daylights out Steve. So he did. When Bucky broke off the kiss, he looked into Steve's eyes and whispered quietly. "He spoke, Steve. Our little boy spoke."

Steve didn't expect for Christopher to say 'Papa'. And while he wasn't saying his name, it was still incredible because this meant that Christopher understood who both of them were. He gasped again and looked over at Bucky in shock. "Buck-" he said. Christ, Bucky had been right all along - about this and about Tish. When Bucky pulled back from the kiss, Steve was crying and holding their son up against his chest. "He did," Steve said in a soft voice. "He knows who his parents are."

---

Bucky laughed for a second and then started to cry. Everything came rushing back to him at once - all this nonsense with Tish and the way that he chose to handle himself so poorly. He sat back down and glanced at Clint and Natasha who he had temporarily forgotten were there. He still believed Steve was cheating and he still didn't know what to do. Also, he had really fucked up and gotten drunk and high and irresponsible just because he didn't have Steve around to see it.

---

Steve laid Christopher on the counter so he could fix his pajamas the right way before sitting next to Bucky and giving him their son. He wrapped an arm around him and kissed his temple. "I love you, Bucky," he said. "I never cheated on you."

---

Bucky sighed and held Christopher against his chest. He thought for a long moment, "What about when you went to her house? You took her flowers and she took off her clothes." Bucky sounded so tired, defeated, ready to just get this whole thing behind them. He sort of felt like if Steve had cheated, Bucky was just so done of all this heartache that he would just look past it if Steve promised to never do it again.

---

"I told her I wouldn't go. So she lied about her aunt dying so I would go. I brought her flowers as a condolence, but she only wanted to have sex with me. When I wouldn't, she shoved me a lot and called me homophobic names. You were right about her, Bucky, but you weren't right about me," Steve said firmly. "Ask Natasha."

---

Natasha nodded once and said, "Steve had me watch security footage from the precinct. It's clear that he says he isn't coming over to her house and then she says that her aunt died and then Steve says he will come help her pack her aunt's things."

Bucky didn't know what to say. He felt relieved, of course, but also like an idiot for thinking Steve would do anything with that woman. But he also felt validated in his concern given the way Tish acted and how Steve kept denying that she was after him. "Nat, Clint, do you guys mind giving us a second?" Bucky asked, still not entirely sober and also, not wanting to have an audience for all this.

---

When Bucky asked their friends to give them a moment, Steve's stomach sank because he was filled with worry that Bucky would still kick him out - that he still didn't believe him and he didn't want them around to see him break things off with Steve. He lowered his head when Clint and Nat left the room, waiting for Bucky to lay into him.

---

"Steve..." Bucky said quietly and slipped a hand onto his thigh. "You got to know I really thought I knew what was happening. There were so many signs and you denied that she was even flirting with you. I would never just think you were cheating because I was being paranoid. Everything pointed to it being the case. I wasn't just pulling shit out the air just to have something to be angry about."
Christopher gurgled up at his papa curiously before laying his head on his shoulder. "I know you believed what you thought," Steve said. "But I wish you chose to believe me instead. Cause I've always believed in you," he answered. "I didn't know she was flirting with me. And even if I did, you should've known that I wouldn't do anything. How can I know that you're not going to kick me out every time I don't tell every person who flirts with me to buzz off? I didn't get upset when Tim kept flirting with you when we opened the shelter. I didn't even bring it up cause I trust you."

Bucky sighed and rubbed his face. "I trust you, too. I do. And at first, I thought maybe you were just naive to the fact that she was flirting because you weren't used to picking up on that with women. But then there were other things and the sweater and the letter and the phone call." He paused. "No, you know what. I was scared to death that I was losing you. I kept thinking that maybe you were interested in seeing what life with a woman was like and then you'd decide to leave me and have an easier life passing as a straight person. And I kept thinking that maybe I wasn't good enough for you and you'd gotten tired of me or you just got sick of my shit and wanted out." Bucky was bawling now and his tears were wetting the top of his shirt where Christopher was wiping them away.

Even though Steve knew Bucky couldn't help his insecurities and he could see why Bucky got upset and anxious about Steve leaving him, it still hurt. It was like Bucky didn't believe in the vow Steve made with him. But when Bucky started bawling, Steve had to put aside his anger so he could pull Bucky into a tight hug. "Let's talk more about this tomorrow, Buck," he murmured. Steve was still too upset to fully forgive Bucky. "What do you say to going to sleep together?"

"No," Bucky whined and cried into Steve's shoulder. "I want to talk now. I want this to be done with. I've spent too many nights thinking about this. I don't want another one. Please, Steve." He reached up and kissed Steve once and then laid his head back down on his shoulder. "Baby, I'm so sorry."

Steve didn't react to the kiss like he usually would, but he wasn't completely cold. "I don't know how to say what I feel without making you more upset," Steve said honestly. "But I know that you are sorry." There wasn't any disagreement on that. And he knew that Bucky believed him now, too.

"Just say it," Bucky said quietly and sat back a little. "Just say it." It would be just Bucky's luck to finally have this mess cleared up and to have Steve back home with him, just for Steve to say that he couldn't believe Bucky didn't trust him and he wanted them to break up because of that. At least Bucky was right, it would be his fuck up that ended this after all. He'd only have himself to blame.

Steve frowned and looked away for a moment before saying, "It really hurts me that you think I would take our vows as anything but a lifelong promise. I promised before God and my mom that I would spend my life with you and be faithful to you. I'm sorry I ever made you feel like you may not be enough. But I would never leave you. I love you too damn much to even think about life without you. I hate being away from you. Even when you close at work and I’m just laying in bed waiting for you to come home to me."

---

Bucky nodded and clung to Steve desperately. "I know. I know, I'm so sorry." He muffled himself in Steve's chest. He had a headache raging through him and he could feel himself getting more cognizant. Christopher took the opportunity to tangle his hand in Bucky's hair. "I'm so sorry, Baby!" Bucky cried again and held Steve's face. "Please, please, I'm sorry. I know you would never. I got confused and scared and I'm sorry, Steve. I love you, Baby. Please. I love you so goddamn much I just got messed up and I fucked things up again and I'm so sorry." Bucky did what he could to curl himself and Christopher up in Steve's lap. He felt beyond pathetic.

---

God, Steve felt like such a fucking asshole for making Bucky cry even harder. He knew his husband had some pretty heavy insecurities and even heavier baggage. When Bucky wailed some more and held the sides of his face as he apologized, Steve had to give in. "Buck," he said softly. He leaned in and kissed him gently. "Please don't cry. I'm hurt and upset but I don't want you to be, too. I want to make you happy again, okay? We can move past this." Christopher started to tear up and cry because he didn't know what was wrong.

---

"I'm so fucking sorry," Bucky said again and squeezed his hand onto Steve's upper arm. "I'm sorry for being like this and for doubting you and for crying and everything. I'm so sorry."

There was a faint noise from the hall and Bucky looked up to see Natasha, Clint, and the girls all staring at them. Becca was holding Lilly's hand and Lilly was crying quietly, obviously confused and concerned.

---

"I know, Bucky," Steve said. He squeezed Bucky's hand and gently stroked Christopher's back and kissed the top of his head to try and console their little boy. "I'm so sorry I didn't listen to you. That's on me." He kissed Bucky's forehead and then looked to see Lilly crying in the doorway. His heart broke all over again. He wiped at his eyes and stood up so he could take her other hand. "Hey," he said softly. Steve crouched down in front of her. "You don't got to cry, Lilly."

---

"Are you leaving us?" she asked and held on to Steve's hand as tightly as she could. Bucky held Christopher and watched from the couch as Becca pulled Lilly in for a hug and then grabbed Steve as well.

Becca looked up at Steve and said quietly, "Lilly's just scared because Bucky hasn't cried this hard since Mom and Dad died."

---

"No, I would never," Steve said. He hugged them both close. "Bucky and I had a bad misunderstanding and we both hurt each other in the process," he explained. "But now we understand each other and things are going to be okay. I'm going to hold your brother all night long and remind him how much I love him."
"Steve..." Bucky croaked from the couch and ushered his family over. He waited for them all to come to him and then he pulled everyone together on the couch and held his small, perfect family. Natasha and Clint quietly saw themselves out. Bucky kept crying and holding everyone and occasionally whispering his apologies to Steve for the thousandth time over and over again.

Steve kissed Bucky's cheek and lips every time he apologized. "It's okay. It's okay, Buck, we'll be fine." He pet his fingers through Bucky's hair. "How about we all camp out here? I have sleeping bags. We can watch a movie and fall asleep on the floor."

Bucky nodded and wiped at his eyes. "Can we set the girls up with a movie and you and I can go to our room just for a bit and then come watch?" He really wanted a few minutes of just him and Steve. Lilly would gladly hold Christopher for them. Bucky just wanted to lie in their bed together and look at each other and just be.

Steve nodded and kissed the top of Becca's and Lilly's heads and then headed into the bedroom. Lilly distracted Christopher so he wouldn't whine when his parents left. As soon as Bucky got on the bed, Steve wrapped his arms strongly around him. "I'm so sorry that I hurt you, Bucky."

Bucky whined high in his throat and covered his eyes. "I fucked up. I'm so sorry. It's all my fault." He moved his hands away and stared at Steve. "Baby, Steve, I'm so sorry." Bucky attached himself to his husband and started kissing him and hiccupping when he gasped for air. He knew he must look like a pitiful mess.

Steve could feel tears flowing freely down his face even though he was trying to hold it together. "No, you didn't fuck up. I should've listened to you about Tish." He held the sides of Bucky's face so he could look him in the eyes. "From now on I'm going to make sure you never have any reason to doubt me."

"I just shouldn't have doubted you in the first place," Bucky whispered and pet his hands through Steve's hair. "I love you. I love you so much. I missed you the second I sent you away and I'm so sorry I did and I should've listened to you when you came home that night. I love you, Steve. You have to know that."

Steve's bottom lip quivered. "I was afraid I'd never get to live with you and Christopher and the girls again," he said. "This family is so important to me, Bucky. I could never leave it. I'd rather die."

"You're here now. You're with us again. I'm never, ever letting you go." Bucky kissed Steve again and trailed down his jaw and his neck to his collarbone. "You're mine, Steve. I'll never make this mistake again, Baby." Bucky nuzzled Steve and moved to hover over him on the bed, still kissing softly at Steve's neck.

---

Steve nodded and gripped Bucky with almost bruising force because he needed Bucky to stay there with him. "I believe you," he said. "I know we won't have this happen again. We are going to be better next time."

---

Bucky intertwined his legs with Steve's and laid down on top of him. He cradled Steve's head in his arms and stared down at him. Bucky's hair drifted gently around him as Steve breathed and Bucky couldn't pull his eyes away from Steve's. "Tell me you love me, please. I need to know I didn't ruin this. I need to know you'll forgive me."

---

"I love you, Bucky Barnes. With all of my heart," Steve said. "There is nothing on this earth you could do that I wouldn't forgive because you're so important to me and I made a vow to stay by your side, for better or for worse." He kissed him slowly. "You are everything that's good in my life."

---

"Rogers-Barnes," Bucky corrected and hummed softly as he trailed his hands down Steve's sides. "You're my world. This family is the reason I wake up every day." Bucky pulled his shirt off and put Steve's hand over his tattoo. "This right here," he said and ran Steve's fingers over their wedding date. "That's why I keep going. I love you."

---

Steve nodded and let out a shaky breath and murmured, "We have to do something so Becca and Lilly don't feel like our relationship is unstable. I don't want Lilly to have nightmares again."

---

"What do you want to do?" Bucky asked and cuddled back up to Steve. They had already done a lot of commitment type things. They lived together, they were married, they have a child, they started a shelter together. He wasn't sure what else there was.

---

"We should do something for them - specifically for them. Cause everything we've done so far was for us, which isn't a bad thing, but we had all of this before our fight," Steve said. "We need to do something new."

---

"Okay," Bucky said and sat up in bed. "I don't know what to do. Take a family vacation maybe? Send them to see their cousins in California? I'm not sure what they would like that we could afford."

---

"I was thinking a vacation... but even bad families can pay for a vacation..." Steve sighed. "I was thinking about maybe getting them their own rings, too. So they know that they're a part of our married family."

---

"I... I guess so," Bucky shrugged. "I bet sometimes it feels like there are two families - me and the girls and then me, you, and Christopher. What if we tried to get you secondary guardianship of the girls? So they will know they aren't lesser than Christopher to you."

---

"I would love to have that," Steve said. "Genuinely," he added. Steve would've suggested it sooner but Bucky had mentioned leaving it be in the past because, at the time, Becca hadn't been sold on the fact that Steve wouldn't leave.

---

"We will have to talk to them about it and make sure they are okay with that," Bucky said and traced the lines of Steve's hand. "But I think that would be a good way to show that this is our family now - the five of us - and that's how it's going to be. No matter what."

---

"The five of us," Steve agreed. "And growing." Because the two of them were going to have plenty of little toddlers to love and raise into amazing people. "Thank you for letting me into your family."

---

Bucky pressed his forehead to Steve's and closed his eyes. "Thank you for staying." He pulled away and looked Steve up and down. "Let's go finish the movie with our kids and then once they all fall asleep, let's come back here and get undressed and just lay together and watch each other and touch each other. How's that?"

---

"We got to be back for them in the morning, though," Steve said. "I don't want them to wake up without us." He drew him in for a slow kiss before getting up. As they came back to the living room, Becca and Lilly turned their heads to watch the two of them.

---

Bucky hugged both his sisters and unzipped the biggest sleeping bag that Steve had for the two of them to share. He sat down on top of it and took Christopher from Lilly. He waited for Steve to sit beside him and then he leaned back against Steve's chest and pulled one of Steve's arms to hold underneath Christopher for support. "Steve and I love you both so much," Bucky said to the girls. "And we love each other. Everything is okay now, we promise. We are a family."

---

"You're not saying that so we feel better, right? You're definitely not breaking up?" Lilly asked.

Steve shook his head. "We mean it, Lil. We'll show it to you later. Right now, we want to have a relaxing night as a family, alright? Just the five of us."
It didn't take long for the girls to fall asleep. Lilly was first and she kept mumbling in her sleep. Becca followed pretty quickly with her arm flung over her face. Bucky laid Christopher into his swing carriage in the living room and then took Steve's hands and started pulling him towards their room. The second the door was shut, Bucky began stripping off his clothes slowly - not in a slow and sensual way, but just calm and aware of Steve's eyes on him the whole time.

---

When Bucky started stripping off his clothes, Steve walked over so he could kiss his cheek. He gently stroked a hand down his back as he looked over at Bucky's naked body. "How are you feeling, Love?"

---

Bucky felt vulnerable and tiny. He felt like he was a bad husband and needed to make things up to Steve. He felt like a complete asshole for doubting Steve and letting his insecurities take over. Bucky gingerly held Steve's face in his hands and shook his head. "I... I don't know."

---

All the hurt and anger that Steve felt earlier washed away when he saw how upset his husband was. All Steve wanted to do was make him smile. "Well, how about I make you feel better?" he asked. "We can stay up telling each other about the different things we love about us."

---

"Okay," Bucky nodded and sniffled. He reached for Steve's shirt and started to pull it up and off his body then he paused. "I'm... I'm not trying to get you to have sex with me. I know you're probably not interested or ready to be intimate with me again and that's fine. I just want to see you and feel you and be open to each other again - nothing in the way." He wanted Steve to be at his most bare just like he was. He wanted them both to be here and vulnerable together and willing to talk and be themselves again.

---

Steve leaned over to kiss him lightly. "You're right. I'm not ready for sex right now. But we can both be naked together." He stroked a hand over Bucky's side and then let the man undress him all the way. "I love you, Bucky. I'm so grateful that we are able to get back together after all this."

---

"I love you too," Bucky said and pulled Steve towards the bed. "And I'm so sorry I messed up and let myself think for even a second that you would be unfaithful. And I'm sorry that I hurt you so bad. And I know it may take a while for us to be back to normal and I know that's my fault. I'll be here through all of it - no matter how long it takes for us to be us again. And I know you may not forgive me quickly and that's fine, I don't deserve to be forgiven quickly. I don't deserve you at all. But I love you and I need you. I need you with me forever, Steve."

---

"Baby, it's not all your fault," Steve corrected. "And you do deserve me, because you deserve someone who loves you with all their heart." He kissed him gently. "I should've believed you when you said Tish wanted to be with me and not as friends. We could've avoided all this if I had done that."
Bucky took a deep breath and held Steve's hands. "I have an idea that I want to do… if you like it." He waited a second and turned Steve's hand over in his so he could touch his wedding ring. "How about we exchange our rings with each other. I'll wear yours and you wear mine. And when you've forgiven me completely and we've put this totally behind us and you are ready to be intimate again, you give mine back to me and I'll give you yours. Like a symbolic reminder that we can always heal from our conflicts and we are in this together."

Even though it was something he wished they didn't have to do, Steve loved the idea. "That sounds like a perfect idea." He pulled his own ring off and kissed it before offering it to Bucky. "I hope we don't have to do this again. But I'd like to do this in the future if we ever get mad at each other."

"Okay, Baby, this will be what we do then." Bucky gently took his ring off and pushed it down Steve's finger before putting Steve's ring on his own hand. "It'll be our way of knowing when we have things right with each other again. No guessing or assumptions." He held his hand in Steve's and looked at their rings again. "I love you, Steve."

"I love you too, Bucky," Steve said. He kissed Bucky's lips lightly and pulled back when he remembered something. "Oh, uh, Tim is still at the shelter. He recognized me when I went there to sleep and he was the one who urged me to find you instead of wait for you to decide what to do."

"He told me to go back for you," Steve said. "And that I should appreciate his advice because you're a catch and he would scoop you up if given the chance," Steve chuckled. "He's a good guy. It's a shame he still is there - not that I mind him being there."

"Steve," Bucky smiled, "I know that look. That's the 'Steven 'I want to do something to help' Rogers' look. What are you thinking? Helping him get a job or an apartment or something? I could talk to Clint about him being a filler at the shop."

Steve smiled guiltily because he had been thinking of some sort of way he could get Tim some form of employment. "Could you? That'd be great," he said. "I was thinking about finding some civil service exams he's qualified for but that would be perfect in the meantime."

Bucky grinned. "Yeah, I can do that. I was going to ask Clint to hire someone else on soon anyway because I'm going to need time off Tuesday and Thursday evening for a few hours for a while starting pretty soon."

---

Steve looked curious. "What are you doing Tuesday and Thursday evenings?" Steve asked. "You doing a class or something?" He reached out to play with his hair lightly.

---

"Not a class, no," Bucky said and cleared his throat. "I'm going to start doing something for you - and for our family. I actually decided it about a month ago but I haven't had the guts to start. And I didn't want to tell you yet in case it doesn't work out. I don't want you to be disappointed. But given our recent weeks and the mistrust and hurt and misunderstanding exchanged between us, if you want me to tell you, I will. But if not, you just have to wait a few months and then hopefully I can make you proud."

---

Steve stroked a finger along Bucky's jaw. "It's okay. You don't have to tell me what it is," he said. "If you want to surprise me, then I'll let you surprise me." Steve gave him a long, loving look. "And I'm already proud of you, Sweetheart. You're an amazing person and an even better dad."

---

Bucky kissed Steve and wrapped his arms around his middle. He breathed lightly on Steve's chest and kissed it a few times as well. "Speaking of, we should probably go back out to our kids, huh? Christopher usually wakes up around this time. I'm also really happy you finally heard him talk. He always did it when you weren't around but I'm glad he did it today."

---

"He's got such an adorable voice," Steve said. "He was a little traitor to me, though... said 'Dada' when we were alone and then 'Papa' when I brought him out to you." Steve got up and started to get dressed. "He'll be saying full sentences soon enough."

---

"He just knows which one of us is which," Bucky said and pulled on his pajama pants. "He's so smart. He started crawling too. Just a little bit but he's definitely been moving around. We might want to make sure he can't open any doors or anything and hurt himself.

---

"Baby-proofing the house already, huh?" Steve looked excited to be able to see their son grow up and do all these amazing, little things.

When they walked to the living room, Christopher was already awake. "Dadadada," he said excitedly as Steve walked over to pick him up.

---

Bucky giggled and sat back down on the sleeping bag and waited for Steve. Lilly made a noise and some jerking movements and Bucky hovered over her cautiously. When she didn't stop after a couple seconds, Bucky shook her awake saying, "Hey, my little monster, it's okay. You were having a nightmare." Bucky pulled her close to him and kissed the top of her head. Becca woke up as well from the noise and sat up, asking about what was going on.

---

Steve blew a raspberry on Christopher's neck and the baby squealed with laughter. Since both girls were awake, he didn't bother to be quiet. "We were just entertaining your nephew," he said to Becca. "Do you want hot chocolate or anything since you're awake?"

---

Lilly nodded her head tiredly for hot chocolate and Bucky got up to make her some. "So, since you are both up and we are all together... maybe Steve and I can ask you about something we wanted to do but we want you both to be okay with it before we try."

"Not another baby," Becca said sternly and looked to Christopher. "Wait for me to go to college at least then you can get another one."

---

Steve chuckled a little. "We're a gay couple, Becca, we can't be picky when it comes to timing our next baby," he said. "But we'll at least not actively look for one until you're in college," Steve promised. "What we want to ask is a bit more important," Steve said.

---

Bucky came back with hot chocolates for both girls and a bottle for Christopher. He snuggled close next to Steve and looked down at Steve's ring on his own finger. He was really glad Steve liked that plan but he was already waiting anxiously for when he could get his ring back. "Steve and I wanted to know if it would be okay with the two of you if we petitioned the court to give Steve secondary guardianship of the both of you."

---

Becca looked surprised and Lilly turned to Becca to gauge her reaction so she would know how she should react. "But... why would you want to do that?" Becca asked.

Steve nuzzled Christopher affectionately. "Because I want us to be one family. Not two parts of one," he said. "And I want you guys to never have to worry about me going away."

---

The girls were quiet, both thinking to themselves. Lilly looked from Bucky to Steve a few times and then over to Becca who was looking down at her hot chocolate. Bucky didn't like the long silence so he added, "We were just thinking that it would be good for all five of us to be all officially connected. Because right now it's like, Steve is only here for me and the baby and that's not true. He's here for you both, too. This would be our family."

---

Becca considered for a long moment but then nodded. "Fine. But that doesn't make him the boss of us or anything. It's just paperwork," she said. Lilly looked more excited about it because it made her feel a lot happier that they were officially one family.
Bucky laughed and took the cups of hot chocolate from his sisters and put them down so he could pull them into a big hug. "He doesn't have to be the boss of you. But now he can help with things at school or team stuff or parent-teacher meetings. And we can write him on doctor’s forms as a guardian and emergency contact. And you'll have two people looking after you again and it'll be a lot easier just saying 'our kids' instead of 'my sisters' and 'our son'." Bucky was rambling and he knew it but he was just so happy that they were okay with this.

---

When both girls agreed, Steve started to tear up and cry happy tears. Becca gave him a deadpan look. "Oh my god, Steve," she said, embarrassed at how big of a deal Steve was making out of this.

"I'm just happy I have you all back again," Steve said thickly and rubbed his eyes

---

"Hey, come here," Bucky chuckled and kissed Steve. "We're getting you guardianship. The girls will officially be your family now too. I love you so much." Bucky kissed some of the tears away from Steve's cheeks and slowly pulled Steve into their family hug. Christopher was caught in the middle and must have been annoyed that he couldn't see anything because he started making loud babble and shoving his hands against Bucky.

---

Steve laughed when their son voiced his distaste for the closeness. He pulled back. "What's the matter, Bean?" Christopher made another loud noise and went back to minding himself. "I'm excited to move forward," Steve said. "Knowing that we all will get to stick together."

---

Lilly yawned and scooted forward to hug Steve. "I love you, Steve. You're going to make a good big brother for us," Bucky beamed at his sister and messed up her hair. He could tell everyone was pretty tired and today had certainly been an up and down sort of day. He was ready to fall asleep and get to wake up with Steve again. This whole thing had just been a tornado of bad decisions and misunderstandings and he was ready to put it away.
A few weeks later, when the leaves started to change color, Steve decided it was time to baptize their son. Rather than worry about squeezing people into their apartment, the shelter was going to have a little party to celebrate and Steve didn't mind a few strangers joining in on the festivities. As he tried to put a reluctant Christopher into a baby suit, Steve turned his head to call Lilly over.

---

Lilly trotted over, wearing her best dress and looking a little frazzled. "Yeah? Do you need Bucky? I don't know where he is but I can find him. I think he might be out smoking." She looked down at Christopher who was getting bigger and stronger every day. He had been crawling for almost a solid month now and he was never happy with being held down like he was now.

---

Steve finally wrestled Christopher into his clothes. The little boy had since learned the word 'no' and was adamantly chanting it right now. "I need you to hold your godson and make sure he doesn't pull this off while I get changed."

---

Lilly sighed in exasperation and picked up Christopher and adjusted his shirt for him as he mumbled 'no' over and over again. Then it hit her. "Wait, what did you just say? I'm his godmother? I'm not allowed to be."

---

"Officially, no. But Father Frank says you're allowed to do all the godmotherly duties for him so long as you know that the church can't officially recognize you as his godmother." Steve kissed the top of her head and ran off to change into his nice clothes.

---

"What?" Lilly called after him in surprise. "Oh my god. Christopher, buddy, I'm your godmother!" Lilly said to the baby and held him up in front of her. "I'm your godmother. How cool is that shit?" She nodded and sat with Christopher and waited for Steve to come back.

---

Christopher went from being grumpy to excited when he heard the happy tone in Lilly's voice regardless of not understanding her. Steve came back all dressed up and ready to go. "You're going to get to hold him as he gets baptized today. That's a pretty big deal," Steve said.

---

Lilly gasped. "Really? I thought you and Bucky were holding him. Where are you guys going to be?" Now she was nervous. She wasn't aware that she was going to be this involved. There were going to be people watching her. What if Christopher started to cry while she was holding him?

---

"We are going to be up there with you. When he gets baptized, we pass him to you. They pour a little water over his head, then you pass him back," Steve explained. "There are some other babies going before him. Usually, it's a few families done at the same time."

---

"Okay, I can handle that." Lilly nodded and looked to her godson. "I can handle that, right?" Christopher was unresponsive.

Bucky popped in then, dressed in a suit that Steve had bought for him especially for this occasion and with his hair French braided with a black bow holding it together - Becca insisted on the bow. "Hey, I think we are ready to go."

---

Steve preened happily when he saw Bucky all dapper and done up. "I like how you did your hair," he complimented. Steve walked over and kissed his temple. "Let's get this show on the road." Steve put Christopher in the baby carrier, which he was quickly starting to hate. The baby loved moving around and only enjoyed cuddles briefly unless he was tired.

---

Christopher immediately started fussing and Bucky handed him a teething toy to chew on while they were on their way. "You look really handsome, Steve," Bucky said and stopped Steve to give him a kiss. "And our little boy, our little bean is getting baptized today. How happy are you right now?" Bucky asked seriously. He wanted to make sure this was all going exactly as Steve hoped it would.

---

"I'm so excited," Steve said. "I can't wait for him to be welcomed into the church. Not that he hasn't been watched over from the start... but still... he's going to have a whole community looking out for him now. My mom is over the moon."

---

Sarah met them at the shelter and she immediately took Christopher from his carrier and held him close. Despite being picked up, he was very happy to see his Nana. Bucky awkwardly stood next to Steve and held his hand tightly. Tim had recently moved out of the shelter and into an apartment with the money he had been making at the record shop, but he kept volunteering to help Father Frank and others run the shelter so he was there to see them all for the baptism. He greeted everyone and shook Christopher's tiny hand before headed back to the priest to help make sure everything was in order. "You ready, Bean?" Bucky asked as Sarah passed the baby back to him.

---

The whole ceremony was very nice. The father had created a very understanding atmosphere in this church so neither Steve nor Bucky got weird or dirty looks for being with each other, raising a child. Christopher did end up splashing Lilly a little with the holy water and Steve joked that it was because he saw a little devil in her.

---

After the ceremony was all over and every baby had been baptized, there was a luncheon at the shelter for everyone and Bucky held Christopher and fed him small cut up pieces of strawberries as Steve talked with another couple that was at the table with them. Bucky looked down at his hand. He still had Steve's ring. He did like having it there because it reminded him why they were doing this and that he was Steve's and Steve was his. But every day he woke up and hoped that day would be the one that he would get his ring back and Steve would have forgiven him fully and put the whole thing behind them.

---

"Papa," Christopher said, then pointed at his mouth before signing 'more' because he wanted more strawberries. "He's so smart," Steve said proudly. "Thank you for letting me share this with him. It's important to me that he grows up Catholic before he decides if he wants to stay or not."

---

"Of course, Steve," Bucky said and held up a whole strawberry to Christopher so he could gnaw on it. "I know how important this is to you." He pet his hands through his husband's hair and felt Christopher's tiny teeth bite down on his finger as he tried to take the piece of fruit from him. "Ouchies, Christopher," Bucky said and kissed the top of his head. "Avoid biting."

---

Christopher whined, more concerned with the fact that his food was taken away than that he bit Bucky's finger. When he realized he wasn't getting it back without making up, he kissed Bucky's finger and then opened his mouth for the strawberry again.

"You think maybe we can have some alone time tonight?" Steve asked discreetly and gently nudged Bucky.

---

Bucky handed the strawberry to Christopher and then moved his hand out of the way. "Yeah, Baby, of course," Bucky smiled weakly and took Steve's hand. "Do we need to talk about something?" he asked nervously and rubbed his thumb over Steve's palm. He was worried he had done something to make Steve upset again. He still hadn't told him about what he had been doing every Tuesday and Thursday evening and maybe Steve was getting annoyed with not knowing. Now Bucky was anxious and his leg started bouncing up and down of its own accord and Christopher giggled with the feeling.

---

Steve didn't mean to upset and worry him. "We don't need to talk about anything, Love. It's just that we've been so busy with the kids and our jobs that we haven't had much 'us' time. I'd like to catch up with how we're doing, you know - just to put a little time aside for each other."

---

Bucky sighed and smiled, relieved. "Yeah, Christopher will probably be ready for a nap when we get home so we can take advantage of that." He passed Christopher off to Steve. "I'm going to get him some more strawberries really quick." Bucky went up to the serving line and went to talk to Tim. "Hey, Buddy, haven't seen you in a few days."

---

Tim looked over at Bucky and smiled. "Been busy volunteering here. Some assholes keep spray-painting the walls outside and I'm keeping watch to try and catch them in the act. Don't mention it to Steve cause we don't want him to get upset over it."
"Fuck, really?" Bucky sighed. "Alright, well, if it gets worse we will tell Steve and have him get an officer posted here for a few nights. Can I ask what they are spray painting or do I not want to know?"

"You don't want to know," Tim said flatly. "Trust me." He then nudged him gently with a smile. "But, hey, don't worry about it. You've got a family to take care of. I'm going to take care of my family here. I'm the only one left from the first crew who comes back to help so I'm kind of the resident dad. I'm also the oldest who's been here."

"Okay, Resident Dad." Bucky smiled and got some more strawberries for Christopher. "Hey, I wanted to thank you again for coming on at the record shop on. You are a lot better of a worker than the potheads and it's been really important that I get to my meetings. I still haven't told Steve about going to AA. I want to wait until I reach a significant step in the program and then tell him. Clint and you are the only ones that know. Well, and probably Clint's girlfriend."

Tim smiled at him. "Thank you for giving me the job. It's really helped me get back on my feet. And I enjoy it. Reggie leaves his weed out all the time. Don't tell him I steal some of it now and then." He felt a bit lucky that Bucky was confiding in him. "So how are the meetings going for you? You feeling more confident about controlling your drinking?"

Bucky chuckled and said, "I've stolen some from Reggie, too. Don't worry about it," as he reached in his pocket to produce his one-month sober chip. "Got this the other day. I think I'm going to wait until have my three-month chip to tell Steve. That'll be almost one hundred days sober and I think that's a safe time to tell him."

"Hey, man, that's amazing," Tim said excitedly. "That's a huge milestone. I think Steve is really going to be happy for you. Your sisters will be, too." Tim nudged him again and smirked. "Maybe we should throw you a party after you reveal it to your husband."

"I don't know about all that," Bucky said shyly and turned his chip over in his hand. "Not sure if I need a party for this, you know? I just need to keep telling myself that I'm doing it for my family. It was really hard for me to even admit I was an alcoholic to begin with. This has only ever been about my husband and my kids." He looked back at Steve who was occupying Christopher who was getting antsy waiting for his fruit. "I should probably get back to them, actually. I'll see you at work, man."

"See you at work," Tim said. He congratulated Bucky one more time before he headed back.

"Papa!" Christopher said excitedly, bouncing in Steve's arms when Bucky came back.
"You're not gone for longer than a few minutes and he's already missing you. Come take your son so he doesn't give himself a heart attack working himself up like this," Steve said with a laugh.

---

"Come here, Little Bean!" Bucky said excitedly and traded Steve the strawberries for their son. Bucky kissed Christopher several times on his cheeks and then sat down with him. "Christopher, can you ask Daddy for some fruit?" Bucky said and signed 'more' like they had taught him and then pointed to Steve who had the bowl.

---

Christopher watched Bucky with big eyes, taking in the sign that Bucky was doing before turning to his dad and mimicking 'more' and 'hungry'. Steve praised him for being so smart and then gave him some more food.

Lilly came running over to them. "Hey, can I hold him? You two have been hogging him."

---

"You're a pushy godmother," Bucky mumbled quietly and gave Christopher over. "Once he eats those strawberries, that's it. He needs to be done. So even if he asks for more, tell him ‘no’ and then give him some water instead, okay?"

---

"You're depriving your son of healthy fruits and leaving me to deal with an unhappy baby?" Lilly complained. Christopher whined and made unhappy noises a first when he finished his berries but he didn't cause a huge fuss.

After a while more of mingling and conversing, Steve yawned and reached over to take Bucky's hand. "Alright. Are we all ready to head back home? I think Christopher had a big enough day today."

---

"I'm ready to go home," Bucky said and started packing up Christopher's bag. "He needs to have a nap and Becca has a paper to finish for tomorrow." Bucky made his rounds, saying goodbye to Tim and Father Frank and a few other people they had gotten acquainted with and then returned to Steve. "Take us home, Steve."

---

Steve loaded them all into the car and drove back home. Christopher babbled and sung to himself because he loved car rides and once they were home, he chanted 'no, no, no' until they were inside. "That kid isn't afraid to share what he thinks, huh?" Steve laughed.

---

"I think he gets that's from you, Steve," Bucky joked and set Christopher down so he could crawl for a bit. It didn't take long for him to wear himself out and Bucky watched as his crawlsl slowed down and turned into a flop on his tummy on the ground. "Sleepy Bean," Bucky said and gently peeled his son off the floor.

---
Steve watched happily as Christopher made his way around. After they laid him down to sleep, Steve reached out to gently take Bucky's hand in his. "How about we get changed into something more comfortable, huh?"

---

"Yeah," Bucky said and pulled at his tie. "I know I needed to wear a suit today but I am ready to be out of this thing." He went to the closet and pulled out some sweats and a long-sleeved shirt. He also undid the braid of his hair and glanced in the mirror to see that his hair was all wavy from being done up so long.

---

Steve undressed and found a pair of sweats for himself and some for Bucky. "Here, wear my sweats instead. You look sexy in them," Steve suggested. When he passed the pants over, Bucky's ring was placed neatly on top of the folded clothes.

---

"Hey!" Bucky shouted and held up the ring, tossing the pants behind him on the bed. He smiled wide and his eyes scanned over Steve's face. "Are you giving this back to me?" he asked cautiously and clutched on to the ring tightly.

---

Steve gave Bucky a happy smile and offered his own hand so Bucky could give him his ring back. "I think I'm ready to move on," he said. "Put the past behind us and have a better tomorrow."

---

Bucky nodded sharply and gave Steve's ring back. After they both had their respective rings on their fingers, Bucky breathed deeply a few times, with a wild look in his eye, and then jumped on Steve. He wrapped his legs around Steve's middle and kissed him feverishly, laughing happily every time he came up for air. "I love you. I love you! Thank you for forgiving me, Baby. I love you so much."

---

Steve didn't expect such a big reaction from Bucky and it made him regret not being able to let go sooner. He smiled and returned the kisses lovingly. Steve wrapped his arms strongly around his husband’s waist and held him close. "I love you, too, Buck. It's like it never even happened for me, okay?"

---

Bucky nodded and kissed Steve's neck. "Never happened," he agreed and starting sucking a hickey right by Steve's Adam's apple. He had waited for this so patiently and repeatedly told himself that if Steve could forgive him, and he could forgive himself, then everything was going to be okay. And on top of that, he had been sober for a little over a month and was making such good progress. "I kind of feel like some things had to get bad for them to get a lot better, you know?"

---

Steve moaned softly when Bucky sucked a hickey on his neck. "Mmm, yes..." he said in a distracted tone. "I'm so glad we are strong enough together to be able to get through this mess," he said. "And we are better for it."
Bucky slipped his legs off of Steve and plopped back on the ground. Steve was still shirtless and Bucky couldn't help but kiss his chest and hold his arms securely around his hips. He hadn't done anything physical with Steve since the night the shelter opened. After that, Bucky was either suspicious that Steve was cheating so he didn't want to have sex with him or Steve was recovering and hadn't yet felt comfortable being intimate with Bucky. Bucky hadn't pressured Steve at all and he wasn’t pressuring him now. He pulled off of Steve and looked at his ring back on his own finger. "I love you, Steve."

Steve gently eased Bucky back onto the bed and laid down on top of him. "I want to make love later," he said. "But first, I want to talk with you. Say how we feel and all that cause I feel like we've been a little distant and I know that's because you were giving me the space I needed."

"I want to talk with you, too," Bucky said and held on to Steve desperately. He kind of thought, in lieu of getting his ring back, and also Steve's trust, he might just go ahead and tell him about AA now. He wasn't sure yet. "And, Steve, honestly, if you want to wait some more before we make love, I understand. I don't want you to feel like just because you gave me my ring back that you have to be intimate again if you aren't totally ready. Just knowing that you're ready to put this behind us is enough for me right now."

Steve shrugged. "It's not that I don't want to or I'm not ready," he said. "I'm not entirely in the mood right now, but that can change. Besides, I want to make you feel good." He reached over to tease Bucky's nipple lightly and took a breath before changing the subject. "I'm looking at retirement packages," Steve admitted. "I'm not sure if we are financially ready yet... but the more I'm out there, the more I want to be with our son and the rest of my family."

"Yeah?" Bucky asked and took both of Steve's hands and held them over his chest. "What sort of stuff have you been learning? I know that's what you want. You want to be a stay-at-home dad. And I want you to do exactly what will make you happy. And I just can work more or get a second job if that'll make it faster for you to retire."

"I'm learning that it pays to wait until at least fifteen years in," Steve said with a defeated frown. "I'll be in my mid-thirties, almost. But Christopher would be almost ten," he said. "There's not many packages for people who did less than ten years and didn't quit for medical reasons."

Bucky sighed and rubbed his thumb over the back of Steve's hand. "Well, what would it look like if you did retire now? Also, I mean, ten years old is still a good time for a kid to have his Daddy at home with him. I think even if you have to wait that long, it'll still end up being really good for him. And we might have another kid by that time, too."
"If I retire now we wouldn't be able to get a house to fit more kids," Steve said. "And I know that's important to the both of us. And I guess I'd feel like I was favoring our younger kids if I was home from a young age for them and not for Christopher."

---

"Okay." Bucky thought for a second. "I can talk to Clint about a raise, more hours, something. He was thinking of opening the store for longer each night soon anyway. I can apply somewhere for a second job, maybe an assistant position somewhere that pays well." He bit his lip. "I don't know. I want this for you, for us, for Christopher. But I don't know how to make it happen."

---

"Bucky, I don't want you to shoulder the financial burden of my choices," Steve said. "Especially when you never got to finish the things you wanted to while I get everything." He huffed. "I just need to get shot in the knee or something. Not enough to really cripple me but enough to retire with a pension."

---

"No," Bucky said firmly and squeezed Steve's arm. "No more getting shot, okay? We already dealt with that once, dammit. Don't joke about that." He nuzzled into Steve's neck and sighed.

Bucky wanted to tell Steve about AA because it was something he was doing for his family and he was proud of himself, but there was more to it than that. There was a young girl in his group who had a similar story to his - started drinking at a young age, used it as a coping mechanism for years, decided to get cleaned up because of her family. She was only nineteen and the day she realized she was pregnant was the last time she had a drink. Except that she couldn't keep the baby and was going to give it up for adoption once it was born. Bucky was going to tell Steve about her and discuss maybe adopting her child. But now he knew they couldn't do that. It was too soon and they just couldn't swing it.

---

"Sorry," Steve apologized. "I shouldn't have joked like that." He had temporarily forgotten how worried Bucky had been when he was shot that he would end up paralyzed or even just crippled like Bucky's father was. He kissed Bucky gently and pet his wavy hair. "Tell me about your life," Steve said. "I want to hear about the things that made you happy or sad or, hell, tell me whatever. I want to hear your voice."

---

Bucky smiled softly and leaned into Steve's touch. "Well, I guess I can go ahead and tell you something big. I was going to wait but then you gave me my ring back and you want to talk and I want to tell you. I don't think I can wait two more months like I planned. I'm too proud."

---

Steve couldn't help the excited look that came across his face. "Is this the thing you're doing Tuesday's and Thursday's?" he asked and started guessing. "Are you doing night school? Learning sewing or something? Or maybe you're in a band. Are you in a band?" His eyes were wide and he bit his lip. He loved when Bucky played music. Bucky in a band would be one of the sexiest things he had ever seen.
"I'm not in a band, you punk." Bucky laughed and gently pushed Steve off of him. "I need to get something from my wallet." He grabbed his wallet from the dresser and pulled out the one-month sober chip and came back to bed. Bucky took Steve's hand and placed the chip on his palm. "I got that a few days ago at AA."

---

It took Steve a moment to realize what it was but then he recognized it from a few coworkers who'd gone to meetings. "Oh my god, Bucky!" He looked up at him and beamed. "Oh, Baby. I'm so proud of you!" He wrapped him in a bear hug. "Tell me how it's been. Have you met anyone nice there? Is it good to have other people around who understand?"

---

Bucky clutched onto Steve and laughed in relief. He kissed the side of Steve's face and then pulled back. "It's not been bad," he said and took the chip back. "I've had ups and downs and several times that I just wanted to quit and come home. But I'm doing it for you, and the girls, and our son, and anyone else who comes along to join our family. I just had to tell that to myself every time it got difficult. And they say the first month is the worst one anyway."

---

Steve felt so thankful to have such a caring husband at his side. "You are an amazing person, you know that? I really admire the sacrifices you're making for our family," he said genuinely. "Have you told the girls yet? Becca may be skeptical but I think she'd be happy."

---

"No, only you," Bucky said. "Well, Clint and Tim know because they had to know where I was going that I needed those times off of work. Also, I assume Clint told Natasha. But other than that, you're all I've told." He kissed Steve slowly and tangled his legs around Steve's waist. "I get a new chip every month. And I know that statistically speaking, I'll probably be one of the guys who messes up and drinks and goes back to the beginning but that doesn't mean it's the end. I won't give up on this. And I'll do everything in my power not to mess up my streak. But, even if I do mess up, I will just start over and keep starting over until it sticks."

---

Steve hugged Bucky tightly and kissed him again slowly. "I believe in you. I know you have it in you to kick the habit for good, even if you mess up sometimes. You're only human, but you're the best kind of human there is."

---

"Thank you," Bucky said and fiddled with the one-month chip. "I actually kind of believe in myself this time too, you know? I think I have the right intentions to do this and my family is the perfect motivator. I can do this, Steve."

---

"Christopher has such an amazing Papa," Steve said and stroked his hand down Bucky's chest as he looked into his eyes. "I can't believe how quick he's growing up, Bucky. In the blink of an eye, he's going to be off to school."

---
Chuckling lightly, Bucky opened his eyes wide and said, "Then let's not blink. Problem solved." Although, Steve was right. Their little bean would be grown up before they knew it. And if and when they could actually get another child was a mystery entirely. "I'll tell you, Baby, that kid's teeth hurt. At least he isn't pulling my hair as much. But when he accidentally bites, it's pretty strong."

---

Steve snorted and messed up Bucky's hair playfully. He kissed up Bucky's neck and said, "Yeah, I caught him trying to bite Raphael's tail. He thinks biting is the new way of seeing what something is."

---

"Jesus, what did the cat do with that?" Bucky asked. He knew Raph was more of a chill cat but he probably ran and hid when the baby started attacking his tail.

---

"Well, I was about to intervene but Raphael whacked him with his paw and that stopped the whole thing from happening." Steve snickered. "You should have seen his face, Buck. The cat didn't use his claws or anything, but Christopher wasn't expecting that kind of retaliation."

---

This was really nice, just being here, being together and normal with Steve again. Not that they were acting particularly weird before, but it was different now. "I missed you, Steve," Bucky said quietly.

---

Steve drew Bucky in for a slow, gentle kiss. He couldn’t believe he let himself go so long without being with Bucky at all times and without touching his body and showing him love. He always did say that Bucky deserved so much love and he shouldn’t have held out on him this long. "I missed you too."

---

"You make me beyond happier than I could have ever thought possible," Bucky said quietly. "You know that, right? Steve? You know I love you? You know I've never stopped loving you?" He didn't know why, but Bucky was desperate for validation. He still felt so small and pathetic, but he was getting better every moment.

---

"I know, Bucky," Steve said. "I never doubted how much you loved me." He peppered kisses all over his face. "What can I do to make you feel happier right now?"

---

Bucky traced his finger all along the inside of Steve's arm. "Just be here with me. Hold me. Help me trim my hair again. Snuggle me. Play with our son. Talk with our girls. And then later, make love to me with the same reverence you did the first time."
Steve smiled adoringly at him and trailed a few kisses down his neck. "I can do that," he said softly. "I love you, Sweetheart," he said with a smile. "You're the best husband a man could ask for."
A few days later, things were calming down more and more between them. Bucky wasn’t so angry with himself and Steve was back to being affection with his husband. Bucky still felt terrible about the whole thing but Steve continued to make it clear that, to him, it was forgotten – it never happened. Bucky swore to Steve over and over that he would never doubt him like that again and he would work on his insecurities and issues about himself that made him distrust Steve for even a second. Steve also made a point to spend some time thinking about how this all happened and working to understand Bucky’s perspective on the initial incidents that led to entire misunderstanding.

Today, Steve had gone home early to relieve his mother of baby duty because he finished his paperwork pretty quickly and it was fairly slow at the station anyway. He was eager to play with his son, who was just starting to be able to stand up and hobble around so long as someone held him steady the whole time. It was an easy way to tire him out for a nap, too, which was very nice. Steve was playing peekaboo on the floor with Christopher when Bucky finally got home.

---

"Hey, Baby!" Bucky said when he got in the door. "I got something for Christopher today that I want you to give him." He held out the bag to Steve and took Christopher from his husband. Bucky had bought him a bunch of small containers of various colored baby-safe paints.

---

"Why would you want me to give him something you bought?" Steve asked.

When Bucky picked him up, Christopher smiled and said a happy, “Hi, Papa, hi.”

Steve looked in the bag and gasped at what he saw. "Oh, Little Bean, you're going to love this." He picked out all the paints and held them out for the squirming baby to look at.

---

Christopher reached for the paints curiously and tried getting at them. Bucky took him over to the table and put him in his high chair. "Here, Christopher, Papa will get some paper to put down on the table and Daddy will show you how to paint, okay?"

---

"This was such a great idea, Bucky," Steve said. "Oh, man, we are going to have fun with this." He started to open the different colors and Christopher eyed them curiously and hit his hands on the table a few times. "Look at him, Buck. You've got him all worked up."

---

"He sees bright colors and things he can potentially make a mess with. Of course, he's excited." Bucky brought a bunch of paper over and started laying it out on the table. "All the paint is baby-safe so if he does happen to ingest any of it, he will be totally fine."

---

Steve held one of the paints over for Christopher to dip his hand in. When the baby tried to eat it,
Steve pulled his hand away. "No, no." He swiped the baby's hand on the paper. "See?"

---

Christopher just stared at the mark for a second then looked back up at his dad curiously. "Do it again, Steve," Bucky said and handed him the green paint. "Maybe he needs some poured out for him. I've never painted with a baby before."

---

Christopher got the gist of it after the third try. "Good boy!" Steve praised. "Oh, look at him go." Christopher was eagerly smacking paint-covered hands on to the table and swiping back and forth to make streaks. Steve leaned over the table and playfully wiped some paint on Bucky's cheek.

---

Bucky closed his eyes and hung his head. "Thanks, Babe," he said sarcastically and licked some paint that had landed on his lip. It was horrid. "God, this shit tastes disgusting! They wouldn't even have to make this nontoxic. Kids would taste it and then immediately want nothing to do with it."

---

Just as Bucky said that, Christopher must have had a taste of the paint because he started making annoyed sounds and licking his lips. Steve grabbed a cup and fed him some water to help get rid of it. To pacify him, he leaned in and let the baby paint on his face.

---

"Christopher, make your daddy try that gross paint since I had to try it," Bucky said and helped his son paint on Steve's face. Instead of obliging him, Christopher turned to Bucky and started wiping red paint down his neck.

---

Steve let out a roar of laughter and Christopher clapped his hands together for making his dad laugh. Lilly heard all the noise and finally emerged from her room to see what was going on. "Hey, what are you guys doing?"

---

"Painting with your godson," Bucky mumbled and grabbed a towel to wipe the paint off of his neck. "I found baby-safe nontoxic paint." He dipped his finger in a bit of blue paint and then wiped it directly on Steve's lips. "There, lick that vile crap." Bucky turned to Lilly. "It's pretty fun. Christopher seems to be enjoying himself."

---

"Leeee," Christopher said to Lilly, reaching for her, hands, arms, and face covered in paint. "Uh, hell no, you're a mess," she said, though she grabbed some paper and started painting some flowers. It was just about the only thing she could draw. Steve licked his lips and nearly gagged. "Christ!"
"Fucking told you." Bucky nodded and poured some more paint out for his son to mess with. "When the girls were younger, they really liked coloring so we had a bunch of coloring books. Becca had this really precise way of coloring. It would take her about a month to finish one page because everything had to be perfectly within the lines and carefully filled in. And Lilly would pick one color and run it across the whole page until she was satisfied."

---

"I am a contemporary artist," Lilly said in a fake, snobby voice.

Steve wiped his mouth of the paint and watched as Christopher made a mess out of himself. "Does Becca still like doing art? She hasn't really spoken to me about it."

---

"I don't think she really does anything like that anymore," Bucky said and shrugged. "She hasn't used coloring books in years and she spends all her free time reading anyway. I mean she might still like it. Want me to go ask her if she wants to paint with us?"

---

"Yeah, see if she wants to join. Everyone else is out here anyway," Steve said. Christopher got a determined look on his face and deliberately started marking up his new piece of paper.

---

Bucky went and got Becca who reluctantly came out to see what was going on. Apparently, she had been working on writing the next great young adult novel and didn't appreciate being disturbed. But she also wanted to do some finger painting.

Bucky felt pretty satisfied that he got not one but two grumpy sisters to join their painting party. He also felt like this was a good time to update the family on things. "So, Steve and I are going down to petition the court for his secondary guardianship on Monday."

---

"Far out," Becca said flatly, sounding unenthused only because she was busy painting her own picture.

"Will the court fight you on it?" Lilly asked. Lilly had decided it would be fun to paint little hearts on Christopher's cheeks, so she did.

---

Bucky shrugged and started painting aimless wavy lines in the corner. "They shouldn’t. They might ask for some testimonies from the two of you before making a decision, though. Just talk about what you like about having him in the family and if you trust him."

---

Becca snorted. "Testimonies, huh? Can I tell them that I trust Steve to be a huge fucking doofus at all times?" she said smartly, making Lilly snicker as she continued to paint.

---

"I guess so if being ‘a huge fucking doofus’ means you trust him to be your guardian," Bucky replied and gave Steve a small smile. He really was a dork. But at least he was Bucky's dork. And they both really wanted this. It was would connect their family in the way it was lacking and that seemed like exactly what they needed.

"Yeah, we trust him," Becca admitted finally. "He is more responsible than most. Christopher likes him well enough. And I think we're stuck with him anyways." Even though the sentiment was a little tongue-in-cheek, it was genuine.

Steve smiled happily as he began to paint a little picture of their son on his own paper. "I always wanted a big family."

Bucky thought again of the young woman in his AA group. Should he just go ahead and tell Steve about her even though it wasn’t likely they could manage to adopt her baby? Or would it just make them both upset knowing that there was a child who needed them but they couldn’t help? He didn't want Steve to be heartbroken about this, too.

Steve proudly set his painting aside to dry. It was pretty good, considering Steve finger-painted it. He tried to get Christopher to say different colors, but the baby had no interest in learning right now. He just wanted to keep making a mess. "We got to do this more, Bucky. He's loving it."

"We've almost used it all," Bucky observed and held up one of the containers. "I guess I'll get more soon then. It wasn't too expensive. We can just stockpile so we always have some." Christopher was starting to fuss because there wasn't much paint to work with anymore and Bucky decided to get him some blueberries to distract him while he cleaned up.

"Are you my handsome little artist?" Steve said to Christopher. He kissed the top of his head and stood up so he could wash his hands. He grabbed a wet cloth so he could help Bucky clean up the mess they all made.

To help in the cleaning up, Christopher just decided to mash blueberries into his hands and mouth and mumble a bunch of nonsense. "I think he is going to need a nap soon." Bucky chuckled and watched their son yawn with blueberries all over his face. "Papa could use a nap as well before he needs to go to his meeting."

"Oh, Bean, I just cleaned up the last mess you made on your face..." Steve said pathetically. He didn't get too upset because their son was so fucking cute. "Why don't you go lay down, Buck? I'll take care of Christopher and make sure he gets his sleep."

"Alright, but don't let me sleep past my meeting," Bucky said with a yawn and then trotted off towards their bedroom. Bucky’s nap was short and his meeting was long. When he got home, Steve was curled up in bed waiting for him and Christopher was asleep in his crib. "Hey, Love, how was your evening without me?"

---

Steve hung out with the girls a bit and played with their son before laying down for rest. When Bucky got home, he smiled and pulled him down to the bed. "It was nice, but I missed you. How was the meeting?"

---

"It was okay," Bucky sighed. "Some of the stuff we have been talking about lately has felt more like therapy and it's sort of made me uncomfortable. And then I want to drink because I don't know what else to do but I can't drink so then I just get more overwhelmed and I just want to come home and curl up by you."

---

Steve pulled Bucky in close to his chest and kissed him a few times to make him feel more secure. "What sort of stuff makes it feel like therapy? I kind of assumed that AA meetings were always that way," Steve asked.

---

"Well, for a while it was just talking about ways to cope without alcohol and why we wanted to get better," Bucky said and traced circles on Steve's chest. "We talked a lot about our motivation for taking our lives back from our addiction. But now we have been talking a lot more about why we started drinking in the first place and what we thought was the reason things switched and we let it control us."

---

Steve played with Bucky's hair gently while he spoke. "It sounds like they've got a good program going on over there," he said. "How did they respond to what you said?" He asked, trying to learn more about Bucky's experience there.

---

Bucky shrugged. "Everyone's pretty quiet when they aren't the one talking. There really isn't much judgment from the people in the group. Everyone's there because they know they have a problem and no one really wants to blame each other for how they got to the point that they needed help."

---

"It must be nice to be somewhere where everyone understands," Steve said. "I do my best to make you feel like you aren't being judged. But I know it's not the same when you're explaining to a non-alcoholic."

---

Bucky nuzzled closer to Steve and held his arms tight around his middle. "I know you do. And I know for a long time I wasn't willing to listen to you when you said I was an alcoholic and had a problem. And I'm really sorry, Baby. I should have been more receptive."
"It's something that hurt to come to terms with," Steve said. "I'm not offended or upset that it took some time and self-reflection to acknowledge it. And in the end, you made the right decision."

"I made this decision because I love my family. And I couldn't handle the thought of being the reason my family falls apart." Bucky took a deep breath. "And I know that it's not likely I'll live to be very old, given the damage I've done to my body at such a young age. But even thinking about continuing to drink and shortening my time with you and our kids even more, I just couldn't do that anymore."

"There are grandpas that drank and smoke every day of their adult lives and they're still kicking. You're going to live a long, happy life," Steve promised. "And I'm glad you are making all these steps so we can all be a family for as long as we can."

Bucky was quiet for a bit. Just being pensive and thinking about their future as a family. Steve hadn't really talked much more about his retirement plan but Bucky knew if he could stop and be a stay-at-home dad the next day, he would. And Bucky wanted him to be able to do that. "Have you given any more thought to what you're going to do about work?"

"I have... it's just... I don't know. I'm afraid of putting the financial burden on you," Steve said. "Becca will be out of here in two years probably. We have to start saving up for a house for our other kids," Steve mumbled.

"Two years?" Bucky was taken aback. "She will be seventeen. She's not leaving until twenty." He sighed and moved his hair out of his face. "What if I tried to find a different job? Like a corporate job. I could start as a salesman somewhere and work my way up."

"She's going to go to college and probably will graduate early if she has any say in it," Steve said. He hoped she would go somewhere local but he wasn't holding his breath on it. "Also, Bucky, Baby, you would hate working as a salesman. And what would Clint do without you?"

"I could do it, though. So you could stay home," Bucky said. "And Clint could just hire Tim on as full-time. He would understand and they work well together. And I'm sure there are lots of companies around New York looking for new salesmen." He smiled at his husband then thought about it for a few seconds. Steve was right. He would hate that. But he also hated the thought that Steve wouldn't get to do what he wanted to. "You think I would have to cut my hair?"

"I can't quit my job knowing that it'll force you into one you won't like," Steve said firmly. "You're keeping your job and you're keeping your hair. Maybe I can think of ways I could make money at home. Maybe I can babysit other people's kids."

---

Bucky absently twisted his fingers in his hair like he was worried a corporate stooge was going to come take it while he wasn't paying attention. "I guess that could work but don't you think it sort of defeats the purpose of staying home to be with Christopher? Because you'll have to be in charge of other children that aren't yours and our son might get jealous. He already gets jealous when we pay attention to something other than him."

---

"Then I can figure something else out. Either way, Christopher will need to learn to share his parents cause he's going to have like, seventeen siblings." Steve smiled playfully.

---

"Steve, Baby." Bucky chuckled. "You have no idea how grateful I am that I'm not the one who has to actually birth all these children for you." He rolled so he was facing away from Steve and being the little spoon tucked away against his husband.

---

"If you were able to, I would beg and sweet-talk you into birthing each and every one and I'd make it worth your while," Steve said pleasantly as he kissed along his shoulder.

---

Bucky looked over at his nightstand and noticed the drawing of Christopher laying asleep on his chest that Steve had drawn a few months before and he got an idea. "Steve! You should teach art classes!"

---

Steve gasped and stared at his husband. Art classes. That could work. Steve loved being involved in art and he was learning with having teenagers and a baby in his life that he liked to teach and nurture creativity. "That's actually a really smart idea, Bucky," he said.

---

"I have smart ideas sometimes," Bucky defended and reached for the drawing from the nightstand. "You could do drawing and painting with parents and their kids or something. Like art classes for housewives and their children. And you could sell some of your art, also."

---

Steve blushed. "I don't think I could give my art away to make people want it." He knew he was decent but he didn't believe his pieces were buyable. "But I like the 'mommy and me' style art classes. I could probably use the rec room at the shelter once a week. I'm sure the people there wouldn't mind."

---

Bucky kissed the arm that was around his chest and said, "I'm sure tons of people will want to buy.
what you make. You are very talented, Baby." He rolled again to face Steve. "I think we just made some headway for our future, huh? Going to get you set up doing some things you like and you can be at home with our son." Bucky smiled and ran a thumb over Steve's lower lip. "You should make out with me a little bit for thinking of the art class idea. I'm kind of amazing. Or we could have sex." Bucky's eyebrows went up. "I kind of want you really bad right now."

---

Steve smirked and slowly slid his hand up Bucky's shirt to play with one of his nipples. "I think we should save any more talk about art classes for tomorrow. I'd rather focus on making sweet love to my husband." He rolled his hips and grinded against Bucky's ass.

---

"Yes, please," Bucky whined and pushed back. "I'm nice and warm and comfortable right now and adding your big hot slick cock inside of me will just make it all the better." He squeezed his hands around Steve's arms and let out a contented little sigh of a breath.

---

"Jesus Christ." Steve laughed out, but he had to admit he was so turned on. He slid his hand back down to palm at the bulge in Bucky's pants. "Keep talking like that, Sweetheart," he requested. "I like hearing you say that stuff."

---

"How about I tell you about how earlier today I caught myself staring in the mirror at my own ass and thinking how I couldn't wait for you to get your hands on me." Bucky moved his hips as Steve touched him. "And how I purposely have been buying pants that are one size too small for me so it'll be almost impossible for you not to stare. Although, I have been getting a lot of looks at my crotch from people. Also, some younger girls tried to flirt with me. Maybe I need to go back to regular sized pants."

---

"You've been buying smaller pants? I thought that they were small on you because you were gaining weight." Steve laughed. He knew it wasn't the sexiest thing to say but at least Bucky didn't have to worry about Steve not wanting him because he gained a few pounds. He would always love Bucky no matter what his pant size. "Your ass did look very nice, though. I have noticed," he added and started to push Bucky's pants down.

---

"Wow, god, rude. I buy tiny new pants to entice my husband, and he thinks I got fatter," Bucky said with a tick of feigned annoyance in his tone. "You see me naked constantly, you would know if I had gained weight. Besides, I don't hear you complaining about my big ass right now."

---

Steve smiled and bit down lightly on Bucky's neck. "I could never complain about your ass unless it's complaining when I don't get to have it." He gave Bucky's ass a squeeze before taking off his underwear. "You want to lay like this while we have sex?"
"I'm fine like this so long as you hold me," Bucky said and grinded back against Steve. He reached an arm back to pull Steve in closer and turned his head to give him a kiss. "Come on, Baby, split me open. I want to feel your cock in my tight ass opening me up and waiting to give me your come."

---

Steve groaned and hastily grabbed the lube to smear it on his fingers. He pushed two into Bucky right away, too damned horny to go nice and slow. "I love it when you say those things."

---

"I know you do, Baby." Bucky smiled and let himself relax at the feeling of Steve's fingers inside him. "Looks like we are both a little impatient, aren't we?" he asked and pulled at his own cock, waiting for Steve. "Take over, Steve. I'm yours."

---

Steve kissed Bucky's shoulder as he opened him up. He found the spot that made Bucky really moan and he massaged it slowly before adding a third finger. "You've always been mine," he said. "Even before we met."

---

"I'm always yours," Bucky agreed and shut his eyes while he felt Steve working around inside of him. "Go ahead with your dick, Steve. I'm ready. I want to hear how you breathe while you're making love to me."

---

Steve quickly shoved his own pants and boxers off so he could slick up his cock. He slid in easily and groaned softly at how amazing Bucky felt around his dick. "Fuck, we haven't done this nearly often enough," he breathed out before slowly rocking into him.

---

Bucky chuckled lightly and reached back to rub his hand down Steve's thigh. "Do you mean this position or having sex? Because I think we have sex a whole fucking lot." He grabbed one of Steve's hands and twisted it into his hair so he would pet him softly as he fucked him.

---

Steve took the hint and raked his fingers through Bucky's hair as his hips rocked steadily against Bucky's ass, grinding deeper into him. "Both," he gasped out against his skin. "It's bad, Buck. Sometimes all I can think of is bending you over the counter. It makes family dinner awkward."

---

"I knew the tight pants were doing their job," Bucky said and went back to rubbing Steve's thigh. "Every time I squatted down to pick up one of Christopher's toys or something else that I may have dropped on purpose, I was making sure I was doing it so you could see me. But I agree, it has been a while since we have had a night to ourselves where counter sex would be appropriate."

---

"I want to have sex somewhere public," Steve said with a deep blush. "I never did something risky like that before. Under the boardwalk or on the beach..." he reached around to give Bucky's balls a light squeeze as he fucked him.

---

"Jesus, Mary, and Joseph," Bucky gasped and pushed back more against his husband. Steve really wasn't that vanilla Catholic boy anymore. "Let's do it then. Let's fuck in public. God, you're so amazing, Baby. You do things to me. Let's take the kids and your mom to Coney Island and then when it gets late, we can sneak off for a bit and go under the pier while it's dark."

---

"Don't say other people's name when I'm fucking you," Steve huffed out playfully. "Especially don’t mention my mom or the Virgin Mary." He held Bucky steady and just circled his hips slowly, balls deep in Bucky's ass and enjoying the tight heat around him.

---

Bucky groaned at the feeling and took short careful breaths. "What do you say? Does that sound like a good plan to you? Or do you want to do it somewhere else? We could lock ourselves in a briefing room at the precinct or in the back office at the record shop. Or do you want to be somewhere that someone might accidentally stumble by and see?"

---

"I want to do it in all those places," Steve said. "But I don't want to get caught," he murmured. "I want to have sex in as many places we can. Want to give you as many good memories as possible."

---

"Where else?" Bucky asked and moved Steve's hand over his cock because he had gotten tired of jerking himself off and he liked how Steve did it. "How long have you been thinking about this? We haven't really ever talked about this before."

---

Steve teased the head of Bucky's cock with his thumb before stroking it fluidly. "In Dale's apartment when he's not home. I swear, Buck, if I have to hear him complain about the cat one more time, I'm going to arrest him."

---

Bucky choked on a laugh and turned his head to look at Steve. "Did I tell you what he said the other day when it was me and Christopher here alone? He knocked on our door and asked when I thought we would all move out because he doesn't want us here when Christopher starts walking because then I'll have three kids who run up the stairs."

---

"Oh my god," Steve groaned. He gave Bucky's shoulder a little nip and went quiet so he could relish in the feeling of being so intimate with his husband. "We're definitely-" he paused and grunted softly as he gave a particularly deep thrust "-fucking in his house."
Bucky hissed as Steve picked up speed and went deeper inside him. He was quiet for a bit and felt himself clench up around Steve as his orgasm rippled through him. He came over Steve's fingers and quickly pulled his hand up to lick them clean.

---

Steve moaned and thrust harder into Bucky as he felt his muscles spasm around him. Steve followed shortly after while kissing the back of his neck. "I love you."

---

"I love you, too," Bucky said and rolled to snuggle against Steve's chest. They were able to stay like that for a few minutes before Christopher starting fussing in his crib. "He probably needs to be changed. He hasn't pooped like all day. I'll get him." Bucky yawned and rolled out of bed, pulling on his pajama pants again.

---

Christopher whined and sounded miserable and pathetic until he got his pop to come give him attention. "He's getting heavy," Steve said. "You're going to throw your back out picking him up like that."

---

"He's not that heavy," Bucky said and laid him on the ground to start changed his diaper. "You're still our Little Bean, aren't you?" he asked Christopher and grinned down at him. "You won't grow up and leave us, will you? No, you won't." He got their son into a clean diaper and brought him over to their bed and laid down with him on his chest.

---

Christopher gurgled happily and laid his head down on Bucky's chest and drooled on him. "God, I don't know how I'm going to handle him becoming an adult. What do you think he's going to want to be?"

---

"I'm not sure," Bucky said and pulled his hair up and out of the way so Christopher wouldn't be tempted to tug on it. "Maybe he will want to be an officer like his daddy. It won't be long until he starts really developing interests of his own. I mean he really enjoyed painting today so maybe he will be artistic."

---

When Bucky pulled his hair back, Christopher whined and reached out anyway to try and get a handful. When he was unsuccessful he looked at Steve for help. "Oh, Little Bean. Not tonight." He kissed the baby's cheek and tickled him to distract him. "Or he could be a musician like his papa," Steve said.

---

"Maybe that." Bucky smiled and leaned over to kiss Steve's temple. "Whatever he does, he is going to be amazing at it. I can just tell." He took one of Christopher's hands that was still reaching up for his hair. "And I'm not cutting your hair ever. So you will have long hair of your own that you can pull. You'll be the envy of all the other toddlers with your hair at your knees."
"You'll get all the petty revenge in the world when his younger siblings all tug his hair," Steve said. Christopher squeezed Bucky's finger lightly and he smiled as he told an engaging story to Bucky all in baby babble.

Bucky babbled back animatedly and leaned into Steve. "Do you think he will be okay with having siblings? I mean, he will be older by the time we will get to have another one. And I remember how I was at first. I told you the story about how I thought I was going to other parents so Becca could be with my parents."

"Well, we will be very clear to him that he won't be going anywhere," Steve said. "We can hype it up to him. Tell him that he's getting a lifelong best friend that he's going to get to hang out with all the time."

"Do you think that will work?" Bucky asked and watched Christopher slowly pull his hand to his mouth and start chewing on it. "Ouch, Bean, that hurts," Bucky said and tried taking his hand back with no success so he just left it. "I was just told that a new baby was going to be around that we all needed to work to protect and love and in turn, she would love and protect us. I was ridiculously clingy to Becca when she was small, I even demanded to push her stroller in grocery stores because I was worried that something would happen if I wasn't with her the whole time."

"I love how you are with the girls..." Steve looked over at Christopher. "But I don't want him to put that kind of pressure on himself - worrying about his siblings and feeling personally responsible for them. That's our job." He thought it was really endearing that Bucky did that for his sisters, but he also knew how much Bucky stressed over them too.

Bucky nodded and slipped his free hand with Steve's. "I've been thinking about something for a while now. And it makes me really angry at myself for even entertaining the thought. But I just get so worried and I've even had a couple nightmares about it. But what if... what if you and I, one day, died together unexpectedly just like my parents did?"

Steve gave Bucky a sad look, heartbroken that Bucky would have to think about it. "We will prepare him," Steve said. "We are going to do such a good job with him that if something happens, he will know how much we love him and how we are always looking over him." Steve kissed him softly but meaningfully. "And we will teach him how to make positive choices."

Bucky felt a couple tears slide down his face and he gave Steve a weak smile. "I don't want him to have to deal with what the girls and I did. I don't want him to have to be his siblings' guardian or find himself resorting to things like alcohol or drugs to cope like I did. I guess I just don't want him to be me. I worry so much that the girls or our kids will end up too much like me - that being raised by me will have a bad impact on them."

---

Steve frowned and cupped the side of his face. "If our son ends up anything like you, I'll be so proud of him," Steve said genuinely. "You are a good person who puts the people he loves above himself - who always does his best and doesn't let past failures stop him from being the best version of himself."

---

Nodding again, Bucky let himself just cry and stare at Steve. "I love you," he said quietly and pressed his forehead to Steve's. "I'm trying so hard to be everything I can be for you and the girls and our son." He hoisted Christopher up a little and cradled him between them. "You all are the reason I keep going - the reason I want to be better every day."

---

Christopher whined softly when he saw his pop crying but he didn't make a huge fuss yet. "I know, Bucky. And I'm so proud of you," Steve said. He brushed his thumb over his cheek to dry his tears. "You are so amazing, you know that? It's harder to break a habit than to get into it and you're doing such a good job. Go on, Christopher, tell your papa how proud you are of him."

---

The baby agreed by putting his hands on Bucky's face and saying, "Papa!" excitedly before turning to Steve and doing the same with a quieter "Dada," like he was checking with Steve that he did what he was supposed to.

---

Steve let out a big laugh before kissing Christopher's cheek. "Yes, good job, my smart Little Bean." He put a hand on the baby's back and looked proudly at Bucky. "I don't think he even remembers what his life was like at his old place. We did a good job, Buck."

---

"I told you he wouldn't," Bucky said and nuzzled his face in Christopher's tummy. "None of that even matters now. Sometimes I forget we didn't have him from the very start. Do you remember how tiny he was? He was so fragile but now he's big and strong and growing without any problems so far."

---

"I remember being so worried about whether or not he would have growing problems. But he's gotten so big and he acts like everything is okay, so I worried over nothing. Right, Bean?" Christopher really was such a healthy baby. They were blessed.

---

Christopher yawned in response and tucked himself into the crook of Bucky's neck. "I think he's ready to go back to sleep. Are you still able to come to his check-up at the doctor's on Friday with me? He likes it better when we are both there. He doesn't get as scared."
Steve nodded his head. "Of course. I couldn't miss a doctor's appointment for our little man," he said. "I want him to be an independent kid... but I like being the person he can always rely on, you know?"

---

"I just hope that this time he doesn't cry and bite the nurse like last time," Bucky said and tucked his head against Steve's shoulder and watched as Christopher stopped blinking his eyes open and fell asleep again.

---

"I was so embarrassed. I don't want to be the parents who can't keep their kid respectful. And if we mess up then it's because we're gay parents, you know?" Steve huffed.

---

Bucky yawned and shut his eyes. "I think it's just because our son is terrified of anyone that isn't someone he knows. Going to the doctor is stressful for him. He gets that from me." He held Christopher close and kissed Steve's neck before feeling himself drift off as well.

---

“Sleep well, my handsome boys,” Steve said softly and kissed Bucky's cheek. He stroked his hair gently and slowly until his husband fell asleep. He got up after a while and took Christopher back to his crib before going to sleep next to Bucky, safe and happy.
Later that night.

Bucky was startled awake from a rough dream where his family was taken away from him. He noticed that Christopher was no longer in his arms and Steve wasn't in bed with him. His heart started pounding and he was so scared and disoriented as he shouted for Steve and fumbled around in the dark to find some sort of weapon. Steve always kept a couple things around their room just in case.

---

Steve had just gotten up to go to the bathroom. Christopher woke up from the commotion and started to cry. Steve quickly toweled off his hands and rushed back into the room. "Bucky?" He was already going to the lockbox for his gun. "What's going on?"

---

Bucky flailed around and found himself collapsing into Steve's arms and trying to haul himself back up to his feet. "Steve! Steve, they took you. They took you and the girls ran away and escaped with Christopher. Steve..." Bucky whimpered and clutched on to his husband.

---

"Bucky," Steve whispered in a heartbroken tone as he held tightly to his husband and rocked him slightly back and forth. "It was just a bad dream, Love. Come and look. Our little boy is right here. He's right here." He motioned for Bucky to pick up the baby so he could calm him down.

---

Bucky picked up Christopher quickly and kissed him a few times before curling himself into Steve again. "Steve, I can't... I can't do it anymore," he gasped through tears. "Ever since I've been getting sober, I've been having such bad nightmares so often. My headaches have been more powerful while they are around. I hate this."

---

Steve kissed the top of Bucky's head and stroked his back gently. "You can do it, Bucky. I have faith in you. Maybe we can give you some medicine to help you sleep through the night," he offered.

---

"Something's always taking you all away from me or destroying our home or keeping me from finding you," Bucky said and stared at Steve. "I don't want to do this anymore, Steve. Please, I want to go back to how it was."
"Baby, look at our son. That's who you're doing this for, remember? You are doing so well. You can fight through this, okay? I'll help you." Steve tried his best to gingerly ease Bucky back onto the bed. "Tell me about your nightmares more."

---

"I don't want to," Bucky said and made sure Steve had his arms securely around him as he relaxed on to the bed. Christopher, now calmed down once again, gripped his hand into Steve's shirt and pulled it towards his mouth to chew on it. "It's just like when my parents died and I keep dreaming that my sisters were dying too and leaving me by myself."

---

"Nobody gets to lay a hand on any of us so long as I'm around," Steve said confidently. He held Bucky tightly but was sure not to squish their little boy. "I know that we have so much to lose now that we have our perfect little family. But that doesn't mean that we are going to lose it."

---

Bucky sniffled and took a deep breath. "I wouldn't have these nightmares if I were still drinking. But I know I can't do that again. But, god, Steve, I miss it. I want to drink so badly sometimes. I hate that it can still control me like this and I hate that I want to let it."

---

"Think of all the good that has happened because you stopped drinking," Steve said. "And all the good that will happen. You will live a healthier life for this. You're going to pull through."

---

"When I'm at AA, it all makes sense and I can do it and there are a bunch of other people doing the same thing as me," Bucky said. "But then I come home and I think that I'll be fine if I just have one or two drinks and not get completely drunk and everything will be okay. I don't know how to stop that."

---

"I don't know how to stop it either, Love," Steve said sadly. "But we can figure it out together. You believe in us, right? Then we can find a way to solve this." Steve sounded so sure.

---

Bucky nodded. "I believe in us," he agreed. "I just think it gets hard when I don't have my group around me? You know? We all are there for the same reason and some of us have gotten close. It's hard for all of us when one of us relapses and drinks. Then we all want to do it. But if we are all doing well then it's easier for everyone."

---

"I understand," Steve said. "Do you have each other's contact information? I don't mind if they call the house late at night. Or if you have to get up in the middle of the night to call them," Steve suggested.
"I have Missy's telephone number but I haven't called her yet," Bucky said. "She lives with her aunt and I don't want to bother her relatives with phone calls. She's only nineteen. Her parents kicked her out. Her aunt is the only one who really wants her around."

---

"How about you write her a letter?" Steve said. "It won't give you the answers now, but it'll distract you and make you think," he continued. "And tomorrow morning we can drop it off in her mailbox. Or we can just stick a stamp on it and let the mailman do it."

---

Biting his lower lip, Bucky thought for a moment. "I guess I could try that. I mean, I will see her again on Thursday so I can give it to her then. That way we don't use stamps." Missy was very nice. She was little and quiet and reminded Bucky a lot of Becca on one of her good days. It also worried Bucky that she was pregnant and didn't have a support system or anyone ready to adopt her baby and she really didn't want to send it into the system.

---

"That works," Steve said. "I like that idea." He kissed his temple and gently took Christopher from Bucky so he could grab stuff to write with. "You see how hard your papa works for you, Bean? He's going through all this trouble for you."

---

"And for your daddy and your aunts and any future siblings," Bucky added and found a notebook. "I'm going to go write on the kitchen table. You two can sleep some more before you have to get up for work. I'll make breakfast. I don't think I can fall asleep again."

---

Steve shook his head. "I can stay up with you. Besides, I like cuddling Christopher when he sleeps. Come back here once you're done writing, okay, Baby?" Steve said.

---

Bucky promised he would, but halfway through writing his letter he fell asleep at the table using his arm as a pillow. He wrote in the letter about how he was struggling with nightmares still and how it was hard to keep on track. He also explained how he was trying to decide whether to talk to Steve about trying to adopt her baby or not. Bucky had talked to Missy about it before but he never promised anything. He just wanted her to know that he was still trying to see if he could work it out.

---

Steve went in to check on Bucky and smiled lovingly when he saw him sleeping. He got a blanket and draped it over his shoulders. Steve hadn't meant to, but his eyes kind of caught the word 'baby' in his letter and before Steve knew it, he read the whole thing. He chewed his bottom lip and decided to wait until morning to talk.

---

Bucky woke up to the girls coming into the kitchen to get breakfast before school. Steve was sitting on the couch feeding Christopher banana slices and bits of cereal. "Hey," Bucky mumbled and peeling himself off the table to go to Steve. "I fell asleep. I'm sorry." He noticed the blanket draped around his shoulders. "Did you do this?"

"The blanket fairy did that," Steve teased. "Don't be sorry. I'm glad you got some sleep. Want me to make you your plate? I made extra for you," he offered.

"Do I get bananas and dry cereal, too?" Bucky asked and handed Christopher another chunk of banana. The baby took it and shoved it into his mouth before reaching to be picked up by his papa. Bucky took him and snuggled him close, making happy little noises as he did. He was so glad he had him there. His nightmare really did a number on him.

"If you're not in the mood for home cooked pancakes, then sure," Steve snorted. He smiled at the sight of his two boys and he gave each of them a kiss. Steve waited until the girls left for school before he awkwardly brought up, "I accidentally read your letter..."

Bucky had a mouth full of pancake and was holding Christopher in his lap and trying to make sure he didn't get his fingers in the syrup. "What?" he said through his food and then swallowed. "My letter to Missy?"

Christopher was having a hell of a time fighting his pop to get to the syrup. "Yeah," Steve said guiltily. "I'm really sorry. I didn't mean to, it kind of... happened. I'm sorry."

"Oh, um..." Bucky cleared his throat. "That's fine. It's okay, Steve. How - how did you accidentally read it, though?" He cut off a tiny bit of his pancake and barely dipped it in syrup before giving it to Christopher.

Steve looked so ashamed and apologetic. "I was putting on the blanket for you and my eyes happened to catch the word 'baby'," he explained. Which really was believable, knowing him. "And I was curious about what baby you were talking about and, by that point, I ended up reading it all."

Bucky nodded and looked down, "Uh-huh, so you know about her baby," he mumbled and gave Christopher some more of his pancake. He brushed his son's light blonde little hairs out of his eyes and gave him a kiss. "She doesn't have any options left. But I know we can't help her."

"We can help her," Steve said. "I didn't quit my job yet. I'm still making good money. And the babies won't need much room to themselves for the first few years. It'll be nice for Christopher to have a sibling his age."
"We can't do that." Bucky shook his head and gave Christopher his sippy cup of orange juice. "We won't have the time or the money and we can't ask the girls to let another new baby into the apartment. And we already decided you were going to quit and be a 'mommy-and-me' art teacher and spend time with our son." He sighed. "It's a nice thought. And I tried to figure out any plausible way to do it but we just can't."

---

"The girls love Christopher," Steve said. "He hasn't been a handful. Buck, we want a big family and who knows when we are going to get the opportunity to have another kid?" Steve looked a little sad that Bucky wasn't on board. "I could still spend time with both of our babies."

---

"Steve, Baby," Bucky said quietly. "I've been thinking about this for a month and a half. I thought at first that we could do it but I honestly don't think we can. Even if this is enough space now, in a few years it won't be and we will need to have money for a bigger place. And I can't do that with the job I have now."

---

"You managed to raise two girls on your own. I make more than you so I could have enough to pay for Christopher and another. And there's the settlement money from Rumlow - in a few months, we can use that money for the kids again. We can save for a house," he pressed.

---

"Steve," Bucky whispered quietly. He didn't want to get his hopes up. He felt like Steve already had his hopes up and one of them had to be grounded about this. "Let's just do a few things before we consider this, okay? Maybe let's talk to your mom about it. She may have some advice. We can go look at some bigger places or maybe some houses in Long Island and see what sort of money we would have to be saving. And we should definitely talk to the girls."

---

"But Becca is going to say no," Steve said with a pout. And he really didn't want to move to Long Island because it was far from the shelter and his mom. Steve was determined to find something close that still had enough space for them all. "We can make it work. You're such an amazing dad. I'd love to see Christopher have a little brother or sister to talk to."

---

Bucky rubbed his forehead and gave Christopher to Steve. "I've got a headache. Can we talk about this some other time? I'm going to go take some medicine before I have to go to work. Maybe you can talk to your mom about this today, huh?"

---

Steve gently bounced Christopher in his arms and kissed the top of his head. "Alright. I'm sorry I upset you, Buck..." He brushed noses with their baby and smiled when Christopher babbled at him.

---

"It's not you, Baby," Bucky said and hovered near Steve. "It's just everything. I'm just sort of getting worked up. There's a lot going on and I didn't sleep well last night, as you know." He went to get some medicine and then came back and gave Steve a kiss so he would know that he wasn't mad at him. This was just a lot.
Steve did his best not to push the matter for a few days. But after four days of not bringing it up, Steve felt like he was going to burst from the suspense. When they were alone in their room, relaxing during a lazy afternoon, Steve looked over. "What if we invite Missy over for dinner?" he asked.

---

Bucky looked up from the delicately scrawled first chapter of Becca's book - she needed him to tell her if anything was too cliché. He looked at Steve and thought for a second. "Just so you can meet her? Right? We aren't sure about the baby yet so let's not bring it up, okay?"

---

Steve nodded. "I promise. I won't bring up the baby," he swore. He paused and asked, "How's Becca's book looking? She never lets me read her stuff."

---

"I don't quite understand it," Bucky admitted. "Becca is far more clever than I am and a lot of it has me pretty confused already. It's a mystery novel. You should ask her if you can read it because you'll probably get it better than I can." He set the pages aside and looked to Steve and sighed. "I'll bring Missy around for dinner soon. Okay?"

---

"A mystery novel and she doesn't ask a cop for feedback?" Steve complained with a pout. "I got to ask her later..." he kissed Bucky's cheek and said, "Thank you for letting me meet Missy." He paused and asked, "Did you talk to the girls about more babies?"

---

"No," Bucky said and looked to Steve. "I haven't said anything yet because you said that Becca would just say ‘no’ to the whole thing. I haven't entertained the idea farther than what we did the other day."

---

Steve frowned a little and had a sad look on his face. "You really don't want to have another kid?" Steve asked. "Not before another house?" He didn't want to force Bucky into another kid so soon but he thought now was still a fine time.

---

"I just think we need to get a few things figured out before we make that decision," Bucky said and glanced over at Christopher who was messing with some toys on the ground. "I'm not ruling it out but I just want to think things through. I think it would be a good idea for us to go look at some places and see how much something a little bigger would cost."

---

"Becca will be extra pissed if we move and get another baby," Steve said. "I'm willing to poke the bear, but not smack it over the head." Christopher saw that his pop was looking at him, so he squealed happily.

---

Christopher crawled over to the bed and hoisted himself up to stand by the side table, waiting for Bucky to pick him up. Bucky grabbed him and tickled his sides before flopping him on the mattress between him and Steve and listening to him giggle and roll over to get up again. "I don't know. She might be angrier if we get another baby and stay here where we hardly have enough room right now. And we have Dale on our heels about our kids already and adding a fourth at this apartment might just break that old bastard."

---

Steve kissed Christopher's cheek and smiled. He watched happily as the baby wiggled to get on his hands to crawl. "We still have to sneak into his apartment," Steve murmured deviously.

---

Bucky huffed and ignored Steve, preferring instead to toss a baby blanket over Christopher's back and see him yank it off and throw it back. "Let's talk to the girls together first. We will ask them what they think about moving and then explain that it's because we are thinking of having another baby."

---

Christopher playfully chomped on his dad's hand, making Steve jump a little. "Are you upset at me for pushing this? And that I'm not retiring from the police force yet?" Steve asked.

---

"I'm not upset," Bucky said and looked to Steve. "I just didn't want us to get our hopes up about it and then it doesn't work out. You know? You looked into retirement packages and we learned that you might have to work another ten years for it to count for anything. Then we decided that you could do art classes instead. We had a plan. Now, if we had this other baby, you would have to keep working and wouldn't get to be a stay-at-home dad like you want. And we would have to find a bigger place soon and I know you don't want to go too far from your mom. But maybe if we can find someplace close enough that we could reasonably afford if we took out a loan or something."

---

Steve looked at Christopher and sighed. "I believe we can make it work no matter what. And I can still spend time with you and the girls and our son even with my job and another kid. I have faith that we can manage," Steve answered.

---

Bucky was quiet for a second then said, "Our old place where we last lived with our parents is back up for rent. It's more expensive, of course. But it's a brownstone in the next neighborhood over that would have enough room for all of us - three bedrooms and a master. The babies could share a nursery. It might even be closer to your mom than this place."

---

Steve's head snapped over to Bucky. "Oh my god, Bucky. That would be perfect! Even if we don't have another kid, we should go there. We would have so much room and it'll be like going back home."
Bucky shut his lips tight together and looked down at Christopher. "I was sort of hesitant about mentioning it because I'm not honestly sure if the girls would want to go back. It might be too much, you know? For all of us - it might hurt too bad. But you and I can go look at it and then ask them."

Steve pulled Christopher onto his chest. He tickled his sides and then looked back at Bucky. "If it's too much, we don't have to. I don't want you guys to feel like you have to do it because we want a bigger family."

"But it could be good, too, you know?" Bucky said with a tentative smile. "The girls would have their old rooms back. And my old room can be the nursery. And it'll be sort of like we're raising our family where my parents get to be a part of it too. Like they will be able to be watching us better at our old place." Bucky paused and took Steve's hand. "Yeah, I think it could be really good."

"I would love to be able to live there. I'd get to see where you guys all got your start. And Christopher will be closer to his grandparents that way," Steve said. "How much more expensive is it?"

"It's... it's about six hundred more than what we pay here," Bucky said quietly and bit his lip. "It's a lot. But it's got enough room and the girls will have a bathroom between their rooms. And we would have a bathroom and then the nursery with the babies next to us. There’s a pretty good kitchen and one bathroom and a living room on the main floor. And there is even a half-sized basement."

That was a hell of a lot more than what they were paying now. Steve sighed and mentally tried to budget what they made versus what they could pay. "Do you think we could buy it instead of rent it?"

"I mean we would have to get a loan," Bucky said. "It wouldn't be impossible but I couldn't be the one asking for the loan, it would have to be you and I don't know if you want to do that. But if we could buy it, then we could just pay off the loan over time and we would have the place for a while even after the girls moved out then we would have room for any other kids."

"Why wouldn't I want to take out a loan to get a home for our family? I would love to have a place we can call ours - one that no one can complain about having pets or kids inside." Steve kissed Bucky's cheek. "We don't have to worry about a landlord or Dale or prying eyes."

Bucky smiled and held Steve's face in his hands and gave him a kiss. "So we will talk to the girls, go for a loan, put an offer on the place, and have our old home back." He laughed with a happy little
"Okay, let's do that."

"Sounds perfect," Steve said. "You hear that, Christopher? We might be getting a bigger place," he said excitedly to the baby. "You will have so much room to run around in!"

Christopher bounced around and hit his hands on his daddy's legs. He had no idea why they were excited but he wanted to be excited too. "Dada!" he yelled and crawled into Steve's lap and hugged him around the middle.

Bucky smiled and watched his son, "God, I love this kid."

"You're such a good boy, Christopher. Your dada loves you." Steve put a hand on his back and beamed proudly down at him when his son hugged him. "I hope he's always this affectionate."

"Me too," Bucky said and moved to get up off the bed. "I don't see why he wouldn't be. In my experience with the girls, their personalities didn't really change much from being toddlers to growing up."

"Some of my coworkers talk about how their kids get all mean and don't like to talk once they're in their teens," Steve said. "I'm afraid our Little Bean will become a moody teenager."

Bucky nodded and took Christopher into his arms. "He might do that for a while. That's pretty common. I was like that for a bit, except not to my parents - it was mostly at school. Becca is certainly in that state right now but she also is sort of a special case because most teenagers haven't lost their parents."

"Papa!" Christopher said loudly as he was picked up. He opened and closed his fist to wave at him. "Hi, Papa! Hi!"

Steve laid on his side and watched Bucky and their son. "Yeah. I think Becca's part alien. Or robot. She hardly ever messes up, it's unnatural."

"She's an impressive little devil, isn't she?" Bucky asked and kissed Christopher's head. "Do you want to help me give him a bath or do you want me to do it this time? He was pretty mad at you last time for getting soap in his eyes."

Steve nodded. Becca really was something. His mom adored her, too. "I'd like to help. I need to redeem myself so my little boy can trust I can give him a tear-free bath. Then later, we can talk about the house some more."
Chapter Summary

A few days later.

It was raining when Bucky and Missy got back to the apartment. Bucky had tossed his coat on Missy to keep her as dry as possible and he got drenched to the bone. He was freezing his ass off by the time he got the door open and stumbled into the kitchen. "Steve, I'm back. I have Missy."

"Hey, Love, I'm just about to- oh my god, you're soaked!" Steve yelped. Christopher started crawling over to Bucky, babbling 'Papa' over and over as he made his way over. Steve hurried to give Bucky a towel before looking over at Missy. "Hi, I'm Steve. Thank you so much for joining us. Bucky's told me all about you."

Bucky took the towel and wrapped up before picking up Christopher and shivering. He kissed his boy and then set him down again, "Steve, you and Missy get acquainted. I'm going to put on sweats and three jackets." He trotted off to their room quickly, muttering something about the goddamn rain never holding off until he got home.

The baby whined and made absolutely pathetic sounds until Steve picked him up. "He thinks he never gets enough attention," he explained. "Do you like chicken? I made a few different things because Bucky didn't know what your favorite dinner was."

Missy looked around at the plates and pans of food. "You made all this because I was coming over?" she asked and stared down the multitude of delicious looking foods that she wanted to try. "Bucky did say you were a bit of a happy host."

Steve nodded gave a shy smile. "I really like cooking," he said. "And I love having company over. Newcomers tend to be less jaded to me being a bit over enthusiastic."

Missy smiled and took off Bucky's coat. "Where should I put this?" she asked and held it out to Steve. "Also, I just want you to know that I think it's great what you and Bucky are doing - raising your family and sticking together. It's not easy for you, I'm sure. Sometimes, I wish I were a lesbian. It seems more fun. But then I remember that it's not a walk in the park being gay and I have no idea what you all go through."
Steve took the coat and hung it up to dry. Christopher crawled over to Missy to see who this strange lady was. "Well, I nearly died getting shot and Bucky got beaten so badly he was hospitalized just because we are gay and we haven't even been married a year yet," Steve said. "It's not easy."

---

Bucky came back then, cutting off the conversation. He was cocooned in Steve's sweatpants and two of Steve's sweaters. He picked up Christopher from the ground and held him. "Sorry about that. I was about to turn into ice. I know I don't look very impressive now in sweatpants but I am a lot warmer."

---

Christopher took one look at Missy before burying his face shyly into Bucky's shoulder. "You look beautiful in anything," Steve assured him. "So Missy, what sort of stuff do you do for fun?"

---

Missy grinned at the baby as he shied away. "That was pretty cute," she noted quietly and then turned to Steve. "I have been doing a lot of reading lately. Everything I used to do for fun or recreation had to do with some sort of substance abuse or partying. So, nowadays, I read. And I'm thinking about getting into costume design for the local civic theaters."

---

"Becca reads all the time. I bet she could give you plenty of recommendations on things to read," Steve said. "Do you go to Broadway at all? Or see any shows? I've wanted to see West Side Story for a while now."

---

"No, I've never been to Broadway," Missy said with a little chuckle. She nodded to Bucky and said, "You're right. I do like him."

Bucky nudged Steve. "I told you. He's impossible not to like."

---

Steve smiled and blushed slightly. "He's got rose-tinted glasses for me, but that doesn't always make his descriptions of me wrong," he joked. He kissed Bucky's cheek and started to set the table. "What else did he tell you about me?"

---

"He said you're an artist and a cop." She nodded. "But not really like most cops. And you are a great dad and very forgiving and understanding. He also said some stuff about you physically that I don't care to repeat." She smiled and Bucky looked away, ashamed but also not sorry.

---

"Bucky!" Steve scolded, a little embarrassed. It certainly wasn't the first time he had to hear that Bucky was going on to people about his body. "Well, I hope Bucky knows how amazing of a dad he is as well. Christopher adores him," he said. Once their plates were full of food, Steve sat down and said grace before gesturing for them to eat.
Bucky cleared his throat. "For the record, it wasn't like I went into any graphic details. I only do that when I'm talking to Clint." He helped Christopher eat small bits of chicken and noodle pieces and watched him attempt to rip apart a piece of broccoli. "Steve, do you want to tell Missy about the new place we are trying to get?"

Steve snorted as he watched their son pulverize his vegetables because he couldn't seem to quite get a grasp on how he should eat it. "We are looking into buying Bucky's childhood home," Steve said proudly. "My Mom is helping me figure out how to get pre-approved for a mortgage."

Missy ate her chicken and listened to Steve. Bucky could tell she wanted to ask if that meant they wanted her baby. He hadn't directly said why he invited her over. He just said that Steve had wanted to meet her. But Bucky could tell she was hoping that was why she was here. "It's a bigger place than this one and we sort of need more room."

"Yeah," Steve said. "Our neighbor, Dale, has been giving us grief since we brought a cat and a baby home. Also, right now, he's fine with a crib in our room, but soon enough Christopher will need his own space."

Christopher chirped at his name and handed Bucky the stem of his broccoli. He did not enjoy the stems. Bucky took it and placed it on his napkin to throw it away later. "Yeah, and Steve and I want a big family. He was an only child and I've loved raising the kids that I have so far."

Steve was pointedly not bringing up Missy's baby because Bucky told him not to. "Raising Christopher is one of the best things I've ever been able to do. Marrying Bucky is another," he said. "And the girls are great, even if they can really get me angry sometimes."

"Yeah, but they have been better with you lately," Bucky said and rubbed Steve's arm. "He recently got secondary guardianship over them and I think they have been a little more welcoming with him now. At least Becca hasn't been as mean as usual."

Steve nodded and looked really proud. "I think it took them a while to be confident that I wouldn't leave when things got hard. But when I vowed to spend the rest of my life with Bucky, helping him raise our family, I really meant it."

They ate and talked for a while until Missy started to get tired. It was a good couple hours of them just learning more about each other and laughing and having being friends. Bucky was glad that Steve knew her now since he was the friend he was closest to from AA. "I'll take you home," Bucky said and looked to Steve in case he had anything else he wanted to say to Missy before she left. Missy was looking on curiously as well, wanting to know if Steve would bring up her baby or not.

---

There was an elephant in the room and the elephant was Missy's unborn baby. Steve desperately wanted to say something but he wasn't going to risk annoying Bucky. "It was nice meeting you," he said. "You're welcome here for dinner anytime."

---

Missy thanked Steve for the food and company and then they were on their way out. Bucky took Missy home and got back to the apartment an hour later. He shucked off his jacket and tossed his shoes aside before flopping next to Steve on the couch. He was watching Christopher crawl around and pick up toys and then bring them to his daddy. "Okay, Steve, you showed a great amount of restraint. Go ahead and talk about the baby."

---

Steve looked up at Bucky and smiled with relief. "Oh my god. I wanted to talk to her about it so bad. What do you think, Buck? Do you think we can swing it?"

---

Bucky looked at Steve for a long moment and then down at Christopher who was trying to climb on to the coffee table. "I think there is a possibility that it could work. We still haven't even posed the question to the girls. I think that should be our next step while we wait to see if we can buy my parents' old place."

---

Steve nodded and picked up Christopher so he could kiss his belly. "We can talk about the house tomorrow, maybe. If it's a flat 'no' then we can at least consider other houses first," Steve said.

---

"Sure." Bucky nodded and squeezed Christopher's arm lightly. "If we do decide to do this, it'll be a quick process. Her baby is due in four months. That means, getting a new place, moving in, and prepping for a new baby all in four months."

---

"We prepped for Christopher right after we got him," Steve said. "Four months is plenty of time in comparison," Steve added with a playful smile. "You hear that, Bean? You may be a big brother."

---

Christopher just stared at Steve and reached for Bucky's wallet on the side table and brought it towards his mouth. "Hey, no." Bucky gently took it from him and handed him a toy instead. "I think he likes the idea. Although, I can't tell. But I think he does."

---

Christopher's lower lip jutted out and he whimpered. "Oh, don't give your papa that," Steve scolded lightly. "I think he would make a great big brother. It may take him a little while to learn how to
"I think he is definitely going to have some sharing problems and some possession issues." Bucky nodded. "Once he decides something is his then that's it." He quickly pocketed his wallet so Christopher wouldn't try to go for it again. "Do you think he will be okay sharing us?"

"I think that's going to be his biggest issue," Steve said. "But maybe if we give him the same attention and remind him we love him, he will learn to understand."

"My parents kind of had that problem with me," Bucky confessed with a small smile. "I mean, I was already ten when a little sibling came around. Even though I loved Becca, I got pretty mad sometimes when she would start crying and my parents would put a hold on our conversation to go feed or change her."

"It's hard to imagine you being a selfish sibling at a time." Steve snorted. "But you were also a kid and were practically an only child for so long. Christopher already shares us with your sisters," Steve said.

"That's true." Bucky nodded. "Maybe he will be better than I was since he's used to the girls being around and he will have a sibling sooner than I did." Christopher crawled off of Steve's lap and burrowed himself in between his parents and whined loudly.

Steve looked down at their son and tickled his sides. "What's the matter, Bean? Are you getting sleepy, Sweetheart?" He smoothed his hand over Christopher's back as he laid his head down on Bucky's shoulder.

Christopher whined some more and squeezed his fingers on Bucky's arm. "What? You can't be hungry. You ate a lot. Do you need changed? Or are you just a grump right now?" The baby looked up at his papa and babbled something and rubbed his eyes. "Yeah, it's bedtime for you, Little Bean."

"God, even when he's grumpy, he's so damn cute," Steve said adoringly. He scooped their son into his arms and gave him a kiss before passing him over to Bucky. "I'll let you put him down. I think he's more in a Papa mood tonight."

"That's just because I've been gone all day," Bucky cooed at their son and took him towards their bedroom. "I'll be right back, Baby," Bucky called to Steve and hopped off, picking up some stray baby blankets and plush toys from the ground as he went. Christopher had sort of made a mess of the apartment today with all his things.

---

Steve loved the mess. He probably wouldn't once Christopher was old enough to know better, but babies couldn't help themselves. Once everything was back in order, Steve laid down and waited for Bucky to join him. It was only a few minutes until he was back. "Did Missy say anything on the walk home?"

---

"She brought up her baby, too," Bucky said and curled up next to Steve. "She really wants us to have it. And I told her we were still talking it over." He yawned and pet a gentle hand over Steve's neck. "She also said it was nice to finally have a face to put to my stories."

---

Steve looked really excited when he heard that Missy wanted her baby to go to them. He almost forgot to listen to the rest of what Bucky said. "You really talk me up a lot to your friends, huh? You're such a dork."

---

Bucky bit Steve's neck lightly and then kissed it. "You love me, you know it. But, yes, I talk about you to whoever I can - which isn't many people. I only tell them the good stuff. I leave out things like how you snore when you're sick." Bucky grinned and added, "Also, Missy sort of gave me away tonight. Clint does know far too much about our sex life. And by extension, I'm guessing so does Natasha."

---

Steve blushed and swatted Bucky's ass lightly. "Why do you got to kiss and tell? Now Clint knows all the stuff I like." He didn't sound upset, only just that he was complaining. "No wonder Natasha looks at me like she knows something."

---

"Natasha always knows something," Bucky defended. "Even if I didn't tell Clint shit, Natasha would still know. She's got a gift. It's pretty scary." He snuggled closer to Steve and massaged down his chest. "So, tomorrow we will talk to the girls, yes?"

---

Steve kissed Bucky gently and nodded. "Yeah, tomorrow," he said. "Now let's get some sleep, Baby. It's been such a long day. Good, but long."
Bucky was off work the next day and he stayed home with Christopher while everyone else was away. When Steve got home, Bucky was sitting on the couch wearing his reading glasses and sewing a patch on to a pair of Christopher's pants. The baby was asleep next to him, curled on a pile of blankets with a band-aid on his knee. "Hey," Bucky mumbled but didn't look up when Steve got in.

---

It was a long day at the station and all Steve could think about was going back home to his family. He smiled when he saw Bucky wearing his reading glasses, looking like a proper dad now, but a concerned look crossed his face when he saw the band-aid on his son. "Aw, what happened?" he asked as he carefully sat down next to his husband.

---

"Oh, today was a big ordeal." Bucky sighed and looked up from his patch job. "He seems to be getting a little diaper rash so he was crying about that for a long time. Then I tried to console him and play with him, but he wasn't having it and he kept throwing grapes around the kitchen. Then I got a headache so I took some medicine and he got mad at me that I wouldn't let him play with the pill bottle. Then he was ignoring me and crawling around the living room looking for things to destroy. And that's when he cut his pants and his knee on the foot of the coffee table." Bucky huffed and stared down at his sleeping son. "He cried so much about that he wore himself out and he's been asleep since. It's been a long day."

---

"Today was probably one of those days where you're thankful we only have one of these little guys running around, huh?" Steve leaned over and kissed Bucky's cheek. "Let me finish that for you, Sweetheart," he said as he put his hands over Bucky's. "You can take a break. How's that?"

---

Bucky handed the pants over to Steve and curled his legs up under him. "Steve, sometimes it's really hard to handle him on my own. I love him but he can be a lot. And I think he kind of knows that I'm not as good at this as you are so he saves up all his craziness for when it's only me here."

---

Before he got to mending the pants, Steve reached over to hug Bucky tightly. "Love, you are so amazing at taking care of him. I'm no better at it than you are," he said. "I think I'll manage him the rest of the night and I'll give you a massage before bed."

---

"Okay." Bucky nodded and kissed Steve's cheek. "That sounds good. Thank you, Baby." He reached over and grabbed his cup of water. He didn't want to tell Steve how much he almost caved and went to get liquor today. It really had been a rough day. "I'm sorry, Steve. I didn't ask about your day. How was work?"
Steve finished sewing Christopher's pants up and started to pack the sewing kit away. "Rough," he said honestly. "Had to wrestle down a few guys who tried to run from a robbery. Dealt with a domestic. Had to tell a mom her kid was shot. He was in a gang, but she still lost her son."

"Oh, Baby," Bucky sighed and held Steve close. He felt awful. He shouldn't have even dared complain about his day when Steve's was so horrible. "I'm sorry. I don't know how much you go through on a daily basis with your job but I don't imagine it's easy. Especially having to tell a mother that her son is gone. Jesus, I shouldn't have complained about my day here with Christopher. I'm so sorry. I'll give you a massage instead, okay?"

Steve snuggled up to Bucky, readily taking the hug and focusing on how perfect it felt to be held by him. "Buck, it isn't a competition," he said softly. "We both had bad days. But at least we're home safe with each other." He closed his eyes. "I'm happy every day I make it back home to you."

"I know it's not a competition, but still," Bucky said and squeezed Steve a little. "I got to spend today with our kid and you had to tell a woman she lost hers. I think it's pretty clear that I have nothing to complain about it."

Christopher hiccupped then and rubbed his eyes. Rolling to crawl on top of Steve he said sleepily, "Dada," and pulled on Steve's uniform.

"Every minute you spend taking care of our son helps prevent him from ending up like hers." Steve, of course, didn't blame upbringing alone on why a kid joined a gang. Any number of factors could go into someone ending up there. And the woman today was definitely surprised to learn that her boy was in with the wrong types of people. Steve just knew it could be less likely that his kids would turn to that if they had a good home. He smiled down at his son and picked him up. "Yeah, Bean, Dada's home," he said gently before holding him to his chest. "Were you giving your pop a hard time today?" he chided.

Christopher snuggled his face into Steve's neck and made indiscernible noises. He then gestured at Bucky and said, "Papa?" like he was in disbelief that Steve would think he was being anything but the perfect angel baby for his pops.

It took a lot for Steve to hold back his laughter. "Yes, 'Papa'. You were a bad boy today, weren't you?" He had a disapproving tone, but he still spoke conversationally because Christopher wasn't going to understand entirely anyway. He was just starting to understand a little more about what was acceptable and what wasn't.

"The girls will be back soon," Bucky said and held Christopher's hand. "Then we can talk to them about the house and the baby. Do you think we should feed Christopher and put him down for a nap while we talk?"
Steve nodded and kissed his son. "I think putting him down for a nap would be best. Thank god they weren't around for his tantrum today or else the answer about another baby would have been a definite ‘no’.

Bucky stood and picked up Christopher from Steve's lap. "Yeah, I guess I'm glad I'm the only one who was here for his tantrum." He bounced the baby and went to the kitchen. "Do you want to feed him and I'll get a bath ready?"

Christopher was determined to be a pain for the rest of the night, apparently, because he let out an unhappy screech when Bucky started bouncing him. "Dada," Christopher whined, reaching out for Steve.

"Sounds like a plan. The little stinker wants to be with me anyway," Steve chuckled.

Bucky sighed and transferred the baby over to Steve. "Fine, Bean, it's not like I spent the day trying to make sure you didn't hurt yourself on tables or eat pills." He stumbled towards their bedroom to fill a bath still mumbling, "And who bandaged your knee and started sewing your pants back up? Papa did. That's who."

Christopher kissed his dad's cheek happily but Steve gave their son a slightly disapproving look. He kissed the top of the baby's head and said, "You hurt Papa's feelings, Bean." He sat him down in his high chair and started to feed him.

Bucky got the bath filled enough and had the water at a suitable temperature. Christopher liked bubbles so he poured in some bubble bath and swirled it around before added in a bright yellow duck that Christopher called "Ack!" because that was the best he could do with the word ‘duck’. He then picked out some pajamas for him that had astronauts on them. The baby had disliked wearing pajamas lately and preferred to be put to sleep in only a diaper but Bucky still tried.

Despite Steve's best efforts, Christopher somehow managed to get his face and hands all sticky with his dinner. He carried the baby into the bathroom and started to undress him. "There we go, Christopher. Are you going to behave for your pop now? Look, he even put bubbles in your bath."

Christopher whined a bit at the sight of the bath and tried to climb farther up Steve's chest to get away from it. "Jesus, kid," Bucky sighed and gently detached the baby from Steve. "Are you having growing pains or something? Is that why you've been so difficult today? Or is it just a bad day for you?" Bucky thought for a second. He didn't know exactly what sort of problems his son might have from his birth parents and he wasn't sure how early kids showed signs of mental health problems but he knew that early childhood depression or anxiety was definitely becoming more common or at least easier to identify. Maybe Christopher was having some problems like that and that's why he hadn't been as happy lately.

---

"Bean, you got to give your poor papa a break. He's working so hard to take care of you," Steve said and kissed Christopher a few times before watching Bucky gently ease him into the bath once he was naked. "What do you think has gotten into him lately?"

---

Bucky sighed and started carefully washing his son as he grumpily mashed the duck into the water. "I don't know. I just had a thought but I don't really want to think about it. I'm worried I could be right."

---

Steve grumbled and took the duck from Christopher. "Hey, if you're not going to be nice to Ack, you're not allowed to have him." He held the baby's hand instead and looked back to Bucky. "Right about what?" Steve asked. "Is he sick?"

---

Bucky bit his lip nervously and gave Steve a sideways glance. "Yeah, maybe. I'm thinking he might be having some childhood depression or anxiety or something. It happens sometimes in the developmental stages of life because a lot of things are changing all at once and kids are constantly learning. Also, we don't know how predisposed he is to mental health problems from his birth parents."

---

Steve's face fell. "But he's such a happy baby... and he has all of us. What would make him depressed or anxious?" He gave the duck back to Christopher, feeling bad now about taking it. "You want Ack back? Give your pop a kiss," Steve said to him.

---

Christopher took the duck and when Bucky leaned in again to start washing his hair, he gave him a wet kiss and then looked down again. "I know it doesn't really seem like he has a reason to be depressed but that's sort of the problem with depression sometimes. It can just crop up anytime it wants even if nothing really bad has happened yet. And growing up can be really stressful sometimes. Look, if he were my biological child, I'd be blaming myself for passing it down to him. We can't possibly know what his family medical history is or what problems he could have because of possible fetal drug exposure."

---

Steve rubbed a hand over Christopher's back once before drying his hands off. "His aunt says that neither of them went to the doctor - only to get a tooth pulled or to come down from an overdose - so there's nothing in their medical history. So, if they had anything, we don't know what it is," he said.

---

"That's what I'm saying," Bucky nodded and poured water back through Christopher's hair to wash the shampoo out. "It's really anyone's guess. But I think we should watch him and see if it's just that he was having a grumpy day today or if this becomes a habit."

---

"Who would we go to to diagnose something like this if it really is the problem?" Steve asked. Christopher splashed the water and let out a big laugh at the mess he was making. He checked to see if his dads were laughing too.

---

Bucky wasn't really paying attention to his son at the moment. He was just staring at Steve with droopy sad eyes. He shook his head. "I'm not sure - a child psychologist, probably. But I don't even know if it's too soon to officially tell, you know? He is really young."

---

Steve leaned in and gave Bucky a gentle kiss. "Let's keep an eye on him. He's only a baby. And he's got two great parents who will support him no matter what. Let's not worry about things that may not happen."

---

Bucky nodded and picked up Christopher to wrap him in a towel. He heard the girls come home and gave the baby to Steve. "I put his pajamas on his crib but he probably will just fight you when you try to put them on. I'm going to go see what the girls want for dinner."

---

As Bucky predicted, Christopher fought the pajamas and when Steve put them on, he made unhappy sounds and said "No, Dada, no," a few times.

Steve held him and tried to console him. "Baby Bean, you're going to get cold." he paused and then took the clothes off and swaddled him in his snugly blanket instead, hoping that a diaper and a swaddle would be enough. Christopher wiggled a little and looked up at his dad in confusion. "There you go. You used to love this when you were smaller." He kissed his cheek and tucked him into his crib. "Go to sleep, Sweetheart. Dada loves you."

---

"Christ, he's loud today," Lilly said as she dropped her book bag on the floor.

"Oh, you've got no idea," Bucky answered and he stretched and yawned. "Alright, my little monster, what do you want for dinner?" He squashed Lilly in a hug and then moved on to Becca who reluctantly let him give her a hug as well.

---

"Can we have mac and cheese?" Lilly asked. "With hot dogs cut up in it?"

"What are you, six?" Becca asked and crossed her arms. "Lilly, you need to eat real food. That is not real food."

"Mac and cheese is real food, you snob," Lilly shot back.
Bucky rubbed his hands over his eyes. "Hey, guys, really? Do you two have to be difficult today, too? I already got one kid fighting me tooth and nail all day."

---

Becca crossed her arms at Bucky and gave him an unimpressed look. "I'm just telling her the obvious. It's not my fault that your baby was a pain today."

---

"Oh, Jesus," Bucky groaned and started walking back towards his and Steve's room saying, "Steve, abort mission. I can't do it today. Not today." He popped in through the door and flopped on the bed. "New plan: you talk to the grumpiest teenage girls in Brooklyn and I'll go to sleep."

---

"Buck-" Steve started, but he stopped himself. "Alright. Christopher is settled in now. I'll take care of the girls. I love you," he said. Steve stooped down to cup the sides of Bucky's face as he kissed him slowly. "I'll be in soon."

---

Bucky smiled at the kiss and pulled Steve down for another one. "If you can just get them some dinner started then I'll just cool off in here for a bit. Once you are ready to talk to them then come get me. I won't actually make you do that on your own."

---

Steve nodded and made a happy sound when Bucky kissed him again. He headed out and made grilled chicken with sides of macaroni and vegetables. "You know, you could have been nicer to your brother. He's had a rough day."

---

"I had a rough day," Becca defended. "My social studies teacher put a cap on how many questions I could answer in class because I haven't been giving my classmates enough of a chance. I only get three answers, Steve. I know them all and I'm limited to three."

---

"Well, I'm glad you feel like your teacher stopping you from being a know-it-all makes you entitled to be rude to your family," Steve said disapprovingly. "Three questions is plenty. Be thankful you get to go to school at all. There's tons of people in this world who don't get to have an education at all."

---

Becca scoffed and rolled her eyes over to Lilly who was meekly sitting at the table and looking on. She cleared her throat and said, "I got almost a seventy percent on my math homework today. That's at least eight percents more than last time."

---

"Hey, that's great, Kiddo," Steve said, giving her a smile. "You were up late last night doing it. I saw the light on in your room." He gave Becca a small look to tell her not to compare their grades because Lilly couldn't even begin to match Becca's straight A's.

---

Lilly smiled and wiggled a bit, happily. "And I spelled all but two words right on my vocabulary quiz," she added, feeling like she was on a role and liking the praise from Steve. "And I might be taking over as goalie for a while until Caroline's ankle heels up."

---

Lilly could be adorable sometimes. He held his hand up for her to give him a high five. "Yeah, Lil, high five. That's so great!" Steve smiled brightly at her and gave her a solid high five. "You think you're going to get to be the goalie in the big game coming up?"

---

"I probably will be!" Lilly said excitedly. "Are you going to come watch? Even though Caroline is probably a better goalie than me even with only one good ankle, I still think I can do it." She nodded decisively like she had made up her mind that she would win that game at all costs.

---

"Of course, I'm going to be there. I can't miss a game when you're going to be the star goalie," Steve said. He got up and gathered their empty plates. "Becca, are you going to be able to be a little more patient with me and Bucky tonight? We have something we need to ask you guys."

---

Becca stared at him for a second then broke her gaze and huffed out a sigh. "Can it be quick because I was going to do some writing in my book tonight." She crossed her arms and looked at Steve again in a sort of challenge. Her moody teenager phase was going strong.

---

Steve looked at her challenging expression and shrugged casually. "You know what? Never mind," he said. "Bucky and I will make the decision without your input. Let's all hope you don't absolutely hate what we end up choosing without you."

---

"Can I know?" Lilly asked hopefully and leaned forward in her chair. "I want to help make the decision. What are we deciding on? Is Bucky finally letting us paint the apartment? He always says it'll cost too much to pay in damages if we ever moved out. I just want a bright blue room. That's all I ask. I'm sick of staring at white walls."

---

"Sure, Lilly, you can know," Steve said. "Bucky and I are looking at buying a place. So if we do, you can paint the room whatever color you want," Steve explained, pretending to ignore Becca. "If you come into the room with me and Bucky, we can tell you about the house we're looking at."

---

"Wait a damn minute," Becca said with a hand up to stop Steve. "That seems too important to leave me out. Steve, you're being unusually stern today. Let me in on it. I'll make cookies for Bucky while we talk." She wouldn't say she was desperate to be in on it but she definitely didn't want to be the only one out of the loop.

---

"Nope," Steve said. "You're going to be going to college soon anyway so you won't even spend that much time at the new house. Don't worry, we will make sure you have a room and a bed, always." Steve would let Becca in on it, of course, but he wasn't going to cave so quickly.

---

"Goddammit, Steve," Becca spit. "I'll just go ask Bucky myself. Cut out the middleman. And I'll tell him his husband is being an ass!" Becca got up and started for Bucky and Steve's bedroom mumbling to herself much like Bucky did when he stormed away as well.

---

Steve quickly rushed to the hallway and blocked Becca from going into the bedroom. "No, you are not," he said in a stern tone. "You lost your spot in this conversation tonight when you decided to be rude to your siblings and me. It's your right to act how you want, but this is the consequence for not being more courteous before. Now turn around and go write your book. We'll talk about the house with you another night."

---

Becca looked like she still had some fight left in her but Lilly's eyes pleaded with her to drop it so she didn't ruin this for her too. Becca sighed and walked backwards towards her room, keeping her eyes on Steve. "I don't like that you started acting like you can be my parent now," she said as she disappeared into her room.

---

"Well, I don't like that you started acting like a snotty teenager!" Steve countered, mimicking her voice and tone as best as he could. He made a gesture for Lilly to follow him into their room.

---

Lilly followed and whispered to Steve, "You've gotten braver with her."

Bucky was huddled up close to the head of the bed with Christopher asleep next to him. He looked up at Steve when he came in. "Hey, he woke up and wanted on our bed but the second I got him over here, he fell asleep again. He also did not want to buy swaddled anymore so I unleashed him. He's been laying like that for a while." Bucky gestured at the baby who had his hands sprawled out on either side of him and his legs bent at odd angles. He looked a bit like a starfish.

---

Steve smiled and sat next to their son so he could gently stroke the soft hairs on the top of his head. "What a cute little bean," he whispered and then turned to Bucky. "Becca was still giving an attitude...nothing too bad, really, but I didn't want any drama. Lilly wants to know our plan, though."

---

"We're getting a new house?" Lilly asked and sat down on the foot of the bed. "What kind of house is it? Where is it? Steve said I could paint my room blue. Can I paint my room blue, Bucky? Please?"
She rattled off and then took a breath and quieted down.

---

"Lil, give him some time to answer." Steve chuckled. "It's a brownstone, not a house like on Long Island. You're either going to love it or hate it, I think. So we're going to tell you where it is when Becca is more amicable."

---

Bucky looked between the two of them. He really wanted to tell her. "Can we lift the firewall on Becca for just five minutes? I really want to tell them now. And it's burning me up inside. Please, Steve. Kill her with kindness." He ventured a smile at his husband and touched his thigh lightly.

---

Steve was vehemently against telling Becca and he gave Bucky an unhappy look. He was trying to make a point with her that there were consequences for being rude and this was just breaking the discipline he was trying to apply. "You go get her then," he said begrudgingly.

---

"Come on, Love." Bucky smiled and kissed Steve's cheek. "You can send her right back to her room once we are done. I won't argue. But I want to put the beef aside for just a bit because this is really important." He slipped off the bed and gently touched Christopher's head as he slept by Steve and he went to go get Becca.

---

Steve softened up only because he didn't want to ruin this for Bucky. When Bucky went into Becca's room, she smirked victoriously at her brother and laughed once sharply. "I knew he'd cave. He always does."

---

"He didn't cave." Bucky shook his head. "I told him I need you to hear this because it's important for all of us to talk about together. After we are done, Steve's putting the shun back on you. Come on, Becs, let's go talk."

---

Becca looked mildly annoyed but she got up and followed Bucky back to his room. "Why does Steve have a stick up his ass? He's not our dad," she complained.

---

"I don't know." Bucky sighed. "I don't even begin to know why you two can't just get along. Maybe he's mad you didn't ask him to read your book. Or he's sick of you being a cranky, snarky ass nowadays."

---

"I'm not being a snarky ass," she said. Becca stopped arguing once they were in the room with the rest of the family. She leaned her shoulder against the wall and crossed her arms, trying to not look too curious.
"Alright." Bucky adjusted himself on the bed again. Christopher had woken up and had crawled over to sit in Lilly's lap and chew on the sleeve of her shirt. "So, Steve and I were looking at moving into a slightly bigger space. But we wanted to make sure you would be okay with the one we want to get."

Christopher happily busied himself with Lilly's shirt. Steve placed a hand on Bucky's back and let him speak. "Which house are you looking at?" Lilly asked curiously.

"Uh, well," Bucky looked to Steve for support and squeezed his hand. "We were thinking about seeing if we could buy our last place. The last one we lived with Mom and Dad in. We could afford it now, not like before when I could hardly afford this place."

The both of them didn't answer. A shocked silence lingered in the room. "Won't it be different?" Lilly asked tentatively. "Who else lived there after us?"

Bucky nodded slowly and let out a deep breath. Their reaction was more lukewarm than he thought it would be. "A young couple who were planning on having kids but couldn't afford the rent any longer. So it was them for about three years and it's been empty since they left."

Lilly paused for a moment and then turned to Becca. "You think mom and dad are haunting it? They might have cursed the family there so the house would be available to take just when we're able to snag it."

Bucky smacked a hand on his face and leaned forward. "No, Lil, they aren't haunting it. Mom and Dad would never haunt some poor unsuspecting couple. If anyone, they would haunt Dale for being a jackass to their kids."

"I don't know. I think there's something going on if the family that was living there so long suddenly can't anymore just as you guys are ready to drop a million dollars on a house," Lilly answered.

"It won't be a million dollars," Bucky said. "Let's get back on track. We need to know what you two think of going back there. Do you want to or do you not want to? I don't want it to make you upset or uncomfortable or sad or anything like that."

"It'd be weird... but it'd be nice. And I really want a blue room," Lilly said.
Becca paused and then said, "You guys want another baby, don't you? That's why you're moving into a house?"

---

Bucky looked over to Becca and then back to Steve, trying to apologize for bringing Becca in on this while she was acting like this. Steve was probably trying to avoid this very thing. "Answer the question first," Bucky said. "Do you want to live in our place? Have your old room? A bigger room."

---

"Not if it becomes baby city there," Becca said. "Finish with us first before you have your perfect, little family. After all, you put us through, we at least deserve you giving us a stable home for us and not for your new babies."

---

Bucky was quiet for a second. There was a lot to unpack in what Becca was saying but he was far too tired and he could feel himself shutting down. After a while, he felt a lump form in his throat and his eyes started to fill up with tears. He nodded gently. "Alright, we won't move." He clenched his jaw and sniffled, looking down at his hands and trying not to let any tears fall off his eyelids and onto his cheek.

---

"No!" Lilly cried out, having already set her mind on moving back to their old home. "Becca, why do you have to be such a bitch?" she snapped.

Steve didn't know whether to scold Lilly, scold Becca, or try to console Bucky. Christopher looked around in confusion at the sudden change of energy around him. Becca turned on her heels and marched out of the room. Lilly's eyes started to tear up as well because she kind of really wanted her old house back.

---

"Jesus fucking Christ!" Bucky growled loudly and wiped angrily at his eyes and cheeks. "Goddammit." He hopped off the bed and took Lilly by the hand and started pulling her towards Becca's room. "Come on. We aren't done." He stormed into Becca's room. Both he and Lilly were mad and tearful and Becca was huddled in a ball on her bed. "Becca, I have a question for you."

---

When Bucky swore angrily, Christopher began to whimper and start to cry, so Steve stayed to take care of their baby while Bucky took Lilly to Becca's room.

Becca turned her head to Bucky. "What?" she asked shortly.

---

Bucky held Lilly's hand tightly and gestured between them with the other. "Do you love us?" he asked Becca pointedly. "I mean, do you actually still love us and care about us? Or did you stop that a long time ago?"
"What kind of question is that?" Becca asked, frowning at them. "I took care of you when you couldn't take care of yourself. I taught Lilly math. I kept this family together while you were busy getting high and screwing anything with a dick that walked."

---

"I know," Bucky said with a heavy tone to his voice. "I know you did those things. And I know that you shouldn't have had to. But I've done shit for you too. I've kept all of us together. I left school. I didn't just put you in foster care and hope that you ended up with someone nice. I've kept us in a good apartment and made sure to budget for anything you might need or want. And in the past two years, I've stopped sleeping around, I've stopped drinking, I've married a reliable man, I started AA just to make sure I don't fall back into my addictions." He paused and looked to Lilly. "And Lilly thinks the world of you. She agrees with you when she doesn't know what to think and she trusts you and what you have to say. She believes in you and supports you with what you want to do but you never support her. You rag on her for being more athletic than academic. We support you, Becca. You don't support us and you don't care about what we care about or what we want."

---

Lilly squeezed Bucky's hand tightly and pressed into his side because she really was upset over this and she hated feeling so vulnerable. Their house hung on Becca's approval. "Well, it is ridiculous," Becca said bluntly. "Less than one percent of athletes make it to the pros and most actresses around here end up in seedy movies," she said. "Someone's always going to have to support her with those kinds of career goals. And you lucked out finding Steve cause if you hadn't, you'd still be a mess."

---

"It's not ridiculous, goddammit!" Bucky yelled. "You're writing a novel right now. A novel! Which, I agreed to read when you asked if I would. That's support. And don't you think you have just as much of a chance to become a famous writer as Lilly does to be a pro athlete. She's really fucking good at sports and I want her to be able to pursue that dream if she wants. Just like I want you to pursue yours." He paused and huffed a few times. "And I want you to believe in us and want us to have our dreams and support us. That includes my dreams. And my dreams are much different than they used to be. Mine are simple now, more meaningful. I want to raise a family. And I want to do it with the love of my life and with my sisters there to be aunts and I want to do it someplace where our parents raised us. That's my dream, Becca."

---

Becca glared at him, unmoved. She clearly wasn't in any sort of a mood to admit wrongdoing or apologize for being unsupportive and rude. Instead, she gave him her back and covered herself with the blankets again. "Then go do it," she said. "If that's what you wanted from the start then you shouldn't have asked for my opinion of it."

---

Bucky looked to Lilly and shook his head. "I wanted your opinion because I didn't want either of you being too upset to go back to the last place we had Mom and Dad with us. I didn't want to hurt you any more than you've already been hurt by their loss. That's why I asked you."

---

Becca didn't answer and Lilly tugged lightly on Bucky's hand to try and make him come with her out of the room. Having her older sister so blatantly not support her was a huge blow to her esteem and she couldn't stand to be in the room anymore.

---

Bucky followed Lilly out, closing the door behind them. Lilly tugged him back towards his and Steve's room and sat them on the bed. She was crying again and Bucky wrapped his arms around her and held her close to him. "I'm so sorry, Lilly."

---

Lilly buried her head in Bucky's chest and wept silent tears. She wished she could stop them, but they just kept coming. "Why does she have to be so mean?" Lilly sobbed out miserably. "I…I don't think my dreams are dumb."

---

"They aren't. They aren't dumb at all." Bucky gently rocked her back and forth and looked over to Steve for help. "I think that you should try to do whatever you want to do, Lil." He pet his hand through her hair and noticed that Christopher's face was a little red from crying as well.

---

Steve kept a distance from Bucky and Lilly so they could have their moment. But when Bucky gave him that look, he came over and wrapped an arm around them while he held Christopher with his other. "You've got us who believe in you. And Christopher would, too, if he knew what you wanted," Steve said. "You want to spend the night in our room, Lil?"

---

Lilly shook her head and clutched on to Steve to hug him too. "No, I'm okay. I just wish she gave a damn about me sometimes. I know I'm not always nice to her but I've never called her the things she calls me like stupid or mentally challenged or told her she couldn't do what she wanted or she wasn't smart enough for things. I'd never do that to her."

---

"I know. You're a good sister." Steve smoothed her hair back and kissed the top of her head. "Becca will come around one day. She will see how much we support each other and one day, she will realize that she can't do everything all on her own," Steve assured her.

---

"Can she hurry up?" Lilly asked quietly.

Bucky chuckled and pinched her sister lightly. "Guess we will have to be patient." Lilly stayed with them a while longer and held Christopher until he fell asleep again. Then she went back to her own room, leaving her brother and Steve alone.

---

Once they were alone, Steve turned to Bucky and brushed his fingers through his hair. "Are you alright, Love?" Steve asked. Becca had thrown some pretty heavy shit at them and he wasn't sure how Bucky felt about it.
"No," Bucky sighed and tucked himself into Steve's arms. "But I just kind of want to ignore it for now. Today really hasn't been great. Can we just relax for a bit together? I can give you a massage still if you wanted."

Steve wasn't really in the mood for a massage but he figured it was something to help take Bucky's mind off of their shit day. He took off his shirt and rolled onto his stomach. He was quiet at first but then mumbled, "We should go for the house... but maybe it's too soon for another baby."

"Steve, please," Bucky muttered back and laid down in between Steve's legs and reached up to his shoulders. "Do we have to talk about it, now? We want that baby. We both do. We also want the house. I don't think this whole thing with Becca should stop either of those things from happening."

Steve's shoulders were so tense until Bucky started to massage them. "I know we do but I don't want to give her an excuse to pick on you whenever she's annoyed with you or the babies." He sighed and buried his face in the pillow. "I'm sorry, Buck. I'll stop talking about it."

"No, we can talk now if you want to. It's fine, I guess. I'm just upset with her," Bucky said. "She really hurt Lilly. And she's been treating us all like we owe her something. And she purposefully brings up things I used to do just so she has power and makes me feel small. I'm so tired of it. Even with the ways I fucked up, I still did a lot right."

"We can build Lilly back up, but she still needs Becca's blessing to really feel confident," Steve said. "I don't think she would have done what you did, Bucky. You gave up everything for them. She would have picked her dreams over keeping you all together. You'll always have that to be proud of about yourself," Steve said. "I wish we could get through to her. There's a difference between being hurt by what you used to do and holding it over your head forever."

Bucky thought for a second then leaned his body down against Steve's back so he could get closer to him. "You suggested a while ago to take the girls to see a therapist. You were talking about having them talk about losing their parents and how I was and Lilly's nightmares. But what if we did like a family counseling? Me and the girls together. We are going to try to find a child psychiatrist for Christopher anyway, might as well look for someone who could do that for us."

Steve nodded. "Whatever it takes, Bucky," he said. "I want everyone here to feel loved and supported." Steve let out a little groan when Bucky cracked his back, allowing him to relax a little more. "I'm not excusing her actions but I think Becca is being exceptionally catty because she wasn't supported the way she needed to be back when you weren't in a good place. And she may be jealous that our kids don't have to go through that."
Bucky just laid on top of Steve and rubbed his hands down his arms. "I know what you mean. I really messed them up. They just lost their parents and then their guardian goes off the deep end for a few years." He never had been good at coping with things. But now it just seemed like a broken record. Bucky couldn't handle shit and Becca couldn't forgive him. It never ended - no matter how much better Bucky was.

"You did your best, Bucky. And that's more than what most would do," Steve said. "But it's on Becca to accept that that's not the way things are now," he added. "You did well. You're clean and sober and you're giving them a stable home."

Bucky kissed down Steve's back and let his fingers touch lightly across his skin as he went. He slipped his hands into the elastic of Steve's pants and pull them down just a bit to kiss the top of his ass before crawling off of Steve and laying back on the bed. "Do you think Becca loves us? She wouldn't answer when I asked."

Steve made a soft sound of approval at the kisses. But the question made him frown. "I think she does. She just doesn't want to admit it. And she feels like she's the only one who's going to be anything, I think. So she's got a bit of a chip on her shoulder that she shouldn't have there."

"She thinks she's the only one who's going to be anything?" Bucky asked and rolled to face Steve. "What do you mean? She resents us for not having ambitions or something? I had ambitions. I had a plan for my life and my career before my parents died."

"That's what I think she thinks, at least. She puts down Lilly for not being smart. She acts like your accomplishment of keeping a family together was nothing she couldn't do." Steve huffed. "I could be wrong. I hope I'm wrong. But that's just how I see how she's acting."

"No, you're probably right," Bucky said. "And she probably puts pressure on herself to be the first one in our family to actually finish college. My parents didn't go to higher education and I didn't finish so maybe she thinks it's her responsibility."

"She doesn't have to put that pressure on herself. No one is a failure just cause they didn't go to college," Steve said. "And I think that's why she tries to discourage Lilly from sports."

"Becca likes being the best of us. She always has," Bucky said. "She used to take on my chores just so she could tell our parents that she did everything around the house all by herself. She wanted to be the favorite. Maybe it's a middle child thing."
"Could be. But she gets plenty of attention. And then she gets grumpy when we don't leave her alone," Steve said. "Maybe she will come around. She knows we love her and support her."

Bucky yawned and snuggled up against Steve. "I'm sorry we both had bad days. Maybe tomorrow will be better. I want to take a shower. Do you want to join me or are you headed to sleep? Christopher's out and I don't think he'll get up for a while."

"I don't really feel like moving," Steve said. "I'm going to have to pass on this one." Steve turned his head so he could kiss Bucky's arm. "I love you, Sweetheart. I know tomorrow will be a better day," Steve murmured confidently.
Bucky started hauling boxes up the stoop and into the house. Becca had eventually agreed to move into their old place and it only took them about a month to close on it. Lilly had been a whirlwind of energy while she packed up all her things to get ready for the move. She was the most excited of them all to go back. As much as Bucky was pleased to return home, he did start to feel the weight of having to leave their current apartment. That apartment was the first home he had with Steve. It was Christopher's first home with them. It was bittersweet having to go.

---

Steve couldn't believe how emotional he got leaving the apartment but he had to convince himself that this was a new beginning. He stood outside their new home, marveling at it for a few moments before turning to Bucky. "Can you believe it, Bucky? All this is ours. No more apartment."

---

"No more apartment," Bucky repeated and hugged Steve quickly while no one was watching. "No rent, no Dale," he watched as Lilly picked up the cat carrier that Raphael was asleep in. "Lil, don't let him out while we are still bringing things in. We don't want him to escape."

---

Steve smiled and looked proudly over at Bucky. "This is going to be the start of something great. I can't believe we get to raise our son where your parents got to raise you." Christopher squealed excitedly and bounced in his carrier. Steve nudged Bucky before carrying a few boxes inside.

---

Bucky snagged his son and brought him to his new nursery. It had the same color of paint that was there when Bucky lived in it. He found the notch in the wall over by the window where Bucky had accidentally banged a guitar when he had pretended to be a rock star. He opened the closet and found in the corner the hastily scribbled drawing on the wall that Becca had made one time when the two of them were playing astronauts and pretending they were in a spaceship.

---

"Papa," Christopher murmured, looking around the place. He pointed at the room, unable to put his questions into words but he definitely wanted to know what was going on. After Steve finished bringing all the boxes inside, he closed the door. Lilly unleashed the cat, who started prowling the house to explore.

---

Bucky stared at the wall and grinned. Becca had drawn it all on her own and was so proud. She even wrote out in scribbled handwriting, 'Buck and Becs Space Asstronots' with a little heart next to it. Bucky touched it carefully and shouted for Steve to come see.

---

Steve ran over to see what Bucky was yelling at him about. When he saw the spelling, he let out a loud laugh and shook his head. "Oh my god, this is adorable! How did this manage to survive for so long? How old were you when you made this?"
"I don't know," Bucky said. "I'm guessing the last owners didn't use this room because nothing's changed. Even the dent by the window is still there. They probably just didn’t bother to paint."

"This is so amazing," Steve said. "We got to show this to Becca. Christ, I wish I could have known you back then – teenage Bucky taking care of his little sister. I bet you were adorable." Christopher wigged in his seat and reached up towards his dads.

Bucky smiled and touched the picture again. He and Becca were a lot nicer to each other back then. He turned back to his son and said, "Little Bean, this is your room now. Are you excited? You have your very own room. At least until you get a sibling."

Steve picked Christopher up from his carrier and kissed him on his cheek. "Your pop grew up here, just like you are going to do. This was his room when he was young." He set the baby down and let him explore. "Becca, come in here. Bucky found something!" he called out.

Bucky heard the old familiar sound of his sisters coming up the stairs. He was woken up by those creaking stairs every morning for years. He looked up at Steve. "I really missed this place."

Becca and Lilly popped their heads into the room. "What'd you find?" she asked. "Lilly found something too. In the downstairs bathroom, there is still a spoon taped to the back of the toilet from when we pulled that April Fool’s Day prank on mom and hid all the silver wear. That couple after us must have not touched anything in here. Or even hardly lived here."

Steve kissed Bucky’s temple and then moved to let Becca see the wall. "Bucky found this in the closet. I think we're going to get to come across a lot of stuff left behind."

"Oh shit!" Becca said excitedly. "It's our intergalactic gangster squad. We used to pretend to run stolen goods across embargo lines in space."

Bucky looked at Steve's confused face. "We had just learned what the embargo with Cuba was," he informed Steve with a little nod.

Steve grinned because this really was so damned cute. "God, you two were such dorks. Still are."

Lilly pouted and crossed her arms, feeling slightly left out since she wasn't allowed in the space team when she was a kid. "I found a spoon," she reiterated.

"I was not a dork," Bucky defended. "I just had a really big crush on Captain Kirk." He took the spoon from Lilly. It was grimy and dusty and disgusting. “Just put this spoon back on the toilet.”

---

"Well if you had a crush on Kirk, then that means I'm Kirk and you're Spock, and Spock is definitely the dork out of the two of them," Steve reasoned.

---

Bucky picked up Christopher and followed Steve out of the room and down to the kitchen. "Come on, Steve. If anyone, I'm Kirk or Scotty. You're like Bones... maybe Spock."

---

As soon as Christopher recognized they were in the kitchen he started to sign 'hungry' at Bucky. "I am not Spock. I'm too cool to be Spock. Becca is Spock."

---

"I'll take it," Becca called from the hall.

Bucky rummaged around in a bag for some cereal bits to give Christopher. "Baby, do you want to stay here and work on unpacking and setting up Christopher's room or do you want to go to the grocery store? I'll do whatever you don't want to."

---

Steve really wanted to set up Christopher's room but he figured it'd be better to let Bucky. "I'll do the grocery shopping," he said. "You can tell Christopher all the fun times you had in his new nursery as you get him settled in."

---

"Okay." Bucky smiled and gave their son another handful of cereal. "Do you want one of the girls to go with you to help? Lilly probably wouldn't mind. Would you, Lil?" Bucky would set up his record player first and put something good in to play through the house while he worked on unpacking. Christopher's room wouldn't take too long but his and Steve's would and Bucky was planning on sifting through all his records and putting ones that he didn't listen to that often into the storage closet.

---

Christopher ate the cereal hungrily and then signed for more the second he swallowed the last of it. Lilly shook her head. "I don't mind. But Steve's got to carry me like the whole way there."

Steve sighed but gave her a smile. "Of course, piggyback it is. So anything you want specifically, Buck? What do you want our first dinner here to be?"

---

"I don't mind what it is. Lilly can pick," Bucky said and put the cereal away. "No more for now, Bean," he said to his son and pet his head. "My goal is to get the nursery set up and at least get our bed made up. That's all we really need tonight."

---

"Papa," Christopher whined, bringing his circled fingers together in the sign for 'more' a few times in hopes of convincing him otherwise.

"Sounds perfect," Steve said. "Lilly, how's yours and Becca's room? Do you need any help with them?"

---

"I think we got it," Lilly said and wrote down a list of things that they needed to pick up at the store.

Bucky sifted through some boxes to find Steve and Lilly's jackets and hand them off to them as they were leaving for the store. "Christopher needs more orange juice and diapers and those Goldfish Crackers."

---

"You got it. Love you," Steve said, kissing Bucky's cheek and then Christopher's before heading out. Once they were in the cool air, he looked up at Lilly. "Is it nice being back?"

---

Lilly held tight to Steve and let the light breeze blow through her hair. "Yeah, I missed my room. And I hated having to move out in the first place. It'll be a little weird to get used to again, I think. Especially since Mom and Dad won't be in the house. And I don't know how Bucky is really going to take to living in their old room with you. But I'm glad we are back. And I can tell Becca is happy about it, too."

---

"I'm a little worried how Bucky will feel in your parents' room, too," Steve admitted. "I'm glad Becca is happy. She drives me crazy sometimes, but I really do want to do right by her and make her happy."

---

"Bucky will probably say he is fine but have a small crisis in the middle of the night and end up on the couch or something," Lilly predicted. "You know how he is." She hopped off of Steve when they got to the store and she grabbed a cart. "How do you think Christopher will do being in a room alone?"

---

Steve made sure to pick up the things for Christopher first. "Hopefully Bucky won't be worked up over it for too long. This place should make him happy instead of stressed. And I'm a bit worried about Christopher being all alone at night. I've gotten so used to him being there with us."

---

"At least Bucky's room is right across the hall so if he does start crying you'll hear it," Lilly said and trailed through the aisles with the cart, stopping occasionally to let Steve dump things into it. "Are you guys really getting another baby? Or is Becca just saying that?"

---

It didn't take long for them to gather all of the things they needed. Steve basically just grabbed anything that caught his eye. "We are thinking about it. It's not final, but there's a possibility that we are. How would you feel about that if we did?"

---

"I don't mind. Babies are fun," Lilly said brightly. "I never got little siblings so I've liked having Christopher around. And I'm not just saying that because I'm his godmother. I love him a lot. I get that we are sort of a unique family and people at school say bad things about us but I like how we are. I mean, obviously, I wish my parents were around but I like who we are for what we have."

---

Steve looked so pleased that Lilly adored and loved his son. It almost made up for the fact that others gave her trouble for their family life. "What do the other people say to you at school?" Steve asked.

---

Lilly shrugged. "Just a bunch of mean stuff. Some guys in my class keep saying how my parents probably killed themselves on purpose cause they didn't want to be with us anymore. And most of Becca's class knows that Bucky is gay since that one kid whose dad is friends with Donnie Manix kept talking about him beating up Bucky. And just some other stuff."

---

Steve frowned, looking mad. "Are you kidding me?" Steve couldn't believe how mean kids could be sometimes. "I want names. They won't know what hit them," Steve said. He didn't plan on roughing them up, but Steve was already thinking of ways to get the kids to stop.

---

Lilly chuckled a bit. "You're a good guardian-brother-in-law thing, Steve. But it's okay. I have friends who back me up. It doesn't get to me as much as it used to. And I usually fight them if I'm given the chance. I sent Will Langman home with a broken nose and a black eye last week."

---

"Good girl," Steve praised, nudging her. "People can suck sometimes. I have faith that we're all good and all hate comes from misunderstanding. But it's not fun to deal with." Steve picked out a candy bar for Lilly and went to the checkout counter. "Alright. Anything else we need?"

---

Lilly stared at the candy. "No, I think that's it. We got everything on the list." She helped the bagger put things into paper bags as they went and carefully laid bread and eggs on the top so they wouldn't be smashed. They had a lot of bags and Lilly was wondering how she and Steve would manage them all.

---

Steve hooked the bag loops around his arms and was like a coat rack for them all. "Looks like you're going to have to walk back, Lilly. Sorry." He happily carried the bags out after they were all paid for. "Have you talked to Becca at all? Has she been nicer to you?"

---

Lilly shrugged and unwrapped the candy. "I've just been sort of avoiding her in general for a while now. She's been worse than usual in the past few months. She's just being a stupid teenager. I'm really tired of it."

---

"Well, one day you're going to be a stupid teenager just like she is," Steve said. "She loves you. And I know she doesn't come off like it sometimes, but she really does want the best for you."

---

"Yeah, I guess," Lilly said, resigned about the whole thing. "I know Bucky always says how Becca is just like Dad. But Dad would be so upset if he could see how Becca has been treating us lately. Dad was a genius, too, but he never made me feel bad for not being smart."

---

"I hope she comes around one day. I think she has a lot of pressure that you don't have just cause you're the youngest. And I know that losing them hurt you too, but you were younger than she was so she understood the levity of the situation more," Steve said. "All we can do is be patient, love her, and communicate."

---

"I understood," Lilly said. "My parents died. I was eight years old. And then my brother almost died and then my grandmother died. I understood the situation perfectly. You don't think I didn't want to die, too? My family was leaving so quickly and we had nothing, the three of us."

---

Steve gave Lilly a sympathetic, apologetic expression and sighed. "I'm sorry," he said gently. "I'm glad you stayed with us. And just so you know, you guys could never have nothing if you still have each other. Even if disaster hits and we lose the house and all our money, I'm a happy man if I have my family."

---

"Okay," Lilly murmured and held the door to the house open for Steve. "We're back!" she called into the house. There was an old seventies disco record playing and Bucky and Becca were in the middle of the hall concentrating hard on putting together a new dresser to put in Christopher's room.

---

"Dadadada!" Christopher said excitedly when he saw his dad come through the door.

Steve dropped the bags on the table so he could scoop up his son. "Hey there!" he greeted happily. "You guys realize you left a bag of screws here for that dresser, right?" He chuckled.

---

"Goddammit!" Becca groused and threw a screwdriver down on the ground. "Those are the ones that go here, Bucky." She pointed at a part of the drawer that looked like it was unceremoniously shoved into the rest of the unit.

---

"Looks like you two are having loads of fun," Steve observed. "How about you keep an eye on Christopher, Becca, and I can help your brother out with the dresser?"

"Fine by me. I'm done with this stupid thing," Becca huffed and picked up Christopher to take him to the kitchen where Lilly was unpacking their bags.

"Hey, Baby, how was the store with Lilly?" Bucky asked. His hair was pulled back tight on his head but some strands had gotten loose. He had a bit of black stuff on his forehead and he honestly didn't even know where it came from.

Steve knelt down so he could arrange one of the drawers. "It was nice. We had a good talk on the way there and back," Steve said. "She's happy to be here. And thinks Becca is, too."

"Good." Bucky nodded, eyes focused on screwing in the correct pieces into the correct places. "Making a crib from scratch was easy. Putting together some piece-of-shit, mass-produced dresser is really fucking hard. This is ridiculous."

"It's easy if you follow the directions," Steve said in a singsong voice with the little paper unfolded in front of him as he assembled another drawer. "I can't believe we own our home, Buck. This one, of all the homes there are. It's like my life couldn't get any better."

Bucky watched Steve for a minute with a warm smile on his face. "I'm really glad we are here. We are one step closer to what we have been hoping for and dreaming about. And I'm really glad I still have you here with me through it all."

"It's worth everything that happened if that's what got us here," Steve said. He put the drawers in the dresser and wiggled them to make sure they were sturdy. "Perfect." He looked back up at Bucky. "Lilly says she wouldn't mind having another baby around."

Bucky leaned over and gave Steve a kiss on the neck. "Come on, let's push this into the nursery." He grabbed one end and waited for Steve to lift the other. "Did she say she was excited for another baby or just okay with it happening?"

Steve lifted the other end and helped Bucky carry it up the stairs and into the nursery. "She sounded happy," Steve said. "Said she loved Christopher and she likes having kids younger than her around since she's the youngest sibling."

Bucky grinned and positioned the dresser where he wanted it. "That's one sister down, one to go. Have you talked to your mom about it yet? She'll want to know that we are thinking about having another." Steve had recently talked to his mom about the progress that Bucky had been making in AA and she wrote Bucky a long letter about how proud she was of him. He got the letter on the same day he got his three months sober chip. It meant a lot to him.

---

"If I tell my mom now and we end up not doing it then we are never going to hear the end of it out of her," Steve said. "I'd rather wait until we are absolutely sure. It'll break her heart if we say we may get one and then end up not doing it."

---

Bucky nodded. "That makes sense." He paused and looked around the room. "I know we have a lot of things to do in the house today but I was thinking we might all go down to the cemetery together. I think my parents should know that we are back home. And Christopher has only visited them once."

---

Steve nodded. "I think that's a great idea." It was a bittersweet event, but Steve always loved it when Bucky suggested visiting the grave because he knew how much he had avoided it the years prior. "They'll be very proud of you. We wouldn't have been able to do this if you hadn't looked into it."

---

Bucky reached for Steve's hand and held it close. "I know it may seem weird but just being here feels like I have them back just a little bit. This is the last place they called home. This is the last place they told us they loved us and had dinner with us and played games with us. This is where they were headed when they got in that crash."

---

Steve kissed the back of Bucky's hand before giving it a squeeze. "I don't think it's weird at all. I think it's easier for them to see us here. It's easier to watch over us because this place was so important to them."

---

"Yeah." Bucky smiled softly and leaned into Steve. "Thanks for getting this place for me - for all of us. I love you so much. And hopefully, my parents will get to know you a little better here. You know?" He sighed and nuzzled into Steve's neck for a moment. "Alright, let's go round up the kids."

---

Steve kissed his cheek a few times and then nodded. He called for Becca and Lilly to get ready to go out and he snuggled his son once Becca passed him back. "Ready to visit your grandparents, little guy?"

---

Christopher giggled happily and smacked his hands on Steve's face in a greeting. "Dada!"

Bucky touched his son's head lightly and went to rummage in his bags of clothes to find a jacket and hat for him to wear. "Steve, I think tonight when we get back. We should try to get all of Christopher's stuff unpacked and all his clothes into the dresser. Then we can worry about our stuff."
Steve made a funny sound when Christopher smacked his hands on his face. "Yes, Sweetheart, your dada loves you so much." He kissed the tip of his little nose. "Sounds like a plan to me. Today and tomorrow are my days off this week so I can spend tomorrow dealing with our things."

