"It's a good strategy, she can't hope to catch the Snitch when Harry's playing, so she delays him the best she can so her team can raise enough points to perhaps win by a small margin." said Charlie thoughtfully.

"You did a watered down version of the Wronski Feint!" said Dean excitedly.
"I didn't know it had a name at the time." said Harry blushing.

"Not good." said Bill turning pale.

"Good lad!" said Moody proudly as the Rangers applauded.
"Very good." said Lionus with a smile.

"Too bad, it was good." said Remus with a smirk.

"YES!" shouted a few seond and first year Gryffindors.

"We wouldn't have let you drop." said Fred.
End of forty-third paragraph.

Dialogue set, third sentence, first semi-colon

"He turned so red that you could have lit a candle on his cheek." said Katie with a giggle.

End of dialogue set.

"I'm amazed the poor boy wasn't trampled to death." said Madam Pomfrey coolly.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

"Tell me you didn't take her money." said Mr. Weasley somberly.

Percy blushed heavily.

"Seems she paid him another way." said Bill with a snicker.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Forty-fourth paragraph.

"What had you all nervous?" asked Sirius.

"Well, seeing your Patronus coming out of nowhere and getting jostled about by the students didn't help." said Remus with a smile.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Way to squish his morale like a bug." said George.
"Why you dirty cheats!" said Madam Bones angrily
"Cowardly little..." growled Moody.

"This won't be good." said Sirius gleefully.

"Each." corrected Professor McGonagall sending a glare to the three Slytherin's still in attendance.

"He was not a happy man." said Remus fondly. "Good thing you left, or you would have heard Dumbledore yell. And that can be a traumatizing event."

Several people laughed so hard that they fell out of their seats.

"Oh come on! You didn't even mention the fact that we carried you up to the castle and all the way to the dorms!" said Fred.

"We left money for it!" said George loudly.
"Why? Why would you read that?" asked Sirius.

"I was correcting the book, I even wrote to the author and told him he got some points wrong." said Hermione. "He never wrote me back."

"He wrote to me." said Dumbledore. "And asked me to have you, when you are older, to go with him on a muggle watching trip. Though he had me promise that I would magic your mouth shut, so he can tell you his point of view." he added with a kind smile. "I told him that I would not do so, but I would try and intercept any further letters that he seemed to have deemed....annoying."

Hermione blushed faintly.

"You already read that book." said Neville confused. "You told me a few weeks before that match."

"You're like a marriage counselor." said Seamus.

"That's your cue to drop a few subjects, girl." said Moody shortly.

"And here I was wondering how someone who is fifteen years old could develop an ulcer." said Dr. Nicodemus looking at Harry. "Those two put you through way too much stress."
Sirius looked at Harry quickly. "When we get you home, first month, no Weasley's or Hermione allowed, you need a rest."

Hermione and Ron looked at each other worriedly.

"I'm.." started Harry but Sirius put a hand to his mouth.

"You say I'm fine one more time, I'm going to whack out." said Sirius with a smirk.

Fifty-first paragraph.

Dialogue line.

"I wanted Ron and Hermione to just call off the stupid fight." said Harry.

Dialogue set, second sentence.

"Have to give him that." said Fred.

End of dialogue set.

Fifty-second sentence, first sentence.

"Party pooper." muttered Sirius with a smirk.

End of fifty-second paragraph.

Mrs. McFinn draped the blanket over Harry gently.

"I'm fine." said Harry. He watched with a smile as Sirius raised his hand, and slapped his leg lightly and stared hard at Harry.

"Indulge me." said Mrs. McFinn.

Fifty-third paragraph, sixth sentence.

Dumbledore and Remus looked at Harry inquisitively.

Harry looked thoughtful. "How the hell did I know...sort of...what it was, before I even saw it in person?"

Neither one of them could answer him.
"What the heck?" shouted Charlie.

"What the hell were you thinking?" asked Remus to Sirius quietly.
"I was desperate." said Sirius quietly.

"That scared the frick out of us." said Seamus.

"How can you dream the curtains to look like that?" asked Bill.

"It was thought that he wanted you dead, and you go out of your dorm first?" shouted Bill.
"Why do you always have to be the one in front?" asked Dr. Clark with a frightened look.

"Unlucky?" said Harry shrugging.

"I didn't know what we were all doing up." said Fred shrugging.

"Over-achiever." said Bill shaking his head.

"I could have smacked you for that." said Ron.
"I don't know how she heard that all the way from her office." said Katie.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

"Why not let him talk to her?" asked Charlie. "You were really being unfair."

Dialogue line.

Sixty-second paragraph.

Dialogue line.

"Jeez, no one wants to believe you." said Bill.

Dialogue line.

Sixty-third paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

"That floored EVERYONE." said Harry.

Sixty-fourth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

"Oh Neville." said Dr. Clark with a sympathetic look.

"Sorry son." said Sirius apologetically.

Sixty-fifth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

"He didn't really leave them about, Crookshanks brought it to me." said Sirius quietly.
McGonagall looked at Sirius and then over to Hermione. "Miss Granger, I'm afraid that Crookshanks is hereby forbidden to leave your dormitory, if I learn that he is out. I will have him sent home."

"But...." said Hermione. "He did nothing wrong!"

"That is the end of it, Miss Granger." said McGonagall imperiously.

End of chapter.

"Poor Neville." said Luna.

"Who'd like to read now?" asked Charlie loudly.

"I will." said Ron from beside him. He took the book, cleared his throat and read aloud. "Fourteenth chapter"

"This won't go well for me." said Harry.

Chapter End Notes

Thanks for reading Please review
Everyone of the Great Hall had a quick late lunch before they had decided to start up the reading again.

"Harry, I've got some treacle tart here, do you want...." said Mrs. McFinn, before she could finish saying anything he reached over and took one of the two slices she had.

"He loves that stuff." said Ron with a laugh.

"I'll bear that mind." she said with a giggle.

Ron picked up the book from where he put it down at and began to read.

First paragraph.

"So no one got any sleep that night?" said Mrs. Diggory.

"Sorry kids." said Sirius regretfully.

First paragraph, first sentence, second semi-colon

Both Dr. Clark and Mrs. McFinn looked at Professor Flitwick with curiosity.

"The doors are enchanted." said Flitwick with a smile.

"Their enchanted that far?" said Dr. Clark with a shock look.

First paragraph, end of first sentence.

"He had to actually spend twice as much on cat food, cause Mrs. Norris couldn't hunt around for mice." said Fred.

First paragraph, third sentence, first comma.
"Well of course!" said McGonagall. "I couldn't risk the children being attacked again."

"I didn't attack anyone!" said Sirius quickly.

"Wait! If you were in there...then Scabbers had to have still been in the dorm!" said Hermione excitedly, hoping to clear her cat's name.

"He wasn't there, sort of why I slashed the curtains, I was pissed off." said Sirius shaking his head. "Sorry to scare you Ron."

"It's alright, you made me really popular for a while." said Ron with a small smile.

---

First paragraph, fourth sentence.

"I don't blame her one bit." said Mrs. McFinn.

---

End of second paragraph.

"Tell me it's not a rerun of your first year." said Bill.

"It's not." said Ron.

---

Third paragraph.

"I'm amazed that Hermione didn't tell anyone." said Ron.

"And how was I to explain how I know it's there and where it goes?" said Hermione.

---

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

"Not if you've got skills." said Sirius egotistically.

---

Fourth paragraph.

"That would have been a good idea for you not to go." said Remus.

---

Fifth paragraph, second sentence.
Ron blushed slightly.

End of fifth paragraph.

"Some things I don't think happened." said Harry with a smirk. "Like the one rendition where you said that you thought you were dreaming about him having a knife to my throat and waking to find it was true."

Ron blushed even more. Sirius paled.

"That frightened me when I heard that version." said McGonagall.

Dialogue set, second sentence, fifth pause.

Sirius looked slowly over to Ron with an unimpressed look.

"Sorry..." said Ron sheepishly.

Dialogue set, second sentence, sixth pause.

"Oh it wasn't twelve inches." said Sirius shaking his head.

"How long was it?" asked Remus.

"It was thirteen at least." said Sirius sending Ron a wink.

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

"Why did you run?" asked Remus.

"I didn't want to hurt anyone, just that damned bastard." said Sirius.

Sixth paragraph, second sentence.

Sirius' eyes widened and stared at Harry as Ron's mother hurried over to Ron and gripped him tightly.
"That's wrong, I know." said Harry quickly.

"If he had killed a student, there wouldn't have been anything left for the dementors." said Dumbledore calmly.

"I apologize Mr. Longbottom, you will be allowed to go into Hogsmede again, be thankful Miss Granger, that I don't take your Hogsmede visits away." said McGonagall who now knew what happened.

“Didn't you sneak out once...?” muttered Seamus.

“Shh!” said Neville quickly.

"I got caught trying give him the password, lost fifteen points to Gryffindor for it." said Harry.

"So no one told you the password at all?" said Sirius.

"He was told when everyone else was informed." said McGonagall.

"It helped with my memory, I had to work really hard to memorize the passwords." said Neville.

"Harry was pretty good about making sure I got inside before eight o'clock." said Neville.

"I hate those." said Ron.
"Good idea." said Bill.

"She used a special one, where the longer it takes you to open it the moment she sends it, the louder it gets." said Neville.

"Thanks Harry." said Neville with a faint smile.

"She was welcome to them." said Neville.

"She sounds impatient." said Mrs. McFinn.

"She's not really, she just...wanted something to eat, and it's hard to do that with a letter in her beak." said Harry.

"She was welcome to them." said Neville.

"Sorry Ron, but I heard every version yeh had." said Hagrid sheepishly.

"That's fine." said Ron with a smile.
"Neville remembered the password that night." said Harry with a smile.

"I didn't notice that, or I'd've said go ahead and tell me anyway." said Hagrid.

"It was fine." said Ron.

"I could never eat a ferret, dog form or otherwise." said Sirius.

"What do you mean, dog form?" said Mr. Diggory.

"You'll find out." said Sirius.

“Wasn’t he watching?” asked Ron. “He transformed right in front of everyone.”

"I thought they were kinda nice lookin'." said Hagrid looking confused.

Mrs. McFinn laughed a little. "I think I know what I'm making you for Christmas."

Hagrid blushed. "Yeh, don't have to Miss Holly."

"Nonsense, I'm giving a lot of people presents, in repayment of looking after my baby." said Mrs. McFinn, kissing Harry's cheek.

A few Slytherin's and Zacharias snickered loudly, but Harry only stuck his tongue out. "You're just jealous."
Dialogue set.

Fifteenth paragraph, second sentence, first comma.

"I felt ready to go out back and throw up, I felt so guilty." said Harry.

"And you did, before we left." said Ron.

"Do you do that often?" said Mrs. McFinn worriedly.

"Only when I really feel bad." said Harry.

End of fifteenth paragraph.

"We were punishing Hermione for not remembering her promise, and here we were breaking ours to Hagrid." said Ron guiltily.

Sixteenth paragraph.

"Dumbledore told me about giving you hints on cooking, still up for it?" said Harry.

"Alrigh'." said Hagrid, a smile beaming out from behind his beard.

"We can do it this weekend." said Harry, "I can't leave the castle anyway."

"Why not?" asked Mrs. McFinn.

"I was grounded." said Harry.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

"That's a sore subject." said Bill.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, fourth sentence, first comma.

"I'd say something, but I'll pass." said Harry.

"Go for it." said Bill.
"I could understand you wanting to protect me, but to not expect that we wouldn't be angry with you is idiotic. Our anger was logical." said Harry folding his arms.

Hermione opened her mouth, but closed it.

End of dialogue set.

"Which is her own fault." said George.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, first sentence.

"I didn't know she promised to keep Crookshanks in her dorm." said Hagrid.

Dialogue set, fourth sentence.

"Every teacher and Harry was telling her to drop a few subjects at least once a week." said Ron.

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

"Yeh had enough on your plate, too." said Hagrid kindly. "With a supposed killer on your heel and Quidditch, I'd of been shocked."

Dialogue set.

"But she broke her promise to us about the cat and well...gotta give her credit with the broom, but the cat was the main thing." said Ron folding his arms.

Seventeenth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

"I talk, she ignores and accuses me of only being on Ron's side." said Harry.
"That's true." said Harry.

"He was talking about you." said Ron and Hermione to each other.

"Was talkin' about the both of yeh." said Hagrid.

"So did you kids even eat?" said Mrs. McFinn.

"No, we were feeling a little too upset to eat, and after throwing up, Harry had no appetite." said Ron.

"I could barely hear him, and I was standing next to him." said Ron.

"Are you trying to get Harry expelled?" asked Sirius.

"Joke would have been on her, I would have sent the map somewhere with Hedwig and tell her to leave it somewhere safe." said Harry. "I'm glad it never went that far."

"Why is that?" asked Hermione.

"I would have never trusted you with that kind of stuff again." said Harry. “Conversations and interactions would have been taken down several pegs.”

Hermione paled.
"It was a fair statement." said Fred.

"It was bad year for you three." said George.

"The boys weren't trusting you, and you were wandering about like a high-strung annoying older sibling." said Lee to Hermione.

"Ron practiced that look, he thought that if he looked menacing enough at Crookshanks you'd take him up to your dorm and finally keep him in there." said Harry.

"Like I said, I was beginning not to trust you." said Harry

"This is worse than the first book!" she shrieked and ran out.

Harry massaged his eyes and stood up. "I'll go get her."

"No you don't. I will." said Mrs. McFinn. "Don't read on, I want to hear more about Hogsmeade."

She left the room and walked over to a portrait of a wizard riding a top a winged horse. She remembered that the portraits could talk, so she asked.

"Did you see a girl run past you?" asked Mrs. McFinn politely.

"Yes ma'am, she's in this room here." said the portrait gesturing to a room off to the left.

Mrs. McFinn walked slowly over to where the portrait pointed and then opened the door. She found herself in some sort of lounge, most likely the teachers' lounge. She saw the brown haired girl curled up in a sofa and walked over.

"Are you alright dear?" asked Mrs. McFinn sitting beside Hermione.

Hermione didn't say anything, just continued to weep.

"I don't quite know what you meant by it being like the first book, but dear you have to look at it from the boys' point of view. Ron doesn't have the disposable funds your family or Harry has. Each thing he owns he takes care of it.

"Only his brother Percy had a pet so his rat was very special to him, he may act cool and not care, but he really did." said Mrs. McFinn.
"But Harry's owl eats rats too, but Ron didn't have a fit about it." said Hermione tears streaking down.

"From what I was told, Harry trained Hedwig to not go after Scabbers, and Hedwig would normally not hesitate going after a small animal. But Harry trained him. And you did promise the both of them that Crookshanks would stay in your dorm, that wasn't fair to Scabbers that you broke that promise.

"People aren't happy with you because you didn't take responsibility with your pet, if someone were allowed to bring their dog, and it decided to chase your cat all over the place, would you be angry with the owner and the pet?" asked Mrs. McFinn.

"Of course I would, they should keep their dog away from my cat." said Hermione.

"So how can you even think that Ron doesn't have the right to be angry with you?" asked Mrs. McFinn.

Hermione looked down.

"Now come on." said Mrs. McFinn. "We all have to pay for our mistakes, it's just your turn."

"Ron and Harry don't pay for it nearly as much as I do." said Hermione grumbling.

"That's wrong. Ron has his entire family here to chastise him when he does something wrong. And Harry's already been grounded, for this weekend. And from what Sam tells me, Harry, Remus, Sam and Sirius have a sit down discussion about what was read that day, or at least when Harry wakes up the next morning, they talk about it before they come down." said Mrs. McFinn. "And Harry get's yelled at quite a bit towards the end of these books."

"All three of us do." said Hermione. "But yeah, Harry gets the worse of it."

"Want to go back now, we can continue this conversation later." said Mrs. McFinn, "I want to hear about Hogsmede, it sounds lovely."

They walked back into the Great Hall, and Hermione noticed that Ron was sitting back in their love seat again.

"Harry and I had a talk, we're sorry." said Ron quietly.

"I am too." said Hermione.

Dialogue line.

"Bet Harry didn't want Hermione to see him." muttered Fred.

Twenty-second paragraph.

Hermione crossed her arms.
"So close." said Fred.

"I didn't know!" said Neville to the laughter.

"Oh boy." said George.

"I was striking out." said Harry with a good-natured smile.

"I couldn't' catch a break." said Harry with a laugh. "And for the record, they can either eat it or smell it."

"Galleon says it's Snape." said Fred.
"I thought the bathroom would be a worse place." said Harry shrugging.

Twenty-eighth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, first sentence, first pause.

"You got me there." said Harry with a smile.

End of dialogue set.

"You can't tell them to go to their dorms and stay there on a weekend." said Remus.

Twenty-ninth paragraph.

"I didn't block my thoughts on that." said Harry shaking his head.

Thirtieth paragraph.

Thirty-first paragraph.

"Way to make sure you aren't followed." said Sirius patting Harry's back.

Thirty-second paragraph.

"Was getting worried that you never wiped the damn thing." said Sirius with a smile.

Thirty-third paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Thirty-fourth paragraph.
"Where was Hermione?" asked Mrs. Weasley.
"She was out with the girls." said Ron.

"They're so cute!" said Lavender.

"In that place? No way, they'd just go for with it." said Fred.

"I hope you didn't use any of that stuff here?" said Mrs. McFinn.
"Dudley got the Hiccup sweets." said Harry with a smirk. "And I slipped the Frog Spawn soap in the boys showers."
"And here I blamed George." said Fred.
"And I blamed you." said George.
"Who got the teacup?" asked Sirius.
"I was so proud of Harry." said Ron with a fond smile.
"Who...got...it...?" said Sirius eagerly.
"Filch." said Harry and Ron.
"I love you!" said Sirius throwing his arms around Harry.
"Acck! Don't kiss me!" shouted Harry.

"Did anyone ever live there?" asked Neville.
"That house, believe it or not, belonged to one of the descendants of the School Founders." said Dumbledore.
"He doesn't know that for a fact, it's what Dumbledore told him." said Remus to Dr. Clark.

"I sent them a medical report!" said Madam Pomfrey angrily. "And they completely disregarded my authority!"

"You vicious..." said Mrs. McFinn sourly.

"His house beats the hell out of yours. You can actually relax in it." said Harry.

"Go Harry!" said a majority of the school.
"ALRIGHT!" shouted the students loudly.

"Where's the damn Scattered Shots!" said Sirius laughing hard, "I want to see this!"

Remus slapped his knee repeatedly. "Brilliant!"

"You suck at tracking." said Fred.

"Funniest thing EVER!" said Ron twisting around in his seat from laughter.

"Oh no." said a few first years covering their eyes, as if the events were playing out right in front of them.
"I thought a ghost was taking his form and scaring us." said Malfoy.

"Good thinking Ron." said a first year.

"I started dictating my will on the way back." said Harry.

"It's a quick path, I had to play Indiana Jones in some parts." said Harry.

"Who's that?" asked Ron.

"I'll tell you about it later." said Harry.

"Get away from there!" said Sirius hissing slightly

"Harry, Harry, Harry..." said Tonks.

"There wasn't a bathroom down there!" said Harry defensively.
"Would have worked, if I could dislocate my shoulder quietly." said Harry.

"I swear, he plans that." said Professor Flitwick quietly.

"What was I supposed to say? 'Really? Let me hear it?" said Harry.

"Good luck trying to fool him." said Fred.
Snape scoffed, doubtful he's ever been innocent.

Dialogue line.

Sixty-fifth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

"I'd be concerned." said Dr. Clark.

Dialogue line.

"He's got a point." said Bill.

Dialogue line.

"It was a path, that I intended to take, and it was a trap he set." said Harry with a smirk over to Snape, who stared fixedly at him. Another compliment?

Dialogue set.

"I'm glad I didn't freak and slap you." said Harry.

What do you mean?" asked Snape.

"Uncle Vernon liked getting that close to yell at me." said Harry, "Then he'd start smacking me about."

Snape paled.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Sixty-sixth paragraph.

Dialogue set.

"Harry's not like that!” said Sirius angrily.

"Not in so many words, but maybe I am." said Harry sadly.
Snape turned to look at the boy in amazement. James never would have said that.

"You aren't like that." said Sirius tugging Harry's hair slightly.

Harry wasn't all sure. He pretty much did go where he wanted. He had been to Hogsmeade a few times before third year went around, and the second official Hogsmeade weekend he found himself somewhere he shouldn't have been. And with a supposed mass-murderer after him!

Sixty-seventh paragraph.

Dialogue set.

"Severus." said Dumbledore in a warning tone.

Dialogue set, first sentence.

"Yeah he did." said Sirius slowly.

End of dialogue set.

"You don't, no." said Remus.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

Sixty-eighth paragraph.

"Oooh..." said the students covering their eyes once again.

"Bad move." said Lee.

End of sixty-eighth paragraph.

"Calm down Harry, calm down!" said Fred gripping George tightly.

"It's not worth it!" said George gripping Fred as well.

Dialogue line.
"I couldn't believe you told him." spat Snape.

"I didn't expect you to push him so far to tell you that he knew." said Dumbledore thoughtfully.

"That doesn't sound healthy." said Luna calmly.

"Severus, if he blows up something in your office, you deserved it." said Dumbledore.

"The truth on what?" said Ron.

"That Dumbledore never told me why." said Harry.

"He was a hero. At the very least, the end of his life." said Harry shortly.

Snape scoffed.

"He told my mother to run, while he faced Voldemort." said Harry, his voice a sort of deadly calm.

Snape's smirk slowly faded.

People turned and stared at the men in the bowl.

"James didn't know about the joke, neither did Remus. It was all me." said Sirius fessing up to his mistakes.
Seventy-first paragraph.
Despite the tense situation, snorts of laughter could be heard.

Dialogue line.

Seventy-second paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Seventy-third paragraph.
"Thank god the map is blank." said Sirius.
"But how is he going to explain the bag." said Dr. Clark.
"Should have left both things behind." said Harry.

Seventy-fourth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Seventy-fifth paragraph.

Dialogue line.
"This isn't going to go well." said Fred.

Seventy-sixth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Seventy-seventh paragraph.
"NO!" shouted Fred, George, Sirius and Remus.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.
"Damn, we don't give him enough credit." said Sirius.
"And who was telling you that all throughout school?" said Remus.

Seventy-eighth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Seventy-ninth paragraph.

"Don't know what you were so worried about, if you don't know the password, you can't use it." said Sirius.

"Didn't know that." said Harry.

Dialogue line.

Eightieth paragraph.

Dialogue set, first sentence, second comma.

"Aren't you pompous?" said Sirius with a smirk.

End of dialogue set.

"I'm going to love this." said Sirius with a gleeful smile.

Eighty-first paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Eighty-second paragraph, second sentence.

"I was thinking about everything I never got to do in life." said Harry.

End of eighty-second paragraph.

Dialogue line.
Sirius smiled warmly at the memory of his old friend.

Eighty-third paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Sirius tried hard not to laugh out loud.

Eighty-fourth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

"He never was very original." said Remus.

Eighty-fifth paragraph.

"Verbal or physical?" said Dumbledore sternly.

"I was trying to prepare for both." said Harry.

"No teacher would strike you." said McGonagall. "Or any other student."

Harry sent a pointed look up at Umbridge.

"She wasn't a real teacher." said McGonagall.

Dialogue line.

Eighty-sixth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

"Not even a 'please'?" said Tonks.

Eighty-seventh paragraph.

Dialogue line.

"Do you take tranquilizers or something?" said Dr. Clark.
"He sucks at poker." said Sirius. "Always has."
"I know what that's like." said Harry shaking his head.

"You...are...amazing." said Remus with a smile.

"You're grasping at straws." said Moody shaking his head.
"That's meaning a lot coming from him." said Kingsley.

"How can you interpret looks like that and not win at poker?" said Seamus.

"Very plausible." said Dumbledore with a smile.

"I actually did." said Remus. "I'm a pretty good actor myself."
"Who told you to.." said Sirius.

"I hurried up to the castle, and heard giggling about it." said Ron.

"But who told you to talk about the Zonko bag?" asked Sirius.

"I had a feeling." said Ron shrugging.

"Good feeling." said Fred impressed.

"I wanted to thank you." said Harry.

"I was the one that lost it." said Remus.

"You really do plan ahead, don't you?" said Remus shaking his head.

"If you didn't belong to us." said Sirius quickly.
"That was the reason for telling him. To scare him to stay in the castle." said Remus.

End of dialogue set.

"Don't tell me I caused you to throw up." said Remus worriedly.

"He didn't throw up, but he did gag a lot in the bathroom." said Ron.

End of ninety-fifth paragraph.

"I wasn't in the mood to play mediator." said Harry.

End of chapter.

"With all the stuff you sent and Madam Pomfrey's report, and they still said he was dangerous? Those bastards!" said Charlie angrily.

"They don't care, if someone even accuses an animal of being dangerous, they'll kill it just to be on the safe side." growled Harry.

"Who wants to read now? Maybe we'll finish the book today!" said Ron.

"I'll read." said Hermione, taking the book from Ron.

"Fifteenth chapter." read Hermione.

“Son of a…” muttered Lee.
Thanks for reading, please review
"Wish I got to read this chapter." said Lee.

"Think of it this way, soon we'll be reading the Quidditch World Cup chapter." said Fred.

"I CALL DIBBS!" shouted Lee.

The students and adults in the Great Hall looked at Harry with worried looks.

"Still isn't." said Sirius in a whisper.

"He isn't still at Grimmauld Place is he?" asked Harry.

"Nah, he's in the stables at Night's Rest. Which reminds me, what kind of horse do you want?" he asked with a smile.

"Yeah, like I'm going to pick out a horse now." said Harry rolling his eyes.

"Alright, but you've got quite the selection." said Sirius with a smile. "The house-elves at home did a great job of keeping froggyface out of there and taking care of all of them."
Dumbledore chuckled warmly as Hermione blushed. "They do frighten easily."

"That should never be the case in an appeal." said Madam Bones shortly. "There should always have hope of getting the innocent party justice."

"What I wouldn't have given to have a camera." said Harry with a laugh. "Their first hug."

"He was never good with girls. Not even with Ginny." said Bill with a fond smile. "And that's just dealing with your sister."

"Sh-shut up." said Ron turning red.

"Way to go Hermione!" shouted one of the first years. "I knew you weren't heartless."

Hermione blushed, though she had a slight frown on her face.

"Oh, Ron." said Mrs. Weasley with tears in her eyes. "I'm so proud of you."

End of dialogue set.
"We would have, but someone beat us to it." said Mr. Weasley looking at Harry with a smile.

"Not me." said Harry with a smirk.

Fourth paragraph.

"Bout time you start thinking about the safety procedures." sneered Snape.

Fifth paragraph.

Dialogue set second sentence.

"Not your fault, those monsters should have given you a fair chance." said Tonks angrily.

End of dialogue set.

"With all the evidence I sent?" shrieked Madam Pomfrey, "They'd better hope they don't get injured or sick with my friends working at St. Mungos!"

"She's frightening when she's angry." said Mrs. McFinn with a giggle.

"Try sneaking out without her approval." said Remus and Harry together. "It's way worse."

Dialogue line.

"That was the truth too." said Harry.

Sixth paragraph.

"You know this won't be good." groaned Sirius.

Dialogue set, second sentence.

"So was a quarter of the Ministry." said Moody. "Not anymore."

End of dialogue set.

"Oh, Hagrid." said Mrs. Weasley with tears in her eyes.
Seventh paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Eighth paragraph.
"Horrible little beasts!" said Mrs. McFinn hotly. She stood up glared at the three of them in turn. "If I was your mother you'd be standing in a corner until you turn forty!"

Draco cringed while Crabbe and Goyle looked at her as if she weren't even addressing them.

“I’m amazed you didn’t say anything about paddling.” said Sirius.

“Standing in a corner worked on Harry, he never disobeyed me twice for the same thing.” said Mrs. McFinn sitting down slowly.

Dialogue line.

Ninth paragraph.

“What?” asked Fred.

Tenth paragraph, first sentence.

Hermione blushed heavily. The entire school stared at her.

"Why weren't we there?" shouted the twins loudly.

"That would have been so SWEET!" said Lee.

"Hermione you are amazing!" shouted the girl chasers.

Most of the teachers looked around to make sure no one was looking at them to quietly applaud Hermione.

End of tenth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

"I would say that I didn't want to hurt her. But I was afraid she’d rear back and smack me," said Ron. "Just cause Harry's making me run about in the morning and everything doesn't mean I like pain."
"Not before running like scared nifflers down a hole." said Harry with a smirk.

"I was sort of afraid that if I didn't beat him, you'd beat me." said Harry with a laugh.

"If you had told me what had happened, I would have completely forgiven it." said Professor Flitwick quietly.

"Where do you keep slipping off to?" asked Mr. Weasley.

"Yeah, she could have used the cheering up." said Harry.

"Now that's scary." said Fred.
“Must be the end of the world!” said George.

Dialogue line.

"Maybe we should put a permanent Cheering Charm on you." said Sirius tugging at Harry's cheek slightly.

"My face would break from all that smiling." said Harry with a smirk.

Sixteenth paragraph.

"Aw, they worry about you." said Charlie with a cute voice.

Dialogue line.

"I told him that I would be more worried about Malfoy than Hermione." said Harry.

Seventeenth paragraph.

Eighteenth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

"Settle down! Just tell the teacher your passed out in the dorms from so much work...nevermind, they'll never buy that." said Sirius.

"James tried that, never worked." said Remus.

“Then again, with you…they’d buy it.” said Sirius.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

"Harry had no clue what was going on." said Ron. “He was starting to get really really frightened.”

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.
"Listen to them and give up something!" said Angelina, "I remember that year, you looked so tired."

Dialogue set.

Nineteenth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

"I told you I'd give you a personal lesson on that following Saturday." said Professor Flitwick with a smile.

"I know, sir." said Hermione.

Twentieth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

"She always pops out of nowhere." muttered Ron.

Dialogue line.

"I have a lot of patience but when it breaks, I get testy." said Harry with a devilish smile.

“And he gets scary.” said Fred.

Dialogue set.

"That was getting annoying too." said Harry quietly.

Dialogue set.

"That's pathetic." said McGonagall, groaning quietly.

Twenty-first paragraph.

Dialogue line.

"Not often she makes us laugh." said Harry. "Quite the shock."
Twenty-second paragraph.

Dialogue set, third sentence, second dash.

"Nice Ron." said Charlie.

End of dialogue set.

Twenty-third paragraph, second sentence.

Even Dumbledore joined in the laughter that was mostly occupied by the students of the school.

End of twenty-third paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

"Not what he was talking about." said Percy.

"But highly observant." said Dumbledore.

"Not really, the crystal ball magnified the burn." said Ron honestly.

Dialogue line.

Twenty-fourth paragraph.

"Not the time to be discussing that Miss Granger." said Professor Flitwick covering his eyes.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Twenty-fifth paragraph.

"We couldn't hold it in anymore." said Harry laughing once more.

"I love it when you smile." said Mrs. McFinn hugging Harry tightly. "You're eyes grow even more shiny."
Harry blushed.

Dialogue set.

"More nonsense." said Harry

Dialogue line.

Twenty-sixth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

"I was almost ready to give it another name." said Harry rolling his eyes.

"What would that have been?" asked Sirius.

"Furry bastard." said Harry in a whisper.

"I don't like that name." pouted Sirius.

Dialogue line.

Twenty-seventh paragraph.

A few people whistled low.

"This won't turn out well." said Professor Sprout.

Dialogue set.

"Never thought that another teacher would take a leaf out of Severus' book and start insulting students." said Dumbledore rubbing his temple, "But then again, Miss Granger didn't help matters either. So, I believe both of you are at fault."

Twenty-eighth paragraph.

Dialogue set, fourth sentence.

"Harry grabbed my shirt and pulled me back." said Ron. "If you find the right table, you'll see nail marks right in the wood. He had to stop himself from flying over the table."

“I always wondered what those marks were.” said a third year Slytherin girl.
"It isn't often that I lose my celestial composure." said Professor Trelawney.

"I'm taking that to mean, 'losing my temper'." muttered Terry with a smirk.

"You never told me Pavarti said that!" said Hermione in a hiss to Ron.

"Didn't really want to ruin your day." said Ron.

"Pure luck." said McGonagall.

"And on others around you." said Snape quietly with a smirk.

"Man, you were having the worst day ever." said Remus with a sympathetic smile.

"Harry helped me a lot." said Hermione.

"How's that?" asked Dr. Clark.

"He gave me a hug." said Hermione, turning a faint shade of pink.

"Mrs. McFinn's hugs helped when I was feeling overwhelmed." said Harry shrugging. Mrs. McFinn smiled at him.
"You don't need a near-fatal anything near you." said Dr. Clark.

Thirty-fourth paragraph.

"How did you get over it?" asked Mrs. Weasley nervously.

"I woke up and half of my homework were done, I don't remember doing it." said Neville, "but it was my handwriting and it sounded like stuff I would come up with."

Sirius looked over to Harry instinctively who looked up at the ceiling and pretended not to pay attention.

"Know anything about this?" he said with a smile.

"Just that it took almost all night to learn how to write like him." said Harry looking at Sirius with an innocent expression. Then he turned to Neville. "How do you right your 'r's like that?"

Neville smiled and shrugged.

Dialogue line.

"Were you trying to start a riot?" asked Charlie.

Thirty-fifth paragraph.

"If I could have had access to her bag and could slip a sleeping potion into her tea, her homework would have at least been helped a little." said Harry scratching his head.

Thirty-sixth paragraph, first sentence.

"Good for you Ron!" said Mr. Weasley with a proud smile.

End of thirty-sixth paragraph.

"I had something else to be worried about." said Ron.

Thirty-seventh paragraph, second sentence.

"Not easy being the school's Quidditch star is it?" asked Charlie with a snigger. "I went through the same damn thing."
"I was getting ready to put a silencing charm on his mouth." said Harry.

Charlie puffed out proudly as the rest of his brothers shook their heads. "When he was in school, he never shut up." said Ginny with a giggle. “Every other conversation was about a game.”

"We'd spend every meal, glaring at each other." said Harry.

"So Harry had more reasons then you to beat you lot soundly.” said a loud Hufflepuff first year.

"Fights in this school have to be really funny to watch." said Dr. Clark. "To a certain point." said Madam Pomfrey. "Of course." said Dr. Clark quickly.

"I remember this one time," said Dean excitedly, "Harry was walking down to Charms and when a Slytherin went trip him, Harry flipped over right in midair! He even hooked his foot around the guys neck and brought him down with him and he...." He looked at Harry. "You planned that didn't you?"

"I promised myself the next person to trip me was going down with me." said Harry.
"You apologized though!" said Dean.

"If I didn't, he would have smacked me." said Harry. “And he was a super huge Slytherin.”

Fortieth paragraph, second sentence, first semi-colon, first comma.

"Like I'm scared of them." said Harry.

Knowing this time that they were being discussed, only because they heard their surnames, stood up and stalked over to Harry. Sirius leaned forward in his chair and bared his teeth, but Harry held him back.

Harry stood up and placed his hands in his pockets. "Want a handicap?" he asked the two bullies heading his way. He slowly closed his eyes.

Crabbe lunged at Harry with his fist raised, with his eyes still closed, and hands still in his pockets, he swung his leg under Crabbe and sent him crashing to the ground. Then he ducked down, dodging another blow this time by Goyle, and kicked his left cheek, sending him flying a short distance away.

They slowly came to their feet, "Round two?" he asked. The students stared at him, they noticed that he had his eyes shut and his hands in his pockets the entire time! Crabbe and Goyle scattered back to their seats.

"You took those self-defense classes Inspector Homes wanted you to take didn't you?" said Mrs. McFinn as he came back to the bowl.

"Yeah. Great stress reliever." said Harry with a smile.

Fortieth paragraph, fourth sentence, first comma.

"Well yeah! Not often we get to be security personnel." said a few sixth year boys.

Fortieth paragraph, end of fourth sentence.

"Only S-Professor Snape had an issue with it." said Harry with a smile.

Fortieth paragraph, fifth sentence.

A few adults groaned at this.
"Harry, no one other than a Gryffindor could get in there!" said Hermione.

"Nothing was stopping the Slytherin team into bullying a first year into stealing it." said Harry.

"That doesn't help the people who have homework." said Percy.

"And it did, later that night." said Harry. Sirius groaned.

"Wonder if you were having a premonition." said Professor Flitwick.

"Don't tell me he fights a dragon!" said Dr. Clark worriedly. Mrs. McFinn gasped.

"That's not good, the waking up part yes, the falling, no." said Sirius.
"Don't tell me you're going to be staying up all night again." said Madam Pomfrey shortly.

"Not really." said Harry.

Sirius chewed his lip.

"It wasn't you." said Harry. "Well, not then anyway."

"That made me feel a lot better, but it opened a few questions." said Harry.

"Nice Ron, real nice." said George.
"I was not looking forward to playing." said Draco.

"Hypocrite." said Sirius.

"My baby's growing up." said Mrs. McFinn with giggle.

"Yup." said the girls.

"It was still in our throats." said the twins.

"I think the Gryffindor supporters outweigh the Slytherins." said Dr. Clark with a smile.

"Well, boo to you too." said the twins.
"Strategy was to knock our asses out of the sky." said Fred.

"Nothing new." said the Quidditch players.

"I'm noticing something." said Dr. Clark.

"What's that, Sam?" asked Dumbledore with a bright smile.

"Harry's played against all three teams, and only the Hufflepuff team chased the Snitch on their own." said Dr. Clark. "The other two merely stalked Harry and used him to find it. Don't they have the ability to seek it out on their own?"

Cho and Draco looked nervously down at the floor.

"Sort of explains how come a game between Slytherin and Ravenclaw takes bloody forever." said Ernie.

"Sound reasoning." said Dumbledore with a smile.

"That was Fred/me." said Harry, George and Fred.

"I knew what it was thank you very much." said Angelina.
"Red Card!" shouted Dr. Clark.

Sirius and Remus stared at him.

Dr. Clark slumped back in the bowl. "Sorry, force of habit." he said meekly.

"A person, flying in the air, wearing scarlet red robes and you don't see them?" said Hermione skeptically.

"YEAH!" shouted Sirius.

"Fred!" said Mrs. Weasley.

"He deserved it!" said Fred.

Gryffindor house cheered loudly, while Slytherin house booed.

Now the roles were reversed, the Slytherins cheered and the Gryffindors booed.

The Gryffindors cheered loudly, as well as large part of the rest of the school, the other Gryffindor players applauded.
Sixty-seventh paragraph.

Dialogue set.

"It looked like he didn't catch it." said Lee.

Sixty-eighth paragraph.

Dialogue set.

"That doesn't sound good." said Mrs. McFinn.

Sixty-ninth paragraph.

"Oh my god!" said the adult women in the Great Hall.

"I gotta hand it to him, my neck wasn't hurting after that." said Katie. "Was before."

Seventieth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

"I didn't want to tell him off." said McGonagall honestly.

Seventy-first paragraph.

Seventy-second paragraph.

The twins mockingly laughed at the Slytherin team, not just Malfoy. They could tell he was making an effort to fix his own personality defects.

Seventy-third paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Seventy-fifth paragraph.
Seventy-sixth paragraph.

"That was scary." said Hermione. "I shut my eyes until it was over."

Seventy-seventh paragraph.

Seventy-eighth paragraph.

Dialogue set, fourth sentence.

"That's when I knew it was safe to look again." said Hermione with a smile.

Dialogue set, sixth sentence, second dash.

"Good luck with that." said Remus.

End of dialogue set.

Seventy-ninth paragraph.

Several people, including Lionus laughed loudly.

Dialogue line.

Eightieth paragraph, third sentence.

"Bullshit." said Sirius under his breath.

End of eightieth paragraph.

"Geez, when are you going to be fifty points up?" said Charlie. "Get the bloodbath over with."

Eighty-first paragraph.

Eighty-second paragraph, fourth sentence, first semi-colon.

"We didn't think of that." said Fred.
"Oh no..." said Mrs. McFinn covering her ears.

"Nice shot!" said Nightstrike applauding loudly.

"Bout damn time! Go get it Harry!" shouted Bill.

"I knew it! Stripping a Firebolt would slow it down!" said Charlie.

"Wasn't the broom's fault." said Harry.
"Could have injured the both of them." said Madam Hooch.

Dialogue line.

Ninetieth paragraph.

"I've never heard her use such language before." said Dumbledore with a cheeky smile to the pink Transfiguration teacher.

Ninety-first paragraph.

Dialogue line.

"Come on Harry." said Charlie through gritted teeth.

Ninety-second paragraph.

Dialogue line.

"Good boy!" shouted Sirius as he pulled Harry tight to himself.

Dialogue line.

Ninety-third paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Ninety-fourth paragraph.

"Go Harry!" said Bill.

Dialogue line.

Ninety-fifth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Ninety-sixth paragraph.

Ninety-seventh paragraph.

"Come on!" shouted several first year students.
"Fair play." said Charlie, his grip on his chair was tightened.

The entire school exploded in a loud cheer and students could be seen jumping up and down and hugging themselves. Everyone, of course, except for the Slytherins.

"His first Quidditch Cup." said McGonagall tears in her eyes.

"Yes, please don't fall off your brooms." said Madam Pomfrey.

"We just about tossed Harry into the air." said a sixth year Hufflepuff.

"I should have had a camera." said Fred.

"Now there was a scandal." said George.

End of chapter.
"With that memory, you could have destroyed them completely." said Dr. Nicodemus with an amused smile.

"I think a break is in order, with all the excitement going on." said Dumbledore. "Then one more chapter before dinner."

Chapter End Notes

Thanks for reading, please review
Harry washed his hands after using the boys bathroom and was unknowingly joined by Lionus at the sinks.

"How are you holding up, kid?" asked Lionus as he helped himself to soap.

"I'm fine, I'm not in any pain anymore and I've got a great life to look forward to now." said Harry with a bright smile.

"That's good, but I don't appreciate being lied to." said Lionus rinsing his hands off.

"I don't understand sir." said Harry looking at Lionus quickly.

"You're still in pain. I asked the Weasley boy, Ronald about your hygenic habits, and you don't take a shower every night. Perhaps every other night, but not every single night. I've also learned that you've ordered pain relieving balm, in order to use that, you need to have freshly washed skin." said Lionus sternly.

Harry looked down.

"So where are you hurting?" asked Lionus in the same stern tone.

Harry looked straight into Lionus' icy cold eyes.

"Follow me and I'll show you." said Harry.

Harry walked up to the room he shared with his guardians and turned to face Lionus. He slowly unbuttoned his shirt, after taking off his thick sweater. "I don't know where it came from, but it just won't go away."

He let the shirt fall slowly off his shoulders and onto the floor and Lionus saw large and deep slices in his body. Lionus' eyes grew large, he placed a hand on the young man's shoulder and walked slowly around. There were just as many slices into the boys skin as there was skin around the middle of his body. Immediately Lionus saw that the slices formed jagged letters.

Liar.

"You've been remembering the attack by Umbridge." said Lionus quietly.

Harry looked down, "They just come back sometimes."

"You keep thinking about it, those cuts are going to go deeper and deeper, until finally you're sliced apart." said Lionus shortly.

"Is there a way I can just forget it?" asked Harry. "Like a memory charm."
"There is and it's not a memory charm, just let it pass. Let it go. That's one knowledge you don't need, memory charms do more damage than good most of the time. Have you wondered about why it spells the word liar?"

"I wasn't focusing on the cuts, just the pain." said Harry.

"Well, I'll have Doc give you something for that. If you stop dwelling on it, the cuts will heal and it'll go away. Think about it and the cuts will come back." said Lionus.

"Will I ever get to stop worrying about it?" asked Harry as he gently put his shirt back on.

"Leave the sweater off, and just wear the button up, it'll ease the pain. You'll have to wait until five years have passed, not these books, actual days and week years, then the curse will wear off. There's no countercurse for it." said Lionus. "Let's get back to the Great Hall, I'll get a hold of Doc."

Harry followed Lionus down to the Great Hall and was met with an amusing site, Sirius was running around and asking different people where Harry was. Remus was pacing slightly but Dr. Clark and Mrs. McFinn were standing side by side, an arm around each other.

"He's a big boy now. He can go to the lavatory by himself with no problem." said Dr. Clark with a smile.

"But-But-everyone else has been back, where is he?" asked Sirius frantically.

"He's here." said Lionus. Sirius turned around quickly and saw Harry, he hurried over to the long black haired teen.

"Where were you?" asked Sirius worriedly.

"I was talking to Lionus." said Harry.

"Well...at least you were someone who could protect you." said Sirius with a sigh.

Harry shook his head and walked back to the bowl. He watched as Dr. Nicodemus dug through his pockets and handed a small bottle to Lionus. Lionus looked over to Harry and give him a swift wink.

Ernie decided he wanted to take a crack at reading a chapter.

First paragraph, first sentence.

"Oh, come on! Mine lasted at least until we actually had to sit down and take the exams!" said Charlie.

First paragraph, second sentence, third comma.

"That does sound good." said Nightstrike with a smile.

"I'd prefer wandering in the forest, to just lying about." said Tempest with an air of superiority.
Several students groaned. "I can just feel it." said Tonks with a taunting smile. "And I don't need to deal with it anymore."

Some of students were relieved, but at then, slightly horrified that even an Auror was intimidated by the exams.

"We needed to at least give it a shot, studying we mean." said Fred.

"We're smart enough, we can pass if we really want, but we just want to do what we want." said George.

"Explains your grades." said Snape with a smirk.

"And I got them." said Percy proudly.

"Describe the severe punishments." said McGonagall firmly.

"Book retrieval for him and they had to clean the entire common room, no magic." said Ron.

"Has to be a Time Turner." muttered Dr. Nicodemus.

"I know. There's no other way." said Lionus whispering back.

"What were they thinking? She's just a child." said Dr. Nicodemus. "They don't need to pile on that much strain and responsibility on a thirteen year old girl."

"She started out alright, but the strain is getting to her." said Lionus.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

"You should have hidden that schedule." said McGonagall.

"I didn't expect them to worry that much." said Hermione quietly.

“Oh, that's real nice, that is.” said Ron with a smirk.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, first sentence.

"Harry warned me, no jokes around her, or she'd bite my blooming head off." said Ron fearfully.

End of dialogue set.

“She can find me anywhere.” said Harry with a smile.

Dialogue line.

“Oh, Hagrid.” said Mrs. McFinn shaking her head.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“So really, there's no chance for an appeal...There's something wrong with that system.” said Dr. Clark with a scowl.

“Oh, it's being changed, and I'm betting that Malfoy helped it along, and Fudge did nothing to follow the laws he's supposed to uphold.” said Dr. Nicodemus.
“They have.” said the students muttering darkly.

“Good lad.” said Lionus and Moody together.

“Sadistic little bastard.” said a seventh year darkly. Draco looked down at the floor from looking at his godfather and the muscle going in and out of his cheek.

“Should have did it anyway.” said Sirius with a frown.

“We were worried something else was going to happen.” said McGonagall.

“We were exhausted.” said Dean.
“Yeah, we didn't really care, at least hers didn't turn into an iguana.” said Ernie.

“At least it makes it easy to pick up.” said Fred.

“I don’t think they do that normally.” said Dr. Clark.

“A few points, but if the rest went fine, it wasn't enough to change your grade.” said Bill.

“I had a lot on my mind.” said Harry sheepishly.

“I wasn't complaining, I had the time of my life, everything was hilarious.” said Ron.

"Three were dead." said Harry.
"Too much lettuce again?” asked Charlie.
"Either that or they died of boredom." said Harry.

End of dialogue set.

Ninth paragraph, second sentence, second comma.

"I found out later that Draco dumped a rat spleen inside when I was going to get a different ingredient." said Harry.

Draco cringed slightly.

End of ninth paragraph.

Snape looked away out of discomfort.

Tenth paragraph, first sentence, second comma.

"There wasn't a happy person in the lot." said Harry with a smirk. "Morning came way too early for some people." he sent a pointed look over to Ron.

Tenth paragraph, end of first sentence.

"Everyone was wishing that they had something cool to eat or drink." said Ron.

End of tenth paragraph.

Eleventh paragraph, first sentence.

"Best exam EVER!" said several students loudly. Remus blushed.

End of eleventh paragraph.

"That sounds like a blast! Like the military obstacle course." said Dr. Clark.

Dialogue line.
"One of the few to do so." said Remus with a smirk.

Twelfth paragraph, second sentence.
He still got a 'E' though." said Remus with a smirk.

End of twelfth paragraph.

Dialogue line.
"Scared me half to death, never heard anyone scream like that before." said Remus with a smile.

Dialogue line.

Thirteenth paragraph, first sentence.
"That's your biggest fear?" said Charlie slowly.
"Do you blame me?" said Hermione fretfully.
"Not really, no. Not with that year and that insane schedule." said Charlie quickly.

Thirteenth paragraph, third sentence, first comma.
"She giggled at my spider." said Ron sheepishly.

End of thirteenth paragraph.

Fourteenth paragraph, first sentence.
"Damn, the Appeal." said Terry.
"If you could call it that." said Harry with a low growl.

End of fourteenth paragraph.

Dialogue line.
"I wasn't too sure that I wanted to be on speaking terms with him." said Harry viciously.

"Bull, he probably wanted to make another appearance to you." said Tonks with her arms crossed.

"So they already decided?" shouted Fred.

"What the hell?" shouted George.

"Right on, Ron!" shouted a fourth year Hufflepuff.

Suddenly Harry leaned forward and began to gag.

"Are you alright?" said Mrs. McFinn worriedly.

"Fine, just...I know who that person is." said Harry clutching his stomach.

"Why is that guy fingering an axe and looking at you?" said Dr. Clark with a dark look in his eyes.

Remus' slowly began to snarl, finally his teeth were bared. "I'm going to kill him if I see him."
"Sort of explains why he was fingering it." said Sirius angrily. "He wants to slam that axe right through Harry's neck."

Several people turned pale and looked fearfully at Harry.

End of seventeenth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Moody nodded as Kingsley applauded. "Good boy."

Dialogue set, second sentence.

"What rot, if a child can't really speak his or her mind then they'll be held back with their thoughts their entire life." said Bathilda Bagshot shortly.

End of dialogue set.

"Boy, were we naïve back then." said Ron softly. Madam Bones looked down out of shame.

Eighteenth paragraph.

"Did you three eat?" asked Madam Pomfrey worriedly.

"They did." said Harry. "I don't think I did."

"You, out of all three of you, need to eat most of all." said Snape with a groan.

Nineteenth paragraph.

"How do you study for that class?" asked Mrs. McFinn.

"There isn't a right way to do it." said Harry with a smirk.

Dialogue set.

"I didn't get the answer I had hoped." said Neville with a sad smile.

"We were honest, we didn't see a blasted thing." said Harry.
"She scares each student into not divulging the secret to their first final exam." said McGonagall.

"Nice, terrifying students." said Emmeline Vance, but she blushed when Nightstrike winked at her.
"He's bold, she can be a volcano when she gets ticked." said Sirius.

"You took a long time to believe me." said Hermione smugly.

Ron and Hermione snorted quietly.

"Well, you didn't tell him what the test was like." said Blaise with a smirk.
"He told me not to, it ruins the surprise for him." said Ron.
"If you get him sick..." said Madam Pomfrey, in a slightly threatening tone to Professor Trelawny.

"You cannot force the orb to See." said Trelawney with a hint of annoyance in her voice.

"Does that rule not apply to her?" asked McGonagall with a sneer in her voice.

Harry worked hard to keep a straight face after he caught a glimpse of Professor Trelawney looking indignant.

"Nice, you are talking about a future event." said Sirius with a wink.

"Don't tell me you're going to pretend to see it chopped off." said Charlie, turning slightly green.
"How does that work? She prompting you what to say." said Lionus with a chuckle.

Dialogue line.

"From both the thought and the atmosphere." said Harry.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Ron, Hermione, Dumbledore, Hagrid and Sirius turned and stared at Harry. "And you were faking it?" said Ron in shock.

Harry shrugged. "Still got a 'D' for the exam too." said Harry with a smirk.

"That should have gotten you an 'O'." said Dumbledore in shock.

Professor Trelawney shuffled uneasily.

Twenty-ninth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Thirtieth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

"Wait, what?" said Professor Flitwick. Even McGonagall looked confused.

Dumbledore paled.

"Sibyll." said Dumbledore calmly.

"Yes sir?" said Professor Trelawney faintly.

"If I could ask it of him, I would prefer that Captain Lionus would allow you personal protection." said Dumbledore, his face still pale.

Lionus leaned over to Dr. Nicodemus for a moment, the doctor whispered quietly into his ear and he nodded.

"Of course. Wildfire?" said Lionus to the silent red-haired Ranger in the back.

"Yes, Captain?" said Wildfire coming forward.

"Stand beside her." said Lionus.

"Of course." said Wildfire, taking a position beside the confused Divination Professor.
"Didn't have my bag, and I've got nothing to help with seizures anyway." said Harry with sheepish smile.

"I don't remember doing that." said Professor Trelawney with a panic look in her eyes.
McGonagall gulped slightly. "Under the circumstances, Sybill, I apologize."
Professor Trelawney didn't quite know what to make of the situation.

"Scared the shit out of me." said Harry in a whisper to Sirius.
"Don't blame you." said Sirius with a grin.
"I thought you couldn't control what you predicted?" said McGonagall, unable to let the woman completely off the hook. Despite the now available proof that the woman was at least a part-time Seer.

"Well, Minerva, she sort of proved that when she really is doing a prediction, she has no control." said Professor Sprout kindly.

"Good work, be suspicious of any information you receive." said Moody.

"You ran right to them? And not Dumbledore?" said Mr. Weasley in shock.

"I remember the last time I needed to tell him something important, he wasn't there." said Harry shrugging.

Dumbledore looked down with a look of intense shame.

"Take a Calming Draughts, sir." said Harry with a smile.

"Oh, Hagrid." said Mrs. McFinn covering her mouth out of sympathy.

"But Harry, it's not safe for you!" said Mrs. Weasley worriedly.

"Don't care." said Harry.

“You should.” said the adults together.
"Harry!" said Bathilda, "You can't!"

"I wanted to go and be with Hagrid, nothing was going to stop me. If I didn't have the cloak I would try something else." said Harry firmly.

"At least he knew better to not go back there." said Professor Sprout quietly.

"We are such a terrible influence on her." said Harry with a bright smile.

Several people laughed loudly.

"I was finally having fun." said Hermione with a smile.
"Faked a stomach ache." said Harry.

"Harry told me later that you looking like that terrified him." said Ron.

"What do yeh mean?" asked Hagrid slightly confused.

"If you were terrified of something, he didn't want to run across it." said Ron.

"But you let them in." said Terry.

"Couldn't let them go back alone." said Hagrid, "And I guess, I wanted someone there."

"I didn't know what to do," said Harry. "I'm not really good about dealing with that. I can hardly take care of my own."

Mrs. McFinn ran her fingers through his hair.
Forty-ninth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

"I did my absolute best." said Dumbledore sadly.

Dialogue set, fourth sentence, first pause.

"He tried to threaten Viper. It was quite amusing." said Wildfire with a smirk.

"What did Viper do in retaliation?" asked Lionus with a smirk.

"He threw Malfoy through a wall. Then came about a millimeter away from biting his neck. Most entertaining thing I've seen all year." said Wildfire.

"Both of you are sadists, no wonder you work so well together." said Dr. Nicodemus shaking his head.

End of dialogue set.

Fiftieth paragraph.

"And we couldn't give it." said Harry angrily.

Dialogue line.

"Thank you Hagrid." said Dumbledore with a sympathetic smile.

Fifty-first paragraph.

Dialogue line.

"Yeah, he wasn't going to let us stay, we both knew that." said Ron.

Dialogue set.
"Suspension-like trouble." said Harry.

"At the most expulsion." said McGonagall, "If it were just out for the sake of being out."

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

"Why the hell did he decide to hide in Hagrid's?" asked George.

"Fang doesn' like Crookshanks." said Hagrid. "He never came in the house."

Dialogue line.

"Probably didn't like Hagrid's food." said Ron with a smirk.

Dialogue line.

"Check please, time to go." said Sirius quickly.

Dialogue line.

"I swear Albus, you walk faster than any man your age I've ever seen." said Bathilda with a smile.

Dialogue line.
"I...uh..." said Hagrid stuttering and looking at Dumbledore.

"Quite alright, thankfully, nothing tragic happened that night." said Dumbledore, though he ended his statement with a stern tone.

"We couldn't...not seeing him there, alive and everything...and then he'd be gone." said Ron.

"They should have had the students testify." said Madam Bones with a growl.

"I don't think anyone with any decency to them could." said Dr. Clark.
"What's the hold up?" asked Bill.

"He didn't want to get caught, he knew I was nearby." said Sirius with a cruel smile.

"Scabbers just wanted to get somewhere safe." said Remus quietly.

The entire school went silent. Over half of the students knew what had happened that year, but it was still hard to hear about it.

"Harry was muttering something, he was plotting revenge, his plans got really scary." said Ron.

"If it had gone past forty-eight hours, I would have made Fudge regret what he did." said Harry darkly.

"Though no one may be in the mood to eat, I think we may have to give it a chance." said Dumbledore.

Then the table of food came back into the Great Hall, people slowly moved towards the table, but they only a small amount of food each.

Harry brought up one of his legs and rested his head on one knee.
"You okay?" asked Dr. Clark.

"Just a little tired. It's been a long day." said Harry.

Lionus looked swiftly over to Harry and motioned over to him. Harry stood up and walked slowly over to Lionus.

"Here you go." said Lionus holding up a small bottle.

"What's that?" asked Harry.

"Pain reliever, and a balm for the cuts. Like I said, try and let it go." said Lionus.

"I'll try." said Harry quietly.

"Harry!" said Romilda, who seemed to come almost out of nowhere, threw her arms around Harry's middle tightly and squeezed. "Want to eat with me?"

"ARRRGH!" cried Harry out loud.

Lionus reached up and yanked Romilda's arms off his scars and cradled Harry's gasping form in his arms. "Breathe through it, come on, breathe, that's it. Good boy." said Lionus soothingly.

"What's going on?" asked Sirius quickly hurrying over with the rest of the people from the bowl, and Rudolph and Leroy behind them. They hadn't been there for a while, taking a slight break from the readings.

"We go away for one day and we come back to him on the ground." said Rudolph with a grievous look.

Lionus ripped Harrys' shirt open, to reveal the scars, everyone gasped loudly and took a giant step back.

"What happened?" said Remus in a strangled voice.

Lionus gave a fleeting look over to Umbridge, he grabbed the cloaks of the two Marauders. "She'll get hers."

Lionus gently rubbed the balm into the wounds on the young man's body and continued to try and ease boy's suffering. Soon Harry stopped panting.

"You alright son?" asked Dr. Nicodemus.

"Yeah, I'm fine." said Harry groaning slightly.

"Harry, I begged you not to remember what had happened." said Dumbledore, tears in his eyes.

"I'm sorry." said Harry quietly. "It just...kept coming back, just in passing, I hardly think about it."

Lionus picked Harry up and carried him over to the bowl. Mrs. McFinn sat down and held out her arms, instructing Lionus to place Harry's head over her lap. Harry was laid across the laps of the different people in the bowl.

"I'm fine." said Harry tiredly.

"Of course you are." said Mrs. McFinn. "Now you just relax sweetheart."
After the large meal, that no one could really eat, they decided to continue on.

"Who'll read now?" asked Ernie.

"Pass it down here." said Hannah.

She took the book in hand and read aloud.

"Chapter Seventeen"

"The books coming to a close." said Ron with a smile.

Chapter End Notes

Thanks for reading, please review
"After this I believe will end it for today." said Dumbledore sending Harry a quick glance, eyes full of worry.

"I'll be alright sir." said Harry.

"That does not change my decision." said Dumbledore kindly.

First paragraph, second sentence.

"Our second taste of injustice." said Harry thoughtfully.

First paragraph, third sentence.

Mrs. McFinn kissed Harry's forehead. "It'll be alright."

Harry allowed her to hold him, he didn't remind her that this happened a long time ago.

End of first paragraph.

Dialogue line.

"You need to save some of that comfort and worry for yourself." said Snape shortly.

Dialogue line.

"Ron's the voice of reason?" said Percy in shock.

"He does it a lot." said Harry thoughtfully.

"Well, when something really upsets Harry, he wants to do stupid stuff, if I can, I stop it." said Ron shrugging.
"For example?" asked Sirius quickly.

"End of last year, he wanted to go and find You-Know-Who, and try and avenge Cedric." said Ron sheepishly.

"Why would you do such a foolish thing? You got away by mere chance!" spat Snape.

"Cause no one was giving a damn on how he died, they were going to let him wander around unchecked." said Harry angrily. "I wanted to bring his head on a platter to show everyone that it wasn’t an accident!"

Several people stared at Harry in shock. They never realized that Cedric's honor meant so much to him.

Second paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Third paragraph, second sentence.

Some of the grown-ups looked over at the three children with a look of pity.

End of third paragraph.

"Wow, they were right mate, you should write poetry." said Ron.

Dialogue set.

"What? He's never bitten anyone before!" said Percy.

"Except for Goyle." said Fred.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Fourth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

"He could smell me and the kitty." said Sirius with a vicious smile.
"Quit it, you'll scare Harry." said Remus with a smirk.

"Harry scared, that's something no one wants to see." said Neville.

"Why do you say that?" asked Zacharias.

"Then we're all done for." said Dean with a smirk.

Fifth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

I didn't want a repeat performance, just when Ron and I made up." said Hermione.

Sixth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Seventh paragraph.

"Now look who's being stupid." said Harry.

"Shut up." said Ron.

Dialogue line.

Eighth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

"That's going to attract attention." said Hannah.

Ninth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Tenth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

"I wonder how it was that we didn't hear all that shouting." said Dumbledore calmly.

"I was talking a bit loud, cause of...the way I was feelin'." said Hagrid, trying not to ruin the book for the younger ones.
"You make me sound really cool." said Sirius.
"Takes more than me to make you look cool." said Harry nudging Sirius with his knee.
Snape sniggered quietly.
"You're asking for it." said Sirius.
"I'm just waiting for that smack." said Harry with a cheeky grin.
Sirius blinked. "I'm not going to hurt you." he said fretfully.
"I know, but I'm seeing how far I can go without it." said Harry.
Sirius tapped the back of Harry's head, not too light, but not hard enough to hurt his godson. "How's that?" said Sirius.
"That'll do." said Harry with a smirk as he rubbed the backside of his skull against the cushion of the bowl-like chair.

"You jumped him?" said Remus.
Sirius' mouth hung open. "I forgot that happened. I'm so sorry," said Sirius, he looked around at the three teenagers worriedly, but mostly he focused on Harry.
Harry sat up and leaned over to rest on his shoulder. Mrs. Mcfinn smiled at how concerned her little baby was.

Sirius clenched his hands into fists and shut his eyes tightly. Harry leaned even heavier into Sirius' shoulder. "I'm fine, it's alright." said Harry softly. "You just startled me."

Remus turned to stare at Sirius, he would've shouted at Sirius for aiming at Harry, but he saw that Sirius was in no shape to be scolded now.
Sirius was breathing fast and his eyes were squeezed even tighter. Harry took the Calming Draught that Dumbledore handed him and tried to coax Sirius to drink it.

"Come on, Sirius, drink this." said Harry softly.

"I could've...I would've hurt him." said Sirius weakly. "Just...wanted him...tree..."

Harry stood up quickly and yanked Sirius out of the bowl and pulled him into a hug. Sirius' eyes snapped open and saw Harry hugging him tight. "I'm fine, Ron's fine, you didn't mean to," said Harry as he held Sirius close to him. He pulled away from Sirius after a short while and held up a phial of Calming Draught.

"Now drink this and settle down." said Harry with a smile.

"Do you want one of us to continue?" asked Nightstrike to Hannah who was turning slowly whiter and whiter.

"Yes please." said Hannah quickly as she handed Nightstrike the book.

End of fourteenth paragraph.

"Explains that bald patch you wanted me to fix up for you." said Remus with a smirk.

"Oh, shut up." said Sirius with a calm smile. Thank Merlin for Calming Draughts.

Fifteenth paragraph.

Sixteenth paragraph.

The people in the bowl turned at stared at Harry.

"Well, that explains who you got that slice above your eye." said Madam Pomfrey disapprovingly.

Dialogue line.

Seventeenth paragraph.

"Bad place to end up." said Blaise cringing in his seat.

"No kidding, remember what happened last year's book?" said Draco shaking his head.

Eighteenth paragraph.

"Sorry about that." said Sirius.

Ron shrugged, "I was fine later, nothing lasting."
But Mrs. Weasley didn't look all that happy.

"Thank god for that Claming Draught, or I'd be scared out of my mind." said Sirius looking at Mrs. Weasley.

Dialogue line.

"Don't say lethal again, when it pertains to you." said Dr. Clark with a pale face.

Nineteenth paragraph.

Suddenly a bolt of red light came shooting from where Mrs. Weasley was sitting and headed straight for Sirius. Harry sat up quickly and leaned forward in the seat, directly in the path of the spell. Remus casted a shield charm and stopped the spell midair.

"Molly, please refrain from attacking anyone." said Dumbledore sternly as he walked over and took her wand away. "You'll get this back later."

"But he...!" said Mrs. Weasley angrily.

"He didn't do intentionally." said Dumbledore, "I think he's more than paid for whatever happens with his time in Azkaban."

"Better give her a Calming Draught." said Mr. Weasley quietly. to Dumbledore.

Sirius pulled Harry back into the seat. "Don't do that again, you've been hurt enough." said Sirius.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

"He has a point, if that had really been a dog, Ron wouldn't have lasted very long." said Charlie his fingernails digging into the wood of the chair he was sitting in.

Dialogue line.

Twentieth paragraph.

Dialogue set.

"Harry was flipping around and avoiding all the branches, I was too afraid for Ron to be amazed by it." said Hermione.

That was sort of why I dragged whoever I could down the hole." said Sirius with a calm smile.
"What the hell?" asked George.

"Sorry about that." said Hermione.

"It was fine, it was only cause a limb struck me there earlier." said Harry.

"That made me think he got hit in the head too hard." said Hermione with a weak laugh.

"How the hell would Harry know?" asked Ernie.

"Cause I studied the map." said Harry. "When I still had it."

"Where could it lead to in Hogsmeade?" asked a first year Ravenclaw.

"Maybe it leads to the Three Broomsticks?" asked her friend.

"I couldn't hardly keep sight of you." said Hermione.
"Well at least you were prepared, little late though." said Moody shaking his head.

"If I'm going to be living with you guys..." said Remus in a whisper.

"I'm setting up a part of the basement for you." said Sirius with a smile. "And I'll keep you company, like old times."

"Knowing Harry, he came to that conclusion too." said Dr. Clark with a faint smile.

"Nice, good boy." said Lionus with a smile.

"I'm not all that great under pressure." said Hermione.

"Thank goodness you weren't with us in the Chamber." said Ron.

"That would be my broken leg." said Ron.
"Arrg, quit being dramatic." said Fred.

"I warned you, I'm a Drama King." said Harry with a smile.

"That door was locked too." said Ron.

"Why was he on the floor?" asked Mrs. Weasley, tears streaming down his face.

"I put him on the bed, he just fell off and before I could get him up, I heard noises from downstairs." said Sirius.

"Survey the damn room!" shouted Moody.

"Here was the 'oh crap' moment." said Harry.

"You aren't going to like what you hear." said Harry with a smirk.
Sirius gave a slight whimper and tugged at his long locks.

His bottom lip began to quiver slightly, as if he were about to start crying.

"His ego is taking one hell of a beating." said Remus.

I don't look like that anymore." said Sirius whimpering.

"You look better now." said Mrs. McFinn.

"If you say so." said Snape with a sneer.

"You know, for someone who loves Harry like a son, you have a funny way of showing it." said Tonks, she wasn't even meaning to be funny.

"I was just...happy...to see him." said Sirius.

"You sound like a stalker nut." said Tonks.

"Hadn't spoken much in thirteen years." said Sirius.

"And you want him to believe you're innocent?" said Professor Sprout.

"I didn't mean it like that!" said Sirius.

"There's really no other way to take it!" said Professor Flitwick.
"I still have nightmares about that look." said Sirius almost silently. "His eyes, just the look in his eyes were enough to kill me."

He looked at Remus. "Can I go and come back later?"

"I think you'd better stay and explain why you did what you did." said Remus shaking his head.

"Oh, Ron...." said Mrs. Weasley worriedly.

"In hindsight, it was concern." said Harry quietly.

"You don't act as insane as you do here." said Mrs. McFinn.

"Dumbledore and Remus helped with that. That and a nice vacation." said Sirius with a smirk.

"If Black was going to kill Potter, being quiet wouldn't change a thing," said Dr. Nicodemus.
over the floor. Harry pulled his hair back and rubbed the back of his godfather until everything that was in Sirius' stomach came out and was magicked away.

"I know, I know." said Harry soothingly. He pulled Sirius slowly back into the bowl, he took on the role of comforter. "I was wrong, I was completely wrong."

Finally Harry got Sirius to calm down. Though Sirius was still whimpering, he rested his head against Harry's chest, trying to steady his breath.

Forty-third paragraph, first sentence, first dash.

"It was you doing something suicidal." said Sirius, ever so quietly.

End of forty-third paragraph.

"For a kid, you knew how to hit something pretty good." he added with a dry chuckle.

Forty-fourth paragraph, first sentence, third semi-colon.

"Accident, I swear." said Sirius.

"I know, I know." said Harry soothing the distraught man.

"Where did you learn to calm people like that?" asked Draco in shock.

Harry nodded over to Mrs. McFinn, who was pouring Sirius a strong cup of tea.

End of forty-fourth paragraph.

Forty-fifth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Forty-sixth paragraph.

"I lost my mind, I thought I'd never get another chance at Peter." said Sirius frantically.

"I've been choked before, I'm used to it." said Harry. Sirius looked up at him, without saying a word, asking the obvious question.

"Uncle Vernon. Now keep trying to calm down." said Harry.

Sirius looked even more grief stricken than before.
"You go girl!" shouted Angelina, Alicia, Katie, and Ginny.

"Who's pet is Crookshanks again?" said Fred, his hands covering his ears out of fear.

"I didn't care at the time." said Ron.

"I wouldn't have ever blamed you." said Sirius weakly.

"But I would have blamed myself, for not knowing the truth." said Harry.
Lionus looked down, his eyes held a sort of far-away look.

"He is like you. You couldn't wait to find the man that took your Grandfather away." said Dr. Nicodemus.

"I never met with him during that time. Or it wouldn't have turned out well for that man." said Lionus thinking deeply.

"Doesn't sound like you wouldn't blame him." said Zacharias with a sneer.

"You talk like that for the rest of the book and I'm going to make you wish you had never heard of these books." said Harry as he glared fiercely over to annoying Hufflepuff.

Dumbledore gave heartbroken sigh. "The most terrible of powers, I doubt there isn't a child on earth that wouldn't want to avenge the loss of his or her mother or father."

"Or a parent losing a child." said Madam Bones looking over to the Diggorys.

"I didn't know what Crookshanks was playing at." said Hermione. "I thought I was going to lose him."

Harry hung his head in shame.

Sirius leaned into Harry, they offered each other comfort, and both took all the other could give.
"I couldn't do it. Something just screamed at me not to." said Harry with a cryptic smile.

"Let me guess." said Harry to Moody from Sirius' arms. "We didn't know if it were someone to help us or him."

"That was Crazy Harry talking." said Harry with a smirk.

"They caught me better than any Auror would have." said Sirius with a sneer.

"I didn't quite know why he did that." said Ron.

"But your soul saved you." said Dumbledore with a fond smile.

"I'm glad it did." said Harry.
"I could hardly believe it, you believed me." said Sirius with a smile to Remus.

"Thank goodness you told us what happened before, or we'd be completely lost." said Lee.

"That's what happened with us." said Harry. "We were lost as hell."

"I'll admit it, I never felt so betrayed before in my life." said Harry.

Remus and Sirius looked down in guilt.

"Not when she gets rolling she won't." said Harry.
"Thought I could trust people in this world, and it seemed to be that I just kept getting screwed." said Harry.

"So Harry already knew that you were a werewolf?" asked Terry.

"I couldn't bring myself to think it." said Remus.

"Hiding from the truth won't make it any easier." said Remus.

"I'm really REALLY sorry." said Ron.

"That's okay, that opinion didn't last long." said Remus with a smile.

"Yeah, but just think, I acted like her." said Ron pointing up to Umbridge and gagged.
"That's what he aimed for." said Remus with a smile.

"Go figure." said Lavender with a smile.

"Harry knew too, but he didn't act smug about the knowledge. Hell, he didn't even let on that he knew something like that." said Dean.

"And I and McGonagall would have been extremely cross with you." said Dumbledore.

Hermione looked down.

"We try to give everyone the chance to go to school, AND to teach." said McGonagall.

"No, I'm just an employer trying to hire anyone qualified to teacher. Regardless of affliction or parentage." said Dumbledore.

"I was fine." said Professor Sprout.

"I fully supported you." said Professor Flitwick.

"As did we." said Professor McGonagall and Madam Hooch.

The rest of the staff, except for Hagrid shuffled their feet.

"I only hoped yeh wouldn't be playin' pranks again." said Hagrid with a smile.
"I thought," said Sirius from Harry's shoulder. "That I lost any hope of you loving me. I just about went mad again."

"That was stupid, the way the boy was shouting, what was stopping him from blasting the both of you into oblivion out of pure emotion?" said Kingsley.

"I trusted him." said Remus, "It was important that he trusted me again."

"Hey, take it easy! I don't know all the answers here!" said Harry with a playful smile.

"Smug son of a..." said Ron.

"Ron!" said Mr. Weasley.

"That's nice." said Remus with a laugh.
"Hey! I'm going through some trauma here!" said Harry.

"My patience was shot." said Harry.

"After all that, I'd be shocked that he would let you have his pet." said Theodore Nott.

"Wow." said Theodore.
"Everything." said the two Mauraders, Ron, Hermione and Harry.

"These plot twists are going to drive me nuts." said George.

"That's all for today I think." said Dumbledore with a smile.

"But we just found out..." said a second year.

Dumbledore looked at his watch. "It's eight-fifty right now. I don't think we will get done in ten minutes."

Several students groaned but stood up and slowly made their way out of the Great Hall.

Sirius, Remus, Leroy, Rudolph, Mrs. McFinn, Dr. Clark and Harry lounged casually in their own quarters. Sirius and Harry were laying on the couch resting gently against each other. After the last chapter, they clung to each other tightly. Sirius needed Harry's support, and Harry wasn't going to go without either.

"So where did you guys go?" asked Sirius as he held onto Harry's almost sleeping form.

"We sort of went on a date." said Rudolph with a smile.

"And you didn't want to learn what was going on with your Great-Nephew?" asked Dr. Clark in shock.

"We're still feeling a bit guilty about not being there for him as a baby." said Leroy. "We were trying to come up with a way to make it up to him."

"You don't need too." said Harry from the couch.

"Stay out of this." said Rudolph with a smile. "We came up with something really good. When you graduate from school, we're taking you on a trip."

"Trip to where?" asked Harry sitting up carefully.

"Around the world." said Leroy with a smile. "You, me and Rudolph. That way, we can get to know the real you, not the restrained one."

"These books are fine and all, but we want to know about you, from you." said Rudolph. "We aren't leaving, but we just wanted to plan ahead something really special for you."

"You sure we can?" asked Harry.

"What's stopping us? Money? We have so much money we could go around the world a thousand times without difficulty." said Leroy with a smirk. "Once you graduate, and turn seventeen, we're off."

"So I don't get to see Harry for a whole year?" asked Sirius.

"Oh come on! You got him a Firebolt! We want to take him on a trip." said Leroy

"What do you think, Harry?" asked Remus looking up from his book.

Harry looked up to Sirius. "If Sirius wants to come, can he?" asked Harry softly.

"I was only kidding around Cub. Your dad went on a trip with your uncles when he graduated, and he went alone." said Sirius with a cheeky grin.

"You're a nut." said Harry shoving Sirius away. "I need to go and put the salve on." he stood up and walked into the bedroom.

"Need help, sweetheart?" asked Mrs. McFinn.

Harry looked at her and placed a hand round his own side.

"I saw your lacerations, honey. I've handled bullet wounds before." she said standing up and followed Harry into the bedroom. Sirius made to stand up.

"Let her go." said Remus. "She's missed out."

In the bedroom, after Harry took care of the frontal wounds himself, he laid face down on his bed and allowed Mrs. McFinn to rub the balm gently on his back.

"Is it feeling better?" asked Mrs. Mcfinn as she rubbed the salve gently into Harry's wounds.

"Yeah, this stuff works pretty good." said Harry sighing with relief.

Once she was done, she placed a clean piece of linen on his back, then she covered it with the fluffy blanket.

"Goodnight dear." said Mrs. McFinn kissing his forehead.

"Night." said Harry tiredly.

Chapter End Notes

Thanks for reading, please review
Harry got up early the next morning and stretched carefully. He looked outside, and saw that the dawn had just decided to rise and awaken with him, showering the school with light. He looked over to Sirius in the next bed and saw he was curled up in a tight ball. Harry picked Sirius' blanket up off the floor tucked his godfather in. Sirius clutched at the blankets and muttered quietly in his sleep.

"No, Harry, don't hate me, I'm sorry, please!" he moaned softly. Harry looked pitifully down at his godfather, and placed a small kiss on his temple. Sirius stopped moaning and settled back into what Harry hoped were pleasant dreams.

After he changed into a loose shirt and loose pants, he crept slowly out of the room and out into the corridor, down into the Entrance Hall and out the doors. He breathed in the sharp fall, morning air deeply and smiled.

I've missed mornings like this. thought Harry with a happy smile. He looked around and saw the lake a distance away. He kneeled down, on foot underneath him and the other one back behind him. He took out a small watch and waited for it the second hand to reach the twelve.

5...4...3...2...1...GO! He took off like a shot, running pell mell down to the lake as fast as his legs could carry him. In seconds he reached the lake. He took the watch out again and looked at the time.

"Ugh, eight seconds, used to be five." said Harry. "That's what I get for not doing this every morning."

"That's nothing unusual." said a voice. "You haven't been running around like you used to."

"Though you do still hold quite a bit of speed." said another voice.

Harry turned and saw Tempest and Nightstrike standing beside a tree.

"O-oh, hey...what are you guys doing here?" asked Harry, then he looked around, "Where's Umbridge? Aren't you supposed to be guarding her?"

"It's Viper's shift." said Nightstrike with a smirk, "Our day off."

"Then what are you guys doing out here?" said Harry repeating his question.

"Though it is our day off, our Captain's orders are absolute, we have to protect you." said Tempest.

"Oh..." said Harry. "I...uh...thanks. Um...I'm going to just run around a bit." he said sheepishly.
"Unless you want me to go back to the castle."
"Nah, exercise is important for a kid. Run around all you like, all day if you want. They don't need to read the next chapter." said Nighstrike.

Harry laughed, turned and picked out a target and ran towards it as fast as he could once more.

"Weren't you wishing just last night you could read ahead and find out what happened?" said Tempest with a smirk.

"Like you wouldn't love to know how the kid gets out of it. What I love is the outer battle." said Nightstrike with a smile.

"The one between that Auror and Captain Lionus? I find it entertaining as well." said Tempest with a whinnying laugh.

"What do the stars say, about what job he'll have." said Nightstrike curiously.

"They do not say, it seems that he even has the stars ready to alter their course for him." said Tempest with a smile.

"ARRGH!" shouted Harry from out in the distance. Both Rangers turned swiftly and saw Harry sitting on the ground and clasping his ankle with both hands.

Tempest galloped over to him as fast as she could, while Nightstrike switched from running on two legs to down on all fours like a wolf.

"Stupid...damn...same..effing hole!" growled Harry as he closed his eyes.

Tempest looked at the ankle. "We'll need either your Madam Pomfrey or Dr. Nicodemus."

"Hagrid's closer." said Harry. "Can we go to him?"

"I personally would rather..." said Nightstrike.

"Madam Pomfrey would keep me in bed and never let me go running again. Sirius would freak out if your Doctor did something...weird again." said Harry quickly. "Hagrid knows what to do, please!"

"What do you think?" asked Nightstrike.

"Those other children said that he knew Centaur healing skills, he'd be better off with it." said Tempest. "Put him on my back."

Nightstirke picked Harry up carefully and ran beside Tempest as she bore him carefully to Hagrid's hut.

When they reached the hut, Nightstrike knocked hard on the door. Inside they could hear loud booming barks.

"Down Fang...who the ruddy hell could it be at this hour?" said a gruff voice from inside.

Hagrid opened the door and saw two of the Rangers, with Harry on the back of one of them.

"What the...?" said Hagrid.

"Same stupid hole." said Harry through gritted teeth.
"And here we thought you had a good memory." said Hagrid with a sympathetic smile as he picked up Harry and carried him into the hut.

"I thought so too, I could've lived without this proof though." said Harry as he was laid carefully on the bed.

Nightstrike came walking in and was met with a large, drooling boarhound.

"My grandma, what a large nose you have." said Nightstrike with a smirk as he patted Fang's head.

"Down Fang." said Hagrid absently as he wrapped Harry's ankle in a soppy wet bandage.

"Ah, you use a lily water remedy." said Tempest standing beside the door.

"Works best." said Hagrid turning to address her and then back to Harry. "How's that Harry?"

"Feels a lot better, thanks Hagrid." said Harry heaving a sigh.

"You wanna cuppa tea, Harry?" asked Hagrid.

"Sure thing Hagrid." yawned Harry. "That's the second time that that stuff puts me to sleep."

"Is it supposed to?" asked Nightstrike to Tempest.

"I've never heard it to do so." said Tempest, "But it is a relaxing scent."

Hagrid came back with a cup of tea, but the three people noticed that a cup of tea wouldn't do him any good now.

He was fast asleep.

A few hours later, everyone gathered in the Great Hall. Sirius and the rest of them grabbed a plate and sat in the bowl.

"Where's Harry?" asked Mrs. McFinn. "He wasn't sleeping when I went in to check on him."

"He might be down in the kitchens." said Sirius.

"I hope so, it's been a while since he's cooked anything. Hope he makes those cookies again." said Remus with a broad smile.

Hagrid came in the door with Harry right beside him, Harry was limping slightly.

"Harry what happened?" asked Dr. Clark standing up and hurrying over to him.

"Fell in a gnome hole, same stupid hole as before." said Harry, with a shameful smirk to Ron and Hermione.

Dr. Clark knelt down to Harry's foot and gently peeled Harry's shoe and sock off, Hagrid pulled Harry back carefully so that he leaned completely against Hagrid's unmovable mass.

"Sorry sir." said Nightstrike to Lionus.

"We did not follow your orders." said Tempest.

"Boys get hurt, there isn't a thing you can do about it." said Lionus. "It's the grievous and mortal wounds I want you to deter away from him."
"You did a great job, Hagrid, we just need to keep the foot elevated and he'll be fine." said Dr. Clark with a smile.

"Thanks." said Hagrid.

Dr. Clark walked Harry over to the bowl, but Harry stopped. "Can we use a footrest? No offense, but I don't want anyone touching that foot right now."

"Don't blame you." said Remus. "Let's see." He waved his wand and a fluffy foot rest bounced on the ground. Harry sat in the middle of the bowl and placed his foot gently on the footrest. He sighed in relief.

"That feels great." said Harry with a pleased smile.

"Want to eat something?" asked Mrs. McFinn earnestly.

"Can I have some scrambled eggs, bacon, potatoes, fried tomatoes and some scones?" asked Harry quickly.

Remus stared at him.

"I'm hungry." said Harry sheepishly.

"I'll go get it." said Sirius with a smile.

After Harry had finished his large plate of food, Lionus decided that the time had come for him to read again.

"Eighteenth chapter." said Lionus.

"The greatest pranksters ever!" shouted Fred happily.

"Minus the rat." said George.

First paragraph, first sentence.

"What was the statement again?" asked Sirius.

"That Peter was alive." said Dumbledore.

"Oh yeah...hey! That wasn't absurd!" said Sirius.

End of first paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.
"I hate being reminded of that day." said Sirius.

Dialogue set, first sentence, third comma.

"They're pearly white now." said Remus before Sirius could ask.

End of dialogue set.

Second paragraph.

"Sorry about that." said Sirius.

"I'd say it was okay, but that hurt like hell." said Ron. "But I forgive you."

Dialogue line.

"That would be a great idea." said Fred.

"'Ron, the reason why we have to kill your rat,'" said George.

"'Is because he's actually a mass-murderer, disguised as a rat.'" said Fred.

"You know, if there was no such thing as an animagus, that would be hilarious to you guys." said Dr. Clark with a smile after he and Mrs. McFinn laughed.

Dialogue set.

"Didn't you notice anything odd about that?" asked Lionus.

"It was slowly dawning on me." said Ron.

Dialogue set.

"I owe you a lot." said Sirius to Harry.

"You owe me not one thing." said Harry.

"Yeah I do, no arguing." said Sirius.

Third paragraph.

"'Harry.'" said Remus. "That's the magic word that can either calm him down, or fire him right up."
"Fire him up?" asked Harry.

"Remember when we came to get you this past summer, he wanted to come with. I had to knock him out just to get out of the house." said Remus.

"I didn't quite like that." said Sirius with a pout.

Dialogue set.

"So you would have sacrificed Harry for your revenge?" said Zacharias.

The entire Hall went quiet, Sirius gulped loudly. Harry reached into his bag, brought out a small cylinder and jerked it hard. A long stick appeared, Harry stood up and leaned on it heavily.

"Ankle or no ankle." growled Harry. He hobbled as fast as he could over to the Hufflepuff, Zacharias looked bewildered. He finally realized that Harry coming at him with that look on his face was not a good thing. But it was too late, Harry slammed the stick down jumped off his good foot and with that same foot, he kicked Zacharias square in the jaw.

Zacharias flew through the air and landed with a crash towards the far corner.

Madam Pomfrey hurried over to the fallen Hufflepuff, who began to sit up groggily.

Harry hobbled back to where the bowl was and sat carefully down, placing his foot on the ottoman.

"Keep your mouth shut." snarled Harry.

"He was right though." whimpered Sirius.

"Don't care." said Harry with a growl.

Dialogue line.

"Good luck doing that with a broken leg, Harry can barely do it with a sprain." said Terry.

Fourth paragraph.

"Which meant me too." said Ron.

"My aim is better than that." said Remus with a smile.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, second sentence.

"Sorry, I wasn't exactly kind about shoving you down on there." said Harry.

"You were stressing with your own problems." said Ron.
"At least Potter's keeping calm and asking the important questions." said Moody.

"That has to be a lot for a bunch of kids to take in." said Tonks.

"That was the part that really bugged me. How could you go along with the story, if you hadn't met him before?" said Harry. "That made me think that you met with him at some point, but you never could."

"No, I never met with him." said Remus. "The map never showed you that I met with anyone outside school."

"No, pretty much you kept you your quarters, or you were in the teachers lounge, Dumbledore's office or classroom." said Harry. "You're pretty much a schedule freak, I could almost set a watch to your day."

"You stalking a teacher?" asked Sirius with a smirk.

"I thought he was interesting." said Harry with a blush.

"I knew what I was talking about." said Remus with kind smile.

"You may not be a skilled Legimens, but you sure do know what people are thinking when they talk." said Bill.

"Some people yeah, others? Not so much." said Harry.
"Thanks for taking my revenge so lightly." said Sirius with a smirk.

"There's a shock." said Neville with a smile.

"I thought those were private?" said Charlie.

"Not anymore, the Ministry decided to make those public, someone else tried making another list public." said Remus with a frown towards the restrained Umbridge. Umbridge wasn't paying much attention, she was too focused on Viper who would not stop glaring at her.

"I didn't look up that list for any homework, for fun yeah." said Harry. "Homework, not so much."

"It's like waiting for that blasted toaster, each minute feels like an eternity." said Sirius.

"Explains why your toast is still white when you eat it." said Harry.

"You stalking my breakfast now?" said Sirius with a laugh.

"Only cause you tried setting the kitchen on fire at Headquarters." said Harry. "So instead of stalking it, I'm saving it."

"What the hell?" asked Fred.
Harry and Dumbledore sent a glare over to Snape, who cringed.

"Poor Professor Lupin." said Luna.

"I was used to it at that point." said Remus.

"You can't get used to pain, you can build a tolerance for it, but you never get used to it." said Harry thoughtfully.

People turned to stare at him, Mrs. McFinn whimpered and laid her head carefully on his shoulder.

"You're werewolf affliction is no fault of your own." said Dumbledore.

"He's right, you handled your monthly transformations wonderfully." said Madam Pomfrey.

"So there's a cure now?" asked Colin.

"There's an experimental cure that a werewolf victim can take, however, it's very dangerous and very expensive." said Harry calmly. "There's not even definite proof that it works, but desperate people still shell out the money to get it. Ninety percent of the people that take it, don't live past five days." said Harry.

"What about the ten percent left over?" asked Fred.

"They don't transform, but it doesn't matter anyway, they're bodies are so beyond repair that they cannot even regain consciousness," said Harry. "Victims have a choice; they can live with the bite, or risk it all on a rigged game."

Remus looked at Harry curiously. "You saying it's not a cure?"

"It's highly unlikely. There's been cases before where someone comes up with a cure and it's nothing but a bunch of ingredients put in a cauldron randomly." said Harry.

"That's horrible." said Hermione.

"It happens. Potion brewing is one of the fastest ways in this world to con people out of a lot of money. With so called cures and discoveries. Like old fashioned Snake-oil salesmen." said Harry.

End of dialogue set.

"Well that's good!" said Dr. Clark with a bright smile.

"What if a student walked into the room?" asked Mrs. McFinn.

"That couldn't happen. I locked the door magically, no student would have been able to get in." said Remus.

Dialogue set.

"Can't really say I blame them." said Remus sadly.

"But you were fine a big part of the time." said Fred.

"Yeah, it's just when you have your time of the month, things go a little difficult." said George.

"Girls are just as scary when it's their time of the month too." said Fred quietly.

Most of the boys in the school nodded slowly. While the girls blushed, Remus quickly turned the same color as the nearby girls.

Dialogue set, second sentence.

Suddenly, the school erupted in cheers and many of the adults, including the Rangers (especially Nightstrike) applauded loudly. Remus smiled warmly and Dumbledore smiled kindly over to Remus.

Dialogue set, fifth sentence.

"If the house had been here only since you came to school, how come no one noticed that it couldn't be all that haunted?" asked Hermione.

"I used the rumor that the house was built over the site of a murder." said Dumbledore with a faint smile.

End of dialogue set.

"That didn't stop three people from coming to your rescue." said Sirius.
"Or one idiot to ask another idiot to snoop around." said Harry with a raised brow.

"I beg your pardon, Mr. Potter?" said Snape venomously.

"You were an idiot, for letting this idiot bait you." said Harry nodding over to Sirius.

Sirius frowned at Harry, while Snape scowled.

"What are you talking about?" asked Ernie.

"You'll see." said Harry.

Eleventh paragraph.

Dialogue set, second sentence.

Remus felt a small nudge at his arm and looked down, there was a large chocolate bar, held by Harry, who had reached behind Sirius and kept tapping it into Remus' upper forearm.

Remus smiled and took the bar of chocolate, he took a large bite out of it and moaned.

"So it's good I take it?" said Harry.

"The best, where did you buy this?"

"Nowhere, I made that." said Harry with a smile.

"He's going to beg you ever day you know, for more of that stuff." said Sirius warningly.

End of dialogue set.

"You poor thing." said Mrs. McFinn with a worried face.

"Careful, she's going to want to hug you till it feels better." said Harry with a laugh.

Mrs. McFinn gently tugged the teen's ear. "What was that you said young man?" she said with a smile.

"Nothing, ma'am." said Harry with a smile. "Just telling him your magical properties." he added cheekily.

Dialogue set.

"Left a nasty taste in my mouth when I said Peter's name." said Remus in disgust.
"But we didn't jump ship when we learned," said Sirius shortly. "Or blame him, like you did." he looked over to Hermione.

"I didn't blame him!" said Hermione.

"Let me quote: 'I've covered up for you!' Sounds to me like you blamed him. Like it was all his fault." said Sirius.

Hermione looked down quickly and shuffled her feet. "I didn't mean it like that." said Hermione quietly.

"I've noticed something in these books, Potter." said Professor Flitwick sadly. "Every time someone mentions your mother or father, you cling onto any information your tossed."

"Not a lot of people sit me down and tell me things about them." said Harry his eyes half opened in thought, "All they tell me is 'stay safe' or somewhere along the lines of 'you're just like them'. Nothing more than that. I'd love to have just a day of people telling me what they were like. Not how I'm like them, but how they were themselves."

A thick silence enveloped the Hall.

"We'll do that, this weekend, we swear." said Sirius, tears in his eyes.

"Peter was just there to carry and eat the snacks." said Sirius rolling his eyes.

"Bawled like a baby the first time. It's a painful thing, your first transformation." said Sirius. "After a while, your body gets used to it."

End of dialogue set.
"If she did research on werewolves, wouldn't she know how that makes it a little better?" asked Bill.

"Well, you got to be careful which animal you're turning into, you could be dinner." said Charlie.

Dialogue set, second sentence.

"Well, your lupine poison is, yeah." said Harry with a weak smile. "Teeth goes any way it wants."

"Yeah, but we could take care of him. James was huge, so he could knock Remus over if he got too rough, and I was agile enough to keep him in check." said Sirius with bright smile.

Dialogue set, fourth sentence.

"Only useful thing he could do." said Sirius grimly.

End of dialogue set.

"That's beautiful." said Dr. Clark, tears welling up in his eyes.

"He closet dramatic." said Harry with a laugh.

"Don't make me come over there," said Dr. Clark with a smirk.

"What are you going to do? Make me cry?" said Harry teasingly.

Dialogue line.

"Horrible?" said Sirius confused.

"You were scarwing wittle me." said Harry with a cutesy voice.

"I'll 'scare' you alright." said Sirius teasingly.

Dialogue set, third sentence.

Dumbledore turned quickly in his chair. "That was reckless, and highly dangerous." he said quickly, his face pale. "What were you thinking?"

"We just wanted to make Remus feel better." said Sirius sheepishly. "And we would have been able to keep Remus away. James would take the person away to safety and I'd occupy Remus' time till they got away."
"We kept him in line." said Sirius quickly.

End of dialogue set.

"I wanted to know what kind of animal my dad was." said Harry.

Dialogue line.

"Couldn't happen, we were too quick for him." said Sirius with a smirk.

Dialogue set, second sentence.

"I don't call you chasing after a squirrel a near miss." said Sirius shaking his head.

"There were more than that!" said Remus.

"Remus...there weren't anyone out and about. The Centaurs weren't all that bothered by you, as long as you never went to their village in the forest." said Sirius reassuringly. "Who told you there were near misses anyway?"

"Peter." said Remus.

"His first attempt at a joke, failed miserably." said Sirius sternly.

End of dialogue set.

"Well, got to give Snape credit, my dad was a prick at a young age." said Harry.

"He meant well, though." said Sirius quietly.

Snape snorted slightly.

"I gotta side with him on that one." said Harry pointing to Snape. "Cause I don't think you were any better."

Sirius hung his head down.
"But you do mean well, now. And that's the important thing." said Harry with a smile.

Dialogue set, first sentence.

"No, I did not know about that, but I should have." said Dumbledore. "You three would have been expelled, but not Remus. He didn't ask you to do that."

Dialogue set, second sentence.

"Lead nothing, we decided to do that on our own." said Sirius.

End of dialogue set.

Twelfth paragraph, third sentence.

"Why not?" asked Ernie.

"I was just getting to that part." said Lionus with a smirk.

Twelfth paragraph, sixth sentence.

"Sounds like someone I know all too well." said Harry with a grim smile.

Sirius looked over and gently ruffled the boys hair.

End of twelfth paragraph.

Sirius scoffed. "Yeah, and I've been secretly a dancer for the Hippogriff Hoppers."

"The what?" asked Dr. Clark.

"It's dancing troop, they're...different." said Sirius.

"They dress up in strange clothes, never the same outfit twice." said Remus. "They were flowers once, never laughed so hard in my life."

"Reminds me of Elton John." said Dr. Clark with a laugh. "Minus the dancing."

Dialogue line.
"I didn't know that." said Sirius. "I wasn't too happy."

"I keep telling Remus I'm sorry." said Sirius. "I didn't mean to use him like that."

"Don't apologize to me, say sorry to Severus." said Remus.

"I'd rather lick a boot." said Sirius.

"Sirius..." said Dumbledore sternly.

"Do it." said Harry.

"Sorry." said Sirius.

Snape frowned and looked away.

"Sounds like another Slytherin we all know." said Charlie, looking pointedly at Malfoy.

"Wonder who started the animosity?" asked Mr. Weasley.

"I think it was James." said Sirius honestly.

"Sirius, you and I will have a very long and overdue talk." said Dumbledore sternly.

"Yes sir." said Sirius.

"Wow." said a few students with impressed smiles.
"If I heard any rumors, I told him he'd be suspended for quite some time. If not expelled." said Dumbledore.

"So you came in through the door?" said Malfoy.

"I did." said Snape.

"And you heard the whole story, and fabricated the story you told the Minister and I." said Dumbledore.

Snape looked down slowly.

"You, Sirius, Remus and I will be having a very long talk." said Dumbledore with a stern look.

"Yes sir." said Sirius, Remus and Snape.

"That was a short chapter, I'll read another one." said Lionus with a smirk. "The Servant of Lord Voldemort."

"Sweet Merlin." said Mr. Weasley in a hushed voice, looking frantically over to his youngest son.

"Don't look at me dad, Percy brought him into the house first." said Ron quickly.

"No more rats in my house, ever." said Mrs. Weasley firmly.

Chapter End Notes

Thanks for reading, please review
I don't own Harry Potter

See the end of the chapter for more notes

First paragraph.

"Don't blame you." said Neville.

Dialogue line.

"Still think it was a disgrace that you even touched it." growled Sirius.

Dialogue set, fifth sentence, first comma.

“Uh oh.” said Dr. Clark thinking back to what was said earlier.

End of dialogue set.

"You forgot to clear the map?" asked Fred in a shocked voice.

"Looking back, I was just upset that I saw Sirius' dot right next to the kids'." said Remus sheepishly.

“Oh.” said George.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

"You were standing right there! You heard the whole thing!" shouted Charlie.

Snape looked away.

Dialogue line.
"No, he heard everything, he just fricking dismissed it." said Terry angrily.

Dialogue set, first sentence.

"Severus! You do not use the Justice System to take your revenge for a school age wrong." said Madam Bones angrily.

End of dialogue set.

"He is!" said Fred. "Well,..." he looked over at Remus' incredulous look. "...sort of."

Dialogue line.

"Exactly!" shouted several students loudly.

Third paragraph, second sentence.

"OI!" shouted the twins loudly.

"SEVERUS!" shouted Dumbledore loudly.

End of third paragraph.

Dialogue line.

"And you vouched for this man." said Moody to Dumbledore darkly.

Snape hung his head at the look of disgust on the Headmaster's face.

Fourth paragraph.

Fifth paragraph, third sentence.

"You get that sometimes." said Tonks. "It's hard to see who is telling the truth, and who is lying to save their own butts."

End of fifth paragraph.
"No it wouldn't." said Kingsley shortly.

Dialogue set, second sentence, third comma.

"For the circumstances, they are in big trouble, but you really shouldn't take your rage on them." said Bathilda angrily over to Snape.

Dialogue set, end of second sentence.

"Convicted nothing, I never had a trial!" said Sirius angrily.

End of dialogue set.

"That's going a bit far." said Mrs. McFinn looking cross.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, third sentence.

"Severus! You apologize right now!" shouted McGonagall angrily.

"Seems you really need that seminar." said Dumbledore darkly. "You're going no matter what now."

Snape scowled slightly, but still hung his head.

End of dialogue set.

"Just about caught my hair on fire." said Sirius.

Dialogue line.

"You sir, are freaking mental." said Nightstrike. "Can I personally keep an eye on this nitwit?"

"Someone else volunteered for that duty." said Lionus with a smirk.

"Who?" asked Fred.

"Someone who is keeping an eye on him, the way it's meant to be done." said Lionus with a smirk.
"I thought you said he fought you the entire time, Severus." said Dumbledore darkly.

Snape continued on with his staring competition with the fuzz on his robes.

"How dare you!" shrieked Madam Bones and McGonagall.

"You heard him explain what had really happened, and you being a skilled legimens...." said Madam Bones.

"You'd bring Dementors close to three children?" screamed McGonagall.

Snape's face was also devoid of any color.

"I was worried out of my mind. I'll admit, I wasn't thinking of others, only myself." said Sirius guiltily.

"Don't worry about it, I wouldn't be thinking of anyone else either in that situation." said Harry soothingly.

"Great, you've got one armed psycho to deal with." said Tonks fretfully.

"You sick and twisted..." snarled Nightstrike.

"Not the brightest move." said Kingsley shaking his head.
"He's a fully grown wizard! With more curses up his sleeve then you've had injuries!" said Bill.

Dialogue line.

"He could have hurt Harry at any given point during the year!" screamed Ginny angrily.

Dialogue set.

"Would have been quick, and no one would suspect him." said Moody.

Dialogue set, first sentence.

"Don't ask us to fathom yours, you nut." said Fred.

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

"ACCK! Don't do that! He's already ready to chuck everyone to the Dementors!" said Ernie.

Dialogue set, fifth sentence.

"No matter how wrong you may feel about something my dad did. I'd never bend my knee to you." said Harry sternly. “Or to anyone...'cept...well...not anyone older than me.”

Dialogue set, sixth sentence.

Dumbledore glared at his Potions Master who still was sitting in silence.

End of dialogue set.

Ninth paragraph, second sentence, first comma.

"What would you have done?" said Dumbledore with a fierce tone.

Snape did not answer.
"You'd better answer me." he said dangerously quiet.

Snape muttered something.

"Louder." said McGonagall.

"I would have cursed him, or thrown him away from the door bodily." said Snape.

"When this book is over, you're going to wish that I was only going to send you to that seminar." said Dumbledore darkly.

End of ninth paragraph.

Dialogue set, second sentence, second word.

Several students cheered.

"Wait for it." said Harry with a smile.

Dialogue set, end of second sentence.

"Huh?" asked several students in confusion.

End of dialogue set.

"Nothing less than you deserve." said McGonagall sourly.

Tenth paragraph, second sentence.

"ALRIGHT!" shouted the twins happily.

End of tenth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

"You weren't capable to take him out." said Harry teasingly.

Eleventh paragraph.
Sirius looked over quickly.

Harry bopped Sirius with a cushion. "I'm sure I was right now."

Dialogue line.

"I don't think I would be worried about school rules at that point." said Dr. Clark with a kind smile.

Twelfth paragraph.

"Cut into them was right, I still have the scars." said Remus.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

"Good boy, keep skeptical." said Moody.

Dialogue line.

"Sorry I didn't call you by your name." said Remus to Ron.

"I didn't care about that, at that point." said Ron.

Thirteenth paragraph.

Dialogue set.

"Fair point, dogs and cats you can sort of tell apart, rats...not so much." said Emmeline.

Dialogue line.

Fourteenth paragraph, first sentence, eleventh word.

Sirius slowly looked at his hands with distasteful look.

End of fourteenth paragraph.
"The paper Fudge gave him." said Madam Bones shaking her head.

"Wow, that's some twist of fate." said Tonks.

"Tell me about it." said Sirius.

"I was so lost." said Ron.

"They only found a finger!" said George in a hushed voice.

"Bloody Brilliant." said Fred.

"I still don't know how you survived." said Dr. Clark.

"I'm pretty dang good with shield spells." said Sirius.

"I thought it was cause Ron took so good care of him." said Fred.

"Yeah, cause Percy was never really all that great a pet owner." muttered George.
"I still don't know how the hell you can think during times like that." said Neville.

Sirius continued to stare at his hands.

"It means your innocent pussy cat was helping an ex-con." said Lee with a smirk.

"He was siding with you." said Charlie.

"I was still undecided." said Harry.

"I'm so ashamed of myself." said Harry quietly.

"Don't worry about it, it was a lot to take." said Sirius.
"That...does not help your case." said Kingsley.

"That wasn't the best choice of words to use." said Dr. Clark to Sirius.

"Don't I know it." said Sirius.

"Well, I don't think you should be blaming yourself anymore." said Luna sweetly.

"How can you think that?" asked Sirius shortly.

"If you're still self-punishing yourself, then forget it. Azkaban did that for you." said Harry catching where Luna was going.

"I didn't want my only pet to get turned into rat jam." said Ron.

"I'm amazed you didn't hit him." said Dean.
"He did, he kicked Snape in the gut." said Ron with a smirk.

End of twenty-second paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Twenty-third paragraph.

"Rat jam." said Fred with a smirk.

"That's not funny." said Ginny.

Twenty-fourth paragraph, second sentence.

"Too bad the star of the sped up movie wasn’t a bit more pleasant to look at." said Sirius with a smirk.

End of twenty-fourth paragraph.

Twenty-fifth paragraph, second sentence.

Several students in the higher years, the male ones anyway, rubbed the top of their heads and thought fearfully of the day that they would watch more and more hair go down the shower drain.

End of twenty-fifth paragraph.

"Dammit Potter." said Moody approvingly. "You need to join the Aurors."

"Or the Rangers." said Lionus quickly.

"Given any thought to what you would like to do in life?" asked Rudolph with a smile.

Harry gave it some thought. "Well, I've got some ideas."

"List them off, I want to know how we can give you some extra help." said Leroy with a brighter smile than his partner.

"Well, I'd like to keep doing my Security Testing. Easiest way in the world to make money, I make my own hours and it puts my mind to the ultimate test and it keeps my body in good condition."

"But can you limit the jumping off moving semi-trucks?" said Sirius weakly.
"And leaping off buildings?" said Remus.

"When the hell was this?" said Rudolph loudly.

"It was in a scroll." said Lionus.

"Damn, I love going to muggle action movies. That might have been fun flying alongside you." said Leroy.

"You’d think." said Sirius.

"What other job?" asked Colin.

"Well, working in Crime Prevention would be interesting." said Harry carefully.

"Like how you didn't say Aurors or Rangers." said Bill with a smirk.

"Or the muggle police..." said Harry absently. "Like Officer McFinn."

"You'd give up magic?" said Sirius with raised eyes.

"I'm sort of undecided. I've seen two worlds, lived in two worlds. Don't know which one to stick with and live in." said Harry shrugging.

Eyes across the Hall widened in shock.

"Being a Doctor or Healer would be different too." said Harry with a smile. "I'm pretty good at healing myself, not this morning though." he added lifting his ankle slightly.

Dr. Clark smiled.

"You could be a singer!" said Cho quickly.

"Never happen." said Harry shaking his head quickly. "But I wouldn't say no to opening my own restaurant."

"That would be a fine idea." said Dumbledore brightly. "I personally would be loyal customer."

"Would you put it in Diagon Alley? Or Hogsmede?" asked Sirius.

"Don't know where, but I think I'd cater to both sides of the coin. Magic and muggle." said Harry with a bright smile. "I think I'm pretty much torn between three things, Security Tester, Criminal Prevention, or Restaurant Chef."

"Hope you continue on with the Security Testing, it looks like an awesome job!" said Colin with a wide smile.

"Crime Prevention, gives us both a chance of getting you." said Nightstrike.

Dumbledore smiled. "I'd be proud of you with whatever you choose, but two out of the three would cause me to worry about you on a daily basis."

Harry smiled warmly.
"Why is it that almost all the adults in my life are mental?" said Harry laughing loud.

"It's all because of you." said Sirius teasingly.

"Filthy little." scowled Mrs. McFinn.

Harry looked over to her warily.

"I didn't want him to kill Peter right in front of the kids." said Remus. "If we were going to do it, it was going to be done outside."

"Still have no idea how you were being so calm." said Sirius.

"I'd rather help an angry Manticore get it's paw out of trap, then help you." said Remus with a scowl.

"That's got him." said Tonks with a smirk.
Dumbledore chuckled darkly. "Tom would never share his magical knowledge with anyone."

"Can you work on that, sometimes when you don't laugh normally, you get a bit scary." said Harry.

"If I wasn't scary, I can't be a parent." said Sirius.

Harry shook his head.

"Wonder how they all received him the first week of You-Know-Who's return?" asked Charlie.

"I'd love to see that." said Sirius with a malicious smile.

"I wouldn't want to spend twelve seconds as a rat." said Blaise.

"I still don't know how I thought you were the one that betrayed Lily and James." said McGonagall.

"Don't feel all that guilty, I didn't believe him either." said Remus.
"Had to of been, he had never done anything of real importance, or spectacular." said Professor Flitwick.

"Explains why you were sort of dancing in place, you were getting ready to head him off in case he rushed either way." said Ron with a smile.

"...Good point." said Dr. Nicodemus. "But I figure that he wanted to make sure someone would protect him once he got a hold of the boy and dragged him to his death."

"Well, he put it in longer words." said Dr. Nicodemus with a faint trace of a smile.

"Hey!" said Sirius to the giggling students. "It had been a long time since I've talked to different people, and I've never been addressed that way before."
"Well that doesn't help us tighten up security." said Madam Bones in a disappointed tone.

"Being innocent would be a happy thought to me." said Charlie.

"Hated to think about them." said Sirius. "Still do."

"And he would have incapacitated Harry and carry him off to Voldemort." said Sirius with a shiver.

"Saying that made me wish I could go in the corner and get sick." said Sirius.

"You didn't mean Harry at all! You meant Peter Pettigrew!" said Dennis.

"I appreciate the scraps someone left out for me." said Sirius with a smirk.
"You're welcome." said Luna dreamily.

“Did you know who he was?” asked Neville.

“No, I just saw him as a poor hungry puppy.” said Luna with a smile.

End of dialogue set.

Thirty-eighth paragraph.

"I was wrong there." said Sirius.

Harry looked at him quickly.

"You fly twice as good as he did." said Sirius proudly.

"That's another job you could have!" said Dean. "You could be a professional Quidditch player!"

"I don't think I'm good enough for the professional circuit." said Harry humbly.

Dialogue line.

"I lost James, and Lily. I was so happy to have Remus back, but most of all, I wanted my little baby boy back. Your belief in me meant everything to me." said Sirius.

Harry leaned gently against his godfather.

"You mean everything to him too." said Mrs. McFinn with a soft smile.

Thirty-ninth paragraph.

The school erupted in cheers.

Dialogue line.

Fortieth paragraph, first sentence.

"It pretty much was." said George.

End of fortieth paragraph.

Dialogue line.
"You killed my best friend I'm going to do whatever I can do to get revenge for him." said Sirius bitterly.

Forty-first paragraph.

Dialogue line.

"I wouldn't have even called them robes." said Ron with a smirk.

"They were clean when I stole them off the line." said Sirius with a smile.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, first sentence, fourth comma.

"I don't blame him, during those times, the only ones you could trust were, Lily, James and yourself." said Remus.

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

"You both would have gone to Azkaban for that!" said Tonks.

"I would have been pissed." said Harry. "And I would never have forgiven either of them."

"What?" asked Remus, a look of confusion on his face.

"You would have abandoned me. I had one chance at a family, and you would have taken it away for stupid revenge." said Harry.

"Sometimes, revenge isn't stupid." said Sirius quietly.

"Read Hamlet, then talk to me about revenge." said Harry. "You'll see what revenge can drive a person to do."

Dialogue line.
"Keep away from my son!" shouted Mr. Weasley angrily.

"You bit someone once, and you were boring." said Ron bitterly.

"Keep away from her!" shouted Mrs. Weasley fearfully.

"I was never so terrified in my life. I could hardly think straight." said Hermione.

"That vile...." snarled Dumbledore. "How dare he?"

"I wanted to hurt him, right then and there." said Sirius.

"You weren't the only one." said Remus.

"I'll show you 'Mercy'." growled Kingsley.
Forty-fifth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

"I was ready, so ready." said Sirius.

Forty-sixth paragraph.

Dialogue set.

"Bullshit." said Remus quietly.

"Wouldn't take much to have him switch teams." said Sirius.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

"Honor." said Moody.

"Self-Respect." said Kingsley.

"Freedom." said Mr. Weasley.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

"Then we would have honored your memory, as opposed to cursing the day you were spawned." said Remus.

Dialogue line.

Forty-seventh paragraph.

Dialogue line.

"I thought you guys said you were going to take him outside." said Tonks.

"We were going to Imperius him to go outside, and then kill him." said Sirius.
Forty-eighth paragraph.

Dialogue set, third sentence.

"What are you doing?" shrieked Mrs. McFinn and Mrs. Weasley.
"Stopping them from making the biggest mistake of their lives." said Harry.
"And we appreciate it every day." said Sirius with a fond smile.

End of dialogue set.

Forty-ninth paragraph.

Mrs. McFinn and Mrs. Weasely sighed with relief. He wasn't going to be harmed.

Dialogue set.

"So get out of the way boy." said Nightstrike angrily.

Dialogue line.

Nightstrike stared at the boy in the bowl. He sent a sheepish smile over to the lad.

Dialogue line.

"It's not more than what you deserve, it's the least you deserve." snarled Charlie.

Dialogue set.

"He's not worth it, he never will be." said Harry.
"You just made a very valuable weapon there." said Lionus silently.

Fiftieth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.
"Good lad, you'd do very well in Crime Prevention." said Dr. Nicodemus, using Harry's term instead of a specific branch. "Vigilante justice tends to only do more damage.

Fifty-first paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Fifty-second paragraph.

Dialogue line.

"Merlin, is there anyone you won't defend?" asked Terry.

"I can think of several." said Harry.

Fifty-third paragraph.

"My bonds weren't as tight as the ones Severus gave me." said Remus.

Dialogue line.

Fifty-fourth paragraph.

"Escaping and getting killed in the process, I could live with that on my conscience." said Sirius with a smirk.

Dialogue line.

"I was really sort of happy you said that, I didn't want to lose all the bones in my leg, like Harry......uh...never mind." said Ron looking at the insulted look on Remus' face.

Fifty-fifth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

"Who cares? The fool got himself carried away and tried to get two innocent men hurt." said Moody.
"I didn't want to even attempt, I could image what he would be like the entire trip up." said Remus.

"I should have given that to Sirius, and had him wear it till we got to the castle." said Remus.

"Wouldn't have helped either way." said Sirius kindly.

"Ron!" said Bill angrily.

"Trust me, I regret it." said Ron quickly.

"That really doesn't make me feel better right now." said Bill.

"I did." said Ron. "I took good care of that murderous..." he cursed so fouly that Mrs. Weasley sent a spell right to Ron's mouth causing his mouth to spew out bubbles and froth.

"He loves playing the leader." said Sirius with a smirk.

"Let's have some lunch." said Remus, "Have to fatten up stick boy over here."

"Who knew you could be so funny." said Harry sneering over to the man.

Thanks for reading, please review
Harry ate a plateful of sandwiches and a towering amount of treacle tart. Sirius stared at his godson as he tucked away so much food.

"You're going to get sick." said Sirius slowly.

"If I'm going to get sick, I'd love to have the reason be treacle tart." said Harry as he put another slice in his mouth.

"You're a nutter." said Sirius shaking his head.

"We need to get you to stop your sicking up whenever you get upset." said Remus quietly. He didn't want to voice his concern to those that didn't need to know what they were discussing. He was trying to learn to be discreet in his worrying about Harry, and the strength to pass parental judgment onto Sirius.

"I'd like that." said Harry with a gentle smile. "I'm tired of eating twice my body weight just in case I get sent into an emotional tailspin."

“Well, this summer...no emotional tailspins for you...a nice relaxing summer with no cares and worries.” said Sirius rubbing the back of Harry's neck.

"I'll read the next one." said Dr. Nicodemus taking the book away from Lionus. "It's called Chapter Twenty"

"I'm going to kill Fudge." muttered Lionus.

First paragraph, first sentence.

"Nice." said Hermione with a giggle.

First paragraph, second sentence.

"With Ron's leg, he wouldn't get far." said Bill with a nervous laugh. He didn't want his brother anywhere near Peter Pettigrew. But these events had already happened, and there was nothing more he could do.
Snape frowned at the floor, making sure not to look at the headmaster's face.

"I smacked the wall once with my leg, damn that hurt." said Ron.

"You're lucky you had an excuse, I hadn't heard swearing like that since we put glue in Sirius' hair." said Remus with a smile.

"Still owe you for that too." said Sirius with a growl.

Sirius smiled gleefully as Snape glared hard at the man.

"Boys...." said Dumbledore sternly.

Snape dropped his gaze and Sirius' smile was gone.

"You're free?" said a first year, but was quickly shushed by a few fourth year girls. They didn't want to miss this adorable moment.

Sirius stared at the twins. "You make me sound horrible."

"Well, you did do all that stuff." said Mrs. McFinn with a smile.
"I was going to kiss you if you said those magic words." said Harry with a smile.

“But I did say those things.” said Sirius with a fake pout. “I didn’t get a kiss.”

“Things went to hell in about five seconds afterwards.” said Harry with a smirk.

“Still didn’t get it.” pouted Sirius.

Harry leaned up and kissed him on the cheek. “There, you big baby.”

Sirius hugged Harry tightly. “There you go, little baby.”

"You're nuts." said Bill.

"I didn't know what his home life was like." said Sirius shamefully.

"Don't worry about it, like I said, they're good fakers." said Harry with a smile.

End of dialogue set.

"Remember the night I made those Knickerbocker Glories?" said Harry with a smile.

"You have to remake those again, dear boy, they were delicious." said Dumbledore with a bright smile.

"I want one!" whined Dr. Clark.

"I remember that night." said Sirius with a bright smile.

"I had the same feeling in my stomach when you said you were free, I wanted to do a back flip right there." said Harry with tears in his eyes.

Sirius placed a kiss on his head. "I could tell."

Sirius turned to look at Harry's skull, moving a bit of hair.
"I'm fine, don't fuss." said Harry not looking at him, but he had a smile tracing his lips.

“It’s my job to fuss.” said Sirius simply.

---

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

"How stupid I was back then!" said Sirius with a smile.

"Back then?" said Snape with a sneer.

Dialogue line.

"In about two years." said Harry with a laugh.

Fifth paragraph.

"Never did, never will." muttered Sirius.

Dialogue line.

"My stomach was doing back flips right there." said Sirius.

Dialogue line.

Sixth paragraph, second sentence, first comma.

"Oh that's nice!" said Sirius shoving Harry slightly.

---

End of sixth paragraph.

"Never mind." said Sirius with a smirk.

Seventh paragraph.

"It was easy training Crookshanks to do that, he hardly needed any help." said Sirius.
"Filthy coward." muttered Moody gruffly.

"Couldn't wait to see their faces." said Harry.

"I don't think they know that I'm your Godfather yet." said Sirius.

"Oh yes they do, I used you." said Harry.

"What do you mean, 'I used you'?' asked Sirius.

"As a weapon, summer of my fourth year, you almost scared the crap out of Uncle Vernon." said Harry with a smirk.

"Awesome." said Sirius with a smile.

"He was inching slowly away from where Ron and I were." said Remus. "No idea why, he couldn't hope to get away, at that point."

"Crap, did he wake up?" asked Terry worriedly.

"What's so....oh no...." said Ernie looking fearfully over to Remus.

"You got it." said Remus closing his eyes.

Nightstrike looked from Remus to Lionus quickly. "Captain Lionus, sir?"

"Somebody wants something." said Lionus with a smirk.

"Sir, when the full moon hits, permission to..." said Nightstrike.

"Permission granted." said Lionus. "Mr. Lupin, you have a fellow werewolf to entertain you when the time comes." he said with a smile.
Remus looked over to Nightstrike. "Trust me," said Nightstrike with a grin, "You'll thank me."

Twelfth paragraph.

Thirteenth paragraph.

"Not good." said Blaise.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

"He has more concern over the kids than this greasy bat ever did." said Moody with a snarl.

"He was worried, just had his priorities in the wrong order." said Harry quietly.

The students stared, as well as Snape, at the young man.

Fourteenth paragraph, second sentence.

"I couldn't leave Ron, I'd never leave him like that." said Harry.

Ron opened his mouth, but something caught in his throat, something buzzed in his mind, but nothing came. What was it?

End of fourteenth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

"Good tell the kids to run!" shrieked Mrs. Weasley.

"NO! DON'T RUN!" shouted Nightstrike.

People stared the Ranger.

"We go after the first things we see move, more fun for us when we catch it. You could put a brick wall in front of us, we'll smash it down." said Nightstrike, his face pale. "In order to get away from us, freeze. Don't move, don't even breathe, once we find something else to occupy our attention, then you can move, but slowly. Get to the nearest tree and climb it. We can't climb well, wait until morning and then run your ass off to the nearest building and stay in there."

"I didn't know running was a bad thing." said Sirius with a worried glance.

"Not a lot of people do, though it's hard to not do what your instincts tell you to do." said Nightstrike with a nervous laugh.
Several girls began to scream.

"Relax!" said Harry in an annoyed tone. "You weren't there, not even, no, never mind, you did scream." he added looking over to Hermione.

End of sixteenth paragraph.

Several people whimpered and cried.

"God, they think we've never had to do that before?" asked Sirius with a raised brow.

"You play too rough." said Remus trying to lighten the mood.

"Not my fault, you could pick me up and fling me." said Sirius.

Seventeenth paragraph.

"Shouldn't freeze on just one thing boy." said Moody.

"Never saw a werewolf before." said Harry.

"Never will again if we can help it." said Sirius and Remus together.

"I've got the basement all set up for you by the way." muttered Sirius. "Had a few House-Elves fix it up."

"You sure you want me to transform? In the same house that Harry will sleep in?" asked Remus.

"I made his door specifically out of mistletoe, happy now?" said Sirius with a smirk.

"Greatly relieved, yes." said Remus sighing happily.

“What?” asked Ron.

“Werewolves and mistletoe…not the greatest of combinations for them, great for us when we need to defend ourselves.” said Sirius with a smirk.

Eighteenth paragraph, third sentence.

The Weasley screamed and shouted all at once. Mr. Weasley turned white with rage.

"I'm going to kill that bastard, with my own hands." he said with an uncharacteristic snarl.
"Get in line." said Sirius.

End of eighteenth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

"Don't run towards the danger!" shouted Tonks fearfully. “Leave it to adults!”

Harry looked at her. “I’ve got one adult taking a nap, one who can’t help even when he really wanted to, and one who is covered in fleas. Big help those adults.” He said with a smirk.

Sirius smacked him slightly on the back of the head. “I don’t have fleas.”

“You did back then. Don’t deny it, when I saw Snuffles on the grounds, you scratched behind your ear. A lot.” said Harry teasingly.

Nineteenth paragraph.

"Damn." said Dr. Clark furiously.

Twentieth paragraph.

"Why was he heading into the forest?" asked Colin.

Dialogue line.

Twenty-first paragraph, first sentence, first comma.

"I couldn't breathe right there." muttered Harry.

End of twenty-first paragraph.

"I wasn't going to lose him, not now." said Sirius sending a quick look over to Harry.

Twenty-second paragraph.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue line.
"Really?" asked Ron.

"You think I'd leave you lying like that and not do a damn thing to help you if I could?" said Harry with a quirked eyebrow.

Twenty-third paragraph.

"Fat lot of help he is." said Seamus.

Dialogue line.

"Good get up to the castle." said Hannah worriedly.

"You were going to risk expulsion?" asked Fred.

"We needed help, really bad." said Harry. "If they could catch Peter, I would at least be expelled but able to live with Sirius."

Twenty-fourth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

"He can take care of himself, you need to worry about yourself." said Charlie worriedly.

Ginny looked over to Harry with worry in her eyes.

Twenty-fifth paragraph.

Twenty-sixth paragraph, first sentence.

"Sorry Ron." said Harry, his face full of guilt.

"Then you did leave me there like that?" said Ron commenting about Harry had said earlier.

"Actually Mr. Weasley, if memory serves me, Severus told us that a shield spell was guarding you. He had to remove it in order to bring you up to the castle." said Dumbledore with a smile.

"When did you have time to do that? I didn’t hear you say anything." said Hermione.

"Non-verbal spell. I’m still not all that great on them." said Harry.

End of twenty-sixth paragraph.

Bill swore quietly.
Sirius turned white, Harry noticed and reached over Mrs. McFinn and took a phial off the side table and held it out for Sirius. He looked at it, took it quickly out of Harry's hand and downed its contents.

"Oh damn, those kids are screwed." said Nightstrike.

"They are right there." said Tempest.

"Memories are happier, thoughts like that aren't nearly as powerful." said Remus.

"That didn't exactly fill me with hope that we were going to get out of there." said Harry.

Harry slowly gripped his shoulder.

Sirius pulled Harry tighter to himself and held onto him.
Mrs. McFinn whimpered and leaned against the thin frame of the young man.

Dialogue line.

Thirty-third paragraph.

Dialogue line.

"Oh my god." said Ginny her face pale. Bill came over and wrapped his arms around her to comfort her, while Charlie came and stood behind Ron and Hermione.

Thirty-fourth paragraph.

Dumbledore himself took a phial off the table and gulped down the contents of the Calming Draught.

Dialogue line.

Thirty-fifth paragraph.

"Azkaban is about to lose every one of their Dementors." said Lionus with a growl.

Thirty-sixth paragraph.

"No wonder that's your boggart Harry." said Dean with a shudder.

Thirty-seventh paragraph.

"Please don't go the same way." said Dr. Clark worriedly.

Thirty-eighth paragraph,

Harry felt rainstorm of tears come down on his scalp, he looked up and saw Sirius weeping softly over top of him. Remus had his face buried in his hands, sobbing as Dr. Clark patted his back and wiped his own tears away.

Thirty-ninth paragraph.

Remus could barely breathe; he stopped sobbing and reached around Sirius' shoulders and ran his fingers through Harry's hair.

Fortieth paragraph.

Forty-first paragraph.

"Someone must have come by and casted his Patronus charm." said Madam Bones highly relieved.

Forty-second paragraph.

A giant sigh of relief whispered through the Great Hall.

Forty-third paragraph.

"Who could it be?" asked a third year.

"Is it Dumbledore?" asked a second year Hufflepuff.

"His is a phoenix." said his friend. "So whose is it?"

End of chapter.

"I'll read the next one too." said Dr. Nicodemus.

"Well! Get on with it! We want to know what happens." said Lionus quickly.

"Do I need to...." said Dr. Nicodemus raising his brows.

"No I'm fine." said Lionus quickly.

Chapter End Notes

Thanks for reading, please review!
Lionus cleared his throat. "Next chapter, Twenty-first chapter"

Fred and George looked gleefully over to Hermione.

Bill smacked Charlie hard.

"OW! What did I do?" asked Charlie.

"Where do you think the twin's got their humor from?" said Bill.

Dialogue set, third pause.

"Who the hell is talking?" asked Charlie.

“Judging by the word ‘shocking’ it’s Fudge.” said Tempest.

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

Tempest smirked.

“Wait a minute, what did you do?” asked Tonks looking at Snape.

“Nothing helpful.” said George.

Dialogue line.

“He didn’t do a damn thing, he just hung around.” said Lee.

Dialogue line.

“You damned...” said Bill shaking his head, but his eyes began to bulge. “You surrendered Sirius to him...”
“Proud of it!.” said Ron loudly.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, first sentence.

“You liar!” shouted Madam Bones loudly.

Dialogue set, second sentence.

“No, they were just disgusted by your juvenile behavior.” said McGonagall angrily.

Dialogue set, third sentence.

“You vile...” said Mrs. Weasley angrily.

Dialogue set, fourth sentence.

Mrs. Weasley stopped growling, slightly.

Dialogue set, sixth sentence.

“You slimy....” snarled Bill.

End of dialogue set.

Dumbledore’s normally twinkling blue eyes, were now flashing with a sort of fury that he seldom ever used.

Snape could barely keep his seat, out of pure fear.

Dialogue line.
“You can keep your blind spots.” said Harry frowning slightly.

Dialogue set, second sentence.

“Do you really treat him like any other student?” said Professor Flitwick with a raised brow. Snape continued to look at the floor.

End of Dialogue set.

“You just love slamming him don’t you?” said Sirius angrily. “He’s not James dammit!”

Dialogue line.

“No nearly as foolish as you, Fudge.” said Madam Bones crossing her arms.

First paragraph, third sentence.

“Sirius?” asked Harry as he looked into his godfather’s pale face.

“I was two feet away from you, and I couldn’t protect you.” he said bitterly.

“I can never blame you for that, twelve years in Azkaban surrounded by those things, I’d be on the ground too.” said Harry softly.

End of first paragraph.

“I would rather you not remain unconscious your entire life.” said Remus with a strained smile.

Dialogue line.

“I’m amazed you didn’t try and take credit for that.” said Tonks.

“Do I look like Dazzle Gums?” sneered Snape, but he looked back down after he saw the still present scowl on Dumbledore’s face.

Dialogue line.

“They were beaten that soundly?” asked Lionus with a shocked look.
“Must have been one hell of a Patronus.” said Dr. Nicodemus.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Bet he wanted to just leave Black out there.” said Fred grimly.

Second paragraph

“I had the sensation recently.” said Harry. “Trying to remember what happened.”

“Son/Harry...” said Lionus and Dumbledore together.

“I’m forgetting, I’m forgetting.” said Harry holding his hands up in a defeated way.

Third paragraph.

Fourth paragraph, second sentence.

“Of course Mr. Potter, what if you were to turn in your sleep and your glasses were to break? The glass would cut right into your eyes.” said Madam Pomfrey.

End of fourth paragraph.

“I thought Ron was dead there for a moment.” mumbled Harry.

Fifth paragraph.

Harry smiled at Hermione.

“You’ve taught her a whole lot, the both of you.” said Charlie with a smirk.

Sixth paragraph.

“And I needed you to eat every last sliver of it.” said Madam Pomfrey.

Dialogue line.
“The only good part about being in the hospital wing is that Madam Pomfrey has those chocolate nuggets stashed in her office.” said Remus with a bright smile.

“And I remember one time someone had snuck into my office and ate himself sick with all that chocolate.” said Madam Pomfrey folding her arms with a slick smile on her face.

“It was so worth it.” said Remus with fond smile.

Dialogue line.

Ron blushed slightly, but it became full force once Hermione took his hand.

Dialogue set, second sentence, first dash.

“She’d keep Harry there until he died of old age if she could.” snickered Ernie.

End of dialogue set.

Harry was sitting up, putting his glasses back on, and picking up his wand.

“No matter how hard you smack him and he goes down,” said Fred

“He’ll always get right back up and save the world.” said George.

“I’m not exactly the world.” said Sirius with a smirk.

“You are to me.” said Harry quietly.

Sirius blinked and pulled Harry close to him, dropping a few tears into his locks.

Dialogue line.

“It’s so sad that the highest authority is right outside the door, and the children don’t even trust him enough to go to him immediately.” said Tempest shaking her head.

Dialogue line.

“Oh no!” said Mrs. McFinn.

"I didn't know that saying that would distress him further." said Madam Pomfrey.
“Keep Snape away from Harry, Harry will beat the snot out of Snape for this.” said Moody with an approving smile.

“So he showed some concern? I’m impressed.” said Madam Bones.

“Well, it is Harry Potter, he wants to be a fatherly type to Harry.” said Kingsley.

“I’d rather look up to Mundungus Fletcher than Fudge,” said Harry.

“Speaking of which, where did he go?” asked Tonks.

"He tried picking his guard's pocket, right now he's unconscious.” said Lionus.

“I was in panic mode. I completely forgot that, Professor Snape discredited us before we even got to speak.” said Harry.

“I don’t think that guy’s ever had anything under control.” said Terry with a sneer.

“Frogface didn’t help matters either.” said Fred.

“You kept the Minister and Snape in there, getting Harry all stressed out?” said Mr. Weasley in disbelief.

“Oh trust me, they were getting very close to being hexed out of existence if they kept it up.” said Madam Pomfrey.

“Never distress a patient, or you’ll end up a patient.” said Remus.
“Listen to the kids dammit!” said Bill.

Dialogue line.

“Severus, you’re getting very close to being arrested for lying to the Ministry. If Sirius decides to press charges.” said Madam Bones.

Snape blinked and looked from Madam Bones and Sirius.

Sirius had a wicked smile on his face, but Harry looked over at Sirius.

“Stop the dance please.” said Harry shaking his head.

“He tried to...” said Sirius.

“I realize that, but you got back at him, by getting away.” said Harry softly. But then he began to talk a bit louder so everyone and Snape could hear. “You started the fight, he helped drag it on. I’m finishing it.”

“How can you end a battle that’s been going on for over twenty years?” asked Kingsley.

“Well, I can’t threaten Professor Snape much, but I can threaten Sirius.” said Harry.

“How?” asked Sirius with a smirk.

“Want to take a guess how long I can go without talking to you or looking at you?” asked Harry with an even bigger smirk.

Sirius paled.

Dialogue line.

“Minister, if you know what’s good for you.” said George.

“Agree with Harry, swear on your life that you’ll do what he wants.” said Fred.

“Back away slowly and do it.” said George.

“You will find yourself living longer and happier.” said the twins together.

Dialogue line.

“Like I said, I was going to distress him if he didn’t get out.” said Madam Pomfrey.

Dialogue line.

“Severus doesn’t want you heard, Fudge thinks you’re just a brainless child.” said Bathilda angrily.
“Sort of sends a mixed message doesn’t it?” said Lionus with a small smile.

“It was either that or stunning him.” said Madam Pomfrey.

“He’s like one of those punching clown things, smack him, he’ll just pop back up.” said Hermione.

“Good, tell him everything.” said Moody nodding his head.

“You want me to stop stressing, keep Dumbledore in there and let me talk to him.” said Harry.

“Why not talk to the kids?” asked Mr. Weasley.

“Sirius was conscious at the time.” said Dumbledore. “I didn’t to disturb the children. Especially not Harry, the look on Harry’s face when he was brought in, I had a flashback from his first year.” he finished quietly.

“Out of respect for you Severus, I didn’t peer into your mind. I suggest you do not test my trust for you again.” said Dumbledore sternly.

“No sir.” said Professor Snape quietly.
“So you knew he wasn’t telling you the truth.” said Remus.

“Judging from the look on Harry’s face I knew he wasn’t.” said Dumbledore.

“He didn’t say anything about not allowing the kids, Remus or Sirius to prove to him that Peter was there.” said Charlie.

“You forgot he was there to hear both Remus and Sirius talk about it.” said Ron.

“Yeah, and if wasn’t so stuck on getting his twisted revenge, he’d of seen it all, and would have been credited with solving a horrible crime, but no he has to add to it.” said Tonks with a snort of disgust.

“I wanted to slap him.” said Harry. “With my foot.”

“A life must be saved.” said Dumbledore.

“Sick son of a...” muttered Harry.

“Dear....what did I say about swearing?” said Mrs. McFinn with a frown.
Harry sighed. “Do I have to?” whined Harry.

“Say, what I said about swearing.” said Mrs. McFinn.

Harry sighed again. “’A cute cupcake like me, is better with sugar than salt.’”

Several students snickered.

“Now you know why I didn’t want to say it.” said Harry with a frown and a blush.

Thirteenth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“I side with whomever or whatever is telling me the truth, even if it was my greatest enemy.” said Dumbledore.

Dialogue line.

Fourteenth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“And you tried to kill me, just an hour before this all occurred.” said Sirius. “You had your wand at my throat.”

“I’m going to go silent on you.” said Harry firmly to Sirius. Then he turned to face Snape. “Don’t make me go out and buy colored contacts.”

Snape and Sirius both paled.

“It took you that short amount of time to come up with something to go against Snape with?” said Remus in awe.

“It was either that or ruining each of his cauldrons. Putting a different color in my eyes is a safer way of going.” said Harry.

”What's colored contacts have to do with anything?” asked Dean.

Dialogue line.

“That and you kept retelling the event almost once a week.” said Dumbledore.

Fifteenth paragraph.
“I was very wise in going to Sirius first. I would have been beyond bewildered.” said Dumbledore with a kind smile.

Sixteenth paragraph.

Dialogue set, second sentence.

“Then give us Veritiserum!” said Hermione exasperatedly.

“Hermione, this was two years ago.” said Ron.

End of dialogue set.

“I’m amazed that as the caster it didn’t tell you that it had switched.” said Remus.

“Only the people who were personally affected by the spell itself. The spell wasn’t cast upon me, and I wasn’t the Secret Keeper, I wouldn’t be aware of the change. I only gave evidence that Sirius was the Secret Keeper when I cast the spell.” said Dumbledore.

Dialogue line.

“I felt like an idiot.” said Harry shaking his head. “I can’t picture anyone walking up to you with you F.M-ing and asking you to testify on anything. Most you’d get is assessing how tasty you are.”

Even Remus laughed at that.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

“He sort of made us think that he didn’t even believe us.” said Hermione.
“Not to me, but to the Minister.” said Dumbledore.

“Yeah, I was a real idiot.” said Sirius sheepishly.

“I can counsel him, but not control him.” said Dumbledore.

“I’m flattered that you think so highly of me.” said Dumbledore with a fond smile.

“I thought he meant we had to sneak out and go up to the tower.” said Harry. “I’ve crawled all over the roofs of Hogwarts over the past few years. Getting to that tower, from the Hospital Wing would take me at least fifteen minutes. I’d never make it.”

Sirius and Remus turned slowly around and stared at him.”What do you mean, ‘crawled all over roofs.’?”

Harry smiled innocently. “I have to keep in shape during the year.”
“I didn’t expect what happened next.” said Harry.

“She smacked my hand when I tried to help get the chain out of her way.” said Harry with a fond smile.

“And you did that repeatedly?” said Ron, having not heard the description before.

Hermione blushed.

“You know how hard it was to not let Madam Pomfrey see that cut? Had to keep my collar buttoned up all the way the entire time.” said Harry.

“Sounds like a dream to me.” muttered McLaggan with a smirk.
Ron and Harry snarled at the Gryffindor.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Twenty-sixth paragraph.

Several people laughed loudly.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Twenty-seventh paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

“Whoa Hermione!” said Tonks.

“I had a whole year of dodging myself Ron and Harry.” said Hermione.

Twenty-eighth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Twenty-ninth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Harry you don’t have time to worry about that now!” said Tonks.

Dialogue set, fourth sentence.

“And you use it against them. I love it.” said Kingsley with a deep laugh.
“Till now.” said Hannah.

“You should have been turning back the clock and getting more sleep.” said Harry.

“I think I know where this is going.” said Nightstrike with a broad smile.

“Hey, I just woke up, give me a cup of coffee, tea or something and I’m as bright eyed and bushy tailed as you like.” said Harry with a smirk.

“Except some mornings when waking you up is a crime punishable by death.” said Ron with a smirk as well. “Then we don’t give you the tea, we toss it at you and run for our lives.”

“Gives him an escape route.” said Lionus.

“I wasn’t happy about where they put you.” said Flitwick with a somber look. “I didn’t want to come into my office and see the place where one of my brightest students had met such an end.”
Thirty-second paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Harry and Hermione sent each other a bright smile.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Thirty-third paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“[I was hoping we got to see Hermione smack Draco again.” said Harry. “I have that moment seared into my mind.”

Dialogue line.

Thirty-fourth paragraph.

“Not the bloody forest again.” said Remus worriedly.

Thirty-fifth paragraph.

“You didn’t even let her run beside you, you ran ahead of her?” said Ginny.

“Would you believe that I made sure that nothing dangerous was ahead? I didn’t think so.” said Harry with a sheepish grin.

Dialogue line.

Thirty-sixth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“[That was kinda creepy.” said Harry.

“You don’t get used to it, either.” said Hermione.
“And we’ve done a lot.” said Harry, Hermione, and Ron.

“And you shouldn’t have.” said most of the adults in the room.

“Ooh, good point.” said Emmeline Vance.

“Then why were you grinning like a crazy person?” asked Hermione.

“I was getting excited, love impossibilities.” he said with a demonic grin.

“Not a wise move.” said Dumbledore.

“No, you aren’t, I had already known Buckbeak’s escape when I came to the Hospital Wing. The event happened. You would be breaking the law if you hadn’t gone back in time to do it.” said Dumbeldore with a bright smile.

Ron scratched his head in a confused way, while Hermione was figuring out the logic of what the headmaster said. Harry on the other hand smirked. “Brilliant.”

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, second sentence.

“I would tell my past self something only I would know.” said Harry with a shrug.

“Like what?” asked Hermione.

“A number, a certain number that no one else but me would find some importance with.” said Harry.

“But couldn’t anyone just say the number and you’d think they were....uh...well...you.” said Zacharias.

“Are you out of your mind? Have you forgotten how many numbers there are?” said Harry. “The chances of you picking the number at random, is highly unlikely.”

“How unlikely?” asked Zacharias.

“Sort of like having a box of seashells, dozens upon dozens of seashells, picking up a certain one, marking it, putting it back in the box and then getting blindfolded, shake the box and then find the same seashell.” said Harry.

End of dialogue set.

“It’s a strong reason to not use time travel for frivolous reasons.” said Dumbledore.

Dialogue line.

Fortieth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Forty-first paragraph.

“Like those Scattered Shots and Recollection Scrolls.” said Harry.

“Wish they’d come back, loved those things.” said Charlie. “And hated them when it had something to do with a the summer.”

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Forty-second paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Forty-third paragraph.

“Wow, this is getting sort of intense.” said Dennis.

“It’s not over yet.” said Lionus.

Forty-fourth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Forty-fifth paragraph.

“What happens if Hagrid doesn’t sign it?” asked Blaise.

“Buckbeak dies anyway and Hagrid gets fined over two thousand galleons.” said Madam Bones.

“I don’t have that kind of money.” said Hagrid.

Forty-fifth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“It wasn’t easy to dull down the moves. Didn’t want Hermione to ask questions right there.” said Harry.
“I still couldn’t believe what I saw.” said Hermione.

Notice of Execution.

“...” said Charlie with a smirk.

Dialogue line.

End of Notice

Forty-fifth paragraph.

“Beaky never did like ‘walkies’.” said Hagrid with a smile.

“Now is not the time for his preferences to come into play.” said Snape sourly.

“So who’s side are you on now?” asked Ron.

“Ronald!” said Mrs. Weasley.

“I made a very large mistake.” said Snape. “I’m...sorry...”

Sirius raised his eyebrows.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Forty-ninth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Fiftieth paragraph.

“Come on, move faster!” said Neville.
“Did you know someone was going to go and rescue Buckbeak?” asked Madam Bones.

“I knew it was possible that someone close to Hagrid would want to rescue Buckbeak. And I knew that one of Hagrid’s closest friends had a time turner.” said Dumbledore.

“But how did you know that the first set of the three kids didn’t set Buckbeak free?” asked Speckerton.

“Sirius Black said that Buckbeak was still tethered a few moments before he met up with them and dragged Ron and Peter under the tree.” said Albus.

“Don’t stop running, keep going!” said Bill.

“What about the noises that Harry and Ron heard earlier?” asked Seamus.
“How did you not hear that part?” asked Mr. Weasley.

“We were too busy crying.” said Ron.

Fifty-sixth paragraph.

“How Harry had to wrap the rope around a tree just to stop him.” said Hermione.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

“I settled on tea.” said Dumbledore with a fond smile.

“I sorta had the brandy.” said Hagrid quietly.

Dialogue line.

Fifty-seventh paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

“Sounds easy to me.” said Nightstrike.

“Well, not being seen didn’t help much.” said Hermione.

Dialogue line.

Fifty-eighth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“He’s taking charge again.” said Tonks with a smile.

“We were sharing the load.” said Harry.

Dialogue line.

Fifty-ninth paragraph.

Dialogue line.
Sixtieth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Sixty-first paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, second sentence.

Several people laughed.

End of dialogue set.

“And disturbing, you and I were both getting smacked and we can’t go and help ourselves.” said Harry.

Sixty-second paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Sixty-third paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“But then the Ministry people would have come too, then Sirius would have been killed on the spot.” said Madam Bones.

Dialogue line.

Madam Bones smiled faintly.

Sixty-fourth paragraph.

Dialogue set.
“I didn’t even see it.” said Remus apologetically.

“It’s so cute that he’s so devoted to you.” said Mrs. McFinn with a smile.

“Not one person can blame you for celebrating Hagrid.” said Kingsley.

“I was still really pissed off at you.” said Harry.
Seventy-second paragraph.

“What made you pass out?” asked George.

“I-I don’t really know.” said Hermione. “I just got cold, I couldn’t think, and I fainted.”

Seventy-third paragraph.

Seventy-fourth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“That’s the million galleon question.” said Seamus.

Seventy-fifth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Sirius looked confused.

Dialogue line.

“Why are you pressuring him like that?” asked Bill.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Give the kid a chance to breathe?” said Charlie.

“She hates not knowing something.” said Harry.
Hermione blushed.

Dialogue line.

Several people turned and stared at Harry, but they didn’t say anything.

Seventy-sixth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“There’s a newsflash.” said Draco rolling his eyes.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Seventy-seventh paragraph.

“His mind is just fine.” said Sirius running his hand over his godson’s hair.

Dialogue line.

Seventy-eighth paragraph, fourth sentence.

“...You know...when you think about it...” said Fred.

“It makes a lot of sense.” said George.

End of seventy-eighth paragraph.

Seventy-ninth paragraph.

Eightieth paragraph.
“Were you guys talking about anything?” asked Professor Flitwick.

“No, the whole talking about my dad sort of silenced me for a long time.” said Harry.

Dialogue line.

Eighty-first paragraph.

Eighty-second paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“God, that must have been hard.” said Colin.

Dialogue line.

Eighty-third paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“He didn’t say anything about running out into the open.” said Tempest.

Dialogue line.

Eighty-fourth paragraph.

“So I guess you’ll bend the rule, huh?” asked Sirius with a half-hearted smile.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Eighty-fifth paragraph.
Remus paled and clasped his hands together in front of his mouth, muttering silent prayers.

Eighty-sixth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Eighty-seventh paragraph.

“Nothing bugs him.” said Sirius with a smile.

Dialogue line.

Eighty-eighth paragraph.

“Love it how I’m supposed to trust people, yet no one trusts me.” said Harry with a laugh.

“I trust you!” said Hermione and Ron together.

Harry raised his brows at the two, they looked down shamefully.

“I can understand Hermione, she didn’t let him out of her sight. But Ron?” said Charlie.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Trust me, I didn’t forget.” said Harry.

Eighty-ninth paragraph.

“Just don’t get bit by me.” said Remus quietly.

Ninetieth paragraph.

Ninety-first paragraph.

Sirius brushed his lips into Harry’s hair, tears continued to flow down his face.
“Harry...” whimpered Remus softly.

Harry felt Sirius’ arms got a little tighter around his chest, not so tight that he couldn’t breathe, but just tight enough to make sure that Harry knew he was there.

“Someone, anyone...please...” said Sirius in a whimper.

“Wait! You didn’t make a solid Patronus yet!” said Cho.

Madam Bones leaned forward in her seat.

“A murder of Dementors and one person and send them back to their posts? Remarkable.” said Madam Bones with a proud smile.

“A what of Dementors?” asked Colin.

“It’s what a group of Dementors are called, that and crows.” said Harry.
Harry looked out of the corner of his eye and saw both Sirius and Remus were smiling.

“Was that my dad’s Patronus?” asked Harry.

Sirius thought carefully. “I think so, I’m not too sure.”

“How do you not know?” asked Harry.

“Your dad...he never really made a fully corporeal Patronus. He and I weren’t really good at that spell, only Moony managed to handle it. It looked kinda like a stag...then again, it also could have been a cow.” said Sirius slowly but ended with a teasing smile.

“Your mom was really good at that spell though.” said Remus. “Her’s was a doe.”

Harry smiled warmly.

End of hundredth paragraph.

One hundred and first paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“That’s right.” said Remus with tears in his eyes.

One hundred and second paragraph.

One hundred and third paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“He just saved all your butts!” said Lee.

Dialogue line.

One hundred and fourth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“God, let it go.” said Draco shaking his head.

Dialogue line.
“Nice to know she doesn’t think you can do advanced magic like her.” said Lionus thoughtfully.

“Well, he didn’t ever show that...” said Hermione quickly.

“Doesn’t mean he can’t. Miss Granger, never underestimate anyone, always expect them to know more than you. You’ll stay alive a lot longer that way.” said Lionus.

“No.” said Ron.

“Yes it does.” said Luna with a dream-like smile.

“I have to give you some credit, Severus. You weren’t so blinded to leave the children out on the grounds.” said McGonagall with a scowl on her face. She wasn’t ready to forgive the man for blinding himself with revenge for a school age attack.

“Glad he’s occupying his time.” said Ron.

“He wasn’t just going to get the Dementors, I just about flung him out the door. I didn’t want him in the same vicinity as Harry.” said Dumbledore angrily.
“Voice of experience.” said Harry with a smile.

“I’m not fond of flying, I’m really not into flying.” said Hermione.

“Didn’t even tie him up?” asked Tonks curiously.

“I put a charm on the door, he wouldn’t have been able to break the door down with physical force. Going out the window would have been suicidal.” said Flitwick.

“I was contemplating it. The moment they opened the door to come and get me and use the...you-know-what...I’d of jumped out the window.” said Sirius.

“Glad we got there first.” said Harry with a sigh of relief.

“Don’t question, just get on!” said Fred.
Dialogue set.

One hundred and fifteenth paragraph, first sentence.

“He just barely got through.” said Harry.
“I don’t think I can get through the window now.” said Sirius with a smirk.

End of one hundred and fifteenth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

One hundred and sixteenth paragraph.

“Took everything I had not to stay on Buckbeak.” said Harry.

Dialogue line.

One hundred and seventeenth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Mrs. Weasley sent Sirius a grateful smile.

Dialogue line.

One hundred and eighteenth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“So much for sappy goodbyes.” said Sirius with a bark-like laugh.

End of chapter.

“I wanted to just go on my knees, cry, scream...anything.” said Harry.

Dr. Clark got up and stood behind Harry, nuzzling his head against Harry’s. “You okay?”

“Yeah, I just...after I lost you, Officer McFinn, and Miss Holly, I swore I didn’t want to lose anyone else.” said Harry softly.
“I’ll read the last chapter than.” said Dr. Nicodemus. “Twenty-second chapter.”

“Well, this wasn’t so bad.” said Sirius.

“Book ain’t over yet.” said Tonks.
"Let's finish this day off with this chapter." said Dumbledore kindly.

"Sounds good to me." said Harry. "Hagrid and I can get an early start on cooking lessons."

Dialogue line.

“Present.” said Harry raising his hand with a smile.

First paragraph.

“More running, less chatting.” said George.

Dialogue line.

Second paragraph, third sentence.

“You should take Ron and Hermione on one of your Security things!” said Dennis.

“I’ll never take them, or anyone else with me.” said Harry.

“Why not?” asked Dennis.

“I have an obligation to my...clients....that I provide a discreet and private testing. I can’t bring everyone I know into it. It’s bad enough that those Scrolls showed you guys that museum!” said Harry.

End of second paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“I will make all the difficulties I can when I feel justice is not being done.” said Dumbledore sternly.
Dialogue set, second sentence.

“Yeah, I never had a trial, imagine what that could do to several people’s Ministry career.” snorted Sirius.

End of dialogue set.

“I get the distinct feeling that someone would want to coerce me to speak to the Prophet.” said Harry.

Dumbledore looked at Harry curiously. Snape looked down at the floor.

“You’d confund him to follow your story, wouldn’t you?” said McGonagall angrily.

Snape still said nothing.

Third paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Sorry about that, I think I might have left a mark.” said Harry guiltily.

“Not a scratch on me.” said Hermione kindly.

Fourth paragraph.

Dialogue set, second sentence.

“He never did like me. Seems someone that fit my description trapped him in a teapot for two weeks somehow.” said Sirius with an unconvincing innocent look.

End of dialogue set.

Fifth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“How is she not panting but you are?” asked Dr. Clark.

Hermione blushed.

“I carried her on my back.” said Harry with a slight smile.
Sixth paragraph.

Seventh paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“That’s strange.” said Mrs. McFinn.

Eighth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Ninth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“I still can’t believe that you asked the kids to save the two justice victims.” said Rivers shaking his head.

“He couldn’t really trust any of the teachers, he might’ve not been able to tell where their feelings came about.” said Harry thoughtfully. “If a teacher had gone missing a few moments before the Minister had inflicted the Kiss, they would be under suspicion. No one would even think of a student or students going around the Ministry and saving someone.”

Dumbledore smiled and Madam Bones nodded.

Tenth paragraph.

“That would have been really funny if Ron had been awake.” said Hermione.

“I’d of been confused out of my mind.” said Ron.

Dialogue line.

“I’m sorry Albus, it was just...” said Madam Pomfrey looking upset.

“Not at all Poppy, I can understand.” said Dumbledore raising his hand to dismiss his colleague’s worry.

Eleventh paragraph, second sentence.

“Very wise move, she’s hexed me a few times when I failed to tell her I was ill.” said Snape
Eleventh paragraph, fourth sentence.

“I saw his discomfort later and gave him a cup of hot chocolate, went down his throat a bit easier.” said Madam Pomfrey.

Eleventh paragraph, sixth sentence, second comma.

“You managed to choke down four chocolate pieces?” asked George.

“Scratched the hell out of my throat.” said Harry.

End of eleventh paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“They just found the cage empty.” said Dr. Clark with a smile.

Twelfth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“She hates noise, noise of any kind.” said Remus.

Thirteenth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Unless Dumbledore allows it, you can’t Disapparate, and he wouldn’t lay his freedom down on the line like that.” said Hermione.

Dialogue set.

“How can it be me? You just saw me twenty minutes ago.” said Harry innocently.

Dialogue line.

“Isn’t it wonderful that Fudge can be logical and still be wrong?” said Tonks with a smile.
“Well, at least Snape won’t start smacking you.” said Sirius with a low growl.
Dumbledore and Snape looked away.

“Only you.” said Bathilda with laugh.
Dumbledore still, however looked very uncomfortable.

“I’ll never tell!” said Harry in a singsong voice.

“I’ve never seen him so unbalanced.” said Madam Pomfrey, even she was a becoming pale.

“At the time, I thought they never left the Wing.” said Madam Pomfrey.
“Wait...what?” asked Snape looking up.

“There’s a piece missing there.” said Dumbledore looking confused.

“Indeed, something, horrifying happened.” said Madam Pomfrey. “And it didn’t end like that.”

“I don’t remember anything else happening.” said Hermione looking confused.

“Me either.” said Harry.

“How could you forget?” asked Snape looking bewildered.

Suddenly the little balls of light came shooting out of the book in Dr. Nicodemus’ hands.

“Those are Scattered Shots, Holly, they show a piece of Harry’s past that the books don’t elaborate on.” said Dr. Clark explaining them to Mrs. McFinn.

“But nothing special happened, or did it?” asked Hermione.

The lights flew into each person in the Great Hall, darkness met each of their eyes and when the light came to them, they found themselves in the Hospital Wing. A second set of Snape and Dumbledore were standing in the middle of the Hospital Wing.

Snape hung his head in shame. The Snape of the past however, was bursting with rage.

“I’m afraid I don’t see any point in troubling them further.” said the past Dumbledore calmly.

The younger Snape snarled fiercely to Dumbledore and then to younger Harry. Without a warning, Snape whipped out his wand, a spell shot out of the tip of his wand and slammed into Harry’s chest.

“OI!” shouted Sirius loudly.

Harry stared at the scene with confusion, as did Hermione. “I don’t remember this.” said Harry in shock.

The younger Harry was slammed into the wall, and knocked out. The Watchers stared in shock at the unconscious boy lying in the corner.

Dumbledore rushed over to Harry and pulled the small boy into his arms.

“I don’t remember this either.” said Hermione fretfully.

Dumbledore carried Harry to another bed and laid him gently on the bed. Harry groaned and opened his eyes slowly. “Ohh...” said Harry softly.

“Are you alright?” asked Dumbledore worriedly.

“My chest hurts a bit.” said Harry.
Madam Pomfrey hurried over to the boy and casted a few healing spells over him as Hermione huddled beside the head of Ron’s bed, shielding him.

“I really don’t remember this.” said Harry again.

Snape, who was succumbing to the effects of the Calming Draught, turned on his heel and stalked out of the hospital.

“Damn.” said Tonks in a whisper.

“It’s taking everything I have not to hex you into a puddle.” said Remus angrily.

“I still don’t know how I don’t remember this.” said Hermione.

Then the scene shifted, the Hospital Wing was dark Ron was asleep, but Harry and Hermione were on a different bed. Hermione was whimpering quietly, and Harry was busy trying to comfort her.

“It’s better not to, I kinda don’t want to remember it.” said Harry.

“I don’t want to remember it either, but Memory Charms are tricky, we’d miss a whole night, and what if Ron wants to hear about it later? We won’t remember any of it.” said Hermione fretfully. “And my parents tell me, forgetting things don’t make you any stronger.”

“But they don’t hurt you either.” said Harry softly. “Somethings, are best forgotten.” he slowly raised his hand, “Sorry Hermione.”

“Sorry for what?” asked Hermione. But Harry brought his hand down, almost like lightning, Hermione quickly passed out.

“You knocked me out?” said Hermione over to Harry in shock.

“Uh...I apologized right?” said Harry with uncertainty.

His past self laid Hermione gently down on the bed, covered her up with the blanket. He stood beside Hermione’s bed and muttered a spell. A soft cloud of magic wafted down around Hermione’s head. The silver cloud slowly crawled around her head, like a heavenly halo, and then it was gone.

“That spell, at thirteen, you knew that spell!” said Dumbledore in awe.

Hermione looked at Harry in shock. “You chose to mess with my mind?” she shrieked.

“Looks like I messed with more than just yours.” said Harry.

They looked over at Harry, who was standing in front of the mirror above the sink in the back. Harry looked intently at the mirror, then he casted the same spell that he had just used on Hermione, on himself.

Once the cloud had disappeared, Harry blinked heavily, looked at the mirror in a confused daze, turned and went back to bed.

“You eradicated that memory? Why?” asked Madam Bones.

“I don’t know why, I don’t remember doing it. Even watching myself do it, I don’t remember it happening.” said Harry slowly.

The lights left their bodies and they found themselves back in the Great Hall.

Hermione opened her mouth, but Harry stopped her.

“You have every right to be angry with me, and I’m really sorry, I don’t know why. I can only guess that...I wanted to protect you.” said Harry. “Though I should know, you can handle yourself just fine.”

Hermione closed her mouth, not knowing what to say.

“I hate awkward silences.” said Dr. Nicodemus with a cough.

Dialogue line.

“Ya THINK?” said Lee.

Dialogue line.

“This was after Harry and Hermione were tended to.” said Dumbledore quietly.

Dialogue set, fifth sentence.

“There’s nothing new.” said Bill.

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

“I had my fingers crossed behind my back.” said Dumbledore.

Dialogue set, second sentence.

“It’s happened three times now.” said Harry.

End of dialogue set.

“I beg your pardon!” screeched Madam Pomfrey.

“You are not going to use my dragons for guard duty!” shouted Charlie.
Dialogue set, first sentence.

“I wanted to put them at ease, Miss Granger did calm down a little as I smiled.” said Dumbledore.

End of dialogue set.

“No more visitors, not that night.” said Madam Pomfrey crossly.

Eighteenth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Nineteenth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Except for the fact that Snape attacked you.” said Ron.

“What did you do to punish Snape?” asked Sirius.

“The Headmaster kept me at the school, after he soundly cursed me for over an hour, I had to write I will not attack a student ever again, under penalty of death, on every blackboard in the school, thirty times. I was lucky to get done with it by the start of term.” said Snape quietly.

Twentieth paragraph, second sentence.

“I still couldn’t go, but I just wanted to go down to the lake and relax.” said Harry.

Twentieth paragraph, third sentence.

“I figured Spain.” said Harry.

“France actually, met a really nice mademoiselle.” said Sirius with a smile. “Too bad she was married.” he added with a shake of his head.

End of twentieth paragraph.

“I felt a little bit more confident about that spell since that night.” said Harry with a smile.
“I didn’ know yeh knew already.” said Hagrid.

“Hey, my Poker Face is better when I have cards in my hands.” said Ron with a smirk.

“I was absolutely starving.” said Remus. “I got close to a deer, but a normal wolf scared the stupid thing off.”

“Vicious! You try and kill an innocent man, and then you ruin a man’s chance of ever truly living!” shouted Mrs. McFinn angrily.

Snape looked down.

“Tell me you punished him for that!” said Mrs. McFinn.

“He was in a different way; he took a fifty percent pay cut. Half his wages go to Remus, Severus now supports Remus.” said Dumbledore, his smile faltered when he saw Remus’ confused face. Dumbledore massaged the bridge of his nose. “Severus? Did you even tell Remus he had money in his vault now?”

“Not my fault he doesn’t check.” scowled Snape.

“Don’t make me hex you.” said Dumbledore sternly.

“You're way too noble, one mistake, and it wasn’t even really your fault.” said Dr. Clark.
“Not like I’m just going to let him go without saying goodbye!” said Harry. “I’ve already experienced what it was like to let someone go without a goodbye, never doing that again.”

“I left the school with more clothes than what I came in with.” said Remus with a smile.

“No one needed to know what happened.” said Remus.

“But I wasn’t told of Severus’ attack on you.” said Remus.

“I didn’t need you biting Severus.” said Dumbledore with a half-hearted smile.
“Actually, I received many letters, asking your removal, and just as many letters asking for you to stay. The grades for Defense Against the Dark Arts class had never been higher.” said Dumbledore with a smile.

Remus leaned over Sirius’ lap and whispered, “I actually saw tears in your eyes that day, took everything I had not to hold you.”

“I wanted to change the subject.” said Remus.

“And your dad is there to protect you.” said Sirius, kissing the top of Harry’s head. “From your greatest fear.”

“You gave it back to them?” shrieked Mrs. Weasley.

“They would need it, in case something bad happens. Harry, Ron and Hermione wouldn’t use it for the purposes we would.” said Sirius.
“How about the forty-nine different ways that don’t rely on a secret passage out of the castle?” said Harry with a smirk.

Sirius stared at his godson. “He’d be kissing your feet I think.”

“And Lily would have you over her knee.” said Remus with a laugh.

“I’ll settle for them not knowing.” said Harry.

“I would have been disappointed if you weren’t there.” said Dumbledore.

“You never do ask for help, do you dear boy?” said Dumbledore.

“Kinda ruins the adult coolness of the situation when the adult starts bawling like a baby.” said Sirius with a laugh.

“I had never seen you so sad before.” said Dumbledore faintly.
“And I lost Sirius, and Remus, all in twenty-four hours.” said Harry.

“You didn’t lose us, we were just...misplaced.” said Sirius.

“I should learn to put my toys back in the toy box.” said Harry with a smirk.

“A fate I still have nightmares about.” said Sirius.

“Something tells me that you’ve heard a few doozys.” said Ron.

“I’ve had a large amount of interesting conversations with her.” said Dumbledore with a smile.

"More with him than anyone else." said Dumbledore with a smile.

"Why?" asked Sirius.

"I was impressed with the fact that he would share the information. It's been known that real predictions have been kept a close secret between the Seer and the listener." said Dumbledore.

"I've had more than just that one!" said Professor Trelawney indignantly.

"No it doesn't." said Dr. Clark quickly.
"Either way, it was still my fault." said Harry softly.

"The one who holds that responsibility is Tom, dear boy. No one else." said Dumbledore.

Dialogue set.

"It really was noble." cooed Romilda.

"Don't hug me again." said Harry quickly.

Romilda looked put out.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

Lionus whistled. "That's a handy weapon for you."

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

"Don't know when that will hit." said Harry with a snort.

Thirty-seventh a paragraph.

Dialogue line.

"Yeah, he was a noble idiot too." said Sirius with a small smile.

Thirty-eighth paragraph.

"I'd never laugh at your expense dear boy, well...except for that one time..." said Dumbledore.

"What?" asked Harry.

Dumbledore smiled warmly. "I was babysitting you one evening, you were just sitting happily on the rug in the living room, playing a game with blocks, and then suddenly I heard a crash in the next room. That blasted cat," he smiled even brighter. "that cat was a menace, wasn't an evening that I came over that it didn't try and destroy the house. I came back and you were gone.

"I nearly drove myself mad trying to find you." said Dumbledore. "I ran all over crawling distance trying to locate you, then I heard another crash, this time in the kitchen. I hurried in the kitchen, and there you were, covered head to toe in chocolate pudding. I don't remember ever laughing so hard in my life. You had this tiny little indignant look on your face. Until of course you tasted what was all over you, then you were the happiest baby I've ever seen."

"To be honest, I would laugh at you too." said Sirius with a chuckle.

Dialogue line.

"I don't think anyone would ever really laugh at you for that." said Remus with a kind smile.

Dialogue line.

"I wasn’t close enough to see my own eyes." said Harry.

Thirty-ninth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, second sentence.

Luna smiled warmly, as the rest of the school had to wipe tears from their eyes or shift in their seats.

End of dialogue set.

"So, you knew what they called themselves?" asked Terry.

"They referred to each by those nicknames most of the time during their youth. It's only natural that the teachers be aware of their pseudonyms," said Dumbledore. "But the part of Animagi, I did not know until the prior night.

Fortieth paragraph.

Dialogue set.

Forty-first paragraph.

"Did I confuse you? I apologize." said Dumbledore with a smile.

"I was more confused about when you saw the Lion King." said Harry.

Dumbledore laughed loudly, "A particularly tragic tale, I quite enjoy watching it over and over again."
Forty-second paragraph.

"It was insane, I heard one that someone said that Sirius killed an Auror and blew Flitwick's office apart." said Hermione.

"I got wind of one where they said that jumped from the window, turned into a bat and flew away, they thought you were a vampire." said Harry shaking his head.

"Each one I heard was too stupid to mention." said Ron.

Forty-third paragraph, second sentence.

Several people snorted with laughter.

"Sucks when someone better than you outwits you isn't it?" said Fred with a cheer.

End of forty-third paragraph.

Dialogue line.

"Really, Mr. Weasley?" said Madam Bones. "I think you should make the proposal that Minister of Magic's office keeps out of our business unless they know what they're doing!"

Percy turned a deadly shade of white.

Forty-fourth paragraph.

Sirius kissed the top of his godson's head.

Forty-fifth paragraph.

"Everyone but Draco, right?" said Bill.

"Actually, he faked his enjoymen..." said Harry.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

"We got a Death Eater instead." said Harry with a scowl on his face.
"Gee, we weren't even thinking about it." said Ron scratching his head.

"Don't freaking blame you!" said George.

"But I'm amazed that you aren't terrified to go home, you just sound miserable. Like a little kid not getting to go to a theme park." said Dr. Clark.

"I'm used to it. I knew nothing I did was going to change a thing. Having Sirius as a wanted fugitive relative helped a bit." said Harry with a slight smile.

Sirius' breath hitched deep inside of him. Sirius gave Harry's shoulder a squeeze. "I'm so sorry."

"I don't blame you, I blame someone else." said Harry coldly.

Dumbledore hung his head heavily in shame. Even Snape's face held some discomfort.

"Very good Harry, I called Severus into my office to analyze your test results. I showed my disgust with him quite vividly." said Dumbledore sternly.

"Only cause you didn't remember that he actually hit you with a hex." said Mr. Weasley.

Snape flinched horribly.

"Why not keep on your guard around him?" growled Moody, "Forgetting that someone attacked you won't keep you alive."

"I could handle the dislike, the feeling that he wanted to expel me at every turn. But knowing that a teacher, that I secretly admire and actually hold in pretty high esteem, I didn't want to feel that he was reenacting Uncle Vernon." said Harry quietly. "Also, I guess I didn't want Hermione to flinch every time she went to his class and then her grades would suffer."

"You've been giving your motive a bit more thought then, huh?" said Ron.

"A bit yeah," said Harry. "Cause I don't remember the motive I did have."

Forty-eighth paragraph, first sentence.

"And yet, we still make more money than him, and we're infinitely happier." said Fred and George together.

Forty-eighth paragraph, second sentence.

"Alright!" shouted Sirius happily.

Forty-eighth paragraph, thrird sentence.

"The only gloomy lot, which was normally, was the Slytherin House." said a sixth year Hufflepuff.

End of forty-eighth paragraph.

"You really make the rest of us feel sort of guilty about that." said George.

"Huh? How do you figure?" asked Harry.

"We take good times for granted, you try and hold onto as many as you can." said Fred.

Forty-ninth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

"Thank goodness." said Hannah. "You didn't need that much stress."

Dialogue line.

Bill whistled. "You beat even Dad's record."

"Well, it wasn't all that fair, she lived in the Muggle world, dad didn't." said Charlie.

“I thought you said you didn’t do very well.” said Emmeline.
“I only used what the books said, not what actually happened in the Muggle World.” said Hermione.

Dialogue set.

"Should have dropped one more." said Ron shaking his head.

"I like the rest of my classes a lot though!" said Hermione in shock.

"We like you sane a little bit more though." said Harry.

Dialogue line.

"Like you've never kept things from them." said Blaise.

"Well...." said Ron shrugging.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

"Are you nuts? He just lost his only hope of ever getting away from the Dursley's! How is he supposed to be happy?" asked Draco.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

"No thanks." said Ron.

"He's got a point Hermione. That class isn't for everyone." said Mr. Weasley.

Fiftieth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

"Well, at least you get some perks from your job." said Lionus with a frown.

"Uh..." said Mr. Weasley.

"No, its fine...those are fine...Fudge however is another story." said Lionus.
"Were you being sarcastic there?" said Ernie.

"Yeah, but I knew I could use something to let me go." said Harry.

"What?" asked Sirius.

"You." said Harry.

"Why not?" asked Remus.

"I had enough chocolate just on the trip to Hogwarts, didn't need any leaving." said Harry with a smile. "Also, I wanted to abstain from chocolate, in honor of you."

"Suck up." said Sirius.

"Shut up." said Harry with a smirk.

"They're called trees." said George.

"It's Pig!" said Ginny.

"Haven't been able to catch the fluffy menace since." muttered Ron good-naturedly.

Both owls seemed to come as if called by some unknown force. Hedwig sailed serenely down and landed on Harry's shoulder and Pig decided to flap and hoot around the Great Hall as if someone had injected pure sugar in his feathery body.
"They are complete polar opposites." said Mrs. McFinn as she watched Pigwidgeon flutter about.

"I swear he hates the ground." said Ron shaking his head. "Hedwig, can't you show him some...stability or something?"

Hedwig slowly looked at Harry.

"I'm thinking that means, she tried." said Harry with a laugh as he stroked her feathers.

End of fifty-fourth paragraph.

"After the incident with Scabbers, regardless what the truth was, didn't want Crookshanks to try and hurt anything else." said Ron.

Fifty-fifth paragraph.

"I shouldn't have shouted." said Harry sheepishly.

"I'm over-excited that you get excited from my letters." said Sirius softly.

Dialogue line.

"Not another bright move." said Remus.

Sirius' Letter, third paragraph.

"Really eager." said George.

Sirius letter, fifth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

"Big whoop, but he didn't hex the broom." said George.

Dialogue line.

Fifty-sixth paragraph.

"He saw Hedwig nibble my finger and tried copying it." said Harry.

Letter from Sirius', first paragraph.
"Gladly!" said Harry with a bright smile.

Letter from Sirius, second paragraph.

"What brought that to your attention? The fact that he was almost run over by the bus?" said Tonks.

End of Sirius' letter.

Fifty-seventh paragraph.

Permission to Hogsmede

"That's AWESOME!" shouted Tonks happily.

"I was happy to do it." said Sirius. "Beats the hell out of him trying to sneak out every time."

Dialogue line.

P.S

"So...you gave Ron the owl?" said Mrs. Weasley in shock.

"I did." said Sirius.

Fifty-eighth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

"What the hell?" asked the twins together.

Dialogue line.

Fifty-ninth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

"Fool me once shame on you, fool me twice, shame on me." said Ron.

Sixtieth paragraph, fourth sentence, first comma.

"He recognized the hair." said Harry with a laugh. "From two summers ago."

End of sixtieth paragraph.
"He wasn't happy." said Harry.

Dialogue set.

"A scowl and growl." said Harry.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

"Yes I do." said Harry.

Dialogue set.

"I love you." said Sirius.

"I knew you'd like that." said Harry.

Sixty-first paragraph, first sentence, second comma.

"What I wouldn't give to see that look." said Mrs. McFinn. Suddenly a quick picture of Uncle Vernon's face appeared in the middle of the school. The school erupted in cheers and laughter.

"He didn't change much since the last Scroll!" said Lee gleefully.

"The books aren't supposed to do that." said Speckerton quietly. "First the early start, now this? What's going on?"

End of chapter.

End of book

"Anything would be better than the years prior." said Neville.

"Well, let's end for today, an early dinner than the rest of the evening is yours." said Dumbledore with a smile.

Chapter End Notes
Thanks for reading, please review
Harry nibbled on a bit of perch and ate a few spoonfuls of mashed potatoes.

"Harry you should really eat more." said Mrs. McFinn softly.

"I'm teaching Hagrid how to cook tonight. First lesson till the weekend comes around." said Harry. "Coming Hagrid?"

"Well...I...uh..." said Hagrid nervously.

Harry smiled. "Ron made the same noise when I told him he was going to go practicing with me at five in the morning on the grounds. Come on, we'll work with start with easy stuff to start with."

"Will I fit in there?" said Hagrid. "In the kitchens?"

"Ah, well, the kitchen itself, perhaps, the door, maybe not." said Harry.

"Allow me." said Dumbledore with a smile. In the middle of the room, a pair of large stoves, two counters with a large sink and two large fridges full of food. "There you are."

"No excuse now Hagrid, come on." said Harry, taking a hair tie off his wrist and tying his long white hair, with black fringes, back into a ponytail. He washed his hands in one of the sinks. He then threw a small white apron around his waist. Hagrid slowly came over and mimicked Harry's motions minus the apron, he didn’t know he was going to cook that evening and left his in his hut.

"Alright now that that's done. What do you want to make? A treat, dessert, meat dish, vegetable dish or something completely different?" said Harry wiping his hands on a towel.

"You pick." said Hagrid, his face looking apprehensive.

Harry shook his head with a smile. "God, you're worse than Ron. Well, we'll do a dessert thing. Um, let me check and see what we've got to play with." He opened the fridge, in the cupboards above the counters and under the counters.

"Well, we can make a certain kind of dessert that I took to Mrs. Figg a few times over the summer when she couldn't get around much due to tripping over a cat or two," said Harry. "She really liked it, and it took about an hour to make it, but it tastes really good." said Harry.

Harry took out several pots, a double whisker, a bowl and measuring spoons and cups. Then he went over to the fridge and grabbed some dark colored berries, then from the cupboard grabbed a bottle of thick liquid, a lemon a few apples and a bag of sugar.

"You ready to get started?" asked Harry with a bright smile.
Harry walked Hagrid slowly through recipe that he had memorized in his head. Once he had to turn off the stove when he, (while he was over with his own pots and pans), could smell that the concoction he was having Hagrid make was beginning to burn.

"Just keep stirring it Hagrid." said Harry with a smile.

Trying to explain to Hagrid that the peel of the lemon was supposed to go in the pot was an adventure in itself.

"Why put it in there?" asked Hagrid in confusion. “Shouldn’ t go in the garbage?”

"It just does, it makes it taste better." said Harry reassuringly. "Don't worry about it, it won't stay in there."

People were watching eagerly as Harry taught Hagrid and focused also on his own dessert. They tried giving Hagrid helpful hints as they looked over the stoves and around the counters as he cooked. Mrs. Weasley tried giving him different spices to drop into the pots, but Harry stopped her before she could sprinkle any in.

"Don't, trust me, don't." said Harry kindly. "The wrong spice at the wrong time screws it all to hell."

The dish that Hagrid was making should have only took him forty-five minutes, but he kept burning the pot a few times, so it took about two hours plus.

"Sorry it took a long time." said Hagrid sheepishly took the pot off the stove and placed it on a pot holder.

"Ah, don't worry about it, it took me this long to make what I wanted to make." said Harry with a smile. He turned and on a delicate glass cake display. It was a large, beautifully decorated cake.

"What's that?" asked Hagrid staring at the cake as Harry placed it gently on the counter. Harry reached under and pulled out a crystal punch bowl and set it beside the cake.

"It's a Black Forest Cake." said Harry.

"And what did I make?" asked Hagrid.

"You made," said Harry, tipping the contents of the pot carefully into the punch bowl. "Elderberry soup."

"Elderberry soup?" said Hannah.

Harry took a spoonful of the soup and tried it, he smiled. "Try it. You'll like it."

Ron and Hermione took a cup each and drank deeply from it. "This is really good Hagrid!" said Hermione with a sincere smile.

Ron showed his enthusiasm by smacking his lips and scooping another cupful of the soup. Watching the school's third biggest eater take another cup of Hagrid's soup, people began to line up behind Ron taking cups and getting ready to taste Hagrid's soup.

"So why did you bake that cake?" asked Hermione.

"I made it for those two nuts." said Harry pointing to Sirius and Remus. "Thought they could use a pick-me-up." said Harry.
"Sounds good to me!" said Remus hurrying over and grabbing a plate. Sirius came rushing over and grabbed a plate as well. "Me too!"

Harry looked at them, one eyebrow raised. "Should I just cut the cake in half for you guys?"

"Yes!" said the two of them.

"I think you'd better give them a bit of a smaller slice than that, sweetie." said Mrs. McFinn with a sweet smile. "That's a really rich cake."

"And you want a slice." said Dr. Clark with a smirk as he sipped a cup of Elderberry soup.

"It's my favorite cake of all time!" said Mrs. McFinn.

"Here you go." said Harry slicing the cake up and handing the three adults a piece each.

Dumbledore walked over with a cup of soup, drinking deeply. "Marvelous Hagrid. A great triumph for your first lesson."

"Thanks Dumbledore." said Hagrid turning red behind his beard.

"We should do this again." said Flitwick drinking from his own cup. "Quite enjoyable, people walking around and chatting, all while eating…well drinking dessert. Like a large party."

"I quite agree, perhaps with a bit more planning, and convincing, we could ask Harry to hold these classes every once in a while," said Dumbledore with a smile over to Harry.

"We can give it a shot." said Harry sipping a cup of the soup. "Just me and Hagrid doing it, or me, Hagrid, Mrs. McFinn, Mrs. Weasley and other people?"

"You sure I should...?" asked Hagrid.

"Take a cup of that soup and you'll find out why." said Harry with a smile. "There you go." he said as Hagrid drank deeply from his bucket sized cup. Hagrid filled his glass several times afterwards.

"You're a fine teacher." said Rivers smiling as he drank his own Elderberry soup.

"Not really, I didn't pay enough attention and helped burn two batches of the soup." said Harry.

Dumbledore patted Harry's back affectionately. "That did not change the results; you helped Hagrid make something absolutely delicious."

Hagrid blushed and smiled warmly. Hagrid patted Harry’s back, and accidentally caused Harry to spill and spit out his Elderberry soup.

He wiped his mouth and dropped a rag on the ground, then he smiled and turned to his Black Forest cake. All that was remaining was crumbs and smears of chocolate ganache. He looked up and saw Mrs. McFinn dabbing her mouth with a chocolate stained napkin, whereas Sirius and Remus had it all over their faces.

"Remind me to make that cake a lot bigger next time. Or at least more than one." said Harry.

Later that night Harry curled into one of the armchairs in their suite. He was busy writing in a very large notebook, while Mrs. McFinn was standing over him.
"He doesn't have a stove?" asked Mrs. McFinn.

"It's more of a pioneer kind of thing." said Harry. "So I'm writing a bunch of stuff he can make in his pots, mostly stews and stuff."

"I think that cookbook idea is a good one." said Dr. Clark with a bright smile. "It'll help him practice from class to class."

Sirius groaned and stretched out on the sofa. "That cake was good."

"Absolutely." said Remus on the same couch, almost asleep.

"They didn't leave any for us!" pouted Leroy.

"You had three cups of that soup though!" said Rudolph.

"Still wanted a piece of that cake." grumbled Leroy.

The door opened, revealing Dumbledore and with him, the Diggorys.

Harry looked up at them in shock, but lowered his eyes.

"We start the fourth book, and I thought...." said Dumbledore softly. He motioned the Diggorys to sit in the only unoccupied sofa in the room.

Sirius looked worriedly over to Harry, who gently set the notebook aside. Harry leaned forward in his chair and placed his now clammy hands on his face.

"I know, warnings.....um...some parts of the next book, aren't really kind." said Harry gently. "But...you gotta listen to me, we were just kids, and kids...can be cruelest people on the planet. We don't know any better and we just don't care."

Dumbledore smiled sadly. "Harry, I already warned them about that, I brought them here, so they could speak to you."

Harry gazed somewhat fearfully at the Diggorys.

Mrs. Diggory walked over and kneeled in front of Harry. "Dumbledore told us that you still beat yourself up over what happened." she asked softly.

Harry closed his eyes.

"Harry, it wasn't your fault, you didn't know what was going to happen. How could you possibly know what was going to happen? Not even Dumbledore knew." said Mrs. Diggory.

"I should have...." said Harry.

"We all think back and say we should have done more." said Mrs. Diggory, tears were filling her eyes and trickling down. "Trust me, I should have done a lot of things that I didn't but that doesn't make me a bad mother because I didn't kiss and hug Cedric every minute like clockwork."

Harry sniffed and wiped his eyes.

"Oh, baby." said Mrs. McFinn wrapping her arms around Harry. Dr. Clark stood up and ran his fingers through Harry's hair.
"Harry..." said Sirius with a worried look.

"I'm okay, just...tired..." said Harry trying to sound convincing.

"Well, let's get you to bed then, I'll put the balm on your back." said Sirius comfortingly. Harry took his hand and allowed himself to be led into their bedroom.

Harry walked over to the bedside table and took the balm, placed a bit on his hand and gently rubbed it on his wounds. He accidentally pressed too hard and released a hiss of pain.

"You okay?" asked Sirius quickly as he pulled the covers back from the bed.

"I'm fine, it's just, I pushed too hard." said Harry breathing deeply.

Harry finished with the front of his body and he lay carefully down on the bed, Sirius took the balm from Harry's hands and gently massaged the balm into his godson's wounds.

"How's that? Should I think of another way?" asked Sirius.

"No, this is great." said Harry sleepily.

Sirius finished putting the balm over the torn pieces of flesh and gently covered his cub with the blanket carefully. He leaned over and kissed the top of Harry's head, "Thanks for letting us baby you. It helps us make it up to you." he said softly.

"No problem." said Harry with a yawn.

Sirius walked back out to the room, discovering Lionus standing in the room as well.

"How's the healing salve?" asked Lionus leaning against the fireplace.

"It's healing, thanks to that stuff." said Sirius with a smile.

"Just who are you?" asked Mr. Diggory suspiciously.

"Lionus, Captain of the Rangers, European division." said Lionus smartly.

"Your real name, sir." said Mr. Diggory, not willing to trust someone he did not know.

The room became very quiet.

"I don't answer to you, Amos Ulyssus Diggory of Coldolphin Lane, Nicklehampton." said Lionus, his glare was causing Mr. Diggory to turn pale.

"Hey, keep it down, Harry's probably asleep." said Remus.

"Sorry about that." said Lionus quickly. "But frankly, Diggory, you don't need to worry about me, unless you break the law. If you do, then seeing me is the worst thing you could hope to happen."

Mr. Diggory cowered slightly. Mrs. Diggory looked up to Lionus in awe.

"Sir...?" she asked softly.

"Yes, my lady?" said Lionus bowing low, just because he had killed over a thousand criminals to date, didn't mean he wasn't a gentleman....well...sort of....

"Could you find our son's killer?" asked Mrs. McFinn.
"Already on it, Madam." said Lionus with a smile.

"Doesn't look like it." said Mr. Diggory.

"There's more than just me, Viper, Nightstrike, and Wildfire in my company." said Lionus.

"Also, Sirius, Remus, I believe you and I need to have a bit of a chat." said Dumbledore sternly.

"Uh..." said Sirius.

"Er..." said Remus.

"We'll have a nice long discussion very soon. Perhaps while Harry is giving Hagrid a complete lesson." said Dumbledore, his eyes blazing. "You, Remus, Severus and I."

The next morning, Harry sat up in his bed and stretched his thin frame. He yawned and looked over to Sirius, expecting him to be asleep. He was sorely mistaken.

"Mornin' kiddo." said Sirius sitting on the edge of his bed.

"Have you been up all night?" asked Harry.

"Sort of." said Sirius with a thoughtful look.

"Any idea why?" asked Harry.

"I just wanted to think for a bit." said Sirius.

"About what?" asked Harry, slipping on a pair of jeans, the students began to abandon the dress code and came down in casual clothes.

"All the wasted years, I could have been a part of your life if I didn't fly off the handle." said Sirius.

Harry groaned. "Don't worry about it, just think about the time we're going to have!" said Harry with a smile. "And just think, someday I'll have kids, and I'll bring them over to torture you properly."

"That's mean." said Sirius throwing the pillow over to him.

"Not my fault you're depressed for a stupid reason." said Harry with a laugh. "Hungry for something special? I'm in the mood to cook."

"Biscuits and sausage gravy?" said Sirius eagerly.

"I could go with bacon." said Remus in the doorway with a smile.

"What are you doing up so early?" asked Harry.

"Full moon coming, I just went to go see Dr. Nicodemus and asked for that serum to make the transformation easier." said Remus.

"I thought he said you didn't have to transform." said Sirius.

Remus stared, "Did he? I'll have to ask again. All he did was give it to me."
"Should we get Mrs. McFinn and Dr. Clark up?" asked Harry.

"Uh...no...they'll get up later." said Remus quickly.

Harry raised his eyebrows, then a sly smile went across his lips and he covered his eyes with his hand. "I'm taking that to mean that they're no longer just "friend friends"."

Remus looked taken aback.

"Guess that means I'm right." said Harry with a laugh. "Wish they told me, I'm not seven anymore."

"They didn't know you'd take it." said Sirius easily.

"Well, it's been a long time since Officer McFinn...passed away." said Harry, his eyes closed and he rubbed his shoulder to comfort himself. "And I don't know if Miss Holly's dated anyone else since, I kinda doubt it, especially if she's lived her mother. Dr. Clark, also pretty easy to assume he didn't date anyone while he was captured."

"Oh..." said Sirius.

"Well!" said Harry standing up and throwing his sweater over his button up shirt. "Let's get your breakfasts started."

The sky was just beginning to be colored orange and pink from the dawn. He walked them down to the kitchens and set to work on their food.

"Hello Harry Potter!" squeaked Dobby as he hugged Harry's leg.

"Hi Dobby." said Harry kindly. "You okay?"

"Dobby is fine, Dobby is so distraught that Dobby attacked Harry Potter." said Dobby, tears beginning to well up in his round tennis ball eyes and fall down his pointed nose.

"It wasn't your fault Dobby, and they got the person that made you do that to me, I think." said Harry with a smile.

Dobby sighed with relief and dried his eyes on the jumper Ron had given the year prior.

Harry walked over to closest stove and began to make breakfast for his father's old school friends.

After they ate their fill of sausage gravy biscuits, and bacon omelets, they went upstairs into the Great Hall and waited for the rest of the people to come down from their nice warm beds to join them.

"Well, at least there's no dementors in this one." said Sirius sitting in the bowl with his hands behind his head.

"No...but..." said Remus.

"But what?" asked Sirius.
"I'm constantly in danger. Remember the Triwizard Tournament?" said Harry softly. "And the whole bit at the end."

Sirius uttered a curse that caused Remus to reach behind him and smack him on the back of the head.

I thought I would do this, for anything that Harry makes that isn't just made up in my mind:

So far, the only thing that doesn't have a recipe is Harry's Seven Day Spaghetti.

Elderberry Soup: By THELASTBARON

~~~~~~~~~~~~

5oz elderberries

1 qt water, divided

1 1/2 teaspoons cornstarch

1/2 pound apples- peeled cored and diced

1 lemon peel

white sugar- to taste

Place the elderberries in a pot with 2 cups of water, bring to a boil. Reduce heat to low and simmer for 10 minutes. Remove from heat, puree in a blender until smooth, and return to pot. In a small bowl, mix the cornstarch with 1 tablespoon of the puree, and stir into the pot to thicken.

In a separate pot, bring the apples and remaining to a boil. Place the lemon peel in the pot. Reduce heat to low and simmer for 10 minutes. Remove peel. Mix the elderberry puree into apple mixture and sweeten to taste with sugar.

Black Forest Cake by: Valinda

~~~~~~~~~~~~~~

1 2/3 cups of all purpose flour

2/3 unsweetened cocoa powder

1 1/2 tsp baking soda

1 tsp salt
1/2 cup shortening

1 1/2 cups of white sugar

2 eggs

1 tsp vanilla extracting

1/2 kirschwasser

1/2 cup butter

3 1/2 cups confectioner sugar

1 pinch salt

1 tsp strong brewed coffee

2 (14 oz) cans pitted Bing cherries, drained

2 cups heavy whipping cream

1/2 tsp vanilla extracting

1 tbs kirschwasser

1 (1 oz) square semisweet chocolate

Preheat oven to 350 degrees F (175 degrees C). Line the bottoms of two 8 inch round pans with parchment paper circles. Sift together flour, cocoa, baking soda and 1 tsp salt. Set aside

Cream shortening and sugar until light and fluffy. Beat in eggs and vanilla. Beat in flour mixture, alternating with buttermilk, until combined. Pour into 2 round 8 inch pans

Bake at 350 degrees F (175 degrees C) for 35 to 40 minutes, or until a toothpick inserted into the cake comes out clean. Cool completely. Remove paper from cakes. Cut each layer in half, horizontally, making four layers total. Sprinkle layers with the 1/2 kirshwasser.

In a medium bowl, cream the butter until light and fluffy. Add confectioners sugar, pinch of salt, and coffee; beat until smooth. If the consistency is too thick, add a couple of teaspoons of cherry juice or milk. Spread the first layer of cake with 1/3 of the filling. Top with 1/3 of the cherries. Repeat with the remaining layers.

In a separate bowl, whip the cream to stiff peaks. Beat in 1/2 teaspoons vanilla and 1 tablespoon kirschwasser. Frost top and sides of cake. Sprinkle with chocolate curls made by using a potato peeler on semisweet baking chocolate.

I hope this was a nice added bonus! Most of my recipes come from a charming little website, allrecipes.com.
Chapter End Notes

Thanks for reading, please review
Everyone piled into Great Hall, grabbing plates and helping themselves to breakfast. Dumbledore was the third to last person to come in, he came over and placed a gentle hand on Harry's shoulder.

"How are you doing this morning, dear boy?" asked Dumbledore quietly.

"Not looking forward to the end of the book." said Harry honestly.

Dumbledore closed his eyes. "I do not blame you." he placed a hand on Harry's head and sat down in the chair beside the bowl.

Mrs. McFinn and Dr. Clark came into the Great Hall, but something stopped them. A bright golden circle appeared around them

"What's going on?" asked Mrs. McFinn wonderingly

"I don't know, but this circle came from the books." said Dr. Clark looking around themselves.

"Oh, yeah, Harry knows about you two." said Sirius.

Mrs. McFinn blushed twice as red as Dr. Clark.

"Well, Sweetie/Sport, we didn't want to..." said Mrs. McFinn and Dr. Clark together.

"It's fine." said Harry with a smile. "I'm actually really happy for the both of you."

The two adults looked a bit more at ease.

"Why are you happy for them?" asked Remus curiously.

"Officer McFinn wouldn't want her to be frozen in time after he died, he'd want her happy, and he knows Dr. Clark can take care of her." said Harry in a whisper.

Remus smiled at him.

"Time to start a new book!" said Dennis eagerly.

"Yippee skippy." groaned Harry.

Before they could decide who was going to start reading, the door opened and in came an old man with long white hair, a clean shaven face, but fierce yellow eyes. Behind him was a trembling and stuttering Cornelius Fudge.

Lionus, Tempest, Nightstrike, Wildfire, and Viper all stood up suddenly.
"Sir!" they all shouted.

"Hello Chief Hawkeye." said Dr. Nicodemus pleasently.

"Nicodemus." said the Chief of the Rangers just as pleasently. "I had a nice little chat, with this man. He's ready to come back and behave." he said reaching behind himself and tossing Fudge a little bit forward. "You all can relax."

The Rangers and Lionus finally relaxed themselves and sat down in their chairs. Fudge was unsure where to go.

"Aren't you going to take a seat?" asked Chief Hawkeye sharply.

"His seating buddy is tied up at the moment." said Dr. Nicodemus with a smirk.

Captain Hawkeeye looked up and saw Umbridge gagged and bound.

"Take the gag and binds off, she's not going anywhere. Not with all of us here." said the man with a sneer.

"I was enjoying her silence." said Nightstrike with a quiet grumble.

"Well, we had two books at least of freedom." said Tempest with a laugh.

The moment Umbridge was free, she made a break for the Great Hall doors, ignoring the fact that the Chief of these insanely strong people was right in her path.

Chief Hawkeye watched her with an amused look on his face, till he closed his eyes, then snapped them open.

Umbridge stopped dead in her tracks, and froze in place. Chief Hawkeye flitted his eyes up to her old seat and she flew backwards and landed hard in her seat.

"Now stay there, Tempest, Nightstrike, you can move elsewhere. She won't get pass me." said Chief Hawkeye with a smirk.

He looked over to Harry, his countenance full of curiosity.

"This is the young man?" said Chief Hawkeye.

"Yes sir. He's shown amazing capabilities sir." said Lionus with a proud smile.

"Have you decided to join our ranks yet boy?" asked Chief Hawkeye.

Harry looked away.

"I'll take that to mean that you are still undecided, well, take all the time you need. From what I hear, you're a prize worth waiting for." said the man with superior look.

Chief Hawkeye turned and whipped out his wand, a silver gilded cherry wood wand, he flicked it and a winged wooden chair appeared. He sat smartly down and crossed his legs. "I want to hear some of this boy's accomplishments for myself. Should be quite enlightening."

Lionus looked slightly put out.

"Something wrong son?" said Chief Hawkeye with a smirk.
"I'm not the highest ranking person here anymore." said Lionus respectfully.

"Poor sweet baby." said Chief Hawkeye, still smirking.

"Who'd like to start it off this new book today?" asked Speckerton taking the new book off the dias.

"Let me, my granddaughters say I'm a wonderful book reader" said Chief Hawkeye extending a hand. The book floated over to him and he read the title out loud.

Fourth Book he said loudly. "I remember learning a school was doing this again. Reminds me of the Running of the Bulls in Pampalona."

"How?" asked Dr. Clark.

"Two reasons, you see the bravest people and you thin the human herd of stupid people." said Chief Hawkeye.

"Brave and stupid." said Snape with a sneer, "Sums Potter up perfectly."

First chapter.

Umbridge paled. "He's not back!" she shrieked.

"You were gagged for a reason, don't make me put the gag back." said Chief Hawkeye glaring.

First paragraph, first sentence.

"Load of puffed up popinjays." said Dr. Nicodemus. "I knew the patriarch, worse of the lot."

"You knew them?" asked Harry interestedly.

"Yes I did, they wouldn't converse with anyone that had a lesser standing in society as they did." said Dr. Nicodemus. "The Gaunts were the same way, only they were concerned about blood, not famillarities."

"You may find out about them later." said Lionus with a grim smile.

First paragraph, second sentence.

"I'd like a vine covered house." said Mrs. McFinn thoughtfully. "Our vines never did rise above the door at our house."

"I can grow all the vines you want on Night's Rest." said Sirius with a bright smile.
"Turned into the ugliest house I've ever seen." muttered Harry.

"When did you go to Little Hangleton?" asked Remus.

"I didn't, but I did do a security job in the next town, and the story about that house was one of the favorites an old man would tell in the local pub." said Harry with a bright smile.

"That seems to happen with a lot of stories." said Dumbledore with a smile.

"Whoa, wonder what happened?" asked Fred.

"Regular investigations led to nowhere, but we found that it was the son of the youngest Riddle that caused the murder of the three adults." said Chief Hawkeye.

"Why didn't you arrest him?" asked Hermione.

"It's my firm belief that if the evidence is there, let the normal channels take it. We're Rangers not nursemaids for you people." said Chief Hawkeye. "We handle the ones you can't, you can hold your own end of the battles."

"Those people sound sick." said Charlie.

"The most that town has to look forward to is the local Harvest Festival." said Harry. "And even then, it's only people in their sixties and up having any fun at that thing."
"Never said they were in great social standings with the town." said Dr. Nicodemus with a smirk.

Fourth paragraph, third sentence.
"Sounds like the Dursley's." said Fred.

Harry groaned.
"Least you didn't kill your family." said Sirius quietly.

End of fourth paragraph.
"So they wanted to know who did it out of curiosity?" asked George.

"Nice town, good place to raise a family." said Fred.

Fifth paragraph, first sentence, second comma.
"That's one jolly town." said Lee.

"You gotta admit though, they make one mean beef stew." said Harry with a smile.

"I thought you said you never went there." said Remus.

"I did say that, but they export their stew out of town. I tried a bit of it in Halo's Peak, a pub in the town I was working in. It was good, but I had to catch a ride back and didn't have time to walk to and back to The Hanged Man." said Harry.

End of fifth paragraph.
"They've probably been starving for some action for a while." said Bill shaking his head.

Dialogue line.
"Of course not!" said Fred.

"But Fred, you know what Frank is like." said George.

"Oh that's right." said Fred smacking his forehead.

"Hang on..." said George.

"Who's Frank?" asked Fred.
Sixth paragraph, first sentence.
"Oh that Frank!" said Fred.
"Good old Frank!" said George.
"I always knew he was a shifty guy." said Fred.

Chief Hawkeye stared at them. "Those are two strange boys." he said with a laugh.

End of sixth paragraph.
"Bet that worked out for them." said Hermione darkly.

Seventh paragraph.
"Get them juiced up and they'll spill." said Blaise quietly.

Dialogue set.
"Can you blame him? You come back after battle, even for a brief time, you don't want to talk to anyone. You just want it to fade away, like it never happened." said Dr. Clark quietly. Mrs. McFinn patted his shoulder.

Dialogue line.
"Someone with sense!" said Mrs. Weasley sighing in relief. She didn't want a poor innocent man go to jail for a crime he didn't commit.

Chief Hawkeye was watching and listening to the commentary of the students and adults with amusement. He was enjoying himself immensely.

Dialogue set.

Eighth paragraph.
"The man most likely had nothing to gain from their deaths!" said Madam Bones angrily.
"Love it how speculation can twist people around like that." said Ernie with roll of his eyes.

Harry stared at him, Ernie noticed and blushed heavily.

"I had a temper when I was little, everyone did!" said Sirius in disgust.

"Vicious, gossiping..." muttered Tonks.

"It didn't get any cleaner years later." said Harry with a smirk.

"Did you guys come to his aid then?" asked Hermione.

"Why?" asked Nightstrike.

"He was going to be arrested!" said Hermione angrily.

"Not enough evidence, not even close." said Nightstrike.

"But there was enough plain evidence to suggest the identity of the culprit." said Chief Hawkeye, "Solve your own problems when you can."

"But, if you had caught him, you could have saved dozens of lives and families!" said Hermione close to tears.

"I don't expect you to understand us, little lady, but we all took this job knowing that we can't save everyone. We have more pressing matters than focusing on one man."

"Then why are you just sitting here? All of you?" she shrieked.

"We're officially on our seven year furlough now." said Chief Hawkeye with a smile.
"What?" said the Rangers in shock.

"You don't go on real active duty for weeks, what did you honestly expect?" said Chief Hawkeye with a mischievous smile.

"Damn...I was going to take it next year, spend seven years in Tahiti." said Nightstrike frowning slightly.

"You still have over six years to use up." said Chief Hawkeye with a smile. "Or you can leave now and head to your island paradise."

"And miss how these end? No thank you!" said Nightstrike.

"What the hell? Seven years?" gasped Tonks.

"Do one month of our job, you'll understand." said Lionus.

Eleventh paragraph.

Twelfth paragraph, third sentence.

"To think, a teen could do that." said Emmeline shaking her head.

"Don't ever use that spell." muttered Remus.

"Count on it." said Harry.

End of twelfth paragraph.

The Weasley's raised their hands.

"The Grim." muttered Ron to Hermione quietly; she restrained herself from rolling her eyes.

Thirteenth paragraph.

"Why shouldn't he go home?" asked Draco. He didn't do it."

Dialogue set.

"I cannot believe how anyone could..." said Mrs. McFinn.

Suddenly, the balls of light came out of the book and rotated around the room.

"Those are..." said Nightstrike starting to talk.
"Scattered Shots." said Chief Hawkeye with a smile. "I know."

The balls flew around in a quick circle a few times and then embedded themselves in the chest of each listener of the books.

They were transported to a large dormitory, black and yellow curtains and armchairs beside the fire. They were in the Hufflepuff Common Room.

"What are we doing in here?" asked Ron.

They looked around and someone noticed the calendar on the wall. "We're three years in the past!"

Then a voice came from the center of the room.

"Don't know why Potter stays, we know he's the one that petrified Justin!" shouted one of the Hufflepuffs.

"What on earth?" asked Mrs. McFinn.

"I don't think you want to know." said Dr. Clark.

Dumbledore was becoming afraid of Harry's personal being when he heard a few of the Hufflepuffs plans to exact their revenge.

The lights left their bodies quickly and flew back to the book.

"Well, the book answered your question." said Remus softly.

"Man, that ended real quick." said Fred.

Fourteenth paragraph, third sentence, first comma.

"If it was really about that, they would and could have fired him." said Hermione.

End of fourteenth paragraph.

Fifteenth paragraph, first sentence, first semi-colon.

"Probably didn't like the stories around it." said Bill.

"Or that could have been a selling point." said Fred.

Fifteenth paragraph, second sentence, first comma.

"That was kind." said Hermione.

"So you think." muttered Harry.
"That poor man." said Tempest shaking her head.

"What happened to her?" asked Chief Hawkeye with raised brows.

"That stallion over there and these books." said Dr. Nicodemus with a smile.

Chief Hawkeye looked at Firenze and smiled slightly. "Good, she needs someone. Ever since she took this job, she didn't make company with her tribe."

"Little vandals." muttered Madam Hooch.

"Such disrespect!" cried Professor Sprout.

"He was most likely right." said Moody.

"What were the parents doing?" asked Mrs. Weasley.

"Most likely giving them ideas." snarled Remus.

"Oh my god!" screeched Mrs. McFinn.

"Tell me the fire department came and put it out." said Dr. Clark. "I don't want him to get burned in the fire."
"Innocent men can hold some pretty strong grudges." said Sirius.

End of eighteenth paragraph.

"Foolish man." said Snape shaking his head. "What did he hope to do."

Nineteenth paragraph.

Twentieth paragraph.

"So the whole house isn't on fire?" asked George.

"Must just be in a fireplace." said Fred.

Twenty-first paragraph.

Twenty-second paragraph.

"Did Quirrell come back to life?" asked Dean.

"Sounds more like Wormtail." said Sirius with a scowl.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, second sentence.

"Perfect description of his voice." said Dumbledore softly.

End of dialogue set.

"Called it." said Sirius.

Twenty-third paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.
"Milk her?" said Sirius turning pale.

"Familiars have amazing abilities to heal their partners. If one's familiar is a venomous creature, their venom is not harmful to them, in fact, it becomes highly beneficial." said Dumbledore.

"Bless him." said Charlie shaking his head.

"Maybe he wants to know how it turns out too." said Fred with a snort.

"Don't joke Fred." said Mrs. Weasley fretfully.

"That sounds a bit more like him." said George.

"What was he hoping to do?" asked Colin.

"He didn't have much nerve, at any point in his life." said Remus.
Sirius and Remus stared.
"He remembered that he owed his life to you," said Dumbledore with a sad smile.

"Except your friend's only son!" shouted Remus loudly.

"Except when I go and do stupid stuff at the end of each year, then I'm super vulnerable." said Harry with a small laugh.

"I get the feeling that's what Wormtail wanted." said Sirius.

"I don't blame him." muttered Harry.
"He's got him pegged." said Tonks.

"That poor man was probably beginning to fear for you, Harry." said Luna, the dream-like tone to her voice gone.

Fudge looked down his face full of regret.

"He was always really jealous." said Remus.

"Yeah, no brains and can't even pretend to be loyal." said Sirius quietly with a smirk.

"He had no clue." said Charlie.

Harry cringed slightly.

"What's wrong?" asked Remus.

"Something you'll find out at the end." said Sirius.
Remus frowned. Sirius never told him what Harry had seen at the Graveyard, he had simply waited until either of them were comfortable enough to tell him. He couldn't help but feel grateful towards these books.

"If we're lucky." said Remus darkly.

Sirius blanched "...So Peter..was trying to get lucky?"

"I didn't need that image thank you." said Remus.

"So he's going to go and warn you? Hope he got to you in time." said Mrs. Weasley.

Harry didn't have the heart to say he never got to meet the man in living person.

"That guy wanted to know the entire plan?" said Bill, "He's got guts."

Mrs. McFinn whimpered.

End of dialogue set.
"Not another basilisk!" cried Lavender.

Several people had their eyes closed and begged for the safety of the old man.

"Wow, prayer works." said a few people in surprise.

"That doesn't bode well for Frank." said Hannah.

"Run Frank RUN!" shouted people all over the Great Hall.

"Reminds me of bedtime at my son's house." said Chief Hawkeye shaking his head.

"Running for the nearest border." said Nightstrike.
"That's one small person." said Terry.

"I still can't believe that there's a term for that." said Mrs. McFinn.

"I know, there's a lot of things I still coming to terms with too." said Dr. Clark.

"That's some quick thinking, but he ain't married is he?" said Neville.

"Don't think so." said Seamus.

"You know nothing." hissed Harry angrily.

"You-Know-Who is *dead!" shrieked Umbridge.

"Evidence is staring at her in the face and she still denies it." said Lionus shaking his head.

"Don't do that." groaned Sirius.

"I would have said 'less', still do." said Harry.
Some of the younger students began to whimper and cry.

Chief Hawkeye looked at the book skeptically. "If this is a book on the boy's life, how does it show this?"

"It should explain, soon enough." said Harry softly.

Chief Hawkeye looked at the boy, while the Rangers groaned softly. No one, not one person, has ever denied information to him.

"I hope the next chapter I read is a happy one." said Chief Hawkeye handing the book to Harry with a genuine smile. "Happy stories are my forte."

Chapter End Notes

Thanks for reading, please review
Harry groaned as he took the book.

"Don't feel like reading right now?" asked Sirius.

"Not at all during this one." said Harry with a frown.

"I'll read then." said Remus taking the book gently.

Second Chapter read Remus.

Sirius placed his arm around his godson gently and gave him a bit of a squeeze.

First paragraph, first sentence,

"What was wrong, sweetheart?" asked Mrs. McFinn.

"Was it your scar?" asked Remus looking up from the book.

Harry nodded.

"Completely addled!" shrieked Umbridge.

"Shut up you stupid woman." said Chief Hawkeye.

End of first paragraph.

Sirius dragged Harry closer to himself so Harry was leaning into the Sirius' shoulder and placed a gentle hand over his godson's brow.

“I’m alright.” said Harry.

“I’m not.” said Sirius in a whisper.

Second paragraph.

"That streetlamp gets broken at least twice a month." said Harry.
"How?" asked Fred.

"Dudley and his little...friends...keep chucking rocks at them. To see who has the best aim." said Harry rolling his eyes.

"Who has the best aim?" asked Ron.

"The only one in the troupe that has a lazy eye." said Harry with a smirk as he lifted his legs over the side of the bowl.

Third paragraph, third paragraph.

"Why did you do that?" asked George.

"Midnight primping?" asked Fred placing a hand on his hip and the other on the side of his head.

"I was making sure it wasn't bleeding." said Harry.

Fred stopped posing.

End of third paragraph.

"I could almost see it throb." said Harry.

“And he can live through that pain, I wouldn’t last four days.” said a first year.

Fourth paragraph.

"Boy do I remember that dream now." said Harry shaking his head.

Fifth paragraph.

"When you don't eat, it leaves a really hollow feeling in your stomach.” said Harry.

“And I take you didn’t eat the day before.” said McGonagall furiously, she wasn’t angry at the boy, but the relatives he was forced to live with.

“I did, it was just…not a lot.” said Harry.

Sixth paragraph.

"I would say both." said Tempest.
"So in a way, his warning did reach you." said Dumbledore thoughtfully, "But all those facts about his life, and what those people said in the pub, how did you know all that?"

"I don't know, I really don't know." said Harry pondering quietly. "I'd say something but it's ridiculous." speaking in his "genius personality".

"Please, indulge me." said Dumbledore turning around in his chair completely to face the boy. "Well, because of Voldemort's and I's connection, perhaps it took a different direction when I utilize it. One that worked entirely in my favor as opposed to his, but backfired on me. Maybe I looked in on him, in a gentler tone and third party way. As opposed to his bombarding my mind in the way he does." said Harry.

"Glorious, it makes perfect sense." said Dumbledore. "So during your dreams, you take upon yourself a sort of Morpheusus pathway..."

"And head towards Voldemort." said Harry finishing Dumbledore's thought with a grim smile.

"So, occlumency will not help you if Voldemort realizes that." said Dumbledore.

"Nothing can. I can stop him from taking over my body for the most part, but he can show me whatever he wants." said Harry.

"I'm lost." said Sirius staring at his godson and Dumbledore.

"I think a lot of people here are." said Remus.

"These split personalities of his are going to drive me mad." Sirius said with a smile.

"Truely a Morpheusus pathway." said Dumbledore in awe.

"I'd hope you remember that little fact of the dream." said Dr. Clark, his face pale.

"Unusual for muggle teenagers." said Harry.

"Yeah, he doesn't have any pictures like what you have on your bedroom wall." said Tonks to Sirius with a gleeful smile.

"You want some?" asked Sirius with a bright smile.
"Want what?" asked Harry.

"He's not getting any," said Remus sternly.

"Oh come on! A boy has to have one bathing beauty on his wall." said Sirius with a smile.

"Amen!" said Dr. Clark, Nightstrike, Charlie, Bill, Fred, George, and Lionus loudly.

"Boys." groaned Hermione rolling her eyes.

Eighth paragraph, fifth sentence.

"You really let us down you know." said Fred.

"I read in order to do my summer job." said Harry.

"We forgive you then." said George.

End of eighth paragraph.

"Oh then you were just reading a Chudley Cannon book." said Ron.

"You'd be amazed what one can learn from that book." said Harry with a smirk.

Ninth paragraph, third sentence.

Fred and George gasped dramatically.

End of ninth paragraph.

"You like to survey places at night don't you?" asked Neville.

"A good quality to have." said Moody with an approving growl.

Tenth paragraph.

"What time was that?" asked Hermione.

"About three in the morning." said Harry absently.
Eleventh paragraph, second sentence.

Dumbledore cringed shamefully in his chair while Sirius gripped Harry tighter to himself.

Eleventh paragraph, third sentence.

"Stupid Dazzle Gums." said Remus hotly.

Eleventh paragraph, fourth sentence.

"I'd rather forget that." said Sirius turning pale.

Eleventh paragraph, fifth sentence.

"Those things shouldn't have ever been allowed on the grounds." said Dumbledore angrily.

End of eleventh paragraph.

"More along the lines of attracting a lot of trouble than just being in the school." said Dennis.

Twelfth paragraph.

"I would hope so, but now I'm unsure." said Dumbledore. "As I said while reading the first book, something knocked the blood wards out of balance. They hid you from detection, though it wouldn't have stopped a Death Eater from stumbling on you and attacking you."

Thirteenth paragraph.

"You think the ghoul is bad, try getting used to Dudley's snores." said Harry with a laugh. "He could wake Merlin."

Fourteenth paragraph.

"Bet they aren't feeling that way anymore." said Tonks bitterly.
"They hurt you when they're awake!" said Hermione angrily.

"You know, the way you put that, you made it sound like you were taking over the world or something." said Ron.

Harry laughed. "I've got enough on my plate, I don't need that additional headache."

"On your mother's side maybe, but your dad's not at all." said Leroy.

"Do I have other relatives?" asked Harry eagerly.

"Your Great-Grandmother is still around, a few Great-Aunts and Uncles, some cousins...They're flitting around abroad." said Uncle Rudolph. "We already sent word that you'd like to meet them, this summer anyway."

"Why not now?" asked Charlie.

"Trust me, you don't want my mother hearing these things. Unless you have a strange wish of having your ass in the critical ward at St. Mungoes." said Rudolph.

"Kinda over protective?" asked Seamus.

"That's being mild, yeah." said Leroy. "She loves me though; I'm her cute little baby in law."

"She still tells me you're too thin." said Rudolph rolling his eyes.

"I feed myself enough, it's the keeping of my figure that kills me." said Leroy.

"Harry, tell me that they didn't..." said Remus.

"Never as bad as it had been. Sirius helped with that." said Harry.

"How?" asked Sirius.

Harry grinned.

"Fine don't tell me." pouted Sirius.
"So some people in the neighborhood actually cared?" asked Hermione.

"Beats me, but then they started shutting their kids inside when I came home." said Harry. "Suited me fine, not a whole lot of people on that street I'd even consider talking to."

"Why not?" asked Ron.

"They've seen the bruises, heard me scream and they do nothing." said Harry bitterly.

Fifteenth paragraph, fifth sentence, third comma.

"Stupid Ministry ruined the only defense you had." said Bill hotly.

Fifteenth paragraph, end of fifth sentence.

"What do you mean?" asked Dean.

"The air conditioning could be on the fritz, the plumbing could get backed up. Uncle Vernon hates doing maintenance work." said Harry.

"So you're..." said Uncle Leroy.

"Mr. Handyman." said Harry rolling his eyes.

End of fifteenth paragraph.

"They'd ask what they could do to make it hurt even more." said Harry.

Sixteenth paragraph.

Sirius ran his fingers through his godson's long white hair.

Seventeenth paragraph.

"Before you say anything, shut up." said George to Zacharias.

"I meditate on that thought every year around my birthday." said Harry quietly.

"You shouldn't." said Sirius.

"I know, it doesn't help me, but it doesn't hurt me either." said Harry.
Eighteenth paragraph.

Nineteenth paragraph.

"Hermione would freak." said Ron. "Then consult a book, I'd go and ask dad."

Twentieth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

"How do you know that's the book I would try and look it up in?" asked Hermione in shock.

"There is nothing Miss Granger, in that book." said Dumbledore shaking his head. "Curse scars are not a common ailment or affliction."

"Oh." said Hermione looking sheepishly.

"No need to look like that, it was what Harry said you would look in, you didn't really consult it." said Dumbledore with a smile. "I was merely....the word I think I'm searching for is teasing."

Hermione giggled.

Twenty-first paragraph, first sentence.

Hermione blushed.

Twenty-first paragraph, fourth sentence.

Hermione chewed her lip slightly.

Twenty-first paragraph, fifth sentence.

"I mostly stay at my home and rest." said Dumbledore with a smile. “It’s not easy one my age to be surrounded by such rambunctious children and not get weary.”

Twenty-first paragraph, sixth sentence.

Dumbledore himself laughed the loudest. "A seaside vacation, that would be most pleasant."
"She is a marvel." said Professor Sprout.

"A short, but to the point, letter." said McGonagall with a twitching smile.

Several people laughed.

"Damn, Harry. How do you do that?" asked Ron in shock. "We can't even begin now to know what you're thinking, but you got us pegged!"

"You're right Harry, curses aren't my forte, charms are, but not curses." said Mr. Weasley.

"That's what friends and family are supposed to do, get jumpy with you." said Bill.

"Mum would fuss yeah, but no Harry, we wouldn't think that." said George.

"Yeah, we'd freak out." said Fred.
The Weasleys smiled broadly.

"I'll admit it dear, I would have kept you home with me." said Mrs. Weasley. "I should have kept you all home."

"Nothing happened to us Molly." said Mr. Weasley soothingly.

Fred and George looked at each other worriedly.

"What's so shameful about that?" asked Professor Flitwick.

"The fact that I actually needed someone, I went a long time without an adult within calling distance. Now I really wanted someone." said Harry quietly.

"So I'm simple and obvious, huh?" asked Sirius tugging Harry's hair slightly.

"You said it not me." said Harry with a smirk.

"Young man you are in big trouble." said Sirius tickling his godson mercilessly.

"Strange, my thoughts haven't left you, and yet you've forgotten me." said Sirius in mock sadness.

"Maybe you didn't leave a big enough impression on me." said Harry with a laugh.

"Maybe you don't remember something else." said Sirius, reaching forward and tickling behind Harry's knee once again.

Harry had to beg Sirius profusely to get him to stop.

"I'd really rather not think of those things." said Sirius faintly.
"Still don't know why we have to recap these things every single time." said Zacharias.

"I find it useful." said Chief Hawkeye.

Zacharias looked down.

"It's not fair, every time you get close to getting some happiness, someone takes it away." said Ginny.

Remus reached over and rubbed the back of Harry's neck.

"I gave you some emotional help, huh?" said Sirius.

"Uh...sure...whatever you say." said Harry.

"Huh?" asked Sirius.

"So you used me?" asked Sirius.

"For a good purpose, and think of it this way: Uncle Vernon is completely terrified of you." said Harry.

"He'd better be." said Sirius.
"I tried finding the handsomest birds I could." said Sirius with a smirk.

"Hedwig didn't like them." said Harry.

Thirty-first paragraph, third sentence.

"Had to use my cauldron just to water them." said Harry.

Thirty-first paragraph, fourth sentence.

Sirius smiled. "I really was enjoying myself, though I wished you were with me."

"I'd rather you resting calmly as opposed to having to worry about me." said Harry.

Thirty-first paragraph fifth sentence.

"On the nose." said Sirius with a laugh.

End of thirty-first paragraph.

"Why not tell Remus?" asked Tonks.

"Didn't want to bug him, that night before was a full moon." said Harry.

"Oh." said Tonks.

Thirty-second paragraph.

"It took a lot of drafts, to get a semi decent letter. I sounded like a baby in the first one." said Harry.

Letter to Sirius.

Letter to Sirius, First paragraph.

Letter to Sirius, Second paragraph, second sentence.

"Bout time they put that hippo on a diet." said Fred.
"It's a game system that some Muggles play. Sort of fun actually." said Dean. "My cousin has one."

"Mega-Mutilation'? said Tonks.

"Some games are really violent." said Harry.

"Screw bats, I'd kill them." said Sirius with snarl.

"I didn't know how to answer that, but I was really worried when you said that." said Sirius.

"I didn't want you to come back to the country and get caught though." said Harry.

"I wouldn't let myself get caught." said Sirius.

"I did, he said Hi back." said Sirius teasingly.

"I wish you had told me about the dream, that would have brought me to the country faster than what I did." said Sirius.

"So you were up at three and then going down to breakfast?" asked Seamus.

"That summer I didn't have to do much cooking." said Harry. "With the whole diet thing."

"Surely they didn't make you follow a diet!" said Madam Pomfrey.

"You'd be surprised." said Harry.

"I'll read next." said Dr. Clark quickly.
"Third Chapter." said Dr. Clark.

"Invitation to what?" said Emmeline.

"To the best Quidditch game ever!" said Fred and George together.

Please comment!

Chapter End Notes

Thanks for reading, please review
First paragraph, first sentence.

“That was a shock, they’re hardly ever up before I am.” said Harry with a laugh.

“Hope they didn’t get angry for you not making their breakfast.” said the frail girl that Harry had given a lily to the very first week of the readings.

“I didn’t cook much that summer. Dead awful for me.” said Harry shaking his head.

“Huh?” said the school in confusion.

End of first paragraph.

Several people snorted.

“Well, at least she knows how to cut fruit.” smirked Snape.

“They just look like they’ve been cut with a saw.” said Harry with a laugh.

Second paragraph, first sentence.

“That’s saying a lot.” snorted Fred.

Second paragraph, second sentence.

“I don’t think I want to know how big that table is.” said Uncle Rudolph with his face contorted in disgust.

Second paragraph, third sentence, second comma.

“Why was she trembling?” asked Terry.
“Cause that table has been overturned about ten times that week.” said Harry.

End of second paragraph.

“Did he fail everything?” asked Charlie with a sneer.

“That and something else.” said Harry.

Third paragraph, first sentence, first colon.

“They weren’t all that creative.” said Harry.

Third paragraph, first sentence, first colon, eleventh word.

Ron snorted.

Third paragraph, first sentence, first colon, first comma.

“The teachers understand him fine, it’s just that the Dursleys don’t want to help their son.” said Flitwick, remembering what Harry said about Dudley’s learning disability.

Third paragraph, end of first sentence.

“So he didn’t want his son to excel in life?” asked Hermione with a scandalous tone.

End of third paragraph.

“He couldn’t catch a fly.” said Harry with a snarl.

Fourth paragraph, first sentence.

“The only thing they couldn’t skate around.” said Harry.
“Dragon shit.” spat Charlie.

“Harry’s a growing boy that needs food too!” said Mrs. Weasley angrily.
“Can you imagine the conniption fit that Dudley’s school would have if she saw you?” said Fred with a laugh.

The student body laughed loudly, so hard in fact that many had tears coming from their eyes.

“I was starting to think she was blind.” said Madam Pomfrey.

“Far, far, far, far, far, far, far, far, far, far, far,” said George.
“Far, far, far, far, far, far, far, far, far, far, far,” said Fred.
“From needing it.” said the twins together.

Many students stared.
“And she was being kind.” said Harry.

“The end of an era, Dudley lost a fight.” said Harry with a laugh.
“Did it make cooking a little harder?” asked Hermione.

“Not at all, we ran out of vegetables a little faster but other than that no. Came up with some really great recipes too. Even some dessert ones.” said Harry.

“What kind of dessert can you make that’s healthy?” asked Colin.

“Well, Strawberry Sorbet for one, it uses sugar and cornstarch, but despite, doesn’t have any cholesterol, little to no fat and only seven calories.” said Harry shrugging.

“I must have the recipe.” said Madam Hooch quickly.

Harry reached into his bag, grabbed a bit of parchment and wrote the recipe. Madam Hooch eagerly came and took a hold of it.

“Vernon Dursley, I could understand putting him on a diet, but your aunt and you…not at all.” said Mr. Weasley.

“That’s all you would get?” shrieked Mrs. Weasley.

“I had a safety net, remember?” said Harry with a bright smile. Mrs. Weasley blushed.

“I didn’t know it was that dire dear or I would have sent more.” said Mrs. Weasley.

“I’ve never shown the Dursleys that piece of parchment. They’d only laugh.” said Harry.
“It took a lot for me to convince Aunt Petunia that I could cook healthy and tasty foods. She was under the impression that if it tasted good, it’s not a diet food.” said Harry rolling his eyes.

Hermione, Hagrid and the Weasleys all smiled broadly.

“I don’t know where you got those brownies, but they really needed some frosting or something.” Said Harry kindly.

“I know, I told mum that those weren’t all that good, but she insisted.” said Hermione with a smile.

“You’re learning! But I did eat some a little later that week, just needed a few more spoonful’s of sugar and it would have been fine.” said Harry quickly.

“It took a lot for me to ration those.” said Harry with a smile.

“Thought he died the first day.” said Harry. “I was about to send Hedwig to Diagon Alley with some money to get you a new owl. Had the shovel in my hand and everything, he twitched while I had him in the box and stopped digging the hole.” said Harry with a smile full of relief.

“That was nice of you Harry, wanting to have a funeral for Errol.” said Luna.

“I don’t think he had a bible and everything Luna.” said Hermione with a shake of her head. She didn’t notice Harry’s blush. He didn’t want to tell her that he did have the holy book handy and was ready and most willing to say a few words for the apparently dead bird.
Sixth paragraph, tenth sentence, end of parenthesis.

“Big surprise.” said Neville.

Sixth paragraph, end of tenth sentence.

“How did you make a birthday cake anyway?” asked Harry.

“I ordered it from the Diagon Alley bakery.” said Sirius with a smile.

“I would hope so, he can’t tell which way to hold a spatula right.” said Remus.

End of sixth paragraph.

“Real breakfast doesn’t entail cake dear.” said Bathilda Bagshot with a smile.

“Beats a tenth of a grapefruit.” said Harry.

Seventh paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“If they’d just let me make them breakfast, it wouldn’t just be grapefruits.” said Harry shaking his head.

“What would you make them?” asked Draco.

“Blueberry muffins and pumpkin pancakes.” replied Harry.

“Pumpkin pancakes?” said Ernie.

“Don’t knock them till you try them.” said Harry with a smile.

Eighth paragraph.

“Greedy little…” said Bill.

“He’s not so little anymore, Mr. Weasley.” said Snape with a wicked grin.

Ninth paragraph.

“Don’t know what he’s so upset about, he always leaves after breakfast to get himself a doughnut.” said Harry rolling his eyes.
“How do you know?” asked Sirius.

“I’ve seen the wrappers in his car.” said Harry.

Tenth paragraph.

“Dear lord.” said Dumbledore covering his eyes.

“And Harry was forced to live with these people.” said Tonks shaking her head.

“At least I had some fun times, they just were never at Privet Drive.” said Harry shrugging.

Eleventh paragraph, first sentence, second comma.

“Never a good sign.” said Harry wisely.

Eleventh paragraph, end of first sentence.

“Really not a good sign.” said Harry.

End of eleventh paragraph.

“You get another letter from Hogwarts?” asked Sirius.

“Nope, this was from someone else.” said Harry.

Twelfth paragraph.

“Run, Harry.” said Fred seriously.

“Run fast.” said George.

Dialogue line.

Thirteenth paragraph, first sentence, second comma.

“He doesn’t just hit you for the hell of it does he?” asked Remus fearfully.

“Dudley does, Uncle Vernon likes a reason, that way he can…” Harry had stated this plainly, but then fell silent, realizing too late what he was saying.
“‘He can…’ what?” pressed Sirius.
Harry mumbled.

“Didn’t catch that.” said Sirius.
Harry mumbled a bit louder.
Sirius heard it this time and turned pale.

“What is it?” asked Remus worriedly.
“I’ll tell you later.” said Sirius quietly.

Thirteenth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“The day Vernon Dursley becomes a law abiding citizen is the day I’ll snap my wand in half.” said Moody with a growl.

Fourteenth paragraph, first sentence, first comma, second word.

“Are you crazy!” said Lee.

“Yes!” said Umbridge loudly.

“Shut up!” shouted the school.

Fourteenth paragraph, first sentence, second comma.

“Thank goodness you had the sense to NOT say that.” said Kingsley with a sigh of relief.

End of fourteenth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“He started to fear anything that came for me.” said Harry with a smirk.

Fifteenth paragraph.

“I thought of you sir.” said Harry to Dumbledore. “But I couldn’t think of why you would write to me.” said Harry.

Dumbledore smiled gently.

Sixteenth paragraph.

Letter from Mrs. Weasley, greetings.

Letter from Mrs. Weasley, first paragraph.

“Uh, I never told them about you guys. Wasn’t worth the confrontation.” said Harry sheepishly.

Mrs. Weasley had a sad smile on her lips and tears fell from her eyes.

Letter from Mrs. Weasley, second paragraph.
Letter from Mrs. Weasley, third paragraph, first sentence.

“You can say that again, not even we can get tickets when we really want them.” said Nightstrike. “If you don’t have the gold, you don’t get to go. We’ve got plenty of gold, but we don’t have the time to go.”

“When you have to work the schedule we do, you don’t get to enjoy games like that.” said Lionus.

Letter from Mrs. Weasley, end of third paragraph.

“They’d rather I got lost and hit by that train.” muttered Harry.

End of Letter.

“Did I dear?” asked Mrs. Weasley.

“More than enough.” said Harry with a smile.

Seventeenth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Eighteenth paragraph.

“Sorry.” said Harry sheepishly.

Dialogue line.
“Don’t you understand the school motto? Don’t poke a sleeping dragon in the eye!” said Remus.
“Oi, don’t call him a dragon.” said Charlie. “The poor things don’t need to be insulted like that.”

Dialogue line.

Nineteenth paragraph, second sentence.

“Boring life.” muttered a seventh year Hufflepuff.

End of nineteenth paragraph.

Twentieth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Snape groaned. “You’ve got to be kidding me.” he said rubbing the bridge of his hooked nose.

Twenty-first paragraph, fourth sentence.

“You sure you don’t know Legilmency?” asked Hermione.

“I just know him.” said Harry with a shrug.

End of twenty-first paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Twenty-second paragraph.

“In Dudley’s case, it meant a loss of pocket money and privileges. In mine, it meant being locked in my room.” said Harry.

Twenty-third paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“He’s twice the size of Uncle Herman!” said Fred in shock.
“And he’s the biggest one in our family!” said George.

Twenty-fourth paragraph.

Mrs. Weasley smiled at Harry who, if it had not been his villainous Uncle, would have defended her honor.

Twenty-fifth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Twenty-sixth paragraph.

“That rubbish is my favorite game to play.” snarled Harry.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, fourth sentence.

“In his case, I’m a sadist, I love seeing him uncomfortable.” said Harry gleefully.

Sirius also smiled, “I don’t blame you. I am too.”

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Twenty-seventh paragraph.

“They’re as nosy as Aunt Petunia, sometimes it wouldn’t surprise me to see them right in the garden with a glass to the walls.” Harry smirked.

Dialogue line.

“Only after Duddykins wore them.” snarled Ginny.

Dialogue set.
“You need a whole new wardrobe.” said Remus. “We’ll do that this weekend.”

“Think again, I’m grounded, remember?” said Harry.

“Oh….” said Remus.

Dialogue line.

“Then let me.” snarled Sirius angrily.

Twenty-eighth paragraph, third sentence.

“And what was going to stop them from smacking the brains out of you?” asked Cho worriedly.

End of twenty-eighth paragraph.

Twenty-ninth paragraph.

“You little scamp!” said Sirius with a laugh.

“Desperate times call for desperate measures!” said Harry happily.

Dialogue line.

“He’d better be afraid of me, I still want to squash him like a bug.” said Sirius.

Dialogue line.

“I would too.” said Sirius quietly.

Thirtieth paragraph, second sentence.

“You really are cruel.” said Ron with a laugh.

“Learned from the second best.” said Remus quietly.

Thirtieth paragraph, fourth sentence.
“Damn straight.” said Bill. “Though not being allowed to go to a game isn’t mistreatment.” he added honestly.

“Is for any son of James Potter.” said McGonagall with a smirk.

End of thirtieth paragraph.

Dialogue set.

“Took me thirteen years to completely manipulate him.” said Harry with a sneer.

“Happy to help you in that endeavor.” said Sirius.

Dialogue line.

Thirty-first paragraph.

Thirty-second paragraph, first sentence.

“It’s his favorite form of entertainment.” said Harry.

End of thirty-second paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“You’re a nutter.” said Seamus with a smile.

Thirty-third paragraph.

Thirty-fourth paragraph, second sentence.

“What did you do this time?” asked Lavender.

“I wasn’t sure.” said Harry with a wink over to Ron.

Almost as if summoned, both Hedwig and Pig came floating down from the rafters. Floating in Hedwig’s case, crashing into a bowl of fruit in Pigwidgeon’s case.

Ron plucked his owl out of the large bunch of grapes. “Learn how to land, will ya?”

Hedwig gracefully landed on Harry’s stomach and nibbled Harry’s finger tenderly.

“Pig’s so cute!” said a few girls eagerly.
“Yeah, and Hedwig is so beautiful!” said another girl.

End of thirty-fourth paragraph.

Dialogue set, second sentence.

“Had a small bump on my head from his beak.” said Harry with a smile.

Dialogue set, third sentence.

“Apt description.” said Percy good-naturedly.

End of dialogue set.

Letter from Ron, first paragraph.

“Apparently faster than an owl with ‘Attention Deficit Disorder.’” said Hermione with a giggle.

“He doesn’t have that, he’s just stupid.” said Ron shaking his head at his pet owl. He had a tight grip on the little feather ball, but he was smiling.

“He’s cute though.” said Ginny petting the top of the restrained owl’s head.

“That’s all he’s got going for him.” said Ron with a smirk.

Thirty-fifth paragraph, second sentence.

“And it doesn’t look like Dudley, either.” said George.

Thirty-fifth paragraph, third sentence.

“That could be.” said Ron. “I write like a drunken niffler.”

“I read your letter right.” said Harry.

End of thirty-fifth paragraph.
“Sounds like a good plan to me!” said Chief Hawkeye with a laugh.

Percy frowned at Ron, who merely shrugged.

“Trust me, tried writing to Hermione, and he got lost. I got told off by some warlock in Brighton for writing to him. Turns out he’s allergic to birds.” said Ron.

“I think she would have chased him out of the country.” said Harry.

“He didn’t even wait for me to tell him where to go.” said Harry.

“Uh…you don’t tell owls where to go.” said Charlie. “They’re charmed to know where to go when they get a letter.”

Harry stroked Hedwig’s feathers. “Huh…when I write to you, I write a different name on it and ship it to you.” said Harry to Sirius.

“That’s cause Hedwig is special.” said Sirius stroking Hedwig’s feathers as well.
“Was she trying to show off?” asked Draco, thinking of the hyperactive owl that was flapping haphazardly around.

Hedwig leapt off Harry’s knee and flew over to Draco, her talons out to try and scratch the Slytherin.

“Hedwig!” said Dr. Clark quickly.

Harry reached into his bag and pulled out the flute Hagrid had carved for him. He quickly played a tune, halting his owl in midair. She looked behind him and flew back to her master and rested on his knee hooting with the song he was playing.

Once he was finished, he looked at Hedwig with disappointment. “Don’t go tearing off on other people. I don’t want to lose you.”

Dialogue line.

Forty-first paragraph.

Note to Sirius

Forty-second paragraph.

“Even Ministry owls don’t have the majesty Hedwig has.” said Dumbledore with a smile.

“Why can’t you learn anything?” said Ron shaking his head at Pig as he dive-bombed the students.

Dialogue line.

Forty-third paragraph.

Forty-fourth paragraph, first sentence.

“You expect me to take a plate, fork and knife out of the kitchen, you’re nuts.” said Harry. “Aunt Petunia inventories those things.”

Forty-fourth paragraph, third sentence, first semi-colon.

“What happened to my little angel?” said Mrs. McFinn with a laugh.

“He got hungry.” said Harry with a beaming smile.
“Constant Vigilance, boy!” shouted Moody.

“You’d think I get a break.” said Harry shaking his head.

“I’ll read next.” said Mrs. McFinn as she took the book gently. Then she read the title. “Chapter four”

“Going back home.” said Harry with a smile.

Chapter End Notes

Thanks for reading.
Mr. Weasley Meets the Dursleys

Chapter Notes

I don't own Harry Potter

See the end of the chapter for more notes

First paragraph, first sentence.

“How touching!” said Fred wiping a tear from his eye.

“Our gift to him is one of his prized possessions.” said George.

"Your gift that was made by his father." said Sirius.

"Don't ruin our moment." said the twins together.

First paragraph, second sentence, second comma.

“What would happen if you left anything behind?” asked Neville.

“If Uncle Vernon saw it, it would have been burnt, most likely.” said Harry.

End of first paragraph.

“Don’t tell me you keep it.” said Ernie. "I pitch mine every year."

“When I get to school, I clear it and use it the next year.” said Harry with a smile.

“Why didn’t I think of that.” muttered Ernie. "It would save a lot of drawing."

Second paragraph, first sentence.

“Nothing new.” muttered Harry.

Second paragraph, second sentence.

“He didn’t hurt you did he?” asked Sirius worriedly.

“Not with a full grown wizard coming, he’s not that stupid.” said Harry with a smile over to Mr. Weasley.

“He’s stupid enough to hurt my cub, that makes him a complete idiot.” said Sirius with a snarl.

End of second paragraph.

“That was really funny, he couldn’t really decide whether to hit me or grab everyone and run away.” said Harry.

"If he hit you, then it's not really funny." said Remus.

Dialogue line.

“Oh darn, left our suit and tails in the cleaners.” said Fred.

“Well, at least we still have the flowered jumpers and the kilts.” said George.

Third paragraph, second sentence.

“And I’m really happy about that.” said Bill

“Aunt Petunia would faint looking at you.” said Harry with a snigger.

“I’m irresistible.” said Bill smiling cheekily.

“I don’t think she’d stray from the ponytail and the earring.” said Harry shaking his head.

Third paragraph, third sentence.

Harry squirmed, but Mr. and Mrs. Weasley sent Harry a kind smile.

End of third paragraph.

“Why were you worried?” asked Fred.

“I didn’t want Uncle Vernon to bully anyone.” said Harry.

Fourth paragraph, second sentence.

“I didn’t think he was intimidating, but I wish I had seen…” said Mr. Weasley with regret etched on his face.

Fourth paragraph, fourth sentence.

Several students cheered.

“Take that you big bully!” shouted a first year Hufflepuff.

Fourth paragraph, fifth sentence.

“Serves the little beast right.” said Bathilda Bagshot angrily.

End of fourth paragraph.

“ Took everything I had not to roll on the floor laughing so hard.” said Harry with a laugh.

Fifth paragraph, second sentence.

“Why not?” asked Ron.

“He must have been nervous about meeting them.” said Hermione.

“Actually, he snuck away earlier and gorged out on cakes and candy, he needed some comfort food.” said Harry with a smirk.

End of fifth paragraph.

“It was a nice quiet lunch for a while.” said Harry longingly.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Sixth paragraph.

“Nope, we came to Privet Drive in style!” said Ron.
“What's a Ferrari?” asked Ron.

“My dream car.” said Dean with a bright smile.

“I want a red Chevrolet Convertible.” said Harry wistfully.

Sirius and Remus looked at each other with a smile. "Make a note of that." said Remus quietly.

"It would help if I kinda knew what the hell that was." said Sirius with a chuckle.

“Maybe we should send a rhino through her flower garden.” said Ginny with a gleeful smile.

“Did you do any jobs that summer?” asked Colin eagerly.

Harry thought carefully. “I did actually. I took care of an art gallery. They have a really good security system. Couldn’t get out with what the target was.” said Harry.

"What?” asked Mrs. McFinn.

"Nevermind." said Harry.

“We were still trying to hook the house up to the Floo network.” said Mr. Weasley. “Umbridge kept dragging her feet to send the word on. I just decided to skip the formality and go to Frank myself.”
Eleventh paragraph.

“Never keep Uncle Vernon.” said Harry.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“They didn’t.” said Harry.

Dialogue line.

“I’m not fond of vegetables and cottage cheese.” said Mr. Weasley. “With other food yes, but not by themselves like that.”

Dialogue set, fifth sentence.

“I beg your pardon!” said McGonagall angrily.

End of dialogue set.

“Why did you scream like that?” asked Dr. Clark, he looked around on the ground for a mouse or something else that might have startled her.

“It was in the book.” said Mrs. McFinn with a shy smile.

Twelfth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Thirteenth paragraph, first sentence.

“Now you just need to tie him up and then he’ll be absolutely pleasant to be around.” said Ginny.

End of thirteenth paragraph.

“Damn, we should have been there to watch that.” said George.

Fred laughed. “Would have been hilarious to see.”
“Why?” asked Hermione. “They didn’t want anything else coming down the fireplace to attack them.” said Harry with a smirk.

“Father Christmas is a bit late, don’t you think?” said Dennis with a giggle. “What happened?” asked Remus. “We got stuck in the chimney.” said Ron. “Thank goodness there was no fire going on at that time.” said Dr. Clark. “I went first to check.” said Mr. Weasley.

“They didn’t hurt you did they?” asked George turning pale. “Nope, not with you guys right there to hear me scream.” said Harry. "Mr. Weasley? Can you hear me?"
“How come you needed silence? It’s only a few wooden boards.” said Hannah.

“How George’s foot was in my ear.” said Mr. Weasley.

End of dialogue set.

“Arthur!” shouted Mrs. Weasley.

“I didn’t think he could hear me!” said Mr. Weasley sheepishly.

End of dialogue set.

“Work on getting you guys out first, Dad, then you can go gushing over the muggle stuff.” said Bill shaking his head.

End of dialogue set.

“Whatever made you think that?” asked Malfoy with a sneer.

“I was getting a brick mark on my face.” said George.
“You’ll be sorry!” sang a few students sweetly.

“Too bad I didn’t blow him up too.” muttered Mr. Weasley.

“Well, he’s not completely inhuman, he’ll protect his son and wife, but not his nephew.” said Kingsley darkly.

Fred and George looked at each other. “How closely do you study us?” asked Fred.

“Fairly close.” shrugged Harry.

“Always the picture of perfect manners.” said Mrs. Weasley with a kiss to her husband.

Several people snorted.

“I could understand a little of that, not a lot though.” said Mrs. McFinn with a smile.
“You’d win that bet, by the looks of it, cub.” said Sirius.

“Something bad is going to happen.” said Hannah.

“Absolutely no faith in us.” said Fred rolling his eyes.

“Damn, you’re good.” said George shaking his head.

“Don’t bother being pleasant, Arthur, they don’t deserve it.” said Madam Bones.

“I would have loved to have seen that.” said Sirius gleefully.

It took everything in Dr. Clark’s being not to snort with laughter.

Mrs. Weasley snarled.
Several adults were growling, how dare they think of Arthur like that, and think that he would attack anyone!

“Dear lord.” said Dumbledore covering his mouth. How could a child be that size?

“Your Dad wouldn’t have had the strength to hold back his laughter.” said Remus to Harry with a chuckle.

“Oh Arthur, bless you.” said Madam Bones.

“Boys…” said Mrs. Weasley.

“We’ve already been punished for this, Mum.” said Fred quickly.

“I really want to know what happens now.” said Sirius happily.
“MAGIC IN FRONT OF MUGGLES!” shrieked Umbridge.

“They’re the guardians of a wizard, they are allowed to see magic.” said Madam Bones. “You know that as well as I.”

Umbridge scowled.

“Better catch them quick, before the piglet grabs them.” said Moody.

“Getting out and away from the scene of the crime.” muttered Mr. Weasley.

“Why even be civil to them? They were never civil to you!” said Charlie.

“Habit.” said Harry shrugging.

“They heard him just fine.” growled Mrs. McFinn.
“I just could not believe that people would act like that.” said Mr. Weasley.

Mr. Weasley blushed slightly.

“I really don’t remember the last time he said goodbye to me.” said Harry.

“Still hate Floo travel.” said Harry shaking his head.

“Is he sick or something?” asked a third year Gryffindor.

“It’s not a…muggle…ailment that I know of.” said Dr. Clark.

“That’s disgusting.” said Mrs. Mcfinn with a disgusted look.
“Bad move.” said Snape with an amused smile.

End of forty-third paragraph.

Dialogue set.

“No amount of Muggle surgery can get fix that tongue.” said Remus knowingly.

Dialogue set.

Fred and George pouted. “How did Dad figure out the spell? We could have doused them in Swelling Solution for all he knew.”

"Because I know my boys." said Mr. Weasley sternly.

Forty-fourth paragraph, first sentence, third semi-colon.

“He wasn’t in any danger of suffocating!” said Fred.

“I’m still not happy with you boys over that.” said Mr. Weasley.

End of forty-fourth paragraph.

“Hang on! Harry’s over there!” said Sirius.

“I was fine.” said Harry.

Dialogue line.

Forty-fifth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Good! Get him out of there!” said Sirius fretfully.

Forty-sixth paragraph, first sentence.

“Good. get out of there right now.” said Dr. Clark.
"Ah...come on, I wanted to finish watching." said Harry pouting playfully.

Forty-sixth paragraph, third sentence, first comma.

“I didn’t want to be hit thank you very much.” said Mr. Weasley.

End of chapter.

“That was the best Dursley exit ever.” said Kingsley with a laugh.

The table of food came back to the Great Hall.

“Lunch time!” said Ron excitedly.

Harry stood up and joined everyone else as they gathered around the table. No one really noticed Chief Hawkeye walking over to Dr. Nicodemus. Chief Hawkeye leaned over to the old man and whispered in his ear.

“Is the boy all healed up?” asked Chief Hawkeye.

“There is still a bit of toxin in his body, every time he remembers the incident between himself, Umbridge and Filch, a cut appears on his body. Until finally it forms the word ‘Liar’.” said Dr. Nicodemus quietly.

Chief Hawkeye’s widened slightly. “That explains why the high security measures around the place, the boy is still in a state of vulnerability. Is his magical core back online yet?”

“Not yet, but he’s getting there.” said Dr. Nicodemus. “It will take some time.”

“Keep up with the security, I don’t want any interruptions. If others want to sit in, fine. But anyone with those skull tattoos, I want kept out.” said Chief Hawkeye. “Last thing I need are annoyances.”

Chapter End Notes

Thanks for reading, please review
Hannah decided to take another crack at reading, this time doing it at the beginning of the book, instead of the end.

“Chapter fifth.” said Hannah.

“I love those things!” said a first year eagerly.

Mrs. Weasley sent a fierce glare over to her twin sons, who were looking more than a little nervous.

First paragraph, first sentence.

“I hate Floo travel, hate it, hate it, hate it.” said Harry shaking his head.

“He loves the carts in Gringotts but hates Floo, makes no sense.” said Sirius with a smirk.

Harry frowned at his godfather. “I don’t spin on my broom like a top.”

“You do when you dive at the ground when we practice.” said Katie. “It looks so cool.”

End of first paragraph.

“Jammed my wrist though.” said Harry.

“Explains why you were giving us a left handed handicap when we played Quidditch.” said Ginny with a smile.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“We learned at a very early age, never take anything they give us, especially if it looks edible.”
said Ron.

Second paragraph.

“So much for intros.” said Charlie.

“He doesn’t know which one of us is which.” said Bill.

Dialogue set, second sentence.

Charlie stared, "That's not fair."

Dialogue set, third sentence.

Charlie looked at himself, as did the twins.

"Hey now." they whined.

Dialogue set, fourth sentence, fourth comma.

Charlie raised his brows over to the youth.

"Don't even." said Harry with a smile and blush. "I don't go for blokes."

End of dialogue set.

"If I remember correctly, that came from a very sick Swedish Short Snort. Poor baby had a cold."

"And how little is this baby?" asked Fred.

"Only ten feet long." said Charlie with a shrug. "Still just a youngster."

Third paragraph, second sentence.

"How do you figure?" asked Bill.

Third paragraph, third sentence.

Bill gagged loudly.
Bill pumped his fist into his side, "One of the coolest guys I know, says I'm cool." said Bill with a laugh.

"It's a dragon fang," said Bill tweaking it slightly. "Charlie gave it to me for Christmas."

"Its the baby tooth off of a Chinese Fireball, was taking the infant scales off when the Fireball bit my boot and the tooth popped out." said Charlie.

"Dang, I didn't even notice you looking down at my boots." said Bill.

"Something's alway been on my mind." said Mr. Weasley.

"What's that, dear?" asked Mrs. Weasley.

"Harry?" asked Mr. Weasley.

Harry looked up at Mr. Weasley.

"Why did you flinch, when I apparated into the kitchen?" asked Mr. Weasley.

Harry lowered his gaze, "Reflex."

"Lose that reflex." said Sirius.

"Ton-tongue toffee!" said a few third years excitedly.

Mrs. Weasley looked even madder than before.
"Even if he wasn't on a diet, he'd still eat it." said George.

"That's not the point." said Mr. Weasley shortly.

"Serve the brat right." muttered McGonagall quietly.

"Too right! We aren't like those Death Eater nutters." said George with pride.

"More than you guys could ever guess." said Harry.

"That's not fair Arthur." whined Sirius who had been laughing.

"I thought I had a split personality." said Harry with a chuckle.
"I wanted to punish them myself." said Mr. Weasley. "It was my area of expertise, my job to discipline."

"Did you?" asked Madam Bones.

"Not on a bit." said Mr. Weasley.

Seventh paragraph, fifth sentence, second comma.

Harry mouthed an apology over to the love seat where Ron and Hermione were sitting.

End of seventh paragraph.

"And he never said that he knew." said Charlie giving his sister a hug.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

"That was it?" asked Madam Bones with an amused smile.

"They would have had to do something else to make up for it." said Mr. Weasley.

Dialogue line.

"That confused the hell out of me." said Harry with a snicker.

Dialogue line.

"Yeah, get Harry out of 'Molly-Rage Range'." said Sirius cheekily.

"I wouldn't harm a hair on his head!" said Mrs. Weasley indignantly.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.
"I'm still amazed it took me that long." said Ron shaking his head.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Eighth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Ninth paragraph.

Fred and George pouted.

"Why doesn't Hermione appreciate our pranking genius?" said the two of them.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

"Well, actually we do like the noise, if the joke business didn't pan out," said Fred.

"We were going into the music business as the 'Dynamite Duo'!" said George.

"Every instrument blows up at the end of each song." said Fred.

"Can I be your first groupie?" asked Tonks eagerly.

Dialogue set, first sentence, fourth comma.

"A BIT?" shrieked Mrs. Weasley. "Just the smoke from some of those potions killed my violets!"

Dialogue set, end of first sentence.

"Understatement." said Ron, Ginny, Fred and George.

End of dialogue set.

"I want all my kids to do well." said Mrs. Weasley softly.

"We did alright in the areas we wanted to Mum." said Fred.
"Molly and I had a talk after that row." said Mr. Weasley. "I wanted my kids to do well, sure, but I want my kids to be happy too."

"And yet Percy wrote to me and told me to ditch him as a friend. Calling him a nutcase and violent. Yet he's polite enough to say 'Hi' to you." said Ron snidely. Percy flushed.

"Which is more than what other people in the family are willing to do to you right now." said Ginny with a scowl.

"Seriously, it’s home. You gotta expect the loudest noises at The Burrow." said Ron.

"Eating your words about Harry yet?" asked Bill.

Snape snorted. "That's why I only buy local cauldrons. But I can't picture the Department of International Magical Cooperation being bothered by that."

"I know you had ideas of grandeur, Perce, but seriously...you could have picked a better project." said Charlie shaking his head.
"Stop allowing the ruddy things in the country, and there wouldn't be a problem." said Snape.

"She had me pinned, I couldn't not tell her." said Mr. Weasley with a guilty smile.

"Have half a mind to pour a Calming Draught in his water cup." said Ron.

"Yeah, but we got to work on our stuff too!" said George.

"Hey, we only needed the room at night, you were more than able to get in there and work." said Bill.

"It's something." said Harry.

"Still, I'll admit, I'm fond of the little feathered beggar." said Ron.

"That's not fair how he knows what we're thinking!" said Charlie.

"I don't know what everyone's thinking." said Harry.
"And they love pulling his tail and getting dragged all over the garden." said Hermione with a laugh.

Percy blushed faintly.

"Didn't know how honest you were being." said Hermione.

"Sorry we didn't trust you Gin." said Ron.

"It was a sort of secret," said Hermione.

"That was best kept to a short amount of people." said Harry.

"QUIT STEALING OUR ACT!" shouted the twins.

"Better believe it." muttered Umbridge.

"I never really knew an awkward moment before that." said Harry.
"Let's go back up to my room." said Ron to the snickers of the students.

Dialogue set.

"Did any hit you?" asked Sirius to Harry.

"Nearly got a tuber in my ear how's that?" asked Harry with a smirk.

Dialogue set, third sentence.

"We didn't do anything, so the only logical answer would have been the twins." said Harry.

"We were hellions back in the day." said Bill looking at his younger brother.

"But we got nothing on them." said Charlie.

End of dialogue set.

"We're jokesters Mom, it's our life calling." said Fred.

"Though we're amazed," said George.

"That the Mauraders didn't go into the same business." said Fred looking over at the bowl.

"We had a war to fight, and a little one that needed our protecting." said Sirius giving Harry a squeeze.

"We couldn't do that if we went into the pranking business." said Remus.

"Well, we could, but you can't exactly run a pranking business and arrest Death Eaters." said Sirius.

Fifteenth paragraph.

Professor Flitwick smiled. "One of my brighter students!"

"Only in some parts, sir." said Mrs. Weasley with a blush.

Dialogue set.

"We stay well within the laws." said Fred.

" Mostly." muttered George.
"We studied those laws most particularly, right along with dad." said Fred.

Sixteenth paragraph.

"You and I both shouldn't cook when we're pissed." said Harry with a laugh. "We can be really dangerous."

Dialogue set.

Seventeenth paragraph.

"Fake Wands!" shouted the first years.

Dialogue line.

Eighteenth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

"Before we get onions shoved down our shirts." said Ron with a smirk.

Nineteenth paragraph.

Twentieth paragraph, fourth sentence.

"Okay, I'm starting to like your cat now." said Lionus with a smirk.

Twentieth paragraph, sixth sentence.

"Awesome!" shouted a few students as the rest clapped.

End of twentieth paragraph.

"A table doesn't feel a thing." said Bill.

Twenty-first paragraph.
"You're of age! Put a silencing charm on the window." said Tonks shortly.

"Wonder how it is that the entire family of laughing children, there's one Grinch?" asked Charlie quietly.

"Beats the hell out of me." said Bill.

Mrs. Weasley wiped a tear from her eye.

"Just don't get sick." said Mrs. McFinn, Mrs. Weasley, Madam Pomfrey and Bathilda Bagshot.

"Poor dad." muttered Charlie.

"Ludo is a good man, in a way..." said Dumbledore.

"Abuse of your authority!" screeched Umbridge.

"You have no room to talk, woman!" shouted the Rangers loudly.
"Ludo is full of fun and well, betting. Perfect for Head of Magical Games and Sports. Mr. Crouch is serious and methodical, an obvious choice for his station." said Dumbledore.

End of dialogue set.

"That name clicked in my mind!" said Harry.

"Why didn't you tell anyone about that?" asked Remus.

"Would anyone really believe me?" asked Harry.

"Well you didn't try." said Remus with a raised brow.

Harry chewed his tongue, holding back the fierce words that wanted to burst through his mouth.

Dialogue set.

"That makes you a very dependable and kind person." said Chief Hawkeye.

"He's the one that's pay was nicked from him." said Lionus with a snarl.

Chief Hawkeye turned and snarled at Fudge, who cowered behind his own chair.

Dialogue set, second sentence.

"Poor woman." said Mrs. McFinn. "Maybe she just didn't find the one department she was best at."

Dialogue set, fourth sentence, second dash.

"Merlin, he's so overdramatic." said Fred.

Dialogue set, end of fourth sentence.

"So working on a damn Quidditch game is more than important than finding someone who might be injured or hurt?" said Mrs. McFinn angrily. "You're supposed to be all-powerful wizards!"

Several people stared guiltily at the floor.

End of dialogue set.
"Someone smack him." said Alicia.

"Little bigger than that." said Charlie.

"They don't care one notch." said Bill.

"Well, when I wore that goblin belt buckle that one time, they cared a great deal." said Bill.

"You're Great-Great-Great Grandfather Bartleby's opal belt buckle? What did they do?" asked Mr. Weasley.

"They tried stealing it off me while I was in Gringotts." said Bill. "They never got it, I just never wore it to work again."

"Rapunzel's hair was the only thing longer than his." muttered Dr. Clark with a snicker.

"It's okay, Harry, I wasn't really following it either." said Sirius and Remus.
"Well, when it's only the reserves playing, while the whole team is out with Sleeping Sickness, it's no suprise." said Charlie.

"Don't even." said Dr. Clark and Sirius with a snarl over to Zacharias.

"First year...huh? Not bad kid." said Chief Hawkeye with a smirk.

"Something I don't normally feel." said Harry.

"Let's hope the Minister doesn't catch wind of that." said Blaise.

"Or Professor Snape." said Hannah quietly.

"He's like a human shield, isn't he?" asked George with a somber look.
"That would be one awesome game!" said Colin.

Dialogue line.

"Then just go home when you have to, that's what everyone does." said Kingsley.

End of chapter.

"WHAT?" shouted Percy loudly.

"Duh!" said the twins.

"Who else knew about the dung anyway?" said George.

"It was only known between you and the ones that sent it!" said Fred with a laugh.

Dumbledore himself had to magically restrain the power-driven young man from throttling his younger twin brothers. "Now that's quite enough of that." said Dumbledore with smile. "Let's all settle down, and read another two chapters, and then we'll have a bit of dinner."

"I'll read the next one!" said Colin happily.

He took the book from Hannah and read aloud. Chapter six.

"Another one of my least favorite methods of travel." muttered Harry.

Chapter End Notes

Thanks for reading, please review
“Five more minutes.” said Harry closing his eyes, leaning against Sirius and smacking his godfather lightly on the head.

“If you want that to seem convincing, don’t be smiling while you’re sleeping.” said Sirius tugging his godson’s white locks.

“Doesn’t that mean I’m having a pleasant dream?” said Harry. “Never mind, that definitely means I’m not sleeping.” he added with a smirk.

“Harry had to double back.” said Fred.

“I had my shirt on inside out, and my pants on the wrong way.” said Harry. “I was not ready to get up.”

“I wouldn’t be either if I came down in that ensemble.” said Sirius with a laugh.

“I thought I was still dreaming.” said Harry quietly.

“I think you should come to me before you go out like that.” said Dr. Clark with a snicker.

“Better come and see me, before you see him.” said Mrs. McFinn with a giggle.
“What’s wrong with my style?” asked Dr. Clark.

“Harry’s Halloween?” asked Mrs. McFinn.

“Never mind.” said Dr. Clark quickly.

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

“I thought I looked good.” said Mr. Weasley.

“Take a lesson from Bill dad.” said Ginny kindly.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Fifth paragraph.

“And dangerous.” said Sirius. “I’m not fond of doing it.”

“Says the danger seeking Marauder.” said Remus with a snicker.

“Hey! My uncle had his…well, got splinched somewhere that shouldn’t have been splinched.” said Sirius.

“What’s splinched?” asked Dr. Clark.

“It’s where you leave a bit of yourself behind.” said Sirius. “It’s horrible.”

Dialogue line.

“Cause you don’t know how yet.” said Alicia.

Dialogue line.

Sixth paragraph.

“We went back to sleep.” said Hermione.

Dialogue line.
“I think getting splinched is punishment enough.” said George.

“Still don’t know how dad had the stomach to eat after saying that.” said Fred.

“Still don’t know how there was some treacle left for the rest of us.” said George looking over at Harry.

“It doesn’t sound painful.” said Dr. Clark.

“It is quite painful.” said Dumbledore.

“Almost unendurable.” said Sirius.

Sirius flinched horribly as he grabbed his knees and eyes. “Dammit! Don’t put that in my head!”

“I’ve never been splinched, so I guess, I don’t…” said Mr. Weasley sheepishly.

“Way safer!” said Sirius.
“Squashed her grapefruit and kumquats.” said George.

Charlie reached behind the twins and smacked the both of them.

“And you said that Percy didn’t do what we do.” said George folding his arms.

“I was getting close to recommending the Knight Bus.” said Harry.

“You must have been tired.” said Sirius.

“We both really need to work on that.” said Fred.
Dialogue set.

“Dad only told us to get rid of the toffees.” said Fred.

“And I told you to get rid of the rest!” said Mrs. Weasley.

Twelfth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Thirteenth paragraph, first sentence.

“That wasn’t the half of it.” said Harry. “The twins were far from happy.”

End of thirteenth paragraph.

Dialogue set, first sentence.

“And if something had happened.” said Mrs. Weasley mopping her eyes.

“Nothing did, Molly, they were just fine.” said Mr. Weasley.

End of dialogue set.

Fourteenth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Very carefully.” said Mr. Weasley.

Dialogue set, fifth sentence.

“So, why not just buy a large field or something, that way you don’t have to keep finding a place in England for it to happen in. Each place with a Quidditch team will have a place all ready just in case?” asked Dr. Clark.

Several people stared at Dr. Clark.
“Not a bad plan. I’ve got some land that might do nicely, it’s far away from any muggle visitors.” said Sirius with a smile.

End of dialogue set.

“Beats the hell out of the Knight Bus.” said Dr. Clark.

“You’d think.” said Harry.

Fifteenth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Sixteenth paragraph.

“I should have made Harry wear his thicker socks and give him some mittens.” said Mrs. Weasley.

“I was already wearing two pairs on my feet, and that was an accident.” said Harry with a smile.

Seventeenth paragraph.

“We were all dead, and climbing the hill on all fours, and he’s just getting tired.” said Fred shaking his head.

“I really let myself go.” said Harry shaking his head.

Dialogue line.

Eighteenth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Nineteenth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Who’s calling you son?” asked Charlie.

“Amos.” said Mr. Weasley.
Charlie shook his head.

Twentieth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Twenty-first paragraph.

Mrs. Diggory giggled as her husband rubbed his hand over his face.

Dialogue line.

Mrs. Diggory stopped smiling instantly. Mr. Diggory’s lip quivered.

Twenty-second paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“He was always so polite.” said Mrs. Diggory blowing her nose.

Twenty-third paragraph.

Fred and George cringed slightly.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, third sentence, first dash.

Mrs. Diggory broke down crying. Her husband tried his best, but found he was unable to console her.

Harry wiped his eyes, reached underneath the seat and pulled out his bag. He took out a piece of parchment and a quill and scribbled a note. Hedwig flew over from Dr. Clark’s shoulder and held out her leg.

“Here you go Hedwig, you’re going to have to play courier for a while.” said Harry. “I’ll make you a bunch of owl treats when you get back home.” said Harry. He tied the message gently to her leg, and watched as she flew away.

“No Pig! He didn’t give you something to deliver!” said Ron trying to catch his owl before it could fly after Hedwig.

End of dialogue set.

“Two red-headed people can’t really have a black haired or brown haired child.” said Dr. Clark. “Chances are not good.”

“Biology isn’t taught, here.” said Harry.

“That sucks, that was my favorite class.” said Dr. Clark.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Twenty-fourth paragraph.

Several people looked uncomfortable.

Dialogue set, second sentence, third comma.

Mrs. Diggory cried harder.

End of dialogue set.

Twenty-fifth paragraph, first sentence.

“Good boy.” said Dumbledore with a faint smile.

End of twenty-fifth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“He was always so noble.” said Professor Sprout wiping a tear from her eye.

Dialogue set.
Sirius snarled over to Mr. Diggory.

Harry squeezed Sirius’ hand. “Let it go.”

“You’re a great flier! Better than anyone else in this school!” said Sirius angrily.

“Let…it…go…” repeated Harry slowly.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, first sentence, first comma, ninth word.

“Did you have fun at the game, Luna?” asked Harry.

“We went to go and collect Poladoggles, they love happy and excited people.” said Luna with a smile.

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

Twenty-sixth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“And that’s all it takes.” said Harry softly.

Twenty-seventh paragraph.

Twenty-eighth paragraph.

“I’d question it.” said Dr. Clark.

Dialogue line.

Twenty-ninth paragraph, second sentence, second semi-colon.

“Potter, I want you to be honest with me, did your shoulders get bruised?” asked Madam Pomfrey quickly.

“I’m not delicate.” said Harry with a growl.

“You didn’t answer me,” said Madam Pomfrey.
“They weren’t big bruises.” said Harry.

End of twenty-ninth paragraph.

His feet slammed into the ground;

“Stuck the landing on your first try!” said Sirius proudly.

Thirtieth paragraph, first sentence, first semi-colon.

“And…never mind.” said Sirius lowering his arms.

End of thirtieth paragraph.

Thirty-first paragraph.

“Harry would have been standing too, if Ron hadn’t fell on him.” said Sirius.

“And I would have been standing if George didn’t knock into my knee.”

“Well, Ginny, pushed me.” said George.

“Fred shoved me.” said Ginny.

“Hermione’s bag knocked into my side.” said Fred.

“I tried not crashing into Harry.” said Hermione.

“It’s like a giant game of ‘Ring around the Rosie.’” said Harry with a smile.

End of chapter.

“I wanna read the Quidditch chapter!” shouted Lee.

He hurried over to Colin and took the book, but handed it to Dennis. “Not yet.”

Dennis read the chapter title: Chapter Seven

“You know, when you think about it, Ludo’s name takes on a second meaning.” said Harry with a laugh.

“What do you mean?” asked Dr. Clark.

“What’s a Bagman?” asked Harry.
Dr. Clark thought, “It’s someone that takes money or slips from Bookies to one place or another.”

“It’s also a traveling salesman.” said Remus.

“The Bookie one is the one I was looking for.” said Harry.

“That’s crazy.” said Fred looking at his twin.

“Fates’ one crazy chick.” said George.

Chapter End Notes

Thanks for reading.
“After this, we’ll have dinner.” reminded Dumbledore.

“Aww! Right before the Quidditch Cup?” asked Lee.

“Think of it this way, Mr. Jordan, your voice will fresh for tomorrow.” said Dumbledore with a smile.

“Works for me!” said Lee with a bright smile in return.

“First paragraph.

“You men need help.” said Mrs. McFinn shaking her head.

Dialogue set.

“Kind of risky to use newspapers and cans.” said Harry. “Some people pick that stuff and can get money for it.”

“How do you get money for rubbish?” asked Draco.

“It’s called a recycling center.” said Hermione. “You take paper, plastic, aluminum, stuff like that and get money back.”

Dialogue set.

“How did you get the first field?” asked Kingsley, “I had to get all the way to the third farthest field.”

“Ludo got me the spot, it went with the tickets.” said Mr. Weasley with a smile.
“What made you think that?” asked Sirius.

“His pants matched his shirt.” said Harry quietly.

“What would happen if the game lasted longer than that?” asked Emmeline.

“I’d get in touch with Ludo again, and he’d hook us up with another night. I’d pay him back later.” said Mr. Weasley.

“You know, converting wizard gold to money…you’d be better off in the Muggle world.” said Harry thoughtfully.

“He’ll be way better off when the money finishes depositing in his vault.” said Lionus with a smirk.
“I guess we are sort of foreign.” said Sirius.

“Not good.” said Tonks.

“This guy’s asking to be obliviated.” growled Moody.

“You have to be kidding.” said Dr. Clark with a laugh.

“After only seeing it once, hememorized the look, that’s insane.” said Fred.

“Which means that he’s quite a brilliant person, poor man, those two days won’t be easy on him.”
said Dumbledore.

End of seventh paragraph.

Eighth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“He most certainly should.” said Madam Bones.

Dialogue set.

“Too true.” said Remus with a smile. “I stopped supporting them when he left. They kept getting clobbered now Ludo left.”

Ninth paragraph, third sentence.

Dumbledore shook his head shamefully, “We really need to make Muggle Studies a required course.”

Ninth paragraph, fourth sentence.

“Who had the peacocks anyway?” asked Charlie.

“Sounds like Fleur’s Dad’s tent.” said Bill thoughtfully. “He doesn’t like to leave his peacocks home for very long.”

“You’ve met the family already?” asked Charlie.

Bill blushed.

End of ninth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Tenth paragraph.

“You sure about that?” asked Neville.

“Yeah, people like to misspell our name a bit.” said Ron.
“Didn’t stop a lot of wizards.” said Tonks.

“As long as you’ve done it before, no.” said Dr. Clark.

“And we’ve never done it before.” said Harry.

“Good luck to you then.” said Dr. Clark with a laugh. “You’ll need all the help you can get!”

“I didn’t know one end of the tent from the other.” said Harry. “I’ve never been camping.”

“Thank goodness you went camping before.” said Ron to Hermione.

“Well, not really, but I’ve helped put up overhead things in my cousin’s backyard.” said Hermione.

“Overhead things?” asked Ron.

“I’m not too sure what they’re called.” said Hermione with a blush.

Harry shuffled his feet sheepishly.

“Don’t feel like that Harry, it was no secret that Dad was going mental.” said Ginny with a guilty.

“Yeah, Harry, he was having the time of life.” said Fred.

“What’s so wrong?” asked Ernie.
“It would be a tight fit.” said Harry.

“Didn’t you know about enlarging spells?” asked Zacharias.

“We’re in field, in full view of muggles…no magic spells allowed, didn’t you catch that?” asked Ron snidely.

End of twelfth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Squeeze is a good word.” said Harry with a smirk.

“Harry could sleep on the roof, with his weight it wouldn’t sink.” said George with a snort.

Thirteenth paragraph, first sentence, second comma.

“God you were short, Dad had to go on his hands and knees, and all you had to do was duck down!” said Ron with a laugh.

“Hey! No more short jokes!” said Harry. “I’m as tall as you now!”

End of thirteenth paragraph.

“Yeah, Perkins’ wife is a cat lover like Arabella, in fact, they’re actually cousins.” said Mr. Weasley. “Arabella and Anabella”

Dialogue set.

“Oooh, my uncle had that, poor guy.” said Dr. Clark.

Fourteenth paragraph.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue set.

“Fred and George decided to fight each other with some of the sticks.” said Ginny with a smile.
“He started it.” said Fred and George pointing at each other.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“You make it sound like you’ve been stalking us.” said Dr. Clark with a laugh.

Fifteenth paragraph, first sentence, second comma.

“Trade ya?” asked Harry and Ron.

“Not a chance.” said Hermione and Ginny.

End of fifteenth paragraph.

Sixteenth paragraph.

“Why not?” asked Seamus.

“I was too worried about trying to stay alive in this one.” said Harry.

Seventeenth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Eighteenth paragraph.

“Ah! That brings back memories.” said Sirius fondly.

“Good times.” said Remus.

“What are you talking about?” asked Harry.

“The one time that you got a hold of Lily’s wand. The house was never the same again.” said Sirius.

“What did he do?” asked Hermione earnestly.

“It was early in the morning. We spent the night so we could babysit you while your mom and dad had a long date night. Even with the War going on, a young couple needs to have time to themselves, forget the horrors going on. Well, I got up a little late and there you were, waving your mom’s wand around, changing all the furniture into kittens and chickens.” said Sirius.
Remus laughed, “We still don’t know how you got into your parent’s room and snuck your mom’s wand out without her knowing, or how you managed to do Transfiguration at that age. But it took almost till noon to get most of the furniture and knickknacks back to their original state. But every so often, even days after Fur and Feather Day, we heard chickens clucking and cats meowing in odd spots in the house.”

“Imagine taking a shower and hearing a meowing cat somewhere in the bathroom.” said Sirius with a laugh. “Nearly scared the magic out of me.”

Nineteenth paragraph, first sentence.

“I still have the scars from when I gave you your first toy broomstick, your mother went after me with that thing, I still got a splinter on my thigh.” said Sirius.

End of nineteenth paragraph.

Twentieth paragraph, second sentence, first semi-colon.

“Cheaters.” said Mr. Weasley.

Twentieth paragraph, end of second sentence.

“Works just fine for us.” said Mrs. McFinn giggling madly.

Twentieth paragraph, third sentence, second comma.

“I think we’d find that a little strange.” said Dr. Clark.

Twentieth paragraph, end of third sentence.

“One of the American schools, it only takes girls though.” said Lionus.

Twentieth paragraph, fourth sentence, first comma.

“Hang on…did you understand the languages that you heard?” Bill.

“I don’t remember.” said Harry quickly.
End of twentieth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Twenty-first paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Twenty-second paragraph.

“I had to beg my mom to get a ticket for Dean.” said Seamus.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, fifth sentence.

“And your mom called Harry hostile?” said Ron hotly.

Seamus chewed his lip.

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“There’s a shock, no wonder that the obliviators were running around like nutcases.” said Tonks.

Twenty-third paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Grumpy?” said George.
“Who cares? Best Seeker…well he ties for Best Seeker.” said Fred.

Dialogue set.

“Can you imagine if Krum joins the Chudley Cannons?” said George quietly.

“I think he’d wet himself.” said Fred even quieter.

Twenty-fourth paragraph, third sentence.

Mrs. McFinn’s giggles turned into peals of laughter.

End of twenty-fourth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Mrs. McFinn, and a few other witches ran from the room to get better control of senses.

When they came back, they were still giggling madly.

“My god, tell me someone made Archie put on some pants.” said Dr. Clark with a laugh.

Twenty-fifth paragraph.

Twenty-sixth paragraph, third sentence.

“His dream come true.” said Angelina.

“His Dad’s dream too, he’ll actually get to play his first actual season next year.” said Alicia.

Twenty-sixth paragraph, fifth sentence.

Cho giggled and waved again.
“It was right painful, but Paco ended up apologizing after mum sent him a howler.” said Bill.

“Last year and the year before that were a bit much for me to read up on anything that had nothing to do with defending myself.” said Harry.

Fred looked sheepishly over to his father, who was merely thinking fondly of his experience that morning.

Harry turned in his seat so he could look and fascinate over the wooden door that led to the Entrance Hall.

“Sorry Dad.” said the younger Weasely children.

“You’d think that St. Mungos would be able to come up with a cure by now, he’s had them for over five years.” said Mr. Weasley.
“I’m an Unspeakable.” said Croaker with a smile. “I work in the Department of Mysteries.”

“Dad started cooking, but the eggs kept falling in the fire. Harry had to take over.” said Ginny.

“Percy! There could be muggles about! Keep your voice down!” scolded Mrs. Weasley.
Fred and George wiped the tears from their eyes. “So beautiful.” said Fred.
“I never thought I’d live to see this day.” said George blowing his nose.

“And that’s saying a lot.” said Ron.

“You’re right, he posed for witches’ calendars.” said Remus. “He was a popular guy with the ladies.”
“Which made it kind of creepy.” said Sirius. Emmeline, and Mrs. Weasley blushed heavily.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

“Oh, except for obliviating the field manager.” said Bill.

Thirty-third paragraph.

“And the occasional magical outburst.” said Bill again.

Thirty-fourth paragraph.

“Or furthering his own career.” said Madam Bones.

Dialogue set, second sentence, third dash.

“Come on, Dad! We know, you know who’s who!” said Fred.

Mr. Weasley smiled. “Sure I do, but it’s more fun for me to see someone try and stumble over your names.”

“Oh.” said Fred.

“Thanks Dad!” said George.

End of dialogue set.

Thirty-fifth paragraph.

“I want a bandana to cover up this damn thing.” said Harry rubbing his scar.

Dumbledore smiled softly over to the boy, he waved his wand and a silk, red ribbon flowed softly out of his wand.

“There you go.” said Dumbledore handing the fabric over to the boy.

Harry took the material and wrapped it securely around his temple. “Thanks sir.”
“Don’t even…” said Mrs. Weasley. “Not again.”

“I…it wasn’t like before sweetheart.” said Mrs. Weasley.

“Dad?” asked Ron.

“It’s nothing son.” said Mr. Weasley quickly.

“Poor Agatha.” said Fred.

“I heard though, that someone bought the shares from Ludo, and then put up money to make the eel farm more efficient.” said Mr. Weasley.

“So someone is actually a partner?” asked George.

“And making money hand over fist, her eel farm is now the best in Europe.” said Professor Flitwick.

“So…who’s the mysterious investor?” asked Bill.

Sirius looked over to Harry, who was smirking.

“ARTHUR!” shrieked Mrs. Weasley.

“It was just a galleon dear.” said Mr. Weasley sheepishly.

“A galleon we don’t have to spend on gambling!” said Mrs. Weasley.

“But…But I won…” said Mr. Weasley.

“By pure luck!” said Mrs. Weasley angrily.

“I don’t want to hear about you gambling either.” said Mrs. Weasley hotly.
Dialogue set.

Before Mrs. Weasley could begin to scream, Fred and George quickly ran and hid behind the bowl.

“Harry, save us!” said Fred.

“I don’t feel like dancing with death today,” said Harry quickly. “You’re on your own.”

Dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

“Ugh…” said Mrs. Weasley.

“See, mum…it’s our calling.” said Fred.

Thirty-seventh paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Just look how happy your mother was when your dad bet one galleon.” said Remus looking behind the bowl at the cowering twins.

Dialogue set.

Thirty-eighth paragraph.

Dialogue set.

“No more trips without me there, ever.” said Mrs. Weasley. “Especially a game.”

“We decided never to bet on Quidditch again mum. We decided long before right now.” said George.

“You’d better believe you’re never going to bet again.” muttered Mrs. Weasley darkly.

“Thank god she forgot about the bets we made on the books.” said Fred quietly.

“No I didn’t!” said Mrs. Weasley loudly.

Dialogue set.
“That does seem to sum it up.” said Dumbledore with a smile.

“Well, I guess he was worried for her.” said Madam Bones. “Though perhaps not wholeheartedly.”

“I had a mad idea to invite him over to Privet Drive for tea the next summer.” said Harry with a dry chuckle. “Just to see if he can spot Mr. Crouch for who he is.”

Several people snorted with laughter.

Percy blushed.
“He’s more than able to sell them in his country, just not in England.” said Mr. Weasley.

“Oh that would be lovely, imagine flying around like Aladdin and Jasmine!” said Mrs. McFinn dreamily.

“Like who?” asked Ron.

“It’s a muggle story.” said Hermione.

Sirius scoffed loudly.

“Why is that adults love to just hold stuff over our heads?” asked Harry.

“Seriously, it was getting old really fast. I swear adults just like saying stuff like that so they tell us they’ll tell us later.” said Harry rolling his eyes.

Forty-sixth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“And to think, Dad got them with his connections, for being a really great guy!” shouted Bill angrily at his younger brother. “Not for being a power hungry maniac!”

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Oh, Percy that’s enough.” said Mrs. Weasley tiredly.

Dialogue line.

“Not the way I would have said it.” said Mrs. Weasly quietly.

Forty-seventh paragraph.

“A million wizards outnumber the Ministry officials easily.” said Tonks.

Forty-eighth paragraph.

“Beats the flimsy stuff you get at football games.” said Dr. Clark.

“You wanna go to a game?” asked Sirius.

“Can I?” asked Dr. Clark excitedly.

“We’ll do our damndest.” said Sirius with a smirk.
“Buyer’s remorse.” said Lionus with a laugh.

“You only spend a galleon on him for Christmas?” asked Fred.

“We have an agreement. A galleon each Christmas is all we spend.” said Harry with a smile.

“Nice of you to offer to double back and get us something and then we just pay you back later though.” said Fred with a smile.

Dennis held out the book at arm’s length, hoping that he would be able to get an up and close view of the scrolls. However, nothing happened.

“Darn it.” said Dennis sourly.

“Harry! Can you cook again?” asked Ron eagerly.

Harry blinked several times, and then looked up at Hagrid. “Want to take another crack at it?”

Hagrid shuffled his feet nervously.

“Come along Hagrid, you did wonderfully last time.” said Professor Flitwick eagerly.

Dumbledore waved his wand and once again, the dual kitchens appeared.

“I…uh…” said Hagrid sheepishly.

“Do you want me to teach you tonight?” asked Mrs. McFinn sweetly.
Hagrid blushed.

“Oh come on! It’s been a long time since I’ve been able to cook anything.” said Mrs. McFinn walking over and slipping an apron around her small waist. “I’ll teach you how to make Harry’s Grape Pie.”

“Grape pie?” asked Sirius.

“You have got to try it!” said Dr. Clark with a sigh, “He made it one Bonfire Night, and it’s delicious.”

“Harry mentioned something a long time ago, that you make ribs?” said Remus quickly.

“Yeah, I made them one summer at my apartment.” said Dr. Clark.

“Can you make those?” asked Harry excitedly. “I miss ‘em!”

“Anything for you.” said Dr. Clark ruffling Harry’s hair.

It took a while, but the food was completed. Mrs. McFinn had a fun time teaching Hagrid. There were pros and cons of Harry and Mrs. McFinn’s different styles of cooking classes.

Harry would allow Hagrid to just follow the instructions and then leave Hagrid to do it, giving Hagrid some space. The downside was that the possibility of Hagrid burning something was high. Whereas Mrs. McFinn stayed beside Hagrid to ensure that he didn’t burn anything, but Hagrid got so nervous that he almost cut himself and her four times.

But the result was still the same, Hagrid had once again succeeded in making a delicious dessert. The entire school feasted on the ribs that Dr. Clark made with the other kitchen set up and ate the several grape pies that Hagrid and Mrs. McFinn made.

Harry huddled himself deeper into the bowl.

“You okay cub? You didn’t eat much.” said Sirius softly.

“I’m not feeling well.” said Harry quietly. He felt bad, as Dr. Clark worked hard on making the ribs just for him, but after one plateful, he couldn’t bring himself to eat anymore.

“Not well as in here?” asked Sirius putting a hand on Harry’s stomach, “Here?” he said as he laid the same hand on Harry’s brow. “Or here?” he placed his hand over top Harry’s heart.

“Last one.” muttered Harry. “The good times just go straight to hell after the game.”

“Well, the good times are back now, you’re going to live with me and you got Mrs. McFinn and Dr. Clark back.” said Sirius with a smile.

Harry smiled and leaned into Sirius’ arms.

Chapter End Notes

Thanks for reading, please review
Harry woke up the next morning unenthusiastically, he felt apprehensive about the days readings. He didn’t want to think about last year, let alone go through it piece by piece. He groaned as he lifted his head from the pillow and ran his fingers through his hair.

“You up yet Harry?” said a voice coming from the sitting room.

“Coming Dr. Clark.” said Harry tiredly.

He left the bedroom where he and Sirius shared and walked out to the sitting area.

“You slept in kiddo.” said Dr. Clark as he read the London paper, courtesy of Dumbledore.

“What time is it?” asked Harry rubbing the sleep out of his eyes.

“About nine –thirty.” said Dr. Clark.

“I’ll bet I pissed off a few people.” said Harry with a smirk.

“Lee Jordan wasn’t too happy, but when Sirius said you weren’t feeling good, he clammed up real tight.” said Dr. Clark with a smile. “Dumbledore said that if you just wanted to rest, they can postpone the readings.”

“What do you think?” asked Harry.

“It’s not my decision, it’s all up to you.” said Dr. Clark. "But, one day just so you can sleep, won’t hurt."

Harry sighed. “I guess we’d better get this over with.”

“If you want to take a nap during it, no one will argue.” said Dr. Clark throwing an arm around Harry’s shoulders.

Harry smiled softly and walked down to the Great Hall with Dr. Clark.

Once he got down there, Remus, Sirius, Mrs. McFinn, Mrs. Weasley, Dumbledore and Madam Pomfrey came up to them. Hermione, Ron, Ginny, Fred and George were held back by Charlie and Bill.

“Are you alright, dear?” asked Mrs. Weasley and Mrs. McFinn.

“You sure you’re up for this cub?” asked Remus and Sirius.

“Severus can give you a sleeping potion if you just wish to sleep today.” said Dumbledore.
“Where does it hurt, Potter?” asked Madam Pomfrey.

Harry took a step back, “Can I get a chance to breathe here?”

“Sorry.” said Sirius and Remus taking a large step back. “Want some breakfast? The table is still here.”

Dumbledore lightly ushered Harry over to the bowl, and when he sat down, he tossed the phoenix blanket on Harry’s lap. Sirius and Remus brought him over a plate of omelets, sausages and toast.

“Eat as much as you can.” said Remus.

“I’m not hungry.” said Harry putting the plate over to the little table.

“Can you at least choke down a bit of toast?” said Sirius pleadingly.

Harry looked at the plate, and begrudgingly took a piece of toast.

“My turn to read!” shouted Lee loudly.

Harry curled up in the bowl chair and munched slowly on his piece of toast.

Lee grabbed the book that had been unveiled for a short while. “Eighth chapter.”

“Least mom will see we won our bet.” said Fred.

“It still hurts to sit down.” said George rubbing his backside.

First paragraph, second sentence.

“I know about seven Irish songs, and one of them is a drinking song!” said Harry with a laugh from his curled up position.

“What drinking song is that?” asked Sirius gleefully.

“Seven Drunken Nights, and don’t ask me to sing it.” said Harry.

“Aw…I don’t know that one.” said Sirius with a disappointed frown.

"It's a good one." teased Harry slightly.

First paragraph, third sentence.

“Finally! You deserve some happy times!” said Colin.

End of first paragraph.
“Wow, I wish I could see that.” said Dr. Clark.

“Perhaps we can, if the Cup happens near Britain again.” said Sirius with a smirk.

Dialogue set, first sentence.

“It was so adorable.” said Mr. Weasley teasingly.

Harry blushed.

End of dialogue set.

“What if you didn’t have an appointment, or have need to meet up with anyone?” asked Dr. Clark.

“You know, I don’t quite know.” said Mr. Weasley.

“They all of a sudden feel hungry or thirsty, they instinctively go back to where they last ate to get refreshment.” said Dumbledore with a smile.

“Even if you just ate?” asked Mrs. McFinn.

“Even if you just ate.” said Dumbledore with a smile.

Dialogue line.

“You deserve that box, more than anyone one else that could have paid for it.” said Madam Bones.

Mr. and Mrs. Weasley blushed.

Second paragraph, third sentence.

“Prime Seats is right, my box is right above that one.” said Chief Hawkeye.

“Do you go to the games?” asked Draco.

“I go to each Quidditch World Cup.” said Chief Hawkeye, “It’s the perk of my job, there needs to be at least one of us in order to properly protect you lot when you get into throngs that size.”

“Protect us?” said Hermione.

“From our level of criminal activity.” said Chief Hawkeye cryptically.

Second paragraph, fourth sentence, third comma.
“Oooh! Those are the best seats!” said Tonks.

End of second paragraph.

Third paragraph, second sentence.

“That’s the lights.” said Draco with a sneer.

End of third paragraph.

First Advertisement

“Yeah, but for speed it’s the worst broom on the market.” said Harry shaking his head. “But if you just need to get from point A to point B, then it’s alright.”

Second Advertisement

“It’s all that Mum will use.” said Fred.

“And Filch.” said Professor Sprout.

“He’s still lucky I haven’t run into him yet.” said Dumbledore darkly.

End of advertisement

“We need to get you some clothes this weekend.” said Sirius.

“I’m grounded.” said Harry tiredly.

“Oh…” said Sirius. “God, this grounding sucks.” said Sirius.

“More for you than me, obviously.” said Harry with a smirk.

Fourth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“What the hell is Dobby doing there?” asked Remus.
“Dad still wants to get back at you for that.” said Draco quietly.

“Tell him to bring it on, I’ll rip him limb from limb before he can even try.” said Sirius with a growl.

“Good deduction.” said Lionus with a smile.

“I was wondering who Harry was talking to.” said Mr. Weasley. “There are some unscrupulous folk about in the world.”

“Excellent, Arthur. Keep CONSTANT VIGILANCE!” shouted Moody, causing several younger students to shriek in shock.

“I should just wear a t-shirt that says ‘Yes it’s me, quit staring and git!’” said Harry.

“That would be an awesome shirt!” said Fred. George wrote something down quickly on a bit of parchment.

“That scared me. I was afraid he was sick, hurt or something.” said Harry.

“It’s nice that you’re so worried about him.” said Luna with a dreamy smile.
“Cause people don’t like their house-elves to have ideas.” said Hermione shortly.

“Ah, bless you, lad.” said Chief Hawkeye.

“He probably couldn’t find a good one.” said Fred.

“He should have came to our house, Mum would have loved him.” said Charlie.

“I love how they believe their above goblins, and the goblins think they’re above everyone else.” said Bill with a chuckle.

“The remaining bit of your innocence is just too adorable.” cooed George.

“Sweet lord.” groaned Harry.

The twins laughed.

“Oh the poor dear.” said Mrs. Weasley.

“What horrible person would make someone do that?” asked Mrs. McFinn.

Percy tried to look indignant, but a pair of fierce glares that came from his older brothers stopped him dead in his tracks.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, second sentence.

Harry growled.

“What’s up, kiddo?” asked Dr. Clark.

“You’ll find out later.” said Harry darkly.

End of dialogue set.

Eighth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“He was.” said Harry defensively to the scolding look that Remus and Mrs. Weasley sent his way.

Ninth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Oh Ronald!” said Mrs. Weasley.

“Sorry Mum.” said Ron sheepishly.

“Boys.” said Mrs. McFinn with a fond smile over to her half-way adopted son.

Tenth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“I’d call that barbaric, but they actually looked like they had some fun.” said Hermione softly.

Eleventh paragraph, second sentence.
“They were all nice and pleasant chaps.” said Mr. Weasley.

“Nice and pleasant chaps?” said Percy in shock. “Father, one of them was the French Minister of Magic!”

“Jean Philippe was at your mother and my wedding, he had one of the first dances with your mother.” said Mr. Weasley with a smile. “We still keep in touch, we’re on each other’s Christmas card list.”

Percy stared at his father in shock.

“And dad has these contacts just by being a swell guy.” said Bill hotly.

Eleventh paragraph, third sentence.

Fred and George snorted while Ginny giggled.

Eleventh paragraph, fifth sentence.

Percy blushed, while the Minister looked sheepish.

“Seeing just how attention seeking you were as opposed to the boy?” said Chief Hawkeye sternly.

End of eleventh paragraph.

“Wish I could have people like me cause of the way I act towards others.” grumbled Harry.

“The people that know you like you for the way you act, not for the title you have.” said Remus ruffling his hand in Harry’s white locks.

Dialogue set, first sentence.

“He’s a damn good actor.” said Harry with a snicker.

End of dialogue set.

Twelfth paragraph.

Dialogue set.

“I could live without him there.” said Mr. Weasley.
“I’m amazed that Lucius and Arthur were allowed in the same box, what if they got in another fist fight again?” asked Tonks.

“I think they’d knock some of the kids out of the box, good thing Arthur had a head on his shoulder.” said Moody. “No doubt in my mind that Lucius would have attacked Arthur if given the chance.”

Thirteenth paragraph.

“Don’t let Lucius sit behind Arthur, he’ll strangle him.” said Moody.

“He didn’t strangle me, but he did smack me with his cane a few times. Bill saw it and he placed a shield charm on the back of my chair.” said Mr. Weasley.

Fourteenth paragraph.

Draco snarled over to Harry.

“I said she was nice looking.” said Harry, “If she just brought her nose down, she’d look even better.”

Dialogue line.

“It was in your best interest that you don’t meet his son.” said Charlie.

Dialogue set.

“You…are…an…idiot…” said Madam Bones. “There isn’t a week that Lucius didn’t complain about Arthur’s Muggle Protection Act!”

Fudge looked down shamefully.

Fifteenth paragraph.

“This won’t be a kindly word.” said Professor Flitwick. “The man never did have a kind word for anyone if it didn’t benefit him.”

Dialogue line.

“If I were you Harry, I would have told it was the tribute money his family has to pay your family.” said Sirius with a malicious smile.

“What?” asked Harry.
“Your family is the richest in the world, and every year, pureblood families that live in stately manors and whatnot pay a tribute to your family.” said Sirius.

“What’s the reason?” asked Harry. “Is it something like a mob or something?”

“No, but that would be really cool.” said Leroy.

“Well hundreds of years ago, our Great-Great-Great-Great-Great Grandmother was a very VERY rich witch and she helped a lot of the pureblood families make ends meet. Each family took a pact that they would pay her and her family back with interest when they could. Frankly, only within the last two hundred years could they finally begin to pay her family back, and the amount is astronomical.” said Uncle Rudolph. "And that's just the interest."

“They’ll be paying the family of Potter back till five hundred years go by I suspect and that’s still just the interest.” said Remus.

“What happens if we don’t pay the money?” asked Draco.

“The pact was signed magically, the amount comes automatically out of your account, the goblins are bound by another contract to keep the transfer of money going, despite greedy offspring.” said Sirius snidely.

“How do you know so much about it?” asked Harry.

“My family has to pay back a similar debt. No point telling me I don’t have to pay, won’t do you any good. I owe everything to your family, and I’ll give them all the money they want and you all the love you want.” said Sirius with a smile.

Sixteenth paragraph.

“And that’s how he uses you.” said Madam Bones, “And you never even seemed to want to know it.”

Dialogue line.

Seventeenth paragraph, third sentence.

“And she’s sitting in the best seat in the house.” said Harry with a smirk.

Seventeenth paragraph, fourth sentence.

“Though I doubt Fudge would do anything.” said Tempest smugly.

End of seventeenth paragraph.
He looks like a what?” asked Sirius.

“I think I might have read it wrong, or someone miswrote, I don’t know.” said Lee. "I can't imagine anyone looking like cheese."

Lee also bellowed out the words, and the students imitated the cheers and yells.

“My ears were about to start bleeding.” said Harry.

“And yet they’re the second most popular candy in the wizarding world.” said George.

Mr. Weasley shuffled his feet sheepishly as he avoided his wife’s eyes.

“Don’t blame you Arthur, even we lean forward to watch them.” said Rudolph.

“I like to reenact their dancing later.” said Leroy quietly.

“That’s way too much info.” said Harry with a smirk.
Mrs. McFinn huffed.

“That’s quite the compliment.” said Dumbledore quickly, coming to Sirius’ unexpected rescue, “for being a pureblood Veela...if the Irish team does what I suspect, you’ll find out being a Veela has a drawback.”

“I’m impressed.” said Lionus “Not many guys want to come to that conclusion. And they actually aren’t human, but if they mate with a human, then their children become one hundred percent human.”

“Though they retain the good looks.” said Nightstrike with a smirk.

“If they’re not human, where did they come from?” asked Hermione.

“Some say they’re a cross between fairies and harpies, that’s one of the big mysteries that not even we’re sure of.” said Chief Hawkeye.

“Dang, I wasn’t really questioning it.” said Ron.

“Don’t blame you.” said Sirius with a beaming smile.

Remus rolled his eyes.

“Act aloof if you want, but I’m not the one that was willing jump from the tallest building just to impress them.” said Sirius.

“S-Shut up.” said Remus. “You and James were going to duel each other to the death just to have them see who was better.”

“You’re a girl.” said the boys and men in the room.

_end of twenty-second paragraph._

“Like what?” asked Hermione with a sneer.

“I don’t know, just something.” said Harry shrugging.

_end of twenty-third paragraph, first sentence._

“Oh dear.” said Dumbledore with an amused smile. “I hope someone puts some sense back into your mind.”

_end of twenty-third paragraph._

“Sit down and put a blindfold on!” said Sirius.

“Didn’t wanna.” said Harry with a cheeky grin.

“This is not funny.” said Sirius.

“Don’t worry, magical nets were placed all around when we learned they were bringing Veela.” said Madam Bones.

Dialogue line.

_end of twenty-fourth paragraph, second sentence._

Draco smirk.

“Your mom didn’t even let you watch.” said Ron with a sneer. “She had your eyes covered.”

Draco blushed heavily.

_end of twenty-fourth paragraph._

“Fred and George were ready to start pummeling each other.” said Ron.

“Bill and Charlie had their fingers in their ears.” said Ginny.
“Which is a wise move.” said Mr. Weasley.

“Why didn’t you tell the younger boys what to do?” asked Mrs. Weasley.

“I thought they should experience that.” said Mr. Weasley. “I had a plan.”

Mrs. Weasley folded her arms.

Twenty-fifth paragraph, third sentence, second comma.

“Yeah, I shouted for them to keep going too, my mum smacked me.” said Seamus with a smirk.

Twenty-fifth paragraph, end of third sentence.

“Us too.” said Dean, Seamus, Fred and George.

End of twenty-fifth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Stupid…danm…” muttered Ron.

Dialogue line.

Twenty-sixth paragraph.

“Sorry, I’m a guy.” said Harry with a smile.

Dialogue line.

Twenty-seventh paragraph, first sentence.

“Leprechauns!” said Neville wistfully.

“Beats the hell out of the banshees they brought that one year.” said Kigsley.

End of twenty-seventh paragraph.

“That’s not rain.” said Remus with a bright smile.
“They are quite theatrical.” said Dumbledore with a smile.

“They’ve never seen a leprechaun then, the gold disappears after a while.” said Sirius.

“Did you know that the gold would disappear?” asked Ron.

Harry averted his gaze.

“And you didn’t say anything?” asked Sirius.

“I hoped he’d never find out.” said Harry.

“I swear, Ron was in love.” said Harry with a smirk.

“Stuff it.” said Ron.

Hermione giggled.

“What’s so funny?”
“Krum said you looked like a bird too.” said Hermione.

“Did he say which?” asked Seamus.

“A phoenix.” said Hermione. “With the red and gold uniform and the fire being everywhere.”

End of thirty-first paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Lynch doesn’t have a thing on Krum.” said Professor Flitwick. “More’s the pity, he was the school’s best Seeker when he was here.”

Thirty-second paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Ooh, he’s a veteran.” said Sirius. “He’s been a referee for a long time.”

“But I don’t think he’s ever reffed with Veela on the playing field.” said Remus.

Thirty-third paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“And so the game begins.” said Sirius excitedly.

Thirty-fourth paragraph, second sentence.

“ Took a while for the scar to go away.” said Harry.

End of thirty-fourth paragraph.

Thirty-fifth paragraph, first sentence.

“Still can’t quite get that move down.” said the Hufflepuff team captain.

Thirty-fifth paragraph, second sentence,
“We just mastered that one.” said Katie.

End of thirty-fifth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“You’re still on slow motion, Harry.” said Remus with a smile.

Dialogue set.

Thirty-sixth paragraph.

“It’s okay, the play wasn’t all that spectacular.” said Hermione kindly.

“Says the person who was hopping about.” said Harry.

Thirty-seventh paragraph, first sentence.

“One of the best group of Chasers in the world.” said Lee.

Thirty-seventh paragraph.

“Bet the Bulgarians weren’t all that thrilled.” said Tonks.

Thirty-eighth paragraph.

“The Bulgarian team can be brutal if the scoring gets too out of hand.” said Nightstrike.

Dialogue set.

“Good thing the Veela can’t see you, they get right miffed if you don’t watch their dancing.” said Professor Sprout.

Dialogue line.
Thirty-ninth paragraph.

“I couldn’t see it anywhere.” said Harry.

Dialogue line.

Fortieth paragraph, second sentence.

“I was afraid you were going to do that in your first year.” said Professor McGonagall looking over at Harry.

End of fortieth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, second sentence.

“I didn’t want her to start crying and not having a good time anymore.” said Charlie with a kind smile.

“I’m not a baby.” said Ginny indignantly.

“You and Ron will always be our babies.” said Bill and Charlie together.

Ginny and Ron blushed.

End of dialogue set.

Forty-first paragraph.

Forty-second paragraph, second sentence, sixth word.

“Which means that Harry will do it at some point during a game here.” said Fred.

“He’d better not.” said Remus.

“He’s already done a sort of Wronski Feint.” mumbled Lee.

Forty-second paragraph, third sentence.
“I wanna see Harry and Krum go at it.” said Angelina. “See who’s better.”

“I’m betting on Harry.” said Colin.

End of forty-second paragraph.

“You don’t take anyone lightly do you?” asked Lionus.

“Try not to anyway.” said Harry. “But I tend to overshoot myself.”

Forty-third paragraph.

Forty-fourth paragraph.

“Professional games tend to do that.” said Emmeline.

Forty-fifth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Caught her right in the eye.” said Ron.

Forty-sixth paragraph.

Forty-seventh paragraph.

“Well excuse me for not wanting to leap off the side of the box.” said Harry teasingly.

Dialogue line.

Forty-eighth paragraph.

Several people laughed loudly.

“How come the music didn’t affect you that time?” asked Dennis.

“I think I was focusing more on the referee.” said Harry.

Dialogue line.
“Wish that would be an option at some football games.” said Dr. Clark.

“I agree.” said Dean quickly.

Forty-ninth paragraph, first sentence.

“Another option that should be allowed at football games.” said Dr. Clark with a laugh.

End of forty-ninth paragraph.

“Bad move, very bad move.” said Bill.

“This won’t end well, I take it.” said Remus with an amused smile.

“World War three would have been a better war to watch.” said Harry.

Dialogue set.

Twentieth paragraph, first sentence, first colon.

“Nasty was a huge understatement.” said Ron.

End of twentieth paragraph.

“This game is going to get real nasty.” said Kingsley.

Dialogue set.

Fifty-first paragraph, first sentence.

“It was turning into a Slytherin and Gryffindor game.” said Ron.

End of fifty-first paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.
Mrs. Weasley and Mrs. McFinn huffed at crossed their arms. “The children don’t need to see that!”

“At Potter’s age, they’ve already mastered that sign.” said Snape with a sneer.

“Mrs. McFinn,” said Dumbledore with a smile.

Harry climbed out of the bowl and walked behind Mrs. McFinn. “That’s why you’re a hundred times more beautiful then they are.” purred Harry as he threw his arms around her neck from behind.

“Oh, sweetie.” said Mrs. McFinn kissing Harry’s cheek.

“Your dad could have learned a thing or two from you.” muttered Remus with a laugh.

“Dear lord!” said Mrs. McFinn.

“I went t for the whole package; beauty, brains, kindness and everything else an angel has to offer.” said Mr. Weasley kissing his wife, who in return giggled.

“I’d be more interested in the battle on the pitch.” said Sirius.

“So much for International Cooperation.” said Ernie with a snigger.
Several students groaned in sympathy and pity.

The groans turned to peals of laughter.

“Good instinct!” said Charlie.

“Instinct nothing, Lynch doesn’t have the dexterity to do the Feint.” said Harry.

“At this point, he’s been a professional player for about a year, the Bulgarian team was desperate for a Seeker. This was his first pro year, he had to do whatever it took to get the Snitch.” said a seventh year Gryffindor.

“I could pick a better way of dying.” said a sixth year Hufflepuff girl.

“Speak for yourself.” said a seventh year Gryffindor boy.
“So close!” said a few first years.

“Hang on, the twins said that Ireland would win, but Krum gets the Snitch! They won their bet!” said a third year girl.

“Hey! That’s right!” said her friend.

"IRELAND WINS!" Bagman shouted, who like the Irish, seemed to be taken aback by the sudden end of the match. Dialogue set second sentence.

“He was watching the fight, I’ll bet.” said Blaise.

“Except for the twins.” said Lavender.

“Made sense to me.” said Harry.

“I think you hit the nail on the head there.” said Sirius with a smile.

“Why is it that boys seem to love pain?” asked Hermione.
“As if nothing happened.” said Harry with a smile.

“He can speak English!” said Sirius with a barking laugh.

“Can’t argue with him there.” said Remus with a bright smile.

“You’re finest moment.” muttered Moody amusedly.

“I hope you turned away.” said Sirius quietly.

“I did.” said Harry. “Last thing I need is someone to scream my name everywhere.”

“Well, yeah, he’s the youngest Pro-Seeker in a long time.” said Ron.

“Poor guy.” said Dr. Clark with a smirk.
“Good job boys, just don’t go betting all the time. Gambling is fun if done responsibly.” squeaked Professor Flitwick.

Mrs. Weasley sent a soft glare to her twin sons.

“That was the last time we bet on Quidditch matches.” said Fred.

“Who’s next?” asked Lee.

“I’ll take it, the last one I read was a short one.” said Remus

“You aren’t going to like it.” said Harry.

“What’s not to like? You’re away from the Dursleys, it’s summer and…oh…” said Sirius his face looking crestfallen.

“You just remembered huh?” said Harry.

“Ah…Moony? You may want to pass it off to someone else.” said Sirius.

“I know about the Mark.” said Remus calmly.

“Oh, well then…never mind.” said Sirius.

Chapter End Notes

Thanks for reading. Please review
“Ninth Chapter” read Remus loudly.

Mrs. Weasly whimpered slightly.

Dialogue line.

“I’d have your hide.” said Mrs. Weasley angrily.

Dialogue line.

“And I would have if someone had told me.” said Mrs. Weasley, she looked at Percy.

Percy looked down.

“That means, Mom, that he bet with somebody too.” said Fred.

“Hey! You didn’t yell at Percy for betting on Quidditch in his final year…” said George pouting.

Mrs. Weasley blushed.

First paragraph.

“What I don’t know about your two’s business, keeps me out of interrogation with your mother and allows me to sleep at night.” said Mr. Weasley kindly.

First paragraph, second sentence, first comma.

“Did you sing?” asked Sirius eagerly.

“You kidding, I’m not a nut.” said Harry.

“Your dad loved to belt out of tune notes in public, god he was awful.” said Remus smiling at Harry.
“I was thinking about putting a silencing charm around the tent so we could get some sleep. It’s a good thing I didn’t.” said Mr. Weasley.

“I think that some cobbing techniques could be used legally.” said Charlie.

“And I think that cobbing is never the answer.” said Mr. Weasley.

“You make it sound like Ginny just woke up and went to bed, Dad had to carry her to bed.” said Ron.

“Irish getting their pride on.” said Fred.

“I think they’d roast you over their fires, Arthur.” said Tonks with a smile.

“Then Ireland would have to deal with me.” said Mrs. Weasley shortly.

“Ireland would be doomed.” said Harry, Ron, Fred and George.

“Wow, Ron let you have the top bunk?” asked Neville.

“We flipped a knut for it.” said Ron.
“If I caught you doing that, I’d paddle your behind, I don’t care how old you are.” said Remus. “And this would have happened last year, well within a reasonable time frame.”

“Dammit.” said Harry with a slight smirk, realizing his argument winner was now gone.

Third paragraph, third sentence, first pause.

“You mean that you knew of the move before you went?” asked Alica.

“Well, I did read Quidditch Through the Ages, the move was in there.” said Harry. “And it said ‘Dangerous’ that sort of stuff is like a magnet to me.”

“Not funny.” said Sirius.

“Strange, I thought it was hilarious.” said Harry.

End of third paragraph.

“I had the same dream when I was younger, now it’s more me riding dragons around in the sky.” said Charlie.

Fourth paragraph, first sentence, second dash.

“The last of the pleasant dreams.” said Harry.

End of fourth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Fifth paragraph.

“If that tent ceiling was hard, I’d of been knocked out for days.” said Harry.

“And that would have been really bad.” said Bill.

Dialogue line.

Sixth paragraph, fourth sentence.
“Well, that’s a tell-tale sign something is wrong, screaming.” said Tonks.

“Oh my, what was going on?” asked Mrs. McFinn.

“Criminals were out and about.” said Dumbledore. “Criminals called Death Eaters.”

“Oh, Harry, tell me you were safe!” said Mrs. McFinn.

“As safe as possible for the situation.” said Harry.

“That does not reassure anyone.” said Dr. Clark.

End of sixth paragraph.

“Thank god I got new pajamas the first time I was able, the ones I had to wear for the longest time were Dudley’s old ones.” said Harry.

“Oh, that’s gross.” said Lavender.

“You have no idea, there were little purple teddy bears on them too.” said Harry.

Seventh paragraph.

Eighth paragraph.

“Whatever you do don’t touch that light!” said Rivers loudly.

“If someone even gives you a cut I’ll hunt them down!” said Sirius.

“Me too!” said Remus with a snarl.

Ninth paragraph, fourth sentence.

“Those would be Death Eaters. Keep well away from those until you’re strong enough to take them on.” said Kingsley to the younger students.

Ninth paragraph, sixth sentence.

“It was Mr. Roberts and his family.” whimpered Ginny.

Mrs. McFinn had tears in her eyes.
“Oh…those must be his children! Oh please someone get them down!” said Mrs. McFinn.

Harry looked over to her and slipped over to lay his head on her lap. Mrs. McFinn took notice and ran her fingers through his hair.

“Thanks Sweetie, I needed this.” said Mrs. McFinn.

“This is horrible!” said Mrs. McFinn.

“Reminds me of some of the stuff from when I was the army.” said Dr. Clark his face turning pale.

Dr. Nicodemus magicked over a phial of clear liquid. “Drink that Sam.”

Harry watched as Dr. Clark downed the contents in one gulp.

“My dear, we are not all like that.” said Dumbledore softly looking over to Mrs. McFinn.

“Absolutely not, they’re the mass minority that needs to be stamped out.” said Professor Flitwick.

“Amen, Mr. Weasley.” said Professor McGonagall approvingly.

“Listen to your father!” said Mrs. Weasley.

“I will give you credit, you do run towards the danger and not away from it.” said Chief Hawkeye.

“Were you at the game sir?” asked Hermione.

“Yes I was.” said the Chief to Hermione.

“Then why didn’t you stop them?” asked Hermione.
The Chief looked at her, and then turned towards Lionus. “Is she the one you told me about?”

“Yes sir.” said Lionus.

“Well, young lady, I did do something, I put up a shield around the Roberts so that they wouldn’t get hurt anymore than they already were.” said Chief Hawkeye.

“But what about innocent children or people that were running away?” asked Hermione stiffly.

“I have a certain ability…when a child is within two kilometers of me, an invisible shield goes over them. Any further damage is negated, existing however, I cannot stop.” said Chief Hawkeye.

Hermione stared.

End of thirteenth paragraph.

Dialogue set.

“Well, guess you all aren’t imbeciles.” said Tempest.

Fourteenth paragraph, second sentence.

Sirius took ahold of Harry’s leg, and rubbed it gently. “I’d hold your hand, but I can’t reach, so I’ll settle for your leg.”

End of fourteenth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“NO USING MAGIC OUTSIDE…” shrieked Umbridge, who was trying to find something against Harry.

“It’s an emergency!” said Madam Bones. “It’s a lesser spell anyway!”

Fifteenth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Sixteenth paragraph.

“How much do you want to bet, Ron was tripped by him and not a tree root?” said Fred.
“Actually, it was a root.” said Ron with a grumble.

Ron told Malfoy to do something that Harry knew he would never have dared say in front of Mrs. Weasley.

“And what was that, Ronald?” said Mrs. Weasley.

“I all of a sudden do not remember.” said Ron innocently.

Dialogue line.

“What’s that supposed to mean?” asked Ginny angrily.

Eighteenth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

Snape reached behind Malfoy’s head and smacked it sharply.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Draco cringed under the gaze of his godfather.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“I would have pummeled him right there.” said Ron.

Nineteenth paragraph.

“Why you little sadist.” growled Nightstrike.

Dialogue line.
“Something your father and mother should be trying to do, if they weren’t trying to terrify them instead.” said Bill hotly.

Dialogue line.

Twentieth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“You kinda just did.” said Charlie.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“I had to grab Harry; he looked ready to beat Draco with a rock.” said Hermione.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, second sentence.

“If Fudge had a brain, he’d be in jail a lot earlier.” said Lionus.

End of dialogue set.

Twenty-first paragraph.

“Where did you learn French?” asked Sirius.

“I’ve picked up a few things.” said Remus.

“Could’ve used you when I went to France.” muttered Sirius. “Wouldn’t have gotten slapped as much.”
“Jeez, and you just get all this stuff from books,” said Padma.

“How’s that for fate, we saw students from both schools before they even came here!” said Ron.

“That’s nuts.” said Harry.

“Did you know about them before that?” asked Hermione.

“I’ve read about them, but I didn’t know how to pronounce the word correctly.” said Harry.

“Don’t tell me you dropped it…” said Moody rubbing his eyes.

“It wasn’t, dropped anyway.” said Harry.

“Didn’t have a holster then.” said Harry, “After that, I made one real quick.”
“Whoa, why didn’t you voice that?” said Hermione.

“You wouldn’t have believed me.” said Harry. “And besides don’t you remember? We talked about that.”

Dialogue line.

Twenty-fifth paragraph.

“That needs investigating.” said Kingsley.

“We’re a bit preoccupied.” said Ron.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue set.

“And so it begins.” said Harry and Ron.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Sorry Ron.” said Hermione.

“It’s alright, least Harry and Dumbledore explained it a bit better.” said Ron.

Twenty-sixth paragraph.

Dialogue set, third sentence.

“If they catch a peep at your scar, you’re going to be in worst danger than all of them put together.” said Sirius.

End of dialogue set.

Twenty-seventh paragraph, second sentence, first comma.

“So they won that from Ludo?” said Hermione.
“Apparently.” said Ron.

End of twenty-seventh paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Charlie snarled. “There are no dragon killers! If a dragon goes rogue, then we just stick in a remote part of the reserve and try and calm him down!”

Dialogue set, second sentence, first pause.

“Oh come on!” said Sirius. “Best friends don’t do that.”

End of dialogue set.

“Don’t even get me started on that one.” said Viper from behind Fudge’s seat.

Seventy-eighth paragraph.

Twenty-ninth paragraph, second sentence.

“It could happen, but he’d better improve the driving on the bus in order to get a lot of people to know him.” said Tonks with a smirk.

End of twenty-ninth paragraph.

Ginny giggled.

“How come you didn’t brag?” asked Ron.

“I don’t know.” said Harry with a shrug.

Dialogue set.

Thirtieth paragraph.

“Smart move.” said Kingsley with a smile.
Thirty-first paragraph.

Thirty-second paragraph.

“What’s got him so nervous?” asked Neville.

Dialogue line.

Thirty-third paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“How did he not notice that?” asked Sirius.

“Must’ve had a rendezvous with someone.” said Blaise.

Thirty-fourth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Thirty-fifth paragraph.

“Our poor little innocent ears.” said Harry with a mock shocked face from where he laid in Mrs. McFinn’s lap.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“I’d be shocked if he was, if it had nothing to do with a game of some sorts.” said Madam Bones.

Dialogue set.

Thirty-sixth paragraph, second sentence.

“Too bad they didn’t give him a tiny broomstick to ride around on.” said Colin.

“They did, but that was ten sickles more.” said Ron.
“Fred and George don’t need wands to defend themselves, all they need is a pair of long sticks.” said Ron and Ginny with paired smirks.

“And make Dad’s century.” said Bill.

“They were trashed, we could smell it all over them.” said Kingsley.

“You don’t know what’s out there!” said Emmeline.

“You children should never know that spell.” said Remus sorrowfully.
Fortieth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Forty-first paragraph.

“And you kids are right underneath it? Oh no…GET OUT OF THERE!” shouted Sirius.

Forty-second paragraph.

“Just get out of there, if that thing is over you…you need to get out of there!” said Sirius worriedly.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Idiot boy,” said Snape.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Forty-third paragraph.

Forty-fourth paragraph.

Forty-fifth paragraph.

“Damn, kid!” said Lionus with a bright smile.

Forty-sixth paragraph.

Dialogue set.

“Oh my goodness, don’t get hurt, please don’t get hurt.” said Mrs. McFinn ruffling Harry’s hair.
“Oh Arthur! Thank goodness.” said Mrs. Weasley who was gripping her husband’s hands tightly.

“Make him.” said Charlie angrily.

“At who? They’re just kids!” said Dr. Clark. “You were the ones that screwed up and let those nuts run around free like that!”

Several adults looked down in shame.

“Has he lost his mind? They’re kids! No kid, even if they knew the incantation could cast that spell!” said Nightstrike.

“Well, he…” said Percy pompously.

“Don’t…even…justify…it…” growled the rest of his family.

“Get the children away from that madman.” said Tempest.
“What an idiot.” muttered Dr. Nicodemus.

“Well, at least the rest of them have the brilliance to see sense.” said Tempest.

“Sounds like he hadn’t learned a single thing, he’s still ready to pin it on anyone he sees first.” said Sirius.

“No, freaking way.” said a Hufflepuff sixth year.

“Winky wouldn’t have done that.” said another Hufflepuff student. “Besides, the voice was way deeper wasn’t it?”

“He wasn’t trying to prove Winky’s innocence.” said Hermione, “Just trying to save his own skin.”
“A house-elf cannot cast that sort of spell, you fool.” said Moody shaking his head.

Mr. Diggory glared at the veteran Auror.

“How about that?” said Mr. Diggory snidely.

“She picked it up, you fool.” said Moody with a scowl.

Mr. Diggory opened his mouth.

“It wasn’t her, not in any sense.” said Harry.

“Poor man needed a nice rest at home.” said Percy.

“Home was not the place for him.” said Ron.

“Cause they’re spell happy.” said Ron.
“Why was he taking charge?” asked Nightstrike.

“Why was she crying?” asked Neville.

“You’ll find out later.” said Ron.

“Human! The elf has a name!” said Tempest angrily.

“That’s not good.” said Sirius.
“AMOS!” said Dumbledore sharply, “Have you lost your mind?”

“How could you even think he’d do something like that?” said his wife in shock.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“That’s well beyond carried away!” said Professor McGonagall.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

“Foolish Human!” stamped Tempest angrily. Her long hair flailing around. “Do you think that every other creature in this world is as foolish and idiotic as yourselves?”

Mr. Diggory quaked slightly under her fearsome gaze.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Big whoop, it tells the spell but not the person who did it.” said Harry.

Sixty-second paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Sixty-third paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.
“Amos, leave justice to those who know what they’re doing.” said Madam Bones.

Mr. Diggory looked down in shame.

“Big question, do you?” asked Charlie. “You were the first to accuse him.”

“Exactly.” said Kingsley.

“Where were you?” asked Hermione.

“I was calming down the families.” said Kingsley.

“Finally a voice of reason!” said Tempest.
Sixty-sixth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Sixty-seventh paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“But she didn’t do anything wrong!” said a muggleborn first year.

Dialogue line.

Sixty-eighth paragraph.

Dialogue set.

“If she had stayed in the tent, she would have been burned alive!” said Hermione shrilly. “Or blown to bits, or levitated and scared half to death!”

Dialogue line.

Sixty-ninth paragraph.

“It was a real switch from when Dobby was set free.” said Harry.

Dialogue set.

Seventieth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Seventy-first paragraph.

“Get the kids back to safety.” said Bathilda Bagshot.

Seventy-second paragraph.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue line.
“She’ll get clothes and have to find work elsewhere.” said Professor Flitwick.

“This won’t end well.” said Fred and George together.

“We were fine Dad.” said Fred.

“And that’s all that Dad said.” said Ron to Percy.
“I was fine Mom.” said Bill.

“No blood, not a scratch.” said Charlie.

“He tripped and fell on a cauldron.” said Bill.

“Was it foreign made?” whispered George.

“Can we skip Percy’s line?” asked a second year Ravenclaw. Percy looked insulted.

“Stupid idiot.” muttered a first year Gryffindor, nods scattered about the Great Hall.

“She wasn’t running amok! She picked up a stick off the ground!” shouted a Hufflepuff student.
“Have you read that book, Harry?’ asked Dennis eagerly.

“Not when I learned there where was a whole two chapters dedicated to him and me.” said Harry pointing to his scar.

“It was ours, especially in the final months.” said Remus and Sirius quietly.

“Maybe Harry should have had a hand in wiping their memories. Hermione didn’t all of a sudden think it was winter when she woke up the next day.” said Seamus.

“What sort of idiot dresses up like them for fun?” said Charlie. “Not even the most rebellious kid knows not to go that far!”

“It’s nice though, that you try and find proof.” said Nightstrike.

“They never had a point, doing that to Muggles was just their idea of fun.” said Tonks.
“Whatever point they had, was just pure nonsense.” said Professor Sprout.

Dialogue set.

“Horrible monsters.” said Tempest.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

“Sound reasoning, Mr. Weasely.” said Dumbledore with a smile.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

“When I heard, I nearly went mad with fright.” said Mrs. Weasley.

Eightieth paragraph.

“Should I give you a lifetime supply of sleeping potion, Potter?” asked Madam Pomfrey.

Eighty-first paragraph.

“It means you tell someone really quick.” said Mrs. Weasley.

End of chapter

Charlie blushed.

“What’s worse, he didn’t say a thing about hearing Ron’s snores.” said Dean with a gleeful smile.

Both Ron and Charlie blushed even heavier.
Thanks for reading, please review
“Who wants the book now?” asked Remus.

“Come on, cub.” said Sirius taking the book from his school friend, and extending a hand to help Harry off of everyone’s laps.

“You okay?” asked Harry looking up at Mrs. McFinn.

“I’m fine now.” said Mrs. McFinn with a weak smile.

“You sure? I can stay over here.” said Harry.

Mrs. McFinn kissed the top of Harry’s head and helped him sit up.

“You need to eat more.” said Dr. Clark, Harry’s full weight was on him as he sat up, if you could call that weight.

“I not going to eat much anymore, I’m just going to get sick, if you want I can vomit all over you.” said Harry with a smirk as he returned to his original seat.

“Never mind.” said Dr. Clark with a laugh.

“You read first.” said Sirius handing Harry the book.

“Tenth chapter, this should be good.” said Harry.

“With Fudge in charge, it’s always mayhem.” said Ginny quietly.

First paragraph, first sentence.

“Few as in only three.” said Harry with a smirk.

End of first paragraph.

“Oh that poor man.” said Mrs. McFinn.

Dialogue set.

“How was his family?” asked Harry.
“They were just frightened out of their wits, it only took calming draughts and memory charms.” said Madam Bones.

Second paragraph, first sentence.

“Didn’t make Basil’s work any easier.” said Mr. Weasley. “Poor guy couldn’t get a break at all, and he had to reorganize the Portkeys thirteen times, people tried taking the wrong ones in their panic.”

Second paragraph, second sentence.

“And we got there when it was pitch dark.” said George.

Second paragraph, third sentence.

“And the nice, warm beds waiting for us at home.” said Ron with a fond smile. “I wanted to go to bed so badly.”

“Me too.” said the rest of the group that had gone.

“Well, I had important work to do.” said Percy stiffly.

“You weren’t needed at work, if you were, there would have been an owl sent for you.” said Charlie.

“Well, then, Dad didn’t need to go!” said Percy hotly.

“Muggles were attacked! It’s Dad’s department!” said Charlie.

“Boys that’s enough.” said Mr. Weasley tiredly.

End of second paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Third paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“I couldn’t believe what I had read! I thought I lost all of you!” said Mrs. Weasley wailing as she remembered how the news crashed into her that morning.
Fourth paragraph.

“That paper sold more copies of that issue, than any other one for the past twelve years.” said Tonks.

Dialogue line.

Fifth paragraph.

“Nearly knocked us out, it did.” said Fred.

“I still have the dent in mine.” said George.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, third sentence.

“Well, at least that morning anyway.” said Bill.

End of dialogue set.

“That was scary, her fawning over us like Bill, Perce and now Ron.” said George.

“Downright terrifying, we crossed over to enemy territory.” said Fred.

Dialogue set.

“You aren’t going to like it.” said Remus. “Gave me a heart attack, especially when Sirius wrote to me and told me you were going,” he said looking over to Harry. “He told me to look for you, just in case you were in a photo.”

“Why look for me?” asked Harry.

“I wanted to start a scrapbook.” said Sirius. “Remus was kind enough to make it for me. Got a nice load of photos of you from that year.”

“Show me where that thing is and I’ll burn it.” said Harry with a sweet voice.

“No chance, cub. I love those pictures, I kept some of the articles for laughs,” said Sirius.

“I’ll laugh you right in the…” said Harry.

“Harry…” said Mrs. McFinn in a warning tone.
“Calmed her down quite a bit, after she had a few sips, she settled with just hugging me till my face turned blue.” said Charlie.

Really need to break you of that habit, quite annoying trying to read a briefing when you are right there to offer comments.” said Madam Bones shaking her head.

Percy blushed.

“I can’t stand that woman’s writings, if I had a bigger reason than just annoyance, I’d of taken care of her permanently.” said Chief Hawkeye.

“She’s right over there sir.” said Lionus. “We knocked her out, for the duration of our stay.”

“Wake her up, let me have a nice chat with her.” said Chief Hawkeye.

“Her knock-out drops will wear off soon enough.” said Dr. Nicodemus. “Might be today or tomorrow.”

“I beg your pardon?” said Viper looking hard over to Percy. “Non-Vizard? Part-Human?”

Percy turned a shade of white that resembled the sheets up in the Hospital Wing.

“Right on.” said a few students together.

“I don’t remember reading about that.” said Dumbledore.

“Not by name sir.” said Mr. Weasley.

“I should have sent all you kids to bed.” said Mrs. Weasley.

“We were waiting on food, mum.” said Ron.
Strange thing, I don’t remember seeing her there.” said Mr. Weasley.

“You wouldn’t have if she had been in her usual snooping disguise.” said Hermione.

“What bodies? There were no bodies.” said Madam Bones.

“Bodies and lies sell papers.” said Ron with a snarl. Mrs. Weasley looked over to Hermione worriedly.

“You kept professional Arthur, you didn’t say a single thing wrong.” said Madam Bones loyally.

“Dozens of owls asking us who was killed and wondered if they were their long lost cousin Bartleby or something along those lines.” said Tonks.

“I had to field some of the owls. Some even started coming at us with conspiracy theories, that said that the attacks were Ministry organized.” said Mr. Weasley, “I couldn’t breathe from laughing so hard.”

“Your report, during that time, would have gone right in the garbage.” said Fred.

“Right next to the dragon dung.” said George.

“His help was greatly appreciated.” said Kingsley.
“You didn’t make any wrong moves.” said Emmeline Vance. “Only Fudge thought you were wrong.”

“I wanted to write to you right away. Let you know I was fine.” said Harry.

“That’s it, keep writing to me and telling me you’re okay.” said Sirius. “Really puts my mind at ease.”

“Something bothering you, cub?” asked Sirius.

“Just normal stuff.” said Harry.

“Should have told us that before we left.” said Hermione.

“Didn’t want to risk not being allowed to the Quidditch Game.” said Harry.

“That’s creepy how you do that.” said Ron.
“I can handle myself.” said Hermione.

“So can I, but that never stops you and Ron from protecting me.” said Harry.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

“Wish we could get you used to that name.” said Harry.

“Never happen.” said Ron.

Dialogue line.

Twelfth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“You weren’t there.” said a nervous first year, “It sounded creepy.”

Dialogue set.

Thirteenth paragraph.

“Every time I turn around, there’s another hole.” said Ron.

“If you’d clip your nails, you wouldn’t have that problem.” said Harry quietly.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Oh trust me, I ran the entire way, no walking involved. Apparating from country to country, and then when I felt I couldn’t do that safely, I turned into a dog and ran the rest.” said Sirius. “My turn to read.” he took the book from his godson.
“I’m going to paddle your backside till you can melt a glacier when you sit on it.” said Sirius.

Harry blushed.

“You say the word ‘Quidditch’ to someone who plays it, and they’re full of adrenaline.” said Ginny.

“And girls too!” said Angelina, Alicia, and Katie indignantly.

“Perce, everyone in the house and in the entire bloody school knows what a Howler does.” groaned Charlie.

“She wouldn’t let me give her my copy, or buy her a new one.” said Harry with a pout.

“My copy had all the hearts and arrows in it.” said Ginny sticking her tongue out.

“And you know that how?” asked Tonks.
“Charlie knocked into it before we got to you guys.” said Bill with a smirk.

Sixteenth paragraph.

“If James and I had that clock, it would be stuck on that last one.” said Mrs. McFinn softly.

Dr. Clark gave her a one armed hug.

Seventeenth paragraph.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue set.

“He said that? Right in front of his mother?” said Remus in shock.

“How can you even stand sitting down?” said Sirius his mouth slack. “I would have taken after you with a broomstick!”

“He was quite close.” said Mrs. Weasley sending an icy glare towards her ambitious son, who was cringing under the glare of many adults and children alike.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

“Long-haired, yes, pillock, no.” said Tonks with a giggle.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“I like it long, so does Fleur.” said Bill.

“Fleur? As in Fleur Delacour?” asked a few students loudly.

“That’s right.” said Bill with a smile.

“You’re dating her?” they asked in wonder.

“Uh huh…can’t find the perfect ring to give her though.” said Bill thoughtfully.

“You’re going to propose?” said the twins together with a shocked look.

“Oh…Bill…” said Mrs. Weasley, tears in her eyes.
“Good for you son.” said Mr. Weasley proudly.

“I know a great jeweler, Muggle world, but I can get the price of any diamond ring you want cut in half.” said Harry. “And he does custom work too.”

“How the hell can you get a deal like that?” asked Sirius.

“He was one of my earlier security clients.” said Harry with a smile.

Eighteenth paragraph, second sentence.

“Should have wrote down that she didn’t need to get me that book.” said Harry.

Eighteenth paragraph, third sentence.

“Helps when we’re examining the youngsters, they tend to shoot fire at anything that moves. Helps them practice hunting when the time comes. However…when those things get holes in them, it’s like you got polka dot burns all over your head.” said Charlie. “Poor Frank, he had to restyle his whole look, had an afro, now he’s stuck with a Mohawk cause he had a tear right on both sides of his balaclava.”

Eighteenth paragraph, fourth sentence.

“Your broom is the best cared for broom in the school.” said Madam Hooch.

“I haven’t gotten it back yet.” said Harry crossing his arms.

“You mean this?” asked Chief Hawkeye. He reached up into the air, snapped his fingers and Harry’s Firebolt appeared out of thin air.

“How did that…?” asked Hermione.

“Secrets of the trade little one.” said Chief Hawkeye.

Harry stood up and grabbed his broomstick quickly, he held it close to his body. “Thanks.” he looked at the broom and saw that it wasn’t in the best shape, but it wasn’t destroyed.

“Seems you’ll need this.” said Chief Hawkeye, he snapped his fingers again and a broomstick servicing kit appeared.

“Looks like I have something to occupy my time.” said Harry with a bright smile.

End of eighteenth paragraph.

Dialogue line.
Several teachers snorted.

“You boys are famous for saving your work for the train ride.” said Flitwick.

“How do you know?” asked Mrs. Weasley.

“Their handwriting is even more illegible at the beginning of the year.” said Professor Sprout.

“And yet we get good grades.” said George.

“What were you thinking, doing that right in the living room?” asked Tonks.

“We thought she was preoccupied with something else.” said George.

“That got us off the hook.” said Fred.

“I say it’s not a good day at work unless I get home and I’m ready to pass out in Molly’s arms.” said Mr. Weasley.

Mrs. Weasley blushed.

“If that’s the case, how did they have so many kids?” asked Sirius with a teasing smile.

“Easy days at work.” said Mr. Weasley with a bright smile.

“Dad…” moaned several of his children with their eyes shut.
Harry smiled over to them as he trimmed the broom end of his broomstick. Though he despised these books at the beginning, especially for showing everyone his thoughts, feelings and actions, he couldn’t help but feel grateful for the outcome:

He had Mrs. McFinn and Dr. Clark back, and they were now completely part of his life.

Umbridge was going to jail with no chance of ever getting out.

Malfoy was incarcerated, the man that tried to kill Ginny and discredit Mr. Weasley.

Sirius was a free man and was able to take Harry away from the Dursleys.

The Dursleys were going to jail for putting him through hell his entire life.

Remus was going to be a teacher again, in a non-jinxed position.

Mr. Weasley was going to get a massive raise, and get his back wages sent through to his account.

He met his two Great-Uncles, both of them fascinating as hell.

And the list went on, he supposed that the good outweighed the bad. The few negative things that had happened were that at the beginning of the readings he kept getting hurt and his security testing job was now out in the open. Also, he almost forgot this, now that they had reached the part where things only happened the year before, he’d get punished now. He had never been punished before, and lately Sirius and Remus kept mentioning spanking and paddling, but the most they’ve done was ground him, and that seemed to punish them more than him. He’d have to wait and see what happened next.

“You alright, Harry? You’re staring at the floor.” said a voice.

Harry looked up and saw his Uncle Rudolph looking over to him intently.

“I’m fine, just thinking.” said Harry reassuringly.

Dialogue set, first sentence.

“I like it when it gets that way, only way I can stomach the stuff.” said Mr. Weasley.

End of dialogue set.

“I don’t think it would have done enough good, if Voldemort got her.” said Harry quietly.
“So when are you and him getting hitched?” asked Leroy with a laugh.

Percy blushed.

“Uh…Lee? Mr. Crouch passed away.” said Remus.

“Oh…sorry.” said Leroy.

“Don’t feel bad, we were out of the country.” said Rudolph.

“Dad’s being irritable.” said George.

“He’s never irritable.” said Fred.

“Except towards Percy when he’s being a prat.” said Ron.

“That could cripple you in society, being a cruel Master isn’t socially acceptable.” said Harry. “But, unfortunately, there aren’t many laws protecting House-Elf cruelty. There ones that punish people for ordering their house-elves to kill themselves or killing them themselves, but…nothing much more than that.”

“That’s horrible.” said Hermione. “Doesn’t anyone try and stop that and get new laws in?”

“Fudge and Umbridge helped kill forty of them thus far.” said Madam Bones sourly.

“To a limit.” said Harry. “As long as he earns it from his servants.”

“We don’t need to go into that again, do we?” asked Harry.

“No, I’ve been doing my own investigating…but I haven’t learned much more.” said Hermione.
“Ron can sleep through anything, but I was debating about sleeping on the couch downstairs.” said Harry.

End of twenty-second paragraph.

“You’re always sad when Hedwig’s gone.” said Hermione.

“Not my fault that I miss her.” said Harry.

“The whole world would have heard.” said Sirius with a smirk.

“I was more excited about the socks.” said Harry.

He heaved a pile of parcels onto Harry's camp bed and dropped the money bag and a load of socks next to it. Harry started unwrapping the shopping. Apart from The Standard Book of Spells, Grade 4, by Miranda Goshawk, he had a handful of new quills, a dozen rolls of parchment, and refills for his potion-making kit - he had been running low on spine of lionfish and essence of belladonna. Twenty-fourth paragraph, third sentence.

“There’s the proof right there, he has been doing some very advanced potions.” said Snape quietly to himself.

End of twenty-fourth paragraph.

“Why on earth were you putting it in there?” asked Hermione.

“Cause Hedwig’s cage was dirty.” said Harry teasingly.
“You’d stick your shorts in there?” asked Neville.

“Only if I had nowhere else to put them.” said Harry.

“You’re either shameless or foolish.” said Snape with a sneer.

“I just don’t care what people say about my clothes. I went my entire primary school days of people making fun of my tattered clothes that I don’t care what they see anymore. And besides, they aren’t the shorts that I used to have.” Harry gave a full body shiver. “These are at least decent looking.”

“Boxers or briefs?” said a girl ending in a fit of giggles.

“Boxers.” said Ginny.

“Are you trying to get me killed?” said Harry looking horrified over to Mrs. Weasley.

“Nothing happened mum, I was kidding!” said Ginny quickly.

“She’s right though, isn’t she?” asked Sirius quietly.

“Shut up.” hissed Harry. “And she’s telling the truth, nothing happened, we never even tried.”

Dialogue line.

Twenty-fifth paragraph.

“Worse thing I had ever seen.” said Ron. “Didn’t you notice the mold?”

“No Ron I didn’t.” said Mrs. Weasley shamefully.

Twenty-sixth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“I never seem to be able to fold stuff right.” said Harry.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“I didn’t want to even think about me wearing them.” said Ron.
“I don’t blame you Ron,” said Remus. “As financially strained as I am, I’m not desperate enough to buy Dress Robes with lace on them.”

Mrs. Weasley looked down.

“Why didn’t you fix it up Mum? From it sounds like from Harry’s description, it wasn’t washed.” said Bill.

“I…I ran out of time…” said Mrs. Weasley guiltily.

“That was a lie. Harry’s didn’t look like that.” said Ron.

“All the ones at the consignment shop looked like that.” said Mrs. Weasley.

“They were actually nice looking.” said Ginny. “You looked really handsome.”

Harry blushed.

“I paid for Harry’s out of his own money.” said Mrs. Weasley.
“Sorry Mum…” said Ron.

“It’s alright dear, I should have taken the lace off yours and styled them up a bit.” said Mrs. Weasley standing up and walking over to hug her son.

Twenty-eighth paragraph.

“Yeah, we don’t need anything from you Harry. Just you being there is good enough.” said Charlie.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“I think I would have too…but I wouldn’t have sent the picture on.” said Harry with a snort.

End of chapter.

“He’s not rubbish, you just have to break his Owl Treats into smaller bits.” said Sirius.

“I think a bit of lunch wouldn’t do anyone any harm.” said Dumbledore summoning the table back.

“I’ll get you some new Dress Robes dear.” said Mrs. Weasley standing up.

“I’ve got some, Fred and George bought me a brand new set.” said Ron.

“Where did you two get the money?” asked Mr. Weasley.

“Little fairy gave it to us.” said the twins with a teasing glance over to Harry, who rolled his eyes.

Chapter End Notes

Thanks for reading, please review
Harry sat in the bowl and ate his plate of sandwiches and fruit. Though he couldn’t’ exactly call it eating, more along the lines of light nibbling. He was still dreading the end of the book, and he couldn’t wait for it to be over.

Seamus decided to take the book and read the next chapter.

“Chapter Eleven.” said Seamus.

“I love the train rides.” said Tonks. “Well, I liked the first one…”

First paragraph.

“A sweatshirt? In summertime?” asked Sirius.

Harry looked away.

“Harry?” asked Mrs. McFinn.

“I was cold.” said Harry.

“And?” asked Sirius.

“Nothing…” said Harry.

Sirius and Remus wanted to press a little harder, but Dumbledore shook his head. “He’ll tell us when he’s ready.”

Second paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“That’s something you don’t want to hear on your day off.” said Kingsley.

Third paragraph, first sentence.

“Sorry Harry.” said Mr. Weasley.
“I’ve learned from Uncle Vernon to get out of a person’s way when they have an important call.” said Harry.

Mr. Weasley turned white and his jaw was clenched shut.

End of third paragraph.

Fourth paragraph.

“You saw a Floo call for the first time didn’t you?” said Sirius with a teasing smile.

“What’s a Floo call?” asked Mrs. McFinn.

“You toss in a special sort of Floo powder and say who you want to talk to and your head will appear in their fireplace. If it’s a fresh batch, your head will just appear in the flames, if it’s a little old then you appear in the embers, and that hurts.” said Sirius.

Harry looked at Sirius quickly.

“You’re worth it.” said Sirius consolingly.

Fifth paragraph, first sentence.

Mrs. Diggory couldn’t help but laugh.

End of fifth paragraph.

“You don’t feel it if the batch is fresh.” said Sirius to Dr. Clark and Mrs. McFinn.

Dialogue set, second sentence, first comma.

“Please-men? You mean Policemen right?” asked Mrs. McFinn.

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

If she gets ahold of anything she twists it around.” said Ron sourly.
“You do have the most original security system, Alastor.” said Mr. Weasley.

“Bet that was hard to explain.” said Dr. Clark with a smirk.

Moody sent a fierce glare over to Mr. Diggory who almost succeeded in hiding behind his wife.

Moody’s glare softened slightly.

Dumbledore turned to him and sent a pointed look over to his old friend, who nodded.

“See? I’m on your side.” said Mr. Diggory nervously.
“Someone else chose for me.” said Moody angrily.

“I told you, you should have eaten before you Floo called.” said Mrs. Diggory.

“I was in a rush, but I ended up getting something to eat.” said Mr. Diggory sheepishly.

“Besides, she had us with her.” said Charlie.

“He’s George,” said the twins pointing at each other while Moody glared at the twins.

“He’s Fred.” said the twins pointing at each other again.
“Was? Still is.” said Tonks loyally.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dumbledore chuckled warmly at that statement.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, third sentence.

“You’re real good with that blank look.” said Ron.

“I should be an actor.” said Harry posing with the back of his hand on his forehead head and laughing.

End of dialogue set.

“Doesn’t hurt to be cautious.” said Moody with a snarl.

Twelfth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Not the way I heard it, he kept trying to ditch him.” said one of the Unspeakables with a snigger, “Even before the cup.”

Dialogue line.

Thirteenth paragraph.

Dialogue set.

“Taxi drivers aren’t all that known for being a cheery lot.” said Dr. Clark.

Fourteenth paragraph, first sentence, first comma.

“Owls?” said Ron. “We only had the one.”
Hermione nudged him, “He didn’t mean there was more than one.”

End of fourteenth paragraph.

“I had half a mind to wash his mouth out with soap.” said Mrs. Weasley.

Fifteenth paragraph, second sentence.

“I was willing to give her my allowance money for four years to get him declawed.” said Ron.

“I was ready to have the taxi driver stop at the first vet we saw.” said Harry.

End of fifteenth paragraph.

“Stupid psycho tried running us over.” said Ron.

“Got back at her, I memorized the license plate and reported her running through the red light.” said Harry with a smirk.

Sixteenth paragraph.

Seventeenth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“More teasers!” groaned Dr. Clark.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“We were getting really close to whacking out on you guys.” said George.
“It’s always a pleasure dears.” said Mrs. Weasley.

“I wish adults would just smile and let it the frick go.” said Harry.

“Easy, cub.” said Sirius.

“This is getting old.” said Mrs. McFinn quietly. “Really, stop torturing the poor kids.”

“The only thing those were good for.” said Ron muttering.

“I offered to buy you a new set.” said Harry.

“I still owed you ten galleons.” said Ron.
Draco cringed under the gaze of several adults while Mrs. McFinn looked confused.

“Pity.” said Fred.

Dumbledore turned and frowned at the child. “It’s better to defend against them, then to use them.”

“Yes sir.” said Draco softly.

“Amen.” said George quietly.

“It was quite the battle to keep you from being accepted to Durmstang and Beaubatons.” said Dumbledore looking at Harry.

“Well, being part of the Potter family, it’s natural for a massive amount of schools to ask to have you at their school. A legitimate Potter is a status symbol.” said Rudolph. “Our Great-Great Aunt Eileen was the first Potter child to actually given the option of going to any school she wanted. Before then, all the Potter children were homeschooled. But the fighting got so bad that they decided to home-school her, just like all the other kids.”
“Seemed kind of stupid, how are people supposed to inspect the school if that’s where they wanted to send their kids there?” said Harry.

“That in itself made me want to break into Drumstang and Beauxbatons.” said Harry.

“It’s hidden to Muggles Hermione, but not to wizards and witches.” said McGonagall.

“I saw that sign.” said Mrs. McFinn. “But then it faded away.”

“I know I saw it too.” said Dr. Clark.

“What did you mean by that?” asked Hermione.

“It can be plotted down on a map, you just need the password incantation.” said Harry.

“And how did you find out their password incantation?” asked Hermione.

“Haven’t yet, I’m just saying it can be done.” said Harry shrugging.
“How the hell do you know their uniform list? That’s a bit much, even for you.” said Remus.

“I was just curious.” said Hermione blushing.

“There’s curious and then there’s being an information stalker.” said Moody with a good-natured laugh.

Several people snorted.

“They provide the company, I provide the snacks.” said Harry with a smile.

“That was really the only fourth year spell I couldn’t really grasp.” said Harry.

“But you mastered it in the nick of time.” said Hermione.

“Except for the nearly getting killed by a stampede of drunken power hungry assholes.” said Sirius with a scowl.

“Love how adults can get away with swearing.” said Harry cheekily.

“You’re too cute to be spewing foul language.” teased Sirius back.
“And cue Malfoy.” said Charlie.

“It won’t be his last…said Sirius with a smirk. “If Harry has anything to do about it.”

“Way to go guys.” said Ron.

“Sorry.” said Seamus and Dean.

Draco looked down at the floor.

“They probably don’t have the faintest idea what’s going on.” said Charlie.

“It figures that Lucius would tell his son.” said Mr. Weasley.

“And it figures Fudge would tell someone who really had no business knowing it in the first place.” said Madam Bones.

“I’d like to know one time where someone said there was a competition and someone saw me raise my hand and say I’ll do it.” said Harry shaking his head.
“They just wanted to keep the surprise for their kids.” said Bathilda Bagshot. “I doubt the other Ministry officials told their kids about the Tournament.”

“Ronald!” shrieked his mother.

“Mum, it’s glass, insanely easy to fix.” said Bill.

“Thank you, Ron.” said Mr. Weasley.

“Um, I think he’s getting to you.” said Fred.

“Just a wee bit.” said George.

“What did you do to keep dry?” asked Uncle Leroy.

“Just my cloaks hood.” said Harry.

“Tell me someone gave you some Pepperup Potion.” said Uncle Rudolph and Sirius together.
“Cheerful thought.” said Remus sarcastically.

“The students are more than safe when they cross the water.” said Dumbledore.

“Well, at least nothing horrifying happened.” said Mrs. Weasley.

“The only luck I had that day.” said Harry quietly.

Thanks for reading, please review
“Who wants it this time?” asked Seamus loudly.

“I’ll have it.” said Katie.

She took the book from Seamus and read aloud. “Chapter Twelve.” said Katie.

“Finally, the whole ‘shush-shush’ nonsense is done.” said a Ravenclaw girl.

First paragraph, first sentence.

“I nearly fell out.” said a second year Hufflepuff boy.

“I did.” said Dennis. “I fell right out of the boat!”

First paragraph, third sentence.

“That weather should have been at the start of the previous year.” said Dr. Nicodemus with a light laugh.

End of first paragraph.

“Home sweet home.” said Harry with a full bodied stretch.

Dialogue line.

“What happened?” asked Bill quickly.

“Nothing too horrible.” said Ron with a sour look.

Second paragraph, second sentence.

“You kids could have caught your death of cold!” said Mrs. McFinn.
“Would you believe they have a cure for the common cold?” said Dr. Clark with a smile.

“You’re kidding.” said Mrs. McFinn.

“The side-effect is that you have smoke coming out of your ears.” said Dr. Clark.

“I think I’ll deal with the cold.” said Mrs. McFinn covering her ears.

End of second paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Third paragraph.

“That’s gotta hurt.” said Sirius.

“Again, I’m sorry Miss Granger.” said McGonagall.

“That’s all right.” said Hermione with a smile.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“You had a nasty bruise.” said Ron quietly.

Dialogue line.

“Shame on you Peeves, you only pissed her off more.” said Sirius.

Dialogue set, second sentence.

“Not exactly something you do to proclaim your innocence.” said Dumbledore.

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

Fourth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Can’t we even dry off first?” asked Fred.
Fifth paragraph.
“I just about slipped and fell right on my rear.” said Harry.

“Aw, poor baby.” cooed Sirius with a grin.

“Wanna kiss it?” said Harry quickly.

Remus laughed loudly as Harry and Sirius wrestled about in the bowl. “You did open yourself to that!”

Sixth paragraph, fifth sentence, fifth comma.

“Thank goodness our table was right beside the fire. We managed to snatch the seats right in front of it.” said Ron.

End of sixth paragraph.

“Nearly Headless Nick?” said Chief Hawkeye.

“Yes sir, there’s a bit of skin that keeps his head still on his shoulders.” said Lionus.

“Hmm, we had a ghost like that at my old school, Captain Roberts, he’s missing an arm, leg, and eye. He was on the wrong end of a cannon ball.” said Chief Hawkeye with a laugh.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, second sentence.

“Wow, someone’s cranky.” said Sirius.

“Do you blame me?” asked Harry.

End of dialogue set.

Seventh paragraph, second sentence.

“Man, you were missing out big time.” said Sirius. “The songs that hat comes up with…”

End of seventh paragraph.

Dialogue line.
You are a hero Harry.” said Colin.

Harry rolled his eyes slowly.

“Breathe kid.” said Remus.

“Parvati likes to climb trees and play games a bit more than I do.” said Padma.

“Padma likes to go and sit under a tree and read all day.” said Parvati.

“Why do you look for them first?” asked a third year Ravenclaw.

“You're kidding, we need to know who to look out for.” said Harry.

Remus blushed slightly.

“Don’t be too excited, look who he had in the years before.” said Sirius with a smirk.

“Shut up.” said Remus.
“This year, it wouldn’t have been a bad idea.” said Harry.

“Now that honor belongs to the two sadistic nuts.” said Harry.

“Harry, don’t think about them.” said Dumbledore softly.

Harry sunk deeper against Sirius’ side as Snape scowled over to him while Sirius snarled back to the potion’s master.

Dumbledore looked over to Harry with an amused smile on his face.

“It didn’t look pleasant that night.” said Dumbledore.

“They looked like drowned rats.” said Ron.

“They had to line up outside the Hospital Wing and get a dose of Pepperup Potion after dinner.” said Professor Flitwick.

“That’s me!” said Dennis eagerly.
“Are all Gryffindors nutters?” asked Blaise.

Harry looked around at his fellow Gryffindors. “Most of us are, I suppose.” said Harry.

“Harry…?” said Lavender.

“No.” said Harry.

“You’re no fun anymore.” said Katie.

“I don’t want to sing.” said Harry.

“Oh, sweetheart please do! You have the sweetest voice.” said Mrs. McFinn. “But wait, what does singing have to do with anything?”

“You’ll see if we can convince Harry to sing.” said Dumbledore with a smile.

Harry rubbed his eyes. “Fine.”

“Here you go.” said Katie with a grin.

Sorting Hat Song.

The same happened again. Dr. Clark, Mrs. McFinn, Leroy and Rudolph applauded loudly and wiped the tears from their eyes.

“Hang on, the hat sings?” said Dr. Clark and Mrs. McFinn.

“Just a little thing Hogwarts is known for.” said Sirius with a smirk.

“It sings a different tune every year, it’s got nothing better to do with it’s time.” said Sirius with a shrug.

“That and scares people who happen to put it back on their head.” said Harry.
“ME!” shouted a Ravenclaw boy.

Seventeenth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Eighteenth paragraph, first sentence.

People began clapping again.

End of eighteenth paragraph.

Cho blushed, as well as Harry.

Dialogue line.

The Slytherin House applauded their housemate.

Nineteenth paragraph.

“That wasn’t nice.” said Mrs. Weasley shortly.

“We didn’t hiss as in ‘We don’t like you.’” said George.

“We hissed as in snakes.” said Fred.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

The Hufflepuff house cheered loudly.
Hagrid smiled warmly.

The Gryffindor house cheered loudly for their twelve year old member.

“You and your brother are quite rare.” said Dumbledore with a smile.

“How do you mean?” asked Colin eagerly.

“Two muggle borns, from the same family and are two different ages are quite unlikely to happen.” said Dumbledore with a smile.

“You make it sound like a bad thing.” said Dennis.

Harry turned and faced Blaise, “I guess we are a bunch of nutters.”

“Mr. Creevy!” scolded McGonagall.
“Ooh, bad move Ron, he takes that sort of thing personally.” said Bill.

The people the book named stood up and cheered.

“I love your speeches sir.” said Ron with a smile.

“I could almost hear the stomachs of my students growling all over the Great Hall.” said Dumbledore with a smile.

“Oh, Ron.” said Mrs. Weasley shaking her head.

“If it got too bad, how much do you want to bet Harry would have gone downstairs and cooked for the whole bloody school?” whispered Charlie.
“I was hungry, I didn’t care about manners.” said Harry.

“There’s a usual argument?” asked Nightstrike.

“Not that we’re aware of.” said Sirius.

“I had that problem, when I was two months old.” said Charlie.

“Aw, Peeves was just having a bit of fun, someone got hurt but it wasn’t bad.” said Dr. Clark.

“Say hello to the only member of the Peeves fan club.” said Harry rolling his eyes.

“I like him too though.” said Mrs. McFinn.

“And then the trouble starts.” said Ron quietly.

“That tablecloth is still down in the kitchens, they’ll never get that orange tint out of that thing.” said Harry.

Hermione blushed.
“Honestly, what did you think?” said Lavender.

“That’s the point, it’s the way they like it, the guests never see them.” said Harry.

“Dig down, dig deep…” sang Harry softly. Sirius sniggered.

“They don’t want to get paid, and their families are most likely in different houses all around the world. When they are ill, they don’t work, but being ill for a house-elf just doesn’t happen, not unless it’s life threatening. As for Pensions…they’re taken care by the other house elves when they get older.” said Dumbledore and Harry together.

“Nearly made a few first years faint.” said Hermione.

“Got an up close and personal look at a bit of Yorkshire pudding.” said Harry.
“That’s not what they would say, they make everything with love, that’s why the food is so good.” said Harry.

Thirty-third paragraph.

“And not eating the food is very rude to them.” said Dumbledore.

“Dobby calls me the rudest person here, but he says it with a smile.” said Harry with a laugh.

Thirty-fifth paragraph.

Dialogue set, second sentence.

“If that was me, I’d of been sold.” said Harry licking his lips.

Dialogue set, third sentence.

Chief Hawkeye spat out the tea he was drinking. “What did you just say?”

“It’s a pudding.” said Harry.

“You have got to be kidding.” said Chief Hawkeye.

“Haven’t you ever had it?” asked Hermione.

“I’m not British, I’m an American.” said Chief Hawkeye.

“You don’t sound it.” said Hermione.

Chief pointed to a pair of dog tags around his neck. “This thing lets me understand each language and speak it fluently; even the accent is dead on.”

End of dialogue set.

Thirty-sixth paragraph.

Thirty-seventh paragraph, first sentence, second comma.

“Magic not required.” said Harry. “Especially the treacle tart.”

End of thirty-seventh paragraph.

“That was quite a nasty storm.” said Professor Flitwick.
Hermione blushed.

“Wow, he didn’t have them on before?” asked Bill.

“The things we could have done!” said Sirius.

“I knew no one would read it.” said Dumbledore with a smile.

“We switched out Quidditch for something only four people can play, what a rip off. We still could have played, showed Durmstang what an awesome flyer we have here.” said Cormac McClaggan. He figured himself the best flyer this school had to offer, and was happy to see several people smiling and nodding along with him.

“Yeah, Harry is the best.” said Fred and George together, several other people smiled and nodded as well.

Cormac felt as if he had been struck over the head with a pan. Potter was not who he was talking about.

“Not another cliff hanger!” said Tonks.
“Nice dramatic entrance.” said Tonks.

“That’s not me.” growled Moody.

Forty-first paragraph.

Hermione blushed furiously.

Forty-second paragraph, first sentence.

It was Harry’s turn to blush.

Forty-second paragraph, second sentence.

“Battle scars, every one of them.” said Moody gruffly.

End of forty-second paragraph.

Forty-third paragraph.

“The best All-Seeing-Eye I’ve ever made.” said Dr. Nicodemus with a smirk.

Whispers and murmurs went flitting around the room after that statement was said.

Forty-fourth paragraph.

“What did you say?” asked a first year.

“None of your business.” said Moody shortly. It also didn’t help that he didn’t know.

Forty-fifth paragraph.

“Gotta admit, he’s got me down pack.” said Moody.

Dialogue line.

“Still cannot believe he was allowed to even consider the job.” said Umbridge stiffly.

“The faker was a better teacher than you.” said Harry.
“It was quite awkward.” said Dumbledore with a kind smile.

“Fighting the Dark Arts.” said Moody.

“Got that from a pair of Death Eaters, used Flesh Eating Fire against me, I had to slice my own foot off.” said Moody.

Fred and George leaned forward eagerly to hear more, but Moody didn’t continue.

“What made you decide to host this thing when people have died during it?” asked Chief Hawkeye.

“To promote…friendship with other countries.” said Dumbledore.

“It came with one massive cost didn’t it?” said Chief Hawkeye quietly.

Several adults laughed loudly. “Only you Headmaster, only you.” said Charlie wiping a tear from his eyes.
“Aw…Professor…come on.” said Sirius with a chuckle.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue set, first sentence, fifteenth word.

Harry snorted. “Boy did that change.”

End of dialogue set.

“And for very good reason.” muttered Dr. Nicodemus.

Dialogue set.

Harry shuffled his feet nervously.

Dialogue set.

It was Dumbledore’s turn to look guilty.

Dialogue set.

“Wow, that’s a big incentive to try and win it.” said Dr. Clark.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue set, first sentence.

“Was the only reason anyone agreed to it.” said Dumbledore.

Dialogue set, third sentence, second dash.

“We weren’t seventeen yet, we had a few months to go.” said Fred.

“Wasn’t fair.” said George.
“I’m amazed you didn’t look at Harry.” said Remus.

“Harry wouldn’t just leap into danger, and I knew that he wouldn’t try to disobey me, he might think about it, but he wouldn’t do it intentionally.” said Dumbledore with a slight smile.

“Hopefully you get some sleep that night.” said Sirius.

“Cause you aren’t old enough.” said Mrs. Weasley. “I’m glad neither of you were in the Tournament.”

“Don’t want the money, and wanted a nice break.” said Harry.

“There’s not a whole lot of people that could be labeled as impartial.” said Harry.

“How simple we were back then.” said Fred dramatically.
“You didn’t ask Harry?” asked Colin.

“We figured he had enough dangerous stuff, besides, we wouldn’t stand a chance at winning the spot if his name was in on it.” said George.

“You most certainly haven’t!” said Mrs. Weasley.

“She’d rather have you alive.” said McGonagall shortly.

Neville blushed.

“Don’t worry about that, I can’t seem to remember that dangerous stuff hurts.” said Harry with a smile.

“I didn’t even finish falling.” said Neville.

“Those suits of armor make noise?” asked Mrs. McFinn.

“Yeah, sometimes.” said Harry.

“Explains the whistles I hear when I’m walking down here.” said Mrs. McFinn.
Fifty-fourth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Fifty-fifth paragraph.

“Is that going to be the thing for this book?” said a third year Hufflepuff.

“Yes.” said Harry and Ron dully.

Fifty-sixth paragraph.

“Best athletes anywhere.” said Dean.

Dialogue line.

“Hey now.” said Dr. Clark.

Fifty-seventh paragraph.

“I took mine out after a while.” said Ron.

“Mine stayed in all night, I think I would have froze without it.” said Harry.

“Should we stick some extra ones under your sheets tonight?” asked Sirius.

“Nah, someone’s already been warming up my blankets before I even get there.” said Harry. “I’m nice and warm all night.”

Remus and Rudolph tried to hide their smiles.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Ron cringed guiltily. Harry never said he wanted to sign up, he never even voiced his desire to take part in it.

Fifty-eighth paragraph.
“Typical teenage boy dream.” said Sirius ruffling Harry’s hair.

End of chapter.

“Why not?” asked Colin.

“I had a feeling that Ron wouldn’t want to go head to head with me trying to get a spot.” said Harry.

“I think we’ll have dinner after the next chapter.” said Dumbledore. “This chapter was quite long.”

Chapter End Notes

Thanks for reading, please review
Katie took a look at the next chapter title and saw what it was called.

“Um…Professor Moody, do you want to read?” asked Katie.

“I’m not a Professor, I’ve never spent a day teaching.” said Moody, “but why not, I’ll read a chapter.” He summoned the book over to his own seat, read the title and chapter and smirked.

“So that’s why, “Thirteenth chapter” said Moody, “Just what I wanted, to read about that damn bastard.”

“Alastor!” scolded several teachers and Mrs. Weasly.

First paragraph, first sentence, first semi-colon.

“Not the best start to the year.” said Remus with a smile.

End of first paragraph.

Mrs. Weasley scowled at her twin sons.

“Come on, Mum! You’d tell us off for giving up too early or not aiming high enough.” said Fred.

“We’re just trying to make you proud.” said George.

Dialogue set.

“Why can’t we be paired with the Ravenclaws or something?” said Ron. “We’re always with Hufflepuffs or Slytherins.”

Dialogue set.

“Don’t blame you cub.” said Sirius as Professor Trelawney glared down at the youth.
“And miss out on nap time? You’re nuts.” said Ron with a smirk.

"Yeah...and you were hungry," said Ron, grinning.

“You just love fighting with her don’t you?” said Charlie. Ron blushed.

“Now that I give it some thought, Harry has the only snowy owl the school has.” said Professor Flitwick.

“God, I was missing Hedwig, and worried about you.” said Harry to Sirius.

“It was my Transfiguration book.” said Neville.

“I would have cursed who ever would hurt her right into oblivion.” said Harry. “Or at least make their week the worst one they ever had.” he added throwing a smirk up to Umbridge.

“Something tells me something happened.” said Remus with a smile.

“She hurt Hedwig’s wing when she tried to read my mail. So I…uh…” said Harry looking nervously around at the teachers.

“Whatever you did to her, we don’t find any fault.” said McGonagall proudly with a smile.

Harry smiled, “I slipped a powerful laxative potion in all of her food, every three minutes she had to run to the bathroom.” Harry sneered even more. “She couldn’t even get three words in before heading off.”

“Have I told you lately that I love you?” said Sirius with a proud smile.

Umbridge scowled fiercely down to him. “I knew it was you.”
Professor Sprout looked a little hurt at the youth.

Third paragraph, second sentence.

“Oh, Bubotubers, they aren’t the most pleasant thing to look at.” said Professor Sprout with a smile.

End of third paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“The what?” said Mrs. McFinn and Dr. Clark together.

Dialogue line.

“Glad we aren’t the only ones.” said Dr. Clark and Mrs. McFinn.

Dialogue set, first sentence.

“I’d rather not touch it.” said Seamus quietly.

End of dialogue set.

“Boy, don’t I know it.” muttered Hermione.

Fourth paragraph, first sentence.

“You’re a nut.” said Remus turning green. “I hated doing that.”

Fourth paragraph, second sentence.

“People had to step outside before they passed out, some were acting kinda funny.” said Ron.

End of fourth paragraph.

Dialogue set, first sentence.

“I certainly was, especially with a castle full of teenagers.” said Madam Pomfrey.
“What did you do for your acne?” said Parvati looking over to Mrs. McFinn.

“Yeah! Your skin is so pretty!” said Lavender.

“I want my skin to look like that when I get older.” said another fifth year girl.

Mrs. McFinn thought carefully, “I believe I just used the normal products you can get in the shops, my mother wanted me to go see a dermatologist, but I wouldn’t.”

The Rangers, Dr. Clark and Mrs. McFinn absently touched their noses.

“Yeah, careful, he might lick us to death.” said Fred.

Several students groaned loudly. “Not these things.”

Hagrid looked a little hurt.

“Hagrid they were really fascinating, but…” said Hermione.

“They were a bit much for us to handle.” said Harry.

“They would have been awesome for a N.E.W.T’s level class.” said Ron quickly.

Hagrid looked thoughtful.

“What?” said Chief Hawkeye and Rivers together.

Lionus shuffled one of his feet.
“There’s a new species, and I wasn’t told?” said Chief Hawkeye turning towards his English Captain.

“It’s a…new species cause…he made them.” said Lionus.

Chief Hawkeye groaned and slapped a hand to his face. “Why do idiots insist on trying to play God?” he fixed Hagrid with a stern glare.

“He didn’t know…” said Harry.

“Ignorance doesn’t excuse him.” said Chief Hawkeye. He flitted a glance over to Dr. Nicodemus. “There’s a way that I’ll forgive his law breaking, and Mr. Weasley’s fine that I was notified of.”

“What?” said Harry.

“You have something we want.” said Dr. Nicodemus.

Harry looked at them in confusion.

“That white notebook of yours and the black one.” said Chief Hawkeye.

“Why do you want those things?” asked Harry.

“There’s something in there that I might want to look at.” said Chief Hawkeye.

Harry stiffened slightly, he didn’t want to hand over his notebooks, but if it helped Hagrid and Mr. Weasley, he didn’t have a choice.

Harry reached into his knapsack that was under the bowl and pulled out the two tattered notebooks. He passed them down to the Chief.

“I’ll get that back right?” said Harry.

“As soon as I copy the pages I want.” said Chief Hawkeye.

“What is it that you want?” asked Dr. Nicodemus quietly.

“I’ll show you what I want later.” said the Chief with a smile.

Dialogue line.

Seventh paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, (Blast-Ended Skrewt description) first sentence.

Harry reached over the side of the bowl, picked up his red and gold blanket and covered himself to hide from Hagrid.

Dialogue set (Blast-Ended Skrewt description) second sentence.
“They sound so delightful.” said Tonks sarcastically, though she said it quietly.

Dialogue set (Blast-Ended Skrewt description) fourth sentence.

“How do you know what that smells like?” asked Lavender.

“Dudley hid one of the fish I bought for dinner one night, his whole bedroom stunk for weeks.” said Harry his voice muffled in the blanket.

End of dialogue set. (Blast-Ended Skrewt description)*

“That’s sounds really funny.” said Dr. Clark.

“Wait’ll they get older.” said Ron.

Dialogue line.

Rivers was about to say something, but he leaned back and look thoughtful. “Actually, as long as the kids don’t get hurt, it’s not a bad idea for a project, learning to study a new species. Though getting permission to breed those creations would have been better. Just to cover your bases.”

Dialogue line.

Eighth paragraph.

“Big shocker they would try and blow Hagrid’s second year of teaching.” said Tonks.

Ninth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Every creature has a point, but you humans don’t seem to recognize them for the most part.” said Tempest haughtily.

Tenth paragraph, first sentence.

“Nice save.” said Dumbledore with a smile.

End of tenth paragraph.
“Quite the learning experience.” said Rivers with a smile.

Dialogue line.

“Not the best day for someone to eat a full breakfast.” said Seamus.

Eleventh paragraph, first sentence.

Hagrid smiled sheepishly towards them.

End of eleventh paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Twelfth paragraph.

“Wasn’t sure how it got him.” said Hagrid worriedly.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Would have been handy to know that ahead of time.” said Dean.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, first sentence.

“Don’t blame you dear.” said Mrs. Weasley in a whisper.

End of dialogue set.

A few adults rubbed their eyes as a few seventh year boys decided to start snickering.

“Sweet Merlin.” said Dumbledore as he rubbed his temple a small smile on his lips.
“You mean you actually found a mouth on those things?” said Leroy.

“Well, no.” said Draco.

“Way to go! Stand up for Hagrid!” said Fred.

“Though, Hagrid would also like a dragon, but let’s not go into that.” said George.

“They’re just misunderstood.” said Hagrid.

“Yes, that very well may be true, but Hagrid, most people are terrified of some of those creatures. It’s not easy for one to overcome one’s fears.” said Dumbledore.

“Tell me about it.” said Harry.

“Then things will get really bad.” said Lee.

Hagrid looked sadly down at Hermione.

“I’m really sorry.” said Hermione quickly.

“Ever notice that once those two start talking, Harry doesn’t join in all that often?” said Kingsley.

“What were you thinking Harry?” asked Sirius.

“Just stuff.” said Harry, keeping an eye on Chief Hawkeye as he read the boy’s book.
“It was like she and Ron switched personalities.” said Harry.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Which is a miracle in itself.” said Ron.

“How did you lot luck out? We had four feet long essays!” said Fred.

“And then reading a twenty page chapter.” said George.

Fifteenth paragraph.

Sixteenth paragraph.

Seventeenth paragraph, first sentence.

“Moment it hit us, Harry sneezed.” said Ron with a smirk. “Cutest little sneeze I ever heard.”

“Shut it.” said Harry turning red.

End of seventeenth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“God I was not focusing during that class.” said Harry.

Eighteenth paragraph.

Dialogue set, second sentence.

“What led you to that conclusion? The fact that I hardly smile during class?” said Harry rolling his eyes.

End of dialogue set.

“That freaked me out, I was afraid that you were going to get captured or killed.” said Harry.

“Have a little faith in me here.” said Sirius. “And don’t listen to her.”
Nineteenth paragraph.
“Teacher worship, makes you wanna puke.” said Sirius rolling his eyes.
“It’s even worse on the side of the teacher.” said Remus.
“Unless you’re Dazzle Gums, then he’d easily get off on that.” said Sirius in a whisper.
“I don’t think I want to know about this Dazzle Gums person.” said Mrs. McFinn.
“You really don’t want to know about him.” said Sirius quickly.

Dialogue set.
Tempest and Firenze rolled their eyes.

Twentieth paragraph.

Twenty-first paragraph, first sentence.
Professor Trelawney scowled and folded his arms.

End of twenty-first paragraph.
“Exactly” said Hermione.

Twenty-second paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Twenty-third paragraph.
“Your eyes were shut and everything, I thought you were asleep.” said Ron.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue line.
“That doesn’t help her mood one bit.” said Hermione with a small smile.

Dialogue set, fourth sentence, third pause.

Tempest and Fireze slapped a hand to their faces. “Wrong.” groaned the both of them.

End of dialogue set.

“He’s not a snow child, he’s a sun child.” said Luna with a smile.

“Explains why he’s so pale.” said Sirius teasingly. “If you were a snow child.”

Dialogue line.

Twenty-fourth paragraph.

“We wouldn’t be able to hold it in.” said the twins laughing out loud.

Twenty-fifth paragraph, first sentence, second comma.

“Still say it’s punishment for you being born in the wrong month.” said Ron. “She wanted you born in winter.”

“It was your laughing that got us in trouble.” said Harry.

End of twenty-fifth paragraph.

“Notice he said ‘DULL’ and not ‘HARD’.” said Neville.

Dialogue line.

“Not unless there was a strange phenomenon that not even we knew of.” said Tempest.

Dialogue line.

“I’m still waiting to get back at you for the short jokes.” said Harry with a smirk.

“I’m still waiting.” said Ron with a sneer.
“And thus opening the door to several juvenile jokes.” said McGonagall.

“RONALD!” screeched Mrs. Weasley.

“Molly, someone had to say it.” said Sirius with a laugh.

“See it was all your fault.” said Harry.

Moody snorted as he read that part aloud.

“Remember the good old days when teachers didn’t know what you said about them?” said Ron cowering slightly.

“Not the thing to brag about at that moment.” said Bill with a laugh.

“You’re favorite memory is coming Ron.” said Hermione.
“I take it, it’s not you winning another lottery.” said Dr. Clark looking over to Malfoy.

“Sorry again.” said Draco.

“At lease you’re repentant.” said Dr. Clark with a smile.

“Facts are flown out the window.” said Remus.

“There was no way you could stop that riot of fear!” said Charlie. “It’s Fudge’s fault for granting pardons to those damned Death Eaters!”

“Oh great! She isn’t talking about me.” said Mr. Weasley happily.

“Arthur she got your name wrong to be a bitch.” said Mrs. Weasley angrily.

Their kids stared at their mother in shock.

“I was kidding sweetheart.” said Mr. Weasley soothingly.

“At least she spelt that right.” said Mr. Weasley.
“What’s the important thing is you didn’t do anything wrong!” said Mrs. Weasley.

Second paragraph of article, second sentence.
Moody scowled over to the still unconscious Rita Skeeter.

Second paragraph of article, third sentence.
“That’s what you think.” snarled Mad-Eye Moody.

End of article.
“He was going to the aid of someone who long served the Ministry of Magic and owes him more than just his pension!” said Tonks angrily.

Dialogue set, third sentence.
“Best house there ever was!” said Harry and Hermione angrily.

End of dialogue set.
“Are you suicidal? You don’t insult a boy’s mother!” said Rudolph angrily.

Thirty-second paragraph.
Dialogue line.
“Way to be a bigger man, you guys.” said Charlie proudly.

Dialogue line.
“And you just dragged in an Evans in a battle of wits, you won’t survive without cracking first.” said Sirius with a laugh.

Dialogue set.
“Harry!” said Remus.
“I didn’t say anything against his mother, I just insulted him.” said Harry innocently.
“Let him be, the brat asked for it, and it was something Lily would be thinking, and taking everything she had not to speak it.” said Sirius with a laugh.

Thirty-third paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Win goes to Harry.” said Sirius holding Harry’s arm up into the air.

Thirty-fourth paragraph.

“What the…?” said Sirius. He lowered Harry’s arm slightly.

Thirty-fifth paragraph, first sentence, second dash.

“OI!” shouted Sirius and Remus together.

“What’s going on?” said Dr. Clark.

“It looked so cool, it was like he knew to dodge.” said Neville. “And the look on his face, he looked ready to kill.”

End of thirty-fifth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Well, at the faker knew that I never took my hand off my wand.” said Moody with a growl. “And that I don’t stand for that nonsense.”

Thirty-sixth paragraph

“You didn’t.” said Sirius.

“He most assuredly did.” said McGonagall hotly.

“Wicked.” said Bill and Charlie together.

“And we missed that!” wailed the twins.
“Your eyes looked real pissed before you saw Moody, I wanted to just go and find a rock to hide under.” said Ron.

“Alastor!” said Mrs. Weasley.

“Wasn’t me, but that’s what I would have done.” said Moody with a grim smile.

“Must have been hard for that bastard to say that, that’s how he struck down most of his own victims.” said Moody to Dumbledore quietly.

“Thus ends the good memory.” said Ron with a smirk.

“I wasn’t quite sure what was going on, I didn’t even have a clue.” said McGonagall.
“Not the thing to admit to.” said Seamus.

“We’re you hurt?” said Mrs. McFinn.

“He earned it!” said Ron.

“Nevertheless no child deserves to be hurt.” said Mrs. McFinn, “At the very least by an adult.”

“I was fine ma’am.” said Draco softly.

“I didn’t think that needed explaining further.” said Dumbledore.

“You’re lucky you just said that to my imposter and not me.” said Moody.

“What happened then I wonder?” said Fred.
“Slap on the wrist more like it.” said George.

Snape and Draco didn’t say anything.

Forty-third paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

The entire school, minus a few Slytherins laughed loudly.

Forty-fourth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“No bruises or broken bones reported.” said Madam Pomfrey.

Dialogue line.

Forty-fifth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Which was lucky, I’ve never sat apart from George before in my life.” said Fred.
“We’ve only had one good teacher for Defense class.” said Harry.

Forty-sixth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“I’d hope so, I was an Auror, and he was a Death Eater.” said Moody.

End of chapter.

“That was a massive downfall of my good mood.” said Ron.

“Let’s have a bit of dinner.” said Dumbledore with a kind smile.

Chapter End Notes

Thanks for reading, please review
Moody was about to put the book down and walk over to the table and pick up some dinner for himself. But before he managed to lay the book down, the long lost light of the Recollection Scrolls appeared, blossoming out of the book.

“What the hell?” asked Chief Hawkeye, he threw himself in front of Mrs. McFinn as she screamed.

“It’s a Recollection Scroll, it’s been a while since one showed up.” said Colin excitedly.

The light increased it’s brightness and enclosed in around them. They found themselves on the front steps of a Police Station, and from they remembered from a previous scroll, it was the Little Whinging Police Station.

“Wonder what we’re doing here again?” asked Fred.

They looked around and saw several uniformed officers walking in and out of the door. One person wasn’t moving far from the spot where he stood. A short balding man was standing outside of the station. He looked as if he couldn’t make up his mind on what to do.

“What’s his problem?” asked George.

Finally he seemed to have come to a decision and slowly climbed the stairs to the station, opening the door for a small boy pushing a cart.

“Harry! It’s you!” said Katie.

“You look so cute!” said Alicia.
“But you look a little younger than you did in the last one.” said Angelina.

“This happened a little while after my first security testing job, with Mr. Buckthorn.” said Harry.

“What’s the cart for, son?” asked the man kindly.

“I bring food for the police officers, sir.” said the boy with a smile.

“You’re so cute!” said a few seventh year girls. Harry blushed furiously.

The man smiled warmly at the small boy.

They watched as Harry pushed the cart into the elevator and followed the duo inside. The man then turned to the front desk where a police officer was answering phone calls. Harry continued onwards to the elevator and pushed his cart inside. They found themselves zooming upwards through the ceiling to join Harry on an upper floor.

Younger Harry was taking orders for food and filling the plates of different officers and taking money from them. Some of the Watchers turned and saw the man from outside the building was now coming out of the elevator.

The man that some of them recognized as Inspector Homes was standing beside Harry and was the first that took notice of the man.

“Can I help you?” asked Inspector Homes, standing beside the boy with a cup of coffee in his hands.

“Oh, I’m looking for Inspector Homes.” said the man quietly.
“That would be me.” he said sipping his cup of coffee.

“Ah! Well, I wanted to talk to you about something.” said the man nervously.

“What about?” asked the Inspector.

“Well, you see…my name is Abberton, Charles Abberton. I own a jewelry store in Farthington, and every month so far this year, I’ve been robbed. Not armed robbery, but they break into my building and rob me of my choicest pieces of jewelry.” Said Abberton earnestly.

“Poor guy.” said Bill.

“Did you report these thefts to the Farthington Police?” asked Inspector Homes.

“Yes sir, and they've never caught the scoundrel! They just keep coming, again and again I've been robbed! I’ve tried everything!” said Mr. Abberton.

“Ask Harry to investigate!” said Colin.

“He’s asking the cops, he doesn’t need to ask me.” said Harry.

“What can I do for you then?” asked Inspector Homes.

“Well, I heard about the incident with the Forbidden Fruit ruby, and frankly, I could use the same person who took care of that security to take care of mine, tell me where I’m going wrong.” said Mr. Abberton.
Several students cheered. “Yay! More awesome stuff!”

Harry rolled his eyes.

Younger Harry didn’t let it show, but he was paying close attention.

“Question: Why should he come and test your security system, what’s in it for him?” asked Inspector Homes, trying to shield the boy with his own body and yet not make it obvious he was doing so.

“I would pay him a hundred thousand pounds, a small fee to stop me from losing almost my entire inventory.” said Mr. Abberton.

Inspector Homes looked at the man with an inquisitive look. “I’ll see what I can do and get back to you as soon as I can.” said the Inspector quietly.

“Thank you sir!” said Mr. Abberton handing the Inspector his business card and then leaving quickly.

Both younger Harry and the Inspector walked to his office, the Watchers followed close behind.

“So, what do you think?” asked the Inspector.

“I don’t know if I can. I mean, Mr. Buckthorn left the blueprints of his house here. I’ve never been to Farthington.” said Harry meekly.

“Never hurts to try and help someone.” said Inspector Homes. “But it’s completely up to you. You can’t be arrested or cited when you’ve been invited to go inside a building after hours.” He reassured the boy.

Harry looked down slowly, but then looked back up. His eyes were alight with green fire.
“Harry Potter!” said Mrs. McFinn in shock. “Is this where you got the money to find Dr. Clark?”

“Yes ma’am.” said Harry meekly. “Well, the thing before this…”

Mrs. McFinn looked angry, “If Inspector Homes thinks he’s getting away with it, he’s sorely mistaken.”

“Poor Inspector Homes.” muttered Harry. “But Mrs. McFinn, they let me go, I didn’t steal anything! And the money went to a really good cause!”

“Be that as it may, but you and I are still going to have a chat.” said Mrs. McFinn sourly.

The scene shifted and they found themselves on a dark street, right in front a modest looking jewelry store.

“What are we doing here?” asked Sirius.

“I’m working.” said Harry quietly, not wishing to piss Mrs. McFinn off again.

“Why aren’t we in there with you?” asked Colin.

“I don’t know.” said Harry.

“What’s Inspector Homes doing here?” asked George looking into the interior of a dark car parked along the side of the road.

“He brought me here.” said Harry.
“He’s in big trouble now.” said Mrs. McFinn.

Suddenly a bell rang out from inside the building and a flashing light came from the inner chambers. Inspector Homes jerked himself out of the car and nearly ran to the building, when he saw Harry running towards him. He scrambled into the car and instinctively Inspector Homes jumped in as well and drove off.

The Watchers flew alongside the car and listened in on the conversation taking place in the car, as if they were sitting right inside the car as well.

"What happened?" said Inspector Homes, looking worriedly at the ashen face of the boy.

"I screwed up, big time." said Harry panting. “I couldn’t even get in half way!"

“What happened?” asked Dennis.

“Their system was too good.” said Harry.

“Want to try again another time?” asked the Inspector, “Or forget it?”

“Well, at least he was willing to give you a choice.” said Dumbledore.

Mrs. McFinn’s frown faltered slightly.

“I wanna give it one more shot. Is there a way you can get a hold of Mr. Abberton, so I can take another try?” asked Harry.
“Sure thing, but we’ll do it tomorrow night. Time I got you back to bed.” said Inspector Homes driving back to Little Whinging.

Harry reached behind his seat and pulled a woolen blanket from the backseat and wrapped his small body around in it. In less than five minutes, he was asleep.

“Aw, even at that age you’re adorable.” said Uncle Leroy cooing.

“Maybe mother should see this.” said Uncle Rudolph.

The scene shifted once again next day, they found themselves in the Inspector’s office, he was filing some paper when the phone rang. Once again, they heard both sides of the conversation.

“Is this Inspector Homes?” said the caller. “This is Mr. Abberton.”

“Hello, Mr. Abberton? This is Inspector Homes, how are you?” asked the Inspector with a cordial air.

“Fine sir…just fine…but I’ve been robbed again.” said Mr. Abberton.

“….what?” asked Inspector Homes, it was like he was hit in the head with a frying pan.

“I thought you said that the security system was too good!” said Colin.

“Last night, it wasn’t what you were supposed to take.” said Mr. Abberton. There was an accusing tone in his voice.

“When was this?” asked Inspector Homes quickly.
“Sometime during last night, I discovered it missing when I came to turn the alarm off. Did you, I mean, your man take something else by mistake?” asked Mr. Abberton.

“No, the man I sent in didn’t even get halfway.” said the Inspector softly.

“And he’s trustworthy?” asked Mr. Abberton quietly.

“As honest as a newborn babe.” said the Inspector crisply.

Harry blushed heavily.

“Yet he’s a thief.” said Mr. Abberton quietly.

Harry smiled in spite of himself.

“Not a thief, just someone who needed the money that Buckthorn was offering.” said Inspector Homes stiffly. “Besides, he received three million pounds, he doesn’t need to work again for the rest of his life. What would anyone need to steal after getting that much money.”

“Where did you get that much money?” asked Mrs. McFinn.

“Uh…from another job?” said Harry quietly.
Mr. Abberton didn’t have a remark for that.

Harry then came in the room, with a hamburger, fruit salad and a large helping of coleslaw.

Inspector Homes placed a hand over the receiver end of the phone.

“How far did you get into the jewelry store?” asked Inspector Homes quietly.

“I didn’t even make it into the main room, the entire place was rigged up so tight.” said Harry.

“Didn’t you say that you screwed up?” asked Inspector Homes.

“I did, big time. I accidentally set off one of the alarms the moment I took the grate off of the inner air duct.” said Harry.

“So someone came in before we got there, but that’s not possible, we saw them lock up the doors.” said the Inspector. “So that means…”

“That whoever took it, before we got there.” said Harry slowly.

“An inside job?” said Dr. Clark.

The scene shifted once again, It was nighttime and the streetlights had just come on. Due to the constant shifting of time and space, Neville had to run to the nearest bushes to settle his stomach.

Younger Harry, Inspector Homes and Mr. Abberton were on the other side of the street talking.
“Did you sell any jewelry today?” asked Inspector Homes.

“We sold a few rings and a bracelet.” said Mr. Abberton.

“We’ll keep that information in mind.” said Inspector Homes.

“Why did you bring the boy with you?” asked Mr. Abberton.

“Just to look the part, tell them I’m an old friend and his son.” said Inspector Homes.

They walked across the road were standing inside the brightly lit room, this time with Mr Abberton.

The store was still open, and there was a pair of employees inside carefully placing the merchandise in the assorted safes in the back for safe keeping. The younger Harry looked at them as he held onto Inspector’s belt, one was an middle-aged man, and the other one was a younger woman with a ring in her nose.

“Strange styles they have.” said Kingsley looking at the earring in the young lady’s nose.

“Mr. Abberton! What brings you here tonight?” asked the man with a smile.

“I thought I’d bring an old friend and his son over to see my store.” said Mr. Abberton reciting the script that Inspector Homes wanted him to say.

They watched as Harry walked around the glass cases, looking at each glass intimately. He saw beautiful stones, of various colors, shapes, sizes and arrangements.

“I wanted to buy everything here for you.” said Harry to Mrs. McFinn.

She sent a slight smile to him.
They noticed that Harry was looking at the jewels in the glass that were still not taken and stored, then his focus switched to the man and woman closely as he walked over to the Inspector.

“There’s a necklace missing.” He whispered into the man’s ear.

The Inspector looked at the boy and smiled. He turned to Mr. Abberton and smiled. “You do much business here, Bruce?”

“A fair amount of business.” said Mr. Abberton. “I’ve sold two bracelets and a few rings today.”

“No necklaces?” asked Inspector Homes. “That’s what my wife loves more than anything.” He added with a smile, allowing the boy to watch the two.

“Damn, you guys are a great team.” said Sirius guessing where this was going.

Harry saw one of the two people looked over at the coat rack nervously. One nice looking coat was hanging on it, and he could see a slight bulge coming from it. He looked beyond it, seeing a small corridor.

Harry walked over to Mr. Abberton, hopping from one foot to the other.

“What the hell are you doing?” asked Draco.

“Do you have a bathroom?” asked Harry earnestly.
“Should have done that when you left home.” said Fred with a smirk.

Mr. Abberton pointed towards the back of the room. Harry hurried in the direction which Mr. Abberton pointed. Harry then turned, as he ran, to face the Inspector.

“I’ll be right back!” he said, but then he “accidentally” crashed into the coat rack.

SMASH!

Harry landed with a crash on top of the coat.

“How the hell did you get so clumsy?” asked George.

“That wasn’t on accident.” said older Harry.

“I’m sorry!” said Harry quickly as he picked the coat up. He made sure to grab the coat up, upside down. Out of the pocket, came a small strand of silver and diamonds came trickling out.

“What the?” asked the young woman quickly.

“Our words exactly.” said the twins together.

“What’s the meaning of this Victor?” asked Mr. Abberton in shock.

“Come here, Harry.” said Inspector Homes quickly. Harry hurried as fast as he could to the Inspector, but Victor didn’t make a move towards the boy.

“I wouldn’t hurt him.” said the man fretfully.

“Answer my question!” said Mr. Abberton shortly.

“I just needed the money.” said the man guiltily. He sank slowly into a chair and buried his face.

Harry stared at the man wonderingly.

“What do you need the money for?” asked Inspector Homes noticing Harry’s concerned look.

The man wiped his face with a handkerchief from his pocket. “My son and his wife died a few months ago, and my wife and I are taking care of their five children. Money is very tight, and with the smallest one’s recent illness…we’re just desperate. I swear, Mr. Abberton! I would have paid you back before the inventory was to roll around, I just needed some of the smaller things to pay for the hospital bills!” said the man pleading with the owner.

Mr. Abberton looked uncertainly at the man.

Harry tugged Inspector Homes’ shirt and pulled him down to his level. Harry whispered quietly into the man’s ear, Inspector Homes smiled.

“Mr. Abberton, if the money for the jewelry were repaid, by tomorrow afternoon, would you not press charges?” asked the Inspector.

“Oh course.” said Mr. Abberton.

“I can’t pay it all back tomorrow!” said the man turning pale.

“Any time before inventory would be wonderful.” said Mr. Abberton curtly.
“I didn’t say that you would be repaying it. I know someone that will do that for you.” said Inspector Homes for a smile. “How much is the total you owe?”

“Almost fifty thousand pounds.” said the old man wearily.

“Holy crap that’s a lot.” said Dean.

“Easily taken care of.” said Inspector Homes clapping his hand together. “I’ll bring the money tomorrow.”

“You have that much?” asked Mr. Abberton in shock.

“He’s going to get the money from you, isn’t he?” said Hermione. Harry smiled.

“No, but the security tester would most likely be happy to lend a hand. He knows what it’s like to be desperate.” said the Inspector.

“How will I repay him?” asked the man, fearing the worse. “What will the interest be?”

“No interest, you just pay him back a little bit at a time, I’m betting he’d like to help you raise your kids too.” said the Inspector. “Monetarily of course.”

Harry gave the Inspector’s hand a squeeze, signaling to him that he agreed.

“So that’s what you meant by you were taking care of someone with the over flow of money.” said Hermione with a smile.
“Just who are you?” asked the woman, who was watching the events in shock and alarm.

“Now she talks?” said Hannah.

“Inspector Homes.” said the man holding Harry’s hand.

The old man flinched. “Are you going to arrest me?”

“You really are shocked out of your mind.” said the Inspector with a smile.

The light came back to collect them and take them back to Hogwarts. After it deposited them back at Hogwarts safely Mrs. McFinn took Harry by the hand and into room just off the Great Hall.

“This won’t go well.” said Ron.

“The way she looked, I think Harry’ll be fine.” said Dr. Clark.
Harry followed Mrs. McFinn into the off part of the Great Hall. He wasn’t too worried, the most Mrs. McFinn ever did was make him stand in the corner, or stay in his room at the McFinn’s. That, and he knew she just wanted some words with him. Harry followed her until she finally decided to stop and look at him.

He could remember a time when he would have to look up just to see Mrs. McFinn’s face, now the roles were reversed. She had to look up to see him now. How he missed the old days.

“I still can’t believe how much you’ve grown.” said Mrs. McFinn, brushing aside a strand out of his eyes.

“I’ve grown up a lot in these past months.” said Harry with a smile.

Mrs. McFinn wrapped her arms around him. “I’ve missed you so much, honey. And I’m so sorry I left you behind.”

Harry smiled, allowing the tears to fall and hugged the woman he truly believed was his surrogate mother, her scent never changed, even after all these years. She still smelt of gingerbread. And as for her leaving him, he forgave her a long time ago, she was in pain, and her mother was only torturing her while she stayed in Little Whinging. “I’m sorry that I’m going to make you worry.” said Harry.

“Going to? I’m already worried about you.” she said with a hiccupping laugh.

They broke apart gently and Harry leaned against the wall, with his hands behind his back. “Should we get the telling off part over and done with, with the whole security testing, thing?”

“Well, until you brought it up just now, I was going to let it go.” said Mrs. McFinn with a smirk, she placed her hands on her hips.

“I’m going to apologize to Remus, he can tape up my mouth whenever he wants to.” groaned Harry as he rubbed his face.

Mrs. McFinn laughed a little. “I…was not happy when I saw what you were doing, and how you got the Private Investigator money. And I’m especially not happy with Inspector Homes for letting you do this.”

“He didn’t exactly let me in the beginning. He didn’t know what I was doing, until after I did it. And the person I did it to, Inspector Homes was only more proud of me.” said Harry with a smirk.

“And I take it nothing I say will get you to not do it anymore?” said Mrs. McFinn.

“Not really.” said Harry honestly. “I have the time of my life doing that.”

“Then may I ask that you be careful?” said Mrs. McFinn.

“Anything for you.” said Harry giving Mrs. McFinn a large hug. “You want me to show you whatever I’m commissioned to take, next time?”

Mrs. McFinn gave him a little shove. “Get back in there young man.” she smiled.

Harry and Mrs. McFinn went back inside the Great Hall, and saw the kitchen set up already and Mrs. Weasley was cooking away, she didn’t know how long Mrs. McFinn and Harry were going to talk, so she took the initiative to teach Hagrid how to make an apple pie. And Hagrid was grateful for it. So was Harry and Mrs. McFinn, that way they could take all the time they needed to talk to each other.

With more and more lessons that they gave Hagrid, he was getting better in leaps and bounds. Hagrid was quickly mastering the basics of cooking, though...he still hiccupped on some things but he was making great progress. As they entered the Great Hall, they could smell the apples and cinnamon from way over where they stood.

“You don’t look like a guy that just got paddled.” said Sirius with a teasing smile as Harry made his way back to the bowl.
“She doesn’t paddle, she makes you stand in a corner.” said Harry. “Instead of your rear getting red, your legs get tired.”

Harry lounged in the bowl and dined leisurely on his plate of stroganoff. He smiled as he watched all the other students, teachers and guests as they shoveled food in their mouths so they could enjoy the apple pies that Mrs. Weasley and Hagrid made.

“You eat any slower you’re going to miss out on the pie.” said Uncle Leroy with a smile.

“I’ll be fine.” said Harry with a smile. “After this, I won’t have much room for dessert anyway.”

Once they all finished their dinner, they clambered over and helped themselves to pieces of apple pie. Hagrid succeeded once again, he followed Mrs. Weasley’s directions perfectly and the pie turned out wonderful.

Dumbledore turned to speak to Professor Flitwick, about continuing this onward once a month, when he saw Harry was fast asleep in the bowl. He placed the plate down on a table of dirty dishes and walked over to the sleeping figure.

“Harry?” he said shaking Harry’s shoulder lightly. “Do you want to head to bed?”

Harry yawned hugely and sat up. “Yeah, I guess.” he stood up slowly.

Harry started walking towards the doors, when he noticed Dumbledore was following him.

“I’ll make sure you get back to your rooms, I’d hate to see you passed out on a staircase, at Peeves’ mercy.” said Dumbledore with a smile.

“I really appreciate that. Last thing I need is him scribbling something on my face or something dumped on me.” said Harry as they left and began to climb the stairs.

The entire trip up the stairs was uneventful; except for Harry who kept colliding into the wall he was so tired. Dumbledore had to take Harry by the shoulder and guide him to the rooms where Harry and his new/old family slept.

They finally arrived, and Harry staggered towards the bedroom. “I’m going to put the medicine on and then I’m going to bed,” once he reached the bedroom door he groaned. “Aw, crud, I’m not going to be able to put the damn salve on my back.” He turned to Dumbledore. “I’m desperate, can you help me out?”

“I’ll do what I can.” said Dumbledore with a worried smile. He hadn’t seen the state of Harry’s back in a while, and from what Sirius said, it was a horrifying scene.

Harry and Dumbledore both went into the bedroom, the moment Harry had the salve in his hand; he took his shirt off carefully and rubbed the balm all over the gashes on his front that spelt the beginnings of the word LIAR. Harry didn’t notice Dumbledore had a look of absolute horror on his face. His entire face was white, the usually twinkling eyes were bulging out and almost pinpricks, and his hand was over his mouth to stop him from screaming.

Harry finished reaching everywhere he could and he turned to face Dumbledore and hand him the salve when he saw the look on Dumbledore’s face.

“Are you alright, sir?” said Harry worriedly.

“I’ll be alright, I just hope you will.” said Dumbledore slowly lowering his hand.

“I can go without it tonight, that’s not a problem sir.” said Harry quickly.

“No, no I’ll help you.” said Dumbledore taking the salve in a shaking hand. He held back the guilt that was crawling up his throat. Harry laid gently down on the bed and closed his eyes. Dumbledore gently rubbed the salve on the wounds on his back. Tears began to fall down his eyes and onto the sheets.

When he was all done, and discovered Harry was asleep, he covered Harry gently with the fluffy blanket and left the rooms. Once he stepped outside the room, tears came back in full force and he had to hold himself tightly to stop from falling down into an emotional fit.

“I’m sorry…I’m so sorry…” sobbed Dumbledore.
He wiped his eyes and blew his nose loudly. Then he felt guilt being replaced by intense fury. If he had known the lasting damage was that severe, if he even knew the pain he really was suffering…

Downstairs everyone was enjoying the apple pies and some of the other dessert delights the house-elves came up with.

“I wonder where Albus went to?” asked McGonagall.

“He took Harry upstairs, he looked really tired.” said Hermione.

“We were going to put him to bed, but Dumbledore got there first.” said Ron.

“Hopefully he can return in order to have another piece of pie.” said Professor Sprout with a forkful of apple pie.

“Shit! I forgot, Harry needs help putting the salve on his back.” said Sirius nearly choking on a piece of pie.

“Don’t worry, if he needs help, Dumbledore can give him a hand.” said Remus. “Or he’ll send word down by Hedwig.”

Out of nowhere, the doors to the Great Hall blasted open and Dumbledore stormed into the room. He looked angrily about until he saw Umbridge, who was staring furiously at all the people walking around free. When he saw her, he raised his wand and the curses began to fly. Umbridge had to jump out of her chair and hide behind one of the large pillars in the back just to escape.

“How…dare…you! How dare you!” shouted Dumbledore angrily.

The curses, jinxes and hexes continued to fly down to the woman, and without a wand all she could was scream and beg for mercy.
The Rangers only stood out of the line of fire and observed. They made no effort to try and stop the old man from his relentless attack on the woman. One person however was idiotic enough to stand between Dumbledore, and the target of his powerful vengeance.

“Now see here Albus!” shouted Fudge loudly. He stood right in front of Umbridge to shield her. With a quick flick of Dumbledore’s wand, the man was sent flying out of the way. The attack resumed.

Finally, after Dumbledore made contact a total of forty-seven times, (which turned Umbridge into a pink polka-dotted slime mold with a pair of eyes on flexible pink stems) he stopped his attack. He then turned his attention to the Chief of the Rangers.

“Do what you will to me.” said Dumbledore.

“Why? What did you do?” asked Chief Hawkeye.

Fudge glared at the Chief as he staggered to his feet. “He attacked…!”

“She’s in our custody, in all sense, she doesn’t exist anymore.” said Chief Hawkeye with a smile and a shrug. “Her rights as a human are gone.”

Fudge looked shocked, but one look from Chief Hawkeye and he lowered his own glare.

“Urgh, I didn’t want to touch her before, now I really don’t want to.” said Nightstrike picking up the slime mold by one of the extruding eyeballs and tossing it on the chair she came from.

“You can use magic, just lift her off the ground with it.” said Tempest eating a apple.

“Wish that dawned on me.” said Nightstrike rubbing his fingers on his pants furiously.

“Hey tomorrow’s the weekend, what are we going to do?” said Lee staring at the slime mold with intense interest. “You want to go to Hogsmede again?”
“You know what we should do? We should throw Harry a party. A mean, after all the crap with the Dursley’s he’s had to put up with. We should throw him like a retro-active birthday party.” said Dean with a smile.

“That wouldn’t be a bad idea.” said Flitwick, trying transfigure the chairs to their original shape, size and silent selves. “The boy has been through enough, and you Albus could use a bit of cheering up.”

Dumbledore said nothing at first. Then he looked up in direction of the room in which Harry slept. “Yes, a party for Harry…that would be good.”

“Are you alright, Albus?” asked Professor Sprout.

“Yes…just…tired…very tired…” said Dumbledore softly.

After dinner was over the Potter’s, Mrs. McFinn, Dr. Clark, Remus and Sirius and Dumbledore went back to the suite. They each peeked inside Harry’s room and made sure he was alright. Dumbledore was not one of them; he sat beside the fire and buried his face in his hands.

“I can’t…I didn’t realize it was…” said Dumbledore.

“Take another Calming Draught, you don’t need another heart attack.” said Sirius. He handed the old man a phial and made sure he drank it.

“You had a heart attack?” said Rudolph in shock. “You’ve never had a heart attack!”

“With good reason, we couldn’t even use magic to help him.” said Remus.

Leroy conjured up several pillows, placed them behind the old man, a fluffy blanket was draped over him and Leroy pulled Dumbledore back in the seat.

“Take it easy.” said Leroy soothingly. “Harry’s just fine.”
“You haven’t seen his back!” said Dumbledore, worry etched in his voice despite the potion.

“You’re right, I haven’t, but Harry’s a tough guy, he’ll be fine.” said Leroy.

“We think he’s strong, but then…these books…” said Dumbledore covering his eyes.

“He is strong.” said Remus softly.

“You made me feel better with what you did to Umbridge.” said Rudolph with a laugh. “Harry’ll wish he had seen that when we tell him about it.”

“I must say, I do feel a bit better.” said Dumbledore quietly. He could feel the Calming Draught taking full effect and felt himself sink back into the cushions.

Mrs. McFinn came over and placed an ottoman under his lifted feet and covered them with another blanket. “Would you like some tea? We can iron out the plans for Harry’s party.”

“She’d rather have hot chocolate.” said Sirius with a smile.

“I have a great recipe, Harry absolutely adored when he was little.” said Mrs. McFinn with a smile.

She hurried off to the little kitchen that was there for any late night snackers and soon the room was full of the delicious smell of chocolate, fudge, and marshmallows. She brought over the teapot full of hot chocolate and took it around, pouring a cupful for everyone.

“Oh my god.” said Leroy holding his fingers over his mouth to not spew out the hot chocolate. “I was going to ask where the marshmallows were, but they’re right in there with it!”

“It was my grandmother’s recipe.” said Mrs. McFinn. “I wanted to teach Harry it, but I never got the chance to do so.”
“Teach it to him!” said Leroy. “When we go on our little world tour, I want to drink that!”

Mrs. McFinn smiled warmly. She finished off her cup and went in to go check on Harry. She hadn’t noticed that Sirius had taken his cup of hot chocolate into his and Harry’s bedroom and was just watching him sleep.

“Are you alright?” asked Mrs. McFinn with a smile.

“I’m fine. It may sound creepy, but I like watching him sleep.” said Sirius.

“You’re right, it does sound a bit creepy.” said Mrs. McFinn with a smile. “Why do you like watching him?”

“Several reasons, he’s been through all enough already, it’s nice for him to look kinda peaceful. That and he looks so much like his dad. I just sit here, and think, how they would have gotten on. I can just see it, James and Harry would be just driving Lily nuts with their broomstick stunts, Harry would be the best prankster this school had ever seen, and yet he’d be the biggest momma’s boy.” said Sirius wiping a tear from his eye.

“All boys are momma’s boys, they may say they aren’t but they are.” said Mrs. McFinn with a smile.

“I wasn’t one, I couldn’t stand my mother.” said Sirius with a snort. “Most vile person on the damn planet.”

“Did you always think that way?” asked Mrs. McFinn curiously.

“…No…it wasn’t till after she started spouting off all the pureblood nonsense that she started losing her loyalty in me.” said Sirius. “I was never really close to my dad. He was a real bastard.”

Mrs. McFinn looked taken aback, “What did he do?”

“Same thing Harry’s uncle did to him, only with magic.” said Sirius quietly.
Mrs. McFinn stared at Sirius, then wrapped an arm around him. “I’m sorry.”

Sirius smiled slightly. “It’s okay, like you did for Harry, Mrs. Potter and Mr. Potter came to my rescue.”

“Do you want to come back out and help figure out the party?” asked Mrs. McFinn.

“Yeah, I’ll come out in a moment.” said Sirius. “I want to make sure he’s fine.”

“Take your time.” said Mrs. McFinn giving Sirius a quick hug.

She left Sirius to watch Harry breathe gently in and out.

Irish Apple Pie: By BrianGreen, found on Allrecipes.com.

1 ½ cups of all purpose flour
¾ cup cake flour
½ tsp salt
1 tbs white sugar
1 cup unsalted butter
3 tbs shortening
¼ cup sour cream
1/8 tsp lemon juice
5 large Granny Smith apples-peeled, cored and sliced
½ cup white sugar
2 tbsp all purpose flour
1/8 tsp lemon juice
1 egg beaten

Preheat oven to 350 degrees F (175 C). Grease a 9in pie pan

To make crust: In a large bowl, combine flours, salt and sugar. Cut in butter and shortening until coarse crumbs are formed. Mix in sour cream and lemon juice. Keep mixing until dough may be slightly lumpy, this is fine. Wrap dough ball in plastic wrap and allow to chill for 1 hr.

Once chilled, take dough out of refrigerator and cut it in half; keep one half covered and in the refrigerator. Roll dough to 1/8 of an inch. To lift pie shell, roll dough around rolling pin and then unroll into pie pan. Trim overhanging edges of pie crust.

To make filling: Place apples into pie shell. In a small bowl, combine sugar, flour and nutmeg; mix thoroughly. Sprinkle mixture over apples. Squirt lemon juice over apples. Place pie in refrigerator while top crust is rolled out.

Remove pie from refrigerator. Brush outer edge of bottom crust with beaten egg. Place second crust on top of pie; crimp pie shell edges together. Brush entire top crust with egg and cut 4 steam slots into it.

Bake in a preheated 350 degree F (175 degree C) oven for 45 minutes, or until golden brown. Allow pie to cool before serving. Serve warm whit whipped cream or vanilla ice cream.

Chapter End Notes

Thanks for reading, please review
Harry woke up with the sun shining softly down on his face, he rubbed his eyes and sat up. Despite the sun shining down, his mood didn’t quite match the cheery day outside. Looking over to the other bed, he saw Sirius wasn’t there and he couldn’t hear anything from out in the sitting room. He looked outside and noticed the sun’s position.

“According to the sun, it’s seven.” said Harry out loud. “So I’ve got some time to myself. Hagrid won’t be down there till about nine.”

He changed into his jeans and his cleanest black shirt, and then he opened the door to the sitting room. He thought there was no one in the room, he was mistaken, Sirius and Uncle Rudolph were both there.

“Hey kiddo!” said Sirius happily. “Sleep well?”

“Fine, I’m amazed you’re up this early.” shrugged Harry looking at Sirius.

“I slept pretty hard.” said Sirius with a cheerful voice.

Harry slipped his shoes on and headed towards the door.

“Where you going?” asked Uncle Rudolph quickly.

“I’m going to go down to the kitchens and makes something.” said Harry plainly.

“How about you and the both of us go to Night’s Rest, we can polish up some of the decorating and the final touches.” said Sirius.

“Um…I’m grounded remember? I can’t go anywhere.” said Harry with a raised brow.

Sirius and Rudolph looked at each other quickly.

“Uh…we’ll sneak you out, Remus won’t ever know.” said Sirius quickly.

“Just what I need, mixed messages.” said Harry rolling his eyes.

“Come on, before Remus finds out we took you.” said Uncle Rudolph quickly.

“Especially as it’s his Full Moon time.” said Sirius.

“So he won’t be around at all today?” asked Harry.

“Nightstrike said that the Werewolf inoculation he got only turns him into a werewolf for one night and whenever he has free time, so he might transform way later tonight.” said Sirius.
He took a pouch of Floo powder and held it out for Harry to take a bit.

“Can’t I walk or fly?” said Harry leaning away from the pouch.

“Don’t worry, we’ll be right beside you.” said Sirius.

“That doesn’t make me feel all that better.” said Harry.

“Oh come on.” said Sirius.

Harry sighed and took a bit of the green powder, he watched his Uncle Rudolph toss the powder into the fire.

“Night’s Rest.” said Uncle Rudolph, and in a flash of green he was gone.

“You’re turn.” said Sirius extending his hand.

“And if Remus catches me not here?” said Harry. “I’ve dodged all the other punishments…this…”

“Learn to save your own ass and take an escape route. Get going.” said Sirius.

Harry shook his head, but followed after his uncle. The moment he was gone, Remus came out of the bedroom.

“Alright, keep him there until I send you word that we’re done.” said Remus with a smile.

“He didn’t want to go!” said Sirius. “I could hardly believe it.”

“Yeah, I heard that. Now go and keep him busy till we finish off the party.” said Remus pointing to the fireplace.

“So are you transforming tonight?” asked Sirius. Despite the arguments Harry and Remus went through, Harry would have been hurt if his favorite Defense teacher wasn’t there.

“I’ll be here, now get going.” said Remus with a smile.

Harry shot out of the fireplace and crashed right into the sofa and the pile of pillows that was right across from the fireplace.

“This is why I hate Floo travel.” said Harry looking up at Rudolph from where he lay.

“We need to work on your landing.” said Rudolph with a smirk.

“How about we don’t and leave it at that.” said Harry trying to sit up.

Sirius came striding out of the fire and stared at Harry who was still lying on his back.

“What happened?” asked Sirius.

“He fell down and went boom.” said Rudolph with a laugh.

“Haha.” said Harry as he stood up. “So what do we do?”

“Damn, you’re grumpy this morning. Let’s go polish off your bedroom first.” said Sirius excitedly.
Back in the Great Hall, people were decorating the hall with streamers and helping Leroy, Mrs. McFinn and Mrs. Weasley set up the party food. The Rangers were standing in the corner, with Umbridge, who still was transfigured as the slime mold creature, in a jar beside them.

“I don’t remember the last time I was at a party.” said Nightstirke.

“I’m not sure what the point of this celebration is.” said Tempest looking around with a bored look.

“It’s sort of a birthday party and a sorry you had to go through so much.” said Colin excitedly.

“I think you should just leave it as a birthday party.” said Dr. Nicodemus helping Professor McGonagall as she twirled a bunch of different colored streamers.

“Why is that?” asked Colin.

“I believe a “We’re sorry” party might not go over the best with him.” said Professor McGonagall.

“Why not?” asked Colin.

“Harry and pity…not a happy mix.” said Ron walking up to them as he helped his mother carry a few large plates of treacle tart down to the food table.

“That reminds me, I’d better gather up my Gryffindor students and we’ll see what would be the best gift.” said McGonagall.

The word went around that the party was now strictly a birthday party and almost all the students ran down to Hogsmeade to purchase presents. They were going to help make up all of Harry’s past pathetic birthdays and make this one the best Harry ever had, though…it wasn’t his birthday. Sirius and Remus already had an idea to get Harry, it didn’t cost any money, but Remus had to leave the area in order to get it. Rudolph had left Leroy a satchel of money to get a gift for Harry, but Leroy had problems of his own at the moment.

Leroy and Mrs. Weasley spent two hours pretty much arguing who was going to make Harry’s birthday cake.

Mrs. Weasley wanted to make a birthday cake in the shape of a snitch, gold icing and sugar quills for the wings.

Leroy wanted to make a cake full of treacle and have it shaped like the Hogwarts crest with chunks of Honeydukes chocolate on the sides.

Not surprisingly, especially for what she chose as a profession. Mrs. McFinn came up with an idea for a cake that the three of them agreed quickly to.

“That…actually…sounds…awesome.” said Leroy staring at Mrs. McFinn with an excited look.

Harry sat in one of the armchairs in his new bedroom, looking around the room slowly.

“This room needs a bit more color.” said Rudolph looking around. “What do you think Monster?”
“Sure.” said Harry tiredly.

“What’s wrong cub?” asked Sirius.

“I don’t know, just not feeling all that upbeat today.” said Harry.

Sirius and Rudolph shared a look and smiled. “You know cub, we don’t have to decorate, we can just hang out.”

“I’d rather do that.” said Harry leaning back and closing his eyes.

“Okay.” said Sirius and Rudolph sitting in the other chairs that were there. “We can just chill out here.”

“Thanks.” said Harry his eyes still closed.

“Didn’t expect it to be this easy.” said Rudolph with a whisper.

A few hours later, Leroy levitated the giant silk sheet covered cake into the Great Hall.

“Holy cow! What’s that?” asked Fred.

“Harry’s birthday cake.” said Mrs. Weasley happily.

“Can we see it?” asked Ron excitedly.

“We’ll let you kids see it at the same time Harry does.” said Mrs. McFinn. “It’s just about two, they should be coming back soon!”

They levitated the final touches to the decorations and placed the giant pile of presents beside the table with the giant cake. Most of the students couldn’t wait until they saw the shocked surprise on his face. It’s about time he had some pleasant memories, except for all the ones they’ve listened to.

They froze in place when they heard the sound of footsteps nearing the door. Most of the students took a deep breath and prepared to scream.

The door opened slightly and a foot came into view.

“HAPPY BIRTHDAY!” shouted the student body.

Dumbledore, standing in the doorway with a golden wrapped present in hand, blinked, then he smiled. “Wrong person, I’m afraid, but I will remember that shout for when my time comes.” said Dumbledore cheerfully.

Several students laughed.

“What did you get him Albus?” asked Professor Flitwick.

“I had to spend all morning to prepare this.” said Dumbledore with a smile. “Also, I came down to let you all know that they’ll be here in fifteen minutes. Harry wanted to pick some of the fruits that were in the orchard. So we gained a few moments of leeway time.”

“Well, we’re pretty much all done, we just need a few more streamers in the corner.” said Percy,
“Here’s Hedwig.” said Ron looking up in the air at the snowy white owl. “What has she got in her beak?”

Hedwig fluttered down softly and landed beside the cake, in her beak, was a pair of tiger lilies.

“How the hell did she know this was for Harry?” asked a first year.

“She’s very close to him.” said Dumbledore with a smile. “But I think she’s trying to tell us that he’s just arrived.”

“Alright you lot, stay quiet.” said Bill. “He could be coming down any minute.”

The moments ticked by until the door creaked open. This time the right person stepped through the door.

Harry walked inside the Great Hall with a bucket of apples in his hand and nearly dropped it when the entire Great Hall shouted those two words at him.

“What the hell?” said Harry in shock.

“We wanted to make up for all the rotten birthdays you’ve had so far!” said Alicia, Katie, and Angelina coming over to kiss Harry on the cheek.

“This explains the mixed messages.” said Harry looking at Sirius.

“Are you feeling a bit better?” asked Uncle Rudolph.

“Why, what’s wrong with him?” asked Remus and Leroy, who came by and gave him a one armed hug each.

“I’m not in the best of moods.” said Harry with a frown. “Got a Cheering Charm handy?” he added with a smirk.

“Do you really need it?” said Leroy.

“Unless you want me cranky for my own birthday party.” said Harry with a serious look.

“Right, good point.” said Sirius quickly. He took his wand out and waved it softly over his Godson’s head.

Harry sighed. “That’s a lot better.”

Almost immediately, Harry was dragged over to the table full of present by Dennis, but then was carried by both Fred and George the rest of the way.

“Come on! Presents!” shouted Fred and George.

It was almost nightfall when Harry finished opening the presents. Just before he opened the last few, the cake was revealed. It was a giant cake replica of Hogwarts castle!

Everyone was amazed by the intricate detail and how delicious it looked. It had towers and torrents and even Hagrid’s hut right beside it. When they cut into the cake Harry just about dived into the entire thing, it was full of treacle. Soon, thanks in big part to Ron and Harry, the cake looked nothing more than ruins.
After he wiped his cake covered face clean, he looked around at his presents. He now had a lifetime supply of broomstick care kits, eagle feather quills, and a massive amount of different candies. Fred and George even got him a t-shirt, and it said what he had said earlier: "Yeah it's me, now get away from me!"

“I love this!” said Harry looking at the shirt and laughing out loud. "Say hello to lots of cavities and calluses on my hands.” said Harry looking at the rest of his presents.

He opened Dumbledore’s gift and discovered a gold gilded ebony box.

“That box will protect whatever you place in it from prying eyes and sticky fingers.” said Dumbledore with a smile.

“I need this, it sucks only sleeping on and off.” said Harry thinking of his summer job.

“Here’s the present from Remus and me.” said Sirius excitedly.

Harry took ahold of the small blue wrapped package and opened it up. Inside, was a pair of golden rings.

“They were your parent’s wedding rings.” said Remus. “We thought you should have them.”

Harry stared at the box with tear filled eyes. He gently caressed the small bands of gold.

“Dumbledore gave them to me, they would have gone to Sirius, but being where he was…it wasn’t possible.”

The tears streaming down Harry’s face was all the thanks they could ever have wanted.

“No fair getting a tear jerking gift! He isn’t done opening every one of them yet!” said Leroy with a laugh.

Uncle Rudolph and Uncle Leroy handed Harry a silver wrapped present, inside was a photo album.

Harry looked at it, and then looked up at his Great Uncles.

“It’s an album, of your entire family. All the way back to when wizards first used cameras.” said Uncle Rudolph with a smile. “We thought…”

In a flash Harry hugged, Sirius, Remus, Leroy and Rudolph each in turn. Rudolph was the one that held onto him a little while longer, Harry was grateful, as he gently sobbed into the man’s shoulder. “You’re welcome Little Monster.”

Treacle Tart (HARRY POTTER'S FAVORITE THING EVER!)

1(9in) pie crust pastry
1 cup golden syrup
¼ cup heavy cream
1 cup bread crumbs
1 lemon, zested
2 tbsp lemon juice

Preheat oven to 375 degree F (190 degree C). Press the pie crust pastry evenly into the bottom of a 9in pie plate.

Mix the syrup, cream, bread crumbs, lemon zest, and lemon juice together in a bowl; pour into the pie crust.

Bake in the preheated oven until the filling is set, 35-40 minutes. Allow to cool slightly before serving.

Now imagine a cake that's been hollowed out and filled with this? Oh my god that sounds really good!

Chapter End Notes

Thanks for reading, please review
The next morning, everyone slept in, the party went well into the night, despite the teachers’ best efforts to send the students to bed at a decent hour. Some of the girls had a few records of the Weird Sisters music and a dance ensued. When a slow song would be played, Harry and Ginny would take the opportunity to enjoy a nice quiet dance together, just looking at each other’s eyes and dancing in a slow circle. However when a fast song would come around, several people dragged them out on to the dance floor to join them in their little dancing circle, though Harry preferred to just sit on the sidelines.

Aside from Harry, three other males were very popular dance partners. Sirius was being dragged off to join a few seventh year girls, at first he blushed each time, but after a while, he just took it in stride. Uncle Rudolph and Uncle Leroy seemed to dance non-stop with each other, several of the seventh years would dance along with them and even a few first years seemed to want to take both Rudolph and Leroy out on the dance floor with them.

Remus had a few seventh years through fourth year girls waiting to dance with him, but Tonks didn’t let him have a moment’s rest without her, which he didn’t seem to mind in the slightest. He enjoyed waltzing around the dance floor with during the slow songs and tried his best during the faster songs.

Hermione and Ron shared quite a few dances together and refused to dance with anyone else. They were one of the last people to actually leave the Great Hall, though as tired as Harry was, he was happy to see those two finally holding hands. There was another couple leaving arm in arm that he was happy to see so happy, Mrs. McFinn and Dr. Clark. They said they were tired and wanted to go to sleep, Harry was only too happy to let them.

Tempest and Firenze left once the dancing had started, preferring to travel around the lake as opposed to dancing to wizard music.

The last remaining people that were still down there, was the remainder of Harry’s close knit family, Dumbledore and a few of the Rangers.

Dumbledore transfigured a chair into a large trunk and with a few extra charms tossed in; he levitated the presents into the enchanted trunk. “Did you enjoy the party, dear boy?”

“I did, thanks to that Cheering Charm, and Ginny.” said Harry. “I don’t really know why I was in a bad mood.” he ran his fingers through his hair. He sank slowly into a nearby chair and looked at the floor.

“I’m not a psychiatrist, but judging from what I’ve seen, I think you’re having a bit of a hard time with these readings.” said Dr. Nicodemus.

Harry looked up the doctor with a confused look.
“From what I can tell, you are still unhappy about everyone learning about what transpires in your thoughts, life, and during the summer.” said Dr. Nicodemus.

Harry turned his head away.

“You still having problems cub?” asked Sirius concernedly.

“What’s wrong Harry?” asked Remus.

Harry said nothing.

“You’ll feel a lot better when you get it off your chest.” said Lionus. He reached into his pocket and took out a wand and waved it gently, removing the cheering charm and placing a compulsion charm. “There you go, now you can shout, scream and stamp your feet all you want.”

They all saw Harry’s tired, calm face turn into one of sheer annoyance.

“Come along lad, tell us what’s bothering you.” said Chief. Hawkeye.

“I…I just…I don’t really see how everyone can get all upset about the life before school, summer, and my thoughts. You lot didn’t give a damn about me before, you didn’t check up on me, nothing, you did absolutely nothing. You have no right to know anything about me.” said Harry sourly.

Everyone but the Rangers looked uncomfortably at each other. What do they say? What could they say? They did let him down, and frankly, all his accomplishments, all his talents, his heart, his soul, likes, dislikes. They had no part of their development. All the credit, of Harry’s selfless nature, goes straight to himself, the McFinn’s and Dr. Clark.

How long had he been burying this?

“You’re right Harry,” said Dumbledore softly. “We haven’t earned the right to peer into your past in this fashion, or in any fashion.”

Sirius and Remus looked both hurt and horrified.

“I mean, I get this feeling that I’m the only one supposed to fight Voldemort, I want revenge for my parents of course but…why do I have to save everyone? No one in this world did anything for me, except for Mom and Dad, no one came to my rescue when I really needed it. All those nights that Uncle Vernon beat the crap out of me, when Ripper gnawed on my leg, Aunt Marge smacking me with that cane, Dudley chasing after me…” Harry’s fingers tightened on his scalp and angry tears burned his cheeks. “No one came to save me, no one here helped me.”

Dumbledore was dreadfully pale. “I’m sorry, Harry…I’m so sorry.”

The tightness of Harry’s fingers on his scalp lessened slightly, but they were still dug into his skull.

“I’ll apologize to you every day for the rest of both of our lives, and yes, that still won’t be enough.” said Dumbledore kneeling in front of Harry. He took Harry’s trembling hand, which was clutching his kneecap, in his own shaking one. “I’m sorry, but I’ll never let you fight alone and if you don’t want to fight, I will do everything I can so don’t have to.”

Harry removed his hand from his scalp, swallowed.

“I think that we need to quicken the pace of that therapist.” said Lionus. “Wouldn’t hurt to have you vent every once in a while. How do Sundays work for you, starting just as soon as you like?”
“I’d like that, so I don’t blow up every week or so.” said Harry. “Though, this party was really nice.”

“It’s sort of a belated birthday party for you.” said Sirius. “But you’re getting another one when summer comes around.”

“You’re going to spoil me.” said Harry with a dry laugh.

“I’ve got a lot of years to make up.” said Sirius weakly.

“As do we.” said Rudolph, Leroy and Remus.

Harry sighed, “This is both one of the best and worst years I’ve had here.”

“And I hate to tell you this, but you’ve got two more years.” teased Leroy softly.

The next morning people got up the next time, though they had the same demeanor as Harry had the night prior. Harry was the only one that seemed to be in a chipper mood.

“Roles are reversed it seems.” said Harry quietly with a slight smirk.

“We told them that they weren’t going to be all that energetic if they stayed up all night.” said
Dumbledore cheerfully.

“You seem just fine sir.” said Lee grumpily.

“I’m used to working all night and then coming down to breakfast with a castle full of students that expect me to be cheerful.” said Dumbledore with a bright smile.

The adults in the room, save Sirius and Remus were in alright moods, those two were pretty tired.

“So what do you guys do for Halloween?” asked Dr. Clark eagerly.

“Well, we normally just have a feast and perhaps some light entertainment.” said Dumbledore with a smile.

“Oh, you don’t dress up?” said Mrs. McFinn.

“Like a costume party?” asked Lee sitting up suddenly.

“I thought I heard a few of you say you didn’t want to have another party ever again.” said
Professor Sprout with a laugh.

“We’re always saying that, can we have a costume party tomorrow?” said Fred eagerly.

“What about the readings?” asked Dr. Nicodemus.

“Better find comfortable costumes.” said Lionus with a smile.

“Well, then I think on today’s agendas would be costume hunting.” said Dumbledore with a smile.
“We’ll have the feast and another get together after the day’s readings, not nearly as big as last nights, but a calmer one.”

Once Dumbledore finished speaking, whispers trickled out amongst the students. Harry looked over to Remus. “Am I still grounded?”

“How is Harry going to get his costume if you ground him.” said Ron trying to help.

Remus ran his hand over his face, “I’ll forgive you this time, if…”

“Here it comes.” said Harry with a smile.

“You want to be grounded?” said Remus with a smirk.

“No sir.” said Harry quickly.

“I didn’t think so. Bake me a few of those cookies I like and then you’re off the hook.” said Remus with a smile.

“Done.” said Harry with a smile.

“So what are you going to dress up as?” asked Sirius eagerly.

“None of your business.” said Harry with a smile.

Down in Hogsmede, People were running into Gladrags to get different clothes to go as different things. Owls were sent to parents with wishes and pleas of costumes to wear the next day. Those who wanted to be a bit more creative went down to Gladrags and ordered bolts of fabric and little odds and ends to make up their costumes.

Harry had sent Hedwig to go fetch the costume he wanted. He couldn't trust himself to make the costume on his own and he wanted it to be a surprise to a few people. While he waited for the package from an old friend and mentor, he prepared a few treats for tomorrow and the cookies that Remus wanted.

Most of the teachers and other adult wanted to just sit back and allow the students have their fun, but others, like Professor Flitwick and Professor Sprout and Dumbledore wanted to join in with the festivities. Dr. Clark and Mrs. McFinn also wanted to join the fun, but they weren’t comfortable leaving the castle without someone to accompany them.

“I’ll take you down.” said Sirius standing up out of his chair. “Gives me something to do.”

“Aren’t you going to dress up for tomorrow?” asked Mrs. McFinn sweetly.

“Don’t know what I could go as.” said Sirius.

“You could go as a poodle.” said Dr. Clark with a laugh.

Sirius stared at him, then walked over and peered into his eyes.

“Can I help you?” said Dr. Clark leaning back slightly.

“Just checking your eyes, if they were the same as James, I’d swear you were his reincarnation.” said Sirius.

“I’m not that young.” said Dr. Clark with a gentle smile.

“It’s just, that’s something James would have said.” said Sirius somberly. Mrs. McFinn looked down and muttered about fixing some tea. They watched her leave with her eyes watery, “I forgot, her husband’s name was also James.” said Sirius.

“Yeah, when she and I spent our first night together… it was hard for the both of us, we just ended up holding each other all night.” said Dr. Clark folding his arms and leaning against the mantle.

A thick silence fell between the two of them.

“So what costume idea do you guys have?” said Sirius.

“I haven’t decided yet, I was thinking something, but I didn’t to insult anyone.” said Dr. Clark sheepishly.

“You wanted to come as a wizard?” said Sirius with a smirk.

“Yeah.” said Dr. Clark sheepishly.

“Do it, I’ll help you look the part.” said Sirius.

“How come I don’t trust you?” said Dr. Clark with a laugh.

“Oi! Remus!” shouted Sirius loudly.

A door opened but it wasn’t Remus that answered.

“He’s gone, left with Tonks.” said Rudolph.

“Sam here wants to go as a wizard for a costume.” said Sirius.

“And he doesn’t trust you, does he?” said Rudolph throwing on a cloak with a smile.

“Why does no one trust me?” said Sirius with a pout.

“Instincts.” said Rudolph. “Well Sam, at least your costume will be easy to do.”

Mrs. McFinn came back into the lounge, her eyes a little red and puffy. Seeing her distraught, Rudolph swept over to Mrs. McFinn and held her hand.

“Are you alright? What’s wrong?”

“I’m fine, just remembering…” she said laughing slightly and hiccupping at the same time.

Rudolph took Mrs. McFinn in his arms and hugged her. “Let’s take you shopping, that always cheers up Leroy when he’s feeling down, the other thing… he might not like it if I did that with you.”

Mrs. McFinn’s face broke into a smile and a fit of giggles.

“Where is Leroy?” asked Dr. Clark.

“He went to take a few girls shopping for costumes. Ginny and Hermione, I was going just hang out here, but I’ll go.” said Rudolph with a smile.

They went down to the village of Hogsmede and stopped first at Gladrags for the clothes for Dr. Clark.
“Here we go, pretty much you wear normal clothes that are over there, and a robe over top them.” said Rudolph handing Dr. Clark a deep blue robe. “You seem to be the Ravenclaw type.”

“So…do I need a pointed hat?” said Dr. Clark softly.

“Nah, not many people wear those, they went out of style about thirty years ago.” said Sirius.

“Well, the kids…” said Dr. Clark.

“They’re forced to stick with that, it’s traditional.” said Rudolph. “Did you find anything to give you an idea, Holly?”

“Well, if I can get a few yards of this fabric, I can make myself a nice ornate dress and go as a Queen of some sort.” said Mrs. McFinn with a smile.

“If you want to add a bit of sparkle, Leroy can help with that, he’s always adding jewels to something or other.” said Rudolph. “He’s like a magpie that way.”

“Do they have fake jewels here?” asked Mrs. McFinn looking around.

“We’ll hook you up.” said Rudolph with a smile.

“You’re going to get her real jewels, aren’t you?” asked Sirius snidely.

“You bet.” said Rudolph, “She’s worth it.”

“Can’t wait to see it.” said Dr. Clark with a smile. “It should be as beautiful as the Fairy costume you wore for Harry’s first Halloween.”

“My costume is going to be easy, I just need to find some old clothes.” said Sirius with a smile.

“I wonder what Harry’s going to go as?” asked Dr. Clark as he carried both the bags for his costume and the bags for Mrs. McFinn’s costume.

Later that afternoon, as Harry waited for the last few things to finish baking, he read a book he had borrowed from the library. Animagi: The Art of Skin Changing. He was contemplating for a while if he wanted to try and follow in his father’s footsteps and become an animagus. He had done all the research and was almost completed with the charms and potions. The only thing that stopped him was the final decision, if he should follow through with it. This was a pretty permanent decision; he would have to register with the Ministry and to have to be registered with anyone just felt as if his freedom was taken away.

Suddenly he was jolted from his thoughts when Hedwig came flapping down and dropped a parcel gently on the table.

“Thanks Hedwig” said Harry. He opened the letter and read it with a smile.

Dear Harry,

I’m happy to hear from you, here’s the uniform you wanted. When you wrote and told me that Dr. Clark was fine and safe with you I could hardly believe what I was reading. I hope that he’s alright, and if he needs anything, you just let me know:

You say Holly is back? It seems almost everyone that was lost to you is coming back, I couldn’t be happier for you. Tell her and Dr. Clark that I give them my best.

By the way, you were right; the Dursleys haven’t been seen in a long while. Maybe they finally moved away and never came back, them gone makes me feel a lot better. Strange thing though, your cousin Dudley seems to have been abandoned at your Aunt Marge’s place and then she disappeared, she’s been gone for quite some time. Your cousin Dudley has been in foster care ever since. Though I have to admit, I’ve never had to send so many officers to that foster home before in my career. I don’t think he’s taking the disappearance of his parents all that well.

I’ve tried to take him under my wing, like I did for you when James passed away. Though I guess it goes to show, you and him are completely different people, he’s more, how do you say, physical, about his troubles. Most you ever did was scream and cry, which personally I hope you haven’t had to do that at that school again. And if you had, I’ll come and take care of the problem.

Back onto the matters at hand, just keep the uniform, and consider it yours, welcome to the force.

I’m always proud of you and I’ll always be there for you.

Inspector Homes.

Harry folded the letter carefully and put it in his pocket. He ripped open the package carefully and looked at the uniform that Inspector Homes sent him.

It was a police officer’s uniform. He looked at it quickly and smiled, then something else caught his eye, it was a silver badge. Harry thought it just a fake one, made of a thick plastic, but Harry soon discovered it was the real deal.

And not only that, it was Officer McFinn’s number.

He wondered what Inspector Homes meant by welcome to the force, well, now he knew.

Chapter End Notes

Thanks for reading, please review!
The next morning, everyone came down to continue with the readings, however, they didn’t look like the normal students that stayed at Hogwarts and some of the adults looked out of place too. The Great Hall was full of princesses, fairies, vampires, ghosts, angels, demons, and even a few muggle professions.

Remus came as he normally did, in his shabby robes, but Tonks came down dressed as a punk rocker, even more than what she normally looked like. She and Bill must have gotten together to collaborate on a costume cause they seemed to have been part of the same band for he too was dressed to the punked nines. They had chains around their necks and their faces were painted in wild colors.

Charlie came down, dressed sort of normally, but he seemed to have painted or charmed some dragon scales on his face and arms.

Fred and George were dressed similar to the Rangers Nightstrike and Lious, with a sword and wand that matched their inspirations. The originals smiled and laughed good-naturedly at the twins. They even walked over and taunted the form that was Umbridge, they ceased when their mother came over and dragged them away.

“They’re just like us, I wouldn’t want to mess with that woman.” said Nightstrike with a chuckle.

Hermione came dressed as a Hogwarts Professor and Ron came down as a Chudley Cannon player. Ron was just going to come down as a Gryffindor player, but Harry had given his Christmas present to him early and it turned out he bought Ron a complete set of Cannon robes.

“Nice robes Ron.” said Charlie patting his little brother on the back, he then removed his hand. “Let me just put a protective charm on these.”

“I’m not going to get them dirty.” said Ron indignantly.

“It’s not the robes I’m worrying for you about, it’s the signatures.” said Charlie as he waved his wand over his brother.

“What?” said Ron, he quickly but gingerly took the robes off his back and inspected them carefully. “I…Harry…is…AWESOME!” shouted Ron as he hopped up and down.

Ginny was dressed as a Holyhead Harpy player, though Mrs. Weasley wasn’t too happy about it, for the Harpy uniform had an exposed midriff.

“Really dear, maybe you should…” said Mrs. Weasley.

“I’ve got that covered mom, when they play during the fall, they wear this.” said Ginny, she wrapped a silk band around her middle.
“Who bought that for you anyway?” asked Bill who didn’t really want his little sister dressing like that either.

“Mr. Leroy. He took me shopping for an outfit.” said Ginny.

“Oh come on, Molly, she looks fine.” said Leroy putting his hands on his hips. He was wearing a Robin Hood costume, with a bow and quiver strung on his back, a feathered cap upon his head, a satchel of stolen gold on his hip and wide beaming smile on his face.

Rudolph came over to his husband and smiled. “You look great this morning.”

Leroy posed in his green emerald suit. “I was always a big fan of Robin Hood’s. What are you supposed to be?”

Rudolph looked down in his black suit and tie. “A groom.”

“That’s cheating.” said Leroy pouting.

“I was helping Dr. Clark with his own costume, I forgot to pick up something for myself.” said Rudolph.

“Well, it doesn’t matter, you look handsome either way.” said Leroy hugging his husband close.

Dr. Clark came in, wearing wizard robes and even carrying a fake wand. “How do I look?” said Dr. Clark with a smile.

“Like the real thing.” said Dumbledore with a smile. He was wearing his traditional purple robes, but he had in his hand a staff instead of the normal wand.

“That’s a real staff then Professor?” said Dennis looking at the staff eagerly.

“That it is Mr. Creevy, I’m posing as a wizard of ancient times.” said Dumbledore with an even brighter smile.

“He’s the right age for it.” whispered Fred.

Mrs. McFinn came up behind him, wearing a jewel studded dress and her hair done in numerous curls and waves.

“You look beautiful Miss Holly.” said Dumbledore bowing low.

Mrs. McFinn blushed heavily. “Thank you, Professor Dumbledore.”

“Albus, please. I assume that you are dressed up as Cinderella?” said Dumbledore with a smile.

“Well, an older version yes.” said Mrs. McFinn with a smile.

“I love the dress, Holly.” said Mrs. Weasley and Emmeline Vance gushingly.

Sirius came up behind her and smiled broadly. “She does look absolutely gorgeous doesn’t she?”

He was wearing a bright red shirt with a tattered pair of jeans; he seemed to fit in perfectly with the way the students had been dressing lately.

“Who are you supposed to be?” asked Ron.
“A Muggle.” said Sirius with a smile. “Sam and I switched worlds.”

“Ask if they’ll keep you.” said Remus with a smirk.

The last person to come in, was Harry, when Mrs. McFinn saw him, she could feel tears welling up in her eyes.

He was dressed in a police uniform, with a police belt, badge, hat and everything else that went with it. His long white hair fell to the back of his knees, no longer in a ponytail but just hanging loosely. He walked up to Mrs. McFinn and smiled.

“I had to send away for this.” said Harry softly.

“This was your first Halloween costume you had with us.” said Mrs. McFinn with a warm smile. Then something caught her eye, Mrs. McFinn looked at the badge, “That’s James’ number.” she added in a whisper as she touched the badge on the boy’s chest.

“Yeah, Inspector Homes sent it to me.” said Harry.

Mrs. McFinn dabbed her eyes and smiled. “You look so handsome, sweetheart. Just like he did.” She threw her arms around him and held him tightly.

The people in the Great Hall turned away to give them some privacy, and the girls had to dab their own eyes to rid themselves of the tears that came to them so suddenly.

They all settled down, the bowl was replaced with several armchairs. Mrs. McFinn’s dress wouldn’t have allowed her to sit in the bowl very comfortably.

So Harry sat beside Mrs. McFinn who held a tight grip on Harry’s hand. Dr. Clark walked behind him and whispered in his ear before he went to sit down.

“Good choice.” said Dr. Clark with a smile.

“It was the best idea for a costume I could think of.” said Harry with a smile. “Someone I really admired.”

“He’d be so proud of you. So proud of how far you’ve come.” said Dr. Clark patting Harry on the shoulder.

Madam Bones decided to read the first chapter of the day.

“Chapter Fourteen” said Madam Bones. “I forgot that last year we had you learn those curses.”

“What are they?” asked Dr. Clark.

“Very bad curses, use them once, you’re sent to Azkaban for life.” said Sirius. He then turned to Harry, “If I catch you even attempting one of those…”

“What makes you think I’m going to?” said Harry.
“Sixth that year or so far.” said Rudolph curiously.

“So far.” said Neville with a blush.

“Don’t worry, he’s still got your score beat.” said Rudolph nodding towards the man who sat beside him on the sofa.

“What?” asked a few Gryffindors.

“There wasn’t a month that went by that I didn’t blow up a cauldron or two.” said Leroy with a laugh. “I may be a great cook, but somehow I can’t seem to transfer the talent over to Potions class.”

“Wait, weren’t you in Slytherin?” asked Blaise.

“That I was.” said Leroy with a smile.

“But…Slytherin’s are the best at potions!” said Draco.

“I was better at Transfiguration than I was at Potions.” said Leroy.

“He was one of my prized students.” said McGonagall with a smile.

The Slytherin students stared.

“Big shocker.” said Sirius rolling his eyes.

“He was still pissed about not getting an Order of Merlin.” whispered Rudolph.

“I kept thinking of Trevor.” said Neville weakly. “I had nightmares for a long time.”

“Cause he’s just nasty.” said Sirius with a shrug.

“Ah…” said several adults shaking their heads.
“Doesn’t that tell you something.” muttered Tonks. “You aren’t getting the job.”

“I didn’t quite know why he despised you in particular.” said Harry.

“Well you see…” said Moody.

“Alastor…” said Dumbledore in a warning tone. “That’s in the past.”

“Sometimes, the past comes back to bite us.” said Moody sending a glare over to Snape.

Snape looked up, Potter was watching him?

Snape blushed slightly.

“I’m going to have pleasant dreams tonight!” said Fred with a laugh. But his laughing ceased when Snape sent his fiercest glare over to the Twin.

“Doesn’t happen all that often. Teachers aren’t known to be entertaining.” said Bill. “Except for Flitwick, he makes learning really fun.”

“Thank you Mr. Weasley.” squeaked Professor Flitwick with a blush.

Dialogue line.
“It’s like you were going to go see a stage show.” said Tonks.

“Trust me, this wasn’t the best show.” said Ron.

“Disappointment was it?” asked Bill.

“No, just frightening,” said Hermione.

“I’ll give him credit, not a bad way to start the year.” said Moody gruffly. “It’s what I would have done.”

"That was pretty creepy, but at least he didn't focus on any of the girls in the class." muttered Hermione.

"Too bad we haven't made that much progress this year." said Harry with a smirk up to Umbridge.

"You would have made twice that much progress!" shouted Fudge.

"With that book? You have to be kidding," said Rivers with a scornful smile.

"They weren’t old enough to deal with curses." said Remus, "Sixth and seventh years, yes, but not the under years."
"I didn't think that someone would actually aim to only be here one year." said Ron.

"Maybe the imposter is nicer than you are." teased Tonks. Moody responded by growling at her.

"I was happy to do it, but was it you or the imposter I actually helped." said Mr. Weasley. "I believe a bit of both." said Dumbledore softly.

"Yeah, like that's just going to stop us from learning some actual curses." said Hermione as she rolled her eyes.

"Well, at least three people's nerves." said Leroy with a bright smile to the couple in the love seat and Harry.

"It's even worse when you don't know what to expect." said Harry softly.

"He's got a point." said Sirius. "They aren't going to shout their moves like in a chess game."
"He wasn't talking about anything important!" said Lavender indignantly.
"You could have missed something very vital, and then where would you be." said Remus sternly.

"Why did you keep staring at me?" asked Lavender to Moody.
"That wasn't him, remember." said Fred rolling his eyes.
“That and he was making sure you didn’t try and whip out your horoscope again.” said George.
“I mean come one, Defense class? You pick that one to screw around in?” said Fred.
“Well, we don’t muck about in Transfiguration.” said George.
“Or potions.” said Fred.
“Charms.” said George.
“Herbology.” said Fred.
“We save it for the teachers that need a good laugh.” said the twins.
“I’m not sure if we should thank you or not.” said Professor Vector with a smirk.

"Still is making a headache." said Mr. Weasley. "No one can really tell if they've been under the Imperius Curse or not. Even Veritiserum doesn't work on them."

"And they hate him, judging by the second book." said Dean.
"I don't think I want to know." said Mrs. McFinn.

"I've got a granddaughter that's afraid of spiders, I don't think she'll ever overcome her fears." said Chief Hawkeye thoughtfully. “Screams bloody murder when a little Daddy-Long-Legs comes into the room.”

Thirteenth paragraph.

"Hang on, can you use those spells on animals and be alright?" asked George.

"Yeah, it seems sort of one sided." said Lee.

"It's still against the law to use those spells, regardless if they're on animal or human." said Dumbledore. "I told him to use spells of the same nature but not as strong or as harmful. Though, the only spell that has a softer version is the Imperius."

"So he was just supposed to show us the Imperius curse?" asked Ron.

"That's right, the other two he was only supposed to talk about." said Dumbledore.

Fourteenth paragraph.

"That sounds horrible." said Mrs. McFinn, “making a poor creature do that against it's will."

"Performing it on humans is even worse, they can be made to kill their own family, betray their friends, and even allow themselves to be molested." said Rudolph with disgust in his voice.

Remus looked panic-stricken over to Harry.

“No…one…touched…me…” said Harry slowly so Remus could understand each and every word.

Fifteenth paragraph.

"Looking back, it wasn't funny at all." said the fifth year students.

Dialogue line.

Sixteenth paragraph.

"Good, you guys should think that's not funny." said Leroy.

Dialogue set.
Seventeenth paragraph.

Mrs. McFinn whimpered.

Dialogue set.

"And that was as hard as trying to find a single needle in a pile of junk." said Nightstrike.

"Don't you mean needle in a haystack?" said Hermione.

"Naw, that's easy, just set the hay on fire." said Nightstrike with a smile.

Dialogue set.

"He's got a point, fighting that spell is pretty damn hard, takes years of strength build up and personal wisdom to fight it off." said Charlie.

Eighteenth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Nineteenth paragraph.

"I don't know what made me do it, but I felt that I needed to." said Neville softly.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dumbledore and the rest of the teaching staff looked at Neville sympathetically.

Twentieth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Twenty-first paragraph, first sentence.

"Cause he knew the name." growled Harry.
"Stupid spider." said Remus shaking his head.

"He just about shot clear through the table behind him." said Seamus.

Neville and Harry both turned a very pale shade of white. Luna threw her arms around Neville and Sirius stood up and walked behind Harry enveloping him in his protective arms.

“I’m right here, it's okay, I’m here.” said Sirius.

"I agree." whimpered Dr. Clark.

"God, this is getting to be a bit much for me so early in the morning." said Mr. Weasley wiping his face with his handkerchief. “Explosions and odd smells coming from the twins’ room I can understand, but this is a bit much.”

"It's still popular." muttered Harry. Sirius heard him, and hugged him around his neck.
"That's the worst spell." said Ron.

"I don't know, Cruciatus curse seems to be a lot worse than that one." said Harry in a whisper.

Sirius flinched horribly, as did Remus who was leaning over and putting a supportive hand on Harry’s shoulder.

Harry closed his eyes and leaned heavily back in his seat. "I hate this year."

The Rangers, Aurors and a few other adults turned and stared at Harry, who wasn't even looking back at them, his eyes were closed tightly.

Mrs. McFinn brought both hands to her breast and closed her eyes. "Harry, tell me that you don't have to come up against that spell." pleaded Mrs. McFinn.

Harry was too busy counting the beats of his own heart to try and calm himself down.

“We’ll find out soon enough I guess.” said Dr. Clark quietly.
Leroy, Rudolph, Dr. Clark, Mrs. McFinn and Remus both got out of their chairs and hurried over to Harry's seat.

The adults around Harry’s seat cringed slightly and gripped Harry’s police uniform. Dumbledore had to quickly sip a Calming Draught.

Remus didn’t care about comfort anymore, he summoned the bowl chair back to the Great Hall and dragged Harry over to it. Despite the professional uniform he wore, and his height, Harry was draped across several people’s laps and his head rested gently in Mrs. McFinn’s lap.

Leroy and Rudolph cried and leaned on each other. Sirius and Remus held onto Harry’s hand and Mrs. McFinn wiped the tears from the poor young man’s face.

A few students whimpered and cried quietly.

“Don’t dwell on it, we’re here now.” said Remus giving the boy’s hand a squeeze.

“Well, at least a child can’t just accidentally kill someone.” said Mrs. McFinn with a sigh of relief.
“I’m amazed we didn’t develop a nervous disposition.” said Harry softly.

“And that’s why Harry taught us what we needed to know.” said Terry angrily up to Umbridge.

“I was amazed that Harry didn’t start throwing up.” said Ron.

“I don’t blame you.” said Sirius.

Luna placed an arm around Neville and gave him a reassuring hug.

“No, not at all.” said Harry as he made to sit up.
“Nope, you keep laying down.” said Sirius.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Forty-second paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“I thought you had flipped.” said Ron.

“Harry’s not talking again, you notice that…?” said Ernie.

“Must have really shook him up, and those two didn’t quite notice.” said Hannah.

“Harry’s good about hiding his emotions, more than we think apparently.” said Justin.

Forty-third paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Forty-fifth paragraph, first sentence.

“I don’t blame you.” said Tonks with a gentle giggle.

End of forty-fourth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Forty-fifth paragraph.

“Why do all the Defense Against the Dark Art Professors seem to like me so much?” said Harry as he smiled softly.

“And some just like you way too much for my liking.” said Remus darkly.

Forty-sixth paragraph.

Dialogue line.
"Ron." said Charlie in a warning tone.

Forty-seventh paragraph.

"His eyes looked sort of dead." said Ron. "It was really scary."

Forty-eighth paragraph, first sentence.

"Ron did most of the talking, and I don’t think Harry ate anything." said Hermione.

Remus took a large plate of toast and took a piece and handed it to Harry.

"Eat a bit of this." said Remus. "Please." he added pleadingly.

"Not now, I don’t think I can." said Harry.

End of forty-eighth paragraph.

"It was the only question that I could cough up." said Harry.

Forty-ninth paragraph.

"Nothing new." said a few Gryffindors.

Fiftieth paragraph.
“Nice of you to ask dear.” said Mrs. McFinn.

“I knew what he was going through.” said Harry.

Dialogue line.

Fifty-first paragraph.

Dialogue set.

“Wow, you do notice everything.” said Neville with a blush.

Fifty-second paragraph.

Remus smiled slightly.

Fifty-third paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“That’s the one class that I can’t get any sort ground on.” said Harry.

“Neither could I, dear boy. The only class I managed to get a ‘T’ in.” said Dumbledore with a shameless tone of pride in his voice.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Good for you boys!” said Sirius joyfully, finally something was going right for the kids.

Dialogue set.

Professor Trelawney scowled angrily down to the two boys.

“You asked for it.” said Sirius with a smirk.

Dialogue set, first sentence.
“We thought that was so cool.” said a second year Gryffindor excitedly.

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue set, first sentence.

“I forgot just how creepy these predictions were.” said Ron trying to lighten his friend’s mood. “Cause some of them happened, they just happened a lot later.”

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, second sentence.

“I did, but it wasn’t on Tuesday, it was a bit later.” said Ron losing the jovial tone in his voice.

End of dialogue set.

Ron paled. “I don’t remember that.”

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, first sentence.

“You guys are having way too much fun with that.” said Sirius with a laugh.

“I should be angry that you aren’t doing your homework properly, but for Divination…” said McGonagall with a small smile.

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

Fifty-fourth paragraph.

“Come on, Hermione, there is no way to do it right.” said Ron.
“Hey now!” said Fred.

“Keep your eyes on your own work!” said George.

The twins stared, “Quite a nosy little bugger aren’t you?”

The twins and Lee stared at each other with wide eyes.

“You’re flipping creepy.” said Lee looking over to Harry.

“James’ teachings at work.” said Mrs. McFinn giving the badge a bit of a tweak.

“Too late for that thought, mate.” said George.

“But it was fun to write, and you can’t say that about much homework.” said Harry.
“A hard thing to do.” said Dr. Nicodemus with a chuckle.

“BAD choice of words.” said Ginny.

“Don’t I know it.” said Ron.

“I wasn’t being serious, Sirius.” said Harry as his godfather placed his head on Harry’s stomach.

“I still didn’t need to hear that.” said Sirius not caring about the joke he so dearly loved, he loved his godbaby more.

“You weren’t meant to hear it.” said Harry.

“You can decorate it all you want, it still spells spew.” said Chief Hawkeye with a kind smile.
“Well, it’s a start, but not a very healthy society for the House-elves.” said Lionus.

“Pretty long title, you are better to have it as S.P.E.W.” said Emmeline.

“Because that would have caused mass genocide of the House-elf population.” said Chief Hawkeye. “And I’d be royally pissed and have to come after you.”

“Are there any House-elves in the Rangers?” asked Hermione quickly.

“Well, they mostly take papers from one department to another in different countries and take care of the safe houses we have across the world. Other than that, no.” said Lionus.

“They’re not the most offensive creatures. We need Rangers to be ready to strike.” said Chief Hawkeye. “That and they’re the most innocent little bas…buggers…., rather have them off the front lines.”

“They don’t want wages, and for the most part they have working conditions that exceed fair standards.” said Nightstrike.

“Oh, hell no.” said most of the adults.

“House-elves have a stronger branch of magic than we do. Centaurs, Goblins, Mer-people and House-elves are more in tuned with their magical cores, they don’t need an appendage to expel it from their bodies.” said Dumbledore. “Using a wand could actually cause them harm.”
“You do have a point there, but it begins and ends there.” said Madam Bones.

“Goody I get to count money.” said Ron with a smirk.

“First and actually last.” said Harry.

“Why have Harry be secretary?” asked Hannah.

“He had the better handwriting.” said Hermione matter-of-factly.

“And here I thought you wanted a good looking secretary.” said Dr. Clark with a laugh. Ron flushed. “You’re good looking too.” he added quickly.

“It would mean more coming from a girl I think.” said Sirius with a gleeful smile.

“That had to be the most awkward moment of the day.” said Blaise.

“I hadn’t seen him so happy in a long time.” said Ron with a smile.

“Even she knew it was garbage.” said Harry with a laugh.
“I was in a hurry, your note was the straw that broke the hippogriff’s back.” said Sirius.

Letter From Sirius.

“Why not? That’s what I’m here for!” said Sirius.

“Boy did I pay for that one.” said Harry with a whistle. “She gets right snippy with me when I take bad news out on her. And I deserve it.”
“I wouldn’t let myself get captured that easily.” said Sirius soothingly.

End of seventy-second paragraph.

“You’ve done enough of that.” said a few people somberly.

End of chapter.

“Yeah, I couldn’t sleep either.” said Neville somberly.

“That’s it for this chapter.” said Madam Bones.

“I’ll take the next one.” said Leroy raising his hand. “Do you want to take a moment, Monster?”

“I’m fine. Just a little worn.” said Harry.

“Well, we can take a break whenever you feel like it.” said Rudolph nudging the boy’s foot.

Chapter End Notes

Thanks for reading! Please review!
First paragraph, first sentence, second comma. read Leroy.

"Goodness me, most of the time, it takes me at least a few cups of coffee to get my brain started." said Professor Flitwick.

First paragraph, second sentence, third comma.

"It's not that massive of a feat, he sleeps like a drunken troll for the most part." said Fred.

First paragraph, third sentence, seventeenth word.

"Why would you risk having someone take your homework and screw it all up?" asked Dr. Clark.

"Makes it really appear like I don't care about what my homework says and looks like." said Harry with a smile.

End of first paragraph.

Letter to Sirius

"Nice try Cub, but I wasn't going to buy that." said Sirius.

Second paragraph, first paragraph, end of parenthesis.

"Anytime he sees an early riser, he finds the need to give them special attention." said Dumbledore.

"Don't I know it." said Harry.

End of second paragraph.
A sudden twinge went through Ron and Harry's spine. What on earth was that?

Third paragraph, second sentence.

"Yeah, that place was always a good spot to induce vomiting if you weren't feeling too well." said Remus.

Sirius nudged Remus hard in the side, “Don’t tell Harry that, he doesn’t need to do any extra retching.”

Third paragraph, third sentence.

"Owls are really grumpy risers." said a first year Hufflepuff student wisely.

End of third paragraph.

"Oh sweet Merlin don't fall, that's a horrible experience." said Tonks shivering. "Happened to me, once every year I was there."

Fourth paragraph, first sentence.

"She's a grumpy riser too." said Harry with a smile.

End of fourth paragraph.

"She's got me wrapped around her talon, and I've got her wrapped around my finger." said Harry with a smile.

Dialogue line.

"I worry about you all the time." said Harry.

"Not nearly as much as I worry about you." said Sirius.

Fifth paragraph, first sentence, first comma.

"She was still pissed at me." said Harry.
"I'm confused, who's the adult here?" asked Dr. Clark teasingly.

"I still don't see the big deal about that." said Zacharias.

"That and I didn't want to risk losing Sirius, just because I can't seem to take a stupid little pain in my scar." said Harry shortly.

"It's not stupid and I want to know about it." said Sirius ruffling Harry's hair slightly.

"I can't believe that." said Fred.

"Ron had to silence Hermione for no tact." said George.

"The world is doomed." they both said solemnly.

Sirius looked at Harry worriedly. "I'm sorry Cub, I didn't mean to..."

"It's alright." said Harry plainly.

"Well of course they would be, O.W.L's were and are just around the corner." said McGonagall stiffly.
Seventh paragraph.

Silence stretched across the room.

"Say...what...?" said Lionus.

"Alas that would be partially my fault." said Dumbledore humbly.

"How is that?" asked Chief Hawkeye.

"I told him to use the Compulsion Charm, but I discovered later, he used the real thing." said Dumbledore.

“Did you punish him?” asked Chief Hawkeye.

“He had a black eye the next time we saw him.” said Harry.

Dialogue set.

"Really Miss Granger, must you say 'you said' every time you wish to confront a teacher?” said Snape as he massaged his temple.

Dialogue set.

"That might be the safest thing, get out of there, especially for who he really is." said Sirius.

Eighth paragraph.

"Still not a good enough excuse to have it done to you." said Remus.

"Yeah, we were insane when we were younger, but we never did that to each other." said Sirius.

Ninth paragraph, third sentence.

"What made him decide to have you do it?" asked Fred.

"He asked if I knew it, and I told him I didn't and I don't like to sing." said Dean with a pinkish tinge to his dark skin.

Ninth paragraph, fourth sentence.

"Well, I did want to look cute." said Lavender proudly.
"I wouldn't have called that cute." muttered Seamus.

Ninth paragraph, fifth sentence.

Neville laughed and blushed.

End of ninth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

"Oh come on! It doesn't say anything about making Malfoy kiss mine, yours and Hermione's shoes?" said Ron obviously upset.

Draco growled and blushed.

"I'm trying to repress that memory, I liked those shoes. It's a pity that I had to burn them." said Harry with a mock sorrowful look.

Tenth paragraph.

Eleventh paragraph, first sentence.

Several people turned and stared.

"I don't know about that, I felt sort of violated." said Dean with a nervous look to Harry.

Eleventh paragraph, second sentence.

"I wonder why you seem to enjoy it." said Lionus thoughtfully.

"Indeed." said Chief Hawkeye and Dumbledore together.

End of eleventh paragraph.

Twelfth paragraph.

"What the hell was he going to have you do on the desk?" asked Remus.

"He said he was going to have Harry sing and dance and tell jokes." said Ron.

"Harry telling a joke...that would take the Imperius curse to have that happen." said Fred. The twins dodged the pillow that the dark haired youth threw their way.

“We’re only saying you’re such a serious little chap.” said George.

Thirteenth paragraph.

Fourteenth paragraph.

Fifteenth paragraph.

The teachers, Rangers, Aurors, and other adults leaned forward in their chairs, though with Harry laying on top of the adults in the bowl, they could only listen closely.

Sixteenth paragraph.

Seventeenth paragraph.

Eighteenth paragraph.

“And you want to hide this attitude?” said Fred and George. “This is awesome!”

Nineteenth paragraph.

Twentieth paragraph.

“Never saw you chug a potion like that before.” said Ron.

“And it still didn’t take away the pain.” said Harry bitterly.

“Why weren’t you brought to me?” asked Madam Pomfrey angrily.

“I took a bone mending potion.” said Harry. “It healed up soon enough.”

Dialogue set.

“Was worse than when I landed in the hospital.” said Harry.

“What time?” asked Sirius.

“Every time.” said Harry.

Dialogue set,
“I didn’t want to go through that again.” whined Harry.

“Three guesses who he means by ‘They’ll’.” said Remus darkly.

Dialogue set, first sentence, end of parenthesis.

“Wow, so it only took you three times?” asked Nightstrike.

“Thank god it only took three times.” said Harry.

End of dialogue set.

“I was so innocent back then.” said Harry wistfully.

“That was last year.” said Dr. Clark thinking about it a bit further.

“You should have stayed innocent.” said Remus sternly. He wasn’t mad at Harry, he could never be angry at him, though he broke that little rule several times so far these past few weeks. He had a lot of things to make up to Harry about.

Sirius got so irked with him about all the stunts he pulled during the readings, that Remus had a giant checklist on the back of his door with several payback suggestions. The instance with him taping Harry’s mouth shut, the groundings, the…well…the list went on and on. On the side with the suggestions there were several things he could do that didn’t involve begging Sirius for money, though Sirius offered it many times without the need to ever repay.

There was: an entire evening telling Harry about his parents, (he’d of done that, but with Harry’s wounds, he needed all the sleep he could get) going down to the kitchens and baking him a massive amount of treacle (he had been making him some every other day, he didn’t want Harry getting sick) and…well, there wasn’t a lot of things he could come up with on his small vault account.

Sirius kept coming in and scratching some things on the payback side, things like: new wardrobe, new watch, gold clasps for his hair, and things for his room back at Night’s Rest. Remus told him off for that, he wanted to pay him back for the things he did. But Sirius only shrugged and told him that if he needed or wanted to get Harry something really special, all he had to do was ask.

Dialogue set, second sentence.

“I had to skip around the dang room and bad mouth the Cannons.” said Ron with disgust.

Dialogue set, fourth sentence.

“Oh, okay, this book really sucks.” said Ron turning red as Moody glared at him with both eyes.
“She asked for it.” growled Moody.
“Did she ask to be turned into a bowtruckle?” asked Tonks.

“It wasn’t any more homework then we did in our third year.” said Hermione.
“Yeah, but you took every single class.” said Harry with a kind smile.

“That’s the cue to just accept what she says and do it.” said Sirius quickly.

“Which is next year, best get ready for them so you don’t freak out.” said Remus.

“Harry could do it, and mine was still holding onto the actual face part.” said Ron.

“And you have every right to be proud.” said Mrs. McFinn with a smile.
“See, it pays to be tragic in that class.” said Ron with a snigger.

End of twenty-third paragraph.

“Um…didn’t Ron say he had drowned? “How was he going to come up with something for the month beyond that?” asked George.

“I had to say Harry brought me back to life, a way only known to him.” said Ron shrugging.

“So for Harry’s predictions he didn’t die?” asked Fred.

“I died saving a friend.” said Harry. “Then Ron brought me back with phoenix tears.”

“Did you plan this all out or something?” said Lee looking at the two in shock.

Twenty-fourth paragraph, first sentence.

“Still can’t believe we worked all that hard on them.” said Fred glumly.

Twenty-fourth paragraph, second sentence.

“Nothing wrong with doing deep research into that.” said Moody.

Twenty-fourth paragraph, third sentence.

Severus cringed slightly as every teacher rounded on them, including the headmaster.

“Why wasn’t I told?” shrieked McGonagall.

“He was a teacher.” said a few students sheepishly.

End of twenty-fourth paragraph.

“Well, you did have a few weeks to do so.” said Flitwick.

Twenty-fifth paragraph, first sentence.

“Oh Hagrid, how could you?” said Charlie teasingly.
“That is if they didn't set the parchments on fire.” said Ron in a hoarse whisper.

Even Remus snorted loudly.

“It was absolutely beautiful.” said Harry with a laugh.

“Sorry.” said Ron meekly.
“Yeah, she likes you and Potter.” said Zacharias snidely.

Before Ron or Hermione could even retort back, Harry laughed. “Food for thought, she doesn’t like you, how ugly do you have to be for that to happen?”

Zacharias blushed.

“Harry!” scolded Mrs. McFinn.

“Yes ma’am?” asked Harry sweetly as he looked up at her from her lap.

“Don’t say things like that, you shouldn’t stoop to his level.” said Mrs. McFinn, though a smile was just twitching to get out.

“Yes ma’am.” cooed Harry.

“Got any tips on how to take it easy with him?” muttered Remus.

“I’ve heard all about that,” said Mrs. McFinn hinting towards the battle he and with the teen.

Dr. Nicodemus listened in, he had a suspicion about the usually calm man’s outlashes.

Mrs. McFinn whispered in Remus’ ear. “Don’t treat him like a bad guy.”

Dr. Nicodemus frowned, he might have to have a talk with the man later that night.

“He’s got you there.” said Sirius with a laugh.

“It was getting a little old, and the gossip was so thick that you could drown in them.” said Harry.

“A lot of people said you.” said Hermione looking over to Harry.
“And I kept telling them to stop being stupid.” said Harry.

End of thirty-first paragraph.

“Beauxbatons: Girls, a little more graceful, Boys, a little more girly.” said Fred.

“Drumstang: Girls, stronger and more cynical, Boys, wouldn’t want to piss them off.” said George.

Thirty-second paragraph, second sentence.

“Ah yes, I would told off every time I would walk down any portrait lined corridor.” said Dumbledore.

Thirty-second paragraph, third sentence, first comma.

“That just stole their character.” said Sirius shaking his head. “It’s not as creepy when they look at you silently.”

End of thirty-second paragraph.

“The poor dear.” said Madam Pomfrey. A second year girl blushed. “I took after Filch with six bedpans the next time I saw him.”

Thirty-third paragraph.

Dialogue set.

McGonagall blushed heavily under the glares of several adults. “I apologize Longbottom.”

“That’s alright ma’am.” said Neville who was pink.

Thirty-fourth paragraph.

“I wish I could have seen that.” said Tonks wistfully.

Thirty-fifth paragraph.
“Who were you talking about?” asked Bill.

“Nothing.” said the twins quickly.

“Fred!” shouted Mrs. Weasley.

“Sorry Ron.” mumbled Fred.

“George!” shouted Mr. Weasley.

“Sorry Ron.” muttered George.

“I was just curious.” said Harry quickly.

Remus was looking down at Harry sternly, but slapped himself and smiled, “That’s okay, I know you didn’t want to enter.”

Harry stared at Remus in shock.

“Are you okay?” asked Sirius.

“Suddenly, I’m not all that sure.” said Remus softly. Before he had slapped himself, he could feel a snarl creeping up his face and his hair was bristling. The full moon came and went, and he did turn into a wolf, later on that night and Nightstrike did keep him in line as Sirius kept a vigil over Harry.

Something was going wrong, and he didn’t know what.

“The class was almost over and you hadn’t even begun on it.” said McGonagall.
“Not while others are watching and grading you as you do it.” said Terry.

“But you know, I’d rather face a dragon than a basilisk.” said Ernie.

“Or go down in the lake than the Forbidden Forest with a whole colony of acromantulas.” said Hannah with a shiver.

“Hang on, there’s no way Madam Maxime is that old.” said Parvati.

“Or Kakaroff, Dumbledore maybe, but he said he was only a hundred something.” said Ernie.

“I think something about that book might be messed up.” said Justin.

“I meant that the Heads were all injured, other people were the judges.” said Hermione.

“Then why not just say that?” asked Blaise quietly.

“What the hell kind of title is that for a book?” asked Dr. Clark.

“Because it was sort of common knowledge.” said Fred shrugging his shoulders.

“I wish she would have just sat down and talked to one of them.” said Harry.
“We tried to talk to her, but she wouldn’t listen much.” said Harry softly.

“Holy crap, how do you know that word?” asked Sirius.

Harry smirked.

“Maybe the hospital should hire you to get donations from some stingy people.” said Tonks with a laugh.

“Most people are, you just have to find the right ones.” said Bathilda, “But for that cause, you might be quite outnumbered.”

“I’m the twin that doesn’t like to fight with friends.” said George.

“I’m Fred, you’re George.” said Fred.

“Are you sure?” asked George.

“You know, I’m not sure.” said Fred.

“I know, I’m not too sure either.” said George.
“There’s no rules against students going down to the kitchen.” said Fred.

“Hogwarts always supports students getting extra nourishment, especially with all the walking and running we do.” said Sirius with a shrug.

“You were supposed to stay out of the forest, the third floor corridor, the Chamber of Secrets and Shrieking Shack...you have a strange choice of area to stay away from.” sneered Snape.

“They do.” said Ron.

“They do pretty much what they want, they get to make great meals, fix fires and stuff like that and they get to take care of hundreds of people.” said Harry.

“Not really, house-elves know more about magic than we do.” said Kingsley.

“House-elves began taking care of us, we didn’t go after them.” said Charlie.

“I love seeing her come down to me.” said Harry. “It’s like she’s delivering me hope.”

“That was nice to share your breakfast with her.” said Mrs. Weasley with a smile.

“Not what I wanted to read.” said Harry.
“That’s right, Cub, I’ll be right there.” said Sirius.

Sirius blinked as Remus choked on his laughter.

“I’ve never seen an owl drink orange juice.” said Dumbledore thoughtfully.

There was a pleasant feeling of anticipation in the air that day. Nobody was very attentive in lessons, being much more interested in the arrival that evening of the people from Beauxbatons and Durmstrang; even Potions was more bearable than usual, as it was half an hour shorter.

“He didn’t even get the chance to try any poisons.” said Seamus.

“It felt as if I was going to meet the Queen.” said Colin.

“I was amazed she didn’t mention your hair.” said Ron looking at Harry.

“I had the worst parts covered up by the hat.” said Harry.
“I thought it looked cute.” said Parvati with a frown.

“Not grand enough.” said Tonks.

“Well, when Hogwarts would go to other schools, we would take broomsticks. There is a special formation that we fly in.” said Dumbledore with a smile. “Our school is known for it’s flying abilities.”

“There is a way to Apparate on the Grounds, Granger.” said Snape shortly. “If you have permission from the Headmaster himself that is.”

“Where did your blanket go?” asked Sirius looking around.

“I left it upstairs, I figured we wouldn’t need it.” said Harry shrugging from where he laid.
“That’s crazy how you memorize stuff like that.” said George.

Forty-seventh paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Forty-eighth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“It could have been a dragon.” said the second year girl pouting slightly.

“It wasn’t that big.” said Ron.

Dialogue line.

Forty-ninth paragraph.

“Thank god we had Hagrid, without him, we wouldn’t have been able to care for those horses.” said a seventh year Care of Magical Creature N.E.W.Ts student.

Fiftieth paragraph.

“Too bad the horses couldn’t look as nice as the people inside.” said Fred.

Fifty-first paragraph.

“James would be so proud of you.” said Mrs. McFinn whispering in his ear. “You still have the skills he taught you.”

Fifty-second paragraph, first sentence.

“How do you get nominated for that job?” asked Lee.
“That’s one big woman.” said Seamus quietly.

Harry blushed.

“I don’t blame you, I’d be shocked too.” said Remus with a smirk.

“Look at Hagrid blush.” said Sirius to Remus with a gleeful smile.

“It’s about time he’s found someone.” said Remus kindly.

“Didn’t they think of wearing warm clothes for England?” asked Tonks.

“Why, what’s wrong with it?” asked Sirius wonderingly.

“It’s not like their palace.” said Harry while rolling his eyes.
“They were exploding all over his pumpkin patch.” said Harry at the questioning look at the adults around him.

“They didn’t think I could, till she saw me.” said Hagrid proudly.

“Ah now Harry.” said Fred.

“Don’t lose faith in our Hagrid.” said George.

“Never have, never will.” said Harry with a smile.

“That would not be good.” said Remus.
“You’re pretty relaxed today.” said Harry.

“He’s trying to be a bit more laid back.” said Sirius quickly.

“So how many Calming Draughts have you had today?” asked Harry with a smirk.

“Hey, now, I wouldn’t be pushing my luck if I were you.” said Remus with an equal smirk. He reached behind Harry’s knee and tickled it quickly.

“AH!” laughed Harry as he tried to move his legs away.

End of fifty-seventh paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Fifty-eighth paragraph.

The students that had been present last year stared at Harry, he knew to look at the lake before anyone else?

Dialogue line.

Fifty-ninth paragraph.

Sixtieth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“I’m impressed that you knew what that part of a ship was called.” said Dr. Clark.

Sixty-first paragraph.

Sixty-second paragraph, second sentence, first colon.

“Well that means that they’re from somewhere cold.” said Dr. Clark.

End of sixty-second paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Still can’t believe you’re civil to that man.” said Moody.

“He only made a mistake.” said Dumbledore.
“One time is a mistake, more than ten is deliberate.” said Moody.

Dialogue line.

Sixty-third paragraph, first sentence.

Several people snorted.

End of sixty-third paragraph.

Dialogue set, first sentence.

“Glad that you don’t trust him right away.” said Moony appreciatively.

End of dialogue set.

“A sip of Pepperup Potion will fix that in a second.” said George.

"Yeah and if they're from up north, then they should have a massive stock of it." said Fred.

End of chapter.

"I swear, Ron. You're in love with the guy." said Fred.

Ron blushed.

"That's enough, Fred." said Mrs. Weasley shortly.

"Who'd like to read next?" asked Leroy.

"Pass it over." said Rudolph.

"Hang on a minute, Sirius, can I have a moment?" asked Harry as he struggled to get up.

"Sure thing cub." said Sirius taking his hand and walking out the door with an arm around his godson.

Chapter End Notes
Thanks for reading, please review
Harry led the way to the small room off from the Great Hall. Sirius lagged behind Harry, watching him walk. His little baby had grown up and now look at him, walking tall and looking strong.

Harry in his police uniform, looked way too old to baby the way they were doing, but Harry always said that they could cuddle him all they wanted. Harry told them a while back that he wanted them to baby him now, because when he would get to spend the summer at Night’s Rest, he didn’t want to be smothered from overdue love and affection.

Harry finally stopped when they reached the small room at the end of the small corridor, entered and then turned to face Sirius.

“So what do you need Cub?” asked Sirius.

“What’s going on with Remus?” asked Harry.

Sirius blinked.

“What…what do you mean?” asked Sirius.

Harry sighed and pushed his glasses up closer to his eyes. “Well, we were bantering back and forth about punishments and what not, now…not so much.”

“He’s taking a step back and not freaking out so much. Why do you ask? Did you miss it?” asked Sirius.

“Not really, but…I just don’t want him exploding later.” said Harry softly as he leaned against a pillar.

“He won’t explode, you might apparently, but he won’t.” said Sirius with a smile. “Just relax, unless you do something extremely dangerous, he won’t flip out.”

Harry looked to the side, he was unsure how to feel about this, he didn’t want Remus to change, then again, these books were making everyone change.

“Now come on, I want to read what happens to you next!” said Sirius.

Harry sighed and they walked back into the Great Hall.

Uncle Rudolph waited till they sat down into the bowl before he continued on with the book.

“Chapter Sixteen” read Uncle Rudolph aloud.

“Say hello to my personal hell.” said Harry darkly.
“I didn’t think he was still young enough to be in school.” said Ron.

“Yeah, and Merlin was only a wizard.” said Charlie with a roll of his eyes.

“It’s my latest dream to commentate Krum’s Quidditch games.” said Lee excitedly.

“Oh sweet Jesus.” said Dr. Clark burying his head between his knees.

“I remember fighting over a marker with another woman at a Leo Sayer concert.” said Emmeline Vance fondly.

“Did you get kicked out for fighting.” said Charlie with a smirk.

“Don’t taint my memory with facts.” said Emmeline shortly.

“I do a pretty good Leo impersonation.” said Nightstrike softy in her ear. Emmeline blushed and giggled.

“My God, they were made for each other.” said Remus with a laugh.

“Were they really?” asked Sirius mischievously.
“I was told not to bring anything down with me, so my bag stayed upstairs.” said Harry.

Second paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“It’s not in their uniform list.” said Dean with a shrug. “Let’s face it, we’d freeze at Durmstang.”

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Third paragraph.

“Viktor actually found him really annoying.” said Hermione with a giggle.

“There’s something redeeming about him.” muttered Ron.

Dialogue set, second sentence,

“Is that one of the many reason why he liked you? You didn’t care about all that?” asked Ginny with a smile.

“Yeah, he thought it was really nice.” said Hermione also smiling.

End of dialogue set.

Fourth paragraph.

“I knew that was going to change once a few days were to pass.” said Hermione.

“And besides, there are many spare rooms for our guests.” said Dumbledore.

Dialogue line.

Fifth paragraph.

“From what I gather, the ceiling of their dining hall is just plain stone, and their plates are normal china.” said Dumbledore.
Sixth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Seventh paragraph, fourth sentence.

“We just shut up when the Headmaster shows up, we’re kind of laid back.” said Sirius with a smile.

End of seventh paragraph.

Dialogue set.

Eighth paragraph.

“Pompous stuck up snob.” muttered Tonks.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Ninth paragraph.

“You can strike up a conversation with anyone.” said Remus with a smile.

Tenth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Oh I love that, that was the only French dish that I could make correctly the first time.” said Mrs. McFinn.

Dialogue line.

Several people laughed.
“I may like food, but unless Harry cooks it, I’m not trying anything exotic.” said Ron stubbornly.

“Why is that?” asked Fred.

“Harry knows what I can stomach.” said Ron.

“Sea Urchins aren’t one of them.” said Harry.

“You really like colors don’t you?” asked Rudolph as he looked up from the book.

“Impressive that you drew to that conclusion that swiftly.” said Lionus.

Bill sat up straight…that description, sounded like…

“Ron’s gargling in his throat, and you’re just fine?” asked Fred.

“You bisexual or something?” said George.

Harry blinked. “I don’t think so…”

“His mind is just too elevated for a veela’s power to overcome him that easily.” whispered Dumbledore to Leroy.
“You didn’t even try it.” said Hermione with a smirk.

“You weren’t looking.” said Dean.

“She’s half-Veela.” said Bill softly.

“And you’re dating her? Good luck with that.” said Leroy.

“They can be sort of testy.” said Rudolph.

“Some were even drooling.” said Parvati.

“And that pissed off a lot of girlfriends.” said Lavender.

Cho blushed heavily.

“No one cares.” said a few boys.
“Well thank god Percy wasn’t there, his smug face…” said Fred.
“I’d’ve beaten him.” said George.

“No seconds, Ron.” said Dean.

“We don’t know what the hell he does or who he is.” said Neville.

“Casket in my life is not a good thing.” said Harry softly.
Sirius whimpered slightly.

“We don’t know what the hell he does or who he is.” said Neville.

“Both.” said a few people.
“He and I did indeed have different styles.” said Dumbledore with a smile.

Dialogue set.

Twenty-third paragraph.

Twenty-fourth paragraph, first sentence.

“Who keeps the Goblet when it’s not Triwizard Tournament time?” asked Ron.

“It stays with the International Department of Magical Education.” said Rivers.

End of twenty-fourth paragraph.

“I couldn’t believe that, someone was actually shorter than you.” said Ron.

“You are really asking for it.” said Harry sending a stern look over to Ron.

Dialogue set.

“Sounds like the perfect competition for Potter.” said Tempest with a laugh.

“I didn’t want to sign up, I wanted a nice normal year.” said Harry. “For a change.”

Twenty-fifth paragraph.

Dialogue set.

“How can a cup choose?” asked Dr. Clark. “Is it random?”

“The cup actually tests the magical signatures that each person has.” said Dumbledore.

“Magical signatures?” asked Mrs. McFinn.

“That’s right. As each person has a unique wand and core, each person has their own signature.” said Lionus. “It’s like DNA.”

“So the cup registered the…uh faker’s signature instead of Harry’s?” asked Tonks quietly.

“Correct, but it didn’t matter, Crouch had created a whole other school, so his signature would be the only available candidate.” said Dumbledore.

“But how does a signature say that a student is more powerful than another?” asked Hermione.

“The signature also is a diary of sorts, of everything that the person has done in their past life, the grades and the spells they had mastered for instance.” said Dumbledore. “For example…if I may…
Mr. Diggory was easily one of the top students in the school, a remarkable wizard.”

Mrs. Diggory whimpered slightly.

Twenty-sixth paragraph.

“I’m amazed he didn’t burn himself.” said Harry softly. “The thing looked like it was on fire in the casket.”

Twenty-seventh paragraph.

Dialogue set.

“And to anyone who wants to mess with it.” said Sirius with a snarl.

Dialogue set.

“Thank goodness.” said Mrs. McFinn. She looked over at Harry. “You don’t need to do anything dangerous.”

Dialogue set, second sentence.

“Even if you didn’t want to sign up at all, there is no going back once someone else volunteers you.” said Harry bitterly.

End of dialogue set.

“Last semi-decent night of sleep I had.” said Harry.

“You and me both.” thought Dumbledore.

Dialogue set, third sentence.

“So you think.” said Dumbledore with a smile.

“Fred! George!” screeched Mrs. Weasley.

“They didn’t get very far mum.” said Ron.
“Yeah, we weren’t in the same year.” said Fred.

Remus opened his mouth, but gulped down whatever he was going to say.

Harry stared at Remus. “What the…?”

“Tell me you don’t try.” said Dr. Clark.

“I don’t even try.” said Harry.

“Did you try and think of a way to do it?” asked Colin eagerly.

“Out of respect for Dumbledore, I did not.” said Harry solemnly.

“Imagining your anger, was a great motivator to not try.” said Harry.

“My god, I sound like a stalker.” said Ron.

“That’s nice.” said Mrs. McFinn.
“What a nice teacher.” said Emmeline scoffing.

“It was a drop of pumpkin juice.” groaned Harry.

“There’s a shock.” muttered Moody.

“Nothing escapes you does it boy?” said Chief Hawkeye with a laugh.
“The faker and you don’t like that man all that much.” said Kingsley.

Thirty-seventh paragraph, second sentence.

“Of course not, not with the Champion selection going to happen that day.” said a first year Hufflepuff.

End of thirty-seventh paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“And I got up at dawn.” said the now fourth year.

Dialogue set, second sentence, first pause.

“Oh Christ.” said Harry slapping a hand to his head.

“Yeah, that’s what made me think you did it.” said Ron.

End of dialogue set.

Thirty-eighth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Fred!” shouted Mrs. Weasley.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Thirty-ninth paragraph.
“Sort of normal when it comes to her.” said Lee with a shrug.

Dialogue line.

Fortieth paragraph.

“I’m the dramatic one.” said Fred with a wave.

Forty-first paragraph, second sentence, second comma.

“I’d be upset, but serves you both right.” said Mrs. Weasley as her husband chuckled slightly.

End of forty-first paragraph.

Mr. Weasley, Sirius and Remus laughed loudly.

Forty-second paragraph.

Dialogue set, fourth sentence, second comma.

Said Ravenclaw student blushed.

End of dialogue set.

“We had the third nicest beards in school.” said Fred proudly.

Forty-third paragraph.

Forty-fourth paragraph, second sentence.

“Will those show up tonight?” asked Mrs. McFinn eagerly.

“Yes, my lady, they will.” said Dumbledore with a bright smile.
End of forty-fourth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Forty-fifth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Harry ducked his head. “I should have phrased that differently.”

Dialogue line.

Mr. Diggory scowled over to Seamus, while Mrs. Diggory only had a watery smile.

Dialogue line.

Forty-sixth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“I felt like an idiot.” laughed Harry quietly.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“He beat out Angelina, he had to be a pretty strong wizard.” said Ginny.

“Too right he was!” shouted Justin.

“Take it easy Justin.” said Professor Sprout.

Dialogue line.
Forty-seventh paragraph.

“Not this again.” muttered a few Slytherin students.

Forty-eighth paragraph.

“That means their names were accepted.” said Dumbledore explaining to Mrs. McFinn and Dr. Clark.

Fifty-first paragraph

“Wonder what the other school’s younger students were doing while they were here?” asked a second year Ravenclaw.

Fifty-second paragraph.
“That answered that question.” said Charlie.

Fifty-third paragraph

Dialogue line.

“Never, I could find that place in my sleep.” said Harry with a smile.

Suddenly, little balls of light came out of the book and spun around the room.

“What’s so important about this moment?” wondered Harry out loud.

“Why do we need to see something like this?” asked Fred. The balls flew to each person’s chest and the Great Hall went black.

They were deposited inside of Hagrid’s hut, it was dark, obviously in the middle of the night, and Fang was huddled on the floor. There was no fire in the fireplace and the bed looked unslept in. Suddenly the door opened and Harry came inside.

“Harry! What are you doing out so late?” asked Mrs. McFinn.

“When is this?” asked Dr. Clark.

“Judging by Hagrid’s lacking presence, I’d say second year.” said Dumbledore.

Younger Harry closed the door behind himself, and patted Fang’s head absently. On closer inspection, Harry’s eyes were half closed.

“Explains how I don’t remember this.” said Harry softly.

“You’re sleepwalking.” said Remus in a hushed voice.

“I don’t remember you ever having sleepwalked before.” said Dr. Clark.

“Except that one time…but he was a little bit awake.” said Mrs. McFinn.

“What time?” asked Harry.

“Nothing sweetheart.” said Mrs. McFinn quickly.

Younger Harry and Fang climbed onto the bed and laid down. Younger Harry was whimpering slightly as he stroked Fang’s fur.

“I’m sorry Hagrid, I should have it solved by now, I’m...so sorry.”

The balls of light left their bodies and they were left with Harry’s soft sobbing, dancing about their brains.

“Oh, Harry.” said Sirius softly. The people in the bowl, as well as Leroy and Rudolph engulfed Harry in a large hug.

I’m going to get crushed with all this hugging. thought Harry.

It was a few minutes, especially after Hagrid came over and hugged Harry, (not as tightly as he would have normally, he was doing his best to be gentle) that they finally continued on.

Dialogue line.

Fifty-fourth paragraph, second sentence.
“Dang, we need to take you somewhere and get you fixed up.” said Leroy shaking his head.

Fifty-fourth paragraph, fourth sentence.
Hagrid blushed, “Yeah, Olympe told me she liked me the way I normally am.”
“Aw, that’s cute.” said a few girls and Leroy.

End of fifty-fourth paragraph.

Dialogue line.
“Let’s hope they finish each other off.” muttered George.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.
“Sorry Hagrid.” said Ron quietly.

Fifty-fifth paragraph.
“I had never seen it played.” said Hagrid sheepishly.

Dialogue line.
“We’ve seen what the first task was, just on a smaller scale.” said Ron.
“Nice play on words.” said Harry with a laugh.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, first sentence.

“Go ahead and spoil it for them.” said Sirius eagerly. He knew what was going to happen, but all this secrecy stuff was going to drive him nuts.

End of dialogue set.

Fifty-sixth paragraph, first sentence.

“You’re getting a lot better, Hagrid.” said Professor Sprout.

“We’re all very proud of you.” said Dumbledore with a smile.

End of fifty-sixth paragraph.

Fifty-seventh paragraph, first sentence, second comma, fifth word.

“One of the best days we spent down at his place.” said Ron.

Fifty-seventh paragraph.

A few people laughed.

Dialogue set.

“And Hagrid knows more about different creatures than anyone else.” said Ernie.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, first sentence.

“That is true.” said Tempest looking haughty. “Centaurs in the Rangers are exceedingly rare.”
“Only if they were severely abused like Dobby.” said Hannah softly.

“Take it it’s not the best smelling.” said George.

“That’s not authentic stuff.” said Harry. “Dr. Clark used the real stuff.”

“Shut up.” said Dr. Clark playfully smacking the back of Harry’s head.

“Didn’t really connect it that he was trying to impress someone.” said Harry.
“You deserve a relationship, with someone else besides animals.” said Charlie with a smile. “I don’t mean it like that you arse.” he muttered as he slammed his elbow in his brother’s side.

End of sixty-second paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Wow, are you jealous Hermione?” said Blaise with a smirk.

Hermione blushed.

Sixty-third paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Hagrid blushed, while Mr. Weasley smacked the back of his youngest son’s head.

Sixty-fourth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Sixty-fifth paragraph.

Sixty-sixth paragraph.

“You can’t win them all.” said Fred.

“But we might win the next fight.” said George sending a look over to the form that was Umbridge.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Sixty-seventh paragraph.

“I’m pretty impatient when it comes to some things.” said Harry with a laugh.

Sixty-eighth paragraph, third sentence.

“…And he just joined the ranks of creepy along with Lockhart.” said Madam Hooch.
End of sixty-eighth paragraph.

Dialogue set.

“We’ve used that room a lot, lately.” said Sirius with a smile.

Sixty-ninth paragraph.

“Apparently you weren’t the only impatient one.” said Remus ruffling the teen’s hair.

Dialogue line.

Seventieth paragraph.

Seventy-first paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Shock.” said Dr. Clark sarcastically.

“Why do you figure?” asked Sirius.

“It kept mentioning him, it couldn’t be anyone else,” said Dr. Clark with a shrug, “that and he’s a professional player, he beats out everyone else.”

“Wow, so Harry already figured him to be the champion! That’s so cool!” said Dennis.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

“Only because he didn’t give the rest of his students a chance.” said George.

“Yeah, he was putting down all the other students, we heard him critique almost everyone.” said Fred.

Seventy-second paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.
“Knew he loved that.” said Harry. “He wouldn’t shut up about her.”

Dialogue set.

“They should have known coming here that they weren’t all going to be chosen.” said Ginny.

“Yeah, we felt so bad, we tried to console them.” said Fred.

“Angelina and Alicia took it the wrong way and took after us.” said George.

“That’s the story you’re selling today?” said the Chasers sternly.

“Uh….” said the twins leaning away slightly.

Seventy-third paragraph.

Seventy-fourth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

The Hufflepuff students cheered respectively.

Dialogue set, third sentence.

“I wish he had never put his name in.” said Mrs. Diggory wiping her eyes.

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue set.

Seventy-fifth paragraph.

Seventy-sixth paragraph.

“This isn’t good.” said Dr. Clark.

End of chapter.

Dr. Clark and Mrs. McFinn turned and stared at Harry.

“I didn’t put my name in.” said Harry quickly.
“This tournament is dangerous, isn’t it?” asked Mrs. McFinn.

“Very much so.” said Dumbledore sadly.

“Why do all the dangerous things happen to you?” Dr. Clark.

“Beats me.” said Harry with a shrug.

“So who wants to read now?” asked Rudolph.

“I will.” said Ernie.

Ernie took the book and read “Chapter Seventeen.”

“Just keeps getting better and better.” said Hermione shaking her head.
Before they started the next chapter, they decided to enjoy a bit of lunch.

“Harry?” said Remus handing the youth a plate.

“Hmm?” said Harry looking up. He had been focusing on the stones on the floor before him.

“You hungry?” asked Remus extending the plate a little further.

“I don’t think I’ll be hungry for a while.” said Harry softly.

Mrs. Diggory laid her fork down slowly and looked over to the young man.

“Here Potter.” said Snape standing up and handing a nutrient potion phial to the Gryffindor.

“Not too sure if I can even get that down.” said Harry glumly.

“Either you find a way to keep it down, or I hold you down and pour it down your throat.” said Snape sternly.

“Oh you’d make a great father.” said Mrs. McFinn sarcastically. She took the phial from the sour looking man and handed it to Harry. “Can you drink this for me?”

Harry looked at the phial and then at Mrs. McFinn. He took the phial and drank it’s contents slowly.

“How do you do that?” asked Remus quietly.

Mrs. McFinn just smiled. “I’m a mommy.”

First paragraph.

“No you heard right.” said Remus as he sat beside Harry and wrapped his arm around the young man. He was slightly shocked when Harry leaned into him. “You sure you’re feeling alright?”

“I don’t think I’m going to be feeling alright until this book is done.” said Harry quietly.

Second paragraph.

“That was the first time I had actually seen you frightened.” said McGonagall quietly.
“I told him you were frightened, and that I knew for a fact you didn’t put your name in.” said McGonagall.

“How did you know?” asked Zacharias.

“I had kept an eye on him, with all the dangerous things he had done, I wasn’t going to let another year go by with him risking his life.” said McGonagall.

“They believe you.” said Mrs. Weasley soothingly.

Ron cringed slightly.

“Would rather not if you don’t mind.” said George.

“His eyes were like really small pinpricks.” said Angelina.

“I could hardly breathe.” said Harry quietly. “I’ve felt like that before, but I…”

Suddenly the book in Ernie’s hands shot out several balls of light.

“DON’T YOU DARE!” shouted Harry loudly.

The balls froze in midair and collapsed back into the book.
People turned and stared at Harry.

“I’m drawing a line at that.” said Harry sternly.

“Harry…” said Sirius.

“You don’t need to know that.” said Harry quickly. “And I’m not sharing.”

Dialogue line.

“There was nothing to smile about.” said Dumbledore. “Though I should have given you some sign that I was there for you.”

“You were busy.” said Harry.

Eighth paragraph, third sentence, eighth word.

“It was like I was watchin’ you walk right into danger.” said Hagrid quietly.

End of eighth paragraph.

“I couldn’t feel the warm reaching me, despite how big it was.” said Harry.

Ninth paragraph.

“I swear, the portraits here are the fastest gossip chain in the entire world.” said Bill rolling his eyes.

Tenth paragraph, second sentence.

“Ever notice Harry gets really dramatic around Halloween?” asked Justin.

“I don’t, my life does.” said Harry.

End of tenth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Nope, he’s there to join you lot.” said Charlie.
“I wish someone could have stepped up and said Harry wouldn’t have to take part.” said Mrs. Weasley.

“It’s a binding magical contract, there was nothing we could do.” said Dumbledore.

“Well, if he had to perform, did it have to be what the other three were doing?” asked Dr. Clark.

“Well…” said Dumbledore.

“He could have just herded bunnies or something, he didn’t need to do anything dangerous.” said Mrs. McFinn.

Dumbledore looked at the floor, “I hadn’t thought of him doing age appropriate tasks.” he said quietly.

Eleventh paragraph.

“You say one word, and I’ll come over and beat the snot out of you.” muttered Harry darkly to the red headed teen.

“Touchy touchy…” said Ron with a smirk.

Twelfth paragraph.

Dialogue set, second sentence.

“Bagman likes women his own age right?” asked Remus quietly to Sirius.

“Oh yeah…he’s a big flirt.” said Tonks. “He just likes playing with kids.”

Remus’ eyes grew large.

“Not what I meant.” said Tonks quickly.

End of dialogue set.

“Bet that knocked them for a loop.” said Dr. Clark.

Thirteenth paragraph.

“He’s not joking.” said Fred.

“And besides…” said George.

“Vernon Dursley could come up with a better joke than that.” said Fred.
“Politely bewildered?” asked Sirius.

“He didn’t look as pissed as the other two were getting.” said Harry softly.

“But he didn’t put his name in! Isn’t there anything in the rules about people signing other people up?” asked Mrs. McFinn worriedly.

“There isn’t but there should be.” said Madam Bones.

“I wasn’t a little boy.” said Harry shortly.

“Of course you’re not…little boy…” said Remus teasingly.

“You really don’t want those cookies again do you?” said Harry darkly.

“Come on, Harry, lighten up!” said George.

“Yeah, you’re killing the Halloween mood.” said Fred.

“Look how red his face is getting.” said Sirius looking at his young godson.
“Oh he’s a real piece of work.” said Tonks rolling her eyes.

“Hey!” said Fred.

“We didn’t plan it.” said George.

“It’s some nutter’s plot to kill one of our students.” said Fred.

“Yeah, he’d bully his younger students.” said Bill.

“You son of a …” said Sirius.

Mrs. McFinn coughed loudly.

Sirius stopped in his vocal tracks.

“Severus, would you please stop seeing Harry as his father!” scolded McGonagall.

“Way to get back at him.” muttered Sirius quietly.
“I was trying to see if he was pissed or not.” said Harry. “Or if he would believe me.”

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, second sentence.

“I was expecting him to slam me into the wall and demand an answer.” said Harry.

“Why would you think I would do that?” asked Dumbledore quickly. His face wrought with shock.

“I don’t know, it’s what I sort of come to expect when stuff like that happens.” said Harry with a shrug.

People about the Great Hall snarled and growled.

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

Sirius whistled. “He’s covering all the bases.”

“I had to be sure.” said Dumbledore. “Before I thought the worst.”

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Never to me.” said Dumbledore.

“Except the one time.” said Harry.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Not with a whole school full of underage students who wanted to join in.” said McGonagall sternly.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

Twentieth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“I’m willing to leave school for the year, if it means I don’t have to compete, as long as I can go to the Weasleys.” said Harry.

Twenty-first paragraph, second sentence.

Dumbledore looked thoughtful. This would have been when he was under Voldemort’s control, was this a flicker of the glamour charm fading?

End of twenty-first paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Whether they put them in themselves or not.” said Harry glumly.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, third sentence.

“He was ugly to start with.” muttered a seventh year Hufflepuff.

End of dialogue set.

“True, if Harry’s name was put under Hogwarts.” said Dumbledore.

“Out of curiosity, what school was Harry’s name put under?” asked Mr. Weasley.

“We only found out what school it was at the end, when the name was listed as a Tournament winner.” said Dumbledore.

“What school was it?” asked Sirius.

“It was no school that exists.” said Dumbledore.

“Why are you dancing around the question?” asked Dr. Clark.

Dumbledore looked up at the ceiling, feigning deafness. The sight of the name on the Goblet of Fire at the end of last school year chilled him straight to the bone.
Dialog line.

Dialogue set, second sentence.

“Big loss.” muttered a sixth year Slytherin.

End of dialogue set.

“He can’t, not when he has a student entered in the Tournament.” said Moody with a gruff laugh.

Dialogue set.

Moody began to growl. “He’s done his homework on me alright.”

Twenty-second paragraph.

Dialog line.

Twenty-third paragraph.

“Nothing escapes you my boy.” said Dumbledore with a smile.

“I tend to look at an aggressive person’s hands…” said Harry quietly.

The smile left Dumbledore’s face.

Dialog line.

“Kind of gutsy for him to blow his cover like that,” said Fred.

“He’d have to, to make himself look more like the real thing,” said Mr. Weasley.

Dialog line.

“Look at who the kid is, there’s your reason.” said Kingsley.
“Cause I learned not to complain while others were shouting.” said Harry softly.

“I didn’t think I could hate the Dursleys any more than I already do.” said Remus darkly.

“Not Harry, he didn’t even want to go through this.” said Neville.

“Pfft, we make more than four hundred times that a month in tribute money.” scoffed Rudolph.
“And that’s with us not having to do a damn thing.”

“Someone’s hoping he’ll die for it.” said Moody.

“This is getting old.” said Moody slapping a hand over his good eye.

“He’s telling the truth, and giving himself away.” said Hannah.

“And seven out of ten times, I’m right.” said Moody sharply.

“Potter would benefit with that.” said Moody.
“No he wouldn’t! I don’t want my Cub looking over his shoulder every five seconds.” said Sirius patting Harry’s shoulder.

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

“Now he’s tooting his own horn.” muttered Hermione.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

“Yeah, cause I sort of doubt that Cedric would have even registered if Harry’s name was under Hogwarts.” said Fred.

“How dare you!” shouted Mr. Diggory.

“Did your son take on a basilisk on his own? Or a whole, what did you call it? Murder of Dementors?” said George.

“And that’s just some of the stuff he’s done on his own.” said Fred.

Dialogue set, first sentence.

“Still hope you don’t hold that against me, Albus.” said Moody.

“Of course not, it was an honest mistake.” said Albus soothingly.

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue set.

“Oooh, that hurts.” said Fred.

“If he was a Death Eater, how come Durmstang had him as a Headmaster?” asked George.

“Its thanks to Fudge that he got the job, as well as I.” said Dumbledore.

“What?” asked Bill.

“I was giving him another chance, Alastor,” Dumbledore looked over at Moody. “Felt otherwise.”

“Still don’t trust another one of your…deserving few…” said Moody sending a quick glare over to Snape.

Dialogue set, third sentence.

Harry blushed slightly.

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Which also means; ‘try it, and I’ll tell you you’re wrong.’” said Ernie.

Twenty-fifth paragraph.

“Yeah, even before being a pro-Beater, he wasn’t the brightest bulb in the box.” said Remus.

Dialogue line.

Twenty-sixth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Poor guy.” said Ron.

“Yeah, it’s sort of sick to hear about someone who’s going to end up gone and you listen to them as they’re being enchanted and forced to do things.” said Hermione.

“…Yeah…that too.” said Ron. “I was mostly just thinking about the whole enchanted part, not so much the dead part yet.”

Twenty-seventh paragraph.

“I noticed that too…but I just thought he was feeling the after-effects of not having a house-elf to look after him.” said Percy.

“Good thing Winky wasn’t there, she’d of been killed at that house, or worked to death.” said Hermione.
“After what I’ve seen and heard Harry will win that easily.” said Dr. Clark proudly.

“Harry’s got that already, so onto the next task?” asked Padma.

Hagrid blushed.

“Ouch, that sucks.” said Bill.

“Yeah, I can’t figure that they’ll pay attention to that rule.” said Mrs. McFinn. “I’d be sneaking information as quickly as I could to my student.”

“So…out of four years, you’ve only had two end of the term exams?” asked Sirius. “That is so not fair.”

“Suck it up.” said Harry with a smirk.

“He doesn’t mean it.” said Percy indignantly.
“Don’t you think you should try and console Harry and reassure him that he’ll be alright?” asked Mrs. Weasley.

Dumbledore looked down shamefully.

“Did you remember any of the French lessons?” asked Mrs. McFinn.

“Not one word.” said Harry. “I remember Officer McFinn’s Italian lessons, but not the French.”

“Well, I can understand that, we did go to a lot of Italian restaurants.” said Mrs. McFinn with a smile.

“That’s what you think.” said Harry with a smirk.

“That’s right!” shouted Lee.

“I was still in shock.” said Harry.

“You should have come to the Hospital Wing.” said Madam Pomfrey quickly.

“Not that kind of shock.” said Harry just as quickly.
Dialogue line.
“I thought he would believe me.” said Harry quietly.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, second sentence.
“Little did I know, that wasn’t going to be the biggest non-believer.” said Harry sourly.

End of dialogue set.

Thirty-first paragraph.

Thirty-third paragraph, first sentence.
Ron looked down shamefully.

End of thirty-third paragraph.
“Still didn’t want to be in it.” said Harry.
Ron winced and closed eyes.

Thirty-fourth paragraph.
“Not the best treat to have, death-defying stunts.” said Fred.
“Where you could actually die.” said George.

Thirty-fifth paragraph.
“They were mostly likely wanting you to be on the ground in a pool of your own blood.” said Moody.
“ALASTOR!” squeaked Professor Flitwick as he tried to steady Professor McGonagall as she began to wail and shiver uncontrollably.
“What’s gotten into her?” asked Remus.
“She found Harry first, right after the incident.” said Dumbledore quietly.

Thirty-sixth paragraph.

Thirty-seventh paragraph.

Thirty-eighth paragraph, second sentence, first pause.

Mrs. McFinn whimpered.

End of thirty-eighth paragraph.

“Didn’t stop him from trying to attack the school, through a goddamn book, did it?” snarled Bill.

Thirty-ninth paragraph.

“I didn’t want to remember that.” said Mrs. Weasley.

Fortieth paragraph.

“I don’t even get a reprieve from my House guard.” said Harry with a slight laugh.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Forty-first paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Sorry, Harry.” said Fred.

"How did you do it without getting a beard? Brilliant!” roared George.
“We just figured that you were being sneaky. We didn’t know you weren’t intending to enter.” said George.

Dialogue line.

Forty-second paragraph.

“Oops.” said Angelina.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“You were going to go and get sick again weren’t you?” asked Remus quickly.

Harry averted his gaze and looked on the floor. “I can’t control that.”

Remus flinched, “I-I know, but…I’ll still worry.”

Forty-third paragraph, first sentence.

Several Gryffindors shifted themselves, they hadn’t noticed.

Forty-third paragraph, third sentence.

“That those peanuts were painful coming back up.” said Harry softly.

End of forty-third paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“He didn’t even bother coming up with a plausible story!” shouted Fred to the form Umbridge had been forced to take.

Forty-fourth paragraph.
Forty-fifth paragraph, first sentence.

“I needed the both of them, and they weren’t there!” thought Harry viciously. Harry shook his head, where the hell did that come from?

End of forty-fifth paragraph.

Forty-sixth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Forty-seventh paragraph, first sentence.

Ron closed his eyes, preparing for the explosion waiting to happen.

End of forty-seventh paragraph.

“Were you just enjoying the sight?” asked Charlie.

“To be honest, I wouldn’t help either.” said Sirius. “More fun to watch.”

Dialogue line.

“Say what?” said Bill. “Didn’t he tell you he didn’t put his name in?”

Dialogue line.

“What the hell is going on with you?” asked Dr. Clark.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“I can sort of see Ron’s point, Harry’s brilliant, he’d find a way easily.” said Terry.
Really, you need to ask that?” asked Draco.

“So I didn’t say it.” said Harry.

“Lie? Harry? He can’t lie!” said a first year.

“Yeah, I don’t think he really knows how.” said another first year.

“This won’t end well.” said Remus faintly.

“You can say that again.” said Nightstrike.

“You’re not doing a good job, boy.” said Tempest stiffly. “If you’re trying to not to look that way.”

“Harry didn’t even go to bed that night.” said Dean.

“Yeah, I didn’t see him.” said Seamus.

“He was in the bathroom, all night, he kept throwing up.” said Neville gently. “I never saw you look so awful before.”
“I don’t remember ever feeling so awful.” said Harry coldly.

The book in Ernie’s hands began to shake and then smoke began to pour slowly out of the book.

“This again?” asked Fred.

“We didn’t do anything this time!” said Ernie quickly as the smoke entrapped everyone.

Chapter End Notes

Thanks for reading, please review
They found themselves in the spiral staircase of the Owlery. The sharp fall wind blew around them and scattered the small bits of straw and stray feathers down onto the steps. The steps were littered with owl droppings and the odd owl pellet made up of some poor unfortunate vermin.

“What the hell, what are we doing here?” asked Sirius. “I didn’t like this place when I was here, this place stinks, especially in dog-form.”

“I don’t know.” said Harry. “I’m not too sure why I’m here.”

“Must be another memory he modified on himself.” said Moody darkly.

Harry looked at Moody quickly.

“I hope this doesn’t become a habit.” said Dumbledore thoughtfully.

“I hope so too.” said Harry. “I’d rather not have holes in my history.”

They watched as last year’s Harry came walking up the steps with a letter in his hands. “Hedwig! Hope you’re up for a trip to Diagon Alley. I’m going to need a book…”

“On what, how to photograph better?” came a voice coming from atop the stairs. The Watchers looked over and saw Ron coming out of Owlery. He had a scowl on his face and his fists were clenched.

Younger Harry groaned. “Ron, for the hundredth time, I didn’t put my name in.”

“Sure, whatever you say.” said Ron darkly.

“I don’t think I want to see this.” said Ron.

“I get the feeling I don’t want to see this either.” said Harry.

They watched as Harry shook his head and sighed. “I gotta get this letter mailed off, we’ll talk later.” He climbed up more steps, but Ron refused to let him past.

“We’re talking now.” said Ron angrily.
“This isn’t talking, this is being a brat.” said Sirius.

“Ronald!” scolded Mrs. Weasley.

“Mum! I don’t remember this happening!” said Ron quickly.

“Listen Ron, you’re pissed, I got that, but I didn’t do anything. I didn’t put my name in and I don’t want to take part in this thing. We’ll talk later when we’ve both calmed down; you do your best thinking when you’re calmer.”

“So you’re saying I’m stupid?” said Ron quickly. His face was turning red from withheld anger.

“What the…Evel Knieval can’t make that jump!” said Chief Hawkeye. “He wasn’t speaking personally, lots of people think better calmer.”

“Harry doesn’t, he thinks best on his feet.” said Sirius proudly. He was however getting pretty worried that Harry might get into a fight with his best friend, neither of them would come out of that unscathed, both physically and emotionally.

“I never said you were stupid, I’m just saying we both need to calm down.” said Harry looking at Ron with a crooked eyebrow.

“I am calm!” said Ron hotly.

“The hell you are.” said Remus quietly.

Harry looked at him in disbelief.”Ron…”

“You’re always the best at everything! Quidditch, classes, money, everything!” shouted Ron.

“You whup my ass every time during chess!” said Harry quickly. It was obvious Harry was trying to calm Ron down, and it was even more obvious that Ron wasn’t ready to do so.

“How do I know you aren’t faking it? How do I know you aren’t holding back like we do for Hermione?”

No one was talking, they were staring in shock at Ron and Harry. Ron was getting angrier and angrier and he was showing signs of aggression.

“I really don’t remember this.” said Ron quickly as he watched his younger self call Harry very foul names. “What the hell is wrong with me?”

“I’m amazed you aren’t standing up for yourself.” said Leroy looking over at his nephew; he threw his arm around him protectively.
“I don’t know why I wasn’t fighting back.” said Harry.

Finally, the young Weasley’s anger over came him completely and he gave Harry a powerful shove, out the open window!

“Oh my god!” shouted Dr. Clark.

“Harry!” shouted most of the adults and students.

They went through the stone wall and saw Harry was hanging onto the ledge about ten feet down. His feet were dangling in the air and his fingertips digging into the stone was the only thing stopping him from falling.

“Ron!” shouted Harry from his precarious perch.

They watched in shock as Ron merely looked out the window. “Come on, a Champion should be able to get out of that!”

And then he walked away and down the stairs.

“What the hell was wrong with me?” yelled Ron looking horrified.

“I don’t know, but I’m getting ready to beat it out of you!” said Charlie angrily.

Ron sank to his knees, in obvious distress over what he had done.

The Watchers watched as Harry strained and pulled himself up the side of the tower. “What I wouldn’t give to have my summer bag!” he groaned as he climbed up. He reached up to try and grab onto another open space, but the stone came loose and the Watchers watched in horror as Harry fell through the open air!

“Harry!” shouted Remus.

“NO!” said Sirius and he tried to swipe at the empty space to latch onto the boy’s hand.

“This already happened!” said Harry pulling his godfather back out of instinct.

“Ron, you’d better do something massively good REALLY soon, or I’m going to…” said Sirius angrily rounding on Ron.

“What’ve I done?” said Ron, looking horrified.

Suddenly, the scene shifted, like a Recollection Scroll. They were deposited in the Great Hall, and the students inside were enjoying lunch. Ron was there, but Harry wasn’t.

“Wait! How did you survive that fall?” asked Charlie. “You aren’t here, but you’re standing here.”

“How could I do that?” asked Ron, guilt tearing through his throat. “How could I just walk away?”
“Ron, where’s Harry?” asked the Hermione from the past.

“Don’t care.” said Ron quickly.

Hermione stared at Ron over their plate of sandwiches.

“Hang on, where are you at?” asked George to Harry.

Harry looked around and then looked up, “There I am.” said Harry pointing up.

The Watchers turned and looked up as well. They could just make out a dark outline up into the rafters.

“Maybe we should just automatically look up when we’re doing stuff like this.” said Dennis shakily.

“Weasley, where is Potter, I wanted to speak with him.” said McGonagall walking up to the seated Gryffindor.

“He went to go send an owl a while ago.” said Ron in a bored voice.

“You didn’t mention to her that you left Harry to pretty much die.” snarled Ernie.

“Look who’s talking!” snapped Ron.

“I don’t think either one of you have a leg to stand on.” snarled Moody.

“Well, go find him, I need to speak to him.” said McGonagall. “It’s about the tournament.”

“Why did you want to talk to him about?” asked Rudolph.

“I wanted to make sure he was alright and to have him give me an account of what he did the day of the Goblet’s choosing, I wanted to find out who did it.” said McGonagall. “It seems I should have asked someone else.”

Ron grumbled and stomped out of the Great Hall.

“What’s his problem.” said Hermione.

“Miss Granger, I was hoping you’d tell me.” said McGonagall turning and walking back to the Head table.
“I should have had Dumbledore with me, we would have gone looking for you.” said McGonagall.

“I’m just glad for that rusty drain pipe, that was most likely the thing that broke my fall.” said Harry with a small smile. “I’ve latched onto that thing time and time again.”

“You’ve climbed alongside that wall before?” asked Remus slowly.

“Never mind.” said Harry.

They walked along with Ron, Mrs. Weasley was going to start telling off her son, but he couldn’t even remember this happening. He seemed genuinely horrified that this happened.

“Why do I have to go looking for him? He wasn’t looking out for me.” grumbled Ron. He went up to the dormitories and crashed on his bed. “He’ll come here eventually, he always does.”

“You’re right, I do.” said a voice coming from the ledge. The curtain parted with a breath of wind and the Watchers saw Harry sitting there nonchalantly. What knocked them for a loop was that Harry’s leg was a bloodied mess, and his face was scratched and streaked with blood.

“Points to Harry for the dramatic flair.” said Leroy giving a thumbs up.

“Gotta hand it to you, Monster, you’ve got style.” said Rudolph with a large sigh of relief.

“Why the hell did you shove me out the window?” said Harry from the ledge.

“Well, you managed to get out of it, you really are a Champion, I guess.” said Ron snidely.

Harry stared at Ron in shock.

“Want to try it again?” asked Ron standing up quickly. “We’re up a bit higher, more of a challenge.”

“Ron, you’ve snapped mate.” said Harry still looking horrified at his best friend.

Ron then rushed Harry, Harry whipped out his wand and sent Ron sprawling to the ground, knocking him unconscious. He levitated Ron over to his bed and covered him with the blanket.

“Sorry, Ron, but I think we’ve had enough fun going on. What is going on with you anyway?”

“Seriously, how the hell can you be so calm during all this?” asked Terry.

Harry waved his wand over his friend’s head and closed his eyes. Then after a short while, he opened them again. “What the hell…what did you get into today?”

He magicked Ron into a pair of pajamas and inspected his best friend’s clothes carefully. He located a small purple petal off the cuff of Ron’s pants and also inspected it carefully. “I never pictured you as a flower picker.” said Harry. He walked over to his trunk and opened it with a “Hey Harry, that’s not your normal key, your normal one is silver.” said Dean.

“Why the hell do you have two different keys?” asked Seamus.

“It’s a charm I put on my trunk in my first year, took me two weeks to find the right one.” said Harry with a shrug.

Harry opened his trunk, only instead of the normal jumble of belongings he had in there, it was full of books, each one the size of a postage stamp. “Where is that…here it is.” Harry pulled out a tiny hardcover book and the moment he took it out, the book enlarged to a much larger size.

“Holy cow, and I lifted that thing!” said Fred in wonder.

“I think I’ve put out my back years after I lifted it.” said George hunching over and rubbing his lower back.

He took the book over to the small desk and flipped through the pages quickly. When he finally stopped he groaned. “You’re such an idiot.” he said looking over his shoulder to the unconscious figure.

Altering Asters, the most visually pleasing flower, but harmful to the olfactory senses. The smell of the flower, even for no longer than five minutes may have devastating side-effects. Simple side-effects have been known to be: bleeding from the nose lasting three days, loss of olfactory senses and the loss of the entire nose and the nasal cavity slipping down the person’s throat.

More serious side-effects are the alteration of one’s personality, excessive aggression leading to homicidal tendencies and even death.

“How the hell is your nasal cavity slipping down your throat not a serious side-effect?” said Dr. Clark in shock.

“So, I’m assuming that your personality changed and the violence came about because of this. Let’s see what you do to get it back to where you aren’t a danger to yourself and others.” said Harry flipping through the pages till he reached the back of the book. “Here we go:”

To restore altered personalities, the victim must wash away the scent of the flower from his body and garments and the memory of the flower’s scent must be removed.

To remove the aggression, the victim of the aggressive behavior must wash the flower’s victim and clothes, and perform a Titanus memory charm. See Titanus Memory Charm.

“Are you kidding me? I have to wash your clothes and you? Let’s see, Titanus Memory Charm…”
well thank god, it affects me too, last thing I want is to remember this nightmare.” said Harry levitating Ron into the bathroom. “Better write down that McGonagall wants to see me, really don’t want to forget that.” He turned to face the bathroom. “I hope I can get to the memory charm soon, or I’m going to have nightmares for months.”

“Gee, thanks Harry.” said Ron with a red face.

“Not my fault, I didn’t go flower picking for Fleur.” said Harry quickly.

“The flowers never made it to her, did they?” asked Bill worriedly.

“I don’t know, I sort of doubt it.” said Harry trying to calm Bill down.

“I swear, I don’t think I knew that the flowers were harmful.” said Ron.

“That made sense.” said George.

“Not.” said Fred.

"Well, at least it wasn't you just snapping and lashing out at him." said Remus coldly.

"But still, no flower can just put into your mind that you want to hurt someone." said Sirius. "I don't care what any book says."

Ron looked down, tears beginning to flow down his face.

The smoke cleared away and they were left in the Great Hall.

“I seriously don’t remember anything about that day.” said Ron wiping his eyes.

“Thank Merlin I didn’t.” said Harry.

Ron muttered an agreement.

“So, you’ve used memory charms on the both of us.” said Hermione stiffly.

“Well...in your case, I guess I was protecting you, and in Ron’s, I was protecting myself as well as him.” said Harry. “I didn’t want to be shoved out a window again.”

“Let’s get back to the readings.” said Sirius quickly. He didn’t want another fight to break out.

“Here’s hoping I don’t modify anyone else’s memory.” said Harry glumly.

“I don’t blame you for either time.” said Remus.

“You’re really trying aren’t you?” said Harry with a smirk.

“I’m trying really hard.” said Remus with a smile.

“Who wants to read again?” asked Ernie.

“I’ll take it.” said Bill. “But I want to write to Fleur and ask if she got any asters that year. Knowing her, that should narrow it down a bit.”
He left quickly and Ginny hurried over to Harry and whispered, “I’m glad he’s taking Fleur’s past popularity really well, that was one thing I was worried about him not liking.”

“Why is that?” asked Harry.

“Boys are sort of the jealous types, just like girls.” said Ginny with a smile.

“So, we’re all a little jealous at times?” said Harry with a smirk.

“It’s what we do.” said Ginny with a laugh.

“I don’t see how you two can like each other.” said Romilda smugly. “I mean, she’s just a fan girl.”

“If I didn’t want a fan girl, I’d be out of luck wouldn’t I?” said Harry smugly. “Apparently there isn’t a witch or wizard that doesn’t know my name, if I want to be in a relationship with a girl, I think I up a creek without a paddle.”

“Then be with a muggle.” said Romilda with a shrug, not realizing she was only burying herself.

“Don’t say that!” hissed her friends.

“I don’t think I could, I’d rather be honest with my girlfriend from the start to the finish.” said Harry. “Though there was this girl that moved onto Privet Drive two years ago…nah…she’s a bit too out there, even for me.”

“What’s so strange about her?” asked Mrs. McFinn.

“She’ll burst into song, like she’s living in a musical.” said Harry.

Luna looked thoughtful. “That is strange.”

People stared at her with wide eyes.

Chapter End Notes

Thanks for reading, please review
When Bill finally got back, he took the book into his arms and sat down in his chair.

“Did she receive any flowers?” asked Ginny.

“None that had that side effect, there were some spritzed with love potion but nothing more serious than that.” said Bill with a smile.

"Did you tell Fleur what you were doing?” asked Charlie.

"I told her what I was doing a long time ago." said Bill. "She wanted to come..."

"So why didn't she?” asked Leroy.

"I figured..." said Bill. "That we didn't want to have the entire castle invaded with random people. So she's visiting her family right now."

"She's more than welcome." said Dumbledore, "if Harry says she is."

"You lot can do whatever you want." said Harry with a shrug.

"Well, as long as the reading continues...for safety reasons." said Dr. Nicodemus.

Bill cracked open the book and read the title. "Chapter Eighteenth"

"Great, another dose of Skeeter." groaned Harry.

Ron still looked uncomfortable; he hadn't smiled or joked around since that strange vision of the past.

"Are you alright Ron?” asked Hermione and Ginny together.

"I feel like a such a jackass." said Ron.

"You were, but Harry forgave you, and it really wasn't all your fault." said Ginny with a smile.

First paragraph, first sentence.

"I had forgotten the stupid tournament." said Harry.

"And the backstabbing.” said Rudolph sternly looking over to Ron.
"It was the stupid flower's fault." said Ron.

"Not the first night it wasn't." said Rudolph still sounding stern. "I don't give a damn about the aster, you still sent my Monster out a window."

"Though kudos for you looking up the right plant." said Leroy to Harry.

First paragraph, third sentence, first dash.

"How were you going to do that?" asked Colin.

"Punch him in the face and hold him down then shout at him." said Harry with a shrug. "I hadn't ironed out all the details yet."

End of first paragraph.

"It was sort of odd, seeing Ron come down without Harry." said a third year Hufflepuff.

"It was like the world was tossed upside-down." said her friend.

Second paragraph, third sentence, first semi-colon

"It explains why you looked as if someone told you your dog just died." said Lee.

Sirius whined loudly.

"You had your head turned and you could almost see your teeth grinding in your mouth." said Fred.

End of second paragraph.

"We almost head-butted each other." said Hermione.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

"Why not let him go to the Great Hall?" asked Charlie.

"Ron was in there, and he was polluting the Hall with his negativity." said Hermione sending a frown over to Ron.
"Of course! It didn't make any sense that he would do that." said Hermione.

Ron turned red.

"You looked like you got hit with a brick!" said Dennis.

"Man, he was on your mind." said Charlie.

"I didn't want to lose him." said Harry softly. "He was the first friend I ever made, I couldn't lose him." tears began to fall from his face.

Remus gently wiped away the young man's tears. “It’s alright, you didn’t lose him for long.”

"That's why I brought him breakfast, you were spouting nonsense." said Hermione.

Ron looked at Hermione in wonder.

"He's most likely jealous of your wealth, popularity, fame, intelligence, and strength." said Luna.
"Just like Harry's jealous of your family, chess tactics, happy childhood, knowledge of the magical world, and full stomach."

Harry and Ron stared at the Ravenclaw girl.

Dialogue set, second sentence.

"I was about to flip out." said Harry wiping his face quickly.

"You alright?" asked Sirius.

"I'm going to be crying a lot in this book." said Harry thickly.

Dialogue set, third sentence, third dash.

"You picked to sit in that compartment." said Emmeline.

End of dialogue set.

"He can this, and all that comes with it." said Harry darkly. "I would love to have my family and a happy childhood."

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

"Good point, you shouldn't be a messenger service, but I don't think talking to Ron will fix much." said George.

"He has the second thickest skull in the family." said Fred.

Dialogue set, second sentence.

Ron blushed.

End of dialogue set.

"Don't say something like that." said Sirius.
"And what you did to that chair the other day, Ron wouldn't be able to sit down or do anything for a few days." said Fred.

“Screw days, months.” said George.

"I did expect it, it was my worst nightmare." said Sirius.

"You bet your ass he wanted to." said Remus. "I had to almost lock him in the basement."

"Read it in the paper, I nearly fainted right over my eggs." said Mrs. Weasley.

"Nice to know that you need to be convinced to talk to me." said Sirius teasingly.

"I didn't want you to get caught." said Harry.

"You let me worry about that, you just worry about trying to have fun in school." said Sirius. “Though, you weren’t having much fun that year.”
"You've got to be kidding me, that won't fly." said Tonks.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Fifth paragraph.

Letter to Sirius

"We need to work on your letter writing, they're dead boring." said Leroy.

Sixth paragraph.

End of letter to Sirius.

"You really need to start opening up to me when you're feeling like that." said Sirius.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

"I'll bet she didn't like that." said Dr. Clark.

"Not one single bit." said Harry.

Seventh paragraph.

Dialogue line.

"Sorry Harry." said Sirius.

"I wanted to send you a very bad tempered owl." said Harry. “Just as payback.”

Eighth paragraph.

"It felt as if everyone were trying to just stab my back with six inch knives." said Harry.
Ninth paragraph, first sentence.
Tonks looked angry over to the newest members of her old house.

Ninth paragraph, third sentence.
"Note, he said once." said Sirius quietly to himself.

Ninth paragraph, fourth sentence.
"Vicious little vermin, the lot of you." said Leroy scowling angrily.
Tonks also sent a fierce look over to the two young Hufflepuffs.
Ernie and Justin flushed.

End of ninth paragraph.
Professor Sprout blushed slightly.

Tenth paragraph.
"I'd rather make myself sick and surrender to Madam Pomfrey." said Harry.

Eleventh paragraph.
Dialogue set.
"Took ten minutes to get past it actually." muttered Fred.

Twelfth paragraph, second sentence.
"Oh good lord..." said Chief Hawkeye.

End of twelfth paragraph.
"I'd suggest drowning them, and I love creatures." said Nightstrike.

"I'd rather he work with a smaller one." said Sirius worriedly.

“I could still barely believe it.” said Hagrid.

A few Hufflepuffs blushed, Harry hadn’t tried to take the credit for everything. Even Professor Sprout looked immensely guilty.

“Thank god he believes you.” said Dr. Clark.

“I just wanted to throw my arms around you and hug you.” said Harry up to Hagrid. Hagrid beamed brightly.

“You didn’t mention anyone else.” said Remus.

“Well, McGonagall already told ‘im that she believed him.” said Hagrid. “I didn’t know about anyone else.”
Fifteenth paragraph.
Hagrid turned a faint sort of pink.

Dialogue set.
“Sounds like a lot of fun to watch.” said Sirius.

Dialogue line.
“There’s an understatement.” muttered Remus.

Sixteenth paragraph.
“Wonder if Polyjuice Potion with your hair in it would help Ron see your life isn’t all that great.” said Terry.
“I wouldn’t wish this,” said Harry pointing to the scar on his head. “on anyone.”

Seventeenth paragraph, second sentence.
“And it was the Hufflepuffs then that made his life a living hell first.” said George.

Seventeenth paragraph, fourth sentence, first comma.
Harry looked at his elbow, as Ron looked away, pain easily visible on his face.

End of seventeenth paragraph.
Remus and Sirius both ran their fingers through the boy’s still long white hair.

Eighteenth paragraph, second sentence.
“Yeah, Slytherins and Gryffindors never really liked each other.” said Moody thoughtfully. “I was no different when I was younger.”
“By support, I meant that no one wanted to smack me about.” said Harry.

Some Ravenclaws looked down in shame.

“How the hell does he know what people are thinking?” asked a second year Ravenclaw student.

“Your nose is straight.” said Sirius.

“You’re the same, minus the gray eyes.” said Leroy.

“I still have the bag.” said a Hufflepuff seventh year girl sadly.

“Wow, that’s one awful week.” said Charlie.

“Gee, wonder why he’s not concentrating on class?” said Tonks with a roll of her eyes.

Mrs. McFinn reached behind Harry and patted his back comfortably.
And for Potter to think that…is he being serious, or merely sarcastic. thought Snape bitterly.

Snape flinched horribly.

“Couldn’t really argue with them.” said Harry plainly.

“And the teachers let them wear them?” said Mrs. McFinn angrily.

“There was really nothing wrong with them, my Hufflepuffs asked if there was and then they handed them out.” said Professor Sprout.

“They’re singling out one student in particular.” said Dr. Clark with a snap in his voice.

“They most certainly did not!” said Professor Sprout indignantly.

Professor Sprout flushed slightly.

“Tell us again how they aren’t singling out a student.” said Mrs. McFinn darkly.

“I…I…” said Professor Sprout.

“And it’s not just you who let them wear them apparently.” said Dr. Clark sternly.

The rest of the staff paled considerably.

“I asked the students to put the badges in their bags, but I did not confiscate them.” said
McGonagall softly.

“You did more than I, Minerva.” said Professor Flitwick sadly.

Twenty-fourth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Twenty-fifth paragraph.

Ron was starting to cringe almost on a constant basis.

Dialogue line.

It was Draco’s turn to cringe.

“Draco…” snarled Snape.

“Sorry Granger.” said Draco sincerely.

Twenty-sixth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“He wasn’t the sneak that tried to hex someone who had his back to him.” growled Moody. “He’s got more guts than you do, boy.”

Twenty-seventh paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Wait a minute, Harry yelled.” said Fred.

“But Draco screamed.” said George.

“Did someone have a squeaky voice?” asked the twins in a cutesy voice.

Draco blushed.
Twenty-eighth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Twenty-ninth paragraph, second sentence.

“Sorry Hermione.” said Harry quickly.

End of twenty-ninth paragraph.

“You poor thing.” said Emmeline Vance.

Dialogue line.

Thirtieth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“You attacked him at the same time!” said Charlie.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Thirty-first paragraph.

“I’m so proud of you!” said Rudolph rapturously.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Thirty-second paragraph.

Thirty-third paragraph.

“T don’t care if you save the entire Hogwarts Express and all it’s student cargo...You...are...going...to...that...seminar.” growled Dumbledore angrily.

Snape cringed...he was doomed.
“I don’t think I want to know what happens at that seminar.” said Fred.

“If Snape looks like that.” said George.

Thirty-fourth paragraph.

“And I could hardly try to believe that he could say that.” said Madam Pomfrey.

Thirty-fifth paragraph, first sentence.

Several people snorted.

End of thirty-fifth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“And nothing for Malfoy.” muttered a seventh year Hufflepuff darkly.

Thirty-sixth paragraph, fourth sentence, first dash

“I don’t blame either of you boys.” said Mr. Weasley sending a glare over to the Potions Master. He had heard from all of his children how unfair this man had been, but he had no idea that it was this bad.

Thirty-sixth paragraph, fourth sentence, first dash, second comma.

“Oh thank goodness!” said Mrs. Weasley.

Thirty-sixth paragraph, end of fourth sentence.

“Oh come on!” groaned Remus. “What is it going to take for you kids to get along again?”

End of thirty-sixth paragraph.

Thirty-seventh paragraph.
Harry turned dead white and before anyone could say a single word, he rushed out of the door.

"Harry!" shouted Sirius.

"I'll go get him." said Remus.

"You muck up, send a patronus down, I'll save your hide." said Sirius. He wanted Remus and Harry to make up completely, this was Remus’ first chance, and if he screwed it up, it would be even harder to get Harry back to trusting him.

Remus left the Great Hall and looked around, hoping to see a sign of the lad. The portraits on the other side of the Entrance Hall pointed towards the door that led outside. The werewolf sighed, thank goodness for his heightened senses.

Remus walked out the door and saw fresh footprints leading down towards the lake.

Remus followed them until he saw the white haired lad sitting on the side of the lake, sobbing quietly all alone.

"Harry, you alright?" asked Remus softly, sitting beside the youth on the grass.

"I...didn't mean that..." said Harry wiping his eyes quickly.

"We all know you didn't." said Remus.

"I would never use that spell, I swear." said Harry.

"I know, I know." said Remus patting Harry's back.

A thick silence swallowed the pair of them.

"So...what's my punishment this time?" asked Harry quietly.

"What?" asked Harry.

"If Sirius or Mrs. McFinn feels that you deserve any punishment, it'll come from them. I don't want to piss you off anymore." said Remus.

Harry looked at Remus with disbelief on his face.

"So...what made you take on the title of disciplinarian, anyway?" asked Harry.

"Well, I remember way back when we were in school...Sirius...was more into egging people on to do trouble...and your dad was more than happy to go with it. I guess I didn't want you to go the same way, I thought I should nip it in the bud before it got too bad, but I really shouldn't have lumped you together with your dad." said Remus softly.

Harry sat watching the lake's waves lap against the shore. He took in Remus' words and thought deeply.

"I just wanted to make sure, that you become something like the man your father became, not what he started out to be." said Remus. "Though, you've already pretty much are."

"Dad wasn't all that nice, was he?" asked Harry with a smirk.
"He was a prat yeah." said Remus with a laugh. "I guess I was worried that you would be as well."

"I had a great example of what not to be." said Harry. "Thanks to the Dursleys."

"I still want to kill those sons of a banshees." growled Remus.

"There's a long line." said Harry. He laid his head on his knees.

"Feel like finishing this chapter up? After this were going to have one more chapter and then it's time for the Halloween festivities." said Remus with a smile.

“Can we just sit for a bit?” asked Harry almost silently.

“Sure, we can do that.” said Remus with a smile.

Sirius kept an eye on the watch in his pocket, it had been a half an hour since Harry and Remus both left. Sirius was getting a bit worried, Remus’ recent history with the teen wasn’t all that great.

He couldn’t really understand how Harry didn’t get on with the werewolf lately. He could remember a time when Remus was Harry’s favorite visitor, even before Sirius himself, and he could turn into a ruddy giant puppy! Remus would always bring little sweets for the child, and as for bedtime, Harry wouldn’t go to sleep without a story from Uncle Remus.

“I’m going to go find them.” said Sirius.

“Why don’t you just sit tight and wait.” said Rudolph grabbing the man’s sleeve.

“I just want to make sure they're not beating the snot out of each other.” said Sirius.

He turned into his giant black dog form and followed Harry’s scent trail. He kept his nose to the ground, right onto the grounds; he was slightly pleased to smell Remus’ scent going right alongside the lad’s.

He looked up and saw the pair of them sitting on the shore, Sirius wanted to turn back to normal and tell them to get their butts back inside, but he saw that they were talking and laughing. Sirius turned slowly and walked back to the castle, he was more than happy now to give them their space.

They had stayed out for an additional half hour, then they came in.

“Were you lot worried?” asked Remus leading Harry back to the bowl.

“Nope, not one bit.” said Sirius, nudging Dr. Clark to keep silent.

Dialogue set, second sentence.

“They’re always unpleasant.” said Neville.

End of dialogue set.
“SOMEONE?” shrieked Madam Pomfrey.

Thirty-eighth paragraph, first sentence.
Everyone in and around the bowl began to growl and glare murderously over to the Potions master.

End of thirty-eighth paragraph.

“Do it.” said a majority of the people gathered in the Great Hall.

End of thirty-ninth paragraph.

Fortieth paragraph.

“It was sort of nice knowing you kid.” muttered Kingsley.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Forty-first paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Forty-second paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“I still hate that word.” said Harry sourly.

Forty-third paragraph.

Ron turned pink.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.
“Good, when he’s got poisons at the ready, best get you out of there.” said Sirius.

“I’m sure Severus wouldn’t hurt Harry.” said Dumbledore calmly.

“What makes you so sure?” asked Sirius.

“If he did hurt Harry or any other student, I’d force feed him his most painful potions.” said Dumbledore darkly.

Forty-fourth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“I swear, no one listens to me very much.” said Harry quietly.

“We’re listening now.” said Hannah.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Forty-fifth paragraph.

“Enter Skeeter.” mumbled Seamus.

“She’s still out cold.” said Dr. Nicodemus, “Apparently someone keeps putting a stunning spell on her.”

Fred and George whistled innocently.

Forty-sixth paragraph, third sentence.

“She did fancy him.” said Bill softly.

End of forty-sixth paragraph.

“Pervert.” muttered Katie.
“I didn’t want someone to tamper with my wand, especially then.” said Harry.

“Don’t blame you.” said Leroy.

“But that’s what that ceremony is for, to make sure no one tampers with your wands.” said Rudolph.

“What stops others from cursing the wands afterwards?” asked Tonks.

“A protective spell is put on the spells, to protect that from happening.” said Dumbledore.

“Small, my ass.” muttered Harry.

“Well, that wasn’t very satisfying, was it?” said Fred.

“She doesn’t sound any better from your description.” said Dr. Clark looking over at the unconscious woman.

“More like try to get some juicy info while you corner him.” said Fred.

“That’s not a yes!” said Mr. Weasley.
“Everyone seems to be going over to the perverted side when they come into contact with you.” said Sirius.

“I don’t need to be any more worried than I already am.” said Remus.

“And no one asked her about that?” asked Mrs. Weasley.

“Say no.” said Moody quickly.

“Cause now she thinks she can get away with blinkin’ murder.” said George.

“One of her interviewees smashed her right in the mouth.” said Tonks with a proud smile.

“How do you know?” asked Sirius.

“I was the one that did it.” said Tonks. “She was doing a bit on Metamorphmagi, and was badmouthing me and others like me in the worst way.”
“Arrogant self-important twit, Rita Skeeter, whose writings have caused countless lawsuits to the Daily Prophet.” said Remus with a smirk.

Sirius stared at him, and then threw his arms around his old friend. “Welcome back Moony! I’ve missed you!” To the shock of everyone, he kissed Remus full on the mouth.

“Get off me.” said Remus pushing Sirius off him with a laugh and wiping his mouth and spat on the floor.

“You’d think they’d fire her by now.” said Kingsley thoughtfully.

“They just pay what the courts say and keep her, it’s her poison that really sells papers.” said Professor Flitwick.

Quick-Quotes-Quill test

“Someone should puncture her reputation.” said George.

“Already happened.” said Ron looking proudly over to Hermione.

Dialogue set.

“He didn’t put his name in.” said a large part of the school.

Quick-Quotes-Quill

“Are as green as a fresh pickled toad!” sang Fred and George together.

“You were waiting for something like that to come about, weren’t you?” said Ginny with her hands on her hips.

“It’s just so catchy.” said George quickly.

Dialogue line.

“He didn’t.” said Sirius and Remus.

Dialogue line.

Fifty-third paragraph.

“I wish she had been awake for this, it’s just trashing her ego big time.” said Bill.
“I’m a rebel, but when Dumbledore says don’t do it, I listen…for the most part.” said Harry.

“Sick to my stomach and about to throw up on your Quick-Quotes-Quill.” said Dr. Clark.

“You think we should come up with a Marauder name for him, as a honorary member and to make up for Peter?” asked Sirius.

“Why not?” said Remus with a smile.

“No more than any other year.” said Harry stretching out in the bowl and leaning into the soft cushions.

“Want to lay down?” asked Sirius.

“Nope, I’m good.” said Harry.

“Made my family royally pissed at me.” said Harry folding his arms and yawning.

“You’d better believe it skippy.” said Rudolph, “If I get ahold of Voldemort, I’m going to do my best to reduce him to a pile of ashes.”

“Not without my help.” said Leroy.
“Well, that might be, but it wasn’t the trauma she’s thinking of.” said Harry.

End of dialogue set

Dialogue line.

“I swear, I’m losing my tolerance with each passing year.” said Harry.

“Just goes to prove that you need a nice relaxing summer of rest and relaxation.” said Remus.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“She loves short answers, gives her the opportunity to elaborate.” said Bathilda darkly.

Dialogue line.

Fifty-fifth paragraph, second sentence.

“They’d be worried out of their minds.” said Remus.

“Lily would be really upset.” said Sirius.

“James would be having kittens and sending you the entire Potter family library.” said Leroy.

End of fifty-fifth paragraph.

Quick-Quotes-Quill
Dialogue line.

Mrs. Weasley blushed slightly.

Fifty-sixth paragraph.

“It was quite an awkward gathering.” said Dumbledore with a smile.
“She knows that I detest that quill.” said Dumbledore with a small smile.

“It was great, I needed something to blow my nose with.” said Kingsley with a smirk.

“I swear she doesn’t know the difference between fact and fiction in her writing.” said Professor Flitwick.

“Have no idea what the heck their talking about.” said Charlie.

“Do you bleed calming draught or something?” asked Nightstrike.

“I’d be afraid of what she’s doing to him in there.” muttered Remus.

“Why does she keep sucking the end of it?” asked Mrs. McFinn.

“She’s taking the poison off her tongue and putting it on the quill.” said Harry darkly.

Several students laughed.

“That’s actually true.” said Dumbledore with a smile.
“Someone put hair from a person in their wand?” said Colin.

“They’re quite powerful wands for an assortment of different spells, however, it has been discovered that half of the wands are incapable of use once a month.” said Dumbledore.

“Girl’s hair wands I shouldn’t wonder.” said Sirius with a snort.

“Sucks to be Ron then.” said George.

“That’s all that matters.” said Dumbledore.

“He’s always been a gentleman.” said Bathilda with a smile.
“He still ended up in the Hospital for three days for other wounds.” said Dumbledore.

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

“I taught him to treat his wand very well.” said Mr. Diggory proudly.

Sixty-fifth paragraph, third sentence.

“He loves fingerprints on his wands, it shows constant use.” said Dumbledore gently.

End of sixty-fifth paragraph.

“I get enough of that look from Aunt Marge, don’t need it from other people.” said Harry.

“Good thing Fleur aint here to hear that.” said Charlie in a whisper to Bill.

“She’d kill him.” said Bill.

Sixty-sixth paragraph.

Sixty-seventh paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“He’s always happy to inspect other creator’s creations.” said Dumbledore with a smile.

Sixty-eighth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Sixty-ninth paragraph.

“Sort of odd, something so happy coming out of Krums’s wand.” said Harry with a silent laugh.

Dialogue line.
“You can almost feel the flashback coming on.” said Dr. Clark with a laugh.

“You really need to open up more.” said Sirius.

Several people snorted, including Sirius.

“Best keep that information under your hat where it concerns her.” said Moody.

“Wish I knew what wine that was, it smelled great.” said Harry softly.

“Were you planning a menu around it?” asked Sirius.

“Sort of.” said Harry.

“Day went straight to hell.” said Harry.
“Her opinion shouldn’t matter.” said Charlie angrily.

“What made them send her to a bloody school?” asked Bill.

“She volunteered.” said Madam Bones.

“I’ve got those in my scrapbook, you look so pissed.” said Sirius with a smile.

“Vain, glorious bastard.” said Moody darkly.

“Creeper.” said Angelina.

“I’m amazed that we didn’t miss dinner.” said Harry.

“This won’t end well.” said Emmeline Vance.

Ron blushed and looked down at the floor shamefully.
“At the time I didn’t want to baby him.” said Sirius.

“I was really torn, I wanted to talk to you, but then again I wanted you to stay free.” said Harry.

“You just let me worry about myself, I’ll worry about you.” said Sirius.

“Let’s have a spot of dinner, and then we’ll go about the party.” said Dumbledore with a smile.

“Yes!” said the students.

“Why don’t you children go and take a bit of a break, while we get the Great Hall ready for you?” said McGonagall.

The students slowly piled out to touch up their costumes and use the restrooms.

“I’ll be right back, I’ve been working on something for tonight, had to get up really early for this.” said Harry.

“Need help?” asked Remus.

“Actually, I could use some magical help, as long as you don’t eat it all before we get back up here.” said Harry with a playful smile.
Remus and Harry traveled down to the Kitchens, being unable to resist in asking, Remus spoke. “So what is it that we’re bringing up?”

“You’ll see, I just hope it survives the trip.” said Harry.

“Whatever it is it has…it has to be as big as your birthday cake to not be able to get it up the normal way.” said Remus.

Harry smiled.

“I’m going to love this aren’t I?” said Remus with a smile.

Harry and he passed through the door to the kitchens when Remus looked at what Harry had been working on.

It was a giant gingerbread Haunted House. The sheets of tiles on the roof were made of thin squares of chocolate, each a different flavor which added a nice touch of color to the roof, despite that it was just made that day, Harry had expertly made it look as if the shingles were falling apart in places and discolored due to age.

The windows were made of different broken bits of lollipops made to look like broken windows, the paneling lined with chocolate graham crackers. and the stones were chocolate rocks The ghosts, monsters and little trick-or-treating children were made up of several different colors of marzipan and given minute details, such as eyes and folds in their outfits.

“This is marvelous!” said Remus in awe.

“I got up bright and early to work on it.” said Harry with a smile. “Think you can get it up to the Great Hall?” he added putting his hands on his police belt.

“I’ll certainly do my best…is that a werewolf up there?” asked Remus pointing to a figure on the roof, it’s furry head flung back and it’s jaws open.

“That’s right, I’ve even got a vampire over here.” said Harry pointing to the garden full of dead flower shaped candy. “Hope the Ranger named Viper doesn’t see it.”

“I’ve already seen it.” said a voice coming from the corner of the kitchen. The turned quickly and saw the Ranger standing beside the fireplace. He began walking towards them.

“Can we help you with something Ranger?” said Remus quickly.

“I’ve wanted a word with the young man. Alone.” said Viper.
Remus looked at Harry worriedly, but saw a flicker of someone else in the room out of the corner of his eye.

Lionus.

“I’ll be alright.” said Harry keeping his eye on vampire Ranger.

Remus left, hesitantly, but what Harry didn’t see was that he muttered a silent charm just before he left.

“What can I do for you Viper?” asked Harry.

“You, are a very strange child. Von might say, confusing.” said Viper walking closer to Harry. Harry out of sheer reflexes, retreated back a step.

“How do you mean?” asked Harry.

“I have been a Ranger a very long time, I know the limitations of the human body. You should have died, a very long time ago. How ees it that you are not von of the dead?”

“I…I don’t know…lucky I guess.” said Harry.

“Do not toy with me child, von would not say you are stupid.” hissed Viper. “Do you not realize what and who has saved you?”

Harry stared at the vampire Ranger, he was unsure of what he was talking about.

“You owe your allegiance to us.” hissed Viper angrily.

“I don’t owe anyone anything.” said Harry, his own temper rising. “It’s my life, I make my own decisions.”

Viper’s pupils turned to pinpricks, “If you will not be grateful to us for your continuous life, then perhaps you should experience the pain once more.” His fingers elongated into claws and his fangs became more prominent. He stalked closer to Harry, who was backing up further.

“Viper!” came a shout.

They both turned and saw Lionus standing against a large cabinet. In came Remus quickly when he heard the loud shout.

“Harry, are you alright?” said Remus quickly. He had placed a protective shield around Harry, but if the Rangers were half as strong as they were believed to be, it wouldn’t have lasted long.

“I’m fine. We’d better get this upstairs.” said Harry trying to put some distance between the vampire and himself.

“I apologize.” said Viper retreating back, his claws and fangs shrinking.

“He will not accost you again.” said Lionus. “And I will have words with him.”

Harry nodded, though Remus was a bit unconvinced. He levitated the giant gingerbread house into the air and brought it out with them.
When they left, Lionus swooped over to Viper, grabbed ahold of his collar with one hand and hand over the vampire’s throat, his teeth gnashing together. The Ranger’s fingernails extended into harsh claws. “Have you lost your mind?”

“The boy should be leaping at the chance to become a Ranger.” said Viper angrily as loudly as he could with his Captain’s hand on his throat. “And he owes his life to us!”

“You remember what Doc told you, his cores saved him. Doc only accelerated their healing capabilities. The boy would have been just fine in due time.” snarled Lionus. “Start paying attention to these readings, pain means nothing to Potter. If we want him to join us, we’ll need to sweeten the kitty a little bit.” he said releasing the vampire and shoving him into the table.

“I don’t understand.” said Viper.

“I need to make this job sound and be better, seem more appealing than any other…and that will be quite the chore. But with you threatening him, you’ve made my work twice as hard.” spat Lionus.

“I’m sorry sir.” said Viper solemnly.

“Not nearly as sorry as you will be when I order a complete emergency physical for you with Doc.” said Lionus.

“Sir, you wouldn’t!” said Viper shock in his voice and eyes.

“I would, and I will, don’t cross me again.” said Lionus angrily.

“Sir…send me to Devil’s Garden if you wish, but…not an emergency physical!” said Viper.

Lionus turned and glared at the vampire, who was now cringing and clutching his mouth. “Make it up to me.”

“Anything sir.” said Viper quickly.

“You’ll find out later what I want.” said Lionus. “Right now, I’ve got a party to attend; you’re confined to night guard duty.”

“Yes sir.” said Viper softly. In a flash, he turned into a bat and flapped out of the room. “Too bad, a Halloween party…he would have been a lot of fun.” said Lionus watching the bat flap away into the night.

Harry and Remus escorted the Haunted House up to the Great Hall, much to the delight of the students who had freshened up their costumes or went to go but more elaborate outfits on.

“That looks awesome!” said Ginny eagerly.

“Look at the little kids in costume!” squealed Parvati.

“The dead flowers are a nice touch.” said Neville with a smile.

“I can’t wait to start eating this thing.” said Ron.

Mrs. McFinn and Dr. Clark were acting as if they had returned to their childhoods they were so excited over the décor.

Professor Flitwick conjured up a set of musical instruments made to look like an assortment of bones and made them play a multitude of songs. Hagrid brought in all of his pumpkins that had been growing and sat them beside Professor Sprout who raised her wand.

“What are you doing?” asked Mrs. McFinn interestedly.

“I’m going to carve these pumpkins, Holly.” said Professor Sprout. Since Mrs. McFinn came to stay at Hogwarts during the readings, Mrs. McFinn had become good friends with most of the teachers, the same as Dr. Clark had become with them. They helped them learn about the magical world, while they in turn taught them about the Muggle world.

“Why not let the kids do that? Have them make their own Jack-o-lanterns?” said Dr. Clark walking over.

Professor Sprout looked thoughtful, “That might be fun for them, especially the younger ones.”

“I want to make a Jack-o-lantern!” said the Creevey brothers together.

“I think it might be quiet enjoyable for the students to make their own Jack-o-lanterns and have them illuminate the festivities.” said Dumbledore with a warm smile.

A majority of the students gathered up the pumpkins and began to design their own jack-o-lanterns, Mrs. McFinn and Dr. Clark and a few muggleborns helped teach the other students how to do it the muggle way.

Which was a total mess, but they seemed to enjoy it nonetheless. Pumpkin goop made it’s way into everyone’s fingernails and even onto some of the costumes.

The usual Hogwarts feast took place with the return of a few of the house tables laden with the most scrumptious looking food. The decorations, Mrs. McFinn and Dr. Clark were happy to see, were just as the books had described them. Candles were floating alongside the Jack-o-lanterns that were carved into different faces and designs, a much larger selection than what normally comes when the Professors and Prefects use magic.

Enchanted paper bats flapped around the students who squealed with delight. A student managed to snatch a paper bat as it flew around and found to his surprise, the bat had a piece of candy in his claws. Thus began the mad dash to collect the paper bats that arrived.

“Albus, this was a marvelous idea.” said Professor Flitwick snatching his own bat easily.

“I didn’t come up with that idea, but if you were to happen to look over to Miss Granger, and Mr. Potter and Weasley.

Hermione was enchanting the bats to flap around the Great Hall, as Harry placed random candy from his Hogsmede purchase, while Ron and Ginny expertly folded the paper into bat shapes.

This Halloween was easily their finest.

“These carvings are magnificent, we should enlist the student’s help every year for this.” said Dumbledore with a bright smile.

Harry sat in the bowl watching the others enjoy themselves after the final set of bats were released into the air. He didn’t want to take part in the enjoyment of the festivities just yet, he was too busy thinking about what Viper had said. He didn’t notice that his family was looking at him worriedly, especially after what Remus had told them what happened.

“Let’s save Harry’s pumpkin for later, just in case he wants to make one.” said Leroy quietly. “Remind me to get him some garlic the next time I’m down in the kitchens.”

Harry looked around, trying to locate the Ranger doctor. He discovered him over by the fire, looking pensive into it. He stood up and walked over to the man.

“What can I do for you, lad?” asked Dr. Nicodemus.

“Um, may I ask a question?” asked Harry.

“What do you want to know?” asked the old Ranger doctor.

“How is it that I owe you my life?” asked Harry quietly.

“Who told you that you” asked Dr. Nicodemus.

“Viper.” said Harry.

“Ah…yes…well lad, you do, and yet you don’t.” said Dr. Nicodemus.

“What’s that mean?” asked Harry.

“You only owe me your life, you don’t owe the rest of the Rangers. I only sped up your healing abilities, you would have been fine on your own given some time.” said Dr. Nicodemus. “I’m going to have to have a few words with Viper, lumping his offensive abilities with my healings…

“Don’t you worry lad, you don’t owe us anything, as a matter of fact, we’d owe you, with your going about the place and testing the security systems and such, we’ve had a drop in thefts. I’d say we’re even.” said Dr. Nicodemus with a smile.

“Harry! Come on! You’re missing the party!” said Ron running over to him with a plate of pumpkin pasties.

Ron dragged Harry away from the Ranger doctor and led him over to where he and Hermione were standing together in a large group of Harry’s extended family.

“You alright cub?” asked Sirius.

“I’m alright, I just…wanted an answer.” said Harry.

Harry enjoyed the night as best he could. He ate as much food as he could stomach and danced with Ginny to her favorite songs. However, it wasn’t just Ginny he danced with, during a few slow songs, he enjoyed a dance with Mrs. McFinn.

She laid her head on his chest as they danced slowly in a circle.

“I’m so proud of you.” said Mrs. McFinn softly into his police uniform shirt. “You’ve grown up so well.”

“Thanks…mom…” said Harry with a smile. Mrs. McFinn held onto his shirt tighter. They danced around in a circle slowly, the rest of the school gave them their space, and the girls blew into their handkerchiefs as quietly as they could.
When the song ended, and another slow song started up Harry received a surprise.

“May I cut in?”

It was Uncle Leroy.

Mrs. McFinn giggled and smiled, “Harry or me?”

“Sam wants to cut a rug with you, I’d like a dance with my Little Monster.” said Leroy with a smile to Harry.

Harry shrugged his shoulder and held up his hands halfway awkwardly. “I’ve never danced with another guy before.” said Harry.

“Not really, you’ve danced with me before, though you were a lot smaller.” said Leroy with a smile. “If you like, I’ll take the lead.”

He and Harry danced slowly around in a circle; few boys sniggered while a few girls blushed. “This is sort of awkward.” said Harry.

“It is an acquired taste, but I just wanted to talk to you.” said Leroy.

“What did you want to know?” asked Harry as they waltzed slowly around the room.

“Anything you like.” said Leroy. “You and I don’t get a whole lot of time to talk.”

Harry and Leroy smiled at each other slightly.

“I’m sorry that we left you and your parents.” said Leroy softly.

“It wasn’t your fault.” said Harry quickly.

“It is my fault. I told Rudy that we should leave the country, leave Dumbledore and the Order to handle Voldemort, I was a coward. I hate fighting, I really do, Rudy’s always had to run to my rescue when we were in Africa. He even had to go through a whole jungle without magic just to save my life.” said Leroy sadly.

“How’d he do that?” asked Harry. “Why did he have to go without magic?”

“Well you see, Rudy accidentally ticked off an African wizard from a jungle tribe and he poisoned my food…” said Leroy, once the song was over, they walked over to a secluded corner and talked.

“Nice that they’re getting along.” said Rudolph. “I was sure he’d be miffed at this awesome looking Haunted House.”

“I think I heard him talking about the time he was poisoned.” said Dr. Clark walking back off the dance floor.

Rudolph blushed. “I didn’t do much.”

“He obviously doesn’t think it wasn’t much.” said Remus noting the look of complete adoration on Leroy’s face as he retold the tale to his Great Nephew.

“I don’t know why he’s telling Harry that story…I… I almost lost Lee.” said Rudolph.

“Well, the story obviously must mean a lot to him, and Harry’s taking the story pretty well.” said
Sirius.

“Compared to his life, we’ve had a walk in the park.” said Rudolph bitterly.

The party ended a little earlier than the party the other night, the students decided not to stay up late this time. And this time the teachers ordered a more reasonable curfew as opposed to one in the morning.

This time, Remus handled rubbing the lotion on Harry’s back, and it took all of his self-control to not vomit up the Hogwarts feast when he saw the scars.

“Harry…” said Remus trying not to choke on his own bile.

“Mmh?” asked Harry from where he laid, he was almost asleep.

“Is there anything you want me to get for you?” asked Remus.

“No…I’m fine. I just want some sleep.” said Harry groaning into the pillow.

“Alright then…I’ll see you in the morning.” said Remus as he ruffled Harry’s hair.

Remus left the room and wiped his eyes dry.

“You okay?” asked Sirius as he walked up to his friend.

“I’m fine…thanks…” said Remus.

“For what?” asked Sirius.

“Letting me have him for the day.” said Remus.

“No problem, let’s hope that fixes all the problems.” said Sirius.

“Let’s hope I can keep my stupidity in check.” said Remus.

“You were stupid for the most part, just….you didn’t pick the right person to get mad about stuff.” said Sirius.

“You’re right, Harry’s not to blame, well not mostly…” said Remus softly.

“Yeah, he does get himself into it for some parts, he said so himself a while ago, but I get angry Voldemort for doing this to my cub. And angry at myself for not being there when he needed me.”

Remus flinched. “Me too.”

The two old marauders sat in deep thought, Harry’s pain and trials always weighed heavily on their minds.

“He’s just a baby, why does this have to happen?” muttered Remus.

“Cause Voldemort’s a sick and twisted bastard.” said Sirius darkly.
Chapter End Notes

Thanks for reading, please review
The next morning, Harry woke up and walked down to the Great Hall, it was still pretty early and only Dumbledore, the rest of the staff and the Rangers were awake and sipping their coffee. He made a beeline for the Rangers who were standing beside the fireplace.

“Strange to see you be the first one in here.” said Dr. Nicodemus with a smile.

“I just…are you done with my notebook yet?” asked Harry, he looked over to Chief Hawkeye.

“I am now.” said Chief Hawkeye with a smirk and handed the notebook over to the boy.

“What did you need it for?” asked Harry.

“Well, there was a blueprint in here that I wanted, the person that did the renovation never wrote anything down in paper, and that recipe for rock candy that you use to impersonate real jewels. It’s ingenious.” said Chief Hawkeye.

“That’s all you wanted?” asked Harry in shock. “That’s what I was worried about? A candy recipe and a blueprint?

“That and I saw a recipe for Maple Pork Roast, my daughter can’t make it quite right.” said Chief Hawkeye with a laugh.

“That’s all you wanted? Was a recipe?” said Harry.

“Well, I needed the blueprints too, and it’s easier to get it straight from you, the building was destroyed in a fire and….it’s not easy to read what was where from a pile of ash and rubble.” said Chief Hawkeye.

Harry stared.

“I’d say you should be honored that we needed your assistance, but judging from the look on your face, we should have just come out with what we wanted.” said Chief Hawkeye.

“And I’m getting sort of sick and tired of people saying I owe them or they owe me.” said Harry.

“You’ve talked to Viper haven’t you?” said Chief Hawkeye shaking his head. “He can be a bit…honorable duty happy.”

“You can say that again, wait till I get my hands on that rascal.” said Dr. Nicodemus shortly. “He’s lucky I don’t rip those fangs right out of his mouth.”

“He’s being dealt with.” said Lionus. “Don’t worry about what he said, just do what you want.”

The rest of the students and guests piled down from their dorms and settled in for another day of reading. When the clock finally struck nine, the veil lifted and the fourth book waited to be taken.

“I think I’ll start the reading off today.” said Charlie.

He walked over and picked the book up, starting where he left off. “Couldn’t be more perfect. Chapter Nineteen.”

“This should be interesting.” said Tempest.

“Says you, you weren’t there.” said Harry.

First paragraph, first sentence, first comma.

Sirius paled slightly and pulled Harry closer to himself. “I love you too, Cub.”

First paragraph, end of first sentence.

Harry closed his eyes and smiled as Sirius tightened his hold on him.

First paragraph, third sentence.

Dumbledore smiled over to him. “It seems that you had some sort of an idea before the task even came around.”

Harry and Hagrid blushed slightly.

First paragraph, fourth sentence, first comma.

The school went quiet.

“You’re not even thinking about all the dangerous things you’ve done, just the Quidditch?” said Remus in shock.

Harry shrugged.

“You’re insane, so insane that your father could only dream about being so mad.” said Remus with a laugh.

End of first paragraph.

Remus stopped laughing and looked over to Harry fearfully.
“And people wonder I’m not a happy child.” said Harry with a smirk.

Second paragraph, first sentence.
Sirius smiled and wiped his eyes quickly, he didn’t know just how much he meant to his grandson.

End of second paragraph.
“Eh, just blame it on Peeves.” said Fred.
“We always do.” said George.
“We never blamed it on him.” said Sirius.
“We told him to do it.” said Remus with a smirk. “And he’s always happy to do so.”
“Would you please stop giving them ideas!” said Mrs. Weasley.
“Oh come on, no one gets hurt, and it’s all in good fun.” said Sirius.

Third paragraph, first sentence.
“Severely watered down.” said McGonagall.
“It wasn’t even a drop of what had happened in his life.” said Professor Flitwick.

Third paragraph, second sentence, end of first parenthesis.
“And you didn’t say hardly anything at all.” said Colin.

Third paragraph, second sentence, end of second parenthesis.
“I bet people loved that.” said Lionus with a chuckle.
“Pissed a lot of people off.” said Charlie.

End of third paragraph.
“And here you thought that Harry wanted to keep him out of it.” said Ron darkly.
Mr. Diggory flushed.

“What about Rita Skeeter don’t you understand? She’ll only write what she wants to write.” said Professor Sprout.

Fourth paragraph, first sentence.

“Journalists with poison pens should never be allowed in a school.” said Nightstrike. “They can do an awful lot of damage.”

“It was the only reporter that the Daily Prophet could get ahold of that day.” said Madam Bones.

End of fourth paragraph.

“It was a little more sappy than what I could ever expect coming out of your mouth.” said Sirius tapping Harry’s nose.

Article, second sentence.

“I could buy you saying that, when you were six.” said Dr. Clark shaking his head. “You were really affectionate back in those days.”

Article, third sentence.

“Of for the love of…” said Harry.

“You know, I don’t think I’ve ever seen you cry over your parents.” said Mrs. McFinn thoughtfully.

“I talked about them, with…Officer McFinn, but no one else.” said Harry.

“Oh, honey.” said Mrs. McFinn patting Harry’s shoulder.

End of article

“Pardon me while I gag.” said Harry.

“I thought it was touching.” said Mrs. Weasley softly.

“I’m getting touched alright, with the stomach flu.” said Harry.

“They are looking over you dear boy.” said Dumbledore softly.
“I realize that, but it’s no one else’s business if I believe that or not.” said Harry with a shrug.

“Someone’s cranky.” said Sirius ruffling Harry’s hair.

“I’ll show you cranky.” said Harry.

Fifth paragraph.

“That must have been the best part of that article for you.” said Lionus.

“‘Oh, it was the best thing I had ever read.”’ said Harry sarcastically.

Article, second sentence, second comma.

“Wait, what?” said Rudolph with a laugh.

“You stopped me before I could continue!” said Charlie also laughing.

Article, second sentence, third comma.

“She’s/He’s like my sister/brother.” said Hermione and Harry together.

Article, second sentence, third comma, fifth word.

“Well, she got one thing right at least.” said Leroy. “You are very pretty for a fifteen year old girl.”

Hermione blushed.

End of article.

“She’s only trying to make me look like a superhero.” said Harry with a groan.

Sixth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“You might, when I kick you right where it counts.” said Harry.
“He can wipe the floor with you.” said a third year Gryffindor indignantly.

“Someone’s getting pissed.” said Fred and George in a singsong voice.

A few students groaned as Harry turned red.

“That sucks.” said a seventh year boy.

“Doing that right in front of your crush.” said his friend.

“These books suck again.” said Harry.

Remus reached over and squeezed his arm supportively.

“Why did you feel stupid?” asked Charlie.

“Cause he snapped at her.” said Hermione.

“I wasn’t the one that had to worry about the task later on. And Harry’s was being ridiculed for things he never even said.” said Hermione.

Just that moment, Pansy herself came into the Great Hall and plopped herself down in her chair, all the while glaring at Harry. Her face had a green looking blotch starting from the right side of her chin and going up the right side of her face and looping down to her left cheek.

“What the hell happened to you?” asked another Slytherin girl.

“It was his fault.” said Pansy through gnashed teeth.

“Well, whatever, you missed some awesome parties!” said the girl with a smile.

“Shut up.” growled Pansy.

“And she was saying Hermione wasn’t pretty?” snorted Fred.

End of dialogue set.

“I think in your case, we’d need to judge against a kappa.” said George.

“And besides, chipmunks are cute!” said Parvati.

“Hey, she stole my line!” said Fred angrily.

Dialogue line.

“I can ignore a lot of stuff, but it wasn’t working, not without Ron.” said Harry.

Ron looked down.

Tenth paragraph, third sentence, first sentence.

Mrs. McFinn set her plate of toast away from herself.

End of tenth paragraph.

“Seriously? You know all about Rita Skeeter and how she likes to inflate her stories, and you know how Harry is and you believe HER?” said Bill.

Ron mumbled quietly.

Eleventh paragraph, first sentence, first semi-colon.

“I didn’t do a damn thing wrong.” said Harry.
“That’s a reasonable request.” said Remus. “I’d want an apology before I go and strike up a conversation.”

“Yeah, that and it’s obvious that Ron is the one that has to start the conversation, cause Harry’s tried. So why are you trying to force Harry into it?” said Sirius.

“Because they miss each other!” said Hermione.

“Sure they miss each other, but you can only pull a mule so far, at some point, he’s got to want to go the that way.” said Dr. Clark.

“Huh?” asked a first year. “What does a mule have to do with it?”

“Harry’s the one that’s pulling the mule, and the mule is Ron. Ron’s the one that has to agree to Harry’s demands. Until then, they both aren’t going anywhere.”

“So the side you have to work on is the side with the stubborn mule, Ron.” said Bill sending his little brother a scowl.

“Miss Granger, did you give this same speech to Mr. Weasley?” said Dumbledore.

“No…I said something different…” said Hermione.

“And that was?” asked Dumbledore.

“I…I don’t remember.” said Hermione.

“I think everyone and their Great-Great Grandmothers know that.” said Hannah.

“God, it’s just like when it was your turn to lead the pack.” said Sirius shaking his head.
“There was nothing wrong with studying for that test.” said Remus. “I was one of the only ones to pass it with a O, you lot fell asleep and failed it.”

“Still, it was dead boring, all that studying and for a stupid history test.” said Sirius.

Twelfth paragraph, fourth sentence.

“Theories don’t do squat.” said Fred shaking his head.

“Except put you to sleep.” said George.

End of twelfth paragraph.

Thirteenth paragraph, first sentence.

“Just as meddlesome as your father was.” said Snape.

“Proud of it.” said Harry with a smirk.

End of thirteenth paragraph.

A few girls blushed and giggled quietly.

Dialogue set, second sentence.

“Bet he would have loved hearing that.” said Ron with a snicker.

Dialogue set, third sentence.

“Oh, don’t say that around Harry! That’ll open up a lot of questions you don’t want even think about answering.” said Tonks.

“Too late, I thought about it.” said Harry.

End of dialogue set.

Hermione blushed as several people chuckled.
“Kind of like what your face looks like now.” said Harry with a laugh. Ron’s face was full of disbelief and horror that Hermione didn’t understand just how awesome the move was.

“I get the same feeling when exams come.” said Neville.

“Why did you ask that?” asked Ginny from where she sat.

“I thought she’d have more fun with Ron, and then…I could just stalk them for the day.” said Harry.

“That sounds a bit creepy.” said Fred.

“I was just trying to get them to be friends again.” said Hermione.

“Did you tell Ron he was going to meet Harry?” asked Mr. Weasley.

“Well, no…I knew that wasn’t going to work, and Harry’s a bit more sensible.” said Hermione.

“Except when Ron’s being a prat.” said Harry.

“I could hardly believe boys are so stupid that they’re not going to speak to each other cause they don’t agree.” said Hermione.

“My mum and Aunt Petunia didn’t speak to each other for years because they didn’t agree.” said Harry with a stern look over to Hermione, who chewed her lip.
“She’s got a point.” said Sirius.

“Maybe I should have just stayed in the dorm…” said Harry moving off Sirius’ shoulder and leaning back into the chair. He didn’t notice the look of hurt on his godfather’s face when he did that. “I would have avoided a headache.”

“Nah, you weren’t able to go to Hogsmeade all the easily the year before. You could have gone without the cloak, but when Hermione pointed out Ron, you could have just turned around and headed back to the castle.” said Sirius.

“I was trying to get them to be friends again!” said Hermione.

“When Ron is ready, he’ll fix the problem himself, he dug the hole, now he needs to fill it back up.” said Sirius.

Sixteenth paragraph.

Seventeenth paragraph.

“Which shows just how horrid human children can act.” snarled Tempest.

“We’re not always horrid, just…sometimes.” said Harry.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Ron was always really good at that.” said Harry.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Eighteenth paragraph, first sentence.

“Keep the damn cloak on.” said Charlie quickly. “When are we getting to the dragons for crying out loud?”

“In a bit I think.” said Harry.
“Wonder if she tried writing my obituary?” said Harry thoughtfully.

“I don’t want to ever read that.” said Sirius.

“Well, I don’t want to ever read yours.” said Harry.

“I didn’t, I really didn’t and I still don’t want to think about it.” said Hermione.

Ron looked down shamefully. His father had told him off for abandoning his best friend and not sticking by him when he really needed it, and his father wasn’t the only one, he had been told off by almost every one of his family members. Percy didn’t bother, he thought Ron had a point, but when Ron voiced what Percy had said, they took off after Percy and gave him what for.

“Very good Harry…wait one minute…at the age you learn about hags, it’s not mentioned in any school book that disguises do not work well against them.” said Remus.

“You’re showing your intellect again.” said Sirius ruffling Harry’s hair.

“You should have walked over.” said George.

“Yeah, we were telling Ron how much of an idiot he was.” said Fred.

“And how he should go up to you and apologize, or we’d beat him up.” said Lee.

“Do it, it’ll make you feel better.” said Lee.
“Hey, didn’t Harry’s predictions say that he’d be stabbed in the back by a person he thought was a friend?” asked Katie.

Ron cringed.

“That’s creepy, especially since you were faking it.” said Sirius with wide eyes.

“I wouldn’t risk it, some of them have petitioned that kids be kept out of the pubs.” said Professor Sprout.

“Why is that?” asked Hermione.

Harry and Ginny looked at each other, remembering their first date and the mad man blocking their way to the Three Broomsticks.

“Well, alcoholic drinks are limited to only three servings a day when students are allowed inside.” said Kingsley. “That doesn’t go well with the alcoholics in the area.”

“Poor them.” said Mrs. McFinn.

“Another subtle hint that it’s a lost cause.” said Harry.

“What were you planning Miss Granger?” asked McGonagall.

“To rally the house-elves and get them to go on strike.” said Hermione.

“Which would have made the students go without lunch and dinner while we find replacements for the kitchen.” said Dumbledore with a small smile, “Though, the house-elves wouldn’t have gone along with it.”

“I would have volunteered to cook.” said Harry with a smile.
He answered that a little too quickly.” said Hermione.

“Big shock.” said a sixth year Ravenclaw student.

“I decided to support the both of you.” said Cho quietly.

“Oh sweetie…” said Mrs. McFinn grasping the young man’s hand. “So if anyone wants to switch foreheads with me, be my guest.” said Harry through gritted teeth.

“And there I was, almost having a panic attack.” said Harry. “Why? You knew more magic than they did.” said Hermione. “That was the point, what was I going to show, what could I show without someone accusing me of cheating or having a teacher leading me by the hand throughout the whole thing. Though…the faker did lead me through the whole thing by the hand.” said Harry thoughtfully.

Sirius smiled proudly as he draped his arm around Harry’s shoulder.

End of twenty-seventh paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Twenty-eighth paragraph, fourth sentence.
“I have to keep apologizing to her, I just don’t trust anyone with my food and drink.” said Moody.

“Neither do we, that’s why we cast purifying charms all over our food. It removes the chances of being poisoned.” said Chief Hawkeye.

End of twenty-eighth paragraph.

“Haven’t you been eating Harry’s food though?” asked Fred.

“Albus assured me that I could trust the lad with my food.” said Moody with a sideways look to Harry.

“That’s a massive honor.” said Remus.

Twenty-ninth paragraph, second sentence.

The school erupted in laughter.

“I’m sorry Cub, but that is too funny.” said Sirius clutching his side.

Twenty-ninth paragraph, third sentence.

“Why the hell were you standing?” asked Fred.

“I think I was going to go to the bathroom.” said Harry.

End of twenty-ninth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Thirtieth paragraph.

“How long has that man been studying me?” asked Moody staring hard at the book.

“Apparently a long time, but thanks to the Minister, we will never know.” said McGonagall.

“Why? What did he do now?” asked Chief Hawkeye.

“You’ll find out.” said Harry.
"There’s the dead giveaway that that bloke isn’t you.” said Tonks with a giggle.

"Though, yours is a bit harder to actually figure out who is under the cloak.” said Moody carefully.

“Wonder why that is.” said Sirius.

Dumbledore looked up to enchanted ceiling.

“Well, he knows.” said Harry in a whisper. Sirius looked over to Dumbledore with curious eyes.

“Not even you could hear it?” asked Ron.

“Well, I couldn’t catch all of it.” said Hermione.

“Why shouldn’t he?” asked Hagrid a little hurtfully.

“Make everyone happy.” said Harry.
“I think it’s about time you start making yourself happy dear boy. You’ve done enough for everyone else.” said Dumbledore.

End of thirty-fourth paragraph.

“Yeah, the year prior he pretty much carried me to the castle when I visited him before nightfall, ah mixed messages…how you plague my life.” said Harry with a smile.

Thirty-fifth paragraph, third sentence.

“Maybe you should have let us handle that kind of stuff.” said Fred.

“Yeah, that kind of stuff isn’t for amateurs.” said George.

End of thirty-fifth paragraph.

Thirty-sixth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“What are you going to do, Hagrid?” asked Professor Flitwick.

Hagrid looked down shamefully. “Well, I…I couldn’ just let him walk into somethin’ dangerous.”

Thirty-seventh paragraph.

“Strange…I was usin’ a brown comb. How did yeh see the pieces?” asked Hagrid.

Harry blushed a bright red.

“James would be so proud.” cooed Mrs. McFinn wiping her eyes.

Dialogue line.

Hagrid smiled down at Harry while Harry himself scratched the back of his head.
“Not after Norbert he won’t.” muttered Ron. Hermione giggled.

“Points for trying.” said Rudolph with a smile.

Snickers and chuckles trickled around the Great Hall.

“Don’t you believe it.” said Chief Hawkeye.

“Why do you say that?” asked Tonks.

“I’ve learned that when you’re trying to impress a woman with some secret info, they’ll spread it to others.” said Chief Hawkeye.

“Not every girl is like that.” said Hermione.

“The ones that I tried to impress when I was younger sure took the information I had and ran with it.” said Chief Hawkeye.

“Was it top secret information that could have caused the entire collapse of a country?” said Colin excitedly.
“No. I had some inside information on a horse at the racetrack. The odds against it were massive, I would have won a huge pot, would have been a rich man at the age of twenty-two. But she told her friends, who told their friends and so on and so on, the odds went down and I didn’t make nearly as much as I had hoped.” said Chief Hawkeye.

“You bet on horses?” asked Fred.

“Used to, had to give it up.” said Chief Hawkeye.

“Why is that?” asked George.

“I kept stealing other people’s things and selling them to support that habit.” said Chief Hawkeye.

“Sounds like someone else who was addicted to gambling.” said Mrs. Weasley looking at a blushing Mr. Weasley.

“I didn’t steal…” said Mr. Weasley with a hurt tone in his voice.

Forty-second paragraph.

“Yeah, I wasn’t in the best moods that night.” said Harry.

Forty-third paragraph.

“Well, thank god Hagrid’s with you.” said Dr. Clark.

“Oh, but Hagrid can’t see where Harry is.” said Mrs. McFinn worriedly. “He won’t know if Harry’s in trouble or not!”

Forty-fourth paragraph.

Forty-fifth paragraph.

“That was cheating, Hagrid.” scolded McGonagall lightly.

“I ain’t ashamed of it, I…didn’t want to lose Harry.” said Hagrid. “I knew he could take on anythin’ that comes his way, but a full grown female dragon is a bit much.”

“I agree with Hagrid, they should have saved the surprise task for the second one and gave them a clue to what was going to happen for the first one.” said Charlie. “Being unprepared around a dragon can only lead to St. Mungo’s intensive care department, or an early grave.”

Forty-sixth paragraph.

“I just about fainted.” said Harry.
“Yeah, that happened to me when I first saw them.” said Charlie with a smile. “They’re just so beautiful, it’s staggering.”

“Not the reason I was going to faint.” said Harry in a whisper to Sirius.

Forty-seventh paragraph, second sentence, sixth comma.

“Both.” said Charlie.

End of forty-seventh paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“You’re mental.” said Lioius.

Dialogue line.

Forty-eighth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“One wizard doing it does no good, it must be done by at least seven wizards or witches.” said Charlie.

Forty-ninth paragraph.

Fiftieth paragraph.

Dialogue set.

“I wasn’t thinking about who was talking at the time.” said Harry.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue set, first sentence.
“The worst of the lot in the way of aggression.” said Charlie matter of factly. “Hungarian Horntails are born with the instinct to kill first and investigate later. Only the best dragon keepers take care of those ones.” said Charlie.

“What happens if a rookie tries to interact with it.” asked a first year Slytherin.

“You’ll turn into dragon chow.” said Charlie.

Dialogue set, second sentence, first dash.

“That one you have to be wary of, it’s pretty clever, as long as it’s not in the air you shouldn’t have a problem, it’s one of the fastest fliers in the dragon kingdom.” said Charlie.

“Is there anything really strange about them?” asked a third year.

“Strange compared to you, or strange compared to me?” asked Charlie. “I’ve seen a lot of dragon characteristics and oddities.”

“Strange to you.” said Ron.

“Well, Welshes can breathe fire when they snore.” said Charlie thoughtfully. “And when they need to sharpen their teeth they tend to drag their teeth along huge boulders or tree trunks.”

“Cool.” said a few first years.

Dialogue set, second sentence, second dash.

“That one isn’t too bad, despite it’s mouth is a little smaller than other dragons, it has sharper teeth, though it has shortest attention span.” said Charlie.

The same third year opened his mouth. Charlie intercepted him.

“Despite the shortest snouts, they have the longest tongues, they do a third of their hunting on creatures that live underground. Moles to them are like Harry’s Knickerbocker Glories to us.” said Charlie.

“How do they catch moles with their tongues?” asked George.

“Their tongues are about as maneuverable as a whip and they have a small fang on the end of it. They can move their tongue into a hole and send it in after the little vermin and stabbing it with the fang paralyzes it.” said Charlie.

“Can it paralyze people with it?” asked Fred.

“It’ll make the point where they hit you with their tongue numb, but no, it won’t affect us much.” said Charlie.
“What’s that one like?” asked a first year Gryffindor student.

“That one is my favorite kind. Their internal fires are a lot hotter than normal dragons. You can barely touch them without sustaining second degree burn.” said Charlie. “The reason their bodies are so much hotter is because their scales are thinner, they’re known to fly straight up into the sky and absorb all the heat that the sunlight has to offer and even dive into molten lava.”

“Don’t they burn up in the lava?” asked a second year Hufflepuff girl.

“The old scales do get burned up in the heat, but the lava hardens where the scales burned away and forms temporary scales.” said Charlie. “The scales then grow underneath the lava and when they’re done growing the lava gets scratched off when they rub against each other during their grooming periods.”

“Grooming periods?” asked Fred.

“They huddle together once a week and get rid of all the old lava scales that are on each other’s bodies.” said Charlie. “The young Chinese Fireballs run around and play with the other infant dragons. Their scales aren’t able to withstand the lava and they’re not strong enough to fly into the air.”

The students stared at Charlie in awe.

“Another fantastic Dragon lesson Mr. Weasley.” said Dumbledore clapping his hands.
“Oooh, when we found out that the champions were supposed to take an egg with them, we were livid.” said Charlie. “We threatened to toss Bagman, Crouch and the Minister in with the Hungarian Horntail and Swedish Short Snout.”

---

“I could hardly look at Abigail when we took her back home.” said Charlie looking at Harry.

“Abigail?” said Bill leaning away from his brother.

“We only call them by their names at the reserve.” said Charlie with a blush.

---

“Better keep an eye on Hagrid.” said Sirius with a laugh.

---

“Aw, Charlie cares.” said Ginny with a smile.

“He’s going head to head with my dragons, I want to make sure my dragons don’t eat him.” said Charlie. “Or roast him, or rip him apart…”

“Thank you Charlie dear…that’s enough.” said Mrs. Weasley covering her ears.

“I also didn’t want mom to kill me for what the dragons could have done.” said Charlie in a whisper.

---

“I’ve seen brand new rookies get beaten up pretty bad in their first few months.” said Charlie.
“So was I.” said Sirius.

“Me too, I was going absolutely mad at my place.” said Remus.

“Why didn’t you come, Harry could have used the support.” said Hermione.

“When the Triwizard Tournament first started, I was advised that I was no longer welcomed there unless I got it cleared with the school governors.” said Remus.

“Didn’t stop you from coming here now.” said Percy stiffly.

“Course not, we don’t have students from other schools here this year, and I no longer care.” said Remus.

Dialogue set, sixth sentence.

“There was, but the one person I thought was my friend undermined my endeavors.” said Dumbledore.

End of dialogue set.

Harry groaned.

“Ah, bless you, you such a little cutie!” said Sirius pinching Harry’s cheek.

“Get off.” said Harry swatting Sirius’ hand away.

Fifty-fourth paragraph.

“Now, I wan’ an apology, I thought you got snapped up by one of them dragons.” said Hagrid shaking his large finger over to the bowl. “Nearly lost me mind.”

Harry was taken aback, he hadn’t thought of that. “Sorry Hagrid, I didn’t mean to make you worry like that.” said Harry sheepishly.

“Didn’t sleep at all that night, thought I lost yeh.” said Hagrid.

Harry shuffled his feet.

“That’s the downside of that cloak.” muttered Sirius.

Fifty-fifth paragraph, fourth sentence, first pause.

“That would have been bad.” said Ron.
“I don’t think we would have been able to get there in time.” said Charlie in a whisper to his brother.

Fifty-fifth paragraph, fifth sentence, second dash.

“And against a fire breathing dragon, wood is not a good idea.” said Harry. “I was sort of hoping to have a sword or something. Maybe Hagrid to protect me and toss me out of the arena.”

End of fifty-fifth paragraph.

“And how to make it look like I didn’t cheat and get a teacher’s help.” said Harry.

Fifty-sixth paragraph, first sentence, second comma.

“You can’t get from the forest to the tower in under fifteen minutes, you’d have to either fly up there or use a time turner.” said Bill.

“Never again.” said Harry. “That was enough of a headache.”

“I agree.” said Hermione.

End of fifty-sixth paragraph.

Fifty-seventh paragraph.

“Shit, don’t answer back.” said Sirius covering his eyes.

Fifty-eighth paragraph.

“What the heck…what was he doing there?” asked Remus.

“Trying to scope out the task, and tell Victor what it is.” said Nightstrike with a smile.

Dialogue line.

Fifty-ninth paragraph, first sentence, first semi-colon.

“Sort of hard to think an animal hit him when I struck his arm.” said Harry with a roll of his eyes.
Sixtieth paragraph.

“I’d rather you not be out there in the dark.” said Sirius.

“You’ve done it a time or two I’ll bet.” said Harry.

“I’m a hypocrite.” said Sirius with a shrug.

“Do as we say, not as we do.” said Remus with a smile.

Sixty-first paragraph.

Sixty-second paragraph.

“BLATANT CHEATING! My son was the only one honorable enough to go by the rules!” shouted Mr. Diggory.

“Amos, that’s enough.” said Mrs. Diggory gripping her husbands arm. “They didn’t do anything really wrong, Hagrid was looking out for Harry and the other two were looking out for their own champions.”

“But Cedric wasn’t warned!” said Mr. Diggory angrily.

“Knowing Harry, he warned Cedric.” said Mrs. McFinn.

“Doubtful.” said Mr. Diggory snidely.

“Sorry you feel that way.” said Dr. Clark shortly.

Sixty-third paragraph.

“I’d still be down by the forest.” said Neville.

Dialogue line.

“Holy crap you freaking fast.” said Katie.

Dialogue set.

“It was a near thing, Colin and Dennis weren’t going to bed.” said Hermione.
“And besides, your aim sort of sucks with that thing.” said Ron.

“I’d get the best aim in our group to do it, but he was busy being a prat.” said Harry.

Sixty-fourth paragraph, fourth sentence.

“I should have been told about those badges, they would have been pitched right in the bin.” said McGonagall sternly.

“I would have thrown them in there as well, ostracizing one student like that is despicable.” said Flitwick.

“Nothing I’m not used to.” said Harry leaning against Sirius heavily.

The Great Hall was almost suffocated in the thick silence.

End of sixty-fourth paragraph.

Sixty-fifth paragraph, first sentence.

“I was debating whether to let you just rest. You looked like someone came after you with a Beater’s bat.” said Sirius.

Sixty-fifth paragraph, third sentence, second comma.

“That smile made my whole month.” said Sirius kissing the top of Harry’s head. “I wish I could put a smile on your face a lot more often.”

End of sixty-fifth paragraph.

“You look like you’ve gone two rounds with a Dementor and you ask me how I’m doing?” said Sirius shaking his head and holding Harry closer.

Sixty-sixth paragraph, second sentence, first dash.

Sirius made a sound like a whipped dog.

“Poor pretty boy.” said Remus patting Sirius on his back.
“Thank goodness for that.” said Sirius with a bright smile.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, first sentence, second dash.

“I wouldn’t have believed you, not even one little bit.” said Sirius smiling down at Harry. “I had half a mind to climb through the fire and just rock you to sleep you looked so rough.”

“I wish you had, I could have used a hug.” muttered Harry nuzzling his head onto Sirius’ chest slightly.

Sirius smiled down at his godson and pulled Harry a little forward and then turned him around, his legs and feet were once more draped across Mrs. McFinn and Dr. Clark’s laps. This time however, Sirius held onto Harry, cradling the fifteen year old in his arms.

“I wish there was more room in that thing, we’re aren’t getting any Monster time over here.” said Rudolph.

“You can have him tomorrow.” said Sirius.

Dialogue set, second sentence, second dash.

“I figured you could do with getting that off your chest.” said Sirius with a kind smile.

End of dialogue set.

“That knocked me for a loop, sort of made me think of Peter’s betrayal.” said Sirius.

Ron flinched visibly.

Dialogue line.

“That would have broke my heart, him talking so desperately.” said Remus.

“Would’ve nothing, it did.” said Sirius.

Sixty-seventh paragraph, third sentence.

“Managed to grab myself something to eat while I was at it.” said Sirius with a smirk.
“What did you nick?” asked Fred.

“Sour Cream and Onion crisps.” said Sirius.

“That’s all you took?” asked George.

“I didn’t want to freak them out and have them think they were robbed of much more,” said Sirius. “I figured they wouldn’t miss a bag of snacks.”

End of sixty-seventh paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“All depends on your point of view, I’ll worry about the Death Eaters and dragon, you just worry about the scaly fire breathing giant.”

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“My brain was about to short circuit.” said Harry.

Dialogue set, second sentence.

“You’d lose that bet my boy.” said Dumbledore. “I asked Moody to teach to help prevent any trouble that we may have, especially with someone attempting to…” he looked at the back of Harry’s head. “Well, to help protect the students.”

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

“He didn’t buy his way out, that’s a first.” said Sirius.

Dialogue set, second sentence.

“The things they want to do to him, it’s not pretty.” said Sirius. “Tonks isn’t even old enough to hear some of the stuff.”

“What do you mean?” asked Tonks.

“They get graphic, and not just killing graphic.” said Sirius.
“He doesn’t promote them, he’s found that he can teach them through a loophole. If the Ministry catch wind that he has been telling students doing them isn’t wrong, they’ll swoop down and he’ll be back in Azkaban.” said Dumbledore. “He’s been lucky so far.”

End of dialogue set.

“He’s good, but not that good.” said Moody.

End of dialogue set.

“Doesn’t take much with Fudge in charge.” said Remus.

End of dialogue set.

“I know what you talk like and what nonsense she spews.” said Sirius.

“Why didn’t you like her?” asked a third year Slytherin girl interestedly. Leroy was perhaps one of the more popular adults with the children. He was nice, gentle, a great dancer and extremely talented….and handsome to boot.

“She loved gossiping and spreading lies about people, she wanted to be in a relationship with me. But thankfully at that point, I was already betrothed to Bella and had fallen madly in love with this nut.” said Leroy nodding towards Rudolph. “But despite being betrothed and having a crush on Rudy, I was seeing a pretty fifth year Hufflepuff girl.

“Well, when Rita found out that I was seeing someone, she started spreading rumors and lies all about the girl, and when Bella caught wind of it, she was a first year at the time and I was a sixth year, she tormented Mary something awful. Both Rita and Bella were given six month long detentions, and that would happen right after they got back from being suspended for six additional months.” said Leroy.

“Why such a steep punishment?” asked Draco.

“Mary tried committing suicide. I got there in time to send for help and she recovered alright. They both would have been expelled, but Bella’s father and Rita’s uncle were both school governors at the time and didn’t feel their little princesses weren’t all that in the wrong and lightened the penalty as much as they could.”

“Parents of students shouldn’t be allowed to be governors.” said Emmeline Vance.

“James was asked be a school governor, and he agreed, he was going to resign when you’d get into school, so you’d be free to get into all sorts of mischief.” said Sirius soothingly.

But Harry was slowly drifting off the sleep.

Dialogue set, fifth sentence, semi-colon.

“They should, constant vigilance is what is needed!” said Mad-Eye angrily.

End of dialogue set.

“Ever will have.” said Madam Bones proudly.

Dialogue line.

Sixty-eighth paragraph.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

“Most kids your age don’t give two knuts for news, you follow it closely.” said Sirius shaking his head as he held Harry closer to himself.

Dialogue line.

“Poor Bertha, no one deserves to accidentally run into him.” said Remus.
“She’d accidentally go into the boys’ loo, sit at the wrong table, and get lost on the way to class, and that was just when she was in seventh year!” said Sirius.

“She did a lot more forgetting in her early years.” said Remus.

“I was always impressed when she remembered to breathe.” said Sirius.

“She remembered gossip easily enough, it was the important things she couldn’t.” said Remus.

“And generous enough to forgive him.” said Remus.

“He’s dead.” said Bill.

“Didn’t need to hear that, for a second time.” said Sirius.

“Didn’t need to hear it the first time.” said Remus.

“Yeah, he just saw that.” said Charlie.

“Right when Harry’s shown an easy way to survive, someone comes.” said George.
“Typical.” said Fred shaking his head.

Dialogue line.

Seventieth paragraph.

“I’ll never tell.” said Harry mumbling in his sleep.

“Shh…” shushed Sirius and Remus soothingly, Remus brushed the white hair out of Harry’s eyes. The black hair was coming back in extremely slowly, but Sirius and Remus didn’t mind, the white hair was really starting to grow on them.

Seventy-first paragraph.

“I’d been pissed.” said Neville.

Seventy-second paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Harry’s lost his patience.” said George.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

“Holy…you were flipping out and keeping your cool?” said a seventh year Ravenclaw looking at Harry in awe, “My mind would have short circuited.”

Dialogue line.

A few people gave a low whistle.

Seventy-third paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Man, you two can have some really ugly fights.” said Charlie.
End of chapter

“I had a long overdue talk with myself.” said Ron shuffling his feet.

“Who wants the book now?” asked Charlie. “I can’t wait for the two of you to get back to being friends.”

“The task should be next.” said Hermione turning white.

“Let Tempest take the book, she hasn’t read yet.” said Nightstrike with a smile as he ran and fetched the book.

“If I must.” said Tempest tossing back her long hair and took ahold of the book. Firenze looked slightly excited as he stood beside her.

“Chapter Twenty” said Tempest clearly.

“I’m going to squeeze Harry to death if I’m not careful.” said Sirius.

Chapter End Notes

Thanks for reading, please reivew
“Why do you even pack that hat?” asked Ernie. “I left it at home the second year.”

“I was asking how she got her brothers speaking to each other when they had a fight like Ron and Harry was having.” said Hermione. “I told her that none of my brothers had a fight like the one they were having. But if they did have a fight that takes longer than a day for them to apologize, Mom gives them a list of chores to do and they have to do it all together, and eat lunch next to each other. Then when Dad gets home, he has a talk with them.” said Ginny.

“Does that happen often?” asked Mrs. McFinn.

“Between me and Ron, maybe once a year or so, between everyone else and Percy, once a month.” said Ginny.

“I didn’t even notice.” said Hermione looking over to Harry who was sleeping in Sirius’ arms.

“He’s still way too damn light.” said Sirius. He brought his knee up to help support Harry’s thin frame.

“Walking around the lake is a wonderful place to have a private chat.” said Dumbledore with a smile.
“Children shouldn’t have that sort of goal.” said Tempest stiffly.

“Man, you’re a bad influence on them, Hermione, making them go to the library every year.” said Fred.

“Yeah, cause you really don’t want to talon clip an adult dragon by hand.” said Charlie. “You can only clip the talons of babies without magic.”

“The cure for scale-rot differs for each species.” said Charlie. “Some need acid, lava, dirt, water, the Swedish Short-Snout all you need is muggle floor cleaner called Pine-Sol, used to have to get rid of that with several cleaning spells, but a bath of that takes care of it right away.”

“How do they get scale-rot?” asked a first year Slytherin.

“When they don’t do their regular grooming for six weeks they can get it. If they’re sick they don’t want to even think about cleaning their scales, and even dragons forget to clean themselves when they’re younger.” said Charlie.

“Hey…” said Hagrid.

“He doesn’t want to give the dragon a pedicure Hagrid, he’s trying to survive.” said Remus gently.

“Don’t stop reading that one, the spell is in there.” said Sirius, remembering the book.

“Oops.” said Hermione.
“Why are you blushing?” asked Percy looking at his older brother.

“Um…you may want to keep that book in the Restricted Section.” said Charlie stammering.

“Do I want to know?” asked Lionus with a snicker.

“It’s not like that, but…there is a bit….nevermind.” said Charlie shaking his head quickly.

“Did you even notice how fast he was going through the books?” asked Parvati.

“You take the fangs away, they’ll get really pissed off and stomp you to death. And nothing is stopping them from eating you whole.” said Bill.

“Exactly.” said Charlie.

“I can transfigure a dragon, but I’d magically drained for two days.” said McGonagall.

“I should hope not, any school age you’re only supposed to be able to know about it, not know the incantation.” said Chief Hawkeye.

“Ouch.” said a few students.

“I don’t blame him, she wasn’t the one that had to go up against one of those giant lizards.” said a Ravenclaw student.
“Poor Harry.” said Mrs. Weasley worriedly.

“Those stalker girls were getting annoying, I’m amazed that Madam Pince never kicked them out.” said Hermione.

“They were, several times.” said Professor Flitwick.

“Don’t they know a scarf goes around your neck?” asked Terry.

“They were hoping he’d sign it while it was around her waist.” said Hermione.

The teachers stared.

Everyone in the school turned and stared at the boy sleeping in his godfather’s arms. Harry loved Hogwarts, how could he even think of leaving?

“Finally common sense comes to the boy.” said Snape with a sneer.

“You’re asking for a fat lip.” said Sirius growling over to the Potions professor.

Harry groaned and despite being dead asleep, he raised his hand and lightly slapped Sirius’ face.

“Down boy.”

Sirius looked at his young godson.

“We know who’s going to be the head of house when we get home.” said Remus.

“I’m thinking Holly, then maybe Harry.” said Dr. Clark with a smile.
A few people looked at each other with a horrified expression on their faces. Were these books and scrolls hiding the really bad experiences?

“Oh sweetie, I’m so proud of you.” said Mrs. McFinn looking over to Harry, giving his ankle a squeeze.

“There’s nothing wrong with my son’s friends!” said Mr. Diggory shortly.

Mr. Diggory squirmed slightly.

“You vandal!” shouted Mr. Diggory standing up and scowling at Harry.

Leroy and Rudolph stood up before Remus could and pointed their wands at the man.
“You even think about waking him, deceased son or not, we’ll hex you into next Tuesday.” said Rudolph sternly.

Dialogue line.

This was exactly what Harry had been hoping for.

“Wow, he had Cedric pegged.” said Ernie.

Twelfth paragraph.

Dialogue set, first sentence.

“How hope he compensated my son for destroying his property.” said Mr. Diggory with a snarl.

“He did Amos, now please calm down.” said Mrs. Diggory.

“How do you know?” asked Mr. Diggory.

“Cedric wrote to me and told me all about it.” said Mrs. Diggory.

“He never told me!” said Mrs. Diggory.

“How could he, all you wrote to him about was how he should throttle Harry the first chance he got and humiliate him in school.” said Mrs. Diggory.

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

“There you go, he told Cedric about the dragons.” said Mrs. McFinn.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Thirteenth paragraph.

“That’s right Harry, share the panic.” said Remus with a smirk.

Dialogue line.
“Bad time to say that.” said Nightstrike.

One of the few honest people in this school, and no one believes him.” said Madam Bones shaking her head.

“Yet he doesn’t mention Voldemort.” said Remus.

“Dragon might not stand a chance.” said Seamus.

“Don’t bet on that.” said Charlie proudly.

“I don’t blame Diggory, can’t trust everyone that comes up your way with information.” said Moody.
Dumbledore leaned forward in his chair. Harry was going into a room with a Death Eater, alone.

Eighteenth paragraph.

“You’re strange, Cub.” said Sirius shaking his head as he gave Harry’s torso a squeeze.

Nineteenth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Twentieth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“At least he’s inspecting his surroundings.” said Moody.

Twenty-first paragraph, second sentence.

Remus gave a full body shiver.

Twenty-first paragraph, third sentence.

“Excellent.” said Rivers with a smile.

End of twenty-first paragraph.

Twenty-second paragraph, first sentence.

“Mine’s the real deal.” said Moody.

End of twenty-second paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, second sentence.
“And telling their significant others where they were the night before.” said Sirius with a chuckle.

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Twenty-third paragraph, first sentence.

“And hold me as hostage.” said Moody with a growl.

End of twenty-third paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“He told me to tell yeh.” said Hagrid looking confused.

Twenty-fourth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“He’s got the faker there, Harry didn’t know what Hagrid wanted…” said Remus but then looked at Hagrid slowly. “You…planned that Hagrid…you made sure Harry couldn’t be blamed for it and you’d take the fall.”

“Didn’t want nothin’ to go back on him, he didn’t ask for all this teh happen.” said Hagrid.

“I think we’ve been underestimating him.” whispered Snape to McGonagall.

Twenty-fifth paragraph.

“Is there some misconception that I’m not.” said Dumbledore.

“Yes.” said a lot of people loudly.

“With you being the strongest wizard the world really knows, yes, I can see how they’d think you aren’t human.” said Dr. Nicodemus.
“Nothing that was going to avoid him getting snapped up in the dragon’s jaws.” muttered Mr. Weasley.

“That’s true.” said Tonks.

“You’ve got more strengths in your little finger than most people have in their whole bodies.” said Sirius smiling down at Harry.

“He’s got a point, the dragons are a bit bigger than a snitch.” said Bathilda.

“It is when he’s trying to water down his thinking and then on top of that freak out about facing a dragon.” said Hannah.
“Tall order.” said Ron. “He and I were about on the same level with that spell.”

“He worked overtime to master it.” said Hermione.

“He apologized big time after he got the spell down. He bought me ten galleons worth of candy.” said Hermione with a smile.

“Where was I for that?” asked Ron.

“I gave you the chocolate frogs.” said Hermione.

“I was all for skiving off Divination, but Arithmacy? Absolutely not.” said Hermione.

“Where did she learn about Astrology?” asked Firenze.

“Obviously she’s making it up as she goes.” said Tempest with a whinnying laugh.

Sirius whimpered and held Harry closer.

Dumbledore looked over to the pair of them and nearly had another heart attack. The way Harry was laying, his eyes softly closed and laying limply in Sirius’ arms…it appeared as if the boy were dead.
Thirty-second paragraph, first sentence.

“I wanted to try and make up with him, before he went to go against the dragons.” said Ron.

“Did you know that it was a dragon?” asked Charlie.

“Hermione told me.” said Ron.

“I figured that Ron worrying about Harry, he'd forget about being so stubborn.” said Hermione.

End of thirty-second paragraph.

Several people laughed.

Thirty-third paragraph, third sentence.

“Such a common mistake.” said Fred.

“Happens all the time.” said George.

End of thirty-third paragraph.

Thirty-fourth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Harry had better get some sleep, or he won’t be any good the next day.” said Dean.

Dialogue set, first sentence.

“Not the best way to learn.” said Professor Sprout.

End of dialogue set.

Thirty-fifth paragraph.

Dialogue line.
“Despite being very bright, he doesn’t quite have a lot of confidence at times.” said Emmeline.

“I’m glad they were excited, that entire day I just stayed in the woods and whimpered and howled. Had a few forest rangers come and investigate. They tried taking me to the animal shelter.” said Sirius.

“For him or you when he gets mauled to death?” said Remus darkly looking around the Great Hall to a few of the students that were looking ashamed of themselves.

“That’s what a normal fourteen year old would do.” said a seventh year Gryffindor.

“Never saw her look so worried.” muttered a third year Hufflepuff.

“I had a mad plan about spiriting him away and keeping him at my summer home for the rest of the year.” said McGonagall to Professor Sprout.

“If you would have asked, we would have helped.” said Flitwick.

“Last meal.” said Colin sadly.
“I was still planning and hoping to stun the boy and hide him somewhere in one of the castle towers till this all was over.” said McGonagall.

“So brave.” whimpered a few girls as they looked over to Harry with watery adoration in their eyes.

“I wanted to just hold him.” said McGonagall, “One last time.”

“One last time?” asked a seventh year Ravenclaw.

“I held him when he was a baby.” said McGonagall.

“She still hates any sort of lizard.” said Bill.

“Well, dragons aren’t for everyone.” said Charlie stiffly.

“Great, do you mind if I throw up on your rug?” said George.
Dialogue set.

“Taking an egg from nesting mothers, I could have killed them for coming up with that idea. Not even we're crazy enough to do that!” said Charlie.

Forty-second paragraph.

“I’m glad we didn’t get chosen.” said Fred.

“Mum would have killed us.” said George.

“If the dragon didn’t do so first.” said Fred.

Forty-third paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“His manners are just about as good as mine.” said Ron with a small chuckle.

Hermione giggled.

Forty-fourth paragraph.

“Don’t blame her really, I’d do all I could to protect my students.” said Professor Vector.

Forty-fifth paragraph.

Forty-sixth paragraph.

“Do dragons have venom in their fangs like snakes?” asked Mrs. McFinn nervously.

“…Horntails do…” said Charlie.

Mrs. McFinn tried to cover her mouth to stifle her scream, but it failed. Harry sat straight up and from out of nowhere he had a long pearl handled kitchen knife in his hand.

“Wassamatter?” he said looking around quickly.

“We’re fine Cub, just freaking out about the task.” said Sirius, “Can you put the knife down?”

“How far did you get?” asked Harry putting the knife away.

“You just pulled out the Horntail statue.” said Sirius.

Harry blinked. “You’re freaking out at that part?”
“Don’t tell us it gets worse.” said Mrs. McFinn clutching her face in horror.

“Uh….,” said Harry.

“Let’s get this over with.” said Bill looking at Tempest pleadingly.

Dialogue set.

“Why do people always want to have private chats with you?” asked Dr. Clark.

“Beats me, do you want me to sit elsewhere?” asked Harry to Sirius.

“Not on your life, you’re staying right here.” said Sirius as he pushed back down and back into his arms.

Dialogue set.

“He doesn’t creep me out nearly as much as Lockhart did.” said Remus. “But maybe we should keep an eye out on him.”

“Nah, he had another reason why he wanted to talk to me.” said Harry.

Dialogue line.

“Anti-nausea potion?” said Fred.

“Healer?” said George.

“Life Insurance?” said Fred.

“Stunt double?” said Remus.

“Inflatable stunt double dragon to replace the one you’re about to face?” said Sirius.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

“He has a bet in favor of you doesn’t he?” said Dumbledore with a smile.

“Right on the money.” said Harry with a smile.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.
“In the Hospital.” said Dr. Clark quickly.

Forty-seventh paragraph.

“Time management was never his strongest trait.” said Remus. “He'd scramble to the next game he was scheduled to play. He'd come zooming onto the pitch five minutes into the game.”

Forty-eighth paragraph.

Forty-ninth paragraph.

“I was terrified just watching it.” said a second year Hufflepuff.

Fiftieth paragraph.

“Why aren’t we hearing what exactly went on?” asked a first year Hufflepuff boy.

“This is in Harry’s view, he wasn’t allowed to see what the other champions were doing, so they couldn’t steal other champion’s ideas.” said Emmeline Vance.

Fifty-first paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Fifty-second paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Fifty-third paragraph, first sentence.

“She still wakes up in the middle of the night, having nightmares about her dragon.” said Bill.

“Bet it makes sleepovers awkward.” said Charlie smiling with glee.

“Stuff it.” said Bill.
“Wish someone could sit with me.” said Harry softly. “I was freaking out more than any other time that I could remember.”

Sirius and Remus heard what he said, and whispered their apologies that they weren’t there sitting with him.

“I’m sorry Harry, but thank goodness I wasn’t there, I’d lose all my hair from tearing it out over worrying about you.” said Leroy who was white.

“Poor Harry.” said a few fourth year girls holding each other in fear.

“I…was…pissed when I saw what he did.” said Charlie.

Mrs. McFinn began to whimper. Dr. Clark wrapped his arms around her and held her close to him.
“We didn’t know why he was trying to summon that.” said a seventh year Slytherin.

“But the results were absolutely perfect.” said Flitwick with a proud smile.

“That would be you about to faint.” said Madam Pomfrey worriedly.

“Damn boy.” said Chief Hawkeye, “You’re one in a million.”

“That’s one large dragon.” said Dr. Clark worriedly.

Several people turned and smiled at Harry, especially the Gryffindor Quidditch team.

“I feel at home in the sky too…” muttered Cormac McClaggan. He wanted to be the school Quidditch star, if only he were given a shot.
“He was impressed, if I remember correctly.” said Dumbledore. “He asked what summer flight school you attend. I was quite proud to say that it was all natural.”

Remus gasped and grabbed Harry’s shoulders.

“It’s not bad Moony.” said Sirius easily.

Remus clutched his chest, “You had me going there.”

“You still should have gotten to the ground!” said Madam Pomfrey, Mrs. Weasley and Mrs. McFinn.

“And yet, you were the fastest one to get the task over with.” said Ron with a smile.

“She’s getting ready to go after you.” said Charlie leaning forward in his chair.

“Not again, the last time you mentioned a creature’s jaws you got bit by a giant freaking snake!” said Tonks holding her hands over her ears.
“She’s going to fly after you.” said Nightstrike.

Everyone began to cheer loudly, and a few of the Rangers applauded, even they were impressed.

“Nice, boy…I wonder what you would have done if you weren’t force fed the idea?” said Chief Hawkeye as he was applauding.

“I don’t have the faintest idea.” said Harry.

“Forget the Cup, we were three times as loud.” said Dean excitedly.

“Too right, I almost went deaf there, I was deaf after that.” said Seamus.

“That didn’t seem like the fastest.” said Harry thoughtfully.

“I know the feeling, it felt like forever, but it was only six minutes.” said McGonagall.

“Thank bloody god!”

“Molly!” said Mr. Weasley in shock.

“I had hoped you had come out of that unscathed, and I was unsure if that was the particular dragon had venom in it’s fangs or talons.”
“My boy had to wait to see a healer before his scores showed up.” said Mr. Diggory angrily.

“You should remember quite well that Madam Pomfrey was running out to him the moment the Dragon Keepers subdued the Short-Snout.” said McGonagall sternly. “If she wasn’t tending to Cedric, she would have been right there for Harry as well.”

“Ah, bless you Hagrid.” said Professor Sprout with a fond smile.

“I would have developed amnesia soon after that.” said Professor McGonagall with a smirk.

“Was the wound really that bad?” asked Ginny.

“Nah, just coming off the adrenaline.” said Harry.

“I was impressed, I had intensive care potions all set up for him.” said Madam Pomfrey. “Even a phial or two of phoenix tears handy, I figured he’d be the worse of the lot”

“I shared that feeling and gave her the phoenix tears.” said Dumbledore with a guilty smile. “I would rather be proven wrong about your abilities than…relive four years ago,” he shuddered slightly.
“A sadistic bitch that makes you carve words into your skin.” said Remus sharply.

“Say WHAT??” said Leroy, Rudolph, and Mrs. McFinn. They took ahold of both of Harry’s arms and inspected both his hands.

“I don’t see anything.”

“Here it is!”

“Damn that bitch!”

“Holly?” said Dr. Clark staring at Mrs. McFinn.

---

End of dialogue set

Eightieth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Shouldn’t have known that wasn’t going to work.” said Madam Pomfrey.

Eighty-first paragraph.

Eighty-second paragraph.

“Like old times.” said Angelina.

Dialogue line.

Eighty-third paragraph.

“Just about was made into one.” muttered Speckerton.

Dialogue line.

“ Took you how long to come to that conclusion?” said Tempest with a disdainful look.

Eighty-fourth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Oooh, Harry isn’t going to let it go.” said Fred.
“That’s harsh.” said George.

Eighty-fifth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Or…he could just let Ron have it one last time.” said Fred.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Eighty-sixth paragraph.

Eighty-seventh paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Yes there is!” said Hermione as she wiped her eyes, so did several other girls.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue set, first sentence.

Hermione put her hands on her hips and glared at Ron.

“Well? What would you expect if someone called us stupid and then hugged you?” said Ron defensively. “You’d think they were barking as well!”

End of dialogue set.

Eighty-eighth paragraph, first sentence, second comma.

“Aside from the dragon, I wonder what could be the cause of that.” said Charlie with a smirk.

End of eighty-eighth paragraph.

Dialogue set, second sentence.
"Great idea, Helga hadn’t eaten yet.” said Charlie.

“You’re a freak.” said Bill.

Dialogue set, third sentence, first semi-colon.

“I would have picked a cow as opposed to the dog, they have more meat on them.” said Charlie.

Dialogue set, fourth sentence.

“Should have read up on all four dragons before she tried that.” said Charlie.

Dialogue set, sixth sentence.

“As in action packed! And low damage done to themselves!” said Ron quickly.

End of dialogue set.

“And he had us to deal with afterwards.” said Charlie angrily. “The Ministry of Magic still hasn’t made monetary retribution for the loss of those Chinese Fireball’s eggs. Hell we’d even just take an apology from Viktor and the Ministry for putting those poor unborn dragon chicks at risk and killing them.”

Several Ministry workers looked shamefully down at the floor.

Eighty-ninth paragraph.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

“She always was a fair woman.” said Dumbledore with a smile.

Ninetieth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“A point deducted for the cut…not really showing favoritism.” said Percy stubbornly.
“No one said he did.” said Mrs. Weasley.

Ninety-first paragraph.

“Without that cut, a ten from me you would have had easily.” said Dumbledore.

Ninety-second paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Who cares, don’t argue with it.” said Sirius.

Dialogue line.

Ninety-third paragraph.

“What?” shouted a few adults loudly.

“Your champion destroyed some eggs, all he got was a cut!” shouted Rudolph loudly.

Dialogue line.

“Right on Ron!” shouted Sirius.

Ninety-fourth paragraph, first sentence.

Ron blushed and a few people smiled over to the two boys.

End of ninety-fourth paragraph.

“A few of us cheered for you.” said Astoria Greengrass.

Dialogue set, third sentence.

“Best let him see me happy as opposed to pissed, he’s had enough to go on.” said Charlie.
“That’s because death wasn’t right outside the tent door.” said Snape.

“That stuff only takes a half hour to work.” said Charlie. “We live by that stuff.”

“Counting down another set of days until you torment and try to kill us?” said Harry folding his arms across his chest.

“No.” said the twins.

“Glad you were listening.” said Fred and George together.

Mrs. Weasley blew her nose. “It’s so good to have the two of you being friends again.”
Ninety-eighth paragraph, first sentence.

“Holy Bowtruckles, what kind of stalker is she?” asked Sirius.

End of ninety-eighth paragraph.

Dialogue set, third sentence.

“I’ll give you two words.” said Remus. “Piss off.”

“Who the hell are you?” asked Sirius.

Dialogue set, fourth sentence.

“Well, what you’re standing in was what I had for breakfast, draw your own conclusion.” said Fred.

End of dialogue set.

“Felt fine, except for that one scumbag.” said Ron.

End of chapter.

“I like that one better.” said Ron.

“That’s all for this chapter.” said Tempest looking up from the book.

“I’ll take it!” said Dennis eagerly. “I haven’t read yet!”

He cleared his throat. “Chapter Twenty-one”

Harry sighed, “Another round, eh?”

Chapter End Notes

Thanks for reading.
S.P.E.W's Front Lines

Chapter Notes

I don't own Harry Potter.

See the end of the chapter for more notes

First paragraph, first sentence, third comma.

“Stupid feathery git.” muttered Ron good-naturedly.

First paragraph, end of first sentence.

“I was at Remus’ house.” said Sirius.

“We were worrying together.” said Remus. “Half my possessions got smashed.”

“I paid you back.” said Sirius.

“I would have preferred the help in cleaning up that mess.” said Remus with a smirk.

End of first paragraph.

“Good lord, that was a quick about face!” said Dr. Clark with a laugh.

Dialogue set, eighth sentence.

Ron blushed as people began to snicker “Nice how you believe your best friend now.”

End of dialogue set.

Second paragraph.

“Only way to get the little feathered bugger to sit still.” said Ron with a small smile.

Dialogue set, first sentence.
“Ah, sweet innocence.” said Harry with a smile.

End of dialogue set.

Third paragraph.

“It’s nice having the trio back to normal.” said Neville, “It wasn’t the same.”

Dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

“You never know how much you miss the banter till it’s gone for a few chapters.” said Fred wiping his eyes.

“It’s so beautiful.” said George blowing his nose.

Fourth paragraph, second sentence, first dash.

“Poor thing.” said Charlie.

“That’s one of the reasons we don’t use him often.” said Ron.

“The other reason is that we can’t always catch him.” said Harry.

Fourth paragraph, end of second sentence.

“See that strand of gray hair here?” said Sirius tugging a light gray lock of hair from the top of his head. “That’s your fault, I couldn’t sit and read that letter in one shot.”

End of fourth paragraph.

“So you ruined it?” said Fred and George together.

“At least Harry pretended to be surprised.” said Lee.
“Strange, we couldn’t find those later.” said Seamus. “One minute it was up there, the next it was gone.

“Harry took them down, while you all were distracted with the fireworks.” said Ron.

“Happy times should not be that few and far between for a child.” said Tempest sourly.

“Yeah, but no rules against everyone knowing the clue, they’re just not supposed to help the champion.” said Lee.

Hermione blushed as a few people laughed.

“When the hell did you have the time to look inside that thing?” asked a sixth year Gryffindor.

“Well, we know he doesn’t speak mermish.” said Bill with a smile.

“I’d rather not sound like that if I can get away with it.” said Harry.

“It’s not a difficult language to learn, and vastly beneficial.” said Dumbledore with a smile.
Dialogue line.

“If you did, I was going to just stay in bed for that task.” said Seamus.

“Oh yeah, that’s his boggart.” said Sirius looking at Remus intently.

Dialogue line.

“The Tournament is barbaric, but not that much.” said Tempest.

“I’m quite glad that we do not have to take part in that…” said Firenze.

“A game that shows how strong we centaurs are is not a bad idea.” said Tempest quickly.

“N-No of course not.” said Firenze.

“Too many wizards think we’re nothing but pretty talking horses.” said Tempest looking around at the girls that seemed to have taken to Firenze.

Firenze looked at Tempest confusedly. But then he smiled. “The right ones don’t think we are, some humans aren’t able to think with open minds, we need to teach them gently, or they will not learn at all.”

Tempest looked at Firenze quickly, her hard gaze softened.

“You can tell who’ll wear the…shoes in the family.” said Nightstrike to Lionus.

“You’d better hope she doesn’t hear that, remember the last time someone made a centaur joke?” said Lionus talking out of the side of his mouth.

“Stupid serial killer never stood a chance.” said Nightstrike with a shudder.

Dialogue set.

Percy blushed and glared at his brothers angrily as the school laughed loudly.

Dialogue line.

Tenth paragraph, first sentence.

“Don’t eat anything they give you.” said Neville wisely.

“We could have told you that.” said Ginny.

“It’s their favorite prank.” said Ron.
End of tenth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Tenth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Little joke that will turn you into a giant chicken.” said Neville.

“Canary, not chicken.” corrected George.

Eleventh paragraph.

Dialogue set.

“They’ll even run to the local wizarding shop to find the ingredients I need for any dish I’m making.” said Harry with a smile.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, second sentence.

“It’s not easy getting that birthday cake up here, we knocked off a tower or two at least twice.” said Leroy.

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“They’ll kick you out of the kitchen before you can even begin.” said Fred.

Twelfth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

End of thirteenth paragraph.

“Quite the distraction indeed.” said Dumbledore trying to hide a smile. “I hope you didn’t suffer any damage, either to your person or your public face.”
“I was fine sir, even I had a good laugh.” said Neville.

Dialogue line.

“I’m sure you just happened to forget.” said Mrs. Weasley crossly.

“Come on Mom!” said Fred.

“If we didn’t prank anyone…” said George.

“They’d never know how much we really care.” said the twins together.

“You prank Filch all the time.” said Hermione.

“It’s shows how much we care.” said Fred.

“Not one jot.” said George. “But he’s a special case.”

Fourteenth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“I’m still taking wizarding money lessons…but isn’t that kind of steep?” asked Dr. Clark. “I love a good prank as the…” he looked at Sirius. “Well, maybe not the next guy, but that seems like a high cost for something so short lived.”

Fred and George opened their mouths, but closed them.

“Maybe we should drop the prices.” said Fred.

“Or make them into a pack.” said George.

“Yeah. we can wrangle that.” said Fred.

Fifteenth paragraph, third sentence.

“Do you still have it?” asked Sirius.

“No, Hedwig didn’t quite warm up to him. So I gave him to Hagrid.” said Harry. “Had to enlarge it a bit, or it would have been smushed.”

End of fifteenth paragraph.

“Huh?” said Sirius.

“That’s you thinking all out aren’t you?” said Colin with a smile.
Sixteenth paragraph, fourth sentence.

“According to Viktor, they had fires going all over the place, it was actually pretty cozy in there. I assume the coach was the same way.” said Hermione.

Sixteenth paragraph, fifth sentence.

“Made classes pretty interesting.” said Fred.

“Shay that agayne meester?” said George slurring his words.

End of sixteenth paragraph.

Dialogue set.

“Hopefully they’re made of six inch titanium.” said Dr. Clark.

“Nope, wood.” said Ron.

“But…they have fire at one end…” said Dr. Clark confusedly.

Seventeenth paragraph, third sentence.

“Sorry Hagrid…” said Harry.

“Perhaps a new species should have been saved for the N.E.W.Ts students.” said Dumbledore kindly.

End of seventeenth paragraph.

Sirius slapped his forehead. “Oh my bloody god.” he muttered. “They’re not toddlers.”

Dialogue line.

Eighteenth paragraph, first sentence.

“Maybe it was the nailed in part.” said Hagrid thoughtfully.

“Well, they weren’t staying in on their own.” said Ron.
“Cowards.” said Moody.

“Had too, couldn’t get in the house.” said Seamus in a whisper.

“Before you ask, I got burned and cut, but I was fine.” said Harry wearily as the people in the bowl turned quickly.

“Who’s scaring who?” said a seventh year Ravenclaw student.

“Get the heck out of there!” shouted a little girl.

“I was pinned, I couldn’t go anywhere.” said Ron. “I had a tall box on one side of me, and Harry wasn’t going to leave me behind.”

“To think, a fourteen year old child can have that sort of loyalty to his friends.” said Tempest.

“He’s is special.” said Firenze with a smile.

“Oh hell, I thought we were safe.” said Tonks.
“I’d rather tackle the skrewt than talk with her.” said Harry.

“Well, at least he came to save you.” said Sirius.

“He’d never let me get hurt.” said Harry.

“Rita Skeeter, Gossipmonger.” said Remus.

“What’s the reason you banned her?” asked Mrs. Weasley.

“She was disrupting the school and the things she was placing in her interviews were far from truthful. The last thing young adolescent teens needs is a harsh blow to their self-esteem.” said Dumbledore.

“Don’t listen to her.” warned Remus.

“Harry knows not to trust her.” said Mrs. McFinn with a smile.

“Ah, don’t tell her he’s there.” said Sirius groaning loudly.
“This won’t end well.” said Lionus.

“Why hasn’t she woken up yet?” asked Chief Hawkeye as he looked over to the still figure slumped in the chair.

“She’s not the strongest person. She’ll wake up when she finally gains enough strength.” said Dr. Nicodemus. “And if the students can ever let her wake up.”

“You’ll be sorry.” said Lee covering his eyes.

“You’ll be sorry.” said Lee covering his eyes.

“You’ll be sorry.” said Lee covering his eyes.

“Harry could write a list for you.” said Terry.

“Should have warned him before then.” said Charlie.

“Oh, trust me I tried.” said Harry.

“I didn’t even look back at her.” said Harry.
“Everyone’s got least favorite animals, Hagrid.” said Harry quickly.

“Wait, what?” said Hermione.

“Tempest and Firenze shook their heads.

“It’s Neptune that can disrupt everyday life.” said Firenze.

McGonagall groaned and rolled her eyes.

Professor Trelawney glared fiercely at Ron.
“Everyone else was pretty much thinking ‘Not this again.’” said Dean.

Dialogue line.

Twenty-ninth paragraph.

“You’re lucky she doesn’t smack you.” said Remus with a laugh.

“You would have been asking for it.” said Sirius teasingly.

Dialogue set.

“I’d of gone after her for doing it so many times.” said Sirius, the laughter gone from his eyes.

Dialogue set, first sentence.

“I don’t think he liked the ghost joke.” said Bill trying to hide a snigger.

End of dialogue set.

“It doesn’t happen often.” said Ron.

Thirtieth paragraph.

Ron blushed.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Thirty-first paragraph.

Dialogue set

“Sure don’t include me.” said Ron with a pretended sound of hurt in his voice.

“I just thought it would mean more to Harry.” said Hermione.
“Ron…” said Mr. Weasley with a chuckle.

“Did you have to say regurgitated?” said Dr. Clark.

“So how did you come down to the kitchens?” asked Hermione.

“I took a different way.” said Harry with a shrug.

“My favorite room.” said Harry fondly.
“I’m tied between the kitchens and the dorms.” said Ron.

“Library for me.” said Hermione proudly.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, third sentence.

“A bit catchier.” said Dumbledore with a smile.

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue set.

Thirty-sixth paragraph.

“I love the interesting ways you have to open doors in this place.” said Mrs. McFinn.

Thirty-seventh paragraph.

“Dobby!” squealed a few girls happily.

“I was hoping we’d see him again!” said one of them happily. “He’s so cute!”

Thirty-eighth paragraph.

“And his ribs weren’t all that strong to start with.” said Madam Pomfrey.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Wait, you’ve never met Dobby, how did you…? said Remus.

“Harry described him and I heard Dobby bragging about Harry to the other House-elves that would listen.” said Hermione.
Mrs. McFinn began her giggling once more.

“She’ll be going for a while now.” said Remus with a smile.

“I’m glad she’s having fun.” said Harry.

Dr. Clark began choking on his own laughter. “Poor little thing.”

“Wow, he kept that dirty old sock?” said Bill.

“It looked in better condition than when I gave it to him.” said Harry.

Several girls snickered.

“Never thought they’d laugh at the color pink.” said Terry.

“Those two colors don’t match.” said Cho giggling like mad.

“Oh…right…” said Terry blushing slightly.

Dumbledore smiled fondly, they had been at these readings for well over three weeks now, and… despite the intrusion into Harry’s privacy, they were finding out more and more about Harry. And for some, learning a bit more about themselves and how they appear to others.

He snuck a glance at the bowl as the men talked while several students had left to go to the restroom, they were chatting candidly about little to nothing of value. Harry had acquired his deepest desire of having a family once again. And if the books of the future still had the power they were fabled to have, Harry’s future would be much easier once they utilized the information they would give them.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, third sentence.

“What, you never noticed that?” asked Fred.

“Never had to go further than the first stove, that’s right by the door.” said Harry with a shrug.

“Every time I’d say an ingredient, they’d have it right at my elbow.”

End of dialogue set.

Forty-first paragraph.

Forty-second paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Forty-third paragraph, third sentence.

“Well, at least he was…stylish with the clothes he bought that poor little dear.” said Mrs. Weasley.

End of forty-third paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Forty-fourth paragraph.

“Poor dear.” said Professor Sprout.

Dialogue line.

Forty-fifth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.
Forty-sixth paragraph.

“They do know how to take care of the students,” said Dumbledore. “House-elves are more fond of children then the adults. Children have more inventive wishes and demands, keeps them on their toes.”

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“I know all the House-elves by sight, and I didn’t remember ever seeing him.” said Harry.

Dialogue set.

“No if you go straight to a school it isn’t.” said Dumbledore smiling bright. “We Headmasters and Headmistresses will take all the house-elves we can get. It takes a lot of help to raise children.”

Forty-seventh paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“I beg your pardon?” said Chief Hawkeye. “He wants paying? Been a while since I’ve seen one of those kind of elves.”

“What’s wrong with them?” asked Hermione worriedly. “You don’t…”

“No, we hire them, so they don’t completely destroy themselves like that. Most of the house-elves we have are paid employees.” said Chief Hawkeye.

Forty-eighth paragraph, first sentence.

“To them, it really is.” said Dumbledore with a kind smile. “They feel doing hard work and feeding off the energy they get from making other’s happy should be payment enough.”

End of forty-eighth paragraph.

Dialogue set, fourth sentence.

“Poor thing.” cooed a fourth year Ravenclaw student.
“Poor dear, she’s not happy one bit.” said Mrs. Weasley.

“Some House-elves are very attached to their families.” said McGonagall.

“Quite the shock to wake up and find them standing at attention at my desk.” said Dumbledore.

“What time did you get up?” asked Hannah.

“I believe it was five o’clock.” said Dumbledore.

“Not all that much.” said Ernie.

“It’s what he wanted.” said Dumbledore.

“Well, he’s not completely turned over.” said Chief Hawkeye with an amused smile. “We have one that wants to enforce unions. He keeps getting smacked about by the other elves when he starts preaching.”
The Hall fell into silence.

“Why would you even ask her that?” asked Fred and George in shock.

“Well, I thought…since Dobby was…” said Hermione.

“Winky never said a word to me. Dobby did all the talking, all she did was sit and weep over her loss of a situation. The only order I gave her was to try and calm down.” said Dumbledore. “It does not matter how long it takes, she can take as long as she wants.”

Fifty-second paragraph, first sentence.

Hermione blushed.

End of fifty-second paragraph.

Dialogue set, third sentence.

“There you go Hermione, that should have been your clue on how bad they view paying for their services.” said Fred.

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

“No he wasn’t!” shouted Percy. “He was a good man!”

“May I disagree?” said Sirius quickly.

“He did nothing to you!” said Percy indignantly.

“He only locked me up in Azkaban for twelve years without a trial or proving I was guilty….yeah, he did nothing to me.” said Sirius shortly.

Fifty-third paragraph.

“Whether they’ve been let go due to owner stupidity or they did something wrong, they will not speak evilly of their past employers.” said Dumbledore. “Not unless they really disliked their employer.”

Dialogue set.
“It’s not often that I’m called that by the House-elf staff, human staff…is another matter.” said Dumbledore with a smile, as he flitted a glance over to Snape.

“Argh! Someone stop him!’ screamed Mrs. McFinn. She was worried about the poor little thing’s well being.

“I wonder…” said Harry thoughtfully.

“I wonder what?” asked Sirius.

Harry turned and whispered in his godfather’s ear. “Was Crouch trying to save Winky?”

“We may never know, but it’s an interesting idea.” said Sirius with a warm smile.
“Didn’t she know about the Tournament?” asked Fred.

“House-elves aren’t supposed to listen!” said Percy.

“I wouldn’t mind, it’s a different point of view.” said Harry with a shrug.

Tempest, Firenze, most of the staff, and the Rangers smiled brightly at the boy.

“That’s a wake-up call.” said Harry.

“Yeah, we sort of liked him…though he did act a little mad.” said Ron.

“Count your blessings.” said Ron.

“Oh Ron! That’s so sweet of you!” said Mrs. Weasley wiping her eyes.
“I’m amazed you’re so light.” said Sirius.

“I drive them nuts, I give them snacks.” said Harry. “To make sure the recipe goes right.”

End of sixty-second paragraph.

“I take food when I can get it.” said Harry with a smile.

“Well, you won’t have to worry about that anymore.” said Remus with a smile.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“I go to see him, more than he comes to see me.” said Harry.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

“And then they try to sneak it onto your snack plate as you’re cooking.” said Harry with a smile.

Dialogue set, first sentence.

“It is, a school is the best place for them.” said Dr. Nicodemus with a smile. “They can give all the tender care they can stand to a whole building full of children.”

End of dialogue set.

“They’re not ready to jump the gun with him. They like him and all, but when he starts talking about freedom, they sort of back away. He doesn’t mention it much.” said Harry.

Dialogue line.

“I was being supportive.” said Harry to Sirius’ raised eyebrows.

"Oh she'll cheer up," said Hermione, though she sounded a bit doubtful.
“I don’t think she’s stopped being upset yet.” said Harry.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Well, aren’t you nosey!” said Rudolph reaching over and tweaking Harry’s nose slightly.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“He is a fun person to be around.” said Mr. Weasley with a smile.

End of chapter

Percy blushed heavily.

“I’m hungry.” said Ron.

“We’re just reading about food, I suppose it would stand to reason that some would be hungry.” said Dumbledore smiling as he summoned the food table.

“I’ll go get you a plate kiddo.” said Dr. Clark.

Harry leaned back in the bowl and closed his eyes.

“You alright?” asked Remus.

“Yeah, just…not looking forward to the end…” said Harry softly.

Mrs. Diggory heard this and looked at Harry questioningly, but then her eyes became moist.

“You did all you could, and he wouldn’t have wanted to be a toy of Voldemort’s.” said Sirius.

“Still, I’m not looking forward to it.” said Harry.

Chapter End Notes
Thanks for reading, please review!
Harry nibbled his sandwich slowly, but he couldn’t quite finish it.

“You alright, Cub?” asked Sirius as he chomped on his turkey leg.

“I can’t finish this.” said Harry quietly.

“Your stomach upset, sweetie?” asked Mrs. McFinn.

“Sort of…I guess…” said Harry as he put his plate down.

“Let’s try and get this over with then.” said Charlie who had been chatting with Remus at the time.

“Who wants to read next?”

“I will.” said Ginny quickly. She took the book and put her bowl of fruit aside and read the next chapter title. “Chapter Twenty-Two.”

“What the hell task is that?” asked Charlie.

“Finding dates to the Yule Ball I’m assuming.” said Harry. “That was hard work.”

“You just tackled a dragon and you’re the boy who lived, how hard can that be?” said Bill.

“I would have rather gone up against a dragon again then ask someone to a dance, especially when I have no intention of dancing.” said Harry.

“You’re going to a dance, but you aren’t going to dance?” said Sirius. “Your dad would be laughing his head off.”

“It was either not dancing, or fracturing my date’s ankles.” said Harry. “Sitting out the dances is less work on Madam Pomfrey.”

Dialogue line.

“Never.” said Harry and Ron together.

Several people laughed, even McGonagall smiled a bit.
“Someone was doing what they weren’t supposed to!” said Dr. Clark teasingly.

Second paragraph, first sentence, second semi-colon.

“So does that mean that you got it to change?” said Sirius proudly. “You actually went all out?”

“My guinea pig laid an egg before we were dismissed.” said Harry. “Too bad McGonagall didn’t catch it, would have been really funny.”

Second paragraph, end of first sentence.

Several people turned to Harry.

“What?” asked Harry.

“What’s the answer?” asked a fourth year eagerly.

“Now that would be cheating.” said Harry with a smile over to McGonagall.

Second paragraph, second sentence, third comma.

“We’ve failed them.” said Sirius looking tragic.

“Harry…take it from Sirius, never ever mess about in McGonagall’s class, not even when class is technically over.” said Remus dragging his hand down his face tiredly.

End of second paragraph.

Dialogue set, first sentence, second dash.

“Come on McGonagall, James and I had done that in our seventh year, well, maybe not playing with a tin parrot and a rubber fish, but we had sword fights in the back of the class.” said Sirius with a laugh.

“Not the best defense for Harry.” said Dumbledore with a smile.

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue set.

“Did you ask Ginny?” asked Sirius, nudging Harry in the side.
“No, she was taken when it finally struck me to ask her.” said Harry.

Third paragraph, second sentence.

“Girls and dances, they love them way too much.” said Colin shaking his head.

Third paragraph, third sentence, first comma.

“Why were you looking at me anyway?” asked Harry.

“We were hoping you’d ask one of us.” giggled Parvati.

End of third paragraph.

“I knew better than to try and command authority with those two, at least you two boys listen.” said McGonagall.

“We don’t listen, we just figure we won’t be able to hear anything for a while from all the yelling.” said Ron in a whisper.

Dialogue set, first sentence.

“Now why couldn’t our parties be allowed to happen?” said Sirius in a whiny voice.

“Your parties didn’t end until three in the morning.” snapped McGonagall.

“Lightweights, ours didn’t end at all, we just went to class like normal.” said Bill with a smirk.

“Those were great parties.” said Charlie.

End of dialogue set.

Fourth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Sirius and Remus looked at each other, as did several other adults in the room. Then they looked over to McGonagall, who had a slight tint of pink in her face.

“Never happen.” said Leroy.
“Of course I did, in my younger days…” said Professor McGonagall, with a slight smile over to the blushing Boy-Who-Lived.

“Define ‘embarrass’.” said Sirius.

“Anything you do.” sneered Snape.

“Did you already embarrass the school?” asked Tonks with a giggle.

“Within two seconds of being told about the Ball? I’m good but not that good.” said Harry.

“Can’t be the haddock, Ron didn’t get called up to the front.” said Mr. Weasley

Harry squirmed slightly and sent an apologetic look over to McGonagall.

“What’s wrong Potter?” asked Professor Sprout.

“I..I’m used to taking all the blame…and whatever punishment comes my way.” said Harry softly.

McGonagall’s lip began to quiver slightly.

“Partners?” asked Rudolph.

“Does she mean dance partners or someone who’s allowed to help you in the next task?” asked Leroy.

“Why doesn’t anyone tell him anything?” said Neville.

“That’s what I’d love to figure out.” said Harry.
“No, he just doesn’t know what you’re talking about.” said a sixth year Gryffindor.

The people in the bowl chuckled warmly. “You really hate dancing.” said Dr. Clark.

“Hate it, hate it, hate it.” said Harry.

“I apologize, Potter, your father danced, I assumed that you could dance as well.” said McGonagall shamefully.

“That’s alright, we thought he could trip the light fantastic as well.” said Sirius patting Harry’s shoulder. “Never occurred to us that he couldn’t even dance like a drunken gnome.”

“You’d look good in that kind of suit.” said Angelina.

“A top hat, with this hair?...Well, the hair I had?” said Harry.

“I thought you just got done telling us not to embarrass the school, if I start dancing, that’s what’s going to happen.” said Harry with a laugh.
“Never test her patience.” said Sirius.

“That warning comes about five years too late.” said Harry.

Harry stared up at the ceiling as several girls turned and glared at him.

“He’s a guy, what do you expect?” said Sirius laughing hard and patting Harry on the back.

“I don’t want to hear about a Christmas time with them.” said Sirius plugging his ears.

“Guys were pretty much, ‘whatever’.” said Katie with a smirk over to the other boys in Gryffindor.

“Sirius knew exactly how many girls there were that were of reasonable dating age.” said Remus.

“He had a little black book and everything.”

“You said you’d never tell anyone.” said Sirius quickly.

“I said I’d never tell James about it.” said Remus with a smile. “Never said other people.”
The girls began to giggle fiercely again.

“That won’t fly with many girls.” said Sirius.

Cho blushed heavily.

“Wasn’t she Cedric’s girlfriend?” said Mr. Diggory quickly.

“No till after Christmas dear.” said Mrs. Diggory.

“Good for you Ron.” said Bill.

“I was hoping I didn’t have any in my voice though.” said Ron quietly.

Harry looked up and scanned the room until he saw her. “Sorry.”

“That was Mary! She couldn’t stop blushing!” said her friend happily.

“This is too precious.” said Sirius laughing hard.
“I would not have!” said the girl indignantly.

“Height isn’t always everything.” said Dr. Clark.

The girls stopped giggling and smiling and looked over to him in shock.

“We’d still ask you!” said a third year Gryffindor girl.

“Ack…pity…it’s not something you want from a girl you’re going to ask out.” said Sirius. “Sympathy is one thing, but pity is not what you want.”

“Nah, she was a lady, you had to go and ask her.” said Harry with a smile.

“It was getting old and really, the first task was just too awesome.” said a Ravenclaw student.

“I appreciate you worryin’ ‘bout me.” said Hagrid gratefully.
“They were….gettin’ to be a bit much.” said Hagrid sheepishly.

“You’ve been his favorite since he was born, Hagrid.” said Dumbledore. “Not just since the Dursleys.”

“My favorite?” said Harry confusedly.

“Oh the stories I could tell, Hagrid would come over to your parent’s house and you’d crawl all over him. One time we thought we misplaced you, but you were hiding in his beard.” said Dumbledore with a smile. “Your mischievous side would come out when he would come over.”

“You talk like you lived there.” said Fred.

“I was a frequent overnight guest.” said Dumbledore with a smile.

“Nope, he’s been a good kid.” said Hagrid proudly. “Cept for making me think he got gobbled up by a dragon that year.”

“Nah, he never did that.” said Hagrid.

“For any class.” said Dumbledore happily, “That I seem to recall.”

“But you aren’t…why would she want to do that?” asked Dennis.

“She’s tired of the Prince Charming shtick I’ve got going on. She wants me to be a ‘Bad Boy’ now.” said Harry.

“Can you imagine what would happen if she wrote what had happened in these books?” asked Ron.
“I’d get a lot of Howlers from a lot of parents.” said Harry. “Don’t do anymore dangerous things! What would your parents think?” he said in a high voice.

“You wouldn’t be the only one getting them.” said McGonagall.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Delinquent perhaps, but not quite mad.” drawled Snape.

“Oh he is not a delinquent!” scolded Mrs. McFinn.

“Sure he is, not the normal kind, but he does get into a bit of trouble.” said Sirius proudly.

Dialogue set.

“She won’t interview me, not since I wrote to the editor and told her that her piece on a potion master was severely lacking and had little to no value in the ways of information. All the information it did have was a potion recipe, but it was wrong. The brewer would suffer from grievous injuries if they had followed those instructions to the letter. It caused her to have a dock in pay.” said Snape. “Then they ran an apology and a warning not to brew the potion.”

“Why?” asked Blaise.

“If anyone had brewed the potion and taken it, it would have caused drastic and dangerous results, the newspaper would have been sued to bankruptcy.” said Snape.

“What potion was that?” asked Draco.

“A common child’s health potion that had been redone and invigorated to give it more potency and is cheaper to make, similar to a child’s multivitamin tablet in the muggle world.” said Snape plainly.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“He follows the rules a lot better than James ever did. But that’s not saying much.” said Remus.

“Hardly followed the rules, any of us.” said Sirius with a smirk.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.
“Me, Myself and I.” said Harry.

Dialogue line.

“I knew better.” said Hagrid kindly.

Twentieth paragraph, second sentence.

“Not at all, it was only maybe two dozen.” said Dumbledore. “That was only for the teachers the adult guests.”

Twentieth paragraph, third sentence.

“They were most eager to come and perform, they had been graduates of Hogwarts long ago.” said Dumbledore.

“I wish I had taken the night off, it would have been awesome to be here.” said Tonks longingly.

End of twentieth paragraph.

“All these years and you hadn’t gotten a hold of a radio?” said Tonks shaking her head.

“I’m not into recent music anyway.” said Harry shrugging.

Twenty-first paragraph, first sentence, third comma.

“That is so not fair.” said Charlie folding his arms.

Twenty-first paragraph, end of first sentence.

“It was quite the improvement from when we worked on it during class.” said Professor Flitwick.

Twenty-first paragraph, third sentence.

“I swear, he goes through his monologue when students aren’t even there.” said Bill.
Several people sniggered.

“Can you imagine Snape adopting him?” said Sirius looking at Remus horrified. “I’ll say this much, he’d get more attention and care the Dursleys.” said Remus with an icy tone. Snape looked down…how would Potter have turned out if he himself had raised him?

“You didn’t test it out on them did you?’ said McGonagall angrily. “They were in no danger.” said Snape calmly. “Pardon me if I don’t quite believe you.” said McGonagall sternly.

“At least no one else had a test that day.” said Hermione logically.

“Yeah, you don’t seem to be all that traumatized by the workload.” said Nightstrike with a laugh.

“Harry can get all the way to top and then the cards blow up.” said Colin.

“Ron taught me how to do it really fast.” said Harry with a smile over to his best friend.

“Percy can get two houses going at the same time.” said George honestly. “He’s the second best on in the family at that.”

Percy blushed happily.

“Who’s the best?” asked Kingsley.
“Mum, she can make an entire castle.” said Ginny with a bright smile.

Dialogue line.

“Yeah, it’s not often they can just sit back and relax.” said Sirius.

“We had a no homework night once a week. We’d just take the night off and have fun.” said Remus.

Twenty-second paragraph.

“Harry probably knew all he was supposed to do for any poison!” said Dennis.

Harry

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Exactly, take a break, there’s no point worrying about the second task. Enjoy the Christmas holidays at least.” said Sirius supportively.

“But he needed to find out what it meant!” said Hermione.

“And he will, but he’s got to rest at some point.” said Lionus.

“Exactly, even we take rest periods.” said Chief Hawkeye. “You can’t go full tilt the whole time. You get a haunted look that way.”

Twenty-third paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“If he had no idea what to do, he would have been told anyway…the only thing he would have had to do was think very quickly how to breathe underwater.” said McGonagall.

“Then he would have just had to wait until the rest of them do what they were going to do and then copy them.” said Dumbledore.

Dialogue line.
“You keep forgetting to lean back.” said Bill shaking his head.

Dialogue line.

Twenty-fourth paragraph.

“Wasn’t much damage, and Madam Pomfrey could easily fix it.” said Hermione.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“That’ll convince him to let you borrow him.” said Charlie shaking his head.

“It’s your own fault if he doesn’t want you to have him now.” said Bill.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Not without the lack of trying.” said a few girls who were giggling.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“And just who are the good ones?” said Angelina.

“You’re one of the better ones.” said Fred happily.

“How come you switched over to George?” asked Katie.

“Alicia and I figured that we liked the other one better and they felt the same way, so we switched twins and they switched girls.” said Angelina.

“Worked out in the long way.” said Fred with a bright smile.

“Too right.” said George.

“Lucky bastards.” muttered Sirius good naturedly.
“Oh, yeah that’s romantic.” said Mrs. McFinn with a laugh.

“Worked for me.” said Angelina.

“Not a good sign.” said Sirius.

“It was so stupid I had to say yes.” said Angelina.

“Not that any of you are trolls.” said Ron quickly.
“What’s wrong with me?” asked Eloise angrily.

Ron blushed.

Eloise flushed and touched her nose absently.

“Your nose is fine, he’s just being a prat under pressure.” said Hermione.

“Where did I go wrong with you?” said Mr. Weasley shaking his head.

“It always is shown at it’s best.” said Harry proudly.

“Thank you Mr. Potter.” said McGonagall proudly.

“Little did I know, wizards have different versions of the Christmas Carols.” said Harry.

“I can’t wait to hear those.” said Dr. Clark.

“Very rude, but hilarious.” said a seventh year boy.
Thirty-first paragraph.

“I would rather just stand in the back and watch everyone else enjoy themselves.” said Harry with a shrug.

Dialogue line.

“Can you imagine her coming to a dance?” said Parvati.

“She might have had fun.” said Harry softly.

Dialogue set, first sentence.

“Might has well have been.” said Ron.

“You kids are way too young to be able to sway a girl to your arm.” said Sirius. “Fifth years and up are a little better at it.”

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

“That was an unrealistic goal.” said Remus.

“Tell me about it.” said Harry.

Thirty-second paragraph, second sentence.

“Popular girls never do.” said Luna kindly.

Thirty-second paragraph, third sentence.

“You’d get a very hurried answer.” said Mr. Weasley with a laugh.

Thirty-second paragraph, fourth sentence.

Cho and a few other girls blushed heavily.
“I don’t understand, if a guy asks another guy to go to the loo with him, he gets really weird looks.” said Ron.

End of thirty-second paragraph.

“She was already asked, ten guys came by and asked her.” said one of her friends.

Thirty-third paragraph, first sentence.

“No surprise.” said Harry.

End of thirty-third paragraph.

“Normally he’s gathering his courage to fight a monster or something, but asking a girl to a dance?” said Dean with a laugh.

Dialogue line.

Thirty-fourth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Thirty-fifth paragraph, second sentence.

“Yeah, you can’t look cool when girls start laughing at you.” said Sirius.

“Word of experience.” said Remus nudging Sirius.

End of thirty-fifth paragraph.

Thirty-sixth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Thirty-seventh paragraph.

Thirty-eighth paragraph.

Dialogue line.
“Did you say that right?” asked Sirius.

“Yup…that’s what he said apparently.” said Ginny with a smile over to Harry.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Cause you’ve never asked a girl out before.” said Dr. Clark with a smile.

Dialogue line.

Thirty-ninth paragraph.

I know that feeling. thought Snape quietly.

Fortieth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Fortieth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Forty-first paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Don’t ask, it’ll only make the rejection harder.” said Sirius.

“He should know, he’s been the focus of a lot of revenge plots.” said Remus nodding over to Sirius.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.
“You really need to see a Healer Harry, your stomach does some weird things.” said Luna.

Remus looked over to him and gave him a slight smile, but the smile faded when he saw Harry bring his knees up and bury his head between them.

The men in the bowl and some of the people outside it noticed Harry’s fingers become quite tense and grip his pant leg tightly.

“It’s okay, it’s perfectly normal to feel that way…” said Sirius soothingly.

“Something really bad must have happened.” said Charlie.

“Yeah, if Ginny has to console him.” said Bill.

“I looked around for a giant spider.” said Harry looking up slowly.

“I was hoping no one would see that.” said Ginny sheepishly.

“This is Harry we’re talking about.” said Fred.
“He sees all.” said George.

Dialogue line.

“I couldn’t believe it, she’s way out of anybody here’s league…” said Harry.

Dialogue set.

“She must have putting all of her charm while talking to Diggory…it’s sort of awkward when random people just walk past and then they turn around and profess their undying love.” said Bill.

Forty-sixth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Don’t feel bad, she can be sort of nasty when she wants to.” said Bill, “But she’s getting better.”

Dialogue set, third sentence, first dash.

“Glad she’s not here to hear this.” said Bill.

End of dialogue set.

Forty-seventh paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Well, you both just lost out on your dream girls.” said Sirius sympathetically.

“Has that ever happened?” asked Ron.

“Never.” said Sirius with a shrug.

“It’s happened to him all the time.” said Remus.

“S-Shut up.” said Sirius.

Forty-eighth paragraph.

Harry cast his eyes downward. Damn I’m such an idiot.
Neville blushed.

“Good for you.” said Remus with a smile. “Though judging by the words Ron said, she declined.”

“She was already asked.” said Neville.

“By who?” asked Mrs. McFinn.

“You’ll be surprised.” said Harry.

“I was startled by the fact you screw up the courage to ask.” said Harry with a smile.

“Yeah, it took all Harry had to ask Cho.” said Fred.

Ron cringed in his seat. “Sorry Nev.” said Ron.

“Don’t worry about it.” said Neville with a small smile.

“These books suck.” said Ron.

“That’s what I’ve been saying.” said Harry.

“Let us laugh, we didn’t have a very good day today.” said Ron.

“Ron not eating was a big shock.” said Hermione. “But Harry had gone without supper before.”

“Don’t not eat.” said Sirius.

“Nice double negative.” said Harry with a smirk.
“Always does.” said Remus nudging Sirius.

“Hey, you were laughing at Neville, so I’m going to stop being supportive.” said Ginny.

“She’s as supportive as anyone, but when you start taking the mickey out of people, then comfort gets chucked out the window.” said Fred.

“Man, kids can be cruel to each other.” said Nightstrike.

“Despicable.” said Tempest. “Can you imagine what the other children are like?”

“I’d rather avoid that.” said Nightstrike.

“Bad move…really bad move.” said Michael covering his ears.

“Somehow…I do not believe that will convince her to spend the evening with you.” said Dumbledore with a smile on his face.

“I do not blame you, Granger.” said McGonagall sending Ron a glare.

“Judging from where you’re sitting, he’s gotten better.” said Emmeline.
“A little better yeah.” said Hermione.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Where’s your proof that she’s not going with someone?” snapped Angelina.

Dialogue line.

Fifty-second paragraph.

“This won’t end well.” said Charlie shaking his head.

“It didn’t.” said Ron covering his eyes.

Dialogue line.

“Idiot boy.” said Snape shaking his head.

Dialogue line.

Fifty-third paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Keep it up and you're going to get smacked.” said Mr. Weasley.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“I’ve noticed something again, Harry’s not saying anything.” said Alicia.

“Nice to know he’s not freaking out like Ron.” said Katie.
Dialogue set, fourth sentence.

“I’m sorry too Neville. You were nice enough to take me and I didn’t really appreciate it.” said Ginny humbly.

“I was just glad someone said yes.” said Neville. “And frankly…I got a date before Harry did!”

Harry laughed. “I’m not a social butterfly.”

End of dialogue set.

Fifty-fourth paragraph.
Dialogue line.

“They’re dealing with boys who have no freaking clue.” said Hannah with a giggle.

Fifty-fifth paragraph.

“We’re drastic action?” said Parvati.

“You were laughing at me earlier.” said Harry.

Dialogue line.

“Why her and not me?” said Lavender.

“I don’t know.” said Harry quickly.

“Coin toss wasn’t it?” said Sirius in a whisper.

“Shut up.” said Harry.

Fifty-sixth paragraph.

“God giggling girls are annoying.” said Harry shaking his head.

“What if you have a daughter?” asked Lavender.

“Then it’ll be the best thing I’ve ever heard.” said Harry.

“Hypocrite.” said Pavarti with a smile.

“Proud of it.” said Harry with a shrug.
“Why are you asking for Ron?” asked Blaise.

“Cause I would have ran out of bruise cream.” said Harry. “If he had opened his mouth at that point.”

Ron blushed heavily.

“Don’t tell her, she’ll spread it all around school.” mumbled Hermione.

“We were playing matchmakers!” said Parvati.

“Too bad that neither of them or us had much fun with each other.” said Harry. “But at least you went and found someone else to show you a really good time.”

Parvati blushed.
“It is.” said Harry quickly.

“Did you guys have a Ball when you were in school?” asked Dennis looking over to Sirius and Remus.

“We had one yeah. We had to convince the teachers to let us have it.” said Remus.

“Did you have a hard time trying to get dates?” asked Colin.

“Sirius had about twenty girls ask him out. He didn’t take anyone in particular but asked all the girls to dance with him. He didn’t get back to the dorms till about four in the morning.” said Remus.

“I don’t think I want to know any more.” said Professor McGonagall.

“Might I?” said Dumbledore with an extended hand. “It has been quite a while since I’ve read.”

Dumbledore levitated the book over to himself and read the title of the next chapter. “Chapter Twenty-third”

“I can’t wait to hear this!” said Tonks and Mrs. McFinn.

“Not me.” muttered Harry.

Chapter End Notes

Thanks for reading, please review
Dumbledore smiled at the students as they excitedly chattered about the Yule Ball. He hoped that this chapter was easy going and calm like the last one relatively was. Harry deserved a pleasant memory, and hopefully this Yule Ball supplied some.

First paragraph, first sentence.

“Honestly, it wasn’t that much.” said McGonagall.

“A four foot essay for Potions, an essay that has to explain the origin of the Rangordian Theory for Transfiguration, reading four chapters in the Charms textbook, a detailed drawing of the inside of a Venomous Tentacula for Herbology, and a summary of the skrewts…that’s not a lot?” said Harry with a raised brow.

First paragraph, second sentence.

“And yet you still had an egg to solve.” said Hermione.

“I’d say something, but I’m trying to censor myself now.” said Harry.

“Say it anyway.” said Sirius.

“No.” said Harry.

“I believe what Harry is trying not to say is that he wanted some happiness in his life, in case it all went awry.” said Dumbledore softly.

First paragraph, fourth sentence.

“It was quite shocking to be speaking to Percy one minute, and then a giant fluffy bird the next.” said Professor Flitwick with a great beaming smile.

“Don’t know who slipped me that cream.” muttered Percy.

Flitwick only smiled.
“When people begin to expect, change your tactics.” said Fred and George together.

Chief Hawkeye smiled over to the twins. “Fun loving lads…it’s very refreshing.”

“Good thing you didn’t give me candy for my ‘Unbirthday’” said Harry with a smirk.

“What’s an Unbirthday?” said Fred.

“It’s from Alice in Wonderland.” said Dr. Clark with a smile. “I don’t know how to explain. How did the Mad Hatter put it? You get one birthday every year, but there are three hundred and sixty-four unbirthdays for you to have.”

“So…an unbirthday is a day that your birthday doesn’t fall on.” said George.

“Sounds like fun.” said Fred.

“I love making gingerbread houses.” said Mrs. McFinn happily. “It’s my favorite thing.”

“Explains the castle cake.” said Lavender with a smile.

“Well, that says that Harry’s eating at least.” said Madam Pomfrey.

“Actually it was the second helpings of everything she picks that does it.” said Harry with a smile.
“Don’t let her hear that.” said Bill with a laugh.

End of dialogue set.

“There are tailor charms you can perform, and besides, a little extra running and less swaying will fix that.” said Hermione grumpily.

“Hermione is not all that in good moods is she?” said Charlie with a smile.

Dialogue line.

“No more than any other girl.” muttered Justin.

Dialogue line.

Third paragraph, first sentence.

“Good luck, girls aren’t that taken off guard with question like that often.” said Sirius. “I’ve tried.”

End of third paragraph.

“When have I made….never mind.” said Ron.

Dialogue line.

Draco cringed.

Chief Hawkeye shook his head and groaned. “I still can’t believe wizards are teaching their kids this sort of garbage.”

Fourth paragraph.

Fifth paragraph.

“Good girl!” said Tempest with a laugh.

Dialogue line.
“Damn, you guys really did ruin her.” said Sirius clutching his side as he laughed loudly.

Dialogue line.

“No one hexed you again, did they?” asked Hannah.

“No, not at all.” said Hermione.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, third sentence.

“Smart girl.” said Leroy with a bright smile. “I had to do that once, though I had to wait till I could do it on my own. Didn’t think to ask her.”

Dialogue set, sixth sentence, first dash.

“I can understand that feeling.” said Dr. Clark quietly.
“Cute but no brains.” said Ron shaking his head.

“He’d get lost in empty room.” said Ron.

“He tries.” said Ginny with a smile.

“That bird has to be brain-dead.” said Nightstrike chuckling.

Several people began to laugh at the image of the exceedingly happy owl.

“Never say anything a boy owns ‘cute’.” said Sirius. “You can call him that, but never something he owns.”

“Good, you don’t need to have someone read that letter over your shoulder, not if it’s from Black.” said Moody.

“Dancing about, running amok, and singing carols off key…it was a nightmare.” said Fred.
“Wait that was us.” said George.

“Oh, then it was wonderful.” said Fred.

End of ninth paragraph.

Letter from Sirius, greeting.

Letter from Sirius, first paragraph, third sentence, first dash.

“Not cool, Sirius. Really not cool.” said Charlie with a snarl.

“Sorry…” said Sirius leaning back slightly taken aback at the hostility shown towards him.

Letter from Sirius, end of first paragraph.
Letter from Sirius, second paragraph, second sentence.

“I didn’t want to think about them.” said Sirius. “I still have nightmares.”

Letter from Sirius, end of second paragraph.

“You’re no fun.” said Harry.

“Fun can come when the danger is passed.” said Sirius.

“At this rate, I’ll only have fun when I’ve died.” muttered Harry.

Remus flushed.

“What’s wrong?” asked Sirius, who hadn’t heard what his godson had said.

End of Letter from Sirius.

“How come you didn’t ask him to just write to you to make him feel better?” asked a first year Gryffindor curiously.

Sirius looked down shamefully.

Dialogue set.

“I know you don’t…” said Sirius looking remorseful.
“Wasn’t that idea just discussed?” asked Seamus.

“You know, I don’t even see how that egg is a clue…hopefully it’s not the sound you might make.” said Dr. Clark.

“How do we know the other champions have the same hint, maybe the person that tried getting Harry into this also planted a fake clue!” said Mrs. McFinn.

“Precautions were taken.” said Fudge quietly.

“Just like the World Cup? Like the Goblet of Fire?” said Dr. Clark angrily. “The Security work wasn’t the best if you ask me, and despite not knowing a lot about magic! Harry could get killed, and anybody could have been killed or hurt at the Cup!”

“Violent Bishop belonged to Ron.” said Harry.

“So the brave pawns belonged to you?” asked Rudolph.

“No, mine would have been labeled ‘stupidly led’.” said Harry.

“I was dead asleep, I didn’t need to be woken up.” said Harry.

“Has that happened lately…?” said Remus. “Someone laying on you and waking you up?”

“Only Hedwig.” said Harry.

“I don’t think he meant for you to come and meet him so early in the morning.” said Kingsley with a smile.

Dialogue line.

“What a wake-up call.” said Fred with a smile.

“You know…” said George slowly.

“Good idea.” said Fred writing the idea down quickly.

Eleventh paragraph.

Dialogue line.

The adults looked at Seamus and then Harry.

“Do you often have nightmares?” said Dr. Nicodemus.

Seamus looked sheepish. “I’ve only caught two nightmares he’s had. Neville had one bad experience that year.”

Remus and Sirius looked at Harry worriedly.

I’m fine.” said Harry.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, third sentence.

“Sleep can wait, presents now!” said Lee.

“Let’s hope this year Harry get’s some decent presents.” said a third year Hufflepuff.

“I do every year.” said Harry.

“From the Dursleys I mean.” said the boy.

End of dialogue set.

“That sounds so cute!” said a fourth year Ravenclaw student.

Dialogue line.
“That was so nice of you Harry!” squealed a few girls.

“Hold that thought.” said Harry.

“Told you.” said Harry.

“It’s still sweet that you were going to give him something.” said the girls with a smile.

“That’s mean. Giving Dobby something that reminds you of someone you hate.” said Sirius.

“I figured that giving to someone who would treat them nicely would take away the bad memories.” said Harry.

“Oh….that’s the story you’re going with today?” said Remus.

“Close enough.” said Harry.

“Forgot….never thought about it….same diff…” said Harry with a shrug.

“Only because he was set free with a sock.” said Tonks with a smile.

“They’re supposed to…” said Mrs. McFinn.

“Not according to Dobby it seems.” said Terry with a smile.
“Oh Ron that’s so sweet of you!” said Lavender.

Ron only shrugged, but his face had a twinge of pink to it.

End of dialogue set.

Fourteenth paragraph.

“I made that sweater especially for you! But…I’m proud you’re so generous.” said Mrs. Weasley sending a beaming smile to her son, her eyes brimming with tears of happiness.

Dialogue set.

“Keep doing that and his head will be as big as Percy’s.” said George.

“Well, at least Ron earned it…kind of…” said Fred.

Dialogue set.

“Didn’t care, it was a Chudley Cannon hat.” said Ron.

“Hang on, didn’t Harry say he wasn’t going to buy you a Christmas present?” said Hannah.

“But Ron paid me back.” said Harry. “And besides, I’d still get him a present.”

Ron looked slightly downcast. I didn’t pay you back…not one knut….

Fifteenth paragraph.

“I love that, you give socks, you get socks.” said Ernie.

“Hey now, I like those socks, when I want to feel different I wear those.” said Harry with a shrug. “I’ve only worn them about seventeen times so far.”

Dialogue line.

Sixteenth paragraph.

“He’s a nifty little knitter.” said Harry with a smile.
“Not that I didn’t like them!” said Harry.

“Boys just don’t want to get only clothes for Christmas.” said Ron.

Growls crept around the Great Hall.

“Those vile sons-a…” muttered a sixth year Hufflepuff.

“I want to get my hands on them!” said another sixth year, Gryffindor this time.

“I hope they rot.” muttered Bill.

“Oh…so it’s our fault.” said Fred and George.

“Don’t freak, I wouldn’t get anything better than, I think.” said Harry.

“Tell me you didn’t have that book.” said Hermione.

“I didn’t.” said Harry.

“You just lying?” asked Hermione.

“Nope.” said Harry simply.

“Did you use those?” asked Fred eagerly.

“I’ve got some leftover ones in my bag.” said Harry.
Seventeenth paragraph, second sentence, third semi-colon.
Harry took it out and flipped it open.
“I hoped you liked it.” said Sirius.
“After the second task, I don’t go anywhere without it.” said Harry.

Seventeenth paragraph, end of second sentence.
“Aww…that’s nice of you!” said a third year girl.
“Knew he wasn’t gonna get nuthin from them Dursleyes.” said Hagrid turning slightly red.

Seventeenth paragraph, third sentence, end of parenthesis.
“I had nightmares for weeks on end.” said Mrs. Weasley.
“That reminds me, Molly, that Howler you’ve sent me has gone down as one of the most memorable that I’ve ever received. It frightened Fawkes so much that he fled the tower for almost an entire week.” said Dumbledore, his eyes sparkling.

End of seventeenth paragraph.
“Those didn’t last long.” said Harry with a smile.

Eighteenth paragraph.
“I can’t wait for those.” said Mrs. McFinn eagerly.
“Me either.” said Dr. Clark.
“We’ll have to go all out for Christmas aren’t we?” said Professor McGonagall with a small smile.
“It’s a very worthy cause.” said Professor Flitwick with a chuckle.

They went out onto the grounds in the afternoon; the snow was untouched except for the deep channels made by the Durmstrang and Beauxbatons students on their way up to the castle. Hermione chose to watch Harry and the Weasleys’ snowball fight rather than join in,
“Come on! You’re no fun.” said Fred.
“Yeah!” said George.

“I’m always the one that gets out first!” said Hermione.

“That’s only because you don’t duck.” said Ron.

End of nineteenth paragraph.

Dialogue set, second sentence.

“Knocked me right over.” said Ron.

End of dialogue set.

“Wanted to save it for the ball.” said Hermione with a smile.

“Good for you, Hermione.” said Mrs. McFinn with a giggle.

Twentieth paragraph, first sentence.

“Not the impeding Ball, but only you can’t see any more ends the snowball fight!” laughed Remus running his fingers through his hair.

“Why is that funny?” asked Harry.

“It’s the only way that James would halt the fight too.” said Sirius.

End of twentieth paragraph.

“At least she’s a nice drunk.” said Sirius in a whisper.

“But she gets nasty when the hangover hits.” said Remus.

Dialogue line.

Dumbledore chuckled warmly as McGonagall tisked disapprovingly.

“Honestly.” said McGonagall shaking her head.

Twenty-first paragraph, first sentence.
“Yeah, those robes were awful.” said Dean.

“I offered to get you different ones.” said Harry looking at Ron.

End of twenty-first paragraph.

“I told you to do this the day before.” said Hermione.

“Yeah, yeah…” said Ron.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“We asked.” said Harry with a smile.

A fourth year girl looked insulted at Dean.

“You’re pretty!” said Dean holding up his hands quickly.

Twenty-second paragraph, third sentence, first comma.

“Parvati blushed heavily.

End of twenty-second paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Poor thing, I should have taught you how to handle girls.” said Mrs. McFinn with a sad smile.

“I doubt I would have listened. I wasn’t interested in girls at that age.” said Harry with a laugh.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Twenty-third paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“IT was so sweet!” said George.
Twenty-fourth paragraph.

Dialogue set, first sentence

Padma blushed as furiously as her sister.

Dialogue set, second sentence, first comma.

Ron and Padma blushed.

“This book sucks.” said Ron.

“You’re telling me?” said Harry.

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

Twenty-fifth paragraph, first sentence, first comma.

“Even think about it, and I’m going to come over and beat you.” said Harry looking at Ron and the twins.

“Come on!” said George.

“Short jokes are classic!” said Fred.

Twenty-fifth paragraph, end of first sentence.

“He wouldn’t shut up after he took her to the Ball.” said a third year Ravenclaw boy. “Kept bragging about it.”

End of twenty-fifth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Twenty-sixth paragraph, second sentence.

“Sort of strange to call the devil incarnate that.” muttered Ron.
“Pink is not her color.” said Lavender.

“They weren’t the only ones.” said a fourth year Hufflepuff, “But it made me feel a lot better that I got have a dance or two, while those two didn’t.”

“They were too busy pigging out at the snack table.” said a fifth year Slytherin girl. “Besides, they’re not the best lookers.”

Hermione giggled. He didn’t even recognize her!

Mrs. McFinn squealed with excitement, as well as some of the fourth year and under girls.

“Looks like we’ll have to have something like that this year.” said Dumbledore, keeping mental notes.

“She led the entire way there.” said Harry.

“Girls will do that.” said Sirius with a cheeky grin.

Harry flinched. “Sorry Professor, you looked wonderful, but the thistles just didn’t look right.”

McGonagall’s sharp looked softened.

“His dad would be jealous of him.” said Sirius with a smile.
“That’s what’s supposed to happen.” said a seventh year girl.

“In romance books yes.” said Remus with a kind smile.

End of twenty-ninth paragraph.

Thirtieth paragraph.

“Wait…hold on…you were going to the Ball…with Krum?” said Nightstirke.

“Well, sort of.” said Hermione blushing.

“That wasn’t a compliment silly girl.” said Tempest shortly.

Hermione stopped blushing.

“Ron just got done backstabbing Harry by joining the school and thinking he had put his own name in.” said Firenze. “It sort of seems…cold that you’d do that. Seeing a rival school mate is one thing, but…the champion of the other school?”

“It…it doesn’t matter if he’s the champion or not.” said Hermione sputtering.

“But the fact remains, that he IS.” said Lionus.

“What was your opinion of it lad?” asked Chief Hawkeye over to Harry.

“It really didn’t bother me. She could see and date whoever she wanted.” said Harry with a shrug.

“Well, you’re noble, I’ll give you that. But I personally wouldn’t like it one bit.” said Chief Hawkeye with a slight frown.

“Glad someone else thinks so.” said Ron quietly.

Thirty-first paragraph, second sentence.

Hermione looked sad, but she still blushed.

“You looked nice, either way.” said Harry soothingly. He stood up and sat on her other side, throwing an arm around her. “And I didn’t mind, really I didn’t.”

“Everyone else does.” said Hermione.

“Yeah, well…no one else is as laid back as I am.” said Harry with a teasing smile.

Hermione hiccuped a laugh.
Hermione laughed again.

Sirius took this opportunity to walk over and drag Harry back to the bowl. “She’s feeling fine now, get back here.” he said plopping Harry down in the bowl.

“I felt so ashamed.” said Harry with a smile.

“Explains the looks Ginny gets.” said Dr. Clark.

“Course not, not without bringing every Durmstang student against you.” said George.

“All that asking and you aren’t even going to talk to her?” asked Sirius.

“He does plenty of talking later.” said Hermione with a frown.

“That sounds so pretty.” said a second year Gryffindor girl, sorry she couldn’t see it in person.
“Bet that wasn’t fun.” said Hannah sympathetically.

“Not one bit.” said Harry. “I can walk just fine on my own.”

“You didn’t always.” said Dr. Clark with a pale look on his face and his eyes tense.

Harry heard what Dr. Clark said and gripped his legs absently.

“Couldn’t understand how you got such an awesome date.” muttered Padma.

“He asked me, I didn’t do anything.” said Hermione.

“What was he hoping for?” said Ron.

“A ditzy girl as opposed to the brightest girl we have here.” said Harry with a smile.

“He’s a killjoy at any party.” muttered Charlie.

“Poor kids.” said Bill with a snigger.

“And here you were bad mouthing him!” said Ron angrily.

The back of Percy’s neck turned red.

“I know that look.” said Madam Bones with a smirk.
Percy blushed.

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

“Look his face is getting redder.” said a second year Gryffindor student.

“But you know what, at least Harry doesn’t say anything.” said his friend.

Dialogue set, fifth sentence.

“This please sir, can we skip his parts.” said a first year pleading with Dumbledore.

Dumbledore smiled.

Dialogue set, sixth sentence.

“And serve him right.” muttered Hermione.

“Uh…that’s not why he was looking and acting so awful…remember?” said Ron.

“Oh…right.” said Hermione softly.

Dialogue set, seventh sentence, first dash.

“So why did you believe her about Harry?” asked Ron accusingly.

“I…I don’t know…” said Percy quietly.

End of dialogue set.

“I wouldn’t rely on you.” said Ginny.

“Kids.” said Mr. Weasley soothingly. “Percy’s sorry…”

“He should have been sorry before these books came about!” said Ron.

Thirty-eighth paragraph.
“ASK HIM!” shouted the twins.

Thirty-ninth paragraph.

Fortieth paragraph, first sentence.

“That’s fast service!” said Mrs. McFinn with a smile.

“The House-elves were excited to have a challenge.” said Dumbledore with a smile. “They thoroughly enjoyed it.”

End of fortieth paragraph.

“Aww! That’s sweet!” said Tonks.

“Her first date!” said Emmeline smiling fondly at the girl.

“I thought they were miffed at me for going with Krum…” said Hermione.

“Still, it’s your first date.” said Sirius, “And it was mostly the Rangers getting pissed.”

Forty-first paragraph.

Dialogue set.

“Wow, that place actually sounds nice too!” said a first year Gryffindor.

“So the castle is smaller, but the grounds are bigger?” asked a first year Hufflepuff.

“They must have a lot of outside classes.” said her friend.

Dialogue line.

“I wasn’t trying to find out where they were!” said Hermione.

“Did you find out where they were?” asked a third year girl to Harry.

“I figured that it wasn’t any of my business, and who would I tell?” said Harry.

“He knows.” said Ron in a whisper to Hermione.

Forty-second paragraph.
Dialogue set.

“We don’t know all the secrets of our school.” said Bill.

“Speak for yourself.” said George.

Dialogue set, second sentence.

Several girls laughed and giggled loudly.

End of dialogue set.

The girls began laughing even louder.

“Honestly Albus.” said McGonagall shaking her head at her old mentor.

Forty-third paragraph.

“So…you want him to find that room?” asked Sirius.

“If Harry can’t find it for me, no one can.” said Dumbledore with a smile.

Forty-fourth paragraph.

“Damn, I’d rather talk to Krum then her.” said a Gryffindor student.

Dialogue set, third sentence, first pause.

“I remember we tried that once.” said Dumbledore fondly. “Peeves took it upon himself to smash them to bits, alas, he felt they needed to go before Christmas Day.”

Dialogue set, end of third sentence.

“No matter what, ours is better.” said a third year proudly.

Dialogue set, fourth sentence.
“Yeah, well, we have suits of armor that sing carols, and if Peeves gets ahold of them, we get versions we’ve never heard of before.” said George.

Dialogue set, fifth sentence, first comma.

“The armor is not just for décor, they also serve as the defense of the school.” said Hermione.

End of dialogue set.

“Wow, her school sounds dead boring to me.” said Lee.

“Too right, I wouldn’t want to go there.” said Fred.

“Not unless we could spice things up.” said George.

Forty-fifth paragraph.

“Yeah, I was like that on my first date, for the first fifteen minutes, after a while, I settled down.” said Bill.

Dialogue line.

“You know, if she wanted to actually have a conversation, she should have gone to the ball with another girl.” said a first year Hufflepuff boy innocently.

The boys fifth year and up felt a shiver go up their spines.

“You alright?” said Sirius trying not to laugh.

“F-Fine.” said Harry coughing nervously.

“Trust me, I know what just went through that mind of yours.” said Sirius with a smirk.

Forty-sixth paragraph.

Several girls cooed while Hagrid blushed.

Forty-seventh paragraph.

Dialogue line.
“She looked so happy.” said Harry with a smile.
Ron folded his arms.

“What the heck? Bagpipes?” said Dr. Clark.
“You’d be amazed!” said Tonks eagerly.

“Wasn’t looking forward to that.” said Harry.

“Give him a break!” said Fred.
“Yeah, he didn’t really want to be there.” said George.
“Would you have gone to the dance if you didn’t have to lead the dance?” asked Remus.
“Probably not.” said Harry. “I don’t dance, so what would be the point? I’d go for the food and then I’d go to bed.”

“You poor thing, I’m sure given to your own devices you would have done splendidly.” said Mrs. McFinn looking at Harry.
“Well, we’re not going to know are we?” said Harry.

“I didn’t mean too!” said Neville.
“I know.” said Ginny easily.
“She’s an excellent dancer.” said Dumbledore with a smile.

“Alright Albus, where were you?” asked Moody with a grim smile.

“Ah…I had forgotten.” said Dumbledore looking remorseful.

“What’s wrong?” asked Tonks.

“I don’t dance.” said Moody, “Too much moving around, can’t keep my enemies within sight.”

“If memory serves me, he was fan of dancing, but his skills were lacking.” said McGonagall thoughtfully.

“That he was Minerva.” said Dumbledore.

“Wasn’t me.” said Moody as the twin girls looked at him accusingly.

“Not unless you want a fractured shin.” said Harry with a smile.

“Quite the spirited dancers.” said Dumbledore with a bright smile.
“I felt really bad,” said Harry. “we took you away from boys that would spend the entire night dancing with you and I only dance with you once and Ron not at all.”

Parvati and Padma looked at Harry.

“So…sorry…” said Harry sincerely.

“Didn’t blame you.” said Harry. “Though, I was amazed no one came for Padma before.”

“The way Ron was glaring, they really didn’t want to risk it.” said Padma.

“Why would they care?” asked Charlie.

The teachers stared at her in shock.

“You must be joking, Miss Granger.” said McGonagall.

“I was just having too much of a good time.” said Hermione sheepishly.
“I figured that if you couldn’t figure it out, then I wasn’t about to tell you.” said Harry.

“Not where I was going with…but apparently Ron didn’t want to go down that sunny lane just yet.” said Harry with a slight smile.

“That was before he went out with his secret crush.” said Fred.

“That will kill idolizing in a heartbeat.” said Harry wisely.

George began to cry noisily. “I’m supposed to talk before or after you!” he said as he hugged Fred.

“Wow, this is their worst fight yet.” said Colin.

“It was not the best year for us.” said Harry.
“You know, I wouldn’t put it past Karkaroff to do something like that.” said Moody.

Sixty-first paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Sixty-second paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Whoa horsie.” said Remus looking at Ron and Hermione.

“You guys are vicious to each other. It’s like you’re soul mates.” said Sirius with a snigger.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

“He slapped a hand over my mouth to stop me from talking.” said Harry.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“It’s about both...I think...though...making friends with them in a game like this is sort of hit and miss.” said Terry.

Sixty-third paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Sixty-fourth paragraph.

“I love talking to myself.” said Harry.

“Was Hermione listening?” asked Blaise.

“Not really, Ron was upsetting her too much.” said Harry.

Dialogue line.
“It was like he flew over to them.” said Harry.

“I miss them.” said Parvati.

“So do I.” said Padma, “They were such gentlemen.”

“Well, at least you two had fun.” said Harry.

“This chapter went from fun to awkward.” said Ernie.

“It’s failing.” said Ron.

To Harry's displeasure, Percy now took Padma's vacated seat.

“You switched my spot with a talkative annoyance.” said Parvati.

“Not worth the trade.” said Harry.
“He was always a gentleman.” said McGonagall.

“To ladies perhaps.” said George.

End of sixty-ninth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Shouldn’t youngsters and adults feel that they can speak freely to members of authority?” said Mrs. McFinn.

Seventieth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

“Liar.” said Fred and George quietly.

Seventy-first paragraph, first sentence.

“You’d win that bet.” said Mrs. Weasley with a half-hearted smile.

Seventy-first paragraph, second sentence.

“Nah, we already had that ambition.” said Fred.

“It was always our goal to sell to the general public, not just schoolmates.” said George.

End of seventy-first paragraph.

Dialogue set.

“You didn’t think he put his name in, did you?” accused Ginny.

“Well, I…” said Percy.

Dialogue line.
“I wonder if Bagman wanted to smack him?” asked Draco with a snicker.

“Dad had to go and save his ass.” said Charlie.

“He accidentally insulted them and they were getting ready to declare war.” said Bill. “One of the Cooperation officials came, kidnapped dad from lunch at home and took him to the office.

“I still don’t know how dad did that.” said Percy.

“Dad and the Transylvanian official turned out were old pen pals.” said Charlie.

“That official is now their Minister of Magic!” said Percy looking shocked. “How come you didn’t tell us you knew all these important people?”

“I didn’t know that my old friends were important to you kids.” said Mr. Weasley scratching the back of his head absently.

“So…are you and Ron having a private moment?’ said Rudolph teasingly.

Harry and Ron looked at each other.

“If so, it was the worst date ever.” said Harry and Ron speaking together in unison.

“That’s freaky…” said Fred.

“They’re like us.” said George.

Snape sent a glare over to Ron and Harry.
“Should have talked in your office, as opposed to somewhere where kids are running about randomly.” said Harry innocently.

Seventy-third paragraph.

Dialogue set, fourth sentence.

The two children blushed heavily.

“We didn’t do anything wrong…” said the boy blushing.

Dialogue set, sixth sentence.

Ron and Harry exchanged a large grin. Harry stood up, walked over and wrapped his arms around Ron’s neck from behind.

“We just wanted some privacy.” said Harry with a playful pout.

Snape stared at Harry in shock, while the students and a few adults laughed loudly.

“He acts like you.” said Leroy with a fond smile.

“Poor kid.” said Rudolph with a laugh.

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Meddlesome brats.” snarled Snape rubbing his wrist absently.

“Brilliant lads.” said Moody appreciatively.

Seventy-fourth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Seventy-fifth paragraph, second sentence.
“Nope, about face, get going…” said a seventh year boy.

Seventy-fifth paragraph, fourth sentence, end of parenthesis.

“I could have gone without hearing that.” said Bill with an embarrassed smile.

End of seventy-fifth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Seventy-sixth paragraph, first sentence, first dash.

“So would a lot of people.” said Dumbledore with a smile.

End of seventy-sixth paragraph.

Hermione sent a smirk over to Harry who returned to the bowl.

“You should have squashed that bug.” said Ron.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

Seventy-seventh paragraph.

Hagrid blushed.

“Sorry Hagrid.” said Harry.

“It’s alrigh’.” said Hagrid.

Dialogue set, third sentence.

“Wish I could do that.” said a second year Slytheirn student.

End of dialogue set.
Dumbledore smiled fondly at his large gamekeeper.

Seventy-eighth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Seventy-ninth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“She doesn’t want anyone to know.” said Hermione quietly.

“She must have had a rough time of it years ago.” said Ginny with a sympathetic look.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Eightieth paragraph.

“Wow, Harry’s got more tact than Ron and Hermione put together.” muttered Bill.

“Hermione got’s tact when it comes to girls, and Ron’s got tact when it comes to loss of someone’s pet.” said Charlie.

“Harry’s so far has it all the way.” said Bill.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, third sentence.

Several people snorted.

End of dialogue set.

“That’s the story she used?” said Fred.

“Not even Lockhart would believe it.” said George.

Eighty-first paragraph.
“Poor Hagrid.” said a few first years.

“Yeah, he was just in love, people do stuff like that.” said his friend.

Dialogue line.

Eighty-second paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Eighty-third paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Didn’t know, didn’t really care, Hagrid is Hagrid.” said Harry with a shrug.

Eighty-fourth paragraph, first sentence.

“Ah, I can be book smart, but not street smart, when it comes to the wizarding world.” said Harry with a fond smile.

End of eighty-fourth paragraph.

“Yeah, that’s kind of a big thing.” said Dean.

“Bad pun.” said Fred.

Dialogue line.

Eighty-fifth paragraph, third sentence, first comma.

Parvati and Padma both giggled.

End of eighty-fifth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.
“He’s not saying there is.” said Remus soothingly.

“Probably what Maxime told people.” said Hannah quietly.

“Too right, they’re not pleasant, but if you can get them ter trust yeh.” said Hagrid thoughtfully.

“Yeah, it took us years to recruit Atlas.” said Chief Hawkeye. “I nearly got killed trying to recruit him.”

“There’s a giant Ranger?” said Draco in shock.

“Sure is.” said Nightstrike. “We have at least one of every intelligent species in the Rangers.”

“Who were the first ones?” asked Percy.

“Centaurs and Humans were the first ones, they joined forces to start the Rangers.” said Tempest smugly.

“They’re too big to hide in the forests.” said Rudolph.

Harry blushed.

Cho blushed heavily.
“I’m not one for teen parties I guess.” said Harry.

“Not when you had Royal Garden Parties to enjoy in your youth.” said Mrs. McFinn with a smile.

Dialogue line.

“Not the best timing.” said Mrs. Diggory with a slight smile.

End of eighty-ninth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Several people stared.

“I think I had something in my ears, why would he ask that?” asked a first year.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“I’d be staring at him too.” said Sirius with a raised brow.
“I’d be a bit hesitant, if you’re caught in there, you could be in for a load of trouble.” said Moody.

“You can trust Ced!” shouted Mr. Diggory.

“He’s another competitor, Potter would be foolish to trust him right away.” said Snape.

Ninety-third paragraph.

“Good lad.” said Moody.

Ninety-fourth paragraph, third sentence.

“They cursed at me.” said Harry in a scandalized tone of voice.

Ninety-fourth paragraph, fourth sentence.

“Merry Christmas to me.” said Harry with a roll of his eyes.

End of ninety-fourth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Ninety-fifth paragraph.

“She’s got a point.” said Sirius. “But try not to get Harry involved.”

Dialogue line.

“No, you missed the point.” said Bill.

End of chapter.

Ron blushed.

“Dear me, this one took a long time to read.” said Dumbledore putting the book down. “I think we could all use a bit of a break. Once we’ve all got the feeling back in our limbs and used the facilities we shall read one more chapter and then call it a day.”

Many people stood up and began to walk about and leave to use the restrooms.

“Man, doesn’t feel like we’ve made much progress.” said Ron.

“Well, the book is almost half over.” said Hermione quietly.

“Sorry I was prat.” said Ron.

“Sorry I didn’t quite understand.” said Hermione.

The Weasley family smiled at the two fondly.

Chapter End Notes

Thanks for reading, please review
Everyone came back from their short strolls or from their trips to the restrooms and settled back in their chairs. Several of the girls chatted excitedly about the Yule Ball, exchanging fond memories.

Harry meanwhile was stretching in the bowl slowly. It had been a long day, they had to deal with the first task and then the Yule Ball. This was a bit much to swallow all in one day and it was no wonder Dumbledore said they should stop early that day.

But he couldn’t help feeling antsy, tomorrow, or the day after tomorrow is the day that this book comes to an end, and the unknown starts coming to light. He looked down at his hands, they were beginning to shake…

“Who’d like to read the last chapter of the day?” said Dumbledore cheerfully.

“I’ll take it.” said Remus with a smile. He had noticed Harry’s hands as well as everyone else in the bowl. Best get the chapter over with.

“Sir…” said Harry softly.

“Yes dear boy?” asked Dumbledore as he handed the book over to his old student.

“Could you…I mean…can I cook while you lot read?” asked Harry looking over to the Headmaster.

Dumbledore looked at Harry questioningly, but then he smiled. “I’ll get the ovens and such up here if that’s what you want.”

“Sure, that’ll be fine.” said Harry with a faint smile. He reached into his knapsack and pulled out a large black pouch. The kitchen that Hagrid had been learning how to cook reappeared and Harry walked towards it.

“What are you going to make?” asked George.

“I haven’t decided yet.” said Harry.

“Well, at least we get to taste whatever you cook!” said Fred excitedly.

Harry smirked.

“What’s in the bag?” asked Lavender.

Harry reached in and pulled out a large knife and twirled it around on his fingers. “Just my knives.”

Lavender and Parvati looked at Harry in shock.
Remus smiled, “Well, let’s get this chapter started, while Harry enjoys himself. Rita Skeeter’s Scoop.”

“Do we have to read about her?” said Hannah.

“‘Fraid so,” said Sirius.

First paragraph, third sentence, first comma.

“That’s stuff’s a godsend.” said Rudolph, Sirius and Nightstrike.

“Especially when a bad hair day comes.” said Sirius.

End of first paragraph.

“I’d rather save that stuff for special occasions.” said Hermione with a smile.

Second paragraph, first sentence.

“It’s like I’m living in a talk show story.” said Harry shaking his head as he poured a glass jar’s content into a saucepan.

“You’re making your spaghetti again?” asked Ginny excitedly.

“Uh huh!” said Harry with a smile. “I need to replenish my stock anyway, so I’ll make a few batches while using the last of the jars for dinner tonight.”

“You know the House-elves are cooking dinner right?” said Zacharias with a raised brow.

“If you don’t want any you don’t have to take any.” said Harry.

“Didn’t say I didn’t want any.” muttered Zacharias.

End of second paragraph.

“Well, there was nothing else he could be.” said Hermione.

“At least you didn’t’ pester him about it.” said Remus with a smile.

Dialogue set.

“Except that giants actually kill more people than werewolves do…well…they’re more brutal about it anyway.” said Sirius.

Third paragraph.

Hermione and Ron blushed.

Fourth paragraph.

“This is getting scary, Harry’s never nervous.” said Colin.

Fifth paragraph, first sentence.

“Told you, you should have worked on it.” said Hermione.

“Would you want to hear that egg every night?” asked Harry as he kneaded a large mound of dough.

Hermione gulped. “Perhaps not.”

Fifth paragraph, second sentence.

“I didn’t hear that.” said a few Gryffindors.

“He put a silencing charm around his bed.” said Ron.

End of fifth paragraph.

“Throwing things often do not help solve problems.” said Dumbledore with a smile.

Sixth paragraph, second sentence.

“He’s got a point…” said Sirius.

“He wanted to be cryptic, just in case the wrong person was listening.” said Remus.

Sixth paragraph, fourth sentence.

“You poor kid…jealousy is taking over your trusting nature.” said Tonks.
End of sixth paragraph.

Firenze looked somber. “He has so much riding on his shoulders.”

Seventh paragraph.

Ron whistled innocently.

Eighth paragraph.

“Ah, Wilhelmina’s grand entrance.” said Dumbledore with a chuckle.

Dialogue line.

“Would have been here sooner, but a blizzard hit just before we walked out the door.” said Harry placing the elongated bread dough in the oven as the sauce pan was bubbling, a rich aroma wafted over the students in all directions.

“Wow…” said a few students who smelled the sauce from where they sat. “That smells awesome!”

Dialogue line.

“She’s the substitute teacher, Mr. Weasley.” said Flitwick with a smile.

Dialogue line.

“She was the best one we’ve had so far.” muttered Lavender.

Hermione scowled over to the girl.

Dialogue line.

“If something had happened to Hagrid, I wouldn’t exactly have kind words for whoever was responsible.” said Harry through gritted teeth.

“Run, run away…” said George leaning away from the youth in the makeshift kitchen.
“Damn little bastards.” muttered Charlie.

“Don’t worry, he’s fine, he’s an adult, he can take care of himself.” said Sirius soothingly.
“Don’t worry, he’s fine, he’s an adult, he can take care of himself.” said Sirius soothingly.
“I still barely trust you to find your way down here.” said Remus.
“I still barely trust you to find your way down here.” said Remus.
“S- Shut up..” said Sirius turning red.
“S- Shut up..” said Sirius turning red.
“Did you get lost when you were here?” asked a first year.
“Did you get lost when you were here?” asked a first year.
“He gets sidetracked easily.” said Remus with a smirk.
“He gets sidetracked easily.” said Remus with a smirk.

“I’m concerned.” said Harry. “Not nosy.”

“I’m concerned.” said Harry. “Not nosy.”

The girls in the Great Hall, both young and old cooed loudly.

“The girls in the Great Hall, both young and old cooed loudly.

“Not when yeh know what yer doin.” said Hagrid. “Besides, I had them all set before she got there.”

“Not when yeh know what yer doin.” said Hagrid. “Besides, I had them all set before she got there.”

Lavender and Pavarti looked skeptical.

Lavender and Pavarti looked skeptical.

Mrs. McFinn looked excited.

Mrs. McFinn looked excited.
“Knowing that he’s Rudolph’s Great-Nephew, he’d be pretty popular with the unicorns.” said Leroy with a smile.

“James wasn’t all that popular with them.” said Sirius.

“Well, James was a bit forceful. Harry seems calmer, and he’s certainly a lot more pure of heart than most of these girls.” said Leroy quietly.

Draco rubbed the back of his head as Snape brought his hand back down to his lap.

“Sorry.” said Draco with a moan.

“She kept telling me to look around.” said Hagrid scratching the back of his head. “I knew that picture wouldn’t look right.”

“I remember this article, biggest load of garbage I had read from her since Harry’s articles.” said Remus.

“Okay, she’s got the truth there.” said Tonks.
“The other candidate was terrified of creatures, he would only teach using the textbook.” said Dumbledore. “There were no other candidates. Hagrid was the best one, he is a fountain of knowledge when it comes to creatures.”

Lavender and Parvati rolled their eyes.

“Just needs a little tutoring in teaching techniques, but even that only takes a month.” said Remus.

“Looking, but isn’t.” said Harry.

“He does not terrify anyone!” said Harry slamming down a frying pan angrily.

“We know he doesn’t.” said Leroy standing up and throwing his arms around Harry. “It’s only the best people that know they can trust him with everything.”

“Maimed? No one has been maimed!” said Sirius.

“And who says that the classes are frightening?” said Fred.

“Sure the skrewts are a bit much, but still, come on! The class is top notch!” said George.

“You can’t sleep through that class!” said Fred.

“Yeah, you’d get eaten if you did.” said George.

“But still a top notch class.” said Fred.

“Only cause of your own stupid fault!” said a first year Hufflepuff student angrily.
“THEY DON’T HAVE TEETH YOU MORON!” shouted the N.E.W.T Care of Magical Creatures class.

“Is Skeeter completely addled or something?” said another N.E.W.T student.

“Speak for yourself, ferret.” snarled Ron.

“He doesn’t intimidate anyone!” said Charlie hotly.

Chief Hawkeye raised his eyebrows and looked over to Hagrid. “As much as I disapprove people playing God, that’s an impressive mating, you really do have a way with creatures.”

“I-I don’t.” said Hagrid sheepishly.

“We know you don’t.” said Professor Sprout soothingly.

Lionus groaned. “Creating new life isn’t supposed to be fun…well…not when dealing with creatures….”

“Nice save, boy.” said Chief Hawkeye with a laugh.

“Never said I was.” said Hagrid.

“She’s just spouting off nonsense as usual.” said Bill.
“Strange, I met your father, and that was not the name he gave me as to being your mother.” said Dumbledore thoughtfully.

“Well, me dad never knew me mum’s real name, she always used a fake one.” said Hagrid.

“Why was that?” asked a first year Gryffindor girl.

“Me mum was wanted for accidentally killin’ someone.” said Hagrid.

Article's fifth paragraph.

“Just because some are on the wrong side of the track does not mean they all are.” said Bathilda wisely.

Article's sixth paragraph.

The sound of breaking glass came from where Harry was, it turned out that the glass measuring cup he was holding broke and cut his hand. Small rivers of blood cascaded down his palm and the back of his hand.

Madam Pomfrey tisked and hurried over to heal his hand. “You need to be a bit more careful.”

“Thought I was, I didn’t throw the glass at her face.” snarled Harry looking over to the unconscious reporter.

“That’s being saintly, not careful.” said Madam Pomfrey as she tapped his hand with her wand the stray bits of glass were taken out and healed.

Article's seventh paragraph, second sentence, first dash.

“Don’t care, and it’s not even the real truth.” said Harry hotly.

“Please refrain from breaking anything else, Potter.” drawled Snape, “I’d hate to have to pour a Blood-Replenishing potion down your throat.”

End of article's seventh paragraph.

“This was the most damaging report she could have done.” said Mrs. McFinn.

“You haven’t heard anything yet.” said Ron darkly.

“That’s not good.” said Dr. Clark.

Sixteenth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“A pest told her.” said Hermione.
“Two pests.” said Ron.

Seventeenth paragraph.

Dialogue set.

Eighteenth paragraph.

“Sad thing is, Rita printed it.” said Kingsley.

“She’s dumber than that brat.” said Moody with a sneer.

Dialogue set.

“If the mummies and daddies aren’t idiots, they know they can trust Hagrid.” said Harry shortly as he stirred the bubbling pot.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Nineteenth paragraph.

“She should have brought the young ones, they are more open to whom they get in contact with.” said Firenze.

Dialogue set.

“Hippogriffs are proper creatures, the Skrewts are quite a bit much, but other than that, Hagrid was doing things right.” said Remus looking coldly at Parvati.

Parvati blushed heavily.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Miss Patil!” scolded McGonagall.

Twentieth paragraph, second sentence.
“So I really couldn’t understand why she was miffed.” said Harry.

“You ditched me!” said Parvati.

“You left, I stayed.” said Harry.

Parvati blushed once again.

End of twentieth paragraph.

“She ticked a few girls off, for leaving you.” said Hermione with a smile.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Whoa, Harry’s pissed.” said Fred.

“Rita better leave the country.” said George.

Twenty-first paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

“Sounds about right.” said Mr. Weasley. “She finds anything she can about people who don’t help her make ‘news’.”

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“And for a very good reason.” said Dumbledore with a frown on his face.

Dialogue set, first sentence.

“Wow…” said Lee.

“Glad it wasn’t us.” said George.
“Sounds like a stalker.” said Charlie.

“Low blow.” said Harry with a smirk.

“Uh…I didn’t mean that.” said Ron.

“Harry’s in offensive mode…” said Ron.

“Duck and cover.” said Fred.

“And obey him to whatever he says.” said George.

“He’s scary when he’s mad.” said Hermione.

“Worse than Mom.” said Ron.

Harry smiled, in spite of himself.

“Yeah, that would make me open up to you, such a nice kind boy.” said Dr. Clark with a warm laugh.
“I-I thought you did.” said Hagrid.

“We don’t care, and we never will.” said Harry looking up from his stove. “You’re our friend, and we’ll never abandon you…though our track record has much left to be desired.”

Hermione and Ron both flushed.

Twenty-fourth paragraph.

Leroy crossed his arms. “I always liked Hagrid, one of the best guys I know.”

Dialogue set, second sentence.

“He’s not all that stupid…but how did he know Harry would smack him about if given the chance?” asked Rudolph.

“I kicked a chair from one end of the corridor to the other.” said Harry.

“It almost hit me.” said Draco.

“It missed by four inches.” said Harry.

“Exactly!” said Draco.

End of dialogue set.

Twenty-fifth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“All the quiet in the world won’t help.” said Harry.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Hermione gave Harry a stern look.

Harry looked slightly sheepish.

Twenty-sixth paragraph.
“This is January right?” said Sirius looking at the book as if he had misheard.

“Apparently, he’s not bothered by the cold.” said Remus.

“You could hurt something by going out in nothing but swimming trunks during winter.” said Sirius.

Both Remus and Dr. Clark smacked the back of his head.

“Paid good money for that thing too.” said Ron mumbling.

“Icy water is still icy water, no matter how cold it is back home.” said Ernie.

“I received several offers of transfer from those students, alas, they were already about to graduate, there was little point in making the trip.” said Dumbledore.

“Poor Harry, he was going to give up a trip to Hogsmeade if he had known that you weren’t there.” said Luna.

Hagrid looked guilty.
“Ron and I weren’t watching him much after I said that..” said Hermione.

“Alright…he is starting to creep me out.” said Remus.

“Settle down, nothing happened.” said Harry.

“Really concerned…” said Remus.

Harry sighed.

“His father would be so proud.” said Professor Flitwick wiping tears from his eyes.

“Man doesn’t quite know who he’s dealing with.” said Madam Bones with a proud smile.
“Good plan.” said Dumbledore with a warm smile.

“That wasn’t all he was doing.” said Ron.

Dumbledore only smiled.

Thirty-fourth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“He’s not going to let you lie that easily.” said Charlie.

Dialogue set.

Harry almost dropped his spoon that he was using the taste test the sauce.

“You okay?” asked Leroy.

“F-Fine.” said Harry nodding quickly. He ducked down and grabbed another pot and filled this one with water.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, fifth sentence, first sentence.

“She would have been back by now if it was just an elopement.” said Mrs. McFinn. “James and I weren’t gone all that long.”

“You and Officer McFinn eloped?” asked Harry.

“Well, we eloped away from mother, so getting married in the church down the street from her would have been the same.” said Mrs. McFinn with a giggle. “She wanted me to marry into royalty or some nonsense like that, she kept trying to change my mind about James. She didn’t come pick out the dress with me or anything.”

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue line.
“He was a Beater.” said Fred.

“Yeah, we need to be able to determine where people are going and send the Bludger down their path.” said George.

Dumbledore fidgeted his fingers guiltily.

“Well, at least he’s not just chucking you to the unknown.” said Nightstrike.

“You are way too noble.” said Angelina.

“Aw, cute little Harry made a joke!” said Fred.

“And we weren’t there to hear it!” wailed George.

McGonagall looked proudly over to her Seeker.

“No law against us paying for an adult, as long as we didn’t ask for a sip.” said Fred.

“If not, there should be.” said Dr. Clark with a snicker.
Fortieth paragraph.

“You didn’t do anything.” said Sirius.

“You’ll find out why he wanted to help.” said Ron.

Forty-first paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, third sentence.

“Like that stopped Karkaroff and Maxime.” said Ron.

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, second sentence.

“But you and Ron aren’t supposed to be helping him either.” said Dean.

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“But you still asked, good for you.” said Remus with a warm smile.
“RON!” shouted Percy and Mrs. Weasley.

“A joke! It was a joke!” said Ron.

“They don’t need the help.” said Lionus.

“Are their goblins in the Rangers?” asked Hermione.

“No, they won’t join unless one of their own is made Chief.” said Nightstrike.

“But in order to be Chief, you need to have started from the ground up, so…goblins will never be in the Rangers.” said Chief Hawkeye.

“And the same can be said with almost everyone else that takes the class.” said Sirius with a bright smile. “They’re all sleeping little bunnies.”

“Hopefully they don’t snore nearly as loud as you did.” said Remus.

“Hey, James sleepwalked.” said Sirius. “I only snored.”

“Didn’t know if I should tell Harry or try and drag him out the back way to avoid being a witness to a murder.” said Ron.
Leroy and Mrs. McFinn looked at her. “What was she thinking?” they both said together.

End of forty-third paragraph.

“The table was shaking… “said Hermione.

“That would be Harry.” said Ron.

Dialogue set.

“Tell me she gets fired soon!” said Dean.

“If she isn’t, I know of some people who can arrange it.” said Dumbledore with a bright smile.

“Who?” asked Dr. Clark eagerly.

“Leroy, and Rudolph.” said Dumbeldore with a smile.

“Oh that’s right…” said Leroy.

“I forgot about that.” said Rudolph.

“Say what?” asked Terry Boot.

“Leroy’s mother and her family owned about thirty percent of the Prophet and the Witch Weekly. Rudolph, being the temporary patriarch of the Potter family would be in control of forty percent.” said Dumbledore.

“I’m the Patriarch?” asked Rudolph.

“Well, until Harry comes of age, is that alright?” asked Dumbledore.

“No it’s not…that means my mom is going to bombard me with paperwork…turn seventeen quick!” he said looking at Harry, adding a sly wink.

Dialogue line.

Forty-fourth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“That’s a dangerous place for her to call her out when it comes to Hagrid.” said Professor Flitwick.

“He’s quite popular in the village.”

“I remember getting several letters asking me to help them get her back.” said Professor Sprout.
“How come they asked you?” said a third year.

“I was the best in my year at dealing out curses.” said Professor Sprout with a fond smile.

Forty-fifth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“How come they asked you?” said a third year.

“I was the best in my year at dealing out curses.” said Professor Sprout with a fond smile.

Dialogue line.

Forty-sixth paragraph.

“Then start giving them to truth!” said Bill.

Rita began to stir.

“Can we keep her out?” asked Ron.

“I want a word with her.” said Chief Hawkeye with a sinister smile.

Dialogue line.

Forty-seventh paragraph.

Forty-eighth paragraph.

“Hopefully you smashed it over her head.” said Fred.

Several people agreed. Hagrid was wiping his eyes quietly, moved by how much the students and staff liked him.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

“They decided to try and match wits with Hermione.” said Ron quietly.

“Good thing she didn’t do you, can you imagine the Howlers your mom would have sent.” said Hermione.

“That would have been really bad.” said Ron.
“Harry’s vengeful nature is rubbing off.” said Ron with a smirk.

“I’m still feeling it.” said Draco rubbing his chin.

Dumbledore smiled fondly, meanwhile Hermione blushed heavily.

“You’re so cute.” said Rudolph with a laugh.

Hermione turned even redder.
“I swear, he loves Harry.” said Ron. “He doesn’t do that with anyone else.”

“I think he just loves sitting on me.” said Harry.

Several people laughed. “Wish I knew you longer than I have.” said Tempest with a slight smile.

“You are quite amusing.”

“Thank you.” said Dumbledore happily.

“Wow, did you really say that in front of him?” said Ernie in shock.

“Only you, Headmaster.” said Snape massaging the bridge of his nose.
“And that was not all of them, that was all I could fit in a magically enlarged box.” said Dumbledore.

“Only because they don’t know you and some that are complete prats.” said Charlie.

“I’ll bet they come from one house.” said Sirius sending a glare to the Snake decorated banner.

“Shoulda asked about that…if he thought I had it good.” said Hagrid.

“You aren’t the only one.” said Dumbledore.

Dr. Clark and Mrs. McFinn looked at him sideways.

“Wow…” muttered Sirius shaking his head. “I knew he was odd…”

“He can read it just takes him a while.” said Dumbledore softly.
"Yeah, he is," said Ron. Dialogue set, first sentence.

Dumbledore looked down humbly.

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue set.

Sixty-first paragraph.

“You’re going to drive me nuts with all the deductive reasoning you do.” said Sirius shaking his head.

Dialogue set.

“Poor man…he became very ill, but he did love you Hagrid.’ said Dumbledore kindly.

Dialogue set, fifth sentence.

Sirius raised his hand high.

Dialogue set, seventh sentence.

“Gee, wonder who he’s talking about.” said Fred quietly.

“Must be Dobby.” said George.

End of dialogue set.

Sixty-second paragraph, first sentence, second comma.

Harry sent a nervous look up to Hagrid.

End of sixty-second paragraph.

Dialogue set, second sentence.

“Except you’re a miniscule little thing.” said Fred.
“And an underfed little baby chick.” said George.

They hadn’t noticed Harry rushing around the stove and tackling the both of them to the ground.

“Take it back!” said Harry, holding Fred in a headlock and wrapping his legs around George’s chest.

“Ugh…No!” said Fred with a grunt.

“Can’t deny the facts Little Harry.” said George with a strangled laugh.

“I can sit here all night.” said Harry holding the twins tighter.

George reached behind Harry’s kneecap and tickled his Achilles Heel.

Harry gritted his teeth and held back his laughter. “Not going to work.” he grunted.

“Good lad.” said Moody and Lionus together.

“Impressive.” said Chief Hawkeye.

“Fred…” said George.

“Yeah..” grunted Fred.

“Time to pull out the last resort…” said George.

“We can’t it’s…it’s too terrible.” said Fred grunting dramatically.

“We have no choice.” said George.

“I hope he can someday forgive us.” said Fred.

“What are you talking about?” said Harry with an evil smile. “You two aren’t going anywhere.”

“You’re food’s burning.” said the twins together.

“WHAT?” said Harry, he released the both of them quickly and went over to look at the bread in the stove and stirred the sauce quickly. “Whew, almost did…thanks guys…”

“Huh, maybe he won’t need to forgive us after all.” said Fred with a sigh of relief as he massaged his neck.

“Points deducted for giving up that easily.” said Lionus with a laugh.

“But you have to admit, he did take on the both of them together and held them down.” said Hawkeye with a laugh. “And he has bigger priorities.”

End of dialogue set.

“Only because someone else thought it would be fun to put me on the chopping block.” said Harry.
Sixty-third paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Sixty-fourth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Harry bowed his head as he stirred the noodles that were softening up.

End of chapter.

“And he didn’t fall asleep that night.” said Ron.

“Spaghetti should be ready in a few moments, and if someone could enchant the pot, there should be enough here for people who want to give it a shot.” said Harry loudly, trying to drown out Ron’s words.

“Best not let Sirius near it, he’ll blow up the pot.” said Remus with a laugh.

“Not my fault clam chowder ended up decorating everything.” said Sirius.

“Yes it was…Mrs. Potter told you not to touch it.” said Remus.

“I was just trying to help.” said Sirius with a pout.

Chapter End Notes

Thanks for reading, please review
Rubber Duckie, You're the One.

Chapter Notes

I don't own Harry Potter

See the end of the chapter for more notes

Harry dished out the spaghetti to all who wanted to try a bit of it, which turned out to be a majority of the school and all the adults. Despite having Mrs. Weasley extended the contents of the pot, it was scraped clean.

The students enjoyed the treat that spaghetti was to their palates, and enjoyed the meal that the House-elves had made for them, but only after the spaghetti was gone.

“That was delicious Harry, quite the treat.” said Dumbledore wiping his mouth on the linen napkin.

“God that was good, but why are there extra jars?” asked Remus as he watched Harry tenderly place jars in his knapsack.

“I’ve got to add more herbs and spices to it.” said Harry.

“Does that really take seven days to make?” asked Cho.

“Well, you can use it at any time, but it gets’ better the longer you cook it.” said Harry. Harry stretched languidly. “I think I’m going to go to bed.”

“I’ll come with.” said Leroy.

“So will I.” said Rudolph. “It’s about time you get some ‘Uncle Time’.”

They wrapped their arms around their precious nephew and escorted him up to the rooms. It didn't take them long to get there, and when they did, Harry went to go grab the balm and put it on his front, with Rudolph in tow to put it on his back.

“He’s the best, when I’m tense, he can give the greatest back massage.” said Leroy.

“Well, okay.” said Harry.

The three men went into the bedroom, the two older Potters winced at the cuts into the boys body, but they noticed that they were healing.

“I’ll take that.” said Rudolph as Harry went to lay on the bed, with the ointment on hand. “Let me know if I’m too hard.”

He massaged the ointment into the skin on his nephew’s back.

“You doin’ alright Monster?” asked Leroy brushing Harry’s hair back.

“I’m doin’ great.” mumbled Harry sleepily.

“Did they put a sleeping potion in this stuff?” asked Rudolph holding it to his nose and sniffing it.
“If they did, I’m grateful.” said Harry thickly.

“Well, you aren’t going to get much Uncle Time, but maybe this weekend we can have time to ourselves.” said Leroy with a smile.

“Sounds like fun.” said Harry softly.

When the rest of them had come to the room, they saw no one in the sitting room waiting for them. They peeked into the bedroom and saw Leroy and Rudolph sitting on either side of the head of Harry’s bed, with their hands rubbing his back. Which was amazing because they were both fast asleep.

“Looks like you’re sleeping on the couch.” said Remus.

“Nothing new there.” said Sirius with a fond smile. “I’m glad they’re with him, they must have missed him something awful.”

The next morning, they all gathered in the Great Hall again. Harry, not amazingly, had beat them all down stairs, A tall plate of biscuits sitting beside him and he’d take one slowly as he read the thick book in his hand.

Ron reached around him snagged a few biscuits for himself.

“What kind are these?” asked Ron taking a large bite out of them.

“Ham and Cheese biscuits.” said Harry without looking at Ron. “I’d say help yourself, but you mostly likely already took four of them.”

Ron looked at his hand, there were three and a half now. “You can be really creepy.”

Harry sat up to allow his “Group Therapy Patients” to sit with him. “You never take any less than four of what I make.”

As everyone gathered back into the Great Hall, they noticed that two people were missing. Rita Skeeter’s body and Chief Hawkeye.

“Where did they get to?” asked Fred.

“Skeeter woke up.” said Nightstrike. “The Chief wanted to speak with her in private.”

“Don’t envy her.” said Bill.

It was decided that Tonks was going to take a turn reading.

“Yay! I hope it’s a good one!” said Tonks excitedly. “Chapter Twenty-five”

First paragraph, first sentence.

“Couldn’t you just use the bath in the Dorm’s restroom?” said Sirius.
Harry looked over to Fred and George.
“What did we do?” asked Fred.
“I think that was the time we filled the bathtubs with frog spawn.” said George.
“Oh yeah, good times…good times…” said Fred fondly.

End of first paragraph.

“Yeah, the only people allowed in there would be the ones that could take points away.” said Remus.
“Yeah, but no Prefect has taken points away from me, ‘cept Percy.” said Harry.
“How would you wriggle away from them catching you?” asked Sirius.
Harry placed his hand over his eyes and then looked up to Sirius, his eyes shining brightly.
“I’m sorry.” he said with a slight whimper.
Sirius looked at Harry in shock. “What the…”
Mrs. McFinn giggled, “He was an absolute terror with those eyes. He’d only use them if I told him he couldn’t have a fourth helping of treacle.”
“Ye…Yeah…I could see you dodging point deductions with those, from Prefects anyway.” sad Sirius.

Second paragraph, second sentence.

“Most students learn not to leave the dorms at night when that happens.” said McGonagall.

Second paragraph, third sentence.

“It’s what your father made it for.” said Remus, with a hint of pride in his voice.

End of second paragraph.

“Only if you had it right in front of you.” said Sirius.
“I put a water repelling charm on it, it wouldn’t get wet.” said Harry.
Third paragraph.

“She won’t tell anyone if you’ve been out late, she’s supposed to but she won’t squeal.” said Fred.

“So long as you tell her about some of the exciting stuff.” said George.

Third paragraph, second sentence.

“Can you imagine how proud James would be?” asked Rudolph.

“Can you imagine how pissed Lily would be?” said Leroy with a smile.

End of third paragraph.

Fifth paragraph.

Sixth paragraph, first sentence.

“Most just want the status, you want it so you can use the special bathroom.” said Tonks with a laugh.

Sixth paragraph, sixth sentence.

“Now how can the students use the bath if they’re not allowed out at night?” asked Mrs. McFinn.

“The students have to be in their Common Rooms by nine or so.” said Sirius.

End of sixth paragraph.

“Don’t let her hear that, she can get downright disagreeable.” said Ron warningly.

Seventh paragraph, second sentence.

“Out of respect, we aren’t going to touch that.” said George.

End of seventh paragraph.

Eighth paragraph, first sentence.
“The Dursley’s let you take a bubble bath?” asked one of the first years.

“Nah, McFinn’s.” said Harry nodding over to the lady in the bowl.

Eighth paragraph, third sentence.

“You’re having way too much fun.” said Ernie.

End of eighth paragraph.

“You didn’t bring swimming trunks?” asked Sirius.

“It’s a bath…why would I?” asked Harry.

“Well, when we crashed the Prefect bathroom in our younger years, we wore trunks.” said Sirius.

“Yeah, but we were all in there.” said Remus. “Harry’s alone.”

Ninth paragraph.

“So for never learning how to swim, you do pretty well.” said Dr. Clark.

“He was never taught as a child?” asked Dumbledore quickly.

“He…wasn’t fond of deep water when he was younger. James would stand in the pool and try and coax Harry to jump in towards him. He never did, he’d run over to the shallow end and climb slowly around the edge to where James was standing.” said Mrs. McFinn.

“You still afraid of deep water?” asked Remus worriedly.

“Sort of.” said Harry. “Hadn’t gone swimming till that part, but I was learning quickly.”

Tenth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Hang on…there was someone in there with you?” said Leroy.

“He doesn’t have clothes on…” said Rudolph.

“Beat the snot out of who’s ever in there.” said Leroy.

Eleventh paragraph.
“Bet she loved that.” said Seamus.

“You’re so modest.” teased Sirius.

“To catch a maniac yeah, but I really should have visited her…” said Harry.

“You have had a lot of other things on your mind.” said Sirius.

“Wow…” said Ron blushing fiercely.

“She’d better say no…I’d hate to have to ask her to keep to her own bathroom.” said Dumbledore.

“Dear me…” moaned Dumbledore.
Fifteenth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Why don’t you shunt off.” said Charlie.

Sixteenth paragraph.

Second Task Riddle

“Can you understand how I freaked now?” asked Harry.

Ron blushed slightly. “Still, Dumbledore wouldn’t have let it happen.”

Seventeenth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Eighteenth paragraph.

“She’s creeping me out.” said Hannah.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“I’m concerned about not flashing you.” said Harry muttering.

Nineteenth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“She will be confined to her restroom.” said Dumbledore sternly.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.
“Too bad I ate.” said Mr. Weasley.

“Hopefully she didn’t flash anything else.” said Mrs. Diggory.

“She’s not like that.” said Mr. Diggory with a blush.

“How do you know? You weren’t a Prefect.” said Mrs. Diggory.

“I…I snuck in.” said Mr. Diggory.

“Shallow end, that’s it.” said Harry.

People began to growl fiercely.

“It was an honest question!” said Harry.
Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Twenty-fourth paragraph.

“I would think after fifty years you’d calm down a bit.” said Ron.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

“It’s understandable how she could be vicious...being teased a majority of her life.” said Dumbledore.

Twenty-fifth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“They got in contact with me and I had to convince her to come back home.” said Dumbledore.

Dialogue line.

Twenty-sixth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, first sentence.

“I’ll go visit her today.” said Harry softly.

“You don’t have to…” said Remus.

“I’d rather not have any more people pissed at me.” said Harry.

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

Twenty-seventh paragraph.

Twenty-eighth paragraph.
“What’s he doing there? Isn’t he supposed to be ill?” asked a first year questioningly.

Twenty-ninth paragraph, second sentence.

“You were in the bathroom that long?” said Sirius in wonder.

“It felt good…” said Harry.

End of twenty-ninth paragraph.

Thirtieth paragraph.

“No one near you, you’ve got a clear shot to the dorms and you take side-road.” said Remus shaking his head.

Thirty-first paragraph.

“I wonder what he was doing in my office…” said Snape quietly to himself.

“Getting potion ingredients.” said Harry.

Thirty-second paragraph.

“Damn…” said George.

“You’re not having the best luck..” said Fred.

Thirty-third paragraph.

“You should have just went straight to bed, dear boy.” said Dumbledore shaking his head.

Thirty-fourth paragraph. -

Dialogue line.

Thirty-fifth paragraph.

Dialogue line.
People gripped the sides of their chairs and cushions tightly. This was getting tense, and the book wasn’t three-quarters of the way done yet!

“Wow, even he can have a brilliant thought.” said Fred.

“Bad timing on Harry’s part.” said George.

“He’s stolen before, look at Dr. Clark, he nicked his eye patches.” said Justin.

“Peeves only borrowed that, he gave the patch back.” said Dr. Clark.

“He has all of your patches now, doesn’t he?” asked Harry.

“You would have thought Christmas came early for him.” said Dr. Clark with a laugh.

Filch started to climb the stairs, his scrawny, dust-colored cat at his heels. Mrs. Morris's lamp-like eyes, so very like her masters, were fixed directly upon Harry. He had had occasion before now to wonder whether the Invisibility Cloak worked on cats....Sick with apprehension,

“Now is not the time to get sick.” said Remus worriedly, he reached over and rubbed the back of Harry’s neck.

Harry wanted to say he was fine, but the rubbing done to his neck felt too good to ask for it to stop.
Snape tried to hide a gleeful smirk behind his hands.

End of fortieth paragraph.

“I’d look nauseated if I saw him in his nightshirt.” muttered Sirius.

Remus reached over and smacked the back of his friend’s head.

Dialogue line.

Forty-first paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Please go with Filch’s story…” pleaded a third year Gryffindor.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

Forty-second paragraph, second sentence,

“Wow, Harry doesn’t plead with anyone…” said Dennis.

“I couldn’t believe I was slaking that bad.” said Harry covering his face in shame. “This place is running my abilities straight into the ground.”
“Cause you need to treat yourself once in a while…” said Leroy sending a quick look over to Sirius.

Without Harry seeing, Sirius mouthed. “I’ll fix the bathroom right up.”

“Another clue that that’s not him. He’s never surprised by a scene.” said Tonks proudly.
“He’s not wrong on that part, but no student stole from you that year.” said Ron.

“I had to deal with him personally on that matter.” said Dumbledore. “But now I think that he was just trying to make sure you had everything he would need.”

“Not on my staff, but anyone else that would attempt mischief or malicious acts against my students.” said Dumbledore.

Sirius looked at Snape’s arm, but said nothing.

“He’s got a point, he’s a Head of House, he has more authority than he did.” said McGonagall.

“SHIT!” shouted the Marauders and Twins together.
“Phew!” whistled a few people.

“Almost had him.” muttered Snape.

“Oh no!” shouted a few people, as if the villain of a Fairy tale had just gotten the upperhand of the hero.

“That sounds creepy…Harry…you sure no one has tried anything with you? You seem to be coming to some strange conclusions.” said Charlie worriedly.

“No.” said Dr. Nicodemus quickly. Dr. Clark and Mrs. McFinn looked confusedly over to him and Harry.

“I was holding my breath.” said Harry. “I didn’t want to get caught.”
“Bet you are.” growled Sirius and Moody together.

End of dialogue set.

Fifty-sixth paragraph.

Dialogue set.

“No now why don’t we believe you?” said Fred innocently.

Dialogue line.

Fifty-seventh paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Fifty-eighth paragraph.

“I never really believed that story. For I knew what Peeves was up to at that time.” said Dumbledore.

“Then what did you think happened?” asked Seamus.

“I did not know, Filch could tell me nothing, either with his words or his mind.” said Dumbledore.

Fifty-ninth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

I had a nice size cut right down my leg.” said Harry.
“And to think, my trouble-making dad made it.” said Harry with a proud smile.

“And this is Harry…” said Fred.

“We’d have been screaming at that point.” said George.

“I should have figured that part…” said Harry.

“You were being a kid, it’s no fault of yours.” said Sirius soothingly.

“He won’t give you back the map then.” said Sirius quietly.

“Or what lie to come up with.” McGonagall wondered quietly.
“Good lad, don’t trust anyone unless they prove to you they are trustworthy.” said Moody.

“And that’ you holding back.” said Colin.

The people who knew what had happened exchanged significant looks.

“Wow…” said Fred.

“Not where we were thinking he was heading.” said George.

“But should you really give the map away…” said Fred.

“Even on a loan?” said George.
“Don’t give up the map!” said Fred.
“I trusted him.” said Harry sheepishly.

“He’d be your worst nightmare.” said Kingsley with a smirk.

“Well, than what were you thinking of?” said the Aurors and Rangers together.

“Keeping up with my Security testing, and running my own restaurant.” said Harry with a fond smile. “The design of my dream restaurant keeps changing.”

“Of course I did, it hadn’t been taken for it’s Walkies today.” said Ron with a laugh.

“Too right, you’re not as big of a baby as the lot I deal with.” said Dr. Nicodemus.

“Hey, you aren’t gentle.” said Nightstrike.

“You’re supposed to be tough Rangers, not squealing two year olds.” said Dr. Nicodemus.

“Who’d like to read next?” asked Tonks still trying not to laugh at her mentor.
“I’ll read.” said Dumbledore, “that way you may resume your giggling.”

“Thanks sir!” said Tonks laughing out loud at last.

“Ah…now where are we…the next chapter will be Chapter Twenty-six.” said Dumbledore.

“Yay, we’ll get more of this horrid Tournament over with.” said Mrs. McFinn earnestly.

Chapter End Notes

Thanks for reading, please review.
“The second task huh? I hope it’s not as scary as the first.” said Dr. Clark.

“It all depends on how you look at things I suppose.” said Harry.

Dialogue line.

“I worked on it, just never solved it.” said Harry.

“That’s not what I meant!” said Hermione.

“He knows, but he can’t wriggle out of it.” said Sirius with a smirk.

Dialogue line.

First paragraph, third sentence.

Mr. Weasley blushed faintly.

“Dad?” asked Ginny.

“I sort of…banished all the desks out the window on my first try.” said Mr. Weasley sheepishly.

First paragraph, fifth sentence.

“It never quite does.” said Flitwick good-naturedly.

End of first paragraph.

Several people tried not to snort with laughter.

Dialogue set, second sentence.

Sirius and Remus had to elbow each other to stop themselves from laughing.
“And we still get work done.” said a N.E.W.T’s student.

“Still don’t know why she wears it.” sad Ron. “But at least my pillow landed on the pile it was supposed to.”

“You do a great job of pretending to not doing magic quite right the first time.” said Dennis.

“You soak up information like a sponge don’t you?” said Bathilda with a wide smile.

Sirius looked down at the floor, not making eye contact with the dark clothed man.
“Which he shouldn’t hate you just because of your father.” said Professor Sprout.

“You can almost set your watch by that guy.” said Ron quietly. “Says it almost daily.”

“Never said he was.” said Moody, “And neither did the imposter, just…Dumbledore’s too trusting.” he added looking sideways at the old man.

“I try and think the best of people, but I have made grievous mistakes of late.” said Dumbledore sadly, looking at Harry out of the corner of his eye.

“That says it all, if you ask me.” said Fred.

“No one’s asking you.” said Snape darkly.

“All? There was only one.” said a Ravenclaw student.

“He’s got you there.” said Fred.

“You didn’t mind him before he fired Winky.” said George.

“You even asked Percy about him a few times before the Cup.” said Fred.

“Winky waltzed in, and pfft, instant dislike.” said George.
“Well, yeah, I love going through life being absolutely paranoid.” said Ron.

“Gotta love that premature aging.” said Harry tweaking a strand of snow white hair. “I wonder…”

Dr. Nicodemus smiled widely. Harry looked over to him.

“That’s why your hair is turning back to black. You’re resting.” said Dr. Nicodemus.

“That’s wild.” said Harry with a warm smile.

“Shocked me.” said Hermione.

“Me too, I wasn’t even trying. That moment went in my notebook.” said Harry.

“Yeah, that’s a big problem.” said Sirius. “Especially if you don’t like deep water.”

“Because you can’t explain a flying Aqua-Lung flying about in the air.” said Snape with a scowl.

“Well, at least someone squashed that plan.” said Mrs. Weasley with a faint smile.

“Transfiguring yourself into something that needs men to run is not the best idea.” said Rudolph.

“Human transfiguration is one thing, but turning yourself into an inanimate object… very bad idea.” said Leroy.
“Now if you turned yourself into a fish or something along those lines…but that’s still a bad idea.” said Remus.

“You’ll need someone else to turn you back and that can dock points.” said Sirius.

“Not only that, you’ll have no clothes on, so…when you turn back, you’ll have to be wrapped up in a cloak right quick.” said Rudolph.

“Why not use a bubble-head charm, that’s a fourth year spell.” said Dr. Clark.

The school turned and stared.

“You have been studying.” said Dumbledore with a fond smile.

“I’m impressed.” said Professor Flitwick with a beaming smile.

Dialogue line.

“Not funny.” said Sirius holding Harry close to him. “I don’t want you hurt.”

Harry looked down, “You’re squishing my breakfast.”

“Don’t care.” said Sirius.

Dialogue line.

Sixth paragraph, first sentence.

“Or you could think of how to take oxygen with you.” said Dumbledore kindly.

Sixth paragraph, second sentence, first dash, first comma.

“And you gave it to him? We had to sneak in there when we were in our fourth year.” said Sirius sourly.

“You weren’t in the Tournament.” said McGonagall simply.

Sixth paragraph, second sentence, second dash.

“She didn’t help much.” said Ron.

End of sixth paragraph.
“These books are starting to hurt.” said Sirius whimpering.

“You’re telling me?” said Harry.

Seventh paragraph.

“Your poet-like words are starting to get creepy.” said Alicia.

Eighth paragraph.

A few first years were starting to shiver slightly, out of fear for their hero that overcame everything he had come up against in his years at Hogwarts.

Ninth paragraph, first sentence.

A plate of soft fruit and honeyed bread appeared out of nowhere.

“I’ve got biscuits…” said Harry confusedly.

“Eat the fruit and bread as well.” said Dumbledore, silent tears trickling down his face.

End of ninth paragraph.

Note from Sirius.

“How come you didn’t write him a longer letter?” asked Remus.

“I…my hands were already shaking…why didn’t you write to him?” asked Sirius.

“I was too busy being sick with fear for him.” said Remus. “I ate less than even he did.”

“Yeah, I remember that…you did look awful.” said Sirius.

Tenth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Eleventh paragraph.

“I thought you had it all under control.” said Sirius.
Sirius quit cringing, I can’t breathe.” said Harry.

“They aint as exciting, but they can be equally interestin’.” said Hagrid.

“With her face now, it would be impossible to tell.” said Lavender with a gleeful smile.

“And you’d have to go all the N.E.W.T class for Care of Magical Creatures class in order to know that, he knows all this stuff due to experience.” said Charlie proudly.

“Now he does, but he doesn’t quite know what to do with it.” said Bill.

“Then ask him about it!” said Mrs. McFinn.

“I wouldn’t quite know what teh tell him.” said Hagrid scratching the back of his head.
“Ever think that the world expects too much of these children?” asked Tempest.

“The world always expects too much of children…that’s the curse of growing up in this world.” said Firenze.

“It was so cute when the both of them turned and tackled him to the ground and nuzzled him.” said Hermione.

“We couldn’t pry them off him, they just kept playing with him.” said Ron with a laugh.

“Never heard laughter like that before.” said Seamus.

“Like he was a little kid.” said Dean quietly.

“Yeah, it was like he was a whole new person…” said Neville.

“Too bad no one took a picture, that would have been adorable.” said Mrs. McFinn gushingly.

“Good times over.” said Fred.

“Your good times should last longer than one class period.” said George.

Dumbledore looked guilt-ridden. I should have inquired, I should have helped, Maxime and Igor were helping their champions and so was Pomona, I should have helped Harry…

Snape looked thoughtful, “There is a potion in there that will enable the drinker to breathe underwater, but it will take two days to make.”

“So close, but no cigar.” said Harry.
“It would take the Deathstick to do that.” said Ron.
Dumbledore absently fingered his wand slowly.
Lionus looked pointedly over to Dumbledore.

“That was getting to be the game plan.” said Harry.
“Not even you had a game plan?” asked a first year Hufflepuff.
“The Bubble Head charm was so simple, I hadn’t thought of it. The thought of going in deep water sent me into a panic, worse than the dragons.” said Harry.

“Nicolas Flamel.” said Fred.
“Chamber of Secrets.” said George.
“Shut up.” said Hermione. “And they had the information.”
“Not so readily available.” said Fred. “You had to go hunting in there for a long time.”

“You make it sound like you could have done it within a week.” said Sirius with a laugh. “Good luck with that.”

“You saying Harry’s a goldfish?” asked Remus with a laugh.
“'You mean you can’t choose?’ asked Ron.
“No you can’t, your body and core choose for you.” said McGonagall.

“Man, your core does everything.” said Fred.

“Didn’t Harry say at the very beginning that people had two of them?” said George.

“Oh yeah…” said Fred. “What did each core do?”

“Let me think, he said the spiritual core was the one that made the magic happen…and the normal core is the one that absorbed magic from the things around us.” said George.

“Complicated stuff.” said Fred.

Dialogue line.

“I can’t see you turning into a frog.” said Sirius. “A lion or a unicorn yeah…but not a frog.”

“I could see him turning into an eagle!” said a Ravenclaw first year.

“A stag!” said a third year Gryffindor student.

“A wolf!” said a second year Hufflepuff.

“A dragon!” said a first year Slytherin.

“We’re going to run out of animals soon.” said Remus with a chuckle.

Dialogue set.

“It’s not worth it if you have to spill your secrets to the Ministry.” said Ron.

“How can you misuse it?” asked Fred.

“Is Sirius going to get fleas on us or something.” said George.

“I’m going to get you the same way I’m going to get him.” said Sirius teasingly as he nodded to Harry.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“That would be impossible to manage.” said Rudolph with a faint smile.
“Laughing point more like it.” said George.

Twentieth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“And that’s never a good sign.” said the twins together.

Dialogue line.

Twenty-first paragraph.

“There were rules against teachers helping, not other students.” said McGonagall.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Twenty-second paragraph, third sentence.

“Harry, you have to get some rest.” said Mrs. Weasley.

“Yeah, so I can drown tomorrow.” said Harry shaking his head.

End of twenty-second paragraph.

“Those are some odd titles.” said Dr. Clark.

Twenty-third paragraph, third sentence.

“Wish I shared their confidence.” said Harry.
“If you weren’t all that nervous, I’d say it was strep throat.” said Dr. Clark.

“Nothing wrong with knowing your limits.” said Dumbledore. “And if you hadn’t come down, we would have thought no less of you.”

“He’d take a massive hit in points.” said Fred.

“But I’d be alive.” said Harry.

“…There is that.” said George.

“Wow…that sounds like what would have happened.” said Dean.

“You are in a panic.” said Remus.

Just how much does he hate deep water? thought Dumbledore to himself. A thought struck him, when the Dementors were near him…he did describe it as drowning. “Dear lord…”

“You’re going to run yourself ragged child.” said Dumbledore.

“It was getting pretty close.” said Harry.

“What the hell?” asked Charlie.
“Has to be a dream.” said Blaise.

End of twenty-ninth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Thirtieth paragraph.

“Most guys when they dream about mermaids…it’s not like that.” said Sirius.

Smack!

“Ow…whassamatter?” asked Sirius angrily.

“Harry doesn’t need to hear about any of your dreams.” said Remus shortly.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“What the heck is he doing there?” asked Ernie.

Thirty-first paragraph, second sentence.

Several people laughed.

“Poor lad…that was the book that held the Bubble Head charm.” said Dumbledore with a faint smile.

End of thirty-first paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Thirty-second paragraph.
“But you don’t know what you’re going to do!” screeched a first year girl.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“You’d still have to come down.” said McGonagall.

“I didn’t want to face Hagrid.” said Harry softly.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“His what?” asked Remus.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Only thing I can think of an your old inhaler, but that was at my house the last time I know.” said Dr. Clark.

“You had an inhaler?” asked Hermione.

“It was only for the time I was in the hospital with Officer McFinn.” said Harry with a shrug. “I didn’t need it after a while.”

Dialogue line.

Thirty-third paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, second sentence.

Ron blushed. “Man…no wonder you freaked out the way you did.” said Ron.
“It’s in the morning…” said Harry. “I was tired.”

So, it was the elf that stole my gillyweed. thought Snape fiercely.

“I’d be second guessing him.” said Lionus with a faint smile. No wonder the boy is so fond of that elf.

“That explains why the House-Elf began to cry…” said McGonagall thoughtfully. “It must have been Dobby.”

“I’ll bet he doesn’t keep up for long.” said Justin.

“You’re going to fall and break your neck!” said Mrs. Weasley and Mrs. McFinn worriedly.

“And besides, it’ll take you a good fifteen minutes to get there at a dead run.” said Sirius.

“Never saw anyone run that fast!” said Dennis excitedly.
“It was quite thrilling watching you run across the edge of the lake.” said Dumbledore with a bright smile.

“Oooh!” groaned a few people.

“Not the prize for getting there on time I was looking for.” said Harry with a smirk.

“HA! Proved you wrong!” said Sirius.

“Though they would have been right, if I had my original way.” said Harry.

“Oh they could have waited five minutes to start.” said Mrs. Weasley.

“It would have been unfair to the ones that were there…on…time…” drawled Snape.

“Screw ‘em, I was in pain.” said Harry.

Dumbledore looked up into the air, once again feigning deafness, but had a smile on his face.
“They really didn’t give you a moment did they?” asked Remus with concern.

“Nope.” said Harry.

Forty-second paragraph.

“You were still in your school clothes…weren’t you?” asked Sirius.

“Jeans and water don’t mix, especially if you’re wearing them.” said Harry wisely.

Forty-third paragraph.

Forty-fourth paragraph, first sentence.

“Only the Slytherins were laughing.” said Fred.

“Everyone else were figuring you were going to go down and save Ron without the use of magic.” said George.

“Which we wouldn’t put it past you to do that.” said the twins.

Forty-fourth paragraph.

Forty-fifth paragraph.

“You’re suffocating! But…you’re on dry land…” said Dr. Clark.

Forty-sixth paragraph, second sentence.

“Sam!” said Mrs. McFinn. She held him upright as his eyes rolled into the back of his head.

Madam Pomfrey hurried over and forced a potion down his throat. “There, there Sam…it’s just magic, nothing more.” she said soothingly.

End of forty-sixth paragraph.

Forty-seventh paragraph.

“That had to be amazing!” said Neville in awe.
Several people rubbed their eyes subconsciously.

“Why were you thankful? Octi’s not bad.” said Colin.

“He’d want to play, and I didn’t have time.” said Harry.

“Was it another champion trying to slow you down?” asked Sirius.

“I wish it was.” said Harry.

“I’d get away from that thing, and quick.” said Remus. “They have a poisonous bite.”

“Forget biting him, they’re going to try and keep him down there till he drowns!” said Sirius.

“It’s as if Harry picked the fight first.” said Charlie darkly.
“What is she? A stalker?” asked Sirius.

Dialogue line.

“What can they do to her? They can’t hurt her.” said a second year Ravenclaw student.

Fifty-fifth paragraph.

Fifty-sixth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Fifty-seventh paragraph, second sentence.

“They didn’t hurt him did they?” asked Fred angrily.

“Yeah, Octi’s awesome!” said George.

End of fifty-seventh paragraph.

Dialogue set.

“If I wasn’t in a blind panic before…” said Harry.

Fifty-eighth paragraph.

Fifty-ninth paragraph.

“Merpeople, are not the best looking creatures…” said Dumbledore with a faint smile. “They are nothing like what Muggles have painted them out to be.”

Sixtieth paragraph.

Sixty-first paragraph.

Sixty-second paragraph, second sentence.

“You are something else lad.” said Kingsley with a smile.
“There's no one else it could have been.” smirked Harry.

End of sixty-second paragraph.

Sixty-third paragraph.

“I thought you said you kept it on you at all times!” said Sirius.

“I said AFTER the second task.” said Harry.

Sixty-fourth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“It’s not about help, he just wants to borrow it!” said Seamus.

Dialogue set.

Sixty-fifth paragraph.

Sixty-sixth paragraph.

Sixty-seventh paragraph, fourth sentence.

“You had flippers, they didn’t.” said Mr. Weasley.

End of sixty-seventh paragraph.

Sixty-eighth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“I wasn’t going to leave her.” muttered Harry darkly.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.
“We weren’t going to die.” said Hermione with a slight roll of her eyes. “They wouldn’t let that happen.”

“Sorry, but adult wizards don’t exactly have the best track record when it comes to me.” said Harry sourly.

The adults in the room cringed slightly.

Sixty-ninth paragraph.

“Like I said, water and watches don’t mix.” said Harry.

“You were really getting worried about them…” said Remus.

Seventieth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Bout freaking time! Harry was going to get speared by those merpeople if he kept trying to get back to the statue.” said Dennis.

“They wouldn’t have hurt him.” said Dumbledore.

“Yeah, you can tell by the way they were pointing their spears at him.” said Sirius with a roll of his eyes.

Seventy-first paragraph.

Seventy-second paragraph.

Seventy-third paragraph, second sentence.

“Now that’s not fair, they were holding him back.” said Charlie.

“But Harry wanted to free the others, maybe they were penalizing him.” said Bill half-heartedly.

End of seventy-third paragraph.

“He meant to do that.” said Hermione indignantly.

“If he did, he wouldn’t have had to have an adult change him back.” said McGonagall.
“Bet that made you feel better about the situation.” said Draco.

“You're kidding, I was going out of my mind.” said Harry.

“Not even a thank you.” said Ron.

“I didn’t want it, I was just glad he wasn’t going to bite Hermione and tear her in half.” said Harry.

“Good, get them out of the way.” said Sirius. “And get back on the surface.”

“Should have threatened them in the first place.” said Moody with a nod.

“No dear boy, the task was over, they were escorting the last person up.” said Dumbledore.
“That poem shouldn’t have been phrased the way it was if you wanted to keep me calm.” said Harry.

End of eightieth paragraph.

Eighty-first paragraph, second sentence, second pause.

“The gillyweed was wearing off.” said Snape with his brows raised.

End of eighty-first paragraph.

Eighty-second paragraph.

“Sirius…you’re hurting me.” said Harry thickly as Sirius held onto him tightly.

“No I’m not…” said Sirius.

“Yes you are…let go just a little bit.” said Harry.

Sirius released his hold slightly.

“That’s better.” said Harry.

Eighty-third paragraph.

“Please don’t stop…please don’t stop.” said Mrs. Weasley.

Eighty-fourth paragraph.

“What are they? Bipoloar?” Dr. Clark.

Eighty-fifth paragraph.

“Such a gentleman, our little Ronniekins is.” said Fred.

“The mannerisms of an innocent babe.” said George.

“Troll babe that is.” said the twins together.

Dialogue line.
“Yeah well, I almost got barbecued in the first one.” said Harry.

“Save your stupid chit chat for dry land.” snarled Snape.

Ron blushed.

“I was hoping they’d just go back underwater.” said Harry.

“That’s right Perce, get them out of the water.” said Bill.

“You did mouth it though.” said Professor Flitwick.

“Sure, leave the half-drowned lion cub in the lake.” said Sirius sourly.
Remus and Sirius looked intently at Harry.

“He had fallen to his knees in the water.” said Dumbledore. “He looked absolutely exhausted.”

“You should be put right to bed, let your legs rest a bit.” said Dr. Clark.

“Hagrid carried me up to the castle, I kept falling down my legs hurt so much.” said Harry.

“Course not, he’s watched people die in front of him before, even caused it a few times.”

“Alastor!” snapped McGonagall.

“Ron and you keep switching out personalities.” said Charlie with a howl of laughter.

“Because you couldn’t leave Hermione or anyone else behind without knowing they were getting out alright.” said Sirius.
“They didn’t lead the life you live.” said Remus.

“Foolish girl.” said Snape and Madam Pomfrey together.

“People kept telling me off for staying behind.” said Harry looking at Hermione, Ron and Percy.

“What did I do?” asked Percy.

“You sent me a Howler for not bringing Ron to the surface right away.” said Harry.

“Oh..right…” said Percy sheepishly.

“Yeah, told him he should have left her behind.” said Bill shaking his head.

“What’s up with that?” asked Katie.

Hermione blushed.

“Oh…I see…” said Katie with a kind giggle. The rest of the Chasers also giggled.
“Well, that’s fair, the magical part was fine, but the getting to the goal went awry.” said Remus wisely.

“You starting to like her like Ron likes her?” asked Dean.

“No, she was being humble, and she wasn’t all that bad anymore.” said Harry.

“So Harry would have been the only one to get full points.” said Sirius proudly. “Way to go!”

“Three points docked for being outside the time limit?” said Emmeline Vance.

“Well, without Myrtle, I wouldn’t have been within the time limit.” said Harry honestly.

“Well, we’ll never know will we, but I’m happy it turned out that way.” said Rudolph.

“The only one getting the short end of the stick is Fleur so far.” said Leroy.

“In my present mood, I would have slapped the both of you.” said Harry.

“You looked ready to do that.” said Ron with a laugh.
“Hang on…so…you were in the lead to start with? That’s my boy!” said Leroy jumping up and hugging Harry from behind.

“Nice Ron, real nice.” said Mr. Weasley with a warm smile.

“Hermione, you’d better talk to him before he starts to beat the snot out of Harry.” said Sirius knowledgeably.

Harry cringed.

“I told Hagrid I could walk on my own. I just needed a few moments to rest.” said Harry.
Chapter End Notes

Thanks for reading, please review.
“You going to help me cub?” asked Sirius throwing an arm around Harry’s shoulders.

“Alright.” said Harry.

“You going to help me cub?” asked Sirius throwing an arm around Harry’s shoulders.

“Alright.” said Harry.

“Which is what had happened.” said Dumbledore with a smile.

“Like Mr. Potter says, quite the thrilling tale.” said a smiling Professor Flitwick.

Ron blushed.

“Quite the big man on campus he was.” said Seamus smiling and shaking his head.

“Ouch Hermione.” said Fred.

“We expect that from no one else but us…but you doing it?” said George.

“That’s below the belt that is.” said the twins together.
“No need to take it out on Ron and Harry.” said Sirius. “You should be flattered that you’re so dear to someone.”

“Ignore her, have your fun.” said Tonks.

“Poor things.” said Luna. “That’s why I attach a weight to my owl when it’s windy, that way he doesn’t get hurt.”

The people in the Great Hall looked at her.

“Not a bad idea.” said a Hufflepuff student.

“I’m going to have to use that.” said a Gryffindor seventh year.

“That owl still won’t come around me.” said Harry. “I didn’t make the wind do what it did.”

Several people laughed.

“Hey! I was hungry!” said Sirius.

“I’m not sloppy.” said Sirius.
“Doesn’t stop me from losing my mind over you.” said Harry.

“Only if you don’t mind me losing my mind over you.” said Sirius.

Dialogue line.

Fifth paragraph, second sentence.

Sirius took the moment to kiss the top of Harry’s head.

End of fifth paragraph.

“Which is a miracle.” said Neville.

Sixth paragraph, first sentence.

“You’d think that if they wanted to impress people, they’d get better looking girls.” muttered Ron.

End of sixth paragraph.

Dialogue set.

Mrs. Weasley flushed worriedly.

“What’s wrong sweetheart?” asked Mr. Weasley.

“I…I’m not shown in the best light after this.” said Mrs. Weasley quietly.

Her husband looked at her with a look of confusion.

Dialogue set.

“How much do you want to bet he doesn’t do a damn thing.” said Sirius darkly.

Seventh paragraph.

Title of article.

“Oh this should be fun.” said Bill with a roll of his eyes.
“She’s right there.” said Dumbledore with a smile.

“What is she talking about?” asked a third year Ravenclaw girl.

“Is she saying he’s in love?” asked her friend.

“Well, he was in love with Cho, but only a few people knew that.” said Hannah.

“Lies Rita Skeeter.” corrected Tempest with a sneer.

“Deprived of love since the tragic demise of his parents,”

“How the hell did she guess?” asked Charlie.

“She’s pulling at straws, I never told anyone…best not let them get smacked around.” said Harry.

“fourteen-year-old Harry Potter thought he had found solace in his steady girlfriend at Hogwarts, Muggle-born Hermione Granger.

“We’re not Boyfriend and Girlfriend.” said Harry and Hermione together.

“You really must have pissed her off.” said Moody shaking his head.

“I’m going to sue her for you.” said Leroy angrily looking at Hermione.
“Oh I have not!” said Hermione.

“Well, not intentionally, but between Ron and Krum, than yeah.” said Fred.

People turned and slowly stared at Hermione.

Hermione blushed.

A few girls looked at her jealously.

“Say what?” asked Remus.

“Pansy’s pretty? Is Rita blind?” asked Dean in a whisper.

“She’s only praising her because Parkinson talked to her.” said Alicia.

“Whereas Potter and Weasley are more readily able and willing to break rules and laws, Granger doesn’t have the frame of mind to instigate it on her own for her own means.” drawled Snape.

“I dismissed them immediately.” said Dumbledore.

“My business, no one else’s.” said Harry with a growl.
“Wha…?” said Rudolph.

“It’s what mum calls them.” said Ron.

Eighth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“You laugh now, but she can turn an entire community against each other.” said Kingsley.

Ninth paragraph.

“I know a few Slytherins that could do with chugging a few of those.” said Ron.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Didn’t want you getting into trouble.” said Ron.

“Is that the story you’re selling today?” asked Hermione.

Dialogue line.

Tenth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, first sentence.

“Then how did Rita figure it out?” asked Bill. “Viktor doesn’t seem to be the guy to kiss and tell, and Hermione was quiet about it.”

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

“Hermione, you know Ron doesn’t like you going with Viktor, from now on just keep it to yourself.” said Remus.
“I wanted to tell someone!” said Hermione.

“They tell Harry, he obviously doesn’t really care about your love life.” said Sirius.

“I care, but we all have to make mistakes in relationships…” said Harry. “Mistakes, successes, it’s all on us.”

Sirius stared at Harry. “What the hell? When did you get to be an expert on relationships?”

“Never said I was.” said Harry.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

“Take the hint Hermione, stop talking about it.” said Ernie.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

“Okay, we’ll give you that, but try and teach some of your snakes how to be kinder.” said Sirius with a snarl.

Eleventh paragraph.

Dialogue set.

The other teachers glared over to Snape, who sat nonchalantly in his seat.

Twelfth paragraph.

“SEVERUS!” scolded McGonagall. “That was not a note being passed around in class!”

“And besides, it was your little brats that gave it to them in the first place.” said Moody.

“I was not aware of that fact.” said Snape smugly.

“Funny how you don’t seem to ask any questions about your house, yet you seem to just slam Potter with everything you’ve got on hand.” spat Moody.

Dialogue line.
“Severus…” said Dumbledore in a warning tone.

Thirteenth paragraph, second sentence.

Dumbledore and the rest of the staff looked at Snape with fury. His smug look fell and he now had a look of slight nervousness.

End of thirteenth paragraph.

Dialogue set, third sentence.

Snape was now beginning to cower beneath the gaze of his old Transfiguration teacher.

Dialogue set, fifth sentence.

“You are the stupidest man I’ve ever met.” said Lionus. “I’ve only known these kids personally for a few weeks, but come on! Granger with Parkinson? Are you out of your mind?”

End of dialogue set.

Fourteenth paragraph.

“The best therapy money can buy.” said Sirius with a sneer.

Dialogue line.

“The only with a swelled head is you.” said Sirius darkly.

“Give me that.” said Harry taking the book.

“I’m not done yet!” said Sirius trying to hold on to it.

“If you’re going to do that then I’ll read, you can read later.” said Harry.

Fifteenth paragraph.

Dumbledore peered sternly over to Snape.
“Just how blind can you get?” asked Emmeline Vance.

“And you’re nothing than a great greasy bat that can’t see anything beyond his own nose!” said Sirius angrily.

“That’s right, don’t let him get to you.” said Dean.

“He didn’t sneak into your office!” said Remus.

“Not even for potion ingredients for the stuff I make in private, do I nick stuff from your stores.” said Harry.

So I was completely innocent.” said Harry with his most charming smile. “In a half guilty way.”

Sirius and Remus snorted.
“So because I didn’t sneak in at any time, does this mean I get a free shot?” asked Harry with a smirk.

“At your own risk.” drawled Snape, though the sides of his mouth twitched.

Dialogue line.

Eighteenth paragraph, fourth sentence, first dash.

“It had crossed my mind.” said Snape quietly.

End of eighteenth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Not the first time I spoke honestly to you either.” said Harry.

“Hey! You told me off for commenting every other minute!” said Sirius pouting.

“Well, the books are about me, aren’t they? So I’m exempt from the rule, so nyah.” said Harry sticking out his tongue.

Dialogue set, first sentence.

“Too bad he didn’t make you drink it.” said Zacharias viciously.

“We wouldn’t need you to drink it, we already know you wet the bed.” said George.

Dialogue set, third sentence.

“And you’d find my hand slipping right as I curse you out the door!” said McGonagall severely.

End of dialogue set.

Nineteenth paragraph, third sentence.

“That’s sort of sad, that you expect your teacher to attack you.” said Nightstrike.
Nineteenth paragraph, fourth sentence.

“And that wasn’t even the half of it.” said Rudolph.

“Can you imagine what Snape would do with the knowledge that Harry was security testing?” said Leroy.

“That wouldn’t go over well.” said Bill.

End of nineteenth paragraph.

“You’d have to keep proving to the teachers that you weren’t sneaking liquor in that thing.” said Ernie.

Twentieth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Twenty-first paragraph.

Dialogue set.

“You nosy parker.” said Terry with a laugh.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

"After the lesson," Snape snapped.

Twenty-second paragraph.

“You were the only one giving a damn, I was too pissed at Snape to care.” said Ron.

Twenty-third paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“If Snape catches you right there, you are going to get it.” said Fred.
“He must have lost his mind.” said Moody with a smirk. “To show that in a classroom, where anything or anyone could be hiding.”

“Put it down and run.” said Charlie.

“He’s running away from Snape!” said a first year Gryffindor.

“Finally, self-preservation at last! Though he wouldn’t have done anything to you.” said Tonks.

“Don’t bet on that.” muttered Snape.

“I wanted to make you something, but there were a bunch of Beauxbaton students hanging about making some light snacks.” said Harry.

“Those are the expensive ones.” said Remus. “Lily used to give James a pair of those every year, just for fun.”

“And just for fun, he’d never wash them.” said Sirius.
“How far are you allowed to go?” asked Mrs. McFinn.

“The mountains are as far as they can go.” said Dumbledore.

“Come on, tackle him!” said Fred.

“You’re a giant dog! You should be able to knock him down and slobber all over him!” said George.

“That was a ‘pity pant’ wasn’t it?” said Ron.

“Perhaps.” said Harry with a sly smile.

“Did you have to climb so high up on that bloody mountain?” said Harry.

“Harry!” said Dr. Clark and Mrs. McFinn.

“His fault!” said Harry. “He made us climb that effing thing!”

“’Ermione! Don’t rush ‘im!” said Hagrid worriedly. He still couldn’t stop thanking Harry and Dumbledore and Hermione for saving his Beaky, but Buckbeak was still a hippogriff, and they don’t like sudden movements.
Thirty-first paragraph.

“No thinner than what you were.” said Sirius.

“Keep telling yourself that.” said Harry.

Dialogue set, second sentence, twelfth word.

Snape could barely suppress a chortle. He would have to burn that image into his mind, how he wished he could have seen that.

End of dialogue set.

Thirty-second paragraph.

Dialogue set, first sentence.

“Sure, don’t hug him or anything…” said Tonks. “He only just about died before you could hold him again, and the first thing you say to him is ‘Chicken’.”

Sirius looked at Harry with a horrified expression.

“I’m fine.” said Harry. “OI! Get off!”

Sirius wrapped his arms around Harry and held him close. “I’m so sorry!”

“Leggo! C’mon! No means no, dang it!” said Harry trying to make his godfather smile.

“Gimmie the book.” said Sirius trying to wrench the book out of his godson’s arms.

“No, leggo.” said Harry fighting back. But the book escaped his fingers and Sirius took over.

End of dialogue set.

Thirty-third paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“I’m worried…so sue me.” said Harry.

Dialogue line.

“Stray…good word.” said Snape with a sneer.
“Who’s the adult here again?” asked Bill.

“Well, of course! They’re under law to not say anything about anyone in the hospital.” said Madam Bones.

“Cause that’s what they were! Just rumors!” said Tonks.

“Of course he was!...Wasn’t he?” said Percy.

“You’ll find out soon enough.” said Harry.

“I don’t think that’s quite it.” said Dumbledore.
“Not another one.” said Tonks clapping a hand to her head.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

“Making me dizzy he was.” said Ron.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Thirty-eighth paragraph.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

“I’m impressed.” said Tonks.

“Stuff it.” said Sirius.

“So much for giving you a compliment…” said Tonks with a smirk.

“From you…yeah right…from Kinglsey or Moody then I would have taken it.” said Sirius teasingly.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Alright, who do I hand my money to?” muttered Ron.

Dialogue line.
“Didn’t like the sound of him all of a sudden.” said Sirius.

“I didn’t want to freak you out.” said Sirius.

“Only by a small margin, Ludo hasn’t got the guts to do anything more than bean someone over the head with a bludger.” said Moody.

Moody smiled proudly. “Amazing...”
Hermione sent a stern look over to Sirius.

“What are you looking at me like that for?” asked Sirius. “I was agreeing with you.”

“Kreacher.” said Hermione.

“He’s different.” said Sirius, shocking everyone with the snarl his voice had.

“Wasn’t used to you knowing other people like that.” said Harry.

“Hey, I had a life before jail thanks.” said Sirius.

“Some of our darkest days.” said Madam Bones shaking her head slowly. “We’re still trying to sort out the people.”

“Hang on…if Sirius got pardoned because he didn’t have a trial…then…the Lestranges…” said Neville with a whimper.

“Don’t need to worry about that…since the readings…we’ve taken the liberty of…relieving you lot of a few people.” said Lionus with a smile.

“They’re not in Azkaban anymore than?” asked Neville with a hopeful voice.

“Right.” said Lionus with a smile.
“No one really wants to give us a chance to hear the truth, yet they expect us to tell them the complete truth without hesitation…bit one-sided don’t you think?” said Harry with a sneer.

“Because we’ve earned it.” spat Snape.

“Because why? Cause you were born first? Because you’ve ‘seen more’?” said Harry quickly. “Nah…that doesn’t fly with me for the most part. When Uncle Vernon first smacked me about, I told the truth. I kept telling everyone that would listen and even a few that didn’t. I told the truth, and then they told me…”We’ll take care of it, he won’t do it again.” I was lied to, by adults…so…no…adults haven’t earned it.”

Several adults looked uncomfortable.

“I hope that doesn’t happen again.” said Mrs. Weasley worriedly.

“I hope I never have to live through those times either.” said Sirius.

“Never did that, I brought them in alive, didn’t want to lay awake at night thinking I killed someone who had no power over what he was doing.” said Moody with a growl.

“They didn’t even bother with that against me, they just handed me off to the dementors.” said Sirius.

“Thank goodness that never happened.” said Dumbledore quietly. “I’d see myself in power, only in his image.”
“That very well may be true.” said Dumbledore thoughtfully.

Forty-fifth paragraph.

Dialogue line.
Dialogue set.

“That very well may be true.” said Dumbledore thoughtfully.

Forty-sixth paragraph.

Dialogue line.
Dialogue set.

“Another father of the year.” said Kingsley.

Dialogue line.
Dialogue set.

Forty-seventh paragraph.

Sirius looked at Harry, and threw an arm around him. “You made it all bearable.”

“I thought that was your Peter obsession.” said Harry with a faint smile.

“Well, that too, but you were a big part.” said Sirius with a smile.

Dialogue line.
Dialogue line.
Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, sixth sentence.

“Not many are given the opportunity. You have to have excellent connections to even get the “paperwork for it.” said Sirius.

End of dialogue set.

“That would have been what would have happened to me.” said Sirius shivering.

“Not really, I would have gotten you home.” said Harry quietly.

“Even if you thought I was a murderer?” said Sirius.

“You weren’t always, you were still dad’s friend from school, I would have brought you out of there.” said Harry.

“Thanks, just the thought means a lot.” said Sirius.

Forty-eighth paragraph.

Dialogue set.

“Lesser of two evils I suppose.” said Kingsley.

Forty-ninth paragraph, second sentence.

“How can you think that far back?” said Hannah. “To think back to someone’s facial expression?”

End of forty-ninth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“How doesn’t it?” asked Colin.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.
“Sometimes you trust someone, and they can stab you right in the back.” said Sirius coldly.

“I would have done more than just kick him out.” said Dumbledore muttering to himself.

“Doesn’t exactly look good for you when you hang with that sort of lot.” said Tonks. “You can’t exactly look neutral.”

“They deserve to stay there.” said Neville.

“Don’t blame him, Karkaroff is a pretty well known Death Eater in my circles.” said Moody, “I wouldn’t want to know him either.”

“Really?” said Remus. “You couldn’t think of the Dark Mark.”

“Slipped my mind.” said Sirius.
Dialogue set.

Dumbledore and Snape shared a look.

Dialogue set, fifth sentence.

“Sometimes we had to stop at St. Mungos a first a few times.” said Moody with a grimace.

Dialogue set.

Fifty-second paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Are you eating right?” said Fred.

“Getting plenty of sleep?” asked George.

“Grades good?” said Fred.

“Any girlfriends?” George said.

“Any problems with any other students.” said Fred.

“So far, not one of those questions were asked by you.” said the twins looking at Sirius.

Sirius looked guilty.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, sixth sentence.

“Gossip’s one thing, but day to day stuff is an entirely different matter.” said Remus.

“I thought you said she couldn’t remember anything?” said Ernie.
“Like Remus said, gossip she could remember as if it were just told to her, day to day stuff was a bit more taxing on her brain.

End of dialogue set.

Fifty-third paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Fifty-fourth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, first sentence.

“Don’t even ask…” said Mrs. Weasley. “About how he’s holding up…”

End of dialogue set.

“Finally, some concern.” said Blaise quietly.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Fifty-fifth paragraph.

Fifty-sixth paragraph.

“I should have…I don’t…” mumbled Sirius.

“You were busy trying to help us figure out who to keep an eye on.” said Harry.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

“I could see him do it.” muttered Ron.
“I was hoping to get lucky!” said Sirius brightening up quickly.

“Alright, time for lunch I believe.” said Dumbledore clapping his hands and the table appeared.

“I’ll just get a salad and fruit, I’m not in the mood for a large lunch.” said Harry standing up.

“I’ll go get it.” said Sirius putting the book down. “You just relax.”

“I don’t want to think about what the end is going to do to Harry.” said Hermione.

“Yeah, that’s going to be awful for him.” said Ron.

“Him and the Diggorys.” said Hermione.

Chapter End Notes

Thanks for reading, please review
Lunch was consumed in record time, everyone wanted to get to the end of the book and hear what had happened.

Blaise decided to break the ice and be the first Slytherin student to take the book into hand and read a bit of it. He stunned a few Slytherins in the process.

“Alright here, Chapter Twenty-eight.”

“This won’t be any easier.” said Harry.

First paragraph, first sentence.

“And here I thought you were generally concerned about him.” said Percy stiffly.

“Well, sort of.” said Ron.

First paragraph, second sentence.

“And she was getting a mite ticked.” said Harry.

End of first paragraph.

Second paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Ah, bless him.” said Mrs. McFinn with a smile.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.
Mrs. Weasley smiled fondly at her son.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Could have used some of those eclairs.” said Sirius.

“They would have been squished. I’ll make you some tonight, how about that?” said Harry.

Remus smiled over to Harry, silently begging for some as well.

“Alright, alright, I’ll make enough for every one just settle down.” said Harry with a laugh.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Third paragraph, second sentence.

“Wow, I’ve heard of elves becoming depressed, but that’s extreme.” said Charlie.

“She’s dying.” said Harry.

The school went quiet.

Harry continued “She hadn’t waited on someone in a long time. The only thing keeping her going is that she’s keeping that one fire going, and that’s not much.”

Third paragraph, fourth sentence, first comma.

“That and drinking that stuff, like brandy for little old ladies.” said Harry.

End of third paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.
“I used to put that stuff in your bottle.” said Sirius.

“You didn’t…” said Remus. “That stuff has liquor in it!”

“Just a gram of it!” said Sirius, “Besides, he loved it!”

“There’s a shock! You put celery juice in a bottle and he’d still love it!” said Remus.

Fourth paragraph.

Fifth paragraph.

“They figured she should just slap herself together and get on with getting better and getting to work.” said Ron.

Dialogue set.

“It does take a few weeks for a released House-elf to settle back to normalcy in a new house.” said Dumbledore. “But Winky is taking quite a long time.”

Dialogue set.

“Choose your words carefully, if you interrogate her about her old master, she may break down and start wailing.” said Fred.

“Then you won’t get anywhere.” said George.

Sixth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“She won’t like hearing that.” said Charlie.

Seventh paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Eighth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“She won’t be listening to that, she’ll only hear the Master…ill part.” said Bill.
“Only because they’re used to it, other than that, they set their house on fire.” said Dennis.

“Yeah, like Uncle Jack...” said Colin.

“After Aunt Jennifer passed away, he couldn't make himself a cup of tea without burning the top of the stove.” said Dennis.

“I know, I know, none of my beeswax.” said Harry with a smirk.

“She’s not saying anything that’s not true.” said Draco with a snigger.

“But it’s so boring minding my own business.” said Harry with a whine.

“Being nosy is the only thing that makes me appear at the scene to be brave and noble.” said Harry with a laugh.

“You didn’t even catch her?” said Mrs. Weasley.

“We were too busy staring.” said Ron.
“Hey, even we let ourselves go sometimes.” said Sirius.

“You especially.” sneered Snape.

“Oh really?” said Sirius shortly.

“My memory fails me sometimes, but I remember something about a trip to Hogsmede, a certain black haired boy and a case of Odgen’s Old Firewhiskey.”

“Shut up.” said Sirius.

“What happened.” said Dennis.

“Never you mind.” said Sirius.

“I thought that was Peter.” said Sirius.

“No, you kicked him in the groin, you punched me in the nose.” said Remus. “James was too busy laughing and trying to get rid of the bottle before a teacher came along.”

“Because they have work to do, and a drunk House-elf doesn’t look all that great to guests.” said Emmeline with a slight smile.

“Not a good argument.” said Dumbledore with a dry chuckle. “They tend to ignore him when he mentions things like that.”

“Hopefully they don’t hurt him.” said Remus.

“Hope so too.” said Dr. Clark.
“Dear me…they’ve never done that.” said Dumbledore.

“ Took a while for them to let me in, without them sending me wary looks.” said Harry.

“Let’s be honest, he liked both, getting info and then getting some snacks.” said Lee.

“Glad I’m a distraction.” said Sirius.

“You apparently don’t get many times to just sit and look at the scenery.” said Dr. Nicodemus.

“Not with everyone crowding around wanting something.” said Harry. “I like quiet times with myself.”

“So…” said Sirius with a bright smile.

“The balcony was an awesome idea.” said Harry.

“Winky’s right, you’re nosy as hell.” said Draco with a laugh.

“Hang on, you weren’t back in the dorms at curfew.” said Ron. “How did you…oh…the same way you got out of falling out of the tower…”

Fifteenth paragraph.

“They’re experts about letting things go after a short while, where wizards are concerned.” said Lionus.

Sixteenth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Too bad you didn’t cancel it.” muttered Ron. “The only thing they’re printing now is that Sirius has been proven innocent, they aren’t laying blame on anyone. Saying it was a perfectly honest mistake.”

“And if you start dissing the Ministry…” said Fred.

“They’ll help chuck you back in.” said George.

“Let’s see them try.” said Leroy. “I can always destroy this paper and make a better one.”

Dialogue line.

Seventeenth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Eighteenth paragraph.

“How come you’re so popular?” asked Rudolph.

“Not for a good reason.” said Ron.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.
“Beg your pardon?” said Lionus spitting out the tea he had been drinking.

“I thought they only did that on the old mystery shows on the television.” said Tempest looking confused.

“You actually go down to the Recreational Media Room?” said Nighstrike with a snigger.

“I find you humans confusing at the best of time, I tried watching those to see if I could understand better.” said Tempest haughtily.

“Did it help?” asked Firenze calmly as her comrade sniggered.

“Not at all, it only made me think they were all silly creatures that only pursued the action of intercourse and narcotic or alcohol consumption.” said Tempest.

Letter to Hermione.

“Did you tell and show them to a teacher?” said Bill.

“Well…” said Hermione.

Dialogue set, third sentence.

“I hope you kept them.” said Dumbledore darkly.

“I pitched them ages ago.” said Hermione with a slight shrug.

Dialogue set, fourth sentence.

“Hm…don’t think frog spawn can actually boil.” said Fred thoughtfully.

“It doesn’t, it just thickens.” said Snape absently.

End of dialogue set.

Twentieth paragraph.

“Oh you poor thing!” said Mrs. McFinn.

Mr. Weasley looked at his wife confusedly. Why wasn’t she concerned? Why was she looking so guilty all of a sudden?
“Holy crap! How’d you figure that?” asked Ernie in awe.

“I’m just good.” said Ron smugly.

“Why not escort her?” asked Rivers.

“She would have told us off for being late to class, then we would have caught it from Professor Sprout.”

Mrs. Weasley cringed.

“How honey what is wrong?” asked Mr. Weasley.

“I-I need to be excused for a while.” said Mrs. Weasley wiping her eyes, sending Hermione a poignant glance and ran from the room.

“I’m going to see to her, something’s not right.” said Mr. Weasley hurrying after his wife.

“I said she was as pretty as you.” said Harry with a sneer.

Dean whistled low. “That statement will get you smacked.”

“That’s showing dignity.” said Dr. Clark.

“Oh, I liked this class.” said Parvati.

“See, Hagrid, you just needed a sample class and a boost in confidence.” said Remus kindly.
“She didn’t like that one bit.” said Millicent.

“Her fault, she signed up for a class that included animals with teeth.” said Mrs. McFinn with a slightly mischievous smile.

Harry reached around and gave Mrs. McFinn a peck on the cheek.

“Why couldn’t Kettleburn do this?” whined Sirius.

“My locket was hiding in my shirt, it wouldn’t be able to see it.” said Harry.

“You want one?” asked Sirius.

“What are you going to do? Buy me a menagerie?” said Harry.

“Wonder how she’s doing?” said Harry thoughtfully.

“Probably still getting that stuff off her face.” said one of the Greengrass sisters.

“Make yourself rich in a few hours if you pick the right place.” said Ron.
Dialogue set, second sentence.

“As long as you niffler proof your house then you should be fine, but you have to redo the spell every other week.” said Charlie. “A mate of mine has a niffler, for a pet. Like clockwork he has to do the spells all over again.”

End of dialogue set.

Twenty-seventh paragraph.

“Least Harry is covert about it.” said Dennis.

Dialogue set.

“Great, not just a brute, but a thief.” muttered Professor Sprout.

Twenty-eighth paragraph, second sentence.

“Good for you Ron!” said Bill with a clap to the back of his youngest brother. He was a little worried that their parents weren't there, he wondered what had his mother so upset.

End of twenty-eighth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Twenty-ninth paragraph.

Dialogue set, third sentence.

“Hagrid actually kept some of those letters.” said Harry.

“Why did you ask to see them?” asked Sirius.

“I didn’t…I sort of…snuck into Hagrid’s that night and wrote down the names of the people stupid enough to put their names down.” said Harry.

“Then what did you do?” asked Remus.

“Posed as a magical solicitor, how did that letter go again:

Mr or Mrs. So and so. As representative for Professor Ruebeus Hagrid, I’m am to inform you that he had received your correspondence. In accordance to sanction of something paragraph whatever your letter was a direct threat to his personal being. Please be warned that if another correspondence of this sort is sent by you than we will have to pursue charges against you.

Have a pleasant day,

Lord H.”

“Lord H?” asked Fred.

“Can’t exactly say Harry Potter, or HJP. They’ll know right away I’m not old enough.” said Harry.

“You're wonderful.” said Sirius with a laugh.

“That’s not all I did, when I got ahold of some of the letters and envelopes that were sent to Hermione, I sent quite a few Howlers and strongly worded letters.”

“What did those look like?” asked Sirius.

“Just something along the lines of 'Hermione's not my girlfriend, Skeeter was just stirring up trouble 'cause I won't talk to her and if you threaten Hermione again I'm going to get a hold of the authorities and have you arrested.' I wasn't using very flowery words.” said Harry.

End of dialogue set.

“If the author of that note had any decency, he’d jump in a lake.” said Ernie.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Thirtieth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Any flavor is right when it’s chocolate.” said Lupin.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Thirty-first paragraph.
“Well that’s half true, I wasn’t worried that night, and I wasn’t worried in general.” said Harry.

“Not this again.” said Fred.

“You two just got back to being friends!” said George.

“I get tired of that sort of argument.” said Harry.

“And I hate being famous, see, we don’t get what we want sometimes.” said Harry shortly.

“But at least you don’t let him suffer for his.” said Sirius proudly.

“I have to, why should he?” asked Harry.

“That sort of thinking can take over your entire life.” said Professor Dumbledore calmly.

“After that little episode, all Howlers not sent by parents of the child were banned from Hogwarts, anyone sending one would be fined ten galleons.” said Dumbledore sternly. “Sadly, the school made about five hundred galleons, though we should be thankful they never made it to Hermione.”
“You destroyed them?” asked Dr. Clark.

“Oh yes, not only were a few fined, but some were even arrested for harassing children.” said McGonagall. “Not many of them liked that on their record. They’ve had to move, they weren’t allowed to be within three quarters of a mile of a child.”

End of thirty-fifth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Yeah, how is she doing that?” asked Remus.

“Did you get a hold of the papers?” asked Mrs. McFinn.

“I did, and I threatened them with a harassment suit, but unfortunately, they began preaching that the people had a right to know.” said Dumbledore coldly.

“Fired, every last one of them.” muttered Leroy coldly.

Thirty-sixth paragraph.

“Harry didn’t want to let the cat out of the bag and do the counter curse in front of everyone.” said Ron.

Dialogue set.

“So your eye doesn’t work on Animagi?” asked Blaise.

“Not unless you know how to force it to look for them.” said Moody.

“Force?” asked Draco.

“I can make my eye excel in it’s perception.” said Moody. “Took a long time of training, but I got it.”

Dr. Nicodemus smirked. “I knew you wouldn’t just take the eye for what it could do normally.”

Moody looked at him, with both eyes.

“And you’ve only scratched the surface.” he added cryptically.

Dialogue line.
“Nah, wouldn’t work in here.” said Dean. “Tried bringing a radio here, wouldn’t turn on.”

“No…not that.” said Mrs. McFinn with a giggle.

“They’ve got a point.” said Fred.

“Oh, no. I had something better in mind.” said Hermione with a wicked smile.

“I’m just that good!” said Hermione proudly.

“I had nothing on you.” said Sirius darkly.

“Bullshit, I wasn’t forced to eat diseased rats.” said Harry.

“Watch your mouth, young man.” said Mrs. McFinn firmly.
“Yes ma’am.” said Harry quietly.

End of thirty-ninth paragraph.

Fortieth paragraph, third sentence.

“I’ll have to try that!” said Mrs. McFinn excitedly, “I’ve only filled Harry’s with chocolate cream.”

End of fortieth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Forty-first paragraph.

“I didn’t quite notice, I thought you…never mind.” said Ron.

“Man, hope mum wasn’t one of the ones that sent the nasty letters.” said Charlie. quietly to his older brother.

“Though, that would explain why she took off.” said Bill.

Dialogue line.

Forty-second paragraph.

Letter from Percy.

“Well sod off to you too.” said Fred.

“Forget you and the hippogriff you rode in on.” said George.

Forty-third paragraph, first sentence.

“Ha! Don’t ruin perfection.” said Sirius.

End of forty-third paragraph.
Mrs. Diggory leaned forward in her chair, this was her sons final days...she wanted to hear her sons words. The words that came out of her precious boy’s mouth.

“Bet you confused the hell out of him with that.” said Ron.

“Not really, I voiced that when he asked.” said Harry. “Besides, he also took Care of Magical Creatures.”

“We’ll still never forgive them for doing that.” said Fred.

“The ground still isn’t the same.” said George.

“Horrifying it is.” said the twins.

“Oh for Merlin’s sake.” said Professor McGonagall rubbing her eyes, though a smirk played on her lips.

“She still wants to thank you for doing that.” said Bill. “Though she doesn’t know what to do.”

“She doesn’t need to.” said Harry.
“Hoped so.” said Harry.

End of dialogue set.

Forty-eighth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

“Oh, a barrel of laughs.” said Charlie.

Forty-ninth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Fiftieth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“What’s a vord?” asked George.

“And how do you haff?” said Fred mockingly.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Fifty-first paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Wow, you’re trusting Krum?” asked a first year.

“He hadn’t done anything to me before.” said Harry.
“Is he worried that Rita will overhear?” said Emmeline.

“That’s it.” said Harry.

Silence covered the student body.

“Are you kidding me?” said Ernie.

“He viewed you as a threat?” said a snarky Slytherin girl. “You’re not the best looking guy here, he had nothing to worry about.”

Harry looked at her plainly, he had nothing to say. “Never claimed to be....” he thought to himself.

A few girls muttered how she wouldn’t be able to land a halfway decent looking bloke, even if she had the personality of a saint or nymph.

“Not that he has strong feelings for Hermione.” said George with a snigger.

“But ‘Blimey how bloody tall are you?’” said Fred.

“Cause she's/he’s my friend.” said Hermione.
“I almost began to laugh.” said Harry. “I have Quidditch rivals, general school rivals, track rivals and even job rivals, never had a love rival….well, not before that year.”

“Wow, you guys are now swapping Seeker stories!” said Charlie with an impressed smile.

“Whoa, isn’t Krum older, shouldn’t be the one with the instincts?” said Seamus.

“Harry’s going to protect him, that’s priceless.” said Dean.

“What the hell?” asked Rudolph.

“He probably had.” said Dumbledore thoughtfully.

“Bet she left you to come across on your own.” said Hermione darkly.
“Right on the money.” said Harry.

End of sixtieth paragraph.

“Sort of what we’d like to do to you right now.” said Professor Flitwick.

Dialogue line.

Sixty-first paragraph.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

“I’ve never had to deal with nutty people, so I took it slow.” said Harry.

Dialogue set.

Sixty-second paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Sixty-third paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“’Parently he hadn’t had to deal with nutters either.” said Sirius.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, third sentence.

Sirius and Remus leaned forward in shock.

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.
“Hopefully Dumbledore decides to stroll by.” said Remus.

Dialogue line.

Sixty-fifth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Wasn’t sure where the conversation was going.” said Harry somberly.

Sixty-sixth paragraph.

Sirius and Remus’ hands tightened their grip on their hands.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Wonder how Fudge’s wife took to having him not come home for a long time.” said Hannah. “When the Rangers took him.”

“I wonder what made Crouch think of his son like that all of a sudden.” said Justin.

“He never mentioned his son to me.” said Percy with a thoughtful look.

Sixty-seventh paragraph.

Dialogue set, first sentence.

“Must be delusional.” said McGonagall. “His son didn’t get that many, six at the most.”
“You didn’t mention that you run faster than anyone else in the school.” said Dr. Clark proudly.

“Get away from him.” said Sirius. “He’ll do you a massive injury.”

“Don’t think I wanted to stay.” said Harry.

“Tell…Dumbledore…now…” said the adults slowly.

“Will you let me get there?” said Harry.

“Holy freaking Christ!” said Terry.
“Just start spouting off sweets, the door will open eventually.” said Fred and George together.

End of seventy-first paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Seventy-second paragraph.

“I’ll admit, looking back, it was funny.” said Harry.

“Why is that?” asked Sirius.

Harry put on his best ‘Snape-like face’ and beckoned to an invisible person with his forefinger.

“That’s not funny.” said Neville with a squeak.

“I thought it was.” said Harry with a smile.

Snape tried hiding a smile.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

“Can’t you see this is an emergency?” said Remus.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Severus! This was an emergency! Surely you looked into the boy’s mind and saw that!” squeaked Professor Flitwick angrily.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Didn’t you hear him?” said Professor Sprout.
“Severus, someone could have been in serious trouble, and there was. If this happens again, escort them quickly to me.” said Dumbledore. “Every second is crucial in emergencies such as this, it could have made a significant change in events.”

Dialogue line.

“Good, finally someone who will listen.” said Sirius agitatedly.

Dialogue line.

Several students snorted, trying to stifle their laughter the best they could, to avoid the wrath of the Potions Master. The smile he did have a while ago, was now replaced with snarl.

Dialogue line.

“Thank you for going at his pace and not your own.” said Madam Pomfrey. “Goodness knows he doesn’t need another heart attack.”

End of dialogue set.

“What didn’t you trust him?” asked Hermione.

“He was not personally known to me, I was skeptical at his ability to protect Crouch in his vulnerable state.” said Dumbledore. “His skills that he had shown during the tasks were…less than stellar.”
"Viktor?" Harry shouted.

Seventy-sixth paragraph.

“That’s not good.” said Draco. “Not good at all.”

Seventy-seventh paragraph.

Seventy-eighth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Sirius threw his arms around his godson’s lean chest.

“What’s up?” asked Harry.

“Thank god you weren’t there with him.” said Sirius. “I can only imagine what would have happened.”

Dialogue line.

“I didn’t want to let you out of my sight, not with an unknown assailant out and about.” said Dumbledore calmly.
“Really thankful you weren’t there.” said Dr. Clark.

Dialogue line.

Eighty-first paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Eighty-second paragraph.

“How fortunate he was there.” said Moody sarcastically.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Should have left Fang with Harry, could have used some extra protection.” said Hagrid.

“Isn’t he a coward?” said Ron.

“Not against wizards he aint.” said Hagrid. “He’s gettin’ braver.”

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Eighty-third paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Say hello to international conflict.” said Percy slapping a hand to his head.
“You prat! Do you think we would have knocked off your champion without a task going on?” said George.

“If we wanted to knock him off, we’d of switched out your champion’s wand after the weighings and had him turned into a Durmstang Drumstick for the dragons!” said Fred.

“He didn’t’ want him in the bloody thing to start with!” said Sirius.

The hall went silent, all except for the cracking of Hagrid’s wooden chair as he tightened his grip on the arm rests.

“This…is not good…” said Ginny.

“Not with Hagrid there it isn’t.” said Luna simply.

“Not only did I need Harry in a safe place, but the walk with someone he’s gentle with will calm him down.” said Dumbledore fingering an empty phial.
“You alright sir?” asked Harry.

“Fine, dear boy…just fine…” said Dumbledore with a kind smile.

Eighty-sixth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

“Bet that confused the hell out of Karkaroff.” said Remus with a small smile.

Dialogue set.

“Because, dear child, you just had contact with Sirius and you’d tell him everything.” said Dumbledore.

Dialogue line.

“I had never heard that dog growl or look that menacingly before.” said Dumbledore with a faint smile.

Eighty-seventh paragraph.

Dialogue set, eighth sentence.

“Whaddye do?” said Harry innocently.

Dialogue set.

“Thanks for taking confidence in me to hold my own in a fight.” said Harry with smirk up to Hagrid who looked sheepish.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“I think Hagrid’s just been having row with Madam Maxime.” said Fred.
“Sorry…” said Hagrid guiltily.

“Wow…” said a few students looking at Hagrid.

“I was fine Hagrid, I had just had a bad run with bad moods.” said Harry with a smile.

“Well, there’s a shock that he tells them what’s going on.” said Seamus.

“Well, that’s the end of that.” said Blaise holding out the book. He didn’t mind reading, it was sort of fun. “Here Draco.”

“I don’t want to…” said Draco.

“Trust me, it’s not bad.” said Blaise extending the book further towards his friend.

“Aw…hell.” said Harry burying his face in his hands.

Thanks for reading, please review
To Dream A Dream

Chapter Notes

I don't own Harry Potter.

See the end of the chapter for more notes

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Or someone took him away.” said Kingsley thoughtfully.

Dialogue line.

“Good thinking, lad.” said Moody with a gruff smile.

Dialogue line.

“You can if the Headmaster allows, and the Headmaster was allowing members of the Ministry to come and go at their reasonable leisure.” said Flitwick.

Hermione looked down.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“He could have transfigured the body into something, like a rock or whatnot.” said Dr. Clark reaching into his pocket and drawing out a book of magical terms he had been writing down.

“Very good reasoning!” said Professor Flitwick applauding the muggle doctor.

Dialogue line.

“No, don’t fret, you could have had it right.” said Remus.

First paragraph.
“I should have sent you to Madam Pomfrey, she would have put you right to sleep.” said Dumbledore quietly.

Dialogue line.

“What are you? An Auror?” said Tonks.

Hermione smiled.

“Wasn’t meaning that as a compliment, friends don’t interrogate each other, should have memorized what he said the first time.” said Tonks.

“First four times.” muttered Harry.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

“Not the time, Miss Granger, the man is missing.” said McGonagall.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Not Ron, too!” said Tonks.

“You’re getting a voice recorder for Christmas, that way they can leave you alone.” said Dr. Clark.

“I could kiss you.” said Harry with a smile. Ron and Hermione looked down guiltily.

Second paragraph.

Dialogue set.

“Poor man…” said Dumbledore shaking his head.

Third paragraph.

Dialogue set.
Several people turned and stared at Snape, who looked down.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

As Snape looked down, he almost laughed out loud.

Dialogue line.

“Me either.” said Sirius trying hard not to snicker.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“I knew we should have included Hogsmede.” said Sirius.

“We would have had to go into people’s houses, we weren’t able to do that. Remember that seventh year the first time we went to Hogsmede?” said Remus.

“He was just a perv, we just wanted a map.” said Sirius.

Dialogue line.

Fourth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Fifth paragraph.

The hall was silent.

“Uh…we can explain…” said Fred.

“Well, mum ain’t here, so she won’t badger you about the blackmail.” said Charlie.
“I’m more shocked that the two of you are fighting,” said Bill.

“Who on earth were you talking about?” said McGonagall.

“Uh…maybe you’ll find out later…” said Fred softly.

“You sure you don’t want to talk about it now, as opposed to when Mum shows up?” asked Ron.

“Oh…uh…It’s Bagman…he wasn’t paying the money he owed us from the Cup, he just took our money and ran with it.” said Fred.

“Haven’t gambled with adults since.” said George.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Gotta admit, that was pretty funny.” said the four of them together.

Dialogue line.

Sixth paragraph.

“Well, you guys were there sending a letter at that time.” said George.

Dialogue line.

Seventh paragraph.

“Tut tut tut, don’t be so nosy now.” said Fred.

Dialogue line.

Eighth paragraph.

Ninth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Liar.” said the mass of students in unison.

“Great, now the whole school is in on our racket.” said Fred.
“Hear hear, he’s only looking out for you guys.” said Bill.

“Yeah you will.” said the twins with a smirk.

“This was a new mystery.” said Ron.

“Nice that Harry trusts us.” said George.

“That was a bad few chapters.” said Remus.

“You’re telling us.” said Ron and Harry together.
“That’s a bit much.” said Harry. “Especially for them.”

Dialogue set.

“It was always our dream.” said Fred and George.

“Sorry we’re late.” said Mr. Weasley as he led his wife into the Great Hall. She was dabbing her eyes with her husband’s handkerchief.

“You alright mum?” said Bill earnestly.

“I’m…I’m fine.” said Mrs. Weasley thickly. She walked over to Hermione and wrapped her arms around her. “I’m sorry, I’m so sorry.”

Hermione blushed, but she smiled and patted her back. “It’s okay, I forgive you.”

Draco and Snape looked at each other and rolled their eyes, such sentiment….nearly made them gag.

Fourteenth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Say what?” asked Mr. Weasley as he sat his wife down beside him.

“Nothing…” said Fred and George together.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, second sentence.

“Silly school rule?” said the teachers with amusement.

End of dialogue set.

“What?” said Mrs. and Mr. Weasley.

Fred and George looked uncomfortable. “Maybe they should have held off coming back in.”

Dialogue set.

“I wouldn’t…” said Percy.

“We aren’t about to test those waters.” said Charlie.
He would too.” said Kingsley quietly.

Holy cow, even she wasn’t paying attention.” said a seventh year Slytherin.

Tonks giggled.

Sirius leaned forward in the seat.

“I was fine.” said Harry quietly.

“You’re in a room alone with a Death Eater, you’re not fine.” said Sirius.

“We were there.” said Hermione. “He wasn’t alone.”

“I can’t see a Death Eater being put off by two extra teens.” said Remus.

“If Moody had said that, that’s the biggest compliment anyone could have received.” said Sprout.
End of dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Eighteenth paragraph.

“His doesn’t, we’ve been saying all along that they were given special permission, if Crouch was with them.” said Bill.

“He missed that briefing.” said McGonagall. “He was not aware of it. The teachers were also given special permission to apparate in and out of the school grounds.”

“Thank god he didn’t know about that.” said Sirius rubbing the back of Harry’s neck, “He could have taken Harry at any time.”

Nineteenth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

“You don’t’ need to thrust yourself forward like that lad, you’ve got the makings as well.” said Moody. “You both need some polishing up, bit more imagination.” he looked at Hermione. “And a bit more training.” he looked at Ron.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Harry snorted in disgust, “Looking after his own ass there.”

Twentieth paragraph.

“Not with everything going on, that’s not surprising.” said Madam Bones.

“Which he shouldn’t have been forced to do.” said Dumbledore quietly to himself.

Harry scowled

“And go figure, he nicks you when you are supposed to be on your own.” said Remus.

“Small miracle.” said Harry.

“Not even a date?” said Harry with a raised brow.

“You knew what I meant!” said Sirius.

“But how did you know Viktor and I weren’t having a secret rendezvous?” said Harry with a smirk. “Rita did say that we were in a love triangle, who’s to say that there had to be one person being betrayed?”

Sirius looked at Harry in shock.
“You’re hilarious.” said Harry with a laugh at his godfather’s face.

_End of letter from Sirius first paragraph._

“See! See! Right there!” said Sirius.

“I’m not going my whole life looking over my shoulder, I’d like some peaceful times here.” said Harry.

_End of letter from Sirius._

“I was expecting a Howler.” said Harry.

“Sure try and get in me trouble with the Headmaster.” said Sirius.

_Dialogue line._

“I didn’t have someone out to kill me.” said Sirius.

_Dialogue line._

_Dialogue line._

“Except a dragon and a lake full of merpeople.” said Remus.

_Dialogue set._

_Dialogue set._

“Not yet anyway.” said Sirius.

“I just wanted to think I could be no more special than anyone else.” said Harry.

_Dialogue line._

_Dialogue line._

“That would have been a plausible explanation of death if it had happened that way.” said Lionus.

_Dialogue set._
“Still have that note, oh what I wouldn’t have given to take you over my knee right then and there.” said Sirius reaching into his pocket and reading the bit of parchment.

“Fine, I’ll be a good little boy and stay in the castle and I won’t talk to Death Eaters, suspect or otherwise.”

“Love Harry

P.S. Guess that means I can’t talk to you either.

“So sue me, I was pissed.” said Harry.

“That hurt.” said Sirius.

“So did restricting me to the castle.” said Harry.

“I only said you couldn’t go out at night!” said Sirius.

“Yeah? Well, all the bloody practice I had to do, that was the only time I would have been able to get a bit of fresh air.” said Harry hotly.

“Harry, we were trying to help you.” said Hermione rolling her eyes.

“Yeah, great way to spend what might have been the last few weeks of my life, not able to enjoy myself.” said Harry shortly.

That silenced everyone around him.

Twenty-fourth paragraph, third sentence.

“You…?” said Terry.

“Never really had need of it, I had a better spell to knock people out.” said Harry.

End of twenty-fourth paragraph.

“Felt good to me, after all the bickering you two put me through.” said Harry quietly. with a sneer.

Dialogue set, second sentence.

“You kidding? I’m enjoying this!” said Harry with a laugh.

“I know just how you feel, we used Peter for target practice a time or two as well.” said Sirius.

Dialogue set, fourth sentence.

“He saved my ass, I’m not knocking him out.” said Harry.
“It’s difficult to aim once you’ve been stunned, Miss Granger.” said Dumbledore kindly.

“Chicken.” said Fred.

“She should put it out during the hotter days, I’ve had several students nearly succumb to heat exhaustion.” said Madam Pomfrey stiffly.

Several people snorted.

“Nap time!” said Fred, George, Lee, Sirius and Ron together.

“Wow, he’s never fallen asleep in a class other than history before.” said Dean.
“This must be the dream that the title was referring to.” said Firenze.

“It must be another Morpheusus pathway.” said Dumbledore with a smile.

“Oh….crap…this isn’t good.” said Justin.

“No…it’s like that other…Morphy whatsit…” said Ernie.

“Huh? Who’s dead?” asked a first year.

Harry soon found himself swarmed with hands and arms grasping him and holding him tightly.

“Somehow, I feel small pity for him.” said Sirius. “Not much…”
The grip on his clothes and arms tightened quickly.

Dialogue line.

Thirty-fifth paragraph.

“Didn’t know what the hell was going on, scared the crap out of me.” said Ron.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

“You wouldn’t believe me if I told you.” said Charlie.

“Wasn’t even a premonition, it happened right then and there.” said Harry.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“You don’t know how right you are.” said Hannah.

Thirty-sixth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“He’s actually surrendering to Madam Pomfrey?” said Fred.

“That’s a new one.” said George.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

“Testy testy.” said George.

No one was really speaking, the Dark Lord muttering about feeding Harry to a large snake unnerved everyone.

Thirty-seventh paragraph.
“Don’t rightly care.” said Harry sourly.

“Thought not.” said Madam Pomfrey smugly.

“Freaked the hell out of me.” said Harry softly.

People giggled softly.

“That wasn’t the password last time.” said Zacharias. “Why would it…”

“That’s enough.” said Professor Sprout.

“That was three years ago he told you! How the heck did you remember that?” asked Mr. Weasley in amazement.

Dumbledore chuckled to himself warmly.
“Oh it won’t be that.” said Professor Vector.

“Oh it won’t be that.” said Professor Vector.

“You just have to not think about it.” said Dumbledore looking up innocently.

“One of these days, you’re going to lose that nose of yours.” said Sirius tweaking his godson’s nose.

“Well, then the connection is staring at him right in the face.” said Madam Bones.

“How about not being back yet?” said Dr. Clark loudly.

“The man was perfectly sane before this Tournament happened, it was to no…well, there was fault but none he could have foreseen.” said Dumbledore.
“You got him there.” said Nightstrike with a laugh.

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

Several more people laughed.

Dialogue set.

Lionus fixed the Minister with a firm gaze.

Dialogue line.

“Too right!” said a few students loudly.

“I think you’ve lost any hope of being reelected far into the future.” said Emmeline Vance looking up at the ashen faced man.

End of chapter.

“Ruin Harry’s grand entrance.” said Dean.

“That’s all there is for this.” said Draco holding out the book. “Who wants it?”

“I’ll take it.” said Neville with a smile. “The next chapter is called Chapter Thirty.”

Harry sent a sympathetic look to Neville as he sat oblivious to what lay ahead.

Chapter End Notes

Thanks for reading, please review.
Collecting One's Thoughts

Chapter Notes

I don't own Harry Potter.

See the end of the chapter for more notes.

First paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Second paragraph.

“Well that’s nice! You can ask them for advice!” said Mrs. McFinn with a smile.

Third paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“He obviously didn’t care about anyone else, what would he care if I told him that I was in crippling pain?” said Harry with a shrug.

“I don’t think he’d bat an eye.” snarled Sirius up to the man.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

Several people snorted.

“That’s sticking it to him.” said Fred laughing loudly.

Fourth paragraph.

“If I could have applauded you, dear boy, I would have done so most eagerly.” said Dumbledore with a smile.
“Should be embarrassed, coming up with that idea.” said Tempest shortly.

“Did you just think he stopped by to have a chat with the Headmaster? During class time?” said McGonagall with a raised eyebrow.

“I couldn’t even begin to wonder why he needed to speak with me. I felt he had told me all he knew about the night prior’s events.” said Dumbledore.

“Come on, just say feathered baby-sitter.” said Sirius. “He’d always leave him in there with us when we got in trouble, if we did something to his office, he’d fly off and get the Headmaster.”

“Did you ever try anything?” asked Fred eagerly.

“We switched out his Lemon Drops with other ones that were made with no sugar, those things were sour as hell.” said Sirius with a laugh.

“First time Dumbledore ever gave us detention, never mess with his candy.” said Remus with a smile.

“I wouldn’t just leave him with you boys, I also left him with Harry when in his infancy. Fawkes would always wrap his wings around him and keep him warm when we’d come to babysit.” said Dumbledore with a fond smile. “Fawkes loves to snuggle down with small children.”

“They’re pretending.” said Dumbledore with a smile.
“Small mercy,” said Harry.

“We don’t want to know, do we?” asked Mrs. Diggory.

“Not really.” said Remus.

“Really don’t want to know.” said Mrs. Diggory.

“Why look at Fawkes?” asked Remus.

“I don’t know, to make sure that he wasn’t what might have passed for glaring.” said Harry with a shrug.

“Wow, that sounds really cool.” said Colin with wide eyes.

Dumbledore and Snape smiled. (Snape covered his face to hide his weakness in controlling his emotions.)

“Finally, he thinks before he acts.” said Snape removing his hand.

“That little unconscious action tells you you’re doing something naughty and you should stop.”
said George with an airy voice.

“Never stopped us, we’re just saying.” said Fred.

End of tenth paragraph.

Harry blushed while Dumbledore chuckled.

“What’s the joke?” asked Dr. Clark.

“You’ll find out.” said Remus with a smile.

Eleventh paragraph.

Twelfth paragraph, second sentence.

“And to think, I thought you had boundaries with your meddling.” said Snape dragging his hand down his face.

End of twelfth paragraph.

Mrs. McFinn, Dr. Clark and a few students looked around at each other in confusion.

Thirteenth paragraph.

Dumbledore pressed the tips of his fingers together, a slight smile played on his lips, he marveled at the intuition the boy had.

Fourteenth paragraph.

“He’s looking at the courtrooms.” said Madam Bones softly. “But which case is this?”

Fifteenth paragraph.

Sixteenth paragraph.

Seventeenth paragraph.

“Wha…What the hell?” said Neville holding the book away from himself.
“Please continue, Mr. Longbottom.” said Dumbledore quietly. “It will be explained later I suspect.”

Eighteenth paragraph.

Nineteenth paragraph.

“I’m confused.” said Mrs. McFinn.

“You aren’t the only one.” said Dr. Clark.

Twentieth paragraph.

Twenty-first paragraph.

“What did he say?” asked a first year to Dumbledore.

“I do not know, I wasn’t there.” said Dumbledore with a smile.

“Huh? Was it an imposter?” asked Neville.

“No, that is I sitting there.” said Dumbledore still smiling.

“But you said that you weren’t there to hear him.” said Bill.

“That I wasn’t.” said Dumbledore.

Silence ensued.

“My brain hurts, just read on.” said Charlie waving to Neville.

Dialogue line.

Twenty-second paragraph, second sentence.

“That hurt my feelings.” said Harry with a pout.

Dumbledore sent him a regretful smile.

End of twenty-second paragraph.

Twenty-third paragraph.

“PLEASE EXPLAIN!” said Charlie loudly.

“Thinking ain’t your strong suit is it?” said the twins teasingly.
“No, but I’m pretty good about pounding on the two of you.” said Charlie darkly.

Fred and George stood up and ran to their mother and father’s sofa.

“Mummy!” said Fred.

“Daddy!” said George.

“Charlie’s threatening us!” they said together and pointing towards Charlie.

“You’re on your own.” said Mr. Weasley with a sly smile.

Twenty-fourth paragraph.

“Very good.” said Dumbledore with a bright smile. “Though, it is a bit unfair that you’ve had this experience before.”

“Gotta cheat when I can.” said Harry with a mirrored smile back to the Headmaster.

Twenty-fifth paragraph, third sentence.

“That and I’ve always wanted to do that.” said Harry with a smile.

End of twenty-fifth paragraph.

Twenty-sixth paragraph.

Twenty-seventh paragraph.

“Oh shit!” said Dr. Clark holding Harry tightly.

Twenty-eighth paragraph, first sentence.

“How could you? You're in a memory?” said Snape with a raised brow.

“Didn’t mean that I don’t remember what it feels like to be around them.” said Harry.

End of twenty-eighth paragraph.

“I hope I never have to hear of those things again.” said Mrs. McFinn wiping her face with a white handkerchief.
Twenty-ninth paragraph.

“Bet that came as a bit of a shock.” said Bill.

“So, you were watching his sentencing?” said Ginny looking over to Harry.

“’Parently.” said Harry with a shrug.

Thirtieth paragraph.

“That’s creepy.” said Dr. Clark.

“They’re charmed to be unbreakable.” said Kingsley.

“Yeah, but chains? That went out long ago in our world. Nowadays you just have cuffs for the most part.” said Dr. Clark. “Chains…just sound barbaric…can’t you enclose him in a bubble or something?”

“That’s what we do.” said Lionus. “When we are not sure of their guilt and we’re questioning them. Chains for when they’re guilty beyond a shadow of a doubt, but not before.”

Madam Bones looked pensive.

Dialogue set.

“They always try and bargain their ways out.” said Sirius.

“Didn’t you try?” asked Hermione.

“I didn't have anything to bargain with…and even if I could they'd just locked me up and forgot me. No trial, no nothing. Just the occasional food and water.” said Sirius. “Peter's betrayal hurt a lot of people.”

Thirty-first paragraph.

Dialogue set, third sentence.

“I’ll just bet you would.” said Moody with a snarl.

End of dialogue set.

“So he can cut his sentence in half.” said Nightstrike with a snarl. “Thank god we have a system, ‘You in, You stay.’”
“Those were the smart ones.” said Fred crossing his arms.

“Was still debating if having the eye was worth it.” said Moody. “It is.”

“That’s bad trading, that is.” said Tonks with a frown. She was fond of her mentor, and he put his heart and soul into the work, for politicians to do that, was unfair.

“No one really likes them.” said Sirius darkly, “It just depends on how strong your hate for them is.”

“Does not matter, I am not fond of those creatures.” said Dumbledore coldly.

“Quit dancing around and get on with it.” said Tempest stamping her hoof She hated justice being traded for convenience like this. Send them in, and if they have information, they’d spill it, if only to mediate their judgment in the afterlife.

Firenze placed a hand on her shoulder, she looked to him and stopped pawing at the ground.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“So he doesn’t have anything? What was he going to gain from coming there, a day off?” said Dr. Clark.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

A few people scoffed. “Yeah right.”

Dumbledore merely twiddled his thumbs. I suppose, I am alone in this.

“He must be desperate.” said Luna. “To risk having his fellow followers come after him. He must really have repented, at least a little.”

Dumbledore smiled over to the girl.

Dialogue line.

Thirty-fifth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Well, that’s one name in the toilet.” said George.

“Got any more Karkky?” said Fred.

Dialogue line.

Thirty-sixth paragraph.
“We should have Potter sit in these sort of things, just in the shadows, observing some of these people, the way he can read people.” muttered Madam Bones.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.
Dialogue line.

“Ooh, two down.” said Fred.

“Keep on trying!” said George.

Dialogue line.

The students absent mindedly began to touch their noses.

Dialogue set.
Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, second sentence.

“Horrible…horrible tragedy.” said Dumbledore wiping his eyes on a purple handkerchief.

End of dialogue set.

Thirty-seventh paragraph.

“That was a big name to call out, especially at that time.” said Remus.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“He gave one name, that was it.” said Fred.

“Eh, knock a minute off his sentence of life.” said George.
The hall went dead silent. The students turned and looked at Snape slowly. Snape only focused his gaze on his hands.

They turned to look at Dumbledore, who looked at Neville.

“Read on, please, Mr. Longbottom.” said Dumbledore.

“But…but sir…” said Neville, his face pale and held a look of betrayal.

“Here, Nev. I’ll read.” said Harry standing up and walking over to where the reader sat. “Come on, give it up.”

“No. He!....” said Neville pointing to Snape.

“Neville, if he was still a Death Eater, I’d be dead long before this right?” said Harry with a smile.

“Sure but…” said Neville.

“He’s fine for now, now…come on…” he said taking the book. He sat back down and read from where they left off.

“Wow…” said the students looking at Snape again, this time he looked up, daring them to throw accusations at him.

“A Spy?” said a first year girl from Hufflepuff.

“That’s so cool!” said a first year Gryffindor student.

Snape blinked.

“That must have been dangerous!” said another first year student.

“He’s a hero like Harry and Ron and Hermione and Dumbledore and…” said a second year Ravenclaw student.

“To be able to spy on You-Know-Who?” said a third year Hufflepuff. “That’s super brave!”

“He must be super powerful!” said his friend.
Snape looked at the students in confusion, almost all of the students were looking at him in admiration...and it wasn’t the students of his house that were looking at him with it. They too were looking at him with reverence, but all the houses were sharing the same look.

Fortieth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Forty-first paragraph.

Forty-second paragraph, third sentence.

“That was freaky.” said Harry. “I didn’t expect this place to find smiles, least not ones that were real.”

Forty-second paragraph, seventh paragraph.

“Wish I could have hit her.” said Harry muttering.

“Did you try?” asked Remus.

“Better believe it.” muttered Harry.

End of forty-second paragraph.

Forty-third paragraph.

“And you mentioned something like the place being like a sporting event.” said Fred.

“You’re creepy.” said George.

Forty-fourth paragraph.

Dialogue set.

“Yeah, what the hell did he do?” asked Seamus.

“You’ll find out.” said Harry. “Just be patient.”

Forty-fifth paragraph.
“And a cheat.” muttered George.

“Hey, he always could have, we’ll never know.” said Sirius.

“This was the beginning of his downfall.” said Dumbledore. “He had been taking the law to the extremes as of late.”

“It was true, he was only being used by Rookwood, he even admitted to that. He held no ill will towards Ludo, but his master ordered information and he had to get it from someone.” said Madam Bones.

“What do you expect with a sports hero? And to being a decent guy?” said Sirius. “Though…it wouldn’t have worked with me…”

“How come? You were a great guy…weren’t you?” asked Fred.

“Not according to a few women on what would have been the jury.” said Remus with a snicker.
“…That’s how he gets off? Being famous?” said Zacharias.

“Well, he was innocent of wrongdoing, being famous merely helped them choose quickly.” said Dumbledore with a smile.

Fiftieth paragraph.

Dialogue set.

“He didn’t seem to mind him at the World Cup.” said Dr. Clark.

“Barty toned down his personality a bit after this.” said Bathilda Bagshot as she sipped her cup of tea.

“Have you had a talk with her yet about your parents?” asked Sirius.

“No...not yet, maybe this next weekend.” said Harry.

Fifty-first paragraph, fifth sentence.

“This one…doesn’t sound all that friendly like the last trial.” said Dean.

End of fifty-first paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Fifty-second paragraph.

Fifty-third paragraph.

“What the heck is going on?” asked Terry.

Fifty-fourth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

The students stared at Harry. “Damn…” said a seventh year.

“Thank god I’m not his kid.” said his friend.
Harry read ahead quickly. Then he looked up, his eyes alight with green fire. “Anyone crack a joke or says anything cruel, I’m going to beat the shit out of them. Understand?” said Harry darkly.

Mrs. McFinn wanted to scold him on his language, but Sirius stopped her. “Let it go.”

Neville turned white. People looked around at each other, not saying a word, but looking at Neville with sympathetic looks.

“T-The hell it wasn’t.” muttered Neville angrily. Tonks stood up quickly and went to sit beside him and Luna, both gave him support by throwing their arms around him.

“People really like Frank and Alice.” said Remus softly. “They'd get visitors almost around the clock if they were able to receive them.”

“Yeah, but your husband is still a bloody coward.” said Sirius darkly. “He cried himself to sleep half the time.” he added still darkly.
“Whoa, how can anyone say that?” said Mr. Weasley in shock.

“Criminey… I could never do that… never…” said Dr. Clark clutching his throat. “My son could be the devil incarnate, and I wouldn’t do that… I wouldn’t give up my child.”

“I thought I was going insane.” said Harry.

“I did not blame your temptation, I... suppose that I allowed you to look into it.” said Dumbledore with a faint smile.

“Nothing to fear, unless you have need to.” said Dumbledore cryptically.
“I sort of try and get all I can in there.” said Harry with a sheepish smile.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

“That stuff…is thought?” said Dr. Clark.

“Harry was in Dumbledore’s thoughts?” said Alicia.

“That’s nosy to a whole new level!” said Katie with a small laugh.

Dialogue line.

Sixty-second paragraph, third sentence.

“That’s creepy…” said Justin.

End of sixty-second paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

“You could have locked it up, he still would have looked inside.” said Snape.

“Somehow, I don’t quite doubt that.” said Dumbledore with a smile.

Dialogue line.

Sixty-third paragraph.

Sixty-fourth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Follow who?” asked Colin.

Dumbledore gave no answer.

Dialogue line.
“You’re very kind.” said Dumbledore warmly.

“You don’t hear that often.” said Sirius with a snicker.

“He’s not the first one to be sent to me for falling asleep in her class.” said Dumbledore.

“It hasn’t been that long and he doesn’t forget people like that.” said Sirius.

“Hey, I’ve known someone who couldn’t remember the name of the blinking Prime Minister.” said Harry. “I wasn’t thinking straight either.”

“That made me sit up and take extreme notice.” said Dumbledore shaking slightly.

End of dialogue set.
“And I am not his only other correspondent.” said Dumbledore.

“Did he tell you about the pain I had?” asked Harry to Remus.

“He did.” said Remus. “And we both worried for you.” said Remus.

“I was lost in my thoughts.” said Dumbledore.

“Yeah, that’s a good question.” said a first year Slytherin.

“That’s creepy…I hope it was just a dream.” said a first year girl.
“Couldn’t that have waited?” asked Leroy. “I mean, Harry’s got worries and you’re multi-tasking.”

“So why peer into his mind?” asked Madam Bones quietly.

“So…you’ve been reading his past newspapers?” asked Mrs. McFinn to Dr. Clark.

“He’s got a large collection of them.” said Dr. Clark.

“I thoroughly enjoy the crosswords and comics.” said Dumbledore with a smile. “I wipe the paper clean after I complete the puzzles.”

“Now you’re just teasing him.” said Rudolph with a smirk.

“So many wrongful imprisonments…how many have I had a hand in it? And how many was I correct in?” said Dumbledore thoughtfully.
“It wasn’t your place to ask, so you naturally did not.” said Bathilda with a warm smile.

“No…Bella wasn’t so kind as to just kill them.” muttered Moody.

Several people looked down, sadness filling their eyes. They wouldn’t be able to stand it, if their parent’s had forgotten who they were.

“HE WAS!” shouted Neville angrily. And with that he stormed out.

Harry, Ron and Hermione made to follow him.

“No…you’ve done enough comforting, you can’t be everyone’s pain killer.” said Leroy sitting Harry down.

“You and the loss of family…don’t have the best track record.” said Rudolph pointing to Hermione and motioning her down, tears in her eyes. “And Ron…best keep Hermione here.”

“I will see to Neville.” said Dumbledore standing walking out of the room. “Best finish so we may take a break. I will return as soon as Neville is ready.”

Harry didn’t want to read on…but Dr. Clark urged him on. “Come on, just like a band-aid.”
“He doesn’t have the brains to use ‘em.” said Moody darkly.

“Don’t blame you, I don’t trust him.” snarled Moody.

“He didn’t even tell us this!” said Ron.

“So he kept his word at least.” said Sirius proudly.

“He still could have told us.” said Hermione.

“Wasn’t my place to tell you. And I found on accident.” said Harry.

“Well, that’s foreboding.” said Lionus.

“Alright, break time.” said Harry closing the book and laying it on his lap. He stood up and made for the door.
“Harry…” said Mrs. McFinn.

“I’m going for a breather.” said Harry. “Alone.”

The people in the bowl and the surrounding area looked at him sympathetically, they wanted to follow, but something told them not to push it. However, two people weren’t about to leave it alone…Harry brooding now, would not be the best idea.

Chapter End Notes

Thanks for reading, please review.
Harry went outside and walked to the tree that he, Ron and Hermione had graced with their presence time and time again. He reached up, grabbed a lower limb and pulled himself up into the tree. He sat carefully on the upper, stronger branches and looked out onto the grounds.

“These books are getting to be a bit much…wish we never started these damn things…” said Harry.

“If they hadn’t brought the books here, then you wouldn’t have the people you do have surrounding you.” said a calm voice beneath him.

Harry looked down and saw Tempest and Firenze, looking up at him from the ground.

“You don’t need to hold back with your words or thoughts either child.” said Tempest, with a slight smile.

“It’s pretty much my default setting, but…getting Dr. Clark and Mrs. McFinn back and Sirius’ freedom, doesn’t quite make up for all the grief thrown at me.” said Harry looking out onto the grounds with a slight frown. “And reliving some of this is sort of hard to do.”

“It is only by hearing of the past do we learn to not make the same mistakes in the future.” said Firenze.

“Yeah, but why does it have to be mine?” said Harry.

“To be honest boy, no one else’s is worth reading.” said Tempest with a whinnying laugh.

Harry looked out onto the grounds as the sun began to set.

“You will survive this Harry Potter, the stars have not fortold any mortal peril for you as of late.” said Firenze with a smile.

Harry sighed. “Then why do I keep getting this feeling that something bad is about to happen?’

“Perhaps it is because the book is coming to where your greatest enemy and greatest sorrow is coming to light.” said Firenze. “That is the origin of your dread.”

“Yeah, that could be it.” said Harry leaping out of the tree. “I’m going back inside, thanks…for…”

“Think nothing of it, I felt that you and brooding would not be the best thing.” said Tempest with a gentle smile. “And that is coming from someone who has not known you all that long.”

They watched the white haired young man go back inside, lost once again in his own thoughts.

“To think, before this happened, I thought nothing of others.” said Tempest.
“Do you regret coming here? Regret seeing life through another’s eyes?” said Firenze softly.

“There are times that I do wish that I was not changed, but...I would have missed out on so much, so I will endure the changes, and see where fate has decided to take me.” said Tempest slowly taking Firenze’s hand.

It was a little while till Dumbledore and Neville came back into the Great Hall, Neville’s eyes were red rimmed and still leaking tears, Dumbledore’s eyes were also moist and there seemed to have been a wet stain on the man’s cloak. It was obvious that Neville had been crying on the man’s shoulder.

“Let’s take care of another chapter, then perhaps some dinner.” said Dumbledore his voice a little hoarse.

“I hope I haven’t missed anything.” said Chief Hawkeye coming back, with Rita Skeeter in tow.

“Did you have to bring her?” groaned Harry.

“It was either she sits here, or she starts spewing everything to the world through the paper.” said Chief Hawkeye.

“All the luck to her in that aspect.” said Leroy viciously.

“Fine, she can stay.” said Harry. “As long as she keeps quiet.” muttered Harry.

“Oh, she’s already been silenced.” said Chief Hawkeye, pointing to an empty seat to where Rita hurriedly ran to. “She won’t be able to speak, even if she wants to.”

He took his seat, and looked over to the book. “Where are we at?”

Harry read the title. “Chapter Thirty-One I don’t want to read this one.”

“I’ll take it.” said Bill.

Dialogue line.

First paragraph, first sentence.

“I didn’t share the thing I wasn’t supposed to.” said Harry.

End of first paragraph.

“I’ve got enough in there, let other people carry some of it.” said Harry.

Second paragraph.

Dialogue line.
“That sounds kind of final.” said George.
“Like he’s trusting Dumbledore to trust Snape.” said Fred.
“Nah!” said Fred and George together.

“What’s she got to do with anything?” asked Sirius.
“Aside from she deserves to be in that prison of yours.” said Dr. Clark darkly.

“That news didn’t exactly curl my hair, must be the nonsense she normally spits out.” said Hermione smugly.
Rita glared over to the bushy haired girl.

“Still can’t believe that Crouch complained that much about him, and yet seemed fine with him in public.” said Dean.
“Bagman is a popular guy in and outside the Ministry, he’d have to watch what he said about him.” said Mr. Weasley with a slight smile.

“He probably still would have said it if they were standing on the other side of Europe.” said Terry with a roll of his eyes.
Fudge glared hard at the floor.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

“Hmph, I would stand proud and tall.” said Tempest with a frown. “There is no pride in denying your heritage.”

“Emphasis on the tall part.” muttered Nightstrike, Fred and George together.

Tempest fingered her circle blade menacingly.

Fifth paragraph, third sentence.

“We were talking!” said Ron.

End of fifth paragraph.

“Wait, do you want me to sleep or practice the charm, cause I can’t do both.” said Harry with a smile.

Sixth paragraph, fourth sentence.

Neville eyes looked down, but he smiled when Luna hugged him warmly.

Sixth paragraph, fifth sentence.

Neville looked over to Harry in shock.

“For crying out loud, will you hold onto something!” said Sirius covering his eyes with his hand. “Quit giving it to other people!”

Sixth paragraph, sixth sentence.

Remus smiled over to Harry, reached behind him and rubbed the back of his neck.
“He deserved it.” said Neville hotly, “He hurt my mom and dad.”

People across the hall all nodded.

“I pretty much didn’t care about my grades.” said Ron with a shrug. “I wanted to make sure my best mate survived this damned thing.”

“Yeah, but not practicing Transfiguration, Charms, Potions and Herbology is going to hurt you later.” said Charlie.

“Very impressive.” said Chief Hawkeye.

“Only because you knew what exactly was going to happen.” said Mrs. McFinn. Looking at Harry’s face she added. “Well, apparently almost everything.”

“I’d want to see Harry go all out!” said a first year excitedly, completely forgetting what laid ahead.

“Do you go all out?” asked her friend.

“No.” said Harry simply. “But maybe I should have.” he added with a somber look.
Sirius began to laugh out loud.

“For Christ’s sake, get your mind out of the gutter!” said Remus.

Tenth paragraph, third sentence, first semi-colon.

“Mastered?” asked Hermione.

“He don’t need a wand in order to use it.” said Ron with a shrug.

Tenth paragraph, fourth sentence.

Hermione blushed.

“Very impressive, Miss Granger.” said Professor Flitwick brightly.

End of tenth paragraph.

“Why not know the counter-jinx before you cast it on a friend?” asked Tonks.

Hermione blushed heavier and gave a guilty smile.

“You still having problems with that spell?” asked Remus.

“Not anymore.” said Harry.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

Eleventh paragraph.

“What the frick?” asked a seventh year Ravenclaw.

Chief Hawkeye sent Rita a dirty look.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, first sentence.

“Didn’t say he was, just said that what it looks like.” said Harry.
“And did that stop me from worrying about you? Not even one little bit.” said Harry looking over to Sirius. “You can keep telling me till you’re blue in the face.”

“See! I was trying to reassure him!” said Sirius.

“Save it for someone who’ll buy it.” said Harry. “I don’t lead a reassuring life.”

“For you and everyone on the staff.” said McGonagall.

“Still have it somewhere, I need to frame that thing of these days.” said Harry.

“Hope that isn’t the usual part.” said Leroy.

Rita glared fiercely at the girl.

“Hey you earned it.” said Lionus.
“What on earth is he talking about?” asked Mrs. McFinn.

The Rangers and Dr. Clark and Mrs. McFinn turned and stared at Rita.

“WHAT?” shouted Dr. Clark and Mrs. McFinn angrily.

“There is nothing wrong with my Harry!” screamed Mrs. McFinn.

“ONE TIME! IT WAS JUST THE ONE TIME!” shouted Ron angrily to the silenced witch.

“It’s not often at all!” said a first year.

“Yeah!” said another first year.

“He said HEADACHE!” said Dean shortly.

Everyone was getting angrier and angrier with each passing sentence.
“I asked at St. Mungos, they only asked Healer Gibbons, he’s always known to be a quack.” said Madam Pomfrey with a disdainful look over to Rita Skeeter. “You can never believe anything he says.”

Rita only rolled her eyes.

Article dialogue line.

“HE DOESN’T WANT IT!” shouted Fred.

“GET IT THROUGH YOUR THICK SKULLS!” said George.

Article fourth paragraph.

Article dialogue set, first sentence.

“For the love of….what sort of honest answer can you get from a rival?’” said Rudolph.

Rita made a muffled sound, but nothing discernible was coming out.

“I believe she’s trying to say, ‘the most honest one.’” said Dumbledore darkly.

“Are you some kind of idiot?” said Rudolph angrily.

Article dialogue set, second sentence.

“Forget to mention it was you that conjured up that snake and brought the threat to the club, didn’t you?” snarled Charlie. “And that the snake stopped immediately and calmed down.”

“And that doing what you said he did would be completely out of character for him?” said Bill.

Draco cringed.

“You son of a...” muttered the two eldest Weasleys.

End of article, dialogue set.

“I’m going to whack out.” said Bill. “I’m going to…”

Article, fifth paragraph, second sentence.

“So what if Harry’s the first wizard on the good side that had the ability?” said Colin shortly.

“He wasn’t.” said Dumbledore. “There have been several good wizards with that ability, they didn't proclaim it to the rest of the world.”
“Dawlish.” said Kingsley, Moody, Tonks and Madam Bones together.

The Rangers raised their brows at this.

“I’ll show them violence.” said Lionus.

He didn’t want to take part in it in the first place!” said Mrs. Weasley angrily.

“Well, you're taking this well.” said Dr. Clark.

“Leroy! I’m begging you!” said Rudolph clasping his hands together. “I’ll do or get whatever you want, just fire her!”

Leroy sent a look over to Rita, but she only made the visible sign she was laughing.

“She’s saying…or thinking…that she was already fired from the Daily Prophet, this was her last ditch effort to get back on top.” said Dumbledore.

“Well, that’ll never happen, not only do I own Daily Prophet, Witch Weekly, and most of the stock in the Quibbler, I control the publishing works too, she’ll never print anything.” said Leroy. “My mother’s family was and still is big in the news and literature fields.”

That wiped the laughter right off of Rita's face.

“You all are idiots.” said Tonks with a growl.
“I was not in the mood for bouncing around theories.” said Harry.

“We thought she finally snapped.” said Ron.

“Mind sharing with the class?” asked George.

“Or at least with Ron and Harry?” said Fred.

“You’re right, she has snapped.” said Remus looking at Hermione in awe.

“Good plan.” said Dr. Nicodemus.
“Scared the magic out of me.” said Harry. “I was prepared, but I needed a little more time than that!”

Dialogue line.

Twenty-second paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“I would have been shocked, and then I would have shocked them.” said McGonagall flicking her wand causing a small lighting crackle to appear at the end of it.

“Would you have let me watch?” asked Harry eagerly.

“I would have sold tickets.” said McGonagall with a rare smile.

Dialogue line.

Twenty-third paragraph, fifth sentence.

“Why not?” asked Blaise.

Twenty-third paragraph, sixth sentence, first dash.

Several people cringed.

“I could have had my mom and dad meet you.” said Lee.

“Yeah, my folks would have cheered you on!” said Alicia.

“Our too!” said Angelina and Katie together.

End of twenty-third paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Who is waiting for you?” asked Dr. Clark.

Twenty-fourth paragraph.

“And if they were, I don’t want them here.” said Harry.
“Why were you grinning?” asked Dennis.
“I really have no idea.” said Harry.

End of twenty-fifth paragraph.

Dialogue line.
“Hear that? Bent down.” said Ron with a smirk.
“Wipe that smile off your face, before I rip it off you and beat you with it.” said Harry.
“And someone said you didn’t have violent tendencies.” said Percy with a laugh.
“This is different, this is Ron and his short jokes.” said Harry.

Dialogue line.
“And you were.” said Charlie with a smile.

Twenty-sixth paragraph.
“And so it begins.” said Ginny with a giggle.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.
“Well of course! Do any of you blame me?” asked Mrs. Weasley.
“Not one bit, Molly.” said Mr. Weasley quickly.

Dialogue set, first sentence.
“She always loved me.” said Bill with a smile.
“Wishin’ I had missed out on that.” said Harry.

“Then how the heck do you have any room for telling us off for staying up all night?” asked Fred.

“Because I’m your mother.” said Mrs. Weasly sternly.

“Yeah, that’ll do it.” said George.

“He was retired in our first year, we were the first trouble makers Filch had to deal with.” said Sirius proudly.

“Filch was Pringle’s deputy, so he’s been around here a long time.” said Remus. “Strange though, Filch never took on a deputy.”

“Well, he’s not the easiest person to work with…so no shock there.” said Sirius.

“You went to school here!” said Tonks.

“Still want to hear it from his point of view!” said Bill.

“Uh…hi?” said George.

End of dialogue set.
“Didn’t you ever wonder why he had no clue what you were talking about?” asked Charlie to Amos Diggory.

Mr. Diggory looked uncomfortable.

Mr. Diggory cringed even further into his chair.

“She wouldn’t have listened to me if I had managed to corner her and tell her off.” said Harry softly.

“Don’t let him get to you.” said Sirius soothingly, sending Mr. Diggory a furious look.

“Funny that’s what I told you when you were ranting about something that year.” said Mr. Weasley with a smile. “Though I didn’t know you acted on it.”

“The grounds never looked so lovely.” said Mrs. Weasley with a smile. “As they do now.”

“And yet…” said Harry looking pointedly over to Fudge.
Fudge shifted uneasily.

End of dialogue set.

“Can’t see him being objective.” said Sirius smugly.

Thirtieth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“It was a History of Magic exam, it didn’t go well.” said Ron.

Dialogue set.

“Can’t say I never did that.” said Mr. Weasley with a smile.

Thirty-first paragraph, first sentence, fifth comma.

“Killjoy.” said Fred with a teasing smile.

End of thirty-first paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Thirty-second paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“I’m sorry Hermione.” said Mrs. Weasley once again.

“It’s alright.” said Hermione with a warm smile.

Dialogue line.

Thirty-third paragraph.
“Yeah she did.” said muttered Seamus.

“Of course not, the prejudice twit.” said Hermione darkly.

“Ooh, they had another fight.” said Lavender sadly.

“I was hoping you’d take the extended opportunity to eat a bit more.” said Dumbledore quietly.

Harry wasn’t listening, “Last meal, this was Cedric’s last meal...at least he was with his family.”

“Can’t Harry just hide under his bed until this all blows over?” said Tonks.

Sirius pulled Harry over to him, holding him tightly to his side.

“Must have looked terrifying to the other three, if Harry only thought it was creepy.” said Seamus.
Thirty-ninth paragraph.

Dialogue set.

“Give up the moment you set foot inside.” said Dr. Clark eagerly.

“I don’t know if that would have been a good idea.” said Harry softly.

Fortieth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue set.

Forty-first paragraph.

“All the while praying,” said Mrs. Weasley.

Dialogue line.

Forty-second paragraph.

Forty-third paragraph.

Forty-fourth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Should have knocked him out and sent him back.” said Harry.

“Harry…” said Remus with a sympathetic look.

Forty-fifth paragraph.

Forty-sixth paragraph.

Forty-seventh paragraph, second sentence.

“The fake Moody was watching him.” said Professor Sprout in a whisper.
“Sound reasoning.” said a seventh year Ravenclaw student.

“That’s right be on your guard.” said Moody. “CONSTANT VIGILANCE!”

“What on earth?” shrieked Mrs. McFinn putting a hand to her breast.

“He does that a lot.” said Sirius with a smile.

“There’s nothing else you can do against those.” said Ron.

“What the hell is a Dementor doing there?” asked Remus.

“Cedric didn’t know how to make a Patronus!” said Mrs. Diggory.

“Don’t worry, it wouldn’t have bothered him.” said Harry.

“That’s cheating, it hasn’t happened yet.” said Fred.

“Whatever works.” said Harry with a shrug.

“Boggart.” said Sirius and Remus together.
“Took me a little while in order to keep it around, if only for a short time.” said Harry.

“Take care…” said Charlie looking slightly worried.

“Wasn’t the whole point of this trying to beat the others, not help the others?’ asked Zacharias.

“I can see you living your life as a cantankerous old coot who’s never had a steady girlfriend, but Harry’s a gentleman.” said Katie sticking her nose up in the air. “If a lady calls out for help, he goes and helps.”

“What the….?” said Ron.

“Don’t ask, I still have no idea.” said Harry.

Harry’s Thought.*

Sixtieth paragraph.
“I will admit, it was one of my spells.” said Dumbledore with a smile. “It was supposed to deter those who give up too easily. And fly into a panic.”

“Did the other champions go through it?” asked Dennis.

“Weaving the spell takes two hours of intense concentration, I only set up one golden mist.” said Dumbledore kindly.

Sixty-first paragraph.

Sixty-second paragraph, third sentence.

“Thank goodness I didn’t see that, I would thought you died.” said Sirius worriedly.

End of sixty-second paragraph.

Sixty-third paragraph.

“The odds still aren’t in your favor.” said Sirius. “You’ve still got two older wizards against you.”

Sixty-fourth paragraph.

“Pipe dream.” said Harry softly.

Sixty-fifth paragraph, second sentence.

“Way to go.” said George.

End of sixty-fifth paragraph.

“Ooh…wrong turn.” said Bill cringing.

Sixty-sixth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Sixty-seventh paragraph.

“Run for it!” shouted Dennis.
“I can just feel the gray hairs creeping up out of my scalp.” said Sirius.

“Wish I could feel the black coming back.” said Harry tugging his locks.

Mrs. Diggory leaned forward, did someone attack her son before You-Know-Who did?

“What the hell is he playing at?” asked Ron hotly.

Hermione looked horrified.

“He was Imperiused. He didn't realize what he was doing.” said Harry.
“Didn’t realize what had happened till later.” said Harry.

Mr. and Mrs. Diggory stared.

“If this tournament meant that people became that desperate to win it, better finish the damn thing off now.” said Harry.

“Lucky.” said Charlie.

“Do you guys have sphinxes?” asked an eager Hufflepuff first year to Chief Hawkeye.

“She protect the vaults of gold and jewels we have.” said Chief Hawkeye.

“Why do you have so much?” asked the first year.
“Payroll.” said Lionus.

“How much is your payroll?” asked the first year.

“You really don't want to know.” said Chief Hawkeye.

“What’s her name?” asked Charlie.

“Gypsy.” said Tempest. “And don't expect her to show up here, she never leaves her post.”

End of eightieth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Doesn’t hurt to ask, maybe she’ll take pity on you and let you in.” said Hannah.

Dialogue set.

“So…either know the answer completely, or just keep quiet.” said Leroy.

Eighty-first paragraph, second sentence.

“It takes me a while, Hermione can get it in less than a half hour.” said Harry.

End of eighty-first paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Eighty-second paragraph.

Sphinx riddle.

Eighty-third paragraph.

“Let’s see, there’s….Fluffy.” said Fred.

“The Basilisk.” said George.

“Peeves.” said Dr. Clark with a laugh.

“Dementor.” said Sirius giving Harry a squeeze.
“You-Know-Who.” said Ginny sticking her tongue out.

“Percy.” said Ron with a snigger.

“And Umbridge.” finished Remus.

“No fair…that’s the obvious answer!” said the twins together.

Dialogue line.

Eighty-fourth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Eighty-fifth paragraph, fourth sentence, first comma.

“Didn’t think of that one.” said Fred.

End of eighty-fifth paragraph.

Dialogue set, second sentence.

“She raised her paw.” said Harry.

End of dialogue set.

Eighty-sixth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“It’s the letter ‘D’.” said Dr. Nicodemus, he had worked out the riddle after hearing it the first time.

Eighty-seventh paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Eighty-eighth paragraph.

“She’s nicer than what Gypsy is.” muttered Nightstrike.

“That is Gypsy.” said Chief Hawkeye.

“Say what?” asked Nightstrike, Tempest looked over in shock.
“The Ministry needed a sphinx, and as opposed to losing a bunch of lives for a stupid game, best let one that isn’t bloodthirsty take care of the job.” said Chief Hawkeye.

“Well, then she must have really like the kid.” said Nightstrike.

Dialogue line.

“Don’t blame you.” said Ron sticking his tongue out.

Eighty-ninth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Ninetieth paragraph.

Ninety-first paragraph.

Ninety-second paragraph, first sentence.

“Finally, this is all over.” said Mrs. McFinn with a huge sigh of relief.

End of ninety-second paragraph.

Ninety-third paragraph.

“Hang on! You’re faster than him!” said George.

“You were going…to lose on purpose…?” said Fred.

Harry shuffled his feet.

Ninety-fourth paragraph.

“That’s why that particular challenge is there, never let your guard down.” said Dumbledore.

Dialogue line.

Ninety-fifth paragraph.

Hermione looked at Ron, who was drinking a large cup of pumpkin juice.

“What?” asked Ron.
“It’s a spider…” said Hermione.

“Huh…so it is.” said Ron.

“That tranquilizer seems to be working fine.” said Dr. Nicodemus with a smirk.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

Ninety-sixth paragraph.

Sirius yelped and brought his knees up, hugging Harry tightly.

“You alright?” asked Sirius.

“No more than you.” said Harry.

Ninety-seventh paragraph, first sentence.

Soon everyone nearby was gripping Harry tightly.

End of ninety-seventh paragraph.

Ninety-eighth paragraph.

“You don’t even allow time to be in pain? You’re crazy.” said Ernie.

Ninety-ninth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, fourth sentence.

“That’s venom…” whimpered Sirius.

“Thank Merlin it was slow acting.” said Dumbledore placing a hand on his chest.

End of dialogue set.

One hundredth paragraph.
Mrs. Diggory’s hand flew to her mouth. So he wasn’t just speaking through remorse, he had offered Cedric the chance to win.

End of one hundred and first paragraph.

“I can’t exactly get over there.” said Fred.

Dialogue set.

One hundred and second paragraph.

“Yeah, come on!” said Dr. Clark, not knowing what was going to happen next.

One hundred and third paragraph.

“I forgot he said that.” said Harry.

“Will you two knock it off! One of you take it!” said Nightstrike.
The entire house of Hufflepuff, young and old stared at Harry in silence.

Mr. Diggory gasped and he bit his lip.

“Probably couldn’t believe that you would do that.” said Percy softly.

“A…what were they? A Portkey?” said Mrs. McFinn.
Mrs. Diggory and her husband looked sorrowfully down at the floor.

“Let’s end for the night, I don’t’ think anyone will be able to sleep tonight if we continue.” said Dumbledore.

I wasn't sure if this would be labeled a dialogue line or a paragraph. We'll fake it this time.

Chapter End Notes

Thanks for reading please review
Harry rubbed his hand down his face slowly. He wasn't looking forward to this, he just wanted it all to end so he wouldn't be dreading the Diggorys hearing about it first hand. He made to stand up and go downstairs and relieve some of his stress when Bill cried out.

"Here we go again!"

Harry looked over and saw a giant scroll unfurling itself and begin to glow brightly.

"Awesome it's a good one!" said Charlie.

The light covered the entire Great Hall and everyone disappeared from sight.

They found themselves in a richly colored bedroom, that Mrs. McFinn immediately recognized as her own and marveled at her past self brushing her hair in front of her vanity mirror.

"James, when are you going to go and get your suit?" said Mrs. McFinn of the past brushing her hair.

The Watchers turned to see who she was talking to, tears came to Dr. Clark, Mrs. McFinn's and Harry's eyes as they saw the man sitting in bed reading a book by the light of the bedside lamp.

Officer McFinn.

“J-James.” said Mrs. McFinn taking the handkerchief that Dumbledore gave her in her shaking hands.

"Well...uh..." said James. "Soon."

Mrs. McFinn hiccuped a laugh. “He always was a procrastinator.”

"How about tomorrow?" said Holly said with a smile. "That way we can get a little suit for Harry, and pick up Sam's from the cleaners, his had some cocktail stains on it."
“This is before the first Garden Party we took Harry to!” said Mrs. McFinn excitedly.

“Good! They were asking about this moment.” said Dr. Clark.

"Sure. That sounds like fun." said James with a smirk, "Taking a poor little innocent little kid out to look for an outfit that's going to choke his throat. That won't scar him for life."

“It was traumatizing alright.” said Harry with a laugh.

“Oh stop it, you were adorable.” said Mrs. McFinn.

"Suits aren't like that." said Holly putting her hands on her hips. "They look handsome and dashing."

"Says the woman who's never worn one." said James laughing.

“God, he sounds just like our James.” said Sirius with a smile.

"Well, if he doesn't like a suit, we can get a different outfit." said Holly as she climbed into their king size bed, her husband put the book down on his nightstand and turned the lamp off.

“I think we’d better leave.” said Bill quickly.

"Think we'd better plan on him wearing something else. It's a garden party, little boys and dirt get along WAY too well." said James. "And I don't think we can ask them to use their washing machine."

The scene zoomed ahead. They were now standing outside the Dursley’s house and watched as Officer McFinn and Mrs. McFinn come walking up the way.
“Good, I don’t’ think these kids know about the birds and the bees yet.” said Tonks with a giggle.

Officer McFinn rapped on the door smartly, and waited. Within a moment, Vernon answered the door.

"Well, what do you want?" said Vernon sourly.

“Nothing more than to beat the bloody hell out of you.” snarled Sirius.

"I'm here to take Harry out. We need to get him a formal outfit." said Officer McFinn.

"What on earth for?" said Petunia, who came out when she heard the word 'formal'.

“Quit being nosy.” said Angelina.

"We're going to the Queen's Garden Party in a month," said Mrs. McFinn, who was standing beside her husband, took Harry's hand as he hurried out. "and Harry'll need a nice outfit."

"The Queen's?" said Petunia, she looked ready to faint.

"That's right." said Officer McFinn.

"How did you get invited?" said Vernon angrily.

"Being on the police force helped." said Officer McFinn with a smile. "As well as serving our country."

Vernon flushed. "How do you know I didn't serve the Queen?"
Officer McFinn looked him up and down. "I severely doubt it. Guys go to seed, but not this bad."

"Burn!" shouted the twins together loudly.

"Come on Harry, lets go get your outfit all picked up." said Mrs. McFinn.

The scene shifted once more and they found themselves in a tailor's shop, suits and jackets all over the place.

Mrs. McFinn of the past walked straight over to an elderly man with a long cloth tape measure, who was straightening out a pair of slacks on a counter.

“Oh, I miss Mr. Griffon, he still sends me Christmas cards every year.” said Mrs. McFinn happily.

"Ah! Miss Holly!" said the old man coming out from behind the counter and giving her a kiss on each cheek. "You get prettier everyday."

"Oh, stop." said Mrs. McFinn with a blush. "We came to get James' suit altered, Mr. Griffon."

"Alright, James, you know the drill." said the man with a smile to James.

“James was his favorite customer, they loved picking on each other.” said Mrs. McFinn with a giggle.

"Yeah, yeah. put the monkey suit on." said James grumbling slightly. He took the suit into a changing room and closed the door behind him.

"Also, I need a nice little formal outfit for Harry." said Mrs. McFinn pushing Harry forward slightly.
"Hello there little chap!" said Mr. Griffon kindly as Harry looked up shyly.

"Hello." said Harry quietly.

“Harry, you are just too adorable!” cooed a few seventh year girls.

"He needs an outfit for the Queen's Garden Party. Something wash-and-wear though please." said Mrs. McFinn with a smile. "Just in case he gets into mischief."

"Of course, let's see, I think something green...to go with your eyes." said Mr. Griffon walking towards a small rack of children's clothes.

He took several different outfits off the racks and placed them gently on the counter, soon Officer McFinn came out. As he straightened his tie, the girls began to squeal loudly.

“He’s so handsome!” said a few girls.

“Yes he was.” said Mrs. McFinn with a watery smile.

Dr. Clark hugged Mrs. McFinn supportively.

"James, you really need to wear that suit more often." said Mrs. McFinn walking over and kissing her husband. "You look absolutely dashing."

"Well, it doesn't look like you gained weight." said Mr. Griffon walking around James quickly.

"No, I had an easy time getting into this thing, this year." said Officer McFinn. "Not like two years ago."
"Hmm...that means you lost weight then. That's good, stand on here, and I get the alterations done." said the man taking a large pincushion out of a drawer.

The scene shifted once more and this time they found themselves back in the McFinn household.

The Dr. Clark of the past was helping Harry with his little green bow tie.

"I don't like bow ties." said Harry with a frown.

“Oh! But you look so cute!” said Alica and Katie together.

"I don't either, but it's a formal affair." said Dr. Clark as he finished with the bow. "And it's for the Queen, you want to look nice for her, don't you?"

"Yes sir." said Harry.

Officer McFinn came out adjusting his own tie. "How's it going?"

"Harry's all set. How about Holly?" asked Dr. Clark.

"I'm all done." said Mrs. McFinn coming out in a simple blue dress, with a white flower in her hair. She was busy trying to put on a locket around her neck.

“'You look absolutely lovely.” said Dumbledore with a smile.

"James, could you help me?" she said.

"Sure thing," he reached over and quickly clasped the necklace around her neck. "You look stunning by the way."
"You're sweet." she said with a smile and reached up to kiss her husband. "Are we all set?"

"I think so." said Dr. Clark standing up.

"Yes, ma'am." said Harry with a smile.

“Oh, sweetie, you look so handsome!” said Mrs. McFinn with a smile.

"Okay, Harry, you mind your manners alright?” said Officer McFinn.

"Yes sir." said Harry with a bright smile.

The scene shifted again, this time they were in a large garden.

“All this zooming around is making me ill again.” said Neville.

The Watchers looked over and saw the McFinn’s Dr. Clark and Harry coming up with a small group of police officers walking with them.

"We were afraid you weren't going to make it this year." said one of them clapping Officer McFinn on the back.

"You know I make it every year." said Officer McFinn with a smirk.

"Yeah, but you always say you don't want to come." said the other with a smirk.

"You never try and get out of it..." said Mrs. McFinn.
"Well...it's a just..." said Officer McFinn.

"I know..." said Mrs. McFinn giving her husband a kiss.

“He always went to the parties for me.” said Mrs. McFinn wiping her eyes.

"Harry! Where are you going?" asked Dr. Clark. But Harry was heading at a dead run towards the flower gardens.

“Harry! You shouldn’t run away like that! Anything could have happened to you!” said Mrs. Weasley.

“In the Queen’s presence? No one would have dared.” said Harry with a smile.

"Don't worry about him." said one of the men with a laugh. "There's more security here then at the Louve."

"He must have seen some tiger lilies." said Mrs. McFinn.

“They were always your favorite.” said the older Mrs. McFinn, then she looked over and she and her past self looked over and said the same thing.

"Oh, sweet lord." said the Mrs. McFinn of the past clutching her husband's arm and the present Mrs. McFinn clutching Dr. Clark’s.

"What's wrong?" said Dr. Clark.

"It's my mother." said Holly. "Quick, lets go..."
“Yes, can’t we skip this part?” asked the older Mrs. McFinn.

"Holly! Dear Heart!" said Mrs. McFinn's mother sweeping over to her daughter once she caught sight of her and engulfed her into a large hug and kissed her on both of her cheeks.

She looked just like Mrs. McFinn, only her brownish hair was turning a sort of gray and her demeanor had a sort of snobbery about it. Her clothes were adorned with obviously the finest material and she had no problem showing them off to people who might not be able to afford them.

"Sweetie! I was starting to worry you'd never show up!" said her mother pompously.

"I didn't tell you I was..." said Holly quickly.

"Well, honestly, dear, where else would a Lindor be except the Queen's garden party?" she said with a fake laugh.

“God, she reminds me of Umbridge.” said Ron.

“I was thinking of Aunt Muriel.” said Charlie.

"Now I know why Holly doesn't talk to her mother all that often." said Sam to James in a whisper.

"Just wait, it gets worse." said James whispering back.

"Come over here dear. I want to introduce you to someone, he's third cousin to the Prince of Wales." said her mother simperingly. "You two would make a charming couple."

“Doesn’t she realize you're happily married?” asked Sirius.
"No, she never has." said Mrs. McFinn shaking her head.

"Mother, I've told you, I'm married." said Holly with a slight growl.

"Don't growl like that dear, it's unbecoming." said her mother absently. "Hello, Charles, this is my daughter, Holly."

"Hello, Miss Lindor. You're more beautiful than your mother described." said the man bowing low.

He was a tall man, with salt and pepper hair, a straight nose, and wore a tailored made suit.

“Well, he’s not a bad looker.” said Angelina.

“But you’re married.” said Parvati.

"Uh...Good day." said Holly uncertainly. "I apologize for whatever my mother said, but I'm happily married, and he's right over there" she pointed over to where James and Sam were.

"But your mother..." said the man with confused look.

"Yes, but the marriage just isn't right, she's not happy." said her mother trying to save face.

"I am very happy mother." said Holly shortly. "I just said I was."

"How can you dear? That man cannot give you all the things you need!" laughed her mother.
"He gives me love. That is more than enough for me." said Holly getting more and more irritated.

"I really hate to tell her, but I love it when she defends me." said James quietly to Sam.

Mrs. McFinn blushed.

"I don't blame you." said Sam.

They felt themselves being forced a little ways away, until they were hovering around Harry who was smelling the different tiger lilies and stroking the petals softly. "These are so pretty." he said quietly.

“Harry, you are way too precious.” cooed Hermione.

“Argh, not you too!” said Harry.

"Hello there, dear." said a kind voice from behind him.

They turned and saw the Queen herself standing behind them.

“Holy crap!” said Ron in shock.

“I’ve never been this close to royalty before.” said Colin with an excited whisper.

"H-hello, y-your M-M-Majesty." said Harry stammering.

"Are you enjoying yourself?" said the Queen kindly.
"Yes ma'am. You're flowers are so pretty." said Harry humbly.

"Yes, they are." said the Queen with a smile. "I am quite fond of them."

"Miss Holly would love one." said Harry. "She has a bunch in her front garden."

"Would you like to give her one?" she said with a smile.

“Harry! You drive me nuts!” said Lee.

"Oh, yes!" gushed Harry. "Are you sure I can?"

“Ah, but you're so cute, I can forgive you!” said Lee pretending to pat younger Harry's head.

“Shoot me.” said Harry rolling his eyes.

"Brentson? Please give this boy the best pair of tiger lilies we have." said the Queen to one of the passing gardeners.

"Please, your Majesty." said Harry shyly. "I can just have one. I don't want to take two, they belong here."

"As you wish, dear boy." said the Queen with a smile. "Just one then Brentson."

The gardener handed him a single lily and they smiled as they watched Harry run swiftly away.

"Such a dear little thing." said Queen with a smile.
Suddenly they heard a horrifying scream.

“What the hell is that?” said Tonks quickly.

"My lady!” said the gardener.

"Come along, I have a feeling, I know what it is about. If Astoria is here, then we might have a bit more excitement, than normal. " said the Queen with a rueful smile.

She walked regally over to where she could hear a woman's voice shrieking out for the security.

"How dare you! You defiled the royal gardens!" said the woman shrieking loudly.

“Who does she think she is?” asked George.

“She thinks she’s royalty.” said Mrs. McFinn rolling her eyes.

"I gave him that flower." said the Queen, walking behind Harry. The woman stopped screaming instantly. "He asked if he could have one for his Miss Holly."

“I pressed that lily into a book, I'll keep it forever.” said Mrs. McFinn with a watery smile.

Mrs. McFinn blushed heavily and nervously took the lily. Her mother was utterly speechless.

"You have a very well behaved child here." said the Queen graciously. "He was raised well."

"That’s up for debate." said Officer McFinn grumbling quietly.
"Why do you say that, Mr. McFinn?" asked the Queen. James looked shocked that she knew his name.

"W-well, your Majesty, he grew up in less than loving circumstances." said Officer McFinn stuttering slightly.

"Should I get involved?" said the Queen with a commanding look.

"Please no ma'am." said Harry quickly.

The adults beside him looked down at him in surprise, except for Astoria Lindor, who was still gaping at the Queen.

"Why do you say that dear?" said Mrs. McFinn.

"Uncle Vernon, he...." said Harry quietly. "Don't want anyone else to get in trouble."

"Dear, what if I say that I cannot get into trouble?" said the Queen kindly.

Harry looked down uncertainly.

"Well, if...." said Harry quietly.

"I'll look into it." said the Queen majestically. "And we will see what transpires."

"Yes ma'am." said Harry quietly.

The rest of the garden party went as smoothly as ever after that. Mrs. McFinn wore the lily in her hair for the rest of the day, and did her best to avoid her mother. Strangely, the Queen took a shine to Harry and didn't allow him too far away from her.
“She must have been really fond of you.” said Hermione in awe.

“Look at all the people your meeting.” said Percy excitedly.

"Harry, this is the Prime Minister." said the Queen gently.

"Hello sir." said Harry meekly.

"Hello, young man." said the man gently "I've never seen you take to a child like this." he added to the Queen.

"This one is special...I have a feeling..." said the Queen to herself.

Officer McFinn, Mrs. McFinn and Dr. Clark, were looking at shock over to Harry and the Queen.

"All of a sudden, I remembering the Track races and when I said the thing about the royal ball." said Holly quietly.

"Yeah, that's been beating through my brain too." said Sam.

"Maybe, with her help, we'll get Harry!" said Holly excitedly.

"I hope so too." said James. "But I can't help but be skeptical."

The light came back and deposited them back in the Great Hall.

“Man, that was sort of a zippy Scroll.” said Charlie.
“Yeah, but at least it was a good one.” said Bill. “I’ll handle whatever they send me, as long as it’s a good one.”

“So, not even the Queen could get you out?” said Sirius.

“No, not too sure why, I think Uncle Vernon might have bribed him somehow.” said Harry softly.

“Well, dinner is here, should we tuck in and then go to bed?” asked Dumbledore with a kind smile.

“I’d rather just go to bed, the sooner I go to bed, the sooner I get up and the sooner this book gets over with.” said Harry.

Snape rolled his eyes, walked over and handed him a phial. “Drink this.” said Snape.

“Thanks sir.” said Harry politely and downed the contents in one gulp.

“Severus, could you escort Harry up to the suite he’s staying in. I’d be most grateful.” said Dumbledore innocently.

“Make the mutt take him.” said Snape.

“I can make it on my own.” said Harry.

“Nonsense Harry.” said Dumbledore putting a silencing and freezing charm on Sirius. “Severus, please go up with Harry.”

“I refuse.” said Snape boredly.

“I’ll knock two weeks off that seminar.” said Dumbledore.

“Come along Potter.” said Snape quickly, leading Harry by the hand, out of the room.
When they got to the room, Harry began to take his shirt off. “I’m going to put the balm on and then go to bed sir, you can go back down.”

“I appreciate it, babysitting a fifth…” said Snape with a snap in his voice, but then his voice tapered off when he saw the state of the Gryffindor student’s back.

The cuts were healing, but very very slowly, they were still so deep, and small blood steams were trickling down his back. The Potion’s Master stared in shock at the boy.

“Sirius can put the salve on my back when he gets here.” said Harry

“I can put the salve on, Potter, I’m not that busy.” said Snape, trying to maintain his public appearance but failing horribly.

Harry looked at his Potions teacher with a searching expression. “Well, alright.”

A half hour later, Sirius and the rest of them came up and walked in the door. They saw Snape sitting beside the fireplace reading one of Dr. Clark’s book on the magical world.

“Severus, I didn’t expect to see you still here.” said Remus.

“I didn’t have anything else to do. Dr. Clark, I wrote down a list of books found in the school library, hopefully you’ll find those…interesting.” said Snape standing up and striding towards the door.

“Would you like to stay awhile?” asked Mrs. McFinn.

“Thank you, no. Potter’s asleep, the balm’s been administered to his front and back, I’m going to bed.” said Snape, and he left, saying nothing further.
“He’d better not have done anything to my cub.” said Sirius with a growl.

“He wouldn’t dare, and he’s not like that.” said Remus. But Sirius went in to check his godson out anyway.

“I’m so glad he listens.” said Remus rolling his eyes.
The next morning, a thought struck Mrs. McFinn and Dr. Clark and they went to Dumbledore to ask him on his feelings.

“Albus, I know we’ve had several parties lately, but, Friday evening, it’s the fifth.” said Dr. Clark.

“Yes…” said Dumbledore looking up at the two of them over his cup of morning tea.

“Well, back home, the fifth is Bonfire Night. Friday evening, the kids could enjoy themselves with a large bonfire or something, fireworks, games, they could even make something if they wish.” said Mrs. McFinn excitedly.

Dumbledore put his teacup down, and looked up at them with a bright twinkle in his eye. “Why not, I think they would enjoy it immensely. I’ll get the staff together to organize it, with your help of course.”

“I’d love too!” said Mrs. McFinn excitedly.

Once they left Dr. Clark turned to Mrs. McFinn. “You didn't mention that it would help Harry get through this.”

“He knew, and he agrees.” said Mrs. McFinn somberly. “That's why he agreed so quickly.”

When the students heard about the new party coming in two days, they were excited.

“I wonder what we’re going to have?” asked a seventh year girl.

Dumbledore walked up and bent down to speak in Mrs. McFinn's ear. “I’ll speak to the staff and we’ll see what we can organize, I think the distraction might do some of us good with this book and those to come.” said Dumbledore quietly to Mrs. McFinn, sending a pointed look over to Harry who was sitting between Leroy and Rudolph today. Mrs. McFinn and Dr. Clark switched spots with them so they could offer all the comfort in the world to them. It also saved from Harry being torn apart.

“I’ll take up the reading.” said Dr. Nicodemus. He cleared his throat and read aloud. “Chapter Thirty-two.”

Harry flinched.
“Shouldn’t you be back where the thing started?” asked Dr. Clark.

Mrs. Diggory and Mr. Diggory began to hold each other tightly.

“Hang on, you’re in Little Hangleton aren’t you?” said Leroy in shock. “You mentioned that town earlier, this has to be it's reentry.”

Harry brought his knees up to chest and held them there.

“We got you.” said Rudolph wrapping his arms around his nephew.

“You really had to think of that?” asked Moody quietly. He didn’t want to speak too loudly, even he had tact.

Dumbledore looked up suddenly.
“Get out of there!” said Tonks fearfully.

“I wish.” said Harry thickly.

The ones closest to him wrapped their arms tighter around him.

End of sixth paragraph.

Seventh paragraph.

Eighth paragraph.

“Probably didn’t expect two people there.” said Sirius darkly.

Ninth paragraph.

Mr. and Mrs. Diggory turned and looked at Harry with bloodshot eyes.

Tenth paragraph.

Eleventh paragraph.

Twelfth paragraph, first sentence, first semi-colon.

Mrs. Diggory and Mr. Diggory cringed and sobbed in each other’s arms.

“I should have been stronger, I should have gotten him out of there.” said Harry.

“Harry…there was nothing you could do, you did everything possible.” said Sirius rubbing the back of Harry’s neck as he stood behind him.

“Tom knew you would try and protect Cedric, he had to incapacitate you before he could make a move.” said Dumbledore softly.

End of twelfth paragraph.

Dumbledore went over and stood behind Harry, placing a hand on the boy’s shoulder.

Thirteenth paragraph.

Professor Sprout wrapped her arms around the two parents of her old student.
Fourteenth paragraph.

“Best step up the therapist.” muttered Lionus to Dr. Nicodemus.

Dr. Nicodemus set the book down for a brief moment, took out a piece of paper, scribbled a quick note and set it on fire. The ashes, instead of falling to the ground, flew up and out of sight.

“Here’s hoping Glacier sends one that’s suitable.” said Dr. Nicodemus.

“Yeah, the last thing the boy needs is Driller to use physical exertion to make him ‘feel better.’” said Lionus.

Fifteenth paragraph.

_Name one on the tombstone._

Several people began to hold each other out of fear…so…this meant…the Dark Lord _was_ back…

Sixteenth paragraph, first sentence.

Fudge was looking as if he were slapped.

BUMF!

Umbridge was returned to her normal form, but immediately was silenced by Nightstirke.

Sixteenth paragraph, second sentence.

“Hit you? What do you mean, hit you?” asked Remus hotly.

“Harry was starting to fight back, so he punched Harry.” said Sirius with a hand on Harry’s shoulder. Despite his extended family surrounding him, Harry still had his head between his knees.

“How do you know that?” asked Remus.

“Dumbledore told me what he saw in Harry's eyes.” whispered Sirius. “And we saw the bruise.”

End of sixteenth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Seventeenth paragraph, second sentence, first comma.

Mrs. McFinn was sobbing uncontrollably. This man was going to hurt her baby!
Seventeenth paragraph, second sentence, first semi-colon

Mrs. Diggory and Mr. Diggory pulled apart slightly to look at Dr. Nicodemus and then back to Harry.

End of seventeenth paragraph.

Amongst the students, with the exception of a few Slytherins, there wasn’t a dry eye among them.

Eighteenth paragraph.

Cho was being comforted by several of her friends.

Ginny was shivering so badly that Fred George had picked her up and cuddled with her. Ron and Hermione was crying quietly over on their sofa, the same thing went with Ron’s parents.

The teaching staff were white as sheets, and Hagrid’s hands were gripping the armrests of his chair tightly, threatening to smash them into toothpicks.

Nineteenth paragraph.

Harry flinched again in the arms of his family.

“Shh…it’s okay, it’ll be okay.” said Leroy soothingly.

“Harry…do you want to sleep during this?” asked Dumbledore softly. He at first thought hearing it again would benefit Harry, help him put it behind him. But it was only causing the both of them heartache, he hated seeing him like this, but it was nothing compared to what Harry was feeling.

Harry shook his head. “No…I…wanna hear.”

Twentieth paragraph.

Twenty-first paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dr. Nicodemus had to take a breath, this was getting a bit intense.

Chief Hawkeye looked sideways at the boy being cocooned by the arms of his family. This was too much for a boy to handle, he wouldn’t force his Rangers on the boy any longer. If the boy wanted to join he’d come to him, if not, no hard feelings, but he still wanted to stick around and hear what had and would transpire in his life.

Twenty-second paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Twenty-third paragraph.

“That doesn’t sound good.” said Lee holding onto Katie’s hand.

End of twenty-fourth paragraph.

McGonagall put a hand over her mouth in horror.

Twenty-fifth paragraph, second sentence.

“I don’t blame him one bit.” said Sirius.

End of twenty-fifth paragraph.

“Please drown, please drown.” said Ernie muttering to himself.

Dialogue line.

“You’re endurance shouldn’t be that high.” said Lionus softly.

Twenty-sixth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Chief Hawkeye turned and stared at the book in Dr. Nicodemus’ hands.

Twenty-seventh paragraph.
“Blue blood.” muttered Dr. Nicodemus darkly. “His whole family was venomous too.”

Twenty-eighth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Twenty-ninth paragraph.

Thirtieth paragraph, first sentence.

Remus and Sirius both flinched.

“How could he toss in his cards with him, we never asked him to do that for us.” said Remus with a pained look.

“He’s a treacherous idiot.” whispered Sirius.

End of thirtieth paragraph.

Dr. Clark held his stomach.

Thirty-first paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“NO!” shouted several people aloud.

Thirty-second paragraph.

“He saved your life, you bastard!” said Charlie angrily to the book.

Thirty-third paragraph.

Thirty-fourth paragraph.

“S-See…he’s not back.” said Fudge hopefully.

“I’m not done yet.” said Dr. Nicodemus darkly.
Fudge’s eyes opened wide in terror.

Silence ensued them all, Umbridge was the only one moving. She was trying hard to remove her gag, finally she removed it, though she yelped in pain.

“He’s NOT back!” screeched Umbridge.

“Delores…these books are incapable of lying.” said Fudge slowly. “He…he is back.”

“Of course he isn’t!” said Umbridge but her gag and binds returned.

“That’s enough of that.” said Lionus shortly. He then took the book from the Ranger Doctor. “Let’s get this book over with. Thirty-third chapter”

Draco looked down.

Thanks for reading, please review.
The Followers of the Mark

Chapter Notes

I don't own Harry Potter

See the end of the chapter for more notes

First paragraph, second sentence.

“That guy is starting to sound like a perv.” said Katie with a quivering voice.

“Starting?” said Ron with a mutter.

First paragraph, fourth sentence.

Dr. Clark began to shake. “I still like snakes, just not that one.”

First paragraph, sixth sentence, first semi-colon.

“Nice guy.” said Fred quietly.

“Yeah a great person to work for.” said George.

End of first paragraph.

Second paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“And Harry saved your ass you son of a…” said Sirius.

Rudolph clapped hands over Harry’s ears.

“I've heard the word.” said Harry.

“Doesn't mean you have to hear it from him.” said Rudolph.
“They get that mark burned on them by the Dark Lord himself.” said Moody darkly. “It was a spell he created. He seems to love to put them through a lot of pain.”

“I hope he forgets about you.” said Mrs. McFinn worriedly.

Harry only kept his head between his knees.

“Seriously cub, you can sit this chapter out.” said Sirius kindly.

Harry didn’t move for a while, but he looked up, tears were falling from his eyes and face looked distraught.

“Okay.” said Harry with a raspy voice.

Dumbledore waved his wand over Harry’s head. Harry’s eyes began droopy and he placed his head back on his knees.

“Let’s make him a bit more comfortable.” said Leroy pulling Harry across their laps and covering him with a blanket.

“He lasted longer than I thought he would.” said Chief Hawkeye with a small smile.
“Damn.” said Mrs. McFinn quietly.

Dialogue set, second sentence.

The teacup in Snape’s hand shattered.

“Are you alright?” asked Draco looking at his godfather in confusion.

“I’m fine.” said Snape as blood tricked down his fingers.

End of dialogue set.

Ninth paragraph.

Dialogue set.

“I can see how it would become a bit of a shock.” said Dr. Clark.

Dialogue set.

Tenth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Bill scoffed, “Family? Yeah right.”

Eleventh paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Strange, never had anyone in my family do that.” said Seamus.

Everyone was starting to get their voices back, the horrible truth was now out, and each student in the school were planning on writing to their folks and telling them all about the lies the Ministry and the paper was spewing.

Since the very beginning, they had been writing back to the families and telling them all about the exciting parts of Harry’s life, this one was going to be the bombshell.

Twelfth paragraph.
“This won’t end well.” said Remus.

“Cause they thought you were dead.” said Charlie.

“Well, you weren’t the bully on the playground anymore…they had nothing to gain by swearing allegiance to an apparent corpse.” said Sirius.

No one noticed Dumbledore close his eyes and slowly nod his head.

“Snape looked at Dumbledore.

“I would not have taken any Death Eater lightly.” said Dumbledore firmly.
“Somehow, I don’t think he will.” said Ernie.

“They’d be killed the moment they get too close.” said Moody.

“I’d say he’s paying for it on our side.” said Remus darkly.

“When and if we run into him again,” said Sirius looking at Remus. “You don’t go near him.”

“You seriously don’t go near him.” said Sirius.
Draco flushed.

People sent sideways glances over to Draco, even shifted a little ways away from him.

“Wow, so far he’s the only one not to get hurt.” said a third year Ravenclaw.

“Lucius must really be his favorite.” said his friend.

“Where they belong.” said Neville sharply.

“And you still want them around.” said Tempest hotly, glaring at Fudge.

“Would have thought that he’d be torturing him.” said Leroy.
“Macnair was never completely proven to be a Death Eater.” said Dumbledore. “Fudge dismissed the charges almost immediately.”

Dialogue line.

Twenty-eighth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Sound about as thick as their kids.” said Dean.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Twenty-ninth paragraph.

Dialogue set, second sentence.

“That would be Karkaroff.” said Dumbledore thoughtfully.

Dialogue set, third sentence, second pause.

Dumbledore looked over to Snape and he looked back.

End of dialogue set.

Thirtieth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Rudolph, Sirius and Remus began to snarl.

Dialogue set.
Thirty-first paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Is he trying to keep Harry alive as long as possible?” asked Angelina.

“No, he’s just trying to get in the Dark Lord’s good books.” said Mr. Weasley.

Dialogue line.

Thirty-second paragraph.

Dialogue set, second sentence.

Leroy ran his fingers through Harry’s hair.

End of dialogue set.

Thirty-third paragraph.

People raised their eyebrows.

Dialogue line.

Thirty-fourth paragraph, second sentence, first comma.

“It’s official, he’s a pervert.” said Katie seriously.

End of thirty-fourth paragraph.

Dialogue set, sixth sentence.

“He never will” said Dumbledore.

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue set.

“Cause they were happy you were gone.” said Ron.
Thirty-fifth paragraph.

Dialogue set.

“Poor things, they probably didn’t know what they were getting themselves into” said Luna.

Dialogue set, third sentence, second pause.

“Quirrell!” said a first year loudly.

End of dialogue set.

Thirty-sixth paragraph.

Dialogue set.

“I don’t rightly blame them for not caring what happened to you, you vile…” said Tonks.

Thirty-seventh paragraph.

Dialogue set, fifth sentence, third comma.

“He wasn’t driven out of hiding by his friends, it was the guilt and the threat of dying that did it.” said Sirius with a cruel laugh.

End of dialogue set.

“So those poor snakes didn’t have much of a choice.” said Dr. Clark shaking his head.

Dialogue set.

“Well, she didn’t get lost, but she got kidnapped.” said Mr. Diggory his voice was thick, he and his wife had were holding each other tightly. Deep down they didn’t want to believe that their son was killed by the Dark Lord, they wanted to think it was just an accident, but this brought things to light.
“She must have low standards.” said Fred.

“I don’t want to know.” said Sirius quickly.

“Not everyone can resist his kind of persuasion.” said Moody.

“How the hell could she know that?” asked Bill.

“She must have seen Crouch’s son on accident.” said Flitwick.

“Her body?” said Remus.

“I don’t want to think about that either.” said Sirius.

“He was still a very brilliant wizard, if only he had used his mind and magic for good purposes.” said Dumbledore.

Many people flinched and looked mournful.
“Which is close enough to immortality if you ask me.” said Ron quietly.

“Wish that he turned into people jerky like Quirrell did.” spat George.

“And a few that even he wasn’t aware of.” said Dr. Nicodemus.

“And he won’t be able to hurt you with us near you.” said Leroy brushing the hair out of Harry’s eyes.

The people standing around the bowl and in the bowl reached in and placed a hand protectively on Harry.

Rudolph and Leroy bared their teeth angrily.

Dumbledore scowled.
“No!” screamed the people in the Great Hall.

Sirius clutched at Harry tightly, as did everyone near them.

“It wasn’t luck.” snarled Remus.

We already know Harry is!” shouted a first year loudly.

Mrs. McFinn whimpered.

“Don’t bother switching hands, just get it over with.” said Chief Hawkeye.

Lionus read out loud. “Chapter Thirty-four.”
Reversal Spell

Chapter Notes

I don't own Harry Potter

See the end of the chapter for more notes

First paragraph.

“If I ever get my hands on him again...” muttered Sirius holding onto Harry.

Second paragraph, first sentence, third comma.

“Forget considering it! Do it!” screamed Alicia.

Second paragraph, end of first sentence.

“They’re used to torturing people while they all stand in a circle.” growled Moody.

Second paragraph, second sentence.

“Bet he couldn’t bear to look at the person who saved his ass while he sets them up for the kill.” said Charlie darkly.

End of second paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Third paragraph, first sentence.

“Don’t say ‘former life.’” said Dr. Clark faintly.

Third paragraph, third sentence.

“I’d hope not.” said Dr. Nicodemus and Kingsley.
“Children shouldn’t learn how to disarm a swarm of people.” said Tempest.

“So…would you have saved him in the nick of time?” asked Hermione quietly.

“We were at Hogwarts, we were unaware of where he was.” said Nightstrike. “He was on his own.”

End of third paragraph.

Leroy bent over and hugged his Great-Nephew.

Malfoy looked over to him and frowned, if that guy was a Malfoy, shouldn’t he be getting some of the attention too?

Dialogue set, fourth sentence.

“Not to you, he can be as rude as he wishes.” muttered Sprout.

End of dialogue set.

“Damn him!” said Remus hotly.

“Calm down Moony, it doesn’t get any better.” said Sirius.

Fourth paragraph.

“Good boy.” said Moody.

“Show him he can’t have his way!” said a first year as others shouted similar supporting words.

Dialogue set.

“That’s cheating!” said a first year Ravenclaw.

“Yeah he’d never bow to you!” said the student sitting next to her.

“Harry would have liked to hear all this.” said Dumbledore brushing the hair out of his young’s charge. Then a sight caught his eye, Harry was facing away from the students and towards the insides of the bowl, and his thumb laying slightly in his mouth.

Dr. Clark saw the look on Dumbledore’s face and went behind the bowl to see what he was looking at.
“Holly…” said Dr. Clark.

Mrs. McFinn stood up and went behind the bowl as well. “Oh the poor thing…I haven’t seen him like this since we told him James was killed.”

She pulled his thumb gently out of his mouth, leaned over and kissed his forehead. “This must have been really painful for him to endure.”

Dumbledore nodded, tears coming down his face.

Dialogue set.

“That bastard, mentioning his dad.” snarled Fred.

“Hope Harry kicks his ass in the future.” said George.

"And now - we duel."

Fifth paragraph.

Several people shrieked loudly and had to be held by their neighbors.

Sixth paragraph.

“Sick, twisted pricks.” said Sirius.

Dialogue line.

Dumbledore’s hands tensed on the back of the bowl chair.

Seventh paragraph.

“A few adults could learn a thing or two from him.” said Madam Bones.

Dialogue line.

Eighth paragraph.

Dialogue line.
Sirius wiped his eyes, he was so proud of his little cub.

“That’s a harsh feeling.” said Moody, “Blissfully oblivious to all around you, and then the pain hits you again.”

“Oh no.” said Mrs. Weasley weakly.

Several students cheered loudly.

The cheering ended and was replaced with indignant shouts.

“That’s what he wants! Don’t come out!” said Mr. Weasley fearfully.

“I don’t think a disarming spell is going to do much.” said Rivers softly.
“What’s going on?” asked one of the Unspeakables.

“Like the chapter says, Priori Incantatem.” said Speckerton.

End of fourteenth paragraph.

Fifteenth paragraph, third sentence.

“What the?” asked Bill.

“I think the magic can be a bit dramatic as well as the casters.” said Charlie.

End of fifteenth paragraph.

Sixteenth paragraph.

“The wands are keeping them out.” said Dumbledore with a soft smile.

“Oh…my…” said Rudolph.

Dialogue set.

“Good, keep the connection, if he wants to break it, you want to keep it.” said Tonks.

Seventeenth paragraph.

“Please tell me that means Fawkes is nearby.” said Mrs. Weasley.

Eighteenth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“So was that Fawkes?” asked Colin.

“In a way…yes.” said Dumbledore with a smile.

“Not that again.” said Charlie.

Nineteenth paragraph.
“What would happen if those beads touched his wand?” asked Fred.

“I don’t think we want that to happen.” said George.

Twenty-first paragraph.

The Professors began to gasp and look around at each other.

Twenty-second paragraph.

“He’s beating Voldemort!” shouted Ron, he gasped and threw a hand over his mouth.

“If only Harry were awake to hear that!” said Hermione with a small laugh.

Twenty-third paragraph, third pause.

“What the hell?” said Remus.

“You’ll see, it gets’ worse.” said Sirius with a pale face.

End of twenty-third paragraph.

Mr. and Mrs. Diggory looked in shock.

Twenty-fourth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Cho’s lip began to quiver, as did Mrs. Diggory’s.

Twenty-fifth paragraph.
“They were probably thinking Harry was doing advanced magic or something,” said Ernie.

“He was.” said Dumbledore. “Though not consciously.”

Twenty-sixth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“So…what’s happening is…Harry’s getting a cheering section?” asked Lee.

“Something more than just that.” said Dumbledore.

Twenty-seventh paragraph.

Twenty-eighth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“That’s kind of creepy, how are they there?” asked Dennis.

But Dumbledore said nothing.

Twenty-ninth paragraph.

Suddenly a sort of microphone appeared out of the end of the book and the side of the book became crosshatched like a speaker. Then words came out of it. A male and female’s voice came out and then the voice of Cedric.

You ambushed us, but he’s prepared for you...he will defeat you.

He’s twice the wizard you’ll never be.

He beat you before, he’ll beat you again. And this time...

He’ll beat you for good!

Then the microphone disappeared.

“Damn…” said Lionus holding the book away from him. “That’s new.”

“You’re telling me.” said Speckerton.

Thirtieth paragraph.

Sirius chewed his lip nervously and Remus placed a hand on his shoulder.
Thirty-first paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Harry began to whimper.

“Shh…” said Dumbledore waving his wand over Harry, soon he stopped whimpering. “It’s almost over.” he added softly as he patted Harry's head.

Thirty-second paragraph, first sentence, fifth comma. (In the copy I have at home, it actually says that Lily came out first. Most likely a typo, but you know, I think I like that version better, doesn't fit with the order in which they died, but it worked so much better for my story.)

Snape leaned slightly forward.

End of thirty-second paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Leroy blew his nose loudly. “I miss them.”

“I do too.” said Rudolph.

“We all do.” said Dumbledore quietly as he magicked a fresh handkerchief over to Bathilda.

Dialogue line.

Mrs. Diggory began to cry once again.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

Hermione held onto Ron tightly, as he was holding tightly to her.
Thirty-fourth paragraph.
Mr. Diggory looked over to sleeping form, a mixture of sympathy and appreciation on his face.

Dialogue line.
“He wants to play with him a bit longer.” said Bill coldly.

Thirty-fifth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Thirty-sixth paragraph.
Angelina and Katie were holding each other, their eyes tightly shut.

Dialogue line.

Thirty-seventh paragraph.

Thirty-eighth paragraph.
“Get out of there!” said Blaise loudly.

End of chapter.
“I think I just aged forty years.” said Rudolph.
“I’ve got you beat, I aged fifty.” said Remus.
“Moving on, let’s get this over with.” said Lionus firmly. “Chapter Thirty-five”
“It’s almost done Harry, it’s almost done.” said Dumbledore covering his eyes, his hands trembling on the youth's shoulder.

Chapter End Notes
Thanks for reading, please review.
Harry gave a groan and sat up slowly.

“You sure you want to wake up Cub?” asked Sirius.

“What’s happening?” asked Harry.

“Well, we started a new chapter, you just escaped from Voldemort.” said Remus.

“Yeah, I can stay up now.” said Harry.

He sat up and settled himself between Sirius and Rudolph.

First paragraph, fifth sentence.

“He looked like he died.” said Neville softly.

First paragraph, sixth sentence.

Rudolph threw an arm around Harry’s shoulders.

End of first paragraph.

Second paragraph.

“My heart nearly stopped when he wouldn’t respond.” said Dumbledore softly.

Third paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Fourth paragraph.
“Why were you so rough?” asked Dr. Clark.

“Like I said, I thought he was gone.” said Dumbledore.

“Why were you noticing everything around you before talking?” asked Ernie.

Harry shrugged.

“My world just about stopped right there.” said Dumbledore rubbing his tired eyes.

“Thank you Mr. Obvious.” said Fred quietly.

Every time the word ‘dead’ came, Mrs. Diggory would flinch.

Sirius threw his arm around Harry’s shoulder as well.
“Thank you…” said Mrs. Diggory softly. “Thank you so much.”

“He should have been left on the ground, he was in no shape to be standing.” said Dr. Clark.

“I’m glad you spoke to us, before the Minister…” said Mr. Diggory looking at Dumbledore.

“I shouldn’t have left you alone, I should have given you to Hagrid.” said Dumbledore guiltily. “He would never have let you out of his sight.”
“Even almost out of it, he still follows Dumbledore’s orders.” sad Tonks.

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

“You do need to lie down.” said Dr. Clark.

Twelfth paragraph, second sentence.

“At least he won’t be trampled.” said Mrs. McFinn.

“I still should have left him with Hagrid.” said Dumbledore.

End of twelfth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Wait a minute, isn’t he the imposter?” asked a first year.

“Yeah, he’s that Death Eater right?” asked another first year.

“Somebody save Harry!” shouted another first year.

Dialogue line.

Thirteenth paragraph.

“Somehow, you can just hear the foreboding.” said Rivers.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Fourteenth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.
“And you did admirably dear.” said Bathilda.

Sirius began to growl fiercely.

Some of the students began to whimper and plead for someone else to show up in the room soon.

“He’s not giving a damn about his disguise anymore.” said Ron.

“Yeah, Moody wouldn’t give a damn.” said Tonks.
“He saved that little bit of info for the wrong person.” said Bill.

“Poor Harry, he’s still in shock.” said Parvati.

“That he does.” said Dumbledore darkly.

The Hall was silent.

“How can you lot be in shock, you knew it was coming.” said Sirius.

“It’s still a little shocking to hear.” said Colin.

“Believe it.” said Moody.

“You’re stunned beyond measure and yet you can still think about what is going on?” said Tempest in awe.

Harry shrugged.

Firenze looked at the boy with sympathy in his eyes.
Dr. Nicodemus stood up and walked over to the boy and lifted his head up by his chin. “Need something to make you feel better?”

“What have you got?” asked Harry, his eyes dull.

“I’ve got a mood enhancer, it’ll make you feel better, not so depressed.” said Dr. Nicodemus.

“Is it temporary?” asked Harry.

“It lasts as long as I want it, does that answer your question?” asked Dr. Nicodemus with a smirk.

“As long as you want it?” said Harry in confusion.

“I don’t rightly trust depressed people when they get as bad as you right now.” said Dr. Nicodemus.

He summoned a teapot and a cup and saucer and poured the cup full of tea and sprinkled a sparkling powder into the cup. “There you go lad.”

Harry took it and brought it to his lips, but then pulled away.

“What’s wrong?” asked Remus quickly.

“It’s Earl Grey.” said Dr. Clark with a smirk. “He hates that kind.”

Dr. Nicodemus smiled and rolled his eyes. He tapped the cup and the Earl Grey tea became Oolong tea. “Picky Picky.”

Harry blushed and drained the cup. He took a deep breath and smiled softly.

“There you go.” said Sirius with a smile.

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Twenty-first paragraph.

“Nope, even our first jokes weren’t this bad.” said Fred.

Dialogue set, second sentence.

“He talks pretty big, but even he didn’t want to go.” said Ron.

End of dialogue set.
“Hearing those words coming out of Alastor’s mouth is a bit surreal.” said Kingsley.

“Saving him like a pig for the slaughter.” said Snape looking at Dumbledore fiercely.

Dumbledore blinked and buried his face in his hands.

“He would have found a way on his own!” said Dennis loudly.

“I would have thought a teacher was looking out for one of their students.” said Dumbledore quietly.

“OI!” shouted quite a few people.

“He smarter than you are by far!” said George.

“Yeah, he didn’t get a stupid skull tattoo!” said Fred.

“Cedric gave him that hint!” said Mr. Diggory angrily.
The teachers growled the loudest at this statement.

“Yeah it did, and I didn’t even think to tell you about it.” said Neville.

“You don’t know him very well do you?” snarled Sirius.

“Independence my ass, I asked Ron and Hermione for help.” said Harry with a smirk.

“See, it wasn’t me that took it.” said Harry with a smile.

Snape stared at the youth, just what he could see in his mind, was neutral happiness….that powder must be something very powerful to instigate that feeling in Potter’s mind at this point. Then he noticed something creeping over his mind…causing it to accelerate, what was that?

“Help’s on the way.” said Moody with a smile.

“It wasn’t idiocy!” said Ginny hotly.

“Knew it was going too easily.” sad a seventh year.
“So he really didn’t know what he was doing!” said a first year Hufflepuff.

“Poor guy.” said another third year.

Twenty-fourth paragraph.

“If you had known it was an imposter you wouldn’t have been confused.” said Remus.

Twenty-fifth paragraph, second sentence.

“So…Harry…you knew that help was coming?” asked Blaise.

Harry nodded. “But aside from that…” he shook his head.

End of twenty-fifth paragraph.

Dialogue set, third sentence.

“He’ll rip you apart.” said Harry crossing his legs and leaning back into the bowl. “He wants to play with me before I die, he won’t like playing with damaged goods.” he added with a sneer.

Rudolph leaned a little ways away. “Whoa there cowboy, you’re not playing with him.”

End of dialogue set.

“Somehow, I don’t think of You-Know-Who to be a father figure.” said Remus.

Twenty-sixth paragraph.

Dialogue set, second sentence.

“Can’t quite argue with him there.” said Flitwick. “Barty should have gone home once in a while.”

End of dialogue set.
“He killed him for pleasure, yours was just on order.” said Dumbledore quietly.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

“Oh no you don’t!” said Sirius.

Twenty-seventh paragraph.

“Wow, Harry isn’t going to go down without a fight!” said a few first and second years.

“Yeah, he’s going to fight!” said Dennis.

Dialogue line.

Twenty-eighth paragraph.

“I was never so relived before.” said Harry with a smile towards the three of them.

“I was never so relieved to see you alright.” said McGonagall with a faint smile.

Twenty-ninth paragraph, second sentence.

“Relief was gone.” said Harry with a laugh.

“You’re laughing?” asked Sirius raising his brows.

“I think I’m buzzed.” said Harry with a smile.

Remus blinked “Why do you say that?”

“Cause it’s getting a bit stronger.” said Harry looking up at the ceiling.

“Oops.” said Dr. Nicodemus. “I think I used too much…”

“You seem to make a lot of mistakes with him.” said Sirius firmly.

“Well, no matter, he’s in no danger…he might even enjoy it a bit.” said Dr. Nicodemus.

“Do we want to know what it is?” asked Mrs. Weasley.

“Just a strong relaxant.” said Dr. Nicodemus.

“I can’t feel my feet.” said Harry leaning over and touching his toes.
“A very strong relaxant.” said Lionus trying not to laugh.

End of twenty-ninth paragraph.

“My word, you can sense that?” said Dumbledore looking over to the bowl and stared as Harry was examining his hand intently.

“Why do we have these lines on our hands.” said Harry to Rudolph.

“Dear God…he’s gone.” said Sirius trying not to snicker.

Remus shook his head. “It’s going to hurt when he comes down.”

“I can stop it, but he’ll still have to sleep it off.” said Dr. Nicodemus. “Though I think we should just ignore what he says for the most part.”

“But remember it.” said Lionus with a snicker. “For teasing reasons.”

“Of course, why else do I enjoy giving it to you people?” said Dr. Nicodemus with a kind smile over to the boy who was still enjoying the miracles his hand was showing him.

“Thank goodness he doesn’t have his wand on him. But I think that kitchen knife he carries should be removed, for his own safety.” said Dumbledore gently.

Sirius reached into Harry’s jacket pocket and made to take the knife in it’s leather sheath.

“You getting fresh?” asked Harry leaning away from him with a smile on his face.

“Oh Merlin, I wish I could record all this.” said Sirius with a smile as he took the knife away.

Thirtieth paragraph, first sentence.

“Well, that wasn’t very nice.” said George.

End of thirtieth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Oh okay.” said Harry standing.

“No…this already happened.” said Leroy taking Harry’s sleeve.

“Sure, McGonagall just said to go…though you sound a little different.” said Harry smiling wildly over to McGonagall. She looked at her colleagues with a surprised smile.

“At least he’s not depressed.” said Rudolph with a laugh as he helped pull Harry down.
“Understand what again?” asked Harry smiling over to Dumbledore.

Dumbledore looked at Harry, a smile crossing his face. “Nothing dear boy. Would you like something to eat?”

Harry thought, and then he smiled. “Sure!”

Dumbledore chuckled warmly and conjured a plate of biscuits and a jug of pumpkin juice.

“This is hilarious.” said Ron smiling as he watched Harry grab at the snacks wildly.

“Dr. Nicodemus cause I wasn’t feeling happy?” said Harry.

“No Harry…” said Remus shaking his head and smiling.

“Thank goodness for that.” said Mrs. McFinn.

“Bet that confused the hell out of him.” said George.

“That must have confused her too.” said Fred.
“Kind of like Harry’s trunk.” said Seamus.

“What?” asked Harry looking up from staring at his knees.

“Aren’t you paying attention?” asked Draco.

“To what?” asked Harry.

“The readings.” said Draco.

“What’s the book?” asked Harry cocking his head to the side.

“It’s….never mind.” said Draco rubbing his temple.

End of thirty-second paragraph.

Thirty-third paragraph.

“Bet he was freaking out.” said Dean quietly. He and Seamus were sniggering as Harry began to climb over the bowl.

“Harry what are you doing?” asked Sirius.

“I thought I saw a squirrel.” said Harry.

“I thought I saw a squirrel.” said Harry.

“What? No…there’s no squirrels in here.” said Sirius tugging Harry back down to the bowl. “Here…here’s a puzzle…” he waved his wand and pulled out a small cube with multi-colored squares randomly placed on it’s surface. “Never could solve those damn things.”

“Do I break it?” asked Harry.

“No…you make all the colors on each side the same. Don’t pull the stickers off! You need to turn it!” said Sirius giving the puzzle a turn.

“Oh…” said Harry.

“Oh my god, this is hilarious, but I want him in a padded room the next time.” said Sirius.

Thirty-fourth paragraph.

Dialogue set.

Thirty-fifth paragraph.

“Polyjuice potion!” said a first year.

Dumbledore smiled, they all were learning so much from these, and not just about Harry’s life. Suddenly a bright red square appeared in front of him.

“Did I do it right?” asked Harry holding the cube millimeters away from Dumbledore’s face. The cube was complete, how did he do it that quickly?

“I gave you that!” said Sirius tugging on Harry’s shirt to get him to come back to him. “Here’s another one, this time you have to get all the colors in a straight row.” he said putting a silver ball with multicolored beads circling around it.

Dialogue set.

“That’ll teach him.” said Seamus.

“Done.” said Harry tossing the ball up in the air.

“For Merlin’s sake!” said Sirius catching it and seeing that it was completed.

“Here, Harry.” said McGonagall smiling and conjuring a small box of white cylinder pieces of chalk. “Draw on the floor for a while.”

“His brain is in overdrive!” said Sirius watching his godson drawing an assortment of squares.

“Well, he’s relaxing…in a way.” said Nightstrike. “When I get that I powder, I tend to run around in a circle several hundred times chasing an imaginary tail.”

Thirty-sixth paragraph.

“Was Harry sitting down too?” asked Dr. Clark.

“Yes, I conjured him a more comfortable chair than the one he was given.” said Dumbledore.

“Lift your feet please.” said Harry trying to draw under the Headmaster’s feet.

“So sorry.” said Dumbledore lifting his foot and then when Harry was down drawing a squashed circle he put his foot back down.

Thirty-seventh paragraph.

“That’s sick.” said Lavender.

“Tell me about it, it doesn’t stay in as well as it used to.” said Moody rubbing his eyelid.

“That’s even worse.” said Parvati.

Thirty-eighth paragraph.

“What is that boy doing?” asked Tempest.

“I see it…but I don’t believe it.” said Chief Lionus staring at the floor. “His mind is going in overdrive. This is his way of relaxing?” he looked at Dr. Nicodemus.
“That’s right! He said he let’s his mind plan and such to relax…but to go to this extent.” said Lionus.

“What’s he doing?” asked Hermione looking down at the ground.

“You’ll see in a while I suppose.” said Dr. Nicodemus.

Thirty-ninth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“I thought he had died.” said McGonagall.

Fortieth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Forty-first paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“He isn’t dead, Winky!” said a sixth year Gryffindor girl.

Dialogue line.

Forty-second paragraph, first sentence.

“And if I had known…” said Dumbledore sternly.

Forty-second paragraph, fourth sentence.

“You gave me the whole thing!” said Sirius.

“That way it couldn’t have been said that we didn’t give you enough.” said Madam Bones.

End of forty-second paragraph.

Forty-third paragraph.
“Ooh, good question.” said Tonks.

Forty-fifth paragraph.

Dialogue set, fourth sentence.

“He did adore his wife. I will give him that.” said Madam Bones.

“Excuse me.” said Harry as he continued crawling backwards and drawing his lines and squares.

She looked down and moved her leg out of the way, she looked down at the picture he was drawing. It didn’t seem to be anything but a bunch of squares….wait….no…it couldn’t be…

End of dialogue set.

“Quite an ingenious plan.” said Dumbledore looking down at the floor, he too figured out what Harry was doing each separate section he was drawing continued to cause his mind to stagger.

Forty-sixth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“He can’t get into any more trouble now.” said Hermione.

Forty-seventh paragraph.

Dialogue set.

“And his mother braved Azkaban for her son’s freedom…you can’t say that about some mothers.” said Bill. “Mom yeah, but I can’t see many others.”
“Wow, so if you die while taking that potion…” said a second year Hufflepuff.

“You retain that form forever if no one else sees what you’ve done.” said Dumbledore.

Forty-eighth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

“After the speech you made in the courtroom?” said Justin.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

“Like what…an extra scoop of ice cream.” said Ron.

“I like ice cream.” said Harry sitting up quickly as he continued drawing.

“We’ll get you some for lunch how about that?” said Remus gently down to the temporarily addle-minded boy.

“Yay!” said Harry with a smile and continued his drawing.

“He’s so adorable.” said Sirius laughing out loud as he watched Harry crawl underneath chairs to enlarge his drawings.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

“And her memory was already shot.” said Sirius.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

“Well, he wasn’t cruel to her in the end.” said Ginny. “She wanted him to get the treat, so he was her responsibility.”
“And when he got loose, he punished her for it…so in a way….she did do something in order to get fired.” said Charlie.

Dialogue set.

“Except for a few things.” said Ron. “He stole Harry’s wand, and Harry talked to Winky.”

Dialogue set, seventh sentence.

“That would be Harry’s.” said Hermione.

“Can you imagine what would have happened if he realized who it was that sat in front of him.” said Neville with a shiver.

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

“I don’t think Bad Boy covers it.” said Katie.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, thirteenth sentence.

“Good thing for Harry that he used it.” said Fred.

“Or Harry wouldn’t have been able to ever find it again.” said George.

Dialogue set, twentieth sentence.

“And that’s where Harry saw her trying to get away from the fires and the stampedes.” said Ron.

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue set.

“So there was a reason.” said Remus.
Forty-ninth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Lucky him.” said Minerva darkly.

Dialogue set, thirteenth sentence.

“And thus starting Harry’s nightmare.” said Leroy looking down at his monster who was still drawing the squares on the floor. “He really likes drawing those doesn’t he?”

End of dialogue set.

Fiftieth paragraph.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, third sentence.

“Maybe once you found out that you weren’t going to avoid Azkaban.” said Mr. Weasley.

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

“I was furious.” said Dumbledore levitating the biscuit tray over to Harry, who snatched two of them quickly.

Dialogue set, twelfth sentence.

“Sorry Alastor.” said Mr. Weasley.

“I would have been shocked out of my mind if you had figured out what had happened.” said Moody.
Snape scowled.

“Of course, Peter was watching him.” said Remus.

“He was never a good look out.” said Sirius.

“That would have ruined all their plans.” said Flitwick.

“Did he ever get that back?” asked Sirius. “Harry?”

“Yeah?” said Harry looking up quickly and smacking the top of his head on the underside of Hagrid’s chair. “Ow…” he clutched the back of his head with both hands.

“You okay?” asked Sirius.

“Ouch…” said Harry rubbing his head.

“Did you ever get the map back?” asked Sirius.

“What map?” asked Harry.

“Oh Christ…never mind.” said Sirius quickly. “Did he ever get the map back?’ he asked Ron and Hermione.

“Yeah, he did.” said Ron.

“So your father’s name protected you.” said Dumbledore thoughtfully.
“I’m amazed he didn’t kill Krum.” said Zacharias.

“If he had killed him, Harry would have been blamed.” said Hermione.

“And you never asked Snape?” asked Bathilda.

“I did not.” said Dumbledore.

Sirius began to gag.

“What’s wrong?” asked Mrs. McFinn.

“I found a bone in front of Hagrid’s that night, I was gnawing on it.” said Sirius his face turning pale.

“Not if you don’t make it to where he’s at.” said Lee.

“Poor Winky.” said Hermione.

“Let’s have a bit of lunch, if anyone can stand it.” said Dumbledore.

“DONE!” said Harry standing up, smiling and spinning around.

“Absolutely lovely dear.” said Mrs. Weasley with a smile. “What is it?”

They all looked down at the floor there were separate sets of squares all set around the Great Hall, they went all the way into the far corners and under the chairs.
“They’re blueprints… the floor layouts of… of everywhere he’s ever been to.” said Dumbledore in awe. “There’s Gringotts, the Leaky Cauldron… even Hogwarts.” His foot was directly over the lake that stood outside their very walls.

“There’s the Burrow!” said Charlie.

“Headquarters.” said Moody taking care to cover this set with his feet.

“The Ministry of Magic.” said Madam Bones looking at the large one sitting in front of her.

“My house.” said Mrs. McFinn.

“My apartment, the Dursleys’.” said Dr. Clark.

“Everywhere!” said Ron.

“And he did this all from memory?” said Dean looking at Harry who was still spinning around and smiling.

They all turned and stared.
Harry smiled as he spooned his second bowl of ice cream into his mouth. Everyone stared at him as he smiled brightly and ate his food greedily.

“He’s cracked…” said Terry.

“Yeah, what the hell was that stuff the Ranger gave him?” asked Ernie.

“Whatever it was, I wonder if it would fry our brains?” said Terry.

“More?” asked Harry sitting up and holding out his bowl to Mrs. McFinn.

“Sweetie, you’ve had two bowls of ice cream already. Why not have something else?” said Mrs. McFinn ruffling Harry’s hair softly.

“Treacle?” asked Harry eagerly.

“Something a little healthier?” coaxed Mrs. McFinn.

Harry gave it some thought. “Sugar Free treacle?”

“He’s got you there.” said Dr. Clark with a laugh. “Here Harry, have a vegetable.”

Harry looked at the carrots closely and looked up at Dr. Clark. “That’s not treacle.”

Sirius stuffed his knuckles in his mouth to stop himself from laughing out loud.

“It’s vegetable shaped treacle.” said Neville helpfully, also trying hard not to laugh.

Harry stuck his tongue out. “I’m not stupid.”

“You’re nuts, but not stupid.” said George.

“Guess there is a difference.” said Fred.

“Should we give him something else to occupy his time?” asked McGonagall looking at Harry with a gentle smile. But Harry decided to crawl into the bowl and snuggle against the people inside.
“Oh yes, please, get him to bed or at least Madam Pomfrey.” said Mrs. McFinn.

“I was ready to hex him into oblivion.” said Professor McGonagall curtly.

“Unfortunately, that never happened.” said Dumbledore firmly.

“I don’t want to know, do I?” asked Chief Hawkeye rubbing his eyes tiredly.

Mrs. McFinn covered her mouth and looked over at Harry, who was still curled up and sleeping.

“Is he still out?” asked Ron.

“Yeah, he’s still sleeping.” said Sirius. “I was hoping he’d stay awake a little longer. He was adorable.”

“He could have forced himself to sleep, perhaps he knew exactly how silly he sounded.” said Dr. Nicodemus thoughtfully.

“I would have carried him if he had asked me.” said Dumbledore. “He was easily light enough.”

“Bet he smiled from ear to ear.” said Sirius ruffling his godson’s hair lovingly.

Dumbledore looked to the side and didn’t answer.
Sirius looked down at Harry in shock.

Dumbledore looked down, a tear sliding down his crooked nose.

The Hufflepuff students looked at the sleeping figure with guilt on their faces. They didn’t realize how tore up Potter was over Cedric’s death.

“Better than most students are anyway.” said Professor Sprout.

“I was never so worried before in my life.” said Sirius.

“He looked ready to collapse or faint.” said Sirius.

Everyone shifted in their seat and looked at Harry uncomfortably. They figured he was a invincible hero, but to hear that he was human, that he suffered when others died around him, that he mourned so deeply… and thought nothing of his past troubles….they couldn’t help but feel petty.
“He used to lay his head against Harry’s chest when he was a baby, especially if he wouldn’t fall asleep or take his nap.” said Dumbledore with a warm smile.

“He’s been through enough.” said Mrs. McFinn and Mrs. Weasley together.

“Exactly! Hand him over!” said Madam Pomfrey.

“I wonder how long he would have let Harry sleep.” said Ron.

“Harry wanted to continue sleeping after the first day, but I had to have him take a few potions.” said Madam Pomfrey softly.

“Says who?” muttered Remus darkly. He should have just borrowed the memory from Harry and allowed him to rest.

“He still reels when he thinks about it.” said Hermione.

Dumbledore looked over to Harry in shock.
“What is it?” asked Leroy.

“N-Nothing.” said Dumbledore though he had a look of pride in his eyes.

Twelfth paragraph.

Mr. and Mrs. Diggory held onto each other tightly.

Thirteenth paragraph, first sentence.

“It always is.” said Dumbledore softly.

End of thirteenth paragraph.

Remus sent a fleeting look of apology to Dumbledore.

Fourteenth paragraph, first sentence, second comma, sixth word.

“I wanted to kill him.” snarled Sirius.

End of fourteenth paragraph.

Dialogue set.

Rudolph reached down and laid a hand on Harry’s shoulder.

Fifteenth paragraph.

“Why did you look like that?” asked Hermione.

“That explanation, if it won’t be disclosed later, is for Harry’s ears only.” said Dumbledore simply. "We had already spoken about it, but not in such precise detail.”

Dialogue line.

Sixteenth paragraph.
Seventeenth paragraph.

Emmeline Vance blew her nose loudly.

Eighteenth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Nineteenth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Twentieth paragraph.

“And the rest of the world is left in the dark.” said Colin.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

“Oh my god.” said Hannah.

“That’s…so cool.” said Dennis.

“I wonder if I’ll ever meet the unicorn that my tail hair comes from?” asked a third year Ravenclaw.

“Or find the tree? That would be awesome!” said another Ravenclaw student earnestly.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Something that happens perhaps once a century at the most.” said Flitwick.

Dialogue set.

Twenty-first paragraph.

Dialogue line.
Mrs. Diggory sniffed loudly.

“Poor Harry.” said Katie.

“Poor Cedric.” said Hannah.

Sirius flinched and rubbed Harry’s shoulder tenderly, trying to ease a pain long gone.

Harry groaned. “I’m still sleepy.” he mumbled. “Go away.”

“Sorry Cub, I didn’t mean to wake you.” said Sirius quickly.

“They scared the living shit out of Voldemort.” said Harry thickly as he sat up. Mrs. McFinn tapped the end of Harry’s mouth for the naughty word he uttered.

“You want go back to sleep?” asked Sirius.

“No. But I wouldn’t say no to my own personal space here.” said Harry as he shifted his shoulder from all the hands touching him.

Remus and Sirius blinked.

“Uh…sure, I can get you a chair.” said Sirius trying to hide the hurt on his face. He summoned a large armchair and placed it between the sofa and the bowl. Harry settled himself into it and pressed his fingertips together.

"I think the time of his mental high is gone, this is him crashing.” said Dr. Nicodemus shaking his
Twenty-fourth paragraph.

Twenty-fifth paragraph.

“I couldn’t believe you had to go through that.” said Sirius his hands shaking.

“I’ve gone through the beatings my uncle dealt me, basilisk venom and dementors…and this is the part I fall apart on…I’m pathetic.” said Harry with a groan.

The people in the Great Hall stared.

“So we had happy Potter…” said Blaise.

“Now we have the serious one.” said Draco.

Twenty-sixth paragraph.

“Bless his beautiful feathers.” said Bathilda Bagshot with a sigh.

Dialogue set, second sentence.

Dumbledore smiled over to Harry, whose face held no real emotion.

Dialogue set, third sentence.

“I’m assuming you mean hope…you want me to be a symbol of hope?” said Harry with a smirk.

“Not at all, you gave us the truth…from you.” said Dumbledore.

The smirk faded.

End of dialogue set.

Twenty-seventh paragraph.

“Where he should have been brought in the first place, I don’t care what you say Albus.” said Madam Pomfrey.
“Sorry Poppy.” said Mrs. Weasley.

End of twenty-eighth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Twenty-ninth paragraph.

“He didn’t seem well enough to take a Molly hug at that point.” said Dumbledore kindly.

Dialogue set.

“Good, let him rest.” said Leroy.

Thirtieth paragraph.

Mrs. Weasley blushed.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, third sentence, first dash.

“Yeah, he hasn’t wet on the floor in about thirteen years.” said Remus with a laugh.

Sirius growled at his old friend.

End of dialogue set.

“I didn’t want you out of my sight till you were safe in a Hospital Wing bed, where you would be the safest.” said Dumbledore.

“Third year.” said Harry plainly.

“I allowed you out.” said Dumbledore with a smile. “Also, gave you the notion to go.”

Thirty-first paragraph.
“Oh, Harry.” said Mrs. Weasley dabbing her eyes.

Dialogue line.

Thirty-second paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Worry about yourself.” said Moody gruffly.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

“If we were you, we’d have of been dead.” said Ron.

Harry only focused on the floor.

Thirty-third paragraph.

Thirty-fourth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“God, I love that stuff.” said Harry looking up into the sky. “It’s nice not having to deal with all the nightmares.”

 Thirty-fifth paragraph, second sentence.

“Knowing you, I had a strong batch made.” said Madam Pomfrey.

End of thirty-fifth paragraph.

“Oh, you poor sweet baby.” said Mrs. McFinn.

They looked over at Harry, but they only saw Harry scribbling into his black notebook, a plain look on his face.

“He’s still in neutral mode…dang…he’s so tense.” said Ron looking at his best friend.
“Half hour at the most, by the point we had guests.” said Sirius.

“About how foolish and how idiotic the Minister was.” said McGonagall tartly.

“Not another Dementor.” said Rudolph shaking his head.

“You’re a foolish, stupid arse!” said Leroy.

“You shouldn’t have heard all this.” said Dumbledore.

“Well, I did, can’t go back on that now.” said Harry without looking up. “Unless I did another memory charm on myself, and I’d rather avoid that.”

“Look in his office, dumbass.” said Dr. Clark with a snarl.
Forty-second paragraph.

“I didn’t want a repeat of the previous year.” said Dumbledore.

Dialogue set.

“And I was, till the Minister made sure he would never move on his own powers again.” said McGonagall furiously.

Dialogue line.

Forty-third paragraph, first sentence.

“She has since then.” said Lee quietly.

Harry looked around to the sympathetic looks and groaned. “What is it now?”

“We were just remembering…” said Colin.

“No!” shouted the adults.

“…when you were found injured by McGonagall.” said Colin, then he covered his mouth in horror.

Harry looked at the adults curiously, but then Harry could feel a knife carving into the flesh into his back. He held back a yell, but the pain only continued to grow.

“AAARGH!” shouted Harry, he doubled over in pain and crashed onto the floor. “Idiot! I was so close!” snarled Harry as he writhed in pain. “So close…to forgetting!”

“STUPEFY” shouted Dumbledore and the spell struck Harry. Harry stopped cringing and laid limply on the floor.

“What the hell?” asked Sirius rushing over to the stunned figure of his godson. "How could you do that?"

“It’s better if he doesn’t remember, it would only cause him great pain. No one is to mention that incident again.” said Dumbledore darkly to the students around the Hall. Sirius picked Harry’s form up off the ground and carried him back to the bowl. Remus enchanted the large bowl grow even larger and fill itself with cushions and blankets. Then they laid it down on the floor, giving it a real appearance of a giant bowl.

End of forty-third paragraph.

Dialogue set, first sentence.
“Fool, you were fine.” said Tempest angrily.

End of dialogue set.

“And you draw your own conclusions.” said Nightstrike with a sigh.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

“They bring a wizard, a witch...anyone else that wouldn’t cause harm to the students!” said Mrs. McFinn angrily.

Fudge flinched.

Forty-fourth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Forty-fifth paragraph, first sentence.

“Please don’t.” said Rudolph darkly.

End of forty-fifth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“But now you can’t prove it you imbecile!” said Madam Bones shortly.

Dialogue set, second sentence.

“I’ve seen just what kind of man he really was.” said Dumbledore.

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue set.

“He was, you stupid fool! You can be under even the smallest amount of Veritserum and be the most crazed man alive, but you will always tell the truth.” said McGonagall.

Dialogue set.

Forty-sixth paragraph, first sentence.

“He’d benefit from it.” said Tonks.

End of forty-sixth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue set, first sentence, fourth comma.

“Idiot.” said Chief Hawkeye.

“How dare you! He’s done nothing to make you question him!” said Leroy angrily.

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue set.

“I did not want him to disturb Harry.” said Dumbledore.

Forty-seventh paragraph.

Forty-eighth paragraph.

“How dare you! He’s done nothing to make you question him!” said Leroy angrily.

Forty-ninth paragraph.

“I wanted to rip him apart.” said Sirius.
Because he used his brain.” said Bill.

“Yup.” said Fred.

“He’s mental.” said George.

“A boy who what?” said Rudolph crossing his legs and frowning up to the Minister. “The heir to the largest and most influential house in the world? Cross a Potter, and you’re just asking to be dismissed politically and socially.”

Fudge paled.

“No more than the delusions you’re suffering from.” said Lionus.
“So…that scar can come in handy.” said Charlie.

“Though it’s a double edged sword, Harry feels pains whenever the Dark Lord broadcasts his feelings.” said Dumbledore.

Fifty-fourth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“He knows the bastard’s a Death Eater, but he doesn’t want to lose his grip on all that money.” said Bill quietly.

Fifty-fifth paragraph.

“What the…?” asked Alicia.

Dialogue line.

“Yeah…great causes.” said Fred.

“Felon fund” said Fred.

“Incarcerated assistance” said George.

Murderer’s Ministries.” said Fred.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Cleared my foot.” said Mr. Weasley.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, second sentence.

“And how would he know the names?” asked Charlie indignantly.
“And where would you be able to read those? Those are only kept at the Ministry of Magic, and in my office!” said Madam Bones hotly.

“Hey! You only had Snape’s word that he was confounded! And then you saw how unbalanced he was!” said Bill.

“I find him more trustworthy than most people in here.” said Chief Hawkeye sternly.

“Didn’t the walrus turn purple?” asked Fred.

“Yeah…and yet.” said George.

“He had more brains than you.” said the twins together.

“We aren’t trying to cause a panic, we’re trying to protect all that hard work!” said Ron.

Fudge turned pink.

“Sound advice!” said Lionus nodding approvingly.
“You would have had the entire Rangers standing behind you in support.” said Chief Hawkeye.

“You’re insane.” said Remus.

“A snap of his fingers and they’ll be at his beck and call.” said Tempest.

“And you didn’t listen to this warning?” said Nightstrike shaking his head.

“Whoa…you’d better have some heavy artillery going with them.” said Nightestrike.

“This madness, is called sense.” said Dumbledore.

“You are a fool, learn from your past mistakes.” said Lionus.

“Damn.” said Charlie. “Not really a side you want to see in a Minister.”
Fudge paled. Whispers crept across the hall and before his eyes, he could see his newest citizens cast their support elsewhere.

Dialogue set, fourth sentence.

“And all because both the father and son sought power and acceptance.” said Tempest.

End of dialogue set.

“And he will be.” said Lionus coldly.

Dialogue line.

Fifty-eighth paragraph, second sentence.

“I could hardly believe what I was hearing, and I used to like this man.” said Madam Pomfrey.

End of fifty-eighth paragraph.

Dialogue set.

“And anyone with sense will follow Dumbledore’s lead.” said Mr. Weasley.

Fifty-ninth paragraph.

Dialogue set, second sentence.

“Because he knew better than you did.” said Remus.

Dialogue set, fifth sentence, second comma.

“Hagrid did nothing wrong!” shouted Ron and Hermione.

Dialogue set, end of fifth sentence.
“Of course! Who better to know what the students should learn but the teachers?” said Mrs. Weasley.

“Well, except for Gilderoy.” said Fred.

“And Quirrell.” said George.

“And Umbridge.” said Fred.

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

Sixtieth paragraph, first sentence.

“Of course not, he was hoping that you would come right out and say you were against the Ministry.” said Bathilda Bagshot disapprovingly.

End of sixtieth paragraph.

“He’s never lied to you, and he’s at least putting you on your guard.” said Charlie.

Sixty-first paragraph.

Dialogue set, fifth sentence.

“Nice boss.” said Dean with a sickened look.

Dialogue set, tenth sentence.

“Cause he’s a ruddy coward.” said Hagrid with a frown behind his bushy beard.

End of dialogue set.

Sixty-second paragraph, fourth sentence, fifth comma.

“They’re trying to warn you, you moronic fool!” said Firenze sharply. Tempest smiled fondly at her fellow centaur.
Such arrogance.” said Madam Bones.

“You couldn’t keep up with your Department of Magical Education’s head, and you want to discuss education with Dumbledore?” said Rivers shortly.

“You bastard.” muttered Dr. Clark staring furiously up to the Minister.

“It..it was his…” said Fudge.

“You could have set the money safely aside, or deposited it into his account!” said Dr. Clark hotly. “He would hardly notice the difference in his account, and you didn’t need to bring up the conclusion of the task so soon!”

“Bull, Dad has more pride and honor than most of them put together.” said Ginny proudly.

“And those who are loyal to the people as opposed to their own careers and bank accounts.” said Kingsley.

“And you did admirably.” said Dumbledore with a proud smile.
“You gotta do what you gotta do to protect your family.” said Bill with a smile.

Sixty-fifth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Sixty-sixth paragraph.

“We know what he’s going to talk to him about that.” said Ron.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

“I didn’t want to leave Harry, not after what he had been through.” said Madam Pomfrey.

Sixty-seventh paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Sixty-eighth paragraph.

Sixty-ninth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Took several years off my life.” said Mrs. Weasley.

Seventieth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Protecting my godson.” said Sirius with a smirk as he laid a hand on sleeping Harry’s shoulder.

Dialogue set.

Tonks snorted in disbelief “Yeah, and You-Know-Who will start giving out flowers to complete strangers.”
Several people snickered.

“What you should have said was ‘Get along, or you’re both grounded.’” mumbled Harry’s voice as he sat up.

“No, Harry, stay down and get some rest, sleep off that powder.” said Sirius trying to push Harry back down into the cushions.

“Ugh…that stuff doesn’t agree with me.” said Harry as he laid down in in the expanded bowl.

“Sorry lad, I thought it would cheer you up a bit.” said Dr. Nicodemus walking over and feeling the boy’s forehead.

“It did make me feel better, for a while, but then I just kept thinking so hard…” said Harry thickly.

Sirius shushed Harry softly. “Don’t worry about anything, just rest.”

“Thereir hands only went up and down once.” said Ron.

“Wow, who are those two?” asked a first year.

“Members of the first Order of the Phoenix.” said Dumbledore with a smile. “You’ll know about them soon enough I suspect.”

Sirius turned and stared at Harry, guilt stretching across his face.
“Oh Harry.” said Sirius a tear running down his face. “I’m sorry.”
“As am I.” said Dumbledore softly.

“How come I get the feeling what he’s going to do is more dangerous than anything else we’ve heard?” said Seamus.
“He must have gone back to being a spy!” said an excited second year.

“Not the best thing to think about.” said Moody.
Mrs. Weasley looked sheepishly down.

“Is there something wrong with his eyes?” asked a Hufflepuff first year.
“He’s trying not to cry.” said Hannah in a hushed voice.
“It’s okay mate, do what you want.” said Ron quietly.

Mrs. McFinn looked at Harry in wonder.

“He had a rough day, he wasn’t thinking.” said Dr. Clark in a soothing tone.

A few girls were crying silently in the Great Hall and a few boys were pretending to wipe the sweat off their brows.

“Way to ruin the moment.” said Draco with a smirk.

“Oh, I got the last laugh.” said Hermione.

“Don’t ever fall asleep like that. I thought you died.” said Ron running his hand through his hair.

“He really did. Freaked everyone out.” said Fred.

“Yeah, we ran and dragged Dumbledore back, even he freaked out a little on how Harry was laying there.” said George.

“We’re in the final chapters…let’s finish this book and then call it a day.” said Dumbledore kindly.

“Yeah, Harry could use the cooking time.” said Sirius knowledgeably.
Chapter End Notes

Thanks for reading, please review.
“I’ll take it.” said Chief Hawkeye with a smile. He summoned the book and read the title of the last chapter: Chapter Thirty-seven.”

First paragraph, second sentence.

“You were put through too much.” said McGonagall sadly.

End of first paragraph.

Mr. Diggory and Mrs. Diggory bowed their heads.

Second paragraph, first sentence.

“We never would have found him, if you didn’t bring him home.” said Mrs. Diggory sadly.

Mr. Diggory nodded solemnly.

End of second paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“I would have been happy if he didn’t sign up for the damn thing.” said Mr. Diggory breaking down and sobbing into his hands.

Third paragraph.

Fourth paragraph.
“He didn’t want it. He wanted no part of it.” said Hermione.

“We didn’t want it either.” said Mrs. Diggory.

“He’s suffered enough.” said Mrs. McFinn.

“Oh…if your Great Grandmother hears about this…she’d pull you out of here and slam every family and Skeeter with so many slander and grievance charges and fines…” said Rudolph looking down at Harry with a frown. “Another massive multi-family loan would come around again.”

“Well, no…he knew what happened.” said Dean.

Ron and Hermione smiled to themselves.

The adults blinked and stared at the three of them.

“This wasn’t a strange occurrence in school…this was a mass murderer that killed a student.” said Ron.

End of sixth paragraph.
“To protect you, but for all my hopes, protection was something you did not have entirely.” said Dumbledore guiltily.

Dumbledore covered his eyes.

“I..I didn’t mean it like that, sir.” said Ron.

“That is not why I am emotional, my boy.” said Dumbledore softly.

“Except for last year, we always seem to have those classes free at the end.” said Seamus.

“I was afraid he’d be too depressed ter see me.” said Hagrid.

“Well, we aren’t on first name basis with her.” said Terry.
“Not for a long time.” said Remus softly patting Harry’s hand.

“Thank you Hagrid.” said Dumbledore with a faint smile.

“His father the way he turned out.” said Dumbledore, glaring quickly at Snape.

“Still has a memory like a steel trap, nothing gets out.” said Moody.

“We’ve had enough fright for a while.” said Dr. Clark with a smile.

“Which meant a lot of early mornings and late evenings.” said Ron.
Sixteenth paragraph.

Mrs. Diggory dabbed at her eyes.

Seventeenth paragraph, third sentence.

“Took a while for me to settle back into normalcy.” said Moody plainly.

“This is normal?” muttered Tonks with a teasing smile.

“I heard that.” snarled Moody.

End of seventeenth paragraph.

“It wouldn’t be long.” said Moody.

Eighteenth paragraph, sixth sentence.

People stared at Harry, he really did try and read people.

End of eighteenth paragraph.

Nineteenth paragraph.

Dumbledore’s and Snape’s mouth hung open slightly.

Twentieth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Twenty-first paragraph.

Dialogue set.

The hall went silent, as students and adults alike had a moment of silence for the fallen Hufflepuff student.
“He could hardly believe he was going to have to relive that.” said Ron.

“And a whole lot of people here wanted to insult him without thought.” said George.

“And everyone else tosses him under the bus.” said Fred.

“I saw them, but I didn’t want to give them the satisfaction of allowing them to voice their opinions at that time.” said Dumbledore.

“It was their Headmaster that got outed as a Death Eater.” said a second year Ravenclaw.
“Excellent speech.” said Chief Hawkeye clapping his hands together.

“Especially with the Dursley’s there.” said Mrs. Weasley.

“Ron quit trying.” said Terry with a smile.

“So I guess her charms were working.” said Seamus.

“Harry was just happy that someone didn’t talk smack about him.” said Ginny.

“Nice guy.” snickered Colin.
“She was fine, Ron.” said Mrs. Weasley shaking her head.

“Finally…we were thinking you never got it.” said Alicia.

“Though you don’t want to sit on that cushion.” said Neville rubbing his backside.

“Which was nice.” said Sirius.

“Though he lets them bad mouth Harry all they want, even pushing them to do it.” said Tonks.

“I want to know, how the hell the Editor thought he could get away with badmouthing my nephew when I got back?” said Leroy with a snarl.
“Blackmail?” said Fudge quickly.

“Pardoned.” said Chief Hawkeye swiftly. “I want to hear about this.”

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Fortieth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Harry didn’t know?” asked Colin.

“Harry was too busy with other things to really care.” said Ron.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

Forty-first paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Beautiful.” said Rudolph with a smile.

“Oh, she’s fired now…” said Leroy with a bright smile. “It’s all over for her.”

Rita scowled at the girl.

“Don’t be pissed, it was your beloved Ministry that wanted all this out in the open.” said Lionus.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Forty-second paragraph.
Rita blushed.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

Forty-third paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“He remembers a freaking bug? On a statue? What the hell…?” said Angelina.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

“Heaven, you kids are too much.” said Nightstrike.

Forty-fourth paragraph.

Dialogue set.

“Explains her fall from grace.” said Bathilda Bagshot.

Forty-fifth paragraph.

Forty-sixth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Forty-seventh paragraph.

Dialogue set.

“When has he not been his favorite?” asked Charlie.

“I don’t...” said Dumbledore quickly but the teachers all shook their heads.

“Don't even try Albus.” squeaked Flitwick with a smile. “It won't do you any good.”
Forty-eighth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“He’s not that weak.” said McGonagall proudly.

Dialogue line.

Forty-ninth paragraph.

Dialogue set.

Draco cringed and covered his eyes.

Fiftieth paragraph.

Fifty-first paragraph.

“What the…?” asked a first year Hufflepuff.

Dialogue set.

“You kids are too precious.” Nightstrike with laugh.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“You seem to really like that one.” said Rudolph.

Dialogue set.

Fifty-second paragraph, first sentence, seventh comma.

“You kids are so nice to each other.” said Kingsley with a smile.

“Do unto others as they would do unto you if given half a chance.” said Ron.
End of fifty-second paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Thanks for acting as if nothing really happened that year.” came a muffled sound from the cushions.

“It’s alright Harry.” said Fred with a shrug.

“Don’t bother getting up, just keep sleeping.” said George.

“That’s exactly what he’s doing.” said Dumbledore rubbing Harry’s back gently.

“This book took one hell of a toll on him.” said Tonks.

“Thank goodness for those parties, I don’t want to think about what he would have had to go through without those distractions.” said Mrs. McFinn.

Fifty-third paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Dude, forget something!” said Fred shaking his head.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Fifty-fourth paragraph, first sentence, third comma.

“They wouldn’t shut up about it!” said George.

“We were about to force feed them some Canary Creams after a while.” said Fred.

End of fifty-fourth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“It was something a little less….diabolical.” said Fred.
Dialogue line.

Fifty-fifth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“I keep forgetting that.” said Ron.

Dialogue line.

Fifty-sixth paragraph.

Dialogue set.

“That day at the Three Broomsticks!” said Hannah with a gasp.

Dialogue line.

“You should have threatened to sick Mummy on him, he would have coughed up quickly.” said Bill.

“After killing us, then where would we be?” asked Fred.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Mrs. Weasley began to growl. “I told you not to gamble.”

“We don’t do that anymore.” said Fred quickly.

“Well, except for the little bets here, but that doesn't really count.” said George.

Dialogue line.
“My dad still wants to rearrange his face.” said Lee.

“That giant bag of gold?” said Charlie. “He’s screwed.”

“And how.” said Bill.

Remus stopped laughing.

“Bet he doesn’t like Harry anymore.” said Katie.

“Poor Harry.” said Justin.
“He never wanted to talk to us one on one when the year is over.” said Fred.
“During the year, oh yeah, but never the end.” said George.

“Never had someone just call us over and hand us a giant thing of gold.” said Fred.
“How come you didn’t give me some?” asked Ron with confusion.
“Wait’ll you hear his reason, we went all out just for him.” said George.

“Didn’t expect him to want to do something funny…besides the pranks he rarely does.” said George.

The Hall went silent.
“You’re right.” said Ron quietly.
“We were still thinking you were a nutter.” said George looking over at Harry.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, first sentence.

“Easy there, shorty, we’ll take the money.” said Fred.

End of dialogue set.

Ron turned a faint pink.

Sixty-first paragraph.

Sixty-second paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“He didn’t even blush.” said Fred.

“Really did prove he thought of her as a sister.” said George.

“Way to sound foreboding.” said Tonks.

“I think we will call it a day today.” said Dumbledore with a faint smile.

“Should we wake Harry up?” asked Sirius. “Or just take him to bed?”

“Bed would be the best bet.” said Dr. Nicodemus.

“We’ll take him to bed.” said Dr. Clark standing up with Mrs. McFinn.

“I’ll help you take him up to the room.” said Bathilda taking her wand in hand and levitated the boy’s body out of the bowl and out of the Great Hall.

Sirius watched Harry be carried out of the Great Hall and had a worried expression on his face.

“I hope he’ll be okay for the next book…I mean…” said Sirius.
“Yeah, we’ll see what could happen.” said Remus.

“Somehow, I don’t think the future is going to be able to take any easier than the past.” said Sirius.

Well, this is the end of the ten chapters in one shot thing we've had going on. Now it's all down where no one has read before.

I've had a few people try and theorize who Lionus was/is. A few people said that he had to HAD to be Officer McFinn.

He's not.

It may be a great long while till that little information is revealed.

Chapter End Notes

Thanks for reading, please review.
This chapter is inspired by the song Going Home, sung by Tommy Scott, I wish I could tell you to just go type it in and listen, but when I tried, it was the wrong song. This version is an old Irish song that I heard on a Celtic Music CD, and I fell in love with it.

I now the chapter is short, but...hey, someone is back in town baby!

The next morning, they all gathered back into the Great Hall. They looked excitedly at the fifth book to be read, this one and the ones after it held the future, what would happen, would it be good, or would it bring them nothing but nightmares?

Dumbledore walked over to the pile of books, took out the fifth one, this one had a bluish colored leather cover and silver letters along the spine and front, telling the title.

Title of the fifth book.

His eyes blinked several times and looked nervously at the book...he hoped that the book wouldn't divulge sensitive materials and if it did, he would simply have to work around it.

Though it was nine o’clock, the book held a lock on the side, hiding it’s pages from the world. The students were getting a bit antsy, they were wondering why they weren’t getting on with the readings.

“How Harry, I think we may have to ask you to release this book.” said Dumbledore taking the book over to the slightly sleep-ruffled teen.

“How am I supposed to do that?” asked Harry taking the book in hand.

“I’m not sure, but you should get an idea somehow.” said Dumbledore with a smile.

Harry held the book in his hands, unsure of what to do with it. He looked over to the rest of the school, they were staring at him fixedly. What the hell was he supposed to do? Nothing was coming to mind, the book wasn't changing color, temperature or even yelling out instructions.

As he stood there, the book unchanging in his hand, something did happen.

Sing. said a voice in his head

Say what now? thought Harry quickly, he knew that voice, but it had been so long since he heard it, could it really be...but how could it? He looked around, but there was nothing there, however the book began to glow.

C’mon Harry, I know you can do it, sing our favorite song...

Harry stared at the book in wonder as music began to play in his head, tears welling up in his eyes.

Sing, Harry....sing with me...

Harry closed his eyes, and sang the song he and the voice’s owner used to sing when they would work in the workshop that was in the voice’s garage.

Officer McFinn’s favorite song, Going Home.
Mrs. McFinn looked at Harry, a hand covering her mouth.

“What is it?” asked Remus.

“That’s…” said Mrs. McFinn.

“Who the hell is singing with him?” asked Sirius looking around the room.

Another voice could be heard singing along with Harry, but who it was, they could not pinpoint, except for two people. One voice was Harry's soft tenor tone, and the other, was a slightly deeper, with an Irish accent.

“That’s…that’s James…” said Dr. Clark in a hushed voice. “That's James' voice.”

“It was his favorite song,” said Mrs. McFinn wiping her eyes. “He’d always sing that song., but where is it coming from?”

“But, how can it be James?” asked Dr. Clark repeatedly.

After the final note was over, the books opened wide and floated towards the middle of the room. A light shone around the book and when it transformed into a large shimmering cone of light, a white high backed chair was deposited as well a man, wearing a police officer’s uniform, and a smile towards the people in the bowl.

“JAMES/OFFICER MCFINN!” shouted Mrs. McFinn, Dr. Clark and Harry together. He smiled widely as Mrs. McFinn and Harry rushed towards him.

“Hey, sugarplum, hey. Spoooort!” said Officer McFinn as Harry tackled him to the floor in a large hug. “This was so much easier when you were younger.” he groaned as he hugged Harry. "If I wasn't dead, this would have really hurt."

“James! You’re alive!” said Mrs. McFinn swooping over him and kissing him.

Officer McFinn looked uncomfortable. “Not really, sweetheart.” He sat up with some effort, Harry's arms still wrapped around his neck. He gestured around the cone, “See that light? If I leave here, I disappear, I’m only solid in this little area. I'm amazed to be here at all, to be perfectly honest.”

“But…why…?” asked Harry clutching Officer McFinn closer to himself. “How are you back?”

“I’m not all that sure on that point. I was minding my own business, talking to…a few people...” he said looking down at Harry pointedly. “When, something began to pull on all three of us, little bolts of electricity came out of nowhere. Shot up from the ground and made me stagger in pain for a moment, the others too. The woman I was speaking to almost fell right through to where the bolts were coming from. We were all screaming in pain...worse thing I had ever felt. The man I was also talking to and I pulled the woman back up, but I lost my grip and fell through.

Speckerton looked at the figure, confusion and horror on his face.

“Then I had something telling me I couldn’t go back, couldn't rightly say what it was, just some large booming voice telling me I couldn't return, not without staying and powering these readings. Confused the hell out of me I’ll tell you that much. It hurt a lot at first, but after a while it got to be pretty bearable. I got to hear what happened to you, and I got to relive a few of the happiest moments of my life. I shielded you from remembering some of the bad ones, and taught someone here a lesson.” said Officer McFinn running his hand through Harry’s long hair.
Harry wasn’t moving, he just wanted to stay in Officer McFinn’s arms. He missed this man so much, he didn’t want to lose him again. Officer McFinn patted Harry’s head, “C’mon Sport, we’d better get started…”

“Don’t wanna…” said Harry stubbornly. “I want to stay here.”

“Harry…remember how I said it hurts…” said Officer McFinn slowly. He didn’t want to use this card, but Harry had to know what was going on, what was going to happen. He had seen it all, whipping quickly past his eyes when this first started, Harry had to be prepared, he saw what Harry’s children looked like. Harry had to have that joy in his life, no matter what happened.

Harry looked up at Officer McFinn, and slowly crawled back into his bowl seat.

“James…” said Mrs. McFinn.

“I didn’t expect to show myself to you…I just…it happened.” said Officer McFinn with a kind smile.

Mrs. McFinn looked over to Dr. Clark quickly.

“I know all about it, and I’m fine with it…you need someone to look after you, and someone needs to look after Sam. Lord knows, maybe someday, he’ll finally be able to swing a tennis racquet properly.” he added with a smirk.

“You sure you’re dead? Cause you sound just as normal as you used to be.” said Dr. Clark with a laugh. “Still delusional.”

Officer McFinn’s laughter rang through the Great Hall.

Soon, everyone was asking the dearly departed man all sorts of questions about Harry's life with them and even a little extra info about himself. All except Umbridge, who still glared fiercely at anyone and everyone who took her future away from her.

These books were supposed to prove Potter was a liar, but it didn’t work. The books were obviously defective, and every time she made to inspect them, she’d get smacked around by that filthy werewolf and disgusting centaur nag.

Her world and plan had collapsed on top of her, and she was struggling to get back on top, (or at least out of shackles) and these books were not helping. That damned boy… if it wasn’t for him… he should have been kissed by those Dementors back before she even had to teach at this wretched school. This was all his fault.

Now how to go about getting her revenge?

Every time she wanted to send an owl to someone like Macnair, who always agreed with her, she’d be restrained and handled roughly. Why couldn’t the Minister see how brave and selfless she was? Why wasn’t he trying to get her off?

This was all Potter’s fault.
I don't own Harry Potter. And I'm only updating this story now one chapter a week, cause...yeah...I've got a lot going on, and with me doing two stories...and I have a new game...and it's a miracle that I could tear my hands away from it.

Officer McFinn took the book in his hands and settled back in the chair.

"You going to read?" asked Dennis.

"I'm reading for the rest of the book." said Officer McFinn crossing his leg. "And for the remaining books."

"Aw, now that's not fair." said Fred.

"Beats fighting over it." said Officer McFinn.

"We never fought over the chapters." said Lee.

"Not yet anyway." said Officer McFinn. "Fifth book, First chapter."

"Finally, someone is seeing Dudley as the nutter he really is." said Dean.

“He's not a nutter, he's just dumber than a box of flobberworms.” said Harry.

_First paragraph, first sentence._

"Aw, I didn't want to hear about Privet Drive." said Tonks.

"Well, what do you expect, the book mentioned Dudley right in the beginning." said Sirius rubbing the back of Harry's neck.

Harry wasn't saying anything, he was only staring at Officer McFinn.

"Harry..." said Dumbledore.

"I'm fine." said Harry absently.

Officer McFinn looked up, he wanted Harry to sit with him...but he was gone, having Harry be with him the entire time won't help him move on with his life. He shouldn't dwell on the past. Hell, hell he shouldn't be showing himself to the boy at all.

Dumbledore was thinking along the same lines, but what could they do?

All Harry could do, was stare hungrily at Officer McFinn, his mind not even focusing on the words being said.
"Aw, poor sweet babies." said Bill with a roll of his eyes.

"They take personal appearances very seriously." said Harry softly.

“A part of it anyway.” said Sirius thinking of Uncle Vernon's girth.

“Don't knock it, on that street, most of the people are around that size.” said Harry with a snicker.

"Didn't they use air conditioning or fans?" asked Hermione.

"Brown outs and black outs." said Harry simply, trying to resist as Sirius and Dumbledore coaxed Harry to lean back in the bowl. He wanted to be as close as he could to Officer McFinn. Why couldn't they understand that?

"Hm....laying in the dirt at Privet Drive." said Fred thoughtfully.

"They must be talking about Neville." said George.

"You wouldn't catch me there." said Neville.

"Also doesn't help he doesn't get the food a growing boy needs." said Madam Pomfrey.

"He should have had brand new clothes!" said Mrs. McFinn angrily.

"Oh, they would have loved us." said Fred with a bright smile.
"The darlings of the drive," said George rapturously.

Second sentence, end of third sentence.

"You did worry Mrs. Figg when you disappeared from your home." said Dumbledore.

"Figg? Arabella Figg?" asked Mrs. McFinn.

"That's right." said Dumbledore with a smile.

"She's...?" said Mrs. McFinn.

"In a way..." said Professor McGonagall.

"Wow...she is?" said one of the students.

“How come she didn't help matters?” asked another student.

End of second paragraph.

"Him getting off his chair is a slim chance." said Dr. Clark.

Third paragraph, second sentence, fourth comma.

"I'd hope not." said Hannah.

Third paragraph, second sentence, seventh comma.

"He could ruin his teeth that way." said Hermione absently.

"They're fake." said Harry absently.

"They are?" asked Dr. Clark.

"Top and bottom." said Harry.

"Hope someone smashed him in the mouth." said Officer McFinn with a sneer.

End of third paragraph.

"What kind of questions?" asked Bathilda Bagshot.
"Why was I in the living room, was the garden cleared of weeds, is dinner made...stuff like that." said Harry with a shrug.

Fourth paragraph.

"He's under the window trying to listen to the TV, so shut up and let him listen." said Dean.

Dialogue set, first sentence.

People around the Great Hall began to snarl once more.

"She shouldn't be allowed to raise goldfish." said Terry angrily.

End of dialogue set.

Fifth paragraph.

Dialogue set, second sentence.

"He's watching the news, you idiot." said Charlie.

Dialogue set, third sentence.

"Wow..." said Blaise. "Even I know who the Muggle Prime Minister is."

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

"Do they honestly think that people just creep under their window and listen to their conversations?" said Ernie.

"Harry's under the window." said Justin.

"Well, he's different." said Ernie.

"Everyone's getting in on the act." said Fred.

"No respect." said George.
Dumbledore stifled his laughter.

Sixth paragraph, fourth sentence, first comma.

"What?" said Remus.

"Wait for it." said Harry.

Sixth paragraph, end of fourth sentence.

"I wasn't all that comfortable going with someone who is all of a sudden acting out of character." said Harry.

The Rangers and Moody nodded appreciatively.

End of sixth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

"Somehow, I doubt he's just gone around for a nice cup of tea." said Hermione.

Harry smiled.

Dialogue set, second sentence, first comma.

"They're not friends, they're thugs." said Parvati.

End of dialogue set.

"Not here he's not." said Emmeline.

Seventh paragraph, second sentence.

"And a bunch of other things." said Seamus.
Bathilda Bagshot gasped. "Those little brutes."

"Cigarettes or..." said Remus softly.

"Stronger than that." said Harry.

"You didn't..." said Sirius softly.

Harry said nothing.

Sirius turned in his seat and stared at Harry, as did everyone else in the bowl and Officer McFinn.

"Just once." said Harry. "Didn't really care for it."

"Explains why you were so testy over the summer." said Sirius with a frown.

Harry looked away. Sirius wrapped his arms around Harry. "I'm happy you don't do that anymore. " then looked at Harry quickly. "Are you happy you don't do that?"

“I like breathing...that stuff was nasty anyway. Gotta say though...it was nice to feel relaxed...”

“Like that stuff the Ranger doctor gave you?” asked a first year Slytherin.

“Wasn't the same...” said Harry.

"How come no one contacted Dursley and demand compensation?" asked Bill.

"Everyone knows who Dudley's dad is." said Harry. "They don't mess with Uncle Vernon."

"And they don't think you're decent?" said Tonks with wide eyes.

"They're not all that bright." said Harry.
"I'm confused now, why is his stomach churning?" asked Ernie.

"Night for what?" asked Colin.
"For some news, answers, anything." said Harry.

"What the heck were they throwing a fit about?" asked Bill.
"There was a big drug bust in the airport and a few of them were taken into custody, a some of them helped themselves to a few pounds of the stuff. They're protesting that now they need to be frisked every time they leave the baggage area and they don't get paid for the time they're searched. Some even get docked pay for showing up late for a few of the baggage sortings." said Harry.
"I'd protest too." said Ron.

"If people had been killed, it would beat out protesters." said Hannah

"Man, sounds like we've heard something like that before." said George with a wink over to Hannah.

"You seriously need a vacation." said Sirius. "No stress, no nothing, just nice relaxation at home."
"I don't think I know what that word means." said Harry with a smile.
"It means you relaxing beside the pool, sleeping in, or doing whatever you want to do." said Sirius.
"I was right, it's nothing I've ever done." said Harry.
"He's laying low." said Kingsley.

The Rangers and Aurors nodded with smiles on their faces.

"Uncle Vernon has his going on at one in the morning every three days." said Harry. "He didn't like the other neighbors doing it more than he did."

"Idiot was just trying to do a trick." said Harry.

"Well, someone is interested." said Ginny.

Charlie looked confusedly at the book. "W-What?"

Several people snickered.

"I would have wanted to watch that." said Parvati.
"This doesn't sound good." said Terry.

Fourteenth paragraph, first sentence, first semi-colon.
"Someone apparating?" asked Charlie.
"And I know who." snarled Mrs. Weasley.
"Good thing you guys let him go." said Tonks quietly. “She'd rip him apart.”

Fourteenth paragraph, first sentence, second semi-colon.
"Ah, poor kitty." said a first year Hufflepuff.

Fourteenth paragraph, first sentence, second semi-colon, second comma.
"Uh oh." said Dr. Clark.

Fourteenth paragraph, end of first sentence.
"So cool." said Colin.

Fourteenth paragraph, second sentence, second comma.
“Not so cool.” said Dennis.
"Bet that hurt." said Remus.

End of fourteenth paragraph.
"Get a grip, woman." said Snape with a roll of his eyes.

Fifteenth paragraph, first sentence, third comma.
"He can handle anything that comes his way..." said Fred.
"Except a smack to the head?" said George.

They looked over to Harry with wide smiles.

"I...will...smack...you...back" said Harry slowly.

End of fifteenth paragraph.

"OI!" shouted Sirius.

Dialogue line.

"Let go of him and he just might!" said Remus hotly.

Dialogue set.

Dumbledore covered his mouth with his hand. "My god."

“Too bad that never happened before this, he could have used the protection.” said Remus with a growl.

Sixteenth paragraph, first sentence.

"Don't bother with the surroundings, worry about your Uncle!" said Alicia.

End of sixteenth paragraph.

"Sort of hard to do that with someone's hands around your throat." said Harry.

Dialogue set.

"He is a good liar." said Bathilda Bagshot with a frown.

Seventeenth paragraph.

"Do go over there." said Dennis.
Eighteenth paragraph.

"Are you bloody insane?" shouted Ron.

End of eighteenth paragraph.

"Not funny." said Sirius.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

"That way I'd know what I was trying to hit." said Harry.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

"He won't believe you." said Emmeline Vance.

Nineteenth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

"It's his window too!" said Seamus.

"That's not my house, I just happen to sleep there during the summer." said Harry.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Twentieth paragraph.

"Most parents are excited that their kids are up to speed on what's going on." said Leroy shaking his head.
"Don't give an abusive man cheek!" said Professor Sprout in shock.

"Sorry, that's all I am, is clever." said Remus with a smirk.

"I think they would have preferred you stupid, Potter." said Draco.

"A lot of people would, I should think." said Harry sending a pointed look up to the Minister.

People growled once again.

"Harry, the next time he calls us "Your lot" smack him." said Charlie.

"Love to." said Harry.

"Smack that stupid walrus." said Charlie.

"They were dumbfounded on how you could fight back." said George.

"Is not." said Mr. Weasley.
"They're just giving me a headache." said Harry.

"I'm shocked he knows that big of a word." said Professor Flitwick.

"Not his problem." said Blaise.

"Ooh!" said the students leaning back and closing their eyes.

"This won't end well." said Dean.

"I don't want to think about how it will go once you get back home." said Mrs. McFinn.

"You're making my head hurt." said a first year Slytherin student.
"Boy..." said Moody with a proud smile. "If only other young men were like you."
"And girls." chipped in Tonks.

Ron shook his head as Hermione stared at Harry.

"To protect you." said Dumbledore softly.
"He nearly got choked to death, and they didn't even notice." said Sirius darkly.

"No! Listen to your instincts." said Tonks.

"No." said Ron.
"Yes." said Hermione.

"Well, it spared you from a lot of headaches." said Bill.
"We were worried how you were holding up." said Mr. Weasley.
"Didn't sound like it." said Harry stubbornly.
“Wasn't our fault.” said Hermione.

Harry said nothing.

Letter from Ron and Hermione.

“That's all they wrote?” asked Mrs. McFinn.

“Yup.” said Harry.

“I would have preferred no letters.” said Dr. Clark. “If you had to go through what you had to go through, and then they send you letters written like that.”

“We were told we couldn't tell him anything!” said Hermione.

“You could have found a way.” said Dr. Clark.

“It's not a good idea to leave the target in the dark about possible dangers or possible attacks. They'll only put themselves in danger even more if you don't warn them.” said Officer McFinn wisely.

Dumbledore looked down slightly. “I only wanted to protect him.”

Thirty-first paragraph, third sentence.

“Man, that would have drove me nuts.” said Ernie. “Having people hint that all the time.”

“Especially when you're at the Dursleys.” said Harry dully.

A few Order members looked uncomfortable.

Thirty-first paragraph, third sentence.

A few members of the Order, Hermione, and the Weasleys turned and stared at Harry.

Thirty-first paragraph, fifth sentence.

Ron and Hermione stared dumbfounded at their friend.
“I was pissed.” said Harry matter-of-factly.

End of thirty-first paragraph.

“It was her night to cook.” said Harry shaking her head.

Thirty-second paragraph, third sentence.

The hall went silent.

End of thirty-second paragraph.

Harry crossed his legs nonchalantly. At this time, he didn't care what anyone said, he hated being left in the dark.

Thirty-third paragraph.

Dumbledore rubbed his eyes, trying to rid himself of some residual tears.

Thirty-fourth paragraph, first sentence, first semi-colon.

“You really like that street.” said Sirius with a faint smile. Harry smiled at Dr. Clark, and Mrs. and Mr. McFinn.

Thirty-fourth paragraph, second sentence.

Sirius gave his godson a one armed hug.

Thirty-fourth paragraph, third sentence, second comma.

Sirius looked sideways at Harry with a guilty look.
“We weren't trying to hint towards anything!” said Hermione.

“It kinda sounded like you did.” said Dr. Clark.

“Good, he'll listen to you.” said Officer McFinn.

“There wasn't anyone home at that point.” said Mrs. Weasley with a faint smile.

“I didn't swear at the pair of them in my letters.” said Harry nodding over to Ron and Hermione.

Remus hid his cracking smile behind a hand.

“Shut up.” said Sirius.

“I'm not saying a word.” said Remus trying very hard not to laugh.

“Don't you ever open the damn gates?” asked Charlie with a laugh.

“Charles!” said Mrs. Weasley.

“Nice.” said Ginny shaking her head.
“Yeah, climb into the fireplace.” said Neville.

Dumbledore looked over to Harry quickly.

“Not quite.” said Snape quietly.

“Harry?” said Sirius holding up a hand to silence both Ron and Hermione. Harry picked up the blanket that was laying in wait on the floor, and covered his head with it. “Do you blame me?”

“Well, not really, but we do care.” said Sirius.

“I couldn't really tell this summer.” said Harry.

“Do you now?” asked Remus.

“Maybe.” said Harry with a shrug. “I guess.”

“Once again: Not quite.” said Snape shaking his head.

Several adults squirmed in their seats.
“I didn't...” said Dumbledore weakly.

“We wanted you there.” said Hermione tears in her eyes.

“That's an impossibility.” said Snape.

“Tell me about it.” said Harry with a smirk.

“Oh, they would have eaten that up.” said Tonks with a roll of her eyes.

“Oh no, drunks.” said Mrs. Weasley.

Harry made a “So-so” gesture with his hands. “I don't rightly remember if he was drinking at that point.”

“You know the singer?” asked Bill.

“Singer' is a bit extreme.” said Harry.

“They're kids?” asked Remus.

“Yeah, and they already ruined those bikes a few times since they've gotten them.” said Harry.

“Are those parents blind?” asked Sirius.

“Yup, they're about as clueless as the Dursleys.” said Harry.
“What does that mean?” asked Terry.

“He’s still huge, but it's partly muscle.” said Harry.

“I would say “Congratulations” but not if you were the practice dummy.” said Dumbledore looking over to Harry.

“I may be able to take on Crabbe and Goyle, but Dudley is another story.” said Harry. “He takes awhile to knock down and keep him down.”

“Absolutely not.” said Professor Flitwick.

“Can you imagine what he would turn out to be if he went to that school?” asked Professor Sprout loudly.

“Say hello to the Ranger's Most Wanted.” said Chief Hawkeye with a laugh.

“I didn't care, I wanted to get my mind off of...everything.” said Harry.
“That's mean.” said Fred.

“But funny.” said George.

“But funny.” agreed Fred.

Forty-second paragraph, second sentence, first dash.

Officer McFinn stopped reading for a moment and looked up at the black haired youth. He extended his arm and motioned to Harry to come over. “Come here, Sport.”

Harry stood up slowly and walked over to where Officer McFinn sat. Officer McFinn smiled up to Harry. “You know, it'll look really creepy if I pull you into my lap.”

Harry, without missing a beat, sat down on Officer McFinn's lap and put his head on his shoulder.

“You're strange.” said Officer McFinn placing a kiss on his half-adopted son. “Listen, you know...though I only had about a year, I didn't raise you to pick fights.”

“I didn't pick it...well, I didn't walk up to all of them and start something.” said Harry mumbling and leaning heavily into Officer McFinn.

Mrs. McFinn wiped her eyes on a handkerchief, she missed them so much, just seeing James holding Harry close to him, protecting him.

“What are you trying to tap dance around?” asked Officer McFinn with a smile.

Harry remained silent.

“You picked a fight with Dudley, didn't you?” asked Officer McFinn with a smirk.

“Yeah.” said Harry quietly.

“And he's built the way you make it sound?” asked Officer McFinn in a whisper.

“Yes sir.” said Harry once again very quietly.

“Good boy.” whispered Officer McFinn. “I don't want to hear about you fighting with that boy again.” he said loudly.

“Yes sir.” said Harry equally as loud with a smile.

End of forty-second paragraph.

“I know, I know...No magic outside school.” said Harry from where he now sat.

Forty-third paragraph.
“And here you didn't trust me.” said Harry with a pout.

“Not when it's sounding like you're angst ridden.” said Officer McFinn with a light smack to the back of Harry's head. Sirius frowned and dragged Harry over to where he was sitting.

“What's wrong?” asked Harry, resisting slightly.

“Nothing, just...get back here...” said Sirius trying to sound nonchalantly as he pulled Harry towards him.

Remus looked at Sirius and then back to Officer McFinn.

Fifty-fourth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Sirius began to nudge Harry repeatedly. “You're not being nice.” he said in a singsong voice.

“You weren't being talkative.” said Harry in the same voice.

Officer McFinn smiled fondly at the two of them.

Fifty-fifth paragraph, second sentence.

“So if he had gotten home at one o'clock...” said Mrs. Weasley.

“He was fine with it.” said Harry.

“He had been fine with it?” asked Mr. Weasley in shock. “He had been out that late before?”

“I had to keep his dinner warm...for seven bloody hours.” said Harry.

Fifty-fifth paragraph, third sentence, first comma.

The grip on Harry's shoulder from Sirius' hand tightened.

“How late were you?” asked Remus through gritted teeth.

“Ten minutes maybe?” said Harry trying to shrug and loosen Sirius' fingers.

Fifty-fifth paragraph, third sentence, fourth comma.

“Harry...without a smile..?” said George.
“Never will happen.” said Fred.

End of forty-fifth paragraph.

Forty-sixth paragraph, first sentence.

“I wouldn't exactly call Vernon square....oval is more like it.” said Officer McFinn.

Forty-sixth paragraph, second sentence

“Yeah, it's not the scenery or anything like that, it's the absence of the disapproving looks.” said Charlie.

End of forty-sixth paragraph.

“You really sound creepy.” said Katie with a small smile.

Dialogue line.

“Must be talkin' 'bout that Dursley boy.” said Hagrid with a smirk.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“I don't want to think about what they'll do without adult supervision.” said Remus.

“Makes me look like a sweet perfect angel.” said Harry with a bright smile.

Snape snorted.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Dud?” said Fred.
“I don't think a guy wants to be called that.” said George. “Especially if he wants to have a girlfriend at any point in his life.”

Charlie reached over and smacked the back of the twins' heads.

Dialogue line.

Forty-eighth paragraph.

“And I'll bet that Vernon doesn't care that he hums a tune.” said Professor Flitwick darkly.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Yeah, cause we could remember the time that you were called Ickle-Diddykins.” said Fred.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Fred and George looked at each other. “That was weird.”

Dialogue line.

“Listen to the bully and shut up.” said a sixth year girl covering her eyes.

Dialogue line.

“Don't go there!” said Justin loudly.

Dialogue line.
“Not that she'd do anything about it, anyway.” muttered Professor Vector with a frown.

“You're asking to get smacked.” said Remus shaking his head. “And I'm not sure who to really root for.”

“That's nice.” said Harry with a laugh.

“Hey, he may have helped start the war, but he didn't start this battle.” said Remus with a laugh as well.

“What happened to him?” asked Dennis.

“He got the snot beat out of him. Two black eyes, bruises all over his body, dislocated shoulder and knocked out a few teeth.” said Harry.

“Didn't Mark Evans tell his mother who did it?” asked Neville.

“He told his Mum and Dad yeah, but they didn't believe him. They're really good social friends with Aunt Petunia and Uncle Vernon. They love Dudley. Mark's the only one with brains.” said Harry.

“Ooh.” said Fred and George together.

“Did Mark really say that?” asked Lee.

“He said he did.” said Harry with a smirk.

“Stupid, idiot boy.” said Snape rubbing his eyes.
Fiftieth paragraph.

Harry looked guiltily down on the floor.

Fifty-first paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Be more specific, Harry carries a lot of things.” said Ron.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Fifty-second paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Don't push your luck boy.” said Snape shaking his head.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Fifty-third paragraph.

Dialogue line.

The school went quiet.

“WHO IS HE CALLING FREAKS?” screamed a seventh year Hufflepuff girl.

Dialogue line.

“That's a safe threat to use.” said Moody. “He'll never know.”

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“He'd better not take him on with or without it.” said Mrs. McFinn.

Dialogue line.
“Never knew you had so many Slytherin characteristics.” said Leroy with a wink.

Dialogue set.

“That his fault you were loo..” said George.

“GEORGE!” said Mrs. Weasley.

“I didn't even finish!” said George.

“I can tell where you were going with it.” snapped Mrs. Weasley.

“Mother!” said George with a scandalized voice

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Remus spat out his tea and stared at the book. Officer McFinn also stared hard at the book.

“Nothing happened.” said Harry tiredly.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Fifty-fourth paragraph.

“I'm getting really worried now.” said Remus.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Sirius pulled Harry closer to himself.

Dialogue line.

Sirius gave his godson's arm another squeeze.
“That's hitting below the belt.” said Ron. “Talking about someone like that.”

“He's always thought that I swung that way, just cause I don't do the things he likes.” said Harry.

“That boy...” said McGonagall with a furious look.

“At least his dad and mum were decent people!” shouted Rudolph, tears in his eyes.

“Ah ha!” said the Minister and Umbridge excitedly.

“You cannot do that!” shrieked Umbridge.

Chief Hawkeye glared fiercely up to the woman who cringed.

“Sounds wonderful to me.” muttered Ron.

“Harry's getting mad...” said George.
“I'm almost sorry for Dudley.” said Fred.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Fifty-seventh paragraph.

The Minister turned white.

Fifty-eighth paragraph.

Madam Bones leaned forward in her chair, sending dark looks up to the Minister.

Fifty-ninth paragraph, first sentence, first dash.

“So he was working hard not to let off some accidental magic.” said Bill with a smile.

“Can someone even do that?” asked Charlie.

Fifty-ninth paragraph, end of first sentence.

“I don't know of anyone that does.” said Dumbledore.

End of fifty-ninth paragraph.

Sixtieth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“‘We sure this isn't the end of the book?” asked a first year nervously.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.
Sixty-first paragraph.

A few people began to cringe, the scene going on in the book was getting frightening.

Sixty-second paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Shut up idiot!” said a few third years.

Dialogue line.

Sixty-third paragraph.

Madam Bones’ eyes widened.

Sixty-fourth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Sixty-fifth paragraph.

“He didn't give you the chance to stop doing whatever it was that you weren't doing.” said Lee.

Sixty-sixth paragraph, second sentence.

“That little...” muttered Nightstrike.

End of sixty-sixth paragraph.

“Get your wand!” shouted Lionus and Moody together.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

“So...you may not like him, but...” said Ernie.

“Doesn't mean he deserves what almost happened to him.” said Harry.
Sixty-seventh paragraph.

“Tell me it’s not what I think it is.” said Dr. Clark almost pleadingly.

Dialogue set.

Sixty-eighth paragraph, first sentence.

“What on earth?” said Dumbledore staring at the book just like everyone else.

“Shocked the hell out of me too.” said Harry.

End of sixty-eighth paragraph.

Sixty-ninth paragraph.

Seventieth paragraph.

Seventy-first paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Fudge looked down at his knees, a remorseful look on his face.

Seventy-second paragraph.

Seventy-third paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Seventy-fourth paragraph.

“Just think of something pleasant!” said Remus worriedly.

Seventy-fifth paragraph, first sentence, first dash.

Sirius shivered violently.
Sirius and Harry's head were touching before this, but then Sirius' head snapped up and clocked Harry on his temple.

“Ow...” said the both of them.

“You okay?” asked Sirius rubbing the top of his head.

“I don't wanna go to school, mummy.” said Harry rubbing his temple as he laid in Remus' lap.

“Doesn't sound like you were mad at us.” said Hermione.

“Oh, I was mad.” said Harry. “I just had more pressing matters.”

“Whoa.” said Sirius.

Several people gagged loudly.
“Did you just control where it went? And did it just take out more than what was in front of it?” said Remus in awe.

“'Parently.” said Harry.

“That was scary.” said a first year.

“And the Ministry didn't believe me.” said Harry shaking his head.

“How's your head.” said Sirius.

“I'd be fine, if someone would just stop rocking the planet.” said Harry.

“Good boy!” said Nicodemus.

“Nice.” said Ron with a snicker.

“And that was it.” said Officer McFinn with a smile. “Let's get on with it. Next chapter is Second chapter.

“Fun fun.” said Harry.

“Sure it is, we get to watch the Minister mess up completely.” said Sirius.
“Are we going to hear more angst?” asked Sirius with a teasing tone.

“I'm a fifteen year old with issues, what do you think?” said Harry with a smirk.

Dumbledore looked furiously down at the floor, Mundungus had been released earlier that morning, so he could not exact his revenge on the man again.

“Mr. Tibbies?” said Ernie.

“She's her best trained cat.” said Harry. “He can even hop up on the clicker and change the channel on the TV.”

“Easy there...don't make him an accessory.” said George.

“I was angry, people keeping stuff from me... and then all that was going on...” said Harry shaking his head.
“Why he was put on guard, I'll never know.” said Mrs. Weasley shortly.

“He was the only one available.” said Remus tiredly. “Harry had never seen him, so he would blend in, and everyone else had to work.”

Mrs. Weasley folded her arms.

“Hey, at least he's keeping his wits about him.” said Justin.

“Who cares, as long as Harry's okay, it doesn't matter what anyone says.” said a first year girl, then closed her mouth quickly when it dawned on her what she had said and where she had said it.

“Nice...” said Lee rolling on the ground with laughter.

“She was the only one in the neighborhood that said Dudley was a thug.” said Harry. “Though she says that about most kids.”

“I wouldn't believe he was a good-natured boy in her eyes, after he ran her over with his bike.” said Bill.

“Want a list?” said Dr. Clark with a small smile.

“In the Magical World.” said McGonagall.

“But they're...” said Sirius.

“Alright, alright.” said McGonagall.
“So you only put one person that can use magic on guard duty?” said Lionus running a hand down his face.

“That's just asking for something to happen.” said Chief Hawkeye.

“What would you have done?” asked Hermione.

“Every person in the Rangers that's incapable of using magic has two magical backup Rangers.” said Chief Hawkeye. “That way, no one is taken off guard.”

Second paragraph.

“Oh, dear, you're not going to be able to pick him up.” said McGonagall shaking her head.

Dialogue line.

“Wow, this is the second time he's been called that.” said a third year Slytherin.

Third paragraph.

“First time for everything it seems.” said a cocky seventh year Hufflepuff.

“Not funny, it's common practice in Azkaban to just sit in your cell the first week in shock.” said Sirius sharply.

Dialogue set, second sentence.

“Harry! Don't do it!” said Fred loudly.

“He'll fall on you, and squish you to death!” said George.

End of dialogue set.

“Once he starts to fall, leap out of the way.” said Mr. Weasley.

Dialogue line.
“Hey, give him a moment.” said Neville. “He's got to drag that lump.”

Fourth paragraph.

Dialogue set, second sentence.

“Wha?” asked Blaise. “Is she all of a sudden using wizarding sayings?”

“Oh huh, I could hardly follow what she was saying.” said Harry.

Dialogue set, third sentence, first dash.

“Then why leave him there, why even take him there?” asked Mrs. McFinn.

Dumbledore heaved a large sigh. “He had to go there and stay there for a short time in order for his...apparently nonexistent...protection to work.”

“How long would he had to stay there?” asked Dr. Clark.

“It fluctuates.” said Harry folding his arms. “You don't know, until you get a feeling that it's long enough.”

“Did that feeling ever come?” asked a first year earnestly.

“I don't know, never felt anything.” said Harry with a bored voice.

Dumbledore looked down in shame.

Dialogue set, third fourth sentence, first pause.

“What's he like?” asked Hermione.

“A cantankerous old goat.” said Harry and Officer McFinn together.

“James! Harry!” said Mrs. McFinn.

“Holly, the man used to call the station, because kids were running too fast on the sidewalk.” said Officer McFinn. “He was a right pain in the arse and I was happy every year someone would egg his house.”

“Don't think I didn't notice one year that my three dozen eggs were gone by morning.” said Mrs. McFinn.

“I told you, I had a craving for omelets.” said Officer McFinn with a smile.

“At two in the morning?” said Mrs. McFinn, a disbelieving smile on her face.
“They were good omelets.” said Officer McFinn.

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue set, second sentence, first comma.

“Don't blame you right there.” said Charlie.

End of fifth paragraph.

“And you could drag him like that?” asked Draco.

“It wasn't easy, and I wasn't prepared for it.” said Harry. “Nearly broke my back.”

Dialogue line.

“Too keep you safe.” said McGonagall. “As well as it had been working at any rate.”

Dialogue set, third sentence.

“Sad thing is, compared to the Dursley's, it was enjoyable.” said Harry.

End of dialogue set.

“One once again, bad planning.” said Lionus shaking his head.

Dialogue line.

“Ow...” said many students rubbing their backs.

Dialogue line.

“Makes me feel a little uncomfortable, the Ministry watching me at all times.” said Harry rubbing the side of his neck, and sending a small sideways glance at Dumbledore. Dumbledore looked guiltily down.
Dialogue line.

“If the Minister and his secretary weren't trying to kill you, yes.” said Chief Hawkeye.

“I never did anything of the sort! I didn't know that what she was doing!” said the Minister loudly.

Umbridge snarled at the Minister.

“She's still your employee, therefore, your responsibility.” said Chief Hawkeye.

Dialogue line.

Sixth paragraph, first sentence.

“He was drunk?” screeched Mrs. Weasley.

Sixth paragraph, second sentence, second comma, fourth word.

“Sounds like Crookshanks doesn't it.” said Terry.

End of sixth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“The thing you were supposed to prevent, happened!” said Mrs. Weasley angrily.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“That's right you stupid fool!” said Sirius darkly.

“I thought you liked him.” said Harry.

“I did, till he ditched you for his own personal gains.” said Sirius.

“You know...I wonder if it was planned.” said Ron thoughtfully.

“How could it have been planned?” asked Hermione exasperatedly.

“That night...there just happened to be someone selling dodgy cauldrons and they come to Dung to “sell them?” said Ron.

“And on that same night...Dementors show up?” finished Harry following with Ron's thought process.

Dumbledore looked between the two boys and then scowled fiercely towards Umbridge, who was gnashing her teeth at the boy in the bowl and then to the boy in the love seat.

Dialogue line.

And you off buying stolen cauldrons! Didn't I tell you not to go? Didn't I” Dialogue line.

It had to be a trap. thought Remus deeply.

Dialogue line.

Seventh paragraph.

Several students laughed out loud.

“And get him Mrs. Figg!” shouted Fred and George.

Dialogue line.

Eighth paragraph.

“He's life wasn't worth living after Dumbledore got through with him.” said Fred in a whisper.

Dialogue line.

End of dialogue set.

“For my can of spinach to show up.” said Chief Hawkeye with a laugh.
“Can of Spinach?” asked a first year Hufflepuff.

“Ask a elderly muggle.” said Lionus with a smirk.

Ninth paragraph.

Dialogue set, second sentence, first pause.

“Didn't she just say that she couldn't do anything?” asked Zacharias.

Dialogue set, second sentence, fourth pause.

“Well, that worked like a charm.” muttered Officer McFinn.

End of dialogue set.

Several people scratched their heads.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, second sentence.

“Maybe better security and keeping him with him at all times.” said Dr. Clark.

Dialogue set, third sentence, first pause.

“Ouch.” said Professor Sprout softly.

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Yeah, I'll get right on that.” said Harry with a roll of his eyes.
“I was getting really mad.” said Harry.

“You failed him as a parent.” said Bill.

“Eww....” moaned a few first years.

“Is 'galumphing' even a word?” asked Hermione with a laugh.

“Man, when I throw up on the floor, my mom and dad don't care if they step in it or not when they go to put me in bed.” said Colin.

“If only.” said Madam Hooch rolling her eyes.
“Not intentionally.” Ron.

Dialogue line.

“By who? Starving children?” said a seventh year Slytherin.

Fourteenth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“They scared him senseless.” said Nightstrike.

Fifteenth paragraph, fourth word.

“Where are you getting your words?” asked Luna dreamily.

End of fifteenth paragraph.

“Weren't you going to make sure Dudley was fine?” asked Millicent Bulstrode.

“He was fine.” said Harry plainly.

Dialogue line.

“Wow, do you mean he'd actually use the police?” asked Dr. Clark with a raised brow.

“That would shock me back to life.” said Officer McFinn with a laugh.

Dialogue line.

“Yeah, Big D, tell Mummy.” said Fred.

Sixteenth paragraph.

Dialogue line.
“Oh...this won't be good.” said Draco.

Seventeenth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Eighteenth paragraph.

“Don't go in there! Just go to your room and lock the door!” said Tonks loudly.

“Can't, door doesn't have a lock on my end.” said Harry.

“That's where the lock is supposed to be.” snarled Tonks.

Nineteenth paragraph, second word.

“We went from picturesque words to words from Roald Dahl books.” said Chief Hawkeye.

Lionus raised his brows. “Seriously?”

“My children love his books. BFG, Charlie and the Chocolate Factory, The Twits, Fantastic Mr. Fox...they love them all.” said Chief Hawkeye.

“I want to hear him say a few of the candy bar names.” muttered a muggleborn Hufflepuff student.

“Not in your lifetime.” said Chief Hawkeye not looking at the student.

End of nineteenth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“He had done nothing.” said Tempest with a stern tone.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, second sentence.

“Who buys their kids a leather jacket?” asked Nightstrike.

End of dialogue set.
“Makes me sound like a pervert.” said Harry with a laugh.

“This isn't funny, he's smacked you before, and he sounds like he's getting close.” said Remus.

Twentieth paragraph.

Dialogue set, second sentence.

“Hit him, and I'll hit you!” snarled Sirius.

End of dialogue set.

Twenty-first paragraph, second sentence, first comma.

“Too bad.” said George.

“Try again next time.” said Fred.

End of twenty-first paragraph.

“Do I really want to know who that's from?” asked Lionus looking up to the Minister with a frown on his face.

Dialogue set.

“Too bad.” said Colin.

Twenty-second paragraph.

Letter from Ministry, greetings

Letter from Ministry, first paragraph.

Letter from Ministry, second paragraph.

“Oh for the love of...” said Chief Hawkeye.

“I'm thinking we should have stepped in sooner. If the Minister is going this far.” said Lionus.
“He knew full well that wasn't Harry that did that!” said McGonagall. “Albus and I told him in person what had happened!”

“She's fired.” said Chief Hawkeye sternly.

“She couldn't believe what she was sending, she didn't want to go that far.” said Mr. Weasley quickly.

Chief Hawkeye looked at Mr. Weasley with a pensive look. “I'll withhold judgment for the moment, but to destroy the wand before the hearing...” he glared up at the Minister. “You are going to be paying Potter some compensation for overstepping your authority.”

Fudge quivered under the man's gaze.

“Oh, you're going back, whether you were acquitted or not.” said Lionus. “Best have you trained as a wizard than anything else at this stage.”

“You were in shock so much that you didn't hear what your uncle was shouting at you?” asked Alicia.

“Don't run! They'll only send Aurors after you!” said Tonks.

“And then you'd have to be a fugitive if they didn't catch you right away.” said Hermione.

“Then say hello to the Rangers coming to find you.” said Lionus.

“You would have been recruited in a heartbeat.” said Nightstrike.

“Ah HA!” shouted Umbridge.
“Stupid cow.” muttered Hermione. They all cheered when Tempest slapped Umbridge harshly.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Yeah, Harry has to escape from the long wand of the law.” said Fred.

Dialogue line.

“Yeah, Harry has to escape from the long wand of the law.” said Fred.

Dialogue line.

“You wouldn't understand it anyway.” said Professor Sinistra.

Dialogue line.

“Hey! Our school isn't...” said Fred.

“Wait Fred, lets give this some thought.” said George.

The twins sat in thought. “Never mind, this school is a little mad.” they said together.

Officer McFinn raised one brow while he looked at them.

Dialogue line.

“Don't do it, Harry!” said Neville.

“This is his Uncle Vernon that he's going up against.” said Ron.

“Do it, Harry!” shouted Neville.

Twenty-sixth paragraph.

“Oooh!” said the Weasleys together.

“It sucks when that happens to Errol.” said Ginny.

“Was it Errol?” asked Dennis.

“Nah, Harry got the letter in this century.” said George.
Letter from Mr. Weasley, greetings.

Letter from Mr. Weasley, second sentence.

“Should have come and got you, your uncle was in no state of mind to care for you.” said Mr. Weasley.

End of Letter from Mr. Weasley.

“Didn’t plan on it.” said Harry.

Twenty-eighth paragraph, fourth sentence.

“Using those self-defense moves that Inspector Homes had you learn.” said Mrs. McFinn helpfully.

End of twenty-eighth paragraph.

“Yeah, the whole kicking them clean through the middle from the ground up would land you in prison for assault, easily.” said Ron.

Twenty-ninth paragraph, second sentence, first comma.

“Why did you think that?” asked Hermione.

“I wasn’t too sure if I could hide from them, I wanted to see if I could.” said Harry.

“Ranger material, all the way.” whispered Dr. Nicodemus with a smirk.

End of twenty-ninth paragraph.

“Not with your freedom at stake I hadn’t.” said Dumbledore quietly.

Dialogue line.
“Bet that knocked them for a loop.” said Lee.

“Aww, they were so close of losing their chef.” said Ginny with a frown.

The Aurors and Rangers leaned forward eagerly.

“Seriously Harry, you need to pick one of us to join.” said Tonks excitedly.

Harry shook his head. “I'm fifteen, you honestly think I'm going to pick an occupation now?”

“No, you people did that yourself.” said Lionus.

“He saved your good-for-nothing son.” said Sirius.

“Not a damn thing to your kid.” muttered Charlie.
“Wow, wonder what privileged boy has to be unhappy about?” asked Neville.

“There's the million galleon question.” said Harry.

Thirty-second paragraph, second sentence.

“Nice people.” said Bathilda Bagshot.

“They had one neighbor carted off for talking to the tree in his own yard.” said Harry.

“Poor Mr. Feathering, he wasn't hurting anyone.” said Mrs. McFinn. “He buried his dog under that tree, and he loved that little terrier.”

End of thirty-second paragraph.

Thirty-third paragraph.

“Any thoughts?” asked Dumbledore.

Harry sat in thought.

“Perhaps when he saw Harry as the better athlete, student and had friends that would come out to save him from a prison and use magic, he was taken with a bout of jealously.” said Luna dreamily.

Harry and Dumbledore looked at her.

“Works for me.” said Harry.

Thirty-fourth paragraph.

“That's sort of odd, only you in that household, knows what he went through.” said Terry.
“No Hogwarts student learns that spell at school.” said McGonagall hotly.

Silence came over the Hall.

“Did you read that right?” asked Snape leaning forward in his chair. “She wouldn't willingly speak of the magical world.”

“She did.” said “Officer McFinn.

“He's never struck her has he?” asked Officer McFinn looking up at Harry.

“Not that I've ever seen, they love each other quite a lot.” said Harry with a shrug. “Well, I guess their fond of each other at least.”

End of thirty-sixth paragraph.
So she remembers me. thought Snape with a mental smirk.

I'm amazed that she remembered what I had said all those years ago. muttered Snape.

"Was he smart enough to learn how to before?" muttered Draco.

"Best of luck to you on that one." said Dr. Clark.

"Sounds like one of the quick diplomatic apology owls. They only send those when they try and cover their tracks and calm any political storm." said Kingsley.

"That would have been a massive meltdown of the Ministry. If Harry had been expelled and had his wand snapped, he could have sued the entire Ministry....and we wouldn't have one anymore." said Tonks.

"He should have sued them then." said Moody. “Got it all lined up before they sent that letter.”

“I had told them that I would have brought legal action against the Ministry if it had gone through with it.” said Dumbledore looking at Fudge. “And it wouldn't have been handled in our Department of Magical Law Enforcement. I would have taken it as far as I could go.”

End of fortieth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Here’s hoping that no other owls come crashing through the window and breaking it.” said Seamus.

Letter from Ministry, greetings.

Letter from Ministry, first paragraph.

Letter from Ministry, second paragraph.

Letter from Ministry, third paragraph.

“Best wishes, my...” said Bill.

“William!” said Mrs. Weasley.

End of letter from Ministry.

“Can you be suspended when you aren't even in school?” asked Mrs. McFinn.

“In the Muggle World no, but here yes. But it should be handled by the Ministry and the school, not just the Ministry.” said Madam Bones.

Forty-first paragraph.

“Still could not believe that the entire Wizengamot had to be called for that hearing.” muttered Madam Bones. “It was the most ridiculous thing I had ever heard or seen.”

Dialogue set.

Officer McFinn snarled at the book. “I've got plans tonight.”

“What are you talking about?” asked Dr. Clark. “I thought you and Holly...”

Officer McFinn and his wife locked eyes. “I-I...”
“It's alright, James. I understand.” said Mrs. McFinn with tears in her eyes. “I'm okay.”

James smiled at his wife. “God, I love you...I'll save you both a spot.” he flashed his eyes up to the ceiling. Then he turned to Dr. Clark. “Hurt her, and I'll haunt you.”

“No thanks, I'd like to go back to my little vacation from you.” Dr. Clark shot back, his face faltered for a moment.

“Oh, I was enjoying mine.” retorted Officer McFinn with a laugh. Dr. Clark smiled again.

“Dialogue line.”

“Dialogue line.”

“Dialogue line.”

“That bastard.” growled Mr. Weasley.

Mrs. Weasley didn't say anything, she was busy muttering her own curses.

“Dialogue line.”

“Dialogue line.”

“Dialogue line.”

Several people snickered.

“Dialogue line.”

“Dialogue line.”

“Dialogue line.”

“Careful lad...” whispered Dumbledore absently.

“Dialogue set.”

“Dialogue line.”

“They make you relive the worst moments of your life.” said Fred.

“For us...it was the day you were born.” said George.
“Yeah, that's what he said.” said Dean.

“Sounds about right with Dudley.” said Ginny with a giggle.

“Dang Harry.” said Justin shaking his head.

“There's no real body to strike.” said Professor Flitwick.

“Resourceful little critters.” said Lionus with a laugh.
“Psycho nut.” muttered a seventh year student touching his own wispy mustache.

End of dialogue set.

Forty-fifth paragraph, second sentence.

“Oh that's nice.” said Sirius giving Harry a slight shove.

“Hey! I wanted to know what was going on.” said Harry defensively shoving Sirius back.

End of forty-fifth paragraph.

Letter from Sirius.

“Okay, I didn't know what the house was like, or I would have come and got you myself.” said Sirius.

Forty-sixth paragraph.

“Write longer letters, dammit.” said Harry.

Forty-seventh paragraph, second sentence.

“Well done!” clapped Fred.

“Good show, old chap.” said George clapping as well.

“Positively splendid, old boy.” said Fred.

End of forty-seventh paragraph.

“Well, you did misbehave, but you did do good work!” said Remus quickly when Harry glared.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Oh, sure, I put your letters in a special place and you crush mine.” said Sirius folding his arms and pouting.
“Hey, I'm an angst ridden adolescent, I'm excused.” said Harry with a smirk.

Dialogue line.

“The Minister and his office is doing everything they can to get poor wittle me expelled.” said Harry in a cutesy voice.

Forty-eighth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Trying to assassinate the boy.” said Moody.

Dialogue line.

Forty-ninth paragraph, third sentence.

“You just needed a good night's rest.” said Mrs. Weasley worriedly.

“What's that again?” asked Harry.

“I think it's when you have pleasant dreams and sleep straight through the night.” said Sirius. “I don't remember myself, it's been so long.”

End of forty-ninth paragraph.

Dialogue set, third sentence.

“How would they know if there were any or not, they could just randomly show up.” said a first year Slytherin.

End of dialogue set.

“As far as you know.” said Bathilda Bagshot.
“No, the Ministry had some control over them, more's the pity.” said Dumbledore looking at Umbridge with a furious glare.

“Being in the same room as them, I swear I lose a hundred I.Q points.” said Harry.

“How stupid do you have to be to hide out in your friends or family member's house when you're on the run.” said Draco.

“You'd be amazed.” said the Rangers, the Aurors, and Officer McFinn.

“I didn't think the Ministry would be so...well...” said Harry, he sent a fleeting look over to Madam Bones and Kingsley.

“Finish it.” said Madam Bones with a nod.

“Stupid or sadistic.” finished Harry.
Snorts erupted from around the room.

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, first sentence.

“Jackass.” muttered Remus.

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

Fifty-third paragraph, first sentence, second comma.

“A wide-screen, in the kitchen?” said Colin.

“What the heck?” said Dennis.

End of fifty-third paragraph.

“It’s not your scar, but your actual head?” asked Sirius running his hand through Harry's hair.

“It was hot, I was tired.” said Harry.

Dialogue line.

Fifty-fourth paragraph, fourth sentence.

“Wow...” said a Dr. Clark shaking his head. “Imagine, she could pass for human.”

End of fifty-fourth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Fifty-fifth paragraph.

“She doesn’t seek you out to console you, but grasps her own son.” said Bill. “I can sort of understand, but still, it was your parents.”
“Poor Walrus baby.” said George.

“He'll never get that word right.” said Lee shaking his head.

“Don't notice that!” shrieked Lavender.

“Finally!” said the students.

“It's not a good thing at that point!” said McGonagall.

“Well why didn't you?” shrieked Mrs. McFinn. “We would have loved to have had him!”
“Not my fault.” said Harry.

Dialogue set, sixth sentence, second comma.
“Not my fault.” said Harry.

Dialogue set, sixth sentence, third comma.
“Neither is that.” said Harry.

Dialogue set, sixth sentence, fourth comma.
“Hagrid's fault.” said Harry.

Dialogue set, sixth sentence, first dash.
“I'll give you the Marge thing.” said Harry.

Dialogue set, eleventh sentence, first comma.
“Sirius settle down. You too Remus.” said Harry pulling the both of them back.

End of dialogue set.

Fifty-sixth paragraph.
“And you people thought I didn't listen to you.” said Harry.

Dialogue set, second sentence.
“Disgusting man.” said Professor Sprout.
“You liked eating,” muttered Harry. “And frankly, they'd send the cops out to find me and bring me back in about a few days.”

“Only rotten one is you.” said Leroy angrily.

“A letter for Petunia?” said Rudolph with a curious expression.

“I would say, what letter...but if it's a Howler...” said Tonks.

“Listen to the boy.” said Moody.

“Huh?” asked Fred.
“What the heck is that supposed to mean?” asked George.

Sixty-second paragraph.
Dialogue line.
Sixty-third paragraph.
Dialogue line.
Sixty-fourth paragraph.
Dialogue line.
Silence covered the Great Hall like a thick blanket.
“What the hell is going on?” asked Lee.

Dialogue line.
Dialogue line.
Dialogue line.
Dialogue line.
Dialogue set.
“She's a quick thinker...too bad her son didn't inherit that.” said Seamus.

Sixty-fifth paragraph.
Dialogue line.
Sixty-sixth paragraph.
Dialogue line.
“Wow, I'm lost.” said Padma.
“I despise that rule.” said McGonagall.

End of chapter.

“Whoa!” said Sirius. “Well, at least you didn’t leave the house and you got to go to your room and think.”

“I could barely sleep for two days.” said Harry. “Took me a while though.” Ended up getting sick quite a few times. thought Harry.

Sirius whimpered.

“That's the end of that.” said Officer McFinn.

“I think a spot of lunch would go over very nicely right now.” said Dumbledore waving his wand and summoning the table of food.

Harry picked his legs up and brought them to his chest.

“You alright Sport?” asked Officer McFinn.

“Just tired.” said Harry dully.

“We're halfway done.” said Officer McFinn. “And you'll be better for it.”

“How do you know?” asked Harry.

“I've seen the ending...” said the ghostly figure of Harry's surrogate father.

Chapter End Notes

Thanks for reading!
“Officer McFinn watched as everyone ate their lunches, fingering the book that he continued to hold.

“Aren't you going to eat?” asked a first year as he walked past.

“I don't need to.” said Officer McFinn with a smile. He waited till everyone settled back down and continued on.

“Third Chapter.”

“Advanced guard for what?” asked Neville.

Dialogue line.

First paragraph, first sentence.

“Man, you're desperate.” said Dean.

“Do you blame me?” said Harry.

“Not even a little bit.” said Dean.

First paragraph, fourth sentence.

“Get some rest.” said Sirius.

End of first paragraph.

Sirius, Remus and Dr. Clark tried to slyly run their hands through Harry's locks trying to find the bumps that were there so many months ago.

“I'm fine.” said Harry plainly. “Those lumps were gone months ago.”
“We were just trying to protect you...” muttered Dumbledore, his eyes downcast.

“You really know how to make a person feel guilty don't you?” said Remus.

“It's a gift of mine.” said Harry with a smirk.

“You are not having the best night.” said Sirius itching to rub his godson's toes and relieve them of the pain that was long gone.

“Oh she didn't like that tone one bit.” said Harry.

“Nice.” said Ron rubbing his hands.

“She even pecked me a few times.” said Sirius indignantly.

“Harry don't sic your pet on your friends.” said Remus dully.

“I'm amazed he's not screaming at me.” said Harry.

“I think he's afraid that Officer McFinn's going to attack him again.” said Sirius.

“Better believe it.” muttered Officer McFinn. Remus leaned further away from the man in the shaft of light.
“Not that you told her to peck us, but that you were irritable with her.” said Ron shaking his head.

“I'm more impressed that she stayed and waited for lengthy answers.” said Remus.

“So, he's on your side.” said Sirius looking at Harry. “Or he's still pussy footing around McFinn.”

“Yeah, that didn't happen.” said Harry.

“I could barely operate on auto-pilot.” said Harry.

“She didn't say a single word to me...and even if she did, I wouldn't have been able to do anything with that information.” said Harry.

“And Vernon would beat the snot of you.” said Sirius darkly.

“I couldn't bring myself to relax even for a little bit.” said Harry. “It was a bad summer.”

“Completely understandable.” said Remus with a small smile.
“They can't, you used magic to save your cousin and yourself.” said Chief Hawkeye.

“Oh they gave it their best shot.” said Madam Bones crossly.

“Even if I wasn't there sweetheart, you could still stay at my house.” said Mrs. McFinn. “You were a good enough boy with sense.”

Harry didn't mention that he had sought out Mrs. McFinn's house when the Dursleys got to be too much.

“Oh, hell yes, you would have moved in with me in a heartbeat.” said Sirius earnestly.

“Can you imagine the two of them living together by themselves?” said Tonks.

“Well, we know that Black would be well fed.” said Moody with a chuckle.

“We'd have filthy clothes though.” said Harry.

“He can't do laundry to save his life.” said Mrs. McFinn with a laugh.

“No, the Ministry would not be able to decide where you're to go...” said Lionus. “The executor of your parent's will would have the only authorization.”

“You'd be shocked, there was some paper work about Harry being placed in Ministry custody after his expulsion.” said Percy quietly.

“Never.” said Madam Bones with a slight smile.

End of thirteenth paragraph.
“Hagrid was scared of that place and Sirius looked awful after being there so long. I wasn’t all that keen on going.” said Harry.

Fourteenth paragraph, first sentence, third comma.

Sirius reached down and brought Harry’s legs up to lay across his lap.

“I’m fine.” said Harry.

“Just relax.” said Remus bringing a pillow onto his lap so Harry could be more comfortable.

End of fourteenth paragraph.

Tonks began to giggle.

“Why is she giggling?” asked a seventh year.

“No idea.” said his friend.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Harry wouldn’t want to go with you lot anyway.” said Fred.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Greedy bastard.” muttered Sirius.

Dialogue line.
“So why say all that if you were going to lock him in the room?” asked Ernie.

“I've broken out before.” said Harry. “Since my second year.”

“I've heard that sound quite a lot growing up.” said Harry.

“Okay, when I say during the summer you can just lounge around...try not to lie there like something that died.” said Sirius with a weak laugh.

“You mean that's not relaxing?” asked Harry innocently.

“So despite being in a stupor, you're still paying attention.” said Kingsley with his deep calm voice.

“Don't go down there! Call the police!” said Mrs. McFinn worriedly.

“There isn't a phone in my room, and it's not worth my life to go into Uncle Vernon and Aunt Petunia's room.” said Harry.

Dark mutterings fluttered across the Great Hall.
“Didn’t expect that to happen.” said Harry.

“Why not?” asked a third year student.

“No wizard has come to the Dursleys without me knowing about it before.” said Harry. “Well, not ones that didn’t come from the Order.”

“What the...what if they were Death Eaters?” said Sirius crossly.

“Then they weren't going to have me trapped in a small bedroom.” said Harry.

Sirius opened his mouth, but closed it again.

“I thought he was going to start hexing us.” whispered Tonks to Remus.

“It looked like it was a near thing.” said Kingsley.

Moody snorted with approval, “Don't blame you, especially since the last time you must have heard my voice was from the Death Eater trying to kill you.”

“Can't fault you their either.” said Moody.

The adults smiled approvingly towards the white-haired boy.
“You really couldn't find another way to put it?” said Sirius shaking his head.

“I didn't think it sounded that bad at the time.” said Remus covering his eyes with a rueful smile.

“Dramatic effect.” said Fred.

“You don't need to worry about me.” said Remus soothingly.

“To bad.” said Harry sleepily.

“You looked very confused.” said Remus looking down at Harry.

“Do you blame me?” he mumbled.

“That's me!” said Tonks excitedly, turning her bubble-gum pink hair into the same shade of violet.

“That sounds like Mr. Shacklebolt.” said a first year Hufflepuff.
“Wow, no wonder Harry said he was getting tired of hearing that all the time.” said Ron.

“Come on, who else could have Harry's dashing good looks.” said Rudolph leaning over and tapping Harry's nose slightly.

Harry, who was on his way to slumber land, swatted the hand away lightly. “Bug off.”

“Good question to ask, not many people would have seen what it looked like.” said Lionus.

“I thought you said you had a halter.” said Tonks.

“I do, but I didn't have the halter on.” said Harry sleepily.

“Then he'd get one hell of a hot seat.” said Nightstrike with a laugh.

People turned and stared at Moody, as several shifted slightly in their seats.
“Doesn't stop me from doing it.” giggled Tonks.

“I can't think of the last time that you saying 'fine' would have been a true statement.” said McGonagall.

“It was painful trying to brush it later.” said Harry jerking awake. Remus had accidentally shifted and Harry's cheek smacked into his boney knee.

“So there wasn't a competition?” asked a third year Gryffindor.

“Good, serves them right.” said her friend.

“Best get Harry out of there quickly then.” said Officer McFinn.

Everyone turned and looked at Harry intently. He was worried about what was going to happen.
when his uncle got home?

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“I could use a little R and R.” said Harry with a smile as he sat up.

“R and R?” asked Sirius.

“Rest and Relaxation.” said Harry.

“You're right, you do need that.” said Sirius.

Dialogue set.

“I could have helped.” said Harry pouting slightly.

Thirty-fifth paragraph.

“Yet they make you do all the cooking.” said Ginny.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Tonks frowned and glared at the book.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“You're mother thought it was a perfectly lovely name.” said Dumbledore.
“You keep getting introduced to him.” said a first year Slytherin.

“People really wanted to meet you.” said Remus.

“Everything varies in it's own way.” said Harry sagely.
“Not there!” said Sirius.

“Too bad we ate.” said George holding his stomach.

“Tell me they didn't tell the Dursleys their cup was used for that!” said Lee laughing loudly.

“Wouldn't matter, Aunt Petunia sterilizes everything.” said Harry.

“Uh...” said Sirius.

“Yeah...” said Bill.

“What?” asked Tonks.

“Maybe a bloke should have went to go help.” said Charlie.

“Oh it was fine!” said Tonks.

Harry blushed.

Fortieth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Forty-first paragraph.

“See! It was fine!” said Tonks.

“How is that fine?” asked Neville.

“My room is worse.” said Tonks with a shrug.

Forty-second paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“I thought it looked interesting.” said Harry.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

“Must've shocked the hell out of you.” said Sirius with a laugh.

Dialogue set.

“One of the only things you got top marks in.” said Moody with a smirk.
“Magical occupation anyway,” said Harry.

“Only a little.” said George.

“This ribbon helps a lot.” said Harry pointing to the red ribbon around his head.

Moody groaned and rubbed his natural eye. “The boy was in this mess, because he used magic there, and what do you do?”

“We might need to work on that spell.” said Professor Flitwick with a kind smile.
Sirius smiled broadly.

“Yeah, that's embarrassing.” said Hannah.

“Us too.” said Fred and George holding their stomachs.

“They made it beep and jumped back about a foot.” said Remus with a chuckle.

“Shut up, Lupin.” said Kingsley with a frown.

“They call me nosy.” said Harry with a smirk.

“You a licker, dabber, or waxer?” asked Dr. Clark with a smile.

“He's a licker.” said Sirius with a laugh.

“Shut it.” said Remus smacking his friend with a pillow.
“They won’t” said Dean.

“Yeah, they won't be happy to hear that.” said Charlie.

“You should have asked about that!” hissed Sirius.

“Yeah, exactly, what is that?” asked Dennis.

“Why are you looking there?” asked Ron.

Tonks turned pink, even her hair turned even more of a blushing pink. “I didn't mean to...”

“Awesome! That sounds like a great ability!” said a first year excitedly.
“Beggars can't be choosers.” said Hagrid with a smile.

“Oh, that'll be a reassuring thought.” said Mr. Weasley.

“I didn't want anyone getting hurt 'cause of me.” said Harry.

“And what's stopping the Death Eaters from catching up and killing him?” asked Terry.

“He's riding a Firebolt.” said Angelina.

“Oh, yeah.” said Terry.

“Don't tell me that, or I'm not going to go with the plan.” said Harry.

“Kinda easy to see that Harry's best times are in the air.” said Alicia.
“I'm starting to think that Harry's animagus form would be something with wings.” said Fred in whisper.

“It's freezing though when you're flying about.” said Charlie.

“What made you laugh?” asked a fourth year Ravenclaw.

“I wasn't there to get yelled at for something I didn't do.” said Harry.

Several students screwed up their faces in anger.

Dumbledore closed his eyes in regret.

“I had the flu for two days after this whole flight.” muttered Diggle.

Sirius turned to glare at Remus.

“I couldn't get my cloak off, fly and keep watch at the same time!” said Remus.
Dr. Clark whimpered, “Please don't relive that game.”

"Man, you were freezing." said Remus picking up the phoenix blanket and draped it over the white haired youth.

“Don't even think it! Harry's already going to catch his death of cold!” said Mrs. McFinn and Mrs. Weasley.

“Good, take charge Remus." said Bathilda Bagshot.

“He was afraid he was going to lose a finger.” said Ron with a laugh.

“Wow, nice neighborhood.” said Ernie.

Dumbledore looked fearful at the book, if this book said where their Headquarters was...
Kingsley and Tonks laughed quietly. Not even the veteran Auror was immune to freezing.

“Really didn't want anyone to come out and take us by surprise.” said Emmeline Vance.

Members of the Order leaned forward, how were they going to hide the information from the entire school? Was it going to be blocked out because it wasn't written by Dumbledore, or was it going to be read aloud anyway?

The Order and the teens that were at the house during the summer cringed horribly. They heard the address loud and clear.

“Hey, what the heck was that loud beeping?” asked a student sticking their fingers in their ears.

“Yeah, I couldn't hear the end part.” said another student.

The Order, Weasleys and Hermione looked around in shock. Apparently, no one heard the address, yet they heard it just fine.

“That's nuts...” said Ron.

“At least the Order doesn't have to move.” said Hermione.

“Too bad it doesn't, Night's Rest sounds awesome.” said Ron with a slight pout.
Thanks for reading, please.
The members of the Order heaved a large sigh, thankfully (as it seemed to be) nothing of their more sensitive information was going to be revealed.

Officer McFinn only smirked to himself, he knew everything that was going to happen but he could understand why they wouldn't want that address being announced to the entire school. It took a lot of his strength, but he was able to bleep out the address, he wouldn't be able to withhold much, but he could at least protect the headquarters' location.

He didn't even read the next chapter's title.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Oh, this chapter is going to hurt.” moaned Harry.

“Are you okay, Sport?” asked Dr. Clark.

“I'm...sort of a...” said Harry.

“He's going to yell a lot.” said Officer McFinn.

Harry blushed. “Uh...Off...”

“You can't sit over here.” said Officer McFinn, he obviously wanted the boy to sit beside him, but Harry would have to let him go again, and if they got as close as they used to be again, it's only going to hurt him.

Harry looked crestfallen.

“C'mere, you can sit by me.” said Sirius pulling Harry towards himself. Then he wrapped his arms around his godson, holding him close. “He doesn't want to hurt you when he leaves.” he added wisely.

“I don't care.” mumbled Harry.

“I do...you don't need to be any more depressed.” said Sirius kissing the top of Harry's head.
“There's that beeping again.” said Neville.

“Get used to it.” said Officer McFinn trying to keep his voice from breaking from the strain.

Umbridge swore under her breath. Finally something interesting, and it was being withheld from her.

“Bless them.” said Mr. Weasley with a bright smile.

“Beats the heck out of a key, I suppose.” said Dr. Clark.

“Then why take him there, if it's dangerous.” said Mrs. McFinn, reaching over and touching Harry's knee.

“I was fine.” said Harry with a slight smile.

“I'm starting to not believe that.” said Mrs. McFinn looking suspiciously over to the rest of the school. “You are in so much danger in this world...”

“But...I can defend myself here.” said Harry.

“You shouldn't have to, sweetie, they're the adults, they should baby-proof the entire place before letting kids in there.” said Mrs. McFinn.

“Baby-proof?” said Ron.

Fifth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Sixth paragraph, first sentence, first semi-colon.

“It works just fine with a light tap, Alastor.” said Professor McGonagall sharply.

End of sixth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Why tell the adults to stay put?” asked Alicia.

The members of the Order that were there, turned and stared at Tonks.

Seventh paragraph, first sentence.

“In a way, we were.” said Harry before anyone could speak.

“Why say that?” asked Dumbledore.

“Sirius was going nuts in there.” said Harry pointing his thumb to his godfather.

Sirius blinked. “I wasn't dying.”

“From the way you sounded...you kind of were.” said Harry.

End of seventh paragraph.

“Harry...” said Justin.

“Yeah?” asked Harry.

“Did you get captured by Death Eaters?” asked Justin.

“No.” said Harry simply.
Eighth paragraph.

Mrs. Weasley blushed.

“I told you, and you didn't believe me.” said Mr. Weasley worriedly.

“N-Nonsense.” said Mrs. Weasley.

“Sweetheart...” said Mr. Weasley clasping his wife's hand. “You needed to take a break.”

Dialogue set, second sentence.

“I swear, she takes lessons from Hagrid, I'll never need a chiropractor with those two in my life.” said Harry.

Dialogue set, third sentence, first comma.

“You need feeding up all the time.” said Sirius with a laugh.

End of dialogue set.

Ninth paragraph.

“Who arrived?” asked Colin.

“What meeting?” asked Dennis.

“None of your business.” said Moody shortly.

Tenth paragraph.

“You aren't invited to those.” said Snape snidely.

“I didn't know where I was supposed to go.” said Harry.
“I hate that.” said Harry.

“Harry, remember what we talked about.” said Mrs. McFinn.

“You're too young to hate anything.” said Officer McFinn. “This Voldemort guy is one thing, but anything less, not worth hating.”

“I wish it was a door.” said Sirius rolling his eyes.

“Story goes that my father had killed that troll, I found out he had just bought that leg in Diagon Alley.” said Sirius with a snicker.

The students looked amongst themselves. Was this place where Sirius Black grew up?

“Odd sense of décor.” said Luna plainly.

“My mother loved doing that, seemed to think it was only proper.” said Sirius with disgust. “Though, she wasn't the one that came up with that.”

“And Death Eater's have two relatives that also know about the house.” muttered Harry.

Remus opened his mouth but closed it...maybe they should have picked someplace with no Dark Wizard ties.
“Man, I'd be whacking out.” said Dean. “No one telling me anything.”

“You must have a lot of patience.” said Lavender.

Harry, Ron and Hermione snorted with laughter.

Fourteenth paragraph.

“We should have Gryfindored up the place.” said Sirius.

“Wasn't really any time.” said Remus.

Fifteenth paragraph, first sentence, first semi-colon, second comma.

“What the hell?” asked Ernie.

Fifteenth paragraph, second sentence, first comma.

“That would have been hilarious.” said Terry.

“You saw him knock over Officer McFinn.” said Justin.

End of fifteenth paragraph.

Dialogue set, fourth sentence.

“He's freezing.” said Dr. Clark.

Dialogue set, sixth sentence.

“You'd better believe it.” muttered Harry.

Dialogue set, seventh sentence, second dash.

“He had nothing to tell you, all the info had to come from your end.” said a third year Gryffindor.
“That wasn't the problem.” said Dumbledore.

“And you didn't even grow a millimeter.” said Ron with a roguish smile. “Still just a small little thing.”

Harry made to stand up and tackle the red head, but Dr. Clark caught him by his belt, nearly causing the now full grown teen to fall to the floor. “Down boy.” said Dr. Clark with a smile.

“She won't land on anyone else, besides Harry.” said Ron. “She'll peck the daylights out of anyone else, but she won't cuddle up to anyone but Harry.”

“Oh, she loves Dr. Clark.” said Harry. “Not a fan of Mrs. McFinn for some reason.”

A few girls smiled knowingly.

Remus looked over to Harry slowly.

“Should have thought of that before they sent me information lacking letters.” said Harry quietly with a shrug.

“Well, apparently you weren't writing the correct kind of letters.” said Neville who hadn’t’ heard Harry.

“She even pecked at me when I tried to hand her a letter.” said Sirius. “She wouldn't take it, and even chased Pigwidgeon away from it.”
“All I did was sic Hedwig on you.” said Harry.

“You just needed some quiet time sweetie.” cooed Mrs. McFinn.

“But...he had a bunch of quiet time.” said Ron. “Before he got there.”

“I think he needed some quiet time away from the Dursleys, you wouldn't believe how often he’d sit in his room at our house and just stare at the ceiling.” said Officer McFinn. “I called Sam once, he scared me so much.”

“You could almost hear the fuse starting to get down to the explosive.” said Hermione.

“You know Harry's pissed off...” said Fred.

“When Harry doesn't care if you're hurt or not.” said George.

Remus took a deep breath but expelled it slowly.

“He's was panicking Remus, I would do the same thing.” said Sirius quietly. “Being shut up with nothing, and everyone off elsewhere learning more than you...I'd be pissed.”

Dumbledore buried his face into his hands.
“Not the thing to say...” said Charlie.

“That's the point.” growled Moody.

“Not the time, Alastor.” said Dumbledore quietly.

“And you shouldn't have had to.” said Dumbledore darkly.

“He broke a few lamps, without touching them.” said Fred.

“Ouch.” said Bill.

“Don't blame him really.” said Charlie quietly. “If I was left at the Dursleys, I'd be a bit miffed too.”

“I had planned on you being sent for that week.” said Dumbledore softly.

“Sure he is, but the mood he's in, he doesn't give a dang about it.” said Lionus.
“She must have missed him terribly.” said Dr. Nicodemus with a smile.

“Knew we should have thrown in some fluffy things in there.” said Fred.
“Dash of color here and there.” said George.

Dumbledore covered his mouth to hide a smile.

Sirius looked over to Dumbledore. “Explains why he wanted to put Harry in that room.” he thought darkly.

“You don't ask the Headmaster why.” said Snape waspishly. Though, it is becoming more and more common as of late.

“He was not taking it well.” said Ron.
“And we didn't and couldn't blame you.” said Hermione quickly.

“Not one bit.” said the twins, Ginny, Ron and Hermione.

“Oh please, you can't intercept Hedwig, she won't let you.” said Dean.
“And if you do...and if Hedwig get's hurt...Harry'll kill you.” said Seamus.
“Start the countdown to the meltdown.” said Ginny with a slight smile to Harry.

“This won't be pretty.” said Harry cringing.

“T'm not sure telling him that would have boosted his morale.” said Dumbledore.

“Oh trust us, we found that out really quick.” said Ron.

“I trust you, it's just...I couldn't trust Voldemort.” said Dumbledore. To not use you against me.

“You can take care of yourself better than any other teenager I know.” said Dumbledore.

“They weren't in on anything.” said Mrs. Weasley quickly. “None of them were.”

“Hit the dirt!” shouted the twins, Ron, Seamus and Dean.
“Woah...this is a side of Harry we've never seen.” said a seventh year Gryffindor.

Twenty-fifth paragraph.

“If you're frightened, you fly away.” said Ron groaning.

Dialogue set.

Twenty-sixth paragraph.

“We had never seen him that pissed before.” said Ron.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Whoa Nelly, Harry...we're going to have a nice, relaxing vacation this summer...no freaking out.” said Leroy.

“Right in front of the pool, or in your lounge.” said Sirius.

“He's got his own lounge?” asked Blaise in shock.

“He's got his own kitchen as well.” said Dr. Clark.

Draco pouted slightly.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Twenty-seventh paragraph.

“I'm amazed we didn't hear any of that.” said Tonks.
“Acck! Answer him! Answer him!” said Fred.
“Before he starts yelling again!” said George.

“You are getting a stress reliever for Christmas.” said Remus.
“Him and you both.” said Sirius.

“He can be as bad as mum.” said Bill quietly.

“Everything we can.” said Sirius.

“He looked ready to explode again.” said Hermione.
“Well of course! The meetings aren't for you children!” said Mrs. Weasley.

“The Ministry wasn't taking any evidence against any Death Eaters, so all we could do was keep tabs on them and stop them before they could cause any harm, whether it be malicious or mischievous.” said Dumbledore.

“Knew that conversations should just stay in the meeting, not out.” said Mrs. Weasley shortly.

“Well, I suppose that also could be true.” said Remus.

“Why don't you two just lay low for the next few hours...let him get in a nap or two.” said George.

“Or forty.” said Fred.

Harry blushed.

“Something is not right.” said Tonks.

“I've heard that from somewhere.” said Hermione.
“cough*Madeline*cough” coughed Harry.

Thirtieth paragraph.

“He'll go up on the wardrobe if the twins show up?” asked Terry.

“They tried using him for an experiment once.” said Ron.

Charlie went behind the twins and smacked them sharply on the back of their heads. “If I ever catch you or hear of you doing that again....”

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Are you two mad?” asked Bill.

“We find that if he's not mad at us, humor from us diffuses the situation.” said Fred.

Dialogue line.

“We didn't hear you...though we did enchant the kitchen so you couldn't really hear anything going out, perhaps we made it so you couldn't hear in.” said Diggle.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“They were the best that the test taker had seen in about five years.” said Mr. Weasley proudly.

“They never talk about that little praise though.”

“We'd sound like Percy.” said Fred.

“Something we've sworn never to do.” said George.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

“I knew that you've kept some from me!” said Mrs. Weasley.

“How come we haven't heard anything about them?” asked a first year.
“Cause they aren't for sale yet.” said George.

“Or if ever.” said Fred.

“We need to keep some things to ourselves.” said George.

“You guys did try to sell a few of them.” said Hermione.

“That was only on the train, we opted not to sell them once we rounded up some potential buyers.” said Fred.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Thirty-first paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Harry blushed.

Thirty-second paragraph.

“Just in case.” said Mrs. Weasley smugly.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, first sentence.

“Didn't want them to waste their time trying to sneak information.” said Tonks sheepishly.

End of dialogue set.

Thirty-third paragraph.

“Old?” said Snape quietly.

“No older than I am.” said Sirius hurtfully to the twins.

“Dear lord I'm ancient then.” said Snape with a sneer. Sirius scowled over to the Potions Master.

Dialogue line.
“My attitude towards you brats hadn't changed.” said Snape quietly.

“Doesn't help your side at all.” said Remus.

“Normally does, we pretty much go with whatever your view is.” said Ron to his oldest brother.

“Thank Merlin.” said Charlie. “Just hearing about you yelling is frightening.”

Bill blushed, while Charlie smirked over to his brother.

Bill blushed furiously as the rest of the students stared.

“The more allies we have the better.” said Dumbledore.
“Oh...this is going to be a touchy subject.” said Charlie.

“Wow, what happened?” asked a second year Ravenclaw.

“Something that pissed the entire family off.” said Bill.

“Not even Great Auntie-Muriel would speak to him.” said Ginny. “And if you want to be influential and wealthy, she's not the person to piss off.”

“Found that out.” said Percy quietly. “Though.. I did notice that money was taken out of my account every month...where did that go? I asked the goblins, but they just looked at me like I was stupid.”

“That would be you paying your own payment to Harry's family vault.” said Mr. Weasley. “Aunt Muriel paid for me, because of my large family. She loves me, though she won't admit it.”

“I was paying the debt off? The debt that our ancestor accumulated?” said Percy in shock.

“Funny thing is, doesn't matter if you guys expel Harry or not...or kill him and us off, you still pay.” said Rudolph with a snicker. “You'll be paying into a fund for Hogwarts or St. Mungos for the rest of time.”

“Why St. Mungos?” asked Ernie.

“We own the buildings.” said Rudolph. “We fund the hospitals.”

The school stared.

“That's not all we own...and there's not enough hours in the day to list them all.” said Rudolph. “We have a lot of fingers in a lot of pies.”

“Than that Healer they interviewed was a complete career suicidal idiot.” said Ron.

“Oh, he was fired soon after Mother found out who spoke.” said Rudolph with a smirk. “She despises backstabbers. Problem is, I've got a family riddled with them.”

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

George posed with a hand on his hip. “I am not ugly!”

“Yes you are.” said Fred.

“We look the same.” said George.

“I am not ugly!” said Fred looking over to Harry.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“You argue with Dad and you aren't Mum...you can turn the whole family against you in less than a few minutes.” said Charlie.

“And all his work friends too.” said Bill.

Dialogue line.

“And the stupid fool couldn't see through that.” said Moody shaking his head.

Dialogue line.

Thirty-seventh paragraph.

Percy blushed.

Dialogue set.

“And hindsight is twenty-twenty. Someone with experience should have been looking out for Mr. Crouch as well.” said Madam Bones.

Dialogue line.
“I was already traumatized, didn't want anymore yelling,” said Ron.

“He's stupid if he thinks that.” said Hannah.

Hannah turned and stared.

“You're stupid after you yell a lot, try it out.” said Harry with a smile.

“Nice save.” said Sirius with a chuckle.

“Paranoid nutter.” said Officer McFinn shaking his head.

Fudge glared at the ghostly reader, though...picking a fight with a deceased man, and a very beloved by everyone, (though they had never met him in living person) deceased man...would not go over well.

“Stupid fools, why would an old man cause trouble?” asked Dr. Nicodemus.

Chief Hawkeye glared fiercely at the Minister.

“It's his obsession that makes him the authority on Muggles in the Ministry.” said Moody.
“Oh...it wasn't pretty.” said Bill.

Charlie snarled over to his younger brother. “Dad has an awesome reputation. It's your lousy attitude and snob like demeanor that keeps people away!”

Percy looked down at the ground.

“Money isn't everything.” said Remus wisely.

“You had the best life, and it didn't involve lots of gold in the vault.” said Sirius.

“Ginny wouldn't write back to me when I would write to her.” said Percy.

“You didn't deserve my correspondence.” said Ginny firmly.

“And thus, he cut all ties with his brothers and sister.” said Bill crossing his legs.

“I sent him a Howler, daily.” said Charlie. “So did Bill.”

“'Traitors to the Ministry'?” said Nightstrike.
“Words cannot even begin to describe his idiocy.” said Tempest sternly.

Dialogue set, end of fourth sentence.

“Thus he pays for his own debt. Speaking of which, good luck trying to convince Aunt Muriel to take on the debt again.” said Mr. Weasley.

“Can't y....” said Percy.

“Has to come from you, you have to apologize to her, to me, your mother and everyone else in the family.” said Mr. Weasley.

“Why the whole family?” asked Percy.

“For embarrassing the family.” said Mr. Weasley. “Aunt Muriel's different that way.”

End of dialogue set.

Fortieth paragraph.

“Didn't know he could be that stupid.” said Harry shaking his head.

Dialogue set.

“You horrible, ungrateful little beast.” chastised Bathilda Bagshot to Percy. “They went without so much to make sure you children were well taken care of, gave you all the love they had and you couldn't reciprocate their love!”

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Wasn't the only thing he said.” said George.

“Percy even took the route that maybe they'd have more money if it wasn't wasted on you, Harry.” said Fred with a dark look towards Percy.

“Then Dad dropped the bomb after the final insult was thrown at him.” said Ginny.

“I'm not proud of it, I never should have said that.” said Mr. Weasley.

“What was that?” asked Harry.

Ron cleared his throat and did an impression of his father. “Harry's twice the son you'll ever be!”
“Percy stormed out after that.” said George.

Harry blushed.

“Well, it's true...you've stood up for dad more than Percy ever has.” said Ginny ignoring the hurt look on her brother's face.

“That's enough, kids.” said Mrs. Weasley quietly.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“No more yelling, please no more yelling.” said Fred pleadingly.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Ooh...you guys were on pins and needles.” said Colin.

“You have no idea.” said the Weasley children and Hermione.

Dialogue line.

Forty-first paragraph.

“Don't tell him...I already want to go and hex them all.” said Remus cringing.

“Tell me.” said Leroy leaning forward in his seat menacingly.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Fired...every last...one of them.” said Leroy.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.
Rudolph closed his eyes and counted to himself.

Sad thing is, we believed them for a while.” said a seventh year Hufflepuff.

Leroy ground his teeth in fury.

“Say...one word....I dare you.” snarled Rudolph up to the Minister.

“And yet he was doing everything he could to get me to like him.” said Harry folding his arms.

“If they had reported that, they'd have to report that they might have been wrong, and they'll never do that.” said Tonks.
“I'll be right back.” said Leroy standing up suddenly and striding towards the door.

“Need me to come, sweetheart?” asked Rudolph turning around.

“I look ugly when I'm pissed, stay here.” said Leroy opening the door and slamming it behind him.

“I would not want to be the paper right now.” said Rudolph whistling.

They almost didn't.” said Harry. “The Minister I mean.” added Harry quickly looking over to Madam Bones.

“Ginerva!” scolded Mrs. Weasley.

“That was a first, normally it's Fred and George and Charlie that have to wash hands before dinner. Ginny is normally the cleanest.” said Ron.

“It was those Dungbombs.” said Ginny.

“It's been a stressful summer, no one can blame you for being quite upset.” said Dr. Clark.

“Yeah, at least he didn't start beating us.” said Ron.
Dumbledore hung his head in shame.

“Not even a little bit.” said Mrs. McFinn in shock.

“Have you seen any of these House-elf things yet?” asked Officer McFinn. “Not what I pictured elves to look like.”

“Hermione, it's SPEW.” said Tonks with a kind smile.

“Ronald!” scolded Mrs. Weasley.

“We're teenagers, Mrs. Weasley, we want to know things that aren't our business.” said Harry with a smile.
“So would every other student here.” muttered Flitwick to Professor Sprout.

“Don't want to hear his snide comments about mum's cooking.” said Ron.

“Your mother's cooking is the second best I have ever eaten.” said Snape plainly.

“Who tiptoes?” asked Harry.

“Just walk quietly. Take it careful.” said Harry with a shrug. “I used to tiptoe...”

“Why don't you ever throw that thing out?” asked Tonks.

“Cause I'm kind of fond of it.” said Sirius. “I used to pick Kreacher up and stuff him inside it whenever he would tell on me to my mother.”

“Oh trust me...she wasn't the one tortured when it came to living with her.” muttered Sirius.
“Should have set fire to those things.” said Sirius.

“Oh, she wasn't any more pleasant in real life than she was there.” said Sirius.

Harry turned to look at Sirius.

“Yes...I'm an inbred dog.” said Sirius.

“Explains the defects.” said Snape with a snicker.

“Feeling's mutual.” muttered Sirius.

The students stared.

“You're mum's a nutter.” said Lee.

“That's just her portrait, you should have seen the real thing.” said Sirius. “She's doting compared to the real thing.”
Sirius stretched and pulled Harry closer to himself. He was loving this, he was a free man, had his house back, and now had complete guardianship over his godson. Life was good again.

“Shall we start the next chapter?” asked Dumbledore. “Or should we pause and wait for Leroy to come back?”

Rudolph shook his head, “He's going to want to do a dramatic entrance, us waiting for it will ruin it for him.”

“Nice family.” said Lee.

“Oh trust me, looking at their faces everyday is a living hell, thank goodness some of them have curtains.” said Sirius darkly.

Dumbledore looked away.

“Don't you realize that it's his family house?” asked Zacharias.

“I just had a portrait scream at me...I'm allowed some leeway here.” said Harry.

“Besides, you would have fainted from the sight of that thing.” said Fred nastily.
Dialogue set.

Snape smirked to himself, but the students were confused.

“But...you're an awesome wizard right?” asked a first year.

“Yeah I'm awesome!” said Sirius brightly. (“Oh, no.” muttered Remus) “But...I had to stay safe.”

“Why?” asked the same first year.

Sirius said nothing, but looked over at Harry slowly. “It's for someone important.”

First paragraph, first sentence, second sentence.

Sirius muttered an apology. “I had a whole party planned, but then Snivellus had to come up and say he had new information.”

“I'm still wondering why dinner had to be that late in the evening.” said Harry.

First paragraph, end of first sentence.

“I can't hide anything from you, can I?” asked Sirius.

“That's what happens when you have kids, they notice everything.” said Harry with a smirk.

End of first paragraph.

Second paragraph, second sentence.

“Why not have the meeting somewhere else besides the kitchen?” asked Parvati.

“It's the only clean and warm room we had at the moment.” said Remus.

“So the kids have to play in the dirty and cold places in the house.” said Padma pointedly.

Mrs. Weasley looked down guiltily.

Sirius tossed his hands up. “I told them! The parlor is bigger!”

Second paragraph, third sentence, second comma.

“I keep telling you people, you need my mom in there to help Mrs. Weasley tidy up. They’d have the entire place spiffed up in no time.” said Tonks.
“Though you did look a pale...and sickly looking.” said Mr. Weasley with a guilty smile.

“He just needed a little tender loving care.” said Mrs. Weasley.

“Well, he's getting plenty of that.” said Sirius hugging Harry tightly.

“He'll be drowning in it once my mother gets a hold of him.” said Rudolph. “At least, after the formalities are out and done with. If she has her way, you aren't going to be able to escape bed rest for maybe twelve years.”

“It was fine, if you like hypothermia.” said Lee.

“If Tonks hadn't been there, he most likely would have.” said Remus.

“I'm such a klutz.” said Tonks burying her face in her hands.

“I think it's adorable.” muttered Remus, his pale face turning pink.

“It's so cute when you're in love.” said Sirius pinching Remus' cheeks.

“Don't make me bite you.” said Remus smacking Sirius' hand away.

“You sure she won't mind?” said Sirius teasingly.

“Harry's being nosy!” chanted the twins gleefully.
Fifth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“We would have...if you hadn't left before the meeting was even done with.” muttered Bill. “We're cleaning promptly at that moment.”

Sixth paragraph.

Dialogue set, first sentence.

“He looked exhausted.” said Sirius.

End of dialogue set.

Seventh paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“He's still trying to earn brownie points with me.” said Sirius.

“Why? So you don't beat him up for abandoning Harry?” asked Neville.

“He knew I was pissed and that I'd never forgive him, but he wants half the stuff in the house to sell.” said Sirius. “I told him he's not getting it, it's all going to Harry when I pass away.”

“What if you have kids?” asked Harry, not wishing to dwell on the mentioning of his godfather's death.

“That's the downside of inbreeding, your descendants become sterile after a while.” whispered Sirius. “You're the only kid I'll ever have, unless Remus makes me an Uncle again. But you'll be the only one getting my stuff.”

“What about Remus?” asked Harry.

“Oh he's getting a lot of money, he'll be set for life.” said Sirius.

“I keep telling you I don't want it.” said Remus softly.

“And I keep telling you, you're getting it.” said Sirius.

Eighth paragraph.

Dialogue line.
“No thanks to you.” growled Mrs. Weasley.

“Oh...not around the children.” said Mrs. McFinn.

“After she tore into him, he's been trying to keep on her good side.” said Ron with a snicker.

“Sad thing is, his favorite tobacco smells even worse.” smirked Sirius. “That one's at least a bit more acceptable.”

“Harry could have had it all done in an instant.” said Colin.

“Not really, I was still freezing.” said Harry.

“Oh...I'm sorry Harry dear. I should have sent you to bed with some soup.” said Mrs. Weasley.

“That would have been really nice.” said Harry with a smile. “But I would have missed out on all the fun.”

“She's broken the plates and cups several times that week.” smirked Sirius.
“I like helping...” said Tonks with a pout.
“You just don't do it very well.” said Moody with a chuckle.

“He remembers when Mrs. Figg beat him about the head.” said Harry with a smile.

“He's hoping you can put in a good word with Dumbledore.” said Bill.

“Crookshanks loves Sirius.” said Hermione. “He'll either sit on my lap, or Sirius'.”

“Are you kidding?” asked Dr. Clark.
“I meant besides the whole Dementor thing.” said Sirius.

“That was a massive understatement.” said Ron.

“I didn't know about what was going on there!” said Sirius quickly.
“Merlin, I sound like an idiot.” said Sirius shaking his head.

“I really sound like an idiot.” muttered Sirius.

“I did not say that, nor will I ever say that.” said Dumbledore.

Sirius looked down, “Well, I...it was me being locked up all that time that got me.” he muttered.

Dumbledore flinched.

“Man, it's like they're having a fight.” muttered Fred.

“And every time he says that, I have words with him.” said Dumbledore. “I tell him that you're staying safe for me.” said Dumbledore.

“And he never listens.” said Sirius muttering.

“Didn't look like anything had happened in this place.” said Harry.
“Which is sort of odd.” said Sirius. “Normally this place was about as clean as your Aunt's.”

“That sticky fingered...” muttered Mrs. Weasley.

“Oh sure, you give me stuff you don't want.” said Harry teasingly.

“Just because I don't like it, doesn't mean you don't get it, besides you can sell it all to increase your fortune.” said Sirius.

“Yeah, like I need any more money.” groaned Harry.

“So you think.” said Sirius with a dry chuckle.

“Hey...it doesn't mention that I tackled you away from the table.” said Sirius.

“Huh?” asked Dean.

“I leaped across the table and knocked Harry off his chair and away from the table.” said Sirius.

“Way to make yourself look like a superhero.” said Remus rolling his eyes.

“I think you should have waited to use that spell till you could actually do it with pinpoint accuracy, getting it within the same vicinity in a large room isn't enough.” said Flitwick, “Especially with a knife involved.”

End of sixteenth paragraph.

McGonagall shook her head exasperatedly.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

“Well, saving time is one thing, but almost stabbing someone is something completely different.” said McGonagall scolding both of the twins.

Seventeenth paragraph.

“Not a lot of pets like us.” said George looking at his twin.

“Gee, there's a shocker.” said Charlie rolling his eyes.

Dialogue line.

“If you all of a sudden wake up responsible, than Sirius is still sleeping.” said Remus with a laugh.

“That hurts.” said Sirius.

Dialogue set, second sentence.

“But I did keep turning my things into other stuff to entertain the younger ones.” said Bill.

Dialogue set, third sentence.

“But I did keep turning my things into other stuff to entertain the younger ones.” said Bill.
“I apparated everywhere until I got it down perfectly.” said Charlie quietly.

Mrs. Weasley looked at her two oldest.

“So we were just following the example set by our wonderful older brothers.” said George with a smile.

End of dialogue set.

Eighteenth paragraph.

Percy looked shamefully down at his shoes.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Her cooking always looks good.” said Harry with a smile.

Nineteenth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“She kept bringing up crap I don't care about.” muttering Sirius.

Dialogue line.

“Gee, that sounds like fun.” said Neville rolling his eyes.

Dialogue line.

“No, they heard it, but I've been giving them sarcasm all the time.” said Sirius.

Twentieth paragraph, second sentence, second comma.

Snape glared at Tonks but she only smirked back at him.
“It beats Mum telling us what has to be cleaned and her and Sirius arguing about Harry all the time.” said Ron.

Dialogue line.

“Well, I won't be doing that one anymore.” said Tonks.

Dialogue line.

“That decision won't last long.” said Lionus.

Dialogue set.

“But they have different views than we do, they might not give a damn about each other.” said Nightstrike.

Dialogue set.

“Yeah, but he doesn't deal in freedom, he's more of a tyrannical murderer.” said Harry tiredly.

Dialogue set.

“They've had enough on their plates, they didn't have time to deal with Ludo and his gambling problems.” said Madam Bones.

Dialogue set.

Several students laughed out loud.
“You have to admit, it's funny if it doesn't happen to you.” said Lionus with a smirk.

Dialogue set.

“Aside from Tonks, it's the only entertaining thing going on in the kitchen.” said Ginny.

Dialogue line.

“You never did have a clear view of right and wrong.” mumbled McGonagall.

Dialogue line.

“It was his mother, she was the best con artist the Ministry had ever seen.” said Sirius.

Twenty-fourth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“So what does that have to do with you?” asked Seamus.

“I let him in the house after he ditched you.” said Sirius, looking at Harry. “And I sort of said he could get food there. That was after I beat the snot out of him.”

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, third sentence.

“What did you do?” asked Colin.

“Unfortunately, that is between me, and Mr. Fletcher.” said Dumbledore with a smile. “Let us say...it wasn't nearly as bad as the past Head of Magical Law Enforcement said it was.”

End of dialogue set.

“He's lucky he's still walking, but I didn't want to say that to him.” said Sirius whispering to Dr. Clark.

“He's lucky he's still breathing.” muttered Dumbledore, hearing what Sirius said to Dr. Clark.
Mrs. Weasley smiled happily.

“It's about time some weight was put on you.” said Mrs. Weasley.

“But that much?” said Harry with a laugh.

“He loves chasing anything,” said Ginny.

“He did.” said the twins, Hermione, Ron and Ginny.

“We had told him time and time again that he couldn't tell you anything.” said Mrs. Weasley crossing her arms. Then a thought struck her: “Perhaps we should have the children here leave.”

“Not again, Mum.” said Ron groaning.

“They stay.” said Officer McFinn firmly. “Letting them go through life blindly won't help them in the slightest.”

“They're just children!” said Mrs. Weasley sharply.

“They're in danger, with this Riddle guy strutting around.” said Officer McFinn. “Any extra information will be appreciated.”

Mrs. Weasley glared at the man, “You don't have anything to worry about...” she threw a hand to her mouth. She had almost said something terrible, and she'd never forgive herself if she said something so low.

“I've got someone to worry about all the time. Both of them are sitting right over there.” said Officer McFinn, sensing where she was going. He pointed over to Mrs. McFinn and Harry. “You never stop worrying.”
“We had talked about this, time and time again.” said Remus tiredly. “And he had better stick to the script we had planned out.”

“Yeah!” said a few students.

“He's earned it!” said another student.

“Cause Harry's got Sirius wrapped around his finger.” said Angelina.

“But he's done a lot!” said Dennis.

“They're ganging up on us here.” said George to his brother Fred.

“Is my responsibility.” said Sirius plainly.

“But...he's Harry's godfather...who else really can call the shots with him?” said Alicia.

Sirius looked smug as Mrs. Weasley looked at the Gryffindor girl hard.

“Yeah...Sirius can tell Harry anything he wants.” said Justin.

“I hate it when other people decide on what I need to know.” said Harry rolling his eyes.

“We've had this conversation with Mum before, didn't know how this was going to unfold.” said Ginny.

“Exactly!” said Ernie.

“Did a lot more than most adults I know.” said Neville softly.

“I say he earned a lifetime membership.” said a first year.

“No one's asking you.” growled Snape.

“At least Sirius has a grip on reality.” said Dean.
“He may be a teenager, but he'll still be my baby.” said Mrs. McFinn stubbornly.

“I'll always be your baby.” said Harry reaching over and kissing Mrs. McFinn on the cheek.

“Suck up.” said Officer McFinn with a smirk.

“You're only jealous cause she likes me more.” said Harry automatically with a smirk as well.

Dialogue line.

A groan crawled across the Great Hall.

“That's low.” said Katie.

“That...that's not right.” said Lavender shaking her head.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

A gasp now took a hold of the hall.

“That went too far.” said a seventh year Gryffindor.

“Molly!” admonished McGonagall. “I realize that I am no longer your teacher, but you owe him an apology!”

“Well...” said Mrs. Weasley.

“Apologize.” said Dumbledore sternly.

“I'm...I'm sorry.” said Mrs. Weasley guiltily.

Sirius looked off to the side, he hadn't forgotten that little argument and he wasn't willing to forgive her just yet.

Dialogue line.

“Poor Harry, he's so starved for love that he doesn't care what he's loved as.” said Luna looking at Harry with a sympathetic look.

Harry blushed as Sirius looked at the Ravenclaw girl and then down to Harry in horror.

“I know you're you.” said Sirius worriedly.

Harry looked down.
“Adults responsible for me should remember that I don’t like being kept in the dark.” said Harry in a bored voice.

“Best I’ve ever had.” said Harry looking at Sirius with a smile.

“Best you’ll ever have.” said Sirius digging his fingers into Harry’s side, tickling him.

“Molly...don’t presume to understand my reasons to keep Sirius at home.” said Dumbledore looking at her sternly.

Mrs. Weasley looked ready to cry.

“Yeah, he’ll get into this fight, right after he plays tag with a dragon.” said Blaise.

“It’s not often that he disagrees with mum.” said Charlie.

“He never said that he’d answer everything he’s going to ask.” said a third year Slytherin.

“Better to hear it from allies, than tainted from the enemy.” said Harry wisely.
“You're not the only one.” said Sirius shortly.

“Me.” said Sirius, Hagrid, Remus, Dr. Clark, Dumbledore, Bill, Charlie, Mrs. McFinn, McGonagall, Flitwick, Sprout, Madam Pomfrey.

“And Us.” said Rudolph nodding to the empty spot beside him, “When we came back, we made a beeline for James' house.”

“And that's just the adults.” said Fred.

“The kids that are here, and including Officer McFinn, goes on a lot longer.” said George.

“Molly!” shouted Dumbledore.

Mrs. Weasley cringed and mouthed another apology.

“Don't pick the fight if you aren't prepared to get trashed.” said a fifth year Hufflepuff.

“And he's going to pick the road of information.” said a sixth year Slytherin.
"He's more laid back than I would have been." said a seventh year Ravenclaw.

"Laid back? Did you miss that shouting fest in the last chapter?" said Ron looking at the Ravenclaw student in shock.

"Don't doubt it." said Lee.

“What's stopping Harry from telling them when he's got all the information anyway?” asked Dean.

“She was losing.” said Padma.

“Oh, he'd tell you.” said a sixth year Slytherin.
Thirty-sixth paragraph, first sentence.

Ron turned and stared at his best mate, while everyone else turned and stared as well.

“Never mind then.” said the Slytherin looking at Harry in disbelief.

End of thirty-sixth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Dude, just once...be a complete and utter bastard.” said Zacharias. “You're too much of a goody two-shoes.”

“And if only you were a tenth of the nice guy Harry was, one percent of the time.” said George.

Dialogue line.

Thirty-seventh paragraph, first sentence.

“Not even remotely quiet.” said Bill with a laugh.

End of thirty-seventh paragraph.

“A lot of fuss over a little information.” said Dr. Clark.

“It wasn't even a lot of info.” said Harry.

Dialogue line.

Thirty-eighth paragraph.

Dialogue set.

“Well, he's not asking for anything really secretive...is he?” asked Dennis.

“Not really.” said Sirius. “In my opinion.”

Dialogue line.
“Which is handy.” said Dr. Clark. “You wouldn't want to be less informed than him.”

“How did he mess it up?” asked a first year Gryffindor.

“Wait for it and he'll tell you.” said Remus pointing to Officer McFinn.

“Other than escaping, I didn't do anything.” said Harry.

“You made sure he was the first person you told!” said Hannah.

“And he's a real powerhouse.” said Ginny.

“So if Harry had never made it back alive?” asked Zacharias.

“My time would have been spent trying to find Harry, and if I had found his body...” said Dumbledore faintly, the old man's body shuddered slightly.

“I wouldn't want to be You-Know-Who.” said Sirius. “After I personally got through with him.”

Snape rolled his eyes.
“Well, that doesn't answer anything.” said Ernie.

“He wants to take over the Ministry.” said Dumbledore.

“And you were just going to sit back and let him.” said Ron looking up at the Minister of Magic.

“But that's not his ultimate goal.” said Harry thoughtfully.

“What's his goal.” said Sirius.

“I'm thinking...he wants to get control of this place.” said Harry looking around at the Great Hall.

“If he loved this place as much as I think he does, he'll do anything to get back here, and with Dumbledore here and anyone else that disagrees with him, that won't be easy.”

People looked at Harry in wonder.

“And some people are just indescribable pieces of garbage that they had joined him already.” said Sirius.

“Delusional dimwit.” said Tempest shaking her head.
“Cause he's always been that stupid.” said Ron.

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Strange how the people taking advantage of others in the worse way, seem to fear you.” said Chief Hawkeye.

“And yet, I seem to be guilty of taking advantage of others as well.” thought Dumbledore as he looked at Harry out of the corner of his eye.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Stupid fool.” said Tempest.

“Yeah,” said Nightstrike agreeing with his comrade. “He could have that job at any time, he doesn't need Voldemort to come back to life to get it.”

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

“I will never take that position.” said Dumbledore firmly.

Dialogue set, first sentence.

“Even up to that day he was asking for advice from Albus.” said Flitwick looking sternly over to the Minister.

Dialogue set, second sentence.

“Not that confident.” said Flitwick.
“The man is certifiable.” said Dr. Nicodemus.

“Harry's never lied to him, and he's never tried to jump up and ask for special favors!” said Ron.

“It's easier to believe a lie, than the harsh truth, but it could end in disaster if you take that delusional path.” said Bathilda Bagshot.

“I wonder if Leroy ready and up to hear that at the Daily Prophet?” said Rudolph with a faint smile.

“If anyone has been Imperiused, you're paying them restitution.” said Chief Hawkeye angrily to the Minister, “Not the Ministry, you personally.”

“Aww...it's so cute when you think we aren't doing jack to try and spread the word.” said Sirius pinching his godson's cheek.

“Get off me.” said Harry pushing Sirius away from him. “You really like pinching people today.”

“Maybe, cause I think you're both so cute!” he said in a falsetto voice while pinching both Harry and Remus' cheeks.

“Keep it up and I'll be pinching your cheek with my fist.” growled Remus.
“Maybe if you start screaming that your Master is back, and alive...maybe they'll believe it then.” said Luna.

Sirius opened his mouth and then closed it. “You know, I never thought of that. He wouldn't have been able to backtrack on it.”

Dialogue line.

“Only if they know, you don't have to tell them anything.” said Dennis.

“Yeah, but Remus is an honest bloke.” said Fred.

“Shame really.” said George.

Dialogue set.

“Yeah, one of his Death Eaters pretty much has his way with the Minister's office.” said Fred.

“What bugs the hell out of me, is that Percy threw in his lot with the Malfoy family.” said George glaring at his older brother.

Percy stammered and sputtered that he didn't.

“The Minister and Malfoy are tight,” said Ginny. “so...”

“Kids...he's apologized.” said Mr. Weasley.

“He's still got to make it up to us.” said the Weasley children.

Dialogue set.

“Freezing my tail off.” said Sirius.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, second sentence.

“Not really.” said Harry.
“Quite a lot of the Wizards and Witches I served with want me back, they've even taken to voting out the Ministry wizards that kicked me out.” said Dumbledore with a fond smile.

“Nothing really fazes you, Albus.” said Bathilda with a smile.

“Ah, Batty, we are getting older, and our lives are coming to a close, reputations aren't nearly as important as they used to be.” said Dumbledore with a smile.

“But Dumbledore would be out in a matter of moments.” said Colin with a smile.

“And no one wants that.” said Hannah.

“What made you so desperate?” asked Ernie.

“I don’t’ like being labeled a liar.” said Harry fiercely.

“So, it's hard to tell...if our own parents are Death Eaters?” said a second year Gryffindor.

“I don't think I'm going to be writing home what's going on here anymore.” said another student worriedly.
He thought he saw Sirius and Lupin exchange the most fleeting of looks. He must have asked the million galleon question.” said Lee.

The complete prophecy. Thought Dumbledore.

“Well, he still didn't get any real info.” said Cho.

“Don't know what she's so upset over, they didn't learn a single thing.” said Katie.

“Don't test her.” said Charlie.

“What info?” asked Parvati.
“All they got out of that was that You-Know-Who was trying to recruit people, and that the Ministry was being idiots!” said Padma.

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Forty-third paragraph.

“I want you to live your life, live a little before you're ready to sacrifice it for the next generation.” said Remus.

“You're the generation we give everything to save.” said Sirius holding Harry close.

Dialogue set.

“You didn't say anything!” said Dean.

End of chapter.

“You looked tired anyway, best let you get some sleep.” said Sirius soothingly.

“Why didn't you ever take me aside and tell me what was going on later on?” asked Harry.

“Molly made sure she was around you at all times.” said Sirius in a whisper. “She had the same thought it seemed.”

Chapter End Notes

Thanks for reading, please review!
“One more, and then it's dinnertime.” said Officer McFinn with a smile.

“Hey! Isn't Bonfire Night tomorrow?”

“I believe so, I would say we'll read tomorrow morning, but we need to prepare for the celebrations tomorrow.” said Dumbledore with a smile.

First paragraph.

Dialogue set, first sentence.

“Yes Warden.” said Nightstike sourly. “What the hell kind of summer vacation is this?”

“Worst one yet.” said Harry. “It was like we were being punished for something we didn't do and something we couldn't control.”

Mrs. Weasley looked down shamefully.

End of dialogue set.

“Yeah, right.” said most of the school. “She's not going to be asleep when you get there.”

Dialogue set.

“We talked for a long time.” said Hermione quietly.

Mrs. Weasley sent a scolding look over to her daughter.

“Dear, it was a pipe dream that she wouldn't tell Ginny.” said Mr. Weasley.
“That makes me think they're not going to go to bed.” said Angelina.

“You wound us!” said Fred.

“How come you don't trust us?” asked George.

“Cause you're you.” said Alicia.

“Ah, well...” said Fred.

“We can't argue with that.” said George shrugging.

Second paragraph, third sentence.

“That makes me think they're not going to go to bed.” said Angelina.

“You wound us!” said Fred.

“How come you don't trust us?” asked George.

“Cause you're you.” said Alicia.

“Ah, well...” said Fred.

“We can't argue with that.” said George shrugging.

Second paragraph, third sentence.

“That makes me think they're not going to go to bed.” said Angelina.

“You wound us!” said Fred.

“How come you don't trust us?” asked George.

“Cause you're you.” said Alicia.

“Ah, well...” said Fred.

“We can't argue with that.” said George shrugging.

Second paragraph, fourth sentence, first comma, tenth word.

“I don't know, they felt alright to me.” said Ron.

“You didn't just fly through a cloud.” said Harry.

“I don't think it's that, it was also really warm, the others weren't still shivering.” said Hermione.

“Perhaps the Dementors left behind something when they visited him at home.” said Tempest thoughtfully.

“They did.” said Dr. Nicodemus. “And I've already taken care of that.”

“What was it.” asked Lionus.

“Dementitus.” said Dr. Nicodemus.

Chief Hawkeye whistled. “Well, he's young, if he was older, he wouldn't have lasted as long as he did.”

“What?” asked Sirius anxiously.

“Nothing to be worried about anymore, he just would have felt the falling temperatures a little more than anyone else.” said Dr. Nicodemus.

End of second paragraph.

“They must be bored.” said Charlie.

Dialogue set, second sentence.

“Two owls aren't going to hurt anything.” said Lionus. “Perhaps Hedwig being a Snowy Owl, but other than that...”
“Had me worried there for a moment.” said Harry. “I thought he didn't trust someone.”

“He started tossing my things, saying they didn't deserve to even be in the Black family fireplace.” said Ron.

“Reckon what?” asked Dennis.

“The weapon thing!” said Colin.

“Never.” said Ron.

“You already have.” said Hermione with a giggle.

“Don't land on me and I won't yell.” said Ron.
“Bull, you didn't care where you apparated.” said Ron.

“No one believes us anymore.” said George wiping crocodile tears away from his eyes.

“My question is, why were you apparating in the dark before this?” asked Mr. Weasley.

“Well, uh...” said Fred.

“Yeah...nevermind dad.” said George.

“Oh for the love of Merlin.” said Bill.

“Brother dear,” said Fred.

“You really should get your mind out of the gutter.” said George.

Eighth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Everything else we knew and could figure out, that little bit was new to us.” said Fred.

“But not really worth the screaming match that happened.” said a seventh year Slytherin.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“There's a few that's worse.” said Officer McFinn sagely.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Ninth paragraph.

“Not really, we were thinking about that and what you've been through.” said Fred.

Dialogue line.
“I would not do that again.” said Dumbledore.

“I've never pissed her off.” said Harry. “And I don't plan on doing so.”

“That's really sad.” said Luna. “Working so hard to keep her children ignorant of dangers...sort of like what the Ministry was doing...only you were being kind.”

Mrs. Weasley opened her mouth, but closed it.

“Yeah...that was Remus and me going to bed, I conned him into spending the night.” said Sirius. “Told him he'd get a nice hot breakfast before he went out for the day tomorrow.”

“What the...?” asked Bill.

“He's dreaming.” said Ginny.
Thirteenth paragraph.

Dialogue set.

“That's what you want to hear right away in the morning.” said Lee.

“She should have faked sick, she'd of let me sleep.” said Harry.

“Don't even say you wouldn't mum, you'd let Harry get away with breakfast in bed and twenty-four hour bed rest.” said Charlie.

Fourteenth paragraph, second sentence.

“That sounds like a great place to spend your holidays.” said Dr. Clark shaking his head.

“It's no better when it's clean.” said Sirius.

End of fourteenth paragraph.

“Like they were going to go and rob a bank.” said Harry with a snicker.

Dialogue set.

“I don't even want to know...just wandering around and muttering to that painting of my mother.” said Sirius.

Fifteenth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Kreacher is still in his prime.” said Dumbledore. “He just had no one to look after for so long.”

“Dang...how long do house-elves live?” asked Dean.

Dialogue set, second sentence.

“And here I thought you were having a snack.” said Harry with a smirk.

“Don't make me tickle you.” said Sirius digging his fingers into his godson's side.

Dialogue est, third sentence.

“She hated animals.” said Sirius nastily.
“You don't want to know what her sick sense of humor could be.” said Sirius quickly, halting any questions.

“I wouldn't forget it either.” said a third year Gryffindor.

“I tell them every single damn time they leave the house.” said Sirius. “Leave it alone!”

“You've only heard me speak a very limited amount of times...” said Kingsley in an impressed tone.

“Yeah!” said Fred throwing his hands up.

“Party like a flying, venomous pest!” said George beginning to dance.

“NO!” howled Sirius.
“I thought we were done with him!” groaned Remus loudly.

Dialogue line.

“Ended up using a bit of it anyway.” said Harry.

“Stupid thing came out of nowhere.” said Ginny touching her wrist absently.

Twenty-second paragraph.

Dialogue set.

“I wouldn't touch anything I sprayed...James would always vacuum up the dead flies on the sill.” said Mrs. McFinn.

“After we were married about five years, I chased her around the house with a dustpan full of those.” laughed Officer McFinn. “It was payback for her putting salt in my coffee on April Fool's Day.”

Twenty-third paragraph.

Twenty-fourth paragraph, first sentence.

“The smell attracts them. Doxy's can tell each other apart by scent, and this has a Doxy smell, but one of a completely different clan. So, they come out and defend their territory.” said Harry.

Twenty-fourth paragraph, third sentence.

“It was so small, I didn't think it was that heavy.” said Harry.

End of twenty-fourth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Twenty-fifth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“FRED!” shouted Mrs. Weasley.

“I didn't get bit mum!” said Fred.

Dialogue line.
“He wasn't even looking at them.” said George.

“Way to upstage us.” said Fred.

“Yeah...that sounds like a selling point.” said Remus.

The teachers shared a smirk. They were impressed by the Weasley twins, but they were happy that they had such valuable inside information.

“Well, this sucks.” muttered George.

“Hey! We only would have said use them during Umbridge's class.” said Fred loudly.

“Somehow, I find that unbelievable.” said Snape with a smirk.

Fred and George cringed slightly under the smug looks of the teaching staff.

“Unprofitable boredom, eh?” said Flitwick.

“Testers?” screeched Mrs. Weasley.

“You're putting innocent people through that?” shouted Bill.

“No...well...not until we ironed out most of the worse stuff...” said George trying to hide behind his chair.

“Nearly cracked my head on the side of the bed.” said George quietly.
“And we thought she'd continue screaming until school would start.” said Fred.

Mrs. Weasley began tapping her finger against her arm impatiently.

“We don't hear of Harry grinning in this book much.” said Neville.

“And I didn't want to find myself on the wrong end of Mrs. Weasley's fury.” said Harry.

Mr. Weasley looked at his sons. “You must have used a good portion of the money on that ad of yours.”

“How did you know?” asked the twins in awe.

“Just because your mother stopped reading the paper, doesn't mean I did.” said Mr. Weasley.

“And you didn't tell me?” said Mrs. Weasley.

“Well...you've had enough to worry about...” said Mr. Weasley.

Sirius began to snort with laughter.

“I forgive you now.” said Sirius trying not to laugh out loud.

“I'm not sure that I forgive you.” said Mrs. Weasley coldly.

“They still stink.” said Remus.

“That's just your nose.” said Sirius.
“You had better not have taken those.” said Mrs. Weasley darkly.

Sirius and Remus were silent.

“You should not know what that looks like.” said Sirius coldly.

“I wouldn't want to eat after all that.” said Lee.

“Why does that not surprise me?” groaned Mrs. Weasley.

“Why else would he have a tower of stuff?” asked Dean.

“We had forgotten that.” said Fred.

“How he remembered it after that night is beyond me.” said George.

“She didn't.” said Kingsley and Sirius.
“So much for keeping us in the dark about some things.” said Harry with a laugh.

Even Mrs. Weasley laughed.

“Next time, tell us this kind of information.” said Sirius.

“What a happy home.” said Blaise sarcastically.

“What the...?” asked Draco.

“Miserable little toerag.” muttered Sirius darkly.

The students stared at the book.

“Man, what a nice house-elf.” said Pavarti.

“I prefer Dobby.” said Lavender.

“Yeah, at least Dobby sounds adorable.” said Padma.
“Yeah, we noticed he was faking it too.” said Ron.

“Man, you guys have more patience than I do for that thing.” said Seamus.

“And we just learned of him.” said Dean.

“He's just old, he doesn't know we can hear him.” said Hermione.

“I'm sure he does.” said Sirius. “Like Dumbledore says, he's in his physical peak...though he doesn't look it.”

“You beast!” shouted Fred and George shoving each other.

“Oh good lord.” moaned Mrs. Weasley covering her eyes.

“Apparently Harry agrees with me.” said Hermione.

“According to Dobby, they can't speak badly about their masters...and yet he seems to do it.” said Harry with a shrug.

“I've forbidden him to call her that.” spat Sirius angrily.

“He's staying there, get used to it.” snarled Sirius.
“Foul mouthed little...” said Bill.

“He knows exactly what he's saying.” said Ron.

“None of your business.” said Colin.

“Bullcrap.” said Bill. “There's at least ten years of dust all over the place.”

“Well, he's not doing a very good job.” muttered Charlie.

“Wow, he needs to take a few lessons from Dobby.” said Ernie.
“I would say something, but the description of the portrait sort of proves your point.” said Mrs. McFinn.

“She was a disappointment in a mother.” said Sirius coldly.

Dumbledore looked down, he knew that Sirius hated his family, but he didn't expect the hatred went all the way to the house and everything in it.

“Short of setting the entire place on fire won't get rid of it” said Sirius.

“Why not do that?” asked Fred.

“Not with you kids in there.” said Sirius.

“She may swear it, but that doesn't stop her foul blood running through my veins.” said Sirius holding up his hand.

“Doesn't matter.” said Hannah.

“NO!” said every member of the Order present.

Hermione flinched.
“He nearly hit me.” muttered Hermione.

“Too bad they didn't end up chewing it all up.” muttered Sirius.

“Must we listen to him complaining?” sighed Snape.

“I will say this much, the one good part about our family dating back that far, was the monthly tribute to the Potter family. My mother just about fainted when my grandfather told her how much was still owed.” said Sirius, a smile that hadn't been on his face in a while.

“What other families owe a debt?” asked Neville.

“Well, there's the Crabbes, Goyles, Blacks, Malfoys, Longbottoms, Weasleys, Macmillian, Maclaggan, Greengrass, Bones, Abbots...the list goes on and on...” said Rudolph.

“Even a few muggleborns and half-bloods have taken out loans.” said Remus.

“How is that possible?” asked Draco. “Why not go through Gringotts?”

“Have you seen the interest rate on loans at Gringotts? For every hundred galleons you take out, you have to pay back an additional sixty galleons. A Potter family loan they only as for thirty-five...it's easier to pay them back.” said Sirius.

“And loans are still being taken out?” asked Harry.

“Oh yeah, my mother has approved of several loans over the years. Once you take your place in the family, you'll be in charge of that.” said Rudolph with a smile.

“What does that mean?” asked Dennis.

“Always pure.” muttered Sirius.
“How do you know what a cigarette burn looks like on fabric?” asked Mrs. McFinn. “James and I never smoked.”

Harry slid his hand to touch his left side tenderly.

End of dialogue set.

“He never liked me.” said Sirius.

“Only because you never liked him.” said Hermione.

“I was nice to him till I was twelve, he still didn't improve on his demeanor towards me.” said Sirius.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“You make it sound like you've never had that idea.” said Rudolph.

“I didn't. After everyone went away, I had no where to go...my summer jobs were the only escape I really had.” said Harry.

“What about the Inspector's?” asked Ron.

“I didn't want to get him in trouble with his superiors.” said Harry softly.

Dialogue set, third sentence.

“Night's Rest.” said Sirius proudly.

Dialogue set, fourth sentence, fifth dash.

“He always liked me better than my brother.” said Sirius with a slight smile.

End of dialogue set.

“And you always went.” said Remus.

“And you were always the first one to rush through the door on pancake day.” said Sirius with smirk.
“So...what was the Potters?” asked Dean.

“Same level, but they were more down to earth than most. The Patriarch gets the family castle.” said Sirius. “The rest of the family is supposed to live in their own homes. But your Grandfather had a little cottage outside of Bristol, despite having the castle.”

“Paradise Castle's not nearly as big as Hogwarts, but it's beautiful.” said Rudolph.

“And being the stand-in Patriarch, can you live there?” asked Ron. Harry looked over to his uncle.

“My mother currently lives there with almost all my brothers and sisters, along with their kids. Seems like they just decided to come back home for some reason or another. The moment Harry wants to take his place, or the moment he turns eighteen, the family members living there, have to move out.” said Rudolph.

“It's not theirs anymore, they're only there because of my father, he was the Patriarch, then it fell to your dad, then to me, but I never really did anything with it, and then it fell back to you, now that you're at least fifteen.” said Rudolph. “My mother gets lonely, so she probably keeps them around for company.”

“But you're the better man, as you were constantly reminded by James.” said Remus.

“I didn't mean to snap.” said Sirius. “I just...expected better of him.” he added dully. “My brother, not Harry.” he added quickly.

“Prepared to throw in their hands, but once he included killing people...they back out.” said Dr. Nicodemus.
“We may never know.” said Sirius.

“And people think this is a great way to live?” said Nightstrike shaking his head.

“You looked deep in thought, didn't want to just walk off.” said Harry.

“He had the smallest reign as a Headmaster. The board of governors removed him after the students and the staff complained.” said Dumbledore with a faint smile. “To this day he's still indignant about being fired.”

“It was shot down after a half-hour of her trying to promote it.” said Sirius.

“Nice lady.” said Katie.

“I know, I'm just so stylish, and he's so...grungy...” said Tonks with a smirk.

“You sure you don't have that backwards?” said Sirius with a sneer.
“You're mother was a nut.” said Terry.

“What have I been telling you people?” said Sirius throwing up his hands.

“I didn't want him to waste his time looking for them.” said Sirius.

“You couldn't remember?” asked Justin.

“It was a bad year.” said Harry plainly.

“You're related to her!” shouted Neville angrily.

“You're related to her!” shouted Neville angrily.

“So are you.” said Sirius in a bored voice. “Merlin sakes, all pure-bloods and most half-bloods are related to each other somehow.”

“I don't want to even think what he'll say when and if he finds out Leroy was engaged to her.” said
Rudolph quietly.

Fifty-third paragraph.

“Oh...she was rewarded alright.” said Lionus.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, second sentence.

“Easy puppy...he was just being curious.” said Dr. Clark.

“Sorry.” said Sirius sheepishly.

End of dialogue set.

“I wouldn't be.” said Terry.

“I'm not.” muttered Draco.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

“You weren't even allowed to leave for an hour?” asked Ernie.

“Even if I was, Molly kept me under house arrest.” muttered Sirius.

Dumbledore and Mrs. Weasley looked guiltily down at the floor.

Fifty-fourth paragraph.

“It bites every single summer.” said Harry.

“No more...you and I both don't have to go and stay at our childhood homes.” said Sirius excitedly.

Dialogue set, third sentence, first dash.

“Same thing with Night's Rest. I altered it a bit to allow Mrs. McFinn and Dr. Clark.” said Sirius.

Dialogue set, fourth sentence.

“That's why we couldn't hear the address!” said a first year eagerly.
“Partly.” said Officer McFinn.

End of dialogue set.

Fifty-fifth paragraph.

Dialogue set.

“I wouldn't want you to risk it, what if something were to happen?” said Harry quietly. “Sorry.”

“Nah...it's okay.” said Sirius with a kind smile.

Dialogue set, second sentence, first comma.

The Weaselys, Remus and Sirius smiled brightly.

End of dialogue set.

The school went quiet, a school without the trio walking around...it was unheard of.

Dialogue set

“But the Minister didn't believe me that there were Dementors there.” said Harry.

“Then he's an idiot.” said Nighstrike.

“Yeah!” said a few students excitedly. “He'll take you in heartbeat!”

“Yeah! He loves you!” said another student.

Sirius smiled fondly at Harry.

Fifty-seventh paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.
“I should have pressed that.” said Sirius, the fond look flitting to a guilt ridden look.

Fifty-eighth paragraph.

Fifty-ninth paragraph, second sentence.

“And they were fighting back.” said Ron.

Fifty-ninth paragraph, third sentence, first semi-colon.

“How the hell does snuffbox bite?” asked Officer McFinn looking up from the book.

“With my family, anything can bite you.” said Sirius.

End of fifty-ninth paragraph.

“Were you alright?” asked Mrs. McFinn.

“It only stung in the beginning, after that, it was only throbbing. It's an easy fix.” said Sirius with a smile.

Dialogue line.

Sixtieth paragraph.

Mrs. Weasley glared over to her son, while Sirius laughed.

“I cannot believe, my own son...a common thief!” said Mrs. Weasley angrily.

“He's more than welcome to it, provided he's careful with it.” said Sirius laughing still.

Sixty-first paragraph, first sentence.

“Freaked the hell out of me when it crawled up his arm.” said Ron.

Sixty-first paragraph, second sentence.

“I remember that thing, it's an acupuncture device that my dad used all the time.” said Sirius.

“Then it shouldn't be all that dangerous.” said Dr. Clark. “I've done acupuncture, you feel better later.”

“My father was a masochist and a sadist.” said Sirius. “He loved pain, that thing would make him scream every time.”
“Sirius wasn't in there with us at that time.” said Hermione. “What is that music box supposed to do?”

“Force kids to sleep.” said Sirius. “They used it on me all the time during the summer when they had guests over so I wouldn't 'embarrass' the family. But I've got to wonder, who wound it up in the first place?”

Harry raised his hand slowly.

“Why?” said Sirius.

“I...like music boxes...” said Harry softly.

Lionus smiled mysteriously.

“My family used to officiate documents and sign letters with those.” said Sirius.

“Hey, you said you'd tell me what those names meant!” said Harry in a hurt voice.

“Not so loud, you want Molly to hear you?” said Sirius trying to hush his godson.

“That's sick...” said Fred.
“I was busy, I couldn't really be bothered to stop in just to check an old desk.” said Moody.

“I wouldn't come back either.” said Tonks.

“Didn't care, I even shook the bag a little more!” he added gleefully.

“That's an interesting notion.” said Dumbledore with a slight smile.

“Well, he knew that they wouldn't.” said Justin.

“You didn't hear what else he said.” said Sirius firmly. Remus and Sirius shared a look, Sirius had confided in Remus that Kreacher had threatened harm to one of the kids.

“I was getting close to beating each person that rang that bell.” said Sirius.

“He never looked like he was in the best of moods.” said Harry.

“You looked really nice! Just...strange to not see you in the school robes!” said Harry quickly.

Sirius frowned as McGonagall smiled. “Not even your dad could have her bounce back like that.”
“She whooped it to kingdom come!” said George.

“She was awesome!” said Fred.

“It was like something out of an action movie!” said Hermione.

“Yeah, we didn't warn Harry about that.” said Fred.

“He was out cold for two days.” said George.

“See that gray hair right there?” said Sirius tugging a lock at the back of his head, looking at Harry. “You caused that.”

“He was struck right in front of Sirius.” explained Remus.

“Nearly lost my damn mind, I thought you died!” said Sirius.

“I don't even remember getting hit.” said Harry.

“A blow to the head will do that, dear lad.” said Dumbledore.

“They're self folding, and apparently not being washed for so long...caused them to go nuts.” said Sirius.

Sirius wrapped his arms around his godson's middle, holding him close.

“Glad to hear that.” said Sirius with a smile.

“Adults don't fear their criminal trials as badly as this kid fears a hearing he legally can't lose.” said Nightstrike.
Sixty-ninth paragraph, fourth sentence.

“We weren't talking about the hearing much.” said Hermione.

“We were talking about how horrible and peaked you were looking.” said Ron.

End of sixty-ninth paragraph.

“Keep flying into panic mode like that and you'll hyperventilate.” said Dr. Nicodemus and Dr. Clark.

Seventieth paragraph.

Seventy-first paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Poor Harry.” said the Gryffindor Chasers.

Dialogue line.

Seventy-second paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Seventy-third paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“But Harry needs some support!” said a third year Ravenclaw.

“Yeah, Sirius would help him calm down!” said a Hufflepuff.

“But if Sirius was captured and kissed on the spot, Harry would never forgive himself.” said Dumbledore calmly. “Though...I should have phrased it a bit kinder.”

End of chapter.

Dumbledore covered his eyes again. “I think that's enough for tonight. We'll have dinner and then explain what will happen tomorrow.” said Dumbledore, grateful that this book will almost be done with, and he won't have to hear how he hurt his most loyal of students.
Chapter End Notes

Thanks for reading! Please Comment!
Preparing for Bonfire Night

Chapter Notes

I don't own Harry Potter

See the end of the chapter for more notes

Just as Rudolph forked a cube of pork chop into his mouth, Leroy came back. He wasn't as angry as he left but he did have a frown on his face.

“Did I miss anything?” he asked as he leaped over the sofa and plucked a cherry tomato from Rudolph's plate.

“Only that Molly and Sirius aren't getting along.” said Rudolph with a smile. “How was the Daily Prophet? Is it nothing but a smoldering piece of rubble yet?”

“Well, we had a big meeting...and about four-fifths of the staff are now unemployed. I've given the better people promotions and raises, now they just need to hire some people to replace the ones that decided to throw in their lot with the wrong sort.” said Leroy.

“I thought you were going to make a dramatic entrance.” asked Rudolph.

“I thought about it, but then I used up all my drama for the speech I made.” said Leroy. “Though, I've got to say, I think I might have burned a bunch of the past Daily Prophet editions.”

“Well, no great loss.” said Rudolph.

Soon, dinner was done and Dumbledore called everyone's attention.

“Allright everyone, now, we have a lot of things to do tomorrow. Minerva, if you will.” said Dumbledore holding out his hand to let his Deputy take over.

McGonagall unfurled a piece of parchment and looked around to the students.
“This is for the events going to happen tomorrow, pay attention if you wish to take part in any of the events. Anyone that wishes to sign up for any sort of contest will have to come and see their respective head of house:

“We have cooking competitions, pies, cakes and cookies, Mrs. Weasley and Mr. Leroy Potter has offered to monitor those who wish to cook for the events. Monitored cooking time will take place tomorrow morning at nine o’clock and will end at one o’clock. Do not attempt to cook without an adult down there present, or Mr. Potter. I believe we may be able to trust you to be careful.” she finished looking at Harry.

“Yes Ma'am,” said Harry.

A few students looked excited. Harry made cooking look like a lot of fun, they'd have to look up some recipes in the library. Hermione was busy scribbling a few recipe book titles down for a few of her fellow Gryffindors to borrow.

“Then we have a set of races, varying in distances, those who wish to take part, see your Head of House as well. Mr. Potter has agreed to lead in the warm-ups for the races.”

The boys and a few girls looked eager and scanned the teachers for their Head of House.

“Tomorrow evening, we will have fireworks, provided by Filibuster's and by the Weasley twins.” said McGonagall. She looked at her parchment and then looked over to the twins. “They are safe?”

“We wouldn't do that to you.” said Fred and George together.

“Umbridge, yes.” said Fred.

“You, never.” said George.

“Mmm hmm,” said McGonagall disbelieving. “The Cooking contest will be judged by both Mrs. McFinn and Mr. Potter. The races will be timed by both Mr. Lupin and Dr. Clark. We will also have carnival games set up by a few of the locals from Hogsmede. Any questions?”
Blaise raised his hand. “Will Potter be allowed to take part in any of the contests? Being an official for some of them?”

“He chose to help in the races and the cooking contests, instead of taking part.” said McGonagall. “But I'm sure he will wish to join in some of the other contests.”

“Thank Merlin, least there's a chance for the races.” said Blaise quietly.

Harry smirked.

People began to chat excitedly, a few of the students couldn't wait to sign up for the different contests and when they got up, they found out there were a few more smaller contests to sign up for. There were another set of pumpkin carving contests, a gobstone tournament, a small Quidditch Tournament, pie eating contests, chocolate frog catching contests, and even a contest a few races where you were either in a sack or tied to another person.

Harry looked over to Officer McFinn who was smiling to himself running a hand over the book sitting in front of him. He stood up and walked over to the departed man.

“Officer McFinn?” said Harry quietly.

“Yeah, Sport?” asked Officer McFinn with a smile.

“Uh...will you be able to join us outside?” asked Harry.

“I don't know.” said Officer McFinn softly. “I think that Unspeakable Speckerton and I will have to see if we can.”

Harry looked over to the Unspeakable that was talking to Professor Flitwick. The man hadn't spoken much lately, and neither had Rivers who was discussing Educational standards with Lionus. They had been here since the beginning and listened to everything that had happened in his life. Then he looked over at the Rangers, he knew a little bit about them, perhaps more than the other students, but they never showed their entire hand.
Then he had Dr. Clark and Mrs. McFinn back in his life, they were walking over to talk to Officer McFinn. The first muggles to come and visit the school in...well...ever.

There was a lot of strange people at school this year.

Ron and Hermione hurried over to Harry.

“Hey mate! So what are you going to do tomorrow? I'm gonna sign up for that pie eating contest...the only competition that I've got is Crabbe and Goyle...that's gonna be a tough.” said Ron. “They're bottomless pits.”

“I'm going to try and make some chocolate chip cookies, hopefully Ron doesn't eat them all.” said Hermione with a smirk over to Ron.

“If I ate them all, doesn't that mean they're good?” said Ron with a roguish smile.

“Yes, but I'd like to see what Mrs. McFinn and Harry think of them.” said Hermione.

“You going to make anything?” asked Ron to Harry.

“I'm making a few pies for the pie eating contests.” said Harry.

“What kind of pies are they?” asked Ron.

“You'll find out tomorrow.” said Harry. “I'm going downstairs to make the stuff we need. Could you let Sirius know where I went?”

“Sure, uh...where is he?” asked Ron looking around.

Sirius was no where to be seen, but Harry had a lot of stuff he needed to get done. “Well, when you find him, tell him I'll be up as soon as I can.”
Harry turned and left for the kitchens. Hermione and Ron watched him leave.

"You know...we aren't spending as much time as we used to together." said Hermione.

"Yeah, I know, he's got a family now." said Ron. "He doesn't need us as much anymore. But you know...I'm okay with it."

"Me too." said Hermione with a smile. "We'll have him when this is all said and done. They have a lot of time to make up."

Harry walked down to the kitchens, trying to come up with something other than pies to make for the pie eating contest, he could do a load of baked potatoes, that should keep everyone warm as they walk about....he'd have to ask if Mrs. McFinn could do some treacle toffee or no one else would get any after he'd would eat it.

Harry stepped through the doorway to the kitchens and heard a loud crash and a string of curses.

"Son of a banshee!" shouted Sirius' voice.

Harry looked around and saw Sirius slamming a whisk down in a dirty bowl. "How the hell can this be hard? I'm using bloody magic for Merlin's sake!"

"Something wrong?" asked Harry sneaking up behind him and looking over his shoulder.

Sirius jumped a little and turned. "What are you doing here?"

"It's the kitchen, I hang out here all the time." said Harry. "The big question is what are you doing in here?"

"I...I just wanted to try and make something." said Sirius.
“But you can't cook...” said Harry slowly.

“....I'm not doing anything tomorrow.” said Sirius looking down, a frown on his face. “I wasn't asked...”

Harry shook his head. “I asked them not to have you help.”

Sirius looked at Harry in shock. “Why not? I can help, I want to help!”

“I want you to just enjoy yourself, play a few games, take part in a few contests. Have fun.” said Harry nudging his godfather in the shoulder. “Run around, knock a few bottles off a table...get outside for a bit!”

Sirius looked at his godson, his eyes moist with emotion, smiled slightly. “Does that mean that I can force you into a three legged race?”

“Only if you think you can keep up.” said Harry with a smile.

Dumbledore and the rest of the adults began to set up the booths and what not outside, to get a head start on the celebrations for the next morning.

“We'll have to tell the students that they won't be celebrating this much next year.” said McGonagall levitating a large banner over the starting line of the races.

“I think that a Bonfire Night might not be a bad idea to do year after year.” said Dumbledore creating trophies out of stones that stood before him. “I find it quite enjoyable, and if the people down in the village agree, we may have a great new tradition. And the Halloween party was very enjoyable.”

Umbridge grumbled loudly but yelped when Tempest smacked her to move onward.

“What do your men plan on doing?” asked Flitwick to Chief Hawkeye.

“I'm going to have a few words with my men, about their time here, and then we may join you in the festivities. Though...I have a game that the students would love to enjoy...and it would amuse us very much.” he added looking at Umbrdige with a smirk.

“So I want to know what this game is?” asked Dumbledore with a twitching smile.

“Let's just say, this game could be as medieval as she is.” said Chief Hawkeye he added with a smile.

Students were going crazy in the library, digging up several different recipes. There were several different competitions for pies: Apple, Pumpkin, Cherry, Misc and Unusual. They didn't quite know what unusual meant, but any pie that sounded good, they wanted to try.

The Cookie competition has the same sort of design, they list a few common cookies, and then down to a few Miscellaneous types and even an unusual kind. Chocolate Chip cookies were the ones that seemed to appeal to everyone, not a lot of the students wanted to attempt to try any other one.

Cakes were another one that people weren't inclined to try, unless they had Harry there or Mrs.
Weasley to keep an eye on them constantly. But it seemed that Harry wasn't going to be there to offer tasting critique, he would only be there to make sure they didn't set the school on fire.
Whether they burnt their entries was their prerogative.

They couldn't wait till tomorrow.

Harry was still downstairs, baking as many pies as he could before midnight hit. It took him a while to make up his mind what sort of pie should be used for the contests. He didn't want to make apple pies and make them eat more than five each. Too much cinnamon in one sitting would not be a good thing.

He had to make sure he didn't make Ron's favorite pie, or he'd never hear the end of it from people who felt he was being unfair. Then again, Ron's favorite pie was anything and everything.
So the only way to be fair, was to make an assortment of pies, of every flavor that he could think of. He had sent Dobby with a message alerting McGonagall to his idea. Dobby returned with a vocal message that Harry's idea was a good one.

Taking into consideration that he was making pies for three of the biggest gluttons he had ever seen, and on top of that, the adults' contest that was going on the same time he would have to make a few dozens of each type of pie.

The people down in the village wanted in on some of the contests as well, so to comply with their wishes, there were kid contests and adult contests and it wasn't just the village that took on an interest, some parents wanted to join their kids in the festivities, having missed out on this opportunity when they were younger. So he had to take into consideration adult stomachs and adult skill levels in the judging. Mrs. McFinn will take the lead in the adult contests, and Harry will take charge of the student contest.

He had a lot of work to do for tomorrow, especially if he wanted to make some pies, cakes and cookies tomorrow to sell at a booth. He didn't need the money, but he figured that he'd sell for the Muggleborn, and Wizard Orphan fund...he'd ask Dumbledore what his opinion is tomorrow morning.

“Ah...it would figure I'd find you down here, dear boy.” said a voice from behind.

Or he could ask him now.

“Great timing, I've got a question.” said Harry.

“Perhaps I have a answer.” said Dumbledore.

“Could I sell some baked goods for the Muggleborn fund?” asked Harry.

Dumbledore looked at Harry with a proud glint in his eye, but he said. “I'm afraid not, children donating their past texts are one thing, but money...you must be at least seventeen and out of school in order to donate. But, if you were to use your earnings for yourself, write down how much you made and then several years down the road you will be able to donate it then. If you still wish”

Harry looked down, he'd have to keep that bit of scrap parchment safe.
Or...he could use it for something else...

Chapter End Notes

Thanks for reading, please comment.

I have a hectic schedule and I think it would be easier on my part to continue just to do a chapter a week, so despite it not being a reading the chapter chapter, I won't be updating till next Friday.
The next morning the big day came, Hogwarts first Bonfire Night, Harry was walking around the stoves down in the kitchens, making sure the students didn't get over excited and allow the heat and possible flames get out of hand. Mrs. Weasley also helped the students a little, though she had to stop herself and Harry from helping the students any further than they had to.

Harry kept warming charms on the pies the entire night to keep them warm and tasty for the competition, except for the chocolate pies. He had to virtually keep the students at bay in order to keep a few of them from slicing into them.

He couldn't help the others with their cooking, but what he did was make them scones so that they didn't break down and eat whatever they were making out of sheer hunger or dodge past him and eat his hard work.

Even a few Slytherins were in the kitchens trying to bake cookies and pies, one in particular was a surprise baker. Harry didn't expect to see her there.

Pansy Parkinson was attempting to prepare a pie for the contests later that afternoon. She didn't want anything to really do with Potter, especially if he was a judge for that contest. But the contest prize was something worth fighting for.

The prize for the best pie was not only fifty points for your house, but also seven pounds of an assortment of Honeyduke's chocolate. She may despise Potter, but she loved that sweet shop and four pounds of candy was too good of a prize to not try. She'd have to do anything to make her pie the best one out of this lot. But she had a backup plan, if she didn't win. She could claim that Potter has it out for her and she'd be awarded the prize.

There was one student however that wasn't allowed to make anything, she could play any of the games but not allowed to bake. Not after the last time she tried to make something for Harry.
“It’s not fair!” wailed Romilda Vane.

“McGonagall said you weren't permitted to participate.” scolded Mrs. Weasley. “After what you did to Harry the last time.”

“I wonder what she did?” asked Parvati.

“I heard that she slipped him a love potion, she got in big trouble, but Harry said he didn't want her expelled.” said Lavender.

“So maybe he does like her a little.” said Padma.

“I don't think so, he just doesn't like to see anyone expelled...after what we've heard from the books, I can understand.” said Parvati.

“I'm not going to do that again!” said Romilda earnestly. “Please let me...”

“No.” said Mrs. Weasley pointing out of the kitchen. “Your name isn't on the list to be in here anyway, you had to sign up last night or early this morning in order to be in here.”

But Romilda didn't want to leave, she decided to delay her departure by playing cat and mouse with Mrs. Weasley, hopefully to get her so exasperated that she would just let her stay. She dodged around everyone to try and stay inside the kitchens, but ran headlong into Harry. She stumbled back and flashed a smile up to him, hoping he'd be impressed with her persistence.

“Leave.” said Harry firmly. “The kitchen is not a playground.”

Her face fell, and tears began to well into her eyes, “But...but...”

But then she was levitated in the air. Mrs. Weasley had taken out her wand and her face was full of anger. “If you come back in here, I'll notify Professor McGonagall about this immature behavior.” she said sharply. “Now, go find something else to occupy your time.”
She sent a broken-hearted look to Harry, who was focusing on finishing his own work and then was gently placed outside into the corridor. She passed Hermione as she was stepping into the kitchen.

“You're such a jerk, Harry Potter!” she wailed as she ran off.

“Morning, Harry.” said Hermione looking behind her as Romilda ran off. “what was that all about?”

“She wanted to bake for the contests today.” said Harry peeling a few apples. “But never mind her, you find a recipe that works for you?”

“Oh huh.” said Hermione happily.

“Okay, you can take the stove halfway down.” said Harry pointing to the unused stove. “If you need any help, just as for Mrs. Weasley. I can find the ingredients you need, but any cooking advice has to come from her.”

“Oh okay.” said Hermione looking at what Harry was making. “What is that.”

“I making a demo pies.” said Harry.

“Demo pies?” asked Hermione.

“It lets people know where they can go and put their pies. That way, they don't put custard in with the blueberry, it'll save time and it gives me something to do. This pie is for the Unusual section.” said Harry.

“What kind is it?” asked Hermione leaning forward to smell it.

“Marshmallow Apple Pie.” said Harry.
“Say what?” said Hermione pulling back.

“Don't knock it till you try it.” said Harry with a smile. “I've got to get back to work, I've got a lot of stuff to make.”

“Harry, do you know where the nutmeg is?” asked Hannah.

Harry walked over and picked up a small container and walked it over to the Hufflepuff student. “Here you go, use what the recipe says, no more.” said Harry.

“What'll happen?” asked Hannah.

“Let's just say, you'll send Mrs. McFinn and I to the hospital wing.” said Harry with a smile.

Hours later, the Bonfire night celebration began, the games were up and going. Students ran to the booths to play games and win the prizes that were provided. Some even met up with their parents when they stopped by with whatever pastry entry they had to show off.

Harry leaned against the tree beside the doors and smiled, parents looked as if they were having the time of their lives with their kids, he thought this should be made a permanent thing. That way they could reunite with their kids, especially for the first years.

He looked over at the large pile of pastries towering at the contests stands. He'd have to head over there, after he got the races done. He had a busy day today, and he'd still have to find some time to play a few games with Sirius.

But first things first, he had a job to do. He rounded up all the students that wanted to take part in the races, mostly boys and mostly between Slytherin and Gryffindor signed up for it. He led them in a few stretching exercises and then paced himself around a large roped area that would serve as the racetrack for the runners. The parents of the runners, if they could come, lined up around the track cheered for their offspring.

Once Harry had said 'Go', the students fell in behind him, but then decided to pass him on the far right.
“C'mon, don't run as fast as you can now! If you're running ahead of me, you're not going to last the rest of the day!” shouted Harry. A few people listened and slowed their pace to fall behind Harry. However a few of them decided to extend the distance even further.

“You'll be sorry!” shouted Harry loudly.

And sorry they were, by the second race, they were winded and they couldn't go on. The ones that paced themselves throughout the day ended up winning a majority of the races. In the second race Cormac McClaggan would have come in at least third place, but his leg cramped up and Blaise came running up and took third and then second place, pushing Cormac to fifth. He was only a second behind Justin Finch-Fletchely.

Harry watched the races for a little bit, but then meandered over to the baked goods stand and looked into the preparations. Parents were still bringing in their goods and the students were doing the same thing. Harry and Mrs. McFinn couldn't really start judging until all the entries were there, and it seemed that they would have a long time of it.

“Hey Harry!” said a voice coming form behind him, it was Sirius, but it didn't look like him.

He had platinum blonde hair, his face was clean shaven and he was wearing a casual t-shirt and a pair of jeans. He looked almost fifteen years younger.

“Got some time to play around a bit?” asked Sirius brightly.

“What happened to you?” asked Harry with a laugh.

“Dumbledore and Lionus figured that despite Madam Bones and Leroy telling the whole world through his paper that I was innocent, that people might not be able to accept me yet. So, to nip the potential attacks in the bud, they disguised me a little bit. Now come on, there's a few games I'm dying to try out.” he took Harry by the hand and dragged him towards the games.

They stopped first at Fred and George's stand, they had asked Dr. Clark about a few games and they settled on a balloon pop game of sorts. You'd get five darts and then you'd have to pop a balloon fixed on a large board. Some of the balloons had stink pellets inside and others had sparkles. If you managed to get all five balloons to rain down sparkles you'd get a stuffed animal, or (they'd whisper to the winner) they'd get a demo box of their pranking merchandise.

“You boys getting much business?” asked Sirius, placing a few knuts down for the both of them to play the game.

“We’ve had quite a bit so far. Haven’t lost any demo boxes or giant stuffed animals yet.” said Fred.
“But people like the challenge, so they keep coming back.” said George.

“Think we can win Harry?” asked Sirius.

“I don’t know, I was never really good at these games.” said Harry.

“Well, neither was I, but we can give it a shot.” said Sirius taking a dart in hand and tossing it towards a red balloon. Sparkles fell to the ground. “I’m off to a good start.” said Sirius happily.

Harry took a dart in hand and aimed for a purple balloon, sparkles fell once again. They did fine until Sirius hit a blue balloon and Harry hit a green one.

“Oh, nice try guys, want to try again?” asked Fred.

“I think I know what happened, you put the sparkles in the red and yellow and purple ones.” said a voice from behind them.

They turned and saw Speckerton standing behind them, but he looked a little different, his eyes were different and he had a sort of pale glow surrounding him.

“Are you alright?” asked Sirius.

“Never better.” said Speckerton, his voice not sounding the same as he spoke so many times before. His voice sounded like...

“Officer McFinn?” said Harry in shock. “Is that...?”

“I didn't think I'd be able to fool you.” said the man with a smile. “Yeah, Speckerton let me borrow his body for a bit. It's not like when Riddle possessed someone.” he added to Harry's blanched face. “I'm completely benign, I don't need to feed off him to survive, I'm already dead.”

He walked up to the counter and placed some money on the counter. “Albus gave me some money to play around with, I had to promise though I wouldn't eat anything Speckerton was allergic to and couldn't get into fistfights, he's a pretty laid back guy.”

“Who's powering the books?” asked Sirius.

“I've got them on me.” said Officer McFinn showing a large knapsack. “And I've got one of the Rangers tailing me everywhere I go.”

They looked up and saw a cloaked figure standing on top of the Fred and George's booth, it was Viper. He and Harry locked eyes, but Viper turned his gaze away a fraction of an inch so he was looking at Harry's shoulder.

Officer McFinn took the darts in hand and only hit the red, yellow, and purple balloons, sparkles fell to the ground.

“How did you know about the ones we put them in?” asked George with a frown.

“Red and yellow, Gryffindor colors. Purple is the color that Dumbledore normally wears.” said Officer McFinn. “Am I right?”

Fred and George pouted. “Just don't spread it around.”

“I wouldn't do that.” said Officer McFinn.

“What would you like?” asked Fred. “Animal or demo box?”

Officer McFinn looked around, and saw what he wanted. “I'll take that big panda bear.”

“Going to give it to your wife?” asked Sirius.
“No, it would look bad if Speckerton's wife were to show up unexpectedly. Did give Holly something in private though...Don't ask.” Officer McFinn added. He handed Harry the large panda bear. “Remember...”

“You won the milk bottle toss for me.” said Harry taking the bear and holding it tenderly.

Officer McFinn threw his arms around Harry. “After these books, I'm not going to be around anymore, I know it's cruel to come back into your life just to leave so quickly again. But you know...I'm so glad that I can spend this moment with you right now.”

Sirius watched the pair of them, he thought he and Harry were going to spend time together before he had to go and judge the pie and other baked goods. Now it seemed that he wanted to spend time with his cub.

“Now you two go have some fun, I'll see you both later.” said Officer McFinn with a smile. Sirius watched in awe as he walked away.

“Well, what do you want to do now?” asked Harry.

“Wait, what?” asked Sirius. “I thought...”

Harry rolled his eyes, “We're doing things before I have to work...c'mon, let's go see what booth Hagrid set up.”

Sirius followed Harry, with a bright smile on his face.

Sirius and Harry wandered all over the grounds, taking in the sites and played a few more of the games. They didn't win any of the big prizes, but they did have fun. Soon they made it to the booth that was selling Harry's pies, breads and cookies.

“Hello there dear.” said Bathilda Bagshot with a smile.
“Hello, Mrs...” said Harry.

“Ah ah ah!” said Bathilda Bagshot shaking her fingers with a smile.

“Uh...Aunt Batty.” said Harry with a smile.

“I must say, your cakes and cookies have been flying off this counter. They can't get enough of your triple chocolate chip cookies.” said Bathilda Bagshot with a smile.

“Hope Remus doesn't hear that you've got those out here.” said Sirius.

“Oh, he's written you an I.O.U for seven batches.” said Bathilda with a smile as she handed Harry a piece of parchment.

Harry took it and ripped it up. “He can have as many cookies, cakes and whatever else he wants.”

“I thought you'd say that, and I told him so, but he still insisted on writing that and promising to pay.” said Bathilda.

“He's such an idiot.” said Sirius rolling his eyes. “I have money, he can get anything he wants.”

“Now Sirius, it's not the money that he wants, he wants to be independent, he doesn't want to rely on you for money all the time.” said Bathilda with a shake of her head.

“But he doesn't have any...he can't even keep a job for more than a month or so.” said Sirius.

“Be that as it may, he wants to survive on his own means.” said Bathilda.

“Well, he'd better not think of moving out.” said Sirius folding his arms. “He can...I don't know, take charge of setting up protective spells or something...he can work for his room and board.”
“Harry?” said Dumbledore's voice coming up behind him. Harry turned, on his chest was a judge’s ribbon and a splatter of red on his beard.

“It's time to judge the entries now.” said Dumbledore with a smile.

“What has stained your beard, Albus?” asked Bathilda handing him a handkerchief.

“Alas, strawberry pie. Mr. Goyle was not aware he was missing his mouth at the time.” said Dumbledore as he wiped his beard clean. “All the pies from the students and adults are all assembled and numbered, so you may go and start.”

“Numbered?” asked Sirius.

“That way it's fair. I don't get to see the numbers until we've written down the winning entries, the person's name shows up magically.” said Harry.

“So no one can claim the contest is rigged.” said Sirius with a smile. “I like it. Need help?”

Harry looked at him, looked at Dumbledore and then smiled. “I think we could use a layman taster.”

“Hey! Your grandmother said I was the best taster she ever had!” said Sirius indignantely.

“Sure...whatever you say...” said Harry with a smirk.

“Why do you say that?” asked Sirius.

“Remus said the same thing when he asked if he could taste test my triple chocolate chip cookies the other day.” said Harry with a laugh.

“She lied to me.” said Sirius looking shocked.
“Come on, number one taste-tester.” said Harry with a chuckle.

After many hours of tasting each pie, (Sirius helping himself to multiple samples of the same pies) Harry and Mrs. McFinn judged the adults and the children's baked goods. There was a disagreement over who should get honorable mention in the students section.

“C'mon, they deserve a shout out for trying!” said Sirius.

“Sirius, it's unusual and miscellaneous, not mad doctor's laboratory.” said Harry. “Who's ever heard of a mincemeat chocolate trifle pie? Besides, it was nasty.”

The students and adults gathered around and took seats in front of the stage area. This was the main event for many of them and they couldn't wait to see who would win what. Students came to sit, multicolored ribbons plastered on their chests, Ron had a first place ribbon on his chest, his face slightly stained from pie filling and whipped cream. He sat beside Hermione who was looking nervous.

“Congratulations Ron, I thought Crabbe ate two more than you did, how did you win?” asked Hermione.

“Dumbledore and Flitwick noticed that Crabbe smeared all the pie all over his face, he didn't eat most of it, I cleaned my plate every time. There was still a bit of pie in each one of his and Goyle. McClaggan didn't stand a chance, he was out and getting sick after the blueberry pie level.”

“You went to town on one of them, what was that?” asked Hermione. “You lifted up the entire pie and dove right in, what was that pie?”

“Harry's such a jerk, he didn't put the pumpkin pie till towards the end, and he didn't make it the way I liked. He adds something extra to his that really make me wolf them down.” said Ron. “Guess he didn't want to show favorites. I'll say this much, that one batch of mismatch pies was pretty cool. That marshmallow apple pie was awesome!”

“I figured you'd eat it.” said Hermione with a smile. “I can't wait, I think I did okay on the cookies, it's one thing on book work, it's completely different to make something from a recipe. The simplest thing could make it or break it.”

“Yeah, that’s what my mum says, if you forget to put...well...she says love in it, then it won't go well.” said Ron. “Though, Harry sort of disproves that.”

“You're right, I doubt he's shown any love when he made meals for the Dursleys.” said Hermione. “Unless you put all the love into making it. Or, it's even tastier now that he's making it here.”

“That's a scary thought, the food not tasting the same as it does at home.” said Ron.

Then Dumbledore stepped on the stage, causing everyone clap. He held up his hands and silenced the crowd. “Thank you everyone, young and old who has come to celebrate this Bonfire Night with us. After discussing with the School Governors, we've decided to keep this an annual event.”

The students and parents applauded loudly, even a few of the older Governors looked pleased.

“This will be an event that will bring students of the past back to Hogwarts where they will hopefully remember fondly of their school days. But now for the final event, before we start the bonfire and fireworks generously donated by Filibuster and some even created by two of our more talented students...”

Fred and George puffed out their chests.

“We will reveal the results of the baked goods competitions, I think I am correct in thinking that the adults did not realize who was the judge for any of competition of this sort, so with out further ado, the Head Judge of both the adult and the students confections....Harry Potter.”

“Bet he's not too happy, being called out like that.” said Ron clapping furiously.

“I don't think so, that's one quick dark look he gave Dumbledore.” said Hermione sending a happy yell out.

“Reminded me of Snape there for a moment.” said Ron.
Harry stepped up to the front of the stage and sighed. “Sort of sink or swim with this huh?” he said looking over to Dumbledore, a small smile on his face. He looked out to the crowd, a lot of adults stared at the youth, some even looked a little shocked that their goods were judged by someone that they had deemed mentally unstable.

“Well, let's get started.” said Harry taking out a roll of parchment. “We can start with the cookies, not a lot of people dropped them off, so this will be pretty quick. We divided up the cookies just a bit, if they had chocolate anywhere in them they went in one category and so forth. Chocolate cookie for the students third place goes to...Hermione Granger for her Granger Cherry Chocolate Chip cookies.”

Hermione smiled and went up to the stage and smiled as she took a ribbon. Then a shout came from the twins.

“C’mon Harry, give the girls a kiss if they win!”

“Shove off!” shouted Harry. “I'm not kissing anyone! Thanks Hermione. Now...second place, was...wow...Justin Finch-Fletchely and his chocolate fudge cookies...I'm definitely not kissing him.”

The crowd began to laugh as Justin climbed the steps and took his ribbon.

“First place goes to...Astoria Greengrass.” said Harry with a smile. “With her chocolate peanut butter cup cookies.”

People applauded as Astoria climbed the stairs and took her ribbon and the seven pounds of Honeydukes candy as a prize.

The rest of the cookies and cakes went about as smoothly as could be. Even the adults enjoyed themselves as they watched some of their children win awards and they themselves won a pound or two of the candy they so adored in their childhood.

Finally it was the pie judging, the adults were done and it was the final award to be given, first prize, and a seven pound box of Honeydukes chocolate.
“First prize for the Unusual and Miscellaneous pie goes to....well...I'm impressed but not all that surprised...Luna Lovegood, for her Cherry and Lime pie.” said Harry with a smile.

The people clapped though they shared a curious look. Cherry and Lime? As Luna kissed Harry's cheek and took the ribbon, an indignant shout came from the crowd.

“This contest is rigged! He's picking all his friends!” screeched Pansy.

“Not possible Miss Parkinson. Each entry was given a number and the judges were not around to see whose name went with what number. They are not aware of the names until they remove it from the envelope. I made it impossible for there to be any preferential treatment.” said Dumbledore with a kind smile. “I did not want any...how do you children say?” he looked at Harry. “Muck-ups.”

Several people laughed, “Good old Dumbledore. Always trying to use modern slang.” thought a good many of them.

“But...but...there....” said Pansy pointing weakly at the stage. She didn't expect them to prepare for any and everything!

What number was hers?” asked Harry.

“Seventy four.” said Mrs. Weasley flipping though the clipboard in her hand. “This is hers.”

“Come here, Miss Parkinson.” said Dumbledore beckoning her up to the stage. “Is this your pie?”

Pansy looked at pie, with it's decorative crust and its warm purple filling.

“Yes, it's mine...no one else's had a crust like mine.” said Pansy proudly.

“Taste it.” said Harry taking a forkful and held it to Pansy's mouth. “You'll understand.”

Pansy scowled, but took the fork in hand and brought It to her mouth, the pie wasn't in her mouth for in longer than a minute when she spat it out. “What the...?”
“You added too much salt.” said Harry in a whisper. “Understand?”

Pansy turned on her heel and sat back down with a snarl.

“Now...since the awards ceremony is over, lets begin with the bonfire and the fireworks.” said Dumbledore as the entire world seemed switch from day to twilight.

Hagrid finished piling the large tower of wood while Mr. Weasley roped off the area close to where the fire's edge was. As Dumbledore lit the fire, the Weasley twins took the opportunity to set up their own fireworks and get ready to set them all off.

Harry made his way through the crowds as the fire began to crackle and rise it's way up the large pile of wood.

“Ah, Harry, come here.” said Dumbledore gesturing for him to stand beside him. Harry strode to stand beside the Headmaster standing shoulder to shoulder with him.

“Forgive me for placing you in the spotlight dear boy.” said Dumbledore.

“Never.” said Harry with a smirk.

Dumbledore smiled. “I feared as much. I'd like to thank you dear boy, despite the beginning, this has been a pleasant turn of events.”

“Yeah...it's worth all the headaches.” said Harry smiling as the fire crackled merrily in front of him.

Here's the recipe for Mashmallow Apple pie, yeah you thought I made that up didn't you?

6 Granny Smith apples

1 Tablespoon butter

1 pinch of salt
½ cup white sugar
½ tsp ground nutmeg
14 large marshmallows
1 recipe pastry for a 9 in single crust pie

1: Preheat oven to 425 degrees F (220 degrees C). Line pie pan with plain pastry

2: Peel, remove core and slice apples. Place in pie shell.

3: Combine sugar, salt and nutmeg. Sprinkle over apples. Dot with butter.

4: Bake at 425 degrees F (220 degrees C) for 30 minutes, or until crust is brown and the apples are tender. Remove from oven.

5: Cover the apples with halved marshmallows. Brown in slow oven 325 degrees F ( 165 degrees C). Serve warm

Chapter End Notes

Thanks for reading, please review
Harry moaned loudly as sunlight shimmered down softly on his bed. He tried to bury his head under the multiple pillows on his bed and pulled his covers closer to his chin. He could have sworn he just went to bed an hour ago.

“Someone put out the sun.” groaned Harry.

“You're telling me.” muttered Sirius from the foot of his own bed. His head stuck out where his feet should have been, his hair tousled and his eyes bleary.

“What the...how did you get down there.” said Harry rubbing his eyes.

“Beats the hell out of me...I should never have taken up the offer of that drinking contest.” said Sirius. “I can't hold my liquor as much anymore...I could have drunk them all under the table fourteen years ago.”

“Who did you lose to?” asked Harry as he tried to find his socks under his bed.

“I'm not saying.” said Sirius pulling the covers over his head.

“He lost to Tonks.” said Remus with a smile as he walked in. “C'mon Sirius, it's time to get up.”

“Shh!!! Not so loud!” moaned Sirius.

“I'm talking normal, now get up...we have a lot to do today.” said Remus tossing Sirius a clean shirt as he tried to pull his sock over his hand. “That goes on your foot.”
“So much for just hanging out.” said Harry.

“What are we supposed to do?” asked Sirius.

“You and I are going to work at Night's Rest...” said Remus.

“Can I come?” asked Harry quickly.

“Unfortunately, no....you have a full day on your plate.” Remus said tossing Sirius his robe and a pair of trousers.

“Like what?” asked Harry. “Am I grounded again?”

“I don't want to go through that again, not that you were really punished in the first place. A few people showed up this morning, and you're going to want to wear something nice.” said Remus handing Harry a button up shirt, black slacks and his Hogwarts' school tie.

“Who showed up?” asked Harry as he looked at the outfit sitting before him.

“That would be my mother...ah...that won't be enough....Leroy!” shouted Rudolph as he looked at what Remus had picked out.

“Gahh!!! Not so loud!” moaned Sirius loudly.

“Don't be so drunk,” said Leroy coming in with a roll of black silk fabric. “Here we go, Monster...” he waved his wand and a three piece suit was cut, snipped, and sewed out of the fabric in his hand. “you'll look great in this.”

“Wait...your mother...” said Harry looking up at his Great Uncle.

“Your Great Grandmother yeah, she's come to accelerate the process of making you the Patriarch of the family.” said Rudolph helping Harry come to his feet and get dressed in the silk suit.

“Wait...what?” said Harry as he slipped his arms through silk shirt.

“Your Great Grandmother had a health scare a few weeks ago, I didn't know about it or I would have been there. She saw what the other people in the family were like once she was supposedly on her way out...and decided to nip it in the bud before it happens.” said Rudolph tying the bow tie around his nephew's neck.

“I hate bow ties.” muttered Harry.

“I don't like them either.” said Rudolph as he finished tying. “I prefer the straight ties personally, but mother just falls head over heels for bowties. Now let's look at you...” he took a step back as Harry buttoned up his suit jacket. “Well, Mother knows that our hair is impossible to control.” as he ruffled the hair on his Great-Nephew's head.

“Leave your hair down, you look more stylish that way.” said Leroy before Harry could grab the hair tie.

“Do I have to?” whined Harry.

“Normally, I would hide you away from her, and just out sympathy for you. But...from what my mother says, you need to step up to head the family.” said Rudolph.

“The others causing problems?” asked Sirius rubbing his head.

“They started to divvy up the Potter castle.” said Rudolph.

“And I take it that's bad.” said Harry.

“My brothers and sisters have no claim to that castle, your Grandfather was the oldest of all of us, being the oldest son's grandson, you have the first and final say on whatever is in our family. Property, money, artifacts, heirlooms...the works.”
“But you had that claim before I did.” said Harry.

“Yes, but I went to Africa before your father had passed away, I was named Temporary Patriarch while I was abroad, my mother took on both responsibilities for me. Just as a figurehead though, if something major would have happened, I would have been magically brought back. And I didn't even realize I was the Patriarch until I managed to get to the wizarding outpost down in Africa. There was a mountain of mail waiting for me at the wizarding outpost where we got all our supplies for our travels.” said Rudolph brushing off any dust or lint from the new suit. “That's when I knew something had happened to your dad, and I had hoped that he was just unable to do it, like him being knocked unconscious for a month or so...but the amount of paperwork...that told me something was horribly wrong.”

“You seem to know a lot of what a Patriarch does though.” said Harry.

“My father was the Patriarch, that's the reason I know so much. I used to watch him and beg him to go out and play with us. I was the second oldest, I got voted to go in and drag him out.” said Rudolph. “Now come on, we don't want to keep them waiting.”

“Are they all there?” asked Harry.

“They aren't all here, just the ones that want to contest you being the head of the family, though they won't be able to do much.” said Rudolph pulling Harry to the door. “If they all were here, you'd be able to hear them all the way up here.”

They walked down as swiftly as they could down to the Great Hall, to greet the rest of the Potter family. As they approached the door, Rudolph stopped his nephew from opening the door.

“Let me get that, it'll look better, it'll make them think that I already accept you as the Head of the family and show the utmost respect for you.” said Rudolph as he gripped both door handles and opened the large doors to the Great Hall.

Inside was a cluster of adults and an even larger cluster of older teenagers, standing around a large chair. The older adults had salt and pepper hair, the women wore their hair long and the men had untidy crops of hair on their head, if they had hair on their heads anymore. Everyone was wearing elegant robes and dresses, and when they turned to see who entered, they looked at the trio with disdain.
“Be assertive.” muttered Leroy to Harry's ear. “Don't hold back, they'll never accept you if you do, and you need them to listen to you.”

“Rudolph!” said one of the women, she swept over and kissed both of his cheeks. Rudolph however stiffened slightly. “How was your trip?”

“I wasn't on a vacation, I was working.” said Rudolph firmly.

“Going abroad to look at plants? That's not a job.” said the woman with a smile.

“That's enough Agatha.” said an elderly woman's voice coming from the large group. The group parted and a grand elderly woman in a silk dress stood up and walked forward. Her silver hair was wrapped in a tight bun and her golden glasses had a bejeweled chain trailing down her neck and then around her neck. “Welcome back Rudolph, how are you and Leroy doing?”

“We're fine mother.” said Leroy coming up and placing a hand on Harry's shoulder.

Mrs. Potter looked up to Harry, and Harry looked back at her. So this was his Great Grandmother? She didn't fit the normal look of a grandmother to him, she reminded him of McGonagall, she had a no nonsense face.

“And this must be my Great Grandson.” said the woman looking at Harry with a searching look.

“Yes ma'am.” said Harry bowing low.

“Why does he have white hair?” asked one of the teenagers snidely.

“That's enough out of all of you.” snapped the old woman angrily. “I've had just about enough of this chattering. Well, now...Harold...let's have a seat...” she guided Harry over to her large chair and transfigured a chair for him.

“Do you know what this means?” hissed one of the women to Rudolph quietly.
“It means that the family has the Patriarch back. The way it should be.” said Rudolph firmly. “I'm not any use when I'm abroad.”

“But we at least had a say in what was good for the family, this...boy...has no idea who we are...what our needs are.” said her husband coming up behind her and whispering.

“This boy never knew his family, you could at least support him and love him like a family.” snapped Leroy quietly.

“Precisely, he doesn't know who we are, or what our family heritage means...and from what I've read, he's a liar and probably mad.” said another woman coming to join the conversation.

“And if you had read the paper the last few days, you'll see a large print front page with an apology to both Harry and Dumbledore.” said Leroy.

“And I've instigated a lawsuit against a few of the people that slandered my nephew's good name.” said Rudolph, “So unless you want an inter-family lawsuit against you...be quiet.” he added with a stern tone.

“Why are you supporting him? He's taking the honor of being the Patriarch away from you!” said one of the younger adults. “Being the head of the family is the highest honor...you get the most power!”

“Because, he'll be a much better Patriarch than I will be, he's got a brilliant mind, and a wonderful heart, he'll take care of everyone...if they deserve it.” said Rudolph.

They stared at Rudolph for a while and then the elderly woman called them all over.

“Very well, I've spoken to the lad, and I'm ready to hear what you all have to say.” said the Potter family Matriarch tapping the ground with her cane.

One of Rudolph's sisters stepped forward and sent an icy look to Harry, who merely looked back with a straight face. “He knows nothing of our family, or our history, we can't just make him a Patriarch without him even knowing who we are.”
Then a man stepped forward. “Mother, he's a child.” he gestured towards Harry. “He can't handle the responsibility of running this family.”

The rest of them took turns, explaining why they thought Harry couldn't be the head of the family, one was even so bold as to say it would take their freedom to do as they will away. The other teenagers weren't allowed to voice their concerns, and that ticked a few of them off.

“C'mon Grandma, we don't want to answer to this bloke, we don't even know him!” said one youngster.

“That's enough, after hearing your concerns, and listening to him, I'm ready to hear from Rudolph.” said the Matriarch imperiously.

The family turned to Rudolph, and growled. “Do something!”

“Rudy, you can't possibly let this child be in charge of us!” said his sisters pleadingly.

Rudolph looked around at all of them and then faced his mother.

“Well, Rudolph...do you believe that he will be an adequate head of the family, or do you believe you should continue on?” asked the woman.

Rudolph stood in silence for a moment and then smiled. “I believe that Harry will make a fine Head of the Potter family. And I will fully support him and help him in any way I can.” said Rudolph firmly.

His brothers and sisters and countless nieces and nephews all stared at him.

“Well, that makes my decision all the easier.” said the woman with a smile. “Harold James Potter is now the head of the family and that is that. Come along dear, I brought all the necessary work that needs to be done for this year. You all had best write down what you want to spend your monthly allowances on for him to review.” she said leading Harry out of the Great Hall.
Once she and he had left, the relatives all began to grumble. “I don't believe this...”

“Why should we have to tell him what we want?” whined one teenage girl.

“It's always been that way. That's how the allowance is divvied up.” said Rudolph taking a seat. “Your rent, your food, your necessities are all tallied in and then you get a bit of spending money on top of that. If you want to get something special, then you have to inform the head of the family, if they feel that it's worthwhile enough, you can get it.”

“We can't be trusted with our own money?” asked one young man incredulously.

“It's the family money, if you get a job, then that money's all yours and you'll still get your allowance on top of that.” said Leroy. “Each member of the family, young and old get's an allowance. Even if you married in.”

Harry followed his Grandmother to the teacher's staff room and closed the door behind them. She was carrying a large bag, and he had a bad feeling his arm would fall off from what he imagined all the paper work would look like.

“Come along dear, we have much to do.” said his Great Grandmother as she sat at a desk beside the fire.

“Yes ma'am.” said Harry as he pulled himself a chair.

“Now, I hope you realize just how much work this is going to be. You may have to dedicate at least five hours of your time every day to deal with all of this. Each family member get's a monthly allowance, and you'll need to examine each one of the requests. Unfortunately, they sometimes have the habit of asking for quite a bit extra from time to time. The holidays are one thing, but just day to day without rhyme or reason is something different altogether.”

“Don't we have enough money?” asked Harry. “To do what we want?”

His Grandmother took a deep breath, “Your Great Uncles and Aunts...are not the most frugal of sorts. The reason they're living with me, is because they went through their entire personal accounts and spent it on the most lavish and useless things. So they will be a bit more...wanting.”

She looked at the paper stacks and looked at her Great-grandson. “I hope you have a very strong and young owl.”

“Yes ma'am, I have Hedwig, she's a snowy owl.”

“Oh the one?” said the woman with a raised brow. “You'll need to utilize a few more. I'll send three more owls to be yours, just for family purposes, you may use yours for personal use.”

“How many owls do we have?” said Harry in shock.

“We have thirty at the moment.” said Mrs. Potter nonchalantly. “But we expect a few more with the new hatchings.”

She handed him a stack of papers and walked him through the process of taking the money out of the main account of the Potter family. He thumbed through the paperwork to see how much rent it cost each member of the family to stay in the Potter castle and the costs to feed them all.

“Do you see anything that can be whittled down?” asked his grandmother as she sipped her tea.

“The food bill perhaps, steaks for dinner every night is a bit much. I can plan out a few meals for you to have that won't exactly cost a broom and a wand.” said Harry as he took a spare roll of parchment and wrote down an assortment of different yet elegant meals that would work on a smaller budget.

“So you are a cook as well...” said the woman with a smile.

Harry looked further down at the list of what the larger family needed from the vaults. Everything else seemed to make sense, though...for the life of him he couldn't really understand why they needed almost five thousand galleons each for shopping. He voiced his concern when his Grandmother smiled, “That's what I would like to know, you will be able to tell them no, I didn't have the ability to do it without them fighting me. Later, I can give you something else that will help, I just need to find it.”
“So...you think they won't fight me?” asked Harry.

“They wouldn't dare, you could completely cut of their allowances and they'd have to find jobs, not that any of them would be able to get one very easily. Despite what my husband and I tried to teach them, they're not the kindest to those who would employ them.” said his Great Grandmother shaking her head. “They would try their best to keep on your good side, so as to not have their funds shrink.”

“They weren't off to a good start.” said Harry. “If they wanted to keep me happy, they wouldn't try and oust me would they?”

“It's hard to figure out my children and grandchildren, I just try to maintain the peace and try and install some order in this family.” she said. “Now that Rudolph, Leroy and you are here, I think I will be able to reign in the rest of them.”

“What do you want me to do? Until I learn everything I can, I should ask you what to do, ask you for help, right?” said Harry taking quill in hand again.

“Just do the best you can dear, there's no damage you can really do, they may be uncomfortable, but I think a little hard times would do them some good. Just to pay them back for trying to sell everything out from under me.” said the woman with a frown on her face.

“Did you lose anything?” asked Harry.

“No, they had things appraised, but not sold.” she said. “It was a close thing.”

“So, I just need to...” said Harry, but was interrupted. The rest of the family decided to come in and put a halt to the meeting of the Heads of the family

“Mother...Harlan...” said one of the men.

“Harold.” corrected the Matriarch.

“Harry.” corrected Harry.
“Yes, well...we'd just like to say how sorry we were that lacked an open mind, we're just so used to having Rudolph as the head of the family that anyone younger just didn't sound right.” said the leader of the group.

Harry and his Great Grandmother exchanged looks.

“So, we'd like to start things fresh and start over.” said the man with a strained smile.

“Uh sure...” said Harry.

“Have you made any decisions yet?” asked the man.

“Well...” said Harry.

“He'll let you know next week.” said the woman. “Rudy, please escort them back out. Harry and I need to get back to work.”

Rudolph then ushered the people out of the room and came back in to see where they were.

“Hope you and Harry don't mind me and Leroy hanging out.” said Rudolph sitting down on the sofa.

“Leroy and I, dear...honestly Leroy, I thought you would have taught him some grammar down in the jungle.” said Mrs. Potter shaking her head fondly.

“It's easier to teach a cat to fetch.” said Leroy leaning against Rudolph.

“There's a lot of stuff to do.” said Harry running his hand down his face.

“It's time consuming, and I can do most of the paperwork for you.” said Uncle Rudolph. “You just tell me what you decide and I'll put it down on parchment.”
“I'll take you up on that offer.” said Harry. “At least until summer.”

“Are you going to stay around?” asked Leroy with a smile to his Mother in law.

“No Leroy dear, I need to get back home and prepare for the foot stamping of the rest of them. But I hope to see you all at home when summer comes.”

“Ah...” said Harry.

“Yeah...” said Uncle Rudolph.

“About that...” said Leroy.

“What's wrong?” asked Mrs. Potter.

“Harry's guardian is Sirius Black.” said Rudolph. “He's living with him.”

Mrs. Potter looked away for a moment, but then turned back.

“Well, then I suppose you'll have to come for a few weeks or so sometime during the summer. It would be best for you to spend a little while at the castle.” said Mrs. Potter with a smile, then she stood up, gave Harry and his two uncles an embrace. She then turned and left.

Rudolph stared at his mother's back until the door closed behind her. “I can't believe how easy that went.”

“Why is that?” asked Harry.

“The rest of my family is...sort of ...well you saw.” said Rudolph. “I don't know what the hell happened to make me the way I am.”
“You got me!” said Leroy with a smile.

Rudolph smiled and shook his head.

“So what do we do now?” asked Harry.

“Now...I just walk you through what a Patriarch of the Potter family is supposed to do every month, and we go from there.” said Rudolph. “We can work on that next weekend, take the rest of the day off.”

“What do you want to now?” asked Leroy.

“I just want a nap.” said Harry standing up slowly. “I'm really tired all of a sudden.”

“It's dealing with all the nonsense my family coughs up. I don't think the teachers will mind if you camp out on their couch.” said Rudolph and they watched Harry walk over to the sofa and fall asleep almost instantly.

“Think he's ready?” asked Leroy.

“He'll have to be, but he's seems fair enough to be in charge...” said Rudolph. “And I don't want the job...”

“But you know how to do everything.” said Leroy.

“Only cause I watch my brother and father do it.” said Rudolph, “But you know...I think Harry'll put some responsibility into them. That should shake them up a bit.” he added with a smile.

Chapter End Notes

Thanks for reading, please comment
That evening, Harry awoke to someone else sitting in the adjacent chair, keeping watch over the sleeping teenager.

“Greetings' Potter.” said the man sitting in the chair, a cup of warm tea in his hands.

“Pro...Professor Flitwick?” yawned Harry.

“Did you get enough rest?” asked Professor Flitwick as he handed Harry a warm teacup.

“Yes sir, I was just a little worn out.” said Harry taking the cup and drinking deeply.

“I can understand that, I've met your Great Uncles and Aunts, they are a bit much to handle all in one shot.” said Flitwick with a smile.

“Weren't they ever students here?” asked Harry.

“No, I would have remembered your cousins if they had, they decided that since they themselves were home schooled, they would have their children as well.” said Flitwick. “Like the Malfoys and Blacks family, your family is considered Wizard blue bloods as it were.”

Harry heaved a great sigh and stood up. “Thanks for the tea, Professor, sorry I fell asleep.”

“Not at all dear boy.” said Professor Flitwick, “Dinner is about to start, and I believe Sirius was looking for you.”
“Didn’t Uncle Rudolph and Uncle Leroy tell him where I was?” asked Harry.

“I don’t know, they had to leave right away, it seemed that your Great Uncles were complaining down in the Three Broomsticks and raising a raucous. Potters are not known for holding their liquor well.”

Harry laughed softly as he walked out of the room. Now that he was well rested, he had better go into the Great Hall and wait for Sirius. The thought wasn’t even out of his head yet when he opened the door and Sirius' face was inches away from his own.

“Where were you?” demanded Sirius.

“Easy there...I just took a nap in the teachers lounge.” said Harry.

“Aren’t you feeling well?” said Sirius switching from slightly cross to intensely worried.

“I’m fine, I was just tired, now I'm hungry.” said Harry. “Can I get some food?”

Sirius turned on his heel and hurried over to the table to get him a towering plate of food. “My legs aren't broken.” said Harry loudly.

“Let him do it, he wanted to come right home...he was having Cub withdrawl.” said Remus with a smirk.

“Just when I think he couldn't be any more abnormal.” said Harry with a smile, he took the smaller of the two plates that Sirius brought him and sat down in the bowl. Mrs. McFinn and Dr. Clark came into the Great Hall and stopped behind the bowl and patted Harry's shoulders.

“How did your family meeting go?” asked Dr. Clark with a smile.

“It went fine, what did you two do?” asked Harry.
“Speckerton took the three of us to Hogsmede, I still can't get over everything there.” said Mrs. McFinn.

“The three of you?” asked Harry.

“James possessed him again. I don't know if that's all that healthy for Speckerton though.” said Dr. Clark.

“Officer McFinn said that it wasn't hurting him...” said Harry softly.

“Well, if it's not hurting him, then the poor thing needs more sleep.” said Mrs. McFinn, “and I think that's what he's going to be doing till tomorrow.”

“No harm in that...” said Harry, he looked over and saw the column of light and saw Officer McFinn flipping through the pages of the Memoir books.

Harry gazed at Officer McFinn till Remus tugged a lock of Harry's hair. “Hey...what are you thinking about?”

“I just miss him, that's all.” said Harry.

“I know...and this can't be easy on you...” said Remus.

“It's not, but...I wouldn't say I would rather not see him again.” said Harry softly. Harry ate his meal quietly, Sirius and Remus looked between each other and kept an eye on Harry.

Once the meal was over, then the noise began to climb once more.

“I want to cook again!” said a few girls loudly.

“Yeah that was a lot of fun!” said a younger girl excitedly.
Harry sighed as he took a sip of pumpkin juice, he had a feeling that cooking would become a big hit with the kids that had never cooked before. When they had demonstrated their primary cooking skills at the Bonfire Night celebration, Harry found that a fair few of them had some ability, while the others made him nearly sick to his stomach. He had to give them credit, it was (hopefully) their first time.

Suddenly, the smell of burning chocolate came to his nostrils and he looked up. Someone had summoned both of the stoves from wherever they were stashed and a trio of girls were placing Honeydukes chocolate bars in a pan, which was straight over the heat.

He leaped from the bowl, and ripped the pan off the flames. “That explains the burnt chocolate over a few of the pies.” he muttered to himself. “You don't put chocolate over direct heat...” he said looking behind him at the shocked looks. Mrs. McFinn and Mrs. Weasley were also making their hurried way to save the pan of chocolate, but they weren't as fast as the white-haired boy.

“Then how do you melt it?” asked one of the younger girls with a confused look on her face.

“You boil water, then you put the pan in the water, then you put the chocolate in the pan.” said Harry wearily. “If you don't know how to do something, don't do it, or get an adult.” Harry then looked around at the adults, who the hell brought out the kitchen anyway? He scanned the crowd until he saw one guilty face.

“Tonks...” said Remus, knowing why Harry was scanning the crowd.

“They..wanted to cook again...” said Tonks guiltily. “And all the adults are here...”

Harry heaved a great sigh and turned to the three girls that were burning the chocolate. “Next time you want to cook, tell Mrs. Weasley, or Mrs. McFinn.”

“How about you?” asked the youngest girl bravely.

Harry smirked. “Me too...I guess...” Harry placed the dirty pan off to the side and turned to look at the girls. “What were you trying to do?”

“We...didn't decide yet.” whispered one of the girls shyly.
“Well... hang on...did you girls turn on the stove part?” asked Harry.

“No...” said one of the girls curiously.

“I'm sure we just turned on the top part.” said the other girl.

“Hold on, didn't the twins say they wanted to borrow the stove?” asked one of the girls.

Harry lowered the door to the oven slowly.

“WAIT!” shouted the twins, who had just reentered the Great Hall.

Suddenly a terrific bang erupted from the oven and Harry was sent sprawling to the ground, clutching his face.

“AARGH!” he screamed, his face was blackened and he writhed in pain.

Sirius leaped from the bowl and went to his godson's side, as did many other people.

“AAAHHH!” screamed Harry.

“Harry! Harry, are you alright?” yelled Sirius trying to soothe his godson, and take the young man's hands away from his face.

“Come on, Harry, show me what hurts.” said Dr. Clark, leaping into his old profession in a heartbeat. He had to see what was wrong, he had to know what hurt, so he could help. He knew he didn't have the equipment, but he'd be able to help verbally.

“Son of a bitch!” yelled Harry as his back arched and he continued to squirm on the ground. His hands still clutching his face. “Oh my god!”
“Mr. Potter...let us have a look!” said Madam Pomfrey trying to pry the boy's hand loose. They pulled Harry's hands away from his face. His face was blackened, and his eyes were shut tight, but there were burns around his lids.

Sirius and Remus had to hold both of Harry's hands down, but Harry was still writhing and his back was arching, and he was still screaming. The students kept back and looked on with shocked looks, the twins in particular were huddled over a bag and arguing between themselves.

“I cannot tell what's wrong...Potter, open your eyes.” said Madam Pomfrey.

“PLEASE, JUST STOP THE PAIN!” begged Harry loudly.

“Open your eyes, boy!” hissed Snape.

“I can't! It hurts!” screamed Harry.

“Here!” said Fred and George together, holding a phial and splashing the contents on Harry's face. Harry's body stopped contorting, and he finally laid still...he was unconscious.

“What the hell?” asked Bill as he smacked the two of them on the top of their heads. “What was that thing?”

“The girls said they were just going to use the stove top, we wanted to use the oven.” said Fred.

“We told them we were!” said George. “It's not our fault they have the memory span of a goldfish!”

“What...was...it...” said Bill darkly.

Fred and George looked at each other, “We were making some exploding candy.” said Fred.
“If you open the oven too early, the explosion is bigger, the longer you wait, the less of a bang...” said George.

“We said don't open the oven to the girls.” said Fred.

“And we screamed it before Harry opened it.” said George.

“We're sorry!” said the twins together.

“And what's the stuff you poured on his face?” asked Sirius grasping Harry's hand as he laid in Mrs. McFinn's arms.

“It's just some potion we discovered that healed burns and most other wounds we tend to give ourselves.” said Fred.

Snape looked at them, and then turned to look at Harry, he took a small sample off his face and studied it.

“Give me a phial of that potion.” said Snape quickly.

“Why?” said Fred.

“Frederick!” said Mrs. Weasley shrilly.

“Mum! We...” said George.

“I promise he won't do anything but examine it, he won't claim it for his own.” said Dumbledore soothingly yet quickly. “But we need to make sure that Harry doesn't need any further care.”

Fred and George exchanged looks and then handed Snape a small glass tube.

Mrs. McFinn rocked Harry's unconscious form back in forth in her arms. He hadn't made a single move since the liquid made contact with his face, but then he began to groan. His eyes began to flutter open, but he closed them quickly.

“What's wrong sweetie?” asked Mrs. McFinn softly.

“My eyes...the light hurts...” said Harry groaning.

Madam Pomfrey levitated him up into the air and carried him out of the Great Hall. Mrs. McFinn, Dr. Clark, Sirius, and Remus followed her out.

“Keep me updated!” shouted Officer McFinn worriedly. He hated being stuck in the light, but he couldn't make his way over to him. He sent a scowl over to the twin tricksters for being so reckless, but their mother was already screaming at them adequately enough.

Harry's face was burning, it wasn't nearly as bad as it was, but every time a small ray of light would make him whimper in pain. After a while the pain soon began to dissipate and he felt comfortable opening his eyes once again, just a little.

“Hold on Harry.” came Sirius' voice. “We got you something...”

He felt something being placed over his eyes, it was his glasses. He opened his eyes a little further and saw that it wasn't, they were a pair of sunglasses.

“That should help for a while, right?” asked Sirius tenderly.

“It was something the twins were making, they had told the girls that they were making something, but they forgot all about it.” said Sirius.

“Twins or the girls?”

“The girls forgot, Poppy says that you're fine, but you might be light sensitive for a while.” said Sirius. “That potion that the twins dumped on you actually healed about ninety percent of the injuries...she took care of the rest.” said Remus.

“What the hell were the twins making?” asked Harry pushing himself further into the cushions, content with just staying in bed.

“Exploding candy.” said Dr. Clark.

“Remind me to buy a box, I'm sure Voldemort will love it.” said Harry with a weak laugh, he turned on his side and tried to fall back to sleep. “He's so hard to buy for, for Christmas.”

“You alright, cub?” asked Sirius nervously, but his face did hold a smile, nothing could break his godson.

“I'm fine, I just want some sleep.” said Harry yawning. “Oh crud…”

“What?” asked Mrs. McFinn.

“Better tell Mrs. Weasley I'm okay, before she kills the two of them.” said Harry.

“We'll tell her...you just rest.” said Remus patting Harry's shoulder and walking out the door.

Sirius brushed Harry's hair back as Mrs. McFinn held Harry's hand and hummed as she stroked his cheek.

“Just think cub...seven more months, and you'll be home...I can't wait...” said Sirius softly.

Remus walked up to where the Mr. and Mrs. Weasley were staying, and he could hear her still shouting at the twins, but he could hear Charlie defending them.
“Of all the...” screeched Mrs. Weasley.

“Mum, they did tell someone it was in there, they even tried to stop them from opening it.” said Charlie.

“They finally crossed the line, that...those things were dangerous!” said Mrs. Weasley angrily.

“Molly, please...calm down...” said Mr. Weasley tiredly.

“They could have killed Harry!” said Mrs. Weasley.

“But they didn't.” said Remus coming in the door. “He's going to be fine, a little sensitive to light for a while, but he's fine.” he hoped his smile would reassure them. Then he turned to the twins, knowing they could possibly use the information he would pass along. “Harry also want's to place an order for that candy, he's been looking for the perfect gift for Voldemort.”

The twins looked at each other, and then they smiled.

“They...” Mrs. Weasley yelled.

“Molly, Harry's fine, he doesn't even blame the twins, it was an accident.” said Remus soothingly.

“We swear, Mum..” said Fred.

“The next time we make it...” said George.

“No one else will be around.” said the twins together.

“You'd better have an adult around.” said Mrs. Weasley.

“Dear, they're of age.” said Mr. Weasley quietly.
Mrs. Weasley rounded on her husband, and while she was distracted, the younger Weasleys and Remus made their escape.

“Thanks for trying to save us.” said Fred.

“Oh, I'm mad at you two as well, but...it was an accident, and I'm still trying to keep calm.” said Remus. “I figure your mother shouting at you is sufficient punishment enough.”

“So much for saving us.” said George. Remus smiled.
Dumbledore sat beside the hospital bed, with Sirius on the other side. Harry was still fast asleep, lying on his stomach with an arm hanging off the side of the bed and his mouth open. Around midnight, Dr. Nicodemus came to inspect him, and examined him while he was asleep.

“He'll be visually impaired for a week or so.” said Dr. Nicodemus as he carefully lifted the covers over Harry and brought his arm up onto the bed.

“No one is real fond of that. No cooking, fighting, just rest and keep those sunglasses on him.” said Dr. Nicodemus bagging up his instruments.

Dumbledore heaved a great sigh and looked at the sleeping youth. He had been through so much, how much more did he have to endure?

Hours later, the clock in the hospital ward chimed eight times, it was time to wake the poor boy up, as well as the snoring man at Harry's other side.

“Sirius...Sirius, time to wake up.” said Dumbledore patting the man's shoulder.

“Ugh...it can't be morning already.” said Sirius groaning loudly.

“It's eight o'clock to be precise, now...Harry...it's time to wake up, dear boy.” said Dumbledore taking the sunglasses and placing them carefully over Harry's eyes. Harry moaned and behind the glasses, his eyes fluttered open.

“That's it, time to get up and get dressed for breakfast.” said Dumbledore standing up and gathering Harry's newly washed clothes.

“Argh...my eyes still hurt a bit.” said Harry slipping into his shirt slowly.

“We'll take care of things so that you don't have any bright sunlight on you.” said Sirius watching Harry put his pants on for the second time, first time he had put them on backwards.

The bowl down in the Great Hall now sported a new accessory besides the pillows and blankets. It now had a large canopy that bathed the bowl in a soothing shade, the sight made the twins cringe guiltily.

When everyone was present, and Harry was resting comfortably, they began the day of reading.
“The Ministry” read Officer McFinn.

“Just what I need on top of this, a headache.” groaned Harry.

First paragraph, first sentence, eighth word.

“Oh my god, you are not getting up that early this summer.” moaned Sirius.

“You're telling me.” said Harry with a smile.

First paragraph, third sentence,

“Relax, child, you don't have anything to worry about.” said Bathilda Bagshot, then she stopped.

“Never mind, I had forgotten Umbridge had staged the entire thing.”

“I still can hardly believe it.” said Madam Bones.

“I don’t believe it.” muttered Fudge.

“Don't even think about it.” said Chief Hawkeye.

End of first paragraph.

“Great, a pervert picture.” said Katie.

Dumbledore's eyes widened, Phineas was not like that, but...it did sound a bit unsettling, him laughing as a child got dressed.

Second paragraph, second sentence.

“You can't wake Ron with anything, not even a loud bang.” said Bill with a smile.

Second paragraph, third sentence, first comma.

The students went quiet.

“Poor Harry.” said a few girls sadly.

Harry blushed.
“That thought would have made me cry.” said Alicia.

End of second paragraph.

None of us could sleep either.” said Sirius kissing the top of Harry's head as he leaned against him.

End of third paragraph.

Several people snickered.

“Thought I was going to throw up if I ate more than that.” said Harry quietly.

Fifth paragraph.

“He was beginning to catch on...which is sort of shocking.” said Tonks. “Normally, as long as we meet a quota, he doesn't care what we do.”
Sixth paragraph.

“Why dear?” asked Mrs. Weasley looking shocked.

“I wasn't...I didn't...” said Harry looking down.

“It's okay cub, you were just stressing out.” said Sirius soothingly.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Seventh paragraph, first sentence.

“I had a bomber jacket, I loved that thing.” said Officer McFinn fondly, “Such a classic look.”

“I still have it.” said Mrs. McFin, she sent a fleeting look over to Harry. Officer McFinn caught the look and nodded.

End of seventh paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Eighth paragraph.

“That's Harryspeak for 'I feel like crap, but I'll be brave about it.'” said Ron with a smirk.

Dialogue line.

Ninth paragraph.

“Did you have a feeling they weren't going to let you go so easily?” asked Remus.

“The Ministry's track record wasn't so good when it came to dealing with me.” said Harry.

Dialogue line.

“That's the way it should have been.” said Madam Bones sternly to the Minister.

Dialogue line.
“I've dealt with teenage tempers before, whatever he would have done, it wouldn't have surprised me.” said Madam Bones.

“I wouldn't have shouted.” said Harry.

“You looked about ready to faint.” said Percy quietly.

“As long as the jury doesn't have it out for you to start with.” said Nightstrike.

“Never.” said Sirius, Remus, Rudolph and Harry together.

“He's not talking again.” said Dr. Clark.

“He didn't even finish his first slice.” said Mrs. Weasley.
“And what would you have done?” said Madam Bones smugly.

“Uh...” said Sirius leaning back a bit.

“Thought so.” said Madam Bones with a smirk.

Fifteenth paragraph.
Dialogue line.
Dialogue line.
Sixteenth paragraph, second sentence.
“She was always a dainty sleeper.” said Sirius with a sneer.

End of sixteenth paragraph.
Dialogue line.
Dialogue set.
“It impressed me.” said Madam Bones, “And quite a few of my colleagues.”

Seventeenth paragraph, second sentence.
Mr. Weasley smiled over to Harry. “You really do keep your eyes peeled for anything don't you?”

End of seventeenth paragraph.
Dialogue line.
Dialogue line.
Dialogue line.
Dr. Clark and Mrs. McFinn worked hard to contain their laughter, Officer McFinn was snickering silently to himself.

Eighteenth paragraph.
“Poor Harry.” muttered Seamus.

“It was fascinating!” said Mr. Weasley rapturously.

“I didn't need to hear that.” said Harry with a chuckle.

“Well, it's Harry's lucky day then.” said Ernie.

“Me too.” said Dr. Clark.

“Would have been awesome if it had been a blue police phone box.” said Dr. Clark.

“Why?” asked several people.

“Never mind.” laughed Dr. Clark.
“It was actually a Muggle, his car was towed, he didn't have one of those fellytones and got upset when the one in the phone booth didn't work.” said Mr. Weasly.

“How do you know?” asked Neville.

“I watched them tow the car, it was amazing.” said Mr. Weasley.

End of twenty-second paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

The three muggles listened/read and sat in silence.

“Did that just spell...” asked Mrs. McFinn.

“It did.” said Officer McFinn.

“What?” asked Ron.

“On a phone, there's numbers and with each number there is three letters attached to it, except the number nine, that has four.” said Dr. Clark.

“The numbers that Mr. Weasley pushed, spelled out the word Magic.” said Mrs. McFinn.

Harry shook his head.

Twenty-third paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“I'm Tom Riddle, here to destroy the Ministry of Magic.” said Fred.

“Please come in.” said George. “Have a badge and walk about at your leisure.”

“Their security sucks.” said Fred.

“What...how do you boys know it will let you in?” asked Mrs. Weasley.

“Uh...Dad took us to work, and left us with Perkins while he went to deliver a report, and...we went to test the Muggle-side entrance.” said Fred.

“We used a bunch of names and they let us in every time.” said George. “The security guy just sat there reading a magazine.”

Lionus and his superior just shook their heads.
“Way to pronounce to the world about your hearing, which should really be privileged information.” said Nightstrike.

“What if you were seen?” asked Dr. Clark.

“The windows are one way.” said Mr. Weasley.

“What if you got stuck halfway down?” asked Mrs. McFinn.

“Ah...well...I don't know.” said Mr. Weasley with a sheepish smile.

“Drop your asinine charges and I will.” said a seventh year.

They were standing at one end of a very long and splendid hall with a highly polished, dark wood floor. The peacock-blue ceiling was inlaid with gleaming golden symbols that were continually moving and changing like some enormous heavenly notice board.

“It an ancient seal, it keeps the roof from caving in on anyone down below.” said Dumbledore.

“Wow, wonder why they were there that early in the morning?” asked Dean.
Twenty-eighth paragraph, fifth sentence.

Tempest made a gagging sound.

“That's not my favorite Ministry statue.” said Dr. Nicodemus.

“Worst one of the lot in my opinion.” said Chief Hawkeye.

“I've asked the Minister four times to change the damn thing.” said Lionus.

End of twenty-eighth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Twenty-ninth paragraph.

Sign on the fountain.

“They're lucky to get twenty galleons a month in there.” said Tonks.

Dialogue line.

“That's generous.” said Kingsley. “I walk past the thing every day and I don't donate anything.”

Dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“You could avoid him and make your way into the ministry.” said Fred.

Thirtieth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Thirty-first paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“No, that's wrong.” said Fred.

“What would happen if they said it was wrong?” asked George.
“Ollivander would be called and he'd state the name of the person who is supposed to wield it.” said Dumbledore.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“So...you could take polyjuice, take someone else's wand, and just walk on in? Wow, so easy to break into the place.” said Neville.

Harry smiled guiltily, everyone was now trying to figure out ways to sneak in...he was becoming a bad influence.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Thirty-second paragraph.

Dialogue set.

“ Took him long enough.” said Bill.

Thirty-third paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Are you sure?” asked Ernie.

“Poor thing could have heartburn.” said Justin laughing.

Fred and George frowned. “Now their stealing our jokes.”

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Thirty-fourth paragraph.

“Ludicrous Patents?” asked a first year.
“Sort of like what our stuff is.” said Fred and George. “No real purpose except for fun.”

Thirdy-fifth paragraph.

“I hate that level.” said Charlie.

“Only cause you failed the Apparation Test.” said Fred.

Thirdy-sixth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Ugh, keep that info for later in the morning.” said Angelina.

Thirdy-seventh paragraph.

Dialogue set.

“Boring level.” said Lee.

Thirdy-eighth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“The most overstated departments.” said Chief Hawkeye.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“That committee tries to come up with excuses to explain large magical occurrences that happen in the Muggle world.”

“Like the gas explosion.” said Dr. Clark sternly.

Thirdy-ninth paragraph.

Dialogue line.
“I can't wait to hear what your office is like.” said Lionus looking fiercely at Fudge.

“It wasn't just me!” said Fudge.

“And you didn't make it any better!” said Lionus.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, second sentence.

Nightstrike chuckled.

End of dialogue set.

Fortieth paragraph.

Forty-first paragraph, third sentence.

“Spying on us, huh?” said Tonks with a smile.

End of forty-first paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Forty-second paragraph, first sentence.

“Sorry.” said Harry and Mr. Weasley together.

End of forty-second paragraph.

Forty-third paragraph.

“Scared the hell out of me, when the pictures started to wave at me.” said Harry.

“Why would you be frightened? I'd wave.” said Sirius.

“Yeah, but the pictures went from looking scary, to waving at me.” said Harry.

Dialogue set.
“Liar.” muttered Sirius with a smile.

Forty-fourth paragraph.

“Firelegs?” asked Mrs. McFinn.

“Firearms, I think.” said Officer McFinn.

Dialogue set.

Several people laughed.

Forty-fifth paragraph.

Forty-sixth paragraph, first sentence.

Lionus snarled in the Minister's direction.

End of forty-sixth paragraph.

“I'm getting pissed.” said Lionus rubbing the bridge of his nose.

Forty-seventh paragraph.

“He walked out of almost every single picture we have of the family.” said Ron.

Dialogue set, second sentence.

“IF THAT'S THE CASE, THEN NO ONE NEEDS ONE!” shouted Lionus.

“Easy, Lionus.” said Chief Hawkeye.

“Sorry sir...but...” said Lionus.

“I know, I know...” said Chief Hawkeye, “Viper.”

A large black figure fell from the ceiling and landed nimbly in front of the Chief.
“Sir?” he said kneeling in front of the man.

“Go back to Headquarters and get Vlad, I want him to rearrange and remodel the English Ministry.” said Chief Hawkeye, “I want it done right the first time. I want all the departments regulatory sized and staffed and while you're at it, go through the payroll books once more. I want everyone in the past fifty years paid the correct amount.”

“Yes sir...” said Viper as he leaped back into the air and disappeared.

“There, problem solved.”

“You can't just...” said Fudge.

“I can do whatever I wish.” said Chief Hawkeye.

End of dialogue set.

Forty-eighth paragraph, first sentence, ninth word.

“And Perkins isn't thinner than him.” said Mr. Weasley.

End of forty-eighth paragraph.

Dialogue set.

Forty-ninth paragraph.

“That's sick.” said Dr. Clark holding his stomach.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, second sentence.

“That's really sick.” said Mrs. McFinn turning slightly pale.

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.
“So...what's the difference between the two?” asked Dr. Clark.

“Aurors handle murderers, Death Eaters and others like that, the Patrol handle the more minor offenders.” said Madam Bones.

End of dialogue set.

Fiftieth paragraph.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Fifty-first paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“So...they made sure that you missed it.” said Chief Hawkeye.

“I was late as well.” said Madam Bones sternly.

Fudge cringed horribly in his seat.

Fifty-second paragraph.

Dialogue set, second sentence, third word.

“You had to be faking it.” said Ron. “Dad doesn't run that fast.”

“I run fast, especially when one of my kids are in trouble.” said Mr. Weasley.

“I'm...” said Harry.

“Yes...you...are...” said the Weasleys slowly.

End of dialogue set.

“We were going pretty fast.” said Harry.

The twins looked over to Harry, it was a little creepy and sad to see his eyes covered...and the cause was what they had done.
“It wouldn't have been the Ministry's fault technically, the defendant is supposed to be personally notified about the change of time or venue.” said Snape plainly.

“Oh my god.” said Sirius, “He's defending you.”

“Shut up, mutt.” said Snape waspishly.

“They wanted to try him where they tried Death Eaters.” said Mr. Weasley.

“Why the hell would they put the Boy Who Lived down there?” said Mr. Diggory curiously.

“Just so they could cart him off to Azkaban or St. Mungos without too much trouble.” said Dumbledore tensely.

“How in the world do you know such big words?” said Remus staring at Harry.

“He can be a bit creepy.” said one of the Unspeakables.

“How's he doing?” asked another one.
“He's still a bit off, but hopefully he'll have a breakthrough and get better.” said one Unspeakable.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, third sentence, first comma.

Dumbledore and a few of the Order members looked up in surprise.

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

“Just a way to assassinate me I suppose.” said Harry absently.

The hall went quiet, Madam Bones looked pale and shocked.

Sirius' face was pale as well... “You're not to go near the Minister or anyone else that shares his views, ever again.”

The Minister looked horrified, especially when Tempest and Nightstrike turned to glare at him.

“I..I wouldn't...”

Fifty-seventh paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Fifty-eighth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“I was hoping he was going to be with me.” said Harry. “Aren't I suppose to have an adult with me when questioned?”

“Well, yes...you are supposed to have a Child Advocate at the very least.” said Madam Bones.

“I didn't have one.” said Harry.

“You would have had one in my office, but it seems that Umbridge didn't pass on the message like she said she would.” said Madam Bones.

“So this trial was illegal.” said Harry.

“It was.” said Madam Bones.
End of chapter

“Oh, I hope he gets through this alright.” said one of the girls worriedly.

“It's done and over with, I made it through.” said Harry rolling his eyes.

“Doesn't mean we'll stop worrying.” said Sirius squeezing Harry slightly.
“This should be very enlightening, I've never been on the other side of the bench.” said Madam Bones.

“For me as well.” said Chief Hawkeye leaning forward.

First paragraph, first sentence.

“Don't blame you.” muttered Snape.

First paragraph, third sentence, first colon.

The Chief turned slowly, but caught himself. “Ah, the Pensieve, of course.”

End of first paragraph.

“They deserve it.” muttered Neville.

Second paragraph.

Third paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Wasn't his fault, you didn't alert him to the time change!” said Sirius.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, first sentence.

“Bullshit, it most certainly is your fault.” muttered Bill.
“We didn't get an owl, our mail was forwarded to go to Headquarters.” said Mr. Weasley.

“And if it went to the Dursleys, they would have burnt it on sight.” said Harry. “I told him my aunt and uncle didn't like magic.”

Fudge cringed in his seat, sending angry looks over to Umbridge.

“I told you to send the blasted letter to the Weasleys,” muttered Fudge.

“YOU PUT HIM IN \textit{THAT} ROOM?” bellowed Snape.

“He didn't deserve to be in \textit{THAT} room?” shouted Sirius.

“Fudge and Umbridge picked it, my office would have sufficed for legal purposes.” said Madam Bones. “He was underage, he was in no way needing of such overreaching methods.”

“Be thankful that I've already had a talk with you.” said Chief Hawkey, pointing a finger at Fudge.

“Is Snape \textit{angry}?” whispered Ron.

Hermione stared at the Potions Master.

“I was getting ready to spring up at the moment's notice.” said Harry.

“Wise thoughts, but those chains would have followed you anywhere you ran in the room.” said Dumbledore.

“Get sick, maybe they'll take pity on you.” said Dean.

“Don't get sick, for one reason, the two orchestrating this thing will claim you have a guilty conscience.” said Remus.
“They weren’t sure why they were there.” said Madam Bones.

Sixth paragraph, third sentence.

“That was what I was going for.” said Madam Bones.

End of sixth paragraph.

“How come I know who that is, without much description.” said Dr. Clark sending a glare up to the restrained witch.

Dialogue set, second sentence, second dash.

“It was your fault!” shouted the students.

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue set, second sentence.

Percy shrunk in his seat.

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue set, first sentence, first colon.

“Interrogators? He's a child!” shrieked Mrs. McFinn.

Dialogue set, first sentence, end of first sentence.

“What is an Undersecretary doing at a court hearing?” asked Lionus.

“She's a member of Wizengamot.” said Fudge with a faint note of courage in his voice.

“What?”

“Bought her way on, I'll bet.” muttered Sirius.
“Had Mrs. Weasley put an icepack on it later.” said Harry with a smile.

“Fools.” muttered Tempest.

“They helped kick him out.” said Bathilda Bagshot.

“I waved back.” said Dumbledore.

“I'm sorry.” said Dumbledore quietly.

“I had a feeling that they would try and deter me from defending Harry.” said Dumbledore.

“Why not let Harry sit in the softer seat?” said Madam Pomfrey quickly.
“I didn't think it was wise.” said Dumbledore.

“No, but you thought it was wise to scare the poor fragile boy...” said Madam Pomfrey.

“I'm not fragile!” said Harry.

“Right now, you are dear.” said Mrs. McFinn reaching over and squeezing Harry's hand.

Harry looked down, a frown on his face, but he squeezed the woman's hand back.

Dialogue set, third sentence, first semi-colon.

“They knew he wasn't going to let them win.” said Ron. “Sounds like you and one of your arguments, Harry.”

Harry smirked.

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

Tenth paragraph, first sentence, first semi-colon, third comma.

“...to save his own skin.” said Remus.

Tenth paragraph, first sentence, first semi-colon, fourth comma. “Which was done by a House-elf.” said Kingsley.

End of tenth paragraph.

“And you lost any hope of Harry understanding a word of that.” said Tonks.

“I understood it, I've grown up with Police officers after all.” said Harry with a smile.

“Good boy.” said Officer McFinn proudly.

Harry's heart swelled when he heard the voice, and from the praise...he could feel his heart grow and swell with emotion.

Dialogue line.
“Unfortunately.” muttered Charlie.

“Let him answer!” said Ernie.

“That's not how solicitors, let alone politicians operate, they don't want the deeper truth out there. They'll settle for a half-truth then the full truth.” said Officer McFinn. “Especially when they know they don't have a case.”

“Thank god, it's finally going to be fair.” said Sirius throwing up his hands.

“That's nice to hear, that despite you being unfairly treated, you still find me to be a just official.”

“You've always been fair, as long as I've known you.” said Sirius.
“You've impressed her, I don't know if that's a good thing or not.” said Remus.

“It was a good thing in this case. He could have used any spell, a corporeal Patronus is a bit much, just to cast a spell all...willy-nilly.” said Madam Bones.

Showed me that the students are learning enough to cast advanced spells, I was greatly impressed.” said Madam Bones.

Remus turned pink. “It was just Harry though...”

“That's going to change though.” said Ernie, thinking of the future D.A meetings. They had been going on still, but lately, it was only Ron and Hermione there to teach them.

“Aren't we supposed to be going forward, not backwards?” asked Luna dreamily. “If progress is a bad thing, then we would have to dispose of a lot of things. It sounds like fun, I wonder if I can find the clay cauldron I made?”

Fudge glared at the Ravenclaw student, while the rest of the students just stared.

“Yeah, Mr. holier than thou.” spat Bill.
“Bill...” said Mr. Weasley.

Dialogue line.

“Why wasn't Dumbledore saying anything?” asked Nightstrike.

“He wants to see how far the boy could go on his own.” said Moody.

Fourteenth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“You smug son of a...”

“Mr. Potter!” said Mrs. Weasley staring at Rudolph.

Dialogue line.

“I do now.” said Madam Bones looking sternly over to Umbridge.

Dialogue set, fourth sentence.

“Stupid delusional fool.” said Tempest.

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue set, second sentence.

“Holy cow, you're using big words.” said Seamus.

End of dialogue set.
Fifteenth paragraph.

“I felt we had enough of Fudge's childish behavior.” said Dumbledore with a frown up to the Minister.

Dialogue line.

Sixteenth paragraph, second sentence, first comma.

“His whole plan is shot.” said Sirius. “I still think he's behind it.”

“Umbridge said the Minister wasn't in on it.” said Tonks.

“I wouldn't be too quick to trust her.” muttered Remus.

End of sixteenth paragraph.

“Justice, no matter Wizarding or normal, is not for swift decisions, that's why there are courts.” said Officer McFinn.

Madam Bones nodded to the deceased officer. “Right.”

Dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

“And the Minister knows it full well.” said Madam Bones crossly.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

Percy cringed once again.

Seventeenth paragraph.

“She couldn't find her shoes alas, and she wouldn't let me transfigure her favorite slippers.” said Dumbledore with a slight smile.
“Poor dear.” said Mrs. Weasley.

“We didn't want anyone to get too close to him, to possibly attack, or kidnap him.” said Madam Bones.

“I would have been safer with a wizard or witch in the area to be honest.” said Harry.

“Why do you say that?” asked Remus.

“Cause, if someone had attacked me magically, and I had gotten away, I would have had to wait till Dumbledore got there to be saved.” said Harry. “I wouldn't have run to the Dursleys out of safety, that would never be instinctual. I'd run to Mr. and Mrs. McFinn's old house.” he leaned forward in the bowl chair and pressed his hands together, resting his mouth on his thumbs.

Dumbledore bowed his head.

“Oh my god, seriously?” said Katie rolling her eyes.

“None of your business who her parents were, you freak.” said a seventh year Hufflepuff girl.
“The only thing they can't do, is magic.” said Flitwick. “Everyone knows that.”

“Seems that Fudge fell asleep during that lecture in your class, Filius.” said McGonagall.

“Well, he wasn't really one of my better students.” said Flitwick softly.

“Poor thing's as nervous as a...” said Professor Sprout, stopping slightly.

“Go ahead and finish it.” said McGonagall, a smirk twitching on her lips.

“...a cat.” said Sprout.

“That sounds like it hurts.” said Susan.

“I'm fine dear, I'm very much used to it.” said Madam Bones.

“Why were you so mean?” asked Susan.

Madam Bones sighed. “I was trying to get to the truth dear, and Fudge's outbursts were getting on my nerves.”

Harry felt a shiver go all over his body.

“Here cub.” said Sirius throwing a blanket around himself and his godson, Harry fell against him.
and gripped his godfather's shirt.

“It's alright...it's okay.” said Sirius soothingly as he rubbed his forearm slowly.

End of twentieth paragraph.

“They weren't believing her.” said Fred.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

Twenty-first paragraph.

“They'll believe her now.” said George.

Twenty-second paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

“Well, that's it.” a seventh year Slytherin, “They'll either believe her or not.”

Twenty-third paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Good way to say it.” said Officer McFinn nodding.

Dialogue line.

Twenty-fourth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Bull...” said a sixth year Hufflepuff.
“Exactly, it was very slim...that means someone sent them.” said Lionus.

“Nailed the...”

“Leroy!” said Mrs. Weasley.

“Good, she's not angry with me anymore.” said Rudolph with a smile.

“And you did, but no one bothered to check after the report of a Patronus, the page was ripped out.” said Lionus.

“I was mistaken, not far off, but mistaken.” said Dumbledore.

“It was an obvious assumption.” said Moody.

“Tut tut.” said George.

“Such language.” said Fred.

“Do you kiss your mother with that mouth?” said Lee.
Remus smiled.

His mouth cracked into an even wider smile.

He had to cover his mouth to hide his snickering.

His laughter rang through the hall.

“He hates her guts.” said Sirius.

Umbridge looked furious.

Even Moody began to laugh as the other people in the hall started to chortle.

“Nope you heard him right.” said Ron.

“You are really silly, I mean...that cardigan...” said Lavender shaking her head.
“How about we use our “Big Girl” words.” said Ginny with a malicious smile.

“Jeez, good thing Harry can't see you, you're scary.” said Fred.

“Oh, she scares me all the time.” said Harry with a smirk.

---

“That means shes a creep and to keep away from her.” said Sirius.

“Where was this advice weeks ago.” said Harry with a laugh. He felt Sirius tense up, and instantly regretted what he said. “I didn't...”

“No, I'm sorry...I should have...I don't know, but I should have saved you.” said Sirius softly.

“Don't think about it, please don't think about it.”

---

“I wasn't aiming for amusement.” said Harry.

---

“You were covering the bases.” said Dr. Clark.

---

“Well, someone has to look out for the people against a government official that's willing to allow people to die and be assaulted by the creatures they claim to control.” snapped Dr. Clark.

“Spot on, Sam.” said Mr. Weasley.
End of dialogue set.

Several people snorted.

Dialogue line.

Thirty-first paragraph.

“I was pondering on how this had happened.” said Madam Bones. “It had to be someone from You-Know-Who, I couldn't begin to believe one of my colleagues would stoop to child killing.”

Dialogue set.

“And that has something to do with this!” said Madam Hooch.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

“And then you know that he was trying to save his life! Case closed, acquitted of all charges.” said Bathilda Bagshot slapping the armrest of her chair.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

“Are you deaf? You just heard eyewitness testimony!” said a third year Gryffindor.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Justice is not on a schedule!” said Leroy.

Dialogue line.
“And a hefty lawsuit, not to mention a seizure of all the property owned by almost all the purebloods and half-bloods in the Ministry.” said Rudolph coldly. “Him being the head of the family, he could seize collateral for the longstanding debt, you and countless wizarding families, would be living in poverty and on the street.”

“He...he...he can't do that.” said Fudge.

“Oh yes he can. He can take anything he wants. He can choose how much you pay a month, doesn't have to be a standard amount that you normally pay. He can choose to take all you got for that month, and it still won't settle the debt.” Rudolph added nastily.

Fudge paled considerably.

“I think you scared him into dealing with Monster with kid gloves again.” said Leroy.

“He should have never stopped. Always have the head Potter in a good graces, you'll keep more of your money, possessions and status that way.” said Rudolph.

Dialogue set, second sentence, second comma.

Dumbledore tallied up his fingers. “I count...none.” said Dumbledore with a smile. “Cock and bull stories mean that they are fabrications, Harry has never told me a wild and untrue story.”

Dialogue set, end of second sentence.

“He makes it sound like Harry transfigures teacups every other Monday doesn't he?” said Charlie.

“When he's only done...one accidental, and one on purpose.” said Bill.

End of dialogue set.

“That wasn't him!” said Mrs. Weasley.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Your people never checked the signature of the magic used!” said Sirius.

Dialogue line.
“He'd confess in a heartbeat.” said Ron.

Dialogue set, first sentence.

“You'd better make time jackass.” said Kingsley softly.

“Wow...” said Tonks staring at her fellow Auror.

End of dialogue set.

“You didn't tell him off for that! You didn't even press charges on him! Isn't there a expiration date to press charges on something like that?” asked Dean.

“There is, and he's well beyond it.” said Dumbledore with a smile.

Dialogue set.

“Touche.” said Dr. Nicodemus.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

“Yeah...Harry's hi jinx at school...” said Fred.

“He's such a hellion.” said George.

“It wouldn't gain him any bonus points with the jury.” said the twins together.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, first sentence.

“He's got a point.” said an Unspeakable.

“If the Ministry were to interfere with Hogwarts...” said another.

“I wouldn't let my kids come here, they'd be home schooled.” said another Unspeakable.
“There is enough proof to suggest that you have gone above and beyond the scope of your authority...” said Chief Hawkeye. He scanned the Great Hall and his eyes fell on Kingsley. “Mr. Shacklebolt...”

“Yes sir...?” said the Auror in his deep voice, though there was a slight quiver in it.

“How would you like to be the Minister of Magic?” said the Chief with a smirk.

Kingsley's eyes opened wide. “I'm not into politics sir...I just do what I can...” said Kingsley quickly.

“Good enough...I'll have the necessary paperwork drawn up when the Ministry is done with it's remodel.” said Chief Hawkeye with a smile.

The school erupted in muttering.

“Holy Hippogriffs, can you believe it, Kingsley been made Minister!” said Ron in a whisper.

“I wonder what he'll be like as a Minister?” said Hermione quietly.

“More importantly, look how pale Fudge is right now.” said Neville pointing to the ex-Minister.

“Not like that it can't, just cause you're Minister, doesn't mean you get to stamp all over them.” said Nightstrike.

“Not all that great of changes either.” said Bill.

Rudolph whistled. “You are a dead man, socially.” said Rudolph.

“How do you mean?” squeaked Fudge. His wife was a socialite, if he had killed it...she'd kill him.

“I'm going to tell me mummy on you.” said Rudolph with a sinister smirk.
“They knew they were in the wrong.” said Hermione.

Thirty-second paragraph, second sentence.

“Now he's looking a little green.” said Fred.

End of thirty-second paragraph.

“She figured she couldn't get caught.” said Colin.

Dialogue set.

Thirty-third paragraph, first sentence.

“Just out of curiosity, where would he have gone if he had been found guilty.” whispered Remus.

Dumbledore looked down, out of shame. “He...he would have gone back to the Dursleys.”

Remus snarled and shook his head.

“That is, if I get him out of there before they decided to incarcerate him in St. Mungos.” said Dumbledore.

Thirty-third paragraph, third sentence.

“Wasn't his neck in the noose.” said Harry to himself.

Dumbledore and the people nearest heard him and turned round, guilt stretched across their faces.

Thirty-third paragraph, fourth sentence.

“How come you aren't looking at him sir?” asked a first year.

“A stupid, old man's decision.” said Dumbledore burying his face in his hands.

End of thirty-third paragraph.

Thirty-fourth paragraph, second sentence.
“Don't faint, not around that nutcase.” said Dr. Clark, sending a dark loop up to the Minister. “He'll probably say you were faking it.”

End of thirty-fourth paragraph.

“You couldn't have said anything else, they weren't letting you.” said Mrs. Weasley.

Thirty-fifth paragraph.

“Well, I can understand why people don't speak up now, especially when they feel as if they're being...what is the term...railroaded.” said Madam Bones.

Thirty-sixth paragraph.

“It was a good choice, it did make you look contrite.” said Madam Bones.

Dialogue line.

Thirty-seventh paragraph, second sentence.

“Thank god.” muttered Leroy.

End of thirty-seventh paragraph.

Thirty-eighth paragraph.

“Wonder if they've been bought or not.” said Remus.

Thirty-ninth paragraph.

“I'll show you rage if I ever hear of you doing something like this at all in these books again.” said Chief Hawkeye.

“B-But, these haven't all happened.” said Fudge nervously.

“I don't give a damn.” said Chief Hawkeye.
End of chapter.

Everyone in the Great Hall turned and stared at the Headmaster.

“You didn't even stick around?” said Charlie in shock.

Dumbledore's face was pale, and his eyes were closed.

“Give him one of the phials.” said Harry.

“What?” asked Remus.

“Calming Draught, give him one.” said Harry pointing to where the Headmaster was sitting.

“I'm alright.” said Dumbledore, his voice muffled boy his hands.

“Not till you have a Calming Draught.” said Harry.

Remus handed the Headmaster one of the phials on the table, though he gave the old man a furious look.

I have a lot to make up for...more than I can ever imagine. thought Dumbledore.

Officer McFinn cleared his throat, giving the old man a bit of privacy. “Chapter Nine”

“Oh dear.” said Mrs. Weasley blushing slightly.

Chapter End Notes

Remember to vote on the poll on my Fanfiction page. The one with the most votes by Christmas eve will have it's first chapter posted by Christmas day!
Okay, I didn't post last week because I had a lot of stuff that I had to get done before Christmas. I finished my little cousin's boxes. (They don't look like they took a long time but holy crap did they ever, and I had to redo a few!) And today I was working on my gingerbread village...which isn't done either. But while I was recuperating I did have time to polish this chapter up.

The next update will...hopefully happen next week. There will definitely be a new story starting on Christmas Day, so you all have until Christmas eve to go to my profile page on Fanfiction.net and vote for the story that you want.

First paragraph, first sentence.

“I don't blame you, he abandoned you again!” said Mrs. Weasley, looking furiously over to the Headmaster.

Dumbledore looked shamefully down at his hands.

First paragraph, sixth sentence, fourth comma.

“Didn't know if I was able to go or if they were going to arrest me for something else.” said Harry.

“I suppose we should have told you. Albus, as the adult that was solely on your side, should have said you were free to go.” said Madam Bones.

Dumbledore continued to look down, his hands becoming more and more tense.

End of first paragraph.

“I personally would have sprinted out of there.” said Charlie.

Second paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“He should have.” said McGonagall sending Dumbledore a stern look.
Not without lack of trying.” said Hermione looking angrily at the ground.

“It was...it seemed...so excessive.” said Mr. Weasley.

“Indeed it was.” said Madam Bones with a frown.

“Not enough of them were ashamed of themselves for agreeing to pander to Cornelius.” said Madam Bones shaking her head.

“She creeped the hell out of me.” said Harry with a smirk.

“She still creeps the hell out of me.” said Ron.

Mrs. Weasley looked between her third son and her husband, she smiled softly when they both smiled at each other.

“Picky picky...” said Sirius with a chuckle.
“Shut up.” said Remus shaking his head.

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue set.

“Oh sweetie...I'm happy for you...but I wish this place was safer.” said Mrs. McFinn.

Dialogue set, second sentence, second comma.

“That's why we were a little worried about you.” said Sirius. “With your aunt and all.”

“I figured that, but I didn't bait her, she brought it on herself.” said Harry.

“And I agree...now...leave it at that before we both get in trouble.” said Sirius with a smile nodding over to Remus.

'Way to make me the bad guy.” said Remus with a smirk

End of dialogue set.

Sixth paragraph.

“Gee, wonder who he's talking to?” said Fred.

“And I wonder if he's being professional and not telling anyone outside the court about the trial?” said George.

Seventh paragraph.

Dialogue line.

SMACK!

Chief Hawkeye waved his wand and slapped Fudge across the face with one of his gloves that he had sent flying over to the man. “Biased...corrupt...self-aiding...” he muttered as he sat down.

Fudge looked horrified at the book that was sitting in Officer McFinn's lap.

Eighth paragraph, second sentence.
The people in the bowl pulled Harry close to them, placing protective hands on him.

End of eighth paragraph.

“It's because he's a jackass.” said Dr. Clark soothingly.

Dialogue set.

“Motherf...” snarled Rudolph.

“Easy Rudy.” said Leroy clapping a hand over his husband's mouth.

Ninth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Tenth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, third sentence.

“Here's the big question, what does a murderous slimeball like you doing there?” asked Moody.

“When I was there, he didn't dare come into the Ministry.”

“Course not, he's scared to death of you.” said Tonks with a giggle. “He keeps his mouth shut when it comes to you.”

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

“Sorry.” said Mr. Weasley quickly.
Chief Hawkeye glared fiercely over to the ex Minister with a piercing eyes. “You're lucky I just don't up and kill you.”

Dialogue set, second sentence, second comma.

“Didn't feel like I was anymore.” said Harry silently, he looked over to Dumbledore worriedly...He could see that he was looking pale again and refusing a calming draught from Madam Pomfrey.

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

Eleventh paragraph.

“He was a Death Eater, I wasn't going to let you go till I knew he was gone and you were safe.” said Mr. Weasley.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue set.

Fudge cringed under the glare that the Rangers and Madam Bones gave him.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, third sentence.

Madam Bones glared furiously at the Minister. The Rangers sent him cold looks and muttered amongst themselves.

End of dialogue set.

Twelfth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Good thinking...” said Tonks with an impressed smile.
“And doesn't put Fudge in a good light.” said Harry.

“Screw giving it money Harry, they tried to railroad you.” said Bill.

Several adults began to snicker.

“Better believe it.” said Tempest.

“Don't worry, I'm sure that Vlad is more than able to draw up a more...inspiring and truthful fountain.” said Chief Hawkeye. “Just hope it doesn't frighten any of the youngsters.”

“You are way too generous.” said Remus. “I would have stopped you if I had known what they tried to do.”

“Actually, strangely enough, he created a few believers when he did that.” said Mr. Weasley with a smile.

“Beg your pardon...?” asked Remus.

“They were waiting in the wings, they saw him give the fountain all his money and walk off without requesting anything. He even waited till everyone was apparently gone or turn their attention elsewhere so they didn't see him.” said Mr. Weasley. “I suppose they thought that he was grateful that the justice system took it's correct path.”

“Strange, would have made me think he was paying off for getting let off.” said Charlie.

“Word spread pretty quickly how tough the hearing was.” said Mr. Weasley.
“You didn't tell us that they were just waiting to kick you out of school!” said Ron.

“What?” said Sirius sharply.

“Ugh...this is why no kids are allowed during meetings, they'd get excited about something and we'd never get any work done.” said Moody.

“Vomiting toilets and dinner...not the best combination.” said Officer McFinn shaking his head.

“I'm glad I didn't, I would have thrown it up before Dumbledore got there.” said Harry. “And I would have whisked off to St. Mungos in a heartbeat.”

Sirius sighed. “Good, you deserve some good times.”
“You've earned some ungratefulnes and childish behavior. We owe you more than we can ever hope to pay back.” said Kingsley.

“That and being the sweet little angel is getting annoying.” muttered Zacharias.

Seventeenth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Sirius snuck a hand up to massage Harry's scar absently. Harry would have pulled away, but he had to admit, it felt really nice.

Eighteenth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

And from how he had acted at the Ministry, he wasn't going to stop in even if he had the free time.” said Professor Sprout.

“This is unlike him...” said Flitwick looking at Dumbledore worriedly, who had finally taken a Calming Draught and was slowly easing into his chair.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“The song was getting old, very fast.” said Bill.

Nineteenth paragraph, first sentence.

“Who on earth wouldn't be happy for you?” said Mrs. Weasley.

Nineteenth paragraph, second sentence, first semi-colon, third comma.

Sirius looked over to Harry apologetically, removing his hand from Harry's scar. Harry put the hand back and leaned into him. “I forgive you...” said Harry.

Sirius smiled and placed his head on Harry's.

End of nineteenth paragraph.

Dialogue set.

Sirius flinched.

“I don't blame you for being that way...you were cooped up without Harry to cuddle with.” said Luna. “You didn't want to lose him yet.”

Hermione looked shamefully down, but she still frowned over to the man.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue set, third sentence.

“You can't exactly hug Moody without him hexing you into oblivion, Hermione.” said Tonks.

“And Tonks would be the only little kid that would lighten up the place.” said Charlie with a teasing smile.

End of dialogue set.

“Miss Granger...don't be too quick to scold Sirius, he had been locked up in Azkaban and away from his own godson, it's normal for him to want to be around Harry constantly when given the chance.” said Madam Bones.

“But Harry has his education to see to, Sirius should understand...” said Hermione.

Harry's eyes snapped open and looked at Hermione with a furious look, though Hermione could only see the frown due to the glasses. “Knock it off, Hermione.”

Hermione's mouth closed quickly.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

Sirius looked away from the bushy haired girl.

“New parents don't want to give their kids to preschool when they first start out.” said Officer
McFinn with a kind smile. “I didn't want Harry to go to school on my days off either, I wanted him to just stay at our house for the day.”

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Miss Granger...” said Professor McGonagall tiredly.

“Sorrry, Harry...Sirius.” said Hermione.

Harry nodded, but Sirius looked away.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“And to no fault of his own.” said Bill. “Well, shouldn't have gone after Peter, but still...”

Twentieth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Help outside, not in a cupboard.” muttered Ron.

“And besides, shouldn't you kids get at least a few days of fun, it is your summer holiday.” said Mrs. McFinn.

“If we didn't use the excuse of homework, we were cleaning.” said Fred and George.

“Why not ask, I don't know, Dobby to come and help clean?” asked Dr. Clark. “Give the kids some time to themselves.”

“They wanted to help!” said Mrs. Weasley.

“In the field, something that matches their delusions of grandeur.” said Leroy. “Cleaning all day, every day is not what they had in mind.”

Dialogue line.
Dialogue set, second sentence.

A few people snorted. “Yeah, that's wishful thinking.”

End of dialogue set.

“I can't picture people paying to clean up the common room.” said Sirius with snort.

Dialogue line.

Hermione put her hands on her hips and glared at Ron.

Ron raised his hands in surrender.

Twenty-first paragraph, first sentence.

“Bragger.” muttered Sirius tickling Harry behind his knees.

End of twenty-first paragraph.

“Thanks cub.” said Sirius with a smile. “I knew you understood me.”

Harry smiled brightly up to his godfather.

Mrs. Weasley and Hermione shared a guilty look.

Twenty-second paragraph, first sentence.

“Better believe it.” muttered the younger Weasley children.

End of twenty-second paragraph.

Sirius shifted uncomfortably.

Twenty-third paragraph.
“Oh no...” said Harry.

“What?” asked Sirius.

“I...I all of sudden feel like going to sleep.” said Harry turning leaning heavily against Sirius. Sirius shifted slightly and took Harry into his arms.

“Are you okay?” asked Remus.

“Yeah...just...don't want to be conscious for this.” said Harry quietly.

Dialogue set.

Twenty-fourth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Rivers growled slightly.

Twenty-fifth paragraph.

Twenty-sixth paragraph.

“Ruin our fun.” said Fred and George pouting slightly.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

“Well, a child did die the year before.” said Professor Vector, “And the word of the position being cursed is being spread like wildfire.”

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.
“Oh Ron!” said Mrs. Weasley, knowing what made her son froze.

Sirius looked over to Ron curiously, then it dawned on him. “Oh...” He looked down at his godson, no wonder he wanted to sleep through this.

“Shh!” said Sirius nodding down to Harry.

“Oh dear...” said Remus.

“We should of did something special with him.” said Sirius. “I mean hell, we didn't even get to celebrate Harry being let off...we had an emergency meeting that night.”

“Yeah...we really should have.” said Remus shaking his head at the tactlessness of his past self.
“Wrong one, genius.” said Percy.

“Your opinion.” said the twins with smirk and a wink to Ron.

“She was too.” said Bill rolling his eyes.

“No...no...no...” groaned Sirius. “He didn’t' just do that...”

“He did.” said Remus shaking his head.

“Stunned her as well.” said Fred.

“I...I figured...” said Hermione blushing.

“Don't blame you.” said Ron.
“I'm sure I sent we sent him the badge.” said McGonagall.

Several students laughed.

“Wonder why Harry wasn't made Prefect?” asked a third year Ravenclaw.

“You know, it's a little unfair...” said a Hufflepuff student.

“Yeah, he's...well, him...so he's already singled out of the trio, this just makes it even more so.” said a Slytherin student. “And besides he had the way better grades, that should have made it automatic for him to get it. Hell, even Thomas and Finnigan have better grades than Weasley.”

“Only one of them should have been Prefect, if that,...making both of them that...it's like slapping Potter in the face...saying, we'll let you come to school, but we're taking your friends to do Prefect duties.” said a Ravenclaw sixth year.

“Exactly, what was stopping them from picking a sixth year for male Prefect, it doesn't have to be fifth years.” said a Gryffindor fourth year.

“I mean, it's nice that Ron got it and all...but he's not Prefect material...Quidditch Captain, sure...but not Prefect...Prefects have to...exert authority.” said another Gryffindor student.

“I...figured Harry had enough on his plate.” said Dumbledore thickly and quietly.

“I would have just made Granger Prefect, and then pick a different student, Seamus or Dean or something...taking Ron is a little harsh.” said Terry quietly. “Harry needed someone to support him.”

Mrs. Weasley opened her mouth to say how proud she was a Ron, but when she saw Sirius, Remus, Hermione and Ron look guilty at Harry...she also felt her heart constrict with guilt.
“Oh, that’s a way to break it to mum.” said Charlie.

“And so it begins.” said George.

“My ears are still bleeding.” said Fred.

“I thought the twins weren't Prefects.” said Parvati.

“Was Charlie a Prefect?” asked Lavender.

“I was…” said Charlie.

“That's nice.” muttered a seventh year Hufflepuff.

Mrs. Weasley blushed and stammered towards her twin sons.

“We were teasing, Mum….” said Fred.

“We know how you love shiny badges.” said George with a cutesy voice.

“Don't need to be Prefect, it's just a leg up.” said Sirius proudly, grasping Harry's hand. “Harry's father wasn't a prefect and he became Head Boy.”

End of dialogue set.

Fred and George were both making loud retching noises behind her back Fortieth paragraph, first sentence, twelfth word.

The students began to laugh.

End of fortieth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Forty-first paragraph.

“Percy got an owl and robes.” said Fred.

“But we suppose a broom is the equivalent of a bird and a piece of fabric.” said George.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“But we promised Harry we would.” said Fred.

Dialogue line.

“I see a rat...in my house...I'm turning into Snuffles and killing it, pet or not.” said Sirius quickly.

Dialogue line.

Forty-second paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Forty-third paragraph.

Dialogue set.
“Oh, I'm all of a nauseous.” said George in a falsetto voice.

Forty-fourth paragraph.

Forty-fifth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Ron and the rest of the students laughed.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Well...I guess there's a reason for Ron being a Prefect, but...it won't work.” said Ernie.

“I can attest to that, if they're trouble makers, you can't stop your friends, you can try but it doesn't work.” said Remus.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Forty-sixth paragraph.

“Yeah...they're not going to stop.” said Emmeline Vance.

Dialogue set.

“Wow, you can't read us at all...” said George shaking his head at Hermione.

Dialogue set, second sentence.

“Look at Percy.” said Fred extending his hand to Percy.
“Why not?” asked Dennis.

“Let it go.” said Colin.

“No wonder you wanted to sleep.” said Sirius looking down at the possibly faking teen.

“I wouldn't have given her my owl, there's other owls there surely.” said Dr. Nicodemus.

“She's just excited.” said Lionus.

“Wouldn't have mattered to me. I would have told her to take the Prefect badge elsewhere and leave me be.” said Dr. Nicodemus.

“You weren't a Prefect were you?” asked Lionus.

“Nope, I was Head Boy though way back in the day.” said Dr. Nicodemus. “My school rival was picked to be a Prefect. Still don't like him.”

“Seriously, get rid of the damn thing...it's annoying.” said Justin.
“He would have been expecting a badge.” said Lavender.

“We figured that Hermione was sure to get it...no competition.” said Parvati.

“We figured Harry had it in the bag...no competition.” said Dean.

Dialogue line. (Thought)

Fifty-second paragraph.

Dialogue line. (Thought)

Sirius smiled proudly down to Harry.

Dialogue line. (Thought)

Fifty-third paragraph.

Dialogue line. (Thought)

Fifty-fourth paragraph, first sentence.

“Wonderful, he's discovered fake and shallow modesty.” said Snape rolling his eyes.

End of fifty-fourth paragraph.

Dialogue line. (Thought)

Dialogue set. (Thought)

Fifty-fifth paragraph.

Dumbledore turned and stared at Harry, was this Tom making his way into Harry's mind? Or was he just suffering from stress?

Dialogue line. (Thought)

Fifty-sixth paragraph.

Dialogue line. (Thought)

Fifty-seventh paragraph.

Ron looked over to Harry with a sad look on his face.
The adults in the bowl began to smile over to the slumbering teen, proud that he was taking the high road.

“So did everyone else on the planet.” said Bill quietly.

“Oh, that's nice.” said Tonks with a laugh.

“That means that you're home.” said Sirius brushing the bangs out of Harry's eyes.

“Where did we go wrong Fred?” asked George.
“Wonder if Harry looked the same when he ripped open the Firebolt?” asked Alicia.

“Gee...rub Harry's nose in it.” said Angelina.

“Congratulate the other two all you want, throw a dinner, but give Harry something fun too.” said Katie.

“Well...” said Mrs. Weasley.

“They didn't throw Harry a 'You Beat the Ministry' party did they?” asked Alicia. “After Harry was almost sick with worry over it.”

Sirius shook his head after a short while.

“Well...isn't that nice.” said the Chasers.

Mrs. Weasley, Sirius, and Remus looked ashamed of themselves.

“Didn't think we'd be going through this again.” said Fred

“I swear, if my kids get to be Prefects, I'm just going to say, good for you...now go out and play.” said George. “I'm not going to make a fuss.”

“It's a working party!” said Tonks with a smile.
“Wanted to see your reaction, you didn't let me down boy...you showed me the right amount of annoyance.” said Moody with a smirk.

“Annoyance?” said Mrs. Weasley.

“You weren't shutting up about it, mum.” said Charlie easily.

“Hello...that's damn cheerful.” said George.

“Right encouragingly that is.” said Fred.

“Hmm...seems innocent enough.” said Sirius sarcastically.

“Very important qualities.” said Professor Sprout.

“Seemed important quality to have when it came to being a Prefect.” said Professor Sprout with a smile.
“Way to make it look natural.” said Micheal with a smile towards Ginny. She acted so loving tender to Harry...like they were a while ago...he was beginning to miss it.

“Not that I utilized it.” said Remus guiltily.

Sirius gave Harry a squeeze as his godson slept in his arms.

“Best person to talk to when dealing with unfair treatment.” said Sirius nudging Remus slightly.

“Wow, you normally don't let people talk about werewolf segregation. You've got strong worded statements about that.” said Sirius.

“Especially about how good a bloke looks.” said Dr. Clark with a laugh.
The people affiliated with the law leaned forward and gazed at the twins with significant looks. While Mrs. Weasley shrieked about her dread that her twins sons were acting like criminals.

“I don't think I should ask if that's too expensive or not.” said Susan looking up at her aunt.

“You most certainly shouldn't.” said Madam Bones with a firm voice.

“Whose side are you on?” asked Lavender looking at Harry.

“He's on anyone side that needs it.” said Ron.

“Didn't want Mum to catch us with it.” said Fred.
Seventy-seventh paragraph.

“Oh Harry dear, whatever my children do, I don't anyone else at fault...unless of course the results hurt my children...giving the twins money won't hurt them...or at least it better not.” said Mrs. Weasley sending a stern look to the twins.

“He can't hear you Molly, he sleeping like a hibernating chipmunk over here.” said Sirius adjusting his arms slightly.

Seventy-eighth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“None of which I would ever agree with.” muttered Remus quietly.

Dialogue line.

Seventy-ninth paragraph.

“Molly, don't say a word.” said Mr. Weasley grabbing his wife's arm. “I told you we should have had a dinner for Harry getting off. We should have had it the next day or right after the meeting.”

Eightieth paragraph.

Mrs. Weasley looked insulted over to Moody.

Dialogue line.

Eighty-first paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“He just looked so...” said Mrs. Weasley.

Charlie finished his mother's sentence. “...starved for affection?”

Eighty-second paragraph.
“Good luck.” said the twins. “We try and leave family functions sometimes. Never happens.”

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Seriously, open up sometimes.” said Neville shaking his head.

Eighty-third paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Eighty-fourth paragraph.

Dialogue set, first sentence.

“I told you not to show that to him!” snarled Sirius.

“He didn't seem to mind.” said Moody gruffly.

End of dialogue set.

Eighty-fifth paragraph.

Dialogue set, fourth sentence.

“Wow, what a lovely...party conversation.” said Fred gulping.

End of dialogue set.

Neville looked up, his eyes filled with a longing excitement.

Eighty-sixth paragraph.

Neville blushed slightly.

Dialogue set, first sentence, third pause.
Several people cringed.

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue set, first sentence, first pause, second comma.

Madam Bones looked down. “He was very brave...bravest man I've ever known.” a tear slid down her face.

Dialogue set, first sentence, second pause.

“That he was.” said Madam Bones dabbing her eye.

Dialogue set, first sentence, sixth pause.

Dumbledore chuckled warmly.

Dialogue set, first sentence, seventh pause.

Mrs. Weasley blew her nose loudly.

End of dialogue set.

Eighty-seventh paragraph.

Dialogue set, first sentence, first pause.

“Wow sir, I didn't know you had a brother!” said Colin.

“What is he like?” asked Dennis.

“He's a nice man, a little different, but he is nice....deep down.” said Dumbledore with a smile.

End of dialogue set

Eighty-eighth paragraph.

“That's why I didn't want you to show him that picture!” said Sirius.
“Gee, I would have thought it was a treat too...” said a seventh year Gryffindor uneasily.

Sirius gave him a quick squeeze.

Moody had a flash of a guilty look on his face.

“I didn't think of it that way.” said Moody gruffly.

“What the?” asked Ginny. “Who was crying?”

“Wha...what?” said Ron looking horrified. “I'm...I'm right here!”

“It...It has to be that boggart,” said Hermione.

Mrs. Weasley began sobbing into her husbands shoulder.
“I know how you feel. I felt the same way.” said Sirius whispering to Harry as he rubbed Harry's forearm.

“Bless your brains...” said McGonagall shaking her head.

Bill swallowed hard.

Mr. Weasley held his wife tighter.

The twins looked at their mother sympathetically.

Percy cringed.
Sirius made the sound like a whipped puppy.

Charlie looked at his parents, he didn't want to ask the question, least not at that moment.

“You and Ginny showed up first.” said Mr. Weasley looking over to his son.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

One hundred and third paragraph.

“Thank goodness.” said a first year Hufflepuff.

“Yeah, I wouldn't want to think about someone I love lying dead on the ground in front of me.” said another first year Hufflepuff.

One hundred and fourth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

One hundred and fifth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Poor Mrs. Weasley.” muttered a few students.

One hundred and sixth paragraph, first sentence.

“I couldn't take my eyes off it, scared the living shit out of me.” said Sirius holding Harry close.

One hundred and sixth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“You weren't being silly, you're worrying about the kids, and so was I.” said Mr. Weasley.
“He can't take care of his own either without a lot of effort.” said Draco honestly.

“Oh, I'm sure that Bill and Charlie will look after them, and the rest of the Order would be quick to adopt them.” said Remus.

“It was very dark times, and we were trying to hold our own.” said Sirius.

“Still a little hesitant, just towards some people.” said Sirius glaring at the Minister and Umbridge.

“Being a mother in hard times.” said Remus kindly.
“I should have had you spend some time with me, why didn't I?” said Sirius shaking his head.

One hundred and twelfth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“First sign to redecorate the room, when the pictures start copping an attitude with you.” said George.

End of chapter.

“Your world should revolve around that, you're just a kid.” said Nightstrike.

Harry was still pretending to be sleeping, but after a while, he really did let his mind sink into a slumber. He didn't want to think about what happened with Ron and the badge, he felt horrible that he felt so jealous. He wanted to hide from the others, they were showing him their support, what would they say to hear him acting this way? He knew he had to face them, but...he didn't have the strength to see Officer McFinn's disappointment (though Officer McFinn's face didn't appear to look like that,).

It would kill him to see that.
Harry stretched slowly and shifted in Sirius' lap.

“You up now?” asked Sirius.

Harry moaned slightly. He didn't want to get up, he was too comfortable and this year was not his best. Despite all the mental barriers that kept Voldemort out of the more...critical parts of his mind, he still felt...angry...at times. He managed to push him out to the far corners where he could not do any real damage, but not before Voldemort could leave behind a small stain in his mind. It took a long time for him to eradicate it, like a nasty smudge on some of Aunt Petunia's silver.

Harry came to find that it would take quite a bit of effort to shove him out and keep him out, but if he was to maintain the farce of being weak and only able to succeed through the power of Lady Luck...he'd have to allow the man access, but only through certain well prepared points and areas.

Harry turned over slightly, so he was facing Sirius' stomach.

“Guess not, huh?” said Sirius with a chuckle.

Officer McFinn looked at the homely little scene, he felt slightly jealous of the man holding his Harry. He could still almost feel the ghost weight of Harry in his arms from time to time, his laughter still ringing pleasantly through his ears, the joy bubbling forth for something that would amuse the both of them.

He looked around at the rest of the school, emotions were mixing and clashing between all of them, proud that Harry was taking the high road and angered at Hermione and Ron for achieving prefectship. Honestly, he knew Harry was proud of them and would stand beside them and help with all he could, and he could see why the students and a few of the adults were acting this way.

They were becoming just as possessive and protective of his “Sport” as he was...well, close to it anyway. Sadly, the friends of Harry were going to be catching a lot of flak during these books...just like the boy said.

“Luna Lovegood.” said Officer McFinn.

Luna smiled serenely, but was focusing on the third sconce to the left of where Ron and Hermione sat, as if something were there.

First paragraph, first sentence.
“Oh sweetheart, it's alright.” said Mrs. McFinn soothingly as she squeezed Harry's hand.
“Wha..?” said Fred.

“Huh?” said George.

“Wow...that's....different.” said Lavender.

“I've had weirder this year.” said Dean.

“Us too.” said Neville and Ron.

Several teen boys nodded.

“Boys...” said Parvati shaking her head.

The members of the Order shared a significant look.

“Shocked the hell out of me, I didn't figure I would ever get up before him.” said Ron.

“Spell happy slobs.” said Snape rubbing his eyes tiredly.

“Oh my god! Were you alright?” said Mrs. McFinn worriedly.

“Of course not! She's dating me, it had to have done some major damage for her to settle with me.” said Harry quietly with a laugh.
“So you are up.” said Sirius teasingly.

End of second paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Third paragraph.

“I'm amazed that Crookshanks doesn't try and attack Hedwig.” said Dr. Clark.

“It didn't go well for him, Hedwig nearly pulled all the hair out of his tail the last time he tried.” said Harry sitting up.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“So, he wants us to be late, to wait for one guy.” said Fred.

“Sounds good to me.” said George.

“Let's lock Sturgis out.” said Fred.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Could've went without hearing that, I'll warrant.” said Chief Hawkeye as Hermione blushed.

Dialogue line.

“It's just for precautions.” said Remus easily.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, third sentence, second comma.
“She was not happy with me.” said Harry.

End of dialogue set.

Fourth paragraph.

Dialogue set.

“What a nice calm trip to the train station.” said Terry.

“This is nothing.” said George.

“You should see us on a day when we're late.” said Fred.

Fifth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Aw, Sirius is entitled to some fresh air.” said Hannah.

Sixth paragraph.

“Thank goodness.” said a few students sighing in relief.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“He should have stayed where it was safe.” said Mrs. Weasley sternly.

“I never saw Harry off to school, I wanted to get the chance.” said Sirius.

Seventh paragraph.

Dialogue set, first sentence.

“Three guess who that is.” said George.

“I'm thinking Dobby.” said Fred.
Lionus shook his head in disgust.

“Aw, cute!” said a few girls.

Sirius smiled broadly.

“You weirdo.” said Remus shaking his head.

Mrs. Weasley flushed slightly.

“I still don't think it was funny.” said Hermione.

“Oh come on, it was hilarious.” said Fred.

“When was the last time you saw a cat almost do a double back flip?” asked George.

The students looked excitedly, around, what was going to happen this year...then they looked up at Umbridge...never mind, they didn't want to hear her again.

“That sounds familiar.” said Fred.
“As if we've heard it three times now.” said George.

Dialogue line.

Tenth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“We let him double back, we didn't have the time for that nonsense.” said Mrs. Weasley quietly.

Eleventh paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Moody bowed his head and shook it.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

“So...don't write if you have a problem?” said Lee.

“Just don't write anything that could be sensitive material.” snarled Moody.

“Which in his case could be the weather.” muttered Lee.

Dialogue line.

Twelfth paragraph.

Dialogue set, first sentence.

“Figures she'd handle him more than once.” said Hannah with a smile.

End of dialogue set.
“Just wanted to give him a hug.” said Sirius pouting slightly.

“You have to admit, you weren't acting like a dog.” said Remus.

“Didn't mean she could shove him and take him away from me.” said Sirius shortly.

“Man, Sirius can't catch a break.” said Padma.

“Yeah, my aunt's dog knows a bunch of tricks, she can jump rope with my cousin Abigail, you don't see many dogs able to do that.” said Dean.

“We all wanted to toss something at it, see if it would catch it.” said a seventh year.

The students however, didn't feel the same way.

“C'mon Hermione, Sirius just came from spending years in prison, he didn't want to be cooped up in that house!” said a sixth year Slytherin student.

“Yeah, protection is fine and all, but...you need to get out and about before you go completely nuts and give yourself away completely.” said Terry.

“Not that any of you kids know what that's like,” said Moody with a frown.

“After all that time being stuck in the same house with the same people and not able to leave for any reason whatsoever, we needed some time with other people.” said Fred.
“So...we're breaking up with you...” said George looking at the family and Order members.

“It's not you, it's us.” said Fred.

“We need our space.” said George.

“But we can still be friends.” said the twins together.

Fourteenth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Fifteenth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Oh for Merlin's sake...” groaned a third year.

“It's going to be like this the entire book, isn't it?” said a second year Hufflepuff looking at the two Gryffindor Prefects with a sour look.

It seemed the entire school was going to turn on Ron and Hermione, just for getting the small bit of metal.

Ron and Hermione looked a little uncomfortable. “Hey, it's not our fault...” said Ron.

“You could have gone with him to the compartment and went to Prefect carriage, no one is saying you have to stay at the Prefect carriage.” said the Hufflepuff.

“We didn't stay there!” said Hermione.

“We didn't volunteer for Prefect!” said Ron defensively.

“Listen, we know you both are pretty overshadowed by Potter, but really...do you have to ditch him when he really needs you both?” said a Slytherin fifth year.

“We didn't!” repeated Hermione, almost weeping loudly.

“That's enough.” said Harry groaning loudly.

“Thank you.” said Hermione sighing in relief.

“Don't thank me yet.” said Harry. “They get it, you aren't happy, but they don't have any control over that, they didn't raise their hands and want to be prefects.....And you two....you're going to be hearing A LOT of my thoughts and you aren't going to like it. I've held it in and now it's coming out. You both aren't exactly going to be shown in a really great light, I doubt anyone is. I'm becoming...hormone driven, so...I guess until all my troubles get fixed...it's sink or swim for me...and my relationships with everyone.”

“More of a reason to have a No Friends, Just family summer.” said Sirius. “You can owl them, but no visitors.”
“I think that's a good thing.” said Remus, sending the two friends a sympathetic look. “It may be for the best, he needs a genuine vacation. One that's not with the Dursleys or...arguments.”

“We don't argue all the time.” said Ron and Hermione.

“Yeah right.” said the school in unison.

“You two fight like an old married couple...you two are perfect for each other.” said Tonks with a smile.

“She has a fair point, you fight sometimes, but you two know when to drop it, and to apologize.” said Dumbledore. “With a little help.”

Sixteenth paragraph.

“I didn't want to face him.” said Ron.

Dialogue line.

“Poor Harry, it's not fine.” said a second year Ravenclaw student.

Dialogue set.

“Those instructions do take a while.” said Ernie.

“Almost half the trip.” said Percy.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

“There's...” said Percy.

“Stuff it.” said the twins, Ginny, and Ron together.

Dialogue set.

Ron and Harry averted their gaze from each other.

“It's okay, they don't stay away forever, heck it's more of an opportunity to prank them when they're exhausted from patrol!” said Sirius.
“Don't encourage him.” said Remus.

“Hey, your fault for getting that Prefect badge, you should have expected the frog spawn in your pillow.” said Sirius with a smirk.

“Why did you guys like using Frog spawn against me?” asked Remus.

“It was funny.” said Sirius simply.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, third sentence.

“He should have had Weasley and Granger as a shield.” muttered a seventh year Gryffindor.

End of dialogue set.

Several students cringed.

Seventeenth paragraph.

“Trevor never had much luck at Hogwarts, he's not fond of it.” said Neville.

“You know, it's a little strange.” said Hermione.

“What?” asked Ron.

“Everyone that's been mentioned, you, me, Harry, the twins, Neville...” said Hermione.

“What?” repeated Ron.

“There are Fan Clubs.” said Hermione.

Ron stared. “I'm betting ours are sort of small now.” muttered Ron.

“A little, but Harry's is still huge.” said Hermione.

“No shock there.” said Ron.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Luna smiled serenely over to Ginny.
“Ginerva!” scolded Mrs. Weasley.

“It's alright, I told her to call me that.” said Luna. “It's a term of endearment.” said Luna.

Eighteenth paragraph.

Neville blushed.

Dialogue line.

Nineteenth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Twentieth paragraph, second sentence.

Luna smiled.

Twentieth paragraph, fourth sentence.

“That would be the Buffertings.” said Luna dreamily, “They like to pronounce the more prominent side of a person.”

Twentieth paragraph, fifth sentence.

“All of the above I should think.” whispered Sirius. “Ow!”

Remus nudged his elbow into Sirius' side.

End of twentieth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Twenty-first paragraph.

“Sorry Luna.” said Harry.

“It's alright Harry.” said Luna with a kind smile.
“Sometimes you have to be reminded who you are, so you don't get carried away by what other people think you are.” said Luna wisely.

No one had anything to say to that.

“Yes you are somebody.” said Hermione.

“She amazing.” said Ginny with a smile.

“You gave it to me to try and make it a bit more helpful in our third year...still haven't been able to improve it.” said Hermione.
“My Uncle Algie gave it to me, he was proud of my Herbology grades.” said Neville proudly.

“Yes, while it's not really pretty, but it's quite rare.” said Professor Sprout.

“How's it going?” asked Susan Bones.

“Slow.” said Neville with a shrug. “But it's going to take some time, it doesn't pollinate like other plants. The environment has to be just right. It has to have the right amount of water, the air has to have the right humidity level, the right amount of sun, the breeze has to be a certain speed...”

“Burn the damn thing and get a pet.” said Sirius muttering.

“Shut up.” said Remus.

“Who wants a plant with that much demands?” said Sirius.

“It's exciting! Each Mimulus mimbletonia has a different set of needs that makes it unique.” said Neville.

“It does sound fascinating.” said Remus smiling.

“Sounds dead boring.” muttered Sirius.

“Oh, this won't end well.” said Professor Sprout.
“You're telling us?” said Harry.

Twenty-ninth paragraph.

Snape coughed harshly in his hand. Sirius tried to snarl at the man, but his mouth began to twitch with withheld mirth, until finally the both of them erupted into baritone laughter.

“Shut up.” said Harry darkly, but that only made them laugh harder.

“I-I'm sorry Harry.” said Remus holding his stomach and his mouth, working hard not to meet Harry's eyes.

“Oh...Oh sweetheart.” said Mrs. McFinn giggling.

Dr. Clark couldn't even meet the youth's eyes, he was doubling over with laughter.

Thirtieth paragraph.

Dialogue set.

Sirius and Snape laughed even louder.

“Tasted worse than it smelled.” muttered Harry.

“I love you, always remember that.” said Sirius breathing heavy.

“Yeah, I really buy that now.” said Harry rolling his eyes behind the sunglasses.

Thirty-first paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Whoever you are...” said Fred.

“Absolutely, it's a bad time.” said George.

Thirty-second paragraph.

“Oh...bloody hell.” said Bill.

“That sucks.” said Charlie.
“Yeah, that does bite, but it's okay...once you take shower.” said Tonks.

“You have no idea how much I wished Ron and Hermione were there.” said Harry with a laugh.

“Oh, that's nice.” said Ron.

“Hey, got to get my kicks somehow this year.” said Harry with a smile.

“Sorry didn't do it sooner.” said Ginny.

“I'm just glad you did it.” said Harry.

“Oh I don't know, Stinksap is really good at keeping away the Springles, they like to bring bad luck when you aren't expecting them.” said Luna with a dreamlike smile. “And they make you act all funny for a short time. I'm sorry I didn't get any on me.”

“You were welcome to mine.” said Harry.

“Ginny had a few I wanted...I had to give her a bunch just to get the ones I wanted.” said Harry.

“What ones were you trading for?” asked Ron.

“Roderick Plumpton and Fulbert the Fearful.” said Harry.

“Mate, I have six of them, why not trade with me?” asked Ron.

“She just got them, I had some she wanted, and she had some I wanted.” said Harry.

“Did you even ask Ronald?” asked Mrs. Weasley.
“Well...Harry...” said Ron sheepishly.

“Ron knows that any candy I get is up for grabs with him.” said Harry. “cept when it comes to Poker Night.”

“We really have to do that soon.” said Dean.

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

“What's got her so miffed?” asked a first year.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Not that big of a shock, he gets the best grade in our house year.” said Blaise.

Dialogue set, first sentence.

“Why you!” shouted Parkinson. She stood up and whipped out her wand.

Hermione also stood up and took out her wand.

“That's enough ladies.” said Chief Hawkeye waving his hand and freezing the two of them in place. “I'd better leave the two of them there for a while. Let them get it out of their system.”

“How are they going to get it out of there system by just standing there?” asked Lavender.

“They’ll get tired of standing there.” said Chief Hawkeye.

End of dialogue set.

The students groaned, “This won't end very pretty.”

“And here you were telling us to do all that interhouse unity stuff.” said Ron with a slight smile up to the frozen Hermione.
“I didn't expect her to know....” said Ron.

Ron cringed.

“So...Luna liked Ron?” said Terry.

“Luna likes everyone.” said Neville with a smile.

“You'd have to deduct points from your best friend more than anyone else.” said Snape with a smirk.

“Hasn't happened yet.” said Harry with a shrug.

“And Remus never deducted points or gave us detention.” said Sirius.

“I should have.” said Remus.

“With all the trouble they get into, there won't be any abuse of power.” said a Ravenclaw sixth year.
Draco looked away.

Snickers went around the Great Hall.

The Ravenclaws turned and stared at Luna.

“There was a Springle on me.” said Luna.

Lavender, who all the while of the readings had been sending frowns and scowls to Hermione now sent one to Luna.

“I thought you saw a snitch on the floor for a second.” said Ron with a smirk.
“Daddy wanted to try and draw, I thought it was very good.” said Luna with a smile.

“Well, that's an interesting caricature.” said Lionus.

“I remember this.” said Chief Hawkeye.

“Y-You, You read that garbage?” said Fudge.

“You are a government official, I read everything that has to do with you.” said Chief Hawkeye.

Cho Chang sent Ron a challenging glare.

“I'm a villain and a victim.” said Sirius with a smile.

“You're not a villain.” said Remus.

“Funny, Angela Hornsroden said I was a bad boy.” said Sirius.

“I'd label you as mildly annoying adolescent.” said Remus.
“She was sort of creeping me out.” whispered Ron.

“Ron!” snapped Hermione in a hushed voice.

“Good thing, I didn't want you to read it, it was embarrassing.” said Sirius.

“My hair looked horrible.” said Sirius clapping a hand over his eyes.

“Have to admit, that's a catchy title.” said Tonks.

“Definitely not a singing sensation.” said Snape shaking his head.

“Oh...” started Sirius.

“Black, please, I can only handle your singing voice once a lifetime.” said McGonagall holding up her hands.

“NEVER.” said Remus firmly.

“I love how you are on my side.” said Sirius.
“I've got sensitive ears, I'm doing a self-preservation act.” said Remus.

Quibbler article, first paragraph.

“We question that now.” said a first year Ravenclaw student.

Quibbler article, second paragraph.

Quibbler article, third paragraph.

“Oh, I was there.” said Sirius.

Quibbler article, dialogue set, first sentence.

“This made me laugh.” said Sirius.

“This next part is what made me laugh.” said Remus.

End of Quibbler article.

“Yeah, good luck with that.” said Dean.

“Aside from the hair color, I can see similarities.” sneered Snape.

“So you caused him to retire?” asked Hermione as Sirius bared his teeth over to Snape.

“Guess so, I don't feel bad, he was a prat.” muttered Remus.

“Wonder if that was your girlfriend.” asked Sirius. “You never did introduce the two of us, she'd never know.”

“Don't know, after she stood me up, I sort of ignored her and forgot her completely.” said Remus.

“That's harsh.” said Sirius.

Remus shrugged. “She hurt me, I don't care.” he muttered.

“Wow, that's so unlike you.” said Sirius.
“It's like one of those conspiracy magazines that my College Professors wanted us to read.” said Dr. Clark.

“I don't want that!” said Fudge loudly.

“Doesn't mean you don't like money.” said Nightstrike.

Fudge blanched, but Nightstrike chuckled.

“Hm...he's a much better man than you are...he takes the press with a grain of salt.” said Tempest glaring down at the cringing man.

Ron looked at the ground.

“I read it a lot.” said Ron. “It's fun.”
“Never diss The Quibbler in front of her.” said Ginny.

“Sorry Harry.” said Luna with sincerity.

“No...I'm sorry...for everything in this book.” said Harry.

“Sorry Harry.” said Luna with sincerity.

“Sorry Harry.” said Luna with sincerity.

“No...I'm sorry...for everything in this book.” said Harry.

“Sorry Harry.” said Luna with sincerity.

“No...I'm sorry...for everything in this book.” said Harry.

“Sorry Harry.” said Luna with sincerity.

“No...I'm sorry...for everything in this book.” said Harry.

“Sorry Harry.” said Luna with sincerity.

“No...I'm sorry...for everything in this book.” said Harry.

“Sorry Harry.” said Luna with sincerity.

“No...I'm sorry...for everything in this book.” said Harry.

“Sorry Harry.” said Luna with sincerity.

“No...I'm sorry...for everything in this book.” said Harry.
“Doesn't feel different, what's it like to be not nearly as cool and charming as Harry?” said Alicia waspishly.

“But Harry didn't say anything.” said Colin, “So...you didn't hit the nerve with him.”

Remus had slapped the back of Sirius' head.

“What?” said Sirius rubbing his head.

“Harry is now going to be freaking out about you.” said Remus.

“He didn't know.” said Sirius though he didn't sound all that convinced.

“His father is a Death Eater, of course he knew.” said Remus.

“Oh my god, Ron.” said Angelina shaking her head.

“No...no...no...I was fine.” said Sirius.

“No you weren't.” muttered Harry.
Sirius wrapped his arms around Harry's chest, “I'm fine...I would have just had to stay home a while and then go out as Snuffles again at night.”

End of fifty-second paragraph.

“Sorry Harry.” whispered Sirius as Mrs. Wealsey was scolding at the animagus for not listening to her.

Fifty-third paragraph.

Fifty-fourth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Just like Percykins.” said Fred.

“I shut up!” said Ron.

Fifty-fifth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“She seems to really like Ron.” said a sixth year Ravenclaw.

“Guess he just puzzles her...” said another Ravenclaw.

Fifty-sixth paragraph.

Fifty-seventh paragraph, first sentence.

“Yeah, I wish Hagrid had taken us to the castle like he did with Harry.” said a few first years.

End of fifty-seventh paragraph.

Fifty-eighth paragraph.

Dialogue line.
“I didn't care, I wanted to know where Hagrid was.” said Harry.

Hagrid blushed slightly.

“Hated what, cub?” asked Remus.

“Being alone...” said Harry. “It was summer all over again.”

The people who heard him flinched horribly.

“Yeah they were.” said a third year looking at Harry confusedly.

“Yeah, I prefer horseless carriages.” said Ron.
Dumbledore smiled softly, though his eyes were slightly moist.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Or what?” asked sneering Slytherin.

“I’d sic Harry on them.” said Ron nodding over to the sunglass wearing youth.

“Roar.” said Harry plainly with a smirk.

Sixty-third paragraph.

Dialogue set, first sentence.

“And some how, Snape thought that would change.” said Tonks.

“The Headmaster could have refused that nomination.” said Snape passing the buck.

“I thought...given some responsibility...” said Dumbledore.

“Didn't change his father, did it?” said Sirius.

“He has a bit of his mother in him.” said Dumbledore, sending Draco a smile, who blushed. “And I'm very happy to see it finally come out.”

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

Sixty-fourth paragraph.

Dialogue set, first sentence.

“Crookshanks is not very fond of being cuddled in a crowd.” said Ginny.

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.
“I didn't know what the hell you were talking about, I now don't want to see them.” said Ron.

“He’s a ruddy little menace.” said Ron.

“Made me feel like I was going mad.” said Harry.

“I was afraid that you were ill, you know cause of those Dementors.” said Ron.
“He was ill, but those creatures have nothing to do with it.” said Dr. Nicodemus.

“Hang on...how come you didn't tell us you were sick...” said Sirius.

Harry shrugged slightly and pulled the blankets higher up to his neck.

Dialogue line.

Sixty-ninth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“That made me feel a bit better.” said Harry.

Dialogue line.

“Good feeling gone.” whispered Harry.

Sirius snorted.

End of chapter.

“That's the end of that.” said Officer McFinn.

“I think some lunch would go over very nicely.” said McGonagall waving her wand and the table of food appeared.

Remus looked down and saw that Harry was sullen again.

“Are you alright?” asked Remus.

“Fine...” said Harry.

“Think you can eat?” asked Sirius.

“Yeah...sure.” said Harry.

Remus and Sirius looked between each other. Summer could not come soon enough, Harry looked as if he needed some peace and tranquility.
Chapter End Notes

Thanks for reading, please review!
Chapter Notes

I don't own Harry Potter.
But I've got a cold...I'd rather have Harry Potter though...

First paragraph, first sentence, second comma.

“Some visions are precious, you don't want to share them with others, or they won't come true.” said Luna dreamily.

“Thestrals are real though.” said Hermione quietly through gritted teeth as she stood motionless.

End of first paragraph.

“You would think that the shadows would be seen by others as they travel.” said Mrs. McFinn.

“Thestrals are one of the creatures still being studied, not a lot are known of their anatomy. It's not often that we can get a hold of a deceased thestral, their bodies tend to waste away very quickly.” said one of the Unspeakables.

Chief Hawkeye smirked.

Dialogue line.

“Hogwarts without Hagrid...it's not worth coming back to.” said Fred.

Dialogue line.

“I'm sorry...” said Luna, looking down and genuinely ashamed of herself. “I didn't know you very well.”

“It's alrgh' I know I'm not all that...Ravenclawish.” said Hagrid with a kind smile.

“You're brilliant.” said Terry.

Dialogue line.
“Then they'd better keep that joke to themselves.” said Fred.

“Cause we don't think it's all that funny.” said George.

“And we know funny.” said Fred.

“Then they'd better keep that joke to themselves.” said Fred.

“Cause we don't think it's all that funny.” said George.

“And we know funny.” said Fred.

“Then they'd better keep that joke to themselves.” said Fred.

“Cause we don't think it's all that funny.” said George.

“And we know funny.” said Fred.

“Then they'd better keep that joke to themselves.” said Fred.

“Cause we don't think it's all that funny.” said George.

“And we know funny.” said Fred.

“You can dress it up all you like, I'm thinking that you fancied him.” said Dr. Clark with a laugh.

Luna turned a faint pink. “I did for a little while...I suppose.”

“So that meant, he wasn't home...that's not good.” said Rudolph. “He's always home.”

“I...was on a bit of a 'oliday.” said Hagrid uncertainly.

“I'd have a nightmare after seeing that thing.” said a third year Hufflepuff.

“Cause Ron hadn't lost anyone right in front of him.” said Charlie.

“Good, you could use the extra weight.” said Mrs. McFinn with a smile.
“Aw, and ruin my girlish figure?” said Harry with a smirk.

Eighth paragraph.

Several students cringed in shame.

Ninth paragraph, second sentence.

Lavender and Parvati blushed.

End of ninth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Tenth paragraph.

“You're still looking for him?” said Tonks.

“No one told us that he wasn't going to be there.” said Harry. “We thought he would have been back.”

“Would have been nice to know that before we bloody got there.” muttered Ron.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Maybe we should have told the kids.” said Sirius. “The last thing I want is Harry to worry.”

“Can't baby him forever, mutt...” said Snape.

“Don't lecture me about raising my cub.” said Sirius firmly.

“Perhaps we should have told them, the other children were most likely worrying as well.” said Mrs. Weasley coming to Sirius' defense, which stunned the animagus slightly.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.
“That's one hell of a memory he has.” said Moody with a twisted smile.

“That would have been it, Miss Granger.” said McGonagall.

“Well, I figured he would have been back by now.” said Hermione still gritting through her teeth.

“Cause no one would bed down with her.” muttered Remus.

“Did you and I switch bodies or something?” said Sirius with a snicker.

“Oh dear...” said Mrs. McFinn, holding a hand to her mouth to hide her smile.

“Worst looking thing I had ever seen, like a pink-dyed, washed cat.” said Ron.

“Making our life a living hell.” said Lee.
It's still odd seeing other first years come through the door.” said Harry.

“We know.” said the teachers thinking fondly of their first year at Hogwarts as eager young students.

“Harry...?” said Angelina.

“No.” said Harry.

“C'mon, please?” asked Lavender.

“No.”

“What?” asked Mrs. McFinn.

“We want Harry to sing.” said Parvati.

“I'm all for that.” said Dr. Clark.

“So am I.” said Mrs. McFinn.

“Me too.” said Officer McFinn.

Harry looked between the three of them. “I thought you loved me!”

“We do!” said Mrs. McFinn.

“That's why we want to embarrass you!” said Dr. Clark and Officer McFinn.

Harry groaned and stood up out of the bowl.

“Where are you going?” asked Sirius.

“I don't remember how it went.” said Harry walking over to Officer McFinn and reading over his shoulder.
"Sorting Hat Song"

“Well, that's a dark song for a hat to sing.” said Dr. Clark.

“You still sound so lovely, dear.” said Mrs. McFinn as Harry came back to the bowl.

“You know, uniting is good and all, but I would sort of miss the competition.” said Fred.

“Yeah...” said George.

A sharp crack and both Hermione and Pansy fell to their knees. Ron pulled her back to the sofa they sat on. Meanwhile, Pansy was escorted back to her seat by her friends.

“That song is suppose to say how wrong it is to have houses!” scolded Hermione, “We should be working together, and not be divided!”

“Come on Hermione, even if there was only one house, I would never get along with Malfoy and his...well, past lot...” said Ron.

“We could have been on cordial terms though!” said Hermione.

“Not with you.” said most of the students.

“They've got a point, most parents that were in Slytherin and their children are as well, are taught to look down upon Muggleborns.” said Moody. “Then again, prejudice can attach to anyone in any house, but it's best to know which house to avoid when you're considered a lesser class.”

“What do you think about the houses Harry?” asked Dumbledore, the students went silent.

Harry thought for a moment, “I suppose I'm for them.” said Harry. “There is no animosity between the three houses, Hufflepuff, Ravenclaw, and Gryffindor. The three of us are pretty laid back to each other...Ravenclaws are sometimes a little...philosophical for our normal understanding, but we get along alright. It's just between Slytherin and Gryffindor that have the most noticeable feud.”

Harry reached behind his hands behind his head and leaned back.

“Snape doesn't help with that at all.” said Sirius.

Harry looked up at Sirius, and continued, “I suppose that people, when they join Gryffindor, figure it's like Good vs. Evil, especially in these dark times and the generation before us. Death Eaters give that house really bad press. When they join Slytherin, they have to deal with distrustful looks and snide comments. That's really the only downside to houses, but Ravenclaw and Hufflepuff show how it can work, we're just not the best houses to be in if you're friendly with everyone. To be honest, I would rather have my kids be in either Ravenclaw or Hufflepuff, no one will jump them and beat them up.”

“You're forgetting that the Hufflepuffs and a few Ravenclaws beat you up.” said Ron.

“That was out of fear, that's normal.” said Harry. “I'm talking about beating someone up, just for what house they're in.”

“Who has been rouged up?” asked McGonagall quickly.

“Well, second year, there was a group of Slytherins that were smacking first year Gryffindor boys around, just for being in the rival house.” said Harry.

“Why were we not informed?” said Flitwick.
“Ah...” said Harry.

“Yeah...” said Ron.

“We...already took care of it.” said Fred.

“You sought them out and beat them up?” said Mrs. Weasley.

“No...we didn't lay a hand on them...they just ate the wrong sweets.” said George with a smile.

“Explains the week I had those Slytherins in the ward.” said Madam Pomfrey.

“Some of the older Slytherins and Gryffindors get into fistfights as well.” said Ron.

“Though...that's pretty rare.”

“All you did was say what was wrong with them.” said Hermione.

“Alright then, I'm for it, because...it makes school fun.”

“...what?” said Hermione deadpanned.

“Think of it this way, you have four houses, you've got four different Quidditch teams, four Gobstone tournaments that then end in the school championships, four chess champions...and at the end of every year, there is a school champion for every sport, and a way to see who kept out of trouble the most...though Gryffindor should lose it every year, out of all the houses, Gryffindor get's in the most trouble, well, trouble that's sort of obvious.” said Harry with a smile. “I can't explain it, I just know that I wouldn't want Hogwarts to be any different than it is now...maybe some more unity and less prejudice, but the houses are what makes, Hogwarts...Hogwarts. No other school has it.”

Hermione stared.

“Kids are mean to each other by nature, once you get older, you don't focus on what house other people are in, you just look at them for what they are.” said Harry. “Then again, Death Eaters sort of haven't given up on the whole inter-school prejudice thing, but they're the minority.”

Eighteenth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Nineteenth paragraph.

“It does sometimes, like when we were young, but it's a little sad that you kids had to hear one.” said Remus.

Dialogue line.
“Never talk while she's talking.” said Fred and George.

“Even we know to zip it while she's talking.” said Fred.

Euan's fellow yearmates snickered.

“Too bad we had a toad faced woman to change the norm.” said Seamus.

“Best have the speeches and rule-reminders once the children are fed, that way we have their undivided, if not exhausted attention.” said Dumbledore.
meals come to pass.” said Dumbledore with a smile.

End of twenty-fifth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“If I was a ghost, I'd miss eating.” said Ron.

“Ron, you miss eating when we're in class.” said Hermione.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, first sentence.

“Nice, real nice.” said Ron looking at Harry.

“Hey, you were moaning and groaning...” said Harry with a smirk.

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

Twenty-sixth paragraph.

“Had to wipe the prechewed gunk off my glasses.” said Harry.

Dialogue line.

“You'd be surprised.” said Sirius.

Dialogue line.

“Indeed.” said Dumbledore.

Dialogue line.

“How about you?” asked Hogwarts.

“Not without the lack of trying...” said a first year. “My cousin is in Slytherin, and we get along just fine.”
“There is a scattering of friendships that are between Slytherin and Gryffindor, but sometimes, the clash of personalities are just too great at times, but they mend in due time.” said Dumbledore, sending a look over to Snape.

“And sometimes, they never heal at all.” said Snape plainly.

Dialogue set.

“Cause he's a frightening person?” asked Colin.

Dialogue line.

Twenty-seventh paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Ouch...that's not going to go over well.” said Alicia.

Dialogue set.

“No one was poking fun at your death, he just doesn't think as he's eating.” said Charlie.

Dialogue line.

Twenty-eighth paragraph, first sentence.

“Ron, couldn't you wait till after you said you were sorry, to start eating?” said Mr. Weasley.

“Or at least take smaller bites.” said Ginny.

End of twenty-eighth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Not when it doesn't even hold a shred of tact.” said Tonks.
Dialogue line.

Twenty-ninth paragraph, first sentence, first comma.

“Exactly, there's no solving their problems.” said Fred.

“Not unless you hand them a pair of beaters bats and tell them to go at it.” said George.

“Then the problems will solve themselves.” said the twins together.

End of twenty-ninth paragraph.

“Shocker.” said Ron and Hermione.

Thirtieth paragraph.

Dialogue set.

“Hey, every time we went in there, a teacher sent us in there.” said Ron.

“Most of the time.” corrected Harry.

“Most of the time.” repeated Ron.

“Some of the time.” said Hermione.

“Some of the time...” said Ron.

Dialogue set.

“There isn't enough hours in the day to list off everything on that list.” said Fred.

“And he yells at you for standing there and reading it.” said George.

Dialogue set.

“Worst defense teacher ever.” said the students in unison.

“I'd prefer Dazzle Gums.” said a seventh year.

“Yeah, at least we got a good laugh out of it.” said a sixth year.
Thirty-first paragraph.

“Until Hagrid could return from his trip.” said Dumbledore.

“When I heard about these books here, I came back as fast as I could.” said Hagrid.

Thirty-second paragraph.

Thirty-third paragraph, second sentence.

“That means, stubby little legs.” said Nightstrike with a smirk.

End of thirty-third paragraph.

“Oh god...” said a Muggleborn third year.

“Do we have to listen to this again?” said Terry. “Once was bad enough.”

Thirty-fourth paragraph, first sentence.

“You were the only one eager to listen to her.” said Ernie.

“I felt she could have revealed some very interesting information, I wasn't disappointed.” said Dumbledore.

Thirty-fourth paragraph, third sentence, first comma.

“No one, but no one ever interrupted Albus as he spoke.” said Professor Sprout.

Thirty-fourth paragraph, end of third sentence.

“Ooh...” groaned the Gryffindor students.

“It was not nice knowing you, lady.” said Bill.
“And she had gone to school here.” said Madam Hooch.

“Yeah, way back when the founders were still walking about.” said Charlie.

“I don't wish to think what age that would make me.” said Dumbledore with a smile.

Dialogue line.

Thirty-fifth paragraph, first sentence.

“She gets that a lot.” said Kingsley. “Not many people like her.”

End of thirty-fifth paragraph.

“Does she know she's in a school full of teenagers?” asked Mrs. McFinn.

“She's just an idiot.” said Harry.

“Harry....” said Officer McFinn. “I know she's the most intolerable piece of garbage, but...”

“Sorry.” said Harry swiftly.

“You don't need to be insulting the other idiots by calling her that.” said Officer McFinn with a smirk.

“James...” said Mrs. McFinn shaking her head, but she was smiling slightly.

Thirty-sixth paragraph.

“Maybe we should have tossed some rattles and teething rings at her.” said Fred.

Dialogue line.

“No thanks...that sounds a little creepy.” said Colin.

Thirty-seventh paragraph.

Dialogue line.
“We didn't like her.” said Parvati quickly.

Thirty-eighth paragraph.

“And...cue nap time.” said Fred.

Dialogue set, first sentence.

“Well, that's good.” said Dr. Clark. “So far.”

Dialogue set, third sentence.

“Hold up, did you just put a jab towards Muggleborns?” said Lionus.

Tempest ripped the gag out of Umbridge's mouth and slapped the back of her head. “Speak woman!”

“I...you can't prove...” said Umbridge stammering.

“I don't need to prove anything..” said Lionus stubbornly.

“Oh...they'll love you at Hell's Garden.” said Nightstrike.

“I don't know if she was...” said Hermione looking thoughtful.

“I'm not going to argue with them.” said Ron looking at the three Rangers warily. “Let them think and do whatever they want, I say.”

End of dialogue set.

Thirty-ninth paragraph, first sentence.

“I don't blame you, best not encourage her.” said Dr. Nicodemus.

End of thirty-ninth paragraph.

“Oh, we were not impressed.” said McGonagall.
Dialogue set, second sentence.

“So, good for the Headmasters and Headmistresses for progressing the school into the twenty-first century, but Dark Ages methods are the best for our children?” said Chief Hawkeye.

“Yes.” said Umbridge, her gag removed so she would be able to answer and reveal to those around who might not have been convinced of her guilt just how vile the woman was.

“Then you're going to love our prison.” said Lionus with a sneer.

End of dialogue set.

“So she's not saying ditch the new, but just not a lot of it right now, spread it out between the old methods...” said Tonks.

“Which is what Dumbledore's been doing.” said Kingsley.

“He has...!” said Umbridge.

SMACK! “Speak only when you are spoken to!” said Tempest hotly.

“Wow...it's getting kind of violent in here.” said

Fortieth paragraph, second sentence.

“The highest form of disrespect.” said Dr. Nicodemus looking over at the students, who shifted slightly. “I'm so proud of you kids.” he added with a smile.

The students smiled slightly.

End of fortieth paragraph.

Ernie blushed.

Forty-first paragraph, second sentence.

“I don't doubt that, politicians are known for continuing on, despite audience interruption.” said Moody.

End of forty-first paragraph.
“They most certainly were not.” said Hermione.

Dialogue set, first sentence.

“The only bad change was letting you in the door.” said Harry.

End of dialogue set.

Forty-second paragraph, second sentence.

“She wasn't worthy of more than two.” said Flitwick with a stern gaze towards the woman.

Forty-second paragraph, third sentence, fourth comma.

“Thank goodness.” said the students. “We nearly supported her.”

End of forty-second paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“It was dead boring, both times.” said Lee.

Officer McFinn turned to look at him.

“Oh, that’s not what I meant, what I meant was...” said Lee stammering.

“I know...it was dead boring for me to read too.” said Officer McFinn with a smile.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“We were you paying attention?” said Hermione.

“I knew it was crap and I figured I'd get rid of her before anything awful could happen.” said Harry.
“Get rid of her?” said Fudge suspiciously.

“Have her tossed out on her rear...I didn't think it would get this far.” said Harry with a smirk.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Well, that's the end result but I think Mr. Weasley was looking for what those phrases meant.” said Dumbledore.

“You'd think that after addressing the students like four year olds, she'd use simpler phrases.” said Professor Vector.

“She didn't want them to understand it. She tried to make sure of it, if she had come out and said what she was saying, there would have been an uproar and a quite a few letters sent home in complaint.” said McGonagall.

Forty-third paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Several people laughed.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Though a few of them were taller than Harry,” said Ron sneaking a glance over at his best friend, but was met with Harry flying through the air and tackling him to the ground.

“Take it back!” said Harry pinning Ron to the floor.

“Never!” said Ron laughing and twisting his legs flipping Harry off him and landing him to the floor a foot away.

“That's enough you two.” said Remus waving his wand and bringing Harry back to the bowl.
“How did you manage to leap over that far?” said Sirius looking at the distance. “And with your eyes in such bad shape?”

“Practice.” said Harry, pointing at Ron. “I'm gonna get you for that.”

“Bring it on, Midget.” said Ron with a smirk.

“Five more minutes...please.” said Harry trying to twist out of Remus’ grip, though a smile was on his face.

“Later.” said Remus, “Not now.”

Dialogue line.

Forty-fourth paragraph, second sentence.

“No, you had a faint gaunt look about you.” said Madam Pomfrey.

End of forty-fourth paragraph.

“Sorry...” said Euan and the blonde boy.

Dialogue set.

The students fell completely silent, they couldn't believe that they followed the Ministry so blindly.

Forty-fifth paragraph.

“Their parents would have told them to listen to the Ministry anyway.” said Tonks.

“They seemed eager to come to Hogwarts.” said Kingsley in his slow voice.

“Only because it was something new that they didn't get to experience when they were in school.” said Tonks.

Forty-sixth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.
“You'd think that they remember who you were, especially if the House guard has two eyes.” said Ernie.

Dialogue set.

“Easy with that thing.” said Sirius.

Dialogue line.

Forty-seventh paragraph.

Forty-eighth paragraph.

“No...you weren't.” said Seamus looking guilty.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Would have given us nightmares to be honest.” said Dean.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Forty-ninth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“It didn't sound like his mother.” said Harry turning away from the group of people.

Dialogue line.

Fiftieth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Seamus sent a fierce glare over to Harry.
“Mate, relax, it was a little strange that she would do that.” said Dean.

Fifty-first paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“I need to cook something.” said Harry, standing up suddenly.

“Certainly, dear boy.” said Dumbledore taking out his wand and summoning the kitchen set.

Harry looked at and looked at the book, “Better set up some sort of barrier or something.”

“Why is that?” asked Dumbledore.

“It's possible that I might be throwing some things.” said Harry.

“Ah...very well.” said Dumbledore, waving his wand once again and a giant cube of gold light enveloped the stove area.

“Thanks.” said Harry as he walked through the light and began to take out the things he needed.

Dialogue line.

Everyone watched Harry as he placed something tan in a magical deep freezer and then pulled it out, a scowl on his face.

“He needed this cooking time, though I'm waiting for him to grab a knife.” said Remus.

“I removed the knives, though...I think that might have hindered his creative spirit.” said Dumbledore.

“Hold on, with his eyes like that, should he be cooking at all?” asked Tonks.

“I've placed protective spells around the fires and what not, also, we are well within range to lend him assistance.” said Dumbledore.

“I'm more impressed he can tell what stuff is with his vision so awful.” said Leroy.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Which he's...” said Umbridge.

“Not!” shouted the students.
The students looked shamefully aside.

End of fifty-third paragraph.

“Seamus settle down.” said Dean. “I told you that he was going to react, anyone would.”

“He doesn't get to have a go at my mother.” snarled Seamus as he ripped his arm out of Dean's grasp and rushed over to Harry, who saw him coming and stood stock still. Seamus pulled back his fist and before anyone could stop, slammed his fist into Harry's jaw.

Harry staggered slightly, but then looked at Seamus with a glare in his eyes behind the sunglasses. “You done...you feel better?” he gritted out.

“No.” said Seamus. “Apologize.”

“No.” said Harry fiercely. “I didn't lie, she chose to support the other side, I'm not sorry.”

Seamus glared at Harry but backed down and went back to his seat.

Fifty-fourth paragraph.

“You heard what happened, Dumbledore said it...you don't need to badger him about it.” said Madam Pomfrey scolding the Gryffindor student.

Fifty-fifth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“See he's having a go at my mum!” said Seamus.

“Oh he was not, he's telling you to just read the paper, cause your mother had already judged and passed sentence on him and Dumbledore.” said Officer McFinn.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“And yet he still wasn't having a go at anyone.” said Terry.
Dialogue line.

“What’s got you all insulted? You're the one trying to corner him.” said Fred.

Dialogue set, first sentence.

“Whoa horsie, settle down.” said Dr. Clark.

“Honey...” said Mrs. McFinn walking over and giving Harry a hug. “are you okay?”

“I'm fine, said Harry pouring the tan contents into a glass and taking a drink.

“What is that?” asked Mrs. McFinn.

“A smoothie, want a taste?” asked Harry. He tipped glass so she could take a sip.

“Mmm, is that...is that pumpkin?” said Mrs. McFinn.

“Quickest thing I could find an the easiest thing to make when I don’t' have any knives.” said Harry sending Dumbledore a look.

Dialogue set, second sentence, second comma.

“We do switch out students from different dorms, if there was an issue, I should have been notified.” said McGonagall.

“Why didn't you just stick him in his own dorm?” said Seamus. “You knew he was going to catch a lot of flak.”

“Then that would have shown that I approve of your childish behavior.” scolded McGonagall. “You've shared the same dorm, the same table, the same school with Potter and you should have realized that the paper was printing nothing but lies. I suppose I expected too much of you.”

Seamus opened and closed his mouth repeatedly, but settled back in his chair, looking defeated.

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

“That was going over the line sweetie....but I can understand why you were upset.” said Mrs. McFinn soothingly.

Harry groaned and slammed his glass down, a little too hard and it shattered. Several shards of glass stuck in his hand and caused little rivers of blood travel down his fingertips and onto the “Oh, honey!” said Mrs. McFinn, she took his hand and stuck it under the faucet. “Be careful...”

Madam Pomfrey came over and inspected his hand. “If you keep this up, I'm going to give you only unbreakable goblets for you to drink out of.”

“Just angry.” said Harry.

“I know, but there is no need to break things and cause pain to yourself.” said Madam Pomfrey.

Dialogue line.

Fifty-sixth paragraph.

“Ron's first Prefect job!” said Percy.

“Well...it could have gone way better.” said Ron.

“It is your first, you'll get better in time.” said Dumbledore kindly.

“I suppose it's a good thing that Potter isn't a Prefect, people would accuse him of using his badge to get back at those who call him a liar.” said Moody.

“Not that you would Harry, he's just saying that people would accuse you of it.” said Tonks quickly.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Harry...c'mere.” said Officer McFinn.

Harry went over to the shaft of light and sat on the armrest.

“Yeah...?” said Harry a little regretfully.

“Do you need some help with venting some of that anger?” said Officer McFinn.

“I just didn't get to cook lately, I could have used some kitchen time.” said Harry.

“Alright...and did this little session help?”

“No, I couldn’t' make much.” said Harry.

“Well, next time, Dumbledore won’t take away the knives, how about that? And Holly will help where your eyes can't see.” said Officer McFinn, reaching under the glasses and touching the lids carefully.
“Alright.” said Harry.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“When has he ever been a madman?” asked Fred and George angrily.

Dialogue line.

Ron blushed.

“Hmm...maybe I can see why Weasley was given the badge.” said Dr. Nicodemus with a small smile over to red headed boy.

Dialogue set.

“Of course he does, Harry's never lied to him.” said Colin.

“Except about his homelife...but that's personal.” said Dennis.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Alright Ron! Way to go.” said Bill.

Fifty-seventh paragraph, first sentence.

“Nice dramatic exit.” snickered Draco.

End of fifty-seventh paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Down boy...” said Mr. Weasley with a chuckle.
“Besides, I guess they would figure that somewhere that I can defend myself with a barrage of spells is the best place.” said Dean.

“He's been sacked so that he can be discredited, he is not losing his marbles.” said Bathilda Bagshot hotly.

“Besides, surely you told your mum that Harry's pretty much a normal kid.” said Neville.

Seamus blushed. “Well, she didn't give me the chance...”

“You're grandmother always did have sense, somethings we disagree on, but others...we get along just fine.” said Madam Bones.

“That's a big subscription to lose too, she paid for the paper for her entire family. It was a massive loss...I'm amazed that there wasn't a massive print apology after losing that.” said Leroy.

“She pays for the whole family?” asked Neville in awe.

“How many papers is that?” asked Percy.

“Over seventy-four.” said Leroy. “And that's just in London.”

“Figured that he was outnumbered in his own dorm.” said Angelina.

“Oh, it wasn't the best time we've ever had playing poker either.” said Dean. “He left and went downstairs the first few times we had Poker night.”

“Yeah, I didn't win nearly as much candy as normal.” sadi Neville with a smile.

“I still say you cheat somehow.” said Ron looking suspiciously over to Neville, though his mouth was twitching in a smile.
Seamus shifted uneasily in his seat. "Sorry Harry..." said Seamus sheepishly.

Harry looked over but Sirius spoke first. "Don't apologize to him Harry...you have nothing to be sorry about."

"Even what he said about his mother?" asked Zacharias.

"He said nothing about his mother." said the people in the bowl.

"Too many incorrect people." said Flitwick shaking his head.

"I didn't suffer, I am quite used to the jeers I get from time to time." said Dumbledore with a smile.

Dumbeldore turned and looked at Harry. "No, dear boy, I wasn't angry with you, I wasn't even perturbed by the loss of offices. In fact, that enabled me to dedicate my time to ensure the safety of the students and to keep a close watch out for Tom."

"I've been hoodwinked before, yes...but never by you, dear boy." said Dumbledore. Snape only smirked.

"Too many, I fear." said Remus sadly.
First paragraph.

“If he hadn't been wearing school robes, most likely he wouldn't have matched.” said Dean with a snicker.

“S-Shut up.” muttered Seamus.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

“I thought you were on my side!” said Seamus.

“I'm not on anyone's side.” said Dean. “Your mom was a bit overboard, jumping to conclusions like that. And well...Harry just needs to mellow out...”

Harry opened his mouth, but then closed it, “I don't think I remember how.” said Harry with a slight smirk.

“We'll give you a crash course over the summer.” said Sirius.

Second paragraph.

“And that was just the second person.” said Neville.

Dialogue set.

“Yeah, Harry, you just look oh-for-heaven's-sake.” said Fred.

“You should get some more sleep and a bit more food.” said George.
Third paragraph.

Fred and George's advertisment.

The teachers all looked at the twins with stern looks.

“That had better have stopped.” said Dumbledore, with slight frown.

“Yes sir.” said Fred and George quickly.

Dialogue set.

“You're funny Hermione, we never listened to Percy, what makes you think we're going to listen to Ron.” said George.

“He's a Prefect!” said Hermione.

“So was Percy and he was a Head Boy as well, still meant nothing to us.” said Fred.

“So...Ron being a Prefect and supposedly having authority over us...” said George.

“It's laughable.” said the twins together.

Fourth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Not necessarily, it's not up to you, it's up to you to tell the teachers, you're just the eyes and ears for the teachers.” said Lionus. “This is something you need them to put a stop to.”

Fifth paragraph.

“I don't like confronting them, they know some nasty hexes.” said Ron.

“We wouldn’t use them on you, Ron.” said Fred.

“We'd just pick you up and hold you upside down and tickle you till you wet yourself.” said George.

“I'd rather you hex me.” said Ron.
“Seriously, you couldn't figure it out without asking?” said Hannah.

“I thought they were friends...” said Hermione. “They always got together on Fridays, or Saturdays and would head up to bed early.”

“But Lavender and Parvati...” said Ron slowly.

“Trust me, they're not friends...” said Hermione.

“Knocked me for a loop, I thought she'd be indignant at least.” said Harry.

“Whoa, easy there.” said Dr. Clark.

Harry buried his head.

“You were just stressed, you didn't mean it, I'm sure.” said Sirius.

“When did he jump down your throat?” said Remus.

“Back at Grimmauld Place.” said Hermione. “And just then.”

“Which was...what....weeks ago?” said Angelina. “And I snap at my friends too sometimes, especially since I became a Quidditch Captain...and every so often... You can't blame him for the most part, the whole world's against him. I'd snap at everyone too.”

“When did he jump down your throat?” said Remus.

“Back at Grimmauld Place.” said Hermione. “And just then.”

“Which was...what....weeks ago?” said Angelina. “And I snap at my friends too sometimes, especially since I became a Quidditch Captain...and every so often... You can't blame him for the most part, the whole world's against him. I'd snap at everyone too.”
“What's that got to do with Lavender doing a one-eighty?” said Ernie.

“I was trying to change the subject.” said Hermione.

“Won't fix the problem.” said Mrs. McFinn.

“Harry was just going to get upset...” said Hermione uncertainly.

“He's going to get upset when you dismiss his problem.” said Sirius. “Best stick with the subject and just let him vent a bit.”

“Having him bottle it up and not letting him speak his mind from time to time will only make his explosions worse.” said Dr. Nicodemus. “You both are Prefects, true...you have your own trouble, but compared to the Potter boy, your Prefect problems are mere annoyances. Potter has some genuine troubles, and issues.”

“So we're just supposed to let him yell at us, is that it?” said Hermione indignantly.

“If you can't handle someone with life tragedies or genuine issues, then perhaps you shouldn't be friends.” said Dr. Nicodemus sternly. “He needs someone that can support him, not someone who will put logic and ‘changing subject’ tactics.”

“I shouldn't have yelled at her, and Ron.” said Harry firmly.

“Lad, we're defending you.” said Chief Hawkeye.

“I know, but I shouldn't have yelled.” said Harry. “And frankly...I don't like being yelled at either.”

“Eighth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“She's just amazing.” said Ron and Harry together.

“Not a fan...” said Dr. Nicodemus. “She's more of a nagging wife and mother than anything else.”

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

“Well, there's nothing Harry can do, he's telling the truth, it's the other side that has to do the fixing.” said Charlie.

“We could....” said Hermione.
“Hermione, they don't believe him, Harry can't offer proof, the proof would be You-Know-Who himself. There is nothing that Harry or you kids could do, other than say you were lying. You weren't going to have him say that, were you?” said Tonks.

“No, absolutely not.” said Hermione.

“Well, then it's their problem, not yours, leave it alone for now.” said Tonks.

“But that doesn't solve Harry's problem.” said Kingsley. “There is nothing much Harry can do, except tell McGonagall whenever someone is giving him a hard time.”

“And then get labeled a tattletale.” said a sixth year Gryffindor.

“It's either that or suffering from emotional distress.” said Kingsley. “And that can prove quite deadly.”

McGonagall and Dumbledore looked between each other. McGonagall stood up and announced to the school: “We will be taking down names of students that have been accosting Mr. Potter, to certain degree, those students will be kept from any weekend event coming up next.”

“I thought we couldn't be punished!” said Zacharias shortly.

“No points will be taken, and it's not quite a detention, you will be talked to by...” said Professor McGonagall.

“Me.” said Madam Bones, volunteering instantly.

“What about the stuff that hadn't happened yet?” said Seamus.

“It won't count, but Mr. Finnigan, count yourself and Miss Brown the first two on the list of students.” said McGonagall.

“What if we apologized?” asked Lavender looking over to Harry quickly.

“A little late for that, you should have known Mr. Potter better than what the Daily Prophet printed him out to be.” said McGonagall firmly.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“How’s us have inter-house unity.” said a first year Slytherin. “My cousin Jessica's in Gryffindor. My older sister is in Hufflepuff, and my best friend is in Ravenclaw.”

A scattering of other students nodded.

“You can't like everyone,” said Harry somberly. “Not everyone can mix well with everyone else. Personalities clash all the time.”

Ninth paragraph.
“I want your names, and if you are honest, it will be easier in the long run.” said McGonagall.

A few students looked around, nervously, but then raised their hands slowly.

“Very good.” said McGonagall taking down the names, “If I learn of any stragglers, I will be most displeased.”

“And trust us,” said Fred.

“You don't want that.” said George.

Dialogue line.

The Ravenclaws that had stood up, looked down shamefully.

Tenth paragraph.

Sirius rubbed the back of Harry's neck.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Precisely.” said Dumbledore.

“The only way he wouldn't be noticed would be if they were deaf and blind.” said Charlie.

Dialogue line.

Eleventh paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“I was excited.” said Angelina with a shrug.

“You had every right to be excited.” said Harry with a smile.
“The practices are harder though.” said Katie.

“I planned on being there!” said Harry throwing up his hands.

“Why weren't you there?” asked Emmeline.

“Someone decided that Harry shouldn't tell the truth.” said Hermione shortly.

“Trying to push yourself a little forward, huh?” said Bill with a smile.

“You'd think that, but I had started over a hundred letters by the time the train left. Nothing really important, just something to say hi.” said Sirius with an embarrassed smile.

“I'd be insulted, but frankly, have at it.” said Leroy.

“There's a first.” said Ron.
“Ronalad!” said Mrs. Weasley.

“Mum, it was Umbridge's class.” said Ron.

“Well...I suppose...but you had better been studying in the library later than.” said Mrs. Weasley.

“With Hermione, we always do.” said Ron.

“Better ask him why it's cheap.” said Bill quickly.

“No one trusts us.” said George wailing dramatically.

“Normally, sure, but with pranking things, or sweets, absolutely not.” said their brothers and sister.

“Ouch.” said Fred. “I think they're trying to tell us something.”

“So...how did you know what it did?” asked Dr. Clark seriously.

“We took one, and when we wouldn't stop, we made ourselves sick in order to get rid of it.” said Fred quietly, not wanting to distress his mother and instigate a screaming match from her.

“I walked right behind you, Miss Granger, why was I not informed?” said McGonagall.

“I thought I would take care of it on my own.” said Hermione softly.

“Foolish girl, their pranks could have been harmful, you should have told her.” said Snape harshly.
“I can't see her buying one.” said Remus.

“Well, maybe for Umbridge's classes.” said Hermione softly.

“I can see Hermione just being in utopia when those come around.” said Sirius shaking his head.

Mrs. Weasley shook her head in shame. Mr. Weasley was trying to look stern, but the sides of his mouth kept twitching.

“I was a little disappointed, but thankfully, you managed to get O's in my class.” said Flitwick.
“Mine as well.” said Professor Sprout.

“As shocked as I was, you did get an O in mine.” said Professor Snape.

“I still cannot believe you didn't pass my exam with the grade I expected.” said Professor McGonagall.

“Ah...well...we were...not in our top form, we were hoping for four.” said George.

Hermione shook her head. “Top form for you is four?”

“Top form for what O.W.Ls we cared about.” said Fred.

Dialogue line.

Fifteenth paragraph.

Dialogue set.

“Education is important!” said Percy.

“We have business ventures to take on.” said Fred.

“We aren't letting them go.” said George.

Dialogue set.

Mr. Weasley smiled fondly at his sons. “You boys are too much sometimes. I don't know where you get it from.”

Dialogue set.

Sixteenth paragraph, third sentence.

“It's an honest answer.” said Dumbledore with a chuckle.

End of sixteenth paragraph.

Seventeenth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.
“Still don't know why you don't tell us about it.” said Ron.

“I don't like preaching about where I send my gold and used books.” said Harry with a smile.

Eighteenth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, third sentence, second comma.

“Were you planning on going all out?” asked Hermione.

“No.” said Harry.

“Why not?” asked Hermione, “It could affect the careers we have in life!”

“Let's face it, it's not likely I'm going to see twenty,” said Harry. The people around the bowl and in, flinched. “Not with Voldemort around. And if I do survive, my name, and a good grade in Defense Against the Dark Arts class will get me into at least the regular Magical Police, maybe the Aurors. Or I could nix magic all together and start a restaurant, continue with the security testing, or whatever I want. My life options are open, if I live long enough.”

End of dialogue set.

“But sort of hurts if you didn't choose the right classes ahead of time.” said Ron.

“Not to worry, even if you didn't take the classes, you'd still be able to take the tests if you desired, you would just need to study the coursebook, talk to the appropriate teacher and do a little more studying.” said Dumbledore. “But, you had better be able to dedicate the time to studying.”

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Nineteenth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Madam Bones looked smug.

“Hey, he could change his mind.” said Nightstrike.
“An Auror is worthwhile!” said Tonks.

“Aww...that's cute.” said Sirius.

“I wont'!” said Hermione. “But...maybe I could study them, so people...don't set them free.”

“That would be a worthwhile endeavor.” said Dumbledore with a smile.

“Right.” said anyone who had taken the class taught by the droning ghost.

“No one else could manage it, all they could do was study the whole book.” said Ron.

“Should have had her in our year.” said a sixth year Hufflepuff.

“I've done it.” said Kingsley.

“So have we.” said Fred and George.

“James, and I played Exploding Snap, you'd think he'd of heard it.” said Sirius thoughtfully.
End of twenty-second paragraph.

“Go figure.” said the students shaking their heads.

Dialogue line.

“They'd fail, or at least Harry would have to buckle down and use his brain.” said Dr. Clark with a smile.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Everyone tries, and most everyone fails.” said Dumbledore kindly.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Ever think that Ron has Hermione wrapped around his finger sometimes?” asked Charlie.

“And she has him.”said Bill.

“Despite the fights, they make a cute couple.” said Charlie with a smile.

Twenty-third paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Twenty-fourth paragraph, first sentence.

“Aww, this is Harry's second shot at his crush!” said a seventh year Gryffindor..

End of twenty-fourth paragraph.

The girls she normally walked with giggled madly.

Dialogue line.
“Argh, don’t dwell on that!” said Terry.

Cho smiled at Harry appreciatively.

“Way to kill the conversation Ron.” said Ginny.

“Smack him, Harry.” said a fifth year Ravenclaw.

“She was talking to Harry, not to you, and don't go talking about sport's teams unless you're prepared for a confrontation.” said Angelina.

“How did my boy become so oblivious?” said Mrs. Weasley shaking her head.
“There is no point arguing with him, unless you support the Cannons, he's going to round on everyone.” said Percy knowledgeably.

“Seems like everyone you know just wants to sabotage your chances.” said Katie with a giggle.

“I knew it wasn't your fault.” said Cho softly.

“No one could ever blame you, dear.” said Mrs. Diggory.

“Someone believed me, someone who was close to him believed me.” said Harry quietly.

“Which shows you're a good teacher, but you need to tone down the bullying to nonexistent levels.” said Rivers sternly.

“Hell get all the training he'll need at the seminar.” said Dumbledore with a nod.
Dialogue set.

“I'm betting someone gulped.” said Bill.

Twenty-ninth paragraph.

“Big surprise.” muttered Bill.

Dialogue set.

Thirtieth paragraph.

“Not if you want to be an Auror, unfortunately.” said Dumbledore.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue set, first sentence.

“Well, they were right, that's a hard potion to do.” said Moody.

“I still have issues with it.” said Tonks.

“Maybe Harry should have a few glasses of that a day.” whispered Ron.

End of dialogue set.

“Now, why can't you act like that normally?” said Flitwick.

“If I didn't intimidate them, they'd fool around.” said Snape darkly.

Thirty-first paragraph.

“I’m still shocked that that particular potion is on the O.W.L level, and not the N.E.W.T.s” said Rivers. “But I suppose, if they can get that potion right, or at least darn close, then it warrants admission into the N.E.W.T.s course.”
“Severus, surely at some point in your adult years you would have managed to grow up.” spat McGonagall. “Honestly, berating the same boy class after class, have you no shame? I refer to both Longbottom and Potter.”

“His potion was grossly missing vital steps!” said Snape defensively.

“Really? I surely doubt that you happened to already speak to Finnigan, Weasley and anyone else who had missed a few vital steps.” said McGonagall hotly.

“Sounds like you could use a few drops of it.” said Sirius as he rubbed his godson's tense arm.

“That should have been nipped in the bud right there.” said Sprout.

Snape looked away.

“Easy there, Monster, he's a bit bigger than you.” said Leroy.

“How did he know what ingredient was missing?” asked a first year Ravenclaw.

“He's had his shares of mistakes in potion making.” said Dumbledore with a smile. “Why I remember a time that he destroyed his entire table and the six surrounding ones in his first attempt at Potion making. There is still some remaining potion stains in the wood of the classroom if you look hard enough.”

Snape snarled over at the old man.
“Be a bully and I'll tell the most embarrassing stories about you.” said Dumbledore with a twinkling smile.

“As if the seminar wasn't going to be bad enough.” muttered Snape.

Thirty-fifth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Thirty-sixth paragraph.

“It's sort of cool that Snape knows what's missing and what the potion looks when you forget it.” said a third year Slytherin.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“So was Weasley's Finnigan's and most likely others. But of course, you only look at Potters.” said Sprout shaking her head.

Thirty-seventh paragraph.

Dialogue set.

Thirty-eighth paragraph, second sentence.

Snape kept his gaze fixed at a spot on the floor.

“Vicious bully.” muttered Bathilda Bagshot.

End of thirty-eighth paragraph.

“You don't have the ability to control the weather do you?” asked Bill with a slight smirk.

“No, if I did, I'd have it thunder and lightning all the time this year.” mumbled Harry.
Too bad you didn't see that, huh?” said Sirius trying to brighten his godson's mood, but was failing.

Harry said nothing.

“Do you want to take a nap for a while?” asked Sirius.

Once again, Harry said nothing.

Sirius looked a little hurt, but pulled Harry's tense body towards him so that he could lean on his godfather.

“Can't say that it's ever happened.” said Harry.

“I don't take nearly as much points as I should.” said Snape waspishly.

“I'll remember that the next time.” said Harry.

“He started it.” said Harry.

“We know.” said Remus carefully. “We know.”

“I do have other things to do than pander to the Order's brats.” said Snape.

Dumbledore nodded and smiled.
Dialogue set.

Ron and Hermione looked at each other embarrassingly.

“He's got a point, you two bickering would get on anyone's nerves.” said Sirius, “And like I said, this summer, no Ron, no Hermione, just nice, relaxing holiday time.”

Harry smiled faintly.

Fortieth paragraph.

Ron and Hermione looked sheepishly at each other.

Forty-first paragraph.

Dialogue set.

“Well, aint he brave?” said Parvati with a giggle.

Forty-second paragraph.

Forty-third paragraph, first sentence.

“That'll kill any enthusiasm for a class.” said Remus.

Forty-third paragraph, second sentence.

“Thankfully she decided to stay up in her tower.” said McGonagall. “I don't think I could take much more of her 'predictions'.”

End of forty-third paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Finally.” said George.

“That won't last long.” said Fred.
“Well, it would be nice if you two didn't fight all the damn time and support him while he's having a hard time.” said Lionus.

“They do support...” said Harry.

“Then perhaps you should have stayed with Sirius, if that was the best they could do.” said Lionus firmly.

“Hate it when they do that.” said Harry.

“What?” asked Remus.

“Talk over me.”

“Good luck with that one.” said Fred.
“Ah,” said George with a misty voice. “Being chased by a pair of scissors means you will have to get your haircut soon.”

“And my grandmother's hat?” asked Neville.

“You're grandmother's hat is going to have to do it.” said Fred.

End of forty-fifth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Forty-sixth paragraph.

“No, I don't suppose you would.” said Mr. Weasley.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Sounds fascinating.” said Tonks with a smile.

Forty-seventh paragraph.

Dialogue set.

“I'd rather do homework than what she had us doing during class.” said Harry.

Forty-eighth paragraph.

Forty-ninth paragraph.

“She's a sadist.” said Remus, his anger distorting his face slightly.

Dialogue line.

Fiftieth paragraph.

Dialogue line.
“Go jump off a cliff, Professor Umbridge.” sang Fred and George.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, second sentence.

“We'd rather would have sat in respectful silence.” said a few older students.

End of dialogue set.

Fifty-first paragraph.

Words on the blackboard.

“Checking basics is a good idea, especially for first years, but she should have had a better book.” said Rivers.

Dialogue set, third sentence, second comma.

“Dumbledore has followed the correct curriculum, well, except Potter's second year, and some part of the previous year.” said Rivers. “They were fine.”

End of dialogue set.

“Oh, I don' know, I've been following the O.W.L.'s and N.E.W.T's and they've been just fine.” said Rivers. “I don't quite know what that stupid woman is spouting off.”

Dialogue set, second sentence.

“If you lot were unhappy, you should have brought this to our attention or at least Dumbledores, but no, every year I get reports from the Minister himself that said that education standards were being met, so...it was their fault.” said Rivers.

End of dialogue set.

Fifty-second paragraph.
Umbridge's Course Aims.

The adults in the room stared.

“Seriously?” said Tonks.

“I don’t believe this.” said Moody rubbing his eyes.

“Defensive theory isn’t even on O.W.L.s those are on N.E.W.T’s and even then, that’s last year course aims. Fifth year is traditionally all practical works, and defensive spells.” said Rivers.

Fifty-third paragraph.
Fifty-fourth paragraph.

Dialogue set, first sentence.

“Oh, I hate her already.” Mrs. McFinn.

“What about the whole hate thing?” said Harry, a ghost of a smile on his face.

“I’m old enough to hate, you aren't just yet.” said Mrs. McFinn.

End of dialogue set.

“No, Professor Toad-face.” said Fred.

Dialogue line.
Dialogue line.

Fifty-fifth paragraph.

Fifty-sixth paragraph, second sentence.

“I already read the book, it was about as interesting, informative and helpful as Sir Cadogan.” said Harry.

End of fifty-sixth paragraph.

“What's so odd about that?” asked Blaise.

“Her book wasn't open.” said Harry.
“It was more interesting, her just sitting there with her hand in the air than reading the book.”
Neville.

“It's Miss Granger, not 'dear.'” said Hermione.

“Doesn't she know magic can fix her teeth?” asked a first year.
“Maybe she doesn't know it, she doesn’t' seem all that bright.” said another first year, not bothering to keep her voice down.
Umbridge was thrashing madly in the chair, her gag was placed back over her mouth.

“You'd think a new teacher would take attendance.” said Mrs. Diggory.
“It is required, apparently she thought herself above such trivial things.” said McGonagall with a frown.
“Isn’t that your job?” said Charlie accusingly. He then looked at the Minister. “Seriously, she was the best you could do?”

Fudge looked down at the floor shamefully.

Dialogue line.

Sixty-first paragraph.

“It didn't dawn on them.” said Harry.

Dialogue set.

“It could happen, and if the faker hadn't had a better agenda, it would have happened.” said Moody.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Rollcall, nitwit, it's called...rolleall...” said Bill.

Dialogue line.

Sixty-second paragraph, third sentence, tenth word.

“You know she's going to bait him.” said Rudolph.

“And she did.” said Harry.

End of sixty-second paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“IT is, you need to protect yourself. The only way theory helps you is when you chuck the book at them and run.” said Rivers.
“More than you are, I'll bet.” said George.

“I'd love their names.” said Rivers. Fudge looked at the man and then looked down. Tempest cuffed him on the back of the head.

“The man asked you a question.” said Tempest smartly.

“I...it was me...Delores...Weasley...and Higgins.” said Fudge, rubbing the back of his head.

“So...only one of you, Higgins, is a member of the Office for Magical Education...you stupid fool.” said Rivers shaking his head.

“He'd rather give you a finger.” said George.

“Exactly.” said Moody.

“If I had known, then I would have said yes.” said Dean looking at Harry out of the corner of his
Sixty-fourth paragraph.

Dialogue set, first sentence, second comma.

“She's a bad liar.” said Emmeline.

End of dialogue set.

“He was the best Defense teacher ever.” said Seamus.

Dialogue line.

Remus blushed.

Dialogue set, second sentence.

“Like what? The Unforgivable curses, you lot gave them the authority to teach them!” said Dr. Clark shortly.

“And if they mean the Patronus, there is nothing harmful about it, it's the best spell to teach the students when the stupid Ministry decides to send Dementors to the school.” said Rudolph. “Every student should have been taught that spell.”

End of dialogue set.

“No, the teachers were being honest that attacks could happen, no matter how old you are. Cause there are adults out there that are out to get soft targets like us kids.” said Harry. “So...teaching us the practical stuff first, and then the theory will only help us in the long run.”

Rivers smiled approvingly over to the youth.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.
“She shouldn't have even been a candidate for the teaching position.” said Rivers.

“YOU BLOODY TOLD HIM TO!” shouted almost everyone in the hall.

“But later in life, all they'll be able to do is theorize how the spell works and then take what ever the opponents' spell does without defending themselves. So in reality...” said Remus.

“You're signing our death warrant.” said Harry.

The adults in the hall fell silent.

“But without practice and knowing what the counter curse is, won't help us at all.” said Fred.

“She's an absolute blooming idiot.” said Rivers. “And anyone else that thought this idea would work.”

Fudge, and Percy both flinched.
“What does she think this is?” asked Mr. Weasley. “Some fantasy land where the students can't get hurt?”

“Now she's just endangering them.” said Lionus.

“She's never leaving Hell's Garden.” said Chief Hawkeye.

“Hit the dirt people.” said Fred loudly.

“Death Eaters, dark wizards, normal criminals, child molesters, kidnappers, abusive parents, drunken brawlers...the list goes on.” said Kingsley.

“Him as well, but they're all in denial.” said Kingsley.

“She baited him...sick twisted bitch.” said Sirius.
“Please do, we haven't heard enough of your psychotic ramblings.” said Rivers.

Dialogue line.
Dialogue line.
Dialogue set.

“That is the truth! You wouldn't know the truth if it leaped up and bit you.” said Ernie angrily.

Dialogue line.
Dialogue set, second sentence.

“That's baiting, sad thing is, she can do that.” said McGonagall. “There's no way I could have overturned it.”

“She makes Severus look like the Professor of the Year.” said Flitwick with a smirk.

Dialogue set, eighth sentence.

“Not one person in our year went to her, I don't think, she kind of sold a few to Harry's side.” said Hermione.

“There was still a lot that believed her, not that I could understand that.” said Ron.

Dialogue set, ninth sentence.

“And here she is trying to turn everyone against Harry. Leaving him all alone for the most part.” said Sirius.

Dialogue set, eleventh sentence.

“I'd rather be bosom buddies with Lucius.” said Mr. Weasley.

End of dialogue set.
Seventieth paragraph.

“I was...beginning to believe him.” said Seamus.

“Sure didn't sound like.” said Ron.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Seventy-first paragraph, first sentence.

“We didn’t' want to press him.” said a few Gryffindor sixth years. “Sort of showed us that he was telling the truth, he wasn't proclaiming his story all over the place.”

End of seventy-first paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“You can't accidentally kill someone with the killing curse.” said Sirius.

Dialogue set.

Seventy-second paragraph.

“I'd say piss off and walk out the classroom.” Bill. “You can still take the test at the end of the year.”

Seventy-third paragraph.

“You should have Mr. Potter.” said McGonagall.

“I didn't.” said Harry. “I was taught by Officer McFinn to tell the truth and keep telling the truth when something happens to me.”

“Yeah, but I didn't expect this world to be so prejudice against the truth.” said Officer McFinn looking firmly over to the Minister.

Seventy-fourth paragraph.
“I don't want to even think about what happened while she was beating him.” whispered Sirius to Remus.

“Ooh, don't talk to him with a bad attitude, he won't make you feel any better.” said Fred.

“Even he's on their side.” said Sirius.

“He's not on anyone's side, he just likes to poke fun.” said Dumbledore. “He knows the truth, and he believes Harry...Harry might actually be one of his favorite people.”

“Why is that?” asked Bill.

“He's so serious, he wants nothing more than to cause Harry to chuckle a bit...but he goes about it the wrong way.” said Dumbledore.

“He hasn't been singing that lately, not that I've heard...” said Dr. Clark. “All he's been doing around me is doing that Pirate jig.”

“Well, he's got a bit right, though Harry's not just mad, he's downright pissed.” said Bill.

“Well, there's one question answered.” said Fred.
“He was excused from Umbridge's class, lucky little toerag.” said George.

“No one has ever been sent to another teacher on the first day...it's just unheard of.” said McGonagall.

“Go me, I'm the first.” said Harry glumly.

“To no actual fault of your own.” said Sirius. “Maybe...”

“Uh oh...better run Harry.” said Sirius with a small smile. “She's going to shout at you...I know the signs...”

“Is what true, we don't know what the letter said.” said Bill.

Sirius kissed his godson's head. “Never talk to her like that, unless you don't want to feel your writing arm for three weeks. I snapped at her once, I still get a twinge now and then.”

“Oh yes.” said Fred.

“Though...it wasn't a normal Harry rant...quite watered down it was.” said George.
“Sickly, even.” said Fred

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Damn straight.” said Neville with a blush at his own volume.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Seventy-ninth paragraph, first sentence.

“And here comes the shouting.” said Fred and George, sticking their fingers in the ears.

“It was nice knowing you.” said Remus covering his eyes.

End of seventy-ninth paragraph.

The school was silent.

“We...hate...you...” said the twins together.

“Life is not fair.” said Sirius staring at Harry. “I would try and be the most charming little cuss and what happens? I get detentions that never end....You walk in, you say you shouted at a teacher and snap at her, and you get biscuits.”

Harry looked at McGonagall and smiled sheepishly. The sides of McGonagall's mouth twitched slightly.

Dialogue line.

“You could have knocked me over with an owl feather.” said Tonks.

Dialogue set, first sentence.

“Rub it in why don't you?” said Fred and George crossing their arms.
“I'd save that cookie, cause that'll never happen again.” said Remus.

“So much for saving it.” said Sirius with a snicker.

Professor Sprout and Flitwick smiled to their stern comrade.

“So much for nice teacher that gives you cookies.” said Fred.

“My common sense told me to tell the truth, no matter what, and to correct those who were wrong.” said Harry.

“Yeah, but the ones who don't know whether they're on foot or on broomback.” said Sirius.

“Nope, she's not going to change it, we've tried.” said Sirius.
“I see you've taken that warning to heart.” said McGonagall gesturing around.

“I...had enough.” said Harry softly.

“She won't let him, she'll keep baiting him...someone should have told him he could skip the class and just take the end exam early.” said Remus.

“Wouldn't have done much good, Umbridge would have had to sign off on it.” said Dumbledore.

“Another impossibility and you're letting it go?” said Dean.

“Never disobey her.” said Gryffindors, young and old.

“Ouch, she didn't think that it came straight from you.” said Dr. Clark.

“Worked for me.” said Harry shifting slightly.

“What's up cub...” asked Sirius.
“These books are getting old.” said Harry with a frown.

“Oh, they'll be getting a bit more interesting, and frightening as we go along.” said Officer McFinn. “I would have had a heart attack a few times, if my heart was still beating.”
“I think one more chapter while we have dinner, and then off to bed.” said Dumbledore with a smile.

“Sounds great to me.” said Harry running his hand through his white hair.

“Which is shocking, cause Harry likes dinner better than any other meal of the day.” said Neville.

“How the hell do you know?” asked Ron.

“He eats more.” said Neville. “He doesn't eat much during any other part of the day.”

McGonagall stared fiercely at the students sitting around, their eyes focused sternly onto the ground.

“I'll only ask this once more, and once more only...” said McGonagall.

Students began to slowly raise their hands.

“Seems I'll have a full classroom of students.” said Madam Bones.

“Oh, were you there?” said Lee shortly.
“And just think, if I had just stayed in bed at the end of my first year...I wouldn't have had to hear all this.” said Harry nastily.

“They might have, then again, they may not have.” said Dumbledore.

“The influence of parents can sway a child very easily.” said Firenze.

“They had never seen Ron leave before Crabbe and Goyle before.” said a sixth year Hufflepuff.

“That and Hermione slamming her silverware on the table didn't help.” said Neville.

“You don't know what it was like being there.” said Harry covering his eyes, ignoring the food that sat before him on a plate.

“Eat something.” coaxed Sirius.

“Not hungry.” said Harry.

“Do you want a potion instead?” asked Remus.

“I don't want anything.” said Harry.

“And you had Harry's word!” said Dr. Clark.

“You'd think...with as famous as Harry is...and how he didn't seek it out...they'd believe him.” said Mrs. McFinn.

The students looked away shamefully.
“Leave her be.” said Harry tiredly.

The Rangers looked at Harry with a sympathetic look, but sent stern glances to the bushy haired girl.

“Every year is an O.W.L. year.” said McGonagall with a smile.
“Besides you.” said Harry mumbled, nudging Remus with his foot.

“I had no choice.” said Dumbledore. “I would have found a suitable teacher, had one applied for the job.”

“We should have paid someone to tell her lies.” said Ron.

“There, I didn't snap.” said Harry tiredly.

“Shh...have a roll, sweetie.” said Mrs. McFinn.

Harry said nothing, but took the dinner roll and began to nibble at it.

“How come you can get him to eat?” said Sirius.

“We've already discussed this.” said Mrs. McFinn with a smile.

“At least they were leaving him alone.” said George.

“Oh for goodness sake.” said McGonagall looking up at the sky.

“I was trying to get Harry to laugh.” said Ron with an unconvincing smile.
Sixth paragraph.

“Uh...we'll just go to bed early.” said Fred.

“Long day...” said George.

“Oh no you don't.” said Bill and Mrs. Wealsey. “Sit down.”

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“You know full well that's not what they were doing.” said Charlie.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Seventh paragraph, first sentence.

“I think it's a mite strong, there.” said Officer McFinn.

End of seventh paragraph.

“I didn't want to get in the middle of that...it sounded...Percyish.” said Ron.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“And you went and did it anyway!” said Hermione.

“Hey, we already gave them the money, they were eager to do it.” said George.

“We tried to get the money back, but they wouldn't cough up.” said Fred.

“I'm sure that you tried.” said Hermione skeptically.
“They didn't look fine.” said Hermione shortly.

“Oh...the scolding...it was awful.” said Fred.

“I'm glad I got through to you.” said Hermione.

“Oh, it wasn't yours, yours is too much like mum's.” said George.

“We're talking about Harry's scolding.” said Fred.

“He told us off later that night.” said George. “Merlin...I felt really bad.”

The adults turned and stared at the twins.

“Harry already screamed at us for saying it like that, I think we were already punished enough.” said Fred.

“I want to hear one of these scoldings.” said Mrs. Weasley.
“Where did we go wrong?” said Mrs. Weasley.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Ninth paragraph.

Dumbledore smiled at the young woman fondly. “It's nice to see even young wizards and witches and exert raw power like that.”

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“She would.” said Ron.

“Harry didn't bother saying that, but we figured to stop right then and there. Harry was just the last nail in the coffin.” said Fred.

Dialogue line.

Tenth paragraph, second sentence.

“Never bring our mother in on a threat.” said George.

“It's not fair.” said Fred.

End of tenth paragraph.

Eleventh paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“What the hell was I suppose to do?” said Ron. “I've never been able to stand up to them like that.”
What are you doing?” asked Lavender.

“Something that's already been discussed to death.” said Harry, chewing a bit of chicken.

“I don't do that anymore.” said Hermione softly.

“I'll bet the house-elves are happy to hear that.” said Dean.

“I suppose so that they'll be freed, completely on accident and unintentional.” said Dumbledore. “But it wouldn't work either way. Only the Headmaster may be able to free the house-elves.”

Hermione looked aside, embarrassment on her face.

“And they most certainly didn't want to be freed.” said Flitwick.

“I didn't touch the hats.” said Ron quickly.

“There was a lot of people listening.” said Ron. “Had to keep up the charade.”
“You just had a really long day.” said Sirius pulling Harry's legs up to his lap as Harry's hand began to fall limply on Mrs. McFinn's lap.

“I wanted to ask him one more time to tell me how it happened.” said Seamus.

“You didn't ask, you demanded it.” said Lee.

“And you weren't entitled to hear it.” said Katie.

“Well, there would be no way to prove that.” said Terry.

“I don't blame her.” said a seventh year Ravenclaw girl.

“And when he works you...he works you!” said Tonks.
“It was almost out of character for him.” said Seamus.

“Well, that was nice.” said Emmeline.

“I need A LOT of confidence.” said Neville.

“They’re still a pain.” said Harry. “Conjuring is easier for me.”

“And she was the only one who could do it.” said Ron.

“Well, that’s not too much homework.” said Mr. Weasley.

“Why were you panicking?” asked Charlie.

“I had several drafts to work on.” said Harry.

Dumbledore sat in thought, Voldemort hadn’t realized the connection yet had he? Was Harry’s defenses keeping him at bay, yet causing the lad pain all the same?
Twenty-fifth paragraph, third sentence.

Draco sat cringing in his seat.

End of twenty-fifth paragraph.

Draco looked over to the bowl, a growing twinge of jealousy on his face as the people inside gave the youth their undivided attention...his mother gave him that attention sometimes, but his father...and he doubted the man would feel the same way since having his magic taken from him.

Dialogue line.

Twenty-sixth paragraph, third sentence, sixth word.

“Wonder why she didn't put an end to it?” said Flitwick.

“Oh, she asked me if that year's Slytherins were the nastiest...I had to tell her yes.” said Sprout.

End of twenty-sixth paragraph.

“What on earth were those?” asked Mrs. McFinn.

“They sound like Bowtruckles.” said Dr. Clark before Hermione could answer.

“Absolutely correct.” said Dumbledore proudly.

Dialogue set, second sentence, first colon.

“Why?” asked the pair of them indignantly.

“We've seen cool stuff in the class before.” said Harry stubbornly.

They rolled their eyes.

End of dialogue set

“I guess they were...but...you learned something...” said Hagrid.

“Not to mess with Mother Nature.” muttered Ron.
Dialogue set.

“Honestly, let someone else get a shot.” groaned Snape.

Dialogue line.

“Recited perfectly.” muttered Snape.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue set, first sentence, second comma.

“Did you even raise your hand?” said Fred.

George gasped loudly. “For shame Hermione!”

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue set, second sentence.

“There's another way.” said Hagrid.

“What way is that Hagrid?” asked Dumbledore with a smile. He truly felt Hagrid was the best person for the job of Care of Magical Creatures, he knew the ins and outs of a staggering amount of creatures, things you couldn't quite find in any book.

“Well, if you put some fertilizer down around the tree and show yer willin' to take care of it, they'll let yeh near it and take what you want.” said Hagrid.

“Sounds a lot cleaner than handling wood lice.” said Ron loudly.

“It's still fertilizer.” said Pavarit snippishly.

“It's better than lice in your hair.” said Harry with a smirk.

The girls shrieked and began to shake their hair and run their fingers through it quickly.

“That was mean.” said Mrs. McFinn tugging Harry's locks.

“That was funny.” whispered Sirius.
“Make sure Draco hears that, you don't want him to put the stupid thing near his eyes.” said Ron loudly.

“Not too closely though.” said Remus.

“Dean's was the best.” said Seamus.

“Yeah, mine looked like some sort of squished tall guy.” said Ron.

“Yeah, Harry never minding is about as likely as McGonagall handing out biscuits for a third time.” said Fred.

Snape frowned over to Malfoy who cringed.

“I'd love to see that.” said Angelina.

“Malfoy would never stand a chance.” said Alicia.
Snape cuffed the back of Draco's head.

Twenty-eighth paragraph, third sentence.

“He was fine, he just took a while to get back.” said Sirius.

Twenty-eighth paragraph, fourth sentence.

“They're stubborn little critters.” said Remus.

End of twenty-eighth paragraph.

Dialogue set, first sentence.

“He's not omnipotent.” said Lionus with a sneer. “If Hagrid had been captured, he wouldn't know it until it was possibly too late.”

Dialogue set, third sentence.

“Sure...yeah...” said George.

“That'll work.” said Fred.

“Ignoring people don't work, Hermione. And people are idiots if they think it will. The only way to get people off your back is to put them in detentions, suspension, expulsion, and if they're adults...jail or lawsuits.” said Officer McFinn. “Punishing them for their bad behavior is the only way. Ignoring them only tells them that some people can be affected and others can't. And they'll keep messing with people until they find the ones that submit to them.”

“My parents always told me...” said Hermione.

“Were they bullied or harrassed by someone...I didn't think so.” said Officer McFinn. “If you need proof...do you think Dudley Dursley or Vernon Dursley would have left Harry alone if he ignored them?”

Hermione looked over to Harry and shook her head. “But Malfoy...”

“Is just as nasty as Dudley, only he uses his mouth more than he uses his fist.” said Officer McFinn.

Draco flinched.

“If someone is messing with you, you need to tell someone, ignoring it will only allow them to continue on.” said Officer McFinn.
“Can't we skip over my bits?” said Draco quietly.

“You're learning to change, this is good for you.” said Officer McFinn. “You won't go back down this path.”

Remus leaned forward and took Harry's hand in his...rubbing his thumb over the skin.

“They're not poisonous are they?” asked Mrs. McFinn worriedly.

“It's bite numbs the area for a while, but it's scratches are not all that dangerous.” said Charlie.

“I'll bet that shocked her when she got that bloodstained picture.” said Flitwick.

“I'd hope so.” said Professor Sprout.

“Even I would question as to the origin of the blood.” said Snape.

“Hope Harry get's that taken care of soon.” said Mrs. Weasley.
“Did she...” said Dr. Nicodemus shaking his head.

“She did...” said Lionus.

“And I thought Weasley had little tact.” said Dr. Nicodemus.

“I meant his school life.” said Hermione her eyes becoming red with tears, why weren't they leaving her and Ron alone, they supported Harry!

“I think your school mates were doing enough of that.” said Nightstrike.

“He wasn't...” said Hermione.

“Hermione, let it go...” said Ron. “They're just mad cause Harry's having a really bad year. They want him to join them, so they'll defend him all the way. Not that I don't blame them. Guess we weren't helping matters.”

“I missed yeh lot too.” said Hagrid with a smile.

“Well, she finally handled that one well.” said Dr. Nicodemus.

Hermione hiccuped a sob.

“It's okay, it'll be okay.” said Ron. “You heard Harry, he doesn't think that way...and he's the one that his opinion matters...right?”

“R-right.” said Hermione.

Dumbledore smiled.
“She looked nice.” said Ginny before either Pavarti or Lavender could say anything.

“When she leaves the group, something interesting always happens.” sad a fellow fourth year.

“Well, it's nice to have her support.” said Sirius.

“Yes, but...she's a little...different.” said Remus with a smile. “She marches to a highly different drum.”

“They were...unusual.” said Lavender.

“I don't remember learning about them.” said Dr. Clark.

“Don't ask.” muttered Remus.

“Now that was not nice, Miss Granger.” said Flitwick.

“I'm sorry, but there...” said Hermione.

“That's beside the point.” said Flitwick.
“Beggars can't be choosers Hermione.” said Bill.

“That's not all I told her.” said Ginny to Luna quickly.

Luna looked slowly over to Hermione who muttered an apology once again.

“Good lord now what?” said Mrs. McFinn.

“I...am...so...sorry.” said Ernie looking over to Luna.

“Thanks for the support...too bad you didn't support him in the second year.” said Ron.

“Not that radishes aren't nice.” said Harry sleepily.

“I thought everyone else thought he was mad.” said Seamus.
“You're an idiot.” said Fred.

Thirty-third paragraph, second sentence, first comma.

“That's normal.” said Tonks.

Thirty-third paragraph, end of second sentence.

“Yeah, first week of fifth year always sucks.” said Sirius.

End of thirty-third paragraph.

“I would just go to bed after a light dinner if I were you.” said Sirius.

“He has detention.” said Remus.

“Screw it, skip her detentions.” said Sirius.

Thirty-fourth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“I'm really sorry.” said Angelina. “I didn't realize how vicious she was.”

Dialogue line.

“Just lucky, I guess.” said Justin.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

“Wow, I sound awful.” said Angelina.

“Yeah...it was your first week as a Captain.” said Katie, “You settled down a bit since then.”
“Yeah...good luck with that.” said Fred.

“Let us know how that turns out.” said George.

“Sad thing is, I actually asked her to let me go early.” said Harry.

“You poor, naïve fool.” said the twins shaking their heads solemnly.

End of dialogue set.

“Oh...my god...I'm...am...oh good lord...” said Angelina looking horrified with herself.

“Temporary Insanity.” said Fred.

“Never works for us when the teachers catch us, but maybe it'll work for you.” said George.

Thirty-fifth paragraph.

Dialogue set.

Angelina cracked a smile.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, first sentence.

“And that's being optimistic.” said Lee.

Dialogue set, third sentence.

“Bad idea boy.” said Moody quickly.

End of dialogue set.

“You can fake the diary, scribble something straight out of the book for Care of Magical Creatures, practice the spell right right when you get up, and only have to work on the essays and the countercharm.” said Sirius. “There, I cut your work in half.”
'I think his mother would prefer him to have actually tried.’ said Remus.

‘Oh don’t tell me she didn't come up with a shortcut, I’ve seen her trace drawings from books with little differences.’ said Sirius. ‘When she was overworked in the fifth year.’

Thirty-sixth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

‘And what does that have to do with the price of beetles eyes in Diagon Alley?’ asked Rudolph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Thirty-seventh paragraph.

‘Every year I go in there, it changes it a bit.’ muttered Harry.

‘You can go to sleep again.’ said Sirius, rubbing Harry's hand.

Thirty-eighth paragraph.

‘Well, at least two years it looked like a proper Defense Against the Dark Art's teacher's office.’ said Tonks.

Thirty-ninth paragraph, third sentence.

Sirius began gagging.

McGonagall stared.

‘No offense to you.’ said Sirius quickly.

End of thirty-ninth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Fortieth paragraph.

Dialogue line.
“Guess he's doing lines.” said a first year.

“But didn't they say that it was a bad thing.” said another first year. “Something to do with the back of their hands.”

“I'm going to be sick.” said Dr. Nicodemus. “No child should be tortured this way, or any way.”

“Oh no.” said Remus.

“Well, at least he's not a complete idiot.” said Snape.

“He's an idiot, but not a complete one.” said Snape. “One percent off.”

Remus snorted.

Remus stopped laughing.

“But for the accuser...why the hell not?” said Sirius throwing up his hands.
“To follow the Ministry blindly, no matter what the truth is?” said Tempest tensely as she stamped her hooves angrily.

Firenze looked up at her, adoration in his eyes.

Forty-third paragraph.

“Better step up the stress reliever present.” said Remus.

Forty-fourth paragraph.

“Good boy.” whispered Dumbledore and McGonagall, “Though...what the detention ended up being was nothing you should have been put through.”

Dialogue set, first sentence.

“Not for your benefit bitch.” muttered Remus.

Sirius turned and stared at his old friend.

Dialogue set, fourth sentence.

The adults in the room leaned forward in their chairs. Here it comes....

End of dialogue set.

Forty-fifth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Sirius ran his thumb over the lines etched into his godson's skin. “If I had known...”

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, first sentence.
“I'm done...” said Chief Hawkeye, he snapped his fingers and two people leaped down from the ceiling, landing nimbly onto the ground on either side of his chair.

“Yes sir?” asked the masked figures together.

“Take her to Hell's Garden, level four.” said Chief Hawkeye. “Lifetime membership.”

“Yes sir.” said the pair of Rangers and they walked smartly up to where Umbridge was.

“Madam Dolores Jane Umbridge, you are being taken to taken to Hell's Garden.” said the first Ranger.

“You will be taken to the fourth level, on that level you will be subjected to the the crimes in which you have been guilty of committing.” said the second Ranger.

“And various other things...” he looked around. “That we would mention here but we wouldn't want to give these little toddlers nightmares.” said the first Ranger.

“The term of imprisonment is for the rest of your natural life.” said the second Ranger taking her by the arm and lifting her off the ground.

“No! No you can't!” screamed Umbridge loudly.

“You're done, you should count yourself lucky that we allowed you to stay here.” said Lionus.

“I...I can be useful! I know the ins and outs of Ministry work! I can get things done for you!” shrieked Umbridge.

“No...I don't think you could ever be useful, other than wolf and raven fodder.” said Chief Hawkeye. “Take her away.”

The students watched in silence as their ex-professor was taken screaming out of the doors.

“Let's continue, shall we?” said Lionus.

Officer McFinn smiled viciously and looked down at the book.

“I was looking forward to that, but man...that was kind of creepy.” said Hermione.

“I don't know, it was a bit tamer than what I thought it was going to be.” said Ron.

End of dialogue set.

Forty-sixth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“I'm going to get sick...” said Sirius.

“Just don't throw up on him.” said Dr. Clark.
“Sick, twisted...” said Dr. Nicodemus.

“She won't last a month I'll bet.” said Chief Hawkeye.

Forty-seventh paragraph.
Forty-eighth paragraph.

“Oh my god...oh my god!” said Mrs. McFinn grasping at Harry and pulling him away from Sirius.

“Hey...” said Sirius reaching out to grab Harry's knee.

“Don't you touch him! Don't any of you dare touch him!” screamed Mrs. McFinn as she held Harry to her chest.

“Holly...” said Dr. Clark looked worriedly around at the school and then back to her.

“Sweetheart...” said Officer McFinn. “It was only her hurting him. They don't want to hurt him.”

“I swear, I'd never hurt him.” said Sirius, pleading with the woman.

Mrs. McFinn just held Harry closer and rocked him back and forth.

Forty-ninth paragraph.
Dialogue line.
Dialogue line.

Fiftieth paragraph.

Fifty-first paragraph, first sentence.

“Oh my god.” said Mrs. Weasley covering her mouth. Mr. Weasley was pale, then clasped a hand to his mouth and ran out the door to the nearest loo.

Fifty-first paragraph, second sentence.

Officer McFinn cringed visually in his seat.
“Please, please have a heart for once and let him stop.” said Remus.

Fudge was pale and shaking, he could hardly believe what he was hearing.

“Now is not the time to be brave!” said Ginny her face etched with grief.

“Fist...right into her face.” said Tonks.

“Why would he shiver?” asked Terry.

“Cause she's a sick and twisted old hag.” said Ernie.

“Drink.” said Madam Pomfrey sternly as she levitated over a phial of Calming Draught.

“He must have been freaked out.” said Fred.
“Ron, did you leave it to the last minute?” said Mrs. Weasley easing her husband into the seat, his face a startling shade of green.

“What other stuff was on your agenda?” asked Percy.

“Just other stuff.” said Ron firmly.

“You would be amazed.” said Ron shaking his head.

“Why didn't he tell us?” said Hermione. “We could have told someone.”

“Cause he's Harry.” said Ron. “He won't tell even if he's got a mortal wound.”

“I knew it was going to be unchanged...but you hope for the best.” said Ron with a shrug.
“If I had been informed of how late your detention was, especially what the detention consisted of, I would have given you an extra day.” said McGonagall to the sleeping Harry.

Sixtieth paragraph, second sentence.

“He's falling behind.” said Sirius.

“And Umbridge wanted him to.” said Remus.

End of sixtieth paragraph.

Sirius and a few of the adults turned and stared at her.

“I'm sorry!” wailed Angelina. “I'm so sorry!”

“Wonder what she would have done if he handed her his Quidditch robes?” asked Justin.

“She's beg him to take it back and promise she'd never do that again.” said Katie with a giggle.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, first sentence.

“If only it was only lines.” said Sirius.

“Note to self,” said Remus. “Harry seems to like steak-and-kidney pie.”

End of dialogue set.

“If I only knew.” said Hermione.

Sixty-first paragraph, second sentence, first colon.

“We'd love an answer!” said the two of them loudly.

Sixty-first paragraph, end of sentence.

They looked between themselves with sheepish looks.
“I take it back, he's a complete idiot.” said Snape rolling his eyes.

“Since when do you like walking?” asked Bill.

“No wonder you keep sleeping, you're trying to play catch up.” said Sirius rubbing Harry's ankle, which was still all he could grab a hold of.

“You really should have just stayed at home with me.” said Sirius easing over to where Mrs. McFinn sat, they were slowly regaining her trust again.

“Damned bitch.” muttered Remus.

“Damned in hell will seem like a vacation.” said Lionus with a smirk.
“Pardon...” said Fudge as he rushed out of the room, vomit leaking out through his fingers.

“Stay with him.” said Chief Hawkeye to the Ranger standing guard over the ex-Minister.

Sixty-sixth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

The twins gasped.

“What a horrible thing to call a person...a Ron!” said Fred.

“Imagine what would happen if you called someone a Percy.” said George.

“That's grounds for justifiable homicide.” said Fred.

Sixty-seventh paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Sixty-eighth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“What will they ever get any answers?” said Lee.

Dialogue set.

“Oi!” said Fred and George.

“We weren't giving them anything!” said Fred.

“We were just giving them some marketing questions. Didn't want Hermione to freak out and accuse us of anything.”

Sixty-ninth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

“He won't laugh.” said Sirius.
“He's alright, he's no Wood, but he's alright.” said George honestly.

“Hey, if we didn't pick on you, that meant that we didn't love you.” said Fred.

“He had to stand on...never mind, it's no fun when he's not up and paying attention.” said Ron.

“Listen to Ron!” said Remus. “...I can't believe I said that.”

“You're an idiot, but you're my idiot.” said Sirius shaking Harry's leg.
“She wouldn't have been in any shape to give any further detentions or lessons, that is for sure.” said McGonagall, her teeth gnashing.

“I...I...I need some air for a moment, don't bother waiting...” said Dumbledore standing up slowly and walking out.

“I'll go keep an eye on him.” muttered Kingsley.

“Come on, ma'am, you love hearing gossip!” said Bill with a smile.

“I'm amazed you didn't just break down right there.” said Sirius.

“Would it hurt to worry about yourself?” said a seventh year Ravenclaw shaking his head.

The Ravenclaw student scratched the back of his head.
“Horrible...horrible woman.” growled Mrs. Weasley.

“I'm more impressed that he could see that far.” said Bill.

Sirius retched onto his shoes. Mrs. McFinn moved her foot just in time, but still held Harry fiercely.

“I know you aren't all the comfortable with us right now, but I don't give a damn.” said Sirius sitting closer.

“It wasn't.” said Ron with a smile.

“So he was watching, he just wasn't at the Pitch.” said Fred.
The people looked at Harry in confusion.

“What the hell?” asked Zacharias.

“That...bitch!” whispered Tonks.

“Could she have been a Death Eater? She's as evil as one.” said a third year Gryffindor.

Mrs. McFinn smoothed Harry's hair softly.

“So classy.” said the twins.

“Just go to bed, for once, forget what everyone else wants...and just go to bed.” said Sirius.
“Aw...someone can't hold her butterbeer.” said George.

“Ah...yeah...” said George.

“Wondered why he didn't tell us off...?” said Fred.

“Yeah, but he did the job so well...and you do too.” said George quickly.

Ron blushed.

“I won't let you down.” said Ron quietly.

Hooper blushed.
“Well, she's out.” said Fred.

“What's the point of signing up for a sport's team if other clubs and stuff will get first dibs on you?” said George.

Ron blushed even deeper.

“Well, she's staying up only because she choose to...not because of detention.” said Flitwick.

“Might explain why she's so evil, but I guess nature just made her that way.” said Remus.

“But she wasn't.” said Lionus, “She's fully aware of her actions.”

“That's a weird coincidence.” said Dean.
Dialogue set, first pause.

“I didn’t know!” said Hermione in anguish.

“We know you didn’t know.” said Charlie.

End of dialogue set.

Dumbledore came back in, leaning on Kingsley's arm. His face was drawn and pale, and sipping a calming draught slowly.

Ninetieth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“What happened?” asked Dumbledore weakly.

“Umbridge touched his arm and his scar began to hurt.” said Remus.

“Why didn't he tell me?” said Dumbledore looking slightly confused.

Dialogue line.

“I would.” said Dumbledore.

Dialogue line.

Dumbledore looked over to Harry, a regretful look on his face.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

“So...Harry's completely on his own when it comes to asking for support.” said Dr. Clark.

“He had us!” said Hermione.

“And see how that's working out, he doesn't want to tell you what's going on...he needed Sirius.” said Dr. Clark. “And he should have been able to send him letters discreetly. I'm sure there is some way.”
“There...is.” said Sirius his face lighting up slightly. “I don't know why I didn't think of it before, but he'll have a way to talk to me from now on.”

Dialogue set.

Dialogue set, first sentence, fourth comma.

“Nice...use Harry...” said Fred with a smile.

End of dialogue set.

“Hermione...no guy is going to knit in public.” said Charlie.

“Well...he helps with girl talk sometime...” said Hermione quietly.

“And I'm betting that's in private.” said Bill with a smirk.

Ninety-first paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“He was being honest.” said Colin. “He had A LOT of homework.”

End of chapter.

“You think you were disappointed? He just got told he couldn't contact the one person that was almost surely going to hear him out and not shoot him down halfway through.” said Nightstrike. “Poor kid's tired and you guys must know he's got a lot of homework...just went through many nights of detention, he's being jeered at by the entire school and you want him to bloody knit and take part in a party?”

“He made some weird choices in friends.” said Dr. Nicodemus softly.

Hermione's tears welled up in her eyes and she ran out of the Great Hall and up to the dorms.

Ron looked angrily around at them, sent Harry a sympathetic look and ran after her.

“I'll go.” said Tonks, “If she goes to the dorms, then Ron won't be able to go up there.”

“I'll come too.” said Ginny. “You'll need the password.”

Ginny walked over and brushed Harry's hair aside, and then hurried after Tonks.

Sirius looked as they ran out the door and then looked down at Harry.
“Should we take him up to bed, or just leave him here?” asked Sirius.

“He'd be much warmer in his own bed.” said Flitwick.

“I'll levitate him up, you just get the doors...” said Rudolph.

But Hagrid stood up, walked over and picked Harry up into his arms and carried him out of the Great Hall.

Chapter End Notes

Thanks for reading, please review.
Sirius' Big Mistake

Chapter Notes

I don't own Harry Potter.

See the end of the chapter for more notes.

Hagrid carried the unconscious man up to the suite and placed him tenderly on the bed.

“Poor 'arry.” said Hagrid sniffling.

“You're telling us.” said Sirius uncorking the balm and lifting up Harry's shirt carefully.

“What're yeh doin'?” asked Hagrid.

“He needs this, every night.” said Sirius. “I've got this Hagrid, why don't you stay and have a nightcap with us.”

“Don't mind if I do.” said Hagrid with a smile, he reached over and patted Harry's head gently.

“Night 'arry.”

Hagrid walked out of the room and sat down on the large couch that was right in front of the fire.

Dumbledore waved his wand and enlarged one of the glasses to suit Hagrid's size. “What should we have...I'll have some mead myself...Hagrid...your usual?”

“Thanks Headmaster.” said Hagrid taking the large tankard of ale.

“Here Remus.” said Dumbledore levitating a wine glass full of an amber deep red liquid. “What will you four have?”

“We'll take what Remus has got.” said Rudolph sitting next to Leroy.

“I'll just have Butterbeer, I can't get enough of that stuff.” said Dr. Clark with a smile.

“I don't know...” said Mrs. McFinn.

“Anything you want, is yours.” said Dumbledore with a smile.

“Well, it's been so long...” said Mrs. McFinn.

“Yes?” said Dumbledore, his eyes twinkling.

“Flaming Cocktail?” asked Mrs. McFinn.

The group was quiet.

“Ah...a Burning Day? I haven't made one of those in a while.” said Dumbledore with a smile.

“You sure?” asked Dr. Clark with a surprised look.
“That's the only alcoholic drink I would drink.” said Mrs. McFinn with a blush as she took the flaming drink in her hand.

“You sure you can handle that drink?” asked Rudolph with a stunned look.

“I could drink James under the table, and he drinks mixers.” said Mrs. McFinn with a smile as she put out the flames and sipped the drink slowly.

“You are a many faceted young woman.” said Dumbledore with a bright smile.

“Teh Harry's health.” said Hagrid raising his tankard.

The rest of them raised their glasses and drank from them.

“What did I miss?” asked Sirius coming out of the room and joining them.

“Just a toast to Harry, what would you like?” asked Dumbledore.

“I'm not all that eager to drink, not since...ugh...that last hangover.” said Sirius.

“You were a happy drunk though.” said Dr. Clark with a snicker.

“But an unhappy wizard the next morning.” said Remus chuckling.

“So...what did you and Harry talk about that morning that he changed?” asked Sirius looking at Dumbledore. “You know, his hair and height.”

Dumbledore looked down. “Something...that only he has the right to divulge...I'm not at liberty to say.”

“I thought all this secret stuff was done and over with.” said Remus sourly. “But I guess...we don't have a choice.”

“I'm sorry, but this is Harry's life...and I'm amazed that he has allowed us to read this far.” said Dumbledore.

“Well, the guy said that we wouldn't be able to stop.” said Sirius. “Harry could...we just can't stop.”

“Harry could always call it to an end, he would be able to select those who hear it and who couldn't.” said Dumbledore.

“So why hasn't he?” asked Dr. Clark.

“I think...he wants to prove to those who doubt him, that he isn't as insane as everyone would believe, and it is working.” said Dumbledore.

“Tha's righ'. He's got a massive fan club now.” said Hagrid drinking from his tankard deeply. “Though...I think Hermione is getting' the short end of it again.”

“She has been a bit motherly hen happy.” said Dr. Clark. “I know that this year is important with the tests and all, but...Hogwarts is supposed to be fun and educational from what I hear...and Harry's going through a lot of stress....Sad thing is, now she's going through a bunch of stress.”

“We all should have been mindful of what the children were going through.” said Dumbledore looking down at his own drink.”I especially with Harry.”
“I should have given him that secret communication thing to him before the school year started,” said Sirius shaking his head.

“There is a lot of should have's being said,” said Leroy. “Poor Harry, he's going to really need that vacation.”

“I've got it all planned out. He's either going to be lounging on his balcony on one of deck chairs, beside the pool, in the back garden under the fruit trees, or just sleeping in his den.” said Sirius with a smile. “No fussing about...no stress...and no outside friends. Birthday is one thing, but the rest of the summer is going to stay at home.”

“I heard Molly isn't happy about that,” said Remus. “She wants Harry for a week for old times' sake.”

“Can't and won't promise that,” said Sirius. “If anything, it'll be at the end of the summer. After a long rest...and that's if I say it's okay.”

“Won't it be Harry's choice?” asked Leroy.

“Oh no it isn't, I'm his guardian and I'll say when he can go,” said Sirius.

“You'll have to make a week for the Potter Family, Mother insists on him staying at Paradise Castle for at least a week.” said Rudolph.

“Best not disappoint her, especially if you wish to keep custody of Harry.” said Dumbledore.

“She wouldn't take it to a higher authority...would she?” asked Sirius, his gaze went to Rudolph and Leroy worriedly.

“She'd take Harry in a heartbeat. She was taken with him, and how fair he was...she'd keep him till he was a little old man.” said Rudolph.

“You can't blame her, have you given Harry a good look? He's a handsome little devil.” said Leroy with a smile.

“Also, I could see my siblings coming to take him as well. If just to get their hands on the controlling force of the Potter family fortune.” said Rudolph.

“So I've got to keep on my toes around them...” said Sirius.

“I'm just messing with you, James and Lily left strict instructions that Harry should be left with you. James was a family patriarch...they wouldn't dare defy a patriarch order. Even if the head of the family is dead and gone.” said Rudolph.

Sirius chortled to himself. “Guess he's safe with me.”

“So long as you don't piss mummy off...” said Rudolph as he took a sip of his drink.

The next morning, Sirius helped Harry make it down to the Great Hall.

“Easy, we've got steps coming.” said Sirius taking Harry by the hand.

“I can see, it's just shadowy.” said Harry with a smirk. “It's just really dark on my end.”
“And that's why I'm here.” said Sirius easing Harry down the steps.

It was nine-twenty when they finally got down to the Great Hall. Harry could hear, people were muttering impatiently amongst themselves, but the moment Sirius opened the door the students went silent.

They all settled down in their chairs, plates of food on their laps and waited for the chapters to start.

“How you holding up, Sport?” asked Officer McFinn.

“Fine...I guess...” said Harry. “Can't wait for these things to be over and done with.”

“You've got other things on your mind...think you can sign your name on parchment?” asked Rudolph.

“Perhaps...why?” asked Harry.

“You didn't work on any of the paper work lately.” said Rudolph, taking a seat beside Harry and conjuring up a small writing desk and placed a quill in his hand, and a pyramid of scrolls on the desk.

“Joy.” muttered Harry.

Officer McFinn chuckled. He read the top of the page with a look over to one of the Weasley children.

Fourteenth chapter.

“Maybe I should go...” said Percy nervously.

“Oh no you don't, you're staying right here...and learn from your mistakes.” said Bill putting a hand down and keeping his younger brother in his place.

Percy sent Ron and Harry nervous glances.

“Do I want to know why you are mentioned?” asked Remus to Sirius.

“No you don't.” said Hermione and Ron shortly.

“What did I do?” asked Sirius confusedly.

Harry looked away.

First paragraph, first sentence.

“Has that changed? Are you up later than others?” asked Leroy.

“Now? Yes, before the books, yes...can you imagine how I'd be acting if I didn't sleep in?” said Harry with a snicker.

Hermione and Ron shuddred. “He'd be awful.” they said with a smile.
“Now you can catch up on your homework.” said Bill.
Hermione smirked over to Ron.
“Hey now, there's Quidditch practice too.” said Charlie.
“Good point. Flying for Harry is a necessity as well.” said Bill sincerely. “A way to vent before he bloody explodes.”
Hermione's smirk faded.

Several students and adults groaned.
“That's awful.” said Sirius giving Harry's arm a squeeze, but noticed that he shifted the hand away.
“What's wrong?” asked Sirius quietly. His godson was fine before they came down, what had happened to change that?
“Apparently nothing.” said Harry still not looking at Sirius.
The people in and around the bowl looked at the boy with concern.

Several people sighed, they loved his descriptions.

“That's one early start on homework.” said Terry.
“I wasn't doing homework. I was writing a letter to someone.” said Harry, his voice ended in a cold tone.
Even more people were looking at the bowl in confusion.
Officer McFinn chuckled.

“You don't speak with that big of word.” said Dr. Clark, trying to bring a smile to Harry's face.

Harry's mouth twitched in a smile.

Third paragraph, third sentence, first comma.

“I wonder how many elves I did set free?” asked Hermione horrorstruck.

“I'm not aware of any house-elf that is not still at Hogwarts.” said Dumbledore thoughtfully.

“But if...” said Hermione.

“Once again, Granger, you are not the owner of the House-elves. You cannot set them free.” sneered Snape.

End of third paragraph.

“How do you not know what to tell him? I'm stressed out to the max. I miss Hagrid. I'm behind on homework. My scar hurts. I miss you. Umbridge is a psychotic, satanic monster!” said Bill.

“And he didn't mention the important parts.” said Sirius. “Like the writing on his hand.”

“Didn't want you to think any less of me.” said Harry still looking away and shrugging off his godfather's touch.

“What's going on?” asked Remus.

“I have no idea.” said Sirius looking at Harry with worry.

Fourth paragraph, first sentence.

Ron and Hermione looked between each other and smiled.

End of fourth paragraph.

“Exactly!” said Ron.

“Hey, I tried, and I did a damn better job than you did, in my opinion.” said Harry coolly.

“Did you get enough sleep last night?” asked Sirius quietly.

“I got plenty of sleep.” said Harry.
“Not a bad letter...not the best I've seen, but not bad.” said Moody gruffly.

“He's right, I doubt anyone would know unless they knew who Snuffles was.” said Leroy.

“If we had told them, then they wouldn't keep asking.” said Emmeline.

“Some how, I don't think the person it happens to will find it all that amusing.” said McGonagall.

“How did Harry know?” whispered Dennis.

“What a quick conversation.” said George.
Dialogue set, first sentence.

“Good call...you don't need anything falling on your head.” said Sirius rubbing Harry's neck. Harry wrenched it out of his hands. Sirius looked shocked.

Harry was fine with him this morning, even shoving him off after he had picked Harry up in his arms. Hell, he even gave him a piggyback ride just for laughs as they ran down the corridor. Now he was acting so cold towards him.

End of dialogue set.

“Good for you, you need some fresh air and some free time to yourself.” said Mr. Weasley. “You'll only make your stress worse if you just continue working.”

“I quite agree.” said Madam Pomfrey.

Several other teachers nodded as well.

Hermione paled.

Eighth paragraph.

“You weren't doing anything wrong, what's got her tail in a knot?” said Fred.

Dialogue set.

“You are more than welcome to wander the halls once five thirty has come around.” said Dumbledore. “And Filch knows that.”
“She's so smart.” cooed a few girls.

“I love her.” said Lavender. “Too bad she doesn't really like anyone but Harry. She snapped at me when I told her I'd love to have her as a pet.”

“What a depressing morning.” said Ernie.

“I really needed that break.” said Harry.

“Saw what?” asked Dr. Clark worriedly.

“They won't hurt you, they'll specially trained.” said McGonagall.
“Third shot!” said Charlie with a wink.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Fourteenth paragraph.

“What did you get her?” asked another Ravenclaw student.

“What did you get her?” asked another Ravenclaw student.

“I made her a cake and made a card.” said Cho.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Several people laughed.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“All because of one stupid twat.” said Alicia.

“And I didn't help matters with shouting at him.” said Angelina embarrassingly.
“We’ve met.” said Cho and Ron.

“And I've told my parents just how foul she is, but they tell me I must be mistaken.” said Cho with a growl.

“About a third of the school shared the same opinion. The Ministry lovers however outweighed the truth seekers.” said a Terry.
“That'll garner some sympathy.” said Sirius nudging Harry slightly. Harry kept looking away.

End of seventeenth paragraph.

“Romantic scene, nixed.” said Ginny with a surprisingly sympathetic smile.

Eighteenth paragraph.

“She's taken after a few of the owls before, and they aren't the most forgiving of creatures.” said Dumbledore.

“Tell me about it.” said Harry.

Dialogue line.

“What the...Harry's never bought Dungbombs in a massive order...candy is one thing, but not prankster items.” said Dean.

“Exactly, I'm not my father.” said Harry coolly.

Sirius turned and looked at Harry.

“Besides, Harry and Ron get their pranking needs for free from us.” said George.

“Hey, you make me pay!” said Ron.

“We slip the money back to you little bro...but once we get a premises, then that's going to change.” said Fred.
“Umbridge, most likely to inspect your mail...though how would she know when you were sending a letter...” said Lionus.

“He has no right to take your mail, if he wanted to inspect it, he would have had to get me or the Headmaster.” said McGonagall. “And he knows it full well.”

“Wouldn't have done him any good, except come up with some bull reason to keep the letter for his files.” said George.
“No you didn't.” said Blaise.

“But at least she stood up for you.” said Remus.

Twenty-third paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Twenty-fourth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Then I'm one of hundreds of suspects.” said Harry.

Twenty-fifth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“So much for believing you.” said Sirius with a laugh, but fell silent when Harry didn't laugh along.
“Cause there is a very pretty girl right there.” said Sirius still trying to get his godson to laugh. But Harry continued to distance himself the best he could, but remaining in the bowl.

"Of course I don't.” said Cho looking stunned.

“I'm glad things worked out the way they did...is that wrong?” asked Ginny to her father.

“No one can blame you for feeling that way sweetie...” said her father with a smile. “You didn't pounce on him like some girls would have.” he added with a look over to Romilda Vane.

“Scared the crap out of us.” said Ron.
“Way to change the subject.” said Charlie.

“You'll do fine, Ron.” said Mr. Weasley.

Ron shifted. “Need more work.”

“Who doesn't?” said Tonks.

“A little fresh air won't kill them.” said Tonks.

“Right, not everyone is as studious as you are Hermione.” said Remus with a smile. “Though I'm betting that if Harry were to just hand in his first draft of homework, he'd have no problem keeping up.”

Harry smiled.

Sirius frowned, how come he was smiling at Remus' words and not his?

“It worked for a moment or two.” said Harry.
“Hey, it took forever for him to find the perfect girl that could put up with that long of a beard.” said Bill.

“What, what did I do?” asked Sirius.
“You were in the paper.” said Hermione.
“Oh, yeah.” said Sirius. “It was no big deal.”
“Oh yes it was!” said Mrs. Weasley.

“Way to go...” said a seventh year Slytherin with a chuckle.

“No, they had...” said Sirius with a smile.
“Shut up...” said Remus with a snarl.
“Oh no! They know Sirius is in England.” said a first year Hufflepuff.
“Draco's dad did know it was him.” said another first year.

“Oh you were right there!” said Fred.
“It only backfired that one time, if he went out on his own...at night...it should be fine right?” said a second year uncertainly.

“You need new clothes?...Harry talk to me...” said Sirius trying to coax his godson to look at him.

Harry still said nothing.

“Sweetie?” asked Mrs. McFinn.

“Yeah?” asked Harry looking at Mrs. McFinn directly.

Sirius looked down hurtfully.

“That's a strike of coincidence right there.” said Emmeline.
“That was a dark day.” said Moody. “He's a good man...He doesn't deserve that.”

“Not there!” hissed Moody.

“Seriously, that beeping is going to get on my nerves.” muttered Justin.

“It was just for going through a door.” said Madam Bones.

“There is really no crime for being there at that late hour, as long as you work there.” said Mr. Weasley. “There have been times when I've pulled all-nighters, and the Aurors especially are known to go a few days without real sleep.”

“We couldn't remember.” said Ron.
Dialogue set.

“Your memory is nuts.” said Charlie.

“It was only a week or so ago.” said Harry.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

The Order sat in silence.

“You know, with the Minister the way he is...or was...it would have fit.” said Tonks.

“But unfortunately, I found that Sturgis was trying to get in the door.” said Dumbledore. Though he says he didn't want to at the time.

Thirty-sixth paragraph.

“And Harry turns out to be right.” said Kingsley. “Which, doesn't say much, the outcome could have gone either way.”

Thirty-seventh paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“She forgot about Quidditch practice didn't she.” said Fred.

“Either that, or she just wanted to push them to do homework.” said George.

“Run out the door you two!” said the twins together.

“Go out and enjoy the nice day!” Lee.

Thirty-eighth paragraph.

“One day won't hurt, you still have that night and all day tomorrow.” said Remus.

Dialogue set, first sentence.

“She screamed at us.” said Ron with a shocked expression.
“It's the first week's homework Miss Granger, they won't fail their O.W.L.s and as long as they do a good job studying for the tests, and do their bests, the year's grades won't matter much.” said Flitwick “It certainly won't help them, but the first week's won't have lasting damage.”

Dialogue set, third sentence.

“Exactly, you need to have some fun...doesn't matter what it is, as long as there is no books involved.” said Katie.

End of dialogue set.

“That would be cheating, Mr. Weasley.” said McGonagall.

“Uh...copying just means she looks our papers over...” said Ron weakly.

Dialogue line.

“Quidditch isn't all that important.” said Hermione stiffly.

“It's my only outlet.” said Harry firmly. “So unless you're fond of me snapping at you and Ron all the time, then by all means, I'll give up flying. Which you've already experience.”

“You cook, that's another outlet.” said Hermione.

“Flying is three times as therapeutic.” said Dr. Nicodemus. “It's a physical exertion and gives you an adrenaline rush.”

Dialogue line.

“Just don't spend the entire day flying...and you should be fine.” said McGonagall. “Work on your homework till perhaps ten thirty, and get a good start the next day.”

Thirty-ninth paragraph.

Fortieth paragraph, first sentence.

“I prefer being a Seeker.” said Harry.
Fortieth paragraph, second sentence.

Ron smiled brightly.

“Guess he doesn't work well under pressure.” said Alicia.

“But he has to...a game is nothing but pressure.” said Katie.

Fortieth paragraph, third sentence, third comma.

“She wasn't quiet about it either.” said Ron.

“Oh after you both left for the Quidditch Pitch, she lost ten points from Gryffindor for that outburst.” said McGonagall. “And I wasn't the one that deducted the points.”

Snape took a deep breath and leaned back in his chair.

End of fortieth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“IT was just nerves, just like what you told Harry in his first year.” said Tonks.

Dialogue line.

Mrs. Weasley rounded on her son.

“You had better not...”

“I didn't mum, I swear.” said Fred.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

“That'll be easy.” said Sirius. “Unless they're Slytherins.”

Forty-first paragraph.
Snape turned and glared at his house, particularly his godson. “I told you to stay away from the pitch, that Gryffindors were having a practice.”

Draco cringed.

Dialogue line.

“This is going to be an annoying, part...isn't it.” said Hannah.

Forty-second paragraph.

Forty-second paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“That's right, keep up a positive attitude.” said Dr. Clark. “You guys beat them before...several times.”

Dialogue set.

Dialogue set.

“And her hair's any better?” muttered Padma.

Forty-third paragraph.

Forty-fourth paragraph.

“Ooh...well, you're just nervous.” said Tonks.

Forty-fifth paragraph.

“The Slytherins were doing enough.” said George.

“Also, Ron didn't need that.” said Fred.

Dialogue line.

Forty-sixth paragraph.
“I'm used to that, so it doesn't bother me.” said Harry. “Ron’s just not used to it.”

“No one should be used to it.” said Dr. Clark.

Forty-seventh paragraph.

People couldn't say anything to that.

“I've had five years of Quidditch Practice.” said Harry quickly. “It's his first time.”

Dialogue line.

Forty-eighth paragraph.

“Should have sent a Bludger off at them.” said Terry.

Forty-ninth paragraph.

“Ooh...” groaned the students.

“Not your day.” said Bill.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“The stress was getting to everyone.” said Alicia.

Fiftieth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“I'm never taking candy from you, ever...again...” said the three Chasers.

“It was an accident.” said Fred and George quickly.
“Some brotherly support...” said Bill.

“We didn't say it out loud...just to Harry...” said George.

“He has a way of fixing any problem we have...maybe he could work with Ron...” said Fred.

“What was stopping you two from working with him?” asked Mr. Weasley.

The twins looked down.

“I work better without those damned Slytherins chanting like that.” said Ron.

“Quidditch is supposed to be for those who are good sports...there are some that decide that being good sports and reasonably civilized people is just too much of a chore.” said Madam Hooch.

“That's a medical problem, there is nothing she can do about it, she should have gone to Madam Pomfrey.” said Dr. Clark.
“We should have made each of them a different color.” said George.

Dialogue set.
Fifty-fifth paragraph.
Dialogue line.
Dialogue line.
Fifty-sixth paragraph.
Dialogue line.
Dialogue line.

“Thanks guys...” said Katie.

“We...ah...yeah...” said the twins sheepishly.

Dialogue set.
Fifty-seventh paragraph.

“Somehow, I don't think their parents are any better.” said a first year Gryffindor.

Dialogue line.
Dialogue line.
Dialogue line.

“Aw...despite their fights, she has a soft spot for him.” said Nightstrike with a smile.

Dialogue line.
Dialogue line.

“Uh oh...” moaned the students. “Here we go again.”
“You put two and two together.” mumbled Rivers. “You weren't far off...but...”

“You're too loyal sometimes.” said Sirius ruffling Harry's hair. Harry swatted his hand away, harder than normal.

Sirius pulled his hand away quickly.

“What's wrong Harry?” asked Remus.

“Ask him.” said Harry pointing back to Sirius.

“He has no idea.” said Remus. Sirius shook his head in agreement.

“Then I can't help you.” said Harry stubbornly.

“It's been a while since Harry's agreed with you.” said Ginny.

“My homework was all done, full out, I just needed to dumb it down quite a bit.” said Harry.

“You enjoyed yesterday, so you had one day off.” said McGongall.
“You had a week of detention with Umbridge, Ron...doesn't have much of an excuse.” said Kingsley.

“Ron!” said Mrs. Weasley.

“I spent all day on it mum! Besides, she doesn't let us just copy her, she looks it over and sees that it's alright.” said Ron.

“And she looked like she was having fun.” said Harry.

“Still had a mountain left.” said Ron dramatically.

“It wasn't that bad.” said Hermione.

“At least she's willing to help you out.” said Sirius.

“And he's less than gracious.” said Remus.
“She's only trying to help.” said Mr. Weasley.

“What's Percy writing to you for?” asked Bill.

Ron sent a snarl over to his older brother, who cringed in his gaze.

“You owe me a drawing.” snapped Ron. “It took me forever to draw that picture.”

“It could have been an apology, or some words of encouragement.” said Hermione.

“Yeah, it was encouragement alright, it was egging me on to punching the prat.” said Ron.

“I only had your best...” said Percy defensively.

“Stuff it.” said Ron hotly.

End of sixty-fifth paragraph.
Salutations

Percy's letter, first paragraph.

Percy's Letter, second sentence, first comma.

“I still want to take the Fred and George route.” said Ron loyally. “At least they have fun!”

Percy's letter, end of second paragraph.

“I didn't decide anything!” said Ron.

Percy's letter, third paragraph.

“Wonder if he meant Fred and George, or Harry.” said Terry.

Percy's letter, fourth paragraph, first sentence.

“Of course, he's my best mate.” said Ron proudly. “I stick with my friends and family...something you don't seem to get.”

“Last year.” said Hermione.

“Yeah, well, that was all on me and I regret it.” said Ron.

Percy's letter, fourth paragraph, third sentence, second dash.

“What does that have to do with anything? And anyway, if it mattered, Dumbledore would have given Harry the badge, not him.” said Ernie.

Percy's letter, fourth paragraph, end of third sentence.

“You shared summers together! You were his Prefect and Head Boy! How do you not have a more accurate view of his behavior, other people don't know jack about him!” said Dr. Clark angrily.

Percy's letter, end of fourth paragraph.

“I'd rather burn the paper, unread.” said Ron stiffly.
Percy looked hurt.

"You're an idiot." said Ginny sharply.

“I don't...” began Percy.

“All you think of progression, money, and what others think of you!” snapped Ginny. “Don't you realize that some people don't give a damn what others think and just want to live their lives?”

Percy stammered.

“I thought he came out well...it showed me that the Minister was a bit too gun-ho about railroading the boy.” said Madam Bones.

“Apparently not a majority of them.” said a seventh year Slytherin.

“And he was the top of his class?” said Remus shaking his head.

“Never said that...he just handled authority a lot better than some of the others...and he sent me constant reasons that he should be Head Boy.” said McGonagall. “His grades were very good, but there was a few with better grades.”

“Then why give him the Head Boy title?” asked Bill.

“Probably to just shut him up.” muttered Charlie.

“Percy!” said Mrs. Weasley. “I never thought you would be such a liar!”

Percy opened and closed his mouth repeatedly.
Percy cringed in the wake of the angry glares sent his way.

“I’d rather dance with an acromantula than talk to that toad.” said Ron.

“Loyalty should be with family first.” said Harry. “Then to friends, country, school...the Ministry is far down at the list, if it's even on the list.”

“And the students.” said Madam Hooch.

“Doubtful.” said Dr. Nicodemus.

“I'm not.” said Ron.

“Me neither.” said Ginny.

“Us as well.” said the twins.

Percy was now wiping his eyes on his handkerchief.

“Beats rubbing elbows with a child abuser and attempted child-killer.” said Tempest stomping her hoof.
“If Aunt Muriel hears this...she'll never let you off paying the debt.” said Mr. Weasley breathing out.

“One moment, I've got a letter to write.” said Fred.

“So do I.” said George.

“You two sit down.” said Mrs. Weasley.

“I need some air.” said Percy, walking swiftly towards the door and then out of it.

“I...” said Mrs. Weasley.

“No sweetie, I'll go...he and I need to have a serious talk.” said Mr. Weasley as he followed his son out of the Great Hall.

“I'm coming too...I want some words as well.” said Bill.

“I'm not apologizing to that twit.” said Fred quietly.

“How come you never told us about this letter?” asked Ginny.

“Didn't want you to get this stressed out.” said Ron.

“The gigantic prat.” said George.

“Too bad that Percy isn't here to hear that.” said Charlie.
Dialogue set.

“Percy should have listened to that.” a third year Ravenclaw.

Dialogue line.

Sixty-seventh paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Sixty-seventh paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“I was just giving them some help!” said Hermione weakly.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Sixty-seventh paragraph.

Dialogue line.

They do their work...they just...well...Ron just needs a little extra help.” said Hermione.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Sixty-eighth paragraph, second sentence

“We were right there, answering questions she put to us.” said Ron.

End of sixty-eighth paragraph.

“Sixty-ninth paragraph, first sentence.

“Betrayal hurts.” said Luna simply.
End of sixty-ninth paragraph.

“It was hard to believe.” said Harry.

Seventieth paragraph, first sentence, first comma.

“Sure isn't showing me any sympathy now.” muttered Sirius.

“You don't deserve it.” said Harry muttering back.

End of seventieth paragraph.

“You listening to that?” said Sirius.

“Every word...make sure you're listening.” said Harry.

Seventy-first paragraph.

“You didn't...” said Remus.

“Ah...well...I...” said Sirius, looking sheepish.

“Idiot.” said Snape.

Dialogue line.

“Hey, I switched it up a little bit, made it sound like my own words.” said Ron quickly.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, first sentence.

Several students laughed.

“Nice.” said Lee.
“That was exhaustion...not mishearing.” said Harry.

End of dialogue set.

Seventy-second paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Thought he snapped or something.” said Ron.

Dialogue line.

Seventy-third paragraph.

“That's too big of a risk.” said Moody darkly.

“I just needed to see him.” said Sirius, a vainly hopeful smile on his face. But it slid off when Harry ignored him.

Dialogue line.

Seventy-fourth paragraph.

SMACK!

Remus rapped Sirius fiercely on the back of the head.

“You're dumber than a box of Gobstones...Umbridge and the Minister would love to catch you.” said Remus sharply.

“I know...but...” said Sirius rubbing his scalp.
“Turns out they needed to worry...” said Kingsley looking sharply at the once fugitive man.

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Seventy-fifth paragraph.

“He didn't tell us about any letter.” said Ron.

Dialogue line.

“Not your business who he writes to now is it?” muttered Dr. Nicodemus.

“You really don't like her do you?” asked Lionus.

“Asks too many questions and doesn't have enough imagination to fill a potion phial.” said Dr. Nicodemus. “Every time she talks to me, she keeps almost demanding proof of what I say.”

Dialogue set.

Dialogue set, first sentence.

“I even handed it to Tonks...it took her a while to get it.” said Sirius with a smile.

“That proves nothing.” said Moody.

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Is that why you're upset?” asked Sirius to Harry. “That I dismissed your pain? I didn't mean to! Harry... I was just...”

“That's not why.” said Harry, Ron and Hermione.

Dialogue set
“Unfortunately.” said Dumbledore.

“Being a Death Eater would be a good quality for her.” said Lionus.

“True, there is a lot of gray areas, and some get darker than others.” said Chief Hawkeye.

“I hate her guts.” said Remus.

“Strangely enough...he didn't hate her all the way down.” said Fred.

“There was still a basement to his hate.” said George.

“Racist...” muttered Tempest and Nightstrike.
“Bet Hermione didn't like that.” said Ernie.

Seventy-seventh paragraph.

“Surprise...” said Hannah.

Dialogue set.

“I'll never be fond of that little...” snarled Sirius.

“Well, if he's going to come to Nights' Rest...” said Dr. Clark.

“I never said he...” said Sirius quickly.

“Maybe Harry should take care of him...” said Dr. Clark. “Or Holly...she could get him to mellow out.”

“He's about as blood racist as the Malfoys.” said Sirius.

“It's worth a shot.” said Dr. Clark with a shrug.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

The students were stunned.

“He doesn't want what?” asked a seventh year Gryffindor.

“That's the dumbest thing I've ever heard.” said another Gryffindor.

Dialogue line.

Several students looked at each other and grinned.

Dialogue set.
“He could take on the Ministry by himself, he doesn't need students to help him.” said Flitwick.

Seventy-eighth paragraph.

“Some stuff.” said Ron quickly. “But others...they make sense.”

Hermione rolled her eyes.

Dialogue line.

“So they're penalizing the students for their own insecurities.” said Harry thoughtfully.

“Oh...Fudge...you're going down in history...and not the way you wanted. I'm thinking...'Enemy to the Next Generation'...has a nice ring to it.” said Cheif Hawkeye with a smirk.

Fudge paled.

Dialogue set.

“He has tried to frame me quite a few times...” said Dumbledore with a faint smile.

Seventy-ninth paragraph.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue set.

“Poor Sirius.” said Ginny.

“Oh wait for it. Don't be so sympathetic yet.” said Harry.

Eightieth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

“Way to instill confidence.” said Remus.
“I was fine.” said Hagrid.

“You didn't look fine when you got back.” said Harry.

Another resounding smack came from the back of Sirius' head.

“I'm thinking that they have an idea.” said Bill.

“Is this why...” said Sirius.

“You'll know.” said Harry.

“Well, I think...” began Sirius.

“Sirius...shut up.” said Remus.

“He'd love to get together with you...but it's just too risky...he's concerned for your safety.” said Mrs. McFinn.

“And I'm concerned about him.” said Sirius.
Eighty-second paragraph.

Dialogue line.

The hall went dead.

Sirius' face was white, and Remus' was red with rage.

“You...said...what?” hissed Remus.

“I...I...” said Sirius weakly.

“I'll just finish, shall I?” said Officer McFinn.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

“You...you...” muttered Mrs. Weasley.

End of chapter.

“I need to breathe...” said Harry standing up and taking the long abandoned cane and walked out of the Great Hall.

Chapter End Notes

Thanks for reading, please review!
Sirius watched as Harry stormed out of the Great Hall with helpless eyes. Beside him, Remus, looked angrier than he ever had so far.

“You didn’t say that.” said Remus angrily.

“Hey, you said and did some not all that great stuff too!” said Sirius hotly.

“But to tell him that! You make it sound like you can’t tell him apart from James.” said Remus.

“I…” said Sirius.

“He was so upset for days after you said that.” said Ron as he glared at the animagus. “After what you said, he could hardly sleep or eat.”

Sirius blanched.

“We had to almost force him to take food.” said Hermione.

“And even then, he didn't keep it in his stomach for long.” said Ron.

“That was the worst few days…” said Hermione her eyes bright with tears. “I wanted to send you howler after howler.”

Sirius’ eyes were also moist with unshed tears. He turned towards the door and then ran after his godson.

I didn't know...he never said anything...he was fine up to this point. Did he just remember? Or was he holding this anger towards me all the time, laying in wait...for the books to catch up...to show me what it was like on his end? This happened not too long ago...if he was holding all the anger, he wouldn't....he wouldn't be cuddling up to me...he'd avoid me like the plague.

Sirius stood in the Entrance hall, his nose twitching, hoping to pick up his godson's scent. The trail was hot, he could smell the ever present smell of ginger and cinnamon...it was leading outside. It seemed to be the place to go for him, Ron and Hermione.

He hurried out of the castle and looked around, he couldn't see Harry anywhere, that was...until he saw a foot dangle out of nearby tree. He made a beeline for it and tugged it slightly.

“Tag...you're it...” said Sirius looking up at the stern face of his godson.

But Harry didn't look down. He kept his sunglass covered gaze fixed firmly on the lake.

“I...I'm sorry...I didn't know...” said Sirius.

“How did you think that would not hurt me?” said Harry with a cold voice.

Sirius cringed.

“Out of everything you could have said, anything, even the new stuff you're learning...that had to be the most hateful thing I've heard you say....bringing my dad into this...”

“I...I'm sorry.” repeated Sirius looking down at the fading grass. “I just...it's that house...”

“That's just an excuse...I'm not a building...” said Harry. “I know what it's like being stuck in a house that was nothing more than horrifying memories. I wasn't always allowed to leave...I was stuck inside as well. But the people that caused the memories at the house your in are gone...you have a brand new start with the house and you're not trying to make the best of it.”
“What would you do with the Dursley house?” said Sirius, rather accusingly.

Harry continued to peer ahead, then a slight smile came to his face. “Personally, I'd preserve it. I'd leave it the way it is. And then, show it to everyone I knew, so they would learn what not to do as parents, and guardians. Then they would tell their other friends...and the tale would spread. The lessons they tried to teach me, I'll teach the world...what is right, what is wrong...the thin line of acceptable parenting...isn't so thin after all.”

Sirius looked up at Harry.

“You're showing everyone and the Order what the house was like, but they couldn't fathom it. But everyone here, they understand...well, part of it. The students wanted you out, they wanted to let you be free...they'll never act the way your parents did. And they'll never be the Dursleys...the lesson even touched Malfoy of all people.” said Harry. “But all they see in your house is that it's a damned dark and gloomy place. They don't know what your parents were like, they didn't hear that part.”

He finally turned to look at Sirius.

“Perserving the house isn't the best situation for you, what you should do, is liquidate everything in the house, not using Mundungus, do something else with it, and doused the place in color and light. Having it all dark and gloomy is only hurting you.” said Harry.

“You sound like Molly.” said Sirius with a sneer.

“She just wants the place cleaned, you want it gutted. Maybe this summer you should go back...wait for it...and take all of us with you and we can help you pitch the crap you don't want.” said Harry.

“And Kreacher?” said Sirius with a smirk. “He's going to fight me all the way.”

“Bring him to Night's Rest, along with Dobby.” said Harry, “Now...I can tell that you're sorry and you've said it a few times now.” said Harry leaping out of the tree and landing nimbly beside the man.
“Now, let's get going.” said Harry walking towards the doors.

Sirius stared at the man's back, the tips of his white hair turning black slowly, but Sirius noticed something... he could see it...the hair that was turning black, was turning gray...

He was losing strength. Somehow...something was sapping his strength and he wasn't getting the rest he needed...

_He can't...he isn't...is he dying again?_

Harry walked back into the Great Hall, with Sirius on his heels, Sirius was looking down at the strands of hair that were fading.

“Did you apologize?” asked Leroy.

“He did...” said Harry easing into the chair.

“Hang on...” said Sirius.

Sirius pulled Harry back to his feet and placed more cushions behind him. “There you are...”

“Making me more comfortable won't get you out of the proverbial doghouse.” said Harry.

“It's not for making up that I'm doing it.” said Sirius in a whisper directly in Harry's ear. “Just when were you going to tell anyone that you were getting sick again?”

“I'm fine.” said Harry.

Sirius took a hold Harry's hair and showed him the graying ends. “This...is not fine...”
Harry looked at the hair, and then to Sirius. “You know I can't see all that well right? But I'm resting, there's nothing more I can do.”

Sirius looked at Harry accusingly, but sighed and pushed Harry down on the pillows. He took a seat on the floor and grasped Harry's hand.

“What are you doing Padfoot?” asked Remus.

“Giving Harry more room to rest.” said Sirius.

Officer McFinn smiled as he shook his head. He picked the book back up and read aloud.

“Fifteenth chapter.”

“That's a sick name to give someone at a school.” said Nightstrike.

“What do you mean?” asked Percy.

“Spanish Inquisition.” said Nightstrike.

First paragraph.

Article title.

“And people thought that Dumbledore was the one asking for all the trouble. You never heard Dumbledore talking smack about anyone...” said Emmeline.

“Humans can be idiotic.” said Tempest shaking her head.

Dialogue line.

“It means dark times ahead of us.” said Alicia.
“Which is completely wrong...you don't want people to just become little governmental lackeys right out of diapers.” said Rivers.

“Name five concerned parents that aren't past Death Eaters.” said Tonks.

Percy opened his mouth, but closed it.

“Really...and you were Head Boy...” said Tonks shaking her head.

“What improvements?” said Angelina. “What sort of nimrod would consider anything that they came up would be an improvement.”

“I...” said Percy. “Education is important and with...”

“Just shut up, Perce...you can't win this...” said Fred.

“Not that you have a leg to stand on.” said George.

“Cause really, there was nothing beneficial about those Decrees.” said the twins together. “They were just psychotic bullcrap.”

“The only one that seemed to like her was Filch.” said Hermione.

“So you didn't know?” said Lionus with a sneer.
“I...I didn't know!” said Fudge.

“Of course you didn't.” Chief Hawkeye.

“And who considered it a success? About eighty percent of the school was failing that class.” said Hermione.

Article, second paragraph.

Article, third paragraph, first sentence.

“Hogwarts has always had high standards of learning for the students. Especially the four main classes. You want slacking classes, you're talking about Spellings, they can hardly keep up to basic standards.” said Rivers.

“Where is Spellings?” asked Hermione

“It's in Canada...there is a bigger school in Canada, Spellings is just a small time school that doesn't cost much to attend.” said Rivers. “Dragonrest is the bigger school, that school is considered one of the top seven schools in the world.”

Article, third paragraph, second sentence.

“She doesn't know how to teach, how can she tell if they're doing a good job or not.” said Charlie.

End of article third paragraph.

“They're the only ones delighted, if the students had a choice...they'd feed her to Octi.” said Colin.

Article fourth paragraph.

“What parent is happy?” Remus.

“Wait for it.” said Ron.

“Didn't you read the paper?” asked Harry.

“Sirius hides it every time Umbridge is mentioned.” said Remus.

“I hate the rant he goes through, it doesn't change and he gets pissy for the rest of the day.” said Sirius.
“Oh my god...” said Madam Bones.

“It's ludicrous, not that we've seen all that he's done.” said Kingsley.

“Never taught.” said Moody once again.

“Perhaps I will retire soon...I don't quite remember the last day I had off.” said Dumbledore thoughtfully.

“Wait till after You-Know-Who is defeated please, I want the kids protected.” said Rivers.

“Oh...we talked about this...” said Leroy. “I was pissed. Anyone affiliated with that story was sacked and black listed in journalism.”

“And to think, adults are supposed to work to better our lives...not take care of their own petty needs.” said Harry thoughtfully as he looked up. “Then when we grow up, it's our turn to make our children's lives better. Some of these adults are slacking.”

Dialogue line.

“It still makes me sick to my stomach every time I hear that.” said Dr. Clark.

Fourth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“"It was good.” said Ron.

Dialogue line.

“Can't see why she'd bother with inspecting Binns. He so straight forward and standard friendly that he's completely boring. Also, she wouldn't be able to ask him any questions and half the class would be unconscious.” Sirius.

Fifth paragraph, first sentence, third comma.

“She's tight with Malfoy and no doubt he gave Snape a passing grade before they even started.” said Hannah.

End of fifth paragraph.

“Were you aiming for a D?” asked Sirius.

“I was aiming for an A...but I guess that I was too tired to even get it to where I wanted it.” said Harry.

“Or he was just being a complete bastard and slamming your work for the hell of it.” said Sirius.

Dialogue set.

“Not a bad idea to do that.” said Remus honestly.
Sixth paragraph.

Dialogue set.

Sirius gave Harry's hand a squeeze.

“I can just feel the angst ripping through the boys' body, and just from the book.” said Dr. Nicodemus.

Seventh paragraph.

Eighth paragraph, first sentence, first semi-colon.

“Mind your own business 'mione.” said Ginny with a giggle.

End of eighth paragraph.

Ninth paragraph, first sentence.

“How come you didn't go all out?” asked Rudolph.

“I was too tired to even try.” said Harry.

Several adults glared at the Minister and empty chair that Umbridge had once occupied.

End of ninth paragraph.

“I can't wait till summer...I just want to sleep...” said Harry.

The other people that were in the bowl vacated to other chairs as Harry turned over, away from everyone's pitying looks and awe-filled gazes and closed his eyes. Sirius turned around and threw the phoenix quilt up to Harry and tucked him in.

Dumbledore looked over to Harry with a smile, but then stopped when he saw the ends of Harry's hair, he reached over and brought it to his eyes and then looked at the back of Harry's head, his face slack.

Dr. Nicodemus looked over at the boy with a confused look.

Dialogue set.

Tenth paragraph, first sentence, second comma.
“Hermione….really?” said Fred.

“Even we knew, and we weren't there, that it didn't go well.” said George.

End of tenth paragraph.

“I'm getting a headache...” said Bill.

“It's like dealing with pre-Ministry Percy.” said Charlie quietly.

Eleventh paragraph.

Dialogue set.

Twelfth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Take the hint Granger, they don't care.” said Snape with a groan. He was getting tired of the constant chatter about grades.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dr. Clark and Mrs. McFinn stifled their laughter as the rest of the students laughed loudly.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Wow, how did Harry get a worse grade than Ron?” asked Lee.

“That's what I'm saying, Snape's being a bastard again.”

“Sirius...” said Dumbledore.
Thirteenth paragraph.
Dialogue line.
Dialogue set.
Professor Sprout nodded, “I'm impressed that you show up.”

Fourteenth paragraph.
Dialogue line.
“Hey, Weasleys are known for stuffing their face in the middle of a conversation.” said Fred.

Dialogue line.
Dialogue line.
Dialogue line.
Dialogue line.
“How did she not know what the grades were before this?” asked Mrs. McFinn curiously. “Surely the grading doesn't change as the years progress.”

“How most students don't get below an A before O.W.L year.” said Dumbledore. “It's quite unlikely that they even see a P or a D.”

Fifteenth paragraph.
“You just need more sleep, the intellect is there, you just need to give your body a rest.” said Sirius nudging Harry's foot.

Dialogue line.
Dialogue line.
Dialogue line.
“Who in there right mind would inspect Flitwick?” said Tonks.

“She's not in her right mind, that's the point.” said Remus.
“Well, that's not too overly bad, she still doesn't have the brains to fit a mustard seed though.” said Rivers. “Umbridge, not you.” he added looking at Alicia quickly.

“Even gives them extra tutoring when they need it.” said Katie.

McGonagall covered her mouth as she snickered into her hand.

“She would be almost unlivable if she heard Harry had gotten a detention again.” whispered Fred.

“Poor them.” said Leroy.

“How does she not notice that no one likes her?” asked a seventh year Ravenclaw.

“Oh she knows, she just doesn't care.” said Hermione.
“It was a bit out of the ordinary for that class...” said Parvati.

“Well...if she was a real teaching inspector, she'd be doing things correctly...” said Rivers.

“Being inspected can unnerve almost anyone.” said Tonks.

“You're the one to talk, you jolt over the simplest things.” said Sirius with a snicker.

“Let them work, ask questions later.” said Mrs. Weasley.

“That's a real dream alright.” muttered Bill with a smirk.

“I'm thinking 'revenge'." said Remus with a smirk.
Professor Snape frowned.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

“You pick, he said he just come up with it on the spur of the moment.” said Terry.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

“Twenty-third paragraph.”

Dialogue line.

“This won't go well.” said Ernie.

Dialogue line.

Twenty-fourth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“So...she must have some born talent, other than the possible fluke in Harry's third year.” muttered a first year Hufflepuff.

Dialogue line.

Twenty-fifth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Gifts can show up further down the line.” said Dumbledore.
“That's a stupid question to ask a Seer, they can't predict on cue.” said Lavender. “It'll happen when it happens.”

Twenty-seventh paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“She can't...even if she was the genuine article and not a part time Seer.” said Lee also clearly.

Twenty-eighth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“She's baiting her.” said Speckerton with a firm whisper.

Dialogue set.

“ Well, she nailed it...on accident...” said Nightstrike with a smirk.

Twenty-ninth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Thirtieth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Well, isn't that nice, she warns you...and you don't even bat an eye.” said Fred.

“Then again, she's known for doing that...” said George.

“Still, a blink would suffice.” said Fred.

Thirty-first paragraph, second sentence, first dash.

“Wow.” said a few students in amazement.
“Never mind.” said the same students.

“Could have been worse, she could have went last.” said Bill.

“There was only about five that thought it would be different that day.” said Ron.

“Is that all you do in the class?” asked Tonks.

“She gives the occasional test, which most people fail.” said Ron.

“And Harry's going to yell again...” said Sirius.

“And he's going to get another detention.” said Remus with a disgusted look at Harry's scarred hand.
“She's been a teacher for long enough to figure that Hermione would have memorized the entire course book by that point.” said Cho. “And yet it doesn't dawn on her.”

“He never was someone who partook in reality.” said Flitwick shaking his head.

“The teachers raised their brows.

“Is she absolutely mad?” said Professor Sprout.

“What does she think teaching means?” said Flitwick.

“And...she's going to bait Harry again.” said Alicia.

Granger didn't interrupt class, she had her hand raised.” said a Slytherin seventh year.
“Ministry sheep...that's all they want.” said Tempest.

“Except for the fact that he was the Dark Lord in disguise...sure...he fits you perfectly.” said Dean.

“The whole school knew that, well, anyone who was fifth year and up sure.” said Sirius.

“Sadistic bitch...” muttered McGonagall harshly.

“I'm amazed he wasn't bleeding out.” said Bill.

“It was a near thing...” said Dr. Nicodemus. “He was down a bit.”

Sirius looked to his godson, could that be why he was unwell, was he lacking on blood?

“Wasn't his fault! It's Umbridge's.” said Ginny.
“She won't like that one bit.” said Fred.

Several Gryffindors groaned. “Aww...nuts...”

“I didn't know about the Blood Quill.” said McGonagall swiftly.

“I didn't know what he was going through either!” said Angelina quickly.

“She just wanted Harry to control his temper.” said Hermione.

“It's easy to say that of someone else, it's much harder when it comes to yourself.” said Luna.
“He didn't even look at her.” said Ron.

“It was really good.” said Dean.

“I can't wait.” said Sirius with a smirk.

“Wish we could have gotten away with ignoring her.” said quite a few students.

“Knew it.” said Sirius looking sternly over to Snape, who sneered back.

“I thought it was funny.” said Dean.

“Then you need comedy lessons from the Weasley twins.” said McGonagall.
Several students snickered into their hands.

“Ooh, she won't like that.” said Remus with a chuckle.

“It was beautiful.” said Seamus.

“Do as I say, not as I do, Mr. Potter.” said McGonagall with the hint of a smile.

“Seems like she's scared to death of McGonagall.” said Professor Flitwick with a giggle.

“She'd be foolish not too.” said Sprout.

“It's a great start.” said Mr. Weasley proudly.
“She was the brightest student of her year, perfect teaching material.” said Dumbledore proudly.

“And Umbridge?” asked Draco with a sneer.

“She would have been better as Dragon fodder.” said Charlie quickly before any teacher could speak.

“Nice to know that McGonagall's got a soft spot for Harry.” said Bill.

“At least she wasn't harassing Hagrid.” said Fred.

“I hope she doesn't try and help Umbridge with her case against Hagrid.” said Fred.

“No teacher, well very few teachers...” said Flitwick with a sideways glance at Snape. “would speak ill of Hagrid.”

Draco shuffled his feet.

“Mind you're own damn business, woman.” said Moody.
“Till the Slytherins would be questioned about Hagrid, then that'll change.” said Neville.

“Not what she wanted to hear, I'll bet.” said Terry.

“It probably read 'Get rid of her'” said Bill.

“She's hoping that Hagrid does come back, so she can sack him.” said Ron.

“Hmm seems that Hagrid has done a good job...” said Chief Hawkeye with a smirk. “Most Care of Magical Creatures classes are scrambling to catch up.”

“How do you know?” asked Hermione.

“I just do, young lady.” said Chief Hawkeye.

“What does she expect with that class, regardless who teaches it?” said McGonagall sourly.
“It was a gash...not a slash...” said Madam Pomfrey.

“I'll show you slash if you're confused.” said Moody raising his pantleg to show his prosthetic foot.

“She was at the hearin'....” said Hagrid confusedly.

“I know what the woman is doing is completely horrific and he should try and keep his temper, but I've got to say...I'm so proud of him.” said Officer McFinn.

“Why do you say that?” asked Mrs. Weasley.

“He's taking the torture and pressing on, defying her every step of the way. He's not bowing down to anyone.” said Officer McFinn with a smirk.

Several people looked over to Harry in awe.

“And now I'm going to haunt her forever.” said Officer McFinn.

“Good girl.” said Madam Pomfrey.
“We have giant vats of stuff like that.” said Nightstrike. “It feels wonderful when you go for a swim in it.”

“That's nasty...” said Ron.

“You'd think, but when you're covered with bruises, cuts and lacerations...god...it feels wonderful, especially when it heated.” said Nightstrike rolling his shoulders and flexing muscles, glancing over to Emmeline.

“Two seconds after McGonagall starts screaming at her.” said Lee.

“Strangulation?” said Lee.

“Drowning?” said Fred.

“Beheading?” said George.

“Disembowelment?” snarled Remus.

“Too kind.” said the twins.
“They got a point, they're going to fail their O.W.L.s and the rest of the school is going to fail as well.” said one of the Unspeakables.

With the Minister removed from office, and Umbridge in custody, they had no reason to stick around anymore, Speckerton would be in charge and would take care of the book...except...they found the boy's life incredibly exciting. They wanted to know how the books ended.

“Fudge can't do anything now.” said George nastily.

“I fear this won't end well...” said Firenze thoughtfully.

“You can only do so much with books.” said Professor Sprout. “That's what teachers are for.”

“And it's already looking like a magical school year.” said Tonks.

“For Hermione, there isn't.” said Ginny with a laugh.
“Run.” said Sirius with a twitching smile.

End of dialogue set.

“Hey, Harry was teaching you.” said Colin.

“Yeah, well, he wasn't exactly training me for fighting or anything like that.” said Ron. “It was pretty much what practicals in class would have been in our fifth year.”

“But Lupin couldn't come to the school...” said a first year Hufflepuff.

The first year smiled brightly.

“It's nice of him to think of me.” said Remus with a fond smile.

“What?” said Dennis.

“Did you tell her about Harry teaching you?” asked a first year Gryffindor.

“No, he didn't tell me about anything.” said Hermione.
“They're both ganging up on him.” said Sirius with a laugh.

“He figured I wouldn't turn him in like that.” said Ron.

“I thought Hermione was the best in everything.” said Neville.

“When it comes to practicals in Defense Against the Dark Arts, Harry was naturally the best, he couldn't dumb it down that far.” said Remus with a smirk.

“He's either playing it really dumb, or he's exhausted.” said Dr. Clark.

“He had Dumbledore coming swiftly behind him.” said Snape with a drawl.
“Dumbledore once again sent the bird and the sorting hat.” said Snape once more.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Dumbledore's infuriating interference with the Time-Turner.” said Snape.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Dumbledore had nothing to do with that.” said Sirius proudly.

Dialogue set, second sentence.

“That'll piss him off.” said Fred.

End of dialogue set.

“He did too..he's lying right there.” said Ron. “Well, he had plans, they didn't always get used, but he had plans.”

Sixty-sixth paragraph.

“It's cause they're smiling and you're not in a good mood.” said Mrs. McFinn reaching over and running her fingers through his messy locks.

Dialogue set.

“He's far too modest…” said Bathilda Bagshot.

“I think he's still trying to keep up the farce of him being a mediocre student.” said Dumbledore.

Sixty-seventh paragraph.
“We pushed him too far.” said Hermione.

Dialogue set, third sentence.
The Aurors and Rangers smiled and shook their heads.

Dialogue set, fourth sentence, fourth dash, first comma.
“I want him to be a teacher...” said Rivers eagerly.

End of dialogue set.
Mrs. Diggory and Mr. Diggory sobbed quietly.

Dialogue line.
Sixty-eighth paragraph.
“This was not going as planned.” said Hannah.

Dialogue set.
Sixty-ninth paragraph, first sentence.
“Wonder why?” said Dr. Clark looking down at Harry.

End of sixty-ninth paragraph.
“That'll teach you.” said George.

Dialogue line.
Seventieth paragraph.
“You're agreeing to teach a bunch of snot nosed brats.” said Fred.
“Though, I'm thinking he was just agreeing to teach the two of them.” said George.

“Then you're getting scammed big time.” said Fred.

Seventy-first paragraph.
Dialogue line.
Seventy-second paragraph.
Dialogue line.

“Can't you sleep without your Harry bear?” said Lee in a cutesy voice.

“No, he can't sleep without his Ronnie bear.” said Ron with a smirk.

“Speaking of which, I should really toss my Ronnie bear in the wash.” said Harry.

Dialogue line.
Seventy-third paragraph.
Dialogue line.

“That is the downside.” said Flitwick.

End of chapter.

“No wonder he's sleeping all the time.” said Lee looking at the sleeping teen. “He's been sleep deprived.”

Chapter End Notes

Thanks for reading, please review
The Other Pub of Hogsmede

Chapter Notes

I don't own Harry Potter.

See the end of the chapter for more notes

First paragraph, first sentence.

“After him blowing up like that, I didn't want to bring it up, that and I wanted to plan out the rest of it, where to meet and what other people might be interested.” said Hermione.

“So you don't get his input, if he was going to be the instructor for this?” said Rivers.

“I wasn't going to tell him what to teach us, just the gathering where we were going to meet up with the rest of the students that wanted to learn.” said Hermione.

“So...you were just getting the class together...that's a bit better than setting up a curriculum for him.” said Rivers.

“Chariot race...” mumbled Harry in his sleep.

“What the hell does that have to do with anything?” said Sirius.

“I have no idea.” said Remus.

Dumbledore sat in thought, what was the boy thinking of?*

First paragraph, second sentence, first semi-colon.

“Not for many, many years.” said Dr. Nicodemus.

First paragraph, second sentence, second semi-colon, first comma.

“Yeah, cause who wants to look at those big bright eyes...” said Fred.

“And all that poofy little fur.” said George.

“Vanish them all I say.” said the twins together.

End of first paragraph.

Dialogue line.
“With You-Know-Who after him, he can't help but think about them all the time.” said Dean.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, first sentence, first semi-colon.

“Don't get me involved in this!” said Ron.

Dialogue set, first sentence, first semi-colon, second dash.

“That's better.” said Bill with a laugh.

End of dialogue set.

Second paragraph.

“Just let it out boy.” said Moody.

Third paragraph.

Rivers smiled brightly.

“Don't get your hopes up too high.” said Moody, Madam Bones, and the Rangers.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Madam Pince would have skinned him alive if he had shouted.” said Hannah with a giggle.

Fourth paragraph.

Dialogue line.
“They did...but some of it wasn't luck.” said Tonks. “And you even said that you had it all planned out differently if something were to go wrong.”

Harry simply slept on.

Dialogue set.

“Don't bring him up in front of Ron.” groaned Charlie.

Fifth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Sixth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Impressive as what Krum said, don't ever mention him to Ron again.” said Bill.

“You'd think that she'd of known that since the ball.” said Angelina.

Hermione blushed and looked down at her feet.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Seventh paragraph.

“If you shut up about Krum in front of Ron, sure.” said Fred.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, first sentence.

“That's when I know she's going to change the plan on me.” said Harry groggily.

“Granger, try to keep consistent. You'll find yourself to be a very untrustworthy friend if you change course like that.” said Snape in a bored tone.

Dialogue set, second sentence.
“Don’t try and trick him then.” said Nightstrike.

Dialogue set, fourth sentence, second dash.

“People who live in glass houses...” said a seventh year Slytherin.

End of dialogue set.

“It would be easier on someone who is young and already stressing out.” said Rivers shortly.
“Though I’d like to see how he would handle teaching, I think it would be fair for him to get a bit of rest. You want to learn, teach yourselves, that's what he did.”

Eighth paragraph.

Dialogue set, first sentence.

“They know what he's been saying, if they need to hear it again, they're not worth talking to.” said Charlie hotly.
“I think we stopping after this chapter would be a fine idea, some of us are getting a mite...testy.” said Dumbledore with a smile.

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

“Cause stupid bitch will listen to you.”
“Leroy!” scolded Mrs. Weasley.

Dialogue line.

“That's just an elongated version of what I said.” said Leroy.

Ninth paragraph, second sentence, first semi-colon.

“So despite being mad at me, you worried about me?” asked Sirius.
“You're an idiot, I have to look out for you.” said Harry.

“I'm supposed to look after you.” said Sirius.

Harry scoffed.

“Hey...” said Sirius with a pout.

End of ninth paragraph.

“I'd obliviate him and kill you.” said Harry.

“Don't like how that works out.” said Sirius.

Dialogue set.

“Glad I've got some supporters.” said Sirius.

“It was for your protection.” said Mrs. Weasley sharply.

“A day off for some fresh air wasn't going to hurt anything.” said Sirius.

Tenth paragraph.

Dialogue set, third sentence, tenth word.

“Not that you are a fool.” said Hermione quickly to Madam Bones.

End of dialogue set.

“Some of the Dark Lord's spies do not have the mark show so vividly on their bodies. Mine was hidden for many years, until his downfall, it revealed itself.” said Snape touching his arm unconsciously. “He didn't do that to all the Death Eaters, doing so took most of his energy to maintain the secrecy of his spies.”

“And you were using it against him!” said one of the first year Hufflepuff girls, admiration radiating off her.

Snape looked away from the student, still unsure about the awe the students were now showing him, especially those not from his own house.

Dialogue line.
Eleventh paragraph.

“You'd better make sure none of them are reporting to Umbridge.” said Moody.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

She was quite right, of course; he was barely keeping up with his homework, though he was doing much better now that he was no longer spending every evening in detention with Umbridge.

“But she was still baiting him every day. She never let up on him.” said Ron.

Twelfth paragraph, second sentence.

“That's only because you're a nutter.” said Ron with a laugh.

End of twelfth paragraph.

Hermione blushed.

Thirteenth paragraph.

Sirius ruffled the hair on Harry's head.

“Don't be too loving, it doesn't mention the fact that I wanted to punch you right in the face.” said Harry.

Sirius pulled his hand away slowly.

Fourteenth paragraph.

“'Well, that was creepy.’” said Katie.

Dialogue line.
Well, it was a little mini-date, I wouldn't tell Fred/George about it.” said the twins together. Then they looked at each other. “How come you don't trust me?”

Fifteenth paragraph.

“You're just so suspicious Hermione.” said Neville with a smile.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Wasn't me.” said Draco.

“Sounds like something you would do, you've done it before.” said Blaise with a smirk.

Sixteenth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Seventeenth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

End of dialogue set.

“It's not the students you have to keep an eye on in there.” said Sirius.

Eighteenth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“I didn't want to be first.” said Hermione.

“It was your idea.” said Harry and Ron together.
Dumbledore smiled.

“He was never very good at cleaning spells.” said Bathilda with a laugh.

Several people laughed, though a few looked a little worried.

“Should kids be in there?” said a seventh year.

“It's not advised.” said McGonagall.

“In my opinion, Willy never looked better.” whispered Tonks.

“That and I doubt they drink ale.” said Ron.

“And to think, she banned study groups...study groups in a school...” said Alicia.
“Didn't dawn on me for a long time.” said Harry with his cheeks turning pink.

“Ronald!” said Mrs. Weasley.

“That's what you get for succeeding in life, you can't have fun.” said Fred.

“Found out that stuff improves in flavor over time.” said Harry. “Cor, he gave us some vintage stuff.”

“That is a couple?” said Tonks.
“What the...did you post an ad in the paper or something?” said Charlie.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Oh, you get to see quite a lot of people in there on Saturdays, it was a group of that age that stunned him.” said Dumbledore with a smile.

Dialogue line.

“Should have waited for them to show, they would have paid for the leaders' too.” said Charlie.

“Nah, they had to pay for their own, we just tallied up the numbers.” said Fred.

“Customer service sure is lacking in that place.” said Bill.

Dialogue line.

“Way to sound like we're just handing out liqour.” said George.

“Avoid Harry's wrath at all costs...rules to live by.” said Fred.

George looked over to his twin and whispered furiously into his ear.
“Ah...not what I meant, just...Harry's temper you know...arrgh! Not what I...” said Fred quickly.

“What's going on there?” said Ron.

Dialogue line.

Twenty-ninth paragraph.

Said girl turned her nose up and looked away.

Thirtieth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“It takes some practice to speak in front of others normally.” said Remus with a smile.

Thirty-first paragraph.

Dialogue set, second sentence, second dash.

“Ah, come on Hermione, don't lie to them right off the bat.” said Tonks.

Dialogue set, second sentence, seventh dash.

“Well, yeah, there's common ground right there, no one likes the old toad.” said Blaise.

End of dialogue set.

Thirty-second paragraph.

“Cause theory will only get you so far, practical is what can save you. You can be knowledgeable in theory, but that doesn't mean squat if you can't wield the spell.” said Sirius.

Dialogue line.

“Like she needs help with that.” said Ron.
Dialogue set.

“There's the big ticket phrase.” said Charlie.

“Better keep it down, don't want the wrong people to hear you.” said Dr. Clark.

Thirty-third paragraph.

“They were expecting a thrilling tale.” said Dumbledore.

“They can peddle that elsewhere.” said Harry.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Harry's word is good enough.” said Colin proudly.

“Not to him it's not.” said Fred.

“I wanted to know what I was getting into.” said Zacharias.

“No one made you come.” said George with a snarl.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Yes, yes I do.” said Dumbledore plainly.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Well then,” said Fred.

“We've got the right to know...” said George.

“Your house password so we can get at you.” said the twins.
Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Thirty-fourth paragraph, second sentence.

Hermione blushed.

End of thirty-fourth paragraph.

Dialogue set, second sentence.

“He looked really cool while he did that too.” said Colin excitedly.

“I think you have a bro-crush going on over there.” said Leroy leaning over and whispering to Harry.

End of dialogue set.

“Good for you.” said Madam Bones.

Thirty-fifth paragraph.

Dumbledore laughed softly.

Thirty-sixth paragraph.

“If you took a class with the fake Moody, you were shown the killing curse.” said Tonks.

“Unless you were interested in any gruesome detail of the murder that wasn't quick and clean.” said Chief Hawkeye sternly.

Zacharias looked down at the floor, mumbling to himself.

Dialogue set.

“That's right.” said Nightstrike.
Hermione gave a short squeak.

“No I didn't!” said Hermione.

“Then what would you call this?” muttered Harry sitting up.

“I didn't want them to talk about Cedric!” said Hermione.

“And unfortunately, the chances of that happening are slim to none.” said Remus.

“What does that have to do with meeting somewhere?” said Mrs. McFinn.

Madam Bones smiled down at her niece.

“Yes I do.” said Susan with a smile.

Madam Bones turned slightly pink. “She was just interested in knowing if he was guilty or innocent in my eyes.”
“There was a non-corporeal version at the game, but not a completed one.” said Lee.

“I could use less of it.” said Harry.

“Wonder who that was.” said Hannah. “I mean, it looks like she's listening pretty close.”

Tonks giggled.

“What did you do to get sent there?” asked Sirius.

“I...uh...nevermind.” said Terry.

“Aww...that's adorable.” said Lee.

“No one cares.” said a first year Hufflepuff.
Forty-second paragraph.
Dialogue set.
“Funny how we forget things like that.” said Fred.

Forty-third paragraph.
Dialogue set.
“Help you didn't need.” said Dennis.
“But I got help nonetheless.” said Harry.

Dialogue line.
“Got him there.” said Rudolph with a smile.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.
“Nope, no one did.” said Tonks.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.
“Mr. Smith, he's just not getting your hopes too high.” said Madam Hooch sternly.

Dialogue line.

Forty-fourth paragraph.
Dialogue line.
“He didn't say that.” said Rivers.
“He's saying that he can do only what you all have learned by utilizing it.” said Snape in a bored tone.
The room went silent. “Why is he standing up for you?” asked Ron.

“Maybe he's been hit over the head?” said Harry with a smile.

“It's the only reason I can come up with.” said Snape with a sneer.

Snickers trickled through the school, no one really wanted to tell the twins off, though their mother made a valiant effort.

“Don't you threaten other people with that!” said Mrs. Weasley shaking her finger at them.

“I'd keep a wary eye too.” said Mr. Weasley with a smile.

“Though, I think Quidditch might have to take a backseat to Defense.” said Remus.

“Speak for yourself.” said a few of the Quidditch players.

“Every year is a critical period for someone.” said McGonagall.

“Who'd of thought he knew such big words.” snickered George winking over to Ernie.
“That's it exactly.” said Kingsley.

“Yeah, because he needs a bunch of kids to take all of them out.” said Charlie. “It's not as if he's the most powerful wizard in the world.”

“I...I don't!” said Fudge.

“Oh, we know, we looked into that very closely.” said Chief Hawkeye.

“Darn good question.” said Bill.

“This won't go well.” said a seventh year Ravenclaw student.

“We know...we know...” said Tempest with a bored voice.

“Madam Pince won't like that.” said a second year Slytherin.

“Under normal circumstances, you would have been more than welcome to use the classrooms that are uninhabited.” said Dumbledore.

“Teaching kids an apparent forbidden curriculum...I can see that being somewhat rebellious.” said Flitwick with a smile.
“Good plan, that way, you have every right to go after the squealers.” said Tonks.

“Oh, I had a different plan.” said Hermione with a tint of pink in her cheeks.

“You don't put your name down, you aren't invited.” said George.

“Damn, should have kept the list away from him.” said Fred.

“Way to stick it too him.” said Dr. Clark. “Besides, I don't think you kids are that irresponsible to leave the list just lying around.”

“Someone isn't going to be loyal...” said George softly.

“Hermione, why are you smiling like that?” asked Ginny.
“Why didn’t you let me talk to him?” whispered Cho to her friend Marietta.

“You can do better.” said Marietta disdainfully. “And see, he’s with Weasley.”

Cho sent her friend a dark look.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue line. discernible in the distance.

Dialogue set, first sentence.

“He seemed a lot nicer than.” said Hermione.

End of dialogue set.

Fifty-fifth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Thus starts the anti Michael tirade.” said Harry.

Michael even had to cower under the gaze of the other older brothers.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

Fifty-sixth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Officer McFinn smiled.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Well, he's dating your sister, so that's no surprise.” said Terry with a nudge to Michael.
Ginny blushed.

“Nice to know you don't trust us.” said Fred looking over to Ginny.

“Yeah, all we'd do is pat him on the back.” said George.

“Tell him how a good choice he made.” said Fred.

“And threaten to split his face in half if he so much as made you cry.” said the twins together.

“No one's believing you Ron.” said Mrs. Weasley.

“There's nothing going on.” said Harry.

Cho blushed heavily.
“It is a very pretty village.” said Mrs. McFinn with a smile.

“What’s the next chapter?” asked Dennis.

Officer McFinn turned the page. “Chapter Seventeen.”

“Oh this should be real fun.” moaned Ginny.

“Brace yourself Perce, one of the decrees you helped write is going to get slammed.” said Bill.

“Weren't we going to call it a day after this?” asked Leroy.

“If we can remain calm, then we will continue.” said Dumbledore with a smile.

Thanks for reading, Please review!

*I learned that from A Wind in the Willows episode from Cosgrove Hall. That amazing stop motion show with David Jason as Mr. Toad. Oh my god, I fell in love with that show when it was on Netflix, but those jerks took it down...you can't even find it on Youtube anymore.

But the riddle/question was “Why are your lessons like the river?

If I could remember what the complete answer was, I'd put it, but it has to do with the first part of the word curriculum, in Latin Curare (I think that's how you spell it)
Remus reached over and rubbed the back of Harry's neck.

“Oh, I loved doing that.” said Sirius. “Especially when Remus was reading aloud to us, slept like a log.”

“You were supposed to be studying.” said Remus.

“Now where is the fun in that?” asked Mrs. McFinn with a smile.

“Uh oh, we'd better keep an eye on this rebel.” said Rudolph with a smile.

Harry blushed.

“I wonder...” said Harry.

“What's that?” asked Sirius.
“Was that...making me dangerously depressed, someone's plan?” said Harry.

People looked fleetingly to the empty chair that Umbridge once sat in.

“It had better not have been planned.” said Chief Hawkeye to Fudge.

Fudge shook his head quickly, his face pale.

Third paragraph, first sentence, second comma.

“Wow, who came up with that move?” asked Charlie.

“It was an accident, Katie managed to dodge three people with it.” said Angelina. “Couldn't come up with a better name though.”

End of third paragraph.

Fourth paragraph, second sentence, sixth comma.

“This was a taste test!” said Fred.

“Yeah, which item would they prefer to use!” said George.

End of fourth paragraph.

Educational Decree Number Twenty-four

Rivers stared in anger.

“What nonsense is this? Why wasn't I informed about this?” he spat angrily.

“We...” said Fudge.

“Don't you dare justify this!” said the man angrily. “They're children! They need to learn yes, but they need to enjoy life, build social skills...you cannot...you don't have the right....And on top of that, to threaten them with expulsion...”

“Oh parents were not happy.” said Flitwick. “I received several owls.”

The other teachers nodded.

Fifth paragraph.

Dialogue line.
“Someone blabbed? Already?” said Mrs. McFinn.

“I'm thinking it's that one girl...or Smith.” said Dr. Clark quietly.

“Like the mummy impersonator.” said Tonks.

“We did.” said Terry.

“We'll give you Smith, but really?” said Seamus.

“Funniest thing I had ever seen.” said Harry.

“You knew that, why didn't you tell me!” said Ron.

“You were already climbing like a crazy person up the stairs.” said Harry.
“Bit one sided yes, but girls are by nature, a little more proper than boys.” said Dumbledore.

“Not all girls.” said Lionus. “We’ve got some nasty little tarts in Hell's Garden.”

“Didn’t stop you from coming into our dorm too damn early in the morning, what about our privacy?” said Ron.

“Well, someone did, whether it be from your little group or someone who overheard you.” said Moody.

“Everyone's got a nasty streak in them somewhere, just depends on how often you tap into it.” said Dr. Nicodemus.

The people that signed the parchment stared.

“Thanks for telling us.” said Fred.

“Yeah, hey...that might not be a bad prank idea.” said George.
“Sorry, Eloise.” said Hermione.

“Breathe...give them some space.” said Mr. Weasley.

“We would have questioned your identity if you had said otherwise.” said Fred.

“Good idea.” said Kingsley.

“Of course not.” said Cho proudly.
“Who's we? You're the captain, you go talk to her.” said Charlie.

“She must have added teams just as a perk for her.” said Emmeline Vance coldly.

“He's boring enough not to be investigated, he fits their criteria perfectly.” said Neville.

As if on cue, Hedwig came fluttering down and landed on Harry's knee.

“Hey, Hedwig.” said Harry as he stroked her feathers.
“Don’t bother, firecrackers don’t even startle him.” said George.

“We lit a whole box off right under him, didn’t notice a thing.” said Fred.

Twentieth paragraph.

Twenty-first paragraph.

“Oh no...” said Mrs. McFinn looking at Hedwig tragically.

Hedwig flapped her wings and looked indignant, and yet slightly ashamed.

“Not your fault.” said Harry softly.

Dialogue line.

Twenty-second paragraph.

“I wouldn't want someone touching my sore spot either.” said Seamus.

Dialogue line.

Twenty-third paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Eh, close enough.” said Flitwick with a smile.

Twenty-fourth paragraph.

Twenty-fifth paragraph.

Twenty-sixth paragraph.

“It's not sunny and I'm not Jim.” said the twins.
“Way to trust me.” said Harry with a laugh.

“She was smoking a what?” said a seventh year Slytherin staring at the book.

“She does march to the beat of a different drum.” said Dumbledore.

“That's a hard feat to do.” said Tempest. “Our beast tamer Biomantist says that Thestrals are a bit stubborn, much like Hippogriffs.”

“I suppose there is some brains, behind that skull.” said Snape with a sneer.
“Never a good sign, when she calls you back.” said Charlie.

“Oh, that made me do some very vindictive thinking.” said Harry.

“If you get caught...” said Mrs. Weasley.

“Not this again...” groaned Hannah.

“No! We just talked about it!” said Ron. “We weren't keeping anything from him!"

“Not without me knowing about it and beating the snot out of them.” said Harry.
“They'd have a difficult time trying to figure out where and when.” said Blaise.

Sirius sat in thought.

“Take an owl down to the lake and let them go.” said Charlie.

“I suspect a barrier was placed around the area of the school, stopping any post coming and going.” said Dumbledore.

“That's a crime where I come from.” said Dr. Clark.

“That's a crime here too, I'm amazed that the Minister allowed it.” said Madam Bones looking over to Fudge darkly.

“Shocker.” said a majority of the Gryffindors.

“She's just doing it to nail the group that's out to oust her and stick it to Potter.” said Moody.
“I’ve heard enough, kid, you’re going to be talking to a special therapist.” said Chief Hawkeye to Draco.

“A...a what?” said Draco nervously.

“You’ll find out when he comes.” said Lionus.

“Can...” said Draco.

“No.” said the Rangers together.

“Oh, you are definitely going to be needing that specialist.” said Lionus. “You are way too screwed up to leave you the way you are.”

Draco cringed. “I'm changing...” he muttered.

“Perhaps they can help you keep on this path.” whispered Snape softly.

“Hmm...Parkinson went from being a 3 on the attractive scale to a negative four thousand and ninety-two.” said Roger Davies.

“There's an attractive scale?” asked Mrs. McFinn.

“Didn't figure he had it in him, did you?” said Dean.

“Oh, dear...” said Mrs. McFinn and Mrs. Weasley looking at Neville.
Thirty-ninth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“I did not hear what was said.” said Snape.

“You seem to loose hearing quite often.” said Officer McFinn, not looking back at the man.

Fortieth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“I wish I had a crack at them...knowing what we know now.” said Ron.

Forty-first paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Forty-second paragraph.

“I didn't have a clue, just figured that you were just looking out for me.” said Neville.

Forty-third paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Oh, this won't go well.” said Remus.

Forty-fourth paragraph.

“I was nudging towards Snape.” said Harry.

Dialogue set.

Forty-fifth paragraph.

“Oh, don't...don't...don't...” said Hannah.
“No...Strengthening Solution is what is on the average O.W.L’s if they can master that, then they have a strong standing in any of their prior potions.” said River groaning loudly.

“Ooh...that's not what supposed to happen...” said Sirius cringing.

Several people snorted.

“I won't give her the reason I give you.” said Dumbledore plainly.
“Nope, just something for her little file...” said Remus darkly.

“You already have all the information on him!” squeaked Professor Flitwick angrily.

“Don't blame you, that sounds like one nasty day.” said Charlie.

“Hypocrite.” said half the students in the school.

“Do it anyway.” said Fred waving his hand.

McGonagall hid a smile behind her hand.
“Didn’t realize she had such an arm on her.” said Seamus.

End of fifty-first paragraph.

Dialogue set.

“Uh oh...” said Dr. Clark.

Fifty-second paragraph.

“And they weren’t good results.” said Harry.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

“Sounds like there is.” said Mrs. McFinn.

Fifty-third paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Really?” said Tonks.

“Well, a few of the others....” said Parvati looking around nervously.

Dialogue set.

“Then why do you come out into the open and reveal that you can do it?” asked Bill.

Fifty-fourth paragraph, second sentence.

“Ronald!” said Mrs. Weasley.

“Sorry.” said Ron.
“She doesn’t sound all that misty anymore...” said a sixth year Ravenclaw student.

“Hmm...nice teachers.” said Officer McFinn.

“Still complete and utter nonsense...” muttered Rivers angrily. “Not even qualified to teach...”

“And she kept saying it.” said Seamus. “We know, you old bag...we know...”

“And apparently you can't get clarification on something you don't understand.” said Rivers hotly.
“Bullshit, she just wants to hold it over them.” said Charlie.

“Vindictive bitch...” said Bill quietly.

“Or do you think, the Minister didn't want Harry to play...” said Charlie looking at the ex-Minister of Magic.

“I didn't...!” said Fudge, shaking slightly.

“I can just feel my blood pressure rising.” said Dr. Clark.

“On what planet is that a bright side?” said a few of the students.

“Well, he needed to get it done.” said Hermione softly.

“Oh, that's nasty...” said Officer McFinn.

“Yeah, it doesn't feel good when you do it, but when it get's you out of class, you can't be picky.” said Fred.

“Hey, I'm using it for good, not evil.” said Lee, but he ducked slightly after the look that Snape had sent him.
“Yeah, if we had known Harry was getting testy, we would have done it elsewhere.” said Fred.

“Then knock it off.” muttered Harry.

“There is a warning that we're printing on the box, don't eat more than twenty of those in a day. You wipe yourself out and have to rest for about a week.” said Fred.

“When did this happen?” said Mrs. Weasley looking over to the twins.

“Uh...when Fred said he had the flu...” said George.

“Don't pin this on me, that was you.” said Fred.

“They do know some very interesting bits of magic.” said Dumbledore with a smile.

“We know how to have fun, and to share that fun with others...for a price.” said the twins.

“Love messing with her.” said Fred.
“Still think it's too risky...” said Mrs. Weasley.

“Well, how else was I going to get your message to the kids?” said Sirius.

“I'm amazed that since the last time, you were being this cordial.” said Rudolph.

“Time was short, we'd tell him off at Christmas time.” said Ron.

“So much for secret Defense groups.” said Tonks with a giggle.

“Which works out for secret rendezvous sometimes, no one can hear you talking.” said Sirius.

“The way Tonks was giggling, I thought she was the one that was under the veil.” said Terry.

“Red Herring...” said Officer McFinn with a smile.
“What does a fish have to do with anything?” asked Ron.

“Never mind Ron.” said Hermione.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, second sentence.

“Don’t’ get snippy with him.” said Neville. “You were already on thin ice.”

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Hey, get your facts straight, it wasn't illegal to start with.” said Harry.

“Still mad at me?” asked Sirius quietly.

“A bit.” said Harry.

Sixty-seventh paragraph.

“Don't go down that road again.” said Hannah.

“Not on purpose I won't.” said Sirius.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, first sentence.

“Wonder what he did?” asked Ginny.

“He stole quite a few of his possessions, and a painting in particular. I myself was not happy when I heard that.” said Dumbledore.

Dialogue set, second sentence.

“Shame really, he hasn't got the legs for it.” said Sirius.
“And if Death Eaters were to come in and take over the school...we'd all be dead, The teachers can't be everywhere.” said Harry.

The adults were speechless.

“If that was true, she'd let us learn to protect ourselves.” said Harry muttering.

“Don't be nosy,” said Sirius.

“How would she explain being there?” asked Charlie.

“Dad left something behind.” said Bill.

“Shocker.” said Mrs. Weasley rolling her eyes.
“Can't argue with that.” said Lionus.

“Then, we'll go down in student history expelled for standing up for ourselves.” said Harry. “And that...can get Hogwarts completely empty for the next generation.”

“No one...” started Zacharias.

“If those were still around, I wouldn't want my kids coming here.” said Terry.

“Me either.” said Ernie.

“Congratulations, you just about closed a school with your acts alone.” said Rivers glaring at the Minister.

“Oh boy...” said Seamus.

“I don't think this will end well.” said Dean.

“Easy enough to infiltrate, if you know how.” said Snape.

“She's got a point.” said Tonks. “You'd have to go back in forth in shifts just get them all in there.”
“I was sorry to hear that, that one was my favorite.” said Sirius. “Used it to scare some of the girls when I would pop out of the wall.”

“Something's not right.” said Mrs. McFinn.

“Umbridge!” said a few of the students.

“But how could they have known, did someone in the whatever it was spill?” asked Dennis.

“No, someone had read the letter that was attached to Hedwig.” said Harry. “I noticed that she had a nasty nick on her hand, that told me who to hit back.”

“That could have been really bad.” said Hannah.

“If she had gotten a hold of Sirius.” said Mrs. McFinn taking Harry's hand into her own. “That would have crushed him.”

Sirius shifted slightly.
Chapter End Notes

Thanks for reading!
"I think we should have some lunch before transgress any further." said Dumbledore.

Harry stood up and made his way to the table full of food, with Sirius close behind him. The man felt guilty about all the trouble he was causing Harry, he just wanted Harry to have fun in his youth, have some adventures...well, adventures that didn't end in him getting sent to the Hospital Wing, or St. Mungos. To just be a kid and enjoy life...he wasn't able to do that...and his insides twisted itself into knots with the thought of that.

"Could you pass me the rolls, Sirius?" came a voice flitting through his thoughts. He looked up and Harry was looking at him.

"Say the magic words." said Sirius with a smirk.

"Jiggery Pokery." said Harry with a straight face.

"Wrong ones." said Sirius.

Harry smirked and whispered into Sirius ears.

"Could you pass me the rolls, arsehole?"

"Way off the mark." said Sirius laughing loudly. He picked up a roll and placed it on his godson's plate. "Though points for trying."

As they began to eat, Officer McFinn leaned back in his large chair, brought his feet up on the small footrest that Flitwick had given him and began the next chapter.

"Dumbledore's Army."

Fudge looked up and looked over to Dumbledore suspiciously.

"Don't be foolish." said McGonagall sharply.
“There could be a spy in the Order.” muttered Moody. “Unless Umbridge managed to figure out what the letter meant with having contacts with the Floo Network...can't let go all of the possibilities.”

Dialogue line.

“Oh, it wasn't pretty what I did her.” said Harry with a smirk.

“What did you do?” asked Sirius gleefully.

“Oh, I just made her some muffins.” said Harry with a smile.

“What kind of muffins?” asked Remus looking confused.

“Just rhubarb, with flaxseeds and raspberries.” said Harry.

The school looked confusedly, but then Dr. Clark started laughing. “That's precious!”

“What is it?” asked Ron.

“You eat, I'm thinking, one of those, and you're not going to get out of the bathroom for a while.” said Dr. Clark laughing loudly.

“Even added a certain potion to that too.” said Harry laughing.

“Oh that is cruel!” howled Dr. Clark.

Dialogue line.

First paragraph.

“They don't like being test subjects.”said Fred.

“But when it comes to work, it's an easy way to get flies and crickets.” said George.

Second paragraph.

“And you didn't think to carry that over to the first meeting?” said Sirius with a smile.

Hermione blushed and shrugged.

Dialogue set, third sentence.

“Which in some countries is a federal offense and guarantees you jail time.” said Chief Hawkeye.
“Can't rightly remember.” said Sirius thoughtfully. “Must have been during the dinosaur age.”

“Sucks to be a test subject some days.” said Fred.

“Could be worse, he could have had a raven, those little buggers nip you.” said George.

“Oops.” said Harry with a small smile. “Better calm down or something.”

“Unless you want to squish him.” said Bill.

“I didn't know a frog could look like that.” said Ron.

“Wrong way...” said Charlie.
“Well, that didn't work.” said Mr. Weasley. “It took me a while to get it down too.”

“When did you finally master it?” asked Ron.

“When Bill came, you were such a screamer.” said Mr. Weasley smiling over to his son, while Bill blushed.

Dialogue line.

Seventh paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Remember your first year!” said Colin.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“This won't end well.” said Dennis covering his eyes.

“Way to have faith in me.” said Ron sourly.

Dialogue line.

Eighth paragraph.

Officer McFinn laughed out loud. “Oh, Ron...you're the best!”

Ron blushed, a pleased smile on his face.

Ninth paragraph.

Tenth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Well, that's surprising, I would have thought she would have held out for after the first match, if that.” said Remus darkly.
“She didn't like that much, if memory serves me.” said Dumbledore with a twinkling smile.

“So we still haven't gotten to the part where this hasn't happened yet?” asked a first year.

“Not quite yet.” said Dumbledore.

“How come Harry has to be there, doesn't he just do what he has to do and forget the rest of you?” said Mrs. McFinn.

“Well, there are times when we need him to dive bomb a few of the other teammates to scatter them.” said Angelina.

“Uh oh.” said Katie.

“What's she thinking about?” said Alicia.

“What are you talking about? The little study group you've got?” said Charlie.

“It was your idea!” said Fred in shock.

“Didn't you think about this beforehand?” said George.
“She needs to speak a bit more plainly.” said Ron leaning away from her slightly.

“If she backs out of it now, I was going to be a little upset.” said Harry. “After all the crap those two put me through.”

“I didn't do anything.” said Ron.

“You didn't help matters.” said Harry.

“Oh that's nice.” said Sirius with a frown.

“Well, you are reckless at times.” said Hermione.

“So sue me for not wanting you kids to just sit in one place and get killed like sitting ducks.” said Sirius harshly. “I'm all for you defending yourselves! 'Cause despite the teachers and Dumbledore being there, we can't get to all of you in time, you need to mediate the damage just a bit.”

Hermione opened her mouth.

“Don't start with me young lady.” said Sirius looking irritated. “I put up with you all summer long, I heard some of your 'sage advice.' and frankly, you don't know me very well at all, you or Mrs. Weasley. Just because I had a prank happy childhood, and went off on Peter doesn't mean that I don't know what's the right thing to do.”

“You went out to Kings Cross.” said Hermione firing back.

“And I told you. I wanted to see Harry off to school at least once in his lifetime. I missed out on four years, I was not going to miss another one.” said Sirius angrily.

“I stand by Sirius on that.” said Remus.

“But...” said Hermione.

“You don't have a kid, when you have a kid, lose him or her for twelve years and only see him maybe once a year, then get back to me.” said Sirius.

“What about the fact you told Harry...” said Hermione.

“Drop it.” said Chief Hawkeye firmly.

Hermione and Sirius looked at Chief Hawkeye.

“True, Sirius made some poor choices, but if the Ministry had pulled their heads out of their asses, then he wouldn't have been stuck where he was, he would have been perfecting his paternal skills with the boy and he wouldn't be this excitable about freedom. You, Granger are just a child, you have no actual right to be criticizing adult choices, and frankly, your choices in life has very much left to be desired. If you were my granddaughter, you would have been taken to task several times by now.” said Chief Hawkeye. “You, Weasley and Potter and if I'm not mistaken, I'm sure that Weasley has been at fault time or two for the things that had happened.”

Ron nodded dumbly.

“And has been punished?” asked Chief Hawkeye.

Ron blushed slightly and nodded.

“Harry, well...there hasn't been a way to punish him yet that can be devised. Paddling won't have any effect, not after the abusive childhood he's had. Grounding, well, there's something but from what I hear, it never is put through, not with everyone wanting to spend time with him. So, before I start sending letters to your parents, putting in a few things that you've done, start respecting your elders.” said Chief Hawkeye.

Hermione looked down.

Sixteenth paragraph.

“Don't even need to think about it.” said Harry, covering the awkward silence.

Dialogue line.

“That's not what I said.” said Hermione.

“But that's what it could be translated into.” said Remus. “You need to phrase things carefully if you want to get your point across. Took me a few years to stop most of the pranks done to me for what I said.”

Seventeenth paragraph.

“When it comes to me being in danger, I trust him.” said Harry. “If he wants me to practice on defending myself, and getting others also into defending themselves, then absolutely.”
“Bad idea.” said Fred.

“Tell me about it.” said Katie.

Dialogue set.

“Well, you've got to admit, being a prisoner in Azkaban, and having only one real year of freedom abroad, and then being shut in a house he cannot stand, then if he wants to live through me, he can do so. I'm still in control of my life so what he wants to do through me can only go so far. Don't you think?” said Harry with a firm voice.

“I just thought...oh never mind!” said Hermione angrily.

“I told you that this book was going to be hard.” said Harry.

“It's not just this book!” said Hermione.

“I didn't ask for this, you want to bring this up with someone you'll have to take this up with Umbridge. Besides, going back and looking at all of our decisions, our judgment sort of bites, much more than Sirius' does.” said Harry.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

“Terry, I'm amazed you fancy her.” said Terry quietly.

“Me too, it's kind of weird.” said Ron looking at Hermione with an appraising look. She elbowed him in the stomach, but there was a slight smile on her face.
Angelina put her hands on her hips.

“Well, we...you can't have two Beaters sneezing and sniffling right in the middle of a game could you?” said Fred.

“One sneeze at the wrong time and we'd take off someone's head.” said George.

“Pepper...up...potions....” said Angelina with a growl.

“Ah, well...uh...what if she ran out?” said George.

“Not likely, Mr. Weasley.” said Snape with a sneer. “I keep her potion stock fully supplied.”

“Traitor.” muttered Fred.

“Delinquent.” said Snape snarkily.

“He's playing along...I'm going to faint.” said George.

“Finally, some silence then.” said Snape.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Pass on them Ron...pass on them....” said Tonks.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Oooh....” said a few people wincing horribly.

Dialogue set.

“That was Hermione.” said Ginny.
“And there is proof that he knows more than he lets on, have you used that spell before?” asked Rivers.

“Not that I can recall.” said Harry.

“That would be the ideal time to get out of the air.” said Madam Hooch.

“Too much information.” said Ginny.

“WAY too much information!” said Ginny covering her ears.

“Thought someone had put something in the towels, it's happened before.” said Katie.

“Yeah, we heard a tale once that the entire Slytherin team had itching powders doused all over their towels.” said Fred.

“Did you boys have anything to do with it?” asked Mrs. Weasley looking at her twin sons.

“It was before their time.” said McGonagall.
Remus and Sirius were shaking with silent laughter.

Twenty-seventh paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“You would have to have poked yourself in the eye pretty hard to earn that yelp.” said Alicia.

Twenty-eighth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Twenty-ninth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Scared the crap out of me.” said Ron.

“Nice how Harry didn't want to tell us.” said George with an indignant sniff.

“Sorry...” said Harry.

Dialogue line.

Thirtieth paragraph, first sentence.

“You didn't know about that before hand?” asked Hermione.

“I've got enough on my plate dealing with Voldemort in the physical sense, I don't need to think on his emotions.” said Harry rubbing his scar.

End of thirtieth paragraph.

“You kind of feel sorry for the Death Eaters...” said Lee. “Then again, maybe not.”

Dialogue line.

Thirty-first paragraph.

“Don't, Harry...don't.” said Dumbledore closing his eyes.
“I was fine...” said Harry.

Thirty-second paragraph.
Dialogue line.
“How the hell do you know?” asked Zacharias.

Thirty-third paragraph.
“So it was a hunch.” said Zacharias with a smirk.
“Let's see you guess what You-Know-Who is doing and thinking...” spat Colin angrily.

Dialogue line.
Thirty-fourth paragraph.
“He looked awful.” said Ron.

Dialogue line.
Thirty-fifth paragraph.
Dialogue line.
Thirty-sixth paragraph.
“Yeah, I couldn't exactly be happy around her either.” said Remus.

Dialogue set.
Thirty-seventh paragraph.
“I didn't expect that...I didn't expect him to be able to tell what he's thinking just from the pain in his scar.” said Ron.
“The mind is not a book.” said Snape rolling his eyes.

“Well, ain't that creepy.” said Terry.

“Who?” said Nightstrike.

“Dumbledore.” said Ron and the rest of the school together.

“He already knows, and besides, he wasn't exactly willing to see me at that point.” said Harry.

Dumbledore covered his eyes.

“How was he going to get a hold of him when the mail and the fires are being watched.” said Blaise.

“Ever get the feeling that Ron knows more than what's going on?” said a third year Hufflepuff.

“Just that...Dumbledore really loves Harry.” said Ron quietly.
Dumbledore looked at his hands, a smile on his face.

“Loves me so much, shouldn't have been ignoring me.” thought Harry.

Fortieth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Forty-first paragraph.

Dialogue set.

Forty-second paragraph, first sentence.

“And yet he can remember that, I can't remember stuff like that.” said Tonks.

Moody shook his head.

End of forty-second paragraph.

“Just don't worry about it for the moment.” said Mrs. Weasley.

Dialogue line.

Forty-third paragraph, second sentence.

“You make it sound like I nag!” said Hermione.

“You do!” said the students.

“And we love you for it.” said Harry.

“Most of the time.” said Ron with an arm around her shoulders.

Hermione looked at him and elbowed him in the side.

“All the time, all the time.” grunted Ron.

End of forty-third paragraph.

Forty-fourth paragraph.

“Happened all the time in History of Magic class.” said Sirius.
“Weird how as he's reading, he's using the words to promote his own thoughts.” said Fred.

“It would be normal thinking if he was thinking of things he's supposed to be thinking.” said George.

“What?” said Fred.

“Huh?” said George.

“What does that word mean?” asked Colin.

“It's desire.” said Harry.

“I thought it sounded similar.” said Colin.

“Oh, sweetheart.” said Mrs. McFinn rubbing the back of Harry's neck.

Harry leaned into the touch and smiled.
Dumbledore leaned forward in the chair he sat in.

Dialogue line.

Fifty-third paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Yay! Dobby’s back!” said a third year Hufflepuff.

Dialogue line.

Fifty-fourth paragraph, second sentence, first semi-colon, second comma.

“He must have excellent poise, to hold them all up.” said Emmeline.

“He has to restack them quite frequently, but he enjoys doing it.” said Dumbledore.

End of fifty-fourth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“That was a relief.” said Harry.

Fifty-fifth paragraph.

Dialogue set.

“Well, he won't be cold.” said Parvati.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Bet she loved that.” said Lavender.
“I had quite a few complaints from the elves about the hats and such.” said Dumbledore thoughtfully. “I was relieved that Dobby volunteered to take on the task of the entire tower by himself.”

“I'm always having bad dreams.” said Harry quietly.

“And we've heard a few of them.” said Neville

“Oh no you haven't.” said Harry.

The Hall became silent.

Harry could hear the gnashing of teeth.

“Good idea, if anyone knows every nook and cranny about the castle, it would be the house-elves!” said a seventh year Slytherin.
Sixty-first paragraph.

“He's got a spot!” said a first year.

“And it was a good one.” said Harry, Hermione, and Ron.

Dialogue set.

“I don't believe I know that room.” said Remus.

“I know I never went in it.” said Sirius.

“You might have, you just don't know about it.” said Harry.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

“Sounds perfect!” said Sirius. “Why couldn't we have found that room?”

“I can only imagine what havoc you would have raised with that room's help.” said McGonagall rolling her eyes.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

Dumbledore smiled warmly.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Not that night, you're already tired.” said Dr. Clark.
“That's right, get some sleep.” said Mrs. Weasley.

“Finally.” said Snape with a sneer.

“We were so relieved.” said Katie.

Angelina turned towards her.

“Lets face it Angie, none of us wanted to be drenched and then blown to Bristol.” said Alicia.

“Sort of hard to drink when someone's gawking at you.” said Fred.

“Trust us, just to make each other laugh, we stare at each other.” said George. “It's impossible to swallow smoothly.”

“Yeah, well, no one else was coughing up any place, so Dobby's will have to do.” said Sirius.

“And I don't think Harry has forgotten about the missing bones in his arm that year. And besides, that was Dazzle Gums' fault, Dobby only broke the arm.” said Bill with a smile.
“Sure, don’t trust the loyal elf.” said Fred

“Granted, he did just about kill Harry with that Bludger.” said George.

“But he got Harry that gillyweed and saved him from drowning.” said Fred.

“But he could have save everyone a lot of time and freaking out by telling who was behind the Basilisk.” said George.

“Yeah, and I guess you could include the whole levitation charm and the barrier...yeah, I would take what Dobby says with a grain of salt.” said Fred.

“Too bad Ernie found Zacharias.” muttered Fred.

“Don't act sketchy!” said Sirius. “Be calm, act natural.”

“Now you just have to worry about the Toad.” said Tonks.

“Idiot.” muttered Draco.
“That he was.” said Snape quietly.

Dialogue set.

Seventieth paragraph.

“You should try and look natural, do not attract attention to yourselves.” said Tempest.

Dialogue line.

“Well, you are covering the basics, give it a bit more thought and you should be able to fine tune the room to be completely impenetrable.” said Dumbledore.

Dialogue line.

Seventy-first paragraph.

Seventy-second paragraph.

“Nice, wish the office was that equipped.” said Tonks.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

Seventy-third paragraph.

“Shocker.” said a majority of the students. Hermione blushed.

Seventy-fourth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Seventy-fifth paragraph.

“It was an amazing read.” said Hermione thinking of the book fondly.
“Guess we weren't all that fussy about where we hid.” said Fred.

“Words of experience. And just from last year.” said Kingsley.

“Hold up...isn't Harry the leader?” asked Dr. Clark.

“I thought we should vote on it properly.” said Hermione.

“So, it's a group that Harry's going to teach, but someone else is going to be pulling the strings?” said Officer McFinn.

“Sort of sounds like Fudge.” said Mrs. McFinn curiously.

Several people snickered.

“Well, there wasn't any other option out there, was there?” said Zacharias.

“No one else is qualified.” said Colin.

“Granger seemed to be running things.” said Zacharias.
“Are there going to be badges?” said Charlie.

“No, but, I thought that this way, no one else could really tell what we're talking about.” said Hermione.

“Well, when she talks about S.P.E.W, I still don't know what she's talking about.” said Ron quietly to Seamus. Hermione, unfortunately, heard him and stamped his foot.

“I was kidding!” said Ron rubbing his foot.

“You don't want to single anyone out, that'll only get you in trouble if you get caught.” said Nightstrike.

“That'll only add fuel to the fire if you get caught.” said Remus.

“What, I thought it was a good name.” said Fred indignantly.

“Both excellent ideas and can easily be exchanged for the other.” said Dumbledore with a smile. He felt deeply humbled by the fact that they used his name.

“I don't know about a good idea, if they get found out, the Ministry can, well could have used it against you.” said Mr. Weasley looking over at the Headmaster.

“The students need to stay in the school and learn how to defend themselves, if they get found out, then the Ministry will focus on me and they will have precious time to plan the next move.” said
“They might expel Potter if they find out he's the leader.” said Moody looking thoughtful. “Someone else should have been labeled as leader, Potter just could take the role of tutor, have no physical attachment to the group.”

“True, Alastor, very true.” said Dumbledore slowly. Hermione, Ron and Harry exchange looks. “But, I think that the chance to attempt to remove me from the school would have been a more tempting offer than expelling Harry. And as the old saying goes, hindsight is twenty-twenty and with age brings wisdom.”

Dialogue line.

“I thought Harry was in charge.” said Remus with a smile.

Dialogue line.

“Tell me you don't leave it there.” said Snape rubbing his eyes. “I don't.” said Hermione smugly.

Dialogue set, second sentence, second comma.

Snape looked up and stared at the boy. “From what I hear, he prefers that spell over all others.” said Flitwick quietly, though loud enough for Snape to hear.

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

“It helped him against You-Know-Who, and disarming a teacher, though that was Dazzle Gums.” said a seventh year Slytherin.

Dialogue line.

Eightieth paragraph.
“I'm going to wait patiently till you are out of school, and then I'd like to offer career proposition.” said Rivers leaning forward.

“Get in line, bub.” said Nightstrike.

“Sorry, Neville.” said Luna. “Ginny grabbed me.”

“That's alright, I got to learn straight from Harry.” said Neville with a smile.

A few of the D.A members blushed.

“I wonder how I would rate.” said a few second years.

“Can we still sign up?” asked a seventh year.

“There's no need for it now.” said Harry.

“Well...” said Hermione.

“Have you guys been having meetings?” said Harry.

“No, just...maybe we should keep up with it...” said Hermione. “After the books are all over.” said Hermione.

“We'll have to see.” said Harry.

“How's that?” asked Ron.

“I'm already behind on my paperwork.” said Harry with a groan.

“Don't you worry about a thing. I've just been signing your name to the basic paperwork. The ones that don't really require any real decision.” said Rudolph. “We can sit down and go through the allowances tonight if you're not all that tired.”
“I figured that was a great start.” said Harry.

Zacharias glared over at the twins.

“The book must be mistaken.” said Fred.

“Shame on you, book, fibbing like that.” said George, wagging his finger at Officer McFinn.

“Sure, that has to be it.” said Officer McFinn shaking his head.

“Didn't want to jinx her” said Michael with a blush.

Ernie also blushed.

Dennis and Colin scratched the back of their heads, an embarrassed smile on their faces.

“I've never really had to use that spell.” said Luna with a dreamy smile.
“Well, now we know where the hell he got that.” said Fred.

“Come on, several spells were missing.” said Ron looking around the room.

“Like yours.” said Hermione.

“Like one of mine.” corrected Ron.

“Aw...you make her nervous.” said Bill with a snicker.

Harry and Cho blushed.

“Still don't know how I got blamed for that.” said Harry.

“She jealous or something?” asked Terry.

“No, she just...well...” said Cho.

“I just didn't want to do anything that would get my mother fired.” said Marietta coldly.

“If your mother does good work at her job, then they can't fire her.” said Madam Bones.
“Did they know what she was going to do?” asked Tonks.

“No, they just want me to be a loyal Ministry marcher.” said Cho rolling her eyes. “I sent them an angry letter before all this, I told them that if they supported her, then I didn't want anything to do with them.”

“And...how did your parents take that?” said Mrs. Weasley.

“Not too well, I got an angry letter back, but it ended that they were proud of me for standing up for what I believe in, but I still get grounded for a week when I get home.” said Cho.

“Hmm...grounding when we get home.” said Sirius shaking Harry's shoulders. “Will that work on you?”

“Beats me, can't say I've been grounded yet.” said Harry.

“Count on it then.” said Sirius.

“What?” said Harry.

“I'm thinking, a day for each time you put yourself in danger.” said Sirius.

Harry leaned back and counted. “What about first year?”

“Each obstacle counts as one.” said Sirius.

“What about the forest in my first year?” said Harry.

“I'll give you that one.”

Harry leaned back again. “What about the Tasks last year.”

“I'll pass on those, you didn't ask for those.”

“And my job?” said Harry.

“Tack on a week for that.” said Sirius.

“That's...thirty-eight days!” said Harry staring at Sirius.

“That's about right, give or take.” said Sirius.

“Of just staying at home.” said Harry.

“No going anywhere, no having friends over, nothing.” said Sirius.

Harry looked at the floor. “I think I can live with that.” said Harry.

“Wonderful.” said Sirius throwing an arm around Harry's shoulder.

“What about his birthday?” said Leroy.

“Maybe he'll have a cupcake or something.” said Sirius, his eyes twinkling.
“That's something to look forward to.” said Harry with a smirk.

End of dialogue set.

Ninetieth paragraph.

“He didn't even blink.” said Terry.

Dialogue set, second sentence.

“I'm sorry, I shouldn't have done that.” said Luna looking contrite.

End of dialogue set.

Chief Hawkeye blinked and looked at the girl. “I think I missed that issue.”

“Oh, Daddy didn't print that, he was afraid that the Minister would have slipped some poison into our turnips.” said Luna.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Ninety-first paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Hopefully out earlier.” said Remus.

Dialogue line.

Ninety-second paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“No more arguing, or debating, don't get busted your first night.” said Charlie.
“Ah, back to normalcy.” said Susan with a giggle. “Fighting like an old married couple.”

“Ah, that sweet.” said Fred.

Ginny looked down at the floor, but then a small breeze tickled her hand and she saw a little paper heart sitting on top of her hand. She looked over to Harry, who merely smiled and Sirius was stowing away his wand.
I don't own Harry. Potter.

If you haven't noticed yet, this book makes me MAD! I can just feel the angst that Harry is radiating and I just get mad right along with him. Just goes to show you how amazing a writer J.K. Rowling is!

See the end of the chapter for more notes

First paragraph, first sentence.

Remus couldn't contain the snort of the laughter that escaped him.

End of first paragraph.

“You're perfect Teacher material.” said Rivers proudly.

Moody rolled his eyes, “Better hope that Umbridge isn't able to peer into your mind boy.”

“She doesn't have the power to even begin to learn.” said Snape with a smirk.

Second paragraph.

The adults nodded.

“I'm still a bit hesitant...” said Mrs. Weasley.

“They need to defend themselves sweetheart.” said Mr. Weasley soothingly.

Third paragraph, first sentence.

“The first time house unity would be a very bad thing.” said Ron looking at Hermione with a laugh.

End of third paragraph.

Dialogue set.
Silence crept through the school.

“Not bad Granger, really not bad.” said Moody nodding approvingly.

Snape absently gripped his forearm, massaging the mark on his skin.

Fourth paragraph.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

“Shocked the hell out of me.” said Terry, a few other Ravenclaw students nodded as well.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Cause we wouldn't be able to get as far ahead on points without her.” said Ron with a proud smile.

Dialogue set.

Fifth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

The students looked amongst themselves. “I'm not too fond of that now.” said one of the more worried looking students.

“Ended up using them anyway.” said Fred.

“It was a wicked idea, and we aren't branded so that works out for us.” said George.

Unless you sit on the thing and Harry changes the time, and you don't get the chance to stand up for an hour.....still have a circle mark on my rear.” said Fred.
“Unless you sit on the thing.” repeated Fred.

“Also helps to keep the coin all on it's own.” said Angelina.

“My question is, how did you manage to create the gold coins?” asked Madam Bones.

“I...I didn't.” said Hermione.

“She borrowed the galleons from me.” said Harry.

“Gotta give them a day off at some point.” said Charlie.

“Didn't want Slytherin to win.” said Angelina.

“You guys are the best in the school, you can afford a day off somewhere.” said Bill.

“No one got homework that week, it was crazy.” said George.

“My fondest wish came true.” said Fred.

“Should have took an anger management class...” said Harry dully.

“Hey, how much do you wanna bet that Umbridge told that little toerag to provoke us?” said George.

Draco looked firmly at his feet.
“Not that much of a shock.” said Bill.

“Slytherin needs all the practice they can get.” said Sirius with a snicker.

Once again, not much of a shock.” said Bill.

Flitwick and Sprout shook their heads sadly as they tutted towards Snape.

“I think that seminar will be more than adequate to help you in dealing with the children, fairly.” said Dumbledore with a icy tone in his voice.

Snape cringed.

“And hopefully never will.” muttered Ron.

“Do not be discouraged Mr. Weasley, it took Wood many years of constant practice with his father to get to be the Keeper he was while he was here.” said McGonagall.

“I'm betting Fred and George didn't help with that.” said Bill with a firm look at his younger brothers.

“We tried! We told Ron to just move onto the next time and just do what he's got to do...we even tried to get him used to it...never worked.” said the twins together.
Ron blushed.

Eighth paragraph, fifth sentence.

“Awesome!” said Sirius with a smile.

Eighth paragraph, sixth paragraph.

“It was so cool!” said Katie.

End of eighth paragraph.

“We were kidding, Mum!” said the twins quickly.

Ninth paragraph, second sentence.

“You'd think that listening to Malfoy and his little cronies would get you prepared for that.” said Tonks.

“They were mostly focused on me, it's one thing to be the wall, and another thing to be the person they're firing at.” said Harry.

The people in and around the bowl looked at Harry. “That's an odd analogy.” said Rudolph.

“Oh, trust me, you don't want to know the reason behind that comparison.” said Officer McFinn, gripping the book tightly.

Harry turned his head away.

End of ninth paragraph.

“Or at least someone on the opposite side of the field.” said Harry with a smirk.

Tenth paragraph, first sentence.

“He was the wall, he and Hermione.” said Harry with a smile.

Hermione and Ron smiled to themselves.
“Oooh.” said a few of the students.

“Wait...what?” said the students together.

“That’s not right, we just had Halloween and that Bonfire Night thing.” said Ernie. “The Quidditch game was sooner than this.”

“This is the part in the book where the actions of that...bitch,” said Officer McFinn, the twins and a few other students smiled in glee. “changed the course of future. This is what would have happened if she hadn’t of made this decisions.”

“That was a pretty fancy way of speaking.” said Dr. Clark with a smirk.

“That’s the exact words that I was given, don’t mess with me.” said Officer McFinn with a smirk.

“They used that word?” said Fred with a snicker.

“Well, they used a gentler word, but that was a bit closer to the mark than the one they used.” said Officer McFinn.

“So, from this point on, pretty much, somethings may have happened before they say it has?” said Terry.

“That’s right. Some things may happen in the future, and then again somethings might not. I don’t know, I’ve only seen the ending where all these things have happened.” said Officer McFinn. “Parts of it are...well, they’ll be hard, but the happier bits...I hope they do happen.”

“Like what?” asked Ginny.

“You’ll have to wait,” said Officer McFinn. “for the end of the books.”
“Oh, you poor thing.” said Mrs. McFinn.

Dialogue line.

Fourteenth paragraph.

“They weren't anything good.” said Harry.

Fifteenth paragraph.

“Well, so much for that idea.” said Fred.

“Thought a round of applause would boost his confidence.” said George.

“Sorry...” said Ron.

“Nah, we guess we should have given it a bit more thought.” said Fred with a shrug.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“You're playing with a veteran team, it's natural to think that.” said Charlie. “I was the same way for my first game.”

Ron looked at the floor, though a smile was on his face.

Dialogue line.

Sixteenth paragraph.

Dialogue set.

“Aww...” said the students together.

Dialogue line.

“I couldn't come up with anything else to say.” said Harry.
Seventeenth paragraph.

Dialogue set.

“Most you would have been able to do is get your lips wet.” said Ginny.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“I didn't realize he was that nervous.” said Hermione.

Dialogue set.

Dr. Clark and Mrs. McFinn looked at each other.

“It took me a little while to make that hat.” said Luna with a serene smile. “It's my absolute favorite, right next to my Raven feathered jacket.”

“She wears it to every game.” said Micheal quietly.

Dialogue line.

Eighteenth paragraph.

“It's quite the unusual hat.” said Dumbledore with a smile.

Dialogue set, second sentence, second comma.

“Well, that's disturbing.” said Blaise leaning away.

End of dialogue set.

Nineteenth paragraph.

“If I had known about what you said to that girl...” said Madam Pomfrey looking firmly over to Snape.
“Oh that doesn't sound promising.” said Remus.

“It wasn't good, not at all.” said Hermione.

Draco looked away.

“Worst game of our career happened that day.” said Fred solemnly.

“Second worst.” said Harry holding up two fingers.

“Getting kicked off and banned wasn't bad enough?” said George.

“We won that game...the game with the Dementors...we lost that one.” said Harry. “I figured that I would get back back on the team sooner or later, Umbridge wasn't likely to stay on past the holidays, especially if the kids went home and complained.”

“Damn straight we would have.” said a seventh year Hufflepuff.

“I would have refused to come back to school.” said a second year Gryffindor.
“Not even a little bit. I was trying not to throw up.” said Ron.

“He didn't even blink he was so out of it.” said Alicia.

“Wish she would dress me.” said Fred with a frown.

Alicia leaned over and smacked the back of Fred's head.

“Never had the misfortune to talk or run into them personally.” said Angelina.

“Had to help them.” muttered Montague.

“The chasers had to lead them.” said the twins with a snigger.

Snape growled inwardly. The two beaters did think of physical strength than intelligence.
“Just let it out, Ron.” said Fred.

“You'll feel better afterwards.” said George.

Ron touched his stomach. “Harry, you got any gingerbread or something?”

“Don't tell me you're hungry.” said Hermione.

“No, I'm just...refeeling the nausea.” said Ron looking pale.

Harry reached into his bag and pulled out a thin slab of gingerbread. “Knock yourself out.” said Harry extending it.

Ron stood up and grabbed the large cookie and ate it slowly.

Montague looked at his arms, and then placed them behind his back, his face red.

“Do I want to know where those badges came from?” said McGonagall.

“Umbridge...she gave us the idea to mess with Weasley.” said Draco softly.
“He never was a gentleman.” said Angelina with a disdainful sniff.

“Monkey see, monkey do.” muttered a Gryffindor sixth year.

“And what am I?” said Katie with a playful smile and her hands on her hips.

“Ah well...” said Lee looking nervous.

“Amongst the roses...he found himself a gem-encrusted cherry blossom.” said Sirius with a charismatic smile.

A blush crept across the Great Hall.

“Sweet Merlin, he found his old style.” said Remus groaning. “We'd better stop him before he starts.”

“Someone's affections aren't a fun fact.” said Remus. “Brooms and what other clubs they're in is a fun fact.”
“Lucky shot.” muttered Fred and George.

“I thought I told you boys to never aim for the head!” said Mrs. Weasley.

“Come on Mum!” said Fred.

“We have to stop the other team from scoring.” said George.

“Besides,” said Fred.

“There's nothing up there to damage in the first place.” said the twins together.

“What are they singing?” asked Sirius.

“Don't...ask...” said Fred and George firmly.

“They'll find out shortly, I'll warrant.” said Harry.

“I shouldn't have stopped to listen.” said Lee guiltily.
“The Slytherins lost almost two hundred points for that little unsportsmanlike conduct.” said McGonagall sternly.

“Too bad that Umbridge replaced all those points.” said Flitwick with a growl.

“And with those brats chanting that idiotic song, they're going to get it past Ron.” said Chief Hawkeye with a firm gaze.

The Slytherins looked down, slight shame on their faces. They weren't being shone in a very good light lately.

“Professional players are conditioned to ignore the fans provoking. School kids are thin skinned.” said Lionus.

“I think they used an amplifying charm.” said Hermione.
Weasley is our King song.

Dialogue line.

Thirty-eighth paragraph.

Weasley is our King.

Thirty-ninth paragraph.

Weasley is our King song.

“I love music, but that song...” said Flitwick shaking his head.

“It's complete trash talk.” said Officer McFinn.

Dialogue set.

Fortieth paragraph.

Weasley is our King song.

Dialogue line.

Forty-first paragraph, first sentence.

“Come on Harry, get the Snitch, I hate hearing about this game.” said Leroy.

End of forty-first paragraph.

Several girls groaned. “She's so obnoxious.”

Weasley is our King song.

Forty-second paragraph.

Forty-third paragraph.

Dialogue set.

“Finally they score.” said Rudolph. “Now crush those twerps.”

“Uh, as underhanded as they're acting, I'm a Slytherin too...” said Leroy.

“You're different.” said Rudolph.
“Come on, Harry! Come on!” said a few of the students excitedly.

“Thank Merlin! I don't have to sit through that song again.” said Mrs. McFinn with a relieved smile.

“What happened?” said Sirius and Remus quickly.

“Oh no!” screamed Mrs. McFinn worriedly.

“Oh, thank goodness...” said Mrs. McFinn. “Whoever shot that at him shouldn't be allowed to play! Such underhanded tactics...”

“Oh, I wanted to at least suspend Crabbe from the rest of the years' Quidditch games.” said McGonagall. “Unfortunately, Delores felt that lines was more than sufficient punishment.”
“Had a nasty bruise though...” said Harry. “Had to sleep on my stomach for a while.”

“This won't end well.” said Dr. Clark.

“Oh, it doesn't.” said Harry and the rest of the team.

“They were awful, you wouldn't even get the Hobgoblins to sing it.” said Bill.

“We should have just went to the changing rooms too.” said Fred.

Mr. Weasley leaned forward, his face looking angered.

It was Mrs. Weasley's turn to look furious.
“See, you guys should have listened to me.” said Angelina.
“Yes, dear.” said George with a mumble.
“Get used to saying that.” said Mr. Weasley and Officer McFinn with a laugh.

Draco shifted uneasily.
Snape was drumming his fingers on the armrests of his chair.

“I was trying to make my way down, but Umbridge kept blocking my path downward. She knew this was going to happen.”

SMACK!
Snape had slapped the back of Malfoy's head.
“I don't want to hear you speak ill of her...or of anyone's mother again, is that clear?” shouted Snape.
“Y-Yes sir.” said Draco.

“Get him Harry!” shouted most of the students.
“Acting the way boys do, where were you?” said Harry sternly.

“Dealing with Crabbe.” said Madam Hooch looking taken aback.

“But after all that singing and everything, you shouldn't have focused all your attention on just one of the Slytherin players.” said Harry with a stern look. “But it wasn't just you, the other teachers should have paused the game, and asked the students to stop the bullying, but they allowed it to continue. To single out a single student. It wasn't your best day, Hogwarts staff.”

The teachers all flinched.

Harry…” said Remus looking at Harry in awe.

“They all knew the tension between the two houses, and that song wouldn't have made it any easier. They should have stopped it, by not doing so, they're promoting it, and saying it's okay. So maybe we should sing some bullying limericks to the Slytherin fliers during the next game.” said Harry with a snort.

The teachers, and Dumbledore looked down in shame.

Dialogue set, fourth sentence, first semi-colon.

“After all the crap he pulled, good for you boys.” said Dr. Clark stiffly.

Dialogue set, fifth sentence.

“He knew that was going to happen.” said Hermione with a frown.

End of dialogue set.

“Didn't hear you scold the Slytherins, so we have to sit there and take it, eh?” said Fred with a scowl. “Granted we're supposed to be above such petty things.” he added with a snort. “But still, we're hormonally driven teens, we're going to smack the magic out of someone if they talk about our mum.”

Sixtieth paragraph.

Sixty-first paragraph.

“As ticked as you were, I'd do it again.” said George.

“Me too.” said Fred.

“Me three.” muttered Harry.
“We were provoked, during the entire game and then a little bit after wards.” said Harry. “Explain yourself why you didn't put a stop to it.”

McGonagall looked to the side.

“I swear, you lot tell me to leave it to the adults, but when we really needed you guys, you don't do jack shit.” said Harry.

“Language Harry.” said Mrs. McFinn.

“They...” said Harry.

“I know, sweetheart, and I'm completely on your side. They should have stopped it and I'm tempted after hearing so much about this school that you go and finish your learning at Stonewall High.” said Mrs. McFinn.

She reached over and rubbed the back of Harry's neck, bringing a serene smile to the boy's face.

“This place is too stressful for you.” said Mrs. McFinn softly.

“Our mums.” said Fred.

“She was too busy.” said a few third years.

“I think we can all agree that we fell short in this game, let us leave it at that.” said Dumbledore.
“Shocker, she's supporting Slytherin.” said Katie.

Dialogue line.

Charlie said something that caused a scolding that lasted twenty whole minutes and the sniggering of several younger boys.

Sixty-third paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Sixty-fourth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Bill this time had to endure a shouting at for what he said.

Sixty-fifth paragraph.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

“It was a sufficient punishment.” said Dumbledore. “I believe Mr. Malfoy would have gotten at least two days of detention...though I don't believe that happened.”

“Umbridge said he was an innocent victim.” said Angelina.

“Doubt he's ever been innocent.” said a Gryffindor sixth year darkly.

Sixty-sixth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Sixty-seventh paragraph.

“Go McGonagall!” said Sirius.

“You're forgetting something.” said Harry dully.

Sirius's face fell. “Ah...that's right.” said Sirius sadly.
“She was angry.” said Fred.

“Refreshing to see it aimed at someone else.” said George.

“Tell us about it.” said Sirius and Remus together.

“Oh, if she was here, I’d kill her.” said Nightstrike wistfully. “My blood pressure is rising, I can just feel it.”

Chief Hawkeye smiled.

“How in the bloody hell did you think that you could do this?” said Rivers angrily. “You implant all these damned decrees you're going to empty the school!”

“S...” said Fudge.

“Don't you dare.” said Chief Hawkeye.

“Least till after school ends.” said Colin.

“Or till she gets fired.” said Dennis.

“Knowing how sadistic and manipulative Umbridge and Fudge were, she was in for the long haul.” said Harry. “I think it was at least a few days after that that I sent the note to you.” he added looking at Rivers.
“SHE CAN'T DO THAT!” shouted Rivers. “He is more than able to go and play Quidditch after school!”

“SHE CAN'T DO THAT EITHER! SHE HAS TO SEND THEM HOME WITH A NOTE!” screamed Rivers. He turned and glared at Fudge, and then turned to Kingsley. “No offense, but from now on, any, ANY teacher that the Ministry wants to put into Hogwarts, must meet OUR requirements, they have to take the approved classes and they have to take a full and thorough aptitude test.”

Kingsley nodded.

“If I hear of any of your little cronies in education, I'm pulling them and subjecting them to an intense investigation.” said Rivers spat back to Fudge.

“I...I...” said Fudge.

“You're through, I'll destroy you!” yelled Rivers.

“Calm down, you're just going to give yourself a heart attack.” said Dr. Nicodemus handing the man a calming draught.

“Get new players.” said Rivers finally calming down, “Till Potter and the Weasleys can get back on the team.”

“Let's see what they would do.” said Fred indignantly.
“It was my fault.” said Ron slowly.

“It was ours for falling for it.” said George. “And the teachers for not stopping the stupid singing.”

“Mostly ours though.” said Harry fairly. “We should have did what you did and leave the pitch.”

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“That was so not fair.” said Angelina.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“I would have loved it.” said Fred longingly.

Seventy-third paragraph.

“Still have it, use it for no-broom practice.” said Harry.

Dialogue set.

“Let us join you.” said Fred.

Bill smacked the back of his younger brother's head.

Seventy-fourth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Seventy-fifth paragraph.

Dialogue set, first sentence.

“Not you that I'm avoiding.” said Ron looking at Hermione.
“I didn't want to face you guys when you came in.” said Ron. “I didn't know about the whole...yeah...”

“DON'T YOU DARE!” shouted Angelina.

“I didn't know!” said Ron quickly.

“No it wasn't.” said the school.

“That's got nothing to do with it...not that you aren't good.” said Katie.
...Okay you got a point there.” said Sirius.

Remus nudged Sirius in the ribs hard. “Shut up.”

“I've had worse.” said Harry.

“Or that sent us into a happy upward spiral.” said Ron with a smile.

“Can we stop for the day.” said Harry plainly.

“Are you alright sweetie?” asked Mrs. McFinn.

“I think I just need to calm down for the rest of the day.” said Harry.

“Of course Harry.” said Dumbledore, Officer McFinn nodded.

“I wanna go rest in my room.” said Harry standing up.

“I'll lead you up, Harry.” said Rudolph taking Harry by the elbow.

The school looked at Harry as he left the Great Hall, and a few of the more observant ones gasped. Harry's black hair that was creeping back up, was completely gone. His hair was completely white again.

Chapter End Notes

Thanks for reading! Please leave a comment!
Harry sat down on his large couch and kicked his feet up onto the cushions. He was getting pretty tired and he just didn't want to continue on with the books today. He was just getting more exhausted by the minute, and his anger kept lashing out to the people being mentioned in the book....

He didn't know what he wanted anymore.

He was grateful that he had Sirius with him, he didn't need to hide anymore and he especially grateful since he had Dr. Clark, and Mrs. McFinn again. Finding out he had uncles and even a Great-Grandmother was a massive dream come true...though...the rest of his family that he was now responsible for...they were a bit like a bunch of needy Dursleys from the sounds of it. It was going to be stressful, but a sort of...happy stress that he could manage without much trouble.

It was just all this, the people looking into his most private thoughts, his opinions, and...really...all the gushing was starting to get a bit annoying...not from Mrs. McFinn though....just from all the girls. How was he supposed to cope with all this when they still had about two and a half books left to go through?

As he thought all this he looked up at the ceiling, letting the voices that surrounded him and came flitting in and out of the air above him just wash over him. Didn't acknowledge anyone who nudged him, patted his head or even looked down at him.

“Lad...lad...come on lad, you need to snap out of it.” said a voice coming from his right.

A hand nudged his face firmly, and then took his chin in hand and turned his head towards the hand's owner.

It was Dr. Nicodemus. No one else was in the room, and the sun was beginning to set. How long was he just laying there?
“Seeing as how we have some free time, and he just arrived, I want you to talk to that therapist I mentioned.” said Dr. Nicodemus.

Harry blinked at the man, and then sat slowly up. “Who is it?”

“A colleague of mine. He's a good man, though...it takes a bit for him to warm up to you. We'll see how well you and him get on. Come on in, Glacier.”

The door opened and a tall man with porcelain like skin, short white hair. And wearing a light blue robe. He had ice blue eyes and no nonsense face, though, he did look very handsome. Sort of like a Snape with a normal nose, washed hair and had gotten some sun in some part of his life.

“This, Potter, is Glacier, he's the head Healer at our Medical base...and he's going to be your therapist.” said Dr. Nicodemus. “I'll leave the two of you to get to know each other and talk.” without further ado, he left the room.

“Why?” asked Harry looking up at the man.

“Am I not up to your standards?” said Glacier with a look of disdain, he had a slight Russian accent.

“No...it's just...you've got more people to worry about then a little therapy session with me...you're probably super busy.” said Harry looking up with tired eyes.

Glacier blinked, heaved a big sigh and sat down in front of Harry.

“Well, you are a very important figure in this country, if not a good part of the world, losing you to depression will have serious repercussions.” said Glacier. He folded his arms and leaned against the back of chair, “Also, it would be a tragic loss, to lose someone before they can really take a firm part in the world we live in.”

Harry took a deep breath and closed his eyes, “So...where do we start?”
Sirius sat down in the Great Hall, eating his dinner, but he wasn't smiling like he normally did.

“Relax, Padfoot.” said Remus. “Harry needs this, and therapy is a private thing, unless they want others to get in on it.”

Sirius sighed as he dipped his fork into the shepherd’s pie. “I know, I know, but that's not what has me worried...”

“Harry's white hair coming back?” said Remus.

“Right on the button.” said Sirius. “And just that half-dead look he had when he was just laying there.” he added with a mumble.

“I talked to Dr. Nicodemus about that, he thinks that it's pretty much coming from all the stress that this particular book is dragging up. He's still going to be watching Harry if there is something else that is going on with him.” said Remus.

“That Ranger doctor, he seems to miss a bunch of stuff when it comes to Harry.” said Sirius.

“Dumbledore asked about that.” said Remus. “He couldn't get a straight answer, but Rangers aren't really all that known for divulging information. Nevertheless, Dumbledore has some faith in them.”

Sirius said nothing.

“So...where do we start?” asked Harry.

“How about...what was your muggle school like?” asked Glacier.

“Don't you need something to write stuff down on?” asked Harry looking at the Ranger's empty hands.
“That's the great thing about Pensieves, you can save money on parchment.” said Glacier with a small smile.

Harry sat in thought for a moment.

“Now, about your school.” said Glacier.

“It was fine.” said Harry softly, “I got good grades...”

“But no friends and really no one related to you to tell you that they were proud of you and to welcome you home.” said Glacier with a sad smile.

“The 'no friends' part didn't really bug me then, sort of does now.” said Harry glumly. “As for the no one telling me they were proud of me, I still had the Police department, most of those guys knew me and they were always talking to me and giving me encouragement. Even a few clients were supportive.”

Glacier ticked an eyebrow, was this kid going to admit something bugged him at the time or what? He doesn't have to holding everything inside...The way Dr. Nicodemus was talking, him laying in here staring at the ceiling with blank eyes, scaring anyone that came into the room...he figured the boy would be pouring his heart out.

This is going to be a long afternoon, and perhaps a very long year.

Hours later, Harry and Rudolph sat in their personal study, just off the sitting room where they all gathered usually. The two of them needed quiet to discuss the paperwork that sat before them.

“So...Harry...how much do you think your cousins are going to be able to live off next month for the holidays coming?” asked Rudolph. “They have all the money they'll need for food and other necessities, but what about spending money for Christmas?”

“I'm thinking maybe a hundred galleons for the adults and thirty for the younger ones...at least the ones that live with...uh...” said Harry.

“I think you're trying to say Great-Grandmother.” said Rudolph with a smile. “Or Great Grandma, or even Nana if you wanted to be completely sappy about it.”

“I'm good with Great-Grandma...” said Harry with a laugh.

“Now about that money, they're going to be right pissed off with that small amount.” said Rudolph with a large smile.

“If they want extra, they had better come up with a list of the things that they want to give each other and a reason why.” said Harry.

“Good thing you're giving them a month plus to send you the reasons and whatnot. They'll already be sending you a Christmas wish list for themselves, they can tack on there if they want to give out gifts. If I may ask, what reasons aren't you going to be buying for their own wish lists?” said Rudolph.

“Nonsense about how they don't have a decent dress robe, they want the latest works of whatever in dragon hide cover books...crap like that.” said Harry.

“Ooh, you're going to be a mean Patriarch...” said Rudolph with a rich laugh. “That's what they need though...they need to know some tough love. You seem to know what to do with expenses of a family pretty well...”

“I'll tell you if you can keep a secret.” said Harry with a smile.

“I'm one of the best confidants you'll find...” said Rudolph with a bright smile.

“I'm supporting a Muggle family, the kids send me letters of things they need, I deem if they're worth it or not, and if they are or if I can find something cheaper that's just as good, I have Inspector Holmes mail it to them.”

Rudolph smiled. “Aw! Well, these aunt and uncles of yours may throw a bit more tantrums than what those muggle kids will.”

Harry kept a running total of the expenses that the family acquired every month and adding little notes to each expense total.

“Just how much does the family eat in one week?” said Harry as he totaled up the food bill.

“Well, there are a bunch of adolescent boys there, but we don't have nearly the stomach capacity as the Weasley family has. That family is legendary for bottomless pits.” said Rudolph. “Except for maybe my brother Bartholemew, he can take care of a single turkey all on his own, but he doesn't live with mother. He lives Hungary.”

Harry looked over at his Great-Uncle. “There's a joke in there somewhere.”

“Yeah, he's saying it's getting old...shame really, I love that joke.” said Rudolph with a smile. His smile then turned to a soft frown. “So...how did the first day of therapy go?”

“Fine I guess...I don't know, never had therapy before...” said Harry.

“Well, I suppose that if you managed to get anything off your chest, and if you feel better afterward, then it means it went well.” said Rudolph.

“Then it was fine...I guess...” said Harry looking down at the numbers that lay before him.

“We're you expecting to feel perfect immediately afterward?” asked Rudolph.

“No...maybe, I don't really know.” said Harry looking sullen.

Rudolph looked over at his Great-Nephew with a small smile. “It'll get better, after a few sessions, you'll be opening up to the therapist and you'll be able to vent everything you got ticking under messy head of yours.” he said as he ruffled Harry's hair.

Harry looked over to the large stack of letters from his relatives, the ones from his family's ancestral home, and others that lived abroad.

“What are these?” asked Harry.

“If you want to change the subject, you'll have to do better.” said Rudolph with a smile. “Those are request letters, they'll come in from time to time. They're requests for extra things, and the reasons behind it. They come from almost every one in the family...if they don't have the money to get it for themselves.”

“Do I have to make sure they aren't lying?” asked Harry. “Or just hope they aren't full of bull and send them what they want?”

“That's where this comes in handy. Mother sent it over with all the letters.” said Rudolph picking up a large cherry wooden cube from within a bag lying on the floor. It had an assortment of different runes and one large circular indent on the top.

“You'll need this.” said Rudolph taking a delicate gold chain with a large opal out of a smaller cherry wood cube. “This unlocks the box, you just push the opal down into the wood and there we go.”

Inside the cube was a small yet ornate mirror. It had pearls fixed to the silver gilded frame and a large heart shaped ruby on top.

“Just read the complete letter to the mirror, and it will flash if they're lying or not or show how many of a particular thing they have.” said Rudolph.

“How the hell does a mirror know when someone is lying?” asked Harry.

“It only happens with the people in our family, married into or not. It's ancient magic, kiddo, even I don't really understand it. Now there are rules to using that...” said Rudolph.

“Only use it if absolutely necessary?” said Harry.

“Oh hell, use it all you freaking want...just...don't lose the key and let no one else use it. Don't want that getting lost.” said Rudolph.

“Does it do anything besides act like a lie detector?”

“Oh it can do a bunch of different things, it can tell if a member of your family is ill, injured, committing a crime and where they are at, no matter if the Fidelius charm has been cast or not. A lot of our family members, are elderly recluses or people in possession of some very powerful magical items that would could be very dangerous in the wrong hands...so we don't really want to spread it around where they are.” said Rudolph.

“Guess not.” said Harry as he slipped the opal around his neck. “Does the rest of the family know about this mirror, if they did, why would they risk lying in a letter.”

“That's the beauty of it, they don't know about it at all. Only the Patriarch and the Matriarch know about it, well, the emergency Patriarch as well, but that's me if something happens to you. Please don't let anything happen to you, I don't want to do this job for the rest of my life.”

He looked at the mirror and then at the box. “Has anyone put, like, extra protective spells on these things?”

“Every Patriarch adds a little protective charm here and there. You'd be amazed at how protected this thing is. It can't be summoned, or copied, and that's just what I personally found about it.”

“Didn't your...” said Harry.

“Nah, he was more of a find out for yourself...make your own discoveries kind of parent...sort of why I went to Africa and spent my life discovering new plants...” said Rudolph thoughtfully.

“Do you think, I can juggle this and whatever job I want to do?” asked Harry, out of the numerous problems that had plagued his mind as of late, this one was the easiest one to be answered at the moment. Also, the eagerness that his Great-Uncle didn't want the job made him a bit uneasy.

“Sure, your Great-Grandfather was a very popular man in the Ministry, he worked quite a lot, had to deal with all this paperwork and he still had plenty of time for my brothers, sisters and I.” said Rudolph with a smile. “Once you get the hang of it, this paperwork won't take longer than maybe two hours a day.”
Harry smiled slightly.

“Now, let's get down to a few of these letters.” said Rudolph.

“Well, Glacier, what have you found out?” asked Dr. Nicodemus.

Glacier took a deep breath as he sipped his tea. “He's going to need this...for a long time.”

“That bad eh...?” asked Dr. Nicodemus.

“He's not screwed up, not like some of the others that I've seen, but this kid...he doesn't want to let anyone in, it's like he's got a brick wall around his emotions and his feelings. It's like he doesn't want anyone to help him...but...there's a young boy in there, that's just screaming for help, and he doesn't know how to get it.” said Glacier.

“Is this the reason...” said Dr. Nicodemus.

“He's getting stressed out, because of these books. I recommend only doing maybe three or four chapters a day. Call it day at four o'clock or so, let Harry unwind.” said Glacier.

“His eyesight should be returning to full strength within a day or two, that'll make things easier on him.” said Dr. Nicodemus. “So, are you going to continue on with him, or are you going to pass him off on someone else?”

Glacier looked down. “I'll stay with him, even though we just met, jumping from one therapist to another is not a good thing. I've heard that they'll just placate the new therapist until they can get out. Best stick with the boy until he's comfortable, or until he says he wants someone different.”

The two Healers sat in silence for a moment.
“Sad really, the boy has looks, charm, brains, money and the choice of amazing careers...and he's falling victim to depression...that damned family...and Voldemort on top of it all...” said Dr. Nicodemus.

“Like I said, he's going to need therapy...for a long time...” said Glacier.

“Oh no...” said Rudolph. “This isn't going to be easy to say no to, for you maybe, me the answer's easy.”

“What's that?” asked Harry as he stretched.

“You're going to want to read this.” said Rudolph, handing Harry a letter.

Harry opened the letter and read:

Dearest Cousin;

I was so overjoyed to hear that you have finally been brought back into the folds of our family. My heart has ached for the life that you had to have been living so far away from your family. I hope that we can meet and become the best of friends and close cousins.

“Doesn't sound so bad...” said Harry. “Little gag worthy...”

“Oh wait for it, skip the next two flowery paragraphs.” said Rudolph pointing to a part lower on the letter.

I was relieved that Rudolph and his friend came back to England safe and sound. I've wanted to ask him for something, but the letters never seemed to reach him.

My friend has suffered some very unfortunate circumstances, and I thought that I would treat her to a little change of scenery, if it is possible, I would like an extra five thousand galleons so I can take her someplace to help her rest.
I await your owl and I cannot wait to meet you.

Much love,

Your cousin,

Caroline Potter.

“I take it she doesn't like you and Uncle Leroy being together.” said Harry.

“She's anti-whatever makes me happy.” said Rudolph.

“That bad huh?” said Harry with a smirk.

“She and I hate each other. My father gave into her demands all the time, and when the mantle was transferred to my brother, he knew the history between her and I and he had a hard time deciding what she was to get, so she got the same stipend every time. Perhaps with you, and hoping you aren't going to open that letter around me, she'll get a little extra.” said Rudolph with a sneer.

“So what should I do?” asked Harry.

“This is one of those things where I'm going to throw you to the wolves and let you figure it out for yourself.” said Rudolph giving his nephew's shoulder a squeeze. “She and I have a bad relationship, I can't in good conscience influence your decision, you have the mirror, and you have the letter, that is all you will need.”

Harry looked at the letter and the mirror, what was he going to do...he'd have to look at each letter, use the mirror and then make a decision on his own. Then balance the books and make decisions on family matters...

This all took his Great-Grandfather less than two hours every day?
Thanks for reading, please comment.
Dumbledore pondered what Dr. Nicodemus and his fellow Healer Glacier had told him. Harry was getting too upset with all the readings and that perhaps he would be more comfortable with reading only a few a day, no more than four, until the harder parts were over.

Dumbledore had heartily agreed, these books were all about Harry and if he wanted to slow down the pace, than he was more than willing to comply.

He only hoped that the therapy was going to help, he had stumbled in on Harry staring up into space the other day, and with Harry not responding to anything...it frightened him greatly. The boy looked completely lost.

These books were showing their negative side, he hoped Harry would be alright.

Officer McFinn was also informed about the decision to only read four chapters a day and he agreed. Harry was looking a bit rough, rest and relaxation was just what the...well, Doctor ordered.

The students piled down into the Great Hall, and once Harry came down they began the day. Lionus was surprised that Glacier didn't come down.

“Where's he at?” asked Lionus pulling the Ranger doctor aside.

“He wants Harry to talk to him about the day.” said Dr. Nicodemus. “To see if he opens up about anything.”

“Hmm...good plan.” said Lionus.

Officer McFinn picked up the book and found where he left off.

“Chapter Twenty” said Officer McFinn.

“Ooh! Are we going to find out what he was doing?” asked Parvati.

“It always takes girls forever to get ready.” said Lee quietly.

“Not my fault that you're all short.” said Ron smugly.
“It sort of haunts you, sometimes.” said Fred.

“Horribly written, yet strangely catchy.” said George.

“Oh, I see it now, you like Hagrid more than me!” said Sirius.

“You mean you didn't know?” said Harry looking at Sirius with a straight face.

Sirius' mouth hung open as Remus laughed out loud and clapped his hands.

“Brilliant!” said Remus.

“Tell me that you covered your tracks...” said Moody.

“There was no snow on the ground...” said Hermione.

“There would have been if Hagrid hadn't come back early for these books.” said Dumbledore thoughtfully.

“Fang was just as excited to see Hagrid as those kids were.” said Flitwick.
“What?” asked Terry.

“My face was a bit...busted up...” said Hagrid.

“It didn't look all that busted up when you got home, but hang on, it didn't snow the day you came back either...” said Colin.

“Hagrid was summoned back sooner, due to these books.” said Dumbledore.

“And I looked after him when he got back, they must have seen him after I fixed him up as best I could.” said Madam Pomfrey.

“From the way we're fussing, that wasn't nothing, Hagrid.” said Harry. “Worse than what we did see.”

“I've had worse growin' up.” said Hagrid.

“Ah....Hagrid.” said Sirius cringing.

“He didn't look that bad...” said Ron.

“Guess it is if he hadn't come back this early.” said Hermione.

“No one wants a cup of tea when you look like that!” said Mrs. McFinn.
“No, now how did you get that way?” said Fred.

“I'd go tearin' after whoever did it.” said Hagrid. “But you lot can't handle what I was up against.”

“And I dealt with them better.” said Madam Pomfrey.

Charlie looked darkly at Hagrid.

“Now don't be lookin' like that.” said Hagrid. “I got it straight from the reserve, it was one that died from old age.”

“Eww...ice packs work better, or even frozen peas.” said Dr. Clark.

“What?” asked the Purebloods in the room.

“I'll tell you about it later.” said Dr. Clark.

“Please do!” said Mr. Weasley eagerly.
“And...he's going to tell them.” said Sirius shaking his head.

“All we have to do is throw big, innocent eyes up to him and he spills.” said Ron with a laugh.

“Guess they didn't need Hagrid to tell them about that.” Remus said with a chuckle.

“And Hagrid didn't figure they knew.” said Tonks.

“They always seem teh know what don' have nuthin' to do wi' 'em” said Hagrid with a amused smile.

“Didn' believe 'em.” said Hagrid.

“That's us!” said Harry with a laugh. “Interfering little imps.”

“He sounds a lot better.” said Lionus with a smile.

“And that was just one session.” said Dr. Nicodemus. “And he didn't tell much from what Glacier says. I can Imagine what he'd be like when he does let it go.”
Eleventh paragraph.

“You have to mean it Hagrid, or they'll never learn.” said Mr. Weasley with a smile.

Dialogue line.

Twelfth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Can't deny it anymore.” said Rivers with a smile.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Several students laughed.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Don't want them to go lookin' for them.” said Hagrid.

“We're not that stupid.” said Ron.

“You brats went after a troll, a three headed dog, a dark wizard, an acromantula, a basilisk, an apparent convicted killer, and dementors...you are that stupid.” said Snape snarkily.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Remind me never to go hiking in the mountains then.” said Dr. Clark.

Thirteenth paragraph.
“That knocked me back a bit.” said Hagrid.

“Didn’t get mail.” said Hagrid.

“Nah, he was kidding you.” said Fred.

“Also he didn't really almost get expelled, that was a joke too.” said George.

“You tease!” said Mrs. McFinn chiding Harry softly.

“House rule, you are not to use that strategy to get information.” said Sirius.

“Oh, I'm looking forward to summer...” said Sirius shaking his head.
“At least wash it...” said Dr. Clark.

“Who else could have gone with him without getting seriously injured like Hagrid?” asked Rudolph.

“She's a very singular woman.” said Dumbledore with a smile.

“It's common knowledge where they are, that way no one, magical anyway, can just go and run into them.” said Kingsley.

“The mountain passes can be very treacherous, even in the summertime.” said Dumbledore.

“Boy, does that lead up to something.” said Officer McFinn looking at the page.

“What do you mean?” asked Ron curiously.

“Nothing, you'll find out later, quite a bit later, but later.” said Officer McFinn.
“I did understand, I just thought he meant You-Know-Who.” said Ron.

“It's not that bad, Ron.” said Dr. Clark.

“Nosy bastards.” muttered Chief Hawkeye.

Several people laughed.

“Now was not the time.” said Ron.

“Wow, you guys were pretty busy.” said Leroy.
“What was the disagreement over?” asked Fred.

“Uh...can't quite remember what it was about...” said Hagrid looking around nervously.

“Thank goodness, Viper isn't here.” said Nightstrike.

“Viper isn't here, for a good reason.” said Chief Hawkeye looking over at Harry out of the corner of his eye.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, second sentence.

“They would be powerful allies for whoever could sway them.” said Dumbledore, a twinge of sadness in his eyes.

End of dialogue set.

Twentieth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Give him time to drink, Sport!” said Officer McFinn with a laugh.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“I would have thought...you know...a bit bigger...” said Dr. Clark measuring the distance with his eyes.

“They're just big enough.” said Remus shaking his head.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Used to be more...” said Dumbledore shaking his head.
Dialogue set, third sentence.

“Oh, that’s a shame.” said Mrs. McFinn.

“They’re known for being some of the most violent creatures on the planet, it doesn't take much to set them off on a frenzy.” said Sirius.

End of dialogue set.

Dumbledore nodded, Fudge wanted to open his mouth, but a swift look from Tempest kept his mouth clamped tightly shut.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

“Oh, I get cranky without sleep.” said Seamus.

“You're cranky with or without sleep.” said Dean with a snicker.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Interesting names for things...” said Dr. Clark.

Dialogue line.

Twenty-first paragraph.

Dialogue set, fifth sentence.

“Really interesting name...” said Dr. Clark.
End of dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

“I wouldn't want to go up to someone that big.” said Hermione softly.

Dialogue set, second sentence.

“Wonder what the wife looked like...” said Zacharias with a snicker.

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, first sentence.

“It also helped that they were half-giants, a bit more tolerable than perhaps normal wizards.” said Dumbledore. “Death Eaters may be tolerated a bit more than normal people as well...due to past promises in the last war.”

“What if they had those Ministry badges or something?” asked Dennis.

“Dead upon sight.” said the members of the Ministry.

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, third sentence.

“Giants don't forgive a magical attack on themselves.” said Remus.

End of dialogue set.

Twenty-second paragraph.

Hermione turned and looked at both Ron and Harry.

“I didn't know what it was.” said Ron holding his hands up.

“You can't make Gubraithian fire all that big, it's awesome magic, but a small amount of flames weren't something I thought that giants would be impressed by.” said Harry. “And how he could say the word without stumbling over it.” he added with a mutter.

“And can you do it?” asked Zacharias snidely.

“Nope, tried five times, can't do it.” said Harry. “I don't even get a spark.”

“It'll come.” said Dumbledore with a smile.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Yeah, you two, he mentioned it twice, you should have memorized it.” said Lee shaking his finger.

Dialogue set, first sentence, third comma.

“Once the two of them start, they don't stop fer a long time.” said Hagrid.

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Well, that was a wasted trip.” said Ernie.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

“A giant translator, would have loved to have seen that.” said Sirius.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, third sentence.
“I’d be inclined to listen if I kept getting presents.” said Blaise.

Dialogue set, fifth sentence.

“Love that rule.” said Nightstrike.

End of dialogue set.

“Must have liked his present.” said a seventh year Hufflepuff.

“He did.” said Hagrid with a nod.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

“Well great!” said a few first years. “Then they're on our side!”

Hagrid looked uncomfortable.

Dialogue line.

“Huh?” said the first years.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

Twenty-third paragraph.

Dialogue set, third sentence, tenth word.

Mrs. McFinn and Mrs. Weasley cringed.
“Oh no...” said the students together.

“Get away, get away now...” warned Tempest.

“This will not go well, I fear.” said Firenze.

“A few of the younger years screamed.

“I was fine.” said Hagrid easily.

“Not at that precise moment you weren't.” said Dr. Nicodemus.

“How did you pronounce that?” said Sirius looking at Hagrid dumbfounded.

“Ask him later.” said Remus shortly.
“I was, but Hagrid, I told you that if anything went awry with the plan, you were to come back and report it.” said Dumbledore. “I did not want to lose you and Madam Maxime and not find out till I went myself to the giants.”

“Wanted to come back and tell you that it went well.” said Hagrid softly.

“I appreciate that, but it may be that someone other than Golgomath wanted the fight to start.” said Dumbledore carefully.

“Like who?” asked some of the students in wonder.

“Give me time.” said Officer McFinn looking at the student, “I'll get there.”

“Odd wish.” said Charlie.

Dumbledore nodded sadly.

“You think they started the fighting?” asked Leroy.

“It doesn't take an excessive effort to start the giants fighting.” said Dumbledore.

“I think they might've been givin' him some gifts before he became Gurg.” said Hagrid.
“Shock...” groaned a few of the students.

“He still had his job at the Ministry at that point.” said Madam Bones.

“Does he now have his job still?” asked Ron.

“I cannot prosecute or arrest anyone that does a crime that I hear of from these books.” said Madam Bones.

“Not stopping us, he's been in jail since...the end of the last book.” said Lionus. “Whole bunch of people in are in our prison since we’ve started.”

“Really?” said Ginny.

“Oh yeah, they have to go to our lower level prisons, they'd croak too easily.” said Nightstrike.

“Is You-Know-Who there yet?” asked Ron.

“We're looking for him.” said Lionus. “He knows how to hide, that one.”

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, second sentence.

“They're easy teh impress.” said Hagrid with a smile.

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, second sentence.

“They're easy teh impress.” said Hagrid with a smile.

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

“Then they might not want to talk to you, for fear of being finished off.” said Rudolph.

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

“That was something I really didn't want to do.” said Ron.

“Don't blame you.” said the rest of his family.
“Or they were watching you already.” said Dr. Clark.

Dialogue set seventh sentence.

“Get 'em Madam Maxime!” said Fred and George.

End of dialogue set.

Twenty-fifth paragraph, first sentence.

Several students snorted with laughter, even a few of the teachers giggled.

End of twenty-fifth paragraph.

“Aw, give him at least two minutes.” said Sirius nudging Harry's side.

“I wanted information.” said Harry nudging Sirius back.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“A what?” asked Mrs. McFinn.

“It's like a...a much scruffier version of Hermione's cat.” said Dr. Clark.

“Aren't you reading up on the magical world?” asked Hermione looking stunned at Mrs. McFinn.

“I'm reading the cook books that are in the library. Though Sam did give me Harry's copy of Fantastic Beasts and Where to Find them.”

Harry turned to look at Mrs. McFinn and then Dr. Clark.

“I loved your little notes, it was hilarious.” said Dr. Clark with a smirk.

Dialogue line.
“But something else must have happened.” said Hannah.

“Can't really blame them, we sort of brought bad luck.” said Bill.

“It's possible, but perhaps not. I will remain hopeful nonetheless.” said Dumbledore.

“He ruins most of my pants that way.” said Harry with a smile.

“He doesn't do that to anyone else's lap.” said Cho.

“He probably figures Harry needs more attention.” said Hagrid.

“I didn't want to overstep any boundaries.” said Hermione softly.
“She had you, Hagrid, that was the best thing anyone could have ever done.” said Mrs. McFinn.

“Aww, shucks, thanks Mrs. Holly.” said Hagrid turning slightly pink.

“You were attacked.” said the students plainly.

“Crap!” shouted Fred and George.

“Watch your mouths!” said Mrs. Weasley.

“Didn't know what they were so worried about.” said Hagrid.

“Good call.” said Moody.
“What? I can't understand you, talk softer!” shouted Fred.

“Aaw, that's not what I was going to say.” said George.

“Where were you going with it?” asked Fred.

“I was going to say, 'No, I'm a burglar, I'm just taking a few things.'” said George.

“That works too.” said Fred.

“I was so insulted, I thought he only did that with me.” said Harry with a smirk on his face.

“Be rude, Hagrid.”.

“Arthur!” scolded Mrs. Weasley gently.

“Wicked.” said the students as they laughed.

“Well, that's a mite creepy.” said Dean.
“It's his house, he can break his stuff if he wants to.” said Angelina.

“Radio!” said one of the students quickly. “It had to be the radio.”
“Does he even have one in there?” asked another student.
“How is she to know?” asked the first student.

“That'll do.” said Justin. “So long as she only heard him talking.”

“Ooh, she heard more than him.” said Justin.

“Should have scattered the snow.” said Moody.
“It didn't snow that night!” said Ron, Hermione and Harry.

“Not now!” said the younger students shushing the Gryffindor Prefect.
“Maybe they flew back...” said Seamus.

“That won't work.” said Dean.

“Don't look there too often.” said Dr. Nicodemus.

“They'd touch Ron's before they'd even think to touch yours.” said Leroy reaching over and patting Harry's flat stomach.

“She now wants to talk about his injuries?” said Sirius rolling his eyes.

“That's a sort of accident that makes me want to call the police.” said Dr. Clark.

“Must have been several times over the span of two minutes.” said Dr. Clark.
“Vacation, he's earned it, haven't had to take time off...well, took a bit off last year, but before then, not that I can recall.” said Bill.

“He's used up all his allotted vacation time.” said Dumbledore.

“Oh I was at 321 None-of-your-damn-business St.” said Fred.

“In the town of Mind-your-own-beeswax.” George said with a smirk.

“Ooh...” said Sirius. “Wrong thing to say.”

“Hey, maybe he got tired of the same smelling air we have here.” said Charlie.

“Shit.” said Remus.

“Watch your language.” said Sirius.
“Alright!” said Dennis.

“Nuts.” said Colin.

“Just say you went troll wrestling, she'd buy that.” said Katie.

“He has no business knowing, what sort of threat is that.” said Rivers. “But wait, the Ministry is interfering in a place they have no experience in. I forgot.” he added snidely.

“She thinks it's unfortunate my ass.” muttered Harry.

“Harry...” said Mrs. McFinn.

“Sorry.”

“We'll get your bags for you.” said Fred.

“Don't bother leaving a forwarding address.” said George.

“Please forget to write!” said the twins waving to where Umbrdige was sitting earlier.
And doing a poor job of it, even for a rank amateur teacher.” said Rivers.

“I didn't want him to get fired.” said Hermione.

A few the younger years looked a little skeptical.

“I hope it was good.” said one of them. “I don't want Hagrid to get in trouble.”

“Wonder what they were, we never did get a class.” said Harry. “These came out the day after he came back.”

“So everything that we're about to here really will happen in the future.” said Hermione looking at the books in awe.

“Perhaps, they may or may not happen, it all depends on our actions here on out.” said Dumbledore.

“Oh, this won't be good.” said McGonagall to Flitwick.
“Sure Hagrid, whatever you say.” said Ron with a smile.

“Porlocks don' like to be seen by people, can't really take care of them, they take care of themselves just fine.” said Hagrid.

“What's a knarl?” asked Mrs. McFinn.

“It's kind of like a hedgehog with manic paranoia.” said Dr. Clark.

“That doesn't sound promising.” said Ernie.

“Save the rest of the discussion for later, he needs his rest if he wants to recuperate.” said Madam Pomfrey.

“Still don't know me own strength.” said Hagrid.

“I didn' say that.” said Hagrid. “Well, least not the second part.”
“Aww, that's sweet.” said Sirius.

“Three more chapters and that'll be it.” said Dumbledore.

“Huh?” asked Zacharias, “What are we doing ending it so early?”

“It has been decided, are going to take the rest of the books, at the very least this one, slower.” said Dumbledore.

“What are we supposed to do with the rest of the day?” asked Zacharias.

“I think what some of the Ravenclaws are doing is a fine idea?” asked Dumbledore.

“What's that?”

“Having a discussion about the things you have learned that day.” said Dumbledore. “A lot of very valuable information has been shared, and it would be a waste to let it slip away.”

“Meanwhile, you'll be talking to Glacier if you want.” said Sirius whispering into Harry's ear.

“Okay.” said Harry with a smile.
“This is going to be so amazing! We're going to hear about the future!” said Hermione excitedly.

“You didn't sound all that excited when it came to Divination.” said Ron with a smirk.

“This isn't guesswork, this would have happened if Umbridge hadn't done what she done.” said Hermione.

“So...you are only excited about things that are definite?” said Temepest with a look over at the bushy haired girl. “I do not recommend going into research as a career.”

“I agree.” said Rudolph.

“But research is definite.” said Hermione.

“I think we'd better look into how she's sleeping or eating, she's losing her wits.” said Snape.

“I'd tell you off, but I agree...something isn't right.” said Flitwick. “Is she only worried about the attack on young Harry, or is it something else?”

“Here's One Thousand Magical Herbs and Fungi book.” said Leroy, not hearing the quiet conversation the two Heads of House were saying. “Look up a...Quivering Suratra blossom.”

“There's no such thing.” said Hermione proudly, “I've memorized....”

“Well, if there is no such thing,” said Rudolph digging in his cloak pocket. “Then what is this?”

He brought out a crumpled looking orange flower with a black stem, in his steady hand the flower quivered slightly. “This isn't in your book and isn't in any book.”

“Then how do you know what it's called?” asked Hermione.

“We named it.” said Leroy.

“If you aren't ready to discover new things, and develop new spells, you're going to live a pretty boring life.” said Rudolph. “Though, it's a little odd that you would disregard new things, it sounds as if a time or two you have developed a spell or two on your own...”

Hermione looked down while Luna smiled softly.

“She's been touched by Romperguffs, they tend to make you switch your thoughts around, she should be fine by Christmas time.” said Luna with a dreamy smile.

Hermione frowned over to Luna.

“What does that plant do?” asked Neville to the two Potter uncles.
“We're not all together sure what it does, what we do know is that it prevents allergic reactions due to pollen and whatnot. I have hay fever like a madman come fall.” said Rudolph.

“And you work with plants?” asked Harry.

“And I work with plants.” said Rudolph with a bright smile.

“Alright, next one, Chapter Twenty-One” said Officer McFinn.

“Tell me that you punch Malfoy in the eye.” said Sirius pleadingly.

“How am I supposed to know?” asked Harry.

First paragraph, second sentence, second comma.

“Would just about buried us if someone knocked into it.” said Ron.

“It wasn't that big.” said Hermione.

“It was close.” said Ron.

End of first paragraph.

“How much do you want to bet that it would be Fred and George.” said Bill with a sour look.

“Maybe we just would like the two of them come out and play.” said the twins.

Dialogue line.

Second sentence.

“If you had thrown that, I would have said nice shot, I'm thinking magic would have been involved.” said Chief Hawkeye.

Dialogue line.

Third paragraph.

“I wonder why I didn't just melt the snow before me?” said Hermione.

“Who knows.” said Parvati.
Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

“Somehow, I'm a little concerned.” said Mrs. McFinn.

“That's normal.” said Remus.

Fourth paragraph.

Dialogue set, fourth sentence, first dash.

“I agree on that point.” said Charlie.

“You would.” said his family.

Dialogue set, end of fourth sentence.

Professor Flitwick stifled a giggle.

End of dialogue set.

“You doing better about keeping a secret, Hagrid.” said Sirius with a smile.

Fifth paragraph, first sentence.

“They were just too sleepy.” said Fred.

“Yeah, we would have woke them up for you.” said George.

“A little firecracker under their tables...” said Fred.

“Maybe a few in their shorts...” said George.

Fifth paragraph, second sentence, first semi-colon.

“We were so happy when you came back.” said Lee.

“It was too easy to go into the forest for different things without you.” said George.

“No challenge.” said Fred.
Parvati and Lavender waved their hands quickly. “We didn't...this didn't happen.”

“Ah...oops...” said Officer McFinn after he read the passage.

Hagrid looked down.

Harry sighed and covered his eyes.

“Hagrid, we talked about this a week or two ago, did we not?” asked Dumbledore. “I had warned you about this.”

“I know.” said Hagrid, his voice low.

“Harry, Ron, Hermione and quite a few other students do support your classes. You've only been teaching for two years, once you find out what students can handle than it will go smoothly. You have the entire...well, a good portion of the staff is on your side and willing to help you.” said Dumbledore with a kind smile. “Though, you're lesson plan was excellent from what I read.”

Hagrid smiled.

“You are improving.” said Dumbledore with an even brighter smile.

“It would be a living hell.” said Remus muttering to himself.

“Future Hagrid should have been brought to me.” mumbled Madam Pomfrey.

“This hasn't happened, Poppy.” said Professor Sprout with a smile.

Dr. Clark looked over to Harry and ruffled his hair. “You worry too much.”

“It's a hobby of mine.” said Harry with a slight smile.
“Urgh, why do you have that?” asked Mrs. McFinn.

“Yeh'll find out.” said Hagrid with a smile.

Dialogue set.

“Now is the time to turn right back around and head back to the castle.” said Leroy with a snicker.

Dialogue set, second sentence.

“Never mind, go forward.” said Rudolph quietly with a smile.

End of dialogue set.

Eighth paragraph, first sentence.

A few people snickered into their hands.

End of eighth paragraph.

“Can’t fault you there.” said Sirius.

Dialogue set.

“I know I should trust him, but the skwerts keep popping in my head.” said Remus to Sirius.

“Me too..” said Sirius.

Dialogue line.

“Yeah, like the hippogriffs, that one went mad...” said Fred.

“Oh, wait, it was trained wasn't it?” said George.
“You just didn't pay attention to the teacher.” said the twins.

Ninth paragraph.

“I would never admit that.” said a seventh year Gryffindor.

“Me either...I would even force my face to not look like that.” said another Gryffindor student.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“None of your business.” said Colin.

Dialogue set, second sentence.

“We love you Hagrid.” said Angelina with a clap.

End of dialogue set.

Tenth paragraph.

Eleventh paragraph, first sentence.

“It's not any warmer in there.” said Hagrid. “But the tree tops are so thick, it stops the snow from fallin’.”

End of eleventh paragraph.

“You need to get further in than that to get attacked by anything.” said Harry.

“You should not know that from experience.” said Remus leaning forward to look at him.

Dialogue set.

“Oh, yeah...I'm set at ease...” said Sirius with a snicker.
“It's not a sound you feel at ease hearing.” said Dumbledore with a knowing smile.

“All the peering in the world won't help.” said Professor Sprout in a whisper to Professor McGonagall.

“I only hope not too many of those children see it.” said Flitwick.

“What the bloody hell is that?” asked Fred.

“FREDRICK!” said Mrs. Weasley shortly.

“That's a thestral.” said Dumbledore with a slight smile.

“What's a thestral?” asked Colin.

“I think Hagrid will explain what they are most adequately.” said Dumbledore.

“I was afraid I was finally snapping.” said Harry.

“Boy, do I sound like an idiot.” said Ron.

“Not many people can see them, Mr. Weasley.” said Professor Vector. “Count your blessings.”
“Three in a class, that's just wrong.” said Dr. Nicodemus.

Dialogue set.

“That would confuse the heck out of me.” said Dean.

Seventeenth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Be respectful brat.” growled Moody.

“He didn't know the requirements to see them.” said Dumbledore.

“Still, smarten up or someone is going to take you down early in life just so they don't have to deal with you.” said Nightstrike.

Eighteenth paragraph.

“I think I'm going to have a nightmare or two.” said Lavender.

Dialogue line.

“Nothing that's going to hurt you, they're quite gentle, the young are even a bit playful.” said Dumbledore.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, second sentence.

“Oh no...” said Tempest. “I can feel a Trelawney reference coming.”

End of dialogue set.

“The misfortune has happened to you before you can see it.” said McGonagall and Tempest together.
“Bad pun.” said Harry quietly.

“They make for a grand entrance.” said Dumbledore.

“Relax, they only eat carrion.” said Lionus. “Living meat is not in their natural diet.”

“Better hand me a calming draught.” said Rivers.

“An ill thestral might be the better alternative.” said Professor Snape darkly.
“Racist little bitch.” muttered Leroy.

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Maybe Umbridge should turn up her hearing aid.” said Dennis with a nervous giggle.

Twenty-second paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Twenty-third paragraph.

“I'm going to enjoy visiting her.” said Chief Hawkeye with a smirk.

“What level is she on?” asked Nightstrike eagerly.

“We're keeping her on level one right now, and in a safe room till we get back. She might be upped in the ranks, it all depends.” said Chief Hawkeye. “I think perhaps Level Seven will be her final destination...”

“But this hasn't happened yet.” said Hermione. “She may be a completely foul woman, but you can't punish her for things she didn't do yet.”

“Oh that's where you are wrong young lady, seeing this, I can see and learn what sort of woman she is, when not curbed. Besides, she's there permanently anyway, anything further would just be a perk for us.” said Chief Hawkeye.

“So...once you go, you're stuck there?” asked Hermione a frown on her face.

“Not for a small part, there are some that go through an intense...we'll say rehabilitation process. Some only stay for a few days or year like that caretaker of yours...but level seven...she'll be there until we can see she has only one year left to live...that is...if I decide that or not.”

“Will you be the chief for that long?” asked Ron.

“Any criminals that get arrested while I'm in charge, I choose how long they stay. Even if a future chief says that she has had enough, they can't do a thing.” said Chief Hawkeye. “My reasons, biased or otherwise, stands the test of time and cannot be rescinded...there's a process if I want to give pardons, but I can't think of anyone that really had earned it or deserves it right off the bat.”
“I need to step out, before I lose my temper again.” said Rivers standing up and walking out.

Harry's hands were clenched together in a tight fist, his once sunny mood was now replaced with a seething anger.

“You alright?” asked Sirius.

“Fine.” said Harry darkly.

“You're not fine.” said Sirius, pulling Harry close to him in a tight embrace.

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

“Every creature is dangerous, 'cept flobberworms. Guess the Ministry doesn't want people to defend themselves against creatures either.” said Remus.

“Fudge...you may be finding yourself staying at Hell's Garden for another little stint. I'll let you see how the end of the books go, to see the damage that you have done.” said Chief Hawkeye.

“I...I'm going back?” said Fudge looking fearful.

“You most certainly are, for how long, I don't quite have a time limit set yet.” said Chief Hawkeye, “but I'm thinking at least three weeks.”

Fudge paled considerably.

Twenty-fourth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“It takes a lot to provoke a thestral.” said Dumbledore. “You'd have to pull on their tail for about twenty minutes to really make them perturbed.”

“Who timed that?” asked Fred.

“Hmm...Uric the Oddball I believe, he had a penchant for timing things...” said Dumbledore.

Dialogue set.

Ginny muttered darkly to herself, causing her older twin brothers to lean away from her.
“Easy there shortcake.” said Fred.

“Save some for later.” said George.

Dialogue set.

Twenty-fifth paragraph.

Sirius pulled Harry towards himself, he could feel his godson practically tremble in anger.

Twenty-sixth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“How are you doing?” asked Remus looking over to Harry.

Harry said nothing, he was glaring at the floor furiously.

Give him some time.” said Sirius.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Twenty-seventh paragraph.

People had to restrain from glaring, this hadn't happened yet, she didn't say that.

“What a poisonous little brat you are.” said Dr. Nicodemus, he didn't have any qualms about what had or hadn't happened yet.

Twenty-eighth paragraph.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue set, first paragraph.

“I need to step out.” said Mr. Weasley standing up and stalking out of the Great Hall.

“How are you doing?” asked Remus looking over to Harry.

Harry said nothing, he was glaring at the floor furiously.

“Give him some time.” said Sirius.
“That...that...bitch!” shrieked Emmeline Vance, Mrs. Weasley and Mrs. McFinn.

“Whoa, mum.” said Bill looking at his mother in shock.

“Who cares what a student thinks of them, they're fascinating creatures.” said Nightstrike.

“Oh...wait, I didn't mean it like that...”

“I talk that way around teachers all the time.” said Neville. “I'm not scared of Hagrid, or thestrals.”

“I want to go and scrub the daylights out of my shoulder now.” said Neville cringing.

“She didn't say it.” said Zacharias.

“Knowing that she would have just makes me sick.” said Neville.

“Here's a review in one day.” said Harry flicking his middle finger up.

“Harry!” said Mrs. McFinn as Dr. Clark, Sirius, Remus and Officer McFinn snickered.

“I love you!” said Rudolph gasping for air as Leroy howled with laughter.
End of dialogue set.

Neville blushed slightly.

Dialogue set.

Hermione looked up at Hagrid. “I...I...”

“It's alright, I'm glad yeh lot were angry fer me.” said Hagrid with a kind smile.

“This didn't happen yet.” said Zacharias in a bored voice.

“Stuff it Smith.” said the twins.

Dialogue line.

“I'm not on her side! I'm not on her side!” shouted Ron.

Dialogue set.

Hermione blanched.

Dialogue line.

Thirtieth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Hermione looked ashamed of herself.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

“That is not amusing.” growled Snape to Malfoy. “Don't ever let me catch you saying that in the future.”
Malfoy looked down.

Thirty-first paragraph.

Dialogue set.

“I hope Harry puts the snow back down behind him.” said Dennis.

Thirty-second paragraph, first sentence.

“Oh good, maybe the stressful part is over with.” said Leroy.

Thirty-second paragraph, third sentence, end of parenthesis.

“It’s hard, but all you have to do is occupy his time with something else on the other end of the castle.” said Remus.

“Like siccing him on the Slytherin prefect.” said Sirius with a smirk.

Thirty-second paragraph, third sentence, second parenthesis.

“Yeah, you two were almost sickening.” said Fred.

“Too respectful towards your teachers and upper years.” said George.

“Made us so ashamed of you.” said Fred.

“We had to make up for that.” said George.

“You have no idea what extra work you had put us through...” said Fred.

“...pranking everyone we saw.” said George.

Thirty-second paragraph, end of third sentence.

“You don't hear Hermione's opinions.” said Lavender.

“I don't complain.” said Hermione.

“Yes you do.” said Ron and Harry.
End of thirty-second paragraph.

Dialogue line.

People rolled their eyes and shook their heads.

Thirty-third paragraph, third sentence.

“Good idea, away from Umbridge and Malfoy...have yourself a proper magical Christmas for once.” said Sirius with a smile.

Thirty-third paragraph, fourth sentence.

Leroy whistled. “Wow, and you love this place.”

Thirty-third paragraph, fifth sentence.

“We don't want to share the holidays with the old hag either.” said Katie.

Thirty-third paragraph, sixth paragraph.

“I love it, it's fun.” said Dr. Clark. “I've only broken my leg...twice.”

“Well, doesn't that sound like a safe pastime.” said Ron looking at Hermione.

End of thirty-third paragraph.

“Oh my god...seriously, you need a vacation away from those two.” said Rudolph looking over to Harry.

Hermione and Ron looked shameful.

Thirty-fourth paragraph, first sentence.

“Actually, I was planning on you coming and staying with me.” said Sirius.
Harry smiled softly, “I would have liked that.” said Harry with a smile.

Thirty-fourth paragraph, second sentence.

“I wouldn't have let him spend the holidays alone, we all would have gone to Headquarters.” said Mrs. Weasley.

“Thanks Molly.” said Sirius with a smile.

End of thirty-fourth paragraph.

“I'd rather bean him with the cracker.” said Sirius.

Thirty-fifth paragraph, first sentence.

“Oh, that's nice.” said Alicia.

“Wait till you hear the decorations.” said Officer McFinn with a smirk.

End of thirty-fifth paragraph.

Sirius snorted. “I hope I get a few of those.”

“I'll smash 'em if I see 'em.” said Harry.

Thirty-sixth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, second sentence.

“Typical boy...” said Mrs. McFinn.

End of dialogue set.

Thirty-seventh paragraph.
“Why am I telling him again?” asked Angelina, “I've had him temporarily replaced long before that.”

“Ignore it, things change.” said Officer McFinn.

“Thirty-eighth paragraph.

“That's what happened when I told him then too.” said Angelina.

“Thirty-ninth paragraph.

“Oh, if she wasn't a girl, I would have kicked her.” said Harry.

“Fortieth paragraph.

“I'm sorry…” said Angelina, her face clouded with regret.
“Good plan, you’d only forget it once the new term starts.” said Remus.

“How about some parchment quick? Let’s see, Tell...Smith...that...we’re...only...recapping... everything...at...every...meeting...” said Fred and George loudly. “Thanks ’Mione, just needed a little reminder for later.”

Zacharias growled at the twins.

“Sounds like they’re doing a heck of a lot better than the first time.” said Rudolph.

Neville smiled proudly.

The teachers began to smile at each other, though Snape only rolled his eyes.
“Can't be precise shot in three lessons.” said Lionus.

“Bet that'll perk them right up.” said Charlie.

“I thought the D.A. had already done patronuses.” said a third years quietly.

“We...may...have been puffing up the resume...a bit...” said the twins with a smile.

“Oooh...” said Katie and Alicia.

“Oooh...” said the twins and Lee.

“Not what you want to happen.” said Fred.

“Awww....” said the fourth year and up boys together.

“That bites...” said a seventh year Ravenclaw.
“My son did know all that...” mumbled Mr. Diggory. They had been silent quite a bit in this book and were even absent for a few days.

Fifty-first paragraph.

“Sorry...” said Cho softly.

Dialogue set.

“You survive.” said Zacharias quietly.

“I get more help than others.” said Harry.

Fifty-second paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“They first Christmas is always the hardest.” said Sirius and Remus.

Fifty-third paragraph.

Dialogue set.

“Can't, no matter how hard I try.” said Harry quietly.

“It's alright sweetheart.” said Mrs. McFinn soothingly.

“There's things I wish I could forget.” said Dr. Clark. “But they just stay with you, all you can do is pick yourself back up and start swinging.”

Fifty-fourth paragraph.

“You wouldn't be heartless, dear boy...you'd be human.” said Dumbledore.
“That happens sometimes.” said Bill.

“Sorry.” said Harry.

“It's alright, you didn't say it anyway.” said Luna dreamily. “Besides, I call it a term of endearment.”

“Aww, isn't that cute, look how red he's getting!” said Sirius with a laugh.

“I want to know what he was doing with that half hour.” said Rudolph with a teasing smile.

“Didn't know you could get a deeper shade of red than that.” said Sirius marveling at the shade of crimson that Harry was turning.
“Maybe it's a good thing that Sirius didn't raise you, he'd be smug about it...to the guys, not the girl.” said Remus quietly to Harry.

Dialogue line.

Sixty-first paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Sixty-second paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Well, doesn't that sound supportive...” said Hannah.

Sixty-third paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Granger! A little tact would be nice.” said McGonagall in shock at the book, not the actual girl sitting to her right.

Sixty-fourth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Were they like this when you started dating Ginny?” asked Leroy.

“No...the Weasleys were very understanding.” said Harry with a wink over to Ginny who giggled.

Sixty-fifth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Sixty-sixth paragraph.

“He's acting like any normal boy would.” said Flitwick with a smile.
“Really, I wanna know what happened.” said Sirius eagerly.

“It didn't happen.” said Harry.

“Well, for a part, it's a good thing, the other part, sort of a shame.” said Sirius.

“Oh, well, never mind.” said Sirius.

“According to your Grandmother, male Potters are pretty excellent kissers, I don't know that for a fact personally.” said Sirius.

“Sure you don't.” said Remus.

“Shut up.” said Sirius quickly.

“Now there's a story I want to know about.” said Harry with a smile.

“Sirius was sleeping and he was having a pretty interesting dream about a certain sixth year Slytherin girl. Well, your dad decided to say things to him while he was sleeping and got Sirius...a little...well...he threw his arms up, pulled your dad down and kissed full on the lips.” said Remus with a laugh.

“I'm going to get you.” said Sirius darkly.

“And how would you know?” asked Charlie with a smirk.
“Oh, I'm betting that's going to open a few dark lonely paths you don't want to go down.” said Terry.

“All depends on who you're kissing.” said Mrs. McFinn looking at Dr. Clark out of the corner of her eye.

“And sometimes, you are no better, young lady.” said Dr. Nicodemus in a mutter.

“Someone who's a little torn up about something.” said Dr. Clark.

“They're boys Hermione, we're lucky if we can get them to remember our birthday.” said Mrs. McFinn.

“I remembered your birthday and our anniversary.” said Officer McFinn.

“And I will always be the luckiest woman in the world.” said Mrs. McFinn with a smile.

“Wow, if that's true, that's a lot for a sixteen year old girl to be feeling.” said Leroy.
“I'd explode personally.” said Ron.

Seventy-first paragraph.

Ron laughed out loud.

Dialogue line.

“You get close sometimes.” said Charlie quietly.

Dialogue line.

“And that's what makes you better than a few other blokes in the world.” said Sirius quietly.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Seventy-second paragraph.

“Yeah, I would be too.” said Remus with a chortle.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Not what she meant.” said Sirius.

Dialogue line.

Seventy-third paragraph.

“First crushes are too precious.” Professor Sprout.
“Well, if all this didn't happen, he would have wanted to ask her.” said Hermione.

“Not the ideal situation.” said Sirius.

Hermione buried her face in her hands.

“You don’t' want his advice on girls.” said Remus quickly.

“The first boy to actually see her as a girl, I suppose.” said Harry. “We normally see her as Hermione.”

“I saw you as a girl...” said Ron.

“It didn't sound like that last year.” said Hermione.
“No more than you when you're hungry.” said Ginny with a smile.

“Well you agreeing won't help things at all.” said Katie.

“I'm thinking the me in the books had more on my mind.” said Harry.

“Careful about thinking that.” said Sirius.

“Knock it off.” hissed Remus.

“I thinking she would be trying to figure out her feelings.” said Emmeline.

“That's what happens when you ask a girl to translate, sometimes they get it, sometimes they don't.” said Harry.

“I would love that class.” said Ron quietly. “Girls are nutters sometimes.”

“Oh, I'm betting this will be another doozy.” said Hannah.
“Wh...What?” asked Ernie.

“He wouldn't have given anyone his cards, if there was one thing in the world he was stingy about, it was his cards.” said Mr. Diggory with a watery smile.

“Now that's a stupid trade and thought.” said Sirius. “I'd smack your behind if you traded away that broom.”

“I'll never get rid of it.” said Harry.

“Better not, I risked a lot to get that broom.” said Sirius.

“No more whatever you eat before bed.” said Leroy.

“Oh, I'm bettin' this is going to be even better.” said Hermione with a giggle.

“Hang on...” said Dr. Clark.

Harry looked up, his face pale.

“Tell us that the awful parts are over.” said Rivers coming back in, with Mr. Weasley following.

“It's done, now we're into dreams again.” said Ron.

“Oh, these are fun.” said Mr. Weasley.
Eighty-first paragraph.
Harry leaned even further in the bowl. It sounds like he's dreaming he was a...a snake...but why?
The others in the bowl looked at Harry, and they saw with confusion Harry's eyes widen slightly.
What was Harry thinking?

End of eighty-first paragraph.

“This is getting scary.” said a first year Gryffindor.

Eighty-second paragraph.

Eighty-third paragraph.

“Harry...” Remus looking confused at the boy.

Eighty-fourth paragraph.

Harry paled as the other people in the room gasped.

Eighty-fifth paragraph.

“Move over.” said Rudolph hopping into the bowl to wrap his arms around Harry.

“Me too.” said Leroy reaching over to grasp Harry's knees. Meanwhile, Harry's breathing was beginning to quicken and become shallow.

Eighty-sixth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Eighty-seventh paragraph.

Sirius reached over and massaged the scar on Harry's head soothingly.
“Breathe Harry...come on, easy there...” said Rudolph rubbing Harry's back.

“Got a paper sack handy?” asked Dr. Clark.

“Mean, something like this?” asked Remus waving his wand and a brown paper sack appeared.

“Thanks, here you go, just breathe into that.” said Dr. Clark handing the bag over. But Harry didn't take it, he didn't even remove his gaze from the floor.

Snape stood up and walked over to the bowl, he one fluid movement, he took out a phial of Calming Draught and spelled the contents straight into Harry's stomach.

Harry's breath eased slightly and he looked around.

“Kindly refrain from...freaking out...” said Snape with a cold look.

Harry closed his eyes and leaned back into the bowl, the arms of his family surrounding him.

“You'll be fine, you'll be just fine.” said Sirius over and over again.

The Weasleys fell silent.

“Oh...ARTHUR!” said Mrs. Weasley worriedly, wrapping her arms around her husband.

“How did Harry know it was Mr. Weasley?” asked Dean.

“He must have seen something...” said Seamus.

“That would have scared the crap out of me.” said Ron weakly.
“That didn't sound like any normal nightmare he gets.” said Ron worriedly.

Lionus and Nicodemus looked over at Harry, he hadn't moved, he kept his eyes shut and face was slowly becoming calmer and more serene.

Sirius brushed his lips against Harry's slightly cold sweat covered forehead.

“You're not fine.” said the teachers together.

“There is something wrong with you.” said Remus quietly.

“Good job, Weasley.” said Madam Pomfrey.
“Wonder if Filch tried to give him a detention if he got caught.” said Remus.
“You can just outrun him and brush him off.” said Sirius. “He can't stop you if it's an emergency.”

“I'll remember that the next time you need one.” said Snape with a sneer. He was a slightly concerned when Potter didn't respond.

“I'd be questioning it too.” said Professor Flitwick.

“No one saw what you saw.” said Sirius.

“Can't say the boy doesn't want things to be checked out. And if they want him to calm down, they had better look in on Arthur, wherever he's at.” said Dr. Nicodemus.

“But if it was just a dream?” asked Zacharias snidely.

“They had better check nonetheless, he'll have mental breakdown if he isn't reassured with proof that everything is alright.” said Dr. Nicodemus.

“That won't calm him down.” said Dr. Nicodemus.
“Then he needs to be brought to me for some rest and some attention.” said Madam Pomfrey.

“Harry...Harry? You okay?” asked Sirius giving his godson's shoulder a squeeze.

Harry opened his eyes slowly and looked forward. His face was calm.

“Are you alright?” asked Sirius.

“Fine.” said Harry.

“What were you doing?” asked Lionus.

Harry sighed quietly. “Just...rearranging things.”

Sirius looked at Harry with confusion. “Rearranging what?”

“My thoughts,” said Harry easing into the bowl, “Setting up a bit stronger defense...and...other things.”

Dumbledore and Dr. Nicodemus exchanged a significant look.
“Last one before we call it a day.” said Dumbledore noticing how ragged Harry looked.

“But it's not even lunch time yet.” moaned Zacharias.

“Deal with it.” said Dr. Nicodemus.

“Careful you don't make yourself sick moving around that fast.” said Madam Pomfrey worriedly.

“Finally, we get to see you freak out like a little kid.” said Nightstrike.

Mrs. Weasley held onto her husband even tighter.

“Just my normal midnight discussion group, I shouldn't wonder.” said Dumbledore with a smile.
“Fakers, every last one of them.” said Sirius with a snicker.

“Guess at that part, he still didn't want to look at me.” said Harry glumly.
Dumbledore looked down regretfully.

“That's no nightmare, I've had nightmares, that wasn't one.” said Neville.

“Normally I say don't interrupt her, if you know what's good for you, but in this case, interrupt her.” said Sirius.

“I don't blame you, I'd be quite miffed as well, if he wasn't paying attention to me.” said Remus.
“I would listen...” said Dumbledore quietly.

“Probably worried that this did happen.” said Moody.
“Worry about that part later, save my husband!” said Mrs. Weasley frantically.

“I think I would be hoping that it had happened that way.” said Dumbledore. “As opposed to the alternative.”

“That's what he was trying to tell you!” said Fred and George quickly. “Go find dad and get him some help!”

“You should not know that little bit of trivia.” said Dr. Clark.

“Yeah, I'd like to know that too.” said a third year Gryffindor.
“Told you, fakers.” said Sirius.

“So...they're spies.” said Dr. Clark.

“In a sense, Headmasters and Headmistresses have used their portrait positions for many many years.” said Dumbledore. “We are a castle full of children, we need to be able to see a potential threat coming and deal with it accordingly.”

“What you need to do, after what you plan with the bird, is to talk to the boy.” said Dr. Nicodemus.

“I'm not even going to begin to think about that.” said Charlie.

“We concur.” said Fred and George.

Dumbledore only sat in thought. So this would have happened without Delores deciding to bring these books into the school? Well, it's a good thing for everyone that this happened...Harry has put up stronger defenses, and have received a family for all of Delores' meddling. I still have to make up my poor behavior to the boy.
“What the hell?” muttered a seventh year Hufflepuff.

“You've been busted, just give it up.” said Ron.

The Weasley children scrambled over to the father's seat and laid a hand on their father.

“I'm fine kids.” said Mr. Weasley easily.

“Right now you are dad, but apparently not later.” said Bill.

Mrs. Weasley and Ginny both whimpered.

Fred and George wrapped an arm around their little brother. “We'd be hoping it was all a dream too.”
“I'm going to polish the daylights out of that clock when we get home.” said Mrs. Weasley tears in her eyes.

“Oh, she would stare at that clock until I came home during the War.” said Mr. Weasley. “I'm sure she would be watching the clock again.”

“Everyone is sitting at mortal peril.” said Mrs. Weasley somberly.

“He's not going to.” said George quietly as he gripped his father's sleeve. “He's not.”

“Oh boy, another Portkey.” said Chief Hawkeye.

“He never wants to wake.” said McGonagall shaking her head.

“He's a right old bastard sometimes.” said Sirius.
“Too bad, do your job.” said Professor Sprout.

“You're a portrait, how are you tired?” muttered Ron.

“Some how, the phrase 'Shame on you,” never really gets taken seriously.” said Tempest.

“Only if we can watch.” said a snickering Slytherin student.

“I was told not to destroy his picture, would have done it...if I could get away from it, he's a right snarky old...” said Sirius with a sneer.

“Hope he yells loud, I'm probably asleep in another room.” said Sirius.

Remus smirked, He knew the first few weeks after the kids went back to school that Sirius would sneak into Harry and Ron's room and sleep on Harry's bed. If this had happened at the beginning of the school year, Phineas would have found him easily.
“And it's a good thing he did, no one would have been able to find him till he was too late, I suspect.” said Madam Bones.

“I hope not.” said Harry slowly.

“Harry and Floo travel don't go well together.” said Rudolph with a smirk.

“Who's she?” asked a third year Hufflepuff.

“Must be Umbridge.” said another Hufflepuff.

“But how did she know?” asked another third year.

“Mrs. Norriss! She must have went and got her and Filch!” said a fourth year Ravenclaw.

“Yeah, I didn't break my promise and burn his picture.” said Sirius.

“Finally!” shouted a good number of the students.
“Wait, what?” asked Lee who was one of the students that had shouted.

“Okay, I've been mad at him too...but not like that.” said Sirius.

Harry looked firmly at the ground...now he was prepared, he could set up the necessary defenses in his mind, yet still allow himself to peer through the connection, as if he were looking through a two-way mirror.

“Vile little...” muttered Bill.

“Or...maybe I'm up...” said Sirius sheepishly.

“Sorry we're snapping there.” said George.

“But if anything happened to Dad...” said Fred.

“We'd freak out.” said George.

“And then we'd trash whoever did it.” said the twins together.
“Yeah, a repeat of second year would not be a good thing.” said Neville.

“We wouldn't do that! We'd be shocked as hell sure, but we'd be singing your praises that you told Dumbledore what you saw.” said Fred.

“Though...you really don't want us singing, so that would be a poor way of thanking you.” said George.

“Mate, we won't attack you.” said Fred.

“Ron did, but that was cause of something that turned his brain into pudding.” said George.

“That would be unwise, to know about your father being in the hospital before they even informed your mother.” said Dr. Nicodemus.
“The Ministry will think will matter.” said Tonks.

“Yeah, good luck with that.” said Sirius.

“We know that, we respect that...but it wouldn't make his potential sacrifice worth him dying for.” said Remus. “If he could, I shudder to think, be killed doing something that were to hinder You-Know-Who, but you kids went in and destroyed all his work...his death would be meaningless.”

The Weasley twins looked at the floor, they didn't rightly care about the Order if their dad was injured, but...they supposed that they would stay quiet...but it's easy to think about this when it's not their parent.

“Not something I should have said around Harry.” said Sirius covering his eyes.

Sirius blinked.

“Uh...he's Fred.” said Fred pointing to George.

“Don't be throwing me under the Knight Bus, you're Fred.” said George.

“Don't be petty, just apologize to the man.” said Fred.

“I'm George!” said George. “You apologize!”
“You're getting better.” said Remus proudly.

“This hasn't even happened yet, and I still want to smack him.” said Sirius looking at the squabbling twins.

“Giving a two glass bottles to a pair of hostile twins isn't wise.” said Dr. Clark.

“You'd have less to do in a waiting room.” said Mrs. McFinn looking at her deceased husband.

“You feel guilty about us knowing about our dad, hell we're better off knowing.” said Ginny.

“It wasn't you, it was the snake.” said Sirius soothingly.

“Not your fault either, though...I would personally pay to see Dumbledore get his ass kicked.” said Lionus with a smile.

Dumbledore looked over to Lionus, a small frown on his face but he looked down at the floor.
“Still alive? That doesn't sound good.” said Charlie tightening his grip on his father's shoulder.

The family tightened themselves around Mr. Weasley.

Sirius pulled Harry towards him, wrapping his arms around his godson.

No one was saying anything, all they could do, despite this taking place in the future, they hoped Mr. Weasley came through alright. Most of the students were quite fond of him.

“Thank Merlin.” said Angelina.
“Don't blame you there.” said Leroy.

Mrs. Weasley stood up and pulled Harry out of Sirius' arms and held him in her own.

“Thank you...oh thank you...” she said, tears pouring down her face and settling on his chest. He was much taller since the last time she remembered hugging him.

Harry hugged her back, and whispered, “I didn't do anything yet.”

“But you would have...and...thank you for that.” said Mrs. Weasley softly.

Officer McFinn gave them a good long while for Mrs. Weasley to express her gratitude. Then started up the reading again.

“I don't deserve it, I future me is probably...disgusted with myself that I...” said Harry.

But Mrs. Weasley only held him tighter.

“I can't quite see the mutt being disappointed with that.” said Snape with a small sneer.
“Oh tell me that you're coming to an adult with your problems, PLEASE TELL ME!” said Rudolph grasping his hands together.

Fifty-seventh paragraph.

“Get back here.” said Sirius pulling Harry back down to where he sat. “I'm happy you got talked to me. You'll see...I'll make you feel better.”

Fifty-eighth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Well...I'm not off to a great start...” said Sirius with a weak chuckle.

Dialogue set.

Remus reached over and ran his fingers through Harry's hair.

Fifty-ninth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Somehow, I don't think I'm helping.” said Sirius shaking his head.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, first sentence.

“I need more practice.” said Sirius.

“You're trying to reassure him that everything is going fine, it's not your fault that he's not willing to let the adults handle things.” said Remus, then with a kind smile over to Harry. “And it's not yours for not trusting adults to do the right thing.”

Dialogue set, second sentence.
“You think I'm going to go to sleep after the last dream I had, you are out of your bloody mind.” said Harry.

End of dialogue set.

Sixtieth paragraph.

“Ever get the feeling I just let Harry down?” asked Sirius in a crushed tone.

“Yup.” said Dr. Clark.

Sirius leaned his head on top of Harry's. “I promise to do better.”

“You'd better.” said Harry with a slight smile.

Sixty-first paragraph.

“I really didn't do a good job reassuring him.” said Sirius bowing his head.

“Not if he's going to force himself to be sleep deprived.” said Dr. Nicodemus. “And with him going off food at times of high stress and that Umbridge woman...that would have sent him into a mental breakdown of epic proportions.”

Harry looked at the Ranger doctor in confusion as he felt himself being pulled even further into Sirius' arms.

“I'm sorry...I'm so sorry.” said Sirius.

“Just...don't placate me...actually help me.” said Harry softly.

“I will. I promise I will.”

Sixty-second paragraph, third sentence, first comma.

“Being physically and emotionally exhausted will do that.” said Tempest.

“Indeed, he should be put to rest.” said Firenze.

End of sixty-second paragraph.

“Pink spiky hair is all the rage.” said Tonks said running her fingers through her hair.

“It's all the rage because people with no fashion sense says it's in.” growled Moody.
“Says the man that hasn't changed his wardrobe since the first muggle World War.” said Tonks muttering darkly.

Sixty-third paragraph.

“Sorry 'bout that.” said Tonks.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Hermione giggled slightly.

Dialogue set.

“There's no escaping if people want information.” said Dumbledore with a small smile.

Sixty-fourth paragraph, first sentence.

“Nice.” said Tonks huffing with a mock frown.

“I don't think I wanted anymore questions.” said Harry.

Sixty-fourth paragraph, third sentence, first semi-colon, eleventh word.

“There's no escaping if people want information.” said Dumbledore with a small smile.

End of sixty-fourth paragraph.

Dialogue set, second sentence, first semi-colon.

“Sure, just shove the poor kid out into the freezing cold.” said Officer McFinn with a smirk.

End of dialogue set.
“Provided they're not bleeding all over the place and that they don't start sneezing fire.” said Charlie.

“Sneezing fire? That can happen?” asked Mrs. McFinn.

“Only if you have Dragon Pox.” said Charlie. “A really really bad case of it.”

Sixty-fifth paragraph.

“Don't let dad know they're there.” said Ron. “He'd sneak out of the hospital to go and see it.”

Dialogue line.

Sixty-sixth paragraph, second sentence.

“And how would you know the latest fashion?” asked Sirius teasingly.

“Baggy clothes that could fit a baby elephant are all the rage! Didn't you know that?” said Harry with a laugh.

End of sixty-sixth paragraph.

“And that's the way it will stay.” said Moody.

Dialogue set.

Sixty-seventh paragraph.

Sixty-eighth paragraph, second sentence.

“Strange how you have to remind yourself things like that.” said Mrs. McFinn with a giggle.

Sixty-eighth paragraph, third sentence, first comma.

“Huh?” said Mrs. McFinn.

“If this turns into that Doctor Who episode, I'm going to freak out every time I walk past a storefront window.” said Dr. Clark.

“What?” asked Sirius.
Dr. Clark stared at Sirius. “Can we have a TV at Night's Rest?”

“Uh...I think...we can work something out, may need Arthur's help.” said Sirius.

“You are going to watch all the Doctor Who episodes with me.” said Dr. Clark eagerly.

“Uh...yay...” said Sirius uneasily.

“You'll enjoy them.” said Harry with a smile. “Provided you get to watch the Tom Baker ones first.”

“Oh, he'll be in there, but I prefer Jon Pertwee.” said Dr. Clark. “It's a close first and second place though.” *

End of sixty-eighth paragraph.

Sixty-ninth paragraph.

Dialogue set, first sentence, second comma, eighth word.

“Give me time to blend in.” said Harry.

End of dialogue set.

Seventieth paragraph, second sentence, second comma.

“That's what I don't understand, Healers and well, muggle doctors get paid a lot of money, and they can't afford to subscribe to a few different magazines and keep them up to date?” said Hermione. “My parents keep the magazines up to date!”

Seventieth paragraph, fourth sentence, third comma.

“What the...a human teapot?” asked Dean.

End of seventieth paragraph.

“It's not boring there.” said Flitwick. “I'll grant it that.”

Seventy-first paragraph.

Dialogue line.
Dr. Clark looked slowly over to Ron.

“Yup, you're right, 'Nutters that cut people up.'” laughed Officer McFinn.

“Ridiculous sign.” said Snape quietly. “There are potions that require the cauldron to be well seasoned with other potion residues still within the metal.”

“So...if we want to catch her awake, we'll have to come to the hospital huh?” said Fred.

“Ooh, bet that's got to smart.” said Bill.

“Customer Service is not her forte.” said Mrs. McFinn.

Floor Guide.
“I don’t think I want to experience any of that stuff.” said Mrs. McFinn.

“I could probably handle the broom crashes and maybe some of the burns, but embedded spines? Regurgitation?” said Dr. Clark.

Note on bottom of Floor Guide.

“Your Welcome Witch is less than welcoming.” said Rudolph.

Seventy-seventh paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“So much for not talking about a patient’s medical status out in the open.” said Dr. Clark.

Seventy-eighth paragraph.

“Little muffin must have grabbed her parent’s wand.” said Dr. Nicodemus with a chuckle.

Dialogue line.

Seventy-ninth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Well, she sounded reasonably professional there.” said Charlie.

Dialogue line.

Eightieth paragraph, second sentence.

“Well, neither one of those can be good.” said Lee.
“Nonsense! Bring everyone in!” said Mr. Weasley happily.

“No way, Harry, you're family, you're coming in.” said the twins.

“Oh my...” said Mrs. McFinn cringing.

“Please tell me...no never mind don't tell me.” said Dr. Clark.

“Sounds like you're just on vacation.” said Bill.

“Really, that shouldn't be much of a shock.” said Sirius. “He was just attacked by a snake.”

“Not something to be happy about.” said Dr. Clark.
“What?” asked Dr. Clark.

“It beats having to find donors.” said Madam Pomfrey. “That in itself can be a bit tricky.”

“Oh...that poor man.” said Mrs. McFinn.

“I'm sorry, but I was more concerned about my husband.” said Mrs. Weasley looking at Remus with a slightly guilty look.

“Hasn't happened yet dear...” said Mr. Weasley soothingly. “It's alright, I'm not hurt.”

“Somethings can be a bit tricky.” said Remus looking at Harry fondly.

Sirius and Remus laughed softly.

“They would chat with you about other patients would they?” said Madam Bones with a slight smile.

“Well, I do know Augustus.” said Mr. Weasley. “So maybe he will talk to me about the different patients if I'm in his ward.”
“Sounds as if you were just given a parchment cut or something.” said Sirius with a chortle.

“Gee, you think?” groaned Zacharias.

“Don't elaborate.” said Hermione holding her stomach.

“No...don't talk about it.” said Hermione covering her ears.

“Somehow, I can picture the Minister having a hand in it.” said Chief Hawkeye grimly.

“Oh, if it did.” said Chief Hawkeye, now growling at Fudge.
“I was! Didn't you hear? It said I said it quietly.” said George.

“He had better not.” said Madam Bones sharply.

“Dear, don't go bothering them.” said Mrs. Weasley fondly.

“Oh...don't bring that up again.” said Leroy.

“Well, that's a short visit.” said Mrs. McFinn. “I normally spend three hours or so with people in the hospital.”

“Normally?” asked Mrs. Weasley.

“I had very altercation seeking boys.” said Mrs. McFinn sending Harry and Officer McFinn a smile.

“Mrs. Weasley rounded on the twins.

“This hasn't happened yet mum, can't be mad.” said the twins with cheeky grins.
“If they don't, they should.” muttered Mrs. Weasley.

“Odd obligation they have to you.” said Sirius with a smile.

“I must say, impressive bits of magic.” said Dumbledore. “I'm very thankful that you boys decided to not sell those.”

“Yeah, after we gave it some thought as to what Death Eaters would do with them, we decided against selling them.” said George.

“Well it did.” said Ginny.

“So...lucky for the Order in general.” said Mr. Weasley.

“And unlucky at the same time.” said Dumbledore.

“I was anticipating, but I was hoping he would not.” said Dumbledore.
Dialogue line.

Moody didn't argue with that statement.

“Yeah Harry, you're hilarious.” said the twins with a smile.

Dialogue line.

At least you still cared.” said Leroy quietly.

“I care very deeply for Harry.” said Dumbledore softly. He hoped that they didn't mention anything else between themselves, even though he talked to Harry about this weeks ago with Dr. Nicodemus, he hoped...

Dialogue set.

The hope Dumbledore was feeling was dashed.

The students turned and stared at Harry.

Harry gripped his hands together tightly, so tight that his hands began to tremble.

The people in the bowl turned to look at him, they looked horrified.

End of Chapter

“That's it I'm done for the day.” said Harry standing up and stalking out of the room.

“He's in your suite if you want to talk to him.” called Dr. Nicodemus.

The rest of the school looked numbly at the door after Harry had left.

“Bloody hell, he can't catch a break, can he?” said a second year Ravenclaw.

“The Dark Lord is not possessing him, that was Moody talking out of his hat.” said Lionus.

Sirius looked at the door to Entrance Hall, maybe there was something he could do. To perhaps make it up to him...well for something he hadn't done yet, but still...just dismissing him when the poor kid finally reached out for help, he'd have to do something, to make sure Harry didn't think it will happen now.
Harry hurried up the stairs to their suite and slammed the door shut behind him. He was fuming, and scared all at the same time, and he felt as if his heart was going to constrict so tightly that he'd fall down dead in an instant.

His eyesight had improved to almost their normal level, but they were now almost brimming with tears.

“I take it by the sound of the door closing that today could have gone better.” came a cool Russian voice from the couch. Glacier was sitting there, drinking a glass of red wine slowly and looking at him.

“Yeah, today was...not so great.” said Harry looking away.

“Come here, you look about ready to fall apart.” said Glacier motioning for the lad to sit down with him.

Harry took a seat across the way from the man.

“What's got you into this state?” asked Glacier easily. “What part of the book has you so bothered?”

Harry heaved a large sigh and began telling the man what he had heard so far that day, not even bothering to hold back, too upset to even think.

Sirius and Remus walked up where they hoped Harry was, they were stopped by that Ranger doctor, telling them to give Harry an hour to be left to his own thoughts. But they figured that Harry shouldn't be left alone. They knew the therapist was with him, but he needed someone that he knew personally with him...

Though they were still trying to figure just how deep Harry's feelings were on some things, they still couldn't see Harry not wishing to be comforted, and being convinced that he didn't do anything wrong and that he wasn't being possessed.
As they were about to enter the door to their rooms, they heard Harry talking, he didn't sound like his normal, calm self, he sounded mad.

“I go to him, like everyone tells me to, 'let the adults handle it, Harry!' and what do I get? Stop worrying, you'll be fine, doesn't even FUCKING listen to me! I know this hasn't even happened yet, but still, HE WOULD HAVE!”

Sirius stood there in shock. He knew his future self had made a mistake and he knew Harry should be disappointed in him for doing so...but he didn't think he would hear it...and so loudly.

“Maybe we should give him some time.” said Remus pulling Sirius away.

“If he's venting, it'll help if someone is right there to vent to.” said Sirius.

“Don't you remember? Harry's therapist is in there. Let's give him a bit more time.” said Remus.

Glacier sat and watched the young man twist and mangle the lower part of his shirt into a wrinkled mess. He was grateful that the boy had opened up, even if it was only this newest development. He could sense that the boy had increased his mental shields beyond their normal levels (as strong as they were at that time) and he was about ready to fall into a mental collapse, this venting should help.

Releasing this stress that would only have built up and tore him apart from the inside by venting in this fashion was one of the better ways to release it.

“Well, I'm sure that now that he's seen your reaction and heard it from your point of view, he most certainly won't be taking that little path.” said Glacier.

“Yeah, but...he would have.” said Harry stubbornly.

“He would have, but now he won't. Finally releasing some of the tension is a good thing, but this hasn't happened yet, and from all the preparations, it won't.” said Glacier with a kind smile.
Harry sunk back into the cushions on the couch. “I know that, but this would have happened. I finally came to someone with my problems, and they blow me off.”

“And now, that they know how your mind works, they're genuinely concerned and willing to try and give you real reassurance.” said Glacier.

“I know that too...” said Harry with a sigh. He sat in thought and looked at his knees. “You know...that felt kind of nice...” he added with a blush.

“What felt nice?” asked Glacier.

“Screaming like that.” said Harry.

“Primal scream therapy has been proven to work in some people's cases.” said Glacier with a chuckle. “Want to shout at me some more?”

“I think I can shout about some more things to be really pissed about.” said Harry with a smile.

“How about your home life?” asked Glacier with a raised brow.

Harry turned his head away from Glacier.

“That's alright, son. Give it and myself some time.” said Glacier with a smile. “I'll listen to whatever you've got.”

=-=-=-=-=-=-=

The school itself was going through what they thought was a poor trade off from what they were accustomed to as of late. They were now having discussions about thestrals, different spells, and magical theories in general.

Hermione and a few of the more studious students were the only ones really enjoying this turn of events.
“Has anyone used thestral hair in a wand?” asked Hermione raising her hand high into the air.

Dumbledore smiled faintly. “There has been an instance or two where thestral hair has been used in a wand, but it is very rare, and I don't believe Ollivander has any desire to make one using that particular ingredient.”

“I wonder how strong a wand like that can get with thestral hair?” asked Terry.

“The power a wand holds is all depending on the strength and experience of the wizard using it. You could all borrow my wand and there would be no real difference in power.” said Dumbledore.

Lionus looked at Dumbledore with a smirk on his face. He couldn't see him letting any of the students use his wand, not in his lifetime anyway. Compared to the readings, these little kids' deductions were sort of boring. And not only that, the man was lying through his teeth, just about his wand though.

“Is there a way to test wand strength or...our own strength?” asked Neville looking down at his wand.

“With many years of practice and enhancing your own skills you should be able to see just for yourself how you have grown over the years.” said Dumbledore with a smile.

“Darn, I was hoping he'd have some really cool spell to test our strength.” said Fred.

“Yeah, that would have been wicked.” said George.

“Wonder if Harry's going to come back down.” asked Ron looking up at the door. “He was really pissed off.”

Hermione looked at the door and then turned back to Ron. “Let's go and see him.”

“What if Sirius and Lupin are there?” asked Ron.
“We can still give Harry support. Now that we know about the...well...You-Know-Who peering into Harry's mind, maybe we can stop that somehow.” said Hermione. “I can look up some mental barriers or something in the library.”

“Harry already has barriers up, guess they just weren't strong enough.” said Ron. “He didn't have them going full tilt, cause...I don't know, figure he didn't need to use them much.”

“Let's go and see what's going on.” said Hermione.

“You want to leave this fun discussion?” asked Ron with a smirk.

“I want to know find out if Harry's alright more.” said Hermione as she tore herself away from the discussion group.

They walked up the Grand Staircase and after climbing a few floors, they neared the rooms that Harry shared with his family.

“I wonder if Sirius and Lupin are there?” asked Ron.

“You've already asked that.” said Hermione. “We'll find out when we get there. These are there rooms.”

As they neared the door, they heard Harry's voice on the other side, and the tone made them flinch back.

“I'm a laid back kind of guy, but all their arguments just get old, you know? I can't have a nice peaceful week without the two of them fighting, and they ALWAYS have to do it while I'm around, can't they leave me out of their stupid fights? Can't they just keep it between themselves?”

Hermione and Ron looked between themselves and backed away.

“He's in a mood...” said Ron.
“Let's not go in there...” said Hermione.

“How about we go...anywhere...” said Ron taking Hermione by the hand and leading her away from the door.

Glacier smiled at the boy before him as he breathed slowly, trying to lower his voice.

“Very good, you're starting to finally release some pent up frustrations.” said Glacier with a smile.

“You might die of old age before I finish with all the stuff I've got on my mind.” said Harry with a smirk.

“Anything else you'd like to talk about?” asked Glacier.

“Not anymore today, I'm too tired...” said Harry smiling slightly.

“Shouting for that long does tire a person out.” said Glacier. “Why don't you go and lay down for the day?”

Harry looked at the clock. “It's not even three.” said Harry.

“You've had a long day, and it's only going to get longer as the books go along. Might as well have the rest while you can.” said Glacier with a smile.

Chief Hawkeye stood in his own room a few corridors away from where Glacier and Harry were, speaking softly into a mirror that hung over his own bathroom's sink.

“How is everything going?” asked Chief Hawkeye.
Instead of the normal reflection that would be shone in the mirror, there was the vision of Viper, and a slim man with brown hair and dark sunglasses standing in what appeared to be the Atrium of the Ministry of Magic.

“Everything is going along as scheduled sir, we've gone thorough investigations on all Ministry employees here and about twelve percent of them have been dismissed and six percent have been taken in for further questioning. The renovations have been completed and each department has been given the ample space they need to do their work. We've also completed work on the fountain.” said the slim man.

“Let me see, Vlad.” said Chief Hawkeye.

The two in the mirror stepped aside and revealed the new statue that stood in the Ministry's atrium. It was a shimmering crystal globe hovering over the large pool of water, with the landmasses etched delicately into the crystal's surface and a pulsating golden glow emanating from within.

Above the globe, there was larger statues made of flawless marble, a centaur, goblin, house-elf, wizard, witch, vampire, werewolf, hag and giant were standing over the globe, each holding a vase and crystal clear water poured out and covered the globe and then cascaded down into the pool, where small mermaids swam gracefully in the water.

Along the edge of the fountain's base, there was a carving, people using tools, depicting muggles and their personal evolution into the beings known for ingenuity with their hands.

“I like it. Good job Vlad.” said Chief Hawkeye. “Now, Viper, did you have Abacus take everything into a account? Has everyone been repaid what they should have been?”

“Yes sir, though Abacus felt that we need to leave the vons that have already been paid over the amount.” said Viper looking at a scroll of parchment. “But he has told them that they vill not be getting the same amount for their pay. And the others have been reimbursed their time.”

“Good, that's a cut in the workload when it comes to this Ministry. Now, what I want you, Viper, to do is something a little more important than overhauling the Ministry...something that would help make it up to Potter after that little unpleasantness that you two had, and it would get Lionus off your back.” said Chief Hawkeye.

Viper looked at his Chief expectantly. He would do anything to ease any punishment that Captain
Lionus would distribute to those who disappoint him.

“Now I know this goes against Ranger and my personal preferences, but I want you to...” said the Chief with a smirk.

Within fifteen minutes, someone began having their journey to the worst and final days of his life.
The next day came early for Harry, he had gotten up at seven o'clock, far earlier than anyone else in the suite with him. He quietly rose off his bed and made to go down to the kitchen and cook...anything.

“Where you goin' so damn early?” came a grumbled voice from Sirius' bed.

“You're dreaming, go back to sleep.” whispered Harry.

“Not if you're getting up.” said Sirius with a groan. “Where are you goin'?”

“The kitchen.” said Harry.

“Then I am definitely going.” said Sirius throwing on a pair of pants. “Hey..uh..'bout yesterday's chapter. I'm really sorry.”

“Not your fault technically.” said Harry.

“Technically?” winced Sirius.

“But we'll let it go for the moment, what do you want for breakfast?” said Harry leading the way out of the suite and down to the kitchens.

“Uh...you pick.” said Sirius looking at Harry carefully.

“I'm in the mood for pancakes...” said Harry absently.

Sirius thought as they traveled down the silent corridors. He was going to have to walk on eggshells around Harry until he felt comfortable.

Later, Sirius began to feel even more uncomfortable, but that was mainly due to him eating stack after stack of buttermilk pancakes.

“Oh, Merlin...I'm going to explode.” groaned Sirius.

“I told you, you should have stopped at the fourth plate.” said Harry as he took a large platter of cookies into his hands. “Now, if you can heave yourself out of the chair, let's go up and start this day.”

“That's a tall order...errghh....there we go.” said Sirius slowly getting to his feet. “What are the cookies for?”

“Just as a snack during the reading.” said Harry.

“Sure, it would be when I'm full to burst.” said Sirius walking beside Harry.
The ones that overheard the venting that Harry did with the therapist gave him a bit of a wide berth and even some of the students that didn't hear gave him space. They weren't afraid of what Moody said, Dumbledore and Dr. Nicodemus had reassured them that the assumption that the ex-Auror was incorrect, but after he had stormed out, they wanted to lessen any further stress that he was feeling.

“Sorry I can't have a few of those.” said Officer McFinn looking at the cookies longingly. “Without a body, the biscuit has nowhere to go.”

“That's alright dear, he put dates in those.” said Mrs. McFinn with a giggle.

“Ugh, nevermind, keep 'em.” said Officer McFinn sticking his tongue out. He picked up the book and read the latest chapter. “Chapter Twenty-three

“That doesn't sound promising.” said Seamus.

First paragraph, first sentence.

Dumbledore buried his face in his hands. This was going to be another one of those chapters where he had to face the proverbial music.

First paragraph, second sentence.

Dumbledore could feel the students looking between Harry and himself. Was he going to feel Harry's wrath that Sirius and Remus had apparently experience the afternoon before, when the two of them came to hide in his office?

End of first paragraph.

“I'm thinking beyond even your endurance.” said Dr. Nicodemus with a rueful smile.

Second paragraph, first sentence.

“No you aren't. You're fine, you're more than fine.” said Sirius holding Harry close to himself.

End of second paragraph.

Third paragraph.

Dialogue line.
“No you aren't.' said Remus quickly.

Sirius brushed his lips against Harry's brow. “It's not like that.”

“I know...that now.” said Harry.

“You're wrong dear boy...you're wrong...” said Dumbledore softly.

“Why aren't I putting up defenses? Why aren't I stopping this?” thought Harry to himself curiously, and with a tinge of fury. “Am I so willing to put up this false front...allowing myself to be an open door? What the flying fuck is my future self thinking?”

“Sicker than I've ever felt in my life, I expect.” muttered Harry.

“T'm always pale.” said Harry with a smirk.

“He doesn't seem all that big on sleeping as of that moment.” said Ron.
“Oh...sweetheart...don't...it'll only make you feel worse...” said Mrs. McFinn reaching over and holding Harry's knee.

“You certainly wouldn't be a snake if you were.” said Sirius.

“What do you think I would be?” asked Harry.

“A bunny.” said Sirius with a twitching smile.

“I'll bunny you.” said Harry.

“Oh come on, you're so soft and cuddly!” said Fred and George.

“Don't make me come over there.” said Harry.

“He has no need for that particular branch of magic.” said Dumbledore.

“I'm starting to get confused myself.” said Leroy.

“Oh..no...cue the 'I've got to save the world and damn myself.” said Ron with a soft groan.

“That would not be a good idea.” said Dumbledore looking up quickly.
“Well, that's not too bad of a plan.” said Rudolph, you'll be somewhere safe...well...unless you run into Umbridge...on second thought, don't go there.”

“You didn't do it the first time.” said Remus.

“Going along with that thought, wouldn't that open the muggles to whatever you thought was going on?” asked Parvati.

“Hasn't happened, so I can't reason with it.” said Harry with a shrug.

“They would not be happy at all...” said Harry.

The hall went silent.

“Well, isn't that creepy.” said Padma. “He was the one that was watching you two all this time?”

“Looks that way.” said Harry with a curious look over to Dumbledore. He, on the other hand was looking down at his hands, his cheeks faintly pink.

“Potter doesn't know how to save his own neck.” drawled Snape.
“Does that mean he's impressed, or just being a snarky bastard?” asked Dr. Clark quietly.

“Hard to tell with him.” said Sirius. “but I'm thinking he's a little impressed.”

“Sounds like you're desperate to hear anything from the old man.” said Lionus with a disapproving glare at the Headmaster.

“Oh, I think future me is just going to love that.” said Harry with a smirk.

“I'll give you impertinent.” said Fred.

“He won't be visiting Headquarters for a long time if he called us that, we'd show him the real definition.” said George.

“Remind me to try and keep you happy...” said Sirius.

“Good luck with that one, especially if you want to be the responsible adult.” said Harry.

“Responsible is a word that I don't think will ever be assigned to Sirius.” said Remus with a smirk.

“Hey, now...” said Sirius with a pout. “Wanna talk about your disciplining skills?”

“Hey, now...” said Remus.
Dialogue set.

“I'm thinking that is not what I meant by that.” said Dumbledore.

Dialogue set, fourth sentence.

“All I need is I can get away from here.” muttered Lionus softly.

Dialogue set, sixth sentence, third comma.

“I think I feel alone.” said Harry darkly.

“Ron and them were right there...” said Hermione.

“None of them was the person I needed.” said Harry, his voice still dark.

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

Fifteenth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Someone needs a nap.” said Sirius rubbing Harry's neck.

“Seeing as I really hadn't slept much in might have been two days...yeah...I could see that.” said Harry.

Sixteenth paragraph.

Seventeenth paragraph, sixth paragraph.

Dumbledore blinked.

“I don't think he would forbid you to sleep.” said Tonks. “But I can see why you would be worried about sleeping.”
Dumbledore looked thoughtful.

“I don't know if it's a good thing that future me is waking him up or not.” said Ron.

“I doubt he left for that reason, he most likely went to tell his mother that you were still asleep.” said Bathilda Bagshot.

“He needs to eat.” muttered Madam Pomfrey.

“I hope that means that you got some rest without the odd dreams.” said Bill.

“You really need to keep eating.” said Madam Pomfrey.
“If anything I would make sure that you were not going to take off and run off.” said Dumbledore.

Sirius pulled Harry closer to himself and held him. “You aren't going anywhere.”

“Oh Merlin, please no...” said Remus running his hand down his face.

“I don't think we are.” said Ginny.

“Aw...monster...she just wants to make sure you're okay.” said Leroy with a sad look.

Sirius reached down and began to slightly rub Harry's stomach. “I know you and I ate almost our weight in pancakes, but are you hungry?”

“No.” said Harry softly.

“Well, it's easy to avoid feeling hungry when you do that.” said Sirius with a joking tone.
“No one in here but us hippogriffs.” said Fred.

“Well, to tell the truth, skiing’s not really my thing,” said Hermione.
“I'm not fond of broken legs and high speeds.” said Hermione.
“I should give it a shot then.” said Harry with a smile.
“Oh dear...” said Madam Pomfrey covering her eyes and hiding her smile.

“Don't let him fool you, I'm sure he was fascinated by it.” said Ginny.

“But you aren't at Hogwarts.” said Zacharias.

“Sure, you'll come with Hermione if she wants you to go somewhere.” said Ron.
“She'll hit me if I don't.” said Harry. “Remember Malfoy?”
“I loved that moment...” said Ron dreamily.

“What could she have done? Called you back?” asked Rudolph.
“Wouldn't quite put it past her.” snarled Sprout.
“Sadistic bitch...” muttered Charlie.

“That's real nice.” said Harry with a smirk.

“Uh oh, Harry...she's not going to bow out.” said Leroy gleefully.

“That's some bad aim then.” said Fred.

Several of the teachers, McGonagall included groaned and covered their eyes.

Hermione looked down shamefully, though she could see future Harry was acting like that, but now was not the time to say that out loud, especially when no one was chastising her.
“And despite what you know about me, what you read or what you hear...you'll never know what it's like on my end.” said Harry darkly.

Hermione made to open her mouth, but Ron clapped a hand over it quickly.

Dialogue line.

“My word, you can go from someone who has reasonable moods to a whacked out adolescent roller coaster.” said Dr. Nicodemus with a soft chuckle as he looked at Harry.

Dialogue line.

“He's still in the same house, how do you lose someone?” asked Dr. Clark quietly.

“The doors lock from the inside.” said Sirius. “You can hide pretty well.”

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

The hall was silent.

“Fair point, but Tom is assaulting him in a different manner than what he did to you.” said Dumbledore with a kind smile.

Thirtieth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Ooh...” said the twins.

“Run when you hear that tone.” said Fred.

“She gets right scary when that tone hits.” said George.

Dialogue set, first sentence.

“Nice how he means it with her.” said Fred.
“Then again, it's the smart way to go.” said George.

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

Thirty-first paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, first sentence.

“Half true.” said Harry.

End of dialogue set.

Thirty-second paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Not that painful, from what it sounds.” said Harry.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, first sentence.

“Apparating and Disapparating is not the only way of transporting a person from one place to another.” said Dumbledore. “Though they are the most common and I'm not aware if Tom even is aware of the other means.”

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

Thirty-third paragraph.

“Finally, he eats.” said Madam Pomfrey quietly.
Dialogue set.

“Wish you would, it might drown him out.” said Remus.

“You're so mean, Moony.” said Sirius with a pout.

Thirty-fourth paragraph, second sentence, second comma.

“If I was in my animagus form, my tail would be just a wagging away.” said Sirius with a bright smile.

Thirty-fourth paragraph, third sentence.

“Yeah, I don't think I could recognize it either, mumsey didn't really care for holiday decorations that weren't all that dark and dignified.” said Sirius.

End of thirty-fourth paragraph.

“Wow...pretty impressive.” said Remus with a smile. “Then again, you and James did help me decorate the school for the holidays.”

“With or without the enchanted snowballs forming outside and flinging themselves through the doors once someone opened them?” said McGonagall with a smirk.

“I will sometimes always admit to my pass pranking achievements, but that wasn't me.” said Sirius. “Or James, or Remus or even Peter...though we did want to find out who did that.”

“If memory serves me correctly. I do believe I caught a young Gryffindor Prefect enchanting the snow in front of the door to do something along that nature.” said Dumbledore with a twinkling smile. “Alas however, it backfired, she only wanted it to happen to one person, not everyone that attempted to leave the school.”

“Wait...you can't be talking about...” said Sirius aghast.

“Mom did that?” said Harry thunderstruck.

“She did indeed. She was hoping to knock James down and bury him under a small hill of snow...sadly, with little practice in the art of mischievous magic, it got away from her.” said Dumbledore with a warm smile.

Thirty-fifth paragraph.

“He's got more relatives that...well...are introduced to him than you.” said Rudolph.
Hermione turned and put her hands on her hips.

“Sorry.” said Ron quickly.

“Just what you need...a nagging notebook.” said Terry.

“Oh good choice by us.” said Sirius brightly.

“I'd better write down how to put money in it.” said Hagrid scratching his head.

“Blimey, I wanna fly.” said Harry wistfully.

“Maybe this weekend.” said Sirius. “If it doesn't snow.”

Fred and George snorted quietly.
“Jerk.” muttered Charlie.

Percy blushed.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“That might take a while.” said George.

Dialogue line.

“Oh, we see it.” said Fred.

“We won't let you live that down for a long time.” said George.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

“I'd like to dot their i's and cross their t's with my fist.” said Harry.

Thirty-eighth paragraph, fifth sentence.

“You kept checking it out from the library.” said Harry.

End of thirty-eighth paragraph.

A few of the adults chuckled warmly.

“Don't get a girl perfume, unless you're married to them.” said Mr. Weasley with a smile.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.
“It would take more than just a quilt.” said Sirius.

“It's the warmest place in the house during the winter.” said Sirius.

“Not all House-elves have little dens like that. Some even have their own small rooms just off the kitchens.” said Leroy.

“I thought you said they didn't to eat?” asked a first year to Harry.

“I said they didn't need to.” said Harry.

“Note to self, I need to make sure to nick that back and stamp on it.” said Sirius darkly.
“Can't say I'd be missing him.” said Fred.

“Might have to talk to him, Black, make sure he doesn't try and interpret you saying that to mean that.” said Moody darkly.

“The little bugger isn't that imaginative.” said Sirius.

“I don't know if I would want that...” said Dr. Clark. “Not with everyone over for the holidays.”

“You don't know Kreacher personally, it would be a pleasant change.” said Sirius.

Mrs. Weasley looked scandalized. “I'm sure that I put my foot down and refused to let them get in.”

Mrs. Weasley stared at the book in horror.

“Well, honey, it is cold outside and Headquarters is a good long trek from St. Mungoes.” said Mr. Weasley softly.
Forty-fifth paragraph.

Forty-sixth paragraph, first sentence.

“It sounds absolutely lovely.” said Mrs. McFinn.

“Wish our hospital could do that, they consider it to be unhygienic with too many things about.” said Dr. Clark.

Forty-sixth paragraph.

“Ooh, might need something a bit more than tweezers to try and get it out.” said Dr. Clark.

Dialogue line.

Forty-seventh paragraph.

“This won't be good.” said Bill with a smirk.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Arthur...” said Mrs. Wealsy.

“I don’t' know what happened, honey...it hasn't happened yet.” said Mr. Weasley quickly.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

“Must have gotten him something muggle then.” said Charlie.

Forty-eighth paragraph, first sentence.

Mr. Weasley looked excited, “How much longer till Christmas?”

End of forty-eighth paragraph.
“I've got a feeling something else happened and he doesn't want Mum to worry...” said George.

“Or he did something muggle to himself again, remember when he tried going to a muggle dentist?” said Fred. “Took the Healer hours to get the metal out of his mouth.”

“Oh, this won't end well...” said Bill.

“What are stitches?” asked Ron.

“Well, if there is a large wound on our bodies, and our skin can't quite seal itself up either at all or without a long time passing, we developed a way to sew our skin together, makes the skin heal at a faster time and without the threat of most infections.” said Dr. Clark.

“Like...needle and thread sewing?” said Ron flabberghasted.

“That's right...a different sort of needle and thread, but correct.” said Dr. Clark.

“That's nasty!” said Ron.

“That's what we got to do without magic, Harry's had stitches before, so has James and I.” said Dr. Clark. “Though, scars do pop up with the use of stitches.”

“It's hard at Christmas time...” said Lupin thoughtfully.

“Mate, you kept choosing to keep away.” said Sirius darkly.

“I had no where to go during your imprisonment.” said Remus.

“You were more than welcome at my house, and you know it.” said Bathilda Bagshot shaking her finger at the man.

“Wonder if we wanted to prank or we were just looking for escape.” said Fred.

“I'm thinking escape, he's hard to prank.” said George.
“No real shock there.” said Madam Pomfrey looking reproachfully at the man.

“Thanks for defending me, kids.” said Mr. Weasley.

“You're on your own.” said the Weasley children, Hermione and Harry.

While Ginny and Ron shook their heads, Fred and George clicked their tongues.

“You'd think you would have learned from us...” said George.

“As to what not to say to Mum.” said the twins together.

Mrs. Weasley gripped her husband's elbow tightly.

“Yeah...they can be a bit much.” said Neville, “They only talk to me like that when Gran isn't around, if she's with me, they clam up.”

Several people looked at Neville sympathetically.

End of fifty-second paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Fred and George laughed heartily.

“He's talking about freckles..” said Officer McFinn. “You two have more than he does.”

They stopped quickly.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“I think I would prefer concealer.” said Mrs. McFinn.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Fifty-third paragraph.

“Thanks for the support.” said Ron.

“Hey, we could have been rolling on the floor laughing.” said Harry.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Fifty-fourth paragraph, second sentence.

“Must be boring in there.” said Sirius.
“Please, please don't tell me...” said Remus covering his eyes.

“Don't let it be Dazzle Gums.” said Sirius looking up, his hands together, pleading.

“NOOO!!!!” howled Sirius and Remus.

“C'mon, once in these seven books is enough!” said Sirius.

“Does he still have memory damage?” asked Charlie.

“If I recollect, he does.” said Dumbledore.

“Well, than at least he won't be exacting his revenge on Harry and Ron.

“Good, don't be sympathetic to that nimrod.” said Tonks.

“...And we are so proud.” said Snape with a sneer.

“And in a straight-jacket?” muttered Harry.
Fifty-sixth paragraph.

“Get out of there...now.” said Kingsley.

Dialogue line.

“Why are you helping him remember?” asked Sirius.

“How the hell do I know? It hasn't happened yet.” said Harry.

Dialogue line.

“No, not at all.” said Remus.

Fifty-seventh paragraph, second sentence.

“Well, that should only have taken one afternoon.” said Remus.

“And that's with breaks.” said Sirius.

“Bloody hell, they're not letting off...” said Fred.

End of fifty-seventh paragraph.

“Can I be left out?” said Seamus raising his hand.

“Me too!” said Dean.

Fifty-eighth paragraph.

“Oh...lord...tell me that the Healer is elderly, or that just got a little creepy.” said Bill with a snigger.

Fifty-ninth paragraph.
“He's who he is, that's what the problem is.” said Sirius.

“Lying already, he's off to a brand new start I see.” said McGonagall shaking her head.

“Well, that's just about right for his mentality state.” said Ernie.

“He was a danger to himself before this.” said Sprout softly.

“No kidding.” said Ginny.

“Don't leave us...please don't leave us.” said Ginny. “He'll start talking again.”

“Can you imagine what he would be like with his memory...I'd leap out of a window.” said Sirius.
“I’d prefer to throw him out of a window, myself.” said Snape.

End of sixty-second paragraph.

Dialogue set, fourth sentence.

“We don't want you to know why.” said Remus.

End of dialogue set.

“Try something else.” said Dr. Clark.

Sixty-third paragraph.

Dialogue set.

Sixty-fourth paragraph.

“Hope he's just busy today and not ashamed.” said Mrs. Weasley coldly.

Dialogue set, second sentence.

“Swaying tentacles?” asked Dr. Nicodemus.

“Hmm...” said Lionus.

Harry looked over to the Rangers, and then back to the book thoughtfully.

End of dialogue set.

“Huh?” asked several students.

Neville turned a faint pink.

“Hey, Neville, you want everyone to take a walk for a while?” asked Harry quickly. “Just you me and Officer McFinn.”

“I'm...I'm not ashamed...” said Neville.

“Not what I asked.” said Harry.
Neville looked down to the floor. “Yeah...could they...I'm not ready.”

“Take a hike people.” said Harry gesturing over his shoulder.

It surprised Harry that no one grumbled or muttered, they only looked at Neville curiously and walked out slowly. Though Zacharias muttered to himself, but with a sharp look from every one of the teachers, (including Snape shockingly) he left the Great Hall.

“You can tell us when you're ready...c'mon Ron.” said Hermione, patting Neville's shoulder.

“I'm already half way to the door.” said Ron snatching one of the last biscuits from Harry's plate.

Neville pulled Luna back down into the seat she was leaving. “No...can you...”

“I can.” said Luna with a dreamy smile.

“Want anyone else to stay?” asked Harry.

“Just...well...maybe Professor Sprout and Professor McGonagall, Professor Dumbledore...and...uh...him...” said Neville pointing to Dr. Nicodemus.

“I think I know why I'm being held back...” said Dr. Nicodemus with a kind smile as he resumed his seat.

Soon, the only ones left were Neville, Professor Dumbledore, McGonagall, Sprout, Officer McFinn, Dr. Nicodemus, Luna, and Harry.

“Alright, Filius is keeping everyone away from eavesdropping at the door, are you ready Neville?” asked Dumbledore kindly.

Neville nodded numbly and Officer McFinn began reading again.

Sixty-fifth paragraph.

Luna gave Neville's hand a squeeze.

Sixty-sixth paragraph, second sentence, first comma.

“I know this hasn't happened yet Harry, but thanks.” said Neville.

Harry shrugged with a smile.

End of sixty-sixth paragraph.

Sixty-seventh paragraph.

“I don't ever expect anyone I know to be there.” said Neville. “Lockhart never recognized me so it wasn't all that big of a deal.”

Dialogue line.

“He’s a curious little bugger isn’t he?” said Officer McFinn with a smirk.

Dialogue line.

Sixty-eighth paragraph.

“I don’t rightly blame you, that was sprung on you quite suddenly.” said Dumbledore.

Dialogue set, first sentence.

Neville giggled softly.

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

“I kinda hoped that you wouldn't meet her till we were adults...but...at least she's not saying anything embarrassing like Uncle Algie would.” said Neville.

Dialogue set, second sentence.

“Gran always does talk pretty good about them. Says they run a nice happy family.” said Neville.

End of dialogue set.

Sixty-ninth paragraph.

Dialogue set, third sentence.

“It will come in it's own shape and form.” said McGonagall.

Neville turned a faint pink.
“One of these days, I'll find a way.” said Harry with a soft laugh.

McGonagall groaned.

“Yeah, but you gotta love him...” said Harry. “Cause it's illegal to kill him.”

Just turning around leaving wasn't an option it seems.” said Harry.

“Ugh...knock it off, Ron.” said Harry shaking his head.

Neville looked down, Luna sensing this wrapped her arms around Neville's shoulders and placed her head on his neck.

“It was a terrible thing...” said Professor Sprout wiping her eyes.

Dialogue set.
Neville looked sad.

“She'll get better, I'm sure of it, then she'll be just as lovely as ever.” said Professor McGonagall walking over and patting Neville on the shoulder.

End of seventy-second paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Seventy-third paragraph, first sentence, first comma.

Harry looked at the floor, he hated the pitying looks that some people sent him, he imagined that Neville was too.

End of seventy-third paragraph.

Dr. Nicodemus looked thoughtfully at the book.

“Interesting...” said the Ranger doctor.

Dialogue line.

Seventy-fourth paragraph.

“I know not even the twins would find something funny about that.” said Harry.

Neville looked down.

Dialogue set.

Seventy-fifth paragraph.

“I keep them.” said Neville softly. “I've always kept them.”

“They're a present from your mother, of course you would.” said Luna.

“Is that her way...of giving you candy...?” said Harry looking between Neville and Dr. Nicodemus.

“I'm thinking that's what she's doing.” said Dr. Nicodemus.

Seventy-sixth paragraph.
“Did they expect you to know?” asked Officer McFinn.

“It doesn't sound like I even pretended to gasp.” said Harry.

“Really want to go and smash her picture.” said Neville darkly.

“Don't blame you.” said Harry.

“Oh just be quiet.” said Sprout.

“Shall we let the students enjoy their break for a little longer?” said Dumbledore looking over to Neville.

“I'm okay...we can go on.” said Neville. “Unless...you have an idea about my parents...” he said looking up at Dr. Nicodemus.

Dr. Nicodemus looked over to the boy slowly, a frown on his face, but then it turned upwards into a smile. “Actually....”
“You mean there's a way to cure my parents?” said Neville excitedly. He had been wishing for this day to come for his entire life, was his prayer finally going to be answered?

“I'm just going by what I learned from this chapter, but I think I might have a way.” said Dr. Nicodemus, “But it will all depend on how strong your parent's mental strength is. If they're strong enough, then they'll make a recovery.”

Neville could hardly contain himself, tears of relief and joy began to fall down his face and he collapsed into the chair he was sitting on, Luna rubbing small circles on his back.

“I can send word to my comrades back at my Headquarters and they'll send over the right potions, but they'll still need to recover from the many years of being bed-ridden and not quite knowing what is going on.” said Dr. Nicodemus. “Though, a few months at home and with some tender loving care, they should be fine.”

“Really?” said Neville, visually over joyed, his face was tear stained.

“But, we'll have to see for certain if what I think could a be an answer, will in fact work. I'm just going by what Potter has seen in the future, it could be something completely different altogether.” said Dr. Nicodemus, “Have hope, but don't go overboard with it.”

“It's more than what I've ever had.” said Neville wiping his eyes.

“The cure isn't for free, and it isn't cheap.” said Dr. Nicodemus with a smile over to Harry. Neville looked worriedly between Harry and Dr. Nicodemus, but sent pleading looks over to Harry.

“What do you guys want now?” asked Harry frowning slightly.

“I'll take a look at that black notebook of yours.” said Dr. Nicodemus.

“What the hell for?” asked Harry in shock.
“There was a spell you had used a time or two, that I'd really like to see what I can do with it.” said Dr. Nicodemus.

Harry frowned slightly, then his eyes opened slightly. “If it's the one I think, I don't recommend...”

“Have you developed it any further since then?” asked Dr. Nicodemus.

“It is that one then....A little but not too much...” said Harry. “But if you want it, I guess you're the best people to use it...but how did you know about it?”

“Don't underestimate us, Potter, we've been watching you for a long long time.” said Dr. Nicodemus. “For instance...the first Christmas you had with the McFinns....where did you think that pile of presents came from?”

Harry thought carefully.

“They came from you?” said Officer McFinn in shock. “I thought Sam did it!”

“No, it was not him, now about that book...I'll see to the evaluation and the cure, free of charge.” said Dr. Nicodemus.

“I seem to be footing the bill for a lot of stuff around here.” grumbled Harry with a smile as he dug for the small book. “Here you go, but...I'd rather just copy it down for you.” he added taking out a roll of parchment and a quill.

“What spell is he talking about?” asked McGonagall.

“Something that would really go to waste here in a school, but we can utilize it to the fullest.” said Dr. Nicodemus as he took the parchment from Harry. The moment he scanned the parchment and it's contents, he snapped his finger and a small ball of light came from his forefinger and thumb and then flew up and out of the Great Hall.

“So...they're going to look at my parents?” asked Neville.
“That's right.” said Dr. Nicodemus with a kind smile.

Before Harry sat back down in the bowl, Neville rushed over and hugged him.

“Thanks...thank you so much...Harry...” said Neville tearfully.

“You're welcome Neville...” said Harry, trying not to let his own eyes water. “I hope that it does cure them. Should we get them all back in...or at least try to?”

The doors were opened and those who were waiting right beside the door came flooding back in. Ron and Hermione rushed over to them but stopped a few feet away from Neville.

“You alright, Nev?” asked Ron.

“I'm okay.” said Neville. “Thanks for...taking a walk.”

“It's fine Neville.” said Hermione with a smile.

“Are we going to move on?” asked Ron taking his seat.

“If Neville wants to.” said Officer McFinn.

Neville nodded, he was excited for the Christmas break, perhaps his parents would be healed by then!

“Alright, new chapter then.” said Officer McFinn taking the book and turning the page. “We got...Chapter Twenty-four Snape and Dumbledore both sneaked a glance over to Harry.

Think we should check on him...?” said Remus.

“He hasn't left the house.” said Nightstrike. “I left one of our Privates there to keep an eye on the place.”

“Don't worry about me.” said Sirius pulling Harry over to himself.

“I'll worry if I wanna.” said Harry, settling against Sirius' shoulder.

“Hmm...sounds like what you were doing while I was happy.” said Sirius teasingly.

“We just seem to miss each other's positive moods.” said Harry.

“I'm going to pelt you with Cheering Charms.” said Remus.

“Only if you hit yourself up with some of them.” said Sirius.

“Aww...I knew you cared...” said Sirius hugging Harry.

“The alternative is a few more months with Umbridge, mutt.” sneered Snape.

“Killjoy.” muttered Sirius.

Sirius turned his head and pouted.

“Do you blame me?” asked Harry.

“Not really, but you could want to stay with me just because I'm your awesome godfather or something.” said Sirius.
“He's going to be hormonal again, isn't he?” groaned Snape.

“Stuff it.” snapped Sirius.

End of third paragraph.

“If Umbridge wasn't there and acting like a psychotic nut...I'd say that you should go back.” said Sirius. “Your education is important, but knowing she was there and if you had told me about your hand...I'd pull you out faster than Dumbledore could blink.”

“And if I had known, I would have pulled everyone out.” said Dumbledore quietly.

Fourth paragraph.

“You realized that Umbridge didn't get knocked off before the holidays ended?” asked Ron.

Dialogue set.

“That's never a good thing.” said the Gryffindor students.

“I'm sure it wasn't my choice to speak to him.” sneered Snape.

Fifth paragraph.

Dialogue set, first sentence, second dash.

“They just don't want to listen.” said Harry shaking his head.

“That's cause you're rubbish at chess...” said Ron slowly with a smirk on his face.

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

Sixth paragraph, second sentence.

“So much for a nice happy holidays.” said Ginny quietly.
“That sounds kind of funny.” said Mrs. McFinn with a giggle.

“Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, first sentence.

“Mum...after all the crap we put up with him during the school year...” said Fred.

“It's Snape.” said George.

Snape sent a glare over to the twins who quickly quelled.

“Then again...” said the twins nervously.

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“He can't slam him with anything any other student did, no matter how paranoid he is.” said Tonks.

Dialogue set.

“Doubt it would be your fault if you did.” said Sirius.

“You'd be surprised the work he hands in.” said Snape waspishly.

Seventh paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Eighth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Well, aren't we off to a great start?” asked Dr. Clark.

Dialogue line.
“You can almost hear a fight about to break out.” said Remus.

Ninth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

“I realize that this hasn't happened yet, Severus...Sirius....please put aside these differences...” said McGonagall rubbing her eyes.

“Easier said than done...” said Sirius and Snape together.

“They seemed to get along just fine when I got covered in Stinksap.” muttered Harry.

Sirius and Snape smirked and snickered into their hands.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Let it go, Padfoot...please tell me you let it go.” said Remus looking up.

Tenth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Eleventh paragraph.

“Really, did you really expect a fifth year to know about Occlumency?” asked Rivers.

“My Snakes know about it.” said Snape proudly.

“Only because you told them.” said Flitwick.

Dialogue line.

“It is, but if you aren't compatible with it, you'll need another sort of branch.” said Harry.

“Another branch?” asked Dumbledore.
“Thought organization, all you do is put up some walls and keep intruders from getting to the more vital thoughts. They can get to some simpler thoughts, but with some practice you block them all off.” said Dr. Nicodemus with a slightly smile over to Harry.

“I'm still shaky at it it seems. He shouldn't have been able to get as far as he has...” said Harry.

“Sounds fascinating.” said Dumbledore with a smile.

“Problem is, I get a might ticked off at times.” said Harry. “Cause I'll just be focusing on one thing and it'll just sit there and simmer.”

“Hopefully Glacier will aid in that endeavor.” said Lionus.

Twelfth paragraph.

“Not any of the adults.” said Moody.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue set, first sentence.

“Don't need to tell me that twice.” said Harry.

End of dialogue set.

Thirteenth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Oh crap.” said Charlie.

Fourteenth paragraph, second sentence.

“I've got nothing.” said Officer McFinn with a smile.

End of fourteenth paragraph.

Dialogue line.
“Due to my misconceptions, I must have appointed Severus the task for Harry's safety.” said Dumbledore, he then looked over to the Potions Master, “Not that I do not trust you.”

“Harry's safety and Snape are two things I don't normally put together.” muttered Sirius darkly.

Dialogue set.

“This has become the year where your emotional and mental well-being is getting hit with fatal blows.” said Lionus.

“And people wonder why I’m angst ridden.” said Harry he then added in a mutter. “And depressed.”

Fifteenth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Sixteenth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Just once, hit him...” whispered Ron.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Don't push it...” said Remus with a groan.

Dialogue line.

Seventeenth paragraph.

“I don't know who to root for.” said a first year Slytherin. “They're both pretty cool.”

Snape, who heard his first year, turned a faint pink.

Dialogue line.
Dumbledore groaned and covered his eyes.

Remus slapped the back of Sirius's head.
“This hasn't happened yet!” shouted Sirius.
“I don't care.”

“Don't get in between those two when they start to fight.” said Tonks covering her ears.

“At least you're trying to get him out of there.” said Mrs. McFinn.

“That would be awesome to see.” said Fred and George with a gleeful smile.

“Just a lover's quarrel.” said Nightstrike snicker. He only waved innocently as the two wizards sent him murderous glares.

Twenty-first paragraph, third sentence.

“Finally.” said Emmeline Vance.

End of twenty-first paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Twenty-second paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, second sentence.

“If that’s school friends, I'd hate to see enemies.” said Leroy.

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

Several adults smiled at the two Weasleys.

Twenty-third paragraph, first sentence.

“Shocker.” said Snape.

Twenty-third paragraph, second sentence, first semi-colon, third comma.

Sirius gave Harry a one armed hug and smiled. “Thanks for caring.”

Twenty-third paragraph, end of second sentence.

“I'd listen to you, I'd never shout at you...well..unless you do something like what you did in the first three years of school here.” said Sirius.

End of twenty-third paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Just wish that I didn't have to have extra classes with Professor Snape.” mumbled Harry.

Dialogue line.

Twenty-fourth paragraph.

“Oh, you know it was a good conversation if they stop it as you walk in the door.” said Ginny.

Twenty-fifth paragraph, third sentence, fist dash.

Sirius looked down to Harry, who was gripping his hand tightly.

“I learned to listen to those feelings.” said Harry, his face pale.

Twenty-fifth paragraph, end of third sentence.

“As long as Remus is there to lock the door, I won't go anywhere.” said Sirius.

End of twenty-fifth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“I suck at wrapping, so sue me.” said Sirius.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

“I should have given it to him before school started.” said Sirius.

“Wonder what it is.” said Ernie quietly.
“Oh that's nice.” said Sirius.

“I'll be alright.” said Sirius.

“I hope you take that as a joke in the future...” said Mr. Weasley covering his eyes.

“Would it kill you to use two arms?” sneered Harry.

“That would show you too much affection.” said Sirius with a laugh. “Don't want to spoil you now.”

“Now I'm the one pulling you from him.” said Tonks looking sad.

“This hasn't happened yet, and I'm hugging him enough to make up for it all.” said Sirius with a smile.

“It's getting kind of sappy over here.” said Harry.

“Being nervous keeps you alive.” said Tonks.
Moody smiled proudly, though it was a small smile.

End of dialogue set.

Twenty-seventh paragraph.

Twenty-eighth paragraph.

Twenty-ninth paragraph.

“Hey Stan!” said the students together.

Dialogue line.

Thirtieth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Keep that fool quiet!” snarled Moody.

Dialogue line.

“Blimey, where's the accident, clumsy cousin I used to tease and love?” said Sirius, the sides of his mouth twitched.

Dialogue line.

“No you don't.” said Harry.

Thirty-first paragraph.

“I'd chuck the custard creams if I were you, especially if the frog spawn and the cockroaches got all over them.” said Dr. Clark.

Dialogue set.

Thirty-second paragraph.
“Not a lot of people have sneaking skills.” said Theodore Nott with a snicker.

Thirty-third paragraph, second sentence.

“He does kinda fancy you.” said Ron with a slight blush to Hermione.

End of thirty-third paragraph.

Dialogue set, first sentence.

“I not all that excited to ride that bus now.” said Ron.

End of dialogue set.

The students stared at the book.

“He's dumber than a box of flobberworms isn't he?” said Terry.

Thirty-fourth paragraph, first sentence.

“He's more of a nut then anyone else I know.” said Tonks. “At least he's completely harmless.”

End of thirty-fourth paragraph.

“I'm not fond of thrill rides.” said Hermione.

Thirty-fifth paragraph.

Thirty-sixth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Maybe now that I'm prepared, I won't mind it.” said Ron.

Dialogue set, second sentence.
“Like money tip?” asked Neville.

“Or a 'swift kick where the sun doesn't sun shine' sort of tip.” said Tonks.

End of dialogue set.

“She's never feeling the best when she gets on the Knight Bus.” said Madam Bones.

Thirty-seventh paragraph, second sentence.

“She should really take a motion sickness potion before getting on there.” said a sixth year Hufflepuff.

End of thirty-seventh paragraph.

Thirty-eighth paragraph.

Thirty-ninth paragraph.

Fortieth paragraph.

“Nosy parkers.” said Fred clicking his tongue.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

Dumbledore smiled at Remus.

Dialogue line.

Forty-first paragraph.

“After hearing that, I'm glad to not be on the bus.” said Hermione.

Forty-second paragraph.
“Don't use Snape's excuse.” said Sirius.

“Punch him!” said the twins.

“Oi!” said Zacharias hotly.

“Kick him, then!” said the twins.

“Awesome, Ron!” said a few third years.

Zacharias growled.

“Uh oh...Ron's there...” said Parvati.

“Don't mention Quidditch!” said Padma.

“Good going, Granger. Give Potter a decent chance now...well...not that you aren't a good choice...” said Dr. Nicodemus looking over to Ginny.

Hermione smiled, happy that perhaps the Rangers were going to go easy on her at last.
“Never really care about the notice board for the most part.” said Harry.

“Oh...future you is so adorable.” said Rudolph with a laugh.

“You are way too precious.” said Leroy.

“Thank goodness Mother isn't here to hear that, she'd be strangling you in a hug right about now.” said Rudolph.

The people in the Great Hall chuckled amongst themselves, even Ginny giggled.

“Yeah, positive moments tend to bite it once you get down there.” said Lee.
Forty-eighth paragraph.

Forty-ninth paragraph, second sentence, second dash.

Snape chuckled in spite of himself.

Forty-ninth paragraph, fourth sentence, first comma.

“That would be mine, Potter, and you had better keep your curiosity to yourself.” said Snape with a dark look.

“Hey, this hasn't happened yet. I don't have any plans to go in there.” said Harry.

End of forty-ninth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Fiftieth paragraph, first sentence.

Snape's eyes flashed open wider than normal.

“Well...at least we know this didn't happen in Lockhart's office.” said Remus. “Snape wouldn't do that.”

“I much prefer to hex those that would attempt...that sort of criminal activity.” muttered Snape with a growl towards no one in particular.

End of fiftieth paragraph.

“And I'm sure Potter was fixing me with a similar look.” said Snape.

Dialogue line.

“Bite me.” muttered Sirius.

Remus nudged him in the ribs.

Dialogue line.
“I won't bet money on it.” said Mr. Weasley quietly.

“Arthur!” scolded Mrs. Weasley. “What did I say about betting?”

“She's mad about that?” asked Charlie. “He wasn't going to.”

Fifty-first paragraph.

“I would have worked that out, if the text books up to this point had mentioned this kind of magic.” said Harry.

“Have you heard of Occlumency or Legilimency?” asked Hermione.

“I've heard of it, but never really used it or pursued it.” said Harry. “I pretty much already organized my thoughts when I came to Hogwarts, hadn't really given the magical way of defensive thinking much thought.”

Dialogue line.

“Don't get snippy.” said Remus carefully.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, first sentence.

“More than you think, obviously.” said Dean looking at the book.

End of dialogue set.

“I want you to go all out on a potion, please...for me...” said Ron.

Harry shrugged.
“What was future you thinking?’ asked Sirius looking at Dumbledore.

“My senses must have taken their leave that holiday season.” said Dumbledore shaking his head.

“Now it’s my turn to say it, bite me.” said Harry turning and looking at Snape.

“Harry...” said Remus covering his eyes, while Sirius howling with laughter.

“Hmm...he said almost.” said a first year.

“It would have to be almost, Snape's a double agent, isn't he?” said another first year.

Dr. Nicodemus and Lionus snickered amongst themselves.

“Sad thing is, you need to know at least Occlumency or some form of it in your case.” said Chief Hawkeye. “There are great exceptions, but it's better to have that skill than not.”

“Than explain the thing with the snake.” muttered Alicia.
“Why...are you doing that?” asked Sirius.

“This hasn't happened Black, I'm not aware of my future reasons.” said Snape sourly.

Dialogue set.

“Then how about teaching him and getting on with it?” said Bill.

Fifty-fifth paragraph.

Dialogue set.

“It's a double edged sword, dear lad...you are much more important than the knowledge of Voldemort's emotional state.” said Dumbledore.

Fifty-sixth paragraph.

Dialogue set, first sentence.

“Well, that sucks.” said Seamus.

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Fifty-seventh paragraph.

“He's not the one I would be seeking a fight with.” said Remus. “Out of all the people you don't like in Hogwarts, he's not the one to go up against.”

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.
“Make up your minds, do you want me to say his name or not?” said Harry.

“No.” said Snape.

“Yes.” said Dumbledore.

“Well, that answers that.” said Harry with a roll of his eyes.

Fifty-eighth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

“Still a nut for letting that happen.” said Charlie. “I'm not fond of when I get burned and I deal with dragons for a living.”

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“At least he's answering your questions.” said Sirius quietly.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

“He's more than welcome to my feeling of pissed off, maybe it will alleviate some of it.” said Harry.

“We can only hope.” said Ron with a quiet chortle.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.
“Don't...bother...asking...” said Snape looking at the students.

Dumbledore frowned slightly and looked at Snape.

“I gave ample time.” said Snape. “There was a pause...”

“Bullshit.” muttered Sirius.

“I'll give them something to laugh at.” muttered Sirius.

“Bet that knocked unsuspecting future you for a loop.” sneered Sirius.

“Honestly, can't you shut up for five minutes?” groaned Snape.

Hermione blushed.

“Well, that won't go well, he'll know about the potion then.” said Ron.

“I already know about it now.” said Snape.
“Can't you shut up for five minutes?” said Sirius.

End of sixty-second paragraph.

“Oh boy...” said a few of the boys together. “Don't want him seeing that.”

Cho blushed.

Dialogue line.

Sixty-third paragraph, first sentence.

“What?” asked Dr. Clark.

End of sixty-third paragraph.

“Whatever you did, I totally approve.” said Sirius quietly.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Not if you're going to send another one back at me.” said Harry.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dumbledore took a deep breath. “It hasn't happened, it won't happened.” he said with his eyes closed.

Snape looked to the side. “Though it has not happened, I...I apologize Potter.”

“Memorize this moment.” said Sirius.

“Shut up, mutt.” snarled Snape.
“I don't think he knew he was shouting.” said Flitwick looking sternly over to Snape. He was trying to remember that these events had yet to happen, but really, this was a little hard to hear, though he had to admit, Snape praised the lad...for an instant.

“You're not telling him how!” said Dean.

“And you told him to use his wand!” said Seamus.

“Good lad.” said Moody.

Several people chuckled.

“Perhaps a phial of calming draught?” said Dr. Clark.

“He needs to be able to do it without the aid of a potion.” said not Snape, but Dumbledore.

“There you go...” said Dumbledore leaning forward.

“But it doesn't mention that he succeeded.” said Snape.
Sixty-seventh paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Sixty-eighth paragraph.

Leroy stood up and walked behind the bowl. He reached forward and began to massage Harry's scalp. “Can't wait till summer, Monster, nice peace and quiet for you.”

Dialogue line.

“Freaking teach me to defend myself then!” snapped Harry.

“Breathe, Harry...just breathe...” said Leroy soothingly.

Sixty-ninth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“I'm a hormonally driven person in his teens, what the hell do you expect?” said Harry settling back into the bowl.

“It's okay...it's alright.” said Rudolph coming up to stand behind him and rubbing his shoulder.

Dialogue set, third sentence, second dash.

“Jerk.” said muttered Angelina.

“Girls find guys that wear their hearts on their sleeves worth going after.” said Alicia.

“So...if you want to be a lifelong bachelor...go for it.” said Katie.

The boys who were listening looked at each other.

“Should we start crying at the drop of a hat?” said the twins with mischievous smiles.

“Hearts on their sleeves, not faucets for eyes.” said Angelina.

End of dialogue set.
“I’d pay good money to see that.” said Ron quietly yet gleefully.

“What, what, what?” said Neville startled. Officer McFinn noticed a few people were becoming a bit lax and decided to jolt them back to alertness by shouting the last two words.

“Sorry, kiddo.” said Officer McFinn laughing loudly.

“Yeah, being triumphant when it clearly wasn't going right doesn't make much sense.” said Hermione.

“Remember, don't lie to him.” said Bill.

“You and your epiphanies.” said Ron.
“Way to confuse the man.” said Tonks.

Dialogue line.

The Rangers smirked. “It's a nice feeling, isn't it?”

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Blatant curiosity?” said Colin with a hopeful smile.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

“Well, he's not denying it.” said Charlie.

Seventy-fifth paragraph.

Sirius snickered into his hand.

Dialogue line.

“That's a lie right there.” said Dr. Nicodemus.

Snape, and Dumbledore both looked firmly at the Ranger Doctor.

“What?” asked Ron. Hermione looked between Harry, Dumbledore and Snape.
“Good luck with that.” said Remus. “He's now got a lot to think about and pushing his buttons certainly won’t help.”

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, third sentence.

A few of the students looked confused.

“Don't...bother...” said Snape looking at Draco out of the corner of his eye.

End of dialogue set.

Seventy-sixth paragraph.

“She even snapped at me once!” said Mrs. McFinn. “I was just looking at a cook book and writing down a few things I wanted to try. She thought I was writing inside the book!”

Seventy-seventh paragraph.

“Get yourself to bed.” said the teachers together.

“But clear your mind first.” said Snape in a bored tone.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

“That this year sucks and you should have just stayed home with me?” said Sirius with a slight smile.

“That too.” said Harry.

Seventy-eighth paragraph.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue set.
“What?” said Lavender.

“Huh...good point.” said Parvarti.

“Imperius curse.” said Fred.

“That has to be it.” said George.

“Good thinking.” said Flitwick with a proud smile.

“Not necessarily.” said one of the Unspeakables. They were a little unnerved that one of rooms could hold something Voldemort wanted, and they were feeling a little anxious without Speckerton there to reassure them that everything was going to be fine. He was still resting after allowing Officer McFinn's spirit a bit of physical time.

“That's an understatement.” said Hermione and Ron.
Mrs. Weasley glared over to her twin sons.

Dialogue line.

Eighty-second paragraph, second sentence, first comma.

“Oh, that's real nice, that is.” said Fred.

End of eighty-second paragraph.

Eighty-third paragraph.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue set.

“They are two of my more ingenious students.” said Flitwick proudly.

Eighty-fourth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Hard to forget Umbridge's homework.” said Ron.

“Future me wants you to use the Homework Planner, though...I'm seeing that maybe I should get you two something else.” said Hermione.

“It's fine, Hermione. It's the thought that counts.” said Remus.

Eighty-fifth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“If you are planning to get us something different, how about something that doesn't insult us.” said Ron with a cheeky grin.
“What was future me thinking?” said George dramatically, throwing an arm over his eyes.

“That he might want a laugh?” asked Fred.

“That could be it.” said George.

Dumbledore looked over to Harry fearfully.

“Hand me that blanket.” said Sirius reaching over to grab the phoenix quilt.

“I'm fine.” grumbled Harry as Sirius waved his wand and the blanket wrapped itself tightly around Harry.

“You will be.” said Sirius.
“I'd appreciate it.” said Ron.

“The short run kind of sucks right now.” said Harry as he struggled under the blanket. “I can't move.”

“You don't need to move.” said Sirius.

“I don't really want to think about it.” said Neville nervously.

“Feel up to another chapter?” asked Officer McFinn.

“Well, I can't exactly get up and go anywhere right now.” said Harry.
“Next chapter is Chapter Twenty-five.” said Officer McFinn.

“Why are we bringing Skeeter back in?” asked Ron. “I liked her better when we didn't hear from her and didn't have to see her.”

First paragraph.

“That's not going to be good, if the news knocks her over.” said Ernie.

Dialogue line.

Second paragraph.

First picture and crime description.

Mrs. Weasley paled and her eyes began to water as the other Weasley growled darkly.

Second picture and crime description.

Third paragraph.

Third picture and crime description.

Neville twitched unpleasantly.

Fourth paragraph.

Article title, fourth word.

The people in the Great Hall gasped loudly.

Madam Bones was dumbfounded as was Kingsley, Moody, Tonks and the Unspeakables. Without a passing moment, Madam Bones took off and out of the Great Hall, no doubt racing to send an owl to her Aurors to secure the prison.

“How is that possible? I can see how Black got out, but they aren't animagi.” said Moody scowling at the book.

“I'm betting that the Dark Lord will have a hand in it somewhere.” said Rudolph darkly.
“Bullocks.” said Sirius with a snort.

“They're idiots.” said Leroy rubbing his eyes.

And they blame it on me? If I had wanted any other person escaping with me, I would have done it long ago.” said Sirius dismissing it with a wave of his hand.

“You're a stupid fool.” said Tempest shaking her mane.

“Sure, if there was someone else that was railroaded without a trail and were innocent.” said Sirius. “Otherwise they can rot in there for all I care.”

“There's a much more powerful leader than what I can be, and I would turn them in in a heartbeat.” said Sirius.
“Booming idiot doesn't have anyone else to blame it on.” said Nightstrike.

Dialogue set.

“How much do you want to bet that he still had to do some major backtracking to sound like he wasn't just spinning his wheels.” said Dr. Clark.

“Spinning his what?” asked Sirius. “What does that mean?”

“Never mind.” said Dr. Clark.

Fifth paragraph, second sentence.

“Poor naive fools.” said Fred shaking his head.

End of fifth paragraph.

“They won't be joining the ranks now.” said Lionus with a smirk.

Sixth paragraph, third sentence.

“No jocularity being spread from up there.” said Officer McFinn.

End of sixth paragraph.

“Hey, they didn't make your precious Minister foul up so badly.” said Charlie.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Article title.

Article, first paragraph, first sentence, second comma.

A few of the Unspeakables gave a terrified gasp.
“How do you get strangled by a potted plant.” said Hannah.

“Perhaps someone didn't want him to get better?” said Dr. Clark.

“Don't be swaying over into my territory, Sam.” said Officer McFinn with a smirk. “You don't want your patients coming to me for medical care.”

“More like funeral needs.” said Dr. Clark with a laugh, but then he faltered.

“Enough with the pussy footing around, it was funny.” said Officer McFinn waving it off.

“Devil's Snare makes another appearance.” said a second year Ravenclaw. “Wonder if anything from Harry's first year is going to make a comeback too?”

Leroy groaned, “They making light of a tragic death, there are plenty of words to use other than throttle.”

“That's creepy, when you see the thing that's going to kill someone being delivered.” said a first year trembling slightly.
“Good, don't let him blame himself.” said Emmeline Vance.

“No one sells cuts of that plant.” said Snape with a snort, “No one outside Knockturn Alley.”

“That it was.” said Moody nodding appreciateively towards the girl. She was thinking the right way.

“Fingerprints?” asked Dr. Clark.

“They don't use that.” said Officer McFinn.

“Well, that's just stupid.” said Dr. Clark looking at the Aurors with confusion.

“Seriously, learn to forget something.” said Zacharias.

“What...no moment of realization?” asked Fred.

“They're slacking.” said George.
“What?” asked Ginny.

“I must be talking about Rita Skeeter.” said Hermione with slight smirk.

“But it wouldn't be as dramatic.” said Alicia.

“Keep it up and we'll wrap you up in bubble-wrap.” said Mrs. McFinn.

“Wha's that?” asked Hagrid.

“That's stuff fun!” said Mr. Weasley excitedly.

“That damned bitch.” muttered Leroy.

“I agree.” said Sirius.

“Why can't I swear?” asked Harry from his cocoon of blankets.

“They're adults, and too big to have their mouths washed out.” said Mrs. McFinn.

“Don't bother with that now.” said Snape with a sneer.
Dialogue set, third sentence, first pause.

“We heard.” said the students softly.

End of dialogue set.

Twelfth paragraph.

“Seriously, someone should have sent you home to be with me for a little while.” said Sirius.

Thirteenth paragraph, first sentence.

“They're just stupid little kids that don't know a good friend from a bad friend.” said Rudolph dismissing the rest of the school with a hand. “Though...now you all seem to see what he's really like and aren't stupid little kids anymore...well, not most of you anyway.”

Thirteenth paragraph, second sentence.

A few of the students shifted guiltily.

“You don't need to worry yet, he's not...gone...” said Hermione carefully.

“You're right, there, and he's now being watched.” said Chief Hawkeye.

End of thirteenth paragraph.

“Please, they wouldn't even dare to do that with Dumbledore here.” said Sirius scoffing loudly.

“You did.” said Percy.

“He's an idiot.” said Snape.

“I was innocent.” said Sirius loudly.

“He was a partially innocent, complete idiot.” said Snape.

Fourteenth paragraph.

“That's only the tip of the iceberg.” said Remus softly.
Dialogue set.

“I don’t stand it.” said Harry. “I just don't think about it mostly.”

Fifteenth paragraph, second sentence.

“Finally!” said Harry looking up at the ceiling.

End of fifteenth paragraph.

“F*cking finally!” said Harry removing his arms from the blankets and throwing his hands into the air.

“POTTER!” said McGonagall scandalized while Sirius and quite a few other people laughed loudly.

Sixteenth paragraph.

Dialogue set.

“Oh she found that the entire room would empty out when she came in.” said Sprout with a laugh.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“That's terrible.” said Rivers shaking his head.

Educational Decree Number Twenty-six.

“What the bloody hell?” said Rivers in horror.

“I'm glad I don't have to live through that now.” said Flitwick.

Eighteenth paragraph.
“Hah! It only took me a long time to come up with a loophole in those darn things.” said Lee.

Lee rubbed the back of his hand absently, there was no mark, but just the thought of it being there made his skin crawl.

Chief Hawkeye and the rest of the Rangers snickered.

“What's so funny?” asked Angelina.

“She no longer has any control over anything?” said Chief Hawkeye.

“What do you mean?” asked Hermione.

“I made a slight change in her imprisonment orders and sent her to level seven.” said Chief Hawkeye.

“What's on level seven? “ asked Ron.

“Let's just say, it's a living hell for those with the need to be in control.” said Lionus.

“Wonder if she'll choose with a coin toss.” said Flitwick in a whisper.

“Knew we should have put the finishing touches on those Snackboxes.” said Fred.

“And how would she know what the right answer is?” asked Lavender stiffly.
Sirius couldn’t stifle his laughter through coughing completely and was nudged by a smiling Remus.

“Thanks, Harry.” said Hagrid with a smile.

“Boring but safe, Hagrid.” said Flitwick who heard Hagrid mutter.

“Should just pick her up and toss her in the Dark forest.” said Fred.

“It could be either the Death Eaters lurking about or Umbridge.” said Remus.

“Finally, they follow the rules.” said Snape looking up at the ceiling and clasping his hands together.

Sirius placed a gentle hand on Harry's shoulder.

“That's a shock all in itself.” said Hannah with a mutter.
Twenty-fourth paragraph, second sentence.
Neville blushed.

Twenty-fourth paragraph, fourth sentence.
The adults in the room, minus the Rangers and Snape, looked at Neville with pride in their eyes. The Rangers looked at Neville with an almost appraising look and Snape shifted his gaze to an unoccupied area of the Hall.

End of twenty-fourth paragraph.
Ron, Harry and Hermione smiled proudly.

Twenty-fifth paragraph.
The hand that lay on Harry's shoulder tensed slightly, but then began to almost massage the body part underneath.

Twenty-sixth paragraph, second sentence.
“We sure he's trying to help?” muttered Sirius darkly.

Twenty-sixth paragraph, third sentence.
“Unfortunately it doesn't seem to be beneficial on the surface.” said Dumbledore.

End of twenty-sixth paragraph.
Dialogue line.
“I don't think I'll live that long.” said Harry.
“Shh...” said Sirius flinching and covering Harry's mouth carefully.
“He'd do just fine if he had an actual teacher, not just someone who's enjoying pushing his way through his mind.” said Fred.

“Settle down, Missy.” said Dr. Nicodemus looking at the book.

“For the final time, I'm not out to attack him.” said Snape with a bored voice.

“You have a funny way of showing it.” George said quietly.

“Take it easy, Hermione, he's just trying to help.” said Ginny.

Mrs. Weasley looked angrily at Hermione, but she took a deep breath and closed her eyes. “It hasn't happened yet, it hasn't happened yet.”

“I think future her, was talking about when has future Ron been right about Severus being the culprit dear.” said Mr. Weasley patting his wife's arm.
“We trusted Peter and he was part of the Order, how far do you think that statement will hold up.” snapped Sirius harshly. “And if you think about it, Voldemort (the room rippled with a collected flinch) trusts him and he's a Death Eater.”

Snape rolled his eyes.

“Doesn't hurt to think beyond your leaders.” said Chief Hawkeye. “I know for one thing, if they hadn't decided to think beyond their highest leader, America surely would not haven been created.”

“All this crazy stuff happened just in January?” asked Fred.

“What a nasty month.” asked George.

“Funny, I couldn't stop thinking about my first date.” said Sirius.

“Bet you can't even remember who it was with.” said Remus.

“Bollucks, I can remember.” said Sirius. “It was Marlene McKinnon.”

“Wrong.” said Remus.

“I am not!” said Sirius.

“You went with Marlene in your sixth year. You went on a date with Alice before she was going with Frank in your forth year.” said Remus.

Sirius blushed.

“You dated my mum?” asked Neville.

“Of he dated almost everyone's mom.” said Rudolph with a smirk. “Then they found the men of their dreams and ditched the playboy.”

Sirius frowned.
“How do you remember?” asked Hermione.

“He wouldn't shut up about the dates he went on beforehand. Though he was enough of a gentleman to not talk about the date afterwards.” said Remus.

Twenty-ninth paragraph, first sentence.

“Isn't that adorable.” said Tonks with a giggle.

End of twenty-ninth paragraph.

Dialogue set.

“How come I feel like she's planning something?” asked Charlie.

Dialogue line.

“He's got a date!” said Terry.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Hermione bowed her head and covered her face in her hands.

Dialogue line.

“No...don't do that.” said Sirius covering his eyes. “If I learned anything...is that you don't plan to meet up another girl the same day you have a date with another girl.”

“Even you had standards mutt?” asked Snape.

“I still have a bruise.” said Sirius rubbing his back.

Dialogue line.

Thirtieth paragraph.
“Don’t need more players going off on me.” said Angelina.

“Man they’re all eating at each other.” said Ernie.

“It’s Umrbidge’s fault.” said Harry, Ron and Hermione.

“Give it up.” said Rudolph with a smile.

“I’m sure future you looked just fine.” said Mrs. McFinn dabbing the corners of her eyes. “Oh, my little boy is growing up.”

Harry blushed, though he had a smile on his face.

“It's like not breathing.” said Harry softly.
“Good thing he didn't often leave the goalposts, he’d be a royal terror if he had to go after other fliers.” said Katie.

“Yeah, when I sloshed water all down my front.” said Harry.

“Crud...” said Alicia, “she's not going to shut up.”

Mrs. Diggory and Mr. Diggory looked at Pansy with an indignant look.

“Vicious little...” said Mrs. Diggory.

Harry and Ginny blushed slightly.

“What's up with that smile?” asked Mr. Weasley.

“Harry had the whole day planned for us.” said Ginny with a smile.
“Just don't be foolish to go after them yourselves.” said Kingsley.

“They must have lost control...” said a seventh year Hufflepuff student.

“Future Fudge must be almost sick with anger.” said Charlie. “Dumbledore's prediction about the Dementors going about their own business is coming true.”

“No thanks, not unless they have a bunch of cream and sugar to go with that.” said Harry.

“It's not really a place that guys go to hang out.” said Terry.

“I'm not fond of that place now.” said a seventh year Gryffindor.
“It's Lockhart's Valentine's Day thing all over again.” said Ron.

“Just what I need to do, cough up another little confetti heart.” said Harry.

“I love you.” said Leroy leaning forward and smiling gleefully.

Fred and George began gagging.

Mrs. McFinn, Dr. Clark and Officer McFinn laughed and giggled softly.

“What's so funny?” asked Remus.

“Oh...just...steaming up a window...in a small confined area...is something that's pretty popular on a date in the our world.” said Dr. Clark.

Sirius snorted loudly.

“What a pleasant date.” said Bill.
“I don't wanna know...if anything I hope it's just the slurping of coffee.” said Leroy.

Dialogue line.

Forty-fourth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Shouldn't have mentioned that.” said Harry covering his eyes. “Boy, I am stupid in the future.”

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Forty-fifth paragraph.

“Don't blame future me one bit.” said Cho.

“Me either.” said Padma.

“Can't see I'm proud of future me.” said Harry still covering his eyes.

Forty-sixth paragraph.

Forty-seventh paragraph.

“That's a girl, not a ball.” said Sirius with a snicker.

Forty-eighth paragraph.

“Oooh...” said a few of the boys, wincing.

“Tough luck mate.” said Dean.

Dialogue line.

“Jealousy card...won't work on him.” said Mrs. McFinn.

“How do you know?” asked Cho.

“Cause I know him.” said Mrs. McFinn reaching over Sirius to ruffle Harry's hair.
“Whoosh, right over his head.” said Dr. Clark bringing up a hand and swooping it over his head.

Cho looked away, guilt and rejection for a future that was no not even a remote possibility with Ginny dating him was gripping at her.

“S-Sorry.” said Cho.

Harry looked to the side, away from everyone's gaze.

“I dunno if changing the subject will help with this matter.” said Remus.

“You don't want her crying...don't blame you there.” said Sirius.
Dialogue set.
“Get your own therapist, I don't want to talk about it.” said Harry thickly.

Fifty-sixth paragraph.
“Time to leave.” said Sirius.
“Yeah, time to check out.” said Bill.

Dialogue line.
Dialogue set.
“What is with people thinking you and I are an item.” said Harry.
Hermione shrugged.

Fifty-seventh paragraph.
Dialogue line.
“At least in the Three Broomsticks, you can't tell who's having a bad time or not. Not with all the laughing.” said a sixth year Slytherin.

Dialogue set, third sentence.
“Future you asked him...sort of...and he didn't really say 'Hey Hermione, let's go to the pub after my date.' He let's other people string him along.” said Susan.
He's more of a passive leader.” said Luna dreamily.

End of dialogue set.
Cho blushed furiously. “I am so sorry.”
“Don't be.” said Harry shaking his head.
“I guess I was just happy to finally understand what she was trying to do.” said Harry.

“Maybe you should go to an all boys school...less drama.” said Dr. Clark.

Hermione wanted to cut your date in half.” Sirius said softly.

“It was just bad luck that she could only get Skeeter there that day.” said Remus. “Besides, a date lasting a half hour isn't the shortest one on record.”

“It isn't?” asked Ron.

“Nah, James' first date (that wasn't Lily) lasted...oh...about five minutes. He transfigured his date's hair color to red...that Hufflepuff girl wasn't stupid enough not to figure out who he was trying to get her to look like.” said Sirius. “Stupid twat didn't see anything wrong with that.”

The boys and even a few girls shrugged. They had no idea either.

“I hope that we learn why you're getting hurt soon.” said Lee.
“Oh brother.” groaned Zacharias.

“What?” asked Fred.

“He’s not covered in battle scars...” said George.

“Battle scar yes, but not scars.” said Fred.

“Life would have been different if all the good people hadn't been ripped from this world, and if all the bad people had blown away.” said Nightstrike. “But the sad thing is, you cannot save the world, not even us.”

“You think very strangely here.” said Sirius looking at Harry.

“Stuff it.” said Harry.

“Somehow, I don't think he's going to be told.” said a third year Ravenclaw.
“The ones on your face.” said Draco.

“Unless you have a herd of Manticores sitting outside your hut now, then it shouldn't be that bad.” said Dr. Nicodemus.

“Yay...more Skeeter...” said Ron rolling his eyes.

“I'd stand there and blink a few times too.” Ron.

“Well, it would have, if you didn't mention me.” said Hermione quietly.

“'You sure like to mention that stuff.” said Sirius with a smirk.
People started to laugh, finding the woman just as irritating as Hermione, Ron and Harry.

“And she'll slam you for slander and you'll be reduced to writing your little stories by hand.” said Leroy.

“Bull, you started all the crap.” said Rudolph.

“Disappointed in the stupidity of some adults, especially the person that wrote the damned thing.” said Harry.

“Why did future you call her again?” asked Ron with a groan looking at Hermione.
“Is she still here, can we give her a swift kick?” asked Bill.

“She's long gone.” said Chief Hawkeye.

“What?” asked the students together.

“What drink were you having with an onion?” asked Neville.

“Butterbeer.” said Luna.

Neville blinked.

“You know, you guys still jump when you hear his name too.” said Harry as the students snickered.

“Well, that's disheartening.” said a seventh year.

“Please let me remind you that I have done a complete overhaul of the Daily Prophet.” said Leroy covering his eyes. This woman was quickly killing the number of future subscribers the paper was going to have.
“Not necessarily, it just means that the government will do anything to keep the people nice and ignorant.” said Bathilda Bagshot.

“Sad how people prefer known lies than the actual truth.” said Rudolph. “Books are one thing, but the newspaper?”

“Well, I hope they like denying his existence while he's cursing them into oblivion.” said Tempest sternly.

“Partially right, but ideally, we're there to keep the people informed.” said Leroy.

“Sorry.” said Luna softly. “My future self doesn't know what she's saying.”

“He just doesn't know I'm an investor in his paper.” said Leroy with a bright smile.

“There's some animosity between the two papers, I won't lie.” said Leroy.
“She's not a nice woman.” said Luna coldly.

“Well, they're certainly not getting the truth from the Daily Prophet.” said Rudolph. “No offense.”

“None taken.” said Leroy.

“You won't get slapped with a lawsuit.” said Rudolph. “Well, at least one of the ones that comes to mind.”

“It's either that or unemployed with no chance of ever seeing your name in print again.” said Hermione.

Lionus smiled and clapped. “Atta girl!”

Hermione smiled happily.
End of chapter

“I can't wait till I don't have to hear about some idiots not believing me anymore.” said Harry running a hand down his face.

“Yeah, that'll be nice.” said Sirius with a smile and giving Harry a hug.

Harry stretched his long frame and sighed.

“Want to call it a day?” asked Sirius.

“We'll never get the books done if we keep cutting the days short.” said Harry.

“You need to rest.” said Sirius firmly. “Come on, how about we go flying?”

Harry's face brightened.
Fleeing

Voldemort scowled fiercely, he was currently under siege in Little Hangleton, having fled the Malfoy Manor due to the Rangers flocking in and out of the house and nearly discovering him deep within the recesses of the house.

He had known about the Rangers for quite some time, and even had a spy amongst their ranks. He had attempted to get a few more people to spy on their goings on, but the only way he could actually utilize their members was if they had already joined the Rangers. A Ranger that wished to join them, had to undergo a thoroughly rigorous background check, aptitude, behavioral test and an almost indecent mental scan, nothing was left to chance.

The only way that he managed to get a spy within the Rangers was due in fact to Ranger corporal had been complacent and not taken him seriously and was too confident in his own abilities. Voldemort, himself hadn't figured that the Rangers would be so strong, the corporal he had faced was on par with Mad-Eye Moody, an Auror that not even the great Lord Voldemort was willing to toy with in a magical duel. Moody had always been an Auror that he would want to kill himself, or at least send ten of his best Death Eaters to take down. Just to remove the long present thorn in his side.

Those Rangers were like a vulture, hovering over him, poised to strike at any moment....many fools said that Albus Dumbledore was the only man that he feared; they were wrong. There was an entire organization that caused him concern, and the only thing that gave him relief, was that they figured he was not worth their time. He wasn't foolish enough to be indignant about that, he considered it a blessing that they seemed too important to handle affairs dealing with him. He knew that if they took him seriously, it would be all over.

But something happened that attracted their attention, and whatever it was, he was feeling the white hot gaze of the Rangers. They were now bent on trying to find him and capture him, if they had sent a lieutenant or higher, he would have a very difficult time of getting away.

Instead of the grand Malfoy Manor, he was now holed up in the house where the sires of his father lived. It was as dark and cold as it was when he and Pettigrew arrived the year prior, it wasn't the ideal place to hide, if Dumbledore was in on the Ranger's involvement, then he would have been told by Potter the general area, but with all the protective spells that he had ordered on the house...it was as safe as he could possibly get at the moment.

“My lord, why did you leave Malfoy Manor?” came the quivering voice of Peter Pettigrew, who had caught onto the Dark Lord's robes and was apparated along with him.
“That is none of your concern Pettigrew.” hissed Voldemort. He sorely wished that one of the other Death Eaters came with him, Pettigrew was a fool on the best of days...what Black and Potter saw in him was beyond him.

He had plans this year and with the Rangers now hovering over him, there was no chance of them coming to bloom. He'd have to find a way out of this mess and get back on track.

Viper stood on the taller branches of a large oak tree just outside the Riddle House. He preferred being out and about, instead of in the cold walls of the Ministry, and handling all that aggravating paperwork. Though he, as a lieutenant was at the level where he could arrest anyone without real concrete evidence, there was a still a mountain of paperwork to do, even more so if they decide to kill the criminal in the field. And each criminal had a different form that they had assigned to them. For example: a serial killer that had qualified to have the Rangers after them: Name, Alias, Last Address, How many victims, Method of killing, Civilian knowledge, etc, etc.

Then they would have to fill out a bit more paperwork: They would have to answer if the regular or magical law enforcement agents knew of their existence, then there was a whole other stack of paperwork as to why they had to step in and take over.

They were told when they were mere Privates that they could not just swoop in and solve all the crimes that the common Police and Aurors could not solve or did not have the capabilities of keeping the criminal behind bars.

Thankfully, as this was a direct order from Chief Hawkeye, there would be no paperwork to worry about later. All he would have to do was make sure to keep the so-called Dark Lord here and away from his remaining minions.

This may not entail paperwork, but this sure was becoming quite dull.

He looked down out of the tree and noticed a large dark snake slithering towards the house languidly. He had been warned about this particular snake, in a flash he signaled one of the other nearby Rangers and in a bright flash of silver, the snake was gone.

This man was not going to have even his pet with him for comfort, the man was to be kept isolated and away from anyone.
Back at the school, Harry had enjoyed a stress relieving day of flying. Mrs. McFinn had to cover her eyes halfway through as he took one daredevil dive after another, but she wasn't the only one, Sirius had to cover his eyes a few times and Mrs. Weasley had almost fainted twice.

Harry hadn't been in the air for so long, and he was relishing every moment of it, the wind on his face and in his hair (which was now much longer than the last time he was on his broom). The exhilaration of acceleration...he missed it so much and if they weren't careful, he would never come down out of the sky.

Suddenly, there was a streak of red and white that came screaming up from the ground. Charlie stopped just a few feet higher and smiled down to him.

“Feels good, doesn't it?” said Charlie with a bright smile. “I think I would be going nuts without my broom, even I go flying once a weekend...granted we're usually dodging dragons in midair.”

“I don't think I want to ever go down to the ground.” said Harry flipping around on his broom and laying down on the handle.

“Show off...it's getting late and they want you down to eat something.” said Charlie.

Harry looked up and saw the sun beginning to set, it felt as if he had just gotten into air. Time really does fly when you're having fun. He followed Charlie down to the ground, doing a lazy spiral pattern to string out the time on his broomstick.

The moment he hit the ground, Mrs. McFinn ran over to him and placed her hands on both sides of his face.

“You scared the living daylights out of me!” said Mrs. McFinn with a nervous giggle.

“I was fine.” said Harry with a smile, “Having the time of my life too.”

“You weren't doing that stuff in your third year.” said Sirius with a weak smile.
“Well of course not, there's no practical reason to do that during a game.” said Harry as he stretched his arms and moaned in pleasure. “That was great...now I wanna cook.”

Remus chuckled. “Getting all your stress relievers done in one day?”

“I'm not running all over the place...so I'm missing out on one.” said Harry over his shoulder.

Sirius laughed and followed behind Harry. His gaze trailed down to the ends of his hair and an even bigger smile blossomed on his face. The hair that was turning gray at the ends, was now darkening, he was getting rest.

As they entered the Great Hall, they saw a group of people swarmed around a tall man dressed all in white, Glacier. The students were pelting him with different questions and he was dismissing them with a cold gaze.

Harry looked at the man inquisitively, and when the man caught Harry's gaze, he smiled.

“Hello Harry, thought I would come out and stretch my legs a bit.” said Glacier with a smile. “The rooms they had me in was nice, but I thought I would go and explore this school.”

“So you didn't go to school here?” asked a first year.

“Do I sound like an English person to you?” asked Glacier with a quirked brow.

“Well, no...” said the now blushing first year.

“Hmm...well, I decided to come down and meander, see what makes you tick on a day to day basis.” said Glacier, “I saw you fly earlier, I recommend doing that no less than three times a week...you seemed to thoroughly enjoy it.”

“I like that prescription.” said Harry with a smile.

“So you're the person Harry's been talking to?” asked Hermione looking at the man with interest.
That I am, and you must be Hermione.” said Glacier. “And you must be Ron.” he added looking over at Ron.

Ron nodded, dumbfounded and sent a weak smile over to Harry.

“How did you know who we are?” asked Hermione.

“The way Harry described you.” said Glacier simply. “Now, Harry...”

“Am I right when I think Harry...” began Hermione.

“I'm not answering any questions about Harry, not here, not to you, not to anyone that isn't a qualified Healer and who doesn't have any real business knowing.” said Glacier quietly in Hermione's ear. “Let it go.”

Hermione blushed. “I just wanted to know if I was right if Harry needed some stress relieving potions or something?”

“Once again, I'm not answering that.” said Glacier. “That's an area where you should not be going unless he instigates the conversation. Is that fair?”

“Y-Yes sir.” said Hermione.

Glacier looked down at the bushy haired girl and sighed. He was at first a little hesitant about becoming Potter's personal therapist, but he was seeing a change, he was seeing improvement...and he would have to make sure this progress was not hindered by anything.

“I want to have a word with you young lady, later.” said Glacier softly.

“What about sir?” asked Hermione.
“Just the way you phrase things, and the times when things should never be spoken.” said Glacier.
“For example, mentioning Krum around Ron.”

Hermione blushed even darker.

“You may bring whomever you like to sit with you on your side.” said Glacier.

Harry watched the exchange wand caught snippets of it when he moved closer, he tugged on the sleeve of the Ranger therapist and pulled him aside.

“What’s going on?” asked Harry.

“That session will be between me and Miss Granger, as yours are between yourself and I.” said Glacier.

Harry frowned. “Hey, everyone has been taking the mickey out of Hermione lately, lay off.”

“I will not be taking the proverbial mickey out of her, I can assure you of that.” said Glacier, “Now, calm down and go enjoy your dinner. I will be expecting you afterwards.”

He waved a long crystal wand a large plate of a different array of food piled high upon it and he took it out of the Great Hall.

The students and staff watched as he left and the younger years turned and stared at Harry in awe.

“He’s the one you’re talking to everyday?” asked a first year Slytherin.

“He was like Professor Snape, only dressed all in white!” said another Slytherin first year.

“I wouldn’t want to go into a therapy session with Snape in charge.” muttered a fifth year Hufflepuff.
Chief Hawkeye waited in the suite for Glacier to come back, he had something to tell him about Potter's case that was better to let him know right away rather than waiting. Glacier was a good man and a good healer, though it wasn't often that they would give him someone to do therapy or hands on healing with. The man was in charge of the basic medicinal needs of the Rangers, and he had his hands full already. In comparison, Dr. Nicodemus was strictly special needs or enhancement surgeries for men and women in the Ranger corp and he was hands on a large portion of the time.

The healers in the Rangers were easily the best, but Glacier was the second best Healer they had, like his name implied, he was cold, but if you could get him to melt a bit, he would be a superb ally.

The man in question came in the door, noticed his Chief and lay the plate down on the table.

“What can I do for you, sir?” asked Glacier.

“Just letting you know that we've got that Dark Lord guy in Little Hangleton, if you want to tell the boy that, you are more than welcome to.” said Chief Hawkeye. “He might relax a bit more when he's told.”

“I'll tell him tonight, withholding information seems to have a negative effect on him. I won't be holding this knowledge from him for long.” said Glacier as he poured himself a glass of wine.

Chief Hawkeye nodded and watched as Glacier took a forkful of pork into his mouth. “I haven't eaten here yet, how's the food?”

“Not as good as Last Meal, but close...and it's safe sir.” said Glacier with a slight smirk. The Chief was known to be the original paranoid, before Mad-Eye Moody.

“Nicodemus has been chastising me for not eating, better placate the man before he decides to give me an in-depth physical.” said Hawkeye. “You're at least gentler with your administrations. Too bad he get's first dibs on all surgically enhanced Rangers.”

“Doesn't want anyone meddling with his work I suppose.” said Glacier as he sipped his wine. “Even I have to answer to him when it comes to be my time.”
The Chief laughed loudly.
Alright, now there is something going on, I'm going to post what it is on the Facebook page I have, just type in the penname I have.

Harry sat in silence after what Glacier had told him. He wasn't sure what to feel as of that moment: he was feeling relief that Voldemort was now somewhere isolated and being monitored, he was angry that all this crap could have been avoided if they were to step in and take him out of the equation before anyone was hurt, and he was happy that soon, Lord Voldemort was going to get his comeuppance.

“Harry?” asked Glacier. “Talk to me, tell me what's going on in your mind.”

Harry didn't say anything.

Glacier sighed, he expected something like this. The boy was having a roller coaster of emotions and wasn't too sure which one was the one that he should be feeling. The Rangers' policy of not getting involved in the affairs of people who have the tools to help themselves and haven't gone out of control is not really accepted by those who feel that things have gone out of control or if they think they need the extra help.

But sadly, if they would come in and handle every problem that came across, that people would cry out for help and demand them to come and solve it, humans as a species would just become dependent on them and never fend for themselves.

They needed to train and strengthen themselves, to learn what they need to learn in order to function and take care of themselves. Rangers hid in the shadows and were a far cry from being layabouts, there were some people that crept up the criminal ranks and became so dangerous that they had to step in and remove them from society. Most permanently.

However, there were not just criminals that were removed from society, but a few scientists as well. These men had inadvertently discovered or built things that were deemed harmful to the populace by the Rangers' own scientists, an example would be such as a self-proclaimed clean energy was in fact a more toxic and potent version of radiation.
They scientists were handled much more kindly then their fellow criminal occupants. They were pulled from their labs respectfully and instead of putting them in Hell's Garden with the criminal element, they had placed them in an entirely separate environment. This place was a large brick building, much like a university and they would converse with other like minds and fellow scholars and spend the rest of their days pouring over tomes of various themes and experiment and study an assortment of different things, with full funding by the Rangers. They would be allowed to visit their families whenever they choose but they would be searched so they didn't release any harmful information into the world, but they would be able to publish the things they learned in magazines, books and request patents for things they've invented while in Ranger custody. As long as it didn't have any harmful side effects they would be allowed to share their discoveries with the world.

A few of the scientists were conflicted about how things were done in the Rangers, hindering the progress of mankind, despite how harmful it could be to the environment or to themselves, but when they were shown the clean energy device that one of them had developed turned on and the outcome that happened to a bunch of lab mice, they refrained from further complaints.

The Rangers had their fingers in a lot of pies, but none of them really solved the problems that the young man before him was experiencing right now.

“What would you like to be done with him?” asked Glacier.

Harry looked up.

“You can choose whenever you'd like to face up against him, or...we can take care of it ourselves, with what has been discovered, we can take him out...you only need to help a little bit....” said Glacier.

“Do I have decide now?” asked Harry.

“Not now, no, but somewhere down the line, you'll need to make the decision. Do you want to take on the role you were destined to take, or do you want to let others handle it.” said Glacier.

“Destiny...” snorted Harry. “I'm going to hate that term, especially with these books...can I wait till after the books to make a decision?”

“You can, but remember, since the books have been introduced, well, since Umbridge has ordered the books be made...the future isn't set in stone anymore, now that we are seeing these, actions are going to either happen or not, and words may or may not be spoken.” said Glacier.

Harry looked down once again and they sat in silence.

That night, Harry and Rudolph sat in the living room and took quills in hand to lower the mountain of paper even if it was by a small amount.

“My arm is falling off.” groaned Harry as he rotated his arm slowly.

“Here is the stack of Christmas lists that the family wants.” said Rudolph handing his Great-Nephew the thick stack of papers.

“I just said my arm is about to fall off.” said Harry with a slight pout.

“Roll up your sleeves, I've got some cooling lotion here...I figured that you'd be needing this after a while.” said Rudolph rubbing some peppermint smelling lotion on his nephew's upper arms.

“There you go, that should make it feel a bit better. Now, these are things that people want, whether they've really earned it this year or not...you don't have to get them what they want, you can give them whatever you want.”

“Let's take a look here.” said Harry as he adjusted his square framed glasses. “Uncle Sylvester...”

“Still lives at home with Mum.” said Rudolph absently. “Though...he is an official brewer of St. Mungos, he just takes the potions in from home...has his own potions lab down in the dungeons completely stocked. What does he want this year, though I can hazard a guess...”

“Oh...he wants a set of silver scales...” said Harry. “I know those have more precise measurements than the brass ones, but he doesn't have a set of his own already...being a potion brewer?”

“He probably blew his up again.” said Leroy.
“What?” asked Harry.

“He's a very good brewer, but...he tends to handle some volatile ingredients.” said Rudolph. “And he's got jittery hands at times.”

Harry smiled, and chuckled. “Merry Christmas, Uncle Sylvester, you're getting a new set of scales, should we get him multiple sets?”

“Mother and the rest of them tend to get him a new set, he generally gets about twenty or so every year.” said Rudolph.

“So...should I get him something else?” asked Harry.

“Are you talking about Sylvester? With all those scales he's perfectly set for an entire year, take even one away and he'll have to go out and buy it before the year is up...and he puts off his shopping till the very last minute. Nah, keep him stocked up.” said Leroy coming in and sitting down in a nearby chair.

“Alright, so one set of silver scales for Uncle Sylvester.” said Harry writing it down on a separate piece of parchment. “Who's next? Aunt Agatha, wasn't she the one that didn't think you were working down in Africa?”

“She was one of them.” said Rudolph. “What does she want?”

Harry read down the long flowery letter from his Great Aunt. “She wants...oh for the love of Merlin...a silver fox cloak. I may be over thinking it, but doesn't everyone in a castle have a fur coat of some sort?” said Harry looking at the list of possessions each person in the castle has.

Rudolph looked up into the ceiling thoughtfully. “If memory serves me, she was wearing a mink stole when she came with Mother...so yeah, I'm thinking that she's got more than just that one, you'll have to ask that mirror on that one.”

The rest of the paperwork for the approaching holidays seemed to go along the same lines, Harry read what that particular person wanted for Christmas, asked for the mirror if they already had one, see if they just wanted to resell it for the money, or if there was something that they had done in the past year to warrant them getting something something smaller or better that year. Rudolph also helped with telling him a little bit about each family member and what they liked, either giving Harry the notion of giving them something else as more of a surprise or placating the family

For the most part, every member of the family was going to get at the very least one of the things they wanted for Christmas, a few family members were given something on a much smaller scale due to them trying to pillage the family castle, but what they did receive, as an extra present from the new Patriarch of the family, wasn't a cheap trinket to show that they needed to live a bit more frugally.

What they each received was something that Harry put quite a bit of thought into it: each person received a glass leaf. It was in a crystal dome, suspended in midair and spinning slowly around within the case. Every member of the family received different types of leaves, oak, maple, ginkgo, elm, etc and a small passage in Harry's handwriting and embossed into the glass in ruby red.

_A cutting from the Potter Family Tree._

Along with the leaf that each member of the family, young, old, senior and toddler received, they received a personal note from Harry (which almost caused Harry's hand to nearly fall off till he thought to use a dictating quill.) and addressed them individually.

Rudolph and Leroy thought the idea was sweet and charming, but they didn't understand what the “cutting” part meant. Then they saw what Harry had in mind for the Matriarch. She was to receive a large crystal elm tree and it was to be placed in the large Entrance Hall of the Potter family castle, Paradise. The leaves that tinkled softly against each other with each breath of a breeze had elegant writing on them, naming each member of the family.

He had utilized Dumbledore's assistance (and the constant guilt the old man felt towards the young wizard) and had him conjure the tree and all the leaves so that all Harry had to do was give him a list of all the members of the Potter family. And with this present, he was really all set. Rudolph said that the Patriarch normally gave everyone a small present as well as one thing they would ask for. He figured that this would be the biggest thing he was going to do, unless another idea came to mind, but if his family members were all going to be this needy, then perhaps Harry would take it down a few pegs.

He walked through all the bills and whatnot for the family members living in Paradise castle and saw that since he had taken responsibility the family was saving on average about one hundred galleons per person, per day. They no longer had grand feasts every night but a structured meal consisted of one appetizer, one salad, one main dish, and a dessert. The House-elves were under strict instructions from him, (he had summoned all of them to Hogwarts and met with each one), to follow his set plans for meals, no more waste of food.
His aunts and uncles have told the House-elves to back to the way things were, but they had, proudly his Great-grandmother had written to him, stood up before them and said they could not. It seemed they also didn't like the wasting of food without any real reason. The House-elves there at the school had to make a lot of food for so many different children that actually, by the end of the evening, there was little leftovers to be had.

Any leftovers that the students had amassed, mostly large pieces of chicken or beef, were diced or carved up to make sandwiches the next day. Though, Harry sincerely doubted that the slightly prissy family he now had to look after would now lower themselves to eating sandwiches.

How they eat up the leftovers was beyond him, and at the moment he didn't rightly care. As long as they learned that despite living in a castle and all that entails, if they were unwilling to do anything with their lives than they didn't deserve all the glorious banquets that they seemed to love to have.

The moment that they decided to do something constructive, than he would reward them. He felt a little bad at how he was treating them for a while, but then he read a few of his second cousins letters (those around his age) and their complaining about losing their evening feasts. After that, he decided to keep on the course, just to see if they'll either adapt or go out and see if they can't work to get back what they used to have.

Sirius stood in the door frame as he watched Harry flit through several papers, writing down figures and tallying them up on an abacus. He had never seen Harry this focused, and yet relaxed before, as if he were just working at a job he had had for a few months. He wondered how Harry would be as a patriarch, his father, Orion Black, was the Black Patriarch and he could be labeled as a borderline tyrant with how he ruled the family with an iron fist.

Not only did he demand respect from everyone in the family, didn't matter how old they were, they had to pay a tribute money as well as the Potter family loan repayment. If someone had married into another Pureblood family that was on the same social status, than a whole new set of rules came with which family was to get the tribute money.

Thankfully, Sirius was the last remaining Black, so many conjoined families to the Black family (while he was incarcerated) didn't have to pay the monthly tribute. Lucius had tried to have his wife assume the title of Matriarch, but ancient family artifacts didn't accept her, not while Sirius was alive at any rate. He had a bunch of paperwork he himself had to do once these books were over, but if Harry could handle the vast, powerful, and influential Potter family at the tender age of fifteen, than he himself could handle the last Black stragglers.
Harry looked up and met Sirius’ eyes. “What’s up?” asked Harry.

“Just seeing how you're doing, you know.” said Sirius with a roguish smile. “Since we've started these things, it's not often I'm far away from you for very long.”

Harry smiled softly. “Getting lonely without me?”

“Just getting bored out of my skull, Remus is slowly becoming back to who he used to be, but he's still as entertaining as an old cauldron.” said Sirius.

“I heard that.” said Remus smacking the back of Sirius' head. “Almost done with your work for the night?”

Harry looked down at the paperwork before him. He had been putting it off for a while and only doing a little of it at a time, but he should really do a bit more before turning in.

“I'm got a few more to do, why? What's up?” asked Harry again as he took another roll of parchment from the towering pyramid of scrolls.

“No reason, just checking on you.” said Remus. “Want something to drink?”

Harry unfurled a long list of demands from one of his Great-Aunts. “I think a stiff scotch, just to deal with this one.”

“All out, can I offer you a cup of tea or hot chocolate?” said Sirius with a straight face as Remus snickered.

“I'll take hot chocolate.” said Harry as he scribbled something down and placed the parchment in a basket where other parchments were safely tucked away.

As Sirius walked away to get the drink, Remus sat in a chair beside Harry. “So what do you think of the family? Are they as high maintenance as James said they were?”
“Yup.” said Harry as he took another scroll out, “Well, wait, what did he he say?”

“Best you don't know.” said Remus with a smile. “If you want to be unbiased.”

“Let him be biased, a few of them deserve to have the snarky attitude snatched out of them.” said Sirius bringing in three steaming cups.

Harry smiled softly. “I've got a few that aren't happy with me.”

“Well, they can be unhappy all they want, there's nothing more that can be done, and frankly, they'd probably get the same treatment as Rudolph with him being the head of the family.” said Sirius. “Though, he's a nice guy and knows the quirks of some of the Potter family members…”

“Well, I'll be able to figure out some of them, when we go to see them over the summer.” said Harry.

“I just hope that you want to come back to Night's Rest after visiting Paradise, from what James says...the name fits.”
The next morning, Harry walked down to the kitchens and prepared making a selection of different morning pastries. He was whipping a large bowl of icing when someone he hadn't talked to in a while came in.

“Hey, son.” said Lionus with a smile. “I thought I smelled something good coming from down here.”

“You still following me?” asked Harry as he waved the spoon of icing over a tray of turnovers, drizzling the white icing on the pastries.

“Better believe it, just because we have the Dark Lord in seclusion, doesn't mean that we're just going to drop everything security wise.” said Lionus.

Harry shrugged and went back to what he was doing.

“I'm amazed you're not screaming about people tailing you...” said Lionus. “Like you were in the books.”

“When I'm down here, I leave a specific plates of stuff out and they seem to disappear over time.” said Harry as he gestured to an empty plate. “I know I'm being followed now, and there is a reason that I can understand.”

“Explains a few crumbs I saw on one of my Ranger's front.” said Lionus looking up into the ceiling. “Anyway, I'm going to be updating you a bit further on Voldemort and I need to set one firm ground rule. I'm going to tell you where he's at, but you aren't to go off and meet him, I don't care how much you've been holding back and how much you are itching to do away with him permanently, you don't leave the castle without a damn good reason. You have no magic to speak of and I don't want you sending or bring someone with you to where he's at.”

“Alright.” said Harry, his gaze fixed on the Ranger. Glacier hadn't told him where Voldemort was but just told him that they had him in a sort of “custody”.

“He's in Little Hangelton. The Riddle house.” said Lionus, looking at Harry closely.

Harry blinked and looked off to the side.

“Don't make me have a Ranger become your personal bodyguard and have him or her stand right beside you in the Great Hall. I'll do it, just to stop an incident that seems to happen at the end of every one of your school years.” said Lionus shaking his finger at the young lad.

Harry smiled in spite of himself. “Yes sir.”

An hour later, they all gathered in the Great Hall and settled down for another set of chapters.

“What's going on this weekend?” asked an excited first year.

“As far as I'm aware, it will be much like the first weekend we experienced since we started these books.” said Dumbledore. “I don't believe there is anything significant going on. Christmas isn't for a good six weeks.”

“Oh...I can't wait for that! Do you think we'll be here?” asked Mrs. McFinn.

“I sure hope so, I think Albus said we'd be able to see it regardless if the books are still going.” said Dr. Clark.

“I hope the books are still going...I'd like one more Christmas...” said Mrs. McFinn looking longingly at Officer McFinn.

“Yeah, I'd like that too.” said Dr. Clark. “I still owe him for that tennis racquet.”

“Learn to actually swing the bloody thing, that'll get me back.” said Officer McFinn with a laugh.

He cleared his throat and read the chapter title: “Chapter Twenty-six”

“Something tells me that this has got Trelawney all over it.” said a sixth year Slytherin.

First paragraph, first sentence.

“Well, of course, that's gotta come first.” said Fred.

“The truth and vindication of a fellow student...” said George.

“That's got to wait in line.” said Fred.

“The public just has to know where the Snorkack is at.” said George.

End of first paragraph.

“They make very good articles.” said Chief Hawkeye with a kind smile. “Still don't know if I buy the existence of such a creature.”

Luna looked over to the Chief thoughtfully, while Hermione had a slight smile.

“But we have verified the existence of one of those creatures, so there just might be the chance that a Crumple-Horned Snorkack does exist.” said Chief Hawkeye honestly.

Second paragraph, second sentence.

“I know this hasn't happened, but good for you.” said Sirius.

End of second paragraph.

“I'd be whacking out personally.” said Tonks.
“You...whack out...when you can't find your favorite fizzy drink.” said Moody with a gruff chuckle.

Dialogue set, first sentence.

“Oh, god...I don't want to think about what's she's going to do.” said Mrs. McFinn worriedly.

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue set.

“She tried getting you jealous and then freaked out. But then again, perhaps future you shouldn't have mentioned Hermione. Though, once again, how were you supposed to phrase that?” said
“Well, you should have picked a better day than Valentines' Day.” muttered a seventh year Ravenclaw.

“So sue me for being an upfront guy on a date.” said Harry throwing up his hands.

“I thought you were very pretty romantic.” said Ginny.

“That's without a chore coming afterward.” said Harry.

Hermione looked down, but she had a slight smile and a blush.

“Where do I rank?” asked Ginny playfully.

“Perfect first ever date material.” said Harry with a smile. “And every other date after that.” he added quietly.

“If normal people are supposed to think that, then I guess I'm socially inept.” said Harry throwing his hands up in defeat once more.

“You learn those techniques, but only after lots of practice.” said Sirius and Dr. Clark. They both looked at each other, a stunned look on their faces. “You and I are going to have a long talk later.” they said in unison.

“Oh sweet Merlin...no...” said Remus covering his eyes and shaking his head.

Mrs. McFinn giggled.
“They both try, but Harry is more...receptive...” said Hermione.

“Cause you and him have girl talk sometimes?” asked Ginny with a giggle.

Hermione smiled.

End of dialogue set.

“That would be way too easy and would make way too much sense.” said all the boys and men in unison.

“Oh, you think you men and boys are easy to figure out do you?” asked Angelina with her hands on her hips.

“Sure we are, you mention the five favorites and you'll have our undivided attention.” said Sirius.

“Five favorites?” asked Katie.

“Yeah, Quidditch, food, brooms, liquor, and sex.” said Sirius ticking them off his fingers.

“Sirius!” said Molly in a scandalized voice.

“She said guys were hard to understand. You lot have a lot more to be worried about, let's see....uh...hair, skin, nails, weight, shoes, clothes, music, wrinkles, getting married...the list goes on.” said Sirius. “We blokes, are easy.”

A few of the males in the room nodded.

“Write a book, Hermione, even I would buy it.” said Rudolph.
“Being covered in mud, I can see it being a nightmare.” said Leroy.

“I'd say something, but you're right, we need you three.” said Angelina. “Ginny would be a dynamite seeker, but the Beaters we had...”

Said Beaters blushed.

“You touched Bertha? I'm insulted.” said Fred.

“Seriously, you named your broomstick?” asked Hermione. (“Bertha?” said Sirius staring at Fred)

“Sure...why not?” asked George.

“Charlie named his.” said Fred.

“He named his Drago.” said George.

Charlie blushed.

Ron looked over and stared at Hermione.

“This was future me. I didn't say it.” said Hermione quickly.
Ron blushed.

Ninth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Harry nodded.

Tenth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“The not really what we care about, we've got our lives all planned out, N.E.W.T.s don't have much weigh in on that.” said Fred with a shrug.

Dialogue set.

Lee smiled and sent a wink over to Harry.

Eleventh paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Kill him, more like.” said George.

Dialogue line.

“Aww!” said Fred and George together as they enveloped each other in a hug.

“That's creepy, that is.” said a first year Gryffindor.

Dialogue line.

“It's either a way to vent our frustrations and go completely mad at the games that stops us from killing each other or just up and killing and hexing each other. I think that's inter-house unity, the act of not beating the snot out of each other at odd random times.” said Charlie.

Twelfth paragraph.

“You sad, sad little girl.” said Fred.

“We should really let her take a swing at one of those bludgers, she'd change her tune.” said George.

“Or break her arm mid-swing.” said Fred.

“We'll we'd have to get one of the practice bludgers, those are softer.” said George.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Our happiness doesn't revolve around that.” said Fred.

“It's whether Smith can shut his mouth and keep it shut.” said George.

Thirteenth paragraph.

Hermione smiled and laughed softly.

Fourteenth paragraph, second sentence, first colon, first comma.

The Gryffindor students groaned.

Fourteenth paragraph, second sentence, first colon, second comma.

Angelina covered her mouth with her hand.

Fourteenth paragraph, end of second sentence.

“Oh for pity's sake.” said Sirius covering his eyes.
“Pretty brave to catch it right in front of someone's nose.” said Harry.

“Oh, that's nasty.” said Leroy.

“And now she's gone! Doin' the happy dance!” said Harry weaving back and forth with a smile. “Did you take something that Dr. Nicodemus gave you, again?” asked Remus.

“And you do, you just need to buck up and suck it up.” said Angelina.

“Nice.” said Ron. “Hey, you want it bad enough, you'll stop asking to resign.” said Harry.

“Really, really think that leaving is the best for us, if we have to endure that.” said Fred quietly, so as his mother didn't hear.
Seventeenth paragraph.

Dialogue set.

Eighteenth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Can't save it now, we didn't see it.” said Fred.

Nineteenth paragraph.

Ron blushed. “Don't snore that loud.”

“Bull.” said the boys in his dorm.

Twentieth paragraph, third sentence.

Harry looked down at the ground.

End of twentieth paragraph.

Twenty-first paragraph, second sentence.

“Should have spilt his drink on her, call it an accident.” said Fred.

“Not many drinks are there at the games.” said George.

“Could have brought one.” said Fred.

“Like grape juice...that stuff never comes off.” said George.

End of twenty-first paragraph.

“Well, so much for clearing his mind, he certainly isn't going to succeed with that.” said Flitwick.

Twenty-second paragraph, first sentence.
“Yeah, not the start to pleasant dreams.” said Fred.

End of twenty-second paragraph.

Twenty-third paragraph, first sentence.

Sirius started to laugh softly. “Wh...what?”

End of twenty-third paragraph.

Twenty-fourth paragraph.

“Oh, no...not this again...” said Remus.

Twenty-fifth paragraph.

Several people began to lean forward in their chairs.

Twenty-sixth paragraph, first sentence, third comma.

“Oh, come on!” said Dennis.

End of twenty-sixth paragraph.

“I can't time them.” said Ron defensively.

Twenty-seventh paragraph, third sentence.

“Well, don't we seem on the ball.” said Tonks.

End of twenty-seventh paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Has that happened often?” asked Dr. Clark.
“Only with older owls, they tend to get a bit confused and land in front of the wrong person.” said Bill.

“I've had to redeliver maybe thirteen letters since my first year.” said Harry.

“Sixteen for me.” said Blaise.

“Pushy little buggers.” said Ron. “What's with all the owls?”

“The article must have been published earlier than expected.” said Dumbledore.

“That's brave.” said a fifth year Hufflepuff. “You could lose a finger in all those beaks.”

“Wonder if the photo is impromptu or not.” whispered Leroy.

“Oh boy...better have more than just yourself reading those.” said Rudolph. “Lee gets really agitated when he reads stuff sent by readers of the Prophet.”
“Well, don't you two sound excited.” said Remus with a smile.

“Burn that one, obviously a delusional nut.” said Fred.

Dr. Clark stared. “Tell me that your hospital doesn't have those.” he said looking fearful at the Headmaster.

“They do.” said Snape plainly.

He turned and leaned forward. “I don't give any sort of damn, you are not allowed to set foot in one of those.” he looked furious and leaned back into the bowl. “Sadistic....backwards....medieval mother....” he muttered darkly.

“Are there benefits to those spells?” asked Harry leaning away from the cursing doctor.

“No, there are a few people that feel that that particular form of 'healing' should be removed. However, they still hold fast to that it can be beneficial, not that it's used all that often.” said Dumbledore.

Harry looked thoughtful, then turned to look over at his Great Uncles. “Hey, Uncle Rudolph, do I have any...leverage over St. Mungos itself?”

“Well, we own the buildings, fund the hospitals and pay the staff....yeah...in the swing of things, we've got complete control over it. I think you can find time to fix a few things in there.” said Rudolph smiling gleefully. “Wonder why my Father never tried, or your Grandfather...as far as I know, they were against it too.”

“Hey, if people are having fun, we want in.” said George.
“Yay, no more stupidity.” said Harry looking up and smiling.

“Wonder if that's a good 'wow', or a bad 'wow'.” said Ron.

“Crud bunnies.” said Harry.

Sirius looked over to Harry and chuckled. “What?”

“Can't swear, so...what else can I say?” said Harry with a shrug.

“I'm just a very popular person, when was the last time you didn't get a letter that wasn't Ministry orientated.” said Fred.

“My mail is none of your damn business.” said Harry.

Mrs. McFinn looked over.

“Sorry.” said Harry sheepishly.

“And say hello to a few new detentions.” snarled Remus to the book.
Thirty-third paragraph.

“Way to support me, future you.” said Harry folding his arms.

Dumbledore hung his head.

Dialogue line.

“Do...you...speak....English...?” said Nightstrike slowly and loudly.

Dialogue line.

Thirty-fourth paragraph.

“I don't know if I should be worried or fall over laughing.” said Sirius.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Why did future me tell her that?” said Harry shaking his head.

Dialogue set.

“You sick, twisted...” said Mrs. Weasley trembling with rage.

“She's completely delusional.” said Tempest. “She honestly believes that she's doing what's right.”

Thirty-fifth paragraph.

Dialogue set.

“She can't do that!” said Rivers angrily. “You can't stop someone from reading the paper!”
He then glared up at the ex-Minister. “Like I said before, I'm going to be thoroughly inspecting anyone you have positioned in your Department of Education and anyone else you placed in a teaching post. I won't be having this!”

“I think, Fudge, you've successfully put yourself on the pedestal of worst Minister in the history of Great Britain.” Lionus said with a sneer.

“Not the world?” asked George.

“Oh no...there were a few that were even worse than him.” said Chief Hawkeye.

Thirty-eighth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“I'm amazed you two don't just explode from how confusing she can be.” said a second year Slytherin.

“We solve that by looking at each other and thinking 'it's just her, we're reasonably normal'.” said Harry with a smile.

“You two are far from normal” said Hermione with a pout.

“Three of a kind.” said Snape with a smirk.

Dialogue line.

“Got to admit, we were all gung ho about rebelling for a while, before all this.” said Lee.

Thirty-ninth paragraph.

“Too much information, too much information.” said Ron shaking his head.

Dialogue set.

“And all it really cost me was more nights of digging into my hand with a sharp quill.” said Harry flexing his scarred hand slightly.

Fortieth paragraph, second sentence.

Flitwick and a few of the other teachers looked happy and excited.
Professor Sprout blushed slightly.

“I would have given him thirty.” said Flitwick with a smile.

“Sugar and Ice mice are my particular favorite treat.” said Flitwick with a smile.

“I think I'd cut off at three, personally.” said Harry. “And I'd rather not become Minister of Magic.”

“Girls are nuts.” whispered Colin.

“Well, my knee doesn't want to hear it.” said Fred.

“You can talk to my hand, he'll hear you out.” said George.

“Not my fault your dads made dumbass life choices.” said Harry.

Nott and Draco looked uncomfortable while Crabbe and Goyle ate their snacks greedily.
“Harry.” said Mrs. McFinn.

“Sorry.”

Dialogue line.

Forty-fifth paragraph.

“Not much of a surprise.” said Hermione quietly.

Dialogue line.

Forty-sixth paragraph, second sentence.

“Future you started it!” said Fred.

End of forty-sixth paragraph.

“I would have snapped in twenty minutes, if I had to recount every little detail.” said Sirius.

Forty-seventh paragraph.

“You didn't clear your mind...” groaned Snape.

“Can't seem to.” groaned Harry in response.

Forty-eighth paragraph.

“Uh oh...” said Katie quivering slightly.

Forty-ninth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue line.
Dumbledore leaned forward slightly.

Fiftieth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

Fifty-first paragraph.

Dialogue set.

“How is he talking in the third person?” asked Dean.

“Shh!” said Neville quickly.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Fifty-second paragraph.

Fifty-third paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Thank goodness that's over.” said Hermione looking fearfully over to Harry.

Fifty-fourth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Way to reassure him, Ron. Great bedside manner.” said Sirius throwing his arm around Harry's shoulders and pulling him towards himself.
Fifty-fifth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

Fifty-sixth paragraph.

“I'm glad I don't see this, I'd be terrified.” said Ron softly.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

Madam Bones stood up quickly, but the Ranger doctor held his hand up.

“Don't worry, my dear, I've got a Healer on her way to St. Mungos and a nice squad of Rangers accompanying her.” said Dr. Nicodemus.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Fifty-seventh paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Bet that unnerves him.” said Bill.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.
“And I haven't got anyone to tell.” said Harry. “Even before this, I couldn't send a letter to Sirius without it being intercepted, McGonagall's had got her hands full with trying to stop different students from pranking Umbridge and getting expelled and Dumbledore wasn't looking at me.” said Harry.

“There were students trying to prank Umbridge, despite the detentions?” asked Remus in shock.

“Well, they were getting to be pretty vengeful and a bit offensive on our end.” said Harry.

Fifty-ninth paragraph.

“Serve the bastard right.” growled Moody.

Sixtieth paragraph.

“This hasn't happened yet!” said Fred.

“Wait, it doesn't sound like we were doing anything wrong this time.” said George.

“Oh...never mind.” said Fred.

Dialogue set.

The Aurors and even the Rangers looked at her approvingly.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

“Sounds exactly what happened.” said Dumbledore.

“That it does.” said Lionus.

Hermione smiled, the Rangers were no longer trying to berate her anymore!

Sixty-first paragraph.
“True, but it's a good thing we did.” said Harry.

“Make up your mind, Granger.” said Snape rubbing his eyes.

Well, that didn't last long. thought Hermione. But this is Professor Snape, nothing new there.

“What? Oh my god!” said Nightstrike groaning and throwing a hand over his eyes. “He just got verification about the innocence of a man and the reason behind another man's death and future you wants him to forget it?”

Hermione looked away, she didn't feel too bad, that Ranger did say 'future you'.

“That's sad when you can't speak openly to your friends.” said Luna.

“None of your damn business.” said Sirius.
Sirius held Harry even closer to himself.

“Oh boy...” said Ernie. “This won't end well.”

“Don't blame me, blame him.” said Harry nodding over to Dumbledore.

“You okay?” asked Remus.

“Fine, just...tired...” said Harry.

“Want to stop for the day?” asked Sirius.

“No...just tired.” said Harry.

Sirius levitated Harry's legs up and held him in his arms. “Want to go back to sleep?”

Harry shrugged.
bloody mouth, he'd calm the hell down and clear his mind!” said Sirius.

“This hasn't happened, mutt!” snapped Snape.

“You saying that you'd act differently now? Doubt it.” scoffed Sirius.

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“I hope future me kicks his ass.” said Sirius.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, first sentence, third comma.

“Easy Holly...easy...” said Dr. Clark holding Mrs. McFinn back.

“I'll show him, not special or unimportant...” hissed Mrs. McFinn. Snape leaned back slightly and quick look of fear flashed across his face.

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

Sixty-eighth paragraph.

“One satisfied in what way, I wonder?” asked Madam Hooch.

Dialogue line.

Sixty-ninth paragraph.

Seventieth paragraph.

“Yes!” said Dumbledore out loud, but when he saw others staring, he coughed softly into his hand and sat back.
Officer McFinn looked around quickly and with a look of great physical exertion, a flash of light went around the room.

“What was that?” asked Fred and George together.

Harry stared at the book, likewise all the other adults. The children including Bill, Charlie, and Tonks were looked around confusedly.

“What’s he saying?” asked Ron.

“I don't know, his mouth looks like it's moving but nothing coming out, even his lips looked blurred.” said Hermione.

Snape didn't look at anyone, especially not anyone from the bowl, he knew that there wasn't anything in their eyes but pity. He went years without pity and even the word made him sick to his stomach. He didn't want their emotional garbage. He sent a glare over to the bowl, but was staggered when he saw.

Harry, Sirius, Remus, Dr. Clark and Mrs. McFinn looked at Snape, pity not in their eyes, or sympathy, but understanding.

“You don't sound all that happy about it.” said Bill. He didn't know why that the Potions master and the people in the bowl were staring at each other, but it was quite unnerving, was it really bad what they had heard? Did they hear about what Snape was like in his Death Eater days? What was said?
“I don’t remember you telling him a spell of any sort.” said Mr. Weasley quietly.

“Ah, not that light again.” said Lee.

“And back to sound.” said Lee throwing up his hands.

“Finally!” yelled a few of the students.

“You put me there, and I finally got through the damn door.” said Ernie.
“Well, if I had someone to actually walk me through clearing my mind, other than the person that really pisses me off normally...” said Sirius with a weak growl.

“I'm a fifteen year old KID” said Harry sternly. “I'm not the one whose supposed to fight, I'm supposed to be lazy and sloppy.”

“What is going on now?” asked Mrs. Weasley.

“Unusual like walking suits of armor, ghosts floating about the place and the occasional random magic thing? No...‘bout as normal as Hyde Park.” said Dr. Clark.

“And that takes A LOT! “said Sirius, Remus, Fred and George.
“I think she was sacked.” said Angelina.

“It shouldn't happen publicly.” muttered Rivers angrily.

Dialogue set.

“Sick, twisted...” said Hermione with a growl of her own.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue set, first sentence.

“He can't countersign!” shouted Rivers. He stood up and stormed out of the room.

“He might be a while.” said Lionus, he flitted his eyes upwards, and then towards the door. He then settled back to listen to the reading.

End of dialogue set.

“The only one that's embarrassing us, is you, toad.” said Hannah.

Eighty-eighth paragraph.

Dialogue set.

“As much as I don't like her, I wouldn't want to see her leave.” said McGonagall.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Eighty-ninth paragraph, second sentence.

“Got to admit, you've got style.” said Lionus.

Eighty-ninth paragraph, third sentence.

“Style to spare.” said Dr. Nicodemus with a chuckle.
“Funny thing is, she was the first to be sacked.” said Katie.

“Wonder why?” asked Blaise.

The rest of the staff smiled at McGonagall who was determined to not look at any of them.

“They don't need her lodgings, have you seen how many rooms this place has?” said Dr. Clark.

“She really likes those brand new laws doesn't she?” said Micheal.

“I think with Rivers' enthusiastic cooperation, those laws will be removed quite quickly.” said Chief Hawkeye.
Dialogue set.

“Wonder who they got?” asked Lavender.

End of chapter.

“I? I was your Divination successor?” said Firenze.

“So it seems, but I think that perhaps, something happened in the forest to prolong your herd to have altercations with you,” said Dumbledore.

Firenze looked thoughtful. “The stars are altering quite a bit for these books.”
“Wonder how Firenze is as a teacher...” said Fred.

“Might be kind of interesting.” said George.

“Betting that Umrbidge wasn't so fond of the idea.” said Lee.

“Let's see...the Chapter Twenty-seven,” said Officer McFinn.

Tempest and Firenze exchange looks.

Hermione blinked but then smiled to herself in a sort of vicious sort of way.

“What's going on with her?” asked Sirius.

“I don't think I want to know.” said Harry.

---

Parvati blushed.

---

Tempest looked over to the young witch with disdain, said witch was blushing furiously.

---

Firenze and Tempest looked affronted while Hermione buried her hands in her face. “This hasn't happened yet.” she said in a weak voice.

---

“Oh sweet lord...” said Remus shaking his head.
Dialogue set, first sentence.

“Tempest...I'm with you one hundred percent, but she's a child...and this hasn't happened yet.” said Dr. Nicodemus slowly. He was a little put off the young girl, but starting up a feud with Tempest would only get the young lady killed.

The female centaur was looking at Hermione coldly. Hermione was trying to sink into her and Ron's seat and hide from sight.

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

“I think they're funny, they brighten my day.” said Professor Sprout.

Dialogue line.

“Too nice all the bloody time...” muttered Zacharias.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

“Are you defending her?” asked Ron.

“I don't know, Ronald, this hasn't happened yet.” snapped Hermione.

“Miss Granger...” said McGonagall in a warning tone.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, second sentence.

Firenze looked away and placed a gentle hand on Tempest' shoulder. “She'll learn, she has never had much interaction with the my herd.”

End of dialogue set.
Third paragraph.
Dialogue line.
Fourth paragraph.
“Why does everyone hate me?” said Ron looking up.
“Oh, we love you Ronnie...” said Fred in a cutesy voice.
“Can't you tell by our hostility towards you?” said George.

Dialogue line.
Fifth paragraph.
“We can accommodate quite a variety of different people of various races.” said Dumbledore with a twinkling smile.

Dialogue line.
Sixth paragraph.
“First time seeing him in a long time, I'll warrant, but you being you, he'll remember you.” said Sirius with a slight nudge.

Dialogue line.
Dialogue set.
Firenze smiled softly.

Dialogue line.
“Though...when it did not quite specify.” said Firenze.

Seventh paragraph, first sentence.
Firenze touched his chest absently. The bruise had long since faded, thanks to Tempest's healer friend, but it was still shameful the way his herd had treated those they should consider their allies.
“Not nearly as intimidating as Tempest is.” said Fred quietly.

Eighth paragraph.

Dialogue set.

“I do miss it.” said Firenze.

“If you’d like, I will accompany you to the herd, give them a 'talking' to.” said Tempest.

“Perhaps someday soon.” said Firenze softly.

Dialogue line.

“Not that deep, there's some...creatures in there that're difficult to get on friendly terms.” said Hagrid.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, second sentence.

Lavender blushed.

End of dialogue set.

“Honestly, do you think there is only one of us in each forest of the world?” said Tempest rolling her eyes.

Dialogue line.

“I am so sorry.” said Dean turning pale and slowly turning around to hide behind his chair.
“This chapter is downright awkward.” said Charlie rubbing his eyes.

“Hmm...they banished me for speaking in defense of the school...it seems that something had caused them to escalate their anger.” said Firenze.

Speckerton, the Unspeakable in charge of the books looked thoughtful. “These are future events, but it is a little strange that the differences all because of the presence of these books.”

“No doubt the unaltered future Bane would have, but this in this instance, it was Ronan.” said Firenze. “Bane had fired one of his arrows.”

“Ah, I'd love to have a class like that.” said Sirius stretching his arms.

“And our translations are more accurate than the divination you human children are taught.” said Tempest.
Lionus, Nightstrike and Dr. Nicodemus snickered.

Twelfth paragraph.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“That lost a few of your admirers.” said Tempest with a whinnying laugh.

Thirteenth paragraph.

“Sounds like future you doesn't right care about that.” said Leroy.

“Don't really.” said Harry.

Dialogue set.

“Well, nothing immediate to worry about then.” said Ron.

Fourteenth paragraph.

Dialogue set, first sentence.

“I'd be shocked if the war hadn't already have started.” said Sirius.

“This is still the calm before the storm.” said Firenze.

“That does not make me feel better.” said Sirius.

End of dialogue set.

Fifteenth paragraph, second sentence, third comma.

“I seem to portray a very poor teacher indeed...” said Firenze.
“Well, that's...blatantly honest...” said Terry.

“You sound to be a wise enough teacher.” said Flitwick with a smile.

Firenze looked down, a slightly pleased smile on his face.

“Would rather not burden foals with a stallion's knowledge.” said Firenze, then he looked over to Tempest. “And a mare's knowledge.”

“Hmm...can't even say it's a new record.” said Harry with a laugh.

“Not often that I get to hear what's going on.” said Ron.

Silence stretched across the hall.

“What the...?” asked a sixth year Gryffindor.

Hagrid looked uneasy.
“Those can end in very bloody results.” said Tempest.

“Don't rightly recollect doin' anything of importance to yeh.” said Hagrid thoughtfully.

“You are a good friend.” said Firenze with a smile. “That alone is good enough for me to render what little aid I can, and I believe I am referring to when you ceased the herd from attempting to kill me the first time.”

“Still don't know why you went back...” said Harid gruffly.

“Well, no matter with that, Hagrid will tell us anything, if we ask sweetly enough...and if we ask him repeatedly.” said Harry.

“You should really bottle that up...” said Fred somberly.

“You know, keep it fresh.” said George.

Sirius pulled Harry closer to himself and held him. “Poor sweet baby...” said Sirius.

“That's right, get all the cuddling out of your system. Cause I'm going to be a sullen teen come summer.” said Harry.

“Bull, you may let me now, but I'm going to cuddle you your entire life, even when you're a little old man.” said Sirius with a smirk.

“And what do you think you'll be?” said Harry with a raise of his brow.

“I'm going to stay young forever, didn't you know that? It's my good looks, I'm not losing them to “Age for anything.” said Sirius.

Twenty-first paragraph, second sentence.

“Guess you couldn't even see him during the free period or the weekends.” said a second year Ravenclaw.

“Knowing Umbridge, I was either in detention or studying for the O.W.L’s.”

“But didn't you already take them?” asked Hermione remembering that Harry was to take his M.A.G.I.C’s test.

“All I took was the Assessment Test, I didn't take my O.W.L's yet, I can skip them if I want, but I didn't take them yet.” said Harry.

End of twenty-first paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“And he won't tell you, will he?” said Dean.

“Not right then anyway.” said Seamus, “They'll have to wait a month or two.”

Dialogue set.

Dialogue set.

“Just don't want him kicked out.” said Harry.

Twenty-second paragraph.

“Thank god this hasn't happened yet...” said Dr. Nicodemus. “He'd be sinking into the muck of depression.”

Twenty-third paragraph.

Hannah blushed.

“Don't worry about that.” said Lee.

“We had someone threaten to set themselves on fire...” said George.
“...if they failed one of their O.W.L's” finished Fred.

“McGonagall didn't quite like it when we asked if we could bring marshmallows.” said George.

Twenty-fourth paragraph, first sentence.

Dr. Nicodemus looked over, an etching of worry in his old face. There was another pit of depression he could have fell into?

Twenty-fourth paragraph, second sentence.

Dumbledore smiled softly over to Harry, knowing full well that these events hadn't happened yet, but the young Gryffindor was discovering the joys of teaching.

End of twenty-fourth paragraph.

“Here's hoping she doesn't try and take credit.” said Lionus.

Twenty-fifth paragraph.

“So you guys didn't get to Patronuses yet?” asked first year.

“Well, no...not yet, though we were trying...” said Fred.

“And it's hard trying to get up the motivation to find a Boggart and bring it into the classroom, I don't want to tackle one anytime soon.” said Harry.

Dialogue set, first sentence.

Cho looked excited.

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue set, second sentence.

Several boys and teachers rolled their eyes.
“It shouldn't be that hard, you didn't live with the Dursleys.” said Harry.

“Stuff it, you.” said Harry nudging Sirius.

“That's not good.” said Fred.

“That's really not good.” said George.
“Umbridge...” said Moody with a snarl.

“Oh...no...” said Ron.

“Move it, you idiots!” shouted Fred.

“You should really ask to hire Dobby away from Dumbledore, he seems to be completely loyal to you.” said Rudolph.
“Shit!”

“Arthur!” scolded Mrs. Weasley.

“Out of all the ones that must have went past him? He was probably waiting to see if he could get Harry.” said Charlie.

Leroy began muttering so darkly that his husband leaned away slightly.

“Oh, the only thing that makes me happy right now is daydreaming about what she's going through right now.” said Sirius.

“Oh, it's not as dramatic as you may think, but it's probably devastating to her.” said Chief Hawkeye.

“All those months, wasted if they were caught...” said Harry.

“I like how you aren't even thinking about the repercussions if you were caught.” said Sirius.

“Eh, I could make a living in the muggle world...” said Harry.

“But with Voldemort...” said Moody.

“Let the adults handle it.” said Harry with a smile.
“Should have given her the wrong password.” said Remus.

“It had passed our mind to do that.” said Sprout.

End of dialogue set.

“Run or beg for forgiveness.” said Lee sagely.

“Forget running, that just makes it worse.” said Sirius.

“Smug son of a...” muttered Bill.

“This didn't happen!” said Percy quickly.

“It's Dazzle Gums all over again.” said Sirius groaning.

Before anyone said anything, Harry held up his hands. “I don't know, this hasn't happened yet.”
“It isn't curfew yet, it was perfectly legitimate.” said Flitwick.

Dialogue set, second sentence.

“Sick...” said Mrs. McFinn.

End of dialogue set.

“Cornered nothing, he managed to trip him.” said Nightstrike.

Dialogue set, third sentence.

“Fudge, the only thing that is stopping me from lashing out at you, regardless of the time when this happens is a whim. I won't show intense violence in front of these toddlers.” said Hawkeye extending his hand to the students around the Great Hall. “If they weren't here, I'd have you reduced to a smear on the wall.”

Fudge cringed.

End of dialogue set.

Forty-seventh paragraph.

“It'd be more satisfying to say 'Yes'.” said Lee.

Forty-eighth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Keep begging, I won't give it.” said Harry.

Dialogue line.
“Any interaction is a good thing.” said Harry.

Several students smirked.

“I'm a doctor and all, but I hope you have a non-lethal heart attack.” said Dr. Clark to Fudge.

“We need to get you into believing the tall tales you tell to teachers.” said Sirius.

“Please no.” said McGonagall.

“Need to work on that.” said Harry.

“Wonder who squealed?” asked Bill.

“I'm betting Smith.” said the twins together.
“How could you?” said Cho.

“This hasn't happened...” said Marietta.

“But you were against this, always trying to come up with an excuse to not go!” said Cho. “You would have done this!”

“Well, I'm glad future you was ashamed.” said Cho in a hurt voice.

“Oh, she's not hiding cause she's ashamed.” said Hermione in sing-song voice, with a smug look on her face.

“That's when you know you did something wrong.” said Hannah.

“Traitor.” said a few of the D.A members sourly.

Marietta flinched slightly, but regained her composure.

Ginny gagged. Marietta scowled.

Marietta looked confused at the book.

“Oh, you earned it, and it was good.” said Officer McFinn.
Fifty-second paragraph.

The students stared at the book, then Marietta, and then to Hermione.

“So...when we signed that...we agreed to not tell Umbridge and the results were we'd have some purple thing on our face if we did?” said Lee.

“You have so much potential, Hermione.” said Fred.

“It's a shame that you use it for normal, contemporary things...” said George shaking his head.

“It breaks our hearts.” said Fred somberly.

Dialogue line.

“I wouldn't move them.” said Katie.

Fifty-third paragraph.

Dialogue set, first sentence.

“Oh yeah, she'll be your friend if you squeal on your friends.” said Angelina. “See what that would have gotten you if you had gone down this path? Though, right now, I certainly won't talking candidly around you anymore.”

Marietta gave an indignant huff and stormed out of the Great Hall.

“Going after her?” asked Terry looking at Cho.

“I will.” said Percy standing up. “I...well...I'd rather avoid this...” he hurried out of the Great Hall.

“I have a bad feeling that it won't go well for me.”

Dialogue set, fourth sentence.

“Nothing wrong with a meeting, it could be to just talk about recent events, perhaps have a discussion about relaxing despite the upcoming exams.” said Dr. Nicodemus.

End of dialogue set.

Hermione smiled.
Dialogue set, first sentence.

“Cue the gag reflex.” said Sirius.

End of dialogue set.

“It was to do the job your stupid bint of a secretary was supposed to do.”

“Molly!” said Mr. Weasley.

Fifty-fourth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Hermione smiled even brighter.

Cho however, looked less than impressed.

Dialogue set, first sentence.

Cho turned and sent a tiny hurt look towards Harry.

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, second sentence.

“Mundungus should have set his bandages on fire.” said Tonks.

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue set.

“Oh, we already talked about that.” said Hawkeye with a cruel sneer to the ex-Minister.
Fudge looked away. “How else are we supposed to use informants?”

“There is a way to use them, you help them get better and you have them take a neutral standpoint.” said Madam Bones hotly. “I've got several, even more since I've moved on from being an Auror. I use them but if they break the law, I still bring them in and punish them. I go no easier on them than I do with anyone else, and they know it.”

“TO SAVE THEIR LIVES YOU STUPID BITCH!” shouted Leroy.

“Calm down, Lee.” said Rudolph.

“Ah, you have no faith in me, dear lad.” said Dumbledore with a smile.

“Someone deflate this popinjay.” said Dr. Clark.

“To placate you and give what you want to avoid jail time? Yeah, that would be a good motivation.” said Fred.

“Can you imagine a twin for Harry?” asked Fred.

“We wouldn't be novel anymore.” said George.
“That didn't happen then you moron.” said Alicia.

“Thank goodness he stepped out, I would have slapped him.” said Bill.

“Never mind, I'd do what Harry would.” said Bill. “Slap is too good for him.”

“Gotta love the loopholes.” said Mr. Weasley with a smile.

“Take that you prat.” said Neville.

“Gotcha there.” said Remus wincing slightly.
“That's what Marietta's there for.” said Ernie pointing to the door that she walked out of.

Sirius laughed gleefully. “Future you did something!”

Kingsley only smiled. “If the opportunity presented itself, I'm sure I would have done something...”

“We'll she's going to spill her guts then...” said Draco. “If she's already come that far...”

“Not unless Kingsley did something...” said Sirius.

“Memory charm.” said Harry and Dr. Nicodemus quietly.

“Sounded pretty clear to me.” said Charlie throwing his hands up. “She can't tell you anything!”
“She finally have a conscience?” asked Colin.

“Potter did no such thing, that was Granger.” said Harry with a smile over to Hermione.

Several people laughed.

“Never knew you had it in you.” said Sirius clapping his hands.

The students looked fearful at each other and then subtly at Harry. If she did that to someone who was withholding information, what was she doing to Harry? What horrible part was Harry forced to forget?

“I will allow no one to hurt a child in my presence.” said Dumbledore. Then he looked over to Harry and something made him cringe and turn away.

“What's up with him?” asked Harry.

“I think he's remembering the first scroll.” said Sirius.
“That the very least of what she deserves.” said Mrs. Weasley.

Dialogue line.

“With her level of skill with a wand, bringing on Dumbledore's wrath is detrimental to her health.” said McGonagall with a sneer.

Dialogue line.

“Abuse to a child, not even the Minister could sweep that under the rug.” said Kingsley. “Not that he wouldn't try.” said Moody.

Dialogue line.

“She forgets herself a lot...” said Mrs. McFinn.

Sixty-seventh paragraph.

“Well, don't let them in on it.” said Tonks. “Keep your face plain.”

“Take your own advice...” said Moody with a smirk.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, first sentence, fifth comma.

“Students that would sell out their own families for either a bit of gold or power.” said a seventh year Hufflepuff.

Dialogue set, fourth sentence, first pause.

“Oh shit...” said Remus.

“Keep the damn list ELSEWHERE!” said Snape harshly.

“I...I don't bring the list to the meetings...it should be upstairs in my trunk...transfigured into a hairbrush...” said Hermione her face frantic.
Snape looked at the book while Hermione heaved a sigh. “I thought I screwed up there...but can the room actually do that?”

“If they want it bad enough...it seems it can.” said Dumbledore sorrowfully.

Sixty-eighth paragraph.

“You must have brought it to the meeting.” said Ron.

“But...But why?” asked Hermione.

“It said it was Seamus' first night, he would have needed to sign it.” said Harry.

Dialogue line.

“Bull...you've been skulking around trying to find out what we were doing for a long time.” said Ron. “It wasn't just a 'Oh, we found out just now...’”

Dialogue line.

Sixty-ninth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Now the name comes back to bite us.” said Ron.

Seventieth paragraph, second sentence.

“I believe, future me that didn't know about the name of the organization, I was touched.” said Dumbledore with a smile.

End of seventieth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Wh...What?” said Dr. Clark looking stunned.
Seventy-first paragraph.

“Arrgh.” said Harry burying his face in a cushion.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“It seems I was, and still am, willing to surrender a little to the Ministry to keep you in school.” said Dumbledore tugging slightly at the cushion to stop the lad from suffocating himself.

Dialogue line.

Seventy-second paragraph.

“Moron.” said Lionus.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Fibber, fibber.” said Fred shaking his finger at the Headmaster.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

Seventy-third paragraph.

“You're just handing him what he wanted.” said Moody shaking his head.

“If it stops the persecution of students merely trying to learn to defend themselves and procure proper grades in the exams, I will step down for a small time.” said Dumbledore.
Despite the tense situation, Mrs. McFinn couldn’t help but giggle.

“T'll take to life living as a muggle, but the students are safer with him here.” said Harry.

“Dear lad, you're forgetting...for first two years of your school life, you saved the school where I couldn't. The students are safe with you here, and you teaching them how to defend themselves.” said Dumbledore.

“You'll have to drag me out kicking and screaming.” said Harry.

Snape shook his head.

“I think he didn't get a damn thing and is elaborating, he tends to do that when he's excited.” said Charlie.

“Nice to know he thinks he's all powerful and that it's all about him.” said Madam Pomfrey sending a stern glare to the disgraced Minister.
“You great...” said a fifth year Ravenclaw.

“I can't see Azkaban doing much to him.” said Sirius.

“Future you has no intent on going to Azkaban per se, does he?” said Rudolph with a smile.

Several of the students looked horrified, and yet absolutely delighted.

“I LOVE you!” said Dr. Clark laughing loudly.

“You are so cool...” said Officer McFinn shaking with laughter.

“Better be faster on the draw if you are going to take him down.” said Moody.
“One of the better ones, but he doesn't know his limits.” said Moody.

“Go ahead and hurt him, maybe he'll wise up.” said Moody.

Most of the people in the Great Hall laughed heartily.

“Well, Dawlish seems to have lost his footing, Kingsley won't attack me on a serious level, Dolores will be quite simple as will you.” said Dumbledore with a bright smile.

“AWESOME!” said Dr. Clark excitedly. “This totally should be made into a movie!”

“Can we see a Scattered Shot about this?” asked Fred eagerly.

“Those take a lot out of me.” said Officer McFinn with a sympathetic look. “Maybe another time.”

“Oh yes I will.” said Dumbledore sternly.

“Dawlish! Shacklebolt!” said Fred.

“Good luck!” said George.

“While I hide behind the bookcase till it's over.” said Lee.
“Well...that wasn't as dramatic as I had hoped.” said Hawkeye.

“At least no one used Potter or Marietta as a hostage.” said Dr. Nicodemus. “You'd be facing Hell's Garden once again, only this time, for a lifetime's membership.” he said looking at Fudge.

“I'm thinking I wanted to see what happened and McGonagall was keeping me down.” said Harry.

“Easily repairable.” said Dumbledore.

“Good luck finding the time to do that.” said Ginny.

“They won't be happy about that.” said Mr. Weasley. “Being completely outclassed like that.”

“Sadly, they will have to...Mr. Lee, how did you put it? I heard once when I was strolling through the corridors...'suck it up.'...I believe that is the phrase I'm looking for.” said Dumbledore with a twinkling smile.

The students snickered.
“You are worth it, dear boy.” said Dumbledore.

End of eightieth paragraph.

“'It's not easy to just empty out your head every night.’ said Harry.

Eighty-first paragraph.

“After ignoring you, I'd smack him, but nothing else really.” said Sirius quietly.

Eighty-third paragraph.

“Long gone...” said Remus.

The students snorted in amusement. “Yeah, cause Dumbledore would be so anti-climatic as to run out of the school...”
“Yeah, keep telling yourself that.” said Blaise.

“Man, really wished I wasn't missing this.” said Harry with a chuckle.

“He's got style to burn.” said Sirius with a smirk.

“I think a spot of lunch would not go uneaten.” said Dumbledore summoning the table of food.

Harry remained seated as Sirius went to go and get Harry some food.

Dumbledore looked over to the boy. “How are you doing, today?”

“Fine.” said Harry simply. “Just fine. How are you?”

“Well enough for this pleasant fall day.” said Dumbledore. “The comforting thing is, this book is almost over, and hopefully we won't hear of you being forced to endure much more hardships.”

“Well, maybe if Peter is caught or captured reasonably soon, I'll really have Sirius in my life in these books. That'll make it easier, it kind of sucks when I can't write to him all that much in the future.”

“I hope that the end of this book will finally bring you some joy.” said Dumbledore with a kind smile.
Once everyone had finished their lunch, Officer McFinn took the book in hand looked at the title chapter. He looked between Harry and Snape and then said aloud. “Chapter Twenty-eight.”

Harry looked up in confusion, and then looked over to Snape's pale face, yet tinged with pink. Harry remembered the last time that his book self had apparently peered into his mind and looked around the Great Hall.

“All right you lot, out.” said Harry nodding back to the door.

“What?” asked a seventh year Hufflepuff.

“Go find something else to do for the rest of this chapter. Go on.” said Harry.

A few of the students protested but with stern words from the other teachers, they left. A few of the teachers left, offering to go and watch the students, as well as Mrs. Weasley and her husband. All that were left were the Rangers, Rivers, the people in the bowl with Harry, McGonagall, Dumbledore, Flitwick, Sprout, Hagrid, Snape, Sprout and Firenze.

“Shall we then?” asked Officer McFinn.

“Let's get it over with.” said Harry.

Educational Decree Number Twenty-eight.

“Well, this is starting out really well, isn't it?” said Dr. Clark.

First paragraph, first sentence.

“I'm not all together confident that Harry had told them.” said Dumbledore with a smile towards McGonagall.

“I don't normally condone gossip, but I would have spread that little information like fiendfyre.” said McGonagall with a smug look on her face.

First paragraph, second sentence, end of parenthesis.

“Well...he was empty-headed already.” said Moody with a chuckle.

End of first paragraph.

“Great...I'm being accosted again.” said Harry shaking his head.
“Good luck with that.” said Rivers with a smile.

“Poor ugly baby.” said Remus gleefully.

“Oh, so many different ways to finish that sentence...” said Mrs. McFinn with a giggle.

“What's it to you if she does or not?” asked Sirius shortly.

“Seems we don't need the children to hear infantile remarks.” smirked Snape.

“He most surely can't.” said Flitwick thinking of the young Malfoy with a frown.

“The what?” said Lionus.

“Somehow, I think the old toad deputized a few of the students.” said Chief Hawkeye.
“Of course he supports the 'Ministry.'” muttered Leroy.

End of dialogue set.

Snape turned in his seat and scowled at the floor.

“I'm sure he's wishing that the books said something nice about him.” said Flitwick.

“Perhaps he should do something pleasant, Potter would surely take notice of that.” said Snape darkly.

Third paragraph.

Dialogue set.

Fourth paragraph.

“He needs to read up on humor, if that's the best he's got.” said Sirius.

Dialogue set.

“Well, we all know that the Ministry never tries to undermine itself or others.” said Harry shaking his head.

Fifth paragraph.

“I can see us not being willing to give Slytherin many points, not if her little group was going around trying to whittle down every other house.” whispered Professor Sprout.

Dialogue line.

Sixth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Looks like either a teacher caught an actual wrong doing, or some petty little fictional problem that those kids made up.” said Dr. Clark.
“Good boys.” said Sirius with a clap.

Seventh paragraph.

Officer McFinn shook his head, though the others didn't exactly know why.

End of dialogue set.

“They've always known when to draw the line.” said McGonagall.

“Thank goodness for that.” said Snape shaking his head.

Several teachers snicked.
“A hundred points to Gryffindor.” said Flitwick.

“That's low balling it, five hundred.” said Snape with a cruel smile.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, fourth sentence.

“I'm honored.” said Dumbledore.

“I'm glad the two of them aren't hear...don't want them to get inspired.” said McGonagall.

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“I'm frightened.” said Hagrid with a chuckle.

Eighth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

“You may not have said this yet, but I love you.” said Sirius with a smirk.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, second sentence.

“Self-Preservation.” said Harry.

End of dialogue set.

Ninth paragraph.
“And not for the better.” said McGonagall.

Dumbledore frowned.

“Cover his ears.” said Officer McFinn nodding to Harry.

Sirius whipped his hands over Harry's ears,

Dumbledore scowled angrily.

“Can you imagine if she had stayed her for the next fifteen years? The school would be empty.” said Sprout shaking her head. “No one would want their children to come here if they were going to be...you know what...” she added looking at Harry.

“Us too...there's a few that the twins didn't know.” said Remus. “I managed to catch them doing some little pranks and scared the daylights out of them.”

“We can let him hear again.” said Officer McFinn.

Sirius removed his hands from Harry's ears.
“That's all you get, not the office, but just a piece of wood that you had to make yourself.” said Dr. Clark with a slick smile.

Twelfth paragraph, end of first sentence.

“That's theft...withholding that property...” muttered Kingsley.

End of twelfth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Sirius slowly placed an arm around his godson's shoulder.

Dialogue line.

“Don't drink anything.” said Moody quickly.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Thirteenth paragraph.

“Don't drink anything.” said Moody again.

“We got it the first time.” said McGonagall.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Moody growled.
“Wish others were that clumsy with it.” snickered Moody.

“You mean the awesome way that Dumbledore handed all of your asses to you? Yeah, I'd like to talk about that...real laughs.” said Harry.

Mrs. McFinn couldn't find it in herself to tell him off.

“Not my brew.” said Harry.

“Amazing how you use something so insignificant to use it as a memory tool.” said Dumbledore with a smile.

“No, there's just too much Veritaserum in this one, can I have another cup?” said Harry.

“Wouldn't matter if you had drank it, you don't know the answer to that.” said Remus.
“Don't drink up, don't drink up.” said Harry.

“Quit lying to yourself then.” said Tonks.

“My position is wanting to get the hell away from you.” said Harry.

“You're particularly funny today.” said Sirius with a teasing smile.

“I'm always funny, you just don't have a sense of humor.” said Harry.

“Uh oh, Indy.” said Dr. Clark.

“What?” asked Sirius.

“Never mind.” said Dr. Clark. “Just chalk that up to another bunch of movies you and I are going to watch.”

“Great...”

“None...of...your...business...” said Sirius.
“I don't think it gives you the right to use Veritiserum on a student without parental consent.” said McGonagall firmly.

“And it's too damn risky to use hers.” said Remus.

“And cue whatever Fred and George had planned.” said Leroy.

The adults chuckled warmly.

“Screw that, go after her and find out what happened.” said Rudolph.

“Good boy.” said Rudolph.
“Have to admit, they know how to make fireworks.” said Flitwick with a bright smile.

“Somehow, I don't think something so simple as a Stunning spell will work.” said Dumbledore with a twitching smile.

“Oooh!” said a few of the teachers cringing slightly.

“He can't.” said Mrs. McFinn.

“Brooms are flammable, you idiot.” said Snape massaging his brow.

Snape covered his eyes and groaned as Sirius roared with laughter.

“If their fireworks display on the fifth wasn't prove enough of that.” said Professor Sprout.
“Well, that's something to keep in mind.” said Flitwick.

Twenty-ninth paragraph.

Dialogue set.

“Ha ha! That's right, make the 'All Powerful Headmistress' take care of it all!” said Sirius clapping his hands. “I...am...impressed!”

“Don't let the twins know about this.” said Remus shaking his head.

Thirtieth paragraph.

Dialogue set.

Thirty-first paragraph.

Flitwick looked positively proud of his future self.

Thirty-second paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue set.

“Oh dear, well, as long as they're used against Umbridge, I don't see anything wrong with it.” said McGonagall.

Thirty-third paragraph.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

“Who are you and what have you done with 'Mione?” asked Harry.
“And...cue the weird dreams.” said Harry shaking his head.

Dumbledore leaned forward hanging on every word.

Dumbledore's eyes grew large.

“Do I want to know?” Mrs. McFinn shaking her head.

Sirius rubbed the back of his godson's neck.
Forty-seventh paragraph.

“And Snape's not going to be happy about the not being able to close one's mind.” said Nightstrike.

Forty-eighth paragraph, second sentence, first colon.

“In future me's defense, there was a lot going on.” said Harry.

End of forty-eighth paragraph.

“Nope.” said Snape.

Forty-ninth paragraph, first sentence, third comma.

Harry rolled his eyes.

End of forty-ninth paragraph.

Fiftieth paragraph.

“I don't think that this is going to go well.” said Dr. Clark.

Dialogue set, second sentence.

Rivers shook his head angrily.

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue set.

“Oh, crud...this really isn't going to go well.” said Sirius.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue line.
“That's a hefty mistake.” said Sirius. “Not one that a friend would do if their friend was part of a group.”

“Sort of reminds you of Peter...doesn't it?” said Remus softly.

“I really hate her now.” said Sirius with a scowl.

Fifty-first paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, second sentence.

“Only because a true friend came to your rescue.” said Dr. Nicodemus.

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

“Got her there.” said Lionus with a smirk.

Dialogue line.

“Hey, we all promised that we wouldn't tell, she had to know that there were going to be some consequences.” said Harry.

Dialogue line.

“Not that again...she's like my sister dammit!” said Harry shortly.

“Harry...” warned Mrs. McFinn.

“Sorry.”

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.
“And I don’t think future you is going to reconcile.” said Sirius.

“Fine by me.” said Harry softly.

“I got cornered by a emotionally wrought teen.” said Harry.

“I have my own, thank you very much.” muttered Snape.

“Liar.” smirked Snape.

“Can’t say I’ve ever had cause to say it, but thank goodness for that.” said Harry.
“Explain the wand pointed at me.” said Harry.

“You were being flippant at me again.” said Snape.

Harry looked down thoughtfully. “That might work.”

Fifty-seventh paragraph.

“You just had to tell him that.” said Sirius shaking his head.

“Future him had to say something.” said Dr. Clark with a shrug.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Can't say I feel bad.” said Sirius.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Goody.” muttered Sirius.

“Shut up mutt.” spat Snape.

Fifty-eighth paragraph.

Fifty-ninth paragraph.

“Well, if you want to be an Auror,” said Tonks hopefully. “You'll need to be pretty good at those.”

Sixtieth paragraph.

Sixty-first paragraph.

Sixty-second paragraph.
Snape glared at Harry.

“Lock the damn thing up in the future!”

“Harry!” said Mrs. McFinn.

Sixty-third paragraph.

“You don't like minding your own business, do you?” asked Sirius with a smile.

“Not even a little bit.” said Harry with a smirk.

Sixty-fourth paragraph.

Snape continued to scowl. “Blasted busybody.”

Sixty-fifth paragraph.

Sixty-sixth paragraph.

Sixty-seventh paragraph.

“So don't do it!” said Rudolph looking between Snape and Harry.

End of sixty-seventh paragraph.

Sixty-eighth paragraph.

“This...hasn't...happened...yet...” said Harry holding up his hands submissively.

Sixty-ninth paragraph.

Seventieth paragraph.

Seventy-first paragraph.

Snape rolled his eyes.
“He was one of the best students in the class.” said Remus.

Sirius rolled his eyes.

Sirius looked down at Harry, but then his face faltered...and he looked over to Remus worriedly.

“This won't go well.” muttered Remus.

Rudolph gave his Great Nephew a watery smile.

“Now...not so much.” said Remus reaching over and tugging Harry's long white locks.

“Scoping me out, eh?” said Sirius with a snicker.

“Wondering what happened from then to now.” said Harry.

Snape, despite his scowling, reared his head back and laughed loudly at the insulted and hurt look on the mutt's face.
“He notices.” said Remus.

“Why is everyone against me?” asked Sirius.

“You really have to ask?” asked Sirius with a snicker, trying to recover from the hurt pride and ego.

“He always did try to drag it out.” said Remus.

“I loved it when that happened.” whispered Leroy.

Snape resumed looking angry at the young teen.
“And you say that out loud?” said Moody shaking his head. “Idiots.”

“Take your own advice, lad.” muttered Moody.

“Not much of a shock there, there wasn’t a year that he didn’t take something out of somewhere he shouldn’t and return it months later.” said McGonagall shaking her head.

“It’s the same tree you climbed the one time I came to get you.” said Sirius.

“My favorite tree?” said Harry.

“That was ours too.” said Sirius smiling with glee.
“You are scoping me out!” said Sirius with a smile.

“You're going to just keep asking for it.” said Remus shaking his head.

“Wondering where the ugly stick was that hit you.” said Harry.

“I'm going to kick your ass.” said Sirius trying hard not to laugh.

Ninetieth paragraph, sixth sentence.

“Yeah, he did like the spotlight, your dad.” said Remus looking uncomfortable.

Ninetieth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Ninety-first paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Yeah, I only stopped for him too.” said Sirius softly.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Ninety-second paragraph.

“Do you indeed?” said McGonagall.

“I paid attention in your class.” said Sirius with a charming smile.

Dialogue line.

Ninety-third paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Ninety-fourth paragraph.

Ninety-fifth paragraph, first sentence.

“Ah...yeah...um...I'm going to sit over here.” said Sirius as he got up and walked over to the abandoned love seat.
“Me too...I think.” said Remus.

Ninety-fifth paragraph, third sentence.
“I should have stopped you, I should have.” said Remus.
“We wouldn't have listened to you.” said Sirius patting Remus' back slightly.

End of ninety-fifth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Ninety-sixth paragraph, first sentence, first colon.
“Oh, the detentions I gave James and you two for making Severus so nervous.” said Flitwick shaking his finger at the two graduated wizards.

End of ninety-sixth paragraph.

Ninety-seventh paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Ninety-eighth paragraph.

Harry's eyes widened and looked away, sickened with the very thought, Snape stopped his glowering and stared confusedly at the youth.

Ninety-ninth paragraph.

“Never realized how much of a sadist Peter was...” said Remus thoughtfully as Sirius cringed heavily under the disapproving gaze.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Harry sent a stern look over the the two men now on Ron and Hermione's loveseat, the two men shifted uncomfortably.
Mrs. McFinn took the opportunity to scold the two men shamelessly for what they had done.

“Do we need another talk?” said Dumbledore, his face looking angry.

“No, sir...we...” said Remus.

“We regret this...” said Sirius looking down at the ground.

Snape looked down in shame.

“Mature is something that Potter was not acting up to that point.” said Sprout.

“We got better, after Hogwarts.” said Sirius. “Not Sni...Severus and I, but we got better.”
“Wow...he’s a charmer.” said Officer McFinn shaking his head.

Harry shook his head, shame etched on his face.

“How...” said Dumbledore looking at the youth concernedly.

“This is a lot to take...” said Harry.

“So the giant squid is my dad?” asked Harry with a nervous twitching smile.

“If it was, you’d be better looking.” said Sirius with a chuckle.

“Earned it.” said Harry.

Snape stared.

Harry shook his head. “He earned more than a gash now. I would have kicked his ass.”
“Get 'em mom.” said Harry darkly.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

One hundred and eleventh paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“You're lucky we weren't there.” said McGonagall looking angrily over at the duo.

Dialogue line.

Snape flinched horribly, he didn't want to relive this, not with all of them there, but at least Potter had removed the students...his pride didn't take that mortal of a wound.

One hundred and twelfth paragraph.

Snape buried his hands in his face.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Just as bad, even if he didn't call her that name.” said Dr. Clark.

Dialogue set.

One hundred and thirteenth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

One hundred and fourteenth paragraph.

Dialogue line.
Sprout scoffed “‘Reading between the lines’?”

Dialogue line.

One hundred and fifteenth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Harry retched right then and there.

“Oh sweetheart...” said Mrs. McFinn as she rubbed small circles over Harry's back.

Harry gasped and held his hand over his mouth.

“Harry...what’s wrong?” asked Sirius coming over and kneeling before him, dismissing the sick with his wand.

Harry panted and looked up at Sirius slowly, fury in his eyes.

“You said...I was just like my dad...” said Harry.

“What he became, not what he was, we were all right little bastards, you are so much better than what we were when we were kids.” said Sirius quickly.

Harry took a great shuddering breath.

Sirius motioned for Officer McFinn to continue.

One hundred and sixteenth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“No..not really.” said Harry weakly.

One hundred and seventeenth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Don't blame you really, I shouldn't have looked into your memories.” said Harry as he flexed his arm, though the pain had never happened.

Dialogue line.

One hundred and eighteenth paragraph.
“He was a wretch.” said Harry darkly. Sirius buried his face in Harry's shoulder as he held the youth.

Snape looked firmly at the floor, the knuckles on his hand white.

“But he grew up in the end...he really did.” said Sirius softly.

“I think I've had enough for one day.” said Harry numbly pulling away from Sirius roughly. “I want to go...Is Glacier upstairs?”

“He is lad.” said Dr. Nicodemus.

Harry stood up slowly and walked hurriedly towards the door, wrenching it open and taking off. Snape looked up at boy as he left, his eyes fixed firmly at the Harry's back.
Harry passed by several students lounging about in the corridors and made his way to the safety of the rooms he was staying in. With tears pouring down his face, all these years he had had a feeling, deep down that his dad had done...something...to Snape, that his father wasn't all that innocent, but he didn't want to think about it. He didn't want to even dwell on it, but if he was going to go talk to Glacier, he was going to have to talk about it or something like it.

He entered the room and there was Glacier, sitting in his chair and reading from a book and sipping a glass of red wine. Glacier looked up and quirked a smile.

“Well, that was a short day, how did it go?” asked Glacier.

Harry raked his hand through his hair, gave a low growl, but sighed heavily. “It went pretty bad.”

“Want to talk about it?” asked Glacier as he sat his book down on the small table beside him. “Or about something else, I'm not all that picky today.”

Harry sat down in one of the larger chairs and slouched. “I...just found out my dad was far less than perfect today, I knew he was, but it was sort of shoved down my throat.” said Harry.

“It always is, when you learn the less than stellar histories of our parents.” said Glacier, “Want to talk to me about what you learned that made him less than saintly?”

Harry frowned over to Glacier. “My dad was never a saint, and I never thought him to be that.” he sharply.

“Sorry.” said Glacier throwing his hands up in a soothing manner. “I should have phrased it differently.”

Harry looked off to the side. “He was just like my cousin...only skinnier and smarter...”

“What's your cousin like?” asked Glacier.
This was perhaps the first crack into the boy's home life that he could see and utilize. The lad needed to vent, he needed to let out the frustrations about the Dursleys that he could almost feel seething underneath the young man's calm exterior. The boy knew what they had done was wrong, but he simply accepted it and added it to his own cross to bear in life. He had to let go of some of it soon.

“Well, Dudley...”

Hours later, Glacier removed himself from the rooms as Harry took a nap. He sat in his own room nearby and smiled to himself. The lad finally vented, granted he had started only short while ago, but the boy was opening up.

As the boy described his family and shouted at odd intervals about a part of his history that came to his mind, he could see the hair, once white, was now becoming black and creeping up a fourth of the way up. The lad was finally healing, and from what he could see, it was happening quite quickly. Glacier himself couldn't be happier, not that he didn't have deep feelings for the lad, but the lad was finally on the road to recovery. Though with the track record that the boy was having, he wouldn't believe the boy was healing till after his entire head had turned back to it's jet black color.

And allowing Black, Lupin, Granger and Weasley hear those little bits and pieces of a particular previous outburst, would only help in the long run...it was a bit unorthodox...but a little brutal honesty is what was needed. He didn't tell the boy that he was heard by those four, figuring that, if those four were foolish enough to tell him that they heard him and accost him for it, then they shouldn't be allowed around him during these fragile times. He would do everything in his power to keep them away until he deemed Harry fit to deal with their crap.

But eavesdroppers aside, he had offered a suggestion to the family of his young patient that he take a change of venue and Night's Rest was as good a place as any.

The next morning, bright and early, Harry was shaken awake by Sirius.

“What the...what do you want?” mumbled Harry.

“Come on, I want to take you to Night's Rest, just learned we had a big snowstorm there a few “Hours ago!” said Sirius eagerly.

“What’s so great about there being snow at your house?” asked Harry with a groan as he covered himself with a blanket.

“Our house.” corrected Sirius tugging at the blankets. “Now come, you'll see it when we get there!”

“Can I at least get dressed and eat something first?” said Harry thickly.

“Sure, can't have you wasting away.” said Sirius with a smile.

They had had a hurried breakfast and with Dumbledore's kind permission, apparated to Sirius' home. There was a thick blanket of snow on the ground, the roof of the house itself and lining the branches of the trees. The fountain in the front of the house was completely frozen, the spray of water had transformed into a large waterfall of ice. All in all, it looked as if the entire mansion of Night's Rest had been transformed into a realistic gingerbread house.

“I'll admit, this looks really pretty.” said Harry with a smile.

“It's not the outside that I wanted to show you.” said Sirius. “There's a special room that I want you to experience.”

“Couldn't we see it the first or second time I came?” asked Harry.

“You couldn't fully appreciate it before now.” said Sirius with a wink.

They went inside Night's Rest, and instantly Harry noticed that though it was much warmer inside than it was outside, it was still well around fifty degrees. Sirius led him to a room that was secluded down a dark corridor.

“Thank goodness, Umbridge never got down here...seems she was fluffing up the place one room at a time. Also doesn't hurt that I had placed some pranks down there waiting for James to stop by that next winter.” said Sirius. “She must have set them off.”
“What did they do?” asked Harry.

“Oh, just cause some rats and other little vermin to crawl out of a person's pockets.” said Sirius. “I would have sent James down by himself first, I wouldn't have done it with you in his arms, Lily would have killed me.”

They traveled down a little further and reached an oaken door with silver words etched into the wood.

The Winter Den.

“Why does this door have a title?” asked Harry.

“I put that on there for your mother. Lily had a horrible sense of direction when she got tired.” said Sirius.

“Or could it be that you get lost?” said Harry teasingly.

“Stuff it.” said Sirius shoving a smirking Harry.

Sirius opened the door to the and ushered Harry through it. Inside was a large fireplace with a roaring fire crackling merrily, large armchairs and sofas with plenty of large fluffy blankets and pillows. The walls were lined in dark warm wood, bookcases and a large liquor cabinet full of brandy and whiskey. On the one wall, there was a large picture window with a window seat that overlooked the western garden and the snow covered landscape. While the rest of the house wasn't really cold, the Winter's Den was just a pleasant place to while away the cold winter's days.

“This place is nice.” said Harry looking around the room and sat down on one of the sofas near the fireplace.

“Yeah, I loved this room when winter came around. I'd spend hours in here.” said Sirius.
“So what is there to do in here?” asked Harry.

“I've got books of all kinds, some chessboards...it's mostly just a place to come to keep all toasty and cozy.” said Sirius with a smile, “Your mum loved this room when she carrying you.”

Harry blushed slightly. He walked over to the sofa and sat down. Despite the traveling and being happy to be back at Night's Rest, he was still very tired. He pulled one of the softer blankets up over himself and settled down to watch the flames though it wasn't long till he fell asleep. Sirius took another blanket out of a wooden chest and draped it over Harry and took his glasses. He then walked over to the bookcase, selected a book and sat in the chair beside the fire. Content with just letting Harry sleep the day away.

Harry didn't remember the last time he was he was so comfortable wrapped up in all the blankets and sitting before a fire. It also didn't help that Sirius may or may not have spiked his morning tea with a delayed reacting sleeping potion. He noticed Sirius was flourishing his arms elaborately as he poured him his tea, normally Sirius was slightly stiff at the elbow when he poured the tea casually...this was a bit...much. Normally he would be ticked that he was slipped a mickey, but the sofa was too soft, the blankets too warm and the room itself just too cozy...

Sirius heard the door to the den open up and in came Remus, brushing the snow off his shoulders.

“How's it going?” asked Remus.

“That sleeping draught worked like a charm, look how peaceful he looks.” said Sirius with a smile.

“That's amazing, seeing as how it was just water in that phial.” said Remus chuckling softly.

“What?” said Sirius.

“Dr. Nicodemus gave you...what did he call it? A placebo...if Harry had some desire to sleep, then he'd crash.” said Remus. “Parently he needed a day just to sleep, to get back some of the peace he's lost.”
Sirius shook his head. “Can't wait till these are all over with, and Voldemort is taken care of...he needs a vacation.”

“Well, this is a good small vacation...” said Remus stretching his thin frame, “Mind if I take my usual seat?”

“Please do.” said Sirius, “You're favorite brandy is still in the cabinet.”

“Mmm...” said Remus walking over to the liquor cabinet, taking a bottle, a glass and then choosing a book from the bookcase. He went to a chair to the right of the fireplace and settled into the cushions. “I missed this...”

“Yeah, me too.” said Sirius mumbled softly as he turned the page. “I used to dream about all of us just sitting in here, doing nothing. Kept the dementors away for a little while.”

Remus looked up at Sirius, his friend's face was still the face that he could recognize in a crowd anywhere, but there was still that pinched, tortured look that crept up every so often. Guilt of disbelieving him for so long still gripped at his heart, but he knew that every day of freedom that Sirius had, was another day to show how sorry he was and how he would never doubt him the same way again.

Harry woke up hours later and looked around the room, he could see the blurred vision of the fire and saw his glasses reflecting the light on a nearby table. He reached over and put his glasses back on and saw Remus and Sirius sleeping quietly in chairs beside the fire.

He removed himself from the blankets and looked around, now that he was up and about, he didn't want to just sit in one spot. He had enough of that during the readings that he wanted to actually put his legs to some use. He dug around in the desk and located what he was looking for, a spare piece of parchment and a quill. He wrote a quick note and placed the glass that was held limply in Remus' hand on the parchment's corner.

Went out to explore, won't go outside.

Harry wrapped his cloak around himself, took a few sheets of parchment, quill and ink and some Spellotape and made his way out of the den. Figuring he could give Sirius a hand and giving each room a purpose or designating it for something, suggestions of course...though he had a feeling that Sirius would listen.

For about an hour, he wandered down the corridors that had been blocked off by Sirius for being dangerous. When Dr. Clark stared at him, his eyes asking the silent question. Sirius said that he was becoming violently ill due to all the pink fully crap that was strung all over the place and he could only tackle it one room at a time.

Harry ducked under the tape and walked into a room that had a groan inducing sign.

Sunday Tea room.

“Well, wasn't she just being a stuck up bitch.” muttered Harry as he opened the room. “Why have tea in a different room every day?”

He opened the door and saw a very large room with an even larger window and patio doors that would have faced the morning sun if it was still morning. There was large sofas and coffee tables all over the place and pictures of various gardens. There were vases of...now dead and dried out...flowers on every table and every flat surface.

The room didn't look too bad, in fact he could see this being a nice sitting room for Mrs. McFinn. The room didn't seem to need all that much renovations, maybe a batch of new flowers and some family pictures on the walls along with the garden ones, get rid of the kitten plates and that should be all.

He exited the room and taped a bit of parchment over the sign that Umbridge had made.

Mrs. McFinn's sitting room.

On and on he went, he started taping up little signs every room he entered and looked over. A few he gave to Mrs. McFinn, a few to Dr. Clark, Sirius and Remus and a few for a community use room. He thought there was only a few rooms that hadn't been turned around, but it seems that there was even more rooms to the house that even Umbridge hadn't known about.

It must be like the Burrow, thought Harry, there's rooms popping out of everywhere in that place.
There was one room in particular that didn't have any sign on the door, but had a painting of a stag on one side of the door and a large vase of lilies on the other side. This had to be a room that had miraculously avoided Umbridge's presence, no other room had a picture of any other creature but kittens and a unicorn here and there, and the lilies were bright orange as opposed to the pale pink and white lilies in every arrangement. He entered the room, curious as to what could lay behind it.

It turned out to be a large cozy bedroom, there was a king size canopy bed against the wall, a window seat, a fireplace and a small red and gold baby bassinet. Harry walked over to the bassinet slowly and looked down into it. It was cushioned inside with a red baby blanket sitting inside.

“I made that for you.”

Harry turned around and saw Remus leaning against the door frame with a sad smile on his face. Sirius was standing in the hall, smiling softly as well.

“I had made it for your first birthday, but Bathilda had already made up one, light blue and it was already in your nursery. So James and Lily told me to bring it here so that they didn't have to drag it back and forth.” said Remus walking towards the young man. “You were never meant to be an only child, so that bassinet would have been used quite a few times.”

“I didn't need to hear that.” said Harry with a slight smile.

“I didn't either, visualizing James doing the nasty was a bit too much for me to stomach.” said Sirius with a false gag. “But it would have been awesome to have the next Marauders running all over this place.”

Harry looked down at the bassinet and smiled. “Mind if I use this for my kids?”

“I'd be honored.” said Remus his smile growing brighter.

“You and Ginny aren't talking about kids already, are you?” asked Sirius staring. Remus nudged him in the side.

“No, we haven't, but if I get a shot at a nice calm life and survive all this crap, I want a family of my own.” said Harry.
“I can't wait to see you as a daddy, you'd be awesome.” said Sirius with a bark-like laugh.

“Just don't let Sirius watch your kids alone, you'll be cleaning up a mess that will last for days.” said Remus with a chuckle.

“Hey, that was Lily's fault! Who needs to make that much pudding at one time anyway?”
The Trial

Wormtail crept slowly through the tall moonlit grass towards one of the bigger elm trees on the grounds of the Riddle House. He had been ordered by the Dark Lord to investigate the Rangers that were watching and patrolling the grounds, so almost every night, when the moon would be trapped behind the clouds, he would transform down in the basement and then crawl through the small holes in the stone to the outside world.

He had been sent out to spy on their captors for almost four days now, but there had been only one constant Ranger that he could recognize most of the time. Discovering the consistent Ranger was a lucky strike as the Dark Lord deemed it the one chink in their armor available to them. So on the orders of the Dark Lord he had to crawl up the same tree for four days, stay hidden in the same hole and watch the man every single night. He needed to study the man and see if the weakness went further than just having the same guard over and over.

On the fifth day, he nestled himself in the deep hole of the tree and waited for the man to show up. Almost right on schedule, the figure dropped carefully on the limb just in front of Wormtail. The Animagus looked over the man carefully, taking in all that he could, he saw what he had already known for a few days now. The man was tall, thin and pale, with oddly bright eyes hiding just underneath the mask he wore. So far...the only thing that Wormtail could tell the Dark Lord was that the man needed to eat a good meal and get some sun...he must normally have the night shift for the Rangers...

Tonight however, brought about a different thought, the man took out a flask from his hip and took a dip swig of it, a little of the contents dribbled down his chin and landed on the wood. After a few minutes, he leaped over to another tree and took watch there.

Wormtail waited a bit longer, and then crawled out of the hole, and inspected the drying liquid on the limb. If the Dark Lord heard that he passed up learning even the smallest detail of their captor, he would pay dearly for it. He sniffed the drying droplet on the bark...he knew that smell...it wasn't wine, water, or spirits...that was blood...the man was drinking blood.

That meant...the Ranger guarding them...was a vampire.

When Harry came back on Sunday, after relaxing sufficiently at Night's Rest, (Roasting marshmallows in the Winter's Den and sleeping peacefully on the large plush couch) he walked into the Great Hall and saw quite a few of the adults talking in the middle of the Great Hall. They turned towards him when he entered, their faces grave. Madam Bones walked over to him, a grim look on her face.
“Mr. Potter, I’ve done my absolute best to keep you out of it, to prevent you from any...discomfort, but I fear that I have no choice.” said Madam Bones with an exhausted sigh.

“What is it?” asked Harry quirking an eyebrow. Somehow he knew that this wasn't going to be good, whatever it was if she looked this put out.

“It's the Dursleys, it has finally come time for them to face the courts for what they have done to you in the past. These proceedings have been going on for the past three days, and let me just say this...it is becoming rather muddled. So we can get things back on the track they need to be, (finally disregarding all the showboating done by the defense) we will need your testimony to finally bring this to a close and have them adequately punished.” said Madam Bones polishing her monocle with a piece of fabric.

“What?” said Sirius as he came to stand behind him. “Is there someone contesting his word, is that what you're saying?”

“There is. They, the defense counsel, do not believe that Potter has been...innocent in all this, they believe that he might have instigated more than half of it.” replied Madam Bones with a sigh.

“What stupid conker believes that?” said Remus. Sirius stared at his friend.

“Arbuckle Smith.” said Madam Bones rolling her eyes. “He's the solicitor for the defense. Smith's a damned fool, but for some strange reason, he chose to defend the Muggles in this case. Perhaps he thinks this was going to be a high media case.”

“Which it's not...I told any reporter that any story with my nephew in it has to come by me.” said Leroy. “They know I'd kick them right out and where it counts if they tried to put it through. They've done enough in regards to him.”

“Well, that's a relief.” said Harry with a smile. “Nice to have the Prophet on my side for once.” He then looked at Madam Bones. “So...”

“So you will need to testify, it shouldn't take long, being a minor and the victim, the courts would rather not have you...traumatized any further.”
Harry looked at her and then nodded with a smile. “Yeah, I could do without that happening, but with my luck, I'll have to stay there the rest of the day. Do we go now or...?”

“It would be better to get this over and done with, dear. I will escort you to the Ministry and have you talk to one of the child advocates and a member of the Wizengamot, then you'll speak before the Wizengamot in it's entirety”

“Want me to come with?” asked Sirius taking a step forward. However Madam Bones held out her hand quickly.

“That would not be wise.” said Madam Bones shaking her head. “Despite that it has been proven that you are indeed innocent, and Prophet having spread the word far and wide, many people still seem to think that you need to pay for your crime of escape from Azkaban. It is not safe for you in the Ministry of Magic as of right now. There may be a vigilante hidden amongst them.”

Sirius crossed his arms, a frown on his face.

“I'll be fine, what's the worst that can happen?” said Harry. “I'll be surrounded by Ministry officials and there are Aurors all over the place.”

“I'd feel better...hang on...where did all the Rangers go?” said Sirius. “Even that Doctor of theirs is gone.”

Indeed, the students were there, as well as the adult guests, but the Rangers, their reassuring presence that made them all feel protected, was gone. Even Tempest was gone from Firenze's side, and if one were to look very closely, they could see that he was missing her company.

“It was quite strange, I was chatting quite amicably with their Chief and suddenly he placed a hand to his head and left.” said Dumbledore with a thoughtful frown. “I daresay, perhaps someone they had been looking for has come to light and they had been told through some unknown communicative means.”

“But aren't they on a furlough?” asked Ron confusedly. “Their seven year furlough?”

“Maybe it was someone they really wanted.” said Harry tapping his cheek carefully. “Ah, well..whatever...let's go and get this over with, but first...I want to take a quick detour, to two
“To where?” asked Madam Bones.

“To somewhere that will make Uncle Vernon sit up and take notice.” said Harry.

Hours later:

“Now my esteemed colleagues, surely after all that we've heard and learned of this boy...can we honestly say that he isn't embellishing these outlandish scenarios?” said a nasal toned voice.

Harry sat at the table on the right side of the room, this room was laid out differently then the one he had been in during the summer. Madam Bones explained to him that this was for the purpose of housing muggle trials. It would put them at ease and impress upon them the seriousness of the situation. It wasn't often that they would be used, mostly used for muggles who knew about the Magical world and had committed a crime, be it minor or abuse on a magical child in their care.

There was no one else in the room, save the Wizengamot, Court Scribe (Not Percy, he was considered biased and really had no business being on the panel during Harry's trial, but the Minister felt it was not a issue) Madam Bones, (who was standing before him, flipping through papers on a conjured up desk) the man Madam Bones said was Arbuckle Smith, Aunt Petunia, Uncle Vernon and of course Harry himself.

Arbuckle Smith was weedy looking man with a long pointed nose and a weak chin. He had a receding hairline of curly blonde hair and rather large ears that seemed to stick out even further with his curly hair. But Smith was not the one that attracted Harry's attention, that solely lay with his Aunt and Uncle.

Both of them had seen much better days in Harry's opinion. Aunt Petunia's hair was terribly awry, was quite pale, trembling and was wearing a plain gray robe as opposed to her normal blouse and skirt. Seeing her in a wearing a garment from the magical world was almost surreal, but while Harry felt a slight twinge of pity. She seemed to twitch nervously and looked about fearfully, and any glimpse she gave Harry was saturated with shame, Harry couldn’t help but feel a little pity for her, it was the look on Uncle Vernon's face that seemed to set him back a few paces.

Uncle Vernon was wearing a similar robe and was also pale and trembling, but unlike the almost regretful countenance that Aunt Petunia had, he was scowling and gnashing his teeth (though he was looking firmly at his hands clasped tightly before him on the table). The most terrifying thing about Uncle Vernon's appearance, was the raw fury in his eyes, at least the part of his eyes that he could see.

Harry returned his focus to the court proceedings, the defense counsel was trying to rebuff the evidence that was at hand: the parchment from the diagnostic spell cast by Madam Pomfrey. They couldn't use the Memorial Books, as per law, but diagnostic spells were very well received in the courts, and Smith was having a hard time trying to dismiss it.

Madam Bones was the acting as Harry's Child Advocate counsel, as she was biased due to being at the readings. She was trying to keep the proceedings going accordingly without any dramatics from the defense. This wasn't Smith's first trial, but the man had never had such a case such as this, Memorial books, muggles guardians or parents abusing their magical child (sadly that was not all that rare), and Harry Potter, on top of that. It was proving to be a bit much for him to cope with alone and was getting lost in the throes of what was sure to be the trial of the century. The fool kept bringing up the instances in the Memorial books when they could not in fact be used, unless Harry himself were to reveal what had happened, inadvertently giving them a bit of a bye in the legal system unless the victim wanted to tell them themselves. Despite not being accepted as evidence, the Wizengamot was not going to be forgetting any of what was said, anytime soon, and Smith just kept bringing up more and more.

Madam Bones despised these two muggles in particular, but being the head of Magical Law Enforcement, she had a duty to ensure they got a fair trial.

“If the defense would be so kind as to remember, the Memorial books are not and will not be in evidence. I intend to have Mr. Potter testify to an example to the crime of child abuse, if it comes to that, which I hope it does not. Mr. Potter has been through enough.” said Madam Bones.

Before Smith could continue on, she pressed on. “If the Defense is questioning the...reliability of the diagnostic spell, I can assure that Madam Pomfrey, of Hogwarts School of Witchcraft and Wizardry has been used in several court cases involving children.”

“But why has she not seen anything before? According to the rumors, Potter has been in her care at least once a year.” said Smith.

“Mr. Potter, according to the Staff at Hogwarts and even a few of the students, never showed signs of his troubles at home. He kept it very much to himself for many years, even his best friends were unaware of the fact. In truth, when they discovered it, it caused quite the disturbance, even the notion of emotional abuse had cast Dumbledore into almost a severe heart attack, it terrified quite a few of the students.”
A few of the members sitting above them muttered, a few looked worried and scowled down to the two muggles sitting below them.

Things were not going well for the defense and Uncle Vernon knew it.

Sirius leaned back in a large armchair and dozed softly in it's warm comforting cushions. He was absolutely bored without Harry there to mull about and come up with something to do. Granted, it was a bloody sight better than being in that damnable house, but he still was bored without his godson.

Remus was currently laying on the sofa holding a book on his chest and reading, sipping from a teacup on the floor, he had a stack of books he wanted to browse through for old times' sake. Dumbledore was talking to Leroy and Rudolph over at the table and discussing their newly discovered plants and comparing thoughts on the subject of Herbology. Even Glacier was in the room, (he did not stray from the school, keeping available for Harry in case he had need of him) he did not discuss Harry's sessions with them, but had been subtly interrogating them and finding where their feelings for the boy lay and where their shortcomings were in regards to the boy.

Mrs. McFinn and Dr. Clark were having a day talking to Officer McFinn and planning out for the future, they had asked what was going to happen, but Officer McFinn couldn't tell them, but he did restate to the both of them his blessing if they wanted to go further on with their relationship than what they already had.

While Harry was in court, it seemed that everyone was going to just sit back and relax. However, that serenity was no where to be found two hours later.

As it neared afternoon tea time, a flash of green appeared out of the fireplace and Madam Bones' face appeared in the flames.

“Albus!”

Dumbledore turned his head and looked at the head of Magical Law Enforcement. “Amelia, what on earth is it? You sound very...”
“It's Potter's Uncle, he's completely lost his mind and has taken Potter hostage!” sad Madam Bones swiftly.

Sirius, Remus, Leroy, Rudolph and Dumbledore leapt to their feet and rushed to the fireplace. Glacier watched from the sofa but stood up and followed them to the floo.

“Step aside, we're coming through.” said Leroy.

“Black, I don't if you should...” said Madam Bones looking up at Sirius.

“I'm coming whether you or anyone else likes it or not. Harry needs me.” said Sirius.

“He needs anyone who can get him out of this.” said Remus as he took a handful of green powder, “But seeing as how he was used as a threat against Vernon, it might produce a bit of shock value.”

“You coming?” asked Rudolph to Glacier.

“As he is my patient and this could be detrimental to his recovery, consider me already there.” said Glacier striding forward, taking the powder and tossing it into the flames. Madam Bones just had enough time to back away from the fire before the six men came in through her fire grate.

“Where is he at?” asked Remus, brushing off the soot as he moved away from the fireplace to let Leroy through.

“Down this way, in our Muggle Hearing rooms. Quickly...we were able to keep Dursley in the room when I left.”

“How did it happen?

“Does he have a weapon?”

“Is he injured at all?”
“You don't have Dementors in there do you?”

They were all asking questions at the same time, and Madam Bones was having a difficult time trying to answer them all and lead them down to the Hearing.

“I won't understate, but Dursley was agitated the moment he was brought in today and from what I heard it was only getting worse as the hearings went on. He and his wife were quite quiet during the proceedings but he started to slam his fist down on the table after Potter produced a few bits of evidence he nor Smith expected.”

“What was that?” asked Leroy.

“We had stopped in the muggle...police...station and asked for copies of the pictures and observations made in that first altercation we saw, they were very accommodating, I was impressed. I should have a few of my Aurors follow a few them around and learn a thing or two. But I digress. The other bit was a signed paper from the Queen herself, I had never met her before but when I did...well, that's a tale for another time. The paper said that she herself believed that Harry was being abused and that she did what she could, but was blocked by her own laws from helping the lad. That in itself caused Mrs. Dursley to faint dead away.

When Smith had brought the copies of the papers and pictures over to the discuss to...I'm assuming to come up with a new defense, Dursley ripped the papers from his hands, grabbed a quill and rushed over to the Potter before anyone could stop him.” said Madam Bones leading them to the lifts.

“So that's a no to the weapon huh?” asked Sirius.

“We thought that as well, but that quill of Smith's, it's quite sharp, it's already drawn a bit of blood from Potter's neck.” said Madam Bones darkly. “And as for your question Lupin, no there are no dementors in there, with Potter still being a minor, and the muggles being muggles, we cannot allow them into the same room together.”

“But you allowed Dursley in the same room as him?” asked Sirius.

“Potter was there to offer testimony, and it would help his case if Dursley were to act...well...we didn't want him to act violently...we should have placed a shield spell around him, that's for “certain.” said Madam Bones. “We didn't think he would be so foolish as to try something in open court.”

When they arrived, the scene before them caused them to freeze and stare. The Wizengamot were all standing along the wall near the door where they themselves stood. Petunia was conscious again, and wailing in the far back left corner wringing her hands in her robes. Their counsel, Smith, was in the far right corner, talking to a large man with a mustache, a quill in his large hand and Harry in his arms, his neck craned upwards with the point of the quill digging into his flesh over his Adam's apple threateningly.

Before anyone could make a move towards the two of them, to ease the situation, Glacier strode forward and stood before Vernon Dursley.

“Greetings.” said Glacier.

Harry's eyes widened slightly at the sight of the therapist.

“You one of them?” growled Uncle Vernon.

Glacier took a wand out of the pocket in his robes and without batting an eyelash, tossed it into the corner near where the Wizengamot stood. “Not now.”

Dumbledore watched in utter fascination as over the course of two hours the man seemed to coax the mentally disturbed muggle to lower the quill slowly and lessen his grip on the boy. Dumbledore wasn't sure this was testimony to how skilled a therapist he was or if all Rangers were trained in hostage negotiation, but the man was getting results very quickly.

Once Vernon had calmed down from his mania, he began to bargain for Harry's release; in exchange for leniency for his wife, he would let go of Harry. He knew that he wouldn't be able to get away Scott free with the room full of wizards, but he would try and get a bit of mercy for his wife.

Harry remained silent, he and his uncle did not have the most pleasant history and talking would only lead to something far far worse. He didn't want that quill sinking any deeper into his neck.

“Alright, I'll see to it that.” said Glacier.
“And you can do that, can you?” said Uncle Vernon looking skeptical, but with a slight glint of hope in his eyes.

“If I have to I can exert my authority, but I cannot do that with Harry being held hostage.” said Glacier.

“Take him then, I never wanted him.” said Vernon darkly and shoving Harry forward into Glacier's arms.

“Welcome back Harry. Now, Vernon, for safety's sake, put your hands behind your back.” said Glacier, pulling Harry behind him, and then taking a silver pair of cuffs out of a pocket in his robes and snapping them smartly behind Vernon's back.

The moment that Harry had been released and the cuffs were on, the Aurors came forward and led Vernon out of the room and a few of the female Aurors came over and took possession of Petunia, in her disturbed state, they were a bit gentler with her than they would have normally with a woman charged with child abuse.

Harry was passed from person to person, turning on his heels as they spun him to face a different person, and the moment he stopped in Sirius arms he was so dizzy and in shock that when he closed his eyes, his knees buckled and he fainted.
Harry didn't wake up till very late the next morning, most people had heard of what had transpired at the Hearing and when it was said that there was a chance that the readings might not happen for a day or two, they nodded in understanding and went to their small scattered discussion groups that were placed about the school.

Madam Bones discovered the reason why Arbuckle Smith couldn't seem to leave the memorial books alone, despite being told time and time again to leave the alone. His nephew was Zacharias Smith, and he had been pelting the Magical Solicitor with information about the books and what had transpired at the Dursleys. He didn't believe them to be completely innocent, to be completely honest, he would have been the first to suggest a good hex to use against them, but he wanted to ride high on the fame of being associated with the trial...when it was quieted in the press and hardly anyone had even known about the trial...it began to backfire on him.

Losing control of his client was the other part that caused this to fall into the worse decision of his life. He wasn't disbarred, but he was publicly humiliated and his legal practice took a huge dive.

In a last ditch effort to regain some positive noteriety, he sent a few letters to Zacharias, in attempt to get a meeting done between him and Harry, but Zacharias steadfastly refused. He was made a fool of thanks to Potter almost every day, he didn't want to plead with Potter to talk to his uncle.

Arbuckle Smith's once moderately respectable social standings was now almost whittled away in the professional world.

Harry was brought down to the readings around noon, wrapped in a fluffy red robe and instantly wrapped up in the phoenix quilt. His hair, once creeping up with the color of jet, was now stark white once more.

Harry convinced the others that he was fine, repeatedly, but it didn't stop the ones nearest to him to pulling his legs up into the bowl and wrap their arms tightly around him.

Officer McFinn waited for Harry to get settled and read began the day's readings.
“Oh yeah, I forgot that happened.” said Sirius giving Harry's arm a squeeze. “I hope he apologizes to you for flipping out like that.”

“I don't think this is starting out all that great.” said Hermione quietly.

Snape rolled his eyes. “When I want your opinion, Granger, I'll ask for it.”

“Future you is delusional.” said Fred.

“You don't just go up to him and ask him to start up where he thought he should leave off.” said George.

“That'll have him finishing you off.” said Fred.

“You're evil.” said Ron shaking his head, but smiling at the girl.

“Yeah, even in college, they tend to come up and bite you right on the behind.” said Dr. Clark.
“Gotta give him that...though we've been asked to not be here for a few things, so they must not have been all that good.” said a seventh year Ravenclaw.

“Not the reaction one would expect.” said Charlie.

“Sorry dad.” said Ron quickly.

“For what? You didn’t say anything.” said Mr. Weasley with a kind smile.

“If he doesn't get petted, he'll find someone else.” said Hermione with a smile.

“And still the cat is allowed to walk around freely...” said Dr. Nicodemus quietly while rubbing his eyes.

“What else could you be thinking about?” asked Hermione.

Harry said nothing.
“I’d be ranting about her too...” said Katie.

“What happened in the Pensieve?” asked one of the third year Hufflepuffs.

“Nothing you need to worry about.” said Officer McFinn.

“But won't it tell us about it?” asked Fred.

“Unless that annoying loud beeping comes around again.” said George.

“And cue the beeping, there we go.” said Lee shaking his head.

Sirius cringed slightly in his chair.

Remus scratched the back of his head and looked firmly at the ground.

Snape looked at Harry, as if seeing him for the first time.
End of ninth paragraph.

Remus knew looked thoroughly ashamed of himself.

“Really makes you wish you could hear what the bloody hell was going on.” said Dean watching the adults look as if someone had died.

Tenth paragraph.

Snape’s eyes widened in shock, and Sirius turned swiftly around to face his godson.

“No, they loved each other! They just...it took him a long time to deflate his head.” said Sirius helplessly.

Eleventh paragraph.

“This is not helping my mood today.” said Harry darkly.

Twelfth paragraph, first sentence.

“Yay! Beeping over!” said Fred.

End of twelfth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Parently not.” said Charlie.

Thirteenth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“That can't be good.” said Fred.

“Those bludgers can be nasty if you don't keep an eye on them.” said George.
Fred blinked.

“That's...not a normal injury...that happens to a Beater.” said George slowly.

End of dialogue set.

Fourteenth paragraph.

“That's...illegal...” said Rivers darkly. “What time era did she think this was?”

Dialogue line.

Fifteenth paragraph.

“Seriously, a nice long break is needed for you.” said Mrs. McFinn soothingly.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Not romance that's on his mind.” said Dumbledore shaking his head.

“I've got more pressing problems than worrying about whether or not I talk to a girl and put aside an argument.” said Harry.

“Don't have that mentality forever, I want to bounce grandbabies on my knees...I miss that...” said Sirius nudging Harry.

“That's assuming that they're going to call you 'Grandpa.'” said Harry with a smirk.

“I'm your Godfather, if you have kids...I'm going to ask them to call me Grandpa.” said Sirius with a bright smile. “Whether you like it or not.”

“Sure you don't want to be called 'Old man'?” said Remus with a laugh.

“Don't push it.” said Sirius.
“That's right, I'll help sort you right out.” said Sirius with a hopeful smile.

“Like you did at Christmas time?” said Harry dully.

“Maybe I'll do better this time.” said Sirius with a hopeful smile.

“You just have to think outside the proverbial box.” said Fred, George, Sirius and Remus together.

“Talking helps.” said Dr. Nicodemus nodding approvingly.

“Oooh...never take food in there.” said Professor Flitwick covering his eyes.

“She barely likes it when you have a nice soothing cup of tea while reading her books.” said Madam Pomfrey.
“And I thought Mrs. Tibbons at my school was a devil incarnate with her books.” said Mrs. McFinn with a giggle.

Twenty-first paragraph.

Career Advice bulletin

“Of course you can always ask for advice in your third year, this just helps you see where you need to get stronger in before the exams hit and see what other options are open to you.” said Sirius.

Twenty-second paragraph, first sentence.

“Lucky little cuss.” said Sirius with a smile.

“Wish I was lucky.” said Harry.

End of twenty-second paragraph.

Dialogue set, first sentence.

“It makes wonderful money though, Ronald.” said Mrs. Weasley.

“Yeah, but I'm sure there's a reason why I don't like the idea.” said Ron quietly.

End of dialogue set.

Medicine is very important and they don't take slackers.” said Snape with a sneer.

“Harry could do it.” said Colin.

“No thanks, I'll pass.” said Harry plainly.

Dialogue set, third sentence.

“That's the place you should work in.” said Ron to Hermione. “You'd be brilliant at that.”

Hermione blushed slightly.
“That's what appealed to me!” said Mr. Weasley happily. “I have a blast every day I go to work!”

Dr. Clark couldn't help but laugh softly.

“Or when to threaten the overstuffed chicken.” said Officer McFinn darkly.

“Mum wasn't too thrilled on that one.” said Bill with a weak smile.

“It's not like you sit behind a counter and hand people their money, that's just in the Muggle World, in our world you face...uh...it's dead boring...” said Bill growing quiet as his mother looked at him firmly.

“Not many people do.” said Hagrid thoughtfully. “That might be kinda fun though.”

Harry, Ron and Hermione shared a look.

“When in doubt, get the twins.” said Ginny and Ron together.

The twins smiled happily.

“Cause if it all goes wrong, Mum knows who to blame.” said Ron and Ginny together sending teasing smiles over to their older brothers.
“Oi!” said Fred and George together.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, first sentence.

“This hasn't happened yet, this hasn't happened yet... “said Lionus rubbing his eyes, while Dr. Nicodemus muttered something about wanting to avert heavy depression and a mental breakdown.

End of dialogue set.

“Well, that sounds a little sicker than normal.” said Leroy leaning away from the book.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue set.

Twenty-third paragraph.

“Somehow, don't buy it.” said Mr. Weasley.

“Nice dad...real nice.” said Fred.

“Maybe we actually want little Ronnie to do well on the tests.” said George.

“Sure you do.” said Ron skeptically.

“No one believes us.” said Fred somberly.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Don't go back in there!” said the students together in unison.

Twenty-fourth paragraph.
“I'm starting to think, yes.” said Harry with a slight smile.

“How wrong I am.” said Harry with a snicker.

“This is turning into one of those plans that he just doesn't tell anyone about and goes about it solo.” said Ron. “Scary when it works, but he doesn't explain anything in long lengthy detail.”

Hermione and Ron both blushed.

“Never ask, it makes it all the better surprise. That and it doesn't make you look guilty when you already expect something.” said Fred.
“Did something happen? Did something bad happen?” asked the students curiously.

“Once again with the beeping.” said a third year Gryffindor student.

Despite Harry's desire to sit away from Sirius, Sirius pulled him against himself and held on.

“How about you focus on one thing at a time.” muttered Zacharias.

“She's got a point there.” said Moody.

“But Harry's becoming severely depressed, someone should be noticing this and pulling him out of school.” said Sirius.

“You never know, he could bore you to death.” said Fred seriously.

Harry couldn't help but laugh.
Snape cringed slightly.

End of thirty-third paragraph.

Thirty-fourth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Chief Hawkeye groaned loudly. “Potter, I don't know nor care what your personal opinion is, but you are going to take a day off from reading, and spend it either relaxing or talking to Glacier.”

“Why sir?” asked Harry.

“I'm becoming depressed.” said Chief Hawkeye looking at the boy with a plain look.

Thirty-fifth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“That's why you don't do that till the bell rings.” said Snape sourly. “In case of accidents.”

“But that was an on-purpose, not an accident.” said Ron looking at Malfoy pointedly.

Thirty-sixth paragraph.

“After that, I can see myself not having the heart to nag you.” said Hermione honestly.

Thirty-seventh paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, first sentence, third comma.

“A year doesn't go by that I don't have at least five students miss because it is quite and unusual thing.” said Professor Sprout with a smile.
“Goddamn it.” said Remus darkly.

“Turn around and tell her to kiss your ass.” whispered Sirius.

“I'd love that.” said Harry with a smirk.

“Live.” said Harry. “That's something that will hopefully happen.”

“Not funny.” said Sirius.

“Never claimed it to be.” said Harry.

“Mmn, don't tell that to Umbridge, she can hinder you in every step of the way.” said Sirius.

Tonks looked smugly over to Nightstrike.

“Yeah, this is the future, and if it has something to do with Umbridge...it won't happen.” said Nightstrike with a smirk.

“She was the last one to be taken on.” said Kingsley nodding over to Tonks.

“Means I'm the best of the best.” said Tonks with a bright smile.

“Means we were desperate.” said Moody with a smirk.
“You were always my favorite.” said Remus with a warm smile to McGonagall.

“'You've got the patience of a saint, I would have snapped.” said Mrs. McFinn.

“A good power weekend of studying Transfiguration and you'll be fine.” said Sirius.

“Ouch.” said Rudolph with a laugh.

“His prerogative, though I don't see many students taking on N.E.W.T's potions.” said Dumbledore thoughtfully. “But those that do take the course, they are quite the potion brewers.”

“No, you can't, this was supposed to be a private meeting, what is she doing there? Also how much do you want to bet that she won't go to anyone else's meeting.” said Leroy.
“I've got the perfect temperament, provided I don't have to deal with you on a daily basis, than I may channel my inner psychopath.” said Harry.

“I'd pay good money to see that.” said an Unspeakable quietly.

“Not too sure what you'd be now with that assessment test in the equation.” said Professor Flitwick with thoughtful glance.

Lupin smiled to himself.

“T'm sure I looked at the one that had the most qualified and accurate marks.” said Professor McGonagall stonily.

Several of the students laughed loudly and applauded McGonagall. Sirius even went so far as to transfigure a large bouquet of red roses from one of the biscuits and gave them to her with a bow and flourish.

“You're going to want to keep making those flowers, it's going to get even better.” said Officer McFinn.
“Oh, please tell me that future McGonagall decks, her...I want to hear about that.” said Seamus. “I missed it when she did it a few weeks ago.”

“False hope nothing, she took grading from a legitimate teacher.” said Rivers darkly.

“Oh, she is not.” said Mrs. Weasley.

“That's not a class, that's a reading only from a book, and a very outdated book at that.” said Rivers.

The Great Hall took a collective gasp, and then a rousing cheer went through most of the students.

“Awesome!” said Ron clapping loudly.

“Oh...I think that got her a probation...I want to know what the Governors were doing with all these decrees,” said Emmeline Vance.

“How much do you want to bet that they were either paid off or threatened?” said Tonks.
“Nothing I'm sure you can't handle.” said Moody with a smile.

“The Rangers are along the same lines, but just a bit more intense at times.” said Nightstrike, “And the pay and benefits are infinitely better.”

“Sad how she cannot remember that he was found innocent of all charges...and being a minor, his record is sealed.” said Madam Bones with a roll of her eyes.

“Better than average chances, then.” said Professor Vector with a smile.

“Bitch, you're just a secretary, and in the grand scheme of things, that's all you're going to be.” said Harry plainly.

The people in the bowl turned and looked at Harry.

“Are you okay?” asked Sirius leaning away from his godson slightly.

“I'm sick and tired of her, can't wait till the next book.” said Harry with a sigh.

“Want to sleep for a bit?” asked Remus.

“I want to see if he mucks up his next chance.” said Harry nodding towards Sirius.
Forty-sixth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“I think your career has now been chosen for you. Regardless of what you want.” said Sirius smiling broadly.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, seventh sentence.

“Don't be a fool, Fudge was not popular enough to last the next reform.” said Professor Sinistra.

End of dialogue set.

“And take the pay cut and have to answer to anyone's beck and call? No thank you?” said Professor McGonagall. “There’s no honor in that job.”

Dialogue line.

Forty-seventh paragraph.

“I'd find a way to stick around and watch the fireworks.” said Sirius.

“You would.” said Remus.

Forty-eighth paragraph.

Dialogue set.

“She doesn't have the personality to have a bad mood.” said Harry.

Forty-ninth paragraph.

Fiftieth paragraph.
“So...out of loyalty to McGonagall, you aren't going to do it, or are you just going to do it and endure the guilt?” said Ernie.

Fifty-first paragraph.

Dialogue set.

Fifty-second paragraph.

“Can't say I'd want you to live with that...” said Remus looking ashamed of himself.

Fifty-third paragraph.

Fifty-fourth paragraph.

Sirius flinched.

Dialogue line.

Fifty-fifth paragraph.

“Speak too often of it, and someone is going to hear and he will get caught.” said Moody.

Fifty-sixth paragraph.

Fifty-seventh paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Fifty-eighth paragraph.

“I think that's a bit obvious, someone going in the opposite direction that everyone else is going.” said Lionus.

“Guess future me isn't all that concerned about that.” said Harry.

Fifty-ninth paragraph, second sentence, first comma.

“They can never tell when you're trying to be sneaky.” said Fred.
“First year, we were trying to hide from Filch, and they all turned and looked to where we were hiding behind the Paraclesus statue.” said George.

“They love to ruin hiding places, I swear.” said Fred shaking his head.

End of fifty-ninth paragraph.

“Sneak...” said Lee looking enviously at the book.

Sixtieth paragraph, second sentence.

“Okay, I didn't give you any instructions on how to use the knife, how did you know how to do that? It unlocks any lock, but still...it takes practice to feel when to raise and lower the damn thing.” said Sirius.

Harry smiled.

End of sixtieth paragraph.

Sixty-first paragraph.

Sixty-second paragraph.

Sixty-third paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Learned!” said Harry throwing up an arm.

Sixty-fourth paragraph.

Several students touched their heads.

Sixty-fifth paragraph, first sentence.

“Ugh, your whole head spins?” said Dr. Clark shaking his head.
Sixty-sixth paragraph.

“How do you get us mixed up, I have cool, long black hair, he's got that...whatever that is.” said Sirius gesturing towards Remus' hair.

“Least I don't have fleas.” said Remus shooting back.

Sixty-seventh paragraph.

“You are totally worth it.” said Sirius brushing his lips against Harry's temple.

Sixty-eighth paragraph.

“Talking about one's parents...does not seem like much an emergency.” said Tempest.

End of sixty-ninth paragraph.

Seventieth paragraph.

“And that doesn't really help dad's case.” said Harry.

Dialogue set.

“And here's the beeping again.” said Lee.
“I think that's going to be a bit of normality for a short while.” said Dumbledore kindly.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Seventy-first paragraph.

“Oh my god.” said Remus covering his eyes.

Dialogue line.

“That's better.” said Remus looking up.

Seventy-second paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Seventy-third paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Every time he thought he did something brilliant, or when a particular red head came by, he'd ruff up his hair.” said Sirius.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“He was.” said McGonagall with a slight smile. “A trouble making idiot.”

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“More than apparently I could do.” said McGonagall with a shake of her head.
“She despised him, but after he made an effort to better himself for her she fell for him in the end.” said Sirius.

“Like ’bout seventy percent of his head.” said Sirius making motions of his head shrinking.

“I’d say no...not really...” said Harry softly.

“She would have castrated him.” said Sirius quietly. “Then we never would have had you.”

Snape looked to the side, he felt so humiliated, yet thankful that the man reading the book had stopped the other brats from learning about something they had no business knowing.
“I don't blame future me for shouting, choosing to just let you be completely vulnerable 'cause he can't hide the damn thing.” said Snape.

“I'm really confused.” said Fred.

“What was the big deal?” asked George.

“Not the answer I'm looking for.” said Harry.

“I'm not going back into that room without five other people with me.” said Harry.

“How about me not getting hit with a jar?” said Harry. “Full of something I don't want to know about.”
“Get back! Get back!” said Rudolph quickly.

“Oh, crap, he's the worst person to catch you in that room.” said Fred.
“Now that you mention it...yes.” said the twins together.

Mrs. Weasley gave a loud screech, clambered to her feet and wrapped her arms around her twin sons.

“Well, we don't want to be in your school, we want to be in Hogwarts.” said the students loudly.

“What are you two talking about? “said Mrs. Weasley looking at the sons in her arms. “Seems like we are taking our entrepreneurial path a little earlier than expected, Mum.” said Fred.

“I'm impressed. It takes considerable power to yank it right off the wall, chain and all.” said Flitwick with a proud smile.
“And how did you get the money for this?” said Mrs. Weasley. “A space in Diagon Alley should be terribly expensive!”

“We saved our money Mum.” said Fred.

“We've been planning this for years.” said George.

“I hope we planned on at least fifty percent.” said Fred.

“Oh dear...” said Professor Sprout.

“Heaven...help us...” said Sirius looking at the twins in shock. “Can you imagine...what he would do with that order?”

“Ohh! I'm sort of sad this won't happen now...I'd want pictures.” said Remus with a smile.

Chief Hawkeye looked at Officer McFinn, who nodded, then he leaned forward and looked at Harry. “You want to take the rest of the day off?”

Harry sighed and shook his head. “Nah, let's see if I can get four chapters done today.”

“Okay, we'll stop when you want us to.” said Chief Hawkeye. “But the moment you want to call it quits, sing out.”

“Count on it.” said Harry as he leaned back in the bowl, bracing himself for whatever was going to happen next.
“Okay, kids, the next chapter is called “Chapter Thirty” said Officer McFinn.

“What the heck is a Grawp?” said Lee.

“Beats us, Lee” said George.

“Maybe it's going to be a noise that the Toad says as Peeves goes all prank happy on her.” said Fred with a malicious smile.

“Sure you want to continue on for the day?” asked Sirius.

“If anything, I'll just take a nap or something.” said Harry dully.

First paragraph, first sentence.

“Now I'm sorry we aren't going to do it.” said Fred.

“Maybe we could...” said George.

“Don't...you...dare...” hissed their mother and Head of House.

“Maybe we shouldn’t” amended George.

First paragraph, second sentence.

“Should have done that.” said Angelina.

End of first paragraph.

“I hope they were just talking about Umbridge's classes.” said Flitwick.

Second paragraph, second sentence.

“Why should we? Give her a migraine.” said Fred proudly.

Second paragraph, fourth sentence.
“That damnable bitch.” muttered Tonks. “They didn't do anything wrong! It was all Fred and George.”

“Hopefully that meant that Filch was the one that had to go through it all darn day.” said Ron.

“And I'm sure that we the Prefects would have shown the younger students how to cast a water repelling charm on their cloaks and shoes, that way, only Filch would get wet.” said Hermione.

“There's a spell for that?” asked Ron in shock.

“Oh, Ronald.” said Hermione shaking her head.

End of second sentence.

“We've had many different pranksters in our school, we can handle the best of pranks.” said McGonagall with a smug look.

“Yeah, we could never get one over on her...though there was talk of one prank...no one knew who did it, but it had the teachers stumped.” said Sirius.

“I think we got blamed for that but we were in our second year so that didn't last long.” said Remus. “That was the one where all the clocks ran backwards and there was no real way to tell what time it was So it was either we were late for all our classes or early.”

“Every spell they tried, it didn't work...it wasn't till the prankster was done and over with whatever they were trying to achieve or they got bored with it did the clocks finally go back to normal.” said Sirius.

“No one knows who did that?” asked Ernie.

“There was strong suspicion.” said Dumbledore with a quick glance over Mrs. Weasley, who blushed slightly.

“Mum?” said the twins in shock.

“That's a story for another day, boys.” said Mr. Weasley with a bright smile as he kissed his wife's cheek.

“I want to know...as soon as possible.” said Charlie.

“Hypocrite!” said Fred and George together pointing at their mother dramatically.

“Do as I say, not as I do.” said Mrs. Weasley looking away with a smile.

Third paragraph, second sentence.

“Why not just send the broom home?” said Ernie. “Surely she could have sent it back to...oh...never mind.”

“I'm glad future her didn't send it back, the Dursleys would have burnt it.” said Harry.
“Yes.” said Fred with a satisfied smile.

Fourth paragraph, first sentence.

“Oh, Merlin help us.” said Snape shaking his head and rubbing his eyes with his forefinger and thumb.

Fourth paragraph, second sentence.

Though Hagrid and Charlie normally disapproved using creatures in pranks, they applauded that excellent use of a niffler.

End of fourth paragraph.

“Poor Filch, can't do that can he?” said Katie.

“Right shame, that is.” said Alicia.

Fifth paragraph, first sentence, first comma.

The smiles went away in an instant, and Dumbledore had to down a phial of calming draught.

Fifth paragraph, second sentence.

“Good.” said Remus quietly.

Fifth paragraph, third sentence.

“Nice.” said Sirius nodding approvingly.
End of fifth paragraph.
Pansy was furious while Hermione clapped along with the rest of the Gryffindors.

Sixth paragraph, second sentence.
“Wonder if there were any Slytherin students in there as well?” asked Harry with a smirk.

Sixth paragraph, fourth sentence, seventh word.
Sirius reached over and rubbed the back of Harry's hand absently.

End of sixth paragraph.
“I can't think of a better use to use those Snackboxes on.” said Professor Sprout.

Seventh paragraph, first sentence.
“This I want to hear.” said Sirius leaning forward eagerly.

Seventh paragraph, third sentence.
If someone were to blink they would have missed it, Remus did a little arm pump in support of Peeves' actions.

Seventh paragraph, fourth sentence, second comma.
“Little too far there, Peeves.” said Dumbledore with a smile.

Seventh paragraph, fourth sentence, fourth comma, fourteenth word.
“I'd be passing on breakfast.” said Colin.
“Hope he found a lot of breaks.” said Fred.

McGonagall smiled to herself.

“Not our fault you're son's a git.” said Seamus.

“Do we know what happened to him? I don't remember.” said Harry with a straight face.

“So am I.” said Harry holding up his hand. “But no one gave future me a damn did they?”

Sirius snaked an arm around Harry's middle. “Settle there, your's is a horrible wound, but this is landing in the hospital.”

“Dear, I knew full well, that Percy was not going to be able to stop their shenanigans, and I...I'm
“I hardly thought that you would be able to stop them.” said Mrs. Weasley. “If you had, I would have fainted dead away, and your father and I would have gotten you a whole new set of robes.”

“Doesn’t mean Mum knows about it.” said the Weasley children together.

“You're not a very teacup friendly person.” said Luna with a serene smile.

“Nah, we may buy some...not so legal friendly items, but we certainly don't sell or steal stuff like that.” said Fred.

“My money, I can do whatever the hell I want with it, I certainly didn't want it.” said Harry with a frown.

“And you had every right.” said Remus patting Harry's knee.

“Way to throw me under the bus, love you too, mate.” said Harry shaking his head.
“How did I revert back to my first year self?” said Hermione burying her face in her hands.
“No clue.” said Ron.

“Well...what else is there to talk about?” said Neville.

“A week after never.” said Harry.

“That's why I never got married, I didn't want to hear that sort of thing day in and day out.” said Sirius.
“That and no girl would have you longer than two weeks.” said Remus with a smirk.

“Liar.” said the school together.

“Hey, I haven't said it yet.” said Harry indignantly.
“See!” said a seventh year Hufflepuff.

Dumbledore leaned forward just a bit and looked at the book interestingly.

“Not what we were trying to accomplish with Occlumency lessons.” said Remus.

“He always tends to sneak up on you when you least expect it and throw you play into disarray.” said Angelina.

“Thank you everyone that didn't say that to my face.” said Ron.
“We didn't muck about with the games, or even the practices really.” said Fred.

“Yeah, we said some stuff, but we didn't say anything that was out of the ordinary for us, if we had been all sugary sweet...he would have thought we were taking the Mickey out of him.” said George.

“Kind of wondering why future you is just shoving Cho's name down Harry's throat?” said Katie.

“Maybe I wanted them to be together.” said Hermione quietly.

“After the two rows they had, they’re not a good match.” said Angelina.

“You jerks couldn't take me with you?” said Lee insulted.

“Means you're getting over her.” said Sirius quietly.

Sirius tried muffling his laughter. “Sorry, Ron...but I'm thinking that didn't go over very well with McGonagall.

Weasley is our King
“Sure, don't watch my game.” said Ron pouting slightly. “Though...if it's going as bad as it's starting, might as well hoof it out of there.”

“Never argue with an injured person.” said Dr. Clark. “Not unless you yourself know better.”

“If she's watching me while at a game, she's creepier than I thought.” said Harry.

“Yeah, cause a Ravenclaw and Gryffindor game always causes problems.” said Lee with a roll of his eyes. “You want fireworks? You watch and Slytherin and Gryffindor game.”

Hagrid covered his eyes with a groan.
“Not where we want to go.” said Hermione.

“Can' be too careful.” said Hagrid.

“Alas, it makes all the difference.” said Firenze shaking his head sadly.

“They have good reason to be upset, but to be violent towards others that have done nothing to them is going too far.” said Dumbledore looking disappointed.

“Tempest pawed at the ground angrily with her hoof, but Firenze took her hand lightly in his.

“It is alright, they did not follow through with the assault...” said Firenze softly.

“They might have gone through with it, but they did shoot you with an arrow, I remember that.”
said Tempest with a scowl.

Firenze only smiled softly.

Dialogue line.

“Didn't you see the hoof print on his chest?” said Dean. “Their legs aren't that flexible.”

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“I can handle a herd all by meself.” said Hagrid with a proud sniff.

Dialogue set.

“I'm certain it was because you saved me that I was sending you the warnings, my friend.” said Firenze with an amused smile.

Thirty-third paragraph.

Dialogue set.

“Especially when the other options is Aragog and his group.” said Colin with a shiver.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

“Some how, I'm not reassured.” said Dr. Clark with a worried look.

Thirty-fourth paragraph.

Thirty-fifth paragraph.

“Thank goodness you're with Hagrid, you could easily get lost in there without him.” said Professor Sprout.
“Yeah, I'm having flashbacks and I wasn't even there in person.” said Sirius.

“Ooh, and Hermione's got longer hair, that's got to be painful if that also got caught.” said Ginny wincing slightly.

“Your scratches? Better get him out of there, Hagrid!” said Madam Pomfrey.

“It wasn't the scratches.” said Officer McFinn shaking his head.

“Here's hoping that something even worse is out there hiding.” said Parvati nervously.

“Hagrid...” said Dumbledore looking at the book inquisitively.
“Not much of a shock, she's been out for you for quite a while.” said Flitwick, “I'm ama...err...impressed...that you stayed on that long.”

“I can't see you using a niffler against anyone.” said Charlie.

“I wouldn't blame you, personally.” said Harry with a shrug.

“I can't see her having the figurative 'bollocks' to do that.” said Bill.

“We don't want her, we want you.” said Harry sincerely, daring anyone else with a glare to rebuff him.

“Oh no...” said Mr. Weasley quietly.

“You need to say once in a while, 'I'm a fifteen year old boy...find an adult to help you.'” said Sirius.
Forty-first paragraph.

Mrs. McFinn giggled softly.

Dialogue set.

“I'd be more afraid of giant spiders, random dark creatures...than nettles...all you need for that is that gold colored soap.” said Dr. Clark.

“What...really?” asked Fred.

“Yeah...my grandmother brought some back from America...Dial soap I think it was called, worked miracles on nettle stings.” said Dr. Clark.

Forty-second paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Not good at all...” said Remus.

Forty-third paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“What's sleeping?” asked Dennis.

Forty-fourth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Forty-fifth paragraph.

Several students chuckled softly.

Dialogue line.

Forty-sixth paragraph.
“A giant?” came the squeak of a first year.

“There's a giant in the forest?” asked another first year.

A cascade of murmuring of the nature of the giant and the what could be the personality traits of said giant ran through the students till Officer McFinn cleared his throat.

“How do you bring a giant that doesn't want to come? Doesn't he go where the heck he wants to whether you like it or not?” said Lee.

“And that's how you got all those injuries? Those lessons?” asked Draco staring at the half-giant.

“Well, bully...” said Leroy deadpanned. “That's great news.”

“A giant mound of giant is small?” said Fred.

“I can see it, being much smaller than the normal giants...they would be very much willing to injure someone smaller than themselves.” said Dumbledore.

The school was silent.
“You have got to be kidding me.” said Zacharias.

“Wow...really?” said Tonks staring at Hagrid.

“I'm...shocked...” said Kingsley.

Forty-eighth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“No other definition...” said Sirius.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

“Only?” said Mrs. McFinn. “Oof, I'd get a crick in my neck from looking up that high.”

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

“Yeah, relatives have a way of mucking through with your romance.” said Bill sending Charlie a pointed look.

“Hey, if I hadn't of flew through that bush, you may be sidling up to that Thrunton girl as opposed to Fleur.” said Charlie with a mischievous smirk.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

“Don't quite know why, gettin' beat up an' all.” said Hagrid.

“So...despite coming back early...you still managed to bring him?” said Terry.

“Aye, strange though...even when I don't visit all that often, he's pretty calm and has learned quite a bit...” said Hagrid.
Chief Hawkeye smiled to himself.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue set, first sentence.

“Not with track record he's got so far.” said Madam Hooch quietly.

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

Forty-ninth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Fiftieth paragraph.

“Either scared them off, or ate them.” said Hannah quietly.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Check, please.” said George after a moment of silence.

Fifty-first paragraph.

“Can you blame us Hagrid, if Grawp can leave wounds on you, imagine what he could do to us?” said Hermione.

“I know...guess I'm desperate.” said Hagrid looking apologetically.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

“Somehow, I think just feeding him would be easier.” said Ron.
Fifty-second paragraph.

“Well, hopefully he's better looking than the other giants.” said Lavender.

Dialogue set.

“Must not have gone swimmingly.” said Rivers with a weak smile.

Dialogue set.

Fifty-third paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Least then we could dodge the fire...” said Harry.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

“Yeah, before you go, please introduce them, tell them that you're friends.” said Sirius. “So that he doesn't attack them later.”

Dialogue line.

“YES! INTRODUCE YOURSELVES!” said the Rangers together.

“You don't want to be viewed as a threat to him. 'Kill, just to simplify things' remember?” said Nightstrike.

Fifty-fourth paragraph.

“Don't wake him like that! Now's he's going to be in a foul mood.” said Remus covering his eyes.
Fifty-fifth paragraph.
Dialogue line.
“He did, till you woke him up with the stick!” said Leroy.

Fifty-sixth paragraph, sixth sentence.
“Okay...not so great to look at.” said Lavender quietly.

End of fifty-sixth paragraph.
Dialogue line.
Fifty-seventh paragraph, third sentence, first dash.
“Can't quite see many birds willing to stay in the nest like that.” said Sirius.

End of fifty-seventh paragraph.
Dialogue set.
Fifty-eighth paragraph.
“Must be bored, I can understand that.” said Sirius.

Dialogue line.
Fifty-ninth paragraph.
Dialogue line.
Dialogue line.
Sixtieth paragraph.
“I don't want his attention on them.” said Mrs. Weasley weakly.

Dialogue line.
“I’d be more worried about him grabbing her.” said Professor McGonagall her face pale. She and the rest of the teachers had been silent since the revelation and were highly worried about the future selves of two of their students.

“Oh shit, what happened?” said Rudolph frantically.

“Thank Merlin for your reflexes.” said Flitwick wiping his brow with a handkerchief.

“At least he didn't pursue her...I don't think the ropes would have held him in place for long.” said Professor Vector.

“Hermione won't be back, I think that firmly traumatized her.” said Mrs. McFinn looking at the girl worriedly.

“Good idea.” said the teachers together.
Sixty-sixth paragraph, sixth sentence, first comma, sixth word.

Officer McFinn glanced over to Hagrid and tapped his foot.

End of sixty-sixth paragraph.

What Hagrid heard was “Befriend what others called monsters and be so optimistic that Grawp would ever be fit to mix with humans”

Dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Sixty-seventh paragraph.

“Well, crap.” said a sixth year Ravenclaw.

Dialogue line.

Sixty-eighth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“If they harm, one hair on either of Hermione or Harry's head.” said Dumbledore coldly. “Future or not, I will have something to say about that.”

Several of the adults pulled away slightly.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Murder is murder...no matter what people you are a part of.” said Tempest with a disdainful snort.
“I have not entered into servitude, either now or in the future...I help my allies.” said Firenze stiffly.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“I share no secrets.” said Firenze. “I have Centaur pride.”

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“That forest is open to everyone, both Centaur and human alike, as well as the creatures that inhabit it. We signed a treaty and while it is unfortunate that the Ministry is being biased, we certainly do not patrol the forest to make sure they stay on their side.” said Dumbledore shaking his head.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, second sentence.

“Good as!” said Hagrid sternly.

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue set.

“Them nags will thank me years from now that I didn't let them do that.” said Hagrid angrily.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Sixty-ninth paragraph.

Dialogue line.
“I’d love to see them try and remove him, or hurt him.” said Hagrid with a dark chuckle. “They can't even get a scratch on him.”

Seventieth paragraph.

Dialogue set.

“I don't think a wrecking ball could move you.” said Dr. Clark with a smile.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Worth a shot.” said Hermione.

Seventy-first paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“If Ravenclaw won, I'm leaving for the day.” said Fred.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue set.

“Except it sounds like they look like they just bathed a cat in the woods.” said Rudolph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“No I won't.” said Hermione placing her hands on her hips.
Dialogue set.

Hagrid shifted uncomfortably.

Dialogue set.

“It's going to happen.” said Dr. Clark. “Hate to say it, but with Umbridge in charge, he's going to get sacked.”

Dialogue set.

Hermione screamed softly, her hands covering her face and turned horror filled eyes towards Hagrid. “I didn't say that! I didn't' say that!”

“I...I...understand.” said Hagrid trying to sound unhurt.

Seventy-second sentence.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, first sentence.

“Nice to know Harry can reel her in when she goes too, too far.” said Rudolph quietly.

End of dialogue set.

“You just don't know your own strength Hagrid.” said McGonagall patting Hagrid's arm.

“I promise, I won't put them in danger...I won't.” said Hagrid taking out a handkerchief and dabbing his eyes.

Dialogue line.

Weasley is our King.

“Oh, not that song again.” said Fred shaking his head.
“Hold on...it didn't sound like all the other times we've heard it.” said George.

Dialogue line.

Seventy-third paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Weasley is our King.

“Does that song imply something that I think it does?” said Sirius with a happy smile.

Dialogue line.

Seventy-fourth paragraph.

Weasley is our King.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“And shit, we weren't there.” said Harry shaking his head. “That would have been an awesome game to watch...”

Dialogue line.

Seventy-fifth paragraph, first semi-colon, first comma.

“That's what you get for being tall.” said Harry with a smirk.

End of chapter.

“I think a little chat between Miss Granger and Hagrid would not go amiss, we will reconvene when that is done.” said Dumbledore standing up.

Hermione went over to Hagrid and wrapped her arms around Hagrid' middle as best she could as he was seated and cried. Hagrid looked down, but patted her gently on the back.

“I'm going to go cook something.” said Harry.

“I'll go with you sweetheart.” said Mrs. McFinn. “I just adore that kitchen.”

“Looks like we may just take the rest of the day off.” said Dr. Nicodemus.
In the Great Hall, Hermione was crying softly and begging Hagrid to forgive her, even though he said he did over and over again.

“Hagrid! I'm so sorry, I didn't mean...this hasn't happened...” sobbed Hermione as she buried her face in her hands.

Hagrid looked down at the sobbing girl and brought her gently towards him, hugging her gently. “It's all right. I was askin' a lot of yeh three...”

“I don't want you fired, I never want you fired!” she said wrapping her arms around him the best she could.

“And I don' want yeh lot bein' expelled...I was just desperate I suppose.” said Hagrid softly. “I know that nothin' that's in these future books is gonna happen.”

Hermione hiccuped as she wiped her eyes and blew her nose. “I'm still sorry...”

“I forgive yeh.” said Hagrid.

When Harry thought it was only going to take a few minutes for Hermione and Hagrid to talk it all out, it soon became a few hours...not that he was complaining. He and Mrs. McFinn got to hang out in the kitchen and trade off different recipes and cook to their heart's content. Once they were done with one treat in particular, they were placed on the table where they got their lunch and it was transported up to the Great Hall for anyone to enjoy.

Mrs. McFinn took a cluster of grapes and then, after asking some from a passing elf, rolled the grapes around in a cherry gelatin powder and then with the help of yet another elf, froze them.

“What in the world are you doing?” asked Harry.
“I used to do this with my girlfriends, you need to try them when they're...oh already?” said Mrs. McFinn taking the bowl from the elf.

“Magic, Miss Holly, magic.” said Harry with a smile as he took one of the grapes. She smiled brightly as her “cooking buddy” groaned. “Oh sweet Merlin this is good!”

“I thought you'd like it.” said Mrs. McFinn with a laugh. “What's that that you're making?”

Harry looked down at the pastries he was filling with light brown meat, tomatoes, cheese and lettuce.

“I'm making something new, taco pockets.” said Harry with a crooked smile.

Mrs. McFinn looked a little confused. “Tacos, where did you learn how to make tacos?”

“Well, one year when Dudley came back from Smeltings, he said they had a Cultural Fair, there was clothes, products and food from all over the world. He said he liked the tacos...and while he could eat a bus, he knows good food.” said Harry. “I found the recipe at the local library, thought I'd give it a shot...I made tacos for Dudley once, he liked them...Uncle Vernon wasn't quite sold though.”

“Have you heard anything about him lately?” asked Mrs. McFinn, ignoring the odious man, but focusing on his unfortunate offspring. “Does he know his family has been arrested?”

“Well, I heard that he was taken out of school and put in foster care. Then he kind of got into some big trouble and not a lot of foster care people are willing to take him in. Inspector Homes stepped in and took over housing him. He's still fighting with him, but the Inspector says that he can see him breaking down.” said Harry after a moment of silence.

“He just needs to be in the right environment. I believe...no matter how a child acts, if they can be put in a place where they need to be, then they can turn out alright. A child needs...to know love, kindness, and respect. Now a days, and from all stories of parents that James had told me, you don't hear much of it.” said Mrs. McFinn softly.
“That means a majority of families are doing a good job, if Officer McFinn didn't have to respond to them.” said Harry with a smile as he took her hand.

Hours later, they went back up to resume the readings, Hermione looked to be in better spirits and a few of the students wanted to know what the pastry things were.

“Did you like them?” asked Harry.

“A few of us did, and then a few started to nearly drown themselves with pitchers of water.” said Fred, but then his face turned serious. “You are never allowed...to make those again.”

“I was one of the people drowning themselves...George ate ten of them...didn't feel a thing.” said Fred. “We've never...understand...never...not agreed on anything in the ways of food.”

Harry chuckled slightly. “Alright, I'll make them for him, when you...never mind, you'll always be around.”

“Damn straight skippy.” said Fred with a bright smile.

“Alright, the next chapter is Chapter Thirty-One

“Oh no, hey wait, will we get answers to the tests?” said Dean excitedly.

“No likely.” said Sirius with a laugh. “And besides, you kids won't remember them, better keep up with studying.”

First paragraph, first sentence.

“Yeah, it takes a while for that particular 'high' to wear off.” said Charlie with a wink over to his youngest brother.

First paragraph, second sentence.
“Yeah, that could have been a bit painful.” said Nightstrike with a snicker. “Better ease into it.”

End of first paragraph.

Ron blushed happily.

Second paragraph.

Dialogue set.

“Maybe cause you finally woke up and knew you could do this?” said Fred.

Dialogue set, second sentence.

“But thankfully you don't fall down that rabbit hole.” said Harry darkly.

Sirius and Remus flinched.

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Oh, that'll reveal that you weren't there.” said Dr. Clark trying to lighten the mood.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

“Future me won't like that.” said Ron shaking his head.

Dialogue set.

Third paragraph.

Dialogue line.
“This hasn't even happened yet, and I'm already feeling bad.” said Harry.

“Well, I feel better now.” said Ron.

Hagrid shuffled his feet, a guilty smile on his face.

Dumbledore chuckled warmly.

Hermione flashed Hagrid a worried look, but Hagrid only waved her anguish away.
“Well, we got to meet Charlie's mates...and we learned that Hagrid didn't open the chambers.” said Harry honestly.

“Compared to the life and death situation you were in, in your second year...his friends would have to have saved your life a thousand times to make it worth while.” said Remus.

Dialogue line.

Sixth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Somehow, I don't think that hope lasts.” said a seventh year Hufflepuff.

Seventh paragraph.

“Well...I'm glad it's not leading up to anything dangerous this year...no final task...no 'murderous criminal' out on the grounds, no chamber...no stone...almost peaceful...” said Dr. Clark with a weak smile.

Eighth paragraph, first sentence.

“At least they don't just drop you off and have you study the things that won't come up on the test.” said Sirius.

Eighth paragraph, second sentence.

Remus shook his head softly, but he could understand where Snape was coming from. Harry had discovered his most hated memory and as he believed that Harry would tell everyone in site about what he saw...he thought the news was all over the school...granted, that didn't give him the right to leave bruises on the boy and they had all had a talk about that. Future be damned, no teacher was allowed to lay their hands on a student...and the memory of him putting tape on Harry's mouth made him cringe in horror. Harry had forgiven him and it was discovered that he was having a bad reaction to a potion that Dr. Nicodemus gave him, but that didn't excuse what he did.

End of eighth paragraph.

The fifth years looked quite nervous at this information, if Hermione was getting overworked...what in the world was it going to be like for them?
“Oh sweet Merlin, we had someone like that.” said Sirius loudly. “Barnabas McQuacken, that guy...he was in Ravenclaw and for both O.W.L.s and N.E.W.T.s he would skulk about and insist on knowing what your schedule was for studying. If you said anything less nine...he would call you a slacker.”

“Then he would pat you on the back and say he would be more than generous with his tips when you'd come by to bus his table at the Leaky Cauldron.” said Remus. “It really hurt him when he didn't get higher scores than us.”

“How many hours did you say you did?” asked Hermione curiously.

“Two.” said Sirius.

“Two a night?” said Hermione looking scandalized.

“Two a week.” said Remus with a smile. “We actually did do about two a night, but it was casual, not intense study.”

“Oh, he laughed and said 'Mark my words'...I kinda forgot what he said after that...anytime someone says that, I instinctively find something else to occupy my time.” said Sirius. “I do remember when he asked us for our scores and we showed him the papers...never saw someone tear out their hair like that and cry...”

“Do more than eight and you'll become sleep deprived.” said Fred.

“Maybe that's what happened to McQuacken.” said Sirius thoughtfully.

“You'll be fine, just study the things you don't know a bit more and review occasionally the stuff you do know.” said Sirius.
“True, but you didn't even know what you wanted to do with your life, any grade you would have gotten, you would have molded your life around that.” said Remus.

Sirius shrugged. “I'm one of the lucky ones, I don't rightly care.”

Eleventh paragraph.

Dialogue set.

“Somehow...I can't see her giving a bye on a very important test.” said Flitwick. “She takes her job very seriously.”

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“I wouldn't mention them either...no offense.” said Rudolph looking at his husband.

“None taken.” said Leroy.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“No nonsense then.” said Sirius.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

“Oh, I'm sure you will be just fine.” said McGonagall with a proud look.

Twelfth paragraph.

Thirteenth paragraph, first sentence.

“Nothing new.” said every adult in the room minus Dr. Clark, Officer McFinn and Mrs. McFinn.
“Why the hell am I getting that?” asked Harry.

“The real question is, why is he selling it?” said Flitwick looking over to Carmichael sternly.

“You don't need that stuff Ron...” said Mrs. Weasley with a soft smile and her husband nodded happily. “And if I hear that you have taken anything of the sort in the future, I'll paddle your behind.” said Mrs. Weasley all of a sudden stern, her husband did a double take and looked at her.

“Good girl, who knows what that could have been.” said Remus.

“I remember one seventh year Gryffindor student tried to sell a bottle of something that looked and smelled like dragon piss, said it boosted his mentality for two whole weeks...” said Sirius thoughtfully. “Didn't help his case when he was already dumb as a box of rock cakes.”

“Oh shit...that's stuff's illegal...” said Charlie scanning the crowd trying to sniff out this Harold Dingle, who was slouching in his chair, trying to avoid being seen. “That stuff is great for the brain and all, but if you take too much...your brain is fried and you're going to have to be hand-fed your entire life.”

“Well, for the most part, that stuff does, the talismans not so much, but it's highly unlikely that students can get their hands on stuff like that, or brew the potions that do the stuff they want.” said Bill honestly. “Like that brain elixir, that stuff works, and it's really great. I take it when I have a puzzling curse to work out in a few of the tombs I go into, but that stuff's expensive, like thirty galleons a phial.”

“I took some of that dragon claw stuff once or twice, at first I thought that stuff was awesome, but then I almost...well...there's a reason why it's illegal....I took it in a legal environment, mum.” said
Charlie quickly as his mother began to swell with anger.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

“Now that stuff can mess you up.” said Sirius and Remus together.

“Words of experience?” asked Harry.

“Peter took some, wanted an edge on the tests, someone used the same scam...he's lucky he didn't take all of it and we could get him some help.” said Remus.

“Fool recovered right before the tests started.” said Sirius.

Fourteenth paragraph.

“Good.” said the adults together.

“ Took it away from us too.” said the rest of the students under fifth year.

Fifteenth paragraph.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue set, second sentence, first comma.

“Come on, that's a given.” said Sirius.

Dialogue set, second sentence, second comma.

“Not that they help.” said Harry.

Dialogue set, fourth sentence.

“Watch, it'll be someone in Slytherin and Umbrdige will defend them.” said a fifth year Hufflepuff.
“Except for anyone in her Inquisitorial Squad.” said the same Hufflepuff.

“Too bad you all can't fail it on purpose.” said Sirius.

“And we won't be sending our kids here, that's for damn certain...not if she was there.” said a sixth year Gryffindor.

“Yeah, Peter said that he was sitting by the kitchen window every day...” said Sirius rolling his eyes.

“Don't be depressing.” said Leroy with a teasing smile.

“Ooh, and that's a hefty book.” said Flitwick wincing.

“Can't focus with noise around me.” said Ron with a tint of pink in his cheek.
“I should hope so, she didn't get a very good grade from them.” said Rivers with a smirk.

“She and I do enjoy a friendly game of cribbage from time to time, though I have yet to pay her the two galleons I owe her from the last set.” said Dumbledore thoughtfully.

Dumbledore chuckled warmly.

“How old is that woman?” said Lee in shock.

Madam Hooch scoffed, “They know exactly where the staffroom is at.”
“With Umbridge harping in Fudge's ear, there's no way I'd make it in.” said Harry.

Dr. Clark groaned softly and rubbed his eyes. “That sounds painful after a while.”

Sirius threw his arms around his godson and pulled him close, “Sounds like future you did just fine.”

Harry rolled his eyes.

“As long as it pertains to the question, you'd get a few extra points, if you just deviate from the question completely then it may hurt you instead of help you.”

“Well, of course not, they don't want them shouting the answers to the others.” said Remus.

“And how do you remember that?” asked Hermione with her hands on her hips.
Ron blushed.

Thirty-first paragraph.

Dialogue set, first sentence,

“Who's nervous, I'm trying not to laugh.” said Harry.

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue set, first sentence.

Fred took his hands and shaped the size of a rat and expanded it to the size of a badger. “Taking your time?”

“Future me probably is probably faking it...” said Harry. “I hope.”

End of dialogue set.

Mrs. Weasley laughed softly at that and smiled over at her son. “Oh Ron...the stories I could tell...”

“Bout what?” asked Ron.

“You're Uncle Gideon transfigured his doily into candy floss during his O.W.L.s, for years he could not figure out how that happened, and he tried recreate it time and time again.” said Mrs. Weasley with a watery smile.

Thirty-third paragraph.

Thirty-fourth paragraph.

Hannah blushed.

“That's actually kind of impressive, multiplication and transfiguring...pretty awesome.” said Sirius.
“Passed with an 'O', I'm assuming, it sounds like you're doing pretty well.” said Remus.

“All the DA students are the only ones to pass with excellent grades, I'll bet.” said Ernie with a small smile.

“Favoritism.” said Sirius nudging him.

“After all the crap I've put up with this year? I'm entitled.” said Harry.

Several of the teachers chuckled.

“That's a happy thought as ever I've heard one.” said Tonks.

“Hate to say it, but you should care.” said Lionus.
“Just don't take too long a break, you'll crash and never recover.” said Charlie. “That's what happened to Abigail Cribbane, she took a six hour break, lost her groove and failed her Muggle Studies class horrifically.”

End of fortieth paragraph.

“Oh dear...” said Dr. Clark.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, first sentence.

“Not one missed translation.” said Bill.

End of dialogue set.

“Good.” said the students together.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Oh...” said the students.

“Not so good.” said a seventh year Hufflepuff.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, second sentence, first comma.

“Forgive me for thinking adult would act like adults.” said Harry with a smirk.

End of dialogue set.
“Is it wrong that I love wizard chess?” asked Mrs. McFinn quietly to Dr. Clark.

“No, I love playing it.” said Dr. Clark with a chuckle. “I love seeing them smash the hell out of each other.”

“Yeah, experience makes tests so much easier.” said Tonks with a giggle.

The teachers looked slowly over to Snape.

“Somehow, I doubt that was a planned effort.” said Madam Sprout.

“Amazing how you're a much better brewer without him breathing down your neck.” said Sirius.

“You've lost your mind.” said Ron in awe. “You love tests.”

It took about ten minutes for people to stop laughing for Officer McFinn to continue.

“Ooh, way to do a 'Percy'.” said Ginny wincing slightly.
“Like I said, a hedgehog with manic paranoia.” said Dr. Clark smiling.

End of forty-fourth paragraph.

Forty-fifth paragraph.

“You must have done it alright then...” said Sirius.

Forty-sixth paragraph, first sentence.

Dumbledore covered his mouth his hands to stifle the laughter.

End of forty-sixth paragraph.

Forty-seventh paragraph.

Rudolph laughed loudly. “Oh my god...sounds like your Grandpa's. He did the exact same thing, only he was confused as to why the examiner was still alive. He honestly thought he had a gift.”

Dialogue set.

Kingsley hissed in sympathy. “Not good.”

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Pavarti and Lavender frown over to the two of them.

Dialogue line.

Forty-eighth paragraph.

“Nice to know that you're afraid of me.” said Hermione.

“You hit.” said Harry with a pout.
Hermione blushed.

“T've got a bad feeling...” said Tonks nervously.

“Oh no...” said Fred looking over to Hagrid worriedly.

“You don't think...” said George.

“I do.” said Fred.

“She wouldn't...she can't fire him at night!” said Rivers angrily.

“She can't do a lot of stuff, but she seems to think she can.” said Moody.

“How the hell can you, with something roaring at you somewhere in the dark?” said Blaise.
“What could they have done to have Hagrid attack them?” asked Sprout. “He wouldn't hurt anyone on purpose.”

“How much do you want to bet that Umbridge told him he was going to Azkaban?” muttered Colin darkly.

“Get 'em future Hagrid!” shouted the twins.

“The idiot can't remember stunning spells doesn't work on him.” said Moody shaking his head.

“NO!” shouted a few of the students together.

“Note to self, don't piss him off.” said George quietly.

“I can't quite see them worrying about the test now, there's is unadulterated violence just down on the grounds.” said Mr. Weasley with a quiet snicker.
“Oh! They're in trouble now!” said Remus chuckling warmly.

“She's going to ream them a new one.” said Sirius brightly.

Officer McFinn sent a brief look over to McGonagall and sighed, this was not going to be pretty...

“Wait...what?” said Charlie looking at the book. “They would have cheered, not screamed...”

The entire Great Hall was silent. Professor Sprout and Professor Flitwick reached over and each took one of McGonagall's pale, clammy hands in their own, Professor Snape sat, his eyes wide in shock. Hagrid was trembling with rage and snapped the armrests of his chair once again.

Dumbledore was slamming back Calming Draught after Calming Draught and Madam Pomfrey was checking his pulse, but her face was also pale and her eyes tight with fury. The rest of the teachers were looking horrified at the book and sending quick looks over to McGonagall.

The students were sitting in silent shock and horror, no one was looking other than the book and McGonagall and the only movement and sound other than weeping and whimpers, came from Remus, Bill and Charlie, who was holding down or back the very vocal Sirius, Lee and the twins. They were shouting or grunting about getting the whoever the Aurors are that had sent the Stunning spells, they knew one of their targets and they weren't going to let him get away with it.

“It hasn't happened yet! She's okay!” said Remus with a grunt as he wrestled Sirius to the ground. He also had fury in his eyes but he had to push it down slightly to keep Sirius from doing something stupid.

“I'll kill him, I don't a f#cking damn, I'll kill him!” shouted Sirius under his friend's weight.

“Get in line!” said Fred and George together. “No one touches McGonagall, not while we're around!”

Mrs. McFinn had come over to Sirius' vacant seat and wrapped her arms around Harry, who was staring at the book in Officer McFinn's hands, his eyes wide, face stony and tears streaking down his cheeks. “She's okay sweetheart, she's just fine right now, and I'm sure that the book version of her is alright as well.”

Chief Hawkeye took a sip of tea and looked over to Lionus. “I want...an intense retraining...of every Auror in that Ministry. That was overexcessive...”

Lionus nodded, and so did Tonks, Moody and Kingsely.

“I trained those two.” said Moody pointing to Kingsley and Tonks. “And I know they don't do anything like that, but it'd be nice to know they don't have to make sure their own mates don't endanger them.”

Ron was holding Hermione as she clutched at his shirt and cried.

“I don't want to hear these books anymore...” said Hermione thickly. “They're horrible.”

“I don't blame you, but we've got to be here, for Harry...” said Ron. “We can't just leave him...”

“No...you're right...” said Hermione hiccuping.

“They did it completely wrong, but on a Muggle Police Officer's side, Hagrid, and McGonagall aren't completely innocent either, only about Ninety-eight percent.”

He held up his hand as the students and even a few adults shouted indignantly. “Hey, I heard your opinions for a long time, my turn now. In the Muggle world: If an arrest is happening, don't get between the person being arrested, falsely or otherwise and the arresting officers. You'll only elevate the situation, get yourself arrested or get yourself hurt.

While we here in Great Britain don't have quick access to guns, the Officers in America for example do. So many people in that country's history has been hurt because of other citizens getting involved in the arrest, acting as vigilantes, or coming to the quote-unquote criminal's aide. If you're not being arrested, you should keep back, watch the scene, take pictures or videos and offer your eyewitness statement to the appropriate solicitors.” said Officer McFinn. “But that's just in the Muggle World, your laws may be different, but you shouldn't be putting yourself in harm's way like that, regardless of your skill.

“Hagrid on the other, yes you were being falsely arrested by a power hungry bitch, but...I saw who they were when these books were first shown to me, they didn't have anything to do with you being arrested, she used her position to force their hand. You didn't need to be so violent, you could have went calmly and with dignity. By attacking them, you only solidified their...once again, quote-unquote, justification of arresting you.

“I'm not condoning the way they arrested you, or their reasons, hell in my world, they would be sacked before the month was up, but it would work better in your favor if you go quietly, compliantly, and then in the court of law, slam them if they've done wrong with all sorts of evidence. Every time something goes amiss and a police officer is either too...aggressive, biased, or on the take, it gives every other officer a figurative black eye. We are all then labeled with a negative image it takes A LOT to recover from that. Better to go civilized and settle things calmly, than to go completely mad and then both sides are held accountable.” said Officer McFinn wisely. “And I completely understand and see that the Ministry of Magic has to be have a severe overhaul and to relearn what the hell they are there for.”

The Great Hall was quiet and slightly in awe, till Dr. Clark snorted. “Are you reciting bits of that old American show 'Dragnet'?”

“Shut up, that show was one of the reason I wanted to be a police officer.” said Officer McFinn picking up the book and ignoring his friend.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

Sixty-sixth paragraph, first sentence.

“Good.” said Fred and George, who were still being sat on by their older brothers. They heard what Officer McFinn said, but their steadfast loyalty to McGonagall was not going to go away that easily.

End of sixty-sixth paragraph.

“Poor McGonagall and Fang.” said Angelina. “I really hope she comes out okay.”

Dialogue set.

Sixty-seventh paragraph.

“Can't...even give them the minutes they lost back to them...that's not fair.” said Lee shakily trying to calm down, and prove that Charlie can remove his hand from his back that was keeping him down on the ground. If he didn't believe the man handled dragons on a daily basis, he did now. Charlie was keeping a firm hold on both George, Lee and even had a foot on Fred to help Bill from losing his grip.

Sixty-eighth paragraph.

Harry wiped his eyes and looked at the book grimly. “Excited? We were bloody excited about McGonagall getting hurt? What the BLOODY HELL?” shouted Harry.

“Easy sweetheart, easy.” said Mrs. McFinn holding Harry back and looking horrified as she watched the white color of his hair, that was receding, was creeping down to the ends of his hair right before her eyes.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.
“Now we show concern?” screeched Hermione angrily at her book self.

“Oh, god...thank goodness that we're not going to go through this...” said Ernie quietly.

“Now they've only got Flitwick, Sprout and the other teachers...McGonagall was the one teacher that stood up to her in a very obvious sense.” said a third year Ravenclaw student.

“Maybe Umbridge gave the order to stun her the moment they saw her on the grounds.” said Luna, her usually dream-like voice sharp. “To stop her from interfering in what Umbridge wanted to do.”

“And why aren't we addressing our Head of House being assaulted?” said Katie in anguish.

“That's one way around a locked door.” said Flitwick.
"I had better not fail." said Madam Pomfrey looking worriedly over to the Head of Gryffindor.

Seventy-first paragraph.

“And it doesn't sound like I gave McGonagall a blinking thought.” said Harry darkly.

“You did...” said Officer McFinn. “You did the same thing that Dumbledore did just a few moments ago.”

“What?” asked Harry looking at Dumbledore.

“He gulped down Calming Draughts like they were shots of whiskey.” said Officer. “You calmed down enough to not go out and kill Umbridge, but you still wanted to get back at her.”

Seventy-second paragraph.

Seventy-third paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Seventy-fourth paragraph.

“Yeah, the smallest things tend to just bug the daylights out of you...quit kicking me.” said Charlie looking down at his brother who was still under him.

“Get off me...” said George with a groan.

Seventy-fifth paragraph, second sentence.

“Come on, future Harry...that one’s a given...it's your opinion, they can't mark it incorrect!” said Sirius as he continued to struggle under Remus. “Get off me.”

“I will, when I can trust that you won't go off your nut.” said Remus.

End of seventy-fifth paragraph.

Remus smiled. “None that I'm aware of.”
“You're thinking of werewolves, kiddo.” said Nightstrike.

Seventy-sixth paragraph.

Exam Question.

Dialogue set.

“There comes the hard part of remembering the notes.” said Fred. “Seriously, I'm calm now, you can get off.”

“Sitting on you is giving us something to do, so you're staying there.” said Bill.

Seventy-seventh paragraph.

Parvati blushed heavily.

Exam Question.

Seventy-eighth paragraph, fourth sentence.

“That part is right; he had proposed that trolls be allowed a large amount of area to wander about without continuously hunted. That and give them a few rights...nothing strenuous or politically damming, just common social rights...unfortunately...it so happened that the Minister of Liechtenstein's vacation home was in that area, and they never talked to him about letting the trolls in the area. His daughter nearly got clubbed to death by one that happened to wander through their garden hedges.” said Remus.

“Also it didn't help that the troll didn't just happen across the house on accident, that troll was part of a troupe that had just demolished four churches, a pub and twelve houses.” said Rivers.

End of seventy-eighth paragraph.

“You're assuming that she knows the answer.” said Lavender with a giggle.

Seventy-ninth paragraph.

“Can't please everyone.” said Sirius accepting help from Remus' arm as he stood up.
“Half of them are doodling, bet you three sickles.” said Lionus with a laugh.

“But...you're not even asleep...” said Hermione worriedly.

Sirius pulled Harry closer to himself, speaking soothing words that it was alright, despite it not having happened yet...but that didn't stop the horrible foreboding that gripped his chest.

“Lord...You-Know-Who can kiss my...”

“Charlie!” shouted Mrs. Weasley.
Sirius felt Harry go rigid, he looked at his godson's face and saw that all the red color that painted his son's face was now completely gone and his eyes were almost pinpricks. He seemed to have stopped breathing as well, he could not remember the last time he had seen the boy so scared before.

The Hall was covered in a muffled silence, as if someone had just pulled the plug on his ears, Harry was drowning in it, he wanted someone to say something...anything, a whimper, a shout, even crack a joke...anything was better than this hellish silence with everyone staring at him.

“Harry...Harry are you alright?” came a voice near his ear.

Harry looked at Sirius out of the corner of his eye, Sirius was staring at him, but flickered his gaze to something at the back of his head and then to the top of his scalp. Harry shook his head and made to stand, but his legs were not going to work for him very well at the moment. Perhaps he could wait a bit, but no, he didn't want to hear anymore today. If he had stayed there, they would continue on, and he could not bear it...first Hagrid, then McGonagall, then Sirius, he couldn't take any more...he had to get out...he had to get away...he didn't care where...as long as it wasn't the Great Hall.

Harry didn't even hear the others call him back, he just left and he had no intention of opening his mouth...not if he wanted to keep the food he had eaten that day down.

He fled from the Great Hall and didn't look back.

Okay, before you all jump down my throat for what I had Officer McFinn say. I'm sure that is what a legitimate officer would say to someone who had leaped into the fray of an arrest. I will never condone (despite it being fictonal) what the Ministry did to Hagrid and McGonagall. But it would have showed up Umbitch that Hagrid is more level headed than she was and if they had started to attack him first and then attack McGonagall they all would have been arrested for assault once all the nonsense was over with.
Harry didn't know where he wanted to go or where he was going currently, he just wanted out of that room, out of the castle. He didn't want to go in there other than to eat ever again. He hated these books again, he didn't want to know the future, if it meant that he almost had to count down the days till someone he loved was ripped from him...again...

Calm down, breathe...just because that it says what it says in the books doesn't mean that it'll happen.

Of course it will happen!

No, no it won't, think about it, McGonagall was attacked because of Umbridge. Umbridge is gone, and if the Rangers arrested her, there is no way in hell that she's going to get out. Fudge is pretty much removed from office, he can't do anything else stupid again. And you're forgetting one very important thing...

What the hell could that be?

In regards to Sirius, Voldemort's in pretty much Ranger custody, there's nothing that can happen now. Sirius is safe, Voldemort can't get his hands on him.

Well, there was that, he took a deep breath and sighed. At the part where everything became the future, he had to remember that nothing like that had happened and it wasn't going to. Didn't help that still everything about his personal life was still being picked at and exposed and now it didn't just keep to him, it was starting (well, it had done so for a while) to branch out and affect everyone else around him.

Now Harry had to pretty much protect Snape from being ridiculed by the other students by what his father did. Though...as to why he hated the term Mudblood was a bit unknown to him. He saw for his own “future” eyes that he used the term...what caused him to hate the term now? Was it because it alienated the one person in the crowd that was willing to stand up for him and defend him? That's some pretty deep thinking for a fifteen year old. Then again...here he was having a mental debate about the reality that now lay before them thanks to these books, and Snape did prove to be a very brilliant student.

“Potter?” came a voice from behind him.
He turned, noticing that he was heading down to the kitchens, well...that worked out pretty well, but Snape was standing behind him. There was no ever present sneer on his face or even a look of disdain. Harry couldn't quite place his finger on what the expression the Potion's Master was fixing him with.

“Where are you going?” asked the Potions Master with a quirked brow.

“Back down to the kitchens sir...I thought I'd spend some more time down there, take the rest of the day off.” said Harry nodding to the painting hanging behind.

“You should tell people where you are going? The...mutt...is currently searching the grounds for you.” said Snape. “They had expected you to go to your rooms...”

“I just needed to walk about and think, sir.” said Harry. “I just want to cook something now.”

Snape unsheathed his wand and sent a bright stream of light down the corridor, “Until the appropriate parties arrive, I will keep an eye on you. The way you left, it was ease their minds if you did not disappear again.” said Snape.

And that was how it came to be that Snape was kept in the kitchen with Harry, tapping his foot, waiting for someone to come and relieve him of Potter Watching.

“What is taking them so long to get down here?” muttered Snape.

“Maybe they're giving us time to talk.” said Harry as he stirred a the contents of a skillet. “You know, I'm always amazed at what the kitchens normally stock...”

“I'm glad for you.” said Snape in a bored tone, but then he gave a disdainful sniff and started slightly taking in the aroma. “What on earth are you cooking?”

“Some shrimp...would you like some?” asked Harry absently. “I've made enough for two. I thought Sirius would be down here...”
“So tell me again why we aren't downstairs getting Harry? Snape found him, and while I'm thankful to him, Harry needs me.” said Sirius.

“What Harry needs right now, is someone who can talk to him on the same intellectual level, and not...coddle him as we are fond of doing.” said Dumbledore. “If Harry doesn't already see it, he needs to realize that the future events that are showing themselves, are indeed events, but with the main players in this drama in Ranger custody, they will not happen.”

“And you think that Snape is going to help him?” said Sirius with a disbelieving snort.

“They are both very clever young men, I think they can find their common ground.” said Dumbledore.

Whatever common ground there was to be discovered, slipped past them completely. After Harry had inadvertently made Snape a three course meal, Snape had taken him up to their suite and left him in Mrs. McFinn's care. They were a bit better than they used to be, but as the old saying went, Rome was not built in a day.

The next day however took a bit of coaxing to get Harry out of bed and down into the Great Hall, while the logical side of his mind convinced him that in the grand scheme of things, what was transpiring in the books was not his fault and also these things would not happen, it was a bit hard to hear.

“Do you want to bow out today? Take a sleeping draught and just rest?” asked Dr. Clark softly.

“I'd really like too, but...” Harry sighed. “I shouldn't hide behind that stuff.”

After a hearty breakfast, though Harry only nibbled at a pastry, dreading what today was going to bring, Officer McFinn started. Chapter Thirty-two “Shouldn't it be ‘Out of the frying pan, into the fire?’” said Fred weakly.

“Don't argue with adults in wanting to take you to the Hospital Wing.” said Dr. Clark lightly.

Everyone was walking on eggshells since yesterday. They had noticed that Harry's hair was now stark white and any further distress was only going to make things worse. They were unsure how to handle the day and were hoping to refrain from making any ill-advised comments.

“Happened to me, but then again, I never did care for Muggle Studies, not that there's anything wrong with the class, but with how much my family has dealings with them financial wise, I knew most of the course book by heart and didn't figure the test would be that hard.” said Rudolph.

“And was it?” asked a fifth year Hufflepuff.

“While the test itself wasn't all that hard, I stayed up too late the night prior having a good time...fell asleep right at the desk. Told my father that I was just nervous about my Transfiguration test...”

“Why would you tell him that?” asked Hermione.

“It was the only way I could explain why I went two years of getting 'O''s in Muggle Studies to a weak 'A' on my O.W.L.s.”

“Don't bother...” muttered Fred.

“I'll have a lie down once I find out if Sirius' has been captured or not.” said Harry.
“Somehow, I don't think it's going to be an emergency need of her help.” said Hannah.

Harry covered his eyes. “I'm so glad that I'm so concerned about her.” muttered Harry, angry with himself.

McGonagall gave the floor a soft smile.

“That in itself would shut the school down.” said Rivers. “One can always take a night to find a substitute teacher, without a healer...school would have to close for a bit. You can't have all those kids, that far away from St. Mungos without a nurse of some sort on hand.”

“I'm sick with worry, is that close enough?” muttered Harry.

Dialogue line.
“Only one person can know for sure Granger.” said Moody.

The Hall was silent, all the stuff that had happened, Harry hadn't had to crash into a chair like that since Voldemort's return...he must have been shaken up something awful to garner that reaction.

“Don't go!” said Mrs. Weasley and Mrs. McFinn worriedly.

“Cause you sort of are.” said Charlie honestly.

“Yeah I know.” said Harry. “But I at least tried to go to a teacher first.”

“With Lucius having pretty much the run of the place, not to mention Rookwood, they know the ins and outs of the Ministry.” said Bill.
“And remember what we said about the front door, they'll let anyone in there, and if Dumbledore can make himself invisible without a cloak, then You-Know-Who can as well...no offense sir.” said Fred.

“No offense taken.” said Dumbledore coming from behind the bowl and grasping Harry's shoulder.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

“That is, if the Ministry isn't wasting their efforts trying to find Dumbledore and Hagrid. I'm sure that they put those two on the top priority, seeing as how they don't think that Voldemort is back.” said Cheif Hawkeye with a smirk. “Especially if Fudge is paranoid about being 'usurped'. Also since they discovered that Sirius was still in England, they may be out chasing leads or something as well. While you did make fair points in the future, you seem to fall under the misconception that adults are infallible and can't be stupid when they get to a certain point.”

Hermione blushed slightly.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“They're not 'dreams', dreams do not do that, his dreams stopped once those corridors showed up.” said Dr. Nicodemus.

“But Voldemort hasn't been in there either.” said Hermione

“Of course he has, remember the snake. Harry would not have channeled the thoughts of the snake without the Dark Lord being there as well. And how would he be able to know such intricate details of the corridors without seeing it for himself?” said Dr. Nicodemus.

“Rookwood could have made a pensieve...” said Hermione.

“That would be impossible, Miss Granger,” said one of the Unspeakables. “the Department of Mysteries is one of the most...well, let's say that if you try to do that, you'll only drain your memories, and you'll never get them back.”

“So...Voldemort was going in and out of there at leisure?” asked Ron in horror.

“We don't know how, but there is some traces of dark magic all over that corridor.” said Chief Hawkeye.

“So...what your saying is, he should go and face him?” said Hermione getting defensive.

Lionus quirked a brow. “I'm going to have pensieve this moment, and find out where she got that conclusion from.”

“I'll sum it up for you young one.” said Tempest stamping her foot once. “They're not simple dreams. While it is most surely a trap, what young Harry has been going through, are no dreams.”

Dialogue set, third sentence.

“Easy there, Sport.” said Officer McFinn stretching his legs slightly.

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

“After everything else that happened in the past four years, nothing is unlikely anymore.” said Neville softly.

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

“I've got more self control than that.” said Sirius.

Remus quirked a brow at the man, but didn't say anything, not wanting to further any discomfort to the young man sitting between them.

Dialogue line.

“I've got a lot of Dark Magic knowledge in this head of mine, just because I don't use it doesn't mean that I don't know any.” said Sirius tapping his head.

“He's got a point, the Black family had some dark magic discoveries in their past.” said Rudolph. “Quite a few of them are being studied further in the Department of Mysteries.”

“Then maybe one of those things are what he's after?” said a first year Gryffindor with a fearful squeak.

Dialogue line.

“The Dark Lord does not care if his followers get hurt or not, that is what they are there for and trained for.” said Snape quietly.
“Can’t quite see my brother giving me the time of day while he and I were on opposite sides like that.” said Sirius.

“Not the reason.” said Sirius shaking his head.

“There’s a point or two in there, but regardless, I hope that someone comes, so you don’t have to go.” said Flitwick worriedly.

“I wish we had been in the Order, we could put the boy’s mind at rest.” said Sprout softly.

“Somehow, it won’t go well.” said Fred.

Harry opened his mouth to shout, but then stopped himself. Did he have something like that? He did make it a point to save all he could, be did he really seem like that to other people? He looked around at the other people in the room, and he could see others nodding softly.

He looked up to Dumbledore who looked down at him with a soft smile. “Do I?”

“While...it’s more deep than the quite blunt way she put it, there are reasons as to why you do it.” said Dumbledore.

“So I don't just go and save everyone like a superhero?” said Harry with a slight smirk.

“No, no you do not...I recommend that you bring this up with Glacier.” said Dumbledore with a kind smile. “He is the best person to talk to about that.”

Eleventh paragraph.

Dialogue set, second sentence.

“Don't bring up subjects you're not prepared to talk about.” said Charlie.

End of dialogue set.

“Pardon me for believing that the worse was going to happen, in a tournament that never should have had me, an underage teenager take part in. They kicked me out to play 'Snatch-Away' with a dragon, I think it's completely plausible to have a good chance of someone dying down there.” said Harry sourly.

Twelfth paragraph.

“Future you thought it was a mistake!” said Hermione loudly pointing to the book and looking at Harry.

“Future me is holding back and letting all this shit happen!” said Harry sharply. “Future me is an idiot”

Dialogue set.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

“Get to explaining yourself young lady.” said Dr. Nicodemus. “Before you lose a very good friend.”

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, second sentence, first comma.

“But how would he have known that Harry would go down there?” asked Fred.

“Yeah, Ginny just played up the ‘Knight in shining armor’ thing that she was going through with Harry.” said George.
“That and if I remember right, that You-Know-Who, didn't know much about modern day You-Know-Who.” said Fred.

“So...bye bye that reason.” said Fred.

Dialogue set, end of second sentence.

“I want to know how he got me out of there, if I'm even out of there.” said Sirius.

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

Dr. Nicodemus groaned. “I've taken several calming enhancements, but she still gives me a headache.”

“Guess you just don't mesh well with her.” said Lionus with a smirk.

“I have intellect and I respect others that think before they act, but when I hear someone go through life like this, I just want to chuck her in an amusement park for a week. Show her what fun is, without books...” said Dr. Nicodemus. “Not that this is fun or anything, just to let her see what life itself is like...”

Thirteenth paragraph.

Dialogue set, fifth sentence, first dash.

“Not the reason, dear boy...” said Dumbledore carefully.

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

“Don't drag me in between you two!” said Ron.

“Sucks doesn't it?” said Harry.
“I’d love to see you try and learn something like that from Umbridge.” said Harry. “It’d be a bit the same, if not less.”

Hermione looked down at the floor, she couldn't help but feel defensive. The only slight silver lining was that when Harry was arguing, he looked firmly at the book in Officer McFinn's arms.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Lupin said that, not Sirius.” said Dr. Clark honestly.

“How do you remember that?” asked Sirius.

“I can remember things a lot easier if they're told to me. I make a killing betting with people at karaoke.” said Dr. Clark with a soft laugh.

Dialogue line.

Fourteenth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Fifteenth paragraph.

Dialogue set, first sentence.

“If she's anything like mum, duck...cover...and run.” said Bill.

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“I have a feeling it only started.” said Harry, smiling in spite of himself at Luna's future self.

Sixteenth paragraph.

“Yeah, she tends to make you rethink a bunch of stuff.” said Ginny with a quiet laugh.
“Good idea.” said Chief Hawkeye with a nod of approval.

“Dear, if you're scared...don't be ashamed of it.” said Emmeline Vance.

“The mirror...” said Sirius.

“What mirror?” asked a seventh year Ravenclaw.

“The one that he never opened.” said Sirius giving Harry a nudge.

“Not that again...please not that again...” said Remus covering his eyes.
“Don't be throwing plans in this mix.” said Officer McFinn with a chuckle. “He was going to walk there.”

Harry blushed while he laughed.

Dialogue set.

“Yeah, cause anything that anyone on that list of D.A members says, will be considered trustworthy and honest in her eyes.” said Leroy.

Dialogue set.

“Better have him do it, looks more authentic that way.” said Sirius, the voice of experience.

Twenty-first paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

“At least we leave the school in good hands.” said Fred dramatically.

“Never said that I was going to do it.” said Ginny with a smile. “Besides, you guys are the only ones that know how much of that stuff doesn't really hurt anyone...I'm not confident I know how much is too much.”

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Calm down, they're just going to check, I would rather have you check to make sure it wasn't a trap, as opposed to just running off to Merlin knows where.” said Sirius looking at the book and patting Harry on the back.

Dialogue set.

Twenty-second paragraph.

Hermione blushed, as Harry smiled down at the floor.
“If I was being tortured, I wouldn't want the rescue party to come for me when it's more convenient for them.” said Dr. Nicodemus.

“Traditional...too bad it seems like you won't have fun doing that.” said Sirius.

“Black...Market...what?” said Mrs. McFinn.

“They have a half a shot of Ogden Old Firewhiskey in them.” said Sirius.

“What the...you want to double the amount in there? That'll get you sick...” said Sirius.

“Once again, voice of experience.” said Remus with a snicker.

“Twenty-fourth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Twenty-fifth paragraph.

Dialogue set.
“I'll feel better if I can get Sirius out alive of this situation.” said Harry.

“I'm sure that I'm at the Headquarters, there's no reason for me to be out and about, cagey or not, I know it's not safe.” said Sirius.

“Twenty-sixth paragraph.

“I can't see no intelligent student standing there.” said Rivers rubbing his eyes. “Honestly...such grammar.”

“Twenty-seventh paragraph.

“Twenty-eighth paragraph.

Who's to say she didn't, a good security doesn't have to be obvious.” said Harry leaning forward. “Should have went by myself...if we get caught...I'll never live it down.”

Thirtieth paragraph.

Thirty-first paragraph.

Thirty-second paragraph.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Twenty-sixth paragraph.

Twenty-seventh paragraph.

Twenty-eighth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

Twenty-ninth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

‘Who’s to say she didn't, a good security doesn't have to be obvious.” said Harry leaning forward. ‘Should have went by myself...if we get caught...I'll never live it down.”
Thirty-fourth paragraph.

“Oi! I'm not Lucius!” said Sirius quickly, throwing his hands up as Hermione glared at him. “I may not like that little toerag, but I don't punish him like that.”

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Thirty-fifth paragraph.

“Gone out? I wouldn't have gone out!” said Sirius.

“Maybe Remus had an emergency and he needed you.” said Mrs. McFinn worriedly.

Remus looked at Sirius worriedly and Sirius looked back at him in turn.

Dialogue line.

Thirty-sixth paragraph.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue set.

Sirius pulled Harry tighter to himself. “I'm right here, this won't happen.”

“I know.” said Harry quietly. “I know.”

Dialogue line.

Thirty-seventh paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Thirty-eighth paragraph.

“I'm going to...” said Sirius with a snarl.

Dialogue line.

Thirty-ninth paragraph.
A few of the students gasped and gave startled shrieks.

“You never showed that you were intelligent before.” spat Dean.

“Should put some hexes on that pocket, just in case someone other than you reaches in there, like in these cases.” said Moody.

“Never told me personally, I was sure that it was just a rumor.” sneered Harry.

“Who's to say I just don't like to stick my head in grates?” said Harry.

Sirius rubbed the back of Harry's neck.

“This psycho twit should never have been allowed around children. How did you pick her? I just want to know that.” said Rivers looking at Fudge with a stunned expression.
“She...she had a background in education.” said Fudge.

“That tiny school of hers? That's the background you're going with? That poor excuse for an institution didn't last past five years, I shut it down...their third years weren't on the same level as a first year here.” said Rivers. “I had told her that she was not qualified, and you didn't even bother to see the large red flag marked on her file when you were obtaining her teaching license...”

Forty-second paragraph.

“Dumbledore...this weekend, we're all going to have a nice sit down chat together, just the Slytherin students, and we are going to talk.” said Chief Hawkeye.

The Slytherins in particular looked a bit nervous.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

“I prefer an Umbridge-free zone...less pink and that gag inducing perfume she wears.” said Ginny snarkily.

Forty-third paragraph.

Dialogue set, second sentence, third comma.

“This hasn't happened yet.” said Draco holding up his hands.

End of dialogue set.

“Should have convinced him to help you.” said Remus shaking his head.

Dialogue set.

Forty-fourth paragraph, first sentence.

Chief Hawkey looked over to each of the Slytherin students. “Seriously, we are going to talk, if even a handful of you are that sick, future events be damned...”
Sprout shook her head. “Regardless of his feelings, he would not give away something like that...but...”

“Snape's a member of the Order...he can help!” said a first year Gryffindor excitedly.

“Not that you'd want to go and talk to him after the last time you and he had a 'discussion' about the Department of Mysteries.” said Nightstrike.

“Someone pull that gorilla off the lad.” said Dr. Nicodemus.

“Illegal as hell!” shouted Rivers stamping his foot angrily.

“She used it all.” said Fred gleefully.
“She has no idea how long that stuff takes does she?” said Sirius with a smirk. “You have to wait a month to make it, and then you have to wait six months on top of that, to have the license to have it. You need one license, per phial!”

Dialogue line.

“And that's if you just bypass the license and you just give it to her.” said Sirius.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

“Nice acting, normally you sound happy when he breaks the rules.” said Bill.

Fiftieth paragraph.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

“He just told you that there isn't another phial of that stuff.” said Lee.

Dialogue set, second sentence, second dash.

Sirius pulled Harry closer to himself.

End of dialogue set.

Fifty-first paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, second sentence.

“Pardon me for not foreseeing that you are going to blow through the fake Veritiserum that I no doubt gave you.” said Snape with a sneer.

End of dialogue set.
“He most likely knows, he most likely knows!” said Charlie.

Dialogue line.

Fifty-third paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Fifty-fourth paragraph.

“I can understand just fine.” said Snape.

Dialogue set.

“Well, that's as much concern as you can get.” said Fred.

“Don't kill him, I don't want to handle the paperwork and while I'm sure you won't go to jail or even suffer any consequences, I'm going to have to put that done on parchment if you ask me to be a reference for a job.” said George.

“What job...we have no idea.” said the twins together.

Fifty-fifth paragraph.

Dialogue set, fourth sentence.

“I have a very bad feeling.” said Remus.

End of dialogue set.

Fifty-sixth paragraph.

“Cover his ears again.” said Officer McFinn. Sirius slapped his hands over Harry's ears.

Dialogue set.

Fifty-seventh paragraph.
The students looked horrified as well as the adults.

Harry looked around at the horror filled eyes that glanced at him, what was going on? No...it was better if he didn't know about it.

“Perhaps it's better if he sleeps through this part.” said Officer McFinn.

“Do you want to nap during this part?” asked Sirius removing one of his hands.

Harry looked between Officer McFinn and Sirius. “No...I want to stay awake...I don't want to hide behind this...” he repeated

Officer McFinn gave him a slight smile and nodded. “Alright, but don't force yourself, if you want to bow out, just tell us.”

Harry swallowed loudly and nodded.

“Never leave evidence lying around...” said Lionus with a smirk.

“Sick bitch.”

“Arthur! While I wholeheartedly agree, be mindful of the children.” whispered Mrs. Weasley.

Several people shouted, but Officer McFinn held up his hand.

“Come on, Sirius' hands are going to get tired.” said Officer McFinn. “Let me get to a safe place for Harry to start listening again.”
“We should be good now.” said Officer McFinn. “You can let him listen now.”

“Harry! She's going to...well...never mind...” said Hermione.

“She's going to use the Cruciartus on me, isn't she?” said Harry.

Sirius looked fearful, but nothing happened, he didn't scream, writhe in agony...nothing...

“You okay?” asked Harry.

“I'm fine, are you?” said Sirius.

“Fine.” said Harry with a shrug.

“She must not like hot water.” whispered Ron, Hermione giggled.

“Good girl.” said Lionus with a smirk.

“Can't quite say much better, but at least you can't be arrested for harboring a murderous fugitive.” said Tonks.
“Oh I'm sure I slipped into the Hogs Head and the Three Broomsticks. I do have meet my Saturday luncheon friends and my Sunday morning tea companions.?” said Dumbledore with a smile. “Been meeting the same people for fifty years, I will not miss them unless for a very important reason.”

“If you cry loud enough, I'm not going to look for tears, I'll do whatever you want just to get you to stop.” said Sirius.

“What's ready?” asked Ron.

“It's like handing a present to them, all wrapped up. 'Here you go, all your paranoid fears are true!'” said Charlie.
“I'm more disappointed that she thinks kids are that stupid.” said Dr. Clark.

“Just cause I told you were it is with little to no resistance doesn't mean I'm going to lead you there.” said Fred.

“Psst, it's part of the plan to get her out and away.” said George in a stage whisper.

“Oh..uh...you're so authoritative that I have no choice to take you to the...weapon...that we have been...building to stomp the Ministry for not believing us.” said Fred speaking choppily.

“But I will show you, crazy psycho cat lady!” said Lee.

“And that's why you can't trust many children with power.” said Bill.

“Someone wants to see the weapon that doesn't exist!” said Ginny in a sing song voice.
“You can't handle the students when they're just using their wits.” said Rivers with a sneer. “It's too bad we can't see what they can do with their wands.”

End of dialogue set.

“And you just know they will.” said Harry with a smirk.

End of chapter.

“Please make her walk off a cliff, please make her walk off a cliff.” said Dr. Clark clapping his hands together.

“Without them doing it first, without them doing it first.” said Sirius doing the same thing.

“That's all for that chapter, feel up to another one?” asked Officer McFinn.

Harry nodded. “Yeah, that...that one wasn't all that bad...”
The Centaurs Retaliate

First paragraph.

Second paragraph.

“And there was you are, taking your crazy Headmistress for a walk.” said Rudolph.

Third paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Get away from me.” said Lee pretending to be Harry.

“Not unless it's Fang or his first attempt at cooking.” whispered Seamus.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“I think Hermione meant that his house is the perfect size for him and the stuff he needs, anything else and it's cluttered.” said Luna with a smile towards Hagrid.

Fourth paragraph, second sentence, first comma.

“Settle, Monster...settle.” said Leroy with a pat on his nephew's knee.

End of fourth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“And...what was future you going to do in there?” said Dr. Nicodemus with a quirk in his brow.

“Showing her Grawp would not be a...desired plan.”

Dialogue line.
The Rangers started laughing loudly, as well as Kingsley, Tonks and the Unspeakables.

“Not in any shape or form, is her life more valuable than a child's.” said Nightstrike.

“Glad you realize that.” said Snape.

“Well, that was one of the few times that she was in there...where does she think she's going?” asked Fred.

“Ack! Go back 'Mione, go back!” said George.

“How do you remember what path goes where?” asked Dean looking at Harry.

“I didn't want to go back there, so remembering what path goes where helps a lot in that endeavor.” said Harry.

“No you aren't, keep it down!” said Bill.
“Like something with eight legs or more.” said Harry.

“I don't want us to be heard if we're going on that path.” said Harry. “I don't want to relive that night, I never want to relive that night.”

A gasp flew the Great Hall.

“Well...to be honest, that's the best outcome you can hope for in that forest...they won't eat you.” said Sirius.

“Screw you, I have a whole life to live you, you, you just have an empty house with a bunch of kitten plates'.” said George.

“I can think of a dozen of different emotions and facial expressions to use in this scenario...smiling in triumphant is not one of them.” said Mr. Weasley.
“Just talk to the children, you'll have more pleasant conversations.” said Firenze with a soft smile.

Dialogue line.

“Worst thing to say, that you are part of the Ministry.” said Moody shaking his head.

“If she can make the right choices in the conversation, she will get out alright, as well as the children.” said Dumbledore.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

“Oooh...poor choice, very, very poor choice.” said Dumbledore wincing.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

“Someone take away the shovel before she buries herself and the kids.” said Remus.

Dialogue set.

“Hate to say it, but let's see them use an VCR recorder.” said Dr. Clark quietly.

Mrs. McFinn giggled. “I think only the children would be able to figure it out.”

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

“Wish they didn't have bows pointed at the kids, this would be hilarious.” said Sirius.

Eleventh paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.
“That won't fix things...” said Tonks.

“It was funny when she dealt with politics at work, every time the Minister had to send her to delegate...one of the other Ministry heads would go and grab dad to put out the fires.” said Bill.

Dialogue line.

Twelfth paragraph.

Thirteenth paragraph, first sentence.

“Not the ground! There are hooves down there!” said Charlie.

End of thirteenth paragraph.

Dialogue set.

Fourteenth paragraph.

Fifteenth paragraph.

“Woo hoo! She can't use magic anymore!” said Fred.

“But Hermione and Harry are still out in the forest without magic to protect them.” said Charlie.

“Oh...well...maybe you could get a pointy stick or something.” said George hopefully.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

Sixteenth paragraph.

“Nearing and there are two different things!” said Mrs. Weasley.

Harry looked over to her, a stunned look and a blush on his face.

Dialogue line.

“Oh,” said Flitwick covering his eyes and groaning. “Oh, dear.”
“That...that's what you shouldn't say to them.” said Sprout covering her mouth.

Tempest stood up slowly and walked over to the frightened girl. Hermione blinked a few times up at her.

“I...I...this hasn't....”

“You and I will go talk, now.” said Tempest taking her by the arm and walking out of the Great Hall.

“Should we...” said Nightstrike.

“I see or hear of one bruise on that young lady, she'll have me to deal with.” said Dr. Nicodemus. “Let her have her say.”

Lionus looked up at the ceiling and flicked his eyes towards the door, the Ranger he was locked eyes with instantly disappeared. It wasn't that he didn't trust Tempest, but he would rather err on the side of caution then allow a student to be injured right from under his nose.

Seventeenth paragraph.

“Not what she meant...though...it's kind of the outcome she wanted...but she didn't mean it like that.” said Ron stammering slightly.

Dialogue line.

Eighteenth paragraph.

Dialogue set.

“You're kidding, we're going to try and block this from our memories, except for the horror that Umbridge felt...that was kind of memorable.” said Lee. “But we wouldn't be bragging about that part.”

Dialogue line.

Nineteenth paragraph.

Twentieth paragraph.

“Oh no...” said Sirius.

“I hope someone there lets the kids go.” said Remus worriedly.
“Please have a soft spot for crying girls...please have a soft spot for crying girls.” said a Seventh year Hufflepuff boy crossing his fingers.

“I can't tell if that's going to be a good thing, or everything going to hell in a hand basket.” said Dr. Clark.

“What the?” asked Ron.

“You don't think...he's trying to say 'Hagrid'?” said Ginny.

“Somehow, I don't think he'll understand you if you use words bigger than two syllables.” said Sirius.

“T'm...shocked...and impressed that he remembered her after meeting her only that one time.” said Professor Flitwick.
“And if we could get him, Grawp would get Haggar.” said a third year Slytherin.

Hagrid looked horrified.

“Somehow...I'm okay with that.” said Sirius.

Firenze gazed in the direction of the forest and shook his head silently.

“You hope you don't run into acromantulas, centaurs, or anything else that can potentially harm you...maybe the Ford Anglia is still driving about.” said Sirius.
“And how did you guys get free of the Slytherins I wonder?” said Chief Hawkeye with a smile.

Ginny smiled brightly.

“I know, it's kind of staggering sometimes when she talks like that.” said Neville with a smile to Luna.

“You were too young when you faced him the first time, don't try pulling that card, though...I would really prefer none of you going.” said Rudolph.

Dialogue set.

“Skilled as you are for that age, don't you go charging off to the Ministry, any of you!” said Mr. Weasley.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

“Ooh, can't fight that, sad to say...” said Leroy.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Thirty-fifth paragraph.

“And what is wrong with us?” asked Ginny.

“Nothing, it's just...we don't want to lose you.” said Harry.

“I suppose that story's good enough to buy today.” said Ginny smugly.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, first sentence, second comma, ninth word.

“Can she?” asked Sprout.

“She can, much like Mr. Potter can, if not quite a bit better.” said Flitwick with a smile. “Though she doesn't do it often.”

“I like flying.” said Luna dreamily.

End of dialogue set.
“Creepy...” said Dean.

“I think the words 'skeletal horses' mean that they're not all that pleasant to look at.” said Ron.

“Mmm, so tactful.” said Percy who had just arrived back from escorting Marietta home. She could no longer handle the readings and decided to just leave till the books were done.

“Someday, we hope to learn how to count.” said Ron with a smirk.
“Thank goodness that it's just Grawp's blood, he's huge, it's probably like a nosebleed to us.” said Sirius.

Thirty-eighth paragraph.

Dialogue line.
“‘You're not going to be able to get away.” said Tonks, “She'll latch on and keep you there.”

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Not what you want to hear.” said Bill.

End of chapter.

“‘You'll have to do the picking for the ones that can't see them.” said Remus.

“‘That's it for that chapter.” said Officer.

“‘Seriously? It felt like it just started.” said George.

“I have the sinking feeling that the next few chapters are going to be long, painful...and maybe traumatic.” said Fred in a whisper.

The twins shared a look between themselves and looked over to Harry.

“He's going to need a lot help.” said George looking at Harry.

“Yeah.” said Fred.
“Okay, this chapter is called, 'Chapter Thirty-four.'” said Officer McFinn.

“Now we find out...” said Sirius.

First paragraph, first sentence.

“It's one thing to get on a broomstick, it's another thing to getting on a moving animal altogether.” said Chief Hawkeye.

End of first paragraph.

Second paragraph, second sentence.

“I've ridden them a time or two.” said Luna. “It's quite fun.”

End of second paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Third paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“You don't want to all of a sudden see them.” said a sixth year Ravenclaw.

Dialogue line.

Fourth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Fifth paragraph.

“I love awkward you.” said Leroy. “It's so cute.”
“His descriptions are getting dark again...” said Colin.

“I kind of want to fly one now.” said a third year quietly.

“That is why I prefer warming charms whilst flying at night.” said Dumbledore.

“I don't think I could handle that.” said Hannah.

“Well, if you can't see the head, you have no idea where you're going.” said Ron.

“They're one o' the better landers in the animal kingdom.” said Hagrid with a smile.
Several people laughed good-naturedly.

“What the hell, you remembered that number?” said Bill.

Harry smiled. “I realized it spelled out 'magic', made it easy to remember.”

“Harry Potter, Ron Weasley, Hermione Granger, Neville Longbottom, Ginny Weasley, and Luna Lovegood here for a rescue mission that is most likely a trap but because we couldn't seem to get help from adults once more...we're on a life threatening rescue mission.” said Harry.

“Nice how automated voices actually understand what you're saying.” said Dr. Clark sarcastically.
“Oh my god.” said Remus.

Dialogue line.

“There is normally someone there at night, but there had been rumors about the payroll being cut. I suppose they can't pay someone to be night duty anymore.” said Mr. Weasley.

Dialogue line.

Twentieth paragraph.

Twenty-first paragraph, second sentence.

“Good lad.” said Moody.

End of twenty-first paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Twenty-second paragraph.

discussion set.

“Didn't want to pay for security...” said Lionus. “Are you kidding me? Who's idea was that?”

“.Lucius...” said Fudge quietly.

“And look, the slimy git had a reason.” said Lionus shaking his head.

Twenty-third paragraph, fourth sentence, first comma.

“And if there is anyone in the Ministry that shouldn't be, besides the kids, then Security was already taken out...and now the Death Eaters are well aware of where you are at.” said Remus his hands clasped together and his knuckles white.

End of twenty-third paragraph.

Twenty-fourth paragraph.

Dialogue line.
“Fair point, you kids don't have a way to communicate without shouting.” said Nightstrike.

“Not a good idea to do that at night!” said one of the Unspeakables quickly.

“Uh oh...they're not going to know the secret of getting about in there.” said another Unspeakable.

“Oh dear, well...at least they won't meet up with You-Know-Who if they're stuck in the Hub.” said Speckerton.
“I can't see Harry being stupid enough to go calling for him.” said Chief Hawkeye with a roll of his eyes.

“Wonder how her talk is going?” asked Ron nervously, looking at the door intently.

“Hmm...I don't think you want to be in there...not unless you want some nightmares later on.” said Speckerton.

“I still can't go in there without gagging.” said another Unspeakable.

“That is sick.” said Mrs. McFinn looking green.

“Honestly...I've never mapped out the place.” said Speckerton.

“It's about two miles wide.” said Lionus. “With a large array of different rooms.” The students stared.
“Holy...” said the twins with a whistle.

Dialogue line.

Thirty-fifth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Thirty-sixth paragraph.

Dr. Nicodemus applauded. “Alright, she's good...I've got to admit...”

Dialogue line.

Thirty-seventh paragraph.

Thirty-eighth paragraph.

“Okay, I know you kids aren't going to do this, but you stay the bloody hell away from that curtain.” said Speckerton.

“What is it?” asked Dennis.

“Never you mind, you just stay away from that thing.” said Speckerton and Lionus together.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Thirty-ninth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Fortieth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Listen to her, get out of there.” said Lionus.

Forty-first paragraph.

Harry felt two hands come rest on his shoulder, he looked up and saw Dumbledore holding him in his seat.
“If I have my way, and I will do everything in my power to make sure I do, you will never come to see that archway.” said Dumbledore, his voice and his hands shaking.

Dialogue line.
Dialogue line.
Dialogue line.
Dialogue line.
“Not again with this.” said Sirius putting a hand on his godson's knee again.

Dialogue line.
Dialogue line.
Dialogue line.
Dialogue line.
Dialogue line.
“You are not allowed in there as well.” said Dumbledore quickly looking at Luna.

Dialogue set.
Forty-second paragraph.
Dialogue line.
Dialogue line.
Forty-third paragraph.
“I don't want to know what's up with that veil, do I?” asked Dr. Clark.
“No.” said Officer McFinn, Dumbledore, the Rangers and the Unspeakables.

Forty-fourth paragraph.
Dialogue line.
Dialogue set, second sentence.
“We know...no veil for us.” said Ginny quickly.

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Forty-fifth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“That one's always locked don't bother.” said Speckerton.

Dialogue line.

Forty-sixth paragraph.

Dialogue set.

“Aww...took me four days to decide to get you that knife.” said Sirius.

“I still have it, it's not going to melt.” said Harry.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Forty-seventh paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Forty-eighth paragraph.

“Yeah, but after a while, the ticking starts to drive you mad.” whispered an Unspeakable quietly.
“So did you.” said Harry with a soft smile.

“I'm getting nervous...if you can't hear them...then they're waiting for you...” said Katie worriedly.

Harry reached over and grabbed Sirius' hand.

“T'was sure I'm fine, I'm not even sure I'm there.” said Sirius.
“A trap, it was all a trap.” said Charlie.

“At least you told Snape, and hopefully he thinks that you went to the Ministry.” said Bill. “He'll get reinforcements.”

Harry then fell forward his head on his knees, Sirius rubbed his back soothingly, till he noticed that the remaining bit of hair that was black, was now turning snow white.

“I led them...I led them right into a trap...” muttered Harry.

“That's not the you that's going to happen to.” said Sirius soothingly.

“I wouldn't say that, I'd be going crazy if something like that had happened to my family.” said Ron. “And I went down into the Chamber when Riddle took Ginny.”
“Eh, we got rid of Umbridge, I'd say this was a successful mission.” said Fred.

“Don't touch it, leave it alone!” said Dumbledore suddenly.

“What is that?” asked Angelina.

“Initials.” said Luna serenely.

“Listen to Hermione.” said Dumbledore.
“Doesn't matter, leave it alone.” said Dumbledore still gripping Harry's shoulders.

“Son of a bitch.” said Sirius.

“And here, the shit hits the fan.” said Dr. Clark.

“Sirius, Dr. Clark!” scolded Mrs. Weasley.

“I'm taking the initiative and saying that is all for one day.” said Officer McFinn looking at Harry. “You need to keep your strength up, remember what happened the last end of the book?”

“Yeah...okay...” said Harry dully.

“Should we go out and find Hermione and Tempest?” asked Ron.

“I don't want to get in on that conversation...” said Lionus.
Dumbledore stayed behind as the rest of the students went up to their dormitories or dispensed to other parts of the castle. Tonight he did not go to his office and reflect on the discoveries in the books, tonight he had to talk to someone, someone he had yet to really have a sit down chat with.

“Officer McFinn, may I speak to you for a moment?” asked Dumbledore.

Officer McFinn looked up from the book on his lap and smiled over to the elderly wizard. Dumbledore was unsure as to what the man was thinking, being, well, deceased, he supposed that the man's thoughts were forever blocked from any outside force.

“Why, of course, what can I do for you?” said Officer McFinn with a slight smirk.

Dumbledore levitated the armchair that he frequented every day since the books started, over to where he stood. He sat down and sighed heavily.

“I wager you know what I want to discuss?” said Dumbledore.

Glacier sat across from Harry, silence reigning in the room. Harry hadn't spoken much since he had come into the room. All he did tonight was come sit in his usual seat and gazed fixedly at the floor. Glacier had noticed the stark white hair once more and sighed. It seemed that nothing was going to stop the mental crash that was imminent.

“I think I will be joining you tomorrow.” said Glacier sitting forwards and taking the glass of wine off the table.

Harry looked up. “What for?”

“I'm going to be giving you a very strong calming draught and I would prefer to sit in on the readings and maintain your health, as opposed to responding to an emergency.” said Glacier.
“Strong calming draught? Like the one that Dr. Nicodemus gave Ron? Or that potion that had me whacked out?” said Harry.

Glacier raised his brow. “We're going to avoid that particular brew...and the one that we gave your friend...it would be best if we didn't give you that one in case something drastic happens in the books.”

“Do you know...” said Harry quickly.

“I don't know anything...but I would rather be on erring the side of caution.” said Glacier. “Now, why not go...”

“I don't want to rest! I'm going to be doing that almost all day! I can just feel it! I want to get my mind off of...” shouted Harry.

“I was going to say, why not go and make something in the kitchen with your Uncle Leroy and Uncle Rudolph...” said Glacier with a plain look.

“...Oh...sorry...” said Harry, feeling terribly awkward.

“I have a horrible feeling that you will continue to stress out unless we get a cap on this, however, they're waiting downstairs for you.” said Glacier nodding over to the door. Before Harry could make it to the door, Glacier stopped him. “We'll work on learning to control those...furious outbursts, perhaps you need those...kitchen utensils in the Great Hall once more...it's too bad that it's now too cold to go flying.”

Harry smiled and left the room.

=-=-=-=-=-=-=-=-=

Back at the Riddle House, Voldemort drummed his fingers on the large winged back chair. He had been trapped in the house of his fathers for too long in his opinion. He wanted out, Rangers be damned.

But with the Rangers guarding him, especially the Vampire, they could not simply stroll out. They had figured that it was safe during the day, but when Wormtail went to go and see if the coast was clear, they discovered him standing on the same limbs he did as he patrolled at night, defying the rays of the sun. That brought him some concern; how were they going to get past him if the biggest weakness was gone?

All that was left was to see if the more traditional means of dealing with vampires would work. He sent Wormtail out to gather the necessary items and store them in a hidden, safe place. Being a rat meant that he could come and go almost undetected, but if the Rangers happened to see a rat dragging a large sack of things...they would be caught and the wild card that Voldemort had would be captured and killed.

What could the Rangers want with him? They did nothing to him in the first war, what was new about now? Lucius had even said that the Minister and quite a few members of the Ministry had been away at Hogwarts for a very long period of time, and that his wife had heard rumors about some strange goings on at Hogwarts. Then the topper was that the Rangers have been going through the books, and architectural designs of the Ministry...any spy or on the take Ministry member that Voldemort had in the Ministry was now gone.

The Rangers most likely have some link to the school, but what is it about the school that is having Rangers take part in it personally?

All his well thought out plans were dissolving before his eyes.

He then heard the telltale footsteps coming up the stairs and perhaps Wormtail had completed at least a part of his mission...he was not in the mood to be disappointed.

Chapter End Notes

Okay, I know that this is super short. And I mean SUPER short, but we are nearing what I call “The gates of everything going to hell in a bloody f*cking hand basket” . This book (and the movie) has to be my least favorite. My favorite character that isn't Harry and Dumbledore dies Spoilers! And frankly...in the case of the movies, the color scheme just turns steadily darker as you go through the movies.

Think about it:
First movie: Bright colors, whimsical feel
Second movie: Bright colors, but slightly darker, mysterious aura.
Third movie: Nuetral colors, grays more prominent, foreboding.
Fourth movie: Reds and Greens more noticeable, danger around every corner.
Fifth movie: Darker colors, depressed and angst prominent.
Sixth movie: Continuously darker colors, bright moments few and far between.
Seventh movie(s): Dark colors, stone colors forefront. Rush of danger.
The next day, the weather seemed to take a bitter turn. The sky pelted the school with harsh flakes of snow at an alarming speed and the wind bit and stung at any exposed skin. The lake, that had some open water in parts, was now a thick sheet of ice.

Inside however, there were fires lit all throughout the castle and no more so than in the dorms themselves and the Great Hall. Every fireplace in the hall were lit and crackling merrily emitting warmth and promoting a chance for the students to walk over and toast various food and treats over the flames.

Hermione and Tempest had returned to the Great Hall for the next day of reading, but before she could even sit down, Hermione was whisked away by both Madam Pomfrey and Dr. Nicodemus. Who did not get a chance to see her the night prior.

“Not that I don't trust you Tempest dear...but...I would rather be cautious and not completely ignore what you do for a living,” said Dr. Nicodemus curtly.

“We only discussed a few things about species sensitivity.” said Tempest with a roll of her eyes. “In fact, it was quite a cordial conversation.”

“You're not the one of the more ruthless Jailers at Hell's Garden because you are stingy with your keys, my dear.” said Dr. Nicodemus absently.

Harry however was not free to go over and toast anything, or even talk to Hermione once she got back. He was currently buried beneath a mountain of blankets.

“I can't move...” said Harry.

“Just relax, maybe sleep today.” said Sirius.

“I think I'd like that, but I'm not able to just fall asleep at the drop of a hat.” said Harry.

Officer McFinn looked between Dumbledore and Harry and sighed. “Alright, we start today at Chapter Thirty-five” said Officer McFinn.

“Oh...no...” said one of the Unspeakables.

First paragraph.

Mrs. Weasley gripped her husband's arm, whimpering loudly.

Dialogue line.

Second paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Third paragraph.

“I can guess who the hell that is.” muttered Sirius.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Sirius wrapped an arm around Harry's chest and pulled him closer to himself. “I might need a Calming Draught myself if I have to hear her talk anymore.”

“Who?” asked Ron.

Fourth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, first sentence.

Sirius held out his hand towards the Dumbledore. “Hit me.”

The Headmaster placed in his hand two phials, and gave a slight nod in Harry's direction.
Moody's hands were clenching and unclenching. Why had none of the Order been sent to the school after Dumbledore left? They were down the equivalent of three wizards after he left and even after McGonagall left they were down to only one...that's not enough in case the Dark Lord posted an attack on the school. Granted, his gaze was fixed elsewhere, but if he had subtly stormed the castle, it wouldn't have taken much for him to get a hold of Potter. Who's to say that Snape would warn them in time?

Though...Potter was taking things fairly well, but they were still outnumbered and only kids...they were doomed.

Harry snorted “I just am able to rebound from shock.”

Harry sat up in the bowl and ran his hands over his face, taking note that his skin felt horribly clammy.
“Good boy...” said Chief Hawkeye.

Sirius clutched at Harry, a murmur of praise in his ear for being so quick.

“This hasn't happened yet, this hasn't happened yet.” said Harry muttering to mostly himself.

“Not my daughter, you bitch!” shrieked Mrs. Weasley.

Mr. Weasley had to restrain her from lunging at the book and tried to calm her down.

Dr. Clark reached over and placed a hand on Harry's knee.

“That's not good.” said Ron.
“It's quicker to say his name than the other way.” said Harry darkly.

“He's a half-blood too, or has he been proclaiming that he's pure blood?” sneered Sirius.

“I'll say this much, you guys need to have really good accuracy when doing that.” said Dr. Clark.

“Sadly...Lucius does have pinpoint accuracy with hexes.” said Dumbledore.

“So...she's calling her boss 'filthy'?” said Fred.

“That's real nice.” said George.

“Bawled?” said Charlie with a light chuckle.
Moody and Lionus leaned forward, wondering what was going to happen.

“I've got a plan to save us, but we'll need to communicate with our feet.” said Lee.

“Focus, Book Harry, focus.” said Neville hands on his head.

“Simple...but effective I'll bet.” said Lionus.

Dr. Nicodemus looked shocked. “Well...then I was mistaken for a good part, he would have to have seen what it was...and his magical signature is down there...” he said thoughtfully.

“Thank goodness I'm curious to only a certain degree.” said Harry.
“He’s forgetting you act on your feet.” said Remus with a relieved smile.

“All the time, but I’m not about to sneak into the Ministry at night to find out why.” said Harry. “I’ll wait till daylight where I can have Ministry workers have me sign it in and out. For stuff like that, I don’t need to do anything illegal.”

“And I’m forgetting the plan...” said Harry shaking his head.

“But he had...” said Dr. Nicodemus, “I checked the signatures myself over the weekend, he had been in there...”

“Remember, these books are sort of incorrect as of now.” said Chief Hawkeye.

“He doesn't even know the half of it.” said Rivers with a smirk.
“This is getting intense again.” said Bill.

“Excellent.” said Professor Flitwick weakly.

Tonks looked fearful at the students in turn. “Please let help come, please let help come.”

“Oh my god, what is taking the Order so damn long to get there! They were in the forest for who the hell knows how long, and then they flew all the way there, that takes a good hour or so on Thestral back and then as you kids were going down!” said Emmeline Vance worriedly.
“Crap.” said Sirius weakly.

Mrs. McFinn's hand flew to her mouth.

“Not a good idea!” said Tonks in horror.

“Crap!” said a seventh year wincing.

“I kind of want to see that now.” said one of the Unspeakables softly.

“His head?” said Speckerton confusedly.

“Oh, this ought to be interesting.” said an Unspeakable.
“Oh my god...” said Katie grabbing her head absently.

“Fascinating.” said Speckerton as the other Unspeakables nodded.

“Oh no! The others!” said Angelina.

“No! Don't shout!” said Moody sharply.

“Baby nothing, only the head is a baby!” shouted Dean.

“Should have thought of that before you shouted.” said Moody.
“Shit!” muttered Lionus.

“Now stun the other one and get the hell out of there.” said Nightstrike.

“No...no way...” said Ron quietly. Without looking away from staring at the book in horror, he reached over and wrapped his arm around her shoulder, bringing her close to him. Hermione was also staring in shock and wrapped her arms around his middle.

Harry on the other hand was being force fed calming draught by Dr. Nicodemus.

“Oh no...Nevillie's wand is busted.” said Dr. Clark weakly.

Mrs. Weasley was shaking furiously, muttering dark curses under her breath.
Forty-sixth paragraph.
Dialogue line.
Forty-seventh paragraph.
“It’s Dolohov’s fault, not yours.” said a first year with a whimper.

Dialogue line.
Forty-eighth paragraph.
Forty-ninth paragraph.
Fiftieth paragraph.
“Now get them both out of there.” said Dr. Nicodemus.

Dialogue line.
Dialogue line.
Dialogue line.
Dialogue line.
Fifty-first paragraph.
Dialogue line.
“Thank Merlin.” said Ron softly.

Fifty-second paragraph.
Dialogue line.
Dialogue line.
Dialogue line.
Fifty-third paragraph.
Dialogue set.
“Good plan, but what about you?” asked Sirius.
“Miss Granger needs medical attention, someone needs to get her out of there.” said Madam Pomfrey.

“You don't even have a wand.” said Fred.

“Why am I not picking those up?” asked Neville quietly.

“There's a time limit on that, but one wouldn't think that all this took the time span of forty minutes.” said Flitwick worriedly.
“What the heck happened to Ron?” asked Lee.

Fifty-ninth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Sixtieth paragraph.

Dialogue set.

“I’m starting to think we should at least lock a few more of the doors...” said one of the Unspeakables.

Dialogue line.

“Not that joke again.” said Remus.

Sixty-first paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Sixty-second paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“He’s lost his damn mind.” said Ernie.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

“They all need medical attention.” said Madam Pomfrey worriedly.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, second sentence, first comma.

“Not the time to be tough, shortcake.” said Charlie.
“Lock all the doors quickly!” said Kingsley.

“I'm getting really really scared here...now Harry's the only one that's not hurt.” said Hannah.
“Don’t touch them!” shouted all the Unspeakables together.

Dialogue line.

Seventy-first paragraph.

Seventy-second paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Seventy-third paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“And the Death Eaters are just standing there, watching it happen?” asked Leroy in horror.

“Easier to have the brains kill him, so they can focus on Harry.” said Rudolph shakily.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

Seventy-fourth paragraph.

Seventy-fifth paragraph.

Seventy-sixth paragraph.

“No, no, no, no, no...” said Dumbledore. His face was pale and his grip on the armrests of the chair he sat in was so tight that he was in danger of breaking them.

Seventy-seventh paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Seventy-eighth paragraph.

Dialogue set.

“He taught me not to give up.” said Harry trying to escape from the cocoon of blankets.
“Get back to Ron and save him, then get the others out of there somehow.” said Harry quickly.

“Bastard, damn slimy bastard.” muttered Mr. Weasley.

Sirius picked him up and rocked him. “I'm sure we're coming.”

“Not you! You stay back!” said Harry angrily.

“If something were to happen to you and I had stayed behind, I would never be able to live with myself.” said Sirius quietly in Harry's ears.

Neville paled horribly.
Eighty-fourth paragraph.

“Dammit! Why the hell are you there!” shouted Harry.

“I told you, I would not be able to handle it, if something were to happen to you and I wasn't there to help you.” said Sirius.

“And if something were to happen to you because I did something incredibly stupid like this?” said Harry, his eyes wide.

Dumbledore knew what was coming, and he prepared himself...there was no stopping what the book was going to say...all they could do was try and head it off.

“Perhaps you should sleep for this next part...” said Dumbledore softly.

“No...I can't...I won't...” said Harry.

Eighty-fifth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Eighty-sixth paragraph.

“Shit!” said Sirius.

Dialogue line.

Eighty-seventh paragraph, second sentence.

Sirius whimpered and held Harry tighter. “Please, let me see and stop it, please let me see and stop it.”

End of eighty-seventh paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Eighty-eighth paragraph, first sentence.

“That works.” said Remus.
“Yeah, I'm one of the better duelers in the Order...I've made the difference between us living or dying a few times.” said Sirius with a hint of pride.

“Oh god...tell me someone just knocked it out.” said Tonks. “Tell me nothing really bad happened.”

Tonks stood up quickly and wrapped her arms around her mentor's neck.

“What the devil do you think you're doing?” grumbled Moody.

“Shut up, you old goat.” said Tonks keeping her hold on the old Auror.

“Tell me this is almost over!” said Alicia.

“Yeah, saved the day.” said Sirius relieving a bit of stress by nuzzling into Harry's hair.
Moody, this time, reached up and grasped Tonks’ arm, keeping her in place.

“People really like talking in my ear.” said Harry.

“At least we’re watching their backs.” said Remus.

“Why am I not using the countercurse for that.” said Harry.
“All that hard work,” said George after a moment of silence. “all that pain and suffering, and it breaks....and it's all who sent that dancing curse at Neville?”

“Dolohov, maybe...the same guy that attacked Hermione.” said Fred.

“So it's all his fault.” said George.

---

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

One hundred and third paragraph, second sentence.

“Thank god, we're all going to live.” sighed Harry with relief.

---

End of one hundred and third paragraph.

One hundred and fourth paragraph, second comma.

“You better find those thoughts young man and get the bloody hell out of there!” said Mrs. McFinn scolding at the book.

Officer McFinn, Dr. Clark and Harry stared at her.

One hundred and fourth paragraph, second sentence.

The students were now cheering loudly and shouts of “Get 'em Headmaster!” and “Now you're going to get it!” could be heard all over the Great Hall.

---

End of one hundred and fourth paragraph.

One hundred and fifth paragraph.

One hundred and sixth paragraph.
“That said 'red' right?” asked Harry quickly.

The school was now dead silent, the Unspeakables looked in horror at the book, then to Sirius and then to Harry.

“Oh no...Harry...” said Speckerton quietly.

Remus bowed his head.

“What's going on, where did you go?” asked Harry looking at Sirius worriedly.

End of Chapter

A gasp went through the the school. Was Sirius gone as in gone?

Hours later, the students sat in their dormitories in silence. the event that caused the ceasing of the readings for the day, would forever go down in Hogwarts history...as possibly one of the most horrifying thing to ever happen in the school.
Harry held a hand over his mouth and leaned forward in his chair, closing his eyes. How did this happen? How could he let this happen? He went there to save him, turned out to be a trap and Sirius died anyways. What was he going to do? What's going to happen now?

His head began to pound and his chest began to ache.

What had he done? He had led his friends to what could still be their deaths, not just them, but the members of the Order...Just because he couldn't be bothered to close his mind, especially the way that worked for him!

Had he simply just become complacent where it concerned the Dark Lord? Sure he worried about what would be the end result between the two of them, but really, since the beginning of the school year, did he give him more than just a passing thought as he dealt with Umbridge and the unjust way he was portrayed by the Ministry?

Did he just think himself far superior to any other wizard around? He already wholeheartedly believe that he was one of the smartest student in the school, after having taken that assessment...from the look on the teacher's faces, he was at least in the top ten, (some of those Ravenclaws could be horrifyingly smart, and they share their knowledge very infrequently with the students outside their house) Going right into an obvious trap, was he really all that smart?

How did he become like this? What drove him to being this way?

It was till just that moment that Harry realized that he wasn't breathing, his head felt swimmy and his arms and legs grew heavy. He was dying, this wasn't the same almost peaceful revelation as in his second year, but this had to be him dying, there was no other explanation...and he was doing it right in front of everyone...the students, the faculty, members of the Ministry, the Rangers and his family...

“Well, that's not all that terrible,” said a horrifyingly calm voice in his head. “If I'm not around, no one will get hurt.”
What was that? Where did that come from? But wait, was that voice right? No one would be hurt anymore...it always seemed to be his fault that all this was happening. Mrs. Weasley wouldn't have to worry about her children anymore if he wasn't in the picture, and Hermione would totally be dedicated to her studies and not getting into trouble.

“Just let go...that's all you have to do, let go.” said the calm voice. “Let go and it will all be over, and everyone will be safe…”

“This hasn't happened yet!” came a harsh, loud voice in his head. “This won't happen! You know what is there and the Rangers certainly won't let anyone in front of them die like that!”

But...Ron...Hermione...

“The feud between Lucius Malfoy and Mr. Weasley was going on way before you came on the scene, and if you hadn't been friends with Ron then it's likely that his sister would never have been...”

“Thrown down in the Chamber of Secrets and nearly had been killed.” said calm voice smoothly.

“...Found, she wouldn't have been found, and Peter would still be Ron's pet, lying in wait to kill the entire family if Voldemort came back on his own.” said the harsh voice sternly. “As for Hermione, she would have just been stuck in her books and wouldn't have the friends she does if you and Ron hadn't welcomed her into your group...granted...after a lot of trials and suffering...”

But...he expected to hear the the calm voice come up again and argue it's side, but nothing came...

“No buts! Wake the hell up! You don't want this happening? Then quit holding back and get ready to end this once and for all!” shouted the voice.

“Wake up! Wake up!...Wake up...wake up...please...”

Wait, who was that last voice? It didn't sound like that harsh voice he'd been shouted at by.
“Please, Harry, wake up...“

“...Wake up for your old Sirius.”

Wait....that's....

Harry's eyes fluttered open and he looked up. There was a red gossamer curtain draping down around bed, shielding the rest of the room from his gaze. Harry was confused, he didn't know where he was for certain at first. This wasn't the Great Hall, as it was way too silent for that, this wasn't the same kind of bed that was in the Hospital Wing, or the bed in the room that he shared with Sirius, but it was sort of like the one in the Gryffindor dorm. Though there was a big difference, as in the size of the bed, the one in the dorm was at least a full size bed, this bed was a king size. He made to sit up or even get out of the bed, but found his arms and legs strangely restrained. He looked down and saw thick belts holding him down onto the bed, and taking away the liberty of free movement.

“Wha'...wha's goin' on?” he asked thickly.

Suddenly, the curtains were parted aside and a very disheveled Sirius, Leroy, and Dr. Clark stood over him. The rest of the room then came into view, the mystery was solved, he was at Night's Rest.

“Harry!” said Sirius joyfully. He made to reach down and remove the belt restraints when Dr. Clark stopped him.

“Hold up, Sirius, Harry...do you know who he is?” asked Dr. Clark pointing to Leroy.

Harry blinked a few times, looked at Leroy and then looked up at Dr. Clark. “That's Uncle Leroy...uh...he's married to Uncle Rudolph...you're married right?” asked Harry.

Leroy broke into a wide smile. “Well, we had to go to a different country for that, but yes! He remembers me again! Thank Merlin!”

“That's a relief, for a few days there, you had no clue who he was.” said Sirius with a nervous laugh as he made to remove the leg and arm restraints. “Let's get you sitting up...”
“Think you can set up a...bubble or something, so he can't get out of the bed, but he can at least sit up?” said Dr. Clark.

“That may be a good thing, especially after what nearly happened.” said Sirius as he waved his wand and conjured a large pink bubble to surround the bed itself, they could reach in and remove the belts, but Harry was trapped inside.

Harry looked between them as Sirius helped him into a sitting position against the cushions in his bed. “A few days? Wait, I didn't wake up before...did I? And what are you talking about 'nearly happened'? What nearly happened?”

“Well, not in a certain aspect.” said Leroy uncomfortably as he looked at the others. “And...it wasn't pretty.”

“I, Glacier and Dr. Nicodemus all came to the consensus that you had a mental breakdown, a BIG mental breakdown.” said Dr. Clark uneasily. “You were...”

“Remember Dumbledore's heart attack?” Ten times worse.” interjected Sirius. “No one could get to you, even that Lionus bloke was knocked back. Your therapist Glacier managed to come up with the idea to get to you and Dumbledore managed to break through to you. When all the carnage stopped, there you were, fast asleep in his arms. The bad thing that happened was two days ago, after the whole screaming vortex.”

Harry stared. “What happened, how did I...what carnage are you talking about?”

“Glacier wants you to see what happened, via pensieve. He said you would see something we didn't at the time, being...well...shocked as we were and all, and as for the incident...he'll tell you about that...I think. But that'll wait till later.” said Sirius. “First you need to just relax, Leroy...go get Nicodemus, he's already going to be pissed that we waited in telling him that you woke up.”

“Don't bother, I knew you boys weren't going to be able to remember to get me.” said a voice coming from the other side of the door.

“Old goat...” muttered Sirius.

“Young idiot.” said Dr. Nicodemus as he came into the room, he walked straight over to the bed and took out a long white wand. “Now, let's see what we have here...”

“Sirius mentioned Glacier...” said Harry softly as he complied with Dr. Nicodemus's orders of twisting in the bed following the tip of his wand with his eyes.

“He's coming lad, we just need to make some changes in the what was going on lately.” said Dr. Nicodemus.

“Changes?” asked Harry. “What changes?”

Dr. Nicodemus took a deep breath and sat down. “We decided to...ask you if you would honestly prefer to...limit the people who would be privy to the readings.”

“Limit? What good would limiting the people hearing all this do?” asked Harry.

“They'd fit better in here.” said Dr. Nicodemus. “Night's Rest anyway.”

“Here?” said Harry looking at the man in disbelief. “You mean to tell me that everyone is going to come in here?

“Well, maybe one of the more comfortable rooms here, but...” said Dr. Nicodemus.

“The more the merrier!” said Sirius happily.

“No.” said Harry plainly.

Sirius turned and stared at Harry. “Why not?”

“Dr. Clark and Mrs. McFinn were excited to see what Christmas was like at Hogwarts...I don't want to take that from them. They'd have to wait a whole year for that.” said Harry.
“This isn't about us,” said Dr. Clark. “This is about you and you being comfortable, and healthy in both body and mind.”

Harry clenched and unclenched his hands on the sheets. “You want me to be mentally stable, then let's get this book over with, and give me plenty of Calming Draughts to get through it.”

“I think I will come and listen to all this as well.” said a soothing, cool voice.

Harry looked to his left and there was Glacier, looking down at Harry. “I'm glad you're awake, and very happy that you are back in your normal mental capacity, you had everyone here and at school very worried.” He looked up at the rest of the people in the room. “I would like to talk to him privately, if you all would go outside?” he added as he conjured a large basin out of thin air and took a phial from his inner pocket.

“Do you think that's wise, he's just woken up.” said Dr. Clark holding up a hand.

“I'll be right beside him, we need to talk about what happened.” said Glacier.

“I know that, but...” said Dr. Clark.

“I fully believe that he will benefit from this, but if he can trust me, than he should be fine.” said Glacier looking over at Dr. Clark and then back to Harry. “Do you trust me?”

Harry looked up at the man, and nodded.

Moments later, they were both deposited in the Great Hall of days past.

“Now..watch.” said Glacier pointing to where Harry was sitting with his head buried in his hands.

Harry watched in silence as he saw his past self continue to stay frozen in place and then suddenly the bowl was blasted backwards, sending the occupants flying. The past version went tumbling till he nearly made it to the doors, now instead of silent, he was crying loudly.
“Please Sirius! Please don't leave me!” moaned Harry. “I can't lose you!”

“This is disturbing...” said Harry looking up at Glacier. “I understand it, but...it's still hard to watch.”

“And unfortunately, it won't get any easier, lad.” said Glacier.

Then a mysterious wind began to swirl around Harry, picking up stray bits of dust from the floor and causing a tornado effect. The howling of the wind began to grow louder and louder, so loud in fact that anything other than the scattered screams of the students were inaudible.

Harry couldn't get closer to himself to see what was going on, as Glacier held him back. “You don't need to go any further than here. Here is what I want to show you.”

“What? Me losing my mind? I'll say that is a pretty big incentive to not do what I'm doing right now.” said Harry extending his hand towards his past self.

“That's not what I want you to look at, look at the scene again.” said Glacier. “You're brilliant, lad, tell me what you see.”

Harry looked once more, from the swirling wind all the way to the back of the room where the students were staying huddled together.

“What is it that you see?” pressed Glacier after a few moments.

Harry stared fixedly at the scene before him. The teachers, the Ministry workers, Sirius, Remus, the Weasleys, Mrs. McFinn, Dr. Clark and even Officer McFinn are trying to calm him down. The students were torn between trying to get away and trying to help, Ron and Hermione are being held back by Tonks. Harry was writhing on the ground and clutching his face and hair, as if he were trying to either tear the hair from his scalp or rip the flesh from his skull.

“And what does that scene tell you?” asked Glacier.
“...That...they want to help me.” said Harry slowly.

“They would do anything to help you. You are a massive part of their world, even those who haven't known you for longer than a few months are pretty much putting you on a permanent Christmas card list.” said Glacier. “Without you, there would be a large hole in their lives that can never be filled by another.”

Harry looked at the therapist. “I know that...”

“You may know it, but you don't believe that you are deserving of such affection.” said Glacier. “While you do realize what the Dursleys did was wrong, you still have the lingering emotional damage done to you by them. Though...what is happening here, is what anyone with enough magical power would be doing with the loss of a short lived parental figure. Much like what you did with Officer McFinn when he was cut down in the line of duty.”

Harry was silent.

“There is another theory of what is going on in that mind of yours. I believe also that when you were younger, you made yourself a promise that you were never going to let anyone else that you loved, die.” said Glacier.

This time Harry turned and looked at Glacier, his eyes wide.

“Seems that is the better notion.” said Glacier quietly as he took in Harry's reaction. “While it's admirable that you would prefer that no one got hurt, the world is a dangerous place and you are in possibly the most hostile country in the magical world right now. And unfortunately, you being you, the danger would follow you to anywhere you go. The only thing you can do is bring it to an end before it lasts too long. And with these books, it will all happen at a much faster pace.”

“Sirius won't die like it says he does in the books...” said Harry.

“I fully believe that no one will die like they will in these books, I think that once they are over, and Voldemort has been thoroughly dealt with, everyone will finally have some peace in their lives.” said Glacier. “And their future will be an unknown wonder, as it should be.”

“Then lets end this, now, you have Voldemort, why not just...finish him now?” asked Harry.
“You are aware of what is within you still?” said Glacier looking over at Harry, carefully placing a hand over Harry’s heart. “Despite having immense knowledge in the science and magic of healing, even we are hard pressed to meddle with the soul.”

“So how do we get rid of it?” asked Harry.

“We will find a way.” said Glacier. “I swear we will.”

“So what happened that made them restrain me like they did?” asked Harry.

“You had slipped out of the Hospital Wing and had attempted to leap from one of the towers, in fact, you were halfway down to the ground before Tempest had caught you.” said Glacier. “So we brought you away from the castle, away from the pull of the high towers and restrained you in the bed.”

“I...jumped from the towers?” said Harry in shock.

“You did, and you even screamed that you would attempt it, again and again, until you were finally at peace.” said Glacier.

“I...I don't remember that...” said Harry.

“No, I would have been amazed if you had. While we had you secured, we placed a few of your more scattered and turmoil filled thoughts in a pensive, that was this morning.” said Glacier.

“So...that's where it went.” said Harry.

“Where what went?” said Glacier with a quirk of his brow.

“Nothing.” said Harry quickly.
Glacier looked unimpressed. “Hmm...perhaps we'll talk about this 'it', after you've rested. You've had a terrifying few days, and I personally would recommend that you rest.”
It took the entire weekend for Harry to be released from Night's Rest. Madam Pomfrey and Dr. Nicodemus were a little hesitant about letting him halt the soothing rest he was getting at his new home. They however couldn't argue that the sooner the books were done the sooner he could actually rest for longer than a few days.

Thus, he was ordered to take part in the same regimen of Calming Draughts that Dumbledore was on and maintain a strict four chapter a day.

When Harry got to the Great Hall, he noticed that while a majority of the students were still present, there were a few that were missing. Zacharias Smith, Pansy Parkinson, and Marietta Edgecombe were gone. Though, he was sure that Marietta had been gone for a while, it was only now that he realized it.

"Some people jump ship?" asked Harry.

"We sort of took the liberty of removing Zacharias...he's off with Professor Sinistra. We were going to send him home, but his parents had decided to take a second honeymoon...and to avoid the scandal with Arbuckle." said Sirius.

Officer McFinn motioned Harry over to him and he went over to talk to the ghostly figure.

"How are you holding up?" asked Officer McFinn.

Harry shrugged. "Can't wait for this to all be over....not that I want to say goodbye to you again."

Officer McFinn stood up and wrapped him in an embrace, kissing his brow. "I don't want to leave you either...but just think...you'll be able to have a better life than what is stated in these last few books...though I hope the part I'm looking forward too still happens."

"And that part is?" asked Harry.

"Not saying." said Officer McFinn with a teasing smile.

"You know, reading these last few books seem a bit pointless now." said Harry.

"Yeah, it does seem like it, but the information in those books are paramount to you surviving." said Officer McFinn. "Shall we continue on...get this book over with finally?"

"I'd love that." said Harry, he walked back to Sirius and sat down in the bowl.

Officer McFinn picked the book up off the pedastal and turned to the new chapter to be read that day. "First chapter of the day is The Only Man He Feared"

"The only one who feared?" asked Fred.

"I hope it's You-Know-Who...he's the one I would vote to be afraid of someone." said George.

Dialogue line.
Sirius stood up and brought Harry over to him, he sat down and pulled Harry onto his lap and wrapped his arms around him. “I'm right here, I'm right here.” he said soothingly.

“First dose.” said Madam Pomfrey hurrying over and handing him a phial.

Sirius gave him an extra squeeze when he felt Harry tense up.

“I don't care what you do, you're not allowed to go there.” said Harry.

“Only if you don't.” said Sirius.

Sirius gave him an extra squeeze when he felt Harry tense up.

“I don't like this book...” whimpered a first year.

“I knew you cared...” said Tonks trying to raise a bit of levity.

Moody rolled his eye, but patted her hand softly.

“End of fifth paragraph.”

Dialogue line.

Sixth paragraph.

Dialogue set.
“Not a friend...” muttered Harry. “Family...”

Sirius shushed Harry softly. “It’s alright.”

Seventh paragraph.
Dialogue set.

Eighth paragraph.
“T'd miss you to mate.” said Sirius reaching over and grasping his friend's hand.

Dialogue line.

Ninth paragraph.
Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.
Dialogue line.

“As...pleased as I am that I mean that much to you...please don't kill anyone...” said Sirius.

Tenth paragraph, second sentence.
“T's Voldemort's second best dueler...you're only a fifth year...” said Bill worriedly.

End of tenth paragraph.

Eleventh paragraph, sixth sentence.
“Lucky that Bella didn't kill them on the way out.” whispered Rudolph.

End of eleventh paragraph.
“Tell me someone is racing after you...please...tell me someone is coming after you to stop you.” pleaded Mrs. McFinn.
Twelfth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Thirteenth paragraph, first sentence.

“And that there is how you get about in there.” said one of the Unspeakables.

Lee looked slightly put out. “All they had to do was say where they wanted to go? Son of a banshee...”

End of thirteenth paragraph.

Fourteenth paragraph.

“I know something horrible just happened...but I'm kind of curious as to what was going on in that lift as it slowly rose.” said Charlie quietly.

Fifteenth paragraph.

“Good boy.” muttered Moody and Lionus.

Dialogue set.

“Doesn't mean that I'm going to just step out and let you kill me.” said Harry shortly.

“One more time.” said Sirius taking a phial off a small table and handing it to his godson.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“I hope that we get to kick her ass in the future.” said Fred darkly.

Sixteenth paragraph.

“NO!” shouted the group in the Great Hall.

Harry stared. “What have I done?”

“Nothing that I wouldn’t have done if she had killed you...or hurt you...” said Sirius.
“I can’t believe...I can’t believe that I would do that...” said Harry horrified.

“Well, the plus side is...though not in this case, is that you don’t have the right feeling in order to use that curse.” said Lionus. “Hopefully, you never know what feeling you have to have.”

Seventeenth paragraph.

“Hopefully that got her to shut up.” said Bill.

Dialogue set, second sentence.

“So much for that wish.” muttered Bill.

End of dialogue set.

“Don’t take any lesson with her.” whispered Sirius.

“Don’t plan on it.” said Harry.

Eighteenth paragraph.

Dialogue set.

“I don’t hope to learn any of them, thank you very much.” said Harry.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

Nineteenth paragraph.

“Hmm, looks like that statue was going to get trashed whether we did it or not.” said Lionus with a smirk.

Dialogue line.

“Which is Death Eater speak for, ‘I’m going to kill you either way, save me some time finding it.’” said Tonks.
“That can't be good.” said Hannah worriedly.

“No Death Eater is foolish enough to think they are above punishment.” said Snape absently.

Dr. Clark reached over and rubbed where the scar was, causing Harry to close his eyes with pleasure.

“So violent...” said Luna. “I wonder what made her that way.”

“She was that violent when I knew her.” said Leroy.

“That won't work...” said Sirius as he began rocking Harry back and forth softly.

“You don't need...” said Harry.

“Yeah I do.” said Sirius.
Ginny cursed softly, and while Mrs. Weasley heard it, she was much too preoccupied to scold her.

Twenty-second paragraph.

Twenty-third paragraph.

“Shit, don't freeze.” muttered Tonks.

Dialogue set, fourth sentence.

“Shows what he knows.” said Ron.

End of dialogue set.

“They're not going to be breathing much longer after that.” said Dean.

Dialogue line.

“I may be able to forgive you if you have the right excuse, but I cannot see him having the ability to forgive.” said Dumbledore.

Dialogue line.

“Not much in the way of perks if you're his 'most loyal Death Eater'. ” said Ginny.

Dialogue line.

Twenty-fourth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Get away!” shouted a few second years.

Twenty-fifth paragraph.
“Picked a bad time to freeze up...” Dr. Nicodemus wincing slightly.

Twenty-sixth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Twenty-seventh paragraph.

“Thank goodness someone came after you.” said Sirius.

Twenty-eighth paragraph, first sentence.

“Style to burn.” said Sirius with a smirk.

Twenty-eighth paragraph, second sentence.

“Yeah...” said Rudolph clapping loudly.

End of twenty-eighth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“I really can’t see any of our Aurors being able to take him on, Bellatrix perhaps, but not You-Know-Who.” said Madam Bones.

Dialogue line.

“Threat would hold more weight if you would actually hit him.” said Lionus.

Twenty-ninth paragraph, second sentence.

Quite a few of the students grinned excitedly at the duel that was going on between their headmaster and the Dark Lord. They had all read about the duel between Dumbledore and Grindewald, but this was way better.
“He's not you.” said Harry quietly.

“Well, that's a bit of dark turn.” said Ron slowly.

“Wrong.” said Harry.

“Doesn't stop you from shouting...does it?” asked Lee.

“Somehow, I think that he wanted to leap out and distract the Dark Lord.” said Nightstrike.

“Idiot boy.” said Snape. “That would have only gotten him killed.”

“Oh no.” said Ernie anxiously.

“Oh no! Not Fawkes!” screamed Katie.

“Wait, he's a phoenix, maybe he'll be alright...” said Bill.
“Death by drowning, not a great way to go.” said Chief Hawkeye.

“Oh, hell, that's not a good thing.” said Sirius clutching at Harry a little tighter.

Harry was now wrapped in not only Sirius' arms, but everyone else in the bowl had wrapped their arms around him.

The rest of the students and even a few of the Rangers turned to look at him with shocked gazes.

“Guess he's got a limit.” whispered Dennis quietly.

Mrs. McFinn laid her head on his back, hot tears falling on his spine.

“Oh, god.” gasped Dr. Clark horrified.
“Oh...no...” whispered McGonagall her hand flying to her mouth.

“Oh god no...” said Mrs. McFinn, holding Harry a little tighter.

Sirius rubbed foreheads with Harry. “I don't want you to follow me so soon after I go.”

“Wait...what made him let him go?” asked a sixth year Slytherin.

“Maybe Dumbledore did something.” said a fifth year Ravenclaw.

“I would greatly like to not relive your first year.” said Dumbledore taking another phial of Calming Draught and drinking it.

“Finally! It's freaking over!” Neville shouted, stunning a few people. “They'll finally stop being so stupid!”
“We've been telling you for months you stupid son of a kneazel!” shouted Charlie.

“Regardless, don't leave him.” said Madam Pomfrey shaking her finger at the man.

“I won't, I won't.” said Dumbledore leaning back into the chair and closing his eyes.

“Something they should have been doing months ago.” said Remus.

“Get some mental help.” said Tempest looking at the man.

“Someone finally smashed the damned thing.” said Chief Hawkeye.

“Trying save someone that ended up dying anyway.” said Harry darkly.

“Shh...I'm right here.” said Sirius quietly.
“Send me someone who knows more than I do about what's going on and what is acceptable.” said George trying to imitate Dumbeldore's voice.

A few students stifled a giggle.

“That's being generous. I wouldn't give him three.” said Angelina.

“Sort of makes hunting for him all worthless now, they could have just owled him a letter.” said Dr. Clark with a snicker.

Madam Pomfrey pushed a phial of Calming Draught in Harry's hand.

Harry heaved a great sigh and leaned against Sirius' arms.

“It's alright, it'll be okay.” said Sirius.
“It will here, but not so much in the books.”
“Do you want to do another chapter today?” asked Sirius. “No shame in calling it quits for today.”

“I’m okay, well...think you can get that kitchen up here, give me a bit of therapy cooking?” asked Harry.

“Sure thing.” said Sirius. Dumbledore waved his wand and the kitchen reappeared in the Great Hall. Without missing a beat, Harry stood up and began to pull bowls, knives, spoons and ingredients out of the cabinets and the cupboard of food.

Officer McFinn waited till Harry gathered up all the things he wanted before he started.

“Thirty Seventh chapter.”

“Maybe we'll finally get some answers.” said Justin.

“You mean Harry'll finally get some answers?” said Hannah with a frown.

“Uh...yeah, I meant Harry.” said Justin quickly.

First paragraph.

“Safest place in the castle for you, no one can get in there besides the Headmaster.” said Flitwick.

“Here's hoping a fire doesn't start, if he's the only one that can get to him, then he would be trapped.” said Mrs. McFinn.

Second paragraph.

“Worst...night...of...my...life.” said Harry as he pounded a thick steak with a wooden mallet. “And I haven't even lived it yet.”

Third paragraph, second sentence.

Rudolph stood up and placed his hands on Harry's shoulders.

“What?” asked Harry.

“Nothing, I'm just going to stand here.” said Rudolph tapping his forehead against the back of Harry's head.

End of third paragraph.

Fourth paragraph.
“Shh...” said Rudolph wrapping his arms around Harry's chest, Harry had just slammed a bowl down and shattered it on contact. He took out his wand and tapped the bowl and repaired it, and conjured a bandage to cover the small cut on his hand.

Fifth paragraph.

“Come on, come back to chair.” said Rudolph coaxing Harry back to the bowl. Harry felt his arms go limp as he allowed himself to be taken back. Leroy waved his wand and the food that was in the process of being used was wrapped up in preservation charms and the kitchen disappeared.

Sixth paragraph.

Seventh paragraph.

Dialogue set.

Several people winced horribly.

“Phineas...” groaned Dumbledore.

Eighth paragraph.

Ninth paragraph.

Tenth paragraph.

“Good thing too...” said Harry quietly as he was covered by the quilt.

“Why?” asked Dr. Clark.

Despite being so close, Sirius and Dr. Clark didn't quite catch what Harry mumbled, something about one of the towers. However, Remus heard what he had said and reached over to grasp Harry's knee.

“Please...don't think that.” said Remus quietly.

Harry only burrowed further into blankets.

“After this chapter, end of the day.” said Chief Hawkeye.

Dialogue line.

Eleventh paragraph.

“Bet they're wondering why you're trying to leave the office after you just arrived.” said Sirius quietly.

Dialogue line.
“Not the time he wants to feel proud.” said Leroy looking sadly over to Harry.

Sirius ran his fingers through the top of Harry's hair. “I'm sure 'Book you' will get better.”

“I only wished I was returning after happier circumstances.” said Dumbledore sending Harry a sympathetic look.

The subtle implication of Dumbledore's words went unsaid, as Harry at the time really didn't need to hear it and Dumbledore was already looking a bit uncomfortable.

“I want a Calming Draught, or a sleeping potion, I don't care which.” mumbled Harry.

“Here.” said Sirius handing Harry one of Dumbledore's phials. He took it back once Harry had downed it's contents.

Harry buried his face with the blankets, he didn't want to hear this, and covered his ears. He could feel the potion taking the edge off of his raging emotions, but if he could not hear what was going on, the effects would quicken.
“Shut up, you old coot!” shouted the student body.

Dialogue line.

Eighteenth paragraph.

“You were better.” said Sirius ducking his head under the covers to look at Harry's tear stained face. While above the covers it looked like Harry was merely sleeping or trying to achieve some rest, it seemed that he was an emotional wreck and the potion was only able to do a minimal amount of help. “It's okay, I'm going to be with you for quite a few more decades, I'm not going anywhere.”

“Doesn't change that this would have happened, this all would have happened!” hiccuped Harry.

“Exactly, would have, it won't happen now.” said Sirius. “Now come on, why not just rest...?”

Harry turned over in the bowl, and wrapped his arms around Sirius' middle, not caring what anyone else would say. But he heard a dull groan come from around his feet.

“What was that?” asked Harry looking up at Sirius.

“You accidentally nailed Sam.” said Sirius with a twitching smile.

Dialogue set.

“I'm not sure 'bout that...I would prefer not to lose my loved ones.” said George.

Nineteenth paragraph.

“I know what it's like to be on one end of Harry's grief...” said Dr. Clark.

“Yeah, I remember...” said Remus looking down at the floor.

Dialogue set.

“Being over a hundred years old, he has more than seen his share of funerals.” said Bathilda Bagshot softly.

Dialogue line.

Twentieth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Then I'd rather not feel it...” muttered Harry.
“If the option is you being like Voldemort?” said Sirius.

“Why can't I just be emotionally distant without being like Voldemort?” said Harry.

“Expressing grief is healthier.” said Dr. Clark reaching over and giving Harry's shoulder a squeeze.

Dialogue set, second sentence.

A few of the students stared at the book.

“Easy there, Nellie.” said Lionus with a smirk. “Though, if you have to throw it, aim for Dumbledore, see if ducks fast enough.”

“I do believe that I would have dodged it, with or without magic.” said Dumbledore with a slight frown.

End of dialogue set.

“I'd be throwing stuff too, if someone was trying to sound calm...I think I did that at Azkaban now that I think about it. They kept talking to me about Lily and James in a calm tone, I think I broke through the bars the first time...then I got moved up to the more secure parts of the prison.” said Sirius thinking back.

Dialogue set.

“Kind of sounds a bit better than what he went through a few days ago...doesn't it?” said Hermione quietly.

“I still would not want to be in his shoes...I don't think I could stand losing anyone in my family.” said Ron.

Twenty-first paragraph.

Dialogue set, third sentence.

“Things can be replaced, he cannot.” said Dumbledore looking over at the mound of fabric.

End of dialogue set.

“Don't mention bleeding and death so soon...” said Dr. Clark and Dr. Nicodemus quietly.

Dialogue set.

“I would not blame you, though I don't think you would even go through with that.” said Dumbledore, a slight smile on his face.
“I’d just break your stuff.” said Harry’s voice, muffled through the thick quilt.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Twenty-second paragraph.

Twenty-third paragraph.

Twenty-fourth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“After hearing what he said, I don’t recommend letting him out.” said Remus quietly.

Dialogue line.

“And it seems I am also worried about what he may do.” said Dumbledore.

Twenty-fifth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Don't know if he's giving you the green light or not.” said Mrs. McFinn.

Twenty-sixth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Can't quite blame him, he's wanted to talk to Dumbledore for months, and now he wants to talk to him?” said Lionus quietly.

“Easy there.” said Chief Hawkeye with a smirk.

Dialogue set.

“So...you're telling him to hit you?” said Bill.
“Can't tell if that's supposed to make him feel better...or not.” said Ernie.

“He's saying that it's mostly his, and partially Bellatrix's.” said Luna serenely.

Harry began to thrash under the covers, trying to pull the quilt off himself, but Officer McFinn held out his hand. “Calm down, he didn't finish.” he said quietly.

The thrashing stopped and the moving quilt covered lumps settled down.

“Now...he cares?” said Sirius quirking a brow. “Now he shows that he cares? What a bastard.”

“That's sad...” said Luna looking sympathetically at the book.

“Says the man that still goes out for a run every other morning at eight o' five.” said Madam Pomfrey looking sternly at the Headmaster.

“You go out and run?” said Justin looking at the Headmaster in shock.
“That’s one hell of a guess.” murmured Harry from under the covers.

“That’s some hearing you've got.” said Sirius patting Harry's shoulder.

“Something I would really rather forget.” said Mrs. Weasley gripping the arm of her husband.

“Figured you had enough on your plate with Fudge, the Wizengamot, Umbridge and Voldemort.” said Harry thickly.

“The simple word, “is”, sent a blossom of joy through Dumbledore's chest. He had feared that despite most of the things that had happened in this latest book had surely removed any connection the two of them had, but it seemed the lad was willing to put aside his righteous feeling of betrayal. He couldn't help but feel so grateful to his forgiving nature.

“There's no safer place than right next to you.” said Madam Pomfrey.
“I've been telling him that for months.” said McGonagall.

Thirty-third paragraph.

Dialogue set.

“And that is something that I would never do, no matter to what end.” said Dumbledore. “If anything, I would have contained the both of you, and then scoured every tome I could get my hands on to cure you and protect your mind from him.”

Thirty-fourth paragraph.

Sirius ran his hand up and down Harry's covered arm, his heart was breaking with how devastated Harry was over losing him. Though, there was still that cold dread that was in the back of his mind if he had been subjected to the same loss, only in his case, the loss of his godson...he knew that he would have to be strapped to a bed in St. Mungos, there would be no recovery for him. Harry was young, and smart...he would recover, even book self that was actually living through this, he would be alright.

Dialogue set, first sentence.

“Ha, future me listened and I ran to Dumbledore...” said Sirius lightly.

“Thanks for coming back and telling me that you told him.” said Harry darkly.

“Well, no one is perfect.” said Sirius.

End of dialogue set.

“Not a great plan.” said Remus.

Thirty-fifth paragraph.

Dialogue set.

“So, he only mentally traveled there?” asked Hermione.

“But the Rangers said that they picked up his magical signature...” said Ron. “So he had to have been there in some way or another. Maybe something changed between here and the book version.”

Dialogue set, third sentence, first dash.

“Which would have been easier, as he was already in the Ministry. What would have stopped him from going down the lifts?” said Tonks.

“If we could fathom what goes through that deranged mind, he would have been captured long before now.” said Moody.

“You mean you don't already try and think like them?” said Tonks with a smile.

“He’s on a whole other level of dark than what I can understand normally.” said Moody.

“Never thought I would hear you admit you can't do something.” said Tonks.

“Never thought I would hear about you being able to take on an actual Death Eater.” said Moody gesturing towards the book.

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue set.

Harry began to shake his head to try and rid himself of the guilt, but Sirius' hand came down and nestled on top of his head.

“I'm okay, you're okay...we're all okay.” said Sirius softly.

Thirty-sixth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“I'm going to kill him!” growled Sirius darkly. “I don't care anymore!”

“Take it easy, you'll jostle Harry if you don't calm down.” said Remus.

“That little toerag sent Harry and his friends into danger, he'll be lucky if I just kill him!” hissed Sirius.

“I'm okay, you're okay...we're all okay.” came the muffled voice from under the covers.

Sirius looked down and continued his ministrations. “Still going to thrash the little bastard...”

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

It was now Sirius' turn to seethe with anger, muttering about giving Kreacher concrete orders and never letting him near any of the children again and looked over to Mrs. Weasley with a frown.
“Tiny bit of humor there, I suppose.” said Dr. Clark with a quiet chuckle.

The students turned and stared at the Potions Master, who had kept his gaze firmly at his feet, a threatening snarl on his face for anyone to make a comment.

“He's not going to have any honorable job like that again.” spat Sirius.

“He never liked me, always beside my mother's knee and believed all the crap she spewed out. I think she had a crush on her at some point...way too devoted.” said Sirius.

“Not that your devotion to him is trivial.” said Dumbledore.

“Nah, I just thought they knew that already and didn't bother blocking it.” said Sirius with a smirk.

“He's a bigger idiot than I thought if he didn't even know that beforehand.” said Harry.
Now both Sirius and Hagrid were mumbling darkly.

“Vicious little...”

“Beaky never did nuthin' to 'im.”

“I want to know 'persuasion' you used on him.” said Sirius. “See if I can do it as well.”

“This hasn't happened...” said Hermione, though she herself was taken aback and horrified at the treachery of the house-elf, it didn't stop her from fearing for him.

“Oh, I'll make damn sure that he doesn't do anything.” said Sirius.

“So you're saying that all this is my fault? The little toerag was delusional when we got there, all the kindness and respect in the world wouldn't have made a dent of difference!” said Sirius.

“My future self did not say that, nor would I ever, as I said, the blame lies mostly with myself.” said Dumbledore.

“Well, I can't wait for someone to come along and show me how I should have treated the psychotic little bastard. Cause you,” said Sirius pointing to Remus. “can't say I didn't try to be nice to him the first two months.”

Dumbledore looked at Remus, who nodded.

“He did try, Kreacher was really...addled, more so before everyone came and especially before the kids came. Sirius tried to keep him from Mrs. Black, as she was the one that seemed to instigate his madness and that seemed to help a bit.” said Remus. “When it was mentioned that we needed a safe place to meet, he and I went right there to see what we could do with the place, we didn't know about Kreacher at the time, thought he had died to be honest. What the kids saw in Kreacher, that skulking muttering figure...was a lot better when he and I both went there the first time. If he had more than just the few teeth he had, he would have bit us on top of scratch at us and try and attack us.”

“But elves can't attack their masters...” said Ernie.

“What about when they think their master is a painting?” said Sirius, “And as I was kicked off the family tapestry, so it took a lot of convincing to get him to listen to me.”
“So, we were in a house...with a psycho elf?” said Fred looking shocked.

“Or at least more psycho than we thought?” said George.

The twins looked at each other with stunned looks. “Wicked!”

“The moment he understood I was his master, I put in some very strict orders, he was not to touch the kids, harm the kids or even be in the same room alone with the kids. He only disobeyed that order once and he punished himself for it.” said Sirius. “And I at first, didn't want the kids there, I wasn't sure if it was safe, but Molly didn't want to leave the kids home alone while the meetings went on when Arthur couldn't make it. But we made a compromise, I would keep an eye on Kreacher, she would be the driving force behind the clean-up.”

“I didn't realize he was like that before we got there.” said Mrs. Weasley looking fearfully at her children.

“I told you about it!” said Sirius looking confused.

“Let's move on.” said Officer McFinn loudly before a fight could break out.

Dialogue set, second sentence.

“Physical danger was not what I had in mind.” said Dumbledore.

End of dialogue set.

“Yes...I...do...you didn't grow up with the little skirt licker.” ground out Sirius through clenched teeth.

Dialogue set, second sentence.

Sirius finished glowering at the Headmaster and ducked his head under the covers to see what Harry was doing, he hadn't heard anything out of the lad for a bit and he hadn't moved for a while. Turns out, Harry was asleep.

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue set, first sentence.

“Yeah, being alone with a wizard painted portrait of my mother, and learning all my parent's nasty little ways.” said Sirius quietly.

Dialogue set, third sentence.

“Dobby was pleasant, knew the difference between right and wrong...can't believe I'm saying this but he was in a better family than Kreacher was.” said Sirius.
“Thanks for giving me a shout out for all my hard work, you old codger.” muttered Sirius.

“You son of...” spat Sirius.

“I did not know.” said Dumbledore holding up his hands in a gesture of submission. “I apologize for the inaccuracy of my future self.”

Sirius tried to not show how touched he was, but was failing slightly as tears began to form.

“He was trying to not show that the message meant anything to Umbridge.” said Justin.

“So...Professor Snape is the last line of defense for us?” said one of the first year Hufflepuffs.

“He's so cool!” said a young Gryffindor happily.

Snape stared at the cheering students in disbelief.

“Yeah, I can understand that.” said Mrs. McFinn reaching over and giving Harry's ankle a squeeze.
“He would not have done that, he would never surrender Harry to the Dark Lord.” said Dumbledore.

Dialogue set.

“Damn straight.” muttered Snape.

“And we'll never know what they're going on about.” said Fred.

Dialogue set.

“I didn't hate him before, I hate him now.” said Sirius darkly.

Dialogue set, third sentence.

Sirius turned and stared at the Headmaster. “I am two seconds away from kicking your ass, if he wasn't on my lap right now, I'd be dragging you out of here by your beard. If he was unworthy of much interest or notice, then I would not have kept him.”

End of dialogue set.

“I'll give you that one.” said Sirius.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

“And I suppose that's what it looked like to you, is it?” said Sirius with a frown.

“Well, you did rip a few of the Black family items out of his hands...” said Hermione.

“He kept becoming violent after having too much stuff, especially the pictures and things that belonged to my mother!” said Sirius.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Sirius smiled as he patted Harry's shoulder, he felt the young man shift under the blanket, and the arms wrapped around his middle tightened.
Forty-second paragraph.

Dr. Clark reached over and rubbed Harry's back smoothly.

Forty-third paragraph.

Dialogue set.

“Best wake Harry up,” said Officer McFinn.

“Why?” asked Sirius.

“If he's going to let the students hear listen in on the remaining two books, he's going to need to know what they're going to know.” said Officer McFinn “And he's going to have to agree that they're going to know some pretty sensitive stuff.”

Sirius gave Harry a slight jostle and ducked under the covers. “Come on Cub, we'll need you to wake up.”

“I don' wanna.” said Harry thickly.

“We want to know if you want the rest of the school to know what the prophecy was about, or what it was that Dumbledore told you about.” said Sirius.

Harry sighed and sat up, “Let them know, I don't rightly care, hopefully with the Ranger's help it won't be long before everything is all squared away. Go on, then.”

“Alright, if you're sure,” said Officer McFinn.

“Why stop now?” asked Harry. “Besides, I've already been told about it.”

Forty-fourth paragraph, second sentence, fifth comma.

“Who's opinion?” said Harry dully.

“Not mine,” said Dumbledore.

End of forty-fourth paragraph.

“Down the hatch, Albus,” said Flitwick hurrying over and handing Dumbledore phial after phial of Calming Draught.

“I did not, I swear I did not know the extent...” said Dumbledore, his face pale and his wizened old hands shaking.

“We know, we know, now take the potion,” said Flitwick soothingly.

“I knew about Petunia's feelings towards magic, but I thought...I thought that there was a chance she could overlook that...”
“Yes, yes, now take the potion.” said Flitwick.

Forty-fifth paragraph.

Dialogue set.

“Despite not having a lot of money, even we put our name forward...” said Arthur with a kind smile.

Dialogue set, third sentence.

“Hiding him was the best option I had.” said Dumbledore quietly.

Dialogue set, seventh sentence, third comma.

“Fifty years sounds a lot better than ten, or even twenty...” said Harry.

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue set.

“It would slow him down, that's got to account for something.” said Bill.

Dialogue set, fifth sentence.

“Doesn't do the people around me any good though, does it?” said Harry as he leaned heavily against Sirius.

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

“Will he listen to that? Not really.” said Harry shaking his head.

Dialogue set, first sentence.

“And watched me be starved and beaten...yeah, she loves me.” said Harry shaking his head.

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue line.
“And I haven't called that place my home for years.” said Harry.

Dumbledore smiled softly.

“Uncle Vernon more than her.” said Harry.

“I didn't know, I didn't know.” mumbled Dumbledore.

“And scared out of my mind.” said Dumbledore.

“What flaw is he talking about?” asked Hannah.

“Yes.” said the entire student body.

“Not all that impressive when it all happened less than two months ago.” said Remus with a smile.
“Have to agree with him there, I wouldn't be all that keen on you knowing something about Voldemort that would promote deep depression.” said Dr. Nicodemus.

“Because you didn't want to...?” said Lee slowly.

“Traumatizing, nearly cause of death, night of triumph.” said Harry with a smirk.

The students were quiet.

“And that's a 'trap'?" said Sirius. “Then I'll fall into it again and again.”

“'I'm making up for all the years that you didn't have any love and affection?'” said a seventh year curiously.

“Then call me a fool.” said Mrs. Weasley with a frown.

“Not too sure how I feel about that.” said Harry with a light chuckle.
“Wow.” said Dr. Clark looking at Dumbledore.
“I know, I was impressed.” said Officer McFinn.

“I didn't want to ruin whatever childhood you had left.” said Dumbledore.

“I concur.” said Flitwick nodding. “My own years here seems like a proverbial cake walk.”

“Damn dramatic emphasis.” muttered a seventh year Ravenclaw.

“So it was the prophecy's fault...” said Ernie.
“Well, you got your answer.” said Fred looking at the Hufflepuff fifth year.

“Well, good thing he didn't get that.” said Neville, his face pale.

“Well, at least that meant that You-Know-Who won't be able to hear it either.” said Parvati.
“You mean a parrot listened in?” said Harry with a smirk.

Despite the tense situation between Dumbledore and Sirius they shared a hearty laugh.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, second sentence, second comma.

“That's some memory…” said Dr. Clark.

“I would never forget that night, my heart just about stopped in that room.” said Dumbledore.

Dialogue set, fourth sentence.

“Why didn't you say no then?” said Ron throwing up his hands.

End of dialogue set.

Fifty-second paragraph, first sentence, ninth word.

“Is he reenacting this?” whispered a sixth year Gryffindor.

Fifty-second paragraph, second sentence, fourth comma, sixth word.

“Argh come on, more of that damn noise?” said Lee covering his ears.

Fifty-second paragraph, third sentence, first comma.

“Well, that was short lived.” said Fred.

End of fifty-second paragraph.

Fifty-third paragraph, second sentence, first comma.

“She made the prophecy?” said Hermione in shock.

End of fifty-third paragraph.

Officer McFinn stopped suddenly and looked over to Harry and then to the rest of the students. “I want you all to swear, that what you are about to hear, you won't leave this room and spread it to anyone else you are writing to and you will keep it here and to yourselves.”
The students nodded and some of them even the twins held up their right hands, their left hands over their hearts and swore in the most pompous voices they could come up with that they would rather eat dragon dung and then sleep in it than sell out Harry.

So, placated, he continued on.

Prophecy.

The students and even a few of the adults stared at the book.

“Holy crap...” said the twins looking between Harry and the book.

And that was all anyone could really say.

Fifty-fourth paragraph.

Fifty-fifth paragraph.

Dialogue set.

Mrs. Weasley held a hand to her mouth and tried to hold back a sob.

Dialogue set.

Fifty-sixth paragraph.

Sirius held Harry close to him.

Dialogue line.

Fifty-seventh paragraph.

Dialogue set, first sentence.

“What?” said Bill after a moment of silence.

End of dialogue set.

Neville's jaw fell to the floor. The rest of the student body looked between Harry and Neville and then back to the book.

“Well...uh...it's a good thing...uh...well...” said Neville looking nervous and uncomfortable at the same time. “N...Never mind.”
“Cause the noseless wonder went after you instead of him.” muttered George.

“GEORGE!” shrieked Mrs. Weasley fearfully.

Chief Hawkeye laughed loudly. “I like them.”

“Dream killer.” said Sirius with a slight mutter.

“I have yet to see the blessing part.” said Harry quietly.

Harry cringed.

“Unfortunately.” said Remus shaking his head.

“That would have been the smart thing to do, but he was desperate.” said Moody. “Easier to kill three young adult wizards and a baby rather then three adult wizards, two that have learned more defensive and offensive magic and a young wizard in his prime.”

“Thank goodness for small favors...I think.” said Nightstrike with a hint of uncertainty.
“I'm sort of relieved that my life doesn't have all this.” said a third year Slytherin.

“That's not the power anyone would want you to have.” said Dumbledore. “And you don't, you have a much stronger power than he could ever hope to have.”

The students waited for what the power could be, but the Headmaster did not elaborate.

The students looked amongst themselves in confusion.

“Oh, don't dwell on that dear, please...” pleaded Mrs. McFinn.

“I only meant, that that is what the prophecy meant, it is not what it actually has to happen.” said Dumbledore. “You choose your own destiny...but I have a feeling that my future self may splinter down a path I cannot fathom now that I know what I know.”

Sirius brushed his lips against his godson's head.

“Finally, an answer!” said Sirius. “That had been bugging me! He was perfect Prefect material! Smart, brave, not afraid to stand up for himself or his friends...”

“Shut up.” said Harry turning pink.

End of dialogue set.
Sirius blinked. “Oh...ah...well...okay...” said Sirius. “I guess, he would have been stressed out to the max.”

“Better believe it.” said Harry quietly.

End of chapter.

“That's it, end of the day, I don't care. I don't care where you go, but it had better be therapeutic somehow.” said Chief Hawkeye standing up and pulling Harry to his feet. “You need to recuperate from these last few chapters, and I don't mean you need to be in a comatose state.”

Harry looked off to the side, unsure of what he should say. Then the Ranger Chief placed a finger under his chin and lead his face to look at him eye to eye. The man was almost a foot and a half taller than he was, quite the intimidating figure, but he smiled down at him.

“Take the opportunity to rest as often as you can, I've seen people who have read the future based Memoir Books and have slipped into a unyielding depression. The books are a testament to the life that would have been, and several of the main character of those books have decided to cut their lives short, unable to face them. They blew through the readings, and after a while, they decided that they could not face it, disregarding their chance to change their destinies.” said Chief Hawkeye.

Harry tried to look away, but the finger did not move.

“Take it slow, don’t rush through this, all these people here, they want to know that you'll be alright and they are willing to put their lives on hold. And that's just your book version, they have all become emotionally invested and they want to see the real life you succeed. Now, how about you put forth a little effort on your part, and also make sure that you succeed. Rest often and have a clear head going forth.” said Chief Hawkeye. “You have the largest support system I have ever seen, you are not alone.”

Harry blinked, trying to force back the tears while Chief Hawkeye continued to smile down on him.

“Now, I remember that bathroom with that swimming pool they call a bath, I suggest you hop in there for a bit, if bubble bath can unwind a girl three days into her time of the month, imagine what it can do for a young man in a mental turmoil.” said Chief Hawkeye with a chuckle and he finally released Harry’s chin.

“Are you implying that we're unreasonable during that time?” said Mrs. McFinn dabbing her eyes with a handkerchief.

“No, I'm implying that you are all venom-spewing demon spawn during that time of the month.” said Chief Hawkeye with a wink.
“I swear to Merlin, you have to be cheating.” said Ron throwing down his cards and looking firmly over at his dorm mate who was pulling the large pile of candy towards himself. Neville's face alight with a smile as he looked down at the haul he had just acquired.

Harry had opted instead of the dip in the Prefect bath, (not that he wouldn't do that a bit before curfew) to having a bit of a poker night in his suite, with other students coming in and taking part in it as well. Thanks to all the people that wanted to get in and play, there was a new set of rules for such a large gathering:

First rule: It cost seven sickles to come in and play.

Second Rule: Only five people to the game. That way games could go pretty quickly.

Third Rule: After playing seven hands, you need to switch out with someone else who wants to play. This ensured that everyone got to play.

Fourth Rule: If you lose all your candy, you have to switch out with someone else who wants to play, regardless if your seven hands are done or not.

Fifth Rule: No cheating, if you're caught cheating, you're out, permanently. You're not allowed back into the game, if this becomes a normal thing.

Sixth Rule: Play nice, no being nasty, calling each other cheating and doing so in a teasing manner is one thing. Most swear words are acceptable, except the 'M' word. But say the accepted swearwords quietly so Professor Lupin doesn't hear.

The money to get into the game went straight to the purchase of sweets and even if someone went completely “broke” within two hands they would still leave with at least three sickles worth of candy. The rule was still the same as it had been when they were the only ones playing. The winner at the end of a set amount of games would keep half the pot, and then disperse the rest among himself and the other players, if they so desired, they could always be a miser and run off with the candy if they wanted.

There was the usual group of Harry, Ron, Neville, Seamus and Dean, and then there was the newer group that once they heard the word 'Poker', they all came into the suite that Harry shared with Sirius and the rest of them. There was the Weasley children, Hermione, Parvati, Lavender, Luna, the Gryffindor Quidditch Team, the Creevy Brothers, a few Huffelpuff students and even a pair of Slytherin students had come by.

“Not my fault that you can't see through my bluff.” said Neville with a bright grin.

“I cannot believe I lost to a pair of Jacks.” moaned Draco covering his eyes.

“Oh, sometimes he bluffs, then he come sneaking up behind you and bite you right in the ass with a straight flush.” said Harry as he sipped a cup of tea.

“You're out Ron, my turn.” said Ginny happily.

“I'm not playing Poker against my sister.” said Charlie looking around the room.

“Fraid I'll kick your butt?” said Ginny with a laugh.

“You always win, it could be “Memory” and you still win!” said Charlie. “Can I at least take half my winnings and run? I'll pick up when her seven games are done.”

“Nope, you sit and take it, if that was allowed, Neville would never get a chance to play.” said Dean with a snicker. “How you doing Luna?”

“I think I'm catching on.” said Luna dreamily.

“Who's deal?” asked Seamus coming up and standing behind Neville.

“Mine, I think.” said Luna as she took the deck of cards and she looked over to Charlie. “I've never seen the way you shuffled the cards before.”

“How do you shuffle?” asked Charlie handing her the cards.
She smiled and then tossed all the cards in the air and with a wave of her wand, the cards began to swirl around in the air and then neatly placed themselves face down on top of each other.

“That's how my dad and I shuffle the cards.” said Luna with a soft smile. “Though, before I came to school I had to pick them up by hand.”

Draco stared slackjawed at the Ravenclaw girl and raised brows.

“This is fun.” said Luna fondly. “Are you having fun Draco?”

Draco blinked a few times and nodded. “Uh, yeah, yeah...I'm enjoying myself.”

“Sort of set us back a bit when you showed up.” said Fred with a smirk.

“Yeah Blaise too.” said George. “Really didn't expect you two to show.”

Indeed, it was quite a shock when a soft knock came upon the door and when Sirius went to go answer it, he looked down at the heir of the Malfoy family and Blaise Zabini. He was a bit curious as to why they were there, but he heard the mutter of a game of poker and let them in instantly. The room went quiet and no one had moved, the two Slytherin students were about to turn and walk out when Harry waved them over and told them to pull up a chair and warned them about the wait to play, as they only had enough cards to hold up to five people at once and with the number of people at the moment that came to play.

They paid their entrance fee and took a seat and a plate of snacks from Mrs. McFinn and a warm cup of cocoa. They, plus a good amount of others, did not know all the rules to poker, but the boys were more than happy to share with them the rules and even allow someone to pair up behind them to watch, though they weren't allowed to move around once they came to stand behind someone.

The adults were also taking part in a poker game as well, getting into the spirit of things after the children started. They were also using candy as well...especially since Mrs. Wealsey wasn't going to let any of her children or her husband take part in it if it involved money as a prize. Lionus,
Professor Flitwick, Dumbledore, and Hagrid had also joined in the small private party. Though Lionus and Dumbledore had to both swear to not use Legilimency in order to get a leg up on the game.

The children milled between watching the adults play their game and then chat amicably with their peers waiting to sit in on a hand or two. Neville still was able to walk away with a good chunk of the pot and stood up to wait his next turn. Percy took his chair and began put his designated candy out onto the table. He looked around at everyone and saw that despite Neville having almost cleaned them out, there was still a constant chance of restocking your own personal stash, and Harry was going around and filling up everyone's pile with candy of various worth. Seemed that no matter who left the game, there was still a big pot to win at the end.

“Your turn to deal Charlie.” said Luna.

“Thanks, I think I'll shuffle the way I feel comfortable, though you did do a great job of mixing in all the cards.” said Charlie with a laugh.

“So great that it was a lucky shot that Longbottom couldn't even get a baby straight. First time I won against him.” said Draco fiddling with his licorice wand. “Who knew he could gamble like that?”

“He's an enigma, alright.” said Charlie as he dealt out the cards.

“So, Harry...how are you holding up?” asked Katie from beside the fire towards where the young man was sitting, keeping an eye on the proceedings and how large the pot of candy was.

The entire room went quiet, even the adults were dispensing with their conversations to listen in.

“If...if you don't want to talk about...” said Katie quickly.

“No...I'm fine, and...” said Harry as he reached behind himself and picked up a tuft of his snow white hair, which had now a bit of black towards the ends. “it looks like I'm recuperating a bit. This helps...maybe we should get right back to playing? Continue on with the therapy.” he added with a cheeky smile.

Draco quirked his brow. “I don't think I've ever seen you smile this often.”
“I know, I think my face cracked.” said Harry.

-=========*=

Hours went by, and then after everyone had take a bit of the pot (Harry was still pulling candy out of the enormous horde he had ordered from Honeydukes, even Draco and Blaise left with a large haul) Harry and the rest of the adults he shared the rooms with settled into a pleasant evening of rest.

“That was fun, though...I never knew that Arthur could almost foretell what the other people had in their hands.” said Sirius.

“That's why Molly doesn't let him play all that much, he started playing against some really...nasty folk that seemed nice on the surface. He took a little too much money from them...and was lucky enough to escape with his legs...and life.” said Remus.

“How did...” asked Harry.

“They thought he cheated, but Molly pleaded with them so much that they offered something else up, so they tied his hands behind his back and told him that if he could guess odd or even on a throw of the dice that they'd cover with a cup, they'd let him go. Molly said that someone had to be watching over him at that point, he won that little game...” said Remus. “If he had lost, they would have taken the Burrow.”

“So it was luck...that helped Arthur?” asked Sirius, he had not heard this story before.

“I asked Arthur, he gave me this whole thing about odds and the way the dice clicked, I tested him thirty-eight times...he got it right, every single time.” said Remus. “The man is a gambling prodigy, it's no wonder that his wife says he's not allowed to do it, he'd piss a lot of people off.”

“So...that meant that he let us win...a lot.” said Dr. Clark.

“Yep.” said Remus. “While you two were worried about Dumbledore and Lionus, I was having a bit of a battle with Arthur.”

“Well, I'm glad that everyone had a fun time, and you got some peace and rest.” said Mrs. McFinn kissing Harry on the cheek.

“Weren't you going to go for a dip in the Prefect bathroom?” asked Leroy as he looked over to Harry. “Isn't that what that Chief Hawkeye told you to do?”

“I wanted to, but then I got sucked into that last hand...so...maybe another time.” said Harry.

“You could always use the tub in my bathroom.” said Mrs. McFinn. “I'm sure even those darling elves would be able to bring you somethings to relax you.”

“Those...'darling elves' don't come in there when you're bathing...do they?” said Harry with a quirked brow. He knew that Dobby could be a bit...unused to personal space...

“Oh, just the girl ones, they bring me anything that I happen to forget...after that first time, I didn't want to forget anything anymore.” said Mrs. McFinn with a blush.

“You sure...?” said Harry.

“Absolutely, a shower is one thing and a swim in a pool is another, but a bath is something that will just melt your cares away.” said Mrs. McFinn helping Harry to his feet and led him into her bathroom. When she opened the door she and Harry saw the bath had already been drawn, bubbles and foam were covering the surface of the steaming water, candles were burning along the wall giving off a soothing fragrance, a stack of books on Quidditch and defensive spells were to the side of the tub, along with a warming bottle of butterbeer and a large plate of snacks.

“Oh, well, it seems that they already took care of everything. Now, you just enjoy yourself and sing out if you need anything!” said Mrs. McFinn with a smile.

“I'm not a girl.” said Harry with a blush.

“Oh, trust me, I know, but if you don't remember, whenever you had a very rough day at school or at the Dursleys, you always slipped right into the tub and I had to come and fish you out.” said Mrs. McFinn looking at him fondly. “Now I know you aren't that little boy anymore...goodness know's you're taller than I am now, but I still think I nice relaxing soak might do you some good.”
She closed the door and left him to it. He sighed heavily and began to strip from his clothes and then slip into the tub, sighing in relief at the warm that seemed to seep right down to his bones. As he closed his eyes in pleasure, his thoughts began to dwell on both the past and future. He wasn't all that keen on what was going to happen next in the books, as they most likely spelled out that he was going to lose even more of his friends and perhaps his extended family. At least his magical one anyway, seeing as how the books seemed to ignore Dr. Clark, Mrs. McFinn and even his Potter relations, he only had to worry about the people here at the school.

Well, that was sort of a relief, he was almost guaranteed to have someone to have his back, but was that a bad thing to think about his family like that...he supposed practical thinking was best left outside of grief...if the third book had anything to learn from.

He leaned against the back of the tub, allowing his long hair to drape down the outside, and sighed heavily. He had to admit, this felt really good.

---

“Does he have a full bath tub in his suite at Night's Rest?” asked Mrs. McFinn as she came back into the living room.

“Let me see...” said Sirius as he reached down under the sofa and pulled out a hidden box of different leaflets and drawings. He flipped through the different pages and stopped at the bathroom. “Yeah, it's not in right now, but since that fourth book, I think I thought about giving him a large bathtub...but it's on the table.”

“Well, then knowing you, he'll have it.” said Mrs. McFinn with a smile.

“Better believe it, if anything I'll magic the darn thing in somehow.” said Sirius. “I'm going to spoil him...like I should have...”

The room was quiet, no one had anything to say.

---

It was a half hour before Mrs. McFinn wondered if Harry had slipped out of the tub without them knowing. Remus offered to go and check, as Mrs. McFinn may bring about a serious case of embarrassment. He walked down to her bathroom and knocked softly and when he didn't hear any response on the other side, he knocked a little louder. Still nothing.

He entered the room cautiously and saw something that made Remus nearly sag in relief. Harry had his head lollled back and a smile on his face, but that wasn't the thing that made him nearly go boneless in the doorway.

It was the fact that when Harry went into the bath, he had about four inches of black creeping up his back, but now...a whole foot and a half had become the new length.

This bath really helped, now they just had to find a way to keep the black going up.
The End of the Fifth

The next day, when everyone gathered back down at the Great Hall, the students were sort of milling together in groups, discussing what they thought the prophecy meant and perhaps a few loopholes in there. One of the most outlandish theories that flew about was that if Harry defeated You-Know-Who, then he may become immortal. It seemed to make a bit of sense when you looked at the words, but they sincerely hoped that wasn't true.

If it was, then he was going to lose every single person he had ever loved and cared for...and they couldn't bear that for him.

When everyone was settled in, Officer McFinn took the book in hand and looked up over at Harry. He had seen the ascending black color to his hair and smiled, hopefully today was not going to cause the white to fall back down again.

“Alright, last chapter for this book.” said Officer McFinn.

“Thank god! Here's hoping after this, we don't hear anymore about or from Umbridge and the Ministry wakes the hell up.” said Dr. Clark throwing up his hands.

Article title.

“You lot are a whole damn year late.” said Charlie.

Article First paragraph.

“Shocker!” said Lee waving his hands.

Article Second paragraph.

“Damn that Lord Thingy.” said Sirius with a snicker.

“I think once you take on a public office, you aren't allowed to say 'Thingy'.” said Dr. Clark.

Article Third paragraph.

“Something that should have been done a while ago! Regardless on how you feel!” said Rudolph.

Article Fourth paragraph.

“Can we say, career suicide?” said Harry with a smirk.
“Well, won't that spur anarchy?” said Madam Bones shaking her head.

“I want to see them apologize, but will they? Absolutely not.” said Leroy rolling his eyes.

“Must be something very interesting in that issue.” said Dumbledore with a smile.

“Such manners.” said Mrs. Weasley shaking her head.

“That stuff stinks.” said one of the Unspeakables quietly.

“They never do.” said Remus. “No offense.” he added looking over at Leroy.

“None taken.”

“I'm glad isn't going to happen.” said Hermione shakily.

“Why would I have an interview with them? I wouldn't give them the time of day.” said Harry.

“And I had enough to go on with.”
“A vacation sounds like a very good idea, provided you keep an eye on your surroundings.” said Bill.

“Aw, a testament to us.” said the twins smiling happily.

“At what, that we show that we care?” said George.

“Or that Flitwick made a monument to us?” said Fred.

“He better not have that opinion now.” said Dumbledore firmly.

“Let's us enjoy a few moments of silence without her, I'm pretty happy.” said Ron.
“Can she stay nervous, I like her this way.” said Harry.

Dialogue line.
Dialogue line.
Dialogue line.
Dialogue set.

“Lovely, I love it.” said Ernie clapping happily.

Eighth paragraph.
Dialogue line.
Dialogue line.
Dialogue line.

“Well, that sounds like that may be stepping on a few toes...or...hooves.” said Ginny.

Dialogue set.
Dialogue line.

“You've already tossed the class, you can't now go back and take it.” said Seamus.

Ninth paragraph.
Dialogue line.

“Wonder why we aren't talking about Sirius, or do you think we had already had that talk and decided to not talk about him for Harry's sake.” said Ron as he looked at Hermione.

Dialogue line.

“I'm sure he doesn't want to talk about it.” said Bill.
“Yeah, his ‘little’ friend.” said Charlie with a snort.

Tenth paragraph.

Eleventh paragraph.

Twelfth paragraph, second sentence.

Mrs. McFinn stood up and wrapped her arms around Harry from behind the bowl. “I know the feeling, I felt the same way after James passed away.”

End of twelfth paragraph.

Thirteenth paragraph.

“This can't go well.” said Colin.

Fourteenth paragraph.

“Funny I seem to be breathing just fine.” said Harry with a smirk.

Fifteenth paragraph.

Harry grinned broadly.

Sixteenth paragraph.

“Why?” asked Dennis.

“Cause his father had now been arrested.” said Bathilda Bagshot.

Dialogue line.

“He did that all to himself, I only made sure he that he came to term with the consequences of his actions.” said Harry.

Dialogue set.

“Ooh.” said a few of the students together.
“I think he just did.” said George.

“This is getting weird.” said George.

“And his image is ruined forever.” said Tonks.

Tonks giggled.

Moody began to applaud. “Good boy, good boy.”

“Oh, what now?” said Moody gruffly.

“How about now?” asked Remus quietly.

“It didn't happen and I sort of threw a wrench into his plan, so...maybe just a slight twinge.” said Harry.

“Defending myself.” said Harry.

“Don't be that honest.” said Sirius with a groan.
Nineteenth paragraph.

“Must have stunned him through that much honestly.” said Fred.

Dialogue line.

“Well, that wasn't much.” said Remus.

Twentieth paragraph.

Dialogue set, first sentence.

“Cause the little Inquisitorial brats took them all away.” said Nightstrike coldly.

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

“Not where I think he was going.” said Mr. Weasley.

Twenty-first paragraph.

“Thank god.” said Mrs. McFinn with a sigh of relief.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Twenty-second paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Get used to it boys, carrying luggage is pretty much the only thing you have the brains to do.” said Ron.

Twenty-third paragraph.

Dialogue set.

Several of the teachers snorted with laughter.

Dialogue line.
“Never argue with McGonagall.” said one of the seventh years Gryffindor students.

Dialogue set.

Twenty-fourth paragraph.

“I’m going to refrain from what I was just thinking.” said Mrs. McFinn quietly.

“What was that?” asked Dr. Clark.

“They’re rewarding them for going into dangerous situations...” said Mrs. McFinn in a whisper.

“I thought that too...” said Dr. Clark.

Dialogue line.

Twenty-fifth paragraph.

Twenty-sixth paragraph, second sentence.

“Fickle...” muttered Ginny.

End of twenty-sixth paragraph.

Twenty-seventh paragraph, first sentence.

“That dog can bowl over a speeding truck and then lick the windshield clean.” said Harry with a laugh.

End of twenty-seventh paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Have a cup of what?” said Chief Hawkeye. “Who wants to drink weeds? You British are odd folk, I'll keep my Pepsi...”

Dialogue line.

Twenty-eighth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Oh no.” said Professor Sprout.
“Oh sweet lord no...” said McGonagall covering her eyes. “Get him so that he can mingle outside the forest first, Hagrid.”

“I shouldn' have said tha’.” said Hagrid covering his own eyes. “Least not that one part.”

Harry allowed Sirius to rub the back of his neck.

Sirius pulled Harry closer to himself and rocked him back and forth.
“But that's what You-Know-Who wants, he wants you to feel isolated and alone, but you're not.” said Luna with a kind smile over to Harry.

“No fifteen year old should have to think about that.” said Dr. Nicodemus.

“Sometimes you just need a moment to try alone.” said Dr. Clark with a nudge.

“Thank you.” said Dr. Nicodemus massaging his eyes. “She should not be allowed to talk about the passing of a loved one till she can prove she knows how to think outside practicality.”

Hermione frowned and crossed her arms.

“There was no criminal to use as a threat anymore.” said Harry elbowing Sirius.

“Knew you loved me for me.” said Sirius reaching down to tickle Harry's knee.

“At least the right person saw her leave.” said Fred nodding approvingly.

“She'll get a proper send off.” said George.

“Yeah! Mindless violence!” said Lee clapping his hands wildly.
“Good on ya, Peeves.” said Remus.

“I always knew that he loved her more than any other teacher.” said Rudolph.

Forty-third paragraph.
Dialogue line.

“You need an escort to dinner?” asked Charlie.

Forty-fourth paragraph.

“No, I could not see myself bringing you into the speech.” said Dumbledore. “Not after such a personal loss.”

Forty-fifth paragraph.
Forty-sixth paragraph.

“Now, you find it.” said Sirius. “But I really should have told you about the mirror beforehand.”

Forty-seventh paragraph
Forty-eighth paragraph.

Letter from Sirius

“I didn't even remember getting it, I still don't remember getting it.” said Harry.

Forty-ninth paragraph.

Harry could feel Sirius' arms tighten around his chest.

Fiftieth paragraph.

Fifty-first paragraph.

Fifty-second paragraph.

Fifty-third paragraph.
Dialogue line.
“Even if it had been on me, I don't think it would work where I went.” said Sirius.

Harry clenched his hand on the quilt, “I didn't even have a body to bury.” he said coldly.

Fifty-fourth paragraph.

“Hopefully that doesn't qualify as seven years bad luck.” said Mrs. McFinn. “You don't need anymore bad luck.”

Fifty-fifth paragraph.

“Just be careful when you stick your hand in there.” said Mrs. Weasley softly.

Fifty-sixth paragraph.

“What?” asked Madam Bones.

“Is there a magical version of a pastor or something?” said Dr. Clark.

“Uh...no.” said Remus.

Fifty-seventh paragraph.

“Knowing him, he's not hungry.” said Leroy leaning against his husband.

Fifty-eighth paragraph.

Leroy raised his hand. “Called it.”

Fifty-ninth paragraph.

“Why do you want a ghost?” asked a first year Gryffindor.

Sixtieth paragraph.

Sixty-first paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Sixty-second paragraph.

Dialogue set.
“Not the time for subtle dead jokes.” said Blaise.

Sixty-third paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Sixty-fourth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Sixty-fifth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

“Oh.” said the Gryffindor student softly.

Dialogue line.

Sixty-sixth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Sixty-seventh paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Wow, I sound stupid.” said Harry.

Dialogue set.

Sixty-eighth paragraph.

Officer McFinn looked sympathetic to Harry, but continued on, choosing to get rid of this stress inducing book once and for all.
“That's not right, anyone can, it all depends on what you yourself want.” said Officer McFinn.

“What kind of double talk is that?” said Neville.

“I cannot see him doing that.” said Officer McFinn quietly.

“Gone on? You mean to Heaven?” asked a first year Hufflepuff.

“Someone is forgetting his Sunday school lessons.” said Mrs. McFinn with a watery smile.

“Got him there.” said Ernie.
The school was silent.

End of dialogue set.

The Unspeakables nodded.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

Seventy-first paragraph.

Seventy-second paragraph.

Sirius waved his wand and summoned two large ottomans, levitated Harry's legs up onto one of them and pulled him even closer to himself.

Seventy-third paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Well, at least she's not forcing her company, she just said 'hi'.” said Ginny carefully.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

A few of the Ravenclaw students looked ashamed and stared at the floor.

Seventy-fourth paragraph.

Seventy-fifth paragraph.

Mrs. McFinn leaned over and kissed his temple. “No matter what, you still care about others.”

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

“I thought you said it was a term of endearment, if you want me to stop...” said Ginny.

“No, I want you to say it, others don't say it with quite the same amount of love.” said Luna with a slow dreamlike shrug.
“He could help,” said Neville. “I lose my stuff all the time.”

“I know losing someone you love hurts, but after a while, it just turns into a slow sort of burn...until it just...cools off...still there...but not as painful.” said Luna thoughtfully as she looked at the floor.

“It's strange where you can find common ground.” said Neville with a smile.

Neville gave Luna's hand a squeeze.

Dumbledore nodded slowly.

“So...it connects to Heaven?” asked a sixth year Slytherin.
“Wonder if the students hand it back, or the house-elves?” whispered one of the Unspeakables.

“Less is better than none.” said Flitwick.

Snape looked sideways at Malfoy who was squirming in his seat.

“Love the timing.” said Kingsley laughing.

“Beautiful.” said Sirius clapping happily.

“Make him eat something.” said Madam Pomfrey, Mrs. McFinn, and Mrs. Weasley.

The three ladies sighed in relief.

“Wonderful.” said Professor Sprout smiling proudly.
“Run, or a Patronus, you pick.” said Harry.

“Can't see him just taking a stroll.” said Harry.

“I guess I would have thought they would linger a bit, looking at each other...guess that bridge is broken.” said Ron.

“Not surprising, she's a very good looking girl.” said Sirius.

Another squeeze from Sirius' arm around Harry.

“You're crying.” said Harry looking up at the animagus, who was wiping his eyes.

“I'm crying because that despite not being around you all that much, I mean so much to you.” said the animagus.
Michael looked over at Cho excitedly.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, second sentence, first sentence.

“That's the downside of dating someone outside your house, if you can get over it than that's great, but, it can put a damper on things.” said Sirius.

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

“Oi, there was nothing wrong with me.” said Michael. “Just didn't click...”

“Sure.” said Ron.

Eighty-seventh paragraph.

“Make up your mind!” said Ginny. “Do you want me to date Harry or not?”

“He doesn't know what he wants till he doesn't have a choice anymore.” said Mrs. Weasley and Hermione.

Ron's eyes widened and stared at his mother and Hermione while his mother looked fondly at his father.

Dialogue line.

Dean's eyes widened as well, but he sent a small smile over to Ginny.

“Taken.” said Ginny.

“WHAT?” shouted Ron, upending the chessboard.

“I should learn, never mention guys around my brothers.” said Ginny shaking her head.

End of dialogue set.

“Doubt Pig was mad.” said Fred.

“Yeah, he only has two emotions that he knows about: 'Excited', and 'Really excited'.” said George.
“You'd be stunned and dragged off.” said Charlie. “I've seen it happen.”

“Should have taken your chances with the conductor, pleaded your case, I'm sure that he'd at least sympathize with you a bit.” said Bill.

“Nope, he doesn't give a damn, you get off at the station, one way or another.” said Charlie.

“Please don't let them be Death Eaters, please don't let them be Death Eaters.” said Dr. Clark.

“Yeah, that would be the best place to attack him, sure there are a bunch of adult wizards there, but they'd be more likely to grab their own kids and run with them.” said Moody.

“Please, don't share your ideas.” said McGonagall.

“The other muggles probably think that they're just a knock off of Twisted Sister.” said Dr. Clark.

“Who's that?” asked Ernie.

“I'll have to find a way to get a cassette here.” said Dr. Clark. “Shame some of my stuff may be gone, I had such a nice music library.”

“Does that word mean a good thing?” asked Fred.

“No.” said Flitwick.

“Hey!” said the twins looking hurt over to Harry.

“What you thought he wasn't going to be there?” asked Dean.
Charlie looked slowly over to the twins, who leaned away from their older brother. “We didn't buy them yet.”

“Better not buy them.” muttered Charlie.

“Giving you a little supportive welcome back to the Muggle World.” said Remus.

“Oh boy.” said Harry.

“It's not.” said Harry. “Especially what's mostly likely going to happen once you leave.”

“Oh this won't be good.” said Harry.

“You're forgetting, they haven't met Moody yet.” said Sirius.

“What are they going to do?” asked Hannah eagerly.

“Hard to forget the man that trashed their living room.” said Mrs. Weasley shaking her head.
“And we're heavily armed.” said Tonks with a giggle.

End of ninety-third paragraph.

“Love seeing that bully cringe.” said Ginny happily.

Dialogue line.

“This won't end well for me.” sighed Harry.

Dialogue line.

“Did someone finally see something?” said Hermione.

Ninety-fourth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Oh, I love you!” said Tonks throwing her arms around her mentor.

“Get off me.” said Moody with a growl but he didn't brush her off.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

“Whether Harry tells us or Mrs. Figg.” said Remus.

Dialogue line.

“Telephone.” Mr. Weasley corrected himself.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Ninety-fifth paragraph.

“He'll be sorry!” chanted the students eagerly.
Dumbledore laughed heartily.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

The students cheered loudly.

“I vote we sic Moody on them, that'll make them quake in their shoes!” said Fred.

Ninety-sixth paragraph.

“Just in case they try and cut off his communications.” said Moody.

Ninety-seventh paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“I don't want to leave him there for any longer than he has to.” said Mrs. Weasley.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Ninety-eighth paragraph, first sentence.

Harry couldn't help but brush the emotions off his cheeks, as they were starting to spring forth from his eyes.

End of chapter.

“Finally the book is done.” said Harry groaning loudly. “I don't think I could take much more of that.”

“Hopefully the next book doesn't have anything that's going to stress you out.” said Sirius.
“Well, shall we start on the next book right away?” asked Officer McFinn.

“Let's go for it.” said Harry waving his hand.

Officer McFinn reached over and picked up a new book in green leather.

“Let's see...Sixth Book Title

Snape looked up and stared.
“And the title of this book's first chapter is “First chapter” said Officer McFinn.

“Not another one.” said Harry groaning sending Fudge an exasperated look.

First paragraph.

“Typical politics.” said Dr. Clark shaking his head.

Second paragraph.

“Death Eaters.” said the adults together.

“Though Chorley may have some wizard ties.” said Sirius.

Dialogue line.

“I wouldn't want to vote for him.” said Mrs. McFinn.

Third paragraph.

“Dementors.” said Madam Bones.

Fourth paragraph.

Fifth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Sixth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Well, isn't that creepy.” said Dr. Clark.

“It is a safer way of sending messages that won't be intercepted.” said Fudge quietly.
Seventh paragraph.
Dialogue line.
Dialogue line.
Dialogue line.
Dialogue line.
Dialog line.
“'I'm now frightened, like seriously frightened.’ said Dr. Clark looking at Mrs. McFinn with raised brows.
“I know I was a little miffed.” said Officer McFinn.

Dialogue line.

Eighth paragraph.
Dialogue line.
“'He's not all that happy to see you.’ said George.

Ninth paragraph, second sentence.
“Maybe you should visit with him on a monthly basis, just to ensure that everything was alright...get him used to you.” said a second year Ravenclaw.

End of ninth paragraph.
Dialogue line.
Dumbledore had to cover his mouth to hide the smile on his face.

Dialogue line.
Dialogue line.
Dialogue line.
Dialogue set, second sentence, second pause.
Susan, Madam Bones and Emmeline gasped and looked at each other worriedly. Nightstrike clenched his fist and moved his chair closer to Emmeline's.

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

Tenth paragraph.

“No, we rationalize things we don't understand...well...some of us.” said Mrs. McFinn.

Dialogue line.

Eleventh paragraph, second sentence.

“Once again, let's see them take on a computer.” said Dr. Clark.

End of eleventh paragraph.

Twelfth paragraph.

Thirteenth paragraph, third sentence.

“Pretty much how I took the first time I heard of wizards and witches.” said Dr. Clark.

“Me too!” said Mrs. McFinn. “I thought my mother had finally driven me mad.”

End of thirteenth paragraph.

Dialogue set.

“Too bad he didn't succeed.” said Fred in a whisper.

Fourteenth paragraph.

Fifteenth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Sixteenth paragraph.
“You're not supposed to know.” said Seamus.

“You'd be carted off to a psych ward in a blink of an eye, and maybe there's a bit of vindictive pleasure thinking about how your replacement takes it.” said Sirius.

“Bet that stunned his wife when he came home with the gerbil.” said Fred.

“And the portrait was most likely right back up on the wall. “said George.

“Bet that confused the hell out of all of them.” said Remus.

“He must be very good at sitting still for a long period of time.” said Mrs. McFinn. “My mother taught me how to sit still or stand motionless for almost a complete hour, but after that, I would simply have to move.”

“Why would she do that?” asked Hermione.

“She wanted me to be the perfect social and trophy wife.” said Mrs. McFinn. “Always perfectly poised, and graceful. Now I get my hands dirty in the kitchen, all those years...wasted...and I love it.” said Mrs. McFinn joyfully.

End of nineteenth paragraph.
“And that children, is called 'denial'.” said Angelina.

Twentieth paragraph, second sentence, third comma.

“Nice.” said Sirisus as Officer McFinn spelled out the word “serious”.

End of twentieth paragraph.

“Not the Prime Minister I had met.” said Harry. “And I haven’t met with the Queen with the Prime Minister there to meet me. I pretty much only see her and the staff.”

Dialogue set.

“Did you bring your own whiskey or did you just help yourself?” said Lionus with a snicker.

Fudge looked down at the floor, his face red.

Twenty-first paragraph.

“So...who's whiskey did you use?” asked Dr. Clark.

“My...my own.” said Fudge. “Cannot believe you all thought I had just taken his...”

“Look at your track record.” said Harry.

Twenty-second paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Get off his back.” said Dean.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, second sentence.

“You bloody hypocrite, you were willing to say that he was possibly out and about then, but then you just disregard it when he does come back?” said Lionus.

End of dialogue set.

Twenty-third paragraph.

“I would need some sort of translator to tell me what the heck he just said. 'World Cup' was all I really got out of it.” said Dr. Clark with a laugh.

Dialogue set.

“So what happened with you today, sweetheart?” said George in a high pitched voice.

“I don't want to talk about it, you would never believe me if I told you.” said Fred.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dr. Clark groaned. “And you spent your entire adult career in politics?”

Twenty-fourth paragraph.

“I'd be hating my job if that kept happening.” said Lee.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Thanks for the words of assurance.” said Alicia.

Twenty-fifth paragraph.

Twenty-sixth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“He's got absurd things going on that cannot be explained.” said Katie.
“Wonder what happened to Chorely.” said Mrs. Weasley.

“Charming evening, isn't it?” said a sixth year Ravenclaw student.

Harry leaned back in the bowl heavily.

“It's alright, he's just an idiot.” said Sirius.

“You had no evidence.” said Sirius.

“From the wrong angle.” said Remus quietly, there was still a hint of guilt in his face.
“Finger's crossed.” said George.

Thirty-first paragraph, first sentence, first comma.

“Knock on wood.” said Officer McFinn.

End of thirty-first paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“No, understatement.” said Bill.

Dialogue set.

“And at least you didn't, but all those lives...it has not happened yet and it was a hard decision to make.” said Dumbledore wisely.

Dialogue set.

“The only one's fault is Voldemort.” said Harry.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“You can't just catch Voldemort...well...not without any Ranger help.” said Harry.

“You don't have to catch him, there's another path you can take.” said Lionus.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue set.

“Just claim it as an act of God, at least for the hurricane.” said Emmeline.
“Trust the man that knows...a bit of magic.” said Chief Hawkeye.

“They made their choice.” said Dumbledore shaking his head.

“And it's only going to get worse, I fear.” said Professor Sprout.

Susan wrapped her arms around her aunt, who held her in her own arms and patted her back.

Susan began to weep loudly.

Susan began to cry loudly and grip at her aunt desperately. Madam Bones had decided to take her out to an adjacent room to try and calm her down.
Thirty-fifth paragraph.

Emmeline gasped and her face went pale.

“You aren't going to get killed by him, no matter what, no Death Eater will get close enough to you!” said Nightstrike taking her by the hands and looking in her eyes.

Chief Hawkeye and Lionus shared a slight smile.

Emmeline wiped her eyes with an offered tissue and gave him a watery smile.

“I won't leave your side, till he's gone and out of the picture for keeps.” said Nightstrike kissing her brow.

Tempest stared.

“Thank you.” hiccuped Emmeline.

“Well, never thought someone would pen him down.” said Dr. Nicodemus.

“Looks like he's been tied up.” said Lionus quietly.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

Thirty-sixth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“And he warned you.” said Bill nodding over to Dumbledore.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Mr. Weasley ran a hand down his face, he could feel his stomach plummet down to his feet.

Thirty-seventh paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“He can't do anything on a good day.” said Ron quietly.
Dialogue set.

“We all united that we hate you.” said Harry.

Thirty-eighth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

“Got to fix all the problems as fast and thoroughly as possible.” said Leroy.

Thirty-ninth paragraph.

“Well, he's off teh the same start.” said Hagrid shaking his head.

Dialogue set, second sentence.

“Wonder what for? If he was asking for help, I'm sure that Dumbledore would have given it.” said Ernie.

Dialogue set, third sentence.

“What?” said Hermione.

“I'm thinking I'm the boy.” said Harry rolling his eyes. “And you would have to do a lot of talking to convince to do anything with you. After all the crap you pulled.”

End of dialogue set.

“Scrimgeour was the next Minister?” said Tonks. “Wonder what he's going to be like?”

Fortieth paragraph.

Dialogue line.
“Rufus’?” said Dr. Clark, he had to stuff his fist in his mouth to stifle his laughter.

“That's what I named my first cat.” said Mrs. McFinn staring at the book, Dr. Clark couldn't contain it anymore and laughed loudly.

Dialogue set.

Forty-first paragraph.

Forty-second paragraph, first sentence.

“Yeah, got that impression when I met him the first time.” said Tonks.

Forty-second paragraph, second sentence.

“Death Eater shot a curse at his kneecap, shattered it on contact. St. Mungos healed it up, but he still can't run as fast as he used to.” said Moody. “Told him he should used CONSTANT VIGILANCE!”

The students had not heard it for a while, and were beginning to get used to it, but there were still a few that thought he was all done, squeaked and fell out of their chairs.

End of forty-second paragraph.

“Maybe having an Auror as the Minister in the times of war is a good thing, he'll have them on his mind first and foremost, keep the people safe.” said a third year Ravenclaw.

Dialogue line.

Forty-third paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Bet he's wishing that we couldn't do that.” said Bill.

“But that probably answers the question of how Madam Bones' door was locked on the inside.” said Charlie.

Dialogue line.
“Don't blame you.” said Hannah.

Dialogue set.

“I would have said top notch, being the Prime Minister, but right now...I'm seeing some gaping holes.” said Officer McFinn.

Forty-fourth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, first sentence.

Several adults laughed, as well as a few students.

“Oh, my god...” said Sirius wiping his eyes. “That's beautiful.”

“Well, I know what I'm doing.” said Kingsley nodding, “Protecting the Prime Minister, I'm happy with that assignment.

End of dialogue set.

“No doubt.” said McGonagall, a hand covering her smile.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“I thought he said I did good work.” said Kingsley with a smirk.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“I hope his debating skills are a bit better.” said Hermione.
“I hope that he wants to be impersonating a duck.” said Sirius.

“Have to say, Scrimgeour is hilarious when he wants to be.” said Tonks.

“Well, at least it didn't succeed.” said Remus.

“Not being alone with Death Eaters will also help.” said Moody.

“Way to not offer any hope.” said Charlie.

“Offering false hope will only come back to bite you.” said Percy wisely.

“No...” groaned the students together, Fudge turned bright red.

Dumbledore had to shake his head, with a smile on his face.

“That's what they tell us too.” said Lionus.
“And that makes things a bit harder.” said Mr. Weasley nodding.

“And he’s really rethinking of a second stint as Prime Minister?” said Fred.

“Why does it mention the Minister?” asked Dennis. “What does that have to do with Harry?”

“Maybe Harry is hiding up in the room somewhere.” said Colin excidedly.

“No, he's not there.” said Officer McFinn.

“But then...” said the Creevey brothers together.

“Just to show that while there are big changes in the Ministry, something things will be hard to change.” said Officer McFinn.

“So far...not all that bad.” said Harry with a shrug. “Let's move on.”

“I agree.” came a cool voice from behind the bowl.

Harry turned in his seat and saw Glacier standing behind the seat. He was looking down at Harry with a slight smile and looked up when Cheif Hawkeye addressed him.

“Finally come down to the readings?”

“I think it would be beneficial for me to be on hand, and not all the way up in the suite. But I shall refrain from speaking and making any remark that may not be in Harry’s best interest.” said Glacier taking out a his white birch wand and summoned a crystalline chair with fur lining the seat and the back. He levitated the chair to the right side of the bowl, so that he had a clear view of everyone else in the room and Harry.

“Anyone else want to sit in? No? Good...let’s go.” said Sirius looking back towards the door and then smiled over to the spectral presence in the middle of the room.
“Well, let's see...Chapter Two is the next chapter title.” said Officer McFinn.

Snape spat out the tea he was drinking and stared in shock at the book in the Officer's hand.

First paragraph.

“Wonder what that place looks like in a more cheerful setting?” said Mrs. McFinn, “Like daylight.”

Second paragraph.

Third paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Fourth paragraph.

“That fox wasn't hurting anybody!” said Charlie angrily.

Fifth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Cissy?” said Draco quietly.

Snape reached down slowly and patted Draco's hand.

Sixth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Mrs. Malfoy?” asked a first year Slytherin.

Seventh paragraph.

Dialogue line.
“Two guesses who that is,” said Sirius.

“Uh...Grawp?” said Fred pretending to think.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Eighth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Snape rolled his eyes.

Ninth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Tenth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Snape snorted, as if the person doubting his trustworthiness was a better choice. Granted he was a spy for Dumbledore, and he was working against the both of them...but that was beside the point.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

The students gasped.

“I thought we told them already,” said Sirius.

Dialogue set.

“What's got her so desperate?” asked Hermione.
“Not for that poor little fox.” said Charlie with a scowl.

The students all turned and stared at the Potions Master.

“Of course not, I'm normally here.” said Snape.

Sirius couldn't help but chuckle.

“He always loved eavesdropping on people.” said Remus.
“Bout the only thing he can be useful for, other than spying on people.” said Sirius.

“Bet he's backtracking now.” said a sixth year Ravenclaw with a snigger.

“What is that stuff compared to the other kinds of wine?” asked Mrs. McFinn.

“Not as good, but for those that want something that says it was definitely made in the magical world, that's pretty much it.” said Harry quickly.

The adults in the bowl and Mrs. Weasley turned and looked at him.

“I only had a sip.” said Harry quietly.

Harry made a show of pretending to spit on the floor, Sirius laughed and draped an arm around his godson's shoulders.
“Idiot.” said Mr. Weasley quietly.

“Knowing who's side he's on, please tell him.” muttered Remus.

“All questions he was prepared to answer for quite some time.” said Dumbledore.

“Never a good thing.” said Ron.
“Got her there.” said Harry.

“But you have...” said Draco looking up at his godfather.

“And he'd only have the crazy ass bitch in prison.” said Harry quietly.

“Harry!” whispered Remus.

“Let that one slide.” said Sirius waving his hand at Remus.

Neville tried not to snort with laughter.

Despite the sound that he was going to hand over all the information about Dumbledore to Voldemort, the students couldn't help but laugh.
“Well, you have pretty good answers going in.” said Lionus.

“Ah, good luck with that answer.” said Nightstrike.

“If he shares everything with you, I'm thinking that you're either delusional or his bedmate.” said Harry.

“Wow...you're sharptongued today.” said Sirius.

“I no longer care.” said Harry.

“If this is him venting, let him have it.” said Glacier firmly.

“Uh, oh.” said Draco.
“Mother doesn't like anyone disrespecting father.” said Draco covering his eyes.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

“Ooh.” snickered Sirius. “Oh, Merlin..”

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, fourth sentence, second comma.

Nightstrike made a motion to leap onto Snape, but held back after a quick look over to his Captain and Chief. He instead decided instead to wrap an arm around Emmeline and hold her close to his chest.

End of dialogue set.

Thirty-second paragraph.

Sirius raised his hand in a toast as well, but his middle finger was jutting out.

“Sirius!” scolded Mrs. Weasley.

“His future self started this one.” said Sirius.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Must not have let her in on many conversations.” said Ernie.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.
“I would have been fired.” said Snape with a roll of his eyes. “At the very least.”
“...breathing at the very least.” said Dumbledore with a cold smile.
Snape's eyes widened and then he turned his gaze to the floor.

“Not unless they have a complete one-eighty in beliefs.” said Harry.

“Bite me.” whispered Harry.
“You're fun.” said Sirius with a bark like laugh.

“And now, your opinion?” said Mr. Weasley.
“He's still overly lucky and has moderately talented friends.” said Snape. “And still lazy.”
Harry smirked.

Dumbledore smiled warmly.

Harry turned and stared at the Headmaster in shock.
End of dialogue set.

Thirty-third paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Thirty-fourth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Thirty-fifth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Get on with it!” said Fred.

Dialogue line.

Thirty-sixth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Fine then, but move on!” said George.

Thirty-seventh paragraph.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

“Bet that's a slap to Bella's face.” said Ginny gleefully.

Dialogue line.

“High opinion of herself, doesn't she?” said Hermione.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.
Draco tensed and sat up in the chair, what did the Dark Lord want with him?

Dialogue set, second sentence.

“Draco's looking paler than normal, isn't he?” said Dr. Clark as he looked over to the boy sitting next to the Potions Master.

End of dialogue set.

Draco began to shake his head nervously.

Thirty-eighth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Thirty-ninth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Wonder what I have to do?” said Draco in a hushed whisper.

“Something you do not have to worry about now.” said Snape.

Dialogue line.

Fortieth paragraph.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue set.

“And that can get you killed.” said Professor McGonagall.

Dialogue line.

Forty-first paragraph.

Forty-second paragraph, second sentence.
“Do what?” asked Draco looking worried. “What does he want to force me to do?”

End of forty-second paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Of course not, his Death Eaters are his slaves, nothing more than that.” said Harry shaking his head.

Dialogue line.

Forty-third paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“We'll thank god she can't procreate.” said Leroy.

Rudolph turned and stared.

“Barren as a wasteland, her aunt warned me that I would have to have a surrogate.” said Leroy.

Forty-fourth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Forty-fifth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Forty-sixth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“He won't come to harm, unless he acts like the annoying little toerag he always does, then he'll get smacked by Hermione's fist.” said Dean with a snigger.

Dialogue line.

Forty-seventh paragraph.

Dialogue line.
“Oh no...” said Terry.

Snape rubbed his eyes and sighed. “I had hoped to go through my life without taking another such vow.”

Dialogue line.

Forty-eighth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Forty-ninth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“That book better not have the exact details how to do this!” said Mrs. Weasley looking worriedly at the students.

Fiftieth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“I love seeing her getting the mickey taken out of her.” said Leroy happily.

Fifty-first paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Fifty-second paragraph.

Fifty-third paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Fifty-fourth paragraph.

“Well, they don't mention the exact way to do it, but if I catch any student doing it, hearing of it or not, I will have the party suspended.” said McGonagall.

“And that doesn't sound like a horrible vow.” said Remus quietly, “He could have sworn to much worse.”
“Never mind.” said Remus.

“Oh damn...whatever it is.” said Bill.

“I'm sort of missing the fun chapters.” said Charlie looking at the book and leaning away.
“This is going to be a hard book to listen to again, isn't it?” asked Harry.

“Well, in part.” said Officer McFinn sending Hermione and Ron a quick glance. “Okay, this one is called Third Chapter.

“Now it just sounds like a spoiled toddler.” said Sirius.

First paragraph, first sentence.

Sirius laughed out loud. “You must have been exhausted if you are snoring! You are the complete opposite of your dad. You would think that trolls were sleeping in the room with how he roared in the night.”

First paragraph, second sentence.

“Oh, that's charming.” said Harry smiling as the other people in the room laughed.

End of first paragraph.

“You are getting some sun this summer. I'm going to lock you out of the house for two hours, just plant yourself by the pool or better yet, in the pool.” said Sirius.

Second paragraph, second sentence, third comma.

“Just like my old room!” said Tonks throwing her hands up into the air.

“And if you had locked your door, there still would be all that rubbish on the floor!” said Sirius throwing up his own hands. “You must have drove your mum insane with all that!”

End of second paragraph.

Article Title

“Yay, a new name.” groaned Harry with a roll of his eyes.
“Don't care, we know it already, and it's been confirmed!” said Fred.

“These books are starting to come back to bite us.” said Speckerton shaking his head.

“I have a stubborn streak to me.” said Dumbledore his eyes twinkling madly.

“Aw, Gran...” said Neville blushing furiously.

“Nice how you put important stories underneath the birdcage.” said Leroy.

“He must be tired.” said Ron. “He's a light sleeper normally.”

“Those of you who don't know who they are...” said Fred.

“Please crawl out from under the rock you've been living under and join the rest of society.” said
End of leaflet, first paragraph.

Leaflet second bullet point

“Unless you work the night shifts at various locations, then please sleep at your workplace and don't leave the lights on, hide under the sink and don't make any noise.” said Lee.

“That's not funny.” said Mrs. Weasley sternly.

End of leaflet

Eighth paragraph, first sentence.

“Poor Harry.” said Hermione. “I wonder why he's not sleeping in the bed and just sleeping on the window.”

Eighth paragraph, second sentence.

Mr. Weasley looked happily over to Harry, finding a bit of a kindred spirit in the young man.

End of eighth paragraph.

Letter from Dumbledore.

“Yay! Harry can stay the summer again!” said Ron.

“Wonder what Dumbledore wants or needs Harry's help with?” asked a third year Gryffindor girl.

Ninth paragraph.

Tenth paragraph, second sentence.

All the levity that was in Dumbledore's eyes left abruptly and he bowed his head.

End of tenth paragraph.
“At least he's prepared for the worst.” said Moody.

Eleventh paragraph.
“I am highly punctual.” said Dumbledore, recovering with a smile.

Twelfth paragraph, second sentence.
“Well, aren't I having some awkward growing pains.” said Harry shaking his head with a smirk.

End of twelfth paragraph.

Thirteenth paragraph, first sentence.
“Don't show Albus that, he'll rearrange it all...though he can do it with a flick of a wand, he still would want to take the time to fix that jumbled mess.” said Bathilda Bagshot.

End of thirteenth paragraph.

“Someone you have no hopes of bullying.” said Flitwick smiling happily.
“And knowing me, I didn't warn him that he was coming either.” said Harry grinning brightly.

Fourteenth paragraph, second sentence.
“Guess, I had a notion to.” said Harry.

End of fourteenth paragraph.

“Nope, he didn't.” said Hannah gleefully.

Fifteenth paragraph, first sentence.
Dumbledore flinched and turned his head away from the book.
Fifteenth paragraph, fourth sentence, fourth comma.

“Aunt Petunia bought that for him.” said Harry shaking his head. “Said it brings out his complexion...don't know who she's trying to fool.”

End of fifteenth paragraph.

Dialogue set, second sentence.

Several people laughed loudly.

“Guess we've finally come to a fun chapter.” said Charlie clapping his hands.

End of dialogue set.

Sixteenth paragraph.

Dialogue set.

“Thereir what?” said George.

“It's a flower that sort of looks like a one of those fluffy dandelions only larger and purple.” said Neville quickly.

“Oh, sounds kind of neat.” said Fred. “Wasted on those two though.”

Seventeenth paragraph.

“I don't think I know of one man that has been able to bully him.” said Bathilda Bagshot.

Dialogue line.

Eighteenth paragraph.

“Not Harry's problem you're blind.” said Ginny with a sneer.

Dialogue line.
“Ah, where were you when I had to talk to the overstuffed turkey!” laughed Officer McFinn.

“I’m liking this so far.” said Harry with a laugh.

“She refused to go into my room, for various reasons, one...it’s a disaster area in her opinion.” said Harry with a roll of his eyes.

Dumbledore only smiled.

“You sure are assuming a lot.” said Sirius chuckling.

“Whatever hospitality there was to start with anyway...” said Professor Flitwick.
“He does what he wants...when he wants it.” said McGonagall.

“For what?” asked Justin.

The room was silent.

“So...that's the wound?” asked Mrs. McFinn looking horrified at the Headmaster.

“Seems, I let my guard down at a very critical time.” said Dumbledore, almost completely unfazed by the the wound his future self received.

“You may be hurt pretty bad, but you sure still have style to burn.” said Rivers.

“So her mead is something that you've never had before?” said Mrs. Weasley.

“Well, that's not all that shocking, she keeps that stuff under tight guard.” said Sirius.
“I suppose I was getting back for all the...well...I suppose for what I was willing to believe before these books came into play.” said Dumbledore.

“Oh no, Harry doesn't need to worry about anything other than classes.” said Mrs. McFinn looking at Harry. “Thought I know that you would be getting right into the thick of it at your first chance.”

Harry smiled.

“Not what I want to talk about.” said Harry.

“Meaning that I didn't want any part of it.” said Harry.

“Better you to have it than any other of my relatives.” said Sirius.

“Tact was never in his vocabulary.” said Harry.

“Sorry about that.” said Sirius. “But...hey...after all that work we put into it, I'll be damned if I hand it over to Bella or Narcissia.”

“Yeah, and it has nothing to do with you.” said Colin.
“I was of the same opinion.” said Sirius.

End of dialogue set.

“After Kreacher's treachery, it's no wonder.” said Percy.

“I wouldn't put it past her.” said Sirius.

“Oh that would be awful!” said Angelina. “That foul woman doesn't deserve anything!”

Dumbledore smiled. “No, I am of the same opinion.”

“Not a wonderful test in this situation, if it's the test I think it is.” said Rudolph.
“Yay.” said Harry mimicking Luna's dream-like voice.

“Would have been better manners not to assault them with alcoholic beverages, but that's just nitpicking.” said Dr. Clark.

“Well, here's hoping that controlling him is easier for you than it was for me.” said Sirius.

“I want to hear what the Dursleys thought of him.” said Seamus smiling gleefully.

The students cheered loudly.

“And that's after Dudley had set a mud covered dog into the house when he was five.” said Harry.

“I want to see that as a Recollection Scroll!” said Ron quickly.

“No you don't, Harry was blamed for that.” said Officer McFinn darkly.

Ron paled.

“Not even as mad as Kreacher is, would he do that.” said Sirius. “Even he has some standards.”
“Normally, what happens to a house-elf that kills their master in some plot to have someone else become their new master?” asked Mrs. McFinn.

“They're sentenced to death.” said Charlie with a firm look. “No questions asked.”

The students and the two muggles stared.

“It's conspiracy to commit murder, and I'm amazed that Dumbledore didn't hand him over to the Committee for the Disposal of Magical Creatures.” said Charlie.

“Perhaps we will find out what my reasons are.” said Dumbledore with a soft smile.

“He'd only be a constant reminder of what he did.” said Harry. “And I wouldn't be able to trust him.”

“Not just the fact of having an elf, just having him.” said Hermione.

Harry rolled his eyes.

“Not a lot of options are available if this does not work, but never has it been said that I don't think outside the figurative box.” said Dumbledore.
“Thank goodness.” said Hannah.

“Yeah, he does nothing for your appearance.” said Fred.

“Clashes horribly with your shoes.” said George.

“And then they would in turn report to you if he were to leave...keeping a tight leash on him.” said Mr. Weasley.

“After being stuck in a house all this time, he'd be excited to get out and stretch his legs and wings.” said Sirius.

“Can't really see them all that concerned anyway.” said Tonks. “Not with more dangerous people out and about than a hippogriff that acted normally.”
“Yet still had some hope.” said Harry.

Dialogue line.

Thirty-eighth paragraph, first paragraph.

Mrs. Weasley clicked her tongue, but had a fond smile for Harry and all her boys.

End of thirty-eighth paragraph.

Thirty-ninth paragraph.

“You didn't want to see him continue to mess with them?” said Bill laughing.

Fortieth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Am I a year younger than what I had thought?” said Harry curiously.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Oh my god, they remembered my birthday.” said Harry.

Dialogue line.

Forty-first paragraph.

Dialogue set.

“Glad they listened.” said Harry shaking his head.
Forty-second paragraph.

“They must have felt it too.” said Luna.

Dialogue set, third sentence.

“And I did not even believe the worse half of the truth.” said Dumbledore burying his face in his hands.

End of dialogue set.

Forty-third paragraph.

“Thank god.” said Harry and the teachers together.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

“I have this sinking feeling that something is going to happen.” said Mrs. McFinn. “Something really bad.”

“What makes you say that so soon?” asked Dr. Clark.

“Couldn't this have been transpired in a letter directly to them? What made Dumbledore come to the house directly to face them with Harry right there...it's sort of like...final words...” said Mrs. McFinn quietly.

Forty-fourth paragraph, second sentence.

“Not in the same way as Harry, no.” said Dr. Clark.

End of forty-fourth paragraph.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.
“That can't be good.” said Remus.

Forty-fifth paragraph, first sentence.

Dumbledore chuckled warmly.

Forty-fifth paragraph, second sentence, first comma.

“I'm still shocked how nicely that thing folds up.” said Sirius.

Forty-fifth paragraph, third sentence.

“Bet she didn't like that.” said Neville.

End of chapter.

“Flighty my butt, she keeps coming after me.” said Harry.

“That was four.” said Officer McFinn looking up from the book.

“You have to be kidding me, it's not even lunchtime yet!” said Ron.

“I think we can get away with one more chapter or so, they aren't all that bad yet.” said Harry.

“Are you sure?” said Glacier.

“Yeah, let's go.” said Harry.

“Remember, you don't have to...” said Chief Hawkeye.

“I know, but one more chapter isn't going to make that much of a difference. We'll have one more and then lunch, then we'll call it a day if it's bad.” said Harry.

“Alright then.” said Officer McFinn. “The next chapter is Fourth Chapter”

“Wow, what's Slughorn got to do with this book?” asked Sirius.

“Who is that?” asked Parvati.

“He was the Potion master before Snape.” said Remus. “He taught us potions and was the Head of Slytherin house.”

“So he's like Snape?” asked Neville quietly.
“Oh, no...almost complete opposite.” said Sirius. “Snape is cool compared to Slughorn, but Slughorn is infinitely nicer.”

Snape scoffed.
The New Teacher

First paragraph, first sentence.

“Well, you had never been alone with him other than in the Office of a teacher or his own, so...being outside school with the Headmaster may be a bit offsetting.” said Remus.

“I know, when he joined us for a drink at the Leaky Cauldron once, scared the magic out of me.” said Sirius.

End of first paragraph.

“Prized possessions can be replaced.” said Dumbledore. “And Reparo is a wonderful spell to have in one’s arsenal.”

Second paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Mixed messages again.” said Harry throwing his hands up again.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, first sentence.

“And no one would dare.” said Dumbledore, his voice all of a sudden growing cold.

“Potion time, Albus.” said Madam Pomfrey levitating a phial to the forefront of Dumbledore’s face.

End of dialogue set.

Third paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.
“And, no offense, I wouldn't want to touch it.” said Lee quietly.

“I threw up...no doubt about it, I threw up.” said Harry.

“Yeah, I'm not fond of Apparating either.” said Sirius.

“Why is it that you don't like any kind of travel other than brooms?” said Hermione.

“Cause all the other ones hurt.” said Harry.

“And you don't quite get the adrenaline rush any other way.” said George.

“Finally a reprieve.” said Harry as he rubbed his own scar.

“Has it been hurting?” asked Sirius.

“No, I've blocked him out.” said Harry. “But it still has a slow dull burn going on.”
Dumbledore smiled.

Eleventh paragraph.

Dialogue set, second sentence.

Several of the teachers and students snickered.

End of dialogue set.

“Slughorn?” said Remus. “But...he's not a Defense Teacher, he's a Potions Master.”

“He tried standing in for Defense, he can do counter curses and curses...but he was more in-tuned with potion making then wand work.” said Sirius.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, first sentence.

Sirius, Remus and Snape blinked but McGonagall nodded. “I see where you're going.”

End of dialogue set.

Twelfth paragraph.

Dialogue line.
“That's rude.” said Mrs. Weasley. “And it's commonplace to have spells on the house against people doing that.”

“Saves all the walking.” said Harry with a shrug.

Dialogue set, second sentence.

“Oh, you should have had more presence in the earlier books.” said Officer McFinn smiling.

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, first sentence.

“No point in telling her about the rules of myself allowing it or the lightning strikes.” said Dumbledore. “I know a few of the more risk taking students would attempt at gaining entry during a thunderstorm.”

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue set, second sentence, first comma.

“If Horace is doing what he had done during the first war, then it is because I had just finally tracked him down.” said Dumbledore with a smile. The other students looked confused, but he did not elaborate.

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, first sentence.

“Good in the sense that he is more towards the side of goodness than evil, or good in the sense that he will do an exceptional job as Minister?” said Dumbledore with a twitching smile.
“A vast improvement over the last Minister.” said Moody.

“Harry doesn't have the nerve?” said George in shock.

“The world has ended...it's official.” said Fred.

“Susan must be really shaken up, she hasn't come back yet.” said Hannah sympathetically.

“I've seen that...” said Dr. Clark softly. “Even if their hand is completely gone, people still use whatever's left...”

“Meaning, we won't know what happened till the end of the book.” said the students together.

“I'd say let's start up another betting pool...but I don't want to.” said Fred.

“Yeah, me either.” said George.
“Well that was a waste of a leaflet.” said Charlie.

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, first sentence.

“How often do I get visitors.” said Harry shaking his head. “And since...I can't see myself leaving the house for very long.” he finished quietly.

End of dialogue set.

“Raspberry.” said Harry.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“I'll be honest, I can't really see a Death Eater checking jams preferences...” said Moody shaking his head. “Now, tea preferences...yes.”

“What?” said Ron looking at Moody in disbelief.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, fourth sentence.

“Oh...god...that's terrible.” said Mrs. McFinn looking horrified.

“Wonder if that's where people got the inspirations for zombie flicks.” said Dr. Clark.

Dumbledore looked at Harry out of the corner of his eye and gave an involuntary shudder.

“What's wrong?” asked Sirius.

“Just...if Harry had been killed, I'm sure that Tom would not have hesitated in making Harry an Inferi.” said Dumbledore quietly.

Sirius clutched at Harry a bit tighter.
“Hold up...” said Dean as he mapped out the path they took in his head and hands. “There’s only three stone houses with gardens in that town....and roughly..you're at my aunt and uncle's house! What the hell are you doing there?”

“Easy mate, easy.” said Seamus trying to calm his best mate down. “Maybe they weren't home...or maybe you have the wrong directions.”

Dean looked stricken and was thrashing about in Seamus' arms.

“That was a family heirloom, it's over a hundred years old!” said Dean cringing in his seat.

“Wait, what?” said Dean snapping out of his anguish. “They don't have a piano...neither of them can play...”

“Maybe it's not their house...” said Seamus.
“Maybe...”

Twenty-second paragraph, fourth sentence.
“But they did have a crystal Tiffany chandelier.” whimpered Dean.

Twenty-second paragraph, sixth sentence.
Dean griped his throat. “Oh my god...”

End of twenty-second paragraph.
Dialogue line.
Dean buried his face in his hands.

Twenty-third paragraph.
Dialogue set.
Dean flinched. “What would this Slughorn bloke be doing at my aunt and uncle's house?”

Dialogue line.
Dialogue line.
Dialogue line.

Twenty-fourth paragraph.
“What the?” asked Seamus as he patted Dean's back.

Dialogue line.

Twenty-fifth paragraph.
Dialogue line.
“What are you doing at my Aunt's house? Did he lead the Death Eaters there?” shouted Dean angrily at the book.

“Calm down son.” said Officer McFinn. “Your Aunt and Uncle are fine.”

Twenty-sixth paragraph.

Dialogue set.

“How do you make yourself look like furniture?” said Mrs. McFinn coming back to the bowl after handing Dean a cup of tea.

Dialogue line.

Twenty-seventh paragraph.

Dialogue set.

“So...he faked the whole thing?” said Dean. “Where is my family?”

Dialogue line.

Twenty-eighth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Twenty-ninth paragraph.

“That sounds kind of cool.” said Seamus weakly.

“He better damn well fix the grandfather clock AND the chandelier.” said Dean.

Thirtieth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Good.” said Dean darkly. “I loved that clock.”

Dialogue line.
“And my that was my Aunt's family heirloom...she always praises that thing, every Sunday it's cleaning day.” said Dean.

Thirty-first paragraph.

Dialogue set, second sentence.

“Well, no shit, we're trying to limit how much the dragons have to stand still and get drained for it, they're not too fond of donating blood.” muttered Charlie.

End of dialogue set.

Thirty-second paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Strain it in a blood sieve and it should be fine.” said Snape softly.

Thirty-third paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Thirty-fourth paragraph.

“If I didn't know Horace...I'd say he sounded a bit creepy.” said Sirius.

Thirty-fifth paragraph.

“Now I'm concerned.” said Dr. Clark.

“It's not what you think.” said Dumbledore.

Dialogue line.

Thirty-sixth paragraph.

Dialogue line.
“Just don’t dent his head with the glasses.” said Harry.

Thirty-seventh paragraph, second sentence.
“Albus...you sneaky...” said Flitwick shaking his head.
“I am unsure as to what you mean.” said Dumbledore with a smile.

End of thirty-seventh paragraph.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Oh, he has more than enough stamina.” said Sirius shaking his head.

Dialogue line.

Thirty-eighth partagraph.
“In my aunt’s house.” said Dean with a snarl. “What did he do with them?”

Thirty-ninth paragraph.
“Sounds like he brought half the stuff with him.” said Dean. “My aunt hates clutter.”

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Fortieth paragraph, first sentence.
Harry noticed Dumbledore had sat straight up in his chair, his eyes widened in shock. Something about that ring made him sit up and take notice, but the Headmaster was silent as to the reason behind his reaction.
“The precautions were for Death Eaters, the scene was for you.” said Lionus.

Dean heaved a sigh of relief. They had talked about a second honeymoon for about two years, glad they were out of the country, if all that stuff was going on...though he felt a little bit violated for them over their house being subjected to a squatter.

“That explains where the piano came from.” said Dean.

“Wow, talk about school loyalty.” said Terry.

“She's spewing lies...again.” said Harry shaking his head.

“Not a whole lot of people do.” said Emmeline.
“What a charming host.” said Fred.

“Absolutely delightful.” said George.

“Come back when you can't stay so long!” said the twins waving happily.

“Wait..what?” asked Colin.

“Anyone else shocked that he actually uses the bathroom? He's sort of a mystical, almost ethereal being...didn't think he'd have do.” said Dr. Clark quietly.

Mrs. McFinn giggled and nodded.

“You were just a stop along the way as far as I knew.” said Harry with a shrug.

“How about we focus on something other than my eyes.” said Harry shaking his head.

“But they're so pretty!” said a first year Hufflepuff, who blushed bright red when he turned and stared at her.
“Hmpf. Yes, well. You shouldn’t have favorites as a teacher, of course, Dialogue set, third sentence, first comma.

“Everyone has favorites...and he had the biggest collection of favorites.” said Sirius.

End of dialogue set.

Harry's bored face slowly turned to something resembling a pleased expression as he turned to face the book.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, sixth sentence.

“Oh, don't mention me, don't mention me.” said Sirius cringing.

End of dialogue set.

Forty-sixth paragraph.

Sirius placed a hand on Harry's neck and rubbed it slowly.

Dialogue set.

“Nice to know that I'm part of a Collector's plate set.” said Sirius.

Forty-seventh paragraph, first sentence.

Sirius's smile nearly lit up the entire bowl and he threw his arms around his godson. “We think alike!”

“You'd better a few more sessions with Glacier if that's the case.” said Remus.

“Oi!”
“That's a quick defense.” said Ron grinning.

“Horace better be careful, he's never had a prize that so hard to get as Harry.” said Dumbledore. “And Harry is a prize worth holding onto.”

“What are you talking about?” asked Harry with a quirked brow.

“You'll find out, if he takes the job.” said Dumbledore with a smile. “And I'm sure that I will warn you about it very soon.”

“What would that be helpful towards?” asked Seamus.

“Investing.” said Bill. “What treasures they just found and certified...there's a bunch of different things.”

“Fired.” said Leroy. “Doesn't work for me anymore.”

“I wish I got a hamper of candy every year.” said a third year Slytherin.

“Wonder what he hopes to get out of me, if he tries to collect me?” said Harry. “He doesn't know that I cook, so...he can't be thinking about a free meal at my restaurant.”

“Is that what you've decided?” said Dumbledore with a bright smile.

“It's what I'm leaning a lot more towards.” said Harry.

Chief Hawkeye looked over to Lionus and Glacier with a sly smile.

Fiftieth paragraph.

Dialogue set.

Fifty-first paragraph.

“Apparently, the answer is no.” said Katie.

Dialogue line.

Fifty-second paragraph.

Dialogue set, second sentence.

“I'm not in the Order.” said Flitwick. “I would like to join if I may?”

Dumbledore nodded.

End of dialogue set.

“How about the survival rate after the Dark Lord is defeated, what's your position on that?” said Harry crossing his arms.

Dialogue set, first sentence.

“We can't all be awesome like me.” said Sirius.

“Thank goodness.” said Snape rolling his eyes.

End of dialogue set.

Fifty-third paragraph.
“That did it.” said Dumbledore smiling broadly.

Fifty-fourth paragraph.

Dialogue set.

“No offense, but I'd rather not depend on the Ministry to protect me.” said Harry rolling his eyes.

“None taken.” said Madam Bones as she came back with Susan. Her niece seemed quite a bit calmer, but was gripping her hand tightly.

Fifty-fifth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, second sentence.

Mrs. McFinn blinked and then leaned over to look at the Headmaster in shock. Dumbledore only smiled.

End of dialogue set.

Fifty-sixth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“You were trying to get rid of him just fifteen minutes ago!” said Fred.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Fifty-seventh paragraph.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.
“No one twisted his arm...he made the decision on his own.” said Dumbledore.

“After you sent me in to do some psychological warfare.” said Harry.

“Never doubted he would ask for one.” said Dumbledore.

“He’s amusing, but not really one of my favorite people.” said Harry leaning back in the bowl.

Hermione blushed and smiled over to Harry.

“Sounds like a giant spider, tweaking each strand of his web.” said Harry.
Sixty-third paragraph.

Harry smiled in spite of himself.

Dialogue set, first sentence.

“Warning me about anyone...I tend to keep away from them.” said Harry.

End of dialogue set.

“Makes me feel like a china doll.” said Harry.

Sixty-fourth paragraph, first sentence.

Dumbledore turned and stared at Harry.

End of sixty-fourth paragraph.

A sigh of relief escaped the Headmaster's lips, at least it was something that he was aware of.

Sixty-fifth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Sixty-sixth paragraph, second sentence.

Mr. and Mrs. Weasley blushed happily.

“Where does our house rate?” asked Mrs. McFinn and Sirius together.

“Ah, third and fourth.” said Harry pointing to Sirius and Mrs. McFinn. “Number one is here.”

“Alright then.” said Sirius with a satisfied smile.

End of sixty-sixth paragraph.
“Even me?” said Mrs. McFinn.

Harry looked off to the side.

Dialogue line.

Sixty-seventh paragraph, second sentence.

“It’s not like Skeeter’s interview.” said Dumbledore with a kind smile.

End of sixty-seventh paragraph.

Dialogue set.

“I am.” said Sirius holding onto Harry tightly, but Harry looked down.

Sixty-eighth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“And it will be.” said Sirius.

Sixty-ninth paragraph.

The hand around Harry’s middle, tightened slightly.

Dialogue line.

Seventieth paragraph.

“Future you had better send him a few letters.” said Sirius looking over to Remus.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

The adults in the room smiled, but inwardly hoped that he would not have to do so.
"Not the most pleasant of showers." said Dumbledore.

“They simply grasp at a desperate wish, but they do not know.” said Dumbledore.

“No offense meant, Arthur.” said Dumbledore.

“Just have a bad feeling what the conversations will entail.” said Harry.

“You're using bigger words.” said Sirius.

“Finally.” whispered McGonagall looking up. “Should have done that, the moment that You-Know-Who returned.”
“‘Bout damn time.” said Sirius.

“Thank Merlin.” said Harry and Snape together.

“Nightmare comes to mind.” said Harry.

“Cataclysm is my word of choice.” said Snape.

Dumbledore nodded. “In case you need to flee, your safety is paramount.”
“Only if I hop on a broom and do some dives...that's the only one thing I would do there.” said Harry.

End of chapter

“If Dumbledore is saying your thin, I want to know just how much you were weighing at the time.” said Madam Pomfrey.

“Seven and a half stones*.” said Officer McFinn.

The room was silent.

“How much does he weigh now?” Snape asked, which was surprising.

“Eight and a half.” said Officer McFinn. “That's with all the snacks and the extra food going on...and the not going to classes and burning up all the calories.”

“Well, let's continue on with that and have a good hearty lunch.” said Mrs. McFinn.

“And while that's going on,” said Sirius as the others walked over to the large table of food. “let's plan what we're going to do for the rest of the day.”

Harry shook his head.

*105 lbs

119 lbs
Crash Courses

Today was the fateful day that the student's carefree school year came to an end. A foolish fifth year Hufflepuff mentioned what they were going to do for their O.W.L.s at the end of the year, and that caused the teachers present to gasp, (all but Snape) and realize that perhaps that their nightly discussions would most likely not be enough to get the students through their end of the year exams, especially those in fifth and seventh year.

So, it was decided that a firm four chapters a day rule was placed and that once they were done, the students would report to specially prepared remedial classes to make up for the almost two lost months. To aide in the process, Rivers summoned up a syllabus of what each year needed to learn and they were distributed among the adults that offered to help and were quickly assessed if they had the capabilities to teach.

McGonagall took care of the fifth years and up, to ensure that they were not going to go backwards with a new teacher at this crucial time, so that she could focus her attentions on making sure that Umbridge's actions would not hurt their futures with such important tests coming.

Dumbledore took his old position as Transfiguration teacher, but settled on the fourth years and under, and what was truly amazing, was that he did not need a roll of parchment to see what was age appropriate. It was like riding a broomstick, you never forget.

Professors Flitwick, and Sprout had decided to follow the same suit, minus using the Headmaster, as he was already taken.

Bathilda Bagshot, the author of A History of Magic, said she would take over the classes...strangely enough...for all the years. She would take an entire hour to lecture each year, all the houses together into the Great Hall and talk to them about the subject at hand, and she wasn't shy about saying she'd send a chalk piece at them if they nodded off.

Flitwick had asked Remus to assist him in Charms class, as the position for History of Magic teacher was taken by the woman that wrote the textbook.

At first, Professor Sprout was unsure who could help her with the classes...but she happened to see Leroy and Rudolph sitting there, talking to Harry...how could she possibly forget them? She hurried over and asked them both to assist her, without missing a beat they nodded and followed her over to Rivers to get the lesson plans she needed them to follow.
Snape had abstained from asking anyone to assist him, and walked down to his dungeons to await the students that were due. He didn't expect for Dr. Nicodemus to come down as well, merely to assist the students getting their ingredients and speed things along.

While all the other classes had been take care of and help had been distributed, there was one class that had no one to even turn and ask for help.

Defense Against the Dark Arts.

Rivers had taken it upon himself to teach the fifth years and up, to gauge just how prepared they were for their all important tests at the end of the year and as for the younger students, who better to teach a Defense class than an retired Auror? Moody was at first a bit hard pressed to get him to take on the position, but that all changed with Tonks sidled up to him and told him that he could teach all the students how to defend themselves from the Dark Arts...he was sold.

-=-=-=-=-=-=

“Alright fifth years, I want everyone to line up! Gryffindor I want you to face the Hufflepuffs, Ravenclaws, face the Slytherins. I'm not going to be playing referee by having the Slytherins and the Gryffindors tear each other apart.” said Rivers.

Harry, Hermione and Ron grinned at each other.

“Now, I want to see where you all are at individually so I can see where we need to focus on. Once we figure that out, we'll move on. Potter, due to the assessment and your...condition... I'll just skip you this time. I have a base level at where you're at anyway.” said Rivers. “We'll start with the Gryffindors, the rest of you take a seat.”

He took an hour to assess where everyone was at, both practical and theory wise. It was just as he feared, they were a bit behind thanks to the continuous change of professors year in and year out. They had a good grasp on some of the curses, counter curses and quite a few of the creatures they would have a chance of meeting...but they were missing out on about twenty-five percent of what they should know almost like second nature.

However, for those in the D.A, he felt that they had picked up the slack just a bit and were only about ten percent behind. So he had planned on pairing up the D.A members with some of the lacking members...Goyle and Crabbe were exempt, they would have to have special remedial classes with Snape, the only teacher they really listened to. So that settled for the two brawn over brains students...
Now he just had to fix what that fool Gilderoy Lockhart ruined...damned fool and his damned books.

-======

That night, no one was going about the school, meeting with friends or toasting things in the fireplaces...everyone was working on homework, practicing spells and reading passages from textbooks.

Ron and Hermione were scrambling to get their own work down and help the younger years with their homework questions. Ron was there to answer any Care of Magical Creatures questions (as he seemed to find quite easy, minus the on hands dealing with the more dangerous creatures that Hagrid would have the habit of bringing out) and Hermione was there to answer...any other question.

Harry had decided to stop in and help Hermione with all the questions that the other Gryffindors had. Which turned into a bit of a blessing, despite the fact that he could not cast spells, he would tell them to adjust their grips or other slight difference to amplify the effectiveness of the spell.

While the others were huddled in their small study groups, Harry, Ron and Hermione gathered at their own table, relishing being together after being apart for so long.

-======

“Well, a few more sessions like we had done today, and perhaps we may be able to pick up where we were slacking off.” said Flitwick.

“I will admit, having the children interested in some potions is much better than the drooling brats I've had to deal with the past few years.” said Snape with a sip of his tea.

“What potions were they interested in?” asked Remus as he poured himself a cup.

“All the potions listed in Potter's books.” grumbled Snape. “All little hobgoblins, the lot of them. Hobgoblin see...hobgoblin do...”

“If it get's them interested, then I am all for it.” said McGonagall.

“Charlie an' me haven't had to worry 'bout a few of them much, seems they've been doin' some readin' on their own...” said Hagrid proudly.

“I think with the proper time off from reading everyday, and if we keep this new system in place, we should have the students back up to snuff,” said Dumbledore with a bright smile. “How was Defense class, Rivers? You're awfully quiet.”

“Defense Against the Dark Arts class is going to be a bit of hassle, I suggest having the classes be a bit longer than the rest.” said Rivers somberly.

“And what, pray tell, would make Defense class more important than the rest of the classes?” said Snape quirking a brow.

“Lockhart never spent a year teaching your classes.” said Rivers darkly.

“That will do it.” said Professor Sprout shaking her head.

Snape rolled his eyes.

“I see no reason as to why we cannot allow the Defense classes to be twenty minutes longer at the most, we can all give up a few minutes to give him the allotted time he needs.” said Dumbledore with a smile to the teachers around the table.

Not one teacher, not even Snape was willing to disagree with the Headmaster, especially since Snape was still trying to escape the dreaded Seminar that he would have to face at the end of the school year.

“Now, we shall call it an evening and plan our next days lesson plans. Hopefully, the student don't stay up too late trying to get these long since due homework assignments done. Did we span them out across the week as we agreed?” said Dumbledore. “It would not due to have them forgo sleep, they are still growing children after all.”

“And Potter needs his rest.” said Madam Pomfrey quickly.

“I've told Harry to no longer hold back with the homework, we need to grade him accurately from this point forward.” said McGonagall. “We told him that we would not shout out his grades, he can keep them to himself if he wishes.”

That night Harry had settled into bed, and gazed up at the ceiling. He was thinking about his homework that was completed and placed in his bag, he didn’t have to dumb down his thoughts or go through five different renditions of his homework, he just left it the way it was and was satisfied. He hoped that the teachers didn’t get whiplash looking at some of the answers that he had, as they were nothing like his homework answers of the past.

It was sort of...refreshing to let it all go, but at the same time, he was a bit apprehensive about it all. It had been...well, years since he let his mind spout out all the facts he had stored...what were the teachers going to say?

And for that matter, what was Snape going to think when he finally handed in that essay about Venomous Tentacula seeds in Blood Replenishing potions? He had gone far beyond what their rudimentary textbook said...would Snape be impressed, or would be just sneer or...or would he finally accept him for being himself...

Not that he really cared...
The next morning, the students came, no longer without anything on their backs or just in their casual clothes. They switched back to their school robes and instead of just chairs, there were small tables for them to write on so that if they desired to work on their homework, they were more than able to. Only a few brought out books and parchments, the rest still sat in their chairs and waited for the day's reading to start, deeming this the only time off they were going to get till further notice, they should enjoy it.

Officer McFinn took the book in hand and read the title: “Chapter five”

“Oh, does someone have a summer cold, you poor thing.” said Mrs. McFinn looking over to Harry with a kindly smile.

First paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“It's just Father Christmas delivering a few late gifts.” said Fred with a snicker but fell silent as his mother glared at him.

“That's not funny, these are dark times!” hissed his mother.

Dialogue line.

Second paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Before morning yesterday, or morning today?” said George.

Dialogue line.

Third paragraph.

“Brown, you haven't had brown hair since you were really small.” said Sirius. “Infant sized.”

Tonks looked at the book curiously.
“I like her hair,” said Luna with a smile. “It reminds me of Bumperfloofur.”

“Well, I'll take that as a compliment.” said Tonks with a smirk. “Whatever a 'bumperfloof' is...” she added with a mutter.

“She's never missed an opportunity to eat with Remus...” said Mr. Weasley thoughtfully.

“They must be having a bit of couple problems in the book.” said Mrs. Weasley.

“And you bleached your hair.” said Mrs. McFinn reaching over and running a hand through Harry's hair.
“He sure loves laps.” said Sirius.

“Soup and bread? That's it?” said Charlie.

“When we come home, you almost have a five course meal to have us plow through.” said Bill.

“Must have been pretty thin, she didn't want to risk him getting sick later.” said Dr. Clark.

“That, or she planned on him having a hearty breakfast after he slept for a bit.” said Ginny.

“That's what she has dad do when he works double overtime.” said Ron.

“Not that much, no.” said Harry.

“’Bout damn time.” said Chief Hawkeye as the Weasleys all smiled proudly at Mr. Weasley.

Mrs. Weasley blushed.
Thirteenth paragraph.

Dialogue set, first sentence.

“No, he's just in pain.” said Rudolph with a laugh.

End of dialogue set.

“Sad thing is, that doesn't sound like a job that's going to be around forever.” said Mr. Weasley with a roll of his eyes. “But, it's an important job and it will help a lot of different people. I'm glad to have it for the time that I have it...in the future that is.”

“I like him.” said Chief Hawkeye smiling brightly over at the slightly balding man.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, second sentence.

“Sick bastards.” muttered Nightstrike.

Dialogue set, fourth sentence.

“Gotta inspect your Dark Detectors carefully, I check them every morning, noon and evening, make sure they're working and no one switched them on me.” said Moody with a scowl.

End of dialogue set.

“But I love my spark plugs and my sprockets.” said Mr. Weasley with a watery smile to his wife.

“I know you do dear, and I love every part of you.” said Mrs. Weasley leaning over and kissing her husband on the lips.

Fred and George pretended to gag behind their hands.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Fourteenth paragraph.
Several children shivered. They wondered where the hands were pointing to now?

Dialogue set, third sentence.

“I’ve never known any other family with a clock like yours.” said Dumbledore with a smile.

End of dialogue set.

Fifteenth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Sixteenth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Ask what question?” asked a third year Gryffindor.

“The security question!” said a second year Ravenclaw.

“Should we cover our ears?” asked Katie.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“I'll get you a book and read it with you.” said Dr. Clark.

Mr. Weasley looked about ready to rush over to the muggle doctor and kiss him full on the lips.

Seventeenth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“You're not alone together! You're not alone together!” shouted the twins covering their ears.
“I certainly don't want to know.” said Ron as he and the rest of his siblings covered their ears.

Several students also covered their ears, out of mortification and out of respect for Mrs. Weasley.

Eighteenth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Safe now kids.” said Officer McFinn with a slight smile.

Nineteenth paragraph

Dialogue set.

Dialogue set, first sentence.

“Not that she'll tell anyone at the Ministry about you not asking the Security Questions.” said Officer McFinn.

End of dialogue set.

Twentieth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Twenty-first paragraph, first sentence.

Dialogue set.

“Quite the deal...” said Remus, “provided they work.”

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Sounds like something we would do, but we wouldn't be selling them to the public like that.” said Fred.

“Yeah, we let you know it's a prank.” said George. “We're in the business to make people laugh, not hurt people.”
“Not that we don't know how to do that...we just prefer to make people happy.” said Fred.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Thanks for the vote of confidence, mum...” said Fred.

“Though, if it were just in school...and we didn't charge anyone...sure we'd do it.” said George.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Twenty-second paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Oh, I hope we took everything out of there...” said Fred.

“Just in case, don't touch anything but the beds.” said George.

“Or under the beds...” said Fred.

“Or in the table beside the beds...” said George.

“Or under the pillows...” said Fred.

“Or in the pillows...” said George.

“Or the blue comforters...” said Fred.

“Oh, and stay clear of the striped sheets...” said George.

“WHAT ON EARTH DO YOU ALL HAVE IN THERE?” shouted Mrs. Weasley.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, second sentence.

“We always have.” said the twins, trying to look proud all the while cowering behind their chairs.

End of dialogue set.
“I would ask how you know what gunpowder smells like, but you used to watch as Sergent Flaggens clean all the weapons in the armory.” said Officer McFinn shaking his head. “And you did help that one year with Bonfire Night.”

“Sure don't hold it as a memorial of our fun-filled childhood.” said Fred.

“I'm sure I'm just putting all the dangerous things I've found in those boxes.” said Mrs. Weasley sending a stern look over to her twin sons, though there was a smile twitching at her lips.

“Aww...” said the students together.

“We told you not to touch the pillows!” said the twins.

“It's only a pastille.” said Ginny.

“Sure, but it could have been one of the ones that tend to explode...” said Fred.

“Not a big explosion, mum!” said George quickly seeing the look on his mother's face.

“Who woke him up?” said Mrs. Weasley, Mrs. McFinn and Madam Pomfrey looking firmly at the book.
“Yeah, Ron...don't hit me.” said Harry with a laugh.

“Aside from the newly acquired concussion, I'm fine.” said Dr. Clark.

“Liar, I've been better.” said Harry.

“Do they ever?” said Sirius darkly.

“I'm blind.” said Ron slapping a hand over his eyes.
“Wasn't that exciting.” said Harry.

Remus chuckled.

“That you we were out fighting the forces of darkness together?” said Dumbledore with a twinkling smile.

“Don't tell me this is going to be the theme...them discussing you behind your back.” groaned Dr. Nicodemus.

Hermione blushed brightly. Though she did remember what the Ranger Healer had told her when he examined her after her talk with Tempest...

“Now, I know that I've been most likely your most vocal critic, but I want to let you know right now...at this point in the books, it's the Granger that hasn't come to terms with a third person's evaluation of the situation.” said Dr. Nicodemus.

“So I shouldn't take it personal.” said Hermione finishing the thought.

“That's right, but still see it as a bit of a pre-correction. Potter and Weasley are both seeing what they should do...though not so much Weasley, while he's coarse at times, he's still a young man, we were all like that. It's mostly focused on you and Potter...and with the massive support Potter has, it's falling on you for the most part. And for that we are sorry, though that doesn't stop me from getting a headache when you do something pretty insensitive.”

Hermione turned a faint pink.

He was a pleasant man for the most part, they weren't going to be great friends, but she could now see where he was coming from.

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

“No teacher is worse than Umbridge, at least Binns knew what he was talking about.” said Seamus.

Dialogue set, second sentence.

“And who would that be?” asked Charlie.

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Mrs. Weasley looked confusedly at the girls and then the book. She didn't treat her daughter like she was three...maybe a bit younger than she really was (she didn't want to ever lose her little girl) but certainly not three.

Thirtieth paragraph.

“What's got into future Ginny and Hermione?” said Ron curiously.

Dialogue line.
“You're telling us.” said the Weasley children together.

“So modest.” said Fred.

“Such a dainty child.” said George with a snigger.

“Fleur, what's she doing at the Burrow?” asked Bill.

“I'm impressed that you can focus on someone else but her to be honest...” said Rudolph. “I'm not straight, but even I stop and stare at a half veela.”

“Aw, he's blushing!” said Dr. Clark with a laugh.

“You'd blush too, if she kissed you.” said Harry.

Ginny folded her arms and pursed her lips.
“I don’t think I can handle the both of them at the same time.” said Harry.

“I know, throw their mother in the pot and its a hard few hours to meet the family, well...at least at first. After a few times of meeting them, it's a bit easier.” said Bill.

Dialogue line.

Thirty-fifth paragraph.

Thirty-sixth paragraph.

Bill closed his eyes and covered his face in his hands. “This isn't going well, right off the bat.”

Dialogue line.

“She said 'Yes'!” said Bill smiling behind his hands.

Dialogue line.

Thirty-seventh paragraph

“Lucky...” whispered Ron, just quiet enough for Hermione to not hear it.

Dialogue set.

Thirty-eighth paragraph.

Thirty-ninth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“I don’t hate her!” snapped Mrs. Weasley.

Dialogue line.

“Aw, mum.” said Bill.
“Ooh, better watch it, Ginny's going to be the head of your household if you're not careful.” said Sirius nudging his godson.

“If it's a married life like what the Weasley family has, I'll be more than happy.” said Harry with a wink over to Ginny.

“Do as we say, not as we do.” said Leroy with a laugh.

“Ginny!” shouted Bill.

“Sorry!” said Ginny, “but this isn't me saying it...yet...” she added sheepishly.

“I didn't and I don't call her that!” said Ginny quickly.

“Then it's a bit hard.” said Bill.
“It’s a magical beauty, Miss Granger.” said McGonagall. “Not everyone can cast off that sort of charm.”

Dialogue line.

“I will not, if Bill genuinely loves her, I will not stop it.” said Mrs. Weasley. “And I will stand all behind it and insist the wedding be held at the Burrow and let her use Aunt Muriel's tiara if she loves him just as much.”

The Weasley children stared at their mother. The wedding at the Burrow was a given, but the tiara? She was going to ask Aunt Muriel for The Tiara?

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, second sentence.

“Oh no I won’t, I know who she prefers.” said Mrs. Weasley sending a fond look to Remus.

“And Bill's not my type, too...tame.” said Tonks with a quiet giggle.

Remus, who heard what she had said, blushed bright red.

“What's with you?” asked Sirius looking at his longtime friend.

“N-Nothing.” said Remus nervously.

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue set, third sentence.

Tonks placed her hands on hips as Moody roared with laughter.

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

“Why are you getting into that fight, stay out of it!” said Alicia. “It's better for you!”
“I think what I meant by that was...you're ah...sad.” said Ron hopelessly.

“Oh don't mention me!” said Sirius.

“We met!” said Sirius.

“Not her fault, not even slightly.” said Harry quietly.

“Not yours either.” said Sirius sternly.

Everyone turned and looked at Glacier who was sitting just a few feet away. He was looking at Harry and then he turned and saw everyone else (other than the Rangers) were gazing at him.

“What?” asked Glacier.

“What's your opinion?” asked Hermione.

“Honestly, you don't want my opinion, and frankly, without more information, I can't give an opinion.” said Glacier. “I've only got your account and what you think it is, and with the track record you kids have, it's most likely something completely different, and it's none of your business.”

“Let's move on.” said Harry with a smirk.

Dialogue set, second sentence, first comma.

“And normally that brings her out in smiles.” said Mr. Weasley.

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“And if you're particularly devastated, it rebounds.” said Lionus.

Dialogue line.

Forty-second paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Fleur must be pissing mum off.” said Ron quietly.

Dialogue set.

Bill tried not to smile, but he was finding it very difficult.

Dialogue line.

Forty-third paragraph, second sentence.

“Don't look in there, trust us, don't look in there!” said George.
End of forty-third paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“This famous last words,” said Dr. Clark.

Dialogue line.

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Percy looked down.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dumbledore chuckled.

Dialogue line.

Forty-fourth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“I had just woken up, we didn't really dwell on Dumbledore all that much,” said Harry.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Hermione rolled her eyes.
“They remember.” said Tonks.

“Someone does.” said Harry.

“Hey, you interrupted him too.” said Ron.

“Cheerful morning meal.” said Dr. Clark.

“Ah, yeah, that was a prototype...never fixed that little sensitive button problem.” said George.
“Not compared to when I first had the feeling it was going to end like that.” said Harry.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

Ron groaned and looked at the Headmaster through the space between his fingers.

“If he I thought he was a ‘goner’ I would not be thrusting him into this situation.” said Dumbledore.

Dialogue line.

Fifty-first paragraph.

The adults in the Great Hall smiled softly to themselves.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“I just woke up, 'Mione!’” said Harry with a laugh.

Fifty-second paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Fifty-third paragraph.

“Nice, real nice.” said Sirius snickering behind his hand.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.
“Fred and George would take it off, wouldn't you two?” said Mr. Weasley, his voice going uncharacteristically firm.

“Yes sir!” said Fred and George at once.

“Fifty-fourth paragraph.”

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“It would be a disaster. I will faint right on the floor.” said Ron.

Fifty-fifth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“You freaked out that much? Or were you asking for Harry and Mine's benefit?” said Ron with a smirk.

Hermione didn't meet his eyes, it was entirely possible that she would ask for them.

Fifty-sixth paragraph.
“You can slam the doors and lock the windows, but those letters will get in.” said Harry with a smile over to Hagrid.

Fifty-seventh paragraph.

Fifty-eighth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Fifty-ninth paragraph.

Sixtieth paragraph.

“Poor thing.” said Mrs. McFinn.

“The owl or Hermione?” said Dr. Clark.

Sixty-first paragraph.

O.W.L.s results.

“How you managed a 'P' is beyond me...” said Hermione. “For Divination, I mean. But still, if you hadn't had that...well...if you had managed to get through the History test, I'm sure you would have been given an A at the very least.”

Sixty-second paragraph.

“I'm so proud of...well, future you.” said Mrs. McFinn with a happy smile.

Sixty-third paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Sixty-fourth paragraph.

“Eh, don't care, if I got at least one 'E', I'd be a happy Gryffindor.” said Ron waving his hand dismissively.
“Should we be jealous, Fred?” said George.

“I think we should, granted...we didn't really give it a shot, but still...we should have at least did better than what Ron did.” said Fred.

Ron smirked.

“Most likely realizing she freaked out for absolutely nothing.” said Leroy.

“Or she had too high of standards for herself and the tests.” said Remus.

“If they will let Peter get five O.W.L.s, anyone can pass the damn things.” said Sirius.

“Way to celebrate.” said Lee.

“Oh...that's right.” said Moody thinking back to the grades he had achieved. Snape was such a stickler for perfection in the classroom that he wouldn't take Potter, even though he earned a great grade...but...Slughorn was not a Defense teacher...

“Till I gave it a bit more thought.” said Harry.
End of chapter.

“That's just one job, not the whole thing.” said Tonks.

“Yeah, you've got to be led around by the nose by Umbridge.” said Ernie.

“Stuff it MacMillian.” said Tonks shortly. “I'd rather forget that part.”
Sorry I didn't post this on Friday like I promised...stuff happened.

“Alright, next chapter is 'Chapter Six’” said Officer McFinn.

Draco’s eyes widened, what was his future self going to be doing in this chapter...he had a bad feeling that it wasn't going to show him in a very good light, much like all the other chapters in these books.

First paragraph, second sentence, end of parenthesis.

“Nice, real nice.” said Ron with a smirk.

“Yeah.” said Hermione.

End of first paragraph.

Second paragraph.

“Someone needs a vacation.” said Leroy.

“Oh a shopping trip ending in a spa.” said Emmeline Vance.

“I could see him going for that.” sniggered Sirius.

Dialogue set, first sentence.

“Charming conversation over birthday cake.” said Mrs. McFinn.

Dialogue set, second sentence.

“That’s even better.” said Dr. Clark with a frown.
“Four days, nineteen hours and sixteen minutes...” said Sirius darkly. “I felt it happen...he was still my brother after all...”

“Oh no.” said Ron.

“Why would they go after a poor ice cream man?” said Hermione looking horrified.

“He does have some connections in the Ministry, a lot of the younger, up-and-coming wizards and witches think fondly of his shop when the years go by.” said Dumbledore with a somber look.

Dumbledore sat up and stared at the book. They had taken Ollivander? Dear lord...

“I can assure you, he would have gone voluntarily.” said Dumbledore leaning forward and threading his fingers together, deep in thought.

“What ever for?” asked Dr. Clark, “I thought Harry said...”

“To avoid damaging the wands...his life work. If I were in his shoes, I would leave without a fuss as well...I would suffer at Tom’s hands, no doubt, but wands that have been waiting for young wizard and witches hands...I would spare them their destruction and hope that the apprentices that I have can carry on where I had left off.” said Dumbledore.
“Does he have apprentices?” asked Mrs. Weasley.

“I believe he has a fair number of them abroad, one of them being his Great-Granddaughter.” said Dumbledore. “But she has been out of the country for the past forty years.”

“Yeah, because the news of the kidnapping and possible death of a ice cream man and wandmaker is on par with using an exclusive bathroom.” said Dr. Nicodemus rolling his eyes.

“Hint much?” said George with a smile.

Mr. Weasley gave his wife's hand a squeeze.

“Don't take security lightly.” said Moody.

“Ooh...” said Ginny. “I can only imagine what she was trying to say to me all summer long.”
"Yeah, normally she just snaps, she doesn't go that far.” said Fred.

“She must be really nervous.” said George.

“That's my money.” said Harry with a slight smile.

“Yeah, if I was handing out money, I would have given you and Ginny bags of it first.” said Bill.

“That was not nice, William.” said Mrs. Weasley.

“I think I'll just stick to my check book.” said Dr. Clark.

“I'm going to gag...” said Sirius holding his stomach.

“It's different when the girl's not fawning over you, isn't it?” said Remus with a smirk.

“Seems like he's warming up to Ginny at last.” said Charlie with a snicker.
“Yay for me.” said Harry rolling his eyes.

“I would say that if it keeps you safe, I'm all for it, but...after the prior book...” said Dr. Clark shaking his head. “Not sure that I’m trusting the Ministry all that much.”

“Not just that alone, that was just an added safety net.” said Dumbledore.

“A bunch of kids finally getting out of the house and with school shopping on top of that? You're lucky to get out of there after five hours.” said Mrs. Weasley.

“I'd be staring too, before I came here, I've never seen anyone that tall before.” said Dr. Clark.

“I'd love to see anyone try and get past him.” said Tonks with a smirk.

“Yeah, but if Potter decides to slip out of the surveillance with that cloak, it's all going to be for naught.” said Moody shaking his head.

“And knowing Potter, he did just that at some point.” said Snape with a sneer.
“Dark times can put a huge damper on business.” said Sirius.

“Ring his neck.” said Harry darkly.

“Oh, don't I wish.” said Mr. Weasley with a scowl.

“I don't want us to split up, not with all that is going on.” said Mrs. Weasley worriedly.

“Don't think I want to go to Diagon Alley, not if the atmosphere is going to be like that.” said Parvati.
Fourteenth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Malfoy.” said the trio together simultaneously.

“And if she had left you to do your shopping alone, in those dark times, you would have been caught up by the Aurors and would have been sent back home, highly embarrassed.” said Snape plainly.

Fifteenth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Quit moving and she won't be sticking you.” said Ron.

Sixteenth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Draco cringed uncomfortably.

Dialogue set, second sentence.

“If you're not careful, future Malfoy, you're going to have to go to school completely naked.” said Fred.

End of dialogue set.

“Oh, I think taking him down a peg would be pretty worth it.” said Ron quietly.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Take five minutes out of your life and control your son for once.” muttered George.
Seventeenth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“And what sort of weight does your family have anymore?” smirked Dean.

“She's a Death Eater, I think she means she can kill you.” said a third year Hufflepuff.

Dialogue set.

Eighteenth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Accuse nothing, her husband was caught red handed.” said Harry darkly.

Nineteenth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Twentieth paragraph.

“Do not poke a sleeping dragon in the eye, dear boy.” said Dumbledore shaking his head.

Twenty-first paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Now that's a threat...” said Sirius, “Unbecoming of you Cissy.”

Draco, while he felt a bit uncomfortable with his words and the transgressions of his father, his hands were beginning to shake in anger. No one talked to his mother like that, regardless of what his father did.

Twenty-second paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Twenty-third paragraph.

Dialogue line.
“Good, she doesn't deserve to have her name on your clothes.” said Ron.

“Poor stitchwork.” said Professor Sprout. “Frays after just a little bit of wear, and their service to those who aren't regulars is deplorable.”

“We aren't the ones with the marks on our arms.” said Ron stiffly. “We're not trying to get anyone killed.”

“Except yourselves.” said Snape coldly.

“That's insulting.” said Fred.

“Yeah, you have to spend at least twenty minutes.” said George.
Twenty-ninth paragraph, third sentence.
“Gloomy store fronts are so passe.” said Fred.
“You need something that 'pops' and draws your eyes.” said George.
“How long have you been planning this store?” asked Ginny.
“Six years.” said the twins together.

End of twenty-ninth paragraph.

U-NO-POO sign

While the students roared with laughter a few of the adults, including their mother, covered their faces and shook their heads.

Thirtieth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“I'm sure that we've set up some strong protective charms, mum...” said George.

Dialogue line.

And he and Harry led the way into the shop. It was packed with customers; Harry could not get near the shelves. He stared around, looking up at the boxes piled to the ceiling: Here were the Skiving Snackboxes that the twins had perfected during their last, unfinished year at Hogwarts; Harry noticed that the Nosebleed Nougat was most popular, with only one battered box left on the shelf. There were bins full of trick wands, the cheapest merely turning into rubber chickens or pairs of briefs when waved, the most expensive beating the unwary user around the head and neck, Thirty-first paragraph, third sentence, third comma.

“I like that one.” said Officer McFinn with a chuckle.

End of thirty-first paragraph.

“Ah...please no...” said Mrs. McFinn shaking her head.

Dialogue line.
“That's kind of cute.” said Hermione.

“Yeah, you thought we were all about pranks...we're researching toys and stuff like that.” said George.

“Wonder what it sort of changes into.” said Sirius thoughtfully.

“I'm going to say, you're not allowed to see those.” said Remus.

“Why he's going to old enough when those come out.” said Sirius looking over to Harry curiously.

“I'm talking about you.”

Hermione blushed slightly.

“Planned that too!” said Fred.

“Cause we don't want to hear mum or Harry yell at us.” said Fred.
“We use the term 'freak' as a term of endearment.” said George quickly.

Mr. Weasley chuckled.

“Why would you make something like that? Who wants to buy a bunch of nasty things that you know will make you ill when you eat them?” said Sirius. “You can't exactly trick someone to eat something like that.”

Fred and George beamed proudly. “We do have quite a few of them, perhaps we should tweak them a bit, make them a bit stronger.” said Fred.

“Yeah, maybe even make a few invisible or something, so they don't expect it.” said George excitedly.

“Yeah, George said that.” said Fred pointing towards George.
“Don't lie, you're George.” said George shoving Fred.

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue set.

“Just be careful of who you sell it to.” said Moody darkly.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Thirty-ninth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Fortieth paragraph.

“Are you Mr. Weasley, or am I Mr. Weasley?” said Fred.

“You're Mr. Weasley, I'm Mr. Weasley.” said George.

“Ah, how soon I forget.” said Fred nodding.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Oh, I would be yelling it from the rooftops.” said Harry.
“You’re sister and Hermione don’t need that.” said Mrs. Weasley chastising the twins.

“It’s all in good fun, mum.” said Fred.

“The kind we have right now wears off after a little while...provided you use it right away.” said George.

Forty-third paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

“Five?” said Ginny putting her hands on her hips.

“Uh...maybe...we were misinformed.” said Fred cringing slightly.

“You were misinformed.” said Ginny sternly.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

“Dean is one guy, not five.” said Seamus.

“Unless I have a bunch of people hiding in my clothes.” said Dean.

Dialogue line.

Forty-fourth paragraph.

Dialogue set, second sentence.

“I want one!” said Ginny happily.

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue set, first sentence, third comma.

Micheal blushed.

End of dialogue set.
“You're not a very good salesperson to her, are you?” said Bill with a laugh.

“Some discount.” said Ron with a pout.

“That won't get you any money knocked off.” said Dr. Clark.

“Since that rat, I'm a little hesitant about anything small and furry.” said Mrs. Weasley.
“Really?” said Ron looking at Hermione. “He just got done saying that he wanted to go shopping by himself.”

Moody nodded approvingly. “Good lad. Nothing that boy does has an innocent reason.”

Draco looked off to the side. “I...”

“They see only the negative side...” said Snape quietly.

“Stay where it's safe!” said Mrs. Weasley swiftly.

Snape quirked a brow, but that was the only reaction that he had given.

“Looks like Harry finally grew an inch.” said Ron with a gleeful smirk.
“Bite me.” said Harry quietly.

Dialogue line.

Fifty-third paragraph.

“Pretty swift way of being apprehended by Aurors.” said Kingsley.

Dialogue line.

Fifty-fourth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Fifty-fifth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Fifty-sixth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“This won't go well, I can just feel it.” said Lee.

Dialogue line.

Fifty-seventh paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Wonder why it can't be moved?” said Tonks.

“Must be somewhere just perfect for his needs.” said Moody darkly.

Dialogue line.

Fifty-eighth paragraph.
Harry flashed his eyes to Malfoy, waited for him to lock eyes with him and mouthed the words 'Dark Mark'. Draco flushed.

“And you just threatened him with a malicious werewolf...that's cause for arrest right there.” said Kingsley.

“Bet he's wishing he went into a different style of business.” said George.

“He didn't always cater exclusively to the Dark Arts.” said Dumbledore somberly.

“Something must have really shook him up.” said Ron.
“What are you doing in there?” said Dr. Nicodemus massaging his brow.

“Get out of there, this instant!” said Mrs. Weasley and Mrs. McFinn.

Hermione buried face in her hands.

“Oh, sweetie, it gets worse.” said Officer McFinn with a good natured smile.

“Oh for pity's sake.” said Kingsley. “Someone get her out of there.”

“A bit? Dudley could see right through that.” said Hermione shaking her head.
“Shocker.” said the entire school.

End of chapter

“Oh, really?” said Mrs. Weasley putting her hands on her hips.

“Now, mum...remember...this hasn't happened.” said Ron trying to placate her.
Harry stretched in the bowl as his head cascaded with a thousand different thoughts. What was it that Mrs. Malfoy wanted Snape's help with? What was Draco doing down in Borgin and Burkes? What sort of teacher was this Slughorn going to be? What sort of lessons was Dumbledore going to give his future self? What was this year going to bring? Why did he have this dark foreboding that seemed to enshroud Dumbledore? What was wrong with his hand?...

“What the heck is the Slug Club?” came Dr. Clark's voice.

Harry looked over to the rest of the people in the bowl, he didn't realize the readings had continued on and Officer McFinn had read the title chapter.

“Slug Club?” asked Harry.

“It's the group of students that Slughorn latches onto, gives them special treatments, throws dinner parties for them, introduces them to some of his more famous Slug Club members and some other things I suppose.” said Sirius. “I turned him down, so did James...Lily went to the gatherings though, he wouldn't let it go until she came, and she ended up having fun.”

First paragraph, second sentence.

Draco looked uncomfortable, he didn't know what future him was doing either, but he was feeling a bit...nervous about what it could be.

End of first paragraph.

Moody looked up to the ceiling and shook his head. “And Weasley thought about being an Auror?”

Ron blushed.

First paragraph.

“Nothing honest I can tell you.” said Moody.

Dialogue line.

Snape looked at Draco out of the corner of his eye. “I was not aware that you had that particular item.”

“I...how did they know I had that?” muttered Draco.
“I suggest you give it to me once lunchtime comes around.” said Snape with a frown.

“Better yet, give it to us, and I won't have to ask some tough questions of you.” said Lionus with a stern look to the Slytherin Prefect.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

“Kid, in these dark times the kids of known Death Eaters are ones you don't turn your back on and keep an eye on what they're doing.” said Nightstrike.

Dialogue line.

Second paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Tonks groaned.

Dialogue line.

Third paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Moody, in his ever sensitive nature, began to slowly clap.

“Thanks for coming up to speed.”

“Alastor!” scolded McGonagall.

Fourth paragraph.

“Age means nothing to the Dark Lord, he just wants as many followers and bodies to do his deeds.” said Snape darkly.
“It's more likely than anything else.” said Kingsley.

“This book is going to suck.” said Harry rubbing his eyes.

“I'm more shocked that you two seem to think that You-Know-Who cares about children.” said Mr. Weasley with an uncomfortable look.

Hermione and Ron looked down at the floor, quietly muttering about how this was future events and that there was no concrete proof.

“Wonder what happened this time...” said Hermione.
Dialogue set.

“Ooh...never mention something you think is negative about her little girl...” said Fred wisely.

“That will get you gutted and served for tea.” said George nodding.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“So I let myself go, eh little Mademoiselle?” said Tonks with a snort.

“Bill, you'd better not have her ever mention that.” said Sirius. “If you like her pretty face without a black eye, cause Tonks doesn't do that pulling hair nonsense.”

Dialogue set.

“Like last year.” said Mrs. Weasley.

Ninth paragraph.

“Arnold?” said Fred.

“What part of a puffskien gives the vibe of a name like 'Arnold'?” asked George.

“Now, 'Cuddles', or 'Sugarpuff' I can understand.” said Fred. “But 'Arnold'? Poor thing's going to made fun of his whole life.”

“He'll have to wear glasses.” said George.*

“I always thought glasses were quite dashing.” said Dumbledore with a smile.

Dialogue set.

“Just looking out for your best interest, big brother.” said Ginny.

Tenth paragraph.
“Careful, I'm 'delicate'.” said Harry with a cheeky grin.

“I would say that I hope that they be more supportive, but they're not doing a good job so far.” muttered Dr. Nicodemus.

“I don't think I've ever seen Dad blow up like Mum has blown up, he's gotten sort of close but not in the same way and to the same degree.” said George.

“Oh boy.” said Dean.

“I don't think we've been able to sneak away from dad for about ten years or so, not after the fiasco with the bakery in the village.” said Fred.
“They shouldn't leave out that powdered sugar out if they didn't want people to find a use for it.” said George.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“I'm pretty cool about this.” said Mr. Weasley with a slight smile. “Might be freaking out on the inside, but at least I look like I'm holding it in well.”

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, first sentence.

“Tell me that he's not going to go down the same path Ron and Hermione are.” said Harry covering his eyes. “Tell me someone is going to listen to me.”

“Harry, you have to admit, there's no proof.” said Hermione. “And...I suppose we were remembering what had happened the year prior.”

Harry turned his head, suppressing a glare and a snarl.

“Harry...” said Hermione beginning to stand.

“That's enough, Miss Granger.” said Dumbledore.

“But, he doesn't see our side, well, our future's side, we don't want him to go running into danger like that again!” said Hermione quickly.

“After all these years, of going with him and even instigating a few of sneaking around...you're going to ditch him now?” said Sirius.

“We're not ditching him!” said Ron.

“That's what he's thinking.” said Glacier nodding over to Harry, whose head was still turned away. “Now that's enough on the subject, we'll find out who had the right idea and who doesn't in due time.”

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.
“I'm an idiot.” said Mr. Weasley slapping a hand to his forehead.

“Maybe they want you to keep some innocence and not think everyone is a Death Eater.” said Sirius quietly.

“I'd rather be on guard than dead from a knife wound in my back.” said Harry.

Moody clapped sincerely this time, “Finally, someone gets it.”

“Future me didn't say that it was in his house, did I?” said Harry angrily.

“It's okay.” said Remus soothingly, reaching over and squeezing his shoulder. “We'll find out, try to relax.”

“Heart that...” said Harry with a scowl, he was trying to settle down, but he had a feeling this book was going to be just as aggravating as the last one.
“Might have to really hope for that one.” said Ginny with a worried smile.

Twenty-first paragraph.

Twenty-second paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“And he's alone again.” said Sirius rolling his eyes. “You know for trying to keep him safe and whatnot, you lot sure do like to jump ship.”

Ron and Hermione looked shameful, but Ginny crossed her arms. “You do realize this hasn't happened yet and it now it won't, right?”

“She's dating Dean, not me, and they're not my keepers.” said Harry.

“Yeah, I know, but I'm just saying that they should be giving you some slack if they're going to go all negative on you.” said Sirius.

Dialogue set, second sentence.

Harry and Ginny laughed softly.

End of dialogue set.

“Uh oh, Harry, you'd better run!” said Dr. Clark nudging Harry teasingly.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.
“At least you have two friends to keep an eye on you.” said Sirius with a smile.

“Not that I recollect your dad doing anything insane like that.” said Remus. “He was more calm than anything else, now your mother on the other hand...”

“Oh, you get her and Lily...with their time of the months going at the same time and you are looking at the end of the world.” said Sirius. “They've made Filch cry!”

Neville smiled sheepishly, but looked quite pleased with himself.

“I love the free things you get in some magazines.” said Mrs. McFinn.

“I do too!” said Mr. Weasley excitedly, “Especially the muggles ones!”

“Man, that's uncomfortable and awkward.” said Sirius wincing.

“Oh god, we are friends Luna!” groaned Harry with a fond smile.
“Uh oh.” said Harry rolling his eyes.

“I'll just sit right here with my friends, thank you very much.” said Harry with a stern look at the book.

“That won't get her any brownie points.” said Hannah.

Luna giggled happily.

“Who's being nice, I'm stating facts.” said Harry with a smile.
Dialogue set.

“I don't think she'd want him, she'd have constant heart attacks from all the constant worry.” said Mrs. Weasley with a fond smile. “And I know that she wouldn't trade you for anything in the world.”

Twenty-eighth paragraph, second sentence, first comma.

“Sadly, no.” said Sirius.

End of twenty-eighth paragraph.

Twenty-ninth paragraph.

Neville shivered. “I don't think I'm strong enough to go through all that.”

“You're plenty tough, and think about it, you wouldn't have the Dursleys, so you'd have a leg up on me.” said Harry with a smirk. “I'm all sorts of screwed up.”

“You aren't screwed up...you're adorable...danger prone...but adorable.” said Sirius kissing the top of Harry's head.

“Teens don't want to hear that they're adorable.” said Mr. Weasley with a smile.

Thirtieth paragraph.

“Too morbid of a thought for a sixteen year old.” said Rivers shaking his head.

Dialogue line.

Thirty-first paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Wrackspurt?” said Remus looking at the girl curiously.

“Future me will explain.” said Luna with a smile towards the book.

Dialogue line.
“Good thinking, thinking about something you know all about and are passionate about will drive them off...” said Luna with a dreamy smile.

“Wonder what he's doing that's playing Prefect Hooky?” said Sirius with a curious glint in his eye.

“And if you're curious, then so is Harry.” said Mrs. McFinn.

“How original.” said Lee rolling his eyes.

“Ronald!” said Mrs. Weasley.

“This hasn't happened yet, Mum.” said Ron quickly.

This time, Mr. Weasley laughed out loud despite his wife's indignant sputter.

“Yeah, like future him wouldn't take this opportunity to push people around, no matter how small.” said Charlie.
“Well, he didn't waste any time...did he?” said Sirius with a bark like laugh.

“Don't want to get on the wrong side of a teacher.” said Harry.

“Nah, he'd only think of you as hard to get, he'd step up his game...especially for Lily's sake. Remember what I said, he drove her nuts till she finally came to one of his parties.” said Sirius.

“Learn to blink, people.” said Harry under his breath.

Several of the D.A snickered quietly.

“Serves her right the backstabbing bitch.” whispered Angelina quietly.
Mr. Weasley looked over at his daughter, but then smiled proudly.

“So...do I want to know what I'm doing there?” said Ginny looking at the book and leaning back slightly.

“Hey.” said Blaise with a nod.

“Hey.” said Harry also with a nod.

“We've met.” said Harry and Blaise together, both trying hard not to smirk as the other students chuckled.

“Never met him before, no.” said Harry.

Cormac however puffed out his chest and grinned broadly, he didn't hear what Harry had said.

“No...haven't met either.” said Marcus.

“Sorry! He must have interrogated me.” said Ginny with a laugh.

“But crystallized pineapple? Dear me yes.” said Professor Flitwick with a smile.
“Way to put him on the spot when he's trying to eat cold pheasant.” said Sirius.

“Next time, wait.” said Remus.

“Well, he won't be inviting Belby to anything further.” said Flitwick with a frown. “Pity, he's quite ingenious with creating new, yet simple spells.”

Marcus blushed heavily.

“Oh, no, he's going to latch onto him...” said Sirius covering his eyes.

“Didn't want any anyway.” said Marcus with a disdainful sniff.
“He just doesn't know that Dad knows all sorts of influential people.” said Bill with a smirk. “Or he'd wet his pants.”

Blaise looked plainly before him, despite the curious gazes from the rest of the students.

“What was Slughorn hoping to get from that?” said Dr. Clark. “Never mind, I don't think I want to know.”

“I'm not liking him, tell me that I ignore him.” said Harry. “That or leave.”

“Oh, Dazzle Gums isn't the only creepy teacher now.” said Remus.

“Oh brother.” said Harry rolling his eyes.

“Never seen you turn that red before.” said Theodore Nott looking at his friend.
“Take our word for it.” said the Weasley boys.

_Forty-ninth paragraph._

“You're going to look like you've got bats on your face if you look at her like that for very long.” said Colin gleefully.

_Dialogue set, third sentence, first dash._

“Yeah, every other article.” said Harry with a sneer.

_End of dialogue set._

“Plus two others that you have there.” said Harry.

_Fiftieth paragraph._

_Dialogue set, first sentence, first dash._

“One of the reasons, perhaps.” said Dumbledore with a smile.

_End of dialogue set._

_Dialogue line._

“Guess there was though.” said Neville.

“I'd rather not let him know about it.” said Harry. “Especially a bunch of people that don't have any business knowing. That opinion has now changed but still...”

_Dialogue line._

Harry smiled over to Ginny.

_Dialogue line._
“Was he hoping that you were going to recount that horror filled night?” said Leroy.

“Nice, real nice.” said Rudolph.

“I know there were a few students that really wanted to be in his little club...nice to hear that there were others that didn't want to be bothered with it.” said Sirius.

“Thrilling read I'll bet.” said Ginny with a roll of her eyes.

“Yeah.” said Ron clapping happily.

“Seems a worthy reason.” said Fred.
“Oh no...” said Ron.

“Oh!” said Harry.

“Mate, this is the beginning of the year, and with the way these books go...the train ride never goes all that well...” said Ron. “Maybe except the first, and fourth year...but still...”

“Does this end well?” said Hermione covering her eyes worriedly.

“Not your best work, Potter.” said Moody shaking his head.

“He saw me. Dammit.” said Harry shaking his head.

“He’s laughing cause he saw you...or someone climb up there.” said Hannah worriedly.

“Ugh...son...with your looks, you can do better.” said Leroy shaking his head.

“I’m betrothed to her...” said Draco sullenly.
“I was betrothed too, but do you see that psycho bitch sitting next to me?” said Leroy gesturing to Rudolph.

“Leroy!” scolded Mrs. Weasley.

“Nice to know I'm not a psycho bitch.” said Rudolph with a snigger.

Fifty-sixth paragraph, fourth sentence.

“Pass...” said a few of the girls in the Great Hall.

End of fifty-sixth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Fifty-seventh paragraph.

“Probably wondering why he wasn't invited.” said George.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“And you're a...”

“Ginny...” said Mr. Weasley in a warning tone.

Dialogue line.

Fifty-eighth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.
“Other than being the top Herbology student in his year? And quite a amicable young man?” said Professor McGonagall with a cross of her arms. “There's more than that, I can assure you.”

Blaise blushed once again.

“Not my type, I like them nice.” said Ginny with a frown.

“I'd say that's a little creepy...but I like it when Leroy braids my hair.” said Rudolph with a smile over to his husband.

“Explains why you never let me cut it.” said Leroy with a slight smile.

“Not with your dad being publicly labeled a Death Eater.” said Snape knowingly. “He'll put quite some distance between himself and them.”

“You did.” said Seamus.
Harry gestured wildly towards the book.

“Sixty-first paragraph.”

Dialogue line.

“Sixty-second paragraph.”

Dialogue set.

“We hear, Harry, we hear.” said Sirius taking a hold of Harry's wildly gesturing hand.

“Dialogue line.”

“Dialogue line.”

“Dialogue line.”

Hermione and Ron look questioningly at the book.

“Sixty-third paragraph.”

“I'd say gut-wrenching.” said Katie.

“Dialogue line.”

“Sixty-fourth paragraph.”

“Caught...caught...” said Moody shaking his head.

“Dialogue line.”

“Sixty-fifth paragraph.”

“Sixty-sixth paragraph.”

Dialogue line.

“Damn...” said Lionus.

“Dialogue line.”

“Sixty-seventh paragraph.”
Sixty-eighth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Crap.” said groaned Bill.

Sixty-ninth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Seventieth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Seventy-first paragraph.

“That'll teach me...” said Harry shaking his head. He quirked his brow as Sirius reached a hand around and rubbed his nose. “Get off me.”

“Oh, you mean I can't touch your nose?” said Sirius with a teasing smirk. “You'll let Malfoy but not me?”

“Let me touch your nose with my fist...how 'bout that?” said Harry.

End of chapter

“He's not that annoying little simple pest anymore...he got kind of dangerous.” said Dean.

“One more chapter I think for the day, then we'll have those classes again.” said Dumbledore.

“So much for days off...” said George.

No offense meant to the people named Arnold.
“Last chapter for the day, Eighth Chapter.” said Officer McFinn.

“Why am I already worried?” said Sirius.

Sirius cringed in the bowl and tightened his grip on Harry.

End of first paragraph.

Second paragraph, first sentence.

“He won't be making that mistake again...” said Moody.

“Can we stop talking about Harry's blood...please?” said Sirius closing his eyes tightly.

End of second paragraph.

Third paragraph.

“This is getting a mite depressing...and a bit dark...what if he owls home real quick that Harry is on the train, his mother could come and drag him off to You-Know-Who!” said a seventh year Hufflepuff in a horrified whisper.

Fourth paragraph.

“Yeah, can't do non-verbal very well.” said Harry.

Fifth paragraph, first sentence.

Snape decided to spare the youth a sneer, he wasn't sure why.

End of fifth paragraph.
“Oh no!” said a few of the first years worriedly.

“Thank goodness for Tonks!” said Charlie with a sigh of relief.

“Well, not nearly as dramatic as your second year arrival...” said Dr. Clark with a weak chuckle.

“Yeah, that is embarrassing...” said Kingsley shaking his head sympathetically. “Rookie year...worse year of my life...”

“Don't know if you'd want her to fix your nose...seeing as how she's never had to do it for herself...” said Sirius.

“I'm good with medicinal charms!” said Tonks indignantly.

“I should certainly hope so.” said Madam Pomfrey.
“Please tell me that Snape is not going to be the one to come and get you.” said Sirius. “Please, for Merlin's sake that he doesn't.”

“I don't want to be the one to fetch him either, mutt...” said Snape coldly.

“Bet he won't be trying to get one up on Dumbledore again.” said Remus with a smile.

“That's future me's opinion, not mine.” said Harry quickly to the insulted look on the Auror's face.

“I'm sure that I would have loved to hear what you had to say.” said Tonks with a sad smile.
Fifteenth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Sixteenth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“One of your secret ways in?” said Remus with a smile.

“Maybe.” said Harry.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Damn...” groaned Sirius.

Dialogue line.

Seventeenth paragraph.

“Damn...” groaned Sirius.

Dialogue set.

“Kiss my ass.” muttered Harry.

Remus looked over to Harry with an attempt at a stern look, but couldn't quite manage it that time.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Safe as a living potion ingredient that you need to disembowel?” muttered Ron.
“I'm well aware that this hasn't happened yet, Severus, but could you try to be a bit more...sociable?” said Professor Flitwick.

“Now he can kiss my ass.” said Tonks sticking her tongue out at the Potions Master.

“I'm sure he can, and perhaps that is why he is not speaking.” said Dumbledore, a slightly hopeful tone in his voice. “But then again...” he muttered silently to himself.

“I just brush them off and dish them right back on comments about his hair. You nearly getting killed was the big part that sent me out the door, I think. I would never be able to forgive myself if you had been even slightly injured and I had stayed at Headquarters.” said Sirius.

Snape kept his arms folded and looked down at the ground, not saying a word.

“How about putting the blame on the dumbass that...well..never mind, I earned that...” said Harry ruefully.
“Fine...give you that too...” said Harry grumbling.

Remus began chuckling.

“I know that is not the case.” said Snape tiredly looking over to where the Weasley family was sitting.

“Thank goodness this is the last chapter of the day.” said George rubbing his temple.

“At least it seems your nose is fine...nice to know that my dear cousin isn't without some medicinal skills.” said Sirius.

“As accident prone as she is, it's natural she can heal herself like that.” said Moody with a good-natured laugh.
“Oooh, tough luck, you’ll have to have pudding for dinner.” said Leroy with a false sympathetic look.

“Just means my dream will come true, I can finally have treacle tart for dinner.” said Harry with a grin.

“I prefer to have my students happily fed before I bore them.” said Dumbledore with a warm smile.

“We are trying to impress ourselves on the first years.” said Professor McGonagall shaking her head fondly.

“Right little bastard.” said Charlie.
“I'd give a lot to be an 'Unchosen'.” said Harry.

“Uh....thanks for the offer...” said George.

“Way to go Ron...” said Ginny.

“Well, that's going to be the talk of the castle for the entire year.” said one of the Unspeakables with a worried look over to the Headmaster.

“So much for the delusion that she can fix anything.” said Harry with a nervous smile.
Dialogue set, first sentence.

“How do you know what a...dead limb...looks like?” asked Ron.

“My Uncle Bartley has a...well...he's hadn't had circulation in two of his toes for a long time, the doctors want to remove them, but he won't let them.” said Hermione with a ill look.

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

“Knew he loved us and our work.” said Fred wiping away a fake tear.

Dialogue line.

“Oh, yeah...I'm gone aren't I? Well, that's some big shoes to fill.” said Lee with a pleased smile.

Dialogue set.

“But...what is Professor Snape going to be doing?” said Hannah.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Thirtieth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

The students were silent.

“Wow...so it finally happened?” said a seventh year Ravenclaw.

“Guess it did, he finally got the job...” said another Ravenclaw student.

“Explains the title.” said Terry.
Harry blushed.

Dumbledore smiled to himself.

Luna looked between Harry and Professor Snape, a look of pleased acknowledgment on her face, but she did not say a thing.

Harry groaned. “Oh...sorry...sorry...” said Harry quietly.

“Well, it wasn't any news to him, now was it?” said Ernie.

“Little note directed towards the three of you.” said Bill pointing to Ron, Hermione and Harry.
End of dialogue set.

Thirty-fourth paragraph.

Dialogue set.

Chief Hawkeye chuckled. “Finally got to hear some British man say that.”

Thirty-fifth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Thirty-sixth paragraph.

“Something like that, I don't make fun of...” said Ron quietly.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Thirty-seventh paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Gahhh...” groaned Harry burying his face in his hands.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Regrettin' ever tellin' him that name.” said Hagrid shaking his head sadly.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.
“Well, he's not tied down...” said Nightstrike.

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

“Well, that'll be something to see, and he'd be a big help with moving some of the larger rocks.” said Charlie.

Thirty-eighth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Thirty-ninth paragraph.

Fortieth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Why the hell are we not?” said Harry.

Ron shrugged.

“Ignore this book Hagrid, we're not giving you up.” said Harry looking over to Hagrid quickly.

Hagrid had looked crushed, but then smiled slightly.

End of chapter

“I don't want to even think about it. I want to know what the hell future me was thinking.” said Harry grumbling.

“That is all for the day, I think we should resume our classes.” said Dumbledore with a smile as Officer McFinn closed the book with a snap.

The students began to grumble but they all gathered up their bags and meandered to the Great Hall doors.
Normal School Schedule VS New Curriculum

That night, the teachers all adjourned to their offices to grade the different papers that some of them had received. For those that weren't normal teachers, Rivers had given them the homework assignment to give to the students and gave them a key of acceptable answers and to take it up with their experienced counterparts.

While most of the teachers, (that were the standard for the first three years), only had three or so year students that required them to to grade papers or make sure they had done their required reading, the teachers that were specifically for third years or up had as few as two years of students and at the most (only in River's case) all seven years.

Rivers had collaborated with Dumbledore as to shorten the classes from the normal length down to almost less than half of the usual length to give Defense Against the Dark Arts class quite a bit more time. Rivers had to make up for the lack of substantial teaching for two and a half years and needed all the time he could get to getting the students up to snuff on their lessons.

For example, the first years only had four teachers give them homework from the day before, Defense Against the Dark Arts, Charms and History of Magic. Though they had it pretty easy, all except for Rivers' class, they only had to read bits out of their textbooks and then answer a short quiz in class the next day.

Rivers had asked them to practice several new spells and a short essay on what they use the spells for. While it wasn't all that hard, he had asked them to give him instances where the spells could be useful in. Though...quite a few of the first years had taken into account when Harry, Ron or Hermione had used the spells and wrote it down. While he gave them points, they didn't get full marks as to having their own notion of when and where to use it.

The second years had the same amount of classes that requested homework done of them, Charms, Potions, and Astronomy. They had to stay up a bit later than what the others years had to due to they being the first students to have Astronomy class since the starting of the readings.

The teachers had to admit, while it was a little odd having all the year students together for class in the largest classrooms that the castle had, they had to admit that it was a little faster to get them all the information, but the downside was that they couldn't dedicate their time to the students that needed them the most. They would have to rely on the Prefects and Headboy and Headgirl to assist the students if they asked for questions.

It was the consensus, they couldn't wait for the classes to get back to normal, so they can easily
Rivers was in one of the spare offices going through all the paperwork that he had acquired. While Moody had agreed to take on the more practical work of Defense for the fourth years and under, he still had to take on the quick assessment tests that he asked of all the students.

While he had given the staff a pretty quick look over on their skills, he still had to find out where he had to work the hardest at. It seemed that while he was worried about the fifth years, it was the seventh years that would really have the problems when it came to the N.E.W.T.s tests. Rivers would have to get some assistance with that if he was to get them through their end of the year tests and into the outside world.

Moody was a good teacher when it came to the practical, but when it came to the theory part of the classes...he was not as enthusiastic about it. He would do it, but he said that it wouldn't be his preference. Better to experience things first hand as opposed to take someone's misconceived opinion.

Harry stretched slowly on the sofa of the rooms he was staying in, working on his homework. The teachers remembered that he couldn't use magic, so he was working over time on the theoretical part of the homework and had much more paper homework than the rest of the other fifth years.

“How's your homework coming sweetie?” asked Mrs. McFinn putting down a cup of hot chocolate and some biscuits.

“Fine, though, I think I need to reread chapter Miss...er...Aunt Batty gave us today. I think I may have read or listened to a passage wrong.” said Harry. “I'm thinking that the Great Goblin Battle of 1387 didn't take place around Surrey...”

“Yeah, I think even we would have noticed something like that going on.” said Dr. Clark as he flipped through his copy of Fantastic Beasts and Where to Find Them. “Please promise me you won't go up against a leithfold till you have your wand handy.”

“I promise, not that I'm going to be leaving the castle any time soon. It's been a while since I've gone out for a run and Lionus isn't going to let me go anywhere without at least one Ranger tailing me.” said Harry. “I'm not even thinking about tackling on Puffskien.”
“I don't think I've seen one of those yet.” said Mrs. McFinn thoughtfully. She had been promised by Hagrid, Sprout and Flitwick to see an array of different magical creatures and plants and she had several different kinds. Flitwick promised her that she would see fairies when Christmas time came around and Professor Sprout had shown her her greenhouses, but it was Hagrid that was showing her all the creatures that he had caretaker tasks to do with. She was especially overjoyed to see the unicorns that he brought with him out of the forest and had them interact with her.

“Sure you did, it was that large brown clump of fuzz that Remus took out of the room four nights ago.” said Sirius as he poured himself a small glass of bourbon.

“You're kidding, I thought that was a large dust bunny!” said Mrs. McFinn.

Harry laughed.

“What did you do with it?” asked Mrs. McFinn.

“I gave it to Hagrid, he'll either find the owner or take it to Diagon Alley the next time he goes.” said Remus.

“Aw, I wanted to see it.” said Mrs. McFinn with a slight pout.

“It was kind of dirty, it needed a bath.” said Sirius. “And didn't you say it snapped at you?”

“Poor thing was probably terrified.” whimpered Mrs. McFinn.

“It did, I'm sure we'll show you a nice friendly one at a later date.” said Remus flipping through the newspaper.

“What's it like teaching Charms class?” said Harry looking over to Remus as he sipped his hot chocolate. “Anything like Defense Against the Dark Arts?”

“Less chance of being assaulted by a creature, but the chance of you blowing up to a misfiring spell goes up.” said Remus with a light chuckle.
“I'm amazed that they didn't have you doing the Defense class....” said Sirius.

“I figured that with Rivers here, he could see where the kids needed help. Sort of makes you wonder how the past students are doing.” said Remus. “Especially if some of the Ministry workers don't know how to do a simple shield spell...”

“Pity dueling tournaments never took off.” said Sirius. “That would have instilled some need to learn some defensive spells.”

“Or they all could have been in the audience and watched the Aurors go after it.” said Harry.

“That too I suppose.” said Sirius. “I know they'd put on quite a show.”

A light knock came on the door and Dumbledore entered the room, a warm smile on his face. “I had forgotten how exhilarating grading Transfiguration papers could be. Seeing the workings of a young mind in a known field and where they take their thoughts...quite the experience.”

Sirius rolled his eyes and looked over at the headmaster, “No wonder you became a teacher, you must have loved homework.”

“No more than the next person, but I did love startling the teachers that taught me.” said Dumbledore accepting a cup of hot chocolate from Mrs. McFinn. “Now, how is your classes going? Are you keeping up, despite not...having the ability to cast spells?” he said looking at Harry.

“I'm doing alright, once I'm all better, I'm going to be able to practice all the spells I'll need...hopefully, I'll be able to use magic by the time the O.W.L.s come around.” said Harry.

“As long as you relax and get plenty of rest, you'll be just fine. And with you not having to do the same homework over and over again.” said Leroy from the table where he and Rudolph were playing chess.

“Why don't you call it a night, cub? Any leftover homework can be done during the readings tomorrow. I've seen a few students do that.”
“I’ve only got to read this passage for McGonagall,” said Harry.

“Professor McGonagall.” said Dumbledore lightly.

“Er...right.” said Harry sheepishly. “Then I just have to do a drawing of a chizpurfle for Hagrid.”

“I had forgotten that Hagrid had those. That would explain why Fawkes has not left my office for a spell.” said Dumbledore. “He quite dislikes having those lodged in his feathers.”

“How do you get them off?” asked Dr. Clark. “The book mentions a potion, but they don't go into more description than that.”

“It’s a special brew that you need to immerse them in.” said Dumbledore. “The downside is that the potion does my their skin a trifle irritable for a short while. Fawkes dislikes it to such a degree that he will accelerate his burning day just to burn them off. He has quite the vain nature that no one really sees.”

“He’s still a handsome bird.” said Mrs. McFinn with a smile.

“That he is.” said Dumbledore. “I have not found another one like him, nor do I think I ever will.”

Peter came into the room where his master was sitting, an assortment of objects in his arms and phials of what looked like water.

“Master, I have...” said Peter.

“Be silent, fool! Who is to know if they can't hear in this place?” said Voldemort looking hurriedly at the window and around the dark corners.

Peter had never seen the Dark Lord so...agitated. The Dark Lord was without his Death Eaters to send out to find a way to liberate him, or even his pet snake Nagini. They were going to get out, one way or another, either this frenzied plan of the Dark Lord's was going to work or he was finally going to kill Peter out of frustration.
The next morning brought more snow down on the grounds and the warming intensity of the fires in the Great Hall increased. Today, the students were given tables so that they could continue on with their homework while they listened to the readings.

Officer McFinn picked up the books and began to read: “Today’s chapter is Chapter Nine”

“Isn’t that the title of the book?” said Ernie.

“First paragraph.

“And knowing the flow of this book so far, they aren’t going to believe you.” said Leroy shaking his head.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Well, not what I was expecting.” said Leroy.

“Me either.” said Dr. Nicodemus.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

“Be nice, Ronald.” said Mrs. Weasley rubbing her eyes.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue line.
“Just because I confiscated it, doesn't mean that we get to keep, Ron.” said Hermione.

“Hey, I haven't done anything yet!” said Ron.

Second paragraph.

“Oh no...not again...” said Ginny.

“Only this time, it's with Ron.” said Harry.

“That's what you get when boys do something incredibly heroic and stupid all that the same time, and then they go through puberty...girls love that.” said Sirius.

Remus shook his head.

Third paragraph.

Dialogue set.

“We're going to continue! Our book selves have no idea what the hell they're talking about!” said Harry loudly and gesturing wildly. He stood up quickly and hurried over to the shaft of light. “Shove over.” he said to Officer McFinn.

“Huh?”

“I'm reading a bit...or passing on some stuff, I'm not picky.” said Harry.

Dialogue set.

“Get the feeling he's not going to read aloud?” said Ron, when silence crept on after Harry had sat down.

Fourth paragraph.

After reading a bit further Harry handed the book back to Officer McFinn and went back to the bowl.

Fifth paragraph.

Sixth paragraph, first sentence.
“Please remember to eat and sleep this year.” said Dr. Clark.

End of sixth paragraph.

Dialogue set.

“At least she's breaking it to you gently, but really, if you can't take it in the O.W.L.s course, N.E.W.T.s would only be painful.” said Sirius.

“But at least you know now that you need to brush up on you Transfiguration work if you really want to continue on with the class.” said Remus.

Seventh paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Neville blushed.

“She does know her students.” said Professor Sprout.

Eighth paragraph.

Dialogue set, second sentence, first dash.

Neville blushed even redder.

End of dialogue set.

Ninth paragraph.

“She doesn't pay anyone a compliment that isn't a homework-holic.” said Ron.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Does she now?” said Professor Flitwick with a smirk.
Neville stared between Professor Flitwick and Professor McGonagall in shock.

Parvati blushed.

Dean sniggered.

“No Snape breathing down my neck, why not?” said Seamus quietly.

“I'm impressed, you passed most of the difficult classes.” said Bill.

“Doesn’t hurt that we gave up Hagrid's class.” said Ron guiltily.
“Smart kitty.” said Hannah.

“You wanted to take the class...wait...is she dissing homework?” said Fred.

“Duck and cover! The end of the world has come!” said George diving under the chair.

“Tell me that the pictures were going to change as the first years came in...” said Rivers rubbing his eyes.

Dr. Clark stared. “If you're trying...” he sighed and looked down. “You're starting out sounding like an idiot, and that's a candid opinion of someone who has been mentored and has mentored.”
“Helps when the teacher doesn't insult us and breathe down our necks.” said George.

“Seeing as how you misplaced the entire Kappa species...I'm not too sure you can keep up.” said Sirius with a sneer.

Snape snarled over to the animagus.

“I want to have a deep conversation with you, after today's reading.” said Rivers looking over at Snape. “We need to set some ground rules about what is acceptable, bullying right off the bat is not going to fly anymore.”

Snape rolled his eyes.

“Okay, that was interesting, keep doing that.” said Rivers.

“Maybe...not sounding like that though...” said Rivers.

“No mollycoddling there...” said Remus quietly.

“Can't even do one properly.” said Harry to himself.
“That's what you want to know though...” said Hermione quietly.

“It also helps a bit that there is a teacher that can tune into the way their minds work.” said Dumbledore with a twinkling smile. “Without a flexible mind, one cannot teach non-verbal spells very well.”

“Once again, you don't tell them how!” shouted Harry.

“Easy there...” said Sirius.

“I need to cook something.” said Harry standing up and getting away from Sirius' outstretched fingers, Sirius looked helpless as the boy made his way to the open area.

“Here you are.” said Glacier waving his wand and summoning the kitchen area for the young man.

“I'm getting a headache.” said Rivers rubbing his forehead.

“You weren't supposed to say anything, Potter.” said Snape.
“The last time someone aimed their wand at me, it didn't go well sir.” said Harry banging a pan on the stove.

Twenty-seventh paragraph.

“Good boy.” muttered Moody.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Oooh...” groaned the twins flinching away as Sirius howled with laughter. “Nice bit of cheek there.”

“But cheek...with Snape...”

“That'll get you killed.”

“Or pickled.”

“Whichever comes first.” said the twins together.

Twenty-eighth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“His temper hasn't changed much over the summer, but then who can blame him.” said a seventh year looking between Harry and Snape.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

“We sound nothing alike!” hissed both Snape and Harry.

“Okay...I thought me and Malfoy doing that was creepy...that's just disturbing.” said Ron leaning away in his love seat.

Dialogue line.
Dialogue set.

Twenty-ninth paragraph.

“This Why am I not arguing?” snarled Harry, missing Dumbledore's slight smile.

Dialogue line.

Thirtieth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Sloper blushed furiously.

Dialogue line.

Thirty-first paragraph.

Note from Dumbledore.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Knowing him, he'd only postpone it, he never completely disregards a detention, even if it's a tad unfair.” said Sirius. “Though...your cheek...kind of warrants a detention....not that I'm not completely proud of you...”

“I'm going to take your shovel away before you dig yourself even further in the hole.” said Officer McFinn.

Thirty-second paragraph, third sentence, first comma.

“Hey, if they can play dirty, I don't know why we can't use a little gray area magic...” said Ron stubbornly.
“Wonder what he is going to be like?” said Dean.
“We'll find out in a moment.” said Seamus.

“Uh...I guess I could work on that...” said Ernie.
“Don't bother, you being you is just perfect for you.” said Luna with a smile.
Ernie looked at her with his mouth open, closed it and then looked off to the side looking thoughtful.

“Start talking your age son.” said Chief Hawkeye. “You'll live younger.”

Rudolph snorted.
“Something I'm missing?” said Leroy.
“I know this potion.” said Rudolph. “Don't even need to hear anything more about it. But I don't think he wants anyone to hear what he thinks is 'seductive'."
“Wait, what?” said George.

“Not...all that shocking...guess if we want to turn you on, just need to whip up a plate of treacle.” said Sirius.

Crack!

Harry shattered a plate against his forehead, trying to cover his face to shield the blush he had developed.
“Oh dear, you must be more careful!” said Madam Pomfrey, Mrs. Weasley and Mrs. McFinn coming over to see if he had done any damage to himself.

End of thirty-fifth paragraph.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

“I don't think Snape would have ever done that...” said Fred.

Thirty-sixth paragraph.

Dialogue set.

Thirty-seventh paragraph.

Thirty-eighth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Never saw it in a cauldron before.” said Harry as he stirred a pan of chocolate.

Dialogue set.

Thirty-ninth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Fortieth paragraph.

“I do believe that Horace would have fainted dead away if he had heard that.” said Professor Sprout.
Hermione blushed furiously as she smiled to herself.

“Say hello to a dinner invite.” said Sirius nudging Remus.

“Oh boy...” said Charlie.

“There's a story there, but I don't think I want to know it.” said Rudolph.

Leroy cleared his throat and quirked his eyebrow.

“Oh...it's that story?” said Rudolph.
“And we were just talking about love...oh boy...” said Dr. Clark.

“What?” said Sirius.

“Ever heard of ‘getting lucky’?” said Dr. Clark in a whisper.

“No...” said Sirius.

“Well, I'm shocked.” said Dr. Clark.

Chief Hawkeye had to stifle a snicker into his hand.

“Cause you get sick, for starters.” said Remus.

“Don't want to know what he considers a lucky day.” said Neville.

“Never heard of a prize for a quiz or homework assignment...outside of Dazzle Gums.” said Ron.
“So...can't use it for sporting events, competitions, tests or elections? What the hell's the point then?” said a seventh year Hufflepuff student.

“Is Harry going to go all out?” said Colin excitedly.

“Probably not.” said Harry. “I don't think I ever do...”

“She's a talented potion brewer, I'll give her that.” muttered Snape quietly.

Dumbledore softly smiled to himself.

“Not the time to try and butter him up.” said Bill.

“Wait, did he die?” asked Leroy. “I didn't realize my father had died.”

“No not yet.” said Dumbledore. “But he has contracted Dragon Pox...”
Draco looked down, his face white. “I...I knew he had it...but I though that St. Mungos...”

“There is not much one can do for Dragon Pox for a man his age. All they can do is make the pain and the fire breathing sneezes more bearable.” said Snape.

“All that money that my family has given them....and they can't even cure him?” said Malfoy bitterly.

“All the money in the world means nothing when it comes down to it.” said Rudolph, he then looked at his husband. “You should really go talk to him.”

“Doubt he wants to see me...” said Leroy.

“I'm sure he wants to...deep down...” said Rudolph. “Not quite Vernon Dursley deep down, but deep down.”

“I've got to say, at least he loved me at one point...” said Leroy.

Fifty-third paragraph.

“Finally, something fair in that class.” said Neville quietly. “And I'm not there to see it.”

Fifty-fourth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Fifty-fifth paragraph.

Fifty-sixth paragraph, second sentence.

Snape smiled softly to himself, but steeled his face back to it's normal countenance. Potter was only copying his work, he wasn't discovering this on his own.

End of fifty-sixth paragraph.

Fifty-seventh paragraph.

Dumbledore sent Snape a twinkling wink, but Snape only looked down.

Fifty-eighth paragraph.

Dialogue set.
“What's Snape snickering about?” whispered Blaise.

“Well, at least this proves that he can follow directions pretty well when he doesn't think violent thoughts about the teacher.” said Dr. Nicodemus.

“It was written in the book, it's free game.” said Harry.

“I want that book.” said a seventh year Slytherin, though he never gave it a thought that Snape was going to go through all the books and see if he could find it first before the classes started for the day.

“It wasn't orders, it was a potion recipe.” said Ginny shaking her head, “Though, I would be freaking just a bit because of what had happened.”

Sixty-fourth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“‘It's just a textbook.’ said a first year.

“‘And it was just a blank diary.’ said Ginny with a growl.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Sixty-fifth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“If it were truly a dark object, that's the first thing that it's protected against.” said Snape with a roll of his eye.

“So it’s not a dark object?” said Hermione stiffly.

Snape made a special performance of groaning and rubbing his eyes.

End of chapter.

“And I'm going to freak.” said Ginny.

“If that book hurts me, even if it hasn't happened yet, you can say 'I told you so'.” said Harry.

“What about me?” said Hermione.

“We thought that little sentence would be getting a mite old to you.” said Ron and Harry together.
Once people got back from their first restroom break, Officer McFinn started up the readings once again.

“The House of Gaunt.” said Officer McFinn.

“If it's nothing like the Riddle House, I'll be happy.” said Harry absently as he poured the chocolate over top of a many layered cake.

“Going to share that cub?” asked Sirius looking over at the cake with interest.

'Unless I smash this thing with my fist if this chapter goes awry.” said Harry.

First paragraph, first sentence.

“Why is Snape looking like that?” asked Lee.

“When it comes to him, we don't ask his motives.” said Fred.

“Mostly because we don't want to bring about injury to ourselves.” said George.

First paragraph, second sentence.

Snape frowned. My handwriting is a thousand times better than that drunken, crab scrawl that Weasley tends to do.

End of first paragraph.

Dr. Nicodemus snickered.

Second paragraph.

Snape's eyes flashed wider.

Dialogue set.

A slight color of pink formed on Snape's cheeks.
“At least Ron was sort of trying to do his homework instead of picking fights.” said Charlie. “ Granted, it’s copying, but that’s just nitpicking.”

“Guess you just need to mention a lesson that doesn’t have anything to do with Potions and her mood will shoot right back up.” said Dean.

Mrs. McFinn giggled. “Yes it is.”

“If you mean already getting detention in the first Defense Against the Dark Art’s class just like the year before an enjoyable first week...then yeah...I'm having so much fun, I'm delirious.” said Harry.
“Think about who the detention is with, sir...” said Bill quietly.

“Called it.” said Sirius holding up his hand.

“Something tells me it's just going to be an information lesson, as opposed to something practical.” said Mr. Weasley.

“So now he's going to be adding more? So much for the definition of 'everything'.” said Harry with a sneer.

“About a certain subject, perhaps.” said Dumbledore with a smile.

Chief Hawkeye reared his head back and laughed. “I always liked you.”
Lionus frowned and looked away.

End of dialogue set.

“Wait...what?” said Dr. Clark.

“Don't dwell on it.” said Sirius. “Worst idea...ever...”

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

“Can say that again.” muttered Lionus.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Not that I would take your survival all that lightly.” said Dumbledore reassuringly.

“Should we have some of the students...well..take a break...?” said Mrs. Weasley nervously.

“Let them stay...” said Harry. “Let's keep this going.”

Ninth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“He doesn't have much luck with those things...” said Hannah.

Tenth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Quite unusual...” said Fliwtick with a warm smile.

“Always poking his nose where it doesn't belong.” muttered Snape.
“Ooh...that's got to hurt like the dickens...” said Dr. Clark with a sympathetic smile towards old Headmaster.

“And he can wait.” said Ron.

“I can't wait to see what outfit he chose.” said Mrs. McFinn.

“Oh my god...” said Mrs. McFinn covering her eyes while Dr. Clark and Officer McFinn roared with laughter.

“I take it...that's not a good mix...” said Mr. Weasley with a weak chuckle.
Sixteenth paragraph.

“Hangleton again? Oh no...” said Neville.

Seventeenth paragraph.

Eighteenth paragraph, third sentence.

“Hmm...never mind, I was thinking that they heading to the town as well.” said Tonks.

End of eighteenth paragraph.

Nineteenth paragraph.

“Well, you know this won't end all that well.” said Charlie.

Twentieth paragraph.

Twenty-first paragraph.

“Yeah...that's not disturbing at all.” said Hermione.

Twenty-second paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Well, it's not like the entire place looked all that welcoming any way.” said a sixth year Ravenclaw girl.

Twenty-third paragraph, second sentence.

Lavender and Parvati looked uncomfortable.

End of twenty-third paragraph.
“He's saying that you're not welcome, what part don't you get?” asked Ron.

“Ah, he must just be hissing then.” said Ron.

“Nasty.” said Terry.

“Sounds like the description Harry had for Salazar Slytherin.” said Luna with a smile.
“Against what? Granted I'd be a little leery about some bloke coming up the path dressed like that...but still...” said Dr. Clark.

“Well, it's self-defense if you use equal or lesser force, but if you've got the equivalent of a gun and also a bloodied knife, then you are a little bit outside.”

“Worry less about 'human filth' and worry more about the state of your home.” said Mrs. Weasley.

“I'm going to have nightmares...I just know it.” said a third year Ravenclaw student.

“Non of your damn business.” said a fifth year Hufflepuff.

“And I've seen scum like you on the bottom of my foot.” said Nightstrike coldly.
“What the bloody hell?” said Charlie.

“Charlie!” scolded Mrs. Weasley.

“I don't think I'd be willing to go into his house, if his son still has that wand and that knife.” said a first year Gryffindor.

“Someone had better save that adder...” said Charlie.

“Inbreeding, it'll happen every time.” said Sirius. “My uncle thought it was a blessing that my brother and I didn't have that happen to us.”

“That poor girl.” said Mrs. Weasley.
“Why don't you mend it!” shouted Ginny.

“If this bloke is still around, I vote that we send him a nice box of ton-tongue toffee.” said George.

“But he doesn't open mail.” said Lee.

“Who said anything about owl post, we'd put it directly in his house. Scatter them across the place.” said Fred. “And if we get that son of his as well, I'd call it a win-win.”

“And this old depraved hermit thinks he's above the law...doesn't he?” said Tonks.

“Duh!” said the school together.

“Though it was cool in your case,” said Colin nodding to Harry.

“But still very much illegal.” said Dumbledore with a firm tone.
“Someone with authority, and not some abusive pure-blood nutter.” said Ron.

“For the way you treat your daughter and raise your son...damn straight.” said Harry as he took out another set of bakeware.

“The crazy old man in the rundown shack?” supplied Dennis.

Dumbledore sat up suddenly and looked quite alert.

“Let her go!” said a few students angrily.

“Wow...really?” said the students falling silent quickly.

“So...You-Know-Who's grandfather is that guy?” said a sixth year Ravenclaw.

“Wonder if Morfin's his Pa, or if Merope is his mother?” said Seamus.

“I'm betting Morfin is his Pa, he's twisted enough.” said Dean.
“Yeah, Merope is too timid to be anything but You-Know-Who's aunt.” said Lavender.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

“Well, it's no wonder that his son is like he is...or the house...he's crazy.” said Dr. Clark.

Fortieth paragraph.

Dialogue set.

Forty-first paragraph.

“Sick lunatic.” said Charlie. “Doing that to someone who can't defend themselves.” he then looked over at Harry. “But it was pretty funny when you did it.”

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Hope he likes walking on his spit, cause that's all it's really doing...coating the floor with saliva.” said Emmeline.

Dialogue set.

Forty-second paragraph.

Dialogue set.

Forty-third paragraph.
“You’d think they'd find a different route to take if they don't like the house.” said Blaise, thinking of his own home and how the local muggles would steer clear of both him and his mother if they happened to go out for a walk, calling her a murderess and her son quite a few uncalled for names.

Forty-fourth paragraph.

Several of the students looked confused for a moment.

“Well, I don't blame her for looking outside the home for a happier life.” said Hermione.

Forty-fifth paragraph.

“Big bully.” muttered a second year Ravenclaw.

End of dialogue set.

Forty-sixth paragraph.

“This, can't possibly end well.” said Remus.

“It doesn't.” said Officer McFinn.

Forty-seventh paragraph.

“I think she had better run...or something.” said Colin.
“Oh god, not again!” said Mrs. McFinn covering her mouth in horror.

“He should have took some back up.” said Moody.

Dumbledore smiled fondly at Harry.

“Did he just say Marvolo?” came the whispers of the students across the hall.

“Like...You-Know-Who?”

“Morfin has to be his dad, I would never have named my kid after him if he did all that crap to me.” said Katie.

“The inheriting hateful practices doesn't help either.” said Fred.

“Wonder how Morfin had a kid?” said George.
“No...no I don't.” said Fred.

End of dialogue set.

“Horrible parent.” muttered Mrs. Weasley.

“You know, I kind of think you...like Ginny over us...just a bit more.” said Ron quietly without looking at his mother.

Mrs. Weasley stared, as did her husband and their only daughter.

“You've got to be kidding right? If anything, it's the twins that's her favorite!” said Ginny looking at her brother in shock. “She hasn't killed them yet.”

“Nuh uh!” said Fred.

“Percy all the way!” said George.

“I'm of the opinion that it was Charlie that was her preference.” said Percy looking at the Dragon keeper.

“Bill.” said Charlie plainly with a nod over to his older brother. “It's always been Bill.”

“No...Ron's the favorite, her little baby boy that loves to eat.” said Bill.

“I love all of you! I don't have a favorite!” said Mrs. Weasley.

“Dad, who's the favorite?” said George.

“It's Percy...innit?” asked Fred.

Mr. Weasley took a long slow sip of his coffee and then smiled. “It's a tie...”

“Knew it.” said Ginny looking at the twins.

“A seven way tie.” said Mr. Weasley with a smile.

Dialogue line.

“You mean he even had a mother?” said Fred.

“I don't know if I should be relieved that Morfin wasn't his dad.” said George.

“Had the same vicious mentality...maybe not the brash way he does it...” said Lee.

Dialogue line.
“I'm all for love stories like that, but I can't quite seem to see that happening...not without a spell or two involved.” said Mrs. McFinn.

“And that's precisely what I believe had happened.” said Dumbledore.

“He's insane if he thought she would be still there.” said a seventh year Slytherin. “You wouldn't catch me there if I had a chance to get out.”

“I'm thinking he never learned to take care of himself.” said George.

“Before all this, I would be questioning the sanity of the young man.” said Dr. Clark.
“I don't think that that would happen.” said Mrs. McFinn. “An honorable man would...but that's this was a bit of a different set of circumstances.”

“And will you give me any outright answers?” said Fred.

“No, no outright answers.” said George. Dumbledore chuckled.
“And...?” said Dean.

“Are we...?” said Seamus.

“Probably not yet.” said Neville with a sigh.

“You give up too easily.” said Sirius. “Any chance on that cake?”

“Little early in the day...you should really have a meal...not just cake.” scolded Mrs. Weasley.

“Eh...little dessert before dinner...never hurts sometimes...” said Sirius with a smirk.

“Mixed messages!” said Harry in a sing song voice.

“I'll mixed messages you....” said Sirius. “Now gimme that cake.”
“Last chapter of the day, kids.” said Officer McFinn looking at Harry's tense shoulders, and knowing what was going to happen during the chapter he was going to read.

“But it hasn't been four chapters yet?” groaned Dennis.

“Take my word for it, and you lot need to get some classes under your belts before the end of the term.” said Officer McFinn. “Now, this title is, Hermione's Helping Hand. And I'm going to say this right now, this didn't happen yet, so...no telling anyone off...”

“Well, doesn't that sound promising.” said Harry.

First paragraph, third sentence.

“Oh my god...” said Dean.

“I'm not looking forward to that!” said Seamus looking horrified.

End of first paragraph.

“And it used to be Defense Against the Dark Arts class...” said Sirius.

Second paragraph, second sentence, first semi-colon.

Fred and George howled with laughter while their mother buried her face in her hands.

End of second paragraph.

“I love that rule.” said Sirius. “Cause when those things snatch you, you can't hold it in.”

Third paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, fourth sentence, first word.

“You're going to want to come over for a bit.” said Officer McFinn calling over Harry.
“Yay, more silence...” grumbled Dean.

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

“That should be fine.” said Harry stepping away from reading over Officer McFinn's shoulder.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, second sentence.

“I can see why.” said Sirius. “Your first encounter was not the best.”

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

“....ouch...” said Ron looking at Hermione, who was blushing furiously.

Third paragraph.

Dialogue set.

Mrs. McFinn giggled as Harry turned bright red.

Fourth paragraph.

“He's so adorable.” said Sirius fondly.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

“Oh boy...” said Charlie trying hard not to laugh.
“You've always been tall, stretch.” said Harry with a smirk.

“No way...just switch the covers.” said Ginny, though she was still a bit hesitant towards the book.

“Not much of a shock there.” said Ron.

Several of the adults groaned.

“I remember asking that...every time James got the paper before I could read it.” said Remus.

“That's depressing.” said Sirius.

“My fingers are crossed.” said Sirius.
“Mine too.” said Neville quietly.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“What the hell?” said Tonks. “What nimrod arrested him?”

Dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“That might be the case, but still...he doesn't even have the brains to do that....You'd need to slip him a brain enhancing elixer in order to even be a basic Death Eater.” said Tonks.

Dialogue set.

“Oh please, he was just bragging.” said Tonks rolling her eyes.

“But in these dark times, it's not wise to do that out in public.” said Moody.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, first sentence.

“If that's true, it backfired on them.” said Harry.

End of dialogue set.

“But Hogwarts is the safest place for anyone.” said Neville curiously.

Dialogue line.
“Perhaps the Headmaster is inspecting the wards around the school?” said Flitwick.

Moody groaned. “It's war, Granger, of course it's serious.”

Hannah gave a high shriek and had to be held by Professor Sprout.

“Shh...shh...it'll be alright, this won't happen now dear...you'll see...you'll see...” said Professor Sprout rocking her student slowly.

Professor Sprout continued to rock her until she ceased her sobbing, after Madame Pomfrey gave her a calming draught.

Hermione rolled her eyes as Lavender giggled.

“Ooh, this is going to be an awkward book.” said Dean.

“Sluggy?” said Sirius wincing slightly. “What the hell kind of name is that?”
End of dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

Cormac smirked broadly.

Dialogue line.

“Won...” said Cormac.

“Dumbass.” said George.

“Half a pound will win you a bet and not get you all that sick, a pound will get you hospitalized.” said Fred.

“And you two would know?” said Mrs. Weasley sternly.

“We made the bet with him. We only told him half a pound...but he wanted to upstage us.” said Fred.

“We were trying to slow down Ronnie's competition...” whispered George in Ginny's ear. “See, we're caring and nurturing brothers.”

“Yeah right.” said Ginny with a smirk.

Dialogue line.

Thirteenth paragraph.

“Hell, no, if I don't give Ron favors, I'm not going to give someone I had just met any.” said Harry.

Fourteenth paragraph.

“Ouch.” said Harry.

Fifteenth paragraph.

“They just came cause he was the Captain.” said Mrs. McFinn. “Have to say, I used to do that, watch the football Captains tryout the new players.”

“It's a lot of fun, isn't it?” said Tonks gleefully.
Sixteenth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Seventeenth paragraph.

“Oh brother.” groaned Harry.

“You're a celebrity again.” said Sirius.

Eighteenth paragraph, first sentence, fourth comma.

“That'll happen.” said Lee.

Eighteenth paragraph, end of first sentence.

“Yeah! Knew I was good!” said Ginny dancing in her seat.

End of eighteenth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“And being who he is, he most likely knows a few goodies.” said Fred.

Nineteenth paragraph, first sentence, first colon, first comma.

Harry swatted Sirius' hand away.

End of nineteenth paragraph.

Twentieth paragraph.

“Takes a few games to get used to it.” said Charlie.

Twenty-first paragraph.

“How do you get confused on which way to go?” asked a first year.
Twenty-second paragraph.

Twenty-third paragraph.

“Best two out of three, come on!” said Cormac.

“One shot and one shot only.” said Harry.

Dialogue set, second sentence.

Cormac flushed.

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

Twenty-fourth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Twenty-fifth paragraph.

“Kiss my ass.” said Harry.

“Easy there.” said Remus.

Twenty-sixth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Twenty-seventh paragraph.

Twenty-eighth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.
Dr. Nicodemus gave a nervous chuckle, stood up and went over to Officer McFinn reading over his shoulder at the last part. “Well...what do you know? I never would have guessed.”

Ron turned and stared at a blushing Hermione, while Cormac was cursing quietly about unfair sportsmanship.

“See, Hagrid's classes totally pay off.” said Harry.

“Wow, never thought that would happen.” said Dennis.

“Oh no!” said Hermione.
"Oh boy...Harry's getting pissed." said Lee.

"Put your heads between your knees..." said Fred.

"And kiss your bum goodbye." said George.
“I’ve seen me Granddad do that.” said a third year Gryffindor.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Fortieth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Maggots will do that.” said one of the Unspeakables.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Can't he get his own food, he's big enough?” said Ron.

Forty-first paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, third sentence.

Hagrid flushed.

End of dialogue set.

“Fifty plus years for an acromantula is a decent age, but there could still be a few decades to his life to go...” said Dr. Nicodemus.

Forty-second paragraph.

“We're not saying that there isn't good in those creatures, but...your size prevents most injury.” said Dumbledore.
“And that was when he was fine.” said Ron.

“And from our track record, they wouldn't trust us with it.” said Harry.

“Well, seeing as how they can now approach a Hippogriff safely, and that was your first class, I think you did a bang up job.” said Rivers.

Officer McFinn motioned Harry over and had Harry read a small part.

Harry walked back to the bowl.

“I must have taken a Bludger to the head or something.” said Cormac looking a bit pink, forgetting what the book had said about Hermione's subtle embarrassment.
“Oh, Miss Granger!” said McGonagall covering her eyes.

“I demand a rematch!” said Cormac loudly.

“This hasn't happened yet, you twit!” said Ron.

“Not your call.” said Snape.

“Finally! She breaks through the goody goody look!” said Dr. Nicodemus clapping.

“Harry's a goody goody.” said seventh year Slytherin.

“Have you been keeping up? Or were you just sleeping through all these?” said Harry looking confused.

“Oh, bloody hell, she's like my sister, Ron.” said Harry tiredly.

“Let the boy eat something!” said Madam Pomfrey.
“Pass.” said Harry quietly.

End of dialogue set.

“And an invitation to Ron...no? Not even the brother of the up and coming Prank store? Fine...see how we rate.” said the twins together.

Forty-seventh paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

Snape and Sirius scoffed.

“Yeah, that'll happen.” said Sirius.

Forty-eighth paragraph.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“He just doesn't know real quality when he sees it Ron.” said Mrs. Weasley kindly.

Forty-ninth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, fourth sentence.

“Merlin damn it.” said Remus quietly, “We had hoped that that would never have to happen again.”

“Yeah, but maybe now we'll finally have some peace.” said Sirius.

End of dialogue set.
“Who’s to say that it wasn't already here, someone could have sent it here last year!” said Harry.

“The last year.” repeated Harry. “Or a few years ago.”

“Forgive me for being protective.” said Harry with a frown.

“Not this again.” said Charlie burying his face.

The students collectively groaned.

“Why am I doing potion detentions when it's not a potions class?” said Harry.
“Just because I do not teach the subject anymore, does not mean that I have stopped brewing.” said Snape cooly.

End of chapter

“No thanks Demelza.” said Harry.

“That's all for the day, time to go off on your lessons.” said Officer McFinn as he closed the book with a small smile.

“Goodie goodie.” said Ron.
Chapter Notes

Sorry the chapter is on the short side, I sort of had an accident on Saturday and I was still sort of recovering, no muse visited me for a while, just pain.

“Bloody hell, I can't believe that we have to do all this work for Defense Against the Dark Arts, what the is that Rivers playing at?” said Ron as he threw his quill down on the table. “Doesn't he know that we have all this other work to do?”

“They're trying to get us back up to where we were supposed to be, before all this had happened, and from not having...” proper” teachers for Defense Against the Dark Arts....We had one decent teacher, but...with four others that were sub-par...” said Hermione tiredly as she placed a heavy tome on the top of a stack of books. “I will admit, I'm thankful that I don't have nearly the amount of classes I used to.”

“If 'nearly' means you dropping out of two at least...then sure...yeah, not nearly as much.” said Harry with a smile.

“You're lucky you don't have to practice the spells.” said Ron groaning as he leaned back in the sofa. They were currently in the suite that Harry was staying in, using this as a study room for the three of them. The others were spending the time elsewhere, giving the three of them some privacy. “McGonagall is almost tyrannical with transfiguring pillbugs to magpies. I mean, did you see what they did to Lavender?”

“McGonagall told us yesterday to leave all our glittering things back in the dorm. Why she had to wear those crystal earrings...” said Harry.

“They have a bit of a crush on that Glacier fellow, the earrings were snowflakes...” said Hermione as she grabbed another large book.

“Just what I needed to know: Someone has the hots for Harry's therapist.” said Ron cringing slightly.

“That is something I could go without knowing as well.”
They turned and saw Glacier himself striding into the room.

“Hi...” said Harry giving the man a little wave. “What's up? I thought we weren't going to have our session till way later.”

“The only thing that is up is the amount of black tint in your hair, other than that, absolutely nothing,” said Glacier with a ghost of a smile. “I only came to collect a book I was reading...I had neglected to bring it when we left.”

“Oh, I think Hermione might have it under her books...” said Ron pointing to the large stack of books.

In a flash, the smaller book that was under the large pile was gone and in Glacier's hands, the much larger and thicker books not even wobbling.

“What sort of book is that? It's in Russian....” said Hermione.

Glacier sighed. “I will choose to ignore the fact that you looked inside, but it is not for children to read.”

“Is it a book on super Ranger secrets?” said Ron looking at the book with interest.

“Is it a book on powerful magic?” said Hermione eagerly.

Glacier looked at the both of them and then walked away towards the door.

“What the...isn't he going to answer? Doesn't he see the pattern from the books, we always find out...sooner or later...” said Ron quietly as the Ranger stepped through the door. “Maybe it's a mushy romance book...”

“But this is the Rangers Ron, this is little different.” said Harry going back to his homework, snickering as Ron was struck on the side of the head with a cushion from the smirking Ranger healer as he left. “Besides, it’s just a book...and if he was that protective over it's secrets, he wouldn't have left it in the room with us now would he?”

“Assuming one of us can speak Russian...” said Ron, looking at Hermione and Harry.

“Don't look at me...” said Hermione, “Basic French is all I can do.”

“Fourth book down, there's a spell that gives you temporary ability to know one language of choice for about ten minutes.” said Harry pointing at the tower of books.

“Why didn't you say something?” said Hermione yanking out the book from the pile causing the rest to fall to the floor.

“You didn't ask.” said Harry as he continued to read his own book.

“Oh, now I wish that we had the book now!” said Hermione.

“Yeah, cause stealing from a Ranger is so much easier than stealing from Snape.” said Ron. “And it's so much safer.”

“Nice to know that you admit stealing from me.”

Ron jumped in his seat and they all looked at the Potions Master. “Uh...didn't...didn't hear you come in...sir. No one knocks anymore.” he added in a whisper.

The potions master slowly stalked over to the table where the teens were sitting, and after sneering down at each of them, he placed a small phial beside Harry's hand. “Drink this...now.”

Harry looked down at it and then back up at the Potion Master. “What is it...sir?”

Snape was silent for a moment, but then gave him a smirk. “Lupin has informed me that you were not sleeping well as of late, this potion will give you the rest he thinks you need.”
“How much sleep do you think I need?” said Harry with a slight edge to his voice as he turned the phial over and over in his hand.

“You have no difficulties in staying up late when it comes to breaking school rules and magical law...so very little compared to the rest of children in this school.” said Snape his face still twisted in a sneer.

Harry frowned at the Potions Master and put the phial back down on the table.

“Thank you Professor, he'll drink it right away.” said Hermione putting the phial directly back in Harry's hand.

“Are you mad?” hissed Ron.

Whether Snape heard that or not, he did not show it, for he left in the same fashion as Glacier, though without sending a cushion back at Ron.

“Does not one person in this castle knock anymore?” muttered Ron.

“Ron, he's a professor, he can go wherever he wants.” said Hermione with a roll of her eyes.

“Still, we have to be polite to him...” said Ron quietly, nodding towards the door.

Harry sighed as he downed the potion quickly best get it over with, and besides, if Snape was trying to poison Harry...doing so right in front of Ron, and Hermione...with Glacier and a few other Rangers constantly within shouting distance of all times...it wasn't a bright move.

---

_The night before:_

“AHHHHHH!”

Sirius jolted awake and looked in shock over at the bed where his godson lay...or at least he was a few hours ago, now he was sitting bolt upright and screaming loudly, his eyes wide with fear and his bedclothes clutching to him, drenched in cold sweat.

“Harry! Harry, what's wrong?” said Sirius throwing off his covers and grasping Harry by the shoulders. Then he saw what made his skin go clammy, the white in Harry's hair was trickling further down his locks, overcoming the black.

He threw his arms around his godson and whispered into his ear. “It's alright, Cub, it's alright...it's just a dream, it's not real, whatever it is, it's not real.”

“What's going on?” came several voices from the hallway as the door opened to reveal the others in their suite, all wrapped up in their bathrobes with wands drawn and objects raised in their hands. All of the same idea that perhaps he was being attacked by someone.

“Harry, sweetheart?” said Mrs. McFinn putting down her candlestick and coming into the room.

“Dead...they're all dead...everyone...they're...” his eyes rolled into the back of his head and he fainted.

Dr. Clark came in and examined he quickly, bringing in the bag of Doctor's tools that he had received from Dr. Nicodemus. They laid Harry back down in his bed and after a few moments he placed his stethoscope back in the bag.

“His pulse is like a freaking rabbit's but it's slowing down now...and look, his hair is going back to black...” said Dr. Clark.

“Gotta wonder what he saw, to have him so freaked out like that...” said Rudolph.

“He said 'they're all dead'...said Leroy quietly. “Were they just not there or...”

Rudolph threw his arm around his husband's shoulder.

“Has this been going on long?” asked Remus.
“Not that loud, I wake him up before he gets too loud...and we just have some tea or hot chocolate...” said Sirius quietly.

“Why didn't you tell us?” said Remus shortly.

“I'm his godfather! I...He's mine...I'm the one that has to be there for him.” said Sirius softly.

“He's all of ours...” said Mrs. McFinn carefully.

“If I can't take care of one stupid nightmare...no matter how many times he has it, what sort of godfather am I?” said Sirius putting his face in his hands.

“One that's willing to give up his nights so that Harry can get some peace, but if it's been several nights...it's time to think of something new.” said Dr. Clark raking his fingers through his hair.

“Like what?” asked Mrs. McFinn.

“We could ask Dr. Nicodemus...” said Dr. Clark.

“I'm not letting him near Harry...not since that pod thing...” said Sirius flatly “And look what he's done to Harry so far!”

“He just...Harry's just...well...who else is there?” said Dr. Clark looking around at the others.

“Madam Pomfrey would never let him out of the Hospital Wing...she's mentioned that a time or two, she'd lock him up in her office till all the black came back to his head.” said Leroy.

“So...anyone else...?” asked Mrs. McFinn.

“There's Sever...” said Remus.
“Not only no, but HELL no!” said Sirius quickly.

Present

“Wonder how the kids are coming on their homework?” asked Remus. “They do have quite a bit of it to work on...”

“Oh please, we were working on homework and learning how to be Animagi...this is a cakewalk compared to all that.” said Sirius dismissively as he looked at the cards in his hand. “Besides, Harry and Hermione are the two brightest in their year, Ron has his veritable pick of who to lend him a hand...”

“Should we tell him that Snape just left?” asked Leroy as he and his husband came back into the room after having a drink down in the Three Broomsticks.

“I'd rather avoid that, personally.” said Rudolph quietly. “That's one touchy subject that I wouldn't approach with the Deathstick itself.”

“Christmas is coming...what are we going to do? Do we take Harry to Night's Rest...or let these two have a nice proper Hogwarts Christmas?” said Sirius with a smile.

“Hogwarts Christmas!” said the two muggles quickly.

The wizards in the room turned and stared at the two muggles in shock.

“Er...maybe a calming Christmas at home is best...” said Mrs. McFinn blushing slightly.

“We can stay.” said Remus while Sirius stifled a laugh behind his fist. “After those nightmares...it may not be the best to take him away from everyone.”

Sirius stopped laughing.
“Any idea how we're going to handle his nightmares tonight?” asked Sirius somberly.

“Well, we may have already taken...” said Mrs. McFinn.

“You told Snivellus...didn't you?” growled Sirius.

Glacier chuckled from his own seat.

“Stuff it, Frosty.”
The next morning came and Harry woke up for the first time in so many days refreshed and raring to go. Whatever was in the phial, he would have to...well...maybe he could ask Dumbledore to pass on the message, he certainly didn't want to talk to Snape at that moment...not if he was going to be sneering at him like usual. Though he had to admit, he did see some real changes in the man, not drastic life altering changes, but changes nonetheless.

He had gotten up bright and early, and went downstairs to make himself something for breakfast, something he hadn't done in quite a while.

He had just finished making some scones when he felt a small tug on his pants legs.

“Harry Potter, sir, Headmaster Dumbledore is looking for Harry Potter.” squeaked a small house-elf.

“Is it nine o'clock already?” said Harry looking up at the clock. “Wonder where the time went...”

“Harry Potter was digging through candy sir.” said another house-elf happily.

Harry turned a faint pink. “Oh...yeah...can you send up these for me?”

“Of course Harry Potter sir!” squeaked several of the house-elves happily.

When Harry finally arrived in the Great Hall, he saw everyone taking part in both the things he had made and what the house-elves had, mostly because Ron had snatched most of the scones for himself.

“Mate, I love your chocolate scones, you need to make them more often.” said Ron thickly.

“I think you ploughing though several dozen like that in one setting is kind of way I don't.” said Harry with a smirk.

“You're making these again.” said Sirius looking at Remus' own tall plate.

“If we're all gathered, shall we get started?” asked Officer McFinn with a smile. “That way you can all get back to your school work.”

“Quick Harry, leave for an hour or two!” said Fred to the amusement of the other students.

Officer McFinn rolled his eyes and cleared his throat. “Title this morning is, Twelfth Chapter”

“Someone getting jewelry?” asked Lee.

Harry looked thoughtful.

Dumbledore, who was coming around the back of the bowl, stopped and placed a hand on Harry's shoulder.
Second paragraph.

“I'm pretty sure that you can't just go for a walk up into the hills anymore though.” said Sirius with a rueful smile.

Third paragraph, second sentence, first semi-colon.

“Where do you read then?” asked Hermione.

“On the roof when it's decent.” said Harry.

“No more roof reading.” said Remus and Mrs. McFinn together.

Third paragraph, end of second sentence.

Hermione placed her hands on her hips and gave Ron a significant look.

“It's a good weird.” said Ron weakly.

End of third paragraph.

Snape smirked to himself, the copy of the textbook safely locked in his trunk...there would be no one now that can use those “imaginative little jinxes and hexes.”

Fourth paragraph, second sentence, second semi-colon.

Sirius patted Harry's back proudly while Remus shook his head.

End of fourth paragraph.

“Oh sure, but if she had casted it, she would be completely fine with it.” muttered a second year Slytherin.

Fifth paragraph.
Flitwick rolled his eyes.

Snape covered his mouth to hide the smile and worked hard to not laugh out loud.

Most people, including Harry and Ron roared with laughter.

“You pick then to be good at it?” said Ron trying to look indignant through his laughter.

“It's all in the timing.” said Harry clutching his sides. “Oh, I think I broke something.”

Sirius laughed even harder. “You rebound just like James.”

“She may not be the best person to understand the amusing aspects of the situation.” said George.
“I've taught her so well, then.” said Harry.

“Don't you dare mention Umbridge!” said Hermione shaking her finger at Harry.

“Don't go down that path and I won't.” said Harry.

“I would!” said Sirius, Fred and George together.

Snape frowned darkly.
The scowl lessened slightly.

The scowl returned in full force.

“They weren't being held by their ankle.” said Harry. “And Ron knew immediately when something happened.”

“So are countless others in the world, of various age.” said Dumbledore with a thoughtful look. “There is always someone better than yourself out there, no matter what in the world you do.”

“He could be a nice guy...just lonely...what he does with his books sounds like what I do with my notebook.” said Harry. He missed Snape's incredulous stare.

“It's being a muggle born that will get you killed. Half-bloods are tolerated...barely.” said Sirius honestly.

“So much for that theory.” said Ron.
“Food fights have started with less.” said Sirius.

“Where was this distraction when we were arguing?” said Ron. “You need to work on your timing.”

“I can't always be there to stop that foot of your from being jammed in your mouth.” said Ginny elbowing him with a smile.

“Never talk back to the security, that will get you delayed even longer.” said Officer McFinn with a smirk.

“Wonder if Zonko was kidnapped too...or maybe Fred and George just put them out of business.” said Charlie.

“I think I would be happier if they just went out of business, that would mean that the workers were still alive.” said Bill.
“Let's not.” said Harry.

“You did warn him.” said McGonagall with a soft smile to Dumbledore.

“Don't put words in her mouth.” said Mrs. McFinn.

“He's too busy saving the world.” said George.

“You know how it is.” said Fred.

“Thanks...thanks a lot.” said Hermione.

“I knew I was his favorite.” said Ron with a smirk.

“I think he likes someone playing hard to get.” said Harry.

“He's remembering your mum I'll bet.” said Sirius.
“Don't be upset Ron, he looked at me the same way, never really bothered me.” said Mr. Weasley reaching over and patting Ron on the shoulder.

Dialogue set.

“Changing the topic to candy generally works.” said Professor Flitwick.

Dumbledore rubbed his chin thoughtfully.

“Have a bad feeling...” said Ernie.
“Wow...cool.” said Colin eagerly.

“Wonder who cast that.” said Katie.

“Makes me feel better.” said Harry.

“Wow, I'm so supportive...” said Tonks looking ashamed.
“Better be a stiff one.” muttered Harry.

Thirty-fifth paragraph.

“Not enough.” said Harry darkly.

“Hey, it's just stuff, and even I wasn't all that upset when he nicked a thing or two.” said Sirius.

“It's all I would have of you.” said Harry quietly.

Sirius wrapped an arm around his shoulders, unsure of what to say.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue set .

Thirty-sixth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Sirius leaned his head on top of Harry's.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

“Everyone who had ever come into contact has a soft spot for her.” said Bill.

“Or if you've been dead for three years.” said Charlie.

Dialogue line.

Thirty-seventh paragraph.

“Can't say the day was boring.” said Hannah.

Thirty-eighth paragraph, fourth sentence.

“Too pink and fluffy for my tastes.” said Ginny.

“Thank god.” said Harry looking up at the ceiling as Ginny giggled.
Ginny blushed slightly.

“Wow, we've never fought.” said Leanne quietly.

“What's happening to me?” asked Katie weakly. The other Chasers wrapped their arms around her, not to mention the Weasley twins and Lee Jordan.

Katie covered her eyes and began to whimper.

“He finally goes for help.” said Snape with a weak sneer.

“Well, at least you found Hagrid.” said a first year.

“How do you know it's Hagrid?” said his friend.

“Who else could it be?” said the first year. “Unless you really think it is a bear.”
“Not now Hagrid.” said Bill.

“Nothing's going right for you, is it?” said Sirius.

“We got that part.” said Bill.

Moody and Lionus both smiled.
“Have to admit, he's a natural.” whispered Chief Hawkeye to Dr. Nicodemus.

Dialogue set.

“Good guess, seriously. Though I wish you never had to think of that option...or that never happened in this future.” said Remus.

Fiftieth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

Fifty-first paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Fifty-second paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“And we don't want anyone else to pick it up, thinking it was some pretty stones in the snow.” said Harry.

Fifty-third paragraph.

Dialogue set.

“ Doesn't fit with what the lad was saying, nor Borgen.” said Dr. Nicodemus rubbing his chin.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Fifty-fourth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, third sentence.
“Loves this part of his job a little too much.” said Lee.

End of dialogue set.

“But if it happens to slip...can't say it would be all that terrible, it'd be bad...but I'm sure we'd get over it.” said Sirius with a dark mutter remembering what had started all this.

Fifty-fifth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Fifty-sixth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Might want someone to go with the poor lass.” said Dr. Clark.

Fifty-seventh paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Always gone when I need him.” said Harry with a cold smile.

Dialogue line.

Fifty-eighth paragraph, second sentence, first semi-colon.

McGonagall turned to stare at Harry.

End of fifty-eighth paragraph.

“Haven't you seen us interact with McGonagall...” said Fred.

“If we can't get her to laugh...” said George.
“Nothing you say will.” said the twins together.

Dialogue line.
Fifty-ninth paragraph.
Dialogue line.
Dialogue line.
Sixtieth paragraph.
“Ugh.” said Harry bending over in his seat and resting his forehead on his knees.

Dialogue line.
Dialogue set.
Dialogue line.
Dialogue line.
Dialogue line.
Dialogue line.
Dialogue line.
Dialogue line.
Dialogue line.
“Cut them off...cut them off...” said Remus covering his eyes.

Dialogue set.
Dialogue line.
Dialogue set.
Dialogue set.
“None that would admit it, not in these times.” said Moody.
“Well, there's another antagonist.” said Nightstrike.

“It's like a combination of the first book, second and fifth all rolled into one.” groaned Harry.

“Not a comforting thought.” said Sirius.

“But she would have just turned around and given it to him.” said Dr. Clark.

“Knew it.” said Dr. Clark.

“Scary thought, but dead on.” said Leroy.
“Can't wait to see your faces when I'm right.” said Harry with a smirk.

“Kind of hope he's wrong.” said Draco quietly.

“As do I, but even I know...he's right.” said Snape just as softly.

“Oh Ron...give back the seat.” said Charlie.

“Nice.” said Charlie with a snicker.

“Okay, he's got a point.” said Ron. “Have to give him that.”

“You're not helping Ron.” said Hermione.

“I'm not trying to help.” said Ron.
First Meeting with Tom Riddle Jr.

First paragraph.

“Don't you love rumors? They're so much fun.” said Harry with a roll of his eyes.

Dialogue line.

“I'd rather have them pretending to be deaf than jacking my theories around.” said Harry quietly.

Second paragraph, second sentence, first semi-colon.

“That's never good.” said Fred.

End of second paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Accident my good foot.” growled Moody.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

“When it comes to curses Potter, I'm the better choice on hand.” said Snape with a smirk.

Dialogue set.

“Thank goodness we're not in your day, then.” said George.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue line.
“He was always a snarky old bat to me as well.” said Sirius.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“How many years down the road will that be?” said Charlie.

“Giving a thought to his hand, I hope it's a long LONG wait.” said Bill.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, second sentence.

“He shouldn't be all that thrilled in meeting me either.” said Harry with a growl.

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Two galleons says I'm right and he knows it.” said Harry with a bright smile.

“Or humoring you.” said Hermione.

“It's on then.” said Harry holding up two gold coins.

Third paragraph.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.
Fourth paragraph.

“Don't you lot have barbers or something?” asked Dr. Clark.

“No, most wizards just let their hair grow out...or if their mother's get too tired of it, they tend to shear it off for us.” said Sirius cheekily.

Dialogue set.

“What a sleaze bucket.” said Nightstrike. “I thought the bastards we dealt with were criminals...”

Fifth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

Sixth paragraph.

“No!...Well...maybe...I don't know.” said Harry looking off to the side.

“I can understand the conflicting feelings your are experiencing.” said Glacier. The other students waited for him to say more, but he didn't.

“Oh come on! Don't leave us hanging!” muttered Lee.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, second sentence.

Mrs. McFinn giggled.

End of dialogue set.
“Oh no...” said Harry with a hand over his eyes.

“I did have quite the taste in fashion in my youth.” said Dumbledore.

“Hard to achieve both.” said Leroy.

“Hearing your voice over the phone or reading your handwriting, I wouldn't think you to show up in a plum colored outfit.” said Dr. Clark.

“I was going to say 'Hell no'...but maybe if he had some family.” said Bill.
“She's asking all the right questions...have to give her credit for that.” said Officer McFinn.

“PSYCHIC PAPER!” said Dr. Clark with a yell and joyous raise of his fist.

“What?” asked Sirius.

Dr. Clark blushed slightly and lowered his hand. “N-Never mind.”

“You know, with how in the second book he was all handsome and they say charming, it's a wonder that no one came to adopt him.” said Katie.
“Nice thing to say about a dying girl...” said Rudolph with a frown.

“Yeah, lots of laughs...” said Tonks quietly.

“I've never heard of a baby doing that, even you howled like a miniture banshee when she were being fussy.” said Sirius looking at Harry.
“I can attest to that.” said Harry holding his hand up.

Twenty-first paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Twenty-second paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Oh my god.” said Lavender covering her eyes.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

Twenty-third paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, first sentence.

Several people touched their noses absently.

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

Twenty-fourth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“I think that would be wise.” said Chief Hawkeye.

Twenty-fifth paragraph.

Twenty-sixth paragraph.

“Kind of sends you chills...doesn't it?” said Dean.
“Yeah.” said Seamus.

Dialogue line.

Twenty-seventh paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Suspicious little bugger isn’t he?” said Sirius.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Twenty-eighth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Yikes, he started early didn't he? Wonder what had him wrapped around the bend at that age?” said Mr. Weasley with a nervous chuckle.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Twenty-ninth paragraph, second sentence.

“Creepy...” said a third year Slytherin.

End of twenty-ninth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Thirtieth paragraph.

Dialogue set.

“I wouldn't ask them.” said Mrs. McFinn quietly, her eyes wide with horror.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.
“No one mentioned anyone being mad, but yourself.” said Dr. Nicodemus. “Quite a hysteria prone child isn't he?”

“Might as well get a base level of what he can do for starters. Good place to start.” said Professor Flitwick nodding with a smile.

Professor Flitwick blanched at the last sentence. “Ah...well...we don't want anyone to be able to do that right off the bat...or at any point.”

“It sent chills down my spine when he mentioned hurting people.” said Dumbledore. “I won't lie about that.”

“Stuff it, brat.” said Fred.
Thirty-fourth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Thirty-fifth paragraph, first sentence, eighth word.

“I can't tell if he needs a mother or a woodshed.” said Dr. Clark.

End of thirty-fifth paragraph.

Thirty-sixth paragraph.

Thirty-seventh paragraph.

“Not too sure showing a child that turns into a homicidal maniac a wardrobe catching fire is all that wise...” said Dr. Clark shakily.

Thirty-eighth paragraph.

Thirty-ninth paragraph.

“Well...I had a messed up childhood with my Uncle beating the living shit out of me (“Harry” squeaked Mrs. Wealsey) but I never wanted to set fire to anyone or anything like that.” said Harry. “What the hell was his excuse?”

Dialogue line.

Fortieth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Forty-first paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“If that box has dead mice in there or something I don't want to know.” said Ginny covering her eyes.
“What is so special about them?” asked a first year.

“He had stolen them...from the other children and possibly the staff members.” said Dumbledore with a cold look at the book.

“Unless you're Potter.” said Snape.

“Then you may be able to get around that 'bout eighty-five percent of the time.” said Harry with a smirk.

“Yeah, that lasted...what? Five years maybe?” said Harry.

“That would have been awesome to go with Dumbledore!” said a few of the first years.

Dumbledore chuckled warmly.
“What's his problem? Doesn't like anyone else sharing his name?” said Ernie.

“Nope.” said the students all together.

“He's really trying to find something special about himself, isn't he?” said Professor Sprout quietly.

“Whoa, that was a command...he must be tired.” said Sirius.
“I tend to think of every child special in their own way, why there is one student here in fact that while he doesn't show much on the surface, he is quite the talented artist, and one would never even think of it.” said Dumbledore with a twinkling smile.

“Not so much funny as the matron called him...more like super creepy.” said Parvati.

Harry blushed.

“You mean that he made his friends call him that, what an ego trip.” said Sirius.

“And you know all about those.” said Remus with a nudge.

“Oh boy...more stuff to remember.” said Colin.
End of chapter.

“What else was the mouth organ supposed to be?” asked a second year Hufflepuff.

“That's the end of that chapter.” said Officer McFinn.

“Well, that was a creepy chapter. Hope the next one attempts to be cheerful.” said Ron.

“Cheerful, my life? You're joking.” said Harry.
This chapter is called Chapter Fourteen.” said Officer McFinn.

“What is another phial of it a prize again?” said Sirius “Can't see that going as interestingly as the first.”

First paragraph.

“ Weird mist?” said Lee. “Never saw weird mist around here.”

Dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“How about just telling him the weaknesses and then move onto learning some curses or jinxes?” said Ron quietly with a roll of his eyes.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, second sentence, third comma.

Cormac smirked proudly.

“I'm going to assume that once that Harry shows up, Cormac will be shoved to the back of the queue.” said Katie.

“I'm hoping.” said Leanne with a frown towards Cormac.

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

“Know anyone else named Gwenog?” sneered Malfoy.

Dialogue line.

Ginny huffed indignantly.

“Well she did say in an interview that boys were not as good a Quidditch Players as women.” said
“And?” said Ginny sharply.

“And there is only one all female Quidditch team.” said George carefully.

“And women are less than half of the number of pro-players...” said Fred just as carefully.

“Could be that it's prejudice.” snapped Ginny.

“If a team wants to win, they'll take anyone they can get and like it.” said Fred.

Alicia looked between the twins and the youngest Weasely as they argued. “I don't know who's right here.”

“Me either...I just don't like Gwenog so it doesn't really matter to me.” said Katie.

Dialogue line.

Second paragraph.

“Go Neville!” said Hannah.

“Well, he always was one of the best in that class.” said Ernie with a smile.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

Third paragraph.

“If Neville came out looking like that, diving into the plant might not be the best idea.” said a first year.

“Actually, it's the best thing to do.” said Rudolph. “The moment it's touch, it spreads out it's vines and tries to beat off the person bothering it...though it tends to be a bit unforgiving, it'll give you some pretty nasty wounds if you get a particularly big one.”

“But we did find that if you pour some nice chamomile tea at it's roots that it calms down and you can easily move around the vines to get to the pod.” said Leroy with a bright smile.

Neville looked over at them excitedly. “Really? How did you discover that?”

“Rudy dropped the pot of tea outside in the garden.” said Leroy with a teasing smile.

“Sure, that was me.” said Rudolph nudging the blonde.
“Really sorry, but that sounds hilarious.” said Lee doubling over with laughter.

“Not funny anymore.” said Lee.

“It doesn't eat people does it?” asked Mrs. McFinn worriedly.

“No, but the inner thorns do have a toxin that makes your hands extremely itchy for quite a few days. Wizards and witches in the past have been known to continuously scratch so hard that it goes right down through the skin, and almost to the bone.” said Leroy.

“That's mostly what the gloves are for. But in the last twenty years there's been a antidote found for the toxin. Strangely enough...it's that instant hand-sanitizer from the Muggle world.” said Rudolph.

“Germ-X?” said Chief Hawkeye with a smirk.

“Yeah, that's it.” said Rudolph.

“We have quite a few at ours, they make wonderful decorations at Christmas.” said Luna dreamily.

The students stared.

“I...would like to see that actually...it would take a lot of work to make those things 'nice'.” said Blaise.

“Traitor.” said Harry mumbling slightly.
Sixth paragraph.

“Horace certainly didn't choose it, but it's a bit hard to get the students to change it.” said Dumbledore with a smile.

Dialogue set.

“OW! I didn't say that!” said Ron as Hermione elbowed him, she missed the interested look McLaggen was giving he.

Dialogue line.

“Oh boy...” said Sirius.

Seventh paragraph.

“And they were still talking.” said Remus shaking his head.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Eighth paragraph.

Several students laughed.

“I'm going to get a freaking ulcer from all this.” said Harry rubbing his eyes tiredly.

Dialogue line.

Ninth paragraph.

Dialogue set.

“This book is going to be awkward...” said Harry covering his eyes. “Glad they freaking woke up though.”
“Thanks for telling me.” said Harry.

“Focus on the task at hand please.” said Dr. Clark.

“They don't know it yet, but they've been doing it for years, sweetheart.” said Mrs. McFinn with a slight giggle.

“If we get that way, slap us.” said Ron and Hermione together.

“Whoo, big step.” said Sirius.

Dean quirked a brow in confusion.
Dean beamed.

“Hey, some of us could have gotten better since.” said a third year loudly.

“I don’t want another train wreck of a tryout again, I suppose.” said Harry.

Dialogue set.

Seamus blushed.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Never mind, Seamus is on the team.” said Harry quickly.

Fifteenth paragraph.

Several students laughed.

“Thanks ’Mione.” muttered Seamus.

Sixteenth paragraph.

“That’s the trials of being a team Captain.” said Angelina. “You should have heard the mutterings I got when Ron had first come on.”

“And then all the flak Olivier got when you came on.” said Alicia.

“And from what Angelina told me, the he was catching a lot for when the twins were signed on.” said Katie.

Seventeenth paragraph.

Ron bowed his head.

Eighteenth paragraph.
“Ooh.” said the students together.

“Bad move.” said Katie.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“When I want a stand in insulter, I'll give you a call first.” said Harry with a frown, but sent a wink over to Ginny.

“I'll be awaiting your owl.” said Ginny with a smirk.

Nineteenth paragraph.

“Thanks mate.” said Ron with a roll of his eyes.

Dialogue line.

Twentieth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Lionus smiled and shook his head.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Twenty-first paragraph.

“Our eyes!” shouted the twins.

“Wait it was read to us.” said Fred.

“Our ears!” shouted the twins.

“Oh sweet Merlin...” said Bill.

“Shortcake...” groaned Charlie.
“We know you're a young woman now...” said Percy carefully.

“But we don't want to stumble on that.” said Ron covering his eyes.

Twenty-second paragraph, first sentence.

Dean leaned away from Harry's direction, his eyes wide.

End of twenty-second paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Twenty-third paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Tomato, tomato.” said Fred.

Ginny glared at him while her parents seemed to vainly try to come up with a good argument.

“Young lady...” said Mr. Weasley at last. “I know that this hasn't happened yet, but let's have a chat...later...”

Ginny looked mutinously over to her father, but gave in at the firm look he gave her. “Yes daddy...”

“Ah hormones...the cause of premature deaths for every parent.” said Dr. Clark.

Twenty-fourth paragraph.

“What are you trying to do?” asked Seamus as Dean slowly got up.

“Hide under the chair.” said Dean.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Twenty-fifth paragraph.
“Don't finish that sentence.” said Remus covering his eyes.

“Not me!” said Harry. “I wouldn't ever say...whatever he was about to say.”

“Ehhh!” winced Ron.

“This just got ugly.” said Sirius.

“Just?” said Remus.

“Ronald!” said Mrs. Weasley.

“Ginny!” said Mr. Weasley.
“That's going to start something...” said Ernie.

“Yeah, keep telling yourself that.” said Bill.

“Drama king, I know.” said Harry.

Hermione blushed.

“Don't know if I should be...comfortable with that...he was seventeen...she was fourteen.” said Dr. Clark quietly.

“Well, that didn't last all that long...” said Ginny with a smile.
“It lasted a good bit...” said Harry.

Thirty-sixth paragraph.

Thirty-seventh paragraph.

Ginny couldn’t help but blush.

Thirty-eighth paragraph, first sentence.

“Well, she's not taking you now.” said Parvati.

End of thirty-eighth paragraph.

“Yeah...I went through that stage too...” said Charlie.

“And what happened?” asked Ron.

“I'm single and work with fire-breathing dragons...still can't talk to girls...” said Charlie.

Thirty-ninth paragraph.

Ron buried his face.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

Remus hissed. “That's hard...”

Fortieth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Not the right thing to say.” said a sixth year Ravenclaw.
“My team is not helping.” said Harry.
“You did!” scolded Hermione.

“And now the game is rigged, I hope you're happy with your future self.” said Hermione looking furiously at the scarred teen.

“So was the tryout.” said Harry with a sneer.

“Ooh, this is turning into the first book all over again.” said Dean.

“Young man...” said Madam Hooch looking firmly at Harry.
“Nice that you care, Potter.” sneered Malfoy.

“Just means that I don't know where you are.” said Harry. “If you're going to do something, I want it done right in front of me.”

Moody gave a toothy grin which looked positively frightening.

“He just remembered...” said Ginny.

“Hey, I don't have the same sort of freaky memory that Harry's got.” said Ron.

Harry inspected his nails as the teachers, Dumbledore included looked at Harry with a disappointed look.

“Hey, I know this hasn't happened yet, but really, that was kind of unfair.” said Sirius quietly.

“I agree.” said Remus.

“So do I.” said Harry, “Using that potion is unfair, and correct in being against the rules.”

“Then...”

“Let's move on.” said Officer McFinn.
Fifty-ninth paragraph.
“"I want to see that.” said Dr. Clark.

Sixtieth paragraph.

Dialogue set.

Sixty-first paragraph.

Sixty-second paragraph.

Dialogue set.

“Wow...riveting commentary...who was picked after I left?” said Lee with a groan.

Sixty-third paragraph.

“No!” said Lee. “That's not who you need, granted...I was sort of biased, but I wasn't a complete arse about it!”

Dialogue line.

Sixty-fourth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Harry...” said Hermione with a growl.

Ron looked at his friend in confusion. “Why would you do that mate?” he asked hurtfully.

Harry said nothing.

Sixty-fifth paragraph.

“And here I thought he just preferred redheads.” said Ginny.

Dialogue line.
“Oi, mess with the Slytherin team for a while you stuck up son of a Pygmy Puff.” shouted Dean.

Dialogue set, second sentence.

“Who?” asked George.

“Smith, I'm assuming.” said Harry.

“Good call.” said Angelina and the twins together.

End of dialogue set.

Sixty-sixth paragraph.

“Go Ron!” said Sirius.

“But this is cheating.” said Remus.

“Yeah...but...it's still good to see him in brighter spirits.” said Sirius.

Dialogue line.

Sixty-seventh paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Sixty-eighth paragraph.

“Oh no! Get it!” said George loudly.

“But if Ron has the lucky potion, then Harry gets it no problem.” said Fred.

Sixty-ninth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Seventieth paragraph, first sentence, first comma.

“Lucky potion influence.” muttered Hermione.

End of seventieth paragraph.
“Got to watch those tailwinds.” said Harry with a laugh.

“Here we go.” said Ron.

“The phial you poured in Ron's drink.” said Remus.

“That wasn't nice.” said Mr. Weasley wincing.

The school was silent.

“No way...” said the twins, the first to speak.

“That was...WICKED!” said Lee.

The disapproving looks faded to ones of complete amazement, even Snape was dumbfounded.
“Ah...don't know how to feel about that.” said Charlie. “One hand, you shouldn't round on her...other hand, she shouldn't have said that.”

“Have faith in me...” said Ron quietly. “Harry does...”

“Run.” said Dr. Clark and Sirius together.

“Oh for f*ck's sake.” muttered Harry.

“Hey.” said Remus.

“Looks like you'll have your own conversation with us too, huh?” said Mr. Weasley.

“Yeah, sure.” said Ron blushing heavily and not looking at either Hermione or Lavender who seemed to be glaring daggers at each other.
“Should I be concerned?” said Ginny.

“My friends are idiots.” said Harry.

“Welcome to the club mate.” said Remus.

“Oh for pity's sake.” said Mrs. McFinn shaking her head.

“You didn't need a wingman.” said Harry.
“You go girl.” said several dozen witches in the room.

“Wonder if Harry saved him?” said Colin.

“I probably let him have it for a minute or two.” said Harry.

“So...how did you know that future you didn't have him drink the potion?” asked Dennis.

“A potion that would give me a perfect day? I wasn't going to waste it on a game, not with all the stuff going on now.” said Harry. “I love Quidditch and I could be very happy if my life revolved around that instead of all this danger...but it doesn't, so it doesn't even measure up on the priority list.”
Disrespecting a Teacher

First paragraph, second sentence, first comma.

“Oh for the love of...” muttered Harry.

“Least you're not Sirius, he would stop and kiss them all...and then carry around a sprig of it.” said Remus with a smirk.

“Hey, it's my favorite tradition.” said Sirius with a shrug.

End of first paragraph.

Second paragraph, second sentence, third comma.

Ron blushed.

Second paragraph, third sentence, first semi-colon.

Lavender giggled and fluttered her eyes at Ron who chuckled nervously while Hermione glared at the side of his head.

End of second paragraph.

“You'd think you'd get used to that.” said Leroy as he sat with his arms folded.

“I have...that's the bad part.” said Harry.

Third paragraph, first sentence, second comma.

“Good girl.” whispered Alicia.

End of third paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Fourth paragraph.

Dumbledore chuckled lightly.
Dialogue set.

“Keep telling yourself that.” said Professor Flitwick shaking his head fondly.

“If you're with a girl now...you're not a free agent anymore.” said Fred.

“Girls get a bit...possessive when it comes to boys.” said George quietly.

Fifth paragraph.

“Boys with hormones...” said Tonks shaking her head.

“Tell us about it.” said Mr. and Mrs. Weasley both smiling brightly.

Sixth paragraph.

“Yeah, cause conversations in the library always ends well for you lot.” said Charlie.

Dialogue line.

Seventh paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“He always needs to careful...what's the reason this time?” said Dennis.

Dialogue set.

Snape tried to hide a snort of amusement.

Dialogue set, third sentence.

Harry's eyes widened and his face took on a ruddy hue.

“I don't know whether to be proud...or worried.” said Sirius.
Hermione giggled slightly. “I wouldn't let you flounder like that, I'm sure I listened to see if they had it on them or not.”

“See.” said Hermione gesturing towards the book.

Snape flushed faintly. No, he had not had to come up with a plan for that...

As Ron slowly turned to look at his best mate, Harry threw up his hands. “Peace...I want to live in peace...and live if that's optional.” said Harry.

“Yeah, cause anyone follows his rules.” said Fred.

Fred and George looked at each other and then back at Harry. “Ah...we're not checking the backgrounds and the reasons everyone wants our products.”
“You should.” said Harry, Moody and Lionus together. “You might have some not so friendly stuff being used against us.”

The twins stared at the three of them. “That was creepy.” said George.

“And we do that all the time.” said Fred.

Dialogue line.

Ninth paragraph.

Dialogue set.

“Compared to warping people's mind...making them think they're lucky isn't all that terrible.” said Flitwick.

Hermione blushed.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

“I'm not letting go till I see someone else commit what I know he's doing.” said Harry.

“Good boy.” muttered Officer McFinn.

“Whatever happened to 'innocent till proven guilty'?” said Dr. Clark.

“Wonderful ideal that we try and uphold...but when it comes to murderers...” said Officer McFinn not bother to finish his sentence. “I'll just say that while we need quite a bit of polishing up, we're human...and we're going to have the same emotional responses as the rest of you, we're just trained a bit more to hold them in and not show it. But when we have the bastard, and we know it, we'll nail them to every cross we can get our hands on.”

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

Several of the girls giggled.

“Oh...she's not going to like that.” said a fifth year Gryffindor student.
“Good thing she's not here.” whispered Professor Sprout.

“Hey, I got it this way.” said Harry.

“It's a used book!” said Harry.

“Arggh! Get it out, get it out, get it out!” said Ron holding his hands over his ears.

“Don't want to even think that!” said Percy closing his eyes tightly.

“No...just...no!” said Bill covering his eyes and laughing.
“And that is probably why the Fat Lady was smiling.” said George.

Thirteenth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“And she sent them to a fifteen year old girl...why?” said Dr. Clark.

Dialogue line.

Fourteenth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Fifteenth paragraph.

Several students groaned while Ron and Lavender blushed.

“If I ever get like that in public...just...put me out of my misery.” muttered Harry.

“Not one for public displays of affection like that huh?” said Sirius with a smirk.

“I'm selfish like that.” said Harry with a blush.

Dialogue line.

Sixteenth paragraph.

“Yeah right.” said the students together.

Seventeenth paragraph, third sentence, fist semi-colon.

Leroy looked over at his husband.

“What?” asked Rudolph.

“Um...I know you said you thought about growing a mustache...” said Leroy uncomfortably. “But if you get a handlebar...I'm shaving it...whether your awake or not.”

Rudolph blinked. “Maybe...I'll just keep shaving.”
Seventeenth paragraph, end of third sentence.
“First year...all over again.” said Remus shaking his head.

End of seventeenth paragraph.

Eighteenth paragraph.

Dialogue line.
“Word of advice...don't turn blonde.” said Sirius.

“Why?” asked Harry.

“Trust me...girls like tall dark handsome guys...tall blonde boys tend to come off looking like jocks and jerks.” said Sirius.

“Hey.” said Leroy in a hurt voice.

Dialogue line.

Nineteenth paragraph.

Dialogue set.

Twentieth paragraph.
“Other than Ron is a giant pain in the arse?” said Hermione with a smirk.

“Ha, knew I was her favorite.” said Harry.

“You're kidding, right? Her first curse word was towards me! Clearly, I'm the favorite.” said Ron pointing to himself.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“I don't mean too...I just...I dunno, get defensive.” said Ron looking uncomfortable.
“What the hell kind of segue is that?” asked Nightstrike.

“Last time I went with a girl to a party in these books...it didn't go so well.” said Harry.

“Go for it sweetie, start a new trend.” said Tonks with a smile.

“Well, this won't go all that well.” said Sirius. “He loves romantic gossip.”

“As friends, Peeves, as friends.” said Luna with a fond smile.

“And I'm sure I'm saying that because you made a good choice.” said Ron with a weak smile.
“Don't do something stupid and you won't get pecked to death.” muttered Hannah.

“You're so supportive.” snickered Terry.

“Hey, honesty hurts.” said Harry.

“Tell me about it.” said Sirius, “Always made me gag when with James would...”

“Shut up.” said Remus.

Parvati blushed.

“That they are.” said Leroy. “And that’s not including the psycho nuts.”
Cormac smiled brightly, oblivious to the groans a few of the students were making, Ron and Harry in particular.

Flitwick covered his eyes and chuckled.

“Merlin...please say no.” said Katie shaking her head.

“You're pretty scary...” said Ron.

“Girls are evil.” said a first year Slytherin.

“Gotta watch your back in the way of romance.” said Rudolph.
“You’ll get that.” said Sirius with a bark like laugh.

“Maybe we should send the mutt away for a while.” muttered Snape.

Neville sent a small frown over to Harry, but Luna only grasped his hand.

“Let’s just say they take away from your natural charm and beauty.” said Leroy with a wink.

Tonks shrieked with laughter. “Oh, I ’m telling him, first chance I get!”

Tonks screamed with mirth as she fell from her chair.

“She apologizes.” said Remus looking over to Luna.

“Truth is stranger than fiction.” said Luna wisely.
“I daresay that he would insist on a unused classroom to be converted into a office.” said Dumbledore stroking his beard.

“Pompus...” muttered Ron.

“I'll pass...I'll meet them in my own time.” said Harry.

“Wherever he's taking me, I want backup.” said Harry.

“Oh no...not him.” said Professor Sprout.

“Is that the book that Viper keeps chuckling to himself as he reads?” asked Nightstrike.

“Trust me, you don't want it.” said Harry waving his hand.
“Didn’t they get enough of me from the Triwizard Tournament?” groaned Harry.

Dialogue set, fourth sentence, first dash.

“You mean talking about his past for four or five hours at a time isn’t tasking?” said Draco with a sneer.

“We’ve been doing it for weeks now, and I can't wait for this to be done.” snorted Harry.

Dialogue set, sixth sentence.

Mrs. McFinn blushed.

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

“Yeah, like he needs anymore.” said Sirius with a chuckle.

Dialogue line.

Thirty-fifth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Now to see if we need to pummel McLaggan or not.” muttered Fred and George.

Dialogue line.

“You're lucky this hasn't happened yet, I'd slice off your hands...at the shoulder.” said Harry looking at Cormac while taking a long kitchen knife out of his robes and tossing it lightly in the air, causing the Gryffindor boy to pale considerably..

Hermione smiled and turned a faint pink.
“We would never speak to you again.” said Ron, Harry, Ginny, Fred and George together.

“You're flying in unfriendly skies there mate.” said Lee darkly.

“Well, this ought to be interesting.” said Hannah.

“Tempest would not be too happy to hear that.” said Nightstrike.

“You asked the dimwit to go with you.” muttered a seventh year Slytherin.
“That's what boys do to impress girls.” said Sirius.

“Not quite the best approach, but one that we do tend to fall on in our youths.” said Dumbledore.

“Merlin dammit.” grumbled Harry.

“Cause I don't want to develop a nervous twitch.” said Harry.

Snape snorted in amusement.

Sirius groaned, “Who invites him to a party?”

“A higher plane of sophistication than what you could ever hope to be introduced to.” sneered Snape.

“Yeah, because Slughorn is that sort.” said Sirius.
“Yeah, can't see him being all that pleased that for so long I was nothing more than a mediocre student, and now apparently I'm top in the class.” said Harry.

“He's going to take that in a different direction.” said Remus.

Snape snickered darkly to himself.

“Something funny?”

“Nothing at all Draco.” said Snape.

Moody smirked, but Lionus muttered out of the corner of his mouth. “Don't think you've won just yet.”

“After meeting you all, I don't believe that anymore, you all seem so nice.” said Luna dreamily.

“Thanks Miss Lovegood, always nice to hear.” said Kingsley with a chuckle.
“Damn, I wanna see that in real life.” said a seventh year Ravenclaw student.

“The moment I'll believe that is the moment that I let my guard down.” snarled Moody.

“He's such a sadist.” said Hannah.

“Permission to prowl? I want that.” said Sirius.

“That in itself is a punishment.” said McGonagall with a roll of her eyes.

“Snape's not afraid of anything though.” said a second year Slytherin.

Snape quirked a brow in the youth's direction.

“Now that sounds more like him.” muttered Ron.
Forty-seventh paragraph, third sentence.

“Concerned Potter?” chuckled Malfoy.

“I'll keep it in mind to ignore you.” said Harry.

End of forty-seventh paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Yeah, him being hard on...well...can't say that now that we've started these books.” said Fred.

Forty-eighth paragraph.

“Hopefully, future you learned a bit from the last time.” said Moody.

Dialogue set.

“She would be.” muttered Hermione.

Forty-ninth paragraph.

Both Snape and Malfoy scowled at Harry.

“You've both known for six years that I'm nosy, after leaving the way you did and with you acting the way that you did, what could you possibly expect?” said Harry with a laugh and a shrug.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“No proof to be had, but I'm calling 'bullshit'.” said Harry.

“Harry!” chided Mrs. Weasley and Mrs. McFinn.
“You're not helping by laughing you guys.” chuckled Remus as Sirius, Dr. Clark, Rudolph and Leroy laughed.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

“So he knows Occlumency at that age? I'm impressed.” said Dr. Nicodemus.

“See, Potter, I can do it.” said Malfoy with a smirk.

“Yeah, well, the person that taught you was probably someone you didn't want to beat over the head with a cauldron now was it?” Harry retorted.

Fiftieth paragraph, first sentence.

“Well, you're not brave...or stupid enough to bean her over the head.” said Bill.

End of fiftieth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Ha!” shouted Harry and pointing at his two friends.

Fifty-first paragraph.

“Knew it, knew it, knew it!” muttered Harry glaring at the book.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

“How about taking you over my knee?” whispered Snape.

Malfoy blushed.

Fifty-second paragraph.
“I would be dancing and singing if I had a teacher that wouldn't give me detention or report me to Dumbledore!” said Fred.

“The stuff we could get away with....that we don't get away with already.” said George.

“Jerk.” muttered a seventh year Slytherin girl.

“Now to figure out where those guys are at while this is all going on.” said Harry with a manic smile.

Sirius stared at his godson. “You're starting to scare me....you know this hasn't happened yet.”

“Yeah, but the books are right here, I'm sure I'll see or hear something...” said Harry with a cruel smile.

Sirius blinked.

“Well, we need protecting from Death Eaters, you can go suck an egg for all I care.” said Ron.
Dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

“Here at the school? Wonder who they are?” said Harry thoughtfully.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Can't see him wanting glory...not his style.” said Remus.

End of chapter.

“Man, this has been one heck of a chapter.” said Terry.

“Let's keep going.” said Harry eagerly.

“And your lessons?” said Snape with a quirked brow.

“Don't care.” said Harry waving his hand dismissively.

Dumbledore and Speckerton shared a significant look.
Avoiding a Mental Breakdown

“Still don't see why we couldn't continue, or at least just me.” said Harry sharply as the teachers began to wrangle the students to go to classes.

“It's best to take these things slowly, especially the parts regarding the future.” said Dumbledore softly. “You are getting quite worked up.”

“Says who?” said Harry with a scowl.

Dumbledore said nothing, but reached down and took a light hold of the ends of Harry's hair. The stark white color was climbing slowly up towards his scalp as he held the hair in hand. “I think this is a good indication to take a break. We will reconvene tomorrow morning...we will learn what these books have to offer in due time, but it won't help you if we do it all in one shot.”

Harry growled softly.

“I can understand your frustration, but it's for the best in regards for your health. Perhaps...you can cook something for dinner tonight, would that make you feel a bit better?” said Dumbledore with a smile.

“Can we continue on reading at dinner?” said Harry hopefully.

“I do not think that would be wise, as with many of the teachers, (including myself) have planned on assigning homework today.” said Dumbledore carefully. “There is quite a lot of schoolwork to be done.”

Harry scowled once again. “Come on...we're finally getting answers....” and without any further speaking, he stood up and stalked out of the Great Hall.

“I was afraid of this.” said Speckerton quietly as he came walking up to Dumbledore, both their gazes not leaving the Great Hall's doors. “This has always happens when it comes to the books of futuristic events. They get over excited, stressed out, and start to go down a massive mental breakdown. I've heard of one man nearly beat the reader to death because he wasn't reading fast enough.”
“Is there any way to put an end to it, before it gets bad?” asked Sirius standing up and looking firmly at the Unspeakable. “Should we just get these books over and done with right away...forget the classes for a bit longer? I mean, he can't exactly hurt Officer McFinn, no offense meant to him in the slightest.”

“It's been tried to get it all over as soon as possible, but it only made it worse. It made the subject of the books pretty ill, both mentally and physically. They became overly suspicious, paranoid, and then finally fell down a slippery slope of mental destabilization.”

“Paranoid...sounds like Potter's already there.” snickered Malfoy who was passing by.

“That's the scary thing...he has...at least when it comes to you.” said Speckerton stopping Malfoy with a glare, and then turning back to Dumbledore. “He's already starting down that path.”

“Should we take a break?” said Sirius.

“Holiday break is just around the corner, less than a month away, but frankly...even with the speed that we're going at, we'll no doubt finish this book before two weeks are up. That most likely would not help him.”

“So give him his break early?” said Mrs. McFinn.

“Drastically early, and I think keeping him away from the books would be beneficial.” said Speckerton.

“I thought keeping him from the books would be a bad thing.” said Dr. Clark.

“Long term, yes, but short term has some benefits. He'll start to get back on track mentally...not that he's completely off the rails, we stopped it long before he can get that far. But it's better to put a halt on it now, as opposed to paying for it later.” said Speckerton.

“Sleeping draughts, and just a calm environment would be beneficial I would think, though...perhaps we would have to think about him leaving the school all together. Don't want him sneaking down and taking the books by force.” said Dr. Nicodemus.
“So we should plan on taking him to Night's Rest?” asked Sirius.

“Yes, and very soon...what do you think Glacier?” asked Dr. Nicodemus looking over to the usually stoic healer.

The Ranger Healer stood up and sighed. “That would be a good idea I should think, but I recommend you getting Harry on board with the idea. Do not just tie him up and take him to Night's Rest. It would be very detrimental to his health.”

Sirius and Remus nodded to each other and left the Great Hall.

Glacier looked over to the Muggles in the bowl. “It would be helpful if you would also convince him to go, he most likely will want to hold out so that you can enjoy a 'Magical Christmas.'” said Glacier. “You can always come back next year and enjoy an authentic Hogwarts Christmas, but this year is not the best time.”

“We can wait a thousand years.” said Dr. Clark. “A million years, we just want Harry to be happy...and healthy.”

Harry tapped his foot angrily, looking between Sirius, Remus, Dr. Clark and Mrs. McFinn. His face twisted in a scowl and his eyes a light with fury.

“You mean...to tell me...that I'm going to have to wait...HOW LONG?” shouted Harry.

“Harry calm down...” said Sirius soothingly.

“'I'm CALM, you're just being RIDICULOUS! We could finish these books in two months, but no! We have to go play 'Holiday TV special' at Night's Rest!’” yelled Harry.

“It's just for a few weeks...everyone is pretty much staying here, from what I gather and I think we're going to be back in time for Christmas. That way Mrs. McFinn and Dr. Clark can have a good Hogwarts Christmas.” said Remus with a slight smile.
Harry continued to tap his foot, till it almost became a loud stomping. “Why can't we just take the books with us? I mean...I'd like to spend time with Officer McFinn again.” said Harry.

“I asked if there was a way he could leave the castle, sweetheart, but they say no...he has to stay here...some sort of magical physical law or something like that.” said Mrs. McFinn, sending a fleeting look to Sirius.

Harry only continued to stomp his foot till Remus lightly placed his own on top of it..

“Think of it as a vacation, a longer than one day vacation. IF you start feeling...well...we'll go with feeling better, we'll come back sooner.” said Remus gently.

“The sooner we go the sooner we can get back?” asked Harry with a quirk of his brow as he continued to try and move his captured foot.

“That's right.” said Sirius. “Though, we'll stay as long as we need to to make sure that you're completely fine. No placating us.”

Harry sighed and groaned.

=-=-=-=-=-=-=

The next morning, the students found that Harry and the rest of his entourage were gone.

“Where the heck did they go this time?” asked Ron.

“They went to Night's Rest, Mr. Weasley.” said McGonagall passing out class schedules. With Harry gone they could drive in some honest to goodness classwork in and with the proper schedules. The students weren't happy to say the least, but the teachers were relieved to get back to normalcy, even if it was only for few weeks before the holidays.

Despite Harry not being present, that didn't stop many people from avoiding Officer McFinn. Some people asked about various Muggle things, such as subways, planes, automatic coffee pots, and others wanted to know more about Harry's childhood, seeing as how there were no more Recollection Scrolls or Scattered Shots.
“So...he was really smart when he was in Elementary school?” asked Colin at dinner, his eyes widened in admiration as he sat in front of the shaft of light shielding the man and the books.

“As sharp as a tack. That kid would have gone on to be a scientist or something, I just know it. But he got the letter for here instead...now it seems like he's leaning towards cooking or being a cop like myself.” said Officer McFinn with a warm chuckle.

“And that awesome security thing.” quipped Colin.

“Yeah, well, he's been shot at before thanks to that job, I'm hoping he cuts back.” said Officer McFinn with a frown.

“Really? He's really been shot at?” said Hermione looking at the deceased officer in horror.

“Yeah, it was a trap, set up by Buckthorn from prison.” said Officer McFinn as he turned one of the pages in the books.

“I wanna hear about it! Tell us please!” said Dennis coming over to sit beside his brother.

“Or maybe you can show us?” said Colin eagerly.

Officer McFinn looked between the two boys in front of him and the now silent Great Hall. He rubbed the back of his neck and sighed.

“Harry has to be here for that.” said Hermione.

“Not really, I'm here...I'm all the power it's going to need.” said Officer McFinn.

“So then you could show us!” said Dennis.

Officer McFinn looked around at the students, who seemed to be hanging onto his every word and hoping. He gave a great sigh, “Well, why not.”
“Alright!” said a few of the students happily. “It's been way too long since the last one.”

Officer McFinn rolled his eyes. “Perhaps because I said it put a strain on me....that might be the reason...”

---

Far off in the village of Little Hangleton, where there was once only one Ranger guarding the house, there was now seventeen. Dr. Nicodemus was standing over a Ranger that was on the ground, bleeding heavily from a large wooden stake dangerously close to his heart and his face burning from what looked like ordinary water.

“Stay with me Viper. Don't you dare die on me boy.” he muttered trying to rid the water from his face with a mixture of different herbs and a black cloth.

Viper made a choking sound and looked up at the Ranger doctor. “P-P-Potter...”

“We got Voldemort, he isn't going to get anywhere near the kid.” said Lionus kneeling beside the vampire's head.

“Tell...Tell him...I'm...s-sorry...” said Viper weakly.

“You can tell him yourself.” growled Dr. Nicodemus.

“No...I...d-didn't understand...I still...d-don't....but...I...vould still like to leave....on good terms...” he gasped out as Nicodemus slowly removed the large wooden stake from the vampire's chest, blood pouring from his chest, face and his mouth.

“Doc.” said Lionus quietly.

“It's not looking good, I'll need to take him home....I'll let you know if something drastic happens....keep Wildfire away from Riddle.” said Doctor Nicodemus standing with Viper as he was slowly raised from the ground by two Rangers wearing long white coats. “Potter will want a shot in this at some point, won't do to have her avenge her partner and gut him like a fish.”
“Speak of the she-devil.” said a animal skin wearing Ranger coming up to them, holding a scraggly looking rat in a black metal cage, his straw hat hanging behind his neck by a long leather cord.

“Where is he? Where is he?” screamed Wildfire as she pushed through the ranks.

“Over here, Wildfire.” said Lionus waving her over. “Hunter, take Wormatil to Headquarters, I'll take care of him later, escort Mr. Riddle there as well, last thing we need is for her to break protocol.” he added with a nod to Wildfire.

“Yes sir.” said the animal pelt wearing Ranger turning away with his cage, ordering the Rangers beside the house to follow him.

“Where is he? Where is the bastard that hurt Viper? I want to burn his face clear off, I'm going to melt his very soul!” screamed Wildfire, her entire body suddenly became engulfed in flames. “I'll make sure his death is slow...painful...I'll...!”

“Easy there, don't make me put you on restriction. Riddle's in custody now, and he's going to be dealt with. Nicodemus is taking Viper to the Northern Sanatorium now. You can go and be with him if you want, just don't give Doc a hard time...he's doing all he can.” said Lionus somberly.

The fire surrounding her slowly faded, leaving behind a worried looking woman, who said nothing but nodded and hurried away from the scene.

“I freaked when Typhoon nearly bought it in Korea, but that was unexpected.” said a Ranger from behind the Star Captain Lionus.

“You would be going ballistic too if your hormones were out of whack.” said Lionus quietly, watching Wildfire leave with a sympathetic look.
Shots in the Dark

Back at Hogwarts:

The students were excited to finally have another Recollection Scroll, but what they didn't quite notice was that Officer McFinn had gone quiet and was breathing deeply.

“Are you alright, James?” asked Dumbledore coming over to stand beside him.

“It's going to be a quick one, I don't think I can hold you all in there for long.” said Officer McFinn softly. “Get ready.”

Suddenly, the students, teachers and remaining guests found themselves falling through the familiar darkness of time and space. It had been so long since they had encountered at Recollection Scroll that quite a few of them, child and adult alike, were eager to see what was about to unfold.

They knew that this was about to show them that Harry was going to be shot, and while that was a horrifying idea, that did not quell the excitement that they were feeling.

They found themselves standing on the gated grounds of a large house in the middle of a small city where there was tall buildings surrounding it on either side, but were in part blocked by several tall, thick evergreen trees. The moon was partially blocked by a large cloud bank and gave little to no light to the earth below.

The Watchers, or at least the students, looked around eagerly, trying to find any sign of Harry either coming to the Manor or leaving it. For a few minutes they looked all around trying to find him till at least a first year caught sight of him on the roof of the Manor.

“There he is!” called the first year excitedly.

All eyes turned towards the roof and after a moment they could see a black shape moving swiftly across the roof and towards the large pine tree beside the house.

“I thought Officer McFinn said that Harry…” started Hermione.
“Oh my god!” screamed Mrs. Weasley clutching a hand to her bosom.

“Harry!” screamed Hermione.

They saw the figure stumble a bit but he managed to get off the roof and get to the safety of the thick pine tree. The figure shimmied down the tree and over the gate and out into the dark street. The Watchers glided behind him, following the dark cloaked figure as he disappeared into the darkness.

But even the darkness was not as safe as they thought.

“HARRY!” shouted several of the Watchers together.

The figure they knew to be Harry came out of the darkness and ran down the street, this time clutching his arm and running even faster. The sound of several motorbikes starting up and blaring down the street came from behind them all and gave chase to the poor black dressed youth. Four of them gave the poor boy a run for his very life as he tried to duck down several narrow alleyways and across busy streets. Only by running through tight quarters and narrow alleys kept him from being caught.

Finally he got to one street where it was also an overpass where a truck route passed underneath. The motorbikes drew nearer and the figure went to back up against the wall of the overpass, his face still hidden from the oncoming bikers. They thought Harry was about to be caught when the young man fell over the side and into the lorry traffic.

“Oh no!” yelled the teachers together. They rushed over to the side of the road, unsure whether they wanted to look down or not.

The bikes drew nearer and looked down at the truck route below, it was dark and there was no sign of the figure that they had been chasing. Only large lorries passing and not a one of them was stopping or slowing down.
“Where did that bastard go?” shouted one of the riders.

“If we don't bring him to the boss...” said another rider.

“We got a few shots at him, let's each take a hospital.” said the leader. “I know I shot him in the arm and in the gullet, we just need to keep an eye out on the E.R's.”

The Watchers then felt themselves being jerked forward and they found themselves in the home of the Dursleys, more specifically Harry's room. It was dark and only the ticking of the clock in the hall and the quiet snoring of Dudley in the next bedroom supplied the room with any sound. The light from the streetlight beamed into the room, showing the untidiness of preteen's room.

Mrs. Weasley, trying to recover from hearing the gunshots and seeing Harry injured, tutted nervously about the state of his room and the condition of Hedwig's cage. Mr. Weasley, sensing his wife's distress, came over and placed an arm around her.

“He's alright, he's at Night's Rest and resting comfortably I'm sure.” said Mr. Weasley.

They didn't know where Harry was at all till they heard a soft pair of footsteps coming from outside the room and coming from the bottom of the stairs. They heard a soft creak and then nothing.

“The bottom stair!” said the twins together in a hushed tone.

Suddenly the door opened and in came Harry, dressed all in black and gripping his arm. He rushed over to where his dresser was, threw off his cloak and the thick vest onto the bed and pulled out a phial of bluish liquid. He poured the contents of the potion over his arm and before their very eyes the wound slowly close. Then he lifted his shirt and splashed a bit of the remaining potion on his abdomen where an angry looking red mark and bruise was.

“Is that a potion? How did he sneak that out of the trunk and away from his uncle?” asked Ron.

“Who cares, at least he had something.” said Fred.
“How was he not hurt more with that shot at his stomach...” said Dean.

Hermione went over to the discarded vest and looked at it carefully. “This seems pretty thick...would it...could it be...bulletproof? Where in the world would he have gotten a bulletproof vest?” She looked around but didn't see Officer McFinn.

“Where is he at?” asked Hermione.

“I don't think he came with us.” said Seamus.

Then they all heard Harry mutter some very...colorful...words regarding the events of the night. They heard him muttering things about revenge and getting payback against the ones that shot him.

“Whoa, those are some dark words he's using.” said Bill leaning away from the young man. “Who would have thought our nice...soft spoken Harry could have such thoughts racking about in his head.” he finished with a weak smile.

The scene shifted once again and quick visions of Harry going to a library and typing away on a computer, following some shady characters down rougher streets dressed in various different outfits, dressed all in black and returning to the Manor and then finally entering the Police Department.

Finally the scene before them shifted back to the Dursley's kitchen where Uncle Vernon was reading the paper.

“Seems that there was a bit of a pack of hooligans shooting up people in the dark a few nights ago. Sounds like they're going to be locked up; throw away the key I say! Can't trust these young troublemakers...” he cast a dark look in Harry's direction, but he didn't notice the cruel smirk on his lips. “Wonder how they got the pistols to start with...”

They were all deposited back to the Great Hall, and they noticed Officer McFinn was leaning back in his chair and breathing deeply, his ghostly face paler than usual.

“I thought you said Buckthorn was the one behind it.” said Dean.
“He was, he and the owner of the manor had an agreement to try and trap him. Thankfully, they never got a clean shot at him or...I shudder to even think about it.” said Officer McFinn trying to shoo away Madam Pomfrey. “I'm dead already, you can't help me.”

“Did they get punished?” asked Hermione.

“Well, Harry was asked to steal anything that caught his eye...and he passed up the obvious trap of a glittering jewel and went for a small red Faberge egg with black pearls.” said Officer McFinn looking apologetically towards the muttering school nurse.

“Why was the glittering jewel a trap?” asked Ron.

“Well, I suppose there was too many lights pointing at it, and...well, it was discovered afterwards that it was just a rock candy jewel...completely fake. The egg he took was worth more than what the retainer he charged that man...and with him attacking Harry...broke their contract. So...Harry got to keep the egg, and the man can't come forward and say that it was stolen without having to answer a lot of uncomfortable questions.” said Officer McFinn with a smirk. “That man and Buckthorn haven't spoken to each other since.”

“Do you think that Harry still has the egg?” asked Dennis eagerly.

“I don't think he lets that egg far away from himself, can't quite blame him actually. That egg is considered to be, well...worth more than what a teacher here can make in seventy years of continuous work.” said Officer McFinn his breathing finally evening out.

“Are you serious?” said Charlie shocked.

“It was a harsh blow, and a devastating mistake that the man was not prepared to take on again.” said Officer McFinn.

“Won't the man that owned the egg be on the lookout to see if someone says that they have it?” asked Hermione. “Harry'll be found out then.”

“Not really, Harry's not stupid enough to proclaim that he's got it, he'll keep it nice and safe only let it be known to himself....Though...that's kind of now going to have to change.” said Officer McFinn smiling weakly.

“We won't tell...will we fellows?” said Fred with a threatening smile on his lips.

“Yeah, no one will tell anyone...anything right?” said George a similar smile on their lips.

Officer McFinn rolled his eyes.

“How come we couldn't see the men that shot Harry be arrested?” asked Colin.

“I'm tired, and that was enough to show you. I'm not doing another one of those, unless Harry's here and that he asks.” said Officer McFinn. “I'm not able to power those sorts of things without him here, and I was a fool to even try.”

“Sorry.” said Colin, Dennis and a few other students somberly.

“I suppose I can forgive you.” said Officer McFinn chuckling. “Now, go and get your dinner done and then homework. I don't want your teachers mad at me...not that they can do much.”
Star Captain is Chosen!

Lionus sat rigidly in the ornate wooden chair as he waited for Chief Hawkeye to return from where it was that the man walked off to before their meeting. He was called to the Chief's office immediately after he had received the medical report from Nicodemus about Viper and Wildfire, who had gotten sick beside his healing pod. Viper was still in critical condition, but there was a strong chance that he would recover. That was not the reason that this emergency meeting was called.

Wildfire was pregnant, and Viper was the father.

Lionus knew of that before the report came to the Chief's desk, they were in his Company after all, but that was not the only reason that he was sitting in the Chief's office. The main fact that had brought Lionus there was that it was a vampire and human love affair.

Racism and prejudice was not exempt from even the Rangers, there were some Rangers that refused to work with certain kinds of Rangers. Now if they were not their Squad or Company leaders than their personal preferences meant nothing and they most likely had to work with those they did not want to, and would have to accept it.

When it came to the affairs of the heart, (such as same sex, or inter-humanoid species or perhaps even both) quite a few Rangers that did not seem to be prejudice towards anything would suddenly denounce any sort of support and would be quite vocal on where they stood on the issue. Some would start bringing their religion of choice into the debate and while a few spoke with good intentions, there were others...that did not.

Quite a few Rangers had found love in the strangest of places and had given form to families, but that did not stop violence from happening to the pair of star-crossed lovers. Granted, the assailants were immediately punished by dismissal and possibly imprisonment in Hell's Garden, but that did not stop all of them. Once a Captain took on at least one of the couples and offered their support aloud to the Rangers, the attacks would continue, only on a much smaller scale. For example, simple snubbing, rude behavior during a rest period or the spreading of vicious rumors.

Lionus, Wildfire, and Viper had been content with keeping the affair on the quiet side, just to avoid any hostility, but with Nicodemus following protocol...and not knowing that it was a secret, (the man had the uncanny ability to know almost anything about anybody in the entire Ranger organization) told the Chief.

The pregnancy was not the only thing that Nicodemus told the Chief about, Viper and Wildfire had also gotten married, as he had seen the wedding rings…which were in a very unorthodox place, secured fast to a secret weapon’s holster. Now while normal people could elope if it suited them, Rangers had to send in the necessary paperwork in order for them to even contemplate getting married. Then it was necessary for them both to meet a Ranger psychiatrist and see if they were mentally compatible, (As marriages were a one shot thing in the Ranger and you were married for life whether you continued to love each other or not. No one wanted to deal with the alimony or child custody headaches) after that they were given the green light to get married.

After Wildfire and Viper had passionately (it was quite shocking to see Viper have any sort of passion other than an “anger” filled passion) declared that they would find a way to get married with or without the Ranger's approval, Lionus smoothed the way for them to get married and had even acted as Best Man for Viper.

Lionus had taken quite a few liberties in the quiet support of his two lieutenants, while he could easily bring them out as a married couple and declare his support...perhaps it was better if this was held quietly, as there was no Star Captain decided yet and the wrong person in that position could cause the new couple quite a bit of problems.

Now he was brought to the Chief’s office, what was he going to do? Place Wildfire on restriction till the baby was born and a year after that was a given. The Chief was a strict family orientated man and would quite insist that one if not both parents took a few years off of work just to enjoy the children. So while they may not be dismissed, at least Wildfire was not going to be on duty for a year or so and then Viper would soon follow.

The uncertainty of Chief Hawkeye gave him a cause to be worried. No matter what he could do or say, whatever the Chief decided to do was what Lionus would have to accept. That was a drawback to the possibility of disagreeing with the highest mortal authority on the planet.

Finally, he could hear the Chief’s footsteps coming down the corridor and he steeled himself for whatever was going to happen in the next half hour or so.

The Chief entered the office and the moment he passed Lionus a small folded piece of thick paper in front of the Captain.

“Sign that.” drawled the Chief, a small frown on his face.

“Sir?”
“I'm having flowers sent to Lieutenants Viper and Wildfire. Sign the card.” replied the Chief.

Lionus stared at the folded piece of paper and then reached for his ring seal.

“No, no... sign it.” said Chief Hawkeye, a smile creeping out.” Have to be personal about these things. So... we're going to have another Ranger munchkin running amok, eh? Well, have to say that's the brightest and the happiest thing that happens in this organization.” he added absently.

Lionus only stared at the man in confusion.

“I am disappointed that you didn't tell me about them, especially the marriage...I love a good wedding.” said Hawkeye leaning back in his chair.

Before Lionus could even begin to apologize, he was stopped by Chief Hawkeye.

“Now don't get me wrong, I can see why you would keep it quiet. I mean, a reasonably normal human girl and a vampire? I can just see Parishioner having a bit of a tiff about this and so many other aspects of this whole thing. And that's just him! But as I had said...” said the Chief.

“I'm sorry sir, I... there’s still a vacant spot between our ranks and you have not appointed a Star Captain as of yet...I could not be certain that he or she would also be...reasonable.” said Lionus his head bowed respectively.

“Ah...yes...the Star Captain position. Well, I believe I've come to my decision, I wasn't going to make it official till well after the holidays, but I think I should start giving you Captains some notice.” said Hawkeye turning around in his chair to look out the large window standing behind him.

Lionus looked up, but then looked back down again.

“This Ranger has the same qualities that I myself possess, while sometimes it's not all that wonderful to have two people who act and think somewhat alike at the highest level, it will do for my needs. My own Chief was quite the old battle ax at times and there wasn't a week that he and I didn't butt heads, but we did do fine work together. Though Chief Yin-Yang already had someone else arguing with him, that dual personality of his. He got quite...odd at times, but Chief Yang was always a riot when you thought back on what he said and Chief Yin was quite pleasant and calm.”
Lionus continued to keep his head bowed.

“Despite the fact that he has some issues, I think he will do good work.” said Chief Hawkeye.

“I will follow his orders without fail sir.” said Lionus somberly, keeping his head bowed.

“I should think that would be easy, as my choice is you.”

Lionus snapped his head up. “Sir?” he said in shock. “But I...”

“I know that you told me that you did not want it and you would highly prefer to not be in that sort of power, but I have seen and tested all the other Captains, and found you to be the best candidate. Old Glory is a fine man and a good prospect, but he said that he was planning on retiring soon, and stepped down from being an option. Why, he even put your name forth as a good pick...not that he knew that I had already had you at the top of the list.” said Chief Hawkeye stroking his chin with a smile on his lips.

Lionus stared.

“Whether you like it or not, lad. You're my new Star Captain, my right hand man.”

-=-=-=-=-=

Across the globe, Rangers of various species and ranks gathered in front of large and small screens in their respective bases, or someplace safe and away from prying eyes. A message from the Chief was to be viewed, no matter what, undercover or not.

Chief Hawkeye came onto the screen, with Lionus standing beside him.

“Glad you all could take the time to be present.” said the Chief with a regal smile. “I've finally chosen my Star Captain, and it is Lionus, the European Captain.”

Rangers, watching the screens, either clapped loudly or groaned. They were hoping that their own country's Captain would be the one that would be chosen, as if it were a Miss Universe pageant.
They watched as the newly appointed Star Captain took the focal point of the screen.

“I won't bore you with a long winded speech, but I would like to state something and I expect you all to listen.” said Lionus his gaze piercing though the screen.

“Creepy how he can do that ain't it?” said a Private down in Australia.

“I'm sure you've all heard some rumors about two lieutenants in my company, those of you who don't know what I'm talking about...don't inquire about it, it has nothing to do with you. Those of you who do know what I'm speaking about and have attempted to act in any negative sort of way towards them...they are under my protection, and if I catch anyone near them, for anything other than well-wishes, I will gut you like a fish and string your carcass across the sands of the Sahara Desert for the sun to bake. I hope I have made myself very clear.”

Then the feed stopped.

The Rangers watching the screens stared transfixed at the now vanished image and turned slowly to their companions.

“Well, whatever is going on over in England...don't wanna know.” said a Sargent.

“Me either.” said a Lieutenant.

-=-=-=-=-=-

While the threat of the new Star Captain hung over the heads of several Rangers, it didn't stop some of the more hardened assailants. Hunter himself had to come between Viper and a few unruly Ranger who didn't want to kill him per se, but give him a sound thrashing. Though it would no doubt result in grievous injuries as he was still recovering from his last attack.

Hunter had deposited the fiends at the Star Captain's feet and smirked as they were beaten soundly before they were dismissed from the Rangers entirely. The Rangers were not a place where you could go after another Ranger and attack them. Now friendly banter and Ranger rivalry was one thing, but out for blood or to kill had no business when all you could do was count on each other.

But despite all that, two bits of good news came to the ones that supported the new couple: Viper had woken up, and Wildfire had given birth to two baby boys. They had their mother's fire red hair and their father's bright red eyes, no fangs were present and they had their mother's tanned complexion, what degree of how they were alike to vampires or humans was an uncertainty, at least for the first few months of their lives.

Thanks to all the surgeries and all sorts of other enchantments, the term of pregnancy of female Rangers of all species was cut drastically short so that in the case of an emergency, Wildfire and any other pregnant Ranger would not be out of commission for long and could go and assist in the field if they were desperately needed. The price that the parents had to pay was that the infants were so small, small enough in fact that they could fit in the palm of their hand. The baby would not be ready to leave the safety of the Healing Quarters and especially not out of sight of the assigned Healer that would care for the child and maintain their health.

The parents and the Commanding Officer of both the parents would assign a Healer to care for the young child until they were old enough to leave the confines of the Healing pods, which was usually a few months after the baby was born.

Now, the twins of Viper and Wildfire were not assigned a Healer as of yet, but to make things easier on the old Healer, Nicodemus (who generally always took care of the infants before a specific healer was chosen) kept the infants in the same room as Viper.

The injured vampire would keep his eyes trained on the prostrate cylinder and the infants inside, a soft smile on his face.

“Who would have thought...the terrifying vampire that tried to scare a weakened fifteen-year-old boy could smile!” came Nicodemus' chuckling voice.

“Sorry about that.” said Viper, his eyes still not leaving the cylinder.

“You're lucky I didn't find you and yank those teeth right out of your head after I heard that you did that.” said Nicodemus.

Viper winced horribly but steered the conversation in a different direction. “Has Mir...Wildfire named the children yet?”

“If you think she's going to name those babes without your input, you're a fool. She's going to swing by tonight and have you and her plan it out.” said Nicodemus.
“Where is she?” asked Viper tearing his eyes finally away from the two infants.

“I would say she's breaking the news to her father, but I'm pretty sure he's already known about the two of you for some time.” said Nicodemus as he came over to check the bandages on Viper's chest.

“I have not met the man as of yet.” said Viper.

“You have...it's First Lieutenant Vulcan.” said Nicodemus absently.

Viper turned his head so quickly that he caused himself pain. “What? Are you sure?”

“I delivered Wildfire, so I'm pretty sure.” Nicodemus rolling his eyes.

Viper leaned his head back further into the pillows and heaved a sigh. “I'm a dead man.”

“No truer words have ever been spoken.” came a cold voice from beside the door.

Viper and Nicodemus turned to see who was in the room and they saw a white dressed Ranger, with a large cross on his chest and in his hand.

“For a moment there, I thought it was Vulcan. This is a closed off healing ward Sergent, I'm going to have to ask you to leave, before I report you.” said Nicodemus firmly.

The man sneered. “Don't get in my way, old man.”

Nicodemus quirked a brow and looked back at Viper with an amused look. But the amused look dissipated when the man made a rush towards the downed Ranger with a wooden steak in his hand.

All it took was for Viper to blink once and the man that had rushed to attack him was then down on the ground twitching and gasping in pain, two steps away from where the man started. Dr. Nicodemus was standing over him, flexing his fingers and rolling his shoulder.
“Don’t you sell me short boy...now, you’ve pretty much just destroyed your career and your life...congratulations.” said Nicodemus.

“What...what did you do?” asked the man, still gasping.

“Destroyed most of the nerves in your arms and legs and broke a few of your ribs in the process. Perhaps you should have done a bit more research on your target and his surroundings before you tried this sad stunt.” said Nicodemus to the horrified man on the ground. “Came all this way from America and you don’t even plan it out all that well...can’t say we’ve lost one of the good ones if this was the best you’ve got...”

“I've been a Ranger for well over ninety years, and I'm the best fighter this organization has got and ever will have. I don't need to kill in order to defeat you and no matter what you bring to the table, my bones will fade away to dust before you can even hope to even land a hit.”

Dr. Nicodemus then waved his wand and several thick bands of rope came shooting out the end of his wand and wound tightly around the fallen Ranger.

“Now, I think I'm going to have someone take you to Star Captain Lionus, I’m sure he can find a nice place for you.” said Dr. Nicodemus. “Hopefully for your sake it'll be over a fireplace where you'll be stuffed and mounted.”

The Ranger that had attacked Viper and Dr. Nicodemus had not had that much luck, once he was brought to the Star Captain and the Chief, he was immediately stripped of his surgical enhancements and was sent directly to the lowest levels of Hell's Garden, where death within a few hours’ time was almost a complete certainty.

The reason he had given (before he had been taken away) was in his twisted minds, vampires, werewolves and other magical beings should not exist and he was in of the opinion that any “monster” procreating with humans was a slight upon God.

He seemed to want to continue, but Lionus slapped him across the face and ordered his removal.

“I don't have the time to do deal with insanity anymore. Take him away, I don't want to ever have to see, or hear him again.” said Lionus with a scowl. “Pass the message, I hear anyone talking smack about my lieutenants or their families, they'll share the same fate. Apparently, my warning didn't do much in the ways of convincing anyone.”

Chief Hawkeye patted the back of his Star Captain, “Welcome to my world, they thought I was a push over the first few months.”

“I can be an easy man,” said Lionus (“Yeah right.” muttered Nightstrike.) “but if you push my buttons, I'm going to push you right out an open window.”
Since before he even left the castle that night, Harry was planning several different ways to get back to finishing the books and finding out if he was right about Draco and how was his last year and a half at Hogwarts was going to finish out. Whether the others were going to be present or not wasn’t even an issue that warranted much thought. The questions that arose from the current book was crashing about in his head and not giving him any rest.

Was he going to defeat Voldemort before his school days were done? Would he himself be killed before he could even study for his N.E.W.T.’s or would he finally snap out of holding back and take the bastard out? Who else was he going to lose? What was Draco planning? What else was there to learn about Voldemort? He wanted to know! Why couldn't any of them understand that.

He made to check the front gates of Night’s Rest and see what kind of security the place had if you approached the house on foot. But the plan to sneak out through the front gates and take off on his broom a short distance away from the house…wasn’t going to work. There was no gate, he thought there was a gate but it seemed that the gate was completely and wholly removed. He would not be leaving the house on foot.

He then swallowed his discomfort and made to go to the largest den where the Floo powder was kept for easy travel. He went down to the den and went to the mantle where the jar was kept. He opened the jar, but to his dismay, the jar was empty.

He had to feign innocence when Sirius brought up the broken jar lying beside the fireplace.

The latest attempt he had made was when he had snuck out of the house in the middle of a cold rainy night and had tried to fly back to the castle. It wasn’t the most original plan he had ever thought of, but hopefully they weren’t expecting it, and it had been only a lucky chance that he saw that the broom cupboard wasn’t locked. He was about two miles away from the house when Sirius came blaring up beside him on his own enchanted motorcycle.

“And where do you think you're going, young man?” yelled Sirius over the thundering engine.

He pulled Harry off his broom by his arm and onto the sidecar of the motorcycle and had taken him back to Night's Rest.

Sirius had planned on telling Harry was grounded for the entire summer that was to come, because of leaving when there was still a chance for Death Eaters to be out and about, along with several other reasons but they didn't quite measure up to that one particular point. But by the next morning, Harry didn't even get out of bed. He didn't even stir when Sirius jostled him.

“Harry? Come on, you need to eat something for breakfast.” said Sirius as he shook his godson's shoulder. “You know, you wouldn't be this tired if you didn't try and run off like you did.”

He placed a hand on Harry's forehead and pulled back. “Oh man...”

In a few minutes, Dr. Clark, Remus, Rudolph, Leroy, Mrs. McFinn and Sirius were standing around Harry's bed. Dr. Clark was putting his stethoscope away in his bag with a sigh.

“What's wrong with him?” asked Mrs. McFinn worriedly.

“He's got a fever; did he go outside in that rain last night?” asked Dr. Clark looking around at the others.

“Yeah, he tried sneaking out, I had to go on my bike and bring him back.” said Sirius. “But I made him take a hot shower when we got back and then placed a heating charm on the bed. I even made him chug a phial of Pepper-up potion the moment we entered the house.”

Dr. Clark looked between Sirius and Harry, then he replaced the thermometer.

“If that's the case, then I think his body is crashing.” said Dr. Clark. “And we'll need those Ranger fellows.”

--=-=-=-=-

It was mere hours later when Dr. Nicodemus, Lionus and a medium built dark skinned man, dressed in black with two swords on his back came into Night's Rest. They had met them right in the front hall and were about to lead them up to Harry's room, till they saw the extra Ranger with them. “I'll go check the lad, you...break the news.” said Dr. Nicodemus with a smile.

“What do you mean...break the news?” asked Sirius curiously. “Who's this guy?”

“This is Longsword, and he is going to be Harry's personal bodyguard, that is, till I decide that he doesn't need one anymore.” said Lionus.

“Don't you blokes have something better to do?” asked Sirius. “Not that I'm not grateful that you lot help us.”

Lionus smirked. “Things have changed, and when we all resume back at Hogwarts...”

“You're going back?” asked Dr. Clark.

“Of course, we're this much invested in the books, I'm not about to leave, and neither is the chief. Frankly, I would rather like to see what the end of his school life is like myself. Have to say, word has spread about the kid's adventures in the Rangers and they're pretty interested in them as well. He's got quite the fanbase back at Headquarters.” said Lionus with a smirk. “Besides, we're on a seven-year furlough, we can go wherever we want.”

“Sir, do I go and lend Dr. Nicodemus a hand?” asked Longsword.

“I was expecting you to go with Doc the moment he left, not too sure why you're still here.” said Lionus. He then looked towards the others and smiled. “He's not used to body guarding duty yet, but he's passed the necessary training, so he'll learn.”

“So... Harry’s getting a rookie? I can protect him better...” said Sirius sourly.

Longsword's eyes flashed over to the animagus in anger.

“Understandable, but this is good training for him, and you can't cuddle and stand guard at the same time, it just looks weird.” said Lionus with a laugh.

They went upstairs to the room and entered Harry's bedroom. Sirius was grateful that Harry wasn't back in one of those pod things, but Harry didn't look any better than what he did that morning. Dr. Nicodemus was injecting something into his arm.

“Well, Doc?” asked Lionus.
“Seems he is pretty desperate to get back to the readings, but at the pace he's going he's only going to self-destruct.” said Dr. Nicodemus. “You were right Sam, he's starting to break down, and I think we might have caught it a little too late to avoid a serious illness.”

Mrs. McFinn hurried over to the bed knelt next to the sleeping boy.

“I'll send Glacier with the necessary things to see him through this.” said Nicodemus standing up and making his way swiftly out of the room.

“Wait, aren't you going to stay?” said Remus stepping forward.

“I can't, I'm needed back at Headquarters, I have a pair of newborn twins that I need to keep an eye on, but I'll be consulting with Glacier the entire time.” said Nicodemus.

“You the Ranger Pediatrician too?” said Dr. Clark. “Do we know of the parents, or are they ones we've never met?”

“Well, if you remember Wildfire...and Viper.” said Nicodemus.

“I remember him, but Wildfire?” asked Remus.

“That one female Ranger with the short and long red hair.” said Sirius.

“They had children?” said Remus looking shocked “But she didn't...”.

“Just born.” said Nicodemus abruptly, “But I've spent too much time away, Glacier should be here in ten minutes, Longsword, I don't want you to leave his side. Don't do that nonsense of hiding in the shadows when he's up and about. You...don't...leave...his...side.”

Longsword bowed low and went to stand beside Harry's bed.

“So what do we do in the meantime?” said Sirius.
“Just keep him warm, I gave him something that will keep him knocked out for an extended period of time, a week or so...but that'll be enough time for his mind and body to rest.”

Without further ado, he left.

-=-=-=-==

The fever that gripped Harry for those two weeks was not nearly as bad as they had all thought. While he did have ferocious fever dreams that had him nearly crashing about his room if Longsword had not restrained him, and had horrifying hallucinations that seemed to frighten him to his very soul, he was on the mend. The downside was that he had yet to wake, but despite him still being unconscious, Glacier told them that he was handling the illness and the stress well and that he would soon be completely back on his feet. It would seem that the stress on Harry's mental state was relieved thanks to those dreams.

“So... the dreams released the pressure?” said Dr. Clark.

“It seems that way, yes.” said Glacier. “But I will want to give him a thorough check before he is told he can go back soon. I don't want to start not delivering on promises.”

“Your accent's gone.” said Sirius.

“It's all this time in England, I cannot wait to get back home.” said Glacier with a frown.

“Think he still needs therapy from you?” said Remus.

Glacier looked over to Harry and sighed. “I see myself being within shouting distance of him for many years to come. While I just said that I cannot wait to get home, I will wait for as long as I have to...he is my patient and I cannot abandon him now...not since he has finally started to open up to me.”

Then they heard it, a soft groan and then the young man on the bed made to move about.

“Harry!” said Sirius hurrying to the bed and placing his hands on Harry's head.
Harry looked up at his godfather and smiled softly. “.... Hi...”

“Hey, you had me and the rest of us worried sick there.” said Sirius with a watery smile. “How do you feel?”

“A little tired.” he replied ever so softly.

“Is there anything that you want? I can go and get it for you.” said Sirius gently.

“No, I just...want to sleep...” Harry said slowly closing his eyes and drifting off. Sirius pulled the covers up to his chin and patted his head softly.

“He'll be weak for a few more days, but he should be back on his feet relatively soon.” said Glacier.

“How soon is 'relatively soon'?” asked Sirius.

“Soon for me is four years.” said Glacier plainly. Sirius staggered against the bed, “But for you, a few days.... I told you that already...you don't listen very well do you?”

Sirius growled. “So sue me for worrying.”

Glacier chuckled.

-========

Holiday break had just started and for the first time, there were no students that decided to go home for the holidays, just in case that Harry had returned and the readings were to continue on. The book loving students were amazed that it had taken them so long to read the books when they themselves could easily blast through them in a weekend.

But for all the time it took away from class and with the finals looming ahead in a few months, they were not going to miss it for the world. They had received word that Harry was going to return to Hogwarts by the weekend before the holiday and they were going to resume the readings when he arrived. Hermione and Ron were particularly looking forward to having Harry back. Being continuously around him for five years made their separation a little harder on them.

The passes to Hogsmeade on the weekends were still going on, but with all the homework that they were given over the holiday break, not many of them could make it down to the village. Several students had to send out owls or their more studious friends to do their shopping for them.

The staff had risen to a new level of skill when they decorated the school that even the seventh years, who had seen what they thought was every decorating idea the teachers had, were stunned when they walked down to the Great Hall. The usual assortment of trees and fairylights as decoration. This time they had glittering icicles around the windowsills that left a rainbow of colors when the sun would hit them just right.

There were several of ice sculptures positioned around the lake that would move if one looked at them long enough and dozens of snowmen parading around the grounds and would hurl snowballs at the children that would dare to throw one at them. Then there were the ghosts traveling serenely down the corridors singing various Christmas carols and swirls of magical snowflakes that came out to tickle the student's noses as they passed.

Down every corridor there seemed to be something new and wondrous that would happen. The teachers and the prefects were going all out to impress the three muggles that were in their school not just the first years. They already were getting very positive feedback from Officer McFinn who was restrained to the Great Hall.

“This is greatest thing I have ever seen!” exclaimed Officer McFinn looking around at the Great Hall, the windows had enchanted frost in which window pane was a separate winter scene or white silhouettes of various magical creatures one afternoon around tea time.

“Do you think your wife will enjoy it?” asked Colin.

Officer McFinn looked saddened for a moment, but recovered. “Oh, I think she'll never want to either leave or for Christmas to ever end.”

“Are you alright?” asked Ron.

Officer McFinn made to speak when he noticed the door opening. “Oh, the students and staff are all down here...do we have more guests, or are they finally coming back?”
Harry led the way into the Great Hall, a smile on his face and groaning at a joke that Sirius had just told him, Mrs. McFinn, Dr. Clark, Rudolph, Leroy and Remus. The Rangers Glacier and Longsword bringing up the rear, but well within reaching distance of Harry.

The one thing that caught the attention of the teachers, the Weasleys, a few of the students and Officer McFinn was Harry's hair. While it was still falling to the small of his back, it was now a deep rich black.

“Harry!” shouted Ron.

“Harry! Your hair, it’s black again!” said Hermione excitedly.

“Yeah, seems I'm mostly alright now...still have some ways to go according to Glacier, but I should be alright...and I can use magic again!” said Harry with a smile. “No more just having to do writing work for me, I can finally get to do something a bit more hands on.”

“Are we going to start up the readings today?” asked Colin excitedly.

Sirius, Remus, and Glacier looked at Harry.

“Nah, I've had a long trip back, Floo powder again...bloody menaces wanted to put me through that again.” added Harry in a mutter.

“You were all that keen to keep...” said Dennis looking confused.

“That's enough, go on, shoo.” said Glacier waving his hand imperiously. “Don't pester.”

Both Dennis and Colin scooted away and took their seats at the Gryffindor table, both their faces red.

As the newly arrived troupe settled into the Great Hall, the next group came: Lionus, Chief Hawkeye, Nightstrike, Wildfire, Viper, and Nicodemus. They had noticed something new had been added to the troupe. Nicodemus was pushing a small transparent bassinet with two tiny sleeping infants inside.

Several girls went towards the playpen but were stopped by the glare of both Wildfire and Viper, and a thick shield that stopped them from coming any closer to the pen then perhaps fifteen feet.

“Now, now, no crowding them, you can see them from a distance, but no touching or getting to close.” said Nicodemus as he took the bassinet with him towards the fireplace.

“They're adorable!” said a few of the girls gleefully. “They're so tiny!”

Wildfire smiled softly and Viper sent a sideways glance at her.

“What are their names?” asked Lavender excitedly.

“That’s between the parents, now go on.” said Dr. Nicodemus with a chuckle.

“Welcome back.” said Dumbledore walking up to the returning visitors and student. “Let us hope that these young ones will be safe from any harm here...” he turned and fixed the students with a passive look though it had a feeling of warning about it.

“Oh, they're as safe as snowflakes in a blizzard.” said Dr. Nicodemus, 'Provided I stay nearby.”

“Don't you mean...the other Rangers?” said Lee.

“Yeah, you'd think that...” said Nightstrike with an uncomfortable smile. “Not one person here can even put even a small scrape on the old doc. We're nowhere on his radar for power.”

“If he's so powerful, how come he's not the chief?” asked a third year Slytherin.

“I have enough on my plate, I don't want to have to play around with all that paperwork and political nonsense.” said Dr. Nicodemus. “My place in this world is to heal...and improve when it's asked. I don’t’ have time to deal with the criminal elements on a daily basis.”
“So... you’re strong enough, you just can't be bothered.” said Lee.

“Cool.” said the twins together.

Dr. Nicodemus shook his head.
Late the next morning, the students came bounding down and up the staircases to get back to the readings. A few students had their own theories about what was going to happen next and they couldn't wait to get back to reading.

Several students had brought up their homework to finish up on so that they would get the last chance to go and do some holiday shopping. Dumbledore had decided that in the spirit of the holidays, they would be given one last chance to go and do some shopping, as the teachers (as well as he himself) had loaded them down with so much homework that they were unable to find even the slightest bit of time to do any beforehand.

They had all expected Harry to be there first thing in the morning, but he came down at precisely eleven o'clock with Sirius in tow.

“All I’m saying is that maybe you give me the keys to that wine cellar a little earlier than my birthday.” said Harry with a teasing smile. “I use wine and other things in my cooking.”

“Well, if you want to cook with it before your birthday, you'll just have to come and get me, now won't you?” said Sirius nudging Harry.

“Fine, if you want dinner half hour later because I can't find you in that house.” said Harry.

“You're the one who likes running, besides, you can cut almost two minutes by sliding down any banister that you come to.” said Sirius.

“Oh, don't tell him that.” said Mrs. McFinn.

“That's the only reason I made the ruddy house more than a one story.” whispered Sirius in Dr. Clark's ear.

“That would be my reason too.” snickered Dr. Clark.

As they sat, Sirius noticed Mrs. McFinn and Officer McFinn looking at each other with a sort of sad happiness. After Colin had cleared his throat, (and had been smacked by Angelina) he started the readings.

Chapter Sixteen said Officer McFinn.

“Hopefully it's another good Christmas...you could use that.” said Sirius.

“Tell me about it.” said Harry.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Easy there...” said Bill with a light chuckle.

Dialogue line.
“Whatever spout I threatened you with, I'm gonna...”

“Harry...” said Mrs. McFinn with a warning tone.

“Well...duh...” said Dr. Clark.

“Nice that Draco told his godfather to die…” said a fifth year Hufflepuff.

Fred and George both sunk low into their seats. “We were already punished for this!” said Fred.

“Don't need any further help, thank you!” said George.

Fred blushed heavily.

Sirius roared with laughter. “I was hoping he was going to walk in.”
“Hasn’t happened yet, mum!” said George quickly.

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

First paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Well, if you don’t know, I think you’d better have a nice chat with your dad.” said Harry coming to Ron’s defense.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, first sentence.

This time, it was Ginny who leaned over and smacked the back of George’s head.

End of dialogue set.

Second paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Harry makes it look cool and he doesn’t miss.”

“Don’t you drag me into this.” hissed Harry towards Ron.

Dialogue line.

Mrs. Weasley glared at her youngest son.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Yeah, could have been worse, we could have Charlie.” said Fred.

“Yeah, I can't sleep with the two of you in there.” said Charlie. “You two both talk to each other in your sleep.”

Dialogue set, first sentence, third comma.

“Sounds like you're trying to stuff us away in case company pops over.” said Ron with a snicker.

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

“No, thank you!” said Ginny. “If she’s as bad as she sounds, I’m sleeping with the chickens!”

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Percy turned a faint pink.

Third paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Why isn't Harry taking care of the peeling part.” said Colin.

“It takes me forever.” said Harry. “That's the one thing I have a devil of a time trying to peel, I try not to use them all that much.”

Dialogue set.

“Oh, really?” said Angelina with an innocent smile towards the Weasley twin.

The twins both looked uncomfortable.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Well, he's no fun.” said a first year with a giggle.
“I'll have a fit if I'm ignored again.” said Harry.

Snape smirked to himself.

“You said it too fast there.” said George.

“But we're prepared to bet that it would be spot on there.” said Dean.

“Good.” muttered Katie.

“Didn't you guys ride the same train?” said Dr. Clark.

“Ah, never mind then.” said Dr. Clark.
Eighth paragraph.

“I love it when I get to do that.” said Ron. “Doesn't happen often.”

“It didn't happen this time.” said Colin.

“No, but I sure do love to say it.” said Ron.

Ninth paragraph, second sentence.

“Favorite part of the holidays.” said Ginny.

Ninth paragraph, third sentence.

Mrs. Weasley looked at her sons and Harry with a look of betrayal as her two oldest sons were busy howling with laughter.

“Mum, that's not the first time that we had a gnome angel. We had one like that before.” said Bill.

“You would not believe the person who did it first.” said Charlie with a snigger. “Fresh from his first year and all right and ready to try a bit of magic, low level, but enough.”

The two oldest Weasley children smiled, and turned slowly towards Percy. Percy looked away swiftly, the back of his neck bright red.

End of ninth paragraph.

“Don't you have a... usual angel?” said Mrs. McFinn.

“We did, till Charlie set it on fire.” said Mr. Wealey with a smile. Now it was Charlie's turn to turn red. “Since then, every year we have a new one that the kids make and strangely enough it rarely lasts past one year. George and Fred made one that kept up through two years, but Molly accidentally dropped it.”

“Can't you just use Reparo?” said a first year student.

“Would, if it wasn't made from candy, Scabbers...er...well, he ate it the moment it hit the ground.” said Mrs. Weasley. “They never took to...it after that...”

“Course not, the little toerag...took us two weeks of squirreling away candy to make that blasted thing.” said Fred.

Tenth paragraph, second sentence.

“Never talk when she's on.” said the Weasley children together.
“My mum does the same thing with the telly.” said Dean.

Tenth paragraph, fourth sentence.

“Oh, Merlin. Don't pick up tips from him, when he had his first girlfriend and going on about it, I wanted to chuck him right through an open window. Mind you, never did, but I did trip him right into the hedges.” said Charlie.

“Still have that scratch right on my neck.” said Bill shoving his younger brother.

Tenth paragraph, fifth sentence, third comma.

“Mate, we have got to get you to eat more.” said Sirius shaking his head. “And get you into a barber, tailor...something.”

“Hey, my clothes fit me just fine...and the day they make a meat dish that involves chocolate, the more I'll eat.” said Remus with a cheeky grin.

“You picky son of a... where you going?” asked Sirius as Harry stood up.

“Mind telling me how to get the kitchen up and going, still rubbish at non-verbals...don't really want to give it a shot in front of an audience.” said Harry with a smirk towards Dumbledore.

Dumbledore smiled and waved his wand, bringing the kitchen to the Great Hall.

“What are you making?” asked Dr. Clark.

“Something for Remus.” said Harry.

“Don't tell me that they make a meat dish that uses chocolate.” said Sirius grimacing.

“Alright then, I won't.” said Harry.

End of tenth paragraph.

Song lyrics

“Quite the 'Christmassy' lyrics.” said Harry as he pulled out several ingredients.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Sorry dear...long day.” said Mr. Weasley.

Eleventh paragraph.
“Arthur!” said Mrs. Weasley placing her hands on her hips.

“I... I just...the...it's not one of my favorites by her.” said Mr Weasley looking sheepish.

“I didn't say a word.” said Harry as he brushed several pieces of meat with oil.

“I always knew that satsuma was rotten.” said Fred.

“Well, they better not have been putting them in Azkaban, or their looking at a whole wave of lawsuits.” said Lionus shaking his head.

“How about everything that's in the place, hell, throw in the owners.” said Ron quietly.

A pan was smashed down hard on the counter, chipping the marble.

“Oh, sorry.” said Harry waving his wand and repairing the damage, but sending a brief, cold look towards Mr. Weasley.
“Hasn't happened.” said Glacier in a firm tone. “It hasn't happened yet.”

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

“More eyes on the hen house will keep the foxes from stealing the chickens.” said Chief Hawkeye. “You keep at least a handful of people suspicious about each other, you may be able to stop a backstabbing.”

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Well, you have fun with that.” said Sirius.

Dialogue line.

“Like and trust don't necessarily have to go hand in hand.” said Remus.

Dialogue set, third sentence.

“Yeah...'cause he can't let go.” said Sirius.

“Doesn't sound like you're doing much letting go.” said Dr. Clark.

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

Thirteenth paragraph.

“Got me there...but doesn't mean I have to like it.” said Sirius.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, first sentence.

“I didn't start the bloody war; it was him that continued on with it.” said Harry as he stirred the contents of a large bowl. “Not my ruddy fault now is it?”

Dialogue set, second sentence.
Harry scoffed. “You're an idiot.”

Remus looked down at the ground and said nothing, neither did Snape.

End of dialogue set.

“Wouldn't surprise me.” mumbled Lionus.

Song lyrics

Fourteenth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“You'd better talk to her about not dissin' Celestina.” said Ginny sagely. “Unless you really don't like her getting on with Mum.”

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Yeah, can't have someone who's supposed to be deep in enemy territory sending letters off to the wizarding's worlds light and hope.” said George.

“Not if you're supposed to be all dark and mysterious about it all.” said Fred.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

“I know, I know.” said Remus holding his hands up.

“What?” asked Ron.

“I had to convince him, he was prepared to take a more hands off approach.” said Remus.

Fifteenth paragraph.

Mrs. McFinn and Mrs. Weasley looked fearfully at him, not of him, but for him.

Dialogue line.
“Have to say, the way we're going about it, it's not looking like it's going to improve at all.” said Tonks sadly.

Dr. Clark shook his head, sending a worried look over to Harry.

“How come you lot haven't grabbed him yet?” asked George.

“He's out in plain view, nothing's hiding him.” said Lionus. “You lot are well equipped to take him down, just none of you have the balls. We’re more worried about someone a lot higher up in the hierarchy level.”

“Who’s that?” asked Hermione.

But none of the Rangers spoke.

“Ah, bless him.” said Sirius looking over at Harry with a bright smile.

A few of the students laughed loudly.

“No.” said Remus shaking his head.

“Me either.” said Sirius.
“Not funny.” said Harry a ghost of a smile on his face.

“One of my favorites.” said Sirius with a smirk. “Loved doing that to Peter every chance I could get, James too if I could wrangle it.”

“Ankle grabbing is always a crowd-pleaser.” said Fred.

“We’d have soaked his y-fronts in cold water if he had.” said Sirius with a laugh.

“Can’t even find the ruddy thing.” muttered a sixth year Ravenclaw.
“Tell her to cork it...” said Charlie.

End of the twenty-second paragraph.

“Not again with the whole fifty-year-old thing.” said Fred.

“When they get to be that age, it's now becoming a good idea to either chuck it, or burn it.” said George.

“Just for safety's sake.” said the twins together.

End of twenty-third paragraph.

“So much for a lie in.” said Harry with a smirk.

End of twenty-fourth paragraph.

“Never thought you for jewelry.” said Bill.

Dialogue line.

Necklace

Ron cringed while Lavender blushed.

Dialogue line.

“I'd rather go streaking past Fleur.” said Ron looking off to the side.
Dialogue line.

Lavender blushed.

Dialogue line.

“And if you had, then we're never talking to you again.” said Fred.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, first sentence.

Mr. Weasley groaned.

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

Twenty-sixth paragraph.

“You're so oblivious.” said Terry.

Twenty-seventh paragraph.

“He must kind of like you, he never gave me anything.” said Sirius.

“Being owned by a Potter, while he may be loyal to the Blacks, it must almost be a dream come true for him.” said Rudolph. “Kind of…”

Twenty-eighth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Don't feel guilty.” said Sirius.

Twenty-ninth paragraph.

Dialogue line.
“Can't say I'd rather have the necklace either.” said Seamus.

“I'm betting she'd just borrow yours anyway.” said Charlie nuding his older brother.

“Puts a lot of things into perspective, having to do your own laundry.” said Dr. Clark.

“Well, I wouldn't be all that cheerful, or willing to reach in and snatch it.” said Padma.

“Happens.” said Bill with a smile.

“Yes, Remus, have you talked to me lately?” said Tonks with a cheeky grin.

“Wasn't last night enough?” asked Remus innocently.

“Asking me the time is not a conversation.” said Tonks.
“I wouldn't say no to a Weasley Christmas; they always sound like great fun.” said Tonks.

Dialogue line.

“Well, that sends a warm feeling right down to your trainers doesn't it?”

Thirty-second paragraph, first sentence, second comma.

“I don't like Tonks that way, she's more of a music companion than romantic.” said Bill.

End of thirty-second paragraph.

“Well, I was the best one present at the time.” said Remus with a smile.

Dialogue line.

Thirty-third paragraph.

“So...do you think that Harry's has changed?” asked Dennis.

“It hasn't.” said Harry as he stirred a pan of sauce.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Well, there went our Christmas.” said Ron quietly.

Dialogue line.

Thirty-fourth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Why would the Minister go there? There hasn't been another attack?” said Dennis.

“The Minister wouldn't bother himself with something like informing the family...he has more pressing things to do.” said Harry.

“Scrimgeour might be different.” said Tonks carefully.

“Yeah, and I'm a natural blonde.” said Harry.
“Oy, breaking and entering,” said Fred.

“That's my home too...” said Percy with a hurt expression.

“Really? Never see you there anymore.” said George.

“That's enough boys.” said Mr. Weasley.

“Yeah, you great prat...don't say a thing to dad.” said Ron.

“Ron...” said Mr. Weasley warningly.

“Sounds like it's one sided affection.” said a seventh year Slytherin.

“Five seconds of meeting the man, and he's already lying...what a way to start out.” said Harry with a smirk.

“I could have wanted to stop by...” said Percy quietly.

“Yeah, we can totally tell.” said Ginny.

“I'll stuff the purkey and the tooding right down his shorts, I will.” said Fred.

“Always a smooth one, that Rufus.” said Moody. “Always pandering...but if it gets good results...doesn't matter who he bleeds the information out of.”

“Alastor!” said McGonagall.

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

“Maybe you should have told Percy he was supposed to be acting the part.” said Harry.

Dialogue set.

“Alright, that's not his best way to get someone out of the group.” said Kingsley. “I t might have worked if he wanted to talk to Ron or some other male youth...but not the famous Harry Potter.”

Thirty-ninth paragraph.

“Smooth, but not subtle.” said Moody.

Dialogue line.

Fortieth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“They must have seen right through that as well.” said Charlie.

Dialogue line.

Forty-first paragraph.

“Sounds more like he can actually get something done.” said Harry. “Not just tap-dance with politics.”

Dialogue line.

Forty-second paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Well, aren't you creepy, we've never even been introduced.” said Harry with a smirk. “Thought you didn't know me sir.”
“Yeah, after the last Minister, you and I aren’t going to be all that chummy.” said Harry.

“Didn't need to do that, I'd be telling the Ministry to shove it after the prior year.” said Harry.

“Note to self, don't try and weasel information out of Harry if you're being obvious.” said Fred pretending to write on a roll of parchment.

“In passing, you weren't really an important topic.” said Harry.

“Oh, something along the lines of none of your damn business.” said Harry.

“Harry...” said Sirius trying to sound firm but had a twitching smile.

“Apparently to you and some others it is.” said Harry.

“Not really, it's just a stupid name someone in the Daily Prophet came up with.” said Harry.
“I thought truth was what mattered.” said Harry with a smirk.

Forty-eighth paragraph.

Dialogue set, fifth sentence, first dash.

“Not my job to do your job.” said Harry.

End of dialogue set.

Harry burst out laughing.

“I don't see him joining you.” said Lionus smiling over to Moody.

“Rufus, if some Death Eater doesn't kill you, I will.” said Moody rubbing his temple tiredly.

Forty-ninth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Careful, Rufus.” said Kingsley slowly.

Dialogue set, second sentence.

“Or that I keep getting arrested.” said Harry.

Dialogue set, third sentence.

“That idiot?” said Tonks gesturing wildly towards the book. “All that puffed up conker knows to do is file criminals under 'C'!”

“He's handy with forms.” said Kingsley.

“That's about all, remember when he tried to arrest Arnold Ellings? Dear lord, we had to scrape him off the china cabinet and rush him to St. Mungos. Ellings surrendered himself right there as we were trying to gather up Robards' bits and pieces. Scared we'd sick another wizard like Robards on him.” said Moody.

Dialogue set, fourth sentence.

“OH F*CK NO!” Harry said slamming the pot down, sending some of the contents all over the counter.
“I’d tell him off, but I'm letting that one go.” said Remus. “What the hell were they thinking?”

“They weren't thinking, or she paid them off somehow.” said Sirius.

“Most likely they didn't ask any questions, and apparently none of the students that she had given detentions too are willing to speak.” said Officer McFinn. “Kids, do the adults that care about you a favor, when something is wrong or something you believe is even slightly wrong. Tell someone, no scratch that, tell A LOT of people and keep telling them till they bloody do something.”

The students looked amongst themselves and nodded towards the deceased officer.

End of dialogue set.

Fiftieth paragraph.

“Thank bloody god she's not there now.” said Harry.

“Not in your corner just yet.” said Moody with a sneer over to Lionus.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, first sentence.

“You're a fool...you're a fool...” said Kingsley shaking his head.

End of dialogue set.

“Exciting things’, eh? Like...'oh my god they've killed Roger Bands and his whole family!' kind of excitement?” said Harry sarcastically.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Conversation not going the way he was hoping, I shouldn't reckon.” said Bill.

Dialogue line.

Fifty-first paragraph.

“And even we can see the difference between the truth and a play for desperation.” said Hannah smartly.
“Not quite disassociate, just distance ourselves from those who are knowingly making themselves look like a bunch of arses.” said Harry he then looked to the Ministry people present. “Just talking about the...”

“We know.” said Madam Bones.

“Then I shall keep my distance from those folk.” said Harry.

“The Ministry isn't looking all that great place to work at.” muttered a first year.

“And with that, Umbridge should be fired in a heartbeat.” said Ron.

“That is if the Ministry has their priorities in order.” said Hermione quietly.

“Don't know, even though future me has asked.” said Harry.
Dumbledore smiled softly.

Dialogue line.

Dumbledore looked hurt, but said nothing.

Fifty-fifth paragraph.

Dialogue set.

“Words to live by.” said Lionus darkly.

Dumbledore closed his eyes and folded his hands on his lap a watery smile on his face.

End of chapter.

“And Rufus, the Ministry and the entire continent of Europe just lost the best Auror we ever could have had.” said one of the Unspeakables shaking his head.

“We're not out of this yet.” said Moody swiftly.

“Nice to know I'm the hottest toy this holiday season.” said Harry making another batch of sauce.

“Season? Hell, kid...hottest 'toy' of the generation.” said Chief Hawkeye. “You're going to have people clawing each other’s eyes out to get you on their side.”
“Sounds like a pretty boring holiday after the Minister visited.” said Colin.

“I can live with that.” said Harry.

“Much business on the day that students return?” said Lavender with a giggle.

“Last minute pranking supplies I suppose.” said Fred.

“Don't know for certain, but I'm sure that it was me.” said Fred, George and Ginny all at the same time.

“Not what a mother thinks.” said Mrs. McFinn.

“I don't go looking for trouble, I'd love a nice simple life.” said Harry.

“Ah, bless him, it looks like you finally mastered it.” said Leroy to Harry.

“Shaddup.” said Harry.
“Hungover.” said Charlie and Sirius.

“Bet the Fat Lady is regretting all the times in her painted life that she ever had a drink with them all just standing there.” said Bill.

“Perfect password for her.” said Ernie with a snicker.

“Oofph, that's a lot of wine.” said Sirius. “Almost twenty large barrels...hope the monks helped them.”

End of dialogue set.
“Put a leash on her.” muttered Katie looking over to Parvati.

End of eighth paragraph.

Dialogue set, first sentence.

Harry pumped his arm into his side.

“Jealous much?” asked Ginny with a smirk.

“All the time.” said Harry.

“Don't say that, that's a red flag to a girl.” said Officer McFinn with a snigger.

End of dialogue set.

“Mate, if you ever get that way with Hermione out in public, I'm throwing cold water on the both of you.” said Harry.

“And if you did that with Ginny?” said Hermione teasingly.

“We'll kill him.” said the Weasley boys.

“Regretting getting together with her yet?” asked Sirius with a nudge.

“Not even a little.” said Harry with a bright smile.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“It's crazy how you lot know what you're going to ask before you ask it.” said Charlie.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Ninth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.
“Oh yeah...that happened.” said Harry slowly.

Glacier looked over to Harry swiftly. “Breathe Harry, we'll see the truth soon enough.” It took a while for him to nod.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“FINALLY!” shouted Harry.

“Breathe!” said Glacier sternly. “Breathe or you and I will step outside for a bit.”

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Well, bollocks.” said Harry. “That believing in me didn't last long.”

Tenth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“That'd be freaking creepy, and I think you're just pulling at straws.” said Fred looking over to Hermione.

Eleventh paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“If it was said in a class, then he and I don't really pay much attention.” said Ron.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

Twelfth paragraph, second sentence.

“Merlin, he forgot something!” said Dennis.

“I forget plenty.” said Harry with a smirk.
His father is a Death Eater, a supporter of Voldemort and was one of his top lieutenants. And since Remus told Potter that Greyback is a backer of Voldemort, there's no way around that.” Moody darkly.

“She sounds like a solicitor.” said Officer McFinn. “Seeing any holes in a person’s ‘actions’.”

“Know I know why she’s driving me mad.” muttered Moody.

“He hated the solicitors the Death Eaters would use.” said Tonks.

“Not something you hear every day.” said Tonks.

“Now that's what I call a pleasant conversation.” said Charlie.

“Now, now, just because you failed the first time...” said Bill.

“Nuh uh, I couldn't learn under them. I had to have cousin Rupert give me some tips, he should be a teacher...” said Charlie.

Ron looked like he wanted to say something, but was silenced by Hermione's glare and Lavender's indignant look.

“You know, if we were there, we'd be doing that to you all the time.” said Fred.
“Yeah, always wanted to get splinched in front of everyone.” said Harry.

Charlie walked over to Ron and brought his youngest brother into a headlock. “How big am I?”
“Never mind!” said Ron thickly.

“Wise move.” said Charlie looking at his three youngest brothers.

Ron blushed.

“Reminds me of what Charlie did, popping up all over the place.” said Mr. Weasley.

Sirius tried hard to stifle his laughter but it was still coming out despite his best interests.

“He sets the best lines.” said Remus.
“Harry's lying again!” said Fred.

“Naughty, naughty!” said George shaking his finger.

“Oh, it was epic.” said Dennis.

“Eh, not really, but it was awesome.” said Colin.

“Ever get that feeling that he doesn't give a hippogriff's ass?” said Sirius with a snicker.

“All the time.” said Remus with a smile.

“He's dumber than I ever dreaded he'd be.” said Harry with a snort.

“Didn't realize you were my agent.” said Harry looking over to the Headmaster.

“Oh, you would not believe all the people I personally have stopped those who wished to use your name and... well...title.” said Dumbledore.

“Example?” said Harry with a smile.

“Well, Slughorn is one of them, a more...harmless version of the people that had been trying to schedule a meeting with you.” said Dumbledore.

“Worse than Slughorn?” said Sirius.

“Lockhart was another one, though he was not as harmless in my point of view.” said Dumbledore.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, first sentence.

“Ouch.” said Leroy with a snicker.

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Chief Hawkeye laughed loudly.

Dialogue line.

Twenty-first paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“And he is very blushing.” said Dr. Clark.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, second sentence.

“Bet that doesn’t go well.” said Mr. Weasley.

Dialogue set, third sentence.

“Called it.” said Mr. Weasley raising his fist.

End of dialogue set.

“I don’t quite think I would be all that sorry to do that.” said Harry.
“Well, crud.” said Lee.

“You keep saying that, but I don’t think he’ll ever say that.” said Ron with a smirk.

“He understands, but I think he has an ulterior motive…” said Harry.

“So he thinks that Snape is playing along…” started Hermione.

“No, I don’t quite think that’s it.” said Harry. “I think he knows about it, and perhaps he doesn’t want me to focus on that…but I’m going to anyway.”

“Wow.” said Harry looking back at Dumbledore in shock. “That’s a first.”

“Because he already knew about it.” said Fred quickly.

“Not that again.” said Remus covering his eyes.
“Do you really blame me?” asked Harry quiring a brow.

“Not from your point of view, no.” said Sirius.

Dialogue set, first sentence.

“Must have been a long day.” whispered Flitwick. “I don’t think I’ve heard him be short with any student, let alone Potter, before.”

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue set, first sentence.

“You can kiss my…”

“Harry…” said Mrs. McFinn sternly.

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

Twenty-fourth paragraph third sentence, first comma.

“The mind is not a…” started Snape.

“Oh shut up.” said Sirius.

End of twenty-fourth paragraph.

Dialogue set, first sentence.

“You’re not best friends…” said a fourth year Slytherin student.

“I know a lot about him, but I don’t know everything about him.” said Harry.

Dumbledore only smiled.

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, first sentence.

“Little snippy there, aren’t you?” said George with a gleeful smile.
“What a charming child.” said Tonks snidely.

“All except for the refusing help to Diagon Alley, sounds kind of like me…though no one warned me against stealing.” said Harry.

“You don’t take things to keep them…” said Sirius.

“Except that Fabergé egg.” said Colin excitedly.

Harry looked over in shock. “What? What are you talking about?”

“The egg you nearly got killed over.” said Dennis.

Harry stared at the Creevy boys in shock, and then looked around at the Rangers and Officer McFinn. “Who the bloody hell told you about that?”

Officer McFinn raised his hand. “Showed them.”

“You mean I missed out on a Scroll…Damn it.” muttered Sirius.

“Sounds like Malfoy.” said Ron.

“Yeah, but Malfoy isn’t nearly as much of a bastard as Riddle.” said Harry.

“Harry!” scolded Mrs. Weasley.

“Gee, you pay someone a compliment and you get told off.” said Harry with a smirk.

“Worried me.” said Harry.

“Whereas Harry…” said Fred.

“He could use some help in the face department.” said George.

“Could be worse, I could be stuck looking at my mirror image.” shot Harry back.

Fred and George looked at each other. “He hit below the belt, Fred.” said George.

“That he did, George.” said Fred.
“We’re going to get you.” said the twins together looking at the scarred teen.

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, first sentence.

“I believed that he deserved a second chance.” said Dumbledore.

End of dialogue set.

Dumbledore only smiled.

Twenty-sixth paragraph.

Dialogue set.

“That was four years ago! You can recite it word for word?” asked Charlie in shock.

“I remember what people say when they’re trying to kill me.” said Harry.

Dialogue set, third sentence.

“Especially the whole part about him hurting people and making them do things.” said Hannah with a shudder.

End of dialogue set.

“Well, he wasn’t so vain then.” said Bathilda Bagshot.

Dialogue set, first semi-colon.

“Has he ever had anyone that anyone can really call ‘friends’?” said a second year Ravenclaw.

Dialogue set, third sentence.

“And people wonder why Slytherin house gets such a bad rap.” said Sirius.

End of dialogue set.
Dumbledore shook his head.

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue set, fifth sentence, second comma.

“Well, if my dad had done that, leave me and my mum…though without all the secret love potion thing, I wouldn’t want to have his name either.” said Dean.

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue set.

“Ah, I don’t want to hear any more of that madhouse of a family.” said Bill.

Twenty-seventh paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Twenty-eighth paragraph.

Twenty-ninth paragraph, second sentence.

“You shouldn’t have been so nasty to Merope.” said Ernie. “She would have stayed on if you were sociable.”

End of twenty-ninth paragraph.

“Must be the nut who nails snakes to doors.” said Terry.

Thirtieth paragraph.

Thirty-first paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Thirty-second paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Thirty-third paragraph.
“Bet that scared the life out of him.” said Blaise.

“Are you? Well, I wouldn’t be too proud about that.” said Leroy.

“There’s that ring again.” said Harry to himself.

“Oh, he won’t like that.” said Ron.

“How come I get the feeling that he…” said Harry thoughtfully.
“I can’t tell what he thinking, is he sad…lonely?” said a seventh year Ravenclaw.

Thirtieth paragraph.

Fortieth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

“Wow, great family.” said Charlie. “Nephew stealing from the only uncle he’ll ever have. Granted, he wasn’t all that great of an uncle or great of a family to be a part of.”

Dialogue set.

“Thought so.” said Harry quietly.

Dialogue set, first sentence.

“Wasn’t he still in school? You mean he killed someone and came back to school?” said Mrs. Weasley looking horrified.

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue set, sixth sentence.

“That doesn’t sound like him.” said Rudolph. “He was gung ho to fight off the Ministry the last time.”

Dialogue set, tenth sentence.

“But he was already dead, wasn’t he?” asked Ron.

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, fourth sentence.

“Dark stuff for so early in the day.” said Flitwick.

End of dialogue set.
“Have to say, impressive.” said Chief Hawkeye.

“How come you didn’t step in and help them?” asked Hermione.

“If there is ample evidence, which there was, then we don’t get involved.” said Chief Hawkeye tiredly.

“But…”

“We’ve got enough on our plates without having to worry about one murdered family.” said Hawkeye.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, first sentence.

“Because the real murderer is out there.” said Officer McFinn. “But we have people that confess to crimes that they didn’t do as well. They just want the attention or the street cred.”

End of dialogue set.

“At least they were trying to do right.” said Nightstrike. “Granted he’s mad as a march hare, but still.”

Dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, first sentence.

“So…that law hurts the Muggle-borns, not so much the ones that come from magical families.” said Harry with a smirk. “That’s a load of bull…”

End of dialogue set.

Harry scoffed.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.
Forty-first paragraph.
Dumbledore stroked his beard thoughtfully.

Dialogue line.

Forty-second paragraph.

Forty-third paragraph, first sentence, first semi-colon.
Sirius and Remus laughed loudly.

End of forty-third paragraph.

Forty-fourth paragraph.

“Well, that’s not creepy…sick really.” Lee cringing horribly.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

“Sounds like some other people I know.” said Harry quietly.

Forty-fifth paragraph.

Dialogue set.

“God…” said Justin.

Forty-sixth paragraph.

-seventh paragraph, first sentence.

“What the hell was that?” asked Mr. Weasley.

“Nice try, Horace.” said Dumbledore with a smile as he shook his head.

End of forty-seventh paragraph.

Dialogue set.

Forty-eighth paragraph.
“I have the feeling he could get away with…well, never mind, he has.” said Lionus.

“Something’s a little amiss.” said a third year Hufflepuff.

“You think?” said his friend.

“I must be really tired, or really pouring on the stupid.” said Harry.

“Nope, I’m just exceptionally stupid that night.” said Harry. “Not even pretending.”

“Hiding behind his shame.” said Dumbledore.

“What the hell am I supposed to do?” asked Harry.
“You want me to do what?’ said Harry.

“Glad I’m not crazy in the future.” said Harry.

“And I thought Moody was paranoid.” said Tonks.

“He’s still got nothing on Moody.” said Sirius.

“That’s it? No hint on how to do it?” said Harry with a laugh. “I don’t think he’s just going to chuck it over when I ask.”

“I believe I am asking you to use your charm.” said Dumbledore with a smile.

“Oh, I don’t think that Slughorn can survive Harry using his charm.” said Mrs. McFinn with a giggle.

“Yeah, well, he’s not the only one who’s confused.” said Draco.

“You’ve been keeping something warm for a long time, what was it that you made?” asked Dumbledore looking over at Harry.

“Oh, something for Remus…maybe this will get him eating more.” said Harry with a smirk jerking himself out of his deep thoughts that had clutched at him suddenly. He gathered up the plate of food and walked it over to Remus.

Remus shook his head, but accepted the plate with a smile. It was a large sized slab of beef, it looked good, but it wasn’t all that remarkable looking.

“Hold on…” said Harry. He walked back to the stove and ladled a steady stream of dark brown gravy into a silver gravy boat. He walked back to the bowl where Remus was sitting and poured the sauce over the meat.

Remus looked up to the grinning youth with a nervous look.
“What am I about to eat?” asked Remus.

“Now, don’t look scared, just try it.” said Harry.

“Eat the damn thing, he didn’t bring me any.” said Sirius with a teasing pout.

Remus carved a bit of the meat covered in the sauce and took a bite. He flinched back a bit and coughed slightly. “That’s…pretty spicy.”

“Gimmie.” said Sirius reaching over to take a bite, just to save Harry’s face, though he had not seen the amused look Harry was sporting. He cut a piece for himself and took a bite.

Sirius groaned in pleasure. “Yeah, you’re a lightweight for the spicy stuff, but Merlin is this good. What is this?”

“It’s beef tenderloin with pepper and chocolate port sauce.” said Harry.

“Ha, you don’t like it and it even has chocolate for you!” laughed Sirius.

“I didn’t say I didn’t like it!” said Remus quickly. “It was just…spicy.”

“Oh it is not.” said Sirius, he then stage-whispered to Harry. “He’s so sensitive.”

“Not my fault someone threw a bit of ghost pepper in my soup.” said Remus shortly. “I thought I had to go and see Madam Pomfrey there for a few hours.”

“Ghost pepper?” asked Colin.

“One if not the hottest pepper in the world. You eat a whole thing; you can really hurt yourself.” said Harry. “Even I don’t use them and I can go through spicy stuff like no one’s business.”

“Well, now you know, you have to keep the meat raw…but bland.” said Sirius with a smirk.

“Shut up.” said Remus nudging Sirius. “I liked the sauce though.”

“No wonder, that’s where the chocolate is.” said Sirius.
“Pressing on then.” said Officer McFinn with a smile. Eighteenth chapter.

“We’re bit halfway through the book right?” asked Lee.

“’Bout there.” said Officer McFinn.

“Then this won’t be a very good surprise.” said Lee.

“Wonder whose birthday it’s going to focus on?” asked Terry.

First paragraph.

“Save me.” said Harry.

“Who’s side are you on anyway?” asked Pavarti inquisitively. Lavender sent her friend a frown.

“It’s completely obvious who’s side I’m on.” said Harry shaking his head.

Second paragraph.

Dialogue set.

“This is a bit different than asking for a signature into the Restricted Section.” said McGonagall.

Third paragraph.

“Which is a very good thing Miss Granger, I would have been very worried about which books you were reading if you had known about them.” said Dumbledore with a slight smile.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

“I don’t normally come up with a strategy when getting information, I generally fly by the seat of my pants and hope for the best.” said Harry with an embarrassed smile. “Most of the time it works, other times I have to backtrack pretty quickly.”

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“I can name several times, but seriously I was only bringing it up.” said Harry with a smile. “Easy there.”

Hermione blushed.

Dialogue line.

“Just kiss already and get it over with!” groaned Harry.

Ron and Hermione blushed heavily.

“If they were older I would have said something a little different.” said Sirius.

“I’m not surprised by that at all.” said Remus shaking his head.

Fourth paragraph.

“This is kind of awkward…” said Katie.

“Tell me about it.” said Harry.

Dialogue line.

“I’ve been framed, I swear.” said Harry with a smirk.

Fifth paragraph.

Dialogue set.

“Shocking.” muttered Snape.

Sixth paragraph.

“So…it’s math?” said Dr. Clark.

“Kind of.” said Moody.

“…I always hated math.” said Dr. Clark.

“But don’t you use some math in being a doctor?” asked Hermione.

“Sure, but doesn’t mean I particularly enjoy doing that part. Guess I’m more of a body science doctor as opposed to all the graphs and such.” said Dr. Clark.
“You don’t?” said Hermione looking confused. “But...”

“This hasn’t happened yet, I have no idea what I know and what I don’t know as of yet.” said Harry.

“Two sentences in?” said Harry with a quirked brow. “Ron, you have to get me more time than that.”

“Alright, you find out what the ingredients are for the antidotes, and then you…” Harry stopped shortly, and continued tapping his temple harder. “You…”

“You…you chuck it all and just shove a bezoar stone down their throat or phoenix tears.” said Harry with a sigh. “I’ve got no clue… I need to read up on it a bit more.”

Harry tapped his temple thoughtfully. “Well, this is for when you’re poisoned by a mixture of at least two poisons. Following me so far?”

“Yeah.”

“Count me in on that.” said Harry.

“You’re not even in your sixth year yet, you’ll get there.” said Sirius patting Harry on the head.
“That book won’t be of any help this time I’m thinking,” said George.
“Yeah, it kind of sounds hopeless right off the bat.” said Fred.

“You don’t have to sound all that happy about it Hermione.” said Ron.

“Hey, the book is helping me, I’m not cheating, it was someone else’s notes, you make them for us all the time.” said Harry with a slightly indignant tone.

“Doesn’t work when you speak it.” said Sirius shaking his head.

“Snape looks like the cat that ate the canary over there.” said Dr. Clark.

“I see that.” said Remus.

The students stared.
“That’s…that’s what Harry said.” said Colin with a look of glee.

“Not just me…someone else mentioned it before I did in these books.” said Harry giving a pointed look to Snape.

Fifteenth paragraph.

Sixteenth paragraph, first sentence.

“A bit of class work isn’t all that desperate, but to a child I suppose it could be that.” said Lionus.

End of sixteenth paragraph.

Seventeenth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Hopefully something better than a rock.” said Blaise.

Eighteenth paragraph, second sentence.

“Tut tut!” said Fred.

“Naughty, naughty!” said George.

End of eighteenth paragraph.

Nineteenth paragraph.

Ron blushed.

Dialogue line.

Twentieth paragraph.

Twenty-first paragraph.

“Looks like you dodged a fail there.” said Draco with a smirk.

Dialogue set.

“Lucky…break…that’s all that was.” said Harry with a chuckle.
“It wasn’t f…” said Hermione, but Snape cut her off.

“It strangely was, you can most certainly take information out of a book or what a teacher says and use it for yourself.” said Snape almost regrettably.

“Then please put it in simpler terms.” said Ron with a groan.

“Sirius, Ron, stop laughing.” said Remus tiredly.

“Funny, I’ve lost points for that very reason.” said Harry.

“Not very subtle.” said Dumbeldore shaking his head.

“That conversation sounds kind of familiar.” said Dennis.

“Yeah, I noticed.” said Harry.
“This will not end well.” said Dumbledore shaking his head. “It will take a lot of work to get back into his good graces.”

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

“Oh no.” said Dumbledore covering his face. “Being truthful at this time…dear me.”

Dialogue set.

“That’s a lie right there, but you aren’t going to get anything out of him at this point.” said Remus thoughtfully.

Twenty-seventh paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Twenty-eighth paragraph.

“You’re not his little golden boy anymore.” smirked Malfoy.

Twenty-ninth paragraph, second sentence.

“Let it go, Hermione.” said Ron. “He still came up with something, better than what I did. And he didn’t have to cut his hair…don’t cut your hair.”

Hermione frowned and turned her head. “What if I want it really short?” she said taking the new path to Ron’s relief.

“Oh…I don’t know…just…uh…” said Ron.

“Let her do what she wants and then love it.” said Sirius. “Trust me.”

End of twenty-ninth paragraph.

“Let it go, Ron.” said Hermione with a smirk.

Dialogue set.

Thirtieth paragraph.
“His memory’s as sharp as a tack, he won’t forget…if anything he’ll be avoiding you like someone with Dragon Pox.” said Remus.

Thirty-first paragraph, first sentence.

“He must want Harry really badly.” said Sirius.

Thirty-first paragraph, fourth sentence.

“Wonder what this is all about? He doesn’t normally go so long without a party.” said Flitwick.

End of thirty-first paragraph.

“Well reasoned.” said Flitwick nodding approvingly.

Thirty-second paragraph.

Dialogue set, fourth sentence.

“I forgot, they’re old enough now, they can go snooping through all the books they want.” said Sirius with a gleeful smile.

“Don’t remind the boys that they can.” said Remus.

“Do we look all that studious?” said Ron.

End of dialogue set.

“Best not let Madam Pince hear you talk like that.” said Justin.

Thirty-third paragraph.

Thirty-fourth paragraph.

“Dumbledore’s smiling brightly.” said Fred.

“Harry must be right about one of them.” said George.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue line.
“Haven’t heard that in a while.” said Ron.

Thirty-fifth paragraph.

“No conspiracy the…” said Hermione.

“That’s enough of that.” said Glacier. “Stop while you’re ahead.”

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

“What happens if you try?” asked a third year Hufflepuff.

“You splinch yourself nearly in half.” said Sirius.

Dialogue line.

Thirty-sixth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Thirty-seventh paragraph.

“You sneaky little.” said Rudolph with a grin.

Dialogue line.

Thirty-eighth paragraph.

“Nice friendship you have there.” said Lavender.

Dialogue line.

“So much for hearing anything else.” said Tonks.

Thirty-ninth paragraph.

“Or he could be showing that Harry is going to be right behind him when he least expects it, makes them nervous.” said Moody.

Dialogue line.
Fortieth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“And add a forth one in there if you’re not focusing, Dismemberment.” said George.

Dialogue line.

Forty-first paragraph.

“Well, your placement is starting backfire.” said Sirius.

Dialogue line.

“I’d much rather be back in bed.” said Harry.

Harry glanced around surreptitiously. A little way to his left, Ernie Macmillan was contemplating his hoop so hard that his face had turned pink; it looked as though he was straining to lay a Quaffle-sized egg. Forty-second paragraph, second sentence.

Several people laughed, even Snape was struggling to keep a straight face.

End of forty-second paragraph.

Dialogue set.

Forty-third paragraph.

“This won’t end well.” said Charlie.

Dialogue line.

Forty-fourth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Forty-fifth paragraph, third sentence, first semi- colon.

“Yeah, the first lesson never goes well.” said Sirius. “I don’t think there has ever been one person that got it right the first time.”

“I myself tripped heavily on my robes, knocked out my left canine when I hit the floor.” said Dumbledore thoughtfully.
“How about you try a different lesson plan there, Chief?” said Officer McFinn.

“End of dialogue set.”

Forty-sixth paragraph.

Madam Bones patted her niece’s head gently. “It’s alright, you were right where you could get the fastest help, you were fine.”

“It sounds so horrible! I never want to Apparate!”

“It does sound terrible at first, but everyone will soon get the hang of it, sooner or later.” said Madam Bones.

“Broom travel for me.” said Harry holding his hand up.

“You’re not helping.” said Sirius.

“Not trying to.” said Harry.

Forty-seventh paragraph.

Dialogue set.

“Don’t want to try that now, I’ll take a pass.” said a sixth year student.

Forty-eighth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Forty-ninth paragraph.

“And if you’re really nervous next Saturday, try: Screaming, Sicking, Scramming.” said Fred.

“Really not helping.” said Sirius.

Fiftieth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.
“Nope.” said Harry.

“What the hell?” said Dr. Clark.

“Oh, I’m having an epiphany here.” said Harry.

“Don’t go amending our motto there.” said Sirius.

“So much for that.” said Harry.
“We really need to show him the other passageways.” said Ron.

“Yeah.” said Harry.

Fifty-eighth paragraph, third sentence, second comma.

Harry’s gaze shot up to the book.

End of fifty-eighth paragraph.

“They’re not leaving you or each other, they’re just having a bit of a hormonal battle.” said Angelina.

“Don’t I know it.” said Harry.

Fifty-ninth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Don’t blame the Headmaster for canceling those, it was just another way to have someone else play ‘mule’ and get attacked.” said Moody.

Sixtieth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Could be worse, you could be in the hospital.” said Bill with a kind smile.

Sixty-first paragraph, first sentence.

“Not the outcome that everyone is hoping for.” said Leroy.

End of sixty-first paragraph.

“But not the most original, I’ve come up with better.” said Sirius.

“As have I.” muttered Snape.

Dialogue line.
“Kind of like, ‘here, have a sandwich.’” said Fred.

“Not that it’s special or anything, just take it.” said George.

Thirty-sixth paragraph.
Dialogue set.
Dialogue line.
Dialogue line.
Dialogue line.

“Here’s hoping he’s not in…” started Sirius.

“Don’t you…” said Remus.

“I was going to say, ‘Here’s hoping he’s not in where he shouldn’t be’, thank you.” said Sirius.

Sixty-third paragraph.
Dialogue set, second sentence.

Mr. Weasley and his wife smiled at each other.

End of dialogue set.

“It’s only once, Ron. Only once.” said Mr. Weasley smiling.

Dialogue set.
Dialogue line.
Dialogue line.

“Dude, you know it’s bad that the moment you wake up and you check where’s he at, and you pass on Cauldron Cakes.” said Nightstrike shaking his head. “But I totally see where you’re coming from and that suspicious nature might be the thing that keeps you and others alive.” he added swiftly.

Dialogue set.
Sixty-fourth paragraph.

Dialogue line.
“What’s gotten into you?” said Hermione. “You always rush down for breakfast, it’s your second favorite meal of the day?”

“Hope someone drags him off to Madam Pomfrey.” said Charlie. “The guy sounds pretty ill to me.”

“I have a suspicion…” said Harry. “And it’s not a good one.”

“I’d have to hit something, or him, not all that picky.” said Harry.
“I know you exist!” said Lavender quickly.

“We all know that.” said Hermione darkly.

Dialogue line.

Sixty-ninth paragraph.

“If you’re not talking about Lavender, I don’t suggest you tell her that.” said a seventh year Gryffindor.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Merlin’s pants, I was afraid of that.” said Harry rubbing his face tiredly.

“What….wait…” said Hermione with a gasp.

“Yeah.” said Harry.

Seventieth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Ron! You’re cheating on me!” screamed Lavender.

“Not by choice…” said Dumbledore also catching on.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Wrong thing to say to someone under that influence.” said Snape.

Seventy-first paragraph.

“Did you get ahold of one of those Asters again?” asked Bill worriedly.

“No flower’s involved this time.” said Harry.

Seventy-second paragraph.
Seventy-third paragraph.
“Least you won’t hit me again.” said Harry.

Dialogue line.
Dialogue line.
Dialogue line.

Seventy-fourth paragraph.
Dialogue line.
“Oh no…” said George slapping a hand to his forehead.
“What?” asked Lee.

Dialogue line.
Dialogue line.
Dialogue line.

“They didn’t fall off your bed!” said Mrs. Weasley worriedly.

Dialogue set.

Seventy-fifth paragraph.
Dialogue line.
“Trust me, you don’t want me to, especially if she has to resort to love potion to get a boyfriend.” said Harry.

Dialogue set, second sentence.
“James would have done that to me.” said Sirius.
“He has done that to you.” said Remus with a slight smirk.
“When was this?” asked Sirius in horror.
“Seventh year, though it only lasted perhaps a weekend during the Christmas holiday.” said Remus.
“I wanna hear about that.” said Harry with a smile.
“Not if I can help it.” said Remus with a gleeful smirk.

End of dialogue set.

“You’re no fun.” said Dean.

Dialogue line.

Seventy-seventh paragraph, first sentence, eighth word.

“That’s not nice.” said Mrs. McFinn.

Seventy-seventh paragraph, end of parenthesis.

“Oh.” said Mrs. McFinn with a slight smile.

End of seventy-seventh paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Why in Slughorn’s office?” asked Pavarti.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“He’s lost his mind!” said Fred dramatically.

Dialogue line.

Seventy-eighth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

A collective “Oooh” went through Great Hall by all the males.

“That’s…that won’t turn out well later.” said Lionus shaking his head and wincing.
Seventy-ninth paragraph.

“I don’t know; I’m starting to like this day.” said Harry with a smile. “Maybe they’ll stop with all the gag inducing sappy crap.”

“And what about you and Ginny?” asked Sirius waggling his eyebrows.

“When was the last time you saw her and I be anything but normal together?”

Sirius blinked. “Point taken.”

Eightieth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“So does every other normal person in the school.” said Seamus. “But this is Harry we’re talking about.”

Dialogue set.

“Well, I was wondering…but I still wouldn’t have asked anything of that nature.” said Madam
Pomfrey. “Unless he was poisoned, but only if he wanted to tell me would I bring it up.”

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

“And I’m not ready for him to do something like that, run up and profess undying love is one thing, jumping is another.” said Harry quietly.

Eighty-first paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, first sentence.

Fred and George looked between themselves nervously.

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

Eighty-second paragraph.

“No, it was very subtle.” said Draco with a smirk.
“Like a nutter, but you two would be just perfect together.” said Ginny. To Ron’s angered look she added. “I’m kidding.”

Ron shook his head. “Why is it always me?”

“Oh, yeah, everything happens to you.” said Harry.

“Not really ‘disappointment’ more along the lines of ‘oh my god what happened?’” said Dr. Clark.

“I would have gone with, ‘what was in that drink last night?’” said Officer McFinn with a laugh.

“Perhaps, but I think that is not the path I was hoping you would go through, but I am glad that you are not looking in that direction at first.” said Dumbledore.

“So…he’s disappointed, but happy?” asked a first year.

“I gave up trying to figure stuff out.” said his friend.

“Unless you’re liked or make a mistake in his classroom, he won’t remember you name all that well…old walrus doesn’t want to remember much.”
Eighty-sixth paragraph.

Lionus and Moody both leaned forward in their seats.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Eighty-seventh paragraph.

“RON!” screamed the members of his family.

“What the…?” shouted Mr. Weasley.

“Let’s finish this chapter, and get on with it!” said Officer McFinn loudly.

Dialogue line.

Eighty-eighth paragraph.

“Oh my god!” said Ginny looking horrified as she held onto her older brother’s arm tightly. The rest of the family sat around the youngest boy and latched onto him.

Dialogue line.

Eighty-ninth paragraph.

“I hope that it helps.” said Harry, his hands gripped together, his hands shaking. “Please let it help…”

Sirius held onto his godson’s shoulder and brought him closer to himself.

End of chapter.

“Before anyone gets excited, let’s move on, now.” said Officer Mcfinn turning the page swiftly.
Officer McFinn gave no one a chance to step out for a moment before continuing on with the readings.

“Nineteenth chapter, is the title chapter.” said Officer McFinn.

“It couldn’t be ‘Ron Recovers’ or anything like that huh?” said Fred with a tremor in his voice.

Dialogue line.

First paragraph, first sentence, first comma.

“Well, at least we know he’s alright.” said Madam Pomfrey. “I would have had him removed him to St Mungos immediately if he wasn’t.”

End of first paragraph.

“Knew you two cared.” said Bill.

“Hey, we tease him all the time, but no one hurts our brother.” said Fred.

“Not…you know…permanently like that…” said George.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“And not poisoned.” said George.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

“You boys need to watch what your selling and whom you are selling it to.” said Moody with a frown. “I’m thinking a few of your devices could be used against us.”

“Kind of sad that they need to resort to pranking things as weapons.” said Fred.

“Any port in a storm.” said the Rangers and Aurors together.

Second paragraph.
“Thank goodness Harry was there.” said Mrs. Weasley weakly.

Harry heaved a great sigh and relaxed a bit against Sirius.

Ron and Hermione both blushed faintly.

“Well, if he’s talking he should be fine.” said Dr. Nicodemus as he reached down to check one of the tiny infant’s temperature. The students kept sneaking over to take a look at the infants, but he and the parents kept them at bay with the protective bubble and the glare of both parents.

“There’s no point in him poisoning Ron.” said Sirius shaking his head. “Hate to say it, but in the opinion of a Death Eater: Poisoning Harry would be the main objective. But thank god that it didn't happen…” he added in a whisper.

“No offense meant to Ron, but thank god he didn’t get Harry.” said Rudolph. “Slughorn was frozen and well…I hope Ron would remember the bezoar stone…”
Ron blushed.

Dialogue line.

“Would make sense if he was a Death Eater, but I can’t make sense of him being one.” said Kingsley.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Then don’t sell your products to those you don’t know.” muttered Moody.

Dialogue line.

“Not that man, he’s got too strong of mental barriers…if Dumbledore can’t get a memory, then no Death Eater can put that curse on him.” said Sirius. “And I could see Voldemort wanting him to join him free and willing…and killing him if he disagreed.”

Dialogue line.

“Not according to what Slughorn said.” said Harry quietly.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

“I’m stupid.” said Harry shaking his head.

Dialogue set.

“That’s a scary thought, but I’m thinking that since the return of Voldemort, he’s been checking his gifts and letters pretty thoroughly.
The room was quiet, but then the twins smiled wickedly.

“To think that’s the first person you ask for when you’re poisoned…” said Fred.

“He showed a bit of life when she spoke…significant I think.” said George.

“Shove off.” muttered Ron with a blush.

Sixth paragraph.

Seventh paragraph.

Dialogue set, third sentence, first comma.

“Can’t say I’m overly sympathetic.” muttered Remus.

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Percy counted on his fingers for a moment, “There are only six.”

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

Madam Pomfrey blushed. “The first person to say ‘Nice save,’ will be confined to the Hospital Wing for the remainder of the day.”

“With what ailing them?” asked Leroy.

“Whatever I can think of.” said Rudolph.

Dialogue set.

“Hermione would, but not to this degree and only when he thoroughly earned it.” said Bill.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Sort of a permanent disable, isn’t it?” said Angelina. “Hexing someone is one thing, but killing? We’re Quidditch crazy, but not that crazy.”
“Please don’t tell him we said that.” said the twins together.

“If only we were privy to Harry’s conversations once again.” said Fred dramatic.

“Oh the woes of being left out.” said George.

Harry took a deep breath and leaned back in the bowl. “Easy…easy…it’ll be explained; it will be explained…”

“Time to up the payback to Harry, mum.” said Charlie with a smile. “He should get two Christmas jumpers.”

“Or unlucky in some parts.” said Snape with a sneer.

“Don’t ruin the moment, Severus.” retorted McGonagall sharply.

Dumbeldore smiled softly to himself, “It is amazing how you read me, Hagrid.”

Hagrid blushed behind his beard.
“Or he’s biding his time and waiting for the right time to strike.” said Lionus with a frown.

“Never know where that bugger is.” said a seventh year Slytherin.

“That would be ridiculous,” said Viper, his voice hoarser than what it was the last time he was seen in the Great Hall. “Despite their being two children that ver attacked, the majority are safe. And they vill safe stay vith Dumbledore here.”

“Ooh, ooh, can I take a guess who they’re talking about?” said Dean, but he sobered up when he saw Snape’s glare.

“Too late!” said Seamus. “You know they’re going to take that and run with it!”

“After all that’s gone on, gossiping isn’t going to be the one thing that gets you fired.” said Tonks.

“Woah, Harry’s immune to your guilt…better try another tactic.” said a third year Hufflepuff.
“They never are.” said Harry with a smirk.

Harry leaned forward ever so slightly, but it was not missed by the vigilant Glacier.

“But no one had to be secreted away to talk about that.” said Harry with a slow growing smile.

Harry sat back in his seat completely and his eyes were wide and blinking.

“Not his fault, now is it?” muttered Sirius rubbing Harry’s neck affectionately.

“And you don’t help matters…neither did I.” said Remus honestly.

“But we’re with a teacher!” said Hermione.
The Great Hall was silent.

“Whoa, didn’t think I’d hear him say that.” said Ernie.

“Cool.” said Justin.

“Aw, I want to hear that fight, they should have stayed.” said Terry.

“Oh, no.” said McGonagall and Flitwick together.

Dumbledore looked up to the ceiling, a smile on his face.

“You have enough on your plate; you don’t need anymore.” said Chief Hawkeye.
Eighteenth paragraph.

Dialogue set, first sentence.

“Hex the twit…despite what he’s got to say.” muttered Ginny.

End of dialogue set.

“Come over here so I can hit you.” said Harry wagging his finger at the Gryffindor.

McLaggen blinked.

Nineteenth paragraph.

Dialogue set.

“To the game! To the game!” said Harry loudly.

Dialogue line.

“Someone just about died and you’re concerned about a game? What the hell is wrong with him?” said Bill.

Dialogue line.

Twentieth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Chuck him…right out an open window.” said Wildfire darkly.

Dr. Nicodemus looked at Wildfire with a quirked brow. “You’ve gotten a bit more violent as of late.”

Viper tried to hide a smile behind his hand.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Kiss my f@cking ass.” said Harry.

“Language.” said Mrs. McFinn shaking her finger at Harry.

“Sorry, ‘Kiss my bloody ass.’” said Harry correcting himself.
“It’s a work in progress I suppose.” said Dr. Clark with a quivering smile as Officer McFinn and Sirius roared with laughter.

Dialogue line.

Twenty-first paragraph, second sentence.

“Way to care, schoolmates.” said Ron with a roll of his eyes.

End of twenty-first paragraph.

“Okay, I forgive you lot.” said Ron.

Twenty-second paragraph, first sentence.

“At least you admit it.” said Hermione.

“I haven’t yet.” said Harry with a slightly cheeky smile.

End of twenty-second paragraph.

Twenty-third paragraph.

“Her I can understand, but jeez…someone try and find something else for him to focus on.” said Sirius.

Twenty-fourth paragraph, first sentence, first semi-colon.

“Here’s a thought, how about you shut up?” said Blaise, “That might be a good way to promote yourself.”

End of twenty-fourth paragraph.

“You had better not be going through with all that ‘training schemes’.” said Ginny.

Twenty-fifth paragraph, first sentence.

“That’s it, I’m going to be a hermit and no one is going to be allowed in my little shack.” said Harry.

“We’ve all been there.” said Dr. Nicodemus with a chuckle.
“That shack is sounding really good.” said Harry rubbing his eyes tiredly.

“Can’t quite see him cheating on anyone with anyone.” said Harry tiredly.

“Have to pass the time somehow.” said Ron.

“That won’t go well…not if you say that right in front of Harry.” said Hermione.

“Why didn’t you yell at her?” asked Hermione.

“How the heck should I know?” asked Harry.

“Would have been hilarious if it had been a wall.” said Draco with a snicker.

“As opposed to being agitated by not watching the match?” said Alicia.
“Not that Ron is nervous or anything.” said Ginny with a smile.

Dialogue set, second sentence.

“Well, hope someone accidentally hits him with both Bludgers.” said Ginny innocently.

End of dialogue set.

Lavender looked insulted.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, second sentence.

“Sure it is, just say ‘It’s not you it’s me, and let’s just be friends.’” said Sirius.

“And then duck as she’s throwing everything that she’s ever owned in her life at you.” said Dr. Clark.

“Did that happen to you too?” said Sirius with a smile.

End of dialogue set.

“Awww….” sighed a good portion of the students.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Hammer them both.” said Ron.

Dialogue line.

Twenty-seventh paragraph.

“What the…better not let Pansy know about that.” said Neville with a snicker.

Twenty-eighth paragraph.

Dialogue line.
“Get it right, it’s now The-One-Who-Is-Not-Buying-Your-Bullshit.” muttered Harry.

Sirius choked on his tea.

“Having an internal struggle of which thing was more important.” said Harry.

“Not going to win that little battle are you?” said Mr. Weasley with a smile.

“SHUT UP!” shouted the Gryffindor team.

“That has to hurt his pride.” whispered a first year Gryffindor student looking at the sullen raven haired young man and the pompous Gryffindor.
“Have a feeling…it won’t end that well.” said Hannah.

Dialogue set.

“No…way…they have Luna doing the commentary?” said Lee looking at Luna in shock.

“That should be fun.” said Luna in her dreamy voice.

“I’m going to love this.” said Remus with a smile.

Thirty-fifth paragraph.

“Not my fire and passion, but thankfully…she doesn’t act snarky.” said Lee.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Yeah!” said Sirius raising a fist into the air. “This is going to be great!”

Thirty-sixth paragraph, third sentence, first sentence.

“How about you trying to defend the damn posts there, genius?” retorted Ginny to the book.

End of thirty-sixth paragraph.

“I rest my case.” said Ginny.

“Even Oliver never scolded us for losing the Quaffle.” said Katie.

“’Cause he knew we’d take the Beater bats after him.” said Angelina.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“That’s my job you great nit!” said Harry shortly. “I’m supposed to tell you off!

Cormac was trying hard to shrink into the chair he was sitting on. It would seem he was not doing a good job trying to convince them that he was the better keeper, perhaps they were a bit prejudice towards him because he wasn’t a Weasley but now was not a good time to bring that up.

Dialogue set.

“No, sweetheart, it’s not.” said Sirius roaring with laughter.

Thirty-seventh paragraph.

Thirty-eighth paragraph.

“Oh my god!” said Remus trying hard not to laugh out loud.

“This is better than when we shot Frank with all those modified Cheering Charms.” said Sirius holding his sides and trying to breathe.

“What?” asked Harry.

“Frank Longbottom, he was a good sport but he had something about him that made us think that he never came out of his protective little shell.” said Sirius wiping his eyes. “So, when he was asked to do the commentary for a Quidditch match, we sort of…how to put it?”

“Doped him up with a bunch of specially crafted Cheering Charms.” said Remus with a fond smile.

“The man could not focus on anything for longer than two seconds! It was like you crawling all over the place looking for imaginary squirrels!” said Sirius still laughing loudly as he patted Harry on the shoulder. “Well, no…that’s a lie, he could focus on one thing…Alice…oh he focused on her a lot.”

“I still remember when he serenaded her, right in front of the whole school.” said Flitwick with a bright smile. “The game had to stop for a while.”

Neville turned bright red and almost sent the pair of Marauders an angry glare, then he heard:

“Alice never knew that he liked her, oh they were inseparable after that.” said Remus smiling broadly.

“Yeah…we were given the longest string of detentions in the history of the school for that little stunt. Just about suspended we were.” said Sirius. “James didn’t get away scot free, they found out he was also in on the plan. He nominated Frank to do the announcing that day, he got to join in on our seven-week long detention stint.”

“But it was worth it.” said Remus and Sirius together.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“I’m hoping he hurts himself.” said Fred.
“Way to set an example, you fool.” said Charlie looking at Cormac with disgust.

The smile on Sirius’ face disappeared in an instant. “What?” he said weakly.

“Oh god, when he mishit it…” said Fred. He and George looked at each other and then grabbed their heads.

“Owwww…..”

“I’m officially worried.” said Sirius latching onto Harry’s hand.

Harry felt the hand surrounding his squeeze tighter.

Sirius took a sharp intake of breath.

“Ginerva Weasley you put that chair down this instant!” said Mrs. Weasley sharply.

“And don’t think I don’t see those in your hands boys.” said Mr. Weasley warningly to the twins.
who had their hands behind their backs. Several strange hissing boxes were in their hands and were immediately tapped with their wands and placed back in their pockets.

Dialogue set, first sentence, second comma.

“Pity,” snickered Harry.

End of dialogue set.

“Please do, I’ll be glad to talk to him after I’ve taken the Beater bat to McLaggen’s head.” said Harry. “Both bats if I can get my hands on them.”

Forty-third paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“...are not going to be on my team...I don’t give a sphinx’s ass...” said Harry looking at McLaggen darkly.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

“I’m betting that’s an understatement.” said Viper looking at the red headed family with a smirk.

Forty-fourth paragraph.

Dialogue set.

Luna smiled fondly.

Forty-fifth paragraph.

Dialogue set, first sentence.

Ron snorted. “You’d better take that drama king crown back mate. Or at least accept a King of delusions scepter.”

End of dialogue set.
“Yeah, well, we still lost…doesn’t matter.” said Harry.

“Seems to be the rule.” muttered a seventh year Ravenclaw.

“And I should be thinking that I don’t want to use people for my own needs…” said Harry shaking his head.

Sirius cracked his knuckles. “Oh, I didn’t forget that, but I wasn’t aware that it was the most painful that you’ve had. I’m going to kill him.”
“What the?” said a few students.

“Oh no, not Kreacher.” moaned a third year Slytherin.

“Hey, at least Dobby’s there.” said a fourth year Ravenclaw.

“Wonder what they’re fighting about?” asked Emmeline curiously.

“And I wonder how much Peeves was egging them on.” said Nightstrike.

“Aw, that’s precious.” said Chief Hawkeye. “Never knew the little buggers could be so violent when they wanted to be.”

“Sort of ruins it for him when his master is right there to listen to that.” said Sirius with a scowl.

“Get him, Dobby!” shouted almost the entire student body.

Chief Hawkeye blinked. “I don’t want to know what he meant by all that.”
“Don’t tell Hermione.” said several Slytherin students together.

“I think we’ll be asking Dobby if he wants to come to Night’s Rest, I think he’d enjoy that.” said Sirius with a smile.

“Yeah, well, I don’t want you either.” muttered Harry.

“Harry! They have to sleep!” said Hermione angrily.

“This hasn’t happened yet.” said Harry.

“No throwing of any selves off of any tower!” said Harry quickly.

“Good boy.” said Moody nodding appreciatively.
“Yeah, well…too bad.” said Harry.

End of chapter.

“And now you have a tail, and hopefully you’ll get some answers.” said Hannah.

“And now it is time for the days reading to end.” said Glaicer standing up and hoisting Harry up by the wrist. “Come along.”

“But…but…” said a few of the students. They could do nothing but let the young man leave with the Ranger healer.
Harry silently followed Glacier up to their old suite and allowed him to close the door behind him.

“Something wrong?” asked Harry walking towards the sofa and falling into it heavily. “I thought we could blow through a few more than four chapters?”

“I think we should keep on the four chapter a day maximum for the time being. While your body is steadily regaining its health, I believe we should keep its stress down to a bare minimum.” said Glacier.

“I’m not stressed.” said Harry rolling his shoulders.

“You were getting worked up in this last chapter, and with the attack on your best friend, I think that in itself is a stressful situation.” said Glacier. “So, I suggest…that you and I have our little chat, and then perhaps a nice restful night of…” He flicked out a pack of cards and smiled. “Poker.”

Harry’s eyes went to the cards in his hand, a smile creeping out on his face.

=-=-=-

“Bloody hell mate, these books are going rougher and rougher.” said Ron as he dealt out the cards. “I mean, now I’m getting taken out.”

It was decided, by Harry, that it was just going to be a night of the boys of their dorm playing cards…for old time’s sake. Candy was brought in, sandwiches and butterbeer were supplied and they spent the rest of the afternoon playing poker.

“You’re telling me?” said Harry as he checked his cards. “What else could possibly happen?”

“All that’s missing is you trying to break into someplace you shouldn’t be again.” said Dean.

“Can you believe that McLaggen? When you left with Glacier, he tried to bolster up his imagine. Just about had to tackle the Quidditch team away from killing him.” said Seamus as he tossed three cards towards Ron and took three in return.

“Angelina looked ready to grab her broom and shove it up his ass.” said Dean. “I’d personally would rather hurl him from the tower.”

“Ernie offered to shut him in Greenhouse three with some of the baby mandrakes.” said Neville.

“Nice to know I have such a large support system.” said Harry with a smirk. “What did you think about what Sirius and Remus told us about your Mum and Dad?” he looked at Neville.

“Well…I was a little surprised and angry, then…well…guess it was kind of funny.” said Neville with a sheepish smile. “But you know, it’s kind of nice to hear that they weren’t perfect.”

“How do you mean Nev?” said Ron. “Careful guys, he’s not taking any cards again.”

“Well, I…Gran always talks about them, but they’re always…well…” said Neville, looking down.

“How they’re practically perfect in every way?” said Harry with a smirk.
“Yeah.” said Neville.

“I get that a lot when someone talks about my mum and dad. How they were cool, smart, witty… all that…but I know somewhere in those stories that they were spoiled brats or…whatever negative side my mum had…I just have to try and find the person with the story.” said Harry with a smile. “And if you lay down another full house I’m going to toss you right off your chair.”

“I’ll bet three cauldron cakes.” said Ron. “What do you blokes think you’re going to get for Christmas, tomorrow?”

“My mum has been hinting towards Weird Sisters tickets, they’ve got a concert in Dublin this summer.” said Seamus as he shuffled the cards in his hand. “Hope that’s what she’s getting me…and not a Weird Sister’s shirt or something.”

“I’m getting tickets too…to the West Hams.” said Dean. “Think Dr. Clark might want to come? He seemed to be a fan too.”

“I think he’d like that; I’ll make sure to get him tickets.” said Harry. “How about you, Ron?”

“Eh, the usual they don’t tell me anything that they’re getting me either than the usual jumper.” said Ron. “Makes the opening a bit more enjoyable that way and less of a letdown. Percy had that happen to him once, he was hoping to get a new eagle quill and ink set, didn’t…he moped for about three hours.”

“Sirius isn’t divulging anything to me either, he’s keeping mum about it.” said Harry.

“I’m getting my Mum’s locket.” said Neville plainly.

The others looked at him.

“What?” said Neville blushing faintly.

“What…other than the obvious, what is so special ‘bout this locket?” said Dean tossing his cards down. “Fold.”

“Well, I always liked looking at it when I was little, my Gran told me that when I made a decision about what I was going to be for life…I’d get it.” said Neville. The other boys were stunned.

“You promise you won’t laugh?” said Ron looking shocked.

“Yeah, just as long as you don’t teach our kids how to play poker and play against us, I’m all for “Yeah, I can’t see him being able to even teach that in class, not with you having to keep your eyes on some of the plants in there…unless you want to get pulled up by your y-fronts.” said Seamus.

“Call.”

“Call.”

“Alright lads…lay ‘em.” said Ron.

Silence.

“I can’t believe it.” said Dean shaking his head.

“Are you serious? Who dealt that?” shouted Seamus.

“Way to go Ron.” said Harry with a growl.

“How the hell did you get a straight flush? In one deal?”

Harry woke up to Christmas morning to something very surprising: there were not a single Christmas parcel at the foot of his bed. Instead there was a set of new dress robes, bright emerald green with a black cloak and a pair of black shiny shoes. Not too sure what the dress robes were for, he left them on his bed and went out to the sitting room. He surmised that Mrs. McFinn wanted to see him all dressed up, so he walked out to get confirmation. He didn’t want to start being choked off by his tie so early in the morning.

Out in the lounge, Rudolph and Leroy were straightening each other’s ties, no one else was present, not even Sirius who was not in their bedroom.

“Oh good, you’re up…but you’re not dressed?” said Rudolph as he looked over to the young man.

“What am I getting dressed for?” asked Harry confusedly.

“I told you, you forgot to tell him.” said Leroy with a smirk to Rudolph.

Rudolph groaned. He turned a sympathetic look over to Harry. “Ah…meant to tell you…we’re going to have to run to Paradise Castle for the morning, maybe till late afternoon…or longer…”

Harry quirked a brow. “Oh…yeah…the Patriarch thing…did my presents get sent out? I kind of forgot about them. I thought I was going to spend it with Mrs. McFinn and Dr. Clark.”

Leroy looked uncomfortable. “Sorry about that Monster…. You know, if you want you can….”

“No, I’ll go…I mean we aren’t going to be there all day are we?” said Harry.

“Well, Christmases are somewhat lengthy. Everyone gathers at the Castle, we all have a very formal breakfast, we exchange presents…the Matriarch gives out her presents, then the Patriarch and then we have a formal luncheon and mingle.” said Rudolph uneasily.

Harry blinked. “You couldn’t warn me about this yesterday so I could load up on the Cheering Charms?”

“Oh trust me, that would have been a dead giveaway that something was wrong if anyone appeared happy there.” said Leroy turning to face Harry with a smile. “Your Grandmother will be happy, but other than that, everyone is sort of devoid of any emotion.”

“It’s all the wine they drink in the morning… but that was years ago… maybe they improved.” said Rudolph.

“Explains how much wine is gone through in a month.” said Harry quietly.

=-=-=-=-=

For as much as Rudolph and Leroy were laying it on thick at Hogwarts, the Christmas at the family castle wasn’t all that awful, it was bad, but it wasn’t awful. Though, Harry had to admit, it was entertaining in parts.

Castle Valor was decorated with such grace and style that Hogwarts could never aspire to. There were bright white and blue roses decorating the snow covered hedges. There were enchanted icicles that doubled as wind chimes hung in the trees and gave a tinkling little melodies. There were icy butterflies of white and light blue fluttering around the frosted gardens.

The large castle that stood before him, was lined with thick snow and delicate icicles dangled from every over hang there was to be seen. The towers and turrets were glinting in the sunlight thanks to a thin layer of ice and snow.

Harry’s breath was taken away.

“You should see it in the spring and summer.” said Rudolph leaning over with a smile. “There’s flowers, lush trees and vines all over the place. There are fairies that come out at night and play in the gardens till midnight, I used to stay up late almost every night just watching them.”

“Usually mother tries to come out and do a bit of decorating, but I suppose she wanted you to see it in all it’s natural glory.” said Leroy.

“This is natural?” said Harry with a laugh as he extended out a finger for a frosty winged butterfly to land

“Those were Father’s favorites.” said Rudolph with a fond smile. “I’ll have to teach you how to make them, so Sirius can have a few when winter comes.”

“I’d like that.” said Harry.

=-=-=-=-=

It was thanks to Aunt Petunia’s desire for proper dinner etiquette and Mrs. McFinn’s social upbringing that he knew which fork went to what and when to use it. He was aware (mostly to Rudolph pointing them out) that the ones that had met him a few months ago were watching his every move, and they seemed poised and ready to humiliate him, no matter what reason could be.

When the wine was poured for the head table (the bottles floating in midair, all the while being controlled by house-elves just behind the ones seated), Harry placed his hand over his wineglass to stop the bottle of wine from pouring, it was strangely then that they decided to strike first.

“Surely as Patriarch you should treat yourself to a glass or two.” said his Great Aunt… or third cousin, they had not been quite introduced yet, and his Great-Grandmother said he would die of starvation if they had done all the introductions before breakfast.
“I have little over half a year till I’m old enough to drink…besides, wine before lunch at least is so very…well…I think I need to have a little chat with the house-elves about when that wine should be served.” said Harry with a slight smile as he sipped his cup of tea.

Those nearby turned and looked at the young man, insult written on their faces. “What? Why shouldn’t…” said another one of his relatives.

“I think that should be a wise decision, I personally prefer tea in the morning.” said his Great Grandmother with a supportive smile. “I think a little less wine in the morning will improve one’s health and spirits.”

Several family members shook their heads in disappointment, while small fraction actually nodded. It was a start.

“Are you sure you don’t want any breakfast, Mr. Longsword?” asked Harry from where he sat. “I haven’t seen you eat anything yet and the foods pretty good.” (“Pretty good?” said one of the great aunts indignantly. “How dare he?”)

The dark skinned Ranger was lounging against the wall, he looked up to meet Harry’s eyes and shook his head.

“I do not have the need to eat, besides I tasted all the food that was put before you.” said Longsword nodding solemnly.

“How rude.” sniffed one of his uncles disdainfully.

“I was testing for poison.” said Longsword bluntly looking down to the man firmly.

“I’m inclined to agree with you, George.” said Leroy with a chuckle to the stunned man.

“I’m not here to insult anyone, but I will not allow anything to harm the young man.” said Longsword somberly.

“Well, you insulted us anyway.” said the same uncle.

Longsword said nothing.

“No apology?” asked one of his aunts.

“I’m not apologetic.” said Longsword.

Harry looked away, letting out a silent sigh. This is awkward.

=-=-=-=-=-=-=-=-=-=-=-=-=-=-=-=-=-=-=-=-=

The rest of breakfast went by fairly smoothly, Harry kept his conversations close to his Great-Grandmother, on the advice of Rudolph so that the more devious parts of the family couldn’t use anything against him so soon. She and he spoke mainly about what he wanted to do with his life.

“Well, I’m sort of torn between a few choices. I haven’t made up my mind yet…I’ve got Moody and…someone else fighting for my time it seems.” said Harry with a smile.

“Yes, your Grandfather was the same way, it took him years to discover that he wanted nothing more in life than to be an author, my son could spin quite the tale.” she said with a fond smile. “IT’s a shame that his Magnum Opus was never quite finished.”
Harry looked at his Grandmother in sympathy, then down the table to where Rudolph and Leroy were. “You know, Uncle Leroy owns a newspaper, maybe he can take a look at it and see where Grandfather was going with it?”

“It has crossed my mind, but I…it would not be the same dear…best to leave it in his own words, unfinished as it is.” she said with a sad smile. “I know he wouldn’t mind terribly, but…no…we leave it unfinished.”

Unknown to the pair of them, several of the family members looked a bit uncomfortable.

---

Once breakfast was over, the gift giving had started. Members of the family exchanged gift within their own tight knit parts of the family or even their friends within the family, the only two that received presents from each and every member of the family was the Patriarch and the Matriarch.

It was sort of like a much longer winded version of Harry’s birthday only the gifts weren’t really given with much thought, only how many jewels and how much the gift’s cost was put into consideration. Though his Great Grandmother had given him a nice set of winter robes to keep him warm. She had said that he looked too thin and if he was anything like his Great Grandfather, the cold would cut straight through his skin down to his bones.

Then there were the speeches, oh how they dragged on. Each one of them had a singular dialogue about the gift they were giving and how much they were “happy” that they he was reunited with the family.

What he had mostly gotten were thick, full fur coats, (which he thought were very soft, but sort of felt a bit uncomfortable when he learned they were real fur) plenty of goblets and chalices, rare books and even some large bejeweled rings that he himself could never see himself wearing. But the most exciting part of the day for him was when Harry presented his gift to the family, but mostly to his Great Grandmother. With the help of Rudolph and Leroy he brought the crystal elm tree into the front hall and presented it to her.

“I should say I had this commissioned, each leaf on here, has the name of each of our family member’s on it, and everyone is receiving a matching leaf to keep in their home.” said Harry gesturing towards the tree. “You should thank Dumbledore the next time you see him, he was the one that helped me out on this, all I had was the idea.”

The Matriarch of the Potter family’s eyes welled up with tears.

“It’s beautiful, it’s absolutely gorgeous!” she said choking up.

Harry smiled brightly as he accepted a hug from his Great Grandmother. It didn’t matter what else happened on this particular Christmas, nothing was going to dampen this woman’s spirit’s with him around.
Harry had not gotten back to the school till well into the evening and he had a few people waiting for him in the suites he shared with Sirius. Namely, a few of the Order members, the Weasleys, Dr. Clark and…the McFinns.

Obviously Speckerton had allowed McFinn to possess his body again, but even without being told, Harry could see the glow and the change in Speckerton’s eyes.

“Merry Christmas, Sport.” said Officer McFinn throwing his (Speckerton’s) arms around him. “How was the family Christmas?”

Harry chuckled. “I’m grateful that I kept to just talking to my Great Grandmother. The others were sort of put out by somethings I decided to change right then and there.”

“Such as?” asked Mr. Weasley handing Harry a mug of hot chocolate.

“Oh, no drinking wine before three, and no more soirees every other week. They don’t need to have that many parties…if they want to throw one, by all means, go elsewhere and do it on their own sickles.” said Harry taking the mug and sitting down beside Mrs. McFinn. “Wine at breakfast…I ask you! No wonder they’re all…uh…”

“I think a best term than almost anything is: Alcoholics.” said Leroy with a smirk.

“They’re not…they just…like to flaunt the wealth that our forebears have accumulated.” said Rudolph uneasily. “I know my father didn’t stand for such things, drinking wine that early in the morning…”

“They’ve had free reign for a while now, Rudy, they’ll have to get used to being reined in again.” said Leroy carefully. “They seemed to like the present that Monster gave them.”

“Yeah, anything sparkly and one of a kind, they seem to enjoy.” said Rudolph snickering darkly. “Now, let’s get onto some good presents for you!”

Harry had received the usual mince pies and Christmas jumper from Mrs. Weasley (this year it was green and sported the Hogwarts Crest on the front) a new broom servicing kit from Hermione, some Filibuster fireworks from Ron, several defense books from Remus and Sirius and some freshly baked cookies from Mrs. McFinn. Dr. Clark only offered him an IOU for his Christmas present, as he was unsure what to give a young wizard, he would need some more time to think about it.

Rudolph and Leroy had already given Harry several fancy new dress robes for various occasions at Paradise Castle, but they had mentioned there was one present they couldn’t risk bringing out into the cold winter air. They handed Harry a simple terra cotta pot with a bit of dirt inside.

Harry looked down into the pot and frowned. “Two things: Are you sure there’s something here, and are you sure this isn’t for Neville?”

Rudolph and Leroy smiled. “Oh, there’s something there, and it’s for you. Touch the top of the dirt…think of any sort of plant you want.”

“Within reason, no creating something straight out of some fantasy.” said Rudolph quickly.
Harry quirked his brow but did as he was told. As soon as his finger left the dirt, a sprout sprang up from the ground and before their eyes, it grew and grew until it was a micro-version of an elm tree.

“It’s a cutting from a plant called a Chameleon Bush. Every day it’s something new, creatures or people come along and brush up against it, either they’re thinking of something to eat or trying to find a certain plant. This plant then changes to see to the desire of whomever it touches.” said Rudolph.

“But why?” asked Dr. Clark. “What would cause a plant to develop that tendency…er…ability?”

“Two reasons, it uses that to pollinate with other plants, and it can transport it’s seeds from one area to another. That plant is not all that picky about what other plant it pollinates with, it only needs a bit to make seeds and then if something were to come along and want some fruit…” said Leroy.

“It eats the fruit and drops the seeds elsewhere.” finished Officer McFinn. “That’s one smart little plant.”

“Here’s how to care for it.” said Rudolph with a smile as he handed Harry a roll of parchment.

For the next half hour, Harry spoke to the rest of them how the Potter family was and what sort of presents he was given. Hermione was greatly envious of the beautiful fur coats, but handed them back quickly when she heard that they were real fur and not some sort of magically crafted fakes.

“Settle down, Hermione.” said Fred as Hermione ranted and raved, stomping back and forth in front of the fire.

“We use dragon skin gloves and use animal body parts in our potions for Merlin’s sakes!” said George.

Then Ginny, Mrs. McFinn, Bill and Mrs. Weasley saw a few of the rings and examined them.

“I cannot see you wearing these.” said Ginny. “Way too flashy.”

“You could go as Umbridge next Halloween.” said Bill.

“I’d rather not traumatize people, thank you.” said Harry.

“These are goblin made, Harry.” said Bill. “Though…judging by the seal…your family already owned them, and for a long time.”

“What?” asked Ron.

“See,” said Bill pointing to a small circle and a few symbols. “Every goblin made piece has similar seals on them, sort of like a claim tag in their eyes. These markings point towards the Potter family, and they’re pretty old…maybe two hundred years old…”

“So I was given family heirlooms?” said Harry with a smile. “That’s nice.”

“Except when you take into the fact that they’re really ugly.” said Leroy looking at the rings as well.

“I’ll give you that, but…it’s not like I’m going to wear them anyway.” said Harry.

“No, you’ll have enough fun with the ring you’re going to get when you turn seventeen.” said Rudolph.
Harry turned to look at him.

“The day you turn seventeen, you get a ring. And it’s made especially for you, has a stone that speaks about your personal qualities, and with you being the Head of the family, instead of silver, it’s going to be solid gold.”

“Is that it?” asked Harry pointing to the thin silver band on Rudolph’s finger.

“No, that’s for us, Rudy doesn’t wear his much.” said Leroy. “He keeps it in Gringotts and only takes it out for his mother’s birthday, his father’s birthday or their wedding anniversary. The ring is a really special thing, only a few Potter’s wear it all the time.”

“My father and my brother, your grandfather, wore them all the time, James couldn’t be bothered with it, deemed it too feminine for his tastes.” said Rudolph with a fond smile. “Nevermind that it was a gold ring with a large egg shaped ruby on it.”

Suddenly, the fire in the fireplace flared up and grew in intensity, a hurried voice came out of it hearth, breathless and harried.

“Harold! Rudolph! I need to speak to the both of you!” the voice cried out from the flames..

“Mother?” said Rudolph. “What’s wrong?”

“It’s…oh dear…I need to talk to the both of you right away!” said Mrs. Potter, her face finally appearing, tears streaking down her face making her seem unusually panicked.

“Mother, just calm down…we’ll be right there…so much for the rest of Christmas day.” said Rudolph with an apologetic look to Harry. “Don’t wait up for us.”

“I’m coming too.” said Leroy coming over to the fireplace.

“Aw…I hate the Floo…” said Harry as he allowed himself to be pulled to the hearth by his Great Uncle.

They arrived (ungainly in Harry’s case) in the personal study of the Potter Family Matriarch, where she sat on the sofa, in her trembling hands was a thick stack of papers.

“Mother, what’s wrong?” asked Rudolph coming over to sit beside her. “What has you so upset?”

“It’s…it’s your father’s story…it’s…it’s…” said the woman shakily.

“Take deep breaths, Grandma…it’ll be alright.” said Harry carefully sitting on her other side.

“Here’s some tea…” said Leroy handing her a delicate china cup.

She shook her head and looked intently at Rudolph. “Rudolph…someone…someone finished his story!”

Rudolph gasped loudly, but the other two said nothing, they were shocked, but they did not show any great distress.

“Who…who would do such a thing?” whispered Rudolph, his face twisted in fury.

“I…I don’t know…it was in a wrapped parcel on my desk…it had to have been one of the grandchildren at the least…none of your brothers or sisters would have dared to write on these pages.” she said, her hands trembling. “You children know what this story means to me.”

“Could they…the grandchildren or so on, could they have just thought that they wanted to finish his unfinished work…like what I said at breakfast?” said Harry.

“Oh, Harold…I know that’s the case, but…but…they completely rewrote it…they copied it!” said the woman looking at the two Potter’s imploringly. “I don’t have the originals anymore! I don’t have the pages with his handwriting!”

Slam!

Rudolph’s hand came crashing down on the table, nearly upsetting the teapot. “I’ll find them, I’ll find those pages…”

“Hold on…” said Harry standing up suddenly. “Let me…I’m the one who’s supposed to be in charge, let me try and find out who did it. They made a mistake, I’m sure of it, and I’ll get them to hand it over.”

“I’m sorry to wake you all, but something has happened that needs to be addressed…now.” said Harry as he stood in the large dining hall, the great fireplace behind him roaring dramatically.

“This couldn’t wait? Honestly, Rudolph…” said one of his great-aunts mumbling and sending him stern gazes.

“You’d be demanding satisfaction as well, Beth.” growled Rudolph.

His sister looked confused.

“Someone,” said Harry picking up the stack of papers and the unwrapped box. “took Great-Grandfather’s story…redid the writing and finished it…and then gave it back to her as a present.”

Just like Rudolph, only the Great Uncles and Aunts gasped in horror and looked around at the younger ones accusingly. The younger ones also looked around at each other, but they all avoided their elder’s gaze.

“H-How dare someone do that?” said one of the Great Aunt covering her mouth in horror. “Daddy’s work, his words…”

“Seeing as how the second and third generation seem to be looking shocked…I’ll ask for the fourth generation and on to stay behind so we can talk.” said Harry holding his hand up. “No need to get hostile on Christmas.”

“You can’t possibly…” said one of the Great-Uncles hotly.

“The perpetrator needs to be punished!” said another Great Uncle.

“This is an accidental slight against the Matriarch and her husband…this is beyond parental correction.” said Harry firmly. “The rest of you can go back to bed.”

He waited for the adults to leave the room and then motioned for his cousins to come closer. “Now, I hope that I don’t have to repeat what I just said. The adults don’t really have to know; I just want to have the original papers back.” said Harry.
The young Potters looked amongst themselves, some took note of a few guilty looking parties and placed some distance between themselves.

“You meant well, she and I both saw that…but she would like the originals…are they still intact?” said Harry quietly.

It was a few tense moments when a quiet voice. “Y-Yes…I hadn’t gotten around to throwing them away yet…thankfully.”

“Thank God for Christmas miracles. Then I suggest that you fetch them and return them to her tomorrow, along with a very sincere apology…was anyone else in on this gift idea?” asked Harry with a nod and a smile.

“My…brother and sister.” said the young Potter quietly.

“I see, well, mind telling me why you did it?” asked Harry with a curious look.

The young man was silent, and Harry heaved a sigh. “Well, she’ll want to know, I can guarantee that. You’re all free to go to bed, you don’t have to say anything to your parents if you wish, if they have questions they can take it up with me the next time they see me. I’m leaving your punishment with her, have a good rest of the holidays.” He started to walk out of the dining hall.

“Wait…why…why were they all so upset? I mean, Great-Grandfather is gone but…” said one of his younger female cousins.

Harry stopped and stood silent for a moment.

“That’s a question… for your parents.”

He continued to walk out of the dining hall, and was surprised that there was no one on the other side of the door…that is until he saw Longsword lounging against the nearest pillar.

“I’m assuming that the hall is clear because you scared off their parents.” said Harry with a slight smirk.

“Hmph.” smirked Longsword in retort and walked over to Harry. “You were too lenient on those children in my opinion. A few of the parents, are already plotting to interrogate their children to find out who did it.”

“I figured they would, but that’s not my problem, I only wanted the pages to go back to Great-Grandmother, whatever happens after that is of no consequence to me at this point. I’ve got enough on my plate as it is, I don’t want to be nursemaid as well.” said Harry with a shrug.

Longsword shook his head. “That’s not what a leader does, your subordinates are a direct reflection on how you as a leader operate. If they are unhappy…abandoning you, or do sloppy work…then there is something that you yourself are doing wrong. You need to ‘check your own inventory’ as it were. If you are a fine leader, then your team will excel.”

“I’m not leading an army into battle, or the manager of a business…I’m the Patriarch of a family. I’m still learning what is expected of me, but as for right now…I’m taking it slow and testing the waters.” said Harry still shrugging. “Now, it’s late, and I’m tired. So if you want to continue this conversation, I suggest we do this tomorrow.”

Longsword followed behind the young man silently, a smile playing softly on his lips.
The next morning, the students came down to the Great Hall eager to begin the day’s readings. However, they were forced to wait till after ten to start, as Harry had not woken till far after nine forty-five. Even his appearance looked to be one of someone who had not slept very well the night before.

His hair was in a much worse state of disarray than usual, there were dark circles under his eyes and his skin was pale.

“Woah, you look like a troll clubbed you with the train, Harry.” whistled Ron.

“Yeah well, we can’t all be bright eyed and bushy tailed.” said Harry with a yawn.

“I’d settle for you to being just well rested.” said Sirius with a chuckle.

Twentieth chapter.

“Well, that’s not ominous or anything.” said Harry as he took a plate of eggs and toast from Remus.

Sirius quirked a brow, “Now, the only benefit I can think of is the sympathy affections from the girls, but I don’t see you two doing that.”

“Maybe Ron, but not me.” said Harry with a smirk.

“Too bad, from the sounds of it, a few girls would have loved to give you a little TLC.” said Dr. Clark with a smile.

Remus groaned as Sirius and Dr. Clark high-fived each other.

First paragraph, end of first sentence.

“Wonder what made her think that that bit of information was important?” said Remus with a knowing smile over to Hermione.

End of first paragraph.

Ginny and Harry both blushed.

“Makes you sound like a wolf there…” said Sirius gleefully.

“You do know that the Weasleys are right there?” said Harry nodding over to the Weasley males.

“Please note that he’s nothing like his Godfather.” said Remus with a smile.

“At least someone’s trying to keep me alive.” said Harry with a sigh of relief.
“Not something you normally carry in your hands…that’s what your bags are for.” said Katie.

“Maybe her bag was torn or something.” said Angelina.

“Why does that sound familiar?” asked Harry to himself.

“Let me crack you upside the head with a Bludger and see how funny it is.” said Harry.

“I’ll pass…” said Dean quickly.

“Gee, thanks Ron.” said Harry.

“Happy to help.” said Ron brightly.

“Nothing really new.” said Harry.

“Please don’t say that.” said Mrs. McFinn.

“Wonder just how bad it looked.” said Sirius weakly.

Officer McFinn snapped his finger and what looked like a single snapshot came right in front of Sirius. Harry’s face was covered in blood and his eyes were wide open, in a shocked expression.

“Uh…thanks for the picture…?” said Sirius holding it away from himself.

“It could have been worse; I could have shown you how it happened.” said Officer McFinn.

“No thanks!” said Sirius quickly.
“Take a guess,” said Ginny and Harry.

“I don’t like to linger when I’m released.” said Harry.

“You and me both.” said Dr. Clark. “And I work there.”

“What the…?” said Ron.

“I think he’s being absolutely truthful there.” said Professor Flitwick.

“I think you sounded fun!” said Sirius.

“They ward me off, I’ll say that much.” said Leroy sticking his tongue out. “Those are nasty.”
Sixth sentence.

“Oh boy…” said Bill.

“I hope Hermione and I walk away really quick.” said Harry.

“Sure, just leave me there.” said Ron indignantly.

“Happy to help.” said Harry brightly.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

“Have you been absent the last six years? Hermione is almost always with those two.” said Alicia.

Seventh paragraph, first sentence.

“Well, that’s never good.” said Fred.

Seventh paragraph, second sentence.

“That’s not all that great either if you’re on the receiving end of it.” said George.

End of seventh paragraph.

“Can’t become an Auror if she does all the work for you.” said Moody shaking his head.

“Oh, I’m sure we could ask her to slip in and take a look at the test really quick.” said Ron with a short laugh.

Dialogue set.

Eighth paragraph, first sentence.

Harry looked uncomfortable for a moment. But Hermione smiled. “I think you’re Christmas presents make up for all the trouble you make me go through.”

“Yeah, that makes him feel better.” said Sirius with a laugh.

End of eighth paragraph.

Dialogue line.
“Not who you were expecting to see…” said Rudolph.

Dialogue set.

“Didn’t sound like you were being booted out…you opened the door on your own.” said Seamus.

Dialogue set, first sentence, second comma.

“Wow, it finally happened…” said Fred.

“He’s lost his patience.” said George.

“He did that to Harry though…” said Lee.

“That doesn’t count.” said Fred.

“Harry’s his favorite.” said George.

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue set.

“Good luck with that.” muttered Harry.

Ninth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Well, should we postpone this meeting or what?” asked Charlie.

Tenth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

“Wouldn’t really do for her to start bragging about it.” said Tonks.

Eleventh paragraph.

“Uh…no.” said Harry scratching the back of his head.
“The crack to the head certainly didn’t help matters.” said Madam Pomfrey.

End of dialogue set.

Twelfth paragraph.

Harry rubbed the back of his neck. “Well, no…but the best way I can think of might not be all that legal.”

“Ooh, sounds good to us.” said Fred and George together.

End of dialogue set.

“I tried twice, once being nice, second I never got to finish the sentence.” said Harry.

End of dialogue set.

“Send me up against a dragon, a troll or something like that…worming something like that out of someone is a little different.” said Harry. “At least when I’m not trying to act all cute and innocent.”

End of dialogue set.

“I was a little preoccupied…” said Harry with an edge to his voice.

“Yeah, but then…there’s the game…” said Harry quietly.

“Same old argument, act like a kid…or fight?” said Harry shaking his head.

“I believe that the memory is highly important, but I can see through your point of view that it must be getting very tiresome…” said Dumbledore stroking his beard.

End of dialogue set.

“Well, that's uncharacteristically harsh…” said Charlie.

Thirteenth paragraph.

“I hate that feeling.” said Harry.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Fourteenth paragraph.

“Kind of really feel bad for Harry don’t you?” said a third year Slytherin.

“Yeah…it’s kind of awkward.”

Dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, first sentence, second comma.

“Thank goodness for that.” said the third year Slytherin.

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“So, now we’re getting into guesswork?” asked Hannah.

“Now it’s going to get interesting!” said Justin.

Fifteenth paragraph.
“Whatever he did, he royally screwed his face up.” said Chief Hawkeye with a smirk.

“Hokey wasn’t You-Know-Who’s house-elf…was she…er he?’ said Hermione.

“Hokey is a traditional female name in House-elf society.” said Dumbledore. “And Hokey is a traditional female name in House-elf society.”

“They have traditional names?” said Dean.

“Hokey wasn’t You-Know-Who’s house-elf…was she…er he?’ said Hermione.

“To my knowledge, Tom has never had a house-elf.” said Dumbledore. “And Hokey is a traditional female name in House-elf society.”

“They have traditional names?” said Dean.

Several people looked horrified.

“Oh sweet Merlin…I’m going to have nightmares on top of the ones I’m already suffering from…” said Madam Bones giving a full body shiver.

The school was silent.

“You mean…he was a clerk?” said Fred.

“He doesn’t sound like the guy you would want in Customer Service.” said George.

“How many I kill you today? We have a special on torture this week, or perhaps you’re looking for something a bit more sporty?” said Fred.

“How about a bite from a basilisk, very fashionable this season.” said George.

“Ah, but you are forgetting, to everyone he seemed like a charming, intelligent, and handsome young man. He was a boon to Borgin and Burkes at the time.” said Dumbledore.

“Yeah…but then having someone that they once employed go on a murderous streak and try and take over the country…doesn’t do well for business.” said Fred.

“No, no it does not.” said Dumbledore with a smile.
“NO THANK YOU!” shouted the students loudly.
“I’d rather be taught by Dazzle Gums!” said Sirius.

“Yeah, but you’re close to more than just one place and you like other people.” said a seventh year Ravenclaw girl.

“This hasn’t happened yet, but I still feel sort of violated.” said Hannah.
“Thank goodness he never got the job.” said Ernie looking pale.

“The D.A is different!” said Ron quickly.

“Wonder what his portrait version thinks of him now?” muttered Blaise.
“Long time.” whistled Sirius.

“She was a fine woman.” said Dumbledore with a fond smile. “There was not a student that came through her doors that was not fully capable of entering her N.E.W.T’s class.”

End of dialogue set.

“Ever get that bad feeling that something awful is going to happen to whoever he talks to?” asked George.

“Every time he’s mentioned, yeah.” said Fred.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Wonder if there’s a relationship between her and Zacharias?” said Ron.

“Who knows, I’m glad he’s not here anymore though.” said Hermione quietly.

“Wonder if this memory is going to be altered like Slughorns? You know to hide whatever her Masters wanted her to hide.” said Ginny.

Nineteenth paragraph.

Twentieth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Lady, you’re going to wish he never came.” said Bill.

“Don’t tell me she’s getting all dolled up for him.” said Chief Hawkeye shaking his head.

Twenty-first paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Horrifying.” said Ron.

“Ronald!” scolded Mrs. Weasley.

Dialogue line.

“Liar.” said Ron.
Twenty-second paragraph.

Several students chuckled.

Twenty-fourth paragraph.

Dialogue set.

“And I’m betting that there isn’t anything in there that’s not worth less than a hundred galleons.” said Leroy.

Twenty-fifth paragraph.

“Yup, he’s got her eating out of his hand.” said Leroy.

“I don’t need that image in my head, thanks.” said Rudolph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, second sentence.

“But she’s very glad that you did.” said Charlie.

End of dialogue set.

Twenty-sixth paragraph.

Dialogue set, first sentence.

“I sort of doubt that you made them.” said Mrs. McFinn.

End of dialogue set.

Twenty-seventh paragraph.

“Pardon me, I’m going to be ill.” said Harry holding his stomach.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“What was your first guess?” said Terry.
“Don’t really want to know, just give me the armor and take the damn money.” said Sirius quickly.

“Creepy old lady.” said Seamus.

“The creepy part is you going there with your thoughts.” said Parvati.

“Whatever it is, don’t show it…don’t show it.” said Remus.

“What’s so special about a cup?” asked Ron. “Granted it’s gold…but still.”

“She’d better write out her will, she’s going to need it.” said Dr. Clark covering his eyes.

“Well, she went down in history as the only person to pinch You-Know-Who’s cheek.” said Lee.
“Well, you can almost tell that he’s going to get his hands on that at some point.” said George.

Dialogue set.

Thirty-first paragraph.

“Oh no…not that locket again.” said Neville clapping a hand to his forehead.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

“And she’s dead…she’ll be the next victim.” said Fred throwing his hands up in defeat.

Dialogue set.

Thirty-third paragraph.

“Crap…” said Dean.

“Where do we send flowers?” said George.

Dialogue set.

Thirty-fourth paragraph.

“He’s probably planning out a way to take it.” said Dean.

Dialogue line.

Thirty-fifth paragraph.

“Well, she’s not all that stupid…she’s foolish, but not completely idiotic.” said Snape.
“Those who didn’t see that coming, stand on your head.” said Sirius.

“Who the bloody hell was behind that ruling?” said Hermione angrily, then squeaked and covered her mouth when she realized what she said.

Ron and Harry stared at her in shock.

“Woah…” said Harry.

“Blimey…” said Ron.

After a second Ron hugged Hermione and Harry clapped. “We are so proud of you!”

“Why she would is beyond me.” said Sirius.

“Blimey…” said Ron.

“Woah…” said Harry.

After a second Ron hugged Hermione and Harry clapped. “We are so proud of you!”

“There you go Granger, set up something so that they can feel a bit more protected…as opposed to just freeing them willy-nilly.” said Dr. Nicodemus from the fireplace he sat beside. The small bassinet kept warm by the cheerfully crackling fire and a thick warming charm.

“But that’s more than enough to inquire further, especially if the cup and locket were gone.” said Chief Hawkeye with a disgusted look.

“And no one connected the dots?” said Tonks incredulously.
“Yet you do that sort of thing every summer.” said Colin.
“I don’t kill people.” said Harry hotly.

“We’ll give him the locket, but yeah…wonder what sent him off on murder spree?” said Fred.

“He doesn’t seem to be the kind of guy to collect stuff, but remembering what he had a whole shoebox of…kind of stuns you, doesn’t it?” said Lee.

“I personally verify that this memory is not altered in any way.” said Dumbledore with a smile.
“Seems like a good guarantee to me.” said Leroy with a smile.

“Well, can’t ask for a better place to be in the winter time, it’s always nice and toasty up there.” said Sirius.

(Of course, a man at Dumbledore’s age can develop very nasty colds and flus, I and my predecessor Healer Buffinton specifically ordered the Headmaster to keep the fires nice and hot in his room and office.” said Madam Pomfrey.

“And here I thought she was mad over Harry and his health.” said Seamus in a whisper to Dean.

“Seems she’s got the both of them on her ‘Hospitalize at a moment’s notice’ list.” said Dean.
“Holy crap…” said Dr. Clark quietly.

“We’ll buy you a new chair.” said Fred and George together.

“The best choice.” said several members of the teaching staff proudly.

“Oh, we know…we know.” said a seventh year Gryffindor.

“Smash the glass then burn it.” said Remus darkly.

“How the heck do you notice these things?” said Ron exasperatedly.
“I wonder what having Dumbledore being the Minister of Magic would be like…might be awesome.” said a third year Hufflepuff student eagerly.

“I’d vote for him.” said her friend.

Dumbledore smiled and shook his head.

“No thanks!” said the students collectively.

“Well, that’s not what he wanted to hear.” said Fred.

“This meeting is not going as rehearsed.” said George.

“Cut!” said Dr. Clark with a snicker.

“What?”

“Nevermind.” said Dr. Clark laughing loudly.

“Not a great job interview going on here.” said Officer McFinn.
Dumbledore looked over to Harry and smiled.

“I call bullshit.” said Harry quietly.

“‘Friends’? Yeah right.” said Ginny.

“No he’s not.” said everyone collectively.

“I’m impressed that you know all that.” said Rudolph.

“That’s less impressive…” said Leroy with a smile.
“Not that he’s going to give you what you want, but it’s still worth a shot.” said Justin.

“Employers don’t give you anything, you ask for it and then they see if they’ll let you have it.” said Nicodemus from beside the fire.

“That’s his old fashioned ways kicking in.” said Nightstrike.

“Man… get the feeling everything went straight to hell after that?” said Ron quietly.

“Are we sure there’s nothing that can be done for that hand?” asked Lavender looking squeamish.

“This is going to drive me nuts.” said a third year Slytherin.

“You too, huh?” said Harry with a disdainful smile.

The school was silent.
“Makes sense now…doesn’t it?” said Sirius.

“Great mystery solved.” said Remus.

“How do you go about breaking a curse like that?” asked Mrs. McFinn.

“Someone’s got to fight through any hardship and keep staying on. It will take a strong willed teacher to stay on till next year.” said Dumbledore.

“Think Professor Snape will stay on?” asked Theodore Nott.

“No one is better than him.” said Blaise loyally.

Most of the students looked over to Lupin slowly.

“Professor Lupin’s…a close second…” said Blaise slowly.
Oh my gosh, I can’t believe it, this story is now at 200 chapters! I’m so thrilled that I’ve kept it going for so long and that it’s gotten this much support. Especially since I’ve had to jump from website to website just to keep this thing going!

I want to thank everyone for reading and enjoying this very VERY long ride with me! We’re almost done with this book and we still have one book left! I’m just so excited!

“The next chapter is called Chapter Twenty-One”

Harry sat up a bit straighter in his seat.

First paragraph.

“You’re slipping.” said Lionus with a smirk.

“Hey, I’m sure that I’m going through a whole lot of crap…” said Harry.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“He did remember.” said Ron with a quirk of his brow. “He just remembered the more recent memory first.”

Second paragraph, second sentence, end of parenthesis

Snape’s eyes flashed open and his mouth hung open.

“What was with that loud beeping?” asked Fred.

“Just another thing that’s being censored.” said George.

End of second paragraph.

Sirius noticed Snape squirming ever so slightly in his chair. What was going on with the man? What was so bad about this spell that no one was able to hear?
Third paragraph.

Fourth paragraph.

“Lucky.” muttered Ron.

“Hey, we can’t all be born in the summer, better luck next lifetime.” said Harry with a smile.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Sirius threw an arm around his godson’s shoulders. “Good for you!”

Harry quirked a brow. “Still don’t want to do it.”

Fifth paragraph, first sentence.

Ron crossed his arms and huffed.

“I did the same thing too, Ron.” said Charlie with a bright smile.

Fifth paragraph, second sentence, second comma.

“Don’t encourage him Sirius.” said Remus quickly.

“Aw, come on, Harry’s the student authority on those!” said Sirius proudly, but then at the look that Remus gave him, he corrected himself. “Not that you should be an authority on them”

End of fifth paragraph.

Dialogue set.

“I think he knows that, Hermione.” said Ron quietly. “He knows all about those three curses.”

Dialogue set.

Dialogue set.

“Listen to Miss Granger.” said Dumbledore with a bright smile.

Dialogue line.

“How do you even start out thinking it spells like that?” asked Percy looking puzzled.
Dialogue set, second sentence.

“But you know how to spell that word…” said Bill.

“Kind of wonder what the rest of the word spelt out to be.” said Remus.

“Get your mind out of the gutter.” said Remus shoving an elbow into Sirius’ side.

“Can’t help it, that’s where the rest of me is at.” said Sirius quietly with a snicker.

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

“I believe that’s a safe assumption.” said Dumbledore.

Dialogue line.

“Assuming that he got the quill before school started…then it lasted a long time.” said Fred.

“Unless he got it for Christmas or his birthday.” said George.

“You’re not helping.” said Fred.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“If she doesn’t blush…” said Alicia with a giggle. “Then she’s just as stubborn as Ron.”

Sixth paragraph.

“Oh, that was way better.” said Katie giggling as well.

Dialogue line.

Mrs. McFinn and a few of the other women blinked.

“Don’t tell me…that’s what boys do…” said Emmeline Vance covering her eyes and sighing.

“And here I felt guilty about ending it with past boyfriends…not being supportive enough.” said
Tonks shaking her head.

“Not everyone is like that.” said Sirius quickly.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

Lavender huffed indignantly and stomped out of the Great Hall.

Parvati sighed and followed after her. “Let me know if something really interesting happens…will you Hermione?”

“Sure.” said Hermione as she watched Parvati leave the Great Hall.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Seventh paragraph, first sentence.

“Well, that’s not exactly interesting enough to tell Parvati about, that happens all the time that Snape sets an essay.” said Ron.

End of seventh paragraph.

Eighth paragraph.

Ninth paragraph, first sentence, first comma.

“Oh no!” said Ron loudly.

End of ninth paragraph.

Tenth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Eleventh paragraph.

Twelfth paragraph.

Dialogue set.
“Yay! Dobby’s back!” said Colin.

“Parvati will be sorry that she missed out on this, she likes him.” said Padma.

Dialogue line.

Thirteenth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Future me forgot to tell him it was alright for the both of them to sleep!” gasped Harry slapping a hand to his forehead.

Fourteenth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

“Maybe for Kreacher’s case you should add that it has to be important.” said Sirius.

Dialogue line.

“I’m going to gag.” said Ron.

“Get on with it Kreacher!” said Dean.

Dialogue line.

Fifteenth paragraph.

“Aww!” said a few Hufflepuff sixth year girls. “He cares!”

“’Course I care.” said Harry with a confused look.

Dialogue line.

Sixteenth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Here’s hoping he takes that order.” said Ron.
“Yeah, maybe you’ll get an answer out of him faster than you will with Kreacher.” said Fred.

“Did he say seventh floor?” said Harry quickly, a smile on his face.

“Can’t say I ever remember putting it down on the map.” said Sirius. “That might be that one room where James was cussing up a storm for and threatening to burn all our hard work.” said Remus.

“Yeah, he looked kind of scary that week.” said Sirius.

“Ah, but he knew what to look for.” said Dumbledore with a knowing smile. “You don’t have all the information you will need.

“Good thing she chose to go home; her ego would be taking some mortal blows right about now.” said Neville.

“Kreacher is going to have his wrinkled ass kicked.” muttered Sirius.
“Sure, cornered in a constantly ever changing room that conforms to the thoughts of the one inside.” said Moody shaking his head.

Harry tapped his chin thoughtfully.

“That explains some things.” said Harry.

“But it sounds like they’ve finally got enough brains to fight back.” said Harry sending Crabbe and Goyle a look. They were squabbling over who got to eat the last Cauldron Cake, leaving Harry to sigh. “But it looks like we’ve still got them in their brainless phase of life.”

“There we go!” said Harry smacking his fist into the palm of his hand.

Several boys snorted with laughter, “They were girls?”

“Have to say, it’s starting to make sense.” said Ron quietly.
“Maybe they did at some point.” said Harry with a smirk. “I’d be telling Ron to stuff it if he tried dressing me up as a girl.”

“But you have already.” said Colin.

“That was my own choice.” said Harry.

“Too bad, you’ve got great legs.” said Ron.

It took a short while to pry Harry off of Ron as they tussled around on the floor.

“You are going to get it!” said Harry as he was dragged back to the bowl by Remus.

“Hey, we can’t all look good in a skirt!” Ron called back.

“Down boy!” said Sirius latching onto Harry’s middle as he made a leap back over to Ron.

“The Dark Mark that in my opinion is more than likely to actually be there.” said Moody.

“I agree with you, now let’s go to bed.” said Ron.

“ Might as well have a conversation with a teacup.” said Harry shaking his head and laughing.

“That’ll make you paranoid.” said Leroy.
“Because Dumbledore will talk to you the same way he talked to you the last chapter?” said Hermione bluntly.

“Don’t remind me…” said Harry cringing slightly.

“Yeah, cause all I have to do is walk up to him and bat my eyes.” said Harry.

“That might work.” said Dumbledore with a slight smile.

“Especially if you wear a dress.” said Ron.

“You know, the next time, I’m going to let him launch over there again.” said Sirius pulling Harry back.

Though despite the promises of almost death and destruction, Harry had a great smile plastered on his face.

“Sick bastard.” said Rudolph.

Mrs. McFinn’s hand flew to her mouth to stifle a scream.

“That’s gotta be emasculating.” said Rudolph quietly as the students roared with laughter.

“I didn’t think it would be that easy.” said Harry shaking his head.
“Not what you should be thinking about.” said Professor Flitwick.

“Still not good enough, dear boy.” said Dumbledore shaking his head.

“Oops.” said Harry blushing brightly.

“Are you alright?” asked Remus quietly as Officer McFinn read on.

“Sh-Sh-Shut up.” said Sirius trying not to laugh out loud.

“Can’t blame him for that.” said Remus. “I’m amazed he didn’t give you detention if you were late more than once.”

“Yeah, but this is Snape, he could have been late by a minute or two before.” said Sirius.
“See.” said Sirius gesturing towards the book.

“Come on, we all were put to it!” said Seamus. “So we know what it was like!”

“Though I’m sure that Harry’s was the most accurate…and still didn’t get full marks.” said Bill.

“Though I’m sure that Harry’s was the most accurate…and still didn’t get full marks.” said Bill.

“That was Mundungus, he wasn’t a real one, but it doesn’t hurt to answer the lad’s question. You are the Defense Against the Dark Arts teacher after all.” said Madam Hooch.

“That’s probably the nicest thing that he could say about Dung.” said Sirius.

“He’s still trying to maintain the impression they’re not Order mates.” said Hermione.

“I know; I know…I shouldn’t have been talking in his class.” said Harry with a groan.

“Fair point.” said Flitwick kindly.

“Don’t interrupt him and he’ll give you more!” said Ron.
“I want to stab my ears with an icepick every time she giggles.” said Blaise quietly.

“You and me both.” said Draco.

End of thirty-eighth paragraph.

Dialogue set.

“Kiss my ass…” said Harry.

“Harry!” chided Mrs. McFinn.

“Well, couldn’t he just say all that before?” said Harry.

Dialogue set, second sentence.

“All that loyalty isn’t helping.” said Harry turning slightly pink.

End of dialogue set.

“Sounds like something that Umbridge would be asking you kids to do and then theorize about what you need to do from there.” said Lionus with a smirk.

Thirty-ninth paragraph.

Dialogue set.

Snape turned his gaze away from the cold look he was receiving from the Headmaster.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Fortieth paragraph.

“And here I thought only the girls went into the bathroom together at the same time.” said a seventh year Gryffindor student.

Dialogue set.
“You will Ron, you just need a bit more practice.” said Charlie.

Dialogue set, third sentence, third dash.

“There’s an idea.” said Hannah. “No one says you need to do it as soon as possible.”

End of dialogue set.

“Not her again!” said the boys quietly.

“She’s acting all creepy again.” said Terry.

Forty-first paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Well, who else were you expecting to see?” said Ron looking disgusted.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

“I’m a little busy trying not to die here.” said Harry turning pink. He did promise to see her, and he still hadn’t lately…

Dialogue line.

“Not going to blame you one little bit.” said Dr. Clark.

Dialogue line.

Dean snorted.

Dialogue set.

“Are you both dead?” asked Ron. “If so, I don’t think he feels anything.”

Hermione slammed her elbow into his side.
Forty-second paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“There’s that too…ouch!” grunted Ron.

Hermione gave Ron a growl.

Dialogue set.

“Nobody I know.” said Harry.

“Yeah, that might have fit Neville, but that was way back in the beginning of the first year. Granted, Crabbe and Goyle still go after him, but he’s not afraid to come to us and talk about it, then we go and get back at them for him.” said Ron.

“Could be a first year.” said Harry.

“Yeah, that might be…” said Ron.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Ron!” scolded Hermione and Mrs. Weasley.

“Oi! I haven’t said this yet! Quit hitting me!” said Ron.

Forty-third paragraph.

“Not quite where you’re supposed to get a moral boost.” said McGonagall shaking her head.

Dialogue line.

Forty-fourth paragraph.

“Instead of trying to find a way to get the memory…” said Hermione with a disapproving shake of her bushy haired head.

Dialogue line.

“See!” said Hermione.

Harry shook his head fondly at the witch.
“I know, I know.” said Harry.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

“But you could always just sneak into his offices like you did for Lockhart.” said Fred.

“Yeah, but this is Slughorn, I’m thinking he’s at least twenty times more intelligent than old Dazzle Gums.” said Harry. “I’m sure there’s more protective charms around his office than what even Umbridge had.”

“You saying that she had protective spells around her office?” asked Alicia.

Harry nodded and smirked. “Oh, after that first detention, I wanted to get back at her so bad… got some revenge before all this…”

Dialogue line.

Forty-fifth paragraph.

Forty-sixth paragraph.

Forty-seventh paragraph, fourth sentence.

“And now he’s going to waste his time there.” said Hermione with a frown.

End of forty-seventh paragraph.

“As hilarious as that was, that was really creepy.” said Rudolph.

But Harry, Ron, Sirius, Remus and several other people (Snape included, as amazing as it was) were too busy laughing.

Forty-eighth paragraph, first sentence, first comma.

Ron roared with laughter.

End of forty-eighth paragraph.

Forty-ninth paragraph.

“That won’t do you any good… unless you want a broken foot.” said Dr. Clark.
“Could be worse, it could be Moody. He loves to send sparks at your hands and feet to get you back on your feet faster.” said Tonks.

Remus looked Tonks, concern on his face.

“No,” said Tonks.

“Wasn’t it in the papers? More than a rumor if Skeeter isn’t involved.” said Leroy. “Though…with the rubbish they were printing, who’s to know?”

“Not that the books say anyway.” said Harry.

Sirius looked over to Remus, a frown on his face.

“Ow!” yelled Remus rubbing his shoulder.
“You prat!” said Sirius. “He needs you now, more than ever!”

Remus looked uncomfortable, but muttered. “This hasn’t happened yet.”

“Don’t care.” said Sirius simply.

End of dialogue set.

Fifty-third paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Guess I’m not all that helpful either.” said Tonks sadly.

Fifty-fourth paragraph.

Fifty-fifth paragraph.

Dialogue set.

“Way to go, Ron.” said Bill with a smile.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, first sentence.

“You’re always perfect, Hermione.” said Ron with a smile.

Dialogue set, second sentence, first dash.

“Way to remember, Ron.” said Ginny.

End of dialogue set.

“Is he talking about him and Rosemerta, or him and Hermione?” asked Padma.

“Most likely him and Hermione.” said Harry with a smirk. “They didn’t mention Rosemerta yet.”

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.
“I’ll show you ‘cracking up’ and ‘losing nerve’!” said Tonks standing up slowly.

“I didn’t say it yet! I didn’t say it yet!” said Ron loudly. “Blimey, everyone wants to get a piece of me today.”

“Ewww…” said Tonks and Sirius together, she resumed sitting down and leaned away from Sirius. “I have better taste than that!” she said sticking her tongue out.

“So do I.” said Sirius also leaning away, his tongue mirroring Tonks’.

“Don’t know how I should feel in this situation.” said Remus with a slight smile.

“Wanna know.” said Sirius.

“Wonder why she is in the castle…” said a second year Hufflepuff.

“And you say that with a girl sitting within striking distance?” said Lionus laughing.

“Th’ all for this chapter.” said Officer McFinn.

“Well, that didn’t go so bad.” said a fifth year Hufflepuff.
“Yeah, kind of just informative as opposed to terrifying.” said another fifth year.

Once again, thank you so very much for reading! Glad you all enjoy it and I appreciate all the support you send me!!
Officer McFinn read the title of the next chapter, which made most people’s blood run cold.

Chapter Twenty Two

“Who’s burial?” said Mrs. Weasley worriedly.

“I’m sure we’ll find out soon enough.” said McGonagall, looking over at Potter quickly, her eyes filled with worry. The boy couldn’t afford to lose anyone else.

First paragraph.

“And I’m supposed to do this, in the timespan of a few weeks or days?” said Harry with a shake of his head.

“Preferably before we all die of old age, Potter.” drawled Snape.

Dialogue line.

“Forgetting someone that looks suspicious will get you killed.” said Moody and Lionus together.

Second paragraph, second sentence, second dash.

“Here’s the best way to avoid common apparition mistakes: Don’t apparate, take the bus.” said Harry.

End of second paragraph.

Third paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Face your problems head on, boy.” said Moody.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Fourth paragraph.

“Hopefully it’s not from Dumbledore then.” said George.
“Oh, no.” said Hagrid, tears started to fall down into his beard, he took out his large handkerchief and blew his nose into it.

“Well, at least it’s just Aragog’s burial, then.” said Fred quietly.

“Don’t’ bet on that.” said Hermione silently.

“Poor Hagrid.” said Luna sympathetically.

Hagrid turned his head away.

“I didn’t mean it like that Hagrid!” said Hermione looking frantic. “I…I…”

“Shove over.” said Harry standing up and sitting on the armrest of Officer McFinn’s chair.

“Sure thing, Sport.” said Officer McFinn with a smile.

“Well, it’s nice just sitting here.” said Fred.

“Nice and quiet.” said George.

They both looked up at the ceiling. “Wonderful weather we’re having aren’t we Fred?” asked George.

“Positively delightful.” said Fred.
“Do it in a heartbeat if Hagrid’s the one that needs it.” said Harry.

“Do what in a heartbeat?” asked Hermione.

“Wish he let us know what was going on.” said Ron with a mutter.

“Only you Ron.” said Harry with a smirk.

“Only me what?” muttered Ron.

Officer McFinn shook his head.

Harry read the last part aloud.

“Thank goodness, all this talking with Fred was getting kind of boring.” said George.

Chief Hawkeye spat out the coffee he was drinking. “W-What?” he said, trying not to laugh out loud.
“Hah, beat you to something.” said Ron proudly.

Seventh paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“There are quite a few things more important than this memory…but nothing more pressing as of that moment.” said Dumbledore.

Eighth paragraph.

“Woah, never seen Ginny blush that much before.” said Fred.

“Positively scandalous.” said George.

“Wait, we’ve said that before.” said Fred.

“Oh, right, um…how about: ‘isn’t that just so precious?’” said George.

“I don’t know; this is our little sister’s affections we are talking about here.” said Fred.

“Hmm…you’re right.” said George. “Then there is only one other thing we can say.”

They both looked over to Harry, a look of firm sincerity that was rarely seen on the twin’s faces.

“We’re going to hurt you.”

Harry blinked.

Dialogue line.

“No, he’s daydreaming.” said Sirius with a chuckle.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“You’re so brave, Ron.” said Harry laugh.

“Stuff it.” said Ron sourly.
“That’s sad…” said Remus.

Dialogue set.

The two sisters in question screamed in horror and had to be whisked out of the Great Hall by Madam Pomfrey who, with Dumbledore’s blessing, allowed them to go home for the rest of the holidays and however long they wanted to stay for.

“Now it’s alright dears, this hasn’t happened yet and I’m sure that it won’t…don’t you worry about a thing.” said Madam Pomfrey as she ushered them out.

Remus turned his head, his face contorted in pain.

“You know that wasn’t you.” said Sirius sternly.

“Doesn’t matter.” said Remus quietly.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Remus turned his head in disgust.

“That’s not you.” said Sirius punching Remus on the arm.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Remus cringed horribly.

Dialogue line.

Ninth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“That did it, Harry’s going to go save the world again.” said Ron.

“Damn straight.” said Harry darkly.

“Don’t be stupid, you cannot save the world.” said Lionus quietly.
“Nope, we just didn’t want to have the day off from learning.” said Nightstrike.

“What?” said Harry. “What kind of class is that?”

“Well, then I’m all for wasting his time.” said Harry.

Draco looked confused. He had no idea what in the world was going on, but there was a sickening feeling in his stomach that meant that whatever it was, it did not bode well for either the school or himself.

Moody, Kingsley, Tonks and the Rangers all smiled.

“So…the answer to Slughorn’s memory hoarding might just be in that book.” said Ron gleefully.

“Snape sure is looking odd…” said Nott.
“Yeah, he’s a little pink and looking kind of angry.” said Blaise. “Embarrassed and angry at the same time?”

Sixteenth paragraph

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“He said maybe, not definitely.” said Neville with a smile.

Seventeenth paragraph, first sentence.

Ernie blushed.

End of seventeenth paragraph.

“Ron…quit smirking.” said Hermione.

Eighteenth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Nineteenth paragraph.

“So much for that.” said Harry.

Twentieth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, first sentence.

“Just like me!” said Charlie.

Ron frowned as he looked at the floor.

“Don’t worry about it Ron, you can take the test again, and I’m sure that Bill was going to help you out over the summer.” said Charlie.
“Yeah, they want to make sure that you can do it one hundred percent right.” said Sirius.

“It’s half an eyebrow now, it could be half a leg next time.” said Percy.

“That’s right, don’t waste it just for this one mission.” said Moody nodding.

“But you didn’t take it.” said Hermione.

“Don’t ruin it for me.” said Ron.

Snape rolled his eyes, but Flitwick nodded.

“But you didn’t take it.” said Hermione.

“It’s wet.” said Harry.

“Oh, don’t pull a Ron!” said Hermione.
“Oh that’s nice.” said Ron.

Twenty-fourth paragraph, second sentence first pause.

“Hah.” said Ron looking at Hermione.

End of twenty-fourth paragraph.

Twenty-fifth paragraph.

“Go get Slughorn, tiger.” said Sirius patting Harry on the back.

Dialogue line.

“Wait, what?” said Sirius looking at Harry.

“No, no, no, no, no…go to Slughorn.” said Fred slowly.

“Yeah, you remember…bloke that has the memory you were supposed to get?” said George.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“He’s higher than a kite again.” said Sirius.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“This potion idea is starting to backfire.” said Remus.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Fresh out.” said Harry.
“Someone club him…before he hurts someone.” said Dean.

“Yikes.” said Nightstrike.

“This…will not end well.” said Remus.

“Bad timing.” said Sirius.

“Every romance is going straight to hell.”

“Yay!” said Harry plainly, a slight smile.

Dumbledore smiled.

“What’s with you?” asked Leroy.

“Nothing, absolutely nothing.” said Dumbledore.

“It’s like you’re just out for a stroll.” said Sirius shaking his head.

“Your brain is fried.” said Sirius shaking his head. “No more of that stuff for you.”
“No…no, no, no!” said Dr. Clark. “Are you kidding me? I want some of that Lucky potion!”

“That’s a professor, you nitwit!” Ron shouted, while looking at Harry in disbelief.

“Yeah, he prioritizes on the wrong things.” said Fred.

“Trying to catch us rule breaking.” said George.

“Cleaning the castle.” said Fred.

“He needs to do his job.” said George.

“Wait…we’re standing up for him.” said Fred.

“What the hell is wrong with us?” said George.

“He’s in mourning…” said Harry with a quirked brow. “What’s more dreadful than that?”
“You’re talking pretty differently now.” said Colin.

“He’s not…he’s going to plunder a corpse?” said Remus.

“Not unheard of harvesting ingredients when it comes to brewing potions.” said Snape tiredly.

“Most of those creatures didn’t talk to you in the past.” said Sirius.

“So…he’s going to do it anyway…” said Lee.

“Well, not if you hold parties all the time.” said Flitwick.

“Oh Merlin.” said Rudolph.

“Yeah, touched with hunger.” said Harry.
“Ehh…” said Harry waving his hand from side to side.

Ron started to gag.

“Least he’s not talking about what Slughorn is really after.” said Sirius.

“For a completely different reason than what you do.” said Remus quietly.

“Do those even exist?” said Leroy.

Rudolph shrugged. “In Hagrid’s case, surely.”
“Course not, he still has hope of wrangling Harry into the Slug Club.” said Seamus.

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

Forty-third paragraph.

Dialogue set.

“‘Magnificent’ is not a term I would have used.” said Hannah quietly.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue set.

Forty-fourth paragraph.

“Yeeaaaaah….put me in a box.” said Leroy.

Rudolph wrapped his hand around his husband’s shoulder’s and placed his palm across his mouth. “Don’t make me think that.”

Dialogue set.

Forty-fifth paragraph.

Hagrid blew his nose and wiped his eyes.

“You didn’t want to say anything huh?” said Sirius looking at Harry gleefully.

“Thanks for not catching me and eating me four years ago?” said Harry with a shrug.

Dialogue set

Dialogue set.

Forty-sixth paragraph, second sentence.

“Probably mad that he couldn’t try and drag a piece of Aragog off somewhere.” said Dr. Clark.

End of forty-sixth paragraph.

Dialogue set, first sentence.

“Makes me feel comfortable.” said Harry.
Hermione’s and several other people’s indignant cries lasted a good half hour. Dumbledore had to reassure them that this had not happened and he certainly did not condone with that behavior.

“Good thinking, that potion tends to cease working once you have a few too many sips of alcohol.” said Dr. Nicodemus.

“That makes me feel a bit worse.” said Mrs. McFinn.

“And Hagrid’s now going to find Slughorn asking him to procure some for him.” said a seventh year Slytherin student with a roll of his eyes.

“Oh, he knows.” said Madam Pomfrey.

“That’s a conversation I want to have with you.” said Rudolph up to Hagrid. “See what we can compare.”
“Not surprised.” said Madam Bones.

Professor Flitwick smiled.

“Nice of him to remember you name.” said Ron. “Well, at least he remembers it more often than mine.”

“Oh for god sakes.” said Harry shaking his head.

“Kind of hope that it’s still attached when this little gathering is done.” said Mr. Weasley.

“I’m hoping the song sounds better when you can hear the melody.” said Mrs. McFinn.
“Awkward.” said Fred.

“He most likely doesn’t want to think about it.” said Sirius. “I know I don’t.”

“He really didn’t want to know…but then he sounds like he couldn’t stop listening.” said Flitwick.

“Harry’s not going to stop.” said Ron softly.

Sirius kept his eyes on Harry, who was still sitting on the armrest of Officer McFinn’s chair. Officer McFinn was patting the young man’s leg sympathetically.

“And that is what you wanted him to tell Slughorn.” said Remus looking over at Dumbledore.
“Gives me a load of information.” said Harry. “Every little bit helps.”

Several people whistled.

“If I can take him out, then surely you won’t have to keep looking over your shoulder.” said Harry.

“That’s below the belt.” said Snape quietly.

“Then fix the problem.” said Harry.

“That’ll do it.” said Sirius.
Sixty-fourth paragraph.

“Wish we could use that stuff…” said Nighstrike. “We have to learn how to do that on our own.”

Sixty-fifth paragraph.

“He got it.” breathed Rudolph softly.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, first sentence.

“You’re saying that now, wait’ll you feel all this in the morning.” said Ron.

End of chapter.

“Now get the hell out of Dodge and hope that Dumbledore is in his office.” said Chief Hawkeye.

“Why didn’t it occur you to use your mother against him?” asked a sixth year Ravenclaw.

“Have to say, I’m quite relieved to know he did not think to do that.” said Flitwick quietly. “That would just be deplorable to use such a thing right off the bat.”

“He wouldn’t be any better than the Dark Lord using his Slytherin heritage.” said Sprout.

Anyone recognize that?
“New chapter is called Twenty-third chapter.” said Officer McFinn.

“Are we finally going to learn…” said Hermione eagerly.

“We’ll find out, dear.” said Mrs. McFinn with a smile.

First paragraph.

“Lucky potion is gone.” said Harry with a smirk. “And my ‘school-level luck at night’ is coming back.”

Dialogue line.

“Well, the moon is out.” said Fred.

“It’s dark outside and everyone is asleep.” said George.

“We’d say, mid-afternoon.” said the twins together.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Perhaps to punish those who are caught out of bed.” said Snape with a sneer.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

“Now…I’ve got to wonder; did he know that Harry had just acquired the memory?” said Charlie looking stunned.

“And who just caught him out of bed?” said Bill.

Second paragraph.

Dialogue line.
“Well, it is the middle of the night and he needs his rest.” said Madam Pomfrey sternly. “Shouldn’t be out and about in the middle of the night in his age.”

“Nice to know she’s as protective of you as she is of Harry.” said Leroy leaning over and whispering to Dumbledore with a smirk.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“We didn’t ask where you saw the Bloody Baron, we want to know where the Headmaster was.” said a seventh year Slytherin.

“Besides, who wants to go looking for the Bloody Baron?” said another Slytherin.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“You better believe he has.” said Harry.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

“Too late…I’ve got somewhere else to be.” said Harry.

“Guess the Headmaster didn’t know that Harry had acquired the memory.” said Fred.

“‘Tapeworm?’” said a Ravenclaw student looking disgusted. “I prefer our passwords.”

“Sort of ties into the title of the chapter though…” said Flitwick thoughtfully.

Third paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Hope he’s got a pot of coffee going.” said Lionus with a smirk. “He’s going to need it.”

Fourth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“And of course, he doesn’t scold the boy for being out of bed.” said Snape with a groan.

“He wanted memory, he didn’t say what time period I had to bring it.” said Harry with a cheeky
“And here I thought you had confidence in him.” said Sirius with a smirk.

“Rest first Albus!” said Madam Pomfrey loudly.

“So…is it going to be the same as the one we had just seen?” said Ron.

“It’s going to be different I believe, slightly, but nevertheless will have monumental results.” said Dumbledore.

“I really don’t want to think him as a Minister, and all it would cost him is crystallized pineapple.” said Hannah.

“Hate to say it, but it sounds kind of familiar.” said a third year Gryffindor.
“Shut up.” said Harry, Ron and Hermione.

Dialogue line.

“Or the psychological makeup.” said Glacier speaking up.

Thirteenth paragraph.

“Nonsense,” said Slughorn briskly, “couldn’t be plainer you come from decent Wizarding stock, abilities like yours. Dialogue set, first sentence.

“What decent stock is that supposed to be?” said Hermione quietly.

“And he’s kept that front going for a long time.” said Harry quietly.

End of dialogue set.

“Say hello to your first!” said George.

“Oh, he went far…in the wrong direction.” said Sirius.

Fourteenth paragraph.

Dialogue set.

Fifteenth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Oh, I don’t think they're going to care all that much.” said Leroy.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Sixteenth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Hoping that something honest is going to be the reason?” asked Mr. Weasley.
“What book was he reading, I wonder?” said Rudolph. “Not something ‘school friendly’, I can promise you that.”

“Kind of worried about what he’s aiming for.” said a first year, her voice shaking.

Harry looked down at the floor with a scowl.

“Sounds like someone here.” said Harry quietly.

“You’re not him.” said Sirius firmly.

The students were silent for a while.

“You can do that?” asked George.

“It doesn’t get any better.” said Dr. Nicodemus. “And it is not advisable.”

“Well, we know he did that.” said Fred.

“Yeah, kind of fits.” said George.

“Unless you’re afraid to die.” said Luna softly.
“You think he’s afraid to die?” asked Neville looking stunned.

“IT starting to sound like it.” said Luna.

Twenty-first paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Sicko…” muttered Nightstrike.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“He’s going to tell him, isn’t he?” said Hannah softly.

Hermione looked over to the Chief quickly, but then looked back at the ground.

“Go ahead and ask.” said Dr. Nicodemus without looking at the bushy haired girl once.

Hermione swallowed and then asked in a quiet voice. “Umm, have…have your souls…been…”

“Our souls are intact, we don’t murder.” said Chief Hawkeye.

“How do you know?” asked Hermione, “About your souls I mean?”

Chief Hawkeye smiled. “It’s part of our annual physical, and let me say this, the way to check it, it hurts. But if they find something, if you get a slice in that soul of yours, you’re done. You get discharged.”

“That means you killed someone for no damn reason…When we end a life, it’s for sake of justice; thus our souls are intact.” said Dr. Nicodemus. “We talk big, but we don’t just kill people left and right.”

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

“BEEP BEEP BEEP! RED FLAG!” said Dr. Clark loudly as he was shaking his head.

“And Slughorn is just going to keep going.” said Remus shaking his head.
“Of course not, that would end the information train.” said Katie.

“Not really.” said Alicia shaking her head slowly.

“Sick nut!” said a seventh year Hufflepuff.

“Please end the conversation…” said Remus.

“I believe he has acquired all the information that he would need for this procedure.” said Dumbledore shaking his head. “The rest he would have to discover on his own.”

“Yeah, keep clinging to that hope.” said Bill.

“If you know about it sir, why did you need the memory?” asked Terry.

“I am not altogether sure, but I believe there was vital testimony in that memory.” said Dumbledore.

“Run.” said the students collectively.
“That doesn’t sound like it’s going to be a walk in the park.” said Fred.

“Especially if you have to go out into the world and find pieces of his soul…he could have buried the damn things and you’d never find it.” said George.

“I hope he didn’t attach his soul to a rock or coin…you’d never find it.” said Lee.

“Hate to say it, but that would be the easiest way to hide it.” said Fred.

“Really hope he failed.” whispered Dennis. “I really hope.”

“But surely…” said Hermione quietly.

“Let’s not dwell on it.” said Officer McFinn turning the page carefully. “I’ve seen some horrors, and I don’t want to think about it.”

“It was a Horcrux.” said Sirius softly.

“As if the second book wasn’t bad enough.” said Remus shaking his head.
“As if he couldn’t be any more despicable.” said Mrs. Weasley with a disgusted look.

“More than one?” said Terry.

“Guess he really did make seven then…” said Ernie in a hushed voice.

“And his ‘usual evil’ was bad enough.” said Justin.

“Don’t want to be dependent on something like that.” said Nightstrike.

Hermione and Ron looked over to Harry with horrified expressions, but were surprised that they didn’t see any sort of shock or worry on his face. Instead he was calm and collected.

“Harry? Aren’t you worried?” said Hermione.

Harry looked over to Hermione with a smile. “I’ve known about this for a few months. Dumbledore told me, gave me a bit of a heads up.”

“Hate to say this, but you’re screwed, mate.” said Ron.
“Save the hardest part for last, huh?” said Charlie.

“Whoo hoo…one down, six to go.” said Ron.

“When did that happen?” said Seamus.

“Well, that’s two down, five to go.” said Ron.

“Oh…” said Seamus looking uncomfortable.

“And Harry’s got to go up against five more of those things?” said Dr. Clark looking shocked.

Several adults chuckled quietly.

Gazes turned to Professor Snape, looking shocked and awed.

“But now your down a limb, and let me tell you, that’s not an easy change to get used to.” said Moody patting his leg and pointing to his eye.

“Coming back to bite him, not having you in his good books.” said Dr. Clark.
“Wouldn’t that be the safest thing to do, if you don’t want them found?” asked a seventh year Ravenclaw student. “Just pitch them in a rubbish bin in an abandoned house you own or something.”

“Well, that’s stupid on his part.” said the same seventh year. “Too obvious.”

“But you can bet he put some strong protective spells around those.” said Flitwick.

End of dialogue set.

Ginny gave a slight shiver.

“Well, we know two of them then, but we don’t have any clue as to where they are.” said Ernie.

Lionus and the Rangers smirked.

“They seem to know.” said George pointing to the Rangers.

Lionus and several adults chuckled softly.

“That’s sad…their stuff is going be used for evil purposes.” said a first year Gryffindor student.
“It is completely untouched; he could never have gotten that sword out of the hat.” said Dumbledore with a smile.

“So… all that was missing was Gryffindor’s sword but he didn’t touch it… what of Ravenclaw’s could he have gotten?” asked a third year Hufflepuff.

“You don’t think?…” muttered a seventh year Ravenclaw student.

His friend was quiet but then his eyes opened wide. “Oh no…”

“That’s creepy.” said Colin. “Having two souls in your body.”

“I’ve seen three souls in one body, boy.” said Dr. Nicodemus.

The students turned and stared at the Ranger Healer in horror.

“So maybe he has only six…” said Ginny.

“He has seven, I’m afraid.” said Dumbledore. “I have no definite proof to offer, but I believe he has seven.”

Sirius slowly reached around Harry’s shoulders and brought him closer to himself.

“Poor thing…” said Dr. Clark quietly.
“What?” asked Remus.

“I feel sorry for the snake.” said Dr. Clark.

“Don’t feel too sorry for it.” said Ron darkly. “That thing attacked my dad.”

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

“Still sounds like a lot of work, no matter how you shorten it down.” said Dean.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“One more down!” said Dennis.

“You know what would be helpful? If this book and the next book tells us where all of them are.” said Colin.

“Are you kidding? Look how long it took Dumbledore to find the ring! It’s going to take years to do all this!” said a Slytherin sixth year. “We might be able to get one more at the most!”

Dialogue line.

“Oh hell no!” said Sirius.

“No more dangerous missions for you, young man!” said Mrs. McFinn shaking her finger at him.

Harry shook his head. “This hasn’t happened yet.”

“Don’t care.” said everyone in the bowl together.

Twenty-seventh paragraph.

“Oh no…” said Sirius running his hand down his face.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Twenty-eighth paragraph.
“For once, I agree with Nigellus…” said Sirius. “Not the whole snorting part though.”

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

“Really don’t want to be Malfoy…” said Ron.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

“Ooh, so he did it without permission.” said Hannah.

“Well, he thought that You-Know-Who was dead…so he didn’t think he needed it anymore.” said Bill.

Dialogue set, fourth sentence, first dash.

“So Set it on a silken pillow or something like that, I’ll bet.” Mr. Weasley.

End of dialogue set.

“He wishes he was just in Azkaban now.” said Lionus.

Twenty-ninth paragraph.

Dialogue set.

“Here’s hoping you can fight with one hand.” said Tonks looking at Dumbledore out of the corner of her eye.

“I daresay I could.” said Dumbledore with a slight smile. “With a bit more practice.”

Dialogue line.

“Nice that you volunteer for that, but you don’t have the confidence.” said George.

Dialogue line.
“Go ahead and say it.” said Sirius, “But it is a big deal…”

Dialogue set.

Harry blushed.

Dialogue line.

“So much for being able to shoot lasers out of your eyes.” said Dr. Clark looking over to Harry with a teasing smile.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

“I still don’t get it…” said a first year student.

“That’s alright, Harry doesn’t seem to either, we’ll figure it all out when he does.” said her friend.

Dialogue line.

“Ah! Don’t point with that hand!” said the twins together.

“Woah now, you and Voldemort are the ones thought it was all that important.” said Harry with a smirk. “You’re the one that kept that bit of information from me…You don’t withhold unimportant information like that.”

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

“Then what the hell was the point in telling me?” said Harry holding his hands up in the air. “Why make me think that it’s some all-powerful knowledge…now it’s complete bullshit?”

“Harry!” scolded Mrs. Weasley.

Dialogue line.

“There, I thought that was the point!” said Harry pointing to the book.
“And you couldn’t relay this to him last year?” said Charlie shaking his head. “When you first told him in the books…or even when you told him a few months ago.”

“I am not sure why I did not…perhaps I thought he realized it.” said Dumbledore thoughtfully. “But that is no excuse.”

“Let’s assume I’m an idiot…spell it out for me!” said Harry.

“No assumption necessary.” drawled Snape.

“You spell it out too far and nasty…find a happy medium.” said Harry.

“I’m remarkable…but apparently I’m pissing you off.” said Harry.

“They can have it.” said Harry. “The headaches alone aren’t worth being able to talk to snakes. Let alone the giant bullseye on my back.”

“Screw that.” said Harry. “No sane person would in that situation.”

“How about the ability to not be insane?” said Harry.
“I’m sure Lucius Malfoy loves his wife and son…and he was taken in.” said a Slytherin fifth year. Draco looked down at the floor thoughtfully, Snape was also looking thoughtful.

Dialogue set, fourth sentence, fourth comma.

Snape scoffed, and Harry snickered while blushing. “Are you about that?”

“Even after hearing all this, I stand by what I say in the future.” said Dumbledore.

“Blind…the man is blind.” said Snape shaking his head.

Dialogue set, end of fourth sentence.

“It showed him his family…oh…” said Dennis.

“And it showed him the stone…” said Colin. “So it happened twice.”

Dialogue set, fifth sentence.

“Harry’s turning bright red over there.” said Fred.

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue set, second sentence, first comma.

“Not that last time, or the time that Mr. Weasley was attacked. said Harry.

“Weakened for a few hours is one thing, mentally destroyed is another.” said Dumbledore and Dr. Nicodemus together.

End of dialogue set.

Sirius smiled as Harry tried to bury his head under the blankets.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, fourth sentence.

“Wait, what?” said Ron.

End of dialogue set.
“Says something about Potter, doesn’t it?” said Moody quietly.

“What do you mean?” asked Kingsley.

“I don’t recollect Albus getting that worked up about anything like that in front of me...seems to let his guard down around Potter just a bit in this book.” said Moody.

Thirtieth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“You and everyone else that has ever lost someone...but there’s something special about you lad...” said Chief Hawkeye with a kind smile. “You didn’t have a safety net.

Dialogue set.

“It’s going to happen...” said Harry. “Cause he’s not going to let up on it.”

Dialogue line.

Thirty-first paragraph, second sentence.

Dumbledore blinked a few times and then looked over to Harry slowly, his eyes filled with horror.

End of chapter.

“And he’s out to save the world again.” said George.

“And that is all for the day.” said Glacier walking over and leading Harry out of the room.

“Again?” asked Ron.

“Harry’s all healed up, but there’s still some things that he needs to do.” said Mrs. McFinn.

“And Glacier is helping him out on it.” said Lionus.
Harry's Near Fatal Mistake

The next day, they came back down to the Great Hall, the other students still kept an eye on Harry’s hair to make sure that he was really back to health and when they were satisfied with the result they turned their attention back to their breakfasts.

The night before had been reasonably uneventful, the normal discussion with Glacier, which was shorter than what Sirius had estimated it was going to be, garnered nothing really new and had simply been a normal venting session. It turned out Harry had known about the Horcruxes for a long time, since his hair had turned white originally, so he was far higher up in the information chain then most people in the castle.

All he wanted to do know was get this over with, finally find out how to take out Voldemort and get on with his life. He had pleaded with Glacier to restore the “Get as many chapters done in a day” policy that they had originally had, and to his amazement Glacier agreed, on one condition.

“If I see you getting distressed, we are stopping, no matter what time of the day.”

Harry consented, a little hesitantly, but he consented.

So a new day, and perhaps the swiftly approaching end of the books were almost in sight, which brought a sense of relief to Harry.

“All right then.” said Officer McFinn. “Let’s see…ah…”

“What?” asked Ron after a moment of silence.

“I think the students will be missing quite a bit of this chapter as well…” said Officer McFinn. “Title of the chapter is, Twenty-fourth chapter.”

Snape’s eyes flashed open in horror.

“Wonder what’s got Snivellus looking like that?” whispered Sirius to Remus.

First paragraph, second sentence, sixteenth word.

“Wanna get myself some of that lucky potion too…” said Ron.

End of first paragraph.

“Hope Dumbledore doesn’t take you, it could go horribly, horribly wrong.” said Hermione softly.

“I’d be with Dumbledore; I should be more than fine.” said Harry.

Dialogue set, first sentence.

“Oh dear.” said Professor Flitwick. “I wonder what’s going to happen with that wand waving...”
“Well, it could have been much worse.” said Professor Flitwick with a quiet sigh.

Dr. Clark snickered.

“Ooh…something bad happened between the two of them.” said Parvati.

“Oh, never mind it was good.” said Parvati.

“How could you say that?” yelled Lavender turning around to glare at her friend.

“Let’s face it Lav, you two weren’t all that compatible.” said Parvati. “Ron’s not the…romantic type and that’s what you need.’

“Nice….” said Ron looking at Parvati.

“Well, you’re not…” said Hermione quietly.

“I’m still learning here!” said Ron in a whisper. “I gave you those flowers last week…granted…they sneezed pollen all over you…”

“So, I guess that means that if we’re breaking up, it’s on my terms?” said Hermione.

Ron looked at her fearfully.

“Don’t know what you’re looking so panicked about, you two break up all the time.” said Harry with a snicker.
“Doesn’t sound like a bad night, in my opinion.” said Harry brightly. “Sounds downright pleasant.”

Third paragraph, first sentence.

Sirius reared back his head and laughed as did several other people.

“Oh stuff it.” said Harry sourly.

End of third paragraph.

Dialogue set.

Fourth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“That it does, how am I going to approach her without looking like an ambulance chaser.” said Harry.

Dr. Clark and Dr. Nicodemus were one of the few that got that little jibe.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Not what I was thinking.” said Harry.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

“Darn it, we got caught.” said Harry.

“Ah, well, what could happen now?” said Ron.

“…This is Charms class…” said Harry.

“Ah, then that would be ‘anything’.” said Ron nodding.

Fifth paragraph.

“Hah, my was closer, I got mine to turn into water, granted frozen water, so my was almost edible.” said Harry laughing.
“Bull, mine exploded.” said Ron with pride.
“You can’t drink explosions…” said Harry.
“Alcohol is flammable.” said Ron smirking.
“Shut up.” said Harry with a twitching smile.

Dialogue line.
“I’ve got to say, he’s got great reflexes.” said Remus with a chuckle.

Sixth paragraph, second sentence.
“It’s more than that I’m thinking.” said Fred.

End of sixth paragraph.
Mental argument.
“We need to hear more about these internal struggles you’ve got going on, they sound really hilarious Harry.” said George picking himself off the floor from laughing.

Seventh paragraph.
“Yay, I was worried about myself.” said Katie with a sigh.

Eighth paragraph.
Dialogue set, third sentence, first comma.
“Holy…shit…” said Ron.
“Well, note to self, don’t take jewelry from anyone in the Three Broomsticks.” said Katie.
“None of you had better do that.” said Lionus.

End of dialogue set.
“Here’ hoping we drowned the bastard in the lake.”
“Ginny!” said Charlie with a laugh.
“Just like Dumbledore, doesn’t wait all that long,” said Lionus with a solemn shake of his head.

“Well, in that case…Merry Christmas?” said the twin with a pair of weak grins.

“First day, no. Second yes.” said McGonagall with a slight upturn of her lips. “I do have a sympathetic side.”

“Yeah, twenty-four hours’ worth.” said Ron quietly.

“Or someone dressed to look like a woman, or even a disguise made by Polyjuice potion.” said Moody.

“Or my personal favorite.” said Tonks, her bubble gum pink hair and heart shaped face changed into a perfect likeness of Sirius.

Remus dropped the chocolate biscuit he was eating and his jaw was dropped.

“Good luck getting that image out of your head the next time you two are alone.” said Dr. Clark.

“Oi!” said Sirius. “Oh wait, no, never mind. I love you like a brother, but you’re not my type.”

“Right back at you.” said Remus.

Ron snorted out loud. “I cannot get over that!”
“Don’t ruin it for me.” said Harry.

“Well, that sucks.” said a fifth year Hufflepuff.

“Luck isn’t supposed to be easy to get.” said Dumbledore with a smile.

Snape is looking really pale over there.” said Leroy quietly.

Rudolph said nothing but looked at the Potions Master.

“I think it might safe to assume that it is not a spell anyone should be casting.” said Dumbledore his voice carrying over the many students. “Until we find out what it does, and my guess is that we will find out very shortly, it should not be cast under any circumstances.”

The students looked amongst themselves and nodded back at the Headmaster or replied with a “Yes sir.”

Snape tapped his finger on the side of his chair impatiently. He hoped Potter didn’t use it, he desperately hoped Potter didn’t use it…and he knew there was no further explanation on the spell…so Potter in the future has no idea what the spell did.

Katie, meaning it good naturedly, stuck out her tongue and smiled.

“Ah, what’s a Quidditch team without a little drama.” said Nightstrike with a smirk.
Fifteenth paragraph.

“Sad to lose Dean, but hey we got Katie back and we lost the homicidal maniac.” said Ron raising his fist.

Sixteenth paragraph, second sentence.

“Probably except for Harry and Ron.” said Bill with a snicker.

End of sixteenth paragraph.

“Aw, James used to do the same thing with your mum in the stands…the moment he began to lose focus, they’d whack him in the head with the bats.” said Sirius with a fond smile. “Explains a few things, now that I think about it.”

Seventeenth paragraph.

“Wonder what future you will do…” said Ginny with a teasing smile.

“Hope I don’t throw him off the Owlery Tower again.” said Ron. “Though, that would be an option.”

Eighteenth paragraph, first sentence.

Ginny blushed.

Eighteenth paragraph, third sentence, first semi-colon.

“Yeah, girl-friends tend to do that.” said Bill with a look over to Tonks.

End of eighteenth paragraph.

Ginny giggled.

Nineteenth paragraph, second sentence.

“Personal space, Ron.” said Fred with a smile.

“Respect the bubble.” said George waving his arms in a circle around himself.
“Yeah, good luck with that.” said Ron with a laugh.

On the surface, Snape was settling his features to the definition of stoicism, on the inside he was frantically trying to figure out what was going to happen. Was Potter going to use the spell, was Weasley? Who would be the unlucky victim?

He only hoped he was close enough to the moment it happened to help, as he himself was one of the few people who knew the counter curse to that spell.

“Well, you also had one person on your team cursed and removed from almost every single game of the year.” said George.

“And you had someone poisoned before another game with the same person out from being cursed.” said Fred.

“And you had some whack-job Keeper attack his own Seeker.” said George.

“We’d understand.” said the twins together.

“Yeah, that didn’t become standard till the Slytherins started that.” said Fred.

Mrs. McFinn looked over at Harry with a worried gaze.

“I’m sure he wasn’t throwing up; he was probably just carrying on as normal…” said Sirius with a smile.

“Yeah, most likely it was Ron doing the throwing up.” said George.

Sirius smirked. “A party is always a good place to pick up girls.”

“Oh Merlin, help me.” said Remus shaking his head.
“We’re nearing the end of this book right?” asked a first year.

“Aye.” said Officer McFinn.

“Well, then there’s a good chance that it’ll be found out sooner or later, seems to be the theme.” said another first year.

“Called it!” said George raising his fist.

“That’s not funny!” said Mrs. Weasley shortly.

“What am I doing with her?’ said Draco with a disgusted look.

“Yeah right.” said Ron with a roll of his eyes.

“Actually, she could have gotten a teacher on us when we were brewing the Polyjuice Potion. Then she told you two about the moment that she died which led you to the Chamber of Secrets, and she helped Harry in the second task. So…she does help quite a bit.” said Hermione. “So, she’s actually very helpful.”

Ron looked away, his arms crossed.

“Ha!” said Harry looking over to Ron and Hermione.

“He could be talking about someone else, Harry.” said Hermione tiredly.

“Know of anyone else that can send that idiot into a trembling state?” said Harry.

“Moody.” said Ron quickly.

“Moody only threatens to maim you and shove a dark detector up your ass, he doesn’t hurt kids.” said Tonks waving her hand dismissively.

“And that’s if I’m going easy on you.” said Moody darkly.
“Even if they’re Death Eaters?” said Harry.

“He’d stun you and take you in, no time for you to fight back, I’d love to see a kid get the drop on him.” said Tonks with a proud smile to her mentor.

Twenty-sixth paragraph.

Twenty-seventh paragraph, first sentence.

“Yeah, don’t talk to me, just attack me.” said Harry.

“Like you’d listen.” snarled Draco.

“We’ll never know, now will we? Cause you up and attacked me!” said Harry.

“You were just saying how he was a Death Eater.” said Hermione.

“Did it say anything about tears before?” said Harry. “When was the last time you saw Malfoy crying? Though…with all the crap going on…I wouldn’t have started the conversation.”

End of twenty-seventh paragraph.

“Yeah! A fight!” said a few of the second years together.

“Oh no…” muttered Snape looking at the book in horror.

Dialogue line.

Twenty-eighth paragraph.

Almost everyone in the Great Hall gasped loudly.

“And here is where the censorship starts.” said Officer McFinn quietly.

Dialogue line.

“NO!” shouted Snape

“No, what? What’s going on?” asked a few of the students. The annoying humming had returned.

“Oh, come on! Not this again!” said the twins with a loud groan.

Twenty-ninth paragraph.

Harry’s face turned pale, and he began trembling. Ron and Hermione (who were not privy to the happenings going on in the book) looked at Harry in horror.
“What’s going on?” said Ron softly.

“I don’t know, but it can’t be good…it must be that Sectumsempra spell.” said Hermione quietly.

“Harry must have accidentally done something really bad…why didn’t that book say what the spell does, Harry wouldn’t…” said Ron his voice shaking. “I mean, that book never said what it did…he wouldn’t do anything permanent.”

“For the first time, I hope Malfoy’s okay.” said Hermione looking over at Draco.

Draco, also in the dark, looked at Potter in confusion and the book with worry. What was happening? All he heard was the loud humming as well, but his godfather’s hands were gripping the armrests of chair quite tightly.

Dialogue line.

Thirtieth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Thirty-first paragraph.

“What is going on?” Leroy asked looking over at Rudolph and Harry. Harry was trembling violently and Sirius was trying hard to comfort him, holding him close and trying to speak reassuringly to him.

“Easy cub easy…whatever it is, it’ll be alright.” said Sirius quietly.

Harry wrenched himself from Sirius’ grasp and tried to get out of the bowl, but fell to his knees instead. He went down on all fours and retched, Mrs. McFinn fell beside him and tried to pull the hair away from his face. Soon everyone that was in the bowl was huddled around him and trying to console him, Dumbledore included.

But to no avail, once he was done vomiting, he gave an unholy scream, clutching at his hair. Before the school’s entire eyes, his hair…after finally turning completely black, now turned stark white again. He stopped screaming at long last, gasping for air. With a trembling hand, he reached for his wand.

In a bright flash of blue light, he fell back into Sirius’s arms and lay motionless. They looked over and saw Glacier sheathing his wand and coming over. Dumbledore returned his own wand to inside pocket and picked up Harry’s wand, putting it into another pocket.

“What…what was that?” asked Sirius as Dr. Clark checked Harry over and Mrs. McFinn kissed Harry’s brow. Madam Pomfrey was also at his side trying to lend some aid.

Dr. Nicodemus came over as well, and inspected the boy, after a short while, Glacier placed his wand at Harry’s temple and gently pulled it back, a long, black glittering strand came out of his skull. The moment it snapped its connection, Dr. Nicodemus pulled out a thick brown jar and trapped it inside.

The hair that had just turned white, now slowly returned to its dark black state. Glacier looked over to Dumbledore with a firm look. “Keep his wand safe, he won’t be needing it for a while.”

“Remember what the Headmaster was talking about splitting a soul? You were just about to bear witness to something similar to that.” said Dr. Nicodemus.

“So…Draco died?” said Fred looking shocked.

“As far as I’ve heard, no.” said Glaicer. “But Harry,” he reached down and patted Harry’s head. “believes he has.”

“So what happened?” asked Ron.

“Don’t bother, lad. We’re not saying…” said Dr. Nicodemus darkly.

“Is Harry’s soul…split?” said Hermione quietly.

Dr. Nicodemus waved his wand, and a bright white orb, with shining silver web like cracks blossomed out of Harry’s chest, he sighed and with his wand, coaxed it back down. “Thankfully, no. His soul is still intact…barely, but I think we should move on with the chapter, and get past this part. He’ll need some nice quite rest to heal that level of damage.”

“And I will be insisting that we end the day, I realize we just started, but it’s what’s is best for Harry.” said Glacier picking Harry up and placing him back in the bowl, as Sirius magicked away the sick on the floor.

Snape, who was looking at Draco in horror stood up and shouted.

“IF I HEAR OF ANYONE, ANYONE USING THAT SPELL THEY’LL WISH I THREW THEM TO THAT BLASTED FLUFFY!” shouted Snape.

The students looked at Snape in confusion and shock.

“After hearing and seeing what happened to Harry, he really thinks we’re going to try it?” said Fred.

Thirty-second paragraph.

“Thank Merlin…I was nearby.” said Snape breathing a sigh of relief. He took out his wand and waved it, in a moment a battered book came flapping into the Great Hall, it was Advanced Potion-Making.

Without a second look at it, he hurled it mightily into a nearby fireplace and watched it burn.

“Was that the book?” asked a third year Ravenclaw.

“He must have found it!” said Ravenclaw.

“And now it’s gone.” said Terry.

“If it did that to Malfoy…good riddance.” said Hannah.

Thirty-third paragraph.

Dialogue line.
“Can’t say I believe the boy is going to stay in one place.” said Glacier, handing Mrs. McFinn a bowl of cool water and a rag.

Thirty-fifth paragraph.

Thirty-sixth paragraph, first sentence.

“You stayed?” said Glacier looking down at Harry in shock.

“Don’t go into a life of crime, boy, you’re too honest for that.” said Chief Hawkeye.

“Why is it the Rangers can hear, but we can’t?” asked Fred.

End of thirty-sixth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Thirty-seventh paragraph.

“I’m not helping.” said Snape covering his face.

“Never saw Snape act like that before.” said Ernie.

“Kind of scary.” said Hannah.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Thirty-eighth paragraph.

“I have to admit Severus; you were justified in doing that.” said Dumbledore with a somber look.

Thirty-ninth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Fortieth paragraph.
“It would seem that Potter is more effected now by his actions as he was in the future because he has not seen nor felt these experiences first hand…” said Glacier stroking his chin thoughtfully.

Fifty-first paragraph, fourth sentence.

Snape looked over at Harry, looking perplexed.

End of fifty-first paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Fifty-second paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“And we finally get to hear something.” said George throwing up his arms.

“I wanna know what’s the story with the blood.” said Ron.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Fifty-third paragraph.

“I can only imagine how a bloodstained student running through the halls would look like.” said Seamus.

Fifty-fourth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Fifty-fifth paragraph.

Fifty-sixth paragraph, fourth sentence.

“Yeah, some of it might be from us.” said Fred.

“We’ve stuffed some stuff in there…maybe half of what that room’s got.” said George.

“Don’t flatter yourselves. I’m sure we’ve accidently tossed in more stuff in there than what you’ve done.” said Sirius.

End of fifty-sixth paragraph.

“What student brought the ax?” said Dr. Clark adjusting the blanket over Harry’s chest.
Forty-seventh paragraph, second sentence, third comma.
Lionus looked up suddenly and then back down to the floor, a thoughtful look on his face.

Forty-seventh paragraph, seventh sentence, third comma.
“Tiara?” said Flitwick quietly.
Lionus and Nightstrike shared a look and quietly, the werewolf Ranger slipped away.

End of forty-seventh paragraph.

Forty-eighth paragraph.
“Why didn’t he go with Harry to get the books himself, why stay there?” said Hermione.
“Who knows?” said Leroy.

Forty-ninth paragraph.
Dialogue line.
Dialogue line.
Dialogue line.
Dialogue line.
“Oh no…” said George.

Dialogue line.
Dialogue line.
Dialogue line.
Dialogue line.
“Oooh…not good.” said Fred.
“Good luck dodging that one.” said George.

Fiftieth paragraph.
The Great Hall was silent.
“That…sucked…” said the twins together.

“A thousand points from Gryffindor for that lame excuse.” said Remus covering his eyes.

“What the hell?” said Sirius shaking his head a twitching smile on his face as he stroked Harry’s cheek. “You can come up with better stories than that. I expected better of you.”

“Can’t believe we can find something funny about this chapter now.” said Mrs. McFinn dipping the cloth back into the chilled bowl.

“It’s helping me cope.” said Dr. Clark.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue set.

“Just for that lame excuse, I agree and whatever he did, he did it…but a cheater?” said Remus.

“He didn’t do the actual work.” said Hermione stubbornly.

“He followed the direction from a past student, every teacher here is a past student. If we showed you a better way to cast a spell, would that be considered cheating?” said Sirius.

“Well, no…but Harry was being praised for…”

“For following the directions in course book.” repeated Remus. “I’m sure that his father and his mother would have riddled off some helpful hints in his first year course books.”

“Hell, James would have given Harry his own if there weren’t little hearts with L.E written all over them.” said Sirius.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, first sentence.

Snape scowled, but turned around as the others turned their gaze back to the books and ran his tongue over his teeth slowly.

End of dialogue set.

Fifty-first paragraph.
“Oh brother.” said Ginny covering her head.

“Not the best time, I know…” said Hermione looking down.

“Ouch…but whatever happened, it sounded really bad…no way to dance around that.” said Sirius.

“Though, it sounded like he was trying to use an Unforgivable, that’s most likely the only thing keeping him in school. He was defending himself…but boy…Harry went a bit excessive.”

“And he’s most likely not going to be eating for a week or two now.” said Ron.

“He doesn’t seem to find much injustice in this game suspension, does he?” said George.

“No…must have been really bad what he did.” said Fred.

Snape tried hard to withhold a snarl.
“Gotta point there.” said Chief Hawkeye, sending a quick unnoticed look to Snape. “Doubt this Prince wanted anyone else reading this book, wonder how he let it go?”

Dialogue line.
Dialogue line.
Dialogue line.

“Why do you keep reverting to that?” said Parvati. “That book did a lot of good! Granted it did one really, really bad thing, but the majority of the book seems to be good.”

“So good that Professor Snape saw fit to burn it right in front of us?” snapped Hermione.

“’Cause it had that really bad curse! He didn’t want anyone else to get their hands on it!” said Parvati. “But those potions were apparently really, really well brewed!”

Dialogue set.
Dialogue set.

“Since when did you start being concerned over Quidditch?” said Ginny looking confused.

Dialogue line.

“Whoa, easy there, shortcake.” said Charlie.

Fifty-fourth paragraph, first sentence.

“Oooh…not good.” said the twins.

End of fifty-fourth paragraph.

“You’d feel a lot better if girls were fighting over you, not about you.” said Sirius in a stage whisper to the unconscious boy.

“Don’t you start.” said Remus.

Fifty-fifth paragraph.

“Ouch, well, Wood never got to see the end of his first game…got knocked in the head with a Bludger few minutes in.” said Angelina. “You just have to miss…first game of you being Captain…okay, that’s not any better.”
“Yikes…that’s going to be a massive job…especially…” said Sirius, he finished in a groan.

“I’ve got a sinking feeling that he’s just going to be using your and James’ file.” said Remus shaking his head.

“You kidding? He’s going to have a blast!” said Sirius. “He’ll get to see all kinds of things that we did.”

“Got to say, that is an odd punishment for him, especially if you think that he idolizes his father.” said Remus thoughtfully.

“Unless you knew for a fact that he does not.” said Dumbledore with a look up to the ceiling.

“You two were always the nancy boys of the group.” said Sirius. “They just couldn’t catch me…Peter never had the guts to try.” scoffed Remus.

“I’m still shocked, I mean, I would have killed for that punishment, you know how much inspiration is in those cards?” said Sirius.

“We know!” said the twins and Lee excitedly.
“Hated it when she did that.” said Bill. “You couldn’t be sure if something was going to surprise you in a good way or in a bad way.”

Sirius, Dr. Clark, Rudolph, Leroy and Remus laughed. “Finally!”

Several people laughed and Ginny blushed, but she looked over to Harry with a concerned look, Harry had not woken up and he looked quiet awful.

“Aww…” said Mrs. McFinn and Mrs. Weasley who were dabbing their eyes.

“You two better go cool off.” said George waving at Dean and an imaginary Romilda.

Hermione giggled as Ron huffed indignantly.

“Well, honestly, what do you expect?”

“I want to know what the hell the both of them did…right now!” said Percy hotly.

“Shut up Percy! Harry’s a perfect gentleman!” said Ginny standing up and going over to Harry’s side. “Is he okay?”

“He’s going to be alright, but I think the rest of the day needs to be in convalescence.” said Glacier.
“Is this chapter done?”

Officer McFinn nodded.

“Then that is all for the day.” he said coming over and picking up Harry, without a word the people around the bowl left with the Ranger healer and the sleeping boy.
Harry woke up with a great pain in his head and a very befuddled feeling in his head. He could have sworn that he woke up already that day and that the readings had already started. But here he was, in his bed, wearing his pajamas, and wrapped tightly in a warm blanket. Mrs. McFinn was sitting beside him in a large armchair, sewing up a few holes in a few of his older jumpers.

He made to sit up and ask how he got back to bed already, when she noticed his struggles, she put her mending down and then tried to push him back into the pillows. “Harry, lie back down, Glacier says that you need to keep in bed today.”

“Wasn’t I up and moving around earlier? Didn’t we start reading already?” asked Harry as he sank back into the pillows. “And why does my head hurt?”

Mrs. McFinn looked uncomfortable for a moment, then the door opened. Glacier and Sirius came into the room, a bowl of cool water in Glacier’s hands.

“Looks like you finally woke up.” said Sirius with a sigh of relief. “You’ve been out for hours, cub! It’s almost dinnertime now.”

“So what happened to the readings?” asked Harry as he was brought into a sitting position by the Ranger Healer.

“You…became very emotional and to save your health from deteriorating, I subdued you.” said the Healer plainly. “If you are well enough by tomorrow morning, we will reconvene tomorrow for the readings, but for the time being, you will rest up here.”

“I…I don’t remember what happened? What made me…?” asked Harry.

“In the book, you stumbled upon Malfoy, you both attacked each other and something happened…that spell that your future-self found in that potion book. The one that was for enemies…”

“Did I use it? What does it do?” asked Harry with a look of curiosity as he reached for a glass of water.

“Nothing good, let’s leave it at that, you were given Saturday detentions till the end of your sixth year term and missed your last Quidditch game.” said Sirius honestly, taking the glass from Harry after he was done with it.

“What the…?” said Harry looking at Sirius in horror.

“It didn’t end on a bad note however, you finally got to get together with Ginny, but that’s the only good thing that happened during that chapter in my opinion.” said Sirius with an uncomfortable look.

Harry looked between Sirius and Glacier. “Do I get the details on the fight with Draco? Or do I have to take a wild guess?”

“No.” said the three people in the room together.

“And I would not want you taking guesses, I dread what some of those could be.” said Glacier.

“I’ll ask Ron or Hermione then…” said Harry stubbornly.
“Won’t work cub.” said Sirius shaking his head.

“Only very few people heard what was going on during that fight. In this room, only I know what happened.” said Glacier. “No student heard what had happened, not even Draco.”

Harry sank back into the pillows with a sigh. “You know, this doesn’t help me, what if I…?”

“The book has been destroyed and there has now been a ban on that spell, after what happened this morning…no other student will be even considering that spell to be part of their arsenal.” said Glacier.

Harry blinked. “I guess I didn’t take it well, if none of the Slytherins at least want to try it.”

“Good heavens no.” said Mrs. McFinn with a shudder. “I’ll go and get you some dinner, you stay in bed, sweetie.”

She leaned over, kissed his brow and walked out of the room.

“I’ve got some potions that I want you to take, some you’ll need to take now…others you’ll need to wait till after you have something to eat.” said Glacier reaching into his inner pockets and pulled out two potion phials.

“Oh wonderful…my favorite part of being confined to bed.” said Harry with a groan.

“Glad to hear that.” said Glacier dryly. “Then you should be delirious with joy until you go to sleep tonight.”

=-=-=-=-=-=

“So what do we do?” asked Remus. “The Rangers seemed to have heard what was going on, and so did Severus and you, Dumbledore…do we tell Harry, or have you tell us for that matter?”

Dumbledore sat in thought. “I think we should allow Glacier to pick the time to tell Harry, and I will only burden myself with that misfortune, no need to worry you all over something that now will most likely not happen.”

Sirius looked over to Dumbledore in confusion. “You’re actually going to let…”

“After what I had seen, I will give the reins to Glacier, he has been helping Harry cope these past few weeks, and I would rather not see…Harry suffer from that sort of breakdown again.” said Dumbledore quietly. “I would and will do anything to prevent that from happening again.”

Sirius covered his head with his hands and arms and leaned forward. “I’d rather forget that incident, to be honest…he doesn’t like Malfoy, but to go to that extreme for apparently nearly killing him…he doesn’t need that sort of mental anguish again.”

“Severus and Draco are having the rest of the day off as well. Seems that Malfoy was also in the dark about what happened, I don’t know if Severus is going to tell him what he had heard or not.” said Remus.

“As his godfather, it is his choice. I hope that he does not do so, but we must abide by whatever decision Severus makes.” said Dumbledore quietly.

Glacier came out of the room, empty potion phials in his hands.

“How is he?” asked Remus standing up.
“He’ll be fine, as long as he gets the rest he needs. As for what caused all this, I’ll see how he fairs in the coming months, if he is ready to take the news of what would have happened, then we will proceed accordingly. The books themselves will most likely be referencing the incident, I don’t want anyone else to dwell on it too much.”

“Going to be hard.” said Leroy. “That’s all the kids are going to be talking about for a good long while…more’s the pity.”

“I kind of hope they just focus on Harry and Ginny finally getting together in the books…but that’s not going to happen…” said Dr. Clark sadly. “If anything they’ll be talking about his reaction and what possibly could have happened.”

“My poor, sweet baby…” said Mrs. McFinn looking at the door leading to Harry and Sirius’ room.

It was in the wee hours of the morning, when Lionus and Glacier were seen walking down a brightly lit corridor towards a large steel door at the far end. They walked side by side, wands at the ready and small masks over their mouths and noses.

“So, we’ve got that dreadful woman and Voldemort down here?” asked Glacier.

“Can you honestly say there is another place where they would be most suited?” asked Lionus with a smirk. “The guards are having a lot of fun with that Umbridge woman, seems she tried to talk her way out one last time.”

“Clearly it did not work.” said Glacier with a cruel smirk of his own. “If at all possible, I would like to also have a word with her.”

“I think I can have that arranged, it may be easier to get to her first than it will be to Riddle, we’ll have to see who we can get quicker.” said Lionus.

The moment they approached the steel barrier, the large metal doors parted with a clanging sound and the scene behind them was revealed.

It was a large open space surrounded by concrete walls, with what looked like an artificial cloudy sky overhead, there was a lower level where there were people milling about almost aimless through the light fog that was rolling through the space they walked in. Guards patrolled the area on the elevated walk ways over the figures below, some had their wands or various weapons in their hands prepared for anything. Each one of the guards had similar masks over their noses and mouths.

The nearest guard came over to them and saluted smartly. “Star Captain sir, welcome to Level 7, the Lieutenant is waiting for you in Interrogation room number seven hundred and thirteen.”

“Thank you, we’ll need to speak to two of your charges, D…I’ll just describe them…that might be quicker…one is a woman who looks like a toad and the man formally known as the Dark Lord.” said Lionus with a nod.

“’Toadie’ and ‘No-Nose’?” said the guard with an amused smile. “’No-nose is detained right now; seems he can resist the effects of the fog.’

“How are you going to get him to comply?” asked Glacier.

“I personally don’t know; the Lieutenant is going to talk to the Warden about it.” said the guard.
“He didn’t try anything, other than pretend that he was under control. And as you know, that can lead to some serious trouble.”

“And I take it that when it came to ‘Bodily relief time’ that you made the discovery.” said Lionus with a smirk.

“I still find that part of level seven to be highly repulsive, all of them relieving themselves in shifts like that…” said Glacier with a look of intense disgust on his face.

“That’s what level seven is sir, you lose all control, the lieutenant decides what you do, when you do it and how you do it.” said the guard with a rueful smile. “Trust me, I hate that part of the day as well, I like it when it’s quiet like this.”

Lionus and Glacier bid the guard farewell, and moved onto the Interrogation room, when they entered, they saw the Lieutenant sitting at the table, a burly middle aged man with a thick beard, strong muscular arms and large hands shuffling papers. and there sat the man they wanted.

Lord Voldemort, or at least the man that was formally referred to as was sitting across from the Lieutenant. All of the damage he had done to his physical appearance in regards to the workings he had done with the Dark Arts was ripped from him, leaving him looking like a much older version of his younger self. He had his hair restored, though it was now a salt and pepper colored, but his nose was now present, but it was a much smaller, slightly squashed version of what it originally looked like.

His eyes were no longer red slits, but were the eyes that he had been born with, yet despite the change in appearance, the look of malice was still present. For someone who had been in Ranger custody for several weeks, he wasn’t looking all that terrible.

The Lieutenant turned and looked up at the two that had entered the room.

“Ah, Star Captain Lionus.” said the man standing up and saluting. “I heard you were coming, I’ll be just a moment, I need to finish up here.”

“Actually, we’ve come to talk to this man.” said Lionus pointing to Riddle as Glacier took the seat that the lieutenant had vacated. “Then we want see…what did that guard call her?”

“Toadie.” said Glacier with a smirk.

“That’s right, her.” said Lionus. “Not the most original name, but it’ll do.”

“Ah, well, if I may…have a word with you…outside?” said the lieutenant gesturing towards the door.

Lionus smiled. “If you’d like.” He led the lieutenant out of the room, leaving Glacier sitting across from the one of the darkest wizards of their age. The lieutenant accepted Glacier as a suitable guard to Riddle and followed the Star Captain.

As they entered the hallway, Lionus turned and looked at the man. He remembered this lieutenant, far back to his rookie days. This man was his Sergeant when he was first starting out as a Rookie, he was a stern man that had appreciation for ranks, rules and regulations.

He knew why he was being asked out of the room, before the lieutenant could even say it.

“So, what can I do for you?” asked Lionus, a smile on his face as he addressed the powerfully built man.
If he was still back in his rookie days, he would be cuffed and dragged down to the sparring room for not adding the word “sir.” at the end of his sentence, or for that matter starting the conversation. But now the tables had turned and Lionus was now the high ranking superior. Luckily for the lieutenant, he had nothing but fond memories of the man, of course he was trained till he was black and blue from his toes to the tips of his hair, but he wouldn’t be the man he was today without it.

“It’s well, sir…if I may speak frankly…” said the lieutenant standing up straighter than he was before.

“You may.” said Lionus still smiling.

The man sighed and looked between the now closed door and the Star Captain. “That man, he was the one that attacked your man Viper, correct?”

“Aye.” said Lionus, still smiling.

“Then protocol dictates, that…you cannot be in there with him, hell you shouldn’t even be on this level.” said the lieutenant with a firm look. “Not without authorization from the Chief and the Warden would have passed that on down to me at very least…my level and all.”

Lionus’ smile slowly turned into a smirk. “Out of the two people that came here today, I’m not the one you should be keeping an eye on.”

---

Glacier looked at Riddle, his face devoid of any emotion and sat silently as Riddle looked back at him, equally as silent and emotionless. The only sound echoing through the interrogation room was the ticking of a clock on the wall, it’s hands had been removed, but the phantom ticking of the clock had remained.

Riddle fixed his gaze at the Healer, trying to gauge how to proceed. The Healer was sitting forward in his chair, his chin resting on one of his hands, looking bored and yet still attentive. After several minutes of silence, Riddle finally spoke.

“Did that vampire survive?” he said smoothly.

Tick…tock…tick…tock…

Glacier nodded.

“Pity, I had one chance…”

Tick…tock…tick…tock…

Glacier’s expression did not change, but Riddle continued on.

“For an organization that prides itself on being the best of the best, you all are certainly easy to catch off guard. I had managed to slip a spy amongst your ranks and you never even knew it.” Riddle sneered. “I managed to obtain quite a bit of information out of him before you finally caught him.”

Tick…tock…tick…tock…

Glacier still said nothing and his expression remained unchanged, the only response to Riddle’s words were the continuous ticking from the clock on the wall.

Tick…tock…tick…tock…

Riddle frowned at the apparent lack of interest shown by the Healer, however he had anticipated the conversation going, it was not going in the direction he was hoping for. Silence grew between the two of them once more.

Tick…tock…tick…tock…

“I had assumed that with the power you all seem to possess, that you would have at least seen such a flimsy guise as that fool I had reporting to me.” said Riddle with a sneer.

Tick…tock…tick…tock…

Riddle’s gaze flitted between Glacier and the handless clock, and the corners of his mouth twitched slightly. Minutes slowly crept by till he brought the Healer into another conversation. But it didn’t matter, no matter what the Dark Lord said, how much he baited the man, the Ranger did not speak, did not alter his gaze and that…bloody ticking…

Tick…tock…tick…

Tock…tick…tock…

Tick…tock…tick…

Tock…tick…tock…

“ARRRRGHHHH!” roared Riddle as he leaped out of his chair and ripped the clock of the wall, slamming it down on the floor, smashing it into pieces, silencing the ticking sound, and bringing nothing more than silence to the room.

He looked over to the Healer, who did not seem surprised at the quick show of rage or even that the clock was now in pieces on the floor. His demeanor hadn’t changed in the slightest, and didn’t seem poised to defend himself against the agitated prisoner.

“I…I have seen stoic men before…but you…” said Riddle, gasping slightly.

Tick…tock…tick…tock…

Riddle’s eyes widened in shock, he looked down at the broken clock. “What…what madness…?”

He slammed his foot down on the broken mechanical parts, shattering the glass even further.

“There…”

Tick…tock…tick…tock…

His eyes widened even further, he took the chair from it’s spot and he slammed the legs down on the broken pieces of the clock…but the ticking continued.

“Why won’t this clock…stop…. ticking!” growled Riddle, his teeth bared.

Glacier didn’t spare the clock a single glance, his expression still unchanged, granting the ticking sound to carry throughout the room.
“Don’t think I don’t know what you’re doing? I know you’re just trying to get me to lose my composure but it won’t work, I’ve trained myself…”

Tick…tock…tick...

Tock…tick…tock...

Tick…tick…tock...

“SAY SOMETHING!” Riddle shouted lifting up the chair, preparing to throw it.

Glacier removed his hand from his chin and waved it dismissively.

-=-=-=-=-=

The lieutenant and Lionus opened the door to the interrogation room and was welcomed with a blast of frigid cold air. Glacier was standing up and walking out of the room, where everything was covered in frost and their breath was coming out in puffs of white. Riddle was not moving, he was covered in what looked like a thick layer of frost, apparently frozen in an instant.

“He’ll be more compliant now with that fog.” said Glacier coming out. “We’ll have to wait till he’s completely under control before we can move with the next stage of the plan, I would rather not have him going off at the mouth.”

Lionus nodded. “We’ll have to postpone our little chat for a while. May we speak to the Umbridge woman now?”

“I’ll have her brought to interrogation room three hundred and ninety-four.” said the Lieutenant.

“Why do the numbers of the interrogation rooms make me think there’s some significance?” said Lionus thoughtfully.
Smooth Talking

Umbridge sat in the interrogation room, her hair was frazzled and she looked nervously around the room. She looked between the two persons that flanked her on either side with a worried glance, both were dressed all in black and they had terrible looking masks on their faces. She couldn’t believe how her life turned around this way.

The moment she arrived in this horrible place, she found herself moving around against her will, a strong, compelling voice in her head ordering her to walk in a certain direction, look, speak, eat, defecate, sleep and even breathe! She only regained her control when she was placed in this particular room, but it didn’t make her feel any better. It made her feel horribly violated.

The door opened and a pair of familiar figures entered the room. The last time she had seen anyone else that wasn’t a prisoner felt as if it were decades ago, so it took her a short while to pin the names to the faces. But that condescending smirk was all she needed to put together…

“Lionus.” hissed Umbridge angrily.

“I’m impressed you remember me, you’re not entirely stupid then, most people lose whatever intellect they have within a month.” said Lionus still smirking. “Though, you are dumb enough to get your old ass dropped here, so…no points.”

Umbridge glared.

“Star Captain…” said the white haired man coming up behind him. “That is not what we are here for…as pleasurable as it may be.”

Lionus continued to smirk. “Perk of the job.” he took the seat directly across from Umbridge, his eyes boring into hers. “Just came to give you a heads up, in case you were interested.”

Umbridge said nothing, but continued to scowl at the man before her.

“Do you remember what started all this nonsense?” asked Lionus taking out a small roll of parchment.

“It was those trumped up charges!” spat Umbridge.

“Keep telling yourself that…what started all this was your boss…and you…not willing to accept the hard truths of the matter and preparing your people for another war. If you had done that reasonably simple task of using your listening ears, you would have ‘The Boy-Who-Lived’ on your side and you wouldn’t be in this mess in the first place. Then again, I wouldn’t have as much fun now as I would be if you hadn’t have done all this. For this I thank you.” he finished with a laugh.

“Just tell me what you’re here to tell me!” said Umbridge.

“Frankly, it’s just to gloat.” said Lionus. “But there was something else that I wanted you to have the pleasure of knowing…”

Sirius watched as Harry turned over in his sleep, trying to burrow his way further under the covers where it was warmer. He cast a warming charm on Harry’s bed and transfigured a book into another blanket to throw over him.
Harry had been asleep for a whole day since the last chapter was read, either it was due to the mental exhaustion or the potions he was given was unclear, but at least Harry was getting some actual rest. Sirius himself was found to be unable to sleep and was reduced to tossing and turning all night.

He kept thinking how tore up Harry was over what had happened during that censored bit of the book, and how devastated he was. The kid could do amazing things, and was one of the bravest, most selfless people he knew…and the thought of him causing someone mortal harm…it almost destroyed his godson.

“Padfoot?” came a calm voice from the doorway. Sirius looked up and saw Remus, wearing lounge pants, a simple shirt and a robe.

“Hey Moony.” said Sirius tiredly. “What’s got you up so late tonight?”

“Nightstrike and I went out for a bit, it’s sort of odd, being able to transform painlessly…” said Remus with a smile. “He and I went out hunting…have to admit, haven’t had that much fun since our school days.”

Sirius looked down, guilt evident on his face. “Sorry I haven’t been joining you lately, I…”

“Harry needs you more than I do. You, James, and (I reluctantly admit) Peter helped me when I needed you three the most, now it’s Harry’s turn.” said Remus with a slight smile. “How’s he doing by the way?”

“Still asleep, he hasn’t woken up yet. I wonder where Glacier is, he didn’t mention that Harry would be sleeping this long.” said Sirius. “I wouldn’t be all that worried, but after that chapter…”

“I’m sure it’s nothing to be worried about.” said Remus reassuringly. “If it was something he was worried about, I can’t see him or Dr. Nicodemus willing to leave the castle.”

“Dr. Nicodemus left too?” said Sirius looking stunned.

“After Nightstrike and I left for the Forbidden Forest. He had to take those infants back to the Headquarters, seemed they picked up a slight cold.” said Remus.

“Put a little Pepper-up potion in their bottles.” said Sirius automatically.

“If they’re half Vampire, I’m not sure that will work.” said Remus thoughtfully.

“Forgot that Viper was now a ‘Daddy’, it’s kind of odd.” said Sirius. “He doesn’t look the type…neither does that Wildfire chick…”

“You never know with some people.” said Remus. “I would never have pegged James to be a father either. But he made a very handsome young man with Lily.”

Sirius reached over and ran his fingers through Harry’s hair. “I just hope nothing more happens.”

-=-=-=-=-=

“What in the world are you saying?” said the Warden looking at the Star Captain with a stunned look, leaning her lithe body back into the throne like chair she sat in.

“I’m saying that there is someone I want to take out of here for a short while, not all that long I shouldn’t think, a month, or maybe more.” said Lionus with a small smile.
“You cannot be serious.” said the Warden shaking her head.

“Reaper, it’s not like I’m taking the prisoner today, I’m going to let you keep playing hostess and in a few days or so I’ll come back. Besides, I’m not taking, only borrowing.” said Lionus with a smile.

The Warden, Reaper, shook her head and flipped through the papers on her desk. “You know, Star Captain or not, I cannot allow this. Hell’s Garden is not a library, you don’t get to borrow criminals and take them out of the facility.”

Lionus reached into his shirt pocket and pulled out a small letter and handed it to the Warden. “And that is why I have this. This is a formal request from Chief Hawkeye for a temporary custodial release.”

The Warden sighed heavily, ran her fingers through her blood red hair and held out her hand to accept the letter. “Could have saved me so much time and headache by just handing me the damn thing.”

“Just want to see how tight the security is around here about taking out criminals for day visits.” said Lionus with a smirk.

“You and I have been doing business for years, you asshole!” said Reaper slamming a hand down on the table with enough force to upset her black china tea cup, her dark brown eyes glinting threateningly. “You know exactly how I run my prison and you think that now that you are the second in command you can tap dance around my rules, my regulations?”

Lionus blinked, “I’ve never seen you get this worked up before…what’s going on with you?”

“Everyone can have a bad day, Lionus, and you just happened to waltz in on one!” snapped Reaper angrily. “Unless this is a damned social call, the next time you come to visit, hand over your paperwork right away and then we’ll talk!”

“Okay…okay…I’m sorry.” said Lionus holding out his hands submissively.

Reaper settled back into her chair and ripped open the letter in an angry huff. Lionus took the chair in front of her and watched her read, seconds ticked by.

“Did you get the present I sent you?” asked Lionus.

Reaper looked at him over the top of the letter in her hands. “Really? You’re asking me this now?”

“Just want to know.” said Lionus with a shrug. “I got your present, never thought I would own copies of the Strand Magazine with the original Sherlock Holmes stories in them…I was stunned.”

Reaper rolled her eyes, but a small smile twitched at her lips. “Yes, I got your present, it was lovely. Have to admit, I’ve never had something from that Tiffany’s store before.”

“I thought you would like it.” said Lionus, a pleased smile on his face. “Though I think when they were coming up with the design, I don’t think a jailer’s keys were what they were envisioning. Did I get the length of the chain right?”

“The innocent act doesn’t exactly work on me.” said Reaper with a smug look. “The paper did look to be in order, till I saw that you have the Chief’s seal backwards. Now, you can either hand over the real documents, or you get your head bludgeoned with my mace, you pick.”
Lionus smirked. “There were five other mistakes, you’re just settling for that one?”

“One mistake is enough for me to pitch this right in the garbage. Do you have the right paperwork?” said Reaper, making a show to lean over and reach for the large spiked mace leaning against the wall.

“Right here.” said Lionus with a chuckle, pulling out another envelope. But that didn’t stop the Warden from picking up the weapon and placing it on her desk. “Just playing…”

“You’d play with a woman who has stated quite clearly that she wasn’t having a good day and she carries a mace that weighs almost as much as you do? You’re dumber than I thought.”

“Not dumber, I just have faith that you won’t hurt me unless I do something incredibly stupid.” said Lionus.

Reaper scoffed, “And this isn’t?”

“Compared to what I could do? No.” said Lionus. “This was pretty low on the level of idiocy that I could ever do with you.”

“Does not speak well for you.” said Reaper as she tore open the new envelope. She read through the letter and then signed the bottom of the letter. “How is Tempest enjoying her furlough? I’ve heard an interesting rumor that she’s found herself a nice stallion at that English wizarding school.”

“She has, don’t see much of her, she and Firenze tend to take long strolls on most days.” said Lionus.

Reaper smirked. “And here I thought there was hope for at least one of us, here is your letter back and approval…anything else you want to bother me with?”

“Nothing that you and I can get away with in your office.” said Lionus with a roguish wink as he stood up.

“Careful, sir, that could be labeled as sexual harassment.” said Reaper with a smirk.

“You are worth all the risk.” said Lionus leaning over the desk and kissing the top of her hand, smiling as she thwacked him with a rolled up parchment.

“None of that mushy crap.” said Reaper. “Go find someone else to pester.”

“At once, my lady.” said Lionus bowing low, a teasing smile on his lips.
The Truth of the Seer

Thankfully, the day that both Glacier and Lionus returned was the same day that Harry had woken up and had started making his way down to the Great Hall; Glacier himself had met Harry as he made his way down.

“Potter, I want to have a word with you before the readings start.”

Harry quirked a brow. “Is this going to be a good conversation, or are we going to have to cut the day short before it even begins?”

“I would not be surprised if you wished to cease the readings for the day, no.” said Glacier.

Meanwhile, the most of the adults were up in Dumbledore’s office, the Headmaster had called them up to have a quick chat, after meeting with Lionus.

“Are you bloody serious?” shouted Sirius angrily. “He wants to do what?”

“My reaction may not have been quite so vocal, but I was as puzzled as you are.” said Dumbledore calmly, his hands folded over on the top of the desk. “But I have been assured that the guards around the students will be intensified and not just by Aurors…no offense meant to you Kingsley, Tonks, Moody or Amelia.” he said with a nod towards the Aurors and Madam Bones.

“None taken, so there are going to be more Rangers coming in?” said Tonks.

“Yes, let me see I was given a list of their names here…we have a young Miss Ctenizidae, (“There’s a mouthful,” said Sirius.) Miss Cosmo, Mr. Hunter, and Mr. Force. They are members of Lionus’ own squadron as it were and he can assure us that they will protect the students at all costs.” said Dumbledore calmly. “Then there is a Lieutenant Harpy that will be patrolling outside in case of emergencies, she has her own company and there is little chance of the students coming into contact with them.”

“We’re just swarmed with Rangers now, aren’t we?” said Sirius. “What about that one bloke, Longsword, I haven’t seen him around.”

“Oh he’s there, just under one of their own Invisibility cloaks,” said Moody gruffly. “He hasn’t left the boy’s side since he was brought here.”

“I feel a bit better…I guess.” said Sirius.

Once everyone had gathered in the Great Hall, they started the day’s reading. The others sent furtive glances over to young man, but they said nothing to the young man, who seemed to be conflicted with some inner turmoil.

“Alright, are we ready?” asked Officer McFinn with sigh. “Let’s see…” he flipped through the book to where he had placed the book mark from the other day. “Chapter Twenty-five.”

“Well, it must mean something with Trelawney, she’s the only ‘Seer’ we’ve got.” said Ron.
“Go figure.” said a few boys rolling their eyes.

The other students looked at Harry, but Harry himself looked confused and turned his attention to Glacier.

“What the…?”

“That buzzing you just heard is what they have to listen to when you decide to censor something.” said Officer McFinn before Glacier could say anything.

“Well, that sucks.” said Harry.

“Tell us about it.” said the twins.

“Hang on, I thought Harry could understand that buzzing?” said Hermione.

“Oh he did, I just cast Muffliato around him for that moment.” said Glacier with a quick twitch of his lips.

“So... nothing was stopping the books; it was just stopping him…” said Ron.

“I love loopholes.” said Mr. Weasley quietly with a smile.

“You were sitting where?” asked Bill looking at his sister in shock.

“Here.” said Ginny standing up and leaning against Harry’s leg, a cheeky smile on her face.

“You’d better go back to your family before they send a bunch of hexes over here.” said Remus with a laugh.

“She’s going to be the death of me.” said Harry with a small smile. “So worth it.” he added in a whisper.

Sirius blinked, turned in his seat and peeked under Harry’s shirt.

“Get off me.” said Harry shoving Sirius aside.

“He’d better not have a tattoo on his chest.” said Mrs. McFinn. “You’re not old enough to get one.”

“I don’t have one...yet.” said Harry quietly with a faint smile.
“What are you thinking of getting?” asked Sirius with a gleeful smile.

“I don’t know yet.” said Harry. “But I want one.”

Second paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Yeah, go with that one.” said Sirius.

“I personally have a Chinese Fireball on my back.” said Charlie.

“When did you get this?” said Mrs. Weasley looking stunned.

“When I first went to the reserve, mum, it’s tradition. You get the first dragon species you managed to stun on your own tattooed on your back, it could have been worse…” said Charlie.

“You could have been fried.” said Percy looking at his older brother in shock.

“Nah, I could have had a Swedish Short-Snout, they’re awesome but I want my favorite dragon on me.” said Charlie with a smile. “And between the two of them, Fireball’s are way prettier.”

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Ron blushed as a few girls giggled.

“I’m not getting a Pygmy Puff…” said Ron darkly. “If anything…I dunno…but sure as bloody hell won’t be a Pygmy Puff.”

Third paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“And you say that in front of her?” said Mrs. McFinn with a giggle. “Whatever she does to you for that little remark, you’ve earned it.”

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Harry saluted but Ginny only rolled her eyes. “If we snog in public, then it’s our business, not yours.”

“Oh, it becomes ours, ‘cause we’ll hurt the one snogging you.” said Fred.
“Friendly warning there, mate.” said George with a pointed look over to Harry.

Harry saluted again.

Dialogue line.

“Fair point.” said Charlie.

“Stuff it.” said Ron.

Fourth paragraph, third sentence, fourth comma.

Mr. and Mrs. Weasley looked at each other fondly.

“At least he’s a romantic.” said Leroy.

End of fourth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“I didn’t do it!” said Harry quickly.

Dialogue line.

“Oh, just because you didn’t have a public boyfriend in your fifth year.” said Ginny.

“What do you mean ‘public’?” asked Hermione confusedly.

“Ron.” said Ginny pointing to her older brother. “You two have been dating, whether you know it or not, for years.” said Ginny. “The only person who didn’t know other than you was the giant squid.”

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Fifth paragraph.

“Didn’t even want to keep up the appearance it seems.” said Sirius with a nudge to his godson.

“Who says I’m not, it sounds like I’m doing the more important acting.” said Harry. “Last thing I need is for Draco to go skulking off to Voldemort with information.”

Dialogue line.
“Doesn’t sound like it was a hobby.” said Ron.

“Miss Granger, have you ever had time to research how modern spells are created?” asked Dumbledore with a twinkling smile. “Dark Arts or otherwise?”

“ Spells are created by first researching Latin and studying various wand movements, once you find the appropriate wand movement, then the spell is thus…” recited Hermione.

“Oh please, someone stop her.” said Snape covering his eyes. “Your own words girl…”

“Yes, Latin is where we get most of the incantations for our spells, and wand movements are generally divided into seven different forms and figures, there is still quite a bit more that is involved. Do you know what that is?” asked Dumbledore, his smile still on his face.

Hermione thought for a moment, “Well, really, that should be enough, the incantation, and the movement…”

“For established spells, ones that have been pounded into perfection, it is all that is needed. But crude spells, ones that are at the birth of their creation needs a bit more. An idea, as it were.” said Dumbledore.

“What do you mean?” asked Hermione.

“You need to mentally tell your wand what you want to do.” said Lionus looking over to Hermione.

“You need to have a desire, and while you need to create the incantation and find the wand movements, your wand needs to trust you to know what you’re doing, if it doesn’t trust you…you can’t do it. As the adage goes, the path to hell was paved with good intentions.” said Dumbledore.

“How can a wand think?” asked Hermione with a look of disbelief.

“Set the argument aside for a bit,” said Hawkeye with a smirk. “Now, if you were to want to come up with a brand-new spell, say…a flaming rose…do you think you could do that?”

Harry looked over to Hawkeye quickly.

“Wouldn’t that be just finding a Firerose?” asked Neville. “There’s some in Greenhouse three…”

“No lad, right from your wand, but points for that…do you think you can do that?” asked Hawkeye.

“I suppose I could…” said Hermione with an air of determination.

“Then that’s your homework.” said Hawkeye. “No, no…sit back down, do that later, let’s get on with the day.”

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Well, it certainly doesn’t say ‘Half-Blood Princess’ does it?” said Lee.
Snape’s eye twitched slightly.

“Yeah, you can’t be the Captain of the Gobstones team if you look happy…must be from all the stink juice that comes up and squirts you in the face.” said Dean.

“Doesn’t fit.” said Harry. “Maybe someone with Potion awards or…” he stopped suddenly and leaned back in his chair, a thoughtful look on his face.

“You alright, Harry?” asked Sirius.

“You figured it out didn’t you? That’s the face you make you figure it out…who is it?” asked Ron quickly and excitedly.

“I’m…I’m going to wait, and see if I’m right.” said Harry.

“Aww…” said the students.

“Don’t know about that, in my family, if you’re born into the Black family, you’re of the mindset that you’re all Black.” said Sirius. “Especially if your last name is Black. She would have to be the Half-Blood-whatever-mum’s-maiden-name-was.”

Snape snickered quietly to himself.
“Where did you pull that one out of?” said Harry with a laugh.

“Have to give him that, sweetheart.” said Officer McFinn. “I taught him myself, and I taught him how to spot a lot of things, including the gender of a writer when it’s not specified.”

Hermione looked down.

“Have fun.” said Harry and Ron together.

Hermione folded her arms and frowned.

“We’re teasing Hermione, but you’re wrong.” said Harry.

“That’s where you should have started!” said Moody throwing his hands up into the air.

“And we don’t know what that spell did.” said a seventh year Slytherin.

“Just know that it’s really bad.” said another Slytherin student.
“Every Saturday, Ron, every Saturday.” said Harry.

Dialogue line.

“Can’t say…if it went all that badly, I don’t blame him.” said Harry quietly.

Ninth paragraph, first sentence.

Sirius smiled brightly.

“At least he’s nice about it.” said Remus.

“I was nice about it!” said Sirius indignantly.

“Bragging about who you were taking out for a long walk along the lake? Every five minutes? You weren’t nice.” said Remus.

End of ninth paragraph.

“Most likely.” said Snape with a sneer.

Tenth paragraph.

Dialogue set.

Eleventh paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Oh, no…” said Mrs. Weasley worriedly.

Dialogue line.

Twelfth paragraph.

Thirteenth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Fourteenth paragraph.

“Where’s the party?” said Rudolph with a chuckle.
“That’s why I did.” said Harry.

“Pretty big word to use so late in the evening.” said Dr. Clark. “And by someone who might be a little tipsy.”

“We all know Sybill.” said McGonagall quietly.

“Draco.” said Harry at once.
“Damn it!” hissed Harry.

“How about sneaking in and trying to find out who was celebrating in there?” said Harry with a groan.

Sirius snorted but recovered when Mrs. McFinn sent him a glare. “Easy there, cub.”

“Woah…seriously?” asked Fred.
“That doesn’t happen.” said George.

“He tells us that we shouldn’t be causing problems,” said Fred.

“But he never says he doesn’t want us to visit!” said George.

“Wonder how those visits go?” said Fred.

End of dialogue set.

“Oh…then yeah…” said the twins. “We could see him not wanting to listen to someone lament about that all the time.”

Dialogue set.
Dialogue line.
Dialogue line.
Dialogue set.
Flitwick shook his head.

Dialogue set.

Harry rolled his eyes.

Twentieth paragraph.

Dialogue set.

“Probably because they’ve been predicting it for almost six years.” said Harry quietly.

Twenty-first paragraph.

Dialogue set, first sentence.

“Firenze doesn’t much care for rumors about Seers.” said Dumbledore with a small smile.

“Where did he and Tempest go anyway?” asked Katie.

“I’m not altogether sure.” said Dumbledore. “But as far as I know, they are both on the grounds.”

End of dialogue set.
Dumbledore smiled.

Dialogue set.

“Take a guess what happened.” said Hannah quiet voice.

Twenty-third paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dumbledore’s eyes flashed open wider and he sent Harry a fearful glance.

Harry sat in silence for a moment and then looked at the book in disbelief. “…What?”

Snape himself took a deep breath and let it out slowly, from the way the boy tensed up, this was not going to go well.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, first sentence.

“Can’t see him getting any tips from an interview between you and Dumbledore.” said Leroy looking at Harry and Snape quickly. He seemed to be mentally debating about which way this was going to play out, despite not quite knowing what was the importance of such a statement.

End of dialogue set.

Twenty-fourth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Twenty-fifth paragraph.

Sirius sat confused for a moment, but then the answer came to him in a flash, and then it came to Remus, Rudolph, and Leroy.

Dumbledore stood up and walked over to Snape, and stood in front of the Potions Master, his wand in his hand facing the bowl’s occupants. “Do not make me have to fight you.”

With a nudge of his foot, Harry brought his bag out from under the bowl, reached down and snatched a small pouch from within and threw it on the floor. A large puff of black smoke erupted from the contact it made with the floor, smothering the entire space in darkness.

In the briefest moment, Dumbledore felt a whoosh go past him and a shout of pain came from where Severus was sitting. Dumbledore waved his wand, clearing the black smoke instantly.
Harry, was standing over a fallen Severus who was cradling his face, his nose was bleeding and his eye would no doubt be black come a few hours’ time. The young man did not have his wand in his hand, (as Dumbledore still had it in his pocket) but his fists were clenched.

“I know where that’s going,” he pointed over to the book in Officer McFinn’s hands. “And I want to hurt you so bad because of it. But he’s got a reason to have you here.” said Harry gesturing back to Dumbledore with his thumb, “and yet I think I’m deserving of that...so far.” he turned on his heel and went back to the bowl, ignoring Dumbledore completely. “Sit down you lot, let’s get this done with. I want to know the whole story.”

The students stared, fixated at what had just occurred and then began talking excitedly amongst themselves.

“He just went right past Dumbledore; do you think he let him?” asked a Slytherin third year.

“What is he talking about?” asked a first year Gryffindor.

“I dunno…but that was wicked!” said another first year.

“Was not expecting Snape to get punched like that…bloody awesome!” said Fred.

Twenty-sixth paragraph.

The school was silent.

“Move on.” said Harry darkly.

Glacier looked at Harry, his gaze unwavering.

Twenty-seventh paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Uh…did he just tell a teacher to do something?” asked Fred, his voice shaky as he tried to look anywhere else but Snape.

“T-That he did.” said George.

They both disliked Snape on a personal level and thought he was a right snarky bat…but to do that…to be involved in the murder of someone like that…they weren’t sure how to feel about it. On one hand, he was employed by Voldemort and he was now on their side…it was a mistake that he made and would have to live with it. Now they wondered if they should just let Harry take care of in the way of punishment, or should they offer their services? They just didn’t know, was it their place to even voice their opinion?
Sirius pulled Harry close to him and said quietly. “Most civilized people wait to be allowed to enter before they enter.”

“I better hit the reboot button on my brain.” said Harry, no smile on his face, despite the joke he made.

“Not the emotion he’s feeling right now.” said Remus, his eyes never leaving Snape’s body as the Potion’s Master got back into his seat.

“Hard to forget that.” said a third year Hufflepuff quietly.

“Oh no…” said Mrs. McFinn.
“That won’t work on him.” said Rudolph.

“And nothing ruffles his feathers.” said Fred.

“We’ve tried.” said George.

“Had to have been recent, you would have seen me a lot earlier if it had been a while ago.” said Harry.

No one said anything, it was not their place to do so.

“Well, you’re doing a great job so far.” said Dr. Clark easily. “You’re not screaming… I would be.”

“‘Terrible mistake’ doesn’t begin to cover it.” said Rudolph darkly.
“That doesn’t change the fact that it was someone’s loved one…someone’s baby,” said Mrs. McFinn softly.

Snape looked down at the floor. “That it does not.”

Everyone looked at the man in shock, they weren’t expecting him to speak just yet.

“I will atone for that and other sins for the rest of my life,” said Snape quietly.

“Better believe you will.” said Sirius darkly, fingering his wand.

“And it’s going to be a long atonement…got it?” said Harry looking between the men in the bowl and his uncles.

The adults in and outside the bowl turned and stared, as well as the students.

“I’m going to live the rest of my life without them, you’re going to spend that long at least thinking about it as well…understand?” said Harry looking fixedly at Snape.

“Harry…” said Sirius quietly as Snape stared back at the youth.

“Don’t get me wrong…I’m pissed as bloody f@cking hell, but if I’m going to live with his ‘mistake’, so is he.” said Harry with a glowering look over to the Potions Master. “So you better be prepared for a long, emotionally painful existence.”

Snape looked down at the floor, a frown on his face.

“But don’t expect me to take time out of my precious life to give you hell for it once these books are done.” said Harry. “Not worth putting my life on pause for you.”

Snape looked up swiftly.

“We’ve talked about his, I know.” said Harry waving his hand dismissively.
“And that opinion has not changed, I daresay.” said Dumbledore.

“Something that’s not going to be good.” said Harry.

“Always hate that line…” said the twins.

“Ooh, not the line we thought it was…that was the ‘Super’ line…we’ve never reached that one.” said the twins cringing. “We thought it was just the ‘That’s enough’ line. We tend to cross that one just by a toe length.”

“Don’t have to ask the boy twice…unless of course it involves Snape that evening.” said Moody.
“Hell no.” said Harry quickly.

Dumbledore shook his head.

“King’s X.” said Harry holding up crossed fingers.

“What?” asked Sirius.

“Old fashioned way of saying, ‘I’ve got my finger’s crossed’ and ‘You cannot touch me.’” said Dumbledore. “Though…where he heard it…”

“Old Looney Tunes short.” said Officer McFinn with a smirk.

“What’s he going to do now?” asked Ron quietly.

“You’d think he would, as nosy as you lot are.” said Sirius.
“In case you get your feet wet.” said Harry sneering.

Mrs. Weasley and Mrs. McFinn both placed a hand over their mouths.

“He sometimes leaves the castle for a drink.” said Flitwick. “We would not think it something out of the ordinary.”

“But I have a feeling, that despite this Horcrux, something awful is going to happen.” said Sprout.

“I feel the same way.” said McGonagall.

“Well, then we don’t know where he all goes.” said Flitwick.
“Or missing a body part?” said Dr. Clark cringing.

“I find watching her remove people from her establishment to be oddly entertaining. The excuses they come up with are absolutely charming.” said Dumbledore with a faint smile.

“You should see when she gets help, it’s even better.” said Ginny with a giggle.
Poisoned Cups

“Let’s get this done with already!” said Harry tiredly as he was running his hand through his hair.

First paragraph, fourth sentence.

“At least you’re already on the ground, I don’t want to think about you two accidentally falling off that in the dark.” said Madam Pomfrey. “Though I’m sure Albus could latch onto Potter and apparate back onto the cliff before they hit the ground.”

End of first paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Could use a bit more grass…” said Fred.

“A bench.” said George.

“Maybe not so close to the cliff, falling rocks and all.” said Fred.

“Perhaps we also shouldn’t be doing this picnic at night, that might help make the decision a little easier.” said the twins together.

Dialogue line.

“Who the hell picked that spot?” said Bill.

Dialogue set, third sentence.

“Well, that sounds a little better.” said Bill.

Dialogue set, seventh sentence.

“Man, that’s twisted, I hate hearing about his childhood days.” said Ron with a cringe.

Dialogue set.

Second paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Don’t say ‘final’ destination.” said Hermione covering her eyes with a whimper.
“If I’m getting hit in the face with ocean spray, I’m already wet.” said Harry.

“Hold up, can you swim a little better since the lake?” asked Sirius.

“I don’t think I was practicing all that much…I know I haven’t done any since we’ve started this.” said Harry.

“Here’s hoping you don’t kill yourself before you get to the ruddy cave.” said Remus his hands clenching and unclenching.

“Not the way I would have gone in.” said Glacier with a small smile.

“How would you have done it?” asked Colin.

“He would have created an ice bridge.” said Lionus.

“Much more dignified.” said Glacier. “And drier.”

“Tell me you know a warming charm.” said Madam Pomfrey rubbing the bridge of her nose.

“Tell me you use it.” said McGonagall mimicking Madam Pomfrey’s actions.
“You have known to be sensitive to magic, but I think the coldness has a bit bigger part to play in it.” said Dumbledore with a kind smile.

“I’d rather tackle nature-made obstacles.” said Seamus holding up a hand.

“Thank Merlin he’s there, I’m thinking this adventure would have been over right quick.” said Leroy.

“Yeah.” said Harry.

Both Neville and Seamus turned a faint pink.

“Never mind.” said Harry.

“You didn’t use a warming charm!” scolded Madam Pomfrey.

“Going to catch hypothermia.” muttered Madam Pomfrey quietly.

“Crude actions by Voldemort…sounds normal.” said Kingsley shaking his head.
“He had more style than what most people give him credit for.” said Dumbledore.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

“What can you give a door?” asked Dennis.

“A knock.” said Luna with a dreamlike smile.

The twins stared at her and then started to chuckle. “That was kind of good…” said Fred.

“Was not expecting that.” said George.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, first sentence.

Dumbledore shook his head.

“I don’t know, seems to fall in line with how I think he is.” said Mrs. McFinn.

End of dialogue set.

“It’s enough for me sometimes.” said Dr. Clark touching his eye absentely.

Dialogue line.

Sirius rubbed the back of Harry’s neck.

“Most people aren’t keen for it.” said Rudolph.

“Except my cousin…” said Leroy.

“Let’s not talk about him, he’s creepy…” said Rudolph.

“What?” asked Ernie.

“Don’t ask!” said Rudolph waving his hands quickly.

Dialogue line.

“Don’t you dare, Albus!” said Professor McGonagall loudly.
“Can’t you transfigure a rock into a living thing? Use that!” said Dr. Clark.

“I would have something to say about that, but compared to the either of them getting hurt, go with Sam’s idea.” said Charlie quickly.

Dialogue line.

Thirteenth paragraph, first sentence.

“My dear boy, you are far too important to be wasting on such a crude means of entry.” said Dumbledore.

End of thirteenth paragraph.

Students and adults alike flinched.

“Oh my goodness.” said Mrs. Weasley, a hand covering her mouth.

Dialogue set, second sentence.

Harry absentmindedly brought his wrists to his chest.

End of dialogue set.

Fourteenth paragraph.

Dialogue set, first sentence, third comma.

“I’d rather neither of you go in there, but Dumbledore going first is the best option.” said Madam Pomfrey. She looked over to Flitwick with a worried expression. “I’m going to hate these next few chapters, aren’t I?”

“I don’t think any of us is going to be overly thrilled.” said Flitwick.

End of dialogue set.

Fifteenth paragraph.

Dumbledore and Chief Hawkeye smiled to themselves.

Dialogue line.

“What if there were puddles? Would that rule apply?” asked Dennis.
“These events haven’t happened yet, who knows what could or would happen.” said Mr. Weasley.

Sixteenth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

“And the creepy thing is, he’s been in some scary places, and he wants out of there!” said Justin.

Dialogue line.

“Uh oh…he’s not doing it himself…” said Sirius.

“It’s one of those… ‘Learning’ sessions he does.” said Remus.

“What do you mean?” asked Dr. Clark.

“Well, when he would cover Transfiguration in our school days, he would let you theorize about different things, and then he would let you go and give it a shot. Sometimes it would work out, other times, you were just barely saved from being a smear on the wall.” said Sirius.

“He would throw up a protective spell around you, but the shock would be ingrained in your brain…and everyone else in the room’s as well.” said Remus.

Dialogue line.

Seventeenth paragraph.

“And I hope that nothing bad happens.” said Sirius covering his ears.

“Oi, don’t expect me to relay it to you!” said Remus pulling on the man’s arm.

Eighteenth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Something we don’t want to disturb I suspect.” said Dumbledore thoughtfully.

Dialogue line.

“That as well.” said Dumbledore.
“Well, thanks…for mentioning that before.” said Harry with a dry chuckle.

“Not what I was aiming for, I don’t think.” said Harry.

“No thanks, I’ve seen enough!” said Ron holding up his hands. “I’ll wait for you outside.”

“I don’t believe even that would be a safe option.” said Dumbledore. “The moment that we had left the castle, I firmly believe that the safest place in my mind once we had left my office…is by my side.”

“We’re going to be ‘very unfortunate’, aren’t we?” said Fred.

“I fear so.” said George sagely.

“That ‘very unfortunate’ scenario is looking more and more likely.” said Lee.
“Oh Merlin!” said Leroy covering his eyes.

“Or at least get the brake lights checked.” said Dr. Clark quietly.

“Please no blood toll…please no blood toll.” chanted Percy.

A few students leaned forward to try and look down at the shoes the Headmaster was wearing. Dumbledore noticed this, laughed quietly and lifted the bottom of his robes slightly, revealing a pair of black buckled shoes.

“They are my favorite pair, I have yet to find others like them.” said Dumbledore with a warm smile.

“Wonder why.” said Padma quietly.

“A few students leaned forward to try and look down at the shoes the Headmaster was wearing. Dumbledore noticed this, laughed quietly and lifted the bottom of his robes slightly, revealing a pair of black buckled shoes.

“They are my favorite pair, I have yet to find others like them.” said Dumbledore with a warm smile.

“Wonder why.” said Padma quietly.

“Can’t see him visiting anyone.” said Charlie.
“Unless the boat is a trap.” said Moody.

“While he has a…I suppose you could say ‘soft spot’ for Hogwarts, I don’t believe he was ever overly fond of Octi’s predecessors. Especially not after one had tried to apparently drown him.” said Dumbledore.

“Seriously? That happened?” said a first year in shock.

“What misguided fool stopped it?” said Dean.

“Have to protect the students.” said Lionus. “No matter how good it would feel in retrospect.”

Sirius and Rudolph blinked. “You know, if anyone other than Dumbledore was saying that, I would feel insulted for you.”

Harry rolled his eyes.

“Well, we feel better now.” said Rudolph.
“I don’t, what if the boat sinks because you have two powerful wizards right there?” said Mrs. McFinn.

End of twenty-sixth paragraph.

Twenty-seventh paragraph.

“I’m scared.” said a first year Ravenclaw girl.

“Join the club.” said a third year Hufflepuff.

Twenty-eighth paragraph.

Twenty-ninth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“I’m hoping that it’s just a reflection.” said Angelina.

Dialogue line.

Thirtieth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Thirty-first paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Inferi.” said Lionus with a scowl.

“That’s more his style.” said Remus.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Alright future me, remember that.” said Harry looking up at the ceiling.

Dialogue set, second sentence.

“You’ve never watched a Doctor Who episode…or anything Sci-Fi.” said Dr. Clark.
“You-Know-Who’s afraid of the dark?” said Colin.

“So…if you want to keep him out, then you shouldn’t have a night-light?” said Dennis quietly. “I’ll have to remember that.”

End of dialogue set.

Thirty-second paragraph.

“Good man.” said Moody.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, second sentence.

“Somehow, I don’t think they’re going to be like that one old man on the old tv shows where he waves his cane and shouts at kids to get off his lawn.” said Chief Hawkeye.

End of dialogue set.

“For my own sanity, so I don’t have to unwind words while dodging danger, just spell it out.” said Harry a soft groan.

“‘Unwind words’ and ‘dodging danger’?” said Sirius.

“Besides, aren’t you smarter than what you are letting on half the time?” said Hermione quickly.

“Doesn’t mean I want to sort out a riddle while I’m trying not to get hexed or eaten, thank you very much.” said Harry.

Dialogue set.

Ginny blushed.

Dialogue line.

“You are way too cheerful for the situation.” said Blaise.

Thirty-third paragraph.
“Normally, I don’t want to be told the same thing over and over again, but in this case, tell me over and over again.” said Harry.

“Are those memories?” said Ron leaning back slightly.

“Can memories be green?” said Hermione.

“Doesn’t make me feel any braver.” said Neville with a shiver.

“Don’t touch it!” said Dr. Clark and Harry together.

“One of the first rules in chemistry, you don’t touch something you don’t know what it is!” said Harry covering his eyes.

“So…how do you get past it?” asked a seventh-year Gryffindor.

“What, no!!!” shouted most of the students and a few of the adults.
“Tell me neither of you drink it!” said Madam Pomfrey.

“Wait, how are you supposed to drink the potion if you can’t scoop it up?” said a seventh year Ravenclaw.

“Dumbledore will find a way, but I really hope he doesn’t do it, either of them.” said another Ravenclaw student.

Dialogue line.
Dialogue line.
Dialogue line.
Dialogue line.
Dialogue line.

“Can’t see why he wouldn’t want to kill the person that dared to attack him.” said Bill.

Thirty-ninth paragraph.
Dialogue line.

Chuckles flitted across the room quietly.

Dialogue set, first sentence.

“Now that sounds more like it.” said Harry.

End of dialogue set.

“Hopefully he’s in for a rude awakening.” said Hermione looking nervous.

Fortieth paragraph.
Dialogue set.

The school was silent and they all looked over to Harry in shock.

After a moment of silence, Harry reached over to Mrs. McFinn and whispered in her ear. After a moment, she whispered back and then Harry looked over to Dumbledore and said: “Je ne comprends pas”

Dumbledore’s shocked look turned towards Harry, after a moment he chuckled and then smiled. “Future vous avez fait la promesse, Harry. Vous ne pouvez pas revenir sur votre parole maintenant.”
Harry looked over to Mrs. McFinn who whispered once more in his ear. After she was through he settled back into his spot and looked over to Dumbledore. “I’m wishing I didn’t agree to that in the future.”

Forty-first paragraph.

“If so…then you are twisted.” said Dr. Clark.

“I myself hope that is not the sole reason I brought him.” said Dumbledore, his face pale the smile gone from his lips.

Dialogue line.

Forty-second paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Yeah, well, we thought danger as in Dark Wizard and something like that…not force feed you poison.” said Fred.

“Kind of a difference there.” said George.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“In a dark cave where you need to be able to sense magical signatures…you want to remove the one that can find them? Yeah, you’re not as valuable.” said Harry sarcastically.
“No thanks, how about we go get a drink somewhere else.” said Sirius.

“This peace won’t last long.” said Professor Sprout.

“Baby, come here,” said Mrs. McFinn tugging on Harry’s elbow. Harry switched with Dr. Clark, and sat beside Mrs. McFinn. She brought him close her to her and held him tight.

“Are you alright?” asked Harry quietly.

“I’m more worried about you at this point.” said Mrs. McFinn.

The students all began to cringe in their seats.
“I can’t believe that I actually want to be censored out of this.” said Fred.

“I agree.” said George.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Fifty-first paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Students left and right began to make a break for the door, wanting to escape the torture their headmaster was enduring. Soon, only the Weasleys, a few members of the D.A, the Rangers, the people in the bowl, Rudolph, Leroy, Madam Pomfrey, the Order and the Heads of the Houses were left. The other teachers had left to go and keep an eye on the students that had vacated.

“I’m touched, that they could not bear to hear me being hurt…and that Harry would have to force to endure that. For that Harry I am very sorry.” said Dumbledore solemnly.

“Wasn’t much of a choice there.” said Harry from Mrs. McFinn’s loving embrace. “Someone had to drink it, and I don’t think you were willing to put me through anything that could hurt me.”

“That I could not, but I should have taken into account just how you would feel if something were to go horribly wrong.” said Dumbledore, his eyes downcast, “And from what I gather, we are far from done with this.”

Dialogue set.

Fifty-second paragraph.

Dialogue line.

No one was speaking, they wanted it to end and they could not bring themselves to make any sort of levity of the situation.

Dialogue line.

Fifty-third paragraph.

Mrs. McFinn’s grip on Harry tightened.

Dialogue set.

Fifty-fourth paragraph.
McGonagall abandoned her seat beside Sprout and went over to sit beside the Headmaster. In one swift motion, she took his veined hand in hers and refused to let go.

Dumbledore covered his eyes with his free hand. “I am so sorry, Harry. So...so sorry. I should never let anyone see this sort of thing.”

Harry flinched horribly. Glacier came from behind him and patted the back of his neck, “This won’t happen now...it’s just a story at this point.”

“I can’t lose anyone else, please don’t let me lose anything else!” whispered Harry, his face buried in his hands.

“You won’t lose him, not now, not at this point.” said Glacier quietly.
Snape leaned forward looking thoughtful. Was the goblet enchanted thanks to the potion, or was the potion staining his lips the cause of that?

“He’s thinking on his feet again.” said Moody quietly. “Here’s hoping that he keeps it up.”

“And you now touched the water.” said Remus softly.

“Way to help him drink it mate.” said Ron shakily.

Several people shouted in horror.

Then they shouted even louder.

“Get out of there!” shouted Leroy.

“Oh god, oh god, oh god….” said Dr. Clark throwing his hands over his ears.

“Use fire, boy!” shouted Snape.
Dialogue set.

“Fire, dear boy, fire.” said Dumbledore in a whisper.

Sixty-sixth paragraph.

“Beeping is back.” said Fred.

Officer McFinn looked up to Glacier, “It’s watered down. Think he can…”

“We shall see.” said Glacier.

Seventy-seventh paragraph, first sentence, first colon.

Harry quirked a brow, and he looked up at Glacier. “Is that what happened?”

“Is what happened?” asked Ron.

“Do not dwell on it, but yes…” said Glacier.

“I thought he was going to wait a month or so.” said Sirius.

“Seems to have changed his mind.” said Remus.

“I find it amusing that you seem to think that I know what is going to happen in these books.” said Glacier coldly.

End of seventy-seventh paragraph.

“I hate this, I never liked movies like this…imagining you in a scenario like that does not help.” said McFinn.

“Not sure I’ll ever watch something like that either.” said Harry.

Sixty-eighth paragraph.

Sixty-ninth paragraph, first sentence, first comma.

“Oh thank god.” said Dr. Clark.

End of sixty-ninth paragraph.

Seventieth paragraph.

Seventy-first paragraph.
“That was terrifying.” said Ernie.

Seventy-second paragraph.
Dialogue line.
Dialogue line.
“I hope you bring the Headmaster to me.” said Madam Pomfrey.

Seventy-third paragraph.
Dialogue line.
Dialogue line.
“No shit…” said Harry quietly. “But only at that moment.”

Dialogue line.
Seventy-fourth paragraph.
Dialogue set.
“Up to when I panicked.” said Harry.

Dialogue line.
Dialogue line.
“Don’t cut his arm again, he can’t handle another wound.” said Madam Pomfrey sharply.

Dialogue line.
Dialogue line.
Seventy-fifth paragraph.
“How are you going to swim with him like that? I don’t think you have that sort of skill yet…” said Dr. Clark.

“Here’s hoping I can just apparate…though why we didn’t do that to get over there as opposed to swimming across…” said Harry.

End of chapter
Harry’s eyes widened with shock and he looked down at the floor. He felt very touched by what Dumbledore, or at least the future Dumbledore had said. He took a deep breath and leaned back in the bowl.

“I know that this is getting old, but we are going to cut it off here.” said Glacier.

“No, I want to make sure that Dumbledore gets out of this alright.” said Harry, his voice firm.

Glacier looked down at Harry and then up at Officer McFinn. Officer McFinn didn’t look up at anyone and kept his gaze down at the book, what he did notice was the glimmering figure of the man’s hands were tight on the book’s cover. That little sign did not bode well for the young man sitting beneath him.

But it was his choice, he could not shelter him forever and he would have to cross that bridge with him when it would finally arrive.

“Very well.” said Glacier. “I think we should keep the students out for as long as possible, I would rather this not become more…hysterical.”

“I agree.” said Dumbledore calmly.

Lonus looked over at the man, he seemed to be…resigned…did he have the same feeling that he himself had?

That Dumbledore, the longtime viewed hero and hope in the battle of good versus evil…was going to die?
“So, you did have to swim with him…I’m impressed.” said Dr. Clark. “I’m terrified at the very thought, but impressed.”

“Thank goodness it worked alright.” said Mr. Weasley releasing a held in breath.

“Never hurts to be prepared for the worst.” said Moody. “And this is about as bad as it can get.”

“Here’s hoping you didn’t leave a rib somewhere along the way.” Mr. Weasley.

“Considering the freezing cold water he had gone swimming through, what he had just drunk in the last hour, and going for another swim after all of that…he’s absolutely not on top form.” said Fred, his voice quiet.

“Well, I don’t feel bad about joking now.” said Fred.

“Now I do.” said Fred swiftly.
“Good, bring him to me!” said Madam Pomfrey.

“Have to say, when it comes to unknown potions… I could think of no one to go to other than Severus. Despite what we learned in the previous chapters…” said Remus.

“After what I heard before we left the school, can’t quite say that I would be all that eager to go and seek him out.” said Harry.

“My kind of lady.” said Charlie with a smirk.

Bill rolled his eyes.

“Like you weren’t looking at those slippers in Stylin’ Sorceress this past Christmas, thinking about getting them for Fleur?” said Charlie gleefully in a hushed tone.

“Don’t need to, she’s already got a pair.” said Bill absentmindedly and covered his face which had a fierce blush.

“Wow big brother… wow.” said Charlie snickering.

“Shut up…” hissed Bill as his mother looked over to the pair of them curiously.

“See what?” said Ron.
“Worry about yourself first, Albus!” said Madam Pomfrey.

“I know that this hasn’t happened yet, but my apologies.” said Dumbledore.

“You’re wrong, this won’t happen period.” said Harry. “You’re not going anywhere near that potion.”

“Harry…” said Dumbledore softly.

“We’re going to take what we learn about where the Horcruxes are, and we are going to get them another way.” said Harry. “Hopefully they show us all of them and not just one or two.”

Dumbledore sat in silence for a moment, but then nodded.

“As I’ve already demonstrated once that night that I can do that spell.” said Harry, his eyes straying to Ron and Hermione.

“I’m sure we’re alright Harry, remember, you gave us that Lucky potion.” said Hermione gently.

“I’ve got two people on look out at least, so they hopefully rose the alarm without getting themselves killed.” said Harry.

Twelfth paragraph.

“Yeah, that mark tends to do that to a person.” said Mr. Weasley somberly.

Thirteenth paragraph, second sentence.

“Please…let it still be in effect.” prayed Harry.

End of thirteenth paragraph.

Harry’s grip on his pants tightened until his knuckles were white.

Fourteenth paragraph, second sentence.

“Beats slamming into the protective wards like a bug on a windshield.” said Harry with a dry chuckle.

End of fourteenth paragraph.

Fifteenth paragraph.

Sixteenth paragraph.

Harry released a sigh of relief, but then he blinked and looked over to Dumbledore in worry.

“It seems you and I have come to the same conclusion.” said Dumbledore.

Dialogue set.

Seventeenth paragraph.

Something bad is going to happen.” said Hermione shaking horribly. “Something really bad is going to happen.”

Dialogue set.

“Wouldn’t it be easier to just cast a Disillusionment Charm on yourself and then take you down to the Dungeons?” said Ron.
There was no question in Harry’s mind or heart, he was going to defend Dumbledore with everything he had, it didn’t matter that this hadn’t happened yet, but he wasn’t going to let anything happen to the Headmaster, not with him there.

Dumbledore however was of a different mindset. There he was, in a year’s time, weakened, wounded and they were in the most precarious of spots. Harry was only a boy, there was so much left to be done and he himself did not know the years’ worth of knowledge that he must have accumulated, but he knew that he could not let Harry fall. Harry had such a promising future ahead of him, so many doors opened to him, so many paths to take as a career…no…he could not let
Harry fight for him, he prayed that he did something to keep the boy safe.

McGonagall turned to look at the Headmaster, “You must have petrified him…but why? Granted, he’s just a boy, but he’s someone who can possibly fight with you…”

Dumbledore closed his eyes and bowed his head. It would seem that it would be his final act, he hoped it was enough.

Harry on the other hand was taking deep breaths and releasing it in a loud hiss.

“I’m gonna kill that little mother…”

Mrs. McFinn reached over and took his clenched fist. “This hasn’t happened yet, this won’t happen…right?”

“Keep breathing deep, cub…Draco’s not going to do anything.” said Sirius.

Twenty-third paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Twenty-fourth paragraph.
“And he forgets the broom.” said Moody with a snort.

“He’s not the fastest broom on the pitch sometimes.” said Harry.

“No…I think he knew.” said Harry, his eyes sweeping over to Dumbledore. “He gave you enough rope to hang yourself…or save yourself. Congrats, you made a noose, better not have made two.”

“If they are indeed my guards, they will not get out unscathed.” said Dumbledore with a hint of pride.

“No you mustn’t!” said Percy looking horrified.

Dumbledore placed a pale, trembling hand over his mouth. He hoped that…no, it was going to go this way, he had to be the cruelest man that ever walked the earth for what he was about to put Harry through, again! Though, he highly doubted that this in particular was part of any plan his future-self had come up with.

“And let’s keep it that way.” said Mrs. Weasley.

Ron snickered quietly.
Dialogue line.

“I’ve done more.” said Harry firmly.

Dialogue set, second sentence.

Harry pointed over to Ron and Hermione, his face set in a fierce scowl. “I told you two! I told you!”

“There was no proof!” said Hermione hotly.

“There was enough circumstantial evidence to keep an eye on the damn bastard!”

“Easy sport.” said Officer McFinn.

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

“It sounds more like you’re trying to convince a teacher to give you a better grade on your year-end report.” said Lionus.

Twenty-seventh paragraph.

Dialogue set.

“F*cking Room of Requirement.” said Harry darkly.

Sirius reached over and rubbed the back of Harry’s neck.

Twenty-eighth paragraph.

Dialogue set.

“Don’t be walking him through it!” said the twins together.

Twenty-ninth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“I do not fear death, I have not for quite a few decades.” said Dumbledore quietly.
“It would, to get around the Headmaster’s protections on the school.” said Professor Flitwick.

“Wonder if it’s cause he’s in pain or he was let down.” said Ron in a whisper.

“Not the time Ron.” said Hermione still looking fearful.

“Oh, he was being overdramatic, I’m sure.” said Fred.

“What, is he traveling around in the Tardis?” said Dr. Clark.

“What’s a Tardis?” asked Mr. Weasley.

“You really want to know?” asked Dr. Clark with a smile.

“Sure.” said Mr. Weasley.

“He’s joining us for that Dr. Who marathon.” said Dr. Clark with a look over to Sirius.

“His brain is going to explode.” said Harry.

“Not what I diagnosed him to be.” said Madam Pomfrey. “Distressed, dehydrated, and exhausted, but nothing more than that. If he had almost died, he would have been sent to St. Mungos.”

“Not a bad bit of reasoning.” admitted Moody ruefully.
Harry rolled his eyes and shook his head.

“Good reasoning ended with the cabinet.” said Moody shaking his head.

“He knew.” said Harry.

“Makes sense now, I guess.” said Harry.

Dumbledore only smiled.

Snape shook his head and rubbed his temple. “I don’t remember ever asking for glory…at any time in my dealings with you.”

Draco, who had remained behind, was cringing in his seat. He felt, tainted and unwholesome, he never wanted this, he didn’t want to be like his father in that aspect. Taunting Potter and Weasley was as natural as breathing, but willing to murder? he felt sick to his stomach.
“…Didn’t see that coming.” said Charlie.

“He must have seen something extra than what we did that wasn’t mentioned in the books, cause I didn’t see it either.” said Bill.

“Screw you.” said the oldest Weasley boys.

“Oh, that would work, but as for the necklace, it could have been any female witch that went into the Three Broomsticks.” said Hermione.

“Not if it was ordered by a teacher.” said Harry.

Harry growled as he pulled at his hair, while Hermione turned pale and her mouth was covered with her hands. Ron was glaring fiercely at the floor.

“Gotta be careful with innovated ideas, the enemy will use it to their advantage too.” said Moody.

“We really need to shut up when Malfoy’s around.” said Ron.

“Or at the very least, invent our own language.” said Harry.
“He’s drawing the line at that, defenseless or not.” said Fred.

“Don’t be saying stuff like that.” said George.

Thirty-third paragraph.

Dialogue set.

“Defenseless my ass, wounded or not you can still fight with the best of them without a wand. Always have.” said Moody.

Thirty-fourth paragraph.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, first sentence, first pause.

“Not a very good tasting drink, I would hazard a guess. And not one that I would be willing to travel so far as to partake of.” said Dumbledore with a smile.

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set third sentence.

Mrs. Weasley gripped her husband’s elbow.

End of dialogue set.

“Good men…and women in that particular group.” said Lionus.

Dialogue line.

Thirty-fifth paragraph.

“I don’t think I could stand that.” said Neville. “Being forced to just freak out over something like that.”

“You did, in our first year, sort of.” said Harry darkly, his gaze on the floor. “You were worried about us when we snuck out, and we just left you there till morning. Sorry about that, again.”
“Oh, I fell asleep after a little while, you can still blink and move your eyes. Besides, I forgave you lot years ago…especially after I took all your and Ron’s candy the last Poker game of the year.”

“I’m still hurting from that.” said Ron.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dumbledore shook his head. “I am not the one that has more than one option it would seem.”

Dialogue set.

“Voldemort tended to that.” said Harry. “Always took the time to tell me how clever he was.”

Dialogue line.

“Leave the country then.” said Emmeline Vance, “My sister’s family did that, that haven’t come back, but I still receive correspondence from them.”

Dialogue set.

“Yeah, I could see that.” said Sirius. “Now I hope you have an escape plan.”

Thirty-sixth paragraph.

Dialogue set.

“Please take his help, please take his help.” said Remus quietly.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

“They hid my parents pretty good.” said Hermione quietly.

Thirty-seventh paragraph.

Dialogue set.

“Not sounding like it.” said Leroy.
“Knew it, he can still fight.” said Rudolph.

Harry, however, looked unsure.

“Blast it.” said McGonagall darkly.

“Yeah, like he could ever hope to do that if Dumbledore wasn’t one handed and weak.” said Ron.

Glacier looked down at Harry, “Are you alright?”

“Fine.” said Harry.

Several people couldn’t help but snicker.

“Fenrir.” said Remus and Nightstrike darkly.

“He welcomes everyone but him…someone have a grudge?” asked Sirius.
“No more than the next man.” said Dumbledore reaching over to pat Remus on the back.

Forty-second paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Son of a bitch.” snarled Dr. Clark.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

“Frightened, no. Disgusted, yes.” said Dumbledore with a cold tone.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

“No so tough sounding, are you?” said Fred angrily to the book.

Dialogue line.

“Sick f#cker.” said Sirius.

Forty-third paragraph.

“I’m too boney for his tastes.” said Dumbledore.

Dialogue line.

Forty-fourth paragraph.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue set.

“Hope he’s not.” said Charlie.

Dialogue set, second sentence.

“Someone’s a little coo coo for Coco Puffs.” said Dr. Clark in a whisper to Mrs. McFinn.
“He’s an idiot.” said the adults together.

“And you would be killed on the spot.” said Dumbledore sadly.

Everyone looked over to Snape, not daring to speak. Once more, apparently sensing what was going to happen, Dumbledore stood up and stood directly in front of Snape.

“Let us finish this chapter, and then call it a day.” said Dumbledore, his voice soft, yet firm.

“Why don’t I think Snape’s going to be a knight in shining armor here?” asked Ron quietly.

Harry’s head and eyes snapped up, to look at Snape.
“You greasy haired…” snarled Sirius.

“That’s enough, I think it may be in the student’s best interests if we keep the reading of the rest of this book to few. What do you think Harry?” asked Dumbledore turning to the scarred young man. “After all, this are your books.”

Harry was only staring at Snape, but after a moment he took a deep breath and then looked up to Dumbledore. “How are we going to explain to them that the readings are now over for them?”

“They knew from the beginning that there were going to be moments where they would have to sit out, it is not their choice.” said McGonagall. “Who would you like present?”

Harry looked around the room, “Well, everyone present here, I guess, Hagrid, the Order, the Rangers, the Weasleys, everyone over here…the D.A, McGonagall, Sprout, Flitwick if they can get away…”

“Even Snape and Draco?” said Ron in shock.

“…Even them.” said Harry softly.

“Anyone else you want to bring in?” asked Officer McFinn with a slight smile.

Harry sat in thought. “Yeah, I want to bring an extra person or two…but that’s going to be a bit hard to accept.”

“We also have someone we want to bring, but that will wait till the end of this book.” said Glacier.

“Who would that be?” asked Hermione.

“You’ll have to wait and see.” said Lionus. “But we’re going to have to intensify the guards in the immediate area…he’s not exactly a social butterfly.”
Dropping By for Tea

After a short debate with those involved, it was decided that the readings would be moved to Night’s Rest so that the rest of the students could resume their lessons with the teachers that remained. There was a large lounge in the recesses of Night’s Rest that could house everyone that was going to be there and even a few house-elves, namely Dobby, Winky and Kreacher (to Sirius’ intense disgust) were going as well to help maintain the house for the guests to stay in. There were enough guest rooms for everyone involved and as they were preparing to leave, the pantry was being stocked with food and snacks so that no one would go hungry.

While everyone else stayed at Hogwarts and resumed their lessons (begrudgingly), those who were invited to come were getting some of their belongings ready to be taken to Sirius’ home. Harry with the help of Mrs. McFinn, Dr. Clark, Lionus and Dumbledore were off to visit the few people Harry wanted to see before the last book was read.

When Harry had named the first one of them and had mentioned that he wanted him to come and listen, they weren’t too surprised, since Officer McFinn and Dr. Clark had gone away, the police Inspector Homes was the one person that Harry fell back on when he felt alone. Granted, the McFinns and Dr. Clark were not too thrilled that he allowed Harry to play “Thief in the Night” during the summer, but at least he was there for emotional support.

It was in mid-morning when they arrived back in Surrey. The snow was falling softly to the already snow covered ground, giving the local children more ammunition to pelt their peers with and giving their parents retroactive backaches as they watched it from the warmth of their homes. As the wind whipped around them, Harry brought the faux fur lined cloak closer to his chest to ward off the chill. He had a normal cloak and then his winter cloak on at first, but once the cold winter air hit the Knight Bus passengers with their first local stop, Mrs. McFinn leaned over, while holding onto the armrests of a plush armchair for dear life, to Dumbledore to ask him to make him a thicker cloak. Dumbledore happily obliged and had changed Harry’s winter cloak to a much warmer version.

When they finally reached Inspector Homes’ house, Harry saw the Inspector’s imported black Chevy truck in the drive, he knew the man was home. But he couldn’t see where his wife’s more conservative red Ford Fiesta was at, normally hers was parked right where his truck was at, and he would have to park in the street.

Harry walked right up to the door and gave it a sharp knock with his knuckles, immediately putting them back in his warm pocket when the job was done. “I’m coming, I’m coming.” came a voice from inside the house. Lionus looked around the neighborhood to see if anyone was watching them with interest, thankfully, only the children were present and they were having too much fun to bother with the likes of them.

The door opened, to reveal a tall, slightly muscled man with sandy brown hair and matching stubble on his face. He was wearing a red button down flannel shirt and faded lounge pants that came to almost cover his also red flannel slippers.

“Can I help you?” said the man with a crooked brow as he looked at the young man standing before him. His gaze strayed to the people standing behind him and he noticed two of them for the first time. “Is that…Holly? Sam?”

“Hello Bill.” said Dr. Clark with a smile. “How have you been?”
“How have I been? You’re the one that was missing for how many years! I want to know how you’ve been! I know Harry told me that you and Holly were back in the country, but…to see you in real life….” he chuckled softly as he stepped out into the snow and embraced the doctor and the woman joyfully. “Where’s Harry? Is he here somewhere?”

“He’s standing right beside you.” said Mrs. McFinn with a smile gesturing towards Harry with a gloved hand.

Inspector Homes turned and looked back at Harry, his eyes widened in shock. “No way, kids don’t grow this much…you weren’t quite past the bottom of my ribcage, now you’re at my neck! You’ve exploded, kiddo! And that hair! If Becky saw you, she’d have you in the car to go to the hairdressers in an instant.” he gestured them all to come into the house and out of the cold.

“She doesn’t like long hair?” asked Dr. Clark as he removed his snow covered shoes. “She never struck me as a traditionalist.”

“Oh, I don’t mean that, she’d drag him down there just to see how many different things she could do with it.” said Inspector Homes with a laugh. “She’d have you in ribbons and barrettes for hours.”

“He’s already got a little girl braiding his hair for him.” said Dr. Clark with a snicker.

“Oi!” said Harry sharply.

“And who are these…” said Inspector Homes with a smile towards the other two visitors. But when he saw them, he froze in place.

“Bill? You alright?” asked Dr. Clark.

“I think he just recognized me.” said Lionus with a smirk.

“Not just you sir…but you…” Inspector Homes said with a nod towards Dumbledore. “You I’ve been trying to track down for years.”

“What for?” asked Harry. He was a little perplexed as to how Inspector Homes knew Lionus, but then again, Rangers and Police Officers were on the same side, while most officers didn’t know about them, the higher ups, such as Inspector Homes, they were most likely knowledgeable about the Captain of the Rangers. “How do you know my Headmaster?”

“Headmaster? You’re the Dumbledore Harry’s told me about?” he said in awe still staring at the old man in front room. He leaned over to Harry and whispered, a faint smile on his lips. “You’re right, he looks older than the hills but you wouldn’t think that by seeing him walk and talk.”

“I also would like to know; I was not aware a…police officer was trying to find me.” said Dumbledore pleasantly as he placed his traveling cloak on one of the pegs.

“More for personal reasons, you, sir, scared the crap out of me one day.” said Inspector Homes turning on his heel and leading them down to the spacious lounge, where he was watching a replay of a football match. He walked over and made to click the remote when Sam stopped him.

“Please don’t, it’s been so long.” said Sam with an eager smile as he sat closer to the television and watched it with interest. “God I miss this…”

“Is Becky here?” asked Mrs. McFinn taking a seat beside Harry.
“No, she went to go stay with her mother for a while, she had a nasty fall and needs a bit of help around the house, I don’t expect her back for a few weeks… But back on topic, here Sam, let me turn it up for you, there you go.” said Inspector Homes taking the clicker in hand and upping the volume slightly.

“I would like to ask how it was that I scared you.” said Dumbledore with a warm smile.

“Well, you see, it was ten years or so ago, the grocery store downtown was the victim of a holdup, pretty violent one I remember. Ten blokes, all armed took a whole store hostage; men, women and children all terrified. We couldn’t safely get in there with the hostages, but that didn’t seem to stop one old man from fighting back while he was in there.” said Inspector Homes with a pointed look to Dumbledore.

“And you are certain this was me?” said Dumbledore with a pleased smile.

“Certain as I’m standing here.” said Inspector Homes, he walked over to the bookcase and took out a large book. He flipped it open and stopped at a page towards the back of the book. “This is my special file; these are questions that I never got answers to for almost ten years. Missing persons, unsolved cases and the like, nothing of any sensitive material in here…..but there was one witness at that store that I never got to talk to.”

He held out a photo, there in the picture was Dumbledore, in his arms was a small child bleeding from the shoulder. Harry had to admit, it was very odd to see a picture of Dumbledore, frozen in time compared to the moving pictures that they had in the Wizarding world.

“I wanted to know what happened to the kid you were carrying? We had ambulances there, he could have gotten help right away.” said Inspector Homes looking over to the Headmaster.

Dumbledore only continued to smile and after a moment, he pointed to Harry. “That was the young man from that particular incident. I was not aware I was caught on camera, how careless of me… well, to be fair, I was distracted quite immensely at the time.”

Mrs. McFinn stood up and took the picture, then she went to look at Harry’s shoulder, pulling back the shirt and checked it for scars.

“I don’t even remember this…” said Harry.

“You were only five at the time, Mrs. Figg knew you had gone to the store that day, and you had not returned home by the time that the news had hit. She told me about her fears and I came right away.” said Dumbledore. “Let me say this, I was quite…worried as well when I saw you lying on the floor, injured as you were. Though compared to what I have seen as of late, it was nothing…but no less heartbreaking.”

“Wait, what are you talking about?” asked the Inspector. “When have you been hurt? How did you get hurt, and what did you hurt?”

“You may want to take a seat.” said Lionus gesturing to the large armchair beside the fireplace.

“Is something wrong Harry, are you in trouble?” asked Inspector as he sat down looking at the green eyed teen.

“No, I’m fine, but you may want some tea, I’ll go make some.” said Harry standing up and walking out of the room.

-=-=-=-=-=-=-
It took several hours for Inspector Homes to fully grasp what had been kept from him all those years. He was stunned into silence when magic was brought into the equation and only stared at Harry in shock when Harry promised to explain what he had actually meant in the letters he had sent. Which he was blushingly surprised that the Inspector kept them all that he had received from him.

They didn’t have the time to spell everything out to the man, but they did promise to let him know of everything that had gone on. But it was going to take some time, and they had two other stops that they had to make.

“Why…why come and tell me now?” asked Inspector Homes.

“Well, we are nearing the books’ final phase, and Harry has invited you to come and listen to them.” said Lionus from his seat on the sofa.

“And James…he’s alive?” said the Inspector looking even further stunned. “That’s not possible, I escorted him to the grave myself.”

“He’s sort of a solid kind of ghost.” said Harry lamely.

Inspector Homes looked between everyone present, but he froze on both Harry and Lionus. “This is real…I mean, the whole my table turning into a flamingo was pretty amazing…but this is really real?”

“Yup.” said Harry plainly.

Inspector Homes took a deep breath and released it. “Wow…no wonder he never talked about where you go to school.”

“What?” asked Harry. “‘He’ who?”

Then, the sound of a door opening and the sound of stomping of shoes came from the front entryway.

“I’m back, what’s for dinner…” came a voice that seemed familiar to Harry, but it was just a little deeper than he remembered.

The large form of Dudley came around the corner and he froze when he saw everyone in the living room.

“Hey, Dudley.” said Harry with a quick nod towards Dudley.

Dudley didn’t respond, he only continued to stare.

“Um…should we go?” said Harry to the Inspector.

“Why…what’s up?” said Inspector.

“Do you know where my parents went?” Dudley asked quickly. “There were at home, and then I get called to my Head’s office and he says that they’ve gone missing.”

“They’re in jail.” said Harry quietly after a moment of uncomfortable silence.

“Then why doesn’t he know about it?” asked Dudley, gesturing towards Inspector Homes.

“They’re in wizard jail.” repeated Harry.
“They’re not wizards!” said Dudley shortly.

“It’s more along what they did, not if they can use magic or not,” said Harry, his face turning a faint pink.

“They didn’t do…” started Dudley.

“They were arrested, by their people, for the abuse they did to Harry.” said Inspector Homes standing up coming in between the two teens. “And before you get upset, I just learned this.”

Dudley turned to Inspector Homes, appearing to argue with him, but he stopped suddenly and looked down at the floor. “They…they didn’t know any better…”

“They’re adults, they should have known,” said Harry darkly, his mouth twisting into a scowl.

“They were just scared…” said Dudley.

“Of who? Of me?” asked Harry shortly. “I was a small kid…and your dad was this giant man that could snap me in half and had beaten me with everything but a feather pillow!”

“Well, you could do some weird stuff…” said Dudley, “He was only…”

“I flew to the top of the school building, I shrunk a sweater, I turned our teacher’s wig blue, my hair grew back, does any of that sound like it’s threatening to you?” said Harry angrily. He stood up, dodged around the Inspector and went to stand in front of Dudley and found that for the first time, he towered over Dudley.

“How did…” stammered Dudley.

“Harry calm down dear…” said Mrs. McFinn standing up as well and grasped Harry’s elbow.

“Don’t you dare justify what he did to me!” snarled Harry as he got closer in Dudley’s face, his hands clenched in a fist.

“That’s enough, Harry…go in the kitchen, Dudely you stay here.” said Inspector Homes.

“But…” retorted Harry.

“This is my house, and as happy as I am to see you…and confused as all hell as to what has been going on in your life, you need to watch your tone. Dudley’s been living with me for several weeks, almost since his parents were taken, I’ll talk to him. Now go cool off in the kitchen, go make something, lord knows I’ve missed your cooking.” said Inspector Homes patting Harry on the back.

As Harry stomped into the kitchen, he could hear Inspector Homes speak in his usual calm voice, but it was what he said that nearly caused him to stop in surprise.

“If you’re looking to apologize to him for all those years of torment and thank him for saving you, you’re doing about it the completely wrong way. That…was the dumbest thing…you could have ever said to him.” said Inspector Homes.

=-=-=-=-=-

Harry was chopping fruit away in the kitchen, taking deep breaths and thinking over what the Inspector said. Dudley wanted to apologize? He wanted to thank him for saving him from the dementors? He didn’t really expect that of Dudley. What the hell changed with Dudley since they last saw each other?

Was he that traumatized by the dementors that he suddenly had a complete attitude change? What in the world did the dementors make him experience that would have affected him so?

As he skewered the fruit on thin sticks of bamboo, he noticed Dudley had come quietly into the room and was looking uncomfortable. Harry continued to ignore his cousin, even when Dudley came over to the kitchen island and leaned over on the counter, watching him put several fruit kabobs together.

“You know; my school has a cooking class,” said Dudley conversationally.

“Does it? Mine doesn’t…well, they just started an impromptu one.” said Harry. He nearly pricked himself with the skewer he was so shocked, apparently this new Dudley wanted to chat with him… will wonders never cease?

“You don’t need one…you’re a great cook.” said Dudley quietly. “I told my teacher that you made this meat thing with maple syrup, she said she didn’t buy that.”

“I don’t blame her; it was an accident.” said Harry as he took milk out of the refrigerator.

“I only got a taste of it, but it was really good.” said Dudley.

“I remember, I had to clean up the mess…and just so that I could get something to eat, I ate it after it had hit the floor.” said Harry.

Silence slammed into the room like a freight train.

“I…I didn’t know you did that…” said Dudley softly.

“Well, what did you expect? I was hungry, and you lot never bring me home anything to eat, so I eat what I can, when I can.” said Harry shortly.

Dudley looked down at the counter, his body language screaming with discomfort.

After a few moments of silence, Harry sighed and looked up at Dudley from the bowl he was working on. “Did you learn anything in this cooking class?”

“Yeah.” said Dudley.

“What was that?” asked Harry.

“I cook worse than mum.” said Dudley.

Harry stared at his cousin, but then he started to laugh. Dudley smiled slightly until he too was laughing.

They could hear laughter going on from within the kitchen giving the adults a little bit of hope.

“It’s a start…” said Mrs. McFinn.

“He’s not a bad kid…now anyway…once you remove his father and his friends from the equation, he can have some pretty good days. There are a few bad in there, but that’s with any teenage kid. He’s really getting into boxing now that I’ve taken him down to the local gym. That helped him cope with a lot of stuff that was going on.”

“I remember when he was little, he was a living hell, nearly shoved Harry right into a fire on bonfire night.” said Dr. Clark. “That and all the stuff that I’ve heard him doing during the books, but I’m glad he’s doing a lot better in person.”

“He’s still a bit of a ‘hit first, ask questions later’, sort of chap, but he’s getting better.” Inspector Homes. “But I don’t know if I can go to these readings, I mean, I would love to support Harry…but I can’t leave him behind.”

“And you can’t exactly leave your work.” said Dr. Clark.

“Oh, I can get around that for him. It’s not like he’s the only Inspector in the entire precinct” said Lionus. “As for the young Mr. Dursley, perhaps if Harry agrees, he can come with us. What do you think, Dumbledore?”

“The choice would have to lie solely with Harry and Sirius, I say Sirius because it is his house.”
said Dumbledore. “But I have no issues, especially if it helps the young man see the errors of his ways.”

Inspector Homes looked in the direction of the kitchen. “I think the decision will have to depend on Harry, as Dudley is a big part of some of the worst times in his life. I don’t know if he’ll be willing to let Dudley experience this…magical part of his life. I would just say that Becky can watch him, but she’s going to be gone to her mother’s for a long time, that bad fall and all…who knows how long she’ll be. That and there’s no room for Dudley at my mother in laws.”

The two young men came out, both bearing plates of fruit and bowls of cream. “What are people talking about now” asked Harry.

“We were discussing something, but first, just something we need to mention.” said Dumbledore.
“Whatever you choose, is alright with us.”

“Is he going to tell you what they were talking about?” asked Dudley after a moment to Harry.

“You either have to wait for them to get bored with waiting, or you just come out and ask, well go with the asking right away.” said Harry in an undertone.

Dumbledore chuckled.

“What are you talking about?” asked Harry.

“We were concerned about what to do with Dudley, as he is currently staying with the Inspector and cannot be left alone.” said Dumbledore.

Dudley’s eyes flashed open with shock and a hint of fear. “Don’t tell me I’ve got to go back into foster care! That family was nuts, and it smelled like Mrs. Figgs…”

“No…no…if Harry permits it, then you would merely be accompanying us to where the rest of our little gathering will be.” said Dumbledore.

Dudley looked over to Harry quickly and Harry looked back, the two young men shared a poignant look, but Harry then broke their eye contact with a look over to Lionus and Dumbledore.

“Is it alright if he comes?” asked Harry.
Dudley blinked.

“Of course, though we may need to talk to Sirius…as he has shown a bit of dislike to the boy.” said Dumbledore. “Though, if he has the chance to see that he is willing to better himself, I cannot think of a reason for him to forbid it.”

Dudley blinked once more, and then he looked over to Harry again. “What did he say?”

“He said ‘Yes, provided Sirius allows you in the house.’” said Harry.

“Sirius…your godfather? The murderer?” said Dudley in shock. Inspector Homes shifted slightly, he had been told a few hours ago, but it was still a bit disconcerting when he heard it once more.

“That would be him, but he didn’t kill anyone…yet.” said Harry.

“Harry don’t scare him.” said Mrs. McFinn when Dudley jumped.

Harry laughed once more, “Sorry, Dudley.”
An Audience with Her Majesty

“So, is there someone else you want to bring or should we go back to Night’s Rest and rest up?” asked Dr. Clark.

Harry was silent for a moment, then he turned to Inspector Homes. “May I borrow your phone, there’s someone I want to call and see if I can see them today. Save us a drive if we can’t.”

Inspector Homes quirked a brow but handed Harry the cordless phone. Harry took it and went into the other room, punching a few of the buttons and then held the phone to his ear. He was quite nervous, when he had acquired the written note from the Queen, Madam Bones went in by herself with a handwritten message from Harry.

Harry was unable to go see the woman face to face because he was being questioned and walked through the proceedings by the child advocate and Madam Bones was the only one able to get away from the Ministry at that time.

So now, after all that had happened to him, he was finally going to talk to the Queen, hopefully she didn’t mind the growth spurt and the voice change.

Thank you honored guest for using the royal phone line. The free public service for all royal guests. For English press one.

BEEP

If you need a chauffeur, press one. For a personal car, press two. If you would like to speak to one of the royal attendants to convey a message, press three.

BEEP.

For a particular attendant, please speak the name clearly at this moment, otherwise please stay on the line.

Sebastian Arrière.” said Harry slowly.

The phone began to ring and then a curt yet chilly voice came over the line. “This is Sebastian; how may I be of service?”

“How would you like me to do that?” asked Harry.

“You tell me…’Harry’.” said Sebastian coldly.

Harry thought for a moment and then a smile came to him. “The first time I met the Queen…she let me have a tiger lily from her garden.”
“Too easy, anyone from the Garden Party would know that.” said Sebastian. “Try again. If you fail to impress me, I will have the call traced and you arrested.”

“Well, they won’t have far to go, I’m in Inspector Homes’ house.” said Harry quietly. “Umm… Umm… dammit, you told me time and time again to call you whenever I came to visit… last time you threatened to dress me up in that frilly blue suit if I didn’t do so! What is it going to take to convince you?”

There was silence on the other end of the phone again, after a moment the curt voice came back over the line, but this time it was a bit warmer and he could almost hear the smile on the man’s lips. “I would hope that you keep the attitude to a minimum if you would like to see the Queen today, Harry.”

“…So you believe me, now?” asked Harry in shock.

“You said the right few things.” said Sebastian with an audible smirk. “What is it that you need to know?”

“Would she be able to see me today? Or should I call tomorrow?” asked Harry quietly over the phone.

Another bout of silence and then Sebastian came back over the phone. “She’s free to see you today, shall I send Andrew around for you? Where are you at?”

“That would be awesome and I’m at Inspector Homes’ house, he’ll know where that’s at… but… could I bring the people that are with me? Would that be a problem?”

“That would depend on who they are.” said Sebastian.

“Mrs. McFinn… Dr. Clark….” said Harry ticking off names.

“One moment… Dr. Clark? I thought…” said Sebastian swiftly.

“I’ll tell you and her all about it, you never who’s listening over the phones.” said Harry with a smile.

“Hmph, expect Velth within twenty minutes, it’s quite fortunate that he is at your Officer McFinn’s gravesite at the moment.” said Sebastian. “Please get yourself and your little entourage ready.”

“Yes sir.” said Harry with a bright smile and a salute to the man over the phone.

“…You saluted to me again didn’t you?” came the voice sounding unamused.

“…Maybe.” said Harry sheepishly.

“You’re wearing that blue outfit when you get here.”

Click

Harry pulled the phone away from his ear and then looked down at his feet. “I don’t think it’s going to fit me.”

=D=-=-=-=

Dudley looked around as he sat in the back seat of the limousine. His eyes were wide and he ran a hand over the upholstery with a sort of awed expression on his face.
“Who are we going to see, again?” asked Dudley. “And why is Harry sitting in the passenger seat up there?”

“Harry and Andrew go way back.” said Mrs. McFinn with a soft smile. “Harry would get a ride home every time he went to London, even stopped for ice cream a few times.”

“As to who we are going to go and see, you wouldn’t believe us if we told you.” said Dr. Clark. “And I would say something to you, but that would be horribly insensitive.”

“What’s that?” asked Dudley quickly. “I’m not a little baby…”

“It’s just that…if you’re mother had known that Harry knew this particular person personally, she never would have had him in that cupboard of his.” said Dr. Clark.

“Cupboard? What are you talking about?” asked Inspector Homes.

Dudley looked down at the floor of the limo, his face pale and fixed with grief.

“He slept in a cupboard for I don’t want to think of how many years…”

Inspector Homes looked horrified at the man sitting in front of him, and then looked down at his knees, his hands clenched tightly into fists. “If I had the chance to utilize the Wild West tactics of the Yankees, I’d be chasing your father all around Surrey.” said Inspector Homes darkly.

Dudley continued to look down at the floor.

Inspector Homes sighed and gave Dudley’s shoulder a shake and rubbed his eyes. “You’re coming to terms with it all, I’ve got to give you respect for that.”

Dudley nodded stiffly.

Mrs. McFinn came over and adjusted Dudley’s tie that she had borrowed from Inspector Homes. “Sam, do you know if we’re all…meeting her or just Harry. I would be more than happy just to…sit within thirty feet of her to be honest.”

“I think Harry’s going to meet with her first, and after that I don’t know.” said Dr. Clark. “But yeah, I would be amazed if she agreed to come…I don’t think she would. I can’t believe that’s what Harry’s hoping to do. At least I think that’s what he’s aiming for.”

“She won’t be able to come, I don’t think…but I can imagine she would send someone in her place.” said Lionus. “She can’t just drop everything and go sit in a house. And I think that Harry knows that…so there may be someone else he’s aiming to borrow for a while.”

Dudley sat, jaw hanging open and frozen in shock as Harry spoke candidly to the bloody Queen of England herself. He didn’t realize that Harry had this sort of connection! The moment they walked in through the side doors of Buckingham Palace, several of the older maids and butlers stopped, stared at them as they passed and then smiled when they apparently recognized Harry and greeted Harry with obvious joy. A few of the maids gushing about how much he had grown and what a fine young man he became.

As the servants all crowded around him, patting him on the back and giving him quick embraces, he watched as a forbidding looking butler came up and then stared at Harry for a moment, then snapped his fingers regally. Several younger male attendants came up to him swiftly and bowed.
“Get that tailor here now, we’ll need to finish that suit immediately.” said the butler circling Harry almost like a vulture.

“What suit?” asked Harry with an amused smirk, but then it slid off. “You didn’t make me a larger blue frilly suit, did you?”

“Don’t be silly, I had asked for one to be made for when you would become of age…” said the butler holding up the tail end of the braid looking at it with a dismissive gaze. “What did you do to your hair? Throw some sort of steroid induced hair tonic on it?”

Harry only smiled.

Dudley watched confused as the man then circled around to his front and took his glasses off his face.

“Astonishing, they’re not dirty, where did you get these frames?” asked the butler holding them up to the light.

“Here in London…” said Harry. “Can’t say I remember the name of the place.”

“They’re a much better pair than your last ones, the only thing those last ones did for you was make you look like some whipped little puppy.” said the man curtly, but he placed the glasses back on Harry’s face with the greatest of care.

Then suddenly a man came hurrying up to them and the strict looking man pulled Harry away, leaving the rest of them in the care of a pair of maids.

“They won’t be much longer.” assured one of the maids with a smile, they had each had a cup of tea at least and Dudley was working on his third cream cake slice. “He’s just the right height for that new suit.”

“Why did a butler take him away like that…has he been here before?” asked Dudley to the maid as she poured him a cup of tea. The maids stopped and stared at him for a moment, but one spoke after a brief moment.

“Oh, didn’t you know? He’s a favorite guest here.” said another maid with a warm smile, who seemed to be the oldest. “We do so love it when he visits, he was such an adorable little boy.”

“And so polite too!” said another maid who was slightly younger. “And now, what a charming young man he’s become!”

“Oh! Please forgive us for speaking out like that.” said the oldest maid suddenly as she looked at the guests they were entertaining.

“Not at all, my dear lady…it’s actually quite informative…Harry has never mentioned that he knows the occupants of Buckingham Palace quite so intimately.” said Dumbledore with a fond smile.

“That boy is no name dropper, I can tell you.” said the oldest maid.

“So why was that butler all over Harry?” asked Dudley pointing at the door.

Before they could explain, the doors opened and Harry came in with a clean pressed black suit with a bright green tie with an emerald pin holding it in place.
“Don’t you look handsome!” said Mrs. McFinn coming over to kiss him on the cheek. “And they were right, it was quite fast, only twenty minutes!”

“He expanded a bit in the chest more than what I was anticipating, he’ll have to accept my own new suit to see her…” said Sebastian. “As for the…delightful black cloak you were wearing under that fur lined…version, I’m having that altered a bit, honestly, it has no sense of style.”

Dumbledore covered his mouth to hide a smile.

“Harry, you’re not going to ask…her to come and listen to those books?” said Mrs. McFinn whispering in Harry’s ear.

“I can’t see her being able to get away, but I thought...maybe I should be honest with her…come out and tell her about…me.” said Harry softly.

“If we are done chattering, it would be best for you to meet her now, so that she may retire for the evening.” said Sebastian taking out a pocket watch and flicking it open.

“Sorry.” said Harry immediately as he motioned Dudley to stand up. “Come on, Dudley. Want to meet someone that I still can’t believe I know?”

“The Prime Minister?” said Dudley in awe.

Sebastian stared at Dudley in disbelief. “What in...the Prime Minister is not a woman boy! Hold...Dudley...as in Dudley Dursley?” his disbelieving face turned stormy.

“He’s reforming.” said Harry quickly.

Sebastian snorted, but led them away from the waiting room.

“Did you tell them about...us?” asked Dudley.

“A bit, yeah.” said Harry out of the corner of his mouth. “But...they’re angrier with your dad than you…”

Dudley sighed in relief.

“Hopefully.”

Dudley looked up in fear.

-=-=-=-=-

He didn’t think that Harry knew the Queen! His mother would have been begging Harry on her hands and knees just to be able to get within a hundred yards of her, and here they were…having a pot of tea and chatting. Mouth still hanging open as she smiled at Harry and even took an appraising look at the braid and how tall he had gotten in those short months.

“Now...while I am always willing to see you, what brings you to see me in such a hurried state. As far as I was aware, you are still in school, are you taking a bit of personal leave?” asked the Queen with a gentle smile as she put the braid down.

“Well, I...I wanted to talk to you and...wanted to apologize...that I never told you the full truth.” said Harry, setting his teacup down slowly.

Sebastian took the pot of tea and refilled the young man’s cup, his eyes set firmly on the task at hand.

“And the full truth would be?” asked the Queen as she took a sip of her tea.

“And the full truth would be?” asked the Queen as she took a sip of her tea.

“About the school, I go to…I…” said Harry slowly.

“You go to Hogwarts, School of Witchcraft and Wizardry?” said the Queen, a smile on her lips as she pulled the cup away.

Harry stared. “What? You know?”

“When you did not tell me the name, I had an assumption…and my assumption was proven true, when I spoke to…who was that Sebastian…that man that was here over the summer?” asked the Queen to the butler as he tonged two more biscuits on Harry’s plate. “The one that I had to cut the meeting quite short.”

“The one with the pink dressed… person? Fudge, madam. Cornelius Fudge I believe.” said Sebastian as he served more biscuits to the other guests.

Harry looked at Sebastian in shock and then looked over to the Queen. “What did he come to see you for?”

He moved his hands swiftly as Sebastian went to tap it with a spare spoon, when the Queen looked away for a moment.

“Manners…” muttered Sebastian.

“Well, they had come to ‘warn’ me about him.” said the queen with a wave towards Dumbledore.

“Indeed, your majesty?” said Dumbledore with a smile. “I must say, I’m not sure if I should feel flattered or embarrassed that they felt the need to bring my disagreement with them to your attention.”

“I did feel quite concerned when I had two adults come in and complain in such a fashion. They were worried that you would come to see me and promote your ‘fearmongering’.” said the Queen as she sipped her tea. “It was quite a few minutes till they would even tell me how you were going about it.”

“And your opinion?” asked Dumbledore.

The Queen smiled softly. “As his Queen, I ordered him to place protection around the people that could not protect themselves. I care not the differences that are between you and the Minister, but he should know that the people’s safety is my highest priority. I remember the dark times of Grindelwald before my reign, and the terror that rang through with Voldemort over a decade ago.”

“I will not have any of my people placed in danger when there is even the slightest chance of history repeating itself. I remember asking a previous Minister of Magic years ago, if the body was recovered, and I was told it wasn’t. I am not sure what all can be done with your powers, so I would not be surprised if he had managed to come back to life.” said the Queen with a cold edge to her voice.

“I don’t know if it makes it any better, but no one can be brought back to life.” said Dumbledore. “Sadly that only instills the fact that Voldemort was living free out in the world…. Though ‘free’ is not quite the right word to use.” he added thoughtfully.
“Rest assured, my lady, the man has been apprehended.” said Lionus from his seat. “He won’t be causing havoc anymore.”

“Permission to roll my eyes, my lady?” said Sebastian with a deadpanned look.

The Queen only smiled. “Sebastian does not quite approve of your policies when it regards to whether you get involved or not.”

“Not many people do.” said Lionus with a shrug. “Now I want to know what Fudge and Umbridge said about Harry. If you would be willing to tell us, of course.”

“Oh it was delightful.” said Sebastian as he poured Harry another cup of tea.

“I don’t recollect ever seeing Sebastian or the maids so bothered by a guest before. It was quite the spectacle.” said the Queen, a small playing on her lips as she looked at Harry. “They had the ill-advised notion to tell me all about your years at that school. In the most…negative tone.”

“Do you remember any of it? I’d love to hear what they said.” said Harry with a bright smile.

Suddenly, a loud chime rang through the room, causing the Queen to look up in the direction of the clock in surprise. “Have any of you had any dinner?” said the Queen looking up at the chiming grandfather clock, “This had proven to be quite the lengthy story.”

“Dinner with…you?” said Mrs. McFinn placing a hand over her heart.

“Of course, it gives me the opportunity to make good on an invitation that I have given Harry for so many years. He was never able to stay for dinner, and he would arrive too far after lunch.” said the Queen.

Dudley’s jaw still had not closed.
Dinner at the Palace

It took only moments for the maids and Sebastian to bring the food to a large table in one of the many dining rooms further in the palace. The meal that sat before them did not disappoint Dudley’s lofty notions of how the royals supped, though it wasn’t the quantity that he expected it was by no means lacking in quality.

They had roasted legs of lamb, roasted tomato soup, and a green and purple salad, even the descriptions of the dessert were something so out of this world that Harry watched with amusement as Dudley tried to enjoy his food as he was usually want to do, but forcing himself to keep his manners in front of her majesty the Queen. Harry had leaned over to Dudley and whispered to him quietly that it was alright if he were to ask for seconds.

“You sure? I don’t want to…you know…” said Dudley nodding over to the Queen quickly and trying to do so without her knowledge.

“She’s not going to mind.” said Harry with smile. “I’ve gone through plates and plates of biscuits while having tea with her.”

“Yeah, but she likes you.” said Dudley. “It’s my da she hates.”

“Exactly, not completely your fault.” said Harry. “It’s Uncle Vernon’s fault.”

Before the dinner had been served, she had been introduced to Dudley, and while at first she was startled that Harry would bring the son of the man that had hurt him so, she welcomed him graciously. Dudley, however, said nothing beyond: “Yes, your majesty”, “No, your majesty”, and “Thank you, your majesty.” He didn’t want to push his luck with her, especially since he didn’t quite know how Harry painted him to her over the years of their little “tea parties”.

As the food was eaten, the Queen had begun to relay what Fudge and Umbridge had told her, which turned out to be nothing short of amusing to the ones that had known the pair of self-promoting spellcasters.

“Well, at the beginning, your Minister had admitted that he thought you were a brave, tragic soul. You had his complete sympathy….”

“Or just his pity.” muttered Sebastian ladling more helpings of the reddish colored soup into Harry’s bowl.

“Then they started to change their tone ever so slightly, putting you down a bit here and there. Saying how you were trying to manipulate them into furthering your own fame and name all along but they did not see it till it was far too late.” said the Queen. “I must say…till they had told me your name and had shown me a picture of you, I was quite inclined to believe them. I know all too well just how mischievous boys can be even more so how fame can go to a young man’s head, but that inclination did not last all that long.”

“Um, they didn’t mention anything about what I had done, had they?” asked Harry softly.

“Oh…by chance are you talking about the time you dropped a pudding on a woman’s head?” asked the Queen with a twitching smile as she brought a spoon of tomato soup up to her lips.

“Now that was an elf, that wasn’t me.” said Harry quickly.
“Then you must be talking about when you inflated your Aunt.” said the Queen, the same smile on her lips.

Harry blushed, while Dudley snorted. Harry quirked a brow in Dudley’s direction.

“Then there was the instance of you trying and succeeding in the aid of the escaped convict, Sirius Black.” said the Queen looking at Harry now with a fixed look.

“Ah…” said Harry.

“Now that, my lady, is true, but we’ve found that he was in actuality an innocent man.” said Lionus from his own seat, a hand over his wineglass as a few other servants walked around pouring drinks for the guests. “So…what Harry had done, with the help of his friends, was save an innocent life from a fate far worse than returning him to his cell or for that matter, death.”

Dudley looked over to Harry in awe, his spoon frozen halfway to his mouth.

“You’re learning an awful lot about your cousin this day, aren’t you?” said Dumbledore with a kind smile. “I only hope that you are ready to hear far more harrying tales.” he added with a wink.

“Anything else he told you?” asked Harry looking back at the Queen.

“That you had outflown a dragon, nearly drowned in a lake full of merpeople and had traveled through a labyrinth of a variety of creatures that I, myself have only heard or seen in tales and the cinema.” said the Queen. “And now…I realize that you also had cause to meet with the fiend that took your family from you.”

Harry had a bit of lamb on a fork coming close to his mouth when he froze for a moment and then lowered it. Dudley looked at Harry, his mouth full of lamb, he swallowed it thickly.

The Queen slowly reached over and patted Harry’s hand. “I am quite sure; they are even more proud of you than I am.”

As they were leaving the castle through the back entrance, the Queen, Sebastian and a few of the staff members were giving Harry their farewells, until the summer of course. The Inspector and Dr. Clark were surprised that he was telling the Queen goodbye, they had believed that Harry was going to ask that she come and listen in on the last book. But he had never asked her about joining them, not even once.

The Queen herself seemed to think that there was an unasked question hovering in the air, and asked the young man she was embracing fondly. “Were you only aiming for this to be a social call?” asked the Queen as Harry stepped away and was subjected to Sebastian fussing with his tie. “Or was there a deeper significance for this visit?”

“I…I had a question, but it’s alright.” said Harry with a faint blush. “I wanted to ask you something, but…it would require you to put your life on hold…and I know you can’t really do that.”

“A Queen’s life can never be put ‘on hold’, she has duties that must be done.” said Sebastian plainly. “A word with the young boy if I may, your Majesty.”

“By all means, Sebastian.” said the Queen, “Albus, now I insist you make it to my next garden party, don’t think I haven’t noticed your absence these last fifteen years.” she finished with a light scolding tone.

Sebastian led Harry away from the party towards the darkness of a large thick fir tree. When they had no light covering them, save the single beam of light coming from a lit window, Sebastian turned around to Harry, his sharp eyes raking over the young man’s face.

“You’ve grown up much too fast.” he said, his voice solemn.

“That’s magic for you.” said Harry with a chuckle.

“Not what I mean.” said Sebastian with a light sharp tone. “What I mean is…a childhood…is something you never possessed.”

Harry blinked. “I had fun…in parts…”

“Fun is one thing, but a childhood…being scolded by your guardian for bringing mud into the house, demanding a pet of your own while it’s in your arms, pleading for sweets and toys, running amok with your friends…a childhood.”

Harry stared at the man standing before him.

“You were shown nothing by your guardians but contempt, pain and hunger. Even with the McFinns…you were not able to hold onto the joys of loving parents for long, a few hours at a time at best. There were times…in the last few years of your youth before you left us for that school, that I wanted to spirit you away, even Velth expressed a desire to never let you go back to the Dursley house again. Not if you were going to come back to us bruised.” said Sebastian reaching up and tugging on a loose pinecone.

Harry sighed softly and looked out at the snow-covered ground.

“Regardless of the robbery done to your youth, I and many others in the service of the Queen are immensely proud of you.” said Sebastian.

Harry turned back to look at the butler with widened eyes and looked off to the side, a blush on his face.

“Whatever trials that are going to be put in your path’s way, I have no doubt that you will overcome them. And for god’s sake, if you need help, ask for it, and I mean…even dropping the Queen’s name.” said Sebastian.

“Not many dark wizards and witches would back off the moment that I say her name.” said Harry with a chuckle.

“Then they are fools.” said Sebastian stiffly. “But regardless…” he looked over Harry’s shoulder and saw that the others had finished speaking. “it looks like they’re ready to leave. Be a good boy, now.”

“I’ll try.” said Harry.

Sebastian raised his arms slightly for a moment, but then decided against it and started to lower them. Harry smiled, rushed forwards and wrapped his own arms around the man, initiating the hug on his own terms. “Thanks, Sebastian.”

The butler was silent and stiff for a moment, but then he sagged ever so slightly and wrapped his own arms around the young man. They were still for a short time, until Sebastian ended the embrace and walked with Harry over to the rest of the group.

As the Company of wizards and four muggles left, the Queen looked up to Sebastian.

“I hope this is where things get better for him now.” said the Queen softly.

“We can only pray, your majesty, we can only pray.” said Sebastian looking up at the moon.
They arrived at Night’s Rest quite late in the evening, far later than they had originally aimed for. Sirius was beside himself with concern as the hours ticked by, they had only said they were going to get one person and maybe go to talk to someone. But that was early in the morning and it’s now….

“Padfoot, you need to calm down.” said Remus tiredly as he sipped a cup of tea. “You’re going to wear a rut in your new carpet.”

They had all gathered in the large den and were wiling away the time till the rest of the group joined them. Fred and George had discovered a large stash of muggle board games for them all to play and effectively kept the students present entertained. The adults (and Hermione) were more content with perusing the books that happened to be in the bookcases, or simply resting by the fire.

“Precisely, the Headmaster is with him after all.” said Flitwick taking a bite out of a cauldron cake.

“And don’t forget, he has my Star Captain and he has a Lieutenant shadowing his moves as well. That boy is not going to go unguarded for quite some time.” said Chief Hawkeye with slight smile from beside the fireplace. “Your move, Weasley.”

“Hmm…” said Ron stroking his chin thoughtfully. “You’re good…way better than Bill.”

“I should hope so; I’ve been playing for more years than the both of your ages put together.” said Chief Hawkeye with a smirk.

“Checkmate.” said Ron with a smile.

The Ranger Chief blinked, pulled the cup away from his lips and looked down at the board. “What did you just say?” When he saw the board his mouth dropped slightly. “When did that happen?”

Ron only responded with a large grin.

“You have to keep an eye on Weasley, if you’re not completely focused on the game, he’ll sweep a victory when you least expect it.” said McGonagall with a slight look of pride.

“I’ll have to keep that in mind if I ever challenge him again.” said Chief Hawkeye with an appraising look towards Ron.

Suddenly a soothing chime rang throughout the den and echoed through the rest of Night’s Rest.

“There you go, Padfoot they’re here.” said Remus as he stood up and went out to the front door.

“Stuff it Moony.” said Sirius as he left to go and get the door.

Sirius however, never came back to the den, but a few others did come into the warm sanctuary. Dumbledore, Dr. Clark and someone else they had never met.

“What took you so long to get back?” asked Chief Hawkeye, finally tearing his gaze away from the board.

The man that was standing beside Dr. Clark stared in awe at the Chief. “I was not expecting…I mean…the Star Captain was one thing…but the Chief?”
The man chuckled at Inspector Homes. “Relax, you’re here for moral support, right? Well, in a way, so am I.”

The Inspector gave a shaky smile. “Bud…you’ve sure got some big friends in high places.”

The next morning, everyone ambled down to the dining room where the rich smell of eggs, bacon and hotcakes came from the nearby kitchen.

Ron and Hermione ducked their heads in to the kitchen, expecting maybe to see Harry, Mrs. McFinn, Mrs. Weasley and a small flurry of house-elves. They were not expecting to see just Harry and…

“Harry…isn’t that…” said Ron staring at the teenager sitting across from Harry on a stool, watching the scarred teen flip a few pancakes over.

Harry and the other boy looked up and over at Ron and Hermione, a thick layer of silence came between them.

“I thought they were kidding, there was no way, he was here.” said Hermione pointing to Dudley with a shaking finger.

“Dudley, you remember Ron and Hermione?” asked Harry as he adjusted the temperature on the stove.

“I remember the red head, not so much the brunette.” said Dudley with a frown on his face. “Or at the very least… I remember those twins.”

Ron snorted with barely disguised glee, Harry looked up with a mixture of amusement and exhaustion. “Be nice, Ron. Yeah, the twins are here too, but I’ll ask them not to do a repeat performance.”

“We never do the same joke twice…”

“Not if we can help it, that is.”

“All depends if we can help it now.”

Suddenly, two more red headed figures appeared in the crack in the door and peered inside. “What’s all the….oh.”

Dudley’s eyes met theirs and he scrambled off the stool, around the kitchen island and hid behind Harry. “Call them off!” as they stalked slowly towards him, their eyes glinting mischievously.

“Ease off guys, it’s too early in the morning for this.” said Harry.

“New house rule: No pranking Dudley.” said Sirius coming into the room, dressed in a black and red bathrobe, covering silver lounge pants and a white tank top. “Least not with magical methods, muggle methods are fine.”

Fred and George looked pleasantly puzzled, while Dudley turned slightly pale. Harry leaned over to Dudley and whispered. “That means you can come up with something too, Big D.”

“I’m not one for pranks…” said Dudley quietly.
“You’re one for punching, right?” asked Ron darkly.

“Ease up there, Ron.” repeated Harry. “We’re…trying here.”

“Yeah…he’s now trying.” said Ron darkly as Hermione kept behind Ron and looked at Dudley with wide eyes.

“Guess they know all about you and home…huh?” said Dudley softly.

“You could say that, so you’re going to catch a lot for being here…though…I’m sure the adults won’t be picking on you. Well, most of them won’t be starting anything at least.” said Harry.

Dudley looked worried. “What are you talking about, ‘most’ of them?”

“You might have to answer to Mrs. Weasley and Remus.” said Harry as he poured a pot of hot coffee and took a sip.

Dudley blinked, but then pointed to Harry. “Since when do you drink coffee?”

“You focus on the oddest things.” laughed Harry coming back to the rest of them with a cup in hand for Sirius. “I’ve started cause I keep falling asleep during these things, I want to actually hear what’s going on with the last book.”

“Just remember, this book is what would have happened without the knowledge you hold right now and the actions the Rangers had taken, it is now just a book, nothing more.” said a voice from behind him.

Harry and Dudley wheeled around, there, pouring himself was cup and one for the man lounging against the counter was Glacier and Lionus. Lionus was in his usual attire of black slacks, black shirt and forbidding looking black cloak. Glacier however, still dressed in white, was wrapped in what looked like a white furred bathrobe.

Dudley once again took shelter behind Harry. “Who are they?”

“The one in black is Lionus, the one in white is Glacier, he’s my…”

“Therapist.” said Glacier plainly as he turned to face Dudley and walked slowly over to him. “And you are Dudley Dursley.”

Dudley nodded dumbly.

“You and I…will need to have a talk.” said Glacier calmly as he sipped his coffee.

Dudley’s eyes went even wider.

Whatever opinion that the adults had about Dudley joining, they certainly kept it to themselves, though Snape, when he had come down to only procure a cup of coffee from the pot on the table and a few pieces of fruit, looked at Dudley square in the face and then walked away towards the Winter Den that the readings were going to take place in.

The moment that he had seen Hagrid however, he gave a loud squeak and went to hide behind Harry again, who was looking at him in amusement. “He won’t hurt you…no one will....”

“Not permanently anyway.” said the twins with matching smirks.
With a warning look from their mother, the ones that had remained in the dining room, sat down to eat.

“Did you get up early enough to make some snacks for the readings Harry?” asked Ron with a smile towards Harry, as the rest of the people gathered, including Draco, Blaise and Nott (Who were there for Draco’s moral support), ate their breakfast that was carried out by (invisible- as to not startle Dudley and the Inspector) house-elves.

“I cut up a bunch of apples and baked them, how about that?” said Harry. “Dudley asked for them.”

Dudley looked down at the table for a moment, his face a faint pink. “I just remember liking them…”

“And it’ll be just fine with your new eating regimen, which according to Inspector Holmes, you were still on.” said Harry with a poke to Dudley’s arm. “Can’t have the boxing champ going soft when he goes back.”

Dudley still looked down at the table, the blush now gone, but replaced with a different expression.

They finished up their breakfast and went into the den, where Officer McFinn was sitting, waiting with Professor Snape.

Everyone: The DA, the Heads of Houses of Hogwarts, Dumbledore, the Weasleys, Lionus, Glacier, Rudolph, Leroy, Tonks, Moody, Dr. Clark, Mrs. McFinn, Kingsley, Remus, Sirius, Harry, Dudley, Holmes, Nightstrike, other members of the Order and Hagrid gathered into the large yet cozy room and prepared to resume the readings, a heavy feeling fell over all of them (minus Dumbledore who had simply accepted it, knowing this was now not going to happen) as they remembered what had just transpired.

Mrs. McFinn took the moments before the reading started to bring over the large phoenix quilt and draped it around Harry as he sat in an oversized armchair.

First paragraph.

“And it won’t.” said Glacier.

“What had happened?” asked Dudley curiously.

“It said that Dumbledore had been killed.” said Inspector Holmes in a whisper to Dudley, pointing to the old wizard.

“Oh…” said Dudley.

Dialogue line.

Second paragraph, first sentence.

“They were never terribly tactful, even as children.” said Dumbledore with a faint smile.

“If he’s the one that’s dead, how can he be so calm?” asked Dudley quietly.
“It’s just the way he is.” said Dr. Clark.

End of second paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“No, dear boy!” whispered Dumbledore wincing slightly. “Do no put yourself into danger, not now!”

Third paragraph.

Fourth paragraph.

“I’m regretting having such a large breakfast.” said Hermione faintly.

Fifth paragraph.

With shaky hands, Remus leaned over in his chair beside Harry’s and rubbed the back of Harry’s neck. “There’s still one more book…you’re not dead…and he doesn’t bite you…please don’t let him bite you.”

Dialogue line.

Sixth paragraph, first sentence, first semicolon.

“Don’t let his teeth scrape you, please for the love of god.” said Remus weakly.

Sixth paragraph, first sentence, second semi-colon.

“I’m too old and it’s too early for this.” said Flitwick covering his eyes.

Sixth paragraph, third sentence, first colon.

Mr. Weasley and his wife both took a deep breath.

Sixth paragraph, end of third sentence.

Ginny’s eyes were wide with shock. All of the members of the Weasley family looked over to her and made to rush to her side.

“Not my baby…not any of my babies.” said Mr. Weasley, his hands tight as he gripped the chair’s arms.
“Tack on another life debt we owe you.” said Charlie weakly.
“I’m lost…” said Dudley.
“I think with coming this late in the game, we just sit and watch.” said Inspector Holmes.
“Do you know what they’re talking about?” asked Dudley.
“Pretty much, but I’ll try and fill you in as we go.” said the Inspector.

“Don’t go after him!” pleaded Mrs. McFinn. “Get someone, tell someone!”

Now it was Neville’s turn to be shocked.
“I’m sure you’re fine.” said Professor Sprout, though her voice was shaky.

“Not the best chapter to start with in the morning.” said Dumbledore. “But it does a terrifyingly good job at bringing you to wakefulness.”
“Huh?” asked Dudley.
“The chapter is like a punch to the face.” said Harry plainly.
“Oh.”

“I forget, did someone torch the thing?” asked Harry darkly. “I’m talkin’ right now…”
“It was destroyed.” said Lionus with a calm voice.

Ninth paragraph.

“Well, they’re going to wish this was all just one terrifying nightmare.” said Ron.

Tenth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Then what are you doing just standing around in your pajamas in a castle full of terror?” said Fred staring at the book.

Dialogue set.

Eleventh paragraph.

Twelfth paragraph.

Snape and Draco were sitting on a small sofa beside the fireplace, sitting silently.

Thirteenth paragraph.

Hagrid whipped out a large spotted handkerchief, (Dudley had flinched and tried to hide behind the Inspector when he saw the giant man) and blew his nose loudly. “Still touches me that yeh care that much abou’ me Harry.”

Fourteenth paragraph.

Dialogue set.

Fifteenth paragraph.

Malfoy looked up to Snape, but Snape did not look back at him.

Sixteenth paragraph.

Seventeenth paragraph, first sentence.

“I don’t know if I should commend your book self for protecting him, or hope that Potter hexes you into dust.” said Chief Hawkeye as he took a sip of tea.
“Don’t fall to their level, boy.” said Moody sharply. “It’d be a terrible waste.”

Hermione’s hands flew to her mouth to stifle a gasp.

“There’d better not be any creatures in there.” said Charlie darkly.

“I’m thinking there is much more things to worry about.” said Bill.

“Shit.” whispered Charlie.

“Now that sounds like the Snape way of saying, ‘Don’t ruin your life.’” said Sprout. “But…To kill the Headmaster.”

“But Albus would have been able to disarm them, with or without his wand…” said Flitwick quietly. “At least…I hope that the Headmaster had planned this…I cannot imagine his (as terrible as it is to think about) end being nothing short of planned to the very moment.”

“We can only hope that…but I can’t see why he would wish it to be this way.” said Sprout.

“I’m not my father, I’m judging you on how you look to me, not how my father saw you.” said Harry with a snarl down to the carpet.

Dudley watched everyone in the room, and then looked to Inspector Holmes. “I don’t think I can sit here…not all this…”

“What do you want to do till this book is done?” asked Sirius. “I can’t see it being much longer…”

“Have a TV?” asked Dudley quickly.

“Not yet, but we will in a few months.” said Sirius.
“Oh.” said Dudley his face looking crestfallen for a moment.

“How about you and the Inspector here take a bit of a walk, explore the place…” said Sirius.

“I don’t want to accidentally set something off.” said Dudley quickly. “Did that once…Harry had some sort of cracker…”

“You won’t set anything off, we’ve got some…invisible little helpers to make sure that you don’t get into too much trouble.” said Sirius. He wanted to get this book over for Harry’s sake, but the way that Dudley was getting more and more agitated, it was almost going to be certain that there were going to be more delays in the readings.

After Sirius, had created a small map for them to go by, and had sent them on their way, (the Inspector wanted to stay, that much was obvious, but Dudley needed him a bit more at this point) the readings resumed.

“I always wondered where those mice from under my bed came from.” said Harry absently.

Dialogue line.
Dialogue set.
Dialogue line.

Nineteenth paragraph.
Neville paled as he looked at Harry in horror.

Dialogue set, second sentence, first semi-colon.
“So…he doesn’t want to hurt you?” asked Ernie.

End of dialogue set.
“Never mind.” said Terry.

Twentieth paragraph.
Dumbledore covered his eyes.

Dialogue line.

Twenty-first paragraph.
Dialogue set.
Hermione wrapped her arms around herself, Ron saw this and wrapped his own arms around her too.

Dialogue set, second sentence.

“Called it.” said Harry softly.

“No way…” said Ron and Hermione staring at the Potions Master.

“Makes sense.” said the twins.

“Why didn’t we figure this out earlier?” asked Terry.

“Luna, did you figure it out?” asked Neville.

“I wasn’t giving it much thought.” said Luna honestly with her trademark serene smile. “I didn’t have to…”

“She knew…” said Terry softly. “Somehow, she knew.”

End of dialogue set.

Twenty-second paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Mrs. McFinn came behind Harry and pulled him back against the chair, her arms tightening around his neck slightly.

Dialogue set.

“That is something I could never call you, Severus.” said Dumbledore softly.

Twenty-third paragraph, second sentence.

The arms around his neck tightened.

End of twenty-third paragraph.

“Who, Snape or Buckbeak?” asked Fred.

Twenty-fourth paragraph.
“Hagrid had better be okay.” said Harry rubbing his hands over eyes.

Charlie sighed. “I need a drink.”

“Can you imagine if we had read this all before bed, we’d be going without sleep…at least I would be.” said Bill shakily.

“I’m greatly impressed if he did, he didn’t get that far into school before he was expelled.” said Flitwick quietly to Sprout.

“Might want to put the umbrella out first.” said Ron. “Trust me.”

“Future me is probably remembering the last time I used that spell.” said Harry wretchedly.

The entire room flinched horribly.
“Poor future Hagrid.” said Luna, her voice barely above a whisper.

Twenty-ninth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Without firing at them? Yeah, he was chasing them.” said Ron coldly.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Hermione sniffled and held onto Ron’s arm.

Dialogue line.

Thirtieth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Trust me, I don’t want to say it.” said Harry.

“I don’t want to do it.” said Snape. “But I have a feeling, that regardless of the Unbreakable Vow, I had little choice in the matter.” he sent a furtive glance to the Headmaster.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Thirty-first paragraph.

“I’m sure I’d rather have the head trauma.” said Harry.

“You’ve had enough head trauma.” said Dr. Clark.
Dialogue set.

Thirty-second paragraph.

“I don’t blame Dudley for bowing out so early in the morning.” said Mrs. McFinn.

Thirty-third paragraph.

McGonagall covered her mouth with her hands. “Terrible…simply terrible.”

Dialogue set.

“He told me…he told me and I didn’t believe ‘im.” said Hagrid thickly as he blew his nose loudly. “And there I am pointin’ it out.”

“It’s quite understandable, Hagrid.” said Dumbledore carefully.

Thirty-fourth paragraph.

Thirty-fifth paragraph.

Thirty-sixth paragraph.

A heavy, thick silence fell across the room. Tears fell silently down cheeks and grips tightened on their chairs, or blankets, no one dared move or speak.

Till…

“Move on.” said the cold voice of Glacier.

Officer McFinn looked up at the Ranger figure.

“It’s very unlikely to happen now, the real Dumbledore is sitting right there and I daresay that Snape is now going to be avoiding that particular future at all costs. Move on.” said Glacier.

“Can’t even give us a moment to grieve?” asked Tonks.

Glacier sighed. “You had a day before this to put your feelings into order, granted, some are able to do that in such a time while most are not, but his death will not happen in this fashion. Push past it for now, and grieve his death when it comes to be in present, not the future.”

Lionus looked over at Glacier with a slight smirk. “Can’t quite pick if you’re trying to be helpful, yet sound strangely like Granger, or if you’re just impatient to get this show on the road.”

“While she may have her…tactless moments…she’s not completely off the mark in some of her reasoning’s. And yes, I am impatient.” he said.

Thirty-seventh paragraph.
“Oh, I don’t believe that is quite the case.” said Dumbledore thoughtfully.

“What are you talking about? You’re dead…you can’t talk.” said Ron.

“And you certainly don’t sound like you’re afraid of dying.” said Neville.

“He’s talking about the portraits.” said Hermione.

“Huh?” asked Ron

“The portraits that every Headmaster gets once his or her term is done.” said Hermione.

“So…is there an Umbridge one?” asked Ron looking revolted.

“You have to serve for at least three quarters of one year.” said Dumbledore with a faint smile.

“Then you qualify to have your portrait on the walls of the Headmasters and Headmistresses, we’ve had quite the few temporary Headmasters that only have lasted a few months while both the Headmasters and Deputy Headmistress were ill or away with family issues.”

Thirty-eighth paragraph.

Thirty-ninth paragraph.

Fortieth paragraph.

“Kind of makes you wonder if there’s a photo in the locket that You-Know-Who has.” said Fred.

“I can’t see who it would be, I doubt it would be his mum…or Grandfather.” said George.

“Maybe a picture of the school?” asked Fred.

“Yeah, I could see that.” said George.

Forty-first paragraph.

Note in locket

“Wow, someone else figured out what he was doing?” asked Terry.

“Who’s R.A.B?” asked Justin.

Sirius was quiet for a moment, but then his eyes flashed open and he looked to Remus.

“You don’t think…did he?” asked Sirius.

Remus looked confused.

End of chapter

“That’s all for that chapter.” said Officer McFinn.
“What’s next?” asked Harry slowly.

The ghostly man turned the page and looked at the title. “The Phoenix Lament.”

“Sounds joyful.” Harry said lamely as he leaned into Mrs. McFinn’s arms.
Harry took a deep breath and released it slowly. Ginny came over and sat on the armrest of the chair he was sitting in.

“This won’t happen.” she said reassuringly. “But I know it’s hell listening to it.”

“It sure is.” said Harry quietly.

“Want me to sit here too?” said Ginny. When he nodded, she shoved him softly. “Budge over then, you great lump.”

Harry snickered as he moved over.

“Could do without the blood reference.” said Hermione quietly as she put a handkerchief to her face.

“That you’ll admit to.” said Neville.

“I don’t think I want to hear…” said Harry.
“Thank Merlin.” said Harry releasing a breath.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, first sentence, first comma.

Mrs. Weasley screamed and ran to hold her oldest son.

Mr. Weasley turned to stare at Bill, as if he would suddenly disappear before his very eyes.

“This won’t happen, Mum, it’s not going to happen.” said Bill reassuringly.

End of dialogue set.

“These books are going to get rid of any hair I have left on my head.” said Mr. Weasley putting a shaking pair of hands on his face.

Fourth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

“My beautiful boy!” sobbed Mrs. Weasley. “But you’re alive…that’s…that’s the important thing.” as added as she continued to cry.

Charlie and Bill exchanged pointed looks. “Say it Charlie.” said Bill with a crooked smile.

“I don’t wanna.” said Charlie, his voice quivering slightly.

“Do it, break the tension…seriously, mum is strangling me.” said Bill.

“Alright…” Charlie cleared his throat and looked over to Bill. “I doubt Greyback could muck up your face any more than what nature has done.”

Slowly, a nervous chuckle pitter-patted across the room.

“Not quite the ice breaker, but it’s a start.” said Charlie.

Fifth paragraph.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, second sentence, first dash.

“You’d think Voldemort would train them better to not wipe their own numbers out through friendly fire.” said Dr. Clark.
“Thank Merlin for that.” said Mrs. Weasley holding a hand to her breast.

Sixth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Phycially…sure.” said Harry.

Dialogue line.

Seventh paragraph.

Harry pulled a hand tiredly down his face.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Bill took a deep breath and released it slowly. “This is awkward listening to.”

“Tell us about it.” said Ron and Harry together.

Dialogue set.

Eighth paragraph.

Dialogue set.

Fred and George looked uncomfortable for a moment, but then they looked over to Remus and then Bill. “We’ll pass…too soon.”

Dialogue set.

Ron cringed.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, second sentence.

“I’m not eager to face that day when it comes, I’ll say that much.” said Remus.
“There was a bit leading up to it.” said Moody gruffly.

“Yeah, because I’m completely processing everything and willing to spill my guts at that point.” said Harry.

“She and I have worked together for many, many years. I like to think I am close with all my staff….But I am quite humbled at…hearing how people take my passing…. It is surely nothing I had ever think I would hear, and I certainly hold no desire to do so…” He stopped speaking and covered his face with his hands, completely at a loss for words.

“It’s always a terrible song. I heard it myself many decades ago and…” said Dumbledore, he made to continue but was suddenly struck with a thought. He gave a quick fleeting look over to Harry but remained silent.

“It’s said that it doesn’t make you completely whole, but it does ease the pain a bit…” said Dumbledore.

“If I know my future self, I’m going to get sick if I have to keep saying it.” said Harry.
“I believe that the story is not quite as plain as it seems.” said Dumbledore softly.

“We’ll just have to wait and see.” said Sirius coldly.

“Came back to bite him, didn’t it?” said Ron quietly.

Snape scowled behind his hand.

Snape flinched.

“We won’t know for certain, if ever.” said Dr. Clark rubbing Harry’s arm.

Glacier walked behind Harry and placed a hand on the lad’s neck, a soothing chill went through Harry’s body, and settled up on his throbbing temple.

“You’ll be fine.” said Glacier quietly in Harry’s ear.
“I did not think I would leave the castle completely defenseless.” said Dumbledore with a relieved smile.

“When the hell did he pick it up?” asked Harry looking confused. “I remember the item, but I don’t remember hearing that he had it.”

Moody pointed a calloused finger at the twins. “Don’t be selling your stuff to the wrong lot.”

“So…he in effect, set the Dark Mark over his own end.” said Dumbledore stroking his beard thoughtfully, a phial of calming draught going into his cloak pocket. “I merely was an extra loss…”

“A really catastrophic loss.” said Sprout carefully.
“One would think that he was keeping the girls out of the way of the fighting, knowing that those two are not the strongest fighters out of the group.” said Chief Hawkeye matter-of-factly.

“If he did stun him, he at least only did that.” said Lionus.

“Don’t blame you, sweetie, it takes a lot of training to get used to it all.” said Tonks.

“Harry managed to do it…”

“That’s comparing newts to nifflers.” said Tonks.

Harry breathed heavily through his nose, and covered his mouth with his clenched hands. He couldn’t wait for this book to be over, for the pain his book self and he himself was feeling to subside.
“He always was a bit of bear in the morning,” said Fred weakly.
“Now he’ll be ‘wolfing’ down his breakfast every day…” said George, a watery smile.
“Too soon.” said the twins quickly.

Lupin and Sirius looked at each other. “I don’t know, I kind of liked it.” said Remus.

A small smile crept across Bill’s handsome features.
“Lucky bloke.” said Charlie nudging Bill softly. “She’ll love you to hell and back, this proves it.”
“Still don’t want to chance it.” said Bill smiling carefully. “I’ll be sure to keep Greyback away from my face.”

“I’m thinking she’s talking about it in reverse.” said Mr. Weasley. “No offense to Fleur.”
Mrs. Weasley blushed. “I…I…never meant…”

“Looks like it came across that way, mum.”

Bill chuckled. “She’s so funny.”

The Weasley children stared at their mother in shock.

“Wasn’t expecting that.” said Ron.

“I thought she’d warm up to her at some point…but not that far.” said Bill.

“She doesn’t quite know what that means yet.” said Charlie.

“Knew it.” said Fred.

“Saw it coming a kilometer a way.” said George.
“Sweetie, I’m an Auror!” said Tonks hotly.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Twenty-sixth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“By all means, I would greatly appreciate hearing of weddings, births, christenings and other such matters on the day of my death.” said Dumbledore.

Dialogue set.

Twenty-seventh paragraph.

Dialogue set.

“Bless you, Hagrid.” said Dumbledore with a kind smile. “I always knew I could count on you for important tasks.”

Dialogue set.

Twenty-eighth paragraph.

Twenty-ninth paragraph.

“Rather it be hers than Umbridge’s.” said Ron.

“I wonder, Professor, if Umbridge would have been made Headmistress, would you still retain your title of Deputy Headmistress?” asked Hermione looking at the Transfiguration teacher.

“Only a voting of the Governors would be able to remove me from my appointed seat, however, I believe that Delores and Fudge would have attempted to maneuver around that particular policy.”

Thirtieth paragraph.

“Tell me we’re going to wake him up.” said Harry.

“They need to rest for a while after they arrive on the wall. Armando Dippet’s painted-self rested for a week before I could have a coherent conversation.” said Dumbledore.

Thirty-first paragraph.
Dumbledore winced slightly. “I don’t know if even I would be willing to burden you with that knowledge, the less that would know, the safer Harry would be.”

“Even willing to keep the orders close to heart after you’ve passed on.” said Moody.

“Not many people plan for that contingency.” said Dr. Clark. “Not in that sort of way.”

Snape snorted quietly.

“I’m not too sure what to do in this situation, on the one hand, the school is always been a haven, the other, it’s not as secure as it was with Dumbledore gone.” said Kingsley.

“Fathers will think the same thing.” said Mr. Weasley, “But they’ll be more inclined to worry about safety of the whole family, protective charms and the like.”

Dialogue set.

“More due to the fact that it was one of the staff.” said Bill.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

Thirty-fourth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Hagrid dabbed his eyes with his large handkerchief.

Dialogue set.

“Hagrid, Hogwarts will always be your home.” said Dumbledore with a kind smile.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue set.

“Here’s hoping the train ride is not intercepted by Death Eaters.” said Harry.

“Not a pleasant thought there.” said Fred.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

“They’d better.” growled Harry.

“I’m sure they would not deny me.” said Dumbledore.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.
“That’ll give Aurors time to get ready and stay stationed on the train.” said Tonks.

“You’re late…” muttered Harry.

“Just like the first book.” said Neville.

“Don’t quite know what she’s all upset about, now they’re both paintings.” said Ron softly.

Hermione only slightly nudged Ron in the side.
“Sort of yeah, sort of no.” said Harry.

“You’re a Potter…you’ll be curious again.” said Rudolph, a trembling smile on his face.

“Don’t be so sure…” said Dumbledore quietly.
“Last chapter of the book, shall we call it a day after this?” asked Officer McFinn.

“Yeah, don’t know where Inspector Homes or Dudley ran off too.” said Harry leaning back in his chair. “Best check up on them in case they got lost.”

“Not likely, not with the Dobby and the rest of the house-elves keeping a close eye on them.” said Sirius.

Officer McFinn took a deep breath and then began the final chapter of the book. “Thirtieth Chapter

“Nice title.” said the twins. “Makes you feel all good inside.”

First paragraph, second sentence.

“Don’t blame the Patils but Smith, I don’t hold much for him.” said Ron.

First paragraph, third sentence.

“Go Seamus.” said Dean looking at his best mate with a stare. “Never thought you’d stand up to her.”

End of first paragraph.

Dumbledore accepted a handkerchief from McGonagall, and dabbed his eyes.

“Well, Albus, you were a famous wizard after all, and had made quite a difference in the lives of many different people.” said Flitwick. “It’s understandable that many people would come to pay your respects.”

Second paragraph, second sentence.

Hagrid blushed.

End of second paragraph.

“I’m sure they just want a statement.” said Hermione.

“They can have five words, ‘None-of-your-damn-business.’” said Harry ticking off each word.
“Why do I have a bad feeling?” asked Fred.

“Cause it’s the end of the book.” said George.

The people in the Winter Den looked between Moody and Bill, but averted their gaze when Moody’s bright blue eye caught them.

“Well, that’s a one-eighty, you like your steaks well done…” said Mr. Weasley.

Remus shivered, “I could never eat them like that.”

“The bloodier the better.” said Sirius quietly to Harry.

“Then I guess you’d better start liking your food a bit undercooked compared to Mum’s.” said Charlie.

“I could live with it.” said Bill.

“Yeah, keep selling that story.” said Ginny with a nudge to Harry.

Mrs. Weasley whimpered slightly.
“You’d think we’d avoid it at all cost then.” said Ron.

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

Sixth paragraph, first comma.

“Prude.” said the twins together.

End of sixth paragraph.

“Sad thing is, that’s going to be a term now.” said Neville with a weak chuckle.

“At least amongst us it will be.” said Harry, his lips turning into a small smile.

Dialogue line.

“You always find out something in the library, it’s the library for pity’s sake.” said Ron, chuckling quietly.

Dialogue line.

“Say hello to the new obsession.” said Harry raising his hand.

“You have more important things to be obsessed about at the moment, don’t just focus on one.” said Moody.

Seventh paragraph, first sentence, first semi-colon, first comma.

Dumbledore sunk a little lower in the chair he was sitting in, guilt evident on his face.

Seventh paragraph, end of first sentence.

“You’re not alone, mate.” said Ron quietly. “We’ll be there.”

End of seventh paragraph.

Eighth paragraph.

“Your life is not the easiest…” said Remus.
Ninth paragraph.

“But that’s just what make Hermione, Hermione.” said Harry.

“No,” she said sadly, “I’ve been trying, Harry, but I haven’t found anything. There are a couple of reasonably well-known wizards with those initials — Rosalind Antigone Bungs. ‘Antigone?’ said Ron. “It’s from…” said Hermione. "She mourned and buried her dead brother when it was illegal to do so and hanged herself after she was locked up in a tomb.” said Harry. “I dunno if I want Ginny to bury me if she ends up that way…leave me to the birds.” said Ron. Ginny giggled. “That’s sweet, little morbid, but sweet.”

Rupert ‘Axebanger’ Brookstanton. but they don’t seem to fit at all.

“I’d hope not, one was long since passed on the year that Tom was in school and the other had never had the misfortune of meeting him before her choice to become a recluse.” said Dumbledore.

End of dialogue set.

Tenth paragraph.

“His name’s going to be mud with Harry for the rest of his life, I’d warrant.” said Tonks.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“How do you figure?” asked Fred. “Yeah, Snape came outright and said that he was the Half-Blood Prince…” said George. “Though… granted, the spells were made by someone who… became a Death Eater…” said Fred. “We’re going to shut it and let you continue on.” said George.
The students in the room blinked.

“The Gobstone champion…was his mum?” asked Ernie quietly.

Sirius quirked a brow, “That…explains something I thought was pretty odd.”

Remus looked over.

“Remember when we…nicked his books and challenged him to a game of gobstones to get them back? He won without trying…and Peter was the best in Gryffindor! Never was on any team or anything.” said Sirius.

“I’d nearly forgotten about that.” said Remus, he sent the Potions instructor an odd look.

Ron slowly stood up and went to go and hid behind Harry’s chair, to escape the glare sent his way by Snape.

Snape flinched.

“I’m not ashamed of my mother.” spat Snape sharply.

“And your dad?” asked Ron from behind the sofa.

“None of your business, Weasley.” retorted Snape.

“He is not like Tom, I will stand by that.” said Dumbledore.

Snape shifted slightly in his chair, but said nothing.
“Why did you leave the book behind?” asked Harry.

“It was not intentional.” said Snape plainly.

“Of course I knew.” said Dumbledore. “I knew about that particular spell and I told him that if I ever saw that spell be used against another student I would take him to task personally. I also was here when his mother came to school.”

“Had he used it on a student before?” asked Neville quietly and turned his gaze downward when Snape turned to glare at him.

“Not to my knowledge, but that wasn’t the first time he’s accidentally left the book behind, it was quite fortunate that the spell was only used once and it was on an inanimate object.” said Dumbledore.

“He’s killed someone, that’s enough to be considered ‘evil.’” said Harry softly.

“Not what it sounded like I was saying.” said Hermione honestly.

“Either I’m thinking of wizarding funeral, or I’m trying to block out yours.” said Harry nodding towards Officer McFinn.
Several people wiped their eyes in handkerchiefs and tissues.

Thirteenth paragraph, fourth sentence.

“Best take that all, Albus.” said Lionus placing a Calming Draught on the table beside the Headmaster. “I would rather not have to tell Nicodemus you had another heart attack on my watch.”

Thirteenth paragraph, sixth sentence.

“Last thing I want to do is relay the story over and over again, come see me at the Dursleys.” said Harry.

End of thirteenth paragraph.

“Wondering how far I could flick them?” asked Ron absently.

Fourteenth paragraph, second sentence, third comma.

“Tall?” snorted Ron. “Did he grow further than his normal two foot height?”

Fourteenth paragraph, fourth sentence.

“Wow, he’s giving you ‘props’.” said Chief Hawkeye with an impressed look.

Fourteenth paragraph, sixth sentence.

Malfoy turned a bit pink.

End of fourteenth paragraph.

“Punishing him for not completing the task he was assigned, most likely.” said Moody.

Fifteenth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Wonder who would be the replacement Head of House.” wondered George aloud.

“That would be Vector.” said McGonagall. “It is normal to have an emergency backup Head in case one of us has to leave the castle for any emergency purpose.”

Sixteenth paragraph, third sentence, first semi-colon, first comma.

“Have to wear my best for him.” said Sprout, mopping her eyes with a slightly dirt covered handkerchief.

End of sixteenth paragraph.

“At least it’s a suit.” said Remus.

Seventeenth paragraph.

Eighteenth paragraph, second paragraph, second semi-colon.

“It was always my favorite color on her.” said Dumbledore with a fond smile.

“He could always tell if I wasn’t up to snuff if my hair wasn’t pink. I suppose…I wanted him to see pink one more time.” said Tonks wiping her eyes with the base of her palm.

Eighteenth paragraph, third sentence.

“We need to get them more respectable dress robes…” said Mrs. Weasley.

“We were probably paying homage to his discovery of twelve uses of dragon’s blood.” said Fred.

“Or it was the cleanest things we had at the time.” said George.

“Either way, it works.” said the twins together.

“That it does.” said Dumbledore with a cheerful smile.

Eighteenth paragraph, fourth sentence, fourth semi-colon.

“An article once says that Dumbledore gave him the nod towards music.” said Alicia.

“I most certainly did, he has quite the musical knack, I told him it would be a shame to squander it.” said Dumbledore, the smile still on his face.

Eighteenth paragraph, fourth sentence, fifth semi-colon.

“We correspond quite frequently, he tells me such delightful anecdotes about some of the more interesting riders he would have on his charming bus.” said Dumbledore.
Harry rubbed his eyes tiredly.

“Why the bloody hell would someone bring her?” asked Harry hotly.

“She cannot hurt me anymore.” said Dumbledore kindly. “Not that she ever did to be honest.”

“Well, I’m going to make sure that the day I die, she’s not allowed within fifty miles.” said Harry.

“I’d rather make sure you far outlive her.” said Sirius.

“Are you joking? She’s a freaking cockroach.” said Harry with a sneer.

Harry groaned and looked at Dumbledore out of the corner of his eye. “Mental, you are.”

“I did not send out any invitations, but I can assure you, she won’t be invited.” said Dumbledore smiling warmly.

“Oh, she’s not going to get the chance to attend.” said Lionus.

“Now if only the Forbidden Forest’s herd would come and show up.” said Ron with a vindictive smile. “She’d flee for the hills.”

“Oh, in these dark times, a wizard as (and I will be a bit prideful here) powerful as myself, it is quite the blow when they’re laid low.” said Dumbledore. “And while Rufus and I had a few moments of disagreement, we had a mutual respect for each other.”

“Him for you more than you for him, no matter what.” said Tonks.
“It’s one of my favorites form of music, but if I had known that you could sing, I would have been quite pleased to hear you sing a song or two.” said Dumbledore with a kind smile to Harry.

“I’m amazed that the Hogwart’s choir didn’t try and come up with something.” said Remus.

“I don’t think anyone in the school would have been up to the job, not if they themselves were grieving.” said Sirius.

Ginny handed Harry a tissue, as she was one of the first to notice a small stream of tears falling down his face.

“Tears are appropriate for a funeral, as well as blowing one’s nose.” said Dumbledore.

“Wow…lot of progress, hope you keep it up.” said Chief Hawkeye with a nod of appreciation.

“We know the feeling.” said Ron quietly.

“Best not let the tufty-haired wizard hear that.” said George.

“Will put him off his eulogy.” said Fred.

“It’s called ‘Remembering the good times during the bad.’” said Dr. Clark with a slight sniff. “I had those when we…well…buried James…”
“Same here, only with our James.” said Remus nodding.

Twenty-sixth paragraph.

“We now have many more years that what was designed for us, my dear boy, and I will answer… well..most questions that you have. There are some answers I would prefer to tuck away for a different day or situation.” said Dumbledore with a twinkling smile.

Twenty-seventh paragraph.

“It’s impossible to completely eradicate it, but you can at least keep it hedged, like grass.” said Lionus.

Twenty-eighth paragraph, first sentence.

Glacier leaned over Harry’s chair when he noticed Harry’s hands become tense on the armrests. “Don’t think of it that way.”

“Too late.” said Harry softly.

“Never too late, till you make it too late.” said Glacier.

Twenty-eighth paragraph, second sentence.

Mrs. Weasley came over and hugged Harry fiercely.

End of twenty-eighth paragraph.

“You’re not alone.” said Ginny softly. “It may seem like it at the moment, but you’re not.”

Twenty-ninth paragraph.

Thirtieth paragraph.

“Style, the man has style, even in death.” said Kingsley.

Thirty-first paragraph.

Thirty-second paragraph.

“What are you thinking about?” asked Ron.
“Quite a short funeral.” said Mrs. McFinn.

“I never did like things being dragged on such as that, I always wanted mine to be under half an hour.” said Dumbledore with a chuckle.

“God…I love you…” said Harry with a startled chuckle.

“Aww…” said the Gryffindor Chasers.

“Something we have to come to terms with on a daily basis…though not when it concerns Voldemort.” said Chief Hawkeye.

“Mate…” said Ron staring at Harry in wonder.

The girls, both old and young alike, all dabbed at their eyes with handkerchiefs and tissues. “Wish my breakups were like this, instead of wanting to kick him right in the nads.” said Katie.

“So, note to self, don’t break up with Katie.” said Lee releasing a breath.
“It's not about being happy…it's about…well…getting the chance to live with you…in peace…maybe a house, a yard, some kids…and not have to keep freaking out over something knocking over the dustbin…” said Harry quietly, a tremor in his voice.

Mrs. Weasley, Mrs. McFinn and Professor Sprout were whimpering slightly, staring at the two teens with watery eyes.

“Doubt you’re going in the direction I’m going.” said Harry glumly.

“He can kiss my ass.” said Harry firmly.

“Not fast enough.” said Harry.

“Get to the point.” said Harry.
“Hope the Daily Prophet hears.” muttered George.

“No shit.” snapped Harry.

Glacier placed a cool hand on Harry’s neck.

Dumbledore smiled fondly over to Harry.

“Don’t waste their lives.” said Harry darkly.

“Shhhh….“ shushed Glacier softly.

“So you want me to blow sunshine up their skirts? Fresh out.” said Harry.
“What are they going to do? Cry on you?” asked Fred.

“I’d say it was planned, but I’d love to hit Percy on any given day.” said Ron.

The students gathered and whistled slowly.

“I’m not going if Harry’s not, we’ll be dead in a fortnight.” said Neville.

Sirius released a breath slowly. “I’ve only ever gone back a few times. It’s not the same…”

“We all need closure…” said Dumbledore. “But I fear that Voldemort may also use that.”
Moody shook his head. “I’m proud of how strong his sense of justice is…but I’m feeling a bit regretful how young you are.”

“Grawp cuddles?” said Lee.

“Quite a few many years.” said Ron. “Didn’t ditch you…well, not for long.” he finished with a blushed.

Dumbledore smiled softly. “We need that in these dark days we’ll be facing, it’s quite the blessing.”

Officer McFinn closed the book slowly. “That’s all, only one book left.”

“Taking a break.” said Harry standing up, releasing himself from the blankets that wrapped around him and he stalked out of the room.
The Arrival

Harry walked out of the den and strolled down different corridors till he had accidentally ran into Inspector Homes and Dudley.

“You done?” asked Dudley plainly.

Harry shrugged and nodded his head towards a closed door. “Want something to eat? I could do with whipping something up.”

“Where are the rest of them?” asked Inspector Homes looking around.

“I’m sure I’m going to be followed soon enough.” said Harry with a non-committal shrug as led them to his own kitchen.

Dudley looked in at the large, spacious kitchen with an excited look and a gave a low whistle. “Blimey, you could have a lot of fun in this place.”

“Explains why this room is one of the largest ones in my part of the house.” said Harry with a faint smile as he walked over to cupboard and wrapped an apron around his middle. “Now, what do I have to play with?” he finished ducking his head into the cupboard to take stock of what was in there.

It was fifteen minutes later when the rest of the inhabitants of the house came into the kitchen. Sirius pulled up a stool right away, next to Dudley and smiled hopefully at the dough that was being kneaded.

“Mind letting us know what you’re making?” asked Rudolph leaning on Leroy’s shoulder as he stood behind his husband. “Need to know if I should chastise you for attempting to ruin our appetites.”

“Hey, no one’s forcing you to choke it down.” said Harry with a smirk.

“Don’t need to force anyone to eat your food.” said Dudley absently. “It’s the best food ever.”

The kitchen was quiet, other than the soft pounding of the dough on the counter, it was still odd to hear Dudley compliment Harry…especially after all they had read. “Glad to hear you like it, would hate to think that after so many years you actually hated my cooking.”

“You make even the kitchen staff at Smeltings, seem like…well…not quite mum’s….” but then his face faltered.

Harry stopped kneading the dough and looked at Dudley with a frown. “You know, I don’t rightly know what sort of punishment they gave Aunt Petunia…but your dad, he…put everything on the line…to see that she was given some mercy.”

Dudley looked up at Harry, his eyes wide.

“He won’t be getting out of prison for a while, but as for your mum, well…I don’t know how long she’ll be, but it won’t be nearly as long.” said Harry quietly. “You may be able to see her fairly soon.”
Dudley looked out of the corner of his eye at Inspector Homes. “Would that…mean I’d go back home?”

“That’s for the courts to decide, or the Rangers, I mean, can’t exactly charge her with child abandonment when she was being arrested by wizards. I’m sure they’re going to have some hand in it at some point or another.” said the Inspector sipping a cup of coffee. “Won’t exactly be a fair trial when she can’t even tell the police where she had been.”

Dudley sat in silence.

---

Glacier and Harry sat quietly in his suite before a roaring fire later on that evening. They had just finished talking about the different discoveries that came with the reading of this book and the unease Harry was feeling going into this final book.

“Are you still going to bring…him?” asked Harry quietly.

“The Star Captain and the Chief have weighed the pros and cons of bringing the man here, while it may not seem to be a good idea to put the man that has caused so much distress to you in such a confined space…”

“And not knowing the outlook in the final book…I don’t know if I would want to see his face when and if I finally died in the next book.” said Harry. “You have to admit, I’ve had a lot of close calls, and I don’t think I can dodge the reaper any more than I have already.”

“True, you do seem to have the devil’s own luck.” said Glacier with a slight smirk. “But imagine the look on his face if you were to finally vanquish your ancient foe, I personally would relish that moment after all this.”

Harry’s lips twitched. “I’d like to see his face if he were to fail too…but…I dunno.”

“If everything in life was easy to predict, there would be no surprises.” said Glacier “Just as we did in the castle, you still hold all the power in these readings, you may limit or extend an invitation to listen to these as you wish.”

Harry sighed as he picked up the book from his bedside table. “These books…can’t quite tell if it’s curse or a blessing half the time. But I guess, it’s a blessing…in the long run…”

Glacier smiled.

---

The next morning, everyone gathered in one of the many drawing rooms after breakfast. They were waiting for Lionus to arrive and bring with him the “visitor” that was going to sit in on the final readings.

“Harry? How are you feeling?” asked Mrs. Weasley quietly.

“Fine…I guess…not looking forward to being in the same room as him, hopefully this book is full of us kicking his ass…” said Harry.

“That’s my hope as well, just to keep any sort of smug look off his face.” said Glacier sipping his morning cup of coffee.
“He’s really the one that killed Uncle James and Aunt Lily?” asked Dudley quietly.

Harry turned and looked at Dudley. “Do you know about them, other than whatever you’ve heard that I’ve said?”

“Yeah, Mum told me about Aunt Lily, she told me when you went off to school and Dad had gone off to work. Said she was…really special.”

Snape’s grip on his coffee cup tightened slightly.

“She was.” said Dumbledore, a fond smile on his lips. “She really was.”

“I’m sort of shocked she said that, to be honest.” said Harry.

Soon, their morning was interrupted by the return of the Lionus, most of the same Rangers as before, a new Ranger that they had never seen before and…Lord Voldemort.

It took everyone quite a while to restore their heart rates to their normal levels after the initial meeting. Most were startled by how almost normal the Dark Lord looked, despite of course his still missing nose and the odd collar tight around his neck. He wore matching metal braces on his wrists and his legs were chained together.

“Now, none of you need to fear anything, he’s quite the tame little snake…at least he is with a little persuasion.” said the new Ranger with a sneer as Lord Voldemort was escorted to a chair.

She looked over to the others and quirked a brow at their staring. “What?”

“I think they’re waiting for an introduction…at least.” said Chief Hawkeye as he took a sip of tea.

She rolled her eyes and then placed her hands on her hips, and then spoke in a monotone voice. “Good Morning, my name is Captain Reaper, I’m the Chief Warden at Hell’s Garden. I’m here to make sure my prisoner…” She tugged on the chain that hung behind the Dark Lord’s neck, causing him to shift slightly and his eye twitched. “Behaves himself.”

The people gathered all stared at her, she was beautiful woman with thick, wavy red hair, brown almond shaped eyes, and a very svelte looking physique. She was wearing a pair of black jeans with a red turtleneck sweater under the normal black Ranger cloak with a stunning necklace adorned with a diamond studded key made of browner shade of gold.

Despite the reassuring presence of the Rangers, Mrs. Weasley and Mrs. McFinn leaned back away from the new arrival and pulled on the sleeves of the person closest to them, namely Mr. Weasley in Mrs. Weasley’s case and Remus in Mrs. McFinn. Mrs. Weasley however also pulled the nearest child she could behind her.

“He won’t hurt anyone, as long as no one does anything foolish to him or that collar.” said Reaper with a smirk. “So, if you don’t want him to get loose and potentially attack you all, don’t touch him. Though, for the record, there’s not much he can do.”

Voldemort’s mouth twisted into a snarl.

“Have something to say, Riddle?” asked Chief Hawkeye as he took a seat beside Mrs. McFinn.

Voldemort shook his head after a moment, but he forced his face to slid into a non-descript expression.
Officer McFinn ran his hand over the cover of the final book. “Deep breaths, James.” he said to himself.

Harry stood up and walked towards the door. “I’ll go get some snacks…” he then looked down at the Dark Lord as he passed. “You can starve to death for all I care.”

Riddle smirked as he looked up at the young man. “A slow and painful death? I was at least going to be merciful and end your life swiftly.”

“So you say…but I can’t see you wanting it all to end so fast…” said Harry coldly.

“Go get your food, and you be quiet.” snapped Reaper. “I wouldn’t start a fight with him, Potter, not unless you want me to intervene and it will not be to mollycoddle you… I have the tendency to hit whomever the most annoying within range, and I have quite the arm.”

“That she does.” said Lionus with a chuckle. “And she doesn’t hold back either, I think I still have a bruise somewhere…”

“The place where you’re bruised is called your brain.” retorted Reaper with a crooked smile.

After everyone had settled down, and Voldemort was restrained even further than what he was already trussed up as, they watched as Officer McFinn reach for the next book, the final book in the long series that had become quite important to their lives.

It gave Harry the family he always dreamed of.

It gave Sirius the freedom he had wished for.

It gave the Weasleys the financial stability they needed.

It gave Dumbledore the insight he had neglected to see.

It gave Snape the peace he had denied himself, at least partially.

It brought an end to the war that the Order had been fighting for years.

It was going to give the magical community a deep sense of relief knowing that Lord Voldemort was never going to return to power.

To think, what made it all come to pass…was that ugly toad faced bitch.
The Darkness Meets

Officer McFinn read the title of the chapter and groaned. “The Dark Lord Descends.”

Voldemort smirked.

“Stuff it, No-nose.” muttered Reaper.

First paragraph, second sentence, first semi-colon.

“Wow, I’ve only seen Moody be that paranoid.” said Tonks quietly.

End of first paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“So, he’s dead? So far this book has the best beginning.” said Fred pointing to Voldemort.

“Break out the champagne.” said George.

“Shh!” said Mrs. Weasley as she looked fearfully over to the man.

“He can’t do anything, Mum.” said Fred. “And if he does get out, I don’t’ think I like his chances against Miss Reaper there.”

“Yeah, she’s like you…he won’t get two millimeters before she smacks him down.” said George.

Second paragraph.

Dialogue set, first sentence.

Sirius growled.

End of dialogue set.

Third paragraph.

Fourth paragraph.

Malfoy’s eyes widened.

Dialogue line.
“They’re not bad…” said Malfoy quietly. “Sort of fun to feed…”

Fifth paragraph.

Sixth paragraph, second sentence.

“Don’t your paintings move?” asked Neville, who had swiftly put two and two together.

“Not normally, Father only wants them to look dignified, they get to relax when no one’s home or around.” said Malfoy grimly.

“Not even the paintings are free.” said Hermione softly.

End of sixth paragraph.

Seventh paragraph, fifth sentence, first colon, second comma.

“Not again.” said Dr. Clark.

End of seventh paragraph.

Eighth paragraph, first sentence.

“Wonder if he picked that spot for dramatic effect.” said Sirius.

“If he’s so snakelike, maybe that’s where he has to be to keep warm.” sneered Harry.

Voldemort glanced over to Harry, his face beginning to take on a scowl, till he was forced to steel it back to the way it was.

End of eighth paragraph.

“Insert makeup commercial here.” said Dr. Clark in a whisper to Mrs. McFinn and Officer McFinn.

Mrs. McFinn giggled quietly, while Officer McFinn snorted.

Voldemort’s eye twitched.

“Not so great when we’re talking smack about you, is it?” said Chief Hawkeye, a dark chuckle coming from his own throat. “Get used to it, you’re going to hear a lot!”
Dialogue set, first sentence.

Voldemort looked over at Snape, with an expression that clearly said You will never live to have that honor.

Reaper tapped him with the butt end of her mace, “Whatever you’re thinking, it’s not happening.”

End of dialogue set.

Ninth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“And who in the bloody world let him know about that?” said Remus darkly.

Tenth paragraph.

Dialogue set, second sentence.

“Oh that they’d be subjected to having their thoughts probed.” said Dr. Clark.

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Eleventh paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Why do I get the sickening feeling that Snape’s is the plan and they’re going to get it right on the first try.” said Mr. Wealsey.

Twelfth paragraph.

“I can’t see me being escorted to wherever by the Aurors. Order maybe, Aurors…not so much.” said Harry with a smirk.

Thirteenth paragraph.
Dialogue set.
Kingsley, Moody, and Tonks made to disagree but then looked pensive.
“Never mind, I could see it.” said Moody. “The bloody idiot.”

Dialogue line.
Dialogue set.
“Been saying it for years. We didn’t just now start believing it.” said Moody. “Especially with Lucius Malfoy slithering all over the place.”

Dialogue line.

“Oh, I think we’ve got quite a bit things right.” said Kingsley smugly.
Voldemort himself looked haughty.
“Look where you’re at.” said Sirius sneering.

Fourteenth paragraph.
Dialogue line.
Fifteenth paragraph.
Dialogue line.
Dialogue set, first sentence.
Everyone but Voldemort, Dudley and Inspector Homes knew where the most likely place that Harry was going to be placed and stared at Snape.
“Don’t bother asking me, I don’t know.” said Snape waving his hand dismissively.

End of dialogue set.
Dialogue line.

“It’s not like you’re writing a report for some accounting firm.” said Dr. Clark.

Sixteenth paragraph.
Dialogue line.
Several of the adults shook their head.

“Difficulty is right, don’t quite like the man, but he’s got some resilience to the Imperius curse.” said Moody.

“There’s not many people you do like.” said Tonks.

Seventeenth paragraph.

“Sick, twisted…” said Mr. Weasley.

Dialogue line.

“And wouldn’t that be a damn shame.” said Fred.

“Tragic.” said George.

Dialogue set, first sentence, second dash, second comma, first word.

Tonks groaned. “I don’t want to work under him…He’s all paperwork and no action.”

“Not a bad man…but I agree…” said Kingsley slowly. “He’d rather wait days to procure the correct forms then go out and apprehend the suspect we have. Not necessarily a bad thing, but time is of the essence…something he never quite understood.”

“’Cause he was never an Auror.” said Moody a little smugly. “He only came up with the laws and loopholes…never had to enforce them.”

End of dialogue set.

“As long as our friend Thicknesse is not discovered before he has converted the rest,” said Voldemort.

“And if we’re on the ball, we’ll catch him long before that happens.” said Moody.

“Though…have to say that it won’t go so well.” said Fred. “Not if it’s the beginning of the book.”

End of dialogue set.

Mrs. McFinn and Mrs. Weasley covered their mouths and looked over to Harry in fear.

Dialogue set.

“I’d rather walk to wherever this is going to be.” said Harry.
“Don’t bother trying to take mental notes, this all isn’t going to happen.” said Reaper to the smirking Dark Lord.

“Yaxley at least is dead.” said Lionus with a sneer. “Don’t quite remember who all is still living or not. Don’t rightly care at this point.”

The former Dark Lord’s mouth twisted into a snarl.

Dialogue line.

“Wise move.” said Dumbledore nodding.

Dialogue line.

Eighteenth paragraph, first sentence.

Sirius reached down and took Harry’s hand in his own, giving it a squeeze.

Eighteenth paragraph, third sentence.

The twins stared at the book in shock and disbelief. “Did he just…admit he made a mistake?” said Fred.

“And to his own lackeys?” said George.

They both looked over to Harry. “He must be channeling you or something.”

End of eighteenth paragraph.

Nineteenth paragraph.

“I’m getting sort of anxious…who is the…person floating above them?” said Hermione nervously.

Dialogue set.

“You were the one that tried the last few times.” said Harry with a smirk over to the Dark Lord. “That excuse won’t really fly.”

Twentieth paragraph.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue set.
“Thanks for reminding me, you’re not allowed near him.” said Sirius over to Remus.

“What happened to him anyway?” asked Harry. “Glacier said that they caught him too.”

“We did, still not sure whether we’re just going to force him to turn back to his formal self and confine him that way, or just feed him to one of Bioman’s pets.” said Lionus.

“Bioman?” asked Ron.

Lionus was thoughtful for a moment, but then smiled. “Like Hagrid, only a little leaner and a bit shorter.”

Dialogue set.

Voldemort looked confused for a moment and looked fixedly at the book. “Why am I not using my own wand?” he said softly. “I’ve planned the moment for quite some time.”

“If you’re going to wait for an answer, hope you have nothing planned for the rest of eternity.” said Moody gruffly. Sadly, due to the Dark Lord’s smug look, he remembered why.

Twenty-first paragraph.

“It’s sort of the same thing.” said Sirius fingering his own in his pocket.

Dialogue set, second sentence.

“They should be honored…” snarled Voldemort, taking another liberty at speaking his thoughts aloud.

“Honored…yeah…honored that they could easily get wiped out by an Order member.” said Bill with a snicker. “And with your luck against Harry, you’ll lose the wand some way.”

End of dialogue set.

“We took care of that, long before you came to be here.” said Lionus.

Twenty-second paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Twenty-third paragraph, second sentence.
“Sounds like one of your more loyal lieutenants is seeing things in a far different light, especially now that he’s had a taste of peace and his own personal power.” said Dumbledore carefully.

“He was a fool.” said Voldemort coldly. “And soon will be a dead fool.”

Draco paled.

“It’s adorable how you think you’re getting out of here on your own terms.” said Reaper absently.

End of twenty-third paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, third sentence.

Voldemort chuckled darkly, but was struck from behind by the Ranger Warden. “You can talk, but further than that…nuh uh.”

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

“Stupid fool.” muttered McGonagall.

Twenty-fourth paragraph.

Dialogue set, first sentence.

“He’s probably wishing he was still in Azkaban.” said Neville.

Voldemort once again had the barest look of puzzlement.

End of dialogue set.

“Most houseguests don’t have the tendency to lop off and kill you at the drop of a hat.” said Ron.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.
“Seriously, you would have been okay with ‘Yes, get the f@ck out of my house’?” said Harry with a quirk of his brow.

“Harry!” said Mrs. Weasley looking scandalized.

“I am not fond of being lied to, boy.” snarled Voldemort.

“You’ve been and will be lied to…welcome to being human.” said Chief Hawkeye.

Twenty-fifth paragraph.

“Here’s snakey.” said George.

Twenty-sixth paragraph.

Voldemort’s hands tensed on the armrests of the chair he was sitting in.

“If you’re wondering where your ‘pet’ is, she’s being looked after by one of our Rangers, and frankly, she’s in much better hands…” said Lionus.

“Doubtful…” muttered Voldemort.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“He said ‘did’.” said Tonks with a snicker.

Twenty-seventh paragraph.

Dialogue set.

“If that’s Bella, then…yeah…she’d get a kick out of being in the same house.” said Leroy.

Voldemort smirked. “She is quite willing to follow my instructions.”

“We don’t want to know…thank you.” said Rudolph coldly.

Twenty-eighth paragraph.

The Dark Lord chuckled to himself.

“She’s a nut…” said whispered Seamus to Neville.
The students that were there, other than the Weasley children, Hermione, Harry and Luna were not all that keen on saying anything in front of the Dark Lord, despite the Ranger presence, so all their comments were doled out in whispers.

Dialogue line.

“Wondering if he’s talking about her sadistic pleasures…” said Leroy.

“Still would rather not think about it.” said Rudolph.

Twenty-ninth paragraph.

“Wonder when the last time that happened was.” said Ron.

Dialogue line.

Voldemort scoffed. “I know she would not dare to tell me a lie.”

“Does he have no idea that she…loves him.” said Ginny.

“I don’t want to even begin to understand him.” said Hermione coldly.

Dialogue line.

Thirtieth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Finally! I managed to drag you to bleeding altar!” said Tonks smiling happily over to Remus.

“I’ll mourn for you, mate.” said Sirius patting Remus on the back. “Just like I did for James.”

Thirty-first paragraph, third sentence.

“Not often his lieutenants get their asses handed to them.” said Moody darkly.

End of thirty-first paragraph.

Dialogue set.

“Glad I’m no niece of yours.” said Tonks smugly. “I already had to get over the hurdle of being an Auror with an Aunt who’s a psychotic freak.”
“Not till he goes through some tests he won’t.” said Remus quickly.

“Tests?” asked Draco, startled at his own voice as it sounded meek and barely above a whisper.

“Yeah, he didn’t let James or I hold Harry till we both proved that we wouldn’t drop him on his head, or muck about with him in our arms.” said Sirius.

“And you were able to keep Lily from him” asked Mrs. Weasley looking shocked.

“He wouldn’t have dared.” said Sirius with a snicker. “He couldn’t keep James away from his baby for longer than an hour. But Moony here was mad with becoming an uncle, he read every bloody book he could find, wizarding or otherwise. He was a nightmare before Harry was born, trying to quiz me with a little doll. I’ll admit, you were a tad creepy.” he added with a look towards Remus.

“Peter never passed.” said Remus firmly. “Thank Merlin…”

“You kept making him nervous, staring at him like you wanted to rip his face off if he so much as tilted the doll the wrong way.” said Sirius with a laugh.

“Should have snipped yours at the bud then.” said Harry coolly over to the nose-less man.

“Your’s should never have been allowed to go past it’s sapling year.” retorted Voldemort.

“You filthy hypocrite.” said Harry with a smirk. “You have less pure wizarding blood in your veins than I do.”

Voldemort snarled angrily over at the young man.

“Sucks when you can’t fight back or kill me, doesn’t it?” sneered Harry.

“Don’t be picking fights, boys.” said Reaper half-heartedly. “Mummy doesn’t want to have to bash some heads together.”

“Don’t be picking fights, boys.” said Reaper half-heartedly. “Mummy doesn’t want to have to bash some heads together.”
“Oh, this will not end well…” said George.

Dialogue line.

Thirty-fifth paragraph.

“Can’t see him helping much, not with Voldemort right there.” said Remus.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue set.

Most everyone stared at the book in shock and horror.

“Oh, Merlin…no…” said McGonagall with a hand over her mouth.

“Poor Professor Burbage.” said Hermione softly.

Thirty-sixth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Not so different…and yet, not quite the same.” said Luna serenely.

Voldemort rolled his eyes.

Thirty-seventh paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, second sentence, first comma.

“Oh, yes…and terrorizing families and instilling the children with fear, panic and distrust is so different.” said Mrs. McFinn with a glare.

Voldemort looked over to the woman, a firm look on his face, but then he startled after seeing her apparently for the first time. “Who…”

“No one you need to be asking for.” said Harry quickly.

Voldemort looked between Harry and then the woman that sat beside him, an interested look in his eyes.

Lionus gave him a warning look. “Don’t even try it.”
Dialogue set, third sentence.

“You cannot be serious.” said George.

“Yeah, we’ve already learned that that’s nothing but a load of waffle.” said Fred.

End of dialogue set.

Thirty-eighth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Professor Flitwick and Professor Sprout turned to hold each other and stare at the book, their eyes wide with terror.

“I don’t think I’ll be able to not cry in front of Charity the next time I see her.” said Professor Sprout, tears pouring down her face.

End of chapter

“You sick moth…” started Harry as he rose to his feet.

“Sit down, this hasn’t happened and won’t.” said Reaper in a bored tone, but she reached behind Voldemort and struck him soundly on the back of his skull. “That’s for Miss Burbage.”
First paragraph, first sentence.

“What?” said Sirius jolting terribly.

“Well, that was quite easy, hopefully it’s a mortal blow.” said Voldemort with a sneer.

“I have yet to use my mace, don’t make me start.” hissed Reaper.

End of first paragraph.

“What the…” said Harry. “Hope Aunt Petunia doesn’t know about that.”

“Yeah…” said Dudley nodding slowly. “That was her main rule, no tea cups upstairs.”

Dialogue line.

Second paragraph, second sentence.

“Not me…not that I know of anyway.” said Dudley.

“Maybe to get me in trouble or something.” said Harry with a shrug, “I wouldn’t be surprised.”

End of second paragraph.

“Just a finger? How disappointing.” muttered Voldemort as Sirius breathed a sigh of relief.

Third paragraph, second sentence, first comma.

“With a wand, anyway.” said Harry.

Third paragraph, end of second sentence.

“Minimal magical healing is taught in your final year. There are far too many things that can go wrong if not done properly.” said McGonagall.

End of third paragraph.

Fourth paragraph, second sentence, first dash.

“I did the same thing.” said Sirius with a gleeful smile. “Only cause I didn’t let Kreacher anywhere near my trunk.”

Fourth paragraph, end of second sentence.

“Sounds about right.” said Sirius.

End of fourth paragraph.

“Idiot, you left your potions dagger unsheathed, didn’t you?” groaned Snape rubbing his eyes.

Fifth paragraph, second sentence, third comma.

Several adults looked uncomfortable while Voldemort seemed to look almost nostalgic. “Diggory…wasn’t that…”

“Shut up.” growled Lionus firmly.

“Why would he even keep that?” asked Ron quietly.

Fifth paragraph, second sentence, fourth comma.

“Get rid of it if it doesn’t work.” said Bill with a quirked brow.

“It was the one that Ron gave me for my birthday.” said Harry.

Fifth paragraph, fourth sentence.

Sirius gulped quietly and looked over to his godson with a sorrowful glance.

End of fifth paragraph.

“Remind me to get you a box for that mirror.” whispered Sirius.

Sixth paragraph.

“Awkward.” said Ernie looking between Harry and Sirius.

Seventh paragraph, second sentence.

“Take the textbooks!” said Hermione.
“But if you were going to go…why need them?” asked Ron.

“I…well…” stammered Hermione, but then she sighed with a blush and a pleased smile on her face.

Seventh paragraph, third sentence.

“But if you were going to go…why need them?” asked Ron.

“I…well…” stammered Hermione, but then she sighed with a blush and a pleased smile on her face.

“Not something they’ve never tried.” said Harry with a roll of his eyes.

“Only once.” said Dudley quietly.

Seventh paragraph, fifth sentence, sixth comma.

“What the hell are you taking letters for?” asked Fred.

“Beats me, I didn’t pack them yet.” said Harry with a shrug.

End of seventh paragraph.

Eighth paragraph.

Ninth paragraph.

“With the way the world is right now, I’m sure someone would try and attempt to shoot her down.” said Harry.

Tenth paragraph, first sentence.

“Resignation my clawed foot.” said Moody.

End of tenth paragraph.

Article Title.

“Always knew he would be the one to write the obituary.” said Remus.

“Here’s hoping it’s not full of flowery words, that one poem he wrote was…nice, but you should really cut if off after ten pages.” Sirius replied.

First article paragraph, second sentence.

“Outsider?” asked Leroy.

Rudolph shrugged.
“Oh…” said Leroy.

“What?” said Hermione as she gazed at Dumbeldore with a shocked expression.

“It’s a long, complicated story.” said Dumbledore with a sigh.

“Muggle…rights?” said Mrs. McFinn.

“Ah…another…complicated matter.” said Dumbledore, looking slightly guilty.

“Sounds slightly familiar…doesn’t it, Dumbledore?” said Voldemort with a sneer.

“Ah, Tom, while there may be similarities, there are also a few important contradictions.” he said with a kind smile.

Dumbledore smiled.

“I don’t know if I would be humbled…or creeped out to hear my own obituary.” said Lee.

“I do feel a little…creeped out…” said Dumbledore with a kind smile.

“Did they even give you the time of day?” asked Harry to the Dark Lord with a smirk on his face.

“They cower before me…” said Lord Voldemort.

“Well, not entirely…” said Dumbledore, a pitying smile on his face.

“I can relate.” said Percy.

“Yeah, so can I.” said Ron looking at his older brothers.
Bill and Charlie shifted uncomfortably.

Sixth article paragraph, first sentence.

“Our family still does that.” said Rudolph with a smile.

“Don’t tell me that I’m going to have to fund that whenever they become of age.” said Harry with a frown.

“They get five hundred galleons, that’s it.” said Rudolph with a smirk. “At least that family rule hasn’t ever changed. Though…most of the time the Potter family graduates just keep the gold and just go around their own country at the very most.”

“Five hundred galleons to go around the world?” asked Hermione thoughtfully. “I don’t know how far that will get you…”

“If you plan it out successfully, you won’t die of starvation, you might get close…but you won’t die.” said Rudolph.

“Wait, you starve?” asked Ron.

“They tend to right off the bat, because they don’t know how to manage their money properly.” said Rudolph. “But if they were ever in any real danger…there would be safety plans in place.”

“But still…some die on their journey. Can’t plan for every contingency.” said Leroy honestly. “I mean, when you go up and poke a sleeping Erumpent…them’s the breaks.”

“Who the hell did that?” asked Harry.

“Your first cousin twice removed, Alissia, she wasn’t…uh…she was sort of like Hermione…but delusional.” said Rudolph giving it a bit of thought. “She thought no creature on this planet could harm her because she loved them all and love conquers all.”

“And she got…” said Hermione slowly.

“Impaled on…stomped on…and shat on.” said Rudolph slowly.

End of sixth article paragraph.

Several people looked over to Dumbledore with sympathy in their eyes.

Seventh article paragraph, second sentence.

“I enjoyed them, not as much as I would have had I, myself, gone out into the world as well.” said Dumbledore. “I was quite jealous of Elphias.”

End of seventh article paragraph.
Harry looked over and saw that Dumbledore did not accept that reassurance.

End of eighth article paragraph.

Ninth article paragraph, fourth sentence, end of parenthesis

Dumbledore nodded.

End of ninth article paragraph.

Tenth article paragraph, third sentence.

“It was quite the sight to behold, I had…I wouldn’t dare say it was a ‘pleasure’, but the chance to see it in person was something I shall never forget.” said Flitwick.

End of tenth article paragraph.

Eleventh article paragraph, third sentence.

Dumbledore brought a finger up to his eye and wiped away a quick pair of tears.

End of article.

Eleventh paragraph.

Dumbledore looked over to Harry, confusion on his face.

Twelfth paragraph, first sentence.

Harry looked embarrassed as Dumbledore smiled kindly down at him.

“Harry…” he looked around at the others in the room. “We’ll talk later.”

End of twelfth paragraph.

Several of the people gathered laughed, while Harry blushed.

Thirteenth paragraph, second sentence.

“I thought that was quite nice, I’ve had several students ask me quite a few questions about those matters, I think it was quite a nice change to not be pelted with questions.” said Dumbledore.

Thirteenth paragraph, third sentence, fourth comma, first pause.

“My life meant nothing, compared to yours.” said Dumbledore kindly.

“Don’t bother responding to that.” said Sirius clapping a hand over Harry’s mouth. “All parents and guardians say that about their kids.”

“Oh, so you’re nothing special?” asked Harry thickly through Sirius’ hand.

“Don’t put yourself in a dangerous situation…” said Sirius pointing to spot behind Harry’s knee.

End of thirteenth paragraph.

“What do you see when you look in the mirror?”

“I? I see myself holding a pair of thick, woolen socks.”

“Socks?” said Dudley looking confused.

Fourteenth paragraph.

Fifteenth paragraph, second sentence.

“I should hope that I’m front page news.” said Voldemort with a sneer.

End of fifteenth paragraph.

Sixteenth paragraph.

Article Title.

“What?” said Remus.

First article paragraph, second sentence.

Before any of them could give a cry of outrage, a surprising person spoke first.

“Oh not her again…” said Voldemort with a groan.

Everyone turned and stared at the man.

“I cannot stand that woman’s writing…” continued Voldemort.

“Seriously?” asked Sirius.
“Why is she still alive then?” said Harry coolly.

“Don’t think I haven’t had someone trying to find her.” said Voldemort. “I suspect that’s due to that pathetic excuse for writing that she does, she has plenty out for her blood. I’ve only really had the few months to try and find her and put an end to her. Annoying insect that she is.”

Hermione, Ron and Harry looked at each other.

“Who would have thought that we could agree with him.” said Fred.

“Scary.” said George. “Very scary.”

End of first article paragraph.

Dumbledore had to stifle his laughter. “I suppose she was not quite paying attention the last time I gave her an interview all those years ago.”

Second article paragraph.

“Another useless wannabe journalist.” muttered Leroy.

Seventeenth paragraph, first sentence.

“Don’t read it, don’t read it.” pleaded Rudolph with a groan.

End of seventeenth paragraph.

“Just dreaming up that image is making me sick.” said George.

“Too bad she’s not here right now, perfect place for it all to land.” said Fred.

First article paragraph, first sentence.

Harry gave a startled laugh.

First article paragraph second sentence, first comma.

“Means it’s a small apartment, not a lot of room.” said Harry wickedly. “No funds to speak of and has no credit to get a larger place.”

First article paragraph, second sentence, second comma.
“The rest of the house is a disaster.” said Dudley joining in. “Horrible housekeeper, or just shoved everything into the other rooms so that it wouldn’t show.”

First article paragraph, second sentence, second comma, fifth word.

“Couldn’t be bothered with providing adequate refreshments, had to throw whatever was in the fridge and pantry into a pan and baked it.” continued Harry looking at his nails. “Skills at baking, virtually nonexistent, pound cake is incredibly low standards for even the most unexpected social visits.”

The rest of the people gathered in the room stared.

End of first article paragraph.

“No comment on the tea, meaning it was weak, cold and low grade.” finished Dudley.

“Most likely teabags.” added Harry. “And I daresay…imported from America.”

“Too harsh!” laughed Dudley.

The rest of the people in the room stared at them as the two cousins laughed loudly. “What was that all about?”

“Just a little something we picked up from Aunt Petunia.” said Harry with a smile.

“And Skeeter failed.” said Harry gleefully.

“Miserably.” added Dudley with a smile, though he had no real knowledge about the woman.

Article Dialogue line.

“Here’s hoping that it’s the first and last of very very none.” said Bill.

Second article paragraph, second sentence.

“And now we have to wonder…fact…fiction?” said Charlie raising his lowering his two hands in opposite directions.

End of second article paragraph.

“Oh…creative license.” said Hermione with a roll of her eyes.
“I’ll give her that, but she’s use to glittering things up when she feels it’s getting a bit boring.” said Leroy.

“And that’s all her articles put together.” said Moody.

“And she’s a complete…” started Ginny.

“Easy there, shortcake.” said Bill.

Dumbledore sighed. “He was regaling her about the time he had found some merpeople in Lake Windermere.”

“Scale of one to ten, ten being she’s ready, one being she’s about as dumb as a bucket full of turnips? Negative infinity.” said Dr. Clark.

“And now she can be potentially arrested for assault.” said Officer McFinn.

“Which opens you up to a suit against you for slander if they are willing to lie for that money.” said Leroy. “We pay for information, but not a giant bag of galleons, you stupid woman.”

“Which is now not permitted to be used in my paper.” said Leroy.
“Jealous folk no doubt.” muttered Hagrid.

Dumbledore simply smiled. “You cannot please everyone.”

Dumbledore stroked his long beard, a twitching smile on his lips.

“An enemy that will work with you to make up any kind of story you want?” asked Hermione hotly.

“As strenuous as our relationship may be some days, I cannot see Aberforth being all that open to talking to any sort of reporter. I daresay he’s had quite a few of them thrown from his establishment from time to time. I believe Rita was one of the more repeated visitors.” said Dumbledore thoughtfully.

“There is no such thing as a blameless life.” said Dumbledore still smiling.

“Oh brother, who didn’t know that?” Sirius rolling his eyes. “I mean, anyone that even had him as a substitute Defense teacher could tell you that.”

“It was almost a tradition, he’d come in every seven years, tell every year students about some of what he had done in his youth, warn you not to do it because of the consequences of such actions and that was it.” said Remus.

“I remember that, that was a slap to the face.” said Mr. Weasley. “Only made me hold him in higher regard.” he added with a whisper to his wife.
“Much like most people, I preferred to keep family matters private.” said Dumbledore.

Sixth article paragraph.

Article dialogue set, second sentence.

“I never had any intention to keep it ‘quiet’.” said Dumbledore.

End of article dialogue set.

“No one has ever bothered to ask.” said Dumbledore. “Other than Rita, but that was after our first unpleasantness.”

Seventh article paragraph.

Article dialogue set, first sentence, second comma.

“How kind of her to say that.” said Dumbledore with a chuckle. “I’m quite enjoying myself.”

End of article dialogue set.

Dumbledore chuckled once more.

“Who’s that?” asked Percy.

“Somebody who’s tried suing just about every famous witch or wizard that had made a discovery in the last seventy years.” said McGonagall. “His cases were thrown out just as soon as they were read.”

Eighth article paragraph.

Article dialogue set, fourth sentence.

“What?” said Flitwick looking confused.

End of article dialogue set.

“Oh sweet Merlin.” said Professor Sprout.

“Just one? I’m insulted.” said Harry with a smirk.

Article dialogue set, second sentence.

Harry blinked, the smirk sliding off his face. “Can I hit her? With a building?”

Voldemort chuckled. “If they don’t give you permission, I certainly will. You’re just his trained little puppy, not…that sort of thing.”

“I’ll take it.” said Harry to the shock of some of the people gathered.

“No wonder she waited till Dumbledore was dead. The lawsuits for slander alone would have killed her.” said Remus.

“And I would have taken actions against her.” said Dumbledore firmly, “I would not have settled for mere lawsuits however.”

End of article dialogue set.

“Oh, she has no bloody clue.” said Harry.

“Oh, yes, we’ve developed a close bond,” says Skeeter.

“F#cking lying bitch!” growled Harry.

“Easy…” said Sirius carefully.

Article dialogue set, first sentence.

“And yet, you said I was addled…how many times has she been struck in the head to cause that much of a lapse in memory?” said Harry.

“One too few.” said Charlie.

“We could help with that.” said Bill.

End of article dialogue set.

“A load of hippogriff dung…” muttered Hagrid darkly.
“And chasing a bunch of Death Eaters you stupid bint.” muttered Dr. Clark.

“You know, Fred…”

“Yes George?”

“That book of hers…might make a dandy fire…right next to the Lockhart books…and that Defense book of Umbridge’s.”

“It might…it just might…the other option is using it to fertilize mum’s garden.” said Fred with a gleeful smile.

“Don’t you dare put that trash in my garden.” warned Mrs. Weasley shaking her finger at the twins.

“Only if to just have something to warm our toes on a cold winter’s night.” said George.

“Not all…” said Dumbledore carefully. “But mostly yes and even the truths are more than likely stretched to the limits.”

“Not quite what you expect to hear on some lazy afternoon as you push the mower through the yard.” said Chief Hawkeye snickering.
“Blue?” said Sirius. “And will you stop doing that to yourself?”

Twenty-first paragraph, fourth sentence, first colon.

“‘Peach’, who paints a boy’s room ‘peach’?” said Ron.

End of chapter

“How in the world could it have been Dumbledore’s eye?” asked Hermione thoughtfully, then her eyes widened. “It could be…but…how?”

“Shall we move on?” asked Officer McFinn. “Or do we want to take a break?”

“Let’s go on, see if the next one is better.” asked Harry.

“I don’t know…I found this chapter to be quite amusing.” said Dumbledore.
First paragraph.

“Whaddya want?” yelled Fred.

“Not you, you!” shouted George.

“He’s busy!” bellowed Fred.

Second paragraph, first sentence, first semi-colon.

“Fred’s right, I’m busy!” shouted Harry.

End of second paragraph.

“I hope he wraps that mirror up before he cuts his hand again reaching into that bag.” said Mrs. Weasley quietly.

Dialogue line.

“I’ll be nice and give you two, piss off.” said Charlie.

Third paragraph.

Dudley blinked and looked over at Harry in interest.

“Muscular?” whispered Fred.

“Well, he doesn’t look as big as he used to be...” said George.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Someone better mark this day on the calendar.” said Tonks. “Mr. Walrus said ‘Please.’”

Dudley snorted. “‘Mr. Walrus?’”

Fourth paragraph, third sentence, second comma.

“There’s a first.” said Harry with a snort.
End of fourth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Another first.” said Hermione.

Dialogue line.

“Fine, do whatever you want.” said Ron with a shrug.

Fifth paragraph, second sentence, first comma.

“ Seems like he’s trying to exercise his brain for once.” said Sirius quietly to Remus.

End of fifth paragraph.

Several people roared with laughter, even Dudley.

“ Oh blimey, that was good.” said Seamus wiping a tear from his eye.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“ The f#ck do I want with the house?” said Harry with a look of disbelief.

“ Harry!” scolded Mrs. Weasley and Mrs. McFinn.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

“I’ve got more money in my trust fund then you’ve got in every account you have.” said Harry which called Dudley stared.

Dialogue line.
“Has Vernon…actually learned something?” said Mr. Weasley thoughtfully.

“I’m…amazed this conversation is going this…calmly.” said Hermione quietly.

“I’m not.” said Glacier coolly with a pointed look at Harry. “Not quite due to internal strength, more along the lines of something else. Rearrangement?”

Harry looked off to the side for a moment.

“Thought so…though that will always just be a guess, we’ll never know for certain.”

“Rearrangement?” asked Ron.

“Rearranging one’s thoughts is a way to think about it, some people do that when they suffer a horrific loss. They block off quite a bit of their thoughts, memories and some emotions just so that they can attempt to move on, try and forget or just ignore the grief.” said Glacier. “But that doesn’t last for long and it could do more harm than good. However…you might be taking it into a different direction and if you are, I’m a little impressed.”

“Tell me we have a flashback, please tell me we have a flashback.” said Dr. Clark with a cross of his fingers.

“Nope.” said Officer McFinn.

“Can we…”

“Nope.” repeated Officer McFinn.

Mr. Weasley smiled slightly.

“My tongue exploded everywhere!” said Dudley, his eyes wide with remembrance and looked hesitantly over to the twins.

“We didn’t ‘explode’ your tongue.” said George.

“We just…expanded it…” said Fred.
“A bit.” finished the twins together.

“That was not ‘a bit.’” said Mr. Weasley pointedly.

Dialogue set.

“Would you?” asked Hermione quietly to Harry. “Would you go and save them?”

“I let Uncle Vernon and Aunt Petunia get arrested and I allowed Dudley to come here…” said Harry thoughtfully. “I might of. I don’t quite know for certain.”

“I believe you would have.” said Dumbledore with a waving hand in a “so-so” gesture. “I would also hope you would not run into the fray without a well thought out plan.”

Eighth paragraph.

“Here’s hoping that it’s enough.” said Kingsley.

Dudley blanched.

Ninth paragraph.

“Must have left the choke on.” said Dr. Clark.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Good memory, now there really wasn’t any excuse for him to forget my birthday, was there?” said Harry with a sneer.

Dudley looked embarrassed.

Dialogue set, second sentence, third comma.

“’Innocent’ my ass.” muttered Sirius.

“Down boy.” said Lionus with a calm sip of his tea.

End of dialogue set.

“Fine, but you’ll be dead before the day is done.” said Remus. “Especially if the Ministry is infiltrated.”
Tenth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Eleventh paragraph.

“Don’t pop yourself now.” said Chief Hawkeye with a laugh. “Be quite the mess to clean up.”

Dialogue set.

Tonks squealed with laughter and nudged Kingsley. “He likes you.”

Kingsley chuckled darkly. “I’m not altogether sure how to feel about that.”

“He certainly didn’t like you when you up and arrested him for child abuse.” Moody also chuckled.

Twelfth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, second sentence.

“So, he’d let the Prime Minister die, as long as he could live…human trait, can’t fault him for that.” said Bill.

End of dialogue set.

“I know when and where to wear…special fashion accessories.” said Kingsley with a look to Tonk’s Weird Sister’s t-shirt.

“Don’t worry, I’ll help you there.” said Tonks with a giggle.

“Please don’t.” said Moody. “Don’t need another walking trend disaster in the Auror Office.”

“Yeah, we just got rid of you.” retorted Tonks cheekily.

Dialogue line.

“Oh…I’m willing to bet they’re not going to like the idea of watching them.” said Sprout.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.
“Dementors? You mean that…” said Dudley, his whole body beginning to tremble and his face becoming flushed, his hand crept towards his mouth and his eyes widened.

Glacier walked behind Dudley and laid a hand on his neck. He stopped trembling for a moment and looked behind him to the Ranger.

“Calm yourself, have some tea.” said Glacier pointing to in front of the teen with his hand still on the back of his neck. Dudley faced forward and took the offered, floating cup of tea.

Thirteenth paragraph.

“There’s…there wasn’t just that one?”

“It’ll explain I’m sure of that…not kindly, but it’ll explain.” said Dumbledore.

“If not, we will.” said Lionus.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

“Oh no I haven’t.” said Harry.

“There you go, not kindly, like the man said.” said Sirius.

Dialogue set, first sentence, third dash.

“Way to just sound bland about it.” said Fred.

“It’s not like it’s terrifying or anything.” said George.

End of dialogue set.

Fourteenth paragraph.

“Paycheck or painful death…”

“Diploma or diabolical torture.”

“Pick one.” said the twins.

“You two are in a right form today, aren’t you?” said Charlie.

“It just keeps handing us the material.” said George.

Dialogue line.
“Smart move…can’t say I ever thought I’d say that to him.” said Bill.

Dudley blushed.

“See ya, wouldn’t wanna be ya?” said Chief Hawkeye. “Always a classic.”

“Strange, she normally loves those things.” said Harry thoughtfully. “Just about takes them right from between the bars before I can get them a quarter of the way through.”

“Wouldn’t wish them on anyone willingly.” said Harry.

“Can’t say Dad’s going to enjoy going to be referred to as that.” said Dudley chuckling quietly.

“You don’t seem as scary…anymore.” said Dudley.

“I don’t seem ‘scary’ to you, boy?” said Voldemort with a slight baring of his teeth.

“Of course not, you idiot.” said Reaper with a warning look. “You look ridiculous without your nose.”
“And then I’d be killed the moment I hit the Ministry.” said Harry.

“Pretty much.” said Moody.

End of dialogue set.

Harry and Dudley laughed loudly.

“What’s so funny?” asked Ron.

“Dad used to be a racer in his ‘wild days’.” said Dudley with a laugh.

“A what?” said Ron.

“Sort of like a Broomer, only in a car…a faster car than the Ford Anglia.” said Harry.

“He had won several trophies and cups. He doesn’t talk about it when Mum’s around…or Aunt Marge, I don’t think either of them knew.”

“How did you two find out?” asked Mrs. McFinn curiously.

“He just about got into a car wreck one day on our way home from school. Dodge the oncoming car when it spun out of control, rolled up on the sidewalk and dodged a fireplug.” said Dudley.

“Have to admit, it was pretty wicked.” said Harry honestly.

“Did he ask how you both were after that little bit of excitement?” asked Mrs. Weasley.

“Uh…” said Dudley, looking uncomfortable.

“Take a guess who he wasn’t concerned about.” said Harry with a cold smile.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, first sentence.

“…you turn a key, put it in drive and go.” said Dudley plainly.

“And you know this so well…how?” asked Snape slowly.

Dudley’s eyes widened.

“He took a car for a joy ride once.” said Harry and Inspector Homes together. Harry and Inspector Homes looked at each other in shock. “You knew? Did you do it more than once?” they said turning to look at Dudley in shock as he continued to sink into the sofa.

End of dialogue set.
```
Dialog line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Seems like a safe plan to me.” said Charlie.

Dialogue line.

Eighteenth paragraph.

Dialogue set.

Nineteenth paragraph.

“At least it said ‘coat’.” said Sirius with a sigh of relief.

“You would go there.” said Remus shaking his head.

“Like I didn’t see you smirk before I said anything.” said Sirius with a nudge.

Dialogue set.

Harry snorted.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Twentieth paragraph.

“What the fu…” said Harry with a confused look. “He was seriously going to?”

Dialogue line.

Twenty-first paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Twenty-second paragraph.

Dudley looked at the twins expectedly. The twins looked back, and then at themselves and then back to him. “No point in saying it if you’re expecting it.”

Dialogue line.
```
Out of the corner of his eye, he looked down at his hand.

“Yeah, right.” said Dudley with a laugh.

“I agree, you haven’t got the legs for it, better stick to flamenco dancing instead.” said Harry.

“That would just defeat the purpose.” said Lionus.

“Yeah, who wants to be safe.” said Dean.

“And I’m thinking they would have pulled Kingsley off Minister duty to guard Harry.” said Seamus.

“They’ll pool the whole Order if necessary.” said Kingsley.

Harry turned to Dudley, a thoughtful expression on his face. “You had your epiphany later I guess.”

“Sure…whatever that is.” said Dudley.

“Later Hermione.” said Ron before Hermione could speak.
“Oooh…not the…perfect way to…well…this might not go as smoothly as it should.” said Dumbledore wincing slightly.

“Never has.” said Harry.

“It really should matter though.” said Tonks, her normal teasing tone gone.

“Bet that was like a slap to her face.” said Sirius.

“Oh, I believe it now.” said Harry.

“Not the time to mince words and meanings.” said Percy.

“I’m not all that great with awkwardness.” said Harry.

“You get that from your Great Uncle Rueben. Not a very social man, once parties turn sour he tends to clam up.” said Rudolph.

“Have I met him?” asked Harry.

“No, like I said, not very social, but I’m sure that once summer hits he’ll make a special trip to come and see you…maybe.”

“I haven’t met him yet.” said Leroy. “And I’m the one that makes this old bat a social butterfly.” nudging Rudolph.

Rudolph blinked and mouthed the word “Old bat?”

End of thirty-second paragraph.

Thirty-third paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“I’d be telling him he’s sweet too, especially after how many years of shoving him around.” said Angelina. “That’s one hell of a personality change.”

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

“I don’t think I could do that.” said Dudley slowly.

“That’s alright, takes a special sort of folk to do that.” said Officer McFinn.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Thirty-fourth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Back to awkward.” said Lee.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Several people snorted.
“Uncle Vernon might just end up as chum if he pisses of Hestia.” said Charlie.

Thirty-fifth paragraph first sentence.

“No more sappy shit.” said Harry.

“That’s what I keep telling you, mate!” said Ron. “It’s gotten all huggy lately.”

“It’s either that or Harry yelling at us again.” said Hermione.

“Hug all you want, bring it in.” said Ron extending his arms as Harry laughed out loud.

End of thirty-fifth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“’Cause that would explain a lot.” said Harry.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Luna blew her nose loudly to the shock of Neville.

“What’s wrong?”

“It was touching.” said Luna with a kind smile.

“Yeah, a little…” said Neville.

“I’m touched too…might be food poisoning.” said George.

“Or gas.” said Fred.

End of chapter

“Not a word, not a goddamn word…” said Remus shaking his head.

“I would have been shocked, to be honest.” said Sirius.

“Shall we do another, this was quite short.” said Officer McFinn.

“Please do, the sooner we get this over with the sooner I get to hear how long it takes for me to kill Potter now that I know that Dumbledore’s dead.” said Voldemort with a sneer.

Harry blinked and then looked over to Remus.

“You still got that tape?”
First paragraph, second sentence.

“Can’t say I envy Dursley if he’s sitting beside Hestia, after that little touching farewell.” said Sirius.

End of first paragraph.

Second paragraph, fourth sentence, first colon, first comma.

“Something I had made, or something Aunt Petunia bought premade.” said Harry with a roll of his eyes.

Second paragraph, fourth sentence, first colon, second comma.

Dudley looked over and stared at Harry. “Is that how I gained experience and some items or so while I was out?”

“You also might have lost about ten or so lives; freaking snipers on the roofs, how are you supposed to know where they’re at!” said Harry holding his hands up in the air.

Dudley laughed, “That’s the point, they’re snipers!”

“And your mother got you those games did she?” asked Mrs. McFinn with a frown.

“Nah…er no…I borrowed those.” said Dudley.

End of second paragraph.

“But you…” said Ron.

“Hush, Ron.” said Hermione.

Dialogue set fourth sentence.

“What the…did I find some of your cannabis or something?” said Harry looking at Dudley in bemusement.

“His what?” asked Mrs. Weasley.

“Nothing!” said Harry, Dudley, and Inspector Homes.

“That’s not something I want any of you kids getting involved with.” said Inspector Homes sternly.

“It’s not…” said Dudley.
“The day that it’s legal then you can, till then, it’s illegal and I will arrest them.” said Inspector Homes.

“What’s your point of view?” asked Hermione to the Rangers interestedly.

The Rangers stared back at her. “We’re not touching that discussion, but to be honest, we’re more worried about the things that make you think worms are wriggling from out of your eye sockets.” said Lionus.

Dialogue set, fifth sentence.

“Odd…happy memory.” said Remus.

End of dialogue set.

“Yeah…good times…” said Lee slowly.

“Not that there were going to be any more memories in that place now…” said Harry.

Third paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Doesn’t make me feel any better Mr. Potter.” said McGonagall.

Voldemort, who escaped from having his mouth taped shut by Dumbledore’s saving grace turned and looked at Harry in confusion.

“A…cupboard? You slept in a cupboard?”

“For just about ten or so years.” said Harry plainly.

Voldemort looked thoughtful for a moment, but steeled himself to look passive. His slip in expression did not go unnoticed by Dumbledore and Chief Hawkeye.

Fourth paragraph, first sentence.

“I had enough fun keeping the rest of the house clean, I didn’t want to do anymore in my little corner of the world.” said Harry.

End of fourth paragraph.

“Was that the day that that snake came out of it’s cage?” asked Neville slowly.

“Yup.” said Harry.
“Did you know that it was Harry that removed the glass?” said Fred with a gleeful smile.

“Aye, he set that snake loose.” said George.

Dudley’s eyes widened.

“Wasn’t quite intentional.” said Harry with a shrug.

Fifth paragraph, third sentence, first comma.

“If you’re going to swear, use the best.” said Dudley with a slight smile.

End of fifth paragraph.

Sixth paragraph.

“Um…wouldn’t side along apparation be…easier?” said Alicia.

Seventh paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set. first sentence.

“Hate it when he does that.” said Tonks. “Makes me sea sick just watching him.”

End of dialogue set.

Eighth paragraph, first sentence, third semi-colon.

“Seems we decided to switch it up a bit.” said George.

“Good, would hate to be predictable.” said Fred.

Eighth paragraph, first sentence, tenth semi-colon.

“Ha, I get Kingsley.” said Harry with a chuckle.

Eighth paragraph, second sentence, first colon, first comma.

“Even Dung?” said Sirius confusedly.
“Though…I don’t see that feeling lasting too awfully long.” said Remus.

“Oh come on! I would have loved to have been there!” said Harry, “I didn’t go?”.

“I finally pinned you down and married you!” squealed Tonks happily as she stood up and threw her arms around Remus’ neck.

Remus looked stunned.

“You’d better at least have one baby, or I’m coming back to haunt you.” said Sirius nudging Remus in the side.

“I could have still found a way…” said Harry with a slight pout.

“Hmph…” said Tonks sticking her nose up into the air.

“I would wager that you were one of the first she had invited Alastor.” said Dumbledore with a twinkling smile.

“I’d only go on security duty, not as a bleeding guest.” growled Moody.

“So much for keeping that under wraps.” said Dr. Clark snidely.

“Um…if that was supposed to sound like helping…it failed.” said Charlie.
“The protection that’s already on the house isn’t common knowledge, so that decision would garner quite a lot of support.” said Kingsley. “So it went over just as they would have hoped.”

End of dialogue set.

“So…that’s why you can’t apparate…damn…” said Ron.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, second sentence.

“Ease up there Mad-Eye, not many Muggleborns are even aware of it normally, not something that’s really talked about in normal conversations…unless you’re steering towards that topic.” said Sirius.

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue set.

“Hope Thicknesse realizes that if Potter doesn’t, something else will bite back.” said Voldemort coolly.

Ninth paragraph.

“Hmmm…” hummed the Dark Lord to himself. “I’ll have to remember this.”

“Save it, no point in doing what this has in mind anymore.” said Reaper shortly.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

Tenth paragraph.

Dialogue set, first sentence.

“Ah…haven’t called that place home…ever…” said Harry.

End of dialogue set.

Eleventh paragraph.
“Quite the birthday present.” Voldemort snickered.

Fred and George blinked. “We were going to say that, Fred.”

“We’ll never speak of this again, George.” said Fred.

“Mad Eye’s might be one of the safest places, can’t get much rest especially if you upset the bins, but its not a bad house.” said Mr. Weasley.

“We wouldn’t wish Auntie Muriel on anyone, hope you don’t get sent there.” said Charlie.

“Oh, she’s not that bad.” said Mrs. Weasley.

“Harry’s hair alone would send her into a fit, she’d shave his head and then start all over in hopes of taming it.” said Bill.

“Just the big one.” said Harry. “I and I know what it is, and I’ll be pissed if it’s solved in the way I’m thinking.”

“Oh screw that!” said Harry quickly, standing up out of his chair.

“Calm down, Harry.” said Sirius standing up as well.

“The bloody hell I will!” shouted Harry.

“Once again,” said Glacier slowly. “This won’t happen, it’s just a story now.”

“Doesn’t help that this story is about people I freaking care about.” said Harry darkly as he paced around the room angrily.
“Anyone who’s known him for five minutes knows he’d take it that way.” said Fred watching Harry mutter to himself as he walked behind his couch.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Me agreeing to it certainly would be, as if I’d ever let that happen.” said Harry hotly.

“Calm down, now.” said Glacier with a sympathetic gaze.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Can’t say we’d last real long, walking targets as we would be.” said George.

“We’re not going to mention that though.” said Fred.

“Definitely not.” said George.

“Too bloody late.” growled Harry. “And that’s precisely my point!”

Thirteenth paragraph.

“You don’t smile often.” said Luna with a serene smile.

Dialogue line.

“Not that it’s not possible to just hold you down and take your hair.” said Moody.

Dialogue line.

“First few of you won’t get close enough, who wants to be first?” said Harry coldly.

The other students stared. “I’m out.” said Fred.

“Me too, I remember what happened to that chair, I won’t be itching to get anywhere near your leg.” said George.

Dialogue line.
“And I have to live with that…thanks…” said Harry frowning at the Auror.

“Death happens boy, no escaping it.” said Moody. “You can claim all the fault you want, but those that choose to put their lives on the line to bring about the end of this wretched age of terror are willing to do it, and on their own terms. Don’t take the credit of their sacrifice for yourself.”

“’Credit?’ You think…” retorted Harry.

“If any of us die during this mission, it was our choice and we deemed it highly necessary to get you to somewhere safely…no matter what the cost.” said Moody with an air of finality. Harry made to argue some more but the cool hand came back and kept his neck in it’s grip and guided him into the seat he had vacated.

“You’re not going to win this one, no matter how much you protest.” said Glacier. “He’s right, they’re going to do what they want, and no amount of fighting it will change anything, you’re underage still, there’s not another option presenting itself and time is of the essence.”

“And going by that way of thinking had us catch a lot high ranking Death Eaters.” said Kingsley.

Snape blinked. “Hmm…Expected as much…”
The once tense atmosphere dissipated as a rousing laugh rang through the room, even Voldemort snorted with amusement, despite not having much of a nose.

Fred tried to speak, but only continued to laugh.

“Oh, I can’t breathe.” said George gasping for air. “That’s the funniest thing I’ve heard in a long time!”

“Not what I meant!” said Hermione blushing furiously.

Eighteenth paragraph, first sentence, fifth comma.

“I’m amazed I didn’t burst out laughing.” said Ron trying to stifle his laughter.

“Why are you all not laughing there, I don’t think I could keep a straight face hearing that!” said Bill wiping his eyes.

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

Nineteenth paragraph, first sentence, fourth comma, second word.

“What?” said Bill, the mirth on his face gone in an instance. “She’s not…bloody hell…”

“If she’s going to turn into Harry, might make things a bit awkward.” said Charlie with a slight smile.

“Stuff it.” said Bill.

End of nineteenth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

Sirius snorted. “You couldn’t handle being a guard without getting distracted.”

Dialogue set.

Twentieth paragraph, first sentence, first comma.

“Doesn’t reassure me either.” said Harry.
“So according to this, unless Ron grew even more, I don’t…” said Harry.

“Not without our involvement, no.” said Lionus. “That’s all down to Doc.”

“Yeah, cause that’s something new.” said Ron with a roll of his eyes.

“You always say that, but we both know I’m the pretty one.” said George.

“…ow…” said Harry.

“That’s gotta smart.” said Sirius cringing.

“At least go into different rooms for pity’s sake!” said Harry clapping a hand to his eyes.

“I never had time to go and get it!” said Harry with a slight chuckle.

“Didn’t you ever notice he just wore them for the fashion statement it made?” said Fred

“Big giant glasses as big as your hand is all the rage this season.” said George.
“Actually it was.” said Harry remembering the trip to the Eyeglass shop.

“Really?” said Fred.

“Who’s in charge of picking fashion anyway?” asked George.

Twenty-fifth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Not the person to pull that joke.” said Tonks wisely.

Dialogue set, third sentence.

“No more damn was given.” said Tonks.

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

Twenty-sixth paragraph.

“Oh sweet Merlin.” groaned Harry.

Dialogue line.

Twenty-seventh paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Twenty-eighth paragraph.

“And what is wrong with me?” said Tonks haughtily.

“Nothing that I know of, ask future me in the book!” said Ron swiftly.
“And what’s wrong wi’ me?” said Hagrid, though he sounded a bit more teasingly than Tonks did. Harry looked uncomfortable.

“Oh, I know Harry…but I’m sure we’ll be just fine, all of us.” said Hagrid with a reassuring smile from where he sat.

Harry blushed as almost everyone cooed. Voldemort however was snarling.

“Yeah, but you can fit a whole pumpkin in your hand.” said Ron.

“I know this hasn’t happened yet, but piss off.” said Harry to Ron who only snickered.

“So…what your saying is…” said Fred.

“Push it the first chance you get.” said George.

“Fine idea, we use that all the time.” said the twins together.

“Aw, you’re sweet Ron.” said Tonks.
“F#cking shit, I knew it!” groaned Harry loudly.

Voldemort chuckled but then stopped. “I’d better not get too optimistic, that book in his hands is far too thick to be the end of you just yet.”

“Thank goodness.” said Harry sighing with relief. Officer McFinn looked up at the young man guiltily but continued on.

Harry’s eyes widened in shock and horror, he didn’t move, he was frozen.

“We’re calling it a day once this chapter is done.” Glacier commanded as he stood behind the young man.

Harry bowed his head, and he gripped his knees tightly as he leaned forward.

“No! Don’t turn around!” said Hermione shrilly. “Get him out of there!”
“Well, he’s not going to have a pleasant landing unless he apparates before he hits the ground.” said Fred quietly.

“Wasn’t expecting that.” said George.

“Hope it’s something cool.” said the twins together trying to boost the morale.

“Worth it!” said Fred and George excitedly.

“Where did you think you got your pyrotechnic talents from?” said Mr. Weasley with a proud smile.

“What in the world is a slipstream?” asked Neville.

“When you ride on a broom at high speeds, the air behind you sort of becomes like this funnel, twisting the air around like a tiny invisible tornado. Some flyers dip their foot down so that it reduces the amount of pull of the wind and you don’t get yanked off.” said Charlie with a smile. “Dragons have a tiny fin under their bodies that do the same sort of thing.”

“When traveling along on the road, and you come across a bunch of leaves on the highway…when you go past them the a few of the leaves travel along behind you for a short distance while the rest get scattered.” said Sirius. “I used to love doing that.”
“Shit!” said Sirius.

“That won’t work!” said Hermione fearfully.

“Oh…” said Hermione in a surprised tone and with a startled expression.

“That would have been hilarious to see, if they weren’t trying to kill you.” said Katie.

“Not the most dashing way to lose a tooth.” said Sirius wincing.

Harry’s hands twisted the fabric of his trousers as he reminded himself to take a deep breath and recite in his head over and over again. “This hasn’t happened yet, it won’t happen. I’m not going to lose her, I won’t let this happen!”
“Oh no…” said Remus.

“He’d better not…” growled Moody. “It’ll be all for nothing if he does.”

“He did it…” snarled Moody. “Played right into their hand.”

“The Disarming spell is your signature move.” said Remus covering his eyes.

“Say what? I would have thought the Patronus would be.” said Harry.

“Well…yes, you have used it to great extent, but the Disarming spell is what you used against Voldemort the last time…and all the Death Eaters present would no doubt remember that. And you’ve spoken again and again about freeing Stan, seeing him again and not be willing to hurt him, just disarm him would make it clear to them that you are the real one.” said Remus.
“‘Nearly’ and ‘There’ are two different things.” said Moody.

Fifty-fifth paragraph.

Fifty-sixth paragraph.

Fifty-seventh paragraph, second sentence, second comma.

“What the…” said Ron.

“You’ve got to be kidding me.” said Seamus.

“Bloody hell.” said Dean.

Despite all the tension, and Voldemort’s proud sneer, Dumbledore chuckled. “He never did get the hang of a broomstick.”

“Shut up.” the sneer dissipating from Voldemort’s face.

End of Fifty-seventh paragraph.

Fifty-eighth paragraph.

Fifty-ninth paragraph, second sentence.

“Harry…” whimpered Sirius.

End of Fifty-ninth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Sixtieth paragraph.

Glacier tightened his grip on Harry’s neck slightly when he noticed the young man tensed up.

Sixty-first paragraph.

Sixty-second paragraph.

As the pain from Harry’s scar forced his eyes shut, his wand acted of its own accord.

“Again…” mumbled Dumbledore thoughtfully.

Sixty-third paragraph, first sentence.

“Once again, my wand has a mind of it’s own.” said Harry with a shaky smile.
“Might not want to go that fast towards the ground!” said Sirius wincing.

“Forget you!” said George.

Sirius took a deep breath and released it. “I’m going to lose my mind. That’s enough for today, come on, cub.” he said as he stood up.

Harry however did move.

“Harry?” said Sirius, taking a knee and looked up at the young man sitting silently. “Come on, talk to your old Sirius.”

Harry looked slowly up at Sirius but then he dropped his gaze back down.

“Come on, let’s go get you into the kitchen.” said Sirius pulling on his arm slightly. “You could use some cooking therapy.”
Dudley wandered around the house after dinner, he remembered seeing a weight room on the ground floor when he and the Inspector walked around during that first day of the so called ‘Readings’. The feelings he had hadn’t changed since that day, he wasn’t sure where his place was all in this.

Was he supposed to have a say in all this, or was he just supposed to listen to what the book said and wait for it to be all over? Everyone else seemed to just pick where they wanted to chime in, but after all that had happened between him and Harry…did he honestly have a right?

He found the door to the weight room just as he and the Inspector had found the other day and walked in. When he saw it the first time, he was not expecting it to look completely normal, with mirrors on the wall, various exercise equipment strewn around the room, a record player with records from an apparent rock bands that Dudley had never heard of. He was expecting floating weights or…well…something odd….

He walked over to the records and looked at them with slight interest, his science professor at Smeltings had one and they would have to listen to all his operettas or even worse…records for a singer called “Tiny Tim”. That bloke hurt his ears whenever the Professor would put the record on, the bloke must have gotten smacked in the groin too many times.

He put one of the records on and moved the needle to get the music started. His first impression of the band was that they weren’t bad, in fact they were pretty awesome! He’d have to see if they could make him a disk of the records.

He went to go and grab a few dumbbells and work out his muscles, but he could only find one set sitting on a table and even they were apparently only the five kilograms ones. He disregarded them and went to the barbells. Even in the case of those there was only one weight in the entire room.

He laid down on the bench and gripped the bar hanging over his head. They were the lightest ones in a standard set so he didn’t think he needed to have anyone else with him. He did a quick rep and groaned with irritation. “God, I’m so bored, these things could at least be a little bit heavier.”

Suddenly the barbell became a bit harder to push back up into the air and Dudley just about lost his grip on the bar in his shock.

“What the hell? It’s heavier now, urkk…it’s getting even heavier?…arrgh!”

The barbell got even heavier and now it was slowly getting closer and closer to his neck. He tried to push it off himself but it was now too heavy to push it up without assistance. He was regretting not telling anyone that he was going to the weight room now, one of them at least could have been helpful, even Harry with his skinny arms. That bloke Sirius didn’t look all that tough, who would have thought he would have weights that could all of a sudden get heavier without even a bloody notice?

How was he going to be able to get out of this? If he could just slip off to the side of the bench…

“I may be mistaken, but I do believe when one weight lifts, one should have what’s called a ’spotter’."

Suddenly the barbell was lifted off him and out of his grip and he looked over by the door to the room, there was the Headmaster, causally waving his wand and setting the barbell back onto the rack. Dudley scrambled to sit up and just stared at the old man. The Headmaster just smiled down at him.

“Are you alright?”

Dudley nodded dumbly.

“Very good, very good.” Dumbledore responded with a nod. “But I would like to transcend my last statement into a question; Why did you not have a spotter?”

Dudley blinked and looked away with a mutter, “Didn’t think I needed it, it felt light.”

“Oh, the misconception of the senses.” Dumbledore sagely. “And have you learned otherwise?”

Dudley turned a slight shade of pink. “Yeah…uh…how did that get heavier all of a sudden? Did I push a button or something?”

Dumbledore gave a soft warm laugh. “No, our weights increase and decrease their…well…weight when we say the words ‘lighter’ or ‘heavier’. Did you say the word ‘heavier’?”

Dudley nodded.

“And there you have it. That however does not excuse the fact that I at the very least should have told you about the weight room’s…magical tendencies.” said Dumbledore.

“You don’t know anything about me.” said Dudley with a confused look. “How would you know that I’d be in here.”

“I know enough that you have become much more physically active in your free time so I should have known that you would want to inspect this particular room.” said Dumbledore as he gestured to the surrounding area.

“Everyone seems to be a bit busy, don’t really know what to do or say while I’m here.” said Dudley quietly. “At the Inspector’s it was just talk to him, go to therapy, go down to the center and box around a bit…here…”

“It’s all about Harry…and a world you desired to be a part of.”

Dudley jerked his head up. “You…you remember that?”

The old man smiled, not unkindly. “Of course, I remember it very well. You’re not the first one in your situation to send me a letter. Though reflecting back, you painted quite a different picture of your home life in your letter than what I learned from these books.” the smile faded a bit.

Dudley shrunk slightly.

“Though, the statement ‘hindsight is twenty-twenty’ is becoming a quick slogan for this. But regardless, did you not find…Smeltings…an enjoyable place?”

Dudley shrugged. “It wasn’t bad…took me forever to get my homework done without…err…”

“Harry doing it for you?” supplied Dumbledore kindly. He smiled softly when Dudley looked slightly shamed. “He told us that learning did not come easily for you.”

“Yeah, they found out real quick that someone did my work for me…they got me some help about halfway through so it’s not all that…awful.”
“I am quite pleased to hear that,” said the Headmaster. “Harry did tell us that you had some difficulty with your schoolwork. Has your work gotten better since the previous year?”

“Better than last year? How do you know?”

“The books mentioned that you were getting grades that your teachers were not quite pleased by,” said Dumbledore. He waved his wand as he levitated a full tea cup and a fresh biscuit over to Dudley.

“It is clear that you do enjoy a bit of boxing, what teacher made you become so interested in that particular sport?” asked Dumbledore politely.

Dudley blinked a few times but then smiled guiltily. “The Deputy did…he…and caught me and my friends fighting some other blokes and…I got put on the team, I have a blast at it…”

Dumbledore hid a smile behind his teacup. “Sounds quite similar to the way Harry was chosen for his house team. Even the fight with another student.”

This got Dudley’s undivided attention. “HE got into a fight? I mean, just school fights?”

“Several,” said Dumbledore thoughtfully. “Not nearly as much as Mr’s. Crabbe and Goyle, but…”

“I mean, he tried to fight me once or twice, but he could never really take me down for longer than a second or so. He always seemed to take a…”

“A pacifist, yet taunting path?” said Dumbledore with a smile. “Yes, Harry does take the path of least resistance for the most part, but there are some instances where Harry has certainly been the first one to fight. Would you care to hear a few stories about your cousin’s misadventures at school?”

---

“No way? He did that? He seriously stood up to a teacher like that? He really liked that one teacher at primary school….” said Dudley staring at the Headmaster in shock.

“Indeed, when his head of house heard what had transpired, she was quite taken aback. It went down in school history as the first time a detention receiver ever was given a biscuit from McGonagall.” said Dumbledore with a twinkling smile. “And shortly after that was the catalyst that set this whole ordeal into motion.”

Dudley looked around for a moment, then turned towards the Headmaster. “So, if he hadn’t of done this, my parents wouldn’t of…”

“I doubt Harry would have ever admitted the wrong doings by your father, and I cannot say for certain that would have benefitted either of you.” said Dumbledore, the twinkling absent and was replaced with his rarely used somber tone.

“While according to these books, Harry seemed to be coping rather well, I’d still be quite concerned over what sort of damage it could pose later in Harry’s life.” said Dumbledore, “Not to mention your own.”

“My own?” asked Dudley.

“If we’re think, hypothetically of course, if you had continued with this path that the books had set, I daresay you might have the notion that treating a child the way your Uncle had, was socially acceptable.” said Dumbledore.

Dudley looked down. “I don’t…I wouldn’t…”

“While that is reassuring, it’s best to have your Uncle see the error of his ways…however long it may take,” said Dumbledore. “When I had seen him last, he was more concerned about his wife than what he could possibly be doing to your cousin. And what he was doing at the time was holding a very sharp quill to Harry’s neck.”

Dudley mouth hung open in shock. “Dad…”

“It was a dark period…”

Then a knock came on the door and the when it opened, Ron poked his head in.

“Oh, here you are, dinner’s ready.” said Ron.

“Oh, has it gotten that late, well, shall we go and dine, Mr. Dursley?” said Dumbledore standing up.

Dudley followed Dumbledore in standing up and allowed himself to be led out of the room, when Ron had moved further down the corridor, Dudley spoke up again.

“So…did the others reading these…did they…hate me?” said Dudley uneasily.

“Oh, quite a few people back at the school still hold some resentment towards your past transgressions, but after reading this previous chapter I think our opinion of you has changed quite a bit.” said Dumbledore.

Dudley released a sigh of relief.

“But I wouldn’t be quite so quick to think it is all water under the proverbial bridge.” said Dumbledore with a slightly mischievous smile. “The twins at the very least are quite eager to catch you off your guard and prank you quite mercilessly.”

“And you won’t save me?” said Dudley looking at the old man in horror.

“I never disparage harmless mischief, but if they do cross the line, I and I believe Harry will come to your aid.”

Dudley looked down at the floor. “He’d save anybody, wouldn’t he?”

Dumbledore only smiled.

They were all gathered in the dining room, with the table laden with various dishes that Mrs. Weasley, Mrs. McFinn, Leroy and Harry had cooked up. Most of the people in the house were gathered around the table, passing dishes and glasses filled with pumpkin juice, butterbeer and wine down the line.

Reaper, Lionus and Voldemort were in another room, a secured area where they could feed Voldemort and not have to worry about him getting his hands on a salad fork and stabbing someone in the eye to try and escape.

Meanwhile, everyone else in the dining room were enjoying their meal, but no more so than Dudley, who was eating with gusto.

“Mmm! This is great, more please!” said Dudley extending his now empty bowl of stew forward to be filled once more.

“My you have quite the appetite this evening!” said Mrs. McFinn with a kind smile as she filled his bowl.

“I’m always hungry after lifting. Harry, you’ve got to get the recipe for this!” said Dudley taking the bowl and tucking in again.

Harry, with a spoon of his own halfway to his mouth, paused and turned to look at Dudley.

Inspector Homes leaned forward and whispered into Dudley’s ear. “While he’s more than welcome to visit, he’s not going to be living with us. He’ll be living here with Mr. Black.”

Dudley turned a faint pink and lowered his utensils slowly. “I…I remember that…just…”

“Want me to send you a care package when you get to school?” said Harry with a slightly teasing smile. “Can’t send you all the sweets you want, but I can still…”

“Yes!” said Dudley.
They all gathered back to the room where Officer McFinn was thumbing through the Memorial books once again.

“I’ve got to say, I could read these forever, I always seem to discover something I didn’t see the first time I read them.” said Officer McFinn with a soft smile. “You alright there, Sport?”

“Will be, as long as no one else dies.” said Harry gloomily. He had had nightmares all that night long about everyone that he had ever been close to, being ripped from him and being killed right in front of him. Sirius was a recurring player.

“It’s just a story now, lad.” reassured Glacier as he took his seat beside Harry. “Shall we start with the readings?”

“Why not, though the title of the chapter isn’t very reassuring. Fifth Chapter.”

“Hedwig was a warrior?” said Ron in a hushed tone.

“I don’t think it means Hedwig.” said Hermione worriedly looking around at the various Order members.

Dialogue line.

“If that title means, Hagrid…” muttered Harry darkly.

“I’d much prefer it to be Moody.” sneered Voldemort.

“And I’m sure you’re not stupid enough to forget our preference.” snapped Reaper.

“Though him being a ‘Warrior’…” said Fred nodding towards the Dark Lord.

“Not buying so much.” said George.

_First paragraph, first sentence._

“I forgot he crashed.” winced Sirius, wrapping an arm around Harry’s shoulders.

_First paragraph, third sentence._

“Please let it be sweat and not...you know....” said Alicia wincing.

_End of first paragraph._

Several people gasped.
“Oh no, not Hagrid. Please not Hagrid.” said Hermione, tears coming to her eyes.

Hagrid shifted uncomfortably in his large seat. ‘I’m…I’m sure I’m alrigh’.”

Dialogue line.

Second paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Forget me, Hagrid’s hurt!” shouted Harry gesturing to the book.

“That would defeat the purpose.” growled Moody.

“Screw ‘the purpose’!” snapped Harry.

Third paragraph.

“Is it a good thing to crash in your garden?” asked Lee.

“As long as Dad wasn’t mowing the lawn at any point that week. He tends to leave it out in the middle of the bloody yard, in case Mum notices he missed a spot.” said Tonks.

Fourth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Hagrid blew his nose.

Fifth paragraph.

Harry felt the arms surrounding him tighten.

Dialogue line.

Sixth paragraph.

“That sounds like Daddy.” said Tonks with a giggle.

Dialogue set.

“Hi Daddy.” said Tonks waving to the book.
“Not quite all of Arthur’s doing, mostly battle induced.” said Remus.

“We, in the future, thought wrong.” said Kingsley.

“Bubble shields as big as a house…” said Fred.

“Interesting idea…: said George.

“We have something like that, only a lot smaller…maybe we could expand.” said the twins together.

“I hate it when they talk like that.” said Ron. “Weeks later…you either get blasted across the landing, or you grow a tail at breakfast.”

“Oops.” replied Hagrid as a few of the younger students sniggered.
“You who?” said Ron.

“You know who…” said George.

“Errgh, bad form.” said Fred.

“Quite right, no lady’s that ugly.” said George.

“Not true, we got Toadie…” said Fred.

“She’s a pro, we’re talking amateurs.” said George.

“Why are you shouting at my Mum?” asked Tonks.

“Think about what and who your Mum looks like.” said Remus quietly.

“Oh…I see..” said Tonks with a blush.

“Word of advice, never say she looks like her sister, she’ll hex you worse than Auntie Bella ever could.” said Tonks with a sneer.

“She’s got a point, Andromeda was the absolutely the better between the sisters…and they both were quite the duelists.”

“I think we must have told Mum what was happening, but I suppose she’s just worried…” said Tonks.

“With you as a daughter, I’d be worried about you going to the kitchen.” said Moody chuckling to himself.

“You had absolutely no say in the matter, someone would have just yanked the hairs right out of your head if you had refused completely.” said Mrs. McFinn.
“I’m betting you’d do it.” said Ron looking at Hermione.

“Why me?” asked Hermione confusedly.

“Well, you’re a girl, they pull hair, right?” asked Ron.

“Not all girls do…” said Hermione stiffly.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

“Good timing, wonder what would have happened if Harry and Hagrid had remained unconscious?” asked Dr. Clark.

“A message would have been sent instead, I suppose.” said Professor McGonagall, “At least I hope we have planned contingencies.”

Dialogue line.

Fifteenth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Bless him.” said Mrs. Weasley dabbing her eyes with a handkerchief.

Sixteenth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Seventeenth paragraph.

“Beats an old ragged boot.” said Bill.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Harry took a quiet yet shuddering breath, “I didn’t forget that…”

Sirius’s hand on his shoulder tightened in a reassuring squeeze.

Dialogue line.

Eighteenth paragraph.
“I was the same way when I lost Copernicus, my first owl.” said Sirius patting Harry’s shoulder.

“What happened to him?” asked Hermione softly.

“My mother’s cat killed him, just as I was leaving my family’s house for the final time in my childhood.” said Sirius. “Got vengeance though, I doused the fluffy little bastard in syrup, and from what I heard, it took months to get it all out of her fur.”

Nineteenth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Not long enough.” said Harry.

“For those we love, it is never enough.” said Dumbledore with a kind and sympathetic smile.

“Says the man that has an immortal pet.” snorted Voldemort.

Dialogue line.

Twentieth paragraph, second sentence.

“And he most likely threw up.” said the twins together.

End of twentieth paragraph.

“I don’ like Portkeys either.” said Hagrid.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Twenty-first paragraph.

“Oh no…my boys!” cried Mrs. Weasley in horror.

Dialogue set.

“That might not have made Molly’s fears abate any.” said Sirius.

Twenty-second paragraph.

Dialogue line.
“I don’t think I can stand it if any of you children were hurt, oh Arthur!” said Mrs. Weasley worriedly as she buried her face in her husband’s shoulder.

Voldemort rolled his eyes.

Dialogue line.

Twenty-third paragraph.

Dialogue set, first sentence.

Most people’s eyes widened in shock, while Voldemort smirked.

End of dialogue set.

Mrs. Weasley started to sob loudly.

“I’m sure that they’re alright, darling.” said Mr. Weasley patting Mrs. Weasley’s hand in his own.

Twenty-fourth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Twenty-fifth paragraph.

Mrs. Weasley gave a shrill cry and launched herself at George, who was already having his hand gripped tightly by Fred. Both twins were pale, and were sporting very nervous smiles.

“Just had to go and muck up the already disaster area nature gave you, eh?” said Fred shakily.

“You’re just jealous that it would take a blow to the face to make me half as ugly as you.” said George weakly.

Twenty-sixth paragraph, third sentence, first colon, end of first sentence.

Fred and George looked at each other in horror. Without waiting for nearly a second to pass, Fred leaned over and whispered in George’s ear. George shook his head, but Fred gave him such a stern look that George could only bow his head in response.

“If you go without, so do I. No one is going to tell us apart that easily, ruins all our jokes you know.” murmured Fred with a sorrowful smile.

End of twenty-sixth paragraph.

Twenty-seventh paragraph.
“What are you doing?” asked Bill looking at Remus hotly.

“Good thinking Remus, might have been the imposter, course we’re almost certain he isn’t, but one never knows.” said Moody nodding approvingly.

Dialogue line.

Twenty-eighth paragraph.

“After what we had been through, that’s a good way to get yerself thrown across the room.” said Hagrid darkly.

“Or across the country.” said Ron quietly to Hermione. “Hagrid’s strong enough…”

Dialogue line.

“How the f#ck would you expect me to remember that?” said Harry.

“Harry…” chided Mrs. McFinn carefully.

“I am well aware of how excellent your memory is.” said Lupin with a sigh.

Dialogue line.

“See?” said Remus with a smile.

“Still…” said Harry his cheeks slightly pink.

Twenty-ninth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

“And…they would have gotten into the Dursley house, how?” said Lionus with a curious tone.

“Could have been a fake house, right when they opened the door and whatnot.” said Ron slowly.

“While I would love nothing more than the destruction of both Potter and the Order, even that is far too much work, and I could never even get down the same street, also…I would prefer to lord his death over you the first chance I get.” drawled Voldemort. “Besides, blasted Moody would have seen through the enchantment.”

“So if Harry had been an imposter, Moody would have seen it!” said Katie.

“My eye, as well as other magical tools, are not infallible Bell.” snapped Moody. “No matter what, CONSTANT VIGILANCE!” roared Moody, causing several students and even a few complacent adults to stagger in their seats.
“For pity’s sake Alastor, do stop that!” retorted McGonagall.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“And if you had been the Death Eater, all it would take to just killed Potter right in the sky is flip upside down and let him fall to his death.” said Moody.

“Thank you, Alastor!” said McGonagall in a warning tone.

Dialogue set, first sentence.

“Someone did.” said Charlie. “No matter how much you butter it up, it’s what happened. Those Death Eaters weren’t just lucky, not enough Felix Felicis in the world for them to be that lucky.”

“Sort of makes me wonder…why not just brew up a bunch before every mission?” asked Ron.

Hermione nudged Ron and nodded towards Snape.

“Ah…never mind.” said Ron looking down at the floor.

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

“Which one do you want answered first?” asked Luna serenely.

Thirtieth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“I kept myself and Hagrid alive….” said Harry slowly.

“He’s talking about you using Expelliarmus on Stan.” growled Moody.

“I’ll still say it was the right thing to do, he’s not…” said Harry.

“Of course he’s not, but when it comes between saving you, an underage young wizard who hasn’t even graduated school yet, never mind that you’re the bloody Boy Who Lived, and trying to not hurt an Imperised Stan Shunpike too badly…slam the stupid bastard into the ground and keep flying!” scolded Moody.

Dialogue set.

Thirty-first paragraph.
“Stunning him at that height would be the exact same if he hits the ground though.” said Mrs. McFinn softly.

“Ow…” said Remus looking over at Harry.

“Hey, call it like I see it.” said Harry. “And I think you’re lucky you’re not getting punched.”

“Breathe.” said Glacier leaning forward from behind Harry and placing a hand on his shoulder. “Just breathe…”

“Doesn’t understand…” mumbled Harry who had his hands over his face.

“Not everyone is willing to throw themselves under the bus for the sake of anyone they’ve met thrice and thrice only.” said Glacier calmly.

“It’s what you just told me to do!” snarled Harry looking over to Remus angrily.

“He hasn’t said that yet.” said Sirius soothingly.

“It was a stupid move, but good boy.” said Moody.

“Would have thought that my signature move would be the Patronus.” said Harry absently.

“I side with Harry.” said Dumbledore.

“But…” said Remus.

“I have no doubt that Tom would discover which Harry was the real one before long, in fact it was quite a lucky chance that he was drawn elsewhere first. He might not have been willing to use Legilimacy, but not even Polyjuice potion can replicate Harry’s innate charm, a few moments with the false ones, he would see the difference and then he would move on.” said Dumbledore sagely.
“The Disarming Spell merely sped up the process by ten minutes.”

“Ten minutes is all it takes to stay alive or become dead.” interjecting Moody.

“That is true.” conceded Dumbledore with a nod. “But sometimes, even years of easy attempts, will not come into fruition.”

Moody blinked his unmagical eye a few times. “What?”

But Dumbledore only smiled.

“What did he mean by that?” asked Ron quietly.

“I…I’m not sure.” whispered Hermione back.

Thirty-third paragraph, first sentence, first colon.

Sirius gasped.

“Shut up.” said Remus tartly.

“What?” asked Bill.

“He’s never lost an argument! We’ve just ignored him, knew the bugger was right, but we just ignored him!” said Sirius gleefully. “He’d win on the moral grounds but we did whatever we wanted!”

End of thirty-third paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Thirty-fourth paragraph.

“Aw, he can never be mad at you for long.” said Sirius nudging Harry with a slight smile.

“I can be mad at him for days though.” said Harry.

“Well, you’re special.” said Sirius. “But he’s just so warm and fuzzy that he and we can’t be angry for long at each other.”

“I’ll kick you where you’re warm and fuzzy.” muttered Remus.

Dialogue line.

Lionus scoffed. “There are ways, not easy ways, but there are ways.”

Thirty-fifth paragraph.
“Least he didn’t point it at me.” said Harry.
“I’m sure I’ll be aiming at you next.” said Kingsley. “No offense meant.”

“Way to trust me then.” said Harry.
“I’m trying to keep you alive, trust me to do that.” said Remus calmly.

“Wow, you never snarl.” said Tonks.
“I do when someone tries to stab me in the back.” said Kingsley.
“Minus a little dismemberment, we all seem to be fine.” said George, his hand being held tightly by his twin.

“How the hell can you fly without a broom?” asked Katie with a shocked look.
“Flap your arms real fast?” said Seamus.
Snape rolled his eyes.
“Do all Death Eaters learn that?” asked Neville nervously.
“Like he’d share that information.” scoffed Harry.
“Bloody brilliant…” groaned Moody.

“Easy son.” said Mr. Weasley grabbing Fred by the arm, though his eyes were frozen on Snape. “Easy…”

“HE...!” shouted Fred.

“I know…trust me…I know…” said Mr. Weasley.

“Just have a seat, Hagrid.” said Harry a twitching smile.

Mrs. Weasley, who was still standing, weeping and hugging George from behind, kissed both of George’s ears.
“Never get between him and one of his children...if you think Mum’s terrifying...” said Charlie.

Forty-second paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Forty-third paragraph.

Forty-fourth paragraph.

Forty-fifth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

George looked concerned for a moment, but then groaned softly. “You’ve got to be kidding me.”

Dialogue line.

“Might as well be.” muttered George.

Forty-sixth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“That curse must have hit my head to be settling for that.” said George.

Dialogue line.

“No she won’t.” said Fred. “Don’t be like that.” said George. “Seriously though, it’s not going to happen.”
“If it does.” started Fred.

“It’s…not…going…to…happen.” repeated George slowly.

Forty-seventh paragraph.
Dialogue line.
Dialogue line.
Dialogue set, first sentence.

Harry flinched.

“Oi…we signed up for this, knowing what might have happened, getting you somewhere safe…it’s worth it to us.” said George.

Nearly everyone in the room nodded.

Voldemort shook his head with a snarl. “Pathetic…”

End of dialogue set.
Dialogue set, second sentence.

“And here I thought I just wasn’t special enough to get the oldest and youngest brother to bother with me.” said George weakly.

End of dialogue set.
Dialogue line.

“Oooh…poor Ron.” said George and Fred together.

Forty-eighth paragraph.

Harry blushed, but didn’t quite looked embarrassed to be displeased with what he heard.

Forty-ninth paragraph, second sentence.

“Sorry.” mouthed Harry.

End of forty-ninth paragraph.
“So we’re just missing Dung, Moody, Fleur and Bill.” said Kingsley.

“At least the younger kids are alright.” said Chief Hawkeye.

Hermione gave a watery giggle.

“Oi, I’m not afraid to slap you.” said Tonks.

“Neither am I, it’s a good thing there’s another one around, it’s hard doing it all by myself.” said Sirius.

“She can be a bit of a shrew sometimes, but she does love to fuss.” said Fred.

“Can you imagine if she got her claws on Harry?” said George.

“Merlin, she’d never let you out of the house, mate.” replied Ron looking at Harry with wide eyes.
“Don’t be thanking us.” said Remus with a glum look, “I’m sure if I had kept my eyes…”
“Mate, it hasn’t happened, we’ll never know what could have been done or not.” said Sirius.

The room was silent, and no one moved, aside from Voldemort who gave a quiet “Yes!” from his seat.

This time, Mrs. McFinn walked over to Harry and wrapped her arms around him.

“You’re a stark raving mad, McFinn.” said Harry softly.

“No dear…it’s not…” said Mrs. McFinn. “This won’t happen like this now.”
“Fool, gave us away right off from the start.” said Moody shaking his head, apparently unfazed by his own demise.

End of dialogue set.

Moody, still the only one saying or moving much other than Mrs. McFinn’s tending of Harry and Mrs. Weasley’s own now receding weeping over George, nodded. “Good, it took you yourself to bring me down, and I had to be distracted in order to do it. Damn it Fletcher, if I get my hands on you again, I’ll teach you a thing or two.”

“For letting you get killed?” asked Ron.

“For knocking me off my guard, Malfoy’s little ferret stunt will look quite appealing compared to what I’m going to do to him.” snarled Moody.

Sixty-first paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Sixty-second paragraph.

“The tough and the brave ones are the first to go, ‘cause we don’t give a toad’s ass.” said Moody with a firm nod.

Sixty-third paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Sixty-fourth paragraph, third sentence, first colon.

“Why? I told you, no sobbing like an infant if I die.” said Moody.

“And when I have ever listened to you?” said Tonks blowing her nose loudly on a borrowed handkerchief from Dumbledore.

Sixty-fourth paragraph, fourth sentence.

“Never said she was my favorite.” retorted Moody.

“As if there could be any doubt, Alastor.” said Dumbledore.

“Doesn’t say much for the rest of the Auror’s now does it?” said Moody and Tonks together. That only sent Tonks over the edge as she wailed even louder and leaned against Moody for support.

“Oh botheration.” growled Moody looking around and down at Tonks with unease. He raised a grizzled hand and patted her awkwardly. “There…there…stop it…come on…Auror up…”
“I’ll kill him myself.” said Tonks sitting up and drying her eyes.

“Don’t be daft, you’ll never get the chance.” said Kingsley. “I’m going to do it.”

“Get in line, forms behind me.” said Moody.

“Dung offered that?” said Remus looking confused. “Well, I suppose he would be capable of thinking of something like that, old faker knows many ways to dodge the Aurors.”

“So then Hermione was next on the list to get hit.” said Ron and Harry together, looking at Hermione in shock.

“I’m glad I disarmed Stan then…” said Harry weakly.

Harry blushed as Hagrid looked deeply touched.

“Tellin’ some little info about a three headed dog is one thin’, but yer safety…I’d never do that.” said Hagrid firmly. “Yeh mean the world ter me ‘arry.”
“No more talking out of you unless you come up with some better material.” scolded Fred, wagging a finger at the book in Officer McFinn’s hands.

“That tends to happen.” Dumbledore said solemnly.

“We’ll get the door for you.” said the twins together.
“We just lost Moody and George’s ear getting you there…where the hell are you going off to?” said Tonks.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Seventy-fifth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

“Makes me sound like an invalid or something.” said Harry.

“You might be, if you mention bowing out again.” said Fred.

“Mum’ll tie you to a cot…” said George.

“And Fleur will break your legs.” said Fred.

“As gently and kindly as possible.” they said together.

Seventy-sixth paragraph.

“Oh Harry dear…” said Mrs. Weasley, tears pricking her eyes once again.

“Better get the Beater bats away from Fleur.” said Fred.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Sort of obvious that I’d be there.” said Harry. “I mean, where else have I ever been during the summer?”

“That’s what makes it so brilliant, Harry.” said Fred.

“It would be stupid of you to be in the Burrow.” said George.

“So we’d have to put you up somewhere else.”

“Therefore, they’d look for you all over the place.”

“Except in the place where it would be obvious,”

“And stupid to keep you.”

“Therefore:”
“You’re safest there at the Burrow.” said the twins together.

Everyone nodded, but Voldemort only looked between the two of them. “I hate it when they do that.”

Seventy-seventh paragraph, second sentence.

Harry only burrowed further back into the sofa’s cushions with Mrs. McFinn and Sirius’ arms wrapped around him.

End of seventy-seventh paragraph.

Seventy-eighth paragraph.

“Oh no…” said Mrs. Weasley, bringing a handkerchief up to her eyes which were threatening to be barraged with tears again.

Seventy-ninth paragraph.

“Was it even me?” said Harry quietly.

“No…I meant what I said.” said Harry, his lips quirking slightly.
“Not like that.” said Dumbledore honestly.

Dumbledore nodded.

“Good, we won’t get yelled at then.” said Ron.

“Don’t push it.” said Harry, smiling a bit more now. “I’ll find something to yell about.”

“Don’t leave him alone…not if he does a repeat performance from the Ministry.” Sirius.

“Thestrals are omnivores?” asked Hermione.

“It all depends on how they feel.” said Hagrid. “They go through stress, they’ll eat some grass to calm themselves down.”

“Of course I would have,” said Dumbledore kindly. “You are not one for embellishing a story, quite the opposite in fact.”

“I don’t always have the answers, but I certainly do try and find out.” Dumbledore replied.
“Well, this is uncomfortable again.” said Lee.

Eighty-fourth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Eighty-fifth paragraph.

Dumbledore covered his eyes and bowed his head. “Oh no…”

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“There’s confirmation that he’s got Ollivander.” said Kingsley thoughtfully.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“I’m sure deep down he wants to.” said Charlie.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Eighty-sixth paragraph.

Several people hissed in pity.

Dialogue line.

Eighty-seventh paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“At that moment, I just want the pain to stop.” whispered Harry soberly.
“I’m sure Fleur would hunt you down and drag you back by your nose to be at her wedding.” said Bill. He looked at the twins and smiled ruefully. “Yes, after breaking his legs.”

“It has been a long night.” said Leroy.

“Yeah, cause I’ve proven I can do that pretty damn easily, haven’t I?” retorted Harry.

Voldemort looked over to Harry, a sneer on his face.

“You wouldn’t last a single day in my shoes.” Harry said with a sneer of his own.
“Don’t you start again.” growled Moody to Tonks.

The students all looked at Harry, when Harry looked back, all that he did as a reply was shrug. “Beats me.”

“Hunt us down and then use a sticking charm on us to stay in a chair.” said Ron. “After they beat us with broomsticks.”

Mrs. Weasley made to speak, but nodded. “Thought so.” said Ron.

“Well, Dad wouldn’t be happy, but he wouldn’t nearly be so violent.” said Ron.

“Which is far safer for them.” said Dumbledore.

“I’d kill them either way.” said Voldemort dully.

Reaper leaned forward slowly and slapped the back of his head harshly. “Keep dreaming.”
“Wish her luck.” said Harry.

“He has his reason.” said Remus. “And now that we know, they’re admirable...knowing what they’re going to go hunting for.”

Voldemort snarled.

“Still...they’re only babies...” said Mrs. Weasley.

“At the time, they’re just about grown men and woman.” said Kingsley.

“But still our babies...” said Mr. Weasley kindly before his wife could huff with indignation.

“That’s normal.” replied the Weasley children collectively.

“It’s from a burglar that broke in the house.” said Officer McFinn with a snicker.

“That was always his excuse for the odd sock laying around somewhere.” said Mrs. McFinn, giving her departed husband a tearful smile.

“They loved our house, they left socks everywhere.” said Officer McFinn.

“With Dumbledore gone and Voldemort running amok, I wouldn’t want Harry trapped in the school, in my opinion.” said Sirius.

“But it’s going to have so many wizards and witches...” said Mrs. Weasley.

“There was quite a bit of protection around the school, and Death Eaters still managed to get in.” said Sirius. “Here’s hoping though that the Vanishing Cabinet was taken out...destroyed or something.”
“It is now.” said Harry.

Dialogue line.

Sixth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“To stay alive.” said Harry.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Grocery shopping, laundry pickup.” said George.

“Usual stuff.” said Fred.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, first sentence.

“Fine, ask them, I’ve got nothing to do with their obligations to you.” said Harry firmly.

“Nice tactic though, using the “family concern” ploy…good move.” said Lionus. “Lesser criminals tend to fall for that all the time.”

Dialogue set, second sentence.

“Harry’s turning a bit red don’t you think?” said Fred.

“I think the ‘tough act’ is just an act.” said George.

End of dialogue set.

Despite the worry, Mr. and Mrs. Weasley laughed.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, second sentence.

The Weasley children all gasped.

“She snapped at Harry!” said Bill.
“Harry’s her favorite non-Weasley kid!” said Charlie.

“And if Ginny and Harry get married…” said Bill.

“We’re out of the running for favorite kid, period.” answered Charlie with a teasing smile.

Dialogue set, fourth sentence.

“That I…did…but this was not a job for them.” said Dumbledore. “It would be better for you all to do your best to save as many people as you possibly could during the undoubtedly dark days ahead.”

Dialogue set, fifth sentence.

“Misunderstood him for nearly an entire year?” asked Ginny.

End of dialogue set.

“Bless her…she wants to shield him even from Dumbledore’s orders.” said Leroy.

Dialogue line.

Seventh paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Since when?” said Harry looking confused.

“That’s what I’d like to know!” said Sirius.

“I don’t know that football team…” said Dudley.

“It ain’t football…it’s better.” said Harry with a bright and shining grin.

Dialogue set.

“I’ll cook.” said Harry rising his hand.

“Let him.” said Dudley swiftly.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.
“She’s planning something, careful lad.” said Mr. Weasley.

Eighth paragraph, second sentence.

“Or she could be trying to just make sure you three don’t plot an escape.” said Remus.

Eighth paragraph, third sentence, first comma.

“Ah, no….I hate that job…” said Harry cringing.

“But you’re so good at it…” replied Dudley with a quiet tone. “Mum only had to wipe it down two more times before serving it to her garden party.”

Eighth paragraph, third sentence, fourth comma.

“Ugh…sounds dead boring.” said Ernie.

“Yeah, I wouldn’t ‘ear’ of doing it unless it was one of our weddings.” said George with a smirk.

“Oh brother…” said Percy covering his eyes.

“You were just waiting to use that, weren’t you?” asked Bill.

End of eighth paragraph.

“Called it.” said Remus.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

“He might get hit by a lorry.” said Inspector Homes with a nonchalant shrug. “I’d love to see any wizard try and survive that.”

“Lorry?” asked Ernie.

“Those massive trucks you hear booming down the road.” said Harry. “Smaller version of a train, if you think about it.”

Ninth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.
“Sick joke…but really what else could he be planning to do?” said Lee.

Tenth paragraph, second sentence.

“Stolen hours? The last time you talked to her was only a few minutes…wasn’t it?” asked Ron to Officer McFinn.

“Might be.” said Officer McFinn with a roguish wink towards Harry.

Harry and Ginny blushed.

End of tenth paragraph.

Eleventh paragraph.

“So…Snape is one of them.” said George.

“Well…so much for that place.” said Fred.

“Oh…there are safeguards beyond safeguards.” said Dumbledore.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, first sentence.

“Oh, I’ve put up charms against everyone in case we had another traitor. Even myself.” said Moody.

“How do you put up charms against yourself?” asked Ron.

“I put up the charms, and then do a selective obliviate spell.” said Moody gruffly.

“And you did that?” asked George.

“I don’t remember.” said Moody.

“How do you know you did it then?” asked Fred.

“Wrote myself a note.” said Moody.

The twins opened their mouths, but dismissed it with a wave. “Never mind.”

End of dialogue set.

“Yet we use the Weasley house…” said Harry.

“Like we said, it’s so stupid, they won’t think of it.” said George.
“You two playing ‘footsie’?” said Angelina with a giggle, which sent the rest of the girls into giggles as well. Ginny only turned pink and smiled while Harry turned his gaze away with a reddened face.

I just hope they didn’t get me… but I left myself a little surprise around in the usual Order haunts, I should be taken out fairly quickly.” said Moody with an approving nod.

“Here’s hoping someone else doesn’t set them off.” said Neville.

“Good, never wanted my obituary in the paper, any fool knows what sort of life I had. Also didn’t want some dark wizard to dig me up and turn me into an inferi.” said Moody with an approving nod.

“They don’t want the news that he attacked you, everyone’s already going to be in a panic since Dumbledore’s death, won’t due to be even more worried.” said Rudolph with a roll of his eyes.

“Oh brother, wouldn’t it be better to warn people?” said Katie.

“What?” said Voldemort with a curious look.

Lionus reached over and picked up the hand with the offensive scars, “A past teacher made him write it on his own hand… with a bloodquill.” Harry wrenched the hand out of Lionus’ grasp.

“That’s twisted… not a bad idea… but… a teacher?” said Voldemort.
Alicia and Angelina blinked. “Not really all that comforting when even he thinks it’s twisted.”

Dialogue line.
Dialogue set, third sentence.
“She didn’t.” said Professor Flitwick sadly.

End dialogue set.
Thirteenth paragraph.
Dialogue set, first sentence.
“Ah, bloody hell…come on…” said Harry wincing.

End of dialogue set.
Fourteenth paragraph.
“This hasn’t happened yet.” said Bill waving his hands quickly.
“Aye…don’t care for the bubbly stuff anyway.” said Hagrid.

Dialogue set.
“They’re not going up there, even if they’re horribly lost, they’re not going up that far.” said Ron.
“I want the house looking nice!” scolded Mrs. Weasley.
“Then I’ll clean the door!” retorted Ron.
“Ron.” warned Mr. Weasley.

Dialogue line.
Dialogue line.
“Awkward dinner…isn’t it?” said Fred.
“Rather.” George responded with a posh voice.

Dialogue line.
Dialogue line.

“I’m assuming she and Arthur had talked about this earlier, I can’t seem him siding with that, but I can see him scolding him for what Ron was about to say.” said Sirius.

Fifteenth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, first sentence, fourth comma.

“Uh…I don’t much about magic…but couldn’t you just…wave your wand and poof, you’re done in less than two minutes…for all this stuff?” said Dudley.

“It builds character doing it by hand!” said Mrs. Weasley stiffly.

“She wants to kill time, and kill any chance of us talking.” said Harry. “But yeah, we’d have been done will this, minus the cooking by the first day.”

End of dialogue set.

“Another thing that takes two seconds.” said Sirius quietly.

Sixteenth paragraph.

Dialogue set, second sentence, first colon, second comma.

Harry snickered as Inspector Homes and Officer McFinn waved their hands in a “sort of” gesture.

End of dialogue set.

“I want it to go to Harry.” said Sirius quickly. “Muck about with it all you want, as long as it’s back to normal and flyable, but it goes to Harry.”

Seventeenth paragraph.

Dialogue set.

“So…that’d be a ‘No,’ you’re not doing it.” said Fred.

“Tsk tsk…such nasty little fibs.” said George.

Dialogue line.
“I would have sent word of some sort, even if I was laying low.” said Moody.

“Quit killing my hope.” said Ron. “I don’t want him dead!”

“As realistic as a world full of magic can be.” muttered Dudley. “Not that I don’t believe you all… about…err…everything.”

“I’m disgusting…” said Harry with a grimace.

“At least you admit it.” said the twins together.

“Shut up!” said Sirius turning a sickly green. “I don’t wanna remember that!”

“No one is, it’s a terrifying time for everyone.” said Tonks.
“Easy there…” said Sirius with a smirk.

“Here’s hoping she either doesn’t mind that, or avoids it on accident.” said Hannah.

“CONSTANT VIGILANCE!” shouted the twins loudly, catching most of the people, including Moody off guard.

“Hey, we were right!” said the twins brightly.

“Should have learned that years ago.” said Sirius.

“Hey, push comes to shove, toss the book at them, at least The Monster Book of Monsters will eat their face if given half a chance.” said Bill.
“Doubt we’ll need that.” said Ron.

“You never know.” said Hermione.

“Sure, if we have a battle against a wizard that says ‘I’ll let you go and join you if you can answer who was the second Headmaster that was left handed?’” said Ron.

“That would be Argyl Wells.” said Dumbledore and Voldemort together.

Ron and the rest of the students blinked.

“Headmistress would be Elmira Ramtin.” added the both of them together once more.

“That’s weird.” said Ron.

“You’re telling me.” said Harry.

Dialogue line.

Twenty-third paragraph.

“Thanks…” said Harry.

“We know the tone you have when you’re going to be all noble and self-sacrificing.” said Hermione.

“Best to be prepared.” said Ron.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, first sentence.

“Hey,” chuckled Harry. “I’m talking, I look at you when you talk!”

End of dialogue set.

“You have the bloody thing memorized.” said Ron.

“And they ignore me.” said Harry holding his hands up in defeat.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“You knew about this for years? Way to let me know.” said Harry.
“I should hope so, that book is garbage.” said Sirius.

“Why do you even still have it?” said Remus.

“Bet she’s not going to like that.” said Percy.

The people in the room were silent.

“Oh…Granger…” said Professor Sprout softly.

Hermione sniffed. “So I did go through with it. I’ve had that plan…since Y…Voldemort came back. My parents and I talked about it, they didn’t want to…but I was going to do it either way.”

“You’re a very brave young lady.” said Dumbledore with a kind smile. “It might not have hurt to tell someone, so we could send someone down there with them, to at least protect them.”

“I…I guess I wasn’t too sure who to trust, who would be willing to go.” said Hermione.

“It’s a chance to get out of the country, a lot of people would have jumped at the chance.” said Ernie.

“But let’s face it, no one would have had the courage to send their parents away in such a fashion.” said Lionus. “I’ll pass on this new bit of info to Doc, you’re going to get some massive bouts of respect, young lady.”

Hermione wiped her eyes on a handkerchief given to her by Tonks.

Mrs. Weasley, Leroy and Mrs. McFin stood up suddenly and went to pull Hermione in a large hug, no words were spoken, for no words would ever be enough.
Ron smiled softly and rubbed his pink ears.

“I don’t want to know!” said Harry, holding out his hands in a stopping motion.

“The hell...?” said Dr. Clark.

“What are you showing him for?” asked Charlie.

“It might have something to do with the title.” said Officer McFinn.

“What is it?” asked Bill.

“I don’t want to ruin it for you.” he replied with a smile.

“Scared me the first time I stayed over.” said Hermione.

“The f#ck is he wearing pajamas for?” said Charlie, ignoring the spluttering of his mother.

“And the title of the chapter is: The Ghoul in Pajamas.” said Officer McFinn.
“Doesn’t answer the question.” said Charlie.

Dialogue line.

Twenty-seventh paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“You never looked so good.” said Fred and George together.

“Boys…” warned Mr. Weasley.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue set, second sentence.

Several people laughed loudly.

End of dialogue set.

Twenty-eighth paragraph.

“If I remember what that is, it’s a great plan.” said Dr. Clark.

“Quite ingenious.” said Dumbledore with a smile.

Dialogue set.

“Which is why I’m wondering why they haven’t come here yet.” said Harry.

“Could be that they’re waiting for the Ministry to fall.” said Luna softly.

“Killing me would only strengthen their…morale wouldn’t it?” said Harry.

“Maybe they’re worried that would only incite a riot, more than submission.” said Luna in her dreamlike tone. “I for one would be very upset, furious even.”

Voldemort looked at her with a confused gaze. “Does she have the capability to feel as such?”

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue set.

Dudley looked down at his lap.
“It’s in your mouth, Dud.” said Harry without looking at him.

“Oh.”

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Here’s hoping she lets you sneak some food then.” said Colin.

Twenty-ninth paragraph.

Hermione broke through the hugs and went to go and hug Harry. “We know, Harry…we know.”

Harry held her tightly, until Ron came over and patted Harry somewhat awkwardly on the shoulder.

“Can’t let you go and have fun without us, can we mate?” said Ron.

Thirtieth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“They might want to help with the preparations.” said Mrs. McFinn. “I know James’ mother took over my mother’s duties and was with me the entire time.”

Dialogue line.

“You’re indecisive about that one too? Kindling…there I made it easy for you.” said Remus.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, first sentence, second comma, eleventh word.

“Good.” said almost everyone together.

Dialogue set, first sentence, third comma.

“If you can’t learn spells from it, leave it behind.” said Moody.

End of dialogue set.
Dumbledore chuckled. “It took many years to track down the Horcruxes I found, my dear. I don’t see much wrong with going to Godric Hollow, especially if you go guarded and go soon.”

Dialogue set, second sentence.

“There may very well be, but you’ll still need to go carefully. I wish I had taken you there years ago.” said Dumbledore.

“Nothing that can’t be fixed now.” said Rudolph.

End of dialogue set.

“Good luck mate.” said Seamus.

Dialogue set.

“Like I said, ‘go guarded’.” said Dumbledore with a nod.

Thirty-first paragraph, first sentence.

“I’m an idiot.” said Harry covering his eyes.

“You’re a teenager, it’s your god given right to be an idiot.” said Inspector Homes. “And it’s our god given right to call you out on it, and then deal out some punishment for being so.”

End of thirty-first paragraph.

“Way to keep up, Ron.” said Dean.

Dialogue line.

Thirty-second paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Thirty-third paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“I can think of something more important than trying to include both sexes at this point.” said
“Hmm…it would seem I made quite a grave error…I should have told you how to do it…but I believe that you will think of the way, as you have already done it.” said Dumbledore.

Voldemort rolled his eyes. “Always the one to just dance around an answer, aren’t you?”

“No…no I did not.” said Dumbledore, a twinkle in his eyes.

“Enough with trying to find legal loop holes, you’re trying to explain yourself, not write batch of laws.” said Moody gruffly.

“Are you joking?” said Snape looking over to Dumbledore with an incredulous look.

Dumbledore only smiled and gave a small shrug.

“I suspect that I wanted you to find them, if I certainly wanted them to stay out of sight, a simple fourth year spell would not bypass it.” said Dumbledore.
Voldemort only smiled, a terrifying, pleased smile.

“That’s not the only book I conferred with.” said Voldemort, his face sporting a wide smirk.

“Now doesn’t that explain what happened to your face?” asked Reaper.

“The soul affects your physical self?” asked Terry.

“There’s your proof.” said Reaper pointing to Voldemort with a thumb.

“I’m all for pain when it concerns him.” said Harry.

“Nope.” said Harry.

“I regret nothing…” said Voldemort.

Dumbledore shook his head.
“I’m regretting eating that big of a breakfast.” said Hannah.

“We’ve been using them as a sugar substitute.” said George.

“Would you like a tea cake?” said Fred.

“I’ll pretend that makes sense.” said Dennis.

Harry looked down at the floor thoughtfully, but Dumbledore broke him out of his thoughts by patting his shoulder.

So did many other people in the room.

“I dunno, you running me through with a sword would bring up a few questions. Like, ‘What line did I cross?’” said Ron.

“Really happy about eating breakfast.” said Hannah.
Harry blinked and then looked over to Dumbledore with a fixed look. Dumbledore only smiled softly and shook his head.

“It was not your error to make, my dear boy.” said Dumbledore. “It was my own.”

“See, now if you had cleaned your room, that wouldn’t have happened.” said Mr. Weasley.

“Sort of easy to sort those: First pile is from people you actually invited, second pile from the ones you didn’t, third are the presents from the people you really like, fourth are from the ones you detest.” said Sirius.

“Oh really, Sirius!” chided Mrs. Weasley.

“That’s the way that James and Lily did it.” said Sirius with a shrug. “Well…perhaps not Lily, but she didn’t know what system James had used and was happy with it.”

“Everyone feels that way before the wedding starts, we eloped and still James’ mother wanted to throw us a little party.” said Mrs. McFinn.

“Then it exploded into a bigger party.” said James with a fond smile.
“Why do you lot need to be so liked.” said Ron.

“I never match my socks, too much work.” said Tonks with a wink towards Ron.

“And it’s never going to lay flat.” said Sirius tousling Harry’s hair.

“I quite agree.” said Dumbledore with a nod.

“I’m not sure.” said Mr. Weasley.

“Oh…well..I’m happy that she thought we were working hard.” said Mrs. Weasley with a fixed smile.

“Best not have her write that…” said Charlie.

“No trouble my…” muttered Ron.

“No need to take it out on the poor gnomes.” said Charlie with a firm tone.
“Mum’s not going to like that much.” said Bill quietly.

“That’s what happens when you’re married kids, you learn to switch facial expressions pretty fast.” said Mr. Weasley.

Ginny rolled her eyes.

“Just get in the house!” said Dean.

“But wasn’t the shoes the bridesmaids are going to wear Fleur’s job anyway?” said Alicia.

“And anyone other than the Delacours can understand them.” said Ron.

“Harry speaks a little French.” said Mrs. McFinn.

“Not much, not even to hold a weak conversation.” said Harry.

“Well, we’ll have to pick that back up.” said Mrs. McFinn.

“I’m sure that Bill learned a little French, a way of payment to help Fleur with her ‘language lesson.’” said Charlie with a nudge to Bill.

“Stuff it, dragon boy.” said Bill.

Percy blushed.
“Awww…” said Charlie ruffling Bill’s hair. “Knew I was your favorite.”

“Don’t blame you, never cared for large crowds.” said Moody. “Too many open opportunities.”

“Everywhere has too many ‘open opportunities’.” said Tonks.

“Not that we want you to go!” said Mr. and Mrs. Weasley and Bill.

“Treacle for breakfast?” said Harry hopefully.

“Try again.” said Sirius.

“Treacle for lunch and dinner as well?” replied Harry.

“Much better.” said Sirius.

“It never is…” said Mrs. Weasley.

“Oh, don’t be silly dear, I would feel just awful if no one had done something for you, your seventeenth birthday is very important!” said Mrs. Weasley.

“And frankly, I’m sure that we had planned to have the wedding around your birthday.” said Bill.
with a wink. “just another way to keep you at the Burrow.”
Did you leave the house?” said Ron in shock. “Without us?”

“Beats me, maybe we should wait to hear!” said Harry.

“That answers that question.” said Fred.

“Unless some stranger just came up to you and you told you to wake up as you were walking.” said George.

“That’s also a possibility.”

“Happens to us all the time.”

“Oh, shit…” said Sirius.

“Funny, you didn’t mention his name in the dream.” said Ron.

“Fourth year, Ollivander said it.” said Dr. Clark with a smile.

“It’s easy to remember when all this information only happens not too long ago.” said Mrs. McFinn.
“Wouldn’t want to be in his shoes.” said Dennis.

Voldemort smirked.

“Well, then England’s looking a little safer.” said George.

“Click my heels three times and hope for a miracle.” said Harry.

“Pretty good association…” said Rudolph.

“Not something I would want to be remembered for.” said Charlie.

‘Record Fee for the most or least amount of money given to a member?’ asked Officer McFinn.

“Least, only five hundred galleons.” said Ron.
“Wonder if I can warn them to practice his handwork?” said Ron.

“Pity.” muttered Voldemort.

“Bless your heart…” said Sirius wiping a tear from his eye. “Your dad did the same thing.”

“Even the part about poking yourself in the eye.” said Remus. “Though, James managed to do it to both.”

“I did that.” said Rudolph with a raise of his hand.

“Finally!” whispered Mr. Weasley. “I’ve been wanting to change the color of his room for years.”

“Someone I know didn’t.” said Remus with a chuckle.

“Stupid idiot, he was mortified when he had to go to St. Mugoes to get it fixed.” said Sirius snickering.

“I’m going to guess…Peter.” said McGonagall with a roll of her eyes.

“He begged us to never mention it to anyone else, but that certainly didn’t stop us from talking about it in our dorm with no one else around.” said Sirius.

“Hold on…if it’s a book for Mum to not see…I don’t want to know where you got it.” said Charlie.
Dialogue set, second sentence.

“Oh…just that?” asked Charlie. “Never mind.”

“I think I want to read this book.” said Mrs. Weasley.

“It’s harmless, Molly.” said Mr. Weasley. “I’ve read it…in fact, it does make some sense in there.”

“And what does that book teach young, impressionable men?” said Mrs. Weasley.

“How to avoid getting slapped, mostly.” said Mr. Weasley.

Well, Fred and George gave me a copy, Dialogue fifth sentence, second comma.

“Come on, you didn’t want to say ‘Hermione’?” said Fred with a cheeky grin while George making kissing noises.

End of dialogue set.

Mrs. Weasley turned and looked at her husband fixedly.

“Mother!” gasped Fred.

“Not that kind of wandwork!” said George wagging his finger.

Mrs. Weasley blushed as she sputtered indignantly.

Tenth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Harry blushed.

“Can you imagine what his presents are going to look like as the Patriarch?” said Leroy.

“His grandfather was still unwrapping presents nearly two weeks after he turned seventeen, and he was just the successor, not the actual Patriarch.” said Rudolph.

Eleventh paragraph.

Sirius wiped his eyes. “I wanted to get him his watch…”

“I would have…if I had the opportunity.” said Remus.

“I would as well.” said Dumbledore with a sad smile.
Dialogue set.

Harry brought a shaking hand to his eyes and leaned forward on the sofa.

“Dear?” said Mrs. Weasley.

Sirius leaned forward to check on his godson, and then patted him on the back tenderly. “He’s crying.”

Twelfth paragraph.

“Here Molly.” whispered Mr. Weasley handing his wife a fresh handkerchief.

“Such a dear…such a darling…” said Mrs. Weasley sobbing softly.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

“He ain’t telling her.” said George.

“Guess Ron’s not as stupid as we thought.” said Fred.

Thirteenth paragraph, first sentence.

“What happened to the last one?” asked Bill.

“Well…we might have smashed the thing after our first Poker Night a year ago.” said Seamus. “Kept going off every single hand.”

Thirteenth paragraph, second sentence, fourth comma.

“Good luck with this mop.” said Sirius placing his hand on Harry’s head and giving the hair on his head a little shake.

Thirteenth paragraph, second sentence, fifth comma.

“Oooh!” said the girls excitedly together.

End of thirteenth paragraph.

“Couldn’t ask for anything more, especially if you’re going to be doing some dangerous stuff.” said Fred.
“Though I kind of hope that we gave them more…for free…” said George. “You know, for the ‘Greater Good’ and all.”

Fourteenth paragraph.

Dialogue set.

“Not something I would want to hear coming out of a girl’s mouth.” said Ron.

Fifteenth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Sixteenth paragraph.

“I’m sure nothing happens!” said Harry looking up and holding out his arms in front of her older brothers. Ginny blushed.

Seventeenth paragraph, first sentence.

“Thought he had taken a few hairpins.” said Sirius.

“I went in for him, he went into the bathroom.” said George.

End of seventeenth paragraph.

Eighteenth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Nineteenth paragraph.

Several women and girls cooed.

“Sappy.” muttered Ron with a uneasy look towards Hermione.

Dialogue line.

“Lame.” said George.

Twentieth paragraph.

Dialogue line.
“She’s the toughest one out of us all.” said Charlie.

“Wasn’t always, but she got there pretty quickly.” said Bill.

Ginny’s brothers looked between Harry and Ginny with wide eyes.

“Doubt they’re going to just crop up, besides, Hermione’s going to be there as well. She’ll beat some sense into their heads.” said Leroy.

“Yeah, right.” said Katie.

“You couldn’t wait fifteen bloody minutes?!” said Angelina, “It was just getting good!”
“Yeah, having friends can be a pain in the ass when you try to have a romantic moment.” said Sirius.

“Doing adult stuff sucks…doesn’t it?” said Lionus with a chuckle. “Much easier just being a kid.”

“I’d be scared of what Harry’s going to do to Ron for that.” said Neville.

“That’s Ron’s sister though, I think I’d be more worried about getting the Weasley boys upset.” said Dean.

“We parted for a reason!” growled Harry.

“I get it…I get it…” said Ron holding up two hands in a submissive gesture.

“So was Harry.” said Mrs. McFinn.
“She led him up there.” said Hannah.

No one could say anything, most people just looked between Harry and Voldemort.

“‘Groping’?” screeched Ginny as she chucked a cushion at Ron.

“Oi! I’m being…” started Ron but he had to duck after his sister hurled another cushion.

“A…complete…arse!” yelled Ginny, she wanted to continue but her oldest brother reached over and took her by the hand.

“Easy shortcake.” said Bill. “He gets it.”

“She’s a good actress…I used to get us in trouble in all sorts of different ways.” said Charlie.

“Ha, I’m one of his favorites.” said Charlie.

“Well, never mind then.” said Charlie touching his hair absentely.

“Just in case anyone forgets what they’re there for.” said Fred.
“It’s a way to cope, making jokes.” said Luna softly.

“if anyone says that it’s because she’s a girl…I’m going to shove my broomstick…” said Angelina.

“No one is going to make that sort of assumption.” said Lionus with a laugh.

“Chapter four, if I’m not mistaken.” said Dumbledore.

“You’ve read it?” asked George looking taken aback.

Dumbledore smiled genuinely. “Of course I have, in fact, if you read the dedication, I’m one of the listed names. I’ve had to intervene several times when the author of that particular book had incurred the righteous fury of several of his female classmates. Seven at one time I believe was the record number.”

“You got your wish for your cake.” said Leroy with a smile over to Mrs. Weasley. “And it sounds like he really liked it.”

“You can tell that already?” asked Terry.

“Sure…he didn’t say ‘what the bloody hell is that?’” said Leroy.

“Seriously, we need to get you to a tailor.” said Leroy with a slight pout.
“That’s normal, I have enough happiness for the both of us. Can you imagine if the roles were reversed? I don’t think he could pull off the bubblegum hair.” said Tonks with a gleeful smile.

Harry laughed, “Best day of my life.”

“Those details aren’t ones that I’d forget so easily.” said Bill.

“Wow…” said Dr. Clark, “I could use a wallet like that.”

“Oooh….poor Charlie.” said George.

“We like having long hair for the most part.” said Fred. “Especially since as we get older, Weasley’s tend to lose their hair.” he added in a whisper to Hermione with a brief look to his father.
“I can easily bench press Fred and George. Not at the same time though.” said Charlie flexing his arms.

“It’s like they’re in heat all the damn time…and they can get downright pissy.” said Charlie with a smile. “Mostly that has to do with that they’re about fifty degrees warmer than the males.”

“Hermione looks all eager to go and try that now, doesn’t she?” said Terry.

“Well, my birthday now sucks.” said Harry.

“Could be worse, could be Fudge with Umbridge.” said Ron.

“I’m afraid I’d have to kill someone if that happened on my birthday.” said Harry with a serious tone.

“So just hide in the kitchen or something.” said Sirius. “You don’t have to leave.”
Fortieth paragraph.
Dialogue line.
“One last attempt at trying to butter me up?” said Harry.

Forty-first paragraph.
“He really needs to change it up a bit.” said Tonks.
“Just because you change every other minute doesn’t mean the rest of us has to.” said Moody.

Forty-second paragraph, first sentence.
“Well, if you’re going to be a party crasher, might as well be famous.” said Dr. Clark.

End of forty-second paragraph.
Dialogue line.
Forty-third paragraph.
Dialogue line.
“Thanks…I see you’re gifting me with awkwardness, sorry, but I’ve got lots of those, can I regift it?” said Harry.

Dialogue line.
Dialogue line.
“Well, that’s new.” said Ron.

Dialogue line.
Dialogue line.
“Settle down there…” said Fred.
“Just because you’re the Minister, that doesn’t mean you can just ask for whatever you want in our house.” said George.
“We’ll be the judge of that.” said Moody.

“We are of age…” said Hermione.

“Doesn’t mean the Minister can’t be Imperiused and attack you.” said Moody. “Or at least an imposter…not that I don’t think you wouldn’t check, Arthur, but they’ve slipped through tighter defenses before.”

“Can’t see how he would find out, especially when it involves you.” said Kingsley.

“Any excuse to use magic…” said Sirius. “Thumbing your nose at the Minister?”

“Ministry at least. Tried to expel me…well…screw you, I made it!” Harry laughed triumphantly.

“We’re not criminals, and we’re not going to let you interrogate us.” said Ron coldly.

“Not if you want something.” said Remus.

Everyone minus Dumbledore blinked.

“Well, we would have known, had you sent an owl ahead of time.” said Hermione.

“Didn’t see that coming.” said Ron.

“Would have, had I told you the title of the chapter.” said Officer McFinn.

“You gotta stop doing that.” said Dr. Clark.
“They probably want to inspect every little thing that was in the will. If Fudge had been still in power, I would think he would personally confiscate a few things for his own benefit, claiming them to be ‘not truly Dumbledore’s’.” said Sirius.

“Whilst true, they do have to give at least forty-nine reasons to the Wizengamot, families and beneficiaries within the course of seven days of receiving the will. They clearly have not done so in regards to the beneficiaries…and the Ministry risks both a fine and a lawsuit.” said Dumbledore thoughtfully. “And when that happens, the families and beneficiaries can contest it, but I don’t believe it would be wise to go to the Ministry now. Though…if they were merely trying to hold them hostage for a little bit, their time may be close to being up.”

“Wouldn’t be a bad idea. Dad would love you.” said Ron.

“Ooooh……” chuckled Mr. Weasley.

“I surmised as much.” said Dumbledore with a smile. “Well, done Miss Granger.”
“Well…closer than maybe Terry was, yeah…” said Ron.

“I don’t think any other student really had his attention like Harry had…er…has.” said Remus quietly.

“Need to work on your ‘giving the enemy too much’ way of talking.” said Sirius.

“Daily interactions mean nothing, I seem to remember putting in my last will and testament that I wish to give quite a few tomes to an old colleague of mine.” said Dumbledore. “And I had not seen, nor spoken to him for nearly half a century.”

“He liked my family…” said Ron with a shrug.

“I do not like your family…I adore your family.” said Dumbledore fondly.

Ron blushed.

“I suppose I did not say as much, but I am quite fond of you, as I am of all my students.” said Dumbledore.

“Way to just skip ahead of any sort of sentimental messages.” said George.
End of Will excerpt.

Fred and George looked at each other and then back to Ron.

“If you do get it…” said Fred.

“Can we borrow it?” said George.

Fifty-second paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Wouldn’t you like to know?” said Remus.

Fifty-third paragraph.

Dialogue set.

“Maybe he thought I was afraid of the dark.” said Ron.

Dumbledore looked thoughtful.

Dialogue line.

Fifty-fourth paragraph.

“Well, that was surprising, never knew him to give up like that.’ said Kingsley.

Will excerpt.

“Quite an excellent choice.” said Dumbledore nodding.

“Am I missing something?” asked Sirius.

“It has something to do with the title of the book.” said Officer McFinn.

“And you didn’t tell us the title of the book…” said Remus.

“No, no I didn’t.” said Officer McFinn. “Get away.” he added swatting at them when the twins both leaned over to try and read the spine.

Fifty-fifth paragraph, fifth sentence.

“But didn’t you take the assessment test? You said you could read them.” said Hermione in shock.
“A bluff…Harry?” said Dumbledore.

“I don’t translate…I decode.” said Harry smoothly. “I figured it out using…guesswork.”

“You…?” said Hermione.

“I figured out the most common symbol, replaced it with the letter ‘e’ as a way to make a sort of baseline. From then, I simply…guessed what they were talking about, saw if it held up to what the questions were talking about and then…allow it to simply fill in the blanks on it’s own. I can’t read it, yet…” said Harry. “But I’m sure given a few months, I’ll be alright to start on.”

“And apparently you never bothered to study it in these future books.” said Moody.

“Because it turned out that I didn’t need it at the time, and I had enough on my plate, so I focused more on learning defensive and offensive spells. My time was better spent trying to keep others alive, then trying to pursue any sort of self-advancement with multi-spanning knowledge. I can always study later, I can’t keep everyone alive if it’s too late.” said Harry leaning forward on the sofa with his hands clenched together. “That’s only a guess though…”

“You do a lot of scary guesses.” said Terry.

End of fifty-fifth paragraph.

“You have to stop noticing things like that.” said Hermione softly, her eyes not straying away from Harry’s stern countenance.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Everyone knows you like books.” said Ron.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“All that time of reading merely informative tomes, I simply wanted her to read a book of fairy tales.” said Dumbledore, his eyes twinkling brightly.

“He knows why he did it, didn’t he?” Ron.

“I’m thinking so.” said Hermione.

Dialogue line.

“Why in the world would we tell you?” said Harry.
“I believe he’s hoping that once I was gone, and you had time to grieve, you would open up to him more.” said Dumbledore.

“True, but he’s a fool if he thinks Potter or any of the them would be willing to simply bend over and tell him anything.” said Moody.

Dialogue line.

“Perhaps not in thirty-one days, but I doubt I had put in any sort of secret message.” said Dumbledore.

Fifty-sixth paragraph.

“What a jerk.” said Alicia.

“He’s trying to get information, and he’s doing badly.” said Kingsley.

Will excerpt.

“I think you got the short end of the stick there.” said Fred.

“Yeah, Ron at least got a cool tool and Hermione got a pretty old and most likely valuable book.” said George.

“You got a toy.” they said together.

Fifty-seventh paragraph.

“Yeah, wills tend to do that.” said Sirius with a bark-like laugh.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“You’re so flippant towards him…I love it!” said Tonks.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, first sentence, second comma.

“You’re not asking any good ones.” said Ginny.
“Stupid…stupid idiot…” said Moody.

“Cause it’s unexpected?” said Dean.

“Flesh memories?” asked Dr. Clark.

“It’s a way to determine who caught the snitch first.” said Charlie. “In case there’s a conflict between two Seekers.”

“That comes in handy, I’ll bet.” said Inspector Homes.

“Simple…and yet highly probably, I feel that there might be a bit more to it.” said Dumbledore. “Or inside it.” he added quietly to himself.

“I’ve got nothing.” said Harry.

“It’s always going a million kilometers an hour.” said Ron.
“That was hyped more than it needed to be, huh?” said Lee.

As did a few of the others.

“Great, something useful.” said Harry. “Gimmie.”

“Ooh…not his to give.” said Mr. Weasley.

“Not if you have the right charms around the container.” said Hermione.

“It doesn’t quite work that way, it’s not a ‘Finders Keepers, losers weepers sort of law.” said Bill.

“ Might have to give that a bit of thought.” said Harry thoughtfully. “Might look pretty cool.”
“Not quite what I think I have in mind.” said Dumbledore.

“He won’t like that.” said Leroy.

“Best not let any of the adults see that, Rufus won’t be allowed to leave without a bit of pain on his end.” said Kingsley.

“Yes, but he attacked you first!” said Ron.

“I’ll give him the part where Dumbledore forgave his insolence, but I begrudgingly admit, he doesn’t quite wear that scar in that fashion.” said Snape with a frown.

“Somehow…that doesn’t quite sincere.” said Ron.

“Oooh…” said Sirius. “It’s like two guys trying to verbally duke it out.”

“Or at least a dick measuring contest, while it’s still in their pants.” said Lionus.

“Oh, you heard…” said Charlie.
Sixty-sixth paragraph.

“I should certainly hope so!” said Mrs. Weasley.

Dialogue set, second sentence.

“That the Ministry gave me that attitude, or that I simply have it?” said Harry.

End of dialogue set.

“That would be first.” replied Harry.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, first sentence.

“Well, he wasn’t the one that was behind it, but he certainly did help matters during or after the fact by keeping Umbridge around.” said Mr. Weasley.

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Sort of sick that they did this on my birthday.” said Harry.

Sixty-eighth paragraph, second sentence.

“Sort of…lame in comparison.” said Ernie quietly.

End of sixty-eighth paragraph.

“You want my permission? Eat, I’m not stopping you.” said Harry.

“Manners, Harry.” said Mrs. McFinn kindly. “They have to wait for the birthday boy.”

Sixty-ninth paragraph, first sentence, second comma, seventh word.

“We could always do it at the funeral march speed.” said Fred.

“That’s a bit twisted.” said Hermione looking uneasy.
End of sixty-ninth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Hermione and Ron blushed. Harry groaned and covered his eyes. “Don’t take it there.”

Seventieth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Harry extended his arms in silent indignation.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, first sentence.

“Hypocrite.” said Harry.

End of dialogue set.

Seventy-first paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Fred and George smiled proudly but then stopped. “Can’t put the lights back on, on command.”

Seventy-second paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“It’s not going to be figured out in a single night, Miss Granger.” said Dumbledore.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

“Obvious…highly unlikely.” said Dumbledore kindly.
“Then why not have your future-self tell us.” said Ron.

“As the saying goes: All in good time.” said Dumbledore.

Dialogue line.
Dialogue line.
Dialogue line.

“You figured it out? Seriously, already? Are you showing your smarts?” said Colin excitedly.

“I should sort of hope so if it’s going to be a life or death situation year.” said Flitwick.

Dialogue line.
Dialogue line.
Seventy-third paragraph.
Dialogue line.

“There you go.” said Harry.

Dialogue line.
Seventy-fourth paragraph.
Dialogue line.
Seventy-fifth paragraph.
Message.
Seventy-sixth paragraph.

“Quite clever, my boy.” said Dumbledore.

Dialogue line.

“No clue.” said Terry.

Seventy-seventh paragraph.
Dialogue line.
“With what may happen quite terribly soon, it wouldn’t be a bad idea to have an extra weapon.” said Chief Hawkeye.

“Excellent point, but I daresay the school governors would have been quite upset knowing that the one relic of Godric Gryffindor was taken out of the school.”

“If you missed it, then we all did.” said Hannah.

“How have you not?” said Neville, “I would have thought that you would have read it a bunch of times!”

“I’m more into informative books.” said Hermione quietly. “I do read some fiction…”

“Like the Lockhart books.” muttered Kingsley.

“Not something you ever thought would happen.” said Fred.

“Then again, most kids have read at least one of them.” said George.

“Oh come on! All the old kids’ stories are supposed to be Beedle’s, aren’t they? ‘The Fountain of Fair Fortune’ . . . ‘The Wizard and the Hopping Pot’ . . . ‘Babbitty Rabbitty and her Cackling Stump’ . . .”

“That’s my favorite.” said Ron.
The muggles and muggleborns/raised laughed loudly.

“Some of the adaptations sure could be attributed to an illness of some sort.” said Dr. Clark.

“There is a story in there that I think you would find quite enlightening.” said Dumbledore.

“It’s not the “Warlock’s Hairy Heart” is it?” said Sirius.

“Charles!” said Mrs. Weasley.

“Mum…short hair is not for me.” said Charlie weakly.

“Just a smidgen.” laughed Sirius. “I know James and Lily’s Mum just about threatened us with severe hexing and running us over with the family vehicle if we didn’t sober up properly by the next morning.”

“You’re going to use that thing a lot, aren’t you?” said Ginny.

“Hey, guys always love a new toy.” said Dudley piping up, surprising himself.

*I didn’t have my book with me at the time, but Harry is telling Mrs. Weasley that the cake looks amazing.
The Union of Bill and Fleur

First paragraph, second sentence.

“Now I’ve got to wonder, did he barely feel it or did he just about fall backwards when his head was yanked on by magic.” said Hermione to Ron with a giggle.

Several members of the Weasley family shrugged they had not heard what Hermione said, “Red hair, you could pass for a relative.”

End first paragraph.

“Barny? Seriously?” said Sirius with a wince. “You couldn’t pick a better name?”

“I’m assuming we didn’t want him to stand out.” said Mr. Weasley.

“With a name like ‘Barny’, that’s all he going to do.” said Sirius.

Second paragraph.

Third paragraph, third sentence.

Bill blushed while Mrs. Weasley cooed and smiled fondly at her son with tear filled eyes.

End of third paragraph.

“So…he was built normally?” said Fred.

Dialogue set.

“Fred!” said Mrs. Weasley with her hands on her hips.

“I’m going to want that in writing.” said George.

Dialogue line.

Fourth paragraph.

“Not our relatives…I can guarantee that.” said Bill.

“Yeah, we don’t tend to be all that flashy at weddings, simple affair, and then we eat.” said Charlie.
“I’ll make you match before I even lose an ear!” said George bopping his twin with the cushion.

“I think it’s amusing that they forget we’re sitting right here.” said Angelina to Alicia with a smirk towards the boys who immediately ceased.

“Can we fast forward through all this till we reach the part where I kill the boy?” said Voldemort in a bored tone.

“Can it.” snapped Reaper.

“Really?” said Harry with a put out look. “Can I un-volunteer for this?”

“I understand, but frankly, they can kiss my…”

“Harry…” said Mrs. McFinn warningly.

“My…glass…” said Harry with a twitching smile.

“Oh please, are you trying to look like a hen-pecked husband? It doesn’t happen that fast, and if it does, get the damn thing annulled before you give yourself an ulcer.” said Sirius.

“Excuse me?” said Tonks.

“Yeah, I said it, deal with it.” said Sirius.

Hagrid blushed.

“Hello, Daddy.” said Luna.
Several people laughed loudly as Mrs. Weasley looked indignant.

“Wasn’t the twins that did that.” said Bill quietly to Charlie.

“Yeah, I think I remember them copying dad after he smashed his finger with a hammer when we were little.” said Charlie beaming. “That’s how we learned.”

“Sometimes you get a look of suspicion on your face when you’re in a crowd.” said Luna. “You try and figure out everyone around you.”

Luna smiled sweetly.

“The Rumpfles must have borrowed them, they love anything to do with radishes, but they always return them a few days later.” said Luna.

“Did you remember to sign the waiver?” said Dr. Clark with a chuckle.

“My cousin was bit by a gnome once and she suddenly became quite the cross-stitcher.” said Luna.
“It usually pays off.” said Harry.

“Interesting…” said Sirius, trying vainly to not laugh out loud.

“Well, he’ll fit in with the décor then.” said Ron.

“Hello, Auntie Muriel.” said the twins together with cheeky grins.

“Isn’t she just lovely?” said Ginny with a laugh.

“Ouch.” said Mr. Weasley with a smile.

“Ouch.” said Mr. Weasley with a smile.

“Oh, I like her.” said Harry with a laugh.
Bill whistled. “This is going to be fun in the future.”

End of dialogue set.

Eleventh paragraph.

Dialogue set, second sentence.

“We always do our pranks for the greater good.” said Fred.

End of dialogue set.

“Awww….” said the Chaser girls.

Dialogue set.

“It’s a wonder that we procreate at all with her hovering all over our potential mates like a buzzard.” said George.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, third sentence.

“Always the sensitive one.” said George.

“But she likes us.” said Mr. Weasley chuckling.

End of dialogue set.

Mrs. Weasley shook her head. “Not in some people’s opinion.”

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

Mrs. McFinn and several other girls’ jaw dropped.

Dialogue line.

“Oh my sides, oh sweet jeezus.” said Harry gasping for air.
“We can guess why not, not the party trick most ladies look for.” said Tonks giggling.

“Oh, no! Not when they’re finally going together!” cried Katie in despair.

“He obviously got an invitation, Ron. He’s and Fleur went through the Triwizard Tournament… they’re most likely friends.” said Bill.

“Now that would have pissed off some famous people. They come all this way for a wedding and not even the groom’s brothers seats you.” said Lionus. “Special consideration for the well-known.”

“Viktor isn’t like that.” said Hermione stiffly.

“I know that…” said Lionus with a smirk. “Just saying…”

“Oh sure, we’re all related, every ginger in the world is a Weasley.” said Charlie.

“Can you imagine if Harry were to show his face? Ooh, Viktor wouldn’t get a second look.” said Neville.
Mr. Weasley laughed loudly.

“Arthur!” scolded Mrs. Weasley shortly.

He sobered as best he could, a grin still on his face. “Yes dear.”

“Be honest, mum, it was funny.” said Ginny giggling.

Fifteenth paragraph.

“Argh, not this bloody mess again.” said Harry covering his eyes.

Sixteenth paragraph.

“Don’t involve me, don’t involve me, don’t involve me.” chanted Harry.

Seventeenth paragraph.

Mrs. Weasley smiled as Mr. Weasley patted her arm.

Eighteenth paragraph, first sentence.

“Which one of us was he whistling at?” said Charlie.

“I’m their favorite, so it was me.” said Bill.

“Bollocks, I bring them various dragon scales that fall off the dragons I keep when I come back home.” said Charlie. “I know I’m the favorite.”

Eighteenth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Nineteenth paragraph, second sentence.

Mrs. Weasley stood up suddenly before the paragraph was even starting, rushed behind Bill and covered his ears. “He should not know what the dress looks like!”

“I agree, it’s bad luck!” said Mrs. McFinn with an approving nod.

End of nineteenth paragraph.

“Mum…can I hear now?” asked Bill.
Mrs. Weasley looked pointedly at the deceased Officer, and then removed her hands from his ears.

Dialogue set.

“Faithful to who?” asked Dr. Clark in a quite tone.

“Nice switch, from funerals to weddings.” said Fred.

“He loves weddings, always wants to attend, even when he’s not officiating.” said Dumbledore.

Dialogue set, first sentence.

She reminds me of mum.” said Dudley. “A little louder though.”

End of dialogue set.

Twentieth paragraph, first sentence, third comma.

“Might not want to do that if you’re supposed to be relatives there, love.” said Sirius laughing loudly.

End of twentieth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Lord knows I love a wedding.” said Chief Hawkeye with a smile.

Twenty-first paragraph.

“So do many other people, it seems.” said Chief Hawkeye.

Dialogue line.

“That was quick.” said Mrs. McFinn with a giggle as she dabbed at her eyes.

“This moment makes divorce a bit awkward.” said Seamus.

Twenty-second paragraph.

“Oh, this sounds just so lovely.” said Mrs. McFinn.
“You know what I just remembered, she at first wanted pink.” said Fred.

George grimaced, “If it was going to look like an Umbridge wedding, I’d just send a card.”

“Not unless you want to hear about your ankles all night.” said Ron.

“Have to say about Hermione, when she smacks you, she smacks you and when she kicks, ooh… duck and cover.” said Ron.

“Thank you, Ron.” said Luna happily.

“Neighborhood nutter.” whispered Ron.
“Finally…” said Harry with a groan.

“Never a party without a good fight, have to have one or at least two at a wedding.” said Sirius. “You have to have some entertainment afterwards.”

“It was not his symbol to start with, but symbols are mostly remembered for the negative rather than the positive.” said Dumbledore.

Lionus smirked, “He’s not the only one to turn a harmless symbol into something heinous.”
“It’s part of one of my favorite stories.” said Luna.

Dialogue line.

“That’ll throw him for a bit.” said Ron.

Dialogue line.

Thirty-third paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Most likely.” said Luna.

Thirty-fourth paragraph.

Dialogue set.

“Bloody hell, that’s where ‘Quidditch’ came from?” asked Lee.

“Harry does that, it’s right scary.” said Dudley. “Anything small he can’t remember, he does some weird word association thing to remember it.”

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Thirty-fifth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“You’re cover is breaking, though you’re not doing a fair job to start with.” said Moody.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Skeeter was there, she’ll write whatever the hell she wants.” said Harry.
“Too right.” said several students.

“They both know their own personal secrets, but I fear it is for a far different reason that Gregorovitch is being hunted.” said Dumbledore.

“Jealous type, sure…but big?” said Fred as George clicked his tongue.

“Naughty, naughty…” said George. “Fibber, fibber.”

“Sorry, not my type either way.” said Ginny giggling with Hermione.

“At least he doesn’t try and put the moves on them regardless.” said Sirius.

Lee slowly turned to smile at both Harry and Katie. “Hi.”

“Hey.” said Harry and Katie together.

“We wish.” said Mrs. McFinn.
“Hasn’t happened yet!” said Fred and George hurriedly as they scrambled off their seats and ran out of the room.

“Get back here, you cheating doppelgangers!” screamed Angelina and Alicia as they rushed after them.

“Should we wait…or just get a Healer ready?” said Ron.

“They’re going to be a while.” said Charlie. “It may not have happened, but it’s going to take a lot of work for those four to be able to sit in a room without the girls bashing them with whatever’s heavy and handy.”

End of fortieth paragraph.

Forty-first paragraph, first sentence, first comma.

“Hope it’s not Uncle Bartholemew, he gets a little whacked out when he drinks.” said Ron. “That and cousin Fergus isn’t all that great to look at…so…doesn’t put you in a good light, mate.”

End of forty-first paragraph.

Forty-second paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Forty-third paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“I think you’ve had a few too many, my good lad.” said Tonks with a masculine voice.

Forty-fourth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Forty-fifth paragraph.

“Not even a test to prove who you are.” said Moody shaking his head.

Dialogue line.

“I would have liked that, I think.” said Harry quietly.
“Which they should count him.” said Dumbledore.

Dumbledore hissed and winced slightly. “Not the topic to bring up to Elphias.”

“Well, of course, should have expected that.” said Remus with a frown.

“It’s best to get both sides of the story, but always remember the good time and learn from the bad.” said Dumbledore.

“He doesn’t know you as well as we do.” said Dumbledore.

“Not surprised.” said Charlie.

“She and I never were close.” said Dumbledore thoughtfully.
“Why not?” asked Ginny.

“I would rather not say.” said Dumbledore kindly.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Fifty-second paragraph.

“Oh, she can go for a good, lengthy walk if she had a need to.” said Bill.

Dialogue set.

“I would be quite surprised if Flourish and Blotts would carry such a book, but if they want to make money, I hold no ill feelings towards them for stocking it.” said Dumbledore.

Fifty-third paragraph, first sentence.

“She reminds me of Aunt Marge.” said Harry with a twisted smile.

Fifty-third paragraph, second sentence, second comma.

“Hi, Aunt Marge.” said Harry dully, Dudley snorted.

End of fifty-third paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“It’s an obituary, not a roast.” said Officer McFinn.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dumbledore blinked. “I’ll say this honestly, she’s lucky I’m dead.”

“Didn’t think anything would get under your skin.” said Voldemort.
Dialogue set.

Dumbledore took a deep breath and leaned back into the chair, he reached for the phial of Calming Draughts and downed one in a quick motion.
Dumbledore took a deep breath, “It seems she finally found a way to get under my skin.”

“Nice to know she waited till you were dead to do it.” said Harry.

“Run, Harry.” said Ron quietly. “She’s not going to clam up for a while.”

“And she knows that how?” asked Dr. Clark.

“Which opens him up to a lawsuit…and frankly, not every doctor knows about what patients have been seen by other doctors.”

“I’m having Dursley flashbacks.” said Harry.

Dumbledore only shook his head.

Harry looked at Dumbledore out of the corner of his eyes.

“Remind me to not have her near my table at the Summer Soiree thing I have to host.” said Harry coolly.
“Duly noted.” said Rudolph taking out a small roll of parchment.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

Mr. Weasley took a deep breath and covered his eyes. “She should not drink.”

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, first sentence.

“This Calming Draught is not working…” said Dumbledore quietly turning the phial around in his hand.

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

“I don’t remember her being there…” Dumbledore said, an uncharacteristic cold tone to his voice.

Dialogue line.

“She won’t shut up…will she?” said Bill cringing in his seat.

Fifty-seventh paragraph.

“She needs to go and lay down.” said Mrs. Weasley looking uncomfortable.

“It’s not surprising that she loves Skeeter.” said Remus.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, second sentence.

“Those of you who are shocked by that, stand on your head.” said Ginny.

Dialogue set, fifth sentence.

“And I never blamed him for striking me.” said Dumbledore. “Emotions were quite raw that day.”
“He’s a skilled duelist as well, I would not have won so easily.” said Dumbledore.

“Someone cut her off!” said Ron.

“It never a simple story when you talk about a person’s past.” said Dumbledore.

“I should think not, she despises Skeeter.” said Kingsley.

“Don’t say that too loud.” said Sirius with a chuckle.

“Muriel and Bathilda have never gotten along, not without a bit of trying by Muriel in the beginning, but Bathilda never did like the sharp tongue she could have from time to time.” said Dumbledore with a weak smile.

“Then why can’t she remember that I can’t stand her?” said Harry.

End of dialogue set.
Hermione opened her mouth but closed it after Ron shook his head.

“So…you lived in the same town as Dumbledore and Bathilda Bagshot! I want to live there!” said Hermione excitedly. “So much history!”

“It’s not a lucky place apparently.” said Harry dully.

I have lived many years thinking back to the past, I did not want you to distress yourself with similar thoughts.” said Dumbledore.

Dumbledore rubbed his hands slowly and closed his eyes. “It was not my intention…”

At least someone is having fun.” said Harry.

“That’s what gives me solace.” said Dumbledore with a sad smile.

Since when does Ron dance?” said Fred as George shrugged in response.

Better than Dumbledore I reckon.” said Ron quietly.

“Did we miss something?” asked Fred leading his brother and their girlfriends, they did seem the worse for wear, but they were looking at the girls with a wary glance.

“Tell you later.” said Charlie with a quick look over to Dumbledore.

End of chapter.
No one spoke for a good while.

“Well, can’t say that the wedding was boring.” said George uncomfortably.

“I’m sorry to say that I may take this opportunity to take a break, please continue on without me.” said Dumbledore, he stood up and slowly walked out of the room.

“Do we want to continue on? It is one hell of a cliffhanger.” said Dean quietly.

“I’m good with leaving it off at that moment.” said Harry also standing up, “He’s been sitting in on the readings since the beginning…I’d rather keep him in the loop.”
Chapter 225

Dumbledore wandered the peaceful halls of Night’s Rest in silence, he was not aware nor was he pleased that Harry would come across this particular part of his past. The future Harry of these books seemed to have more than enough to think about and with these new “developments crashing down around him, he was concerned that Harry would take their pseudo-information the wrong way and would be focused more on that than trying to end Voldemort or for that matter, stay alive.

Though he couldn’t help but smile a little fondly, if there was anyone who could find out and figure out anything that was buried, it would be Harry and his friends. Especially when they didn’t have any sort of inkling something was going on, they always seemed to find some sort of foothold to get a firm footing on and then plundered the situation for quite a few small but vital secrets.

He felt it in his heart that they were going to find out what had transpired that day, which both secretly amused and publicly terrified him. What if he finally learns the answer he had been desperately wanting to know and yet running from for so many decades. Was he the one that…no, he couldn’t stand the thought that he had caused his remaining family to fall apart so horribly. He wanted to know the answer, but he wasn’t sure that he would remain in the room should that answer be finally discovered. He would have to see, as of this moment, he couldn’t give a definite answer or plan out what would happen. These books tended to drag you off into a part that you were not expecting, either whimsical, terrifying, or heartbreaking, the change could be gradual, or slam you down with the immense force of a giant’s strike.

He turned the corner and saw someone he was not expecting to see, but nevertheless, it was someone that he wouldn’t mind talking to at this moment, if only to release a few of his feelings.

“Ah…Lionus.”

The professors had decided, much to the chagrin of the students present, to take the opportunity to give impromptu lessons in various places in Night’s Rest. Dudley was at first excited to hear what all they could do and perhaps see some magic being performed properly, but it was short lived when Inspector Homes, Dr. Clark and Mrs. McFinn pulled him away to take a few lessons of his own.

“But...I want to see…” whined Dudley pointing listlessly towards the rest of the children .

“I want to see it as well, but unfortunately, I have to make sure that you don’t fall too far behind…you’re already missing out on Smeltings, best not to let you get too far back in your own studies. Let’s see if we can’t fix that…”

“Harry’s smart, can’t he just tutor me when he’s done?” asked Dudley still wanting to sit in on the magical courses.

“Harry’s going to have enough work on his plate without having to switch back to Muggle teachings, besides, you really think that we…a high bred lady of quality, a doctor and a Police Inspector just fell off the turnip truck? You’ll be fine…more than fine I should hope.”

Dudley looked less than impressed, but he still followed the three muggles out of the room as the others pressed on with their own studies.
“I dunno, learning what muggles learn might be fun.” said Ernie with a shrug.

“Learning is learning, mostly boring, no matter what you’re studying.” said Ron, his head resting in his palm.

“Trust me, it’s boring compared to our stuff.” said Harry. “Don’t blame Dudley for wanting to sit in.”

“Now, if we’re done with all that,” interjected Remus. “Can anyone remember what significant event happened in 1345?...Come on, I mean someone besides Hermione for this one.”

=-=-=-=

The students present were groaning as they at dinner that night, the table was not full of food as it was usually, now there were books, quills, parchment and inkwells on the table along with their plates. Normally, Mrs. Weasley wouldn’t have insisted the teens to not bring their work on the table, but with how much they were loaded down with homework by the teachers…she took pity on them and allowed them to bounce help around to each other and do their work.

Dudley would have been having a grand time, if he wasn’t elbows deep in his own work.

“I hate history, Charlemagne did what again?” said Dudley.

“Mainly, Charlie went to go and work with dragons.” said Fred with a smirk.

Dudley snickered. “I’d remember that in the book.”

“Allright, soups on, at least move the books off the table.” said Mrs. Weasley. “That means you too, Hermione. You can keep the parchments and…note…books…on the table, however.”

“Harry…I’ve got a question.” said Dudley as he placed his book on the side table that appeared beside each of them, wondering for a brief moment where in the world it had come from.

“What’s that?”

“Are you still as smart as you used to be?” asked Dudley after taking a few drumsticks off a nearby plate. “I mean, you could do both mine…and…well...your homework at the same time. Years ago, I mean.”

Harry’s mouth twitched slightly. “All depends…what’s the real question, remember, I most likely haven’t learned all that you have.”

That perked Dudley up quite a bit. “You mean…I’m smarter than you now!”

“Most likely.” said Harry.

Dudley’s smile grew, but then it fell. “Wait…can you still fix the television?”

“Most likely.” repeatedly Harry.

“Well…never mind.” said Dudley.

“What’s that got to do with it?” asked Ron.

“Uncle Vernon tried to do it himself once, not even the repairmen could get the picture to go right side up, being un-inverted and in color again.” said Harry smiling as he took a bite of the lambchop he was eating.

“How did you fix it?” asked Mr. Weasley.

“Didn’t, we got a new tv, but Uncle Vernon never touched it again after that, and just left it to me if he was desperate enough.”

“Is Dumbledore going to join us for dinner tonight? I haven’t seen him since the readings were adjourned.” asked Mrs. Weasley as she spooned a helping of casserole onto Ron’s plate.

“He’s with Lionus and Chief Hawkeye tonight, I think I saw a house-elf taking a whole chicken out of the kitchen.” said Bill.

“He’s not with me, just Lionus.” said Hawkeye from behind Bill’s chair. Bill nearly choked on his wine and turned to look at the Chief with a stunned look.

“Where the hell were you hiding?”

“Nowhere in particular.” said Chief Hawkeye reaching over and snatching a chicken breast from the plate in front of the Eldest Weasley child.

“He was in the pantry.” said Harry dully. “Eating a chocolate croissant.”

The Chief’s brows escaped up into his white hairline, a smirk slid across his lips. “Traitor.”

“You’re not my boss.” retorted Harry calmly, sipping a glass of pumpkin juice.

“Not yet, anyway. Don’t think for a moment that we’ve given up on you.” the man shot back as he sat down onto a chair. “Though I think I’m just looking for you to do some part-time work.”

“You have part-timers?” said Ron.

“We tend to call them retirees, but yes.” said Chief Hawkeye. “No one says you have to dedicate your life to us…we’d very much prefer that to be honest, but not quite required.”

Mad-Eye looked over to him with a frown. “And I say he’d sleep better knowing the people he was protecting personally.”

“You’re not the one to be promoting “sleeping better”, you’ve been known to go a week or two without sleep.” said Chief Hawkeye.

“Ease up there, fellows.” said Sirius nearly barking with laughter. “You might only be scaring him off.”

“Won’t work on us, Black, we’ve heard the experiences he’s had, a pair of old warriors aren’t going to strike fear into his heart.” said Hawkeye.

“Might, if you point your wands at me…” said Harry as he took a bite. “That would make me nervous.”

“I should ruddy well hope so.” muttered Moody.

––––––––

Later that night, Harry was in his newly furnished office working on the Potter family, balancing the books, sending stern warnings, and summoning the Potter family house-elves to give various orders to them. It came to his attention that some of the written orders to the house-elves were being intercepted by other members of Paradise castle and switching the orders to suit themselves. Thankfully, a few members of the family had thrown in their lot with him and warned him what was going on.

Though he had a feeling that they were just trying to be informants to get in his good books so that he’d rule in their favor when it came to the holidays or whenever they had to have their budgets adjusted. He’d have to prepare something for that if it were to come to that. He was grateful for the help, but really, they’re family, it shouldn’t come at a price.

To his surprise, a knock came on his door, he looked over at the grandfather clock and saw that it was past midnight. Curious as to who it could be this late at night, he looked towards the door and called “Come in.”

The door opened and revealed Dudley with a torch in his hand, shining a light around the room. Harry blinked in the bright light and looked at Dudley in confusion.

“Hey…what’s with the torch?”

“It’s dark in here.” said Dudley. “Can hardly see…”

Harry looked around the room and nodded with sympathetic agreeance, “Yeah, I can see that, it’s a little dark compared to what you’re used to.”

“How can you people see in this?” asked Dudley. “I’ve crashed into so many different things before I managed to scrounge this.”

“It took me a bit to get used to no light switches or anything like that.” said Harry with a smile. “Did you need anything?”

“I…I couldn’t sleep, what about you?” asked Dudley.

“I’ve got paperwork.” he gestured towards the tall pile of scrolls.

“You mean homework?”

“No…legitimate paperwork. Do you remember how once a month Aunt Petunia and Uncle Vernon would take up the dining room table and have a list of things I could make and how much it would cost?” said Harry leaning back in his chair and stretching his arms above his head. “Along with other stuff they needed to set aside money for.”

“Yeah, ‘Balance the Budget Weekend’, we go without any extra snacks and we don’t go out for dinner at all that week.” said Dudley.

The rebuttal went unspoken as Harry leaned forward once more. “That’s what I’m doing, but on a much larger scale.”

“You balance the books here?” asked Dudley looking confused.

“No…for my dad’s entire family.” said Harry taking another scroll down off the pile and unfurling it.

Dudley blinked. “What?”

“As it turns out, I’m the heir to one if the richest and most influential wizarding family in the world. Meaning, I’m the head of all their house-holds.” said Harry looking at the parchment in front of him. “However, it’s not all bossing people around and controlling their lives through threats of withholding money or whatnot. I’ve got to make sure they’re all happy…safe…and not doing anything to insult the family in normal society.”

“So you’re like the Godfather?”

Harry blinked. “What?”

“You remember, that movie from America, with the gangsters…”

“…No…I…don’t kill people. I just balance the books and distribute money to different members of the family…the amount tends to depend on what they need it for.”

“So, if they say they want a new pair of shoes?” asked Dudley.

“If they already went through their allowances, and they ask for money, they had better have either lost them to garden gnomes or wore them out.” said Harry. “And if they wore them out, I want to see the remains.”

“They try and pull something on you?”

“Just a bunch of hippogriff shit that is as transparent as a crystal ball.” Harry muttered as he signed the bottom of the parchment with a firm hand. “Though, I’m thinking it’s going to take them a year or two in order for them to figure out I’m not going to just give them what they want, when they want it.”

Dudley shifted in his seat. “Uh…so…you’re going to be up for a while?”

“Yeah, if you want to go to bed, no one’s really stopping you.” said Harry as he took another parchment in hand, he then looked up at his cousin. “Unless you need some sort of light in there with you.”

“I’m just…it get’s cold in there.” said Dudley, “I can’t find the thermostat…”

Harry put the parchment down. “What do you mean it get’s cold in there? Isn’t there a fire in the fireplace?”

“It goes out after I start it up…if I can start it up.” said Dudley.

“Hold on, Dobby?” Harry looked down beside himself.

“Yes Master Harry Potter?” squeaked Dobby as he appeared beside Harry’s knee.

“What the bloody hell?” said Dudley looking around frantically and then trying to look over Harry’s desk.

“What the bloody hell?” said Dudley looking around frantically and then trying to look over Harry’s desk.

“Do we know why Dudley’s room’s fire goes out?” asked Harry.

“House-elves were told to keep away from Master Dudley’s rooms and sight sir!” piped Dobby with a bright smile.

Dudley was trying to lean over the desk to get a better looks at who or what Harry was talking to but couldn’t quite see who or what it was.

“Well, can’t fault you for that, Dudley’s fire keeps going out in the middle of the night, don’t any of you walk up to him or Inspector Holmes for the time being…not until we can ease them into you, but still…make sure they’re comfortable.”

“Yes, Master Harry Potter!” said Dobby and with a resounding crack, he disappeared.

“Wh…”

“Your fire should be roaring in the fireplace by the time you get back to your room, sorry about that.” said Harry turning back to face Dudley. He looked between his cousin and the spot where Dobby was, “I don’t think you’re ready for that bit of information just yet.”

“Who was that?” asked Dudley pointing to the spot where the mysterious squeaky voice came from.

Harry chuckled and looked down at the floor, “Remember when Uncle Vernon brought home the Masons?”

“You dumped all that pudding on Mrs. Mason…”

“No…I didn’t do that…that…was Dobby…the House-elf that was just here.” said Harry.

“Hou-“ started Dudley.

“Let me run you through it real quick….” said Harry putting the parchment and quill down. “Better take a seat, we could be here a while.”
The next morning, everyone was gathered back into the den. Dumbledore had returned as well, apparently finding something to raise his spirits to the extent that he was just about back to his normal cheerfulness. However, there was still a lingering feeling of melancholy that hung about him ever so faintly.

“Please forgive my…exit yesterday, I hope I keep my thoughts to a more cheerful nature.” said Dumbledore as he took a seat and an offered cup of tea. “Are we in for a pleasant chapter to start the day off with, or am I correct in thinking that this entire book may be blanketed in gloom?”

Officer McFinn waved his hand in a so-so gesture.

“That’s never a good sign.” said Rudolph.

Everything seemed fuzzy, slow. Harry and Hermione jumped to their feet and drew their wands.

“Nice to know that you two at least are ready to fight at the drop of a pointed hat.” said Moody with a pointed look.

“Oi, I could be ready to fight too…” muttered Ron.

End of first paragraph.

“The time wasted on screaming could be used in either running for it or at least preparing for an attack.” said Leroy.

Neville opened his mouth, but then he closed it.

“What?”

“How…how fast did you two run away?” said Neville quietly to Rudolph and Leroy.

“It took us a few weeks.” said Rudolph boldly as Leroy flinched. “Had to get the paperwork all in order, gather up different tools, books, set up our own protective charms around several people…we didn’t just up and leave.”

Harry and Hermione threw themselves into the panicking crowd.

“In these dark times, you’d think they’d all be prepared for the worst.” muttered Moody.

“It’s a wedding Alastor, they were hoping that it was going to be peaceful.” said Dumbledore.

End of second paragraph.
“How? Just because the Ministry fell, shouldn’t mean that it all goes to pot.” said Fred.

Dialogue line.

Third paragraph.

“Ron! Ron!” Hermione called, half sobbing as she and Harry were buffeted by terrified guests: Harry seized her hand to make sure they weren’t separated as a streak of light whizzed over their heads,

“Please just let it be red and not green.” said Terry quietly.

“Sometimes red is not all that safe a color.” said Leroy.

End of dialogue set.

Fourth paragraph.

Mrs. Weasley held her husband’s hand tightly, “At least those three got away.”

“And I hope the rest of us did as well…” said Mr. Weasley. “I can only imagine what Harry, Ron or Hermione would do if we were captured.”

“Oh…” said Mrs. Weasley in an anguished moan.

Dialogue line.

Fifth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Are you saying that you arrived in the middle of a busy street?” said Snape massaging the bridge of his nose.

“Perhaps they were down a darkened alley, Severus.” said Dumbledore with a smile. “At least, I certainly hope so…even the busiest non-magic folk will notice some people in formal wear appearing out of nowhere.”

Sixth paragraph.

“I’m the pretty one.” said Harry with a laugh.

Dialogue line.

“She’s just jealous that I’ve got better legs.” said Ron, also snickering.
Dumbledore shook his head in disappointment. “I am sorry that you did not have it in the future, but I dearly hope you don’t attempt to go back and get it now.”

“It’s okay, I’ve got the Cloak, I’ve got clothes for both of you,” said Hermione.

“Oh! How fortunate!” said Dumbledore with a relieved smile towards Hermione.

End of dialogue set.

Seventh paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

“It’s Mary Poppin’s bag!” said Dudley with an excited look.

“A what?” asked Neville.

“Might be where I got the inspiration…” said Hermione smiling brightly.

Dialogue line.

“Oh, damn, that’ll be the books,”

Harry and Ron blinked.

“She said…”

“I heard…”

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.
“Listen to her, get out of sight as fast as you can.” said Kingsley.

Eighth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Not the definition of ‘appreciate’ you think it is.” said Harry to Ron and Dudley.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Ninth paragraph.

Mrs. Weasley and Mr. Weasley held each other’s hand tightly.

“I had that feeling just about every day that James went out to work.” said Mrs. McFinn softly.

Dialogue line.

Tenth paragraph.

“At least someone is having a good time.” said Neville.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Anywhere in Britain is where they’ll expect you to be.” said Moody. “Best to hide out on the Continent and then come back at a safer time.”

Dialogue line.

“Where else is there?” asked Hermione, cringing as the men on the other side of the road started wolf-whistling at her.

“They must like your ankles too.” whispered Ron as Hermione elbowed him.

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

“Can’t, I’m busy.” said Harry, Hermione and Ron both roared and screamed with laughter.
“Not a wise move.” said Lionus.

They relapsed into a prickly silence. The gum-chewing waitress shuffled over and Hermione ordered two cappuccinos:

“What the hell is that?” asked Ron.

“Ah…”

“Yeah, he’s not going to like that stuff…” said Harry with a snicker.

“Well, as long as it doesn’t get them into trouble, though they might’ve been arrested already. God, that’s revolting,” Ron added after one sip of the foamy, grayish coffee.

“Knew it.” said Harry with a smirk. “Knowing Ron’s tastes, that is one of the few things I know how to make that he won’t go near.”

“What does it taste like?” asked Ron.

“Trust me, you’d prefer your coffee with just sugar, no milk.” said Harry.

“Not good, get out of there.” said Moody.
“It’s just two blokes taking a break.” said Dudley. “Dad used to do that all the time.”

“You go into a café, you order something, even Uncle Vernon ordered a cup of coffee just to kill time.” said Harry. “They’re not ordering anything…I’m not liking that either.”

“We just apparated, Harry. How could they have found us?” asked Hermione curiously.

“Beats me, but I hope we get out of there.” said Harry.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Here’s hoping you have enough to last a while, I’m not too sure I’d be willing to risk the lives of any muggle or Inspector Homes to get the money from my own accounts.” said Harry.

The two workmen made identical movements, and Harry mirrored them without conscious thought:

The Rangers present and Moody all bore large grins.

All three of them drew their wands. Ron, a few seconds late in realizing what was going on,

“And that can mean death.” said Moody.

“Thank you Alastor.” said McGonagall firmly.

End of fourteenth paragraph.

The great blond Death Eater was hit in the face by a jet of red light: He slumped sideways, unconscious. His companion, unable to see who had cast the spell, fired another at Ron:

“I forgot that he was invisible.” said Dennis. “Bet that’ll be easy to fight Death Eaters with.”

Shining black ropes flew from his wand-tip and bound Ron head to foot — the waitress screamed and ran for the door —

“Smartest decision she’s made this week, I’ll bet.” said Ginny.

End of fifteenth paragraph.

“Oops, sorry.” winced Harry.
“Glad I could join the fray…” said Hermione with a weak giggle.

“Don’t use that spell if you don’t have a steady hand!” squeaked Flitwick as he covered his eyes.

“Transfigure them into plates and then smash them against the walls.” said Chief Hawkeye plainly.

The room was quiet for a moment.

“No, Ron…killing is not the answer.” said Dumbledore swiftly.

“You’re the boss,” said Ron, sounding profoundly relieved.

“Can’t be too hard, if Lockhart can do it.” said Katie.
“Nor have I,” said Hermione,

“Harry has.” said several of the students together.

“Not that I would remember.” said Harry.

Voldemort blinked, and for a slight moment, a look of confusion stretched across his face.

End of dialogue set.

Twentieth paragraph.

Twenty-first paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“If they were Muggles and in a bar, I would think that a football game was on.” said Dr. Clark.

Dialogue line.

Twenty-second paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“I’m impressed you managed to get them on without saying a word before, then.” said Hermione.

Dialogue set.

Several people burst out laughing, including Ron and Hermione.

Twenty-third paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Twenty-fourth paragraph.

“I didn’t do anything.” said Harry.

Dialogue line.
“As far as you know,” said Hermione.

“It’s impossible, your core rejects any attempt to put the Trace back on you, a different sort of way of tracking a person is possible, hypothetically…” said Dumbledore.

“Has someone tried to put the Trace back on someone?” asked Hermione.

“A few centuries ago, mostly attempted by over-protective parents when their children left the home and went out into the world. They wanted to know if their children got into any sort of trouble. Alas, it had a disastrous effect and several young wizards and witches were cut down before their prime.”

“Glad mum never tried to be that worried about us,” said Charlie quietly.

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

Twenty-fifth paragraph.

“Possible, but I doubt it.” said Dumbledore. “And by the way, you are far from tainted, my dear boy.”

“Still doesn’t make me feel any easier in my mind.” said Harry.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Not a wonderful idea, but you don’t have many options at this point.” said Sirius. “I would have said Remus’ place, or Tonks’ place…but they are most likely being watched and you may or may not know where they live.”

Twenty-sixth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

“Not till you learn to close your mind and learn a lot more curses.” said Moody sternly. “He’s regrettably one of the best dueler we had.”

“As he is with me as well… I daresay I hope that it’s Severus that brings you to me.” said
Voldemort with a hungry look towards Harry.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

Twenty-seventh paragraph.

“And here we can only hope that the Death Eaters simply leave the poor waitress alone.” said Dumbledore.

“You know, I don’t think they mentioned that Harry at the very least passed the Apparition test.” said Hermione thoughtfully.

“Yeah, like we’ve never done anything without really…uh…” said Ron.

“Knowing what we were doing?” supplied Harry.

“Yeah, that.”

Twenty-eighth paragraph.

“Never rush into a place where a Death Eater was probably just at!” shouted Moody.

Twenty-ninth paragraph.

Tonks nervously giggled.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Thirtieth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Katie, and Alicia squeaked.

“I’m so happy that we’re not reading this at night.” said Hannah.
“I certainly hope I do more than just that.” said Moody with a growl.

“Who is that supposed to scare, Alastor? I can assure you that he…” Professor McGonagall nodded towards Voldemort. “Wouldn’t be quite impressed.”

“I had something special for him if he showed his…lack of a complete face there, this is more to scare those gutless cowards that call themselves Death Eaters.” muttered Moody gruffly.

“That…that was horrifying.” said Dudley. “Is this normal for you people?” he asked in shock.

“Not really.” said Harry taking a deep breath.

“Nice to know that the curse worked though.” said Moody with a pointed look towards Dumbledore.

“Indeed, I just had hoped the three of them wouldn’t experience it.” said Dumbledore.

Had it worked, Harry wondered, or had Snape already blasted the horror-figure aside as casually as he had killed the real Dumbledore?

“You cannot simply just blast that particular phantasm aside.” said Snape coolly.
“Silly girl, there are at least a dozen ways around that particular revealing spell, and I should hope that all of my Death Eaters know them.” sneered Voldemort.

“Not all of them.” smirked Moody. “I’ve found at least a quarter of a dozen of your Death Eaters using that spell, have to say, I was greatly disappointed.”

“Then they are of no great loss to me.” said Voldemort with an icy coolness to his voice.

“It’s quite alright, I found the joke to be quite droll.” said Dumbledore a twinkling sheen in his eyes.

“Can’t see anyone out there,” he reported. “And you’d think, if Harry still had a Trace on him, they’d have followed us here. I know they can’t get in the house, but —

“If Snape gave them the go ahead, they might be able to.” said Moody with a suspicious look towards Snape.

“I have not given the information out to anyone, I’m sure of it.” replied Snape silkily.

“Oh no!” gasped Mrs. Weasley.
“Some connections can be reopened later, Miss Granger.” said Flitwick somberly.

“Sort of hard to forget…” mumbled Harry. “And stop nagging about it already.” he added in a hushed mutter.

“Sometimes, it’s just easier and better for you to get sick.” said Dr. Clark. “Best get it over and done with, but then again it’s not good to do it much and often.”

“Oh, thank Merlin.” said Mrs. Weasley with a sigh of relief.

“I’ve got to say, that’s a safe way of communicating.” said Inspector Homes.

“It’s not easy to intercept it, I’ll say that much..” said Mr. Weasley with a chuckle.

Angelina, Alicia and Katie smiled softly.

“My heart is just melting.” whispered Katie. “You know, despite all the terror.”

“Don’t pass out, don’t pass out…” muttered Sirius.

“Die, die, die.” whispered Voldemort.
He barely made it: Bolting the door behind him with trembling hands, he grasped his pounding head and fell to the floor.

“Oi! Don’t lock yourself in there!” said Remus. “What if you need help later?”

“Alohomora?” asked Terry.

“Doesn’t work on the bathroom…that might have been my fault growing up.” said Sirius scratching the back of his head and looking embarrassed.

“Why would you have it so Alohomora doesn’t work on the door?” said Hermione with a frown.

“I…Let’s just say…it’s a guy thing.” said Sirius quietly.

End of forty-fifth paragraph.

Dialogue set.

Draco began turn to a pasty white.

Forty-sixth paragraph.

Forty-seventh paragraph.

Forty-eighth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“I’d rather have a stiff drink I think…or some stomach relaxer.” said Harry.

End of chapter.
The Truth of Regulus Black

First paragraph, first sentence.
“There’s plenty of beds…” said Sirius with a chuckle. “No need to sleep on the floor.”

First paragraph, fourth sentence.
“Oh, Ron!” said Mrs. Weasley looking at her youngest son fondly.

Ron pinked. “Hey, I’m…”

Her arm curved to the floor, her fingers inches from Ron’s.

Hermione and Ron blushed as they avoided each other’s gaze, shy smiles on their faces.

End of first paragraph.

“Say one thing…and I’ll shove this cushion down your throat.” warned Remus.

“Say what? Oh…you filthy…” Sirius snickered.

“Say ‘Ah’,” said Remus raising the cushion threateningly.

Second paragraph, fourth sentence.

“I know what I would hope would happen.” muttered Voldemort.

End of second paragraph.

Third paragraph, second sentence.

“That will happen sometimes, it’s an unfortunate occurrence when someone passes.” said Dumbledore.

Third paragraph, fourth sentence.

“I…I wasn’t always alright with it.” said Dudley quietly.

“And I certainly do not even entertain the notion of being “content” with watching neglect and abuse.” said Dumbledore with a slightly stiff edge to his voice.
“Never, and besides, that is not what had happened with my sister.” said Dumbledore.

“He does, if the look of hurt on his face is any indication.” said Dr. Clark quietly in Harry’s ear.

Dumbledore held his face in his hands and said nothing.

Ron looked over at the Headmaster and then looked over to Hermione. “Remind me to not hold anything back when I’m taking to someone.”

“You don’t hold anything back.” said Hermione.

“Why in the world would I waste time searching your and Weasley’s room?” sneered Snape.

Ron and Harry both blinked “I’m not too sure I’m comfortable with him rooting around in there.” said Ron.

“Me either.”

Remus covered his eyes. “Tell me you took the posters down…”

“Probably not.” chuckled Sirius.

“Just as handsome as the owner.” said Sirius snickering.
“Oh don’t you start.” said Remus.

End of seventh paragraph.

“Bollocks…you’d think with all the magic at our disposal, we’d have a decent charm to keep those damn little vermin out of the house.” said Sirius coldly.

Eighth paragraph, second sentence.

“Sounds like my room, every inch of my room was covered in dragon pictures, some even breathed smoke, just about smothered myself a few times when I forgot to leave a bit of the window open.” said Charlie. “Mum didn’t mind the smokeless ones, but she put her foot down when a small bit of fire would blow out of a Chinese Fireball’s mouth.”

“Not quite as…whimsical, if I’m correct.” said Dumbledore with a dry chuckle.

Eighth paragraph, fifth sentence, first comma.

“Not as bad as I thought it was going to be.” said Rudolph with a slight smile.

Eighth paragraph, end of fifth sentence.

“Not that I didn’t try.” whispered Sirius.

Remus elbowed him in the side, though he was trying to hide a smile.

“I swear, I got them to wink once or twice.” said Sirius.

“Shut up.” hissed Remus.

“Even I had one…two…maybe four…” said Dr. Clark with an embarrassed smile.

End of eighth paragraph.

Ninth paragraph, second sentence.

“We’re going to rectify that…” said Sirius.

“So does that mean I can prank you?” teased Harry.

“Oh, not me, but we’ll prank the daylights out of Remus.” said Sirius with a snicker.

“If you think I’ll just sit back and take it, you’re out of your mind.” said Remus.
“You’re not far off the mark…” said Sirius.

“Oops.” said Sirius apologetically. “I didn’t think of that. I didn’t think about you possibly wanting it.”

Dumbledore was more interested in Harry who was looking firmly down that floor. Sirius and Remus were also keeping an eye on Harry and were whispering to the young man, inquiring if he was alright.

“What’s going on?” asked Ron, pointing to the sofa with Harry sitting on it, he didn’t want to speak too loudly as Harry was sitting quite still and wasn’t responding to the others.

“I believe…that this is the first time that Harry’s seen or read of anything that his mother’s…” said Hermione.

“But he had that Pior…Incan-can thing.” said Ron. “He saw his mum then…not that that was all that great with just that…and he heard her….”

“But this was a nice and peaceful conversation.” said Hermione. “This has got to be really hard for him.”

“I may have to take another look at Potter’s homework…” said Professor Flitwick faintly.

Snape stood up and walked out of the room, a few people were confused but a handful knew what was going on in the Potion Master’s head. Voldemort himself glared at the door fixedly.
“Moved on…I think not.”

End of thirteenth paragraph.

Fourteenth paragraph.

Fifteenth paragraph, first sentence, first pause.

“Have to say, you and that cat…you never really did get on very well.” said Remus.

“Now you’re allergic so you wouldn’t have had cats anymore, but yeah, the cat would bat you in the head a few times if you were caught crawling in front of it.” said Sirius. “Funniest thing I ever saw…”

“Thank goodness the cat was declawed, I think Lily would have been forced to murder her own cat if he had scratched you.” said Remus. “Not that she would have…really done it…most likely just gave it to Batty.”

Fifteenth paragraph, first sentence, third pause.

“It would have gone to Batty’s it wouldn’t have had to go far for food, it knew just about everyone in the neighborhood, they would have known it was Lily’s cat.” said Sirius.

“Not Dad’s?” asked Harry.

“That cat…well, she was a really fluffy little bastard, especially on her belly. She would flip over and just look up at you and say ‘pet me!’ with her eyes. You reach in and pet her on her belly she’d rear up like a cobra and just bite your hand…. Lily always said it was just a playful nip, but when you pull your hand away and it’s bleeding?” Sirius shook his head. “Chloe was a nasty little nipper when she got all riled up.”

End of fifteenth paragraph.

“Are you trying to find something that’s not there?” asked Ernie with a curious look. “So he borrowed your Dad’s cloak…”

Harry ignored him and looked at the book pointedly, his brows furrowed together.

Sixteenth paragraph, fourth sentence.

“The Order always had their own, they never needed James’ and he never lent it out to anybody, unless you were Moony or me; Peter spilt milk all over his favorite jumper in our fourth year, and after that he didn’t give Peter any of his clothes. No one could hold a grudge like your Dad.” said Sirius fondly.
“Most likely that little fuc…” muttered Remus.

“Oi…it’s my job to curse around him, get your own job.” said Sirius nudging Remus.

Dumbledore chuckled. “Oh I had never done that…I did however fail a test on Herbology once, but that was due to my not being able to sleep for two weeks, I quite remember how badly I did on it, but the teacher did take pity on me.”

“What did the teacher do?” asked Ron interestingly.

“Gave me only a week’s worth of detention and I had to do quite a lot of makeup work to fix the damage it had done. Two weeks of remedial Herbology if I’m remembering correctly.”

“I wouldn’t call that ‘pity’….” muttered Ron.

Dumbledore had to cover his mouth to hide his quietly chuckle and shook his head. “No…No I have not done that.”

“Oh sure…don’t’ treat my stuff with respect, I see how you treat my memory.” said Sirius with a pretended tone of hurt in his voice.

“What do you want me to do? Build an altar in your bedroom?” retorted Harry.

“That’d be creepy…but no…if you’re going to do it, do it properly, burn the place…” said Sirius. “Right to the ground.”

“I’ll keep that in mind.”

“It’d be one of my final wishes, I can tell you that much.”

“How in the world...did you still have that picture?” asked Remus. “How is it at Grimmauld Place?”

Sirius smiled to himself. “Had the picture on me...the entire time.”
“And you managed to keep it from the guards?” asked Moody.

“Not telling, can’t let all my secrets out, now can I?” said Sirius with a cheeky grin.

End of twenty-first paragraph.

Twenty-second paragraph, second sentence.

“Other than what was written on that last page, can’t see why anyone would care…” said Sirius, “Rita may want it….”

“The day that snooping woman can slip through one of my protective charms is the day I surrender to a Death Eater.” snarled Moody.

End of twenty-second paragraph.

“That he owns four pairs of trainers?” said Fred.

“Will you let the man finish?” scolded Mrs. Weasley.

“As a matter of fact, I own about twenty-two…pairs of trainers I mean. I wear them during the winter times when it is a bit slick out. They have such excellent traction.” said Dumbledore fondly.

“And an Anit-slip charmed pair of normal magical shoes wouldn’t do it?” said Charlie with a quirked brow.

“Ah, but our world’s shoes don’t come in those delightful colors and styles.” said Dumbledore brightly.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Twenty-third paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“What’s with the panicking?” said Terry.

“I could have left them behind to take on this whole mess by myself.” said Harry dully.

“Oh…well…he stayed…” said Terry meekly.

Twenty-fourth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Every good friend needs someone to tell him that at least once a month, weekly if you’re best mates.” said Tonks.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Twenty-fifth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Twenty-sixth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Twenty-seventh paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“For it’s an impressive mess, then yeah, I did it.” said Harry.

“He never was a tidy boy…” said Mrs. McFinn shaking her head with a loving smile. “Had to keep at him to keep his room clean.”

“You had a room?” asked Ron.

“Of course he had a room, we would keep him for a night, weekend or so.” said Mrs. McFinn.

“It was like pulling teeth with Dursley…he’d try and stop me left and right. He’d cower after a bit, but it was a pain sometimes, worth the payoff though.”

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“I could have all the information I could ever need, as I personally was part of the Order.” said
Snape coolly as he swooped back into the room and sat firmly back down in his high winged-back chair.

“’Was part’.” parroted back Harry with a raised finger. “Plans, passwords, strategies, codes, weapons, emergency protocols, people, values, leadership…it all changes some way or another when a traitor is found among you. You’d have to be incredibly stupid, or naïve if you stick to the same road if you know your friend just tried to stab you in the back and slipped off into the night.”

The room was silent.

“Not as stupid as I thought you were…” said Voldemort thoughtfully.
“Why would I bother investigating Dumbledore when the old man would ask me around for tea once a month. I could just as easily get all the information I could want.” said Snape with a frown.

“Ah, but I wouldn’t give you all the information you would be looking for, never take a old man at his word when he is relating his history, if you want the truth, you must get all sides, the one you are investigating, the other mentioned party and a third, neutral party. Put all the information you gathered down and you will find your truth and the heart of the matter. Even a mirror tells a lie.”

“How does a mirror tell a lie?” asked Ron.

“You hold up a piece of parchment and the words aren’t the same. It’s all backwards.” said Hermione.

“But it’s still the same letters.” said Ron with a confused look.

“Not in the order you wrote it in though.” said Luna with a dream like smile. “Also time goes backwards if you’re looking at a clock with no numerals of any kind; it’s quite fascinating, watching yourself go forwards and backwards in time at the same time.”

Ron blinked and then looked at Hermione. “I should let this go, shouldn’t I?”

“It’s for the best.”

End of dialogue set.

“And we’ve all met her, move on.” said Ernie leaning forward a bit in his seat.

“Auntie Muriel? Not really, unless you want to listen to her waffle on about a whole load of rubbish and gossip.” muttered Ron.

“It’s not Muriel he’s talking about.” nudged Hermione.

“What does that mean?” said Hermione putting her hands on her hips.
“Means…that I don’t want to get something chucked at me, so I’m going to not say anything further.” said Harry.

“Smart lad.” said Dr. Clark.

End of twenty-eighth paragraph.

Dialogue set, second sentence.

“A chat taking maybe thirty minutes is going to hurt you?” asked Dudley with a frown on his face.

“Thirty minutes…” started Moody.

“’Can be the deciding factor between living and dying’…we know…we know…” said Tonks.

End of dialogue set.

Voldemort sneered.

Dialogue line.

Twenty-ninth paragraph.

“Upset is not really the word I would use. Confused, maybe, betrayed…a bit…but upset? Makes me sound like I didn’t get a lolly at the market.” said Harry.

Dialogue set, first sentence, second comma.

“Or apparently, I would use that word.” said Harry.

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Memories are not made of pure and clean silver, they’re more akin to a murky crystal ball.” said Dumbledore.

Thirtieth paragraph.

“Truth is not always a pleasant thing, while it is necessary, sometimes it feels better to never know
“I would say something about being kept in the dark, but I did the same thing to Ron and Hermione.” said Harry.

Sirius rolled his eyes. “Never stopped me.”

“Not the letter.” said Ron.

“No, Ron, I get that now…” said Hermione.

“Appears that he didn’t just try and run.” said Moody thoughtfully.

Voldemort scoffed. “The stupid fool wouldn’t dare attempt that.”

Sirius flicked his eyes over towards the Dark Lord, his eye twitched slightly.

“Well, it seems like he certainly attempted it.” said Bill.
“Nice to know that even Ron can keep up.” said Fred.

“Oi!”

“You’d think that he’d come up with some better enchantments.” said Sirius.

“You’re not going to like what you see on that wall.” said Sirius.

“He was pretty good, just about in your league, but not quite there, though it wasn’t often that his team lost.” said Sirius honestly.

Dumbledore smiled fondly at the bespectacled young man. “You are trying to learn more about him as a person…very good.”

“I would be more concerned about the horcrux hidden somewhere in there.” said Ron quietly.
“It freaking was at some point.” said Harry burying his face in his hands.

Lionus noticed that every time someone mentioned the locket, Voldemort’s mouth twitched into a snarl but disappeared quickly.

Dialogue line.
Dialogue line.
Dialogue line.
Dialogue line.
Forty-first paragraph.
Forty-second paragraph.
Dialogue set.
“Hermione just figured it out.” said Harry.
“Figured what?” asked Ron.

Forty-third paragraph.
Dialogue line.
Dialogue line.
Dialogue line.
Dialogue line.
Dialogue line.
Dialogue line.
-fourth paragraph, first sentence.
“I’m an idiot.” muttered Harry.
“You didn’t have this all spelled out for you like this, you lived it.” said Katie.
“If Kreacher has it, then that’s one down.” said Colin.

“No thanks, don’t want to deal with you today.” said Harry.

“So much for this starting out reasonably easy.” said Ron.

“Oi, none of that!” snapped Sirius shortly.

“He must have hidden it somewhere.” said Hannah.
“What?” said a few people in shock.

“He had orders?” questioned Colin.

“Who gave them?” added Dennis. “And what were they?”

“Not right now, I’m not.” said Harry. “He’ll do himself an injury.”

“As much as I don’t like Kreacher, but I just want to punch Mundungus, right now.” said Alicia.

“Forgive me for not wanting to be just like my dear old mum…a psychotic old bag.” said Sirius.

“Marry a cousin?” muttered Fred.

“Well…thank you for not letting him do that.” said Inspector Homes blinking in shock. He and Dudley were just barely following with most of what was going on, Dudley seemed to grip and accept it a bit faster than what he did, so he mostly sat in silence.

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

Fifty-fifth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Run Kreacher, run.” said Hannah.

“Wonder why he didn’t borrow Dobby?” asked Ernie.

“I’m grateful he didn’t ask Dobby,” said Harry.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

Dumbledore looked thoughtful but then he smiled. Voldemort on the other hand looked livid, “That was the elf? How did he…?”

Fifty-sixth paragraph.

Dialogue set.

Fifty-seventh paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Fifty-eighth paragraph, first sentence.

Dumbledore closed his eyes, “I had not thought about it that way.”

“Leave it to Harry to think of it dramatically.” said George meekly.

End of fifty-eighth paragraph.

“Kreacher’s a pain in my ass…and the one that pretty much set me up to die…but…I wouldn’t put him through that…. What the hell was Regulus thinking?” said Sirius quietly.

Dialogue line.

Fifty-ninth paragraph.
“It was the order, the order that Regulus gave him.” said Dumbledore with a slight smile.

Lionus waved his hand in a so-so gesture. “Not quite disapparating, but close enough.”

“Because he doesn’t give a damn about what they can or can’t do.” muttered Moody.

“So…being a House-elf and having them be the way they are…saved him.” said Ron tentatively as he looked at Hermione out of the corner of his eye.

“But it also put Kreacher in danger.” retorted Hermione.

“He could have picked anybody, a muggle even…” said Ron. “They really would have dead.”
Sirius took a deep breath and clenched his hands together, leaning forward in his chair.

“My brother was a prat…but he did like Kreacher, I can’t see him doing that.” said Sirius.

“Bloody hell Reg…” said Sirius covering his eyes with a shaking hand.

Sirius winced and grimaced. “Cub, can…”

“We’ll stop for the day.” said Harry.

“Thank you.” he added in a whisper.

“OI!” shouted Ron.

“Let him be.” said Hermione, dabbing her eyes.
“The punishing part is sick, yeah, but it saved his life by having to obey Regulus…” said Harry truthfully.

Dialogue line.

Sixty-eighth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, third sentence.

“That would have been easy had he been able to open it or us for that matter.” said Ron.

“I daresay it would have been terrible if it were opened and whatever is inside was unleashed.” said Dumbledore with a brief glance to the smirking Dark Lord.

End of dialogue set.

Sixty-ninth paragraph.

Dialogue set.

“No one said all house-elves make sense.” said Ron.

Dialogue set, second sentence, second semi-colon.

“That is a not true, Miss Granger.” squeaked Flitwick. “While there are families that indeed mistreat their house-elves and should be made to undergo what they put them through, there are families that treat them well. Mr. Crouch for instance, throughout all the faults he had, was very good to his house-elf.”

“He made her sit in a place that she was terrified of!” said Hermione.

“She pleaded with Mr. Crouch to let his son watch a game, something she knew he liked. He had to pretend to go to the game, and have her save him a seat. He listened to her, and instead of killing of when his son escaped for a bit, he dismissed her. I’d reckon that was reasonably nice, and especially since he was showing that he was stronger, he sent her away before she could be killed.” said Bill.

“I, nor any teacher harm the house-elves in our care at school.” said Dumbledore. “Most of them have had their families in the service of Hogwarts since the near beginning and they have never had a hand raised to them.”

“I have house-elves, about fifty or sixty, and I know no one in the family had hurt any of them. If they do something wrong, they put themselves in time out for a few hours at the most. They don’t slam their ears in the ovens.” said Harry coolly.

“We don’t ignore the fact that there are families that abuse them, but it would be very erroneous to say that all house-elves are used to such abuse.” said Dumbledore.
Hermione looked down at her lap.

“You have been shown the ugly sides of House-elf culture, there is a brighter side as well.”

End of dialogue set.

“And smooth the way for who else could have attempted to vanquish the Dark Lord.” said Hermione softly.

“Yeah well…not much of a help was he?” said Ron.

“We had the Horcrux in our hands a year before we knew we were going to be looking for it.” said Hermione.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, second sentence.

“He certainly wasn’t going to be getting it from me and he didn’t want any from me period. He loved my mother far too much.” said Sirius ruefully.

End of dialogue set.

“They do not do things properly when it comes to house-elves, but…using human emotions and trying to add them to non-human entities doesn’t always work. Works a lot of the time, but not for every occasion.” said Leroy. “Trust me…”

“Do we get to hear an awesome story that follows that? You can’t just stop at that.” said Fred.

“Watch me.” smirked Leroy.

Seventieth paragraph.

“I never said human…I said ‘as acute as a human.’” said Dumbledore before Hermione could begin.

Dialogue line.

Seventy-first paragraph.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue set.

“That’ll get him on your side.” said Remus as he patted Sirius on the back.
Seventy-second paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Seventy-third paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“I’ll say it…poor Kreacher…” said Fred.

“Aye, never thought we would say that.” replied George.

Seventy-fourth paragraph, third sentence, second comma.

“Oh…bless him…” said Fred.

End of chapter.

“You wanted to call it a day?” said Officer McFinn looking over the top of the book.

Harry looked to Sirius and nodded.

Sirius stood stiffly up and walked out of the room, without a second glance back.

“Should I go, or you?” asked Harry to Remus.

“I’ll go first.” said Remus standing up, “Then I’ll send for you if it comes to that…might as well make him something to eat…I have a feeling it’s going to be a long night.”
Author's Note:

Sorry for the LONG LONG LONG interval in updating, I have been working my freaking BUTT off trying to get my life in some semblance of a system since the holidays had finally come to a close and have been trying to plan out what my next step will be in life. I have finally found some slight sort of system and am going to try and get that to work on my hobby. I would love for this to be the thing that my life revolves around, however I have to instead fixate on the thing that brings money into my way of living and that unfortunately, is not writing. I will be posting two chapters today as this one is a little on the short side. Thank you all for sticking with me.

Remus followed the trail of Sirius’ scent to wherever his best friend had gone after he left the den. He was expecting him to go and stay in his own bedroom, go into the kitchen and make something to eat or even take a run outside to clear his head. While there were similarities between the two of them, the one glaring difference that separated he and Harry was that when he was upset, Sirius would eat. Remus remembered that Lily would rant about that particular aspect of Sirius whenever his nerves or emotional state was ragged and he’d come over and clean out their refrigerator. When Lily was upset and felt compelled to eat nearly three bowls of ice cream, she’d have to work hard to lose the weight whereas Sirius seemed to blink off the extra pounds, and he could stress eat far more food than anyone else he had ever seen eat in one sitting.

Ron was like Sirius in that regards.

Instead of the kitchen or his bedroom, Remus followed Sirius’ scent to the far off wine cellar. He stepped down the cold stairwell to fully stocked cellar and as he passed several rows he could hear the sound of bottle being placed down on the hard stone floor.

“Padfoot?” called Remus.

“Fourth row from the end, Moony.” came Sirius’s dull voice. “In with the good stuff.”

Remus continued down till he found Sirius sitting on the floor with a crystal wine glass and an opened bottle of wine. Remus Sirius didn’t look up at his old friend, he only kept sipping from the glass and refill it slowly.

Remus folded his arms and sighed. “Have room for one more?”

Sirius slid over silently and handed him a glass. “Want a fresh bottle or do you want to split?”

“All depends, did you add anything to it this time?” asked Remus as he sat down on the floor.

“Six shots of Ogden’s.”

“Fresh bottle please.” said Remus holding up his glass, watching Sirius reach behind him and pull bottle off a shelf.

They sat together in companionable silence for a few moment, after the second glass Remus spoke up. “What are you thinking about?”

Sirius was quiet for a moment. “I’m just thinking about Regulus, that stupid…bloody idiot.” he downed the glass in his hand. “Why didn’t he come to find me…I could have helped him.”
Remus stirred the wine in his own glass by twirling his wrist. “I hate to say it, but would you have believed him? Would you have even listened to him without hexing him?”

Sirius opened his mouth, but he closed it. “No…I would have handed him over to Dumbledore in a moment, maybe Dumbledore would have….”

“We’ll never know what could have been, it’s done…. He made his choice, he risked it all to give the rest of the world a chance to bringing down Voldemort. I’d say that he was trying to do you proud.”

“Me proud? We never got along…I should have done…”

Remus sighed. “It’s like talking to Harry…” he said absently. “We could be here all day and all night trying to convince you that there was nothing you could have done. Regulus had to keep this all to himself and let no one know about what his plans were, if he had talked to anyone, there was going to be a great chance he would have been caught and killed before he could even start. That’s why they didn’t let even Moody know about Severus being a double agent, Dumbledore wouldn’t dream of risking the opportunity or Severus’ life.”

He poured himself another glass after he finished the current one. “With these books, we’re all worrying about the past, time to start planning for the future, especially since a lot of the things that are said are not going to happen…not if we all can help it.” he raised his glass and clinked it softly with Sirius’, “Now, should we send for something to eat and talk about happier times, or do you just want to hole up down here and be all sulky and drunk?”

“Oh, just for that, you and I could duel…”

“I swore to my mother that I would never duel a drunk. It’s like taking a cookie from a house-elf.” said Remus with a snicker.

Hours later, Mr. Weasley went in search of the two Marauders on orders of his wife, neither one of them had been to dinner and they weren’t sure if one of the house-elves had taken them food or not.

He went down into wine cellar and heard a pair of voices that were singing old songs and laughing when they would change a bit of the lyrics around to make them funnier or (in Sirius’ case) a little vulgar.

Mr. Weasley walked down to them and stared at the number of bottles that were littered on the floor, and then turned his attention to the pair of them attempting to pour themselves another glass.

“ARTHUR!” yelled Sirius happily. “Welcome to the party! Pull yourself up a bit of floor, do we have another glass?”

“He can have yours, you need to slow down a bit.” said Remus gently shoving the glass towards Mr. Weasley’s foot, hiccupping slightly.

“You’re one to talk…” muttered Sirius taking a drink straight from the bottle instead.

“Have you two had anything to eat?” asked Arthur as he took a seat across from the two of them and poured himself a glass of sherry from a nearby bottle.

“We had a house-elf bring us some nibblies.” burped Sirius. “Want some? I think there’s still some cheese on a plate here...somewhere."

“I’m alright…Harry was a bit concerned that you didn’t show up…but he knew you had some things to think out.” said Arthur.

Sirius looked at the bottle in his hand, deep in thought.

“Speak up, Sirius, don’t hold it in…we tend to go to some dark places when we do that.” he held in a burp. “Especially after the fifth bottle.”

Sirius was still silent for a moment, but then in a whisper: “I’m letting him down…first my brother, then James…now him…”

“You’re not letting him down…you’re having a drink in the basement with some old friends.” said Remus. “He’s admitted that he’s had a few drinks himself, and he’s not as much of a kid as we’d love for him to be.”

Sirius took a deep breath and released it slowly. “Still....”

“Still nothing, Harry’s fine, and James wouldn’t be blaming you for anything, in fact, if he was still here, he’d be sitting next to Arthur there and laughing at how you spilt all that wine on your shirt.” Remus said flicking Sirius’ collar. “Now, come on, I’m almost willing to bet that you can’t sing the entire Ode to Ogden.”

“You’re on, Arthur make sure he pays up.”

Harry was working once more in his office when he heard a loud thumping knock come from the other side of his door.

“Come in.” he said without much thought as rolled up a now completed piece of parchment. He was not expecting the door to suddenly bash open and his godfather leaning up against the door frame, bottle in hand and a crooked grin on his face.

“HARRY! MY FAVORITE PRONGSLET!” shouted Sirius lifting the bottle sluggishly and drinking straight from the bottle.

Harry blinked, “What the bloody hell?”

“WHAT ARE YOU DOING IN HERE? YOU SHOULD BE OUT HAVING FUN WITH YOUR LITTLE FRIENDS! LIFE’S TOO SHORT!” he said as he stumbled towards Harry’s desk and crashed ungainly into the wooden piece of furniture and laid sprawled out on the floor. Harry leaned over the desk to look at his godfather with a bemused smile.

“Looks like you had fun.” said Harry smirking as he levitated his breakable inkpots and more important paperwork high up so that nothing happened to them. “Do you want to go and sleep it off?”

“Nah, I want to keep you company!” said Sirius jovially as he got to his unsteady feet and made to sit down on the chair in front of the desk. However, he missed the seat and thumped right onto the floor.

Harry leaned over the desk again and noticed that Sirius was now slumped against the desk and had passed out.
“Nighty night.” said Harry, he waved his wand and placed Sirius on the sofa in the corner, draping a blanket over his godfather…a faint smile on his face.
The next morning, Harry set a plate of bacon and eggs down by the sofa and smirked when he heard Sirius groan and plead that the plate and the aromatic food be removed.

“Shouldn’t be having a good time without me then, should you?” said Harry.

“Not old enough…” grumbled the ex-convict thickly.

“Oh please…” said Harry, “I can guarantee I can give you a run for your money the day I turn sixteen.”

Sirius rubbed his eyes tiredly as the rest of the people gathered in the dining room loudly chatted and clinked their dinnerware as they ate breakfast.

“I feel like there is a troupe of trolls just smashing through my skull.” muttered Sirius.

“My head just have hippogriffs, at least I knew when to stop.” gloated Remus weakly.

“Are you two going to eat something this morning?” said Mrs. Weasley. “Toast, perhaps?”

“I’ll take the toast, I don’t think I could face eggs or anything like that.” said Sirius quipped tiredly. “I’ll take it in the den, though…I’m not sure I can face food right now.”

An hour later, after both Sirius and Remus had recovered enough from their drinking the night before, they all gathered in the den and waited for the day’s reading to start. Sirius pulled Harry over to him, elevated their feet with a large ottoman and settled onto the sofa.

“How’s your head?” asked Harry.

“If I could survive without it, I would have lopped it off hours ago.” said Sirius.

Officer McFinn chuckled to himself and began to start reading.

First paragraph, first sentence, second comma.

“I’d much rather chase after Dung across the countryside as opposed to a lake full of Inferi.” nodded Sirius. “And Dung can hide in some really nasty places.”

“How he could stand being in that Troll cave is beyond me, but it took several days of cleaning charms for the rest of the prisoners to be willing to have him the same cells.” said Kingsley.

First paragraph, second sentence.

“Yup, that’s him hiding in all the bad places.” said Tonks.

End of first paragraph.
“There’s not much that can be done, you can transfigure it into some other piece of food, but it’s still going to have that mold. There is a wizard in America that is trying to come up with a way to remove the mold completely from the piece of food.” said Chief Hawkeye absently.

Second paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“That is curious, why not send Snape in?” asked Bill.

“I believe that the dark lord has other plans for me.” drawled Snape.

“More important than finding me? I’m deeply offended.” said Harry.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, first sentence.

Snape rolled his eyes.

“The curse is not impossible to undo, I’m sure after a few weeks, Tom can come up with a way to remove it.” said Dumbledore.

Voldemort scoffed, “Give me more credit, old man.”

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“And with Death Eaters infiltrating all over the place like a mess of cockroaches, it’s not too far out there to think that they’ve known since the moment Harry was given the house.” said Dr. Clark.

Third paragraph.

“What in the world were you thinking?” said Neville.

Ron gaped and just shrugged his shoulders.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.
“Better start being aware of it…you don’t want those birds of her coming after you.” said Neville carefully.

Dialogue line.
Dialogue line.
Dialogue line.
Dialogue line.

“Not to incur the wrath of Miss Granger.” said Dumbledore a twinkling smile on his face.

Fourth paragraph.

“Best tell the two of them to quiet down.” said Mr. Weasley with wide eyes as he held his wife’s trembling hands.

Fifth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Can we get a bit of proof for that?” said George.

Sixth paragraph.

Seventh paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Don’t give your position away!” scolded Moody.

Eighth paragraph.

Ninth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Now give us proof to that.” said Fred.

Dialogue line.

“At least one of you has some sense.” said Moody.
“Wait…lemme get something to take notes with…” said Lee.

“Especially when you’re on the lamb.” said Sirius.

“He and I didn’t kill each other…so…no.” said Harry firmly.

“We saw them…you’d think that the one would stop picking his nose in public.” said Fred.

“Which makes them really stupid…” said Harry with a roll of his eyes.

“Well, we went out for coffee.” said Ron.
“That might have been preferable.” said Dumbledore.

Dialogue line.

Thirteenth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Say it, don’t spill it.” sneered Lionus.

Fourteenth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, second sentence.

“And Hermione is probably slightly miffed that she’s wrong.” said Fred.

“I’m NEVER angry when I’m wrong.” shot Hermione.

“No, of course not…” said George quickly, but then in a whisper to his twin he said. “Note to selves, don’t say that out loud again.”

End of dialogue set.

Fifteenth paragraph.

“Not for too long, I hope.” said McGonagall.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, first sentence, first semicolon.

Chief Hawkeye snarled. “I hope we’re doing something.”

Dialogue set, end of first sentence.

Voldemort sneered over to Headmaster who was merely shaking his head.
“Well, you were right, Albus…he managed it…you knew he would…and he had to kill the two of us to get it.” said Moody.

End of dialogue set.

Harry leaned forward and covered his face in his hands. Sirius reached over and patted Harry on the shoulder. “At least he showed his true colors in the end, I don’t think Fudge would have gone through all that.”

Sixteenth paragraph.

Tonks wiped her eye quietly.

Dialogue set.

“That kept them all safe at the very least.” said Mrs. Weasley with an apologetic look towards Harry. “Hopefully when Bill get’s married now you won’t have to hide.”

“That is, if Fleur says yes.” said Charlie, he chuckled when Bill elbowed him hard in the side.

Dialogue set, third sentence, first comma.

“Not much of a loss there, he’s burnt that house down of his about five times in the last three years.” said Flitwick.

Dialogue set, end of third sentence.

Remus had to wrap his arms around Tonks to stop her from attacking the restrained Dark Lord.

“I’ll kill him.” growled Tonks. “No one…touches…my…parents!”

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, second sentence.

“The shoe’s on the other foot, now we’re the ones that have to worry about getting caught.” said Ron.
“Oh, this is going to be good.” said Harry with a roll of his eyes.

Mrs. McFinn gasped loudly and glared fiercely at the book.

“Easy, sweetie, I’d think you were upset with me over something.” said Officer McFinn with a chuckle.

“Most ridiculous thing I…” muttered Mrs. Weasley.

“They need to have some reason for everyone to go and look for him, especially since everyone was trying to get back in his good books last year.” said Professor Sprout.

“Not that there would appear to be much of a difference where a few stories are concerned.” said Leroy darkly.

“But they kept that part of the story out.” said Charlie.

“The paperwork has got to be a pain, might as well have someone else do all of it.” said Rudolph.

“Yeah…someone else” said Harry with an elevated brow.
“I was quite frank about not liking all that work…I wasn’t shy about it.” said Rudolph with a laugh.

Dialogue set.

“Now don’t be linking me up with him!” said Rudolph leaning over to look at Harry and pointing at the Dark Lord.

Dialogue set, third sentence.

“It’s worse this time around.” said Sirius shaking his head solemnly. “I hope this doesn’t last as long as it did back then.”

End of dialogue set.

“He’s learning, you have to give him that…” said Dumbledore.

“I’m not willing to give him anything.” said McGonagall.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

“But the only ones that would believe that are complete idiots.” said Hannah.

“And we know the world has quite a collection of those.” said Ernie.

“Yeah, just look at what you did to him in your second year.” said Ron offhandedly, causing Ernie to turn pink.

Dialogue line.

Twenty-first paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Twenty-second paragraph.

Page two of the Daily Prophet.

Everyone, except for Voldemort stared in complete horror at the book in the officer’s hands, then as if the sound was turned back on, a flurry of indignant cries erupted around the room and a few disgusted mutterings.

“If it was the Department of Mysteries, they sure are completely off the mark.” said Mr. Weasley.

“Especially if what Dumbledore said about Muggleborns is true. Don’t they talk to you about such things?”
“Oh, they and I have wonderful conversations, but you cannot have innovative ideas and theories if you only think as everyone else does. Sometimes, you must test your theories on your own… though this is a very despicable theory and I wish they had given this idea a bit more thought.”

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Must be how they think there are Squibs in the world…the only thing is, Muggleborns far outnumber the amount the Squibs!” said Terry.

Dialogue set.

“And what would this ‘punishment’ be?” wondered Dr. Clark out loud.

“Excessive, let’s just leave it at that.” said Officer McFinn.

Twenty-third paragraph.

Twenty-fourth paragraph.

“Which would make your relationship something…different.” said Bill.

“Malfoy-ish…” said Charlie quietly.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“‘Family tree’? That’s an understatement.” said Fred.

“It’s more of a rabbit warren…” said George. “We’re just all over the place, and all connected back at the beginning.”

Twenty-fifth paragraph.

Dialogue set.

“Oh, there would be some substantial changes but I cannot think that Tom would destroy Hogwarts, not with how fond he is of the castle.” said Dumbledore. “It would not be the same, I will say that much.”
“Not many parents would deny their children the chance to learn at Hogwarts…but that is what is wonderful about having the choice, broaden horizons or keep their loved ones close. This is where I dearly hope for the first time that I can remember, that the families take their children and flee abroad.” said Dumbledore.

End of dialogue set.

Twenty-sixth paragraph.

Tissues and handkerchiefs had to be handed around the room to various people that were in need of them.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Twenty-seventh paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Best not to, Remus, my young friend. The less people involved the better.” said Dumbledore. “Less of a trail to lead back to them.”

Twenty-eighth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

Twenty-ninth paragraph.

“There’s a much bigger issue than that.” said Flitwick with a thoughtful frown.

Sirius was puzzled for a moment, but then he looked slowly over to Remus and chucked a small biscuit at his head. “You bloody idiot.”

Before Remus could speak Tonk’s eyes went wide and she spun in her sea, glaring at the werewolf hotly.

Thirtieth paragraph.
Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

SMACK!

Tonks slapped an open palm across Remus’ face, nearly knocking him backwards. She got to her feet and ran out of the room.

“Tonks…Tonks wait!” said Remus, recovering quickly and clamoring to his own feet to go after her.

Sirius watched as his best friend after his cousin and released a deep breath. “I’m not getting involved with that.”

“Should someone go…and mediate?” asked Charlie. “She might…you may lose a few of your more breakables…”

“I’m more experienced in this.” said Inspector Homes. “I’ll go.” he patted Dudley’s shoulder and left the room in the direction of the couple.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Thirty-first paragraph.

“I daresay I know what is the problem.” said Dumbledore. “Oh Remus…I had hoped you would not entertain this thought for even a moment.”

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Thirty-second paragraph.

Harry’s eyes widened. “Then why…why would you…?”

“Oh, he’s lucky that only she slapped him, I would have knocked his brains out.” said Sirius.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Thirty-third paragraph.

“Which means that you are willing to leave your wife and unborn child?” said Mr. Weasley,
“Molly would still have me sleeping in the chicken coop….to this very day if I even paused to think about leaving her, Bill, Charlie and Percy back in those days.”

Thirty-fourth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, second sentence.

“For the sake of Remus’…genitalia, let’s not mention that to Tonks.” said Bill.

“As long as he ends it there.” said Mrs. McFinn. “And doesn’t say anything further.”

End of dialogue set.

“That’s it, I’m telling her.” said Sirius.

Dialogue line.

“If James didn’t say something first, Lily would have whipped his ass.” said Sirius quietly.

Thirty-fifth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Get ready with crane…we may have to pull him out of the hole he might dig himself in.” said Dr. Clark.

Thirty-sixth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Crane isn’t going to be enough.” whispered Dr. Clark.

Dialogue line.

Thirty-seventh paragraph.

“Just a little more, Harry.” said Dumbledore thoughtfully. “Just a little more…”
“Not with us, she’s not, nor is she with her mother and father, of that I’m sure.” said Mrs. Weasley.

“No, in fact, I couldn’t be happier for her…and perhaps Remus can calm her…exuberant nature down.” said Flitwick.

“Sometimes it’s not, you can have a large support, but there are times that other people’s opinion and acceptance of you can mean a lot as well.” said McGonagall. “They may say that it doesn’t affect them, but it just may have some internal feelings that they keep quite private.”

“Oh, I highly doubt that Andromeda and Ted are anything less than accepting of Remus.” said Professor Sprout. “I have no doubt that Andromeda was ecstatic that someone would come calling for Tonks.”

“And Ted has always had a fascination for feats of fantastic magic. I’m sure, with his work on that Map of their’s, Remus has quite a lot to share with Ted.” said Professor Flitwick.

“She didn’t marry the werewolf. she married Remus Lupin, a very kind, brave and talented wizard.” said Mrs. Weasley.

“Remus should really be in here, to hear this.” said Mr. Weasley, “If he and the Inspector weren’t both trying to remove his foot from his mouth.”

“Aye, the baby will start off being joyless bookworm.” said Sirius with a smirk. “With a touch of clumsiness from his mother. I can’t wait!”
“Lycanthropy is not a passed on affliction, well, not in that sense. It’s only passed on via biting, not from parent to child through reproduction.” said Dumbledore calmly.

“He called me dramatic in school…” groaned Sirius. “All he’s missing is apparently some dramatic poses and violin music.”

Sirius’ eyes widened. “Ooohh…that’s going to smart for a while.”

“I know where that rage is coming from.” said Officer McFinn absently.

“Remus is picking fights again.” said Fred.

“This is going to be awkward.” said George.

Sirius lifted his foot and chuckled softly. “He wouldn’t be able to, his feet are a little bigger than mine.”

“This is going to be ugly.” said Ron.
“Sit boy! Sit!” shouted Harry as he struggled to keep Sirius in his seat. Sirius, in response, was trying to get up off the sofa and make his way angrily to the door.

Sirius growled darkly. “He can be all broody and whatever else he wants to be, but he does not…”

“I’m siding with Harry.” growled Sirius.

“Everyone to their corners, now.” said Fred.

“Wait for the bell…” said George.

“Oh, I think Remus needed to hear it.” said Dumbledore.

Harry tried to drown out the silence with his own breathing, his eyes scrunched up as he tried to pull Sirius down, but he couldn’t really drown it out. Chief Hawkeye nodded however and clapped softly. “Amen, son.”

“They seem to do that a lot more lately.” said Katie.
“You should have, tough love, baby.” said Sirius darkly, finally settling down in his chair.

“He needed to be kicked in the ass and sent back to his wife.” said Sirius.

“He would have been patting you on the back.” said Sirius.

“At least they choose one of my personal favorite pictures.” said Dumbledore with a fond smile.

“I’ve always been told I had my father’s eyes.” said Dumbledore.

“A very handsome woman.” said Flitwick.

“Oh no…pitch it, burn it…something…” said Angelina.
“You are just a glutton for torment, aren’t you?” said Bill.

First Article paragraph.

“She sure is fixated on you.” said Charlie.

“She got most of her fame from all her writings about Harry.” said Hermione.

Second Article paragraph.

Article paragraph, first sentence.

“Mother thought she was the, as children are known to say, crazy old bat that was from a few houses down the street. Bathilda and she eventually became as close as mother had ever let someone become after Father was incarcerated.” said Dumbledore.

End of third article paragraph.

A few people looked confused as well, but Dumbledore was not forthcoming in supplying any further information.

Fourth Article paragraph, fourth sentence.

“My mother was a very private person when it came to Ariana, as was my father. There was a reason why kept her close to the family home.” said Dumbledore.

Fourth Article paragraph, fifth sentence.

“We were well prepared to just accept that white lie, it was better all things considered to just give people that.” said Dumbledore thoughtfully.

“But…what did happen?” asked Ron before Hermione could shush him.

“We seem to be focusing very highly on my young life, so, as much as I prefer not to share at this time, we may hear what currently being hidden.” said Dumbledore looking up at the ceiling.

Fourth Article paragraph, sixth sentence.

“That was not the reason why we moved.” said Dumbledore quietly.

End of fourth article paragraph.
“Welcome back Kreacher.” said George.

“Just in time for elvensies.” said Fred.

“Good on yeh, lad.” said Moody. “A little roughing up is good for him. Scratch that, a lot of roughing up.”

“What haven’t you done?” said Ernie.

“Oh, five minutes with that old faker and I’ll make him wish that he had stayed behind to face Voldemort.” muttered Moody.

“That’s not going to have much of an effect on him.” said Lionus. “They tend to thrive on being unreliable to those who aren’t in their circles or wanting anything from them.”
“You’d better go and find them, then.” said Harry darkly.

“Not the point.” said Harry sharply.

“Twack him again!” said Neville.

“Eh, toss in seven more.” said Fred.

“Double your luck.” said George.

“You have no idea.” said almost the entire group collectively.
“Oh no…she’s a Ministry worker.” groaned Dean.

Mr. Weasley looked up to the ceiling, deep in thought. “That might narrow it down to…twenty or so…most of the women we have there are fairly decent.”

“F#ck.” said the children quietly.

“Oh….no…..” sighed McGonagall.

“Dammit…” said Harry covering his eyes.

Sirius lifted Harry’s scarred hand and ran his thumb over the writing. Officer McFinn waited for no one and turned the page to continue the readings.
“Matches the interior…unkempt.” said George.

“George!” hissed Mrs. Weasley shortly.

“It’s fine, it kind of fits.” said Sirius.

“I’d find it hilarious if that happened.” said Dr. Clark.

“You’d think that they would be a bit more subtle.” said Moody with a roll of his eye.

“Dumber than a village full of trolls, the lot of them.” muttered Kingsley.

“Muggles?” asked Hermione indignantly.

“Death Eaters.” replied Kingsley.

“Idiots, every last one of them.” said Remus.

“Not quite so dumb then, but if they really want to get ahold of you, they need to find a better way to do it.” said Tonks.
“I’m fairly certain that only the news that You-Know-Who is finally dead is going to brighten their spirits.” said George.

Seventh paragraph, second sentence.

Mrs. Weasley looked at Hermione and Harry, “I wonder which one was the one that did the cleaning?”

“Sure, don’t believe I might have helped.” said Ron with a snort.

The Weasleys were all silent.

“S..Shut up..” said Ron, his ears turning red.

“We’re not saying a word.” said the twins together, wicked smiles stretched across their faces.

End of seventh paragraph.

Sirius blinked. “Sounds like he is doing better.”

Dialogue set, first sentence, fifth comma.

Sirius continued to blink while Dumbledore smiled.

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue set.

Eighth paragraph.

Article Title

“Well…I hope the poor first years don’t have to suffer their entire school life without a normal bit of whimsy that the other students got to enjoy.” said Flitwick quietly to Professor Sprout.

“I daresay, that’ll only happen if he is removed entirely.” said Professor Sprout nodding towards Voldemort.

Dialogue line.

Ninth paragraph.

First article paragraph, second sentence, first comma.

“’Resignation’ my ass.” said Harry.
“I think we can eliminate three words from that job title.” said Remus darkly.

“I doubt very highly he is a qualified teacher.” said McGonagall coldly.

“Miss Granger!” gasped McGonagall in shock.

“When it comes to such events, I don’t think we would be willing to stand up to that publically.” said McGonagall.

“But…why not?” asked George.

“If we stay in the castle, we can protect the children as best we can.” said Sprout.

“Good thinking.” said Flitwick appreciatively.

“Maybe I should have sicced Harry on Kreacher sooner.” whispered Sirius quietly.

“Unless Harry had that locket, I don’t think it would have done much.” said Remus.

“Can you admit that he was a good cook?” said Hermione leaning forward and looking pointedly at Sirius.

“Never said that he wasn’t a good cook when I was younger, doesn’t change that he was…” said Sirius.
“Let it go.” said Remus, not to either one of them in particular.

Dialogue set.

Twelfth paragraph.

Dialogue line

“Wait till you send your kids on the train and you have to watch it pull away from you.” said Mr. Weasley with a fond smile.

Thirteenth paragraph.

Dialogue line

Dialogue line

“Ronald!”

“I didn’t say it yet, Mum!” said Ron defensively.

Dialogue line

Fourteenth paragraph.

“A real life Mary Poppins.” said Dr. Clark with a chuckle.

Dialogue line

Dialogue set.

“If I wanted to have Albus’ job, I certainly would be overjoyed to have all his... knickknacks.” replied Snape with a roll of his eyes.

“I quite liked a few of those.” said Dumbledore.

“Like, Albus, you like those.” said McGonagall, a slight twitch by her eye.

Dialogue set.

“You’re forgetting to put a charm to keep whatever you’re discussing amongst yourselves.” growled Moody. “You’re only going to be telling instead of showing Snape all your bloody cards.”

Dialogue line
“Partially.” mumbled Moody.

Dialogue line

Dialogue line

Fifteenth paragraph.

“That’s normal, unfortunately.” said Lionus.

Dialogue line

“Hope she pukes.” said Harry darkly.

Dialogue line

Dialogue line

Dialogue line

Dialogue line

“And knowing Ron, he didn’t share that with you till now.” said Fred.

Dialogue line

“We knew it.” said George.

Sixteenth paragraph.

Dialogue line

Dialogue line

Dialogue line

“Does when you’re trying to imitate someone perfectly.” said Kingsley.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue line

“Let’s not dwell on that, you’re only going to make it worse.” said Neville quietly.
Seventeenth paragraph.

Moody groaned and shook his head. “If you’re not fully prepared, don’t risk it.”

“I’m siding with him…” said Lionus nodding towards the Auror.

Dialogue set.

“What I’m worried about is if she had opened it.” said Hermione.

Voldemort scoffed.

“You were defeated by an eleven-year-old when you first attempted to come back to power. You have no qualification on judging the intelligence and powers of others.” snorted Hawkeye.

Dialogue line

Voldemort rolled his eyes, but then caught the sight of the writing on Harry’s hand, he then shrugged. “I suppose it wouldn’t be completely out of the question.”

Eighteenth paragraph.

Dialogue set, third sentence.

“You’d think that the ‘Unspeakables’ wouldn’t be blabbering on about stuff.” said Fred.

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue line

“Tokens? You need a token to get into work?” asked Mr. Weasley.

“Damn bitch…took our idea…can’t she come up with something on her own?”

Ron turned and stared at the bushy haired girl sitting next to him. “Holy….”
“That’s just about with any plan though, isn’t it?” said Colin.

“I hope your sheer dumb luck holds out.” whispered McGonagall.

The adults in the room were stunned, slowly turning their attention to the teens.

“You’d better swear that you’re not going to use…whatever innate talents you have for evil purposes.” said Sirius.

“Well, that’s no fun.” said Ron.

“Too late.” said Harry, grinning as several people blinked and stared.

“Like anyone as smart as Hermione would be willing to go and sit in interrogation.” said Bill.

“Just send Kreacher again, give him an order to get it and he has to return alive and unhurt.” said Dudley. Shifting slightly under people’s gazes he sputtered. “Well, he got out of…that place that sounds a lot worse than what it was described as, maybe he could come back from that Ministry place.”

Dumbledore stroked his beard thoughtfully. “I daresay that it just might possibly work. While House-elves cannot enter someone else’s home without express permission, and thieving is strictly prohibited, the item in question is not lawfully hers. It belongs to the Black family as a sort of treasure hunt find.”

“But…they’re not going to try that.” said Charlie.

“Most likely not.” said Dumbledore a chuckle escaping his lips.
“Why do I get the feeling you don’t even grimace with pain anymore?” whispered Sirius.

“Oh Merlin…he’s going to just worship you…I think I’m going to be sick.” said Sirius.

“Stuff it, fluffy.”

“This won’t end well…whatever the hell he’s got planned.” said Dr. Clark.

“Run…or something.” said Hannah looking uncertain.

“Won’t matter either way, if he wants to kill you, there’s not much you can do but run for as long as you can till the bitter end.” said Harry.
The room went quiet. “Or be me. That’ll give you better odds.” said Harry with a laugh.

“You had coffee this morning, didn’t you?” said Ron weakly.

Twenty-ninth paragraph.

“Now it’s no longer funny.” said Harry.

Dialogue line

Thirtieth paragraph.

Dialogue line

“Occupied!” said George.

“Wait, did we use that joke before?” asked Fred.

“Beats me.” said George.

“Well, in that case, ‘Occupied!’” said Fred loudly.

Thirty-first paragraph.

Dialogue line

“Would a general answer be okay, or would you prefer details?” muttered Charlie.

“Gross…funny…but gross.” said Ginny with a weak giggle.

Dialogue line “

Dialogue line

Dialogue line

“In the loo? You just went up there!” said Ron.

Dialogue line

Thirty-second paragraph.

Dialogue set.
Snape groaned. “We got it…enough with the mentioning it already.”

“Even I want me to stop bringing it up.” Hermione whispered to Ron. “But he should be blocking…”

“Yeah, I guess it’s easier to do when it’s not you.” said Ron.

Harry took a deep breath and released it slowly. “Deep breath….deep breath…”

“Just be careful.” said Dumbledore. “That is all I really ask.”

“We all have our preferences.” said Kingsley absently.

“That’s a good theory.” said Dumbledore.
“Because I wouldn’t just make that up, not with our lives hanging in the balance like this.” said Harry.

“I vote silencing charm.” whispered Ernie.

“Apparently you last way longer than most.” said Sirius to Harry.

“Duck and cover, people.” said Harry.

Ron said quietly. “If we come back.”

“Don’t jinx us, Ron.” said Harry.
“Now, let’s go over the plan one more time, Hermione.” said Fred.

“Shut up, George.” spat Hermione.

“Oop, you know she’s not in a good mood when she mixes us up.” said Fred.

“But a lot of people mix you two up.” said Hannah.

“A lot of people are so unhappy.”

“Bless them…”

“That’s why we do what we do.” said the twins together.

“Or it could just help in pissing people off.” muttered Terry.

“That’s another reason why we do what we do.”

“And the cover is going to be blown.” Moody drawled.

“Cover…blown.”

“Ow! Hey, this hasn’t happened yet!” yelped Ron as Hermione knocked his side with a stiff elbow.

Moody snorted with laughter, he covered his mouth and tried to recover, steeling his features back into his normal state.
“Can I get my revenge… get a marker and draw on her face a bit?” whispered Harry.

“I don’t think anyone would be too thrilled about that, but I’d say go for it.” said Sirius.

“I’ve got the sneaky suspicion that I’m going to be stunned or not ever get to work today.” said Fred.

“But that’s just silly.” said George.

“That is one dedicated workaholic.” said Dr. Clark.
“What in the…” said Dudley.

Dialogue line

Fifty-third paragraph.

Dialogue line

Dialogue set.

“Dedication…to something.” said Bill.

Fifty-fourth paragraph.

Dialogue line

“Reg? He never was all that gung-ho about going to work before.” said Mr. Weasley thoughtfully.

Dialogue line

Fifty-fifth paragraph.

Dialogue line

“Did you three take some Felix potion or something?” asked Charlie in amazement.

“Well say that we should just bulk brew a bunch of those potions.” said Ron.

Fifty-sixth paragraph.

Fifty-seventh paragraph.

Dialogue line

“Sucks doesn’t it?” said Harry with a manic smile.

Dialogue line

Fifty-eighth paragraph.

Dialogue set.

“Mum never let us use the public loos.” said Dudley. “If we did, we’d have to take a bath the moment we got home.”
“That is so funny!” said Neville with a giggle.

“Irony is one of the best forms of comedy.” said Luna dreamily.

Mrs. McFinn winced. “That’s disgusting. Who decided on that entrance?”

“A black statue? With what is all going on now, I’m betting it’s not going to be a cheerful statue.” said Ernie.

“And if Harry’s thinking it’s frightening, it’s going to terrifying.” said Terry.

“Can’t say if it’s purely Voldemort behind all this nonsense.” said Hawkeye. “Or if some other freak came up with this.”

“Runcorn? You picked Runcorn!” said Tonks in shock.

“Oh no…” said Moody covering his eyes.
Sixty-sixth paragraph.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue line

Dialogue line

Dialogue line

“I’m guessing I would rather not know.” said Harry.

Sixty-seventh paragraph.

Nearly everyone in the room leaned back in horror.

Dialogue set, second sentence.

Hermione clapped a hand to her mouth, her eyes brimming with tears as she furiously shook her head.

“I’m going to be sick.” said Ron.

“That’s terrible!” said Katie.

“It’s disgusting!” said Ginny.

After several minutes of disgusted outrage, Dumbledore looked pointedly over to the muggles in the room and said. “I would love nothing more than to say that no wizards or witches would ever think of such a thing and even remotely be called decent. But it is an…ugly truth that such prejudices exist and sadly will continue to exist for several more centuries, but I do humbly apologize for such despicable show of racism.”

“So…he’s admitting that there are bastards in the world…but not all of them necessarily bad, but he’s sorry that they did this.” said George slowly.

“Sounds like it…” said Fred. “There are racist muggles too…look at the walrus.”

“…Humans suck.”

“I’ll say this much, if it’s a fountain for St. Mungos, they can get their own money, I’m not chucking anything but spit into the water.” said Fred.

End of dialogue set.

Sixty-eighth paragraph.

Sixty-ninth paragraph.
“If that’s not a clue that the Ministry is being taken over…don’t know what would drive the message home.” said Bill.

Dialogue line

Seventieth paragraph.

Dialogue line

Seventy-first paragraph.

Dialogue line

Seventy-second paragraph.

Dialogue line

Dialogue set, second sentence.

“Oh my goodness.” gasped Mrs. Weasley covering her mouth.

“No wonder he was so desperate.” said Mr. Weasley weakly.

End of dialogue set.

Seventy-third paragraph.

Dialogue line

Dialogue set, first sentence, third comma.

Kingsley shook his head. “Dear lord…makes you wonder who else was removed or who stayed.”

“I’m hoping you’re still alive.” said Moody gruffly. “Need someone with balls to stand up to these dark bastards.”

“Alastor!” snapped McGongall.

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue line

Dialogue line

Dr. Clark said a few choice words under his breath.

Seventy-fourth paragraph, second sentence, second comma.
“You lot picked a good person to take down.” said Moody gruffly.

End of seventy-fourth paragraph.

Dialogue line
Dialogue line
Dialogue line
Dialogue set.
Dialogue set, first sentence, third comma.
“Maybe picking Ron as the Magical Maintenance person wasn’t the best.” said Lee.

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue set.
“I’m going out on a limb here and thinking that poor Cresswell didn’t have a pleasant encounter with Runcorn.” said Ron.

Seventy-fifth paragraph.

Dialogue set.
Seventy-sixth paragraph.
“But if you’re supposed to be somewhere else, best not to blow your cover…though I’m quite disappointed that the Ministry is being infiltrated by seventeen year olds.” said Dumbledore with a kind smile.
“We infiltrated it when we were fifteen.” said Harry.
“Ah, but that was after hours and the security was not so high then.” said Dumbledore with a quiet chuckle.

End of chapter.

“Found her!” said Bill. “But…now what?”
“Knock her out and steal the locket?” said Fred.
“I second it!” said George.
Return of a Fighter

Author’s Note: I’M NOT DEAD!

I am SORRY about the length of time it has taken me to update this story, there had been so many changes to my life that I couldn’t keep up with all the extra things I do with my free time.

First thing that happened: It was approaching the holidays and with me being a Manager at the retail store I worked at, meant that most of my time was going towards my job.

Second thing that happened: The bane of my existence, someone that had been my superior for a year and then equal was finally terminated. We couldn’t find anyone to fill the gap for a long while so we were trying to keep up with the holiday rush. If I wasn’t working, I was sleeping, planning on Christmas presents, or trying to gain back some sanity. I opted to bake a bunch of cookies for all my aunts and uncles for Christmas and let me tell you, that’s what I’m going to be doing from now on. It was my mom’s Chocolate Chip Cookies, always a crowd pleaser, (those can get HONKING big) and my new staple Honey Orange Ginger Cookies. AMAZING cookies.

Third thing that happened: After the holidays, the company we worked for had filed for bankruptcy and a store in our nearby area had received the pink slip and they needed to start liquidating. We felt safe as we were always busy and our small store was one of the best in the region for sales figures, we fielded calls and tried to help customers by explaining what was going on, and reassuring customers that we weren’t closing.

Fourth thing that happened: A month later, we got the notice that our store was closing. So, we had to work even more to prepare for the store closing. So that meant even more work and even more headaches as we were trying to help customers understand the new rules and policies. We all now have to try and find other jobs, I decided to stay on with my store as I was there for the setting up the store in the beginning, I will stay till the doors lock for the final time.

Fifth thing that happened: The ENTIRE company went under, not only was our store and the other store in the nearby town, but EVERY branch of the store across the country was given notice. If you’re curious as to what store it was, it was a SHOPping store that was actually a great KOmpany to work for. I will miss it greatly.

Sixth thing that happened: Now that the time of the eminent closing is approaching faster, I decided to take up college, I had never done so before, so this is going to be an exciting and yet scary. I have yet to apply to my first choice college, but I will be doing so in the next few hours.

So…that’s my life up to this point, hope you all don’t hate me too much.

Dialogue line.

“Uh…sure, we’ll go with that.” said Hermione.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, fifth sentence.

“So she’s ‘officiating’ those things? Knew she was a sadistic…” muttered Ron.

End of dialogue set.

“Albert who?” said Dennis.

“The person that Harry’s impersonating.” replied Colin in a whisper.

Dialogue line.

First paragraph.

Dialogue set.

“That’s the impression I get from him.” said Alastor.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, third sentence.

“Yeah, all decent and whatnot, can’t have those people around, now can we?” Bill.

End of dialogue set.
“Sounds like you weren’t all that tall in the future.” said Ron with a wiggle of his brow.

“Stuff it.”

“Just use your own plans then!” said Colin.

“I don’t know what sort of planning I would be doing.” said Harry.

Harry shook his head and buried his face in his hand. “I’m only going to assume I have lost my mind or took a severe blow to the head because I hadn’t come up with something.”

“Most people wear their jewelry on them.” said Katie.

“It’s not advisable to wear anything that the accused can get ahold of and use it to strangle a person.” said McFinn calmly. “It’s most likely different here.”

“Atta boy.” said Moody.

“Why not just write it down yourself?” asked Mrs. McFinn.

“Well, her office has to be somewhere close, if they’re using pink colored paper.” said Charlie.
End of sixth paragraph.

“It takes more than a pair of wizards or witches to make a pamphlet?” Inspector Homes.

Seventh paragraph.

Pamphlet

“Put up your arm.” said Hermione quietly to Ron.

“What?”

“Put your arm up.” hissed Hermione. Ron lifted his arm and hidden behind his large sleeve, she rose her middle finger in the direction of the book.

“Good for you, sweetie.” said Office McFinn with a snicker, amazingly not looking in her direction. Hermione blushed.

Eighth paragraph, first sentence.

“What the hell?” whispered Flitwick.

“Filius!” said Sprout in shock.

“If Miss Granger can extend a middle finger, me swearing is not the most shocking thing to occur today.”

Eighth paragraph, second sentence.

“You didn’t need to have proof of who wrote this. “ said Sirius darkly. “You had the gut feeling already, and I would take the risk in saying that she was the one that wrote it.”

End of eighth paragraph.

“Somehow, despite that you called her a hag, I’ve got the feeling we’re still not going to like you.” said Neville.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“She’s got a magic eye?” said Harry looking confused. “I would have thought a magic tongue or something that could snatch flies out of the air.”
Ninth paragraph.

Moody blinked. “My…eye…? How the bloody hell…did she get…my eye?”

While McGonagall was gently scolding Moody, mostly due to him being deceased in this book, Sirius and Kingsley looked between each other. “Makes you really think about how she got to possess his eye.”

“Perhaps the Ministry took his body…at least I hope they did. The other option is Death Eaters taking his body and just carving him up.” said Kingsley quietly.

Tenth paragraph.

Plaque

Eleventh paragraph.

“Ugly, Toad-Faced Bitch?”

“ALASTOR!”

Second plaque

“That’s sick.” said Hermione with a scowl.

Twelfth paragraph.

“Oh, bless him.” said the twins fondly.

Thirteenth paragraph.

“Tell me that you two are going to be selective about who you sell these things to if times get dark.” growled Moody.

Fred and George looked between each other and then back to Moody. “If we say yes, then you won’t hurt us, right?”

“I promise nothing.” said Moody.

“Better chances on surviving with the side saying ‘sure’.” said Fred.

Fourteenth paragraph, third sentence.

“Tell me that I puke in her chair.” said Harry crossing his fingers.
“Sick…” muttered Ginny.

“Thanks lad.” muttered Moody.

“That would have to be freaking hilarious to watch.” said Lee with a roar of laughter.

“Burn them.” said a majority of the room collectively.

“Don’t worry about me, just get going!” said Mr. Weasley.

“Tell that to a few of the girls back at school.” whispered Ginny to Hermione who giggled.

Harry hissed in pain and reached behind his shoulder, grimacing in pain.

“Ah, shit!” muttered Office McFinn.

“No, no, no, no.” said Sirius, Dumbledore and Lionus together as they stood up and hovered around Harry.

“We’re stopping here, I’ll have Nicodemus here in three minutes.” said Chief Hawkeye standing up and kneeling in front of the young man.
“No…let’s finish the chapter at least.” hissed Harry.

“Your health is more important than seeing how you children get out of this.” said the Chief sternly.

“Finish… the… goddamn… chapter!” growled Harry. Harry glared at the man kneeling before him, the man looked back at him, his face plain.

“I’ve had men with bigger balls than you try and give me orders, boy.” sneered Hawkeye. “Nicodemus is coming, whether you like it or not. We’re not moving on till he gets here so we can get you sorted out.”

It was not quite three minutes when Dr. Nicodemus came back to Night’s Rest. He was already informed about what had happened and in the span of seven minutes, he had Harry down nearly four different potions and with him sitting on the sofa with Sirius and the young man’s head against his chest.

Hermione and Ginny asked after the tiny little babies that he was supposed to be watching over and he motioned to the room next to theirs, but he said nothing further.

Once he was given the nod by Dr. Nicodemus, Officer McFinn continued on, internally regretting not taking the proper amount of care before.

Eighteenth paragraph.

“I doubt highly that she would have my picture in her office willingly. I daresay that she may have a copy of Miss Skeeter’s book.” said Dumbledore softly.

Nineteenth paragraph.

“‘Bestselling’? According to what research?” said Kingsley.

Twentieth paragraph.

“Shit, get out.” said Charlie.

Twenty-first paragraph, third sentence, second comma.

“Lad, you need to have less close calls.” said Kingsley.

“Tell me about it.” said Sirius.

Twenty-first paragraph, fifth sentence.

Dr. Clark waved his hands and wiggled his fingers. “Do none of those idiots use their hands?”
“I don’t, please share!” said Fred eagerly.

“With Hermione in with Umbridge, she’s in the most dangerous position out of the three of you.” said Professor Sprout worriedly.

“Whoever came up with that sort of hairdo should have a few lessons in hair styles.” said Alicia.

Mr. Weasley chuckled fondly, but he stopped when he saw Dr. Nicodemus rub salve on Harry’s back.

“You’ll be fine lad.” said Dr. Nicodemus absently. “Just need to keep this under control.”

“Dad always said he could tell Fred and George apart just by their eyes…I don’t think future me wanted to risk it.” said Ron weakly.

“He never tells us how he figures us out either, when we work so hard to be exactly alike some days, he can still tell us apart.” said Fred with a slight huff.
“That’s awkward.” said Ron.

“Well, this is a pleasant family reunion, isn’t it?” said Bill.

“Who? Oh…me…” said Harry.

“News to me.” said Harry.

“So, nothing new?” sneered Voldemort.

“You’ve gone this long without speaking…what made you speak up now?” muttered Ron.

“I’m talking about Runcorn.” whispered Mr. Weasley to his wife.

“Might be best that you didn’t say this to Runcorn, I don’t want to think about what he might have done to you.” said Mrs. Weasley.
“No, just an out of character warning.” said Moody.

“Now get back to the mission, enough mucking about.” said Kingsley.

Harry felt Sirius’ hand tighten slightly on his shoulder, giving him a silent show of support.

“Better than trying to wrestle a lone witch out of a room full of whatever defenses they have in place.” said Dumbledore.

“It’ll take some delicate footwork, to say the least.” said Lionus.

“Ah, shit.” muttered Harry.

“Knew it.” snarled Harry.

Mrs. McFinn’s hand went over her mouth to stifle her gasp.
“Good boy.” said Dr. Nicodemus absently.

“Something not many Voldemort supporters have.” said Leroy.

Dumbledore’s face as well as several other people’s went terribly pale.

“Oh my God.” said Dumbledore faintly. “I feared this would happen, but I didn’t dare believe…”

“What…was that what you were talking…” Dudley weakly whispered.

“Yeah, Dud…don’t ask…” said Harry swiftly.

Mrs. Weasley and Mr. Weasley looked fearful.

“Oh, no, Mary…” said Mrs. Weasley. “She’s not a physically strong person to begin with!”

“Oh…bless him.” said Professor Sprout.
“I have a dog as a patronus, maybe I can sic it on the cat.” said Ron.

“Mine would work too, too bad that they don’t fight each other, they act more like friends when you try and pit them against each other.” said Sirius. “Might not get along with Umbridge’s, though.”

Dialogue line.

Forty-fourth paragraph.

“I’m sorry.” said Mrs. Weasley standing up, her face white as she hurried from the room. Mr. Weasley was right on her trail, snatching a calming draught and stomach soother from Dr. Nicodemus as he passed.

Dialogue line.

“No, I’m Henrietta Snodgrass. Mary couldn’t be here today.” said George.

“I can take a message if you like.” said Fred.

Forty-fifth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Is that who that man is? Well, news to me, we don’t talk much.” said Lee.

“Or see each other, honestly, I think he just uses the place for the owls to drop off his post.” said George.

“And for someone to wash his socks.” said Fred.

“This is a serious matter, boys.” said Flitwick, “But thank you for the levity.”

Forty-sixth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Forty-seventh paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Forty-eighth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“No wonder Mum had to go.” said Charlie.
“Bet his mother is so proud of him.” said Hermione darkly.

“His mother left him in the care of his grandfather, she hasn’t been seen since. ..no one knows for certain who his father is.” said Dumbledore.

“So he could have been a muggle, or a muggle born too.” said Hermione with a small, gleeful smile.

“It is a possibility, Yaxley’s grandfather was always adamant about that the father was a wizard of a pureblood status, but no one can verify that for certain.” said Dumbledore thoughtfully, his eyes twinkling.

“Damn bitch.” muttered Harry.

“Sure it was OLLIVANDER!” said Katie loudly.

“Steady now, there have been many times that I wanted to wipe the floor with Death Eaters while I was waiting for them to let their guard down, but it’s best to bide your time and watch for them to make themselves look like fools.” scolded Moody.

Voldemort’s eyes widened slightly.
“Oh, thank goodness…now we just have to get it, easy…right?” said Ron.

“And you are not a human.” said Dr. Clark with a scowl.

The scowl faded way to a snort.

“Yeah, of someone else’s family.” muttered Charlie.

“Yeah, who wants to be associated with you?” said Bill.

“Wait, does that mean we’re related to her too?” said Ron his face a sickly shade of green.

“Thankfully, to those sitting around you, she is not related to you.” said Dumbledore.

“Unfortunately, the person she is closest related to would indeed be…Harry.”

“I could have done without that knowledge thank you.” said Harry.

“My deepest sympathies, but I do enjoy entertaining the possibilities of how her life would have been like had you have known she was a relation and being the head of the Potter family and all…” Dumbledore eyes twinkled in amusement.

“‘He’s saying you could have made her life a living social hell.” said Sirius happily.

Harry chuckled, though he had to repress a wince.
“This…won’t end well.” groaned Moody covering his eyes.

End of fifty-seventh paragraph.

“If you’re aiming for a mass panic, you’re going to get it.” said Kingsley with a groan.

Fifty-eighth paragraph, second sentence.

“Idiot boy, at least keep your hand and wand in your cloak!” said Moody sharply.

“Can we not invite him to the chapters where we have missions?” said Harry quietly.

“He’s the best, but yeah, a silencing charm wouldn’t go amiss sometimes.” said Sirius.

“I heard that.” growled Moody.

“And perhaps that ‘Muffliato’ charm as well.” added Sirius.

End of fifty-eighth paragraph.

“You’re faster than Yaxley, but that’s nothing to be proud of, he’s slower than a flobberworm in January.” said Kingsley.

Fifty-ninth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Not the important part, here!” said Chief Hawkeye.

Dialogue line.

Sixtieth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Sixty-first paragraph.

Dumbledore smiled fondly.

Dialogue line.

Sixty-second paragraph.
“Well, this is going to blow her mind, isn’t it?” said Alicia.

“Change of heart? Runcorn doesn’t not simply have a change of heart., and Mafalda’s name isn’t Hermione.” said Rudolph.

“Experiment later, or better yet, you should have done this earlier.” said Moody.

“Most likely confused as to how the hell Runcorn doesn’t know how to remove the chains.” said Terry.

“Prayer?” said Dean.

“Especially right now.” said Sirius.
“Not so much of an official position, ‘Run so we can’t find you.’” said Hermione.

“Oh boy this is going to be awkward, hopefully Ron can find a way around this or he’s going to be married for a bit.” said Fred.

“Sorry Hermione, he’s a family man now.” said George.

“Okay, we’re going to give you that…” said George.

“That was pretty funny.” said Fred.

“Well, I knew there was going to be a backlash to taking my eye back.” said Moody.
“Shit.” muttered Sirius.

 Dialogue line.
 Dialogue set.
 Dialogue line.
 Dialogue line.

 Seventy-second paragraph.
 Dialogue line.
 Dialogue line.
 Dialogue line.

 Lionus, Chief Hawkeye and the Aurors in the room all looked excited for a moment.

 “Damn son, that’s….phew….” said Chief Hawkeye.

 Dialogue line.
 Dialogue set.
 Dialogue line.

 Seventy-third paragraph.

 “Oh bloody hell, you couldn’t stay home for fifteen more bloody minutes, you bloody idiot?” shouted Ron.

 “Oh, no! Our cover!” said Hermione worriedly. “We’re going to be caught!”

 “The book still a bit thicker, you might escape…” soothed Neville.

 “Perhaps we spend weeks in torture, sure the books just focus on one year in Harry’s life, but so much could happen in a year, so much…” Hermione nearly wailed.

 “Calm down, and just listen, this hasn’t happened and it won’t happen now.” said Officer McFinn calmly.

 Dialogue line.

 Seventy-fourth paragraph.

 Seventy-fifth paragraph.
“Oh, I’d love to be able to punch people like that.” said Harry with a fond smile, the salve on his back alleviating the pain.

“It’s a nice feeling, let me tell you.” said Dudley, “Especially when they’re your size.”

“Bet they fly farther when you’re bigger than them too though, eh Big D?” said Harry with a wicked smirk.

Dudley looked away with a blush. Inspector looked between the two of them and fixed Harry with a quirked brow.

“Can you imagine if she had kissed him?” said Fred.

“Oh Ron, you homewrecker you!” teased George.

Moody shook his head. “Something went wrong, better get out of there immediately.”

“Hope Kreacher doesn’t get the door then.” said Ron.

“That’s the end then? Good, into bed with you.” said Dr. Nicodemus taking Harry by the arm.

“Three….two…one…there you go.” Dr. Nicodemus counted until Harry fell limply into his arms, completely unconscious. “Even moderate doses knocks a person out.”

“What in the world kind of medicine do you keep giving him?” said Sirius taking Harry’s other arm and lifting him into the air bridal style.

“He’s dramatic.” said Lionus.

“You’re overdue for your physical, do you really want to be poking fun?” said Dr. Nicodemus.
without looking at Lionus.

“Never mind.”
Once again, I’m not dead, but I was unemployed for a little while. If you remember, I had said that my the Corporation that my store belonged to had gone out of business so I was working tirelessly to close the store down and then to give myself another month of paychecks I went to go and close another store down, my lord was that fun, the kids in that town were entitled little sh^ts, because we were closing, they thought they could bring in their SKATEBOARDS AND BICYCLES and ride through the store, I never had to ask kids at my own store to leave, but I must have escorted at least 3 sets out.

Absolutely ridiculous.

Once that was over, I went to go and take a few days of rest for myself, then, while I was on the break and afterwards I was applying to so many different jobs that I completely lost track of them all as well as time.

After about a month (let me tell you, filing for Unemployment sucks, but it’s a good thing that it does suck or everyone would want to do it) I finally got a new job! However, now I get up before the sun even had it’s first cup of coffee and I spend either 6-10 hours at work every day I work, then when I get home, I eat, shower and then hop right to bed, the only days I have time to type is when I have the day off, but even then, that has to compete with everything else that has to get done.

So I am back, and I’m going to do my best to get back on some sort of regular posting schedule, though it may have to be every two weeks. It’s not going to be every week unless I can come up with a healthy balance of my time.

The next morning, Harry had woke refreshed and stretched languidly as Dr. Nicodemus poured him a small glass beaker of medicine that didn’t taste as badly as he feared.

“They want to give you the option, continue on today, or take the day off, or get a late start, or call it an early day after a little while.” said Dr. Nicodemus taking a final check of his eyes.

Harry waited till the Ranger physician was done with his examination before he answered. “What does Glacier say?”

Nicodemus placed his little instruments away. “He says it’s up to you, as long as you continue the readings at least once this week there shouldn’t be any problem. Just have to remember that you cannot run from the books forever, and you don’t want to put your and the rest of these people’s lives on hold.”

Harry thought for a moment. “So he’s saying…”

“In his own special way? Get off the pot.” smirked Nicodemus.

Harry opted to have a fairly late start so that they (meaning him as everyone else had eaten) could have a calm breakfast and then he joined the others in the den.
“So…how are you feeling?” asked Inspector Homes.

“He must be feeling better, if that doctor let him out of bed.” said Dudley.

“That doesn’t quite mean much, if you’ve seen how many times he’s passed out in the middle of a chapter.” muttered Sirius.

“Don’t pick a fight, trust me.” said Lionus.

Remus and Tonks were sitting in the usual spots, Tonks only seemed a little cold towards Remus when she and he met each other’s gazes, but they seemed to have patched things up…for the moment.

Office McFinn smirked and read the chapter title. “This next one is called Fourteenth Chapter Title.”

“A title? we don’t normally get a title!” said Ron.

“Well, we used to, we haven’t in a while.” corrected Hermione.

“Not much since he started reading.” said Ron.

“I don’t want to ruin any surprises.” smirked Officer McFinn.

First paragraph, first sentence.

“I hope you kids get to cover soon, and that you didn’t just appear in front of a group of muggles.” said Kingsley.

First paragraph, second sentence, first comma.

“I kept forgetting to breathe the first few times I apparated.” said Charlie. “Scared Mum a few times.”

“Well of course it scared me, three times you turned blue because you forgot to breathe!” said Mrs. Weasley.

First paragraph, fourth sentence.

Fred and George looked at each other and lifted Ron’s foot by the ankle.

“Get off me.” said Ron shaking his foot loose.

End of paragraph.

Second paragraph, first sentence, third comma.

“And especially how…”
“‘You can’t apparate on castle grounds.’” chanted Ron and Harry together.

End of second paragraph.

“Aye, that’s one thing you can’t say about the Forbidden Forest, it’s not clear.” said Sirius with a snicker.

Third paragraph, second sentence.

Ron’s mouth hung open but closed tightly when his mother came up from behind him and held him tightly.

End of third paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Mr. Weasley reached over to Ron’s seat and took a strong grip on his knee.

Fourth paragraph.

Mrs. McFinn screamed horribly as she heard the description. Dr. Clark held her, his own eyes shut.

“I don’t think we want to hear about you apparating for a little while.” said Dr. Clark weakly.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Fifth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Oi, it’s not easy to go into a girl’s purse and pull out one thing.” said Harry weakly.

Sixth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Seventh paragraph.

The Gryffindor Chasers winced and squirmed.
“Should have practiced a few healing spells before the end of the prior year.” drawled Snape.

“Maybe Harry knows a few…” started Dennis.

“I have no clue what I do or do not know at this point.” said Harry.

“Not the best choice for when you’re trying to flee.” said Dumbledore.

“Never go back to the safe house immediately if you’re being chased.” lectured Moody.

“We’ll bear that in mind.” said Fred.

“If he saw the number on the door and they had a suspicion on what street you were on, then most assuredly.” said Dumbledore in a somber tone.

“Summon Kreacher and get him out of there at least.” said Dudley gesturing towards the book. “Then he can at least be safe, and maybe bring your things to you.”

“Knowing them, they don’t think about it.” said Snape, “Generally a logical response is not quite in their arsenal.”

“I’m sort of stunned that Dudley can be logical.” said Harry.
“I got a souvenir at least.” said Fred, holding out an invisible item.

“Stupid of you to risk the mission…but thanks, Potter.” said Moody.

“Lovely, can we do it again?” said Ron.

“Close.” said Ron.

“Never go where wizards have seen you in before.” said Moody. “It puts them in danger best stick to Muggle places.”

“Safest place I know is Buckingham Palace, but I’d never risk her.” said Harry.

“Let’s switch that to a yes, if you’re on the run, never a good idea to stay in one place.” said Sirius.

“Words of experience.” said Remus with a minute trace of a tease.
“Now we just have to hope she remembers how to hide the haze.” said Flitwick quietly.

“You really were prepared…” said Ron in awe.

“Always the tone of surprise.” Hermione replied warmly.

“Hermione! Did you steal poor Perkins’ tent?” said George in a scandalized voice.

“Harry, you’re such a horrible influence on her!” said Fred.

The younger Weasley children blinked. “We could have been in our tent in less than two seconds had we set up the tent that way at the Cup?” said Ron.

“At least Dad had fun.” said Ginny.

Dumbledore stroked his beard thoughtfully.
“Wrong choice of words.” said Terry wincing slightly.

“I’ll be getting back to you; don’t you worry about it.” said Harry coolly.

“Might have to have a talk amongst themselves about security questions…” said George.

“Or Mrs. Cattermole being seen with a much younger man…either one.” added Fred quietly.

“Thanks for that little boost of morale.” said Dean.

“Having a wand or not does not mean that you cannot apparate, if she is able to apparate, she can.” said Dumbledore.

“Mary can’t.” said Mrs. Weasley in a frenzied whisper. “She’s never been able to do it without almost hurting herself, she’s terrified of it.”

Harry rolled his eyes with a slightly fond smile.
“If you had lost it, I’m not going to be all that happy...we’d be going back for it.” said Harry.

“We were a little busy!” said Hermione.

“And we’re not that lucky.” said Harry. “The harder part is still there.”

“Don’t open it yet!” whispered Dumbledore his grip tightened on the chair he was sitting in.

“Alohomora? You expect it to open with that?” said Voldemort, looking at the Boy Who Lived in confusion.

“Throw it in acid?” said Dudley.
“I like his answer.” said Lionus with a smirk.

Dialogue line.

Chief Hawkeye slapped a hand to his forehead. “Don’t put the dark magic item on yourself! The girl only wrote in the diary and look what happened to her! Dumbledore only had to put on the ring once and he was dead in a matter of months!”

Dialogue line.

“Not that I could go anywhere anyway.” said Ron.

Twenty-sixth paragraph, second sentence.

“Well, there’s some protein for you, catch a squirrel.” said Lionus.

Lavender and Pavarti looked horrified.

End of twenty-sixth paragraph.

Twenty-seventh paragraph, first sentence.

“Hope you know the difference between the good and bad kind of mushrooms.” said Harry weakly. “Or we may be in just as incapacitated as Ron.”

End of twenty-seventh paragraph.

“Nice…” said Hermione with a smirk to Ron.

“I’m injured…I’ve got other things to think about.” said Ron weakly.

Twenty-eighth paragraph.

“Well, next time, you can find the mushrooms and cook them.” said Hermione firmly.

“Sure, not sure why we had you cook anyway.” said Harry.

Twenty-ninth paragraph.

Thirtieth paragraph.

“Take…it…off…” the Chief said slowly.
Thirty-first paragraph.
“I’m with him, take the damn thing off.” said Sirius quickly.

Thirty-second paragraph, seventh sentence, first colon.
“He comes when he’s called, call him!” shouted Harry towards the book version of himself.

Thirty-second paragraph, eighth sentence.
“Unless the house-elf is ordered by it’s master or mistress, they can’t bring anyone else with them.” said Dumbledore.

End of thirty-second paragraph.

Thirty-third paragraph, third sentence.
“I did not have the Stone.” said Dumbledore kindly.

End of thirty-third paragraph.

Thirty-fourth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Thirty-fifth paragraph.
“Well, someone’s going to be on a naughty list for a thousand years.” said Dudley.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Thirty-sixth paragraph.

Thirty-seventh paragraph.
“So…he told the truth, but that doesn’t quite guarantee that he’ll live.” said Harry.

Thirty-eighth paragraph.

Dialogue line.
Dumbledore closed his eyes, a moment of silence for the old wandmaker.

“Good luck with that one, mate.” said Ron.

“Wasn’t enough luck, I guess.” said Ron.

“Quit nagging Ron.” said Fred.
“Go back to bed.” said George.

“I know, I know!” said Hermione held her hands up in defeat.
“Book version of you doesn’t.” said Lionus chuckling to himself.

“Let me tell you what had happened!” said Harry.
“At least someone’s on my side.” said Harry quietly, “But we’d better not let Hermione know.”

“Which means that a new wand is not what he wanted.” said Kingsley.

“That may mean that you only saw it once and it was very fleeting.” said Bill. “We won’t find out where for a long time.”

“No, I believe he has all that he could want for the moment, he may make another one, if it all goes horribly wrong.” said Dumbledore, stroking his beard.

“And maybe to replace the ones that were destroyed.” quipped Hannah.
“I don’t believe he has the strength to replace the ones he has lost.” said Dumbledore, pointedly ignoring the growl that the Dark Lord sent his way.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Fiftieth paragraph.

Fifty-first paragraph, first sentence.

Dumbledore smiled.

End of fifty-first paragraph.

Fifty-second paragraph, first sentence.

“Wasn’t us, Mum!” said the twins together.

End of chapter

“Want to bet that Harry remembers who the thief is in less than four chapters?” whispered Fred.

“I’m in.” said Neville.
“Don’t leave without us!” said Ron quickly.

“Or don’t leave the tent without telling us!” added Hermione with a frantic tone to her voice.

“What in the world are you looking for a tree like that for?” asked George.

“Oh.” mumbled George quietly, looking a little sheepish.

“A gnarled tree, eh?” mused Moody. “I’d prefer on the shores of Azkaban, make sure no one else escapes the prison.” he added with a pointed look to Sirius.

“I was innocent.” said Sirius dully.

“You still escaped…not altogether keen on that.” said Moody.

“Being flushed down the loo is preferable to being stuck on her door.” said Moody gruffly.

“Why mark the tree?” asked Dean.

“Maybe I want to come back to it.” shrugged Harry. “This hasn’t happened yet, I don’t know.”

“Provided you aren’t hoping for it to have mayonnaise, we can’t work miracles you know.” said Fred.

“Wish Muggles had that ability.” said Dr. Clark. “I hate going on a camping holiday and the grounds are just littered with crisp packages and beer bottles.”
“I hope that it was a coincidence.” said Dumbledore closing his eyes in a silent prayer. “And not them knowing precisely where you are.”

“And it is a good thing that you didn’t cast one, everyone that knows you will be on the look out for a Stag patronus,” said Kingsley. “Hermione’s was seen at the Ministry as well, the only one that’s safe to use is Ron’s.”

“I’m going to take a pass on saying ‘Insert dirty joke here’.” whispered Fred.

“They’re trying to draw out any resistors.” said Moody.

“Avoiding Dementors or not having food for a little bit longer…” said Charlie raising and lowering his hands as if he were weighing something. “I’ll pick avoiding Dementors.”

“You’ll say that now, but you’re a male Weasley, you’ll pick food.” said Mrs. Weasley, a faint smile on her lips.

“You’ve had an immense amount of pressure placed on your shoulders, why just in the prior book I failed…and your stumble was far less devastating than mine.” said Dumbledore.

“Well, this isn’t going to end well…” said Fred.
“Nope.” agreed George.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Harry groaned softly. “Oh not again…”

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set, second sentence.

“Nover talk till she’s done with her epiphany, bad things happen.” said Harry, as Ron nodded.

End of dialogue set.

“I thought Ron was wearing it.” said Dennis.

“I never said Ron was wearing it, the locket was only worn by Harry so far.” said Officer McFinn.

“Oh oops.” said Dennis.

Seventh paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Chief Hawkeye threw his hands up in despair. “Never wear dark magic items!”

Dialogue set, first sentence, third comma.

“Oh, not this again.” mumbled Harry.

End of dialogue set.

“He was possessed by stupidity, but nothing more than that.”

“Thank…you…Severus.” replied Dumbledore, though his eyes were filled with a slight mirth.

Dialogue set.
“Also, her possession and mine are really different. I’d know right off if he tried to possess me.” said Harry. “You know, with all the pain and agony.”

Dialogue line.

“Sadly, that’s not a better option.” said Chief Hawkeye, “if you have to grab it quickly in order to flee, you’re screwed if you misplace it.”

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

Chief Hawkeye gave a muffled shout as he put his hands over his face. “Put it in a box, and then put it in your purse! You can’t summon the locket directly, but you can summon the box, with the locket in it!”

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Eighth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Umm…you might want to put it somewhere where the family might be able to find it.” said Mr. Weasley with a chuckle. “I don’t go into the coop at our place and expect to find money.”

Ninth paragraph, first sentence, second comma.

“Easy there, hamster boy.” said Alicia with a giggle.

End of ninth paragraph.

Tenth paragraph.

Eleventh paragraph, first sentence.

“Not to mention that you had the locket on.” said Hermione.

Eleventh paragraph, second sentence.

Dudley turned white and stared at Harry. “We didn’t…we really didn’t do that…did we?”

“Sure did.” said Harry plainly as several members of the group snarled at the floor.
“But…when you were sent to your cup…your room, Mum would ask Dad if he gave you something to eat, she’d do it later…but…he always said yes.” said Dudley softly.

Harry looked slowly over to Dudley and stared. “What? But at the zoo, when you turned eleven she wasn’t all that keen on…”

“I heard her, that night she asked Dad to go down and give you an apple or something.” said Dudley. “I always heard her say that you needed to eat, you were attracting too much attention from the neighbors for being so skinny. They were asking if you had a…eating disorder or something.”

Sirius, Dr. Clark, Mrs. McFinn and Officer McFinn blinked. “I’m going to go and kill that son of a…” muttered Sirius.

“Line forms behind me.” said Officer McFinn darkly.

Eleventh paragraph, third sentence.

“It’s the locket.” said Ginny in a hushed tone. “I hope it’s just that…”

“Why just that?” asked Neville.

“They just started, and if they’re falling apart now…”

End of eleventh paragraph.

“Oh boy…” said Ron cringing slightly. “I don’t like how that’s going to sound.”

Dialogue set, second sentence.

“You’re the chessmaster, you plan something.” said Hermione tightly.

“Ah…” said Harry quietly as he Ron exchanged a look.

“If you think our collective plans go to hell, imagine how mine turn out.” said Ron. “Second year…oof, it was far from pretty, if Harry hadn’t done something, we would have been kicked out…”

“When was this?” asked Hermione in shock. “Where was I?”

“You were in the hospital wing, the whole Polyjuice thing.” said Ron.

End of dialogue set.

Twelfth paragraph, second sentence, first semi-colon.

Voldemort snorted.
A scowl appeared.

The sneer returned.

"Sort of adorable how you think this is something we were going to be able to do in a short amount of time, this is a task that was going to at least take months, maybe a few years.” said Harry.

“So…we may not know how this was going to end?” said Colin softly.

“Not really a guarantee, it only depicts seven years of my life, it could be missing a lot of stuff once a few months before my eighteenth birthday comes around. We could fail horribly and never know.” said Harry.

“Of course you’re going to fail…if you hadn’t of had…help…I doubt you would have gotten very far. I’d wager I’ll find you and kill you before Christmas…If I make it merciful, well, all the better present to give you.” said Voldemort smoothly, his eyes fixed on Harry’s.

“Shut up.” snapped Lionus slapping the back of Voldemort’s head. “You’re starting to lose my amusement.”

“Well, bugger off then.” said Harry, his lips twitching.

“Well, perhaps…but…chances are…they would not have something so powerful laying out in the open…and they have no notion that Tom Riddle was in fact Lord Voldemort. I don’t believe that they would dare to promote that their old employee was the Dark Lord himself.” said Dumbledore thoughtfully.
“Ah, but I hadn’t found the Chamber of Secrets, I would need several hundred more years in Hogwarts in order to find all what the school holds, I daresay.” said Dumbledore brightly.

“Bloody year one all over again.” muttered Harry.

“If the name is jinxed, then it is a good plan, the only ones that would dare say his name would be the ones trying to oppose him.” said Dumbledore thoughtfully.

“It’s like home…to the both of us.” whispered Harry with a soft shrug.

“We’ve been resisting the temptation to do it for years.” said Fred.

“It helps to not be around him more than what is absolutely necessary.” said George.

“Your point?” said Seamus.
“Not to say that he didn’t already have the item somewhere else hidden in the school, and this was just going to be a two part errand. Nothing saying that he didn’t stop off somewhere else before or after the meeting to drop it off or pick it up again.” said Harry.

Dialogue line.

“A little hasty to do that, in my opinion.” said Dumbledore.

Sixteenth paragraph.

“Maybe it’s a stapler.” said Dr. Clark with a snicker. “Good luck with that.”

Dialogue line.

“By all means, waste your time.” said Voldemort coolly. “Improves my chances of finding you.”

Dialogue set.

Voldemort twitched slightly, but Harry noticed it. A small smile on his face.

“Hope you never played poker, Riddle.” he added absently.

Seventeenth paragraph, third sentence, second comma.

A few people chuckled.

End of seventeenth paragraph.

The chuckling stopped.

Eighteenth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Nineteenth paragraph, second sentence, first comma.

“Seeing it from Harry’s scar might not be the best thing to hope for.” said Remus.
“It’s not a good idea to be fixated on one thing, and completely ignore what the enemy is doing.” said Moody.

“Ooh….paranoia…or if they’re actually talking about you, shame on them.” said Tonks. “You didn’t beg for them to come along.”

“Which is stupid to think that, I shared all I knew with them…well…most of what I knew.” said Harry.

“From what I’m gathering, you’re doing a fine job.” said Dumbledore.

“How can you tell…not that I’m saying you’re not!” she added looking at Harry quickly.

“You three aren’t dead yet.” Moody said plainly.

“But that would be the most likely out of any of the suggestions you three had come up with so far that we’ve heard. That and one other place.” said Dumbledore with a kind smile.

“Are we stuck eating only mushrooms, or is there something else we can eat?” muttered Ron, temporarily forgetting Hermione was sitting right next to him and being violently remembered when she swatted his arm.

“Your mother has had plenty of practice at feeding people with magic.” said Harry.

“And the food is already there dear…” said Mrs. Weasley.
“Okay, time to change the jewelry around.” said Harry, “Before you get attacked by birds again.”

“I’ll get you a mirror so you can make sure you get all the feathers out of your hair.” replied Hermione coldly.

“Hasn’t happened yet!” said Ron leaning a bit away from Hermione.

“Why…am I not in charge of the food?” groaned Harry. “Why is she in charge of the food?”

“I don’t cook with magic, you don’t need magic to cook!” said Harry.

“I’ll eat that, you can have the rest of mine.” said Harry quickly.

“But it’s been on the ground.” said Dudley with a cringe.

“Not like I haven’t eaten off the floor before.” said Harry. “At least your floors were cleaner then a tent’s.”

Dudley stared again.

“I’m hoping it’s not what we think.” said Harry holding his hands up.
“Crud…” said Harry. “I was hoping that I was just siding with Ron for some bizarre reason.”

“Get ready to fight.” said Moody tensely.

“Ah…” said Fred with a fond smile.

“Bless…” George added kindly.

“Why do I get the feeling that I did things a little harder?” said Harry with a weary chuckle. “And if that’s how I did it, why didn’t I think of salmon…I love salmon.”

“Goblins, I shouldn’t wonder.” said Bill. “If I was going to describe gobbledygook, that would be it.”

“Called it.” said Bill.
“Daddy!” breathed Tonks.

“Hey, I’m on the run too! Hope I keep on the run.” said Dean hopefully.

“Looks like some others aren’t just lying down and taking it.” said Mr. Weasley.

“But seriously, how many times has Dawlish been attacked now? He needs a bit more retraining.” said Moody, “I’ll whip him into shape in no time.”

“Or make him as nervous as a cat in a dog pound.” whispered Hermione quietly.

“That’ll get just about anyone in firing range killed.” said Hannah.
“You might not want to know,” said Bill.

“Oh, but we’re going to try and pick up what’s missing,” said Ron.

“Oh, this ought to be good…hope this a lucky break,” said Charlie leaning forward in his chair.

“Well…that sounds like a stupid thing to do,” said Ginny. “The kids there are kind of at the mercy of the teachers…or in this case Carrows.”

Ginny made a choking sound.

“What was that you said about it being stupid, little sister?” said Fred weakly.
Thirty-seventh paragraph.

Dialogue set.

“So this is what they come up with when we’re not there.” said George shaking his head.

“Pathetic, I say.” said Fred.

“We’ve let her down, who knew we had to take her by the hand…Ginny…we’re so sorry.” said George somberly.

“We’ll pick up lessons in pranking and all beings sneaky once we’re done for the day,” said Fred.

“Oh, you will not!” scolded Mrs. Weasley.

“Yeah…not without me!” said Ron quietly.

Fred and George looked at Ron pointedly, giving him an appraising look. “We’ll do our best.”

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

Thirty-eighth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Harry blinked. “What?”

“Say what?” parroted Voldemort.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Voldemort snarled as Harry looked concerned.

Thirty-ninth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Mr. Weasley made to stand up, but Bill grabbed his arm tightly. “It’s the way they are Dad, and it
“I’m not too sure I have enough power in me to give him more than a broken leg.” said Harry.

“I would have said parchment cut.” drawled Snape.

“I would side with Harry, though I believe he could injure me far worse than that.” said Dumbledore absently.

“Still buying the manure when there’s a perfectly good sale on the gold, huh?” said Leroy.

“…Not something you often hear.” said Sirius leaning over to Dumbledore.

Fortieth paragraph.

Luna stiffened slightly.

“Be thankful he’s vanished.” said Chief Hawkeye.
“And I’m pretty sure they’d be singing it from the rooftops if that had happened.” said Dr. Clark squeezing Mrs. McFinn’s hand tightly.

“Oh...not him.” groaned Sirius.

“Not that he hears it much.” said Dumbledore kindly.

“Ooo, he won’t like that.” said Dumbledore chuckling.

“That’s debatable.” said Harry.
“Don’t take the bait.” said Sirius.

“We helped, be happy.” said Luna dreamily.

“Oh, we did that ages ago, if you had cared, you would have visited a long time ago.” said Ron.

The teachers blinked heavily. That was a token detention…not quite what they were expecting.
“How would you like to meet a jar of turpentine?” snapped Dr. Clark.

“I wish, but unfortunately, I cannot leap into his paintings. I could travel to his painting on the wall, but I cannot leave the school through just any painting.” said Dumbledore.

Harry thought for a brief instance and looked at the Headmaster, “Hope you don’t mind, but I want a copy of whatever painting you have of yourself.”

Dumbledore was stunned for a moment, but he spoke again, his voice thick with emotion. “I would be honored.”

“How you say that now…” said Ron.
“That would mean…if asked…he would have.” said Sirius. “And he still may.”

“And you always do that.” said nearly everyone collectively.

Dumbledore smiled at the room surrounding him. “Do I?”
“Don’t be too sure.” said Dumbledore holding a finger up.

“Mmm…” said Dumbledore lowering the finger with an apologetic smile.

“Well, why weren’t you saying anything?” said Harry.

“Fracking locket…” muttered Colin.

“We’re having enough fun with all these other puzzles, don’t add another one to the pile.” said Harry.
“You wanted to come along, you wanted to join on this scavenger hunt. We’re supposed to be a team effort here.” said Harry hotly.

“Don’t you have a stove in there?” asked Dennis.

“I’m assuming that you don’t know how to cause the smoke to be invisible.” said Flitwick.

“You’re bloody wearing one of the achievements.” said Katie.

“Yeee….don’t bring Mummy into this.” offered Harry to his book self.

“You’ve been in on it the whole time, why would you think I was holding something back?” said Harry.

“Well, why don’t you have a plan in your pocket? You’re smart, real smart! If you weren’t so busy pussyfooting around and just use those smarts you have, we’d be in and out of all this mess by now!” shouted Ron, suddenly surprised that he said it out loud.

“I don’t know why I’m not doing what I should be doing!” said Harry hotly. “This hasn’t happened yet, and it won’t!”

“Moving on!” shouted Officer McFinn.
“Go find a Basilisk, that shouldn’t be too hard, we’ll wait here. On your way back, pick up some milk.” said Harry.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Oh, thanks!” said Harry.

Dialogue line.

Sixty-second paragraph.

“Which is a damn good achievement.” said Moody.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue set.

“She’s with Hagrid, I’d trust him with my life!” said Harry standing up. Sirius pulled Harry back down and patted his back.

“He’s not saying that now, it won’t happen. Calm down.”

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“‘They’ve got Bill scarred, George’s missing an ear and you’ve got Spattergroit, that’s what they’re talking about!’ said Harry sharply.

“And we know that how?” said Ron hotly. “Cause we’ve only got your point of view on all this!”

“Well no shit it’s on my point of view! They’re my Memorial Books!”

Voldemort sat back and watched what was unfolding before his eyes with amusement a pleased smirk on his face.

It took Ron’s mother and Charlie to calm Ron down and then they resumed the reading.

Dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

“Go nuts.” said Sirius pushing Harry forward in the sofa. Harry didn’t get off the sofa, instead he fixed Ron with a hard stare. “We’re going to finish a few more, and then you and I…we’re going to have a little talk.”

Ron looked a bit concerned at that point.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Sixty-third paragraph.

Dialogue set.

Hermione looked fearfully between the two of them.

Dialogue line.

Sixty-fourth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“She’s not just going to lie down and let herself be found, you idiot.’ said Harry.

End of chapter.

“Well, both out here and in the book is awkward.” said George.

“Carry on, Mr. Puh-lease-man.” said Fred.
Officer McFinn shook his head, but turned his gaze to the next chapter.
First paragraph, fourth sentence.
Fred and George looked over at Harry with disgusted expressions on both their faces.
“You’re really morbid in the morning.”

End of first paragraph.

Second paragraph.
“He’s giving you some credit Ron, he’s leaving open that tiny window that you’d be back to them if given a chance…both for time and a moment to clear your head.” said Katie.
“Though, all night could qualify as enough time.” said Alicia quietly.
“It took them months the last time and that was just because Ron didn’t believe Harry…and it wasn’t nearly that dramatic that time.” said Angelina.

Third paragraph.
“It’s all sorts of awkward now.” said Dean.

Fourth paragraph.
Fifth paragraph, second sentence.
“So…don’t expect any sort of jokes in this chapter, eh?” said Terry.

End of fifth paragraph.
“So there you go, using the brains you have.” said Ron.
“I could have told him the spells we were using and taught him and you.” said Hermione.
“…Oh…right…” said Ron. “But he is smart.”
“Someone take the shovel away.” said Harry.

Sixth paragraph, second sentence, first comma.
“Well, that would make going to the Weasely’s for the holidays a bit awkward. ‘Hey, pass the mash potatoes…you…’” said Dean pointing in Ron’s direction.

Sixth paragraph, fourth sentence, first comma.

“Having Weasley go back to Hogwarts where Death Eaters are in charge would be incredibly stupid.” said Moody gruffly.

“So…give him five minutes to get there.” whispered George.

Sixth paragraph.

“Or it could make you seem really creepy.” giggled Hannah softly.

“I’ll go with creepy.” said Ginny teasingly.

“Fine…I’ll go stare at…no, never mind.” chuckled Harry.

Seventh paragraph.

“I’ll accept whatever anger you wish to place in me, but perhaps I might have had a plan set in store for you…to receive the sword at a safe moment?”

“At least we’ll hope that’s what you had planned.” said Sirius.

“I do too.” the Headmaster agreed.

Eighth paragraph.

“Make sure you’re not wearing the locket!” warned Remus.

Ninth paragraph, second sentence.

Dumbledore smiled, “He always had a penchant for taking part in others’ business.”

“Must be a requirement for becoming Headmaster.” said Lionus with a snort.

End of ninth paragraph.

“I don’t know if I’d be able to resist such temptation.” said Sirius.

“Don’t give yourself any credit, you’d have not resistance to doing that.” said Remus.
“Yeah, you got that right.” said Ginny and Neville together, though Neville said it a lot quieter then Ginny.

“Don’t care…” said Ginny. “I don’t really feel like getting abducted so I might be bait to lure Harry out.”

“Good thing he did that then.” said Harry quietly, looking at the red head pointedly. “I’d come in a heartbeat.”

“And you’d be dead in one too, I’d rather not ever be the reason you got caught.” retorted Ginny.

Harry held his hands up in a surrendering gesture.

“Sure, you’ll avoid a fight with her…” frowned Ron.

“I’m border lining suicidal, not stupid.” said Harry. “It’s a joke, it’s a joke!” he added quickly at several people’s gasp and squeaks of horror.

“Not a very good one.” said Sirius weakly.

“And we’ve had our share of duds.” replied Remus.

“Priorities, Potter.” said Chief Hawkeye with a laugh.
“It always does.” said Bill.

“Well, you’ve done one, you might as well do the other.” said Charlie.

“Pity.” said Sirius.

“Couldn’t you take holiday to the Bahamas or something?” said Neville. “At least warm yourselves up.”

“Are you kidding, we’d never leave.” said Harry.

“Compared to sometimes sketchy mushrooms…yeah.” said Harry.

Dumbledore smiled warmly.

“This may get you brownie points to get what you want.” said Leroy.
Fifteenth paragraph.
Dialogue set.
Chief Hawkeye blinked.

Dialogue line.
“Doesn’t mean he doesn’t know what it is!” said Colin excitedly.
“Or I just might not know what it is.” said Harry tiredly.

Dialogue set.
Dialogue line.
Dialogue line.
Dialogue line.
Dialogue line.
“Not what she was looking for, I don’t think.” said Ron.

Sixteenth paragraph.
Dialogue line.
Dialogue line.
Dialogue line.
Dialogue line.
Dialogue line.

Seventeenth paragraph.
Dialogue line.

Eighteenth paragraph.
“He didn’t unite his followers under a particular symbol.” said Dumbledore. “Like someone else I know, actually, two people.”

Dialogue line.

Nineteenth paragraph.
Dialogue line.
“Because it is not a symbol of Dark Magic.” said Dumbledore.
“Or he recognized the symbol as something else.” said Rudolph. “Using the context.”

Moody sighed. “If you’re going to go, be prepared.”

“Are you sure you were listening?” said Seamus.

“I don’t think I would have put anything in Godric Hollow, it would seem to obvious a place. Though I could be wrong.” said Dumbledore thoughtfully.

“Wow…really?” said Dean.

Hermione rolled her eyes.

Harry and Ron laughed loudly, “We’ll never admit to reading it.”
“Hey…I’ve been having an off…year…” said Harry defensively, though he said it with a smile.

“Ah…nostalgic memories.” said Fred.

“It’s been so long…”

“Nearly eight months.” said the twins together.

“Huh, you learn something new every day.” said Ron.

Hermione groaned. “We’ve had this book since our first year! You should have read it at least seven times by now!”

“After all the side stepping and separate paths we’ve gone on, I’m not sure that it’s going to be all the easy to find the sword.” said Harry. “I’m thinking I just want to see…”

“We got it.” said Sirius patting Harry’s back fondly.

Harry scratched the back of his head sheepishly.
“Hope we avoid the awkwardness.” said Ginny.

“How you remember that she called my ankles skinny, I’m not sure…” said Hermione with a smirk over to Harry.

End of dialogue set.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Twenty-fifth paragraph.

“Don’t do that!” said Harry with a surprised laugh.

“Sorry!” said Hermione, laughing as well.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

“Absolutely not!” said Dumbledore shaking his head and waving his hands quickly.

“Bathilda and something pointy that’s not a quill is a disaster waiting to happen!” said Sirius. “And she doesn’t even hurt herself.”

“Remember when someone got her that silver cutlery for her birthday?” said Remus. “I don’t know how she managed to get all the knives and forks embedded in the bell in the church tower.”

“Then that time she had all her knitting needles chasing after us that night, I wasn’t sure we were going to get away with as little injuries as we did.” said Sirius rubbing his back absently. “It was like running from an army of angry knarls. To this day she said all she was trying to do was knit a sweater for James.”

“She just about put my eye out when she bought a silver unicorn horn from the apothecary. It wasn’t in her bag for longer than a half an hour!” said Remus.

“But…she bakes.” said Harry.

“And she doesn’t have a single knife in her kitchen. If she wants something made, she has to cut things with magic.” said Sirius.

Twenty-sixth paragraph, fourth sentence.

“Oh, we have tea every Sunday.” said Dumbledore. “I daresay she would not like it if it were mentioned that I didn’t speak of her to you. I am very grateful that she is not here right now.”

End of twenty-sixth paragraph.
Moody nodded appreciatively, while Voldemort only scowled.

“Oh, Harry.” said Mrs. McFinn her eyes watering, as Rudolph and Leroy held hands.

Harry allowed himself to be pulled against Sirius, as his godfather needed the comfort as much as he himself did.

“Which is what he is most likely planning on you doing.” said Moody.

“Now I only hope you don’t accidentally bring those muggles into danger by having their likeness in a place that they shouldn’t be.” said Lionus.

“Harry, stop messing with your hair.” said Sirius.

“You’ve adjusted your hair more times than Sirius did in our fourth year.” said Remus.

“Oi.” said Sirius.

“One day you went through more than two hair makeovers before the lunch…” said Remus. “You couldn’t decide whether to have long or short hair, curly, wavy, straight…every time you went to the loo, you came back looking different.”
Harry tried to swallow, but found his throat tightening up, he had to reach over and take a drink out of the glass of water on the nearby table. Sirius rubbed his arm supportively when he had returned it.

Dialogue line.

Thirty-second paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“And if you’re spotting removing footprints, it’s only going to be easier to pick you off.”

“Alastor…” hissed McGonagall.

Thirty-third paragraph, first sentence.

“You’d know your parent’s house the moment you saw it, as for Batty’s…well…that depends on what her future self had done to the place.” said Remus.

“Remember that time she was all mad for lilacs. That was a nice time for the village, lilac bushes everywhere,” said Sirius. “She even painted her house purple to match it.”

“Or that time she went on a windmill phase. She liked them spinning at such random times that several poor birds and a few bats ended up getting smacked.” said Remus. “They wouldn’t move for the longest time till all of a sudden…” he made a fast circling motion with his hand to the amusement of the younger inhabitants. “Never knew what hit them.”

“Remember that squirrel? Flew so far it went right through an open window and landed in that poor woman’s bath. I don’t know who freaked out more, the thoroughly soaked and traumatized squirrel, or the startled woman.” laughed Sirius loudly.

“James’ money was on the squirrel.” said Remus snickering.

“I’ll be right back, I’m about to piss myself from laughing just remembering the screams and squeaks.” said Sirius disentangling himself from the covers and walking out of the den, and returned a few moments later.

Thirty-third paragraph, third sentence.

Dumbledore looked down. “They’re…revealed…the house, the people within, it’s all revealed.”

The joking mood, evaporated immediately.

End of thirty-third paragraph.

Thirty-fourth paragraph.
“Sounds like a nice little town to live in.” said Dr. Clark.

“It was boring.” said Sirius, “Except at night, then the pub got a bit excitable.”

“It was boring enough for Lily to feel safe raising a family in it, and it was fun enough to stop James from sneaking out with Sirius all the time.” said Remus.

“Hope you’re not expecting Father Christmas to come to the tent, even he would have a hard time finding you.”

“Fred!”

“Sorry, Mum.”

“Wait…sorry for what?” asked Ginny.

“It’s an automatic saying for us to her, best to just apologize, doesn’t really matter.”

“I don’t think they’d be…” started Ron, but Hermione cut him off.

“No, Ron, I don’t think they’re in the church singing.”

Ron snapped his mouth shut.

“We have a way to attract each other’s attention.” said Fred. “It’s a way we breathe.”

The rest of the people in the room stared at them.

“I’m not going to ask.” said Ron covering his eyes. “It’s only going to hurt.”
Thirty-eighth paragraph.

“Give me one of those right now.” said Mrs. McFinn quietly to Chief Hawkeye, who had a box of tissues sitting next to him.

“My pleasure.”

Thirty-ninth paragraph.

Sirius reached behind Harry and rubbed his temple, Harry relaxed into the gesture and leaned further back against his arms.

“You must get headaches a lot, if you’re enjoying this this much.” said Sirius quietly.

“When they hurt, they really bloody hurt.” muttered Harry.

“So I’ve learned.”

Dialogue set.

Fortieth paragraph.

“And he completely forgets the time that we dragged him to church that one Christmas.” said Officer McFinn fondly.

“I’d forget too, if I had to listen to your singing.” said Dr. Clark with a chuckle.

Forty-first paragraph.

“Ke…”

“’Keeping to the shadows means nothing if you’re going to leave a trail to follow anyway.’” said McGonagall in a bland tone, a pointed look towards Moody, who huffed.

Forty-second paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“Ooh, that might be interesting.” said Hannah with a smile.

“Yeah, and it’s most certainly….” said the twins with a slight smile.

“One more word and I’ll smack you with a poker.” said Charlie coldly.

“You don’t know what we’re…okay we’re done…” said George, he quieted down when Charlie slowly began to reach towards the fireplace.
Forty-third paragraph.

Forty-fourth paragraph.

Forty-fifth paragraph.

Grave Memorium

Forty-sixth paragraph.

“A hard fact of life, the press do get some things right, some of the time.” said Dumbledore, his face alight with a sad smile.

Forty-seventh paragraph, second sentence.

“There’s never a really good time to mention things like that, especially when we are so focused on you staying alive.” said Dumbledore.

“Could have taken me there, I’m the safest when I’m with you.” said Harry coldly.

“Simple safety is not the issue, it’s…time.” said Dumbledore.

Harry meant to say something, but he felt the hand on his forehead tap warningly.

“When he gets like that, best to just sit and stew about it, you’re not going to get a decent short answer in this lifetime.” whispered Sirius.

End of forty-seventh paragraph.

Dumbledore made an obvious effort to look anywhere else but where Harry was. “Our families, are never unimportant.”

Forty-eighth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Ron and Hermione looked between Dumbledore and Harry. The once tense air that came between
Harry and Ron lay between the student and the Headmaster, though it was not nearly as hostile as it was compared to earlier, it was cold…and full of hurt.

“Remember when these used to be fun?” said Ron. “Now you don’t know whether you’re coming or going.”

Dialogue line.

Forty-ninth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dumbledore looked at the book in the deceased man’s hand out of the corner of his eye. A small, yet triumphant smile on his face.

“Do you think he knows what marker it is?” whispered Dean.

“It said it was mossy, crumbling and Hermione thought it said Potter….How can he know what one that marker is?” replied Seamus in a hissed whisper.

“Well, maybe he goes there…he’d know…” said Dean with a shrug.

“My gran takes me to the cemetery every year to spruce up the flowers, I wouldn’t be able to tell you the people next to everyone in the cemetery.” said Seamus.

Fiftieth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Dialogue line.

Fifty-first paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Fifty-second paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Fifty-third paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“…His mother and father must have really hated him.”

“WILLIAM!” said Mrs. Weasley in a stern tone.

“Either that or they thought by naming him that, they were sure a bunch of other kids weren’t going to respond when they yelled at him to come home.”

“CHARLES!”
“I love it when she yells at someone else.” said Fred, he fell silent when his mother pointed a warning finger at him.

Dialogue line.

Fifty-fourth paragraph.

“It sounds horribly morbid, but I did like walking through that graveyard sometimes.” said Sirius. “Also helps that church ladies always threw out the best scraps after their potlucks.”

“But couldn’t you go IN the church and just eat in there?” asked Ron.

“Not when you’re on the run you can’t.” said Sirius.

“And when you’re dodging one set of church ladies in particular because you broke it off with one of their daughters for some ridiculous reason.” added Remus to Sirius’ dismay.

“I told her that we could still be friends!”

“And you remember what happened after that?” said Remus with a bright smile.

“Still can’t stand the smell of boiled cabbage…threw the whole pot at me, I stunk for a week!” said Sirius moaning slightly. He glared at the people who laughed at him. “You don’t understand! My sense of smell is stronger than yours, it was even worse!” That only caused the others to laugh harder.

Fifty-fifth paragraph.

Fifty-sixth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

Fifty-seventh paragraph.

Sirius said nothing, but moved his hand and arm down to pull Harry tight against him.

Fifty-eighth paragraph.

Grave Stone

Fifty-ninth paragraph.

Dialogue line.

“It’s not quite what the Death Eater slogan is.” said Dumbledore kindly.

Dialogue set.
But they were not living, thought Harry: They were gone. The empty words could not disguise the fact that his parents’ moldering remains lay beneath snow and stone, indifferent, unknowing.

Harry felt Sirius’s arm tighten around his chest.

End of sixtieth paragraph.

The silence was incredibly thick, Harry kept his eyes fixed firmly on the slippers he wore on his feet. Officer McFinn didn’t resume the reading for several minutes, and Harry didn’t dare tear his gaze away from his feet to look at anyone else. After a moment, Officer McFinn started up again.

Sixty-first paragraph.

“Lovely gesture, dear.” said Mrs. Weasley, dabbing her eyes with a damp handkerchief.

End of chapter.

“Sad thing is, you might just have given yourself away.” said Moody. “But…other than going there in the first place, no fault of yours. Doubt even I would be unaffected…”

Tonks blinked.

End Notes

Thank you for reading, please remember, take your time. There is no need to rush...and at first if you think it's hard reading it, you should be on my side typing it up!

Please drop by the archive and comment to let the author know if you enjoyed their work!