Once in Rowe's office (it was early enough that she didn't have another patient yet), she did a few basic scans and confirmed my suspicion. Yep, it's as I feared. Nearly the worst thing that could happen.
I have the Dragon Flu. AGAIN! I swear I get this Merlin be Damned flu EVERY summer!!! Morgana has traces of it in her system, but since she hasn't started showing any symptoms, Rowe thinks that giving her a few immune boosting potions should keep her from getting it as bad as me. As for me, I well know the drill by now. I'm going to be staying in the White Room - especially since Pansy and Ivan have returned to Russia and are no longer using it.

The good news is that since I am NOT pregnant (I actually had Rowe check!), the potions regimen should have me feeling better in the next day or two. I can stop quarantining myself the moment I stop having flowers grow out of my head and rainbow fire coming out of my, erm… orifices...

Among other symptoms.

I know without even checking that YOU are fine (I'm not really complaining as I hate the idea of you suffering), but if Morgana is showing traces, perhaps Oliver and the boys should be checked - just in case. I'll be happy to take the boys if they have it, or you can keep them since you'll be fine either way.

BUT... since I almost certainly contracted the flu at the reception during all that dancing, I'm probably not the only one to get it. I'm going to have Pippa send out word (not that they'll NEED it if they got it) to the guests to have themselves checked/treated, and in the meantime, Rowe assumes that she'll need to keep her schedule open so that our family can trickle in as they find the time.

I personally PRAY that Shtara doesn't have it as A: She's a muggle and I can't imagine that she'd be able to handle the dragon flu without magic to heal/minimize the damage, and B: She's crazy busy rehearsing for the opening of Princess and the Frog.

But now that I've written this email, I'm going to take the potions Rowe recommended plus a sleeping potion to catch up on the rest I missed last night. Love you!

Oh wait! Before I sign off, I wanted to answer your question. I'm... surprisingly ready. I probably won't be saying it a lot nor shouting it from the rooftops, but I'm ready to let Oliver know that I have feeling for him that are definitely the L word. We'll plan out a lunch or dinner or something after I'm feeling better so that we can tell Oliver together how we feel, and then give him space to react before broaching any other suggestions.

As for him reading our emails, if he genuinely WANTS to, I am not adverse to letting him, but there are SOOOOO many!!! I think he'd feel overwhelmed and like he'd be disappointing us if he DIDN'T read them. Maybe...offer but make it clear that he's not obligated?

I see your true colors, that's why I love you,
Draco

P.S. In other excellent news, my compulsive need to look at pictures of ants on the internet seems to have finally cleared up for good!
Thursday July 13, 2017

My Dragon,

I'm about to go to bed without you. Because you're still dealing with the Dragon Flu. I hate going to bed alone. I COULD have snuggled up with Ollie, but he ended up with the Dragon Flu too! So you, Morgana, Oliver, Dylan, and Lily are having some super fun sleepover with talking and giggling and rainbow belching I'm sure.

If it weren't for Gabe, I probably would have just risked contracting a disease I pretty much never get and joined you all in the White Room. But I can't risk him getting ill. I can't imagine him getting the Dragon Flu right now, what would that do to his seizures? What would that do to his immune system? Would that affect how his potions would react with his system?

Based on your insta-owls, and talking with Rowe, it seems as though you're all probably not contagious anymore but you're staying quarantined through tonight just in case. Thankfully you have so much experience with this flu that you caught the symptoms before it become a full blown attack. That's great because it means a much shorter quarantined period. Which means I have less time to be lonely in our giant bed with only Gabe for company.

He's pretty awesome company I have to say. His gummy smiles make my day. And earlier today he discovered his toes! He's been grabbing them, and then making a confused face like he doesn't understand who's pulling on his feet, but it's him! I can't wait until we can see you again tomorrow and you can see for yourself how cute and sweet and adorable it is! I'm sure Dylan and Morgana are doing all sorts of things that I'm the one missing. Oh please tell me what they've been up to. Have they forgotten me? Are they walking and talking yet? Do they know their Daddy Harry misses them?

Ok, there's a chance I'm overreacting. I did see them just a little over two days ago. But if Gabe is having developments what's to say Dyl or Morgana haven't?

I have to get my mind off of this before I spiral. So, since you guys are all having a fun little Dragon Flu Party in the White Room, I've decided to host my own fun sleepover in our room! Obviously myself and Gabriel, plus the portion of the feisty foursome that aren't with you - Cael, Seph, and Trey, and Jaz and Zaire want to come hang out and play some games or maybe watch some cartoons but they're going to sleep in their own rooms. I guess one too many times of Jaz waking up with Atreyu sleeping practically on top of her means she wants to have her own space when it comes to sleeping.

I don't blame her! I love co-sleeping with our children as long as they need to. But I will admit that the times over the years where we had zero children still in our bed were pretty amazing. I'm not in any particular rush to get this set out of our bed though. Them being the last of the babies, knowing when they leave the nest we'll be empty nesters forever after, means I might even push them to stay longer than they want to!

The rambunctious horde is about to descend on our rooms so I should probably hurry up and finish. But first ....

I asked Molly to come over on Saturday to help your mum take care of the almost triplets. Morgana is undoubtedly very attached to her Grammy Cissa, but if we're leaving them for the day I think she'd appreciate the extra set of capable hands. Plus, Molly has really been getting on my case about letting her watch the babies more often. She understands how high maintenance our little Queen is, so she's not offended. But I do think she's a bit hurt. And as she said to me, "How will she ever see me as one of her trusted people if she's never around me?" She totally has a point.

Oh, I got ahead of myself a bit. I invited Molly to come over with your mum to watch the babies because I've planned a day for the three of us. I read your email and I can't tell you how happy it makes me that you are ready to admit your feelings. You've come such a long way my Love, years ago this would have taken months if you ever were willing to admit it. Now you've a life full of so much love that you can admit to the creation of new love. Gods I love you Draco Lucius Malfoy.

So, Saturday afternoon we are headed the The Courts Garden for a picnic among the flowers. I'll be baking up a storm tomorrow and I've already had Muffy make sure we're well stocked with all of your picnic favorites. Once we've had our picnic, snogged a bit, and declared our feelings we will play the rest of the day by ear. If Oliver reacts well and happy and doesn't need time to think we can just continue our romantic picnic. If he needs time to himself to think we can head home and leave him to think in the beautiful gardens. Or if he wants to go home to think we can stay in the gardens ourselves.

Obviously I hope for one outcome, but no matter what I am ready to take this step. With you.

Oh, here comes the invasion! Miss you, see you tomorrow.

All of my love,
Harry

Saturday July 15th
My Harry,

So, after my 'fun' little Dragon Flu sleepover -_- I was SO happy to be back in bed with you last night. I was NOT happy to be quarantined with Oliver because I don't even like to let YOU see me when I'm having symptoms such as flatulence and a need to run to the loo every few minutes, then add in the fact that such things were a bit uncontrollable AND flamboyant as hell and - ugh!

Seriously, if I ever get my hands on the wizard that thought it would be funny to magically change the regular muggle flu from a miserable but tolerable illness easily cured by potions, into a crazy illness that turns your sneezes into accidental magic outbursts such as creating tiny green ant-like beings that play something like Wizarding chess - and every, erm... backfire... into accidental Deprimo spells in vibrant colors so everyone is certain to notice them, sigh... I'm going to murder that Wizard in cold blood.

Thank MERLIN the toilets are all spelled to resist all magical damage, and when things get a bit out of hand with accidental magic, can repair themselves before one has a chance to pick himself up off the floor.
But as I was saying, I was well enough to return to our enormous bed. You were so happy to have my arms around you that you fell right to sleep - your own arms around Oliver. Thus, when the babies woke up for their first feeding, I was still awake - having just slept quite a bit to recover from my flu. I silently pulled free from you, cast a mild sleeping spell to prevent you from waking up, and then took the boys for a tandem feed.

Which reminds me, I'm so glad they both love you and Oliver, because I seem to be their least favorite person. It's probably because I have to give them bottles, but I try to appease them by using the breast harness so that the bottles are basically very realistic replicas of what they really want. As I was feeding them, Morgana opened her eyes to watch me, and by the look on her face, she was only tolerating this betrayal because they were her boys and she perhaps understands that they tend to be quick and demanding eaters.

Before she had a chance to start fussing, Oliver very cautiously tickled her tiny little button nose with just his pointer finger. When she didn't immediately start wailing or trying to blow anything up, he looked up at me and smiled.

"Want me to try feeding her?"

Now normally, I probably would have just handed him one of the boys - since they both love him - but aside from them giving me looks wondering why I was holding them, they were perfectly content at the moment. Not to mention, Morgana REALLY needs to learn to tolerate more people. So, I nodded.

"Perhaps start small, simply hold a bottle for her to feed from, and if she allows that, try holding her hand - and so on until you work your way up to actually holding her," I suggested. Being a smart fellow, Oliver did as suggested and was able to feed Morgana while she was laying on the bed and he was laying next to her. He was even able to tickle her nose a few more times and play with her teeny little hand, but she started glaring at him and squirming in a way that made me wonder if she was trying to kick him away, and so, he didn't push his luck and simply held the bottle for her.

Once all the babies were asleep again, I had them all laying in the sidecar on your side of the bed. Even Morgana, shocking, I know, but I understand how important it is for her to have bonding with her brothers. After I set the last baby in the sidecar, I stood there watching them sleep for a bit, and then my gaze shifted to your sleeping form.

"Oh!" Oliver exclaimed very softly in amusement. "Your expression just went from sweet and loving to rather lusty and devious!"

"Mmm..." I moaned softly. "I have a kink called Somnophilia, and whenever I see Harry sleeping, if I'm at all in any condition to take advantage of it, I just can't seem to stop myself," I explained as I crawled into bed and stroked your body in long lines.

Oliver watched in amusement that turned to concern as I prepared you for a good hard shagging. "How is he still sleeping?"

"I feel that he never sleeps nearly enough, and so, when I'm able to take on baby duty, I cast spells on him to make him stay asleep - and just so you know, I don't ALWAYS take advantage of him in this state, but when I do, I have permission to do whatever I like."

Oliver raised a brow at me in disbelief.

"I do," I assured him. "But I'll play nice tonight so that you can ask him yourself." And with that, I countered the sleeping spell and kissed you awake.

It didn't take long before you were purring and practically begging me to take you in every way possible. Even so, I decided to give you a few options.

"Shall I have Oliver between us in a sandwich? Or would you prefer ME in the middle of the sandwich? Perhaps you're hoping that one of us will shag you good and hard while the other fucks your mouth?"

"Merlin! The way you two speak to each other always makes me blush!" Oliver said, and true to his word, he was blushing a lovely rosy shade.

"Any of it, all of it! I don't care, so long as there's shagging!" You cried out desperately, trying to pull me inside you - meaning that if it was possible for our bodies to meld together, that's what you were trying to do.

Smirking, I turned to Oliver. "What say you? Have a preference?"

He climbed onto the bed behind me and pushed me into you. "I think you should be in the middle."

"Mmm," I purred in anticipation. It took a bit of shifting for the three of us to get the positioning just right, but then it was like magic.

Oliver was clearly still adjusting to the fact that he's shagging so often after such a long dry spell, and so he's a bit enthusiastic and rough, which is wonderful, but means that he was ramming me into you in a way that made me want to cast a cushioning spell on you, except I could see how much you were loving every second.

As if to prove my point, you got close first, and it was you growing tighter on my shaft that had me seeing stars. I was moaning and groaning, and probably getting just as tight on Oliver. This apparently tipped him over the edge, which triggered you, which triggered me. All in all, we had a GLORIOUS orgasm that left us all gasping for breath. We collapsed into a pile, and as far as I know, slept like that for the rest of the night.

In reality, you probably had to push us off of you in order to breathe. And even if you managed to remain under us, you more than likely woke up at your normal time. In any case, I was all alone in bed this 'morning.' I assumed that Molly had already arrived and was trying her best to win our girl over without triggering any explosions.

I hope.

Knowing that we had important plans, I got out of bed and skipped all but the most important part of my morning routine. Thus, just 10 minutes shy of noon, when you slipped into our room to wake me, I was able to surprise you by being fully dressed and ready to go. I was wearing something posh yet comfortable; something perfect for an afternoon picnic in a public garden.

Seeing me ready, you got about a thousand times more excited. "I thought I'd have to ride your arse! But you're ready! Let me go grab our picnic basket, and then snag Oliver from the stables! And then we can go! I'm so excited! GOD! WHAT IF HE DOESN'T LIKE US LIKE WE LIKE
I grabbed you and kissed you before you could devolve into a panicky mess. When you were all flushed and melty, I spun you around and smacked your arse. "Go on and grab that basket. I'LL get Oliver, lest you scare him off in your excitement."

Twisting your head, you gave me a last kiss before popping off. That was my signal to pop into the stables. I walked up behind Oliver as he was feeding an apple to a horse, and covered his eyes with my hands, but rather than ask him to guess who, I nibbled his neck.

He moaned softly, turning around to kiss me. "Huh! I thought you were Harry!"

"Surprise!" I murmured playfully. "Come on."

He allowed me to lead him out of the stables curiously. "Aaaaare you sneaking me away for a quick shag?"

I grinned at him. "I just woke up and need to eat first, but hopefully that WILL be one of the things we do today."

That's when he eyed me up and down suspiciously. "You're looking rather nice for just having woken up and wanting to eat."

But that's when you popped up with the basket. "Let's go, let's go, let's go!" You chanted excitedly as you grabbed us both and Apparated us to where you planned. Oliver looked around warily.

"Whaaaat's going on?"

Neither of us answered, except to grin. You dragged us over to the spot you had apparently scouted out previously and charmed to remain free for us. Then you used a lot of subtle magic to spread out the blanket and set up the excellent spread you'd prepared. Not needing words at this point, Oliver and I sat on the blanket and helped ourselves to our favorites. We all chitchatted for a bit as we ate, and then Oliver confronted us.

"Alright, out with it! What's going on?"

You looked to me anxiously. Smiling, I took one of your hands and one of his hands. Feeling better, you took his other hand in your free one. The color drained from his face as if we were about to kick him out of our house and tell him to never come back.

"Harry and I wanted to tell you something. Something important."

"Yeah?" He asked nervously.

"Remember when I said that it might take me a long time to feel comfortable using the L word?"

His eyes narrowed suspiciously. "Yeah..."

"Well Harry and I had a chance to talk it over, and I've actually had a while to think it over, AND I Insta-owled Yesenia a couple of times to have her analyze my thoughts and feelings, and..."

He leaned back as if bracing for an impact, but didn't pull free from our hands. "Yeah..."

"Well, I realized that it's real and I don't need to be hesitant or hide it. What I feel for you is love. Genuine, romantic, not going to stop anytime soon, LOVE."
You exhaled a huge sigh of relief. "I'm so proud of you!" You kissed me, and then turned to fling your arms around Oliver. "And I DON'T have issues admitting how I feel, but I was waiting for Draco to be ready. I already love you SO much! I don't ever want to be without you again!"

I nodded in agreement. "But we want to make it clear that YOU don't need to feel pressured. If you still need more time, or if you don't feel the same, we'll understand."

Even as I said that, you made a liar out of me by getting watery eyes and an expression that made it clear that you might 'understand' but you weren't going to be happy about it. Oliver looked you up and down, and then looked me up and down. He pressed his lips together and remained quiet for about an eon and a half - still holding our hands - but then he nodding in understanding.

"I... I appreciate you telling me, and I WANT to return the favor, but I'm afraid that... well... I'm surprisingly old fashioned, and I'm getting too damn old to settle for less than everything I want. As much as I want to be with the both of you, I want to be MARRIED. I want to be with someone who wants to be a family with me..."

You had tears leaking from your eyes, but were trying your best to hold them back. I nodded. "I understand, but before you break up with us for good, would it make a difference if we DID marry you? Or at least as much as we can. Harry already mentioned having a Bonding Ceremony -"

"I actually said Commitment Ceremony, but whatever or HOWEVER you want to do it, I'm on board!" You interrupted.

"BUT I think if you need a legitimate marriage, I can talk to my lawyers about how to make it as legal as possible without being legally recognized. AND I am willing to bet that we could talk to Kingsley and persuade him to make an exception for us -"

"He loves me! He totally will!" You assured us.

Oliver looked stunned. "You'd... You'd really.... MARRY me???

You squeezed my hand to let me know that you were ready. After a deep breath, I began a soft song. "I've always been a man with a plan, always prepared, never one to leave it to chance, but it's all unscripted when we're with you, it seems familiar, yet it all feels so new."

I know you still think your voice is terrible, and that you can't believe that I love it, but this was important enough to you to try. Thus, when my opening lyric ended, you took over.

"All of a sudden we miss you, thinking 'bout all the things that we've been through... oh no, it's not that we planned to, but we think it feels like-"

I joined you: "Maybe we're falling for YOU and we just don't know, were we ever meant to be? Suddenly, oh you caught us so off guard, we fell in love so UNEXPECTEDLY."

"So unexpectedly," you repeated.

"Unexpectedly," I added, looking to you because you were going to take the next verse, but we ended up being cut short by Oliver, who threw his arms around us and hugged us so tight that neither of us could make a sound.

"I... I don't know that we'll be able to make it work - that we'll be able to make any sort of legal arrangements, much less get married, but if you're willing to try, I'm more than happy to stick with you until it either works or... it becomes apparently that it's impossible."

Rather than dwell on the potential downside, we focused on the positive. You practically attacked Oliver with a kiss, and at that point, I felt it was prudent to cast a slew of privacy spells around our little picnic area so that we wouldn't scandalize nor offend anyone with our definitely NOT fit for public shenanigans.

I think it's safe to say that we can cross shagging during a picnic in a muggle garden off the bucket list!

But now that we're back home, I've got a message from Tabitha. Yes, you read that right I've got a message from Tabitha. She wants to see me right away, so I'm going to go check it out and I'll Insta-owl you when I know what's going on.

Let's hear it for the boy,
Draco
Chapter 153

Chapter Summary

Draco talks about the reason Tabitha called for him.

Chapter Notes

Trigger Warning Not explicit, but description of traumatized child with allusions to what traumatized the child

See the end of the chapter for more notes

Saturday July 15, 2017

My Heart,

After we got back from our emotional, lovely, and sexy picnic you headed off to Tabitha, I could tell Ollie needed some time to himself and he went off to the stables, so I had a nice long run. I would have normally gone to find the babies but I sent the mums a message asking how they were doing and I was told in no uncertain terms that they were fine, they were enjoying some spoiling Grandma times, and that I should find myself something to do.

Now I'm back from my run (which I have NOT been doing enough of lately!), you're still at Unity or with Tabitha wherever she is, and Ollie is still in the stables. I finally got our babies back from their Grandmas, fed them, and now they're sleeping off the day's excitement. The feisty foursome (plus Jaz) are off in the stables per usual, the teens and pre-teens are apparently having some older kid fun and have split themselves between the pool and the dirt-biking track, so there is no one to play with poor lonely Harry.

Fine! I decided to have a nice long bubbly soak in the tub. I've got so many thoughts running through my mind.

Unrelated to MOST of what's running through my head, I am really curious as to what Tabitha would have messaged only you for? My best guess is of course that she found an angry teen or pre-teen who needs your particular blend of snark and arse-whoopings. Which I think is honestly hilarious. During our time of running Unity House, and subsequently opening and running the other Unity Houses, I have always been more likely to be found with a baby on my hip or chasing the small kids up and down the playground equipment, while you've been a godsend to the older kids with too much baggage to carry alone. But at home, you ARE the baby guy, and I tend to keep my cool with and hang out with the teenagers.

Speaking of you being the baby guy ... we all know why you spend more time with Morgana than you do with either Gabriel or Dylan. I get it, Oliver gets it, the family gets it, Morgana is needy and definitely playing favorites. But I know you are absolutely wrong when you say the boys don't like you. They positively adore you. When Morgana gives you breathing room (usually when I'm feeding her) the boys always enjoy their time with you. When you play with all three of them, you get massive smiles and giggles out of both those boys. They love you, but you're right they don't spend as much time with you so they're not quite as familiar with you taking care of their needs as opposed to me or Oliie.

But, they give him quite a few weird looks when he tries to feed them as well. Those two boys have been awfully spoiled by having the good stuff on tap at their disposal night and day, they'd give anyone trying to stick a fake nipple in their mouth the same face.

You know, Morgana is quite particular with her affection, she loves you biggest, she loves me second because I am an all you can eat buffet, she likes Ollie as long as he doesn't try to touch her without it being her idea, and she's a big fan of Grandma Cissa and her big sister Vivi. But do you know who might be her favorite of all her (non-twin) siblings? Atreyu. You know, for being bilingual you'd think he'd not need a third language, but he's really aware of body language. And I think just like he caught that you smelled differently when you were pregnant, and that Gabe smells differently during his seizures, I wonder if there's some scent or hormonal shift he's picking up that Morgana gives off with her different moods.

He touches her occasionally, and other times he sits near her talking or singing to her without touching, and sometimes I can see him walk up to her and then immediately walk away. And the more I watch Guinnie's more questionable behavior, the more I realize it comes from her having absolutely no control over anything. She freaks when people touch her despite her making mad faces or crying, she loves being in your arms because that's always been her safety net, she likes being in my arms because she can have as much milk as she likes. And I think she likes when Atreyu spends time with her because he really seems to understand what she wants or more importantly what she doesn't want.

Wow! That's not even what I was planning on overthinking about. I was going to make a quick comment about the babies loving you, and now I'm more than four paragraphs deep into the psyches of our infants. Yikes.

What I really wanted to stress and worry about was how Ollie's been feeling. And honestly, I need to freak out a bit about how you and I are feeling.

I was all for taking this whole thing slowly. I wanted to give Oliver time to grieve and get to a healthy place mentally. I needed to get to a place where I didn't feel unfaithful for even having romantic feelings about someone other than you. You needed to get to a place where you could admit to your feelings about AND TO someone other than me. I was so excited that you were finally ready to say the dreaded L word. If you remember, I planned a whole lovely picnic around saying aforementioned word.

You'd think with how careful and slow we've been attempting to take this that Ollie talking about how he'd like to be married and wants to hold out for someone who wants to be his family would make me panic or think we're rushing things. I definitely thought it would mean YOU panicking and thinking you JUST said the L word and now he's talking marriage?!? Except you didn't. You immediately assured him we were so serious that if there were a way to marry him legally we would. Hell, you told him you'd ask Kingsley to make an exception for us!

And instead of panicking or saying "whoa whoa whoa, we just want to say Love for the first time, I'm not buying rings!" I basically said "Hell yeah, let's buy us some rings!"

I think the thing that's freaking me out the most is that this isn't freaking me out. That it isn't freaking you out.

So, here's what I think. I am all for this commitment ceremony, or bonding ceremony, or whatever we want to call it. I love him. It takes me a while to trust, it takes me a while to realize I love someone. But when I love them? That's it. I want him. If I have to blackmail Kingsley, I want this for him, for you, for us. I want our family to be his family, I've loved Parker and Cassie for a long time, I'd like to love them as their ... step dad? Fun Uncle? One of the guys who shags their dad but we never discuss that?

All three of those wonderful people deserve a whole lot of people in their lives who love them and are choosing to be their family. I'm going to find a way to give them what they deserve!

And ... I truly don't know how you feel about this ... but as much as I need to keep him for you and for me and for him, our seven youngest children would be lost without him. When we were busy with the babies? He was spending most of his day with Seph, Lissa, Cael, and Trey. He's been there every night with these babies of ours. Do you have any idea how many times I've headed out to do something only to come home and find that he's recorded a detailed log of one of Gabe's seizures? He's not just an extra set of helpful hands trying to feel better about living here for free. He loves our kids. And they love him. As much as it was important to tell him how WE felt, I think it's important he's aware of how he's already a part of this family, we just need to make it official.

Hurry up and come home or at least tell me what's going on! I need to worry at you!

Yours,
Harry

Saturday July 15th approaching midnight
My heart and soul,

I've already told you in an Insta-owl, but I have a few minutes to write an email, and so, I'm going to tell you a bit more. Obviously, I am not at home in bed with you. Considering that you and Oliver are both early birds, you're probably both asleep already, or possibly already awake for the first feeding.

So, As I said in my Insta-owl, Tabitha had a special case that she really wanted me to come in and handle. It's a little girl that is currently so traumatized that no one is quite sure what happened, except that this 9 year old performed some major accidental magic, and not the fun kind where flowers bloom. Nope, she was apparently in a... erm... group... incident in which several unsavory men were harming her in ways that activated her magic rather lethally.

The only thing we know for certain is that the place she was rescued from was a sort of holiday home, you know something a family might rent for a weekend or up to a month. The working theory (and I had to call up Bletchley to find out the details) is that this group of men rented the place and brought her there for some sort of twisted muggle ritual. Perhaps they know she had a magical heritage. Perhaps one of them was even her father.

No one is certain yet because they haven't been able to get her to talk, and in fact, unless she is sedated, she freaks our around men in general. Like screams bloody murder and frantically tries to run/hide, and the closer the man gets, the more likely she is to display more accidental magic.

So, getting back to that working theory, it's thought that after she was brought there, they began whatever they were doing to her and she more than likely withstood it for a bit of time, but eventually, she was pushed to the point that her magic activated and she blew the place up. That's the destructive bit that was lethal. The bodies of seven men were found in the rubble, and the first people to respond (basically neighbors rushing over to find out WTF had happened) were utterly shocked to find a relatively unharmed girl in the center of the crater where the house once stood.

They called the muggle authorities, who took the girl to a hospital, where a simple medical examination revealed abuse that I don't want to think about at the moment, much less recount for you to read while you're trying to feed babies or get back to sleep. The other thing the examination discovered was that she was making some highly unusual phenomenon happen, and that tipped someone in the know off and they contacted the Aurors, who took the girl to St. Mungo's, who ALSO examined her, healed her up because the damage was all physical and nonmagical, and then called Tabitha in to take her to Unity House.

It didn't take long for Tabitha to realize that this girl had anger and trauma in levels not seen since Antonio. That's the first thing that made her think of me, but she hesitated because of the fact that the girl freaks out around all men. The caregivers attempting to help her have been strictly female in the last three days since her arrival. BUT when anyone tries to talk to her, she remains utterly silent, eventually making gestures that seem like frustration - like tossing ones hands up in frustration, but the Mind Healer assigned to her eventually realized that she was SIGNING.

When they repeated the gestures to me, I recognized it as BSL for 'I don't know,' and 'I don't understand.'

So, this little girl - whoever she is and wherever she comes from - had someone in her life at some point that cared enough to teach her how to communicate via sign language. And when they realized that she was deaf and didn't speak verbally, they decided that there were too many things piling up to NOT call me in.

The first thing they did was put the two of us in a room with a glass wall so that the girl could see that she was 'safe' from me. She was sat in between Tabitha and Yesenia (who received the girl's case when they realized that I would be working with her, and thus, Yesenia would probably be the best one to work with her too), staring at me through the glass VERY warily.

I kept it very simple, signing nothing more than: "Hello, my name is Draco (which I spelled so she would know how to say it, and then used my name sign), and I promise I will never hurt you. What is your name?"

For the very first second or two, she looked SO relieved to have someone who spoke her language, but then she quickly turned to rage. By the time I was asking her name, she was lashing out, having an emotional storm that was only to be expected really, since this is a girl who was hurt by men who was suddenly confronted with a strange man promising not to hurt her - a man who seems to be the only one who can talk to her. I reckon that has to be hard to cope with, the fundamentally opposite information battling in her head.

That said, as she raged, she tossed out signs here and there - such as hurt, bad men, hate - and a jumble of other things that reinforce what the medical reports stated. Tabitha decided that the best course of action was for the two of us to stay in that 'safe room' so that she can see me but feel like I cannot get to her, as if I was in a cage. So, she's currently sleeping on a bed in 'her' part of the room, and I'm about to try to sleep on a horrifyingly small bed on 'my' side of the room.

From the moment I first talked to her, I patiently wait for her to calm down, and then repeat what I said, which triggers more rage, and more patience, but the good news is that the rages are lasting less and less time, and so, I hope that when she wakes up tomorrow, she'll be ready to talk.

And before you freak out, I called for Muffy to bring me a secret weapon. Morgana. I'm hoping that seeing me sleep with our gorgeous baby will reassure this girl that I'm not a monster. And then maybe I can have a nice chat with Morgana when I feed her, making sure to translate it into sign for our wary watcher's benefit.

If that fails, I might just call for Jasmine to come in and have a chat with me too, so that this little girl can see why I know sign language AND have someone her own age to talk to until she feels comfortable talking about the ugly things. Maybe this girl and Jaz can play like normal little girls until we manage to sort things out and... Sigh, I'm too tired to keep writing, I'll send you another email tomorrow at some point, or if you can't wait, you can try visiting me, just be warned that SHE might not take the visit so well.

All my love,
Draco

Chapter End Notes

FYI: For those of you concerned about Draco always having the babies love him more than Harry, THIS is why. Whenever Draco tries to mention that he thinks one of the babies loves Harry more, or maybe just isn't feeling it for Draco yet, Harry goes overboard trying to reassure Draco that he's wrong. I don't necessarily think Draco is wrong, but he basically decides not to argue with Harry, because who really wins that argument?
"The boys hate me!" "They do not!!!" "They do so!!!" "They love the fuck out of you!!!" "They're babies! They don't love anything that's not attached to a source of milk!!!"
Yeah, not a very productive argument, and besides, I'm dead certain they had this argument once or twice in the past even though it didn't make it on page. Probably during Draco's PPD, lol. :-}
Chapter 154

Chapter Summary

Despite the situation with Vanessa, the boys are keeping in touch.

Sunday July 16, 2017

Missing you,

We just got back from spending the day at Hogwarts and you are STILL at Unity. You know that I understand, this is a situation that you are ideal to help with and your squishy heart is going to have this be your priority for right now. I even understand why it needs to be you, if I thought my presence would be helpful instead of just adding another man to the equation, I would have offered to come. And you know these traumatized Unity Kids hold my heart in their hands, so it's definitely something I find to be one of the most important things to do. But I also really miss you.

I miss you too Draco. The bed was empty last night without you or Morgana in it. -Oliver

That last line was Oliver obviously. I love him, and it was nice to not be alone in the bed last night, but it doesn't feel right anymore without all three of us. Did you miss your boys as well? The tall ones and the small ones? I hope so, once I get everyone settled in for the night, Ollie, the babies, and I are going to Magi-Skype you. I miss your face! The boys miss your face. They've definitely missed your bedtime lullabies, so if they don't fall asleep before or during our conversation, I might beg you to sing.

For them. Yeah, for them.

I know I sent Jaz to you this morning, and I'm hoping she was helpful with the situation today. I would have preferred to shield our eight year old daughter from such a horrific situation but she's already made it clear she's not going to deal with censorship when she followed you to the Ministry. However, the next day I spend at Hogwarts trying to get our quarters put in order she's going to need to come with to make sure her rooms are how she likes them. I got our rooms, the nursery, and the feisty foursome's rooms done today. Well, not done, but the sizing and the location are set. We will need to pick out furnishings and decor, but the basic layout is set up.

So far, our space includes a large Master with an adjacent nursery and a beautiful en suite. The Master is big enough for our bed, the sidecar, and a nice sized closet. It's not anywhere near our rooms at the Manor but we don't actually need that much space. The nursery is basically going to be the playroom and clothing storage for now, since the babies are co-sleeping and will be for some time. Eventually we can expand it a bit and it will have enough space for three cots. We have a small cooking kitchen with a nice sized dining space. I want to be able to cook, but with the Hogwarts kitchens available, I don't need more than the basics, we just need room for a table we can all eat a meal together when we want to.

We have a nice sized living space that we've set up almost identical to our movie room back at the Manor. Just with the addition of another table so we can also play games in the same space as opposed to having a separate game room. Two full bathrooms in addition to our en suite. And then a room for Lily and Seph, a room for Cael and Trey, a room for Jaz and Zaire, and then a larger "guest" room for when the kids in the dorms want to stay with us, or when the older kids who won't be living with us want to stay with us.

Our living space has a door that is magically linked to Ollie's living quarters. Until we are married, or bonded, or however you want to phrase it, McGonagall wants him to have his own living quarters but understands our dynamic so it will essentially act like any other door unless we ask Minnie to remove it or we magically seal it from either side. His quarters are much smaller and more basic. Pretty much because he doesn't think he'll actually ever use them except as an extra bedroom when all the kids want to visit or to store more of your closet overflow! He has two bedrooms, two bathrooms, a kitchenette, and a living space. To the west side of his rooms will be his office space, while my office will be to the east side of our rooms.

When it gets closer to time for the students to return to Hogwarts, we'll be getting our learning spaces put together. For now, the quarters are priority because then we'll have a space already ready if we want to prep our classrooms until we pass out from exhaustion at night!

My classroom will have a lot more to set up, needing a learning space. Ollie really just needs to maintain the quidditch broom shed because Hogwarts herself keeps the pitch looking perfect. My prep seems like a lot more work now, but at some point, Ollie is going to need to teach small people flying tactics in the middle of a Scottish winter so ...... I think I'm getting the better deal!

The other space I will be putting together will be a separate space from my offices but function similar to an office. Our living quarters and subsequently my office are pretty much equidistant from my classroom and Gryffindor Tower. But at the base of Gryffindor Tower I am going to have a sitting room of sorts. A safe space where I will have informal office hours for my house to come talk with me. As well as a nice calming space if I need to discuss issues with a small group from my house. And I thought it would be a happier and cozier space to discuss career paths with my oldest Lions. I wanted a safe comfortable space, but I didn't necessarily want it next to where our family lives. I figure our Gryffindor kids are already dealing with their family and school lives overlapping, they don't need to have their housemates traipsing around outside their bedrooms.

Between you needing to come with next time to help decorate our bedroom, and Jaz needing to come back to decorate her room with Z, you'd think I could have at least gotten the feisty foursome's rooms done while they were with me. No. They spent the entire day at Hagrid's hut. He showed them the animals he's currently housing, the Hogwarts stables, and even a few animals that ventured their way to the edge of the Forbidden Forest. I think keeping them away from the forest might end up being a full time job.

Sorry I made you have a bunch of kids with me that seem to have my sense of adventure and complete disregard for personal safety.

That was our day. It was long - and kind of fun - but mostly, I just hate that you weren't there to completely boss me around and tell me my decisions for designing our quarters were "utterly plebeian Harry!" Hopefully you're available to magi-skype and I'll at least get to talk with you face to face soon.

My heart overflows with love for you,
Harry

Sunday July 16th
My perfection,
As you know, I just got off Magi-Skype with you. It was the sweetest thing, you and Oliver were sitting on our massive bed, each of you holding one of our boys. We all got a bit silly, probably to distract us from the seriousness of the situation. You and Oliver were making the boys dance and wiggle for me, waving their pudgy baby hands at me and saying things like: "We miss you daddy!"

Meanwhile, as I'm still trying to get Vanessa to trust me, I was sitting in my little glass room with the Magi-Skype projecting on a wall while I sat opposite from it. You wouldn't have been able to see Vanessa as she was off to my left, watching me/us with interest and suspicion. But since I was trying to gain her trust even as I was having a much needed chat/distraction with you all, I had Morgana in her carrier on my chest and was signing everything I was saying.

At one point, I tried to have Morgana's delicate little hand wave to you, while saying: "I miss you and love you daddy and Oliver," only she was NOT having it. I don't know why, but this upset her, so I stopped. I bet she was just upset that she couldn't have you hold her and feed her directly. She may insist on being held by me nearly all the time, but you are most definitely her favorite food source.

But anyway, as I was saying, I had Morgana in her carrier and I was signing everything I was saying. Next to me was Jaz - who plans to return home in a couple of minutes - and she was also signing and saying things like: "I miss you daddy, I hope Zaire and the others aren't moping without me, give the babies kisses from me."

But then the boys started fussing and you begged me oh so prettily to sing to them.

"I don't mind you coming here and wasting all my time, 'cuz when you're standing oh so near, I kinda lose my mind! It's not the perfume that you wear, it's not the ribbons in your hair, I don't mind you coming here, and wasting all my time!"

To my delight, Oliver was not shy about singing the background vocals, which encouraged you to do it too. So, when I paused between verses, you both sang out: "Ooooo-ooo-ooo ooo-ooo-ooo-ooo! Ooooo-ooo-ooo ooo-ooo-ooo-ooo-ooo-ooo-ooo-ooo!"

"I don't mind you hanging out and talking in your sleep (sweet dreams baby), it doesn't matter where you've been, as long as it was deep (YEAH!), you always knew to wear it well, you look so fancy I can tell, I don't mind you hanging out and talkin' in your sleep, I guess you're just what I needed, I needed someone to feed, I guess you're just what I needed, I needed someone to bleed!"

Watch this cover video :-)

At this point, I was on my feet and dancing with Jaz as you and Oliver were dancing with the boys.

When we were done, we said goodbye to each other and Jaz went into the other part of the room so that she could have a 'whispered' conversation with Vanessa. This gives me some time to write you an email. The first thing I bet you could guess is that we're making progress. It's slow and not much, but we've learned her first name - Vanessa.

Jaz has been invaluable, chatting on about anything and everything EXCEPT what happened (which all Jaz knows is that bad men hurt Vanessa), so this means that Vanessa is now very interested to watch Inuyasha at some point. Oh! I know they are trying to be private (and so I'm not looking directly at them), but I just saw Jaz sign to Vanessa that she should talk to me tomorrow - that I'm one of the good ones. Vanessa basically shrugged and didn't reply.

Now Jaz is tucking Vanessa into her bed, saying good night, and even giving her a kiss on the cheek. Sometimes I really feel that kids can understand kids better, even when they're not talking about the hard things.

Now Jaz is coming back over here, hold on a mo...

Aww, I'm so proud of my baby girl! She came over to me and gave me a big hug and a kiss and wished me luck. Then she took off to the office so that she can floo home.

I'm going to sign off now and try to chat with Vanessa. Even if she doesn't respond, I can at least let her know that I'm trying. But before I go, just know that no matter what happens, I will be home tomorrow night. On the one hand, if I make progress and get her to open up to me tomorrow, we'll both need a break by nighttime, and on the other hand, if I DON'T, it'll more than likely be beneficial to have time apart at that point anyway.

The REASON I'm staying here tonight as it is, is simply to be here for her if she needs anything, and also to let her know that I'm not planning to hurt her by acclimating her to my presence in a way that seems safe to her. Lastly, having Morgana on hand has helped immensely as Vanessa has been very interested in her.

The disconcerting part is that even though I've explained that Morgana is my daughter, Vanessa spent the majority of the day watching me like a hawk, as if just waiting for me to hurt our baby girl. I pray that all this singing and dancing with Morgana I've done today will help Vanessa eventually come to the realization that I wouldn't harm a hair on her head.

You are my sunshine,
Draco
Chapter Summary

Morgana wants Harry for once, and the boys unwind by going to Orion's club for a bit.

Tuesday July 18, 2017

My Adorably Ridiculous Love,

We had a nice day yesterday spending most of it in the stables. But far and away, the best part of the day was you coming home before bed last night. I know you had said you would be home to sleep where you belong, but we can plan and plan and plan and things don't always end up the way we envisioned. So I was hopeful you'd be home, I didn't want to truly believe it until I could see you in person.

I was feeding the boys when you came home. You immediately climbed into bed with us, kissed me and Oliver hello, and tried to hold me so you could watch the boys you'd missed while they ate.
Morgana however was not having that. She started squeaking angrily although she hadn't hit explosion or ear piercing shrieking levels. You and I both assumed she was mad that I was taking your attention and affection that she had gotten used to having mostly on her the last days, so while you didn't move away from me, you did try giving her some of your rapt attention. My sweet little Queen let you know that's not what she wanted.

You know what she wanted Draco? Me! She wanted ME! Or my milk, but whatever, I'm going to take what I can get. She was upset that we were back together but she was not given my undivided attention or the milk she wanted. Gabe was pretty much done anyway, so I passed him over to his Oliver for winding, and snuggled up my girl I'd missed so much. You focused on reconnecting with Dylan, who attempted to smile and coo at you without unlatching. Good thing little man doesn't have any teeth yet, him clamping down with just his gums was uncomfortable enough!

Realizing playing with Dylan was just going to result in more pain for me (and not the fun kind), you moved over to snuggle Ollie while cooing and talking with Gabriel. Who proceeded to spit up all over Ollie's shoulder and your chest. I don't think I ever appreciate being a wizard quite as much as when I'm vanishing baby-made stinky messes.

I assumed that when you got home you would tell us all about Vanessa and everything you'd learned about her. Possibly with addresses of those responsible so I can ... visit them. Or maybe instead of talking about depressing things you'd spent a few days immersed in, we could get the babies to sleep and get in some well deserved sexy times. Alas, that wasn't happening. The boys going a few days without you, Morgana going a few days without me or Oliver, and probably the most frantic need came from them going a few days without each other meant the three little ones stayed up much too late just baby babbling to each other.

Even if they had gone to sleep at a regular time, the littlest four came in to tell you all about their days since you'd been gone. They wanted to tell you every single thing they saw in the forest and give you an update on every animal in our stables down to the little squirrel they've named Jeffrey.
All of that involved Lissa, Seph, and Cael sprawled all over the bed, limbs entwined, feet perched in my lap, with Trey solidly in your lap - his thumb firmly plugged in his mouth. Normally you'd pop his thumb out, telling him a Malfoy does not mumble around his appendages when he has something to say, but it's so cute and you'd missed him so much you seemed pretty inclined to allow him his comfort.

Between the babbling babies, our late night visitors, and all of us not sleeping very well apart from each other, we ended up falling asleep without that update on the situation or any sexy times. Then I woke up early enough this morning, that as beautiful as you looked, I couldn't bring myself to wake you, even in your favorite way.

But I did go to check on you a little while ago since it was right around the time you would normally wake up. I entered our bedroom, thinking to wake you up if you were still asleep, and definitely kiss you and bring you breakfast. Instead of a sleeping or sleep-rumpled you, I saw you sitting up looking at your laptop, hastily shutting it when I walked in.

I asked in amusement, "Mooooorning, are you watching porn?"

"No!" You denied, but your guilty blush gave you away.

"You're so adorable," I rolled my eyes at you. "You know I don't care if you look at porn! Unless there's something good and you're not showing me!"

You kept insisting, "I'm not!"

And I kept insisting, "Then let me see!" At which point I tackled you, wrestling the laptop away, while you sputtered in indignation. o.O "… Oh Draco, I thought you said you'd stopped looking at pictures of ants on the internet …"

Your frustrated roar of :"I can't help it!!" Was just too cute.

I called you my affectionate nickname, "aww, my little weirdo!" Then I kissed you. That all culminating in you giving up your ant obsession and remembering your "Harry's arse" obsession.

And now that I've finished my email, you're STILL in the loo getting ready for the day. Oooh, hopefully you're still in the shower and I can catch you in time for round two!

Incoming!

Harry

Wednesday July 19th
My rock and foundation,

Let me get all of the yucky stuff out of the way first. Over the course of Monday, a little bit last night, and earlier today, a picture has emerged surrounding Vanessa.

On Monday morning, Vanessa decided to take Jasmine's advice and talk to me, but first, to set her mind at ease, I called for Yesenia to come in. So, with Vanessa and Yesenia on the sofa, and me sitting across from them, I acted as an interpreter while Yesenia basically asked questions.

We started a few months ago, because that's what Vanessa said first: "I miss my mum!"

"What happened to your mum?"

"She died in a car accident," Vanessa informed us, and when we asked her name, learned that she was called Lisa Campbell, Thus Vanessa's last name is Campbell.

I Insta-owled this information to Bletchley, who was able to do a bit of digging and find that there is a record of a Lisa Campbell being in a car accident on a slippery and rainy night about 3 months ago. Lisa was a muggle who had only one estranged cousin. However, after doing a background check on that cousin, Child Services contacted him and asked if he'd be willing to take in Vanessa, and since he was, they had no reason NOT to give her into his custody.

When asked, Vanessa said that her mother never told anyone anything about her father, except that he was a 'special man' with 'extraordinary capabilities.' According to Vanessa, from the first night that she stayed with her cousin, he was not particularly nice to her, but not mean either. That said, she was frustrated and angry from the recent death of her mother and the lack of sympathy from her cousin, so strange things kept happening.

Her cousin - called Gerald Hastings - obviously noticed her strange abilities.

What had gone unknown - because he'd managed to keep his record clean (and I actually found this bit out by reading Vanessa's mind for clarity while talking to her) - was that he was actually a drug addict. Sort of a high functioning one, because he was able to hold a job and keep his criminal activities from going unnoticed. Vanessa actually had no idea, but she saw things, such as a man come over and give Gerald a baggie of pills in exchange for money - that let ME know that he was an addict.

After taking some pills one night, he egged Vanessa on until she manifested accidental magic, which must have confirmed his suspicion, because he made a phone call that resulted in the drug dealer and 5 other men showing up. Vanessa had no idea what was going on as she watched them talk and even argue a bit, but the Gerald smacked her around a little, making a nearby telly explode.

Since Vanessa can't hear, seeing this in her mind is a bit like watching footage from my contact cameras without the sound from the earbuds. I'm sure Jaz could read all their lips (because she was taught how), but I could only catch tidbits - such as when they snarled the word: Witch!

I watched in her mind as they taped a map of Great Britain on the wall and each tossed a dart at it. Five of those darts hit places - with the other two landing in the ocean - and those five places were written down on bits of paper and tossed in a hat. The Dealer drew a slip from the hat and that gave them the random place they decided to go. The part where they searched on the computer for places to stay in Devonshire was easy enough to understand, and when they found a place, they immediately called the number and booked it.

After that, it was a hasty matter of packing a bag - which Vanessa watched first her cousin do, and then was dragged along to the Dealer's house and that of his men. This was useful information as it gave me clues that I was able to pass along to Bletchley to follow up on. In actuality, the muggle Authorities are still trying to determine who the men were, because none of them gave their real name, and in fact only one was required to give a name at all when renting the place they'd chosen to stay. Thus, once this filters through the system, they might be able to put names to bodies.

But for Vanessa, the sad fact is that she was brought to a relatively secluded house by men who had bad plans for her with NO ONE around to suspect ill intentions. Even the neighbors who could at least see the house through their windows likely assumed that it was just a regular group on holiday.

I will skip Vanessa's memories from that point on, as it involves about three days of torture. Instead, I'll tell you what Bletchley said when I asked him why a group of muggles would take a young girl they suspected of witchcraft to a secluded place to torture her.

Apparently, it is an OLD (but apparently still practiced on occasion) belief that a muggle can obtain some of a witch's power if they drink her blood. There are a lot of terrible superstitions and practices that have evolved over the years to go with it, but in essence, the basic belief is that they can provoke a witch into using her power and drink her blood AT THAT MOMENT, they can gain her powers.

I can't say for certain that this is what they were doing, but it does seem to fit with the visuals I witnessed in Vanessa's mind. They abused her highly brutal ways - only a small percentage of which was sexual. Their goal was to provoke her, and pain was their chosen weapon.

Well, it's not surprising to US (we have had a lot of experience with accidental magic over the years, some of which has been quite dangerous indeed), but they eventually pushed her that last little bit too far and her magic blew them all up. So in this, ALL of her abusers are dead.

The fact that I was able to read her mind saved us from having to ask her tough questions she didn't want to talk about. I was able to write down what I believe happened based off her memories, and this helped Yesenia guide her treatment in the appropriate direction. Keep in mind, all of this happened over three days.

So, for now, the therapy Yesenia is recommending the most is me teaching Vanessa self defense. While I do, Tabitha is going to work on getting one new caregiver who is fluent in British sign language, who can then bring the rest of them up to speed, as they've never had a deaf child - other than Jaz - to care for, so they only know the very basics. I suppose it's a good thing that children born to wizarding families are very rarely deaf for reasons that cannot be magically fixed. Our Jaz is one of the rare ones, but that just makes her all the more perfect.

So, since all of my afternoons for the foreseeable future are taken, I decided to unwind a bit tonight. And kill two Hippogriffs with one boulder by showing our support for Orion. Which led to you, me, and Oliver arriving at the Hog's Head at about half 8.

We got a good seat WAY in the back of the crowded pub, ordered drinks, and sat back to enjoy the theme of the night: Wild Wednesdays. This meant that the first entertainer we saw when we arrived was a woman dancing to a song called Wild Thing. It was NOT one of the designated full nude nights, and so, her stripping was more burlesque, down to her scanty knickers and sparkly, erm… pasties?

A few more entertainers of both genders performed as we watched and drank. Part of what I do actually like about this place is that Orion is MY son, and so while he probably mostly sells cheap quality liquor, he HAS expensive stuff available for snobs like me. I ordered us some precisely made cocktails to sip on while we Levitated Galleons over to our favorite performers.

You may or may not have noticed this prior to the incident, but I saw that there was a table full of Quidditch Players, and by this, I mean all the ones that I recognized were newly graduated or perhaps current but of age students of Hogwarts, from all four teams. I THINK they were actually there to cheer on their Quidditch mate - AKA Orion.

Being of age, they were naturally drinking, but most of them seemed to be pacing themselves. There was only one that seemed to be getting utterly pissed as soon as possible. Any guesses as to who?

Suddenly, the music changed, and our son's voice blared out over the din of the audience. "Oh oh Oh oh Oh oh OH oh oh oh! Oh oh Oh oh Oh oh OH oh oh oh!"
This signaled an ensemble of ALL the performers to get up on stage in sort of Hawaiian costumes and fire dance like heathens to a song called Tarzan Boy. I must say that it was very well done, and I'm not just being biased because our brilliant son was the one singing and leading the dance.

The song was an extended version which lasted about 6 minutes, but then when it was over, all the entertainers except for Orion left the stage, and now it was a woman (probably backstage with a microphone) singing a surprisingly good version of Pour Some Sugar on Me as Orion stripped off his costume to reveal some tight black silk knickers that left little to the imagination (I had to fight the urge to run up onto the stage and Apparate him straight home!).

BUT the good news is that he was doing a fire dance, and the only reason that he didn't just strip off completely was because they make more money on Fridays if they resist the temptation to show nudity on the other days. Which he actually told me during Viona's Hen Party.

 Barely a full minute into the show, and after I got past the squickiness of watching my son and Heir shake it for money, I was actually impressed by how much skill and attention to detail he put into his performance. Then he was literally cut short by Farrah.

SHE was three sheets to the wind by this point, and could barely be understood as she yelled at Orion. The unexpectedness of a spectator barging her way onto stage had shocked the live band into silence, which in turn made the singer fall silent. Thus, with the audience practically holding its breath, the argument was as clear as a drunk person can get.

"S'shameful! Yer too bloody smar' fer this! Droppin' outta school! AND! Shouldn't danssss like that! Yer body should be MINE!!! How YOU likit if I strip off in frun of E'RYONE?!??" Farrah demanded as she grabbed her shirt and pulled it off. She apparently does not feel the need to wear a bra, unless she was simply hot in her drunkenness and already removed it earlier.

Orion grabbed her arms. "What ARE you going on about?! We aren't dating!"

She shook free from his grasp and slapped him across the face, which interestingly enough, had no effect because the wards on the place to prevent violence.

"S'b'cuz YOU don' unnerstan how I feel!!" She roared, flinging her hands out in frustration and anger. "I HATE you showin' off fer MONEY! Should be only MINE to see!!!"

At this point, a couple of her friends had the grace to try to stop her from embarrassing herself further. They were grabbing her arms and trying to drag her off stage.

"No! LEMME GO! I hafta make 'im see!"

Orion held up a hand to stop his bouncers from taking her in hand. "I'll handle this. It seems that I need to get her sobered up enough to have an actual conversation."

Since she was struggling so much, her friends - who all know Orion to be a good person - let him take charge, even though it was by lifting her up and throwing her over his shoulder. She defied expectation by NOT fighting him, and instead, seeming to melt into his body. Or perhaps she passed out at that moment.

"Please, carry on without me. Start the next number!" And with that, he carried her off, presumably to cast a sobering charm on her and have a chat. MAYBE they'll FINALLY resolve their issues.

But before we find out for sure, this incident has reminded me that I forgot to tell you about what happened during my chaperone shift at the graduation party. It was nothing HUGE, as far as I witnessed, but Farrah was a bit tipsy that night too, and she used the liquid courage to roughly push Orion up against a wall and snog the breath right out of him. Which he responded to for a few minutes before pushing her away and telling her to leave him alone. So... I think she's been fairly consistent in her actions toward him; it must be ORION who is confused and not quite sure how he feels about her. Maybe you should have a fluffy dad talk with him?

Ride it, my pony, my saddle's waiting, come and jump on it,
Draco
P.S. In case you haven't noticed it yet, YES that new picture on our wall IS something I put there. I found a gorgeous picture on the internet and brought it to a specialty store that was able to blow it up to portrait size, and then frame it. Isn't she one of the most beautiful Queens you've ever seen?
Chapter 156

Thursday July 20, 2017

Draco,

No. No! No way. I love you more than life itself. I think I am very understanding of your quirks and those little unique things about you that make you just exactly you. And you are always so patient with my weird little habits. Even things that I logically think should annoy me, like you spending hours getting ready, I just find to be adorable. As long as I'm not pregnant, I just smile at you when you eat disgusting food combinations. You eat or drink more garlic than anyone I know, and all I do is cast a discreet breath freshening charm at you and snog you silly.

I draw the line at framed portraits of bugs on our wall. Just no.

What if we put together a very nice little photo album for you. Think about it, a whole book of pictures of beautiful queens. That we could shut. And tuck into a drawer. And we could even add the lovely pictures I took of you while you were trapped as an anteater! Unless you wanted THOSE blown up and framed as well?

I had a lovely time with you and Ollie last night at Ori’s, I had less fun today talking over the events with Ori himself.

I waited to go to his rooms until around noon, he has long nights and wants to sleep in when all he’s doing is running the bar, the nights he performs he sleeps in even longer, add his uncomfortable conversation with Farrah and I’m sure he needed a lot of extra rest.

I brought him brunch in bed to butter him up, but it seems he was waiting for one of us to bring up the enormous Farrah shaped elephant in the room.

“Hey Dad, you drew the short straw and got nominated to talk with me huh?”

I didn’t feel like mentioning that your email assumed he needed my fluff so I just answered with “talking with you is never the short straw. Your dad and I are worried about everything that’s been happening and we decided I’d be the more level headed to start out with. If you need your other dad’s personal brand of crazy, I can go get him though.”

Ha! Broke the ice immediately and got a laugh out of him!

Here’s the best part of the fact that I am the one who talked with him; I brought him food, mentioned we were worried, and he monologued everything I was going to ask. I get credit for having the conversation when all I did was walk in and listen.

Orion took one deep breath and then the words just came tumbling out. I love our brilliant son, he’s studious and constant, he’s always been so quiet except for when he’s performing that the veritable flood of words that came out shocked me. I don’t know if I’ve ever heard him speak so much all at once unless he was giving some sort of prepared speech.

I suppose if he knew one of us was going to talk with him he may have actually prepared this ahead of time.
“Look Dad, I love the family I’ve grown up in. I wouldn’t change our family for anything. But the life you and Dad are leading isn’t for me. You have a small army of children, and I know I don’t want any now or any time soon, probably ever. I love my nephews, I cherish the days that it’s my turn to babysit Rafael or Luka. I adore all of my siblings. But parenting just isn’t for me.”

I just nodded along, most of this I knew already and I wanted him to keep going. Get it all out.

So he did, “Farrah has taken our - admittedly amazing - chemistry and decided that for her, it means there are deeper feelings at play. I am attracted to her, we do have fantastic chemistry, the shagging has been bloody fantastic”

I cringed a bit at that. What? I’m open minded but remember I was raised a closeted prude, it can be hard to overcome that!

Ori laughed at me. “I have seen you wrapped around Dad like a starving octopus, and yet you blush when I tell you my sex life is passionate and good!”

More blushing from me. Because I’m ridiculous.

He sobered up a bit, “but, as I told her last night; I like her as a person, she’s attractive, but I’m not looking for anything serious. I’m not really looking for monogamy. And I am most assuredly not looking for a life partner who feels the need to dictate what I should or should not be doing based on her perception of me. I could be the most brilliant mind to ever walk the earth and if running the Hog’s Head and dancing in my pants is what I want to do then I get to do it.”

I nodded along because I certainly agree.

He continued, “I don’t owe the world anything based on my intelligence or my name or any other thing someone might use to decide my life for me. I don’t care if I’m Dad’s heir or your only hope for running Unity House, my life is my own to live.”

I did have to interrupt him there. “Wait just a minute there Orion Draco Malfoy! Have I ever implied you should be running Unity? Has your father ever insisted you do the traditional heir thing or be a "proper Malfoy?"”

"No, no, no! I was just using those as examples of what could be used to tell me to live my life differently!"

Fine. Go on.

"Farrah just isn't for me, and as much as I've had fun spending time with her - and I've enjoyed the angry sex - I had to completely break it off with her. The whole rivals from different backgrounds turned lovers turned forever may have worked for you and Dad, but it's not for me. At least right now. And with all of the public temper tantrums instructing me on how to live my life, I just can't keep any sort of a relationship going with Farrah at all.” He gave a sharp nod of his head, signaling the end of his speech.

I cleared my throat, "Well, I'm just glad you know who you are and have the strength to be up front about it all. I definitely didn't know myself as well when I was seventeen. I don't think I really knew who I was until I was forty!"

"Erm, Dad? You're only thirty-six."

"Exactly!"
I ended up having a really lovely conversation with him after that that had nothing to do with any of his drama or any of ours! Just a lovely afternoon catching up with my son. He's a pretty wonderful young man.

Wherever you are, my home is there,
Harry

Friday July 21st
My Harry and my Oliver,

Today has been the same as yesterday. Remember how I told you that yesterday, when I first tried to teach Vanessa self-defense, she was too timid to try to hit me, even half-heartedly, so I faked hitting her to get her to learn blocking. Exactly as I expected, even the fake hitting I explained to her that I would be doing, triggered her extremely high accidental magic defenses.

But don't worry, I had an array of shield spells to protect me and Morgana, who's watching the proceedings from a carrier on my back. Well, our little Queen does NOT like any potential threat to her daddy, and reacts with explosive accidental magic of her own.

I have Yesenia, Tabitha, and even my frienemy the Mediwitch on hand to make sure that if Vanessa needs a break, or if something important gets blown up, I have instant backup. It seems that the sight of poor little me in between TWO powerfully explosive little girls was enough to make those three witches faint.

From laughter.

That said, today has been a bit better since I decided to bring Jaz back and demonstrate the lessons with her. Her indefinable enigmatic personality has helped Vanessa to remain calm enough to actually block and hit a few times. Thus progress... sort of. I will definitely have to keep at it for the next few weeks.

You helped me see the beauty in everything,
Draco
P.S. By the way, I noticed that you accidentally knocked my picture off the wall and moved it to my closet, but don't worry, I put it back where it belongs.

Chapter End Notes

At this point, Draco has grown weary of trying to fight and suppress his ant obsession, and so, he's basically given in and embraced it, much to Harry's dismay. ^_^
Sunday July 23, 2017

Our Love,

Yes, our love. Since you so sweetly wrote your last letter to both Oliver and myself, I read it to him. I know I have your permission anyway to show him any and all of our emails throughout our relationship but this one was specifically written to the both of us so I definitely read him every word.

He says hi and he misses you so much.

No Ollie! I’m not writing that! No. I said no.

Fine. Our Oliver says that if you don’t hurry up and come home to us soon, he’s going to learn about all the things I like in bed, and will have no idea how to bring you pleasure.

Yeah, he said HOME to US.

Since we miss you so very much, we are going to leave here in just a little bit to come spend the day at Unity. We’ve avoided it up until now simply because of what you said about Vanessa’s distrust of males. But we both figured if we were at Unity, we wouldn’t have to be around you when you were working with Vanessa, but we could be on site simply to give you hugs and kisses in between sparring or therapy or even loo breaks.

And I’ve been so busy since you got pregnant, first taking care of you, then being pregnant myself, and then pretty constantly caring for newborns, that I haven’t spent nearly enough time at Unity. There are Kids there I’ve never even met! That was understandable when we lived outside of the country, and now that we live here, it’s understandable that I don’t know the Kids at the other locations. But how do I live so close to this beautiful place that I might as well have called home for the first years of our marriage and not know half the little residents?

Practically criminal I tell you!

But you’ll see all of this when you take your next break and find us running amok with the Kids at the Park. What you don’t know about is mine and Oliver’s evening activities before you got home last night.

Each night since the first night you came back home, you’ve basically climbed into bed, kissed us and the boys, and fallen right to sleep. Then we see you for a quick moment in the “morning” before you’re off again.

Now, if we are truly planning on fully committing to this triad relationship, then there are going to be times when it is just you and I available for sexy bed romps, times it will be just you and Oliver, and times when it will be just me and Oliver. Right now though, it’s so new that I’ve been trying to limit non threesome sexy times.

But we haven’t been able to properly touch you in months - years - eons!!! Ok it’s only been a few days since you and I had soapy shower sex, and only a few days before that we were all able to do things together. A man’s got needs Draco! So even though I know YOU feel I have nothing to be sorry for. And I KNOW there’s nothing to be sorry for, eighteen years of monogamy means I have some residual guilt to work out.
Hell, if anything, I think you’d be upset to find out we haven’t been shagging or touching because of my misplaced guilt. Sorry?

Well last night I made up for it. Kind of. I decided to start attempting to train Ollie out of his hair trigger response time. Obviously we can do it with spells or rings or potions, but I know he wants to be able to last longer naturally.

So I teased him for hours.

Gods Draco you should have seen it. He was so pretty; all hard and needy. I didn't tie him up or anything ... baby steps you know. But I told him that I wanted him to lie back, and let me do as much as I could to make him hard and wanting. I told him, "Ollie Love, I want to touch wherever I want, I am going to tell you so many filthy things, and at any point if you absolutely want to come, you can ask me to finish you, or you can reach down and finish yourself. But if you can hold out until I say it's time to come, I will make it very worth your while."

Muffy was taking care of the sleeping princes, so we had the entire enormous bed to ourselves. I had Ollie naked and leaned back on our mountain of cozy pillows.

I took off my own clothes, not slowly enough to be a striptease, but also not so fast that it wasn't at least a little fun to watch. He was half hard just from the anticipation and watching me disrobe, but I wanted him to get rock hard and stay that way for as long as he possibly could. I crawled between his legs, kissing his toned calves, the soft skin on his inner thighs, that sexy soft spot right where his hip stops and those dark curls start. By the time I made my way to kissing the tip of his shaft, it was already beading with precum at the tip. And he was definitely hard the way I wanted him.

I sucked just the head into my mouth, moaning at the taste of him, gave two nice deep sucks and pulled off. He definitely gave me a "what the hell are you stopping for" face, and at that point, I think he realized his stamina might increase but it was going to be torture. Delicious torture.

"And now it's time to read to you."

He sputtered at that, "er, huh, wait, what? Reading? Really?"

"Yes Oliver, really." I pulled up some pages I had printed out for just this moment. Oliver hasn't had the time or the inclination to read through our entire life in email form. He's skimmed a few interesting ones, the description we put together of our (first) wedding, the first gala at Unity House, the Drag Show at Unity California, but I've never pointed out any of our sexually descriptive emails until last night.

I began with: "Tuesday August thirty-first. Merlin, Salazar, Dumbledore, Godric, Hades, and all the Gods who ever existed! I am pretty sure I love you more at this moment than all of the love I've felt for you in my life combined." Do you recognize that email Draco? If not, here's a refresher from further into that particular message, "You made a strange noise, and then Blaise stuck a third finger in you. He was slowly working his way up to a fourth, because the last thing he ever wants is to hurt a lover. Eventually, he had you so ready that you arched your back and I could see your balls tighten tellingly. I watched Blaise quickly cover your shaft with his hot mouth and gulp down every drop. The sight nearly made me spunk my pants!!! With infinite patience, Blaise worked himself inside you. I continued to praise and kiss you, letting you know how hot you look and how beautifully you were taking that massive shaft. Gods! The sight of that tree trunk slowly disappearing inside you made my whole body feel like molten lava! And then when Blaise was as far as he could go, I nearly spunked again!"

Remember now? It was the email from the first time you had Blaise take me.
Once I read that one and the one right after where I gave my take on the whole event, I moved on to the following June, this time one of my emails. "My cock pointed towards your face, but not close enough for you to reach it, swollen and dripping, while I moaned and fucked myself on my own fingers. "Ungh, Dragon, I'm getting my hole ready for your cock to fill it. Mmm, it feels so good and I only have two fingers in so far. I can't decide if I want to finger myself just enough to get you inside, or if I want to stuff myself as full as I can so your fat cock can just slide right in where it belongs." I start rubbing my own cock with my left hand while I continue to stretch myself out for you. Then reaching down and rubbing my swollen bollocks. I start squeezing them, and moaning harder at the pleasure and pain combination. "Oh, my love, there go three. Shall I go for four? Would you like me to get four fingers up my arse Draco?"

That one was the email with the first time I tied you up and dominated you. It was ONE of your birthday celebrations. If you'll remember, later on that same weekend this happened: "Gods, I was sucking one of my best friends while my husband was sunk balls deep into my other best friend."
That time you were the first person to ever shag the golden trio all at once.

I kept going with all the different emails I'd printed out. Shag parties, sweet moments just the two of us, times I submitted to you. The whole time, I was softly running a finger or two all over his cock. Swirling my fingers around the head. Barely there grip on his bollocks. Stroking my fingers back just enough to tease at his hole. Once he was practically in tears from holding himself back, I even read our first puppy play date with Neville and Charlie.

Side note: it did NOT turn him off. At. All.

After being hard without coming or giving up and begging me to finish him off for three hours ... yes three entire hours ... I decided he'd had enough. I gave him a soft kiss, told him I was so proud of him, climbed into his lap, slipped myself onto his shaft, and rode him until he came with what can only be described as a howl.

Just wondering my Love, are you going to want a pensieve printout of that?

I'll see you in a few, I'm just going to top off the babies' tanks and we'll head over to Unity.

All of my love,
Harry

Sunday July 23rd
GODSDAMNIT HARRY!!!

Now I'm hard as granite over here and I can't linger in the loo too much longer lest Vanessa think I've gotten sick or something. I'm going to have to take this problem in hand, put a little elbow grease into it, and rub it out completely. Hmm... mmmhmm... Better!

I think you might have actually arrived before I read your email during my loo break, because I heard a bit of a commotion out in the playground that usually signals the younger Kids excited and clamoring to tell someone every single thing they can remember all at once.

As for Vani, she's actually made a surprising amount of progress in her therapy - not so much the self defense part as she still seems a bit too timid to put the proper amount of effort into her lessons,
BUT she has taken to Jaz so much that she's taken to calling her 'my Jaz' and actually seems to be trying when it comes to sparring with her.
So, I've actually decided to try something else in addition to self defense. I'm about to take Jaz and Vani to a spa, well and Morgana of course. I'll probably even stop and pick up Shtara, and also see if Eris and Hazel (and Pearl) want to come too. I'm fair certain that Vani won't be ready for a massage - even from a female therapist (although I'll give her the option, no need to make her feel left out), but she'll probably enjoy having a mani and pedi.

Thus, I won't actually be here, but before I go, I am definitely going to hunt you down and give you and Oliver a bunch of kisses.

All my love,
Draco

*Note: Vanessa and Jaz followed Draco after he got out of the loo, without him noticing, until he found Harry and Oliver and gave them a bunch of kisses, rather inappropriate ones considering that they were in the playground with a bunch of kids. This made Vanessa blush and ask Jaz how a boy could kiss a boy, and so Jaz got to explain the wonderful concept of being gay to her. Vanessa not surprisingly feels a lot more comfortable around Draco now :-)
She still doesn't want to be too close to other men though.
Monday July 24, 2017

My Dragon,

Alright, I have to put my foot down. I know that you are ever so attached to our Morgana, I know she absolutely loves and adores you. But I miss my daughter dammit! I need a Daddy/Daughter day! It's been over a week since you went in to help Tabitha with Vanessa. You spent a few solid days there and then you have spent all of your waking hours there even when you started coming home to sleep.

And even yesterday when I grew restless and missing the both of you (and Jaz although I've seen more of her than of either you or Morgana), you essentially saw us coming and ran in the other direction! I know, I know, I know, that's not what happened. I think your plan to take them all out for a spa day was a lovely idea. And I probably would have invited myself along if I hadn't already promised the Kids that Ollie and I were there to spend the day with them. But today is a new day and if I can't convince you to stay at home, I will at least be keeping the little Queen at home.

I know you're her favorite but don't you think she misses her Daddy and her brothers and her Oliver even a little bit?

You're still asleep so I can babble for at least a little while before you wake up and begin fighting with me. Yesterday at Unity was so much fun! I know I said this before I showed up, but after spending the day there it just reinforced the feelings, I have not been spending enough time there! Per my usual, I had the most fun running around the Park with the middle-aged Kids. Climbing all over the Park, challenging Kids to the climbing wall, I even had a couple of rousing games of "Harry in the Middle" which is an awful lot like "Monkey in the Middle" except Harry is always stuck in the middle and everyone seems to think it's hilarious.

I'm sure this will come as no surprise to you, but Ollie was particularly taken with the babies. One of the caregivers offered to watch Dylan and Gabriel since I was keeping so many of his young charges occupied, and I kind of hemmed and hawed a bit, not quite sure how to respond without offending. I know they're very capable, Tabitha would require nothing less, but I'm sure they're not specially trained to deal with seizures. What if Gabe were to seize and we wouldn't notice? What if they thought he was fine and he ended up on his tummy with no one noticing and then he seizes and it ends up messing with his airways and he dies? What if Draco?!?

Oliver jumped in with a quick, "Oh our boys have been cooped up in carriers most of today, can we lay out all the little ones on a blanket and let them roll around in the sunshine together?" Thank goodness, I know Oliver knows what to do if Gabe has an episode and now I don't have to feel like an arsehole for telling a professional caregiver that I don't trust them to caregive!

Every time I glanced over at the little puddle of babies, Oliver had one of our boys on his lap along with a different Unity Baby. I already knew this from pretty much every night for the past few months, but he looks damn sexy when he's smiling at a bunch of babies. What can I say? I have a thing for fit as hell men who love children. Sue me.

Holding Morgana hostage is probably 99% because of how much I miss her. But there is that other 1% that is hoping being without her for the day will entice you to come home earlier than bedtime tonight. We can have a lovely snuggle in bed, reading stories to the babies, cuddling and kissing and reconnecting after way too many days with only emails and insta-owls to keep us connected.

And perhaps when the only people left awake are you and Ollie and me .... we could read some more stories to Oliver. I may have grabbed a handful of email descriptions to tease him with the other night, but there are plenty more I haven't read him yet. And if you haven't heard filthy smut read out loud in Draco Malfoy's posh accent that is caramel coated sex, well have you really lived?

And speaking of never truly having lived ... I think one of the best parts of living is traveling ...

Sorry, that was a piss-poor segue. So, here's what I'm thinking. You've been so busy, and I'm sure will continue to be pretty busy, caring for Vanessa. By the middle of August, if not before, those of us teaching at Hogwarts will need to spend quite a bit of our time there prepping our classrooms, preparing lesson plans, and definitely finishing up our living quarters! So what do you say, for my birthday next week, we take a trip? Some last minute end of summer getaway. We can bring Oliver to one of our favorite vacation spots, we can visit old homes and their coordinating Unity Houses, or we can discover some place new that we've never been so it can be a new experience for us all.

Please please please? I'm getting the Wanderlust itching so badly!

Yours,
Harry

Monday July 24th
My passion,

You were ever so happy to learn that I had made a deal with Vanessa: In exchange for taking her to the spa and making her look all pretty yesterday, she would be patient today and put up with Yesenia and the new caregiver that was hired specifically to care for Vani. Meaning that this new caregiver is fluent in BSL and is a female who is sensitive to traumatized little girls.

Even better, Jaz volunteered to go in this afternoon and just play with her. I actually think that Jaz has found her very own best friend. Like Elena found in Kisa the day they first met. Thus, Jaz has asked Zaire to stop in for a bit as well, since he's taking a bit of a break before the opening of his restaurant - which he has scheduled to open Friday August 4th. I think. I could be off on that, I've been too busy to keep track, which makes me feel terrible, but I'm certain that Pippa knows and is helping out a bit as she eases herself back into a full work schedule.

In any case, with me at home all day today, you felt like it was a bit of a holiday. Thus, you insisted on a lovely picnic with the three of us (including Oliver obviously) our Feisty Foursome, our youngest set of almost triplets, and Kingsley. It was a wonderful meal, full of laughter at the antics of our energetic sprogs, and a very relaxed way to broach a very serious subject.

You babbled excitedly at top speed to poor Kingsley, practically shaking him in your enthusiasm, which didn't quite help him to understand what you were going on about. Luckily, I was able to explain in business format, using actual documents I'd had drawn up by our lawyers. It seems that once Kingsley managed to wrap his head around what we were asking, he was inclined to give his blessings.

However, he made a stipulation that we had to wait until the other matter was decided first. See, the hearing for Oliver has been scheduled for Tuesday August 15th, and Kingsley feels that the Wizengamot will be able to focus more clearly on the matter at hand if they aren't ALSO trying to wrap their heads around the very first legally recognized triad gay marriage in the Wizarding World. Once Oliver's case is decided either way - and Kingsley already has a good feeling about it - he will give his formal, erm… special permission, as it were, and the three of us can be married anytime we like.

I personally am hoping for a lowkey and rather private ceremony with just our circle in attendance (and maybe not all of them, just the immediate family), NOT because I am in any way ashamed by this, but because I actually feel that it will be better all around if we keep it simple, get it done, and then make an announcement in the Daily Prophet in an effort to minimize the almost certain chaos that will erupt once the public finds out.

Then, on the other hand, part of me wants to NOT announce the marriage at all and keep it secret - if possible. Because I am afraid that once word gets out, parents of students attending Hogwarts will pull their children until Oliver is sacked, as they will likely blame him for corrupting us, and thus, not want him in a position to corrupt their children. I daresay that if I were a professor there, they'd want me sacked too, and only allow you to continue on because you are their Savior and are allowed a certain amount of leeway that the rest of us mere mortals aren't.

But that's a worry for another day. First, we have to worry about the hearing, and then the wedding.

In the meantime, we get to practice for the wedding night as much as we want. Speaking of, it seems that the babies are all back to sleep again and we three can have a second round of naughty naughty loving. I'm thinking that I'll cast a denial spell on Oliver and have him ride my shaft whilst you attempt to suck him dry.

There's a lii-ight, lii-ight, in the darkness of everybody's life,
Draco

P.S. I'm so happy that all three of us have gotten to a point where we're comfortable holding Gabriel as he's seizing, without panicking. Mostly. I know I certainly panic a little bit even though I keep it in check, and judging by the look on your face, it's the same (or worse) for you, but Oliver really seems to shine in this aspect, remaining a calm and soothing rock that helps all of the rest of us stay grounded until the episode has passed. He deserves extra kisses!

P.P.S. It seems my picture of that beautiful queen has accidentally been knocked off the wall and misplaced again, but don't worry, I have a better one to replace it.
Harry's happy but Draco's in a foul mood.

Tuesday July 25, 2017

My Own,

First of all, thank you so so much for taking the day for us yesterday. I threw a bit of a fit and was putting my foot down to spend the day with Morgana and instead I got Morgana AND you! It was an amazing day in the sunshine. I loved our picnic. You were right, I was ever so happy to have a day with the loves of my life. As well as our youngest loves. You always know just what I need.

Except for knowing what I need when it comes to our upcoming wedding. I love you, and I know you mean well, but I refuse to hide our love away. I'm not ashamed of you, or Oliver, or being in a triad. I can understand wanting to just do a "small" ceremony with "just" our circle. I can even understand not necessarily announcing it to the Prophet the way you and I did the first time. But there is no job, no public opinion, that will make me willing to pretend one of my husbands isn't my husband.

I lived in a literal closet for ten years of my life. I lived in the metaphorical closet about my sexuality for a few years after realizing who I was. I refuse to live in a closet that hides something I am not even remotely ashamed of simply to keep the public opinion at bay.

All of your arguments are valid, public opinion of me is always going to come with a "Get out of Jail Free because I killed Voldemort" card. You and Oliver do not have that card in your pocket. It can mean that there will be backlash or people asking for Oliver's sacking. I understand if we want to have a longer engagement and not get married until Oliver has had a year to settle into Hogwarts. I told him there was no rush and I am willing to wait to go from engaged to married until he's ready to make the commitment. But I absolutely REFUSE to marry someone, commit my life to the three of us, pledge my love and devotion, and then pretend we're just friends so the Wizarding World at large doesn't have to think about three dicks in the same marriage.

I do actually agree with Kingsley's requirement that we wait for the hearing concerning Ollie's ex-in-laws to finish up. That is only a few weeks from now anyway. Let's get him every damn knut he deserves and then we can start planning the wedding. Well, not EVERY knut he deserves! He deserves more than he's asking for, but we'll at least get him every knut he's asking for.

Although we've talked with Kings about the legalities, we've talked with just you and I and we've talked all three of us, we've mentioned the things we're waiting on before we start the planning, but we've uh ... never actually proposed. Don't you think we should officially propose? I think Oliver deserves that. And I may have found the most beautiful rings for us. They've each got three black diamonds and the most unique finish I've ever seen in a ring. It's set to look like a fault line. But instead of a fault causing an earthquake and ripping away the foundation, the three strong stones rise out of the fault.

I just, it's us ya know? This event that could have broken us, either of us having feelings for a third person, became a way for us to bring even more love into an already love-filled life. We found a third person who seems to balance us both. We found someone who loves our children. We found someone who understands our insanity and revels in it instead of running away screaming. We get a third adult to love, and two additional children to add to our collection in Parker and Cassie.

So, like I said before, what if we go away on a short trip. And you and I can officially propose to Ollie. When we get back, we can call a family dinner and announce our engagement (provided he says yes of course!) to all of the children.

THEN, and only then, we can set a date and start planning a wedding.

Yours in Love,
Harry

P.S. Yes, our Ollie deserves ALL the kisses for how wonderful he is with Gabe. And then some extra ones for how wonderful he is with Dylan. And probably a few more for not being offended that Morgana isn't fully in love with him yet. And maybe a couple more because of how much he cares about us. And then another million or so just for good measure!

P.P.S. No!! No more pictures! NOOOOOOOOOOOOOOOOOOOO!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!

Thursday July 27th
My soul,

I am SO glad we're going on Holiday this weekend!!! I know it's going to be a bit of a challenge with my parents and Molly and Arthur teaming up to watch our babies and littles - with Muffy and Dibly on hand at ALL times to bring Gabriel and Morgana to us at the slightest hint of trouble - but hopefully we'll have long stretches to ourselves this weekend.

I do, however, have to apologize for today. I had promised to meet you and Oliver at a muggle restaurant called Greenhouse in Mayfair, and I wasn't late or anything, but I was in such a foul mood that I may have just changed Oliver's mind about marrying us. I snarled at the incompetent waitress; I made the entire family sitting next to us cry (including the dad), and I threatened to buy the place so I could have the chef fired for overcooking my prime rib!

And that was just what you witnessed, you have no idea about the brawl I nearly started in the gents when I had to go to the loo. Let's just say that there was a bloke getting more urine on the floor than in the urinal and he did NOT appreciate me taking him to task for it. I think the only reason he didn't try to drown me in the toilet is because I had him in a headlock with his arm behind his back before he could finish his threat.

You are a bit used to this behavior and know that when it pops up, there's generally an underlying reason and you just have to be patient until the storm runs its course. I'm sorry if I ruined your dinner, and I'll apologize to Oliver in person for making him look at me as if I was an insane person who'd just gone on a killing spree, but...

Sigh...

So, as you know, Vanessa is currently at Unity House as a direct result of some traumatic experiences, and we're all - Tabitha, Yesenia, Brigitta (the new caregiver), and I - trying our best to help her work through her issues and heal as much as possible - mentally since her physical wounds are already healed up with minimal scarring.
Well, what you probably don't know (because I couldn't stop snarling long enough to tell you during dinner), is that Vani trusts Jaz more than any of the rest of us (although she's getting there), and so, told Jaz in detail what happened to her.

I know, I know! We've never tried to shield our kids from the unpleasant parts of life, but still, we're not likely to describe sheer violence like that. The part that upset me the most was when Jaz came to me (about an hour before dinner) and asked me if such things really could happen, and why, and what normally happens to criminals who do such things.

So, I got the 'privilege' of explaining to our beautiful little innocent daughter things I don't want to think about, much less think about WHY they bloody do them!!! UGH!

Thus my terrible mood.

I'm currently in the Crystal Room, where I went to finish venting when I realized that I had turned into full blown Hurricane Draco and was beginning to take it out on you and Oliver. The good news is that I smashed enough Crystal to feel better, so I'm going to sign off and go apologize to you in every way the two of you want. I think maybe starting on my knees, what do you think?"

Hold me now, it's hard for me to say I'm sorry - After all that we've been through, I will make it up to you, I promise to,

Draco

P.S. What in the bloody hell did you do to my picture? -_-
Chapter 160

Chapter Summary

Draco takes a punishment, and then the boys go on holiday for Harry's birthday.

Friday July 28, 2017

The Heart of Me,

First of all, I understand you well enough that I knew exactly what was happening when you began harassing the entire restaurant yesterday. Well, actually, I didn't know the specifics, but I knew the gist of it was the current Vanessa situation and feeling helpless to fix the atrocities in the world put you in full bitch mode. Now that I know the specifics, I realize it wasn't ONLY that, but also your protective paternal instincts increasing that helplessness.

Secondly, don't worry, I did my usual following after your trail of destruction giving apologies and excuses and a few bribes here and there. I didn't know about the man in the loo, but he covered a public loo in urine, so fuck that guy.

Third, definitely don't worry, even before we saw you on the playroom floor on your knees in apology, I explained to Oliver what was happening and while he didn't like it, he definitely understood once I explained the behavior came from your stress due to being entrenched in a really emotionally damaging situation. He did ask me why we had all decided to go out to dinner then if I knew you were going to throw a strop. I had to explain that this behavior doesn't come every time you deal with drama and when it does, it's never at a predictable time.

I have the feeling Ollie is not going to be quite so understanding of your tantrums, but he definitely still loves us. Perhaps this is going to be a good thing, when I follow around after you cleaning up your tantrum messes, it makes it easier for you to justify the behavior because you know anyone who dealt with your nonsense is going to get an apology. If Oliver is there to tell you you went overboard, maybe you'll find healthier ways of letting out your frustrations. I am fairly guilty of enabling your rampages.

See? Ollie is so good for us. You and I have balanced each other in so many ways, but we are two more extreme ends that play off each other. Oliver is much more of a middle ground person, so instead of yo-yo-ing back and forth between our extremes, maybe he will keep us on more of an even keel.

Not that I think I need to explain to you why I think Ollie has been good for us. You've seen it yourself. He's smart and strong and funny and hard working. He loves children; he is caring. I can't believe my life is this wonderful world where I have two amazing men who love me and whom I love.

Two insanely fit, awesome in the sack, delicious, delicious men. Whom I had a fantastic night with last night. This is probably why I work so hard to clean up after your fits, because it usually ends in some fabulous naked times. Hmm, now I'm not sure if Oliver is going to change the current cycle if he got a taste of the aftermath last night. Mmmm.
Last night after you had sent your email, you must have popped directly into the playroom without me hearing the crack of apparition. I got the notification you had sent the email, I read it, and then Oliver and I finished putting the babies to sleep (Dylan was trying to be cute enough to be allowed to stay up way past his bedtime!). He and I finally got them to sleep and sat waiting for you for about five more minutes before deciding to go find you. Because I assumed you'd have been in our room by then but you weren't, I decided to do my "Point Me Love" spell to find you.

And oh my goodness did it point me to something I love. You, my haughty, pure-blooded, aristocratic, snobby, gorgeous man, down on your knees in supplication in the middle of our playroom. The sight of you in nothing but a pair of tight black boxer-briefs, miles of moonlit pale skin, a shock of platinum hair falling over your downcast eyes, those strong arms full of dragons held tightly behind your back, it knocked the wind out of me. And Ollie must have felt the same way, since I heard his low guttural groan coming from behind me as we walked into the room.

I don't normally get into a dominating headspace. Since the three of us have been together, I think Oliver has only seen it once and it was less Dom and more "guy who beat you up as lovingly as possible because you felt you needed it." So this was going to be a new experience for him. And as much as I rarely Dom, I do enjoy seeing how beautiful you are when you submit, so I was all for what was happening.

I walked around your kneeling form slowly, but making my footsteps fall hard enough to be heard even if you had dropped yourself off into subspace. "Look at this beautiful boy at my feet, all mine and Oliver's to play with as we see fit. Am I seeing that right, hmm?"

You answered with a breathy but determined: "Yes Sir."

"Lovely. My dear Oliver, it sounds like keeping his hands to himself is a problem for our Draco, can you bind his hands up nice and tight for me?" I was a bit worried that he wouldn't get into this, but he started nodding immediately and moved to bind up your hands. "Thank you, taking care of such a naughty dragon can be a daunting task for just one person, it's so nice to have an extra set of arms to help discipline him properly." I turned to you, asking, "Now, do you have anything to say to us, my sweet Dragon?"

"Sirs, I am sorry for lashing out at you. I will take any punishment you want to bestow upon me. I wish for it, I want to make things right."

"Of course sweet boy, we'd love to punish you, wouldn't we Ollie?"

He seemed to finally find his voice. "Very much so Harry. He seems awfully sorry, but he was such trouble earlier."

I went and sat on the cozy loveseat, directing Ollie to come sit next to me. "Alright Pet, come climb across our laps. Present that sweet little arse for us to do as we see fit."

You were so fucking sexy, crawling across the expanse of floor, climbing over Oliver to place your head in my lap, your thighs across his, and your gorgeous arse right in the middle where we could both easily reach. And reach we did. First I spelled off those pants. You looked so fit, but I wanted to see all that pale smooth skin before I reddened it. Without any warning, I gave a sharp smack to your left arse cheek. Oooh, it was already pinking up so prettily. Probably because even the first spank was a full strength spank. I gestured to Oliver that it was his turn to land a spank on you, he decided to start on the other cheek.

He and I swapped back and forth, seemingly with no pattern as to who was spanking when and where. You were letting out cries and moans that were so sweet. I'm sure my stiff prick was poking into your chest. After a while, Oliver mentioned that your own was poking him in the thigh. Sometimes your punishments are just a release, and other times they make you hard as a rock. This was obviously the latter.

I summoned some lube onto my fingers and began stretching you out while Oliver kept up the spanking. You rutted quite hard into Ollie's lap and then froze like you weren't sure if that was allowed. Oliver obviously was fine with it since he immediately said, "Are you going to get yourself off humping against my leg Draco? You're allowed to if you'd like to come sweetheart."

What followed was an immediate increase in your moans and cries, you rutting up against Oliver as fast as you could. I kept fingering you, even adding a second finger to help stretch you out. Eventually you couldn't seem to hold back any more and you came with a stuttering of your hips and a deep groan. I spelled you clean as softly as I could. "Do you feel better now after that my Dragon?"

"I'm still so sorry I took out my anger on you both, you didn't deserve it. And now I've come and you're both still hard. It doesn't seem fair Sirs."

Aww my sweet boy! "That's not a problem, if you really need to make this up to us I am sure we'd both enjoy your pretty mouth." I looked over at Oliver who was nodding his own agreement. Which is why the last thing you probably remember was kneeling between us, switching back and forth between the two of us, moaning, groaning, and humming your way through sucking us both. By the time he and I each finished in your mouth, you looked wrecked. Flushed face, spit-slick swollen mouth, glassy eyes.

I carried you to bed, Oliver covered you with a blanket, and he and I climbed into bed surrounding you.

But now we're all three on the plane to Amsterdam for our weekend away! I'm already a bit hysterical worrying about our babies. But I think the adults and the elves are well aware of how much we meant what we said about bringing us the babies if there were any issues. I'd rather be disturbed on our weekend away than miss something important we're needed for!

I'm glad we picked somewhere close enough that they could pop over to us easily and I will definitely be able to pop back Sunday morning to make sure I get Siri and Zwei their birthday breakfast in bed!

Ooh! Looks like we're about to land.

Love Always,

Harry

Friday July 28th
Oh Amsterdam!

The first thing we did when we got to our destination - after checking into our accommodations - was go to a coffee shop. The coffee was even more terrible than usual! Even you made a disgusted face, but it wasn't really the coffee most people went to the shop for. It was a muggle drug called Marijuana. The shop sold it in just about any amount desired, but since all we wanted was a little (a very little), we ordered just one spliff each.

That little bit of mellow happiness was enough to propel us through a very giggly shopping spree. I don't even remember what we bought! I will say this, if you wanted something specific for your birthday, chances are very good we bought it.

After we got insatiably hungry, we abandoned our shopping to go to a nice restaurant, and it was a completely different experience than dinner last night. I was in an excellent mood, and you two were still a bit giggly from our visit to the coffee shop. Or perhaps just from the happiness and relief of having a few hours to ourselves.

During dinner, Muffy had to pop in with Morgana, but once she had a few snuggles from me and a bit of discrete feeding from you, she dropped off to sleep and Muffy brought her back home. To your relief, Muffy also reported that Gabriel had gone a little unfocused once, but since Molly was holding him and documenting the episode, it was deemed not quite important enough to interrupt us. You disagreed until Oliver pointed out that the grandparents had to get used to caring for him at those times too, since there might be times in the future - say while you're teaching a class - that they'll have to do so. So you agreed and let it slide.

After dinner, we finished off our spliffs, and then found the sort of club where everyone was welcome - from gay to straight and everything in between. It was a dance club, not a sex club, but you were in the mood to get tipsy and dance badly. Before anything else, we sat at a table and ordered a few cocktails to sip on. You and Oliver were so cute! Sitting practically in each other's laps and kissing every five seconds or so.

Even as I watched you, I had one eye on the dance floor. One woman in particular was dancing all on her own, and even though she was clearly close to being bladdered, she was dancing better than anyone else there. I was definitely interested in dancing with her at some point - maybe after a discretely cast sobering charm.

I stopped watching her to pay closer attention to a couple of lesbians nearly shagging right on the floor. You noticed what I was looking at and laughed, making Oliver wonder what the joke was. Before explaining, you kissed him, and as you did, that drunken yet highly skilled dancer decided that I wasn't paying enough attention to her. She walked over to our table and informed me:

"Yer the best looking bloke here!"

I smirked at her in agreement - well mostly, I personally think that you and Oliver beat me, especially together, but that's not the point. The point was that she didn't really give me a chance to respond before straddling my lap and snogging the bloody hell out of me. At first, I didn't really respond, but at the sound of you laughing, I decided to take advantage of the situation. She ground herself into my lap and made my trousers far too tight in less than a minute.

Needing a break and not wanting to spunk my pants like a teenager, I lifted her off my lap and looked over at you.

"Go on and dance, I know you want to," you permitted, grabbing Oliver's hand in yours. "I'm going to show Ollie that you've taught me how to dance rather well over the years."

"Thanks love!" I replied with a grin, kissing first you, and then Oliver before leading the dancer back onto the floor. And even though you SAID you were going to dance with Oliver, I caught the both of you just standing there watching me for quite some time before actually dancing.

I LOVE dancing with you, and over the years, I've taught you a lot, but even so, you just can't do some things, such as the splits. I can't either - especially with my arse growing ever bigger! - but I can get close enough to impress most people. Additionally, I was able to swing her around my body and do a few tricks that should have been impossible since she was drunk and we'd never danced together before, but am I a wizard or am I a wizard? Yes, I totally cheated by using magic to make sure that I didn't drop her if either of us was just a hair off the timing.

After dancing ever more flamboyantly for a good hour, I finally had enough of the hot and sweaty foreplay. Kissing my temporary dance partner goodbye - to her disappointment since she had sobered up enough to not just consent, but practically beg me to 'help her find her hotel room.'

But this was YOUR birthday weekend, and so, if there was to be any playing, it was going to be ONLY and EXACTLY as you wanted, and I know you NEVER want to play with women. So I sent her away with a heavy kiss and a sharp smack to her lovely arse. Watching her pout and walk away until I realized that you were standing right in front of me with a look on your face like you couldn't help but be amused at my antics.

Funnily enough, Oliver likes to dance, but he never practiced it enough to feel confident in what he was doing (we'll have to cure that as soon as possible), and so, he'd had enough of dancing and had apparently made some sort of suggestion to you that you were eager to get to. So, we left the club and returned to our penthouse suite, where you were actually a bit peckish, and so, ran off with Oliver to grab pizza or something while I take a quick shower to wash the sweat off me. I simply had to write an email first, for some crazy reason, haha.

Off to pop into the shower, try not to take too long with the pizza!

You've got the best of my love,
Draco
Chapter 161

Chapter Summary

The boys have an important discussion, and then they go out clubbing again.

Saturday July 29, 2017

My Love,

Yesterday was a full day starting with a lovely date at that restaurant I barely remember because of all the giggling, the club with so much dancing, and then what would have been a late night of shagging ourselves silly all night long. Instead it ended up being a night where yes we stayed up all night long, but there was altogether too little shagging. But it was honestly quite perfect.

Our poor sweet Oliver, the three of us have had so many conversations concerning where he fits in our relationship. We've talked at length about how you and I weren't missing anything, we're not trying to fit him into some missing part of our relationship, we fell in love with him and we're giving him his own brand new space with us. That it's not the two of us with him added, but the three of us together. That you and I will have all of our history, I wouldn't get rid of those memories for anything, but this isn't adding him on the edges of an established marriage, it's creating a new marriage with the three of us.

He needs to know that I love him for him and that you love him for him. Our new marriage will be the three of us, but it will also be a combination of my relationship with you, my relationship with him, and your relationship with him. That we love him within our triad relationship, but I as Harry also love Oliver. That you as Draco, also love Oliver. I know how it feels in my heart, but when I start writing this out, I feel as though I'm talking like a rambling moron. Hopefully you've been able to translate my insane rants long enough that you can understand what I'm saying.

We've talked at length about how serious we are about him. That he's not settling for some half-arsed commitment. His long-held fears about not mattering in his relationship. Wanting love and trust and a real life, a real family. I'm hoping we've been very clear that we already consider him family, we're just impatiently waiting to make it official.

But he's fit into US so easily, so beautifully, so seamlessly like we've had this Oliver-shaped spot just waiting for him - that we forgot to ask where he stands on the playing with others aspect of our sex lives. We've always been so up front about who we are, how we play, and how it's never affected our love. We have no shame, and make no apologies for enjoying a sex life that includes sharing our bed with other people. Hell, Oliver has taken part of one of those encounters when we had our other universe doppelgangers in our bed.

You've explained to him, in detail, about your sharing kink. I've told him exactly how and why submitting to you has been perfect for me and that often includes performing with others for the pleasure of my Master. Hell, I read him some very steamy scenes that include a number of other people. Logically he knows that we have an extensive ... playgroup. And while we've never explicitly asked him if he is on board for this to continue, I assumed and I think you assumed that we would continue since he never expressed any negativity during any of our conversations.
Which is why when he and I went out for pizza last night, I was shocked to see tears running down his sweet face.

I pulled us to the side, out of the way of other customers trying to pick up their finished pizzas. "Ollie sweetheart, what's wrong? Are you alright?"

He just about melted into me, his crying became harder. I could barely understand what he was saying, just catching bits and pieces. "How can you ..." "want a woman instead?" "Ours!"

Oh. I think we all needed to talk. I kept him in my arms but herded us over to the counter where I threw a ridiculous wad of muggle money to the young guy at the counter. "We've had a bit of an emergency, would that be enough to cover a delivery of our pizzas to The Conservatorium?" The kid's eyes bugged out a bit. "Erm, sorry is it not enough?"

He stammered a bit. "It's enough sir, which room should I be delivering it to?"

"If you're sure, the room's booked under the name 'Malfoy.' It's the Rooftop Suite. Thank you so much!" As soon as the guy nodded his acceptance, I started walking Ollie to the closest apparition space so we could come back to the room and talk over his feelings with you.

We made it into the rooms, and Gods Draco, I love being there emotionally for the both of you. I truly do. But walking in, seeing your face light up at seeing us come back to you, and dripping wet in nothing but a towel - and then knowing I wasn't going to ravish you but instead have a deeply emotional talk? Took every ounce of my self control to tell you we needed to have a long (and sadly unsexy) talk.

I luckily didn't have to say anything, you took one look at my concerned face and then took in Ollie's puffy red eyes and the tears that were still dripping down his cheeks, and held your arms open for him. "Come here Love, and tell me the problem!" He careened into your arms and you walked him over to the couch, dropping down and pulling him into your lap. I followed and we surrounded him, his face to your chest and my own chest up against his back. We let him cry himself out until he was calm enough to talk.

I don't need to do a line by line retelling of the whole night. It was exhausting to live the first time, I don't know if I have the emotional strength right now to relive it that closely. But I'm glad he was able to get his worries off of his chest, and hopeful that he realizes he has as much say in our actions as either you or I do.

What it came down to was, he had really been looking at the sharing thing from the direction of you viewing me. He "knew" our playing involved me being shared and you enjoying the beauty of watching it. But somehow he hadn't wrapped his mind around or even allowed himself to imagine you touching anyone else. Again, logically he knew that was a portion of our dynamic - especially since I read him all about our first playdate with Blaise, Ron, and Hermione - but he hadn't dwelled on it at all and seeing you kissing and flirting with that woman at the club last night was a shock to his system.

It certainly didn't help that he was still mostly stoned when it first happened, so when he actually started registering what was happening, he not only was seeing it for the first time but was dropping from a chemical high. Looking back on our time at the club, that's likely what froze him into staring at you instead of dancing with me.

You and I both explained to him, at length, that we will only ever play (with others) when all three of us are wanting it to happen. That we've gone through phases of playing what seems like every weekend, to barely touching anyone else for months, and even that time when we did nothing for years.

The not playing at all for years was the fact that I think finally calmed him down. Knowing that because we made our relationship a priority while overcoming a rough time in our marriage, we made the decision to keep sex within our relationship, and were completely content and still in love throughout the entire time. I think he was terrified that if he told us NOT playing was a requirement for him (at least at first), that we'd stop loving him or stop wanting to be with him.

The only sexual acts that don't need all three of our prior consent will be those times with each other. I love when the three of us are all together. But there are going to be times I just have to have you that moment and I'm not going to go find Oliver to ask his permission to shag my husband. There are going to be times I am teaching where you will want to find him in the stables and shag him silly, there's no need for either of you to send me an insta-owl asking for permission to shag your future husband. As long as all three of us are making sure we're all satisfied and feeling loved, anything between any of the three of us is allowed at all times.

Once that seemed resolved, the three of us spent the entire night, past sunrise, lying in bed holding each other and talking. Talking about everything and nothing. Just catching up and learning each other even more. And then ...

Gods Draco it was so beautiful. I had a completely different plan for this. I had a whole speech. I had reservations at a lovely restaurant. But as I looked at the two beautiful men in my arms, seeing the sun starting to come spilling into our rooms, the light hitting your skin, the gorgeous contrast of our three skin tones, I knew it had to be that moment. I wordlessly summoned the ring box.

"Oliver, you are the most unexpected beloved blessing. I was so excited to have your friendship that I didn't see how much love I had for you until it already had me on my knees. Now I'm on my knees for real. Would you do me the honor of marrying me?" I looked at you, your gorgeous smile that was previously all for me lit up for us both, and you grasped Ollie's hand. I can't even apologize for the tears that were spilling down my face, I'm just glad I managed that much.

And before Ollie could answer, you used your free hand to open the ring box, adding, "Marry me too?"

He just about threw himself across the bed, crying, kissing both of our faces. I had to ask: "Is that a yes?"

Laughing through the tears, he shouted, "It's definitely a yes, are you thick?"

I moaned, "Oh Gods, now there are two of you!"

You and I wrestled the ring onto his finger and quickly removed anything else we were wearing.

But now we're gearing up to go out clubbing again for my birthday!

And, erm, Ollie wants to say something, but he was too nervous to ask you to your face. So ...

Draco, after last night, I feel much better about us. Knowing you're committed to me. To us. I am not ready to share you or Harry. But I think it would be fun to see you let other people work you up with dancing or touches - or even kisses - if I know at the end of the night you will be using all that pent up tension to satisfy me. And our Harry of course. Love-Oliver Isn't he so damn cute? Signing his part of the email?

Hurry up and finish getting ready you peacock!
Yours,
Harry

Sunday July 30th
My Harry and our Oliver,

OUR Oliver! That's still something that quite takes my breath away. I know you know this (Harry), but it might be news to Oliver that when I was a young arsehole bastard plotting to kill Dumbledore and help the Dark Lord take over the world, I had come to the acceptance that my life was just never going to be happy. That I was fated to do bad things and deserved nothing but bad things in return.

I always had hope deep down inside me that maybe the Dark Lord wouldn't kill you and instead give you to me as a toy, but in that version of events, I could NEVER have been kind to you or shown you love. I would have had to abuse you and make you miserable for the Dark Lord's entertainment so that he didn't decide it was time to kill you after all.

It was only in my wildest and most secret dreams that I allowed myself to entertain the thought that we could be together AND HAPPY. Even after you defeated him, the most I could let myself hope for was possibly friends who didn't try to murder each other every time we caught a glimpse of one another in Diagon Alley.

But then I took a risk and tried out this muggle thing called email, and that led to us forming a friendship which led to me getting drunk and taking another risk by proposing at quite possibly the most egregious moment - but miraculously, you were receptive.

There are still days that I wake up with you in my arms and pinch myself to see if its real or if I'm in Azkaban - or more likely St. Mungo's - dreaming lovely dreams as my life slowly slips away. Of course, I tend to be hit by reality almost instantly each time because the thing that woke me up was a hungry baby crying for yet another feeding, meaning that I have to let you go, kiss you in your sleep, and assure our many babies that they are safe, loved, and most importantly to them at the moment, about to eat.

So keeping that in mind, try to imagine how it feels to suddenly and quite unexpectedly have an entirely new love to hold and dance with and share our life and worries with. I know Harry, you are already trying to tell me that it's the same feelings for you, and that if you could go back and tell little 10 year old you in the cupboard that one day, you were going to have so much love in your life that you just can't contain it to a normal sized small family, younger you wouldn't believe it.

But enough of the mushy stuff! I might be able to express my feelings a lot more easily than when I was in Seventh Year and locking the majority of my emotions behind tight and strong Occlumency Shields, but I still don't like doing it. I mean honestly, why do I have to talk about my emotions when you can read them clearly on my face?

That said, I forced myself to practice saying the L word until I could say it comfortably, and then I continued practicing saying that word so that you NEVER had cause to wonder, and so by now, it's something that I can say so easily that it's almost a habit - which is not to say I don't mean it, I do! Just that I don't think about or overanalyze it each and every time I say it. I just say it.

I think that's why it didn't take me as long as I thought it would to feel comfortable saying it to Oliver. Yes I wanted to be certain we were all on the same page first, but once I was, the feelings just flowed. As you've said rather a lot, he fits into our life so perfectly, it's like we were made for each other.

So, with all of that said, I want to say this next part gently and with love. Oliver, to answer your question, and hopefully set your fears to rest, yes, I will refrain from actually playing around with others without all three of us on board and consenting. However, I cannot change my nature, and I am a flirt by nature. When I try to suppress that part of myself, things go badly. Ask Harry about the time that I vowed to never upset him in any way.

So while I am not an animal with no self control, I do hope that eventually we're all three comfortable with playing with others. For example, I understand that you are on team 'all the way gay' with Harry, but I do like the occasional woman. I just realized that I hadn't really talked about that before, no wonder it was a shock for you to see it. Even after Harry read emails to you describing me having women, you probably assumed that that was something I liked to do in the past, but stopped doing once I realized that men were more fun.

I completely understand such irrational thought processes as I have a lot of them myself. For example, I assumed that since you knew we were the type to play around and that you'd even joined us in our playing, that you'd be perfectly alright with it. I am sorry that I assumed something like that as it is a rather big bit of important information that should be worked out BEFORE putting oneself in a situation where it might happen.

So all of this is sort of a long and rambling roundabout way to get to the juicy bits. As Harry stated in his last email, he was excitedly waiting for me to finish getting ready to go out. We were planning to go to an all gay club. As in all gay MEN, as we wanted to avoid the whole women working me up while dancing situation that triggered you just the night before. However, in our experience, clubs dedicated to only gay men tend to be REALLY open sexually. I suppose that once one comes to terms with being a 'sexual deviant' (as some people still describe homosexuality), one becomes open to all sorts of deviances.

So, having agreed beforehand that we could ALL flirt and grope or dance or even frot as we liked, so long as the actual PLAYING stayed between just the three of us, we were ready to get mildly drunk and have fun.

Things got interesting rather quickly as we didn't even have time to buy a drink before we all found partners to dance with. I'll admit, being a bit of a peacock, it didn't take any effort on my part. All I had to do was strut onto the dance floor and crook my finger at a good looking bloke in tight denim trousers. He was naturally delighted to rub himself all over me as we danced - and the reason I'd chosen him was that he seemed like the best dancer on the floor.

You (Harry) got involved in a group dance that resembles a mosh pit in which you basically dance with everyone and no one all at once, and no one was showing any real finesse. It was basically a way to relax and have fun to the beat.

Oliver accepted an invitation to dance from a gorgeous bloke who was tall and swarthy, with dark hair and eyes. He was broadshouldered and fit as hell, but didn't seem overly skilled in dancing. I think he was mostly at the club to pull. Probably 99 percent of the blokes there were on the pull, so that's not me being judgmental or anything.

I stopped paying attention to either of you so that I could dance, but after about the third dance, I felt a prickle up my spine. It prompted me to stop dancing and look over at you. You had stopped dancing in the mosh pit and were now having a one on one dance with a good looking bloke that reminded me of me when I was younger - all lithe and pointy - only he was shorter than me, nearly as short as you.
The reason I was getting the prickle was that he was giving you this smoky look that made me smirk. I wanted to watch him give you a hand job or something right there on the floor, but I could see that he was actually leaning in to kiss you. You managed to spot this as well and turned your head so that he couldn't get your lips. Even so, I rushed over and put a hand over his mouth just in time to stop him.

"My husband doesn't let anyone but me and our lover kiss him on the lips. Either respect his wishes or you have me to answer to."

The would-be kisser looked me up and down with an impertinent smirk for a moment, probably thinking that this wasn't such a big threat - until he realized that he couldn't quite break the grip I had on his arm. Thus, I was stronger than he was prepared to deal with.

"Yeah, alright, I meant no harm," he said in a thick accent. I think he was a native to Amsterdam, so he probably was used to foreigners just looking for an easy shag. The fact that we weren't was probably confusing to him.

Confident that I'd gotten my point across, I gave you a possessive kiss before returning to my dance partner - who was watching the scene with amusement. Two dances passed with us getting ever more hot and heavy, but then I felt not just a tingling up my spine, but an electric current as well. I turned to look at you, and you were staring very intensely at Oliver - who was blushing adorably as he waved his hands back and forth.

"I'm flattered, honestly, but as I've said twice now, I'm already in a committed relationship and am not interested in a quick and meaningless shag in the loo."

"But just look at how hot we are together," his rather gorgeous dance partner pointed out with a becoming pout. "We could have a passionate blaze that lasted all night," he enticed, his right hand sliding from Oliver's hip to his firm and shapely arse, which he gently squeezed.

Oliver looked a bit flustered, like he wasn't quite certain how to fend off an overeager would-be lover. I would have gone to his rescue - just as I'd gone to yours - but I didn't really have an opportunity. Before I could say or do anything, you were in full on Rage Halo Harry mode. A couple of the smaller colored lights shattered, the speakers blew up - causing the music to end abruptly - and a rather strong wind was now blowing around the sweltering club - which frankly needed the air by that point.

I rushed over to you, ignored the literal fire surrounding you, and grabbed you by your arms. "Calm down, love."

"How can I be calm?!" You growled darkly, now the complete center of attention. "That man's not just hitting on OUR OLLIE, but he won't take no for an answer! He GROPED Ollie without his consent!"

I looked over to Oliver and his groper. What had seemed playful but excessive to me, had clearly enraged you. The groper now had his hands in the air as if surrendering, even as Oliver was staring at you in shock and awe. The man I'd previously rescued you from was crossing his chest and babbling a prayer, while my dance partner looked speculative - like he was imagining himself between us at that moment and liking what he pictured happening.

"Harry, my love, go over and rescue Oliver by taking his hand and returning to our Suite. Let me just take care of a few things here and I'll join you as soon as I can," I suggested, and in the mood you were in, this was exactly the right suggestion. You marched over to Oliver, grabbed his hand, and stormed out of the club with him. The good news is that your Rage Halo faded as you went.
It took very little effort for me to cast a spell on the lights to help convince the people in the club that they were all high as Hippogriffs and seeing things. I also cast a Notice-Me-Not on myself, and then repaired all damage. In mere moments, the music was blaring once more and the muggles were back to dancing as if nothing had happened. I caught a few blokes watching me with knowing grins, but I pulled out my actual Chief of Raids credentials and showed them to the blokes as I mouthed something like: "Sorry for the trouble!"

They shrugged, clearly not caring what I did, and this gave me the incentive to leave before the N-M-N wore off. That's when I returned to you to find that you and Oliver, well...

Oliver had gotten so turned on by the display of possessive power, and you were still rather determined to prove to him just exactly how OURS he is. Thus, when I popped into our Suite, you two were somewhat frantically rolling around the bed in a tangle of naked limbs. Utterly LOVING the view, I slipped off my favorite blue and gold waistcoat and got comfortable in an armchair next to the bed to watch the fun.

Mmm... I'm quite sure that's going to be among my favorite memories to watch in the Pensieve for years to come!

Love me like you do, l-l-love me like you do,
Draco
Chapter 162

Chapter Summary

Harry pops back for a birthday breakfast tradition, and then Draco gives Harry a lovely present.

Chapter Notes

I decided to post this now and leave any of y'all who are awake at this time a lovely bit of smutt to give you pleasant dreams ^_^

Sunday July 30, 2017

My Soul,

You know, maybe we'll have to talk Oliver into getting himself an email account as well. He's adamantly refused every time I've brought it up. Although, it doesn't seem to stop him from interjecting his comments into my emails to you as you've noticed! But I mention it because you must have sent that email early this morning after the two of us had passed out but you were still being a night owl. You write directly to him a few times, I'm assuming because you've been gone so much lately that he's been with me every time I've gotten one of your emails.

But you should just go through and re-read the email you sent me to him since I'm at the Manor right now while the two of you are, I'm sure, all cuddled up in our suite. Or maybe you've gone out for lunch. Perhaps gone sightseeing. You had better not have gone to the Rijksmuseum without me! Or be prepared to go again when I get back!

I suppose even if I miss the museum, it will have been worth it to come back home early this morning. I can't believe Siri and Zwei assumed this weekend trip meant they wouldn't be getting their birthday breakfasts in bed! Absolutely ridiculous children. As if I'd miss their fourteenth and thirteenth birthdays! I only missed River's this past year because he has a wife and lives on the other side of the planet. I know Maha cares for me, but I get the feeling her father in law popping into their kitchen at the crack of dawn to bring her husband pancakes and sing the Happy Birthday song may have been a bit much for her patience.

Despite our late night ... which again turned into middle of the night sexy shenanigans ... I was up before sunrise this morning so I could apparate home, make breakfast, and bring it to our birthday boys before they had a chance to wake up and miss me. I took a pepper-up but I'll probably crash hard tonight, so don't plan on any late night clubbing for me.

Both of them were shocked and as excited as you can make a couple of teenaged boys; they pretended to not care, but I'd catch them smiling to themselves every time I turned away. I even saw Zwei petting the little dragon figurine I put onto his tray.

After the boys had eaten, we all went to the sunroom where I fed the babies, talked with the littles, and caught up with the bigs that were home. Oh!! Lainie was there with Rafael and guess what?!? He crawled! Got up on all fours, pudgy little knees and wrists all rollie pollie and cute, and scooched his entire body a good two feet forward! I asked Lainie how long he'd been doing that, she assured me it was the first time. I laughed and told her she didn't have to lie to me, I was excited to see it at all, but she insisted she was just as excited as I was since it was definitely his first time crawling.

Well that deserved many praises and kisses and cuddles from Grandpa Harry. Then Luka started making grumpy noises like he could not figure out why his Grandpa was giving all the attention to some other baby, so I HAD TO give him a ton of kisses and cuddles as well. And obviously you know how our triplets (Morgana) can get when they (she) aren't the center of attention, so I was FORCED to give her ... erm them ... tons of kisses and cuddles. I have the hardest life, I tell you Draco!

Once we'd caught up, the babies were well fed and fading into dreamland for their morning nap, I went with Siri and Zwei to the outbuilding we keep the dirtbikes in. I helped with the maintenance and a little extra elbow grease to get them all prepped for a day of Siri, Zwei, and about six of their "best friends" to abuse them at the tracks. I asked what time we were all leaving and that's when our boys gave me The Look (TM).

Yeah, so basically I was welcome-ish. "We just assumed you'd be going back to meet up with Dad and Oliver to finish out your holiday," Zwei insisted.

I stuttered a bit, although I did my very best to not tear up at the idea that my boys didn't want me to join them with their friends for birthday events. Luckily Siri has known me long enough that he seemed to pick up on my sadness. "No, Dad, you're welcome to join us. We're not pulling that teenager crap where we think we're too cool for our Dad to join us. Especially something like dirt-biking that you're good enough at to not embarrass us!"

I AM really good at it!

Zwei picked up where Siri ended, "You and Dad have both been so busy lately. You at Hogwarts, him at Unity, three needy babies, four needy toddlers," (side note: do NOT tell the feisty foursome that Zwei called them toddlers!) "Just go enjoy the rest of your weekend. If it makes you feel better, we will accept wicked souvenirs and a big birthday dinner when you get home."

"Deal!"

So I let them head off on their birthday adventure so I could come back to the two of you. You and our fiancé. Yeah, you told the guy at the club that only my husband and our lover were allowed to kiss me on the mouth. It's not that Ollie ISN'T our lover, but we have a new fun word for him so I wanna use it!

First though, I noticed our stash of milk was looking a little low, so I decided to pump a bit before I left - so that's what I've been doing; pumping and typing. But I'm just about done, so expect this email notification and a crack announcing my arrival to happen pretty much simultaneously.

Loving you always,
Harry

Sunday July 30th
My ardor,
You know, when I asked Oliver why he doesn't want an email, he said that he was too old and too much of a wizard to learn such muggle tricks. Don't worry, we'll convert him eventually. In the meantime, I can certainly understand his point.

So, since you'd left us all on our own this morning, I have to tell you what naughty shenanigans we got up to. It seems that Oliver remembers me telling him about my somnophilia kink, because he woke up after you'd left but LONG before I normally wake up, and since he didn't have any stables to check up on, he had nothing better to do than watch me sleep. Apparently, this quickly turned into an intense urge to have me.

So, while I was still very much asleep, Oliver used his mouth and hands to wake up at least one part of me, and then once I was erect and ready to go, he climbed aboard and rode me rather hard until I was awake and gasping with pleasure. I had the glorious sight of him stroking himself as he rode me, his body getting oh so deliciously tight around me until he exploded all over my chest.

But was I done? Oh hell no! Not wasting a moment, I rolled him over and proceeded to pound him into the bed until I pumped him full with a long and happy groan. We both napped for a bit until your email came in. It seems you changed your mind just after hitting send, and stopped off somewhere to get a bit of lunch for the three of us to eat.

Thus, when you finally arrived with the welcome gift of food, you found Oliver holding me as I read my previous email to him. I hadn't gotten to the end yet because he was adamant that we talk about the beginning in more depth. See, I suppose that he'd heard rumors about you in the closet, but never thought for a moment that they were real. I'd had to explain that bit, and was actually in the middle of explaining a bit about my reference to my Occluded feelings.

I was SO happy to see you! "Oi, mutt! Explain to Oliver everything you know about my Seventh Year and all that unpleasantness I dislike talking about!"

"Oh..." You could see how important this was to Oliver, and so joined us in bed so that we could all devour the excellent spread while we discussed heavy things. "Well..."

I held one of your hands as you did a good job explaining the things I went through, including the reason I might still occasionally cast a Cruciatus on myself. Granted, I haven't done so in a couple of years because you insist that if I'm going to, I do it in front of you, and I hate letting you watch that enough that I usually settle for something else - such as having you beat the bloody hell out of me.

In any case, I was surprised to feel rather light. One might expect that such ugly details might upset me, but I've talked about them enough during my sessions with Yesenia that I truly have accepted them and moved on. I think I could even watch the memories of my abuse that I removed and remain calm, knowing that I was not at fault nor deserving of any of it.

When you were done, I held Oliver and rubbed his back as he cried for a bit, even as you pressed kisses to the back of his neck and hummed soothingly. I think the fact that he could see that we clearly weren't traumatized helped him to process the information a bit quicker than he would have otherwise. He turned to give you a hug and murmur something like: "Why didn't you ever say anything during all those Quidditch practices?" Referring to your childhood.

That led to a quick discussion on how you've also had a lot of therapy and managed to heal from that. So much so that you even befriended your cousin and forgave him his part in it. This set Oliver's mind at ease, and - probably because you were now unconsciously petting his shaft like it was your favorite puppy - made him give you a long hot kiss.
I watched eagerly as the two of you got each other ready to go, moaning in anticipation when Oliver rolled onto his back, pulling you on top of him. With no need for words, you conjured some lube and set about getting him inside you. I very overtly grabbed my wand and VERBALLY cast a denial spell on you. This was to make sure you KNEW that your eventual orgasm was mine to allow.

But until then, I was very much planning to deny it. And deny it, and deny it. Remember when we told Oliver that I have a habit of doing that and I mentioned doing it for your birthday? Well your birthday is tomorrow, and if you're very lucky, I'll take the denial spell off before then.

While I was at it, I gave Oliver a two hour stamina potion, since he still needed to take relative baby steps in his quest to cultivate a long lasting natural stamina. After swallowing it down, Oliver used his hands to help you slide nice and slowly up and down his shaft. As he did so, I kissed a path down your spine before licking right back up it. I made it my mission to tickle and tease both of you for probably at least an hour, at which point, Oliver looked like he might be starting to regret taking that potion.

Taking pity on him, I pressed you into him a bit more so that I had room to join in on the fun. Gently but knowing that you loved what was happening, I worked myself inside you with Oliver. Then I took over the main action, thrusting and rocking you so that Oliver still had plenty of stimulation even as he could take a bit of a break. Your cries got so erotic that I nearly lost control of my own stamina, but managed to hold on to it until you calmed down a little and the urge to pump you full subsided.

I was still at it when Oliver's potion ran out and he flooded you with a loud groan of bliss. We held still for a moment as he rode the high, and then got off him and repositioned ourselves right next to him.

"Oliver, love, shift onto your side and use your mouth on Harry while I finish seeking my pleasure, yeah?" I commanded even though the end seemed to be a question.

"Alright," he agreed, doing exactly that.

Between the two of us, we soon had you frantic. I eventually climaxed, but it was YOU who needed a few moments to recover. I had Oliver hold you and run a hand through your hair until you calmed down a bit. Then I insisted that we all get a bit more to eat before starting the second round.

When you were as relaxed and calm as you were going to get, I smirked at your still rigidly erect shaft. "Harry, love, please sit on Oliver's lap with your legs nice and wide. I want him to have an excellent view as I spank your bollocks mercilessly."

You inhaled an eager and excited gasp as Oliver whimpered in dismay on your behalf. But then he took a look at the flushed look on your face as you not only walked over to him, but also pushed him back slightly so that you had room to straddle his legs AND recline against him. You even reached down and forced his legs as wide as they could go so that I plenty of room to do exactly what I said I was going to.

I spanked your bollocks until they were quite red and abused looking, and normally, you would have gone off by that point, only you couldn't. Knowing this, I gentled my touch, caressing and praising you: "You've done so well, SUCH a good little mutt, taking this abuse from your Master without protest, I love you so much that my heart bursts from it, best turn over so that I can spank your arse now."
You groaned in longing and gingerly shifted until you could turn over. I could see the glaze of being in subspace in your eyes and wondered if it would be long before you went flying. To Oliver's utter shock, you barely had a nice rosy glow to your arse before you were crying out obscenely and swaying as if you were going to fall over - had he not had a good grip on you.

I helped him lay you on your back on the bed, and then checked your pupils to confirm that you were definitely off flying in subspace. Oh so carefully, I had Oliver help me give you a few sips of water, and then a couple of tiny bites of chocolate. Satisfied that you weren't going to have a bad trip, I made sure you were comfortable, placing one of your hands in Oliver's, guiding his other one to your head, where he instinctively stroked your hair soothingly.

As he was doing that, I got on my hands and knees over him, cast a few cleaning spells, and then used my mouth on him. He gasped in surprise before humming in pleasure. Rather than use a denial spell or a potion, I used nothing more than my fabulous skills to get him close and then keep him right on the edge for as long as possible, instinctively backing off whenever he seemed too close. I'd say about three quarters of an hour passed like this before he started glaring and growling in frustration.

"Stop teasing, Draco, and suck it properly so that I can go off in your pretty little mouth!"

I cast him a devious grin that made it clear I had no such intentions. Then I purred from sheer happiness when I felt your hand on my back. By the noises you were making, I could tell that you were back from subspace, but still in that haze where speaking wasn't worth the effort. Also, the determination you had to finger me open was almost painful, but nothing I couldn't handle. Exactly as I'd wanted, I had worked you up to the point where you absolutely HAD to have me.

Despite the flight through subspace, the denial spell was still in effect, and you were now almost an animal in your need to have me. I positively loved every second of you opening me up and slamming into me. Best of all, I didn't turn to see it for myself, but based off the look of awe on Oliver's face and the sizzling zing rushing through my body, you must have had a bit of your Rage Halo active. Your hands nearly crushed my hips as you rammed into me, and it took everything I had to remain focused on drinking Oliver dry.

He actually filled my mouth rather quickly, and then simply watched with enormously wide eyes as I turned my attention to meeting you thrust for thrust, gasping and crying out with each and every one. Eventually, your innate magic burned through the denial spell, allowing you to fill me full to bursting. Happily, this triggered another orgasm in me, making me collapse with exhaustion the moment you stilled your movements.

As we lay panting in a pile atop Oliver, a thought occurred to me that made me chuckle. "That was so intense that we should probably cast a morning after spell, just to be on the safe side!"

You were back to yourself enough to laugh, but Oliver sighed a bit morosely and rubbed the little bit of his stomach that he could reach. "No need to worry about me, I couldn't achieve that miracle no matter HOW many potions I took."

Feeling my heart break just a little on his behalf, I kissed him. "Too bad you never came to me or my brother. I guarantee that if you had, the potion would have worked!"

This made Oliver stop being morose and start being curious. "Why are you so certain?"

"The potions you would have bought - even in a high quality apothecary - would have been poor to middle quality at best. They want their products to work while being cheap enough to keep the prices low and still make a profit. If you want the best quality, you either have to make them yourself or pay extra for a master brewer to make them for you, and both me and my brother qualify as Masters - my brother more so than me, if I'm honest," I explained.

You kissed him rather than verbally agree with me. That led to us all kissing each other until hunger prompted us to get out of bed and go out to an actual restaurant for dinner - a LATE one, haha!

A simple kiss like a turnin' key, a little click and the lock's on me,

Draco
July 31, 2017

My Heart,

Happy Birthday to me!

I don't know if it was just a lot of very stressful months catching up with me. Or perhaps it was the last of the pregnancy hormones FINALLY making their way out of my system four months later. Maybe it was reliving my childhood trauma and your teen trauma for our Ollie yesterday. Whatever it was, I had quite the emotional breakdown when I woke up this morning.

We did our (my) usual midnight birthday celebration, I was up until midnight, you kissed my face off, Ollie kissed my face off, and we shagged ourselves to sleep. I thought I'd gotten all of my emotions out in one fell swoop and today was just going to be about spending time with my favorite people, eating my favorite foods, and discovering undiscovered treasures in this place we're visiting.

This morning I woke up in your arms, Oliver in my arms, cuddled up with my loves. I smiled to myself and just burrowed further into the warmth and love and contentment. That's when I did my usual, "Oh if I could go tell little Harry in the closet" thing, but instead of it bringing me joy, I got very sad about it. I've often spent so much of my time thinking about my childhood, thinking about what I was missing. I thought about the hope I want to bring to my former self. I think about how it would have felt to know that things would not only get "better," but that it would get unbelievably wonderful. My life would be so full of love that I can barely contain it in my heart. I need two extra hearts to hold it all in.

It was MY childhood, so it makes sense that in my memories, I focus on how I felt. I occasionally think about Dudley and how the environment was almost as abusive to him but in a different way. I've gone and over and over it in therapy. And while the therapy has helped so much, I think creating the perfect childhoods for our own children has been even more healing. Which I think is why it hit me so hard this morning. Little Harry in the Closet had hope. Little Harry in the Closet eventually got the life he deserved. But Young James and Lily in Godric's Hollow didn't get their hopeful happy future. They didn't get to see a hopeful future of full hearts, full arms, and a full home. They may have even had a family large enough to rival ours!

(Probably not.)

Instead, they had hope, they had love, and then they had nothing. Their first child became their only child became an abused child. And as a parent, I know they'd be thrilled that I have found this love and this amazing family, but I'm sure they've grieved for only seeing it from a distance. As thankful as I'm sure my mum is that Molly mothered her child, that Molly loves her grandchildren with her whole heart, it has to break her heart to know that it should have been her.

And Sirius, for as wonderful as it is that he is back and saved, he is loving fatherhood, adoring his children, and is a big part of our family. He's doing all of it without his best mates. Instead of raising his own children to grow up with his Godson and my Godson while he and my dad and Remus barbecued and told increasingly unbelievable stories of their teen years, he is raising them alongside my children without his best friends.

George has his young son that he named Fred in honor of our Fred. But that should have been an inside joke and something ridiculous Fred and his nephew Fred would have tortured people with. "Fred? - You rang? - Not you Fred! -" lather rinse repeat. Mac has been wonderful and seeing he and George together heals pieces of my broken heart. Father and Son truly healed each other. But they shouldn't have had to heal a wound that deep.

I couldn't get out of my own head, my breathing exercises weren't working, and I knew I would freak the two of you out if you woke up to me sobbing hysterically, so I peeled out from the middle of that yummy sandwich and went for a walk. All the walk did was give my brain space to delve deeper into all of the little Harrys in the Closet who were never saved and didn't have hope or a happy ending. So I decided to run. Running just made those thoughts pound through my head faster.

Which lead me to this charming little place. I came in for directions, they directed me to a cozy chair, and got me some delicious coffee. Seriously! YOU might even enjoy it! So, erm, can you come pick up the birthday boy from Thuis Aan De Amstel? It's kind of far away and I think I'll end up lost if I try to apparate back to you.

I'm sorry this is what you're waking up to. Is the fact that it's my birthday enough to make up for making a nuisance of myself? You can consider it your present to me.

I love you.
Your Harry

Monday July 31st
My wonderfully weepy husband,

Lucky for you, I had a feeling that you were going to be a bit depressed. Perhaps I'm more of a clairvoyant than I thought! In any case, after waking up and receiving your email, Oliver and I called in Muffy to pack up our stuff and bring it home while we checked out and came after you. Once I found you, I did something that I didn't think would completely cheer you up - being in public and all - but that would at least make you feel better: I sang from where we Apparated into the shop, all the way over to you. Oliver is strangely shy at times like these, looking a bit nervous to be the center of attention, but what the fuck do I care if muggles are staring at me?

"You're just too good to be true, can't take my eyes off of you, you'd be like Heaven to touch, I want to hold you so much." That was when I reached you and pulled you into my arms so that I could kiss you quite possessively. "I LOVE YOU BABY!"

You were grinning like a fool at that point, but still feeling a bit raw, because you stopped me from going on by kissing me again. Then you linked arms with me and said: "Where's the nearest place we can get out of here?" By which I knew you meant Apparate all the way home.

Oliver gestured out the door before leading the way.

In the nearest mostly private Alleyway, YOU actually Apparated the three of us because you are the only one with that kind of power - aside from our elves when under orders. When we arrived in our suite, it was just after lunch, and I had a surprise waiting for you.

"River!" You burst out excitedly, abandoning Oliver and me to rush over and hug him to death.

"I knew it would be a waste to try to be here in time to make you breakfast in bed, dad, so I took dad's advice and arrived about 20 minutes ago," River explained. "But Maha's at home, so it'll just
"be the two of us."

"The two of us doing what?" You asked curiously.

"The two of us having a bit of a father son date," River answered with a smile. "We're going to start at my spa and be pampered while we chat - so that I can catch you up on everything I've been up to since we last saw each other. And then we might go out to eat, or whatever else catches our fancy."

"That sounds perfect!" You exclaimed in agreement, rushing over to kiss me and Oliver goodbye with babbled apologies before we assured you that we didn't mind and that you were literally required to have fun and enjoy yourself.

With a few last extra kisses, you returned to River's side and popped off with him.

Leaving me alone with Oliver to...

Go check out how things were going in the stables. After petting all the horses etc. and reassuring ourselves they were fine, I brought him to the Owlyr and helped him select an owl so that he could go hunting with me and Melissande the Second and Gobber - which as you remember, is what Caelum named my baby owl for me about two years back. But at least it wasn't Fondue, eh?

So, in the unlikely event that you and River return before us, you'll find us in the North Fields.

All my love - OUR love,
Draco and Oliver
Chapter 164

Chapter Summary

Harry makes the announcement to the family, and then Draco has to attempt to keep Harry calm before Oliver's hearing.

Tuesday August 1, 2017

My Husband and My Fiance,

Gods I love both of those words. I really do. But I'm also looking forward to just adding an S to that first one and ditching the second word.

Slow down Harry, we JUST got engaged, we need to wait for this stupid hearing to happen, and we have the rest of our lives to call each other husbands. I don't need to speed through this engagement portion. But I also don't want either of you to think being engaged is enough for me .... like I'm fine treading water at this stage just to nail down a commitment without having to fully commit. I am in this. I can wait until the right timing, I can wait until we can do this ceremony right. But I definitely can't wait forever to announce my love.

Hell, I couldn't wait until after the aforementioned stupid hearing to happen so we could announce it to the family.

Sorry?

I have a feeling that you aren't particularly surprised. Not only do I have trouble holding in good news, but it's been a highly emotional couple of days for me. Some very high highs and some fairly low lows. I think my inability to hold in good news until the right time is probably why I'm so impulsive. If I don't make secret plans, I won't have the chance to accidentally spill them. If I don't tell you I'm getting you a present until the moment I buy it, I won't end up giving it to you weeks before the special event. You can't let the cat out of the bag if you don't get a cat until it's time to add it to the bag .... yeah that one really got away from me there. My apologies.

You know, I thought my complete breakdown yesterday morning came out of nowhere. I thought you would think I was a complete nutter. The both of you probably thinking it might be best to drop the dead weight and ride off into the sunset just the two of you. Instead my Draco, you came in singing away. The both of you shuffling me off to the nearest escape plan. And come to find out that I am completely predictable because you had my sweet River ready and waiting for me to spend the day with.

How do you know me so well?

Yesterday, River did as he said he would and whisked me off to be pampered at his spa. Holy Merlin, I got the massage of a lifetime. I felt like a puddle of goo by the time she was done. Honestly I was a bit embarrassed because I could NOT stop myself from moaning the entire time. Dragon, you probably would have creamed your pants listening to my noises. I gave my masseuse a huge tip for having to listen to my groaning the entire time. Hopefully it was enough to possibly buy herself some noise canceling headphones.
We got our massages, our manicures and pedicures, I even got a delicious face exfoliating wrap thing that felt like slime but made my face feel like satin. We drank way too much champagne. I toasted all of my loves, all of our children, our gorgeous grandchildren, our upcoming grandchild, I am pretty sure I also toasted the masseuse. She deserved it.

We decided to forgo a lunch, and we wanted to be back in time to have dinner with the family, so we snacked on anything they would bring us. I had a mountain of strawberries I'm pretty sure. What? They went well with the bucket of champagne I drank. If I can't get blitzed on champagne and strawberries on my birthday then what's the point in having a birthday?

When we ran out of ways to be pampered, we walked around Diagon for a while. Not looking for anything special, just spending time together. I've just missed him so much. I know, we magi-skype fairly often and River and I insta-owl most days. It's just not the same. He's my little guy ya know? The walking was enough to sober me up even without stopping at Fortescue's for ice cream. Your mum will be so disappointed that she missed drunk Harry, I know how much she loves to fill me up with drink and then send me off to embarrass myself. Not today Satan!

Oh bollocks, do NOT tell Mum I called her Satan!

He and I popped back a little bit before dinner. I assumed I'd find you two in a few places; I thought our room would be most likely, possibly OUR playroom or the KIDS' playroom, definitely thought the stables would be worth a search, but I guess I should have read your email first since you were out owling in the north fields. When I finally gave up and asked Muffy to help me find you, she sent me that way. I greeted you both with kisses and enforced Muffy's command of "tell the Masters dinner is being ready."

And that led us to dinner. I think it was delicious. I think we had nice chit chat and catching up. I am pretty sure you told everyone about our lovely suite and the yummy restaurants we went to. But I was so anxious I don't actually know what went on. See, I can't keep secrets, I don't WANT to keep secrets like being in love with someone, and I just KNEW someone was going to notice Ollie's ring and say something and then get mad because we kept it a secret but then I thought that if we did announce anything that Siri and Zwei might be upset that we took over the dinner with our announcement.

But really, Siri and Zwei aren't like that. I don't know if it's their nature or if they're used to sharing birthdays since theirs have always landed on the same day with my birthday coming up the very next day. Either way, I don't think they would have been upset about any announcements. Plus, we had no intention (I had no intention) of being home in time for dinner last night anyway, so it might have been a big family dinner but it's not like it was specifically supposed to be their birthday celebration. And it actually WAS my birthday, so if it wasn't stated that it was their celebration then it really should have been my celebration anyway which means we could announce whatever I wanted to.

And then I panicked because what if I announced it but Molly and Arthur weren't there and now I've told the whole family but not them? Will they think we love them less?

So, after we did the announcement anyway, I did message Molly and Arthur that we wanted to come by for brunch today. I also mentioned that we would bring food since I don't need to force Molly to cook for us last minute under our request. Obviously she sent me a very stern message back that if I dared to bring anything other than some pretty flowers or maybe that elf made wine she likes then "You can just eat your food in the gardens with the gnomes while the rest of us eat my cooking in the kitchen." So, when you wake up we'll be having a Molly-made brunch at the Burrow.
Was the announcement alright? You both ran with it and seemed like you were more amused at my antics than upset in any way, but I hope you meant it and you weren't just putting on your Malfoy face. I was sitting there, eating a whole lot of nothing, but doing a fantastic job of pushing the food around with my fork, when Jaz poked me to get my attention and asked: "What's wrong Daddy?"

I jumped up so fast that if you hadn't caught it I'm sure my chair would have gone flying. I blurted out: "We have an announcement!"

The room went from noisy chatting and the usual eating sounds from thirty-ish people eating in one place to complete silence. Everyone staring at me, the two of you standing up next to me slowly, but no one seemed inclined to actually make the announcement I had insisted was coming. Which is probably why your dad was the first to break: "Oh for Salazar's sake! Which one of you is pregnant this time?"

Draco, you and I were quick to insist that absolutely none of us were expecting. Promise. No seriously you guys, we cast the spells near constantly just in case, none of us are pregnant!

Fine! I guess I'm the only Gryffindor in this engagement - soon to be marriage. "We're getting married!"

More silence, broken by Vivi. "You're already married. Dad did you get the amnesia again?"

Poor Oliver looking at me, o.O "When did you have amnesia?" I should probably pull up that set of emails huh?

Thankfully you were a bit calmer and took over. "No Princess, Harry and I are married, but Harry, AND Oliver, AND I are getting married. Harry and I proposed to Oliver while on holiday and he said yes!"

More silence.

Finally Cassie blurted out: "Dad! That's not a thing!"

I think I blushed to the tips of my toes, "Well, er, it will be a thing. We've been working with Kings, and in a few weeks, it will be an official option for the Wizarding World; plural marriages. You all know I hate using my name to end up being the poster boy for anything, but if that's what it takes to be with my Loves properly? Well it's a price I'm willing to pay." I think I blushed even harder when I explained: "We were going to wait a few weeks to tell any of you, but I couldn't keep it in any longer." I looked at the both of you and luckily you just looked bemusedly exasperated. I think that's just your default expression when it comes to me.

Orion looked at me very strangely for a few moments. Like he was sizing me up or trying to solve a particularly difficult arithmancy equation. "Dad, you're telling me that you used your name as leverage to talk the Minister for Magic into legalizing plural marriage so you and Dad could marry Oliver?"

That one was easy to answer! "Yes, I did and I don't regret it."

Ori let out one of his rare but stunning smiles. "Well then all I can say is, welcome to our family Oliver!" And then walked over to give Ollie a guy hug. Ollie was apparently so shocked that he sat down hard on his chair, letting out a deep sigh and burying his face in his hands.

But that put him at the perfect height for our Seph to go walking up to his chair, climbing right into his lap, and tugging his hands off of his face. Looking right into his eyes, the oldest and teeniest of our feisty foursome asked: "This means you're another Daddy for me, yes?"
Poor Oliver, getting an announcement thrown at him in the middle of dinner, and now he's being asked by a little girl he loves if he's going to be a Daddy for her. Ollie, you looked at us with the sweetest mixture of panic and hope, when Draco and I had what I assume were matching smiles and nods, you assured Seph that you would indeed be another Daddy for her if she'd like that. Parker and Cassie looked rather proud of you at that moment.

The sight of Persephone's tiny little self settling herself deeper into Oliver's lap and kissing him on the cheek was one of the sweetest things I've ever seen. And then the little manipulator announced: "I'm going to want my very own unicorn that I don't have to share with Lily, Caelum, or Atreyu."

That child.

I think it went pretty well, but I suppose we'll see what happens when all the kids corner us individually over the next few days.

No matter what, I am excited and in love and I can't wait to keep spending my life with you.

All of my love,
Harry

Tuesday August 15th
My silly little mutt,

Last night, you were far more nervous and wound up than Oliver. It was sort of driving both of us mad, so I decided to take some decisive action. As you were pacing back and forth, babbling speculation on all possibilities, and tearing at your hair in worry, I exchanged a mildly exasperated look with Oliver. To his bemusement, I strode over to you, yanked you out of your pacing, and held you by the throat with one hand.

"Oi, mutt, ON YOUR KNEES," I commanded with an intense look in my eyes.

You dropped instantly, looking up at me with clear hope sparkling in your eyes.

I twirled my finger around to cast intangibility spells on your clothes and banish them to the dirty laundry. Have I mentioned recently how much I LOVE that you started a Unity House in Africa where we ALL learned how to use wandless magic? It still takes my breath away that I can practically wave my hand at you and strip you naked in mere seconds.

Before anything else, I grabbed your brush and ran it through your hair several times. It may not be as long as it once was, but it was now a decently pleasing length that I could brush and fondle as much as I liked. You melted a bit and moaned happily.

Then I handed your brush to Oliver and asked him if he'd like to spank you. He's still trying to wrap his head around how much you love that, so he went extremely easy on you, simply setting a footstool next to you so that he could sit on it and pull your chest across his lap. Then he gave you a good four or five dozen love taps with your brush.

I ran my hand through your hair and crooned praise to you the entire time. Once I felt like Oliver had done enough for now, I stopped him, and then proceeded to show him how to tie you up in one of your favorite ties - the one where your body is shaped a bit like a frog and you're dangled from the ceiling. By this point, I had obviously ordered the elves to watch our napping babies and Apparated us to our playroom.
Once you were nice and suspended, I had Oliver suck on your shaft just enough to ensure that it was fully erect and eager to play, but then slipped a ring around the base that was just tight enough to prevent you from going soft without being so tight as to cause damage. The ring was what the manufacturers intended to be humiliating - a shade of glaringly bright pink with a tag dangling from it that read: object to use and abuse as desired.

As intended, now that you were fully prepared, you had an excellent view of the bed. You could do absolutely nothing but watch in frustration as I took charge of Oliver. He was still staring at you, probably wondering how in the bloody hell that could be comfortable.

Thus, I grabbed him by the back of his neck and forced him to look me in the eye. "Don't pay any attention to him. He is nothing more than art on the wall - so to speak. Your attention should properly be on me, because I'M the one who is going to bugger you into this bed so hard that you can't speak, much less remember your own name. But first..." I trailed off to force him to bend over just enough to brace his hands on the bed.

Tenderly, with infinite gentleness, I unfastened his trousers and uncovered his firm and gorgeous arse, caressing it for your viewing pleasure. "Such a shame I don't have a little slave to prepare you for me. I guess I'm just going to have to do it myself." With that, I first cast a denial spell on him since he hasn't yet cultivated stamina that lasts more than about 20 or 30 minutes - which is still quite respectable.

Then I cast a slew of spells to clean him out, soften him, and open him up so that my fingers could probe him without pain or discomfort. The moment I found his prostate, he gasped, letting me know that I had the right spot. I then snapped my fingers to summon one of our MANY vibrators. This one happened to have a special bump on the side that is designed to stimulate the prostate once buried in an arse. The toy was just slightly slimmer in girth than me, which was plenty big enough for Oliver to feel without stretching him to the point that he wouldn't notice me at all when I finally decided to replace the toy.

Oliver gasped again when I turned the vibrator on, using a slow speed at first. I let him grow accustomed to that for a full minute before turning the dial until he groaned and clenched his arse. Then I turn it back down just a few hairs so that it was at an intensity that he could handle while still being intense enough to make it hard for him to think straight.

Once his arse was busy trying to deal with what was happening so far, I decided to give him something else to think about. My hand, spanking him. Sharply. Each time I did so, he gasped and whimpered, but the way his hips swayed back and forth - almost as if they were trying to slowly wag a nonexistent tail - let me know that he was definitely indecisive but most liking what was happening.

I spanked and spanked and spanked, alternating the speed and intensity as my mood shifted. Some of it was sharp and some of it was very gentle, with plenty of caresses and even kisses (and tiny nips of my teeth) to provide variety and other sensations to keep him guessing. Eventually, he was begging and nearly crying with need.

But I did not take pity on him. Well not in the way in which I gave into his pleas to shag him good and hard, but I DID stop spanking him. He still had the vibrator working on making him fall completely apart, but in order to give him a break from the spanking, I shifted him - and a glance at you showed that not only were your eyes practically black pools in your lust, but that you were smirking in amusement at how he had gone from bracing himself rather easily to resting his chest full on the bed as he groaned and cried into fistfuls of bedding.

As I was saying, I shifted him so that he was next to the bed on his knees. "I do not expect you to submit to me as your one and only Master - as you have not ever agreed to be a submissive nor provided me with a safe word. BUT since I am clearly dominating and torturing you at the moment, you'll regard me as your SIR for the night. Thus, unless you want to earn a punishment - perhaps what you see happening right up there with Harry - prove your desire to please Sir by unfastening my trousers and worshiping my shaft with your mouth and hands."

"Yes Sir," Oliver accepted in a rather rough voice. I am dead certain that if he wasn't under a denial spell, he'd have finished and passed out a LONG time ago.

I dearly wanted him to keep up the fantastic job for the rest of the night, but I was so close to finishing that I would either need to cast a denial spell on myself, or move on - after a mere five minutes! So, I chose to move on.

I yanked him to his feet and kissed him possessively. "Now... what do you think of my clothes?
Are they exactly where you want them? Or do you wish to remove some or all of them before proceeding to the next step in my goal to bugger you into the bed?"

He groaned in longing, his pupils glazed over by sheer need. But rather than insist that I just bend him over and ram into him until he was raw, he took my suggestion and removed my clothes with infinite slowness. Seeming to revel in the visual delight of my skin being revealed a centimeter at a time. As he worked, he kissed and licked my skin, so very lightly that I nearly lost patience and pushed him onto the bed. I noticed that his entire body would shiver every minute or so, and could only guess that without the denial spell, he'd be orgasming each time, so with it, he must be having mini near orgasms - as the spell is designed to prevent one from having full and complete ones.

His hands started shaking after about 10 minutes, and I could see that he was running out of energy in general. Lucky for him, he'd managed to finish undressing me and was now on his knees once more, stroking my shaft with his hands.

Not needing a written invitation, I decided to give him what he so desperately wanted, my shaft in his arse. I helped him lay on the bed so that his back was fully supported, but that his arse was hanging off the side a bit. This allowed me to spread his legs wide and remove the toy, which I just barely remembered to turn off before tossing aside. At that point, I rammed into him, opting for slow and powerful thrusts because I was still so bloody close that I didn't trust myself to last more than a minute if I went any faster.

That said, Oliver cried out in pleasure with each one, and this was enough to get me there after just three or four minutes. Five if I'm lucky. Happily, the moment I felt my orgasm racing toward me like a freight train, I took the spell off of him and had the glorious pleasure of feeling him thrash and squeal and cling to me as his own orgasm must have felt a bit like a hurricane.

He passed out the moment we were finished, but I rested on top of him, happy to wait for my shaft to finish deflating before attempting to move. That said, I think I probably took a mini nap. The next thing I knew, I was a little uncomfortable and rolled over onto my back - both me and Oliver still half off the bed, which wasn't exactly comfortable at the moment either.

That made me open my eyes and look around to determine the best way to get comfortable, when I spotted you staring at me with raging lust in your eyes. Grinning, I summoned my wand because I needed more precision for this. Then I cast spells to first levitate you, then untie you, before finally floating you down to me - you stretching out happily as I did so.

This led to me casting a spell on my shaft to get it back up so that you could straddle me and take your pleasure in any way you liked - which I correctly assumed would be by riding me frantically.
You were most definitely happy to enjoy your pace for as long as possible, before finally crying out: "Please Master! Please let your mutt have his orgasm!"

Grinning and thoroughly enjoying the view - not to mention the pleasure of another impending orgasm - I pointed my finger at you and cast a spell to remove your cock ring, thereby allowing you to reach a natural conclusion. You roared with your climax, which was powerful enough to trigger my own. At that point, you collapsed onto me, purring in between panting as I held you close and stroked your spine.

"I love you so much," I murmured in your ear, nibbling it before kissing your neck. Then I reached over and placed a hand on Oliver's arm - even though he was still out cold. "And I love Oliver too. The both of you bring nothing but joy into my life."

You also reached over, taking his hand in yours even as you shifted your mouth to kiss me. "I love you and him so much that it takes my breath away. I never knew love could be like this! There's so much of it inside me that I just can't contain it!"

Oliver must be able to hear us at least a little in his sleep, because he hummed something that sounded reasonably like: "I love you too."

At that point, I daresay we ALL got some rather nice sleep. At least until YOU woke up far too early - as usual - and Oliver joined you an hour or so later. Lucky for me, his hearing was set for a reasonable 2PM, and so I had time to finish sleeping, perform my morning routine, AND select something powerful to wear, plus make sure that the both of you were suitably dressed.

As for the hearing, after our lawyers made their case, Kingsley asked the opposition why they felt it was any sort of legal or fair to keep money that clearly belonged to Oliver. They (well, their lawyers) stated their position that they actually had no idea (prior to being served papers) that the money had come from Oliver. They always assumed that their son had simply earned or saved it from what they gave him, and had returned it to their vault for safety.

They then admitted that they'd never thought to ask about the money, and that the only time their son ever mentioned it was to say that he intended it to take care of the family - which they assumed to be a reference to them. In any case, after reviewing the evidence presented by our lawyers during prehearing preparation - with their lawyers - they were willing to admit that the amount transferred to their family vault was EXACTLY the amount Oliver had earned during his Quidditch Career, and so, when the Wizengamot suggested that they give it back to them, they more or less grumbled a bit petulantly before agreeing to do so.

Which means that Oliver won his hearing. He was somehow so stunned by this revelation that he just stood there staring at the table before him and swaying a bit - until you pulled him into your arms and kissed him while squeezing him tight enough that he'll probably have bruises, haha. I followed that up with a nice comforting hug and a rubbing pat on the back.

"Come on, let's go home," I suggested in his ear, and for a moment, the look in his eyes made me wonder if he was thinking that he now had money again and wouldn't need to depend on us, but then that look cleared up and he smiled.

"Yes, let's."

Me I fall in love with you every single day, and I just want to tell you I am,
Draco
Chapter 16

Chapter Summary

Harry wants to clear a few important things up, and Draco has a surprise.

Wednesday August 16, 2017

My Dragon,

Alright, the exhausting hearing was over as of yesterday. That chapter of our life can be considered over. Ollie's healing from the issues from his previous marriage and the betrayal of the in-laws. The hearing is done and won.

Tomorrow we leave for Hogwarts for classrooms to be set up, too many staff meetings, and for you and the kids to decorate and set up our rooms as you want. I already set up the basic layout, you know I'll want a wall completely dedicated to pictures of our loved ones, everything else as far as I'm concerned you and the kids can decide and I'll just go alone with whatever you like. Let's be honest, if you're in a room, am I really going to notice what my surroundings look like?

So, I'm sending this to you before you wake up and then I'm going for a run. A nice, long, relaxing, marathon length run. Because I am nervous as hell about what I want to talk about. Normally I practically vomit my rambling nonsense and don't care who's in earshot. But right now, I think this is a really important conversation to have and I think we need to do it now with the hearing fresh in our memories. I want to tell you what I want. I want to know what you want. And then we need to talk with Oliver and make sure we're mostly in agreement so we don't freak him out with conflicting ideas.

I was thinking about now that we're free of the stress we can start discussing dates. We can discuss names and homes and all that fun stuff when you start planning a wedding and a marriage. But when I started thinking about all the fun stuff, I couldn't stop myself from worrying about the less fun stuff.

So I think we need to have a long conversation about a pre-nup.

First of all; pre-nup aside, I need to know that Oliver wants us for us, and not as some sort of thank you for helping him get back on his feet. All we did was let a friend stay with us (which we've done before) and helped him get what he himself earned. Even if we'd lavished him in money and gifts, he wouldn't owe us a thing, but I know how stubborn he can be. I want to make it very clear that while letting him go would BREAK MY HEART, I would do it if he isn't in love with us. That moment you mentioned at the end of the hearing where you worried he didn't need us anymore made me realize that both you and I have some residual fears that Ollie thinks he owes us.

So, I would like to institute a weekly date night and a weekly joint mind healing session. Make sure we're all on the same page, make sure we know we have an outlet for transitioning to this new marriage, and the date night is just a good excuse to make sure we make our love a priority. Also shagging.

Here are my stipulations for the pre-nup, please let me know if you want anything altered, added, or if you have an issue with something I'm stating.

- Oliver's hard earned money he JUST got back goes into an vault that only he has access to. I would NEVER want him to be with us because he can't afford to be on his own. I want him to be with us because we are in love.

- We open vaults for Parker and Cassie similar to the funds each of our children has gotten upon adulthood - or we offer them the option to choose to take over one of our smaller businesses. I don't want any jealousy issues to stem from us taking their dad, or them not having the same advantages the other kids have gotten. You and I and Oliver are going to be a family, that means adding his family to ours and vice versa.

- We get Ollie officially added as a third owner of the Stables and Unity House. Honestly, if it were a money-maker instead of a non-profit I'd make him sole owner with how much more work he's put into the stables than anyone else. Except for maybe Atreyu!

- In the event of a divorce, Merlin forbid, if it happens within a short amount of time (I don't know what's good, a year? five years?) we all leave with what we brought into the marriage. If it happens after that number all liquid assets are split in even thirds. Land/Property/Businesses to be determined based on initial investment and in the case of a business based on actual work effort put into the business.

- During the engagement, our quarters at Hogwarts are to remain separate dwellings with the connected doors but obviously we want Ollie in our bed or us in his for every single night. Once we are married we combine the quarters into one unit.

So, can you read these over? Take notes? Argue with me? And when you know what we should be asking for I want to approach Oliver today. I want this figured out before we leave for Hogwarts tomorrow.

Off to sweat out the anxiety!

Your Harry

P.S. I know it's all over and done with, but those mother fucking liars yesterday!! We just assumed it was money our son wanted to gift us "to take care of the family" he could have only meant us.
Blech blech blech. I hate them so much. I really think it's about time we took a vacation ... maybe to Russia ... maybe to visit Grandmama ... maybe we give her their address.

Saturday August 19th
My adoration,

You're adorable! I love how you always manage to work yourself up over everything - yes big things, but still not really anything to get so worked up over. Oliver was still riding high on the fact that he won his hearing SO easily. When he woke up to find that you were running, not just around our track, but around the whole of Wiltshire - and thus, couldn't just be caught up to so easily - he thought that was strange, but ultimately, one of your adorable quirks.

He happened to come in from the stables around the time I was waking up simply because he wondered who fed me when you weren't around. Since he'd made me a rather simple yet tasty ham sandwich, I didn't have the heart to remind him that Muffy literally exists to cater to my every whim. I invited him to sit on the bed and flirt with Morgana as she lay on her side drinking from the bottle he held. I'm determined that he will win her over eventually so that she grows up knowing that she has three dads who love her more than the moon.

So far, she seems to regard him as an acceptable minion if no one else is around.

Anyway, I sort of, erm… not on purpose, but I saw that you'd emailed me and it didn't seem to have private information in it at first, so I was like: "Ooo! Oliver, Harry emailed us!"

So I read it to him. It wasn't until I read the sentence about being in agreement so that we don't freak Oliver out with conflicting ideas that I faltered and stopped reading because I understood that this was something intended for me to read on my own.

"Well don't stop there," Oliver insisted, giving me a look like he was suddenly a bit suspicious. "You and Harry need to talk ABOUT me before you can talk TO me."

I sighed, agreeing that the way it seemed to him probably felt terrible, so I continued reading to him.

That whole paragraph about letting him go if he didn't love us, and then us having issues with thinking he doesn't need us, well it made me feel guilty, and I fell silent after reading it to stare at my hands. Oliver shifted until he could stroke his hand down my cheek.

"You're not wrong," he murmured. "There WAS a moment when I wondered if I should go home with you now that I didn't have to depend on you. But it's not what you think - it's not what Harry thinks. I... I was afraid that you two wouldn't want ME now that you aren't saving me. Then I shook that off and thought that maybe I should attempt to live on my own for a bit so that we can do this properly - you know, get to know each other and date and whatnot before rushing into marriage. To be certain that what we all feel is real even if the situation changes. But THEN I realized that it's a bit stupid to find a place of my own to live for about two weeks until we move to Hogwarts."

I smiled at him. "Harry has some thoughts on that as well." I read on, him agreeing to date night AND your stipulations without any hesitation. It was ME that burst out with: "Bloody hell! I just realized that marrying you is going to bring our combined kid count up to 20!!!"

Oliver chuckled, and then waved his hands back and forth. "You don't have to consider Cassie and Parker as yours. They're basically adults now anyway."

I gave Oliver a look that let him know he was being an idiot. "Oliver, love, first of all, Harry is completely right, if we get married, OUR kids are going to be YOUR kids. That's called step-parenting. Persephone already told you that, remember? She said she GETS you as another dad. And she does. So obviously, if OUR kids are YOUR kids, then YOUR kids are our kids. Now I'm not saying that I expect them to call me dad and come to me rather than you when they have problems. I'm just saying that when people ask me how many kids I've got, I'm going to tell them 20 and they're going to think I'm lying or insane, but I will be completely serious and telling the truth."

He laughed at that.

So I finished reading the rest of the email, and he had no objections or additions to your list of pre-nup conditions. Although, he did try to decline being listed as part owner of Unity and the Stables - NOT because he doesn't like those businesses, but because he doesn't feel he should be made a part owner of something you created from the ground up when all he did was show up and do a bit of work. I advised him to just accept it because you made ME part owner when I didn't even do that
That led to us having a discussion of the many Malfoy businesses. And Potter businesses. Actually, that also led to a discussion of the divorce clause - which I actually want to modify. The way you have it, in the event of a divorce (after a reasonable amount of time), ALL our assets would basically be pooled together and split into three equal pieces.

That's bullshite! Sorry, I know you're glaring at me right now, but it is. The REASON why I have Malfoy businesses and you have Potter businesses - despite the fact that I run basically all of them - is the same reason why I keep on insisting that some of the businesses I start are YOURS and not mine.

It's because in the event of a divorce, anything in my name will remain in my name. Anything in your name will remain in yours. It's the same reason that I never merged your Potter and Black Vaults with the Malfoy vaults. YOU will have your entire fortune to take care of you if WE should happen to divorce - plus all those businesses I put in your name. You will be well off and able to take care of yourself and the kids.

Meanwhile, MY vaults will still be in my name, but you already know that every bit of my vaults and my businesses are basically divided up in my will amongst the kids. I'm not trying to say that if we got divorced, you'd be on your own with no help from me, as I'd still be supporting the kids every bit as much as you. I'm saying that we are EQUALS.

The exact same will hold true for Oliver. He will be an equal in our marriage with his own vault and I will more than likely set up a half dozen businesses in his name. In the event he divorces us - the number of years is irrelevant - he will still own his vault and his businesses. His kids will still own the vaults we set up in their names. And probably some businesses - I am me, after all.

Thus, there is no need for you to fret so much about that.

But moving on since you know the gist of all of this already, since Oliver and I popped after you that day and simply joined you in your run until you felt like stopping. I must admit that I'm impressed with Oliver. You said you were running a marathon length, in which case, endurance NOT speed is the key - although you did have a bit of speed going as well. I was able to keep up because I've basically been running with you for YEARS - just like I make you dance with me. Oliver - on the other hand - hasn't really been able to keep in shape beyond that of some home exercise equipment. He HAS been running with you since moving here, but still, I hadn't expected him to be in shape enough to run a quarter of a marathon with you and not need to stop to catch his breath. He's impressive!

But as I was saying, moving on. Thursday, we all went to Hogwarts to set up and let Shtara run bloody amok with the other kids since she won't be living there with us. Lucky for us, Elena has taken on the role of her guardian, and Rose is going to replace Leah as Shtara's nanny and bodyguard. Oh sure, Rose is a muggle and can't hex anyone, but considering that she's been in the business since before she married Ethan, she knows more about what to look for.

Also, thankfully for everyone involved, the producer that Shtara's been working with is a decent enough bloke because had he not been, my dear sweet grandmama wouldn't have gotten a chance to put her hands on his skull before I added it to the dark vault.

That left Friday for my surprise. See, I anticipated Oliver's hearing turning out the way it did - our lawyers were confident enough that I'd have bet money on it if it was a Quidditch match. So, Friday, Mr. Lott had to put up with flying a plane full of Malfoys, elves, animals, Oliver, and his kids, to Cancun Mexico.
Viona and Alric are still on their honeymoon - or perhaps they're back and setting up their house. Either way, they're still incommunicado. River plans to pop in when he can since he's relatively nearby in California. Elena, Ethan, Rose, and their kids were smart and decided to come along. Eris brought Eric to help her take care of Luka (he's basically been living in the Manor all this time anyway), Hazel brought Pearl, and Jaz brought Vani. My parents insisted that we bring my brothers and sisters so that they can have a little quiet time to themselves (I think they plan to throw a kink party for THEIR friends while we're gone), and even Orion has decided to take a little bit of time off from the Hog's Head, and so, if you count Delphini, Tommy, Bel, and Harrison, we're definitely overrun with children and just barely adults who might as well still be children!

I'm SO GLAD we've charmed our jet to the teeth! It might be bigger than our original one, but it's still not supposed to have so many people on it at the same time! At this point, I'm thinking we might need to buy a commercial airliner!

Anyway, today was reserved for one of our favorite family activities. Surfing!

Oliver still thinks we're both utterly insane, you realize? Not even explaining that it's a bit like flying a broom, but on a board on rebellious water, was enough to get him to love the activity as much as we do. That said, once he learned the basics, he was actually pretty good. Lucky for him that Viona WASN'T around to taunt him with her competitiveness, hahaha.

My favorite part was when you had Oliver on your board with you, his arms wrapped around you as you taught him the spells that make the ocean and board (mostly the board as the ocean can be a bit stubborn when she wants to be) do exactly as you want it to. Merlin buggering Salazar! I could have shagged you both right then and there!

Speaking of, what say we show Oliver what it's like to shag under the ocean tomorrow when the sunlight is at its brightest and the bottom of the ocean looks like a bejeweled wonderland?

As for now, we're about to take Oliver to a very different first time.....

Spa time! I've booked the entire spa for all of us for the rest of the day. We're going to have massages and mud baths and seaweed wraps and mani/pedis! I'm so excited! It's only right that Oliver be treated like the wonderful, cherished, and valuable person that he is.

Can you believe that Parker and Cassie bet me that he'd go running after about an hour and a half? I'm looking forward to winning that bet!

Someone better warn the spa that I was serious when I said nearly 30 adult and child guests plus several babes in arms, ahahahahahahahahahaha!

T'aint whatcha do, it's the way howcha do it, t'aunt whatcha do, it's the time thatchu do it, that's what get's results,

Draco

P.S. … … … So... Erm... Well... Hazel came to me to talk while I was taking a break, just sitting on my board and watching you and Oliver. I had to cast a quick deflating spell! Anyway... she, erm... she wanted to talk... about... ugh! Sex. She wanted to talk about sex! And you know how I'm simultaneously open about our sex life and squicked the fuck out about theirs, right? Well, she is STILL having problems achieving the level of pleasure that it seems other women enjoy. She complained that Pearl can be down there giving oral for HOURS and barely anything at all happens. Hazel is getting to the point where she just wants to give up and fake it, so she asked me if there was anything I could think of for her to try, so erm... gave her one of my Naughty Control devices along with a whole list of spells designed to enhance pleasure. I figure that if she uses the Naughty Control to bring on an instant orgasm when she's starting to get frustrated, it might go a long way to helping her figure out what it is she's actually supposed to be feeling (as the instant orgasm spell is designed to give you YOUR own orgasm, not a supercharged one), and if that is genuinely not enough (signifying a problem), the other spells might be able to help her find relief until a doctor can check her over. Maybe something actually IS wrong.

P.P.S. You OWE me big time for having the squicky conversation! I'm going to have to have you make me forget everything including my name tonight so I can STOP compulsively wondering about, erm, you know...

P.P.P.S. Were you as surprised as I was to see Wojtek? He's fully grown now, but I've been so busy with other things, that I haven't really paid attention to him. He's fully grown and MASSIVE, but still thinks he's a lapdog! I had to cast a strengthening spell on my lap to support him when he came over to sit on me and maul me with affection on the plane!

P.P.P.P.S. Did you SEE the size of those ants on the beach?? I took pictures in case you missed them ^_^
Chapter 166

Chapter Summary

With the luck our boys have, of course they run into the one sodding bloke in creation that they'd really rather never see.

Monday August 21, 2017

My Loves: because I will always assume both of my loves are reading these!

Draco, I want to apologize for essentially throwing you under the bus. I know you were worried about Ollie not wanting us now that he didn't need us and instead of talking to you face to face, I decided to email you about it. Which I get has always been our dynamic, that way you can process things emotionally before we talk about them in person. But with no warning, I essentially outed you to Oliver and placed you in an emotionally charged situation. I am very very very proud of you for not freaking out. Instead, you dealt with it maturely and lovingly. Much more mature than I did by running away, literally, from my feelings.

Oliver, I want to apologize for talking about you behind your back. I really did have the best of intentions, I just didn't want to overwhelm you with three people arguing the individual clauses. But that's irrelevant compared to how it made you feel. I have told you over and over and over again that it's not Draco and me with you added, but that this relationship is completely equal in three parts. Then I go and discuss something very important with Draco before I bring it up with you. I am most sincerely sorry. I love you. Communicating to Draco through email, almost using it as a journal where I can get my thoughts out, has become such a habit that I forgot to think about how it would make you feel.

Hopefully the both of you forgive me. If not quite yet, I will offer myself up for whatever punishment you see fit. Even if it isn't one of the punishments I like.

So, when I said split things three ways I meant liquid assets, not property or businesses. I didn't realize we hadn't pooled our money. Good thing I trust you with my life Dragon, because I had no idea what was happening with "my" money. I knew you had the businesses in different names, but I thought the actual galleons were all in one vault. I should probably take a more vested interest in what's happening with my vaults eh? That's why I said we'd divide it equally with the businesses to be divided by name or work put in or actual interest in the business. Oh well, you learn something new every day, huh?

The whole putting Oliver on the businesses for Unity and the Stables. Okay, some of our businesses are more important to us than others. We may own bits and pieces or entire businesses that we don't care about other than it being a good investment or perhaps we trusted the person running it and thought it would make a good investment. I am partial owner of WWW because I actually put up the start-up capital and throughout the years if and when there was more investment opportunity I have put up more. It's a good investment, I trust George to know what's going to work for his business, but besides the fact that my brother is the owner, I am not emotionally invested in the business. I don't need my or either of your names on the business.

But Unity House is something different. It's the closest thing to my heart after my family. The two of you are closest to my heart. Why wouldn't I want and NEED the both of you to own it with me? Not just for logistics sake, signing things if I'm not available, hiring or firing if I weren't there to make the call, but because Unity and the two of you ARE my heart.

Similarly, the stables are a work of love. And Ollie, you've put in much more time, effort, love, and care to those animals than I have. Yes, I had the idea and I started the thing, but I am too impulsive. I run from idea to idea and try new things once my previous idea is off the ground and running without me. You, on the other hand, are constantly caring for the animals. They know you and love you. Hell, if I thought you'd say yes - or like I said before, if it was a money-maker - I would put the Stables entirely in your name.

So, with our mid-afternoon adventures yesterday, I would love to say that this vacation has been amazing so far.

Gods, making love underwater? Indescribable. I mean, I'm going to attempt to describe it, but I will not do it justice. I in no way mean this as an insult, but the shagging wasn't my favorite part. It was delicious, but the carpet ride to find the perfect spot was the best.

Look, I love shagging, I love romance, I love the both of you. But one of the things I love the most about my life is how much ... LIFE there is in it. I want to laugh and cry and fight and sing and dance and love and, and, and, everything! You know I love carpet rides, you'd think after spending twenty-six years of my life immersed in the wizarding world, I would be immune to the wonder of the magical, but no. I love the carpet rides and then Draco, my Draco, you started singing A Whole New World while we flew above the water.

It should have been romantic and lovely. And it was, you know how much I love your voice. But when you tried to do both voice parts? It's a duet my love. You dropping back and forth between the male and female parts, it was adorable. I could not stop laughing! I love our life. I love that my life includes flying on a magic carpet above the ocean with the two loves of my life while being serenaded a duet by one of my men.

Finding the perfect spot to shag? Certainly a close second. Your description was perfect, a bejeweled wonderland. And it was. But the sight of an underwater paradise was nothing in comparison to the beautifully beloved faces underwater with me. Being between the two of you, deep inside of Ollie while Draco you were just as deep inside of me, looking back and forth between your beautiful faces, watching the two of you kiss deeply and possessively over my shoulder ... breathtaking.

And actually I was going to ask, I've not used it before, but there's a zooming in process we can do with the pensieve camera right? I would love to see the entire picture of the three of us at that moment, but it's not exactly suitable for framing and displaying anywhere outside of our playroom (which I AM going to do!) but I'd love to zoom in so it's from the chest up with the ocean's beauty behind us. Get that framed and up on the wall. Yeah?

I enjoyed the sparkling beauty, the bright colors, the shining joy of underwater at noon. However, I think we need to introduce Ollie to shagging underwater under the stars as well while we're out here. It's a different feeling but no less beautiful.

I also really enjoyed our spa time! It's weird, I don't think Cassie or Parker won their bet, Ollie lasted longer than an hour and a half ... but not by much. I think it was an hour and forty-five minutes. What was the exact terminology of the bet? What did you win?

Poor sweetheart, not quite your cup of tea huh? The massage part was good I think, the mudbath wasn't as bad, but oh hunny did Oliver hate the seaweed wrap. And by the time we got to manipedis I think he was so done sitting still he was going to explode! I normally don't like sitting still either, although I can for the rare pampering day. I do enough running and moving throughout my everyday life that a single day of sitting still for that long I can handle for the relaxation it inspires. After our spa day, I think Ollie was ready to do a full marathon with me if it meant not sitting still for another moment.

It was probably just as well, because some of our littlest were done at about the same time, so everyone who was done headed off to go swimming while the rest of us got the full spa experience.

Unfortunately, because of what happened last night, I would love to say this vacation has been amazing so far, but I can't. Hopefully the rest of the trip will make up for the trauma of yesterday, but right now, even the next morning I am still feeling quite upset.

When we got back from our shag, soaking wet and looking thoroughly satisfied, the teens in our life decided to use our happiness to their advantage. They wanted us all to go shopping. And despite each of their own deep vaults, they wanted us to foot the bill. Ugh, fine. Spoiled little brats I tell ya!

Alright fine, none of them are brats, they're quite generous with their time and their own money, I just want to call them brats alright?

They are brilliant little shites though. I stand by that.

Anyway, we decide to make a family event of it. Because what's better than wandering around a crowded shopping space? Wandering around a crowded shopping space in a group of over thirty people. There's a chance we're certifiable.

Manos Magicas was amazing. It was surrounded by natural beauty, full of local gifted artisans, had killer food, and even had crafting workshops for the little ones. It should have been an awesome experience. I think we should go back again to enjoy it in full without the drama.

The drama. So I'm walking along, holding your hand while you hold Oliver's. I'm wearing Dylan, Ollie's got Gabe, and Draco you of course have Morgana. On my other side, I'm holding Atreyu's hand. Even in a crowd, seventy-five percent of the feisty foursome is pretty good about keeping close and staying together. But one little wolf likes to explore. So hand-holding on top of the usual safety charms is necessary.

Well we're all just wandering through the stalls when Trey cocks his head to the side and his nostrils flare. Yelping a bit he says, "Daddy! I smell something I know!" and starts pulling me by the hand. I let go of you, and took off with Atreyu. I'm secretly hoping this familiar smell is some sort of delicious food. Maybe it's the smell of some soap his Mama used, not quite as awesome as yummy food, but still. No. We get an aisle over and half a row down and he stops in his tracks. Right next to a stall run by a grumpy (and fairly handsome) man.

It is not a food stall or anything that has a particularly strong odor. Just wooden souvenirs. Alarms start going off in my head, I don't think this is going to end well. Atreyu tugs me closer so he can whisper in my ear. "I think I know him, my nose knows him, he's the smell I smelled."

Fuck.

I don't know what to do. Do I pull Atreyu away? Do I talk to the man? I'm certainly not going to have Trey approach him! While I'm panicking, the guy finally notices us staring at him, puts on his customer service smile and looks me right in the eye. Gods fucking dammit, I know those eyes. I watch those eyes sparkle with laughter when in the stables. I see those eyes fade out at night while I tell stories. I've seen those eyes terrified in the middle of the night with nightmares. This man has got to be Atreyu's biological father. At the very least a close relative. And since Atreyu recognizes his scent there's really only one explanation.

As calmly as possible, I tell the man, "Excuse me Sir, but my son seems to recognize you from somewhere. Can I ask your name?"

This cretin looks down at our son - his pudgy face, his sweet big brown eyes, his little thumb popped into his mouth with worry - looks back at me and says, "Never seen him before in my life."

Atreyu started sobbing hysterically. I felt the air crackle a bit and I assumed it was Rage Halo Harry making an appearance. But no, it was our sweet boy. He was so upset he was crackling the air. I hurriedly rushed us behind the closest tent, cast a NMN, and popped us back to the hotel. I sent you a message that we'd headed out so no one would worry when Trey, Dylan, and I didn't come back. Then I spent the rest of the night holding a sobbing, inconsolable little boy until he exhausted himself enough to fall asleep in my arms. I fell asleep myself shortly after, drained from the emotional trauma seeing my son's heart break.

In case you were wondering what happened or why we left so suddenly or why there was an extra little boy in our bed, that's why.

Today had damn well be a better day!

Love,
Harry

---

Monday August 21st

Mis corazones,

Knowing that you needed a bit of time to calm down today, I decided that we were going to split up like this, I took the Feisty Foursome, Jaz, Vanessa, Zaire, and Shtara with me, leaving you and Oliver at the pool (and whatever else you decided to do) with the teens, adults (those that didn't just take off in pursuit of shenanigans), and the three babies. Yes, even Morgana. She was apparently quite insistent that she be given access to your milk at ALL times today, and refused to let me touch her when she saw me getting the carrier ready so that I could take off without you.

I know Shtara coming with me was a bit of a surprise because she's generally closer to Siri and Zwei, but she's apparently taken to Vani like a house on fire, and so, has decided to stick with her like a permanent sticking charm.

As for Vanessa, I know I haven't talked a lot about her in my emails, but that doesn't mean that I haven't been working with her. After her first initial rage passed, it seems that my unique willingness to do girly things with our daughters is actually more healing to her than self defense.
Don't get me wrong, I'm still teaching her, but she tends to shy away and do more learning from Jaz when they spar than she actually seems to learn from me. I'm actually rather tempted to have Amala chase her, but I know that that would be the least helpful thing I could do, sigh...

She's doing a lot better, able to talk to Zaire somewhat easily, but she still half hides when Siri, Zwei, or Orion try to talk to her in an attempt to be friendly. She ALSO screamed a bit reflexively - as opposed to from actual danger - when she opened the door to exit the loo and saw Oliver waiting to have a turn. He was worried because she immediately ran to the room she's sharing with Jaz, and had Muffy deliver a message to me to go see if she was okay, which she was. She was actually even a little embarrassed that her first reaction to seeing a man when she wasn't expecting to was to scream, but I reassured her that it's normal and that it might be something she has to deal with her entire life.

But THAT'S the entire reason I brought her with us. I wanted her to understand - even if only very deep down in the back of her mind - that she's safe and has to sort of get used to being around people (men) again. She loves the spa experiences, and is rather amazed by how much we go shopping, but it's really the walking around as a group in the midst of a crowd that helps her re-become accustomed to being in general public with men again.

But back to Atreyu. See the whole reason I suggested going off on an adventure with just the youngest - relatively speaking - is that I had promised Atreyu that I'd take him around to learn little bits about his cultural heritage while we were here. In fact, it's the reason I chose Mexico rather than Japan (because we all know how much I love Japan).

See, while we'd been wandering Manos Magicas yesterday, I found a lovely old witch that not only sells ice cream, but also happens to have a million grandkids that she helps teach her culture and beliefs to, so I immediately KNEW that she was perfect to chat with Atreyu. But not just him, the entire Feisty Foursome.

So, I brought them back to her shop and paid for her to give them small ice cream cones every 20 minutes for about 4 hours. Like seriously tiny ones, probably two inches high - whereas the older kids got to have a much larger dish of ice cream to nurse as they listened - well Zaire and Shtara listened with the help of the translation aids, but Jaz and Vanessa had to read the translation via their contacts - but you know what I mean.

Abuela had the littles positively HANGING on her every word. It seems that Atreyu has taught the other three as much Spanish as he knows, and keep in mind that he was bilingual and not exactly an expert in either language at just four, and so, it took a lot of concentration for all of them to keep up with Abuela.

She taught them a lot of little bits of information that would be of interest to kids their age that I'm not sure a person would EVER learn about the culture without living in it. She did this via stories and threats to not give more ice cream if they didn't sit still and behave. When I had enough ice cream myself, and thus decided that it was time to go, Atreyu was convinced that she was his ACTUAL grandmother - which she delighted in and told him (and me) that we can visit her anytime we are in Mexico.

It was as we left that things took a turn. I had picked Atreyu up and gave him a kiss on the cheek, and he was asking me something along the lines of: "Papá, did you hear her talk about el Chupacabra?" When I had to stop to avoid running into a rather good looking man. Atreyu gasped and buried his face in my shoulder, and I instinctively put my free hand on his head as if to shield him.

The handsome stranger looked a bit intense, staring at me almost defensively. "You're not his father!"

I raised a brow and gave him a fiery look. "Oh, and I suppose you are?" I snarked, knowing what you'd already speculated about running into him.

He actually flushed a dark red. "No! I mean that he was with his father yesterday, and he's a short man with dark hair and green eyes!"

"Yes, that would be my husband. I'm Draco Malfoy, and you are...?" I asked with a piercing look.
"That's not important!" He insisted until I continued to stare him down for about a minute of otherwise silence. "Fine! Diego."

"Great. Diego, why in the bloody hell do you care about some boy you've 'never seen before?" Especially since anyone with eyes and a brain in their head could see that he's happy and safe with his family, even if it doesn't LOOK like his family to you."

Diego grumbled. "I, uh... I DON'T care, but as I said, I saw him with his father yesterday, and I was concerned to see him with a tall and suspicious looking foreigner. Kids DO get kidnapped, you know?!"

"Hmm. Admirable," I admitted reluctantly. "But as I've already explained, you saw him with my husband, and so, I can assure you, that he is NOT being kidnapped, but honestly, don't take my word for it. Atreyu, como estas?"

"Bien Papá," Atreyu mumbled against my shirt.

I kissed him on his cheek. "Si? Verdad?"

He nodded, his thumb firmly in his mouth.

"Look me in the eye when you say that so that I can see that you're okay," I coaxed gently, stroking his wild and shaggy hair.

He slowly raised his head and looked me in the eyes. "I'm fine, papá. Just... sad..."

I looked Diego in the eye, challenging him to protest my status as Atreyu's father, but before anyone could say anything, the other three got Feisty.

"WHO IS THIS MAN?!"

"WHY IS HE MAKING OUR BROTHER SAD?!!"

"SHOULD WE BITE HIM?!!"

"Lily!" I admonished.

She flinched a bit comically. "Kick him?"

I gave her a stern look.

"Hex him?" She and Persephone asked in unison.

"No loves, there's no need for violence. This man was just expressing concern, but now that he's reassured, he can be on his merry way," I informed them.

"I dunno, dad," Zaire interrupted. "I think hexing is a brilliant idea! From what dad was saying this morning, this man DESERVES to be hexed within an inch of his life! Not to mention, I DO have one of my fighting sticks on me. You could duplicate it for Jaz, Nessa, and Shtara, and we could challenge him to a 'fair' fight."

I couldn't help but chuckle. "Blood thirsty, just like your father. Need I remind you that I'm a trained Auror working for the Ministry? The last thing I need is a trail of bodies popping up on our holiday."

Zaire glared at me lightly, summoned his stick to his hand, and pointed it at the stranger. "Answer me just one thing: Did you EVER hurt Atreyu like my birth monster hurt me?"

The man looked extremely flustered by this point. "I never! I left the moment I realized that the mon - I mean boy, BABY! Whatever, that he was 'special' and I COULDN'T handle it. His mother LIED to me for so long, but then she just couldn't hide it one night and - WHY THE FUCK AM I EXPLAINING THIS TO YOU?!!??!!?"

I stepped between him and Zaire, not necessarily to protect one from the other, but to break the hostility between them. "Please choose your words a little more carefully when speaking to my son about my other son."

I'm dead certain he could see in my eyes how serious I was. He rubbed his forehead and sighed.

"Look... I pulled an asshole move. I DON'T want anything to do with the little furball, but seeing him... seeing HOW MUCH he looks like me. I... I got a little curious, alright?! I wanted to see if he was happy and doing well, but I wasn't prepared to be confronted by him so unexpectedly last night and pulled ANOTHER asshole move. It's a pattern because I am an asshole, there's not much I can do about that. But I just..." He trailed off with a helpless looking shrug.

Atreyu pulled his thumb out of his mouth and turned his head to sniff the air in the stranger's direction. He sniffed and sniffed and sniffed as if he was a bloodhound trying to locate a specific scent. Then he frowned.

"You don't smell like asshole. THAT smells so bad! Like when papá had Dragon Flu and he -"

"Ahem!" I cut him off hastily. "There's no need to finish that sentence!"

"Papá huele tan mal!" Atreyu muttered, waving his hand in front of his nose.

"I get it," I muttered dryly, giving him an unappreciative look.

"DADDY!" Persephone wailed dramatically, tugging on my sleeve. "I'm SO bored! When can we go do something fun?!"

"What do you want to do, love?" I asked in amusement.

"CLIFF DIVING!!!"

I sighed and smacked my head with my free hand even as Diego looked rather taken aback. "Perhaps something easier to do with -"

"CLIFF DIVING!!!" Persephone repeated, joined by Caelum and Zaire.

"But!" I protested because I CANNOT IMAGINE how'd I'd even BEGING to take 8 children cliff diving!

At this point, those that could talk were chanting: "CLIFF DIVING!" while Persephone, Caelum, and Lily were running circles around me. Atreyu stuck out his bottom lip in an irresistible pout. "Por favor, papá? PRETTY PLEASE???

"I CAN'T TAKE THE EIGHT OF YOU CLIFF DIVING ALL BY MYSELF!" I roared, trying to get some sense into them.

So, I'm writing this email as the instructor finishes casting all the safety charms and giving them instructions. I already cast all the safety charms, but one can never be too careful. The water is nice and calm and there are no rocks to accidentally land on (I double checked!), so we should be fine. But this little magi-adventure is great because it combines two forms of cliff diving, one in which one uses a flight suit to get a bit of air time, and one in which one jumps into the water and swims a bit before doing it again. SO our kids will be jumping off a cliff, flying with their suit as much as possible, and then landing in the water and swimming until they're ready to do it all over again. This... might last days, if I'm honest.

If I never manage to persuade them to come home, just know that I love you all SO much and that I'll never forget you!

Draco

P.S. I blame YOU for giving our kids a malfunctioning sense of self-preservation.

P.P.S. Give Morgana a kiss for me and let her know that I did not forget about her.

P.P.P.S. Harry, give Oliver a kiss for me, and Oliver, give Harry a kiss for me. And then maybe come rescue me from overzealous kids!

P.P.P.P.S. There is an ENORMOUS species of Fire Ant on this cliff! They're gorgeous, and I'm SUPER glad they're not inclined to go swimming too, yikes!
Chapter 167

Chapter Summary

Harry had a relaxing day and Draco thinks he's brilliant.

Tuesday August 22, 2017

Mi Tontito,

Sorry I never rescued you from the team of lunatics you took cliff diving yesterday. I'm really glad there wasn't an emergency because I left my laptop, my magi-mobile, pretty much everything you would use to contact me in our rooms while we lounged at the pool for hours.

I wasn't particularly worried about you not being able to contact me, you'd have summoned Muffy who would have found me if there had been any real danger. I just can't believe you took all of those tiny people cliff diving! I really need to learn to stop being surprised by what our daredevil children want to do or by what you let them do.

Who am I kidding? I wouldn't have stopped them either. I would have watched them with a face full of anxiety and a million safety charms cast on them, but I would have let them do it. Except now that I've been told that Viona takes off her safety charms and spells after I cast them, I probably would have kept checking and recasting them the entire time.

Come to think of it, are you sure none of them took off the spells and charms you and the instructor added? I know they got my impulsive lack of self-preservation, but they all got your Slytherin cunning and inability to say no to competition as well.

You know, it's one of those parent things to say "I hope you end up with a child just like you!" and I don't exactly have parents to say that to me. But I really do think I have earned every last impulsive thing our children do. I think maybe I should send Molly some extra flowers as an apology for what I put her through between my antics and dragging Ron along with me. I should probably send a nice bouquet to Minnie as well.

"Why is it when something happens, it's always you three?" Indeed McGonagall ... indeed!

As much as I wish I'd been there to tell Atreyu's big-fat-abandoner exactly what I thought about him, it's probably best for everyone involved that I wasn't. I don't want Atreyu to be afraid of me. The man is obviously a useless piece of rubbish but probably not "get myself in trouble with the Magi-Mexican government" worthy.

It wouldn't be as bad as siccing your cheetah on a small child who's also the victim of violence. What in the actual fuck is wrong with you Draco?!? Have you lost your mind? Yeah, it's good for her self-esteem and feeling of safety to learn self-defense but she doesn't actually need to be at "murder your opponent" levels. She's a child you lunatic!

Sorry, had to do that just in case you took my silence after that statement as permission to do it. I'm not having a "you never told me NOT TO" situation ... DO NOT do that!

You know, when you told Zaire he was "blood thirsty, just like your father," I get the feeling you were referring to me. But I am pretty sure they get that from you! Tell me there wasn't a massive part of you that wanted to respond to Lily's request to bite him with a "Hell yes!"

All in all, I think it's definitely a good thing I stayed behind with the babies. I had a lovely day in the sun, I got nice and tan, Ollie managed to bond himself a little better to Morgana, and if I'd brought Morgana with me to help you with the cliff diving I'm 90% sure you would have ended up strapping her to you and taking her diving. THAT would have given me a heart attack for sure!

Good thing I love kids and babies because we are on baby duty again tonight. A lot of the babies are specifically ours anyway, but tonight we'll have all the other infants until the wee hours of the morning. Today's Bel's birthday and so all the older teens and young adults are headed out clubbing all night. Eris and Eric, as well as Elena's crew, are looking forward to a night free of parental responsibilities. I'm looking forward to a night of getting extra baby cuddles! Chewing on some chubby cheeks. Making them giggle with hours of peek-a-boo.

I may have gotten all of us matching pajamas that say "Sleepover Squad" ... our older kids think they're dorky but the littles will think they're fun, the babies will look adorable in them, and I think Vanessa, Joel, and Jayden - who don't have big families - will think it's super fun! And if anyone wants to complain, I will eat their popcorn!

I think we're going to watch Inside Out tonight. One of those good movies that is bright and silly enough for the little kids to enjoy but with actual emotions and a story-line that will keep the older people entertained as well.

Love Always,
Harry

Wednesday August 23rd
HARRY!!!
YOU'RE BRILLIANT!!!

I've said it a million times before, but it never stops being true! You really are the most brilliant man I know. Oliver, back me up here, Harry could win competitions to determine cleverness.

Yes Harry, you really could - Oliver

HA! I told you so!

But let me get to the reason WHY you're brilliant. See, you mentioned that Vani needs self esteem, but that she DOESN'T need to be at 'murder your opponent' levels of self defense skill. That got me thinking that she's ALREADY at 'murder her attackers' level when it comes to self protection. MAGICAL self protection!

I'm not saying that I'm giving up on teaching her hand to hand combat style self defense, but it occurred to me that maybe one of the reasons she's so hesitant to learn from ME is that I'm a man and she's afraid that her uncontrollable magic will kick in and hurt me. So... what's the best way to help her be confident that THAT won't happen?

Teaching her to control her magic, right?

Yep, I know that she's technically not SUPPOSED to start learning magic until she turns 11 and goes to Hogwarts (or other magical school, including homeschooling), but when did a little thing like age ever stop us from teaching our kids magic? By the time we left Africa, our TODDLERS had mastered a handful of wandless spells. Remember that time we lived in Australia and Viona decided to become an ACTUAL water bender? Wandless magic at its finest there.

The point I’m belaboring is that I’ve decided to spend this gorgeous afternoon in the climate controlled comfort of our hotel suite (at this point, it’s really the entire floor - or two, depending on the size of the hotel - whenever our entire family goes on holiday) with Vani, Jaz, and Zaire, teaching her to control and use her magic. I don’t expect her to master the skill in just one day, but I have plenty of time once we get back home and she returns to Unity to continue her training whilst you’re teaching and the littles are giving Hagrid a run for his money – during those times that HE’S not teaching, hahahaha!

I love the light that brings a smile across your face,

Draco
Harry decides to help teach Vanessa how to control her magic.

Thursday August 24, 2017

My Heart,

It's been such a lovely vacation, but again we're on the plane on our way home. Back to life, back to reality. Next week is our last week of summer Hols before Hogwarts is back in session. Which means next week is going to be full of packing and prepping and last minute lesson plans. Not to mention it will likely be full of your favorite; panicky Harry.

Fine! Panicky Harry is no one's favorite! But he'll probably only be here for a few days and if we keep him busy enough, he has less time for panic. Ooooh, or you could distract him with all sorts of subby deliciousness to get him out of his head!

We're all enjoying the third person nonsense I'm doing right now, yeah? No? Alright, please Master, if I'm not actually busy doing anything, will you try to get me out of my head as often as possible over the next week?

So, me mentioning Vanessa's magic defense reminded you to help her train her magic. And you mentioning teaching her to control her magic made ME think of something. I have an idea, but it would require getting Vanessa to trust me a bit. See, you are an amazing teacher, I have no doubts as to your ability to help teach her magical control. But ... magical control is something you've always had. Between being taught Malfoy masks from an early age and your magic's natural temperament, you've not had to deal with making your magic behave when it's throwing a tantrum.

This may come as a surprise to you, but I have some experience controlling fit-throwing magic. I know I'll be teaching soon, and will likely be quite busy. But I would love to help teach her how to use her natural power in a healthier way. It's likely she's quite powerful and I have a couple of tricks I use to help siphon off the excess magic when I'm feeling a bit too full. Hopefully this vacation was enough to help make her realize I'm at least mildly trustworthy.

Ollie and I were talking yesterday when you were working with Vanessa and I think we've come to an agreement on our ceremony. Obviously you need to be in agreement as well, but even if you don't like the idea, I figure he and I can gang up on you with the puppy eyes and you'll agree to whatever we want because you're a pushover when it comes to us.

I mean, we will discuss this rationally and get your preferences.

If it were completely up to me, I would get us married yesterday. You, on the other hand, made a very valid point about the wizarding world as a whole making allowances for me that other people do not always get. It would be hypocritical and awful, but I can see a triad marriage being enough to get parents asking for Oliver's removal as a Professor, but not asking for my resignation. I would fight it tooth and nail, and I would probably win, and Minnie would stick up for us, but it would be a lot of drama that I don't think any of us want. I hate the idea of starting our marriage with such a negative beginning.

But you and I both know that Ollie will win over the kids and parents alike with his love of flying and quidditch. Once he's established himself as a fantastic instructor who's well liked by the children (you know he will be, he's amazing), people will be less likely to throw a fit about who's teaching the children.

Which is why we are thinking of setting a date for a late June or early July wedding next summer. We'll all be off for Hols, it will give us the next year to really learn about each other and cement our relationship before taking our vows, and the silver lining will be that our littlest set of triplets should be walking well enough to be teeny tiny ring bearers and flower girl!

And they'll be old enough and used to other people caring for them so we can leave them for a real honeymoon.

What say you our love?

Yours,
Harry

P.S. Don't forget we're having an entire circle dinner tomorrow and the August birthday celebration on Saturday!

P.P.S. We should set an official date before then so we can announce it during the circle dinner!

Friday August 25th

Harry... -_-

First of all, let me congratulate you on the fact that Vanessa was able to feel safe enough on the plane ride home to sit holding Jaz's hand and listen (watch) to you talk (sign) her through controlling rage magic.

Secondly, you're damn lucky that Oliver is calm and sensible.

So, when we got home, Jaz and Vani begged me to keep her an extra night rather than return her to Unity right away, and since Jaz hasn't really had a lot of sleepovers, I couldn't resist those gorgeous pouting eyes, so I said yes. Then I promptly got busy printing up some of my favorite pictures of our vacation.

All was fine until I went to put them on our wall of photos. I stood back and admired the pictures until:

"Oh hell no! Draco! We are NOT having pictures of ANTS on our walls!!" You roared.

Our kids are somewhat used to this behavior (us fighting), and so those of them that were in our suite basically ignored us. I think that Jaz and Vani hadn't even actually noticed anything, too busy signing to each other. Meanwhile, Oliver was holding Morgana - since she deigned to let him while she watched her brothers kick each other's feet on the floor.

"Why the bloody hell not?!" I demanded, flinging my hands out to indicate ALL the pictures on the wall. "We ALWAYS put pictures of our vacation up!"

"Yeah, our VACATION! NOT BLOODY ANTS!!" You insisted.
"I TOOK THESE PICTURES ON OUR VACATION!!!" I pointed out rather reasonably.

"THEY'RE STILL PICTURES OF BUGS, DRACO, AND I'M NOT HAVING THEM ON OUR WALL!!!

"WHY THE BLOODY HELL NOT?!?!" I questioned emphatically. "THEY'RE HIGH QUALITY, HIGH DEFINITION, WIZARDING PHOTOS, SO THEY MOVE OH SO REALISTICALLY!!!

"EXACTLY!!" You shouted, seeming to think this was a valid point.

"THEY'RE STAYING PUT!!!

This seemed to trigger your rage halo, which was actually on the rather weak and pathetic side, comparatively. I took this to mean that you were enraged but not at murder your opponent levels. Yet.

"THEY BLOODY WELL ARE NOT!!" You screamed so loud that a window shattered.

I brushed a little of the glass debris out of my hair. "THEY BLOODY WELL ARE!!!"

"ARE NOT!!" You shouted so emphatically that your rage halo got a bit brighter and I'd swear you actually levitated a half an inch or so off the floor.

"I REFUSE TO TAKE THEM DOWN UNTIL YOU CAN GIVE ME A LOGICAL REASON WHY I CANNOT HAVE THEM ON THE WALL THAT ISN'T THAT THEY ARE ANTS!!!!!" I yelled, trying to get some reason into your thick skull.

You cast something at me, which was probably a simple stunning spell - so that you could vanish my pictures while I was out cold - but I dodged that and cast a stunning spell at you in return, which basically evaporated when it hit your halo. This led to us BOTH casting spell after spell, most of which were probably harmless, at each other until Oliver cast a sonorous on his voice and roared:

"STOP ACTING LIKE BLOODY CHILDREN!!!

We paused our heated battle to look around the room. Not only was Oliver staring at us like we were his kids and he'd just caught them having a row about something stupid (we both refused to admit that he might be right about that bit), but Vani was staring at us with wide eyes from where she was cowering behind Jaz - who was basically rolling her eyes and shaking her head at us.

I will admit to being so very proud of you, because instead of turning your anger on Oliver for interrupting us, you took a deep breath, and then said: "Vanessa, when you're in the midst of what feels like uncontrollable rage magic, start by taking a few deep breaths and giving yourself a moment to think about what you are actually doing."

I assume that your thoughts had now turned to how you were scaring a little girl for no good reason, because your halo faded as you took several deep and even breaths.

"The magic is YOURS to command, and it'll only ever go out of control if you LET it," you added, looking remarkably calm at that point.

Sighing in relief, Oliver held up his hands to placate the both of us. "How about a compromise? Draco, what if we can find something ELSE to satisfy your urge to look at pictures of ants? And Harry, if Draco consents to taking his pictures off the wall, will you consent to letting him have "Leaving the pictures on the internet?" You questioned flippantly. "I already suggested a nice CLOSEABLE photo album, and he rejected that completely."

Oliver grinned at both of us. "An ant farm. Think about it, the ants will be magically sealed in the farm, but the glass plates will allow Draco to look at them as much as he wants. They will basically be unnoticeable to anyone that doesn't want to look at them, but they'll be there doing their ants things 24 hours a day."

I was rather impressed by this suggestion, and you looked... reluctantly accepting? Not entirely sure because you grumbled that you had to go to the loo and left the room before answering.

So, you've been in the loo long enough for me to write this email. I'm giving you two choices, either let me have my pictures on the wall, or let me have an ant farm. Hopefully you've made a decision, because I'm going to come burst in on you - hopefully taking a bath - and hold your gorgeous shaft hostage until you agree with me.

Incoming!
Draco
Chapter 169

Chapter Summary

Harry experiences a bit of emotional trauma, and then Draco has some very upsetting news.

Chapter Notes

Warning, this chapter contains some VERY atrocious, possibly psychotic manipulation.

Saturday August 26, 2017

Well, last night could have gone better.

Then again, it could have gone worse. I was so excited to share our news with our circle, and our announcement to the kids and your parents went super well. Why wouldn’t the announcement to the entirety of our loved ones go just as well?

I still don’t know the answer to that. No one was … upset I suppose. But the reactions were a bit lackluster. Maybe that's not the right word either. I expected shock, and even though he already knew, I expected Lucius to give us shite about it. I think I had just gotten my hopes up that our family was going to be super excited and jump up and down in joy or possibly break into song.

Alright, I may have had unrealistic expectations.

I was most surprised at the Quartet's reactions. Once the information had settled in, we got a good-natured ribbing from Blaise, "Finally caught on mates? It's better with more. It's even better with four!" With that, the four of them traded heated looks. (Lalalala, don't want to think of what they do with my step-aunt / more like a niece / daughter's best friend who's practically a daughter to me. After the elaborate eyebrow waggle, he then turned to you, "it's just bad luck it won't be a real legal marriage ceremony, are you going with a commitment ceremony then, or a bonding?"

Draco, you looked a bit panicked at that, and I stupidly didn't understand why, so like the moron I am, I stuck my overly large foot into my idiot mouth. "No actually, we've already spoken with Kings, who's done whatever Minister magic he needs to do and we're going to have the first legal triad marriage in Wizarding Britain. Isn't that fantastic?"

Except they didn't seem to think it was fantastic. Blaise's face dropped out of his teasing smirk. Kisa's eyes narrowed. But I think Ron and Hermione were the worst off, and specifically were mad at me. 'Mione looked at me with the saddest eyes I think I've seen on her since that time I died, and asked, "That's all it took? You just talked with Kingsley and Ta-Da, the whole world just bends over backwards to adjust?"

I tried to respond, really I did, although the only thing that came out was a string of "Um" and "Erm" and a few "But I" attempts at sentences in there.

Ron, arsehole that he can be, spat out: "So your marriage is worth throwing your name around but our relationship isn't?"

Oh fuck that. His bullshite was enough to get me to stop the stuttering. "That's utter shite and you know it Ron!" he tried arguing back, but I shut him down real quick, "Never once have any of you told me you wanted to get married. Never!"

Again Ron looked to open his mouth to argue, but seemed to realize he didn't have a leg to stand on.

"Yeah, that's what I thought. In the last, what, eighteen years since you, Hermione, and Blaise have been together, or since Kisa joined you all eight years ago, have a single one of you mentioned to me or Draco that you wanted to get married? No. Not once did I hear so much as a hint of anything even as subtle as 'gee I wish polyamorous marriage was legal' for me to have the slightest clue it was something you wanted. I wouldn't have even needed a direct request like 'hey Harry, could you put in a word with Kingsley or the Wizengamot on the topic of triad or quartet marriages?'"

I started to tear up, it was like my eyes couldn't quite decide if I was angry or sad. "I can't believe you think so little of me, you must not know me very well anymore if you think for one moment I wouldn't have fought for you. That I wouldn't still fight for you."

And that's when I noticed Ollie slipping away from the table, heading to our rooms. It seems someone thinks this is all his fault. Well, reassuring Oliver that he's one of the best things to ever happen to me was more important than staying and continuing to argue, so I followed him to our rooms. Draco, you followed us about five minutes later.

Then we spent the night assuring Oliver that we love him, telling him with words, with our kisses, and especially with our bodies, just exactly how important he is. How essential to our lives.

I woke up this morning feeling good about our relationship, but heart sick from last night's fight. I had been so excited to share our news, sharing the date we set, and really looking forward to today's birthday party. I should have been looking forward to celebrating Phil, little Molly, Bel, and Dominique's birthdays. I was definitely looking forward to seeing Aleksei annihilate his first birthday cake. Instead, I was dreading seeing people who were mad at me, and the people who witnessed the fight. I was embarrassed and angry and sad and ... and ... a bunch of other stuff.

I went to see if the elves had put out a breakfast buffet for the massive group in the Manor that day. Luckily they had. Unluckily, or at least I thought it was unlucky at the time, the only other person up early enough to enjoy it with me was Hermione. I thought it was going to be awkward when she started out with what sounded like small talk, "Good morning Harry, you're up early."

"I'm always up early, I can't sleep in very long at all, even if I've been up most of the night."

She sighed. "That's me as well. I couldn't sleep in this morning, even though I slept so poorly last night." Again with the big, sad, 'Mione eyes. "I'm so sorry Harry, it's not your fault we never told you how desperately the four of us wanted to have our relationship validated and recognized. You have always been so supportive of our family. From day one, you've never so much as hinted you thought there was something less real about our family. For years, we thought it wasn't possible to have anything more than we already have, it's a sore subject that has nothing to do with you."

Okay, maybe I don't have to dread the rest of the day anymore. She and I hugged it out, and she assured me that Ron felt the same way and would apologize at some point in his roundabout Ron Now I'm writing this while feeding the babies. Waiting for the rest of you to wake and for this party to start.

I'm glad there isn't going to be another fight about this today. If I had known there was going to be one last night, I probably wouldn't have completely orchestrated my, erm, pretend tantrum over the bug pictures. I uh, orchestrated that whole thing so I could show Vanessa a hands on example of how to bring down your flickering accidental rage magic. Because that's absolutely what that was.

I guess we will go shopping tomorrow for an ant farm. "Cool" I am "so excited." But Dragon, I really thought you knew me better than that. You decided to hold my shaft hostage until I gave in to your demands? Do you know anything about me? I was going to let you hold it hostage as long as you wanted to! You ridiculous man of mine.

Relieved,
Harry

Saturday August 26th
Oh Harry,

I need you to take a deep breath and focus on remaining calm. I have some upsetting news and I don't think you're going to take it any better than I am. See...

So, alright, what happened was that I was awake slightly earlier than usual - I'd say roughly 10:30. I asked Muffy what everyone else was doing as I did some yoga and prepared to rush through my morning routine so that I could go eat breakfast in the buffet room along with whomever else might be in there. I was hoping for a good half dozen interesting companions at the very least.

Well, Muffy told me that you were out in the play park area with most of the younger kids because you wanted to play with Aleksei. Oliver was with you, playing with and keeping an eye on our babies - since Morgana is still insisting on staying as close to you as possible. I honestly think she must be going through a growth spurt to want you on tap at all times lately.

Muffy then told me what everyone else was doing, including the fact that Orion was home, sleeping off his late night - since he'd performed last night. Well, I knew that someone was bound to wake him up sooner rather than later - since Bianca and Roderick tend to go jump on his bed when he sleeps in too late, much like toddlers, hahaha. It's just that with Viona gone, Eris preoccupied with her baby, and Hazel practically attached to Pearl's hip, they don't really have anyone else here to hang out with. Thus, Orion waking up whether he likes it or not.

With this in mind, I decided to go wake him up myself and have a bit of a chat with him about how his business is doing. Basically, I wanted to offer to go through his books or anything he might need help with in order to help him stay on top of things - even though I know he's crazy smart and is probably well on top of things. Basically, I wanted to bond and reassure him that I'm not still scandalized about his chosen career. I mean I am a bit, but I'm doing my best to keep that under control.

So I went to his room, and as I passed the door to Hazel's room, heard evidence that she's succeeded in her quest to, erm, well, I'm sure I don't need to say it out loud for you. I resisted the urge to cast a silencing spell on my ears and knocked lightly on his door, but there was no answer.
I expected this because he would still be sleeping, right?

Wrong, I walked in to find him glaring at Farrah. "Say that again."

Apparently the two of them were so absorbed in their argument that they completely didn't hear me. My first instinct was to apologize and back out of the room, but I was immediately too shocked to move so much as a step back, although I did feel close to fainting.

"I said I'm pregnant and it's YOURS!" Farrah reaffirmed quite loudly.

"That's bloody IMPOSSIBLE as I know DAMN WELL that I cast the protection spells Every. Single. Time!" Orion growled at her.

"That's true, you do. But sometimes these things just happen," Farrah informed him, looking a strange mix between nervous and nonchalant.

"Oh hell no! I'm not buying that it was ACCIDENTAL or 'it just happens!'" Orion snarled, looking ready to hex her.

Farrah sighed and looked away from him. "Fine! It was the only thing I could think of to make you realize that we're MEANT to be together! So I took a potion to override the protection spells."

"YOU BLOODY WHAT?!?!?!?!!?" Orion roared, understandably angry.

"I just want to be with you!" Farah defended desperately.

Orion held up a finger to basically tell her to shut up and wait for him to think for a moment. He still looked ready to hex her, and since he is OUR son, he was probably fighting a bit of a rage halo of his own. After a few deep breaths, he responded.

"I DIDN'T WANT BLOODY KIDS! However, since YOU have decided that my wishes don't matter and that I'm going to have one anyway, here's what we're going to do: I'm going to make this baby my heir, taking care of that little tidbit that always sort of nagged at me in the back of my head. But to DO that, I'm going to have to marry you and legitimize him. So that's what I'm going to do, BUT DON'T think that means that I'm going to play happy families! I'm GOING to keep on doing as I am! I happen to LOVE who I am and what I do, and you're either going to accept that, or you're going to be miserable as fuck!"

"I... can accept that..." Farrah murmured meekly, looking ashamed now with an underlying gleam of excitement in her eyes.

"AND AFTER the baby is born, when you come to the realization that we are NOT meant to be together, you can file for divorce and I won't fight it, but you ARE going to sign a bloody prenup so that you CAN'T use this as an excuse to take all my money!" Orion informed her, being remarkably level headed despite his clear anger simmering just under the surface.

Definitely more level headed than me. I was still frozen in shock and couldn't move nor speak. I may have even had my mouth hanging open.

"Anything!" Farrah promised, looking up at him again. She looked so hopeful that I wanted to shake her out of this mad fantasy, and also slap her a couple of times for doing this to our son.

Speaking of, he cast a pregnancy test spell on her, and then a paternity test spell, which as you might remember, I helped to refine over the years so that it can detect the baby's magical signature even in the womb. It actually did light up as his, which made him look visibly enraged and disappointed for a moment before he nodded in acceptance.

"Come on then, we're going to go have my lawyers draw up that prenup, and then we're going to Gretna Green," Orion informed her, taking her by the hand and Apparating away before I could catch my breath and protest.

So.....

Erm...

Well. I hope that you're sitting down and have a bag to breathe into. It seems that we're about to gain a new daughter in law. I think we're going to have to come to terms with this and be united in our support for the next year or so. I'm certain that Orion is right and that she'll be miserable and file for a divorce shortly after the baby is born, but that's no reason for US to treat her badly as she will be giving us yet another grandchild. And no matter what SHE has done, it's not the child's fault.

That's basically what I have to keep telling myself. I've actually just spent the last two or three hours in the Crystal Room destroying things and trying to come to terms with this situation. I think I'm... able to wrap my head around it at this point. Barely. I'm going to send this off to you and stay in here doing meditation and perhaps some more yoga - since I need to work on my Occlumency skills a bit.

Don't worry, I'm not planning to Occlude any of my feelings.

Come find me when you've had a chance to process?

You're the one who keeps me sane,

Draco

P.S. Oliver, love, I'm not trying to exclude you from this, I just, well, it's my first instinct to write about things like this to Harry. I know you're going to be just as concerned as we are.
Chapter 170

Chapter Summary

Harry reacts to the news...

Chapter Notes

See the end of the chapter for notes

Sunday August 28, 2017

Draco Lucius Gods-Damned Malfoy!
(Oliver, Sweetheart, if you're reading this, any rage is not directed at you!)

First of all, how DARE you make me sound like Molly? I love the woman, but her howler to Ron when we drove the flying car to Hogwarts that ended with the aside to Ginny congratulating her for getting into Gryffindor was absolutely ridiculous. And now I'm sending an email to my loves basically Howler-ing at you and congratulating Ollie on NOT infuriating me.

And now you have me complaining about my mum!! If Molly somehow gets wind of me calling her previous Howler use ridiculous, I am throwing you right under the bus. I'll tell her you prefer Muffy's shepherd's pie to hers, don't test me, I'll do it!

It's too bad Vanessa has already headed back to Unity, I've had so many occasions to teach her not only how to calm her rage magic but also to teach her that even grown wizards occasionally have issues containing their magic and she's not alone.

I cannot believe that you saw all of this happening with Orion and who can only be described as his stalker, didn't interrupt, didn't stop the situation, didn't follow after him, and THEN instead of coming to find me, you smashed crystal for two or three hours. THEN wrote an email. By the time I actually found out what was happening, the birthday party had started. And not that I wouldn't have been willing to skip it for something urgent, but you'd already wasted three or four hours and I knew it would be too late to do anything by that point.

Also, there was cake and ice cream. If I wasn't going to be able to stop my son from marrying a lunatic, I at least wanted to drown my sorrows in red velvet cake and vanilla bean ice cream.

Also, wine.

I luckily sobered up before bed and had a hangover potion ready to go just in case for this morning. I didn't need it. But that might be because for the second night in a row, I barely slept because I was so stressed out from the previous day's drama. I have a feeling I'm going to need to fly tonight if I have any hopes of getting a full night's sleep. Unless this was all a terrible dream and I will wake up well rested with a non-pregnant Farrah. Yeah?

Yeah, I thought not.

I can't even begin to think about how to fix this situation. On one hand, before he married the nutcase, we honestly could have had her brought up on charges of line theft. Luckily, our boy is smart enough to make sure there was a pre-nup. He's a brilliant little businessman, I'm sure the thing is ironclad. But while she's definitely committed the crime, what would bringing her up on charges truly accomplish? He's never wanted children, I can't imagine he particularly wants to be a single father. But that would really be the only option if she ended up spending time behind bars.

So, what's the other option? We welcome her and the child with open arms? How can I possibly look this woman in the eye knowing she sexually took advantage of my son? It's not like the Eris and Eric situation where they were both as consenting as their alcohol levels allowed and they were both too stupid to cast protection spells. Farrah not only specifically created a child with no thought to what Orion would want, but with the explicit intention of trapping him into a relationship with her.

Maybe instead of criminal charges, we need to have her assessed mentally. She's unhinged! Perhaps she needs to spend some time with my friend Gilderoy?

But that puts us right back into Orion being forced to raise a child he never wanted.

Alright, I can't keep spiraling down this path. I am going to work myself up into an anxiety attack of epic proportions. If either of you gorgeous men need me, I'm off to find my father-in-law and get utterly shite-faced. Yeah, I'm about to get mid-day drunk.

Come find me and take advantage of me if you're in the mood! Preferably before I challenge Lucius to another "I can take WAY more cock than you can" contest!

All of my panic-riddled love,
Harry

Sunday August 28
My understandable upset Harry,

Here's how things currently stand: It's about 10 PM and Orion is still not responding to Insta-owls that are 'expressing concern over why he didn't attend the group birthday party.' YOU are passed out, having been shagged into oblivion by me and Oliver after having drunk yourself under the table with my father and several other of the men in attendance at the party.

Thankfully, someone started a group singalong of all the best drinking songs, and so you never did get around to challenging anyone to an 'I can take more' contest. Although A: Oliver is dying to know more about that, so I plan to locate the email talking about it and read it to him, and B: Oliver is a little, erm… well, not quite upset, more like shocked and a tiny bit dismayed by the fact that the moment you got to the stupid drunk stag, you started licking and biting Ron and Blaise's necks, which activated Blaise's impossible to resist sex magic, which WAS leading to shenanigans that I would have quite enjoyed watching, but that Oliver put a quick stop to by throwing you over his shoulder and carrying you to our bed.

Hence the being shagged until you passed out.

But DO NOT worry yourself to death about Oliver's dismay, he still loves us, and once I explained that Blaise is a Veela with impossible to resist sex magic, he understood that you were drunk and under the influence of sex magic, and NOT purposely trying to go against our current rules. Plus, you more than made it up to him by trying to devour all his sensitive bits during our rather energetic shagging.

You actually passed out about 8 or so, and after Oliver and I recovered enough strength to move without falling off our feet, Oliver suggested something that sounded brilliant to me. He had me go outside and cast a spell he inexplicably knew that would help me locate a Queen Ant. As you can imagine, there are actually a lot of colonies on our property, and each has it's own Queen or two.

So, with the location spell cast, I was able to do a little bit of investigation of the different colonies and decide WHICH one was the most appealing to me, and here's where the location of the Queen actually became relevant: Knowing where the Queen of the colony was located (and keep in mind that all of the littles were watching in fascination), Oliver cast spells to conjure glass panels, which he sunk into the ground about two inches to either side of the Queen. Thus, he was able to lift a rather nice cross section of the colony out of the ground - completely contained in the glass case.

He then performed a few interesting spells to seal up the bottom and sides of the cage, and then cast spells over the whole thing to ensure that they cannot escape, but basically, the top is open in a way that I can either directly or have Muffy feed them the sorts of things that ants eat. They WON'T be able to escape, but they won't be suffocated and starved either.

I've put my new ant farm on my bedside table so that I can watch them as I fall asleep, speaking of which, I think I'm going to sign off now and turn in a bit early so that I can hopefully be well rested if our son pops back home tomorrow to announce his sudden marriage. I'm thinking that the reason he's not responded to any communication is probably that they've been busy consummating - as he once told you that THAT part of their, erm, rivalry was always fantastic. So... wake me if anything happens I need to be awake for?

And by the way, I cast a spell on you to force you to sleep until at least 8 AM, even if the drunken and sex fueled blackout wears off before then.

Love you like I just can't live without you,
Draco
P.S. Harry, this is Oliver, Draco basically dictated this as he sat in bed next to us, so I heard every word and I just want to reiterate that I'm not mad at you, and that I also love you more than I thought possible! -Oliver

Chapter End Notes

Draco literally was so thrown for a loop that he honestly didn't think about putting a stop to things until he was writing to Harry, and by that point, it was already too late.
Chapter 171

Chapter Summary

Harry stumbles across something shocking, and Draco has a chat with Orion.

Monday August 29, 2017

Mayday! Mayday!

Code Red.

Or ... code green?

Alright, we should probably put together a color system because I am now realizing we haven't actually put any colors to any warnable actions.

So, I left for Hogwarts this morning. The rest of you are supposed to come tonight after dinner. One week until classes begin here! T minus one week. I know I at least got THAT code right! Yeah, I will officially be a Professor in less than a week! I mean technically I've been hired, I've signed paperwork, I've gotten our quarters, I've begun setting up my classroom, I've put together lesson plans, but I haven't actually taught a student. I don't think I will consider myself a REAL Professor until that happens.

After the absolute insanity that was this weekend, I didn't want to risk running into Orion or that woman today, so I set out at the crack of dawn. Or I would have if I could have woken up at the crack of dawn, but someone placed a sleeping spell on me. Because of that, I did what any self respecting adult would do, I apparated my arse to Hogsmeade before I'd even gone to the loo. Lucky for me it was a quick jog up to the castle, and then I got to test out our en suite. And I'm pleased to report that it's a pretty nice loo to have a morning routine in!

Oh! Wow, I got off topic huh? Long story as short as I can possibly make it, I ran out of stuff to do. Yeah, I was so worried about not having to see someone that I wanted to hex, that I got here much too early and was bored around two in the afternoon. And now that I've removed myself from the situation, I feel really embarrassed and immature for running out on my son's announcement. I feel like an utter shite. If Orion hasn't already emotionally emancipated himself from being my son, tell him I love him and I'm sorry I ran away like a coward.

When I ran out of stuff to do I went to bother ... I mean see if I could help out Poppy or Minnie. Minnie shoo'ed me away, told me she had more important things to do than entertain a bored Gryffindor. But Poppy had an errand for me to run. I guess the potions professor wanted to negotiate an additional fee for stocking the hospital wing with healing potions. (Side note: Poppy does NOT like him!) and both she and Minnie agree that it was too late to find an adequate potions professor this close to the beginning of term, so they're paying the staff at St. Mungo's to brew the necessary potions for the school. I was asked to head over to St. Mungo's to pick up what they've gotten ready.

Well, I decided, since I was feeling so badly about ditching Orion, that I would walk past the Maternity/Pre-natal/Pregnancy based ward just in case. Maybe he was going to bring Farrah there to make sure her overriding potion idiocy didn't cause any harm. Then I could see him and give him a hug and assure him of my love and support. And possibly accidentally step on her toes or something. Nothing that would cause harm obviously. Fine! I won't do that, I just really really really want to alright?

I did not see either of them over there. But I DID see a certain ridiculously handsome fiancé of mine's EX in-laws. Where did I see them? Maybe walking through a different area; perhaps they were seeing about getting a heart transplant since their current hearts are missing or frozen, maybe looking to get their souls purged of the garbage they're full of, maybe something else offensive I can't think of because of the CODE RED!

No. They were IN the pregnancy ward. What in the world are they doing there? They're like a million. Are they actually stooping to kidnapping babies or something? I just .... what?!?!?!?!

I screeched like a crazy person, ran down the corridors, grabbed the potions I was there to retrieve, and got back here to Hogwarts as soon as I could. Would the two of you hurry your arses up and get here? I need you to join me in my hysterical mental spiral trying to figure out what the fuck those pieces of gobshite were doing there.

Love you!
Harry

Monday August 28th
My perfect little panicker,

So, while you were gone at Hogwarts, Oliver had gotten up shortly after you and had Muffy help him feed the babies. After they were full, he took the boys out to the stables, leaving Morgana to babble and play with her toes right next to me as I finished sleeping.

I woke up about 11 or so when Morgana started getting fussy and wanted another feed. So it was that I was sitting in bed, feeding Morgana and eating my own breakfast when Orion popped into our suite.

"Morning dad, my elf says dad's not home, but I really need to tell you both something," he informed me nervously.

"Let me set your mind at ease," I said as I gestured for him to sit on the bed with me. "I heard everything, and only because I was too shocked to move, did I NOT try to put a stop to things."

"Er, what?" Orion asked in confusion.

"I went to your room to chat with you yesterday, only to overhear Farrah announce her happy news, and then you promptly take off with her to get married," I explained.

He seemed a little relieved that he didn't have to explain everything. Sighing, he ran a hand through his hair. "I really hope you can understand. I, well, I honestly didn't want to have kids, and I didn't think I'd get married either. I basically wanted to play around until got tired of it and decided to settle down."

"Yeah," I murmured supportively.

"But even as I made plans to do exactly that, in the back of my mind, I always felt a little guilty that I wasn't having an Heir. I know I KNOW! I could have always blood adopted one of my nephews to make him my Heir, but the centuries of wards and family magic sort of insist on direct, unbroken lines, so I wasn't certain the Manor would accept a blood adoption," he rambled on.

"As much as it's powerful and wonderful to have centuries of magic to rely upon, I could have helped you break it all and start over from scratch with more equal and fair family inheritance requirements," I informed him.

He shrugged. "Well, it's a moot point now, because from the moment that Farrah said she was pregnant, about 90 percent of me was ready to strangle her, but the other ten percent was relieved that I'd not be the one responsible for breaking the family line. So, yes it's really REALLY hasty, and probably a very bad idea, but I wanted to marry her and legitimize my child so that I didn't have to worry about the inheritance thing. I mean, just think about the hassle Eris is going to have to go through if she never gets married and has a legitimate child. Thankfully, the Black line will accept girls and non-related/adopted Heirs, but if she ever wants to name Luka as her Heir, she's probably going to have to Blood adopt him or get him to marry a distant but legitimate member who carries the blood - such as Teddy; which could be interesting, if I'm honest."

"Orion..." I drawled in an attempt to prevent him from ruminating over every potential carrier of Black Blood still in existence.

"Anyway, what I'm saying is that I know I rushed into it rather hastily, but I did sort of think all of these things through previously, and I feel that this is the best option all around. I'm married to Farrah, we'll have the Heir, and then she can stay married to me or go on her merry way, for all I care."

I frowned at that. "Are you saying that you don't care if she takes your child and leaves?"

"Well, I don't LIKE the thought of that, but I honestly don't see her doing that," Orion said with a shrug. "See, ever since she suggested that we start actually dating - after she found out that I own the Hog's Head - part of what she's been asking for is for me to give that up - sell the business - and settle down to do something more respectable - in her opinion. I bet she'd LOVE it if I ran an Import Business or a Boutique or something. BUT one of the things that I got her to agree to - I even had it put in our pre-nup - was that I WILL be continuing on running and performing in the Hog's Head, and she cannot say or do anything about it. Literally, hahaha! If she tries, the magically binding contract will silence her voice."

I chuckled at that, unable to find it anything but amusing.

"So, she's going to live in my flat above the Hog's Head with me, and then once the baby comes, if she STILL thinks that our relationship is working for her, she can stay, but if not, she can leave. Divorce or not, the decision will be entirely up to her, since I will more than likely be too busy doing my own thing to care what's she's doing."

I was silent for a moment because I could see that Orion seemed to be holding something back. If I was a less scrupulous parent, I probably would have just slipped into his mind and found out what he wasn't saying, but honestly, I THINK he was holding back his true feelings. I bet he actually loves her in some way, enough to put up with her machinations, despite the fact that a large part of him wants the exact opposite of love and marriage.

Basically, a conflict of ideals.

After he literally started sweating because of my silence, I gave him a faint smile, intended to be reassuring. "You know, when I told your dad this, he erm..."
"Freaked the fuck out?" Orion asked with a soft chuckle.

"Quite," I confirmed with another tiny smile. "BUT he said something that I think is very valuable. He really is the brilliant one in this marriage."

"What did dad say?" Orion wondered curiously.

"He said that she should probably have therapy, and I agree. I think that it would do BOTH of you some good to go to therapy. Couples therapy, so that maybe you can have someone help you explain to Farrah what her actions did to you emotionally - in a way that she'll understand."

Orion sighed, thought this over for a moment, and then nodded. "Yeah, I can see how that might help. Especially since I am also probably going to need a lot of professional advice on how to suddenly share my life with someone that blatantly manipulated me the way she did."

"Do you want me to look for recommendations?" I offered.

Orion shook his head. "Nah, I refuse to see anyone but Carenza. She's been my therapist ever since Wendy retired, and I love her almost enough to buy her her own Island in the Caribbean - in a platonic way, I hope you understand."

At that point, I set Morgana aside and shifted until I could hug Orion. "You're actually lucky that I overheard you, because I had plenty of time yesterday to smash crystal and get over my anger, so that now, I'm accepting - more or less. I plan to support you in everything, even if I may not like the things you're doing at first."

He laughed. "You've come around to the idea of me stripping off amazingly quickly, so I think there's probably not much I can do at this point that's worse."

I kissed him on the cheek rather than say that I could think of a few things he could do - such as murder innocent people - that would push me over my limit. Because there's NO NEED to even mention that as he's such a good boy that he'd never even think it.

After that, we chatted about this and that, not to mention planned out how to break the news to the rest of the family. I suggested that even though it might be more tedious than a giant family announcement, he might want to consider telling Eri first, then Hazel, Viona, and River, before making a giant announcement to the REST of the family.

A couple of hours had passed, and he had actually fallen asleep on our bed (his night was apparently very athletic and exhausting, ugh), when your email came in. At that point, I sent Muffy off to tell Oliver to come in when he had a moment, and then typed up this reply as I waited. Happily, Oliver just came in the room, so I plan to sign off and explain the situation to him so that we can go calm our beloved.

Keep on a'rockin' me baby,
Draco
Tuesday August 29, 2017

My Own,

Gods I needed last night. I thought I needed to discuss my worries, think about all the reasons those two could have been there, analyze every single moment of the entire interaction. No, what I needed was my gorgeous men coming and distracting me from my worry.

I don't think it helped that I was already worried about the Ori situation. It sounds like your conversation with him yesterday relieved your fears. I have to be honest, it didn't alleviate a single worry for me. I just hate that this manipulative person is getting her way and now Orion is acting like he'll be totally cool with it after a bit of therapy? He doesn't want kids, he doesn't want to settle down, he doesn't want to be told what to do .... and now he's going to be married, with a newborn, settled in to get his heir at the age of seventeen?

Is he actually relieved that he won't have to break the family line? Or is he using that to justify the situation he's been thrown into? Does he secretly care for her like you seem to think? Or is he just attempting to make the best of a bad situation? I get the whole 'when life gives you lemons, make lemonade' thought process, but I don't think there's a saying that translates into 'when someone creates an entire new life to trap you into a relationship, marry them.'

Yeah, I am pretty sure I reacted badly to seeing those people because I was already in a bad place emotionally. Not that I would have reacted happily, I hate those people, but I probably wouldn't have shrieked and run away either. Although it's possible that running away is better than potentially unleashing Rage Halo Harry upon the Maternity Ward of St. Mungo's. Keeping a tight rein on all of it still would have been a better option than that. I was able to keep completely calm and not unleash even a small amount of sparks at the hearing, but that was probably because I was focused on our Ollie and his reaction as opposed to reacting to other people in the room.

Plus he's got a cute arse so that's always a bit distracting.

I have two unbelievably handsome men with amazingly fit arses that I just want to grab onto. Sometimes I want to take a bite out of them. And no Draco, I can hear you complaining from here, your arse is NOT getting bigger and it's delicious and utterly grab-able. I will not listen to a single argument on the subject. I think this is another quirk like your obsession with ants that I'm pretty sure is just your brain malfunctioning and seeing something no one else is seeing.

You both arrived at Hogwarts yesterday shortly after I sent my email. We did talk a little bit about potential motives or reasons for those two to be there. Best guess obviously being that they are in some way trying to gain an heir since theirs has recently passed and they don't claim our Parker or Cassie. Ugh, I hate that they still have to exist in our world. Why did I have to walk by the stupid ward? Why did I have to make their lives my business? Why can't they go take a long walk off a short pier?

Well, you both wanted the info and to assure me they're not our problem reminding me I don't need to obsess, but we didn't dwell on it. Since Ollie isn't planning on prepping the broom shed and all its contents until this afternoon we had the entire evening to spend together just us and the babies and the feisty foursome. The older kids being dropped off by Lucius and Narcissa later on this evening. And dear Merlin I will cherish the beautiful memories of last night for a lifetime.
The three of us in our room, holding our three babies, while the older four ran in and out, stopping for a hug or to tell us something fun they'd just discovered. But the beginning of this part of our lives, the beginning of our second Hogwarts' adventure, was us sitting on the floor of our rooms talking about how we wanted to decorate, dreaming of future days to come where we will live and love in this place. Full of stolen kisses, baby giggles, dreams, and hope.

Then, once the seven littles were sound asleep for the night, we asked the elves to keep an ear out for them and the three of us went and had a midnight flight on the quidditch pitch. Chasing each other, daring each other into tricks, 'accidentally' falling and grabbing an arse to help ourselves stabilize. It was a wonderful evening and a magical night. If we begin as we mean to go on, this might be the best chapter of our lives yet!

I woke up this morning with my loves in my bed and a smile on my face. Also, a nice hard cock grinding into my hip. Mmmm.

I've just taken a bit of a break from putting my classroom together to write this email. I'm thinking of heading to lunch around one if you want to join me.

Love Always and Forever,
Harry

P.S. I don't think they will because the pieces of gobshite seem to think adopted kids aren't good enough, but I warned Tabitha against them if the EX in-laws go anywhere near Unity House.

Wednesday August 30th
The beats of my heart,

Oliver, I know you're probably still out practicing your teaching skills on our littles, and Harry, you've actually been in a rather long staff meeting today, where the Heads of Houses are brainstorming, erm… House Unity things? Not entirely sure, to be honest. I was still at least half asleep when you were telling me before leaving.

So, since I woke up all on my own with three babies and Muffy to help keep them from overrunning me, I had nothing to do today until it was time to head over to Unity for my sparring with Vani. Just so you know, seeing you go all Rage Halo actually DID help her. She said that if you can be so mad that you are literally on fire and NOT hurt me, then she can probably stop being so afraid of hurting me that she doesn't really learn anything.

So, she's actually making progress! It's still not at 'I can physically defend myself without magic' levels, but it's definitely headed in that direction.

But as I was saying, I had nothing to do, so I decided to bring our three babies in to see Healer Rowe. She finds it a bit amusing that we bring our babies in for more check ups than strictly recommended, but considering their rough time in my womb and whatnot, she completely understands why we might want to occasionally come in and say: Hey, can you take a look at our perfectly healthy babies and just verify that they're still doing just fine.

Good news, they are doing just fine. Gabriel had a bit of an episode of staring off into space whilst we were there, and so, she was able to document it - and look over the notes we're keeping - and suggest a bit of an adjustment to his potions regimen. Side note, she isn't 100 percent certain it will help, but apparently children with Epilepsy occasionally have some success in following a high fat/low carb diet. It has something to do with the extra fat in the diet providing extra lining to the nerves and buffering them from 'misfiring.' She does feel that it's a bit early to give our baby anything other than a complete milk diet, but that it's something we might want to look into for the future.

So... while I was there, I happened to ask Rowe a question, and despite it being a breech of privacy, she's been our Healer long enough that she knows I wouldn't ask for malicious reasons. And she's right, I don't have any malicious intentions, heh heh…

So here's what I found out, or at the very least, what Rowe SUSPECTS. She could be wrong as she hasn't actually checked their file, but it seems that they are either using a surrogate to have another Heir - since they did have a bit of infertility issues and are now rather elderly. OR they are using a sample from their son (Oliver, you did mention that he'd had some samples put into stasis during your trying to conceive stage, right?) to create what would be his Heir - also using a surrogate. The last option is least likely but still possible: they could be straight up cloning their son.

Yep, that led to a rather fascinating conversation. It seems that it's actually quite a bit easier for the Wizarding Community to make clones than it is for the muggle one - ESPECIALLY since the muggles figured out how it was possible, and so a good Potions Master was able to create a potion to make that bit even easier. So, it's possible that there is - even as I write this - a clone of Edwardmundgerwhateverhisnameis being incubated as a regular baby in a volunteer (and probably well-paid) womb.

Here's the kicker, both Muggle and Wizarding communities have advanced to a point where they can screen embryos for genetic diseases, like the one he died from, and so, doing it like they are (if they are), any of the three methods I just described CAN actually result in a baby that won't have the same medical issues, thus they'll have their Heir and he or she will be healthy.

I want to be an arse and say that they don't deserve it, but if they're already at the point where they need to be seen by the Maternity Ward (rather than the fertility specialist), then I just can't bring myself to wish ill on an innocent baby.

Ooo! It's now time to go spar with Vani! And if she just so happens to suggest a bit of spa time when we're done, well, who am I to argue?

Love, lust, and everything in between,
Draco
Chapter 173

Chapter Summary

Harry has a weird dinner, and then it's time for the welcoming feast.

Friday September 1, 2017

Holy Shite!

I just had the weirdest ... dinner? Pretend dinner so we could secretly discuss things that shouldn't be discussed? Undercover meeting with pasta as a cover story? Whatever you want to call it, I just went to dinner with Rowe and It. Was. Insane.

Let me back up. First of all, more importantly than anything I found out during the dinner, update on Gabe. So all three of us were sitting around this afternoon, Ollie and I were all set and ready to greet our students in class Monday morning. Ahead of schedule I might add! When Gabe had a seizure. I know, he has epilepsy, it's currently active and not fully controlled, so A seizure isn't out of the ordinary. But this particular seizure is the longest one that we've witnessed. It scared the shite out of me. It seemed to scare the both of you as well.

I kept waiting for it to be over so I could document it, but it just kept going. Honestly, it was probably a minute or less, but normally his seizures finish up within thirty seconds, so it may as well have been an hour for how much it terrified me. Once he was done seizing and seemingly back to normal, I decided we needed to go see Rowe right that minute. You stayed at Hogwarts with Morgana and Dyl and the rest of the kids. I truly feel it was necessary to take him in, but I am a bit disappointed I didn't get to hang out all evening on one of our last free evenings all together before school requirements start taking up a majority of our time.

So, medically speaking, the potion Rowe added on Wednesday during her tweak to the regimen is likely the culprit. She said that particular one is very polarizing, it either really helps or it makes things worse, no in between. It's why she added such a low dose to begin with. Since we are all so particular about documenting his seizures, we caught it quickly enough that he may have another extended seizure or two in the next few days while it works out of his system, but it won't cause any lasting damage.

Another tweak of potions, taking off the bad one, increasing the dosage of a different one, and we'll keep documenting and keeping an eye on the changes.

Fun side note, the little chunker is over seven kg (16lbs) already!

So get this, once we were done with the medical part of the appointment, Rowe and I were chatting away. How are the kids? How is the new job? Blah blah blah. But then it got weird. Rowe said, "I usually see Draco since you're so busy with Hogwarts, I think we should go get dinner together, don't you think?"

Uh, not that I don't adore her, but she's never actually invited us to hang out like that. We've grabbed her a nice dinner from Cafe Exquis when we know our appointments are making her stay late, we've invited her to special occasions and birthday parties, she's more than just a healer to us. But at the same time, she's never just randomly invited me out to dinner after an appointment either.

I think she could sense my confusion because she followed it up with, "I just love catching up with you boys. I know your Oliver has been to appointments and is fantastic with your babies, especially little Gabriel and his special needs, but I'd really love to hear all about him and how you've all fell in love, I'm just so curious about Oliver."

Oh! She has information but can't give it at St. Mungo's! "I'd love to talk about our Ollie! He's wonderful and loving and such a calming presence, it's surprising how loving he is with his background." And at that, Rowe's eyes got a bit wider and she nodded. "I assume you don't want to be annoyed with the wizarding world interrupting us to gawk at my stupid famous face so should I get us a private room at Exquis?"

That was most definitely what she wanted, so I messaged you and Ollie to let you know I'd be home later than we thought (making sure to let you know it wasn't related to Gabe so you didn't panic) and then called the Café to let them know we were coming; Rowe let the staff know she was leaving, and we headed out to dinner.

We had an absolutely lovely dinner. I know it wasn't really the point, Rowe was just trying to get me somewhere private where she could tell me what she knew, but it didn't stop either of us from getting our fill of delicious food. I had the Spinach Ravioli with marinara and a few pieces of the buttery garlic bread I love. Rowe had what I assume was a yummy wild rice soup, if the look on her face was any indication to her enjoyment.

Well, it seems she's found out new information since she told you her guesses about what those two arseholes were doing in the pre-natal area of St. Mungo's. As you know, since you're the one who initially chose her as our family's primary healer, Rowe has specialized in adopting a muggle-hybrid style of healing where she relies on magic but also incorporates muggle advances in healing if they are better than the magical options. Because of this, she was sought after by another Healer to ask for her expert advice.

I guess, keeping in mind patient confidentiality, there is an unnamed couple looking to have a surrogate carry a child for them. But they want some specific screening done in the hopes of avoiding a potential issue. All normal right? If this is the unnamed couple WE think it is, I would assume they'd want to make sure a subsequent heir wouldn't have the same disease their son died from. And yes, they do want screening for that. But here's where the other healer had to speak with Rowe; they want to know if there's any way to screen out the gay.

Yeah. This couple is curious if, and I quote: "Is there any way to screen for the gay? Or will we just have to make sure to raise it knowing it can't choose to be gay?"

What in the actual fuck?

Once we finished eating and Rowe had told me everything she could .... without telling me a single thing wink wink - she went home. So now I'm sitting in the private room with Gabe, writing this, feeding him HIS dinner, and trying to figure out what to do or say. Do you want to come here and talk? Should I just get myself calm enough to come home? I don't trust myself to apparate or floo with Gabe right now while I'm so worked up.

Every time I get to a point where I think humanity can't disappoint me anymore, this kind of crap snags me in the head with the reminder.

I love you always,
Saturday September 2nd
My darling Harry,

Last night, after you came back from your dinner with Rowe, you were basically just in time for the beginning of term feast. All the students knew you were going to be their Professor, since you'd already been here for a bit last year. Except for the first years, who were practically silent from wide-eyed awe that they got to have THE Harry Potter (now Malfoy) as their Muggle Studies Professor. Eventually.

But since the news wasn't really all that new, the students gave you a warm but moderate welcoming clap. None of them had known that OLIVER was going to be the Flying Professor, so when he was announced, I swear the whole hall went wild with things like:

"He's a famous Quidditch player!"

"I LOVE watching old games featuring him as the main Keeper!"

"I'm going to pretend I'm TERRIBLE at flying just so he has to give me personal lessons!" That was inadvisably squealed by a Sixth Year Gryffindor girl, hahaha.

All in all, Oliver seemed to get a rather heated welcome, which seemed to utterly shock him. He was a bit white and shaky looking as he looked around at all the enthusiastic students cheering him on. McGonagall smiled at him fondly and let the students carry on for a bit before calling order, and then adding an introduction for me.

"And lastly, even though he is NOT a professor, Draco Malfoy is going to be living in the castle and taking care of his and Professor Malfoy's younger children, and he has graciously agreed to lend an ear if anyone should happen to need to talk to someone who ISN'T a staff member. He has a LOT of children, and so, has heard everything; I also encourage you to seek him out if you feel you need to."

I chuckled and stroked Morgana on the head. "Just DON'T try to touch our youngest daughter Morgana without her permission as she doesn't take kindly to just about anyone touching her."

"Misters Malfoy, would you like to briefly introduce your littles so that everyone knows who the younger children running around the grounds are?" McGonagall asked.

You took my hand and kissed it to let me know that you were just fine with me being in the spotlight. I started with the oldest one we have with us.

"Everyone, this is Zaire, and even though he is 11 and old enough to attend Hogwarts as a student, he decided to homeschool so that he can focus most of his attention on his restaurant he opened almost exactly a month ago now, called Zaire's Langa - located not too far from Diagon Alley, in the revitalized muggle wizard hybrid area outside the Leaky Cauldron."

Zaire burst in with this cheeky little bit: "All Hogwarts students - and staff - will get a 10 percent discount, so make sure to check it out the next time you have a chance! Perhaps during Christmas Hols!"

"Za-ire..." you muttered softly, gently taking him to task for mildly inappropriate self-promoting.
"Dad..." he muttered at you in return with just enough attitude to make most of the students laugh.

Moving on, I continued the introductions. "This is Jasmine and she's deaf, so if you're calling her name and she doesn't answer you, it's literally because she didn't hear you - or notice you. She's very friendly and can read lips, so don't feel like you have to avoid her, and if any of you are interested in learning British Sign Language so you can communicate with Jaz and others who are hard of hearing, we have Jaz's lifelong nanny Leah here with us to not only interpret for her, but also to give lessons to whoever wants them."

This actually seemed to spark a bit of interest, which I found strangely gratifying.

"These four here are Persephone, Caelum, Lily, and Atreyu. I daresay that if any of you are having trouble in Care of Magical Creatures Class, they'll be an excellent resource to help you review your lessons."

"Too right they will!" Hagrid cheered them on. "Those four quite possibly know more about Thestrals than I do!"

"And unicorns!" Persephone insisted.

"Can we go ride the Thestrals after we finish eating, daddy?" Atreyu asked very eagerly.

"No!" You blurted out in alarm.

"But WHY not?!" Atreyu demanded. "We ride our Thestrals at home ALL THE TIME!"

"Our Thestrals at home AREN'T living just inside the Forbidden Forest!" You explained a bit emphatically. Atreyu accepted this, but his crossed arms and pouty lips told everyone that he was NOT happy about it.

I pressed on before he could protest. "Which just leaves Morgana's twin/triplet brothers: Gabriel and Dylan. Headmistress McGonagall has given Harry permission to have one of the three in class with him as he likes, and so, chances are you'll see these three the most."

"AHEM!!! WHO are they going to see the most?!!" Siri demanded, clearly miffed.

I chuckled. "I meant NON student Malfoy. Obviously the Gryffindor Beaters are going to be more popular and well-known."

"That's what I thought you said," Siri muttered, settling back down rather easily.

And with that, McGonagall took over again and gave out some beginning of term notices and reminders before declaring that the feast was over and everyone should return to their dorms.

After returning to our quarters, we basically had the weekend to do nothing but wait for classes to begin on Monday, except, well, you wanted to fine tune your lesson plans, and the problem was that you were trying to stick close to a more 'acceptable' lesson plan when what you really wanted was a more 'informal' one. After discussing it practically to death, you finally agreed with me and Oliver that your style is going to be just as valuable - and perhaps more so - than the previous Professor's.

Basically, you still want it to be mostly talking about things that interest the students, and so plan to have topics to start the conversation each class, but then just go with it wherever it leads. Your biggest concern is that this approach doesn't lead well towards assigning homework or giving tests, thus you didn't know what to base grades off of. It wasn't until Ollie pointed out that you can base grade off PARTICIPATION (like he's basically going to have to do), that you finally looked like you had an epiphany.

So, we'll see. I know you'll probably drive yourself crazy with panic and worry until you've got a year or two under your belt and have a chance to really figure out what works best for you. Until then, just do your best and remember that you AREN'T required to be perfect, just better than Lockhart, hahaha!

I kid! You're going to be perfect! I love you so much ^_^

But now I get to describe my day.

As you know, Hannah stopped by - our suite in the Manor - and called for Muffy to come get me. So, you knew that I was probably going to be working with Hannah for a few hours, but then I didn't just return to our home in Hogwarts as expected.

It's because...

So, normally when Hannah stops by, it's because she has a cold case or an urgent active case involving a child. And this sort of involved a child. It's just, well, not about the child so much. See, apparently there's a single father that has an approximately six month old daughter, and they live in an appallingly tiny flat in the Bexley Borough of London.

Well, the neighbor on the other side of the bedroom wall noticed something odd. It seems Lana is normally a happy, cheery, and quiet baby, but suddenly last night, Lana started crying. Also normally, Darrin is an attentive father who makes sure that he fixes whatever is making Lana cry as soon as possible. But Lana just kept on crying for about an hour or so.

The neighbor - Mrs. Hamby - thought: Alright, sometimes babies just cry and nothing stops them. But THEN Lana woke up about every hour or two and cried for about an hour or two - all throughout the night and morning, but strangest of all, Darrin didn't seem to be doing anything at all to comfort and soothe her. So, in the morning, during a crying fit that seemed to be getting fainter and weaker, but not... like a baby who is being comforted does, more like a baby who has cried so long they just can't anymore does. So, she was definitely concerned by this point and used the spare key Darrin had given her to take care of his cat on occasion to let herself into his flat.

Except the door was just slightly ajar, which made Mrs. Hamby wonder if a burglar had come in, robbed the home and murdered Darrin. So she very cautiously opened the door a crack and looked in until she was reasonably certain no one was waiting there to murder her - which would be unlikely based off how long Lana had been crying, the burglar would have been long gone.

Still cautious, Mrs. Hamby remained as silent as possible and crept around the flat looking for evidence, but all she found was normal things. The telly was on. There was a half eaten takeaway container of curry on the coffee table. Some dirty dishes were in the sink. There really wasn't much to indicate a burglar.

So then Mrs. Hamby wondered if maybe Darrin had had a heart attack and died. She made her way to his bedroom and found that it was also normal, except Darrin was not in his bed and Lana WAS in her crib. Thus, the child was all on her own and practically starving by that point.

The first thing Mrs. Hamby did was pick Lana up, comfort her, and get a bottle ready to feed her as soon as possible, then she called the police because she has no idea what could have happened to Darrin.
It just so happened that Hannah was assigned the case because it sounded like there wasn't an active or immediate crime to respond to, and so, and Inspector would be needed to figure out what had happened. Hannah obviously tried the usual - such as pulling his financial records to see if he'd suddenly done a runner, but if he did, he's NOT using any money from his account.

It's now been three days and Hannah has had no success finding Darrin, and Mrs. Hamby can't take any more time off to care for Lana. So Hannah (who had pulled some strings so that Lana could stay with Mrs. Hamby - who she knows - rather than be brought to child services), decided that she'd come grab me and see if I could get any information off the things in his flat.

Well, that's what's taken me so long. I've basically been wandering this bloke's flat touching and holding all his things, and while I've gotten a LOT of information about him in general (which is why I'm calling him by his first name, I feel like I know him rather well by this point), nothing has given me the slightest clue about what happened to him. At this point, I can be no more help to Hannah, which is breaking my heart just a little.

So, I came up with a temporary solution. See, once Mrs. Hamby stopped by to chat with Hannah, and mentioned that she REALLY had to go to work and had no idea who to have watch Lana, I rather unthinkingly blurted out that I could watch her for a bit. Mrs. Hamby was suspicious until she had a chance to look Morgana over and see how I care for her with an ease that only comes from LOTS of practice. So she let me have Lana for a few moments to see how Lana would take this turn of events.

I honestly have NO idea what it is about me that makes all baby girls just love me, but Lana took to me much the same way Viona, Jaz, and Morgana have. That is to say that she calmed down almost immediately, took about 4 ounces of milk rather quickly, burped, and then dropped off to sleep.

Funnily enough, I did all of this while singing softly to both Lana and Morgana - who NEEDED me to sing to her to keep her calm about the fact that I was holding an UNKNOWN (potential rival) baby. She looked about ready to hex something when I took Lana in hand! But she remains content enough to share so long as she gets more than her fair share.

After Lana fell asleep, I tucked her into the 'spare' carrier (that I subtly conjured when I said I was pulling it out of my bag), so that she and Morgana are both on my chest, and now even Morgana is napping.

But part of what is taking me so long, is that I volunteered to stay here in this flat until Mrs. Hamby gets home from work, and she works the second shift, so it'll be late. Thus, I'm currently lounging on Darrin's sofa, typing this up, and hoping that something gives me a clue about his whereabouts after all.

I'll be home as soon as I can, but just so you know, I, erm, well, I also volunteered to babysit for Mrs. Hamby until Darrin is found, which could be a few days. Or longer. So... At least I'll have something to do - in between working with Vanessa and taking our littles back to the Manor to get some quality time in the stables.

If I'm not too tired, I'll have my way with you (or even BOTH of you!) when I get home,

I got that James Dean, daydream, look in my eye,

Draco

P.S. Were you as amused as I was when McGonagall let Zaire try on the sorting hat in her office and he was sorted Hufflepuff? Oh sure! We finally get a Hufflepuff that can tell us all their secrets, and he ALSO chooses to not go to Hogwarts. I suppose that Hufflepuffs do like to be busy though, so maybe it's not so surprising that both our boys were doing homeschool/apprenticing/work rather than attending Hogwarts.
Monday September 4, 2017

I love teaching!!

Alright, I know it's only the first day, although technically I did teach last year a few times a week, but to be fair I was teaching a different teacher's syllabus and attempting to follow his teaching style. With both of those factors competing, I am still going to say this was my first day teaching. Yeah. Definitely. And I love it!!

I just wish you were home with us so I could tell you all about it. Ollie and I both miss you so much. We're proud of you, proud of what you're doing, and desperately in love with that big heart of yours that makes you attempt to help everyone you can. But we selfishly miss you. He and I were sitting here after dinner, he was telling me about his meeting with the captains and I was talking about my first day when Ollie interrupted me to say "I hate that Draco's not here for this, it's not the same without his reactions to our stories."

We both decided no matter how late you get home tonight, we insist on you waking us up so we can spend some time with you. Maybe we'll talk, maybe we'll fuck. who knows?

I do. I know! I'm requesting a deep buggering.

How are things going with little Lana? Any updates on where Dad went missing to? How's Mrs. Hamby doing all of a sudden caring for a newborn? I suppose for you it's really only day two of babysitting since yesterday was Mrs. Hamby's day off so you spent the day with Jaz and Vani at Unity. Has Morgana tried to attack Lana for taking her Daddy yet?

I know McGonagall warned the students that I had permission to bring the babies into classes, but I hadn't planned on bringing any of them in on the first day. But seeing as you had already left for babysitting before I was done with teaching for the day, I did take Gabe and Dyl to my last class. It was sixth years who already knew me pretty well and it's a smaller class at that point. So I decided to incorporate the babies into the discussion. We discussed the difference in everyday chores between the Muggle and Wizarding worlds. Nappy changes are SO much easier as a Wizard (although still not wonderful) and I used the two boys to do a side by side comparison.

Eventually, probably because it was a classroom full of sixteen year olds, the baby discussion turned into a bit of a sex education class. We talked about the difference between protections spells and Muggle prophylactics in preventing diseases, protection spells and Muggle birth control to prevent pregnancy, the inability of Muggles getting their men pregnant, and even discussing birthing options. It was informative and segued into information my students were interested in while staying within the parameters of Muggle studies.

You're right, I absolutely need to teach my way and not try to fit into the last professor's teaching style.

But now I'm off to spend the evening with my lions. I need to get to know them, see how they're settling in, see how first days of classes went, all those head of house duties!

Make sure to wake us up when you get home.

Love Always,
Harry (And Oliver)
Wednesday September 6th
My loves,

Monday I was babysitting Lana after spending some time at Unity with Vani and Jaz. It seems that when Zaire takes off for his restaurant each morning, Jaz just heads on over to Unity to spend the day with her best friend Vani. Thus, it’s actually Jaz who - in many ways - is helping Vanessa with her therapy and healing. Jaz has more or less taken over the bulk of the Krav Maga training, so that when I arrive to do some sparring, Vani is showing some real improvement.

But then I have to get to Darrin’s flat in time for Mrs. Hamby to leave for her job. On Monday, I basically did as I had before, sit in his flat watching bad telly while waiting for him or Mrs. Hamby to return. Yesterday, at some point, I wondered why I needed to stay in the flat when clearly, Mrs. Hamby was running low on supplies like formula and nappies.

So I took Lana and Morgana shopping and bought about a year’s supply of nappies in various sizes to accommodate her as she grows. Then I bought about a year's supply of the highest quality formula I could find - which was an organic brand that promised to have no chemicals or artificial substances in it. Even better, they had sample bottles for sale, which allowed me to give some to Lana to see how she liked it. I daresay that it was tastier because it was already in liquid form and smelled like milk - whereas the formula that Lana's been drinking is the cheapest stuff available and smells a bit like someone burped, farted, or possibly even vomited into a large vat of the formula during its manufacture.

In any case, after buying all of that, well, it's probably no surprise that I had taken quite well to stress shopping. NOT that I personally am experiencing a large amount of stress, just that simply worrying for Lana is a bit stressful. So I bought her a nice large wardrobe - also in various sizes to accommodate her as she grows.

The last thing I did was buy her a much better crib, as the one she's currently using is a bit small, and seems to be more of a thing people put their children in to play quietly for a few minutes. I bought her a lovely hand carved wooden crib with a cushiony yet supportive mattress.

So - of course - the first thing I find out today after Mrs. Hamby left for work was that Darrin had been found. Hannah dropped in about 20 minutes after Mrs. Hamby left - thus I hadn't had time to decide what to do with the girls, and I was leaning towards taking them to a park before maybe a movie.

Anyway, Hannah dropped in and told me that Darrin's body had turned up in a derelict lot, and that by the looks of it, he'd spent the majority of his time missing actually dead and rotting in the heat. Apparently, it was a local stray dog dragging one of his feet off toward a secret litter of puppies that alerted a passerby that something weird was going on. That passerby reported the sight to the police, who searched the area until they found the remains of Darrin's body and the stray dog's nest.

Chances are that the entire body could have been eaten by animals - far more than just the dog and her puppies - and never found, had someone not spotted his foot. So while Hannah still has to sort out what to do with Lana (hopefully Mrs. Hamby can adopt her), the entire focus of the case has shifted from missing person to murder.

To that end, Hannah popped off relatively quickly tonight. I'm going to probably take Morgana and Lana out places to keep my mind as clear as possible, and then when Mrs. Hamby returns from work, I'll probably stay and chat with her for a bit. Hannah has promised to come back and officially give her the news. At that point, I suspect Hannah will either have something with her, or want me to turn up shortly after waking tomorrow so that I can touch Darrin's body and see how he died.

Speaking of which, I CAN'T believe I forgot I could do that! Hannah remembered me telling her about the boy in the box, in which all I touched was his hand (not to mention that one time with the finger), but back when it was my cousin who had died and someone was trying to frame me, I'd completely forgotten all about just touching the body. I was in a mindset that I didn't have some THING of hers to focus on.

Anyway, I'm going to sign off now and see what I want to do with two baby girls who seem to tolerate each other well enough that there aren't open brawls, but judging by the glares they give each other, they ARENT happy having to share either.

Everything I do, I do it for you,
Draco
Chapter 175

Friday September 8, 2017

My Love and My Love,

Please tell me neither of you have forgotten me. I have been so busy this week I honestly can't remember the last time I spoke with either of you for longer than it takes to say "here's this baby, I'm headed to class" or "give me that baby so you can head to class" or "quick, let me feed that baby before you head to babysitting,"

I know that this first week of term is insane. I knew it was going to be hectic. It's hectic for any professor or any head of house; add the fact that I am two of those things, my fiancé is one of those things, my husband apparently has a side job as murder solver and nanny, and I also have a whole horde of children of my own that I need to give love and attention to, and I'm pretty sure I've not slept all week.

Obviously I need to check in with my lions and be available for meals and in case my students have questions, but the fact that I've assigned zero homework yet makes me think I will have very few legitimate questions. I may get a few nosy little gossips just wanting to hint around about my handsome men, but nothing that will take any brainpower or much time.

I need to catch up on my sleep so I can stay caught up next week because you KNOW I am not missing seeing my girls' designs at Fashion Week next weekend. I'll be assigning work for my students of course, I can't just go weeks blaming a light load on my family responsibilities, but I plan on spending each evening grading everything as it comes in. Again, I need to have the entirety of next weekend free so I can go see my fashionistas! I am so proud of them both. And unlike their Daddy Harry, I've not heard a panicked peep from either of them!

Any updates on the case Draco? On little Lana's living situation?

Ollie, I've heard little bits when we've sat up in the evenings feeding the babies, but how has your first week of classes gone? Get any teaching done, or just spent most of your days fending off terrible teenaged flirting?

I miss you both, I love you.

I need not your beauty but the lights from your hearts,

Harry

P.S. But the both of you are damn beautiful!

Monday September 11th

Our Harry,

I have nearly a week's worth of things to tell you about, most of which you won't have heard me talking about yet because you've been so busy with your students. As I understand it, classes are going so well that your non Gryffindor students keep visiting in your regular office after classes and staying to chat until you literally have to kick them out to get to your next class, dinner, or your evening Gryffindor office hours. During the evenings, which you have reserved for your lions, they keep you busy by piling into your office and chatting about whatever's on their minds until the clock chimes 10 or even midnight and you damn near fall asleep on them.

Which means that you've been coming to bed after Oliver has already fallen asleep and I'm giving the babies a last feed. At that point, you've been so tired that you basically kiss us all before passing out. Then you wake up at some insanely early hour and repeat the whole process all over again.

Thus I had barely seen you all week - although Oliver reports that he's managed to stop in and borrow you for a few minutes each day for a quick shag and some kisses - apparently in one of the staff loos so that the students CAN'T accidentally walk in on you.

In any case, it's been hectic for you. So, let me tell you about everything that's happened to me (and a few things involving Oliver) that you might not have heard about yet.

Starting with Thursday.

It seems that Darrin's mother - who lives in Canada and wasn't easy to track down and get a hold of - received Hannah's messages and dropped everything to come to London, arriving just about the time I popped in to Darrin's place to check on Mrs. Hamby and Lana. Mrs. Young - Darrin's mother - was chatting with Mrs. Hamby and they were discussing Lana's care. It seems that Mrs. Young is willing and able to take her granddaughter home, relieving Mrs. Hamby - who wasn't able to adopt nor continue to look after Lana.

Mrs. Young heard all about how I'd helped out with Lana and gave me a hug to thank me. This made Morgana growl a bit, but not react too badly. Then Mrs. Young took Lana back from me and kissed her on the cheek - I had insisted on holding her for a moment when I first walked into the flat - and fondly ruffled Morgana's hair. This unsurprisingly made Morgana screech in outrage and blow all the lights out. It being the middle of the day meant that there was still plenty of light to see by, so - with a sigh - I pulled Morgana out of her carrier on my back and held her up so that I could look at her sternly.

"Stop that, my little Queen. It's starting to get excessive and you're going to have to learn to let others touch you eventually," I informed her.

She did NOT take this well and made all of the ice from the freezer fly out as if attacking me. I gave her a firm look until she seemed to back down for the moment. I don't dare think I've won the argument, simply that she's not able to tell me off with words yet, and so, is biding her time.

"Sorry about that," I murmured to Mrs. Young and Mrs. Hamby. "Morgana seriously dislikes when anyone touches her. I'll just fix all that up in a jiffy..." It was as I was casting the Repairo and cleaning charms that Hannah arrived.

"I thought you weren't supposed let muggles see you perform magic," she said in amusement.

"Of course I'm not, but MY DAUGHTER doesn't give a bloody damn about the Statute of Secrecy and created a mess I had to clean up," I explained.

Hannah laughed and gave me a kiss on the cheek in greeting. Meanwhile, the two muggle women were looking around at the newly cleaned and repaired flat in silent awe. Hannah helped immensely by running on with business as if nothing odd had happened.

"I've had a chat with the worker in charge of Lana - the one that will have to sign off on it should you want to take full custody of your granddaughter right away, and she simply has to run a background check first. She promises to have that done and the paperwork signed off on first thing tomorrow morning, Mrs. Young."

"Er... right..." Mrs. Young mumbled, still looking a bit spooked.

I gestured to the several bags of shopping I hadn't bothered to unpack. "I made a run with the girls on Tuesday to pick up supplies and got a bit carried away. There's a year's worth of nappies and formula, and a wardrobe that'll probably last nearly three years as I kept finding things in bigger and bigger sizes that looked adorable and perfect for Little Miss Lana. I can have them shipped out to you so that you don't have to worry about how to get them home. I also bought her a brand new crib as she seemed to be sleeping in a playpen rather than a proper crib. It's out here simply because it wouldn't fit in the bedroom. I'll have that shipped to you as well."

Mrs. Young now looked rather suspicious of me, but since the crib was clearly of excellent quality, she shook off her misgivings and gave me a small smile. "Thank you, Mr. Malfoy. It's much appreciated."

It was then that Morgana squirmed and made a pss noise. "Ah, you'll have to excuse me a moment, my daughter has to use the loo."

I took Morgana to the bathroom and held her in position over the sink, rinsing it out when she was done. When I returned, I could hear the last whispered bit of explanation about magic before Hannah decided that the more important thing was: "In any case, as I told you to begin with, Meg (Mrs. Hamby), I'd invited Draco to help out on the case because he can often see things that others can't, and while his ability didn't let him see what happened to Mr. Young before it was too late, it might just help us figure out what happened to him."

"I watched Draco touch everything in this flat, and nothing gave him a vision of whatever made Darrin leave his flat, although the sofa and the takeaway did show that he'd gotten up to answer a knock on the door," Hannah explained. Which was true but since neither of us could be sure that it was the event directly prior to his disappearance, I hadn't mentioned it to you previously. For example, that could have been a delivery, and Darrin could have accepted it and gone to take a shower before something else happened. My visions don't come with time references, so unless I happen to see a clock in the vision, I can't tell if one thing happened before or after another thing.

However, this seemed to satisfy Mrs. Hamby, who nodded in acceptance and shrugged. "Come on luv," Hannah beckoned to me. "If you're ready, I'd like to take you to the morgue so that you can see and touch Darrin's body."

"I will do it and not complain, but seeing a person's final moments is rarely anything but traumatic." I sighed in acceptance and grumbled.
Hannah understands my feeling on this, that I don't mind doing it, but that I also don't necessarily find pleasure in it, and so, she took hold of my hand and kissed my cheek.

Somewhat surprisingly, both Mrs. Young and Mrs. Hamby insisted on coming with us.

Once in the morgue, we stood outside a large window that is usually where people stand when they need to identify a body. First of all, Mrs. Young needed to confirm that it actually is her son, and so the attendant uncovered his body enough that she could see it. He was a bit battered (and parts of him were eaten by various animals), but she could clearly see that it was him.

She was sad and turned away to fuss over her granddaughter in her pram. This meant that Lana was not able to see through the window, as none of us wanted to risk that she'd recognize her father and become inconsolably upset.

After the body was sufficiently identified, Hannah signaled the attendant that I was going to be allowed into the room, and so I was given permission to do so. I walked in and thanked my lucky constellation that Morgana had fallen asleep in her carrier, because even if she's too young to know or care about a stranger's body, I could see the event perhaps causing strange dreams when she's older. In any case, she was asleep and in the carrier on my back so she couldn't see anything anyway.

I took a deep breath and picked up the almost waxy looking pale white, disturbingly cold hand. Even before I closed my eyes, the vision hit.

"He's sitting on his sofa, eating curry and watching telly, when there's a knock on the door. He smiles as he stands up, and it looks as if he was expecting a friend. Instead, he opens the door to reveal a group of men - all looking rather hard and grim.

"The boss would like us to remind you that you owe him.'

"Yeah,' Darrin murmurs in acceptance. 'What's he want?'

"He knows you don't have the money to pay him back - and honestly, he doesn't want your money. He knows you have a baby girl to take care of and wants you to go on doing that for a very long time.'

"Yeah,' Darrin acknowledged warily.

"That said, we have something important we have to do tonight, and the boss has decided that you can make a payment on what you owe by helping us out.'

"Darrin swallowed nervously. 'And... what's that?'

"Rather than answer, the leader of the group curtly beckoned for Darrin to follow them, which he did, pulling his door closed after him, but in his distraction, he didn't make sure it was locked, much less closed all the way. Thus it was left slightly ajar.

"The vision sort of speeds up for a bit and I can see the group of men driving around in the back of a lorry. Eventually the lorry stops and the leader places a hand on Darrin's arm. 'We're here to defend a bit of our territory from rivals. All we expect is you to help us rough them up a bit. If things get out of hand, you can protect yourself with this.'

"Darrin flinched a bit when the leader pressed a loaded gun into his hands - I think he understood that if they were giving him a gun, things could go very badly indeed. Swallowing and looking like his throat was too dry to do even that, Darrin nodded in understanding and slipped the gun into his
"The next bit is sort of sped up and jumbled, but this group rushes into an abandoned looking building of some sort. Other men are in the building, and the two groups start brawling. Darrin seems to be doing rather well only taking a few minor hits - which probably explains why he looks a bit roughed up. Suddenly, a man from the opposition puts a large knife to the leader's neck, and the only one close enough to do anything about it is Darrin, who pulls out the gun - presumably hoping that this will earn him a larger repayment to the boss.

"Unfortunately, before he can so much as make a good threat, someone hits him from behind with a large metal object - such as a cricket bat or even a pipe. I can't be certain as I can't actually see the object, all I see is that something hits Darrin on the back of the head, and then everything slowly goes dark as he falls to the floor. … The vision comes back a moment later to show the opposition being roused and the group of men Darrin was fighting for carry his body off to a somewhat nearby lot to abandon it.

"The vision has gone dark again," I stated as I opened my eyes and looked through the window at Hannah.

"Do you think you'd be able to identify those men if you saw pictures of them?" Hannah asked in determination.

"Yes, probably," I confirmed with a nod, gently setting Darrin's hand back on the table next to his body. As I did so, I silently apologized for not being able to help him more, but since he was apparently already dead before Mrs. Hamby even thought to check on his daughter, there really wasn't anything I could have done to save him.

At that point, Hannah had a little chat with Mrs. Hamby and Mrs. Young, and then sent them off so that I could go with her to her office - where she had me look through a database on her computer of pictures. Of the several hundred I looked through, only three were of men I recognized from my vision, but that was enough to give Hannah something to work with.

After leaving Hannah's office, it was rather late and so I actually popped into our suite at the Manor and had Muffy bring me food to eat while I firecalled Yesenia.

On Friday I had nothing to do, other than pop over to Unity for a bit, and then pop over to say goodbye to Lana and Mrs. Young - who thanked me again for all my help. After that, I came back to the castle and had a lovely cuddle session with Oliver as we waited for you to get back from your office near Gryffindor tower.

On Saturday, Oliver had nothing to do because the teams haven't held tryouts yet and their schedule for doing so has already been set. So, he and I took the littles over to the Manor stables while you once again were nearly held hostage by students who wanted to ask you questions or have you help them with their homework. If they ask for help with potions homework, Dear Merlin PLEASE refer them to someone who won't teach them to call every potion they take a Pepper Up!

After a few hours in the stables, I brought Oliver to Unity with me and he got a chance to practice some of his newly acquired BSL skills on Vanessa. Since you had Morgana with you (I think she's going to insist on feeding a lot for the next few days to make up for seeing you less while I was in Darrin's flat), Oliver and I took Gabriel and Dylan for a ride on our brooms until I got an Insta-owl from Dean. He and Seamus wanted to know if they could have Dylan for a couple of hours, so we dropped him off.

At that point Gabriel was sound asleep for a nap. I ordered Muffy to pop in and take him back to the Manor with the littles - which she was watching because they had Blake and... you know, I think every child in our circle who's in a similar age range was at the Manor in the stables with the littles when Oliver and I left them to it.

Which left me all alone with Oliver. Oh my, whatever shall we do???

Café Exquis was more than happy to seat us at our private table. I had Mahi Mahi in an orange glaze sauce with steamed veggies and sauerkraut. Oliver had a fabulously tender and well marbled steak cooked medium rare - also with veggies but with rice instead of sauerkraut. I know his steak was tender because I had him feed me a bite, and in return, I practically forced him to try my divine garlic and dill sauerkraut - which he actually liked. He thought he was going to hate it, but after just one bite, he tried stealing the rest from me.

It may shock you to hear this, but I shared it with him.

As we ate, we chatted about this and that. He wanted to hear more about my vision and didn't quite believe I was serious about having the ability until I mentioned to him that it was part of the reason I originally wanted to be part of the Aurors - as a sort of consultant that ended up being the Chief of Raids. After our mouthwatering dessert of cherry cheesecake, Oliver pulled me close and wrapped one arm around me even as he rested his head on my shoulder, making me lean my head against his as we continued to talk about some of the raids I'd conducted over the years.

At some point, after the conversation had shifted to a few of his favorite games - back when he was still playing Quidditch - we grew inordinately horny and popped back to the castle to see if you were available yet. Sadly, your students were still holding you hostage.

You know, if they grow TOO unreasonable, you could always take a page out of MY godfather's book by telling them all to leave your office and docking house points until they vanish.

In any case, with you clearly not in our quarters, Oliver and I had no choice but to take advantage of being kid free and in such a comfortably enormous bed. It was rather slow and lazy, neither of us in a rush and both of us hoping you'd end up joining us before we finished. Thankfully, we did actually finish before Muffy and a few assorted other elves popped in with our babies and littles. Dylan had been brought to the Manor and Muffy correctly guessed that we'd want her to bring them all back when she brought Gabriel to us to document a light episode.

It was not so light that he was simply staring off at nothing. He was actually seizing, but like I said, it was lighter than they usually are. Maybe the potions are starting to help.

Sunday was much the same as Saturday, except after bringing the littles to the Manor, I didn't take Oliver to Unity. In fact, I didn't even go as I wanted to do a bit of hunting with the owls, and Oliver really liked when we did that before. We ate dinner with my parents and those of the family that were home. Then, after putting the littles to bed (in the castle), Oliver and I looked around the empty bedroom where you SHOULD have been grading assignments and waiting for us.

This was getting out of hand! No way in bloody hell was I going to go ANOTHER night without seeing my elusive husband! I know you still existed, because I'd seen you in the Great Hall for meals, not to mention in bed at night when I feed the babies, but NOT for longer than that, Merlin damnit!

Fed up, I actually said: "Enough is enough!" out loud to Oliver before squaring my shoulders and marching all the way up to your office next to Gryffindor Tower. You were sitting in your armchair, surrounded by a circle of Gryffindors of all Years. It actually looked like you might be playing card games with them, Siri and Zwei looking rather happy to have you at their beck and call - or perhaps they were simply winning the game and gloating. I don't know because I didn't stop to ask.

I simply strode all the way over to you, hearing our boys mutter: "Uh-oh!" when they saw my single minded determination. I pulled you up out of the chair and gave you a very possessive kiss. My goal was to put you in too-happy-to-see-me-to-protest mode, and then - once you were purring and half melted into a puddle - I pulled back to look around at all the students staring at us in shock (with our boys giving us looks of exasperation).

"Sorry to interrupt, but it's Sunday night and I'd quite like my husband back!" I informed them even as I lifted you over my shoulder and proceeded to carry you out of the room.

"Are you going to shag??" A Third or Fourth Year boy asked incredulously.

This made me stop and snort in amusement. "First of all, we're MARRIED; of course we're going to bloody shag! And second of all, it's none of your buggering business if we're going to shag."

He blushed at least ten shades of red, even as our boys groaned: "DAAAAD!"

"Goodnight my loves, don't come looking for either of us tonight," I warned them, blew them a kiss with my free hand, and then finished carrying you (who may have passed out from sheer mortification by that point) to our Quarters. To Oliver's delight, you were oh so pliable and accommodating as we had our way with you. And have our way with you we did. We made absolutely certain that you were passed out from a good three orgasms by 10 PM - hopefully giving even YOU plenty of sleep before you neurotically wake up way too bloody early!

But now you're in class and Oliver's in class (the littles are 'helping' Hagrid with his class), and I have nothing better to do than play with our babies - who are currently napping, thus my rather lengthy email. I guess I'll just have to play with myself. Or maybe I can follow Oliver's example and pop in to your class to borrow you for a few minutes for a quick shag in the loo, heh heh heh…

You're everything I (we) need and more,
Draco (and Oliver, who has managed to pop in between classes and read what I was typing, and told me to sign this from him as well)
Chapter 176

Chapter Summary

Draco visits Harry in class, and Harry is still too busy for a proper reply.

Chapter Notes

Hi all! I just wanted to point out that this chapter STARTS with Draco's email because this was written during the week that Chrissie went on vacation. The plan was for me to keep writing emails while she was gone, but aside from the first day or so, she managed to send tiny replies. After she came back, she wrote two in a row to fix the ordering, but for the next week of posts, it'll be backwards, lol ^_^

Wednesday September 13th
Darling Harry,

I think you might finally be getting a handle on your students wanting to monopolize you at all hours. Or at the very least, they took a bit of pity on you and let you trudge to bed at 8 tonight - as opposed to the 10 or later they’ve been keeping you most of the time. You CLEARLY needed some quality sleep, so even though you were trying to take a Wake Me Up potion in order to spend some quality time with me and Oliver, I cast a 10 hour sleeping spell on you. I know that you and Oliver will have some quality cuddles when waking up, but don't you dare wake me as I plan to be sleeping, since I will be taking ALL feedings tonight.

But anyway, as I was saying, with you in bed early, Oliver decided that he NEEDED to do nothing but hold you as you slept, which was fine by me as I had Dibly in our quarters feeding the boys while I fed Morgana. They dropped off to sleep rather quickly, giving me time to write this email in peace and quiet.

So, on Tuesday, I arrived right before your lunch. Actually, I didn't want to risk missing you at all, so I arrived REALLY early for your lunch, early enough that you were still in the middle of class, but I didn't want to interrupt your teaching, so I paused outside the classroom long enough to change into my Marmoset form. Once sufficiently tiny, I strolled into the classroom.

I LOVE how you have the classroom set up a bit like how Professor Trelawny sets up hers, which is to say that it's comfortable and cozy, with cushions and armchairs rather than desks. Also, since it's in a bit of a rough circle, you tend to sit anywhere, and Tuesday, you just so happened to be closeish to the door, allowing me to sneak up behind you. I wasn't ACTUALLY trying to sneak, just that in that form, I'm naturally silent, and so, I was able to climb up the back of the armchair and up your arm so that I could settle around your neck.

As I expected, you jumped slightly when first feeling something too large to be a fly touch you, but since the thing was also too small to be a human attacker, you probably assumed that it was one of the MANY cats kept in the castle. Even so, you instinctively petted me, at which point, I could feel and see you smile so hugely that you probably looked at least half insane.
You gave me a quick kiss, but otherwise ignored me and continued on with the lesson, which unsurprisingly turned into common and uncommon muggle pets, and nonmagical animals in general. The students naturally wanted to know if I was your pet and if you'd be bringing me to class all the time - along with the babies, which you had Gabriel sleeping in your lap. He'd had a rather large episode in the morning (or so the note you'd left me said), and so, you didn't want to let him out of your sight at any point.

You told them that I wasn't exactly your pet and that I may or may not show up for future classes, depending on how bored I was. I sort of purred in your ear before moving from your shoulder to the top of your head, where the Monkey Nature took over and forced me to look for nits. You'll be glad to know you don't have any.

It was then that Zwei returned to the class from the loo and spotted me. "Oh hey dad! Oi! It's not fair! I haven't seen you much at all since you moved into the castle, and now you're sneaking into class to see DAD when you see him every night!"

I chittered at Zwei, trying to tell him that I HAVEN'T been seeing you every night - unless you counted while you were sleeping. However, I knew that he couldn't understand me, and so, leapt over to him so that I could climb up onto his shoulder.

"Ooo! Does this mean I can hold and pet you for the rest of class?" Zwei wondered.

You laughed. "You can try, just bear in mind that your father bites when he's annoyed."

"Better than blowing everything up like Morgana does," Zwei replied with a shrug. "Oh! Hey, am I finally old enough to learn Animagus Transformation?"

You shook your head. "Not officially, although if you were determined enough, you probably could, BUT that's NOT Muggle Studies, and so, I can't help you out with it nor discuss the specifics in class."

With that, after answering only a few basic questions about Animagi, you got the class back on track, well as much as it ever is. I fairly quickly moved to Zwei's hair, which he didn't like (as he has more manageable hair than you do and hates when it looks messy), so he kept trying to pull me off his head and back into his lap. But I would NOT be deterred. After the half dozenth time, Zwei held me in front of his face and glared at me.

"DAD. Stop. That."

Gently nipping his finger, well, at least not hard enough to draw blood, I leapt back over to you where I was able to settle back around your neck, which I hugged like a tree branch, absently licking you as I glared at our son. You roared with laughter as Zwei shook his hand and muttered: "He bit me!"

"I TOLD YOU!!!"

When class FINALLY ended, I transformed back into myself before the students even had a chance to stand up and leave the room. "Finally! It's time for lunch! We're having a picnic and I'll not hear a word of argument!"

You linked your arm through mine and gave me a happy kiss. "I wouldn't DREAM of arguing."

I suspect that you had guessed the real reason I'd waited oh so patiently for you to finish up your class, and it involved eating of a different kind altogether. Zwei groaned very loudly in disgust. "DADS! You're not supposed to do that IN SCHOOL!!!"
I smirked at him, pulling him into my arms for a hug and a kiss on the cheek. I also shifted Gabriel to his arms. "Fine then, I'll pop us over to the Manor." Which was a bald lie, because I was looking forward to shagging you in the forbidden forest. And just so you know, I had a potion to turn me into a dragon in my pocket just in case anything dangerous came upon us while we were defenseless. That said, YOU are NEVER defenseless, and so, I was confident that our picnic shag in the Forbidden Forest would be perfectly safe.

And it was. In fact, the sheer amount of time I spent worshipping your shaft while you took advantage of our 69 position by licking, fingerling, and thoroughly preparing my arse, almost certainly drove off anything that was even remotely curious as to what we were doing. Lucky for you that you had a free period after your lunch, eh?

Today was rather boring since I didn't drop in on any of your classes nor borrow you for five minutes for a quick shag in the loo. I think Oliver did that, but he was also rather busy with classes today. So, I thought I was going to be bored as fuck, but guess what?

Our girls arrived and insisted that I sit still (with plenty of tea and biscuits) and watch as they gave me a preview of their part of the fashion show. Basically, they wanted my opinion on their designs, the order in which they planned them to be shown, and they also wanted to practice the thoroughly muggle way in which their things needed to be packed up, transported, and then unpacked at the actual venue.

How did we get such brilliant girls???

I love you so much!

Take my breath away,
Draco

Thursday September 14, 2017

My heart!

Sorry I’ve been such a slacker at replying to your emails, but I promise you I’ve been reading every word!

Unfortunately, this isn’t going to be a nice long email to make up for my slacking either.

I know I’ve been busy, I know I need to make my family a priority right now. The first few weeks were crazy, while yes I had some kids that were just curious about me, I mostly had a huge influx of muggleborns this year. Quite a few in Gryffindor, but a few from other houses as well, even a Slytherin if you’d believe it. And as the muggle studies teacher, they’ve latched onto me as a little bit of home and normal in a scary new place.

Now that they’ve had time to settle in, I’m sure they’ll still need some extra attention, but nothing crazy like these last weeks.

This weekend I’ve booked out for my family. No way am I missing our girls’ show. But the following weekend I am actually taking my classes on a field trip.

Have no fear! It won’t keep me from you! I sent out permission slips today for all of my students to be allowed to accompany me ... and the both of you my handsome men ... to go to Muggle London to see musical theatre!
What musical theatre you ask? Why our brilliant daughter’s play!

So, next weekend, the three of us, our kids, my students, and a huge section of The Princess and the Frog’s set aside for our viewing pleasure!!

Off to my office hours! I promise I’ll be home in enough time to get some chatting and kisses in before bedtime.

Love,
Harry
Chapter 177

Chapter Summary

Draco has a chat with Hannah and Harry is excited for Fashion Week.

Thursday September 14th,
My busy little bee,

I have rather a lot to tell you about today. My day started by performing my morning routine and sending Morgana and Dylan off to my mother since you once again had Gabriel with you. Once ready to be seen by the general public, I went straight to Unity House, where Yesenia caught up with me after sparring with Vani for about an hour.

Yesenia took me aside and informed me that Vanessa had made so much progress in becoming more confident and trusting, that she feels that I don't need to work with her quite so much (as I really have been trying to work with her every single day that I can, averaging 3-4 times a week). So, I can reduce my time with her to once a week if I want.

Especially since Jaz has been coming here everyday to do whatever she likes with her best friend. She's also brought Leah a few times - when Leah wasn't teaching interested kids BSL at Hogwarts - and Leah's been working with Vani to help her learn to read lips and at least mouth certain words - even if she probably won't be able to speak clearly. If she should ever find herself with someone who doesn't know BSL, Vani will at least be able to mouth clearly the words: I can't speak and am deaf.

Basically, we're all doing our best to give Vani all the tools in the box that she might need throughout her life. Now when I spend time with her, I can focus on teaching Vani to control her magic, which is what I did after we finished sparring. I sat and sort of meditated with her until she felt confident enough to try casting a few basic spells. She's now an absolute master at a basic wandless and nonverbal Lumos. She can also do various colored sparks, and these make her so happy that I'm rather glad I decided to start with them.

At some point, Muffy popped in to tell me that Hannah had arrived at the Manor and wanted to see me. So I gave Jaz and Vani kisses on the cheeks and popped off to the Manor to have tea with my favorite DI.

"Afternoon Draco, lovely to see you again," Hannah greeted as we exchanged kisses on the cheek.

"Afternoon Hannah, please tell me you don't have another murder already."

"Thank god, no!" Hannah assured me. "I just wanted to let you know that Mrs. Young called me and reported that Lana is settling in rather well - all considering - and that she's extremely grateful for all the stuff you bought her. The formula alone has been a godsend, apparently."

"Thanks good," I murmured feeling rather chuffed.

"Also, I managed to solve the minor mystery of why no one seems to know anything about Lana's mother. It seems that she was the sister of someone involved in a local gang, and when she was pregnant with Lana, she got into quite a bit of trouble and got herself thrown into prison. Whilst in prison, SHE contacted the leader of the gang - who was apparently a friend of hers - and asked him to help the father of her baby care for her by paying the rent on his flat for a year or two until he could work his way into a position that would allow him to care for their daughter AND afford all his bills.

"So, when Lana was born and Mr. Young was allowed to take her home from the prison, that gang leader showed up and let him know that he'd struck a deal with Gennet (that's Lana's mother). For the most part, he didn't expect anything from Darrin, BUT that he might be called on from time to time to make repayments.

"Now all of this was eventually told to me by one of Darrin and Gennet's friends - who refused to say anything at all until it was known that Darrin had died - because Gennet was already dead, having been shanked during a brawl in prison. The friend assured me that Darrin had only agreed because he honestly couldn't afford to take care of a baby on his part time wages, and this at least allowed him to have a place to live and make a decent stab at caring for Lana.

"So... at least I can say with all confidence that Darrin Young had NOT been involved with the gang of his own volition, and in all honesty, that's probably the reason he died," Hannah finished informing me.

I smiled at her and squeezed her hand. "Then perhaps it will be better for Lana in the long run to be raised by her grandmother in Canada away from that gang. And maybe it'll set your mind at ease to know that I set up a small trust fund for Lana - just enough for her to go to a good college when she grows up."

Hannah was clearly happy by that as she threw her arms around me and gave me a tight hug.

At this point, it was probably the middle of dinner at the castle, and so I knew that you'd probably already be finished eating and back in your office with a few students. Thus I was not in a hurry to return to our quarters. That said, after a leisurely chat with my parents and siblings, I brought the babies back to the castle so that we could go looking for you and see if sheer adorableness could entice you to our quarters sooner than midnight.

As I was strolling through the castle with Morgana on my chest and Dylan on my back, I heard a tentative beckoning. "Psst! Mr. Malfoy!" Someone whispered.

I looked around, even scrutinizing the portraits because literally almost ANYTHING could be talking to me in the castle. Eventually, I spotted a boy staring at me from a corner. He looked like he was determined to blend in with the wall so completely that no one would notice him if they were paid to hunt him down.

"Can I help you?" I asked in a tone that I hoped wouldn't scare him off.

"Do you have time to talk?" The boy asked.

"I suppose..." I murmured.

"It's just that the Headmistress said we should come talk to you if we felt we wanted to talk to someone who ISN'T a Professor."

"Yes," I confirmed, gesturing for him to get on with it. He looked all around, seeming convinced that someone was hiding just so that they could listen in on him.

"Can we go somewhere private?"
Huh, if students DO actually seek me out regularly, I might just have to ask for an office of my own. As it was, I wasn't yet too far from our quarters, so I decided to just herd him there. At that point, I called for biscuits and tea.

When we were both comfortable in chairs and sufficiently refreshed, I invited the boy to get on with it. He was staring at the babies in my lap. With a smile, I handed Dylan over to him, and he seemed to light up and feel much calmer at that point. Even as he tickled Dylan's feet, he talked to me.

"How did you know you're gay?"

I was taken a bit aback at first. "Erm... well technically I'm Bisexual, but hmm... I supposed I first realized that I might be... different when I was watching a particular boy. All. The. Time. He seemed to be all I could think about and I was quite obsessed. For the longest time, that boy seemed to loathe me, and so, I had to do my best to get his attention in any way possible, often by making him miserable or embarrassed."

"That sounds horrible! WHY would he ever like you after you did all that?!"

"I often wonder that myself, but since we've been married for 17 years, clearly, he does," I replied with a chuckle.

"WAIT!!! Are you saying that the boy you liked when you were MY AGE was HARRY POTTER?!?!!"

I practically rolled my eyes. This couldn't possibly have been a surprise since I'd been very open and public with my affection for you over the years.

"BUT! BUT! I always thought you two didn't get together until AFTER you left Hogwarts!"

"Well that much is true. Neither of us COULD admit to liking each other while we were still in school, but that was because of circumstances Unique to the Second Wizarding War. I daresay that if we were in school NOW, nothing would have stopped me from gathering up the courage to kiss him in about Fifth or Sixth Year."

This made the boy blush. "So... if...if I think I like a particular boy, you think I should just kiss him?"

I looked the boy up and down a moment, and although he was short enough that he LOOKED like a First Year, I realized that he was probably a Fourth Year. "Probably best to actually try to TALK to him first. You're a Hufflepuff, haven't you tried helping him with his homework or something?"

He shrugged. "Well, Crispin is a Ravenclaw, and so, almost never... well actually, he almost never pulls his nose out of a book long enough to notice that other people exist, much less need any sort of help with his homework."

"Ah, I see. Well in that case, perhaps you REALLY need his help with YOUR homework?"

"Er..." the boy flushed in embarrassment. "Er... HOW do I ask him for help? Whenever I get close to him, my tongue seems to tie itself in knots, and actually, I almost always trip over something, and then I'm so embarrassed that I crawl behind the nearest thing to hide."

This amused me, and so, I suppose that I made a bad decision. Or rather, the rather selfish decision to give him bad advice. "Oh, so you're saying that you think it would be easier to work up the courage to kiss him because talking to him is FAR harder. Alright, I can agree with that reasoning.
If you think it's best, then certainly give him a kiss to remember. Just beware that unless he's had ANY sort of mental conversation about his potential sexuality, he's probably NOT going to take the kiss very well. Some boys have been known to be so freaked out about their potential gayness that they actually commit worse violence against other gay people than straight homophobes.

He looked speculative. "So... kiss him but expect him to punch me?"

I chuckled, shaking my head because I sincerely hoped that he'd realize at the crucial moment that TALKING was the far easier option. "Yes. Punch. Hex. Both."

"HE'S IN THE LIBRARY!!!" With that shouted announcement, he jumped up and ran off in excitement.

I couldn't help but follow him, dying to know how this turned out. Also, I HAD to follow him as he was still clutching our son. He was quick, but nowhere NEAR as fast as you, so I was able to keep up rather easily.

Soon enough, we were in the library, and there was a solitary boy in a chair off to the side of a group of other Ravenclaws. Still jogging, the rash boy holding our son ran right up to the Ravenclaw, barely managed to stop before a collision, and then yanked the book down so that he could give (Crispin, I suppose) a rather forceful kiss.

Crispin was clearly too stunned to do ANYTHING. He sat there looking entirely gobsmacked for a LONG moment, and then he seemed to gather up the wherewithal to gently push our Hufflepuff Romeo away.

"Er....."

Romeo blushed so red that I thought he was going to pass out. "Er..."

"Why are you holding a baby?" Crispin asked in confusion, making me laugh rather inappropriately, because of ALL the things he could have responded to, it was our son that was apparently too much for him to wrap his head around.

"What? Oh... I forgot I was holding him."

Dylan really is the best baby in the world, because he was taking all of this in stride by simply blowing bubbles and pulling on the boy's tightly curly black hair.

Then Crispin, invoking the weirdness that is inherent to Ravenclaws, as far as I can tell, said: "Huh. That baby looks like he has your curly black hair and dark eyes, but his skin is lighter than yours, like he has a parent that is as pale as I am..."

This seemed to utterly delight Romeo. "Are you saying we should have a baby as gorgeous as this???

This seemed to shock Crispin to his core. "Er... Are you saying we should date until we're OLDER first?"

"Definitely!"

Crispin stroked his chin speculatively. "I'll... have to think that over very carefully."

Apparently taking this as confirmation, Romeo kissed him again, and to my surprise, Crispin DIDN'T seem ready to stop him any time soon. I reluctantly broke them up after a minute or so simply because I didn't think I was suppose to let them carry on like that in the library.

"Erm, boys? Can I have my son back please?"

They broke apart and Romeo was blushing alarmingly red again. "Sorry Mr. Malfoy!"

"No worries." Chuckling and extremely entertained, I brought our babies back to our room, and since neither of you were there, decided to write this email up. Oliver returned while I was typing and has read over my shoulder (he thinks I should be punished for telling a boy to go kiss a boy that might punch or hex him), and now we're waiting for you. If you don't return at a reasonable time, I'm going to go caveman you again!

All our love. And lust, which is growing rather unreasonable at the moment,
Draco and Oliver

Friday September 15, 2017

My Loves,

We’re just about to head out to London for fashion week. And again, I only have a moment, but at least this time it’s because I’m headed somewhere with YOU and not stuck elsewhere.

First, I just had two quick things to say:

First of all, you are insane. Threatening to go full caveman on me? Dragging me off, showing off your strength by being able to throw me over your shoulder, showing you find me attractive by not being able to go long without me? How would you think I’d find that to be in any way a threat?

Secondly, please remind me to ask both Tabitha for “permission”, and Vanessa if she’s even interested, and then if we get two yes responses to ask Pippa to get an additional ticket to next weekend’s show. I didn’t even think of it, but why wouldn’t we bring Vani with us to go see Shtara perform?

I thought about asking if we could bring our interpreter, but it happens to be one of their performances with BSL interpreters already staffed and scheduled.

Anyway, off to fashion week we go!

I never knew love like I’ve known it with you,
Harry
Chapter 178

Chapter Summary

Harry is proud of their girls during fashion week, and Draco teaches a girl about Mind Palaces.

Chapter Notes

Harry is back to being the beginning ^_^

Monday September 18, 2017

Good Morning!

You would think after a long weekend full of fashion shows, with all of the stress that comes with such a big production, I'd be sleeping in this morning. Nope. I am still running on the adrenaline of seeing my girls killing it at fashion week that I woke up bright and early with a ton of energy. Normally I'd go run off the excess energy but seeing as my responses have been sparse or nonexistent the last few weeks I thought I'd describe the fashion show while I have the chance.

It's not that I don't think you'll do the descriptions justice, but I want less description and more how everything made me feel in our written record of the event. You do so beautifully describing things but for the fashions we have the pictures and the videos, what we may not have memorialized so far are our memories. And if you want years of typed out emotional vomit memorializing every last moment of our lives? Then have I got the email chain for you!

Technically Fashion week isn't over, it goes through tomorrow, but Hazeris already held its big show so we were free to head home last night without really missing anything. I know Draco, you feel you are missing things by not seeing even more fashion, but you DID see everything that had to do with your daughters and then some. You will be fine! And just think, if we're not there hovering there's a chance one of the girls will get you some high end couture something or other for a Christmas present!

First things first, we left Hogwarts Friday afternoon for London and stopped at some random restaurant for dinner before we descended upon Hazeris and their last minute panicking. What was the name of that restaurant again? Zaire something? Oh! That's right! It was our son's amazing restaurant Zaire's Langa. You know I would say it was amazing no matter how it actually was. I have no shame in admitting I am the dad that thinks their children are perfection. I am completely biased and I will happily say Zaire has opened the best restaurant I've ever been to in my entire life.

Unless of course, if one of our other children ever open their own restaurant, then I will have to say it was one of the best restaurants I have ever been to. Top two for sure!

I had Iranian Chelo lamb kabobs, the fluffiest saffron rice and grilled tomatoes. Yum!
Draco, you had the sea bass Ceviche. I was shocked that you had nothing but good things to say about it, food snob that you are. I know you probably wouldn't have thrown a fit if it were done poorly to avoid making Z feel badly, but you may have told him in an effort to have him get a better chef. The fact that you seemed to be restraining yourself from licking the plate made me think you must have actually enjoyed it.

Ollie, I think being with our Draco has made you adventurous. I mean, you're a Gryffindor you were already adventurous, but your taste buds have finally caught up. You had, and seemed to love, the Kimchi (and Pho).

Our three littlest are obviously following in their Daddy Draco, big sister Persephone, and big sister Viona's shoes, already little foodies. They each took tastes of everything on the table. For crying out loud, Oliver had to order a second serving of Kimchi because between Seph and Gabe there was only half left for the person who ordered it!

I am sure you'll go on and on and on about how fashion forward, and innovative, and blah blah blah Eris and Hazel's designs were. But what really struck me is how their designs have evolved, how they've grown as designers, how much different this fashion show was compared to their very first one. They started out designing for the pre-teen market, and they haven't stopped designing for that demographic, but their focus has shifted to the older teen or young adult as they've aged. A maturity has come through in their designs that wasn't there when they first started.

However, they have held tight to their original feel. Their designs feel fun and flirtatious. Celebrating some traditional design standards like the little black dress, while giving it their own flair. Upon first glance, the dress seemed like any other cute LBD, when you looked closer it had a highly detailed lace overlay with a thick satin ribbon corset style tie up the back.

After the solid black of that dress, they paraded bold color after bold color in increasingly couture, high-end styles. Culminating in the most amazing final look, a deep blue satin dress, bare shoulders while also having huge romantic sleeves and a beaded neck piece that almost looked like a crown around the model's neck.
When our amazing designer daughters stomped their way onto the catwalk at the end of the show (to rousing applause and a standing ovation I might add!) I could not stop sobbing when I saw what they were wearing. The dresses they wore appeared to be floral topped with long sheer, princess typed dresses. But when they moved down the runway I could see they were truly very short dresses with an over-skirt. Finally! Not that I care what they wear, I support their individual tastes. But seeing our Hazel, who has always worn lengthy gowns and covered a lot more skin than Eris ever did, was wearing a short skirt with a low cut top. She finally feels comfortable enough in her own skin to wear something revealing.

Eris chose red and Hazel blue.
A year and a half ago Haz would have been covered neck to toe, and this weekend she stepped out during London's fashion week in a short skirt and a deep-V, and a radiant smile on her beautiful face.

Okay, I really am going to cry. I better hurry up and finish crying and rinse off my face before classes!

Oh, and just so both of you know, I have set specific (realistic) office hours. So, unless there is some sort of Gryffindor emergency, I will be home to spend my evenings with the both of you from now on! I've missed your hugs, your love, your kisses, and mostly just spending time with the men I love.

Yours Always,
Harry

Tuesday September 19th
Dear Professor Malfoy,

I am excusing one of your students from class today.

Sincerely,
NON-Professor Malfoy AKA Draco, your gorgeous husband

Sorry about that, Harry!

I know it was probably beyond surreal to receive an official memo like that from me via the Inter-teacher notification system, but I had a girl insist that she had to talk to me right away and concurrently, needed to be excused from your class to do so. I thought she was just, I dunno, not feeling like class today - which I'll admit is strange because the students all LOVE your class, but in any case, I was wrong.

I invited her back to our Quarters since she'd caught me on my way back there from breakfast. In our Quarters, I had all three of the babies plus Muffy and Diblo to help me take care of them, thus I had Muffy serve us a spot of tea. Once comfortable, I invited this girl to tell me what was on her mind.

First of all, she introduced herself as: "My name is Meredith Mulciber and I'm a Fourth Year Hufflepuff."

"Lovely to meet you Meredith," I murmured almost reflexively.

She gave me a wan smile, then took a sip of her tea before pressing on. "See... I have a bit of a problem and I don't know what to do about it."

"Go on," I gently prompted her.

She fiddled with her tea cup for a few seconds before she sighed, looking defeated.

"So... well... I'm from the sort of Wizarding family that's always sorted into Slytherin, but I wasn't. At first, my parents were disappointed but accepting so long as I always got the top grades for our Year. I struggled a lot, but managed to do that for the first two and a half years, but starting in my Third Year, it just seems like no matter how hard I try to study, things are getting harder and harder for me to understand, and thus, my grades are slipping and my parents are now threatening to disown me if I don't bring them back up - and I don't know what to do!"

I took a few moments to think this over in silence, using the excuse of sipping on my tea to give me time, and then I came to a decision. "I COULD try to advise you just to tough it out and trust that your parents will accept you in the end - after all, MY parents expected me to serve the Dark Lord and ended up realizing that they loved me so much that they'd much rather I stay ALIVE than serve him. HOWEVER, I know that advice won't do you any good. All it'll do is cause you years of grief and worry until your parents finally remove the stick from their arses and come to the same realization."

I paused to take another sip. "So, there's only one way I can think of at the moment to help you, and that's to teach you a little trick I used to become Head Boy - and also still use to keep track of the many businesses that I oversee."

"Yeah?" She asked with interest.

"It's called many things, I always called it keeping my mind organized and tidy, but some people refer to it as a Mind Palace. Basically, each day when you learn something - which SHOULD be every single day of your life - that night or whenever you get a few minutes to yourself, sit down and meditate. Place all the knowledge you need to remember in neatly organized shelves in your mental library, and then when you need to remember the information, it'll be right where you put it and you'll be able to access it easier."

"How do I do that?" She asked with a look of disbelief.

"I'll show you, but first, you have to trust me enough to let me into your mind. Can you do that?"

She unconsciously rubbed her cheek, which smudged her makeup just enough for me to see a hint of a fading bruise. Then she slowly nodded her head. "All... Alright. I suppose I can trust you, I just don't like the things you might see in my mind."

I took hold of her hand and gave her a look of sympathy. "I had the Dark Lord living in my house for a few years. Do you REALLY think there's anything in your mind I haven't already seen at some point?"

She shook her head. "Probably not."

"Alright, try to remain calm and simply look in my eyes," I advised. "Breathe steadily, like this..." I led her through a few long inhalations and slow exhalations, until I felt she was as calm and ready as she was going to get, then I slipped n her mind, talking to her from the inside. "Don't be alarmed, I TOLD you I was going to be in your head, and even though you didn't feel me slip in, here I am."

She seemed to think over for a few seconds how to respond to me without actually opening her mouth and speaking. But then, an image of her as a little - littler - girl came crawling out of a cabinet that she was hiding in. In the background, I could hear a man's voice roaring: "Merry! Where are you, you blasted girl?!"

She flinched at that and I took hold of her mental hand.

"That's nothing more than a nasty wind howling at the window," I informed her. "It's easy enough to ignore if you just close the shutters on your window." At that I pointed at a window that appeared and gestured for her to close the shutters. The man kept on roaring ever louder until she gathered up the courage to do as I'd told her, but then once the shutters were shut, the sound stopped completely.
Looking extremely relieved, she returned to my side and looked at me. I swept my arm around to indicate the small, dark, and cramped room we were in. "This is possibly THE WORST place I can think of to study. We're going to need light, comfortable chairs, snacks, and all your current text books."

This made her bite her lip and frown in concentration for a few long moments in which I silently let her work. As she concentrated, the room changed to that of a dormitory, but instead of having all the other beds in it, it remained just her bed, and the rest of them were replaced with things like arm chairs, tables, and even book shelves.

"Perfect!" I pronounced when she finished. "I was actually going to have you create a library, but this is much better. Here are those shelves you're going to need. I see you've even put all your text books on them..." I picked one up and looked through it. "Ah... but it seems you only remember tiny bits and pieces of what you've read. You'll be able to fill them in as you practice this, until you can close your eyes, come here in your mind, and read every single word of all of them whenever you need to."

She looked a bit confused at that.

Rather than explain again, I simply smiled at her. "We're going to come out of your mind for a few minutes, alright?"

She nodded and I closed my own eyes so that I could more or less disconnect myself from her. After a moment, I opened them again to look into my cup of tea. "Muffy, we're going to need a refill, and probably some biscuits."

"Yes Master," she stated happily, eager to serve.

As we nibbled on biscuits, I asked her to open her potions book - which she'd mentioned was her most difficult subject. I had her read a page, and then directed her to look me in the eyes again so that I could slip back into her mind. Once inside, I had her do the exact same thing - read the page in the book in her mind

"By doing this, you are fixing the information in your head, organizing it so that it's right where you need it when it comes time to take a test. Yes, this is going to take you a lot longer initially, but if you keep at it whenever you are reading the book for your assignments, you'll eventually have it all in your mind and it will be a matter of seconds to recall it."

She tilted her head to the side. "How is this any different than what I normally do to try to memorize and remember my assignments?"

I tapped on her mental forehead. "Before, you were probably reading and re-reading the same information over and over, HOPING that you'd remember it, which isn't really the most effective way of doing so, because our minds are a little bit like muggle computers, information is constantly being written OVER other information as little changes are made. It's NOT until you tell the computer to SAVE the information that it actually does so. When you read things over and over hoping that you'll remember it, your mind will save the bits it thinks are the most interesting, but this way - that I'm teaching you - is basically you directly telling your mind to save ALL the information, and better yet, you're telling it WHERE to save it so that you know where to look for it."

"Hmm..." she hummed in thought before there was a loud banging on the door to the room in her mind.
"MERRY!!! You come out here this instant, girl!"

Meredith squeaked in alarm and ran to hide in the cabinet that appeared in the corner of the room.

I walked over, squatted down, and placed my hand on the door to the cabinet she was hiding in.

"You know that no one is actually there, right? This is your mind, and YOU are in control of every bit. If you don't like that voice shouting at you, then lock it in a box and toss it into the Black Lake."

I heard her giggle at that. A very quiet and muffled: "I can do that," was almost too soft to hear, but I guessed what she said anyway. Opening the door, I held my hand out to her.

"Of course you can," I assured her. "It WON'T stop the voice from harassing you whenever you go home, but at least your mind will be a peaceful refuge for you. Come on out, I'll help you."

She placed her mental hand in mine, and then let me help her out of the cabinet.

"Imagine that voice as a bright ball of light - in any color," I advised.

She let the door open and in came a large ball of angry looking black and red light.

"Good! Now let me conjure a chest for you..." I imagined myself using my wand so that she could actually see the motions and hear the spell. Once the large chest was in front of us, I helped her literally grab the ball of light and shove it in the box. It struggled and fought us, but I expected that. The moment it was inside the chest, I helped her shut the lid and held the lid shut while she locked the chest. "Now you're going to cast your best Leviosa on this chest and levitate it right out on the window so you can drop it in the lake. Just imagine how happy you'll be when the Giant Squid grabs the chest and carries it down to the very bottom."

Exactly as I had suggested - BECAUSE I had suggested it - she cast the spell and basically banished the chest to the lake where the Squid quickly grabbed it and swam away with it. Once that was done, she looked IMMENSELY relieved.

Finally, it was time for me to leave her mind again.

Once I could see that she was no longer in there either, I set her to the task of reading the rest of the assigned chapter. At that point, she was willing to invite me back in and see if she'd done it right, which she had. So I guided her through setting up a potions lab in an adjoining room so that she could mentally go through the process of brewing the potion she'd learned yesterday. For that, I merely observed because she is competent enough to follow the directions in the book exactly and thus, gain the correct result.

Much more confident now, she returned to the real world, giving me just a moment to look around and see all the dark edges and cracks that seemed to appear only when she'd left the room. Once I was back in my own mind, I made sure that we both had more tea and biscuits to replace the massive amount of energy that we'd used in this mental exercise.

Now that she had the foundation laid, I promised that she could come see me again on Saturday or Sunday so that I could check on her progress and help her if she'd done a less than perfect job while studying.

After she'd gone, I'd checked the time and realized that it was rapidly approaching lunch. During my distraction, the elves had taken perfect care of the babies, and they were now napping. So, I had no reason NOT to jog off to join you. That said, it was still an hour beforehand, and that gave me plenty of time to write this email, but now I'm going to sign off and join you. I should actually be a few minutes early, and so, I'll have an opportunity to turn into a Marmoset and sit on your shoulder until it's time.

If we're lucky, Oliver will ALSO be waiting for your class to end, and we'll ALL be able to have a bit of naughty naughty fun ^_^

You make lovin' fun,
Draco
Chapter 179

Chapter Summary

Oliver wants to figure a few things out, and Draco is squealing.

Wednesday September 20, 2017

My dearest Draco,

Ollie dear, if you are reading this please know I am not purposefully excluding you. But I am going to spend this entire email talking about you, so if that makes you uncomfortable you should probably bow out right about now. And honestly, you should be so exhausted right now that you should sleep for at least a week!

You know, up until now I feel as though Oliver has been tentative with us and love-making. We've tried to ease his way into some of our kinkier activities, you've lightly dom-ed him and had him assist in helping me to submit. I've read him kinky emails to see what really gets him going. But really, he was only in one relationship for years and it sounds as though the sex life (before it stalled out) was pretty vanilla. Nothing wrong with vanilla, and if that was all Ollie was interested in, that would be enough and I would love him through it and just save the extreme stuff for when it was only the two of us. But after last night? Yeah, I don't think we need to set anything to the side.

Lucky for me, Tuesday is the day I'm done with classes the earliest and then Wednesday's classes start the latest. I may have had to call in dead if that weren't the case. When you came looking for me and Ollie to get into some 'naughty naughty fun' I had already been found by the aforementioned fiance. The elves had been ordered to care for the babes, he had already set things up for the littlest kids to have a sleepover at the Manor with their grandparents, and we had the entire suite to ourselves for the entirety of the night.

When you found us, he was holding me from behind whispering in my ear. You could see from across my office that I was already hard and I'm certain Ollie had a shit-eating grin on his face. I know because I could practically hear the smirking in his voice. "When I get you and Draco back to our rooms I am going to take you apart." Ungh, yes please!

The three of us practically ran across the hallway in an effort to avoid any students and get to our rooms as soon as possible. You and I sat down on opposite ends of our love-seat, and that's when we were surprised ... to be given a notebook and a pen.

"Er ... Ollie Dear, are we taking a test?" I had to ask as I definitely felt a bit like a student.

Yep, definitely a shit-eating grin, "No, I'd call it more of a questionnaire." I'm sure I had the most confused look on my face so Oliver continued, "The both of you already know what you like and don't like, although the things you don't like is limited to all of two or three things I'm pretty sure. I'd like to find out what I like."

Yeah, our Ollie wanted to find out for himself what he likes and doesn't like in the bedroom. Or the playroom, or the middle of the woods, or anywhere we can find for shagging really. It makes sense, he was in a controlling relationship of boring and then nonexistent sex, then he joined us and we’re super open-minded but we definitely already know what we like. It’s Ollie’s turn to explore.

When I opened my notebook I saw what looked like a BDSM/Kink checklist. Holy bollocks it was going to be a long night! He wanted us to go through that checklist point by point.

We really gave it the old college try, but even with potions to stay hard, spells to give us instant recovery and instant orgasms, and three very willing participants we didn’t manage to get through the entirety of the checklist. Poor us, I guess we will have to do this all over again another night!

It turns out Ollie really really likes topping, which is awesome for you since you like bottoming and topping isn’t necessarily my favorite thing to do. He loves seeing both of us in lingerie, but wearing it isn’t really his thing. You both seemed to have a fantastic time fingering me open; open enough to take your entire fist. So hot. Which prepped me so well for the two of you to take me at once. We were able to check a "definitely" into the "giving double penetration" category.

In a shocking revelation it seems he is quite into cum-play. That is amazing for me. I know you don’t like it, but you would occasionally cum on my face just because you know how much I like it. It seems you won’t have to do that much anymore. Our Oliver spent himself all over my face and even without the spells managed to harden back up immediately just from the sight of my eyelashes dripping in his seed. And when I poked my tongue out to get a bit of a taste he surprised me further by licking up the mess of my face and then sharing filthy-wet, loud and sloppy kisses with me.

He did NOT like tickling or being tickled, that works for me since I can’t stand either of them. Hopefully you aren’t too disappointed that neither of us like it. The fact that he seemed to really enjoy using the violet wand on you seemed to make up for it.

I think the most surprising bit for me was a kink even you and I have never used. I’m a bit surprised it never occurred to either of us. You know how much I love having my nipples played with, especially through the lacy cami I was wearing, when Oliver’s fingers ended up a bit wet. For as much as we had done, for the fact that you had both had your entire fist up my arse, I was embarrassed and apologized profusely for leaking a bit of milk on him during sexy times.

Oliver looked at his fingers, then at me, with a shocked look on his face. I honestly thought I had killed the mood for the entire evening. Until ... "Don’t apologize Harry. Can I?" and then he gestured to the damp lace. All I could do was nod. He leaned his face in, peeled the fabric off of my nipples, wrapped his mouth around the wet pink nub, and sucked. Hard.

He seemed to have an entire mouthful before pulling off, when he looked at you with challenge in his eyes. Well, my Draco is never one to back down to a challenge, especially from a Gryffindor, so you leaned forward and put your mouth to his. This all happened barely a foot from my face so I had the perfect view to watch my two men share a similarly wet kiss to the earlier one when Oliver and I shared his spunk. Except the two of you were kissing and sharing my milk.

And now I am writing this and about to go about my day trying another kink on Oliver’s checklist ... chastity. You’d think HE would be the one wearing it! But no, he wants to know if he enjoys knowing I am wearing a cage under my clothes all day. A magically bound cock cage that will only respond to his magic or the key he’s wearing around his neck.

It’s going to be a long day.

Yours in frustration,
Harry
Thursday September 21st
HARRY!!!

DROP EVERYTHING AND COME REACT WITH ME! I JUST GOT A FIRECALL FROM KISA AND YOU’LL NEVER GUESS WHO’S GETTING MARRIED ON OCTOBER 31ST!

DRACO!
Chapter 180

Chapter Summary

Harry talks about the upcoming wedding, and Draco talks about Shtara's play.

Friday September 22, 2017

Draco! Eeek!

I could not be more excited for the Quartet if I tried! All these years, and I had no idea they were wishing they could marry. That they've spent the last decade wishing and hoping they could have an official marriage ceremony. Where they had wondered if having a double wedding, technically having 'Mione and Ron get married at the same time Kisa married Blaise would be enough for them. And now, they are finally able to say "to hell with tradition" and get married as the quartet they are.

I'm glad I have no classes right now, having cancelled all of mine today so we can prep for the field trip tonight. That meant last night I was able to just come freak out and REACT with you. We giggled and squealed like teenagers, just so thrilled for our friends/auntie. My favorite parts were the bets we made. Who would cry at the wedding. Who would get drunker at the Stag-Do or the Hen Night? Who would be the biggest Bride/Groom-zilla? How many times will Kisa message you or Lainie to calm her down instead of beating up her fiancés?

But today, while I'm sitting around waiting for tonight with nothing to do (I probably shouldn't have cancelled my classes, now I'm bored!) I've thought of a new game to play with their engagement. We should put together a couple sets of bingo cards. Each of those things into a different space. I say we make three of them, one each for Me, You, and Ollie. Winner gets a sexual favor of his choice. What do you think? You in?

And uh, speaking of being in ... I have something I wanted to discuss with you and Ollie. So, if you're both reading this you can discuss it, otherwise we can talk tonight in the hotel room after Shtara's show. I know we talked about setting our wedding date for June 23rd of next year. It made sense, give us time to get to know each other even better, give the students and the school board time to fall in love with Ollie so they don't freak out, and we'll be off for summer hols and wouldn't have to take time off.

But you know I'm impulsive. All of those reasons are completely logical. But every day we're not all three married is driving me crazy. Every time I get called Professor Malfoy instead of Professor Malfoy-Wood it makes me crazy. And the fact that we have to be quiet about living together until we're officially married breaks my heart a little. It took me a while to admit I was falling in love with Oliver, it took me a while to realize how in love with him you were as well. But once I realized I wanted to be married, I wanted to be married yesterday.

I will say, having the different last names will make things a bit easier to identify each of us. You're sticking with Malfy, Oliver is sticking with Wood, and I will be hyphenated. So there will be one Mr. Malfy, one Professor Wood, and one Professor Malfoy-Wood. I do have a feeling that most of my students will just keep calling me Professor Malfoy since it's shorter and they're used to it. But it's important to me that if I'm not going back to the Potter name that I carry both of my husband's surnames in there.

Now, with another poly wedding happening next month already, I think it should give us a good idea as to the public's reaction to an unconventional marriage.

So ... erm ... how would you feel about moving up the wedding to March the 24th of the coming year? It still gives us that time to fall even further into love, it gives the school board time to see how amazing Oliver is at his job, but we don't have to wait until next summer. It's the start of Hogwarts' two week spring hols so we can have the wedding that first weekend and still have two full weeks to go on a honeymoon and settle into married life before term starts back up in April.

I messaged Ron and apparently Kisa and Hermione are busy tonight with mob or Headmistress business, but Ron, Blaise, and the kids are all going to be meeting us in London for Shtara's show! I can't wait! I'm excited to see my amazing girl perform, I'm excited to see my students' reactions to the Muggle world, and now I get to see some of my best mates and my nieces and nephews!

Argh!!! Is it time to leave yet?

Maybe I'll come find you for some broom cupboard fun!

Always,
Your Harry

Friday September 22nd
My perfection,

Harry, wasn't Oliver simply adorable this evening? I know he's met Shtara, and I know he knows that she's starring in a play and even more likely to burst into song at the drop of a hat than the rest of us, but somehow, he just hadn't... put all of those pieces together in his mind.

So there we were, a solid section of the muggle theater, having subtly expanded the front few rows so that we could ALL fit with an excellent view, and NOT take up too much of the already sold out opening night. I had cast a Confundus on the Attendants so they didn't wonder too much about having sold nearly 50 more tickets than they could actually fit into the theater. And we were all settled in with popcorn and other snacks when the opening music played and the curtain slowly pulled apart to reveal the stage.

Sort of like in the movie, the play starts with a bit of an ensemble song that introduces the story, and then our girl stepped out onto the stage and from the first moment she opened her mouth, Oliver looked enthralled. Her voice is indescribable, powerful and magical, sort of sweet/innocent/young, but at the same time, timeless and full of life.

And you know what? I know the story is set in New Orleans, but Shtara being raised in New York and having a bit of a hard life before she came to us, gave her all the perfect qualities for the role. When she taught the Prince how to prep food in her no-nonsense way, that was SO something she's done at home - just not with food, hahaha.

But it wasn't just our daughter that was shining bright; the entire cast and all the special effects made the whole play an experience to remember. Although I will admit that I had to hold your hand tight to stop myself from going up and murdering the boy that played the Prince at the end when their characters got married and kissed. If I have any sort of rage halo, it probably came out at that moment when I thought about our girl giving up her first kiss to some boy she's just performing a job with. I mean, logically, I know that probably happened during rehearsals, but I got snarly thinking about how that's the sort of thing that is supposed to be special and saved for a perfect occasion.

Lucky for everyone that you sensed my swift shift in mood and calmed me down by giving me a rather disarming kiss, and then pushing me into Oliver, who happily gave me a kiss that made me quite forget what I was upset about. After that, I was able to enjoy the ending song/ensemble performance.

There was naturally a standing ovation, and I could see Eris and Hazel holding hands and practically crying with pride at how good Shtara looked in the dress they'd made for her.

At the very end of the applause, Shtara held up a microphone and addressed the audience.

"Probably not many of you know this, but I was a little bit like Orphan Annie. My mother was very sick, and when she died, I could have very easily lived the rest of my life in the system, never reaching my full potential. But then, the two most wonderful people in the world found me. They adopted me and made me a part of their gloriously mad yet perfect family. My dads have been supportive of me every moment they've known me, and without them, I'd never be able to follow my dreams like this. THEY make me believe that every day is going to be the best day ever, and so when I sing this song for them, you will all know that it's not just a song of hope for me, it's a promise they've kept that each day is going to be filled with sunshine and love."

She took a deep breath as music started to play, and then belted out the hands down best version of:

"The sun'll come out, Tomorrow, bet your bottom dollar that tomorrow, there'll be sun... just thinking about, tomorrow, clears away the cobwebs and the sorrow, 'til there's none. When I'm stuck with a day that's gray and lonely, I just stick out my chin and grin and sa~~~~~y, OHHHHH! The sun'll come out tomorrow, so you gotta hang on 'til tomorrow, come what ma~~~~~y, tomorrow, tomorrow, I'll love ya tomorrow, you're always a day awa~~~y!"

Take my breath away!

Alright fine, I admit it, I have tears ducts and they work, Merlin damnit!

When Shtara was done singing to us, she didn't give a damn about her gorgeous gown, she simply flung herself off the stage and into our arms and gave us tight hugs and kisses, thanking us for letting her follow her dreams and being the best dads ever. Then she hugged and kissed Oliver on the cheek, telling him that she was looking forward to him becoming another dad for her to love.

I had to excuse myself extremely quickly so that I could compose my face and basically finish crying over her sheer sweetness in private - in a locked and warded stall in the nearest loo. But don't worry, I came back long before you finished wrangling the students up to bring them back to the Manor so they could participate in the after party to celebrate the wildly successful opening night.

You stand by me, I'm forever yours,

Draco

P.S. You must have read my mind, because I was already planning a surprise wedding during Easter Hols. I guess now it won't be a surprise, but rather, a harrowing event that Oliver and I are going to have to do our absolute best to help you get through without panicking yourself to death!
Saturday September 23, 2017

To the man who FINALLY admits to crying!

I can't believe after all these years, our Shtara's serenade was the final straw in you admitting you have emotions and sometimes they leak out of your face as tears. Births, adoptions, marriages, childlike heartbreak, falling in love twice, and a million other emotional things, I should have known a beautiful girl serenading you with song would have been what tipped you over the edge.

Yes, yes, our Ollie was absolutely adorable last night. But then again when isn't he adorable? When he's ruffled and wakes up in the middle of the night to feed and croon to our babies? When he's in the stables covered in hay and wearing skintight jeans? When his face is flushed with wind and adrenaline while flying around the pitch at Hogwarts? When he's sweaty and sated, murmuring words of love as he passes out?

Yeah, those big brown eyes of his just kill me. I love that the both of you are so different. You're still all sharp edges and a sharp tongue. Smirks and silver eyes, flashing molten metal or softening into a stormy grey but always ready for me to drown in. Oliver is squared jaws and now that he's healing from his trauma, quick grins. Smooth chocolate eyes that I can sink into. How in Merlin's name did I end up with the two most attractive men in existence? Honestly, if I weren't in love with the both of you I'd hate you just on principle.

Lucky for me I don't have to be jealous of your gorgeous eyes and fit arses because I have them all to myself!

Lucky for me I found you out about the surprise Easter Hols wedding. Or Lucky for you actually! You know how much I love planning a wedding. You know how much I enjoyed picking out specific perfect things just for our special day all those years ago. You wanted to avoid panicky Harry so much you were going to what? Not let me have any say in the day? I'll forgive you because I know your heart was in the right place, trying to help me avoid stress, but I'm really hurt that you'd even think about it let alone have that as your plan.

But now that we all officially agree to a March date I do think it's time to start planning! I think we should honestly avoid doing anything the same as our first wedding, I don't want Ollie to feel as though we're just duplicating what we already had with him added. And we have so many children, so many loved ones in our circle, that I don't think we should do a wedding party. It's just, how would we narrow it down and decide who to add? It would end up being the wedding party up front with the grandparents sitting in the audience.

I'd also really like to include some aspect to the ceremony where we have all of our kids, yours - his - mine - ours, and do some sort of request to the ancestors or blessing or promise to cherish. I NEED to make sure Parker and Cassie KNOW we aren't trying to push them out or replace them with us or with our children, in Oliver's heart.

And for our honeymoon I'd like to travel somewhere that we haven't gone as a couple of two before. Somewhere new to explore with my husbands.

Maybe New Orleans!

Oh Shtara my heart! She was breathtaking. I see what you mean about despite being from New York originally that she played the part of a lifetime New Orleans girl so well. It doesn't surprise me. Both of those cities have the reality of being flashy and beautiful and shiny for the tourists while having an underprivileged section of the population that has to grow some really thick skin. I'm just so thankful we got to our girl before she hardened all the way through. She has such a unique outlook on life, having such a hard but full of love childhood, the tragedy of losing her mum, and then a full and crazy privileged pre-teen and teen years.

Um, er, so if it makes you feel better at all ... Shtara's first kiss wasn't on stage with the kid playing the prince. It wasn't even offstage with the kid playing the prince. She may have had her first kiss about a year ago with a boy she goes to school with at Lainie's school. Did I forget to tell you that? Uhhhh, sorry?

I'd better run and make sure my students are all packed up and ready to head back to Hogwarts. Are you coming with or hanging out at the Manor the rest of the weekend? Either way I'm taking the littlest triplets with me, I think they're all going through growth spurts because they're eating as fast as I can make it! So enjoy your calm weekend if you'd like, otherwise I'll see you tonight at dinner!

All of my love,
Harry

Saturday September 23rd
My beautiful man,

Harry, that means you. You say that if you weren't in love with us that you'd have to hate us for being gorgeous on principle, but how can you not be dazzled every time you look in the mirror? Your green eyes are jewels that I cherish more than anything and am quite glad that you've passed them on to some of our children. YOUR arse is definitely more in shape and fit than mine since you run every morning to keep it in shape.

I love Oliver's soft chocolate eyes and how strong and perfect his body is. If anything, the two of YOU are much better looking than me and neither of you have to spend hours on a routine in an attempt to achieve perfection. My point is that you always feel like you are some ugly duckling compared to me/us, but that you don't realize just how many people - muggles that don't know your fame - stare at YOU because you are the best looking of the three of us. And even those who DO know you via your fame tend to think you are the best looking bloke in the world. They're not wrong.

But moving on. I always love when we have students from Hogwarts at the Manor for parties. It's usually ONLY for graduations, with a handful of students coming for birthdays. Meaning that the majority of the students who've been here in the past are not in school to spread rumors about our home. Thus it's almost always a surprise, hahaha. A least one person always mistakes our home for a large hotel we rented out for the day, and when they realize that it's not, they grumble about murdering the rich kids just on principle. Of course they're kidding, we have too much security for them to be any sort of serious.

Some of my favorite things to watch the students marvel over are the dirt bike track, the enormous park full of play equipment, the gorgeous peafowl, and the fact that all our kids have their own elf that they call on so habitually that they don't even realize it. Also, it's entertaining to watch students wonder if we are purposely acting the way we do simply to entertain them as guests. Certainly the fact that Shtara led us in a giant singalong that our family participated in out of sheer habit (and personal enjoyment) seemed unusual to most our guests, like a performance meant to impress. It was just us being us.

So today, Oliver and I had a lovely arm in arm stroll after you'd herded the students back to Hogwarts. That said, before our stroll, before you'd left, while I was still in bed in fact, I had a visit from Meredith and Vani. It seems that the two of them had met and become good friends during the play, and since Vani was certain that I'd be willing to work with her for a bit while she was here, the two of them came to ask me when I'd be ready.

It seems they were certain that I must have been awake and dressed and probably having tea, but instead, they found me sleeping. I woke almost instantly because I had that feeling we get when one of our kids isn't feeling well and comes into our room in the middle of the night. That feeling where you wake up and have no idea why you are suddenly wide awake, until you see a silent child staring at you intently.

I sat up and tilted my head at them curiously, nearly blushing when I realized that both of them were now wide eyed and red from the embarrassment of seeing me naked aside from the blanket that was pooled in my lap. I'm not used to being around kids who aren't used to this.

They gave me a bit of privacy to have Muffy bring me a basic set of track bottoms and tee shirt, and then we were all sat around the table drinking tea as we chatted. I also ate a lovely egg and garlic sauerkraut sandwich. When I was done, I made a quick trip to the loo, and then got comfortable with them on the soft and fluffy carpet. I worked with both of them for a good hour on their Mind Palaces, and then we did some basic practice on controlling magic.

We were still at it when Oliver came rushing in, a bit panicked because you couldn't find one of your students anywhere. I sent Meredith off to you, and Vani off to Jaz - who had apparently ALSO slept in after last night's festivities. Then I linked arms with Oliver and took off on our stroll.

He was gobsmacked that I didn't insist on changing into something more bespoke before we left our suite.

Our stroll culminated in a leisurely shag in the North Fields surrounded by this year's crop of baby peafowl. Oliver's not so wary of them potentially chomping anything, so when they got too curious and came to nibble on our hair and toes, we relocated to the stables where the loft full of hay only had a bunch of kittens trying to figure out what we were doing and if they wanted us to play too.

So, if I look like someone took a razor blade to my back, that's why.

I know Venus is too old to be having kittens, so these ones must belong to some of her previous progeny. Adorable little buggers, aren't they?

All of me loves all of you (and Oliver)
Signed Draco and Oliver, who are plotting a devious surprise for their beloved upon returning to the castle ^_^
Monday September 25, 2017

My Heart,

Good morning! It's an absolutely brilliant early fall morning here in Scotland. A fresh crisp breeze, the sun shining off the black lake, my run this morning was quite motivational. I got in that zone where I was practically meditating whilst running. It just really started my day out right! It's too bad you're such a night owl/sleepy morning man, I think you'd have had a real recharging feeling doing your yoga on the grounds as the sun came up today.

I really needed my own recharging after the long weekend we had. Don't get me wrong, ninety-eight percent of the weekend was amazing, it just took a lot of emotional energy that needed replenishment. My devious surprise from my loves went a long way to giving me back that emotional energy.

Obviously I thoroughly enjoyed Shtara's performance, she's a little miracle. And seeing Ron and Blaise was delightful. I had a great time catching up with them, talking about their upcoming wedding, and pretty much delighting in the fact that I had adults to speak with that weren't my fiance or husband (nothing against either of you obviously, but sometimes I feel as though you're the only adults I ever speak with).

I had a harder time explaining to the both of them that we had absolutely no intention on playing even though they "came all this way Harry! We haven't been able to play with your sweet little subby arse in ages!" Apparently "being engaged to Wood has really changed you Mate." I almost popped Ron right in his smart mouth at that. Either Blaise and Ron know me well enough that they backed off, or I was crackling. Maybe a bit of both. But they did apologize. For crying out loud, the four of them didn't play with anyone for ages after they brought Kisa into the fold. Hell, Blaise didn't even sleep with his long-term lovers, the mother of his children, when he first got together with Kisa.

I think what truly shocked them wasn't that we aren't playing for now, they understood that, but it was when I told them in no uncertain terms that if Ollie NEVER felt comfortable playing that we would live with that choice that they really panicked. I did remind them that you and I went a few years without it and our relationship was as strong as ever and sexually fulfilling. It's a part of our sex life that we've enjoyed, but it's not necessary.

Also, there's my not so secret plot to get Ollie on board by continuing to read him the filthy descriptions of play dates every time I get the chance. Yeah, you heard me Oliver Leonard Wood, get ready to be assaulted by my filthy mouth telling you even filthier things. But don't worry my Love, I promise you that Draco and I are being one hundred percent honest with you when we say even if you never get on board with playing outside of our relationship it's not a deal breaker and we will still be just as in love with you.

We were eventually distracted from that discussion to a much more unhappy topic; Farrah. She was there Friday night. Well, she didn't join us at the show, but she was at the Manor and hanging out during the after-party. I guess she was looking forward to hanging out with kids she'd gone to school with. Probably looking forward to having someone to talk to besides Orion's family that has been giving her the ice-cold shoulder. Even your mum, in love with her Grandchildren and Great-Grandchildren has been doing her Ice Queen routine with Farrah. Your father seems to delight in "name-dropping" whenever she's in hearing distance, talking all about his good close friends the Malfoy lawyers.

I think she was quite surprised that the cold shoulder extended to many of the students at the party. Orion, with his calm and steady manner, popularity from his status as quidditch star, and his new popularity from running a Hogsmeade hotspot, has a loyal army of minions if he ever decides to go Dark Lord. And the few students who don't hate Farrah for being such a shite to Ori ignored her because of how much Siri and Zwei (and the other cousins at Hogwarts) were giving her that frosty shoulder.

I am a petty, petty man because I enjoyed every moment of Farrah's discomfort until she gave up and went back to Orion's room.

I still can't believe I couldn't talk Orion into annulling the marriage or throwing her out on her rear. That child is so damn stubborn. Gets it from you ya know! That and his good looks!

Alright, I am willing to admit that, even though I don't think I am anywhere near your league when it comes to being attractive, I am not a complete troll. But that's as far as I'm willing to go. If you think I'm going to say I'm even close to being AS attractive as you or MORE attractive? Well you've officially gone round the bend.

I at least know I'm attractive to my men. How could I not know you both find me attractive after that welcome I got when the two of you got back to the castle Saturday? I felt thoroughly loved and cherished. I was so distracted that I didn't even notice your poor torn up back! I told you! I've been telling you for years that the animals will injure any naked bits sticking out. But nobody believes poor Harry! I feel so badly that your back hurt that I think I managed to keep the smug look off my face that was in danger of escaping. Told. You. So.

I'd better run off to my first class. I want to get there early just in case any students came in before class with questions from the weekend.

Love,
Harry

P.S. Next time can you let me know when you've kidnapped one of my students?

Tuesday September 26th
My gorgeous men,

Since today is basically Shtara's day off - having had her opening on Friday, then worked Saturday, Sunday, and Monday nights - I decided it would be brilliant to bring her to River's Song and treat her to anything she wanted. While I was at it, I brought Jaz and Vani, and - surprise surprise - Farrah.

It seems that Orion felt a little bad that she'd had such a rough weekend, and actually sent me a message speculating that I was going to do exactly what I had planned, so would I be so kind as to bring her with? I reluctantly agreed.

We started with facials and body wraps. After that, we'd all relaxed enough that during our massages - which were done in the large group room (since our family ALWAYS visits the spa as a group, even a small one like today) - I was able to have a calm chat with Farrah.
Somewhat to be expected, she was having mood swings from her pregnancy. Relieved that I seemed to be sympathetic, she regaled me with how horrible everyone had treated her and how miserable she'd felt among a group of people that used to be her friends. Towards the end of her pity parade, Shtara was positively glaring at her, but not saying anything. (Jaz and Vani were face down and presumably unaware of the drama in the room.)

I reached over and took her hand. "Farrah, I'm sorry that you do not like your just desserts, but please try to remember that our family is VERY fiercely loyal to each other. Had you so much as hexed him with a nosebleed, it's possible that the rest of us would consider you a mortal enemy for the rest of time. Instead, you forced Orion to do the ONE thing he had vowed not to do. Are you really that surprised that no one wants to accept you as part of the family?"

She was teary eyed and trying to fight it. "Why does NO ONE understand how much I LOVE Orion?! I would do ANYTHING for him! If he asked me to murder someone, I would without question. If he wanted us to move to Antarctica for the rest of our lives, I would do it without complaint, even though I LOATHE the cold! I feel like I'll DIE without him!"

I was perhaps a tiny bit moved by her genuine emotion - and since she was looking me in the eyes, I could see exactly how true they were.

"See, we have no problem with you loving him. In fact, it proves you have excellent taste. The PROBLEM is that if you ACTUALLY would do anything for him, then you SHOULD have respected his wishes and waited until he was ready to consider marriage and children. He's still so very young - YOU'RE still so very young! You both have YEARS before -" "WHY WAIT YEARS WHEN THAT'S SUCH A WASTE OF TIME?!!" Farrah blurted out ardently.

I sighed and shook my head. "Look Farrah, I made a vow to support my son in this however he wants me to, and so, I will do my best to treat you with tolerance and maybe even kindness, but I'm NOT going to suddenly think you're the best girl in the world for Orion. If you want to earn that title, you need to start taking his wishes into account."

She was still rather teary eyed. "But I HAVE to! I don't have a choice! He put it in our magically binding pre-nuptial agreement that he's allowed to do whatever he pleases and I can't say anything about it. So I don't even try, even when I KNOW that he's out shagging someone else! Even when I KNOW that he's doing muggle drugs with those floozy dancers of his!"

"He WHAT?!?!" I burst out in shock.

She seemed to realize that she might have said something her husband wouldn't want said, and so she clammed up. It took everything I had to finish spa day with the girls, because there was no need to cut their day short simply because I wanted to go confront our son. Then - as I soaked in the mudbath - I realized that there's probably not much I can do if our ADULT son is doing muggle drugs. After all, I've done them at his age, and MERLIN DAMNIT! Why does he have to be so bloody much like me?!

Hhhhhhhhh!

By the time that I got to the mani/pedi portion of the day, I was calm once again, and I'd decided that I DEFINITELY need to talk with you and Oliver and come to an agreement on IF we should even mention this to Orion. If so, how.

Therefore, if you wonder when you see me why I chose to have the color scheme of my hair tips and nails be black with red highlights, that's why.

Vexed,
Draco
P.S. I am probably going to be in the Crystal Room for a bit before returning to Hogwarts.
Tuesday September 26, 2017

Yeah, Hell no ...

I am not waiting for a committee to decide whether or not I should mention this to Orion. Alright, that came out much harsher than I meant it. You are the men I am choosing to spend the rest of my life with, not some random group of people I have to run my bad ideas through. But don't marry the most impulsive of Gryffindors if you want things thought through logically and decided upon with calm cool heads prevailing.

Especially when you are talking about things concerning my baby. The first baby I ever carried within my body. My little bubbles. My teeny boy who came out a carbon copy of (one of) the love(s) of my life. My quiet and mellow baby, the little professor who carefully watched everything happening around him. The baby who gave me no trouble is now turning into the man who continuously shakes me to my core.

I knew going on and on about what an easy child he was would come around and bite me in the arse!

Ugh, remember when I thought it was adorable that he was getting snogged by his quidditch rival he had a passionate rivalry with? Yeah, I could time turner myself and tell Past Harry to shut his gob! And Draco Lucius Malfoy ... you had damn well better not be trying to talk me into feeling sorry for that woman. Oh boo hoo, her former friends realized she's a manipulative psychopath and don't adore her anymore. Wah wah wah, the family of the man I trapped in a relationship with an unwanted baby isn't welcoming of me. Cry me a damned river Farrah.

She is a rapist! She raped my baby! There's just no other word for it. Did she shove him down and force her body on his? No. But what you see in the movies isn't the only way to violate someone body and soul. I love Orion, I will love this grandchild, but I don't think there's anything she could do that could make up for what she's done to my son.

Tolerating her and ignoring her is pretty much best case scenario. You'll notice Orion asked YOU to include her because she had a rough weekend. It's because while I seem like the squishy Dad, everyone knows you're the softy. I am the unreasonable arsehole who holds grudges if someone has wronged pieces of my heart.

She'd do anything for him? Yeah fucking right! I am madly in love with the two of you. I literally would do anything for either of you. I would jump in front of an AK, I would lie, steal, cheat, or kill if I had to. I would do anything short of hurting our children. But using both of those loves as a comparison; Draco if you had told me that you wouldn't have been happy in a marriage that wasn't to a female pureblood I would have been heartbroken, but I would have taken myself out of the equation if I knew in your heart of hearts that that's what you wanted and needed. Ollie, if we had persisted in this relationship and you were adamant that you weren't ready for a relationship, or that you couldn't see yourself in a triad, or if you had been with us because you felt you owed us for helping you, I wouldn't have made another peep about being in love with you.

I just can't see saying something along the lines of "Oh my Oliver, I know you don't want children, but hehehe I know better than you so surprise I'm knocked up!" Can you even imagine how you would feel if one of us just decided for the others how to grow or not grow our family?

Fuuuuuuuuucckkkkkkk!

Wow, I went off on quite the tangent didn't I?

I meant to tell you all about how Orion reacted to my confronting him.

It went well ... kind of. It went well in the way that he thinks it went well because I didn't fight with him and I pretended I believed his lies. I did not. I may or may not have gone storming into his bar right after my classes finished for the day. There's a slight chance I caused a scene and started shouting for "Orion Draco Malfoy" to get his "trouble-making arse the hell out here before I come find you!"

He very quickly shuffled me back to his office, not sure why I'd already embarrassed the both of us quite thoroughly. Honestly, I asked our son TWO questions. He lied to me as an answer to one of them and didn't answer the second. So, perhaps we should have conferred about come to an agreement about how to talk with him. There's a chance rushing in like an impetuous Gryffindor was not the right reaction.

Oh well, you live and you learn.

The first question I asked him was what kind of muggle drugs he's been taking. Little shite looked me right in the eye and said "It's just a bit of pot Dad, mellows me out it's no big deal." Alright, obviously I don't have an issue with marijuana, it's natural, it's actually good for anxiety and a mess of other things, but he forgets I knew him before he was born. He may have the Malfoy mask down pat. He may be a fantastic liar. But I know when my kid is lying. It might be pot and it might be to mellow him out ... but it's definitely not the only thing he's taking.

I decided to let him think I believed him.

But the second question I asked him was much more concerning. "Ori, my little love, are you partying and shagging about because you want to? Or are you doing it to hurt Farrah?" I quite loathe the girl but nothing good comes of acting out to hurt others, you only end up hurting yourself. He didn't answer and wouldn't even look me in the eye. I just dragged him into a hug, he buried his face in my neck like he used to when he was little and would skin up his knees. "I love you forever Orion, I want the world for you. Don't drag yourself through the mud just to punish her."

He just snuffled into my neck.

"But if you really want to punish her just let me know, I have your Great-Grandmama on standby."

He chuckled a bit at that, "Don't sic Grandmama on my pregnant wife Dad!"

"So, you're saying I can sic Grandmama on her when she's not pregnant or no longer your wife? Good to know."

"No Dad, I did NOT say that! Now get out of here ya mooch, I need to go take care of my paying customers!"
So I did. I came back here to write my thoughts out. And neither of my men is here for me to cry into their shoulders! Get home already!

Defeatedly,
Harry

Friday September 29th
My dearest Harry and Oliver,

I'm off to run a few errands today, such as taking Vani and Jaz shopping for clothes as Vani doesn't really have many and those she has are getting a little too small for her. Also, this is giving me a chance to check up on some of the shops that carry Hazeris clothing, to make sure they are representing and selling the clothes properly.

But rest assured that while I'm out, I'm picking up that gigantic piñata that you ordered a couple of weeks ago. It's going to be at the Manor and ready to go long before you even wake up tomorrow ^_^

Loving you,
Draco
Chapter 184

Chapter Summary

First it's Atreyu's Birthday, and then it's a certain day in October.

Chapter Notes

Yes, I skipped a month between Harry's Email and Draco's, but it's because I had nothing to write about during that month, lol.

Saturday September 30, 2017

My Loves,

This is going to be short and sweet. I'd love to write a novel about the amazing party we just held, but the party was amazing enough to thoroughly exhaust me. But I can't let the day pass without commemorating it this way at least a little bit.

Our sweet little Atreyu is six years old. It's hard to believe with how deeply entrenched in my heart he is, but he's only been with us a little over a year. And wow the difference a year makes. Last year he had fun, but he was so much shyer. He could barely believe the party was for him. The only real stress last year was the lack of piñata, which we definitely did NOT have an issue with this year.

This year however, I saw the most wonderful differences. Atreyu was less thankful and less surprised that the day was for him. I'm not complaining at all, he said his thank yous, remembered his manners, but he no longer seemed surprised that people cared enough for him as to give him a party. He still bragged to everyone who would listen that his Grandma Molly made the cake especially for him. And he still blushed and popped that thumb in his mouth when we sang Happy Birthday. He's our sweet, kind, little boy ... who finally knows that he belongs and that he deserves wonderful things.

That piñata was amazing, missing the drama from last year. But our naughty little Trey thought it was very important to bring his thestrals to the party. The people who could see them thought it was hysterical and those that couldn't seemed quite confused when they'd turn their head for a moment and find their cake missing.

Is it horrible that I'm so glad about the differences the past year has made in our boy?

Alright, I am tired but wound up. I should probably do something to get sleepy. What ever could I possibly do to exhaust myself into sleep?

Incoming!

Harry
Sunday October 29th
Well my loves,

We've certainly had a bit of a weekend, haven't we? Knowing that the law had been changed so that our Quartet could get married here in Wizarding Britain, they originally planned for Halloween - a day as unique and interesting as their relationship is. But then Hermione persuaded the rest of them that if they wanted to have others attend their wedding, it would be easier on a weekend, and also on a day when their guests don't have to choose between a wedding and a special holiday they revere.

So it was that we spent last night with Ron and Blaise at their stag do. I had my hands quite full because Oliver said going in that no matter what happened, he was certain he didn't want us to be FULLY playing around with anyone else - at least not until we're officially married and he's positive that he's not going to lose us to the charms of others - silly bunny! In any case, being the ONLY person at the stag do that was immune to Blaise's impossible to resist sex magic meant that I was kept hopping, running back and forth between the two sides of the club keeping the two of you from begging to be shagged by everyone else there!

And to be clear, this was for Blaise and Ron, so half the available shagging options were female. This ALSO put a bit of a strain on me because Sweet Salazar! They were oh so soft and curvaceous, so very tempting for a bloke who does like the occasional woman and hasn't had one in........

Yeah, about that long.

And they were practically throwing themselves at me! So I had to resist them AND rescue the two of you from those things that hadn't been agreed on. Thank Merlin that you'd both agreed that blowjobs (both giving and receiving) were fine, because Harry was determined to suck the place dry! That sex magic even had him touching a few squicky parts he normally won't touch with a ten foot pole. And Oliver love, you may well have had your first het shag in 20 years if I hadn't intervened.

I actually am completely put off any party having to do with Blaise until our rules have changed, because that was the complete opposite of fun! That said, the two of you eventually remembered that you love playing with each other, and as you did so, you both wanted to watch me have a little oral exchange of my own, so the night wasn't ALL sober babysitting.

Judging by the fact that Kisa had a nice lovely bruise on her left shoulder this morning (at least the part not covered by her dress looked to be big and vivid) and the fact that Hermione, Elena, Mahafsoun, Viona, and bah! We have too many girls to list! As I was saying, judging by the bruise Kisa had and the very rough and worn out faces of the rest of the girls, I'm going to bet that they had a rather wild Hen Party. There was almost certainly a brawl at some point.

Since I sent Pippa to keep an eye on things, I'm certain she took care of any expenses or damages, but when I think back on Mahafsoun's Hen Party, then think about how this was half for KISA, I'm rather afraid to see the amount Pippa had to spend from my vault to cover everything.

That leads me to today. I joined the women as they got up WAY too early to head off to the spa to have a bit of pampering before getting their hair and nails done. I needed to change my color from black and red to something more appropriate for a wedding anyway. To my surprise, perhaps because I was getting up at an ungodly hour, or perhaps the two of you had simply gotten so drunk that you were still sleeping it off, but you were BOTH asleep when I left for the spa.
I got to finish sleeping during my massage and mudbath, and lightly doze during my mani/pedi. Happily, Kisa decided that a nice shiny metallic dark blue was perfect for my nails, because I think I was too out of it to hear when asked for a color preference. Then I did something that I have never done before.

See, in all my years, I have naturally been very pale blond, bordering on white, and I've never had a desire to be any other color of blond. HOWEVER, one of the colors for the wedding scheme was gold, so I decided to try having my hair dyed a soft rich gold - the exact shade of 14 Karats.

I will admit that it looks good on me and really brought out the accents in my dark blue dress robes. Meanwhile, you were wearing green and gold. Oliver was not in the wedding party, so he was wearing a lovely set of dress robes in shades of green, gold, and blue - to match us both.

So it was that I as Blaise's best man escorted our daughter Elena down the aisle as Kisa's maid of honor. You as Ron's best man escorted Ginny as Hermione's maid of honor. You know what? I can say with the absolute security of certain knowledge that you are SOOOO gay and utterly in love with me and Oliver, that you look really good next to Ginny. Her coloring compliments yours and if I wasn't selfish enough to enchant and enslave you all those years ago so that you would be gay and love me instead, I could see you having a good relationship with her, but probably not as many kids. That said, the few kids you did have would be perfectly adorable mini-yous and hers.

Now before you go scratching all the hair off your head wondering when and if I ever did such a thing, I'm just poking fun at the prevailing theory from back then; the theory that SOME people still believe must be the truth.

I could probably go on and on, blandly listing every detail about the wedding, but I won't. All I'll say is that when the Brides came walking down the aisle to stand by their grooms, both Blaise and Ron were weeping from joy. Even a blind man could have seen how utterly happy the four of them were to be getting married.

As for Kingsley, he had a strange expression on his face, as if he was a little kid getting away with sneaking all the biscuits out of the biscuit jar. He even worked it into his blessing on their marriage how delighted he was to be able to grant such a longterm wish to two good friends and their lovers. That the HEROS of the Second Wizarding War deserved everything that made them happy.

The majority of the guests were part of our larger circle, but there were a few that we didn't know, such as people Hermione has worked with in Russia, and a whole section of people that looked ready to gut anyone who looked at them twice.

After they said their breathtakingly heartfelt vows (and I might have possibly had a tiny rain storm on my face), they all insisted on getting to the celebration - starting by hugging their way through their guests to thank them for coming. I swear Molly nearly squeezed them all to death in her teary eyed joy.

Eventually, it was time for dancing, and since I hadn't gotten to dance very much the previous evening, I was looking forward to it. It started out just the four of them, but then they were asked by the lead singer of the live band to each pick a person to join them. Hermione chose you, Ron chose Ginny, Blaise chose me, and Kisa chose Elena. Almost immediately, Kisa challenged Blaise and me to a dance contest. OH HO HO! I was NOT about to lose!

Unfortunately, I was up against OUR DAUGHTER. It was a hard battle to be sure.

At some point in the evening, you were dancing with Teddy, who was saying that he actually sort of remembers being at our wedding and making us kiss - and by the way, Teddy was rocking it in his natural body covered in one of Hazel's finest flowing gowns, his hair and eyes a bright sort of molten pink. As you were dancing with him, I was dancing with Oliver, holding him close and licking his neck so that I could blow cool air across the hot moisture and make him shiver.

"I was watching you dance with Parvati Patil - unless it was Padma - and the two of you seemed to be ready to shag right on the floor," Oliver observed.

"Sorry, I'm trying really hard to rein it in right now, but I feel like I haven't shagged anything in AGES and I'm horny as fuck," I apologized, giving him a soft smooch. "We'll have to snag Harry in a few minutes and drag him off to our playroom."

"Sounds rather rude, dunnit?" Oliver asked with a frown. "Leaving a party when it's still in full swing, just to have a bit of sex."

"A bit?" I questioned with a devious smirk.

That was when you flung your arms around the both of us and held us tight. "You see? This is possible! I CAN'T WAIT until it's our turn!"

I kissed you and then kissed Oliver again. "I'm rather looking forward to it myself."

"It's MY turn to dance with Ollie!" You insisted.

"Alright, I'll bow out for now, but I'm going to insist that the three of us dance all together at some point," I informed you before taking a step back and being caught in a dance with Luna, who gave me a kiss so demanding that my toes curled.

"You made it possible for relationships like ours to be recognized," she purred happily, groping me so thoroughly that I nearly blushed.

"It was all Harry," I assured her.

"Still," she stated, rubbing herself all over me while we sort of danced. The both of us are good dancers, but the zing of electricity slowed us down. "My lovers and I want to invite the three of you to a playdate very soon."

I moaned in longing. "No. Sorry. That's off the table for the foreseeable future."

"I know, but I thought I'd ask anyway," she pouted in disappointment. "At least I can have some of my way with you on the dance floor."

At that point she gave me a kiss so deep that I quickly felt light headed and I'm certain that all the blood in my body had rushed to one needy place. Suddenly, I was yanked from her embrace and cradled between the two of you. You both stroked and caressed me, as if wiping off her touch.

"Hiya Luna," you greeted her cheerfully. "So sorry to cut your dance short, but it seems that Oliver and I have urgent plans and we require Draco right away."

She grinned at you knowingly. "Yes, that arse of his is positively irresistible. Go on and enjoy his insatiable lust. I'm sure I'll see you at breakfast."

And with that, I really DID have insatiable lust. So insatiable that I shagged both of you into the bed - and if we happen to be keeping count, Oliver liked receiving the Sounding but was too hesitant to try giving it. He also had mixed feeling about being tied up. It seems he liked the part where I was actually tying him, as that part felt sensual and exciting, but the actually being tied and forced to sit still and do nothing without my literally untying him to allow it was a bit of a turn off for him.

He also enjoyed seeing you in your puppy ears and tail, on your hands and knees on the floor. But if I had to define how he felt about you falling into puppy mode and begging him to pet your head and rub your tummy, I think he... didn't quite understand what you liked about it. He looked like he couldn't wrap his head around why that was fun for you.

But as I was saying, I shagged you both into exhaustion, and now, I'm bloody wide awake and REALLY wish I was sleeping. I think that I must be having a bit of withdrawals from our babies since it's been nearly 48 whole hours since I saw them for more than five minutes (Muffy and Dibby used magic to keep them all happy and well cared for while we were occupied), so I'm going to return to our Suite and give them all a good feed and see if that helps me fall asleep.

Come kiss me awake around noon if I haven't woken already? (That goes for both of you!)

I've got chills, they're multiplying, and I'm losing control, of the power you're supplying, it's electrifying!

Draco

P.S. Kingsley took me aside at one point during the dancing to have a quiet chat with me. It seems that he's done a lot of work behind the scenes getting the approval from the Wizengamot and wanted to warn me before he makes the announcement on Friday. He's stepping down as Minister for Magic and is appointing Hermione the Temporary Minister until the Wizengamot can hold their official election. Kingsley knows that I've always thought about throwing my hat into the ring if he retires, and wanted to give me a chance to really think about it now that it's happening. He personally supports Hermione, and so I would be running against her, and not that I would lose (having you as my ace in the hole), but... he's got a point. Do I REALLY want to be Minister, or do I simply think that it sounds like a good idea?
Chapter 185

Chapter Summary

Harry and Oliver are very supportive, and Draco doesn't know what he wants, so he gets a massage.

Monday October 30th
Malfoy for Minister 2017!!

First of all, if you decide to run and you win the election, you will be an amazing Minister. You've years of business experience, years of managing a million different projects and kicking arse at all of them, and years of keeping a massive family of weirdos happy. Your history speaks for itself. You've traveled throughout the world extensively. Because of being part of building Unity Houses on almost every continent, you have a fantastic working relationship with many Magical leadership teams all over. You CAN keep a cool head when sheer lunacy is happening.

Also, you're fully entrenched in the Muggle world through your daughter and our lifestyle. You know a lot about the Muggle world, about Muggleborns, while being a pureblooded Wizard raised in the wizarding world. You have a foot in both worlds and can see the pros and cons of each grouping within our world. I KNOW you would make a fantastic Minister. Taking out the fact that I am naturally biased towards you, I also know your flaws, even looking at it with my "I'm in love with Draco Malfoy" filters taken off I think you are the logical choice for Minister.

And, this is in no way disparaging of Hermione because she would also do a fantastic job ... but she has not spent the last almost twenty years trying to better Wizarding Britain. Alright, it could be argued that you haven't spent almost twenty years either, since we lived throughout the globe for quite a few of those years. But you have a solid decade of building your life, building your businesses, and building your family in the very country you want to help lead. You created a Muggle/Wizarding area of London/Diagon Alley to make the shopping process easier for Muggleborns and to help build businesses for the better of society.

Hermione has spent the last decade living in another country. Arguably she also has the benefit of having a good relationship with other Magical communities. And she has not only run Traditions Britain and then moved on to its Russian counterpart, but running a school full of hormonal insane children could be pretty good experience for running a country full of squabbling adult children. So, I guess what I am saying is, if you don't want to run I will wholeheartedly support Hermione. But I really do think you are the more logical choice.

It helps 'Mione's case that they just got married here and are moving back to England regardless of Ministry affiliation. It's just time. Kisa needed that time to live and have her babies where she grew up. She needed to learn her family's business as an adult. But, at least for now, she's willing to call England home for the foreseeable future. I thought Ivan would put his foot down and say she had to stay and run the business, instead he surprised me by insisting extending the family business a little more internationally will be a benefit.

The benefit for us will be having our best friends closer, our nieces and nephews closer, and likely an increased frequency in Grandmama visits.
Farrah will be so excited ...

Anyway, on that negative note I think I need to be upfront and honest about the parts of you running for Minister that I foresee being a problem.

I need to preface this with no matter how I felt about your ability to win, your ability to do the job well, or whether or not I want it to happen, I will support you one hundred percent!

-Draco, Oliver here, I agree with everything Harry is saying just so you know. You would be brill and I'll support any decision you make. I love you-

So, with that being said. Do you actually want this? That I can't answer for you. But I can tell you what I foresee. You will love the rush that comes with a challenging campaigning or election process. You will love having the power to make changes from the inside. However, you will buck at the limitations that can come from bureaucratic red tape, having to get the Wizengamot's input, and needing to toe the line of legality versus what you think is best.

It will mean limited time with your family. Right now the babies are easy enough to throw in a wrap and bring along. But what happens in six months when they're mobile toddlers who want to explore? When they aren't content to sit still for hours and a Minister's office is no place for them to have unfiltered access. What about when you're excited about an upcoming party or playdate or trip and you have to postpone it due to Ministry responsibilities. I just worry that this is a goal you want to complete but won't actually want everything that comes after the election.

Look, Kingsley has done amazing things for our world. He took a society struggling after a way and made it a good place to live again. But he was met with political gridlock. He has limitations. He's still in good shape, not too old, and he's choosing to step down. I think it's a good idea to think about why that is. The things you've been able to accomplish that have changed the Wizarding world for the better, might not have been accomplished if you were dealing with political machinations and a slow as molasses chain of command.

I love you, I believe in you ...

Sorry, We love you, We believe in you, but we also want you to be happy and fulfilled. If this fits the bill, let us know so we can start designing buttons and subtly campaigning to the seventh years.

Loving you always,
Your husband, and your fiance

Tuesday October 31st
Dear Harry and Oliver,

It's technically Halloween, but since it's still the middle of the night, the castle has not yet started it's festivities.

I spent all day thinking over the possibility of running for Minister, and I honestly don't know what I want to do. Half of me is certain that I would be perfect for the job and the other half hesitates because family is THE most important thing to me, and being Minister would severely limit the time I could spend with my family. Thankfully, I have until January to decide if I want to run in the official election.

You can be certain that I will think over every aspect of this opportunity while meditating before I even attempt to make a decision.
In the meantime, I cannot dwell on it any more tonight or I'll NEVER get any sleep. I'm going to floo over to the Manor and create a dance to perform after the official ritual ends. I'm looking forward to seeing how this years' committee of current and former students combines the tradition of the ritual with their own personal flair. That said, I am perfectly happy to no longer be in charge of planning it. It's honestly more fun if I can just show up and lose myself in the bonfire dances once the sun sets.

In any case, if Morgana wakes up during the night and protests the fact that I'm missing, feel free to bring her to me and claim a dance or two.

Love you both with all my heart,
Draco

Added about 10 hours later

My loves,

As I was waking up - having fell asleep at the Manor after dancing myself into exhaustion - I had a visit from Angella, the woman who inherited Aya's business. Well, except for me as Aya would rather work on me herself despite her retirement than let me be worked on by others. Don't tell her that I go to River's Song quite frequently, hahaha.

Anyway, Angella wanted to ask me a favor, and since I wasn't planning to head back to Hogwarts until closer to the end of the ritual, I decided that it was in my favor to grant her request. See, Angella has an apprentice of her own now, and she was hoping that I'd let her apprentice work on me since I'm such a pro at receiving massages and can give good feedback. As I said, I saw no problem with this.

So, Angella Insta-owled her apprentice to come on over to the Manor. The moment she stepped out of the floo in our suite, my jaw nearly dropped. Her name is Cordelia and she's petite with black hair, green eyes, and a naturally tan skin tone. In other words, she looked a lot like you, Harry. Strangely, despite her resemblance to you, she DIDN'T look like any of our daughters.

I was immediately taken with her, especially since she had a wicked sense of humor. For two hours, under the watchful eyes of Angella, she ran her hands all over me and made me very relaxed. Unfortunately for me, she inadvertently brought to mind what it would be like to curse YOU into a woman and have a hour or ten of fun with you - After you've taken at least 3 anti-pregnancy potions!

By the time she was done - having started on my neck and shoulders, and working her way down to my feet before turning me face down on the table to work on my back, gluteal muscles, and legs - I was rather hot and bothered. That said, I maintained my cool and didn't let on my dire state. I dismissed the both of them and claimed to want to take a nap (since it was MY table I was laying on), but in actuality, I needed them to leave before I got off the table so that they wouldn't see my erection and think that I was being a pervert.

That said, writing this quick email has NOT calmed the situation in the slightest, so one or both of you is about to be abducted and dragged to the nearest broom closet or loo for naughty shenanigans.

Incoming!
Draco
Harry describes Halloween and then Draco has a father son date with Siri.

Wednesday, November 1, 2017

My Sweethearts!

Good morning my Loves! You know, it's days like these that I really hate being a morning person. I wish, after a late night of fun and revelry, I could sleep in until noon without my sneaky husband covertly casting a sleeping spell upon me. Especially since, knowing the entirety of the student body was also going to be up late reveling, McGonagall canceled morning classes. What better way could I spend the morning after a lovely Samhain/Halloween ritual then snuggling up in my cozy bed with the loves of my life?

Well, according to my brain, I could wake up at 7:00 A.M. while those loves are sleeping away, and get ready for the day. Thanks for that, you douchebag brain!

At least I got in a lovely morning run with no one to interrupt the golden fall light and the crisp air since everyone else was likely still sound asleep. I got first crack at all the breakfast foods in the Great Hall. And now I still have plenty of time to write up a long, lovely description of yesterday. I may wish I could sleep in but at least I had a productive morning. It could be worse, I could be forced to get up that early and have nothing to do but stare at the wall.

Yesterday, when you wrote your email Draco and came hunting down one or both of us, you found Ollie. Unfortunately for me, I still had classes to tend to. Flight classes and quidditch were canceled for the day due to using parts of the quidditch pitch for the rituals, but Muggle Studies stops for no one!

Technically that's not true at all, seeing as I am literally NOT teaching right now due to having those classes canceled. But no one needed my classroom yesterday morning so I had nothing canceled. SOME lucky professors had classes yesterday canceled due to prep for the ritual and the ritual, and then canceled AGAIN for today due to cleanup and rest. It's probably for the best that I am madly in love with the aforementioned unnamed professor otherwise I'd be quite jealous and bitchy.

I did at least have fun classes. Basically, the ritual you began that then was taken over by the younger generation, is very Wizarding based. It's roots are in a traditional Samhain celebration. Being the Muggle Studies teacher, I made my classes the day of Halloween a fun description of Muggle Halloween traditions. From the Kawasaki Halloween Parade in Japan to Trick or Treating in the States to (even though it's technically not the day of Halloween) Dia de los Muertos in Mexico. That last one, and wanting to honor Atreyu's ancestry, is why I personally wore the sugar skull face paint and subsequent costume for my ritual gear.
I wouldn't have been able to hold a candle to your cosmos bodypaint Draco, so it's probably best I didn't try to coordinate or even come close. And when our Ollie came to me in a panic because he saw my "over the top" costume ... that was a fraction of yours ... I helped him put together a little something as well.

I was dressed in quite the dapper suit to go with my sophisticated skeleton. You, my Draco, were covered in body paint. Leave it to you to find a costume that covers you head to toe while also lets you be completely nude. Only my husband.

Well, soon to be Ollie's husband too! Less than five months to go!!!!

Anyway, your dark bodypaint with the bright starlight was one of the most breathtaking sights of my life. You looked like the universe, which makes sense since you're my world! And judging by the fact that there was pretty much a puddle of drool underneath Oliver when he watched your dance, I would have to assume he agrees with me.

However, I am not sure the puddle under YOU was drool when you saw Oliver in his costume. He wanted something a bit demonic when I told him how much you love the demon aspect of this ritual. So we went with the curved horns. But he also wanted something that made him look less out of Hell but more a demon coming straight out of nature. His horns, his hair, even his robes, were covered in moss. They looked like he crawled out of some fairy circle with the intent to kill us
And if all of that wasn't enough, he consented to let me do his make-up. I trimmed up his beard and added a bit of green eyeshadow to it. The same eyeshadow I smeared across his eyelids that made him look like his sole reason to climb out of the moss was to fuck me silly. A hint of dark eyeliner had his gorgeous brown eyes looking like sex personified.

I liked my costume, it went well with my teaching and was good for Atreyu to see his heritage being shown by one of his dads. But the two of you outshone me by leaps and bounds. Draco you looked like a God of the Universe and Oliver like a Fairy Prince coming to steal us away, I had a nice suit and face paint.

Oh well, next year maybe I'll bring out my old costume of nothing but some shiny gold pants. Or the lacy pink Aphrodite knickers!

While the two of you were shagging away yesterday afternoon in some broom shed, I was doing some hands on pre-ritual things with our littles and the first years. It was really similar to that very first ritual you did years and years ago Draco when the Princess was a baby ... and our only baby. I led all of the children outside to the grounds, most of them in costume, for a nature walk. The idea was that later that night, during the actual ritual, they would be given seeds or other small tokens to present to their departed. This being most of their first rituals, we thought a little practice in the sunlight would come in handy.

When we made our way back from our walk, we had a little picnic with cake and drinks and talking about the ancestors. I have no actual memories of any of my ancestors so I told the story of Brighid falling a bit in love with the first redheaded Malfoy baby. Side note: she seems to be just as in love with our Gabe's copper hair as she was with Cael's strawberry blonde locks.

Our Zaire spoke a little bit about his birth culture's beliefs about the spirit including the ritual they used to remove his abuser.

And my sweet, sweet, wonderful little Atreyu just about broke my heart when he said, "I don't talk to her, but sometimes I smell my Mama."

We all eventually made our way back to the castle to prep for the actual official ritual. I fed the babies and dressed them up in their little demon-baby costumes. Then when you went off to get ready and rehearse your dance, I helped Ollie create his. We played with the babies and littles for a little bit until it was time for the ritual to officially begin.

It's probably best that I had my arms/wrap full of Morgana and Dylan while Oliver had his arms full of a wiggly Gabriel because it's probably the only thing that kept us from jumping you the moment we saw you standing there covered in starlight and flashing that smirk of yours.

The kids running the ritual did an absolutely lovely job as usual. A perfect description of All Hallows Eve - Halloween - Samhain, they did a (student) costume contest, and then they moved onto the nature walk portion of the ritual.

I had an absolutely lovely conversation with my parents. I hate that it's a once a year thing as opposed to just having them in my life, but so many people lose their loved ones and never get the chance to speak with them again in this life so I should be thankful for that. Most of our conversation, besides saying I love you and I miss you, revolved around how they feel about our Ollie and my own worries and fears about our Gabe. I felt so relieved honestly, they assured me with a laugh, just like they did the first time I spoke with them about loving you Draco, that they are beyond happy that I have people who love me. They're happy for us, they love me, and nothing will ever change that.

They told me, as usual, how much they've enjoyed watching our children and our family grow. How amazed they are that they have more great grandchildren. And when I broke down a little, talking about my fears for Gabe and his health, my parents did their best to hold me - and Gods is that the worst part of being parentless, never having the feeling of being held by them that feeling of safety and love and warmth - and assure me that they were watching Gabriel, that he is growing and wonderful and they had every bit of faith that he would grow up safe and happy and loved.

Breathe Harry, breathe.

And I've officially been writing long enough that Oliver has woken up and joined me and he wants to write something now.

Draco, and Harry since you are listening. I also followed the ritual and communed with my departed last night. I was apprehensive about doing that since I didn't know quite the reception I would receive from my most recently deceased. I spoke with Edmond. Harry, stop panicking, it was fine and I feel freer than I have in months. He, well he apologized for his behavior. Through the cleansing of his death, the distorted mentality that plagued him in his last years was cleared away. He is happy I have found love. He is sorry his disease hurt me. He is quite happy that Cassie and Parker have more people in their lives to love them. I love you both so much it scares me. I was so scared that I was moving on too fast or not holding to my original vows. After last night I finally feel that weight has lifted from my shoulders. It was wonderful - Oliver.

Oh Gods! I was going to describe the dancing and the amazing night time revelry, but now I have to hug our fiancé and likely blubber all over him for a bit.

In so much relief,
Harry

P.S. About the Minister thing. Draco you silly man, you said half of you is certain you'd be perfect for the job. What is wrong with you? One hundred percent of me is certain you'd be perfect for the job!! My only hesitation is whether or not you actually want the job. Of course you're capable. Ridiculous.
Thursday November 2nd
The beats of my heart,

When I woke up this morning, I realized that I didn't have anything to do. Harry, you had taken Gabriel to your classes with you, and since he's still not mobile and perfectly content so long as he's being held, he's a rather good choice to bring. Meanwhile, Oliver, you had taken both Dylan and Morgana - since she was willing to let you carry her around. Perhaps she understood that you were planning to bring them both flying in their carriers.

I'm certain your class just LOVED watching you teach them some of the finer points of flying while wearing two babies strapped to your body. I know I certainly love watching how fit you look while holding babies. Mmm...

So, with nothing to do, I decided that I would do basically nothing. Thus, I turned into my Marmoset form and snuck into your class, Harry, to simply sit on your shoulder and pet your neck while you carried on with teaching. You occasionally stroked my soft fur, but otherwise ignored the fact that I was a potential distraction.

I think you had Fifth or Sixth Years to begin with, and they had enough self control to refrain from asking questions about the sudden arrival of a mini monkey. I spent the rest of the day with you like that, which I hope you liked. I assume that you would have told me to leave if you didn't want me there.

That said, the best part was when the first class I dropped in on ended and Oliver arrived to borrow you for a quick loo break. It seems that we've never actually transformed in front of him, nor mentioned the possibility, because he was staring at me with the most confused look on his face.

"Hiya Harry, I had Muffy and Dibby take Dylan and Morgana and lay them down for their nap. I hope you'll consider having them take Gabe too... So... when did you get a pet monkey?"

You snorted in amusement even as you called for Muffy to take Gabriel. Then you stroked my spine and gave me a gentle kiss (the students had left by this point).

"This is Draco, didn't you know?"

He shook his head. "I thought he could turn into a dragon..."

You grinned and took his hand. "He has a POTION to do that, so yes, he can. But this is his Animagus form."

"Huh... I've never given much thought to becoming an Animagus..." Oliver murmured speculatively.

"I wanted to try it because my dad and Godfather could do it. I'm a fox, by the way. And after I did it, I showed Draco, and he was inspired to try it too, hence..." you gestured at me.

I was still sitting on your shoulder and hugging your neck as you and Oliver strolled to the nearest loo.

"Interesting. I wonder what I'd be?" He asked himself softly as you shut and locked the door to the loo and pushed him up against the wall.

"Wonder later. I only have a few minutes before I have to get ready for my next class."

"Mmm," Oliver moaned as he accepted your kisses and groped your fit arse.
I was perfectly content to watch, and I assume that you realized this as I didn't even attempt to move nor turn back into myself. You cast a few spells at your arse to prepare yourself as quickly as possible. As soon as you nodded that you were ready, Oliver pulled your trousers and pants down and turned you so that you were facing the wall and he was able to shag you.

I felt strange. As a monkey, I wasn't really interested in joining the fun, but at the same time, I enjoyed what was happening and was mildly turned on by it. For no reason that I could determine, this translated into me licking and nipping your ear. I'm fairly certain it was light enough to not hurt and I obviously didn't make you bleed. Still my teeth in that form are rather sharp and you seemed to inhale a gasp at the sensation. Perhaps the tiny pain was exactly what you wanted? You certainly didn't tell me to stop.

Due to the short time limit, Oliver used a hand to get you off as quickly as possible, and then devoted himself to pumping you full about a minute later. The two of you panted and gasped, humming and sighing in pleasure as you caught your breaths and recovered.

That was when you petted me again. "Draco, my love, do you want to change back and have a bit of fun before I have to run to my next class?"

I shook my head because I actually didn't want either of you at the moment. I wanted to wait until I had the time to have BOTH of you, and I had plans on exactly how I wanted to take the two of you apart until neither of you could remember your names.

"Alright," you murmured with a confused shrug. "Well, I should probably, erm, use the loo, and then get back to my classroom before my next class starts."

"Mmm... me too," Oliver murmured, pulling you close and kissing you very possessively.

I waved a paw at him, making you laugh softly. "Draco wants you to give him a little kiss too."

He looked skeptical, but gave me a quick smooch as well. I leapt onto his shoulder for a moment so that I could hug and lick his neck, and then I jumped back to you.

"He says have a good class," you translated, more or less accurately.

Curious, Oliver lightly stroked a hand down my spine. "That's so weird..."

"Careful," you warned. "Draco will bite you if you offend him in this form."

Obviously doing his best not to offend me, Oliver pet me again. "I'm actually hoping to see you like this again at some point. It's weird, but you look adorable and I just want to pet you all day."

I probably moved my entire body just a bit because I was feeling rather chuffed by that statement. Burying my face against your neck, I waved goodbye to him. You two (used the urinals and then) gave each other a last kiss before parting ways.

Back in your classroom, you were surprised to see that a few students were so eager that they'd already arrived - more than ten minutes early. This particular class had Siri in it. He lit up when he saw me on your shoulder.

"Hi dad! I was literally just wondering if you'd take me to Zaire's Langa for dinner tonight, and then maybe massages at River's Song. I've been practicing so much lately that I ache a bit."

I chittered in agreement. You chuckled. "I don't even need to speak monkey to know he would be happy to. You think your father would EVER turn down an opportunity to go to a spa?"
I wanted to disagree just to be contrary, but I couldn't actually argue. Instead, I jumped to Siri's shoulder for a few minutes. He wasn't nearly as upset by my sitting on his head as Zwei was, and let me pick through his hair until I got bored and returned to you, but not before I gave him a kiss on the cheek.

Predictably, the rest of the students spent the minutes before class began asking Siri all about the implication that the tiny monkey was his other dad. When class was over, you were technically done for the day, but that just meant that it was time for you to answer questions in your office and whatnot, so I jumped to the floor and changed back to my human form so that I could give you a heated kiss.

"I'll see you when I get back from dinner and massages with our son," I murmured.

You moaned/hummed a response before giving me another kiss. "Have fun."

Siri gave you a quick hug before taking my hand and dragging me away. "See ya dad!"

Dinner was excellent, which was only to be expected. Then we had our massages.

Apparently the real reason that Siri suggested a father son date was that he wanted to talk about which Quidditch moves were the best to attract girls with. Honestly, I wondered why he asked me and not you. You are clearly more comfortable talking about these things, but then I supposed that maybe he figures that you have no experience attracting girls.

Well, at least he's not River snogging every girl he sees!

After our spa night, I brought him back to Hogwarts and found Oliver in our Quarters playing with our babies. We snuggled up to chat and wait for you to get back. Then I decided to dictate this email - which prompted a conversation about how my voyeurism kink differs when in Monkey form. Strangely, it does and it doesn't. I still quite enjoyed the show, I just wasn't as inclined to want to do anything about it when you were done.

In any case, it's about time for you to return from Gryffindor Tower.

Take my hand now be alive,
Draco
P.S. Oliver, I think the next time I have nothing better to do, I think I'll ride YOUR shoulder during class!
Chapter 187

Chapter Summary

Harry has a free evening and Draco finally has a chance to confront Orion.

Chapter Notes

Since I think AO3 might have had problems yesterday, if you didn't read the Halloween ritual, go back and read it :-)

See the end of the chapter for more notes

Wednesday November 8, 2017

Love(s),

I am utterly thrilled, I unexpectedly have the evening free. I was going to have an evening study session with my Gryffindors but the thing they're wanting extra study for is potions. Haha, laugh it up Draco, I might be pants at potions themselves but I am a good researcher and can very easily help a group of students figure out where to look for the answers.

Anyway, again with the shoddy potions professor, he generally completely refuses to help his students outside of class. I'm not supposed to say anything to anyone, but I know Minnie knows better than to include you in that limitation, but she is actively looking for a new professor. Honestly, trying to get paid extra to supply the infirmary, refusing to help students outside of class time, and by the amount of students that asked me for help he must also be a terrible teacher since they don't understand a damn thing. Minnie was going to just not renew his contract for next year and find someone new, but with the mid-term scores she's been seeing she thinks it can't wait until the end of the year.

Well, long story short, he's either realized he might be out of a job soon or had a personality transplant because he told my study group that there's "no need to beg for help from someone who only managed to scrape an E on his O.W.L. Potions exam."

First of all, Oi Fuck that guy!

Secondly, they're mostly fourth and fifth years and there's nothing horrible about an E on an O.W.L.!

Thirdly, Fuck that guy so much!

Anyway, because of that I find myself with an entire Wednesday night to myself. Normally I would want to spend that time in my rooms with my loves, but I also got an owl from Tabitha today asking if we could talk soon. I figure, what the hell, let's take out two birds with one stone and head over to Unity for Movie Night? It's been ages since we've been, and I'm sure the feisty foursome would love hanging out with some younger Unity Kids instead of their boring old dads. And we can initiate Ollie into the Unity House Movie Night cuddle couch!

Gabe can snuggle with us while Morgana and Dyl crawl around attacking the small children to steal their snacks. I mean ... play.

And uh, Draco did you do that thing I asked you to do for the thing?

Oh! Your night last week with Siri. I know they generally ask me for teenager stuff but you were definitely the one to ask that question. What kind of quidditch moves will get the ladies’ attention? Draco, you are absolutely the best person to ask this. One: because you definitely attempted to get attention with quidditch moves. Two: because you know exactly which moves I did that got YOUR attention! I just hope you didn't tell him something like, "have you tried dressing up as a dementor to scare them off their broom?"

Yeah Ollie, remember that game? We were playing, what Ravenclaw? And I almost lost the snitch because three prats were dressed up like dementors so I stopped to cast my patronus? Oh that Draco Malfoy snot, wonder what ever happened to the git ... hehe. Oh and who ended up winning that match, do you remember? Oh that's right, still Gryffindor with the win!

I should probably send this off so you have time to read it and know in enough time that I want to head out for the evening!

Loving you,
Harry

Friday November 10th - Actually, probably more like 3AM Saturday Merlin Harry!

Oliver dear, if you are with Harry, strap in for the ride because I have SO much to get through!

Let me start with movie night. We all went to Unity House and watched Coco, which was a stunning movie about a boy who wanted to be like his grandfather and play the guitar. There were some interesting twists - such as a trip to the land of the dead. I loved it, but I daresay that Atreyu loved it even more. He now DEFINITELY wants that flying spirit jaguar thing!

Just after the movie, when I detangled from the cuddle couch to head to the loo, Tabitha cornered me while you were still wrangling the kids.

"I wanted to talk to Harry about this, but since he's busy and I KNOW he'll probably panic, I suppose I'll tell you and let you tell him when you get a chance," Tabitha said, rather ominously.

"Alright..." I murmured, wondering what she could be upset about.

"So... you know that couple that Harry warned me about?"

"Yeah..." I droned, feeling a bit of dread run down my spine.

"They came here yesterday... looking to adopt a teenaged girl," Tabitha informed me grimly. "Even if Harry hadn't warned me away, I don't think I would have passed them through the screening process. They seemed extremely dodgy to me."

I sighed and nodded. "I can't imagine WHY they came here looking to adopt - as they already made it clear they don't accept adopted children as valid members of the family. More to the point, they seem to be desperate for a new heir, which they are old fashioned enough to insist be a boy. This is... puzzling, to say the least."

She nodded in agreement. "I told them that I had to do all the usual background checks and the like, but there's no bloody way I'm going to let them get their hands on a child!"

With that, we kissed each other on the cheek and I went to find you and Oliver. You were both ready to go, despite our kids being a rebellious handful. That's why I didn't get a chance to say anything; I got distracted by helping get all the kids to bed - telling stories and dancing fussy, possibly teething babies to sleep.

Then Thursday, when I managed to snag you during your lunch break, we got too into chatting during our picnic about the advice I gave Siri. You were happy to hear that I did NOT advise him to dress up as a dementor during the game. That said, he did ask permission to take my dementor costume from my closet to wear during a Defense Against the Dark Arts class project.

As for moves to attract girls, I actually spent Thursday evening out on the Quidditch Pitch teaching Siri some of our better moves - even the one in which you were training for the ballet, hahaha.

Today - which is probably actually yesterday at this point - I had a busy enough day working with Vani at Unity. Guess what? Vani might be getting adopted! There's a couple that I don't know anything about yet that came in to start the process, and if nothing goes wrong - and if Tabitha thinks they're a good fit - little Vanessa will have a loving new family to cherish her and raise her right.

Otherwise I'll murder them myself!

After Unity, I stopped by that place to see if the thing was going to be ready for the thing, and was assured that yes, the thing is going to be there at the perfect time.

Then I took advantage of the fact that Oliver is done earlier on Fridays than you are - because he often has to put in a few hours on the weekends to help out with Quidditch and whatnot - by taking a bit of a field trip into the Forbidden Forest. See, even though the centaurs had once declared that any and all adults trespassing in that forest would be subject to their harsh penalties, Hagrid has not only talked them down, but a few people are exceptions to that rule.

You, for example, have always been considered a bit of a hero to them as well, and so even though they don't necessarily worship you, they tolerate your occasional presence. Well, it seems that their stargazing has let them know that I am good, erm… friends, I suppose, with the Antipodean Opaleye living in the forest, and so, I'm also tolerated. Because of this, so long as we and anyone we bring into the forest with us behaves respectfully toward the centaurs, they won't become hostile.

All of that was a long way to say that since I'd seen my gorgeous dragon friend flying near the edge of the forest closest to Hogwarts, I decided to take Oliver into the forest to meet with her. I always found it strange that she knew who I was, even in human form, but she does. Perhaps I smell the same in both forms?

In any case, we headed into the forest, following Opal - that's what I decided to call her for short - until she stopped circling and landed. She was a bit fierce at first, making Oliver nearly wet himself, but then she took a good long sniff of me. Her ferocity faded and she became rather docile. I was able to pet her head and introduce Oliver to her.

She let me see that her nest was no longer empty, but I wasn't allowed within five feet of it. It's said that Dragon eggs take about 3 or 4 months to incubate before being laid, and then a good two years until they hatch, so, depending on when she found a dragon to mate with, there could be baby dragons to meet in two years or less.

I'm rather excited!

Unless they're empty like most chicken eggs...

But I'm not going to think about that, so, moving on.

After heading back to the castle with Oliver and having a quick shag, I took off to the Manor to have a bit of a chat with my mother about that thing. That led to me staying for dinner with the family. Elena and her crew were home, which meant that she had Ethan, Rose, AND Rodrigo with her, along with the kids. Apparently she just couldn't resist the swarthy Spanish charms of Rodrigo and talked him into the weirdest relationship I've ever heard of. It seems that Elena will be in a triad with Ethan and Rose, and simultaneously in an otherwise monogamous relationship with Rodrigo. He's not willing to be part of their relationship, but he does love Elena enough to let her have her cake and eat it too.

For now. We'll see how it goes.

After dinner, I took a bit of a nap in our Suite because I had plans...

See, it was Full Monty Friday, and even though I don't want to be at the Hog's Head for Orion's performance, I needed to see something else for myself. So, I waited until the place was closed - a time when I knew the staff would still be there cleaning and whatnot. Makes me glad they have cleaning charms to make the work so much easier.

But anyway, since the Hog's Head was closed, all the security wards were up. This makes it impossible for anyone not authorized to get into the place, but since I am the father of the owner, I was actually given authorization, and Orion can't take it away from me until he effectively buys the place out from the Malfoy conglomeration - remember when I mentioned that since he was technically underage when he bought the club, so even though he used his own money, he had to have our lawyers buy it as a Malfoy business? Well that means that I'm technically a part owner, and even though I would NEVER abuse my authority... I decided to abuse my authority.

So, I let myself in and used all my old lurking and spying skills to walk around and see what there was to be seen. You'd said that Orion had lied to you about his drug use, and I figured that he would simply lie to me about it too unless I had proof. So that was what I was trying to obtain. I figured that maybe I could find something in his office - or better yet, catch him in the act.

And catch him in the act I did. He was laying in a circle of cushions on the stage with a few of his employees. They were all staring up at nothing I could see and giggling dreamily.

"Orion?" I asked with a frown of concern.

"Dad!" Orion exclaimed in a strange tone. I think if he wasn't on drugs, he would have been alarmed to see me, but at the moment, he couldn't be anything but happy. "Come lay next to me!"

Not willing to pass up an invitation like that, I conjured another cushion and lay right next to him as told. "What are you on?"

He seemed to have enough presence of mind to not answer that, but he didn't try to lie either, simply shook his head in denial. I cast a detection spell I'd learned in Auror training.
"Opium??" I blurted out in shock.

He laughed at that - which actually IS one of the effects of the drug. "Don't be such a stick in the mud, dad! Opium is excellent for giving us new ideas! When we take it, we can come up with whole new routines that everyone loves!"

I sighed and rubbed my temples. "But Opium is easy to get addicted to."

He shrugged. "I did my research, dad, I KNOW how to take it responsibly. So long as I never take it more than once or twice a week, it's not going to hook me, and even if it does, it's only a week of the worst flu symptoms ever to break it."

I wanted to argue with him, but in his current state, it would be a complete waste of breath. "Do you do this to make Farrah mad?"

He gave me a strange look even as he gestured for a gorgeous and mostly naked woman to come closer. "Give my dad the pipe."

She handed me the ornate silver pipe that was attached to a hose attached to a... I'm not actually sure what it's called. A water bong? A hookah? Anyway, I held it curiously, looking her over carefully before returning my attention to our son.

"If you want me to answer, take a good long drag," Orion bargained.

Sighing because I already knew that there was no use arguing with him in his state, I decided to give it a go and see what happened.

Satisfied that I was cooperating, Orion grinned at me, turning on his side and propping his head up with his hand so he could look at me better. "See? Not so bad after all!" Then he took the pipe from me and took a long pull from it. "To answer your question, NO, I do NOT do this just to get back at Farrah. I was doing this before I married Farrah. I do this because of what I said; this helps me have an excellent brainstorming session that in turn helps me keep this business successful and fun."

As he gave his explanation, I could feel a delicious sense of dreaminess come over me. "Mmm..." I moaned as the feeling made me happy and giggly.

We all had the WEIRDEST conversation! It wandered all over the place and it would be impossible for me to transcribe it coherently. I'm not certain I remember more than half of it anyway.

When we were sobering up a while later, that same gorgeous mostly naked woman pressed half a pill into Orion's mouth before placing the other half in her own. They both took drinks of water to swallow the pill halves with, and then she kissed him and pulled him to his feet.

"What's that?" I asked, hoping that he wouldn't try to tell me that it was an antacid or something harmless that it obviously wasn't.

"Ecstasy," Orion murmured, giving her another kiss.

I sat up in concern. "Why do you need that?"

He shook his head. "I DON'T need it. I simply like taking it once in a blue moon so that I can have an intense shag with no strings attached. It's... hard to explain, but it makes everything feel about 10 times more... MORE than normal. Want some?"
I shook my head. "No, I'm dead certain that your father is going to murder me for the Opium, no need for him to resurrect me and murder me all over again for a drug I don't even like the sound of."

Orion gave me an appraising look. "What drugs did YOU take when you were my age?"

I sighed in defeat. You know, I always assumed being open and honest about my past would teach our kids to avoid my mistakes. It seems that I was wrong in Orion's case, as it seems to have inspired him instead.

"Well... After the Final Battle, there was a time when I was doing a lot of Cocaine, but honestly, I always liked the Cruciatus Curse better. It had more reward and less nasty after effects."

Orion booped me on the nose, giggling residually from the last of the Opium fading from his system. "Cocaine is WAY worse than Opium, so don't you dare judge me!" With that, he led his bint away to who knows where. I don't really want to think too closely on what he did after that.

Feeling rather heavy in spirit, I decided to return to the Manor and type this up before passing out. I assume that you'll have time to read this email before coming to the Manor tomorrow for that thing. I'll leave it up to you to decide if you want to wake me alone to talk things over, or if you want to talk everything over with Oliver FIRST, and then come wake me to talk it over again.

Stand in the corner and scream with me,
Draco

Chapter End Notes

Warning, drama ahead...
Harry is not happy at ALL that Draco took Opium with Orion.

4A.M. Saturday November 11, 2017

Draco gods-be-damned Lucius bloody Malfoy,

I haven’t found you yet but I will. And when I do things are NOT going to end well for you.

I can’t decide if I’m furious you’re hiding or pleased that you have just enough self preservation to know when you’ve well and truly bollocksed everything up and hiding is your best bed.

My husband, the dumbest smart person I’ve met.

You utter tit. You took opium with our son. Opium. Hmm, remember that time you had an addiction problem that we had to wean you off of? What was that thing you were taking again? Laudanum? Wonder what that’s made out of? Hmm, let me think.

Oh that’s right. It’s opium.

I can’t even think straight (haha, never straight, it’s NOT the time for jokes right now!) I’m so mad. I’m serious! (No I’m Sirius, haha, shut UP!)

You’d better hope I find you soon or that I never find you.

Reluctantly still madly in love with your prat arse,
Harry

P.S. Ha Ha, I already know Vani’s soon to be adoptive parents! Maybe if you weren’t high as a kite I’d tell you!

P.P.S. That was mean, they’re good people, you’ll like them. Don’t worry.

P.P.P.S. Now look what you’ve done! You caused me to wake up Ollie!

Still about 4 am ish on Saturday November 11th Bloody fucking hell!

I can hear you yelling for me, Harry, but even before that, I could feel your presence when you Apparated into the Manor. See, just after I got into bed and was drifting off, I realized that I might actually be in dire trouble. I had joked that you might murder me, but a sudden sense of impending doom let me know that it might not actually be a joke, so I went into my closet and found a nice high shelf to hide on in my Marmoset form.

That was naturally the first place you looked, which I probably would have realized had I not been so tired and mentally absent. So, when you were flinging things back and forth while growling my name, I Apparated to the White Room, but that was the SECOND place you looked for me, which made me Apparate to the Crystal Room, however, I know that this is going to be the next place that you look for me, so I'm going to try under our bed.

Hopefully you give up and try to get some sleep until you calm down in the morning, because I'd really rather live, thank you very much!

Picked up by the Dictation Device

"DRACO BUGGERING MALFOY, I KNOW YOU'RE IN HERE SOMEWHERE, SO GET YOUR BLOODY ARSE OUT HERE BEFORE I BLOW THE WHOLE PLACE UP LOOKING FOR YOU!"

"Harry, love, perhaps you might want to calm down?"

"NO OLIVER, NOT UNTIL DRACO GETS HIS ARSE OUT HERE AND EXPLAINS HIMSELF!!!"

"I didn't do anything wrong, Merlin dammit!"

"DID YOU OR DID YOU NOT TAKE OPIUM TONIGHT?!?!"

"I did, but I'm an adult and can take the occasional drug if I want!"

"IS THAT WHAT YOU TELL OUR KIDS?! THAT IT'S FINE ONCE YOU'RE AN ADULT?!?! WHAT ABOUT THE FACT THAT YOU WERE ADDICTED TO LAUDANUM - MADE FROM OPIUM?!?!!?"

"I was NOT addicted!"

"YOU TOOK IT FOR MONTHS TO FEEL BETTER!"

"YEAH, I did! But I NEVER took it enough to become ADDICTED!"

"YOU WERE THE ONE WHO WANTED TO SMOKE POT IN AMSTERDAM!"

"SO?! You had NO problem with it at the time!"

"AND YOU WERE ADDICTED TO LAUDANUM -"

"WAS NOT!!!"

"AND YOU DID UNSPECIFIED MUGGLE DRUGS BEFORE WE GOT TOGETHER -"

"COCAINE - WHICH I STOPPED USING IN FAVOR OF THE CRUCIATUS CURSE! AND YOU KNOW IT!!!"

"AND I'M PRETTY FUCKING CERTAIN THAT OUR SON GETS THIS BEHAVIOR FROM YOU!!!"

"HOW SO?!?! IT'S NOT LIKE I'M CONSTANTLY DOING DRUGS AND TELLING THEM TO DO IT TOO!!!"

"YOU FIND NOTHING WRONG WITH DOING DRUGS AND THEY KNOW IT!!!!"
"AAAARRRGHHH!!!"

CRACK

BOOM "I'M NOT BLOODY AFRAID OF YOUR RAGE HALO, HARRY!"

CRASH

BANG

"GOD BLOODY DAMNIT! BOTH OF YOU STOP IT BEFORE YOU ACTUALLY HURT EACH OTHER!!!"

"Oliver, please tell Harry he's being unreasonable."

"I'M BEING UNREASONABLE?!?!

"I dunno, Draco, if it's true you've done all those drugs, then maybe Harry has a point?"

"SEE?!?!?!"

Heavy sigh. "Listen, he is overreacting because he THINKS I somehow got addicted to a substance I used very carefully for a few months before stopping altogether."

"If you were so under control, then why does Harry insist that you were addicted?"

"HE WAS!!!"

"I WASN'T ADDICTED!!! I simply used the laudanum as a tool to help me get through a rough time - just like YOU use potions to help you maintain your mental health."

"THEY'RE MEDICAL AND PRESCRIBED BY MY HEALER!!!"

"I WAS USING THE LAUDANUM UNDER THE SUPERVISION OF MY MIND HEALER!!!"

"Alright, clearly the two of you aren't going to come to an agreement on this, and I don't yet know all the details -"

"YOU WOULD IF YOU'D JUST BLOODY READ ALL OUR EMAILS!!!"

"OI! MUTT! That's uncalled for! Oliver isn't required to know every detail about us and our past to be an equal and valid part of our relationship!"

"Sorry Ollie, I didn't mean that..."

Deep sigh. "It's alright Harry, I know it's the rage talking, but maybe now that you're a bit calmer -"

"Think very carefully before finishing that sentence, Oliver, as his Rage Halo has NOT diminished in the slightest. He's not calm by any stretch of the imagination."

"WELL HOW CAN I BE CALM WHEN YOU TOOK A FUCKING DRUG THAT'S THE BASE OF THE ONE YOU WERE ADDICTED TO!!!"

"I WASN'T BLOODY ADDICTED!!!"

"WERE SO!!!" CRACK!
"WAS NOT!!" CRACK!

"WHY are you two bloody HEXING each other?!?!"

"I WANT HIM TO ADMIT THAT HE'S WRONG AND APOLOGIZE!!!"

"I DIDN'T DO ANYTHING WRONG!!!"

"LISTEN! … Can you both please just back off and breathe for a few seconds? … Alright, good."

Deep breath in. "Harry, can you please try to rein in your Rage Halo before you accidentally murder someone?"

"NOT UNTIL I'M READY TO CALM DOWN!!!"

Another deep sigh. "Alright... Draco, even if you don't think you did anything wrong, can you try to see Harry's point of view and apologize?"

"WHY SHOULD I BLOODY APOLOGIZE WHEN I DIDN'T DO ANYTHING WRONG?!?!?!

"Alright... how about we all just breathe. Deep breath in... and out... Deep breath in... and out...

Look, clearly we're all tired and emotionally charged. Can't we PLEASE just drink some hot chocolate and eat a few biscuits? And then maybe get some sleep?"

Soft growling.

"Do I need to remind you that it's my birthday and that I REALLY don't want to be in the middle of a shouting match at bloody 4 in the morning?"

Aggravated sigh. "FINE... I'll go take a shower or something until my Halo cools off."

"Thank you, Harry love."

Defeated sigh. "I suppose that I could use something in my system to counteract the last vestiges of the Opium."

"That's all I ask. Muffy! Please bring us some creamy hot chocolate and a plate of ginger biscuits."

"Yes Master Oliver."

"I think that's quite enough - Dictation Device. You can stop recording and send the bloody email now."

No sign off
6:00 A.M. Saturday November 11, 2017

My Dearest Draco,

Oliver recommended, and I reluctantly agreed, that since being face to face right now seems to end with nothing but shouting, I should probably let everything out in email. That should, in turn, allow you to listen to and process my feelings on your own terms and without being attacked. I obviously feel I am right and you are wrong, otherwise this argument would be over. But a shouting match where we are essentially yelling "Yuh huh!' and "Nuh uh!" at each other isn't making me sound all that credible.

I really thought after my halo calmed down in my shower that I could come out and have a logical conversation with you. Apparently "standing there in silence glaring at Draco isn't much more helpful than the shouting, Harry." Thanks Ollie.

Draco, if you didn't do anything wrong, why were you hiding?

I spent the last ten minutes going through our old emails ... again I am really sorry I threw that in Oliver's face. He didn't deserve me trying to drag him into a fight and he certainly doesn't have to know everything we've ever done to be a full and complete part of this relationship. As annoyed as I am with you right now Draco, you are one hundred percent correct in that being a low blow and something I shouldn't have done. Thank you for calling me out.

Anyway, I went through the emails in an effort to be a complete arse and have proof of your former addiction to throw in your face. Because I'm a mature and responsible adult.

Again, I am sorry that I am using this story that I've always said I wanted as a history of our love in an effort to win an argument. I acted a prat to Oliver and now I'm sullying our record of a life full of love. For that, I am completely repentant and apologize wholeheartedly.

I did find some direct quotes that I am still going to rehash, just because I care and not in an effort to win this argument.

First, my incorrect statements. You were not addicted to laudanum. I know, I know, that was my whole argument. But ... your use of it was escalating and very concerning to me when Yesenia finally came up with cheering charms as an alternative. It had not become an addiction yet, but I still hold out that your use of it was becoming concerning and had no end in sight when you finally stopped using it when you found the charm alternative.

And here's the rub. You threw in MY face that I am on antidepressant potions to help regulate my mental health. I have PTSD from my abusive childhood and living through a war. I take exactly the amount prescribed by my mind healer. I am actually on the lowest dose I've ever been on. You made me feel badly about my potions and said you were using the laudanum under the supervision, of your mind healer.

But ...

When I looked through the emails, two sentences came out that reminded me again why I had been so worried at the time about your addiction. Yesenia specifically found a charm alternative because she didn't like you being on laudanum. When you first started taking it, before you told Yesenia about it I might add, you eventually told her about it and she was willing to monitor it but as to you taking it she was "not super thrilled." Direct quote. And then when it was increasing in use you mentioned again that Yesenia, "hasn't really liked me using this muggle potion," continuing on saying she supported you but "hasn't been happy about it."

I am taking potions that my healer recommended after I spent YEARS trying everything else to avoid potions as a last resort. YOU took something your healer didn't want you to take but didn't technically stop you from doing either.

Now, I don't want to fight. I don't want to ruin Oliver's birthday. No matter what you did last night you know I love you. But I don't think I'm unreasonable in asking you to not take Opium again. And especially to not get stoned with our son. I definitely overreacted earlier, I'm overtired and have been busy with the thing.

So, I think we should all cuddle up in bed, kiss out our apologies, and take a nice long mid-day birthday nap. We just need to be awake and dressed by 4:00 this afternoon.

Partially Apologetic,
Harry

Saturday November 11th
My tetchy Harry,

I already told you why I was hiding. I said in my last email, before we got to fighting, that I was in bed falling asleep and a sense of impending doom came over me. I went into hiding because I have a functioning sense of self preservation despite the fact that I was too tired to come up with a hiding place more clever than under our bed, sigh.

Alright, since you can admit that I wasn't actually addicted to the Laudanum, I can admit that it might have been heading in that direction if I hadn't been so careful and worried myself. I told you back then that I chose the potion I chose BECAUSE I didn't want to risk being controlled by anything; obviously being controlled by an addiction would be just as bad - if not worse - than being controlled by prescribed potions.

Also, I'm sorry, I didn't mean to throw the potion thing in your face. You are right, you use them for an important and specific reason that they help with, and you have gotten yourself to the lowest dose possible that still does the job. I love you no matter what, and should never have risked making you feel bad about this. That said, I was rather irate and not thinking clearly. Forgive me?

As for never taking it again, obviously it's not something I PLAN to take, but that said, I'm not going to make a promise on this because it seems to me that at least having the option open - and not having to worry about hiding it - might actually help me in the long run if I need to try to talk sense into Orion. He seemed much more willing to be open and honest once he knew I was not judging him because I was doing it too.
I dunno, maybe we should BOTH (or all three if Oliver is interested) give it a go with Orion so that he REALLY hashes everything out with us. You know, make him feel comfortable while still having a chance to express our concerns.

By the way, that moment when I said to him that I was worried because Opium is really addicting, despite not thinking TOO closely on it at that moment, I was forming that opinion on my experience with Laudanum - and actually cocaine too - and how close I did come to addiction before deciding that the risk just wasn't worth it. I DO understand his point in that if he takes it only occasionally and is responsible about it, it's not such a big concern. It's just that if he really has been doing it for a while now, then... who's to say that he's not already addicted and doesn't realize it?

On the one hand, I want to support him, but on the other, I want to lock him in a dragon guarded tower until I know for certain that he's not addicted - or has broken the habit if he is.

GODS! I now seriously have to wonder if my parents realized what I was doing after the final battle, and if so, how they coped with the reality that I was doing a terrible drug and could potentially ruin my life because of it. I should go hug my mother and give her a BIG bouquet of flowers!

In any case, as you suggested, after you wrote your email, and after Oliver and I had finished our chocolate and biscuits while chatting about my past drug usage, we all went to bed to snuggle and kiss. But before I actually got into bed, I got on my knees next to our bed and held your hand while I sang a song in Japanese called Gomen ne (by a group called Tiara), that is literally called I'm sorry, and even though the majority of it is in Japanese, the words I'm sorry are repeated in English a bunch of times.

I even had the music playing. The song itself is gorgeously heartbreaking and says a lot of things that don't apply to our situation, but I don't think you understood anything other than my intention, which was to apologize for being a stubborn prat. Unfortunately, that's just my nature, sigh.

Oliver looked amused that I was always so over the top - even in my apologies - making a production out of everything. But maybe he was also relieved that we were able to get past something that COULD have been too serious to forgive. I think he might actually be afraid of what would happen to him if WE get along with HIM smashingly, but ultimately stop being in love with each other. Then he really WOULD be caught in the middle.

Lucky for him I would give up my own life before giving you up, so that's really not likely.

After I finished singing, and you quietly listened to the whole song even though you were impatient to get to the kisses, you pulled me into bed on top of you and gave me a demanding kiss.

"I'm sorry too, I'm just so bloody worried about you - AND Orion!" You exclaimed before giving me another kiss.

"I know," I murmured. "Me too."

"And we're giving Ollie the worst start to his birthday!"

"Well then, let's make it better for him," I suggested with a smoky grin.

"Mmmhmm," you moaned in agreement, pulling Oliver into the cuddle puddle with us so that we could focus on worshiping every millimeter of his body with our mouths and hands.

Thank MERLIN we had plenty of time to take a nap before the beginning of his birthday party with the ENTIRE circle.

"I said I DIDN'T WANT anything special!" Oliver protested with a becoming blush when he realized that we had a lot of people at the Manor specifically for him.

"Which is why we're having a regular old ordinary circle dinner," you informed him.

"The guests can say happy birthday or not, it's up to them," I added.

"Except for when we bring out the cake and sing happy birthday to you," you finished with a mischievous grin.

Oliver shook his head in defeat and gave us both a sweet kiss.

There was about an hour or so of mingling and eating the delicious food catered by Café Exquis, and then I insisted on starting the dancing. However, I wasn't doing the first dance, I had YOU and Oliver perform the first dance as I sang to the music of Smash Mouth's version of I'm a Believer - with my own little spin on it.

"Oliver, this is how both Harry and I feel about you:

"Then we saw your face, now we're Believers, not a trace of doubt in our minds, we're in love, ooo-ooo, and we're believers, we couldn't leave you if we tried."

He let me finish out the song, but then he caught my hand and yanked me into the two of you so that he could hug us both, and then give us kisses. The light blush on his face let us know that he was so not used to these romantic gestures, but that he wasn't going to protest.

"So, this was the thing that both of you kept referring to - not so subtly," he accused, then huffed a laugh. "I should've known!"

We kissed him and spent the rest of the evening letting him know with a thousand tiny gestures just how much we love him.

My favorite part might just be when I looked over at Cassie and Parker at one point, and realized that they were watching their dad dance with us with teary eyed pride. You know, I tend to forget that they lived through it too, but times like these remind me that they are used to seeing their dad struggling to maintain a happy façade. I can only hope that we keep on making Oliver happy for the rest of our lives.

Oh it's gonna be, hot like fire, I'm gonna take you, take you higher, oh you, you can't resist (when me and you), kiss kiss and kiss and kiss and kiss, Draco
Chapter 190

Chapter by ladyroxanne21

Chapter Summary

Harry is back to the grind and Draco drops in on the Ministry.

Monday November 13, 2017

Sigh,

Back to the weekly grind. After a long weekend, a long wonderful weekend. Wait, the weekend also included a massive fight that had to be broken up by our beautiful peacekeeper, fine then a long terrible weekend. But also the weekend included celebrating one of my love's birthdays where we had a wonderful circle dinner and so much shagging. And I also had a beautiful conversation with Cassie that was bittersweet.

Fine, back to the weekly grind after a long, wonderful, terrible, celebratory, bittersweet weekend. I think that covers all of it.

Draco, even without the beautiful musical apology, I had already forgiven you. And I really did love the song, even not understanding the words, I could listen to you sing all day. I think when I get that rage filled, it's not that I want to punish you, but that I never ever want it to happen again. You didn't see your eyes during that time, the sparkle was gone, you were just going through the motions, I missed you. I'm not as much angry as I am terrified. You're too important for me to lose in any fashion.

-Draco love, I agree with Harry that you are too important for either of us to lose. -Oliver

Even though he's right here, I won't speak for Oliver, but I am not comfortable doing Opium with or without my son. I am very uncomfortable with YOU doing Opium with or without anyone. I understand why you think it's a legitimate idea, but I don't like it. I can see maybe, MAYBE being willing to do the "just a bit of pot" he assured me it was (the liar) but that's about it.

Ooooh, I would be willing to order in some amazing wine and get utterly smashed with him. Do you think that would do the trick? Maybe from that vineyard in Tuscany we like so much? I think, just to be safe, I should probably order a case of it anyway. Yeah, good call. Remind me to ask Pippa to order some please?

Well the party was fun, and even though Ollie didn't want something big, I hope he enjoyed our circle dinner that may or may not have included a birthday cake and everyone telling him Happy Birthday. And that the pre-party bed festivities and the post-party bed festivities showed our sweet Ollie just how much we desire, cherish, and worship him.

-It did, I love you both. -Oliver

Oliver Wood, you are too cute for words and I want to throw you down for post-post-party festivities. Pre-week festivities? Whatever, I want to shag you senseless for how fit and adorable you are!
I selfishly gave Oliver a birthday present of something I really wanted for myself for a gift I bought for Draco previously. I hope you aren't upset at being given a gift that is going to technically be given to someone else. I've hated every moment since we've been together, once we've decided we're going to be a family, that yours and Cassie's and Parker's hands haven't been on the family clock. Normally I wouldn't dream of giving a birthday gift that you couldn't have and hold and was solely for you, but I hope seeing those three engraved hands being added to our beautiful clock was as important to you as creating them was to me.

Alright, I've been half talking with Oliver (who woke up AFTER I started typing if you're wondering!) and typing out the rambly conversation. I think I'm going to stop typing and just turn on the dictation device.

Harry speaking; "While you two were dancing later in the evening as I went to feed the babies, Cassie came over to find and talk with me. She actually thanked me, thanked US, for giving her dad a family. A big, loud, crazy, family. She wanted me to know that both she and Parker were thankful that he has found love and happiness."

Oliver making snuffling noises

"I just couldn't let her keep thanking me when I feel like the lucky one who needs to be thankful. Thankful he fell in love with us too. Thankful his kids see how good this relationship is and are happy for him. Thankful for the two children he brought into our lives that I already love fiercely.

"And that's when Cassie chuckled a bit and said: 'it's been nice of you to include us with the rest of your kids. It can't be easy, loving another man's children.'"

"Yeah, I can't believe she said that. I immediately told her in no uncertain terms that I love HER and I love PARKER and would regardless of parentage. But that Oliver's parenting of them was wonderful and they are truly wonderful kids that I care so much about."

More snuffling from Oliver. "Thank you Harry, it's good to know, I always thought I was bollocking the parenting thing."

"Oliver! You have been an awesome father to your original two children, and you've been a hands-on, amazing dad to ours. Especially the feisty foursome who live for spending time with you in the stables and the babies who will literally NEVER remember a time when you weren't one of their dads.

"I did have to argue with Cassie just a little bit about including her as one of our own now. 'Cassie,' I said, 'I met you before either of your fathers met you. I loved you the moment you came to Unity House. You, Della, and Viona were this perfect sweet trio of babies. We adopted Viona, Draco's parents adopted Della, and can I tell you a secret? If you hadn't been adopted by your dads the week that you were, you would have ended up here by now regardless.'

"She asked me what I meant and I told her something I'd never told anyone before. I never told Draco. I've not told Oliver. Up until this moment only Cassie and myself know this, but I had already started paperwork to adopt Cassie when Oliver and Edmond put in their request. I couldn't stand the idea of her being split up from Della and Vivi. I hated the idea of not being able to see her grow up. I loved her so much, more so than any of the other Unity Kids, I was so happy when she was adopted but also completely brokenhearted."

Oliver in a shaky voice; "What did you just say?"

Harry takes a deep breath. "Oliver, I had every intention of adopting Cassie, I have loved her since the moment I met her. It was just the timing that kept me from being her Dad from the beginning."

Dictation device sends the email when Oliver tackles Harry to the ground, kissing him senseless and accidentally knocking the computer off the coffee table

Monday November 13th

Mis dos corazones,

Oliver, I would address this to you, since as far as I know, all you're doing is giving private lessons after lunch/dinner, but since Harry is going to receive it and more than likely read it TO you, I'll address it to him.

Harry, I know that you were probably looking forward to having a picnic or something with me and Oliver today, but I personally was not in the castle.

See, I went into the Ministry today to see how a number of things were doing. The first stop me and Morgana made was to see how my class - or what WOULD be my class if I was 'back from maternity leave' - was doing. They're... doing okay, I suppose. Oleg is not going as rough on them as I would, since he spent so many years teaching children and is using a lot of the same techniques. So, because of that, they're learning, and in some opinions, learning at a more realistic rate.

But I wouldn't trust a single one of them to have my back in a raid.

Oleg informed me in Russian that there was one student in particular that complained far more than he worked, and that Oleg sincerely wishes that he could just hex the man into oblivion. I roared with laughter and wished him good luck with that.

Then I wandered to my office to look over the files pertaining to the raid that Robards conducted about 2 weeks ago. I had to laugh as it's clear that the entire department is lost without me. The raid was technically a success, but it seems that no one knew what the others were doing half the time, and so, two of the half dozen criminals they were after escaped.

As I was in my office having a good laugh, I could hear voices in the hall.

"But there must be SOMETHING you can do!"

"I'm sorry, ma'am, but -" Robards cut himself short as he passed by my office and saw me sitting at my desk and chuckling as I stroked Morgana's soft hair. "Oi, Malfoy! Got a minute?"

"Why not?" I asked with an amused grin.

He stepped into my office with the woman who was with him. "This is Jennifer Morgan. She's about three years out of Hogwarts and was a Gryffindor -"

"What does THAT have to do with anything?!" Ms. Morgan demanded grumpily.

"I'm just introducing you," Robards stated before continuing. "As I was saying, Ms. Morgan has a note with her that was found in her grandmother's Will - that basically says that her grandmother had a special something specifically for her, but that it's in a secret hiding place. Ms. Morgan has no idea where the place might be and has come here hoping that a detective might be able to uncover it for her."
"Ah," I stated in understanding, holding my hand out. Robards took a moment to close the door before gesturing for Ms. Morgan to hand it over.

"Is this a detective?" She asked him dubiously.

"No," I replied honestly. "Not a detective nor an official Auror, but I MIGHT be your best hope."

"Oh?" She asked, more curious than suspicious now. She took a long look at Morgana, who was babbling happily in baby language and gnawing on a very hard biscuit.

Robards smiled at Morgana. "She's gotten bigger since I last saw her."

"Growing like a weed," I murmured before giving her a kiss on the cheek. "Her brothers are also getting bigger and the three of them are practically drinking poor Harry dry!"

"I still think he's barmy for doing that voluntarily, but I can see that he's keeping them healthy and happy," Robards said, wiggling his fingers in front of Morgana's nose. She predictably stopped babbling to glare at him. The entire room grew dimmer until he was smart enough to pull his hand back and shake his head with a huff of laughter. "Still doesn't like others, I see."

Ms. Morgan finally came to a decision and held out the paper for me. I took it and read it over.

My darling Jennifer, when I was a little girl, my mother gave me a powerful family heirloom that I cherished and used until I married a man who would have sold it for a down payment on a house - if given a chance. So I hid it in a secret place, intending to give it to your mother when she was out on her own, only she never left the house, got pregnant with you, and died in childbirth whilst we were traveling on business. I never wanted to give it to you until you were settled down and ready for it, but sadly, my time seems to be nearing and I don't think I'll have a chance to see you in person before I die. Just know that this heirloom is hidden in my house - which I am also leaving to you, and that you'll find it when you most need it.

Your loving grandmother

I looked up at Ms. Morgan almost reflexively.

"I've looked EVERYWHERE!" She cried out desperately. "I've even demolished walls and searched under floors!"

"That seems frustrating," I murmured, feeling inappropriately amused.

"And if I don't find it soon, I'll be forced to sell it along with the house! If it's so important to my grandmother to pass it down rather than sell it, I would feel like I'm betraying her, but I don't know where else to look! Don't you Aurors have a spell or something to find missing things?"

Rather than answer, I closed my eyes and placed my hand on the note that was now on my desk. It took a moment, but a vision came.

"I see an elderly woman, presumably your grandmother. She has very, erm... well lived in skin but her hair is still mostly black with lots of silver strands mixed in. She's wearing a lacy cream colored shawl that looks to be an antique - possibly another heirloom. After she finishes writing this note, she takes a small crystal ball into her hands and looks at it, I'm not sure what she sees, but it makes her smile. A moment later, she casts a spell - no, a password - at the ceiling, which makes me look around the room she's in. It's small and circular and mostly empty except for an antique desk, an old loom with a bit of something still in progress, and a gorgeous hand-carved wooden rocking chair that has a... Embroidery circle? on it."
"After saying the password, which seems to be Matilda and Jennifer, a small cabinet appears in the slanted ceiling. The cabinet opens to reveal an impressive emerald and gold necklace - which seems to be shining with power. She takes the necklace out of the cabinet, places it in the center of her shawl - along with the crystal ball - wraps it up tenderly, caressing it like a sleeping baby, and then places it back in the cabinet. The cabinet automatically seals itself shut again and seemingly disappears from existence."

I opened my eyes just after the grandmother winked at me, sort of spooking me, and slid the paper back over to Ms. Morgan. "That's all I can tell you, if it's not enough, then I'm sorry."

Ms. Morgan was staring at me in open mouthed shock. "She hid it in THE ATTIC?!?! Why in the ever loving hell would she hide it in there, there's nothing but worn out old junk in there! Or, well, there was before I had to sell it all."

I shrugged because I couldn't answer that question.

Still sounding rather aggravated, Ms. Morgan took the note back from my desk and exhaled a sigh before giving me a decently genuine smile. "Thank you, erm…"

"Draco Malfoy," I stated, holding my hand out so that she could shake it.

"MALFOY!!!" Ms. Morgan blurted out incredulously.

"Is there a problem?" I asked with a light glare as I pulled my hand back and patted Morgana on the back.

"Ah, erm, well, not so much a problem, but… I, er, I THINK that my grandmother's grandmum received the necklace as a failed engagement present from a Malfoy. I just... wasn't expecting that it would be a Malfoy that helped me find it. Honestly, I didn't know I was looking for a necklace, just that gran told me the story of it a couple of times when I was just a little girl."

Since she seemed to be chatty, I decided to satisfy my curiosity. "And who's Matilda?"

"That's my mum who died having me," Ms. Morgan replied a bit sadly. Sighing, she slipped the paper in her purse. "I'm going to go and see if anything you said was true, but I suspect it is based on the fact that you were able to describe things - such as her shawl and embroidery - that I recognize that you couldn't have known."

"Good luck," I murmured.

After she left, Robards asked what I was doing, and when I explained that I was going through the record of his last raid, he groaned and pulled at his hair. "NO ONE seems to have a clue what to do on a raid without you! I used to handle every aspect of the raid myself, but after having you run things so smoothly, not to mention incorporating all that gobbledygook tech of yours, I - BAH! That's not even MENTIONING the raid before that!"

"What happened on that one?" I asked, hoping it wasn't anything TOO serious.

"The criminals somehow spotted us coming and mostly escaped except for a few that stayed behind to cover the others. They managed to injure a few of our rookies with minor hexes before ALSO escaping. I felt like it was my first day of Auror training and I was suddenly thrust into a duel with the Dark Lord!" He lamented in clear frustration.

I laughed outright. "I was there for that, and you would have probably been fine. It was actually boring as fuck, had not the fate of the entire Wizarding World been on the line, not to mention my actual life. Harry took him out with a buggering EXPELLIARMUS - for Merlin's sake!"

"Any chance you plan to come back?" Robards asked with a hopeful grin.

I smoothed my hand over Morgana's hair and sighed. "I honestly don't know WHAT I want to do. Kingsley just stepped down and he appointed Hermione temporary Minister for Magic, but I always assumed that I'd run when the time came."

Robards stroked his chin speculatively. "Hmm... If you ran the entire Ministry the way you run a raid, we'd be in ship shape in no time!"

"There is that," I acknowledged with a soft chuckle.

"But..." Robards began and then hesitated.

"But what?" I asked warily.

"But the REASON you only ever worked on raids is that you wanted to have limited part time hours so that you could be with your family as much as possible. Considering that you now have more kids than ever, I'm not certain you'd be happy in the Minister's office all day."

I sighed heavily. "There is that as well."

In a rare show of friendliness, Robards put his hand on my arm. "Well, if you DO run, just know that you'll have my support."

"Thanks, but you probably best move your hand before my daughter blows it up."

He saw that she was indeed glaring at him again and quickly pulled his hand back.

After he left my office, I finished up and left it as well, making my last stop of the day. The Minister's office.

"Hiya Draco!"

"How's life now that you're the temporary Minister for Magic?" I asked.

"Oh just wonderful!" Hermione exclaimed, and she wasn't being sarcastic either. "I feel like I'm being challenged in the best possible way!"

"So... You want to KEEP the job?" I asked with deep interest.

She stood up, walked over, and hugged me before giving me a kiss on the cheek. "I do, but even MORE than remaining Minister because no one else wants the job, I want to KNOW that I was the one that the Wizengamot felt was the best fit, and if I'm NOT the best fit, I'd rather the Wizengamot vote for someone else."

"So... you're saying you want me to run?" I stated more than asked.

"Definitely!" She cheered, still hugging me.

I gave her a kiss on her cheek. "Thanks luv! That's what I really needed to know."

"Give Harry, Oliver, and the kids love from me," she bade.
"I will," I promised.

"Before you go, this song that just came on is one of my favorites - care to dance?" She asked.

"Always!" I exclaimed with a grin. We flowed around her office for the duration of the song, having fun and laughing at the fact that we kept tripping over files and things (she was in the middle of reorganizing). When the song ended, I gave her a kiss goodbye, which she deepened for a few seconds before pulling back and letting me use her floo.

So... I guess I'm going to run for Minister after all. I'm going to have to ask Pippa what to do next, because I suspect that running a campaign is going to be more her forte than mine. In any case, I habitually flooed into our suite in the Manor, and now that I've written this email, I'm going to go chat with Pippa, and then I'll be flooing back to the castle. See you both soon!

Love and passion,
Draco
Chapter 191

Chapter Summary

Harry and Oliver are supportive ^_^

Tuesday November 14, 2017

My Pride!

Malfoy for Minister 2k17! Or will the election be in 2018? I should probably be more aware of when elections are happening in the world huh? Honestly, I don't know if Pippa was one of the best or worst people to ever come into my life. I would be lost without her. And that's where I wonder if she's the best or worst. Am I completely useless and therefor she was necessary or have I become more useless because I don't actually need to manage any of the events happening in my life?

I suppose at this point it doesn't really matter, I refuse to live without her and if that makes me ridiculously codependent and a barely functioning adult? So be it.

I think I do fairly well keeping the things straight that I need to (as long as I don't have to keep myself straight amirite?) but there's no way I could manage as much as she can. I get myself to and from my classes, I have been doing adequate prep time. I have my Head of House hours. I spend time with my family. But Pippa keeps the lives of all ... twenty-three? of us running smoothly.

Not really twenty-three of us I guess. The entire crew that's already graduated and/or aged out lives outside of Pippa's control. Although I'm pretty sure all of them but River have their own assistants, and I think Eris and Hazel share their assistant as they share their business. So what is that? Fifteen of us? Plus Pippa's actual life with her own child.

Then again, Sirius has become Super-Dad! He takes care of Pierre and Leon every day while Leah and Pippa run our lives. I love and adore my babies, but I was not built to be a stay at home dad of tiny ones. Not like you and Sirius. I can only sing so many nonsense songs and count so many tiny toes and change so many nappies before I am about ready to lose my mind. I want to run and climb and play and dirtbike. But you and Sirius, the baby whisperers ...

Oh and Ollie, I am including you in that previous statement. I don't think I'd have survived these past months without you being willing to wake up in the middle of the night to help with the babies. Even if you didn't change a single nappy (and you have changed a lot) and even if you never sang or rocked a baby to sleep (we all know you will be rocking Gabe to sleep until he goes to Hogwarts!) it's just been nice having an adult to talk with while I'm up feeding a set of almost triplets.

Don't you worry your beautiful head Draco, we've got the homefront covered while you go run for Minister! Morgana has finally accepted Ollie into her very small list of people she loves, Gabe likes him more than either of us, and Dylan's such an easygoing baby that I sometimes forget there are three of them.

For now ... but with Morgana and Dylan crawling, Gabe probably not far behind - and you know they'll be running before long - I have a feeling we may need a second Pippa if you're going to steal the first and best Pippa from us to help run your campaign.

I don't know why you're having a campaign at all honestly. I should go before the Wizengamot, say "Vote for Draco or I'll hit all of you with an Expelliarmus" and that should be that.

Ooooh we should make shirts!

Supportively,
Harry

Wednesday November 15th
My joie de vivre,

That includes you both. Here's what I know about the Election so far: the current Minister can appoint a temporary replacement which the Wizengamot can vote on to confirm - OR (if the current Minister is deemed incapable or dies) the Wizengamot appoints a temporary Minister. The important part is that once a temporary Minister is appointed, should no one want to run against them, they are confirmed as Minister and only need to be 'reelected' once every seven years. Kingsley remained Minister for as long as he did simply because no one ever wanted to run against him. Except that one time when he was the winner anyway.

That said, once there are at least two candidates - as there are now - THEN the election needs to be held. Hence there not being a set date for this election. It's officially SUPPOSED to be a public election, and I suppose that the public does get a chance to vote on the Candidates, but with how involved the Wizengamot is in the entire process, it wouldn't be too off the mark to suggest that the Wizengamot is the authority that is actually in charge of voting in the next Minister. Kingsley tried his best to 'fix' things so that the entire process is more fair, but it remains to be seen how well he managed.

Thus, the current status is that Hermione is temporary Minister for Magic and the Wizengamot is arranging for an official election to be held in January. Had I not definitively decided to run until January, the election would have been set for the end of the month with our campaigning to start on the first - unless I chose not to, in which case, the election would have been canceled and Hermione confirmed. Since I have decided to run more than a month before the deadline, they're holding the election on January 5th so that the new year starts out definitively with a new Minister.

Now before you go panicking over the short timeframe for campaigning - Harry - the REASON they give such a short timeframe is because they want the campaign to be short and to the point. Thus we will both be allowed to have posters placed anywhere we like in the magical areas such as Diagon and Hogsmeade. Individual people may place signs of support in their yards - or wear shirts of support on their bodies. We will each have an official statement regarding our stances and goals as Minister posted in a few public places and widely available on the magi-web. Other than that, the only REAL hardship for the election will be the live debate to be held on the night of Thursday January 4th.

I am actually quite nervous about that, because it'll give the 'regular people' (so to speak) the chance to ask questions and form their votes based off the answers. What if during that debate, I manage to SAY everything 'right' but my attitude or TONE comes across as 'wrong' and no one likes me?

But I can't think about that right now or I won't be able to sleep until about January 7th!
In any case, don't worry so much about Pippa, aside from her doing her job of attending to me as I do things such as come up with my platform, she will be every bit as much in charge of our lives as she ever is. But speaking of my platform, I'm currently in my office at the Ministry with Pippa (and Morgana, of course) going over everything we can think of that I should have a stance on. She has also already ordered my posters (and probably some shirts, hahaha) and the only thing I will require my family to do in a show of support for me will be to help me go around and put them up. Pippa's working on a list of places to have them for the optimal exposure.

So don't make any plans for the weekend of December 1st through the 3rd!

In any case, tea is over now, so I'd better get back to it.

Your almost certainly insane husband and fiancé,
Draco
Chapter 192

Chapter Summary

It's a welcome home party.

Friday November 18, 2017

Malfoy for Minister 2k18!!

Alright, now that I have an official date I have the official chant! Or at least the official chant that I am going to use liberally and obnoxiously for the next month and a half. You Are Welcome!

I understand your worry about the debate, knowing that personal opinion is a huge part of winning over the public. You could say all the right things and have the best of ideas, but if your tone is read wrong or any small thing happens it could win or lose the election for you. But keep in mind that is true for Hermione as well. Perhaps you'll put on your Malfoy Mask and people will think you're a snob (just an example this is not me calling you a snob) (Also, you are often a snob) (side note: I think it's really hot when you're a snob) (secondary side note: I often want to jump you when you're being a snob). What was I saying?

Oh right, Hermione could give off a tone or a feeling that could make the public feeling off about her as well. I love Hermione, but maybe she'll come off as a know-it-all. Or maybe they'll see she's never been involved in the political process and feel she's unqualified. I'm not saying these things about you or her as any sort of a negative thought from me, but these are things that neither one of you can really do anything about. You have no control over how others perceive you, so you should be focusing on the things you DO have control over. Like your policies and plans for the future.

And keep in mind, this is important but worst case scenario is you losing the election and 'Mione becoming Minister. Obviously we want you to win, but it's not like I'm terrified of the direction the world will go with Hermione running the show.

So, obviously you and Pippa have things well in hand, but I've been thinking about this near constantly since you announced you were running. Honestly, I've been thinking about it almost as much since you announced Kings was stepping down. I have some thoughts. First of all, yes we will put up posters in public places. But keep in mind that we have MANY businesses that will be displaying their support in the front of their stores and possibly inside their businesses as well. River's Song, Zaire's Langa, Cafe Exquis, Hog's Head, etcetera. I would normally say we could count on WWW to promote your campaign as well but I think 'Mione has the edge on that one!

This awesome clothing design company also said they'd love to work on some campaign t-shirts. Not sure if you've heard of them; Hazeris? T-shirts aren't usually their thing but they may be willing to make an exception for you.

So, I have come up with some ideas for shirts and-or posters. First is a t-shirt for me and the kids to all wear, "Malfoys for Malfoy - If he can handle all of us he can handle anything" possibly with all of the kids' names on the back. And then a series of posters that talk about the different projects you've promoted. "From the Wizard who brought you Wizarding Rituals at Hogwarts: Malfoy for
I personally had a shirt made ages ago when you brought up the idea, I just can finally wear it. "Harry Potter: Knowing Draco Malfoy is the right Wizard for the job since 1999" and Ollie wanted to join in and had a "Oliver Wood: Knowing Draco Malfoy is the right Wizard for the job est. 2017"

We love you so much.

Oh! In all the hullabaloo with the election I completely forgot! I know who's adopting Vani! I knew a while ago when Tabitha called me shortly after movie night to ask me some questions since they named me as a character reference. But I just found out they were approved! You will NEVER believe who it is. Any guesses?

It's Delphini ... and Sebastian! Yes, you are going to be Vanessa's Uncle! I guess hearing you talk about Vani so much, having her around the Manor and family events, really connected Del to the little girl. Del also thought having a "committed partner" could make the adoption go smoother, so while they are not a couple romantically, Sebastian and Del are going to continue parenting their children together!

Isn't it amazing?

Don't spill the news to your family! I don't know if Tabitha's had a chance to let them know they've been approved.

Yours,
Harry Malfoy: Letting Draco Malfoy run his world since 1999

Sunday November 19th
My loves,

Today was simply lovely, wasn't it? My parents seemed like they weren't quite sure how to wrap their heads around Sebastian's choices - I'm certain they think he should just get married if he's going to be a committed co-parent - but they were doing their best to accept things. My father especially seemed like he can't quite understand how Sebastian being an Ace isn't some phase he'd have grown out of by now.

But since my brother has ALWAYS been an utter weirdo (and I mean this in a good way), everyone else is basically taking this decision in stride. The only voice of minor dissension is Della, who still thinks that our brother having ANY sort of relationship with her doppelgänger is a bit incestuous. She's not entirely wrong, but since there is no actual romance or sex involved, it's really no one's business what they want to call each other.

I got a chance to talk to Delphini and ask her why she wanted to adopt Vani, and she told me that once she got a chance to meet and talk to Vanessa, Delphini couldn't help but think back to her own childhood full of people trying to hurt and murder her. Apparently, she was overcome by a fierce urge to protect Vani and ensure that the girl was NEVER in such a situation again.

Plus, there's the fact that both Delphini and Sebastian know sign language, and that Sebastian is always calm and unflappable. This means that even if Vani is having a bad day and experiencing rage magic, Sebastian will be able to stand his ground and help her get through it. Honestly, they're the best parents for her - aside from us.

But the day DID hold one surprise for us...

Viper and Tiger brought THEIR Oliver. It seems that in their world, Oliver never got married or had/adopted kids. He's still an internationally famous Quidditch star, and also a shameless playboy. He actually spotted Viper at one of his games recently and decided to invite him to stay for a chat after the game was over. The three of them got caught up and it was mentioned that Viper's older four kids live in a different world; a world in which we happened to be dating/engaged to his counterpart. Well, their Oliver simply refused to believe such a thing was possible (another world) until he saw it with his own eyes.

I actually find it hilarious because OUR Oliver had spent the morning in the stables with our Feisty Foursome and hadn't joined us yet - despite the fact that it was late enough for even ME to be up and ready to participate in the day. So when we saw Oliver, we assumed that he was OUR Oliver, and you were so happy to see him standing there next to our other selves (which you assumed that he still hasn't mastered the trick of telling us apart by checking for our tattoos, hahaha), that you flung your arms around him, exclaimed: "Ollie, I feel like it's been AGES since I last saw you!" (which was this morning when you two had a shag before getting out of bed), and gave him quite a thorough kiss.

Tiger was smirking mischievously and Viper was straight up roaring with laughter as their Oliver was first too stunned to do anything, and then a little freaked out since he slowly waved his arms around until they gathered together to gently push you away. I had parsed what was going on, but decided to get in a kiss of my own before the situation was explained. Oliver was just as flustered and perhaps a little less freaked out, because he seemed to relax just a bit as I kissed him.

"BLIMEY!!! NOW THERE'S TWO OF ME!!!" Our Oliver cried out as he came up to our group and noticed what was going on. Then he yanked me away from the other Oliver. "Oi!!! Make sure you're kissing the right man!"

I let him pull me into a kiss even as you squeaked with alarm: "I'm so sorry, Ollie! I didn't realize! I didn't MEAN to kiss your doppelgänger!" You threw your arms around us as Oliver turned his face to you.

"You mean YOU kissed him too?" Our Oliver asked with a bit of a pout, looking like a puppy that had just been kicked for no reason.

"I didn't mean it! You KNOW how big a deal kisses are to me, I wouldn't have done it if I'd known!" You assured him, and this seemed to pacify him as he softened and kissed you.

"This is... just plain WEIRD!" The other Oliver blurted out as he stared at his other self.

Parker was calling out to us as he ran over: "Hey dad! WHOA! That's weird! There are now two dads! Hmm... both are with a Draco and Harry, but this one is being clingy and kissy, so he must be ours - Hey dad! Just a heads up, after cake, Cassie and I are heading over to the Adventure Park for a few hours. They've got a new adventure called Cave of the Inferi that we want to try out."

This pulled Oliver from his rather thorough kiss with you. "They WHAT?!"

"Ooo..." I murmured in speculation. "I wonder if that could be more effective than the Crystal Room when I'm upset."
"But Inferi are DANGEROUS!" Oliver protested.

"Don't worry so much, dad!" Parker said with a dismissive flap of his hand. "They've got LOADS of security precautions!"

"Er..." Oliver droned uncertainly.

"It's true," I assured him. "I'd be continually sued to the last Galleon in my vault if the Adventure Park didn't have every possible safety charm on their adventures."

Oliver sighed in defeat. "Well, I suppose that I can't exactly tell you not to go since you are both of age..."

"Bring us! Bring us!!!" Our Feisty Foursome chanted as they ran circles around all of us.

"NO!!!" You blurted out in horror. "You are DEFINITELY NOT going into a cave full of Inferi - safety charms or not!"

They immediately changed tactics and tugged on my arms as they begged: "Please Daddy/Papa Please!"

I stared them down imperiously. "I'm afraid I'm with your dad on this one."

"But we could EASILY kick their butts!" They protested, getting into a bit of a sparring match to remind us that they've been trained to kick butt. Even Atreyu was looking like he'd made a lot of progress in his Krav Maga.

I softened and looked at you.

"NO! Stop being such a softie, Draco! Our tiny little babies ARE NOT going into a cave full of Inferi!!" You insisted with a firm expression and your arms crossed over your chest.

"You heard him," I said to our kids even as I looked away because they were now giving me those pouty faces that I just can't resist.

Thankfully, you decided to herd them away from me and distract them with cake or something before they could make me crack. This gave the other Oliver an opening to chat with our Oliver. It seems that they were both dying of curiosity about each other's lives and wandered off to talk in private.

Which left me all alone with our doppelgängers, who were more than happy to dance and flirt with me. I reminded them that we're not playing until Oliver feels comfortable with that - and that he's not likely to come around for a while yet - so they stopped hinting at a playdate and simply enjoyed the flirting and innuendo.

I have to admit that my favorite part of the day was when Delphini introduced Vanessa to Viper and Tiger and told her that THEY were her grandpas now. Vani's eyes practically bulged out of her face as she hugged Tiger and signed how happy she was that she was going to have such a good grandfather. She looked over at me, and then added that if he was ANYTHING like me, (and Viper like you, Harry), then she definitely had the best grandpa ever.

Poor Tiger looked like he honestly didn't know how to handle this - a complete stranger to him suddenly hugging him and calling him the best grandpa ever. He was definitely flustered, hahaha! However, Viper squatted down and had a long sign chat with her, promising to teach her how to defend herself whenever he was in this world, and that he could teach her things everyone else didn't like to think about. It got a bit graphic, but rather than be repulsed, Vani seemed fascinated.

But since I was the only one not really doing anything, I volunteered to lay the babies down for their nap, and so, I had some time to write this. I should really sign off now and return to the welcome home party.

Love you with every beat of my heart,
Draco
Chapter 193

Chapter Summary

Harry is bored and Draco is convinced they're insane.

Monday November 20, 2017

Booooooooorrrrrreeeeeeeeed,

Is it just me or do Mondays have at least three or four extra hours wedged into the middle of the day?

Seriously, I went to breakfast in the Great Hall, I've set up some rough lesson plans for the week. I did two morning classes, going to lunch right after the second class. Went and found our Ollie for a quick .... completely mature and clothed discussion ... in the broom-shed during my free period. I snuck out to Hagrid's to visit the feisty foursome for a quick cuddle, chat, and to hear about their day. Then I went to my afternoon class.

It's not even dinner time yet, I've accomplished everything I need to accomplish in the day, and I am bored out of my mind.

I fed the babies during breakfast and lunches, I've even been pumping while writing this email. How is it not tomorrow already? Not that there's anything special I'm looking forward to tomorrow, but at least it won't be Monday.

Draco, I did try finding you so we could have all three of us in our "mid-day broom-shed discussion" but I guess you were home at the Manor. With Vani's upcoming adoption, she's going to be moving into the Manor with Sebastian and Del. I wasn't sure where they were planning on raising the kids, but I guess Del didn't care and Sebastian reminded us all that Vani already feels comfortable at the Manor, so why try to introduce her to another new place?

Anyway, she had quite the wardrobe, schoolbooks, and miscellaneous special trinkets in the "spare room" she's been using when she stays over with Jaz. Not sure why we gave her a spare room to be honest, every time she's spent the night she's just used the room to get changed or to store things and ended up sleeping in Jazzie's room. But now she will have her own official bedroom at the Manor. A forever bedroom where she can store all of her things for the rest of her life if she so chooses.

It likely means that she'll have this safe space. A place to feel like she belongs. A fun room that she will get to decorate with love and glitter. And then she can spend quite a few of her nights in HER COUSIN Jaz's room - or Jaz can stay overnight in Vanessa's.

I really thought Jasmine would spend most of her nights with us at Hogwarts, and it's not like she hasn't spent nights there, but she's at the Manor more than I originally thought she would be. I thought she'd spend her days discovering every single secret Hogwarts has to offer. And if she had never met Vani, that may have been the case. I get it though, when you meet your person everything changes.
It's funny though, both of MY people I met them YEARS before realizing they were my people. And oddly enough the one I really got along with was the one it took me twenty-six years to realize his place in my life. The one I fought with nonstop, that one only took a little over seven years to find our true relationship.

Oh, I've been writing for a while, I've probably passed a lot of time already!

Seven minutes. What in the hell? Okay, I think I need to hunt one of you down. Oh! Since Draco seems to think it's adorable to marmoset his way into my classes, maybe it's time Ollie gets to meet my foxy little friend.

See you soon ;)
Harry

Thursday November 23rd
My dearest Harry and Oliver,

We. Are. Certifiable!

How can I tell? Well, usually when someone says: "Hey Harry, it's been a while since we've really hung out, so Donna wants to know if you'll come with us to America for Thanksgiving at her parents house?" The sane response is: "I'd love to Dudley, unfortunately, I'm teaching class that day." But not us. NO...

WE hear such an invitation, and immediately wonder: "Hmm... How exactly can we get away with dropping everything to go to America AND still manage to teach a decent class for the day?"

Simple, we bring your class with us!

But here's the insane part, Minnesota is only 6 hours behind us, and so, arriving there via a super special Portkey AT NOON, means that we're leaving the castle here at 6 PM - which is AFTER your classes for the day. In fact, by the time you managed to get permission from every student who was actually in your classes today's parent, it was basically time to leave. Which the good part at the very least is that it coincides with dinner, and so, the students will be arriving in America hungry and ready to eat, hahaha!

Good thing that we not only warned the Cullens to expect a lot of extra guests, but ALSO had the good sense to send Muffy on ahead with some extra turkeys and things to be made to feed this crowd we're bringing with us.

But now that I've wasted the last of the time I had before leaving by writing this, I should really sign off and get going before I miss the portkey.

I love you, you absolute lunatic, and Oliver, I love you for being willing to go along with us in our respective lunacy, hahaha,
Draco
Friday November 24, 2017

Never Again!

I say that now, but I suppose when the time comes to do it again, I will have already forgotten this. But maybe I will go back and reread this email to remind myself to never put us in this position again.

I'm being ridiculous I know. Nothing terrible happened, we all had fun, and I think my classes really did learn something. But I am so exhausted and drained from yesterday that I think after classes today, I'm going to go to bed and just sleep all the way through to Monday morning. Except I can't because tomorrow is the big November birthdays party at the Burrow. Fred II, Staci, and Paige are our guests of honor. And our Ollie obviously, although he had his own individual party, so it won't be emphasized the way it would have been without the party.

I can't believe we thought bringing 48 Wizard-Born students on an international portkey with only a few hours notice to attend a big family dinner was a good idea. And then there was the whole ... we practically have 48 of our own children to bring with! Alright, I am exaggerating, but I don't think it's all that much of an exaggeration. ALL of our children wanted to come, you know how they love the Cullens, even the kids I thought would want to stay back decided to come with.

I think the fact that when River knew we were going to be in "his" country, he promised to bring Maha with and got a last minute flight to Minnesota from California. Normally she wouldn't have been allowed to fly this late into her pregnancy, but a mild confundus meant no one at the airport questioned anything and if something had happened midair, all it would have taken would be for River to side-along apparate her to the closest hospital. Thankfully that wasn't the case and she got to Minnesota safe and sound.

Wasn't Maha positively glowing? And our sweet River, he really has turned out to be a wonderful young man and I'm pretty sure Maha would assure me that he's become a wonderful husband. He was so attentive and you could see he was pretty much glowing himself with pride in her. He's going to be the best father (besides you and Ollie) isn't he?

I just can't wait to meet the little peanut! You know, this grandfather thing is pretty awesome. And it's coming along like parenting; no matter how many we have, they are each their own little amazing person who I fall in love with the moment I know they're on their way. Or the moment I meet them, depending on how old they are when they come into our lives. And yes, I promise that includes the little one Orion's wife is carrying. I will NOT hold their parentage against them, which I'm sure you're both aware of since some of our babies had some rough parenting and it's never been an issue for me.

I think the Farrah inclusion was the only part of this recent trip across the pond that I wasn't happy about. But it's not like I could exactly tell Orion he couldn't bring his pregnant wife, ya know?
Ugh, could she hurry up and pop out this baby already so I could feel better about wishing she'd fall into a volcano?

Okay, mind on something else. My classes! It seems like the trip was a big hit! They got to meet some Americans, they got to participate in an American Muggle holiday, and they all got to see even more up close just exactly how large and chaotic our family is. I think my favorite part, besides seeing my River, was how my classes were able to see this beautiful blend of cultural differences and levels of magic combined with a whole lot of mutual respect, friendship, and love. How it doesn't matter to my cousin that his cousin and children are magical, he's completely Muggle, and his wife is a squib. How it doesn't matter to Donna's very magical family that she doesn't have magic.

The addition of some Muggle friends (who are obviously aware of magic) of the Cullens was really cool too. I did keep having to shoo away some of my students who kept nagging the Muggles to ask them questions. I'm glad they're curious but DAMN let the people eat their turkey in peace!

Oh! My next class is starting to trickle in. I am in for a nightmare of a class I'm sure. Only my Thursday classes came with yesterday and so far, my Friday students have been quite pissed off to find out they weren't invited. Despite my cries of never again, I think I may have to take each of my day's classes on their own adventure.

Merlin Help Me,
Harry

Tuesday December 5th
My adorations,

Harry, I know you don't like her, and Oliver I think you're trying to keep a neutral opinion about her but failing just a bit, but I'm quite concerned about Farrah. Seeing her at the Thanksgiving Party was alarming since she's not due until March or possibly April (apparently the timing of when she would have gotten pregnant puts her at the beginning of April, but her magi-determined date at her first couple of appointments put her due at mid March), but she LOOKS rather farther along. So I wondered if perhaps she's pregnant with twins or even triplets.

But no, according to Orion, the Healers swear up and down that she's most definitely carrying one baby, but mysteriously, that baby is apparently growing at an accelerated rate. I guess they hadn't quite picked it up sooner because there is always a little variation in how each baby grows between appointments, and the baby had always measured big but within allowable tolerances. Except NOW, the baby is bigger than even allowable tolerances for normal growth.

Meaning that the baby is currently measuring 32 out of 40 weeks - and quite healthy despite the oddity - when the baby should only be roughly 20 out of 40 weeks.

The good news is that just like River and Mahafsoun are expecting a girl, Orion reports that the Healers have determined that this little peanut is also a girl. Thus, we will soon have a few more granddaughters to balance out the grandsons, I call that excellent news indeed.

In any case, to be on the safe side, the Healers have recommended that Farrah be put on bed rest for the next couple of weeks so that she can hopefully avoid whatever it is that may or may not be affecting the baby's growth, and no one at all is quite sure if this means that she will still be pregnant the normal and expected amount of time (with an enormous baby), or if the baby will come when it reaches the equivalent of 40 weeks worth of growth - give or take a few weeks.
So, with her on bed rest, and Orion channeling Panicky Harry by blaming himself for having her live above his establishment, she's going to be staying in his room in the Manor. I dropped in to check on her while Orion was home today and I really must stress - Harry my love - that it's probably for the best if you don't visit her yourself, because she is an utter wreck worrying that something is seriously wrong with her baby, and I don't think your cold shoulder will allay any of her fears.

Also, I cannot imagine that you personally would enjoy listening to her sob and blubber on about how she must have done something wrong.

But in MUCH happier news, it seems that we just got the call from River to go visit him and Mahafsoun as soon as we possibly can because her Healer has confirmed that she is in the very first stage of labor. The stage that can last a few days before progressing to the more active and painful stage, but it is legitimate labor and not Braxton-Hicks. Thus, if we are lucky, the baby will wait to be born until after your class on Friday lets out and we can take an international Portkey. If not, we'll still get to meet our precious granddaughter very shortly after her birth.

Fingers crossed!

With all my heart and soul,
Draco
P.S. I actually read the papers this morning to see how they are treating my campaign so far, and so I noticed a particular advertisement: Desperate older couple seeking surrogate - offering generous compensation. A word with my mother informed me that the same advert has been running for months, only they weren't desperate in the beginning. Personally, I'm glad they haven't succeeded yet.
Chapter 195

Chapter Summary

It's a new grandbaby ^_^

Friday December 8, 2017

My Souls,

I am sure Mahafsoun is feeling differently, but I am so thankful that she's held out through today so we can get there in time before the birth. Right now I am just waiting for this last class to finish, then we are portkeying off to support Maha and River through the last bits of labor and then hold our new granddaughter.

Why, you ask, am I writing an email while I should be teaching a class? Well, here's the thing, during my morning classes, apparently I would not stay on topic. I kept derailing into a rambling worrying mess. One may even say I had hit peak Panicky Harry levels. I don't understand it, but I guess that is not the right characteristic for a teacher to have if their students are intent on learning.

So, I decided to teach my latest class - of Sixth Years - about the joys of emailing. I gave a quick speech talking about how convenient and easy it is, then got them settled on some magic-compatible laptops, and right now they are each creating their own email account and once that is completed, their assignment is to email someone else in the classroom and CC me as their daily assignment.

Don't you dare judge me for giving them this assignment so I can do nothing for the rest of the day! I teach muggle studies, muggles use email, this is absolutely an appropriate and useful assignment completely within my subject matter! The fact that it is keeping me from driving all of my students batty with my neurosis is just a silver lining!

I am selfishly glad Maha went into labor this week, keeping me completely distracted from everything else. Otherwise I may have ended up finding my way to Orion's room at the Manor to check up on Farrah. I don't want something to be wrong with the baby, I don't want Orion feeling guilty about his treatment of his abuser, and I don't think I want Farrah to die or anything, but I also don't give a single shite about how badly she's feeling. And if I had gone to her rooms and heard her babbling about her worries and all that nonsense, I probably would have ended up saying something like: "yeah, you're right Farrah, you DO deserve this!"

I have a feeling that wouldn't have been considered 'helpful.'

Five more minutes my loves! I'm not going to make it! I'm going to spontaneously combust before then. I need to go meet this new granddaughter of ours!

I keep picturing our upcoming Christmas celebrations and thinking about all the fun we're going to have spoiling the kids and the grandkids. Ugh, one more thing for me to wait for!

Oh! I'm getting some notifications, I should probably go check those email assignments before I take off for the weekend.
All of my Love,
Grandpa Harry

Wednesday December 20th
My patient and understanding loves,

AKA the men who HOPEFULLY will not murder me for getting to stay behind in America (with our babies and Muffy) for a week and a few days longer than you were able to. I know I know! You were both technically able to return as of Friday the 15th, but since Harry rightfully started panicking about having absolutely NONE of our Christmas shopping done, you both chose to stay behind and get that done. Oliver, I sincerely hope that you were able to help Harry remember everything he needed to buy. Unfortunately, we BOTH tend to forget half of what we're shopping for and have to make multiple trips to get it all.

Good thing I don't mind shopping! ^_^

But as I was saying, hopefully neither of you will murder me for being able to stay here in America when you both had to Portkey back to the castle on Sunday. You both had classes, it was necessary - even if you (Harry) felt like you were abandoning your son when he needed you most. Which is exactly why I stayed. Despite the fact that he and Mahafsoun only have one adorable little girl to look after (when I had all three of our babies, hahaha), the first few days are always so overwhelming that an extra pair of hands is helpful, even if those hands are holding other babies, haha.

That said, I HAD to return home today, even if I wasn't being frantically called back. It's only 5 days until Christmas - with Yule being tomorrow - and I wanted to spend those important days with my husband and fiancé. Thus I honestly was going to return today no matter what. The good news is that since Mahafsoun is both on her winter hiatus AND on maternity leave, she and River have decided to come back with me. Which means that River, Mahafsoun, their baby girl Evangeline, Muffy, and our three babies will be on our private jet back to London. I daresay that Mr. Lott won't know what to do with such a light passenger list, hahahahahahaha!

As for me, I'm about to sign off and Portkey back, directly to St. Mungo's, where Orion is frantic because Farrah has just gone into labor. She's technically 22 weeks out of 40 if one is going by literal time that has passed, BUT the baby is measuring 36 out of 40 weeks, and since the Healers are fairly certain that baby girl is healthy and viable, they're not even going to try to figure out how to stop the labor.

Wait, that's not correct. They actually HAVE tried stopping the labor and the usual spells and potions aren't working. It seems that baby girl is DETERMINED to be born NOW, and the Healers are basically holding their breaths and praying that she really is ready to be born and not just fooling the diagnostic spells somehow.

So yeah, that's where I'll be, in the hospital supporting Orion as he does his best not to freak out over his baby (that he didn't even want but fiercely loves with his whole heart) being born alarmingly early.

Love you both to the moon and back,
Draco

P.S. I'm not trying to sound like either of you are unwelcome, just that you don't HAVE to come if you don't want to. I'll definitely Insta-owl you when baby is born. Love again!
Chapter 196

Wednesday December 20, 2017

My Silly Man who is terrible with dates,

Please make sure and keep us posted, but Ollie and I are going to stay here at the Manor until we receive a message that baby has been born or that we are needed. And I really mean that, if we are needed, even if the only thing needed is Orion needs a hug from his Dad, just let us know. But until then, I think our presence is more important here.

Why are we at the Manor and not at Hogwarts? Why is our presence here important? Why do I say you're terrible with dates? All three of those questions come with the same answer. It is our Grandson Rafael's first birthday you ninny! Remember? Gorgeous little boy with Elena's big dark eyes and a head full of curls? Yeah, Lainie and her loves decided the Manor has the most space for this so we're all having dinner together and then we get to watch Raf cover himself in cake and frosting!

Before you panic, Lainie completely understands why you're missing this and has no idea you seem to have forgotten the date. I just explained to her that Ori and Dad were at St. Mungo's with Farrah who's in labor and she immediately told me not to worry at all. She just reminded me to make sure to pensieve print out some pictures for you and Orion to look at later.

Ollie and me and the kids who were at Hogwarts took off for home right after my last class for the day. Got here right before dinner time, just in time to enjoy some of Muffy's finest. I know I say it all the time, but as much as I love the food at Hogwarts, there is nothing that compares to Muffy's cooking. Except for Molly's cooking! But Molly was busy decorating Raf's cake and didn't make the dinner.

The cake turned out so so so cute! It was a "The Very Hungry Caterpillar" cake. You know that's Rafael's favorite book, makes Lainie read it three times a day at least. The cake had the butterfly at the top and all the different foods with one bite taken out of them surrounding the cake. Molly completely outdid herself on this one. She even made a little smash cake with the caterpillar on top and a 1 with a bite out of it just for Rafael to smash to smithereens!

Very Hungry Caterpillar Cake

Smash Cake Pic

And smash he did. That's actually why I have a few minutes to write to you right now, Lainie is trying to clean Raf off. Apparently he got so much frosting in his hair that she couldn't get it all out with spells. So he's taking a nice soak in the tub.

How are things progressing so far? Do we have another granddaughter yet? Just think, by this time tomorrow our almost two week old granddaughter will be here and we could have a few hours old granddaughter. I could be snuggling TWO brand new babies this time tomorrow!

Oh! Sounds like the little prince is out of his bath, off to go help him open his presents!

Love,
Harry
Thursday December 21st
Happy Yule,

We have a new grandchild. After a rather long and seemingly painful ordeal, Farrah finally delivered, and then barely had the energy to give baby a good cuddle before passing out. It seems that none of the pain relieving potions or spells worked on her, and so, she had to endure delivering naturally.

Orion was bloody wonderful, holding her hand the entire time, brushing hair out of her face, wiping sweat off her brow, holding the vomit bag when she needed it. Basically, he was the perfect husband. He even admitted something I suspected - unless he was lying to make her feel better. At one point near the end, he said - and I quote - "You're doing so well Farrah, I love you so much, just a bit more to go, you can do this, I believe in you."

Kissing her on the forehead when she looked like she was on the verge of giving up and letting the baby stay stuck inside her forever was precious. Slightly less precious but still endearing was when she was in between contractions and asked for actual kisses. If one didn't know better, one would think that they were a normal and happy couple in love.

But I know better. They might love each other, but their relationship is NOT healthy enough to be called Happy or In-love. It's more like neurotic co-dependence on Farrah's part, and some sort of twisted revenge on Orion's. It's actually the sort of relationship I assumed I'd have back before I risked everything and tried emailing you.

The father in me sincerely wishes that I could go back and protect Orion from Farrah as our son never deserved any of this. He should never be anything but happy. Despite the fact that happiness to him is apparently stripping off while trying to make a large paying audience horny, and then taking drugs to come up with new ways to strip off and make people horny, sigh...

I wasn't much use even though I was allowed in the room with them. Since the labor was progressing 'normally' - despite the underlying circumstances - she was allowed a spacious delivery room that had all the conveniences befitting a wealthy patron of the hospital. Thus, I was in the room and had a comfortable armchair to sit in as I provided tea, biscuits, and lots of emotional support to our son by rubbing his back and giving him hugs when HE looked like he wanted to give up and just go to sleep for a bit.

Less helpful was actually Farrah's mother. She was also in the room, and she was, erm… bloody weird, actually. On the one hand, she would say things like: "Oh, my love, you're doing so well! I'm so excited to meet my little granddaughter!" But on the other, she'd say things like: "You think this is pain? Put on your big girl knickers and deal with it as it's just the beginning! After this, you're going to have YEARS of pain and anguish as your little girl grows up to be a troublemaker and a strong-willed drama queen!"

She even went so far as to engage Farrah in at least three different arguments bordering on shouting matches that had the poor girl beyond stressed out, which in turn also stressed out Orion, who actually did a good job of defending his wife when he could. I honestly thought a brawl was going to break out at one point! Thankfully I know Auror grade spells to incarcerate people during brawls - thus I could have gotten the situation under control if necessary. I'm also very relieved that it wasn't necessary.

Thank Merlin and Salazar that at 2:21 am, the baby was born. I don't think ANY of us could have stood that labor much longer! There was a good 5-10 minutes of pure joy before Farrah passed out and her mother excused herself to go home and get some sleep as well. Orion sat holding his baby in a reclining chair until he also fell asleep, which gave me time to write this while holding our... grandchild.

See, after Farrah passed out, while the Healer and Mediwitches were examining the baby, it seems they spotted something unusual. Baby has BOTH genders. Our grandchild is intersex - in the past, this would have been called true hermaphrodisim because not only are both genitalia present on the outside, but both gonads are present on the inside - meaning that there is an ovary on the right side and a testes on the left.

We're told that in this type of intersex individual, they may eventually prefer to be one sex or the other OR they may always prefer to be both. Also, fertility is variable as some intersex people are highly fertile and some are sterile. All in all, we have a special little peanut to love and cherish. I imagine that it will be much like raising Teddy, who could literally change his sex whenever he wished and spent a good third to half of his childhood as a girl, and even now that he's an adult who prefers to be male, tends to wear female clothing and/or body when he's in the mood.

Oh! It seems that Orion has just come out of his doze to fret over the fact that his baby disappeared, hahaha. He's calmed down now that he's spotted her in my arms, but he still looks half certain that he's dreaming and she's actually been abducted.

In any case, I'm going to sign off, give little peanut back to her anxious father, and finally return to our bed where I hope to snuggle up to my loves.

Some say love, it is a hunger, an endless aching need, I say love, it is a flower and you it's only seeds,
Draco
Chapter 197

Friday December 22, 2017

Our Sleepy Love,

These last few weeks must have really taken a toll on you. You're normally a late sleeper but it's almost dinner time and you're still snoozing away! I went to my Friday morning classes, came back before lunch and you were unsurprisingly still asleep. Went to my first afternoon class, came back to our rooms assuming you'd be up by then and instead found you still asleep. Now I've finished up my last class of the day, I want to head to the Manor to meet this tiny new grandchild of ours, and I come back to our rooms to find the beauty rest continues!

As soon as I've finished writing you this email I AM going to wake you up so we can go, hopefully the fact that you've slept well over twelve hours will keep you from hexing me for disrupting your sleep.

We've got another absolutely perfect little grandchild! I need to go meet sweet little Gemini. I can't believe they've been alive and in the world for a full day and I haven't met them yet! Who do they look like? Ori? The mother? A mixture of both? Oh it doesn't matter! I'm sure I will think they're a perfect and gorgeous little human no matter the features. Although I selfishly want them to look like Ori. What? I love seeing little miniature versions of the children I love. Like, Rafael would be gorgeous no matter what, Lainie is beautiful, Ethan is a good looking bloke, but getting to see my Lainie-Girl's versions in miniature? With just a few tilts and adjustments that make the face all Rafael? Fills my heart.

Okay, Okay, Okay Ollie! I'll hand you the computer in a moment! I am allowed to go on and on about our beloved grandchildren! Fine, I may have gone off on a tangent that was unnecessary when you have something to say. I'll make it up to you I promise!

While we're naked!

Geesh, fine, here's the computer. Just so you know Draco, Ollie is NOT in a teasing kind of mood

Oh for goodness sake Harry, just sit there and look pretty, shut your gob for a moment yeah? Draco, I overheard something last night, I'm thinking we should talk about it. Or not if you don't want to I suppose. I heard you Magi-Skyping with your grandmother last night. Is there something you need to tell us? Or never tell us? You, er, weren't talking about me right?

Ollie! Sorry I shut my gob for that moment but I have to interrupt, IF Draco was talking with Grandmama, I can promise the only way he would be talking about you is if someone had hurt you and he was talking about the person who did so. Theoretically of course.

So, after that lovely interruption ta Harry, did I hear what I thought I heard? Or do I need to not have heard the thing I think I heard?

Oi fuck this, I'm just going to wake you up!

Love,
Your Harry and Oliver

Friday December 22nd
My darlings,

Harry is used to this, but Oliver, you still seem bemused by the fact that I am sitting here writing an email WHILE we are experiencing the things I'm writing about, haha.

So today, since baby passed all medical exams with flying colors, Orion was allowed to bring zir home whilst little Gemini's mother had to stay behind for more observation. The Healers are still trying to figure out exactly why Farrah had such an accelerated pregnancy, so despite the fact that she's also apparently healthy, she's staying at least one more day. Possibly two.

Oh Harry, you ALWAYS look gorgeous when holding a baby, and this little one is no exception. When you are holding zir, it's clear that it makes no difference to you at all that this baby is unusual. This is our grandchild and your love is unconditional.

Interestingly, despite being raised in a family with so many differences that we accept and love, Orion seemed to be nervous as to how the rest of the family would take Gemini being intersex. In fact, ze is such an adorable baby that it doesn't matter to anyone what is between zir legs. Honestly, unless a person is staring at the groin area, it's easy to forget that this isn't a baby just like any other.

But as I was saying, Harry, you are always gorgeous. Oliver, I haven't had the pleasure of seeing you hold more than a few babies, and honestly, you are breathtaking when you hold a baby. You always have this look of pure love and longing on your face when you hold a baby, and I feel that it's probably a very good thing that we're almost certain to be overrun with grandchildren in the next few years, because that means you'll never have a shortage of babies to hold.

Gemini certainly seems taken with zir grandfather Oliver; the two of you have been staring at each other in fascination for a good half hour now. Meanwhile, Harry is currently busy snuggling up with and pretending to munch on Evangeline. Funnily enough, our own babies are so happy to be home that they're doing their best to crawl around and get into everything. Only Morgana occasionally pauses to look over at the two of you holding OTHER babies and glares a bit.

Aww, Dylan just came over and insisted that I pick him up. Oh, it seems he's hungry. Good thing we still have a ton of milk in stasis, but maybe it's time for me to look into hiring another wet nurse?

So, while Dylan is drinking from the breast harness and seemingly content to fall asleep, I suppose it's a good time for me to answer a concern. Oliver, my love, I'm quite certain that you must have been dreaming. I did not have any sort Magi-Skype chat with my dearest Grandmama, but if I did, the only things we would have discussed would have been the weather and how much she misses Kisa now that the Quartet is living in London.

I honestly have no idea why you think any sort of conversation between my Grandmother and me would be more alarming than that. Must have been having a nightmare, poor dove. If you'd like, I'd be willing to do things to you before bed tonight that will give you the most pleasant dreams possible.

Oh? Erm… It seems that Orion just received an urgent call from St. Mungo's. Hold on a few, I'll pause my email here to head off with Orion.

-

Oh dear! Oliver could you do me a favor and hold Harry's hand and support him so that he can be in a supportive frame of mind himself? Harry my love, Orion is going to need you to hold him and comfort him and give him that sort of loving warmth that only you can provide. It seems that Farrah has just committed suicide. She left a note saying that she couldn't live with the fact that her child is so different and that she feels such shame and horror for giving birth to 'it' that she had no choice but to kill herself.

Orion is positively distraught. I've never seen him like this and frankly, I don't know how to handle this. I mean I'm hugging him and rubbing his back, but otherwise, I'm at a loss (and yes, I'm typing this one-handed behind his back, thank Salazar my magi-computer floats!). In any case, I'm going to sign off now. There's a few minutes of paperwork that Orion has to complete - which seems heartless considering the circumstances - but basically, they need him to read over statements of what happened and sign off on them, and then also come up with a short directive on how he wants them to handle her body. For example, does he want them to put it in stasis in their morgue for some sort of future funeral service, or does he want them to send it over to the cremation department. Things like that.

In any case, you should have just enough time to read this and gather yourselves before we get back and Orion needs your shoulder to cry on.

Love you desperately, and oh so grateful that you are both the supportive rock that helps me get through times like this,

Draco
Chapter 198

Chapter Summary

Harry is supporting Orion Draco is a little bit relieved, and Oliver is once again in awe of Harry's power.

Saturday December 23, 2017 (almost midnight)

My Strength,

Yes, MY strength so that I can be strength for others. Simply knowing that after two days of supporting my son I can come home to the arms of my loves, it gives me what I need to support him the best I can. And oh bloody hell, how much support he seems to have needed. With as angry as he was over her behavior, after the months and months of him drowning himself in fanny and drugs to forget he was married to her, I am honestly surprised how hard our Ori is taking things. I'm surprised how hard I am taking things. I truly hated Farrah, I know I didn't make any secret of the fact. But I can't believe she's gone. I can't believe our Gemini has only the one parent. I can't believe after everything that happened, Ori is going to end up being a single parent to the little peanut.

I am feeling so up and down. We had this euphoric high of having our little Evangeline come into our lives. We had a beautiful celebration of our sweet Rafael's first birthday. Then came another bit of perfection in Gemini. And we were gearing up for a wonderful celebration of Yule and Christmas and New Year's and all that fun holiday stuff. But instead of last minute wrapping, I spent today helping Orion plan his wife's funeral. I held a child who will never know their mother. I'm having such a hard time reconciling my feelings of hating my son's abuser while also truly mourning the loss of a life cut too short. I wanted her removed from my son's life, and if you had asked me a week ago if I would mourn if she died, I would have scoffed and told you "not bloody likely!" Yet here I am, actually sad for a life wasted.

Well, not completely wasted. I can't call the life that brought us this baby as a waste.

My Orion, a young groom, a father, and now a widower all before his eighteenth birthday. He's been so strong, so much stronger than he should have had to be. He keeps being asked to make decisions, either about Gemini, or the funeral, or the future; he even had someone come ask him a question about the Hog's Head at one point. I may have crackled a bit at that. Leave the man alone, order however the fuck much firewhiskey you think is appropriate. We have bigger concerns right now than possibly overspending on the alcohol budget for one month for a bar that is deeply in the black.

I know there is a deep shadow on the upcoming holiday, but I am hopeful we can still have a nice Christmas morning and Boxing Day as usual. Can continue the tradition of taking our kids and the Unity Kids to London for New Year's. Still make sure our feisty foursome have a magical time. Have lovely memories of watching our troublesome triplets ignore their gifts while they shred the paper and spread it all over the room. The three of us grandfathers snuggle up holding our newborn grandchildren while we watch the chaos of a holiday morning. Enjoying our first Christmas/Yule altogether also our last one as an engaged trio.

Just think, at this time next year, we will be planning our first Christmas/Yule as a married trio! I already know what our matching Christmas jammies will look like! And no, I'm not telling, you'll both just have to wait a year to find out, Alright, I've rambled long enough. If you couldn't tell, I was writing to distract myself from some bad news that I need to share but don't want to share. Mostly I don't want it to be true.

I think I've done pretty well holding in my own feelings so that Orion can just sob or scream or cuddle his feelings away. He may be a grown man who can care for himself, but he'll always be my baby and should never feel shame for needing his Dad to wrap him up in a hug. I've done all of that for Ori over the last three days since we got the news. I've told him he's strong enough to make these final decisions, I've made some decisions when he didn't have the strength to do so, I've rocked that sweet baby for hours, I've had a mini Rage Halo for morons that don't know to leave a grieving man alone, and I've been able to stay strong through it all.

And as I said earlier, I've been able to do that with the knowledge that I have two strong sets of arms to fall into at night. And I'm definitely going to need them in a few minutes. Or maybe in a few hours. I think I might have a go at your crystal room, Dragon. You see, I left Orion to a late night drink with River. The two newest fathers, sharing a small drink, after a long day of nappy changes and no sleep. I thought it was absolutely wonderful. I love that our Riv is there for his little brother.

Or at least I THOUGHT I loved it! I left the room, but eavesdropped a bit. I didn't even purposefully eavesdrop, I just stayed a few extra minutes to stare at the beautiful baby boys of ours that have become strong and wonderful men. And that's when I overheard the terrible news.

River asked Orion: "How are you really?" But before Orion could utter a single syllable, River kept going with: "And don't give me any shite about being fine."

"I don't even know, River. I'm in love with Gemi, I'm enraged that I was forced into parenthood, I'm grieving the loss of someone I loved, I am hating her so much for dying and leaving me alone to raise our child. I might be having Dad levels of rage with her reasons behind her suicide. And the dads have been amazing, but I still feel so alone."

"If you take me up on my offer, you don't have to be alone, Rion."

Wait a damn minute young man ... what offer?!?

Don't you worry, River described enough of his offer to just break my poor heart. "You need a change of pace Rion, you need to get away from the two places you lived with Farrah, and you need to get away from your dealers. Don't look at me like that! You know it's true."

I knew it!

"Maha and I have a newborn of our own, we know what you're going through. Three hands will make light enough work with two babies. We've got the elves. Our cottage still has plenty of room for all of us. Not to mention you'd really be helping me be less lonely when Maha goes back to work."

And then Orion, my little professor, said the worst thing I think I've ever heard: "You know what, Riv? I will. I'll stay here long enough to get Farrah laid to rest, give the dads the holidays and a few weeks to cuddle the babies, and then I'll catch a ride back to the States with you and Maha when you leave the week after New Year's."

Our son is moving! He's going to the other side of the world! He won't have us to help him, I am so distraught - I can't handle these emotions.

If either of you need me, I am going to ring in Christmas Eve screaming, sobbing, and blasting my way through the crystal room.

For what it's worth, you two own the broken shards of my heart, Harry

Sunday December 24th
Our Darling Harry,

Oliver and I were snuggling up and chatting about recent events when we got the email from you. I will admit that while the larger part of me is sad that Orion is moving so far away, the smaller part is extremely relieved that it sounds like he plans to clean up his act. I know he SAID he was being careful to avoid addiction, however, the sudden loss of his wife could potentially tip him over the edge into not just addiction, but dependency on a substance to get him through the day.

I felt that we would naturally be willing to look after our tiny grandchild, and so ze would be safe and loved, but also exposed to a parent struggling with depression and addiction. Hopefully, River and Orion living together will inspire Orion to make better choices than the ones he was headed towards. I really think this might be better in the long run for Orion and Gemini.

That said, I'm still sad to know that another child of ours will be too far away to visit on a regular basis.

So, after having read your email, Oliver and I went to the Crystal Room to shatter crystal with you. The room itself is self perpetuating, which means that it starts out with a large amount of perfect crystal in all shapes and sizes for one too throw about in a rage, and after that has all been thrown - which usually takes a while - or after a reasonable amount of time if it isn't all thrown, it will regenerate all that crystal so that it's ready for the next time.

When we entered the room, we immediately noticed that YOU weren't exactly playing by the rules. You had a Halo of about middle strength around you, and because part of your Rage Halo Magic is a sort of wind that can blow things around rather wildly, you were using that wind to grab hold of the ENTIRE supply of crystal to fling it all at once. Which not only created a highly interesting sort of explosion that rippled around the room, but then triggered the reset after a few moments so that you could do it all over again.

Gods Harry! I was so bloody hard watching that! You never cease to amaze me, and watching you display your sheer raw power is enough to make me jump you. That said, it was definitely not the time. So, I decided that it would be better if I simply led Oliver through some sparring to help him practice the Krav Maga that he is actually learning from the Feisty Foursome when they spar.

I think that you reached a natural end to your rage at some point, because your Halo had gotten weak, but that probably also means that your head was clearer, because you suddenly seemed to realize that your two men were naked (we had charms to shield us from the sharp crystal debris) and grappling around right next to you.

Your rage abruptly vanished and you pounced on us, taking advantage of our proximity and horniness. It was rough and rather brutal in the best possible way. Oliver seemed willing to try it at first (experiencing you being nearly violent with us), but he didn't like that as much and pulled back for a bit to watch you ravage me like a hurricane, which I quite enjoyed. When you were calmer again, you turned to Oliver and did something for him you like to do to me on occasion, slowly and gently mark his entire body with love bites.

All in all, it was a glorious night that I think we all needed to reset our brains and get us back into a good mood. Afterwards, you Apparated us into our bed and we slept until each of us woke up on our own. It was probably not nearly long enough in your case and now I wish I'd thought to cast a sleeping hex on you. But once I was awake and found you, you looked a lot better than I expected. Apparently going for a long run this morning helped finish resetting your mind.

So today has been rather quiet. Being the day before Christmas, anyone who has other families to visit do so today so that we'd all be together tomorrow. That means that Viona and Alric were at his parents house. Eris and Eric brought Luka to Eric's dad's place. Hazel and Pearl went to visit Pansy and Ivan. Orion went with River and Mahafsoun (and their babies) to visit her adopted mum. Zaire was having a blast at his restaurant, and even Shtara was giving a special Christmas Eve performance of her show.

Jaz and Vani were spending the day off doing things with Sebastian and Delphini, Elena was over at Ethan and Rose's with Rodrigo, and our Feisty Foursome were actually back at Hogwarts having a bit of a Christmas celebration with Hagrid in his hut.

So, that left us basically alone, hahaha! We only had Parker, Cassie, Siri, Zwei, and our three babies with us today, and considering that Parker held onto Dylan, Cassie had Gabriel, and even Morgana consented to let Zwei hold her, WE really were practically alone!

Alone to snuggle up in front of a fire and chat with each other and my parents about life and whatnot. They were more or less alone too as Eliza, Della, and Gavin had all gone off to shop a bit with Bellerophon, Tommy, and Harrison. I suspect that they probably don't plan to actually buy much, but that they just wanted to get out of the house and have a bit of fun before the insanity that is certain to be tomorrow.

You were elated when Sirius brought Pierre andLeon out to join us, apparently giving Pippa and Leah time to finish up their last minute wrapping. Apparently Pippa had delegated the job to Sirius, but he'd had his hands so full with the boys that he never managed it, hahaha!

Thus, I feel that today was a good day. A nice and relaxing day, and that with any luck, tomorrow will be as wonderful and chaotic as ever.

Have yourself a merry little Christmas,
Draco
Chapter 199

Chapter Summary

It's Christmas! ^_^

Monday December 25, 2017

On this actual day of Christmas my true loves gave to me ... a day full of wonderful memories,

The crystal shattering, subsequent shag, and a relaxing Christmas Eve with my loves definitely put me in the perfect frame of mind to fully enjoy today. Without that combination of stress relief and relaxation I probably would have been too high strung to put this day and the memories it created in the right frame of mind.

As parents of a lot of children, I think we've set realistic standards for special events. Nothing will go as planned, someone will have a tantrum, something will be broken, it's likely at least two fights will break out, and if you let Harry near Narcissa, Lucius, and the wine, there will probably be wildly inappropriate tall tales told. I always have these images in my head of what a "perfect" holiday morning will look like; a Hallmark commercial with perfectly coordinating pajamas, everyone opening the perfect gift, and steamy hot cocoa.

And for once, all the planets aligned, my luck held out, and I got everything I was looking forward to. I got to snuggle up on the sofa, cute matching plaid jammies with my loves, leaning back against the firm chest of my Draco, legs tangled up together with my Ollie. Our three tiniest babies climbing in and out of our laps. I had yummy coffee, Draco your favorite tea, and Ollie had the perfect Christmas morning beverage of hot cocoa with way too many marshmallows. I got to watch my family pass around the newest set of newborns. My husband and fiancé making adorable cooing noises and blowing raspberries on Evangeline and Gemini's teeny baby tummies.

From Draco's arms, I watched our beautiful Elena chase around her tiny son, dark curls flying, their giggles mingling together in a beautiful sound. Our brilliant daughter who built a school from the ground up, has a son and two bonus children, and seems to have an unconventional but thriving love life. My Lainie-Girl.

I shared sweet smiles with Oliver while we watched what used to be his children blend so well into our crazy family that you would never know they hadn't always been a part of this family. Saw that tear slip down your cheek Ollie when Shtara announced she was sitting next to her sister Cassie because her voice makes the best harmonies with her own singing. The wobbly grin when Ori pulled Parker to the side to ask him about temporarily helping out at the Hog's Head while he's in the States. The blush when Cassie teased you endlessly about the visible claiming love bites.

Can you imagine how much our Ollie would be blushing if anyone knew where those love bites extended to? Mmmm, all that flushed skin and maybe him chewing on his lip nervously. Yum!

Back to the clean stuff! My wonderful River, a young husband, a fantastic dad already, and a fantastic big brother. His entire body gravitated around his Maha, his Evie, and his grieving brother. He was always ready with a burp cloth, a hug, a shoulder squeeze, a cuddle, or a joke for whichever one needed it. He's come so far, he's a man in his own right, but he'll always be that sweet little boy who trustingly put his hand in mine.

Our brilliant and glowing bit of perfection, our first of all our children, Viona. A young wife, an intense business mogul, a light in my life. Seeing her twirling around the room, asking about everyone's lives, everyone's business ventures, talking fashion with Haz and Eri, tickling her little siblings babies, cooing at their sweet faces, chasing around the mobile ones. My grown up little baby girl.

Eris, her unconventional start to a lovely little family. I can't believe the boy I would have happily hexed a year ago is now practically an extra son. Eric is damn lucky to have our Eris, but he's really a good guy in his own right. And you know I can't say enough about our Luka. He looks so like his Mama did as a baby. I love knowing my dad's face and my mum's eyes are continuing for generations. Seeing that piece of them continuing to exist.

The love just keeps growing exponentially.

My beautiful Hazel. My unexpected little miracle, just dropped in my lap when she was only a few months old, I can't imagine our lives without her. Seeing the love in her eyes when she looks at her Pearl. Like Pearl hung the moon and stars just for her. I imagine Haz looks a lot like me when I stare at either of you two. She still looks like she can hardly believe her dreams have come true, and I know that's how I feel about the both of you.

My Orion. Grieving. And yet looking at his child with nothing but love. I selfishly was so distraught at the thought of them moving so far away, but I think this will be such a fresh start for them both. A safe space with family, far enough away from hard memories that they can heal. You were so right Draco, this is really going to be a wonderful thing for Ori to heal and Gemi to grow.

Our shining star Shtara. An absolute diva with the talent to back it up. The confidence to belt it out. Pride in knowing just how brilliant she is. But nothing but love and support and acceptance for any of the talents of her siblings. She wants to belt out her favorite songs, she loves the limelight, but she is so fantastic about helping to shine that same spotlight on anyone who wants to shine. My diva without the drama.

Siri and Zwei, not twins but rarely apart. I picture them with gap-toothed smiles and mischievous eyes when I think of them, but they've quickly become young men. Best beaters Hogwarts has ever seen (don't tell George I said that!). Smart as hell. Confident. So aware of themselves. I barely know who I am now, I certainly didn't know myself the way they do at their age.

Zaire. My heart. His own special way of looking at the world. Never wanting a traditional schooling because he looks at the world as his educator. He immerses himself in anything he wants to know. He wants to speak to people, touch their stories, eat the food, speak the language. My world traveler. I suppose we should have known he needed to see the whole world when he was so obsessed with trains as a tiny boy. The perfect way to travel because those tracks go everywhere but you can stop and see everything on the way.

My Jasmine. No way to hear, limited verbal speech, limited in how many people can understand her language, and the one of our children with the most powerful communication. Everyone who knows her for more than a single moment falls in love with her. She just has this way about her that she makes you feel as though you're the most important person in her world. She certainly hooked our Vani; somehow managed to get her best friend to officially join the family!

The feisty foursome. Our brilliant little naughty Seph, Lily, and Cael. A trio from the moment they had all been born, and yet welcomed their Atreyu into their ranks without any hesitation. They terrify me with their complete disregard for their own safety. Their thirst for adventure and life speaks to my soul while scaring my Dad-Heart. These four are most definitely my karma, just ask Minnie!

These three smallest babes of ours. Gabe, with his medical needs you'd think he could end up crabby or extra needy, instead he has nothing but love and gummy smiles for everyone. Especially his favorite Daddy, Oliver. And Dylan, the easy-going one, those deep brown eyes just killing me when he smiles that dimpled smile of his. And our Queen Morgana. Knows exactly what she wants and plans to get it when she wants. Just like her favorite Daddy, Draco.

And even with that long list of our beloved children, that's not all the people we have in our lives. Our Godchildren, our nieces and nephews, our bonus children and the bonus grandchildren they've given us. My own Godfather back from beyond, his beautiful babies, and their mothers who we literally would not survive without. Draco, your own Godfather being as much a part of your life as he can from his portrait and your brother who may as well be a clone. Our siblings. Our good friends. Our circle.

Our life is so full it's bursting at the seams. What more could any of us possibly wish for?

With Christmas Love, Dreams, and Hope,
Your Harry

Thursday January 4th,
My patient and understanding loves,

As you well know, I have been a bit neurotic these past few days. Hell! I think I caught a serious case of Panicky Harry the day after Christmas - after we got back from the Burrow - and I realized that I only had NINE days until the live debate and 10 until the election!

Funnily enough, it seems that Hermione came down with the same disorder, as evidenced by the fact that when I decided on Thursday the 28th (Farrah's funeral being on the 27th) to go out to Diagon Alley and just walk around chatting with people and maybe seeing if they had questions for me - which would actually help me be more prepared during the debate - I found Hermione out doing the same thing.

Hermione had been at the Burrow on boxing day, and also at Farrah's funeral (despite not really knowing the girl, she was supporting Orion with us), but she was getting jittery as well and felt the need to DO something. Interestingly, we'd even arrived at more or less the same time. She'd spent an hour or so at WWW with Ron and George before they kicked her out for being an insufferable pain in the arse, which left her wandering around wondering if it was ethical to chat people up before the debate. Thus when I turned up with the same idea, we both laughed, gave each other kisses, and walked around together talking to people, asking and answering questions, and addressing concerns.

I LOVE the fact that the two of you and pretty much all of our kids made a very 'subtle' attempt to stroll nonchalantly up and down the Alley shopping. Wearing shirts that support me ^_^ Honestly, despite me personally being busy most of December with first River, and then Orion, it seems that you and the kids never failed to wear supportive shirts while shopping for Christmas.

I am so proud of and in love with our family!!!

But as I was saying, the two of us were getting to know the voting public. Without even really thinking about it, Her slogan soon became: "If elected, I'll run the Ministry like I ran Traditions:
efficiently and capably." Whereas mine became: "If elected, I'll run the Ministry like I conducted raids for the Auror Department: calm and orderly."

Some might say that they're the same thing, really, but with subtle differences.

The papers quickly caught on to our impromptu campaigning and showed up trying to get pictures of us at odds with each other. They COULDN'T manage to catch any on the sly, and so in frustration, asked us to glare at each other for a few seconds so that they could print a proper rival story. I looked to Hermione, and she gave me a look that clearly wondered if we should sic Kisa on them. I raised a brow in a question, and she nodded in agreement, so I held my hand out to her - and the moment she placed hers in mine - tugged her into a spontaneous dance that was a bit like a fun tango.

The reporters all looked ready to transform into Rage Halo Harry that we'd thwarted them, hahaha!

My nerves and near panic levels of attempting to be patient for this debate have kept me (and Hermione) out chatting at different places each day, except for the weekend in which you and Oliver kept me - and the Quartet kept her - busy and shagged out. Thus, it's finally the day of the debate.

I think I did... well. I certainly didn't stick my foot in my mouth and I think I came across as a likable fellow - who would also be capable of handling the Ministry. That said, the debate was more like a friendly interview than a debate. The people in charge kept trying to ask questions on hot or controversial topics, hoping to provoke an actual argument between us. But honestly, even on things that we completely disagree on - elf rights, for example - we never actually argued.

"See, Hermione, while I do believe that Elves are happier being owned by families, I CAN agree that if an elf is unhappy, they should have the right to ask for freedom so they can leave and find a better home."

"Whereas, Draco, I feel that all Elves should be automatically granted freedom on birth - no! I mean that they should be BORN free and not NEED it granted - BUT I can agree that they are largely happier belonging to a family that treats them a bit like an invaluable and much needed slave."

I nodded. "So, I personally would support a law giving Elves rights they currently lack in situations where they are unhappy."

"Exactly!" Hermione exclaimed, and then turned to the Interviewer. "What was the question again?"

I swear his eye twitched in annoyance, hahahaha!

It all became a blur at some point, and so, while I feel I did well over all, I can't point to anything in specific that was clearly in my favor. Nor was anything clearly against me. Honestly, I think Hermione held their hearts from the beginning - being a Hero of the War and all.

My favorite part was when Morgana - who had been quietly watching things over my shoulder from her carrier on my back - seemed to get fed up with no one paying any attention to her. So she started glaring at the Interviewer, who had stood a bit too close to me, and Hermione spotted this.

"Oh! It seems my darling niece is getting a bit grumpy, Draco. She looks about ready to hex him."

"Thanks for alerting me!" I praised as I quickly shifted Morgana to my front. "What's the matter love? Hungry?"
She pouted in a way that she usually reserves for when she's tired and wants a nap. She also rubbed her eye with her adorably pudgy right fist, confirming my suspicion. I stroked her soft and sleek black hair before kissing it.

"Harry love, will you come here and take her from me?" I asked.

"Definitely!" You exclaimed jubilantly, running up onto the stage to do exactly that. You took her in hand and shifted her to your hip for a moment so that you could give me a quick kiss. "You're doing so well, I'm so proud of you," you murmured in my ear, but I have a feeling that the spell to pick up and mildly amplify my voice for the audience to hear clearly probably picked it up.

Turning, you faced Hermione, gave her a brilliant smile, squeezed her hand, and said: "You're doing really well. I'm always amazed by your brilliance. Good luck!"

"Thank you Harry, love you!" Hermione replied, looking a bit like a mum watching her favorite child be amazing as you ran back off stage. You promptly sat back down and discretely offered Morgana access to her favorite milk supply. Meanwhile, Oliver was holding Gabe (while Dean was holding Dylan) and made his little hand wave at us.

The debate continued on until the producers realized that they just WEREN'T going to get us to fight about anything, so, a bit wearily, the Interviewer asked his last question: "Any last statements?"

I looked to Hermione, who shrugged and gestured for me to go first.

"Yeah, I just want to say that of course I want you all to vote for me, but if you don't, at least I have the utmost confidence in how the Ministry will be run under Hermione's hand."

She broke out into the most gorgeous smile and threw her arms around me to hug me tight. "Me too! I want them to vote for me, but if they choose you, I know that you'll be the best Minister you possibly can!"

We stood there hugging and patting each other on the back (and whispering encouragement in each other's ears) for what felt like EONS! I think we were both hoping that if we just kept holding onto one another, the entire day would pass and the election would be over. But it was probably only a minute or two before the director shouted that they were done and that everyone was free to go home. At that point, you and Oliver joined the rest of the Quartet to come up on stage and swamp us both in hugs.

To my utter relief, everyone had the sense to put the littles to bed early so that the rest of us could celebrate this success (of getting through the debate alive, haha) with a copious amount of wine and other alcohol. Which means that I'm about to sign off and go get so drunk that I pass out until one or both of you shakes me awake to tell me the election results.

Here's hoping!

Love me love me, just say that you need me,
Draco
Chapter 200

Chapter Summary

The election results are in!

Chapter Notes

EEEK! 200 chapters!

Friday January 5, 2018

My Own,

Oliver and I are about to wake you up. And we are going to do that in your very favorite way. But at some point you will come down from your orgasm induced high, no matter how many orgasms we give you. And trust me, it's going to be a LOT of them! And when that happens we will have to give you the election results.

So, instead of waking you up with the bad news, I am writing it here. This way when we're done shagging, we can just point you towards your laptop. We will hold you while you read this email. And when you get to the upsetting part we will continue to hold you or we can go away so you can process in your own way. We're here for whatever you need.

The election results were sent to us early this morning, with the information that Hermione Granger has won the election and has officially gone from interim Minister to the official Minister for Magic of Wizarding Britain. I'm not sure if this bit will make you feel better or worse, but she won with precisely 51% of the vote. I honestly don't know if you will be pleased to know that she only just managed to win, because it was so close. Or if you will be upset at just how close you came to winning without the actual win.

You are allowed to feel however you want to feel about this. You are allowed to be disappointed or angry or frustrated or whatever else you're feeling. But I have some things for you to think about that will hopefully be some silver lining for you.

First of all, this will mean more time with your family. More time for your children and grandchildren. More time to shag your husband and fiancé (soon to be husbandS!). Way more time to plan our upcoming wedding. Free time to dance in the ballroom. Free time to play counselor/matchmaker/confidant to the students at Hogwarts. You were willing to forgo that free time to be Minister but these results mean all of your time is your own.

Secondly, this also means you won't be tied down by political restraints. You don't have to go through the proper channels, or getting things approved by committee, or act like all ideas have equal merit when people bring you idiotic ideas. You can and will continue to enact change in your own way with your own money while continuing to be your own (and MY!) boss.
Third, you don't have to curtail your personality or actions because of something "not being befitting of the Minister." You can continue to kiss us in public, talk about shagging, tell people when they're idiots, and call out inconsistencies or utter buffoonery. You don't have to be "Draco Malfoy, Minister for Magic, a man for the people" you get to be "Draco Malfoy, man who will call you out on your shite, businessman, father, semi-public shagger."

And here's the best news. The silver lining. Honestly it's more like a completely new bit of information that will, in my opinion, be even BETTER than being Minister for all the reasons I listed above. But instead of me rambling my way through, I will just type out the letter Hermione sent you this morning a few minutes after the results were in. No, I didn't open it, it wasn't sealed. She wrote it and called upon Muffy to bring it to you, Muffy gave it to me, and I read it.

-

Dear Draco,

Congratulations my dear friend on a well-fought competition. The results speak for themselves, roughly half of the voters voted for me and the other half voted for you. The results were so close it was practically a tie, which means we did a fantastic job of assuring the public that either of us would be the right person for the job.

Thank you for giving me a challenge, pushing me to really think of my policies and promises. Running against you set me up to be the very best Minister for Magic I can possibly be.

Your presence made me a good candidate, therefore I am hopeful your presence will continue to push me to perform at my very best. This is why I want to officially offer you a position within my office. I have an official job offer written up that I am sure you will want to go over with a magnification charm as well as go over with your team of lawyers. For now, I will simply offer you the job and beg you to take it.

Draco Malfoy, will you do me the honor of taking on the role of Senior Adviser to the Minister of Magic? I need you on my team! Together we can make such a difference! You can work completely on your schedule, bring in the babies whenever you need to, and the only time you will be required to be in a specific place would be if there were some sort of emergency where I needed you on hand.

Thank you for your consideration,
Hermione Jean Granger, Minister

-

This sounds like it would have all the benefits you wanted from the Minister job, with all the freedom not being Minister would provide you. You know Ollie and I will support you no matter what, any choice you make will have our full backing, but I think this sounds perfect for you!

Alright, off to wake you.

Our Love,
Harry and Oliver

Friday January 5th
So...
I lost.

I'd be lying if I said I wasn't disappointed. That said, you make some very good points. You and Oliver spent the early afternoon reminding me how much you both love and need me. So with that in mind, I might actually be a tiny bit relieved as well.

Being Minister is not just any job, it's a LIFE. It's being on call all the time to handle situations, settle disputes, and try to keep our relatively small yet large wizarding population happy. You're so right in that I've done so much with my own name and money to bring happiness that I don't necessarily NEED to do any more.

That said... I really like this job Hermione is offering me. With this job, I'd be much like I was as Chief of Raids - which I could actually still do. I'd be able to go in and chat with my good friend for an hour or so every night, listen to her work through her current issues, give advice as I see fit, and then leave while she has to stay. Well, I think we all know that if there was a crisis, I'd probably stay longer than her, and that's not even trying to imply that she's a slacker, because she most certainly is not.

It's the best of both worlds, really.

And now that the election is over, Hazel has been reminding me almost non-stop that Pearl turns 17 in just 5 days, and that per the agreement with her father, they've set their wedding date for 2 weeks after Durmstrang lets out. That's roughly six months from now, and so, the wedding planning needs to get more attention than it has been getting up until this point.

As I understand it, Ivan is paying for the Honeymoon and a small house - which means that traditionally speaking, Pearl must be the 'Groom' with Hazel being the 'Bride' - thus we're responsible for paying for the ceremony. But before you think we might actually be getting off lucky here, keep in mind that Viona's wedding cost a small fortune, hahaha. I think we might have a slightly less enormous ceremony, but Hazel is sure to want a bit of a fashion show of all her latest designs, so I can see this being a gala event on the best scale.

But speaking of Galas, Pippa has been nagging me for ages now - ever since I was almost framed for murder - that there's a very important Gala we need to attend to personally... And no, I'm not talking about the Unity House Gala that happens here that we've egregiously managed to miss several of since moving back here. No, I'm talking about the 10 year Anniversary for Unity Iran.

Yep, it's been almost 10 years. Well, specifically, it'll be 10 years come summer, but yeah, it's coming up. I remember quite clearly, we were HERE celebrating my birthday in a very naughty and debauched way, and then we were off to Iran barely a week later to work on building our last Unity House.

I think we promised ourselves that we'd make it a point to go back and fundraise each year during the Gala, but then it took us all so long to work through our issues from our time there, that I think even once we were better, we just sort of avoided the place. But this one is important AND the House is barely getting by. It seems that there are less Wizarding people with enough money to donate to anything, much less an orphanage - even though the amount of children living there has remained even for most of the last ten years. Which means that the House is mostly scraping by with the money that you on your own and me on my own send to the place every couple of months.

They could really USE a big influx of cash.

So... what say you both? Practically the MOMENT you finish giving your final exams, we rush off to Iran to host a Gala of epic proportions?

Also, I'm sure you know this, Harry, but Jaz has been asking questions lately. We've always been open about how we adopted her, and so she knows that her parents are unknown victims of that war, but more recently, she's wondered other things - such as what is the country like in general? What sort of heritage does she come from? Is there ANY way we can find out if she might have family from her birth parents that have survived? Things like that.

Honestly, I'm a bit surprised it took her this long to wonder these things.

I think I'm going to sign off now and have a mini meeting with Pippa and my lawyers to go over Hermione's job offer and see if I need to adjust any of the terms. See you when I get home!

Hopelessly devoted to you,
Draco
P.S. Thank you both so much for waking me up in the most orgasmic way. It did a LOT to put me in a good frame of mind to hear the bad news without throwing a strop. Love you!
Tuesday January 9, 2018

Sleepy Boys,

Phew, I don't know if I've been this relieved to be back at work after a holiday at home! We had wonderful holidays, new grandchildren, an intense debate and election, and then our Shtara's birthday party yesterday. It was an amazing few weeks, but I am honestly quite relieved to get back into the routine of a school-week at Hogwarts.

Especially seeing as we have a crazy few months ahead of us. Planning our wedding, helping Hazel and Pearl plan theirs, the 20th anniversary celebration of the end of the war, a trip to Iran! And that's not counting the upcoming big first birthday parties for our tiniest triplets. That doesn't need to be quite as big since they won't really remember it. We can just to a circle dinner with some smash cakes and call it a day. Save the massive parties for when they're a bit older. I just can't believe it will be our last ever first birthday parties for our babies!

But we're entering that phase of our lives where we will have first birthday parties and births and naming ceremonies for our grandchildren. I am feeling so weird, we are still quite young, Draco and I are only 37 and Oliver you're only 42, but we're grandparents! With how long wizards usually live you'd think we'd have gotten started on having our families later in life, but no, we all started right away. Honestly, even in the muggle world many people are just starting to have children in their thirties. I feel so young, we are all healthy and in great shape, active as hell, but entering the often elderly phase of life.

Well, when have we ever lived a normal life?

Wasn't Shtara's birthday party so fun? I've always wanted to do one of those murder mystery dinners, they always looked like so much fun. And I think a regular murder mystery dinner would have been fun. But, seeing as Shtara is in theatre, most of her friends are either in theatre or performers from Lainie's school, and she has access to some of the best screenwriters and stage crews, this particular mystery was absolutely epic!

Instead of each attendee having a small write-up of their character with the murderer having that extra bit of info, we each had extensive backstories! The costumes were gorgeous. And you could tell Shtara was having a blast. My beautifully brilliant star. I cannot believe she's already fifteen! How did this happen? Do you think your age freezing potion would work on her seeing as she's Muggle? Never mind, don't answer that, I don't think I want to know the answer.

You know, when we brought Shtara into our lives I thought we had gotten this reprieve from having to deal with a child being at a boarding school for so much of the year. Instead, she had to be amazingly talented and scouted for her dreams. I thought we'd really lucked out and wouldn't have to share our little girl with the world, but no she had to go and become a star on stage so we probably end up seeing her even LESS than we would have if she'd gone away to Hogwarts.
Especially now that we literally live at Hogwarts!

But, just like I would never tell River or Orion that them living halfway across the world breaks my heart, I would never tell Shtara how hard it is for me to let her fly. I will internalize my Dad struggles, showing them nothing but support and pride. But I hope it's alright with you two my loves if I sometimes have to have you hold me while I cry out my sadness.

This parenting thing is a lot less gooey baby kisses and adorably tiny shoes, and a lot more sadness while pieces of my heart grow and leave.

Wow. I went from being excited to be back at Hogwarts to an existential crisis. Sorry my loves.

Anyway, this morning I woke up bright and early, went for an absolutely gorgeous run. It's one of those frozen mornings where the trees look like they're made of glass. Once again glad to be a wizard so I could cast a warming charm on myself so I can enjoy the icy views without giving myself hypothermia. Especially since I had a little running buddy. It's been a while since one of the kids has wanted to run with me, but this morning Cael was up nice and early and wanted to come with me. His flushed little freckle face smiling up at me while we ran in this winter wonderland together was a perfect memory.

But I'd better head off to my first class. Enjoy your sleeping in! Lucky Ollie you don't have work until after noon today, and Draco you won't be needed by Hermione until this evening. I'd be jealous, but if I'd slept in I'd have missed my morning run with my Caelum. I definitely got the better end of the deal!

All of my love,
Harry

Tuesday January 9th
Our Harry,

My day started a bit (I.E. a LOT) earlier than usual. It seems that Oliver was waking up after a nice lie in and he just so happened to catch me when I was only half asleep. So I noticed him shifting and murmuring in that way most people do when they're waking up but don't want to. This provoked a deep interest in at least one part of me, prompting me to roll over onto him and cast a breath freshening charm on both of us.

That naturally led to a glorious hour or so of just kissing and caressing each other. With no need to hurry unless the lunch bell rang, we had the time to just be together. But eventually, I wanted more, and I didn't want it to be simple frotting either. So, I conjured up a pair of Slytherin ties and bound Oliver's hands to the headboard.

He was watching me with a wary but willing look, since he'd already discovered that he likes the act of being tied up, but not the reality of being (remaining) bound. After he was securely attached to the bed, I took the time to stroke every centimeter of his body, making him highly sensitive and thoroughly teasing him in the process. I kept on going until he was begging me for relief - which occurred right about the time I had progressed to licking his shaft just enough to get it wet before blowing hot air across it.

His shaft was so eager to bugger or be buggered that it was weeping in need.

"Please! Please Draco! Let me go or ram me into the bed! I'm not fussed, just please!"
Humming happily, I cast a couple of quick prep spells so that I could sink onto his shaft and ride him in the slowest and most leisurely pace that I could manage - all to delay his orgasm as long as possible. The fact that he was still begging and trying his best to buck up into me and increase the pace only added to my pleasure.

Eventually, his hips were actually banging into me quite determinedly, allowing him to reach his climax with a triumphant roar. He practically melted into a puddle and heaved great panting breaths for a few minutes until he calmed down a bit. That was when I reminded him that he wasn’t done as I hadn’t had an orgasm yet.

That was when I untied him and ‘forced’ him to worship my shaft with his mouth for a good hour before the actual lunch bell triggered my orgasm and let us know that we should probably drag ourselves out of bed and go get something to eat.

However, Oliver needed to use the loo first, which has given me time to write this email, but now that he’s done, I’m going to sign off and hope you get a chance to read this RIGHT before your first afternoon class so that you have a minor emergency in your pants all afternoon, buwahahahahahaha!

Mischievously yours,
Draco
P.S. If you need me for any reason before I leave for the Ministry around 4, I plan to be riding Oliver's shoulder in my Marmoset form, unless he's actually flying his broom, in which case, I'll probably have him wear a bit of a carrier for me to sit in so that I can't accidentally fall off.
Chapter 202

Chapter Summary

Harry can be a tease too.

Chapter Notes

Sorry guys! I had a few days off and my mom required that I go visit her with my boys.

Tuesday January 9, 2018

Not cool Draco Lucius, Not cool,

I was in class when I read that you utter prat. In.Class. Since I had nothing scheduled this evening and neither did Ollie we decided to take an evening off and come home to the Manor for the night. I just have to be back in time for my first, late morning, class tomorrow.

Anyway, since you're off having a meeting with your boss, the Minister, I figured Ollie and I could email you now. Let you know we're thinking of you while you're away. Sounds good yeah? "Ollie, can you turn on the dictation device please?"

Dictation device turns on

"Draco, Love, I'd been typing while kneeling at my spanking bench, but our Ollie is going to finish strapping me down. I needed the dictation device turned on because my hands are about to be bound. Did I mention my legs had already been strapped in and I'm fully nude. Well, except for the cock ring Oliver put on me."

"Of course I strapped a cock ring on you Harry, this whole experiment is to distract Draco. His reward for thoroughly flustering you when you read his email. It's not a reward for you, so you won't be coming tonight. Not unless Draco comes home and gives you permission. Isn't that right?"

"Yes Sir, I won't be allowed release at all. Not until my Master comes home. And only then if he allows it. I promise I'll be so good."

"We know you will Pet, your Master knows you're such a good boy and so do I. Our good boy."

"Thank you Sir."

Oliver chuckles, "Oh I wouldn't thank me just yet Pet. This is going to be a nice long playdate, I think we should rest your eyes. How's the blindfold hmm? Can you see anything?"

"No Sir, all dark." The sounds of dragging, clinking, and slicking are heard "What's that Sir?"

More chuckling from Oliver, "Oh don't you worry your pretty little head, your job is to take whatever I give you, just sit there and feel." A groan came from Harry while Oliver continues, "You're our greedy little puppy aren't you? Need two men to keep you full all the time. One of your men is at work so I had to come up with some way to satisfy your needy holes." More slick noises, and moans from Harry "There, that should fill up your back side. Draco, I just filled our boy up with the largest dildo we own." More moaning from Harry, a whirring mechanical noise is heard as well "Harry, tell Draco what's happening."

"Ungh, Master, Sir has turned on the fucking machine. He's not even touching me. He's got the bigger than Blaise dildo fucking, ungh, ungh, unnnnnngggghh, uh me."

"More sweetheart, that's not enough for our Draco, he needs to know everything doesn't he?"

"Yes Sir, it's ungh, fucking me really deep, Sir must have the machine closer than usual. I can feel it in my abdomen,"

"He's not wrong Draco, I can see his little belly distend just a bit when it's at its deepest. He looks so pretty. At that moment when his stomach swells he almost looks pregnant he's so full and distended. Keep going Pet, what else?"

"It's going so slowly. So slow. It's too slow! Please Sir, please! Make it go faster, make me cum, anything but this please!"

"You know better than that. Even though your begging sounds so pretty I think I have something better to do with that sweet mouth."

Low moaning from Harry, along with wet slurping sounds

"Oh baby, that's so good. Such a good little cocksucker you are. Draco Love, you should see this. Our little Harry, bound over his spanking bench. His hole being slowly battered by that big shaft, his tummy pushing out with every motion, and his red lips wrapped around my cock. His pretty green eyes looking up at me. I thought he'd stop begging me when I filled up his mouth but he's just using those eyes of his. His skin already has that glowing sheen of sweat on him. Poor thing, and we've barely started."

"Oh Harry, yes puppy, you're so good. I'm going to come down that throat of yours. But don't think that will earn you any reprieve. I'm not pulling out of your mouth and I'm not turning up or turning off the fucking machine. You can be my cute little cockwarmer. Hold me in your mouth until I'm ready to go again. Keep taking that shaft deep in your arse."

Moaning and noises from Harry as though he's trying to talk with his mouth still being used

"None of that Love, it's rude to talk with your mouth full." high-pitched keening

"Yeah, yeah, that's it, keep it up, yeah, mmmm. You'd better be ready, I'm going to, yeah, yeah, that's it, Harry!!"

"Mmm, perfectly beautiful little slut for me hmm? Well Draco, I am going to sign us off, keep using our little toy here. And just so you know, this is going to continue for our Harry until you get home. Whether it's an hour from now or if you don't show up until morning. Take your time won't you?"

Ends dictation

We love you!
Oliver and Harry
Tuesday January 9th
My naughty Harry and Oliver,

Considering that I've just shagged you both into oblivion, you're not awake to hear me tell you this directly. I personally will probably pass out as well as soon as I finish up, but I wanted to get this out before I fell asleep and forgot.

Today was an amazing first day at work. I really think I have the best job in the world for me as I started with all three of the babies strapped to me. When they were bored, I was able to let them crawl around as Hermione and I chatted over tea. She got me caught up on all the issues she'd encountered since being appointed Interim Minister, and I gave her my perspective on them. Between the two of us, we brainstormed rather a lot on things to do.

At one point, the babies got hungry and I ordered Muffy and Diby to come in and help me feed them, and then lay them down for a nap. Yes it was late for a nap, but it's not like they couldn't stay up a bit late with me (which they are), and then sleep in with me as well. In any case, I didn't feel bad at all about letting them go to sleep like they wanted and having them popped off to bed.

By this point, Hermione had progressed to reorganizing all of our brainstormed ideas on the white board into categories and - I dunno - relative merit? I think she was trying to decide which things were more important to do first, which things went along with those things, and which were still important but had to be delegated until later on. Something like that.

Thus, I was sort of wondering if I should stay a bit and argue with her over which things were the most important and which should wait a bit, or if I should just go home and call it a night so I could celebrate my first day with a glass or bottle of wine and maybe head off to chat with River, Mahafsoun, and Orion before they officially leave tomorrow. I appreciate that they stayed for the election, and then a couple of days so that Orion could finish teaching Parker and Harrison to take over running his bar whilst he's gone.

Oliver, rest assured that Parker is unlikely to go astray like Orion did, because Delphini is so determined to ensure that HARRISON doesn't pick up the habit of doing any sort of drugs, that she has vowed to personally scan him (using an Auror grade spell I may or may not have taught her) every single night when he returns home - or if he decides to live in Orion's flat above the Hog's Head with Parker, she'll pop in each night. And I've ensured that they can't lock her out of the wards HAHAHAHAHA!

Anyway, there we were when your email came in. I hadn't read it, simply heard the notification chime, and exclaimed: "Ooo! I've got an email from Harry!"

"Oh?" Hermione asked in amusement. "I could use a bit of a break; read it to me?" She half commanded as she plopped into my lap and kissed me on the cheek.

"Alright, So, he starts with..." And I read your entire email to her. Very quickly, she started squirming on my lap and I was poking her as much as I could with my poor shaft trapped under her and inside my pants and trousers. I had to physically shift her a bit so that it didn't feel like I was in an extremely small chastity cage.

"Mmm..." she moaned in lust. "Are ALL of your emails like this?"

"Not all of them, no, but enough are," I replied huskily, because I was also nearly ready to pound the nearest thing into the nearest bed. Or wall. Or shower. Or whatever flat surface happened to be convenient.

She traced a finger along side my neck and gave me a quick kiss. "I could help you out with your current predicament in exchange for you helping me out with mine."

I groaned in longing because she made a quality offer. "I'd love that, unfortunately, I'm most definitely not playing around for the foreseeable future."

"Wow, still?" She asked in surprise. "I know that you and Harry are respecting Oliver's wishes, but I thought for sure that the three of you had decided to start playing around when Viper brought the other Oliver for a visit."

She was making it hard for me to concentrate because while she'd stopped trying to convince me to play with her, she was still in my lap and her voice/breath was in my ear and just that was rather erotic and exacerbating my situation.

"We're in no rush and Oliver seems like he might only ever consent to play on VERY special occasions - such as if we bring him to Glastofest or maybe the Torture Garden. You know, places where we can play very lightly with strangers, still get rather a lot of enjoyment out of the situation, and then pop back home when we've finally had enough foreplay that we attack each other."

"That sounds fun too," she hummed in thought, probably now planning out treating her husbands and wife to the next Torture Garden party. This made her unconsciously start squirming on my lap again, which pulled another groan from me. I kissed her because I was going to tell her goodbye, but she mistook the kiss for me starting something light and playful, and returned the kiss hungrily.

I gripped her hips and ground her into me for a while as we kissed rather deeply, but then I lifted her of my lap and panted heavily to clear my head. "I've got to go!"

She pouted but nodded in understanding. "Alright, too bad, but I won't push you in the future until I know you've got permission. Sorry for, erm, disrespecting your rules, I'm just unreasonably horny at the moment."

I raised a brow in amused curiosity. "Your marriage partners not satisfying you?"

"More like I've been so tired each night when I get home that I'm not really in the mood," she explained with a shrug.

"Well you're in the mood now," I pointed out. "And there's no law that says you have to stay here tonight until you've figured out everything you plan to do for the future. So go home and pounce on them."

She grinned at me. "That's brilliant. I think I'll do just that!"

"Good, now you'll have to excuse me, because I plan to go attack my men."

We kissed each other on the cheek, and I lightly smacked her on the arse to encourage her to actually go home (I knew she'd just wait until I left and return to work otherwise), and once she was gone, Apparated home and shagged the two of you dirty rotten. Now that I'm done with my email, I should hopefully be able to sleep.

I see your true colors, that's why I love you (both),
Draco
P.S. Oliver, if Harry reads this to you or if you read it over his shoulder, please don't feel like I had some Slytherin ulterior motives in telling this story. I honestly am not trying to rush you or make you feel bad, I'm just being honest about what happened so that if it happens to come up in the future - such as at a circle dinner, say Hermione says something like: "I haven't been so horny since that time we almost shagged in my office." I wouldn't want you to hear that and think I was hiding something. I love you and consider your heart one of my most precious possessions - right up there in importance with Harry's.
Chapter 203

Chapter Summary

Harry and Oliver have an important conversation, and Draco freaks out a bit.

Thursday January 11, 2018

Hi Babe!
Ick, let's try that again.

Hey Hun,
Nope, that might be worse.

Sweetie...
I'm sorry Ollie, I just don't think there's any real way to give our Draco a cutesie nickname. I call him Dragon sometimes and I know he'd love for you to call him that as well. We just are never ever ever allowed to call him OR Zwei Drake. Drakie-Pooh is also off the table. Sometimes I call him Darling but that's pretty rare and usually just when he's in a melancholic or depressed state and I have to say something like "Oh my Darling, we love you so much and don't want to see you hurting." It's never "Darling! It's been hours since I've seen you!"

Anyway our Draco, the reason I'm writing this email but it's apparently a weird mixture of Oliver wanting to be the one to talk without being the one to type has led to a very weird beginning. However, after almost two decades with me I am pretty sure you speak "rambling nonsense to avoid the real issue" quite well. You don't speak it very well, but are a pro at deciphering it.

So Oliver is pulling up all his Gryffindor courage and wants to talk to you about something quite serious that he is concerned about from your last email. Unlike me, who spent something like sixteen years hiding the secret that I started adoption paperwork on a child without ever telling you about it. But once he mentioned he wanted to discuss the issue at hand, he also got shy and pretended he doesn't have any idea how to type and I should do it for him.

It's obviously a big fat lie.

Yes Oliver, it is too a big fat lie.

I'm doing it, I love you more than life itself, and I think you're very brave. Didn't I admit I was a big old scaredy cat and hid secrets for years? Doesn't mean you pretending you don't know how to type (when you literally wrote me a solo email months ago to reestablish our friendship) isn't a big fat lie.

Alright, now that we're done arguing semantics, the issue on the table. Last night before bed I read your email from the night before. Sorry it took me so long to read, but with regular class-time and the kids leaving for America yesterday I didn't have a spare moment to do so. Right before bed, when you were spending your second evening at your amazing new job (and side note: we're so proud and happy that you love it) Ollie and I snuggled up to read it together.

Oliver, who hasn't yet developed a complete understanding of your Slytherin mind (probably because the hat didn't have to think for a single moment about the Lion inside of him, unlike my snakey liony self) hasn't noticed your increasing unsubtle begging. What? You're trying to act like the big bad Master doesn't beg. Oh My Love, I think we both know that's a bigger lie than Ollie trying to say he can't type. You try to wrap it up in aristocratic language or passive aggressiveness but you are a beggar.

No, not that kind of beggar.

After reading your email and its back-peddling P.S., our sweet, perfect, beloved, beautiful Oliver began tearing up.

Yes, Oliver you're making me write this, I am going to write it how I darn well please! You did cry. I love Draco as much as you do, but I don't care if he gets upset knowing he made you cry! Okay, I care if he's upset, but I also care that he upset you! We need to be honest with each other and how you felt after reading his email that made you cry. Yes or no? That's what I thought.

I will back up just a bit. Oliver and I both know exactly why you added that P.S. You wanted to be up front and honest. You didn't want to make us think for one moment that you had somehow been unfaithful. You wanted to avoid hurt feelings in the future so you were honest and then clarified exactly what happened and why. Whether or not Oliver was sad, no one is mad at you or thinks you did something ... 'wrong.'

I suppose this past message was the last clue that locked into place to make all of your subtle begging make sense. Ollie looked at me with those damp eyes and asked "Am I really holding you two back? Is being with me keeping you from something you need?"

Don't worry, I immediately told him that wasn't the case. I even pointed out where you had directly told 'Mione that he knows you might only ever be up to the few and far between special occasion public foreplay where we go home to finish just the three of us. I told him that I can really only speak for myself and I am getting every single one of my needs met. I get to submit, I get to bottom often, I occasionally top. I get to do kinky non-vanilla things and soft sweet love-making.

He interrupted me, seeming to realize I was only speaking for myself. "But Draco needs more doesn't he?"

Again I stopped him, "Love, Draco doesn't need anything more. He has told you that, he has told me that, he has shown it in his every action. And in his continued choosing of you, of us, every day. Every time he turns down playtime, he's choosing you and us again and again and again." I grabbed his hands and looked him in the eye, "I will risk speaking for him, because you need to hear it and I know he would say the same if he were here with us. Draco loves and needs you more than he wants to fulfill his kink of sharing us, and more than he wants to fulfill his kink of sexy playdates. If you NEVER want us or you to do a single thing outside of our relationship, we will both still believe wholeheartedly that we are the luckiest blokes on the planet that you're in love with us."

And that's when it finally clicked for him. "Wait. He had shagged us Tuesday morning and knew he was headed home for more shagging Tuesday evening. He has two men who can cover pretty much every sexual want he has. I've even told him I don't think I could go to full beatings but that I would love to dominate him occasionally. But he was still turned on and enticed by Hermione. He was having a rough time the day he got the massage and there was a woman massaging him that reminded him of a female you."

His eyes got really wide ... and wow shiny big brown eyes on that handsome face? Mmmm, I know he was sad but hot damn did our man look fine as hell Draco.
"Draco has been missing fanny, yeah?"

"Yeah, I think he does Ollie. But he will never ... never ever ever ever want it more than he needs you and I. Never."

He looked sad for another few moments. Then shook his head, took a deep breath, squared his shoulders and said, "Well then, we need to get him some fanny." It was honestly so adorable. Yeah Ollie, I said adorable, deal with it.

"Oliver, you're not comfortable sharing him. Well, not with anyone but me. And that's okay. He can live without it for as long as you aren't ready. Even if that's forever."

"But Harry, the both of you have proven that's not necessary."

"Erm ... what's not necessary? Living without playing with others. It absolutely IS necessary if you're not on board!"

He gave me what I used to think of as the "Malfoy face of judgment" but now I just think it's the "significant other of Harry face of judgment." It's not specific to you Malfoys, it seems to only crop up in people who are in love with me! "No! Don't you see? He doesn't need to do anything with anyone else in order to shag a woman! There are other options!"

Oh.

Then he went on a rambling monologue that may as well have been coming out of my mouth. Seriously, he went on for about ten minutes. I thought he was going to run out of breath. I probably could have left the room to grab myself a cuppa and come back to him still rambling. But I will break it down to the main points.

I can too break it down and not ramble! What do you think I've been doing so far Oliver. Rambling? What? Oh. I just looked at how much I've written so far. Oliver has a point Draco.

Long story ... possibly longer than the original story ....

Oliver initially brought up the idea of using polyjuice. And ultimately came to the idea that it wasn't a complete no in his opinion, but he ultimately didn't like it because you would be shagging the body of someone that wasn't us. And due to us not wanting to violate someone by using hair without permission, we'd have to ask for hair and permission from someone we know to use their hair. It would upset Oliver to know you were shagging the body of say Luna while also knowing that Luna knew it was happening.

But like I said, it's not a firm no but not his favorite idea.

He also brought up the possibility of just using a strong glamour on our bits so we would appear female but it would still be us. We could even do the temporary breast enlarging thing. It would definitely work on at least me since I currently have fully functioning mammary glands. Ultimately, he thinks this is a better plan than the polyjuice, but worries that you wouldn't like it or feel it was fulfilling because you would KNOW it wasn't really a fanny you were servicing.

And that's when he brought up the idea of the damsel curse. He knows we've done it, and that you've thoroughly enjoyed being the female participant, so why wouldn't you enjoy one or both of us being females for you to take care of? He thinks it's the best of all the worlds; you get females, no one feels violated, and we can all participate.

We're cuddling up with the babies, we'll be putting them to bed soon and plan on staying up as late as possible so we can have this conversation with you before bed. Come home to us.

Your Loves Always,
Harry and Oliver

Thursday January 1th
NO!

No no no no no no NOOOOOOOOO! NO MORE BABIES!!!!!

But...well... hmm...

Okay wait, so were not having ME carry said baby. And actually, if there was a way to sterilize the body after using the curse, I'd quite like to try it again, aside from the fact that both of you are on team all the way gay.

So... alright, to be honest, I was sort of half mulling this over in the back of my mind. I KNEW that Oliver lamented not having the chance to carry a baby of his own, and it occurred to me that - just as I suggested previously - having me or Sebastian brew the potion with better ingredients would not only lead to a higher quality and more likely to work potion, but remember all the way back to Bubbles and the Demon? I originally thought I was pregnant but that just turned out to be wishful thinking and I had to have that resolved and try again?

WELL on the second go, I purposely borrowed your wedding ring - Harry - because it has fertility spells on it, and whether the ring helped or not, the second time worked. I was sort of thinking that if we gave Oliver for his wedding present (Oliver dear, if you are reading this over Harry's shoulder, skip this paragraph, or if you are listening in, close your ears for a few seconds) a quality fertility potion and let him borrow your ring should he choose to use the potion, that those factors together might definitely work.

That said, this curse WAS potent enough to get me pregnant THREE times at the same bloody time! But we have no way of knowing if the Damsel Curse is just that potent, or if it worked so well because I'd already been pregnant a couple of times and my body knew what it was doing.

And Salazar buggering Merlin! Now I'm facing a bit of an existential crisis! On the one hand, we already have SO MANY BABIES!!! Can we actually HANDLE more??? But on the other hand, once you reach 20 plus a good half dozen grandkids, really, what's one more? BUT GODSDAMNIT!!! That's ANOTHER future teenager!!!

But on the third hand, I want to see Oliver's face in miniature with your eyes Harry, while I'm sure you've already mentally tried to work out how Oliver's face would look with my hair. Whereas Oliver (you can listen in again if you're not already) in all likelihood has probably spent eons wondering what any tiny human would look like no matter who the other parent was.

On the fourth hand, Oliver was probably the world's cutest baby (of the time), and his kids would probably take after him. Bah! As I said, crisis! I'm - as evidenced by this supposed to be well balanced argument AGAINST having more kids - shockingly leaning more towards having another (or possibly more than one) to...

Actually, I just solved the entire dilemma in that trailed off statement. The entire sentence was, I'm leaning towards having another or possibly more - however many it takes - to fulfill Oliver's needs. Just as I've always put every care and effort into meeting your needs, Harry (and you mine), we have committed ourselves to meeting all of Oliver's needs, and so, if this is one of them, then I'm 100 percent on board.

Oi, I'm definitely insane, but I think I'm shockingly happy in my insanity, so let's just go right on ahead being insane until we're little old men giggling because we can't remember what the plot is anyway.

But... as for the specific details - such as when we do this (and I think we should time it so that the new baby is born in July or August, which at this point, would have to be next year since a baby theoretically conceived tomorrow night would be born in October) and how...

Alright, I'll admit it, I WAS sort of begging. I honestly didn't MEAN to be an arse about it, but it seems like - oh I dunno - I'm craving fanny or something. It's not yet on the level of a genuine NEED, but it's becoming stronger and I think the only reason I'm having a bit of a hard time this time around is that normally, I can just have a playnight or go to a club for a nameless shag (as a couple with you meeting one or more of your kinks as well), but this time, I can't.

No, let me rephrase that. Saying can't makes it sound like a problem. Like I am an addict and it's only a matter of time before I fall off the wagon. So rather than can't, I am genuinely choosing not to do those things I did in the past because I have something far more important to me than a meaningless bit of fun.

I have real, deep, and unshakable love.

Oliver, I know you don't understand the playing thing, and when you talk with Harry about it, the conversation usually goes something like Harry saying: "I honestly wouldn't ever play if it didn't meet some of Draco's needs," which probably makes you feel like my needs are at diametrically opposing ends than yours - and that eventually, one of us will have to give. But I can assure you that I've learned very very well that marriage is about compromise.

I want to be married to you - Oliver - because I love you every bit as much as I love Harry and I want you to be happy and fulfilled. Thus if this is a need of yours - and I already know it is - then I am going to help you meet that need no matter what it takes, and happily, you've already figured out a good compromise to meet one of my needs in the process, so this is win win really ^_^

Now all of that said, Harry, do you suppose that after we've carefully planned out how and when to do this, it might be worth a practice run. Such as letting Oliver try out the Damsel Curse for a bit of a date night with dancing, hours of foreplay, that shagging I'm quite looking forward to, but erm… rather than try to get pregnant the first time, we cast protection spells, use those muggle condom thingies, AND finish things in a nice safe place - such as a mouth?

Just a thought...

There's a place I know if you're looking for a show, where they go hardcore and there's glitter on the floor, and they turn me on when they take it off, everybody take it off!

Draco

P.S. Alright, I know I'm not particularly ancient or anything, but do wizards go through things like witches reportedly do, where they get EVEN HORNIER as they get older? Because I sort of feel like I can't so much as have a dream or take a loo break without wanting to shag one or both of you into the nearest thing!

P.P.S Please don't ask me about the dreams I've been having lately as I do not want to incriminate myself and be murdered when I still have so much to live for!
Chapter 204

Chapter Summary

Harry insists they talk to Oliver, but Oliver panicks.

Draco,

Whoa whoa whoa! Calm yourself! No one said a single thing about babies!

I mean honestly, we have so many babies, so many kids, so many grandkids. I thought we agreed ......

Oh. Oh my Gods Draco. How have I been this blind?!? WE agreed we were done with kids. We’ve gone on and on and on about being done with kids. Have we really never asked our fiancé if HE wants to be done having children?

You’ve been mulling this in the back of your mind? You knew Ollie wanted babies? Have I just had my head shoved that far up my own arse that I never noticed?

Except now that you mention it, of course I’ve noticed! How could I not? That look of longing and adoration around babies, the look on his face when he sees our picture wall and focuses in on pictures where either you or I are pregnant, the way he breathes in the babies’ baby smell like he’s never been allowed to smell it before and he doesn’t quite know when he will again.

I’m the worst fiancé on the planet!

Our poor, loving, amazing, patient, understanding, beautiful Oliver.

He was out with the Puff Quidditch team when I read and began responding to your reply, so he doesn’t know we’re talking about this. We can’t talk about this behind his back. Plan this all out without his input. I’m not saying another word until we’re all three together!

I’m so glad he wasn’t here reading this with me. Can you imagine if I’d started blurting out something like “hell no am I having another baby!” and him having to lie and laugh along, pretending he agrees with the sentiment? Oh my loves what have I done?

Let’s talk the moment he’s done with practice, before you have to head into the Ministry.

Love,

Harry

P.S. Oh Draco, I never let myself imagine it, but now that I have, how will I ever get the hope of seeing a tiny miniature version of the two loves or my life? Of a teeny Oliver face with platinum hair or those deep brown eyes of his with my black curls?

P.P.S. Uh, definitely not a potions prodigy but seeing as there was a potion that essentially made Hazel originally have three biological parents - do you think there’s a potion that you or Sebastian could invent that can somehow combine all three of our dna? Imagine a baby with sharp Malfoy features, that unruly Potter hair, and those big brown Oliver eyes!
Oh dear,

Harry, you went to the loo so you wouldn't have ANY distractions once Oliver returned to our Quarters, so naturally, that's exactly when he returned. When I saw him walk in, I must have looked extremely guilty as I furtively looked toward the loo, because I was thinking that this was a conversation that I couldn't start without you.

"What's the matter?" Oliver asked, clearly concerned.

I squared my shoulders and decided to deal with the matter head on. "Oliver, love, Harry and I have something we NEED to talk to you about. Something important..."

He turned pale, almost bone white, turned tail, and ran from our Quarters to his. Hurry up in there and come out here so we can go calm and soothe our skittish fiancé.

Anxiously,
Draco
Chapter 205

Chapter Summary

Oliver talks about his feeling on babies, and Draco is obsessed.

Chapter Notes

Trigger Warning Draco consults on a case concerning manipulation and coercion towards a minor

Saturday January 13, 2018

Good Morning Draco and Harry,

I have taken your suggestion and spent all of yesterday thinking about our discussion. Neither of you wanted me to make a rash decision, instead wanting me to really take my time to figure out how I felt. Wanting me to ignore my Gryffindor urge to go barreling into the fire, but really get in touch with my own feelings.

Not how I think I should feel to avoid upsetting either of you. Figure out how Oliver feels, not how Draco and Harry's fiance feels, Cassie and Parker's Dad feels, and especially not how Edmond's widower feels. Just Oliver Wood. What do I want? What do I need? What can I handle? What do I need to live and what can I not live without? I slept on it after the discussion, thought it over all day Friday, and slept on it again last night.

I'd like to apologize for running out on you at first Draco. After my emotional reaction to feeling like I'm holding you both back combined with knowing I'm still not ready to truly share either of you - or at least not share you with anyone who doesn't share our faces - when you said we needed to talk I panicked. I've fallen so hard and fast for you both. It took me a while to be able to say it, but I love you. I know that the both of you love me as well, but in that moment I knew everything had fallen apart and you were finished with me.

I guess my self-esteem needs a bit more work. I'll bring that up in my next mind healing session.

I love you both, it scares me how much. I also know how much I've fallen in love with these children you've brought into this relationship. I have seen how well Cassie and Parker's lives have intertwined with their new soon to be siblings' lives. I love this great big circle of people I've been lovingly accepted into. While losing your love would be devastating on its own, the thought of losing this family, these babies I love, these children who've wedged their way into my heart, of seeing my own two lose another family, and knowing it was because I couldn't get over some sex hangups was too much for me to bear.

Yes, I am aware after our talk that the thing we needed to talk about actually had nothing to do with sex. That isn't entirely true as sex is a necessary part of what we discussed, but it was not actually about any of my own sexual limitations.
I thought I had done such a good job of keeping my own baby fever in check. Years ago I came to terms with the fact that I would never have a biological child. I was fine with that. If I never had another child, my Cassie and my Parker would have been all I needed. Truly. The only thing I felt like I missed out on was baby-hood. Cassie wasn't even a month shy of two when we brought her home and Parker was four.

Then I was invited into your home, and even when I was just the friend who was crashing in your guest house I felt like I got this chance to really help raise these babies. I thought that if I were really lucky I could end up as their fun Uncle Oliver who was a failed quidditch star who lived in their backyard. Like one of those bloody awful sitcoms you're obsessed with Harry. Instead I find myself a third father to these little miracles. I still can't believe that despite me not being there for their conception, their pregnancies, or their births, that somehow I'm not even an "almost stepdad" but you both really think of me as their third father.

Draco, when we talked about having more children, you brought up meeting my needs. And these past hours with only my thoughts for company, I have come to the conclusion that I don't NEED to have more babies. No, I have thought about it long and hard. No disgusting long and hard innuendos Harry! I mean it, I do not need to have more babies. I have two beautiful children I got to raise before we came together. You are both right, we will end up with so many grandchildren to love and spoil. And while most of the older kids will likely see me as more of a step-dad than a traditional father, I really do think the four trouble-making little kids and the three small ones really will and do think of me as one of their dads. I have been able to enjoy the baby stage with these three practically from the beginning. I have every thing I will ever need.

And whether or not I would want more children, I will not ever want to bring a child into the world whose parents are not wholeheartedly invested in them. Not that I don't think either of you would be capable of loving a child you didn't plan for, but I don't ever want a child to be 'something Oliver wanted. and Harry or Draco put up with.' I'd rather not have had a single child than wish that on one of them.

That's why I feel so much of our discussion the other night was so backwards. I feel as though it was the two of you telling me all these reasons you would do this for me while I kept saying I didn't want a baby someone had to make me happy. It seemed at odds with how we have been feeling, it almost felt as though it was the both of you trying to talk me into having a child while I tried to talk you out of it.

Yesterday, I finally took the both of you up on your offer. Or gave in to your frequent requests. Or finally succumbed to your begging Harry! I read quite a few of your emails. I did not have time to read through eighteen years of them. So I kind of skimmed them. And yes, if you must know I obviously know how to type and I am not a bad hand at Microsoft Office work and was quickly able to search some key terms to find relevant emails. Yes, I actually know quite a bit about computers.

I am sorry for essentially lying to you both. It's not that I didn't want to read the emails. It's not that I haven't wanted to join in the adorable email exchange. I was just worried that it would be that one thing too many that I intruded on. That for all your offerings of reading the emails, you did want that relationship between the two of you to be private. I know now that I could not have been more wrong. I was just scared. Scared of losing you. Scared of falling too deep too fast. Scared knowing the two of you even better than I already do would mean an even bigger heartache when the both of you got sick of me. Again, I promise I will bring up the self-esteem issue my next appointment.

What I found when I finally allowed myself to read your words, is the both of you are absolute nutters! Sorry that sounded much meaner than I meant it. What I mean is, you are both absolutely in love with bringing children into your family. I don't know if it's the lonely childhoods as only children, the trauma of Harry's earliest years or the trauma we all have from the war, but it's like you were on a personal mission to create this massive family where everyone belongs. You wanted biological and adopted children and then ended up having absolutely no distinction between them inside the home. You wanted children you saved from the country you grew up in, and also traveled the world in case any of your children ended up born on a different continent.

No child of yours will live a single moment of feeling unwanted, un-cherished, unloved. And the further I dug, the more I realize that I think the both of YOU actually are the ones who want babies with me.

What was all this talk about picturing a baby with my features? I could have sobbed reading that. Do you both truly picture a baby with my face or my eyes mixed with either (or both?) of your features? I never dreamed someone would want that with me.

I don't want to trash on Edmond, before he began to lose his original personality he really was the first man I ever fell in love with. But when we were originally trying to get pregnant, he would always ... ALWAYS talk about how he wanted the baby to look like him and his family. Never once have I heard or seen someone I love dreaming "Of a teeny Oliver face with platinum hair or those deep brown eyes of his with my black curls?"

Every time you adopted another child or decided to start a pregnancy or continue a pregnancy, Draco you have gone on and on about "how will we ever do this, there are so many children already!" and then immediately gotten on board. To the point where in your very first emails you talked about possibly never being pregnant or maybe just the once so you had the experience, and then ended up being pregnant the most. So when your email to Harry the other day started with a long string of "No"s it immediately followed up with all the reasons it was best and all the ways you wanted to try and make it happen.

And Harry, if I am reading your previous emails correctly, you've said you don't particularly want to be pregnant again, and you don't really want Draco to go through another pregnancy. And you've talked about being done, but never once said you'd never want another child. You've even specifically said you didn't think either of you having another pregnancy was a good idea, and that you "are pretty sure the family feels complete but ..."

So, after the emails, our discussion, and then picturing the both of your faces when you tried telling me you would have more babies with me, I get the feeling you both not only are willing, but WANT more babies. With me.

That's why I say after this day and a half of soul searching, that I truly do not need a baby. But, if the both of you are willing and wanting, maybe not today or tomorrow, but I'd love to have a baby with you.

Sincerely,

Oliver

Monday January 15th

My loves,

My day started out with me dwelling obsessively on our plans for the future. Now that we've all admitted that we actually want at least one more child that officially and irrevocably belongs to all three of us (or possibly two, depending on how it works out), I'm - as I said - rather obsessed with the details.

First of all, I really am convinced that the best timing would be a late June, July, or early August baby so that Oliver can have him or her when off school for the summer and not have to worry about the logistics of trying to teach 11 year olds to fly whilst holding a two day old baby. Or feeling guilty about taking a paternity leave.

Although, I suppose that part wouldn't be so bad. If the paternity leave (AKA the baby's birth) happened to coincide with say the Christmas or Easter Hols, then there would only be a month in which a substitute needed to fill in, and I dare say there would be PLENTY of time to look for one. Maybe I could even do it, provided that it's NOT the initial lessons of the year, as I'm quite sure I would just make all the ickle firsties cry, and perhaps even scream with terror.

Which could be fun, if I'm honest...

And THEN there's the whole issue of that potion you mentioned, Harry. I honestly think it's feasible, and actually, I think Sebastian might have already created it. Remember him speculating a few years ago on - actually, you probably glazed over because it was talk about potions - anyway, he was speculating on how he could potentially tweak the illegally altered Polyjuice Potion specifically to allow Poly partners to create children with more than two parents. He then seemingly scrapped that idea because he personally could NOT ever picture using the potion.

But we all know how obsessed with Potions he is. I'm nearly certain that once he had the idea, he tried it, or at the very least came up with a sound theory and copious notes on how to start - what ingredients to use and in which order they should be added to the potion. Things like that.

I actually Insta-owled my brother asking him when would be a good time to meet up with him to discuss something, and he scheduled me the two hours after lunch tomorrow. But I think I might have to reschedule. See...

So as I was saying, I WAS obsessed with figuring out all the little details, when I decided to get ready and head into the Ministry early so I could focus on something else for a bit. THAT'S when I was derailed quite a bit.

What happened was that I had all three of the babies strapped to me - despite the fact that they're getting big enough that it's physically harder to do than when they were newer. I had Dylan on one hip, Gabriel on the other, and Morgana on my chest. They were all happy and content to look around and see what was what, and none of them seem bored yet with the rather dreary walls of the Ministry.

Thankfully, both of the boys are actually rather easy when it comes to things like this. They are generally happy babies who don't fuss unless they are getting tired or hungry - and very occasionally bored. Whereas Morgana is more of a handful in that I have to be careful to make sure no one touches or offends her, but so long as she's in my arms, she is a pure angel.

Yes, I will admit that I have noticed other people - those that she's consented to let them hold and or touch her - DO seem to have some difficulties with her being demanding and picky and prone to blowing things up, but for me, she's always quiet and attentive. I actually get the feeling that she's always watching everyone else and how I interact with them in a shockingly early attempt to plan out how to use them all to her advantage.

I wonder if this is partially from her sperm donor?

But moving on, as I seem to be doing that rambling thing where I WANT to get right to telling you the important thing, but feel I have to explain all the underlying details first so that the important thing makes sense. Although, in this case, the important thing really is self-explanatory enough that I don't really NEED to give you all the background details.

Alright, so, what happened was that I headed toward my office as I wanted to go through records of recent raids to see if Robards has gotten any better at running them, when the Head Auror himself spotted me. I had inadvertently gathered quite the crowd around me as most of the department wanted to see how the babies have grown and maybe try to persuade me to let them hold them - passing them around like a party game. Our boys were quite happy with this, but Morgana was glaring at anyone who looked in her direction, as if she sensed that people wanted to hold her.

"Oi, Malfoy, got a few minutes?"

"Yeah, just let me collect my boys," I informed him.

He shrugged. "Actually, there's no reason this can't be said right out in the open. See, I'm having a minor dilemma. About - oh - a month ago now, there apparently was a teenage girl who got into a major row with her parents and they kicked her out. Bletchley has had all the initial contact with this couple, and he tells me that they're not... very polite."

Bletchley snorted. "THAT'S a typical British understatement! They're right nasty! I'd suspect them both of being habitual criminals, but they are actually decently powerful enough that if they actually were committing crimes - such as stealing from muggles and the like - then they'd probably live in much better accommodations. As it is, they're on this rundown little farm that -"

"Bletchley, get to the point, no wait, let me," Robards interrupted. "As I was saying, this couple tossed their daughter out onto the streets, telling her not to come back until she changed her attitude. They apparently expected her to come back within a couple of days, as she'd done in the past."

I raised a brow, having a feeling that I knew where this was going. "But she didn't come back, is now missing, and I'M needed to help try to find her?" I held my hand out expectantly for a personal item belonging to the girl.

Robards shook his head. "Actually, no, we know exactly where she is. It seems that she and her parents have kept in contact via a Magimobile - mostly through Insta-owls."

I was a little confused now and my expression probably looked like I was lightly glaring at Robards so that he'd make sense again. "And...?"

"And they let her be for a couple of weeks because she reported being safe and unwilling to come home. They figured that it would still just be a matter of time. But then another week passed and they started to feel that it had been long enough and that she needed to come home already. This was when she told them that she'd been taken in by a nice older couple who offered to take care of her in every luxury provided that she give them something specific." I sighed and rubbed my forehead. "Let me guess, an Heir?"

Robards looked taken aback. "How did you know that?"

"They're what'shisface's parents, I'm almost certain. An older couple that lost their only son to a rather tragic degenerative disease a while back and are now doing everything in their power to have another heir to replace him so that their family fortune doesn't go to waste when they die."

He tilted his head side to side to acknowledge that I was right. "Now this is my dilemma: they're not technically doing anything wrong. They took in a girl that was ACTUALLY thrown out and needed a place to stay, and they are taking reportedly excellent care of her. They just..."

"Have gotten her pregnant?" I asked with a light shudder as I couldn't help but picture one disturbing way how.

Robards nodded with a heavy sigh. "And her parents are demanding her back, and they have all the legal rights, but I'm not certain she should go back to a couple who feel tossing her out is an acceptable punishment for her behavior."

I also sighed and ran a hand through my hair. "How old is she?"

"15."

The entire department was silent as we all mulled over this dilemma.

Then I sighed again. "I know it's not technically the legal way to go about it, but I think that the best course of action would be to send in a team or two to remove the girl from this couple's home, but rather than bring her back to her parents as is expected -"

"And legally required," Bletchley interjected.

"Bring her to Unity House and have a Mind Healer evaluate her," I finished. "The Department of Families and Children actually can write temporary orders for her to be detained until they have a chance to look into her parents and home life. Lastly, I'm dead certain this couple made her sign a magically binding contract, so they may actually have some legal right to her that will need to be looked into."

Robards was nodding and stroking his chin in thought. "We can legally detain her over the suspicion of her parents' possible mistreatment, despite the fact that Bletchley didn't see any of the warning signs we're trained to look for. If I rush a request to a member of the Wizengamot, they can even sign an order to have her remain at Unity until a Mind Healer clears her. But without some tangible evidence to back up our suspicions, not many of them will be willing to give us more than a couple of days."

"Still, that's enough time to get the Quaffle going," Bletchley observed.

I nodded in agreement.

"Thanks," Robards stated as he gave me a single pat on the shoulder. "You and you, give those adorable boys back, you're going out in a few minutes. And you two, you're going to back them up."

"Yes sir!"

"Do you have time to hang about?" Robards asked me as I accepted and set Gabriel in the wrap carrier on my hip.

"Yeah, I have an hour or so before I need to meet with the Minister," I informed him.

"Good, come to my office and we'll see what we can do about getting our hands on that legal document they had her sign," Robards said.

"And see if there's anything we can do about it," I murmured as I took Dylan and set him in his wrap carrier.
"Precisely."

And so that's why I'm now obsessing over a girl I've never met - whose name I don't even know - and simultaneously driving Robards mad with my typing. On the other hand, he's using the time while we wait to get on the floor with the boys and entertain them with conjured toys, so, that's actually a bit entertaining in and of itself. I'm going to sign off now and call our lawyers to see if maybe they can expedite things a bit.

All of me,
Draco
Monday January 15, 2018

Oh Helllll No!

There is no way this is happening. Nope, nuh uh, I refuse to allow it.

I already called your mum and the Malfoy lawyer armada. This is not happening. I don't care how ironclad the magical contract is. Do.Not.Care. She's fifteen. Fifteen! They want some contract that binds her magically or some other nonsense? That's fine. Fiiiiinnnnnneeeee! You know why?

She's a minor. We may not be able to get her out of a contract that has magical elements to it even if she's a minor, believe me I know that more than anyone else. But. They impregnated a minor. With or without her consent shouldn't be an issue. Alright so this child ends up being their heir. We might not be able to help that. But they're going to have a hard time warping the child's tiny mind from a cell in Azkaban. Yeah, especially if she hadn't been emancipated and still technically had adult guardians, there has to be a loophole to them creating a contract without parental consent.

Depending on how the insemination happened we could even make a statutory case.

Fifteen. I swear to Merlin, if they don't end up in Azkaban they'd better find a hell of a good secret keeper.

Even if I didn't hate them for what they did to our Ollie, or knowing how they hurt our Cassie and Parker, or hearing about their awful, outdated, bigoted, and unscientific stipulations for their potential surrogates, knowing they held a place to sleep over the head of a homeless teenager would make we want to hurt them.

Without any of that I would want to make them pay for what they did to Oliver, Parker, and Cassie. Those absolute monsters. They don't deserve to be near any child, let alone raise one. And if they had such an easy time impregnating this child-surrogate then how did Oliver and Edmond spend years trying with no success? An elderly couple can impregnate a surrogate with ease but two active healthy wizards don't conceive at all? It's weird right?

Hold on a moment, Draco.

Dictation device switches on when Harry walks away without sending the email

"Ollie, what's going on. You're hyperventilating. Breathe baby, breathe I've got you. Deep breaths come on, in ... out ... in ... out ... that's it sweetheart."

"Ha - Har - Harry, what if I can't get pregnant? You and Draco don't want to carry another baby. I never got pregnant with Edmond. What, what if, what if I can't? I drank all those potions and his parents even plied me with that godawful floral tea constantly. If I never see that queen anne's lace ever again ..." whimpering and snuffling can be heard from Oliver

"Hey, hey love, if you can't conceive that's fine. We'll figure it out. I don't particularly want to carry again if there's another option, but I will if that's what we need to do for our family. I promise. I've done it before, I can do it again. I love you. Draco loves you. Please don't stress yourself out."

"Oh, cool Draco must have activated that auto-start for the dictation device he told me about!"
Draco, I am going to comfort our love. You keep us posted on the ex douchebag-in-laws. But come home soon, I think our Oliver needs us both. He's awfully upset.

Yours,
Harry

Monday January 15th
My beloved husband and fiancé,

I'm on my way home from work soon, I promise, but first... Did you say Queen Anne's Lace? One moment please...

I thought so. I had to look it up a moment, but thankfully Hermione has nearly every book in existence in her tiny purse library. Queen Anne's Lace is a CONTRACEPTIVE herb. Oliver, maybe at least part of the reason you never conceived is that it seems your in-laws were actively trying to prevent it.

Yes... after another bit of extensive research - sped up exponentially by Hermione and her ability to find information in mere seconds - I've confirmed that QAL is not just a contraceptive herb, but also rather effective at rendering the potion useless. See, even an inferior potion would generally override basic contraceptive measure - such as a spell. For example, Farrah and Orion. HOWEVER, this particular herb interacts with a fertility potion so strongly that it basically renders it impotent. Pun sort of intended.

Presumably, they must have also slipped the herb to their son as well, and he simply trusted them that it was intended to HELP the two of you overcome your infertility issues.

Alright, I NEED to sign off and get home to comfort our Oliver.

See you in less than a minute,
Draco
My Love,

I’m busy comforting our Oliver, poor little love is an absolute mess. I’m so thankful you’ll be here soon to help. I really think he needs the both of us.

But we WILL be discussing this at length. Very very soon.

Yours,
Harry

Tuesday January 16th
My wonderful men,

How did I get so lucky to have you?

So, last night was rather rough. First poor Oliver had to be confronted by the fact that his ex-in-laws have managed to succeed in their goal to replace their Heir. THEN he found out that they actively prevented him from conceiving that child he so desperately wanted. The one that SHOULD have been their rightful Heir's Heir.

We held onto and comforted him for hours before managing to help him get a good, peaceful night's sleep. Thankfully, you were both able to get up and do your jobs today, and so, you must be feeling better - Oliver - unless you're just good at pushing your feelings aside until a better time. I know you're probably going to be chatting with your Mind Healer today.

As for me, my day had a bit of an early start. Nothing too bad, maybe ten minutes before I would have woken up anyway. I was still in bed asleep, when a timid but persistent knock on the door to our quarters woke me. Since I was still more or less asleep, I simply snarled for whoever it was to come in already or go the fuck away.

To my surprise, that boy I never learned the name of - the Hufflepuff I referred to as Romeo - came into our quarters, all the way into our bedroom because my snarling had woken up Dylan, who was now fussing rather loudly - which tipped the boy off as to our location. I sat up and ordered Muffy to see to Gabriel and Morgana while Dibly was attending to Dylan and calming him down.

"Mr. Malfoy...?" Romeo murmured in a wobbly voice.

"Is there something I can help you with?" I asked, rubbing the sleep out of my eyes and doing my best not to start snarling again.

This boy apparently has NO concept of personal space, because he crawled into our bed and gave me enormous watery eyes. "Can I talk to you?"

"Of course, just..." I attempted to tell him to give me five minutes to get up and pull something on, but he burst out sobbing before I could say a thing.

"It's Crispin! He doesn't love me!" Romeo wailed.

"Er..." I faltered because I haven't actually had to console any of our kids after a heartbreak before.
I think the closest was River after Ananda, but I'm almost certain YOU took on the consoling portion of that fiasco, Harry. Thankfully, I didn't have to say anything yet.

"He broke up with me! He said he gave it a good try, but that he just ISN'T gay!"

At this point, Romeo flung himself into my lap so he could cry buckets all over my blanket. I felt a powerful sense of compassion overcome me, despite the fact that I would have still quite liked to snarl and rage at the boy who'd interrupted my sleep. Instead, I stroked his hair and made soothing noises for a bit before venturing an opinion.

"I know it seems cruel, but if he broke up with you because he isn't gay, then you are far better off waiting until you can find someone who is. Someone who can genuinely love you for you."

"But I LOVE CRISPIN!" Romeo protested in a sob so hard he had to wipe a flood off his face just to be understood.

"I know," I murmured, still stroking his hair.

"What would you have - hiccups - done if - hiccups - Harry Potter had hated you rather than love you?"

I scoffed, amused despite the fact that it wasn't helpful to the situation in the slightest. "Harry DID hate me, but my situation has NOTHING to do with yours, so the same actions don't apply here."

Romeo was trying hard to calm down. "But if Harry Potter hated you and you managed to make him marry you anyway, then what did you do to win him over?"

"I honestly have no idea," I murmured with a baffled shake of my head.

"Did you give him a potion to make him love you? Or maybe a potion to make him turn gay and want to be with you?"

"No! Why does everyone think that???" I asked rhetorically.

"Then what DID you do?"

"I decided to make every effort to be his FRIEND - from the nice, comfortable safety of my laptop," I replied. "But as I said, the situation is vastly different because you just said Crispin isn't gay, and you CAN'T make someone gay if they're not."

"But you must have done SOMETHING to make Harry Potter turn gay and fall in love with you!" Romeo insisted.

I gave him a mildly insulted look. Then I sighed and shook my head. "I didn't turn Harry gay. A person is BORN with a preference, and even if they are willing to try the other side for a while, if they're not into it, you CAN'T force them to suddenly be what you want them to be."

"Then what CAN I do?!" Romeo demanded in desperation.

"You can respect his decision to break up with you, be his friend if you're both still willing to give that a go, and wait patiently until you meet the RIGHT person."

This made Romeo cry again, burying his face back in my lap. His arms were around me as he sobbed his poor little heart out. I continued to stroke his hair even as I silently signed an order to Muffy to obtain biscuits and tea. Eventually, the boy cried himself to sleep, in essence trapping me in bed with him on my lap. I even had to use a vanishing spell on the contents of my bladder!

You popped in after your first afternoon class, probably to see why I hadn't made it to the Great Hall for lunch, and by the silent look on your face, you were curious about but accepting of the fact that I had a kid sleeping in our bed on my lap. You didn't even risk waking him, simply waved at me and left - which I'm actually a bit miffed about as I would have preferred you to help me deal with the kid as I was getting a bit desperate to get out of bed and start on my morning routine.

Thank Merlin that Oliver arrived about a half an hour later to change or something before after school activities began. He came into the room and grinned at the sight of me trapped in bed under a surprisingly heavy kid - especially considering how tiny he looked. My poor legs were practically dead by that point!

"Why don't you just shift him off you?" Oliver signed.

"And risk waking him up so he can start sobbing all over again? No thank you!" I signed back.

Chuckling, Oliver sat on the bed and started rubbing Romeo's back until the boy woke up and gave Oliver a wary look.

"You must be the boy that's been missing since before lunch. Professor Sprout's nearly torn the castle apart looking for you," Oliver informed him.

"She has?!" Romeo asked in astonishment.

"Maybe you should go tell her that you're not lying dead in the Forbidden Forest, yeah?" Oliver suggested making Romeo yelp in alarm.

I chuckled. "Let me give you a note saying that you were having an important chat with me and are excused from your classes for the time you missed." I offered even as I conjured up a piece of parchment and wrote said note.

After Romeo took the note and ran off, I pulled Oliver close and kissed him gratefully. "Thank you so much for rescuing me!"

He gave me a smoky grin and caressed my back. "My pleasure."

Which led to a bit of playing around before he had to run off to supervise a Quidditch practice or some such. That left me with just barely enough time to get ready and write this email before I have to rush off to my job. See you when I get home tonight!

It's going down, I'm yelling timber, you'd better move, you'd better dance,

Draco
Here's an updated Kids list that includes the newest babies.

Ages as of January 1, 2018

Harry and Draco Malfoy: Oliver Wood

Elena Rojas Malfoy:

- Age 27
- Birthday October 22, 1990
- Ravenclaw (Graduated)
- Rafael Rojas Malfoy
- Birthday December 20, 2016

River Lewis Malfoy: Mahafsoun Malfoy

- Age 21
- Birthday March 21, 1996
- Hogwarts House unknown; assumed Hufflepuff
- Evangeline Maharet Malfoy
- Birthday December 9, 2017

Viona Skye Malfoy: Alric Avery

- Age 18
- Birthday January 24, 1999
- Slytherin graduate
- Godparents Hermione and Greg

Eris Lyra Malfoy

- Age 17
- Birthday April 9, 2000
• Slytherin graduate
• Godparents Pansy and Luna
• Luka Malfoy
• March 19, 2017

Orion Draco Malfoy

• Age 17
• Birthday April 9, 2000
• Ravenclaw graduate
• Godparents Ron and Blaise
• Gemini Orion Malfoy
• Birthday December 21, 2017

Hazel Storm Malfoy

• Age 17
• Birthday May 13, 2000
• Slytherin graduate
• Godparents Neville and Luna

Shtara Malfoy

• Age 14
• Birthday January 6, 2003
• Muggle

Sirius James Malfoy

• Age 14
• Birthday July 30, 2003
• Gryffindor 4th Year
• Godparents Charlie and Millie

Draco Lucius Malfoy Jr – “Zwei”

• Age 13
• Birthday July 30, 2004
• Gryffindor 3rd Year
- Godparents Dudley and Donna

Zaire Langa Malfoy
- Age 11
- Birthday May 2, 2006
- Godparents Kisa and Sebastian
- House Unknown: Hat sorted Hufflepuff

Jasmine Kamaria Malfoy
- Age 8
- Birthday February 9, 2009
- Godparents George and Angelina

Persephone Hikari Malfoy
- Age 7
- Birthday April 21, 2010
- Godparents Miles and Eliza

Lily Narcissa Malfoy
- Age 7
- Birthday May 19, 2010
- Godparents Sirius and Ginny

Caelum Arthur Malfoy
- Age 7
- Birthday May 19, 2010
- Godparents Viper and Yesenia

Atreyu Miguel Malfoy
- Age 6
- Birthday September 30, 2011
- Godparents Bill and Teddy

Gabriel Pan Potter
- Birthday March 14, 2017
- Godparents Gavin and Della
Dylan Sheen Potter
- Birthday: March 14, 2017
- Godparents: Dean and Seamus

Morgana Guinevere Malfoy
- Date of Birth: April 5, 2017
- Godparents: Mahafsoun and Tiger

Cassiopeia (Mulciber) Wood
- Date of Birth: September 1, 1997

Parker (Ballard) Wood
- Date of Birth: March 5, 1996

Pansy and Ivan St. Peter

Pearl St. Peter
- Age: 16
- Date of Birth: January 10, 2001
- Goddaughter: Draco’s Goddaughter

Paige St. Peter
- Age: 14
- Date of Birth: November 30, 2003

Narcissa and Lucius Malfoy

Eliza Lestrange Malfoy
- Age: 22
- Date of Birth: October 10, 1995
- Birth Parents: Rodolphus Lestrange and Gina Mitchell
- Slytherin Graduate

Sebastian Snape Malfoy
- Age: 21
- Date of Birth: September 10, 1996
• Birth Parents Severus Snape and Gina Mitchell
• Slytherin Graduate
• See Delphini for Children info

Gavin Mitchell Malfoy
• Age 19
• January 30, 1998
• Birth Parents Lucius Malfoy and Gina Mitchell
• Ravenclaw Graduate

Della Andromeda Malfoy
• Age 19
• March 8, 1998
• Birth Parents Bellatrix Lestrange and Rodolphus Lestrange
• Slytherin Graduate

George and Angelina

Phillip Moss Weasley
• Age 27
• August 4, 1990

Mackenzie Campbell Weasley
• Age 23
• February 1, 1994
• Hufflepuff Graduate

Fred Weasley II
• Age 12
• November 12, 2005

Roxanne Weasley
• Age 10
• July 7, 2007
Harry Potter’s – The Viper - and Draco Malfoy - The Tiger

Delphini Lestrange Riddle Potter

- Age 19
- March 8, 1998
- Biological Parents Bellatrix Lestrange and Voldemort
- Hogwarts Graduate
- Balian (Snape) Potter
  - Birthday February 14, 2017
- Vanessa (Snape) Potter
  - Birthday June 15, 2008

Tommy Riddle Potter

- Age 18
- February 20, 1999
- Biological Parents Harry Potter and Voldemort
- Hogwarts Graduate

Bellerophon Riddle Lestrange Potter

- Age 18
- August 22, 1999
- Biological Parents Bellatrix Lestrange and Voldemort
- Hogwarts Graduate

Harrison Riddle Potter

- Age 17
- May 13, 2000
- Biological Parents Harry Potter and Voldemort
- Hogwarts graduate

Scorpius Potter-Malfoy

- Age 6
- October 18, 2011

Hyperion Potter-Malfoy
Dudley and Donna Dursley

Daisy Dursley

- Age 17
- February 28, 2000
- Hogwarts 7th Year

Donald Dursley

- Age 14
- September 23, 2003
- Hogwarts 3rd Year

Dustin Dursley

- Age 9
- June 29, 2008

Percy and Audrey Weasley

Molly Weasley II

- Age 15
- August 15, 2002
- Gryffindor 5th Year

Lucy Weasley

- Age 9
- March 4, 2008

Blaise Zabini – Hermione Granger – Ron Weasley – Kisa – The Quartet

Roderick Oliver Weasley

- Age 17
- March 22, 2000
• Assumed Ron’s biologically
• Godparents Harry and Draco

Bianca Evangeline Weasley
• Age 17
• March 22, 2000
• Assumed Blaise’s biologically
• Godparents Harry and Draco

Veronica Zabini
• Age 14
• March 12, 2003
• Assumed Blaise’s biologically

Anastacia Zabini
• Age 13
• November 19, 2004
• Assumed Ron’s biologically

Tristan Matteo Weasley
• Age 6
• March 31, 2010

Misha Rurik Zabini
• Age 7
• April 2, 2010
• Biologically Blaise and Kisa’s

Tatyana Zabini
• Age 4
• February 15, 2013
• Biologically Blaise and Kisa’s

Aleksei Zabini
• Age 1
• August 18, 2016
• Biologically Blaise and Kisa’s

Bill and Fleur Weasley

Victoire Weasley
• Age 19
• May 2, 1998
• Hogwarts Graduate

Dominique Weasley
• Age 15
• August 26, 2002
• Hogwarts 5th Year

Louis Weasley
• Age 11
• December 24, 2006

Miles Meaney and Colm O’Brian

Samantha Meaney
• Age 16
• June 7, 2001
• Ravenclaw 6th Year

Charlotte Meaney
• Age 7
• July 1, 2010

Greg Goyle and Millicent Bulstrode

Mason Goyle
• Age 13
• December 17, 2004
• Hogwarts 2nd Year
Greta Goyle
- Age 11
- September 3, 2006

Remus and Tonks
Edward Remus Lupin
- Age 19
- April 15, 1998
- Gryffindor Graduate
- Godfather Harry

Neville and Charlie
Frank Weasley-Longbottom
- Age 9
- December 6, 2008
Alice Weasley-Longbottom
- Age 4
- September 7, 2013

Ginny and Viktor
Keisha Krum
- Age 9
- October 1, 2008

Finnigan and Beatrix
Blake Gerald Fawley
- Age 7
- March 17, 2010
Yesenia

Diego Garcia

- Age 7
- May 9, 2010

Sirius and:

Pippa

Pierre Middleton-Black

- February 28, 2017

Leah

Leon Caughey-Black

- March 31, 2017
Chapter 209

Chapter Summary

Harry is happy and rather panicky, Draco is a complete mess, and Oliver is shocked.

Chapter Notes

WARNING! Angst head!

Wednesday January 17, 2018

My Fiancés!

We are getting married in sixty-six days! Less than ten weeks! We haven't done a single thing! Not one. The only thing we've done is set a date.

Okay, then that means we've done one thing. ONE. Or I suppose we have all agreed that we want something small and intimate with just the families and our circle. That is technically two things. But still, we are getting married in sixty-six days and have two things planned. And they're pretty much two of the easiest things to figure out.

I assume you both saw my opening salutation of this email, well Draco I don't want to hurt your feelings, you are my husband. But, while husband and fiance are your current technical titles, I think it's not exactly realistic. We are all three getting married. To each other. Binding ourselves into this beautiful triad. It will be the beginning of a new marriage for all of us. I've made such a big deal about how this isn't just Oliver joining our existing marriage, it's the beginning of our triad, and then I've continued to say husband and fiancé.

These last months and weeks before that happens I really want to treat this as the beginning of our lives together. That means I am not only marrying Oliver but I am remarrying Draco. So, for the next sixty-six days I am going to refer to both of you as my fiancés.

I hope you understand what I mean. It's kind of hard to explain. Our society is so entrenched in traditional relationships between two people that there really is no way for me to describe how I'm feeling. This marriage we're entering is almost a mixture of four marriages. Because I have to have a one on one, deep intense loving relationship between just Draco and I, between just Oliver and I, you two have to have the same with just each other, and then we need to have the same but including all three of us at once. Each individual relationship has to be treated as equally important as the others, while maintaining the idea that the triad holds the highest priority.

Anyway, I just can't prepare myself for that, consider this a fresh start, emotionally ready myself for this brand new marriage, while using the two different terms to describe you both.

But mentally preparing myself for the upcoming marriage is exactly why I am freaking out. I need to prepare to enter this marriage and we need to prepare a ceremony, and we've done nothing! Or again, nothing but those two things. We need to get on this.

Just before I sat down to write this email I messaged the mums. I have the entire afternoon free of classes tomorrow, Ollie doesn't have any flying to oversee, and Draco never goes in to the Ministry until the evening anyway. So I want to really sit down and make a couple of strategic decisions together so that this weekend some mixture of the three of us and the mums can sit down and really finalize some decisions, begin to order things, etcetera.

I figure at the bare minimum we should decide a color scheme, who if anyone is going to stand up with us, flower preferences, and food preferences. I have some ideas but honestly I would be willing to have the color scheme my least favorite colors, Robards be my best man, twigs, and a raw seafood buffet as long as it meant I got to marry the two of you. At the end of the day, that is all that matters. My men, my loves, our future.

We will obviously talk about this tomorrow but I do have a few ideas. I have gone back and forth on colors (you know I could plan weddings forever if given the chance) and I have an idea. What if we did a really earthy version of our eyes? I'm picturing browns, greens, and gun-smoke grey as a color palette. I'm picturing the colors of a spring morning in the woods of the Manor. Deep browns like trees and our Oliver's eyes, mossy green like we're looking at the leaves through a smoky grey early morning fog.

You also know I'd really like some lilies and narcissus in the flower arrangements. And I think we should see if Zaire wants his restaurant to cater the wedding. I like the idea of his menu having so many different flavors from different parts of the world that we really can have the option to have something that will please everyone.

Again I say, these are just ideas, I will take anything as long as I end up with the two most amazing husbands to ever exist.

I have some good news from the mums too! Narcissa and Molly are going to be there but Ollie I heard back from your mum and she's thrilled to be included and can't wait until Saturday to help us plan the big day. I know you've been trying so hard to rebuild your relationship with your parents. Hopefully this is the first step to really regaining a solid relationship! I can't wait to get to know Iris. This motherless orphan can't wait to add another mum to his collection!

Off to panic more about how much we have to do with such little time!

Your fiancé,
Harry

Thursday January 18th
How can you love me?
I... am a murderer.

I'm not just talking about the time I had to kill a person to defend our babies, nor the time that I was completely willing to kill Zaire's birth monster but you beat me to it. No.

I'm talking about Farrah.

Her skull arrived today, which means that someone had to dig it up, remove all the flesh, and send me the bones. When I first saw the package from Grandmama - which arrived very shortly after I woke up - my first thought was that maybe she'd sent me a preliminary wedding present. An engagement present.

This was definitely NOT a present!

As I sat in bed, holding her skull in my hands, I wondered when I would have time to bring it to the Family Dark Vault and put it with all the others we've collected over the years. Then I had a moment to be grateful that I personally am not responsible for the majority of the collection, as I have only ever asked my dearest Grandmama for a favor once before - and that was those who raped me, which I asked for so shortly after the war that I was still too young to really think about what it was I was actually asking.

That said, I never truly felt remorse for asking for their deaths, considering what they did to me, and what they probably would have done to others had they lived. Even Yesenia said I should consider their deaths casualties of the Wizarding War.

So, when I saw the toll Farrah was taking on Orion, I convinced myself that something needed to be done. That I was PROTECTING our son and his baby by eliminating a threat to their health and happiness. So I made a potion that I ordered Orion's house elf to give to Farrah that sped up her pregnancy by making the baby grow at an accelerated rate.

Then... the MOMENT Gemini was born... alright, not the moment but a few hours later when I returned home to my wonderful sleeping men, I called my sweet Grandmama and asked her to murder Farrah and be certain that it looked like a suicide. I wasn't thinking...

I wasn't thinking about Farrah, and I wasn't really thinking about Orion. I mean yes, I was thinking about his future happiness, but not about his present feelings. I had NO IDEA how much grief he would feel when he found out that she was dead. How much pain and anguish he would feel over her suicide - how the fact that my Grandmama used the baby being intersex as an excuse was like a twist of the knife.

I spent the week following her death utterly numb, and covered it up by focusing on the funeral and then election. I pushed away all thoughts of what I'd done and did my best to be there for Orion. But now...

I held the skull in my hands and could not stop the flood of tears. You said it yourself, Harry, that it was a waste of a life. I - Draco Malfoy, the man who has spent his whole life atoning for the sins of his youth - committed the ultimate sin. Murder.

I. Am. A. Murderer.

And the worst part about this whole extremely bad idea is that Orion WILL find out about it eventually. Even if he has no reason to go into the Dark Vault any time soon, he is the Heir to our family, and so, he's been to the vault, knows its location, and WILL eventually be the man in charge of going in there and making sure that none of the dark artifacts resting there have gone out of control. That they're all still safe and asleep in their cozy little high security vault.

How do you think he's going to feel when he sees a skull on a shelf with all the others that has his dead wife's name engraved on it? If I'm not already dead at that point, do you think he'd ever speak to me again?

Oh sure, I may not have raised my own two hands against her, but it was me that made the request; do you really think that ORION is going to think of me as anything less than a murderer?

Oh Harry...
A few minutes pass as Draco succumbs to his tears

Harry, this is Oliver, I'm finishing up this email and hitting send, but I'm also about to send you an Insta-owl. You said you had the afternoon off, but you must be lingering with some students, because you haven't returned to our quarters yet. Drop everything and get here this instant! Draco's sobbing hysterically and I don't have time to read his bloody email to figure out why!

Doing my best to calm and soothe him,
Oliver
P.S. I really don't think I've EVER seen Draco cry before!
Chapter 210

Chapter Summary

The boys have joint therapy and process their feelings.

Thursday January 18, 2018

My repentant little sinner,

Ollie and I finally got you calmed down, although it's probably less that you're calm and more that you sobbed yourself to sleep. You tried talking through your cries, but even me who knew what was happening couldn't translate the garbled mess. We're lying on our bed and your flushed face is in Oliver's lap while your bottom half is in my own. Even in sleep you are distraught, giving painful little whimpers every so often.

Now that the immediate crisis is over, I am going to explain to Ollie exactly what's happened. I am going to explain a bit and then let him read your email that started this whole thing. But first I have to tell you that I love you, I will always love you, and even though I really don't know how I feel about everything that's happened I do know without a doubt that I still completely love and respect you and can't wait to remarry you.

-

Well, telling Oliver went .... better than it could have but not great. He hasn't spoken since I finished the explanation, he's just staring off into space with wide eyes. But he hasn't left the room or the bed, didn't push your head off his lap, and is still running his hands soothingly through your hair. I have to assume if this was some sort of deal-breaker for him he wouldn't be lovingly trying to calm your sleeping self.

I think he knew in a very theoretical way what having ties to the Russian mafia meant. And to be completely honest with you, I think I really only thought about it in a theoretical way. It's one thing for me to say "I am going to tell Grandmama" on someone I barely know but has harmed our family immensely, but somehow being slapped in the face with the death of my son's wife is making it real in a way it never has before.

I just keep telling myself that if this hadn't resulted in a pregnancy or a baby, I would have absolutely no qualms about something like this happening to my son's rapist. The pregnancy is really the only thing that changes the description of her from rapist to wife. But even with that knowledge I am still having a really hard time. I too worry that some day Ori and Gemini, if or when they find out, will resent you for it. I don't resent you for it, but I can't speak for anyone else.

I am wondering if this one of those secrets we take to our graves. Remove the evidence from the family vault, have it reburied with the rest of her, and just carry our guilty feelings with us. A weight we deserve to carry because of decisions we made. I've taken lives, my first one at only eleven years old as you'll remember. I've gone to therapy to come to terms with it. But the guilt is a permanent fixture for me. The guilt of ending even Voldemort's life is a weight I am willing to carry. It's the cost I'm willing to bear for something that needed to happen.
I can't tell you that the weight will be easy to bear. I can't tell you it was the right decision. But it's a decision that was made and now we have to live with it. And before you assume you have to bear it all on your own, you are not completely responsible. You didn't abuse someone you claim to love as Farrah did. You asked Grandmama and she could have easily said it wasn't something she was willing to have done. The person who physically did the deed could have refused Grandmama. When Ollie told me what he overheard on your magi-skype session I could have stopped you. When Ollie asked you about it and you gave us a ridiculous lie he and I could have called you on it.

I will help you carry whatever grief, guilt, or sadness you feel. I love you.

I already contacted our three mind healers and they will all be here in roughly an hour for an emergency joint session. We can hash this all out and figure out how we heal from here.

I'll stand by you,
Harry

Thursday Jan 18th
Dear Draco,

Oliver here! I just wanted to reinforce a few of the things that came up during our joint Mind Healing session. First of all, DON'T get used to me emailing, it's still not my cup of tea, but since you two have taken to CCing me so that I can at least read them, I feel like I might occasionally send a reply.

Anyway, here's the most important thing I want to reinforce: Draco, I do still love you. I wasn't sure I could deal with the idea of marrying a murderer - at first - but then I sat thinking about how truly sorry you were. How much you had sobbed all over me because you FEEL anguished over what you did. If I had found this out at a time when you were like: "So what? It needed to be done and I'll never regret killing that little bitch," THEN I would have walked away and never looked back.

But you... First of all, you DID try to protect everyone else from this knowledge. You lied and said that nothing had happened, and I believed you because I guess I just DIDN'T want to think about what it would mean if you had done it. But I'll admit that I wondered. I mean come on, in literally one sentence, you deny having Farrah killed - despite the fact that I literally HEARD you order something to look like a suicide and leave no room for doubts - and then in practically the next sentence, you announced that Farrah had committed suicide.

I suppose that somewhere in the back of my head, I had connected the dots and chosen not to care.

The other thing that really reassured ME during our joint session (Although my Mind Healer, Mia, is still rather miffed about being bound by an Unbreakable Vow), is that you and Harry both (while crying lightly, which is more or less normal for Harry, but very unusual for you) VOWED to NEVER again do something like this. I rather gather that in the past, it's been joked about between the two of you. That anytime someone does something to cross our family, a threat to call Grandmama is made. So much so that I've even heard the KIDS say that!

But this incident has hurt you so much that you will never again call Grandmama (Does she REALLY insist on being called that???) to have her kill someone. It doesn't matter what they've done, you've refused to play Judge, Jury, and Executioner - in essence acting like God over someone else's life.
That right there has really helped me push through my misgivings and reaffirm that I can and do still love you (both) despite this dark moment in our lives. Also, even though I myself have also vowed to never ask for this particular favor, I will admit that it's interesting to think about having the possibility. What if someone was stalking and/or hurting one of our kids? I think I'd be tempted - or else I'd just murder that person myself.

As for the whole discussion on Orion, I really don't feel like I CAN say anything on the matter as he's too old for me to suddenly come into his life and say: "I'm your stepdad now, so you have to do what I say." But that said, I agree with Harry. This is one of those things that he should NEVER find out about. It will do NOTHING but hurt him to know the truth, and the only one who might feel better knowing the truth is Gemini, but even then, it's going to be hard to know that his/her (what was that word you used Draco?) mother DIDN'T kill herself because of the reason given, but rather was murdered by loving Grandpa Draco.

Yeah... that's not going to feel much better, I imagine.

So, even though I'm not certain it's the right thing to do, I think Harry's suggestion has real merit. We rebury her skull with the rest of her body, and then somehow arrange for the Healers to find something wrong with Farrah - much like my Edmond had - that can explain why she was so mentally unstable to begin with, and also explain why she did what she did. It's NOT the baby's fault, it's the illness. Yeah?

So... I need to change the subject for a moment, Draco. See, I know that you were watching me warily, as if extremely worried that I was going to dump you, and while I will admit that I thought about it for a few minutes, I want to reassure you that I decided that you deserve another chance. That I truly believe that you are sorry and genuinely will NEVER do this again.

I still love you and believe you are a good person at heart.

Anxiously awaiting our wedding,
Oliver
P.S. So... Can we do that trial run you talked about? Curse me into a Damsel and spend a night doing anything and everything you want to me? What do you think?

P.P.S. And Harry, are you on board with this suggestion too?

Friday January 19th
Dearest Harry and Oliver,

I've taken the day off work, brought all the littles to my parents for the day, and have decided to go to my Adventure Park and try the Cave of Inferi. If I'm still at it by dinner time, maybe come let me know how much time has passed?

Love,
Draco
Chapter 211

Chapter Summary

Harry and Oliver get some much needed stress relief, and so does Draco.

Chapter Notes

See the end of the chapter for notes

Friday January 19, 2018

Our Draco,

Ollie and I just had the most fun afternoon in London. The only thing missing from making it one of the best days was you not being with us.

Ugh, there's just been so much stress and drama and real life getting in the way of silly nonsense. Not that everything has been bad, not even most of it has been bad. Prepping and beginning our new jobs as Professors took up a lot of time and that wasn't bad in any way, although it was stressful. Gaining new grandchildren meant traveling to other continents and sitting in hospitals. That definitely was stressful and parts were hard to deal with, but overall still fantastic.

All of these time and energy draining events have meant not a lot of time for being ridiculous. And you know how much I need to occasionally be absolutely ridiculous! Especially after the gutwrenching discussions over the last few days, Oliver and I needed some giggles in our life. We actually came hunting for you after our classes were finished for the day, but you had already headed out for Adventure Park.

Don't worry, we didn't burst in and pull you out when we first saw where you had gone, but as soon as I've finished writing and sending this we are coming to drag you off.

When we realized we had the afternoon free and the littles were already happily playing with their grandparents, we decided to take advantage of some time alone and .... went to London to run some errands.

Okay, I am making that sound like much less fun than it actually was. The errands we ran were, erm, sexy in nature. Since Oliver has so graciously asked for a night spent as a damsel, we decided we needed some supplies. Although our entire trip could be a big waste since you never replied that you were interested in taking advantage of shagging the female version of our Oliver. Maybe you have lost interest and don't want to sink yourself deep into his hot and wet depths. Perhaps you have no interest in tasting him, making him come undone with a combination of your lips, your tongue, and those gorgeous long fingers.

Ha, not bloody likely!

Since we're doing the trial run but we really don't want Ollie to get pregnant yet, we decided to err on the side of caution. Which means we'll be using the standard protection spells, trying to have the happy ending happen outside of the baby factory, but also using Muggle contraceptives. Not exactly something we're going to be able to pick up on Diagon Alley or anything! So off to London we went!

Now we could have easily just run into the closest Tesco and grabbed a package or two, but where's the fun in that? Instead, we decided to do a trip to Regulation. Yes my love, you read that correctly, you missed Ollie's first ever trip to Regulation! Don't worry, he had such a delightful time there that he already wants to go back. Also, we only got a few small things, we decided not to buy anything new, fun, or exciting without you.

Doesn't mean we didn't look!

That's where most of the giggling happened. Honestly Draco, we were just going to grab some condoms and some new lube. It was on the way to the display of lubes that Oliver got distracted by all the fetishwear. He got so excited and started talking about wearing the different items. It took everything in my power not to throw him to the floor and shag him senseless when he mentioned loving the leather look and asking me how I thought he'd look in a leather jock with matching harness. Ungh, rrrmmp, I think there'd be a lot of me drooling is what would happen!

Then we decided to look at all of the fetish gear and could not stop giggling. Eventually Ollie was thinking about getting some items for the big damsel night. Silly man, you're going to look like a woman, these men specific items are probably not what we should look for.

That's when we decided to pay for the condoms and lube and head over to our favorite lingerie shop. We will not be showing you anything until the big night, just know you have a delightfully lacy surprise waiting for you! You get to see the sexy end result, I got to see Ollie trying to figure out how to try on some of the more elaborate pieces. At one point he lost his balance, fell into the mirror, and left an arse-print on the glass!

Now that that's done, we're going to come get you. I just fed the babies and handed them back off to your parents, so it will be a lovely dinner just the three of us. Since we missed our wedding planning session the other day, I figure we can chat a bit about that so we're all on the same page for tomorrow's meeting with the mums!

Hope you're all inferi'ed out because we're on our way.

Love,
Harry and Oliver

Friday January 19th
My wonderful men who put up with me through thick and thin,

The cave of Inferi was a lot more fun than I thought it was going to be. I honestly thought that it was going to be a slightly more difficult version of my Crystal Room in which I cast spell after spell to repel or destroy the Inferi before they could harm me. Except, for obvious reasons, the Adventure Park doesn't want to have to find an endless supply of dead bodies to turn into Inferi, and so, along with all the safety spells that ensure the Inferi cannot harm the customers, they've designed a few 'nonlethal' spells that can be used against the Inferi that will in essence shut them down for a bit.

In that way, the Park ensures a rather fair fight. That said, they understand that occasionally, an Inferius will be accidentally killed in self defense, and also, they do have a contract where they can legally buy muggle bodies that have donated themselves to science and whatnot. So, with that in mind and knowing I can afford to replace ALL the Inferi if I wanted to, they let me loose all by my lonesome and gave me the all clear to be as destructive as I wanted.

So, strangely enough, that made me decide to use my Krav Maga skills on them. Thus, I had several hours (I quite lost all track of time) of simply beating the Inferi up, hurling them around, and occasionally using a mass spell to repel them if there were too many surrounding me at one time. All in all, because Inferi are fast, strong, and durable, I had a nice challenging - but not TOO challenging - time fighting.

Although, I'm certain you know that already, because eventually, you both came to pick me up for dinner, and to be honest, I was probably starving by that point. I simply was so focused on what I was doing that I wasn't paying attention to my own bodily needs. Therefore, when you two arrived, you were allowed to join me in the cave, but rather than join the fray, you simply stood back and surrounded yourself with a wall of fire barrier that would prevent them from going after you.

I have no idea how long you two were standing there watching me, all I know for certain was when I performed a maneuver that grabbed an Inferius, rolled onto my back, and kicked/flung him into another Inferius, I heard the two of you loudly blurt out something like: "HOT DAMN!"

A look over at you two let me know that you were both rather turned on by the sight of me topless in tight fitting yoga bottoms utterly OWNING the fight. That was that last little bit I needed to cheer me up as the fight had gone a LONG way toward resetting my mind and making me feel better. So, rather than continue the battle, I cast all the necessary spells to shut down the Inferi. Then, covered in sweat and probably smelling like a cesspit (sorry!), I came over to claim my prize - copious kisses from the two of you.

You then mentioned that it was nearly time for dinner, and that you had plans to take me to a new high end Muggle restaurant that specialized in Italian food. Harry, you WANTED to simply cast a few cleaning charms on me to wash away the sweat and the grime, but CLEARLY I would have needed to put on some more clothes as well, so I insisted that we head back home for a few minutes so that I could hop in the shower and put on something suitable. However, I DID compromise by letting you both pick out my clothes and also gave in when you refused to let me have the time I needed to properly make up my face.

I had to reply on a glamour charm!

But eventually we were off and eating delicious food in a restaurant that was new to all three of us. As we ate and imbibed lightly of some excellent wine, we chatted a bit about our wedding, and something strange happened. I went from wanting a small little affair to a HUGE production! Alright, so that's not entirely true, I still want the guest list to be fairly small, but rather than basically decorate a small clearing on the South Lawn and dress up nice while holding bouquets as we walk down the Aisle to say our vows, I suddenly wanted something ELABORATE with a champagne fountain and a thousand butterflies of all varieties, as many flowers as magically possible, and our Peafowl dressed up in stylish little formalwear to provide a gorgeous yet uniquely OURS experience.

Then you scoffed, Harry, and said that with all of that, why don't I just put an enormous triple rainbow in the sky, which sounds brilliant, to be honest. But Oliver is rather frantically against anything over the top. He is adamant that he wants nice and simple. The only concession he is willing to make is to look absolutely gorgeous in a well tailored dress robe with his hair and makeup professionally styled.

All in all, it seems we certainly have a lot to talk about with the mums tomorrow. I'm strangely looking forward to it ^_^
The best of my love,
Draco

Chapter End Notes

FYI: Chrissie almost didn't respond because she was thinking we'd have to have a big fight over the wedding now that Draco did a 180 on what he wanted, lol. She made a list of the things he'd suggested and wrote maybe after most of them with a big fat NO after the peacocks in formal wear, and when I asked her what was going on, she told me she was procrastinating on the fight, so I was like: "Oh, there's no need to fight, just let Draco dress up the peacocks and he'll let the rest go." That was when she went -_- and showed me her actual notes, lol.
Chapter 212

Chapter Summary

Wedding plans and a trial run of the Damsel Curse.

Chapter Notes

Note: In Draco's email, he's used to talking directly to Harry - and does so a bit - but then because what he's describing, he's talking to both Harry and Oliver, and so, at times, it does seem to come across awkwardly. Sorry! It's not going to be a regular occurrence, I think, lol.

WARNING!!! Chapter contains het sex!

Saturday January 20, 2018

Loves of my Life!

We just finished with the Mums Meeting. Despite it being very hard to try and make three (six) different people happy when planning one event, and how one or two (at least four) of those people are mildly (extremely) stubborn, and it being nearly impossible to try and come up with something unique when we've been part of dozens (yeah, I'm doubling down on dozens) of weddings, I think we managed to make quite a few decisions that everyone is happy with.

Last night Draco, I think you were running off an inferi-high and went really big on your ideas for the wedding. Both Oliver and I kept trying to bring you back down to Earth but you just wanted bigger, more extravagant, a real spectacle. We tried being kind about it, making over the top suggestions like adding a triple rainbow (which I kind of like now actually) in the hopes you would realize how over the top you were being. Nope, you just added the ridiculous suggestions to your already insane ideas.

Animals in clothes Draco? What have we talked about? Hmm? Never put an animal in human clothes. It's just humiliating for everyone involved. Do you remember the time you and Amala wore matching sweaters? I certainly do. I've tried to forget it. I don't look at the pictures. I even thought about obliterating myself. But no, the image of the two of you IN LEOPARD PRINT SWEATERS is forever seared into my brain.

No formal-wear for the peafowl. No. Just no.

This morning, waking up the three of us wrapped in each others' arms, barely able to tell where each of us begin and end, we finally managed to have a conversation about all three of our real hopes and dreams for the wedding. Look, Oliver and I agree that we wanted a low-key simple wedding, but that doesn't mean anything. This isn't a democracy and most votes wins their way. We need to figure out a way to create a wedding that will fulfill all three of our needs.
Oliver needs a wedding that won't be so ostentatious he'll be afraid of saying something wrong or embarrassing himself by using the wrong fork. He needs something where he won't feel self-conscious and can just spend all his emotional energy on his vows and enjoying the entire day.

I need something that will end up with beautiful pictures, happy memories, but where the star of the day is my Loves and I. I don't want to think back and remember the highlight of the day being a bunch of birds in waistcoats. I want to remember catching the eyes of my husbands as we walk down the aisle to our futures together.

Draco needs something that satisfies his flair for the dramatic, his love of all things beautiful, essentially a way to announce to the world that he's proud to call these men his. Draco's need to go to the extreme is just a symbol of his extreme love.

Lying in bed together this morning, with soft whispers and gentle kisses, I think we managed to come to a few compromises before we talked with the Mums. Presenting a united front was super important if we wanted to end up with Draco, Oliver, and Harry's dream wedding, not Narcissa, Molly, and Iris' dream wedding.

Oliver is getting the wooded wedding he dreamed of, which will go perfectly with the massive amount of flowers Draco is wishing for, and all of it will work perfectly with the color scheme I wanted so badly. Oliver is getting his way of keeping the guest list to our immediate circle, I'm being allowed to create the wish list of professional posed portraits we want, and Draco is going to send his two favorite photos from the day into the Daily Prophet the morning after the wedding so he can announce to the world that we're married and in love and all his.

Thank you both for being so willing to compromise. Thank you for being passionate about wanting a perfect wedding day, for caring so much about the first day of the rest of our lives. Thank you for loving me. Thank you for marrying me.

I can't wait to compromise with you both for the rest of our lives.

Thankful,
Harry

P.S. In just a minute I am going to find you both and show you exactly how thankful I am for how well the meeting went.

Sunday January 21st
My perfect men,

Days like today honestly make me wonder what God I sold my soul to in order to have you two. I'm dead certain I must owe SOMEONE because I have never been so good that I actually DESERVE either of you, let alone BOTH of you! How you could possibly love me is a mystery, and I'm only able to get through most days on pure Malfoy superiority - Malfoys always deserve the best, and you two are definitely the best there is.

Harry, before you go on an on about the things I've done that make me a good man, keep in mind that I could go on and on about things I've done (and continue to do) that make me a bad man. I'm not looking for reassurances, simply asking a rhetorical question: what God do I owe?

Anyway, moving on, today was one of those rare days that only happen maybe once a year or ten. At first, I wasn't really expecting anything - probably because I was still asleep. It seems that after waking, the two of you teamed up to confirm that my parents were still perfectly happy watching our littles; that the boys were well fed, and that Morgana was content in the arms of her current favorite minion, my father.

THEN you spent the hour or so directly prior to my normal wakeup time getting ready. Harry, you obligingly cast the Damsel Curse on Oliver, and then helped him dress up in the lingerie the two of you bought on Friday. One of the interesting things that I hadn't realized you'd actually done on purpose (until later on when you explained it to me) was that you'd cut Oliver's hair so that it wasn't Damsel length - between arse and knee length - but rather just below his shoulders. The fact that it had seemed to lighten up from a rich brunet to a dirty blonde all on its own was a nice surprise.

Once his hair was a length that pleased the two of you but was still long enough for me to enjoy, and his face had just a hint of makeup to it (that I honestly hadn't even noticed beyond thinking he looked rather flawless), you dressed him up in a sheer white lace outfit that consisted of a pair of knickers and a top that cleverly concealed his breasts while also playing peekaboo with them.

Once ready, the two of you came back to our room, but rather than wake me, you decided to drop to your knees and wait - Oliver in his lingerie and Harry in a leather slave harness with his hands bound behind his back. You somehow managed to time it perfectly so that you didn't have to wait more than five or ten minutes for me to wake up.

Which means that my first sight when I opened my eyes - as I was actually facing the direction you were both kneeling - was the two of you being patient and submissive. At first, I was confused. Utterly horny, but confused, since I hadn't seen Oliver's Damsel form and wasn't expecting to see an unknown woman kneeling next to Harry with no Oliver in sight, but slowly, I figured it out. A grin split my lips so wide I swear they cracked, but I wasn't about to complain.

"Oliver love, is that you?"

"Yes Draco," he confirmed in a demure tone, his eyes on the floor, a blush letting me know that despite being willing and eager, he was slightly embarrassed by the fact that he was a nearly naked woman. I took him in for a long and silent moment, simply enjoying the sight.

But then I had to be certain. "Are you happy enough with this curse to go through with the next several hours, or have you decided that it's too weird and you'd like to change your mind now?"
He bit his lip in thought for a good 20 or 30 seconds. Then he very slowly nodded. "Yeah. It's... weird, yes, but I am more curious to see what happens than I am embarrassed by the fact that I look like a tiny and weak damsel."

"Good," I stated in delight. Then I shifted so that I could slip out of bed. "I'm going to assume by your positions of submission that I'm in complete control of both of you for the day. Thus, I'm going to take full advantage of it. Just give me a minute or so to go to the loo, and then we'll get started."

As I walked to the bathroom, I heard Oliver whisper in his musical feminine voice: "What do you suppose he's going to want us to do first?"

"Pamper him," Harry stated in all certainty.

Chuckling, I nearly turned back around to give you both kisses. Instead, I forced myself to pretend like I hadn't heard either of you. After finishing my business and casting an array of spells to clear up any potential odors, I called out to you both: "Harry, come in here and draw a bath for me, and Oliver - Olivia? Do you want me to call you by a feminine name for the day?"

"Erm..." Oliver drawled as he thought this over. It took him the entire trip into the bathroom and long enough to untie your hands so that you could turn on the tap before he responded. "No. Not... as overt as that. I'd actually really like to hear you call me Ollie or even Oll - both of which COULD actually be short forms of Olive or Olivia. Maybe THAT would make you feel like you're more properly addressing a woman?"

I brushed a hand alongside his face even as I heard Harry testing the temperature of the water with his hand and purring happily.

"Are you CERTAIN you want to do this? You don't actually seem very into it," I pointed out. "I don't want to make you feel like you HAVE to in order to give me something I want."

He smiled at me even as he shook his head. "It's not that I'm not into it - I'm actually REALLY horny at the moment, so turned on by this whole thing that I can barely breathe. It's just that even if I was born a woman, I don't think I would be a very GIRLY one. I'd be one of those women that accepts herself and wears dresses and the like when called for, but ultimately, just feels more comfortable in denims and a tee shirt. Think about it, how many times have I balked when you wanted to dress me up in something fancy when I felt like we could get by with or even fit in better if we dressed more casual?"

I tilted my head to the side with a smirk to concede that he had a point.

"And even more than that, if I was born a woman and my parents had named me something very flowery and feminine such as - oh I dunno - Amethyst or some such, I'd still probably go by Amy, or better yet, Aim," Oliver added. "I'm just a plain and simple lad like that."

I nodded in agreement. "Alright, so no girly names, got it."

"Bath is ready," Harry announced, making me purr from happiness.

"As I was saying before I interrupted myself, Ollie will you please just stand there and look pretty for a few minutes as Harry bathes me. I want you to watch him run his hands all over my body and imagine things you want this body to do to you later."

Oliver bit his lip and moaned in anticipation. "I can definitely do that!"
Then I kissed you Harry, showing you with my eyes and lips how much I love the fact that you are ALWAYS willing to play with me like this. And I don't JUST mean the fact that we're about to give Oliver a completely new experience, but the fact that your need to serve me means that I can order you around like a slave boy and you never complain.

Stepping into the tub, I sprawled out and enjoyed the fact that this tub is the perfect size to lay down if I want to, or I can sit up and at least four people could take a bath together. Closing my eyes, I pretended to ignore the both of you again for a few minutes as my body was very thoroughly scrubbed up and fondled. Despite how relaxed the majority of me may have appeared to be, at least one part of me announced that I was ready and eager, but there was no need to give into his needy demands just yet.

Once I was clean and MERLIN! I forgot just how much I love having you wash my hair! It's sensual and intimate all while being really rather innocent and loving. I love it almost as much as I love being able to card my hands through your hair, to brush your hair, braid it when it's long enough, and just generally play with it as I like.

I have NO idea why, but hair is apparently just one of my things.

Anyway, once I was clean, I decided to linger in the tub a bit longer just to enjoy the warmth.

"Harry, please get back on your knees and put your hands either behind your back as if bound, or behind your head so that you remember not to touch anything without my permission."

Harry nodded and obeyed without a single word. I lay my head on the edge of the tub and watched him actually conjure a small rope that promptly tied itself around his hands behind his back.

"I positively LOVE when you tie yourself up for me! Ollie, will you sit on the edge of the tub so that your legs are in here with me, but nothing else is. It'd be a shame to ruin your delightful outfit before we made proper use of it."

"Alright," Oliver murmured, looking nearly overcome with lust by the show so far. He stepped into the tub and sat on the edge as I suggested, taking care that his top did not get wet. I stroked his legs and kissed them, savoring the anticipation of getting between them later on. Spelling my hands dry for a moment, I also ran them through his hair, feeling its length and bringing strands to my lips to kiss.

Strangely, I got distracted by his rather small and delicate feet. I rubbed them and lightly ran my tongue along the top of his foot. "Hmm... I think I'm going to have Harry paint your nails for me. I think... Green. Or blue. Something gender neutral that won't make hate yourself." I then ran my tongue up the inside of his left leg, stopping when his legs were too close for my head to fit. He tried to shift them wider apart, but I stopped him.

"Not just yet. Patience love, this is a rare opportunity and I plan to take all the time in the world enjoying it."

He inhaled and then groaned, already sounding just a bit frustrated that we hadn't gotten to the main event yet. Keeping my wet (again) hands out of the way, I shifted until my mouth was right next to his abdomen. Using only my nose and tongue, I pushed the lacy part of his top out of the way just enough to capture his right nipple in my mouth and give it a bit of light suction, his sharp inhalation let me know that he was surprised by how good it felt.

He even fondled my hair and pushed himself into my mouth a bit more.
"Ah-ah!" I denied, pulling back and standing up. "I didn't give you permission to do that."

He pouted. "Why must you ALWAYS take HOURS to shag? Why can't you just shove me up against the wall and ram into me so hard I pass out?" His hands were urging my shaft to do just that.

I smirked at him a bit evilly. "Well, I COULD do that, but if I did, you wouldn't like it very much. I've used this curse before, so I know your new female body is a VIRGIN. Trust me, you're not going to want rough for the first two or three minutes. After that, we'll see what kind of mood I'm in."

"Fuck," he muttered under his breath. "I didn't even THINK about that!"

"Besides," I added with a playful grin. "Hard shags up against the wall are perfect for afternoon quickies, NOT days when we have the time to spend the whole day playing. I should probably warn you now that I'm giving all three of us 12 hour stamina potions for our honeymoon!"

His eyes went wide and far away as he thought this over carefully. "12 hours!"

"I vote that we only use the 12 hour potion for the first three days of our honeymoon and switch to the 6 hour potion for the rest of the week," Harry stated, clearly thinking this over happily as well.

"THREE DAYS!!" Oliver blurted out in alarm. "Will we even survive that?!"

Chuckling, I held my hand out and helped him stand too. "Harry, I want you to vanish those ropes you conjured and dry Ollie's legs off before bringing him over to the plush armchair and massaging his feet for a few minutes. I want to do a few of my morning yoga poses so that I'm all nice and limber for the very vigorous exercise I have planned today."

Grinning, Harry did exactly that, making Oliver pout and squirm - CLEARLY so aroused that this slow play that I was insisting on must be mildly torturous to him. Too bad for him I get off on mild to moderate torture, hahahaha!

As much as I wanted to do a full hour long routine, my persistent hardness made it rather difficult to do some of the poses, so I cut it short after only about 20 minutes. I caught you both watching me and practically drooling a couple of times. Times like these actually make me wish we weren't on opposite sleep schedules, NOT that I could ever bring myself to transform into an early bird like the two of you. This night owl just CAN'T change his nature!

I have actually tried...

But as I was saying, if I was an early bird like the two of you, I could join you for your run, you could join me for my yoga, and the sight of my naked body being all flexible would naturally turn you on so that our mornings always started with a vigorous warm up.

In any case, I called my yoga quits the moment you had his toe nails all painted a nice dark green. As I approached the chair he sat in, I cast a drying spell so that we wouldn't smudge your nice work. I especially like that you'd added a couple of golden swirls to his big toes. Oliver was staring at his feet as if not quite sure how to feel about them being so tiny and pretty.

Holding out my hand, I helped you to your feet, Harry, and then kissed you as a reward for doing such a good job.

"I want you to get settled on the bed, but don't tie your hands this time. I'm going to have you be nothing more than a piece of furniture to support our Ollie. I've decided to give in to his demands to take less than forever," I informed you both with a chuckle.

Oliver grinned happily at that. "Does that mean you're finally too horny to keep faffing about?"

I shook my head. "Nope! It means that I'm going to forgo the rest of my pampering so that I can make you fall apart."

He gulped, suddenly apprehensive about what I might do if I focus all my attention on him rather than my need to dominate.

"As I was saying, Harry, I want you to be the chair that supports Oliver. I want you to hold him and touch him, keep him connected to you while I do my best to make him forget his name, but having said that, I DO understand that this will give you a rather good view of the squicky parts. If you simply cannot handle being such a close part of this, you have my permission to slip away at any time and take a break."

"I can do it," Harry stated confidently. "I've done it before, and I think that KNOWING that it's OUR Ollie that's in possession of those squicky parts for the day will help me keep my focus on him rather than them. But you know I ALWAYS love watching you give someone pleasure - provided I'm not in jealous mode. It makes me feel rather smug that I* get those skills ALL the time, and those few others only get them on the rare occasion. Now that Ollie's one of the privileged two, I WANT him to experience everything you can give him."

"Excellent!" I crowed. I arranged the two of you so that Harry was as comfortable as possible while acting like a chair, and Oliver was reclining against him, looking rather shy and virginal now.

Every year for my birthday or at Christmas time, I never fail to open my presents with care to ensure that the wrapping paper isn't torn or wrinkled; today was no exception. My present was in a lovely white garment that deserved care and attention. So - rather then strip it off him - I began by stroking long lines from Oliver's collar bones down to his abdomen. My hands traced the outline of his pert breasts before my tongue licked a line up the sheer material from his belly button to his left breast. I circled his nipple a few times before gently biting it.

"Inside this breast is something VERY important to both of us," I murmured, being just a bit cheesy, I'll admit.

Oliver looked confused for a moment, wondering if turning into a woman had given him something extra he had forgotten about.

"Your heart," Harry whispered in Oliver's ear, nibbling it for good measure.

"Oh," Oliver chuckled softly in embarrassment. "I knew that."

I gently pushed the bottom of Oliver's top up so that both layers of lace covered his breasts, and then spent a few minutes just kissing trails all over his stomach, pausing occasionally to tickle his bellybutton with my tongue.

"Merlin! You have no idea what this is doing to me!" Oliver gasped out in a ragged and sensually husky feminine voice.

I laughed. "Oh... I think I might have an inkling..."

He flushed, his eyes glued to the fact that I had shifted his top once again so that now, it was lifted just enough off his skin to block his view but allowed me to circle his nipples with my tongue. I alternated this with gusts of hot air that made him shiver. To my delight, this prompted Harry to lick and suck on Oliver's neck, making him shiver all the more and writhe slightly.

"I thought you said you were going to stop faffing about!" Oliver gasped when it became apparent that his soft begging noises and squirming was entertaining me to no end.

"Do you seriously want me to skip straight to the end?" I asked curiously.

Oliver looked toward the ceiling as he considered this. "No... I suppose what I actually want is to KNOW what's going to happen. This teasing and prolonged foreplay has me on tenterhooks, not quite knowing what will happen next. I mean sex, obviously, but... I don't know what that's like in this body..."

"Oh," I murmured in understanding. "I see, well be patient, you'll find out eventually."

And with that, I decided to speed up just a little. Not so much that I skipped everything I wanted to do, but enough that it didn't take me three hours to touch the place he so obviously wanted me to. Thus, I gently tugged his top off so that I could palm his breasts while I kissed a path back down toward his bellybutton, and then beyond that to his right hip.

"Here, play with these for me a bit," I ordered Harry, squeezing Oliver's breasts to illustrate what I was referring to.

With a look like he wasn't quite sure what to do first, Harry followed my order, replacing my hands as I moved them lower. Grinning, I paused to add: "Just fondle them and pinch his nipples when he's not expecting it."

This made Harry smile like a little imp. "I can do that."

With Harry doing as asked, I was free to use my hands to stroke Oliver's legs. Again, SOLELY because Oliver was already a nervous wreck, I opted not to tease him all day, and instead, pulled the lacy white knickers off so that I could finally get my first look at his womanhood. And yes, I'm going to savor that memory forever, even printing it up for my private photo collection. NO! I'm NOT telling you where my private collection of printed up naughty memories is located as I have pictures in there I think one or both of you would insist I burn if you found them.

Oh Harry, a large part of me wants to go into excruciating detail of what everything looked like and why this turns me on so much, but previous experience has taught me that I would lose your interest so completely that it might take a few days for you to even look at me again, so I'll gloss over it a bit. Basically, I took a really good look at the part that proved this Damsel body of Oliver's was a virgin - which I know you saw me do, but since I didn't make a big deal out of it, you basically focused on his breasts like I'd asked you to.

Naturally, I was extremely pleased to have this opportunity. Not only were both of my VERY gay men giving me a taste of het sex because I'd been moping about it lately, but it's not often at all - even when I was having semi yearly sex with women - that I get to experience a virgin. I am pretty sure that the only one other than Pansy WAY back when was that time in the club with Blaise a few years after we were married in which a woman wanted BLAISE to take her virginity after seeing how massive he was, and we sensibly convinced her to try a more reasonable sized one first.

Anyway, as I said, glossing over the pleasure I felt having the opportunity to... inspect things. And then taste them.

Maybe I should pause my telling here a moment to see if I actually CAN explain something to you both. I know that you know that everyone has their own sexual preference, and I know that on some level, you both understand that I am bisexual, but I think in Oliver's case in particular, it seems like there's an underlying, erm… belief if you will, that once a man commits to a gay relationship, that any lingering attraction to women will just disappear. And maybe it does for some people.

I sometimes WISH I was one of those, so happy with my gay marriage to my men that I never need the occasional fanny. But... hmm, I suppose that it's not a need so much as a strong desire, one that gets really rather distracting and annoying in its distraction when it's been a while. I start thinking about women and then fantasizing and then, well, begging I suppose.

I am hugely blessed in that I do have two of you that try your best to understand and accept this about me. Even going so far as to turn into a woman for me for the night. Oliver, if you didn't figure it out at any point DURING our play, THIS is why I didn't want to just rush through it and have another go - or two - before turning you back. I wanted to take my time to ensure that I met all my wants and needs and ended up so satisfied that I wouldn't get the urge again until, well, hopefully when you feel like doing it again.

But back to my description, after examining things with first my eyes, and then my hands, mouth, and tongue, I took the time to build things up slowly until Oliver was positively SQUEALING and thrashing about as what looked a bit like a mini-hurricane ravaged him. I was rather chuffed by that, if I'm honest.

I wanted to keep going until he had two or three more, but I could see that Oliver looked a little apprehensive of having another, and Harry looked like he was getting a bit bored. Or not bored so much as, erm, anxious to move on to something less squicky for him. Smiling, I shifted so that I could give lots of kisses to both of you.

"I think I might understand the watching my eyes thing now," Harry informed me with a grin. "I tilted Ollie's head back so that I could kiss him, and that gave me a chance to look in his eyes as his orgasm hit - when he wasn't squeezing them shut. It was fascinating actually."

Oliver blushed at that. "Don't look at me at times like that!"

We both smirked at him. I returned my mischievous eyes to Harry. "Should I give him another right now so that you can do exactly that?"

Harry laughed. "Nah, I'm certain that if you keep going, it'll happen a few more times anyway."

Oliver looked pensive. "I... I had no idea that it was this, erm... well, sort of hard to reach orgasm for a woman, but at the same time, it's also more intense. It was like I was riding a wave for a minute or so, and it's not like that when I'm myself. So, getting there was longer and more frustrating, but once I was there, it was really nice. Not sure I like having to go through all the extra effort though."

"Makes sense," I murmured as I kissed him. "You got used to little to no sex, and what you had was probably quick and to the point. Then you found yourself snared by our loving trap, and suddenly, we're insisting on having what must feel like the equivalent of ten years worth of shagging with you almost every night. I can imagine that would be a little overwhelming to anyone."

Oliver nodded, looking pensive once more. "I'm... I'm not really complaining, it's just that... I guess I'm not sure if I was MADE to have the sort of stamina you both have."

We took turns kissing him. "We cultivated that over the course of YEARS. We don't expect you to keep up right away."
"YES YOU DO!!" He accused with a laugh.

We both shrugged as if admitting that he might be right.

"Harry, kiss Ollie and distract him for a few moments, I'm not certain he wants to dwell on this next bit."

"GOTCHA!" Harry agreed with a grin, bending forward to kiss Oliver, which made me realize that in this position, it was actually going to be a bit difficult to do the deed.

"Er... wait. We're going to far too awkward like this," I stated. "Harry love, lay down and be the BED we shag on."

I could hear a hum or a purr that let me know this was an excellent suggestion as far as you were concerned. Doing it this way, Oliver was actually able to turn his head to the side and demand those kisses Harry was ordered to distract him with. It was still slightly awkward, but I rather liked how Oliver was elevated to the perfect height for me to do this on my knees, as opposed to laying on top of him.

It gave me a MUCH better view!

After adding a bit of lubrication to my shaft to ensure as smooth an entrance as possible, I pushed into Oliver, taking the time to savor this feel. I won't even try to describe it as neither of you have had nor are interested in the pleasure of being a woman's first.

Oliver gasped in surprise when he gave way and I sort of slid the rest of the way in a bit abruptly. I really was trying to avoid that, but a certain amount of force was necessary to push, sorry, I just said I wasn't going to describe it. Let's just say that I liked the feeling even though it probably wasn't the most pleasant for poor Oliver, and then leave it at that, yeah?

At that point, I gave into the urge to nearly abandon my thrusting so that I could kiss the both of you for a few minutes. Thus, when Oliver turned his head to the side so that his mouth was free to yell at me, I couldn't help but be amused.

"MERLIN DAMNIT DRACO! I understand the desire to not hurt me, but I think even a tortoise can go faster than that!"

Laughing, I forced him to look at me so that I could kiss him again. "I'm not going slow to be gentle on you, I'm going slow because I decided that kissing you was more important now that we've reached the main event."

"Well, yes, I very much like the kissing, but let Harry do that while you POUND me already!" Oliver insisted rather fiercely.

"If you insist," I murmured, contemplating making a liar of myself by only picking up the pace a little, but then I decided that I was actually being a bit of an arse, making Oliver endure this far longer than he wanted to. I mean he wasn't telling me to stop, but still, I could see his point. He was doing this out of curiosity and a desire to give me what I wanted, NOT a need to be on his back under me for the next six hours.

So, with that in mind, I let my inner beast take over. Once he's let loose to seek his pleasure, the rest of me sort of ignores everything else. Everything except Oliver's nails digging into my back in the most delicious way, and Harry kissing me now that Oliver was too busy panting and gasping to give a decent kiss.
Unfortunately for poor Oliver, my stamina had other things in mind. There was NO WAY I was going to be able to finish so soon, and since we had all agreed to AVOID finishing in the area that could make babies (this time), I decided that 20 minutes and two more orgasms for him was enough for now. Stopping, I bit Oliver on the shoulder lightly before withdrawing.

"In my mouth or Harry's?" Oliver wondered, sounding completely out of breath.

"Actually, I'm not there yet, and I decided that I wanted to go back to the more sensual parts," I explained.

Oliver looked disappointed.

"What?" I asked in concern.

"I know we all agreed, but I think part of me was hoping you'd forget - just like you forgot to put on the condom - and just do it," he replied, almost muttering as if not actually wanting us to hear him.

"He saw me cast the spells," Harry murmured in Oliver's ear, kissing his neck. "I just didn't feel like interrupting things to insist on a condom when it was clear how badly you wanted to get going, Ollie. I figured that Draco could be trusted to stick to our agreement. But... if you REALLY want it..."

"I do and I don't," Oliver admitted. "I am actually looking forward to seeing if we can use a potion to make the baby ALL three of ours, but... well, it's not exactly as if I'm impatient, but I'm sort of, erm... anxious - I suppose you could say. I ALWAYS felt like this when we were trying to conceive - like I just wanted to get it over with so that I would know as soon as possible if it worked. Otherwise I just worried and drove myself mad with wondering!"

I shook my head. "Not tonight. I honestly believe that you'll feel better in the long run if we time this so that it's not making you worry about your job."

He nodded in agreement. "I know. I agree. I just, well... I still think it'll take a miracle, and maybe tonight's the night for miracles."

I looked in Harry's eyes and we both clearly wondered if maybe we SHOULD give in and toss the optimal timing out the window and into the Black Lake. Suddenly, Harry smirked, apparently having come up with a brilliant idea.

"So... as much as I am utterly LOVING being used as nothing more important than the furniture, I realized something shocking."

"Oh?" Oliver and I asked in curiosity.

"I want a turn," Harry stated, confusing us both for a moment.

"What?" I questioned, not certain I had heard that correctly.

"I want a turn!" Harry repeated, more emphatically. "I mean it's obviously going to be weird, but I know I CAN, and just... I want to..."

I felt a moment of surrealism, even wondering if I was actually dreaming. "Well, if you really want to, I'd love to see it."

Oliver chuckled. "I don't mind, but... why exactly?"
Harry kissed him. "It's like when Draco asked me to do this to him, I wanted to because it was with HIM - no matter what his body was like at the time. So, it's an experience I can have with a man I love, and it's not something I want to do everyday, so..." he shrugged, probably feeling like he'd never be able to explain it.

We all shifted until we were sitting on the bed looking at each other.

"Just... Draco, can you please kiss me, and better yet, drop that voice made of liquid sex into my ear so that I -"

I interrupted him, pulling him in my arms so that I could hold him and say things like: "Salazar Harry, you're such a good mutt, giving me everything I want or need, even when I don't realize I need it. You're shaft is positively gorgeous, and even though you love to bottom, when you DO want to top me, you always make the experience nearly spiritual for me."

"Me too," Oliver said as he cast a quick lube spell on Harry before straddling him.

So, with a constant stream of praise, filthy suggestions, and deep kisses, Oliver rode Harry to the point that Harry had to yank him off and let those long pearly strings fly across the bed. Well the majority of them actually coated Oliver's back, but that just gave me an excuse to make Harry clean him/her up.

After laying in a warm snuggly pile for a few minutes, Oliver lifted his head and looked at me.

"Alright, so now that I know what to expect, I want to ride you until YOU finally have an orgasm."

I grinned at him. "Having an orgasm today was never actually my goal, it was simply to enjoy the experience, but that said, I won't turn it down."

"Good!" He exclaimed happily, preparing me so that he could ride me at the pace of his choosing, which was rather grinding. Funnily enough, he ALWAYS seemed to prefer hot heavy and quick. I relaxed and let myself do nothing but feel the pleasure and be carried toward the finish line.

Apparently I make a noise when I'm close. I don't recall ever noticing it, but I do it enough that Harry calls it: "Keening in that way you do," and so, when I made that noise and gripped Oliver's hips to yank him off me - which I would SWEAR for a moment that Oliver resisted, probably too focused on his pace - Harry cried out: "Mine!" and lifted Oliver off me so that he could gulp down all the goodies.

Oliver looked nearly irate. "I was SO CLOSE to another orgasm! Couldn't you both have waited about 4 more seconds?!"

"Here, let me make it up to you," I offered, not giving him a chance to protest before burying my head between his legs once more, he gasped, astonished that being so close a few moments ago helped a LOT when it came to finishing him off. Especially once I used my hands inside him to help my tongue.

"OH MY FUCKING GODS!!!" He screamed when his orgasm hit, making him more or less pass out. Chuckling, I gave him a kiss on the cheek as we curled around him. Harry kissed him too, sounding rather sleepy yourself.

"Today was fun," Harry murmured. "I adored being the furniture."

I kissed the both of you, despite the very powerful lethargy, I HAD just woken up from a full night's sleep before we started, and so, I slipped out of bed and called for Muffy to bring me something to eat and some tea to drink as I typed this all up. I'm about to sign off now and go print up the memories I want to add to my secret photo album.

I don't mind you coming here and wasting all my time, I guess you're just what I needed,

Draco
Chapter 213

Chapter Summary

It's Viona's birthday.

Chapter Notes

See the end of the chapter for notes

Wednesday January 24, 2018

My Heart,

I knew for certain that your email Sunday was going to describe our day of playing with the curse. I wasn't sure how I would feel about reading it. Would it make me uncomfortable? Would I become turned off if I thought about it for too long? Would the opposite happen and I would become frustratingly horny while reading it? That's why I didn't read it until now.

I had classes to teach most of the day on Monday, Tuesday, and today. Oliver had extra quidditch practices scheduled each evening due to the big upcoming matches. And Draco, you were of course spending your evenings at the Ministry due to your own job. So I didn't want to read your description of our day until I knew I would have my men to cuddle me if reading it upset me, or to shag me if reading it made me sexually frustrated. Which is why I just read it now when we are on our way to the Manor for the Princess' birthday dinner.

Oddly enough, it didn't really have either effect on me. Being so descriptive of how much you enjoyed a female body definitely did not make me want a shag. But having been there, knowing it was our Ollie and not just some random woman, meant that I also wasn't specifically turned off by it either. Which meant that for the first time I probably read about one of our sexcapades with a clear and open mind! I wondered if that would ever happen!

I know this is absolutely a ridiculous thing to complain about, since our Ollie was literally in a completely differently gendered body, but I didn't like his lightened hair quite as much as you seemed to. I already have a blonde man, I don't need Ollie to look like anything else. I was a bit disappointed when he didn't look as much like a female version of himself but more like a woman who bore some resemblance to the man I love. But the fact that no matter the changes, his eyes were all my Oliver made up for it. I probably would have had to remove myself from the play if I couldn't see the man I love in the eyes of the body we were shagging.

There are a couple of things I would argue with your descriptions. You, as usual, went on and on about not deserving either of us since you're not GOOD. Telling us both that you have done bad things and therefore cannot be good as we both continue to assure you are. Darling, we have assured you that you are good, not perfect. You have made bad decisions. You have made some really utterly terrible decisions. But at your heart you want to be good, you spend your life attempting to create a better world for everyone, you have dedicated your life to bettering our world and yourself. How can that be anything but good?

I know it drives you absolutely bonkers when I nitpick your individual words. But I can't help it! I will argue until my lungs give out that you are an undeniably, wonderful, and GOOD man. I would never attempt to argue that you are perfect. I mean, I feel as though my men are about as close to perfection as it's possible to be, but I wouldn't be willing to debate it with anyone. Especially since my arguments would include some of the inner beauty and love that only I get to see. I am a selfish man and don't want to share your innermost hearts with the rest of the world. They are mine and I don't care to share.

And because I'm already being semantically obnoxious, I am going to keep going. You brought up that you appreciated how I was WILLING to play with you in this subserviant way. That I won't complain when you order me around. It's not about my willingness, or that I will put up with it and not complain. I am quite literally FULFILLED by it. If anything I often think you are only willing to boss me around, that you are being nice and not complaining when my needs make themselves known and you have to dominate me. You act as though I am doing a favor by serving you, and I feel so lucky to be allowed to serve you.

I suppose it's probably best that we both see it that way. That I can't believe my luck in finding someone (someTWO) who is willing to take control and allow me to fly. And you feeling pleased that I give in to your need to make demands. And I truly can't believe our luck in finding our Ollie - who has a beautiful mixture of submissive and dominant. He's so beautiful when he's commanding me. When he took control that first night you were off with Hermione was mindblowing. And then this past Sunday when he knelt so beautifully next to me waiting to submit to you. How can he so perfectly be both submissive and dominant.

Our gorgeous man, the best of both worlds.

Gods I can't wait until our wedding and our honeymoon. I need to be married to him. Like yesterday. I'm so glad we moved the wedding to March, but now I wish we'd moved it up even further to right this very moment. I hate the three of us not being married. Only eight and a half weeks to go!

Oh! You talking about our honeymoon sextivities during your email reminded me; I've booked our honeymoon location and hotel. I will tell you all about it when we're snuggled in bed tonight. I want to surprise you both with the brochures and all that in person! But you must both promise me if you hate the location, hate the idea, that you will tell me. I think this would be an amazing trip, it's somewhere we've never been, and it looks completely insane and exactly us. But it's not a traditional honeymoon location so if the both of you want something else I promise I won't be offended.

Oh, I had better finish getting ready. My Vivi would not be pleased with me if I were late to her birthday dinner!

Yours,
Harry

P.S. It's unbelievably adorable that you think I don't know where your secret sexy pictures stash is. Like you could hide something like that from me! I promise I don't go through it, you're entitled to your privacy, but you're a loon if you think I don't know it exists.

P.P.S. You're even more ridiculous if you think I don't have one of my own stashed away!

Weds Jan 24th
Dear Draco,
Now that I've had a couple of days to process, I just wanted to let you know that I liked what happened and would be happy to do it again whenever you're craving fanny. It was interesting to feel different sensations, though I will admit I like being a man better.

But what I really wanted to talk about was the relief I felt when I read that hair is one of your things. I know I didn't say anything, but I was concerned and a bit alarmed when - the night before Orion, River, Mahafsoun, and their babies left - you sat in a chair with Mahafsoun nursing her baby on the floor between your legs, and you sat there brushing and playing with her hair while looking like a cat high on nip for HOURS! Nobody else seemed to think this was weird, so I didn't think I could be like: "Oi! What sort of pervert are you, fondling your daughter-in-law like that!"

But now that I know you were simply happy about her hair because it's long and hair is one of your things - as opposed to other, more worrying reasons - I can stop wondering why you looked so happy to braid and unbraid, brush and run your hands through it. That was really sort of bothering me, but now I know it's nothing.

Off to a family dinner,

Oliver

Wednesday January 24th
Dearest Oliver,

Hair? Mahafsoun has some? I hadn't noticed. Put your mind at ease, there's nothing to worry about.

Love and kisses!

Harry,

Please put your arms around Oliver as I'm certain this news will upset him. So... Monday when I popped by Oliver's bathroom to tease him whilst he was showering away the chill of a lengthy Quidditch practice, I noticed something in his potion cabinet. Along with the standard headache potions and stomach settlers, there was a small jar labeled: Queen Anne Lace for OLIVER - directions, brew 1-2 spoonfuls into a tea to drink 2-3 times a day to increase fertility.

Well, I had already confirmed that QAL is a CONTRACEPTIVE, so I decided to dispose of the jar, but I forgot after slipping it into my pocket until I was at the Ministry. At that point, I decided to have it checked out, just in case it actually was a fertility blend that they mislabeled.

I'm SO glad I did!

The results came back today and prompted me to go have a chat with Robards in his office. It seems that Queen Anne Lace has a doppelgänger... hemlock. The amount of hemlock in the jar of herbs was between a third and a fourth, and the technician wrote on the parchment that this could simply be an error if someone cut up 3 or four plants they thought were QAL, but one of them was actually hemlock, so it's not definitive proof. HOWEVER, taken in context, there is a strong likelihood that it was done on purpose.

When I informed Robards of my suspicion, he agreed and sent a pair of Aurors to investigate.

But backing up for a moment, let me remind you that despite having an armada of highly expensive lawyers, Mr. and Mrs. Fuckwad have managed to escape criminal charges because they didn't technically do anything wrong. I KNOW - Harry - that you feel otherwise, and if we hadn't JUST made an agreement to never call Grandmama for something like this again, I think you'd be tempted to sic her on them.

Basically, that contract they had the girl sign was fairly basic, in exchange for her carrying their Heir (and raising him if they should die before he reaches the age of majority), she would get to live in the home and receive an allowance that she would be entitled to for the rest of her life. (There was nothing to imply they would kick her out if she didn't agree.) And once she agreed, they had her examined by their private Healer, who pronounced her healthy and implanted the already fertilized eggs in her womb according to standard surrogate procedures.

The reason that they weren't considered breaking the law despite her age is that they claimed she (and she admitted to) told them that she was of age, and it even shows up on the forms she filled out during the Healer's exam, she wrote 17 as her age.

SO, long story still as long as ever, they aren't breaking any laws, the girl is still in Unity House because the Mind Healer she is seeing is convinced there's something hidden that needs to be addressed before the girl can return to her parents - who actually HAVE cleared the Department of Children and Families as being suitable, even if not desirable parents.

In the meantime, I seriously suspect the Fuckwads of intentionally trying to poison our Oliver. The team of Aurors have sent back some interesting pictures they took with their Magi-tablets of the part of their garden that is easily visible without trespassing on their property, and Mrs. F does actually grow QAL and hemlock right next to each other, but the two plants are separated by a decorative retaining wall, and both are clearly labeled with signs.

Her whole garden seems to be well organized and labeled, as if she assumes that OTHERS will be wanting to harvest bits from her garden and she wants them to know what's what. This led the Aurors to believe that the woman herself was unlikely to mix up the plants, which can help persuade a jury that this was an intentional and deliberate murder attempt.

That said, it remains to be seen if anyone can make any charges stick. The burden is still to PROVE intent, and that could be tricky. Especially since Oliver clearly didn't die and the Lab Technician said the amount ingested was probably only enough to cause mild symptoms such as trembling, increased salvation/digestive troubles, a temporary increase in heart rate followed by a slower heart rate, and possibly some muscle weakness or pain.

The small amount actually still COULD be deadly with respiratory failure, renal failure, and death, AND having someone continually take small doses would increase their chances of having trouble breathing until they died, but again, since that didn't happen in Oliver's case, I'm not sure we could prove a thing conclusively when this all happened so many years ago. Mrs. Fuckwad may not have been so meticulous with her garden back then.

Sigh...

But basically, that's why I'm not home yet. I'm about to head back to Hermione's office and talk to her about all of this. Maybe she might be able to come up with a way to prove intent that none of us thought of yet.

Volatile and shakey, wish you were inside me, rattling like the subway, that is on a good day, Draco

P.S. I've seen your secret album Harry; I just think it's a perfect description of your kinks, whereas mine has a LOT of memories from past play parties where some fairly weird shit has happened, and I really didn't think you'd like it if you looked through it.

P.P.S I didn't really invade your privacy by looking at each and every picture for a minute or so, but rather flipped through it quickly to figure out what it is I'd found. I put it back as soon as I realized what I was looking at.

Wednesday January 24th
Dad,

Get your tardy arse here right now, before I have to hunt you down and drag you to my bloody birthday dinner by your ear!

Love,
Viona

Chapter End Notes

In case you are confused or not quite understanding the reason Draco seemingly 'lied' about not noticing Mahafsoun has hair, the reason he did that was because Harry once upon a time ago threw an absolute fit about Draco playing with Mahafsoun's hair, and in response, Draco promised to never mention her hair again, he was even going to go so far as to try not to notice it. Thus even when she asked him for help with styles for her wedding, he never actually said the word hair in conjunction with Mahafsoun. He kept referring to style or braids, but not hair. Basically, it's the same as when Harry asked Draco to promise to never call him boy, Draco does not, the closest he gets is when they are playing, usually puppy play, and Draco calls him a good boy (and even then, only when Chrissie is writing it, lol), because when Draco makes a promise, he does his best to keep it, lol ^_^
Chapter 214

Chapter Summary

Harry is happy about Viona's news, and Draco has news of his own.

Thursday January 25, 2018

My Fellow Grandfathers,

I can't believe it! I mean, obviously I believe it, but a part of me cannot comprehend it. My Princess, my sweet Vivi, is going to be a mum!

I'm honestly not quite sure why it came as such a surprise to me. I knew they were trying. I know Vivi wants to be a mum. But for some reason I couldn't quite imagine this happening. It was almost more surprising to me than it was to find out our Eris was pregnant unexpectedly and underaged.

I suppose it's probably because she is MY sweet Vivi. To everyone else she really has perfected that Malfoy mask. Hers is a bit more stern or hard than reserved or aloof. Most people who aren't in our innermost circle think she's a shrewd businesswoman with little emotional range. But I've always known her heart and soul. She needs that mask because her inner self is so soft I would think it would be easily damaged.

Look at what's happened with this minion, she informed him he'd be marrying her and he quickly jumped to the occasion and the command. She didn't think she was marrying for love. She convinced herself and everyone around her that she wasn't in love with her fiancé, now husband. But I've seen the way she looks at Alric. She looks at him the way I'm sure I look at the both of you, as though he hung the moon and stars just for her.

I thought Vivi was going to murder you Draco when you took so long to get to her birthday dinner. You could tell she had wanted to walk in, have everyone there, and announce her news before the excitement and anticipation could make her spontaneously combust. But nooooooo, you had to be so late getting there from the ministry. Luckily for you she wanted to make her announcement more than she wanted to hurt you for making her wait! I obviously would have tried to defend you but I think we all know I'm no match for Viona. She could take me with both hands tied behind her back!

Another reason I shouldn't have been surprised by the announcement, I was so certain she was pregnant when I saw her practically floating around at Yule-time. I'm pretty sure I even mentioned her looking lovely enough to glow. She flitted between her siblings and her siblings' children like a benevolent fairy princess. Once I'd sufficiently calmed down from the initial announcement I managed to call her on it. "Vivi! I knew it, at Christmas I would have sworn you had that beautiful pregnant glow about you. I can't believe you waited an entire month to tell us!"

Her gorgeous big brown eyes widened, "Dad! I had no idea I was pregnant during the Yule celebrations. We only found out a little over a week ago. I would have announced it immediately but since my birthday was so close we thought this would be more fun."
I argued with her, "There is no way that can be true, you were practically sparkling. You had to have been pregnant, I refuse to believe otherwise!"

"I promise I had no idea, but you're right I WAS pregnant. I'm eight weeks along right now according to Rowe so a month ago I was pregnant already. I can't believe you knew before I did!"

Ha! For once I knew something before everyone else. It's such a rare feeling for me, I'm going to bask in it a bit yeah? Between the knowledge that I knew something before everyone else and the absolute joy I'm feeling about knowing we're getting another grandchild to spoil rotten and love unconditionally I have a lot of basking to do.

On top of that, you two wonderful men wholeheartedly approved of my plan for our honeymoon destination! So I get to be proud of myself for being right, anticipate another beautiful life coming into our lives, and now I get to plan an amazingly beautiful honeymoon for my men! Life is beautiful my loves.

The Northern Lights are going to be absolutely breathtaking from the skylights of our hotel. I know Draco that you're used to much larger accommodations than our hotel offers. Which is why I am so thankful you saw my idea and immediately agreed. I suppose it might be small but the idea of the three of us enjoying our first nights of wedded bliss from an entirely glass igloo in Finland where we will make love under the Aurora Borealis made up for having a bit less room than you're used to.

If you really think about it, it's not as though we need a whole lot of space. I don't plan on letting either of you more than an arm's reach away the entire time. Our bodies will be so intertwined that if our skin tones weren't so different you wouldn't be able to tell where one of us ended and the others began. Okay, I need to stop thinking about this, I'm rock hard and neither one of you are here to help me out with this.

Oh, that helped the situation ... the only dark spot on my current intense joy is this utter gobshite with Ollie's ex in-laws. There are no laws broken? There has to be some way around this. The child lived with them long enough to offer the contract, have her assessed by (shady) healers, and implant the child, but they never knew she wasn't seventeen? There was no reference check? You're going to have this child grow your heir but don't think to ask for identification? I find it really hard to believe.

And there has to be some way to prove they intentionally attempted to poison our Oliver. Like you said, with this witch's garden being so militantly laid out the idea that she could have accidentally used the wrong plant is unlikely. Circumstantial but at least worth adding to the list of wrongdoings. And I have to assume with an extensive garden and the knowledge on how to make or hide ingredients inside potions that she has some sort of mastery or certification in brewing right? Ollie, didn't you say she used to sell potions and that's why you trusted her to supply all the necessary fertility potions and aids? Even if there were no hemlock, wouldn't the fact that she intentionally misled someone about the contents and use of a potion she brewed be enough to claim some sort of criminal behavior?

Especially in the wizarding world, messing with someone's ability to create an heir to their line is equivalent to line theft wouldn't you think?

I'm going to send a message to Minister 'Mione and ask about that specifically. Yeah, I'm not going to be able to concentrate on anything else until we get this figured out. These monsters need to be off the street and out of our lives.

Crazy in love .... or just Crazy,
Thursday January 25th
Harry! Oliver!

I promise I'll tell you more details later, but they confessed! It seems that Fierston was in charge of interrogating them - separately - and he was able to slip in their minds and look around enough to ask leading questions that flustered them just enough that they each separately confessed to lots of little things that individually, aren't really all that bad, but altogether, paint a nasty picture of attempted murder and knowingly using an underage girl to carry their heir.

So... it seems that the Fuckwads are going to Azkaban after all!

I'll be home in a bit to celebrate - or commiserate - with you both.

Love eternally,
Draco
Thursday January 25, 2018

My Loves,

I will be back to our rooms in a few minutes to celebrate. Yes, celebrate. Finally, those monsters will be behind bars where they can't hurt innocent people again. Where they will pay for their past crimes, their current crimes, and be far enough removed from society that they won't have the opportunity to commit future crimes.

I KNEW in my heart that they had purposefully messed with my Ollie. I knew it hadn't been a mere mistake that they gave you a contraceptive and knew it couldn't have been a coincidence that contraceptive also included poison. Whether they intended to outright kill you, keep you sick, or just keep you from conceiving, they violated your trust. They violated your marriage. They corrupted your future. And it seems as though they were hoping to destroy your spirit.

But to find out it wasn't just to keep you from creating an heir with their son but they truly intended to end your life? I can't help but hope they live a very very very long time. A wizarding lifetime in Azkaban, even free of the dementors as it is now, is the bare minimum of what they deserve for the heartache they created. And while they didn't actively harm Parker or Cassie, they hurt them immeasurably. A childhood of being told they weren't good enough. A lifetime of being told they aren't "really" their grandchildren, Edmond's child, or Oliver's child. To have someone who should love you without limits tell you you're worthless can't be easily overcome.

I can't help but wonder if they contributed to the death of their own child as well. I don't think they would have done so intentionally, but bear with me here ... and Ollie, if you can't handle me talking about this please turn your face into Draco's chest and just breathe him in. Always calms me down. Edmond had a condition which caused his mind to be lost and eventually his body followed suit, we already knew that. And while they didn't actively harm Parker or Cassie, they hurt them immeasurably. A childhood of being told they weren't good enough. A lifetime of being told they aren't "really" their grandchildren, Edmond's child, or Oliver's child. To have someone who should love you without limits tell you you're worthless can't be easily overcome.

Didn't his parents not know he ever tried to become the carrier? I thought you told me once Ollie that they assumed you would carry any baby and they always handed their "fertility" potions to you. When you decided to switch things up and see if Ed could conceive they continued to give you the potions that you then gave to him. I think there's a high probability that they unknowingly sped up the process of their own son's condition.

Think about it, didn't Edmond's healer say he would have succumbed eventually but that it seemed to be early onset? What's one of the side effects of hemlock? Renal failure. As in failure of one of the body's organs. As well as respiratory distress. All of which could have contributed to an earlier death. I think if we're able to subpoena his medical records, which Oliver as his widower even if he inherited nothing should have no issue getting, it's likely that we can add murder and not just attempted murder to their list of crimes to be answered for.

Or manslaughter? Or murder in the second or third degree? I don't know all the specifics of which one has intent or premeditation or all of those specific laws, but premeditated or not, causing your son's death isn't just a slap on the wrist!

They are going DOWN!

Anyway, I just got off of a floo call, sat down to write, and I'll be home with the two of you. I just had to call Grandmama first.

No, do not freak out. This is not me breaking a promise almost immediately after making it. I called her because I know this will come out. I know she will hear what's happening. And I wanted to let her know in no uncertain terms that we do not want her handling this. She initially gave me the "Yes, of course I hear you loud and clear Harry, nudge nudge, wink wink" until she realized that I was dead serious.

I told her that even if a week from now I called her in a drunken stupor because my puppetmaster mother-in-law got me blitzed with her husband and begged her to deal with them that she would leave it alone. Eventually she promised that she would never cause their deaths, saying "there will not be a trophy sent to any of you, I promise you that."

I think that's as close to a Grandmama promise as we can hope for. She won't kill them, and she won't send us any parts. I do wonder if she will somehow find a way to torture them for however long they stay in Azkaban, but hey I'm not her keeper!

I'll see you both soon. I'm bringing champagne and ice cream, not sure if we're celebrating or grieving but I've got us covered either way.

Love you,
Harry

Friday January 26th
The men I adore,

You are both currently shagged out. It was a rather emotional night all around. The three of us all felt elation, even as Oliver felt betrayed and we felt anguish on his behalf. We alternated between grieving/commiserating and celebrating, until Oliver himself finally cried out: "Enough! Shag me until I can't even remember my own name!"

And so we did.

This means that I didn't have a chance to tell you everything. Let me start by recapping what I did manage to tell you. As I said, Fierston was in charge of the interrogation, and because he could read their thoughts, he was able to see things they wanted to keep hidden, and by asking leading questions, he was able to find out things such as:

The reason Oliver's name was in all caps on the label on the jar was that they wanted to insure that Oliver and what'shisname didn't take the same herbs, despite the fact that they did give their son some other herbs that were also supposed to support fertility - from the 'donor' end - that almost certainly were contraceptives as well. Probably even the same Queen Anne Lace that they gave Oliver, maybe with general health promoting herbs added.
They actually told that girl to claim she was 17 so that they could claim they didn't know she was only 15.

They had her implanted with the fertilized eggs that passed the screening process, so at least they know that the baby won't have the genetic disease their son did, nor any of the other diseases that can currently be screened for.

But the biggest thing they ended up admitting to was that they did know they put Hemlock in with the QAL and that they had talked about it and agreed to do it beforehand. Their intention was to hopefully make Oliver sick in a way that looked natural and somewhat lingering, so that if he died - one might even go so far as to say WHEN he died - they could do their best to persuade their son that he needed to marry a woman and have his Heir the natural way.

Lastly, that they had 'casually mentioned' that Edward should put that money of Oliver's into their family account so that it could go to his rightful heir with the rest of it. Apparently, their vault was earning a MUCH better interest rate than the vault Edgar and Oliver had, and so - as a businessman - I personally cannot argue with that particular logic. Considering that they then tried to claim that Edbum gifted it to them and they had no idea it was intended for Cassie and Parker, well, that tells me they never intended for Oliver or the kids to have access to their own rightful money.

You might recall from THAT hearing, their financials were gone through and they DO have plenty of money, so I honestly have no idea why they wanted Oliver's money too. Maybe they actually thought they might eventually succeed in killing him and so his money would go to their son, and then, to his proper Heir anyway, and so, it wasn't stealing in their mind.

Whatever, that's all stuff you already know, and hopefully, Oliver won't be upset by reading this recap.

What you DON'T know is that Hermione reminded me today that she is my actual boss - as if I'd forgotten! And once she could see I was giving her a look that announced: Duh! Decided to get to the point and delegate some of her important business to me.

So...

I'm going to Russia.

Now before you panic, Harry, it's not for long. I can't tell you HOW long it'll take, but it shouldn't take more than a week or two. I leave Monday January 29th and my assignment is to talk to the Russian Magi-Government to persuade them to strengthen international bonds. Hermione has plans that...

Alright, they're supposed to be a complete secret for now, but I have a feeling she knows I'm going to tell the two of you and trusts that you'll not say a word to anyone else.

Remember the Triwizard Tournament? STOP PANICKING HARRY! She's NOT setting up a new inter-school event in which STUDENTS are placed at risk. She's decided that it's much more fun and responsible - not to mention profitable - if we organize it more like the Quidditch Cup.

That is to say, Adult Competitors in front of a LARGE paying audience. During a single weekend or week - as opposed to one event every couple of months, which I always thought was kind of stupid too, to be honest.

Yes, a portion of the profits is already set to be donated to the various Unity Houses around the world.
But as I was saying, because she wants this to be an event between the three 'local' magic communities, she needs a person with keen business acumen to pitch the idea to the Russians - as they will likely be harder to persuade - and if they get on board, I should be home in plenty of time to celebrate Valentine's day with you two before heading off to France to persuade their Magi-Government.

Also, don't worry, the ACTUAL event will be set for summer, thus, it WILL NOT interfere with our wedding! Rampaging Hungarian Horntails couldn't keep me away!

Now, with all the important things said, can I ask you to let me sleep in tomorrow? It's currently nearly 3 AM and I haven't been able to calm down enough to relax and fall asleep, thus, I'm probably going to be dead to the world when I normally wake up. That said, I MIGHT just initiate Oliver into the Somnophilia club (in an effort to FINALLY get to sleep), but whether I do or not, if you want to cast a sleeping spell on me and have your wicked ways with me while I'm sleeping the afternoon away, I wouldn't object.

Love, Lust, and all those other soft and tender emotions,
Draco
P.S. I'm telling you to loosen up my buttons baby!
Chapter 216

Chapter Summary

Harry is upset, Oliver is supportive, and Draco is on his way to Russia.

Saturday January 27, 2018

My Loves,

Yes, I am aware that throwing a tantrum and sitting alone in our rooms while everyone else enjoys a Saturday feast after an amazing Quidditch match is childish. I am aware that I am really only hurting myself by this display. I am mature and logical enough to understand that my tantrum changes nothing, everyone else is having fun without me, and I'm making myself look foolish.

No, I don't care.

I know we have spent decades practically, or at least A decade traveling the world. We have our fingers in so many businesses that we've often had to travel for whatever is needed. Usually we are able to go together, sometimes not. You Draco were able to stay in California with our sweet little Evie when Ollie and I had to come back to teach classes. When I was on my book tour I went by myself for some of it and took the kids with me for another part. Ollie is actually going to abandon us for a few days this summer for the equestrian training he applied for and was accepted into (still so proud of you Love). It is absolutely hypocritical and a little insane that I am this upset about you leaving us for a week Dragon.

And yet, here we are.

This is honestly less a temper tantrum and more of me just needing to wrap my head around why I'm so upset. This is an amazing plan of Hermione's, and Draco is the perfect person to accomplish it. You have familial ties with the country, in both the Wizarding and Muggle parts. You speak the language. You understand the culture. You're absolutely brilliant and you'll do our country proud I am sure of it.

And it's not like you wouldn't have welcomed Ollie or me coming with you if we weren't so busy with teaching. If we could have gone with you I know you would have loved showing off your loves, even in a place that would look down on triads.

Also, you're not taking the babies. Not even Morgana will be going along. There's no way any of the three of them would be alright without their main food source for such a long trip. So it isn't as though I would be angry with you taking the babies away.

Then why am I so upset?

I have a feeling if I were surrounded with the high spirits of everyone in the Great Hall I would probably end up bringing down the mood of the place. I can't find the positive in just about anything right now. I'm just going to miss you so damn much! I wonder if I'm just still feeling so raw from everything that happened with the criminal events coming out? I feel a bit as though I've been thrown off balance and not given any time to get my bearings before things began shaking again.

Oh well, we've certainly been through worse. And this is going to mean this entire upcoming week, any time our Oliver needs his mind taken off his stress, it will be completely my responsibility to provide that distraction. Oh hell yes, I am going to keep him so distracted.

Well now I can't come to the celebration because of this problem in my pants!

I suppose I'm off to take care of this problem all by my lonesome. So while you both are stuffing yourselves with celebratory cake, I am going to be stuffing myself full of whatever toy catches my fancy.

Yours,
Harry

P.S. The tournament is this summer? It's not going to mess with our plans to travel to Iran is it? We have the gala and all the fundraising to do and not a lot of time to get it done. Please tell me you and Hermione took this into account when planning dates!

---

Monday January 29th
The loves of my life,

Why do I always forget to tell you important things in person? Oh right, it's because whenever I see either of you, I immediately feel like kissing you is far more important than talking. Well, I have nothing better to do while on our jet than write you, so I will catch you up on the important stuff now.

Although, you actually probably DO know this already.

So, on Sunday when Harry was spending the day in his Gryffindor office with his Lions, and Oliver was out playing a friendly Quidditch match with all the house teams and anyone else who wanted to brave the cold wintry weather - although it was astonishingly sunny for this time of year in Scotland. Anyway, while you were both busy, I was having tea with Minerva and we were chatting about our upcoming wedding plans (and Harry, since I know you misread that, I MEAN your, mine, and Oliver's NOT Mine and Minerva's!).

The chat was going rather lovely, and even Morgana looked happy and content, but then my brother Sebastian flooed into the castle. He had chosen the main floo since it was the only one open on a Sunday - aside from our personal floo - and he figured that he'd need to register as a visitor to the castle anyway. Well, to his fortune, we were in the Headmistress' office, and thus right there so he didn't have to go looking for either of us.

Remember when I said I made an appointment with my brother but then had to reschedule it right away, well, I'd managed to have a Magi-Skype meeting with him one night when you were both asleep - since it was the only time that fit into both our schedules. Thus, I'd told him what we wanted and asked if he could do it. His response at the time was that he actually HAD brewed some prototypes but shelved them when he hadn't had anyone to test them on. In the past couple of weeks, he pulled them out and tested them on lab rats.

Funnily enough, he seemed to almost ignore Minerva as he chattered on and on with me about the potions, his theory and the variants he'd tried, before finally getting to the point that he'd succeeded and that he could give me a handful of Vials of potion designed to meld two (or more, but it works best with only two) sets of DNA into one viable semen sample so that it can then fertilize a third party and that person can carry a child that is the combination of all three people.

In other words, we have a potion to create the child we're hoping for.

You don't really need to think on the semantic technicalities in which the potion is theoretically creating a child out of two sets of DNA that is then impregnating a third person, because when I let myself think about that, it boggles my mind enough that I, erm, picture things I REALLY don't want to picture!

In any case, while that bit of news IS very important, it's arguably NOT the most important part of that entire discussion. It seems that when Minerva listened in, she was reminded that Sebastian was probably the world's best potion master at the moment, and since he hadn't done anything more important than play around in his own lab, she offered him the position of that Potions Professor that is still doing such a deplorable job that she's a bit desperate to replace him.

Sebastian tried to decline at first, saying that he was horrible around people, but then I reminded him that he was doing an admirable job as a father to Balian and Vanessa. Sebastian STILL tried to politely decline, but Severus spoke up from his portrait, saying just one sentence: "You WILL do it, son."

And that was that. Sebastian is now the new Potions Professor. He actually started this morning as Minerva couldn't chuck the other bloke out fast enough.

But with Sebastian now having a job, and Delphini busy working on preparations for a Valentine's Day event at her gorgeous Bed and Breakfast (she's not best pleased that Harrison quit as a helper to help run the Hog's Head), I actually have Vanessa here with Jaz and Zaire.

You know that Zaire was NOT about to pass up a trip, even a business one, and insisted on coming with me. The surprise was that Jaz was so insistent that she come along, but since she doesn't have school - having opted to be homeschooled since Leah is her main teacher and does a better job than that all deaf school she was going to last year - I saw no reason not to let her come.

Funnily enough, this means that I have quite the entourage with me as Zaire's Callista came with to supervise him as he tours all the restaurants and food carts he can, Jaz and Vanessa brought Leah (and Leon), and I have Pippa (my shadow). Which means that Pierre is naturally with us, which means that SIRIUS is with - as he was NOT about to let his boys be parted from him for 1-2 weeks.

Oh! I nearly forgot! I agreed to bring Balian with too, but he's largely going to be watched by Zaire and Callista.

When we arrive in Russia, we're going to be staying in one of Grandmama's houses. I'm not certain she's actually in Russia at the moment as she'd traveled to London about a week before Christmas to spend the Hols with Kisa and the kids (and the rest of the Quartet, of course), and I haven't heard when or if she returned.

In any case, I have until Wednesday afternoon to get settled in before meeting with the Russian Ministry. Wish me luck and a speedy return!

Hit me baby one more time,
Draco

P.S. I hope I managed to shag you both hard enough that you're still feeling it when I return!
P.P.S. Will you place all the naughty memories you make while I'm gone in the Pensieve for me to watch when I get back?
Chapter 217

Chapter Summary

Harry is emotional, Oliver is keeping him sane, and Draco is in Russia.

Wednesday January 31, 2018

Dragon!

Wow, when you abandoned us on Monday I assumed I would be emailing you almost immediately. I figured I would email you so often that you would become annoyed with how often you were being bothered. I thought we would miss you so much that the idea of not telling you our every thought no matter how mundane would just wreck us and we'd be forced to practically give you a play by play of every breath taken.

Not that we don't miss you immensely ...

Harry's right Draco, we miss you so much! The bed is awfully lonely without you. Harry's always the warm one and you're always the cool one which means I get to sleep between you and I'm kept cozy warm but not overheated all night long. Without your satin-cool skin to bring down the temperature I've been absolutely melting! Come home!

Wow. Just wow. You heard the man Draco, I am too warm and Ollie never wants to sleep with me ever again. He wishes you were here to counter the terrible effects of having to sleep with me. I.Can't.Even.

Harry you absolute pain in my arse, you know that's not what I was saying. And weren't you the one complaining that you didn't realize just how much Draco did with the babies every day and the two of us just aren't cutting it? Don't you think that might as well be saying that I am a useless parent and you can't wait until Draco comes home to pick up my slack? No? You just meant that as an innocent compliment about our Love while he's away to remind him how special he is to us? Wow ... just wow Harry James.

Hey! I was kidding Ollie! Don't you dare withhold those kisses from me! Those are my kisses damn-it!

Anyway Draco, obviously we miss you for so many reasons. And I didn't realize how much of my time I spent adorably play fighting with you until you were gone. Oliver tries darling, but we all know he's no Slytherin. Two Gryffindors trying to fight with their words is like throwing alphabet soup at the wall and hoping something sticks. Or dropping a Scrabble box and hoping the tiles make their own good point. See we're so terrible the only way I could make fun of us was to compare us to soup and a board game.

Come home!

Despite missing you, one of the reasons we haven't written much is simply how busy we've been. Oliver was not kidding about me telling him we're struggling without you. I thought I was really hands on with these babies. I know how much time I spend up in the middle of the night with them, feeding them, taking them to the occasional class.

And our Ollie is so active with them. I might be feeding them but he's immediately taking them and winding the air right out of them, changing the nappies, and settling them right back to sleep. He's got Gabe with him while he's shouting out pointers to the teams practicing, and we all know there's nowhere but their Daddy Ollie's lap that either of the boys would rather eat from.

I've always said that before we had Ollie, you and I managed to raise two different sets of almost triplets from birth or close to it. I kept telling you that if we managed that we could do anything. I really thought you and I had it handled. And when Ollie came into our lives it only got easier. Wow, the three of us are Superdads! No. YOU could do anything. YOU had it handled. YOU are Superdad! Our baby whisperer.

We are already thankful for how amazing you're going to be with our next baby! Eeek OUR next baby! We're really going to do it! Thank you, thank you, a million times thank you.

Before you panic about our baby stress, no nothing is wrong. Yes, the babies are all happy and healthy. They've been fed and changed and loved on. Gabe's potion regimen seems to be holding steady at only one or two tiny episodes per day. Dyl has been happy as a clam per usual. And our Morgana hasn't blown up a single human! That ugly-arse vase the medi-witch got you for Yule is another story.

What? You hated that thing and you know it! It's like she cares enough about you that she wanted to get you a present but while she was shopping she remembered that she secretly hates you as well. Or she has vision troubles. Is that it? Is she blind?

Fine! Morgana didn't touch your vase! I did it! I was dusting our rooms and was thinking about how ugly the vase was while I was shooting the dusting charm and I must have used too much power. I'm sorry alright? Next time we go shopping you can pick the ugliest thing there is and ....

Wait, no, I take it back. We already have that damn anthill. Yeah, let's call it even, the destruction of the vase is payback for me having to look at bugs constantly.

Bugs.

Yes Ollie I'm sorry I'm getting rambly and carried away. The other reason we haven't written as much you are already aware of. We've been trying to magi-skype every evening so the kids can see you, we can see you, we can see the older kids, and you can see all of us. But since tonight is actually the beginning of negotiations we will sadly have to go without our skype date. Therefore ... email it is!

So, the things you've missed so far:

Sebastian is a hit so far with the students. He thinks he's no good with people but he's always been good at talking about potions and dealing with people who were willing to let him be himself. I guess the students he's had so far have had no problem with any of that. I guess he's like a good version of his bio father. Brilliant at potions, takes what he's teaching seriously, but also isn't an arse-hole with a vendetta against a lonely little orphan boy.

And any professor was bound to leave a good impression on the students after Professor Shite-For-Brains.

The only issue has been the addition of a second Professor Malfoy into the teaching roster. That issue was fixed quickly as the first class (some mouthy little Gryffindors) asked if they could just call him Professor Snape. He stared them down for a full minute, I think they were close to wetting themselves, when he replied with a "as that is my biological father's surname and my own middle name I will allow it" and went right back to teaching.

How has it been visiting the last few days with Grandmama? I would have told you she was already back in Russia if you'd only asked. I did talk to her just a few days ago if you'll remember. It seems as though we all travel so much for birthday celebrations, births, or weddings that we barely ever get to sit down and have a quality visit with her. Any time she visits there's some big party to plan for, attend, and then clean up after (sleep off). I know you have your meetings with their Ministry equivalent but I'm hopeful you managed to have some real conversations these last days. Please give her a big hug from me.

Unfortunately, because of how needy the little ones have been, Ollie and I don't have very many memories to place in the pensieve for your viewing pleasure when you get back. But as the little ones are all snoozing away, I think we'll go make a brand new one for you!

Love,
Your Men

P.S. Of course I know you didn't mean you were marrying Minnie! I am particular about taking your words as they are spoken, not that I can't understand basic context clues.

Wednesday January 31st,

Oi!

For such a LONG meeting, I have so very little to write about. Basically, I woke up and performed my morning routine with Jaz and Vani while Zaire and Callista took off with Balian to start on their lunch tour. When I was done and ready to go, Leah and Pippa left their boys with Sirius - who planned to take them to the zoo or some such.

Thus, when I walked into the Russian Equivalent of the Ministry, I had Jaz on my arm like a little lady, Pippa at my back, with Vani and Leah flanking a bit to our backs. It was rather impressive even if it looked a bit like a weird foreign gentleman bringing a couple of noble girls for an odd fieldtrip.

Once in the Ministry, we were greeted by a liaison who had the job of escorting us to the exact conference room designated for our meeting. The room was already full of Ministry Officials as - unsurprisingly - the Head of every Department plus the Minister and his cabinet of Advisers were on hand to listen to my pitch. I suppose that all they really knew was that I was a delegation from the British Ministry come to propose something big - and so, probably felt that it was something important enough for all the higher ups to listen to.

But no pressure, right?

So, I arranged it so that Jaz and Vani were off to the side where they couldn't distract anyone with Leah in front of them (with her back to the table full of Ministry Officials) so that she could interpret for them. As for me, I stood at the head of the table where a white board was ready if I needed it during my presentation.

"Minister," I began, addressing the highest person there with my rusty but still fluent Russian. I then looked at the rest with nods of respect. "I hope that I'm not being presumptuous in calling you all friends. I have come here today to present a business opportunity from the British Minster for Magic - Hermione Granger. Let me start by introducing myself, I'm Draco Malfoy - Chief Adviser of the British Minister. This is my daughter Jasmine, my niece Vanessa, their sign language interpreter, Leah, and my invaluable assistant Pippa."

The Minister exchanged a questioning look with his Chief Adviser. The Adviser then asked: "Isn't it odd to bring a couple of little girls to a business meeting?"

I waved that away dismissively. "Of course not! How else do they learn to conduct business? I would have brought one of my sons as well, but he had more important things - to him - to attend to."

The majority of the Officials chuckled at that, which softened the mood a touch.

"Now that you all know who I am, let me get right to the point." I then launched into the sales pitch, Pippa magicking up a bit of a power point to illustrate and highlight the main points, and being that I KNEW that the Ministry wouldn't be swayed unless there was something worthwhile in it for them, I made sure that their potential profit margin was repeated several times.

The Minister sat listening intently, seeming neither for nor against the proposal, but his Advisers were all taking meticulous notes and forming questions. When I was done outlining every single detail, I answered all the questions they had, and then - as I expected - gracefully left when they told me that they wanted until Friday to think things over.

So, I brought the girls to dinner. Now, I have nothing better to do until Friday than visit my dearest Grandmama and have a lovely chat. As for this exact moment, Jaz is glaring at me so that I'll get the point that she would quite like to dance with me. I suppose that I'll just have to drop everything and dance with my beautiful daughter. Oh woe is me, such a hard life I lead.

NOT!

Off to dance with one of my little loves,
Draco
P.S. Give the babies kisses from me!
Chapter 218

Chapter Summary

Harry and Oliver still miss Draco, and Draco is making progress. Vodka may be involved.

Friday February 2, 2018

My Heart,

I know you have a few more hours before you meet up with the Russian Ministry to find out their answer, so I figured I would distract you with a nonsensical rambling bit of nonsense from me. Hopefully they will have an answer for you and not just another "hmm, we'll see, come back on Monday." Have you told them you've left your love at home and if you don't get back soon he might go all RHH on all of them.

You know, me Harry, your fiancé. In case you've forgotten who I am since we haven't seen each other in days and days and days!

I'm sorry I'm being so needy. I just miss you so much. I know we've been separated many times over the years but it's been a while and I've been very spoiled with having you home all the time. I probably get this way every time we have babies getting closer to a year or so old. When they're infants you are so adamant about never leaving them for a single moment. Sometimes to the point where I feel as though I need to beg just to get a dinner alone with you. Not that I am complaining, it's important for me that we're both hands on and present in their lives. But I get used to you being within arms' reach for all those months of pregnancies and then infancy and when you start branching out I want to throw a tantrum.

Alright, enough of that! I have been absolutely bitchy all week. I really am sorry. I know you hate being away from us and I'm just making it worse. Or maybe I'm making it better? If I'm obnoxious enough then you'll be glad to be away and won't be so sad about being without us! I just have to get Ollie on board to be just as obnoxious!

Damnit, he says no.

This week in my classes, I've used your mission as my lesson plan. Before you freak out thinking I spilled information I'm not even supposed to know, I've not referenced the trip or the reason for it at all. But with a big international tournament (hopefully) coming up, it inspired me to think about how that's done in the Muggle world. I did just a little web-searching and realized that the Muggles have a huge international tournament of their own coming up starting next week. It was perfect timing!

So, this week we've been discussing the Muggle Olympic Winter Games. I'm going to get probably a month's worth of lessons out of this one topic. It's bringing up the idea of international cooperation and the countries that are not promoting that cooperation. Obviously we're able to talk about all the different sports that are going to be showcased. And with the opening and closing ceremonies highlighting each nation's heritage and culture we get to add that in as well. I wouldn't be surprised if I didn't get more than a month out of this!
I am a bit worried that my students are going to beg for a field trip to try out the different winter sports. I love a good wild activity as much as the next guy, but the thought of taking some of these children to do anything more complicated than sledding terrifies me. Can you picture some of my accident prone kids trying to downhill ski for the first time? Or any of our own tricksters trying bobsledding and charming the sled to fly or go extra fast? I think I'll just take the Hufflepuffs!

Oh, just so you know, when I was prepping for my classes, Lily told me she thinks the figure skaters look amazing and she is going to become one. I explained to her that there is no equivalent to figure skating in the Wizarding World. She looked at me like I was a moron, and told me in her Malfoy no-nonsense voice, "That's why I'll have to do it in the Muggle World Daddy."

I'm researching classes or clubs nearby that she can join, but she wants you to take her shopping for skates and other gear. Again, I tried explaining that you didn't know anything about skating so I can just as easily take her shopping for gear. She put that singular eyebrow up, "You're not the shopping Daddy." Well that's that I suppose.

Hurry up and get home so I can see you and if that's not enough incentive, you get to go shopping right away!

Yours,
Harry

P.S. In case you needed more incentives, we finally managed a thorough memory for you to watch last night.

Friday February 2nd
Moi Milyye,

On Thursday, I did have a nice long and lovely chat with my dearest Grandmama, in which I opened up about how gutted I felt to realize that I am a murderer, and then reinforced our decision to NEVER ask her to do anything like that again. She was... accepting...

Today, my meeting was set so that I had a nice leisurely amount of time to get ready. I - of course - got even more dolled up than I had on Wednesday, and that's really saying something as I was dressed to kill (figuratively) on Wednesday. Once again, the girls got ready with me.

After we arrived at the Russian Ministry and were settled in, we had a few hours of going over every detail at length. See, on Wednesday, I'd basically given an overview - a very long overview - but I didn't want to overwhelm them with information. So, now that they've had a few days to think it over, they realized that they wanted to know the specifics. Once they were satisfied that they knew all the details, they told me that they needed until at least Tuesday or Wednesday to think it over.

Now this may sound like a setback, but it's really not, because at the very end of the meeting, the Minister himself suggested that I have my girls sent home with Leah so that I could go drinking vodka with them. Pippa was naturally included as they recognized her as my invaluable assistant. And I have probably said this before, but drinking vodka in Russia is a bit of a necessity for bonding and conducting business. Thus, yes, I'm about to go get wasted in the name of international cooperation.

But lest you worry, Pippa has already promised to keep herself so mildly drunk that she can still think clearly and prevent me from doing anything stupid. Good thing she's such an expert at covert sobriety (or partial sobriety) charms! But now I have to wonder WHO she practiced those charms on to get so good at doing them covertly...

I'm a slave for you (two),
Draco
P.S. You think it's hard not having me with you while I'm gone? Try being me in which I don't even have either of you with me, and so, I'm going mad with horniness! I swear to Salazar that if I don't shag one of you soon, I'm going to lose my mind and come back an Inferius! Both my hand and my shaft are getting positively raw! Sigh... :-(

P.P.S. Vodka tastes better than I remember.

P.P.P.S. Pippa is dancing like an utter slag, but the Russian Officials don't seem to mind.

P.P.P.P.S. I'M dancing like an utter slag!

P.P.P.P.P.S. Ooo... Jumping over this bonfire is fun...

P.P.P.P.P.P.S. COWS!!!

P.P.P.P.P.Pee.Pee.Sssss. qawssdeddrftgyhuhjjik!

Around midnight: Dear Harry and Oliver, stop worrying about Draco, he's currently passed out and sleeping off his drunken stupidity, thus you won't be receiving anymore drunken emails or Insta-owls tonight. Also, I made sure that his normal over the top flirtiness and slagginess DIDN'T get too far out of hand. As far as I can tell, he genuinely impressed the Russian Officials tonight and they are going to be MUCH more friendly from here on out, so, mission all but accomplished! See you soon! ish...
Love,
Pippa
Chapter 219

Saturday February 3, 2018

Good Morning our Love,

I will try and type to you very very quietly. I'd hate to disturb what is likely some very important rest for your poor body. Raw hand and shaft, your liver has to be working overtime, plus I can’t even imagine how your brain is going to react when it sees just how many cow photos you took of yourself last night.

Then again, some of those photos were far enough away that I know you couldn't have taken them without some sort of levitation and timing spell, which based on your evening's interests, I would guess you did not have the precision to cast those. Who took the pictures for you? Pippa? If that's the case I am really looking forward to seeing the ones she took with her own magi-mobile. She's going to OWN you!

I wonder what it will take to bribe her into giving me all of the outtakes. Methinks our dear Pippa deserves a raise. But I realize I have no idea just how much she makes at this point. She keeps getting raises, she gets percentages of profits from most of the businesses. I wouldn't be all that surprised to find out her net worth is significantly more than ours. Not that she doesn't deserve every single knut, I just can't help but laugh thinking of how much she makes but when someone hears her job title is "Assistant" they probably think she's not very well off.

I know that you're in Russia for something very important, and I know you had to have your vodka party with them last night, and I'm obviously well aware that you have to be there for Tuesday and/or Wednesday when they will (hopefully) give you their answer. But do you have to stay there the whole weekend? What about just a quick pop back home for a cuddle and a shag? You could come home later today, spend the afternoon with the babies and the littles, dinner with us and your parents, be there for bedtime stories. Then the three of us could shag ALL NIGHT!

You could sleep in tomorrow morning, one more quick shag for the road, and be back in Russia by Sunday evening. What do you think?

Okay, I know I'm being unreasonable. I just miss you! And your email quite got my hopes up, when you said the Russian contingent told you to send the girls "home with Leah" for a moment I thought that meant they were coming HOME ... not back to Grandmama's house. When I finally caught on and realized what you had said it was like being hit with all of you leaving all over again. I had to cry into Ollie's lap.

Well, I cried until there was a different reason for my eyes to water!

And then you definitely made up for any sadness with an inbox full of pictures of you and your dancing partners! Hehehe, I swear those pictures are seared into my brain forever. Some day years in the future you'll be receiving some award like an Order of Merlin and I will smile softly. You will lean in and ask me what has me so happy. I will hold onto your hand, give you a loving smile, and say "thinking about the time you tried to Conga with a cow!" Then I will laugh forever after.

Less funny though, is that you apparently tried jumping over a bonfire? Draco Lucius, we have talked about this; no fire when you've been drinking! You're not in your right mind and the alcohol only makes you more flammable! No.Fire.
I understand that asking for a third meeting can only be a good thing and not a setback. If it were a negative they just would have told you to go home with a swift "no thank you." Wanting all these meetings mean they care enough to get nit-picky. But I'm worried about how long they are going to drag this out. Especially if you're pretty much going to have to turn right back around and head to France to do the same negotiations all over again.

I am going to be a bit of a brat and insist that if they add on more time and you have to stay longer that you will at least ACTUALLY send the girls home. Jaz needs to wake up in her own bed to her traditional pancakes for her birthday! And by "Jaz needs" I of course mean "I need to wake her up with the traditional birthday breakfast or I will lose my mind!" I only get so many birthdays with these babies before they grow up and leave the nest and I have to give the tradition over to their spouse.

I love Maha, but I did NOT love giving River's birthday mornings away. Why can't our children just stay eternally five years old forever?

Ugh, I'd better not tempt you into trying to talk me into the age stopping potion again.

No. No potion.

Hurry up and wake up and come home! We need you!!

Love,
Me

Tuesday February 6th
Biyeniye moyego serdtsa,

Good news! You don't have to miss me for too much longer!

Yes, I took your advice and left the girls with Leah and Pippa so they could do some sightseeing, even as Zaire and Callista continued their tour and Sirius took on Balian to play with Pierre and Leon. Thus, me all by my lonesome came home and had a nice long bedroom session with the two of you. That did a LOT to recharge my spirits after the demoralizing photo viewing session I had to suffer through at Pippa's glee.

The part of having to return to Russia for the final meeting that damn near broke my heart was when Morgana saw me getting ready to leave again, and not only threw a fit until I held her, but then REFUSED to let me put her down without blowing up everything in the room. Thus, I brought her with me.

But getting back to the good news. It seems that the Russian Officials had a nice long meeting on Monday to discuss the opportunity, and since the only objection anyone really had was how the last Triwizard Tournament had been rigged by the Dark Lord to serve his own purposes - and we'd vowed to prevent any sort of tampering - there really wasn't much else to object to. The Tournament should bring in a lot of money for all participating parties, and the Russian Ministry of Magic could use a bit of a cash influx, if they're honest - which they weren't, but I could read it in everything that wasn't said.

Thus, today, I was summoned to the Ministry to hear their final decision. I once again brought the girls - this time including Morgana - and we were shown to the same conference room. Interestingly enough, after laughing their arses off over my penchant for dancing with large farm animals, they didn't question for a second the fact that I had a baby in a carrier over my expensive bespoke robes.

The Russian Minister heckled me good-naturedly a bit - insisting that I couldn't hold my vodka - but then got right directly to the point: they'd voted on my proposal and (by a rather large majority) had approved it. Thus, rather than have to stay, I get to go home tomorrow (it'll be too late tonight).

From this point on, it's actually the Russian Ministry that will have to send a representative to the British Ministry to coordinate the event - provided the French agree. Basically, the committee in charge of actually organizing and implementing the tournament is going to be comprised of our Ministry Officials, Russian Officials, and French Officials. That way, each country SHOULD feel as if they were fully involved in the event.

So, after that announcement was made, I was in the middle of shaking everyone's hands - as were Pippa and the girls as they were being included in the mini celebration, but don't worry, only a single glass of Vodka was passed around for us all to drink from - when something unexpected occurred.

Pansy and Ivan walked into the conference room. I just so happened to spot them before anyone else.

"Pans! What are you doing here?"

"Draco love! It's been AGES since I last saw you!" Pansy replied as we kissed each other on the cheek. Ivan shook my hand even as Pansy answered my question. "Ivan and I came here to meet with Minister Petrikov about some important business. What are YOU doing here?"

"I'm also here on business," I informed her as Ivan went over and whispered in Petrikov's ear.

"What sort of business?" Pansy wondered with a suspicious look.

I pushed on her nose. "None of your business, you nosy cow!"

"Bloody Bastard!" The insult just doesn't come across the same in Russian. "I KNOW you weren't planning to go home WITHOUT visiting your best friend!" She stared me down until I had the good sense to wave my hands and reassure her.

"Of course not! I was planning to arrive unexpectedly for dinner tonight!"

She harrumphed. "You'd BETTER!"

Meanwhile, from what I could tell, Ivan had secured a nearly immediate meeting with the Minister, and was somewhat anxious to rush me out of the Ministry so that he could get to it. He pounded me on the back genially.

"Yes! Come to dinner! And then WE can talk YOUR ear off about our daughters' wedding!"

I laughed, patting him on the shoulder. "I look forward to it."

And with that, Pansy took control of the conversation once more. "Darling, don't be a bitch and overstay your welcome. Your business here is finished, so get the fuck out already, yeah?"

I snorted in amusement (mostly because the Officials were goggling in shock that she dared to say such a thing in POLITE company), nodded, kissed her on the cheek again, and then gestured for my group to take our leave.
So that's my good news. I succeeded! All I have to do now is have dinner with Pansy and Ivan, get a good night's sleep, and then take our jet home to you tomorrow. See you soon!

But everything you do makes my heart race, I can't think straight,
Draco
P.S. Pippa makes quite enough, thank you very much!
Chapter 220

Wednesday February 7, 2018

Draco!

You are not home yet. Since you are you, you're probably already aware of this fact. So now I'm just rambling nonsense. Pretty par for the course I suppose.

I was prepared to be anxiously anticipating your arrival right now. Don't get me wrong, I am definitely hoping you get home any moment. If you were to show up right this moment, I would go running out of this classroom screaming "Class is canceled, tell everyone not to bother me for the rest of the day" possibly knocking over small children if they happen to get in my way.

While I definitely want you home, I have found something to keep me distracted and quite entertained. So I'm not hyper-focused on staring at the clock counting down the seconds. That's for the best since I am certain you stayed up much too late spending time (drinking) with Pansy, discussing the girls' upcoming wedding, complaining about the fact that Ollie and I won't let you dress up the peacocks for ours. Which means you're probably going to be waking up even later than your usual schedule.

Shall I start with the fun things distracting me? Or should I begin with the depressing? Honestly though, even the depressing things distracting me are fantastic news that will likely have a good outcome even while being something I don't truly want to have to hear.

I should probably stop babbling and at least explain WHAT is the distraction. Do you remember a few ... weeks? months? ago when I told you all about the assignment I'd given my classes? I had them open their own email account and email each other, cc-ing myself so I can see they'd done it correctly? Email, or any electronic communication really, is quite important to learning about Muggle culture. But I gave the assignment that particular day because .... Oh! I gave the assignment because Maha was in labor and I was counting down the minutes until we could go see her. Then it was definitely months ago, two months to be precise.

So, I didn't particularly want my students to have access to my personal email address. I have no problem communicating with my students, I try to be approachable, but they don't need to be pestering me at all hours on an email address that I have alerts turned on for. I do not need dinging in my ear every time some student wants to send me a link to cat videos. Because of that, I gave them a secondary email address that I'd created just for the assignment.

In the last two months I haven't checked it at all once I received all of their first emails so I could give them credit for completing the assignment. I feel quite badly about it, but with everything that had been going on with Evie's birth, then Gemi's birth, planning for the funeral, the holidays, it just slipped my mind. And if someone had sent me something important I'd hope they would have eventually come up and asked "Hey Professor Malfoy, why didn't you respond to my email?" But nothing like that happened.

Today in class, wanting another day of distraction, I had them do a bit more work on the internet and subsequently their emails. I had them sign up for certain websites, showing how risky giving out information can be on the internet. The assignment had me opening up my own secondary email and saw I had a massively full inbox. Oops.

I was a bit relieved actually, because there were only a handful of emails written directly to me.
Most of the inbox was their own continued conversations with each other that they never took me off of. Some of them were just a few emails here or there, pretty mundane, and some of them I realized were now emailing back and forth to their friends (and me) multiple times a day for two solid months. It was really cool because some of the emails were originally just between students who initially messaged because they happened to be classmates and have now become good friends due to this communication.

Alright, you know me, I was going to do the long drawn out way to get to the depressing news I discovered but I won't do that to you this time. Finally .... FINALLY ... after months of asking my friends in the Auror department, in the Department of Children and Families, and nosy people who may or may not be the current sitting Minister for Magic, I have evidence that Meredith Mulciber is being abused!

I'm sure you were surprised months ago when you mentioned your conversation with her and I didn't say a single thing about her being apparently verbally and physically abused at home. Probably wondering to yourself when your husband stopped caring about child abuse. Well, the answer is that I never stopped caring. But I've dealt with different parts of the Mulciber family for years. Our own Cassie was a Mulciber by birth if you'll remember. So I didn't want to say or do anything to arouse their suspicion. I tried to be subtle in the search for proof and answers. I asked a few key people to keep their eyes and ears open.

I wanted to just go and take her away from her family immediately but recognized that with her being in a boarding school, and not being one of the students that pop back and forth, I knew she was in a secure and safe space that gave us time to do the sleuthing we needed to do.

Unfortunately, her family is very very good about hiding their activities. It's been months and none of my spies have managed to find a thing.

Until today. See, Meredith is in my Muggle Studies class. She is one of the students who created an email account and copied me on her chain. She's also one of the students who kept it going with her inter-class pen-pal. I opened up her email chain and read months of her baring her soul to her friend Druella. About the abuse she's suffered at the hands of her family. At her admittance that she's actually taken and then hidden pictures of different injuries she's had. An admission of lying to Poppy about where the bruises she came to school with at the beginning of the year were from.

It certainly was enough information that we could pull them in for questioning and I'm certain we could have had her sent to Unity for a healing session. But again, those Mulcibers are sneaky. I wouldn't put it past them and their old money to get out of this by claiming it's lies coming from a disturbed teenager. Until she mentioned a certain dark artifact that her family owns. An artifact whose existence would turnover her father's original lack of sentencing at the end of the war.

She mentioned the artifact by name and included its location. It was enough to pull a warrant for the Goblins to check for its existence within the Mulciber vault. Guess what was there?

So, as of today, we have all the proof we need to open a full investigation and bring up charges against Meredith's abuser!

Oh Gods! I had more to tell you, but I just got an insta-owl saying you'll be home in our rooms within the next ten minutes! Off to love on you!

Yours,
Harry
Wednesday February 7th
My hearts,

Oliver was lucky in that he happened to be in our quarters the moment I sent the Insta-owl to both of you. At that point, our jet had just landed and I needed to Side-Along the girls to the Manor (Zaire had Calista bring him, Pippa had Balian, Sirius had Pierre, and Leah had Leon), verify that no one had forgotten anything, and then Floo to the Castle.

Thus, Oliver was ready and waiting for me to emerge through the Floo into our quarters. I had a glorious minute or two of holding him tight and kissing him hello before you ran into the room (your magic flinging the doors open before you and not bothering to shut them again) and literally flung yourself into my arms with your arms and legs wrapped around me as much as possible. I had anticipated this and returned your fervor, walking backwards toward our bedroom - yanking Oliver by his shirt when he seemed hesitant to follow.

Thinking back, I suppose he reckoned that since you had him but not me for over a week, you should have a half hour or so alone with me, but we both insisted that he needed to be involved too. So it was that the three of us hit our bed and damn near broke it in our enthusiasm to get reacquainted.

Salazar I missed you both!

After pounding you both and being pounded rather vigorously in return for a few hours, I was bloody famished. So, we cleaned up a bit, found some clothes to throw on (alright, I summoned some nice clean and presentable clothes from my tiny wannabe closet) and went to eat dinner in the Great Hall with everyone else in the castle.

So, apparently Meredith has heard the news about her father somehow, because she was a bit withdrawn as we walked into the Hall, and I noticed her because I'd been thinking about her lately - wondering how her studies have been going, if she's been keeping up with her mind palace, things like that, as I haven't seen her since December... I might have seen her for a few minutes in January, but I don't quite remember.

Anyway, when she looked up and saw me walking down the main aisle toward the Head Table, she let out a small sob and raced to throw her arms around me and bury her head in my favorite waistcoat. A little flustered but willing to roll with it, I rubbed her back and let her just focus on her breathing.

Unfortunately for my stomach, she was too much of a mess to say anything, despite managing to not cry. Sensing that it was a fine line for her, I gestured to you two to go on without me and led her out of the hall toward our quarters. Once there, I settled her in a comfortable chair and let her just babble and cry for about a half an hour until she apparently felt like my lap on the sofa was a far more soothing place to be, because she plopped herself on the sofa to cry on my lap until she fell asleep - it barely took ten minutes at that point.

So, I find myself once again stuck under an emotional child as they get some quality and probably much needed sleep. Thankfully this time, I have access to my laptop and can read and write emails. I still have to basically write up a report on my mission for Hermione to send off to her before I meet with her tomorrow evening.
So, if you need me, I'll be on the sofa in our Quarters.

Have you ever wondered why in a dream you can touch a falling sky?
Draco
Chapter 221

Chapter by ladyroxanne21

Chapter Summary

Harry thinks Draco is a Cinnamon Roll, Oliver was topping a list, and Draco goes to the Ministry for a bit.

Chapter Notes

See the end of the chapter for notes

Thursday February 8, 2018

You know, after so many years parenting together I am quite used to seeing you with a child that's fallen asleep on you. Years of co-sleeping and baby-wearing. Weddings and galas and birthday parties where you have danced with one of our small children who ended up asleep on your shoulder. The fact that we're such a cuddly tactile family means innumerable nights where some child has fallen asleep with their head in your lap while you stroke their hair. It's a sight I love, a sight I will never tire of, but definitely not a sight that shocks me.

Or at least I thought it was a sight that wouldn't be able to shock me. But now I've been finding you with my students having fallen asleep while pouring their hearts out to you. Somehow, this ice prince of mine, a man who tries to pretend to the outside world that he's cold and unfeeling except in the case of his family members, has become Hogwarts' own shoulder to cry on. The man children run to because they know he will have an ear to listen and a lap to sob into. They've all figured out what I've known all along; you Draco Malfoy, are a marshmallow.

Yep, a great big cinnamon roll. Sweet and squishy.

Since you were otherwise indisposed last night, we really just had a quiet night in our rooms without doing much talking or catching up. I think I speak for Ollie as well as myself when I say we had no wish to wake up poor Meredith from her exhausted unconsciousness. Most of it was wanting her to get rest and feel better. Some of it was a bit selfish in not wanting to also be flooded with teenaged tears. Especially when I honestly don't know enough about the situation to have any real answers to give her. All I could share with her last night was time alone with my love.

We definitely didn't want to go elsewhere, even if we weren't talking I wasn't about to let you out of my sight. Luckily for us we're fluent in BSL so we did get to talk a bit, but not enough to make up for days of separation. I knew how much you had to be starving so I asked the Hogwarts' elves to make up a big plate for you. Although you weren't fed the stew everyone else got, it's not exactly an easy thing to eat on handed without spilling all over. But they made you up a tray of some of your favorite finger foods.

Hopefully you weren't too disappointed in missing out on the stew.

Oh! Seeing as we didn't get a chance last night to really talk, I didn't tell you all about the lists! Draco, the students have running email chains where they are compiling and ranking certain things. What kind of things? Oh just things like "Hogwarts' Best Quidditch Players" and "Swottiest
Students" ..., oh ... and ... you know ... things like "Most Snoggable Gryffindor" and "Fittest Professors."

Yeah, these children have cc'ed me in an email chain that ranks myself and my colleagues according to how hot the children find us. Eeeeeeewwww!

AND! Up until recently Ollie and I were neck and neck, going back and forth between first and second place. Silly kids who are still loyal to my fame I guess. It makes me feel awful squicky, but then again our Ollie IS awfully fit! But very recently we were ousted by a new professor. Oh yes, the current first place "fittest professor" is our very own little brother Professor Sebastian Malfoy!

I honestly can't decide what emotion I'm feeling about it. Relief to no longer be the tops of the lists. A little offended that they ousted our perfect fiance. Or weirded out by the idea of anyone finding my little brother attractive. I think I'm just going to stick with over-all horrified.

Yep, horrified. I may need to have you obliviate me later.

Love,
Harry

Thursday February 8th,
My two rocks of sanity!

Well, I've had quite the day.

It started a little earlier than usual. It seems that once Meredith felt safe enough to fall asleep, her anxiety fueled sleep deprivation kicked in and kept her asleep until a little after 9:30. I had PLANNED to stay up until I finished my report for Hermione, and then levitate her off me so that I could join the two of you in bed, but my own travel fueled exhaustion had me dropping off while I was still sitting on the sofa with her head in my lap.

Thus, when she woke up, she gasped and started babbling about being so sorry to have slept on me all night. Naturally, this woke me up. It took a bit to reassure her that I wasn't about to hex her for falling asleep on my lap. Once I managed to calm her down with tea and fruit filled crepes, she felt comfortable enough to actually tell me what she'd been babbling last night:

That she'd found out that they'd basically arrested her father, and how terrified she is that he'll be let go and then blame her for somehow getting him in trouble. She has NO illusions about what he'll do to her if he even remotely thinks she is somehow responsible for his current predicament. You may know this after having read her emails in which she talked about her home life, but what it all boils down to is that her father is not just emotionally abusive - yelling at her nearly every time he sees her - but also physically abusive, often giving her bruises and - on a rare occasion - a broken bone.

What she HASN'T had the courage to tell anyone - not even her new best friend Druella - is that he has molested and raped her in the past, and that behavior has seemed to escalate as she gets older.

Now you might be wondering about her mother at this point. Well, it seems as if Meredith's mother is, erm... abused as well. Not quite to the point that Meredith is - unless that happens when she's here at Hogwarts - but enough that Mrs. Mulciber tends to just go along with whatever her husband says. Thus, when Mr. Mulciber stated that Meredith would be disowned if she didn't bring her grades up, his wife basically agreed and told Meredith to do her very best, no matter what.
I asked about that. I know it probably seems cruel to ask about such a thing, but I asked why Meredith was so upset about being disowned if it meant that she would no longer be living with her abusive father, and she told me that she never believed for a second that he'd actually let her out of his control, that the threat was simply a 'more socially acceptable' version of: Do what I say or suffer the most painful consequences I can think of!

So, yeah, all in all, I will set our lawyers to the task if there is the SLIGHTEST chance that his lawyers might manage to get him clear of his charges. This man IS going to Azkaban for a long time if I have ANYTHING to do with it!

But that was just the start of my day. After Meredith finally felt ready to go to class (I wrote her a note excusing her from the ones she'd already missed), I was more or less on time for my morning routine. I did my yoga, took a shower, performed my skincare routine, and then got dressed in a comfortable but classy bespoke business suit so that I could head into the Ministry.

I brought Morgana with me since she simple REFUSED to let either of you take her from me this morning (meaning that she slept in bed with you, but insisted that you put her in a playpen so she could watch me finish sleeping), thus after I was ready, I tied her favorite wrap carrier to me with her in it. I was a little early for work - since I actually don't have to be to Hermione's office until around 4 - but I figured that I'd use the extra time to stop by the Auror department and chat with Robards.

I'm glad I did!

It seems that the Fuckwads have been INSISTING that they talk to me. Strange, I know, but true. Well, Robards wasn't even going to consider it, which is why he never sent me a note, but it came up in conversation, and so, I thought why not, maybe I can read some more incriminating evidence in their minds. So, I agreed to talk to them one at a time, starting with Mrs. Fuckwad.

She basically just wanted to see if she could appeal to my sense of tradition and certain values. She begged me to put in a good word for her and her husband because surely I can understand doing whatever it takes to carry on the family line. You know, had I talked to ONLY her, I might have considered speaking on her behalf. MIGHT, because while she is NOT my favorite person in the world, she at least seems mostly sane and I can sort of see her point of view.

BUT THEN I talked to Mr. Fuckwad.

He tried to intimidate me. To bully and threaten me. To imply that if I DIDN'T help him and his wife, there would be dire consequences. I could see without even reading his mind that this was a desperate last ditch attempt to get me on their side because they don't have a hope nor a prayer.

After listening to him, I said basically just one thing: "Why in the seven levels of hell would I help YOU when you and your wife tried to MURDER a man I love so much that I'm going to MARRY HIM?"

That's when he blustered for a little bit, which was rather amusing until he...

He pointed his finger at Morgana and roared: "WHAT WOULD YOU DO IF SHE WAS YOUR ONLY HEIR AND SHE DIED BEFORE CARRYING ON THE FAMILY LINE?!?! WOULDN'T YOU DO ANYTHING YOU HAD TO TO KEEP IT GOING?!"

I was going to give him a well considered reply. It may have been something along the lines of considering using a surrogate to carry a legitimate Heir if necessary. Except I didn't have a chance.
His finger pointing at Morgana and his very loud shouting must have upset or even scared my otherwise fearless baby girl, because she screeched one very shrill and high pitched wail that blew up all the magical lighting, which startled Mr. Fuckwad into silence.

He looked around in confusion, pressing a hand to his chest as he no doubt felt shocked that a BABY could be so powerful in her accidental magic.

In any case, I was no longer going to waste a second on this man because it was far more important to comfort our little Queen. Thus, I stood up, bid a fairly calm good day, and let the room.

So... the oddest thing happened. As I stood out in the hall talking to Robards - who'd been watching through a special magi-mirror spell - a pair of guards were assigned to bring him back to his cell, but when they actually tried, they found it difficult to do because he was suffering from some sort of attack. They had to call for a Mediwitch to attend to him.

Which is how I got to see my friend the Mediwitch. She was looking as confident as ever and did her best to help Mr. Fuckwad, but unfortunately - of fortunately, depending on your view of the situation - she was too late. The attack he was suffering was a heart attack, and it was the sort that had a fatal ending almost before anyone noticed it.

Thus, Mr. Fuckwad is now dead.

With that situation on my mind - I felt a bit like I had been responsible, despite the fact that the Mediwitch assured me that it was something that was likely to happen sooner or later, and I simply happened to be unfortunate enough to be in the vicinity when it happened. But with that on my mind, I went to Hermione's office and we had a much needed dinner together as I recapped my email report and answered all of her questions.

She says I have until February 16th before I have to leave for France. But that she insists that I do actually leave on that Friday so that I can confirm for them that I'm in the country and waiting for my meeting on Monday the 19th. However, that'll give me the entire weekend in Paris to shop, relax, go to a spa, and just basically hangout with whichever of our kids insists on coming with me. Also, we think that the fact that the Russians are already on board will help the French make up their minds much more quickly. That said, the French are not exactly known for doing things quickly, so we'll see.

This is the world we live in, and these are the hands we're given, use them and let's start trying, to make this a place worth living in,

Draco

P.S. While you two are still in your afternoon classes tomorrow, I'm bringing Jaz out to whatever she wants for her birthday.

Chapter End Notes

If you're confused about Draco calling Oliver's ex-in-laws a very rude name, keep in mind that he did try to refer to them semi-respectfully until they broke the camel's back in his mind by plotting to murder Oliver. And Oliver knows that Draco has started referring to them as such, and is a bit hurt by it, but hasn't said anything because he feels that Draco's rudeness is motivated by concern for him, and so, it would be a bit petty to get upset about it.
Chapter 222

Chapter Summary

Harry has an idea...

Friday February, 9, 2018

Good Morning Sunshine!

I've already had a lovely morning and I'm about to head off to my second class. I had stopped in during the little break I have between my first and second hoping to see you but you were still sleeping. So I had to make due with staring at your beautiful, relaxed, sleepy face. Poor, sad, me.

I'm normally an early riser, but I'm sure you're well aware of why I had to be up even earlier than usual today. It's our Jaz's ninth birthday! Despite the fact that I could have had the elves cook up anything we wanted, I had to hand make our sweet girl her birthday breakfast and bring it to her. When she gets older, probably once she's old enough to enter Hogwarts officially, I'm sure she'll want at least some of her birthday breakfasts in the Great Hall with her friends. Just as I did for our kids who have already been through Hogwarts. But for now I get to selfishly keep this ritual all to myself.

She is already looking forward to her day with you, she won't even tell me what activity she's going to force you into. Good luck with that! Most of our children I have a good idea of what they're going to ask for when given full rein over the activities. Seph is always going to want to do something death defying. Siri and Zwei STILL choose dirt-biking most of the time they're given the choice. The Divas will choose shopping hands down. Lainie always chose something musical or dance related. But Jaz is a bit of a wild card.

Anyway, I can't wait to hear all about whatever the two of you plan on doing today. Yes two, as I've already cuddled up Morgana and she's going to be spending the afternoon with me today!

Actually, can you make it a trip with three? I think Ollie could use a day of distraction. Don't worry, I already read the lay of the land with Jaz, subtly bringing up Ollie's lack of classes this afternoon. She immediately brightened and asked if he was going to join in her birthday celebration. I said I wasn't sure and she got that mischief look on her face and signed "I can talk him into it." So don't worry about making her feel badly by not having it be "just" the two of you.

I think he's really having an emotional time with the death of his ex father in law. He seems torn between relief that the man will never hurt him again, sadness at the loss of someone who, while they obviously didn't love Oliver, he did care about for a very long time, and guilt for being relieved at his death. If anyone could use a fun day doing something ridiculous with one of the men he loves and one of the sweetest children on the entire planet, it's our Ollie.

Or actually, now that I think about it, it's likely there will be four of you. Jaz is never very far away from her cousin-shaped shadow is she?

Well I hope the four of you have an absolutely wonderful day while I stay here teaching like a damned chump!
Kidding of course, I really do hope you have a wonderful afternoon together and I'll get to see you all for dinner at the Manor. And I absolutely love my job so teaching certainly isn't a bad way to spend the afternoon.

Speaking of teaching though, I have an idea! I'm going to stop by Minnie's office later on today when I have some more free time between classes, but I should probably run it past you as well.

So, do you remember this fall when we took a huge portion of my students to America for their holiday at the Cullens? And how the rest of my students were quite upset with me that I didn't include all of them? Well, I had a bit of a problem with your last email. You are going to go to PARIS, for a lovely weekend and talking about which children you are going to bring? The weekend after Valentine's Day, you are going to go to the City of Love ... without your loves? It's the cold enough season that Ollie could easily get out of his duties on Wednesday and take an extremely long weekend, but it's not really feasible for me to cancel two or three days of classes to go on a whirlwind vacation.

But!!! If I take my students with us, on a Muggle sightseeing tour, I can kill two birds with one stone! I won't have to cancel lessons, I can guide them through Muggle Paris for hours during the day, and then in the evenings they can all run amock through the hotel's pool while we go out to a romantic dinner! I can bring them back to Hogwarts on Friday just in time to turn back around and spend the rest of the weekend with you. Ollie and I can head back to Hogwarts either Sunday night or early Monday morning in time for classes and for you to get to your meeting.

What do you think? If Minnie goes for it are you in? And she'll totally go for it, I'll just give her the big Gryffindor puppy dog eyes. She can't say no to her favorite student ever!!

Excitedly,
Your Harry

Friday February 9th
My insane little puppy!

Jaz and Vani have insisted that Oliver and I bring them to the Magi-zoo - and since I am a part owner of it (shocking, I know) in addition to Luna, we have permission to get up close and personal with ALL of the animals if we want. Feeding them, petting them, and apparently Jaz and Vani have plans to kiss them all as well.

So, while we're doing that, please oh please my love, go convince Minerva to let us bring HALF of Hogwarts with us to Paris for Valentine's Day!

Yes, that was sarcasm, but yes, I am actually on board with this idea. I always felt we never got out of the castle to actually SEE things as often as we should have. I mean honestly, my father had to take me to places like Borigin and Burkes, otherwise I'd've never known about such an important shop. I always thought they should've opened up a branch in Hogsmeade, but anyway, the point is that I always love to travel with you and our kids, and with as many as we have, what's a few hundred more?

Love you to pieces even if I sometimes have to wonder at your sanity,
Draco
P.S. I know, we are, we are the lucky ones, dear!

P.P.S. Jaz asked me to ride on her shoulder in my marmoset form, and once I agreed, Oliver scrunches up his eyes and seriously focused on trying to finally transform into an Animagus. Impressively, he succeeded! He's... an elephant...
Chapter 223

Chapter Summary

Harry gets to take Oliver for a ride, and Draco can't believe how big he is!

Friday February 9, 2018

Hurry Home!

I just finished with my meeting with Minnie, so hurry home I want to tell you all about it! I mean, honestly you know the answer was yes. As if there was ever any doubt that she would say no to her favorite former student. Or I suppose there was no doubt that she would say no to having a half empty castle for two or three days. Wait a minute, I think she tricked me into thinking she was allowing this and is secretly dancing herself silly in her office as we speak!

Yes, yes, I'm certifiable. I am an absolute lunatic for wanting to take these students to Paris. But you're right, they need to be able to see outside of our tiny little world. World travel is one of the key factors for creating empathetic people who can look at things without their own cultural goggles altering their viewpoint. Too many of these children or their families simply do not have the ability to travel extensively.

Enter Harry!

Another reason I want you to hurry home is that I thought you were going to be home in time for us to head to the Manor for Jaz's birthday dinner. It's getting a little later than we would usually leave for an evening at the Manor. Not that I want you to rush your day, but I know for certain that your mum has been putting the finishing touches (overseeing the elves putting the finishing touches) on Jaz's favorites.

The last reason I want you to head home? I need to see my elephant! An elephant! Our Ollie is an elephant! They are my most very favorite animals! I'm so excited! Do you think he'll let me ride him? I've always wanted to ride an elephant, but the reality is any place that allows you to ride elephants is a place where elephants shouldn't be. Circuses and tourist traps that abuse these magnificent creatures. But if our Oliver is an elephant, then maybe I could convince him to let me ride him and then it wouldn't be abusing a wild animal but using my puppy eyes to talk my fiancé into putting up with my nonsense.

I've been using my puppy dog eyes to get the both of you to put up with my nonsense for a very long time!

Nonsensically yours,
Harry

Saturday February 10th
Sweet Salazar's slaggy mother!

That thing is ENORMOUS! So, I know that you wouldn't have seen it, but when Oliver was in his elephant form last night giving you a nice ride around the south lawn, he got a bit frisky. That part you know because he eventually changed back and tackled you to the ground so that he could have you ride him in an altogether different way (with me eagerly joining in), but before he turned back, he was blatantly turned on.

ENORMOUSLY turned on!

Like it probably could have been seen from a mile away!

I was inexplicably fascinated even as I was fervently PRAYING that he NEVER use that on me! But I kinda wanted to touch it...

But onto more important things. Yesterday at the zoo was strangely wonderful. Not only did we get to go inside all the habitats to pet and handle the animals, but we actually rode Oliver around when he had the space - keep in mind that the girls rode him directly and I was in my marmoset form on Jasmine's shoulder. He got a chance to meet and bond with a couple of actual elephants, which I think was a nearly spiritual experience for him.

As for Jaz, this probably won't surprise you, but all she wanted for her 9th birthday was one simple thing: her own business. So, now she and Vani are the proud owners of a company whose sole purpose is for them to create a children's programme for deaf kids in which our girls teach sign language by their characters going on adventures. Which means I have to help Leah and Pippa hire an entire crew, but once that's done, Leah thinks she'll be more than capable of managing the company with the girls until they either tire of it, or grow up enough to manage it themselves.

But basically, as I understand it, this show will be somewhat similar to a muggle cartoon called Dora the Explorer in that the two girls will be going on 'adventures' that require them to use their BSL skills to navigate and succeed in solving problems. The entire cast is meant to be from the deaf community with a real emphasis on, well, providing a virtual family for viewers.

I'm rather looking forward to watching the programme!

But as for right now, I've just been commanded to: “Put down that laptop, Draco, and come join your mother in this pointless debate. You father seems to think he's right!” So, I've got to go.

You're an obsession, you're my obsession,
Draco
Harry and Oliver are staying out of this debate, and Draco isn't certain who's right.

Saturday February 10, 2018

My Pervert,

Seriously? You were looking at what kind of package our Ollie was sporting in his animagus form? Weirdo. Weird little perv.

I wouldn't think you would want to discuss package sizing like that .... ya marmoset.

Anywho ... I can't believe another one of our children is going into show business. We have raised an army of little weirdos. What else could the nine year old possibly want for her birthday than her own business of course? That's not usually on most nine year olds' birthday wish lists. Toys, books, clothes, a bike, perhaps an adventure somewhere. Their own business? Not so much.

It honestly sounds like a fantastic idea though. She's so brilliant. Her beautiful charismatic self is going to create a show she wishes she'd had growing up, and a show that will help more children like herself. And with my research I've done with Muggles, I would think that young children without the financial safety net we have will be the most affected. Children who have mild hearing loss, are fully without hearing, or anywhere in between but don't have the resources for learning that our Jaz has.

It will be fantastic for children who know and love other children who are hard of hearing. It can be hard enough to obtain services for the child with the hearing impairment, let alone services for siblings or cousins or anyone else who wants to communicate with that child. It's not likely that someone will become fully fluent in BSL just from a telly program, but if it helps even one child have an easier time communicating with their friend or cousin or sibling it would make an enormous difference in that child's life.

And that's all what can and will happen with the children who are directly affected by hearing impairment, I'm certain with how Jaz climbs into the hearts of everyone she knows this show will not just reach people who have a hard of hearing person in their family. This can do so much for the visibility of a part of the community that is often ignored. To have a show that will include sign language and other things specific to the life of someone with an impairment, but that doesn't just center around their abilities. A fun show that is going to be about two kids going on adventures.

Too often when a show or a movie or a story is aimed at a marginalized community, it seems every storyline highlights how hard it is to be in that community. But from talking with Jaz it sounds as though it's ultimately a story of these two girls having a fun time running amok in the wild. The teaching of BSL is secondary to the fun story of the adventures.

She'll be fantastic. I'm a bit terrified that we now have two children in show business. Well three if you count Maha, but she's not exactly a child anymore. But then again she did start out as a child star, she just happens to be an adult now. Hmm, yeah I'd say that we actually have three showbusiness kids. I think we've lucked out though and they're all pretty damn down to earth, amazingly talented young women, who just happen to be massive stars.

And I suppose I have to include Miles as well. He's been in show business for quite a long time. Again, he didn't start out as a child performer so I overlooked that when I was first counting. Hmm, yep, four performing children. I am going to stop there though, even though Ori has performed extensively at his own bar I would still have to say he's not in show business. He's an entrepreneur who just realized he could capitalize on his own lifetime of performing with his insane family. I'd probably say the same thing for Lainie. She has performed with her school, she has put on all sorts of shows throughout the years, she's an insanely talented dancer. But at the heart of it, she's an educator, a teacher who uses her performances to help her students.

So yeah, I am saying for now, final count, four children in entertainment. Ollie and I are sitting here waiting for you to finish debating whatever you're debating with your parents. Our own self preservation has kicked in and we have no interest in walking into a family debate. Merlin forbid I join in and then end up disagreeing with Narcissa, that sounds terrifying.

Unless of course you absolutely need us as backup. If that's the case please feel free to insta-owl us and let us know our presence is required. Until then we are going to have our own debate. Figuring out which is better, topping or bottoming .... with hands on demonstrations!

Love you and miss you already! Come join OUR debate!

Your Men

Saturday February 10th
My sneaky parents!

I should have known that debate was not serious in the slightest when I learned that my mother's position is that being the person to torture others was clearly the better option, while my father was insistent that being the one who gets tortured is much better. I mean I mostly agree with my mother, but had to hesitate because I've been the tortured one and quite enjoyed it. I was doing my best to be reasonable and state both sides in a clear and concise way, when the real reason they wanted me on hand became apparent.

It seems that our boys contacted her and asked her to be certain that at least one of their dads was on hand when they arrived. I found this out in the middle of a well reasoned argument when they both burst out laughing at me - having silently snuck into the room.

"Dad! We REALLY don't need to know that you like being tied up every bit as much as you like to tie dad up!"

I turned and gaped at them. "River! Orion!"

They each held their babies and grinned at me. "Mahafsoun is doing an intensive shoot all next week and won't even be home, so I decided that it was the perfect time to come for a visit, since I know dad is probably dying to get a chance to hold our babies before they grow up completely," River explained, holding Evangeline up so I could see her.

"Although I am a bit surprised that Mr. Lott managed to come pick us up in the family jet without you finding out about it," Orion added.
"He probably reckoned that this was a good reason to keep quiet about it," I murmured with a shrug, kissing my granddaughter before letting my mother hold her so that I could hold Gemini and give zir as many kisses as possible. To Orion's credit, ze seems to be a very happy baby, which means that Orion must be doing things to make zir happy. A careful look at him showed that he LOOKED healthier, which I suppose pointed out how unhealthy he had become (before he left) without me quite realizing it.

Orion noticed me scrutinizing him and smiled. "Yes dad, I'm completely clean. Just got my 30 day badge the other night."

"Congratulations," I praised, giving him a hug and a kiss on the cheek, all while not squishing Gemini. "I suppose that having to care for a baby makes it harder to go to meetings and the like, but I'm so proud of you for trying and succeeding."

Orion grinned. "I'm certain you'll think of this as MORE good news... River and I have opened a new business."

I raised a brow. "Another bar... or a spa?"

They both smirked at me mischievously, and might well have kept their business a secret just to mess with me, except my father asked: "Still enticing people to pay fistfuls of cash to see your naked body?" Which made Orion laugh and shake his head.

"Nope! We opened a bank," Orion replied with a grin.

"A bank?" My father and I questioned in unison.

"Yeah," River confirmed. "It specializes in Mortgages and business investments. Thus the majority of it can be handled by our five full time employees, which is how we were able to come for a week visit. That said, the people who want business loans that might be considered riskier, our employees know to schedule them with us when we get back."

"Wow!" I burst out with a huge grin. "I am so proud of you both! You know how much I love investing in new businesses."

"It's a family hobby," my father agreed with a matching grin. He even patted them on the backs encouragingly. "And one of the most sensible uses of our precious time."

I snorted in amusement. "Playing with money and making money off the playing. No WONDER we're always so brilliant at gambling!"

"Speaking of which," my father began with a catty smirk. "We REALLY should have a game while the boys are here. NO ONE can properly challenge a Malfoy but another Malfoy..."

I raised a brow at that. "Oh...? Getting a bit short on cash?"

He gave me a flat look. "Hardly. Need I remind you that I'VE been starting businesses and earning enormous profits off them far longer than you've been alive. Just because you've managed to start a few that are fantastic at drawing crowds - such as Unity Park - DOESN'T mean that you make more than me."

"Oh?" I challenged with a huge smirk. "Care to make a wager on that? We could spend the next few hours comparing vaults, and if it turns out that mine is bigger than yours, I say you give each of my kids 5000 Galleons - and another 5000 to each of our Unity Houses!"
He paled at the thought of how much money that could be - with us having 20 kids AND 10 Unity Houses - but then he squared his shoulders and swaggered a bit. "You're on! And when I win, YOU get to pay for your mother and I to take a nice long Holiday in Jamaica."

I rubbed my forehead, a little dismayed. "At the Hedonism II resort?"

"Naturally," my mother stated in her elegant voice.

I thought as much. "There's an incentive to NOT go there anytime soon. Alright! You've got yourself a bet!"

Laughing, Orion motioned that he wanted to take Gemini back from me. "Here, hand over my child so that I can make a 'special delivery' to dad."

I turned away and held onto Gemini rather possessively. "Not a chance! I'm not giving this gorgeous baby up until Harry comes out here and demands zir! And besides, I can guarantee you that if you go looking for your dad right now, you're going to find him doing something you fervently DO NOT want to see!"

Both boys looked mildly repulsed and enlightened at the same time. "Ah, so that's why Oliver is missing as well." Then Orion brightened up. "Not a problem! I got this!"

Without explaining his enigmatic statement, he cast a sonorous on his voice and started singing. Happily, this attracted all our kids (minus Elena, who's not currently home), who came running to swamp their brothers in some serious love.

I'd bet my last Galleon that you're also now rushing to pull on a robe to hide your erection so that you can Apparate over here to hug the boys tight and hold onto our grandbabies. See you soon!

You're just too good to be true, can't take my eyes off of you,
Draco
Chapter 225

Chapter Summary

Harry is so happy to see his boys that our boys are babysitting the babies.

2:00 A.M. Sunday February 11, 2018

My Fellow Grandpas,

My baby boys are home! They are here, I can hold them in my arms, they are safe and sound and within my reach. But no, I am not awake because I stayed up all night chatting with and loving on them. I am wide awake because the three of us offered to be on baby duty all night so the exhausted new Dads can get some much needed sleep.

Lucky for us, our three babies are pretty well settled and only seem to get up roughly once per night, sometimes not at all in the case of sweet Morgana. Although it's probably not so much that she is being sweet and more to do with really loving her sleep just like her Daddy Draco. Gabe and Dyl are less likely to sleep the whole night through, whether that's because Dylan can't go very long without wanting to eat, or sometimes Gabriel's brain activity shakes him out of a restful sleep, I'm not completely sure.

And with how late our Draco tends to stay up, and how early Ollie and I tend to wake in the morning, there's not a lot of hours in the middle of the night where we're all sleeping at once anyway. It works out pretty well with all these babies! Because of all those factors; the babies getting older, our own weird sleep schedules, and there being three of us, we are all a lot more rested than River and Ori are I'm sure.

Which is why I didn't even think to ask either of you if you minded Evie and Gemi co-sleeping with us tonight to give their Daddies the night off. I figured you would both agree with me, and even if neither of you had the energy to do a night shift, I could definitely handle one night with them single-handedly! Or as single-handedly as someone with loving and loyal house elves can be. But seeing as I am engaged to the most perfect men in existence, you both agreed with me and couldn't wait for everyone else to head to bed so we could snuggle and smooch on these babies to our hearts' content!

You're probably both assuming, since I'm writing you both an email at two in the morning, that one or both of the little ones woke up, or one of our own munchkins woke up, and that's why I have the time to write. Nope. Everyone is snoozing away. Nothing but blessed silence. The only noise you'd hear right now would be the click clacking of my keyboard, but I cast a silencing spell at them so they wouldn't bother anyone's precious sleep.

No, I am feeling too overwhelmed to sleep. Don't worry, not the bad kind of overwhelmed. My heart is just so full I can barely breathe around it. Do you know what my view is right now? My beautiful sons, Dylan with the thumb of his left hand in his mouth while the fingers of his right hand are tangled in his beautiful curls, and Gabriel who in sleep flushes up about as red as his hair sucking on his bottom lip, the both of them in their matching sleepers from Grandma Molly snug as little bugs in their sidecar cots. The insanely gorgeous Morgana taking up hers and my fair share of the bed, sprawled out like she owns the place, and her pudgy little baby hands holding onto my sleep trousers. Making sure I can't move away from her even while she's sound asleep.

Morgana's other little sweaty fist wrapped around some of your pale locks Draco, making sure one of her other Daddies can't get away. But where would you go? Cradled into your chest, under your chin, Evie is wrapped up like a little baby burrito. She looks so like her Daddy River, my little boy, but with much darker skin and hair covering those pointy little Malfoy features. The polar opposite of her cousin Gemini lying right next to her. Gemini looks almost exactly like their Daddy Orion, but possibly even fairer. Just a few little tilts to the features, a slightly wider mouth and definitely fuller cheeks that they must have gotten from mum instead.

Which means these two precious infants, already two months old in Evie's case and a month and a half for Gemi, couldn't look more like each other in feature if they were identical twins, but in quite a different color palette. Gods we make some beautiful babies who've gone on to make their own beautiful babies. Look what our love did!

And on the other side of Gemini is my Oliver. Gorgeous in sleep. And cuddled up as close to Gemini as Draco is to Evangeline. Merlin Ollie, I can't get over how beautiful you are wrapped around our grandchild. And I know it's logical that we wait a bit longer, we have weddings and trips and end of term responsibilities, but I ache with how badly I want to see you wrapped around OUR child. Sometime soon, on a night like tonight when I can't sleep because I am too full of love, my view will be you and Draco with our child cuddled in between you.

It's thoughts like that keeping me from sleep. What will the child be like? Who will they look like? Will they be all giggles and smiles? Or serious and taking everything in? Will they be demanding from day one? Will they have all of us wrapped around their teeny fingers? Well ... I guess I don't have to wonder about ALL of those questions, some of them are pretty self explanatory!

I really should try to settle down I suppose. It's all well and good to offer up a sleepless night so my baby boys can get some rest, but they'll still be here tomorrow and I want to be able to enjoy visiting with them! Nobody likes an overtired, cranky Harry!

I love you both so much, I hate to close my eyes for even a moment and not get to see your beloved faces. But the sooner I fall asleep, the sooner I will see them again in my dreams.

With every beat of my heart,
Your Harry

Sunday February 11th
Larry and Oliver,

I bon the wet! Torsa... Fee, My sather, he has a vigger Bault - a much MUCH vigger Bault! BUTT!!! I mern ore! So, we talled it a cie. I'mma paying gotsa Lalleons por mis padres to go screw half of Jamaica, but fy mather is paying our hordes only 2500 gal-lal-leons ea - hince se only walf hon.

Night row, sss 'bout seben nor eibt, and mum has poureded wire fiskey in our cups while us poker playing. Dy mad, me, Oiver, Rrion, an Lane-na - I dink Lane-na is kicking our Arses! Ooo! Another cup del whiskey en fuego!

Dome crink wit hus!
Draco the Brilliant!
Chapter 226

Chapter Summary

Harry gets drunk to and upsets Draco to the point that Oliver has to step in.

Sunday February 11, 2018

Drake!
Drakie-Poo!

Yes Darling, I will call you Drake if I damn well please and ya know why? Because my name is not Larry! Larry?!? I think I'm highly offended. I am not a cucumber!

Oooooh, ya know what sounds amaze-balls? Cucumbers! Yeah yeah yeah, I will ask Dibly to get me some cucumbers. They're going to be so delicious. I love veggies. And I love my fiancé. And vegetables. But I mostly love my Draco and my Oliver. Droliver? Oleco? Woodfoy? Malfood? Oh no! I forgot about adding me to the equatable. I know you two love each other, but I like being the filling in your sandwich.

Is that why you called me a Larry? Because I go inside the sandwich? Does that make the two of you the bread? Or maybe the sandwich is made on some sort of roll. Or a bun. Oh! Hahahahahahahaha, yeah buns. I like your buns. You both have such delightful buns. Get it? I like your arses. Like seriously I could worship those arses for days. For weeks! For months. Well, no not months lets not be so silly. Weeks is enough.

Well weeks is enough if I'm worshiping them nonstop the entire time. But a lifetime of worshiping at the altars of my loves' bodies still won't be enough. You are my deities and all I ever want is to be prostrate and bask in you presence.

And shagging. Mmm, buggering. I could use a good buggering. It's been days! Okay it's just been A DAY, but it feels like forever. Why isn't either of your cocks in me right now? Don't get me any of that shit about the fact that we're in public! The Manor's sunroom isn't public. Oh. You mean because there are people in here. Yeah, that's a good point. Everyone in the room is looking at me quite oddly. I think it might be the gigglings!

Why can't I giggle damnit!? I like to laugh. Laughter is the best medicine you know. But I'm not sick. Hmm, shouldn't you not take medicine if you're not sick. Like sicknesses can become immune to medication. So maybe I should never ever laugh unless I have a sickness. I can stop taking pepper-ups when I get sick and just laugh instead. But I think I would miss the laughing when I'm not sick. Maybe then I would try to get sick just so I can laugh and then I would end up even sicker and then the laughs would be immune again because of overuse. I would go to Unity and just ask the little kids to put their gooey little germ-filled petri dish hands all over me.

Eeeeeeeeerew

How did you win all of mine own monies from me when I started playing with you guys? You were all drunken and I was stone cold sober and you little Malfoys still trounced me. Why am I so bad at gambling? I thought maybe getting drinkier would help because you were all winning. No, that made things worse, I kept thinking I was doing well and then I'd think I gin rummy'ed or that time I got Uno! And then you'd all laugh at me and take even more of my money! Were you all cheating?

You and the children don't have to cheat to get my money, I will just give it to you. Not like I need it, I've got myself a hot sugar Daddy. Mmm, he takes me on trips. Oooh I want to go to Jamaica!
But not when mum and dad are there. Seeing Luscious in that gimp suit all those years ago was enough insight into their sex lives. Except the debate you guys had the other day! I love your mum,
I love you, and don't ever tell Narcissa that I disagreed with her. But you are both dummies.

The sub is absolutely the best sexy part to play. Everything is about the sub. The sub gets all the attention of their dom and can just float away on the happy chemicals. All I have to do is exactly what you say and then I get buggered and allowed to suck you and buggered again and teased and touched and stroked and buggered again. I get to kneel and get wrapped up in a warm hug of cozy ropes. Every inch of my skin gets attention from your hands and your flogger and your crop and your cane and the paddle and all the other stuffs. Oooh! Stuff! I get to be stuffed in every hole with anything you want to put in there. Mmmmmm, cocks.

I want to shag now! Oooh, I caught your eyes. I think I will give you the eyebrow waggle. Damn you! I wanted to be dragged away and shagged not just smiled at condissen ... condacen ... kondecen ... like you think I'm so ridiculous that I'm cute.

I'm not cute. I am hungry though. Why isn't Dibly back with my cucumbers already?

Oh, I just asked why he never brought me my cucumbers and apparently he doesn't even remember me asking for them. Is his mind going in his old age? What else could I have meant by calling him into the room and singing to him? Yikes.

Oh! Drake! Our Ollie just came in to join us! He was putting the babies to bed when I joined you guys. Look how pretty he is. Mmmm, I'm gonna go kiss that.

Love
Harry

Sunday February 11th - nearing midnight, which is enough time for the boys to sober up
Harry,

-_-

You are damn lucky that you were drunk when you called me that, otherwise I might have had to flay you alive. As it is, I'm going to simply punish you. Now that you are sober again, I'm going to tie you up and hang you from the ceiling so that you cannot move nor do anything at all while I give Oliver so much pleasure that he falls completely apart. Perhaps twice.

And don't give me any of that whinging about having a class to teach tomorrow. You should've thought of THAT before calling me such foul names -_-

Now just hang there and look pretty!

Wait...

The dictation device takes over automatically.
"Sorry Draco, but YOU deserve to be punished too. Getting drunk and acting like an absolute idiot, sheesh! No way in hell I'm going to let you use me to punish Harry when you were babbling at us like a moron. I'm going to tie you up and...

"There! Now you're MINE to command. I think you should start by... sucking me!"

Low moans come from Harry even as soft and eager grunts come from Draco. The noises quickly become too garbled for the dictation device to detangle, ending with a triumphant roar from Oliver, at which point, the device sends the email.
Chapter 227

Chapter Summary

Harry regrets how late his drinking kept him up - Oliver is rather smug in the background - and Draco receives a small shock or two.

Monday February 12, 2018

Why? Why am I so stupid? I am too old to get drunk and then stay up all night long. Too.Damn.Old. What made me think this was a good idea? Narcissa? It was Narcissa wasn't it? That woman seems to delight in getting me to absolute ridiculous states of drunken foolery.

I wasn't even drunk when we finally went to bed last night, I was mostly sober before you tied me up and by the time Ollie untied me, I was most definitely sober. And bloody randy as all get out. Which means since he took pity on me and let me have a turn riding him, I got to bed even later than that. Add the fact that I had to be up even earlier than I normally would on a Monday morning since I was getting to class from the Manor instead of from our rooms within Hogwarts, and there is at least one very overtired professor teaching today.

So how am I hungover? I even took a hangover potion which did nothing to alleviate my symptoms. I have a killer headache, a wonky stomach, and I am pregnancy mood swing levels of cranky right now. Don't worry, I already checked, nothing in the oven.

I don't even know how it could have possibly happened anyway. We no longer keep any fertility potions anywhere near potions I might take and the damsel curse was definitely cast on Ollie, not me. But with our luck I had to check anyway! So, you can be quite assured that there is no extra human growing in me!

Also I've cast a covert charm on Ollie just to double check. We were mildly careful but not perfect when we had our lady-date. Rest assured there is also a baby free zone in Oliver.

Anyway, I got off track. I was just writing to let you both know that I know I promised I'd be heading over to the Manor the moment my last class let out for the day so I could spend all of River and Ori's time here with them that I could. Slight change of plans, they are going to come here to have dinner in the Great Hall. I guess they want to show off their beautiful babies to Orion's former classmates. Plus I think I heard grumblings from Ori that he wants to watch a bit of quidditch so he's going to see if he can poke at the competitive natures of the teams during dinner. Trick them into throwing together a last minute pick-up match.

So, if either of you have already headed back to the Manor, turn your fit arses back around!

Yours,
Harry

Monday February 12th
My Harry,
Oliver, if you're reading, I'm not NOT including you, I just am a bit in shock, so...

Alright, remember that big Quidditch match we had back in November? The first one of the year in which Gryffindor was playing Slytherin... Well... See, there are usually some scouts from all the big teams at all the games, because how else do they find new talent?

It seems that the scouts really liked our boys. Think they make an EXCELLENT beater team. Normally, the scouts like to wait until the student has graduated before offering a position, and even then, it's usually only a reserve position at first, however...

So, it seems that one of the beaters for the Tutshill Tornadoes has recently, erm… died. In a car crash, of all things. And the scout for that team remembered that our boys are among the best beaters she's seen in a long time.

Thus today - while I was actually in the middle of my yoga routine - said scout arrived. She's rather tall and burly for a woman, but apparently still has the ability to appreciate Malfoy magnificence when she see's it. Don't worry, I had Muffy bring me some yoga bottoms so that the conversation could be conducted with a minimal amount of drool.

Anyway, after magicking on the bottoms and getting into warrior pose, the scout (Abigail McNathy, if I heard her correctly) asked if I would be willing to let one or both of our boys try out for their open position, that she'd quite like to fill before their next game in a month.

Harry, I tell you, I was honestly going to tell her to come back and talk to us BOTH and then give us some time to think and talk about it, but it just so happens that Siri was coming to ask me more things to impress girls with and overheard the conversation.

You can probably guess how that went, but in case you cannot, let me just say that it involved a LOT of squealing, jumping up and down in glee, and hands on begging me - including the promise of his soul if I agreed. Well, I figured that even if you WERE there, such a reaction usually has both of us melting into a very agreeable puddle. Besides, you have to know - considering that your weaselette Ginny is married to the man - that Viktor Krum was already an international Quidditch Star before he turned 17, and so, being underage is not exactly a deterrent.

Sigh...

That said, I WAS concerned about how Zwei might react. After all, this woman only had one position to fill, and thus, if BOTH of them were hired, one of them would be stuck as the reserve player (who, by the way, they didn't have a reserve player to begin with as they aren't as famous as Puddlemere United or even the deplorable Canons). I wasn't sure that Zwei would WANT to be the reserve simply because he's younger. And keep in mind that the two of them work best TOGETHER, so it's possible that neither of them would work well with the current beater, and if they don't, this could utterly crush them.

So, I held up a firm hand and told Siri that he had to wait until YOU gave the okay, as he had my support from the first moment he gasped in giddy excitement. I'm dead certain you know all of this already as he practically Apparated to you the moment I said that. He probably begged you in his super high speed excitement until you agreed without even understanding what you agreed to.

What you might NOT know is that I know for a fact that Zwei actually DOESN'T want to be a professional Quidditch player. The reason I know this is that I called Zwei to me (via a flying memo that excused him from the class he was in) the moment Siri ran off. I calmly explained the situation to him - and the scout was still on hand to assure him that I was telling the truth - and asked him if he was interested.
In stark contrast to Siri, Zwei suddenly looked withdrawn, almost to the point of depression. Naturally I was concerned about this, thinking he already assumed that if there was only one position to split between two brothers, the older one would likely take precedence.

As it turns out, once I was able to pry his concerns out of him, I was wrong. Zwei doesn't want to play Quidditch professionally because it seems he's been keeping a secret from all of us - even Siri. I was a bit hurt that he felt he had to keep anything a secret and asked him why.

So, it seems that our naturally quiet little Draco Junior is SHY - which, I suppose, we already knew. And being shy, he doesn't really want to be in the spotlight. So rather than follow in the footsteps of practically everyone in our family by doing something utterly extroverted, he has been doing something somewhat introverted.

He's been making (completely from scratch, impressively enough) music videos. He writes the music, records it with the MANY instruments he has access to, writes the lyrics to go with it (often the other way around), and then sings the song. Over top all of that, he dresses up in costumes that completely hide his identity and records a video to go with the song.

It's a LOT of work, and completely explains why his grades aren't as good as they could be, he's simply too busy to study like he should be. (It also explains why he goes to his dorm and hides in his bottomless trunk every chance he gets.)

So, when I asked him what was the point of all of these videos - I mean if he wants to be an introvert and is doing this solely for his own self fulfillment, then WHY go to all that effort for nothing? Well, apparently it's not for nothing. He posts the videos on the Muggle Website called YouTube.

He showed me a couple of the videos and while I immediately recognized his gorgeous voice, I could see what he meant by his costumes completely hiding his identity. One was a bear costume, and another was something like the Phantom of the Opera.

Did you know that popular YouTubers make money off their videos? Apparently Zwei has been making a rather decent income off these videos for about 6 months now. It's gotten to the point that he's even received official offers to open for legitimate pop groups. Rest assured that he's actually declined those offers by honestly telling them that he's too young to agree without parental consent, and that for the moment, he doesn't want to even ask for it.

So there's another big chunk to think about.

I have to admit, I've only had as long as it's taken to write this email to think about it, but I personally feel that if he wants to accept an opening act, he could ONLY do it if it was on weekends. As in he's here in school during the week, and then has Pippa (or an assistant I hire for just him) Apparate or Portkey him to his job for the weekend, and then bring him right back after his Sunday night performance.

That said, if he's serious about not bringing attention to himself, he might actually decline all on his own. I guess we'll see.

I'm signing off and heading off to my job at the Ministry so that I can think about something that DOESN'T make my head hurt!

Something takes a part of me,
Draco
P.S. If Siri remembers that he wanted to chat about girls with me, tell him he's more than welcome to pop into the Minister's office for a bit.
Monday February 12, 2018

My Love,

I hope this doesn't offend you, but I am beyond thrilled that you did not get the Minister position. I truly believe you would have been an amazing Minister, but I am having a hard enough time missing you every evening due to your current position. I think I'd have pulled a full Harry-Tantrum if you were gone as much as I hear 'Mione is.

Yeah, based on the discussions I've had with Ron, Blaise, and Kisa over the last few weeks they are missing her something awful. I was whining a bit when you were in Russia and I got a "at least when he's home you can see him Mate!" barked at me. Ron did apologize right away, he didn't mean to snap and they're so proud of her obviously, but they've seen her even less than when she was Headmistress. And knowing how much time Hermione was spending at THAT job, I can't imagine how bad she's being right now.

Sorry, got a bit away from my point there. I didn't mean to start out ragging on you or ragging on Hermione. Just to point out there have been so many things I've wanted to discuss with you in person, that Ollie and I would both have preferred talking about in person, but haven't been able to because of your position. I was just remarking on how much harder this could be if you were gone even MORE often than you already are. And just like Hermione's loves said, it's not that we aren't so very proud of you, not that we don't think you're doing amazing things, and definitely not that we want you to quit or feel guilty, just that we miss you.

Talking to you about these new surprises that were just sprung on us would be a lot easier face to face. But needs must I suppose.

First of all, Gods be damned Uncle Viktor! A perfect example of someone who was able to be an accomplished athlete prior to finishing school, is a well rounded individual, and someone we very much like as a person. He's quite a terrible influence! I blame him for Siri being so into quidditch that he wants to play professionally! He never would have gone near a broom if you or I had anything to do with it. Merlin knows we don't love flying ... and quidditch ... and Oliver wouldn't have tried to teach him a single thing ....

Fine! Fine damn it! It's our fault! We (I) put him on a broom before he could even walk! What were we (I) thinking? And now we're marrying a professional quidditch player ourselves! Oooh, I know, we can blame Ollie!

Yeesh, we will not be blaming Ollie. He's perfection personified. He had nothing to do with this. I should be ashamed of myself for even suggesting such a thing. I erm, may have some groveling to do Draco. Put in a good word for me with our love please?
As I'm sure you're aware, since you called it, I of course gave in immediately to Siri's begging to be allowed to try out. Unlike you though, I do have some stipulations.

Side note: why did you essentially not care if this interfered with Siri's schooling but put limits on Zwei's schooling?

Basically, I am not alright with him giving up on his schooling. There's a difference between homeschooling - alternative schooling - graduating early - which we've allowed the other children to do and just simply dropping out. Due to his lack of interest in school, educationally speaking, Siri can not afford to just drop out. If all the Malfoy money dried up tomorrow, if Siri were injured in some way to end his quidditch hopes tomorrow, he needs an education to fall back upon. I am fine with him having a tutor home-school him, I am fine with him going back and forth between practices, games, and classes, but I am not alright with him completely dropping out.

Obviously I have the same stipulations if Zwei were to tour with a musical act. But it sounds like you've pretty much already set those so I'll just cosign on those.

I'm just having such a hard time wrapping my mind around my little teeny tiny mischief making boys being out in the world. Playing professional quidditch? Touring with musicians? They're just tiny little rugrats! Alright I know they're not, I will just always think of them that way. But they truly are very young. Not even turning fourteen and fifteen for quite a few months.

And yes, I am aware we let Shtara star in her first professional performance when she was thirteen. I don't know why it's different. Maybe because we had a beloved family friendployee with her at all times? Maybe because she always performs in the same spot and won't be traveling from venue to venue or game to game.

And yes, that's my second stipulation for either of them. I want to hire an assistant to be with them at all times. No one is taking advantage of my babies! Not on my watch!

Finally, my last stipulation? Well, the last I have thought of so far. I reserve the right to come up with more in the future. Anyway, my last stipulation is that neither of them miss the wedding. I am not getting married without my entire family present. I don't care if the biggest game of the millennia is happening or if Prince himself comes back from the dead to ask Zwei to tour with him, our sons WILL be at our wedding!

Well, hurry up and come home. Home to the Manor, we all came here to celebrate our boys' big successes tonight. Bring Minister 'Mione with you. We're about to do it up Malfoy style!

You hold my heart in your hands,
Harry

Tuesday February 13th
My loves,

First of all, the reason I didn't make a fuss about Siri's schooling is that I assumed that professional Quidditch wouldn't really interfere - since they usually only play a game a month or two and it's on weekends. Even with a few days of intense practice before each game, I really didn't think that would place too much of a burden on his schooling (that he almost never pays attention to anyway).

Whereas with Zwei, IF he decided to go on tour, it would be ON TOUR, potentially playing 4 nights a week and traveling to new locations between acts. THUS, his education would definitely suffer even more than it already does.

But you are right, with as enthusiastic as Siri would be about his professional status, he almost certainly would completely neglect his education and would then need to be harassed by an assistant who doubles as a tutor for any and all classes he misses. I wholeheartedly concur with your stipulations.

With tomorrow being Valentine's day, and today being the day that ALL of your classes are getting ready for their field trip to France with us tonight - the majority of them having received signed permission slips in time - well, the castle has been nearly impossible to deal with today. Hermione gave me the night off since I'll be leaving anyway, and besides, SHE has been informed by Kisa that she WILL be home all day today and tomorrow or heads will roll, so...

Thus, with no job to go to tonight (although I lied and said that I was going and coming back early), I had the time to plan out and enact my plans. Taking advantage of the fact that River and Orion are still 'in town' and that Elena was happy enough to leave her baby with his fathers and extra mum for a few hours... Also, Shtara was giddy to help out too, as she doesn't get a chance to see Hogwarts near as much as the rest of us. So...

So, there came a moment in the Great Hall when you and Oliver were sitting at the head table and watching the students in amusement as they kept ordering chocolates and fluffy cards to be delivered tomorrow to their friends and love interests. Thank MERLIN they had better sense than to hire GOBLINS to do the delivering, ahahahahahahahahahaha!

Anyway, as you were eating your dinner and watching the students in amusement, maybe you wondered why Siri and Zwei weren't at the Gryffindor table, or anywhere in the hall. Perhaps you assumed that Siri was foregoing food to train for his upcoming tryout, and Zwei might be in his bottomless trunk making a new video.

But then... you learned what devious scheme I'd been hatching.

The doors to the Great Hall were already open, so rather than fling them open to shock everyone into silence, I cast a charm to make an extremely bright bolt of lightning streak across the enchanted ceiling. Then, the moment the students fell silent in what was probably the curiosity to see if another bolt would follow, I had River start playing the keyboard and Elena the violin - Eris and Hazel backing her up on the violin - while Orion had an acoustic guitar.

Then my voice rang out:

"Close your eyes, give me your hand, darling, do you feel my heart beating, do you understand, do you feel the same, am I only drea~~~ming, is this burning an eternal flame?" Shtara and Elena led the others through the soft but powerful back up vocals. "I believe it's meant to be, darling, I watch you when you are sleeping, you belong with me, do you feel the same, am I only dreaming, or is this burning an eternal flame? Say my name, sunshine's through the rain, a life so lonely, and then come and ease the pain, I don't want to lose this fee~~ling, OHHHHHHH!..."

Jaz, Zaire, and every child of ours that wasn't playing an instrument (except Viona, who couldn't make it), was dancing their way down the aisle throwing gorgeous rose petals in a rainbow of colors all over the hall. You may still be used to this from back when I had to serenade you all over the world during your book tours, so you grabbed Oliver's hand and dragged him so that the two of you were standing in front of the staff table waiting for me.

This means that the kids naturally reached you while I was still strolling down the aisle. I wonder, did you mentally wonder and fantasize for a moment that I was walking down THE Aisle toward you? I know I did. Apparently, I'm very ready to get this wedding over with and be all three HUSBANDS once and for all.

"Close your eyes, give me your hand, do you feel my heart beating, do you understand, do you feel the same, am I only dreaming, or is this burning an eternal flame?"

I timed it perfectly so that I arrived at the two of you and pulled you both into my arms to hold you tight as the kids singing the back up basically repeated the lyrics until the end of the song. Which was all of us harmonizing: "AHHHHHHHHH! An Eternal Flame!"

Sweet Mother of Merlin, I seriously LOVE making you cry tears of joy in public. I also love kissing you in public. BOTH of you, and yes, Oliver, I saw a few tears escape your eyes. I daresay that YOU are not used to me serenading you in public, especially not in front of most of the teachers who had a hand in educating you during your youth. I could see you glance at Minerva nervously once or twice, but since she looked rather amused by our antics, you may have relaxed a tiny bit.

After that, the students seemed to wonder if over the top singing and dancing would make an impression on those they planned to make their confessions to. Paris should certainly be interesting!

Sun lights up the daytime, moon lights up the night, my eyes light up when you call my name, 'cuz I know you're gonna treat me right, you give me fever... when you kiss me, fever when you hold me tight, Fever!
Draco
P.S. Thank all the Gods in the Universe that Paris is close enough that we were able to make a special bonfire Floo trip with ALL the students (and kids) coming with us to the Manor, and from there, bonfire floo to the prestigious wizarding hotel in Paris (that I own, do you SERIOUSLY think the Malfoy fortune might someday dry up???) that we're all staying in. I wisely sat down to write this email while you and Oliver wrangled all the students into their rooms. Good thing a couple of their parents volunteered to help chaperone, otherwise I can easily predict the outcome several months from now of allowing a horde of horny teenagers loose in the city of love, buwahahahahahaha!
Chapter 229

Chapter Summary

Paris on Valentine's day ^_^

Chapter Notes

Last night, I went to bed so early that it was barely after midnight. I had every hope of sleeping until at least 9 and pretending to be a normal adult for once, but nope. My body decided that 5AM was a perfectly reasonable time to wake up, ugh. So I decided that my insomnia would be your gain by posting again, lol. :-)

Trigger Warning Witness account of a potential abduction

See the end of the chapter for more notes

Wednesday February 14, 2018

Never again!

Wait, hold on, first things first, Happy Valentine's Day my Loves! I am so very happy to have woken up in the arms of my men on this extra romantic day in this extra romantic city. I'm so thankful to have the both of you. I can't believe my luck, or my fate, or Karma, or whatever force is responsible to have found the most perfect men for me, been able to fall in love with them, and by some miracle they love me back.

I keep having this fear that none of this is real, magic isn't real, I don't really have this life, that somehow I'm creative enough to dream this up in my subconscious. Maybe I'm in some hospital somewhere and have been in a coma, perhaps I've just created this perfect fantasy life. And if that's the case, I hope I never awake. My greatest fear is waking up one day and I'm back to being Harry in the cupboard. Never knowing my beloved family.

Well, that's enough of that kind of negativity for the day, I should think! I repeat, I woke up on Valentine's Day in Paris wrapped up in the arms of the loves of my life. Life could not possibly get any better than this!

That being said, this time I mean it, never again am I bringing a ridiculous amount of students on any sort of international field trip! I was up all night last night. I stayed up to Draco levels of bedtime! Sending kids back to bed who thought they just absolutely needed to wander the hallways in the middle of the night. Kids who thought I wouldn't have set monitoring spells to make sure they weren't sneaking into other students' rooms. And two children who thought no one would notice them trying to go for a swim at THREE A.M.

But at least the parents that came to help chaperone were super helpful. Oh, wait, no they were not.
Apparently half of them were jetlagged. Jetlag? Are you kidding me? It's one time zone difference. One. Alright, I'm at the very least being unfair to the parents who didn't tap out due to jetlag. I had enough help that I wasn't scrambling around doing everything myself, but definitely not enough help that I could go to sleep myself.

At some point today, can one or both of you take a picture of me? I am sure I look frazzled, have dark circles under my eyes, and probably have a glassy look on my face due to the sheer exhaustion. I'd like you to pull out said picture any time in the future I try to think up another stunt like this! If I ever do another field trip please remind me to do only one class per trip. It will mean more trips and more work, but it won't include me losing my mind.

Too late to save Current Harry, but Future Harry can still have some hope left!

Anyway, we're about to head out on our morning walking tour. We're coming back to have lunch at that restaurant across the street from the hotel. We should be there around 12:30 if either of you (Ollie) are awake by then and want to join us. I know it's a long shot but I'm very hopeful that you'll BOTH be awake by then so you can join us for the afternoon's festivities. We will be going to the Louvre while we're here, I can't in good conscience bring these children here and NOT introduce them to the greatest museum of all time! But this afternoon we are doing a completely different type of museum, The Musee des Arts Forains. It's all entertainment based. I'm looking forward to it, it's new to me as well.

Come and play with us!

Forever and ever and ever,
Harry

Wednesday February 14th
Happy Valentine's Day to my loves!

Since you and Oliver were being vigilant - along with the parental chaperones - I decided to help out by keeping track of those that tried to sneak off from the main group.

Thus, I happened to follow a group of three girls leading a group of three boys off out a side exit overlooking a nicely tended garden. This made me wonder if the girls just wanted the boys to see the flowers and drop big hints about receiving presents of flowers and chocolate on Valentine's Day. Well, I was wrong!

It seems that what the girls wanted to do was get the boys alone so that they could sing a rather catchy pop/rock version of Kiss the Girl to them. The boys surprisingly took the ENTIRE song to catch the hint, but when the girls were done singing, they grinned at each other and obliged. Thus, I had the not so enjoyable task of breaking them up and insisting that they rejoin the main group.

I returned with them just in time to witness a different girl sneak a boy into the girl's loo. That is really NOT a place I can just stroll into, so I basically had to point it out to one of the mothers so that she could go after them and herd them back to the group.

After that, I spotted a couple using Disillusion Charms to hide themselves in the shadows under a large staircase. Sighing, I asked them if they were at least remembering the protection spells. After some hastily muttered spells, I was assured that they were. I couldn't help but chuckle as I walked away - the motion of the Disillusion Charms letting me know that it was too late to stop them from shagging.
Bold little buggers! I don't think I'd have had the courage to shag up against the wall in public back when I was still in Hogwarts!

Er... Strike that, yes, I probably would have.

In any case, it seems the students got the point that they were going to be caught and herded back to the main group if they tried to sneak off, so for the most part, they stayed put and simply held hands and occasionally kissed as they strolled through the Louvre and enjoyed the art.

But then my sharp eyes spotted two grown men snatch one of the girls that was one of the stragglers. I witnessed them cover her mouth with a rag and make her faint almost instantly. Then they had the audacity to carry her over to a guard and ask for directions to the nearest aid station - presumably implying that she'd fainted on her own and that they were trying to help her. After receiving directions, they followed them just enough to get away from the security guard without arousing suspicion.

Except that I knew exactly what they were up to! I followed them rather silently, able to keep up easily because of my many years jogging with you and also being chased by Amala on occasion. I stayed back until I felt we were out of sight of the muggles, and then cast a couple of wards to contain them and keep muggles away while I dealt with them.

Rest assured, they were very much alive when I left them unconscious on the ground. They'll probably wish they weren't when they wake up, but - after Rennervating the girl - I brought her to a guard and alerted security to what had really happened, and they immediately took the men into custody.

I hear they went back and checked the footage and found that the men actually HAD attempted to kidnap and harm the girl, and so, the two men more than likely will not be out of French prison for a long time.

That said, thankfully, even the most horny of student had settled down by the time I returned to your side with the girl in tow. And so, I had no qualms about slipping my hands into both of yours, kissing you two, and simply walking in between you until everyone was ready to leave the Louvre. Lucky for you, I had somehow gotten a glorious amount of sleep last night and had woken early and ready to go!

So now, we're talking a group loo break before heading off to the next place. I've given up caring that a girl cast a glamour on (presumably) her boyfriend to sneak him into the loo with her. They are more than likely sharing the same stall at this very moment, but as I said, that's on them if they forget to cast the protection spells. Maybe one of the female chaperones in there will notice if the stall starts shaking rhythmically and put a stop to it.

SHEESH! It's like chasing River all over again!

Oh! Looks like we're almost ready to go. Better sign off now.

And I'll be forever (both of) yours, faithfully,

Draco

P.S. Fair warning to you both if you manage to read this before dinner, but I plan on drinking a delicious amount of fine French wine and then getting embarrassingly lovey dovey with you two in public tonight during dinner, heh heh heh...

Chapter End Notes
The version of the song I linked is the one they sang in my head, lol, however, with no actual music, it could be any version you like ^_^
Chapter 230

Chapter Summary

Harry finds something and Oliver wants to rush off and help him, only Draco insists on a second or two of patience.

Thursday February 15, 2018

My Heartkeepers,

Well shite. It's been a while since I've had to write one of these. Erm, whenever either of you get this will you please come down to the British Wizarding Embassy and come get me?

Yesterday, when the both of you were with me and the insane group, Draco you already did your fair share of helping me out. Seriously, hours of being the Booty Patrol? What a nightmare. I can't believe these cheeky little buggers thought they could get away with that much public snogging and shagging. The students aren't your responsibility, you didn't even come on the trip as a parental chaperone, but as always you think nothing of chipping in where you're needed. Even if you hadn't saved Maleah from a kidnapping, your assistance would have been a huge help. Add the kidnapping and you've become SuperDraco! You most definitely earned the right to sleep in today!

And last night, our sweet Oliver. You poor little lamb. Draco and I stretched you to your limits. I'd be willing to bet you hadn't managed to orgasm seven times in one day since you were a teenager. Did we torture you baby? You fell asleep with a smile on your face, and by "fell asleep" I mean "passed out." Draco and I followed you into sleep shortly after that, and likely just before sunrise, wrapping you up in between us. You helped out all day with the students yesterday, and then we thoroughly exhausted you all night. You also certainly earned your lie-in today!

Both of you sleeping in however, left me to run around this morning with a bunch of kids and just the chaperones. The chaperones who kept winking and nudging at me. Giggling about how I must have exhausted you both since I was on my own this morning. The fact that I stopped for a coffee pretty much anywhere they were selling it didn't help the situation. I wanted to tell them all to stop winking and get their minds out of the gutters. But in all honestly, they weren't wrong. So I took the teasing as politely as possible. And secretly I was awfully proud of myself for being able to shag the both of you senseless.

I suppose I should back up to the beginning of the email and change my request a bit. See, I am at the Embassy, but the chaperones hopefully took the kids back to the hotel for lunch and to figure out the afternoon's plans now that I am out of commission. So if you could both come here that would be great, and bring the translation devices so Ollie can understand the French. But first can you check on the group and make sure they're set for the rest of the day? Either see if Minnie can send out an extra professor or two to help out (guilt trip Sebastian if you need to) or have them go somewhere near the hotel so it's not so hard for the chaperones to keep track of them all?

I'm having enough trouble dealing with the Wizards here that I know I'll undoubtedly be here for the rest of the day dealing with the situation. Honestly, good luck dealing with this government next week Draco. I am feeling blocked from every direction. I don't believe I'm directly dealing with anyone you'll have to convince during your spiel, but if this is any indication of how their Ministry runs ... Merlin help you.

So here's what happened since I'm doing my usual rambling for paragraphs before I get to the information you're wanting. I have to wonder at this point if you even read the entirety of my emails or if you just skip ahead to the last paragraph or two to find out what I'm attempting to avoid talking about.

As we were walking around this morning I kept bringing us in weird directions. Getting as close to being lost as one can be with the ability to cast a tracking or map charm. I'd have every intent to walk us to the Eiffel Tower, which was four blocks straight ahead and all of a sudden I'd find out I'd taken a left and walked us in the completely wrong direction. It's a giant tower! We could see it from where we were and somehow I'd manage to make us turn away and go the wrong way.

Same thing was happening every time we looked for a new location. I would get us hopelessly lost, then a parent would take over, get us there, we'd sightsee, and then head to a new location. On the way to that location I'd get us lost again. And by the last location the parents just decided to not even let me lead. But even with that, I would start to wander off on my own. It was the craziest thing. I might be a ridiculous professor who brings my students out of the country for field trips, but I'm not one to wander off and ignore my responsibilities.

I just couldn't shake the feeling that I needed to be somewhere else. You know how I get hunches, and over the years I've learned to trust my gut; it's usually right. My gut knew to marry you years ago Draco, and my gut told me all those months ago that I needed you in my life Ollie. It's a good gut.

On the way back for lunchtime the bossiest parent, Colleen, told me "go find whatever you're looking for, we'll get the kids back, you're useless to us as you are!" I would have been offended but she wasn't wrong. So I set off in the opposite direction of the group and wandered wherever my gut told me to. I'd feel a pull in one direction, have that prickle on the back of my neck feeling like someone was watching me, and then it would all fade away.

This happened about three times before I noticed a set of big blue eyes staring at me from behind a set of bins. I tried to act as though I didn't know anyone was there, but when the little urchin started giggling I couldn't stop myself from smiling at her. The sweetest little face, deep blue eyes, a button nose, and pale blonde hair more of a honey gold than the Malfoy platinum. I sat down in some random filthy alley and chatted away with the little thing like I was taking high tea with the queen.

Before I knew it an entire hour had passed. And not once had I felt a single tug in a different direction. I almost felt the opposite and couldn't quite remember needing to go elsewhere. When I remembered my fiancés and my students I told little Nora I had to go, but asked if I could bring her to her parents.

And that's why I'm here at the embassy. Little Nora, the dirty little street urchin, was parentless. Without there being a Unity France I didn't know what to do. I can't bring a child out of the country, I don't know of any orphanages near Paris, and the child is most definitely magical. I know because once I recognized I was a bit confused I put up my occlumency shields and wouldn't you know it, I stopped feeling tugged towards that alley she'd been in. I could feel gentle prodding at my shields.

Come help me figure out the bureaucracy of finding a home for magical orphans in a country with no Unity house?

Love,
So, this 'morning' when I woke up - huh... It actually was still morning, about 10 AM - anyway, I naturally checked my email first thing. Oliver was sitting at the table in our hotel room, drinking tea and looking dreamy from last night. I gave him a loving smile as I read your email, and just so you know, I'm patient enough with your rambling that I didn't skip to the end, but read it all the way through.

When I got to the end, I said: "Oh dear," out loud, which caught Oliver's attention. He asked me what was wrong and I told him to read his email from you. As he did, I Insta-owled our lawyers.

Remember - Oh... Back about the time we opened the third Unity House, I had out lawyers streamline the process by having all the necessary paperwork prefilled out - with all applicable background checks and the like already attached. Remember that? Well, I Insta-owled our Lawyers and told them to prepare a brand new copy of that paperwork all ready to be processed in an expedited manner.

Then I told them to send it to Hermione so that she could attach a paper asking for it to be processed in a rush with her official seal on it. At that point, it was sent to me. Astonishingly enough, I received the fully prepared paperwork (via house elf) right about the time Oliver finished reading your email and leapt to his feet.

"We have to go help him!!!" Oliver shouted in a panic.

"Hold your horses, we'll get there," I murmured, slipping out of bed and eating a pastie as I got dressed in a posh outfit that will hopefully make up for the fact that I have to rely on an array of glamour spells to cover the fact that I had to skip my morning routine.

With my paperwork in hand, I actually dropped Oliver off (a bit like a little kid) at the Embassy (with a couple of pairs of translation devices) so that he could comfort and support you while I went to the French Ministry. Using all of my Malfoy superiority, I strode into their department of Children and Families, theatrically set the paperwork on the counter, and informed them that I would like it signed off on in the next 10 minutes.

Well, that didn't go over the best until the employee took the time to read the request for expedition from the British Minister for Magic. At that point, she got very quiet, politely asked me to wait a few minutes, and took it to her superiors, who (presumably) didn't have a good enough reason to deny the British Minister - in the interest of international cooperation. Thus, in exactly 11 minutes and 35 seconds, I had the signed and approved paperwork in hand declaring me (us) officially the owner/operator of a French Branch of Unity House.

Don't Panic! I don't intend to add starting and running a new branch to my plate of things to do. All I needed that paperwork for was to give us the Authority to take charge of this child and have her transferred to the original Unity House when you return home. That'll give you time to have her helped by Tabitha and her crew until something official (like adoption) happens for her.

But I didn't leave the French Ministry just yet. I took a quick detour through their Auror Department. Once there, I explained that you found an apparently orphan child on the streets, and that as an official representative of the newly founded Unity House (France), I was going to accept custody of the child until they can either track down her parents (if she has them after all), or verify that she is an orphan who needs placement in a permanent home.

Interestingly enough, it was not my newly approved paperwork they wanted to see, but rather my official credentials through our Ministry, listing me as not only Chief of Raids (I sorta kinda miss those raids actually), but also the Chief Adviser to the British Minister for Magic. Once they wrapped their heads around the fact that I was actually GENUINELY reporting this incident via official channels and not just trying to steal a child from their country, they were oh so helpful, promising to contact the Embassy to help deal with them, not to mention starting the case and vowing to try to get it solved as soon as possible.

Thus, I had a pair of French Aurors with me as I arrived at the Embassy. My first glimpse of you (Harry) was you leaning against the wall, looking rather teary eyed as you looked down on something wonderful. The something wonderful happened to be our Oliver, who was sitting cross-legged on the floor, little Nora on his lap as he read her a story (in English, but she didn't seem to care). She had her tiny head resting on his chest, and he was using his hand that wasn't holding the book to stroke her gorgeous golden hair.

I pointed the two of you out to the Aurors before leading them over to you. Before anything else, I grabbed your hand and pulled you into me so that I could kiss you, and then I leaned over and kissed Oliver, murmuring something like: "You looks so gorgeous with a child in your lap," into his ear.

The Aurors took your statement and asked questions for their case, and promised to see if they could find a match for her in their missing child database within an hour. In the meantime, we were free to take her back to the hotel with us, and they even spoke on our behalf to the Embassy, thus assuring THEM that we weren't trying to kidnap a small child.

So... now all we have to do is wait until they can identify her... or not. In which case, you'll be able to take her back to England the moment the transfer papers are signed by the person in charge of Unity France and Unity England - which, correct me if I'm wrong, but we have both of those people in bed right here as I type this email. You and Oliver are playing with little Nora, and I am documenting it via email because I think THREE men fussing over her at the same time might be a bit overwhelming.

All in all, I can think of worse ways to introduce myself to the French Ministry. I'm now quite looking forward to my official meeting on Monday, hahaha!

In my life, I'll need you here, don't ask why, I'll never disappear,
Draco
Chapter 231

Chapter Summary

Harry is freaking out, Oliver is telling a story, and Draco already knows how this is all going to end.

Friday February 16, 2018

With a beautifully aching heart,

I just got back from dropping the students off at Hogwarts. I left you both here with the babies and Nora. It might have made sense to bring Nora to Unity while I'm already heading in that direction with everyone else, but I didn't want to overwhelm her. Especially since we'd have to stop at Hogwarts first to drop off about a million students, it's kind of an overwhelming place for a three year old who essentially doesn't know magic exists.

Plus, before we left we hadn't gotten the official answer from the French Ministry that she had been identified and therefore ready to leave the country. She tells me she has no parents, but she's three and may not know where she belongs. I'm sure she knows whether or not she has parents, but she might not know if she has a legal guardian frantically looking for her somewhere. Perhaps she had a loving auntie or uncle looking for her.

The paperwork that was sitting here waiting for me when I got back to the room tells a different story. Her name is Nora Marseille. She is indeed three years old. She was orphaned at a year and a half old when her parents died, and no living relatives to take her in. She's been residing in a Muggle orphanage ever since then. She went missing from the orphanage on Tuesday of this week. Yeah, Tuesday. So this sweet little angel had been on the streets alone, just wandering Paris for two whole days! She's only three years old!

It reminds me so much of Atreyu before he came home to us. He was living in the wild! Well, the wilds of suburban southern California, but still! He was all on his own, just searching for his family, searching for us. Sleeping in our playhouse to be near us.

And now little Nora with the sunshine hair, three years old and living in the alleyways of a bustling city. Thankfully we found her after only two days, but who knows how long she would have survived on her own. She's just a baby!

Well, with the students all back at Hogwarts, the paperwork giving us the go-ahead to take Nora to the UK, and the both of you being awake we could be packing up to head back home before coming back for our romantic weekend together. Instead, I am locked in the bathroom crying my eyes out. When you guys saw me slam myself in here and lock the door, you both very sweetly asked me what was wrong and tried to comfort me. I couldn't even reply. That's when I started typing.

Thank you Draco for hearing the clacking of the keys and realizing I was processing this in my own way. I heard you sigh deeply and tell Ollie "Come on Love, we'll leave him be to write out his feelings. We will just keep playing with the kids until my email chimes or our Harry comes out."
So here's what happened ... what's happening. See, I popped back to the hotel after dropping off the little lunatics. I walked into our suite, skimmed over the paperwork lying on the table, and made my way into the bedroom to talk with the both of you about the plans for the day. That's when I saw this beautiful sight. My two absolutely breathtakingly gorgeous men. Comfy and cozy, sitting cross-legged on the floor in your pajama (Ollie) and yoga (Draco) pants. The babies climbing around while Draco sings silly songs, Gabe crawling in and out of Ollie's lap, Morgana using Draco's shoulders to stand and bounce along to the music, and Dylan toddling around Nora who's giggling and clapping along to the singing.

When I walked in, all six of your faces looked at me. Lighting up, smiling at me like I just made your whole day by coming back. I gave quick hard kisses to you both, and dropped kisses on all four pudgy cheeks, then ran into the bathroom.

My heart just about exploded. It aches, but it's a good ache. A tight feeling in my chest where I can feel my heart expanding.

Tell me what to do please?

Confusedly,
Harry

P.S. If you both agree I can't ask of you what I want to ask of you please tell me immediately. Just say "No Harry" so I can try and clear it out of my mind. We'll never speak of it again.

Friday February 16th
Our Harry,

Harry, do you know what Oliver is doing as we wait for you to stop hyperventilating in the bathroom and come out here? He's talking to Nora. She can't quite understand him because she doesn't yet speak English, but she's listening intently as if he was dropping the words of God into her ears.

He's saying: "Once upon a time, there was a man who wanted a baby more than anything, except no matter how hard he tried, he couldn't have one. So, instead, he decided that he could love little kids that needed him. He adopted two little ones and raised them with all of his heart."

"At some point, he THOUGHT that he had his hands so full with them that he didn't need anymore. But then he met two men with a LOT of kids that told him that he can keep trying to have that baby, that his desire wasn't ridiculous, and that raising kids was one of the most noble acts they could think of.

"So I suddenly find that I can't help it, when presented with a lost and helpless little girl, I just want to hold her and protect her and never let her go."

He looked up at me with watery eyes, and I could have told you back at the beginning of his story that he was actually talking to me. I took his hand in mine and kissed it.

"If you think you're going to have to convince me that something in particular is the right thing to do, then you are sorely mistaken. I knew from the moment Harry's magic was drawn to the girl how this was going to turn out. One step at a time though. Let's get her officially transferred to Unity Britain, and then signed off as fostering with us. Once we have that in hand, Harry can probably have the adoption process finished before you can say Hippogriff," I informed Oliver.
He looked at me with so much hope in his eyes that I nearly had to comfort him.

"Are you CERTAIN about this? I'm not even married to you two yet and you're already offering to adopt a girl simply because I've grown insanely attached to her in less than 24 hours."

I chuckled. "Ask Harry how long it took us to know Shtara was ours. Or Atreyu. I swear that Harry has developed a sense that does nothing but locate and fall in love with the kids that are meant to be ours. When he said that his magic was being tugged at by this little girl, I knew that she was one of ours and I hadn't even met her yet. Why do you think I had Hermione expedite the paperwork? Any other kid and I probably would have let things take their own time - since I was going to be here in Paris anyway. And had Harry not felt instantly connected to her, he would have had the mental clarity to bring her to the Aurors and let them make sure she was identified and returned to where she belongs."

For once, Oliver stopped MY rambling, by pressing a finger to my lips. "So, what you're saying is that you mean it. I can love this little girl and both of you are going to support me in raising her?"

"Support you? HA! You're probably going to have to fight Harry for the title of favorite daddy. Be warned, the girls all seem to LOVE me an inordinate amount until they're older and realize that I'm a bit old fashioned and emotionally stunted when it comes to issues concerning pre-teens and teenagers."

Oliver chuckled, his eyes drifting to where Morgana was laying across my lap and using my fingers as chew toys. "Yes, I've noticed."

Before either of us could say anything else, Nora gave Oliver a hug and murmured: "Mon pere, Nora a faim."

"Eh? Qu'est-ce que tu voudrais manger, ma petite?" I asked because Oliver only has translation earbuds, not some sort of device to translate speaking (as I haven't ever been able to invent such a thing, despite trying).

"Pain au chocolat," Nora informed me.

"Hmm..." I hummed in thought, feeling that she should probably eat something a bit more substantial than that. "Et des oeufs?"

She nodded in agreement.

"Oui. Muffy! Please bring us some chocolate bread and cheesy scrambled eggs."

"Right away, master," Muffy replied, not bothering to enter the room to do so.

I decided to stop my email now so that you can hopefully read it right away and come out here so that we can hug you and give you a million reassuring kisses.

I did it all for the nookie,
Draco
Chapter 232

Chapter Summary

Harry overdoes it, Oliver snuggles Nora, and Draco buys an insane amount of chocolate and flowers.

Friday February 16, 2018

My Loves,

I suppose you're probably extra confused as to my whereabouts right now. I have a full-blown panic attack meltdown ending up locking myself in the bathroom, you send me a message in response basically saying that not only were you expecting an adoption to be the outcome, but that Oliver is about as unwilling to let her go as I seemed to be. And as soon as I receive and then read it you probably heard me apparate away without saying a word to any of you.

Don't you worry, I'll be back before you know it. Honestly, if my apparition hadn't make the cracking sound I'm going to be back so soon that you may not have even noticed me leaving and just assumed I needed a little extra time calming myself. In my haste to get everything done that needed doing I forgot about the noise until it was already too late.

So first of all, Oh My Gods!!! We're getting a daughter! She found me, and dragged me home, and made her baby brothers and sister fall in love with her, and made two of her Daddies fall for her as well, and she's going to be OURS! I can't believe this happens to us. Somehow she just knew her family had come to find her. I am beyond ecstatic.

So ecstatic that I may have gone a bit too far in panicking the other direction. See, I read your email and thought about all the things we had to do to get her legally declared ours. There's paperwork both for the fostering and the adoption request. There are things to plan for, like taking time off to bond with our new child. We need to make sure we have plenty of clothes and other necessities for her.

The first place I popped off to was Unity House. Tabitha tried being all chatty and sweet and delightful per usual. "Sorry Tabitha, no time to chat. I have way too much to do and I need to be back in Paris ten minutes ago!"

"Now see here Harry Malfoy! Since when do you not have time for a chat and a cuppa with me?" Tabitha asked me with quite the affronted look on her face.

"Since I need to get back to Paris and officially meet my new daughter Tabs! As we speak, Draco and Oliver are plying her with chocolates and singing songs and using up all of her cuddles!" I didn't try to shout at her, but I don't think I tried all that hard to NOT shout at her.

"You're getting a new daughter Harry? Congratulations! But what are you doing here then, you should be bonding with your Kid. You're probably the only person who knows that better than I do!" She didn't try very hard to not shout at ME either!

That's when I explained the whole problem with the brand new nonexistent Unity France, getting notified of her identity, having to transfer paperwork internationally, etcetera etcetera etcetera. "And that's why I came here, can you sign off that she's been 'received' at Unity England? And then sign off that we can foster her until official adoption paperwork is filed? I have all of our personal paperwork, background checks and the like."

Tabitha gave me quite the look with that comment. "Yeah, like I need that information from you!"

I blushed and stuttered a bit, "I wasn't sure since it's different paperwork from our other adoptions. It's in triplicate now and you've not seen Ollie's background checks since he adopted Parker over seventeen years ago."

After giving me an honestly impressive eye roll, she signed everything. Giving me a kiss on the cheek for luck and extracting a promise that I'd bring Nora by for a movie night very soon.

I then apparated out of there, went to the Lawyer Armada, gave them the paperwork from Unity and asked them to start the official adoption request. I asked them to please make it as quick as possible which probably would have earned me a second eye roll of the day if they weren't so very good at their emotionless masks. "Of course Mr. Malfoy, we know how much you and the other Mr Malfoy appreciate expedition in these cases."

That's when I had to remind them that it will be slightly different this time as they would need to get all three of us on the adoption forms. Oddly enough I think they appreciated the challenge. Little something different for the firm, a Malfoy adoption different from all the others!

Once that was taken care of I took the liberty to pop over to Hogwarts as well. I know I know, I was already there today dropping off the students and no one was expecting me back until Sunday night since I'd planned on spending the weekend in Paris, but I had to talk with Minnie. I pretty much sprinted from the gates to her office. I did end up having a (very very small) cuppa with Minnie. What? I was exhausted from the running and you just don't say no when Headmistress McGonagall tells you you're having a spot of tea!

I explained to her, probably in rambling overly excited squealing, how Hogwarts was getting a brand new occupant. I explained to her that I would try my absolute hardest to fulfill all of my duties, but that I may need to reschedule a class here or there to sign off on paperwork or care for Nora, possibly even use up one or two of my PTO days. That's when she gave me that look that has me feeling exactly eleven years old and told me in no uncertain terms that both Oliver and I WILL be taking two weeks paid Paternity leave, just as any other professor would get if they were welcoming a new baby into their family.

"Harry, I recognize that Hogwarts is yours, as well as Oliver and Draco's, home. You are more than welcome to bring your newest family member here at any time. But I will not hear of any of the new parents working when you should be bonding. Take the two weeks, enjoy your new daughter, and bring her up to have biscuits with Nana Minnie as soon as she's settled in."

Biscuits! My new daughter was sitting in Paris having some sub-par chocolate bread when she could be having homemade biscuits made by me? Unacceptable! So I gave Minnie a quick hug and darted back to Hogwarts gates to quickly pop over to the Manor to find some sort of sweet to bring back with me.

Alright, so you're in Paris. Pretty much the pastry capital of the world. I am aware that it's unlikely you were giving her sub-par anything. But still, baking is my thing I want to give her sweets from me!

I knew I had some assorted biscuits in stasis and figured I could grab them and pop right over to the hotel, but once I landed at the Manor, I realized I'd magically exhausted myself a bit. In an emergency I could have apparated and just been drained, but as I didn't absolutely need to accomplish it that moment, I decided to recharge a bit. So, I made my way to the kitchens to rest and bake a fresh batch since I now had a bit of time to kill.

Now, I am just sitting here, waiting for the last tray to come out of the oven. As soon as the timer goes off I am packaging them all up and coming back. I'll see you soon my loves. Kiss our daughter (s and sons) for me!

Love,
Harry

Monday February 19th
Mes tendres coeurs,

For the first time in a long time, when I woke up - a bit early for me, but not too bad, about 10 am - you were BOTH still sleeping. Both! And it wasn't because I'd hexed you to sleep either!

I think what happened was that Harry did his usual too wound up to properly sleep thing all weekend, and Oliver couldn't help but do it a bit too, and so, now that the initial awe and worry has passed, the two of you passed out around 2 am last night and are actually sleeping in for once.

Or were. That was this morning and I am currently about to recap my entire day.

After waking and enjoying being the first to wake - for once - I watched you both sleep for about 20 minutes or so. Perhaps part of the reason I woke up before you was that I didn't have any of the babies weighing me down and keeping me asleep. You made for a heart bursting sight!

Harry, you were on your back with Nora using your left arm as a pillow. Oliver, you were on your side, facing Harry. You had an arm over Nora's little body, even as Gabriel was using your bottom leg as a pillow and Dylan was somehow draped over your back without falling off or waking himself up. As for Morgana, she must have decided that she was hungry during the night, because she was laying directly on Harry's chest, and her mouth was so close to your right nipple that I'm dead certain she must have nursed for a bit before falling back to sleep.

I feel like I could have happily watched this scene for days!

Alas, I needed to eventually get up and get ready for my day. Oh sure, I still had at least two hours before I needed to get up, but my bladder soon made it clear why I was awake so early. So, I slipped out of bed and went to the bathroom so that I could do my business, and then take a quick shower. The moment I was clean, I cast drying spells on the majority of my body and used a towel to dry my hair.

Thus, I walked back out into the bedroom portion of the suite we're staying in to find Harry awake and staring at Oliver and Nora with a happy smile. Harry, your right hand was stroking Morgana's gorgeous black hair, and this must have woken her up just enough to realize that she was hungry, because she was nursing again.

I very quietly murmured for Muffy to bring us a full breakfast, and sat at the table to drink a cup of my favorite tea. As I drank, I noticed a couple of notes on the table. It seems that Zaire and Callista had gone on a breakfast tour of the city - and were almost certainly stuffed full by that point. Meanwhile, Leah had taken Jaz and Vani and their camera crew out to film some footage for an episode of that show Jaz is making.

As I understand it, Sirius and his boys had stayed home - as had Pippa, Leah, and the girls - from Wednesday until today because he hadn't wanted to be fussed about the whole fieldtrip aspect of this visit, but now that the students are definitely back in school and his women are here working, he plans to arrive later today with his boys. (Actually, since I am recapping, he probably arrived a while ago.)

Harry and Oliver, you are both taking advantage of your generous paternity leave by staying here in Paris with me. Which means that you two are happily taking care of all the kids while I'm here at the French Ministry working. Just keep in mind that I promised Persephone and Lily that I'd take them skating tomorrow (since I almost certainly will have to wait a few days before receiving any sort of response from the Ministry), and that Caelum and Atreyu have gruffly consented to come along.

I find it funny that the only one of them that actually wants to figure skate is Lily, but that since the four of them always do everything together, they have ALL learned the basics. Last I saw, they were actually surprisingly good too.

Just goes to show how talented our kids are at everything they put their minds to.

As for me, I'm currently waiting for my meeting to resume. It had started around 2 because the French never fail to have a nice long and leisurely lunch, which simply means that I had time to do my entire morning routine, including a full yoga routine and a little light sparring with the Feisty Foursome, before I had to head off for my meeting.

The meeting itself was surprisingly fun. We all had glasses of wine in hand, and I presented the full outline to them as Pippa magicked up her brilliant power point to go with it. I didn't have any of the kids with me today as the ones that were with us were either busy with their own thing, or back in the hotel suite with you bonding with Nora. Thus I was able to flirt my way through the meeting as if I were born in France.

As I said, it was rather fun. After the presentation, the French Minister asked me to give them some time to discuss the matter, and so now, I am waiting in what I can only guess is some sort of official state guest waiting room. It's cozy, well decorated, full of comfortable furniture, and I've been provided with a lovely tea (not just the actual beverage but also a tray of tiny sandwiches and petit fours to go with it) and a nice bottle of Chateau D'or - which Pippa is helping me drink since it is rather excellent. She's also in love with the lemon poppyseed petit fours. I joked about her being pregnant ravenous, and then cast a pregnancy test spell on her.

She's not and doesn't appreciate the fact that I thought she was. She's basically vowed that she's never having any more kids because she's far too busy to properly spend time with the one she has. It seems she's extremely grateful to Sirius that he's such a good, hands on father. Had he not been, she said she might have seriously considered giving Pierre over to her family to raise, or adopting him to us so that she'd basically have a hand in raising him anyway, but in exactly the same way she helps us raise ALL our kids.

It's a rather sobering thought - that there are some people who are less suited to parenthood than we are. I mean from my perspective, it's just... well it just is. We do it - a LOT - and we apparently do it well. We have so many kids that I honestly can't imagine what it's like to only have two or three. If we only ever had one, I think I would have driven that one MAD with being SO hands on and overly involved that he or she would be an adult now and wondering how to pry me off them so they can go to work each day, hahahahahaha!
Upon reflection, this might be why our kids and I have managed to survive all those teenaged years. By the time one kid has reached the teen years, I have a new one or three to focus on so that I don't go neurotic on the teens, and in the meantime, you definitely take over as the main parent, Harry (and Oliver, I think you actually seem to excel at the little stage, probably because you had littles and know what to do), and - Oh wow!

I just realized that I'm doing the rambling thing!

Lucky for me that I'm being called back in; hold on a mo!

So, it seems that I was right, they are interested enough that they'd like a few days to think it over before meeting with me again. In the meantime, they're giving me a lovely - and ENORMOUS - fruit, cheese, bread, and wine gift basket. I suppose it's meant to help me enjoy the best their city has to offer while I wait.

Oh, Pippa just looked through the basket and has discovered that there are tickets to a play, vouchers for dinner at a prestigious restaurant, and an invitation to a wine tasting event. Salazar! The French REALLY know how to treat their guests! I can't wait!

Pippa is giving me a LOOK that tells me she'd quite like to return to the hotel now, so I should wrap this up, so - oh...

Hold on a moment...

So, apparently the French Minister heard that I filed the paperwork to start a French branch of Unity House, and has very excitedly asked me my plans for how and when I plan to actually do this. When I confessed that I only did it so that we could rescue and adopt Nora, she looked so disappointed that I blurted out reassurances that I would put together a team to get Unity France up and running. Elated, she asked only that I use a currently derelict property in the French equivalent of Diagon Alley as the actual House.

It seems that despite the muggles in France having a decently good orphanage system, about 10 percent of the muggleborn children who eventually attend Beauxbatons are raised in the system and she's always been passionate about having a wizarding version that can help teach these children about the Wizarding World right from the very start - except that the French Ministry has been reluctant to fund such a place as they feel that it would probably be a very expensive operation and that the overall amount of children living there would be too small to justify the expense.

Basically, the usual.

That said, with someone like me (us) funding the start up, she has promised to allocate a reasonable amount to operating expenses, thus, the place won't be quite as desperate for funding as other places tend to become every so often before a big fundraiser. Hopefully.

And now I really am going to sign off and head off to buy some flowers so that I can hopefully soften the blow that I AM going to add starting up a Unity House to my plate - at least partially. I'm serious about assembling a good team to do it for me, but that initial part will certainly be quite a bit to handle until it's done.

Forgive me?

I get so weak in the knees I can hardly speak, I lose all control and something takes over me, Draco
Chapter 233

Chapter Summary

Harry and Oliver don't need to forgive Draco, and Draco thinks it's time to go out and blow off some steam.

Chapter Notes

Warning: Potential Trigger warning - underage prostitution

See the end of the chapter for more notes

Tuesday February 20, 2018

My Draco,

I most definitely do not forgive you! Why in Merlin's name would I forgive you? I mean honestly, how could I possibly forgive you for doing something like promising to help make a safe, loving, caring home for children who need it? Obviously there is nothing to forgive you for, you ridiculous man of mine.

Look, of course I will miss you since you will be very busy. And even without setting it up yourself, I do realize hiring and vetting a staff of people to essentially do a job we've only ever entrusted to our own selves will be very time consuming. But you're not setting the whole thing up yourself, much of the processes can be done during the day while Ollie and I are teaching anyway, and once you have a team you trust, you won't be needed for as much of the opening process.

Also, WHEN the French Ministry agrees to this upcoming event, you probably would have been needed to come to France (and go to Russia) a few times before the big day anyway. This probably won't add much more time than I was expecting when the whole tournament discussion came up in the first place. I think that's probably why I was so upset and impossible to cheer up when you first were leaving for Russia, I knew the time commitment was going to be much more intensive than you were assuming.

Well, the three of us have split up in a bit of zone defense with the kids today. I am sitting here at Siri's tryouts, Draco you took Lily, Seph, and a last-minute Nora ice skating, and Ollie apparently has all of the other littles under his tender care. I suppose that doesn't include Zaire being out doing more food exploration and Jaz out shooting a few more spots for her show. But still, I am sitting in a set of stands watching one of our children kick arse at quidditch, you have three of the easier children you're mostly going to be watching skate, and Oliver has all three babies as well as the most hyperactive two of the feisty foursome.

It was pretty sweet this morning, I could see Nora watching you get Lissa and Seph ready for ice skating. I could see the gears working, but she didn't say anything. Eventually you started giving kisses and cuddles to all the kids that were staying behind. It wasn't until you got to Nora that she realized she was not coming with. She looked up at you with those big misty eyes, "Mon pere, emmèneras-tu Nora avec toi? Nora veut patiner avec mes soeurs." I saw that coming a mile away, and I knew you weren't going to tell your little girl she couldn't come with to skate with her sisters! Off all four of you went!

After you left but before I took off myself, I asked Ollie if he was going to be alright with all five kids without either of us there. I offered to take one or two with me to the tryouts. He laughed at me! "Babe, if I can't handle five children by myself for a few hours, then I am marrying into the wrong family! Go, support Siri, give him your undivided attention. I can't wait to hear all about every maneuver he makes!"

Ha! Of course the actual quidditch play is what our Oliver is focusing on. He's so stinkin' cute!

In case you're wondering why I'm writing an email instead of watching Siri, he has already finished his tryouts. He did amazing, best beater I've ever seen obviously. And now he's in the showers. I'm just waiting for him to finish getting ready, we're going to stop at Fortescue's for ice cream, and then we'll be flooing back after that. It's funny, Siri is at that age where he's obviously old enough to be trying out for professional quidditch teams, and so you'd think he wouldn't want to stop for ice cream afterwards like a little kid. Yeah, his response was "Dad, that's so embarrassing! I think I'll have mint chocolate frog!"

Oh, actually I'm going to stop off at the Manor after ice cream and dropping Siri at Hogwarts before I head back to Paris. I promised Nora I would bring our big family picture book. Since she's not gotten a chance to meet her biggest siblings, I wanted her to at least see pictures of them and have us tell her about them. She'll get to meet them on Friday, but this way she'll already know their faces and a bit about them before then.

Oh, yeah, Friday. In case you were wondering, I've already planned it and I've already RSVP'd for you. And uh, for an event Saturday night as well. So, obviously Nora needs to meet her entire family. Most importantly, she needs to meet her siblings. Friday we're going to leave Paris, go pick up Siri and Zwei from Hogwarts, and then all of the older children will be meeting us at the manor for dinner. The plan is a fairly early meal, game time, and then ending in a big old snuggle puddle with the whole family watching a movie.

And before you ask, yes I already contacted all of our out of country children! All of our children, including Miles and Colm, including ALL of the spouses, and all of our grandchildren will be in attendance!

We'll then spend the day together on Saturday, probably playing around on the Manor grounds, maybe going for a hike, perhaps some pick-up quidditch. Anyway, just spend the day together as a family before the entire rest of our circle descends upon us for a Circle dinner to introduce Nora.

Oh! Siri's ready! I scream, you scream, we all scream for ice cream!!

Love,
Harry

Wednesday February 21st,
Les battements de mon Coeur,

Harry, I know you knew - or perhaps trusted - that I wasn't doing anything wrong, but Oliver, I feel I have to open with: no matter what it might have looked like, I wasn't doing anything wrong, I promise. I hope your heart and mind are in an open place by the time I get back to explaining what
But first, I wanted to say something before I forget. Harry, when you said that you spent an hour talking with Nora, and then I found out that she's only three, I erroneously presumed that you meant that you were having a sort of baby babble conversation. Or more like a childish toddler conversation. But no, you literally meant that you were talking to her for an hour.

I'm rather impressed with how well she talks. I can't quite decide if the orphanage that basically raised her was that good at teaching her to talk, or if they were just that strict about her NOT talking like a baby. For my peace of mind, I'm going to assume they were that good. Also, maybe it's because she almost certainly has at least a touch of magic, but she really does seem smarter than most children her age.

I know, I know! ALL of our children have seemed pretty advanced for their ages, but I really do think that's because they've almost all had such powerful magic. As if having magic somehow makes the brain work better or something. OR maybe WE are just so good at speaking baby speak by now that we don't even notice it's not fluent adult language at this point, despite being French.

No, I'm going to go with she's just brilliant.

For example, she heard Atreyu call me papá in his adorable accent, and then immediately called me papa as well, only in her accent (which is also adorable), it sounds, erm... French... That sounded better in my head, but you know what I mean. The accents are ever so slightly different despite being literally the same word.

It doesn't matter how they say it, the word never fails to make my heart melt into a puddle of sugary goo.

So, after a full day yesterday and a reasonably full day today as well, the three of us decided that we needed some adult time. So, we left the littles with the not so littles and our entourage, plus our house elves and theirs. Or in other words, we left them WELL looked after.

Then the three of us went out to a local - and apparently rather famous - gay club called the Labo. It's actually wrong to call it gay, which implies men only, since it's LBGTQ. Anyway, I suggested it because it's got just about everything, drinking, dancing, even karaoke. Also, I haven't heard back from the French Ministry yet, so I needed to blow off some steam and forget about them for a while.

And forget them I did!

I'll skip over the general group foreplay on the dance floor to begin with as you were both there and were part of the very handsy group. I'd had a cocktail to begin with, but once the alcohol loosened me up, I didn't feel the need to get drunk. That said, I had been so eager to get to the club that I forgot to go to the loo. So, barely an hour in and I was already gesturing that I needed to go to the loo.

The both of you had the foresight to go beforehand, and so, didn't feel the need to come with me. I had to stand in a bit of a line (in case you were wondering what took so long). After about five minutes of the line moving at a decent enough pace, a twink emerged from the loo that caught my eye, and only part of it was that he had his hair died my favorite shade of metallic blue. The rest of it was that he was bloody gorgeous.

What?! I have eyes!
Anyway, rather than return to the dance floor, he leaned up against the wall, basically eyeing the line and giving flirty eyes to anyone who looked at him twice. About two minutes later, it was finally my turn to enter the loo, only to find that the urinals were still packed and I had about another minute to wait. Just as I was stepping up to the urinal, I noticed the gorgeous twink (via an interestingly placed mirror) enter the loo with a man who immediately pulled him into an open stall. Apparently there are enough stalls that they aren't all in use as much as the urinals are.

In any case, I could guess what he was doing. Shrugging, I did my business, and then was so-called: "Fussy! Geez mate, get on with it!" by a fellow Brit who was clearly impatient as I washed my hands. I swear I did not take more than my usual minute or two to ensure that my hands were clean and my appearance was perfect, but it was enough time for the gorgeous twink to reemerge from the stall and head back out to the hall while his partner looked a bit high and dazed, hastily and belatedly remembering to fasten up his trousers. Sexy tight black leather trousers, mmm...

As I was saying, I finished up my reparations and returned to the dance floor, unable to hold back a flirty smirk as I passed the twink.

Once on the dance floor, I made some lucky bloke's day by dancing with him. I could see the two of you dancing with each other, and was a little surprised that you were both consenting to groping and grinding from others. That turned me on SO BLOODY MUCH!!!

MERLIN!!! It's been far too long since the last time I got to truly fulfill my sharing and voyeurism kinks! Strangely enough, you'd think that any threesome between us would fulfill them, but I suppose that at those times, I feel that you are both MINE to the point that I'm not actually sharing you with anyone, and the voyeurism thing also tends to take a back seat to me actually participating.

My dance partner initiated some hot and heavy kissing, but when the song ended, I bowed out to go get another drink. It was a berry cocktail of somesort, which I downed in one go because I was parched. When I turned to resume my dancing, I nearly tripped over the gorgeous twink.

"Bonsoir, bel homme," he murmured in my ear. "Danse avec moi?"

I looked him up and down before deciding to put my hand in his and let him practically drag me onto the floor. He wasted NO time in grinding up against me and stealing kisses. He was getting me very ready to pounce on you two and abduct you back to our suite. However, something about him was nagging at the back of my mind. So much so that I found myself trying to slip in his mind without even meaning to.

HE WAS SHIELDED!

That said, some people just naturally do it. Even muggles. I can't for certain say whether he was a wizard doing it on purpose, or a muggle who just happened to have a strong shield without realizing it. I was... intrigued...

Also, I was more certain than ever that something wasn't quite right about him.

This is the part - Oliver - where if you were actually watching me, you probably felt I was up to no good. In fact, I will not be at all surprised to find myself locked out of our suite when I return to it in a few minutes, until after one or both of you read this email, discuss it, and then let me back in.

I'm currently at a street food cart eating... something... I'm not certain I want to know what, but I needed to get some food in me and decided to write this while I was at it.
So, getting back to the recap, there I was, on the dance floor being groped by and snogging the bloody fuck out of this gorgeous little twink. Things were getting a bit too hot, so I was going to pull back and demand a little air, but he prevented me by dragging me off toward the loo. Yes, I will admit that it probably looked suspicious as fuck that I'd just come back from the loo not 20 minutes prior, and I was already headed there again with a very eager partner.

I did NOT do anything in the loo! Well, not anything more than what you saw on the dance floor. In fact, we never even made it into the loo. We were standing in that long arse line, once more snogging and grinding together. The more we did so, the more I felt uneasy.

Sure enough, he pulled back to whisper in my ear: "20 euros pour -" he motioned a hand toward his mouth. I shook my head. He pouted and kissed me again. His hands wandered, and he probably found a minor emergency in my well tailored trousers.

"Non," I stated firmly, then whispered a question in his ear. This will sound bad, so brace yourselves. I asked him to take me back to his place. I swear to you, he lit up like Christmas had just come not even two months after the last time.

Then his face fell a bit. " Je ne... ne..." Then he squared his shoulders. "Chouette. Viens."

Alright, from here on out, I'm going to assume that Oliver IS reading, and that he doesn't want to translate everything we said, and so, I'll just write it all in English.

Looking all around as if afraid he might be caught, he literally SNUCK me out of a back door. Then he held my hand and snuggled into me and chuckled merrily. "I never bring blokes back to my place. That's not to say that I've never shagged - and I can do both, although I suspect that you are a hard top. It's just that I normally earn more than enough by just giving head. It takes a rare and fairly gorgeous man to make me even consider shagging. Just a warning, if you want the entire night, it'll cost you a pretty penny!"

I looked him in his deep blues (I actually couldn't tell the color at that moment, but they are VIBRANT!), and then rolled my eyes. I pulled the money clip that held my share of the muggle money I'd obtained specifically to spend in France.

"You mean more than this?"

His eyes bulged nearly out of his head. "ARE YOU PLANNING TO SPEND THE ENTIRE WEEK WITH ME?!?!?!?"

"Nope!" I assured him.

"DAMN..." he swore reverently as he counted the cash now in his hands. Then he gulped apprehensively. "You want to do some nasty perverted shit, don't you?"

"Not at all, I don't even plan to touch you."

He stopped short and glared at me. Then he shoved me through a nearby door into a small but surprisingly clean flat. Angry, he took a good long look at me.

"You don't LOOK like a cop - and I have a very good sense of who's a cop."

I shook my head and held up my hand. "Not a cop."

Softening, he looked me over again, his expression turning to pure lust. "Well then..." Rather than say anything to me, he threw his arms around my neck and kissed me again.
I pulled back, placed a drop of potion on my tongue, and then kissed him again so that he had to share the drop with me. Then I gently pushed him just a bit away.

"Do you live here alone?"

"Yep! Wait..." He was now frowning in concern.

"What about your parents?"

"My dad's a dealer and my mum's a junkie - WHY DID I TELL YOU THAT?!"

I chuckled. "Because I gave you a drop of Veritaserum. Unfortunately, I shared the drop with you, so I ALSO have to tell the truth."

"What's Veritaserum?"

"A potion that forces you to tell the truth. How old are you?"

"Fi - ggh!" He was pressing a fist to his mouth and pointing at me accusingly.

"HOW old are you?" I pressed with an expectant look.

"Fifteen! GOD DAMNIT!"

I harrumphed. "I honestly would have believed you had you told me 18, especially since twinks go out of their way to LOOK younger than they really are, and you look, oh... between 16 and 17."

"I turn 16 in June..." He now looked miserable and vulnerable.

"Listen, I really don't plan to touch you, and even if you tell me to fuck off, I'll let you keep that money in the HOPES that you invest it in your future, but I think I can make a MUCH better offer than that," I informed him.

He perked up at that. "Oh? Does that mean that you want me as your exclusive paramour? I could go for that, you're so bloody gorgeous I nearly offered to give it to you for free!" He slapped his hand over his mouth in dismay at that bit of honesty.

"So a gorgeous but heartless bastard could take advantage of you?" I asked in concern.

He shook his head. "No! I never make less than 200 euros a night just giving head, so it's RARE for me to even consider shagging for money, but there's just something about you. I feel like a moth while you are the warmest yet coolest flame ever - and I'd REALLY like to stop telling the truth now, please!"

"Thank you," I accepted graciously. "But getting back to you, I want you to come home with me."

He grinned at that and pushed me onto his bed (it's a SMALL flat after all) so that he could straddle me and give me more kisses. I held my hand up to stop him.

"What the problem? We can always go to your place when we're done here," he pointed out.

"I said I wasn't going to touch you," I reminded him. He pouted so prettily.

"But why not?! You're the first person in ages that I've WANTED to shag me!"

"That's because you have excellent taste, but I'm serious, I'm married and engaged, and my men wouldn't approve of me shagging a fifteen year old, but if I'm honest, I wouldn't like me shagging someone young enough to be one of my MANY kids. That's actually what I was getting at. I want you to come home with me IF your parents really are as horrible as you say. I can officially foster you. In exchange for YOU promising to go to school and learn anything at all you like, I promise to pay for it. And give you a home to live in until you're old enough to live on your own for real."

He was narrowing his eyes at me. "You think I am some poor street rat that can't do better for himself than turn tricks! Did it ever occur to you that I LIKE what I do? My parents are crap - sure - but they were never abusive to me and gave me pretty much everything I asked for. My dad deals a fuckton of drugs, and my mum's pretty much always too high to notice much of anything, really. I didn't run away from them because they treated me badly or anything, I ran away because..."

He trailed off, suddenly looking sullen. "Well, because I realized I was gay, and when my dad noticed me doing things like dying my hair and painting my nails, he actually DID try to beat me. I'm not even sure why, since I have never seen him discriminate against gay men before, but for some reason, ME being gay seemed to make him lose his mind! So I left and I never looked back."

I frowned in concern. "And how do you manage to live here all on your own?"

"I already told you, I make a lot of money, and because I am gay, I really like blowing men and making them feel good. They always look so dreamy and happy when I'm done with them." He smirked at me flirtily. His hands were unbuttoning my shirt. "DAMN! So fit!"

I sighed and gave him a quelling look. "Stop that. I'm trying to get you to think about your future. What will you do in - say - 10 years when you no longer have your perfect twink looks going for you, and the men that liked that about you no longer want you? What will you do then?"

He gave me a light glare, and then rolled his eyes. "I'm smart enough to save my money. I live in this cheap arse flat and keep my bills to a minimum. IF the day comes that I can no longer make a nice income off my looks and skills, THEN I'll go to stupid fucking college and get a boring as fuck office job somewhere, probably as a secretary for a Horny married woman who wants to think she could have me."

I laughed. "Fine, smart-arse. But what if you could do ANYTHING. What if money was not a problem. What would you do then?"

He bit his lip in thought. "Well... The only other thing I love is..." he looked away and itched his lower left eyelid. "Drumming. I don't get to do it much because these walls are like paper. But I have drumsticks and I like to quietly tap them on everything I can."

I laughed and shook my head. "That's ironically perfect! My oldest daughter runs a performing arts school."

He squinted at me suspiciously. "Wait... You're still trying to get me to give up what I'm doing and be a responsible adult somehow."

I shrugged. "Listen, you still so very young. Even if you really do love this - and I'll admit that you probably do since you're under the influence of Veritaserum - but even so, things change as you get older. My oldest daughter wanted to run our orphanage very passionately until she decided to open a performing arts school instead. My second oldest son ran his own bar until he got caught up in drugs, had a baby, and decided to go into banking instead. My oldest son had his own spa until he decided to be a house husband and co own that bank with his brother. My second oldest daughter -"
"How many bloody kids do you have?!?!?"

I roared with laughter. "20. 1!!! 21!!! Sorry, we just adopted another. Still not quite used to saying 21 yet."

"What the bloody fuck?!?!?" He asked, his eyes now wide and staring at me like I'd just lost my entire mind.

Still chuckling a bit, I pressed on. "Listen, the point is that I can help you. I know it sounds a bit scary, but if you'll just allow me to get the paperwork going to declare you, erm... a troubled teen in need of a safe place to stay, I can 'enroll' you in my orphanage and officially foster you, and as I said, all you need to do is go to school. My daughter's school, in which you can drum as much and as loudly as you want. And meet kids who love to play the guitar and the piano - among other instruments - and who knows? Start a band. Get famous. Earn LOADS more money than you do now."

He sat glaring at me. He was still straddling me and his hands were resting on my bare chest. Abruptly, he picked his hands up off me and crossed his arms over his chest. "God fucking damn it! WHY do I have to find the ONE fucking bloke in all of creation that DOESN'T want to shag me into the bed?!?! You know what? I'm done with this, if you're really not going to touch me, then please get the fuck out of my flat!"

"Alright," I agreed with a disappointed sigh. "But you're going to have to get off me, unless you want me to toss you on your arse."

"Yes please! Oh wait, you mean on the floor or something," he sighed in frustration. Then he leaned over and got so close to my lips that he could have licked them. "Are you sure you don't want ANYTHING? A blow job? Frotting??? I could rim you..."

"I'd be lying if I said I was completely uninterested, as evidenced by the persistent and impertinent arsehole in my trousers, but NO. I am not going to shag a minor. Ever."

He got a shrewd look in his eyes. "Then why haven't you pushed me off you yet? Maybe you just want to SAY no when you really MEAN yes."

I rolled my eyes. "I wanted you to listen to me, and I could tell that you felt in control so long as you were on top of me. Notice I haven't touched you at all, I asked you to stop trying to undress me, and have repeatedly told you that I will not shag you. I think I've been fairly clear and consistent, except now you've told me to leave but won't get off me so that I can do so. I think maybe YOU'RE the one saying no to my offer when you REALLY mean yes."

He growled at that, reluctantly and slowly shifted off to the side, and watched me sit up. I focused all my attention on my buttons so that he wouldn't feel threatened. "My name is Draco Malfoy and I'm staying in Paris for a few more days at the least. Here're my details if you change your mind."

He took advantage of the fact that I looked up a bit to fasten my last button - at my neck - by pulling on my neck with his hand so that I had to look him in the eye.

"What's wrong with me that you don't want me?" He asked, looking so very vulnerable.

Still afflicted by Veritaserum, I had no choice but to answer him honestly. "You look like... half of my kids, in one way or another. I can't in ANY sort of conscious shag a minor who looks like he belongs to the Malfoy family - or ANY minor honestly. I think at this point in my life, my absolute minimum age would be about 25 or 30. And even more than that, I get shudders of horror thinking about ANY man or woman over the age of 25 shagging a FIFTEEN year old!"

"Why are you so hung up on age?" He grumbled petulantly, once more crossing his arms over his chest.

I sighed in frustration, and then chuckled. "Elena, River, Parker, Cassie, Viona, Eris, Orion, Hazel, Shtara, Siri, Zwei, Zaire, Jaz, Persephone, Lily, Caelum, Atreyu, Gabriel, Dylan, Morgana - OH! And Nora."

"Who're they?" He asked curiously.

"My kids. I TOLD you I have 21 of them. And that's not even counting my honorary kids that I didn't officially adopt. They range in age from 26 on down to 10 months old. So tell me, WHICH kids should I forget and NOT see when I look at you?"

"You know what? I think you're pulling my leg! I don't know how you're making me tell the truth like this, but I call bullshite! No way in bloody hell do you have THAT many kids! You don't even look 40!"

I narrowed my eyes at him a moment, tempted to be offended, but since he happens to be right - more or less - I let that slide. "Believe whatever you want."

He gave me a shrewd look. "I tell you what, IF you're telling the truth, I'll consider going to that school you're talking about. BUT if I'm right and you're lying, you talk those men of yours into letting me have you for an hour or so."

I laughed and laughed and laughed. "Alright, I can make that bet!" I held out my hand for him to shake on it, which he did, looking a bit smug, like he'd just gotten one over on me. "What's your name, KID?"

"Jules," he informed me with a shy smile, looking rather love-struck, disconcertingly enough. I found it funny how he rolled his name a bit so that it didn't sound like Jewel, but rather Zhewl, with a long, soft, and nearly sensual Zh sound. Ugh! Sorry! I'm doing that thing I did with Mahafsoun where I focused on the, erm… wrong bits of her personality.

Seriously, Oliver - and you too Harry, as I know you HATE reading emails in which I describe these things - I'm NOT trying to sound like I'm interested in HIM in that way. My interest from almost the first moment was that he looked like a kid (which I was right about) and that he seemed to be doing things that he shouldn't be at his age (which I was right about too). The fact that he seems to have innate Occlumency shields just sweetened the pot for me.

If you manage to read this email all the way to the end before I finish my meal (and Jules is eating quite a bit as well), hopefully you'll let me into our suite and let me talk to you about this. I know you're both probably the most pissed about me doing this without consulting either of you AT ALL, but there wasn't time. Well… I suppose there was time, but it didn't FEEL like there was time.

And now I'm a bit tired and starting to ramble, unless this whole email has been one long ramble, in which case, I'm sorry, I meant to be coherent. I'm going to sign off now, finish eating, and make sure that Jules doesn't renege on his bet.

Too erm... foggy to come up with an appropriate song lyric,
Draco
P.S. Oliver, in case you didn't know it, Veritaserum does have a bit of a... not a high like a drug, but the same sort of after effects of a drug when you're coming off the high, and that's why I'm fuzzy and rambling. That and I'm terrified that you're still convinced that I followed a boy home and shagged him dirty rotten rather than try to convince him to clean up his life.

P.P.S. If you're STILL not convinced, I'll take MORE Veritaserum!

Chapter End Notes

WARNING! Drama and Angst ahead.
Basically, Chrissie and I thought it was time for another heavy arc.
Thursday February 22, 2018 – sometime after midnight

Draco,

Of course you are not going to be locked out of our rooms if you attempt to come back. You and I have taken vows, Oliver plans on taking those same vows. We are a united team, locking you away from us will accomplish nothing. All us fighting or being angry will accomplish is pushing each other away.

That's not to say we haven't each put up emotional walls. Oliver has spent the last hour since we received your email, the hour before it arrived as well if you want to get technical, sobbing. We're trying to keep our emotions as low as possible, we've cast a silencing bubble around the kids so they can't hear us. But it's really hard.

I ... we ... believe that you didn't go to the loo to do anything. We also believe you when you say you didn't do anything when you got to his home. There will be no need for veritaserum. I know, and I'm sure Oliver knows as well, that you wouldn't lie to us. That's not your style. What is your style however is pushing the limits. Your style is attempting to talk your way around things, dance around loopholes, stick to the exact letter of promises made. We fell in love with a Slytherin, we knew what we were getting into.

Feel free to take that statement however you'd like. You know I'm not saying Slytherins are evil or we should have expected you'd break our hearts. But I am saying that while you may have stuck to behavior that isn't explicitly something we've asked you not to do, it doesn't change the fact that you have hurt us both.

Would you like to know what your fiancé is saying between sobs? When he's coherent over the moaning, hiccuping, and frantic breathing at least. "I'm not enough. We're not enough."

It makes me wonder honestly. I know that you and I used to play all the time prior to falling in love with Oliver. I get that the sharing and the voyeurism is your kink, but are we kidding ourselves acting like it's something you can live without? Because it's starting to feel as though it's not something you can live without. We have more sex than any other couple I know. You and I have been going at it like rabbits for years, you get to shag Oliver and I multiple times a day. You've always said your voyeurism is about watching our pleasure, if that's actually the case then why isn't watching the two of us enough?

We find out you have a bit of a craving for fanny and we start shooting curses at each other to fill your needs. You have access to female bodies, you have complete unrestricted access to our bodies, but somehow you still need more.

Sure, technically you didn't do anything we've not explicitly stated was alright. Kissing and groping in a party atmosphere and going home to shag with us. Those were the limitations yeah? Then tell me why you didn't come home with us? Why you didn't shoot us an insta-owl. Why you didn't catch my eye and poke at my occlumency shields so I knew you were safe and doing something to help out a young person in trouble?

Look, everything you explained once you left I totally get. You're fantastic at talking around someone's excuses, it sounds like you quite possibly saved this boy. I'm quite proud of you for doing your best to help him realize his life needs something different. I swear to you, your fear that we are mad because you offered to help an essentially orphaned youth without discussing it with us first, absolutely not the case. I know your enormous heart wants to help every sad stray puppy you find.

But the rest of your actions tell me a slightly different story. You didn't notice some kid who looked too young to be hooking up in loos. You didn't see someone who needed saving. You saw someone who was "bloody gorgeous." Would you like to know how many times in your email you called him a "gorgeous twink"? Four. It would have been more but after four you switched to talking about his "perfect twink looks." You may have eventually felt uneasy and then tricked him into the veritaserum, but that can't be completely true. Either you immediately thought he was underage and then proceeded to snog and grope him, OR you were initially attracted until you realized he was too young.

It just can't be both Draco.

Yes, Oliver and I spent the evening dancing and grinding in a pile of sweaty bodies. But we were together, and until you started spending most of the evening in the loo, we were focused on putting on a bit of a show for you. But you were focused on snogging and grinding on strangers. Again, we've talked about it and it's something we've agreed to, but I have to admit the allowance of that for me was getting you all hot and bothered to come play with ME. It just seems like you wanted last night as a way to blow off steam, to destress from a long week, and we were not your chosen stress relief.

We're just the blokes in love with you who get to listen to yet another apology.

Another apology for taking things too far.

Another apology for an overly descriptive gagging for someone else email.

Another apology for not coming home with us.

Another apology

Another apology

Why aren't we enough? What will be enough? When will we be enough?

-Harry
Thursday February 22nd
MERLIN DAMNIT!

Before I start rage typing, let me get the tidbits out of the way. What took me so long after emailing you was that Jules - being French - insisted on taking nearly an hour to eat his food. During which time, I decided to fill out that paperwork to list him as an official occupant of Unity France. I know, you're probably wondering how I had the paperwork on me, but basically, when my lawyers sent the packet necessary to file and start up a new branch, the actual forms the Orphanage uses for various things were in with the packet - so that the French Officials could look them over and verify that they work here too.

Thus, I had them in my carry all case. Once the correct form was filled out (I started with the wrong one before I remembered the troubled teen form), I sipped on a cup of tea as Jules finished up his meal. At that point, I had to remember how to WALK to our hotel since I hadn't once NOT Apparated there.

As it turns out, I could have just Apparated anyway, since the moment I let us into the hotel suite, Jules blurted out: "MON DIEU! C'EST HARRY POTTER!!"

I gave him a sharp look. "You mean to say you're a wizard?!"

He shook his head. "Non. Ma Mere, eu..." He flapped his hand palm down and palm up several times to indicate that she is sort of a witch. Then he mumbled something about her being so weak magically that she's practically a squib - hence her drug problem. Meanwhile, Jules himself has never exhibited any magic - to the point where his mother never even told his muggle father that it could be possible.

Apparently, his mother's sister used to babysit him when he was younger, and she told him all about the great Harry Potter. But then she died and he had nearly convinced himself that the world of magic was just a fairy tale his aunt made up to entertain him.

I could tell by the rather grim look on your faces that neither of you were particularly welcoming to this kid who was delaying our, er... conversation... So, I turned to him and said: "Here, take our family photo album into the spare bedroom and look through it. Feel free to get some sleep as it is too late at night for me to officially win our bet. Let me show you where it is..."

I took a few minutes to escort him to the spare room, make sure he knew where the loo was, and then actually use the loo myself, which gave me a few minutes to read your email. The first thing I felt as I read was the need to apologize. Then I felt a little bit offended. Suddenly, I felt bloody angrier than hell!

"HOW DARE YOU?!" I shouted as I marched out to the sitting area of the suite, where you were both waiting.

This predictably lit a fire in Harry's eyes. "How dare we what?!"

"HOW DARE YOU THINK THAT I FEEL LIKE THE TWO OF YOU ARE NOT ENOUGH!!!" I had my magi-tablet in hand and was pointing to my email, NOT that you could actually read it from where you were across the room. "NOWHERE in this email did I say I actually WANTED anyone else!!! I said I was attracted to others! I said I have eyes and can appreciate someone gorgeous when I see him. I ALSO said that he had gotten me to the point that I wanted to GO HOME WITH YOU TWO!!! The only reason I didn't was because the longer I was around him, the MORE I realized that something was wrong!"
I ran a hand through my hair and paced to a different corner of the room. "I can understand why you'd be upset when you thought I MIGHT have actually gone home with another bloke, as that WOULD have been clearly and blatantly wanting someone else, but I DIDN'T go home with him for that!!! If you believe me about that, then the only reason you can possibly think that I feel like you two aren't enough, is because I mentioned that I was so bloody turned on by the two of you putting on a show for ME! How in the bloody fuck is THAT me considering someone else?!!"

I growled in frustration and paced back to the part of the room I'd entered to begin with. "YES I PUSH! I understand that that might not feel the best, but I'm NOT pushing you to do things you don't want to, and I'm NOT being unappreciative of the things you do for me. I just want to take advantage of every ounce of flirtation I'm allowed - SALAZAR DAMNIT!!! I AM AN INCORRIGIBLE FLIRT, AND YOU KNOW IT!!!"

Damnit, I was too tired by this point to remember my bloody point or why I was so upset by the fact that you two were upset by what I'd done. I mean after getting some sleep, logically I know that you both have the right to be angry with me for IMPLYING that I was doing things I wasn't, but since I didn't do anything wrong, I'm still rather mad that you're mad at me.

Fortunately for all of us, an owl arrived just then, rather unexpected as it was the middle of the night. I took the letter from him and ordered Muffy to give him a treat as I read the letter. Out loud. At the top of my lungs.

"DEAR MR. MALFOY! WE AT THE MINISTRY ARE DELIGHTED TO INVITE YOU BACK TO DISCUSS YOUR BUSINESS OPPORTUNITY! PLEASE STOP BY TO MEET WITH US LATER TODAY AT 4PM!"

I crumbled the letter up in my anger, and then tore it to pieces before finally just casting an Incendio at it. "Fuck this! I'm too bloody tired to argue any more tonight, and I'm going to bed so that I can get some Merlin be damned sleep before my meeting tomorrow!"

And with that, I stormed into our bedroom, conjured up a cot next to the large bed, and lay down fully clothed. I either passed out from emotional exhaustion, or you cast a sleeping hex on me, because the next thing I knew, it was morning, and neither of you were in the room with me. There's a note from you two on the bed, but I haven't had the courage to read it just yet. I'm more than a little afraid that it's going to tell me that you both returned home with the kids and that I can just go ahead and stay in France until I die.

I don't know what to do. I suppose the only thing I can do at this point is to go to my meeting in a couple of hours, and then see if I can have an emergency meeting with Yesenia to discuss what I'm feeling and how I can feel, erm… the right way to make you both forgive me. Or... I dunno, accept me?

Ugh! I'm not making any sense, not even to me! If I don't see you before I leave for my meeting, just know that while I'm still mad at you both for jumping to the wrong conclusion even though I basically made it look like that was exactly what was happening, BUT I still love you so damn much that I feel like I can't breath because we're fighting. I fully expect that the French Officials won't be able to hear a word I'm saying because I won't have enough breath in my body to speak above a whisper.

And to top it all off, I'm rambling!!!

Sigh...

Boy you belong to me, I got the recipe, and it's called Black Magic,
If y'all are wondering why Harry and Oliver didn't argue back towards the end there, I interpret it in two ways: Either they did and Draco just wasn't paying enough attention (was too involved with his own shit) to catch it, or - more likely - they recognized that Draco was in not-going-to-listen-to-anything mode, and since they were already keeping a tight reign on their emotions, just let him bluster and go to bed without trying to say anything.

Which ever makes more sense to you ^_^
Chapter 235

Chapter Summary

The fight isn't exactly over, but it's not currently in progress either.

Chapter Notes

Sorry, I didn't mean to leave y'all hanging after the heaviness of that fight, but I got caught up with other things. Then AO3 was down when I went to post before going to work today, so, better late than never I guess ^_^

Thursday February 22, 2018

My Love,

If you had read the note you wouldn't have had to worry so much about where we had gone and if we were ever coming back. It said: "We are taking the kids on a long walk through Paris. We're stopping at a few gardens. We may be back before you leave for your meeting, but if we're not, Good Luck. We know you'll do amazing. Love Always, Harry and Oliver"

As you can obviously tell, we did not make it back in time to see you before you left for the meeting. We really tried, but dragging our entire crew through the streets of Paris took longer than we imagined it would. Shocking I know. Whatever could have possibly distracted our ragtag crew in this city that would have made attempting to have them walk in a straight line look like an attempt to herd cats.

Our Nora giggled about it a few times when Ollie and I tried to corral them all together. "Nous ressemblons aux filles de Madeline Papas!" It was adorable no matter what, but once Nora explained to her sisters who Madeline was and why she thought our crew looked like something out of the pages, Seph and Lissa insisted we get all the girls matching blue coats and yellow hats so they really could look like the storybook. I pointed out that we could do the yellow on yellow combination they wear in some of the stories and was told with quite a few Malfoy eyebrows that they would end up looking like they were trying to be the Man in the Yellow Hat from Curious George.

So, I put my foot down and refused to buy them the outfits. Ha! Yeah right, I'm too much of a pushover for that. We probably spent a full hour searching for a proper store to find exactly the right accessories to complete their looks. Don't worry, I'm sure you'll see it again soon, but if not I did take quite a few pictures of our little ladies walking through the streets looking like Madeline. It was quite precious.

We got back to the hotel right around 3:45 so we must have just missed you. If it helps, we had quite a bit of time to cool off with culture. Beautiful gardens, giggling children, walking through timeless streets hand in hand with (one of) my love(s). It all combined to pull me out of my head a bit, cool off so I could look at last night's debacle a little more objectively. I feel as though tempers were too high last night to really be able to come to any sort of good solution. I was heartbroken from watching Ollie cry, you were still a bit high on the Veritaserum ... or on street food I'm not really sure which one. And Ollie was drained from crying his heart out.

I know that last night you responded to A) assuming we weren't going to believe you, B) our angry and anxious looks when you got back to the hotel, and C) my less than kind email response.

Draco my love, I don't think you quite know what it's like to deal with these situations we keep finding ourselves in. You know that when it comes to you, I am always ready to give you the benefit of the doubt, I love you unconditionally, and I would happily go rage halo Harry on anyone who hurt you. I'm not impartial when it comes to love. But now that I'm also in love with Ollie, I feel the same way for him. I want to go back in time and absolutely annihilate Edmond for abusing our wonderful man and ruining his sense of self worth. I want to get to his ex-in-laws and make them suffer every bit of heartache they caused him.

But what do I do when one of my loves hurts the other? What do I do when I see Ollie broken in my arms, crying because he feels as though he'll never be enough? My immediate reaction is to stop whoever is hurting him, but right now the things hurting him are you and his own self-esteem issues. How to I battle that? So not only was I heartbroken for Ollie, and a little annoyed for myself to be honest, but I was also confused and feeling powerless. I probably should have just avoided responding to your email because I think it did more harm than anything else.

I can't go back and change what I wrote. I can't fix it so you never have to read it. And honestly, it's not as though I lied about any of the feelings, I just probably didn't need to be as harsh in their descriptions. I think your idea to talk with Yesenia is a good one. I think we could each use some individual therapy right now, but more importantly I think we need another joint session.

Something about our current "limitation agreement" isn't working. I don't know if it's the kissing, or the fact that you were off on your own, or the overly descriptive discussion about how attractive you find everyone else ... okay I DO know that one, the overly descriptive gagging over others is NOT something either of us enjoy. Think it, notice it in your head, bring your horniness back home to us, but for the rest of time I don't ever need to know when you find someone else bloody gorgeous. Ever.

I think the thing that pushed me over the edge last night was your continued kissing and groping when you went back to the line for the loo. If we were all there together, and you were flirting to take it home with US, going out of our line of sight and continuing to flirt and grind and snog hot and heavy was too far. Figuratively and literally.

I know you're frustrated with the lack of playing. I do. It's been such a huge part of our lives for so long I imagine it's quite a few years of habit to get out of. But the more you push, the longer it's going to take Oliver to ever get comfortable with the idea. The "subtle" references to missing play. The toeing the letter of the agreement while not really sticking to the spirit. It's going to end in one of two scenarios; either Ollie will NEVER want to play or he will give in for fear of losing you and hate every minute of it. Am I correct in assuming neither of those outcomes are something you want?

Last night, after you fell asleep, Ollie and I watched you sleep for a long time. We, erm, actually brought you into bed with us and just put you back on the cot before we left. Don't worry, we didn't grope you in your sleep or anything, even with your somnophilia kink it wouldn't have felt right to do in the middle of a fight. But neither of us could handle you being that far away from us. We held each other and stared at your peaceful sleeping face. Let some tears loose. But mostly we talked about how much we hate fighting. It took a long time for either of us to fall asleep.
We love you, we trust you, we're not mad. But I definitely think we need to have a long discussion on what exactly happened last night that caused so many intense reactions. I can't keep watching our Oliver break down Draco.

Anyways, I hope your meeting is amazing. If we're already asleep when you get back please wake us up so we can reconnect after our fight with reassuring kisses and hugs?

Oh! Hopefully you get this before the end of your meeting. I know you should do what you need to do to seal the deal, but you NEED to be at the Manor for family night tomorrow night. You need to be there when our children all meet our newest child for the first time. If you have to miss Saturday's circle dinner I completely understand. But I really really need you there to welcome Nora home okay?

Good luck! See you soon! Love you always,
Harry

Thursday February 22nd
My Harry and my Oliver,

When I woke up, after writing my earlier email, I did gather up the courage to read your note, so I was at least relieved that you hadn't left me after all. You were both off with the littles, and apparently, Jules had woken up from all the noise and surreptitiously watched you all get ready to go before raiding our kitchen until Muffy popped in, terrified him a bit, and offered to make him anything he could possibly want.

Then Zaire just so happened to return at the same time that Jaz and Vani were coming back for lunch.

"DAD!!" Zaire called out much louder than necessary. "ARE YOU AWAKE YET?! JAZ AND NESSA WANT TO TELL YOU ALL ABOUT MY FOOD TOUR!"

I heard Callista snort. "You mean YOU want to tell him that."

I cast a spell to open the door to our bedroom portion of the suite. "Zaire! I'm about to get out of bed and start on my morning routine! You should probably come in here and work off some of that food you just ate!"

Zaire roared with laughter, "I probably should! But you MIGHT want to come out here and rescue this bloke from Jaz! She's under the impression that Muffy feeds the burglars!"

I let out a hearty laugh at that, popping my head out of the door so that I could wave and catch Jaz' attention. Once I had it, I signed: "Sorry, my little love, I didn't have a chance to introduce you to Jules yet. He's, erm… possibly going to be staying with us."

"He is?" Zaire blurted out in surprise, then he watched himself repeat the letters for Jules so that he could work out how to say it. "Jewels?"

I chuckled. "Close, no s and more of a zh sound."

"Alright," Zaire murmured before squaring his shoulders and thrusting his hand out at Jules. "Hi there, Jules, I'm Zaire - one of the middle sons. This is my favorite sister Jasmine - Jaz for short - and our cousin Vanessa. They're both deaf, so don't worry if they don't seem to hear you."
Jules shook Zaire's hand, but couldn't really understand him. Or maybe he can a bit, I mean he hasn't SPOKEN English, but he might have learned it in school. In any case, he didn't really say anything other than: "Bonjour."

"So, as I was saying," Zaire continued as if he hadn't detoured in the slightest. "Callista took me to ALL the food carts that served breakfast and everything tasted SO GOOD!!! I'm already planning to add crepes served with fresh fruit to my restaurant! AND! There's a place nearby that has earned THREE Michelin Stars!!! It's naturally impossible to get a seat at, but I had Callista Confound the staff until a table cleared up for us for lunch! We're going there in a bit - if you want to come with."

He was saying and signing all of this at the same time, so Jaz immediately answered him with: "That sounds great! We were just going to have Muffy make us some chocolate pancakes, but three stars beats pancakes any day!"

"Have fun, my loves," I said and signed. "Did anything good happen this morning while shooting?"

Jaz practically danced in excitement. "We got to go up in a hot air balloon!!! The cameraman is afraid of heights but still managed to get some really good footage!"

Vani nodded with a grin and a silent laugh. "There was even a PERFECT picture of a partially cloudy sun, painted with shades of sunrise!"

"Are any of you interested in coming with me to the Ministry for my meeting today?" I wondered, hoping that my Jaz would want to come at the very least. They all shook their heads.

"I'm going to see if I can get footage from the top of the Eiffel Tower," Jaz informed me.

"And I'm going to visit the food market to see if there's anything good I can buy to bring back to my restaurant for a limited time special," Zaire explained. "I'm thinking escargot! And probably lots and lots of chocolate!"

"Mmm," I moaned in appreciation. "That reminds me, I need to buy some chocolate as well.

"When's this lunch reservation?" Jaz asked Zaire, a hand rubbing her grumbling stomach.

"We can go now, I stopped eating breakfast when I realized that I'd be having such an excellent lunch," Zaire told her.

Leah laughed. "How can you eat so much?!"

Callista giggled and shook her head. "He may buy full portions, but he only really takes a bite or two of each thing. Even with me also taking a bite or two, a lot of the food ends up going to waste - unless we find someone who wants to eat the leftovers."

"You're going to get fat!" Jaz teased. She danced over to me and gave me a big hug before kissing my cheek. "See you later dad."

"Later," I murmured, returning her kiss. Vani also gave me a hug and a kiss on the cheek, which made me wonder: "How have you been coping? No magical flare ups?"

She grinned and shook her head. "I get too interested in what we're doing to care if there are other people around."

"And besides, we all do our best to ensure these two are safe at all times," Leah reminded me, gesturing to the crew for Jaz' show, who were not waiting for Jaz to actually eat before digging into their own lunch as - presumably - they wouldn't be included in Zaire's lunch invitation, and would probably be filming it.

"Excellent!" I exclaimed, giving the crew a probing look that let them know that they had BETTER make it their priority to keep the girls safe.

Jaz was still half hugging me and gave me the sweetest look she could manage. "Daddy... Our petty cash is running low..."

I rolled my eyes at her and waved my hand over my carry all case to summon some money. Which I handed to Leah. "Here, all I have left at the moment is Galleons, so you're going to have to get it converted appropriately."

"Can do!" Leah saluted cheekily as she accepted the money.

"Oi!" Zaire roared indignantly. "If JAZ gets more money to faff about with, then I should get more money too!"

I raised my brow at him and stared him down a bit. "Oh? Is your restaurant not making enough to support one little business trip to France?"

He glared at me. "Don't even JOKE about that, dad!"

Chuckling, I handed him a little money too, which he gave to Callista since he knew she'd have to get it converted. Unless he simply planned to pocket it for later use.

At that point, Zaire's Magi-Tablet alerted him to an incoming Skype call. "Is dad up yet?"

"Dad, it's Shtara!" Zaire informed me as if I couldn't hear her. He also held his tablet up to face me.

"Good morning, love, something wrong?" I asked in concern.

"Nothing bad," Shtara assured me. "Just that I don't have to work today and I'm BORED! I KNOW you are all coming home tomorrow, but I feel like I'm missing out on all the fun! Let me come to France too! I WANT TO GO SHOPPING!!!"

Laughing, I gestured to our beautiful daughter. "Muffy, Apparate back to the Manor and pick up Shtara. Shtara love, prepare yourself, because you are going to HAVE to tag along with Zaire as he eats lunch and faffs about."

"I NEVER FAFF ABOUT!" Zaire protested.

"BRILLIANT!" Shtara crowed. "ZAIRED WILL GO SHOPPING WITH ME OR I'LL BREAK HIS NECK!"

"OI!!!" Zaire growled.

Shtara changed her demeanor 180 degrees. "I NATURALLY mean sing at the top of my lungs everywhere we go until you get so embarrassed that you give into my demands."

Zaire sighed in frustration. "DAD! Tell Shtara that she can't embarrass me in public!"

"DAD! Tell Zaire that he can't make me eat every scrap of food in France!"

Jaz was now glaring a bit at both of them and signed. "If we don't get to that restaurant soon, I might just eat YOU BOTH!!"

Shtara laughed and blew her little sister a kiss. "Alright love, lucky for you that Muffy is already here and waiting for me. See you in a few seconds!"

Which barely gave her time to end the Magi-Skype chat before Muffy popped her over. Shtara came over and kissed me on the cheek while practically strangling me.

"I missed you so much, daddy! Can I have some money to go shopping with?"

I sighed, feeling like I should have seen that coming. Grumbling a bit, I pulled out some more money and handed it to her.

"Now go on, the lot of you!" I ordered sternly. "I need to get ready for my meeting!"

Shtara ruffled my still tousled hair. "You look rather chic as you are. Good luck with your meeting!" And with that, they thankfully took off to do their own things.

Meanwhile, Jules started laughing at me. "Tu es fou! TRES fou!"

I sighed in resignation. "Yeah, I probably am." With that I gave him permission to lounge around our suite while I performed my entire morning routine. That said, I also insisted that he have a nice long chat with Elena about her music program, letting him use my magi-mobile so that it automatically translated the conversation if necessary.

Surprisingly, he was still in deep conversation with her when I was fully ready to go. I decided to interrupt them for a moment. "Elena, my love, I'm headed off to my important meeting. Please give Rafael hugs and kisses from me."

"Are you going to need your phone?" She asked in concern.

"Nah, I have my Magi-Tablet and my Laptop with me, so I'll be fine," I assured her with an air kiss.

"Love you, dad!" She called out as I handed the phone back to Jules. "And good luck with your meeting!"

"Thanks!" I accepted before Apparating away. And yes, it was about 3:30, so you definitely missed me. The good news is that the meeting was extremely quick and easy. They simply wanted Pippa and me to answer a few technical questions, and then informed me that they had agreed to accept my proposal.

Thus, I am officially done with my business meeting here in France! That said, I had time to write this email (while drinking wine with the Minister and Officials) as clerks went over EVERY detail of the agreement with a fine tooth comb to spot loopholes and the like. Now that they are done, I'm going to sign the contract, the Minister is going to sign it, and I'll be free to head off to the best Chocolaterie in France to buy chocolates, flowers, possibly jewelry, and a dozen bottles of the best wine I can find before returning to your side.

Warning, I might sing.

Eternally,
Draco
Chapter 236

Chapter Summary

Off page: All parties have decided to put the argument on hold until they can speak to their Mind Healers and come back to it with a clearer frame of mind. Thus in this chapter, they seem to make up and put everything behind them, but I promise, it comes back up and gets settled later on.

Friday February 23, 2018

Our Love,

Alright, let's get the slightly less fun and less entertaining portions of the email out of the way.

First of all, congratulations on the French negotiations not only ending the way you'd hoped but in record time! We are both very very proud of you. Knew you could do it Love.

So, our mooching little spoiled brats shook you down huh? You are such a pushover. How do you ever manage to negotiate in the board rooms when you can't say no to a handful of preteens telling you their petty cash is running low? It's hilarious honestly. The Malfoy business mogul, wheeling and dealing, raking in galleons hand over fist, can't manage to say no to a few sets of big brown eyes.

I'm so happy Shtara had the day off yesterday, we had such a lovely evening with her. I love that she's following her dreams, but I hate that we don't see her as often as we see most of the other young kids. I tend to lump her in with the older/adult kids since she's working full time, but she's only fifteen. I still have a few more years of her being my little girl, why does my brain try to rush it?

And it's fantastic she was here last night when you came in with your arms full of bribery ... I mean gifts ... serenading away at us. I'm not sure if it's from years of singing together, or if your voices just naturally fit, but listening to the two of you sing is nothing less than magic. Your voices are so complementary. I don't think it's quite what you expected when you got back, I think you were planning on a lot more groveling based on the sheer amount of chocolate you bought, but an entire evening of singalong with our children was perfection.

But the night? That was for us.

When the songs started getting a little slower, a little softer, we started putting the kids to bed, tiniest ones first. Lullabies, drinks of water, "just one more kiss" and we eventually got everyone but the three of us to sleep. Ollie and I each grabbed one of your hands and dragged you (not that it took much) into our room. With promises from the other adults, the bigger kids, and the elves, we knew we had all night to reconnect with no interruptions.

You looked as though you were going to start talking, likely to apologize if the look on your face was anything to go by. But we quickly shushed you, reminding you that you hadn't broken any rules, we loved you unconditionally, and it was our turn to show our love for you.
We stripped you down, kissing each bit of your skin as the clothes fell away. Taking little nips at your ink, tonguing each hill and valley of your beautiful moonlit skin. I asked you if we could tie you up, you looked drunk on kisses as you just dazedly nodded assent. We again each grabbed a hand and led you to the bed. Propping you up, sitting up against the headboard, I tied your left arm to the bedpost while Ollie tied up your right. With one final filthy kiss from each of us, we climbed off the bed and away from where you were sitting.

See, we know you didn't explicitly do anything against things we had already agreed on. But what I kept hearing from you was that you wanted to watch the two of us. Well, that is until the moment comes where we are all together. You ignore your voyeuristic tendencies in the spirit of joining in. Well, being the loving fiancés we are, we thought we'd help you fulfill your cravings.

Aren't we so helpful?

What followed was an absolutely glorious three or four hours for Ollie and I. How was the view for you? Did you enjoy watching Ollie rim me? His tongue buried in my arse while I stared right into your eyes. Or I did until my climax hit me so hard I closed them tightly enough to feel a few tears leak out. Mmm, I can't believe I came without a single touch to my cock.

I didn't really talk though, I just stared into your eyes while grunting and moaning. I'm sure all you could hear were my intense pleasure noises and the sloppy way Oliver got my hole positively dripping. Did you enjoy the sounds Love?

How about when I proceeded to give Ollie a ridiculously long and teasing blow job? His stamina has really improved huh? I was able to keep him on edge for quite a long time. I'd take him down my throat, swallowing around the head, squeezing him inside of me. And when I felt his length start to swell, I'd pop off, the both of us panting for breath. I was in the zone and wasn't paying much attention to anything but the velvety smooth, spit slick length in my mouth, but when I did pay attention it seemed Oliver was giving you a wonderful play by play of everything he was feeling.

Did you enjoy hearing him scream my name when I finally gave in and let him come? And wasn't I awfully nice to come over and share the bitter taste in my mouth with you through kisses? You are very welcome Darling.

How about when we crawled back into bed with you, close enough for me to splatter when I eventually came a second time, but far enough away where you couldn't touch at all? Did you like watching me kiss Oliver's beautiful shaft until it was hard enough for me to play with? Until it was hard enough for me to impale myself on? I straddled his hips, dropped myself onto him in one long slow glide, and then rode him until I managed to spray all over your beautiful chest.

That made two completely hands free orgasms for me. Did that give you a lovely view? Just seeing my cock spurt and spray with nothing getting in the way of you seeing every single pulse.

And before you complain about how much we tortured you, we did eventually include you! Oliver used your rock hard dick like his own personal toy. Mmm, always knew it, but that man can RIDE!

By the time Ollie covered you in a second layer of your fiancés' seed, you seemed like you'd had quite enough of being a voyeur and needed something a bit more than a pretty view. So we let you watch us snog. I know, when we told you all we were going to do was snog each other you whined and begged, pleading to be allowed to come. Well, we're not monsters Draco, of course we were going to let you come. We planned on doing some kissing.

But we never told you what kind of kissing. Did you enjoy the two of us, filthily kissing, spit everywhere, roaming hands, moans, while we kissed around your cock like it was some sweet we were fighting over? We didn't even have to suck on you, eventually all the stimulation, the licking all over the crown, moaning around your length, the occasional sharp sweet feeling of teeth scraping, had you erupting into and around our mouths. That didn't stop us, we just kept kissing and licking, moaning and fighting, until every last drop had been cleaned off. Your spent cock shiny and pink.

We didn't end there, but I do need to finish getting everyone ready for tonight's dinner. We have some children to introduce! See you at dinner!

Love Always,
Harry and Oliver

Monday March 5th,
My dearest loves,

Oliver, I know that you were eager to spend the day with Parker, just bonding for his birthday - despite the fact that we threw him a nice party just yesterday.

And Harry, I know that you were actually a bit eager to get back to work after two weeks of bonding with our newest pride and joy.

Don't worry, either of you, I made sure that all the littles were well occupied with their loving grandparents before heading into the Ministry. I decided that I was better off going in just long enough to see if Hermione ACTUALLY needed anything, and then since she's had things well handled all of last week, more than likely come right back home - in PLENTY of time to join any and all of you for dinner.

Love you!

Here comes the hotstepper, I'm the lyrical danger, pick up the crew in de area, still love you like that,
Draco
Chapter 237

Chapter Summary

Harry and Oliver are worried and Draco is having a bit of a mental crisis.

Chapter Notes

So, as I've promised, the argument arc is NOT over yet, but it's on a bit of a detour.

Monday March 5, 2018

What the Hell Draco?!?

I just got back from class, excited to share my day with my men. All the hot gossip from two long weeks away from these hormonal lunatic teenagers. But no, you're gone. Not physically gone, you're right there. I'm literally poking you in the shoulder as I write this. But absolutely no response. I would think you were catatonic if I wasn't seeing the slight flutter of your eyelids as I speak to you.

I tried calling 'Mione to see if she knew what the heck was happening. But all she knows is that you were planning on stopping in and chatting with Robards on your way home.

Fucking Robards.

I even tried calling him, and wouldn't you know it, the guy isn't answering.

I'm trying to act like I'm mad here, but I'm mostly just freaking out that you're meditating so hard you can't hear me.

Come back to me?

Harry

----------------------

Tuesday March 6, 2018

Love,

Okay, yesterday I went with annoyance. Today I am going a little heavier into the freaking out territory.

You're still meditating. You've never meditated this long.

I tried calling Hermione again, she knows nothing. I tried calling Robards again, he's still not answering.
The fucker.

I've tried waking you up. Ollie's tried waking you up. You're still out.

Please come back to us? We need you.

Harry

-------------------

Wednesday March 7, 2018

Well, at least I know you're done meditating. Imagine my happiness when I walked in from class and knelt next to you, doing my best to poke through your occlumency shields and actually succeeding. I found a teeny tiny version of you staring at me warily and said: "Draco, my love, PLEASE come back to us." Then there you were, starting to shift and move a bit from your meditative state. Finally! I could talk to you and find out WHAT THE HELL IS HAPPENING!!!!

But no, you opened your eyes, looked right at me, and then your eyes fluttered closed. What? Were you going back into meditation? Nope, you apparently were so exhausted you fell into a deep, although thankfully natural, sleep.

Ugh, I suppose you needed it.

But now could you wake up already?!?

Harry

Wednesday March 7th

My solid foundations that I lean on for EVERYTHING,

I'm so sorry that I freaked you both out. See what happened was... Well, I was having a bit of a crisis, but let me start at the beginning.

After I stopped in with Hermione, decided that she wasn't doing anything more important than color coding future plans (she calls it preemptive organizing or some such), I told her that I was going to be dropping in on Robards and then heading home to cuddle with Morgana and Nora - who seem to get along fabulously, thank the Gods!

In Robards' office, he looked relieved to see me. "Malfoy! Come in and close the door. I was just considering summoning a demon to go pester you until you came to visit me."

"Oh?" I asked with intrigue. "Sounds like it might be important."

"It is!" Robards blurted out, but waited until I'd closed the door and sat in the chair on the other side of his desk. "You see, I have an undercover mission of a delicate nature that I honestly don't feel I can trust to anyone but you."

"Oh?" I asked, still interested but now rather surprised as I am clearly better at organizing and conducting raids than undercover missions. That said, I HAVE gone undercover a few times and do tend to have skills for those particular missions that not everyone has.

Robards sighed and ran a hand through his hair. "See, I have eyes on a man who may or may not be running a potions ring. He may actually be running far worse crime than that, but I can't say for certain because he keeps himself extremely clean. I've been ITCHING to raid him for MONTHS, but I can't find a cause!"

I raised my eyebrow at that. "So.. you've found one?"

"Well... it's more like I've managed to persuade his long-term Partner to let us send someone undercover as him in order to dig up whatever dirt we can. The problem is that the lover is half loyal to him still and doesn't want to just tell us things outright - despite being irate he was cheated on (the criminal doesn't know he knows about that) - AND part of it is that the lover literally CAN'T talk about certain things, having made an unbreakable vow."

I nodded in understanding. "I see, so you need someone who can go undercover in a potentially dangerous situation. Someone who can not only protect himself, but is also able to do whatever it takes to get the information you need to authorize a raid and/or an arrest."

"So you'll do it?" Robards asked hopefully.

"I..." I hesitated. "You know I can't just agree without asking Harry and Oliver first. I have a feeling that we're going to need a few days to talk this over, discuss every aspect, and come to a decision."

"Fuck!" Robards blurted out in dismay. "I think I'm suddenly in DIRE need of a few days of holiday! I'm going to go tell Roche, Ramsay, and Bletchley that they're in charge until I get back."

"Have fun on your trip," I bade with a smirk as I stood up to leave. Robards was already shoving things in a bag in preparation to leave.

I took a leisurely stroll to my office to make sure there wasn't anything important - such as messages that were mistakenly delivered to me that were intended for others - that needed to be dealt with. As I walked, I realized something important. TWO somethings important.

Important thing number one: I want to do it and I was feeling a bit angry all of a sudden that I needed to ask for permission. Important fact number two: OF COURSE I need to ask for permission because this could involve some potentially huge things that we're already still half fighting about.

I know, we sort of abandoned our fight until we could each individually get some therapy and then come back to have a group session until we hash everything out and get it settled once and for all. For now, at least. But still, this was going to be an explosive trigger that was almost certainly going to blow everything up.

So, I decided to return to our Quarters and meditate until I could figure out the right thing to do, only, I got a bit lost.

Literally. Once inside my own head, I started out by strengthening and reorganizing my Occlumency shields. As I was going through them, I was reexamining old issues and trying to figure out what I feel about them now that I'm older and hopefully wiser. Among the issues was the fact that you're both convinced that you're not enough for me.

Which made me wonder if it was true, and if so, what in the bloody hell was wrong with me that I can't be satisfied by the two most perfect men on the planet! As I was wandering through that mess, the issue of this current request kept popping up at random. Half the time, the request was personified by Vince - of all people - who cruelly poked fun at me for NOT being the boss man in charge of his own life. Of being a submissive and whiny little arsehole who can't ever do anything he's not told to do, and even then, can't always follow through - such as that time I failed to murder Dumbledore and spent an entire year trying to sabotage the castle and nearly failing at that too.

The other half of the time, the request presented itself to me as a tiny little girl wearing nothing but bandages who kept asking me why I didn't want to help her. After all, wasn't I supposed to be some sort of good man who always tried to help others when he could? Didn't SHE matter? Wasn't she worth saving???

And when I was brought to my knees by all of that - no! Literally on my stomach on the ground! As I was mentally laying on the ground in mental agony during a rather intense existential crisis, the two of you would pop up and ask me:

"Haven't you done enough? When will it be enough? Are we ever going to be good enough for you, Draco?"

I lay there sobbing and asking myself why in the bloody hell I ALWAYS wanted EVERYTHING I couldn't have when I was SO FUCKING GRATEFUL for everything I do have! I know I'm a bit greedy and always want the best, but I HAVE the best, so apparently I want the best AND every-fucking-thing else!

Honestly, when WILL it be enough?

I have no idea how long I was laying there in my mind being tormented by all of these things - especially the little girl squatting over me, stroking my hair and asking me to please save her.

SHE DOESN'T FUCKING EXIST!!!

Sorry, back to the point. I have no idea how long I was like that - or rather, didn't until I woke up and read your email, then confirmed the passage of time via my computer, magi-tablet, AND my bloody mobile!

So, it's been three days, and considering that it's coming up on midnight, it might as well be four. I may have come out of my meditation, my loves, but I'm still mentally in agony. I think I may never have come out if not for you breaking into my mind and calling me back, Harry.

I don't know what to do. Please tell me what to do.

All of my heart and soul,
Draco
Chapter 238

Chapter Summary

Draco goes undercover.

Chapter Notes

Note: For this chapter only, we change the format to Oliver, Harry, Draco - thus the first email is written by Oliver.

Warning! Tomorrow is my birthday, so I might not post as I have plans that involve Chrissie ^_^

Thurs March 8th
Draco...

Oliver here. Harry and I had a lot of time to talk while you were out of it. Also, while you were sleeping, before we fell asleep. You were sleeping again as we woke up, but we pretty much expected that. It was a shock to find out that you'd woken in the night and wrote us an email explaining everything.

Then we had time to talk some more because how in the bloody fuck could we teach CLASS at a time like that! Well, it was only breakfast at that point, but still. We came to a decision, and it's going to be a hard one on ALL of us, but...

We want you to do it. We both HATE the things that might happen - and Harry reminded me what had happened during your LAST undercover mission - but...

We both hate the idea that you agonized over what we wanted so much that you nearly lost yourself. We hate that thought more than ANY other thing that could potentially happen. Well, assuming you don't die, as we would clearly hate that most of all.

But what I'm saying is that yes, I personally have a lot of issues and hangups involved in this situation, but that I don't want my issues to stop you from doing everything you can to help make the world a better place.

Harry feels the same, but since he is currently back in the Manor going all Rage Halo on the Crystal Room, I have a feeling that he's supportive but not exactly HAPPY about what you'll be doing.

So, when you wake up again, give me some reassuring kisses before going and calming Harry, yeah?

See you then,

Oliver
Thursday March
Draco,

I hate it. I hate everything about what's going to happen. But I'd hate it more if you didn't do this because of us.

Go, get it done. Keep yourself safe in every way. Come home to us.

Don't call anyone gorgeous.

Love,
Harry

Sunday March 10th
My loves,

I'm currently safe and in my office. I just sent you an Insta-owl saying exactly as much, but I thought I should take a few moments to recap before I finish up my paperwork and come home.

I'll start with when I woke up on Thursday. I habitually checked my email before even getting out of bed to go to the loo. I was relieved to find an email from Oliver and (after going to the loo) rushed do exactly as he asked by giving him as many kisses as he could stand. Then - hand in hand - we went and did the same to Harry - who was definitely still in rage mode.

All day Thursday, we focused on each other. Cuddling, kissing, rubbing each other's backs. Talking - which was hard on all of us as we were all rather raw and emotional. There was a lot of weeping involved. Some of it may even have been mine.

On Friday, we called a family meeting. Since we'd literally JUST had everyone here a couple of weeks ago, it wasn't exactly easy nor appropriate to insist that everyone drop everything and come back home for an hour, so we had a magi-teleconference with those who weren't there in person.

Once everyone was gathered or on Magi-tablet, I stood up and let everyone know what was going on.

"Sorry to worry or upset you all, but I learned the last time I did this that it was best if I told you everything up front and addressed any concerns," I began.

"Which one of you is pregnant this time?" My father asked with a look at my mother like he was expecting to win a bet in about 5 seconds.

"None of us. Yet." I couldn't help but look at Oliver, which made Cassie gasp.

"Seriously?! You're going to have a baby?!!" She asked in excitement.

"Well... I'm going to try, but not just yet," Oliver confirmed, not looking anywhere near as happy about this as he probably would have been had we not been in the middle of a serious meeting.

I held up my hand to prevent any other interruptions. "No, I'm talking about me going undercover."

Orion perked up. "You mean your going to pose as ANOTHER teenaged girl prostitute???
"Then I might just win this bet after all!" My father stated with a smirk at my mother.

My mother looked worried but trying to keep calm about it.

"NO!" I blurted out in dismay. "I will NOT be getting pregnant again! Once-twice, er... FOUR TIMES was enough, thank you very much!!"

This made most of our kids laugh.

"Four times?" Jules asked in confusion as he looked around at all our kids. "I thought you were ALL adopted!"

"That's probably my fault," Elena murmured. "I said that I was the oldest but that I wasn't adopted first. I might have accidentally implied that all of us were adopted."

Harry shook his head. "No, River, Eris, Orion, Hazel in a way, Siri, Zwei, Lily, Caelum, Persephone, Gabriel, Dylan, and Morgana are all blood related to at least one of us."

"Oh," Jules muttered in understanding. His rusty English rapidly improving since he came here, but he was still wearing his translation devices as he probably felt overwhelmed by so many people talking at once, as usually happened in our crowd. "That explains why they look so much like you..."

I turned to Orion. "To answer your question, no, I'm not going to be a prostitute this time. I'm actually going to be posing as a man's long-term lover, and since the lover is also a man, I am reasonably certain there will be NO risk of pregnancy."

"What can you tell us?" Viona asked, looking almost stony behind her Malfoy mask, and so, probably the most worried out of everyone but the two of you.

I reached out and grabbed her hand. "Well I don't know much yet, but I can tell you what I know. This man is suspected of being a criminal, running potions at the very least, but he's keeping himself very clean and Robards can't dig up ANY dirt on him. He apparently cheated on his lover, which angered him enough that he agreed to let someone pose as him in exchange for finding whatever incriminating evidence there is."

"Why doesn't the man just TELL the Aurors what they need to know?" River questioned from the very crowded screen of the Magi-tablet showing him, Mahafsoun, and Evangeline.

I very slightly threw up my hands in a sort of shrug. "Apparently he can't. He's taken an unbreakable vow."

"Why you, Grandpa?" Sammy asked as she sat in my lap and looked me in the eyes.

I stroked her short and fuzzy hair (why does she insist on being practically bald??). "Well love, I suppose it's because I CAN do some of the things that might be required of me, that OTHER people wouldn't or couldn't do."

"Will you die?" Blake asked in morbid fascination.

"No," I replied firmly. "I will not be in ANY danger."

"Liar!" Sebastian accused with an amused snort. "If you weren't going to be in any danger, we wouldn't be having a full family meeting."
I sighed in defeat. "What I mean is that so long as everything goes according to plan, the risk that the man I'll be spying on finding out that I'm not who he thinks I am will be very small. Thus I should NOT be in any danger, and even if he does find out and tries to hurt me, I can more than defend myself." I stroked Sammy's hair again. "Which is the other reason I'm perhaps the best choice for this. I can kick butt!"

She grinned at me. "That you can!"

Lily and Persephone were now tugging on my sleeves. "Does this mean that you'll be arresting a bad man?!"

I snorted in amusement. "Well, it means that if I do MY job right, the AURORS will be arresting a bad man."

"HOORAY!!" They cheered. "KILL ALL THE BAD MEN!!!"

"What?!" I blurted out in dismay. "Who said anything about killing him??"

They gave me unbearably innocent looks. "Well... isn't that what happens to bad men in Azkaban?"

"Azkaban," I corrected them dryly. "And no. They're usually kept quite safe for many many years."

"Oh..." They murmured in disappointment.

The rest of the meeting was more of a general chaotic chat than a meeting, but at least I accomplished my goal of letting everyone know what I planned to do in case something went wrong.

After the meeting - Friday evening - I went into the Ministry to see if Robards had returned from his holiday yet. As it happens, he was JUST sneaking back into his office. When he saw me, he sighed in relief.

"I figured that if you hadn't contacted me by now, then you'd probably decided against it and it was safe to return," he informed me.

I laughed. "Actually, I was just coming to tell you that I'm going to do it."

"Excellent!" He crowed in triumph. "I'll contact Corbin and let him know that it's a go."

"Corbin?" I asked in confusion.

"The bloke you'll be Polyjuicing into," Robards stated.

"Ah."

At that point, it was actually a matter of about an hour for Corbin to come in. He looked rather sour.

"I'm almost certain he's having dinner with that floozy!" He informed us. Then he kicked the chair intended for him a bit before flopping into it. "We've always had an agreement that he can have women whenever he's in the mood and I won't care so long as he never sees the same woman more than a couple times a year. And he's always been good about NOT breaking our agreement - until recently. I think he bought a bitch a house and has been going to see her there whenever he THINKS I'm not paying attention!"
"That sounds rough," I commiserated.

"Wait, aren't you Draco Malfoy?" Corbin asked suspiciously.

"Yeah," I confirmed with a nod, holding my hand out for him to shake.

"Why in the bloody hell would a rich boy like you do something like this???" Corbin asked in confusion.

I sighed heavily. "I did things as a teen that I STILL regret. If doing things like this can help me feel better, even a little, then I'll gladly do them."

"Yeah but, aren't you married to Harry Potter? Shouldn't HE be the one doing things like this?"

I snorted. "Do me a favor and NEVER say that to Harry's face!" Then I smirked. "And if you do and he starts looking a bit fiery, RUN!"

Corbin looked like he was thinking this over carefully and rather amused by whatever was happening in his head. Then he brightened up a LOT. "Wait! Does this mean that I get to Polyjuice into YOU and go home and be married to Harry Potter for a couple of days???"

I snorted, and then laughed, and then guffawed rather hard enough to practically fall out of my chair. "I'd love to say yes, but unfortunately, Harry and Oliver - our fiancé - already know what I'll be doing and will NOT be fooled by you. But by all means, try wearing my shoes for a few days! And if any of my 21 kids ask, they've got enough money for the moment!"

"21!!!" Robards blurted out in shock. "I thought it was like... 15..."

I laughed. "It was 15 before I had my triplets and we got engaged to Oliver. Then it was 20. As of now, we've adopted another baby girl, and so, it's 21."

"THAT'S TOO MANY KIDS!!!" Robards let me know with a look of mild horror.

I shrugged. "Maybe you'd feel differently if you actually had any."

He shook his head. "No. I may only have nieces and nephews, but I love them to bits. I CAN'T IMAGINE having to watch all seven of them at the same time, not to mention actually RAISE them!" He then gave me a wary look. "Speaking of, how did you manage to leave Morgana home today?"

I grinned at him. "Harry distracted her with her favorite food while I snuck away."

"Good. This is no time to have a baby in hand."

"Quite," I agreed.

After that, Corbin and I chatted for a couple of hours, him telling me everything he could think of that I should know. At the end of it, I wondered: "Why don't you just confront him about this woman?"

Corbin sighed. "I'm afraid he'll say he don't love me anymore, and worse, maybe he'll leave me for her."

I patted him on the shoulder. "You do realize that if things go the way we hope they will, he'll be going away for a very long time."
Corbin looked gutted, hanging his head down. "Yeah... but... maybe he deserves it..."

After that, we finalized the logistics and I got ready to go. Meaning I Polyjuiced into Corbin and made sure I had enough potion in a ring flask to last quite a while if necessary.

Astonishingly enough, the story from that point on is rather quick and to the point. I returned to Corbin's house - that he shared with Brock. Yes, the man I was trying to bring down has a name like a dense brick. Makes me wonder how he's ever managed to be smart enough to keep his reputation clean.

Anyway, I returned to their house and entered the security codes to let me in. Brock wasn't home, and so long as he was gone, there wasn't MUCH I could do. Corbin had already warned me that if anything incriminating existed, it would be on Brock's laptop - which he ALWAYS kept with him. Thus, the only thing I could really do was let my camera bots loose and snoop through the house to familiarize myself with everything. Also see if I could find anything that might not look suspicious to Corbin, but was actually evidence.

Funnily enough, I found a secret room, but it was warded strongly enough that I don't think Corbin even knew it existed, and I certainly wouldn't be able to break into it without a lot of unrestricted time and a massive refresher in curse and ward breaking.

Then Brock came home, smelling of cheap wine and even cheaper perfume.

"Sorry I'm late, love, business ran late. Forgive me?" Brock begged, handing me a rather lovely bouquet of roses - that CLEARLY didn't come from Neville's shop. They looked dull somehow, like they came from a muggle place.

"Forgive you?" I questioned in a frosty tone, then I hit him over the head with the roses. "WHY IN THE BLOODY HELL SHOULD I FORGIVE YOU?!?!"

Brock looked surprised for a moment. "Because you love me."

"AND THAT MAKES IT FINE FOR YOU TO DO WHATEVER YOU BLOODY LIKE?!"

He looked at me glaring at him with my arms crossed over my chest and narrowed his eyes suspiciously. "You figured it out, didn't you?"

"FIGURED WHAT out? " I demanded, sounding like a fishwife. "That you're CHEATING on me with some FLOOZY?!!"

"THAT'S WHAT YOU THINK??" He roared incredulously.

I gave him a LOOK. "Don't waste your breath by trying to deny it!"

"I'm not! Er, well yes, I have shagged her, but what happened was that I got her pregnant and -"

"HOW IS THAT NOT CHEATING?!?!

He waved his hands back and forth frantically. "I mean originally, all I did was shag her, and that was part of our agreement! THEN she got pregnant! THEN she demanded that I take responsibility for the baby, so I bought her a house and I've been going to doctor's appointments and the like?"

"Doctor?" I questioned, momentarily thrown off.

"Yeah, she's a muggle," he grumbled. "And she doesn't MEAN anything to me beyond carrying my
I started beating him over the head with the roses. "SO RATHER THAN TELL ME THAT WE ARE GOING TO BE HAVING A BABY, YOU KEPT IT ALL TO YOUR BLOODY SELF!!!"

"Corbin, baby, calm down!" Brock cajoled, trying to defend himself. "I didn't think you'd get quite this mad. I thought you'd basically glare at me and never speak of this again."

I harrumphed and tossed the utterly trashed bouquet across the room toward the rubbish bin. "Do you know what I spent today doing?"

"Er..." Brock droned blankly.

"I spent the day pampering myself in my favorite spa!"

Brock grinned at that. "I always love when you're fresh from the spa."

I held up my hand to prevent him from kissing me. "AND while I was soaking in the mudbath, I realized something important! IF I am worth pampering and massaging and just generally trying to be happy, THEN WHY IN THE BLOODY HELL SHOULD I QUIETLY ACCEPT YOU RUNNING AROUND BEHIND MY BACK?!?!"

"What??" Brock was clearly flustered now.

I pointed my finger in his face. "IF it's as you say and you were just following our agreement that you can have a woman when you like - so long as it doesn't MEAN anything to you - THEN WHY IN THE BLOODY HELL DID YOU KEEP IT FROM ME?!"

He winced and I nearly felt sympathetic because I've been on his side of the argument - back when I was working with Ginger and letting you think I was cheating rather than tell you what I was actually doing.

"I didn't think you'd want a kid..." Brock nearly whispered.

I pressed my lips together and remained silent because I hadn't thought to ask Corbin his thoughts on this subject. Then I sighed and threw my hands up in the air. "Well I guess we'll never know what I would have done, because now that I know, I'm too mad to know how I feel about having a kid!"

Brock tried to pull me in his arms. "Maybe we should just go to bed and sleep on it."

I feebly pushed against him. "IF YOU THINK I'M GOING TO LET YOU SHAG ME RIGHT NOW, YOU'RE MADDER THAN THE BLOODY HATTER!!!"

He laughed and rested his head against my shoulder. "I'm ALWAYS madder than the bloody hatter when it comes to you."

I softened my expression and stared at him. This was one of those inside couple things that Corbin had told me about. After a moment, I sighed again.

"Fine, we'll go to bed and sleep on it, but I'm serious, DON'T try to touch me."

"But Corbin, babe! I haven't shagged since we had our afternoon delight on Tuesday!"

I glared at him lightly. "Maybe that should have been a clue to you that I thought something was He sighed in defeat. "Alright. I'll keep my hands to myself, I promise."

"Good," I stated, letting him give me a peck on the lips.

That night I literally couldn't do anything at all, because he is clingier than I am when I'm trying to impersonate an octopus! I basically had to lie there in his arms until I could fall asleep. I awoke to him bringing me a tray of breakfast in bed.

He gave me a kiss on the cheek. "Listen, love, I have to work today-"

"But it's Saturday!" I protested.

"Yes, I know, but something came up. I promise to have it handled as soon as I can, and then I'll come right home and we can go to dinner at that restaurant you love."

I gave him a suspicious look. "WHICH restaurant I love?"

He laughed and kissed my forehead. "You know I can never remember the name, but it's that one with the green house as part of it."

I raised a brow in disbelief. "You mean GREENHOUSE?"

He laughed again. "Yeah, that one."

I rolled my eyes.

"As I was saying, we'll go there for dinner. While I'm gone, you should go shopping. I put a couple of thousand in our spending account. Feel free to go redecorate the house - if you'd like."

I growled and pouted. "I'm still too upset to shop. The way I feel, I'd probably buy the entire store and NOTHING would match! But maybe I could find some comfort in my tailor."

"As I was saying, we'll go there for dinner. While I'm gone, you should go shopping. I put a couple of thousand in our spending account. Feel free to go redecorate the house - if you'd like."

I growled and pouted. "I'm still too upset to shop. The way I feel, I'd probably buy the entire store and NOTHING would match! But maybe I could find some comfort in my tailor."

He raised a brow at that.

I gave him a bit of a look. "Oh really?! YOU'RE going to think the worst of such a stupid little statement after what YOU DID?!"

He sighed in defeat and got up. "Fine, do whatever you want. Just try to be home in time for dinner." And with that, he practically stormed out of the room.

Once Brock was passed out, with a light sleeping hex to keep him that way for good measure, I slipped out of bed and grabbed his laptop.

As Corbin had said (but wasn't 100 percent certain), his password was: Buford_is_the_best1!

Which reminded me that I would like to rewatch Phineas and Ferb with the Feisty Foursome when I get a chance.

Once into his laptop, I had the ability to really take a good look around, and sure enough, there was an abundance of incriminating evidence. Even so, I wasn't certain that it would be enough for Robards to authorize a raid or an arrest. So, I copied the entire contents of the laptop to a pocket drive, and then sent it to the Ministry Magi-computer-technology lab. Which, by the way, they had to create because of all the tech my shared company with Blaise and Pansy invented.

Once the pocket drive was in the hands of a Technomage (I kid you not, that's the title of the wizards that work in the lab), I asked that they rush the process so that Robards would have the results first thing in the morning, then I pulled my head out of the floo and returned to bed to wait until morning.

Happily, I woke up to a raid!

And as I said, I'm now in my office finishing up paperwork before I come home and hug you both for a good 20 minutes straight.

With this little cobweb potion, you'll fall into dark devotion,
Draco
Chapter 239

Chapter Summary

Harry remembers that something important is drawing ever nearer, and all three boys have a joint session.

Chapter Notes

Because I probably won't be posting anything tomorrow since I'm planning to be off celebrating my birthday, I'm going to post twice tonight.

Funnily enough, when I sent Chrissie tonight's email, she replied with: "I don't know when I'll have a chance to replay as I'm going to be celebrating a friend's birthday tomorrow..."

LMAO ^_^

Monday March 12, 2018

My Safe and Sound Sweetheart,

I thought after reading your account of your time undercover I'd have a million things to say. Maybe I'd have questions about the specific crimes committed. Perhaps I'd have questions about exactly what you did. I thought I might be upset and cry and whine about you having to do things I'm uncomfortable with. I was pretty certain I'd be upset about how long you were gone because of how much I missed you.

Nope, none of that. I have no questions, comments, concerns, or objections. I'm just thrilled you came home safe and sound to me. To us. I'm obviously pleased you didn't have to go very far physically, but I would have understood if you had had to do what you had to do. I don't want to hear another word about it. I just want to move on and be thankful you're home.

Okay, I may not have to do most of that first list, but in all honestly I was upset at how long you were gone. Which is ridiculous because you were gone much less time than I had assumed you would be. I thought this could be a week or more. I should have never underestimated you, you got things done and fast. But my whiney needy self definitely wished you had been gone less time. Perhaps maybe not at all.

And ... enough of that. I am done with this whole situation.

Now I want to stay calm and describe a little something important.

Draco!!!! Oliver!!! We are getting married in twelve days! Twelve days! We're not going to be ready! We have so much to do. Decisions still need to be made. Last minute fittings and oh hell, what if the weather doesn't hold up? We're getting married in the woods, what if it's rainy and drippy and gross?

And what were we thinking planning it for the 24th? I know it timed well with Easter Hols, we won't have to take time off for the honeymoon. Especially since we just took two weeks of paternity leave off. But holy hell, we have so many birthdays in this next twelve days. Today is Ronnie's fifteenth. And in two days? Two of our tiniest peanuts turn a year old! We have to do adorable pictures of smashed cakes and frosting covered faces.

It's going to feel really weird though, celebrating Dyl and Gabe's birthdays without Morgana. I mean, obviously she'll be there, but even though I consider them triplets, her birthday isn't for another three weeks.

And we have Blake's birthday on the seventeenth, our sweet little Luka on the nineteenth, and River on the twenty-first. But he'll be spending it in California with his family. Which is fine. It's FINE! We'll see him two days later, they're all coming in the day before the wedding. But it's not the same!

And on the twenty-second we have Bee and Rod. They're going to be eighteen. How did those teeny little babies become adults? I don't like it. I do not approve. I did not sign off on this.

Ugh, so many birthdays!

But not too many kids. Seriously, fuck Robards. Twenty-one kids is too many. Excuse you arsehole, no one has ever asked you to babysit them, pay for them, raise them, you can suck it.

Eew, and you know who can not suck it? Corbin. No fucking thank you man! I would know someone else was polyjuicing into you from a mile away. Nuh-uh, never gonna happen.

Anyway, look, twenty-one kids is obviously a LOT of kids. But if we don't think it's too many, and we can afford them, and they are all well-loved and well-adjusted, then it's our life to live. Our kids don't seem to think there are too many of them. They adore all their brothers and sisters. Even if none of them (so far) want to have such a big family themselves, I've never heard a single one of them complain about missing out due to the size of our family.

And Cassie! Oh did you see her face light up when she realized we'll eventually be trying for another baby? She doesn't seem to think there are too many kids in her family! And every one of our children was loving and sweet and excited to welcome Nora into the family.

Although, I will say, I don't think there are too many kids, but some of them have become a little too bloodthirsty. The little savages think Aurors go around murdering every person sent to Azkaban? Hehe, Ass Cabin.

Then again, they probably hide their soft side under that scary veneer. Just like our Viona. Such a hard arse in the business world, but the squishiest inside. I could see her at Friday's family meeting practically crumbling underneath her Malfoy mask. My sweet Princess. She's going to make such a fantastic mum!

Okay, enough rambling. I had free time to write between classes, but I should be spending this time a little more productively .... WEDDING PLANNING!

Twelve Days!!!

Your Fiance,
Harry
Thursday March 15th
The flames of my heart,

Today was the day that we've been waiting for for weeks. ALL three of our Mind Healers were available for a joint session at a time when WE were all available. Yes, I will admit that most of it is my fault for working nights when everyone else works days. I had tonight and tomorrow off anyway (and most of next week) to deal with the wedding preparations, so, our mind Healers decided that this time worked for them as they were actually all off work for the day.

So, I feel like real progress was made. I talked about my concerns - that had more or less all come up in my recent meditation, so I had them all fresh in my mind. And you both stated your concerns. And I think we reached a reasonable compromise. Only I'm not entirely certain because it seems to be the same compromise we already had, only with a few added stipulations.

Basically, I wanted the two of you to let me flirt like I have been and trust that I WILL NOT take things too far. And in return, you've both asked that I keep the descriptions of it to myself. For example, don't use the word gorgeous. Don't leave your sight to snog someone, even if I'm basically trying to trick them into saving themselves.

Alright, I know that from your perspective, I'm probably skipping the really important stuff to focus on the things that just don't matter as much, but you know how much I hate talking about my feelings. It's enough that I talked about them in the session, I don't have to mention them here!

So, maybe it's actually better for our records if YOU recap this day, Harry. You can talk about all the emotions without wanting to go to the Crystal room and hex yourself into temporary oblivion.

And Oliver love, I know that this email thing of ours isn't your thing, but if you want to add your thoughts and impressions of the session, maybe that'll be for the best?

Love you both too damn bloody much!
Draco
Chapter 240

Chapter Summary

First Harry recaps their session. Then Draco expands on it.

Chapter Notes

See the end of the chapter for notes

Thursday March 15, 2018

Really Draco?

You're really going to make me do today's recap? Not that I can't, but almost twenty years of being together you still can't quite admit to your emotions? I love you, but it's not weak to cry. If anything, I would say that you admitting to your feelings, allowing yourself to cry, and then admitting it happened shows an amazing strength. Especially in your case since you had such a long hard road getting here.

I am very proud of how far you've come and I will absolutely do the recap if you'd like. We all know our Oliver - who is apparently pretty darn proficient in computer knowledge and use - isn't going to! I'm just teasing you love. I get that this email stuff just isn't your thing. It's alright by me. You know I'm just being silly. If I can't tease the loves of my life who can I tease?

Well, the session was certainly an emotionally exhausting few hours. I know I'm a cryer, and I have no embarrassment admitting to that! But it was a lot of crying even for me. I ended up with quite the headache and my eyes hurt. As soon as I'm done writing this I think I will be taking a mid-evening nap. I don't want to sleep the entire rest of the day away, I don't want to mess up my sleep cycle and have my body end up thinking something like 3:00 A.M. is an acceptable time to wake up in the "morning." As much as I'd kind of like to go to bed and hibernate for a full twenty-four hours minimum, I will be setting myself an alarm to make sure I can still go to bed at a reasonable time tonight.

We were all three at the session obviously, and we had all three of our mind healers there, and it was so intense I feel as though I could never forget what we discussed. But I've made that mistake before, thinking I'd remember what was said or done forever, only to find out that time faded things. Or our own biases mean that we ended a conversation where we all felt as though we were on the same page, only to eventually realize we each interpreted the outcome differently.

Which is why, even though I won't do a word for word recount seeing as that's not my style, I am going to try and write out, as plainly as possible, precisely what we agreed upon and why.

I want to apologize to start with. I'm so glad we did this with the mind healers because I don't think any of us went into the session looking at things from each others' perspectives. Oliver and I had our feelings hurt when the most recent flirting/snogging-going "too far" situation happened while we were in France. You were initially mad and then supremely apologetic. We talked and we all love each other, but the weeks between the incident and this session included a lot of Draco apologizing over and over again while Oliver and I kept forgiving and forgiving.
Ollie and I didn't take any responsibility for our own part of the misunderstandings. First, we came up with a set of guidelines to playing or flirting, and Draco never specifically violated any of them. We were both so upset, angry, hurt, emotional, but ultimately our feelings might have been hurt but Draco you never actually did anything outside of things we had previously told you were acceptable. How is that fair to you? You have your loves giving you the cold shoulder, crying, and making you feel like a monster when you had every reason to think your actions had been within the limitations we'd all agreed to.

That was unfair. Not the part where we were hurt, because whether or not it was against our rules, we WERE hurt. We have every right to change our minds or become aware that the things we had previously agreed to once in practice were actually hurtful. But it does not give us the right to make you apologize or make you feel like you've done something wrong. Either we didn't realize when creating the guidelines that they would be upsetting, or we agreed to limitations even though we knew we weren't okay with them. We can't fault you for acting in a way we told you we were fine with.

Or at the very least, you may have violated what WE interpreted the limits to be, but all three of us had completely different ideas of what constitutes flirting or what is taking things "too far." That doesn't make what you did WRONG, it just means we need to be more specific in whatever we all agree to.

Also, it's not your fault that Oliver and I have both been victims of emotional abuse in the past. We both have battled low self-esteem, low self-worth, and feeling as though we are not enough. We both keep saying that YOU are making US feel we're not enough. Well maybe we need to stop projecting that on you. We already felt unworthy. We already felt "less-than." We used your actions to justify our own self-loathing. It's as though we took one comment too many about someone else's beauty as proof of our own inadequacy.

I don't know if I'm describing this particularly well, but it's the best I can do right now.

Harry - Oliver here - I think you're doing well. I would agree that you and I were both projecting our feelings and using Draco's action to define ourselves as inadequate.

Thanks love, glad you're here with me for this. Let me know if I forget anything, yeah?

I have to own my actions, I need to admit faults where I've made them. I overreacted to your actions. I used my own unhealthy feelings towards myself to blame you. And I definitely acted as though I was completely without fault and you were one hundred percent to blame. That is untrue and unfair. I know I already apologized in the session, but I want it in writing as well. I am sorry I hurt you. I love you Draco Lucius Malfoy.

Draco - I'm sorry as well and I also love you very much - Oliver

But ... you knew there was going to be a but didn't you? Of course you knew now since you were in the mind healing session, but I wonder if you knew at the time there was going to be a but?

But! Realizing we were also responsible doesn't mean you were completely in the right either, Draco. Whether or not you were abiding by the letter of the agreement, I think you realize you were pushing the limits. Even doing so in an attempt to save someone doesn't mean you should have done what you did. You have known for quite a while that both Ollie and I were uncomfortable with how you've flirted. We've had this same fight so many times, you take the flirting to the extreme, Ollie and I break down, we sob that we don't feel like we're enough, you get furious that we assume we're not enough, and get defensive about us being upset.
Lather, rinse, repeat.

At some point, when you could recognize your fiancés were not enjoying the flirty playtime as it was happening, you should have cared more about our feelings than you did about proving your innocence. It just seemed to me that you were more concerned with proving your innocence and being right than you cared about the hurt feelings of the men you love.

But we also should have had a discussion with you instead of letting this whole situation fester. We could have easily told you "we aren't comfortable with the current parameters and we'd like to discuss them."

The basic issue I had, and Ollie seems to feel the same way, is that your flirting seemed to be about going as far as you were allowed to go because we are holding you back from things you enjoy. When you and I played in the past, even when we were on opposite sides of the room, we were in it together. You knew at all times what I was doing and who I was doing it with. But since we've had the flirting, snogging, and groping ban tentatively lifted, it's seemed more like you were using it as a way to get your rocks off and not as a way to increase our relationship's sexy times.

It's like you were focused on touching as many body parts on as many people as possible until we forcibly dragged you away. Again, that's us projecting, but it is how we felt. I've always felt our playtime was about US as the priority, using playtime to increase our own intimacy. And whether or not you broke any rules, I don't think you realize just how much of your recent flirting has seemed to have nothing to do with US.

So, one of the new limits is nothing happens outside of sight of each other. Obviously, same rules of our own triad remain. You do not have to wait for me to be there to do anything with Ollie, I don't have to wait for you to do anything with Ollie, and you and I don't need to wait for Ollie to do things together. That same rule holds true of playtime, if I'm in the loo but Ollie is still in the room watching you? You don't have to stop until I get back. But you can't take your flirting partner to some abandoned hallway out of our sight.

Obviously these rules go all three ways, I can't take some flirting partner to the hallway either, but seeing as that's neither mine nor Oliver's kink it's probably a moot point. Still, worth spelling out.

Here's the other specification, particularly based on your meditation and you feeling as though you were losing yourself. Flirting does not have to equal kissing, groping, grinding, or other playtime. We can and do accept that you are an incorrigible flirt. We know this about you, we love all of you and that includes that personality feature. However, you seem to think if you can't kiss someone or grope them that we are somehow stifling your flirting and therefore your entire personality. There are no limits to you being a flirt besides actually telling someone you will do something sexual with them that violates our feelings.

As an example; if you were to say to Hermione "Granger, you look positively delicious today. I could absolutely eat you up!" That is flirting. If you say to her, "Mmm, 'Mione, I would absolutely love to shag you into your desk!" That is promising something we're not comfortable with. Is that clear enough? If not, please let us know and we can give you more specific examples of things we wouldn't want you to say or you can give us examples of things you've said before that you found to be regular flirting and we can let you know if that is too far.

I think what it comes down to is, we need to be communicating our feelings. And checking in from time to time to make sure we're all still on the same page. You can't know we're upset if we don't tell you, you can't always know you've crossed a line if we don't explain to you where the line is.

And when it comes to you being on assignment or undercover. It's funny, because even though you've gone further sexually undercover than you have during a time we've been upset at you taking flirting too far, it bothers me much less. It's a job to you, I know you aren't enjoying yourself, I know you don't want what's happening. Even if it somehow manages to feel good, it is just part of your job. I can understand that. I hate it, don't get me wrong. But besides hating that you had to be violated to catch these despicable criminals, the shagging doesn't upset my jealousy. Again, besides hating that it had to happen at all, I am much more upset or jealous about you snogging random guys in the clubs than I am about you having had to actually sleep with people while undercover.

I think that's about it honestly. Step one: communicate. Step two: communicate. Step three: have more specific guidelines as to what we're all comfortable with. Step four: communicate again. Step five: remember that this is hard because we all love each other so passionately. If we didn't love you so much none of this would bother us.

Always,
Your Harry - and Oliver

Thursday March 15th,
Dearest Harry,

Oliver I'm addressing this bit specifically to Harry, not to push you out of it, but because I'm going to be talking about things he brought up. I'll get to your concerns in a bit.

So, Harry, I think you did a really good recap of our joint session, but I feel like I should add a few things that you thought were important at the time, but seemed to have omitted from your recount. I get why though, they are my issues and you probably felt like bringing them up for the record would upset me.

But how am I ever going to fully deal with and get past my issues if I don't talk about them? Or rather, let you talk about them, haha.

You were really rather concerned about my recent meditation in which I basically got lost in my mind for a few days. Things came up in my description that upset you outright, and merely worried you on the second hand. I think the thing you were most concerned about was the part where I had a version of Vince in my mind taunting me about being submissive and not in control of my life - like it was a bad thing.

First of all, I do understand that everything that happened in my mind WAS an aspect of me - or at least that's what Yesenia continually tells me. However, I don't necessarily think that means that I personally BELIEVE what was being said in the way it was being said. In that instance, I really think Vince using the word submissive was completely wrong for what he was describing. Even at the time all of that stuff was happening, I was never submissive.

Sure, I was honestly trying to do what the Dark Lord had ordered me to, and I was trying to be a good servant to him - in a way - but at the same time, I was rebelling in my mind and heart. I was doing my best to accomplish my tasks without actually harming anyone. I think part of it might even have been me subconsciously stalling in the hopes that someone or something (perhaps even YOU) would step up and fix things.

Meaning defeat the Dark Lord. We've talked about this all the way back to the beginning of our marriage, Harry, and come to the agreement that I was the world's worst Death Eater. I was talented enough to be promoted to the highest rank of the Inner Circle, in essence Inheriting my father's temporarily vacated spot, but I wasn't good enough to actually, erm... go through with it...

See? You two aren't the only ones with issues of not feeling good enough.

And that's what I actually think the part of me represented by Vince was getting at; that I was FEELING like I wasn't good enough to make my own decisions or control my own life. Sort of like I was always bragging about how I was BETTER than everyone else, and that I was going to possibly be as great as the Dark Lord himself someday, but when it comes right down to it, I can't do anything without permission.

THAT'S actually... well... an issue I have to deal with and get past.

Perhaps not even the fact that I was - sigh... Crying... Let me pause for a moment and address the crying thing. I never have and never will feel that crying is a weakness. I utterly believe that being able to do what needs to be done even when crying (such as talk about ones feelings) is the highest form of strength, but I just can't help the ingrained belief that it is not the done thing. That if a person must cry, it should always be in private to avoid imposing on another person. And so, whenever I deny crying, it's not because I feel ashamed by DOING it, it's that I feel embarrassed that I did it IN FRONT of others.

It might ultimately be the same thing, and a fatal flaw in my personality, but there it is.

Anyway, not even the fact that I was crying while talking about the fact that I sometimes (or maybe a lot of the time) feel like I am not in control of my own life, well I don't think either of you truly registered that. You both seemed focused on your own guilt for projecting your feelings on me, and for finally apologizing for making me feel horrible about something I personally feel was a win - rescuing a kid - even though I went about it in a questionable way.

See, you hit the nail on the head when you said that we had different definitions of 'too far' in which you both think any action - agreed to or not - is too far if it's not directly in your sight so that you can supervise me and see for yourselves that I'm not taking things to the point that I define as too far. The point where I actually do things that go beyond flirting and become genuinely sexual with the INTENT of shagging or at least climaxing without either of you.

I think the part that frustrates me most is I now feel (and have for a while) that neither of you can possibly trust me like you say you do if you assume that the moment I'm out of sight - for example, kissing a stranger in a secluded hallway - that I'm going to take that from kissing to full on shagging against the wall. I'm actually not interested in that.

Let's pick apart the incident in the Labo. I went to the loo on my own, and at that point - from my perspective - the both of you trusted that I had no ulterior motives. Indeed I didn't. I went to the loo, conducted my business, and then returned to the dance floor. The actual problem occurred when the person that had piqued my interest followed me.

Yes, he had piqued my interest on a base level, but notice how (even though I glossed over it), my FIRST concern was the fact that you two were together and having fun. You'd stopped putting on a show for me and were focused on simply having fun. You'd stopped putting on a show for me and were focused on simply having fun. THAT'S the part that bloody turns me on to no end!!!

Only, BECAUSE I was interested in Jules - and at first it wasn't really a concern so much as a feeling that something wasn't quite right, and also some attraction. I made a decision to take advantage of the attraction to see if I could figure out what it was that was triggering something in me. Now that I've had a few weeks to think about it, I THINK I might actually have been feeling that nameless thing that Harry felt when he wandered all around Paris not knowing what was wrong, but eventually finding Nora's magic tugging at him.

I wasn't necessarily feeling magic tugging at me - as I am reasonably certain that Jules doesn't have any magic - BUT he does seem to be a squib. He could have potentially inherited magic from his mother, and I think that he may have actually inherited so little that he can't use it - hence being a squib - but that he can sort of put that tiny little bit into his, erm, goals and intentions - if you will.

For example, he said it outright and I seemed to witness the tail end of it, that he liked giving men head and that he never fails to leave them dreamy and satisfied. He took his tiny spark of a gift and turned it to his advantage. The Slytherin in me admires that.

Back to my point before you accuse me of rambling to avoid it. Where I was going with this is that the more I was around Jules, the stronger my feeling got that something wasn't right. I went from a vague and indefinable feeling to actual concern, and at that point, I committed to doing whatever it took to get to the bottom of it and 'solve the case.'

I can clearly see that THIS is why you both got so concerned. I know you both know that I really will do whatever it takes to do what I consider my job. In this particular case, it's not a paid job, just my uncontrollable urge to 'save every stray I can' - as you so often put it Harry.

So I recognize that even if you HAD thought that I wasn't just playing to get off - that I MIGHT have had a altruistic reason for what I was doing - you would have both been concerned about how far I would go in order to do what I felt I had to.

Back to my perspective on the situation. I said it in my original email that I understood that my actions looked bad, but that I assumed that Harry would trust that I wasn't doing what it looked like, and that hopefully (this bit wasn't stated), he would explain it to Oliver so that both of you would trust that I was doing something important. Especially once I literally disappeared from the club.

I mean honestly! WHEN in the bloody hell have I EVER disappeared from your sight specifically to sneak off and shag some random bloke?!?!

Thus, when I read how upset and hurt you both were, my first reaction was to apologize because I understood that all you saw was the bad part - the part when I 'snuck off' with some unknown twink, presumably to play in the hallway. It looked bad. BUT then I got angry, and it was an immediate and hot anger that I just couldn't rationalize away because I was HURT that neither of you trusted me long enough to be calm and wait to see if there was a rational explanation.

I expected you both to insist that I take Veritaserum or maybe print up the memory so that you could verify for yourselves that I really hadn't gone too far, in my definition, meaning that I hadn't touched him with the intent to shag him, and also repeatedly insisted that it wasn't going to happen.

I don't know, I guess that I usually do have such control over my emotions that even when I'm literally crying about something, it just doesn't seem as, erm… Serious? Important? Real? As your feelings, because both of you have such intense feelings that you talk about ALL THE TIME.

So, my issues that I need to work on are that I feel untrustworthy AND not in control of my life.

Now this is a bad example, but it's the most recent, so I'll use it. For example, most people - when ordered to do something for a job - might have to say: "Oh, erm, I have to think about this and discuss it with my loved ones." I have to say: "I'd love to, but I need to get permission from my husband and our Fiancé - that we're finally marrying in just 9 days! - before I can agree to anything.
Once again, as I said, I understand why. It was a hugely important thing, not just some order to pose as a delivery person in order to slip some camera bots into the suspect's house. Which sounds fun, if I'm honest. But at the same time, it's aggravating as fuck!

Also, yes, I know I know! It's NOT actually my job so much as my weirdo calling to do what I can when asked to.

So, to get back to you both being afraid or concerned about the fact that I seem to be acting more from a place of: Playing has become about doing everything I'm allowed and NOT keeping the focus on US, well...

You're not entirely wrong. I think I actually DID do that. As a sort of irrational rebellion. That came up in my meditation too, when I was upset myself that I have everything I want and need - and am truly grateful for it - and yet I always try to push and want more. I think without realizing it, I was acting like a teenager again - trying to push my limits until I felt like I would be trusted to NOT break them.

But I hope I've already covered that part adequately. Moving on. The other thing - Harry - that you were concerned about from my meditation was that I talked about having a lot of past issues and things in boxes. You felt this was alarming because - in your mind - it meant that I was boxing up and Occluding my feelings. And I can see why as that is generally how Occlumency works. But I want to reassure you once again that in this instance, it's just my way of constructing my mind palace. Everything is organized and in it's place so that I can easily find it when I need to. I learned a long time ago that Occluding anything inevitably leads to extremely painful breakdowns when I finally have to confront my issues.

Far more painful than the session we just had.

And Oliver, your biggest concern, which didn't make it into Harry's recap because even during the session, you more or less glossed over it, but I understand that it's bigger than you let on. Your biggest concern is that you're afraid that if you don't cave in and give me everything I want, I'll eventually call it quits. My love, I hope I can explain this in a reassuring way.

I'm not pushing my limits because I want you to abandon YOUR limits; I'm pushing because I am overreacting to those things I'm actually projecting on the both of you - such as the fear that I will never be trustworthy. I agreed to the stipulations added to our agreement - and be warned, I more than likely will push those to the exact letter of the agreement. Because I want you to feel safe and secure in our relationship, but I also want you to get to a point where once you do, it's BECAUSE you trust that even if I looked like I was shagging in secret in a closet, that I was really using the ruse as a deflection from something else entirely that I feel is important to me.

Also... and I left this for last because I hesitate to bring it up. I didn't even say it in session - aside from I may have babbled it incoherently while crying. I, erm... I'm starting to feel like...

Draco pauses and paces his closet in the Manor for a few minutes (where he's hiding so he can get through this emotional email in one piece, lol) while stroking his Komboloi

Sigh... I'm starting to feel like I'm the only one expected to compromise and not JUST follow through with it, but ALSO stick to the parts not said. For example, we originally compromised that if we went to a club or other place where we could do a bit of public fooling around as a sort of foreplay for ourselves, Oliver, you said explicitly that you wanted to see me do it, but every time it actually happens, you get upset. Alright fine, it's not your thing. I can accept that. That's why I agreed to abide by the limits you and Harry have given me. In theory, the compromise is that so long as I follow the rules, I get to play around, but from my perspective, it FEELS more like: You... don't want me to do anything at all, but are afraid of pushing me away by saying so, and so agree to give me a little of what I want, only to get mad or upset when I do the things I want.

Or in other words, I feel like there is no compromise. Simply an expectation that I will conform to your unspoken rules despite promises that I can be myself. "Yes Draco, go ahead and flirt and have fun, just don't actually flirt and have fun while you're doing it."

Please PLEASE don't feel like this is any sort of attack. I'm NOT trying to upset or put you on the defensive, simply that Harry is always going on and on about how I need to be honest about my feelings, and so that's what I'm trying to do. This is MY issue to deal with. It even came up in my meditation when I lay there wondering what was wrong with me that I want everything - even the things that I shouldn't want.

All I know at this point is that there must be something wrong with me because I can't just... stop.

So, to finish up this email - which might come across as a bit of an attack, even thought that is NOT my intention - I once again promise that I will uphold my part of the compromise we made, and I will go so far as to hope that we reach a point in the future where an actual compromise is not needed because we all trust that in any given moment, not a single one of us will actually go too far.

… I normally sign off with a lyric, but I can't find one that feels appropriate for this email...

So...

All my heart,

Draco

Chapter End Notes

So, warning, as you probably caught, this chapter reignites the argument. The next chapter hashes everything out rather brutally, thus WARNING! Angst and Major Drama ahead.
Chapter 241

Chapter Summary

Harry and Draco FIGHT while Oliver tries to mediate.

Chapter Notes

Since I'm home from my birthday festivities, I decided it's the perfect time to post again :-)

See the end of the chapter for more notes

Draco,

I'm addressing this bit to you because it's directed at you.

Fuck. Off.

No, seriously, get the fuck out of here with your fucking bullshite. I am so mad at you right now I can't see straight. I just. You.

You're the only one having to compromise? You? I know we each have our own perspective, I know we all see things from our own point of view. But honestly? I can see where you've compromised. I can see where you've made sacrifices or altered your personal wants to keep the peace. But you truly can't see where ... and you know what? I am going to leave Oliver out of this because he can speak for himself. I will not put words in his mouth. But you truly can't see where I have made compromises?

Fuck. You.

I have hated every single moment of playtime for the last year. I have hated the flirting and groping and dancing. I feel filthy and disgusting every time I let some stranger touch me. You know why? Because I look to you to make sure you're as turned on as you always have been, I turn to my love to make sure I've pleased him. I do so love to be your good little mutt. But oddly enough, you're almost never looking. You're enjoying yourself. Letting loose. Getting out from under the thumb of your oppressive, controlling, monstrous spouse/fiancé.

I used to love performing for you. Because at the end of the day it was always about us. But somehow, since we've brought Oliver into our relationship, you seem to think if I'm distracted enough with him that I won't need your attention, your affection, your care. Oh Harry, he'll be fine, he's with Oliver, now let me go shove my tongue down some twink's throat.

Well, I'm not fine. Oh poor little Draco, his husband, who hasn't felt as though he's loved by you for a long time now, is cutting all of the fun out of his life. What an absolute monster that Harry is, he doesn't want his husband getting his fucking dick wet in or on someone else. Poor, sad, Draco, has two men insanely in love with him and it's still not fucking enough. His need for validation from strangers is more important than Harry or Oliver's feelings.

You don't want me to feel attacked? Too fucking bad.

I've NEVER said I didn't want you out of my sight so I could SUPERVISE you. It was because I thought playing was something we did together to increase our own intimacy. But I was a naïve moron apparently. I should have known it, I'm so goddamn stupid. I thought playing was about US. But it's about YOU. I don't need to babysit you, but how am I supposed to get hot watching you snog some stranger if I can't SEE YOU snogging the stranger? I thought that was the pull? I guess not.

The other night? You were so bloody turned on that we had switched from putting on a show to actually enjoying ourselves? You know WHY I finally admitted to being hurt? Because I didn't have complete control over my emotions, because I had to get utterly pissed to perform. I didn't need to blow of steam that night, you did. I didn't need a break from my new daughter and my other children, you did. I didn't need the release of anonymous sex, you did. I needed to bury my rage and sadness and hurt under a mountain of whiskey. It's probably why I was so mean when you came back to the hotel, because I was coming down from my drunken high.

I didn't lose myself in the moment and start enjoying myself. I got drunk enough to forget I was hating every moment. I focused on Ollie being in my arms when I was close to freaking out.

I did things physically, sexually, groping, and grinding, that I did not want to do. For you. Because I got myself drunk enough to forget whose hands were on my body ... and whose weren't. I'm disgusting. I'm disgusted. I'm ashamed of myself. No matter how mad I am at you right now I loathe myself a million times more.

Poor poor poor Draco, he has to ask his husband for permission before he goes undercover and fucks someone else. What a nightmarish life you lead. How dare I care about whether or not you put yourself in danger. How dare I care about you getting mindlessly fucked by a criminal bad enough to need an entire undercover mission devoted to them.

Don't you worry your pretty little head for another fucking minute. You never need my permission for anything ever again. Fuck who you want. Raid where you want. Do whatever the fuck you please. You never have to answer to me again. I do not fucking care anymore. Hope that helps.

Here's a fucking lyric for you;

As I walk this land with broken dreams, I have visions of many things. But happiness is just an illusion, filled with sadness and confusion,

Harry

---------------------------------

Draco,

You should probably come home. Or not. Or do. I don't know, I have never seen Harry like this. I thought he was mad, he seemed mad the entire time he was writing to you. Except he didn't tag me in it. He didn't show me what he wrote. And now, I wish he was angry. I wish he was going Rage Halo Harry. But he's just staring at the wall with dead eyes.

I've never seen him so despondent.

Love,

Oliver
Harry!

I've been hiding in our closet in the Manor waiting for a response from you, because I wasn't certain if it was going to be an understanding acknowledgment that I had FINALLY admitted to feelings I've kept buried, or if you were going to be upset and hurt but willing to talk more about our respective feelings. I wanted to know what to prepare for before coming back.

But then I got your email and now I'm filled with so much rage! How dare you encourage me to be honest about my feelings, and then misinterpret and GET MAD about them! I'm just so...

You know what, I'm too angry to NOT fight with you in person!!!

Draco takes his laptop and floos back to their Quarters, before essentially tossing it aside on a chair. The dictation device kicks in automatically as programmed, but Draco's been working on it's capabilities, adding basic descriptions too.

"FUCK YOU!!!" Draco roars, casting a minor blasting hex at a vase next to Harry.

"FUCK YOU MORE!!!" Harry roars in return, shattering a picture of picnic being invaded by ants behind Draco.

"NO!!! FUCK YOU MORE!!!" Draco shouts at the top of his lungs, seeing red and wondering what else he can shatter.

"NO!!! FUCK YOU MORE!!!" Harry returns, physically picking up a book to hurl at Draco.

"MERLING BLOODY DAMNIT!!! IF I DIDN'T FUCKING LOVE YOU SO MUCH, I'D FUCKING PUNCH YOU IN THE TEETH RIGHT NOW!!!" Draco half threatened, pointing at Harry accusingly.

"YEAH?!?! WELL FUCKING SAME TO YOU, YOU BLOODY ARSEHOLE!!!"

The two are standing across the room from each other because they don't want to risk actually throwing a punch. Draco summons his favorite statue of a Marmoset to throw instead. Harry dodges it and tosses a statue of a fox.

"FUCK YOU!"

"FUCK YOU!"

"FUCK YOU!"

"FUCK YOU!"

Things are flying back and forth, creating a rapidly growing debris field around them.

"STOP BLOODY ARGUING!!!" Oliver roars over the both of them.

"STAY OUT OF THIS!!!" Both shout at him.

"NO!!! I BLOODY WILL NOT!!!" Oliver sticks to his convictions. "YOU'RE BOTH ACTING LIKE FUCKING BRATS AND I WILL NOT HAVE IT!!!"

This actually succeeds in calming them down just enough to stop shouting. Unfortunately, they aren't saying anything at all.

Taking a deep breath and wiping the sides of his face with both hands, Oliver calmly continues. "Now, let's start with Draco. Draco, why in the bloody fuck are you so mad?"

Draco inhales a sharp breath to start shouting again, but growls and clenches his fist tightly as he tilts his head to the side and closes his eyes. Once he succeeds in summoning up his patience, he grounds out: "I FEEL like the two of you don't accept me for who I am. Ever since BEFORE Harry and I actually got together, back when we had literally JUST agreed to try dating, I warned him that I was a flirt who had a habit of snogging others when I got drunk, and that if he saw it happening, to just remind me that I was taken now. It just so happens that THAT incident ended with me punching Dimitri out, but I've been utterly honest since THE VERY BEGINNING!!"

He takes another breath and starts pacing. "And after we'd been married a while and both felt secure in our relationship, Harry told me straight out that me being a flirt and kissing others doesn't bother him - that he understands that it's a part of who I am and accepts that about me. For YEARS, we have been a TEAM!!! We have been in this life together 100 percent!!! When things like this have popped up over the years - the surprisingly RARE bumps in the road - it's usually because one or both of us was being less than honest about underlying issues that ultimately have nothing to do with my being a flirt who kisses everyone at the drop of a hat! Things that blow up using that as a catalyst!"

A loud growl of frustration. "BUT NOW IT FEELS LIKE THE TWO OF YOU ARE TEAMING UP AGAINST ME!!! THAT EVERYTHING WE HAD AGREED ON IS NO LONGER ACCEPTABLE AND I'M THE ONLY ONE WHO HAS TO CHANGE!!"

Harry decides not to wait for Oliver to say anything. "HOW DARE YOU USE MY OWN WORDS OF ALL OF THIS BEING ABOUT US AGAINST ME!!! TWISTING THEM INTO ME BEING AN IDIOT FOR FEELING LIKE YOU ARE NO LONGER A COMMITTED PART OF US!!"

"GODDAMNIT HARRY!!! YOU ARE THE VERY BLOOD IN MY VEINS!!! I LIVE AND BREATHE FOR YOU AND OLIVER!!! I WAKE UP AND GET OUT OF BED FOR THE TWO OF YOU!!! WITHOUT YOU, I PROBABLY WOULD BE A RECLUSE WHO NEVER LEAVES THE MANOR!!!"

"YEAH, WE'LL FUCK YOU, DRACO!!! I LOVE YOU SO MUCH THAT THE THOUGHT THAT YOU ARE PULLING AWAY FROM US HAS ME SICK TO MY STOMACH!!"

"I'M NOT PULLING AWAY FROM YOU!!! YOU ARE TEAMING UP TO PUSH ME AWAY!!! DO THIS DRACO, DON'T DO THIS DRACO - LIKE I'M A BLOODY FUCKING CHILD THAT THE TWO OF YOU SUDDENLY REALIZED THAT YOU HAVE TO REIN IN BEFORE MY REBELLION GETS OUT OF HAND AND I HURT MYSELF!!"

"THAT'S BECAUSE YOU'RE BLOODY ACTING LIKE A FUCKING CHILD!!!"

Oliver sighs and pulls on his hair a bit. "STOP!!! This is getting us nowhere! Alright Draco, you're feeling suppressed, unaccepted - and if I remember your email correctly, untrusted. You've admitted to rebelling like a teenager in an attempt to push your boundaries back to where you'd like them, and also complained that our teaming up 'against you' has you feeling not in control of your life. That's a lot to process. HARRY. What are YOUR biggest reasons for being angry right now?"

"ONE! Draco's definition of 'too far' is WAY TOO BLOODY FAR!!! I don't want him kissing ANYONE in a more than friendly manner WITHOUT the intent of it being FOR or INCLUDING US!!! TWO! Draco seems to think flirting is MORE than just speaking in a flirtatious manner! That kissing, GROPING, and WHATEVER he wants that isn't directly SHAGGING is simple flirting and should be allowed!"

"IT IS!!!" Draco roars emphatically. "Because the INTENT is nothing more than a bit of harmless fun before returning to what I really want: THE TWO OF YOU!!!"

"BUT WHY DO YOU FUCKING NEED TO WARM UP WITH OTHERS?!?!?!!" Harry demands.

"I DON'T!!! I ONLY EVER DO THIS SORT OF THING WHEN AND ONLY WHEN WE GO OUT SOMEPLACE WHERE THIS SORT OF THING CAN HAPPEN! THE REST OF THE TIME, I'M NOT EVEN THINKING ABOUT OTHERS BECAUSE NO ONE CAN HOLD A CANDLE TO THE TWO OF YOU!!!"

Oliver holds out his hands to stop them. "Let me get a word in, please." Both his fiancés close their mouths and look at him. "What is it about playing that you NEED, Draco?"

Draco takes a moment to think this through carefully. With a helpless sigh and a shake of his head, he tries to explain. "I'm not certain I'll ever be able to explain it in a way that you'll understand, but I'll try. Let's set the scene a bit: Early on, Harry and I were in a crowded place at Glastofest, and he was in his puppy costume while I was on the other side of the room. We were connected by ONLY an invisible and intangible leash. He was doing his thing and I was doing mine, and we were both having fun TOGETHER even though it was also completely separate."

He paced a bit as he sought the perfect words to come next. "Now, keep that same scenario in mind. Let's say that I turned into a snake. As a snake, I might pretend to ignore my prey - which in case it wasn't blatant is Harry. I might circle the room and try my hand at catching other prey. I MIGHT make it seem like I haven't even NOTICED my true prey, but all the while, I'm watching him. Keeping ALL my senses on him. Giving him a false sense of freedom before I coil up and strike."

This didn't seem to come across in an understandable way, so Draco sighed and tried again. "The most recent example, Harry says that he felt that I wasn't watching the two of you, and that made him feel like he had to get drunk to forget. Yet I stated in my original email and AGAIN in my more recent email that my first concern was the two of you. That while I was reasonably certain that the two of you were having fun doing your own thing, I could do my thing of stalking you from a distance. The only problem is that I got sidetracked."

"The ONLY problem?!!" Harry snapped angrily.

"Alright fine! NOT the ONLY problem but rather the START of the problems!" Draco admitted in a frustrated yell. "But look at this from my perspective, Harry! IF YOU had traded places with me that night to sneak off with someone else, I would have been concerned and I probably would have tried to follow and maybe even spy on you. BUT when it became apparent that you were doing something OUT OF CHARACTER, I would have bit my lip and let you get on with whatever it was until you could come back and explain things to me."

Draco flung his hands out to illustrate his point. "I TRUST YOU MORE THAN I TRUST MYSELF!!! NAME ONE BLOODY TIME IN OUR RELATIONSHIP THAT I HAVE EVER SAID THAT I DON'T WANT YOU TO DO SOMETHING!!! OR! OR! CAN YOU EVEN RECALL A TIME WHEN I'VE SAID THAT I DON'T PARTICULARLY LIKE A THING YOU WANT TO DO, BUT THAT I'LL BITE IT BACK AND LET YOU GET ON WITH IT?!?!? NAME ONE TIME WHEN I WAS LESS THAN 100 PERCENT ON BOARD WITH ANYTHING YOU'VE WANTED TO DO!!!"
"FUCK YOU!!! THAT'S ONLY BECAUSE I NEVER PUSH THE BOUNDARIES LIKE YOU DO!!!

"FUCK YOU!!! IT'S BECAUSE I ACCEPT YOU FOR WHO YOU ARE 100 PERCENT AND NEVER TRY TO LIMIT OR RESTRICT YOU! IF SOMEONE PISSES YOU OFF AND YOU WANT TO THROW YOURSELF INTO DANGER TO GIVE THEM A PIECE OF YOUR MIND, I'LL SIT BACK AND EAT POPCORN WHILE I WATCH! OR IF I HAVE TO WAIT AT HOME SO THAT OUR KIDS HAVE ONE PARENT SHOULD THE WORST HAPPEN, I WOULD NEVER FOR A SECOND IMPLY THAT YOU HAVE TO ASK ME FOR PERMISSION BEFORE HEADING OFF TO GO SAVE THE BLOODY WORLD!!!"

Oliver looks from Harry to Draco to Harry, and notices that Harry seems to be temporarily too upset to properly respond. In fact his Rage Halo had finally popped up.

Growling in frustration, Oliver sighs and tries to redirect the conversation. "Alright. It seems that FIVE BLOODY hours of joint therapy today was CLEARLY not enough to get everything out in the open! But now that we HAVE gotten everything out - hopefully - let's see if we can find a resolution."

Draco points at Oliver. "NO! YOU have this habit of breaking down and crying to Harry AFTER I've hurt you, but NOT just coming out and saying whatever's on your mind to begin with before it becomes a bloody problem! I want YOU to tell US what it is that you DIDN'T say in therapy!"

Oliver hems and haws for a minute, shifting from foot to foot and fidgeting. "I... I... erm... well... I - I WANT YOU TO PROVE TO ME THAT YOU ARE 100 PERCENT FULLY COMMITTED TO ME LIKE YOU ARE HARRY!"

Draco raises a brow, his curiosity piqued. "Alright... how?"

Oliver takes a few deep breaths and looks a bit like he wishes he had a bag to breathe into. "I want you to promise not to kiss or play with or flirt with anyone at ALL from now until at least three months after we get married." Oliver mumbled so incoherently that neither heard him clearly.

"You want what?" Draco asks in confusion.

More deep breaths. "I want you to promise... NOT to do any sort of playing with others AT ALL - not even kissing... Until at least three months after we get married. Don't do it and don't even mention WANTING to do it!"

Draco looked defeated for a moment and closed his eyes so that he could think with a semblance of privacy. "Alright," he agreed, opening his eyes to look at Oliver and prove his seriousness. "I can promise that. And I'll ALSO promise not to start chomping at the bit should you happen to forget to revisit this subject at the three month mark. You see, the point was NEVER about whether or not I could play around, it was that I wanted you to reassure me that you trusted me that even if I DID flirt with or kiss someone, you wouldn't feel jealous or uncomfortable that it actually meant something to me. But I guess that I can't expect you to trust me when I haven't EARNED your trust. So I'll promise and I'll stick to it and I won't complain nor mention it. Just please try to remember to let me know when I've proven to you that I'm in this for life. Now if you'll excuse me, I have to go get something I forgot in our closet in the Manor."

Draco grabs his laptop and hits send before leaving.

No sign off.
So... now that you've read the fight, can you see it? There's something else going on and it's being kept a secret. One of us was real sneaky and sly about it too, but the hints have been there, so maybe you caught it?
Good Morning Draco and Oliver,

Outside of yesterday's screaming fit I had a few things I would like to say now that I am calm.

I'm sorry I screamed, shouted, and cussed like a fool. I should not have let my anger overtake me that way. Nothing is accomplished when things spiral into screaming and throwing things. I am not sure what I was thinking, it was inappropriate and unhelpful. I'm very glad Ollie was able to calm us down and the two of you were able to come to a loving compromise where you both felt heard and loved.

I am also sorry for misinterpreting your original comment about compromise. I took you saying "I'm starting to feel like I'm the only one expected to compromise" as though you were saying you were the only one expected to compromise. Obviously I should have known that's not what you were saying.

I am sorry that we all have such different definitions of flirting. I thought there was a difference between flirting and flirtatious kisses and snogging, I thought there was a difference between snogging and having someone else's hands down my pants, I should have known that anything short of anal or vaginal penetration is just harmless flirting. I now know that to love someone means accepting every single thing they want to do forever otherwise you're an unsupportive control freak.

I am very sorry for thinking I was allowed to feel differently about things over time. I can't believe I'm not the exact same person I was at nineteen years old and had the audacity to change how I felt about something.

I know what I said all those years ago. I said I understand you're a flirt and a little flirting and kissing was fine by me because I didn't want to change who you were. I stand by that actually. I haven't changed my mind. I just didn't realize how different our definitions of flirtatious kissing were. I suppose it does seem confusing and "all of a sudden" to you. Because we were talking about two completely different things.

I meant what I said in my last email. You don't have to ask me for permission ever again. Please don't. You don't need it, but for ever after you have my express permission to do any thing you possibly want to do for all time. Let me know if you need this signed or notarized.

I know we talked about going to lunch today to do lunch, cake sampling, and make some last minute decisions for next weekend. I'm going to have to raincheck. I have way too much work to do, I need to catch up from all the time off I've taken and maybe even try to get ahead before everyone leaves for Hols. Have fun you two, pick some yummy cake.

See you later,
Harry

Friday March 16th
Dear Harry and Oliver,

Hello my loves. First of all, I need to apologize for my behavior last night. I was feeling emotionally raw and defensive and let my reactions get out of hand. I may also have abandoned the fight just when it seemed like things were going to be resolved peacefully, and that makes me a coward and I shouldn't have run off like that. I assure you that all I did was go back to our closet in the Manor like I said I was going to, and then stay there for the rest of the night.

As for today, despite the major fight that I'm quite certain is not fully resolved yet, I have every expectation that we WILL be able to work through this like we've worked through everything else in our life. Together. With love.

To that end, I kept my commitment to getting up early and heading off to the tailor for my final fitting while Oliver, you were meeting up with Neville to see what he has for the floral, er... leaf? Arrangement. We HAD planned to meet up for lunch before going to cake tasting, but it sounds like Harry might have canceled that. So Oliver, if you actually read this (or if you don't), I'm going to show up to lunch so that you're not left sitting alone on the chance you didn't get or read Harry's email.

Which I wouldn't blame you for, since you can't feel good being caught in the middle of an argument that is essentially the two of us exercising our explosive tempers. I'm so sorry about that, and as I said, I'll be there for lunch so that we can talk about things and maybe cement our current agreement now that no one is shouting.

That said, I might possibly be a tiny bit late. See, while I was walking from my tailor's shop to Gringott's to restock my pocket money (a couple of the kids hit me up again the other night), I was rather stupidly NOT paying attention to my surroundings, nor expecting to defend myself.

So, I'm currently at St. Mungo's having Rowe check me out. I don't THINK anything happened, but an unknown assailant popped up in front of me and cast a hex that seems to have had no effect on me. I was - as mentioned - completely unguarded, and also didn't have a chance to incarcerate the attacker before he or she Apparated away.

The important thing is that I feel fine and my own basic diagnostic spells revealed nothing, so I'm just having Rowe confirm them and I'll be on my way to lunch presently.

Love you like a love song,
Draco

Chapter End Notes
I know y'all are like: This is SO close to the wedding! EEK!
That was Chrissie's reaction too, she was like: ROXAANNNE! They're supposed to be getting married, why are we making them fight NOW???
And I was like: Because this shit needs to get out in the open and be resolved BEFORE they get married!
So, there is a light at the end of the tunnel ^_^
Chapter 243

Chapter Summary

Harry's sneakiness and all the underlying issues are revealed.

Chapter Notes

See the end of the chapter for notes

Friday March 16, 2018

Draco and Oliver,

I am a liar. Let's add that to my list of flaws. It is a long list. But the lying is probably the worst. I said I was going to do work instead of lunch and cake and I didn't do any work.

I came home. Not home to our rooms at Hogwarts. I went home to the manner. I needed to see our bed. I needed to see our room. I needed to see our wall of love. Pictures from a lifetime of loving. I was thinking if I looked at these memories then my passionate feelings, the ones that aren't being angry, would come rushing back to me.

I just felt sad. So very sad. I miss you both. I miss us. I miss me.

I thought I would find Luscious and have a nice day-drink with him. That's something that always lifts my mood and makes me overly obnoxious. But Lulu was busy. Something about not wanting to let Draco win, having to get back on top of the Malfoy business game. So I could have gone back to Hogwarts and done what I said I was gonna do. Or I could have gone to lunch like I said I would. But noooo, I said I was going to do the drinking and the drinking I should do.

It isn't as fun as when I do this with Lucy. No one is here to brag about my sexy times with. When I thought hiding under the table would be funny, it wasn't, I was just a sad loser under the table all by my self. I just feel sadder. Sad.

I then thought maybe it's what I was drinking. I was drinking my favorite red, but the other night when I was able to forget for just a minute when I was drinking whiskey so maybe I should switch drinks.

That didn't help. I'm not forgetting I just remember. I can't forget. I can't forget how terrible I am. How terrible I feel. I know how much you hate me being on the potions Draco. They're a crutch that you hate and think less of me for taking. I can't help it, I'm weak, and stupid, and unloveable.

I thought I would be more passionate when I wasn't dulling myself with potions but I feel worse. I don't feel more, I feel less.

Oh shite, I wasn't supposed to say anythi

Friday March 16th
Our darling Harry,
Oliver and I were just a few bites into our lunch when we received your email, and based on its contents and timing, I'm going to assume you hadn't even had a chance to read my previous email.

For the record, Healer Rowe confirmed that there was nothing wrong - so far as her scans could determine. There is nothing to worry about, that hex was either a dud or the caster didn't actually have any power and just wanted to scare or play a joke on me.

So, the moment I read your email, I knew we had to pack our food up to bring home. We returned to the Manor in about five minutes, and sure enough, you were under the table, just as you'd said. I couldn't help but smile at you as I got on my hands and knees and crawled to you. You were more than half out of it and I took advantage of this by running my hand through your perpetually wild hair and taking a good long whiff of your unique scent.

GODRIC I've missed you so much!

So, I delicately pulled you out from under the table, giving you kisses that you probably would have refused had you been aware and not half passed out from drinking. Then I looked up at Oliver.

"Isn't he the most adorable thing you've ever seen when he's drunk?"

Oliver wasn't expecting that and smirked. "Well, I suppose I prefer him when he's sober and looking at me like I'm the most precious thing in the world."

I grinned at that. "I understand. His gaze could melt the hardest heart and stop criminals in their tracks. Here, I'll help you pick him up, but then will you carry him to our bed? It's the weekend and we have a birthday party here anyway, so we might as well just stay here."

Oliver gave me a curious raised brow. "Can't you carry him yourself, or is he too heavy for you?"

I rolled my eyes. "I can most certainly carry him, I just want my hands free to call Katja."

"His Mind Healer? Why?" Oliver asked even as we worked to pick you up and cradle you safely in his arms.

"She needs to know that he's off his potions," I stated.

"He didn't say that," Oliver murmured with a frown.

"He as good as said it, and besides, I've actually been wondering if something was wrong for a while now. Harry hasn't quite been himself."

"How do you mean?" Oliver asked even as he oh so carefully carried you toward our suite.

"Our beloved is hot tempered, sure, but he's also usually quick to forgive. Like insanely quick to forgive. He even more or less forgave the Dark Lord!"

"That's a grudge that should have lasted forever!"

"Exactly!" I concurred. "But as I was saying, not only has he been even quicker to anger lately, but he's also been holding onto his anger, and maybe most telling of all, he has spent YEARS working past his issues and moving on, and he had basically succeeded, and now suddenly, they all seem to be back in full force."

"So... are you saying that the potions he takes basically occlude his true feelings, and now that he's off them, he's feeling everything he's ignored?" Oliver wondered with a concerned frown.

I shook my head. "It's not like that at all. Let's see how to explain it... Well, his childhood was traumatic enough that at a time when his brain was trying to develop normally, it developed slightly abnormally. This slight quirk makes it very easy for him to feel all of the emotions he felt in his childhood: depression, lack of self worth - basically everything bad. At the same time, it makes it harder for him to feel the good things, except for in short and somewhat unsustainable bursts."

Oliver hummed in thought. "So you're saying that because he's ever so slightly different than the rest of us, his, erm... default setting is depressed?"

"Basically, yes. Take the both of us, we both had more or less normal childhoods. We had parents who might have been strict at times, but clearly loved us. Our brains - despite the craziness of the war - managed to develop normally. Thus, when either of us encounters a trigger, we might spiral for a bit, but once we realize that we are doing this, we can sometimes choose to simply work through the issue, or maybe we need a temporary bit of help, but we have the ability to return to a normal, more balanced state of mind."

"Ah," Oliver stated in clarity. "But Harry can't do that without potions."

"Exactly," I agreed.

By this point, we'd reached our room in our suite and the two of us tenderly tucked you into bed to sleep off the alcohol. Oliver climbed into bed with you and held you like he would rather deflect a bombard with his bare hands than let you go any time soon. I was running my hands through your hair again.

As we sat there in otherwise silence, I made that call to Katja and informed her of the situation. She confirmed that I was correct in assuming that she had no idea what you'd done. With a sigh, she promised to come over later tonight when you'd have had a chance to sober up a bit without help. It was important to her that we didn't just jump into casting a sobering charm on you, or giving you a potion to negate the effects. Not yet anyway. Apparently, it'll be better for your current state of mind if your body is allowed to go through this process naturally.

Then I leaned over and kissed Oliver. "As much as I want nothing more than to stay here with you both until he wakes up and can see the both of us before anything else, I still have things to do. As per our agreement, I'm going to be handling the bulk of the wedding preparations while you two work - it was only a fluke that you both had today off - more or less." This was referring to how you both had your grading and planning to do, but that wasn't conducting any actual teaching. "So, I'm going to head off and do what I can while seriously distracted. I'll be back tonight before Katja arrives."

"Alright, see you then," Oliver murmured, pulling me a bit closer for a last kiss before I left. I used this closeness to give you a couple of kisses too, and then took off.

Having still been a little hungry, I decided to take a break after a couple of hours to get some ice cream and write this email. Harry, my love, I know that you are probably going to feel grumpy and still rather angry at me until your potions kick back in and clear your mind, so can we call a truce and wait to officially resolve our fight until you've had a couple of days on your potions?

With all my love - wait! I need to make something clear, just in case you are suddenly questioning everything. With our triad wedding coming up, and with all the drama and fighting we've been through recently, you might be wondering if I still love you and want to marry you. The answer to that is yes and always yes. Even if you COULDN'T take potions to help you feel normal, even if you were ALWAYS depressed and moody with almost no bursts of happiness, you are still such an ingrained part of my heart that I would rather argue with you for the rest of my life than not have you next to me.

Think about it like this: Oliver and you have similar issues and seem to get along better than either of you get along with me. I'm the rogue in this relationship, the wild card, the one who is motivated by: 1- the two of you, 2- the kids, and 3- my own selfishness. Meaning that I will ALWAYS choose to do things that meet one of those three criteria in unpredictable ways (or at least I like to think they're unpredictable), and that can be rough on the two of you who like to be stable and certain of everything at all times. When I do things that shake up your foundations, the two of you naturally want me to stop and just be a good little rock in your stability.

That maybe sounded bad, but my point is that I'm almost the opposite of the two of you, but even knowing that, I have never ONCE suggested that I would be better off without you both. NOR have I EVER suggested that you two would be better off without me. And that's because I truly feel that the three of us make a far more stable tripod together than any of us individually could manage. I would rather be fought with, subjected to the chaos that seems to follow you around like a puppy, and occasionally feel like I'm being harassed by your two similar expectations, then EVER be without either of you.

Because with the two of you supporting me, there's NOTHING I can't do!

Remember that Harry, if the next few weeks feel impossible to you. We've got you and we'll continue to support you through everything until you're feeling better again. I'm going to risk speaking for Oliver - who isn't here - WE LOVE YOU!

Forever,
Draco

Chapter End Notes

And y'all thought it was Draco that was hiding something, lol.
Saturday March 17, 2018

Good Morning,

I'm so sorry. I ... yeah, that's all I have. I am just so very very sorry. I wish I had something more to say. I wish I could wave my wand and make the last two months disappear. Take away all the mean words I said. Take away the pain I caused.

It's late morning. I just woke up about an hour ago. The two of you must be off getting party prep ready for tonight's March birthday festivities. Sorry I'm not being any help. But Katja felt pretty strongly that starting my potions back up last night after two months off meant I was likely to be a bit sleepy and possibly a little dizzy or confused so I should spend most of today resting, napping, or at the very least relaxing if I had any hope of going to tonight's celebrations.

I wish either of you had been in bed with me when I woke up, but the day was getting on. And erm, I suppose I don't blame you for not wanting to be around me much right now. I've not been a very good ... fiancé? husband? I haven't been a very good friend. And I think that's worse than all the other things. Neither of you had me to lean on, to have support them, you deserve more than what I've given you. Either of you.

I'm sorry if I'm being angry or grumpy. I know it's expected while I'm riding these stupid hormonal and chemical imbalances. If it helps at all, I don't feel angry. I don't feel grumpy (although that's REALLY all about perspective) I just feel sorry. And sad, confused, along with very embarrassed.

I thought, well I don't know what I thought. I wasn't thinking clearly obviously. I just, I kept thinking to myself how much you hate the dependency on potions. Or, erm, anything that you can't have complete control over. Draco, I mean, Ollie you've never mentioned one way or another caring whether or not I took mental health potions. I kept equating my need for potions to Ori's addictions. Or addiction in general. I couldn't stop that running through my head.

So in a remarkable lapse in judgment I stopped taking them. I figured if I started to feel badly I could just start up again. But once they were out of my system, my chemical imbalanced brain had me convinced I deserved to feel the way I was feeling. That I was an addict. That I could just handle the withdrawal, white knuckling my way through. Depression is a liar and my depression convinced me I didn't deserve anything good.

Luckily, I was too selfish to not keep holding onto the both of you with both arms. I was mean and angry, I held grudges, I was unwilling to forgive. But you two beautiful men just kept loving me through it. I may not deserve either of you, but I'm selfish enough to be okay with that as long as you're both still willing to have me.

My brain chemistry is messed up. I need to be alright with that. I am not taking anything everyone else isn't taking. It's just the rest of you make your own serotonin and dopamine, my lazy brain just needs storebought. I uh, erm, I think I'm going to be alright with that. I know I should be alright with it. I know I will be alright with it. I just need to power through this terrible time where I can still hear the mean voices depression is speaking in. I need to shut them up.

The both of you help me realize I might deserve to be happier than I have been. And our children and grandchildren help me realize it as well. I need to be healthy and happy and fun Daddy or Grandpa Harry. My March babies deserve having me watch them blow out their candles. Blake deserved all the snuggles I was able to give him this morning? afternoon? when he poked his head in to say hi before running off to the stables.

Our sweet Nora came in for a little bit as well. I got to read her a few stories, we sang a few songs, and we were at the beginning of what was looking to be a very long story about something fun she got to do with Gramma Cissy, when Atreyu came storming in demanding his Nora come with him to the stables. Most of the littler kids were out there with Blake and Trey did not think it was alright that Nora was missing out.

I suppose it's probably best that I am getting sleepy again. Maybe it's time for another light nap. Because I was just about to start talking about whatever monster attacked my love. I want to rage. I want to absolutely lose my mind on whoever thought hexing what's mine was alright. But maybe I'll do that after a little snooze.

No matter how I'm feeling, I could never refuse your kisses.

Always have to steal my kisses from you,
Harry

Monday March 19th
The men I can't wait to marry!

Five days and counting! Six if you count today.

After this weekend of birthdays and drama - not DRAMA but rather the usual family chaos - it was sort of nice to spend the night in our bed at Hogwarts. All three of us were too exhausted to do anything other than kiss with a little bit of light groping. That said, I've been up early several days in a row on top of being up as late as normal, so my body wasn't even willing to attempt to perk up with interest.

Not that I cared. Honestly, just being able to hold you Harry - you were in the middle for once - and at the same time, hold hands with Oliver... it was beyond perfect!

Once again, I am up early for me. The both of you are conducting classes for about 20 more minutes before lunch starts, but I probably won't see you. Well, I might as I DO plan to grab a pastie or something on my way out of the castle, but what I mean is that I'm not going to be sitting down to eat.

I've mentioned this before, but with everything else, I realized that I haven't actually put it in any of my emails, but ever since the beginning of March, whenever I have the time, I've been running around the Quidditch Pitch because I realized that my arse has grown larger than ever and I want to look less wobbly and more fit in my wedding outfit.

So, since I've been up earlier than my usual lately anyway, I decided to use that time to run. It's a bit strange because it just so happens that both Siri and Zwei have a free period before lunch most days, and once they realized that I was running around the Quidditch Pitch, they were genuinely happy to join me. I'm not sure how to take it that they're both able to run circles around me!

Well, that's not entirely true, but it's clear to me that I've been letting the endurance portion of my exercises slide in favor of the more gentle yoga routine. No WONDER my arse keeps growing ever larger!!!

Anyway, my loves, here's what I have planned for today: Stop in at Zaire's restaurant and double check that they have the correct catering menu - since I'd swear I had Pippa send it to them last week, but she shockingly can't actually remember if she did so. Then I'm going to meet with Neville at the Manor because he's apparently going to see if he can just charm the actual forest to look the way we want it - rather than have to bring in a bunch of perfectly colored leaves from elsewhere.

Yes Harry, he has all the flowers ready and waiting in stasis, which I'm certain Oliver probably forgot to tell you on Friday.

After that, I'm going to check in with Jules real quick to see how he's settling in at Elena's school. Then I plan to stop by the Ministry and ask Robards how things turned out with Corbin and Brock. Then I might pop in to see how Hermione's getting on.

I should be back in time for dinner, but if not, then I'll definitely be back in time to crawl in bed and pass out with the two of you.

All my love and more,
Draco

Added about 4 hours later
P.S. Jules still looks a bit punch drunk. He wanders around the school in a daze, repeatedly pinching himself, muttering something about dreaming. Apparently the school's drum room alone nearly sent him into cardiac arrest when he first saw it. Elena tells me not to worry about him as she'll keep him well in hand. Harry! That's one more kid in this world SAVED because you had the courage and heart to start up Unity House ^_^
Chapter 245

Chapter Summary

The wedding is drawing ever nearer.

Tuesday March 20, 2018

My Fiancés!

I am so close to no longer using that word! Four more days! It's so exciting! I am having such strong emotions concerning our upcoming wedding. I know I would be extremely emotional no matter what, but coming up on the last week of engaged status at the same time I'm trying to regulate my brain chemistry has me a bit all over the place.

I remember all those years ago, before marrying Draco the first time, anticipating our wedding, looking forward to married life, excited at the idea of maybe having a handful of kids (hahahahahahahahahaha, hehehehehehe, ho, ho, hooooooo) and there was a sense of confusion and wonder. It was all hopeful idealism, dreams of a picture-perfect, cookie-cutter, beautiful life.

And it has been perfect and beautiful. Wonderful. Life altering. I love my Draco now more than I even knew was possible all those years ago. It's a life I love.

But it's hasn't been without flaws. It hasn't been without sadness. Fighting. Grief. Periods of intense loneliness even though your love is lying right next to you in bed. Times when I thought I was drowning in the drama. Moments when I couldn't see the wonder of our life because of the sadness of someone in it. It's also included parenting teenagers and we all know how well THAT can go.

My feelings right now in the days leading up to our vows are weighing on my heart. Vows where I will promise to love each of you, together and apart, for the rest of my life and beyond. My heart is so full of love for the both of you that I feel it could burst right out of my chest. My mind will not stop flying through a million possible future moments; at least one more child being born, more grandchildren to love and spoil, a million different mornings waking up wrapped up cozy in our bed. But it will also include heartache; arguments that aren't easy to kiss and make up through, losing people we love, more of our children becoming teenagers.

I guess what I'm trying to say is my thoughts leading up to this wedding and marriage of ours are so much different than they were all those years ago. Because I know now what a marriage entails. I think the best way I can describe this is the difference between anticipating parenthood before your first child and how you feel before your second arriving. You think your life will be powdery fresh baby smells, sweet little gummy smiles, and eternal adoration. It ends up being sleepless nights, disgusting nappies, and eternal worry because a piece of your heart walks around outside of your body. But prior to that first experience, you think you know how wonderful things will be, but when you meet that child for the first time you realize you had no idea how much love your heart could hold.

That's how I feel right now. I know all the bad things that could pop up. I know there will be times when each of us will falter, will need the others to drag them out into the sun. But I also know that there is the greatest joy I will ever know yet to come. Twenty years from now I will look back on this day and think past Harry had no idea how much more love he was capable of. I feel today as though I could not possibly love either of you more than I do in this moment. I think about my love for you both and my heart literally aches with all the emotions it has to hold. Yet some day I will look back at how much love I had today and realize it wasn't even a fraction of what I'm capable of.

Can Saturday hurry up and get here? I can't wait to walk down the aisles to the loves of my life and the rest of our lives. I need to see our combined beautiful family all dressed up and full of smiles and love to start our future out right. I need a full, beautiful, perfect, huge family portrait for my Love wall!

Oooh, thinking about the two of you in your wedding finery has gotten me all hot and bothered. I need to come find you both!

Love has surely shifted my way,
Harry

Friday March 23rd
The loves of my life,

This week has been so exhausting that I haven't even been able to get it up! But it's all been SO worth it!

The forest is gorgeous. The paths are clear and precisely designed, lined with candles and floating lamps. The foliage is gorgeous shades of summer and fall - with a little spring thrown in. The flowers are sheer perfection and charmed to stay that way until tomorrow night at the earliest.

The Altar is breathtaking! The tables lining the dance floor are elegantly set and the floor itself is just waiting to be danced on. Part of me wants to preserve this setting for the rest of our lives so that whenever we have a party, we can use this space and remember the sheer love that flows through our lives.

But as I said, now that everything is perfect and the only thing we need to do tomorrow is get ready before the ceremony - and then HAVE the ceremony - I'm going to go to bed and crash. I know! It's before the two of you have even returned from dinner in the Great Hall! But I'm so worn out from running around and getting ready this past week that I feel like I felt that time when I was pregnant with Eris and stupidly wasted all of my magic!

Well... maybe not QUITE that bad, but darn close.

And Harry, since I know you're now wondering, no. I am NOT currently carrying any extra humans inside me. I checked twice just to be sure. This exhaustion is normal rather than from a parasite (and I mean that with all affection) leeching all my magic and energy.

But as I was saying, I'm already in bed and I'm just going to sign off and pass out. See you both in the morning!

… Wait...

GODDAMNIT!!! We agreed to each sleep in different beds tonight so that we don't see each other before the ceremony tomorrow, which means that I have to get out of bed and floo to our suite in the Manor since Harry is sleeping in our quarters here and Oliver is sleeping in his - for the first and only time.
Sigh... I ache too much to move, but here goes. See you both at the Altar!

I see your true colors, that's why I love you,
Draco
P.S. Oliver, remember that the word you is both singular AND plural, so even if I don't add the word both to a lyric containing the word you, you can ALWAYS assume that I'm referring to the both of you.
Chapter 246

Chapter Summary

It's the day and Harry is nearly overcome by the pre-wedding fluff, while Draco has to go to the loo to hide how emotional he is after the event.

Chapter Notes

See the end of the chapter for notes

Saturday March 24, 2018

The Loves of my Life,

To the men who are about to become my husbands, I tell you these upcoming hours are torturous. I hate not being married to you both. And whoever's absolutely asinine idea it was to sleep apart last night is out of their mind! Even though I'm pretty sure it was mine. I have to wait hours until I can be with you, and I didn't have any arms wrapped around me last night. I didn't fall asleep to the soft sounds of your breathing. I didn't wake up to beautifully flushed cheeks and sweet sleepy smiles.

But after today I won't wake up alone ever again. I might be the only one waking up since I'm the early bird, but I'll have your solid presences next to me. I'll be able to softly kiss your cheeks, run my fingers through your hair, creepily peep on your naked chests and my favorite appendages a little ways south of chest.

Tomorrow I am going to wake up in my bed with my husbands! We're going to give each other sweet loving kisses, whispering to not break the romantic spell, excited murmurs about the honeymoon we're about to go on. Giggles while we tease each other about the surprises we may or may not have packed for the honeymoon. It's going to be amazing.

But before we do that, we need to get married! And today is the day. As you both know, I've avoided going anywhere near the location of the wedding. I really wanted my first views of the foliage, the flowers, the candles, to happen as we arrived and began walking down the aisle. But when I awoke this morning I realized something important; there's no way I will notice a single thing about my surroundings once I can see the both of you. No matter the beauty of the ceremony, it will pale in comparison to the faces of the men I love.

So, I decided to go out this morning and peek at what will be the place I vow to love you both for the rest of our lives. Oh my loves, it's so beautiful. I had to sit down and take a few deep breaths to calm myself enough to properly appreciate it. I was standing at the altar, seeing the place where in just a few short hours I am going to promise forever to you both. The place I will be standing when I hear the two of you make promises to each other. The spot where I will hear both of your words of love to me. It was almost too much to bear.

I knew it was time to leave when I began to weep openly looking at the gorgeous displays of lilies, narcissus, and irises that were beautifully placed throughout the clearing.

I headed off to check on our children. The room our ladies were getting ready in was already chaotic, messy, and loud even though we had hours to go before the ceremony. I didn't realize this, but Lainie had ordered them all matching dressing gowns. Our mums, our daughters, and our granddaughters all swathed in matching lavender silk robes with "Malfoy~Potter~Wood" on the back and their own initials embroidered on the front. Even Morgana had a teeny tiny dressing gown! And against one wall, they had hung up their dresses in a line. No two dresses matching.
Just a wall of soft greys, greens, and browns. In satins, silks, lace. Teeny princess dresses for our smallest ladies, and elegant gowns for the young women. No two exactly the same, but all together a gorgeous mixture of complementary colors and fabrics.

Much like our family. No two exactly the same, each one an individual that somehow works seamlessly as a whole. Beautiful in their individuality and breathtaking all together.

I could feel myself becoming overwhelmed again at the sights in the room. Maha painstakingly arranging Shtara's hair. Nora giving kisses to Viona's (adorable) little baby bump. Molly hovering over Cassie trying to get her to eat something. Jaz practically vibrating with excitement over Eris doing her make-up. I went through giving each woman a hug and a kiss before sneaking out to see our boys.

The boys' dressing room was just as full, just as gorgeous, but a different atmosphere. Luscious had cigars and drinks given to all of the older ones, Arthur was in the corner calmly holding Gabe and Dyl while they napped in his arms. River and Orion were telling embarrassing stories about Draco and me to Parker, who was laughing uproariously. Trey and Cael were a bit grumpy - which I found out was due to being shut down when they tried to bring some horses into the dressing room.

Again, a wall of suits and robes ready to be worn. Ready for our young men to put on so they could watch their fathers and grandfathers (and sons since all three dads were in there as well!) get married. My heart was so full of love for this group.

Well, I should probably sign off here since it's about time for me to start getting ready myself.
Time to prepare to make the biggest commitment of my life. To promise the rest of my days to you both. I can't wait to be married to you both.

All of my love forever,
Harry ... soon to be Malfoy-Wood!

Saturday March 24th
My dear husbands!

I'm a weirdo, I know, but I snuck away from our reception to go to the loo, and then once there,
HAD to write down my impressions of our day, so far.

I took my time this 'morning' getting ready for this ceremony. I wanted to look absolutely perfect. I was even happy with the shape my arse has gotten into during the last few weeks of running.

As a small detour to my recap, I just wanted state for the record how proud of Siri I am. He's been running with me every chance he gets, and so we've spent a bit of time together (along with Zwei).
I feel so bad about being so very driven and caught up in my own shite that I was literally undercover when Siri had his very first professional Quidditch match. He's been so gracious and understanding, NOT holding it against me in the slightest. He has given me a play by play account on more than one occasion, and while he's disappointed that his team didn't win that match outright, he's excited that they earned enough points overall to keep them in the running. His next match in mid-April shouldn't interfere with ANYTHING on our calendar, and so, barring another unexpected undercover mission, I should be there to cheer him on.
But getting back to our day.

Once ready, I made my way to my starting point, because let’s be honest, the two of you had probably already arrived at your starting points an hour or three before I even got out of bed. Sorry! I desperately needed to catch up on my sleep! Even so, I still ended up awake a good hour before I normally do.

To my peace of mind, I had arrived when there was only about a half an hour for the guests to finish arriving and taking their seats. Our three starting points formed points of a giant triangle in the Forest on Malfoy Manor property. The points were far enough away from each other that we couldn't see the Altar (or each other), but we could hear the guests chattering as they gathered and waited in their seats.

At some point, my father signaled the band to start the music, which in turn signaled us to begin our walks. We'd (I'd) gone to great lengths to ensure that our aisles (walking paths) were the same distance and clear of any sort of debris that could trip or delay us. They were all lined with candles and fairy lights.

Our paths quickly converged on the clearing where everyone was seated. Each of us - after a LOT of debate - had chosen just one attendant. We all knew that if we'd chosen all the attendants that we wanted, our entire circle would be crowding the altar with us with maybe a handful of people in seats watching us. So, even though it was hard to choose just one, we had. Harry got to cheat ever so slightly since Hermione was performing our wedding for us, thus he was able to narrow it down to Ron fairly quickly. Oliver had to literally flip a coin to decide on Parker rather than Cassie (which she was fine with once he promised that she would always have first pick of babysitting duty when the time came). As for me, I simply had to realize that Pansy was far more likely to murder me than Blaise if I didn't choose her.

The three of them really didn't have anything to do but witness our vows and sign off on them on the marriage certificate.

If I spent any time at all talking about the outfits everyone was wearing, I might as well be here the rest of the night! So instead, I will narrow it to just ours. As with last night, we hadn't wanted to see each other's outfits before the ceremony. Which I will admit that for me, it was a BIG weight on my mind, a nerve-wracking weight, NOT knowing exactly how the two of you were going to look and if we would match enough to not clash atrociously. It took having Hazeris look over your outfits and giving me a thumbs up for me to resist the urge to sneak in and check them over myself.

So it was that we each emerged from our paths into the clearing to get our first looks at each other since, erm… Well I'm sure you both saw me yesterday morning when you woke up, but for me, it was the night before. You. looked. GORGEOUS!!!
Oliver was wearing a brown muggle style suit that perfectly accented his eyes and hair. Harry was wearing a striking green suit that not only complemented his eyes, but looked extremely good with his skin tone and hair. I was wearing a gray suit that also matched my eyes, but the jacket portion was extremely plain compared to the fact that my waistcoat was silver (some of it real threads of actual silver) and I was wearing a pink tie to bring out some of the color in my complexion.

As for my hair, for perhaps the first time in a long time, rather than opt to have the tips dyed any color, I had my entire head of hair trimmed and styled to platinum blond perfection. My nails were actually painted a shimmering opalescent that at first glance, didn't even look painted - aside from being shiny - but at second glance, the individual colors and sparkles leapt out. Part of the sparkles were pink to match the tie (and it's probably the white and the pink that give the name opalescent), but there were also tones of green, blue, and purple.

Enough about my nails, they aren't important aside from the fact that I put care and attention to detail in them.

Each of us was wearing a 'matching' set of earrings. On our right sides was a plain but rather large stud. My stud was a diamond, Oliver's stud was a rich topaz, and Harry's was an emerald. On our left sides, from a plain gold stud dangled a bit of gold necklace. It was originally a heart that had been cut into three pieces, puzzle style. My piece said "We have," Harry's piece said "Found the,"
and Oliver's said "Missing piece."

When we were all at the altar and ready to begin, Hermione made a speech about the unique challenges presented by a multiple marriage, and how she feels that the rewards far outweigh the extra effort. Then she got right to the point and led us through our vows.

Harry was clearly itching to go first. He was nearly vibrating from the effort of waiting, so Hermione turned to him with a smile and asked him to say the vows he'd written.

Harry turned to Oliver, taking his hand and giving him that look like he was the most precious thing in the world that makes the both of us melt into helpless puddles of goo. "Oliver, I promise you my love, life, magic, heart, and soul. I give them unconditionally. I will spend the rest of my life trying to devote myself to making you as happy as your love makes me. I will love you through the end of time."

Then he turned to me, still holding Oliver's hand and now holding mine. "Draco, I promise you my love, life, magic, heart, and soul. You are my forever and always, I am going to spend the rest of my days trying to be worthy of the care and love you have given me. I will love you through the end of time."

He kissed both of our hands before continuing. "Ollie and Draco, I pledged to each of you the entirety of my love, my life, my magic, my heart, and my soul. Giving these to both of you hasn't made them smaller; neither of you are receiving only a portion. Expanding our family never gives smaller pieces of love to the individual parts; giving love only increases our ability to give more. I love you Oliver. I love you Draco. I love you both more than I ever thought possible. I vow to continue loving you more and more, every single day of our lives."

Oliver looked rather teary at this point, and he wasn't the only one. Hermione looked ready to cry from happiness and pride for us. I myself MAY have even felt a tear well in my eye.

Oliver decided to go next because he was too emotional to hold back any longer. Still holding our hands, he kissed them. "Harry, Draco, you have both given me so much love that I sometimes feel like I'm drowning in it. I didn't know how much love was possible to give, but the more you give me, the more I find I have to give in return. So much that I often can't breathe when I think about it. But I'm a simple man. I don't have the capacity to form beautiful words, so instead, I will keep this simple. I love you both so much that I am making this vow to love, honor, cherish, and be faithful to the two of you for the rest of my life."
We smiled at him encouragingly, understanding that he was actually so nervous that he was shaking.

Then it was my turn. I shook my head wryly. "I have to apologize, because when I sat down to write out how I felt about the both of you, I found that I felt so much that I filled up about 12 or 14 inches of parchment in my tiniest script. My vows could go on and on for DAYS and I would still have more to say. So rather than attempt to narrow down my feeling to the most important points, I decided to do something that likely will surprise no one: I'm going to sing my vows."

Harry snorted in amusement and wore the biggest grin he could physically manage. Meanwhile Oliver looked a bit sheepish. One day, you might even become used to me singing to you at the drop of a hat.

"I do swear that I'll always be there, I'd give anything and everything and I will always care, Through weakness and strength, Happiness and sorrow, For better for worse, I will love you both with every beat of my heart." The beginning of the song was partially spoken, to emphasize the seriousness of the vows.

"From this moment, life has begun, From this moment, you are the ones, Right beside you is where I belong, From this moment on. From this moment, I have been blessed, I live only for your happiness, And for your love, I'd give my last breath, From this moment on." I was doing my best to look back and forth between you with each lyric so that neither of you felt like you received less attention.

I also felt disconcertingly teary eyed the longer I sang. It got to the point that I thought I was going to get choked up and have to stop, but I persevered. "I give my hand to you with all my heart, I can't wait to live my life with you, I can't wait to start! You and I will never be apart, My dreams came true because of you!"

That particular part - about my dreams - was aimed at Harry, but the parts about starting and never being apart were for Oliver. "From this moment as long as I live, I will love you, I promise you this, There is nothing I wouldn't give, From this moment on, oh!"

I honestly think I may have started leaking at this point, but I'm trying not to dwell on it.

"You're the reason I believe in love (aimed at Harry), And you're the answer to my prayers from up above (aimed at Oliver), All we need is just the three of us, My dreams came true because of you!"

To my surprise, you both actually knew the song and joined me for the ending of it, which quite possibly made my heart burst from my chest, because I have been feeling like I've died and gone to the Elysian Fields ever since.

"From this moment as long as I live, I will love you, I promise you this, There is nothing I wouldn't give, From this moment on, I will love you as long as I live, From this moment on!"

At that point, everything is a bit of a blur. The only things I can clearly remember before our first official dance as husbands is the part where we OFFICIALLY put on our rings - that we'd been wearing since our engagement. Those quirky yet gorgeous symbols of our love - a love that is odd looking and not 'normal,' but still so very rock solid. And - strangely enough - I remember when we cut and ate our cake - which we did before dancing because we wanted to get right to it and save dinner for a bit later.
Our cake was naturally elaborate and exquisite, a sheer wonder that must have taken an artist HOURS to create, but the part I actually remember was the forks we used to eat it. Oliver's said: "I do," mine said: "Me too," and Harry's said: "Me three." They were oh so perfect for us and I may even hang them on our wall of pictures.

But then we started dancing, and from the moment I held you both in my arms, I felt overwhelmed with happiness. Hence me hiding in the loo. I may need a few more minutes to process this, but then I'll be back to hold you both some more.

Forever and always,
Draco

Chapter End Notes

Sorry that I didn't link the official video for From This Moment, but the official video didn't have the beginning lyrics, plus it wasn't this awesome duet, so I linked what I could find ^_^
Chapter 247

Chapter Summary

Harry talks about their first dance as a married triad, and Draco talks about their first major decision ^_^

Chapter Notes

Hi y'all! Today is Chrissie's birthday, but it's also my older son Gryffin's birthday. He turned 15 today and I'm freaking out a bit, but honestly, I managed to do something right over the years because my sister came over and immediately accused my boys of showing her 11 year old daughter a YouTube video of a man pretending to murder someone and playing around in the blood (which is apparently pig's blood), that is very disturbing to watch. My boys had no clue what she was talking about and my niece herself was like :"Mom, it wasn't them." So... I apparently win a good mom award?? No idea how that happened...

Happy birthday Chrissie! ^_^

Sunday March 25, 2018

My Husbands,

Husbands! My beautiful, perfect, beloved men.

Today is the first day of our married lives. I keep wanting to say the first day officially together, or the first day we've committed to this. But I think we all know that's just not true. We've spent these last months choosing every day to be together, choosing the day after that and the day after that to stay together. Every moment of our lives is a recommitment to each other and this life we're leading together. I chose you yesterday, in front of all of our loved ones. I vowed to you both and to anyone listening that my love was forever.

I don't ever want to take either of you for granted. I woke up this morning with a joyful heart, deeply thankful that I woke up married to you. I want to burn this feeling into every cell of my body. To remember every single day, the sheer joy and wonder at waking up married to you.

Draco, Darling, your recap of yesterday was just lovely. Our vows to each other were perfect, and perfectly us. Or I suppose I should say the both of you had vows that were perfect, I can't speak to my own but the looks on your faces as I spoke them seemed fairly pleased with them. Just as our clothing was exactly us, Draco's extra sparkly and beautiful, Ollie's a neutral tone intending to blend in but only making your natural beauty stand out even more, and mine an odd mixture of posh and earthy, I think our vows were very much us. Mine was rambling, full of run-on sentences and flowery declarations. Oliver, your vows were perfect in their simplicity. And Draco you had to sing out your heart, but seemed even happier when we joined you in song.
I'm a bit surprised you remembered all those details though! If our rings weren't on our fingers I would wonder if yesterday was just a beautiful dream. Thankfully we'll have about a billion pictures to remember the day! I can't wait to place that enormous family portrait above our mantle at Hogwarts. Not seeing every one of our children and grandchildren every day is hard, but hopefully having that gorgeous photo of all their smiling faces will help a bit.

It feels as though it was a dream because I don't think my feet touched the ground the entire day. The weight of my heart is probably the anchor that kept me from floating away. I was walking on clouds from the moment I remembered I was marrying you both yesterday until the moment our heads hit our pillows.

I loved the ceremony, I loved watching our family get ready all together, seeing the two of you coming down each of your aisles was a dream come true, but I would have to say the dancing was by far my favorite part of the entire day. I danced with my new husbands separately, and the three of us even managed to sway and dance all together for quite a few dances.

Our first dance, I just can't explain to you how much that moment was perfection for me. I will never forget that moment as long as I live. I've always joked that I'm Gonna Be (500 Miles) is the second most romantic song of all time, it's just a shame it's considered this silly bop dance song. But now that I've heard the beautifully sweet Sleeping At Last version, it's now number one. Although it could still be the silly bop dance song and I would think it the most romantic song now that it was the first dance with the loves of my life.

"When I wake up, well I know I'm gonna be, I'm gonna be the man who wakes up next to you."
"And if I grow old, when I grow old, well I know I'm gonna be, I'm gonna be the man who's growing old with you"
"When I wake up, well I hope I'm gonna be, I'm gonna be the man who's waking up to you."
"And when I'm dreamin', well I know I'm gonna dream, I'm gonna dream about the time I had with you."

Oh my loves. Today, and tomorrow, and the next day, and all the next days after that ... it's our forever. It's my forever with you.

Now, come on and wake up. Come run away with me. To our honeymoon and our forever.

Yours,
Harry James Malfoy-Wood

Sunday March 25th
To my fox and our elephant,

I'm currently in bed unable to sleep, so I'm going to write. Tonight, the first night of our Honeymoon, we made an important decision. A HUGELY important decision. It began shortly after we checked into our glass igloo cabin at the Kakslauttanen Artic Resort.

We didn't even take the time to unpack or settle in, we simply tossed all our luggage into the room and tore each other's clothes off as we stumbled to the bed. That was when things took a sharp detour from where we'd planned. Oliver pulled back and gave us both this extremely serious look.

"I... I don't want to wait anymore! I've been waiting for over 20 years! What if waiting even one more day turns out to be one day too long?"
Oliver may well have continued on like this for some time, but I turned to look at Harry and smirked. "I had a feeling he might say this sooner rather than later, so I came prepared."

You looked at Oliver for a long moment, and then looked at me. "Well, if you're both sure, then I have no problems with it."

I kissed Harry's hand before kissing Oliver's hand. At that point, I slipped out of bed and summoned a small bag I had packed with my luggage. It contained everything we needed.

"As we previously agreed, we wanted to give your body, Oliver, a chance to succeed on its own. I know you still feel like it won't be able to because that's what your truth was for so long, but I have faith that this will work, so here, take this fertility potion. I made it myself, so I can guarantee that it's of the highest quality."

Oliver accepted the potion, took a deep breath, and then downed it in one go. "That... wasn't as bad as I was expecting..."

I chuckled. "I once slipped it into Harry's drink and he liked the taste so much that he wanted me to give it to him ALL the time, but I sensibly had to refuse, hahaha."

Then I picked up a ring that you most definitely recognized, Harry. Oliver recognized it too, and tilted his head to look at me in confusion. I grabbed his hand and slipped the ring on his right ring finger.

"This ring that was Harry's wedding band for so many years, was chosen specifically for him because it has several spells on it, one of which is a fertility enhancing spell. We have no idea if the ring truly helps, as Harry has conceived every time he tried and we can't say for certain if it was ONLY the potion or if the ring helped, but I WILL say that the first time I tried to conceive didn't work, and the second time - when I was wearing the ring - did."

Oliver, you looked so emotional as I explained this to you. Were you wondering if it would have worked all those years ago - had you not been sabotaged? I squeezed your hand comfortingly and gave you a kiss to let you know that I was behind you all the way.

Then I removed the final potion from the bag and set it on the table next to the bed. "This is the potion that will combine our DNA into a viable semen sample that should create a baby that genetically belongs to all three of us. All it takes is our blood..."

I made a small slice along the ulnar bone of my wrist, just big enough for about a fourth a cup of blood to drain into the bottle. Then I let Oliver cast a healing spell on me before repeating the action on Harry's arm, taking a nice long drag of blood – and thus hit of Harry's magic – while I was at it. Harry simply shook his head and gave me a goofy grin while we waited. In just two short minutes, the potion had finished shifting through the spectrum of colors to end up a thick and viscous white goo.

AKA it worked. I held up the bottle with a smirk. "What do you say Harry? Want to prep our husband so that we can inseminate him?"

"On it!" Harry agreed eagerly, putting his hands and tongue to work while I pulled a syringe out of the bag. The syringe - just for fun - was magically shaped like Harry's perfect shaft. When Oliver was thrashing about on the bed and BEGGING for deliverance, I gently inserted the syringe and squirted the sample inside him. Not very sexy, perhaps, but hopefully effective.

After that, we didn't want to disturb the sample, so we let Oliver top us both. At the very end,
Harry, you begged me to top you as well, so that you could go to sleep feeling utterly fulfilled. Unfortunately, my long and exhausting week had taken a toll on me and my shaft would not cooperate by rising to the occasion. Thus, I had to promise to top you tomorrow. It's a date and I know you'll hold me to it, which I'm quite looking forward to. Maybe Oliver will tie me up and Harry will ride me until I just can't see straight!

I'm in love with the shape of you,
Draco
Chapter 248

Chapter Summary

More honeymoon shenanigans.

Monday March 26, 2018

My Husbands,

Yeah, that's not going to get old any time soon. My husbands, my husbands, my husbands!

I may as well amuse myself in whatever way I can because I have a feeling it's going to be a long couple of weeks waiting for the results of our honeymoon shagging festivities. Ugh, has it been two weeks yet? No? How about now? Alright, I will stop being obnoxious and go back to just saying the word 'husbands' a million times instead. Hi, I'm Harry Malfoy-Wood, there are my husbands Draco and Oliver. Why yes, I'll take a bottle of your house red to share with my husbands. Hey! Stop looking at my husbands' arses! Why yes I am walking with a limp, have you met my husbands?

How about now?

I'm done! I promise! I'm probably just a little hysterical this morning because I'm so very tired. I had so many plans for today but I'm a little loopy from lack of sleep. See, I don't know if I thought this glass igloo thing all the way through. Last night? Watching the skies dance for us was breathtaking. I was absolutely right, falling asleep in my husbands' arms while the sky put on a performance just for us was the perfect romantic honeymoon setting.

This morning? Sunrise at 6:45 A.M. in a completely glass building? Not quite as romantic. I don't even know what I thought initially, wow who turned on the lights I think, but upon fully opening my eyes I was actually a little afraid I'd been blinded. Somebody turn off the damn sun! I felt like those two obnoxious neighbors in that Christmas movie, Christmas Vacation I think? Stumbling around crashing into things because the light was blinding. Knocking over glasses of champagne. If there had been a set of stairs I would have fallen down them.

Tomorrow should be a lot better. Not that I think the light won't be as early or as fierce, but now that I know it's going to happen, I am going to make sure to cast a shielding or dimming charm on the glass before I fully fall asleep tonight. We can still fade into rest with the beautiful sights but I won't have to grow a new pair of retinas.

The glass isn't the only thing getting spells shot at it. What is happening with your bits Draco? I know, I know, I know, you're tired and stressed and wedding planning is insane. And I am not complaining ... okay I'm complaining a little. What? I miss your cock. It's one of my very favorites and it's been too tired to play with me for days and days and days! But I'm getting a bit worried, Draco you have been exhausted before. You have been up to your eyeballs in projects. You have had WAY more stress than this. And he's never been too sleepy to play with me before.

I suppose it's a good thing we only needed your blood for last night's DIY craft of human making. Now that I know there's a possibility of a baby with all three of our genetic make-up? I want it so badly. Ollie, thank you so much for being impatient and asking to start trying last night. I don't think I was going to be able to hang on much longer. I really to get Draco's concerns, worrying over you potentially not keeping the job you love. I just don't see it happening.

The kids absolutely adore you. Some of them too much ... stupid lists. The parents think you're awesome. McGonagall has loved you for probably thirty years at this point. No one is sacking you. And when you get to a point where you can't fly, I would have no problem taking over quidditch refereeing for you. And while you prefer to be in the air, you CAN teach flying from the ground. And when you have the baby, they will just have to find a substitute teacher for you.

Ooooh, I wonder if we can talk Viktor into spending a few weeks training Hogwarts fliers. I'd be willing to bet that even those who might be a little crabby with your leave of absence wouldn't object when the substitute is Viktor Krum.

I am getting ahead of myself here, I don't even know that you want to keep teaching after the baby is born. I know I work, I know Draco works, and most of the kids work, but I promise you don't need to if you don't want to. You were robbed of having a newborn to cuddle and spoil, if you want to spend every single moment from the second they're born doing nothing but holding them, you have my complete blessing.

Wow, I am getting even further ahead of myself than I thought. We don't know for sure that last night took. We may have to try again. And that will be okay, if it doesn't happen now, it WILL happen eventually. I tried not getting my hopes up, but that lasted about fifteen seconds. Sorry!

Would you sleepyheads hurry up and wake up already? I have so many fun plans for today! There's a Husky Farm right next door to the resort, we can play with puppies and then go on a Husky Safari! Eeeek! Doesn't that sound amazing? The three of us all snuggled up nice and cozy, going for a dogsled trip through this winter wonderland?

Or I suppose we can do the SNOW TANKS!!!! Not nearly as romantic, but I wanna ride a tank!

Oh, what in the world is wrong with me? I must still be a little overtired and out of it. I can just come wake you both up. With my mouth. Yeah, wake up my husbands!

Your husband,
Harry Malfoy-Wood

Monday March 26th
Dear Harry and Oliver,

Yes, I know that our honeymoon is the WRONG time to get a new puppy, but she's not only adorable, but they were going to get rid of her because her paw is shaped a little bit wrong and she can't run like she's supposed to!

She can still run a little and have a full life, dammit! I REFUSE to think otherwise! She can't help how she was born!

She's mine and I'm keeping her!

Everything I do, I do it for you (two) (except keep this puppy, that's for me!),
Draco
Monday March 26, 2018

Our Draco,

Sigh. Not sure what I was expecting when I suggested the Husky farms. I thought we'd just go for a fun dog sledding trip.

I've known you for long enough that I should have known. Honestly, Ollie has known you long enough that he would have known. I can't even blame this on you being a Daddy away from his babies for too long and finding things to love on. We all know what happens when you meet a set of irresistible puppy dog eyes. You're such a sucker.

We stayed inside to snog while you took Lumimyrsky out for about the billionth time today. But I think we're going to come join you for a walk with our fuzzy little "Snowstorm."

Love your husbands,
Harry and Oliver

P.S. NO, I'm still not sick of it!

Tuesday March 27
Oh Harry! Oliver!

It's love! It may have happened quickly and it may have come at a bad time, but it's real. I love my little Lumi! She's still just an adorable puppy, but she's so gorgeous and I can already see how she's just going to get better and better as she grows. Her fur is made up of clouds of white, light gray, and dark gray. Swirling through the clouds are lines of black that give definition to her coloring. Her muzzle and most of her face is pure white, but her head - especially her forehead - has lines of black that highlight and make her startlingly blue eyes just POP!
I really hope she gets along well with Amala and the cubs (who aren't so little anymore!). I mean Amala took Wojtek in stride, so I assume she'll be fine with a new dog, but this dog is so delicious looking that Amala might consider her a tasty treat. I suppose that Lumimyrsky could always live at Hogwarts with us. It's NOT like they don't have a billion cats AND Fang the Third.

I can't WAIT until the kids meet Lumi! They're going to love her as much as I do! She's so fluffy and sweet ^_^

But... I suppose that I can drag my attention away from my newest love for five minutes to talk about something alarming. Here we are on our honeymoon and...

I can't get it up...

BAH! Just SAYING that is hard as fuck!

Thank Merlin and Salazar that the quick spells work. Thanks to an instant erection spell, we've been able to have fun, so long as we add a cock ring spell to keep it up, and then when I'm dying of frustration because nothing is progressing like it should be, an instant orgasm spell finishes things off nicely.

But - did you hear a but coming?

BUT it's... not... the same. I mean it's clearly happening, but I barely feel it. It's almost like I'm watching someone else spunk all over the two of you, which would normally turn me on so bloody much, but this... This is frustrating.

Which is why I DON'T want to think about it. Can't we just have Oliver do all topping for the rest of the Honeymoon? I'm actually having a lot of fun as the bottom. I feel everything the same as I usually do, well everything except my prostate seems to have gone a bit numb.

Do you suppose that I used it so much in such a short time by shagging the bloody fuck out of you as much as magically possible, that I broke it?

Yeah, let's NOT talk about this! Let's return to my new puppy. I know that every time I fall in love with something fast and hard, and go on and on about how much I love that thing, you get super irritated. After all, when I opened my email by telling you that I'd fallen in love with Mahafsoun, you mistook that for romantic love rather than a sort of fatherly interest (that was twisted by her unknown Veela traits, I'll admit).
THANK MERLIN I avoided that whole mess by not saying the same thing when talking about Jules!!! Which, hmm... I wonder if maybe he has latent Veela traits? How likely is that though, unless I have some sort of veeladar - yeah, not likely. He just triggers my protective father instinct, but all is well in that he's settling in at Elena's school beautifully. He even calls her his big sister! It makes me purr just thinking about it.

Just like Lumi does. She's SOOOO soft! I could just lay here petting her all day!

Oh wait, the two of you are looking at me like I've just lost my bloody mind, and so, I can tell I must be saying embarrassing things out loud again, such as: "Who's a good puppy? You are! You're such a good puppy!" Which makes her wag her fluffy tail and give me a thousand kisses.

Perhaps I should go take a quick shower so that I can hold you both close and give YOU a thousand kisses instead. Will that make you stop looking at me like I've lost the plot?

Off to get naked and wet!

I'm in love with the shape of you,

Draco

Chapter End Notes

FYI Draco was a little tipsy from wine when he wrote his email, lol ^_^
Draco discovers a bit of a problem to solve.

Wednesday March 28, 2018

Sweetheart,

I love you more than life itself, you know this, but I have to ask if you've had some sort of blow to the head recently. You actually do not see the difference between saying you're in love with Mahafsoun, Jules, and a puppy? Whenever you start an email saying you've fallen in love with something I get annoyed? Nope, when you went on and on and on about loving Amala, all I could think about was the fact that we were going to end up living with a Cheetah. I wasn't annoyed at all, just needing to resign myself to living with a wild desert cat.

When you've gone on and on and on and on and on and on .... about loving specific kinds of food? Not once have I been annoyed. I have sometimes needed you to stop simply because my morning sickness couldn't handle the description, but I was never annoyed at you loving your garlic fish biscuits or some other disgusting concoction.

Thank you for restraining yourself from saying you love Jules. I was not in a healthy place, I'm in a fairly healthy place now and I still don't want to hear it; I can't imagine how badly I would have taken that description those weeks ago when everything was crashing down around me.

Again, thank you for recognizing that I do not appreciate hearing you've fallen in love with any people that aren't myself or our husband Ollie, but that dislike doesn't extend past people. You can be as in love with this fluffy little ball of fur as you want. I promise. She is pretty darn lovable!

I'm sure Amala will be just fine with her. She's good with Remus and Romulus. I know, it's different when dealing with a puppy versus a set of older, fully grown dogs, but she's always been good with anyone you've let her know was family. We just need to introduce them well and she will probably just think she's gotten another baby. Remus and Romulus will love her. And my Venus will make sure she stays on tabletops or at least high enough not to be reached by a hyperactive pup.

Alright, I know you don't want to talk about it, but .... we need to talk about the not-hard elephant in the room. Look, I have no problem topping you. I've done it consistently for years. Yes, I generally prefer to bottom, and even if you never wanted to top again, I would be fine with that. Oliver has no problem topping you. I have no problem bottoming for Oliver. But something is going on! I actually tried to sit and think about how long this erection embargo has been happening. You've been too tired to get it up for a while now. I couldn't think of how long it's been since you weren't having this issue. A week ago? More? Maybe less? Something is happening.

Should we head home early and go check with Rowe?

Worriedly,
Your husband Harry
Thursday March 29th
My beloved husbands,

That tank tour thing was unexpectedly fascinating. I really thought we'd be better off staying in our cabin and just snuggling up in bed, but nope! SO worth it!

That said, I will admit that I got very thoroughly sidetracked. The driver had this picture of a good looking man in his early 20s, and I got a strange feeling when looking at the picture. A sort of sadness, but also... I dunno, hope? Wistfulness? I can't define it.

So I asked him who the man in the picture is, and he told me all about how it's his son who went missing about 8 years ago. The area can be treacherous, so everyone assumes that he got caught up in a bad storm and died. The problem is that they never found his body, just a boot. And so, naturally the tank driver and his wife have the hope that he maybe just hit his head and is now living with amnesia. They've prepared themselves for the worst, after all, his boot was nowhere near his body, and so, he likely would have lost his foot to frostbite and been found by SOMEONE if he was alive to be found.

But the not knowing very quickly got to ME. So, I offered to hold the boot for a bit and see what happens. We're about to stop at the driver's house and chat with his wife to see if she's on board with this plan, or if she'd rather keep her hope. I'm writing this quickly because I am a little nervous. I haven't had a vision in a while, so what if - like my little problem that we shall NOT talk about - I can't do it.

Oh, I must have gotten a weird look on my face, because you both decided to give me reassuring kisses.

You mean the world to me, you are my everything,
Draco
Chapter 251

Thursday March 29, 2018

Draco,

You seem to have locked yourself in the loo. I'm not sure if you're panicking at the idea of having a vision, or not having a vision, or the problem that must not be named, but I hear a bit of wheezing and hyperventilating. We'd love to come in and give you even more reassuring kisses, but you've barricaded the door.

We're not going to let you do this alone. We're not going to let you down. You think there's a chance on this planet that your possessive, jealous, stupidly brave, Gryffindors would let you go do this on your own? Not for a moment. So, take as long as you need, throw some cool water on your pretty face, and we'll all three go together.

We're with you for whatever needs doing Love.

Always,
Harry and Oliver

Thursday March 29th
My foundations,

Sorry about my sudden panic attack. I was reeling from the thought of: what if I CAN'T have visions anymore?! What if my little problem is MAGIC related and my visions are magic related and MY MAGIC is gone?!?!

Well, after shooting off a few spells to reassure myself that I still could. I then picked up a towel and half forced myself to get a vision from it, and when I saw the wife fold and put it with the rest of her linens, I was relieved. So, confident that I'm not broken after all, I washed my face and regained my composure.

After returning to the kitchen of their cozy home, I did exactly as I said I was going to. The driver's wife gave her blessing by handing me the old boot. I held it, examining it closely for a few seconds before closing my eyes and letting the vision flow.

Usually, my visions go in 'chronological' order. So, I almost always see the beginning of what happened first. This time, it went in reverse. I saw years of the driver and his wife holding the boot and grieving over their son. Then I saw them 'give' the boot to a man who took it away. The vision followed the man and the boot back to where it was found in the snow.

But as I was seeing things in reverse, I watched the man conduct a thorough search of the area before 'planting' the boot and only half burying it. Then he walked away. Quite some time passed. Days and nights flashed by in seconds.

Suddenly, a dog came by and played with the boot for several hours - as far as I could tell. He was a husky that I can only guess had run off from the nearby farm for a bit of a lark. His playing of the boot eventually brought it to a clearly frozen foot in a bit of snow freshly fallen from a small cliff. The foot looked like something had tried to nibble on it at some point in the past.
The dog left the boot rather abruptly and more days passed in the blink of an eye. In the darkest part of a night, something with white fur that could have been a wolf, or an arctic cat of some sort, or I can't even begin to guess what because it nearly blends in with the snow. Anyway, it is trying it's best to chew on this frozen foot, but it can't quite do more than leave teeth marks. It looks to me like it puts the boot back on the foot in it's frustration, only I realized that this was how the boot was taken off to begin with.

After the smallish animal appears to give up, the foot is buried under a lot of snow as it storms and storms and storms. Eventually, the storm stops and the snow completely clears away. I watched as it flew back up to the top of the small cliff, revealing a small cavelike impression in the side of the cliff that does actually look like a good place to wait out a small storm.

After a tiny bit more time passes, the body looks less frozen and more pink. I can see breaths creating a faint mist, that get bigger and more 'steamy' until the body sits up and leans against the wall. Eventually, the man wakes up and - somewhat ironically - tends to his OTHER leg. This actions calls to my attention the fact that it's been broken somehow. He's done a rather good job of splinting it, and looks like he'd be more or less fine if someone happened along to help him at that moment.

I was curious by this point to see what led up to the man breaking his leg and taking shelter here. So I waited until that part of the vision came, rather than stop since I'd technically found the body and what had happened to it. Now I sort of wish I hadn't let the vision go on so far, since what had actually happened was that the man was hunting and accidentally found a bear trap. That's what broke his leg. That's the reason he ended up needing shelter.

I can only assume that the break was bad enough to send him into shock, which was why he never woke up again before dying from the cold - and probably starvation.

In any case, I opened my eyes all ready to go. I planned to lead his parents to his body so that they could bury him and be done with it. I HADN'T planned on you holding a hand to my head and frowning.

"You were gone in that vision for much longer than we thought it'd take, Draco. Now you're clammy and a bit feverish. I'd feel better if you rested before doing anything else."

I sighed and said nothing because I actually FELT worn out. I really have to wonder if maybe I'm coming down with the Dragon Flu again. Just my luck, eh? I visit the arctic on our honeymoon and catch that Merlin be cursed flu A-BLOODY-GAIN!

Anyway, reluctantly agreeing with you, I pulled your head close to mine so that I could stare intently in your eyes and let you see the important parts of the vision - hopefully enough so that you could identify the area and lead the tank driver to it. At least for that, he'll be able to DRIVE you in the tank.

As for now, I'm letting the wife fuss and cluck over me, making me chicken noodle soup and hot chocolate with chili pepper of all things.

Go, save the world, or at least give a poor couple some peace of mind and closure.

I love you both so much that I can't breathe when I think about it!

I belong with you, you belong with me, you're my sweethearts!

Draco
Friday March 30, 2018

My Husbands,

Can we just go home today? I know, we were going to stay until tomorrow, we even put ourselves down as tentatively checking out Sunday instead. Just in case we wanted to extend our honeymoon a bit longer. After yesterday's trek through the tundras of Narnia, I think I'd like to be out of the snow and settled in at home. I'd especially like to get Draco to Rowe's to get him checked out.

No, I am not accepting any arguments, you WILL be going to see Rowe! If you want to stay here through tomorrow or Sunday, we can have you go into St. Mungo's on Monday instead, but either way I am going to force you to be seen. You, Ollie, and I all know there's no way you would be alright with either of us sitting back and acting like everything's fine when there could be a serious issue being ignored. Well we love you enough to not allow you to let this go on any longer than absolutely necessary.

I miss our babies. I miss Nora. Who is one of our babies but you know what I mean. I'm thrilled we had this time to ourselves, our marriage is a priority and celebrating that without the children is important. But we had quite a few days just the three of us. We've enjoyed ourselves. Draco got to do one of his heroic vision things. Can we go home?

This is the longest we've been away from the babies. This is still so early on in our life with Nora that I hate to think she might feel abandoned. If we went home we could see the kids, we could have almost the entirety of our family together for a few more days, and then in the night we can hide away in our bedroom, in our playroom, and continue our honeymoon right where we left off.

What do you think? The best of both worlds. Our family, our home, and still have any moment we want full of blushing skin and sweet kisses.

Plus we'd have the spanking bench! My poor arse is upsettingly pale and without a single mark. It's practically criminal I tell you!

I'm glad yesterday's trip through the wilderness didn't include anything criminal. As much as I know it was hard for that couple to lose hope, they did gain answers. And the answers came with no side of criminal activities, no murderers or kidnappers or people attempting to use someone for their own gain. It was a tragic accident, but it's unlikely the young man's final hours were spent in terror. He likely fell asleep from the shock and just didn't wake up.

I know you and his parents seemed to think Ollie and I were going to drag them all over to find their missing son, but there was no way I was going to do that. First of all, no parent needs to see that. You only had a vision of what he looked like very long ago, while the boot was still with him. I couldn't imagine time had done the physical aspect any favors. And I was right. The group of police we brought with, Ollie, and I certainly did not enjoy the vision we came upon. His parents, while they didn't get a beautiful view, at least got a slightly cleaned up version of their son to identify.

The other reason I thought it was best to go without them? They're older, not in great shape, and I didn't want to have to go slowly. It was already hard enough hiding the warming charms we kept casting on ourselves from the police. The dogsledding with blankets? Cozy warm and romantic. The tank riding? Plenty warm with the heaters and super cool. A long trek on cross country skis to find a body? Freezing and terrible.

Can we please just go home?

Yours,
Harry

---

Friday March 30th
My beloved husbands,

Yeah Harry, you're right; that's not getting old anytime soon.

Oliver, you woke up before me and had an hour or so of Harry pouting and begging to go home, so by the time I woke up, we were all packed and ready to leave. That was absolutely the right decision as our honeymoon stops being a honeymoon when less than all three of us are into it. Plus, I was actually getting a bit itchy to get back to the kids. Honestly, Oliver, I hope that you're not disappointed by the fact that Harry and I promised that our honeymoon would be several days of nothing but shagging, but instead, we spent a lot of time out doing other things - such as finding our new puppy.

And then taking her for walks.

Anyway, since there was nothing for me to do when I woke up - other than eat and drink some tea - we used our international Portkey to get home without Harry exhausting himself by Apparating us back in his haste. Once home, I barely had time to order Muffy to put everything away when Harry said:

"Quick, let's go now, before the kids realize we're home!"

Which was how I was dragged practically kicking and screaming to Rowe's office. My very reasonable argument of: "There's nothing wrong! I'm just getting a bit older and going through a dry spell!" Fell on deaf ears.

Apparently, Oliver, the fact that you are older than me and never had these issues convinced you that I must be going through something decidedly NOT normal. Harry avidly agreed, thus, I found myself in Rowe's office faster than I could say Hippogriff.

Once there, You both clammed up to give me a chance to talk about it - after all, it's MY problem.

"Good afternoon, Draco. What seems to be the problem? Your intake was rather sparse on the details," Rowe pointed out.

"I'm, er..." I looked at the picture of a soothing sunset on the wall next to me. "I'm having a personal problem."
"What sort of problem?" Rowe asked with a frown of concern.

"It's nothing, I just, erm… well, you see... I can't, erm… can't... you know?"

"OH FOR MERLIN'S SAKE!" Harry roared in frustration. "Draco's been unable to get an erection for DAYS!!! MORE THAN A WEEK EVEN!!!"

I glared at you and clamped your mouth and head between my hands. "Shout that a little louder, why don't you?! I don't think they heard you in the Janus Thickey Ward!"

You tried to verbally defend yourself but couldn't get more than mumbles out because of my hands. I may have been strangling you a bit as well.

In a reasonable volume, Oliver quietly explained that neither of you could recall me being able to get it up since about a week before our wedding. This prompted me to let you go so you could take a breath.

"And even if it IS just age and stress related, I NEED Draco to get better as soon as possible so that I can have his gorgeous shaft up my arse at least three times a day again!!!"

I blushed a bit at that.

"Good Godric! Three times a day, really?" Rowe asked in surprise.

Harry nodded his head so vigorously that it appeared to be simply vibrating.

I looked away from her - at the sunset again - and mumbled. "I think I've probably overdone it in the last 20 or so years, and this is just my fate - I used up all my lifetime allotment or something."

Rowe snorted in amusement. "If there WAS such a thing, I think every man would probably use it up by his 40th birthday, and then we'd have millions of men insisting that we come up with a spell or a potion to fix it. No no, let me do some deep scans and see if I can't see what's going on."

So, she took nearly an hour to scan me with everything she could think of before FINALLY figuring out the problem. "Draco, luv, remember that hex you thought did nothing? Well, it seems like it's an Impotence Hex. As in IT'S the reason that you cannot get erect, and though you didn't give me specifics, I assume that even if you did get erect, you can't maintain it."

Once again, Harry decided to be helpful, which actually saved me from having to say any of it out loud. "As far as we can tell, an instant erection spell WILL get him hard, but it takes a cockring spell to KEEP him hard."

"And then an instant orgasm spell to finish him off," Oliver added.

"Otherwise it never happens," I grumbled. "And even the spell doesn't feel right. Bottoming is fine, but even then, it feels a bit like my prostate has gone numb."

Rowe nodded in understanding. "Yes, that all sounds like I'd expect - in regards to an Impotence Hex. Unfortunately, I don't currently know of a counter curse or antidote potion. In fact, I have never heard of this curse/hex before. My scans had to take all the bits and put them together to figure out what was going on. Which means that this hex may have been created recently. If that's the case, it may take us some time to find the cure."

I actually sighed in relief. "So... there's nothing actually wrong with ME, I've just been hexed?"
"Exactly," Rowe confirmed with an encouraging smile. "I'm going to start with the very basics - but I don't expect it to work." At that, she cast the basic spell canceling or ending spells. "There. Tonight - or whenever is a good time for you - test to see if those spells happened to end the hex. If so, great, just drop me an owl. If not, come back in on Monday and we'll see if I've found anything else to try."

Sighing, I nodded and stood up to lead the two of you out of the office. Harry gave Rowe a hug and an envelope full of vouchers to River's Song. This understandably made Rowe very happy. She wished us good luck, and then we left.

So now we're home introducing our new puppy to our babies, and so far, Nora has decided that Lumi is HERS. Ha bloody ha. That pup's MINE!

You got the peaches, I got the cream, sweet to taste, saccharine, 'cuz I'm hot, so hot, sticky sweet, from my head to my feet,
Draco
Chapter 253

Chapter Summary

Harry tries his best to break Draco's hex.

Saturday March 31, 2018

My Draco,

Sorry, Our Draco,

First of all, I am so glad we have an answer to what was happening. I mean I definitely wish you hadn't been hexed. Obviously I am going to find and murder the person who dared mess with what's MINE!

Sorry Love, I will murder the person who dared mess with what is ours.

What Ollie? That wasn't the part you had an issue with? Oh! The murder thing! I said I wouldn't ask Grandmama to do anything again, I never promised I wouldn't murder someone. What?!? Ugh, fine! Draco, Ollie is adding new requirements to our promise. Apparently I'm not allowed to do anything fun! No murdering at all!

Killjoy.

I would love you no matter what Draco, even if your dick never worked properly ever again. I married you for better or for worse. While a broken penis is definitely in the worse category, I love you for always. But knowing that it's temporary really helped my emotions level out a bit. If this is frustrating for me, and for Ollie, it has to be torture for you. I'm so sorry this has happened to you Darling.

So obviously Rowe has her work cut out for her trying to figure out this stupid hex you were hit with. So, erm, I tried helping the situation last night. I ... well ... so ... okay at least I didn't make things worse! I may have waited until you fell asleep and then cast a spell on you to make sure you stayed sound asleep while I worked my magic. I apparently am awfully full of myself because I thought maybe I could just overpower the hex.

I was not able to do that.

I know Rowe tried it, but I thought maybe with my larger power base I could make things happen she couldn't. I'm not trying to brag or be too full of myself, but I do have quite a bit of raw power. I don't like to talk about it but I'm probably on the more powerful side of average in the wizarding world. I thought maybe if I threw a super powerful "Finite Incantatem" at you the hex would go away. Nope.

Alright, most hexes or curses are immune to a simple finite unless the finite is cast by the original hex caster. I had more tricks up my sleeve.

I thought maybe if I made you insta-orgasm enough times you would just ... erm ejaculate the hex right out the orifice it went into. Yeah, that didn't work either. I just made a mess. Or technically
YOU made the mess. I cleaned it up though! Aren't you so proud of me?

Yeah, I thought not.

Since orgasming didn't seem to do the trick, maybe if I just got you insanely hard and held the spell long enough it would overcome the hex. So I cast the instant-erection spell, holding the spell's magic on you as long as I possibly could. But it also didn't work. I mean, it worked you got hard. But just for a moment. Even though I was still holding the spell, you went soft pretty quickly. But - fun fact - even when soft, the instant-erection spell seems to make you horny. So you just started rutting into the mattress while still sound asleep.

I tried about five or six fairly basic counter-curses after that. Similar to a "finite" but slightly different magics or methodologies. Eventually our Ollie forced me to give up on you and ..

Heye'a]v! My MP! Noooooooo!

Draco, I did not force Harry to give up on you. I made him stop his nonsense. I spent an hour watching him cast spells at your dick while you slept. The man had to be stopped.

Ugh, rude husband stealing my computer right out of my hands! Yes, I am talking about you Oliver Leonard! I'm not talking about my other husband who is sleeping ever so sweetly.

Okay, nevermind, Oliver is an amazingly wonderful husband. I must go and .. yeah. Do the thing I'm not going to talk to you about because you can't quite do the things I am going to do to him and I don't want to upset you. So .... yeah. Sorry, I just get insanely randy when I get to use the word husband when describing the two of you. If it helps we are going to climb into bed with you and shag each other hard until you wake up to our noises. If you can't be as involved as you want to be physically you at least get a front row seat.

People in the front row are encouraged to touch as much as they'd like to! By order of management (hehe Management is what I'm calling my cock!)

Love,
Harry
And Oliver of course

Saturday March 31st
My perfect men,

There I was, sound asleep, when the bed started shaking so vigorously that I had to wonder if the Earth was quaking or something. I popped open an eye to scan my surroundings with, and that's when I discovered the two of you, mmm... Harry was pounding Oliver into the bed so hard that I might have been shaken right out of it had I not had the foresight to cast a spell to prevent that.

Such a glorious sight!

You know, I have talked recently about how - no matter how much I love to watch - I tend to join in sooner or later because getting to touch you - to run my hands and mouth all over your bodies - is every bit as fun and often leads to an orgasm quicker. But this time, I had no actual urge to orgasm. I wasn't all that horny, and in fact, I felt that lazy lethargic feeling one gets after a good orgasm.
I now know that's because I had rather a lot of them while I was sleeping last night, but anyway...

So, there I was, laying on my side, hugging a pillow to my chest even as another perfectly cradled my head, simply watching the show. Best of all, when I got into it and started giving directions, rather than you both telling me to shut up and let you get on with it, you followed those directions. When I told you to shift positions a little so that I had a better view, you complied. When I told you to stroke yourself - Oliver - so that I could watch every flick of the wrist and twitch of your shaft, mmm...

With no urgent need to HAVE either of you, I got to indulge some of my other tactile fantasies. I shifted so that I could stroke Harry's back, ruffle his sweaty hair, squeeze his firm little arse. Pinch his rosy little nipples. And then spank him lightly, praising and encouraging him to do his best to ram our Oliver into the bed.

Then Harry decided that he didn't want his orgasm until he was on his back and Oliver was plowing him good and hard. At that point, I got to lick trails up Oliver's spine, distracting him and making him slow down - JUST to frustrate Harry. I naturally kissed both of you at every opportunity, but eventually, I relented to your pleas to get comfortable and watch the show so that you could speed up.

And I did just that, but Oliver soon looked like he was going to finish long before Harry, so I decided to change things up yet again. I fluffed up the pillows under me and reclined at the perfect angle for Harry to straddle me so that I could suck him as Oliver pounded into him from behind. Or rather, it was more like Harry fucked my face, as the pace soon grew too fast for me to do much more than hold still.

I could almost see the shiver of orgasm go up and down Harry's spine. Sure enough, my mouth was soon pumped full to overflowing, and the sounds coming out of Harry's mouth were so pornographic that I'm dead certain that Oliver had succumbed to the pleasure too and was pumping him full as well.

And that was how this became my second favorite way to wake up.

I'm looking forward to doing it again tomorrow morning! Alas, unless I'm remembering it wrong, tomorrow is Easter, and so, the two of you will more than likely be out of bed doing things with the kids LONG before I wake up.

As for right now, I'm actually still in bed, enjoying the fact that Morgana, Gabriel, and Dylan are wrestling around with Lumi in the most adorable way, while the two of you are off running with the Feisty Foursome and Nora. She's still too little and frail looking to truly keep up with any of you, but she has no problem riding in a carrier and cheering you on.

I look forward to giving you all kisses when you get back inside. It's nice and warm in here. And we MAY have hot chocolate.

You make me sing OOOOOO, la la la, you make a boy go OOOOOO, I'm in love,
Draco
Chapter 254

Chapter Summary

Harry is feeling so much better and Draco learns some shocking news.

Tuesday April 3, 2018

My Everything,

Ooh, I think I like that greeting. I always want to say My Heart or My Soul, but heart and soul are singular. Saying My Hearts or My Souls sounds weird. All of a sudden I'm Voldemort running around with pieces of my soul. I'm definitely not a Time Lord either, just the one heart here. So even though the both of you are individually and together my entire heart and soul, saying it sounds as though I'm discluding one of you.

But the word Everything? Yeah, that definitely can work when I'm speaking of you both. You (plural) are my Everything (also plural). What do you think? Does it work? Or do the both of you not actually care about the semantics of it all the way I do? I just never ever ever want to make either of you feel as though my love for you individually is less than my love as a whole or as much as I love the other. I'm sure I'm over-analyzing this whole thing, but I need you both to know how much both of you are truly my everything.

Well, as I'm sure you both know when I start extrapolating about the meanings of a singular word used in an email, I am rambling nonsense to avoid talking about something I would probably rather not talk about. My appointment with Katja this morning.

I hope you've both noticed how much better I've been doing these last few weeks. I admit going off my potions was a mistake. I admit that I need these potions, and going off them at all is probably not the right choice for me and going off of them cold turkey without talking about it with my healer was probably the worst thing I could have possibly done. I know I was difficult to live with while I was unmedicated, and I think I was probably almost as difficult to live with when I was getting back on them. I love and appreciate you both so much for putting up with my mood swings. For loving me through all the stress I was putting you through.

I promise to you both right now, I will never make such a huge medical decision on my own ever again. If I ever feel like I need to make some sort of change I will only ever do that under the careful eye of one of our trusted medical team.

I know my behavior wasn't particularly pleasant. I was having massive jumps from happy to sad and back again with every emotion in between. I definitely got stuck on anger much more than usual. But I'm so very very very thankful that as much as the anger was horrible, I didn't revert back to self harming or ... erm ... permanent self harming thoughts. That was one of the harder things to talk about during my session, the fact that I could have easily dealt with suicidal thoughts. And it's only through sheer luck that those aren't the feelings my brain decided to harp on.

I know the trauma I put my family through when I was quick to anger and slow to forgive, I can't even imagine the trauma I would have caused my loved ones if I had harmed myself in any way. Please forgive me for not looking at the big picture when I made the stupid decision that I did.
Thank you both for loving me through it all.

One of the other parts of my session that was hard to deal with was talking about Draco having been hexed. I hate that someone got to you. I hate that you've been harmed. I was having a really hard time putting into perspective that this hex hasn't caused permanent damage. It didn't kill you. It just took away one singular aspect of our very full life. Not trying to downplay it, but Katja pointed out that I was focusing a bit too much on my anger at the scum who did this. Instead I should be focusing on supporting my husbands through this hard time.

I'm hopeful that my favorite researcher, despite her busy schedule, will come up with some amazing solution as soon as possible.

Otherwise I think the session went well. I just need to keep communicating, keep taking my potions, communicate some more, and try to put into perspective every amazing thing in my life when I dwell too hard on the things I'm worried about.

And I am ready for Thursday's amazing thing in our life! Our little Queen turns one entire year old on Thursday. I can't wait to see her demolish her cake! Although, let's be honest, her dainty self is not going to smash that cake. I'm picturing pale icing on her pudgy little cheeks but I think we all know she is going to demand one of us feed her.

I've got ten galleons on Draco folding first!

Yours,
Harry

Thursday April 5th
The fires in my soul,

As you know, I spent all day yesterday trying to decide details like: Should I put out an advert HERE and hire people specifically to move to France, or should I return to France and put out the advert there to hire locals? A combination of both might be best, so then should I do one and then the other, or do them both at the same time.

And then, once I get there, should I have Tabitha with me for the first few weeks to train in the new person in charge? The most likely scenario is that I actually have to oversee the renovation of the derelict property WHILE I'm hiring people to take it over when it's finished.

All in all, it's quite a lot to think about, even though I've been through this process a lot of times before. The only thing that gives me slight pause is that this will be the first time that I'm in essence doing it by myself with the goal of getting it running well enough to operate without me as soon as possible. With all the others, getting it ready to run without us was never really the goal. Oh sure, we knew at a certain point that we would be moving on, but we never went into it SPECIFICALLY to abandon it and go home.

I'm overthinking this, just like you over thought the word everything. It speaks to all of us and works very well, what's to overthink?

In any case, my stress level had gone up a bit just thinking about everything I was about to do, and the fact that doing it meant frequent trips without you because you would be doing your own jobs. Alright fine, I can handle this. No problem.

Maybe I started freaking out a little bit or something, because today at Morgana's birthday party -
Anyway, Elena noticed that I seemed very preoccupied by something, and since it's unusual for me to sort of half ignore Morgana (or any of our babies) at such an important event, she pulled me aside and asked me what was wrong. I reminded her that I'd basically created a ghost branch of Unity in France so that we could take care of (and adopt) Nora. Then I realized that we'd never actually explained the rest, so I explained that I'd been asked by the French Minister for Magic if I'd ACTUALLY create Unity House France, and since I agreed, I was mildly freaking out about how to go about it in as efficient and timely a manner possible.

That's when Elena shocked me by grinning. "That's perfect!" She cried out. "My whole life - since I was 9 - I've wanted to run Unity House some day, except that I didn't want to take the job from Tabitha. I started my school because I am passionate about the performing arts, but also, it would give me some of the best experience possible for the future when I DO take over Unity. But I've been thinking lately that I ended up missing out on a lot of the Unity building that the others got to have because I went to Hogwarts. SO, I want to come with you!"

As I already said, this was a bit of a shock. "What? You want to leave your school so soon in order to help me start Unity France???”

She nodded. "Yeah, actually, this is perfect timing because here's my five year plan: Step one, now that I know you need help with Unity France, help with that and get a little more experience starting/running an orphanage/school. Have this baby, convince Ethan, Rose, and Rodrigo to move to Spain (or maybe France) with me, and then start up a Unity AND Traditions - and maybe even ANOTHER performing arts school! Doesn't that sound fantastic?!"

"Wait, hold on, back up! HAVE THIS BABY???” I blurted out in surprise.

Elena looked a bit shy for some reason. "Yeah... I just found out, and so, I haven't had a chance to tell them yet, and also, haven't had a chance to perform any sort of paternity test spells, so I don't know if it's Rigo's or Ethan's, but... well... I could actually USE a bit of space to think in. See, I think they will all take the news well, and things seem to be going well for us in general, but what if this is the thing that breaks the delicate balance? What if it's the straw that breaks the camel's back? What if -"

I cut her short when I realized that she could go on like this for days. Pulling her into my arms, I stroked her hair. Then I avoided the actual problem she was having.

"So, you want to go to France with me and help start up the newest Unity House. I can certainly use the help! I think it'll be lovely to have you there with me."

"Excellent!" She crowed joyously. "I'll go tell Greg and Millie we have a job for them!"

"I thought they swore off traveling for work!" I exclaimed in confusion.

"Yeah, but they have such a soft spot for Unity House that I KNOW they'll be irate if you even CONSIDER hiring anyone else," Elena informed me confidently, and come to think of it, she's not wrong.

"Alright, let them know that I plan to leave for France on Monday, but if that's too short a notice for them, they can come later. There's already a property I've been asked to fix up, revitalize, and use - so, it'll be renovation rather than building from scratch."
"Unless they decided to demolish and rebuild," Elena pointed out with a kiss to my cheek before running off. Presumably, she's also going to be telling her lovers that I desperately need her help and that she couldn't possibly let me down.

So... if you can't find me during the next few hours, I may or may not be conducting my planning in our closet. Under NO circumstances tell Ethan or Rodrigo where I am, since I don't want to have explain to them why I suddenly NEED my daughter to come to France with me. Nor do I want to have to evade and avoid the real reason she wants to come with me.

I loved you since I knew ya, I wouldn't talk down to ya, I have to tell you just how I feel,
Draco
Chapter 255

Chapter Summary

Lol

Chapter Notes

See the end of the chapter for notes

Saturday April 7, 2018

Damn it,

One of my husbands is going to France on Monday. My other husband and I have to go back to work on Monday. My baby girl is apparently also leaving for France on Monday. This weekend should be full of last minute packing, last minute snuggles, and mostly just spending every spare moment together until we need to leave for our respective weekday responsibilities.

Instead, I am laid up in bed nursing a cold. And it can't even be something cool like the Dragon Flu ... fine Draco I know having the actual Dragon Flu isn't any fun at all but at least it sounds cooler than "I have a cold."

Also, I think it's bullshite that it's called a cold when I am so ridiculously hot. Honestly, what kind of setting do you people have the heating charms on this damn Manor huh? Surface of the sun? Satan's arsehole? I'm so hot right now that I think my eyes are leaking. No, I don't mean I'm crying and unwilling to admit it. I mean I think my eyes are literally leaking. I feel tears coming out, and my face becomes even damper than just the sweat was causing it to be.

To be fair, every so often I do flash quickly into freezing my bollocks off for a minute or two before I go right back to sweating the aforementioned bollocks off. I will concede to calling my illness a cold during those specific moments in time when the chills hit me hard out of nowhere. But no other time.

And I think I've lost it. There's a chance the fever has gotten high enough to cook my brain a little. Not enough for me to have serious brain damage, but just enough to make me a loopy idiot. How loopy do you ask? Well, I read your email earlier today. Usually I don't go two days without reading an email but we've been pretty busy the last few days preparing for our upcoming things we have to do. Like you going to France and Ollie and I going back to Hogwarts, and ... wait I already said all of this didn't I?

Anywho, because we've been so busy and I knew if there was something super important happening you would have just told me, right? So, I let the email sit unread for two days. Yeah, I assumed you'd tell me and Oliver important things like OUR BABY GIRL IS HAVING ANOTHER BABY!!!! Draco Lucius, what in the actual fuck? We're going to be Grandpas again!!

I'm so excited but I can't believe you just sat on this information for two whole days! I have half a mind to come kiss you senseless! Which normally wouldn't be a threat, but besides being gross and drippy, I am also very likely contagious. So, if you don't want to be germified, I would suggest not keeping things from us you wanker!
But I think I might pass out now. Better go take another Pepper-up!

Boogerily,
Harry

Saturday April 7th
WAIT!!!
Whoa whoa wait! Harry, YOU have a cold??! A COLD??! Nothing more?
Uhnt-uh! No! I do not accept this!
No Oliver! DON'T you DARE tell me to calm down! You don't understand! HARRY NEVER GETS SICK!!!

Like in all the time I've EVER known him, he NEVER gets sick! Something is wrong! Something is terribly TERRIBLY wrong!!! I'm calling Rowe! I'm canceling all my plans for further notice! I'm canceling Sunday! Sunday may NOT come until Harry is better!

Or in other words, this shit better clear up NOW!

Oh good, Rowe just arrived. I suppose offering to give her a two week paid holiday in the Maldives was a proper incentive...

I WAS RIGHT!!! I fucking KNEW it! You can't get one past me, Harry bloody Potter Malfoy Wood!

Rowe says that you have phenomenal luck. See ANYONE else with this sort Volcano Flu would probably be in utter misery and practically DYING, but YOU have such a high healing factor that you probably wouldn't have even gotten sick if you weren't abnormally stressed over the past few weeks. And sure, heading off to the Arctic might have been what exposed you in the first place, but it's not a big deal because you would have just fought it off - so don't feel guilty or anything.

I suspected something was wrong when you said you weren't feel well, but when you went on and on about being hot, I was definitely certain you didn't have JUST a cold. Good thing I pay attention to everything you do! You almost never get sick - sure, there was that ONE time with the pneumonia (I think), but other than that, nope!

BUT there's been your usual lack of sleep, getting married, adopting a new child, my own health issue, and me leaving for business. You MAY even be worrying that I might go out and do things while on this trip. Yes, being literally impotent does hinder such things, but as you and Oliver have noticed, I CAN still bottom and quite enjoy it.

But I hope you can rationalize that particular fear away. I'm going to be WAY too busy working to do anything else, and even if I did go dancing or something, I can guarantee that the arsehole in my pants won't even notice anything anyway. Plus, I'd probably just dance with Elena.

So, all in all, nothing to worry about. Happily, Rowe prescribed you sleeping potions in addition to the potion that can help you get over this particular flu quicker. Probably not overnight, but hopefully before I leave on Monday.

And by the way, the REASON I didn't say anything about Elena out loud was that I assumed that you were pretending you didn't know anything in order to help keep her secret until she's ready to tell it. It didn't occur to me that you hadn't found out yet.

Anyway, Oliver, since I was right and NOT overreacting! You owe me, so we're going up to the playroom to discuss payment options. See you there in five minutes or less.

I will rock you,
Draco

Chapter End Notes

FYI It was Chrissie who actually had the cold, lol ^_^
Chapter 256

Chapter Summary

Draco has left for France.

Monday April 9, 2018

Draco,

We miss you already! Hurry up and come home! How long are you going to be gone again? An hour? Two hours? Ugh, fine, I know it's more than two hours, I'm just trying to ignore that particular information.

It's just a bit of a rough day for me. I'm not contagious, I'm feeling better, but I'm at that point where I may not be sick but I am recovering from the lack of eating or sleeping properly for the duration of my illness. Add to that the fact that I'm not used to being sick as you so sweetly pointed out and I'm probably not anyone's first choice to spend time with today.

Then, it's our sweet babies' birthday today. I managed to bring Eris her traditional breakfast in bed. Although, unlike when she was a child, I definitely had to get one of the elves to make sure everyone was decent before I went barging into her room. Yuck, I've had quite enough of our kids being adults thank you very much! Good thing I made enough for breakfast to feed a small army. Our little Luka ate about half of Eri's breakfast! He must be going through a growth spurt or something.

Our Luka ... he is so beautiful I kind of can't stand it. Our children could be absolutely hideous and I'd think they were the most beautiful human beings on the planet. But we have had enough random compliments from perfect strangers that I'm pretty sure it's not just Daddy-Bias and they really are insanely gorgeous. And again, even if they were ugly I would want to see their little faces repeated in their children. I love seeing your features in miniature on Gemi and Evie, I love having a glimpse into Elena's baby face when I look at Raf, and I love seeing my own eyes mirrored back to me from Luka's little face.

I won't even pretend to be a good person about it and I will fully admit I want our grandchildren to look completely like our side of their family. So far it's been pretty well according to my master plan! They do each have hints of features from their other parent, Evie's face might be River, but her coloring is all Maha. Gemi looks so much like Ori, but I see hints of Farrah in their features. And Luka, he looks mostly like Eris, but he probably has the most non-Malfoy features of any of our biological grandchildren. Eri and Eric are both so ridiculously beautiful and somehow they've made this child who could be the poster-baby for human perfection. He's so beautiful I kind of can't stand it.

I can't wait to see Ollie's features in miniature ....

Merlin! In all the hullabaloo over me being sick this weekend, I completely forgot it's been two weeks. Two weeks since we got married. Two weeks since we went on our honeymoon. Two weeks since ... we tried. And we completely forgot to test Ollie while you were here. For crying out loud we could have had him professionally tested by Rowe when she was here for me! And now you're in another country! Should we wait or should we test?

Screw it! I'm not waiting.

Dictation device turns on

"Harry, why do you look freaked out? Why are you pointing your wand at me?"

"I promise I'm alright love, just can you do me a favor and close your eyes?"

Oliver gasps, "You're freaking me out Harry, you're not Imperiused or anything, are you?"

Harry laughs, "No, definitely not. I'm immune. I just want to do a quick spell but it will be easier if your eyes are closed. Please Love, trust me?"

"Of course I trust you, go ahead."

The sound of a spell being cast is heard.

Harry whispers, choking back tears, "It worked. Oh my Gods, it worked. Ollie! It worked!"

Oliver's eyes pop open as he asks "What worked Harry?"

"Look at your stomach Ollie, just look!"

"Is that?" Oliver asks like he wants desperately for it to be true, "Am I?"

"Yes, yes, yes, oh thank Merlin yes! It worked! Ollie! You're having our baby!" Harry manages to get that final sentence out before he starts sobbing.

Crying and kissing noises can be heard for a few moments before the dictation device sends the email and turns itself off.

---

Monday April 9th
My dearest Harry and our precious Oliver,

As you know by now, but apparently didn't when you wrote your email, that cheeky mini me of mine came home for his birthday. He arrived when you and Oliver were off getting the younger kids ready for lunch and actually making lunch, I'm sure. I was getting ready to leave for France in our suite, doing my morning routine and the like, waiting for Elena to finish her packing and arrive, which I'm sure she was being extra thorough on because she knows I take 'forever' to get ready in the morning.

Anyway, there I was, doing a fabulous Warrior Pose - if I do say so myself - when Orion startled me by laughing. "I forgot you do yoga, dad. I suppose that I just picture fire dancing when I think of you exercising."

"Orion!" I blurted out in surprise, rushing to hug him and give Gemini a bunch of kisses. Ze is looking more adorable than ever! I had noticed but ignored Orion's companions.

"I missed you too, dad," Orion informed me with a tight hug. Then he gestured to the approximately 25 year old man and 30 or so year old woman with him. "This is my secretary and assistant."
I raised a brow and gave him a look of pure Malfoy disbelief. "Oh? Is THAT why you have them both collared?"

They both blushed a bit and looked down, but didn't say anything.

Orion chuckled and flapped his hand at me. "No, I have them both collared because they're fantastic subs! I apparently ALSO forgot that you'd know what the collars meant."

I snorted in amusement. "Ha! Go take a look at the collar on your dad's neck and ask him how long he's had that, and then wonder again how you forgot that I gave it to him before you were even born."

"Fair enough," Orion conceded with a shrug. "This is Ben and Mara."

I studied the collars on their necks for a moment, taking note of the fact that they 'could' have just been regular jewelry - thick gold chains that were tight but not quite tight enough to be called a choker. The only reason I knew they were actually collars is that they both had pendants dangling from them that looked like odd dots and lines unless you have a child named Orion and could recognize his constellation anywhere.

"Lovely to meet you both, but I'm afraid you all will have to excuse me soon. As much as I am delighted to get a chance to hug you, Orion - Happy birthday by the way - I have to leave soon for France. Whenever your sister shows up ready to go."

"Which sister?" Orion asked curiously.

"Elena. She has drama you may want to ask her about going on and is coming with me. That said, I'm curious about one thing." I looked the decently fit and attractive man and woman over. "Do you actually know that he is JUST turning 18 today?"

They both nodded and mumbled a respectful and obedient: "Yes sir."

"Dad," Orion lightly growled at me. "I'm CLEARLY the one in charge in this relationship. There's no need to blather on about age and them taking advantage of the fact that I'm recently a widower and only three months into a vow of sobriety. I own a bank, I am their boss, and if anything, people could accuse me of using my power and position over THEM. But it's not like that."

"Hmm..." I harrumphed lightly. "Well, since you actually are 18 as of today AND already living on your own half a world away from me, I'll not make a fuss, but forgive me for being a little concerned about you."

"Thank you, dad, but there's no need to worry about me. I'm doing MUCH better than I was," Orion assured me.

I sighed in acceptance. "Well, so long as you're happy." I took Gemini from him and held zir up. "And as long as my gorgeous grandchild is happy, that's all that matters to me. OH! Lumi! LUMI, come 'ere girl!"

Muffy popped into the room with Lumi, who promptly ran around in far too enthusiastic excitement.

"This is my newest pet, Lumimyrsky. We got her in the Arctic Circle, she's obviously a husky, but she's got a small birth defect in one of her front paws and can't run quite as well as all the other dogs, and so, they were going to get RID of her. After seeing her and falling in love at first sight, I just couldn't leave her there!"
Orion was laughing happily as he played with my energetic furball. "Hi there, Lumi. Aww, such a pretty girl!"

I sighed a bit morosely. "Unfortunately for me, Nora has declared that Lumi actually belongs to HER and that I'd better not take her with me."

"ARE YOU READY TO LEAVE YET, DAD?!" Elena roared as she popped into our suite, likely in the loo. "I SWEAR that if you try to tell me that you haven't got your face on yet, I'll murder you with you're own intestines!" She got closer as she threatened until she poked her head out of the door to our bedroom. "Ethan and Rose are supportive enough, but Rigo - OH! ORION!"

She ran over and hugged her brother. "Happy birthday Ori!"

"Dad mentioned something about drama; what's going on?" Orion asked in concern.

"AHHH!" Elena cried out in frustration. "I'm pregnant again, and since I was being STUPID and maybe half-consciously hoping to get pregnant again, I wasn't using any sort of protection, even though THEY assumed that I was taking potions to vanish my egg each month, and so, I have NO IDEA if Ethan or Rodrigo is the father, and I DON'T KNOW how they're going to react to this news. If it's Ethan's, I think Rodrigo might actually get mad and decide to dump me, and if it's HIS, I think he might insist that I commit to just him once and for all, and I DON'T WANT TO HAVE TO CHOOSE BETWEEN THEM!!! WHY CAN'T HE JUST BE HAPPY WITH THINGS THE WAY THEY ARE?!?!?!"

Orion chuckled a bit awkwardly. "Yeah... I'm not getting in the middle of that. Good luck sis!"

She exhaled in exasperation. "Well you're no help! In any case, I'm going to France until I can figure out how to deal with all possibilities."

"Okay, well, can both of you do me a huge favor? When you go say goodbye to dad and Oliver, can you NOT mention that I'm here? I want to set Gemi in his path and hide while I watch him find her and start freaking out. After all, Jaz was Apparating from that age, he might assume that Gemi somehow came to see him by Apparating herself across the entire ocean. I think it'll be hilarious!"

I couldn't help but laugh. "That's a bit cruel, so try not to have TOO much fun trolling your father."

Orion promptly looked both scandalized and innocent as fuck. "Who me? Go overboard? Since WHEN have I EVER gone too far?"

Elena and I both gave him LOOKS that plainly asked: "Are you serious??" To which he waved his hands back and forth a bit frantically. "Don't answer that! I'm perfectly well aware that I was joking and why!"

"DAMN Ori!" Elena blurted out as she inspected Ben and Mara's collars. "TWO subs?? I don't even want one! My kink is having my feet played with."

"I didn't need to know that," I replied with a flinch that made Ben smile and Mara uncontrollably giggle in amusement and cover her mouth with a fist as she looked away.

Elena smirked at me. "And dancing! If we can start things with a hot and passionate dance, I'm raring to go for HOURS!"

"I'm just going to stick my fingers in my ears and sing at the top of my lungs until this conversation is over," I informed them dryly.
Orion and Elena both ROARED in laughter at me, giving me hugs and kisses on the cheek.

"NOW you know what it's like to just be minding one's own business and learn things best unknown!" Orion heckled me, even going so far as to poke me in the side with his elbow. "Such as that time we popped back home real quick only to find you looking way way WAY too bloody hot in leather trousers and pirate earrings of all things, talking about how you and dad were hosting a play party. That was like above and beyond in the category of things I didn't really need to know!"

I stroked my chin in thought for a moment. "Yeah, but would you have really have felt more comfortable if I said something else? I'm certain you were old enough by that point to put two and two together and realize that things were sexual even if I'd claimed it to just be a regular party."

This made Orion think a moment. "Hmm... you're right, I think I might have been even more horrified if you'd tried to hide it and then I realized later on that I'm a bit weird in that department. I'd have felt like maybe I couldn't talk to you about it."

Elena laughed and slung an arm over my shoulder. "Dad has certainly come a long way in the being comfortable about talking about our sex lives with us department. Sure, he still doesn't want to know details, but I bet he didn't really react when he noticed your two subs there."

"That's true," Orion agreed with a nod. "He just hinted that he'd prefer me to be with idiots my own age."

Which actually made me think for a moment. "Ah... yeah, I could actually see that being a bad thing if they were completely new to kink. It would be harder to get the dynamics right until they've had some experience."

"Exactly!" Orion agreed with a smug nod.

"Alright, well, as much as I'd love to stay and chat about sex with you all day," Elena said, kissing Orion on the cheek. "We really do have important things to do today. We've got to meet with the French Minister in about an hour to discuss the property she wants us to use, then look it over, and eventually sign paperwork if everything looks good. Which means that Greg and Millie are probably waiting at our hotel in France, rather impatient to get started and taking bets on how long it'll be before dad is finally ready to go."

"Oi!" I protested indignantly. "I don't ALWAYS take forever!"

For some reason, this made both Elena and Orion laugh so hard that they couldn't breathe, had to bend over, and eventually started coughing and hacking. I stood there, crossing my arms and glaring at them. They carried on for a good five minutes before I could get through to them.

"I thought you said we were going to go say goodbye and leave. NOW who's taking forever?!"

With Pippa's help, I managed to get Elena to sober up so that we could come say goodbye to you two and the littles. I look forward to hearing the results of Orion's little prank.

And Oliver, my love, I am so bloody happy for you and us! I think I'm going to make an international floo call when I'm done here just so I can kiss you a bit. Or a lot!

You are my angel, come from way above, I love you love you love you love you, Draco Bwahahahaha!

Was Orion joking with that farce of a prank? You think I can't recognize a pointy little Malfoy nose from a mile away? I know we have powerful children and grandchildren, but even I as a fully trained and grown wizard can't apparate here from California. So when I saw Gemi, I knew immediately that even if they had apparated to me, it would have been because their Daddy was very close by.

Which was the case. I'm sorry I didn't react like Ori expected, but hopefully me being so unbelievably thrilled to see them both helped soften that blow.

I am definitely still missing you Dragon, but having Ori here on his birthday and having the breathtaking Gemini here to smooch all over helps ease the heartache just a little.

Sorry this is short, but I am off to get in some more of this California-Baby cuddles while I still can!

Love,
Your Harry

Friday April 13th
My loves,

So, this week has been hugely productive. On Monday, we met with the French Minister for Magic, and she brought us to the property she wants us to renovate. Greg and Millie inspected it and found it to be in really good condition for a building classified as derelict. So, they immediately started on the planning process - which Elena helped with as she already had a mental map of the building in her head and was able to plan out how to best use the space.

Or in other words, she spent so much time at Unity House over the years that she's got really good first hand knowledge of which bits of it work and which bits could use improvement. With the three of them well in hand, I insisted that Pippa and Muffy clean up a room that I could use as a temporary office for the hiring process. I'd taken out an Advert in both Britain and France before coming here, so once I had a space, I had Pippa contact the applicants that had responded and tell them where to come.

The hiring process has been interesting. It seems that the Minister sent a person from the Department of Children and Families - or their equivalent - to come apply for the top spot, which makes sense as this person would be able to liaison with the Ministry easily. The person happened to be a woman named Sophie, and since she passed my Legilimens boosted interview, I hired her and had her meet up with Elena to chat for a bit before sending her to Tabitha to do a bit of training.

As the rest of the employees have been hired, they've been given the task of helping out with the renovations, specifically the part that happens after Greg and Millie are done with a particular room. The painting and decorating bits. Elena's been having a blast shopping for every single thing that needs to be bought - the beds and bedding, other furniture, the dishes, a variety of clothes in case of emergencies, and probably a lot of things I can't even think of at the moment.
Happily, to destress and relax each night that we've been here, Elena and I have had a bit of a dinner date when done working for the day. We've gone out to a lovely place where we can dance to some lively French music. Thus, we've had a wonderful amount of bonding the last week.

But at this moment, I'm actually in this office trying to tie up as many loose strings as possible so that I can come home. One of those strings is telling you about what just happened with Elena. See, I had decided to take a break for a few minutes and went to go check on how things were progressing. Elena was in the middle of helping Greg with the dining hall - while Millie was working on the kitchen - and my visit provoked a small tea break.

During the break, Elena unsurprisingly burst into song, and this prompted me to join in with her. She was glowing with happiness, dancing back and forth between me and Greg - both of us obliging her with dances - when some soft laughter startled us.

"I LOVE when you get lost in a dance."

"Ethan!" Elena blurted out in surprise, spinning around to face him. "Rose! RODRIGO?!!"

The three of them waved at her. Rodrigo explained things. "I know I'm in charge of the school when you're gone, but I decided that since it's Friday, I could take off a bit early to come visit you. See, the three of us have talked about things, and we've come to a decision."

"Oh?" Elena asked nervously.

Rose nodded, taking over as spokesperson. "None of us are idiots. We KNOW you, so we figured out pretty quickly that you're running away from something. After we brainstormed about it for a couple of days, it occurred to us that you've seemed uneasy about being caught between two valid yet separate relationships. So, we decided to take the drama out of the situation by talking it over and agreeing that we WEREN'T going to make you choose between us."

Ethan nodded in agreement. "Roddy and I are probably never going to want to form a Quartet like your Aunt and her lovers have, but we do like and respect each other as friends. And we both love you. We both want you to be happy. So, we've all promised to work with you and each other to maintain a comfortable balance so that you can stop being uneasy."

Rodrigo nodded to emphasize Ethan's point. He caught Elena's hand and pulled her into his arms. "I love you and want nothing more than to marry you, but even if we DID get married, I wouldn't ask you to stop being with Ethan and Rose. They are married and they are committed to you every bit as much as you're committed to them. It would be heartbreaking all around if you stopped being with them - in essence tearing the children apart - JUST to appease some sort of societal expectation that we as a couple - married or not - have to keep to ourselves and never love anyone else."

Elena was silently crying by this point. She hugged Rodrigo before pulling out of his arms and burying her face in my chest. I stroked her gorgeous riot of curls soothingly and kissed her on the head.

"And what if Elena has more children? How do the three of you feel about her having kids? Will it matter to you who the father of them is?"

Ethan and Rodrigo looked at each other for a long moment before shrugging.

"I already have three, so I don't NEED to have more biological ones," Ethan said. "But also, I feel that since Elena's children would be Rafael's siblings, they would automatically be my kids' extra siblings, and thus, my kids whether they are mine or not."

Rodrigo smiled. "And I would LOVE to have kids, so I'm not unhappy if Elena wants more. I actually suspect that I cannot have any biologically, that I'm infertile, so if Elena lets me, I'll love ALL her children as if they were my own. I've always loved kids, it's why I wanted to help her run her school, so I could be around kids, even if I can't have any."

"So none of you will be upset if Elena happens to be pregnant right now?" I wondered, trying to sound casual and unconcerned.

Rose gasped in delight. "Oh Elena!" She ran over and pounced on our daughter, swamping her in an enthusiastic hug. "I WONDERED if that might be the case! You've, hmm... I dunno, glowed or something. I'm so happy for you!"

Elena's silent tears transformed into messy sobbing as she blubbered all over Rose. It was incoherent, but she was babbling things like being worried and relieved and so unsure about everything. While trying to calm her down, Rose let it be known that they'd also talked about Elena's goals and dreams.

None of the three of them really have anything they want to do with their lives other than Rodrigo's desire to work with kids, and Ethan and Rose's desire to bring music to kids in any way possible. Thus, they've decided that if Elena needs to move on in order to follow her dreams, they'll happily move with her. This - unsurprisingly - brought on stronger blubbering.

All in all, it looks like things are going to resolve perfectly for our baby girl.

The four of them are going to spend this weekend here in Paris (Ethan's parents are watching all of the kids, just in case you wanted to pop in on them for a visit and a chat), discussing what to do from this point on. If Elena decides to stay here with Unity France, they'll need to figure out what to do to ensure that her school lives on strongly without them, and also, things like where to live, and more importantly, one house or two.

Currently, Ethan and Rose have their own house, Rodrigo has a flat, and Elena pops back and forth between their places, the Manor, and her school (where she has a flat), but if they all move here, such an arrangement seems excessive and unnecessary, so we'll see if they decide they're all ready to live together.

But as for me, other than the last two interviews I have scheduled for today, I'm going to be coming home. I've gotten this place to the point where it'll be in the hands of a capable and caring staff, and so, the only thing I need to do is let them get on with it and come check on them once or twice before the official opening.

Thus, as I said, I just need to finish things up here and I'll be home.

Give a little bit of love to grow,
Draco
Chapter 258

Chapter Summary

Harry wakes up next to Oliver and Draco full of ideas, and Draco is dragged out of bed against his will.

Chapter Notes

Potential trigger warning: Abortion is discussed.

Saturday April 14, 2018

My Dragon,

Oh what an absolutely perfect morning I had, waking up with the correct amount of arms in our bed. Seeing a head full of platinum hair snuggled up to the brunette head I did manage to see all week. Six arms, six legs, three hearts, all wrapped up together.

Well, technically four hearts since we know there's a teeny tiny stowaway inside of our husband.

I have so many things I want to talk about, and I know we will all spend time together this evening and chat, but I think I should get most of it out now before I forget. At the very least I should broach the topic for later even if I don't go in depth. Such as I have some awesome ideas for Elena and Crew's housing options, but I don't necessarily need to draw up the blueprints in this email. The specifics can be narrowed down in person. Also, it may be important for Lainie and her loves to be present for that conversation.

Details, amirite?

So, I am going to write for a bit. Then Ollie and I plan to sneak off to Ethan's parents' and spend most of the morning with Joel, Jayden, and Rafael, then come home hopefully right around the time you wake up. If you're up and finished with your morning routine without us having come home yet shoot us an insta-owl and we'll head back right away.

Or as soon as I can, you know how long my goodbyes can be when it includes snuggly grandbabies!

Since I already brought it up I should probably start with my ideas for Elena's housing situation. First of all, and stop me if you hate this idea, but I think we should offer to pay to build the perfect house/houses for them. If they try to get all "we can afford to house ourselves ya pushy dads!" we can always pretend it's part of their pay for helping build Unity House.

Of course in that case, we could actually use it for Unity France staff in the future if or when they decide to move on to Spain or anywhere else our little world traveler decides to drag them off to!

So, they may have already figured it out during their weekend in Paris. Not that I don't think talking about realities is important, but I hope that's not what they're spending their weekend doing. I hope they're having romantic lunches, walking hand in hand ... or hand in hand in hand ... along the Seine, or even just spending the time together all four of them growing their friendships as people whose lives will be intertwined.

Anyway, as I was saying, they may have already figured it out but I have some ideas. First is to do either a duplex or houses next door to each other. Each "couple" can have their own home but close enough to the other couple that the lives can be intertwined and the kids will have access to all of them at any time.

The other idea is similar, but in my opinion better. Similar to a duplex but not so separated. Instead of it being essentially two homes with a shared wall, a single home with shared common space while also having separate spaces for when it's needed. I think of it almost like the Manor. We are a family, we all live in the same home, but all of the individual families' rooms are in different spaces. We can and do all gather together for shared meals, we all spend our time together in the game room, I see your parents and brothers and sisters throughout the entire Manor at any time of day. But when I need to be with just MY children or MY husbands, we can go to our rooms or to one of the smaller dining spaces and be secluded together.

I'm picturing a large home with a master suite on each end, one side for Rodrigo and Elena, the other side for Ethan and Rose. A huge kitchen, dining room, and living area in the middle of the house. This would be for shared meals, shared time together with all the children and adults together, a way to make the children feel part of a whole family instead of fragmented pieces or two families.

The kids' rooms could be interspersed throughout the rest of the house however the kids want. Shared rooms, individual rooms, the babies next to the master bedrooms, that's for them to decide obviously. And then near each of the master suites there could be a smaller kitchen/kitchenette and a breakfast nook or a small dining space for when the separate couples want quality time with just their portion of the family.

I'm sure you can tell I've thought about this an awful lot. Don't worry, I have no intention of trying to get us to move! I actually was thinking about something similar for Sirius, Pippa, and Leah if or when they ever want to leave the Manor or their individual homes. Leon and Pierre are being raised as the brothers they are. While I don't know for certain if any of the three adults are dating each other or anyone else, I do know they are all committed to raising the boys together.

They could have something similar. A square home with three of the corners dedicated to each adult's suite, the fourth corner being comprised of a common kitchen, dining, and living area, with the boys' rooms being centrally located so they have access to their moms and to Sirius.

I really like house planning. Maybe when I retire from teaching I'll see if Greg has any work for me in building design or redesign! It's like a puzzle people can live in!

But the sad part of these fun housing ideas is that I have to think about my baby girl moving further away from us. It was hard enough when she moved out on her own not seeing her constantly, but now she'll be in another country? Ugh! I hate it! At least this country is close by. It could be worse, she could have moved to another continent like Riv and Ori! I'm so thankful her partners have been so loving and understanding, everything wrapping up beautifully like you said, but a tiny selfish part of me wishes they'd made it just a tad bit harder so she'd think about staying.

I know, I know, worst dad ever.

Oh shoot! I promised I'd be over to see the kids by 8:30 and it's already 8:25! I have to run but remind me to tell you all about Miss Nora and her Nana Minnie!

Always,
Harry

Saturday April 14th,
UGH!

So there I was, sleeping all snuggly and sound in our warm and cozy bed, minding my own business and having a rather pleasant dream, when all of a sudden, two rotten brats - I mean wonderful sons - practically yanked me out of bed.

"Come on dad! Stop sleeping already! We want you to come run with us!"

I opened a bleary eye to peer at them. "Siri? Zwei? WHY are you breaking my ONLY rule?"
Which of course is to NEVER wake me for anything less than a dire emergency.

"Come on come ON!" They insisted, still trying to yank me out of bed. "Run with us!"

I growled and glared at them a bit. "Get your OTHER dad to run with you!"

"No! No! It HAS to be you!" They insisted.

I tried to roll over and evade their grasp. "I'm already married again, my arse can expand all it likes from here on out."

"Aww, come on dad, we just want to spend time with you," Zwei pouted, making me sigh in defeat and roll out of bed so that I could crawl to the loo and take care of that business until I woke up enough to stand properly.

Thus, right about the time I normally like to wake up, I was already dressed in a comfortable track suit and headed with the boys to the Hogwarts Quidditch Pitch. As it turns out, the REASON our boys insisted so hard is that during those weeks of me running my arse off - literally - and also lightly sparring with them to help keep us all in shape, other students had watched us. When we stopped, it seems that a lot of students asked why we'd stopped and if our boys could teach them Krav Maga basics. Well, the boys know better than to promise something like that unless they had the proper time and attention to devote to it, so they declined. That said, enough students pestered them that they decided that having a sort of gathering on Saturday afternoons could be helpful. They assumed that I could start by running with the group, and then just spar with our boys and let the rest watch and learn.

Which is about ALL I want to devote to it until I've got a little less on my plate, but if the students are serious about learning Krav Maga, I suppose I can teach them and keep myself in top form while I'm at it.

Thus, you and Oliver more than likely returned to our bedroom right about the time I normally wake up only to find me missing. At that point, I hadn't even woken up enough to send you an insta-owl letting you know where I was, but I was running about a quarter of the school around the Quidditch Pitch. Then I led the kids through stretching and blocking drills.

All in all, I was MORE than ready to call it quits, find the two of you, and grab a bite to eat - oh... 2 hours later? Only there was probably another 20 or so students sitting in the stands just watching us, and as I told all the sparring participants to bugger off before my hunger takes control of my mouth, one of the girls in the stands made her way over to me.

"Erm, excuse me, Mr. Malfoy?"

I sighed a bit reticently, SUPER reluctant to do anything that didn't involve food and tea. "Yeah, what can I help you with, luv?"

She twisted her hands nervously and looked all around to see if anyone was close enough to hear us. "Erm, well, I remember that you let that one girl - well actually she just hugged you, but we could all see that she was distraught and you took her away to talk."

"Yeah?" I prompted, already certain that she wanted to talk about something, so I gestured for her to walk with me. "Shall we head to my quarters and have a nice chat over some tea and biscuits?"

She looked like she'd just been drenched by a bucket of relief. "Yes please!"

So, not wanting to spend a single second longer than necessary getting to my refreshments, I encouraged her to jog with me all the way to our quarters. Once there, I commanded Muffy to bring me the entire Hogwarts kitchen, or at the very least, a full breakfast, not to mention the aforementioned tea and biscuits. Once I had a good gulp in me, I sighed and invited the girl to speak.

"Er... well... My name is Shayla, and I'm a Ravenclaw. Sixth Year..."

"Lovely to meet you," I stated reflexively. "What can I help you with?"

She was fidgeting with her hands, staring at them as she squirmed. "Well, you see, what happened was, erm, well, I'm kinda, sorta... pregnant."

I set my tea aside and sat up a bit straighter. "Are you hurt? Or I mean, WERE you hurt?"

She shook her head. "No, it was fun and mutual, no coercion involved, but the problem is that neither of us had had any practice casting the pregnancy prevention charms, and I'm dead certain we didn't cast them right. So, well, what I actually want to know is... Can you help me get rid of it?"

I sighed heavily and picked my tea back up so that I had an excuse to delay answering. I took a sip and even managed to nibble my bacon sandwich. Then I took another sip of tea to clear my mouth.

"Well, that's not exactly an easy question to answer. See, as a father, if you were MY daughter, I'd hope that you'd talk to me about options before deciding on that one. IF you genuinely feel that there is no better option, then I would support you in that, but I am not so sure I can just give you the help you're asking for without knowing more. Have you talked to the baby's father? Have you considered adoption? Have you talked to Madam Pomfrey to ask for a referral to a Mind Healer to discuss this matter?"

She shook her head. "Basically no to all of that. I've known about this for about 2 weeks, and I've agonized over it the whole time, so it's not like I just found out five minutes ago and decided that I have to get rid of it without giving any thought to why."

I nodded in acceptance. "Alright, so what are the reasons you've decided on this option?"

"As I've said, I'm only in Sixth Year. With the timing of it, I'd still be pregnant next year, and that would make my studies harder. The father is actually a Fifth Year and I don't think it's fair to him to even let him know. He almost certainly would want to keep it, but is it right to just dump a baby on a boy like that? He's younger than me and his family is poorer, I don't think they could afford to let him drop out, nor care for the baby while he stays in school." She paused for a moment and sighed. "As for adoption, for all the reasons I just listed, I don't think it's the right option. First of all, staying pregnant that long would interfere with my studies. Staying pregnant would eventually alert Bertram to the situation, and he'd bug me to marry him and ruin both our lives. Lastly, I just... I can't stand the idea of a baby out there of MINE unless I'm ready to be a mum and take care of it. I'd want it to NOT be adopted so that I could take it back when I'm graduated and able to raise a kid."

I remained silent to see if she had anything more to say. She seemed frustrated enough to start shouting, and I wanted to give her a moment to calm down. It also let me finish chewing my bite of food.

"Alright, here's what I'm going to do, I'm going to call in a Mind Healer named Yesenia. She's been working with children and teens in Unity House for over a decade and happens to be the person I trust to heal my mind when needed. IF after she talks you through all the issues that not even I can think of and you still want it, and IF she clears you as mentally capable of making this decision, then I will either give you the potion you need, or I'll bring you to the Healer that I trust to treat me and my family to prescribe it. It'll depend on if I have any legal issues I have to abide by. SO, while you are talking to Yesenia, I'll be talking with my lawyers to find out if I legally CAN help you, or if I HAVE to send you to professionals."

Shayla looked torn between frustration and relief. "If you're hoping I'll change my mind, I won't."

I shook my head. "No, I believe you're serious and that you've thought this through. If I thought for a moment that you might change your mind, I'd tell you how angry I was to find out that my oldest son lived for five years before I found out about him. How I would have loved and raised him from the moment he was born if I could. How I've adopted so many kids and would promise to adopt this one - if I thought for a second that it would make a difference."

Shayla pressed her lips together and looked away. Then shook her head. Nodding in acceptance, I said: "Then excuse me for a moment while I make a few calls."

At that point, I called in Yesenia - who is talking to Shayla as I write this - and I called my lawyers, who are looking into the legalities and will be calling me back shortly. I just figured that I should use the time to let you know what's going on.

I'd start a revolution... if I could get up in the morning,
Draco.
Chapter 259

Chapter Summary

Siri kicked butt!

Chapter Notes

Warning!!! Draco presents some information in his email that might be considered over the top and TMI. Please keep in mind that there is an underlying reason ^_^

See the end of the chapter for more notes

Sunday April 15, 2018

Best Day Ever!!!

Okay, probably not the best day EVER. We've had adoptions go through and children born. We've had beautiful weddings and loving naming or welcoming ceremonies. We've had too many amazing days throughout our lives for me to count today even close to the top twenty days. But as far as regular days go, it was certainly way up there.

We rented out a private box at the quidditch game. It may seem as though we're being snobby and not wanting to rub elbows with the commoners, but really there are just so many of us, with a lot of us being quite young, that a contained area seems the best choice for everyone involved. Plus it seemed unfair to have brought a cake but not enough to share with the entire stadium. That's just rude.

I just can't believe our Teddy is already twenty! Twenty years old! How did he get this old? How did WE get this old? I mean, Molly hasn't yelled "he's just a boy" at anyone on my behalf in a very long time. It's not that a want to be a teenager again, a hard no thank you on that end, but this whole pushing forty thing isn't as awesome as I thought it might be. And that's just talking about those of us who are ALMOST forty ... not a certain someone who's already surpassed that milestone some time ago who will remain nameless.

His name may or may not rhyme with Foliver.

During the match, I obviously spent most of my time watching the actual quidditch play. I wanted to take note of every move our Siri made so I could analyze each swing of the bat ad nauseum later on. But I was able to catch a few glimpses of our group in my peripheral vision that were great enough to steal my attention from the game for a little while.

I have been friends with Ron for almost twenty-seven years. In all that time I have seen him root for precisely two quidditch teams; the Gryffindor House team and the Chudley Cannons. The poor man chose the worst teams to support in terms of wearing gear that clashes with his hair! But after almost three decades of friendship I saw something I thought was previously impossible; Ron Weasley decked out head to toe in Tutshill Tornado Blue. I've known for a long time that Ron was my brother. I've known my children are his beloved nieces and nephews. I've known he'd do anything for me and mine. But somehow it still rocked me to my core to see him pridefully wearing a previously hated team's gear just for our son.

I enjoyed watching Lissa, Seph, and Nora talk our Teddy into increasingly silly morphs. Just like his mum, always willing to use his talents to make someone smile. If he ever chooses to become a dad, he'll make a truly wonderful one.

Atreyu was sneaking around trying to eat as many sweets as possible without us noticing. I don't know about the two of you but I noticed most of it. I just couldn't talk myself into stopping him. He rarely has sweets, it was a special event, and worst case scenario he'll end up with a belly-ache that will teach him to be a bit more careful about stuffing himself full.

Surprisingly, Cael was not following Trey around trying to pilfer his own sweets. No, our little Caelum was glued to his seat. I think he was more intent on watching the match than even I was. Although, possibly not quite as much as his Uncle Ron. We've always had access to the quidditch pitch, good brooms, and all that, but we've rarely ever gone to an actual game. I am pretty sure that life is over and we'll be spending a lot of our time watching professional quidditch now that Cael's caught the bug.

And then .... Tornados win! Tornados win! Yes! Our boy is the best beater to ever exist! And oops, I did make the mistake of saying that in front of George today. I immediately attempted to apologize and he laughed the whole thing off, apparently Uncle George has no problem letting his beloved nephew hold that title. As long as I'm willing to rank Fred as a solid number two.

But birthdays, wins, and allegiance changes aside, the very best part of today was the note that was waiting for us when we got home from the game. Draco you decided to take a nice long soak in the tub since you didn't have quite as long as you would have liked this morning. And after you went in I found a note from Rowe sitting on my desk. Yes, after a looooooong search, Rowe is certain her analysis of the memories, analysis of the readings from the hex, and extensive research has found the correct counter-spell to remove that horrible hex you were hit with Draco!

So, hurry up and come out of the bath, you've been in there for almost an hour now. I need to get one of my two favorite playtoys working properly again!

Love,

Harry

P.S. I wasn't going to stick my nose in where it wasn't asked for, but since you did specifically tell me the story about Shayla I decided that was close enough to asking for it. I have a plan. It may or may not work, you know I support a woman's right to choose, but I have a way to overcome most of her concerns.

Monday April 16th

My beloved husbands,

Harry you were definitely amused, but Oliver, you looked like you were suffering from severe second hand embarrassment.

Let me back up for a second. On Saturday, Yesenia persuaded Shayla to wait one whole week - or nearly so - before taking any potions. Not because Yesenia felt that she hadn't thought things through or was mentally unsound or anything like that. No, Yesenia simply wanted Shayla to give us time to make absolutely sure that there wouldn't be any legal repercussions from helping her.
In that regard, my lawyers have assured me that since I am NOT actually a teacher here, I do not have to worry about any restrictions such as potentially being fired for giving a student an abortion potion. Legally, it is a bit more gray. If her parents found out and wanted to sue me, I could potentially be held liable, but the worst that would happen would be a civil fine and no criminal charges. In essence, the fact that I AM a Potions Master means that I can give out potions that I personally have made to anyone who ASKS for them, provided the intent is not to harm OTHERS (again gray) with the potion. Thus, I can give it to her...

It might still be better to let Rowe do it though. I still have a few days to decide, thanks to Yesenia. Shayla seems like she's put the whole thing out of mind and won't think about it again until she has to, which I wish her luck with as I'm dead certain that she won't be able to STOP thinking about it for months.

In any case, without breaking her confidence, I went to Minerva on Saturday night to have a bit of a chat. I wanted to know what she legally CAN teach about Sexual Education, and what she was willing to teach. See, way back when Miles was still in school, we basically talked her into offering Sex Ed, but since none of the professors were comfortable teaching it, and Minerva herself has some rather old fashioned hesitations about teaching it, well...

She basically feels that everyone should wait for marriage despite knowing that almost no one does. This conflict means that she recognizes that she herself would not be a good teacher for this subject. Hence the reason that the Sexual Education that has been offered for the last nearly two decades has consisted of handing all the students a book of basic information and spells that might come handy should the situation arise. Along with a strong warning that such things are not supposed to happen in school.

Again not breaking any confidences, I let Minerva know that there is a student in this school that feels she needs an abortion, and that I personally feel that this situation could have been avoided if the students had a chance to actually practice the contraceptive spells. She told me that ever since we asked her to include Sex Ed, she's made it a standard part of the agreement that parents sign that their children will be given Sexual Education as the school sees fit.

MEANING that I can actually talk to the kids and tell them as much as I want on the subject. Well, actually, I could do that anyway as I am not actually a Professor, but what I mean is that if I wanted to be a guest Professor for the day, I could make sure every student in this school knows everything I can possibly teach them.

So that's what I did today. That's the reason that Harry looked ready to laugh from happiness that the students are finally getting some much needed information, and Oliver... You looked like you wished you could cast a spell on the floor so that it would swallow you whole. Strangely enough, me giving you a reassuring kiss about halfway through the lecture DIDN'T seem to settle your nerves.

With full permission and blessings from Minerva, I hijacked this evening's dinner. I had a little help from my friend the Mediwitch, but I didn't rely on her to do anything other than correct any misinformation and help answer questions. I actually relied on a nice series of videos on that YouTube thing that Zwei told me about, called Sexplanations.

I didn't want to overwhelm them with videos, so I only used a couple. I magi-projected the videos to several 'screens' along each of the House Tables so that everyone had an excellent view of them. I chose the video on the penis, the one on the vulva, and the one on the clitoris. After the videos were over, I left the 'screens' showing the drawings of the penis and the vulva. And that's when I began the sex portion of the lesson.
Alright, I said at the beginning that I was going to be conducting a Sexual Education lesson, and as expected, all of you groaned and tried to beg me not to. Now that you can see the parts we're talking about, I'm going to tell you that the purpose of this class is to teach you what you need to know so that you can avoid accidental or unwanted pregnancies. And before you ask, the reason I am doing this is that I have a million kids and I feel that this is information that they need to know.

Most of the kids looked like they were curious about the drawings of the anatomy, but also rather afraid of others knowing they were curious. A few looked like they were sincerely considering swallowing live wasps rather than so much as glance at the drawings.

"So, to start with, I want to let you all know the most obvious way to avoid accidental pregnancy - don't have sex until you are ready to have kids."

As expected, this made most of the kids react by rolling their eyes and groaning in frustration. I smirked at them.

"That said, I know that most of you are not interested in that method. From my own personal experience, and from my kids that have talked to me about it, the main reasons for having sex are: 1- You are curious and want to know what it's like. 2- You've tried it and think it feels really good. 3- You love someone and want to be intimate with them. 4- You are being pressured into it by someone that assures you that you'll really like it. And 5- You got a bit drunk and suddenly it seems like a brilliant idea. No matter what your reasons are, I'm dead certain that getting pregnant is not on the list.

"So, I'm going to take you through all those reasons and help you deal with them appropriately," I informed them. "My goal here is to help you all remember this: Your goal is to pleasure your partner, not get them pregnant."

I paused to look around and gauge reactions. The younger kids looked rather repulsed. The older kids looked interested but trying to hide it, and our own Siri and Zwei looked like they would rather Elena or somebody was up here instead of me.

At that point, I listed several methods of pleasing a person that didn't involve penetration, including one demonstration involving a banana that had most of the Professors and all of the younger students cringing and you both looking rather eager to take my fantastic mouth back to our Quarters as soon as possible. I followed that with a demonstration on a peach. There were bowls of each fruit available for practice purposes – although I made it clear that no one was required to practice if they didn't want to, and they didn't even need to watch the demos if it made them uncomfortable. I noticed that many of the bowls got noticeably emptier, but none of the students seemed brave enough to actually practice in front of everyone else.

Except Romeo. He practiced so enthusiastically that I had to remind him that he didn't want to literally eat the banana - and by that, I mean penis.

"That goes for those of you who are interested in the peaches instead! When you hear the phrase: eat a girl; that doesn't mean eat the girl! No biting! Unless she specifically asks for that. Be gentle! AND if anyone tells you to eat their Arse, that requires special care and attention, like so..." I made that explanation and demonstration as clinical as possible, reminding those who seemed derisive of potential gay sex that girls have arses and can enjoy this too.

"Before I get into the penetrative acts, let me say a few words about consent. I'm not just going to say: 'No means no,' and assume you understand what I mean. Think of it this way: Let's say you offer to make your partner tea. Your partner says sure, but you aren't sure if they really mean it.
You can make your partner tea, but if they decide they don't want to drink it, you cannot make them. You can't get mad at them for not wanting the tea after you went to all that trouble to make it, and IF they should happen to be so tired or drunk that they pass out, DO NOT FORCE IT DOWN THEIR THROATS! Unconscious people do not want tea! If you think that is a ridiculous analogy, then perhaps it'll stick with you so that when you say: 'Hey... wanna shag?' And you get a: 'I dunno... I'm kinda tired...' You can take that as a no. Until you get an: 'Oh hell yes!' Assume the answer is no. Got it?"

The kids all looked to the floor, sort of nodding in understanding, but really, I think they were still a bit embarrassed by the whole thing. I wanted to add that if they were too embarrassed to SAY it out loud, then they certainly weren't mature enough to DO it, but I didn't want to come across as shaming anyone.

At that point, I mentioned that I was going to go through the methods to protect oneself during penetration, which was when Harry embarrassed Oliver even more by squiggling his whole body and waving his hand. "Ooo! Ooo! I'm the muggle studies teacher! Let me teach them about condoms and Sexually Transmitted Infections - both what's possible AND prevention!"

Happily, I surrendered the floor to you for a few minutes so that I could drink some tea and nibble on some biscuits. And kiss Oliver, which STILL didn't lessen his embarrassment. Admirably, Harry not only listed all the STIs and their common symptoms - or lack thereof - but he also did a REALLY good job explaining why condoms were a brilliant idea, why dental dams were a brilliant idea when going down on a girl that hadn't been tested recently, AND HOW TO USE THEM! I was seriously impressed when Harry insisted that everyone grab a banana and put a condom on it. Not to mention use the dam on the peaches.

Above and beyond, my love, above and beyond. Which is a compliment, in case you couldn't tell.

All that was left for me after that was to teach the magical versions. I decided that the contraceptive potions were both so simple that first years could do them. I mean seriously! It's FOUR ingredients for the 'unload the gun' potion, and FIVE for the vanish the egg potion. AND they're super basic in that all one needs to do is heat up the reagent, add the ingredients in order, and let them brew for five minutes or so until they turn a sky blue or a powder pink - respectively. I think even a frog could do that! In his sleep.

After the potions were finished, I taught the Anti-Pregnancy Spell, the Anti STI Spell, the STI DETECTION Spell, and the spell to ensure that if one planned to be drinking, NO ONE could remove their underwear if their blood alcohol level was above a certain number. I not only told them the spells, but I had them practice them until it seemed like they were confident in how to use them.

Surprisingly, all of that took maybe an hour and a half. The Mediwitch looked impressed with me for doing such a thorough job. She ALSO answered all the questions asked of her - which was mostly things like: "Does going wee after sex clean out all the boy goo?" Which of course, is a big fat no. And: "Can someone get pregnant from, you know, the back door?" Which she surprisingly took the time to explain that while UNCOMMON, there are actually certain circumstances in which yes, a person can get pregnant during anal sex - and not all of them are because they took a potion specifically to do that.

At the very end, after I was satisfied about a job well done, and you both were holding hands and giving me looks that promised some serious practice in the very near future, I decided to get to my surprise.

"Look, I know that I've given you a LOT of information today. I also know that MOST of you are not ready to even think about USING this information for a long time. Great! I encourage you all to wait until you are out of school and with a person that you won't regret. That said, specifically BECAUSE most of you will probably actively try to forget this lesson, I'm going to give you something important..."

I cast a spell to pass out those magical remote control devices I invented way back when. Only these were custom made. I explained: "These remote controls are preloaded with the basic spells - such as the Anti-Pregnancy Spell and the Anti-STI Spell. Plus the STI Detection Spell. There is also a lubrication spell - because too much lubrication is always better than not enough! There is also a button to activate a spell that will ONLY work on the person whose finger is on the button casting it. It's a spell to help you out a little if you are curious and trying to learn what feels good to your body. It is 100 percent better to learn what you like BEFORE adding another person to the mix, so that when your future partner asks: 'Hey, do you like it when touched here?' You won't shrug and mumble: 'I dunno,' but actually be able to say: 'No, I prefer being touched here.' Got it?"

With an astonishing range of color, the majority of the students blushed while nodding in understanding. Happy to be done with the lesson - for now, I have a feeling that a few curious people will be visiting me in the near future to ask questions - I returned to the two of you, gave you both kisses, and let you lead me back to our quarters before one of the other Professors could object to our public display of affection directly following a Sex Ed lesson.

So... it's now several hours later and I'm lying awake rather than passed out simply because I missed being able to get erect so much that now that the hex is cured and I can again, my body doesn't want to stop. I think I've given you both enough time to recover. A little. Probably. SO... I'm going to pounce on you again!

Desire, I'm hungry, and I hope you'll feed me,
Draco

Chapter End Notes

Note, I had actually planned for the cure to be MUCH harder and drawn out, but Harry was like: 'Oh hell no, I want it back NOW!' So you have Chrissie to thank for the quick resolution, lol ^_^
Chapter 260

Chapter Summary

Harry and Oliver were embarrassed during Draco's impromptu class.

Tuesday April 17, 2018

My Draco Love,

Okay, I just spent hours working and I'm about to go spend a few more hours doing the same. I am stressed, and even though the event is still a fortnight away I am already hitting peak Panicky Harry mode. So, if this email is insane, rambly, and even more all over the place than usual I apologize in advance.

But, before I get into all the planning I've already done and all the planning yet to come, I thought I would expand a bit on your descriptions from yesterday. And by expand, I mean I will tell you what was actually happening before you start thinking what you wrote was completely accurate. Everything you wrote that was a description of the lecture was accurate. I think now's the perfect time to mention that I am seriously proud of you. It was a fantastic lecture. You kept the students engaged and interested giving them a lot of information that I think will end up making a wonderful difference.

I really enjoyed doing my portion of the lecture. I've done the whole muggle aspect of birth control and other safe sex practices for my own classes, but I completely forgot that it's information that could help all the kids at Hogwarts. For some reason I just assumed the Muggleborn kids would already have been taught safe sex but I know that's not always the case. Some families don't discuss this with their children. And because our students come to us at eleven it's not likely they were given anything more than the basic biological functions in their muggle schools, if that.

However, darling ... sweetheart ... love of my life ... Oliver and I were not looking at you during your demonstration with heated eyes hoping to get your back to our rooms so we could ravage your pretty mouth. Don't get me wrong, when the lecture concluded and we made our way back to our rooms we definitely did ravage your mouth. Then, of course, we let you ravage both of our arses since we're all so happy all of your body is back online with us. But no, as much as just about anything you do turns me on, I was not sitting in a room full of hundreds of children watching you explain how to practice your skills on a piece of fruit and thinking "hot damn I want to get that mouth on me." I'd say my thoughts were more in line with the kids' "wow, this is informative but I'm suffering from a severe case of second hand embarrassment."

Since it ended with us going back to our rooms and letting you ravish us I can see how you'd be confused.

So for the future, the faces you saw me making were NOT "oh yeah baby, that's hot, let's get it on" but "oh dear Merlin this is embarrassing and I can't even pretend I don't know him!"

Not that I would want to pretend I don't know you, but I have enough internal sex shaming in me that I wanted to crawl under the head table and not come out until everyone else had left the Great Hall.
The other thing I wanted to talk with you about was my plan to offer Shayla a different solution. See, it seems as though her concerns are A) having to be pregnant and giving birth during a very busy and stressful seventh year and B) having to adopt out a child, knowing they would be out there for the rest of her life when she feels too young to raise them right away.

Again, she may just choose the route of termination. Yes, I agree you should leave the actual delivery of the potion to a Medical professional if that's the case. But, what if you were able to give her a different potion? A potion that we know is capable of being brewed and working. A potion that would speed up her pregnancy so she could give birth and be recovered well before her seventh year. If she wanted to she could either stay at Hogwarts or they could make room for her at Unity or Traditions, which has access to tutors if she prefers that way to finish out her sixth year.

Also, it's not done very often, it's actually been quite a few years since we've needed to use this option, but Unity house can essentially foster children without the ability to adopt the child out. We did it for the first time when you offered mind healing and a safe space for the child to anyone who'd had children as a result of the death eater's being on the rampage. We had a few people decide to fully give up custody of the child, but many chose to let Unity care for them in a safe space while they healed and when they were deemed healthy enough were able to regain custody. We even had that muggle woman who'd fallen into alcoholism after the death of her husband where Unity had custody of her kids for over a year while she got clean.

I've already brought this up with Yesenia and Tabitha. I haven't spoken with Shayla as I don't think it's my place, but I did want to make sure she was aware of all her options before making this huge decision.

Okay, enough of that conversation, on to what I'm incredibly stressed over!

The upcoming twentieth anniversary of the end of the war and the Battle of Hogwarts. Initially Kingsley brought this up to me before he had decided to step down as Minister. When Hermione was sworn in she told me that she absolutely thought the idea was important and wanted to keep the plans in place. The questions about HOW to do that were plentiful however. Do we do something solemn and focusing on lives lost? Do we do something particularly educational in the hopes of not letting us forget and then repeat these horrors in a generation or two? Do we have a celebration of a hard won victory?

The answer, because it was 'Mione and me doing the answering, was why not do it all.

The week of the anniversary, which lands on a Wednesday, there will be a different smaller event each day. Monday is going to be the kickoff with a display being put up in Diagon showcasing the changes our world has made over the last two decades because we've lived in a world free of constant fear. Inventions, increased muggle-wizarding relations, and increases success during and after Hogwarts for our most recent graduates being some of the bigger ones. Most of the businesses on Diagon are invited to decorate or display anything they'd like that relates to the anniversary on the streets outside their store. For example, I know Fortescue's is planning on giving out free samples of Florean's favorite ice cream in his memory.

Tuesday the Ministry will be the site of remembrance with a memorial being placed to honor all the witches and wizards who were stripped of their wands and often their dignity in those horrible farcical trials. Honoring the few that died while fighting, those that are still MIA from fleeing the wizarding world who could have been killed or maybe just living the rest of their lives as a Muggle in fear, and anyone who had to live through it and came out of the war physically unscathed but internally wounded.

On Wednesday there is going to be a solemn tour through Hogwarts grounds. Placing flowers, a marker, and having a minute of silence at each spot someone fell during the final battle. A walking tour honoring each life given up, remembering they didn't die in vain but because they loved our world enough to die for it.

That should be the end of the most solemn and emotionally draining events. Thursday there is going to be the most ridiculous contest I've ever heard of. It was George's idea, and Hermione though it was so funny I could not talk her out of it. WWW is going to sponsor a War Heroes contest. The muggles will often have celebrity lookalike contests. This will be similar except it won't be for people who LOOK like war heroes. No, it will be almost a fashion show where anyone named after a war hero is invited to come dressed as their namesake. Yeah, these (mostly young) people who carry these names are invited to stomp around a catwalk dressed practically in costume.

And yes, Uncle George made sure to let Siri, Zwei, and Lily know they were very much welcome to be in the show and he would help them with their costumes as needed.

I'm not looking forward to all the Harry costumes, but I am going to laugh my arse off at the handful of Albus costumes. Those poor bastards tripping down the aisle in gaudy robes!

Friday is the event I'm most looking forward to. A quidditch event! Hogwarts is hosting an alumni quidditch game. By the end of next week anyone who wants to play needs to submit their name, we will then put together teams as fairly as possible, and we're having a tournament. Slightly different rules than usual since we don't have all day for one individual match. The snitches will be charmed to become increasingly easier to find so that we can be assured each match will be an hour or less to fit them all in.

The best part? Minnie has already signed up!

And then Saturday will be a day long party turned gala. The daytime will host a family and kid friendly party, similar to parties we've thrown in the past for Halloween but without the extra spooky stuff or costumes. There will be a massive buffet style dinner after that. Then we will have an hour to change clothes, put kids to bed, etc, before the big gala. It will open with a reading of the names, and once that is done it will just be a massive celebration. Music, dancing, drinks, a huge party of purebloods and half-bloods and muggleborns and squibs all celebrating together that we came through the other side of a war stronger for it.

I can't wait!

I just need to have a dozen or so panic attacks between now and then since I'm so involved in the planning. If I look like I'm about to lose it you'll just knock me unconscious for a bit yeah?

Thanks, knew I could count on you!

Love,
Harry

Wednesday April 18th
My rocks,

Harry, Oliver, I might legitimately need you to hold me and just silently be there for me for a few minutes tonight. See... here's the problem. I'm sort of a hypocrite, I suppose, in that as much as I SAY I am supportive of a woman's right to choose what's best for her body - and I WOULD have helped her obtain that potion to abort the baby if she'd remained adamant about it - I just...

I'm so relieved that she changed her mind! It was eating me up a bit that she would go through with it. I mean yes, logically, I know that at only about 8 weeks pregnant, the baby was still at high risk for miscarriage, it was still too small to see without magical help, and that it was nowhere near viable, so the abortion would have ended the potential of a life rather than a fully formed and viable life.

I suppose that it's the POTENTIAL that gets to me. I just... I understand that there are more kids in this world than responsible adults ready to be parents, and I know that being raised in the system can be traumatic and sometimes worse, but... I just feel that when given the choice, I will nearly always choose to keep the baby.

Remember when I found out I was pregnant with the current set of almost triplets? It didn't take much at all to talk me into keeping them. I think that no matter how adamantly I didn't want them, I probably would have ended up keeping them and falling in love with them anyway. It's another of my fatal flaws!

But back to Shayla. After you told me your idea, Harry, I had to do a bit of soul searching because technically that potion could be considered illegal. I mean that it's one of those very gray areas that's not currently specifically illegal, but probably because I invented the potion and no one knows about it yet. If word got out, I think I could be held liable, especially if something went wrong with the baby.

Also, if word gets out that I invented the potion, some people might begin to wonder if I had a hand in Farrah's death. That thought provoked me into at least a good hour of agonizing over it in my closet. Ultimately, I think I talked myself into believing that doing this - or at least offering it - would help make up for my sin.

So, I went to visit Rowe. I first warned her that I had a student that was looking for an abortion potion, and she seemed surprisingly unsurprised by this information. Apparently St. Mungo's gets an average of 2-3 girls needing an abortion each year, at which point, the prescribing Healer goes through all the protective and preventative information that the girl SHOULD have learned before winding up in that situation.

I told her that I'd taken care of that this year for the entire school, and she not only laughed, but also hugged me tight and congratulated me on having the bravery to potentially embarrass myself in front of the whole school like that. Apparently Rowe's granddaughter had sent an owl asking for a time to chat, and based on the timing, she's certain that the chat is probably going to be on that topic.

After that, I told Rowe that I had created a potion that would accelerate the pregnancy - explaining Shayla's main reasons for wanting the abortion - and asked Rowe if she would personally be Shayla's Healer and monitor her if Shayla agreed to try that option. After some heavy thinking in silence, in which I am half certain that Rowe put two and two together, she finally nodded her head.

"In this instance and ONLY in this instance, my choices as a Healer are to prescribe an abortion potion or take a chance on an untested potion that could shorten the pregnancy enough that the baby would be born at an 'acceptable' time for the mother. I'll try it. HOWEVER, what about after that?"

"Harry is going to have the baby placed at Unity House as unadoptable until Shayla feels ready to take her back," I informed her.
She nodded in agreement. At that point, I returned to Hogwarts and brought Shayla to meet with Rowe. We explained that Rowe would be willing to prescribe the abortion potion, but that we wanted her to listen to the alternative first. I then explained your plan, Harry.

As I've already said, to my vast relief, she agreed. You were once again correct and oh so brilliant in your thinking that if we could just solve her dilemmas, she'd pick this option. When she realized that her baby would be safe and cared for in a rather loving environment, and that she could take her back when ready, Shayla burst out into sobs so great that I was forced to hug and comfort her for a good half an hour.

During that time, I made a few crucial calculations. See, I had come up with the idea for the potion when Farrah was already in her second trimester. Orion had mentioned that she was consistently measuring just a bit farther along than she should be, and I wondered if I could exploit that fact. Hence the potion, but I think that starting the potion this early could be TOO fast for the growing baby. So, I calculated that Shayla should only take a third of the potion each day - along with plenty of nutrition potions - until she was well into her second trimester. At that point, if Rowe feels that the baby is developing normally - aside from the acceleration - the dose could be increased to two thirds a potion until near the third trimester when she could take the entire potion.

Silent and feeling rather, erm… like a horrible murdering monster, I trudged toward the nearest floo after the appointment was over. Shayla followed me, probably curious why I suddenly looked like I was on my way to face a firing squad. Suddenly, a Healer that I can't recall the name of practically jumped out in front of me.

"Mr. Malfoy! I'm so happy I caught you before you left! I just wanted to let you know that our team of specialists finally finished analyzing the data from the magi-autopsy performed on Mrs. Farrah Malfoy. We're sending the report on to your son - of course - but I remember how much your family was interested to know if there was any sort of medical reason for the young woman to commit suicide, and I'm happy AND solemn to report that there was. Her brain scans show us that she had definite, erm… well, patterns that are associated with certain possible disorders. Disorders that had never been diagnosed nor treated, and so, we feel confident that had your daughter-in-law been diagnosed and treated, she would have been in a healthier state of mind and NOT killed herself."

I tilted my head at the Healer as I listened to him ramble on, and slowly, a brilliant idea filled me.

"So… you're saying that if your hospital was better funded and had better Mental Health screening, things like this could be caught sooner and treated?"

He hemmed and hawed a moment. "Er, well, I wasn't actually saying that, but it does happen to be true…"

Fine," I said with a heavy exhalation. "Let me just write out a voucher for a Million Galleons to fund the Mental Health department. I want the money to be used to hire more staff, better train the ones you have, and probably most important of all, offer free screenings to anyone who seems like it might benefit them."

The man had a fit of apoplexy, as far as I could tell, coupled with a minor heart attack. It took him a good minute or two to stop practically choking on his own tongue and spit out a thank you. Also, his hands shook so much that he dropped the voucher three times before managing to attach it to his clip board.

Strangely amused now, I escorted Shayla to Hogwarts, left her at her common room entrance, and made it my mission to find the both of you. Only, you're both still teaching, so, this recap. I'm going to go run around the Quidditch Pitch and see if any of the students join me, or if they're still too embarrassed from Sunday night to look at me, much less speak to or run with me, hahaha!

Ave Maria, please will you keep me from the misery, madness, and fools who rule this evil world, Draco
Harry wants to know when they're making the announcement, and Draco wants to know what Harry mentioned but didn't explain.

Thursday April 19, 2018

My Everything,

Gods, where to even begin?

First of all, Draco my love, I can't believe you wrote out a donation for that much money dedicated to that area of healing. I mean, no, that's not true, I DO believe it because it's so very you. You know how much mental health - the detection of issues, access to appropriate therapies, studies to discover better therapies or medicines - is a cause near and dear to my heart.

Not only have I personally dealt with my own issues, but I've seen first hand how horrible things can go when someone doesn't have the support they need to get through. And I've seen first hand how beautifully someone's life can go when they're able to get out from under the immense weighted shadow that something like chronic depression or PTSD causes.

You've always been about putting money where your mouth is. Well, since you grew yourself a very handsome backbone and grew out of your spoiled prat phase you had going for a while. But you've usually given a generous, but normal, sum of your own money and then helped raise the additional funds through traditional fundraising efforts; galas, events, even creating businesses that give portions of proceeds to those charities. But this is probably the first time you've looked at a problem and seen the immediate need for proper funding. You didn't want to wait around for others to chip in, you acted so it could happen as soon as possible to help as many people that need it as quickly as humanly possible.

I would have held you all night long last night for no reason at all, it's kind of one of my favorite things to do. Well, since you grew yourself a very handsome backbone and grew out of your spoiled prat phase you had going for a while. But you've usually given a generous, but normal, sum of your own money and then helped raise the additional funds through traditional fundraising efforts; galas, events, even creating businesses that give portions of proceeds to those charities. But this is probably the first time you've looked at a problem and seen the immediate need for proper funding. You didn't want to wait around for others to chip in, you acted so it could happen as soon as possible to help as many people that need it as quickly as humanly possible.

I would have held you all night long last night for no reason at all, it's kind of one of my favorite things to do. Well, since you grew yourself a very handsome backbone and grew out of your spoiled prat phase you had going for a while. But you've usually given a generous, but normal, sum of your own money and then helped raise the additional funds through traditional fundraising efforts; galas, events, even creating businesses that give portions of proceeds to those charities. But this is probably the first time you've looked at a problem and seen the immediate need for proper funding. You didn't want to wait around for others to chip in, you acted so it could happen as soon as possible to help as many people that need it as quickly as humanly possible.

I would have held you all night long last night for no reason at all, it's kind of one of my favorite things to do. Well, since you grew yourself a very handsome backbone and grew out of your spoiled prat phase you had going for a while. But you've usually given a generous, but normal, sum of your own money and then helped raise the additional funds through traditional fundraising efforts; galas, events, even creating businesses that give portions of proceeds to those charities. But this is probably the first time you've looked at a problem and seen the immediate need for proper funding. You didn't want to wait around for others to chip in, you acted so it could happen as soon as possible to help as many people that need it as quickly as humanly possible.

I would have held you all night long last night for no reason at all, it's kind of one of my favorite things to do. Well, since you grew yourself a very handsome backbone and grew out of your spoiled prat phase you had going for a while. But you've usually given a generous, but normal, sum of your own money and then helped raise the additional funds through traditional fundraising efforts; galas, events, even creating businesses that give portions of proceeds to those charities. But this is probably the first time you've looked at a problem and seen the immediate need for proper funding. You didn't want to wait around for others to chip in, you acted so it could happen as soon as possible to help as many people that need it as quickly as humanly possible.

Also, the fact that I have the fittest husbands to ever exist and being skin to skin to skin with them is my idea of heaven meant I was all in the moment I saw the words "I might legitimately need you to hold me" pop up in my inbox!

Mmmm, skin on skin on skin. I - erm - uh - am awfully tired, I think we should go to bed SUPER early tonight.
Together
Just the three of us
Naked

Stop it Harry! You still have a class to teach! Mind out of the gutter!
Oh! Ollie! I've been wondering but keep forgetting to ask you when we're together, not sure why I get so distracted every time I see your gorgeous face, perky arse, and kissable lips. Wait, what was I saying? Oh! I wanted to ask you when do you want to tell people about the little sprout of ours you're carrying? I always wanted to blurt it out the moment I knew. Draco preferred waiting until he was quite far along, probably so he wouldn't be judged when he continued to do whatever he damn well pleased! But as the part of our triad doing all the work, you get to make the call.

Do you want to tell everyone right away? Just a few people right away and make a bigger announcement later? Do you want to wait until a certain time to tell anyone? Do you want to do a huge reveal with fireworks or an exploding cake or ... wow I'm really big on things exploding right now aren't I? I'm somehow channeling Seamus apparently! Anyway, we can do a big flashy reveal, or an intimate family meeting. Hell, I bet you MIGHT be able to talk Draco into taking out the front page of the Prophet with the happy news if you wished it!

Who am I trying to kid, you might need to actively tell Draco he CAN'T take out the front page of the Prophet with the happy news!

Seriously, the moment you read this if you do not want him to announce it in the Prophet you should probably drop everything, find him, and stop him from running with my idea I said in complete jest.

I don't think I noticed it when I was carrying Orion, Siri, Seph, or when I had the short time with Dyl and Gabe, simply because I spent most of my time vomiting. Seriously, so much vomit. Good luck Ollie, morning sickness should start any day now! What I was saying though, was that I don't think I noticed it at the time, but seeing Draco with you I'm having flashbacks of it, our Dragon is awfully protective and he hovers. Any time I'm in the same room as both of you, he's flitting around you like a moth to a flame. Like you're his personal sun and he's orbiting you. He watches you with this light in his eyes like he can't quite believe you're really his and really carrying his baby.

Shhh, don't tell anyone, but our Draco is secretly quite a sap!

So, long story short, you're five and a half weeks pregnant (out of forty) and no it definitely wasn't a false positive. How do I know? Because I'm so excited that you're carrying, I'm so in awe that it happened for us, that after you fall asleep I sometimes cast the pregnancy reveal spell at you and just watch your stomach glow. My own personal love-shaped nightlight.

Unless you think that's super creepy, then I was completely kidding.

Possibly Kidding,
Harry

Thursday April 19th
Merlin Damnit!

Harry, it's starting to drive me mad! You were going to tell me about Nora and Minerva, and every time I think you're finally going to tell me, something seems to come up that distracts one or all three of us! I'll admit that the thing that keeps popping up is mostly me, but still, I'm dying to know! Just exactly how adorable WAS our daughter when she met the Headmistress?

Curious beyond all reason,
Draco
Friday April 20, 2018

Love,

Thank you for the reminder! I had forgotten all about it.

So, while you were still in Paris working on getting Unity France up and running, I had a super busy couple of days of classes. The feisty four spent most of their time with Hagrid, the babies mostly came with Ollie and I for classes and to the three mums a handful of times. But our sweet Nora is actually in that tough age in our family, too big to be a baby and too little to be a big kid. Poor little lamb.

This meant that one afternoon when she had no interest in sitting quietly through my class, and it was gloomy enough outside that she didn't want to run around Hagrid's hut which also meant she didn't want to be on the quidditch pitch with Daddy Ollie, she went and had a lovely tea date with Nana Minnie. Minnie told me in no uncertain terms when Nora came into our lives that she wanted to have some one on one time with her and this seemed like the perfect opportunity.

I figured she would stay for a half an hour, maybe an hour, and end with Headmistress calling for Muffy to bring Nora back to our rooms. I was pleasantly surprised after my first class when I went to check on her that Nora was still behaving wonderfully. I walked into the sitting room and they were sitting in chairs across from each other. Nora was telling some very intense story in rapid-fire french to a very attentive audience of one. I said a quick hello, kissed Nora's little button nose, and headed back to my classroom.

After my second class I went to our rooms first assuming Nora would have definitely been done by then. Nope, no Nora to be found! Although Trey and Cael were in their room being sneaky about something I've yet to figure out. I made my way back to the Headmistress' quarters only to find that Nora was still there, this time in Minnie's lap being read her favorite Madeline books. Oh goodness it was so sweet. Nora didn't even notice me enter the room she was so enthralled with the story. I got a quick nod from Minerva and I left before I ruined the moment.

Finally, after my third class, I decided if Nora was still with Nana Minnie I would remove her before she wore out her welcome. Except I couldn't force her to leave the room. Because otherwise I would have woken up the very cozy sleepy cat that Nora was petting very gently in her lap.

I can hear you ask ... but wait Headmistress McGonagall doesn't even HAVE a cat! And you'd be correct, she doesn't have a cat ... however the cat in Nora's lap had some very distinctive markings around her eyes ... like spectacles ... yep, our little girl cuddled the strict and often stern Headmistress McGonagall so well that she went into her animagus form and promptly fell asleep.

Nora made sure to tell me "chut papa, grand-mere dort"

This little girl will be the death of me.

Anyway, that's the Nora/Nana story. But I had one other thing I wanted to discuss. But probably not over email.

I'd like to have another triple mind healing session. See, I am finally feeling completely like myself after my terrible decision to go off my potions. But I am honestly really glad I went off the potions. No, don't worry, I will NOT be doing that ever again. Or at least never without Katja's specific
I promise.

But the reason I am glad I went off is because my over the top emotions made me aware of things I had been trying to bury. I assumed that once I got back on my potions all of my anger would magically disappear. I would realize I was overreacting and that I had been angry for absolutely no reason. While my behavior was over the top and I never should have acted the way I did during my many temper tantrums, I really was having those reactions and those emotions. I reacted to them immaturely and sometimes inappropriately but the feelings were real and there.

I realize that I am often, whether due to my childhood, my submissive nature, or whatever reason you'd like to put onto it, a peacemaker. I will avoid conflict at all costs. I often give in to things simply because the fight isn't worth the potential hurt feelings. And if I'd been completely able to control my emotions and my behaviors, I may have very likely talked myself out of being upset. I may have even gone as far as to try and convince Ollie not to be upset. That would have been unfair. It probably would have been a lot less stressful, but definitely less honest.

So, right now while we're still solidly in Oliver's three-month flirt embargo, while I'm feeling emotionally healed and healthy, and we've had a nice enough couple of weeks that none of us are riding high on any particular emotions, I think it would be a good time to discuss how we're feeling after the big fight, how we're feeling during this three month pause, and where we may potentially be able to make small changes when the time comes.

I may be glad I had that breakdown because I think it got a lot of things in the open, but I'm so thankful to be where we are right now. Where my brain fog has cleared enough that most of the space in my thoughts are of how in love with the both of you I am.

Eternally Yours,
Harry

Friday April 20th
My dearest husbands,

I'm so sorry, but Hermione has reminded me that she is my boss, and so I will be in her office all day and probably well into the night helping her with the many things she has on her plate with the upcoming 20th Anniversary. So if you don't see me again until May 2nd, you know where to find me. That said, I've told Pippa to call up our Mind Healers and schedule our joint session for a time that is convenient for them and the both of you. I promise that I'll confound Hermione if that's what it takes to be at that appointment. See you then!

Now if we're talking body, you've got the perfect ones, so put 'em on me,
Draco
Chapter 263

Chapter Summary

The boys talk about their joint Mind Healing session.

Sunday April 22, 2018

My Own Loves,

Wow, today's joint session was intense. I think it went well but as we left it a bit open-ended, I'm not sure things were resolved quite as much as they need to be. But that was specifically done by the mind healers because they think we need to take our time coming to a solution that we think we can live with. We need to not just agree to something in the hope of fixing things without knowing we can abide by whatever we agree to.

Oddly enough an intensely emotional joint couple's counseling session was much easier to handle when I was comfortable with myself. Apparently, conversations held when your brain isn't a cocktail of negativity go better. Who knew?

I think this was the right time to have this session. With Draco's original promise to Oliver that he wouldn't even discuss or hint about playing until at least three months after the wedding, we could talk without worrying or wondering if later that night things would already change. Right now we're in this safe honeymoon bubble where both Oliver and I know we're enough, we know we're all you need Draco, and it makes it easier to talk about what might change in the future.

For Draco, I think a little flash backwards into our first early married life was an important thing to talk about. Again, we can't go into this new marriage hanging on to the past, but some of the lessons that were hard fought and tough to learn can be something wonderful we can bring into this one. If you'll remember Dragon, I initially was alright with you flirting but I thought I would NEVER want to so much as see someone else naked. We very very slowly progressed into playing. We started with you just literally tying up your friends in a nonsexual way. We invited Blaise into our playroom with the intention that all we would do was allow him to see me submit to you. It was months and months of being together before anything besides a little flirting and a little exhibitionism took place.

I know for YOU, you've already done the progression from nothing to what we had been living previously. But Ollie hasn't. He deserves to start at a snail's pace if that's what he's comfortable with. He deserves to take it one teeny tiny step at a time and put a stop to anything he doesn't like.

I KNOW you don't like feeling limited. I get that. But there were already limits even when we were playing constantly, don't you remember? I have hard limits, I've always had hard limits. You've never had an issue following them. You've never tried to get me to kiss someone else. Why not? Wouldn't you like to see that? Wouldn't it turn you on to see me with some fantastically fit man, moaning into his mouth? Yeah? But you've never asked me to push that. You know how important it is to me that I only kiss the men I'm in love with. Why don't you feel as though that's me limiting your fun?

What about me asking you to never call me "Boy?" I don't mind, and kind of like when you call me your Good Boy. I don't have any negative connotations from my childhood from being called a good boy, especially YOUR good boy. But I was called "Boy" too many times in a horribly negative way that the idea of hearing that from my love's mouth makes me sick to my stomach. You've never once complained that I'm trying to control what you're allowed to say. Why? Because you know how much that would hurt me.

I also like when you speak filth into my ears. I love with you say things like I'm your desperate little cockslut. Not often mind you, but it does give me the sexy butterflies. But I don't like demeaning filth or being told I'm not wanted. I mean I wouldn't want to be told that you may as well fuck me since no one else will. Even if we both know that wouldn't be true. Lots of people have a humiliation kink, so why doesn't it bother you that I won't "let" you use humiliation on me since you are my Dom? Oh, because you know I'd hate it and it wouldn't make me feel good.

And even things that aren't emotionally laced but just things I'd find highly unsexy. I don't want permanent body mods (unless I choose them like my brand on my inner thigh).

Oooh, side note, I feel as though I may need a matching brand possibly on my other thigh. Ollie, I need your mark on me!

Anyway, my hard limits ... scat, watersports, body-mod, mummification, the list goes on as to things I don't want. Why aren't you upset at me limiting things?

My whole point is that there are limits that we are all comfortable with. I'm also working very very hard on only speaking for myself. It was really unfair of Oliver and I to gang up on you, make you feel as though it was us against you, and I will not be doing that anymore. I promise. But my point is that there are limits, and while you may not like being constrained, you already were. You were just comfortable with those constraints.

And I trust you absolutely and unequivocally. I KNOW that you will never go further than you know I am comfortable with. Never. I trust you. I trust you with my heart, my soul, my life, my magic, my love, my children, my future, my husband. I trust you to go anywhere and everywhere. I trust you to flirt around. I trust all of that. I know that if I or Oliver say we don't want you so much as kissing someone that you won't.

But I think we are at a bit of an impasse. And I'm not sure how we're ever going to come to a consensus. It seems to me that you want the absolute blanket permission or an absolute lack of needing permission to do anything you'd like to and have us trust you not to go too far. And we do. I do. I trust you not to go too far. But each of the three of us has a very different idea of what 'too far' entails. I am sorry but I don't think I will ever be okay with having an open marriage. I don't think I will EVER be alright with the idea that you can and will shag someone else without me knowing about it even if you're honest and tell me about it afterwards. I don't want an open marriage. I've never wanted an open marriage. All of the playing we've ever done has been together. All of the playing I will ever want to do would be together.

So the question our mind healers tasked you to answer is, will you be happy and fulfilled if I - or Oliver – am/are NEVER okay with you shagging someone else. Will you still want to be married to us if at no point in our lives will we ever be alright with you shagging anyone but the two of us? If, after talking and negotiating and compromising, either myself or Oliver comes to the realization that while we trust you, that we will NEVER want you to be with anyone else. Can you live with that?

The question I need to answer is, can I keep myself neutral and stay out of the two of your relationship? We are together as a triad. We have a relationship between all three of us. I have an individual and personal relationship with both of you separately as well. But I have to realize that means the two of you have your own personal relationship. It is unfair of me to step in, take sides, and act like I have any right to decide how the two of you feel about your individual relationship. I have to realize that some things do not have to include me. I have to realize all marriages come with ups and downs, disagreements, and it's not my place to become personally offended when one of you is upset with the other.

Can I manage to step aside when something is not my business and not try to jump in and Rage Halo over one of you for the other?

And Oliver, you need to answer for yourself, if Draco comes to realize that he can not live without sexual acts outside of our marriage is that a deal breaker for you? Also, can you trust yourself to be honest and not just say whatever you think either of us want to hear? If at the end of the time out, Draco realizes he actually NEEDS to shag outside of the three of us, can you live with that - and when the time comes, will you answer that honestly?

I love you both so much. You are my very reason for living. I'm in this for the long haul no matter how hard things get. I'm in this for always. We'll make this work. I have absolute faith that we can get through this together.

All of my love beyond the end of my days,
Harry

P.S. If ... IF Oliver ever thinks he might want to start with some baby steps and dip his toe into the playtime world, what do you think about starting small and inviting our other universe doppelgangers as a way to sleep around while physically really only sleeping with people who are almost exactly like our own husbands. Just a thought I didn't think of in the session but popped into my head while writing.

Sunday April 22nd
Harry, Oliver,

I must be getting slower in my middle age, because it took me until AFTER the session - when I was sitting there thinking everything through - for me to realize a few important things. I thinking reading your recap email, Harry, helped trigger it in my mind. Basically, I suddenly understood that we're still having a misunderstanding in the definition of terms.

See, in the session, I think we used the term playing, which is a broad enough term that it can encompass everything, but in your email, you changed it to shagging. Ah... that's the first part of the underlying problem, in my opinion. On the one hand, yes, I do love those occasions when we are literally in the middle of a play party shagging all our friends - together as a couple even if we're on opposite sides of the room. On the other hand, for these last several months that we've been arguing about this subject, do you recall me even once asking to actually SHAG anyone else?

It goes back even farther, really. I can't really remember the last time I asked or even hinted that I wanted to shag someone else. The last time we played with anyone other than Oliver was when he first came to us and we were playing with our other selves - which both of us have considered basically playing with ourselves for so long that we don't really consider them as 'others.'

I'll be surprised if you can recall a time, because even when I was pouting because I was missing fanny, I never actually asked to shag anyone. I do not necessarily want to shag anyone else and would be quite happy to never shag anyone but the two of you until we die or our libidos literally vanish. IF - and only IF - we ALL find ourselves on the same page to play, perhaps as you suggested, with our other selves, THEN I would more than likely take the opportunity to play because it is part of my kink to be able to watch you have fun even as I'm having fun too.

But no, what I have ACTUALLY been asking for is the freedom and trust to FLIRT and grope. All of the things that COULD lead up to shagging, basically those subtle or not so subtle negotiations where I use my persuasion and or my physical appeal to lure a person into my trap. Oh those heady feelings of power and possible subjugation. And then, when I have my figurative snake coiled around them - ready to strike - I can then hold up my hands and say: "Sorry, but no, do you see my husbands over there? They're the ones I really want, but thank you for the lovely offer."

It may be a bit cruel, but in the long run, it's also rather harmless as everyone in the Club (or wherever) is on the pull and they're expecting rejection almost as much as they're hoping for success.

Along the same lines - and perhaps one of the biggest reasons I want this freedom - is that more than just playing mind and power games with others, I want the ability to actually twist them to my will when needed. The situation with Jules is the perfect example, he was looking to shag and I used that expectation and hope to get him in a position where he had to listen to me. I never wanted to actually shag him, and my desire to simply snog and grind with him on the dance floor died when I realized how young he actually was. At the beginning - as I said to him - I really thought that he might be 18, but even that felt too young in my opinion to be doing what he was doing. I wanted to lay a trap for him and use some very tempting bait so that I could uncover the truth and talk him into at least trying a better way.

After all, even at 18, he would have still been the perfect age to enroll in a college course, and that money I gave him could have helped him out if he did so.

So, here are the levels and definition of the terms - as I see them: Level 0 - our current agreement where I don't kiss, touch, or otherwise play with anyone outside out marriage. Verbal flirting that doesn't cross the line into potentially offering/promising to kiss, grope, or shag anyone is fine. Level 1 - would be flirting as I define it. The freedom to not only verbally flirt, but also if we are at a club or if I was - say - dancing with Hermione or Luna (or other person such as Blaise or Ron), I could also touch and grope/grind. THIS is the level I've been asking for all along. Then there's level 2 - full permission to play or shag. I'm not asking for this level of permission and I'm genuinely not interested in it.

I think part of the underlying problem and lack of trust is simply that every time I have asked for the two of you to let me do what I like, you're both assuming I'm asking for level 2 when I'm only asking for level 1.

THAT said, when Oliver asked me for my current promise, I realized - much like you were saying in your email - that I was reacting like a rebellious teenager because it felt like I had already gone through all these steps to earn the level of trust and permission that I wanted, only for you two to 'suddenly' be taking it away from me. Except I wasn't really thinking about how I HAD earned it from Harry but not Oliver. I guess I sort of assumed that Oliver - once he learned how we were, and because he's so similar to Harry in expectations - that he would already be on the same page. Meaning the same level of trust and permission. But when I stopped to think about it, I couldn't explain why I thought that, and so, I made my promise - that I still intend to keep.

The only part of that promise that was hard for me is that it does feel a bit like... erm... well, it feels a bit like the way I imagine a wild dragon must feel. Having been born and raised in the wild, with the freedom to go anywhere or do anything, only to be caught by well-meaning men like Charlie, who simply want to preserve their lives by keeping them on reserves where muggles can't find them and try to kill them. It CAN'T be easy for the dragon to understand this sudden change.

I - at least - am human and can understand why I need to be respectful of your levels of comfort for boundaries and limits. Plus I love you both so much that I never want to hurt you. I don't WANT to be that arsehole that comes home with lipstick on his cheek, smelling of cheap perfume, making vague excuses about working late. I just wish the two of you understood that I'm not asking for that.

Suddenly my mind is running around in circles, and so, to avoid rambling and not making any sense, I think I'll leave it here for now. I just wanted to end with a more definitive answer to the questions Yesenia wanted me to think about.

If the two of you are NEVER comfortable with me doing anything above level zero, I really do think that I can live with that. I can't promise to never complain, whine, or hint otherwise - simply because I am ALWAYS trying to persuade people into doing things my way. The hunt, chase, negotiation - the PROCESS - is part of the thrill. Part of what I need. The end of that process, the part where I have to make a choice between 'sealing the deal' or returning to my beloved husbands is a bit like taking a hit of a drug. It's a natural high; it's the rush that others might feel when riding a very tall rollercoaster or skydiving.

Sigh... I suppose that another part of the underlying problem is that it is almost impossible for me to explain what it is I want and need in a way that you can both understand without it just sounding like: "I want and need this because I am a selfish bastard and was also raised to believe that I am entitled by my very birth to always have every single thing I want."

But maybe - just maybe - knowing that I'm not asking to shag other people and can in fact live without that part, well, maybe it'll help the two of you - specifically Oliver - relax. Maybe you'll no longer be afraid that this will eventually be a deal breaker for us. The other part of the question, what will I do if I learn that you are just never going to be comfortable with the level I'm asking for, we'll I don't think I will really DO anything other than I've already mentioned - try to persuade you otherwise and do whatever it takes to make you feel more comfortable with the idea.

Who knows, maybe it will just be a part of our relationship that I will always come to you with a thing I want (sexual or not) and have to really dig deep and be at the top of my game while negotiating, all while you drive me to make hard bargains. Or in other words, Oliver, maybe one of your roles will be to force me to become even better at a skill I take for granted. I can live with that. Can you, or do you feel like this thing that I'm actually quite looking forward to is just going to be too much of a pain in the arse for you?

Much to think on.

Everything I am and more,
Draco
Chapter 264

Chapter Summary

Harry likes Draco's definition of terms, and Oliver writes a full length email ^_^

Tuesday April 24, 2018

My Own,

Have we literally been fighting over two completely different things? Your description of levels is probably something we needed months ago. Honestly, for my own personal preferences, I've mostly really only had an issue with level two stuff. Lately, with how you've been pushing, I've also hated the level one stuff, but that was in direct response to the pushing. And the possessive, protective way I've reacted to seeing Ollie hurting.

I'll be honest that I don't personally love the groping. I feel like that's, to borrow your descriptions, a bit more like level one and a half. So is actively snogging. Flirty kisses, mouths open or a bit of tongue, totally level one. Acting like you're trying to map their tonsils with your tongue? Level one and a half. Dirty dancing where parts are grinding, hands roaming a bit getting a handful of fit arse, totally the level one you're talking about. Anything under the clothes or even outside the clothes, rubbing or groping that if left unchecked could literally get someone off? Level one and a half.

So yeah, according to MY definitions of the levels my personal comfort level (after the level zero restrictions are lifted) is a level one. I want to be completely honest and tell you that MY level one and a half is outside of what I'd want or be happy with, but I personally don't feel like I need to place an arbitrary line between the two. I can't and won't speak for Ollie, I don't know what his comfort level will be after a few more months.

I still don't think any of our fights would have been avoided if we had known exactly what each person was talking about. Because you were pushing back against us like we were a pair of parents you were rebelling against. You weren't taking Oliver's need to go slowly and earn his trust into account. And I wasn't being fair to you as an equal part of our relationship, or to remembering that you earned MY trust a long long time ago. And I think these fights made our Oliver realize he needs to work on his own issues with self-worth.

I think the fights were uglier than they needed to be. But I'm glad they happened. I know I would have likely kept shoving things under the rug until they caused much bigger issues. In an effort to keep the peace I would have avoided talking about things that were bothering me. Gods, we've been adults for much longer than we were ever angsty teenagers yet I seem to forget the last two decades of being aware how important communication is.

Moving on. I know you're very busy helping Hermione put the plans for the anniversary gala in place. And even though it's a bit further away you're also doing the early preparations for the upcoming tournament. That's why I'm so appreciative of the fact that you were able to take some time off for our session this weekend. And I also appreciate that you were willing to confound Hermione to get there. Luckily, she is a grown woman who has relationships of her own so she was completely supportive of you taking the time to keep your relationship healthy.
In that same breath, I need to make sure you at least come join us for a late dinner. It's our one month anniversary! Happy Anniversary my love! One month down, a million more to go. So Ollie and I planned a lovely romantic dinner at Zaire's restaurant for the three of us. And I've made certain that we'll have plenty of time to celebrate. I made a reservation at the same time at Cafe Exquis for Minster Hermione and HER loves. I know they're proud of her, but they've also been missing her like crazy. So I kill two birds with one stone; I distract Hermione so she doesn't try calling you back and I get my friends some quality time with their love they haven't seen enough of lately.

Take your time, finish up your projects, run the world, but then check out and come celebrate with your men.

If you need extra incentive, I bought Ollie and I coordinating knicker sets that we will both be wearing under our robes!

Yours,
Harry

Wednesday April 25th
Dear Harry and Draco,

Last night was wonderful!

Our dinner was the perfect way to start the night, getting us all in a romantic and lovey mood. The two of you had a few glasses of wine - enough to make Draco go into full on silly mode while Harry only got tipsy enough to babble a little more than usual. I think that if the owner wasn't our son, we might have been kicked out for Draco singing love songs. Not just singing them, like the one he started with, but going up to a clear spot of the room (where a stage could fit if Zaire wanted it to) and secretly magicking up a sound system and microphone so that he could sing those songs with accompanying music to us AND the entire restaurant.

That said, the other diners seemed to think this was actual legitimate HIRED entertainment, and not only got into it, but also gave Draco tips to the point that even if we'd had to pay for our meal, he would have had money left over. As I understand that, he put the money in an envelope and set it in Zaire's office safe during a loo break.

But once in a very amorous mood, we returned to our Quarters and took advantage of the fact that MY parents were more than happy to watch the littles for the night. Well, they're watching all but Morgana, who straight up refused to let either of them touch her and is instead spending the night ordering her beloved minion Lucius around.

I honestly tried to refer to him as Grampy Lulu (like you both do in jest) but couldn't. I feel like if I actually use that term, even in the privacy of an email, the man himself will pop up and threaten to have all of my loved ones fed to a giant snake. Well, all of them that aren't part of his family.

Anyway, taking advantage of having no children for the night, we did something that I can't stop blushing long enough to describe, but it involved Draco holding us both and praising us. It was almost humiliating the way he called us good and practically pet our heads, but I found myself moved by it. He made me BELIEVE that I really was doing so well at making him (and you) feel loved and cherished. It got to the point that I think I started crying, but it was the good kind. The kind that left me feeling pure and released from all my burdens.
Which is part of why I wanted to write this email to the both of you. It's still not my thing and I probably won't do it again for a long time, but I needed to say this.

When I read your last two emails, talking about the definition of levels and the things that were being asked for and why, I realized that my fears are all directly related to shagging. My previous husband used to control me with it - not that I realized it at the time. If I didn't do something he wanted or wasn't in the mood when he was, he'd subtly suggest that he might get it elsewhere. I've had a lot of time to wonder since his death if he actually WAS going elsewhere, but then I cannot think of a time when he would have been able to slip away for that long.

But those things are part of MY issues. It's why my fear that Draco would go elsewhere was so strong. To be honest, I haven't worked through my issues enough yet to be comfortable with changing the agreement just yet. I feel I still NEED the current agreement to cement my newly forming trust. And as our therapists often point out, trust is an odd thing in that I've never actually been given a real example of Draco being untrustworthy, and so it's not his actions that make it hard for me to trust him, but rather my own hang ups and issues.

But I'm working on it.

So that said, I spent a lot of time thinking about Harry's suggestion. IF we were to start slow and do a little experimental playing with those two who are you from another world, HOW would that work? I sort of agree that they're NOT other people as every time that I've had a chance to talk to them, they have such similar cores that the - sometimes huge - differences between you don't truly make you different people, just, hmm... I suppose that they are the way you WOULD be if you lived their circumstances.

In any case, I dunno how it would work, but I'm interested enough to think it through and discuss options with you and maybe eventually see how it would work. I can't promise though because the only thing I can actually picture at this moment is the two of you playing with them while I watch, and I don't think I would like that at all.

But... that said, I had a dream about that last night and it was so bloody hot that I made a mess in our bed like a bloody teenager! So... maybe. We'll see.

But to answer those questions directly: What will I do if I come to realize that Draco legitimately NEEDS things I am not comfortable with? I can't say for certain as I haven't been presented with the reality, but I think that at this moment in my mental health journey, I'm still in the mindset that those things should be secret. That if they happened, I would be fine so long as I didn't know about them. The rational part of me understands that THAT'S bloody mental and a surefire way to destroy everything in the end.

So... I suppose that I need to work through my hang ups and detrimental core beliefs before I can truly answer that question, but... I think that I would react much in the same way that I reacted recently, and by that I mean sob out my hurt feelings to Harry and hope that he will go all Rage Halo over Draco on my behalf. My Mind Healer helped me to realize that I prefer to play the mediator, that even if I'm actually the one hurt, I'd rather have someone else fight my battles for me so that I can step in and make peace.

Obviously, this is not healthy nor will it work if Harry manages to keep his promise to let Draco and me resolve our personal issues on our own. But it's probably where I'd start, and if Harry can't talk me into a calmer and more rational frame of mind, I might work myself into confronting Draco directly, but ultimately, I think that I am in this for life and that no matter what happens - unless it is purposely abusing me or any of our kids - I would stick with this marriage and treat each individual incident as a problem to solve and work past until we can strengthen our foundations. and move forward.

I don’t think - and this might actually be the residual part of me that was controlled for so long - but I don’t think that the infidelity I fear so much would actually be the thing that breaks the marriage for me. I think I could live with that as part of me sort of expects it eventually (again, I’m working on it). I think that now that I’m committed and can’t believe how blessed I am to be part of this family full of love, that maybe NOTHING could drive me away.

But obviously, I prefer to live with you both in full trust and love, so I think that while I might take a VERY long time to get there, I think I DO actually want to get to a place where we can ALL be at that level Draco wants and not have anything but trust between us. If that makes sense.

I’m not fancy like Draco is, so my sign off will be a simple - and probably rather abrupt,
Love always,
Oliver
Chapter 265

Chapter Summary

Harry sees his husbands for who they are, and Draco has to rush off in the middle of a thing with Oliver.

Thursday April 26, 2018

To my Beloved Draco,
And our Beloved Oliver who pretends emailing isn't his thing but he's SO good at it and adorable,

When it comes to you two, the loves of my life, I truly believe you are the best men on the planet. I cannot believe my luck in finding you two, being given the gift of being allowed to fall in love with you both, and through some strange twist of fate you both fell in love with me as well. You both know me inside and out. You know my flaws, my background, my strengths and weaknesses. You know who I am when I am sleepy and grumpy. You've become well acquainted to my temper tantrum self that we've dubbed 'Rage Halo Harry.' You've seen me wallow in my lack of self-worth, and seen me giggle like a toddler while watching cartoons.

What I am trying to say is, you've both seen the worst of me and love me anyway. You know me better than anyone else and you still think I'm someone worth loving. My husbands' continued love and support through everything is what makes me believe I might actually be as good of a man as you both seem to think I am. When I look at myself through my own perception, I see every one of my flaws in technicolor. But when I look at myself through your eyes, I feel like I could actually be the man you both believe me to be.

You make me better.

Because I know what the power of someone believing in you can do to the soul, I think I need to make more of an effort to let you both see yourself through my eyes.

Draco, I see you. I see the things you do when you think no one is looking. You act as though you want glory and fame. You pretend to want recognition for being the Ice Prince of Slytherin. You want to act like your Malfoy mask is your real face, calm with indifference. But I see you. I see the wad of tips you got for singing love songs being placed in our son's business. I see you setting aside proceeds from different businesses and earmarking them for Unity Iran and their quickly disappearing fund. I see how generous you are with your time and money. I am constantly amazed that my childhood nemesis who I would have thought was the greediest little spoiled prat I'd ever met is actually more generous and unselfish than anyone I've ever met.

Oliver, I see you. I see how deeply you've taken all of our children into your heart. I've seen you go from overwhelmed from the sheer number of tiny humans when you first got to the Manor as our guest to someone who seems to thrive on the chaos that is our lives. I see you dismantling the walls you built around yourself. Walls to guard your heart from hateful in-laws. Walls to guard your heart from an abusive husband. Walls that you constructed between yourself and the pain from not being able to carry children. Walls you placed between your children and the rest of the world. I can't believe the strength it must have taken you to let us in. To allow our children to become your children. And possibly more terrifying, for your children to become ours as well. Somehow Draco and I lucked out in finding the one man in the world who might actually love children more than we do.

Okay, I was going to write a bit more but I find myself a little weepy thinking about how lucky I am to have found you both. You make me a better man.

I'm everything I am because you loved me,
Harry

Friday April 27th
Oh Harry, you should have seen it!

Oliver had only a couple private lessons to teach today, so he came back to our Quarters to wake me. He did it in the cutest way possible too. He simply got undressed and slipped into bed with me.

I think maybe he was hoping that I'd be in the mood to shag or at least snog heavily - and to be fair,
I was - but the expression of love on his face was so tender that I couldn't help but simply hug him.
Well I did give him a kiss, but it was a gentle one. After I finished holding him, I pushed him until he was comfortable on the pillows, then I kissed a path from his neck on down to his stomach. His shaft twitched with interest, but wasn't even at half mast yet.

"Hi in there. This is your daddy Draco speaking and I know you probably don't have ears yet, but I still think you can hear me somehow. I just wanted to let you know that you are SO loved! Your daddy Oliver has been hoping and praying for you all his life, your daddy Harry started loving you probably right about the time Oliver kissed him for the first time, and I love you because you make my husbands so happy. I can't wait to take you shopping and teach you how to run businesses. I'm quite looking forward to spoiling you as the official last baby - I think. You're going to be my little spa buddy!"

"DRACO! Stop talking to the baby and start playing with ME! Please..." He pouted like an adorable cherub. I couldn't help but kiss him.

"Calm down love," I reassured him. "I'm just starting my new morning routine of telling our baby to be the hundred reasons we love him or her."

"And I am quite looking forward to hearing all of them, but perhaps a bit later. Say AFTER you take care of this sheer unreasonable horniness I'm feeling," Oliver pressed insistently.

"No, I think this is very important, and it shouldn't take me long. Perhaps an hour or two. I can play with you then," I pointed out with a warm smile and another kiss. Then I shifted to press my mouth to his stomach again. "Reason number one that we love you so much, our precious baby, is -"

Suddenly, I was interrupted, and it wasn't just Oliver doing his best to yank me away from his stomach so that he could top me if I continued to deny his request for bottoming.

"Sorry to interrupt you - or more likely wake you - Draco, but I have a few things that seem urgent and I'm not sure I can get them all done in a timely manner without your help. Do you think you could drop everything and get here. Nowish. Or now would be better actually. PLEASE?" A silvery otter begged as it swam through the air.

I let out a deeply heavy sigh of defeat even as I grabbed my wand and cast the Patronus spell. "Tell Hermione: Yeah yeah, alright. No need to send more otters to nag me into it. I'll be there as soon as I find a suitable set of robes to pull on to cover all my delicious naked bits - that Oliver is currently trying his best to entice into rising to the occasion. Unless we're having nudist day in the office, in which case, I'm all in!"

My Silvery Dragon seemed to roar out intangible flames of laughter as it flew around the room.
Oliver protested: "DRACO!" Even as my Patronus flew out of the room.

"What?" I asked in genuine confusion, thinking that maybe he wanted me to suck him off before I left. "I tell you what, why don't I cast an instant erection spell, give you a blowjob for exactly 60 seconds, and then cast an instant orgasm spell to have you fill my throat and mouth?"

"Er..." Oliver droned, clearly enticed by this suggestion. "Er, wait, no. That's not what I'm complaining about. I don't like the way you offered to go to work naked."

"What?" I asked, even more confused now.

"It's just that a LOT of people must pop in on the Minister during the day, and you sitting there naked is..." He trailed off but was then interrupted by a return Patronus.

"Honestly Draco, I don't really care if you show up naked and shag Oliver over my desk, just read this report while you do so and give me your thoughts on it."

"Well now!" I exclaimed a bit gleefully. "Sounds like I could have a highly satisfying day in the office after all!"

"DRACO!!" Oliver roared in protest and a bit of embarrassment mixed with horror.

I gave him a kiss, thoroughly enjoying the way his face was flushed from too many conflicting emotions trying to fill him at the same time.

"Admit it, a good part of you would love to shag on the Minister for Magic's desk right in front of her - and possibly her staff of advisers."

Oliver's face got so red that I really thought he might explode from it for a moment. Giving him a last kiss for now, I slipped out of bed and summoned one of my better business robes to wear to the Ministry today. I didn't even bother to put anything on underneath it, and honestly, if Hermione is serious, I might actually take it back off while I'm working.

"What... What about... about... you know... ?" Oliver muttered, looking gorgeous in his need.

"Alright, but I really have to make this quick, before Hermione decides to send a few more otters to kill the mood," I reminded him, setting myself to the task I had suggested. A minute later - give or take a few seconds - I cast the spell on him to give him an instant orgasm, swallowing down every drop of it. Looking adorable once more in his lethargy, I gave him another kiss before leaving to do my job.

See you both when I get home, which will hopefully be in time for dinner.

From within, you'll begin, feel the rise, feel the rise, breathe deep, wind down, reach back, hear the sound, you will see,
Draco
P.S. Oliver, give some of those kisses I gave you to Harry, yeah?
Chapter 266

Chapter Summary

Oliver is being mean and stingy, Harry is desperate and whiney, and Draco is ordered to join the conversation like a civilized person.

Saturday April 28, 2018

Draaaaaacooooooooo!

Oliver is being mean. Mean and stingy. Mean and stingy and kinda selfish!

You told him specifically yesterday to give me some of the kisses you gave him. But he didn't! He refused to share at all. I mean, he gave me his own kisses. Lots and lots and lots of his own kisses.

Side note: bloody hell am I enjoying this first pregnancy symptom of his increased libido! As I'm typing this, our Oliver is literally kneeling on the bed behind me sucking marks into my neck.

Sorry, sorry, sorry, he hit that one spot behind my ear that makes me lose my mind. Yeah, I am enjoying the increased sex drive almost as much as I've enjoyed the last few months of him discovering his list of kinks. You know which one he's currently testing? He's decided to see how long I can continue doing something else while he tries to destroy my self control.

He's being a tease Draco! As I write to you, he's rubbing his palm over my pants, stroking my cock through the soft fabric. But what happens when I try to pull my pants down to give him better access? The monster just laughs and pulls his hand away. It's torturous! He's touching me, not enough to get me off, but just enough to make me desperate and whiney. I mean, when was the last time you heard me this whiney?

On second thought, don't answer that.

Okay, you know what? I can't keep telling you what he's doing. That's just adding to the torture. I am going to completely ignore the fact that he's now close enough that he's grinding his own hard cock into the cleft of my arse. I will not say a single word about the fact that he just bit right at the junction where neck meets shoulder. Not a peep about how badly I want to fall to my knees and beg him to let me worship his cock like it deserves.

So, uh, how to distract myself? Oh, I know .... I can't believe you actually made it home in time for dinner last night. This is the last weekend before the big anniversary week festivities begin. I'm surprised Hermione let you go home at all, let alone at a reasonable time. And she didn't send her patronus to come get you until you were already awake? Let me get this straight, Hermione Granger has a massive week's worth of important plans starting two days from now, you were allowed to sleep in yesterday and today, and she let you go home to have a meal with your family? Who is this woman and why didn't she exist during my fifth year?

I still have nightmares about the revising schedules she put together our fifth years O.W.L.S. prep! I was never going to run away from my responsibilities with Voldemort, but I almost changed my name and went into witness protection to save me from Hermione!

It stinks that you're working on the anniversary plans all weekend, but I rather expected it anyway and at least we've been able to sleep in the same bed and see each other for dinner.

Don't worry, since you've been gone so much, I still have someone to talk to! I can't believe Ollie let you talk to the baby already! I've been dying to for weeks now! But now that I know, Oliver had better prepare himself to be privy to a LOT of Daddy/Baby conversations from here on out.

First topic of conversation on the schedule; Daddy Oliver being stingy about sharing Daddy Draco's kisses with Daddy Harry!

Unghhhhhhh, nope, tapping out! Ollie just started whispering filthy promises of filling me up into my ear.

Love you, Miss you, Hurry home,
Harry

Sunday April 29th
The passions of my heart,

Well, wasn't that a surprise? We've been wondering why the Viper and the Tiger haven't come for a visit in a while, and there was even speculation on my part that it might be because one of them had decided to get pregnant again and thus, didn't want to travel to our world until the initial lethargy and nausea subsided. As it turns out, I was wrong.

See, my counterpart ALSO ran for the position of Minister for Magic in his world, only he won that election. To be fair, HE wasn't running against Hermione, but rather, some shady fuck that NO ONE trusted. In any case, he's been so busy working that he hasn't had TIME to visit - although Viper has popped in and out for an hour or so here and there, but it's all been to visit his kids, and so we haven't seen him either.

So, today, it seems that Tiger was adamant that he needed an entire day off in which NO ONE could get a hold of him and persuade him to go back into the office. The only place he felt he could be certain of being completely incommunicado was here, and so, we had them as special guests for dinner.

Interestingly enough, they brought their Oliver with them, and even though we (alright fine, ME) expected them to be in an official relationship with him now, they are not. Oliver is not interested in them for whatever reason. If I wasn't still on a no flirting stipulation, I'd have flirted with him so heavily that he almost certainly would have changed his mind (toward them) hahahahaha!

In any case - oh! Well, It seems that I've been ordered to: "Stop writing that bloody email and join this conversation like a civilized person, Draco."

So, all my love,
Draco
Chapter 267

Sunday April 29, 2018

My Everything,

I know that Tiger and Viper are theoretically just like us. They are who we would be if we had lived their lives. Physically speaking, minus the tattoos and their ... harder personalities (due to their circumstances of course), they look practically identical. If I were half asleep or very drunk, it would probably take me a moment to tell the difference between the two Dracos and the two Olivers. If I were pissed enough, I would probably have a moment of "what am I doing standing over there?" when confronted with my own counterpart.

But those subtle differences are enough to make them completely different people. I think he's bloody fit, but I could never fall in love with the Tiger. The Viper is so vastly different from me that it's almost scary to see how hardened I would be in a different world. Not that I blame him, he had it rough, but he has shadows in his eyes that even these past years of love and safety haven't been enough to chase them away. And again, their Oliver obviously gorgeous, but he doesn't hold a candle to our Ollie.

And honestly, they've gotten close enough to their Oliver to drag him to another universe but they aren't together? Why? Are they hoping he will become interested when he sees how sappily sweetly in love we are? Oi! I just re-read your email, you said THEIR Oliver isn't interested in THEM. So they are interested in him but he doesn't feel the same way. Hmm, it is actually a pretty solid strategy to bring him here then. Viper going back and telling Tiger all about OUR love was the starting point for them falling for each other.

Sneaky boys, very very sneaky!

I'm feeding the babes right now, which is why I currently am not with the rest of you joining the conversation like a civilized person. Well, not all three babes obviously. I think Dylan for whatever reason is early weaning himself. So he's just running around acting ridiculous while Morgana and Gabe top off their tanks before bed. You know I've never had an issue feeding them wherever and whenever, I'm not secluded because of modesty or embarrassment. But lately if I feed Morgana in a room anyone else (except the two of you) is in, she pops off constantly to assess her surroundings. The constant latch/unlatch cycle is hell on my chest. So, hidden away it is.

On the bright side, I get some quality Daddy/Babies time when I do this. They're growing up too fast! I don't like it!

Anyway, I'll finish up here, rock them to sleep, and join the rest of you for whatever is on the schedule for tonight.

With every beat of my heart,
Harry

Harry!

You are missing something by feeding the babies. It's honestly fulfilling my voyeurism kink even though nothing sexual is happening. Mostly.
So Viper was asking us if we had set a date for our wedding yet, making me realize that we haven't actually seen them since, hmm... Shortly after we got engaged, I think. Of course I had to explain that we were already married.

"And are you planning to have a baby together or are you all satisfied with the millions you already have?" Tiger asked curiously.

I smiled at Oliver and kissed his hand. "Actually, our Oliver has wanted to have a baby since he first married that Edger."

Oliver started to correct me before sighing in defeat. "Ed - never mind, at this point, I'm pretty sure you are just doing it on purpose."

I feigned a higher level of haughtiness than I actually felt. "There's no need for me to concern myself with the names of people who don't matter. In any case, as I was saying, since Oliver wanted a baby fairly badly, we used a potion to combine my DNA with Harry's so that we could have one genetically belonging to all three of us, and it took on the first try."

"Wait! You mean you're pregnant?!" The other Oliver asked incredulously. He was now staring at our Oliver in awe.

"Yep," our Oliver confirmed with a tender smile.

"Oh wow!" Other Oliver exhaled reverently. "Do you mind if I talk to him?"

"He doesn't even have ears yet!" Our Oliver protested with a blush.

"We don't want to talk to the baby because he or she can hear us," I pointed out. "We want to talk to the soul that WILL be our baby, which doesn't need ears to hear us."

Oliver sighed in defeat and gestured at his fit stomach. "If you really want to, I suppose I don't mind."

Other Oliver sounded almost giddy as he knelt on the floor in between our Oliver's legs and got his mouth real close to the baby.

"Hi there, little one. This is your uncle Oliver speaking, but you and only you can call me your Uncle Verry - when you're old enough to talk. I want to tell you a little bit about me and how I'm different from your dad. Honestly, we could be twins, we're so much alike, but your dad fell in love at some point and got married and had kids. Meanwhile I kept on playing Quidditch and shagging around -"

"Oi!" Our Oliver protested. "Don't say that word in front of the baby!"

"I thought you didn't think the baby could hear me," other Oliver pointed out with a smirk.

"Still!"

Chuckling, other Oliver continued. "I always wanted to have kids some day, but I never found anyone I loved enough to settle down with, and before I knew it, I was too old."

"We're literally the same age."

Other Oliver laughed. "Or so I thought until I met your dad. He makes me think that maybe it's not too late. I could find a woman to share what's left of my life with and we could have kids. OR I can just be your fun Uncle Verry and come spend time with you when I get lonely."

"I wouldn't mind that," I murmured with a mischievous smirk. "Two Olivers for the price of one!"

Our Oliver got a weird look on his face and cast a Muffliato on us so that he could have a private conversation with his doppelganger. Hence my voyeuristic fulfillment. I'm currently watching the two of them chat while one Oliver is giving the other a light stomach massage.

Tiger and Viper seem very amused; my counterpart looking quite happy to watch too, while the Viper is getting rather handsy with his husband. The three of us are talking about Nora, since she's also a new development since the last time we saw them.

Maybe when you get back from feeding the babies, we can persuade our Oliver to let us take him to bed so that I can add some tactile delights to the kink I'm currently reveling in.

And if this would runs out of lovers, we'll still have each other, nothing's gonna stop us now, Draco
Chapter 268

Monday April 30, 2018

My Strength,

Phew, today was a very long day. We really should have put more thought into dragging Oliver back to our bed to delightfully devour him. We were up much too late for this old man to get a good start on what was a very long day.

Maybe we could have left the other universe's trio sooner to get an earlier start on taking Ollie apart piece by sexy piece. Hmm, no, I had a lovely evening catching up with them. Especially hearing about how Scor and Hyper are doing! It's been much too long since we've seen those little troublemakers!

Okay, but perhaps we could have just cut our sexy times with Oliver's naked bits a little shorter to get to sleep at an earlier time. Bwahahahahaha hee hee hoo ho ho hmmm. Yeah, no, not a good idea. I am never going to choose the option that ends with me getting less naked sexy time with our bloody fit, gloriously naked, husband. Mmmm, I kinda want to drag him into the nearest cupboard and have my way with him again.

I may actually cut this message short and do that. Hours and hours of shagging last night barely even took the edge off my hunger for my husbands.

I suppose we could have slept in a bit and missed the beginning of the first day of Twentieth Anniversary of War End weeklong celebration and remembrance. Again, that was going to be a big fat NO. If Draco is willing to get up at the crack of dawn to get his fit arse down to Diagon, then I can certainly do it as well. And if Oliver can grin through his morning sickness to get there then I have no cause for complaint.

Actually though, I am going to complain .... Oliver doesn't have to deal with morning sickness! I know, I know, I know, I don't ACTUALLY want him to be nauseous every step of the way. But I'm a bit jealous as all of my pregnancies were months and months of nausea. Even with the anti-nausea potions, I still dealt with it. It just meant most of the time I could keep food down, but I still felt off.

I apologize Love, I am thrilled you aren't exhibiting this terrible symptom I had to deal with. I just wish I hadn't had to deal with it. I probably wouldn't think anything of it if I weren't already a bit overtired and cranky.

But as tired as I am, I also think today went amazingly. And thank goodness too! I can't imagine how Ron, Blaise, and Kisa would handle going home with a defeated or moping Hermione tonight. I know how excited I was to go home with a victorious Draco tonight. Dragon, you're doing kid bedtime rounds right now but I have the feeling that, depending on who finishes first email or goodnight stories, you're either going to walk into me already shagging Oliver into the mattress OR I'm going to walk in on YOU shagging Ollie into the mattress. Don't worry, I will nix my earlier idea of dragging him into a cupboard and use our bed to make us easier to find.

So today, I think we should have thought about exactly what would be expected of us when Hermione and I put together for the Diagon Day for the celebrations. It was a showcase of Businesses on and around Diagon Alley ... of which we run or contribute to several. Even the ones we just helped get running or back on their feet after the war asked us to stop by, how could we refuse when they're all businesses we support? There was the Display highlighting the advances made in the Wizarding World ... like all the things you invented Draco, the overhaul of the education process that Traditions changed, and the way we handle cases of children's safety. Many of which we had a hand in and needed to visit to show our support. And the changes in Muggle/Squib/Wizarding relationships ... again something our Unity House and Traditions had a lot to do with.

Maybe we should have spread some of these things out more.

Did you see how cute Ollie was when we walked around and stopped at Quality Quidditch Supplies? He seems to try blending in the background when we go places all three of us. He likes to pretend he isn't a war hero who participated in the battle of Hogwarts. He likes to pretend we're the high profile faces and he's just our pretty arm candy. (Or maybe that's me who thinks he's some bloody gorgeous arm candy!) But we got to the QQS and all of a sudden, he's mobbed by broom designers wanting him to endorse their broom, the shop-owner who wants to know if he can get a signed picture of Ollie to hang up in the store, and a gaggle of fans all excited to meet a quidditch star.

We snatched up quite the trophy husband Draco!

And I'm going to go cash in on my reward! Mmmm, naked Oliver bits! And hopefully some naked Draco bits sooner rather than later!

All of my love,
Harry

P.S. I can't believe Oliver is seriously SERIOUSLY thinking about playing around with other Oliver when his self-imposed three month limit has been met! Sooooo many naked Oliver bits.

P.P.S. I disagree about the two Olivers for the price of one comment though. He's pretty enough to look at and nice to talk to, but other Oliver doesn't hold a candle to our perfect husband!

Monday April 30th
So sorry, my loves,

I'm so sorry that this email isn't going to be more than a paragraph long, but with how early I got up this morning and how vigorously we all just shagged, I don't have the energy to keep my eyes open, much less write a full email. I just wanted to be the one who officially writes this down for the record:

Harry can still take two!

I know I have another early morning again, so could one of you replace my alarm clock and wake me up right?

Boy I wanna taste you, I wanna skin you with my tongue,
Draco
Tuesday May 1, 2018

And the crowd goes wild! We can hear the fans chanting his name, "Harry! Harry! Harry! Harry!"
Some may have doubted him. Rumors abound that at one point, even his own father in law doubted him (although the witness in question was drunk and may not have remembered the event accurately). But we saw it here last night folks, Harry James Malfoy-Wood, with the back-door we adore, can still .... take .... TWO!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!

If that wasn't enough, and it should be enough, we have to give him a standing ovation for his morning activities. On game night, he manages two absolutely glorious cocks up his arse, and the following morning he tests his limits. And he stuns us all as we find out, through a bit of gymnastics from his fit as hell team-mate husbands, he can also stretch his mouth around those same two willing shafts. They say it can't be done? Well naysayers, he's proven you wrong yet again.

The crowd goes wild!!!!!!

Sorry, that was a bit out of place. But after today's extremely emotional events, I had to lighten the mood. How better to lighten the mood than start where you left off in your very praise-filled email
Draco?

So, on to the heavy stuff.

I should probably start by saying today's ceremonies were beautiful, subdued, hopeful, and moving. I think those in charge of this particular day's events really toed the line between it being respectful of the victims while maintaining enough strength positivity to keep us hopeful for a better future. No matter how hard I try, I will never be able to understand what the victims of the trials went through. I am privileged enough, my parenting was widely known, that I never had to fear being forced into a farce of a trial where I had to prove I came into my magic "legitimately."

I was on the run, I went on the camping trip from hell, I was caught by snatchers, but underneath it all I was able to hold onto knowing who I was and where I fit in this world. Those witches and wizards who had to decide whether to flee to safety or stand up and say they're innocent, the people who thought they'd come to a safe place when they were eleven, were being told they were unwanted, told they didn't belong, called thieves for possessing the magic they were born with.

So many witches and wizards of muggle heritage died, fled, were tortured, had their wands snapped, and lost faith in a society they had thought was magic. It could have been so disheartening. But we watched dozens of unbelievably strong people walk to the front of the courtrooms where their wands were snapped, in front of a community they were consistently told they didn't belong in, and announced to all of us their names their status their acknowledgment of being a witch or a wizard.
And under the words "That we may never forget that division only weakens us" each of them used their new wand and their original magic to carve their name upon the walls of the courtroom where they were treated as 'less.'

But I am exhausted, it's been a lot of late nights and longer days. Tomorrow I have to be up even earlier than usual, we need to be ready at Hogwarts early for the ceremony, which means I need to wake in enough time to get Zaire his birthday breakfast. I will not allow his birthdate to stop me from giving my sweet boy the birthday he deserves. I can't believe he's twelve, taller than me, and running a successful business. Where did that tiny little boy go?

Okay, off to sleep before I waterlog my computer with tears.

Yours,
Harry

Wednesday May 2nd
Our most precious Harry,

You are currently unconscious in St. Mungo's. Rowe assures us that there's nothing seriously wrong with you and that you aren't about to die, but it's also taking her a bit to figure out how to revive you. It seems that one of two things happened.

One: either that same person who cast the impotence hex on me a while back decided to try something else on me and accidentally hit you - unless you sensed it and managed to intercept it without me realizing it.

Or two: someone - same person or otherwise - ACTUALLY attacked you. On the 20th anniversary of the Final Battle...

Oliver and I are currently holding hands and trying our best not to freak out completely. Honestly, without his hand here anchoring me, I might be out aimlessly searching for the culprit so that I could rough him up good and proper. But Oliver seems to sense this because he won't let my hand go. Also, he is thinking about having Rowe do a check up on him while we're here, so, maybe you'll wake up to a hologram spell of the baby.

Our love belongs to you for eternity,
Draco and Oliver

P.S. Oliver has decided to drag me for a walk around London because I'm looking a bit deranged as I talk about hunting the culprit down, so if you happen to wake before we get back, don't worry, we've already told the staff to contact us right away and we'll be back before you have a chance to finish asking where we are.
Chapter 270

Chapter Summary

Harry is awake, Oliver is bemused, and Draco had to take his mind off of Harry by rescuing the first thing he came across that needed him.

Mmmm, My Loves,

The two of you just went home to care for the children, bedtime kisses and last minute stories and snuggles, but I'm sitting here at St. Mungo's. So far, everything is coming back fine. Every scan shows no lingering effects of whatever I was cursed or hexed with. I've felt wonderful since I was awoken, so it seems as though I'm going to have a nice, albeit long and lonely, night to myself.

I can't believe someone thought to shoot hexes on such a solemn occasion. And it seems unlikely that it was even a hidden Dark Witch or Wizard. That at least would have made more sense that they'd be willing to disrespect such a memorial with their actions. But with the type of hex/curse/spell/whatever you want to call it, it seems as though this was some arsehole who just thinks the three of us don't deserve to be married!

The first hex, the impotence hex, was sent at you Draco. Again, seemingly sent to stop an important part of our relationship. This could have been someone who specifically had it out for you personally, or didn't think you deserved to have sex with Oliver or I. It could have been someone still holding grudges from the war, or one of mine or Ollie's rabid crazy fans.

But after today, I think it's pretty clear that it's one of Ollie's rabid crazy fans. I think you were so worried about me that you weren't thinking very clearly Dragon, but I wasn't standing near you when the curse hit. I know, because even though I immediately fell into a deep sleep, I remember a moment before it hit being far enough behind you AND Oliver because I was admiring both your arses from a ways behind you both. I remember vividly because when I noticed myself ogling your perfect bums, I mentally slapped myself for being distracted by my fit husbands during the memorial.

Well, this could have theoretically been completely unrelated from the first attack EXCEPT ... Rowe said the magical signatures were almost certainly from the same person, as well as the curse itself. Apparently the attacker seemed to change tactics, instead of taking away shagging, they decided to force us to confront this not being a true love match. They cursed me with the sleeping curse that can only be broken by True Love's Kiss TM. I guess they were hoping to make sure Oliver KNEW he wasn't my true love.

Except that isn't the case. Draco, you are so strong and resilient. You carried two of our children on your back while fighting a mad-woman in Diagon Alley. You kept your cool when I've flown off the handle and RHH myself in the middle of a crowded mall when we went to Minnesota years ago. But when I am in danger? You tend to panic. You were kept calm apparently, only from our Oliver holding your hand and walking you through London. So when Rowe called you both back and told you she felt a kiss from either of you would break the spell, you panicked a little bit.

Until Oliver specifically told you he thought you should do it because everyone KNOWS you're my true love. Thankfully that made you angry enough to shake you out of your panic. You demanded he kiss me. To prove to everyone else, to prove to the attacker, but most of all to prove it to himself, that he absolutely is my True Love.

Which is why I awoke to those big brown eyes inches from my own.

I love you both so much. I can't wait to be deemed well enough to go home. I miss you, I hate going to sleep without your arms around me.

Missing you,
Harry

Thursday May 3rd
Our true love,

Harry, you were released this morning while I was technically awake but about as aware of my surroundings as an Inferius, I imagine. I've been doing OVERTIME this week with Hermione, but also, the whole fact that you were attacked made it nearly impossible for me to sleep last night, and then I had to get up early again today for... I don't even remember. I'm certain I did whatever it was, but mentally, I was NOT there.

Yesterday - by contrast - is MUCH easier to remember. Oliver and I were walking along, smiling at each other and almost openly flirting (but trying to rein it in until a better time) when we heard a thud and turned to find you lying on the ground. My first thought was that maybe you had done the not sleeping thing again and had collapsed from sheer exhaustion.

We ran to you and decided to bring you to see Healer Rowe just in case there was a more serious reason for your collapse - such as a tiny human stealing your energy. It actually came as quite a shock when Rowe told us that her initial scans showed that magic was at play. She basically kicked us out of the room so that she could do in depth scans.

Oliver and I sat in the waiting room until I apparently squeezed his hand so hard in my natural way of suppressing my emotions and wearing my Malfoy mask - clench the fist but don't let the emotion cross my face in public. Well, Oliver has learned enough about my mask to at least realize when I'm wearing it, and as I said, my clenching his hand prompted him to decide that the best course of action was actually to go for a walk so that I could vent - or at the very least, try to take my mind off of what had happened to you.

So it was that we were walking hand in hand through London, and since we were wandering rather aimlessly from St. Mungo's, it wasn't particularly the better side of town. Surprisingly, Oliver's plan worked. I had no choice but to take deep breaths and calm my tumultuous mind. As we walked along, I heard the sounds of retching coming from an alleyway.

It was a very dingy alleyway, covered in so much rubbish and bodily waste that it was covered in a sort of swampy slime that smelled worse than the Bog of Eternal Stench. I cast spells on both of us to negate the smell, protect us from the guck, and give us a bit better lighting.

There in the back, next to and mostly hidden by a large garbage container, was a girl. She was on her hands and knees and spewing more unpleasantness onto what was already there to begin with. With a frown of concern, I cast a spell to see what was wrong. Was she sick? Was she poisoned?

No to both. She was so drunk and high that her body was attempting to rid itself of the toxins even as she was growing weaker and nearing the end. Despite being certain that she had no idea we were there, it almost seemed like she wanted to prove to us just how weak she'd grown by collapsing, but it wasn't simply falling onto her side. It was a gradual slumping onto her face and chest while her legs slowly slid out from under her body.

Oliver looked concerned, but ultimately he held himself back. I think he was thinking that this was a terrible shame, but not really something we could do anything about. After all, this girl had to be at least partially responsible for getting so drunk and high that she was dying in a nasty alley wearing extremely dirty and torn clothes and appearing to have never bathed before in her life.

I gave no fucks about casting a spell to conjure a cushion to sit on - which I also spelled to repel the muck. Once on the cushion, I cast cleaning spells on her and pulled her onto my lap, stroking her hair even as I crooned soothingly.

"Oh luv, how did you get like this?" I asked even though I didn't expect an answer. Then I looked up at Oliver and gave him a tiny smile. "I was beginning to think that I'd never get a chance to test this potion."

"What potion?" He asked curiously even as he watched me summon one out of my carry all watch. I set it aside for a moment and repositioned her head so that her neck/throat should be completely unobstructed. Then I cast an Aguamenti into her mouth - a small one - to rinse it and make sure that she didn't have anything stuck in her throat from a few moments ago. This made her cough a bit and sure enough, there was something in there. I cast a spell to clean out her mouth and throat completely.

Oliver gasped in astonishment when I performed a muggle procedure I'd seen on one of those telly shows we watched. The thing where one looks like they are kissing someone while really blowing air into them - usually to prevent dying. I was actually checking to make sure that her mouth and throat were now fully clear so that I could pour the potion down it without choking or drowning her.

Once the potion was in her, I looked back up to find Oliver watching me with an expression of fascination, as if he couldn't figure out what strange and alien things I was doing.

"This potion is something I created back when I was taking Laudanum. I never once felt like I was close to addiction - no matter how much Harry was worried that I was. That said, I knew that it was possible and could happen before I realized it. So I created a potion that would not only sober me up, but also completely cure any addiction I might have."

Oliver frowned. "Why take a substance that risked addiction if you were so worried about getting addicted that you created a potion to break it?"

I smiled at him. "People drink and do drugs all the time without getting addicted to them. The reason people become addicted is that they are trying to solve a problem that can't be solved without Mind Healing. I WAS receiving Mind Healing, but it wasn't quite enough, so I chose something I felt would give me just a little push into happier feelings when I needed it. A tool I could use and bend to my will. I NEVER want to be under the control of a substance, but I don't feel like they are evil and without purpose."

"But you still wanted to be prepared just in case," Oliver stated with a nod of understanding.

I nodded in confirmation. "If I'm right, this potion should go a long way to healing this girl. She can't be more than 20." I conjectured as I stroked her hair out of her face and watched her breathing slowly get deeper and more peaceful.
"You are being surprisingly caring toward her, even though she's a complete stranger you've never even seen before," Oliver pointed out, looking almost suspicious.

I sighed and focused on her by using a hint of magic to clean her hair so that I could comb my fingers through it and enjoy the texture. "Harry finds the little ones. Aside from Zaire and Jaz - which we actually found together and realized were ours within about a day or two of thinking about it - Harry has been the one to find ALL of the little ones. I tend to find the bigger ones. Harry finds the little ones and falls in love with them at first sight, and then agonizes over the fact that we already have SO many kids that we really shouldn't adopt any more, but when I find the big kids and fall in love with them at first sight, he tends to get upset with me. But I told him so very long ago that I have to put a wall around my heart to stop from wanting to love, help, and adopt them all. The PROBLEM is that just being with Harry has completely shattered that wall. So now, I see kids like Mahafsoun and Jules, or this girl here, and all I want to do is bring them home and take care of them."

Oliver looked a bit faint. "You want to ADOPT her?! She's... clearly an adult already! CAN we adopt someone once they've become an adult???"

I shook my head. "No, I don't adopt the ones I find. I claimed Miles as an unofficial son, Mahafsoun became a daughter by marrying my actual son, and I'll probably refer to Jules as an honorary son in my head without ever saying it out loud. This one will be less than that. I just want to make sure she's alive and taken care of long enough to give her a chance to change her life."

"Why her? Why not just pick one of the kids at Unity House if you have an urge to adopt another kid?"

I don't think Oliver was purposely trying to discriminate against her, but that most people tend to naturally want to avoid people in situations like this. She's an utter wreck, although my potion had worked enough that she didn't seem to be on the verge of dying any more.

"Today is the 20th Anniversary of the Dark Lord being defeated," I reminded him.

"Yeah... so?"

"Have you never wondered what life would have been like had he won? If not, ask Viper what life was like for those two years in which the Dark Lord had actually won the war in his world. I don't really need to wonder, I always knew what my life would be like had he won. It may not have been sexual, but I would have been his whore in every other sense of the word. And actually, based on the Viper's account, it might well have been sexual too. But for the sheer LUCK of Harry, I would have been a career Death Eater charged with fucking or killing anyone the Dark Lord commanded me to. And probably both at the same time."

"Well THAT'S not a pleasant thought!" Oliver exclaimed, actually covering his mouth with one hand as his stomach seemed to visibly heave for a moment before settling back down.

"This girl is exactly what I would have been. When I see those kids - like Jules - that are using their wits and their bodies to survive, I see myself. Is it any wonder I can't help but fall in love with them?" I asked with an amused snort.

Frowning, Oliver conjured a cushion so that he could sit next to me. "Wait, if Harry knows this about you, then why did he get so mad when you got drunk and hinted that you loved Jules. Thinking back on it, I personally felt uncomfortable with the idea. Actually, I sort of couldn't stop myself from remembering the way you practically fondled Mahafsoun's hair and purred like a cat. You had that same look of bliss on your face as when you were drunkenly playing with Lumi, muttering things like: 'I love you Lumi, just like I love my Harry and my Oliver, my kids and my not kids like Mahafsoun and Jules and Wojtek and Amala and her babies.' I mean I was able to shrug it off because you were clearly drunk and rambling, but Harry got a very annoyed look on his face and had to excuse himself to the loo for a few minutes, so I am pretty sure he was angry.

I chuckled ruefully. "It seems that I always have the worst timing for finding these strays. When I found Mahafsoun, Harry was off his potions and the way I talked about her was influenced by her latent Veela magic. What I learned from that incident was that I can't tell him in actual words when I fall in love with a stray because he takes me literally. He assumes that I mean romantic love. Which is a bit funny when I think about it because the only time I have ever used the word love to mean romantic love was with him, and then when we realized that we were falling for you, I had to search my soul and sort of give myself permission to use it with you too. Thus, for all other uses of the word, it can be safely assumed that I mean it in the familial sense."

Oliver gave a short chuckle to that too. "I actually understand what you're saying. When I read your tipsy email apologizing for saying that you loved Lumi when you know Harry hates that, and then Harry responded by saying that he only hates it when you refer to other people, I thought it was odd that the two of you were clearly referring to two different types of love. You were referring to animals and kids, and he was referring to us."

I nodded and then gasped a little when the girl opened her eyes and glared at me.

"Oi! Could the two of you shut it please! My head is KILLING me and I feel like I'm dying!"

I smiled at her. "I have some medicine that can help you with that." I held up a vial of hangover potion for her to see. "Interested?"

"I don't even care if it's poison, ANYTHING would be better than this!"

I helped her drink the potion and waited in silence until she sighed in relief.

"Better... not perfect, but better." Then she squinted at me suspiciously. "Who in the bloody hell are you?"

"My name is Draco Malfoy and this is one of my Husbands, Oliver. What's your name?"

"Er..... Hang on, I know this... Er... Well that's stupid! Unless I've gone completely around the twist, my name is Erma of all things!"

"Lovely to meet you, Erma. Is there some place we can take you?"

She squinted at me again. "I thought you said you were married to that bloke, which would imply that you're gay. Why the hell do you want to take ME???

I snorted in amusement. "I MEANT do you have a place to live or a friend to stay with? I'd like to make sure you get home safely."

She shrugged. "This is where I live, but don't you dare tell the police. They'll just - hang on! I'm sober!!! How long have I've been laying here?!!"

"I have no idea. We only found you a bit ago," I informed her with a shrug.

She covered her stomach with a hand and groaned. "The last thing I remember... I was... Oh! I'd managed to steal a bag that happened to contain a bottle of rum and an ounce or so of cocaine. I was hoping for cash, but no such luck. So I drank the rum and took the coke since it was better than "Are you hungry now?" I asked her.

She laughed so hard she nearly threw up again. "I'm so used to being hungry that I have no idea what being full feels like!"

"Well then, if you think you can walk, I'd be happy to take you to a nice restaurant and order you whatever you want," I offered.

She tried to sit up and failed. This made her sigh rather morosely. "No... I'm pretty sure that I don't have enough energy for that. I feel so stupid and weak at the moment."

"Erma, when you say you live HERE, where exactly do you mean?" I wondered even as I pulled a nutritive potion out of my carry all case and offered it to her.

"This spot. I can usually get some cardboard out of the trash to cover up with when it's cold. What is this? It looks like strawberry milk, not that I've actually drank any before."

"Actually, I never thought of it before, but it tastes a bit like strawberry milk too," I murmured speculatively.

"That's putting it nicely," Oliver grumbled, recognizing the potion as the one he's been taking to make sure the baby gets all the nutrients it needs to grow healthy and strong. "I think it tastes like chalk."

"Better than nothing," Erma murmured, shrugging weakly. Then she looked at my watch. "You know, at first, I assumed you had a bag or something, but that really looked like you pulled the bottle out of your WATCH."

"Slight of hand, I assure you," I half lied.

"Wow! I feel..." Erma trailed off as she sat up and looked at her hands. "Better. I feel like I actually could walk if I needed to."

"Good," I stated, standing up and helping her to her feet. "Let's start by getting you a sandwich or something."

We found a small café a couple of blocks away, and as Erma ate a bacon sandwich, I sent out an Insta-owl to one of my squib friends. This particular one happened to run an apartment complex, so I asked if any of the flats were available. Upon receiving a yes, I promptly told him to expect us to show up soon with a tenant.

I felt better than when I go around giving instruments to kids for Christmas! The expression on Erma's face when I paid for her to lease the apartment for a year was priceless! She stood in the middle of the small flat looking around as if the amount of space was overwhelming.

"I've got some spare furniture an old tenant left behind when he moved," my squib friend offered, still looking rather concerned about the sheer scruffiness of his new renter.

"Lovely!" I exclaimed.

He conscripted about a half dozen strong lads to quickly get the furniture into the apartment, and to be honest, it wasn't a lot. Just a couch, a chair, a table set, and a bed. After that, Erma started pinching herself, and when that didn't wake her up as expected, slapped herself a couple of times.
I looked at Oliver and gave him a happy kiss. He looked like I was a strange new species of animal he'd never seen before. Taking this as a good thing, I turned back to Erma.

"I really think we should do some shopping before you fall off your feet from exhaustion."

"Shopping??" She questioned in confusion, so I led her to the nearest grocery store. As Oliver helped her navigate the store with a cart and pick out whatever she wanted, I went over to a clerk for a nice chat.

"How much do you think a single person would spend on groceries in a year?" I wondered.

"I dunno, I suppose that would depend on how much they ate. But I suppose that a single person would only need to spend a hundred or so a week..."

This sounded reasonable to me, so I calculated a year's worth and asked for it to be put on one of those cards things that people give as gifts. It was then that Oliver returned to my side with Erma and a cart that had just five things in it: bread, milk, eggs, butter, and ham.

"That's all?" I asked in disbelief.

Oliver looked rather embarrassed as he gruffly gestured to indicate that Erma was now crying.

"It's too much! You're spending too much on me!" Is what I THINK she said between her sobs.

I gave her the card I'd just bought with a sympathetic smile. "Listen, I put just a little bit of money on this card for you so that you can buy yourself food until you are recovered enough to get a job. Go ahead and test it; pay for this - and actually, you should buy some fruit and vegetables to go with this."

That said, she was still sobbing too hard to be persuaded to buy more, so I let it slide for now. She was shaking like a person having a seizure as she used the card to pay for the food, and then clutched the card in her hand so hard that it looked like it might actually cut her palm.

At that point, I wanted to bring her to a store to buy her a new wardrobe, but that desire was cut short when we received a semi-urgent message from Rowe asking us to come back to the hospital. Thus, I hastily grabbed whatever muggle cash I had in my wallet and shoved it in her bag with her groceries.

"Listen, luv, we have to go be with our husband, but I want you to use this money to buy yourself clothes. Then go back to that flat we were just at because it's YOURS now. Go home, rest, get better."

She was clinging to me rather desperately at this point. "I can't! It's too much! I don't DESERVE this!"

I kissed her on the cheek. "Of course you do," I stated patiently. "Every person on this planet deserves a chance to make the most of their life."

More sobbing. "R-r-repay?"

I shook my head. "The ONLY repayment I need is for you to promise me that you'll use the time I've given you to get better, and then once you are, fix up your life. Get a job. Go to school. Do something that makes you happy."

The last thing I gave her - aside from another kiss on the cheek - just before I pulled free from her grasp and Apparated away with Oliver, was a business card for a different squib contact, who just so happened to be a muggle version of a Mind Healer.

After that, Oliver and I were so relieved to learn that you only had a sleeping curse on you. Insanely enough, my first reaction was to panic because what if neither of us could wake you? But then Oliver told me to do it and I felt like a bucket of cold water was dumped on me, clearing me of my panic.

"You seem to believe in something that is both a myth and a fallacy," I informed him in a harsher voice than I intended.

"Oh?" Oliver asked warily.

"Yes. It's the lunacy that there is only and will ever be only one person that can be called one's true love," I explained. "Harry loves you. I love you, and you love us. That love is true. It's not a lie, nor is it anything we are simply claiming to make you feel better about yourself. Thus, YOU should kiss him."

He took a deep breath before sighing. "Well, I suppose that if it doesn't work, you can always give it a go."

I gave him a tender kiss. "Is it your love or Harry's that you doubt?"

"... I don't doubt the love... I just feel like I can't possibly be his true love like you are..."

"See? Fallacy. Go on!" I pushed him on the back so that he nearly fell on top of you. Taking another deep breath to calm his nerves, he kissed you, making you wake up and give him a brilliant smile.

Rowe and I exchanged happy grins. As much as I would have loved to stay and chat with you all night, I was rapidly growing exhausted, and so, I left with Oliver to take care of our kids and get some sleep before the events of today. Which I still don't recall. Did I... make a speech? Was it coherent?

Fuck it! At this rate, I should probably just take a nap until my brain starts working properly again.

True blue baby I love you,
Draco
Thursday May 3, 2018

My sweet, sleepy Love,

I can't believe you don't remember anything about today. Yes, there was an event. Yes, you were there. Yes, you gave a speech. And yes, it was coherent. But then again, you were trained to wield that silver tongue from birth to comport yourself as a true aristocratic Malfoy. You could give a beautiful speech in your sleep. It sounds like today's events are proof of that since you were apparently asleep at the wheel.

I'll put some of the best memories of today in a pensieve for you as there were plenty of moments that were too brilliant to have you miss out on. If you remember now that you've had a chance to get some rest, today was the WWW sponsored war heroes fashion show. Not that actual war heroes mind you, but a ridiculously over the top fashion show where the children born since the end of the war who are named for war heroes got to dress up as their namesake and walk the runway.

Zwei was adorable, looking so much like me but dressed as you. Siri being the same way, his features all Malfoy while dressed in clothes fit for a motorcycle ride to look like his Uncle Sirius. Our beautiful Lily Narcissa was the perfect blend as she dressed as though she was her grandmother Lily but those features being all Grammy Cissa.

The (unfortunate) kids named Albus were hilarious going down the aisle in the most obnoxious wizarding robes known to man, little half moon spectacles, and a couple of truly impressive fake beards. I really enjoyed the itty bitty ones who toddled their way through the event, most of them bribed to go from one end to the other with promises of sweets from their parents.

My favorite, by far, was Teddy. He couldn't settle with something as mundane as dressing like his grandfather whose first name he carries, or his father who he gets his middle name from. No, Teddy dressed fairly neutrally, just some basic slacks and plain button-down, but used his metamorph abilities to shift his features back and forth between the two men he's named for.

I would love to just focus on how fun today was, but I would be remiss to ignore what your last email told me. I'm truly sorry that you feel I will never be able to accept your love for the older children. Because I don't feel that way.

First, I immediately accepted Miles into my heart and our home. From the very first moment. I think I might have even been the first one to call him our honorary son. We didn't adopt him simply because by the time we realized he was OURS he was too old to adopt in an official capacity and we didn't need a piece of paper to know our hearts.
Second, I didn't have a problem with MAHAFSOUN! I accepted her into our lives. And at this point, I love her like another of our daughters. I had an issue due to her age with the way you described your feelings. If you had just said you fell in love with this child the way you fell in love with Lumi (obviously different since we're talking human vs animal) I wouldn't have had an issue. But (and we now know it's because of the Veela genes affecting you) it was always uncomfortably overtly sexual. And I don't think it's ridiculous to have been upset when she planted her naked self in our bed to "thank" you for saving her!

Third, I didn't have an issue with Jules, even being off my meds and a bit out of my head, I didn't hate HIM. I was angry with YOU. Again, you had snogged and were grinding on him. I don't think I'm being crazy were I to react to you saying you love someone who only had a thin layer of fabric between their dick and yours while your tongue was in his mouth.

Fourth, she was a bit younger obviously, but you found us Elena. And not once did I ever get mad when you fell in love with her. I never was upset to find out you'd spent the day wandering about London with her. At one point, you thought she had a crush on Ethan and your response was very paternal even before you knew we would be adopting her.

If you are referring to loving someone in the same conversation where you talk about their body being physically attractive or admit that the arsehole in your pants wants to shag them, then I don't really care what kind of love you mean. I will always take that poorly. I have to ask you, when have I ever been upset with you loving something or someone, wanting to care for them or bring them home, if you didn't also talk about their shaggable or snoggable physical self?

I'll tell you when, never.

Anyway, I don't want to argue. I'm not even mad. I just felt the need to clarify your descriptions. If a part of you wants to shag them, then your love can't be completely one hundred percent familial. I don't care if you're a Black by blood, we don't shag our family members!

Eeew, now I have to go obliviate myself.

Anyway, I hope you get plenty of sleep so you can enjoy the rest of the planned festivities the next two days.

Love Always,
Harry

P.S. Have you checked up on Erma? I hope she's doing well. And if you had that immediate feeling to care for her, I'd love to meet her and help where I can if possible.

Friday May 4th
My beloved husbands,

UGH! Remind me to murder Hermione if she ever DARES to suggest that I get up several days in a row much earlier than normal for an event like this. It's Friday and there's still all of tomorrow to get through!

This morning, I was supposed to get up early once again to finalize things for the Alumni Quidditch Match this afternoon, but I'd have rather severely displeased my dear sweet Grandmama than get out of bed before noon for the millionth day in a row. Thus, when my alarm charm went off, I wandlessly cast a Bombarda on it and went right back to sleep.
Thank MERLIN that Oliver realized why I was not getting out of bed like I was supposed to and stepped in to take over the final prep. Thus, at around 11 - which was still earlier than I wanted to get up but I could deal with - I woke to find a young angel in my bed looking at me with an impish grin.

"Good morning, Jules. Something I can help you with?" I wondered curiously.

He shook his head. "Not really, I was just wondering if you would take me with you the next time you went to France. There's something I want to tell my parents."

"Something good or something bad?" I asked with a raised brow.

"Something good! I formed a band and we're actually playing small gigs all around London. I just feel like I should let them know that I'm doing well and am happy - in case they actually care."

I smiled at him and ruffled his hair - which was clearly styled on purpose to look like a wild mess. "Well, I have no idea when I'm going back to France, but I can arrange for a Portkey to bring you to Elena - or actually, I could probably have Muffy bring you there."

"That would be great! Just let me pack a small bag first."

I gave him a kiss on the cheek and slipped out of bed, ignoring the fact that he groaned in appreciation as he watched my naked arse walk to the loo.

"Just let Muffy know whenever you're ready to go and she'll pop you over to Elena."

"Thanks!" Jules exclaimed as he jumped out of bed and ran off, presumably to go do as he'd said.

Once alone, I performed my morning routine, and at some point while I was brushing my teeth, I decided that I should probably just go over to check on Erma right away so that I could get back in time for the Match. As I thought this over, I realized that I should probably actually do a bit of shopping first, to buy her things like dishes, flatware, and bedding, because based off her reaction, I'm willing to bet that she was still huddled in a nest on a bare bed eating nothing but ham sandwiches and possibly raw eggs.

I should probably add some cookware to the list.

As my mind wandered and my shopping list grew ever bigger, I started thinking about what had happened to you. By the time I was dressed and ready to go, I was rather irritable and felt a bit like someone had just pulled all my skin off and left me a raw ball of overly sensitive nerves.

Shopping was rather interesting! That irritable feeling only grew bigger and bigger as the minutes rolled by, until I was storming through the shopping center screaming at everyone in my path. Rather than kick me out of the store - as I would have expected - one of the employees rushed around helping me gather everything I asked for so that I could buy it all and get out as soon as possible.

I then went to a tea shop to get some refreshments and attempt to calm down. Only that didn't exactly go according to plan as some belligerent bloke in front of me took offense to my attitude and started a brawl with me in line. To my surprise, he was actually trained in Krav Maga too, and so, it was actually a bit of a challenge. The police were called and I ended up in a large scale brawl on the streets with them until I managed to escape into the nearest alleyway and Apparate home, at which point, I ordered Dibly to deliver everything I'd bought to Erma - without being seen.

A Ministry Official was looking for me on behalf of Hermione and was unfortunate enough to get in my way as I stormed towards the Crystal Room. I verbally tore him to shreds and stood glaring at him as he sobbed and wailed and tried to insult me. Deciding that the Crystal Room just wouldn't be enough, I Apparated to the Adventure Park and took advantage of how slow it was (due to the Anniversary Festivities) by marching into the Cave of Inferi where I steadily murdered them all.

I feel a bit better now.

I think I might even still catch a bit of the game. I'm just going to pop home and take a shower and change into something suitable before hunting you both down and resting my head against your shoulders.

Who wants to live forever?
Draco
Chapter Summary

Harry and Oliver try to comfort Draco, and Draco is in the loo.

Chapter Notes

See the end of the chapter for notes

Friday May 4, 2018

Our Draco,

I've been told by Ollie to let you know that he's happy he could help with today's planning. Quidditch is something he knows and knows well, and after enough time in our family he's no longer overwhelmed by large mobs of chaotic people!

Truly Draco, you do so much to help me and help others, I was actually relieved that I had the ability to help you out this way. -Oliver

See? So, maybe next time you're getting this overwhelmed while helping Hermione, please realize you have some fairly competent husbands who love to be able to help you out. And while we may not have some of the specific business skills you do, we have some specialized areas ourselves. Take tomorrow for example, if Hermione has assigned you any prep work in getting the family friendly party put together you KNOW that is something I've done a million times for all the Unity Houses and Traditions throughout the years.

No one needs you to get to the point where you've been able to make a ministry official cry. If he's been able to work with Hermione without breaking down but you broke him? I would be willing to bet you'd gone to extreme levels of tantrum that maybe even I haven't seen before. You started a brawl over tea? I think we should have you pensieve that moment so we can bring it out the next time someone suggests you get up early for a week straight.

I'm glad the inferi cave seemed to do the trick. You looked much calmer than I would have expected when you showed up at the games today. Clean and cute and cozy! How are you somehow able to make a track suit look like high fashion? I could wear the same black, green, and silver ensemble and appear as though I've just gotten back from a marathon. You look like an advertisement for gym wear that will never see a drop of sweat.

Anyway, please sleep in tomorrow. I will take care of any prep before the party. You just come join the party whenever you're ready. Take your time getting ready, calm yourself with your morning routine. Wrap up the babes in your favorite wrap carriers and we'll see you when you're ready to party the day away!

Love,
Harry and Oliver

P.S. Because it's even more important to mention when something is done well than to complain about something I didn't appreciate ... The way you described your interactions with Jules this morning? It was perfect. Exactly what I'd expect a parental figure saying about his teen child. He is a bit angelic looking isn't he? I love you, and whether or not you did it on purpose, thank you for writing in a way that didn't hurt my feelings.

Saturday May 5th
The lights of my life,

Tonight was pretty worth all the stress and hassle of the past week. Getting a chance to let loose and just party with 2000 of our closest friends... Getting to hold you both tight and dance - individually and all together... It was all perfection.

I had no reason not to drink, especially since I helped put together the wine list and knew that it had some excellent offerings. Thus I got rather tipsy quickly and unsurprisingly broke into song. To my surprise, Oliver has taken some dance lessons recently. Apparently he felt less than fully skilled and qualified to dance with me. Our wedding reception was more about swaying together than actually showing off any real talent, but it was enough to make Oliver secretly vow that he would get better.

Especially since we do tend to go to so many galas and other formal functions. It's definitely a skill worth investing in. Thus, the highlight of the night, for me, was watching as the two of you danced while I sang Everything I do, I do it for you.

Currently, I'm taking a break from the dancing to do some business in the loo. I'm less tipsy than I was, so I remember that I forgot to tell you about Erma. I haven't had a chance to check on her in person yet, but Dibby has been popping over to her flat when she's sleeping and making her small but nutritious meals, and just a few days of eating properly has transformed her from a fragile waif into an undernourished but mostly healthy person.

When I have a chance - after I've slept for at least three days to recover from my week - I'm going to meet with that squib friend of mine who's now her landlord, and see if I can't persuade him to spearhead a project for me in which homeless people like her have a place to stay. Not to mention food to eat.

Erma got me thinking about how I created a park so long ago for kids to go when they needed a safe place to play or hang out... Why did I never do that for adults? It's a shameful oversight on my part. One that I plan to fix as soon as possible!

But for now, I'm done in the loo and about to return to your sides with so many kisses that those watching you like you're either their Savior or Favorite Quidditch Player, will grow nauseous with envy, buwahahahahaha!

Have we eyes to see that love is gathering?
Draco

Chapter End Notes

FYI: fun fact, when I wrote Draco's tantrum, I was actually on my period, so after I sent Chrissie the email, I told her to describe Draco wearing comfy period clothes, lmao ^_^
Chapter 273

Chapter by ladyroxanne21

Chapter Summary

Draco has still not returned from the loo.

Draco Lucius,

You went to the loo hours ago. You are not back in our arms. In fact, you are not in the loo, not in the venue the gala was held, and as of five minutes ago when Ollie and I apparated back home to see if you were at the Manor, you are also not at the Manor.

There are a million thoughts racing through my head. Instead of doing the bull-headed Gryffindor thing where I chase you down, cause a scene, and potentially start another massive fight that I certainly don't have the strength for right now, I am going to write out my different thoughts as to what may have happened. If you get this and you are safe and well somewhere I would suggest contacting us as soon as bloody possible.

First, seemingly innocent option; you were tired and/or tipsy enough to forget to come back to us and you actually are sound asleep in our rooms at Hogwarts. As soon as I send this off I am going to floo Minnie and have her check our quarters to see if that's the case. I can't imagine that is what happened, you've always thought of Malfoy Manor as home no matter where we lived. If it had been the other way around I could see you not paying attention and coming here instead of going to Hogwarts, but not so much this way. But not completely out of the realm of possibility.

If that is what happened and you get this message, please contact us, we'd love to come join you at Hogwarts or come drag you home to be with us here.

Second option, you went to the loo, got distracted by some big saving people thing and completely forgot to let Ollie or me, or anyone else for that matter, know that you went to save someone. Maybe you were thinking about that safe space for homeless adults and somehow in your exhausted brain you thought you needed to go do that right this moment. Or, you found some cute teenager who needed saving and felt the need to rush off and save them without telling your husbands. As you've been known to do ...

If that is what happened I would suggest you contact your husbands. Also, you should probably contact Neville about getting us some beautiful flowers, contact a jeweler to get us something big and shiny, and possibly contact Grandmama and remind her that she shouldn't murder you no matter what Harry says.

Here's the third option that is making me a bit hysterical ....

I really want to think it's the first option and you're just adorably sleeping somewhere. Or even the second option which would just make me furious with you. Because either of those options I know you're safe. I know you're fine and whole. And in the case of the second option, I know wherever you are you are plotting the INSANE amount of arse kissing you have ahead of you.
Except I think it's the third option I am having trouble even typing. You're somewhere and not alright. You're not safe. You're not off being a ridiculous lion in snake's clothing. Something has happened to our husband and we're just sitting around waiting to hear that something terrible has happened. You know how upset I was about you going off to save Jules without even shooting me a look to let me know you were leaving, I can't imagine you making that mistake so soon after seeing what happened with that fight.

Darling, please come home. Please let it be one of those other options where I will just be annoyed with you and force you to wait on Ollie and I hand and food while feeding us chocolates while you're naked. Please don't be hurt. Please? Please Draco, for me, for Ollie. Please be alright.

Dictation device picks up sounds of Harry sobbing
Additional crying noises, likely from Oliver
A broken screech of "Draco!" is heard right before the device signs off and sends the email

Sunday May 6th
Draco...

It's the middle of the night and I can't sleep. You still haven't returned and are nowhere to be found. Harry is pacing our suite in the Manor. He's slowly working himself into a state that I don't think I can soothe - or handle, come to think of it.

This isn't quite Rage Halo... It's something else. Something perhaps far more dangerous. I'm worried that you're - I dunno- hurt or something, and then I'm worried that Harry's about to rush off and murder everyone in his path until he finds you. What am I supposed to do? Help him? Stop him? Stay home and watch the kids???

Helpless,
Oliver
P.S. Please just come home already!
Chapter 274

Chapter Summary

Draco is safe, Oliver is relieved, and Harry is NOT best pleased.

Mother-Fucking Shitebag Cocksmoking DoucheCanoes!

Not you two obviously, I'm talking about the Ministry officials I'm dealing with right now. Stupid Ministry, forcing me to sit here waiting around for some Auror to take my statement. I should be in St. Mungo's with the two of you, holding my husbands in my arms. Being able to physically and visually reassure myself that you are both safe and whole.

No, instead I am sitting in some interrogation room waiting around for them to find an Auror who will be able to question me and take my statement without the bias from having hero worship. I think it's going to be hard for them to find someone. Honestly you have the younger crew of Aurors who only know what they've read of me in their history books who have a little bit of "ooh he's famous" going on. OR there's the older crew who have all been taught by, led by, directed by Draco who probably want to give me a medal for rescuing him.

Or, if they remember your training classes well enough they might want to get a solid kick in my bits in for rescuing you.

As much as I hate him and have my own bias, at this point I think the only person they're going to send in to deal with me is Robards. Fucker is not in awe of me, does not respect me or our family, but does have a massive amount of respect for you Draco, so it might balance out enough that he's the one who takes my statement. That's probably what's taking so long, he's summoning up the courage to deal with me instead of leaving the country for days because he's an enormous chicken who doesn't want to deal with me.

You'd think at this point though we'd both be on the same page that we are glad Draco was found safe, sound, and unharmed.

I may as well start describing what happened from my own point of view so it's clear and concise and ready to tell as soon as someone comes in here. And honestly Draco, how did you survive when you come into the Auror department, not a decent cup of coffee or cuppa tea to be had anywhere.

So, let's start with last night. We were at the gala, dancing the night away. My gorgeous husbands looking like supermodels in their formal attire. Draco with the wizarding robes that were stylized to look like a muggle tuxedo, but with some of the traditional pieces wizarding robes are known for. A longer coat and a magically embroidered waistcoat being the most noticeable differences. Ollie, you were actually wearing a muggle tuxedo. Mmm, you looked gorgeous in that deep navy suit with the bold plum bowtie. I went the other direction and had more traditional wizarding wear, the long one piece robes similar to the style of formalwear I wore to my first wedding to Draco.

Draco, you took a break to go to the loo. And while there decided to send off an email. I would question what was going through your mind that you decided to dictate a message at such a weird time and in an odd location, but I've known you a long time and you've done much weirder things.
Although you signed off that you were on your way back to the party, you never joined us. I thought you were spending a long time on your loo break, but just assumed you were double checking your (perfect) face and hair, or had run into someone on your way back in and got to talking. Maybe you'd found some well to do philanthropist and were trying to talk them into donating to one of our important charities.

After roughly an hour, we really started to worry, Oliver and I split up and searched the entire grounds for you and didn't find you. Not in the gardens, not on the dance floor, the loo, not sitting at the bar, or loitering in the halls. You were nowhere to be found. I was a bit worried but with how exhausted you'd been, I thought it was likely you'd just headed home and instead of dragging us with you decided to go without us so we could enjoy the rest of our evening.

However, you weren't at the Manor either. Luckily, we didn't have to actually search the grounds, we just asked Muffy if she was able to sense you on the property since she's tied to you and the land. That's when I wrote my previous email, trying to convince myself that you'd done something foolish because it was easier to think of you doing something I'd be mad about than to think of you in danger.

But my gut was right and you were in danger. After a few hours without you coming home or replying to any of our insta-owl messages, without you answering your magi-mobile, we contacted the Aurors. I normally would have just chased you down, but with our recent promises to Ollie I didn't trust myself not to just go exploding in somewhere, killing everyone in sight, and break my promise.

After about three or four hours of the Aurors doing what they could with no results, I changed my mind. I had been meditating most of those three or four hours. It sounds like Oliver said it looked like pacing and working myself up? I just happen to not sit still during my best meditation. Anyway, I had sufficiently calmed myself enough that I knew I'd be able to stop myself from just murdering everyone in sight without absolute necessity.

I will say that if I had gotten to you and seen you being tortured in some way, I would have had no qualms about killing in that instance, I would have just waited for your forgiveness Ollie.

Thankfully I did not apparate into a scene of you being tortured, and I was able to keep calm enough that the piece of molding gobshite is now in Ministry custody as opposed to the morgue.

I did my modified point me spell, caught on to your trace, and apparated myself to the cabin the fuckhead had brought you. I silenced my steps and my breathing, and tried to stealth my way into the cabin. Imagine my surprise when I made my way to the dining area and saw Draco sitting there calm as can be seeming to be awaiting my arrival.

He smiled at me, "Hey sweetie, sorry I was gone so long. Should we head home now?"

I played along, "Sure honey! But I've just missed you so much, kisses first?"

His smile got even wider, "Of course Har!" and he stood up to walk into my arms.

Which is when I used some of my mediocre Krav Maga skills and took him down to the ground. Throwing an incarcerous at him, but not a stunner, wanting to keep him able to tell me what the fuck was going on. "Ow! Harry that hurt! Why are you doing this to me?"

Yeah, nuh-uh, not a chance would I believe this fucker. "There is no way you are my Draco. My Draco doesn't simper and give me sweet smiles, he smirks like he owns me. He NEVER calls me sweetie or Har. And if I ever called him honey he'd immediately tell me that the only place honey is appropriate is smeared all over his and Oliver's bodies for me to lick off. Who the fuck are you and what have you done with my husband?"

"I'm Draco! You know me, let me go please!"

I scoffed, "You're not him you moron, Draco could get out of those ropes in no time. I'm going to ask this one more time and then I'm going to start using all of my favorite torture techniques I learned at the hands of my favorite Mafia members. Where is my husband?"

Again he didn't answer so I grabbed him by the back of the neck to begin hurting him, sorry not sorry. But as I picked him up I saw the blond hair begin to shift to a dark brown. But an ugly dyed brown. Like he was going for your rich brown coloring Oliver but fell way short. The aristocratic features rounded out into a boring non-descript face. The grey eyes shifting into something I couldn't name because they were covered by brown contact lenses. "You want to try convincing me you're still Draco now that I've seen your face?"

"No, I'm not Draco, your husband is in the back bedroom. I'll just stay out here and wait for Oliver to come get me."

The fuck?

"First of all, you're going to stay wherever I put you. Secondly, Oliver is not coming anywhere near you. Third, you are so very very lucky you'll be able to wait anywhere, if this was six months ago you'd already be dead just as punishment for wearing my husband's face so badly." I then dropped him face first onto the floor, giving him a solid kick to the kidneys on my way to find Draco.

What? I didn't kill him, you never said I couldn't kick a kidnapper when he's down!

I walked to the room he'd indicated and found our Draco. Sound asleep (a simple renervate woke you so I assume it was just a sleeping spell) in the creepiest room I've ever seen. I mean, technically I liked all the things in the room, but it was really really creepy. It was a shrine to Oliver, dolls and posters and what looks like old worn gear.

I grabbed Draco, popped him to St Mungo's and now I'm here.

Oh, door's opening, see you both soon!

Love Harry

---

Sunday May 6th
My wonderful husbands,

I didn't have a bad experience, all told. I was asleep for most of it, but let me start at the beginning.

So, after finishing my business in the loo, and yes, repairing my appearance while I was at it, I emerged in a rather happy mood, eager to get back to the two of you. I never expected anyone to be lurking behind an ornamental tree just outside the loo. My back was probably an easy target.

All I know is that I blacked out rather abruptly. When I next opened my eyes, I was magically tied to a chair. Even my hands were bound in a way that made it impossible for me to use wandless magic.

Looking around, I noticed that I was in a room dedicated to Oliver, and my first thought was that someone had set all of this up to surprise us - you know, as a way to let Oliver know that while his role in the war might have been minor compared to the two of us, he was still an equal part of everything. Only...

Neither of you were anywhere to be found. Instead, there was a man who appeared to be wearing an Oliver costume. He'd dyed his hair a similar color and was wearing contacts that were sort of close to the original. I'm betting that he'd used a really high quality poster of our Oliver to have the contacts made as close to the real shade as possible.

In his arms, he held a life sized doll of Oliver. A doll he talked to as if it were a real person standing next to him.

"See Oliver? I told you that I would bring one of your husbands here to join us for dinner. Didn't I promise? Didn't I?"

He paused to wait for a response, and then beamed as if given the highest praise. "Thank you! I DO always keep my promises! I love you too." He then kissed the doll.

At that point, I had wrapped my head around the situation. All I needed to do was wait for the opportune moment, and then I'd be able to incarcerate him and drop him off with the Aurors. Until then, I was rather tied up and unable to move.

"Yes," the crazy stalker fan agreed with something in his head. "Yes, that's a brilliant idea! I should definitely do that! All I need is a hair..."

After looking me over carefully, he very gently ran his hand through my hair until a loose one stuck to his fingers.

"I wouldn't, if I were you," I warned seriously.

"Wouldn't what?" He wondered in confusion.

"Try to Polyjuice into me," I stated. "My husbands will never be fooled by it."

"How would they know the difference? In every sense of the meaning, I will BE you. It's only for a couple of hours. I just want to meet Harry Potter and see if he's worthy of my dearest Oliver."

I raised a brow. "You want to see if HE'S worthy, but not me?"

He shrugged. "I already know that you can't do anything untoward to my Oliver, so since Harry Potter somehow passed the test of True Love, all I need to know is that he treats my Oliver right. Then I can come back and deal with you."

"Deal with me how?" I asked since he seemed to be in a chatty mood.

"Oh... however Oliver wants me to. Isn't that right, love?"

Once again, he waited for a reply that I couldn't hear because it was all in his head. "Oh? You want that? Well, I suppose that could be fun... But first, I should go make dinner for the three of us. We can't have him too tired to eat though, so..."

And then I was unconscious again until I woke up to you rescuing me like a bloody damsel! Godamnit Harry! I'm NOT ungrateful for you barging in and ensuring that I was safe, but couldn't you have waited a bit longer so that I could rescue my own damn self?!

Sigh...
In any case, I'm about to go into the Ministry to have my own little chat with Robards. See you when I get home.

Love you both to the moon and back!

Would you like to swing on a star? Carry moonbeams home in a jar, and be better off than you are, Draco
Chapter Summary

Harry is boggled, Oliver is upset, and Draco is taking the kids to the park.

An Oliver doll. An OLIVER doll. An Oliver DOLL. The absolute nutter had a life sized Oliver doll that he spoke to and somehow thought spoke back to him.

I'm honestly really pleased that I didn't see it when I went into the shrine room. I was so focused on my beautiful husband, and can you really blame me you're bloody gorgeous, that I didn't notice much besides the fact that it was obviously dedicated to my husband. I think if I had seen a creepy lifesize depiction of Ollie I may have gone back out into the dining/kitchen area and just AK'd the man. Damn the consequences.

I'm just so happy we finally have you home safe and sound Dragon. I know you weren't technically gone all that long, but when I knew you were missing every second felt like an eternity. I can't imagine how horrible it would have been had you been missing for a truly long time. How did you survive me missing all those years ago? Ugh, never mind, let's not talk about things that will upset all of us.

Instead let's focus on what's important, Draco is home safe and sound, the criminal who'd been hurting Draco and I in an attempt to get to Oliver is locked up, and I didn't break my promise!
Aren't we all proud of me? Not only did the man hex your dick to go limp, curse me to sleep until my kiss, kidnapped one of my husbands, but he tried to steal your face. AND he made me miss out on a night of dancing with the both of you.

My memories of this huge twentieth anniversary celebration should have been bittersweet from the loss but mostly happy. I should have fond memories of watching the name-a-like contest and dancing at the gala, combined with sweetly sad memories of hearing my loved ones names read where they were lost during the battle. Instead I have memories of dropping halfway through an important ceremony and spending the end of the gala searching for Draco and watching Ollie's face become equally as terrified as I'm sure my own was.

Somehow this cretin thinks he's worthy of OUR Oliver! I'm not even worthy of our Oliver, and this festerfing scab thinks he deserves that love? No. Oliver has had so many parts of his life that were taken from him. He wasn't able to be pregnant until now. He had to live through an emotionally abusive marriage. He had to watch his in-laws take everything from him. He had to hold his children during that trauma. And somehow this gangrenous pile of scum thinks he should control Oliver's life to accommodate HIM?

Not fucking likely. I may not think I'm worthy of the pure love given to me, I may spend most of my days wondering at my luck in these two men thinking I'm worth being married to, but I sure as hell aren't going to give it up any time soon.

How hard do you think it would be to break back into the Ministry, break my promise, stop somewhere to buy my Ollie a new broom and a new horse in apology, and come home? Asking for a friend.
Or okay, how about this, instead of killing him, I just kill his spirit? What if I break into the Ministry, go to his cell, and explain in lurid detail just how many untoward actions you were able to perform on Oliver? Tell him how even his hex didn't keep us from worshiping every centimeter of that glorious body we have the privilege of loving.

Fine, he's not worth it. I should take a page out of your playbook Draco and forget he even exists.

Instead, I am going to finish off this email, climb into bed with Ollie, patiently wait until you get back from your talk with Robbins, and then show you both exactly how much I adore your bodies.

Yours,
Harry

Mon May 7th
Dear Harry and Draco,

I'm taking advantage of the fact that I have this afternoon free by visiting my Mind Healer. I feel a little traumatized by what happened to Draco. And then I feel bad for feeling traumatized by something that didn't even happen to ME. It's confusing.

See you when I get home,
Oliver

Monday May 7th
Dearest Harry and Oliver,

After sitting in on the interrogation of the crazy Oliver stalker fan - named Fran or something - from the other side of a magic wall that lets me see without being see, well, it very quickly became clear that the man wasn't JUST a crazy stalker, but legitimately insane. A Mind Healer specializing in criminals was called in today to evaluate him, which I was also allowed to sit and watch, at the freaking crack of dawn this bloody morning, meaning that I'm grumpy and tired as fuck!

In any case, the Mind Healer is certain that this man needs treatment rather than prison time, and I actually had to agree. So... I decided to provide funding to the secure ward at St. Mungo's so that he could be treated AND kept under lock and key.

Upon returning home, I was too influenced by an entire pot of tea (which I needed to drink to wake up enough to attend the evaluation) that I couldn't possibly take a nap before potentially going in to do my job as Hermione's assistant. So, rather than try to sleep, I decided to take the babies out to that park I'd once upon a time ago created as a safe space for kids. I suddenly had an urge to check up on it and make certain that it's still in good repair and helping kids as I intend it to.

Thus, I strapped Morgana to my front, Nora to my back, Dylan to my right hip, and Gabriel to my left. Hopefully Nora will consider herself a 'big girl' by the time the new baby is born, otherwise I'll have to carry her on my shoulders or something. I'm dictating this right before heading out so that you'll know where to find me if you need me, but yeah, I'm just going to be playing at a park with our kids today.

And maybe having a meeting about that adult version of the safe place like I mentioned. And maybe checking up on Erma. And maybe heading back to the Ministry at some point.

We'll see how it goes.
Love you beyond a reason why,
Draco
Harry is finally ready to admit something important, and Draco is finally ready to see a different important thing. (Oliver knew both things a while ago.)

Oh Draco my sweet silly man,

You do know that when I or Ollie take Nora places she doesn't need the carrier? With the exception of me going on a run or a very long hike, she has no problem walking along with me. I think you seem to forget that it was already months ago that she was wandering the streets of Paris alone for two days. Do you think she just tricked strangers into carrying her?

No, notre petite fille intelligente has seen her Papa Draco carry her little brothers and sisters around and sweetly demanded he carry her as well. I bet you didn't even know you were being manipulated into it did you? Not that it bothers you at all. Even though she doesn't need it, your little girl wants it and we all know that Draco Malfoy would fly to the outer limits of space to get his children a star if they wished for it.

But yes, things are definitely going to be a bit different when the newest baby arrives. We have so many small children, often throughout our lives the babies were spread out a bit further, but we will really have our hands full with Nora still being little, the babies will be running little monsters, and an infant to care for. Which is why there's something I'd really like to talk with both of you about.

We will definitely need to talk about this face to face, don't worry Ollie if you were thinking we were going to make an entire life decision based on a few emails. But since I believe you've at least skimmed through most of our old emails you'll probably remember that when it comes to big decisions or things he may have to emotionally handle, our Draco does better if he can process it alone and come to the conversation already having had a chance to come to terms with the topic.

Er, so, with all the upcoming weddings and galas, my job as muggle studies professor and head of Gryffindor House, Oliver's job as quidditch/flying instructor, and Draco's many businesses and position as advisor to the Minister, I really feel as though we've stretched ourselves too thin. We have a giant horde of children, many of them very young, and sometimes I feel as though mealtimes are the only times I get to see them. I know that's not true, when I look at it logically, I know there are a million moments throughout the day where I am catching up with the feisty foursome (usually at Hagrid's) between classes. I know that I have the babies with me during class time more often than not. I try to sit with Siri and Zwei at their house tables at least one meal per day. I spend much of my down time messaging or calling our kids who don't live with us.

But it's not enough. I know I want to stay busy. I know that while we may have enough money that I don't NEED to work, I want to stay busy and productive. But right now it's just too much. So, how would you both feel if I didn't come back to my teaching position after summer hols? I wanted to talk with you both before I went to Minnie, but I also think I need to make the decision soon so I can give her plenty of time to find my replacement. I was thinking I would offer to stay on until she found a replacement even if it's into autumn semester as long as I can be done by the time our little caboose is born. I will offer to train my replacement, potentially write out an in depth curriculum, and even offer to stay on as a substitute professor or just an occasional speaker as needed. With Ollie's job it's not like we wouldn't be living in the castle anyway.

I just feel like I need to be home with our children. If seeing our tiny babies grow up to be adults, most of them parents themselves, falling in love, getting married, doesn't prove just how fast they grow up I don't know what could. I want to be able to come along with you Draco when you decide to take four small children to a park. I want to be able to take a random day and spend it in the stables with Ollie. And right now I feel as though my time is divided between being a professor with the occasional break for a big important event. I want to go back to gardening in the afternoon with Narcissa while a pudgy baby eats dirt and my toddlers get into mischief.

What do you think? Am I being selfish? Can I do this?

Torn,
Harry

Monday May 7th
My loves,

We have a problem. But before I get into it, let me just respond to your emails by saying: Oliver, if you need me to have a joint session with you until you feel better about what happened, I'd be happy to. Harry, I'd like a bit of time to think this over in before we all talk about it, but my first thought was: Why not remain Head of Gryffindor House but step down as the Muggle Studies Professor? That way, you can still do all the things you love about the position, helping the kids with their homework, giving them advice, just SEEING our kids in Hogwarts on a daily basis. But then you'd also be able to do things with Oliver and me whenever you'd like.

But back to our problem. See... er... well... What happened was, erm, well the kids were playing, and actually, it was adorable. Dylan and Gabriel were climbing a short slide made for toddlers, and then sliding down it on their tummies. Morgana was piling sand into a sort of wobbly tower without really intending to make anything out of it because she was also throwing the sand around whenever she thought it would be funny.

Nora was playing with a toy car that had been left in the sandbox that didn't seem to belong to anyone. Suddenly, a boy that was about the same age as Nora came over and tried to take the car from her. He was backed up by about 4 other little boys that he had just been chasing around. Nora has already been influenced by the Feisty Foursome and did NOT just let him take the car from her without a fight. They two of them were yanking the car back and forth and even hitting each other to make the other let go.

That's when Morgana screeched and crawled over to defend her sister. Or at least it appeared that way to me, but she didn't get far because A: I was already rushing over to help settle things. B: The boy's mum was also racing to get involved, already apologizing profusely for her son's behavior and telling him to drop the car since it wasn't his. And C: ...

The boy started screaming and clutching his chest. The car was promptly dropped and forgotten about, and Nora was now holding on to him with a worried expression. I didn't even care what anyone saw or thought, I immediately pulled out my wand and performed a scan that showed that he was having a bit of a heart attack. The scan said that it was minor enough not to kill him instantly, but clearly painful enough to make him scream.

Luckily I was taught a few helpful spells in my Auror training - that you were oh so right to insist I take, Harry - and was able to cast a healing spell on him that was effective enough to stop the pain and get him to calm down. Then I told his mother than I felt it might be worth it bringing him in to be seen, that I would pay for the exam, and that I actually insisted that she see my own personal, erm... Physician. That's the muggle term, right?

So now, here I am, with all four of the kids in St. Mungo's, trying to console a nearly frantic mother as she's watching Rowe do: "Strange things" to her son in an attempt to find and fix whatever is wrong. So far, it seems that my quick thinking helped a lot, but it could have been...

Fatal...

And that's the problem. I have been doing my best to ignore this. I've been rationalizing it away. I've blatantly made excuses when all of my grandbaby cheetahs - except for one - have mysteriously died over the last year. But this... I can't ignore or explain away this.

Morgana... is apparently killing things.

I don't think she intends to. I don't even think she realizes what is happening. So far, it seems to happen when she's scared or feeling a little threatened. That said, today, she wasn't scared or personally threatened, but rather, trying to defend her sister. I...

Sigh!

I don't know what to do! HOW do we try to teach a BABY that she's not supposed to kill things! How do we teach her not to get scared or upset? How do we teach her to CONTROL her magic if she does?! SHE'S ONLY A YEAR OLD!!!

Thank all the Gods in existence that no one, not even Rowe or that poor muggle mother, has made the connection. I tried to talk myself out of making the connection, but I well know that Morgana has attack magic when she screeches. I have ducked or repaired many a thing when she's shrieked only to blow up lights or literally burn or otherwise harm a hand or something. I can't deny it any longer, sigh...

What are we going to do...?

Even if we can't find heaven, I'll walk through hell with you, Draco

Chapter End Notes

Note, when Harry teases Draco about being manipulated into carrying Nora, it wasn't that at all. She didn't ask, he simply wanted to make sure all the kids were under his control until he was certain everything was safe and they could go play. He just doesn't correct Harry, lol.
Chapter 277

Chapter Summary

Harry has a plan.

Draco and Oliver,

First of all, thank all the deities involved that this didn't end tragically. Secondly, thank those same deities that Draco has finally come to an awareness the rest of us came to quite a while ago. Our little Queen seems to have been given an apt nickname. Instead of being a benevolent ruler, she's a bit more Queen of Hearts with her "off with their head" behaviors.

You both know how much I love her. With my entire heart and soul. I would and will do anything for her. If the worst had happened and I thought our toddler was going to be punished for her accidental magic I would run us far far away to that island I DIDN'T buy that DOESN'T exist. Just to save her from the repercussions of her actions. Again, I am so glad it hasn't come to that. I'm just relieved we can finally have this conversation. I don't think, prior to today, you would have been able to have this conversation rationally. I am still a bit worried that Ollie can have it rationally, we all know how tightly wrapped around Morgana's fingers you are love!

Anyway ... See, I've known for a while that something is off with Morgana. If you'll notice I've kept her away from the stables and from any of our pets. Apparently that same can't be said of everyone since she had access to Amala's cubs. But it did seem as though for a period of time things were improving. Keeping her from being upset seemed to keep the worst at bay. But because I knew making sure she was never scared or upset wasn't a realistic long-term strategy, I have already found the solution.

In my defense, in case either of you decide to be angry that I didn't just try to knock some sense into you instead of waiting until your own realizations, I didn't actually get the solution fully figured out until about a week ago. So I've not just been sitting around waiting for the worst to happen, I just didn't prioritize getting it done while we were up to our eyeballs in anniversary preparations.

The long and short of it is, Draco you are pretty much the only one with the abilities to stop her.

When I saw what almost happened to the little horse that spooked her all those months ago, I knew I had to figure out what was going on and how to fix it. But it wasn't exactly easy to find someone I could go up to and say "Hey, my infant seems to be killing indiscriminately, can you help?" I thought to myself "Who could I speak with about this who won't immediately call for something like her institutionalization or maybe attempt to remove her magic completely?"

I figured out pretty quickly I had to speak with someone who had knowledge of keeping things discreet while getting shit done. Who better than my beloved mum-in-law? Yep, I went to Narcissa, who was luckily having tea with Grandmama when I went to have what I knew was going to be a hard conversation. I explained everything we'd seen. The deaths we didn't even notice at the time, thinking maybe one of the animals had died of some sickness we just hadn't known about, and the deaths or close calls that were becoming increasingly obvious to me.
They agreed with me that we needed to find a solution but also agreed that we needed to keep this quiet for fear that someone would try stripping her of her magic or somehow otherwise containing her. Unfortunately, neither of them had the answer. Usually I would go to Hermione for this, she is my favorite researcher after all, but I was a bit worried that she'd not react well. I should have known better, Hermione is my ride or die best friend. No one lights a professor on fire when they're eleven, or keep a witch kidnapped in a jar for months when they're fourteen without having the ability to justify some sketchy behaviors to keep the ones they love safe.

We spent the following months meeting roughly once a week, 'Mione, Narcissa, myself, and Grandmama when she was able. Discussing what we'd found in research, I'd keep them updated on any new or problematic behavior. When she killed Ollie's former father-in-law we all agreed that while her behavior was concerning the man was evil enough and was threatening Draco so we'd let people continue to believe it was a heart attack. We came up with a few solutions that weren't ideal, but we could make them work if we absolutely needed to. None of them something I particularly wanted to subject my little girl to.

The one solution that seemed the best option was magic dampening bands. We had pretty much decided this was going to be the best choice in a field of terrible choices. It would mean putting heavily runed bands on her little baby arms which would limit her magical power without stripping her of her magic. It would essentially mean whatever magic she was using would still be used, but with little enough power that it wouldn't kill whoever it was aimed at. We could reassess when she became old enough to reason with. We could even create them beautifully enough that anyone looking at them would think she was just wearing some pretty bracelets. Not exactly out of the realm of possibilities from Draco Malfoy's daughter!

The downside would be that as she was growing up her magic would be limited. She wouldn't be as powerful as she could be without the bands. Not squib levels of magic or anything like that, but it would be likely she'd eventually notice that she was less powerful than the rest of her siblings. But, a small price to pay for not allowing our child to murder people.

Before you start asking yourself why you'd be needed for the solution when we've already explained the bands, we've actually managed to find a much better way to keep our daughter and other people safe.

Cut to roughly a week or two ago and apparently we'd been less than vigilant about warding the room we were having the meeting in. Not sure if we dropped our defenses because we thought we had a solution or if we were all distracted with the upcoming anniversary preparations, but either way we had an eavesdropper during one of our meetings.

Snape wandered his way into one of the portraits in Narcissa's private drawing room. Apparently being a good spy transferred into his portrait's abilities because we managed to have about twenty minutes worth of discussion before we realized he was there. And we didn't even realize it ourselves, it took him speaking to us before we noticed his presence. "Why don't you just bind the little witch's ability?"

I did NOT shriek.

So I said, calmly, and in a normal tone of voice, "We've thought of that Snape, but I refuse to turn my daughter into an obscurial or force her to be a squib when she wasn't born as one!"

"I didn't say bind all of her magic or strip her of it, idiot boy."

What followed was not several minutes of me arguing my own intelligence and adulthood with a canvas of oil and magic and snark.
When the argument was at its peak Narcissa shut it down and was able to get Snape to explain by saying, "Severus, if you have a solution tell us. You may doubt Harry's intelligence, which is wrong but your prerogative, but I know you don't want your Godson's daughter to suffer. Tell us what you know or get out."

Snape went on to explain, "There is a way to block an entire family of magic if the binder is skillful enough and the bindee either willing or particularly susceptible to the binding magic." That gave me pause because while Morgana is young she isn't particularly willing to do anything she doesn't want to do and doesn't seem to be susceptible to others magic. And I said so.

"Potter ..."

"It's actually Malfoy-Wood if you remember Snape. Draco loves you enough that I know your portrait was there for the wedding. If you can't call me Harry after I gave birth to many of your favorite person's children then the least you can do is call me by my actual surname!" Which certainly wasn't the most important point I needed to make but you know how much I hate being called Potter, especially by him.

"My most sincere apologies Mr. Malfoy-Wood," I didn't not believe the apologies were sincere but whatever, "you are all in luck. While the littlest Malfoy may be powerful and unwilling to trust most, all we need is a highly skilled Legilimens that she trusts unconditionally."

Well shite, we have one of those!

"I can explain the precise process to Draco himself as he will obviously be the one performing it, but for the rest of you I'll give an overview; Draco will delve into Morgana's mind as gently as possible, while in there he will be able to find her magic. You see, each family of magic while part of the whole is made up as separate threads of magic, if he isolates the thread that leads to darker killing magic he can place a block on the individual thread."

I had to interrupt, "And this block won't place her in danger of becoming an obscurial? Or cause her magic to shift so that the other threads take on darkness to compensate?"

"Fairly insightful questions, you must spend quite a bit of time with your husband and his intelligence is rubbing off on you." Hehe, rubbing off. No, shut up Harry, not the time! "Neither of those scenarios will happen. The dark killing thread is a small portion of total magic, even in the darkest of wizards that thread would make up no more than twenty-five percent of their magic. That much blockage is nowhere near the amount of containment that would cause an obscurial. As for the shifting, again while all the threads share the same magical core they do not transfer energies. She will be safe."

I gave his portrait a bit of the judgemental Malfoy eyebrow I've developed, "I promise I would never suggest something that would possibly cause harm to Lily's granddaughter or my godson's child" his gaze shifted to Narcissa, "and alas, even in portrait form I am quite terrified of what Narcissa would do to me if I were incorrect."

I suppose that does add up.

So, now that you're willing to admit there's a problem, and now that we've come up with a solution, the only hurdle ahead of us is for Snape to explain the process and for you to complete it. I promise our daughter will be fine, as will anyone who angers her.

Let me dry those shiny eyes,

Harry
Tuesday May 8th
Dear Harry and Oliver,

I'm very disgruntled by this whole situation. I mean, once my eyes were opened to the truth, I realized that I'd been purposely NOT seeing it, but to find out that you already knew to the point that you'd come up with a plan? I...

I need to go climb a mountain or something. See you when I get back.

That blind arsehole you're married to,
Draco
Chapter 278

Chapter Summary

Harry apologizes and Draco meditates.

Chapter Notes

See the end of the chapter for notes

Tuesday May 8, 2018

Draco,

I'm sorry if this seemed underhanded to you. I don't want you to think I was going behind your back. I was going to tell you as soon as we had a solution. Which I would have done over a week ago if I hadn't been preoccupied with anniversary prep. I will absolutely take responsibility for not telling you months ago as I should have.

If that's not what you're upset about, and what you really have to think about is your own inability to see the truth, please give yourself a break. It's hard to see faults in our children. Believe me, I have a really hard time with it. I mean, we're parents of teenagers and toddlers, it's easy enough to see simple flaws like "Zwei isolates himself a bit too much" or "Seph is way too willing to throw herself into danger." It's really hard to see something as scary as "my baby is killing things."

Honestly, if I hadn't known exactly how healthy that little horse was prior to his run-in with Morgana I probably wouldn't have seen it as soon as I did either. She's a baby. And she loves her family. She's powerfully loyal and protective of her loved ones. She's gone from attacking when scared to attacking to defend her family. In theory it's not a bad thing. In reality it is, because she's too young to know what she's doing and that it should probably be saved for lifesaving moments and not for when a kid steals your sister's toy.

And I do want to clarify, you labeled your email to both Oliver and I. Then with the pronouns the way they were I couldn't tell if you were directing the "you already knew" to me or to the both of us. Oliver did not know, he was not in the planning session. I kept this all to myself. I really thought I was doing the right thing, not burdening either of you with something scary before we had a plan in place. I'm really sorry that my actions hurt you (both I'm sure).

I understand you need to come to terms with everything that's happened. You take all the time you need. And when you're ready, you can come home, Ollie and I will snog you senseless, and then we can go make sure our daughter and the people she surrounds herself with are going to continue to be happy and healthy.

I know you're strong enough to do this. Get out whatever rage, frustration, or disgruntlement you need. Then come home and let's take charge of Morgana's safety and future.

Love,
Your Harry
Wednesday May 9th
My dearest Harry and Oliver,

I have currently reached the summit of Mount Everest. Yes I know, being able to use a Portkey to get to this area took a significant amount of time off this whole trek, but also, just using magic to be able to keep warm and clear up undesirable weather - not to mention the paths in front of me if they were too covered in snow - means that I got to the top in very little time. Now that I'm here, I'm laying on my back looking up at the sky.

And meditating. The reason I was so upset is all me. I was too willing to tell myself lies to keep the truth from myself. Now that I have seen it, I need to come to terms with it, and actually, climbing this mountain was super helpful in that regard.

Hermione sent me a Patronus yelling at me for not coming to work last night, and then when she received my return Patronus letting her know that I was (at that point) nearing the summit of a mountain, she sent me a return Portkey - which made me realize I had forgotten to obtain that, stupid idiot! Thus, when I feel rested and calm enough, I plan to Portkey right back to the Manor.

See you soon.

When I look into your eyes,
Draco

Chapter End Notes

Yeah I know, it's probably not realistic for Draco to have climbed all the way to the top in a single day, even with magic, but let's just say he had a wizarding guide that knew several magical shortcuts, lol.
Chapter 279

Chapter Summary

Draco's back from Everest and Harry and Oliver help him do what needs to be done.

Wednesday May 9, 2018

Only you my Draco,

Only my beautiful, ridiculous, intense, brave, brilliant man would think he needs to be at the top of Mount Everest to meditate. Ollie and I certainly missed you last night. As did apparently Hermione. Yeesh, sorry you ended up getting the patronus equivalent of a howler for not showing up to work. I can't believe Hermione did that.

Wait a minute, I actually believe it. You see, the reason I didn't think she would be upset is because she knew you weren't home. I had sent her a message letting her know we'd probably be doing the legilimency fix soon and to give her a heads up that if you seemed distracted at work that was probably why. So when you said she sent you an angry patronus I almost couldn't believe she'd be so insensitive. Until I realized Hermione being fully aware of the situation and knowing you better than almost anyone but myself and Ollie meant she probably knew exactly what you needed ...

You needed something else to focus on, you needed someone else to be frustrated with, so that you could stop drowning in your own self-reflection and self-destructive behaviors. She gave you something to think about so you didn't end up sitting at the TOP OF MOUNT EVEREST for three days stuck in a meditation cycle. She's one brilliant witch you know?

Anyway, when you finally made your way home a few hours ago, Ollie and I were prepared to drag you off to our rooms to distract you just a bit further. Get you out of your own head (and into my arse! Mmmmm buggering!) but you had other ideas.

You came striding into the kids' play room where those of us who were home were congregated. We figured things might be stressful leading up to the ... ritual? And we didn't really have any idea what to expect after the fact. So we decided some family time where the little kids played with toys while the adults relaxed and watched our little loves enjoy themselves was just what the healer ordered.

The kids all clamored to give you hugs and kisses, your mum took her own turn hugging you and kissing your cheek, as Oliver and I waited until last since we had, as I previously stated, planned on dragging you to our rooms.

But you stopped me before I could drag you off, "No Harry, this has gone on long enough. I will not be waiting another moment to do what needs doing."

"Erm, sure Draco, that makes sense. But shouldn't you go get the details from Snape first? We've waited this long, we can wait another day or so to make sure you've got the process right."

You stopped me before I could get into a long-winded Harry rant saying, "I stopped in to see his portrait as soon as the portkey dropped me here. Somehow I knew there might be some certain husbands of mine who might try and lighten my mood. Therefore I made sure to get all the information I needed prior to finding you.

Okay, now I was nervous. When I was focused on how you were handling things I could distract myself, but now that we were ready I found myself working up to a panic attack thinking about what needed to happen to my little girl. Thankfully your mum could sense my distress, maybe I was giving off some sort of stressful pheromones. Or she noticed the crazy glint in my eyes. Either way she took charge, directing us all like the General she is, "Harry, Draco, Oliver dears, take Morgana to the sunroom, Severus should already be residing in the painting of the gazebo."

I spluttered a bit, mumbling something about what to do with the rest of the children or other such ridiculousness.

Again, in her no nonsense way, Narcissa told me that not only could she take care of them single handedly if needed, but that she had Lucius, and Molly and Iris waiting to hear from her, both planning on flooing over as soon as they were needed. "Us Grandmums will have a lovely time with our grandchildren, whom we do not see nearly enough of I might add!"

Spend more time at the Manor, I heard the command loud and clear Mum!

The four of us headed to the sunroom, Morgana didn't seem distressed by our moods. If anything, the little queen acted like the walk through the halls was her personal parade. Her pudgy little hands waving to the portraits like they'd all stopped by just to watch her procession. It actually did a pretty good job of calming me, a little giggle therapy to make me ignore the worry for a short time.

When we arrived, we (you) decided the way we would be situated. We would all sit on the floor, no one wanted to risk someone tumbling off the furniture, Oliver held Morgana in his lap and you sat between the vee of my legs. This way Morgana would be held safe and sound by her second favorite minion, and you could focus fully on your mental efforts while I kept you physically supported.

Once we began it was all a little anticlimactic. You were relaxed in my arms, Morgana seemed content in Ollie's, and then we all sat in silence for what felt like eons but was actually about an hour and a half. Your beautiful quicksilver eyes staring into Morgana's pitch black ones. I know you were working intently, but from our end it just looked like an intense staring war you were waging on a baby.

When it was done you declared "it is done." Although when you pulled out of her mind I could see the exhaustion on your face and Morgana fell asleep almost immediately. Ollie and I dragged the two of you into our rooms and wrapped you up in bed. I decided to write out what happened while you sleep but as soon as I'm done I'm going to climb into bed with the rest of you.

Thank you my love for being strong enough to keep our baby girl safe.

With everything I am,
Harry

Thursday May 10th
My beloved husbands,

Yesterday was certainly intense. The interesting part was that as I was wandering around inside
Morgana's mind and organizing things while 'playing' with her - that was how I kept her calm and engaged, part of me was singing to and dancing with her, and playing with her favorite stuffed animal, etc. - well, I got a chance to look around her mind, which was... A bit like a large blank canvas in which a part of a big and complicated painting has been started, but so far, it was mostly the rough sketch that had been colored in here and there.

If that makes any sort of sense.

In any case, what took so long was that I had to organize things enough to locate the magic threads I was looking for, and once I found them, I had to be absolutely certain which was which. From Morgana's perspective, it probably looked light pretty lights on strings. It actually was amazingly beautiful.

I took each string in hand and activated it with a bit of my own power so that I could see what it did, and I can already tell you that our girl has the potential to use any and all magic if she wants, and her inner well is deep and full. Using my own magic to evaluate hers did take a lot out of me, and that's why I was so exhausted when I was done.

That said, once I was certain I had the right thread of magic, I did as told by my godfather and carefully gathered it up in a bundle, sort of like winding it into a ball of yarn. That bundle was placed into a box that I clearly labeled as Morgana's death magic. I sealed the box with a seal that I designed to wear off over the course of about 15 years or so, so that if I should happen to die before she grows into an adult, she'll still slowly regain use of her magic at a time when she can hopefully learn to control it.

Once I was done with that, I slept until today, waking up around 9am. I promptly returned to Hogwarts to - well, I PLANNED to pop in on one or both of you during your classes, as a marmoset on your shoulder. Unfortunately, I was waylaid quite thoroughly. It seems that my favorite Hufflepuff Romeo (I really need to learn his name) spotted me on my way to your classroom (Harry) and gave me those big puppydog eyes that I just can't resist.

So, I took him back to our Quarters and served him some tea and biscuits as he cried all over me. It seems that he's heartbroken again. What happened was that a boy took interest during that sex ed class I conducted, and asked Romeo out on a couple of dates. Things seemed to be going well, until Romeo asked why they always ended their dates with Romeo using his mouth on the other boy and nothing in return.

That's when the boy said a bunch of things that ultimately make Romeo think that he was just being used as an easy lay. I can't exactly disagree since I have no idea who the boy is or how he actually feels on the subject. Thus all I can do is let Romeo cry it all out, and then when he's ready to listen, give him advice on choosing a better boyfriend in the future.

Oh! It seems he's returned from the loo! Signing off now.

Come with me, you will see what I mean, there's a world inside no one else ever sees,
Draco
P.S. Huh, that worked... I decided to call Jules on my magimobile and have him talk to Romeo a bit as a slightly older peer - since Romeo just turned 15 - and the two of them hit it off rather well. Maybe Romeo will call Jules in the future when he needs advice on his love life :-(
Friday May 11, 2018

T.M.I.F.
Thank Merlin It's Friday!

It's been such a long week I am ready for the weekend. I plan on not getting out of my pajamas the entire time. Although for during the day I do mean actual pajama bottoms and not just my usual sleepwear of nude, or the occasional times I go to sleep in a pair of pants.

We dealt with you Draco up on Mount Everest, which is very cool and I can't wait to see the pictures you took with the MMM you brought with. Aren't you glad you consistently keep one in your watch carry-all? Can you imagine only having those views in your memories and not having a physical copy?

Anyway, it was an awesome thing you did but the emotions behind why you went were a bit harder to handle. I had to deal with my own guilt over keeping it from you, my worry over it going well and us saving our daughter, and my fear over you potentially falling down a mountain. Less likely, but you know I'm a worrier.

Then we had the actual ... process? Ritual? Event? Whatever you want to call it, we dealt with hours of worry while we waited for the results. Never knowing if one of you might injure the other in the process. Thankfully it just meant we had some sleepy cuddle-bugs so I'm counting it a solid win! Any time I get extra sleepy snuggles is best case scenario.

And now that you've described her actual mindscape and the beauty of the magical strands I'd love to see that in a pensieve picture. It sounds gorgeous and intense. I certainly don't have the skill to view it on my own, but I'd love to ride your metaphorical coattails to be able to visualize it.

Then! On top of all the extra family drama, I was still doing my regular parenting duties and my full time job. And bloody hell are some of my students in a mood. I understand why, the fifth and seventh years are stressing about their upcoming OWLS and NEWTS, which puts them in a state of not having gotten enough sleep combined with their brains being oversaturated by revising. And the other years not only are hitting that end of term wall where the weather is getting lovely and they're just burnt out from a year's education, but they're also sharing a school, and common spaces, with the highly emotional fifth and seventh years.

All in all, I need a weekend to relax and pretend my students don't exist for a few hours. I'll obviously still be available in an emergency, and I'll do my Sunday evening family meeting with my Lions, but other than that it is pajamas and biscuits while I binge the most recent episodes of Doctor Who.

Before I sign off to search out my sexy husbands and talk them into some Friday Night Wrestling I did want to bring up one other thing. Draco Darling, are you actually that oblivious or are you just being sneaky? Between last night, class today, and the hour since I've been done with classes, I have witnessed both Jules and "Romeo" (you NEED to learn his name man!) with their noses buried in their mobiles with dreamy smiles on their faces. Did you mean to set them up? Or did you actually think you were just giving the kid a mentor to talk with?
Less Oblivious than you,
Harry

Friday May 11th
I'm brilliant!

So, I was sitting in the entertainment room with the Feisty Foursome, Zaire, Jaz, Vani, Shtara, Nora, and Morgana (Dean and Seamus took Dylan while Oliver had Gabriel out in the stables, I think), watching Phineas and Ferb. Not watching in the slightest but still in the room was Jules. He was off in a corner, rapidly sending and receiving Insta-owls.

And that's how I'm brilliant. See when I originally suggested that Romeo and Jules have a chat, it was really to give Romeo a chance to speak with someone his own age that was actually gay, to give him another perspective on things. Also, I hoped that Jules - with his worrying life experience - might be positively influenced by Romeo's more innocent worldview.

It wasn't my first intention to set them up, but I will admit that I wondered if it might happen. Even I didn't expect it so quickly! But then again, it seems that both of them are quick when it comes to matters of love, as evidenced by Romeo kissing his first crush rather than try talking to him. And also, Elena has reported that Jules is very popular at her school, which is not surprising since the performing arts often attracts people who are different or at least open to different sexualities.

In any case, when I was looking over at Jules at one point, happy to see him happy, he looked up at me with a huge grin. "Thank you so much for introducing me to John!"

"John...?" I wondered in confusion.

Jules looked even more confused than me. "The boy you wanted me to talk to..."

"Oh! Romeo! Heh, so that's his name..."

Jules gave me a soft smile and shook his head. "Romeo, huh? I could see that..."

"So you like him?" I pressed.

Jules nodded his head. "He's... almost the complete opposite of me. He thinks I'm pulling his leg when I tell him things like my biodad deals drugs, but when I asked him why else I would be staying with you, he seemed to actually understand."

"Your English has improved dramatically," I murmured the praise.

"Thanks..." Jules was quiet for a moment, then he gathered up a bit of courage. "Can... Can I invite John over here for dinner and to meet in person?"

I shrugged. "I suppose."

"Chouette!" Jules cried out as he raced off, presumably to wait by the floo for Romeo's arrival. You know what? I'm dead certain that I will never be able to replace his name in my head and will probably continue to refer to him as Romeo for the rest of time.

No Harry, I am not oblivious, I figured that if the two of them got on at all, that they'd probably try dating. That said, I will say that I am still a tiny bit naïve in that it took me until after Jules had been out of the room for at least a half an hour for it to occur to me that two blokes that really like messing around with blokes probably did more than just say hello and maybe give each other a hug/kiss of greeting.

In fact, Jules probably gave Romeo the typical French kiss on each cheek, and that almost certainly encouraged foolish young Romeo to get carried away, and by this point, I am beyond afraid to go check up on them. Probably best to just ignore the whole situation and send in a house elf when it comes time to actually eat dinner.

As for now, I'm going to sign off and finish watching - oh! Looks like you and Oliver wish to discuss something urgent. In our playroom. For the next several hours.

Lean on me when you're not strong,
Draco

Chapter End Notes

So, after I wrote this email and sent it to Chrissie, I was reading bits of it to my son and trying to explain what was going on in the story in general as he doesn't read it, just gets updates from me from time to time, and THAT'S when it occurred to me that I'd set up Romeo and Jules...
So I sent a message to Chrissie and we both laughed about it. But just so you know, no, that totally wasn't planned, lol ^_^
Chapter 281

Chapter Summary

Stuff happens, lol.

Friday May 11, 2018

My Everything,

Okay, both of you wish me luck. I was planning on doing a whole bunch of nothing this weekend but I FINALLY got a reply from Minnie that she has the time to do an in depth meeting concerning extending or not extending my contract.

I have to go tell my surrogate grandmum who took a risk on hiring me that I'm throwing in the towel after only one year. Hopefully my willingness to stay on as Gryffindor head of house and that I'm willing to step in as substitute flying instructor when Ollie is laid up after having the little caboose will soften the blow.

Here I go ...
Harry

Friday May 11, 2018

Or is it Saturday yet? Hmm, 2:00 A.M. yep, definitely Saturday at this point

My Loves,

Another beautiful night spent with the loves of my life. Another night of passion and love and so so much pleasure. A night spent worshiping your bodies. And now I'm awake while all the rest of my world is asleep. Not sure if it's because I'm feeling emotional, or perhaps it's because my heart is still racing a mile a minute after really putting it through the wringer for hours. Either way I'm awake with nothing to do but write and stare at my beautiful husbands.

When I got back from my meeting with Minnie, which went so much better than I worried it would, I figured I would come help the two of you put the little ones to bed before dragging you off to the playroom. However, apparently the Grandmothers got a taste of babysitting the whole crew the other day when we were off with Morgana and decided to have their own Grandmum trio slumber party with the kids to give us a night to ourselves.

I did still sneak in and give them all a quick hug and kiss. What? I may like an evening free to be with my men but I HATE letting them go to bed without my goodnights.

I am not sure what came over me but I had a very odd dynamic going on. I was feeling very submissive, I wanted to serve my men. I wanted to kneel at your feet while you ignored me until you needed my mouth or my arse. But I was also feeling aggressively submissive. I knew what I wanted and was willing to make a demand for it. Normally when I'm feeling so subby I like to let you lead, but I was on a mission and not taking no for an answer.

As soon as we got to the playroom I began giving orders. I think you were both surprised by this but seeing as my orders meant good feelings for you you were willing to run with it.

I shucked off my clothes revealing nothing but a pair of lacy cheekie knickers and demanded the two of you to strip off and sit against the headboard. Once you'd settled next to each other I crawled up the bed and proceeded to kiss, lick, and stroke your beautiful cocks, while taking Draco down my throat I would use my hand to teasingly wank Oliver then would swap. For a while the two of you were watching me go back and forth between your shafts but I must have given Draco enough of a look that he could sense my feelings because I heard, "Oliver Luv, we don't need to keep an eye on the little mutt, come here." which was followed by the wet noises of snogging.

Ungh, thank you so much for understanding I just needed to serve, not perform.

After a while I could tell you were both ready for more. Again, I directed things the way I wanted them. "Master, stay where you are please. Sir, keep on snogging but if you'd please give me access to your arse?" Draco was sitting back, Ollie on all fours letting me prep his hole, all while continuing to noisily kiss each other.

Once your gorgeous arse was ready Oliver, I directed you to climb into Draco's lap facing out so your back was against his chest. I added lube to Draco with a few strokes of my hand and then held his shaft steady while you slowly impaled yourself on it.

Again, you both seemed to have caught on because Oliver began directing me to please you both. Demanding I suck his dick while he rode Draco. Telling me at one point to turn around and prep myself, getting my hole ready for you to use. I saw Draco grab onto Oliver's legs, hooking his arms under your knees Ollie, and spreading you wide, fucking up into you. Draco then joined the directing, "now that your hole is all ready Mutt, get back here and put your mouth back on us." which I did by lying down on my front so I could reach where you both were joined. Licking and kissing where Ollie's pink, puffy, rim was stretched wide around Draco's cock. Licking a stripe up that shaft as it pulled out enough to slam back in.

When you both seemed close Draco pulled out but kept fucking into Oliver's slippery cleft, rubbing past the hole, sliding smoothly past those bollocks that were tightening and drawing up, the head poking out from beneath Oliver's own rock hard cock. You both managed to come from that stimulation, and I managed to receive one of my favorite taboo acts, a faceful of both your essences.

"Clean us up Pup!" Draco drawled out in his filthy posh Master voice. I obviously obeyed, licking you both all over to clean off all traces. Once I was done I rolled off the bed, sitting up straight while kneeling on the floor waiting for direction.

The two of you took your time, chatting with each other, casually kissing, catching up after a busy week. Occasionally talking about me like I wasn't even there. You know, if anyone else read this description they'd probably think it would make me feel left out, but Merlin I needed this. I needed to drift away on my knees. I needed to feel that grounding feeling of being your little sub, there for you to use without requiring anything for myself. Although it actually is for myself. It's such a paradox to wrap my mind around. I'm glad I don't have to explain it and the both of you just understand that I need it and thrive on it.

Eventually you turned back to paying attention to me. Having me crawl over to my spanking bench. The two of you lovingly strapped me in, kissing each part of me before you locked it up. Once I was settled in and so far into my submission that I could feel my skin vibrating the two of you took your pleasure with my body. Praising me, calling me good, talking about what a beautiful piece of property you own. Ungh, thank you my loves it was perfection.

Eventually I was unstrapped, cuddled up into bed with chocolates and water. And when I finally came up for air I was deliciously wedged between you both. Beautifully sore, loose-limbed, and sated, but unfortunately wide awake.

But after dictating this I am finally feeling like I could sleep.

I love you both so much more than words could say. My Master and My Sir.

Yours,
Harry

Saturday May 12th,
My perfect husbands,

My day started with Siri and Zwei coming in to wake me around 11. Lucky for them, I was too sated and in such a good mood that I didn't even care that they'd woken me a bit early. So it was that they helped me get dressed in a comfortable track suit and handed me a delicious bacon sandwich to eat as we made our way to the Hogwarts Quidditch pitch.

Once on the Quidditch pitch, I led about half the student body through a run that equaled - I dunno - a mile? Then we cooled down with some stretches, before pairing off to learn more about Krav Maga. And by that, I mean I taught them another very informal lesson and let them mostly practice the move on each other.

When the majority of the students gave up and took off to eat lunch - Zwei included - Siri stayed behind to show off some of his newest Quidditch moves. His next match is next weekend, and he is very optimistic that the Tornadoes are going to win. Mostly, this just gave the two of us an excuse to fly around chatting.

It seems that Siri likes a girl, but she's currently dating a different boy. I gave him some practical advice along the lines of just being there as her friend for the time being. IF she should happen to break up with that other boy, when she's ready to try dating again, Siri can ask her out then. He seemed unhappy about having to wait and asked what a Slytherin would do.

I grinned at him. "A Slytherin would probably arrange for them to break up sooner rather than later, but then that Slytherin would also have to deal with the repercussions when it inevitably came out that he manipulated the situation and the girl. That normally doesn't turn out well."

Siri sighed in disappointment but accepted this as a sign that he should probably just wait for her like I originally suggested. I smirked at him. "You could always try having a practice run by asking someone else out and learning basic relationship things - like when to hold hands - before presented with an opportunity to ask the girl you really want out."

"But... What if I end up liking the girl I ask out as practice enough that I don't want to hurt her feelings when the girl I really want becomes available?"

"That could certainly happen, and maybe it's a sign that it was meant to be. Of course, you're still so young that you don't REALLY need to be worrying about relationships yet."

"Maybe not, but if I become famous like I hope, then it'll be even HARDER to know if a girl really likes me... or if she just likes my fame..." Siri moped

I flew close enough to give him a comforting back rub.

"It already sort of happens, you know?" He grumbled. "Everyone on the planet knows that we're 'Harry Potter's' kids. Even though I look more like you, lots of girls come up and flirt with me just so they can ask about him, you know?"

"That's definitely rough," I commiserated.

Siri looked me in the eye. "That's why I like this girl. She doesn't seem to care who my dads are. Actually, she doesn't seem to notice me unless I go over and talk to her, and then she's always nice. I can't help but think about how Orion once told me that he was attracted to Farrah because she was one of the few people that didn't fawn all over him. In fact, she always seemed to hate him even as she clearly also liked him. I don't want the crazy bits, but I'd love the, erm... normal ones?"

I looked down as I was nearly overcome by a wave of guilt and remorse. Then I looked at him again. "No matter what happened, Farrah actually was mental. She should have been treated but she was never even diagnosed. I'd advise you to stay away from anyone who comes off as even half crazy, and remember, if you really DO become famous - like Oliver - then you might have to deal with all sorts of crazy people."

"Such as his stalker?" Siri asked curiously.

I nodded. "In that situation, I didn't have to endure anything truly bad, but it could easily have been terrible."

"You said he'd hexed you to sleep, right? How do you KNOW he didn't do anything terrible when you were asleep?" He asked with perverse curiosity.

I shrugged. "I suppose that I don't, but I have to assume based on the fact that my clothes remained on me at all times that he couldn't have done anything worse than fondle me when tying me up or laying me on the bed. Even when I was rescued, I never had the feeling like I'd been touched. Plus, he did make a vague crazy reference to doing bad things in the future, which implied he hadn't already done them, and then your dad swooped in and rescued me like a bloody damsel, so from my perspective, all I really did was sleep."

"If dad hadn't rescued you, what would you have done?"

"I'd have just waited for him to relax his guard and leave my hands free. I don't think he knew that I am good at wandless magic, but he probably guessed that I could at least summon my wand, and thus had my hands tied in a way to prevent that. The moment my hands were free for any reason, I'd have incarcerated him, freed myself, and called for the Aurors to come deal with him."

"But..." he hesitated, looking away. "What if he never let your hands free and did things you didn't want? What would you have done then?"

"Endured them with the confidence that nothing on this planet could keep your dad from finding me eventually. He basically has me tagged with his magic so that there's no place on Earth I could hide from him if I actually wanted to. He would have found me eventually, and if there was even a hint of bad things done to me, he'd have put a permanent end to the culprit. I'm beyond relieved that it didn't come to that," I admitted.

"Why don't you care more about having bad things done to you?" Siri asked in concern.
I gave this some serious thought. "I suppose... it's because I've already had the worst things done to me and I survived them. Just knowing that I have your father and Oliver at home waiting for me gives me the courage and confidence to face any situation head on and - ha! Being a Slytherin gave me the skills necessary to turn just about any situation to my favor. I'm NOT a damsel, I'm a survivor!"

He smiled at me and didn't even look to see if we were being watched by anyone before leaning over and hugging me. "I'm happy to hear that. I'd actually been having a couple of nightmares in which I was held captive by a stalker, and in my nightmares, it never turns out in my favor. BUT I also don't seem to fight or anything. You're right though, having the family I have means that I know how to defend and protect myself. I have no need to worry about being helpless. But wait! You've mentioned it before, but I never thought to ask, what do you mean you've had the worst things done to you?"

So, taking advantage of the fact that we were high enough up that no one could hear us without jumping on a broom and joining us, I quietly told him about what had happened to me as a teen. Siri looked heartbroken on my behalf and I had a flicker of concern over whether I should have told him something like that so honestly, but... I also didn't want to hide it and make him feel like he also has to hide it if anything like that ever happened to him.

Our stomachs began to grumble shortly after that and we decided to go fill them. Thus, I dropped Siri off in the Great Hall before heading over to the Manor to get Muffy to bring me some blood sausages and Sanguinaccio Dolce. And before you asked, no I was just in the mood for them, there's nothing causing cravings. I checked!

While in the Manor, I found out this somewhat alarming tidbit: Eris is moving out of the Manor. It seems that Eris had remained in the Manor for this long because Hazel is still here and they DO have a thriving business together. But since Hazel plans to marry Pearl soon and move out, Eris has come to the conclusion that it was time for her to do so as well.

So I asked: "Are you planning to marry Eric then?"

She laughed. "Nope! Actually, Eric and I decided a while ago that we didn't really make a good couple. We're still committed to being friends and excellent co-parents, and he's definitely still staying in my room with me, but that's actually why I decided that it's time to move out. I wanted to have the space and privacy to find a boyfriend and it's not exactly easy to bring someone home and say: yeah, this is my son's dad, but he and I aren't together, even though we still sleep together..." She trailed off with another laugh.

"So... the two of you are planning to move into a flat together?" I asked in confusion.

"More like a house somewhere in the Wiltshire countryside. I haven't found the right one yet, but... yeah, we're going to be living together in a place where we each have our own room and our own lives, but are also right there raising our son. Best of both worlds, really."

"Aha... Well, I suppose I wish you both luck. Also, that probably explains why I've heard you two arguing a lot lately," I said, more to myself than her.

"Yeah, well, Eric had agreed to us NOT being a couple, but then he kept getting mad at me for going out and trying to, erm..." She blushed and looked away.

I harrumphed a laugh. "Uh-huh."
"ANYWAY, he's been yelling at me for trying to find others when he's still right there in my bed if I need anything like that, and so, our arguing led to this decision: to move out."

I sighed in acceptance and gave her a tight hug. "Do me a favor and go tell this to your dad before he reads my email and accuses of me of keeping important things from him again. Plus, he should really hear it from you."

She nodded in agreement and ran off to do exactly that. So... I wrote this email.

I like it when the beat goes, baby make your booty go,
Draco
Chapter 282

Chapter by ladyroxanne21

Chapter Summary

Harry is not a prude and Draco checks on Erma.

Chapter Notes

See the end of the chapter for notes

Sunday May 13, 2018

My Dearest Ones,

I am an adult. I am NOT a prude. I have an extremely satisfying sex life. A sex life that often falls well outside of what others would consider vanilla. I have had long conversations with almost all of my children (infants and very small children not included) about safe sex, good sex, emotional components to sex. Five of my official children, even if I were able to pretend the others were celibate, have children or a child on the way - both in Elena's case, so I know they've had sex. I have always been hopeful that some time in their adulthood they would end up with a fulfilling and satisfying sex life.

My sweet Hazel I've probably worried about more so than any of the others. With her transition process, we knew lack of sexual compatibility could be a factor. Eventually we knew from her own words that she was having some issues with her sex life. And eventually, you heard with your eavesdropping ears that pick up everything, that things were working out well in that regard for our Haz. I was pleased she was happy but also thrilled that I was not the one to have heard it for myself.

In my mind, each of our children are permanently a specific age. I'm not sure why, and it's not consistent, it's not as though in my head each of them are eternally all six years old, or even stuck at the age they came into our lives. But my Hazel is forever five years old in my heart. She was finally fully (outwardly) living her life as the gender she'd always known she was. She was coming out of the sadness that had plagued her while she was three and four. When I picture our little girl the image that always comes to mind is of her at five years old after a shopping trip with Grammy Cissa, twirling into the sunroom with bright eyes and the biggest smile I'd seen from her in years. Wanting to do a fashion show and show off her pretty lavender dress she'd just gotten.

This was the image I had in my mind when I was bringing her her birthday breakfast. Thinking of sparkling eyes, little girl giggles, and how glad I am that she came into our lives. Yeah, not the image I got when I walked into the room. Now, I know that when my children have their significant others over that I should knock before entering their rooms. But Pearl hadn't spent the night last night, and Haz is such a morning snoozer like Daddy Draco that I couldn't imagine I'd be walking in on anything other than a sleepy girl huddled under a million blankets.

Apparently, Pearl must have floo'ed in last night after we all went to bed. It's so sweet that she wanted to surprise her fiancée by showing up in the middle of the night on her birthday. She likely got in very late, or very early, since they were .... still at it when I walked in this morning.
So I'm gonna need a solid brain bleaching. Maybe an obliviate or two. As a matter of fact I should probably delete this entire email so I don't have to read it and possibly learn this information again in the future. Although reading that it happened is completely different than witnessing it.

I should probably come to terms with the fact that she is not five years old anymore. She is eighteen, a successful business owner, a graduate, a loving fiancée, and amazing sister, who's only weeks away from marrying the love of her life.

And our Eris isn't five years old anymore either. Although, five years old isn't the age Eris is stuck in forever with me. Somehow Eris is the "oldest" of all my imaginary ages. She's eternally eight or nine years old in my head. That awful, yet beautiful, time in our lives where we were building Unity Iran. This sweet young woman, obsessed with fashion, one of our "divas" as we lovingly called them at that time, would be up to her elbows in dirt if that's what the children of Unity Iran needed at the moment. I remember seeing one of the Kids wheel themselves into the kitchens wearing Eris' favorite sparkly shrug, her prized clothing item at the time, and Eris' eyes lit up with pride seeing how much happiness something as simple as a sparkly new clothing piece brought to that Kid.

But I digress ... thank you for having Eris let me know about moving, although she didn't quite get to me before I read your email. And just for the record, I never accused you of keeping things from me! I just couldn't believe you managed to not blurt out Lainie's news and want to talk about it immediately. I wasn't mad, just surprised.

I was not so surprised to find out Eris wanted to move. I knew that she was only still staying at the Manor because of the ease of raising Luka here and wanting to be near Hazel. I'm actually pretty darn pleased to find out she isn't staying with Eric. Look, I have nothing against the kid (anymore) but I never felt they were truly right for each other. So few people actually meet their forever love with they're a teenager. The stress of young parenting, navigating a new romance while dealing with sleepless nights, isn't exactly a recipe for a healthy long-lasting relationship. Not that it would have been impossible, but unlikely. I'm just glad they didn't stay together because they thought they "should."

Although I do want to have a talk with Eric and his attempts to control our baby girl. Not cool dude, don't make me change my feelings about you. You were doing so well up until now!

I talked with Eri a little bit yesterday about her plans to move and I told her I had some great ideas if she and Eric wanted to hear them. So this afternoon I am going to sit down with them both ... as well as my Luka who I'm sure needs a lot of Grandpa Harry snuggles ... and talk about my ideas for their housing. I know Eris has plenty of money to purchase whatever home she'd like. But I've been part of the Malfoy family for a long time, we like to give extravagant gifts. So I'd like to offer to build the house for her whenever they pick out the land. And I can show them all my blueprints I've created for the alternative homes I've talked about in the past.

Looking at the time, neither of you will likely read this before I actually sit down to talk to them. So I think I'll come find the both of you, give you a heads up on my ideas, and see if you want to join me in talking with them both. And if neither of you are in the mood to talk I could probably be convinced into a quickie!

Incoming!
Harry

Sunday May 13th
My perfect men,

When I got up this 'morning,' it was to Morgana's adorable face as she was playing on the bed next to me, basically babbling happily and quietly to herself. When she saw that I was awake, she crawled over to give me gooey baby kisses. So, with her underfoot, I did my morning yoga routine, but opted to skip the face and skincare routine because I wasn't planning to do anything that required me to look my best.

Thus, with Morgana in a wrap carrier on my chest, I met up with you two to talk with Eris and Eric. During that conversation, Nora insisted that I summon her cozy sling carrier so that she could actually take a nap in it. After we'd come to a satisfying agreement with Eris, Romeo came into the room and surprised me with a hug.

"Thank you so much!" He exclaimed, looking like he'd just been beaten half to death by the Brand New Love stick. Or maybe he looked shagged out and I just didn't want to see it. In any case, I ruffled his hair and asked him: "Whatever for?"

"Introducing me to Jules. But more than that, just being there whenever I needed to talk to someone."

"I'd love to stay for lunch or tea, but I really have to get back and finish up my homework. I left Jules a note, but if he doesn't notice it and asks, tell him I went back to Hogwarts, yeah?" Romeo asked nervously.

I exchanged a look with both of you that was very amused that these two boys had hit it off so quickly. "I'll be sure to tell him, however, you'll likely end up chatting with him before I see him, since I'm planning to leave in a minute."

"Alright, bye then!" Romeo called out as he ran over to the fire and tossed some floo powder in. Once he was gone, Harry raised a brow at me.

"And... where are you planning on going?"

"I decided that since I had some time before Hazel's birthday dinner tonight, I should probably go check up on Erma in person. Dibly reports she's doing well enough, but he also reports that she acts a bit skittish at times and mumbles something about a weird ghost or something in her flat. I think I should talk to her and encourage her to go to see a Mind Healer if she really thinks she's seeing weird things in her flat."

"Oh! Can I go?!" You asked excitedly.

"Of course," I stated with a happy smile.

"I would like to come too, since I actually was with you when you found her. I sort of want to know how she's doing," Oliver added.

"I'm glad to hear that," I informed him with a kiss. "I was half afraid that I'd made you feel uncomfortable by suddenly taking in a stray - so to speak."

"No, just, erm… I suppose that I've never been close enough to such a person before that I even had to think about what I would do. I didn't feel uncomfortable so much as I felt lost and confused, but I've had some time to think it over, and now I have hope that I would do the same as you have," Oliver explained, giving us both kisses.
"Then let's get going so that we can be back in plenty of time," I suggested. "In which case, you two can fight over who gets to wear Dylan and Gabriel. I think it'll be safe enough to leave the Feisty Foursome here for the day, since they're out in the stables anyway. I'm dead certain that I saw Atreyu riding his favorite thestral around the North Fields..."

You both sighed, probably alarmed but accepting of the fact that he just does that and there's really not much point in trying to stop him all these many months after he started.

So, with Harry wearing Gabriel and Oliver wearing Dylan, we set off for Erma's. I'm not certain what her life was like before I found her, but I feel that she must not have had a lot of positive contact with other people, because when we knocked on her door, there was utter silence in her flat. I knocked a second time with no response, and then tried calling out:

"Erma? It's Draco. Can we have a nice little chat?"

At that point, I could hear her moving in a way that was nearly silent, but just enough to think that the flat wasn't empty after all. She actually could have been out getting something to eat. In any case, after a long moment, we heard no less than five different locks being unlocked before the door opened and she peered at us warily.

"It's... really you... I was beginning to think I'd made you up. That ALL of this is just in my head and I've died or something."

We went in and - since we'd had Dibly prepare us a small picnic of beverages and biscuits before we left - had a nice chat over tea. Erma seems physically healthier than she was, but mentally... she definitely still needs help. I didn't think she'd bother going to see anyone, even if I paid for it, which was a bit depressing.

It seems that you must have picked up on the same thing, Harry, because you offered to call in Katja, and Erma visibly couldn't bring herself to say no, so we considered that a yes. Yes, I know, I just lectured a bunch of kids to consider anything less than an oh hell yes as a no, but this is different in that it could help save a life - or at the very least, a sanity.

Once Katja arrived and introductions were made, the three of us excused ourselves with the promise that we'd probably pop in next Sunday. We left but before we did, I took her hand in mine and let her know that I was hoping that she got better, and that even if no one else did, I cared about her.

She seemed so confused that she was near tears, but she nodded and let us go so that she could talk with Katja. Hopefully the meeting will do her some good. Out in the hall, before Apparating away, I gave you a thorough kiss as a reward, and then gave Oliver a kiss because he was pouting and deserved one too.

Before we actually Apparated home, I popped in on the Landlord to discuss my idea, and since I plan to do this with or without him, all I really wanted to know was if he was interested in helping. He declined, but gave me his sister's business card, as she is a social worker who would be THRILLED to spearhead a project like this. Also, he grumbled that she'd probably conscript him into helping anyway, and thus, wouldn't be completely out of it.

Chuckling, I wished him a good afternoon and returned to the Manor with two of you - and our kids, naturally.

Speaking of, I found it nice how the four of them were really rather good, simply sitting in our laps and listening to us talk. I would have assumed that they'd have wanted to crawl/walk/run around getting into everything, but they somehow knew the situation called for their best behavior. Which is not so surprising from Morgana as she can sit for hours in my lap without making much a fuss - unless she's hungry - but the boys have been getting into everything lately, and so, I thought there might be a bit of a bored baby brawl, but nope. Perfect angels!

In any case, I needed to take a shower and change into something better when we got home, so I accepted the quickie once the kids were down for a nap, and then left you two lounging in bed as I hopped in the shower. You were gone when I got out, but that just gave me time to write this email.

That said, I definitely have to get to dinner before I'm sent a howler.

'Cuz I gotta have faith,
Draco

Chapter End Notes

Note: since it never got worked into the story, the ghost or something that Erma thinks is haunting her flat is actually Dibly, lol ^_^
Chapter 283

Chapter Summary

Harry is pissed off at Pearl's father and Draco leaves to fix shit.

Monday May 14, 2018

I'm going to murder Pearl's father. Literally murder. Ollie sweetheart, can I please? I know we're on a no flirting and no murdering embargo but I really think it's important. If I can't murder what about a surprise genital amputation?

So, after class today I headed back to our rooms. I was thinking about taking a little nap, I'm feeling a bit run down at the moment, probably all the crazy events we've had going on the last few weeks. And instead of a set of empty rooms, or maybe some of the feisty foursome taking a break from their usual feral outdoor existence, there was Hazel sitting on our bed - wrapped in our blankets and cuddling a pillow hard enough that I have to assume it tried to escape at one point - and crying her poor little heart out.

I would love to have been helping Hazel and Pearl with their wedding prep. The big day is about two months away so there's plenty of time, but every time I've offered I get the feeling that the offer is appreciated but not particularly desired. That's fine, it's their wedding. And honestly they're both so involved with the fashion industry that it's not like I'm really going to be able to make any suggestions that are going to fit their vision of their wedding. They know I'm willing to help, so I'm just patiently waiting for if or when they ask for my help.

But Ivan, fucking Ivan, is still being a dick. He's supporting them in theory, he hasn't made any more shitty comments about it not being a real marriage, I haven't heard another stupid mention of our relationship being invalid, and so far Hazel has seemed content enough when she's around him. However, you know they've set the date for their wedding for 7th July.

If you'll remember, he tried negotiating and set a bunch of time frames where he was willing to pay for specific things depending on how long they waited. Here, I'll copy and paste to refresh your memory; "If they elope and marry before seventeen he will give them nothing but also won't disown or stop loving them. If they get married after the birthday but within the following month, he will pay for their honeymoon. If they wait six months past that, he will pay for their honeymoon and a small home, if they wait until after Pearl's eighteenth birthday he will pay for the honeymoon and a full estate."

Well, we're well past the elopement stage, her birthday is 10th January so we've also passed the following month, and when the girls set the wedding date they were very excited that it would mean they'd get the small home because they managed to wait the six months. They picked the 7th because it was a Saturday and we would still be in the country, not having to leave for Iran until the 9th.

Except Ivan the absolute douchnozzle is adamant that they are not fulfilling the six month rule as Pearl's birthday is on the 10th and they're getting married on the 7th. He's making his daughter and OUR daughter feel like shite because of a 72 hour difference.
So, if you need me I'll be in the Forbidden Forest blowing up old acromantula nests.

Yours,
Harry

Monday May 14th
Dear Harry and Oliver,

When I told Hermione that I needed to go have a chat with my best friend and why, she gave me tonight off. Thus, I am currently about to floo to Russia with Hazel so that we can talk to Pansy first, and then Ivan. Since Pansy has always been on our side in this wedding, I feel confident that between the three of us Slytherins, we can come up with a calm and businesslike way to overcome all of Ivan's concerns.

Or we'll just let Pansy go all Hell-Raising Shrew over his arse. Either way, things should be settled by tonight. See you when we get home.

Love forever,
Draco
Monday May 14, 2018

You're probably already on your way, and I'm not exactly sure what I'd say to you before you left anyway.

I just, is it too much to ask that every single thing not be a fucking fight? Is it too much to ask that our daughter be treated like she's worthy of respect. Is it too much to ask that our future daughter-in-law be treated as though she has a brain in her head and the ability to make decisions?

How hard is it to just love someone and respect them? Worst case scenario and Pearl is making the absolute biggest mistake of her life, what is Ivan's complete inability to listen to his daughter going to help? You think it's going to make her want to break off the engagement? Stall the wedding? Do you think if something happens in the future and Pearl feels like the marriage is over, you think she's going to go talk to her father about it?

He's too stupid to realize he's driving an enormous wedge between himself and his family. I hope his pride and his absolute denial about reality keeps him company because he's made these young women well aware that he will support them as long as he gets to control everything. I've known these women since they were infants, they were not made to be controlled.

You tell those beautiful daughters of ours that we'll build them the biggest damn palace the world has ever seen wherever they want it built.

And tell Ivan he can suck my metaphorical dick. But he can't suck my real dick because he's a piece of gobshite I don't want near my dick.

Love you,
Harry

Tuesday May 15th

My loves,

Yesterday went well. After having an emotional chat with Pansy and her reassuring us that she was still on our side, the four of us (including Pearl) were successful in persuading him that he was being unreasonable. Actually, it was a surprise last minute addition that turned the tide in our favor. It seems that Paige is her daddy's absolute pride and joy, because when the rest of us were gearing up for a battle, she floated into the room, looking every inch the Russian near royalty that she is, and pouted at him.

"Daddy, if someone was trying to come between ME and the one I loved most in the world, wouldn't you be upset?"

Well, when asked like that, he didn't have the heart to argue anymore and basically caved into our demands - er, suggestions, about being fair and not putting his daughter through so much stress on what should be the happiest day of her life.

Then, since I was in Russia, I stayed for a nice dinner, Hazel and Pearl looking over the moon to spend time together. During dinner, I received a message from Hermione saying that so long as I was in Russia, she'd quite like it if I met with their Ministry and basically stood by as an official as their delegate who has been in London working with our Ministry reported in on the progress of the Tournament.

I sent you an insta-owl explaining the delay in my return, and we even had a Magi-Skype chat before I went to bed last night. This morning, I got up much earlier than I'd've liked, but I was having a hard time sleeping by myself, and so, got up, ready, and to their Ministry practically first thing in the morning. The meeting went well. Just basically as I've already said, their delegate reporting in with me on hand to answer any questions if needed. There weren't many that the delegate herself couldn't answer.

Then, since Hermione had sent me a message this morning saying as much, I stopped by France on my way back from Russia. There was the French Delegate waiting for me and we had a nice lunch before we met with the French Ministry. Same sort of meeting, everything went well. The plans for the Tournament are coming along nicely. Hermione is quite pleased.

Then, since I was in France, I decided to stop by Unity House and see how Elena and the others were getting on. Turns out that things are ahead of schedule and that Elena was planning to send me a message soon because the place is almost up and ready to go. Basically, all I really needed to do was sign over the authority to the woman I'd hired to run the house on our behalf.

Elena is going to stay in France long enough to help out with the very first fundraiser, but then she's decided to come back home and think over what she wants to do next as she's feeling a strong pull to go to Spain, but she wants to figure out something official to do with her school before she just abandons it. Which will understandably take a bit of time to sort out.

In any case, Elena and I are currently about to head out to dinner and dancing, after which, I WILL be back home in time for bed with the two of you.

I like that you're broken, broken like me, maybe that makes me a fool,

Draco
Chapter 285

Chapter Summary

Harry doesn't understand why there are sides at all, and Draco decides to try something new (meanwhile, Oliver is shagged out ^_^)

Tuesday May 15, 2018

Mine Own,

You know, I think it's utter malarkey that there have to be sides at all. Why does Ivan only give in when the daughter he loves points something out? Why do we like him again? Hell if I know.

Oh! That reminds me, what do you get when you cross an elephant with a rhino?

Elephino!! Ha! Get it!

But seriously, we do not cross an elephant with a rhino, that elephant is all mine. Erm, ours. No one is riding him but me. And you of course Draco. Wait, nobody said nothin bout ridin no elephants. Just crossing them. Crossbreeding different species sounds like a bad plan if you ask me. Can you imagine if we actually crossed an elephant and a rhino? What would that even look like? It sounds freaky. Like something that Australia cooked up to scare the piss out of the rest of the world.

So, here's my theory. A long long time ago, many witches and wizards lived in Australia. And they thought, hey let's magically create some really effed up creatures. And they were meant to stay in the wizarding world. But someone, probably one of Hagrid's ancestors if we're being honest, decided not to watch them closely enough and all of a sudden we have an entire continent full of some sort of DIY animal insanity. What other explanation do you have for the thorny devil, which has an extra FAKE HEAD on the back of their necks?

Or or or the southern cassowary. This bloody bird is flightless and lethal and descended from dinosaurs!

And we all know how weird the platypus is, except for Perry of course who is an angel and I love him.

You know, there's really not anyone on Phineas and Ferb that I don't love. I mean even the people you're not supposed to love, I love. Dr Doofenschmirtz? He just had a really messed up childhood ya know? And he never actually accomplishes any of his evil plots. Poor misunderstood Doof.

And the sugar glider! How cute is the sugar glider. I want one! Can we get a pet sugar glider? We could name it like Soary, or Princess Floats-a-lot, or Anemoi for the gods of the winds, or Steve!!!

I decided to stay up late tonight so I would be awake when you got home Draco. Our Ollie is already sound asleep and you're not back yet. But don't worry, I fondled him in his sleep. But then technically he woke up and we shagged and then he went back to sleep. So I don't know if he was really all that soundedly asleep. He might have been faking it so that I would fondle him and we could shag.
He's so sneaky.

I thought to myself, I miss Lucius. Which is weird because of all those times he tried to kill me. Remember that Luci? When you used to try and kill me? And then there was the time I gave you a stinky sock. Bahahahahaha! You should have seen the look on your face Lulu. You were all "grrr" and I was all "ha-ha" and you were all "someday you will shag my son and carry my grandchildren"

No, wait, that didn't happen. Ha! Can you imagine if we went back in time Luscious? I tell Draco all the time I should go back in time and tell little Harry in the cupboard that his life will get better and .... hold on a mo

Okay, your Daddy says he didn't know I acutualal ... akshull .... actyuo all ... really lived in a cupboard. Didn't he read my books? Oh, see your spoiled prat Daddy apaprenlty thought I was being overly descriptive and I just meant my room was small.

ANYWAY, as I was saying before you so rudely interrupted Luly, we should go back in time and tell 1992 Lucius Malfoy that some day his only son was going to get knocked up by the ruddy savior. Do you think you'd have a heart attack?

Your Daddy's face is so read.

Anywho, you should come home before I start bragging about our sexual exploits to Luci again. I know he's depraved and all that but every time I talk about how well you shag me into exhaustion he gets all pink in the ears. Or that's the wine. Maybe both.

Mmm Wine.

Come home!

Harry James Malfoy-Wood

P.S. Wood is a fun last name to have, it sounds like a euphemism for an erection.

P.P.S. I'd like YOUR erection ... in my arse

P.P.P.S. Your Daddy wants me to stop talking about your erection going into my arse

Wednesday May 16th
My beloved husbands,

So, since I had not much to do today before heading into the Ministry to report to Hermione how my meetings went, I decided to do something different. But before I get into that, let me back up a moment.

Oliver, when I got home last night, you were most definitely asleep, looking a cross between shagged out and just so freaking adorable now that your very fit stomach has the tiniest little hint of a bump. I know we haven't exactly kept this news a secret, but I don't think we've shouted about it either. So, maybe we should plan a full family dinner for this weekend? Call Cassie and Parker to come back to the Manor - since she's been recruited/hired by Viona and lives in a flat in London to be closer to her as her personal assistant, and Parker is doing well as a live in Manager for Orion's Hog's Head.
I'll set Pippa to the task and she will see to it that all the other kids who don't currently live here get here for dinner, if they can, we might need to conference River and Orion in via Magi-Skype. Then we can formally make the announcement - provided you are ready. No rush if you want to wait a bit longer. I tended to wait until it was nearly blatantly obvious before announcing it simply because I didn't want to disappoint anyone - including myself - if things went wrong. Harry always wanted to blurt the news out the moment he found out, so...

Come to think of it, everyone probably already knows and is simply taking bets on how long it'll take us to finally tell everyone, ha.

Harry, I love that I came home to find you half lying on the table, giggling with my father about something I couldn't quite comprehend. For once, my mother was not the instigator, nor was she in the room, but since you were giving my father another lesson in emailing, and he was apparently writing my mother, I'm dead certain that she knew exactly what was going on.

I watched you two silently for a bit, happy to see you getting along as well as ever, before walking over and running a hand along your spine. You turned your head to look at me, took a second to realize that it was actually me, and then pulled me into your lap to kiss and grope me in welcome.

"Draco, you're home!" You exclaimed as if I'd been away on business a LOT longer than a day. "I need you in my arse! Right now! Now! Now!"

I gave you a kiss and chuckled. "How about we relocate to our bedroom first, love. We DO have another husband that might enjoy the show."

"OOOOOOOOOOOOOOOOO...." You purred happily as you thought this suggestion over. I stood up and tossed you over my shoulder, carrying you to bed and smacking your firm arse as I went.

We then made excellent use of the enormous bed right next to Oliver until he was definitely awake and watching us. He seemed rather amused that you were obviously drunk and BEGGING for it in every way possible. All in all, it was a rather fun night that I will bet a hefty sum on that you are at least partially regretting right now, since you have to teach a class, hahahaha!

In any case, when I woke up at my usual time today, the two of you were long gone to class, and the babies - toddlers - were happily playing with each other under the supervision of Muffy, Dibly, and (surprise surprise) the elves that Muffy had hired to be THEIR own personal elves. At this point, I have given up all attempts to remember them all. It sometimes takes me a minute to remember all 21 of our kids names, remembering 21 elves on top of that is just a bit too much, innit?

But as I was saying to begin with, since I had some time before heading into the Ministry, I took Nora, Morgana, Dylan, and Gabriel with me to the Ballroom. I had decided that my morning exercise - rather than yoga - was going to be dancing. But something occurred to me when I was dancing with Elena...

I haven't ever danced AS a woman. I mean that's only to be expected as I am a man and not interested in trying to be a woman. That said, I have tried the Damsel Curse once or twice for orgasmic reasons and liked it well enough that I'm still sad that neither of you are interested in that. And no, I'm not hinting anything of any sort other than that I really would genuinely enjoy having one or both of you shag me as a woman sometime, but probably not soon.

So, with the urge to try dancing as a woman, I remained naked, cursed myself with the Damsel Curse, and then spent a good two hours just seeing how my shorter and fairly petite body moved.
How it flowed. How freaking graceful I was. I mean I've been dancing for years, so I didn't need to learn any steps, but it did take me a few minutes to work out the new center of gravity, and then, I just flowed...

It was beautiful and wonderful, and I thoroughly enjoyed watching myself in the mirror. I think I might do that at least once a week from now on. But in any case, I eventually had to change back into my actual body and get ready to go to the Ministry. I brought the four littles with me, and they had fun 'coloring' as me and Hermione chatted about that meeting and the little things that still needed to be planned out and decided on in regards to the Tournament, but the majority of it is being handled by the official planning committee, and thus, we only really have to approve the most important decisions they've made.

For now, this Tournament is rather fun. Ask me about it again closer to the date when Hermione has me working around the clock and I brew into Hurricane Draco. I probably won't love it so much at that point, ha.

There are no actual words to the love song I want to sign off with, so remind me to 'sing' it to you when I get home,
Draco
Chapter 286

Chapter Summary

Harry, Oliver, and Draco have a wonderful family dinner for a birthday and a special announcement.

Saturday May 19, 2018

My Everything,

I kind of want to crawl into bed and go to sleep already. I want to wrap up in the arms of my loves and fall asleep with tonight's perfect memories on my mind. I'd meet you both in dreamland, where I can revisit every beautiful moment of tonight in vivid detail.

I already know I plan on checking the Manor's MMM's to see if we got any beautiful pictures of the million different wonderful moments that happened tonight.

Draco, when you asked the other day if Ollie was ready to make the big announcement, and possibly announce it this weekend, the timing ended up working out perfectly. He's ten weeks tomorrow, which is closing in on the end of the first trimester. Every one of his scans has shown a happy, healthy, perfectly growing little caboose. And when we double checked the dates and availability with Pippa, she reminded us of what we already had going on this weekend.

Not that I thought you would forget today was Lissa and Cael's eighth birthdays, but you may have forgotten that the last time we all got together our little Lily thoroughly guilt tripped Ori, River, and Mahafsoun into promising they'd visit for the big day. So when we brought up the dinner with all the kids, we realized we wouldn't have to worry about magi-skyping Ori and Riv since they were going to be here to celebrate anyway.

Not only did the timing work out so we'd get all of our kids together for the big reveal, but it also meant no one really questioned it when we put the dinner-time specifics together. If we had had no specific reason to have a big family dinner, I can see most of the kids questioning why they were being summoned home for a random Saturday night dinner. And by questioning, I mean knowing exactly what was about to be announced.

Even without any sort of an announcement, it was one of those perfect evenings. I got to snuggle up with all of my grandchildren. I got all of my children in one room. I still can't get over how absolutely lucky I am that my family is made up of all these wonderful people. And this wasn't even a full circle dinner, just our immediate family; parents, children, their significant others, grandchildren, my husbands.

You know me, I could go on and on for hours, probably days, about how much I adore our family. I will save that for a future anniversary or something like that. Instead, let's talk highlights of the evening.

As always, any of the feisty foursome's birthdays are sure to be an event. Lissa wanted songs sung, and apparently this year, fireworks were on the schedule. After our delicious dinner, we decided it was time. We had gone back and forth dozens of times on how to do the announcement. Do we just blurt it out? Do some sort of performance theatre to announce? Do we let Ollie get a little nauseous and just sprint out of the room gagging so they will notice?

Side note: still a bit jealous of you Love that you've managed to escape the horror that is morning (all damn day) sickness!

We came up with a few ideas until I remembered a conversation we'd had quite a while ago. When Oliver was reading through our old email chains he came across the time we announced Draco's pregnancy with Viona wearing an adorable shirt saying "My Daddy doesn't think you're *annoying, it's just the hormones!" - and then in small print - "*he does think you're annoying” Then, when I gave Draco the news that Eris was a girl, Viona wore another shirt saying "Daddy are you ready for two princesses?"

Well, I remember how emotional you got Ollie, you mentioned that even after you adopted Cassie and Parker, you still wished for more children (wished a bit too hard there, look how many you have now!) and dreamed about telling Cassie and Parker about it by gifting them something that said "Big Sister" and "Big Brother" on it.

So, when dinner was winding down, everyone was rubbing their tummies from how full they were, we brought out some gifts. Obviously we gave Lily and Caelum a birthday gift. But then we had a gift for Cassie and Parker. We had them open them at the same time. When they opened their matching shirts that said "I'm the Big Sister/Brother" I could see a bit of confusion in both of their faces. And a bit of desperate hope in Cassie's. "Dad, you could have gotten us these shirts when you told us we were officially going to become part of this family. You could have given them to us when you guys got engaged or married" her voice hitched and she got very quiet when she finished with "Why now?"

Viona had been sitting right next to her, I guess they're not sick of each other yet despite working together, looked into the partially opened gift and crowed, "Yes! I knew it! You fools owe me so much money! I was the only one who placed their bets on a May announcement!" She cackled a little maniacally "I knew he wouldn't be an early blunter like Mumdah, nor would he wait until it was glaringly obvious to everyone the way Dad would." Then Vivi did an impressive "told you so" dance. Which was extra adorable due to her own expanding belly.

While money exchanged hands, high-fives given, and many hugs and congratulations were given to all three of us, Cassie and Parker seemed to still be sitting with their shirts in shock. I went over to the two of them while Ollie was distracted with the littlest ones trying to scream through his stomach to say hi to their baby. I whispered to the two of them, although with the rest of our group making so much noise it was probably unnecessary. "He loves all of our kids. You two know more than anyone else how much love he has to give. But he loved you first. You have such a special place in his heart, why don't you go tell him what you're feeling."

That could have backfired, they could have gone over to Ollie and completely crushed him by saying they were jealous or angry or whatever negative emotion could have happened. I know them better than that, they both immediately darted over to our Ollie. Clinging to him, crying, and telling him how excited they were for him. How excited they were to become big siblings. Parker had already thrown his "Big Brother" shirt on over what he'd been wearing.

Those two didn't leave Ollie's side for the rest of the night. When we went outside to let the little ones burn off some energy, they were glued right to his side. When we all went to the game room to watch some cartoons while we waited for it to get dark enough for fireworks they took up the spots directly to his right and left to snuggle into. And when we all went out into the onsen to watch Lily and Caelum's birthday fireworks, I could see both Cassie and Parker's eyes completely unable to pull away from the teeny little curve of their dad's abdomen.

I'm a bit surprised to be honest that they even went back to their own homes at the end of the night. I thought we were going to have to expand the bed while they climbed in with us at the end of the night.

Basically, with the exception of the ludicrous amount of money that exchanged hands from our children who may have gambling problems, tonight was perfect! And I'm thrilled we've finally announced it because it was getting harder and harder every day to not tell everyone who was willing to listen ... or unable to leave ... all about how much I love my husbands and our upcoming child.

Practically Floating,
Harry

Sunday May 20th
The fires of my heart,

Today was rather interesting. I got up early - around 10 - in order to have time to do my full routine well before we left for tonight's Quidditch Match, but actually, what I needed the extra time for was to do the things I promised to do BEFORE I did my entire routine and got ready for the Quidditch Match.

Just as I was slipping out of bed, Jules let himself into our suite. "Hey Draco, do you think I could come with you to that Hogwarts place?"

"I suppose," I murmured. "After all, Shtara has been there once or twice."

"Bien!" Jules cried in elation. "John has talked about the place enough that I'm really sad I've never seen it."

"Well, let me just find some clothes to pull on and then..." I trailed off as Muffy popped up with the perfect track suit for my morning activities. "Thank you Muffy, you're the best House Elf ever." I pulled on the black with blue contrast outfit and cast a couple of charms to clean and style my hair.

A minute or so later, with a bacon sandwich in one hand, I tossed some floo into the fireplace and directed Jules into it. Shortly after emerging, we ran across Zwei in the corridor, rushing out toward the Quidditch Pitch because I'd told him last night that I planned to arrive early today.

"Morning Zwei, where's your brother?"

"Siri's in the library flirting with some girl," Zwei informed me.

"Oh really?" I asked with interest. "Well, I suppose I'll just have to go find him then."

"See you on the pitch in a few, dad. I'm going to be practicing my Krav Maga with Lila today, since she's so timid that she can't bring herself to practice at all, but really wants to learn in case she ever needs to defend herself. She's also no good at defensive magic, but -"

"Zwei? The sooner I go find your brother, the sooner we'll get started," I pointed out.

"Right!" Zwei agreed and ran off.
I led Jules to the library, watching in amusement as his eyes got so wide and he tried to stare at EVERYTHING at the same time. This really just made his eyes dart around in awe, hahaha.

In the library, sure enough, I found Siri sitting in a group of students studying, which is so rare that I hastily took out my magitablet and snapped a picture before anyone noticed that I was even in the room. Also, I managed to get a good picture of him looking at the girl next to him as if she was the only person in the room and was telling him the secrets of the universe. And don't worry, I got a picture of the girl too so that you can see her for yourself. As she is a student, you might even recognize her, although I don't recall seeing her before.

In any case, I eventually put the magitablet away and stepped closer to the table of studiers. Jules finally managed to stop looking around the library in wonder - which, even for a person not interested in books in the slightest, is a rather amazing sight - and followed me closely, as if mildly afraid that if he lost me in this endless place, he'd never find me again.

"Ready son?" I asked Siri, bringing to his attention the fact that I was there.

"Oh, hi dad! Right!" Siri replied, his excitement level increasing rapidly. "I'm hoping to be nice and limber for today's game!"

"I'm surprised the manager didn't insist that you spend the night with the team last night," I murmured in amusement, but before either of us could say anything else, we were basically interrupted.

"JULES!!" Romeo cried out happily, having apparently finished the problem he was working on for his homework and looking up to see me and his boyfriend standing there. "You're here!" He jumped up so quickly that his chair fell over, earning a scowling glare from Madam Pince. He raced to hug and kiss Jules so excitedly that he practically knocked me over.

Those two did not care in the slightest that they were in front of a group of spectators; they got rather hot and heavy in about a second flat. I had to grab Romeo by the back of his collar and shake him a bit.

"Oi! Save that for later on, when you're alone," I advised because I really didn't need for the students to think that I was just going to let them shag in public - which could cause all sorts of problems.

"Oooooo! Too bad he's gay," I heard one girl murmur to another as they avidly eyed Jules up and down.

"Right? Just look at that gorgeous blue hair, and those eyes..."

"And that arse!" The first whispered, but I was standing right next to her and so could hear her every word.

I chuckled. "How many of you are planning to go running around the Quidditch Pitch with us?"

A couple nodded and started packing up their things. The rest shook their heads and continued to work. One boy in particular looked rather angry. He stood up and glared at Romeo.

"You have been babbling about your boyfriend for days now! It's distracted you from everything and made your grades suffer! And now he's here to distract you in person! You SHOULD tell him to bugger off and let you finish your studying!"

Ah... I remember this boy now. He's... erm... Crispin, I think. The boy that Romeo kissed rather "Crispin, it's fine. I'm pretty much done anyway," Romeo informed him with a shrug, still wrapped around Jules as much as possible. Jules COULD have been standoffish and trying to play it cool in front of so many strangers, but he was more than content to hold Romeo in return and stroke a hand up and down his back.

"I'm telling you! He's GOING to make you fail all your finals!!!" Crispin cried out angrily, and since he is a Ravenclaw, I really didn't think much of why he was so concerned, but Romeo did. He frowned and bit his lip.

"Why are you so upset?"

"Because he's not the right person for you!" Crispin roared. "If he was, he'd let you study and get good grades!"

"Yeah?!" Romeo countered defiantly. "Well, YOU dumped me because you're not gay, so YOU don't have a say in what I do!"

"I thought you said I'm your BEST FRIEND! I think that gives me the right to be concerned!"

Normally, I probably would have sat back and watched this play out, but I really didn't have all day for this drama, so I decided to intervene. "Right! BOYS!" Both stopped shouting abruptly and looked at me. "You are BOTH going to be out on the Quidditch Pitch running your arses off with the rest of us, NOW, because I don't have all day. And if either of you refuses or tries to give it less then your best effort, I'm going to ask my brother to assign you both some extra potions homework, or maybe I'll ask my husbands to ALSO assign you some extra homework!"

"YESSIR!!" They both blurted out before I could come up with something worse, such as asking Minerva to give them detention with Hagrid in the Forbidden Forest.

"Good, now let's all go before I get cranky from the fact that I'm up early and have a LONG day ahead of me."

"Yes sir!" Everyone that was coming with me (minus Siri) exclaimed and followed me as I jogged them all out of the Castle.

What followed was a surprisingly calm run around the pitch followed by Krav Maga practice. After that, I had plenty of time to go to our Quarters and do my morning routine before we (our entire family since they all happened to still be in the Manor from yesterday) had to leave for Siri's third official Quidditch Match.

OH it was a close one! Both teams were FEROCIOUS as they fought over the Quaffle. They scored points so quickly that it almost made my head spin. Our son was a fully capable warrior as he defended his teammates from the Bludgers with his Beater partner. I really felt like I was hanging onto the edge of my seat the entire time.

AND THEN THE TORNADOES CAUGHT THE SNITCH!!! HOORAY FOR THE TORNADOES!!! OUR SON IS CLEARLY THE BEST PLAYER ON THE TEAM AND THE REASON THEY ARE DOING SO WELL THIS YEAR!

Sorry, got a bit carried away there for a moment. In any case, I'm a bit tired now, so I'm going to wrap up this email and come to bed to see if either or both of you are ready to put us all to sleep in the best way possible.
Walk me home in the dead of night,
Draco
Chapter 287

Chapter Summary

Harry and Oliver go out on a date, and Draco has a poker night with the blokes ^_^

Saturday May 26, 2018

My Draco,

I just had the most beautiful night with our husband. With my husband Oliver. I'm sorry you weren't invited, but when I discussed this with you last week you seemed to understand. And since you had a fun night of drinking and gambling set up with Blaise, Greg, Theo, and Ron, and are still out running amok with them, I assume you are still fine with it.

Unless of course you're with them complaining about being snubbed by your husbands but I hope that isn't the case. Especially since our conversation earlier this week ended with you ruffling my hair and calling me an adorable little mutt, I'm thinking you found the whole thing cute.

See, for the first time in nineteen years I wasn't spending the month of May thinking of fun anniversary activities to do with you. I wasn't planning a trip. I wasn't trying to track down a time turner so past me could shag future you. I wasn't trying to figure out if I should do an emotional gift, or something shiny, or just planning to tie you up and shag you until the only thing you could remember is my name. I was coming up on the anniversary of the day I married you and I was at a loss as to what to do.

I didn't want to do a big anniversary celebration. For the same reason those last months before our recent wedding I called you my fiancé instead of my husband. I wanted a fresh start, a new marriage, a triad ... not a couple with their new lover. To me, that means our wedding anniversary IS the 24th of March. However, for almost nineteen years now, the 29th of May has been an important day. A day to celebrate the love that you Draco Malfoy and I Harry Malfoy-Wood have for each other. And while I won't ever consider it our wedding anniversary again, it is still a special day to our individual relationship.

That's when it came to me, we have been very good about prioritizing our triad but often our individual relationships fall by the wayside. Similar to sometimes I am so involved in OUR CHILDREN, that I forget each individual child needs a relationship with me that has nothing to do with their siblings. So, it's not going to be a big international trip or some elaborate vow renewal, but I plan on taking my husband Draco out for a very special night on the 29th of May, just like I do every year. My relationship with you is so important to me. I never want to lose US just because our marriage is made up of three people.

That being said, how could I possibly have a special day with just my Draco if I didn't also have some special day where I can celebrate my love for Oliver? So I wracked my brain trying to come up with a day I could celebrate with Ollie. I could pick the day he moved in but we weren't in love then. Or I could choose the first time we did any sort of sexy shenanigans, but again I didn't know I was in love with him at that point either. And I definitely couldn't choose the day we proposed or got married because that was about all three of us. Finally I realized, what was the moment I KNEW without a doubt that this was a relationship that was headed somewhere? When did I know this was more than a crush? When did I realize my life was going to be forever changed by my Oliver?

The day he kissed me. He found me out in the Manor fields, knee deep in mud from wading through marshes, holding two squirming babies and wrangling four feisty little kids. Instead of running from the chaos, running to someone whose life is less dramatic, he walked up and kissed me. And unlike any time anyone else has come anywhere near my mouth, I didn't get upset. It felt right. Like I was kissing someone whose kisses I'd been waiting for far too long.

And May 26th is the anniversary of the first time my husband Ollie ever kissed me.

I'm sure the two of you will come up with some anniversary of your own. Maybe something like June 24th, the day you admitted you were close to falling in love with him. Whatever you choose, it's not something I need to pick, it's your business. But just know that whatever the two of you come up with, I will love and support you through whatever way you choose to celebrate together. I will have a lovely evening thinking about all the fun things you're doing together to grow your individual relationship.

We had a lovely evening. It was simple and sweet. Wonderful in its simplicity. We went to separate rooms to get ready. I knocked on our doors all dressed up with flowers to pick him up. He did that adorable blushing to the tips of his ears thing. I was wearing dark denims, a cozy cream sweater, and my dragon-hide (ethically sourced from sheddings of course) boots and matching motorcycle jacket. Our Oliver was devastatingly handsome in a dark pair of brown dress pants and a navy button-down. I helped him into his chocolate brown bomber jacket and the two of us headed off to the city for dinner and a movie.

We ate yummy food at Zaire's restaurant. A cozy corner table with candles and wine ... don't worry just the one glass for Ollie. We played footsie under the table and ate one handed so we could hold hands the entire time. We caught up on things we may have missed over the last couple of busy weeks. Daydreamed a bit about how gorgeous we figured this little caboose was going to be. And after sharing a decadent mousse we headed over to a nearby cinema. We saw Solo ... which was amazing! I know you're not a huge Star Wars fan like I am which is why I figured you'd be okay missing out and we can all snuggle and watch it again when it comes out on DVD. If you're massively disappointed I could probably be convinced to go see it again.

What I won't do for love!

While we watched the movie, we cuddled and snogged a bit. Tangled our fingers together over some buttery popcorn. And then we (I) drove us back home to the Manor.

While I write this Ollie is relaxing in a tub full of sweet smelling bubbles. I am about to climb in with him. I plan on washing every inch of his body, proceeding to get his entire body filthy, and then clean it all up again. If you're in the mood and not having way too much fun with your boys, I could use a hand thoroughly cleaning and then ravaging our husband.

See you soon,
All my Love,
Harry

Saturday May 26th
My dear husbands,
Around 7PM
I am having a blast! I had no idea how much I needed this. Poker night - or as I like to call it, Unity Fundraising night. I'm not certain why my friends still agree to play against me, but they do. Perhaps they enjoy the challenge and don't mind contributing to such a worthy cause.

In any case, we're sitting here, eating organic tortilla chips, a variety of dips, and drinking different things depending on who is in charge of the round. I started it off with Tequila Sunrises, Ron chose IPA, Neville went for a nice lager, Blaise opted for Long Island Iced Teas, and... I'm getting a bit fuzzy on what came after that. Oh! Theo wanted Sex on the Beach, and Greg asked for Scooby Snacks!

More importantly, I've won a lot of money already. Greg was unsurprisingly the first to lose all his money, and now plays for promissory notes - which I'm letting the others win if they can, or buy from me if they want to. It's things like doing chores and remodeling and things like that.

Ron, despite being married to a wealthy Slytherin, a Russian Mob Heiress, and the Minister for Magic, is somehow TERRIBLE at poker! He lost all his money to me and tapped out to watch the rest of us and make comments. AKA heckling.

Neville and Charlie make nice comfortable incomes, but don't necessarily have the financial cushion to waste a large amount of money on charity donations, so, they each picked an amount they could live with and stopped playing once they reached it. They're currently sitting next to Ron, cuddling with each other, and just enjoying a night free from their kids.

Dean and Seamus also don't have an enormous amount of money to play with, but they at least are making me work for my wins. Or they were. They're nearly out and should be leaving the game to watch with the rest of them any time now.

Which'll leave just me, Blaise, Theo, and Derek. The four of us are still partners in a VERY lucrative business, and our budgets for what we can just fritter away in a poker game are much bigger than the rest. This should get rather cutthroat, buwahahahahahaha!

I'll write more after I've won.

About 9PM
Ah, so the poker game is over. I finally managed to squeeze every last Galleon rom my foes - I mean friends. I've also drank enough that I'm nice and fuzzy, but as far as I can tell as I reread and edit this email, I'm not so drunk to be incoherent yet. This is a good stage to be in. I plan to enjoy this stage to the fullest.

Starting with fire dancing! Most of us can dance pretty well. Well enough that I should be able to teach them a few pressive moves. Of those that can't really dance, they'll still be able to use fire staves or poi to add some visual effex to the performance. Who are we performing for? Ourselves of course!

Don't worry, I'll make sure we're all nice and naked so that nothing can catch on fire. Also, keep in mind that alcohol and exercise equals extra sweaty, thus, extra fire proof.

About 10PM
WOO-OOO!!! We got trired of the hot ballroom in Blaise's ol place - that he still owns and uses for tings like this. So, we came outside to enjoy the cool night air. Neville and Charlie parently got cold at some point, because they made short work of a few nearby trees, and now we have an absolutely GORGEOUS bonfre to dance round.
"ALL MY FRENS ARE HE-THENS TAKE IT SLOW, WAIT FOR THEM TO AX YOU WHO YA KNOW!"

Gotta go, time to sing and jump! Charlie also wanna firewalk, and isss benn while since I las firewalk.

Latr!

About 11PM
OOOOOOOO! Charlie braut a baby dragon! I ha Muffy apprate Amala here - vo-tech too! Theo has a cutey wooty wolfie! Blaise has snake. BIG snake! We all dancin with our aminals. Ron is treating wo-tech like is long losted bruthr. All in all, great time!

Oh, I just realzded tha wir outta drinks. gimme minute to make sum green rushins.

Mmm...

About 12PM
Me n blaz r rguin. blaz tinks tht HIS name better!!! Wel oh hell nope natta, nvr! DRACO THE BRILLIANT is clry bettr! So, wir makin bet! Wir all gunna rite r names inda snow. erm… sand? Yeah, san! whoevr us can ite his name betta is de winnr an has de bes nAm. It'll be me!!!

If snot me, den I'mma hafta name Ollie's baby babbykins - him or her - de middle name ov duh winnr.
Iss gunna be me. hang on. smy turn.

GAH MOTHERFUKKINDAMMITTT!!!!!!! Isss blz! Blz winned the bet! Now I'mma hafta name de middl name of supr preshus dorbble babbykins BLZ!!!

SNOT MY FALT! Blz has a hose llk hoarse! No! elfunt! His hose is so mch biggr dan my hose! I hadta go so badly an I did rate job spellun my name (attaches picture of impressively well written name: Draco the brilliant), bu blz wro blz's bettr tan Draco (attaches picture to prove that Blaise wrote very legibly: Blaise is better than Draco) an evreebodee GREED wit im!!!

sigh...

I bost le let...

Oh? Teo wanna huggin me. Teo warm... Teo maks me sleepee and wanna snuggl huzbendz. WATE!!! Teo wanna kiss g'nite! NONONONONE!!! No kissin for tree more muns! I...

Weir... My fAc covrd. Whole bdy covrd. Feel dizee...

HOM sun.

Rinky dinky dooo!!!
Draco the Brilliant
Harry is exasperated and Draco is passed out and sleeping it off.

Oh for Fuck's sake Draco!

Last night Ollie and I had a lovely night of love-making. Sometimes we shag, sometimes we fuck, I often get buggered, but last night was absolutely making love. We worshiped each others' bodies in the tub. We dried each other with fluffy towels. We crashed into bed, limbs intertwined and slick skin sliding against more slick skin. We made love staring into each others' eyes, connected to my beloved.

We were hoping you'd eventually come join us, but you were still out with your friends when we were finally too tired to stay up and wait for you. Don't worry, we were missing you but also glad you were taking some much needed time to let loose and have fun without any of your usual responsibilities. And reading your email from last night, it sounds like you had an absolute blast! I'm so glad.

Minus the fire of course. We've talked about this Draco Lucius!

Anyway, imagine my surprise when I woke up to an insane looking black mesh covered, tiny little padlock filled .... creature in our bed. Oh wait, not a creature, it was my husband. My beautiful husband Draco, black mesh muzzle and a full body suit covering your nudity. The body suit has probably a million tiny locks all over it. No keys. The locks aren't responding to any Alohamora's or Finite's. And you partied so hard last night that I literally cannot wake you through normal or magical means.

Wake up you nutter so we can figure out how to make you look less like a swamp creature and give Ollie and I access to your pretty mouth for kisses!

Exasperatedly,

Harry

Sunday May 27th
My patient men,

That was weird, I must say. I honestly had NO IDEA why I was muzzled and covered in locks when I woke up this morning, until I reread my email and most of it came back to me. I'm pretty sure that bit at the end there was accidental magic ensuring that I couldn't accept the friendly goodbye hugs and kisses my friends were offering. I must have been drunk enough that I didn't trust myself.

Thankfully, the solution was simple enough, I simply had to vanish the whole lot. Since it was made up of my magic, only I could do it, and good thing I could, because THAT would have been an awkward outfit to wear for any amount of time!
That said, I feel it would make a pretty good Halloween costume...

In any case, now that I am awake and still have an entire day (or at least what's left of it) to relax in, I am not going anywhere for any reason short of a dire emergency. I'm going to stay right here and relax. I'm going to take a long bubble bath, do my morning routine, and -

GODDAMNIT!!! I just remembered! I PROMISED the boys that I'd Krav Maga with them and half the school for a bit today! Sigh... Looks like my relaxation will have to wait. But the good news is that by the time I'm done exercising, I should be in an excellent mood! I might even be amorous. In the tub. Naked. Waiting...

See you then!

An endless aching need,
Draco
Chapter 289

Sunday May 27, 2018

Come and play with us Draco,

Come and play with us, forever ... and ever ... and ever.

Or at least come play with us this evening! And by play I mean come eat an obnoxious amount of treats while we snuggle with the kids and watch a movie to close out the weekend. We're going to watch The Greatest Showman. Come on, hurry up, you know you want to watch Hugh Jackman sing and dance with Michelle Williams! And Zac Efron and Zendaya!

I had a bit of a problem when I heard about the movie initially, you know how I feel about circuses as a rule. I hate the inhumane treatment of the animals ... elephants in particular! And the humans that worked the circus were treated so poorly. The real P.T. Barnum exploited pretty much anyone he could for his own gain. But, it's not like seeing the movie is going to line the dead creep's pockets. It's just going to make me want to DANCE!! Terribly I'm sure, but you've never seemed to mind my lack of talent as long as we were in each others' arms.

While you were spending the day Krav-ing Magas with the entire student body, and Ollie was spending most of the day with some last minute Quidditch coaching to prepare for the upcoming Cup Game, I decided to catch up with some of my favorite tiny people. I found the feisty foursome down at the edges of the forest. I can't believe how old they're getting. Lissa, Cael, and Seph are eight already! And Trey will be seven in September. I know that's still a ways away but it's going to be here before you know it. Today they're six and eight but I am going to blink and they're going to be holding seventh and eighth birthday parties for their own children. And then for their grandchildren. And before you know it they're old and we're dead and life is moving too fast!!

Wow, I may have let that get away from me. Maybe I should just appreciate them being this age while they still are?

Trey took us on an extensive trek through the forest, introducing me to pretty much every animal we saw. I wouldn't be surprised if he ends up being a Magizoologist. Maybe a veterinarian, magical, muggle or both. Maybe he'll follow his Uncle Charlie to a dragon sanctuary. He just gives his whole heart to every animal he meets. Eventually it started raining a little bit and we headed inside. I'm a little grateful for the rain, not sure how many more animals I was going to be introduced to. Possibly the entire forest full.

Cael seems to be almost as obsessed as Atreyu, but at least he tries to limit his obsession to the horse-like variety. He loves the thestrals, obviously he adores his horse Fondue, and he has a soft spot for the unicorns, but he's not trying to name every single squirrel or chipmunk that crosses his paths. If Atreyu is going to end up being a vet or a magizoologist so he can take care of all animals, Caelum is going to end up running and probably expanding our stables.

Anyway, on our walk back into the castle, Lissa was talking my ear off about her upcoming showcase. She's only been skating for four months now and the showcase is in a month's time. I think she's secretly nervous but covering it up with some intense Malfoy bravado. If I didn't know her sweet little self as well as I do, I might have even believed her cocky attitude. But she did that lip-biting tell she has so I know she's actually nervous. I wouldn't be surprised if we didn't see much of her over the next month. I'm not sure if you knew but SOMEONE who's pretty little face matches her Grammy Cissa's was somehow able to convince a certain Grampy Lulu that she NEEDED her own indoor ice rink at the Manor.

Guess what Malfoy Manor officially has within its walls? Yeah, an indoor ice rink.

Right as Seph was launching into a tirade about not having her own rock climbing wall at the Manor (which I'm sure will be rectified pretty soon, I have met the aforementioned Grampy Lulu) we entered our rooms. I herded them into the kitchens, hoping to make some sweets together, but found Zaire, Jaz, and Ness already occupying the space. We were in luck, since they were actually trying out some new recipes that Z was planning on trying out at the restaurant if the went over at home well enough.

As the eight of us were fully entrenched in the kitchens, covered in flour, dirty mixing bowls from one end of the kitchen to the other, Minnie let herself in to bring Nora back after their weekly tea date. Nora immediately launched herself into the fray, stirring anything Seph commanded her to and taking little tastes every time she thought I wasn't looking. Minnie herself stayed for the entertainment but refused to actually help out. Something about WAY too many cooks already occupying the kitchens.

I'm pretty sure that sneaky headmistress took quite a few photos of the circus our kitchens resembled.

And just as we were pulling that first batch of biscuits out of the oven, your brother Sebastian and Sirius came in with a small army of babies (their combined three and our three). While the older kids were being entertained they were having quite the Daddy/Uncle/Baby party. They refused to admit it, but I think they were doing Daddy and Me Yoga, I'm not sure how they were planning on denying it since they didn't shrink their yoga mats until they'd already come into our rooms.

Would you have ever thought Sirius Black and Severus Snape's son would ever become close? I can't believe those two bloodlines tolerate each other let alone become close enough to take six babies out on a regular yoga date. They also brought Teddy since with only two arms apiece they may have had a hard time wrangling six babies at the same time. Two babies per adult isn't a bad ratio.

Oh, I made an appointment with Rowe for tomorrow evening. Sirius mentioned he saw Gabe's eyes go unfocused for just a moment at a time, but on three separate occasions. It may be time to reassess his potions regimen, or this could be fairly normal since he seems to be going through a growth spurt if his eating has been any indication!

Anyway, after we cleaned up after the baking extravaganza, I made dinner while the kids tried to run off their sugar high. We ate a lovely meal together, I was just missing the two of you since you were STILL doing your Sunday activities. And now they're all being given baths, getting into jammies, and getting ready for an evening movie date. Won't you hurry up and join us?

I got a message from Vivi a few minutes ago saying she was going to join us for movie night in case you needed extra incentive! I DO call dibs on all snuggles with the pregnant Princess in case baby kicks. Grandpa Harry plans on claiming this one pre-emptively!

Yours,
Harry

Sunday May 27th
My cohorts through thick and thin,
Well... So, I was taking advantage of the fact that I had nothing else to do today - or anytime soon, really - by putting all interested students through a basic self defense class. This was similar to but different from Krav Maga in that I was teaching quick and easy maneuvers to take an attacker down if necessary. That said, a lot of the moves were things I'd already introduced during Krav Maga sparring.

Honestly, if they want to actually learn Krav Maga, I might need to call in Oleg, because I'm only giving it about 10 percent of my attention at best. I mean when I'm here, I'm giving it my all, but that the times I come out here and the class structure themselves are spotty and really rather low on my list of priorities.

Anyway, that's why I opted for a more general - and intensive - class on self defense today. I wanted to leave them with a fairly coherent plan of attack if they ever needed to defend themselves. And because it was intensive, I took them through all eight of the major pain spots. Don't worry! I did not hit any of the students to demonstrate those spots!

At one point during the practice portion, when I was standing back and watching them all to see how well they were learning, I had Zwei next to me. He was watching Siri and muttering almost murderously under his breath.

"Is he really that stupid? She DOESN'T like him like that! He's flirting like an idiotic peacock, all 'Oh look at me, I'm gorgeous and brilliant and you should love me,' and she's like: 'I'm sorry, who are you again?' It's pathetic!"

Ah... That mouth takes me back to my youth...

"This is exactly why I'm going to wait to have a girlfriend until I am ready to get married. Why act like a fool to gain attention from girls when he's already half a famous Quidditch player and they're going to be throwing themselves at him soon enough anyway? I don't even do anything that people know about, and just having the dads I do means that girls are constantly trying to get my attention. They're all blithering idiots! STUDY ALREADY!!! It's bloody why we're here!"

I gave him a bit of a sarcastic look. "Study??"

"Well, I mean I don't, but they should. They CLEARLY don't have anything else going for them," he mumbled, a little embarrassed by the fact that I'd pointed out a major flaw in his rant.

I was curious so... "Are you really going to wait for marriage?"

"Well yeah. I know I'll probably feel differently as I get older, but at the moment, I feel a lot like Uncle Bastian. I completely understand him. Why need people? Why BE with people when they're inevitably idiots who can't understand the simplest things. I feel like everywhere I go, I've got at least two brawny idiots following me wanting me to give them orders because they can't think for themselves."

I couldn't help but laugh. "They would happen to be called Crabbe and Goyle, would they?"

"Like Uncle Greg??" Zwei asked in bafflement.

I clapped him on the shoulder. "Don't worry so much about them. I'm certain eventually you'll consider them friends."

Out on the field, the girl that the girl Siri likes was partnered with managed an impressive maneuver that threw the girl Siri likes into him, knocking him on his arse with her groaning in pain on top of him, and he looked like he'd be perfectly content to lay there all day just looking up at her face. Poor lad...

Literally NOT noticing him, she sat up (on him) and inspected herself for injuries. finding none, she got up and walked away without so much as an: "Oh, sorry, didn't mean to land on you." Or even a: "Erm... sorry, didn't realize you were under me."

"SEE?!” Zwei roared, flinging his hands out emphatically in their direction.

Just then, Parker jogged over to me, looking... concerned about something. I was surprised because he's already graduated, but since his dad is here, it's not totally out of the ordinary for him to come visit. I tilted my head as he got close enough to have a private conversation.

"Hi Draco, erm... Do you know where my dad is? I looked in your Quarters and his, his office, and the teacher's lounge. I figured that if he wasn't in any of those places, he'd be out here on the Quidditch Pitch, but he's not." At that, he looked all around again as if thinking that Oliver was just hiding in the crowd of students.

"Actually, yes, I do know exactly where he is," I said, and then literally pointed him out. "He's currently about 200 feet above us, working with the more advanced Quidditch players on their broom safety at great heights."

"Oh..." Parker murmured in disappointment. "I don't suppose that you can call him down, can you?"

"Well..." I was going to offer to cast a Patronus, but Parker cut me off.

"I mean I want to talk to him really badly, but I am not sure what he can even do to help!"

I frowned in concern, gesturing for Zwei to go help a couple of girls who had somehow managed to tangle themselves up to the point where they almost looked splinched together.

"Is something wrong? Are you in trouble?"

He heaved a great groaning sigh. "Sort of..." He looked up to the sky again, biting his lip and looking ready to try jumping up to get Oliver if possible.

"I can cast -"

"I got a girl pregnant!" He shouted in a whisper.

I felt my mouth hang open in shock for a moment before casting a circle of silence around us. "Alright. So... Are you together? You're not exactly a teenager anymore, so this can't be the worst thing in the world," I pointed out, trying to be supportive.

"Well, no, I mean if it was just an accident and she was being decent about it, I probably wouldn't be so stressed out," Parker admitted. "But she's just a one off from MONTHS ago, that I was too drunk to remember the bloody protection spells, and now that she's figured out that I'M the father, she's served me with papers demanding that I NOT ONLY give up all rights to custody, BUT ALSO wants me to pay her an enormous amount of child support because I'm 'the wealthy owner of an insanely popular pub.' I don't actually own the pub, NOR am I all that wealthy!!! What the hell am I supposed to do?!!?"

"First of all, do you have those papers?" I asked, holding out my hand.

He nodded and fished them out of his back pocket so he could give them to me.
"I can guarantee you that no matter what these papers say, they're nothing to worry about. My legal team will turn this around on her so fast that she'll get whiplash. Second of all, I advise you to think long and hard about what you want, because if you want full custody, we can probably make that happen."

"BUT! SHE SAID THAT I'D NEVER GET CUSTODY BECAUSE I DRINK A LOT AND OWN A BAR AND WOULD MAKE A LOUSY FATHER!!" Parker roared, still frantic and frazzled from the encounter.

"She's wrong," I stated firmly. "And these papers actually prove it. Any member of the Wizengamot is going to take one look at them, see that this is clearly an attempt at blackmail or extortion, and rule that the best interests of the child lay with you. Unless you don't actually want custody. In which case, we can STILL do better for that child than this. Now please don't interrupt me..."

I cast my Patronus and waited a moment for the ephemeral dragon to stop flying around and look at me. "Tell Oliver: Hey love, Parker is here and would quite like to talk to you at your earliest convenience. Such as now, if you could call off practice early. That'd be appreciated. Thanks!"

The dragon flew off to deliver his message, and to our relief, Oliver came flying down in about a minute, even as the students simply came to a more reasonable height and continued on without him.

"Hi Parker, what's going on?"

I gave Oliver a kiss, smiled at Parker, and said: "As I said, I'll have this taken care of, so don't give it another thought. Go on and have a nice long chat with your dad. Oliver, love, I'm going to head off to meet with my lawyers for a bit, but don't worry, I should be back soon."

This made Oliver frown as he looked at the papers I'd indicated a couple of times - first by waving them in front of Parker when saying that I'd take care of them, and then again when I held them up to explain where I was going. "Is something wrong?"

"Parker should be the one to tell you, just know I'm on it and that there's nothing to worry about aside from, well... you'll see..." With that, I gave him another kiss and returned to MY class... sort of... and dismissed them for the day.

I did exactly as I said and called my lawyers to insist that they meet with me on a nice sunny Sunday afternoon, and so, am currently writing this as they go over the papers with a fine tooth comb. As I said, nothing to worry about. Once they've finished and we discuss things, I'll be home. I'm certain it won't take more than an hour at this point.

Love you both MUCH farther than I can throw you,
Draco
Chapter 290

Chapter Summary

Harry figures it out! Draco and Oliver have a nice chat.

Monday May 28, 2018

Holy Bloody Buggering Shite!

I should probably start this email with a little explanation and apology. I didn't come home last night. I mean, I'm sure you both know that. And are probably confused since I sent you an email saying "hey, family fun night, come play with me!" and then by the time either of you came home I wasn't actually there. To begin with; I am safe, I am fine, nothing is wrong.

Well, lots of things are wrong. But nothing is actually WRONG wrong. You know?

Well, you probably don't know. Because I'm babbling. In case you were wondering, spending the day wandering the woods with your children, then baking and eating way too many sweets, then spending the entire night encased in a dark library and instead of sleeping come morning you go to the school where you teach .... plus multiple pepper-ups and probably half a dozen pots of coffee is a recipe for hysterically babbling Harry.

Oooh, we should tell Ori ... or Parker? No, probably tell Orion AND Parker that they should do a whole line of drinks named after their family members. Like the Babbling Harry which might be combined with a mild babbling charm so you accidentally spill your biggest secrets. Ooh, or the Prickly Pansy made of prickly pear which you think will be sharp because duh, it's a cactus, but is secretly sweet. They could do some cute play on Ollie's last name, the Flying Wood, and it makes you float a little and gets you super hard. Because WOOD and also, seeing Ollie makes me so hard. And definitely some sort of Draco Long Island Iced Tea which is delicious, made up of a lot of very expensive ingredients, and if you have enough you want to take all your clothes off.

I want a Flying Wood and a Long Draco Iced Tea and two cocks!!

What was I talking about? Oh shite, yeah, I was talking about my night. So basically, I sent you both my email, then I snuggled up with the kids to watch the movie. Which was amazing by the way, I am going to FORCE Shtara to learn "This is Me" and sing it to me every single day of the rest of my life. That song is gorgeous but I can't even imagine how insanely beautiful coming from the lungs of the best singer who's ever lived! Sorry Draco, I do absolutely love and adore every time you sing to me, but even you have to admit that our girl is something special. How did we get lucky enough to find her? I can't believe the perfect way fate led us to her exactly when she was ready to join our family.

Focus Harry! Maybe there's something else I can take. I mean all those pepper-ups and cups of coffee ... Oooh, In daylights, in sunsets, in midnights, in cuuuuuups of coffee, in inches, in miles, in laughter and strife!

What I was saying was, pepper-up and coffee means that I can stay awake for thirty-six hours (so far!) but they don't seem to have helped with my focus. Do you think there's a potion I could take on top of everything I've already taken that can help me really buckle down and say what I'm trying to say? Let me know okay?

So, to sum up, outside, inside, movie, then I got your email Draco talking about Parker giving you his news, you heading off to the Lawyers while Parker gives Oliver the news. Well, I now know how easy it is to completely forget about letting people know you're alright when you decide to follow your gut. Except I still managed to call Dibly to me and told him to tell you both I was safe! Because I know how much it sucks when your husband goes missing!

Once the movie finished and the two of you weren't back I put the littles to bed and sat with my first (of MANY) cups of coffee waiting for you both. Well, I was alone with coffee and my thoughts. My mind went a bit crazy.

Without actually letting myself fall down the rabbit-hole of my rambling thought process, what I basically did was sit alone with my thoughts and try to figure out what it is about our family that we've managed to have about a gazillion unplanned pregnancies.

Could it be about how open we are about sex? That can't be right, all the studies I've ever read show that an open dialogue between parents and children makes it LESS likely that there will be unplanned pregnancies or sexually transmitted diseases. Could we have dropped the ball on teaching them the safety aspect of sexuality? Again, I KNOW that's not the case. I mean, at this point I think we'll have the sex talk with Nora and she'll be all "I'm almost four Papas! I know all this!"

I made a few jokes in my head about having adopted myself into the Weasley family has certainly had quite the fertility affect on me and mine.

And that's when it hit me. Molly's rolling pin. Hahahahahaha, just kidding, she's never whalloped me! Even when I make jokes about the fertility of the Weasley family.

But really, it did hit me. Our fertility. See, we're an all-male triad. And we've essentially NEVER been unable to conceive when we put our minds to it. Oliver's sabotage notwithstanding obviously. I mean, even with potions it's supposed to be a little more difficult to conceive as male pairs than it is for a usual male-female coupling. But with the exception of the very very first time your pregnancy didn't take Draco, we've conceived when we've tried, we've conceived without trying, you even somehow managed to carry three separate pregnancies from damsel curses at the same time. Lily and Caelum are naturally conceived twins from a male carrier. Practically unheard of! Technically that's because of the double potions but that wouldn't normally cause twins, just an increased chance of carrying at all.

And our children, biological or not, Elena has ONE night with Ethan and becomes pregnant. Eris has sex once, for the first time in her life and falls pregnant. River and Maha have no issues conceiving. Viona and Alric have no issues conceiving. Farrah may have meddled with the spells Orion cast, but that still shouldn't have been that easy for her to conceive with how powerful of a wizard Ori is. Ollie gets pregnant on the first try with a previously untested triad potion? And now Parker has a one off and his bedmate is up the duff.

This made me wonder, because some of those children were adopted, maybe the bloodlines they come from were highly fertile in the past. Where could I go to find wizarding families' history? The STILL uncleaned out Library in the ancestral Black home! So I popped off to Grimmauld. I haven't been there in years, I'm really glad we have a staff that keeps it clean or I probably would have died of dust inhalation!

That's when my theory that they were genetically predisposed to large families and great fertility did NOT pan out. Look at the bloodlines of many of these births, YOU Draco were an only child of an only child of an only child. Viona is of the Crabbe bloodline and they've not had more than an heir and a spare in five generations. YOU Oliver, no one in the last four generations has had more than three children (and that was once two generations ago). And the Potter line hasn't had two children in the last six generations!

I did end up spending a few hours really tracing our family trees. It was so interesting and some day when I'm not half high on potions and coffee I am definitely going to come back and look into this further.

But eventually I went back to the problem at hand. Well, not a problem, it's fantastic we've had so many children. Or, wait, right now it IS a problem because Parker is now stuck in a terrible situation where he's essentially being blackmailed. But I was very very curious as to WHY generations of limited fertility despite longevity of wizards' lifespan has ended with us.

Long story ... well it certainly wasn't short but I'm sure it is going to take you less time to read this email than it took me to find the information ... short. What is the ONE consistent factor in every single member of this family? Every single person in our family has either been conceived while one of us was wearing the Malfoy fertility wedding band OR has participated in some sort of naming/welcoming/ or ancestral introduction ceremony where I was one of the narrators and wore the ring. Yeah, including the intimate ceremony where Draco and I welcome Cassie and PARKER into our family officially. The week we got back from our honeymoon.

The Malfoy fertility ring that I found reference to in a very very old book in the Black Library. Where it referenced using it as a fertility ring ... not as a wedding band. Which is probably why it was in the Malfoy vault when you found it all those years ago Draco and not ... oh say ... adorning your mum's finger!

I've been wearing this ring, on my ring finger until March and then around my neck attached to my collar since the wedding, nonstop for nineteen years!

I fertility roofied our children!

I'm going to go have a few more cups of coffee to keep myself awake until the both of you get home from YOUR day's activities!

Harry 'The Fertilizer' Malfoy-Wood

Monday May 28th
My beloved Harry and Oliver,

Harry, while you were out having fun researching last night, I had a chance to talk to Oliver about what happened with the Lawyers. I was right. My lawyers found so many loopholes and nearly criminal acts in the contract that that woman wanted Parker to sign, that even if he HAD signed it, they could have gotten him out of it with no problems. In fact, the only way it would have been any sort of binding was if he had used his wand to cast a cutting hex on his finger and signed it in both his blood and magic.

And even then, our lawyers probably could have gotten him out of it. The fact that he was so freaked out that he ran to us before even considering signing it just worked in his favor. All we need from him now is to think about his options and decide what he wants.
This will probably come as no surprise to you, but Oliver is 'secretly' rooting for Parker to file for sole custody. He actually told me this tidbit that he just found out Friday and just hadn't had a chance to talk with us about it yet: Remember that poor girl that is carrying Oliver's ex's parents' new heir?

Well, the girl conceived sometime in January and is due in October. She's currently staying in Unity House, and that means that several of our kids have met with her and talked to her. Viona alone visits Unity far more often than I realized, and because Cassie is now her assistant and goes with her, Cassie has had a lot of time to get to know the girl. It seems that Cassie has decided to adopt the baby that is more or less her deceased father's sibling.

It seems that she's planning an official gender reveal once the adoption process is as far as it can get before the baby is actually born and adopted. So, I know we're all looking forward to that. Oliver is sort of beside himself wondering how his life went from relative calmness and Edsit and two nearly grown children - to chaos, pregnancy, and two grandchildren of 'his' own is so short a time.

I'm sort of loving the whole fertility ring is to blame thing. Perhaps I was divinely guided when I chose it for you all those years ago. Magic herself knew that our lives needed to be a riot of kids and more kids. Remind me to kiss you very thoroughly when I see you next as a reward for being you and solving this puzzle at long last.

I love you!

So, also while you were gone, Oliver and I did something that, well I'm not certain we could have done if you were home. It started with me kissing his adorable teeny little baby bump and telling the baby all about how much I loved him or her. How much I love Daddy Oliver and Daddy Harry. How much love there was in our family in general.

Oliver started off mildly protesting and looking rosy and a little embarrassed, but then he grew quiet.

"Say, Draco?"

"Yes love?" I asked as I shifted to kiss him.

"Have you ever read Harry's mind? I mean I assume you have as he's written in emails that he was upset you didn't look him in the eye and mentally poke him before running off with Jules. But I mean, have you ever spent like an hour or so just wandering around inside his head?"

"Yeah, it's been a while, but yeah, there was a point when I think I was trying to help him strengthen his Occlumency shields, or maybe I was actually trying to teach him Legilimency to get him to read my mind, but either way, we've been in each other's heads," I confirmed.

"I thought as much," Oliver murmured. "Ever since you did that thing with Morgana, I've been dying to know what it's like"

"Reading a baby's mind?" I asked in amusement.

"No, well yes that too, but I mean what would it be like to have you in my head?"

"Probably messy," I remarked.

"Messy?" He questioned.
"Well yeah, unless you've gone in and organized things a bit, your mind will probably be disorganized and chaotic. It's like... you know how when you're listening to someone talk, no matter how close you are paying attention, you have thoughts pop up. So now imagine that the conversation is the setting - like a sitting room - and all of those thoughts are like our kids popping in and out to ask questions or demand five seconds of attention before running off again. You can see how that might seem messy to a visitor who normally likes to keep a nice and tidy house."

"Are you saying your mind is nice and tidy?" Oliver asked with an amused smile.

"Maybe not completely, but yes, I do like to go in there somewhat regularly and clean things up."

"Well... would you be willing to try it?"

I kissed him for a few long and leisurely minutes. "Yeah, I suppose that I would like having an opportunity to walk around your mind. Once in, it's actually relatively easy to bring you into my mind too, if you want."

"It is?" Oliver asked happily.

I nodded. Then I made sure we were both comfortable, laying on our sides and holding onto each other, before proceeding. When ready, I told him to look me in the eyes without blinking until I was inside him.

He made the comment that I'm dead certain you just made in your head, about wanting me literally inside him. So I did that as well. It was sort of awkward actually, in that position and not moving, but hey, inside a beloved is always a nice feeling.

So, staring him in the eyes, I entered his mind and took a good look around. For privacy reasons (you can ask Oliver and he'll tell you all of it, I'm sure), I'm not going to describe too much. Just that I was more or less right. His mind was messy, but it was also sort of organized at the same time. It was the stables overlooking the Quidditch Pitch. And he did have our kids running in and out of his thoughts.

In addition to other things, I rolled up my sleeves and helped him clean and organize the stables. This gave me access to some of his more recent or recurring thoughts. Fun fact - that Oliver actually asked me to tell you - there's a bassinet in the middle of the aisle running through the middle of the stables, and in that bassinet is a tiny and adorably perfect baby. Swaddled in a soft yellow/golden blanket and sound asleep. When we went to pick up the baby to see if it was a boy or a girl, the baby would fuss until we stopped touching him or her.

After Oliver stared at that baby as if it was the greatest treasure in the universe for about five minutes, I asked him if he wanted to come into my mind. He nodded and took my (mental) hand as I led him through a door. On the other side of the door was my Mind Palace. Years and years of neatly organized memories and things I wanted to be able to easily recall. NOT that I'm perfect at it and can remember everything, but it's definitely better than having no organization at all.

Random side note, remember when I said that one of the things that fascinated me about Jules is the fact that he has natural occlumency shields? Well, I asked him if he would mind me poking around inside his head at some point to see if I could figure out how they got there and why, and he had to think about it at first, but now he wants to know too, so I might be busy this weekend doing that.

Anyway, in my mind, Oliver and I sat and had tea while he asked me if he could see specific memories. He wanted to see one of the times we'd gone to Glastofest and you'd been on one side of the room as a Pup while I was on the other. He got to see from my perspective how I had that invisible and intangible leash around my wrist to let me know your every move. He got to see me dominate about half the crowd, how I did it, why it was fun, what kinks it fulfilled, and all the while, just how often I actually did tug on the leash, look over at you, or pretend to be focused on one thing while actually watching you out of the corner of my eye.

It seems our Oliver is thinking more and more about having a session of double masturbation with his doppelgänger, who - while about 90 percent straight - is actually on board with this idea. He said that when he and Other Oliver talked about it while encased in the privacy bubble, the only real downside - aside from having to wait until the Viper has time to bring him back - is that Other Oliver doesn't want to be watched by two pervy husbands, and our Oliver is torn between wanting us both right there for kink and consent reasons, and not wanting to have to 'perform' for us.

So, there's a nice big conversation we'll need to have.

In any case, Oliver asked to see a few other memories in which I was doing things such as 'stalking my prey.' Then - because he was making me horny - I ended up breaking our connection and just shagging him into the bed.

Now that I've written this email recap of last night, I'm horny all over again, and so, I'm going to hunt one or both of you down and -

Actually, Harry, it sounds like you need me to spank you and get you out of your head for a bit, and so, that's exactly what I'm going to do.

Turn that shit up louder, make it all go faster, blame it on the witching hour, take it to a thousand horsepower, yeah!

Draco
My Love,

I am sorry I wasn't awake when you came home last night. I'm mostly sorry that I wasn't awake to see and talk to you in person. I'm a little disappointed that it now feels as though it's been days since I've seen you last because of my all night library fest. But I'm the most sorry for me that I wasn't awake to have you give me a rousing spanking, letting me fly right out of my head for a bit.

I can tell you didn't spank me while I was asleep, my arse is much too pale for that right now. But my arse is sore enough that I assume you at least got to fulfill your somnophilia kink? Hope sleeping Harry was everything you wanted him to be.

I apparently crashed hard as soon as my classes were over for the night. If I remember correctly, I sent off my email to you and then went into the bedroom to "rest my eyes for just a mo" and the next thing I remember is waking up this morning. Which means I got probably thirteen hours of sleep, although I was up long enough that I still didn't quite feel one hundred percent rested when I woke up. But I've been much more tired for longer, it just took a cup of coffee and a few minutes of watching your and Ollie's sleeping faces to feel ready to take on the day!

I already contacted Hermione, assuming you may have forgotten to let her know you wouldn't be coming in to work tonight. I'm taking you out on our special date. And no, I'm not telling you what I have planned, you'll just have to see for yourself. But I really really really enjoyed your spanking suggestion I missed out on last night. So, when we get home from our date can we do that?

Gods I'm already so hard just thinking about being at your mercy. Letting you, begging you, to spank my arse until I float off into my favorite space.

Hurry up and be evening already damn it!

Wherever you go, whatever you do, I will be right here waiting for you,
Harry

Tuesday May 29th
Dear Harry and Draco,

I really hope that you are having fun on your date. I know you're not calling it an anniversary anymore, but it still is one in my opinion and I'm alright with that. As Harry keeps saying, we all have our individual relationships in addition to our triad relationship.

So, while you are both out and I'm here all alone, I decided that it was a good time to take a long hot bath and see if I've cultivated enough stamina to edge myself until you get home. Even if I don't, it'll still be a rather pleasant time, don't you think? Maybe I'll use my magi-tablet to get a video clip for you two to watch...

See you when you get back,
Oliver
Chapter 292

Chapter Summary

Harry is happy and Oliver has some news.

Wednesday May 30, 2018

Good Morning Loves of my Life,

Last night was absolutely lovely in so many ways. I had an absolutely beautiful date with my Draco. Then towards the end of our date, we decided to check our email to see if our Ollie had in some way told us where he was going to be. And OH MY GOODNESS did he ever!

But before I get to the filthy stuff, let me talk about the beginning sweet stuff.

When I took my Ollie out on our date, I decided to do a very traditional date. Falling in love the way we did, almost backwards where we began as an old married couple taking care of our children all night and eventually did some sex acts before realizing we had any feelings at all, we didn't do very much traditional dating. None at all in fact. So what would be better for my sweet husband who wasn't really courted, than dinner and a movie where we really got to get to know each other even better?

But that isn't the case for my Draco. I really thought hard about what kind of date to give my Draco on our special day. We've had so many special days over the years. Do I go big and posh and fancy for my spoiled prat of a husband? Do I just ignore the idea of a date at all and drag him to the playroom for sexy shenanigans? While I might enjoy that in theory, I wanted to do something special, remind my Draco that even nineteen years later, I do choose him again and again every day. We've had a lot of big dates, huge international anniversary trips, and SO many filthy fantasy fulfillment.

So, why not go back to our roots. Our first date, where we just talked for hours. I made a lovely picnic full of finger foods. I hand fed them to you to avoid your poncy waistcoat getting all messy. I laid in your arms watching the sun set. You ran your hands through my hair while we talked about everything and nothing.

I could have just fallen asleep to the feeling of complete love and safety. But as much as I enjoyed our time alone together, we didn't need to leave our husband home alone just so we could sleep on a blanket outside. Unless of course he had chosen to have a boys' night, get utterly pissed (which you obviously can't exactly do right now Ollie-Love), play with fire, and promise middle naming rights to an aforementioned friend.

That is NOT what happened. Instead, we read an email written almost two hours earlier, that promised an edged and desperate, soapy and wet, gorgeous man waiting for us when we got home. We didn't even need to discuss what we wanted to do, one look in each other's eyes and we were already apparating home to play with our Oliver.

Instead of climbing into the warm and cozy tub with you, we grabbed you and dragged you off to the playroom. There was a little yelping, probably due to the temperature change, but once I dropped to my knees and took your dripping cock into the back of my throat your displeased yelping turned into satisfied groaning.

Once I managed to have Ollie come down my throat, I shuffled over on my knees and took care of Draco’s throbbing shaft as well. I figured one orgasm from each of you should take the edge off enough that I could get what I’ve been needing for what feels like months. Weeks at least.

I crawled towards the spanking bench, hoping against hope that I was going to get my arse thoroughly reddened; Draco stopped me. "No my little Mutt, you're going to have to be the best little sub for us and keep yourself still without that bench to help you out. As long as you can stay still, I will keep spanking that gorgeous arse of yours, it's up to you how long that will happen."

Oh, I can stay still, I will stay so still for you! You at least cast a lovely cushioning charm for my knees and allowed me to rest my head and shoulders in Ollie's lap. If I hadn't been able to stay still on sheer willpower alone, Oliver's calming praise would have made me get through it anyway.

Draco, you started with your hands, knowing skin to skin is my favorite way to warm into a good spanking. The entire time Ollie told me exactly how well I was doing, just how gorgeous my submission was, and how much I was pleasing my Sir and my Master. Anything for my Master and my Sir.

Eventually you switched to a paddle, the crack of the paddle adding a new and deeper element into my spanking. Still Oliver gave me his touch to focus on. You both gave me your beautiful voices as another focal point.

I stayed so still and kept begging for more, that you pulled out the rarely used cane. Oh my bloody hell was it absolute bliss. The slicing, intense pain of that particular device adding a third completely different physical sensation. I don't necessarily remember sobbing, but I do remember feeling fuzzy and hearing you both thank me for my tears. Telling me "you're so beautiful when you let it all go Harry. Thank you for gifting us your tears. Can you keep going for us Love?"

And I could. I'm not sure how long I did though. I remember looking up into Ollie's face, seeing the pride in his face as he wiped my eyes. "You're doing so well, just a bit more and you're going to fly for us aren't you?"

And I did.

That's the last thing I remember before waking up this morning all wrapped up in a mountain of blankets in our bed. My head still feeling a little fuzzy, my arse so unbelievably sore, and feeling so right with my body and mind.

Thank you both for a gorgeous night. I love you to the ends of the world and beyond.

Yours,
Harry

Friday June 1st
Dear Harry,

You know, for the first time, I think I can understand why you and Draco like to write these emails so much. Or maybe like is not the right word. More like rely on. You've said so many times that this gives you both an outlet to learn about difficult news and process it before coming together to talk, and...
I'm so afraid to tell you this news in person. So I'm hiding behind an email. Harry...

I think I broke Draco...

See, what happened was that when I woke up, you had already left for the morning. Normally, Draco is still sound asleep, but he just so happened to get up to go to the loo and crawl back in bed right when I woke up, so I thought I'd take advantage of the situation. I started by tickling him.

Things were rather funny, with Draco twitching and groaning unhappily, but not actually fighting me off. So then I got more into it. When he just couldn't take any more, he rolled onto me and gave me some kisses. After that, he tried to tickle me, and that led to us rolling around, wrestling playfully, and trying to tickle and kiss each other.

Until he tickled a spot that triggered a reflex that made me kick him right out of bed. This would have been fine, and has happened before, but well... Draco hit his head on the edge of the little cabinet right next to the bed.

"Oh God! Draco!" I cried out and rushed to help him up. He remained unconscious long enough that I started to panic. Magicking robes onto both of us, I rushed him to St. Mungo's where Rowe immediately scanned him.

Rowe says that Draco is fine, more or less. He originally had a bit of cracked skull and swelling where he hit his head, but she took care of that. The problem now isn't anything physical, it's...

It's what happened when he initially regained consciousness. He didn't recognize me! But worse, he didn't even know who HE was!!! I had to escape the room and cry for a bit that I broke our husband and there's nothing we can do about it.

Now that I'm slightly calmer, I decided to be a coward and write this all out to you rather than go find you and tell you in person. I hope you get this after your last class of the day so that you don't freak out in front of your students. But whenever you get this, I know you'll come straight to me, and... I really hope you're not surrounded by your Rage Halo...

Worried sick,
Oliver
P.S. (Sent about an hour later)
So, there's a bit of good news. Draco - due to the effects of hitting his head - is still rather sleepy. He had dozed off after learning that he has amnesia, and that was when I called his mother in to tell her the news. Once she was ready to see him, we went back into the hospital room and he opened his eyes and said: "Mum..." So, Rowe is certain his memories are in there, they just might have to take their own sweet time in returning.
Chapter 293

Chapter Summary

Harry tries to reassure Oliver and Draco is trying out this email thing his healer told him about.

Friday June 1, 2018

My Sweet Ollie,

Of course I am not going to Rage Halo at you. You and Draco were being silly, joking and wrestling around, this is not your fault any more than it's Draco's fault. Unless you're telling me that you tricked Draco into playing around and tickle/wrestling with you with the intention of injuring him, I think we're okay. And even if I did blame you, which I absolutely do not, I'm pretty sure you're already punishing yourself much more than I possibly could.

My Sleepy Draco,

Apparently you woke up long enough to recognize Narcissa as your mum, but by the time I got here you had fallen back asleep. Hurry up and come back to us. Back to us in the land of the awake, back to us as your husbands you love and recognize, back to us so I can hug and love and squeeze on you.

Honestly, you fight fake inferi at the Adventure Park. You've been rock climbing and hang gliding. You've battled wizards intent on hurting you. You've been hexed and kidnapped. And somehow you're taken down by a sleepy morning tickle war.

Now, I am going to go cuddle our husband who is obnoxiously blaming himself for your injury. Hurry up and come fully back to us so you can join me in telling our Oliver to stop being such a ridiculous martyr. Accidents happen and he's not to blame. Maybe HE needs some spankings!

Oh! I'm getting told you seem to be waking up again.

I remember how much we love each other, enough for the both of us,
Your Harry

Friday June 1st
To, erm... my husbands, I suppose...

So, well, Healer Rowe has explained to me that even though I don't remember much of anything, I should do this email thing. She thinks that doing this thing I do so much might help trigger and solidify my memories. She thinks it'll be so familiar that I just... become me by doing it.

Thus, I'm giving it a try.

The first thing I remember is waking up. I saw a man I didn't recognize watching over me rather fretfully, and then there was a woman who introduced herself as Healer Rowe. Apparently she's been my healer for nearly two decades. She scanned me with her wand and asked me some basic questions - none of which I could answer.

Not even my name, which she told me is Draco. The man - who introduced himself as Oliver - ran out of the room and Rowe told me that she didn't want to give me too much information and inadvertently overload my mind. She thinks the most important thing at the moment is rest. So, after she left the room, I dozed off.

While I was dozing, I had a dream in which I was walking up to a large house/mansion/palace. It was seemingly endless, and even though there were windows and doors, none of them would open, nor could I see inside the windows.

When I came to what seemed to be the main entrance, I saw a regal blonde woman watching me through a window next to the door. I went up to the door and knocked on it to no avail, so I pounded and demanded to be let in. Rather than let me in, the woman floated through the still closed and locked doors to come out and talk to me. She put a hand to my cheek and murmured: "Draco, my darling boy."

And that's when I heard something in the hospital room that pulled me to full awareness. It was the arrival of the unknown man - Oliver - and the woman from my dream. I felt disoriented because I recognized her. I even called her Mum. But honestly, that was all I knew about her.

She sat and held my hand, calling me her darling boy for real, and we chatted about things of no importance - such as the weather and what I wanted for tea. Actually, we had a lovely cup of tea and some delicious biscuits. But rather than try to fill me in on everything I've forgotten, she followed Rowe's advice of only answering a few questions and giving my brain time to recover on it's own.

When I started feeling drowsy, she kissed my cheek and told me that she'd let me rest as she had to return to my father and the children that they're babysitting.

That's when I dozed off for the second time that I remember. I had THE strangest dream! In the dream, I was flying on a broom of all things, but... it felt natural. Right. Wonderful. Suddenly, I realized that there were a lot of people sitting in, erm... these tall wooden structures. Those people were cheering, and even though there were far too many of them to count, they only wore one of four main colors contrasting with long black robes. The colors were Green/Silver, Red/Gold, Blue/Bronze, and Yellow/Black.

As I was looking around at the crowd, a boy with black hair and green eyes flew past me. He zoomed toward a set of three tall rings in which an older boy with brown hair and eyes I couldn't see from this distance sat on a broom, smiling as if he hadn't a care in the world. The first boy captured my full attention as he flew around erratically, up and down and all around.

I couldn't really see myself in the dream, but I heard the words that came out of my mouth: "Training for the Ballet, Potter?"

No sooner had I wondered who that was, than I opened my eyes in response to the sensation of someone holding my hand. Imagine my surprise when I saw that boy from my dream, only he was a fully grown and rather fit adult.

"Potter??" I asked in bafflement. I think there may have even been a hint of scorn mixed in. It wasn't coherent nor a LOT of memories, but I had a bunch of flashes cross my mind. Things involving the Potter boy and a school that we both apparently attended. All the memories that crossed my mind suggested that I hated the boy so much that I was utterly obsessed with him.
For a heartbeat, the man that looks like a grown up version of the boy from my... memories? Looked distraught bordering on heartbroken, but then he quickly recovered himself and gave me a smirk that looks oh so familiar for some reason.

"Malfoy-Wood, actually."

"Malfoy..." I murmured because it occurred to me that Malfoy was supposed to go with Draco, as in Draco Malfoy. That's MY name. Huh... "But...?"

"I haven't been Potter in a very long time."

I raised a brow and looked him up and down. "But you WERE... Harry Potter?"

I received a nod of confirmation, and a bit of a wary look.

"We weren't friends, so why are you here? And why did you change your name?" I asked.

"Well, that's true enough. We weren't friends back in school, but once we grew up we..." he hesitated for a moment before taking a breath. "Got married, so that's why I'm Malfoy. And then the two of us together married Oliver, which is why I'm Harry Malfoy-Wood."

"I MARRIED HARRY BLOODY POTTER?!?!?!" I shouted out in shock. That's when Rowe decided that I should be left alone for a bit to wrap my head around this news and write this email to help me sort everything out.

But if I'm honest, I'm still rather confused and don't know what to think about anything. I'm also drowsy again, so I'm going to get some sleep and hope that more of my memories return.

Erm... sincerely?
Draco
Chapter 294

Chapter Summary

Draco is a bit overwhelmed.

Saturday June 2, 2018

My Husbands,
Or Erm, I suppose I will call you by name since one of you doesn't quite remember being my husband.
Dearest Draco and Oliver,

Well, it's been a long day ... or two days since everything happened yesterday. But then again it's the beginning of the day and everything happened yesterday at the beginning of the day so it's really been almost exactly twenty-four hours. Which means a day. But it's now extended from Friday into Saturday and therefore has affected two different days.

Apparently it's been long enough that I have lost the plot and sunk fully into panicking Harry turns into Babbling Harry mode.

Draco, that is something you will need to remember or learn again, when your Harry is overexcited or exceedingly nervous he babbles nonsensically until someone stops him or he literally runs out of words.

I have spent all last night into this morning trying to wrap my mind around the missing memories of my husband. Draco, I know you don't remember this since you don't remember anything, but a very very long time ago I had my own bout with amnesia. You were so loving and supportive through the whole event. I couldn't remember you, but I still felt so safe with you. I'm hoping very much that I can be that rock of love and support for you that you were for me all those years ago.

However, I am pretty sure I won't be quite as calming of a presence. That will likely be left to our Oliver. He's the bloody fit man with the gorgeous brown eyes who you saw the first time you woke up. I am overly emotional and prone to bouts of temper and sobbing. Since falling in love with Ollie, he's really been our calming rock. Our calm in a relationship that was quite volatile before our sweet Ollie came to us.

Not that I'm planning on acting a fool and hoping you'll keep things steady Oliver my Love. It's not fair to you, and I know you're going through your own pain and worry with Draco's memory loss. I'm here for you and if we both need to keep a calm, strong face to be there for our Dragon, just know you can sob in my arms or rage away at me. I am here for you. I'd love to pay you back for the balance you've brought to my life in any way I can.

I have faith that Draco will regain his memories and all will be well. We're pretty darn unforgettable. Draco, you've already mildly recognized your mum Narcissa, you recognized child-aged me and were able to see I was the older version, and it seems you're dreaming up memories of Hogwarts, Quidditch, and Flying. It will all come back to you, maybe it will be in small bits until it all fills in or maybe you'll get knocked upside the head and it will all come rushing back at once. No matter what I know you will come back to us.
And while you haven't quite remembered our Ollie yet, your body knows him. How do I know that? Last night during one of your healing naps Oliver was holding your hand. When the two of you hold hands, you always wind your fingers together and rub your thumbs back and forth. Even in your sleep, even with your memories missing, when Ollie had your hand in his your thumb knew to rub against Ollie's. See Ollie? He may not have his memories but his body knows ours.

And when Draco woke in the middle of the night, seemingly scared of something he didn't want to talk about, I climbed into bed and hugged him. I felt him lean in, taking a deep breath into my crazy hair, then he ran his hands over the top ruffling it even more. He's in there, we just need to find him.

And while I have utmost faith in our Draco coming back to us, even if he never regains his memories I am crafty enough that I will just make him fall in love with us all over again. Oliver, you and I managed to make him fall in love with us once, we can do it again!

My best guess as to what is keeping those memories away is that Draco somehow managed to lock himself out of his Mind Palace. You have all your feelings, thoughts, and memories beautifully organized within your mind. You call it your mind palace. And your description of a neverending mansion reminds me of how you've described that in the past.

Hurry up and let yourself in! We miss you. I miss you. The kids miss you. I miss you. Your animals miss you. I miss you.

All of my love forever,
Harry Bloody Potter ..... actually Harry Malfoy-Wood, but I'll accept anything as long as you come back to us.

Saturday June 2nd
Dear Harry and Oliver,

You know, I think this email thing actually does help. See, I woke up in the middle of the night, I couldn't bring myself to talk about the things I'd... Dreamt? Remembered? But when I woke up again this morning and had time to think it over, I realized that writing it down would help me analyze it and figure out what to think.

So... in the dream, I was in a room with a man with no nose and red eyes. He was telling me to murder an old man. Giving me advice and tips. Teaching me to use a spell to do it instantly. Then he was torturing a person he called a filthy muggle. He had me do a bit of that too. Then he stared me in the eyes and told me that I now knew what I was in for should I fail.

That's when I woke up, those eyes glowing in my vision for a good five minutes. I felt like I needed to run and hide, only I didn't know where to go. To my relief, the both of you helped me immensely.

Shortly after waking up and eating breakfast, Healer Rowe came in to tell me that there was really no reason for me to stick around, and that she was discharging me so that I could go home and be with the ones I loved in a familiar place that might trigger more memories.

And so, you brought me to a bloody ENORMOUS mansion. I was amazed just looking around, but I also felt... safe. Loved. At home. My mother and father came to fuss over me, and I recognized both of them, however, I have little to no memories of them, and those that I do have are old and... Stern? Cold? almost the complete opposite of the warm and loving people that welcomed me
I mean, my father was still a bit aloof and standoffish, but it was softened by genuine smiles and a hug, and so, was nearly staggering compared to the man in my memory who used to glare at me and order me to stop babbling about that Potter brat.

And then... it began...

Apparently the word had spread of my condition, and it had been decided that this called for a full... introduction? It seems we have kids - a LOT of kids!!! - and they were determined to remind me who they were and jog my memory, by force if necessary.

The first to enter the room in which I was sitting in a large comfortable armchair like a bloody king, was Eris and Hazel. They had others with them, but they had those others wait a few feet back while they came and said hello.

"Welcome home, daddy!" They both exclaimed as they gave me kisses on the cheek. "I'm Eris, and this is Hazel. I'm not the oldest, but I AM the first one you gave birth to."

"And I'm a complicated case that I'll tell you all about later - AFTER you've wrapped your head around everything so far," Hazel added.

They beckoned to the others. "This is Eric, the father of my baby boy Luka. Here, hold him! He LOVES his grandpa Draco."

Sure enough, the somehow sticky boy that smelled like oranges grinned at me as he sat in my lap and gave me kisses on the cheek. My heart tugged a bit, even as I couldn't help but feel a little repulsed that I was getting a little messy from his touch.

"And this is my fiancée Pearl," Hazel stated, holding hands with the young woman who looked familiar or some reason. I raised my brow in surprise.

"Fiancée...?" Well... I suppose that if I can be married to two men, my daughter can marry a girl. Honestly, why did this take me aback so much?

Rather than say anything, they simply smiled. Another group had just entered the room, so Eris took her son from me and they left to give the newcomers some time alone with me (with the both of you loitering around the room doing your own things while still being on hand if I needed you).

This next group was: "Hi daddy, it's me, Viona. And in here is your next grandchild, and no, I haven't revealed the gender yet. This is my husband Alric, and my stepsister Cassie - Cassiopeia, one of Oliver's two kids that you now claim since you're married to him."

"Don't worry, I don't expect you to remember all our names or a while," Cassie added with a laugh.

"How many of you ARE there??" I asked in apprehension.

"Oh... A few..." Viona answered vaguely. "Quick background: I run the majority of your businesses now - so don't worry about them! I've got Cassie here to help me, and she's proving to be invaluable - worth her weight in gold! We've definitely got everything handled. Meanwhile, Alric is doing fabulous managing the Malfoy Import/export business. Even if I DIDN'T make a fortune each day, he'd be more than capable of supporting me and our baby."

I smiled at them because they were holding hands and giving each other looks that made it clear that they were in love. "That's good," I murmured. Viona and Cassie took turns kissing me on the cheek - and Alric shook my hand - before they wandered off to talk to you a bit.

Which gave the next group a chance to pile in and overwhelm me. "Hi! I'm Shtara! I'm your most brilliant daughter! This is Siri, Zwei, Zaire, and Jaz."

"Erm..." I droned, feeling like my life had just taken a turn for the Bizarre. HOW are two of my kids black and another erm… middle eastern???: Rather than answer, the one named Jaz made a few hand gestures at me.

Even though my brain was so confused that I couldn't tell up from down, I automatically understood: "How are you, dad? I haven't had a chance to come snuggle with you in a few days. I missed you so much."

I looked at the absolutely breathtaking child and felt my heart nearly burst. Suddenly, it didn't matter if she was a different ethnicity, she just... felt like mine. I pulled her into my lap and kissed her on the cheek. I wasn't quite sure what I was doing or if she'd even understand me, but I made gestures with my hands that I THINK meant: "I'm well, thank you. I probably missed you too."

She immediately grinned and gave me a tight hug.

"Here, eat this!" The one called Zaire insisted, practically shoving a spoon full of pudding into my mouth. "I finally had Muffy teach me how to make your favorite - Sanguinaccio Dolce."

Mmmmmmmmmm.... I couldn't remember if it really was my favorite, but it certainly tasted better than anything I'd eaten since I woke up with no memories.

The one called Siri talked my ear off about Quidditch for a few minutes before Zwei (did we really name our son TWO???) showed me a video he'd made from clips he's taken of me over the years. Actually, he said that they were something called printed memories, so... a form of magical video recording?

When the video was over, he transferred it to something he called my magi-tablet, and then they were shoved out of the room so that the next group could swarm me. This was Persephone, Lily, Caelum, and Atreyu. They... quite honestly chattered at me in high speeds and all at the same time and about things such as horses, wolves, ice skating, and cliff diving. It was hard to follow any of it, but the gist was that they were happy to see me - not to mention happy in general - and really needed to get back to their own things before the stables burst into flames, the ice rink melted, and the thestrals disappeared.

???

Anyway, moving on.

The next half hour or so was rather peaceful. We had Nora, Morgana, Gabriel, and Dylan come in and have tea with us. I was still mildly repulsed to be drooled on, touched with sticky hands, and given slobbery kisses, but they were all so adorable (why is one of them French???) that I just... melted, I suppose.

Harry took them away for a nap, leaving me and Oliver alone with the next two.

"Hi, I'm Parker - one of Oliver's two that are now yours too. And this is Harrison - Hazel's twin from another universe. He's not technically one of yours, but I gather he's an honorary son. We've been running Orion's pub for months now, and... We've decided to try dating..."

"Oh?" Oliver asked with interest. "What brought that on?"
Parker smiled. "Well, we've been sharing the flat above the Hog's Head, and we've each basically enjoyed being young adults free to do whatever we want, but slowly, we both started getting jealous of each others' pulls, and also started having UST so bad that it was affecting our job. So we just said 'Hell with it!' and started dating."

"That only happened a couple of days ago," Harrison added.

I pointed at Harrison in confusion. "Wait, if you're not actually our kid, then WHY do you look so much like Harry?" Also I understood that twin from another world meant unrelated lookalike, but seriously, this was like looking at you from the time my scant memories have shown me.

Harrison chuckled in a way that sounded like: Heh heh. "Erm... well, that's complicated. I think I'm going to wait to explain that until after you've had a chance to wrap your head around everything so far."

"That's what Hazel said!" I protested.

"It's complicated," Harrison, Parker, Oliver, and Harry (who had just returned) all said in unison.

I sighed in frustration but let the matter drop.

Parker and Harrison left and this strangely beautiful boy with dark blue hair and vivid blue eyes practically danced into the room. "Bon jour, Zhraco!" He greeted with a grin.

"Bon jour, chere, ca va?" Wait! Why did I know French?!?!

"Bien! C'est l'amour! J'aime John - le Romeo!"

"Er... D'accord..." I murmured, wondering who this was and if he was another of our apparently endless kids.

"Ciao!" He cried as he ran off, saying something so fast I didn't quite catch it, but I think meant he was running late to see his lover.

This cleared the room for two men and two girls. "Hi Draco. I'm Miles. This is my husband Colm, and our two daughters - Sammy and Charlotte."

"I AM A BOY TODAY!!!" The one called Sammy protested indignantly. She then threw her arms around me and gave me a kiss on the cheek. "It's been FOREVER since I last saw you, grandpa Draco!"

"Can you take us shopping?" Charlotte asked, looking so innocent that I got suspicious for some reason.

"Love to." The response came out of my mouth before I could even think about it. Habit??? "But perhaps not until I can remember where I keep my money."

They laughed and Miles told me a little about the new show he's doing - his last before he and Colm take the girls on an extended summer holiday.

"Dad!" A woman interrupted, prompting Miles to herd his family out of the room. I hadn't even had a chance to ask how in the bloody hell I had managed to have a son who looked nearly as old as the man I see in the mirror - when I can bear to look.

"Hello..." I greeted cautiously.
"I'm Elena, and I dropped everything when I heard you were home and receiving visitors. I'm the oldest and I'm currently pregnant with my second child. This is Rafael - say hi to grandpa, Raf!"

The boy jumped into my lap and gave me a tight hug, but since this was another babbling sticky child (do we bathe them all in sticky stuff???), I focused on Elena. "This is Ethan - Rafael's father - his wife Rose, and Rodrigo. I'm dating Ethan and Rose on the one hand, and dating Rodrigo on the other."

I was shocked by this! "AND YOU'RE ALL ALRIGHT WITH THAT?!?!?"

"Definitely!" They all stated with a grin. Well... alright then...

"I'm currently tying up all the loose ends at my performing arts school so that we can move to Spain and start up a new Unity House - that I plan to run for the rest of my life - unless Tabitha decides to retire."

"Is that another daughter...?" I wondered, having lost ALL track of how many there were.

"Oh! Finn and Bea just arrived! Blake will probably want to hug you for exactly three seconds before running off to the stables."

I felt a bit faint when I saw the three newcomers. HOW MANY KIDS DO WE HAVE?!?!?!?

Finn and Bea said hello, Blake ran off, and then the two adults went over to talk to you, Harry. I felt a bit relieved, but I didn't have long to stop my head from spinning.

"Hi Dad!" A rather good looking blond man said. "I'm Orion, this is my baby Gemini, that's my older brother River, his wife Mahafsoun, their daughter Evangeline, and my two lovers - Ben and Mara. Somehow, Mara's pregnant..."

I felt at a loss as to how to respond to this. "Erm... congratulations?"

He harrumphed. "I suppose so, even though I was adamant that I didn't want kids, let alone more than one, but the ONE bloody time I forgot to cast the protection spells, wouldn't you know it!"

They took turns hugging me and having the babies give me kisses. The alluring woman named Mahafsoun seemed to somehow put me under a spell, since I stared at her to the exclusion of all others, wanting to run my hands through her long and silky hair. It was like a beautiful black waterfall that just flowed and floated and called out to me.

She smiled and gave me another kiss on the cheek. "You can braid my hair - if you'd like."

"Mmm... yes please," I murmured, sounding strange, even to me. I have no idea how long I sat there, playing with her hair and purring, but eventually, Harry grabbed my attention and told me that dinner was about to be served - and that I had just enough time to go get dressed. To which a wrinkly... thing - who says she's my house elf Muffy - told me that I actually had a lot of time to get ready, so I decided to write this email while it was all fresh in my mind.

Now, onto dinner, I suppose,

Draco
Cheat Sheet for Draco

Chapter Summary

A spreadsheet that lists general info and descriptions of the Malfoy-Potter-Wood kids

!^_^

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Child</th>
<th>Birth Information</th>
<th>Godparents</th>
<th>House (if applicable)</th>
<th>Physical Features</th>
<th>Nationality not English</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Elena Rojas Malfoy</td>
<td>22-Oct-90 Adopted @ 9 years</td>
<td>Unknown</td>
<td>Ravenclaw</td>
<td>Dark brown curls, brown eyes, 1 inch taller than Harry</td>
<td>English/Spanish</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Rafael Rojas Malfoy</td>
<td>20-Dec-16 Birth</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td>Looks just like Mama Lainie</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Baby Parker Ballard Wood</td>
<td>5-Mar-96 Adopted @ 3 years</td>
<td>NA</td>
<td>Gryffindor</td>
<td>Draco lookalike with brown hair and eyes</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>River Lewis Malfoy</td>
<td>21-Mar-96</td>
<td>Unknown</td>
<td>Assumed Hufflepuff</td>
<td>Long black hair, beautiful River lookalike with darker coloring</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Mahafsoun Malfoy</td>
<td>7-Jun-96 Married In</td>
<td>NA</td>
<td>NA</td>
<td>Egyptian</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Evangeline Maharet Malfoy</td>
<td>9-Dec-17 Birth</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Cassiopeia Mulciber Wood</td>
<td>1-Sep-97 Adopted @ 2 years</td>
<td>NA</td>
<td></td>
<td>Straight glossy brown hair, brown eyes</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Viona Skye Malfoy</td>
<td>24-Jan-99 Adopted @ 6 months</td>
<td>Hermione and Greg</td>
<td>Slytherin</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Alric Avery Baby</td>
<td>Aug-97 Married In</td>
<td>NA</td>
<td>Ravenclaw</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

^_^
<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Name</th>
<th>Date</th>
<th>Event</th>
<th>Carried by</th>
<th>House</th>
<th>Description</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Eris Lyra Malfoy</td>
<td>9-Apr-00</td>
<td>Birth</td>
<td>Draco</td>
<td>Slytherin</td>
<td>Harry lookalike, black curly hair, green eyes, very petite</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Luka Aiden Malfoy</td>
<td>19-Mar-17</td>
<td>Birth</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td>Looks more like Mama Eris, but a little like Dad Eric as well</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Orion Draco Malfoy</td>
<td>9-Apr-00</td>
<td>Birth</td>
<td>Ron and Blaise</td>
<td>Ravenclaw</td>
<td>Draco lookalike with even blonder hair, grey eyes with hints of green, tall, wears glasses</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Hazel Storm Malfoy</td>
<td>13-May-00</td>
<td>Found @ 6 months</td>
<td>Neville and Luna</td>
<td>Slytherin</td>
<td>Harry lookalike, black curly hair, green eyes</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Pearl St. Peter</td>
<td>10-Jan-01</td>
<td>Married In</td>
<td>Draco</td>
<td>NA</td>
<td>Pansy lookalike, Russian/Eng</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Shtara Grace Malfoy</td>
<td>6-Jan-03</td>
<td>Adopted @ 9 years</td>
<td>Unknown</td>
<td>NA</td>
<td>Dark brown skin, dark brown eyes, American-born black hair, curvy</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Sirius James Malfoy</td>
<td>30-Jul-03</td>
<td>Birth</td>
<td>Charlie and Millie</td>
<td>Gryffindor</td>
<td>Draco lookalike, Blonde hair, grey eyes</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Draco Lucius Malfoy II</td>
<td>30-Jul-04</td>
<td>Birth</td>
<td>Dudley and Donna</td>
<td>Gryffindor</td>
<td>Harry lookalike, dark messy hair and green eyes</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Name</td>
<td>Date</td>
<td>Age</td>
<td>Adopted By</td>
<td>Characteristics</td>
<td>Nationality</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>-----------------------</td>
<td>------------</td>
<td>----------</td>
<td>------------</td>
<td>-----------------------------------------------------</td>
<td>--------------</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Zaire Langa Malfoy</td>
<td>2-May-06</td>
<td>3.5 years</td>
<td>Kisa and Sebastian</td>
<td>Dark/Black skin, dark/black eyes, slim, tall, tight curls when he lets his hair grow out</td>
<td>South Africa</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Jasmine Kamaria Malfoy</td>
<td>9-Feb-09</td>
<td>Days old</td>
<td>George and Angelina</td>
<td>Black curly hair, deep tan skin, Iranian brown/black eyes</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Persephone Hikari Malfoy</td>
<td>21-Apr-10</td>
<td>Birth</td>
<td>Miles and Eliza</td>
<td>Born with black hair which lightened to a dirty blonde, wide silver eyes, extremely small for her age</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Lily Narcissa Malfoy</td>
<td>19-May-10</td>
<td>Birth</td>
<td>Sirius and Ginny</td>
<td>Narcissa lookalike, blonde hair, blueish grey eyes</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Caelum Arthur Malfoy</td>
<td>19-May-10</td>
<td>Birth</td>
<td>Viper and Yesenia</td>
<td>Strawberry blonde hair, light blue eyes, pointy Malfoy features</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Atreyu Miguel Malfoy</td>
<td>30-Sep-11</td>
<td>Almost 5 years</td>
<td>Bill and Teddy</td>
<td>Dark brown straight hair, dark Mexican-brown eyes, American pudgy cheeks</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Nora Madeline Marseilles Malfoy</td>
<td>6-Aug-14</td>
<td>3.5 years</td>
<td>Unknown</td>
<td>Honey-Gold hair, deep blue eyes, French button nose</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Name</td>
<td>Birth Date</td>
<td>Mother Carried by</td>
<td>Father Carried by</td>
<td>Description</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>-----------------------</td>
<td>------------</td>
<td>-------------------</td>
<td>-------------------</td>
<td>--------------------------------------------------</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Gabriel Pan Potter</td>
<td>14-Mar-17</td>
<td>Draco then Harry</td>
<td>Gavin and Della</td>
<td>Copper-red hair, blue-green eyes, round features</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Dylan Sheen Potter</td>
<td>14-Mar-17</td>
<td>Draco then Harry</td>
<td>Dean and Seamus</td>
<td>Dean lookalike, Medium brown skin, black tightly curled hair, light smokey grey eyes</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Morgana Guinevere Malfoy</td>
<td>5-Apr-17</td>
<td>Draco</td>
<td>Mahafsoun and Tiger</td>
<td>Black straight hair, black eyes, pale skin</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Baby</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td>Oliver</td>
<td>English/Japanese</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
(In a private email addressed only to Oliver)
Saturday June 2, 2018

My Love,

I am trying so hard to stay strong for our Draco. I am being supportive, introducing him to the kids. Explaining to the smaller children why Daddy Draco is being so weird. Staying positive about knowing his memories will return.

But today was so hard. I can't sleep. I can't stop crying. Our husband is missing. And unlike when he was kidnapped, I can't just search him out and attack the creep holding him hostage. His own brain is holding him hostage.

Please come hold me. Or let me hold you. I need to feel arms that know and love me surrounding me.

Please?
Your Harry

---------------------

(The usual email to both husbands)
My Everything,

Tonight went fairly well I think. Draco, you obviously don't remember anyone quite yet but seeing as at your heart you're naturally so loving and nurturing you were able to be the wonderful person we know you are. Just without the memories, a little less snark, and a bit more confusion.

First things first, it seems as though you had a few moments where you started judging yourself because of your reactions to our children. Please don't stress yourself out. I've said it to you a million times, and I know you have no memories of that so I'll say it again, "The first thought that goes through your mind is what you have been conditioned to think. What you think next defines who you are."

You remarked upon being a bit confused at your parents' openness and warmth because your memories of them were cold and standoffish. You've come a long way from your upbringing and so have they. Both you and your parents were raised in pureblood homes where purity and portraying the idea of perfection was the most important thing. Going through .... what our entire community went through .... years ago was enough to put things into perspective. Your parents realized that their child (children now) was more important than the ridiculous values that had been indoctrinated into them since childhood. You realized your parents weren't infallible. All of you really grew into the wonderful people you always were underneath the carefully polished shell.

I know you're there underneath the confusion. I know your memories are just waiting to resurface. Which is why your description of what things were a surprise ... came as a surprise to me. You seemed most confused about your daughter being in a relationship with a woman and three of your children (it's actually five, but I suppose Morgana's and Dylan's ethnicities aren't quite as obvious as Shtara, Zaire, and Jasmine's) being a different race than you, Oliver, or myself. Or maybe you did notice Morgana and Dylan but since you'd already been surprised once by the earlier three introductions you didn't think anything of it. Or maybe you were so distracted by the stickiness that you weren't paying attention to anything else.

Side note: it's actually very likely that Jaz and I DO actually share some nationality background. The more and more research I've done with the Potter line shows me that while it was a few generations back, more than once has the spouse marrying into the family been from the middle east. Most often from Pakistan. Apparently before my father was the first in the Potter line to marry a Muggleborn his ancestors were a bit ahead of their time. They were snobbish enough to not marry Muggleborns, but seemed to actively seek out pureblood arranged marriages from other areas of the world. They were snobs and blood purists, but enlightened enough to realize intermarrying with the same few families generation after generation wasn't the best recipe for healthy progeny.

Anyway, it's unsurprising to me that you would question a same-sex marriage because you grew up assuming you had to marry a proper pure-blooded witch. Even with the ability for wizards to carry children, your family still held to the ideals of a "traditional" marriage. Assuming it would mean a greater chance for multiple children. (Bahahahahahahaha! We showed them!) It's also unsurprising, since some of the portraits at the Manor are awful dickbags to those of our children who don't look like a traditional Malfoy. Not even from a racist standpoint, they're not super supportive of the idea that your heirs could be brunettes.

You, being the wonderful person you are, didn't make any of your children feel less. Even being in a headspace where you are still feeling all those troubling ideals from your upbringing, you knew in your heart these were important and wonderful people. I love you.

No, the funniest and most surprising aspect of your (lack of) confusion to me was the fact that you seemed to have no comment at all about having two redheaded children! That's the one judgment you do still claim and tease about. And not one single hint of "I understand the strawberry blonde but how'd I end up with that copper haired little baby?"

Not going to go into the complicated parts of our children's backgrounds since I don't think you're quite ready for some of the big stuff, but I figured I'd check off some of the easier bits of confusion. First of all, no we did not name our son Two. Well, we kinda did since he really doesn't ever go by any other name. But his given name is Draco Lucius Malfoy II. His nickname was born of my frustration at not being allowed to call him any shortened version of his name. Since I didn't want to also call him Draco, I'm a nicknamer, and you hate all nicknames for Draco (Drake, Dray, etc) I had to get creative. And since he's Draco the second, I jokingly called him Zwei and it just stuck. Now I can't imagine him being anything else honestly.

Pearl. She looks familiar for one of two reasons. One, she is your goddaughter. So while you may not have your memories back yet, perhaps your mind just told you she was known. Or, since you seem to be getting your earliest memories back first, it's probably her similarities to her mother that have your brain making the connection. One of your earliest childhood friends was Pansy Parkinson, and Pearl resembles her quite a bit.

Nora. The reason Nora is french is because she's our most recent addition to our family. She was adopted during a trip to Paris where her magic sought us out. Somehow knowing we were her forever family. She was born and raised in France, and while we are trying to make her more fluent in English as this is where she lives, we don't want her to lose her heritage or her first language.

Uh, the man in your dream ... that's one of those hard things that I am not going to explain fully. But please know those are very old memories, two decades old actually, and that evil man is hella dead. He can't hurt anyone else ever again. I promise you're safe from him.

And since you asked just how many children there are. Officially we have twenty-one ... and counting ... children. We gave birth to or adopted twenty-one beloved children. We currently have seven grandchildren with I think four more on the way. We have roughly six additional heart children. They are ours, we claim and love them, but we never officially adopted them. The blue hair boy Jules was one of them. And we also have two, almost three, children-in-laws who were brilliant enough to fall in love with our children.

I'm sure you were overwhelmed at the introductions and then during the loud boisterous dinner. Although you certainly loved all the spontaneous singing that happened around you. You even seemed to be less repulsed by all the sticky babies. To be fair, it's usually your fault they're sticky since you want them all to be foodies like you and constantly feed them as many different foods as possible. It sounds as though with Cassie's introductions she was super understanding about how overwhelmed you would be. It's probably because she didn't grow up in this chaos and when she first came into our lives she had to learn to live within the circus we created.

I know you'll eventually either remember all these wonderful children of ours or you will learn all about them and start fresh with falling in love with them. So don't worry about not remembering them all yet.

Don't worry about not remembering our son Parker and our daughter's twin from another universe Harrison were in a relationship. Apparently that is news to everyone! And believe me, we will be talking all about that when your memories come back!

And definitely don't worry about that random guest we had in the middle of dinner who initially came to ask you a favor and then upon realizing your memory was gone introduced himself. His name is .... erm ... Robertson. He's nobody. Don't worry about remembering him.

Ooh, I should sign off. Someone seems to have gotten my message from earlier and has arrived with the snuggles I ordered.

Love,
Harry

P.S. Seriously? No memories at all and you're still enchanted by the veela with the damn hair. Fuck my life.

Sunday June 3rd
Good morning!

Last night was... interesting... See, I'd asked how in the bloody hell we managed to have three men in one marriage (I didn't say it but I would have assumed that if I married a man and then married a second time, it would be one man and one woman so that I could always have one of each), and the two of you looked at each other for a long moment before slowly grinning and offering to show me.

Now I may be short on memories, but I'm still of age and rather healthy - a rather healthy MAN with healthy urges, and just looking at the two of you (snuggled up in our enormous bed) was enough to make a certain something rise to the occasion. So I naturally agreed and surrendered myself to the demanding yet gentle hands of my husbands.

I'm sure that we don't ALWAYS do it exactly this way, but I have to tell you that being inside Harry while Oliver was inside me was one of the best experiences of my life. I really don't think anything can feel better, so I don't think having my memories come back will suddenly change my mind on how good it felt. The only mildly frustrating thing was that I just kept on going and going.
when I actually would have quite liked to finish quickly and get some sleep.

Meeting all our kids was exhausting! I remembered all of their names long enough to write them down in the email I wrote yesterday, but this morning when I woke up and tried to get them all straight in my head, I got them all mixed up and couldn't remember at least half their names. That was a shadowy way to start the day.

However, things quickly improved when Shtara and Jaz let themselves into our room. They each had an animal that made me nearly shout out in shock and fear. Both girls giggled.

"Daddy, this is Wojtek and Amala. Technically they are both YOUR pets, but in actuality, I commandeered my precious bear a long time ago and Amala has been spending a lot of her time with Jaz lately because Amala lives in the Manor and you've been living in Hogwarts."

"Why would I live in something called Hog WARTS??" I questioned, making both of them laugh again.

The cheetah jumped onto the bed with me and immediately started, erm… snuggling? Playing? Trying to eat me??? The bear ALSO wanted to play, and he was rough enough that I had to wonder how I managed to survive the two of them. Surely I didn't want to have wild animals as pets?!?! Did our many kids somehow talk me into them???

After I felt quite mauled, the girls finally rescued me by having the bear perform a funny little dance while the cheetah lay across my legs and insisted that I rub her belly. Literally insisted! If I paused for more than a second, she'd try to bite my hand!

Saying they had things to do - and joined by a little girl named Vanessa - the three of them and the bear took off while the cheetah wouldn't leave my side for NOTHING. I swear she practically insisted on taking a shower with me, only refraining because there was water in there. Instead, she waited just outside the clear glass door of the shower and watched as I scrubbed up and rinsed off.

It was a little disconcerting!

Anyway, while I was still drying my hair with a fluffy towel, letting the rest of my body air dry because it felt really good on this fairly hot day, I received a visitor. It was that Robinson bloke you told me not to worry about remembering. It seems that since he was allowed into the Manor last night for a few minutes, but left when he realized that it wasn't a good time, he decided to come back today when he knew I'd still be making myself pretty for the day.

Huh... DO I make myself pretty? Like... Do I wear makeup and pretend to be a woman??? Is that why there are so many dresses in the huge maze you claim is our closet? Most of them are more like robes than dresses, and they are somewhat manly looking, but still... Do I want to be a woman???

Anyway, it seems that the reason Robbertson visited last night - and then returned today - is that he needed my help with something.

"I dunno if this'll work without your memories but... here, hold this a minute."

I took the soft and fuzzy stuffed dog in hand, petting it happily and loving how the hair - or fur, I suppose - felt to my fingers. Suddenly, I... SAW a... memory? I don't know if it's a memory of mine, but it seemed to be about a little boy. The little boy was playing in a forest. He was about three and he was holding the stuffed animal and talking to it as if it was his best friend. Suddenly, he, erm, how to explain it? It was like he went between two large bushes to pick some berries, but he unknowingly stepped in a small hole that made him wobble and throw the puppy, right before the ground around the hole dissolved into a slightly bigger hole JUST big enough for the boy to fall into it. He screamed for a long moment, and then abrupt silence. The memory ended at that moment, and suddenly I could see the man standing in front of me again.

He was stroking his chin. "That means he can't be too far from where they found his dog. They searched the area all night, but I bet they weren't looking too closely at the bushes and the ground under them. I'll have to go give it a good look myself, it might not be too late - Thanks Draco! You're a good man."

"Erm..." I droned as he ran off and disappeared with a loud crack. "What just happened??" But there was no one to answer my question.

In any case, I'm now dressed and rather hungry, so I'm going to go look for some sort of kitchen or a maid or something to see if I can get a bite to eat.

I'm so grateful for all your support,
Draco
P.S. You said we had roughly six extra kids, did I meet all six of them?

P.P.S. I hesitate to actually write this, because, erm… It's possibly hurtful, but... Last night, I had a dream in which I was - I dunno, 16? And there was this girl with short black hair and a button nose that was in bed with me having a really good time. I think I might normally keep that sort of dream to myself, but it's bugging me that I can't tell if it's just a dream, or if it's a memory. Especially since at one point, I looked over to find a good looking black boy watching us and stroking a, erm… MASSIVE shaft. Am I some sort of Size Queen??? Why does this all have to be so bloody confusing?!
Chapter 297

Chapter Summary

Harry is not best pleased and Oliver is worried. Draco has no idea.

Sunday June 3, 2018

Draco,

Good morning indeed. I wish you had woken up with your full memories of course, but knowing you woke up and spent time with some of our kids and had a lovely visit certainly makes it a pretty good morning.

And instead of a terrible nightmare of the dead monster who tortured you, you dreamt of a lovely teen years' memory.

Don't worry, it's not hurtful. Ollie and I are well aware of your past sexual history. The young woman was the aforementioned childhood friend Pansy, the attractive young man watching you was your good friend Blaise. Blaise is married to our niece Kisa (as well as our friends Ron and Hermione) and Pansy as I mentioned before is your good friend and the mother of our Hazel's fiancée Pearl.

The three of you had some fairly regular sexual encounters as teens. We went through some hard times during our formative years, there was a war that we were all involved with to differing degrees, and the three of you managed to have a safe haven to feel and care and let out some of your frustrations. Again, don't worry about the memory or you remembering it fondly as something that is hurtful. It's a lovely memory for you, and for them I'm sure.

And no, you are definitely not a size queen. You enjoy a nice shaft up your arse, and you HAVE taken Blaise-sized shafts before. That happens fairly rarely and only after a lot of prep and many days of rest afterwards. You do bottom fairly often with our normal sized cocks, more often now that we have Ollie who's more of a switch than I am, but for the most part you prefer to top and I prefer to let you top! Oliver bottomed during his first marriage almost exclusively, at some point actually just assuming he WAS a bottom. However, since being with us, he has the opportunity to do both about as often as he'd like to and so he's a pretty equal opportunity shaft user.

Me, on the other hand, I like topping ... sure. But if something happened and I could never top again? I'd be fine. I just don't understand why you'd prefer sexual contact that is just on the outer layer of the skin of your dick. When you're the bottom it's happening inside of you. It's intimate and the closest you can let someone near you.

Okay, I'm making it sound more romantic than it is. While I DO feelbottoming for my husbands is intimate and I absolutely love it .... I am the size queen. I've taken Blaise multiple times. I've often taken two cocks at once, and now that I have both you and Ollie? That happens OFTEN.

Actually, speaking of that, when I get back from an errand I have to run, I think your husbands should show you another glorious way three men can be together that should feel just as wonderful as our activities last night were. If you're not in the mood that's fine. You might be thinking we're a bit insatiable. It's just been a very long time since we've only shagged once per day or less. Most days we have some morning shagging, night time shagging, middle of the night sleeping shags, and usually during the day we drag at least one of our husbands into a cupboard for some mid-day quickie.

However, while I may be the size queen, and I have the feeling that Ollie is going to be even more of a beloved child collector than I am, YOU are most definitely the reason we have so many animals. And the ONLY reason we have wild animals. Even the one animal we have that could be thoroughly classified as mine was still found and brought home by you. My cat Venus was found by you at a pet store where she was unwanted because of her unique looks. You took one look at her and decided she needed to come live at our house. You were slightly jealous to find out she immediately decided I was her person.

Your most recent animal acquisition you found on our honeymoon, your husky Lumi. She absolutely adores you and if you're not reading this while she's snuggled up next to you begging for petting then I'm a monkey's uncle.

I may not be a monkey's uncle, but I am uncle to a lot of children. As are you and Oliver obviously since we share that title amongst all of our collective nieces and nephews no matter whose side they're from. You actually met one of our nieces earlier today, Vanessa is the daughter of your brother and .... uh his coparent. It's a long story and if I tell you she's the child of your brother and your sister's other universe twin, you'd probably feel really awkward and squicky about that. No blood is shared, and while they are co-parents, no nookie is shared either. It's all completely normal, you just wouldn't think so when I say your brother and your sister's twin have children together.

And you did meet most of our six honorary children. Blake's parents, Finn and Bea we've known since they were children and we claim them in our hearts. We especially claim our little Blake, he's the quietest and most affectionate of our grandchildren so far. Miles and Colm, parents of Sammy and Charlotte, were two more of our honorary children. Miles actually lived with us for quite a while during his pregnancy with Sammy and into their subsequent babyhood. Colm we didn't really claim until they got back together about a decade after they had Sammy. And Jules, and his boyfriend John ... or Romeo as you call him ... are the last two. So, you met five of them and were told about the sixth.

Speaking of Miles, he talked with you a bit about his current show. Well, Miles headlines a very popular drag show. Which you've performed at a few times with him, once dressed as a man and another time dressed in drag. Yes, you like to feel beautiful. Yes, you have worn dresses in the past although not very often. You have performed in drag and can ROCK an evening gown. But you most definitely have always identified as male. And seeing as you know, support, and love people who are trans, genderfluid, nonbinary, crossdressers, and pretty much everywhere on the gender spectrum, I feel confident that if you really didn't identify as male you would have told me. You just enjoy being an absolutely beautiful man.

Most of the "dresses" in the closet are actually robes. In our -erm- culture, men wear those robes for everyday wear and definitely for special occasions. For our first wedding you wore the most beautiful set of dress robes and I promise you, you were every inch a man.

Anyway, I put together a list of our children and a little info about each of them. Their looks and such in case you need a reference sheet. I promise you they all are very understanding of why their Daddy doesn't seem to remember them. They might look at you with a lifted eyebrow and a look that shows their attitude, but you don't have to worry if you forget a name or two or mix any of them up. Some of them look A LOT alike!
So, you enjoy visiting with any of the kids that come see you. Snuggle up to Ollie, he's the gorgeous guy you're married to in case you forget. I'm just going to run a real quick errant to see that guy Rubbish who you met last night and was kind enough to come "visit" you this morning. He needs to know just exactly what I thought of his super awesome impromptu visit.

I'll see you soon my love,
Harry (The other guy you're married to!)

(In a private email to Harry)
Dear Harry,

Merlin's Bollocks Harry! I appreciate that you kept your promise and didn't actually kill him, but did you have to scare him that badly?

There I was, lying cozy in bed with Draco, Nora, the babies, Lumi, and of course Amala who refuses to let Draco out of her sight. When I heard Draco's email notification sound. He hasn't quite gotten used to jumping at that little ding the way he usually would, so I went and grabbed his magi-tablet so we could read your message together.

We're reading along, and I'm glad we did so silently since it had quite a bit of not safe for Nora's ears information. I must have read faster than Draco, probably because I know most of the information you gave in the email while he's relearning things for the second time around.

I got to the part where you mentioned visiting Robards to, how did you put it, let him know "just exactly what I thought of his super awesome impromptu visit."

I stuttered out some nonsense about checking on something and apparated myself to the Ministry. Asked someone where Robards' office was, and made my way there. I was a bit worried I would either get there too late or in time to see a grisly show.

Thankfully there was no blood, hell you weren't even touching him, but he was cowering behind his desk. And bloody fucking fuck Love, he had wet his pants! What in the world did you say to him?

I reminded you that I appreciate you keeping your promises and then came back home. Would you hurry up and get home, assure me that you kept that promise, and join our cuddle party?

Love,
Oliver

Sunday June 3rd
Good evening,

So, after my shower and that visit from my friend (?), when I got lost in our closet and was wandering around looking at a section that simply HAS to be costumes... Right? I don't normally just dress up as a dragon, do I? Anyway, it occurred to me that if I could touch something like a stuffed dog and get a memory from it, then why can't I just touch EVERYTHING and get memories from it?!

So... That had limited success. I touched various things in the closet and would get images of me wearing it - or one of you two wearing something. But there weren't really any memories to go with it. That said, I did find one outfit that gave me an image of Oliver looking very handsome and... well, I suspected that it was during our wedding.

That led to me wandering (after taking at least a half an hour trying to find my way OUT of the closet) along the massive wall jam packed full of pictures. Sure enough, there were some from our wedding day and Oliver was wearing the outfit I'd found. Wow! We all looked amazing that day!

Curious, I went around touching things at random - such as our bed, which had images of YEARS of us sleeping with a child or three. Strangely, there weren't too many images of using the bed for more interesting things. Especially considering how often you claim we do it, I would have expected so many images that I might as well've been watching a porn. But nope...

So then I wandered to the cabinets next to the bed planning to touch everything on them, except I noticed something fascinating. On what I think must be my side of the bed - based off most of the images I saw - there was a clear rectangular glass cage of sorts full of ants. I was strangely spellbound. I stood there watching their every move for... minutes? Hours? Days?? Alright, so probably not days as Oliver came into the room with Nora, the babies, and the most adorable puppy you've ever seen in your life! She was so gorgeous that I managed to tear my eyes off those beautiful ants.

"Oh good, you're awake, Draco my love. How would you like to snuggle up in bed with all of us? Since these four just had their lunch and might be ready for a nap."

I smiled. "Sure, sounds cozy."

Oliver kissed me, and for a brief moment, I saw a flash of... sadness? Guilt? Something, but then it vanished to be replaced by love. Actually, the weirdest part about being married to two men I don't quite remember is the kissing. I mean shagging is fun and definitely powerful and loving, but I am capable of doing that without my heart getting involved. Whereas with kissing, I feel like it's something more intimate and special. For example, Oliver kissed me and I had a warning blare in my head that said something like: Don't kiss ANYONE for three months!!! Which left me confused and wondering if I should push him away and tell him that I had to wait a few months before I could kiss him.

The... six of us climbed into bed, and I had Morgana standing herself in my lap and petting my face, giving me lots of little baby kisses. It was so strange to see my eyes in an almond shape surrounded by lightly tan skin and straight black hair. I looked to Oliver.

"So... all the other ethnicities and the gingers are adopted, right? So then how did this one get my pointy face?"

"Ermmm..." Oliver droned. "She's... biologically yours and some Japanese man's..."

My eyes probably went wide with shock. I looked from him to the baby and then back to him. "Erm... Diiii... Did I... Cheat? And wait! That one's black and has sort of wild hair like Harry, so did Harry have him with a black woman - or man? Did we BOTH cheat?! Wait, or was this one of those things where we agreed to have other peoples' kids for some reason???

Oliver looked like he was silently chanting a prayer to summon patience. "I wasn't here for that, but as I understand it, you both had a playdate with some friends of yours in which YOU wanted to be cursed into a woman for the night - s! Nights! It was two separate nights a couple of weeks apart. And because the curse to turn you into a woman had some potent side effects, you got pregnant both times. Once was with Harry, and that's this little angel Gabriel. And the other was with Dean - a bloke we all went to school with, back in the day. And that was AFTER you'd gone undercover by polyjuicing into a 15 year old girl who was a prostitute and gotten up the duff while working. I'm not explaining this very well..." He muttered at the look on my face.

I was more than likely aghast. "I... WHAT?!?!" I looked at the three babies, who were all VERY close in age. "I got pregnant with triplets?! And I WAS a woman!!! Did I stay a woman the entire pregnancy? And come to think of it, it's been mentioned multiple times that I've been pregnant! ERIS said she was the first one I gave birth to! HOW MANY TIMES HAVE I BEEN PREGNANT AND WHY WOULD I AGREE TO THAT?!?! MORE IMPORTANTLY HOW IN THE BLOODY HELL IS THAT POSSIBLE????"

Oliver looked almost anguished, turning his head away to hide it. "These are questions you should be asking Harry. Maybe YOU should be rereading all your old email conversations..."

I did my best to calm down because I didn't like seeing him upset. "Hey... I'm sorry... I didn't..."

He shook his head and gave me a kiss. "It's not your fault..."

That was when a sound rang out and he jumped out of bed to grab something so that we could read the email from you. He jumped out of bed again and disappeared (How DO you bloody do that?!?!?), leaving me to snuggle and play with three adorable babies, a sleeping toddler, a dog, a cheetah, some ants, and a strangely gorgeous cat that was laying on a shelf looking down at all of us like we were literally beneath her and she didn't even hope we'd provide her with decent entertainment.

That was when a woman popped in and flustered me. "Hi Draco, I know that Harry said you can't remember anything, but I could really use some advice. See, the Wizengamot is going to be voting on a new law this week, and I'm not certain that I have enough support to get it to pass. I WAS thinking that I'd just let things go the way they'll go and learn from it, but then I started panicking thinking that MAYBE it not passing NOW means that it'll NEVER pass! But it HAS to pass! I mean Kingsley did wonders for the so-called near humans - like werewolves - but he STILL didn't quite get all the magical creatures given rights. It's not enough that house elves can ask to be freed and given paid employment if they want, ALL new elves born after the law goes into effect should AUTOMATICALLY be free and have the right to grow up and seek employment just like any other free person! AND -"

"Oi! Hermione!" Oliver called out upon his return. "You might want to take a breath."

"Right! Hooooooo HAA! So, as I was saying, I need your advice on what I should do. Should I have the Wizengamot reschedule the vote for a later date when I'm more confident? Should I rewrite the law so that it's clearer and easier to understand?! SHOULD I COLOR CODE THE LAW?!?!"

"Erm... This calls for tea," I suggested, feeling like I needed something bracing to get through this conversation.

"TEA!!! YOU'RE BRILLIANT! THANK YOU DRACO!!!" She cried out joyously, gave me a kiss on the cheek, and disappeared.

I looked over at Oliver with wide eyes. "Do I even WANT to know who that is?"

He grinned at me, highly amused. "That's your boss."

"WHAT DO I DO???!" I asked in bafflement.

"Well, that's the Minister for Magic, and you work for her as her number one adviser. You've also gone on business trips to Russia and France under her orders," Oliver explained.

"I... huh... I guess I'm pretty brilliant then?"

"Definitely!" Oliver agreed with a grin.

"Then who was that Robson bloke that came here earlier? The one that Harry went to visit?" I wondered, as I had the feeling he was a boss or coworker of some sort. "And wait! DID YOU SAY MAGIC??!!"

Oliver sighed and rubbed his temples. "Oh boy... This is going to be a LONG day... Alright, so -"

"Hold on a minute, I just heard a small noise..." I murmured as I looked over to see the gorgeous husky batting a paw at the cage full of ants. This was mesmerizing all over again, making me hum softly as I watched the ants and the dog. I pictured the dog shrinking to the size of an ant and running around happily inside the cage, barking a super tiny little bark and trying to get the ants to play with her. This was amusing enough to make me laugh softly.

"You are an absolute lunatic!" Harry informed me with a laugh, giving me a sound kiss.

"About time you got back!" Oliver exclaimed.

"Perfect timing! It looks like the littles are asleep," Harry observed. "We should... go do something..."

"Can I eat first?" I asked curiously since I was starving. "I never managed to get out of this room long enough to find the bloody kitchen and grab something to eat. Thus, I could eat a horse!"

"No problem, I'll go make something I know you'll love!" Harry insisted as he disappeared.

"I'm going to go make sure it's not a horse," Oliver informed me with a chuckle. "And check up on the middle-littles while I'm at it."

"I suppose I'll just watch these babies, or erm, this bloody cheetah actually, as she's trying to lay on me again."

"Take her for a quick run," Oliver suggested.

"We'll see," I murmured noncommitally. After he left, I decided to write this email as I think it's helping me to remember the things I'm learning - or at least keep things reasonably straight. So, yeah...

Food would be great, and some biscuits. Although, if the mirror is anything to go by, my arse has had a few too many biscuits over the years, so... Maybe a salad? Topped with steak tartar, mmm...

See you then!

Draco
Chapter Summary

Ollie didn't really appreciate Draco's comments on Mpreg, Harry is not okay, and Draco's dreaming about possible memories.

Chapter Notes

Warning!!! Draco has a dream that references his rape as a teen. It's not descriptive, so I hope it won't trigger anyone, but still, warning.

See the end of the chapter for more notes

Monday June 4, 2018

My Rock,

Ollie, if last night's activities didn't shake the memories back into Draco what are we going to do? It's been days. He's missing. I mean, his personality is there but under a layer of fog. I still love this memory loss Draco, and reintroducing him to the playroom and everything we get up to in there was certainly fun, but I miss our husband!

You can't tell me it didn't break your heart when he went on and on about how he couldn't possibly imagine ever wanting to be pregnant? I've watched him coo and talk and love on and kiss your sweet baby bump. He's madly in love with our sweet little baby caboose. And to hear him speak so crassly about male pregnancy? I want to cry and/or hex him for it!

I have no idea how to fix this. Seriously, I feel as though I haven't slept in days, all I do is sit awake, stare at his (and yours) beautiful face, and try to figure out a solution. Right now my only idea is to bash him over the head in the hopes of knocking loose whatever got knocked in the first place! And while my frustration level kind of wants to hit something over the head with a frying pan, I think adding trauma to his already traumatized brain might be counterproductive.

Tomorrow is his birthday Ollie! His birthday! We should be celebrating. We should be waking him up earlier than he'd normally like with a tag-teamed blow-job. And then let him go back to sleep while we make him his favorite brunch foods. And then letting him go back to sleep again while we head off to classes. Instead I'm going to spend another day pretending I'm okay so I don't upset him.

I'm not ok.

Yours,
Harry

-------------------------
Monday June 4, 2018

Draco,

How are you feeling after last night? Still thinking the combination of Ollie inside of you while you're inside of me is the best configuration? Or are you seeing the benefits of the both of you being inside of me at once? Insanely tight, dripping wet from the amount of lube needed, gliding your aching cock up against Ollie's own length, all of it encased in my tight heat?

It's alright if you have a preference obviously!

Weren't you pleasantly surprised by our amazing playroom? And possibly a little intimidated. I think the sex swing got you interested but the St. Andrew's Cross terrified you a bit. And if that wasn't scary enough, the extensive selection of impact implements displayed nearby seemed to stop your breathing for a moment. If it helps, most of the time those lovely toys are used BY YOU on MY SKIN. You've had your arse paddled a time or two. And you do enjoy a few light smacks with the flogger then feeling the tails dragged against the rosy skin.

Sorry, I need to stop talking about this right now. I don't want to cast an impotence spell at myself and since I'm about to teach a class I may have to if I don't get this problem in my pants calmed down a bit.

Speaking of spells. That's a bit concerning to me, and we will definitely have a nice long talk the three of us tonight when Oliver and I are done teaching, but you seem to have forgotten something quite important. Possibly the most self-identifying thing you've ever known. You're a wizard Darling. You are magical. It's how your pregnancies were possible. It's the culture I spoke of before where we wear robes. It's how Oliver and I take off so quickly it seems as though we just disappear.

I'm sorry if this freaks you out, but if I know you as well I as I think I do, I know that being alone to deal with scary concepts is how you get through things best. Let you come to terms with your emotions without having to pretend you're alright in front of others, then calm yourself before you have to actually talk about it in person. There's a set of beads in your nightstand, it's called a komboloi and I gave it to you years ago. It's a stress relief bracelet from Greece. You stroke the beads while thinking of something stressful and it should help keep you calm or calm you if you've already gotten upset.

You often need calming, because you come from a very long line of Drama Kings and Queens. Your last name is Malfoy, but your mum's maiden name is Black. My Godfather is a Black, that's Sirius the man with two babies you met at dinner that first night. Your mum Narcissa is probably the least dramatic Black I've ever met, the rest of them are absolute nutters. You have rows and rows of our closet devoted to costumes. When we were very young you hid in a tree for a long time, possibly hours, so you could jump out of it at exactly the right time to tease and make fun of me.

It's adorable and one of the many many many things I love about you, but the over the top emotions get a bit overwhelming for you occasionally. So, go hide in the back of our closet, have Muffy bring you a pint of Chubby Hubby, and I'll come get you this afternoon and bring you to the boarding school I teach at, some of our kids go to, and where you, myself, and Ollie attended. It will definitely be a lot to take in, so make sure you bring your komboloi along.

I'll see you soon my love.

Love forever and for always,
Harry

P.S. Don't worry, I promise you there are NO limitations on how much you're allowed to kiss Ollie and I. Neither of us will ever turn down kisses from you!

P.P.S. The gingers, Caelum and Gabriel, are NOT actually adopted. YOU carried both of them! Genetic matches the both of them Darling. Sorry to disappoint.

Tuesday June 5th - About 1 AM
Harry and Oliver,

I just woke up from a... nightmare? I'm shaking and a bit horrified that it might be a memory. See... in the dream, I was, erm... beating... Harry. Like not spanking as you've explained that I sometimes do, but actually using my fists to beat on his back and buttocks, then it seems like I forced myself on him and... strangled him...

I'm now sitting in bed clutching my heart because it won't stop racing. Am I such an abusive monster???

Earlier today was such an amazing experience, you both brought me to Hogwarts and explained magic to me, and the most staggering of all, I CAN DO MAGIC!!! You had me cast a few spells and they all worked!

There were a couple of students that hugged me, which was weird, but at least not the worst thing they could have done to me. Touching things - like the long table in the Great Hall, gave me flashes of Harry as a... teen? I mean there was one or two when he was this teeny tiny thing, but then there were a lot more when he was older and... I went to a loo at one point, and as I was washing my hands, I looked into the mirror and saw a flash of Harry looking at me in concern, which... Apparently made me want to murder him as we were suddenly having a fierce battle.

Remind me again how I went from hating Harry to married to him with a billion kids???

No wait... Maybe I don't really want to know...

Dozes off for a bit

Huh! I must have fallen back asleep, because now that I'm awake again, I realize that I just had that dream I had before - the first one I can remember having - in which I'm outside this palatial house and I'm trying to get in. Only I can't.

However, this time, rather than my mum watching me through the window, it's Oliver. So I started shouting at him to let me in, or at least come out and talk to me, but he just stood there, shaking his head. Then he put a finger to his lips and held up a glowing golden bundle, like he was telling me to be quiet so that I didn't wake the baby.

I turned around for a moment to see if maybe I could find a rock to break the window with, but there was nothing, and when I looked back at the window, there was a dragon in the reflection that I realized with a start was ME! It had a marmoset - of all things - on its head petting it.

That made me look at my hands, only they were wings, then I looked back at the window and inside was a tiny fox chasing a large elephant around. So then I looked up at the sky and saw a gorgeous shimmering dragon flying around with three smaller dragons behind her. The mother dragon landed so that I (back as a human I guess) could climb on her back and ride around. After a little while, she got tired of me there and shook me off into a lake in which I nearly drowned because I couldn't swim, but there were fish people and a giant squid of all things. The squid grabbed me around the waist, making me try to scream in terror as it threw me...

Into a dark place that was full of clothes and other things - my closet, I think. I was cowering in a corner, praying that the clothes and other things would hide me. Two or three figures passed by - as if they hadn't seen me - and just when I sighed in relief, they grabbed me and dragged me out and...

Everything goes blurry at that point, but then I was laying on the floor in pain as I watched them promise to come back every chance they got. But as I watched them, they turned to skulls that I spit on.

And at that point, I had had quite enough of that stupid bloody dream, so I shook myself awake to find that it was... nearly 6am.

Needing... I dunno, comfort I suppose, I turned to find Harry on one side of me, staring at me as if he'd been doing so for a while. I rolled onto him and whispered a plea to: "Make me feel better..."

So he did, waking Oliver up to help make me feel VERY good indeed. After that, I managed to get some dreamless sleep and finally woke up feeling refreshed. Now... I'm apparently under orders to make myself look as gorgeous as possible because we have special plans...

So, off to go do that!
Draco

Chapter End Notes

Can anyone decode that? ^_^ Tuesday June 5, 2018

Birthday Boy,

I know you don't remember that it's your birthday, but I remember, Oliver remembers, the rest of our family remembers, so we decided to be selfish and celebrate your birthday anyway. It helps that the selfishness still ends with you having a fun day, yummy food, and being surrounded by people who love and adore you.

Before I get into the fun part of writing about the celebrations, I wanted to help you come to terms with some of your dream memories.

You are definitely not abusive. We've had an active sex life since we got together. I am quite naturally submissive. I truly relish the parts of our sex life that have the dom/sub dynamic. We do often have very loving and/or vanilla sex. But I am very very fulfilled by submission. Luckily I fell in love with a man who's naturally dominant (you) and a man who's an amazing switch (Oliver). We've had almost two decades to play with all of our combined kinks. It's been plenty of time to try just about every single thing any of us have had even an inkling that we may enjoy it.

Since our Oliver married us, we've had the opportunity to discover even more kinks that we previously hadn't really tried.

However, when you have people who want to try pretty much every single kink that exists (with the exception of a few hard limits, no thank you to scat, I don't even need to try it to know that is NOT for me!) we are going to come across things that seem worth trying and then don't work out. Well, years and years ago, knowing I like submission, I LOVE impact play, and prefer my pleasure with a side of pain, we had you try fully beating me instead of our usual spanking. We had a long talk prior to that night, talked about what we would try, and the beating and breath play (the strangulation you spoke of) were negotiated and tried.

It is not something either of us enjoyed. You may have a penchant for dominance, but the pain and impact play is something you only seem to enjoy because you love how well I respond to it. You spank my arse raw because you have seen me fly into subspace and sob thankfully into your arms because it is so satisfying and wonderful for me. The beating, the breath play, went too far for both of us. It went from playing with the idea of pain feeling like pleasure into just feeling pain. I didn't fly into subspace, I fell into a foggy puddle of yuck.

We spoke in depth after that night, and we both agreed that full on beating as well as any sort of choking or breath play was something we weren't interested in trying again. The closest we've ever come to breath play since then is a bit of corsetry. Not choking, but just feeling breathless from the constricting corset.

I promise you, if you have any more dreams or memories and feel as though you have abused me, it has NEVER EVER EVER EVER happened. Everything we do is consensual. I submit because I love and trust you unconditionally. You've earned my trust. You own my body. You've never abused that trust.

As to your other dream, I have no idea what it's trying to tell you. I can explain some of the people or animals you saw. Maybe that will shed some light on what's happening. I just, I feel as though with all of your descriptions the answer is probably staring us in the eye. I just am not enough of a puzzle solver to be able to say "Oh, your dream contained ____? Aha! Here's the answer and your memories!"

Being a dragon and seeing a marmoset: since you finally know about magic we can explain this. In the past, you have used a magical potion to transform into a Dragon. It was amazing. It was awesome. Also, your name literally means Dragon and it's a nickname I have called you for a very long time. Pretty much the only nickname you've ever really allowed. Besides 'Master' but that's an honorific, not a nickname. Also, with magic, some witches or wizards learn to become animagis. Your animagus form is a marmoset. So when you saw yourself as a Dragon with a marmoset, you were literally seeing different versions of yourself.

Speaking of becoming an animagus, the fox and the elephant? Those are my (fox) and Oliver's (elephant) forms. If you'd like, we could each transform so you can see our forms in person. The kids particularly enjoy it when we transform, you could see how adorable the babies are when they try and fight over who gets to put me in their lap so they can pet the fluffy little fox.

The lake, the squid, and the merpeople seemed like a caricature of creatures you met and interacted with while at Hogwarts. There is a lake on the grounds, The Black Lake, and it is populated with merpeople, squids, and quite a few other creatures. Your dorms were actually underground and the windows looked out into the lake, so I'm sure you saw even more lake creatures than I did. You were never almost drowned by any of them, and you do know how to swim, so I'm not sure what the images meant, but at least you have a little background information.

The people who hurt you while you hid in your closet, that was an actual memory. I know the basics, but it's something you almost never speak of. They did hurt you, and they are now dead. You never have to be afraid of them again, they will have no more chances to come back and hurt you. I promise you.

Waking up from your third attempt at sleep, you seemed to be in a much better mood. You made yourself even more gorgeous than usual, you may be confused and missing memories, but your hands seem to know exactly what to do to get the best results from your naturally gorgeous self. Oliver and I took the day off of classes, we had actually requested the day off months ago so we didn't even have to go check in or ask for the day off. We just got to sleep together last night in our bed and wake up all together. Multiple times waking up in your case.

When you emerged glorious and ready from the loo, Oliver and I each took one of your hands and proceeded to take you on a romantic walk through the Manor grounds. I planned to show you some of your favorite locations, thinking maybe they'd jog your memories. You didn't seem to have your memory jogged at all, but every time we got to one of your favorite spots, you did let us know how beautiful you found the spot. When we got to the area we got married, you did seem to have a moment where your eyes went glassy and you started touching your wedding band.

You may not have gotten your memory back at that moment, but seeing you go all soft and sweet, like your body knew this place was special to us, meant there was no way I wasn't going to take you. Oliver and myself had to have you at that spot where we promised ourselves to you forever. I know we keep telling you that we have a very active sex life, but seeing as we showed up after our walk to your party with leaves in our hair and no one batted an eye, that should give you an idea of how often we shag no matter where we are.

I know you've been so overwhelmed with our massive family and the fact that you don't remember any of them. Hopefully the list I gave you earlier with their names, ages, physical descriptions, and a few facts about them was helpful.

More helpful, and apparently hilarious if your giggles were anything to go by, is what I forced all of your party guests to wear. If you were overwhelmed just by our children and grandchildren how hard was it going to be for you to keep our entire circle of friends, siblings, nieces and nephews, inlaws, coworkers, etc. straight? Well that's why I made everyone fill out one of those "Hello, my name is ____" name-tags with their names and how they know you.

I may have needed to make bigger nametags. Hermione, for example, filled hers out as "Hello, my name is Hermione. I am your boss, friend, sometimes lover, niece-in-law, and Godmother to your daughter Viona."

I think the thing that seemed to make you laugh the most was the amount of our children who filled theirs out as "Hello, my name is ____. I am your favorite child."

Now you're asleep, passed out after giggling yourself through quite a few glasses of champagne. I hope you enjoyed yourself tonight. But could you do me a favor and try to come back to us. I like this you. You're still yourself even without your memories. But I miss you so much. I miss your eyes lighting up with recognition and happiness when you see me or Ollie.

Happy birthday my Love, thank you for being born,
Harry

Wednesday June 6th
Dearest Harry,

Something weird just happened. I was back in the Manor checking on Draco between my classes when he said something like: "Are our four littles ALWAYS in the stables?"

I was leaning in to kiss him as he asked that and I immediately thought about the stables and how maybe I'd have time to stop in and check on the animals before returning to Hogwarts. Suddenly, I realized that Draco was in my mind with me.

"This is weird," he said as he looked around. "How did we get into the stables so quickly? Did one of us disappear and bring the other?"

I took a look around too and noticed that we definitely weren't in the real stables, and so, in my Mind Stables. "No, This is my mind. See that over there?"

"The cradle with the sleeping baby?" Draco asked as we walked over and looked at it.

Standing in front of the cradle, I took his hand in mine and held it as we simply stared at the baby. "We don't know if it's a boy or a girl yet, but that baby is the one currently inside me."

"Wait! You're PREGNANT?!" Draco asked incredulously, now staring at my small baby bump, and in my mind we were naked, so he could see it clearly. In fact, it glowed slightly.

I smiled at him warmly, feeling like I was radiating with love. "Yeah. You and Harry combined your blood into one sample so that you could BOTH get me pregnant, and that baby is the result of all three of us loving each other."

His eyes got a bit melty and watery all at once. "We're... We're going to have a baby that's all three of ours?"

I nodded in confirmation and kissed him. A moment later, he turned to stare at the baby with the most tender expression of love you've ever seen in your life.

"Aww... I'm looking forward to it. In the worst case scenario in which I never get my memories back, I'm going to still love and cherish all our kids, but this one will be the one I remember getting to hold as a baby."

"Even remembering nothing, you still want a baby?" I asked in surprise.

"Yeah... I... I think... I think family is very important to me. Like I was raised to ensure that my family survives no matter what. Maybe that's why I agreed to have a million kids," Draco murmured, sounding lost in thought.

I had to look away because I was so overcome with emotion that I needed to breathe and get it under control. That's when I noticed a particular door off to the side. A door that sort of shocked me.

I turned back to tell Draco, but he was nowhere to be found in my mind. I blinked a couple of times and realized that I was no longer in my mind either. Instead, I was looking at Draco, who was down on his knees and rubbing my abdomen lovingly.

"Hello in there, this is your daddy Draco. I can't wait to meet you, so please grow healthy and strong."

I grinned. "You know, he can't hear you yet because he doesn't have ears."

"That's alright, I'm going to tell him or her every day until it doesn't matter anymore," Draco stated, looking up at me with a loving smile. "So just get used to it and hold still, otherwise I'll just have to drag you to that room the two of you showed me and tie you up so you can't get away."

That made me so happy for a good three seconds, before I remembered that this was all my fault and burst out crying. "I'm so sorry, Draco! I didn't mean to break you! I miss you! This is all my fault! If I hadn't made you hit your head, you -!"

He put a finger to my lips and shook his head. Then he kissed me. "Harry made sure to explain it to me, that you and I were wrestling around in bed when I fell out and hit my head. It was an accident. Blaming yourself does nothing but make you feel bad, and only a stupid bloody arsehole would blame himself when the actual accident victim doesn't feel that way. So pull yourself out of that bloody pit you're wallowing in and grow a pair! You're carrying a baby that needs you to be calm and loving at all times, yeah?"

I gave him a weak smile. He was right, of course, but it was easier said than done. That said, since he seemed to be in an affectionate mood, I kissed him as long as I could before I had to get back to Hogwarts for my next class.

See you during our next mutual break when I plan to shag you in the nearest bit of privacy I can find!

Love,
Wednesday June 6th
Dear Harry and Oliver,

Yesterday's party was fun. I loved getting tipsy and dancing and singing. I mean I didn't remember ANY of the words, but that was part of the fun, trying to make up the words as I went, haha.

At one point, Pansy and Blaise were standing in a corner chatting with me, and I was amused that Pansy's nametag said: "Hello my name is Pansy, I'm your best bitch forever, your first shag, and all around your favorite person in the world."

So I told her about the dream I had in which we were shagging and I looked over to see Blaise stroking himself, but his size was so impossible that it simply HAD to be an exaggeration of the dream.

Blaise, who's nametag said: "Blaise; ACTUAL best mate, your nephew in law, hung like a horse, the best shag in the world, and the middle name of YOUR next child." Roared with laughter.

"No, you probably dreamt it accurately." Pansy assured me with a grin. She reached into Blaise's trousers, shook her hand vigorously a few times, and pulled out something that looked like an elephant's trunk.

"BLOODY FUCKING HELL!!!" I shouted in shock.

Pansy gave me a catty smirk. "You should see when he and Neville try to take turns topping each other!"

"Mmm..." Charlie, dragon tamer, rider, and occasional Anijuice dragon (according to his nametag) moaned in anticipation. "Actually, I would like to see that again…"

Hi My Name Is Neville (florist) raised a brow. "Oi... should you be playing with that at a party where there are so many kids that could look over and see what you're doing?"

"We're in a corner," Pansy stated dismissively. "The kids would have to really come over and stand against the wall to get a good look. And if they tried, I could always just hex them blind temporarily."

"Pansy..." Neville murmured, rolling his eyes and shaking his head.

Blaise moaned happily. "In another minute, it won't matter anymore anyway..."

You know... I have the strangest feeling that this is completely normal for me.

"You're cleaning that up!" I stated, sort of looking forward to it. "Does he gush like a bloody fountain?"

"Watch and find out," Blaise answered a husky voice with a sultry grin.

So I did and wow!

Anyway, what I really want to talk about is the weirdest dream I just had. It was... like a daydream, I guess??? I mean I thought I was awake, but then I was dreaming. Dream Oliver told me we were in his mind, but since that's impossible, I know it had to be a dream. I'm just not sure when it actually ended.
In any case, you both said you would be home soon, and since the babies seem hungry, I'm going to see if I can find a pram or something and stroll them around until I can find the bloody kitchen. There MUST be one, right?

See you soon!
Draco
Chapter 300

Chapter Summary

Oliver has the key.

Chapter Notes

I find this supremely fitting for the 300th chapter ^_^

Wednesday June 6, 2018

My Ollie,

Gods damn-it Love! You can't just casually mention a secret shocking door in your mind stables and then expect me to wait patiently to find out what you saw! Do you even know me at all?

Okay, that's probably unfair. You were shocked by Draco slipping into your mind in the first place, and then when he slipped back out, you were distracted by his actions towards the baby. I have to ask though, did you think he wouldn't be happy about the baby? He's the one who got the potion to combine our DNA. He's the one who had it ready on our honeymoon because he knew you'd been ready for forever. I know you (and I) have a lot of issues with self worth, but Draco loves you. He loves our baby. And even without his memories, he's still the same man you fell in love with.

A man who may try and act unaffected. A man who often hides his softer emotions behind his pretty mask. But if you think that man is anything less than one hundred percent in love with you and with our baby, you should probably go have a few extra sessions with your mind healer!

When are you going to understand both Draco and I are in this for life? That we are having this baby with you, not because YOU want it, but because we both want this baby with our husband we're madly in love with.

I am not upset you were wrestling with Draco and he knocked his head.

I am not really upset you forgot to tell me all about the shocking door in your head.

I am not mad at you that your self worth seems to make you question our devotion to you and our family.

I AM a little mad that I haven't gotten my aforementioned mid-day break shag!

Hurry up and find me so I don't feel so empty.

Yours,
Harry

-----------------------------
Draco,

Once again, now that you have magic I can explain something to you. You will never be able to find the kitchens. You can ask Muffy to pop you into the kitchen. I, or one of our family members (except Orion), can lead you to the kitchen, but one of your totally insane ancestors made it perfectly clear that the kitchens are not the place for the heir of the manor.

Yeah, there is a weird spell on the house, or on you, or on the kitchen itself ... I'm not completely sure how it works ... but the very memory of the location of the kitchens is charmed to not stay in your head. Bloody elitist, sexist, pureblooded morons.

Anyway, you also should probably know that the "dream" you had about being in Ollie's mind? Completely real. Some wizards have the ability to enter another witch or wizard's mind. It's called Legilimency. They only way to keep a skilled Legilimens out is to use the mirror skill to Legilimency; Occlumency. Either an immediate shield where you're actively trying to keep the person out, or a very organized mind with shields permanently in place to keep others out. You are a very skilled Legilimens. You were legitimately into the mostly organized mind of our Oliver.

Now, this is the portion of the email where I am certain you're thinking I am going to be upset about or surprised at the events of the party. Maybe jealous you watched Blaise be tossed off? Or shocked at the fact that it happened at all?

No, none of this is surprising in any way. I actually almost started this conversation with "I can't believe Pansy just wanked Blaise off in the middle of the party!" but realized nothing about it was surprising. And unghhhhhhh, it is making me so hard thinking about some exhibitionism. It's been so bloody long since you've taken me in front of people. I know you don't necessarily remember taking me in any way (except for what we've done over the last few days) but you thoroughly enjoy buggering me in front of people. Showing off how you own me and how well I perform for you.

Damnit! You're at the Manor and Ollie still hasn't found me for a mid-day shag!

Hard and Frustrated,
Harry

Thursday June 7th
Imzadis,

Good news!

Since you are both teaching at the moment, I cannot be certain, but you may have actually known or suspected that I'd wake up fully me today. See...

Oliver held the key - figuratively. Last night after dinner, we spent about an hour or so reading stories to all the littles and getting them tucked into their respective beds. Once Lily, Caelum, Atreyu, and Persephone were in their room, probably pretending to be asleep long enough for us to go away, and Nora, Gabriel, Dylan, and Morgana were snuggled up in our bed, Oliver decided to try something.

He asked the two of us to get comfortable on the sofa and drink hot chocolate to relax. Once we were nice and cozy and in a rather amorous mood - as evidenced by me letting my hands wander wherever they liked - Oliver set his mug aside and knelt in front of us. I was at that moment, laying with my chest covering your reclining lower half, Harry, and my face resting on your chest, listening to your heartbeat.

Oliver stroked my cheek and murmured: "Hey, look me in the eyes for a moment..."

I shifted my head just enough to comply, and my inherent and well practiced Legilimency skills kicked in and slipped me into his mind, which he had prepared for by having his Mind Stables ready for me to enter. Happy and encouraged, he took me by the hand and kissed me, which is interesting in that it feels nearly as good as the real thing.

"I know you don't remember it, but not too long ago, you did me a favor by slipping into my mind and helping me organize a bit. More importantly, while you were in here, you brought me into YOUR mind," Oliver informed me.

He turned and pointed at a door that was painted in shades of blue and green and had a cleverly camouflaged dragon in flight on it. The dragon was painted in the same shades, but the outline of its shape contrasted the rest of the pattern on the door just enough that you could give it a good look and figure out what was going on.

That's not the important part, the important part was what Oliver said: "That's the door you used to bring me into your mind, and I suppose that doing so must have created the link permanently, because it's still here. What do you say we try it?"

I hesitated for a moment, because what if it didn't work? Then I gathered my courage and nodded. "Worth a shot, I suppose."

Nodding in return and holding my hand, Oliver led me over to it, but it was locked. I sighed in disappointment because it seemed that my Mind was adamantly going to refuse to let me in, no matter what. But Oliver didn't give up.

"You know, most people hide keys someplace nearby in case they lock themselves out of their house. So..." he trailed off and started looking around. He looked in boxes and under rocks and piles of straw. He looked on top of wooden support beams and in an odd barrel that was just randomly in the stables - empty.

Then he looked over at me and gasped. "Were you wearing that earlier? No, you couldn't have been, I was holding that hand and it wasn't there."

Rather than answer his babble, I simply watched as he returned to my side and took my hand in his, lifting it to give it a kiss. This brought to my attention that I was now wearing an odd bracelet made out of green beads with silver accents.

"Harry mentioned this recently, but this is your Komboloi. He gave it to you so that you could stroke it rather than run and hide in your closet whenever you were feeling emotional. I wonder..." He gently pulled the Komboloi off my wrist and held it up to the light that was streaming through a window so we could get a good look at it. Then he turned and pressed it to the door with the dragon on it.

There was an overtly loud sound, a bit like a lock clicking, but... somehow different. Then there was a creaking. The door oh so slowly opened - a millimeter at a time. Eventually it was open wide enough for Oliver to poke his head through it.

"I was right! This is definitely your Mind Palace!" He turned to grin at me. "Come on! I'll show you around."
Feeling almost afraid for some reason, I took a deep 'breath' and placed my hand in his. He led me into my Mind Palace and helped me sort through a few boxes of memories (that all seemed to be rather recent). Logically, if the closer boxes were recent memories, then the further away ones should be older, right? I led him over to a dark corner, curious as to what might be in those memories.

Oliver gave the creepy black box a skeptical squint. "Are you certain you want to know what's in that one?"

I shrugged. "It's a memory. I need to remember them all eventually, why not start with the dark ones and work my way to the shimmering ones? Then I am left thinking about the happiest ones rather than the saddest."

"I guess..." he murmured vaguely.

I opened the box. As if we were in a Pensieve, figures formed around us so we could watch the memory. It was exactly the same memory of me being hurt that I had dreamt about in my crazy jumbled up dream. Oliver had silent tears running down his face.

"W... Why does it go blurry in the middle?" He asked, hiccupped, and then added: "NOT that I want to see the actual rape..."

I bit my lip in thought as the answer formed in my mind. "It's because I literally removed the painful part of the memory, only leaving enough to know what happened. I actually have that in a box in my actual closet, if you ever happen to want to see it. I can understand needing to know the details even if you don't really want to know them."

Oliver shook his head and wiped away his tears. "No, I DON'T need to know that."

I smiled faintly and kissed him. Then we turned to look at other memories, except that the next little black box that I picked up revealed a very familiar face - one that lacked a nose and had red eyes. This shook Oliver so much that he disappeared from my mind and - presumably - couldn't get back in with me in such deep meditation at that point.

I can only assume that it took me the rest of the night to finish sorting through my memories and accepting them as part of me. Because when I woke up, I was no longer laying on Harry on the sofa, but safely tucked into our bed, and it was right about the normal time for me to wake up. Thus...

I'm awake. And back to normal.

As much as I want to immediately rush to you and give you both kisses so passionate that we thoroughly scandalize all the students, I think that doing so would basically ruin both of you for any sort of teaching for the rest of the day, and so, I'm going to stay here at the Manor, do some Yoga, go dance in the ballroom, and then take a nice long shower in which I plan to enjoy remembering some of my better memories until I reach a satisfying conclusion. Maybe if I'm lucky, one or both of you will pop in at the perfect time.

I love you, I MISSED you (or rather me, I suppose), and I can't wait to see you both after classes are over.
Always and forever,
Draco
Everyone is so happy that Draco got his memory back.

Thursday June 7, 2018

My Dragon!

Oh thank all the deities that have ever existed or ever will exist that you are back with us! I tried to maintain as much calm as possible. I tried exuding the calm, steady strength our Ollie does. I tried wearing the Malfoy mask I have perfected over the years of being an official part of the Malfoy family. I used every ounce of self control I've ever developed and used it as much as I could over these last days so I wouldn't stress you out.

Your head was already a bit of a mess and I didn't want to add to it. So I pretended all was well and that everything would work itself out. Hopefully your memories were gone enough that you couldn't tell I was poorly faking that.

I vented and cried a bit to Ollie. We commiserated a bit about how much we missed you and how very scared we were for you. What if you never got your memories back? While I knew we could fall in love with this different you, what if without your memories you decided you didn't love US? But I couldn't completely break down to Ollie either. As you know, the adorable idiot was certain the entire thing was his fault. I wasn't going to go on and on and on about how horrible it was that your memories were gone when he felt personally responsible for them being gone.

But I just received your email a little bit ago and I am so very very relieved. Yes, after last night, I had high hopes that you would wake up with all of your memories, but I wasn't one hundred percent sure. I got your email, finished up my class, then went into my office and sobbed myself silly for about a half an hour. I've got about ten minutes left before my next class starts filtering in. And once this upcoming class is over, I am going to go find Ollie and drag him with me so we can welcome you home.

Don't worry, this next class is my actual last one of the day, I'm not skipping out early or anything. And Ollie actually finishes about ten minutes before I do. I know that because most Thursdays I end just before him in enough time that I find him in the broom shed and we have filthy fun almost every time!

I do keep trying to figure out what happened and why. Did the head bump cause the memory loss? Would you have lost your memories if there hadn't been a link? Or would you have lost your memories and just not had a fail safe way back to them? If you hadn't had a way into your mind palace through Oliver, would you have been restricted from your memories for the rest of time? How did the komboloi factor in? Ugh!! A million Who What When Where Why How questions are streaming through my brain. But ....

And in about an hour and a half, I am going to use my body to worship every inch of your body. I have to remind myself that you're okay and what better way than with a shag in the middle of the ballroom? Mirrored walls, beautiful lights, sexy music. Okay, gotta go before I cream my pants in anticipation.

Your husband that you actually remember!!!
Harry

P.S. Sorry I didn't come running as soon as I heard you were back but with only two weeks until the end of term (two weeks and a day) I can't miss another minute of class. Eek only two more weeks of teaching then I can be a kept man!

Saturday June 9th
My loves,

It seems like the 7th was an excellent day to remember everything. It means that there was an extra reason for everyone to celebrate on what turned out to be a big combined bash for Mahafsoun and Sammy. The two of them get along rather well anyway, and since our California crew was here for the 'crisis' anyway, it just made sense to them (Sammy and Mahafsoun) to spend the morning together doing fun things before coming back for the party.

In any case, it's been a few days since I got my memories back, and I've been thinking about those questions you asked, Harry, and while I can't be certain, here's what I think:

Hitting my head must have initially damaged the part of my brain responsible for memories, causing my mind - or maybe my magic - to lock up my Mind Palace in order to protect them from ACTUALLY being erased or damaged beyond repair.

I think the key was ALWAYS the Komboloi, because it's THE most important thing you have ever given me, Harry - aside from your love and all our kids. From the moment you gave it to me, I wore it almost constantly for YEARS and continually poured my magic, my thoughts, and my love for you into it. It helped calm and soothe me through so many emotional or traumatic times. I actually think that if I had followed your advice and simply taken it out of my drawer and brought it in my closet, I might have spontaneously 'woken up' due to a thought/memory/magic power overload.

But since my Mind was stubbornly locking me out, and I didn't think to try holding my Komboloi (after all, I didn't remember how important it is to me), the door in Oliver's mind was actually a bit of a fluke. That was honestly a rookie mistake. I know better than to leave access to my mind in another person like that, but... Thinking back on it, even though it wasn't intentional, I think unconsciously, I was trying to prove to Oliver that I trusted him with every part of me. That he COULD use that door and enter my mind if he wanted to, and I wouldn't get mad.

It just so happens that he was brilliant enough to notice it in his mind and realize that it could be used to help me. I think that even if he hadn't, I would have eventually either touched my Komboloi and triggered my memories, or I would have had one of those dreams where I was trying to get into my Mind Palace and noticed that I was wearing my Komboloi and tried using it like a key.

Maybe. The part where it was a key might have taken me a while to figure out.

In any case, thanks to you, Oliver my love, I'm back in possession of all my memories.
Today, while you were off tying up some loose strings for your lesson plans for the upcoming week, Harry, and probably also in a kitchen somewhere baking some biscuits, I took Oliver by the hand and dragged him to the ballroom with me. I wanted to dance with him, but I also wanted to sing to him and basically express my love and gratitude to him for helping me get my memories back.

So, when I had him in my arms - after a few upbeat dances - swaying to a slower beat, I started singing a song that the enchanted instruments immediately recognized and started to play the music to.

"It's not where you come from, it's where you belong, nothing I would trade, I wouldn't have it any other way, you're surrounded by love and you're wanted, so never feel alone, you are home with me, right where you belong."

I sang the rest of the song to him, but after the initial chorus, I changed the lyrics just slightly to: "It's not where you come from, it's where you belong, nothing we would trade, we wouldn't have it any other way, you're surrounded by love and you're wanted, so never feel alone you are home with us, right where you belong."

Oh Harry, our silly elephant started crying and gave me a kiss so tender and full of love that one would think he was still blaming himself for that accident while we were wrestling around. So, I tried to reassure him by making sweet sweet love on a wisely conjured cushion on the floor of the ballroom. It was wonderful and took a lot of time to accomplish ^_^

You know how you suggested that I should come up with an anniversary to celebrate with just Oliver? Well I think that will be today: The day that Oliver FINALLY accepted that the two of us have a solid relationship that is every bit as equal and loving as the one I have with you - or the one you have with him, for that matter. I saw it in him when things just... clicked. It was like a huge burden was lifted off his shoulders and he suddenly realized that he was free.

So, that said, Oliver insists that the two of us (me and you) spend a couple hours or so tomorrow on a date, or maybe just snuggling up in bed - as he feels that I might have been so focused on reassuring him, that I may have neglected to properly reconnect with you. And... he might be right. I do feel like I need a few hours of making love to just you to reassure myself that we both still exist and are in love as much as we ever were.

What do you think?

You're playing so cool, obeying every rule, dig way down in your heart, you're burnin' yearnin' for some -somebody to tell you, that life ain't passin' you by, I'm tryin' to tell you it will if you don't even try,

Draco
Chapter 302

Chapter Summary

Harry is NOT turning down alone time with Draco ^_^

Sunday June 10, 2018

My Draco,

What do I think about you needing a few hours of making love to me to reassure yourself that we are still as in love as we ever were? The only appropriate answer to that is 'yes please!' I really thought you were the smart one Draco Lucius!

Here's the thing; I love that Ollie wants you and I to have a chance to reconnect after missing you for all that time. I think it's very sweet that after he had his day with you yesterday, he wants me to have that same time with you. I think it's wonderful that you want to devote so much time to me and to our relationship. However, I have to be honest, I don't necessarily feel the need to reassure myself of 'us.'

Don't get me wrong, I am NOT going to say no to a day of being made love to. I am not going to say no to a day where you are going to take it easy from all of your other commitments to remind me that I am a priority. But - while I missed you very much and I am quite relieved you're back - I had faith this is how it would all work out and I personally don't need the reassurance that I think Oliver needed. I think, if anything, I needed the reassurance that OLIVER was handling this alright. And I needed reassurance that YOU are handling this influx of memories coming back to you alright. I had a lot of moments of pulling a Draco and hiding in our closet to cry while you were missing. I got all my tears out and I am just filled with happiness and relief.

But like I said, I AM going to take advantage of your offer and get shagged into the mattress for hours on end today. Because I am not stupid.

I'm so unbelievably happy that you and Oliver figured out your special day. It's a wonderful thing that he finally lost that doubt that was weighing him down. I know I talked a big game about wanting us each to have some special days for our individual spokes of the triad but a part of me was worried I might feel irrationally jealous when it came down to it. I was certainly going to smother those feelings if they popped up, but I was a bit worried my logical side would war with my overemotional side.

Hearing about your reconnection yesterday, your beautiful singing and dancing, and what I'm sure was a delightful shag did nothing but fill me with joy for both of you. I could not have possibly been less jealous. I truly can't wait until this anniversary comes around next year. I'll watch the children (including our little caboose who should be an absolutely delightful almost six month old by that time) and relish in remembering the day Ollie finally realized he belonged to Draco every bit as much as I do. The day Oliver realized just how much you love him.

I had been questioning a bit why Oliver would marry someone he didn't think loved him. Why would he marry me if he thought I didn't love him as much as I do you, or you if he believed you didn't love him as much as you do me. And I think I've finally realized that he was completely aware of the fact that we both love him. He didn't doubt our love. He just doubted that the amount we have for him could possibly be as much as we have for each other. It's how I often was perfectly content knowing I was our babies' second favorite Daddy and how I'm now perfectly content with being their third favorite Daddy! I am alright coming in second and third since I know they absolutely love and adore me, just not quite as much as they adore you two. Ollie was this same way, he knew we loved him, but thought the love for him was less intense, all encompassing, or unconditional as our love for the other.

Please be aware, this is not an attempt on my part to fish for compliments or assurances that our babies love me. I know they love me. I am not the baby guy. That's okay with me. They are my heart and soul, and I've always said our children are brilliant, which means they're smart enough to pick some seriously awesome men to love the most!

But Ollie, our love, you are not second place in either of our hearts. Silly Oliver, you are so beloved. And it sounds like you're finally aware of that. Thank goodness. You are so amazing, you deserve to know how loved you are.

I'm sure it's been hard for you Oliver ....

... side note: I addressed this to Draco because he was sleeping before I started writing and Ollie was nearby but now Ollie went off to do something or other and now I'm addressing him directly. I know my emails are confusing sometimes, I go from speaking directly to one of you then switching to the other - sometimes addressing you both - and I think even occasionally just talking at the universe ...

As I was saying, I'm sure it's been hard for you Oliver, you have a lifetime of memories seeing Draco and I interact. From our schooldays rivalry, to being on opposite sides of the war. You saw us throughout the years at galas and Unity House meet and greet days. Not to mention it's hard not to follow our lives and love if you so much as open up a newspaper in the wizarding world. Now you have almost two decades of memories of seeing our love. You were what, fourteen the first time you saw how obsessed with each other we were.

But I have to admit I'm a bit jealous of the two of your relationship. Draco and I started from nemeses and had to overcome years of loathing each other to get to a place of love. The two of you got to start fresh and grow your love from the ground up, not buried halfway down to bedrock. I had to fight my way to where we are, but Ollie just got to have your love Draco. I wouldn't change our lives, but I wonder if we would have fallen in love sooner if we hadn't had to overcome our preconceived notions of the other.

Oh well, no use crying over spilt blood .... get it? Because both Draco and I have violently spilled the other one's blood! Good one right? No? Too far? Yeah, I was going for gallows humor and I think it just came out ugly. Sometimes I make a dark joke, it hits, and everyone laughs. And sometimes I joke about the worst period of all of our lives and totally kill the mood.

Sorry loves.

Anyway, long story ... well it's still long because it's me ... Oliver and I will never have the exact same relationship I have with Draco. Draco and I will never have the same relationship either of us has with Oliver. I will never have the same relationship with either of you that you have with each other. We have to be alright with that. We are three different people who are madly in love. We are at our best when we're all together. That is beautiful and it's enough for me.

Okay, now that all the heavy stuff has been beaten to death, let's talk about super fun stuff!
Babies!

Or just the one baby, but nameS!

So, first of all, our sweet Oliver has not had the chance to name any babies. Whatever you pick Love, I will go along with it. I will only reserve my right to veto if you pick something truly terrible. But I doubt that will happen, so I'm not particularly worried.

But just because I think Oliver should have this chance to choose his baby’s name, doesn't mean I don't have thoughts and ideas. I know Draco promised me a day of snuggles and shagging just the two of us, but for at least some of the day, I'd really like it if all three of us could cuddle up. I need to talk to my baby and I’d like to kiss and hold each other while we argue names!

So, we have two children with Draco in their name (Orion Draco and Draco Jr), we have three of the four father's represented as middle names (Draco Lucius, Sirius James, and Caelum Arthur), most of the kids are Malfoys, Ollie you have two Woods so far (Cassie and Parker), and there are two Potters (Gabe and Dylan). Do you want this baby to be a Wood? A Malfoy? A Malfoy-Wood? Does your family magic have any requirements of an heir? Provided your magic didn't already allow Cassie or Parker to be your heir (it can be awfully picky about blood just wanting to make sure you don't get thrown for a loop like I did with the Potter heir problem).

Ollie do you want this baby to be named for you? Either first name, middle name, or both? You know I am not a huge fan of doing the naming people after others thing, which is why we don't have a Harry! But again, whatever you'd like. We can do an Oliver with a different middle name, an Oliver Leonard (which would also give him his Grandpa's name as a middle name obviously) or if baby is a girl we can do Olivia as a first or middle name. Olivia Iris if you wanted to honor your mum.

And I do have to put my foot down, I don't care if you lost a drunken bet Draco, unless Ollie wants it to happen, we are NOT giving our baby the middle name Blaise. If Oliver ever changes his mind about playtime, I will personally make it up to Blaise ... hehe. And if we never play around again, I will make it up to Blaise by buying him something shiny.

Right now I have been absolutely obsessed with girl names (which means baby will probably be a boy!). I love the names Quinn, Paige, and a few versions of Mia - It's a little bit different but I kind of like the name Miabella. Olive Quinn? Paige Iris? Miabella Leanne?

And the other thing I've been thinking about a lot ... now that I officially know some of my own heritage, I've been interested in traditional Pakistani names. Shahlyla means Princess or Queen of the night. Inaya means concern or care. And in boys names, I am kind of in love with the name Yeraz which means dream.

Okay, I have plans to reconnect with one of my loves today, so I should probably go get ready before I drop all the way down the baby name rabbit hole. Hurry up and wake up, Draco, so we can climb back into bed for snuggles and shags!

And uh, I can't write it in the correct alphabet so I'll do my best to write it as it sounds ...
Maim tuhanu pi'ara karada ham,
Harry

Sunday June 10th,
Oh my Harry,
Oliver, if you are reading this because you are part of the email group, but think that you're intruding on a private email, I hereby give you permission to perv on our private times.

Today was set aside - at least partially - for the two of us to reconnect. I had implied that that would involve us making slow and lazy Sunday love for a few hours, but in actuality, when it came right down to it, I knew we needed something else. So, I took you by the hand as I slipped out of bed - naked and still a bit sweaty from sleeping under the blankets during the hot time of year - and led you up the stairs to our play room.

Once there, I ordered you to strip off completely and put on a cock cage. I know it's not your favorite, and to be honest, it's not mine either, but I wanted to set a certain mood. Once ready - and whimpering, softly because you were trying to hold it back - I ordered you to run a bath for me, and then once it was ready, scrub me up very thoroughly. I gave you permission to touch me in anyway you liked, so long as I ended up clean.

So you lathered, scrubbed, and rinsed off every millimeter of my body, using your hands to ensure that absolutely no soap remained on my shaft nor any part of my privates. I let you have all the fun fondling me you wanted, honestly relaxing and enjoying every moment. Eventually, you were frustrated enough with the teasing of yourself that you helped me out of the tub and used a towel and your magic to dry me off completely without over-drying any part of me. As you did, you gave bits of my body kisses and tiny licks.

Then I let you choose what you wanted me to wear, and you dressed me up in one of my best suits, complete with my favorite waistcoat and tie. Now that I was properly in master mode, it was time to spank you. But I wasn't in the mood to just spank you until you went flying. No. I wanted to make a sort of love to you as I did so.

Thus, I would spank you a few dozen times, balancing on the very edge of gentle yet hard. I know you like it when I work into rather hard and painful impact play, but I didn't want to do much more than sting and give you a rosy glow. After you turned a lovely rosy shade, I stopped to kiss and lick your arse and the small of your back. Back and forth between the two, I spanked and kissed/licked you, over and over, until I was ready to move on.

"Oi, mutt, hop up onto the bed," I commanded, pointing firmly to leave no doubt that I expected to be obeyed.

You seemed to be slightly in puppy mode as you complied, hopping on the bed on all fours and even turning a couple of circles before I took you in hand and bound your arms and legs to the bed. You pouted a bit, but didn't protest nor complain.

Once you were secure, I decided that the time was right to remove your cage. I was somewhat reminiscing about our first time together, in that I had you tied up and was having my way with you however I liked. The only difference is that this time, I was still fully dressed in the suit you had chosen for me.

In no rush in the slightest, I worshiped your shaft, casting a denial spell on you so that you could not find release until I deemed the time right. It was my pleasure to use my mouth on you until you looked utterly wrecked and desperate. Then - when you started begging almost frantically - I relented and opened my trousers just enough to allow my aching and needy shaft free from its prison. He'd been begging me to get inside you already for about an hour.

Finally, I was in position to sink into your divine warmth. I maintained an iron grip on my inner monster until I had slowly bottomed out; I know you wouldn't have minded in the long run, loving when your arse is sore, but I didn't want to start by tearing you up. Once I was certain that you were well lubed and enjoying things, I let go of all my control and just let myself pound into you until my inner monster was sated. That's when I might have considered pulling out and waiting to recover before suggesting another round, except, I didn't feel like I'd had enough yet.

So, rather than withdraw, I simply slowed way down and enjoyed rocking slowly in and out of you, even as I kissed you so many times that my head started spinning from lack of oxygen. Probably an hour passed like that before your needy little cries got desperate. Happy and almost ready to be done myself, I took the denial spell off of you and let you have your orgasm, which triggered one for me as well.

When we were done, I collapsed onto your helpless body and simply lay there recovering, and snuggling up to your warmth and listening to you pant breathlessly. Suddenly, you started giggling. "I made a mess all over your suit!"

"Yes, you did. I might have to make you wash it properly," I murmured, kissing you.

"I might need a nap..." you murmured, sounding happy and very lethargic.

I kissed you again. "You go ahead and nap. I'll go check on Oliver and the kids."

Even as I cast spells to release you, you purred and cast spells to clean my suit, put me away, and properly refasten my trousers.

"Love you," I murmured before kissing you again.

"Love you too," you mumbled sleepily.

Feeling full to bursting with love, I staggered my way to the stables, where Oliver was playing with the kids as they all cared for the animals. He took one look at me, smirked at the fact that my hair was apparently as wild as yours normally is, and then came over to claim a few kisses from me.

"If you're ready to talk names with Harry, feel free to go wake him from his nap and snuggle with him. As for me, I hate talking names until I know if its going to be a boy or a girl. That said, I have some thoughts... That I am definitely saving for when the time is right."

He grinned at me. "I think I can wait until he wakes up on his own. After all, he never sleeps enough."

"Right?!" I asked and agreed at the same time.

I sat down on a barrel to write this email even as they continued on with what they were doing. The kids all came over to me as they liked and claimed hugs and kisses. All in all, I'm having a great day, how about you? Come to the stables and find us when you're ready.

My world's on fire, how 'bout yours? That's the way I like it 'cuz I'll never get bored,

Draco
Chapter 303

Chapter Summary

Harry is counting down, and Draco and Oliver have a pretty serious conversation.

Chapter Notes

See the end of the chapter for notes

Monday June 11, 2018

My Brats,

Okay fine, you are both no fun at all! Wanting to wait until Ollie gets a bit further along to really start discussing names. Come on you guys! He's thirteen weeks! That's already well into the second trimester and only five to seven weeks until we get a chance to find out which version baby we're starting out with. I wannnnnnnnaaaaaaaaa talk about naaaaaaaaames!

Fine, I'll stop my tantrum. But if either of you are interested, I have a solid fit ready and waiting.

If we don't want to talk about names could we talk about something else? Like the fact that Oliver got through his ENTIRE first trimester with ZERO morning sickness. Oh, maybe he was one of those pregnant people who didn't have it in the morning but had it a different time of day and therefore didn't want to call it morning sickness? No, just zero nausea no matter what he ate or the people around him ate.

Maybe we could talk about the fact that you have gained pretty much exactly the amount of weight that Rowe wants you to gain at this point? You haven't lost weight from throwing up, but you also haven't gained a ton of weight from overeating or being too tired to do anything but sit around on your perky little arse. No, you have energy to spare. You get plenty of sleep but not too much. And especially with your job, you've managed to keep yourself beautifully fit.

As one of the people who gets to see you naked on the reg ... I thoroughly appreciate how gorgeous your body is. Especially now with that sweet little curve below your belly button. Gods you get me going with how utterly beautiful you are carrying the life we created together.

If we're not talking names, maybe we can start to have a different discussion. We have our three month wedding anniversary coming up in a little less than two weeks. Yeah, three months. And if you don't want to have this conversation until we hit the three month mark that's fine. Hopefully you're not upset that I've brought it up now. I erm, well ever since your other universe doppelganger game to visit I can't get the image of two sexy Olivers out of my head.

Whatever you need to do to feel comfortable, even if you are NEVER comfortable, is fine by me. And I get why you might want to do things with your other universe twin without an audience. But Merlin what I wouldn't give to watch. I promise I'd be so quiet (unless you wanted an interactive audience) and I wouldn't touch anyone or anything that you didn't want me to touch. I just cannot get the idea out of my head.

I really thought when the three month mark got closer that Draco would be the one to bring up the idea of sexy times, well I was wrong. I want to see Oliver do filthy depraved things while I watch. I want to see him moan and cry and writhe and beg. I want to see you lose yourself in pleasure.

But again, I have to reiterate, nothing will ever happen if you don't want it to happen Love.

Sorry, I am trying to keep my mind on fun things like shagging and baby names because it distracts me from how unbelievably annoyed I am right now.

We are less than two weeks from end of term. Finals are happening starting this Thursday. What have these students spent the last nine or so months doing? I can promise you it isn't studying! It's like they had no idea finals would ever happen and they're panicking. I can give the little ages a pass because maybe they're not as used to the finals process, but sixth years? Sixth years! Apparently they were surprised by the tests that happen annually.

So, I have spent my entire day so far either dealing with moody, exhausted kids moaning because they aren't prepared. Or I get to deal with kids begging for an extension on the tests or projects, or asking for extra tutoring. Uhhhh, the test is in three days, I'll do what I can but I'm not a miracle worker! There's a reason I spent the last nine months teaching, because it's too much information to learn in three days.

Ughhhhhhhhhhh!

Will one of you knock me unconscious please? No? I have to go to my office hours where I will deal with even more whiny kids? Fine!

Crankily yours,
Professor Malfoy-Wood
For eleven more days!

Tuesday June 12th
Our Harry,

As you know, Oliver is doing his very best not to gloat over the fact that his classes do not have finals. After all, what can he possibly test his students on that he hasn't seen every time they have a class? Can you call out: "Up!" and have the broom fly into your hand? Can you mount that broom and fly? These are questions that have already been answered during the course of his teaching, and really the only thing the students need to do by this point in the year is keep on practicing (under supervision) until they are able to fly well enough that they don't have to worry about crashing, or have decided that flying is just not for them and that they aren't going to take the next level of class anyway.

Remember, it's only required for first years, and honestly, I think that once YOU proved to be such a natural that you were recruited to the Quidditch team after ONE half taught lesson, you didn't even have to take an entire class. The rest of us had to take it at least that one full year, unless we (ahem) were skilled enough to prove to the teacher that we didn't need the lessons either (such as I was).

In any case, with Oliver not needing to give finals for his class, and with the fact that most of his students have frankly decided to skip the last few days in order to study for their other finals, he's had a bit of free time. Hell! Even Quidditch is over for the year.

Thus, with his time free and you stuck in your office helping your students study for their OTHER classes (since they all know that your final will be on stuff you helped them learn during the year, since you are an excellent teacher and your lessons are memorable), he had the ability to come back to the Manor and spend some time with me last night.

But before you get too frustrated, we didn't actually have sex. Shocking, I know.

Instead, we had an interesting chat. It seems that Oliver also felt like something clicked inside him recently. He says that nearly all of the worries and concerns he initially had in our relationship and marriage have, erm... been resolved in that he's worked through them. He's now certain that we both truly love him and that we both would do anything for him, no matter what.

He's still against either of us killing anyone for any reason short of self defense or immediate protection of another from mortal peril. Just so you know...

I have found some loopholes, but I won't bring those up in such an insecure manner.

Anyway, as I was saying, we had a chat, and one of the things he needed to know, I suppose to fill in a blank in his mind was:

"Draco... I was wondering... why did you fall in love with me?"

"What?" I asked in mild confusion.

"Well, if you and Harry are so in love then WHY did either of you fall for me, let alone BOTH of you?"

I smiled and kissed his hand. "First of all, you have to understand that it wasn't planned. Neither of us had made a decision to fall in love with someone else, and so, neither of us was looking for it. Harry has said it himself that he would be perfectly content being monogamous, and it was me that suggested he try playing. He is not nor will he ever be happy with an open relationship in which we both seek out and maintain lovers that have nothing to do with the other."

Oliver nodded because he understood all of this.

"And even though monogamous literally means one love, he considers our Triad relationship to be monogamous rather than bigamous because in his heart, his love IS one love dedicated to the two of us, and so, he is NOT looking for another person, nor will he ever be. He wasn't LOOKING for you, he just so happened to..."

I paused and smiled at the look of confusion on his face because I was CLEARLY not answering his actual question.

"He happened to have feelings for you since the time that you were his Quidditch Captain. Honestly, had he not been trying to fight the fact that he's gay, and had he not been just a bit too young to fully understand attraction as attraction and not something like simply getting along well with a person, well, he might well have fallen completely for you all the way back in school, and my rivalry with him would have remained just that. A rivalry. Once we parted ways after school, he more than likely would have sought you out - had you not already been married, or at least in a solid relationship."

Still a little confused, Oliver bit his lip in thought. "So you're saying that his feelings for me started all the way back in Hogwarts?"

I smirked. "Well, at least partially. He told me that he used to have thoughts and inappropriate dreams about you - but you had graduated by that point. You lost out on his initial love simply by not being near him on a daily basis. In that, I at least had the ability to torment him and FORCE him to think about me every day until..." I sighed heavily. "Sixth Year. At which point, I had to more or less leave him alone so that I could plot to murder Dumbledore, and then plot to let Death Eaters into the School so that they could try to take over. It was... an all around bad year for me, but it seems that my determination to make Harry obsessed with me had paid off in that he was most definitely obsessed with me at the ONE freaking time I actually wanted him to shove off and mind his own business."

"Alright..." Oliver murmured, still not understanding where I was going with this.

"That's the foundation of it," I explained. "He HAD feelings for you, they just never had a chance to make it past wank bank material. Meanwhile, I didn't have feelings for you other than I do remember you as being bloody fit, and ALSO put you in my wank bank."

Oliver preened a bit at that news. "I was a fairly handsome lad."

"You were. Still are, actually. You make me want to shag you every time I see you, but as you can see, I do have the ability to restrain myself when the situation calls for it. That was a HARD won battle, I'll tell you!"

We both laughed at that.

"But as I was saying, that's why - when you first came to live with us - Harry was more or less caught off guard by his feelings. You spent all that time with him in the stables, and then by coming to help with the babies at night. You just being there and being oh so lovable not only reawakened what little had developed back in school, but ALSO the genuine spark of real love that Harry didn't realize he was capable of giving to anyone else until it had already happened."

"I think I more or less already knew all of this," Oliver said, frowning slightly again. "Harry's been open and honest about his feelings. It's YOU I have a harder time reading."

"Well, I haven't exactly tried to hide my feelings for you, but I was getting to that," I replied with a smile. "Harry WAS always open and honest. He told me almost the first moment he realized that he had feelings. He agonized over how I would take the news, and was so afraid that I would tell him to basically shove those feelings in a box and forget them. And if I had, he would have done exactly that and never said another word about it. BUT..."

Oliver grinned. "You love Harry so much that you couldn't hurt him by saying anything like that."

"Exactly!" I exclaimed. "At the very first, I was just going to pretend. I vowed to give Harry anything and everything he ever wanted, no matter what. And if he had come to me and said that he loved you and that he wanted to leave me for you, I would have been devastated, but I would have let him go because I want him to be happy - even if it's not with me. Fortunately for me, we are in this for life, and our love isn't going to just stop one day."

Oliver was quiet for a moment as he thought this over. "But... I KNOW you love me. I've been in your mind and I saw the glowing pink box labeled Oliver - right next to the glowing pink box labeled Harry. You CAN'T fake that!"

"Actually, I could," I informed him. "I'm skilled in Occlumency, and I COULD have set that up for you to see as a part of my shields - after all, that's exactly what Occlumency is. Creating shields that LOOK like what the person trying to read your mind wants to see."

This should not be news to him, but even so, he was taken aback by this for a moment.
"That said, please try to remain confident that what you saw was real," I stated with a loving smile. "I COULD fake it. I could fake it so well that neither of you ever knew that I was faking it, but what I cannot fake is how doing that would make me feel. Slowly, a part of me would die, and Harry WOULD notice that."

Oliver looked thoughtful now, but not concerned like he had been a moment ago.

"So, to answer your question about WHY I fell in love with you, the answer is both simple AND incredibly complicated. Harry wanted you. Harry LOVED you, and I wanted to give him everything he wanted, so I opened myself up to the possibility. It did take me some serious soul searching. I had to ask myself if I COULD love you, and if I could, could I SAY it?! Here's the thing, once I opened myself to the possibility, everything about you just sort of burst into my heart. It quite took my breath away since I had been so certain that I..."

I paused to laugh, a small chuckle at first that turned into a heartier laugh that I couldn't quite stop once it began. "I truly BELIEVED that I only had enough room in my heart for Harry. That I was incapable of loving ANYONE that wasn't him!" I had to stop talking because I was laughing too hard at this point to get any words out.

Oliver was frowning again. "Why is that funny?"

Trying to calm down but still chuckling, I answered him. "BECAUSE - don't you see? I've said it, my mother has said it, and even Harry says it all the time. I have a heart so big that I HAVE to put a shield or a wall or whatever around it to stop myself from bringing home every stray child I see! Me?! Not CAPABLE of loving you?! Ts! All it really took was for me to open my heart to the possibility and suddenly it was already too late! I couldn't NOT love you if I tried!"

Oliver thought this over as I continued to chuckle softly for a few minutes, giving me time to call for Muffy to bring us some tea and biscuits. Actually, I took the opportunity to feed Oliver some Sanguinaccio Dolce. And he asked for peaches and cream, and pickle ice cream. Good thing I'm not opposed to any of those things.

"So..." Oliver said around a spoonful of pudding. "What you are saying is that the WHY is Harry, but that he's not the actual reason you fell in love with me. The reason is that you just... love me?"

"Exactly!" I confirmed. "I would have never let myself even think about it if not for Harry, but once I did, it really didn't take much at all to fall for you. It's real. It's true. And it has nothing to do with Harry except that he's the reason I let it happen. As he says all the time, the three of us have our individual relationships in addition to our Triad. And that's the way it should be."

He was moaning around a mouthful of ice cream. I think he was eating the pudding and the ice cream in alternating bites, and then adding the peaches and cream at random. "That sort of puts my mind at ease. I was sort of afraid that the answer was that Harry told you to love me, and so you made yourself do it until you realized that it had happened for real. The fact that it was not forced, but rather happened naturally, well, it actually mirrors the way it happened for me."

I smiled at him. "You fell for Harry first, and then at some point, you realized that we were open to that, but no matter what, you would always have to deal with me. That I was never going to go away, and that Harry would never leave me."

Oliver nodded. "Yeah, and more than that, I didn't WANT a triad relationship. I WANTED a normal monogamous one, but the two of you were hinting that you wanted to be with me, and I realized that I was getting a bit too old to turn down the offer of genuine love out of the hope that I'd find my 'ideal' love by some miracle. So... once I opened my heart to the possibility, it just..."
happened."

I nodded in understanding, savoring my own mouthful of pudding.

"I didn't think it would and I didn't think I was capable of loving two people at the same time - you know, romantically," Oliver added. "But... You were both offering me so damn much!
And... I WANTED it. So badly! So I... opened my heart to the possibility, and then I got to know you better, and I can now very easily see why Harry fell for you so fast and hard way back when.
You're... amazing, honestly."

I waved that away. "That's seriously just a front I put up to hide how truly selfish I am way down deep inside. I want what I want, and that's everything in the whole bloody world. The simple fact is that the easiest way for me to get what I want is to compromise and give others what they want. It just so happens that what you and Harry want is more or less exactly what I want, so it's in my own best interest to give in."

Oliver snorted a laugh. "Ha! You're putting on that mask again, to hide what a big old softie you really are. Would someone really as selfish as you claim to be REALLY donate a million galleons to the mental health ward at St. Mungo's?"

I stopped smiling completely. Looking him in the eyes, I decided to tell him the complete truth - rather than avoid it, because I would never lie about something like this. "If I was really simply a generous person, would I donate such a large amount of money? No. I would give a more reasonable amount and help THEM raise the rest. I donated an amount that I desperately hoped would ease my conscious, but it didn't. I still have to live with the fact that I indirectly murdered Farrah. There's nothing I can ever truly do to make up for that."

I sighed and looked away. "Not even the fact that the Head of their Mental Health Department sent me a proposal to expand and completely overhaul their entire ward - renaming it the Farrah Malfoy
Ward - not even THAT will make a drop in the bucket. I could give them the entire Malfoy fortune
- or at least the part of it I own - and it would do nothing but prove how guilty I feel."

After a long moment of silence, Oliver set his spoon down and came over to where I was sitting - on the sofa across from his armchair. He sat down next to me and pulled me into his arms. "Hey... you have to give yourself a break. That was ONE moment of weakness, and it wasn't done by your hands. Had YOU actually tried to do it with your own hands, you NEVER could have gone through with it."

"So?!

"So... so give yourself a damn break! You do SO many good things that you cannot define yourself by that ONE bad thing!"

"One bad thing on top of a long history of bad things! Just wait until the next time I'm having a bad day and I start ranting and spewing venom everywhere," I pointed out. "THAT'S the real me that I normally hold in check! The monster inside that I keep under tight control so that he doesn't destroy everything I hold dear!"

Oliver shook his head, kissing my temple. "You are GOOD! You saved Erma and are having her cared for by Dibly, with absolutely NO reason other than you saw her and knew you could help."

I scoffed a bit bitterly. "I saved her because saw ME in her. I saw FARRAH in her! I saw a person that had made bad decisions and mistakes, and NEEDED someone to help her be better. That's... just more of me trying to atone for all my sins. That's just me being selfish all over again."
He sighed. "Alright, fine, since you refuse to listen to reason, tell me: WHAT will it take for you to finally feel like you have atoned?"

At that moment, I thought to myself: Huh, maybe it might have been easier if I had simply stayed locked out of my Mind Palace. Or at least, perhaps let those particular memories remain locked up. Sighing, I shook my head.

"See... Well... I was trained to do things - as a teen - that... That...most people don't ever have to learn. I have all these skills and the CAPACITY to use them, but I can't. Or, erm... well if I DID use them, most of the time, it would be considered a bad thing. You know, most people don't like it when a man lurks near them, spies on them, reads their mind, and just basically IS a shady fucker. That's why I..."

I stopped and shook my head. "Never mind. It wouldn't make a difference anyway."

Oliver gave me a put upon look. "DRACO... You can't stop there!"

I caressed his cheek with a hand. "I'm suddenly craving spunk. How about I suck you off for an hour or so?"

He was clearly torn for a moment or so, before shaking his head. "Merlin damn it! I can't believe I'm turning that down! But no! I NEED to know what it is you're not saying!"

I examined my hands very thoroughly as I thought this over. You know how much I HATE having to admit to these sorts of things in person. I'd much rather retreat and think it over, and then write it out so that I can hide the parts I want to hide, but... Well... I'm utterly weak when it comes to denying those I love anything they want.

Sighing, I caved in. "Fine...It's why I love consulting for the Aurors so much. Being the Chief of Raids is fulfilling and challenging, and uses some of my skills. Especially when I get to sit in on interrogations. BUT - if you want to know the real truth, the part I love most about consulting for the Aurors is when Robards comes to me with an impossible assignment. When he wants me to go undercover somewhere where I can use ALL the skills I've learned, and accomplished near miracles using bad or dubious means - in other words using the bad things I was taught for good purposes - it's honestly the ONLY thing I've ever done that makes me feel like I've actually atoned for some of my sins."

"So... the time you Polyjuiced into a teenaged prostitute and accidentally conceived Morgana... that wasn't... HARD on you?" Oliver asked in a soft voice, trying to be considerate of how I might feel about the subject.

I shook my head. "Nope, the actual sex work was mostly boring, and when I was done, I freed not just that girl, but a bunch of kids from sex slavery."

"Then... a nice dangerous undercover mission would make you stop feeling so guilty about Farrah?" Oliver reasoned.

I shrugged. "It might. But... I can't right now. I'm not going to do anything like that until after our three month anniversary, and - as you might recall - our next several months are packed full of plans. The Triwizard Tournament runs from Friday June 29th to Monday July 2nd, Hazel marries Pearl on July 7th, and we're leaving for Iran with the littlest on July 9th with the intention to be there for every step of their 10 year anniversary celebration and fundraiser. It's going to take months. I simply don't have the time to do it. And Hermione is already freaking out about the fact that she's going to have to function without me for however long I'm in Iran. If I told her that I needed time off for a case, especially so soon after having time off for losing my memory, yeah... I may as well expect her to murder me in my sleep with my own intestines."

Oliver gave me a suspicious look, but decided to drop it for now. "Alright... So, what you are saying is that you're going to just keep on working through your issues while we live our lives, and then when we come back, you're going to - what? Be an Auror?"

"No," I assured him as I kissed him. "I NEVER wanted to be just a grunt Auror. But I do think I will make more time for the consulting work I did in the past."

Oliver got a really odd look on his face. As if he was suddenly shy and trying to hide it.

I laughed. "You want that blow job after all, don't you?"

"Yeah, I kinda do," he admitted.

Smiling, I gave him exactly what he wanted until you came home and quite possibly passed out before you had fully flopped into our bed.

But that was yesterday. Today, I'm going to finish my morning routine and floo over to Hogwarts so that I can help the students with their frantic studying by dragging them out onto the Quidditch pitch and running their worries off. Literally. I'm quite looking forward to it! I'm even planning to bring Amala and her now fully grown remaining cub Enfuego with to help with motivation.

Perhaps I'll see you and we'll have a quick shag in a broom closet somewhere ^_^

Walk this way!
Draco

Chapter End Notes

Note: Chrissie only has 10 days left of school in real life, so let's all cheer her on ^_^
Chapter 304

Chapter Summary

Harry had no time for nookie, and it's almost time for the Tri-Wizard Tournament.

Chapter Notes

Sorry for the delay, my internet went out for a bit yesterday when I planned to post :-(
But it's back up now ^_^

Wednesday June 13, 2018

My Loves,

Sorry I had absolutely no time for broom closet abductions yesterday. I think I'll be spending the next week or so with no time to do anything but fall asleep the moment my head hits the pillow. Both of you please know, even though I've said it a million times before I'm going to repeat myself, do not take my sleeping as a reason to not shag me. I think it would make the day easier to face if I wake up with a delightfully sore arse or a familiar taste on my tongue. Or both!

I have to say Draco, your description of what exactly I'm having to help my students with is spot on. I'm dealing with their stress and frustrations over classes I'm not even responsible for. Look, I get it, my subject is one of the easiest classes at Hogwarts. I'm just exhausted and frustrated that it's not my classes causing their obnoxious behavior but I'm the one dealing with it.

I'm probably being unfair; my subject is really very easy. Not that what I'm teaching is unimportant, I would even go as far as to argue that in a post blood status war world my subject is objectively the most important.

However, the point of my classes is to develop a respect for Muggles, an understanding of the ingenuity and resourcefulness it takes to live without magic, and the ability to blend into the Muggle world for short or even potentially long periods of time. But those aren't things that are particularly easy to test in some sort of standardized testing. Realistically, it doesn't matter if they can memorize historical dates or list the top ten telly programs of the last decade.

If I were to be staying on as professor, which I'm not ... although I might try again in another decade or so when we don't have so many high needs little ones who deserve more of their Daddy's attentions. Not to mention most of our kids still at home will be at Hogwarts by that time anyway. Sorry, off on a tangent again. What I was saying is that if I were to stay on as professor I think I'd like to have some sort of Muggle excursion as a year-end practical test. I could even design them for different ages, say the little ones could go on a field trip to a library where they have to interact with another child and attempt to register for a library card while the older ages could go to a career fair or a university tour.

Sorry, you can take the professor out of the classroom but you can't take the teacher out of the Enough about me and my classes though. You two! I'm just so thrilled that the two of you finally came to the realization that you love each other without me being a factor. I'm glad you're both being so honest with each other and through the email being honest with me about your feelings and how they came to be. I will say that I am less happy knowing the both of you were willing to sacrifice your individual desires to be with me. It has all worked out, I love us, but we really need to work on the two of you setting limits as to what you'd do to keep my love.

I could probably say the same for myself though, it's easy enough to hear what you're saying in hindsight and hate that the both of you were willing to enter a triad to keep me happy, but I'd chop off my arms to keep either of you happy, so I'm all talk.

I just don't get it. Sure, I'm cute I suppose, I'm pretty nice, and I like to think I'm a good person. I just don't get how I can be so special to either of you that you were both willing and able to fall in love with me. And I certainly don't think I'm so great as to have the two most amazing men I've ever met be willing to fake or force a triad relationship for me.

Oh well, you've both gone ahead and fallen deeply for each other. There's no changing that. Thank Merlin! But I want you both to please promise me that you won't agree to massive life changing decisions just to keep me happy. Or keep me at all. There's nothing either of you could do to make me leave or love you any less, so be honest with me if I ask for something you aren't wanting to give.

Well, it's about that time. I had a spare fifteen minutes to write this out but it's back to the grindstone. Office hours again! Nine days and counting! Wish me luck!

Yours,
Harry

Thursday June 28th
My dearest Harry and Oliver,

Congratulations! Hogwarts is done for the year, the students are all back home, and you two can finally rest and spend time together. Oliver, I love the fact that you went in and helped Harry help the students during those last few days of studying. It shows how big your heart really is. All I did was show up at random, insist that some of the students go for a run to get out of their heads, and then had them spar with each other for a half hour or so before they HAD to go back to studying.

In any case, now that the school year is done, it's time for me to do my job. Starting tomorrow, I'll be by Hermione's side pretty much around the clock until Monday. Possibly Tuesday. And in fact, I'm already at Hermione's side and probably will not be coming home tonight. We're basically planning to sleep in her office and have hair and makeup artists come in each day to work on us so we look our best when hosting this bloody Tournament. On the plus side, it'll be HER that has to deal with Hurricane Draco when he inevitably pops up.

As a reminder, all day yesterday and today was when participants from Russia, France, and Britain were showing up to put their names in the Cup (same one, had to be modified slightly. It was THOROUGHLY checked for tampering!). Tomorrow around noon, the entry period will be closed to allow for the Cup to deliberate until 2pm. At that point - give or take a few minutes - it should give us our champions, and then, the first task should start around 5pm.
That means that non participating spectators have been piling in from around the world to the same campsite and venue from the world cup in our Fourth Year. THIS time, Hermione and I have worked hard to make sure that the entire campground is staffed by squibs, muggles in the know, and witches and wizards. This way, we won't have to confound anyone unless they are a genuine muggle wandering into the area by mistake.

At any rate, Hermione is glaring at me because we're due to meet with the French and Russian Ministers in about 10 minutes, so I have to sign off and go flirt my arse off. Love you both beyond my ability to express!

More than words,
Draco
Chapter 305

Chapter Summary

It's almost time for the first task!

Friday June 29, 2018

My Working Men,

It is I, your husband with no responsibilities! I've been chasing eight children aged eight and younger around a fairground so I've not been exactly unproductive, but I AM currently unemployed ... and loving it!

I'm sure I will miss it eventually. I will miss interacting so often with my students. I'm sure there are days when I will be sick of singing nonsense children's songs and want to tear my hair out if I have to watch one more episode of some toddler programming or have to hear "Daddy can I have just one more biscuit?" a million times. But I can't get over how happy I am right this moment.

The relief! I am so relieved being on summer hols, and I'm still riding the high from my first week as a full time stay at home dad. I wasn't aware of just how much weight I'd been carrying until it was taken off. I saw the Hogwarts Express take off with the students and I could feel my shoulders drop. I was officially (minus clearing out my classroom and helping my replacement with lesson plans etc) done being a professor.

I felt so much worry that I wasn't a good enough professor, was letting down my students by giving them a subpar education. I thought, even being muggle raised and us spending so much time in and out of the muggle world, what if I'm portraying Muggles incorrectly? Doing them a disservice? I knew I was letting down my husbands with how little time I was devoting to them together and individually. And I felt like the worst Dad and Grandpa in the history of the world.

That train got smaller as it chugged it's way into the horizon and I've spent every moment since reconnecting with my loves, my kids, my family.

Since classes let out for the year I have made a homemade, healthy, delicious breakfast every morning except this morning since we were setting up for the event. I've been home constantly with no other obligations, so I've been able to read the kids bedtime stories every night. I got to check in with my horses every day!! I sucked up to Venus, gave her extra treats so she wouldn't be so annoyed with my absence. It's been wonderful.

Right now though, I am having a few moments of quiet. We're in between two big events of the day. We finished up the Choosing of the Champions about an hour ago, and in another hour or so we need to head to the location of the first task. The babies are having some much needed naps. Nora is "resting her eyes." And the foursome are having some quiet restful time.

The arrival of the competing countries was absolutely wonderful yesterday. Much better than when Beauxbatons and Durmstrang came grunting and sighing into Hogwarts. They had magical displays and traditional costumes. It was obviously on a much smaller scale since there are only three countries competing here and the Wizarding world is much smaller than the Muggle world, but the opening ceremonies reminded me a bit of the Olympic Ceremonies.

I'd have to say though, the Choosing of the Champions has been my favorite part of the event so far. First, the Goblet spits out the name of the champion from France, Josette Beauvais. Second, the champion from Russia, a Miss Tashka Yurievna. Third, the English champion, Daphne (no, not our Daphne) Saunders. Then? The best thing ever!! No other extra names were called. No surprises. No tricking the Goblet. Just a good old fashioned Tri-Wizard tournament with three contestants that entered their own name!

So after a lovely opening ceremony and a brilliant champion announcement, I'm quite hopeful the first task will continue the trend and be fun to watch and not horrifying.

And don't you worry Draco my love, I am sure that our beloved Minister Granger will send for backup when Hurricane Draco arrives. She knows precisely the team of men to call to tame that storm.

But for now, I am going to .... erm ... also rest my eyes! This dad thing is exhausting!

See you both soon.

All of my love,
Harry

Friday June 29th,
The loves of my life,

The opening ceremony and choosing of the Champions was beautiful, but you know what the part that touched me the most was? When the third champion had been called and the three of them were standing on the platform for everyone to see and cheer on, I looked over at our massive family - those that were there at least, as not everyone could make it - and was nearly blown away at the sheer happy excitement on all our girls’ faces.

Just one example, Lily - who has recently participated in a showcase for ice skating that amazed us all - looked like the fact that there were three (not ONE, not TWO, but THREE) female champions participating in this Tournament, meant that she personally was inspired to participate when she grows up. There's no need to mention Persephone, as she had already decided that a few months ago, and is still rather mad at me for not making a special exception for her in the age limit.

But getting back to the champions. I love how they are all women, but even more than that, they aren't all young ladies. The representative from Russia - Tashka Yurievna - is a woman in her 30s (36) who has 3 kids, aged 12, 9, and 6. Josette Beauvais of France is the youngest at 19, but she's the tallest of the three and looks as if she runs laps around Paris just for fun. Which leaves us with our Champion: redhead Daphne Saunders - a 24 year old mother of one small child. A two year old daughter named Velma, of all things. She must be a Scooby Doo fan, haha.

Incidentally, Josette may not have any children of her own, but she has a 5 year old nephew. WHY is this important information? Because as you are currently finding out (the First Task is in progress as I write this, but it's the only relative free time I've had all day!), the First Task was set up by our Russian delegates on the Tournament Committee.

A Snow Maze. Unlike the maze for the Third Task that you participated in, Harry, this one has been covered in magi-cameras. In fact, George and Ron came up with a variation of the MMMs that work well for this entire Tournament. Thus, the important footage is being shown on large screens around the stadium.

But as I was saying, the actual task is this: Rescue the child. In Russia - in certain places especially - there is a lot of snow for a lot of the year, and so, it is a matter of Pride to be able to survive out there if necessary. Thus, the maze is full of things that might occur in winter, such as a blizzard. The children are sitting in nice warm caves with a fully trained guardian to protect them from - well - mostly from wandering out into the maze and getting caught up in the mild perils.

The Champions’ task is to navigate the maze until they find the correct cave that their child is in, and then navigate the maze WITH their child until they emerge from the official exit. But don't worry too much, my adorable worrywort, we have an entire rescue squad on standby to go in and help out if necessary. We're all committed to ensuring the kids' absolute safety. The blizzards, the fog, the avalanches, the yeti, the hidden pits to fall in, the polar bears, and the magic designed to confuse and obfuscate the Champions - ALL of it is designed to be as safe as possible, all considering.

Clearly, the Russians think they have the advantage here, and they actually might, but I wouldn't count either of the other Champions out just yet. They all three looked determined and tough as nails.

Oh! Looks like things are finally picking up. Tashka has found Josette's nephew, and so, needs to leave that cave and try to find the cave with her six year old son. It's hidden relatively nearby, and so should be an exciting part to watch.

I may be in the 'top box' with the Ministers and other important officials, but looking over at the Malfoy family box takes my breath away. As much of our family as could make it is crammed into that box, and it's SO full of love that I almost can't keep my heart from bursting. My parents holding their grandchildren, my siblings holding their nieces and nephews. Our older kids holding their precious babies...

I could just cry from happiness!

But I won't. This is DEFINITELY a time that calls for my calmest Malfoy mask. I'll try to sneak over there to give you both kisses when there's a lull in the action.

I swear,
Draco
1:00 AM Saturday June 30, 2018

Our Dearest Love,

It is bedtime in this tiny Malfoy tent. Fine. You're right Ollie. Even factoring in tent space per capita, we have a nice big tent. It's definitely not your parents' tent! At least I've never felt the need to bring peacocks camping.

Right now actually, the tent feels enormous. We're missing one very large personality we usually have with us at bedtime. You, your beautiful face, and your loving heart fill a room and your absence is practically palpable. I hate it. Oh, WE hate it.

Don't you worry though, obviously we understand. This is an important event. For so many reasons. For you, for Hermione, the Ministry, Wizarding Britain, France, and Russia. I definitely agree, seeing those strong capable female champions standing tall in front of the crowd was unbelievably important for our youngest magic users to see. Both male and female. The girls needed to see themselves up there. Representation where we've often fallen short. And the boys need to see women in powerful places, women fulfilling their dreams. It isn't enough to raise daughters who believe girls can do anything, we need to raise sons who also don't have a single doubt in their minds that girls can do anything.

Honestly Draco, we completely understand you being busy and don't expect anything more than you've already managed to give us so far this event. The occasional stolen moments where you come find us in the Malfoy family box for cuddles and kisses. Your last email, written in quiet moments during the first task. If anything we're pleased and surprised you had time for any of it. We both truly appreciate you making us a priority.

When this event is over we WILL be showing you exactly how appreciative we can be.

AND!!! All of your hard work has certainly paid off so far. The tournament has been wonderful. The use of the MMM's - or whatever they're calling them - was a stroke of brilliance. It's nothing like a crowd staring at the surface of a lake for an hour ...

It was almost TOO good! There was so much happening I couldn't decide which screen to watch sometimes. I almost wish they had gone one by one and just judged it by time. That way I could focus on each individual journey instead of splitting my time three ways. I even almost missed Daphne's win.

Yes, yes, yes, Ollie. You tried getting my attention a full minute before the win. I just couldn't get over that Yeti!

Congratulations Daphne, but poor Josette! She was within sight of the exit when Daphne went through with little Velma. I am curious if the age of the children needing saving was a factor. I can see the parental instinct kicking in with a small toddler versus having to trek around with a chatty six year old. And if at any point the child needed carrying, a two year old is significantly lighter than the kid three times their age. Sorry, don't mean to try and take away any glory from Daphne's win. She kicked arse and earned every moment of her win.

With Russia getting a bit of the glory in creating the first (fantastic) task and Britain getting glory in their Champion being the first one out of the maze, I can see Josette and France feeling like they really need to come out swinging for task two. She seems like a fighter with something to prove. We personally can't wait to see what the next task holds.

Before we sign off though, Oliver and I wanted to make you an offer. One you know we are not making lightly. After we got the kids to sleep we had a long talk. Well, first we had a thorough snogging session and a quick shag. But after that we had a long talk. It felt like hours. It actually may have been hours. And we have both decided - for YOU in particular, for Hermione, for international relations in general - we're willing to let you use our names and fame for whatever you may need them for during this event.

If some French or Russian official wants to meet THE Oliver Wood, famous Quidditch player, our Ollie would love to schmooze and mingle. If some international guest of the tournament wants a meet and greet with The (gag gag gag) Boy Who Lived? I am at your service.

This is an important event and we'll both *happily (okay not happily, but we'll make sure everyone else thinks we're doing it happily) do our part to make our world a bit better. A bit healthier. A bit more connected.

BUT we will be absolute nightmares tomorrow if we don't get some proper sleep so ...

Goodnight Sweetheart,
Your husbands Harry and Oliver

Saturday June 30th
My loves,

I find it supremely unfair! Hermione told me that we'd be sleeping in her office until the Tournament was over, and I didn't really think about how stupid that would be because the Tournament is nowhere NEAR the Ministry, but I guess I was already running a bit ragged and didn't question this too hard. But no! We're in a freaking tent probably 500 feet from yours (ours), and what? 1500 feet from her lovers and kids?

So why in the ever loving HELL do I have to share a tent with her and not you?? Well, it's because ALL the Ministers and their Aides are in this tent, and we're apparently DAMN committed to promoting unity between the Wizarding Nations, because we're eating fabulous French food and drinking the highest quality Russian vodka until we pass out!

Or I mean we were, last night. It got to the point that we ALL needed to take bloody hangover potions this morning just to wake up and function semi normally. I could bloody kiss Muffy for serving us up a full English breakfast, complete with my favorite high quality tea and even that organic small batch coffee you love. Which smells SO much better than it tastes! (Although everyone else seems to think it's the best stuff they've ever tasted, shrugs.)

After waking up and having a lovely chat for a while, and then meeting with our own Champions for a bit of a congratulatory pep talk, we all had a photoshoot to capture the Champions, Ministers, and Aides in various friendly poses - both singular and group - to be distributed for sale today and tomorrow (and Monday, for those still leaving the venue).

Then, as all the spectators were gathering back in the stadium for the Second Task, a nice live band was playing an exclusive concert. And by band, I really mean that every act the committee could finagle was given time to sing just one song so that the concert ran a good hour, plus a few minutes as the finishing touches were put on the - well, I suppose I can't call it a field nor a pitch. I mean if it was a Quidditch match, it WOULD be a pitch, but this was an underwater task, so it was more like a mini lake.

So, as you now know, the Second Task is a bit of a treasure hunt. Even as the last act of the concert, a mysterious boy in a fully covering costume, sang his heart out (give Zwei a HUGE hug and a proud kiss on the cheek from me until I can give him one myself), the Champions were getting into position. This was the Task created by the French Ministry, so Josette was strutting her stuff rather proudly, certain that SHE would be the victor of this one.

True, the French may have organized this one, but they used magical water creatures from all three countries, and so, there may well be things she is not prepared to encounter. We threw the giant squid in there just for fun!

Which means that the three determined women have to figure out how to survive underwater for a long amount of time - we reckon an hour or so, but we're not limiting the time so much as giving extra points to the first to return with all their tasks complete. And by tasks, I mean treasure.

Once in the water, they have to swim to their designated shipwreck - which they will have to first figure out if they're at the correct one - and then they'll have to find all the treasure on their list, but just to be arseholes - er... challenging, the French have decided that the list itself will be one of the treasures they have to find. While dealing with underwater creatures that might actually try to kill them. But probably not. I mean they are somewhat easy to defeat if one knows how, and there WILL be rescue teams standing by to pull a Champion to safety if she gets in too much trouble or looks injured or otherwise incapacitated.

In other words, we wanted the tasks to be a little dangerous bordering on actually, erm, perilous, but still maintaining safety and their health and happiness as much as possible.

Once they have their lists (and probably even before they find them) the ladies will have to find 10 items considered 'treasure' on their designated shipwreck. Once they have all 10 - and to avoid them just grabbing any 10 things that look like it might be treasure, there are fake treasure items too - anyway, once they have all 10 items, they simply have to get to the finishing point - which is the same dock they started from.

All in all, I'm sort of looking forward to this task. The ladies JUST dove in, so I think I might actually have a few minutes to use the loo in our box before anything truly exciting happens. If you need me, I'll be in the top box, eating and drinking with the Ministers and their entourages. I won't necessarily drop names (although I might if this runs on for too long and I can't find an opportunity to sneak away and give you all hugs and kisses), you could always come on over for a few minutes and drop your own names to schmooze for a bit. I know Hermione won't mind at all, and may even be happy to not have to entertain for a few minutes.

Love you both to bits!
Draco
P.S. I'm going to shag you both so hard the MOMENT I wake up on Tuesday afternoon!
Love!

Oh my poor sweet baby, I wasn't aware of what a rough life you were leading over in the Official's Tent! You were stuck eating delicious French food and even better Russian vodka.

Fine! I will come schmooze, mingle, flirt, and hopefully get a bit of time on your arm. Should I play off being your fit younger trophy husband? That you're my pretty arm candy? Or just be completely honest with our sickeningly sweet love and borderline inappropriate PDA?

Oliver and I decided not to come at the same time. That leaves one dad with the kids so they don't feel neglected. Although they've all, even the babies, been thoroughly enjoying the tournament so far. Plus, us coming separately assures you and Hermione double the respite from entertaining. We were thinking two separate visits gives you double the distraction instead of one, possibly overwhelming, visit to deal with.

Also, Ollie is looking forward to taking his turn during the third task, this way he'll actually be able to watch, cheer, shout, and heckle in a way he can't or won't do in the family box in front of the littles.

In our relationship, Ollie is our calm. He's the eye of our storm. Our safe harbour. Our conscience if I'm bring truly honest. Until this tournament, I think I had forgotten all about intensely competitive Oliver Wood. I've known the man since I was eleven years old. How did I let myself forget his highly competitive nature? During today's second task he was so redfaced, looking ready to jump over the Malfoy Box's ledge to join the contestants in the lake. Since he felt very strongly that they needed to "Open your bloody eyes! The chest is right next to you! No, not that one, take a Merlin-be-damned vision potion for the love of all that is holy!!"

The kids thought it was hilarious. Except for Persephone, who got a calculating look in her eye. I am a bit worried she's plotting something. Something to do with capitalizing on Daddy Oliver's competitive nature.

I, on the other hand, am planning on joining you this evening for food and drinks instead of during a task. It's taken me years, but after all the galas and ceremonies we've attended, I've gotten fairly good at mingling through "ego measuring" parties. All teasing from earlier aside, how DO you want me to play this? Should I be the pretty little naïve savior, staring adoringly at my brilliant husband? The powerful wizard whose travels through the world, creation of businesses and charities, and subtle behind the wings manipulation show my intelligence?

Or am I overthinking this whole thing, these officials could be much more perceptive than I'm giving them credit for, should I just be myself? A little flirty but bashful, nice but a bit tactless at times, and a high likelihood of dragging you into a cupboard for a quickie?

If I can't drag you off for a quickie, I may attempt sneaking into your tent tonight. I didn't realize just how close you were to our tent. If you're too tired that's fine ... I'll just ride you to my own completion while you sleep.

Between your long day yesterday, lack of sleep last night, hangover this morning, and today's intense treasure hunt task I have to assume it won't be that hard to keep you asleep. How's that sound baby? You want to wake up sated with a raw dick? I can give you that. Maybe when I'm done I'll tapout and Ollie will do the same. Yeah? What do you think?

Mind out of the gutter Harry! I can't show up like this. NOT the impressions I want to give the officials ... probably.

Task two! Josette's thirst to prove herself and her inflated ego from France being in charge of designing this task could have been a liability. Instead it was fuel for her victory. I do have to wonder if the French officials designed it specifically with her in mind. She swam like she was born in the water. Similar to our Vivi come to think of it.

Not implying cheating, the Russians were playing to their strengths as well. Why not?

If I were to have entered the tournament (thank Merlin I did not) we could have designed the task to play to MY strengths. The goal is to get through Diagon without being mobbed by rabid fans. Or try corralling over a dozen children at an amusement park. Or just British strengths in general, try to go somewhere without running into a Malfoy!

I'm curious though, I'm sure you answered this at some point when I wasn't paying attention. Right now we are one to one to zero in this competition. What happens if Tashka wins the third task? Does the winner get declared based on prior points? Will the third task be designed differently based on previous wins? Or do you have a backup tie-breaker event ready?

Well, I am going to go make myself pretty. Buy a calendar of Minister Granger's fit advisor. Then join you for arse-kissing.

Love,
Me

Sunday July 1st
Oh Oliver!

You should have seen Harry last night! He was amazing! He showed up in the Top Box with remarkably perfect timing. The Russian Minister's Aide was JUST asking if we could persuade THE Harry Potter to come say hi, considering that one of us was his best friend and the other rumored to be married to him.

Don't take the rumor thing seriously, they well know we're married, Harry. It's just they're Russian and can't quite admit to the existence of same sex marriage.

Anyway, Harry was already approaching the Top Box, and when he heard the French officials add their desire to meet Harry as well, Harry came forward and said: "Oh? You were hoping to meet me? Lucky I was on my way to see my husband then."

"Harry, my love! I feel like it's been YEARS since I last saw you!" I exclaimed as I grabbed your hand and tugged you into my arms so that I could kiss you.

We got lost in it for a long moment until the Russian Minister made a very loud: "Ahem!"

"Sorry, not sorry," I informed him in English before switching to Russian and telling him that you had such a high need for affection that if I didn't give you as much as possible, you got extremely cranky and made life miserable for EVERYONE. There was no need to tell him that it was actually the other way around. The Russians laughed in fond amusement at that and grinned as they came forward to shake your hand and offer you vodka.

Hermione smirked at me, knowing full well what I'd said, and then kissed us both on the cheek to convey her relief at the temporary break.

After you had schmoozed for an hour or so, Harry, eating some of our excellent catering and drinking not just vodka but fine French wine, you managed to make it back to the nearby Malfoy box to apparently entertain the kids with some hilarious drunken babbling. All in all, you made the officials so happy, and even answered a few questions about the war and the Dark Lord with nearly uncomfortable honesty.

That was last night. Today, Oliver did as suggested and arrived shortly before the Third Task started so that he could transform into a more vulgar and less kid appropriate version of himself. He arrived in enough time to meet with and get the pleasantries out of the way before the task began, delighting everyone as the other officials were getting a bit nervous and Hermione was getting a bit strained. Oliver charmed everyone, not blatantly demanding a kiss from me in public, but also not refusing it when I smooched him and held his hand.

The French think the three of us are adorable, and the Russians are politely pretending not to notice anything while seeming fond of our boldness and bravery at such a life choice. Probably the best indicator of their goodwill is that they promptly offered Oliver as much of their best vodka as he wanted.

Naturally, he had to decline, aside from the tiniest of sips to get a taste for it and compliment them on their quality. Then he explained how he was currently pregnant, and while flabbergasted, the officials were understanding. At least until Oliver burst out in language not fit for a child and they all looked tempted to cover his abdomen with a silencing spell, hahahaha!

Then the third task began. Since it was our turn to create the task, there was a strong possibility that it would focus on or include the ability to hold a tea cup perfectly steady while sitting in an uncontrolled dingy in a storm tossed ocean. Perhaps our committee wanted to give the competition a sporting chance, because they decided against that. Instead, they came up with a gauntlet.

Not exactly a British past time, I'll admit, but we ARE tough and rather stoic, so this seemed like NOT too big a stretch of the imagination.

Here's an overview of the way it's supposed to work, just in case you missed the announcer explaining it.

To start, the gauntlet had several tasks to complete. There was a potions test, a dangerous beast to get past, a logic problem, a seemingly impossible to escape room, and a hallway full of ‘Death Eaters' to defeat. Each Champion had their own gauntlet course, and the two previous winners - Daphne and Josette - got an advantage in that they were allowed to go a full minute before Tashka AND Tashka had to pass an extra challenge. The extra one being a simple Devil's Snare pit right before the end of her gauntlet.

Anyway, once the Champions made it through their individual gauntlets, one of two things could happen. If one managed to get through so quickly compared to the others that no one was in the final room before the finish line, then they could simply cross it and claim the Golden Goblet I personally had had made and provided as the trophy.

It will later be engraved with the Winner's name, but for now, it simply has the year and the words Tri-Wizard Tournament Winner on it.
IF the Champions get past their gauntlets at the same time, or close enough that none has made it to the finish line yet, then they will have to duel to determine the victor. Thus, even if Tashka is slowed down by her disadvantages, if she makes it to the final room while the other two are dueling, she will definitely have an equal chance of winning.

Also, UNLIKE Champions who have been selected from the best and the brightest students of a school, these women have largely been living their own lives and NOT in school for quite some time, so they presumably all have an equal chance of failing - or at least getting hung up on - remembering things such as the solution to the potions test. Or how to effectively tame the dangerous beast.

All in all, it should be something worth seeing, and don't worry, Oliver is already 'cheering' on the Champions rather colorfully ^_^

See you after it's all over! The moment there's a winner, I just have to make the final presentation, and then I should be free to give you some serious public displays of affection before retiring to the officials' tent for the final night of 'bonding.'

As I breathe,
Draco
Sunday July 1, 2018

So, erm, uh, we have a bit of a situation. I'm currently hiding in ... an alleyway? to write this. Oh! And before you panic, no this is not one of those situations where I found a kid and Bam! Surprise! Guess who's becoming dads for the twenty-second time?!!?

When the third task ended, which was so so unbelievably exciting by the way. Okay, no I can't just skip past that. The third task was so very exciting. Until it wasn't of course. With how evenly matched these brilliant women were, I really expected there to be at least one all out duel at the end. But no, even with her disadvantage of a time delay and the additional challenge, Tashka won by a pretty nice sized margin.

I don't know if it was a need to prove herself or what, but Tashka flew through all of her challenges with a speed that I have to assume frustrated the officials who wanted to drag the final task out longer. Although Daphne was right at her heels. Not quite close enough for a full duel, but we got a hint of it. Tashka was almost to the cup when Daphne got close enough to shoot an expelliarmus at the woman ahead of her. But the spell went wide, Tashka spun around and shot a petrificus at her attacker and Daphne went down hard. That was that!

After your (wonderful) presentation, you did as promised and came to find me for some fabulous PDA and then headed off after a bit for your final night of bonding. I, on the other hand, was dragged off to the pop-up marketplace by Hazel. She had been down there earlier in the weekend and wanted to see if there were any neat treasures she could use for a last minute decoration for her wedding next weekend, or maybe find some gift worthy of her Pearl.

I had a lovely little stroll through the booths, you know how much I enjoy a good market. But as we got closer to the end, I started seeing items that I wasn't completely sure were completely legal. I didn't really think much of it because perhaps they were selling things that were legal or normal in France or Russia that my delicate British sensibilities were just surprised by. But I just walked past a booth that was DEFINITELY selling things that shouldn't be sold.

There's a bit of a black market going on down here and I have no power or jurisdiction to do anything about it. So, uh, do you and or Hermione or someone in the Auror department want to come check this out? Or were you all already aware of this and turning a blind eye for the sake of international cooperation?

Help?
Harry
The entire Tournament has been a resounding success! I LOVE the fact that the oldest woman with the most children managed to win in the end - despite her disadvantages. She quite capably earned herself the Cup, which we took back from her for a few minutes as she waved to the crowd so that we could do a closing ceremony and officially present it to her.

To that end, the three Champions were gathered together and told by Hermione that they had all done so well, and that we were so proud of all of them. To prove it, I sang the song Fighter by Christina Aguilera to the three of them to let them know that we felt they all had admirable fighting spirits.

Then I officially presented the Golden Tri-Wizard Tournament Cup and a voucher for the grand prize money to Tashka - the cup having been magically engraved with her name when we took it back for a moment. She seemed rather stoic and determined to NOT break down crying, until I gave her a kiss on the cheek and pointed to the left, where her family was now waiting to congratulate her.

She started sobbing SO hard, hugging them all to death and babbling in Russian too fast for me to follow. Meanwhile, Daphne and Josette were looking rather happy and disappointed at the same time. They were disappointed that they'd lost, but extremely happy to be awarded the prize money based off the position they ended in - 2nd place for Daphne, and 3rd for Josette. I daresay that the prize money will be a welcome and helpful addition to their lives, haha.

Anyway, after some much needed public affection from my own family (especially my husbands), I was obligated to return to the Ministers' tent. There, we all celebrated a smashing success by eating a massive amount of excellent food and drinking vodka for the millionth time in a row (I'm not Russian, so I don't appreciate it nearly as much as they do, although I will admit that the stuff they brought was very good quality).

In the middle of the second course, I got the notification that you'd emailed me. I had to wait a moment for a lull in the conversation to politely check it, but once I'd read all the way to the end, I didn't really care about manners. I more or less cried out a demand for everyone to be quiet a moment and used my magimobile to conference call Robards and Bletchley.

To my surprise, they both answered. "Robards, Bletchley, sorry to call you at a time like this - as I'm certain you're both in the crowd celebrating - but my husband just -"

"Which husband?" Bletchley interrupted.

"Harry, he just sent me an email from the popup market, where he feels that some of the things for sale are not legal. He's convinced that the market is running a Black Market, and not all that secretly at that. Can I have Bletchley confirm that for me, and Robards, will you have all the on duty Aurors currently here message me so that I can quickly organize and mobilize a raid?"

"Sure thing, Chief!" Bletchley agreed.

"Yeah, I'll send out a group text to the Aurors - even those not on duty," Robards promised. "As they can get here quickly enough if they should happen to receive their message. We'll coordinate in the Auror tent."

"I'll meet you in the tent in five to ten minutes, as I will probably be popping over to my office in the Ministry to grab some of the more useful gear," I said.

"No good, Malfoy," Robards denied me. "If we're going to capture these shameless hooligans before they catch wind and run off, we need every moment we can get. We can do this old school without all your tech."

"-!" I was about to protest when Bletchley cut me off.

"Before you pitch a fit, Chief, I actually have a bunch of your mapping drones in my carry all. I plan to deploy them as I verify this, and just so you know, I'm about to hang up because I'm approaching the area. Just make do with the drones, yeah?"

"Fine!" I agreed in aggravation. "Then I'll head over to the Auror tent now as I'm already receiving the texts from all those on duty. I need to set up a raid HQ before we can begin."

"So stop telling us what you're going to do and do it!" Robards roared just before he hung up, and since Bletchley already had, I sighed and put my magimobile back in my pocket.

Hermione grabbed my hand and gave it a good squeeze. "Ooo, sounds exciting! Let me know how things go!"

"Wait! I thought Mr. Malfoy was just your aide, why is HE in charge of the raid?" The Russian Minister asked.

I flashed my credentials. "I'm currently inactive, but officially the Chief of Raids. That means that when the Head Auror needs to organize a raid and wants it done with a certain level of precision, he calls me in."

"I did not know that," the Russian Minister murmured in an impressed tone. In Russian, he chided his Aide for being 'just' a secretary. I'm dead certain that his secretary is about to make his life miserable for the foreseeable future. In any case, I gave Hermione a kiss on the cheek and promised to let her know the moment things were over.

To which, after receiving confirmation from Bletchley that yes, there was a Black Market in progress, and a message from a random Auror stating that you had been located (Harry) and escorted to your tent safely, I quickly organized a fairly detailed raid, extremely grateful for Bletchley deploying my mapping drones.

I know I've said this before, but having my drones map out the area really helps me keep track of who is going where and doing what. Especially since they give life signs so I know where the potential criminals are located. Using literally JUST that tech (I really missed my other tech! The communications devices alone are invaluable!), and relying on a group text - insanely enough - I managed to conduct the entire raid from the Auror tent.

Thus, it's currently over. We took in over two dozen people that might be involved, but probably at least a third of those just happened to be in the wrong place at the wrong time. It'll be up to Roche, Ramsey, and Fierston to determine who is actually guilty. Speaking of Fierston, now that he's been practicing his Legilimency for a while, I'm probably going to give him a surprise Final Exam tonight before I call it quits and go to bed. Should he pass as I feel confident he will, I will consider him a fully graduated student. If he doesn't, I'll have to give him a few more formal lessons when we return from Iran.

And who knows, maybe I'll even considering taking on another Legilimency student at some point. In any case, my current break is over, so I'm going to sign off, obtain some tea and biscuits, and finish up my paperwork while watching the others do their jobs.

Can you feel the love tonight?
Draco
Chapter 309

Chapter Summary

Harry is caught up in someone else's panic and hysteria for a change.

Chapter Notes

See the end of the chapter for notes

Monday July 2, 2018

Chief of Raids,

Hello, it is I, your husband. You know, the man who's so fragile that he had to be escorted to his tent. Escorted to the tent. Like some random wizard who either can't be trusted not to be a part of the problem or who no one has faith in his ability to keep himself safe. For crying out loud, I broke into Gringotts and the Ministry when I was seventeen! Hell, I've managed to get into the Ministry recently to "discuss" things with people who need discussing. I've blown through wards before Aurors can get through them in an attempt to get to one of my loved ones. I've ...

Hmmm, now that I am listing all the things I've interfered or blown through structured Auror plans maybe I wasn't escorted for my own safety but to make sure I didn't interfere with the raid. I might be a little offended. But really, that's fair. I have a history of ignoring best raiding practices to power through and get to the criminal. And I won't apologize for having done it before. When people's lives are in danger I don't care what protocol is, I'm going to blast in and get to my family.

But I suppose in this instance no one was in immediate danger and doing it the right way means no one was tipped off and you likely managed to capture everyone involved.

Not that NO ONE was in danger though. Did you see some of those "potions ingredients" they were selling? Mermaid fins? Adolescent dragon claws? And then there were the potions themselves, I don't need to be an auror to know full-powered amortentia is a no-no.

Anyway, enough about those criminals. I have the utmost faith that between my brilliant husband, Bletchley, and Rubbers, they will get what they deserve.

However, no one deserves what's happening right now. Well, except for me, I probably deserve to be on this end of things. See, through the months of wedding preparation, I have been blown away by how calm our Haz has been. I was surprised by how stress free the entire process has been leading up to a wedding of MY daughter and PANSY'S daughter! The children of a panicky little loon and a bridezilla were on a path towards a beautiful and stress free wedding.

I was surprised but then I thought about it and realized Pearl has lived with Pansy and is therefore aware of how obnoxious a bridezilla is and Hazel runs a thriving fashion business that often puts on events. So I assumed the calm preparation was going to last all the way to the wedding.

I assumed incorrectly. Hazel's genetic predisposition to panic has hit HARD. She woke me up this morning at the arse crack of dawn. It was so early that even I was a cranky arsehole being woken that early. Or that was probably from my own hysteria. When Haz woke me up practically in tears as the sun was rising, I assumed I was going to have to murder someone. Or that someone had been murdered. So I woke up, jumped out of bed, and immediately started looking for the threat.

There was no threat, just my sweet baby girl with tears in her big green eyes, worried about all the last minute things that we needed to fix "RIGHT THIS SECOND DADDY!!"

So, in case you've all woken up this afternoon and wondered where I am, I am with Hazel working on wedding stuff. I'm actually hiding in the cupboard to write this, I ran off when she took a loo break. Send help and coffee!

Shite! I think she heard me!

Hellllllllpppp!
Harry

Monday July 2nd
My dearest husbands,

Buawahahaha! After receiving Harry's plea for help, I ordered Muffy to prepare a half dozen cups of the best and most caffeinated coffee that Harry loves. I figured that if they were put in stasis, there might be enough to last throughout the day. That said, I made sure that one of the mugs was a beautifully decorated treasure that said: World's Best Dressed Bride.

This was to ensure that Hazel would drink from the right mug, which I added a drop or two of calming potion to. I can't guarantee that it'll work, and if it does, it may not work for long, but maybe it'll be enough to calm her down so that she will listen to reason. Worth a try, right?

Anyway, I carried the tray into the Ballroom personally, as I felt that I might actually be able to soothe Hazel temporarily just with my presence. In the ballroom, I found that Oliver had now been roped into the general chaos, but you didn't seem to mind, love, as you also have a soft spot for weddings. You might also have a bit more tolerance for panicky people than the average person.

Charming the tray to float on its own, I pulled Haz into my arms and gave her a big hug and a kiss on the cheek. "Have some coffee, love?"

She took in a deep breath, and then accepted my offering with gratitude. I gave her a kiss on the cheek. "If you have any shopping you need done, hand me a list and I'll see to it."

"Brilliant!" Hazel exclaimed, summoning a rather long list she had already prepared, some of which was decorating accents, but a LOT of which seemed to be things she wanted for her new house when they move in. Was this her wedding registry??? Rather than ask, I simply pocketed the list and promised to buy it all. If they should happen to get some or all of these things as gifts, they can decide which ones they want to keep or return.

I waited a moment for you, Harry, to stop attempting to gulp down the entire mug of coffee in one swallow, and then cast a breath freshening spell on you so that I could demand a possessive kiss free from the taste of that vile drink. I then did the same to Oliver.

"See you both when I get back from shopping," I murmured

"Oh sure, pick the easy task," Harry grumbled, earning another kiss. I used that action to cover slipping a clearly labeled bottle of Calming Drops into your hand, trusting that you would know what they were for.
Then I gave Oliver another kiss, wished you all luck, and made my escape. I am currently taking a full Tea Break at Claridge's before I get back to the grind. Probably not so surprisingly, I am making good progress on this list and I'm rather enjoying myself to boot.

You're (both) everything I need and more,
Draco

Chapter End Notes

The next chapter contains a line Chrissie wrote that made me laugh way too hard, and continues to make me laugh every time I reread/edit the chapter, lol. And yet, I think most people would just find it too true to be funny, lol ^_^
Chapter 310

Monday July 2, 2018

Draaaaayyyyyyycoooooooo!

You big faker, there's no way you can still be shopping! How much could Hazel possibly put on a single list for you to pick up? She can't have made that many demands ....

Wait, this is the child I've spent the entire day with. I apologize. I am well aware of her current level of things she wants done. If anyone is aware, it's me. And Pearl of course. I swear to you, your Goddaughter is an angel sent from the heavens. She has softly smiled through all of Hazel's neurotic behavior today. She has helped do the things that needed doing, delegated to the appropriate places where it made more sense to have someone else take care of it, and managed to talk Haz down off of probably a dozen metaphorical ledges.

Every time Hazel hit the point where I wanted to shake her and ask "you understand the peacocks can't actually learn choreography right?" Pearl stepped in, gave her a calming kiss, and distracted her with a much more reasonable project. You know I don't have favorites, but today Pearl might legitimately be my favorite. Not just my favorite niece or in-law, but truly my favorite person ever.

Sorry my loves, you brought me coffee and kisses, and Ollie probably talked me down from a half a dozen of my own panic-induced behaviors, but Pearl kept Hazel from going Full-Harry so she wins.

I'll keep the voting open though if you want to get in some extra credit points later ... in our rooms ...

naked.

This judge CAN be bribed!

But in all seriousness, thank you both so much for your help today. Ollie, as usual, you were such a calming presence for me during the shenanigans. And Draco, you brought me coffee and calming drops.

Completely unrelated question; how many calming drops are too many to sneak into someone's drink? Asking for a friend.

Don't worry! I didn't give our Haz the entire bottle or anything! That would have been impossible because I took some for myself. I think they were a really good balance to all the caffeine from the coffees.

Everyone else was a bit jealous though that you brought me half a dozen coffees and none for anyone else but Hazel. So I had Muffy make a few more. And we all agreed it was absolutely delicious and you had no idea what you were talking about with your breath freshening charm before you'd even smooch me nonsense! Oh well, more coffee for me then!

Today was definitely an eye-opening experience, but I think the funniest thing to me was which bride was the mess and which bride was cool as a cucumber. Just remembering all the emails you sent me from Russia when Pansy was getting married where you were keeping her calm and wanting to wring her bridezilla neck. So DRACO'S child was bouncing off the walls in a panic while PANSY'S child kept a pretty mask on and kept things moving.
Less surprising was the apparent registry list being a mile long. That definitely sounds like Draco Malfoy's and Pansy Parkinson's children.

I am officially tapping out for tomorrow though! Yesterday was much too scheduled with it being the end of the tournament so I couldn't do my traditional Grandpa Harry birthday special for Charlotte's eighth birthday, so I promised I will take her out for a movie and ice cream. And I can't put it off any longer because Miles' last big show is having its closing night this week and they're taking off for that extended summer holiday they told you about when you were amnesiac as soon as the wedding is over Saturday night.

But don't worry I'll be refreshed and ready to take on Hurricane Hazel bright and early Wednesday morning. And if either of you need tea or kisses reinforcements, I suppose I can make myself available for such things.

I am going to head to bed now though before Haz regains consciousness ... I mean wakes up from her completely natural nap .... and needs something else.

Deviously,
Harry

You...

You really drank a half a dozen coffees all by yourself? I don't know why I'm surprised by this, honestly! I thought it was just you and Hazel, and the half dozen was to be split between you throughout the day - hence the stasis - but then when I saw Oliver, I figured you'd share with him too. But apparently, when I said I'd brought them to you, you took that literally, sheesh! At least you called for more so the others could have some too, haha.

Note to self, never get between my man and his coffee!

In any case, now that I've finished buying everything on the list I was given, I'm preparing for tomorrow's marathon of helping out more directly by spending the next few hours in River's Song getting the full treatment. I might be home before you fall asleep, especially since you had so much coffee.

Digga digga doo,
Draco

P.S. For that friend you were talking about, a person could give someone the entire bottle of calming drops and it wouldn't harm them, just probably make them go to sleep.
Tuesday July 3, 2018

Meeeeeee,

Yes, I drank all the coffees! If you wanted me to share more than just the one mug, you probably should have labeled them all for other people. Otherwise I will assume all generous coffee flavored gifts brought into the room by my husband are for me. Although you are also Ollie's husband, so I probably should have assumed at least one of them was his. But as you mentioned, not a concern since they all ended up with their own mugs of coffee.

Would you judge me if I were to tell you that I also had additional cups brought to me by Muffy?

I still ended up asleep before you got home last night though. I had most of the caffeine early in the day, so by the time bedtime rolled around, not only was I exhausted, but I'd worked all the caffeine out of my body. I had a pretty bad caffeine drop actually. And instead of drinking more coffee to top myself off, I realized passing out and sleeping off the drop was probably a better choice.

Today I am quite thankful I thought to go to bed early. I promised Lottie I'd spend the day with her to celebrate her birthday but I also knew Hazel is a terrifying ... hehehe STORM ... that can take over the best laid plans. So, I set my alarm for even before sunrise, got ready, and headed out for the day before I could get dragged into the planning session. I obviously didn't want to unnecessarily wake our Granddaughter up early, so I went off to her favorite (non-Grandpa) bakery and picked up her favorite banana chocolate chip muffins. I grabbed sweets for Sammy, Miles, and Colm as well.

By the time I got there with the treats, two hot cocoas, a tea, and two cups of coffee, their house was just beginning to stir. I had a lovely breakfast and some sweet grandchild cuddles. We had already decided to do a movie and ice cream for our date, but obviously I got there much earlier than planned. It worked out pretty well though, Lottie ended up wanting to see Incredibles 2, so the five of us cuddled up with our baked goods and watched the first Incredibles. When that finished, I took us all out for lunch at Zaire's Langa.

After lunch we split up, Miles and Colm taking Sammy home while Charlotte and I went off to the movies. We had such a blast! I was up to my elbows in little girl giggles and buttered popcorn. It's silly really, but I am going to miss them so much while they're gone on their trip. The ridiculous part is that we're leaving for Iran in a week anyway! It's not like we'd be around to spend much time with them over the next month. But there's something a little emotional about knowing they won't actually be here to be missing US!

My favorite part of the day was when we ran into Blohards, and when he leaned down to give Lottie's cheek a creepy pinch, she kicked him in the shin!

I know I said Pearl was my favorite yesterday, but Lottie is in the lead today.

Oddly enough he didn't seem able to ask when you were coming back into the Ministry. It was one of the first times I've seen him where he hasn't tried to guilt trip and pressure me into trying "not to be such a control freak Potter" or to "let Draco off your leash." It was just too drastic compared to our last run in. Practically like magic it was.

After ice cream I decided to take a page out of Grandpa Draco's book and take my little sweethearth out for a little pampering. Don't worry, we didn't do the whole top to bottom relaxation package, but I figured a little mani-pedi wouldn't take up too much time.

Now that I've dropped her back off to her dads and sibling, I decided to swing over to Cafe Exquis and come home bearing gifts for the wedding crew. I may have been willing to skip one day of panic, but I'm not heartless!

See you all soon!

Love,
Harry

Thursday July 5th
Dear Harry and Oliver,

I am the worst dad ever! I just can't take it anymore! I'm officially hiding until it's time to show up and have the wedding! Also, I'm not just hiding, but hiding in the Forbidden Forest so that Hazel can't find me.

See you when it's time for me to return and get ready.

All my love,
Your cowardly husband,
Draco

Chapter End Notes

Note, it really hasn't occurred to Draco to ask Harry about Robards, lol. Draco just assumes that Harry doesn't like him, as usual ^_^
Chapter 312

Chapter Summary

Harry talks about Hazel's wedding.

Sunday July 8, 2018

My Beloveds,

We survived! We've had Hazel and Pearl's wedding and come out alive on the other side! No Draco, you are not the worst Dad ever. Our sweet girl was in fine form and pushed us all to our limits. Thankfully that is over and we will never have to plan another wedding for or with her! There will be some stress in the upcoming weeks, I'm sure, while their new home is being built, but we will be in Iran and thankfully will miss the entirety of that process.

We leave tomorrow for Iran, a place that our Ollie and most of our youngest kids have never been. And a place where the rest of us haven't visited in nine years. It was such a hard time for our family, we had to take a lot of time to heal after our experiences there. But it was also an experience that changed our family for the better. We were able to help so many people. We grew closer as a family. And we got our Jasmine out of the deal. But even with all the silver lining we found, it was still not somewhere I think we ever thought of visiting again. And yet, tomorrow we set off, to help fundraise, to help continue the healing process, to lend a hand wherever it's needed. I'm nervous but also looking forward to it.

But before we set off on this adventure, I think I want to talk about something a lot less stressful ... yesterday's wedding!

Yes, even after the drama of the week leading up to the wedding, it was not a stressful day at all. I guess our Hazel got all of her nerves and hysteria out in the days before, which left her ready to enjoy every moment of promising her life to the woman she loves. It was such a beautiful day!

I love that our girls chose to have their wedding at the site of their new home. They break ground tomorrow, but for the wedding, it was just wide open space. A beautiful field of wildflowers. I think the idea of starting their marriage on the land they'll make their home is heartwarming. You know how much I've loved having our weddings in the space we've made our home, built our family, loved and lived. I can look out the windows and see the trees that shaded us while we promised each other forever. Now our Hazel will have that same amazing feeling in her new home.

I especially love that their new home will be close enough to the Manor that Hazel actually got ready for her wedding in her childhood bedroom. Surrounded by her siblings. It was, in my opinion, a lovely way for her to say a sweet goodbye to her childhood.....

Oh Draco and Ollie, our baby girl is through her childhood! She's a young woman. A bride. She's someone's wife! How did this happen?!?!?!

Breathe Harry, breathe. This is what happens, children grow up ....

Oh my Gods! All of our children are going to be done with their childhoods someday! They are all going to grow older and leave us! Why?!?!

Breathe, in one two three, out one two three. You've got years and years before this happens. Little caboose (who is yet unnamed!) has eighteen more years before they head off and leave their Daddies. You can do this!

Anyway, I love that their wedding being close by meant that Haz got ready at our home. But the thing I love the most about the location is how - with an entire world at their fingertips - Hazel and Pearl chose to make their home a stone's throw away from us. There was no pressure from us. I wouldn't dream of being those controlling parents who try to trick their children into staying where I can manipulate their lives. No, they both love the land, they both spent so much of their childhoods running amok through the fields of Wiltshire, that they knew this was the place they needed to put down roots.

I made my way into Hazel's room that morning, not sure what I was going to encounter. I thought there was a chance that the panicky little Harry clone was going to be in charge. But no, she was calm and serene and oh so beautiful. I actually asked Eris how many calming drops she had given her sister and she told me she didn't have to give her any. Apparently, waking up knowing she was going to marry the love of her life that day meant Hazel waking up calm and ready to begin the rest of her life.

The both of you joined us on and off throughout the morning. Draco, you sent Ollie in first to get the lay of the land. But you were as pleasantly surprised as I was to find the whole room to be full of love and laughter with no drama. Once you knew that, you settled in right next to our daughter, glass of champagne in hand, and that gorgeous Malfoy smirk on your face. The only time you left before you had to get ready yourself was to head off to where Pearl was getting ready so you could love on your Goddaughter on her wedding day.

You know I could easily go on and on about the wedding. But I think I will stick with the highlights. Hazel's choice to have the three of us walk her down the aisle meant I started the day crying and my face stayed pretty damp most of the day. It's hard to have three men walk one daughter down the aisle, so she had us do it in stages. She started with her newest Dad Oliver, Draco was stationed about a third of the way down the aisle, and I was another third past that.

But first down the aisle was our sweet Luka. With so many young nieces, nephews, godchildren, and siblings that could have been in the wedding, Hazel and Pearl decided to go simple. Just Hazel's Godson as the ring bearer, and Eris and Paige standing in as their attendants. Wasn't our Luka so sweet with his bare toes, those little suspenders, and the clutch of flowers he wanted to bring to his Tetya? We were a bit worried he wouldn't make it all the way down the aisle, so we had one of the littlest unicorns guide him down. He clung onto the golden rope we'd tied to her bridle and he made his way all the way down like a champ!
It does help that all his aunties and uncles were sitting in the front with sweets for him (and treats for the unicorn) once he'd finished his walk!

Then the maids of honor went down the aisle. Eris and Paige were stunning in their coordinating, but not matching dresses. Eris, looking elegant in her floor length deep blue tulle dress and matching long shawl. The entirety of the dress covered in gold-embroidered constellations. The entire look was finished by the beautiful Navy and Yellow-Gold Calla Lily bouquet she was carrying. Oh! And the kick-arse golden heels!

Paige had the same beautiful bouquet and killer heels, but as she's only fourteen her dress was a bit less elegant and a bit more playful. It had a deep navy solid mini-dress covered in a navy sheer long sleeved and knee length dress. Again, covered in stars.
While the little Ring Bearer was adorable. And the Maids of Honor looked gorgeous. No one could possibly hold a candle to the brides. Hazel designed her own dress, but as Pearl wanted to keep hers a surprise Hazel couldn't design hers. I've since found out that Pearl asked Eris to design her dress. It's been Hazel and Eris and then Hazel and Pearl for so long that I sometimes forget it's been a lifetime of Hazel, Eris, AND Pearl. I seemed to have forgotten how good of friends Eris has always been with Pearl.

Pearl was glowing. She was dressed in a blush-colored mermaid dress. The fitted portion beaded and embellished, while the knees down contained a riot of satin ruffles. Elegant, while also being playful and fun.

However, no one was more beautiful (even you my loves) than our Hazel. I don't even know how to describe Hazel's dress. She looked like some delicate fairy. Swathed in layers and layers of blush chiffon. It could have looked like she was hiding behind fabric, but instead she looked like something otherworldly. It was off the shoulder, the chiffon knotted in places to accentuate her feminine figure. And while all the rest of the women in the party were wearing fancy heels, I could see Haz's bare toes peeping out the bottom of her dress with each step she took.
Watching Ollie hand off our girl to Draco, then having her handed off to me, and finally handing her off to Pearl was the beginning of a tearful blur for me. I know the ceremony was beautiful. But all I can remember was the tears of happiness and being in the middle of my husbands holding my hands. Grounding me. Keeping me rooted to the moment.

I'm just thankful we're wizards and I could have Draco cast a calming charm at my eyes so they weren't red and puffy for the pictures!

Once we took about a million pictures, the entire circle of loved ones went back to get ready for the reception. With Miles' last show ending and a new one not starting up for a while, it meant his club was free and clear. I know you had hoped they would want to hold their reception at the Manor, but I think these young women holding it in a club was so perfectly them. They had a sweet, quiet, beautiful wildflower filled wedding and then headed off to a club to dance the night away.

And any disappointment you may have felt probably went out the window when you realized the change in venues meant time for a costume change! Most of the guests changed from wedding finery, to mostly appropriate clubbing clothes. Mysel, Draco, and Ollie changed into full-coverage Muggle clubwear while the older generations stayed in their traditional wedding robes.

But Hazel and Pearl blew everyone away with their beautiful wedding themed party dresses. Pearl had changed into a lace-embroidered floral white fitted dress. It would have looked at home in the pages of a Bridal magazine with the exception of it being short enough to barely cover her bum. While Hazel changed into a spaghetti strapped lacy, floral, tiny flowing mini-dress. They looked like brides on their way to do some serious damage on the dance floor. Which, in fact, they were.
Watching these two young beautiful women look into each other's eyes, singing to each other, while dancing their first song as wives, John Legend's 'All of Me' was a moment I will cherish forever. Someone, someone amazing, someone I love with all of my heart, was able to see our daughter, see all of her, and fell in love with that all.

When our Hazel first came out to us, and to be fair it was really Pearl who brought her out, my biggest fear was that the world wouldn't accept my wonderful daughter. My lovely Hazel with the giant heart. My happy girl with her arms wide open to accept anyone and everyone. I worried she wouldn't be accepted. Worried she'd never know the joy of falling in love. And now here she is, marrying the love of her life. As all the Gods as my witness, Pearl will never want for anything as long as she lives.

Nor will any of our other children because I have no shame in spoiling them all!

The rest of the night was a haze of dancing fun, joy, hugs, love, and cake. It was everything I wanted it to be for our girls. And getting to spend the night in the arms of my loves just can't be beat!

But now I suppose I've put it off long enough, I should get to packing. T minus twenty hours before we depart!

Yours,
Harry

Tuesday July 10th ātashé del-am

Oh... Iran...

So here we are. We sort of half vowed to never come back here, but considering that it's been nearly 10 years and we've managed to heal, it seemed like a good thing to do for the anniversary of our last (until recently) Unity House. The last one WE actually created and not just me filing paperwork and being obligated to follow through on it.

Pippa, as capable and competent as ever, managed to rent us a large mansion in the wealthier area of Kermanshah - the capital city in the province of Kermanshah, Iran. We chose it all those years ago (the province of Kermanshah) because it was on the border of Iraq and had one of the 10 most populated cities in all of Iran in the province in case we needed things that just couldn't be found in smaller cities or towns. Or middles of nowhere.

As for Unity itself, it's actually located in a different county of the province, outside a small to medium sized city called Qasr-e Shirin. This is as close to the border of Iraq that we could get while still feeling relatively safe. And of course, we chose the most isolated part along the Hulwan River we could find to set up Unity so that once it was established in the fairly fertile landscape, it had a good chance of sustaining itself with small scale farming and large gardens.

The winter is rather mild, but of course, WE chose bloody hot and arid summer to visit, sigh. Good thing we are masters at cooling charms!

But as I was saying, Pippa rented us a mansion on the other side of the province that is still in Apparation range, and also, had it temporarily connected to the local floo system during our stay. The reason we needed a mansion and couldn't just stay in one of the hotels in Qasr-e Shirin is that we had more people coming with us than originally expected.

See, we thought that with most of the adults and teen children busy doing their own things, it would most likely just be the littles coming with us. That made sense, right?

OH NO! River and Mahafsoun had to go back to America after the wedding for her show, but Orion insisted that he HAD to come with us, with Gemini, Ben, and Mara. Alright fine. The rest of the adult children are busy doing their own thing, right? Nope. Yes, Hazel and Pearl are busy - having just gotten married and wanting to stay near their home as it's being built, but Eris most definitely wanted to visit Iran again. Hazel actually said she will probably come for the actual gala, but until then, Eris lugged Eric and Luka with her.

What about Viona? She's too busy, right? Nope again. It seems that she would sooner go bankrupt than miss returning to Iran with the family, and she naturally brought Alric and Cassie with her (which Oliver is delighted by). (Note: there's no way in bloody hell that a simple extended vacation would make her go bankrupt.)

What are we at so far? The three of us plus... 10 adult children, or rather, four adult children and their families/partners/baby daddy.

Then I had actually counted on both Siri and Zwei not wanting to come with, since they were both still rather young 10 years ago and only barely remember being here. I was right about Siri; he is taking the opportunity to stay with his team for the summer to do as many practices as possible to learn as many new techniques as he can. Zwei - on the other hand - had nothing better to do (and can post to the magi-web anywhere in the world), and so, came with us. I'm rather happy about that.

Unexpectedly, Jules demanded to come with us, having never really traveled before. He was excited to see some of the local rich history, having a hidden passion for archaeology, which I'm looking forward to exploring with him while he's here. Oh, and in case you somehow missed it, he brought Romeo. Apparently Romeo's parents don't mind their son traipsing across the world with us, which I don't understand because he is a lovely boy and if I was his father (or mother, shrugs), I'd want him around all the time. Except when he's heartbroken, in which case, he can cry on someone else's lap for a change.

Luckily, he and Jules are getting along so well that it might actually be a forever thing. It's still early days, but we'll see.
But back to our large rented mansion in Iran. We hadn't counted on Shtara coming with because we assumed that she'd be performing in her show until fall, but apparently, that was wrong as the play was scheduled to end at the end of July, and she negotiated with the powers that be to end her role a few weeks early so that she could come with us. Zaire stayed behind with Callista and his restaurant, but plans to pop in at least once to go on a food tour (so we may not actually see him), while Jaz wouldn't have passed this opportunity up for love nor money. She naturally brought Vani... and the core of their film crew.

Which just leaves the ones we always assumed were coming: Persephone, Lily, Caelum, Atreyu, Nora, Gabriel, Dylan, and Morgana. So... 27 of us (plus Jaz and Vani's crew), more if I remember to add Pippa, Leah, Sirius, and their boys (and all our elves) to the count. Honestly, we probably needed a bigger mansion, hahahahaha!

As for Elena, she and her crew are still tying up all the loose strings for her school and move to Spain. That said, she promised they would come to the Gala.

You know, if I'm honest, I was genuinely surprised by Orion, Eris, and Viona, but I probably shouldn't have been. 10 years ago, they were definitely old enough to help out - and more importantly - remember doing so and... amazingly, feel like it was a mostly good experience that they look forward to helping out with again.

Our kids are bloody brilliant! How did we get so blessed?!

Today was spent unpacking and settling in. Our first mission is to shop and sightsee a bit tomorrow and Thursday, but then on Friday, we have the official visit/meeting with Unity House Iran and it's staff. I remember fondly how our favorite caregiver back in the day was Kamaria; who was so wonderful and GIVING that we named Jasmine's middle name after her. Well, it seems that Kamaria has worked her way into leading Unity House, so that's even MORE reason to look forward to the meeting.

Interestingly enough, as much as I'm looking forward to reconnecting with Kamaria, Viona, Orion, and Eris are looking forward even MORE to seeing some of the kids they bonded with. Usually, they would expect those kids to have been adopted out a long time ago, but there were simply SO MANY war orphans with challenging injuries that ended up here, that realistically, most of them are probably still here. The good thing is that those who are now officially too old to live in Unity House, have been able to stay on as part of the staff.

I will admit that out of all the Unity Houses we created, I'm possibly most proud of this one, because it created some much needed opportunities for women in the area. True, other Unity Houses were in areas where women needed a tiny slice of equality and opportunity, but here...

Anyway, I could go on and on, but one of the best parts about this mansion we're staying in is a nice big pool. So I'm going to end here for now and go swim in it to cool off from the heat of the day. It's so hot today that even poor Jules and Romeo seem unwilling to create any heat between them, buwahahahaha!

Sadly, it's so hot today that I'm not entirely willing to create any heat between us either. We're DEFINITELY casting a good half dozen cooling charms on our bedroom tonight!

Oh can't you see, you belong to me,
Draco

P.S. Oh! How in the bloody hell did I completely forget??? Probably because they're YOURS, but... well, Dudley, Donna, and their kids decided to tag along, and not just as a family holiday that is mostly paid. They (shockingly) want to help out a bit with the Gala.
P.P.S. I'm so sorry, Oliver my love. I honestly DIDN'T mean to forget that your parents tagged along as well. I just… didn't really spend much time with them on the flight here, and so, I suppose they got lost in the crowd, hahaha. Ask Pippa how many times I've forgotten about her when she's literally been AT MY BACK, and then maybe you won't feel so vexed that I forgot to include your parents in my email head count. Love you!

P.P.P.S. And since I'm on the subject of people I forgot to add to the official head count, there was one... person? that I didn't recognize, and so, probably Teddy? Hang on... Yep! He's wearing his name pendant! and wait! Isn't that Mac with him? HOW in the bloody hell did I not notice THEM on the damn plane?!

P.P.P.P.S. We've far surpassed 40 people, haven't we? Oh well, the more hands, the better. This House isn't going to know what hit it, buwahahahahaha!
Chapter 313

Chapter Summary

Harry wonders why they didn't return to Iran sooner and Draco is rather alarmed.

Chapter Notes

See the end of the chapter for notes

Friday July 13, 2018

My Own,

Why did we wait so long to come back here? Well, don't answer that. I KNOW why we waited so long to come back here. And perhaps if we had come back before now we wouldn't have been ready. Maybe it wouldn't have been a good experience. Heck, we haven't even been to Unity House itself yet, maybe it's still not going to be a good experience. But for now, I've had an absolutely lovely couple of days.

We got tons of sightseeing and shopping in yesterday and Wednesday. You can babble about that if you'd like, but I am more excited to talk about the wonderful time I've had with our family these last few days then actually talk about what we've seen or purchased.

You know how unbelievably proud I am of our Shtara. She is brilliant and motivated. She's talented and charismatic. She can control an entire room with a single note of song. But she's also my little girl. She's fifteen years old and I feel as though I never get to see her.

Realistically of course I see her. We see her throughout the weekdays when she has time off from her shows. We go see her perform fairly regularly. I like to pop over during time off from that job I don't have anymore!!! But she's a full time working woman who I sometimes wish would be underfoot and bugging me to take her shopping or bake her sweets.

I know she has a lifetime ahead of her to dazzle the world. She loves what she does and she's amazing at it. But I am so so so thrilled that she ended her run earlier than expected. Mostly selfishly I love that I get to see her so often. But also, she's got a beautiful set of pipes and a lifetime ahead of her to use them. I hate the idea of her straining them or not resting her voice properly and potentially damaging them.

Watching her these last few days while sightseeing has been fun. Just seeing her be a fifteen year old silly tourist. But it's been our time at "home" that's been my favorite so far. We've lounged by the pool, we've sat around snacking on crisps in our jammies late into the evening (you can pull a girl out of the theatre but ....). Gods, I've just really enjoyed these few days of relative normality.

Just like Zaire, he's just a little boy. He's my little buddy. He used to follow me around everywhere and now he's not even following when we leave the country! I miss him. I'm trying so hard not to guilt trip him into spending more time with us. He's spreading his wings and heaven forbid I try to clip those wings. I want him to experience everything life has to offer. I just wish he was home more.
Is it so wrong that as we wandered around that bazaar with upwards of forty people with us, all I could focus on were my babies that weren't with us? I get the adult babies that weren't with us, I don't expect Lainie, Parker, River, or Haz to follow us around their entire lives. But Siri and Z are just teeny tiny little boys who should be with their Daddies!

But then again, with those kids I'm missing, I am also pleasantly surprised at the ones who chose to join us. I feel as though I haven't seen Mac in forever! It's amazing that he's here with us. And as usual, I know he'll bring his special empathic gifts to the Kids at Unity.

I have such mixed feelings about Unity Iran, mostly about the Kids who live there. A part of me is so sad for them that many of them have essentially lived their entire lives within the House. The realities of the area mean many of them were never adopted. But then again, it wasn't just one or two children that lived there for most of their childhood. They may have never been adopted, but they certainly had a loving and close knit family they grew up with.

I'm so proud that all that heartbreaking work we did all those years ago meant a safe and loving home for them to grow up in. A home that was good enough that many of them chose to make it their livelihood as they became adults. What better proof of how amazing Unity Iran became can there be than the fact that when given the chance to leave, so many choose to stay?

And because I'm already admitting to some of my more self-centered feelings, I will admit that I LOVE the fact that we have come back a decade later and when we go there later today I will see faces I knew and loved all those years ago.

I'm a bit nervous to see Kamaria. I think that's why I am writing this right now instead of trying to rush everyone out the door. She was so wonderful to our family. I love her so much. She was so important to us we named our daughter after her! And then we went away and didn't come back. I know we kept in touch. I know we've sent letters and pictures. But it's not the same as visiting.

Do you think she'll be happy to see us? Or do you think a part of her hates us for abandoning her? For abandoning them all? You mentioned the sustainability of their farming or gardening, I think that's what kept them able to keep going as long as they did. Without as much funding going into Unity Iran as other Unity Houses, they've really made it work and thrive on their own.

I swear to anyone listening that I will make this gala the best event I've ever put together! I will make up for my own inadequacies and make sure they are able to keep this place thriving for many years to come.

Hope you brought the checkbook baby because this one is going to be a doozy!

Shamefully,
Harry

P.S. Alright, time to get the lead out. Let's go you slowpokes!!
Our kids who were here before had teary eyed reunions with friends - which made me feel guilty that I've never donated a bunch of magi-tablets so the kids could Magi-Skype with each other. I plan to fix that as soon as possible. That said, one of the things that nearly made ME cry was when Shtara went around personally greeting all the kids. She wasn't here back then, but has heard about what happened. She thought she was prepared to face the reality, but she wasn't. Seeing kids missing limbs or covered in burns really got to her, but rather than run and hide, she put on a mini concert of all her favorite songs.

And if that wasn't amazing enough, the fact that she was on the verge of tears just made her sound all the better. The kids here may not have seen her plays, but they know the movies and positively LOVED hearing her sing their favorite songs. As I listened, she sang one from Moana that made me wonder if she was planning to audition (Who are we kidding? At this point, she probably wouldn't need to audition to get the job) for that play next.

Anyway, as I was saying - Oh hang on. I just received an owl from Kamaria...

Huh... She didn't write much, just that an elderly couple came into Unity today asking an uncomfortable question, and she'd like one of us (I'll do it because I took delivery of the owl) to go visit her/them briefly.

Also, the both of you are currently feeding everyone except me lunch as I basically just woke up, so, definitely best if I go. Hang on, I'll not sign off so that I can add whatever the question is to my email.

-

Erm... So... Well... This might be a bit of drama. Harry, if you are not sitting while reading this, please sit. See... erm... What happened was that that elderly couple had one hell of a question to ask. It seems that on Thursday, they spotted someone out shopping that they would swear up and down that is dead.

Their daughter.

Except NOT their daughter as - if she was still alive - she'd be in her late 30s. So, rather spooked by what appeared to be a living ghost, they did some research. The same research they did do around 10 years ago, but this time, they had different results.

A while back, their daughter and her husband were traveling on a bit of an aid mission. For the most part, the couple was safe, and expecting their third child. The older two were in this couple's care. A boy and a girl, in case you were dying to know. In any case, they received word that the place their daughter and her husband was staying was bombed.

Their initial research concluded that the couple AND the unborn child were all dead, but the more recent research was not so certain, and told them that while their daughter and her husband were dead (the bodies had been documented, which could be shown to them), the fact was that the baby was not in the mother's body, and they weren't certain what had happened to it, except that all surviving orphaned children were sent to Unity Iran.

Armed with this knowledge, they located the place and showed up to ask if their grandchild was currently or previously at Unity. And... the only baby that fit the description that ALSO happened to be out shopping on Thursday is...

Jasmine.
Yeah... so the baby we had no idea who her parents were or any inclination as to where she came from (aside from a bombed out area over in Iraq), the baby we fell in love with at first sight and adopted, the baby we've watched grow into a beautiful young girl...

She might have biological family right here in this city. And... Suddenly I'm scared. Will they want her back? Will SHE want to be with her grandparents and siblings? If it came down to a legal battle, would their government ever actually side with non citizens over citizens who have a valid familial claim?

Sigh... I'm going to go... meditate. In the pool. I think we should each digest this information for a bit and talk it over before we say anything at all to Jaz.

Come find me when you are ready to talk.

Everything I do, I do it for you (both. And all our kids.),
Draco

Chapter End Notes

Blessed Yule! ^_^
Harry reassures Draco, who is slightly more at ease now.

Breathe Darling,

Hey, hey, hey. I need you to breathe Love. This is good news. I know, it's terrifying thinking about potentially losing our child. But you and I both know that will not happen. That will never happen. We have all the legal standing, we know Unity Iran did its due diligence in not allowing the adoption to become official before all available avenues were checked.

If you'll remember, we had her at only a day or two old. We knew she was ours. We even took her home with us when we left Iran. But while we were her legal guardians immediately, the adoption wasn't official until she was almost nine months old. Simply because they don't want to have to deal with a legal battle until they could be reasonably assured she didn't have any family.

Maybe if it were her biological PARENTS looking for her there may be a scarier claim to our daughter, but these are the grandparents.

And as you and Ollie are probably well aware, I'm not worried because she is our daughter and if there really were a fear she'd be taken from us, I know of a lovely place we can go where they will not find her. The only thing that would stop me is if SHE wanted to go and live with them. I know my daughter, there's no way she'd leave her family for these people she doesn't know. Not to mention the fact that they don't even speak the same language as our child. I mean, I only know the information you've given me, but I have to assume an elderly Iranian couple is unlikely to speak BSL.

However, in my opinion, none of this will be an issue at all. I don't need to steal her away in the dead of night. We won't have to get the Malfoy Lawyer Armada involved. We have ALWAYS been up front with our children about who they are and where they came from. Jaz knows all about her background in a generalized way, but now she can know who her parents were, she can know her relatives, she can and will have a relationship. Just like we used to send River to his grandparents on Rosalie's side every summer, I have no issues sending or bringing Jaz for extensive visits with her newfound siblings and grandparents.

I can't imagine her relatives wanting so badly to own her that they can't see how willing and able we will be to facilitate a good relationship. We can send her to visit here, they can come visit. Hell, you know as well as I do that if they wanted their own vacation home in Wiltshire, we'd be happy to provide them a place nearby where they could see Jaz every single day if they so chose.

I, personally, am quite excited to see her family members. To see if she resembles her grandparents. To see if she looks just like her siblings. I'm even curious, because we've never been able to ascertain if her hearing impairment was a result of being in the explosive area she was found in or is it potentially a genetic condition? I know you're worried, and maybe if you weren't worried enough for all of us I might be panicking myself, but I'm actually quite excited to see what comes of this new development!
I'll give you about an hour or so to read this, deal with your emotions, and then Ollie and I will come find you to talk.

Yours For Always,
Harry

Sunday July 15th
My solid foundations,

After being calmed by you both, and talking to Jaz last night, we decided to be proactive. The potential grandparents had left me their details, and I contacted them asking if they'd like to meet with Jasmine. And take a 'paternity' test to prove that she really is the baby they think she is. They are gracious and confident, agreeing right away.

Thus at 2PM today, just in time for a lovely tea, Radin and Pantea Avin emerged from our floo. That was actually a good sign, I suppose, that they are a local wizarding family, which would be almost required for Jaz to have magic. I personally believe that with her ability to Apparate as an infant, she almost certainly could not have been muggle born. In any case, the Avins stepped out of the floo and looked around in amazement at the opulence of our rented mansion.

We tried to keep it rather small, and so, it was just the three of us, Jaz, Leah, and Pippa.

I took the lead by performing the introductions. "Mr. and Mrs. Avin, this is Jasmine Kamaria Malfoy, my first husband Harry, my second husband Oliver, Jasmine's dedicated nanny and interpreter Leah, and my invaluable assistant Pippa. Jaz love, these are your potential grandparents, Radin and Pantea."

Leah was naturally interpreting, but I had also spelled out their names in sign because I had seen the names on their contact details and figured that Leah might not be able to assume that Ra-deen was spelled Radin.

Jasmine smiled and gave them a quick and respectful nod of her head as she signed: "Lovely to meet you." Which Leah interpreted for her. (Lucky the Avins speak English!)

"Do you mind if we perform the test before we sit down for refreshments?" I asked, eager to get that part over either way.

"Please do," Radin permitted with a kind smile and a nod.

I used my wand because I hadn't really ever had a need to practice this particular spell wandlessly. Taking the time to ensure that I performed it correctly, I cast the spell to determine blood relationship. I felt strangely happy even as my heart sank when the test confirmed that they were indeed Jaz' grandparents.

"Well... that's that, I suppose. Jaz, my love, it's true, they really are your grandparents," I informed her in both spoken and sign language.

She asked if that meant it was true she had a brother and a sister too then.

"Jasmine would like to know about her siblings," I interpreted.

Pantea smiled, looking nearly bursting with happiness and sadness. "Your sister Rohzan is about to turn 15, and your brother Kaveh is 12. I'm sorry if this sounds rude, but we didn't realize that Jasmine was deaf. Did something happen to her?"

Well, I suppose that answers that as well. It can't be genetic if they assumed she was hearing.

You smiled supportively. "As far as we can tell, it happened before or shortly after she was born... probably when the place they were staying in was bombed..."

This visibly saddened the Avins for a moment before they smiled at Jasmine again. "We are so happy to meet you. We grieved for our daughter and her husband, of course, but it was sadder by far to think about a child who never got to experience a single breath."

With that, we invited them to sit for tea. Jaz insta-owled Vani, Shtara, and Zwei to come in and join us. She proudly (via Leah) introduced her brother, sister, and cousin, even going so far as to explain that Shtara was adopted from New York, Zwei was born to us, and Vani was adopted by one of my brothers.

That led to Jaz and Vani telling them ALL about their TV show for deaf children, until Shtara decided that it was time to tell them a little about her plays - which could well have lasted the rest of the night, except that all our littles ran into the room to demand attention (and probably a snack). Persephone and Lily rapidly signed questions to Jaz such as: Will you film us rock climbing/skating around the city? - Which Leah interpreted for the Avins.

Jaz and Vani did an impromptu planning session for a segment of their show in which they incorporated exploring the city and surrounding country (as much as we'd comfortably allow) by skating and climbing when possible.

Nora sat in Jasmine's lap and spoke to her in French, which Jaz can understand so long as she is wearing the translating contacts I made for her. Which she apparently was because she signed responses.

As that bit of chaos was ensuing, I introduced the littles to the Avins, who looked a bit overwhelmed by the sheer amount of kids in the room. The chaos did NOT settle down, as the rest of our large extended family decided that it was definitely time for tea and joined us. Aside from being overwhelmed, I think the Avins realized something very important.

We really ARE Jasmine's family. In every sense of the word. We've ALL fallen into the habit of signing everything we say when she's in the room, even if we're not talking to her directly. Which means that it's clear that we do our best to include her no matter what, and that is something they will have to work on if they want to have a relationship with her.

The visit ended with Jaz asking if the Avins would return when they felt ready and bring her brother and sister for her to meet. The Avins said they would discuss it with Rohzan and Kaveh, and then let us know. If they DO decide to come back and pursue this relationship, I'm going to give them magi-tablets so that they can Magi-Skype with her as much as they want.

In any case, I'm feeling... better... than I was before. A little more at ease with the situation, but not quite happy about it yet. I'll get there.

All for love,
Draco
Chapter 315

Chapter Summary

The Avins return for another visit with Jasmine, this time bringing her siblings.

Monday July 16, 2018

My Everything,

Gods Draco, you summed up our entire life in one email. Starting out with a "We tried to keep it rather small, and so, it was just ..." and then ending with a bunch of innocent people being overwhelmed by our entire entourage, chaos, a telly program planning session, multiple languages being spoken, and an impromptu musical performance.

I feel as though yesterday went well. Hopefully it went a ways into proving to you, Draco, that no one is taking our daughter away. And to remind you that she isn't leaving on her own. Those (admittedly lovely) people can and should be PART of her family. But we ARE her family. She knows it. She knows where she belongs. She's known whose arms she belonged in from her very first accidental magic.

We need to head off to Unity House in roughly negative five minutes to do some serious Gala prep so this is going to be embarrassingly short, but I wanted to bring up an idea.

We have the gala next weekend. I know it will be amazing and I'm excited to really hunker down and get this accomplished. Side note: I think with how well they've managed because of their ability to farm I think we should do something with the gala about farming, maybe a performance? And possibly have a pre-party out near the fields? Or ask everyone who comes to bring a plant or a goat or something. Please be aware from these suggestions that I know absolutely nothing about living off the land.

What would I do if I had to provide my own food? I don't even know where tacos live.

Anywho .... we've had a long year. We've had some wonderful changes in our family. We've had beloved people enter our lives. We've technically traveled. But besides our honeymoon, it's mostly been for business or something that HAD to be done. I think it's time we went on a trip. Somewhere beachy! It's been absolutely ages since we've taken the kids out surfing! Come on! You know you both want to see our resident surfing queen attempt to surf with an adorable baby bump!

If you both agree I will stockpile gillyweed and do some absolutely filthy things to you underwater!

Gotta run, we're so late!

Yours,

Harry
Thursday July 19
My beloved husbands,

Today was a perfect mess! I loved every moment of it. First, we had the Avins come over for tea with their grandchildren so that Jaz could meet her brother and sister. Once again, we tried to keep this a small affair so as to not overwhelm two teenagers who’d never met us before.

Rohzan looks rather a lot like Jaz. It's sort of weird to see her features in a slightly more grown up version. To make things as easy as possible, I had programmed Jaz's translation contacts with the local language, and when the Avins arrived, gave them all earbuds (or contacts) they could use if they wanted to translate English to their language. Thus, when Rohzan gave Jaz a hug of greeting and babbled something which was presumably: "I'm so happy to meet you!" Jaz understood and signed: "I can't believe you're really my sister!" In return, which Leah interpreted and Rohzan understood via her earbuds.

All in all, how could that NOT be chaotic? But also, perfect, right?

Kaveh and Jaz had a slightly different greeting in that - judging by his expression - he said something like: "Ugh, another sister. Hi." Because Jaz smiled at him, gave him a hug anyway, and told him that she was happy to meet him. Which made him blush a bit.

This was an ideal break from all the gala prep we'd been working on almost non stop for days. I mean that WE were able to take a break with Jaz, but the rest of our kids were still going at it under the supervision of Kamaria, Viona, Orion, and Eris. Which meant that we had Nora, our babies, Gemini, and Luka in with us.

Rohzan and Kaveh told Jaz all about their summer so far, and bits and pieces of their lives in general. Jaz asked her grandparents to tell her about her parents, and also, wondered if she had grandparents from her father. As to that, she does, just that the Avins haven't seen or heard from them since the funeral, and so, would have no idea how to contact them.

Jaz looked at me and signed that she'd need to think about it before having me have someone track them down, as she had enough new family members to keep her occupied for the moment. I signed in return that I'd have someone find them, but not contact them in any way until Jaz felt ready.

Tea was going well, and rather quiet and peaceful considering that Nora and Morgana were both on my lap fighting for my attention. Gabriel and Dylan were on Harry's lap being slightly energetic angels, and Luka was sitting on Grandpa Oliver's lap, gnawing on poor Oliver's fingers, from what I could tell. (Gemini was asleep in a pen off to the side.)

Suddenly, a ball of pure energy entered the room, headed straight for Jaz, and kissed her on the cheek. "I JUST made the most AMAZING Kabab Torsh and Saffron Rice! Here, have some!" Zaire insisted, handing her one of the dozen or so plates floating along behind him.

"Hello Zaire, lovely to see you again," I greeted dryly. "By this, I take it that you've been in Iran for a while, on a food tour, and have then come home to use the kitchen for an hour or so before FINALLY letting your dads know that you're here?"

"I missed you too, dad!" Zaire replied, handing me a plate. "The Kabab is made from Lamb and it's marinated in a paste made from crushed walnuts, pomegranate juice, and olive oil. You're going to LOVE IT!!!" He assured me, giving me a kiss on the cheek and moving on to you and Oliver. With kisses to everyone except for the Avins, he handed out the plates of food (including the Avins), and raved about things like how the saffron really gives the rice a lovely taste that's a bit like vanilla but indescribable.
Then - before any of us could really say a word - his eyes swept over our tea service which made him gasp from the deepest offense. "Is THAT really what you're having for tea?! It's nothing more than biscuits and pudding! That is NOT acceptable!!! I'll be right back with a proper variety of petit fours! I made them in France and put them in stasis in my carry all," he explained as he rushed out of the room.

Jaz grinned at her new siblings and signed an explanation that Zaire is her favorite goofball, always CONVINCED that none of us ate enough, and yet, somehow managed to look like he never ate a bite himself. This was probably a combination of his high energy and exercise regimen. Leah interpreted, adding an explanation that Zaire was one of our adopted sons.

"HOW MANY KIDS DO YOU HAVE?!" Kaveh blurted out, presumably having heard about the ones his grandparents had already met. Lucky, we were ALSO wearing the translation devices, because you laughed and said: "OHHHHH... 21. But Oliver's going to have another in a couple of months.

Jaz decided that she should be the one to name them all, rapidly signing all their names and ages - and whether they were adopted or born to us. The Avins were all quite pale with shock by the time she was done.

Zaire reentered the room with the little cakes he'd promised. He continued on as if he hadn't even taken a breath. "Anyway, as I was saying, I found SO MANY wonderful dishes here in Iran! WHY haven't we come here sooner?! They have this delightful pawn-shawnt for making things with walnuts and pomegranate. And I think Saffron is my new favorite spice!"

He sat himself next to Jaz and took hold of one of her hands. "What do you think of the Kababs?"

She pressed her thumb, fore, and middle finger to her lips, and kissed them as she broke them apart in his direction, letting him know that she loved it. He kissed her on the cheek, and then noticed our visitors. "Oh hi! I'm Zaire Malfoy, one of the middle kids. Jaz is my favorite sister -"

"Don't let Shtara hear you say that," I murmured dryly, as Shtara feels that despite the slight difference in age, she and Zaire are the best of friends and each other's favorites.

"And I really hope you like my food," Zaire continued, possibly not having heard me. "Have you ever been to London? If you ever visit London, stop in at my restaurant - Zaire's Langa - and ask for me, I'll see to it that you get as much as you can eat at a discount!"

Jaz signed to him that this was actually her biological grandparents - on her mother's side - and her brother and sister.

Zaire looked shaken for a moment, putting an arm around her even as he looked to you, Harry. "They're not going to take our Jazzy away from us, are they?"

You shook your head. "No. Our goal is to give Jaz the best relationship she can have with her family."

"Speaking of!" I burst out, suddenly remembering my plan. "I have a gift for each of you. I cannot actually recall if we've expanded our Magitech business to this country, but it shouldn't matter, these tablets can use regular muggle internet if that's all that's available. Otherwise, these tablets are designed to access and use the magi-web so that you can use apps such as Magi-Skype to talk to people - video chat - around the world. If you like, you can chat with Jaz whenever she has time. Right love?" I asked as I handed each of the Avins their own Magi-tablet.
She positively beamed as she signed: "I LOVE THAT IDEA! THANK YOU DADDY!"

That was right about the time that Hazel and Pearl arrived and entered the room. "We're HERE!"
They sang out joyfully. They each gave the three of us kisses before Hazel promised you a full account of their house construction - later - before turning to hold my hands. "Say daddy... would you happen to have any of that potion that turns blood into, ermm..." She made a mildly repulsed face. "That STUFF we need to get my wife pregnant with my child?"

Pearl bounced a bit giddily, clearly on board with this plan and eager to get to it.

"Erm... Not ON me, but I could probably have Dibly send us a vial, since he's back at home keeping an eye on Erma as necessary," I replied.

Harry just could not wait to pull Hazel into his arms and hold her tight, crying something about his baby having babies! This made Hazel cry and babble something about always being our baby.

"I'm HERE!" Elena sang out as she walked into the room with Ethan, Rose, Rodrigo, Joel, and Jayden. And Rafael, of course. "Here! Hold Raf! If I don't visit a loo soon, I might MURDER a little old lady if she got in my way!" She exclaimed as she set Rafael in Oliver's lap with Luka.

"Oi! I rather need to use the loo as well!" Oliver protested, and to be fair, it had been more than ten minutes since his last trip.

Jaz held out her hands for Rafael while Zaire volunteered to take Luka.

Siri burst into the room before anyone had a chance to escape. "You all MISSED my most brilliant performance yet! With this win, we're well on our way to the World Cup! But don't worry! I had it captured by an array of MMM video cameras!" He paused to look around. "Where's Zwei?"

You chuckled, Harry. "He's over at Unity House, helping out with nearly last minute preparations."

"Oh..." Siri murmured in disappointment. "I think I'll head over there and tell him everything he missed as I KNOW he'll be utterly heartbroken if he doesn't see me as soon as possible."

I smirked at him. "You mean YOU'LL be heartbroken if you don't see HIM as soon as possible."

"He WISHES!" Siri declared before leaving the room.

"I feel I must apologize all over again, Radin, Pantea," I told them. "With a family as big as ours, it's almost IMPOSSIBLE to have a truly quiet and peaceful moment.

Shtara burst into the room. "Has Elena arrived yet?! She promised me that she was going to write a song or two for me to sing at the gala! I have almost NO time left to memorize it!"

Since Elena and Oliver had managed to rush off to the loo, Rodrigo answered her. "No worries, love! Our Laina has not only written you two FABULOUS songs to sing, but she only has to finish her business in the loo before she plans to dedicate nearly every moment between now and then rehearsing them with you."

"Brilliant!" Shtara exclaimed, and then spotted Zaire and Jaz. "Zaire! You're here! Ooo! Is that a Kabab? Jaz, why aren't you over at Unity House? The kids won't stop asking when you plan to go there and play with them some more."

Jaz signed: "I'm meeting my brother and sister, remember?"
"Oh! That must be them! Our Jazzy is the kindest and most generous girl you've ever met. We love her so much! Did you know she can play the drums? You wouldn't think it, right? But she is actually BRILLIANT at it! Oi Jaz, are you planning to play at the gala?"

Jaz nodded and signed: "Yeah, Elena wrote music to go with those songs you'll be singing, and I've already been practicing my part when I have some time over the last few days."

"What's this gala you all keep mentioning?" Pantea asked with interest.

Harry avidly explained everything about how it was coming up on the 10th anniversary of when we founded Unity House Iran, and how we're planning to host a huge fundraiser. That's when Mr. and Mrs. Avin got a funny look on their faces.

"You... founded Unity House? We thought... Are YOU Harry Potter?"

And didn't THAT just cause a hilarious uproar? BUWAHAHAHAHAHAHAHA!

Because the greatest love of all is happening to me,
Draco
P.S. Where would you like to go? Any specific ideas?
Chapter 316

Chapter Summary

Harry can't help but be famous.

Chapter Notes

Merry Christmas all!

Friday July 20, 2018

Ugh!!!!

You know, I really thought I could get away from all of that "Oh! Are you Harry Potter?" stuff when I changed my last name. But I still get it all the time. Not quite so much when we're home in England since I'm mostly old news in all the circles we travel in. Traveling within the wizarding world yet outside of Britain is a different story.

You'd think with how uninvolved with our war the outside world was that they wouldn't know who I am. But my name traveled far enough that they know me. And then I went on to write all those books and clear my side of the story for the Muggles. And on top of that I had to travel the world creating this Unity Houses. I haven't done such a good job of ridding myself of my fame have I?

Oh well, I suppose I'd rather be known for building orphanages and schools than in accidentally yeeting someone's wand out of their hand hard enough to kill them!

If you didn't already know, "yeet" is a word that's super hip and popular with the cool kids. All the young people are using it these days. Since I am young and hella cool I know all about it.

Anyway, Draco again you summed up our lives perfectly in your last email. Previously you talked about us trying to do something quietly and small and it ending in chaos. Then, just now, you called our day yesterday a "Perfect Mess"

I am pretty sure my next book will either be a description of our adult lives or a memoir ... "A Perfect Mess: a Memoir by Harry Malfoy-Wood"

I'm really pleased with how well Jaz's interactions with her grandparents and siblings have gone, they've been lovely so far. It was a bit bittersweet being able to look at Rohzan and see a window into Jaz's own future face. However, I was so relieved at Zaire's reaction to learning about these people being located, seeing our worries come out. Knowing our fears that have been the elephant in the room just needed to be shouted out by a mouthy older brother! Not only did they see how horrified our children were at the idea of Jaz being taken from us, but it gave me the opportunity to assure EVERYONE that not only would that NEVER happen but that we were definitely committed to strengthening their connection to Jaz.
It was a very naturally occurring moment where I was able to assure Jaz we would never willingly give her up while reassuring the Avins that we had no intention of keeping them from Jaz or vice versa.

Oh our Shtara! I think it's funny that she insists that she and Zaire are the closest and each others favorites when it is SO SO SO obvious that she and Lainie have that bond. Maybe it's the age difference that keeps her from seeing it? Elena being the oldest has a different relationship with her brothers and sisters than most of the other kids have. She was significantly older than the rest of them and I think because of this she has always had a bit more of a beloved auntie relationship particularly with the youngest of the kids. With her children being the same age as her youngest siblings, she's definitely going to be more like and aunt to the kids Nora's age and younger.

But even though she's over a decade younger, Lainie has always treated Shtara a bit more like an equal. Maybe it's their common love of performing? Maybe it's because Shtara's upbringing had her growing up faster than most kids her age. Or it could be the simple fact of Shtara having lived at Lainie's school giving them a lot of one on one bonding time.

And while our little Nora may have claimed her Daddy Oliver as her favorite person ever, and she really looks up to Seph and Lissa as her older but not by much big sisters, that girl thinks the sun shines out of Shtara's ... face.

I love our family. Our children are by far the best children to have ever existed on the face of the planet. But I sometimes find myself thinking of them as a group. "My kids" or "each others' siblings." It's really amazing when I break it down, to think about all of their intersecting relationships. Just like each of us has our own relationships with each other and with each child individually, each of the kids have their own relationships with their brothers and sisters. I love seeing those relationships thrive and blossom.

A guy could just about cry thinking about all the love flowing through our family.

And uh, speaking of our family ... I wasn't going to pressure you guys about this upcoming possible trip. But since your P.S. included asking me if I had any ideas about where to take our family trip, I will admit that I have a definite idea. No pressure, we can go anywhere you'd like. But ....

It's been two decades since I've been. It was an unbelievable holiday to go on. And I'd love to introduce my family to the place I fell in love with traveling. I'd love to visit the area I got my Narcissa Mum her first (of many) special cuttings I found to add to her gardens. Show you Draco the place I bought you komboloi. Ollie, while you may not be a worrier, maybe I could get you your own set of worry beads.

So, come to Greece with me?

Se agapo,
Harry

Saturday July 21st
My exhausted husbands,

All in all, I think that was a big success. Sure, we had one or two near meltdowns before the gala started, but once it was going, it was really something worth attending.

Pippa has OUTDONE herself! I'll be perfectly happy if she gave herself a large bonus. See, she had coordinated with Kamaria from the beginning of the planning on what exactly would be best for an Iranian audience, and they agreed that many of the things we might do in Britain or California (for example) - such as a Drag show - would NOT work in Iran. So what else was there?

Comedy.

Yep, Pippa managed to engage not one but TWO brilliant comedians to play for our Gala. It means that between them and the live musical entertainment that played from time to time, the entire day was jam packed well into the night.

The highlights, from my perspective, were when Ricky Gervais performed his hilarious routine that JUST managed to balance on the line between funny and offensive (the best joke actually being a question wondering why he'd seen so many things that looked almost magical while at this orphanage). After him, Shtara and our kids performed an absolutely AMAZING mini concert, and the last of the highlights was the arguable 'main' act of the night...

Fluffy...

AKA Gabriel Iglesias.

I thought it was rather touching that he came out to sit at our table with us before it was time for him to get ready, and so, had a chance to meet OUR little Gabriel. I don't know if he likes kids in general, but he was certainly kind, playful, and funny when holding or otherwise interacting with our kids. I liked him and would be more than willing to hire him to perform for a gala again.

In any case, the entertainment was so enjoyable that everyone who attended the gala reported giving more than they had anticipated, and no, I didn't cast any spells to make them do so.

Thus, thanks to everyone who helped out - Teddy and Mac, your cousin and his family, even the Avins helped out! - we were able to raise enough money to give Unity Iran a good chance at thriving for several years to come.

I'm so proud of all of us!

So won't you ride with me, ride with me, see where this thing goes, if it's meant to be, let it be, let it be, Baby just let it be,

Draco
Chapter 317

Chapter Summary

Harry wants an answer.

Sunday July 22, 2018

Exhausted? Exhausted? I’ll show you exhausted!! Yeah right after I’m done writing this, I’m going to come attack you .... naked. And since you seem to think my gorgeous husband Oliver is also exhausted, I will force him to come attack and prove to you just how exhausted we are.

But first! Yes, the gala was wonderful. I’m so thrilled at the funds raised. And as of this morning when I messaged Kamaria, there are still donations trickling in. Whether it’s from people who didn’t donate that night, chose to donate even more, or people who didn’t go but heard of our fundraising efforts and wanted to help the cause isn’t clear. Maybe a mixture of all three.

I have to argue with you a bit though, the main act of the night was obviously our brilliant kids’ mini concert! Mostly because they’re my kids and I know they’re the most brilliant people to ever walk the planet.

But also, you know Gabriel Iglesias’ comedy is just not my thing. I try. You’ve had us watch his specials over the years. But I find myself barely chuckling throughout the set. But the night wasn’t designed for me, so he was obviously a fantastic choice of headlining.

However, while I find his comedy fairly “meh,” him as a person was absolutely lovely. I can’t get over how kind he was to the children, not just ours but any of the Unity Kids that made an appearance. Yes, it was so sweet watching him hold our own little Gabriel.

As far as the highlights from the entire trip so far? I can’t get over how amazing Dudley was in helping out at Unity. Look, I’ve known him my whole life, and it really was such a small part of it that he was awful to me. But those memories are my first, they laid the original foundation for our relationship. It took a long time for me to essentially forget who he was as a child.

This past few weeks, watching him hold children and roll up his sleeves, pitching in wherever he was directed? Of all the things past Little Harry in the Cupboard wouldn’t believe, this might be the biggest shock.

I’m just so unbearably proud of him.

What I’m not so happy about? Draco!!!!! You keep ignoring me! Can we go on a vacation? When can we leave? Can I finally introduce you all to Greece?!?!? Answer MEEEEEEEE!!!
Oliver, back me up here. Harry, with my personal motto being: give my husband whatever he wants - do you REALLY think you have to badger me into doing something you want? Especially a mere week before your birthday.

I was not 'ignoring you,' I was simply assuming that you knew I was on board. But to prove it to you that we are most definitely going to Greece (how many of us are going is up to you, we could even hand the littles off to some or all of our parents if you wanted a few days of just us), I had Pippa book us a luxury villa in Koutsouras, Greece.

My only stipulation is that if you want Siri and Zwei to come with us, YOU had best plan out something they'll want to do on their birthday.

Alright, I just lied, my OTHER stipulation is that we don't leave here until Wednesday as I am currently getting ready to bring Jules, Jaz, Vani, Zaire, and a few other of the kids to see the Bisitun Cave in the Zagros Mountains. Oliver already said he wanted to stay home with the littles (so I'm not cave exploring with toddlers strapped to me), but you haven't decided yet whether or not to come with us. So...

See you when I get back, or in a few minutes when you join us.

Love forever,
Draco
Chapter 318

Chapter Summary

The family heads home. Mostly.

Chapter Notes

See the end of the chapter for notes.

Tuesday July 24, 2018

My Dragon,

Are you new? Do you think there was a chance that upon given the opportunity to explore ancient caves I was going to turn that down? What part of "Hey Harry, let's hike through natural beauty and explore a place rich in historical and archaeological significance" sounds like something I would say no to? You adorable moron.

It truly was an amazing experience, one I really wish Ollie had been with us for. But it's not exactly his favorite type of thing to do and there's no way we would have been able to bring the babies along. Okay, there are probably a lot of ways we technically could have. Strapping them to us is probably what we would have done, but it would not have been a fun time. They are getting quite heavy, want to be down exploring most of the time, and it was a rough hike in a couple of places. Exactly my type of exploring, but not so much with forty pounds of cranky toddler strapped to me!

Coming 'home' to seeing our smallest babes all cuddled up to our husband was definitely my type of thing I want to come home to though! Gabe nestled into Ollie's right arm, and Dyl his left. Morgana sprawled out over his chest like she owns him (she does) and Nora using his little baby bump as her personal pillow. So sweet. I had a VERY SMALL moment when we got home so late last night that I thought, "how is he sound asleep, we were the ones hiking all day" and then I immediately remembered that toddlers are exhausting and that we probably had the calmer day.

Especially with so much of our beautiful man's energy going to growing an entire new human. He blushes and tries shushing me every time I say it, but besides the vision of YOU carrying our children, I have never seen anything as beautiful as my husband Oliver growing rounder with our child. Kind of makes me want to knock you up to and see if watching the both of you glowing with new life would be twice as breathtaking!

We got in late enough last night, and had a tiring enough day, that I slept in this morning. The rest of today is going to be packing up, saying a few last goodbyes at Unity Iran, and hopefully turning in early so we can leave at the crack of dawn tomorrow for Koutsouras! Eeek! Greece! I'm so excited I'm practically vibrating! And no, it's not my rage halo! I am full of zero rage at the moment. I have two men I am madly in love with, a wonderful family, the best friends in the world, I just helped raise a ton of money for orphans who need it, and I'm heading off to my dream vacation spot with most of those people in the morning! No rage is making its way through my happiness shield.

Okay Draco, yes I know that you have a "give the husbands what they want" motto, but my request for a specific answer about going to Greece isn't completely ridiculous. What if I had assumed you were saying yes and planned to have us leave yesterday? You would have either had to disappoint me and waste Mr. Lott's time when we couldn't go OR disappoint everyone who wanted to go exploring Bisitun Cave when you called it off so we could leave. And since I was one of those people you would have disappointed ME with either option!

Or what if you had desperately wanted to stay in Iran longer? If you had made plans with Kamaria to go in and help out with the Kids, or help out with the financial end of things to plan for the best use of the funds?

What if you had already promised Hermione that you would be home by a certain date and by having us go to Greece, I would anger Hermione? You think MY rage halo is scary?

No, wait, you do not think my rage halo is scary, you think it's hot. Hmmm, are you attracted to me or to rage? I wonder how turned on you'd be at Hermione in a full rage? Maybe worth looking into if we ever get to a point where we're playing with her and her two of her quartet again.

As per your requirements, I have definitely planned something for Siri and Zwei to enjoy for their birthday. I am taking them rafting on the Arachthos River. There are two main routes with beautiful sights, but I am taking them on the more dangerous route that drops in at the Tsimpovou Bridge. It's quite away from where we're staying, so I figure we'll have a lovely carpet ride in the morning as the sun is rising and fly back to the place you booked under the stars. Any and all are welcome to join us. Even if some of the littles or less adventurous bigs only want to join us for the carpet ride part and either do the beginners route or sightsee in the area and not raft at all.

Oh! Pippa showed me pictures of the Villa you rented. GORGEOUS! Can we just live there? Kidding of course, I love the manor, I love living in Britain. But sometimes the idea of living on a waterfront paradise is awfully tempting!

Thank you for being willing to hand off all the kids to the parentals and just have the trip be for us, but I want to bring my entire family. I know we need time together just as husbands, but I can't imagine not bringing the kids to this place that's important to me. However, I have already invited all three sets of parents to join us. They get a paradise vacation and we get six sets of arms ready to care for little ones when we need time to ourselves.

And speaking of time to ourselves, I KNOW I will have kids wanting to bring me breakfast in bed on my birthday, and I'd like to be back in time to snuggle up reading bedtime stories and watching a movie or something later that night, but I want to make the plans for my birthday if that's alright with the two of you? I want to spend the day with just the two of you, reconnecting, talking, shagging, more shagging, probably shagging some more, I'll watch the two of you shag while I rest, and then maybe a little more talking. I have the perfect place I want to bring you. So is it alright if I make the surprises even though it's my birthday?

If not, that's alright, I actually haven't had these plans for a super long time I just started thinking about it a few days ago. Actually yesterday to be precise. When I was reading your email and you said I had to think of something to do with Siri and Zwei for their birthday I laughed because of course I remembered their birthday was coming up and I already had those plans set just waiting on confirmation we were going to Greece. However I had completely forgotten my own birthday was coming up! I am getting old and senile apparently because I can't remember my own birthday!

Anyway, as much as it is not going to be fun, I really must come wake you both up. Normally we can count on the elves to do most of the packing, frankly we can count on Muffy getting her own rage halo if we try to help, but we do need to at least let her know what things should be sent home and what things are coming along with us to Greece. We even need to make a list of things for her to get from home to bring with us to Greece. Between the packing and saying our goodbyes at Unity Iran I know you don't want to miss a moment no matter how grumpy you are being woken up!

Oh, duh, how long have I been married to you? I'll just come wake you up the fun way that does NOT make you mad!

Incoming!
Harry

Wednesday July 25th
My beloved husbands,

This is the part of the email where I USUALLY say: So I know we're all on the same plane and one or both of you are literally sitting next to me - OR: I'm in the bedroom of the plane while you're both out wrangling the kids, but I thought I'd email anyway. Except today, not so much.

See, YOU are both on the plane with all our kids and the rest of our entourage, on your way to London to drop off those that are not going to Greece (such as Dudley, his family, and Mac and Teddy), but I am still in Iran for another few hours. Don't worry, as I said and as I fully intend, I will be Portkeying to Greece, and so, may even get there before you. However...

As you probably remember, as it happened only last night, I ran into a bit of a problem. See, unsurprisingly, I decided to do some last minute shopping with my Divas - meaning Eris, Hazel, Pearl, Viona, Shtara, Elena, and Jules and Romeo (since they were all still here from the Gala) - when something that could have simply been minor drama happened.

I think most people would have just, I dunno, dealt with it in a quick and easy manner, but not me. Sigh... I have to be a bloody Drama King! Can't just let it drop, no...

I told you this last night, of course, but let me reexplain in case things we're not as clear in the moment as they would be now that I've had time to wrap my head around the matter. I, erm, nearly adopted another child, heh heh...

It started while we were shopping, as I said. We were prowling through the market in pack formation. I was in a generous mood, and so, each time one of ours found something they wanted to buy, I just paid for it. Thus it was ME that had a big old target on his head that said: mark with an endless amount of money in his pocket.

Truth be told, I had converted an enormous amount of Galleons into the local currency so that I could shop without having to worry about running out of money. This is also why I paid for everything, since not all the girls had had a chance to convert their money. Besides, it's not like they can't pay me back if I want them to. Except for Jules and Romeo, who only had what little pocket money I had given them, and none of it was local.

Sorry, I've gotten off track.

As I was saying, I was the one with all the money, and it probably seemed endless to the pickpockets and thieves who must've been watching us. It took them a bit of time to work out how exactly they were going to rob me, as I was literally surrounded by my pack. But eventually, I was 'hit.'

Now, you well know that we've ALL been covered in anti-theft spells. Thus I was not concerned in the slightest. When the spell activated to trap the thief's hand in my pocket until I could deal with him or her appropriately, I braced myself to make a public show out of beating the culprit just enough to get the point across that I am MORE than capable of defending myself, and thus, they should give up on robbing me.

In literally almost ANY circumstance, I probably would have done exactly that. Had the thief been an adult (or even near adult) - man OR woman - I would have just roughed them up a bit, and then sent them on their merry way. I MIGHT have even gone so far as to summon and or wait for otherwise summoned policemen to arrive to take the thief into custody.

But this was not a normal circumstance. This was a child. A girl to be exact. And she didn't look more than 12 years old.

We've gone round and round about this relatively recently. I use an array of descriptive words when talking about everyone I meet or otherwise need to describe that tend to come off sounding sexual. This is my base setting - if you will. I described Jules as a gorgeous twink several times because the description was the best way to convey my impressions of him at the time. I think I went on and on about how sensual Mahafsoun was, because she WAS and that was something I felt needed to be described accurately. But you have pointed out over and over that my words make my intentions misleading if I use sensual descriptions for a person who is not an object of my sexual desire, and so, Harry and Oliver, my loves, I am going to try my best to describe this girl without using sensual descriptions.

Alright, to start with, she was dirty. And by that, I mean that while her skin was naturally a sort of tan/bronze color, she was also covered in a thick layer of dirt that made her look a darker black than she actually is. Her hair was matted and clumped so much that it was hard to gain an accurate determination of its color, but looked to be brown bordering on black, and so once clean, may well be a softer, richer auburn. Her eyes were a strange shade, that might well have been influenced by her general emotional turmoil at the time, but appeared to be a sort of molten honey color ringed with black. In fact, her pupils were so wide with panic that it was a little hard to see the small ring of color at all.

Her body was lithe and rather scrawny. I assume that she spends a lot of her days running away from the authorities and/or marks that she's just robbed. She had ragged and tatty clothing that covered the important parts decently well enough, but had holes in the bum area that she probably hated. Otherwise, her skin was on display as her tatty shirt was barely long enough to cover her small yet budding breasts.

Sorry! SEE?! This is how I describe things! I start at a point and keep on describing what I see/saw until it feel I have accurately covered everything. Yet, the fact that I am describing her breasts more than likely makes YOU think that I have noticed them in a sexual manner. I assure you that is not it. I just don't really know another way to describe how little her shirt was covering without actually referring to her breasts. And since she wasn't wearing a bra, I can only assume that she A: hasn't been able to find a better shirt to preserve her modesty (if she even HAS modesty), or B: feels that she hasn't developed enough yet to NEED a better/more covering shirt and/or bra.

But back to my description of what happened. There I was, standing in the middle of approximately half our daughters and a couple of honorary sons, with a young and raggedly disheveled thief frantically trying to pull her hand free of my pocket with as much money as she could grab. Only the anti theft spell wouldn't let her pull her hand free at all - with or without the money.

As I stood there, I looked her over, curious about her. She was clearly not an adult yet, and so, I didn't think that beating her up and leaving her as a warning to others would be a good idea. NOR would be having her carted off to jail. I mean what EXACTLY would happen to her in an Iranian jail? I can only assume nothing good as IF it was any sort of good (such as transferring her to a safe and loving orphanage or other such place), then that probably would have already happened and she wouldn't BE in this predicament.

Plus, she was struggling FRANTICALLY. Meaning that she was seriously afraid of what would happen to her if she was turned over to the police. Thus my first instinct to have her dealt with in any way was put on hold.

She struggled and fought, and for the most part, I just stood there impassively, letting her try her best to get free from the spell without moving to so much as defend myself, as her small fist barely felt like anything when she banged it against me. She very quickly devolved into crying - sobbing and wailing - and babbling rapidly. I can only assume she was saying something like: "Let me go, damn you, or I'll have to kick your arse." She was actually kicking me in an attempt to escape.

This went on for a couple of minutes as I literally just stood there thinking the situation over. Our kids were more or less watching this silently, knowing that I wouldn't hurt her, and probably thinking about how I could HELP her. It wasn't until some of the shopkeepers - having realized that she was a thief trying to steal from me - had summoned a couple of policemen and were closing in on our group, that my brain finally shifted from: 'Hmm, this is a fascinating specimen' mode to: 'Wait, I have to do something constructive' mode.

And so, I wandlessly and nonverbally cast a few quick spells to gain control over the entire situation. The spells basically made her manageable by mildly Confounding her, Glamoring her to appear clean and dressed similar to our girls, and shifting her hand from my pocket to my actual hand.

"Is there a problem here!!" The police demanded with stern expressions in their language. I could only assume what they asked and replied in English.

"I'm sorry, but we are British citizens who don't speak the language here. We're just shopping as a family, and minding our own business. Why? What do YOU think is happening?"

Luckily, one (or perhaps all) of them spoke English. "We're responding to the report of a thief in the area. These shop keepers say they recognize this girl as a pickpocket that plagues this market."

I shook my head. "I'm sorry, but this girl hasn't stolen anything. And in fact, she's a member of our party. The reason that she may have appeared to be suspicious to the merchants is that she's autistic and often acts out inappropriately. In fact, just two minutes ago, she was pitching a fit to the point that it might have looked like I was abusing her, but now she's exhausted herself, and has reached a state where her eyes have glazed over a bit and she's more than likely going to pass out and sleep until she's hungry again."

This caused some suspicion to the police, who demanded to see identification on her, which was beyond easy to provide by simply handing over ID that was subtly conjured in my pocket. Once the police were gone, I had to truly stop and think about the situation, as I was well on my way to abducting an unknown child.

That's when I sent the kids on ahead (with some money) to get something to eat. They also happened to return home and tell you just enough to get your wild imagination running before I actually returned. As they were doing that, I wasn't sure WHAT to do. So I walked around the city until the charmed state I had her in wore off just enough that I could talk to her.

At that point, I had pulled out some translation devices for the both of us. Then, as we were walking, looking like aimless sightseers - I hope - I started talking.
"You seem like a girl in a hopeless situation. Obviously you feel you need to steal to survive. I dunno if you're working solely to feed yourself, but I suspect that you're working for someone who doesn't allow you to keep enough of the money you steal to properly clothe yourself."

At that, she looked away sharply, as if hiding something, and so, I guessed that I was probably right.

"Look, I'm not the bad man. I'm not some enemy who wants you to work for me like a slave, NOR am I the sort who'll just turn you into the police and let you suffer your fate. I understand that you are in a situation that you were probably born or orphaned into, and I want to help," I explained.

"No one can help me," she muttered in her language which was translated by my devices.

I stopped next to a food cart and smiled at her. "You'd be surprised by how much I can help. Let me start here. What would you like to eat?"

This utterly gobsmacked her. She reeled from the shock for a few moments until the vendor snapped for her to hurry up and order something so that he could serve those in line behind us. She mumbled an order that I didn't quite catch, but the vendor did. He nodded and asked me what I wanted.

"I'll take whatever she's having," I informed him, feeling that it wouldn't hurt to have extra food for her on hand.

In a rather short amount of time, we were eating easily portable kababs. I'd actually ordered a few more to go. In any case, her hand was still magically attached to mine as I didn't want to risk her running off before I finished doing as much as I could to help her.

She remained more or less silent, but I continued to talk. "I don't know much about your situation, but I know you pick pockets. I can only hope that means that you are NOT being used for any sort of prostitution. You do look a bit young and underdeveloped for that still, but I suppose that doesn't mean it never happens."

At that, she gave me a fierce glare and slowly (jerkily) but emphatically shook her head.

Smiling and feeling relieved, I continued. "I can offer you a couple of options. The best option is...
Now please hear me out. I understand that this might SOUND bad to you, since you are so frantically afraid of authority, but... I know a place - called Unity House - that is SPECIFICALLY a place to care for young children who have nowhere else to go. There you'll find food, safety, and friends."

She tried to pull free of me at that point. "He'll kill me if I leave," she muttered, almost too softly for me to hear.

I shook my head. "No. This place is so well protected that NO ONE would ever be able to find you.
It's not even IN Kermanshah City. It's on the other side of the province, near a river that allows for good food to be grown nearly year round."

She was shaking her head rather vigorously. "He'll find me, he'll kill me!"

I stopped, and now that we were in a bit of a clearing - in a street away from the market - I decided to risk breaking the statute. With a smile, I shook my head and conjured up a flower to put in her nappy hair. "Unless he has some sort of magic ability, I can guarantee that he will NEVER find you. And if you think the other side of the province isn't far enough, I can bring you to a different country completely. You may have noticed that I'm British and speaking English."
"No but... you're speaking..." she trailed off with a frown. "Huh! You are speaking a foreign language and I'm somehow hearing MY language in my ear."

I lightly tapped her of the tip of her button nose. "See? Magic. I have magic, and it's that magic that I can use to guarantee that this man you are afraid of will NEVER find you."

At that, I pulled out my wand and surrounded us with privacy spells, in case anyone was spying on us for that man she's so afraid of. Then I pulled some clothes out of my carry all watch that used to belong to the girls. I'm not really sure how they'd originally gotten into my carry all, but I presume that one or more of the girls had asked me to hold them at some point, I put them in my watch, and then they were never asked for again. In any case, I gave them to her and said:

"These used to belong to one of my daughters. If nothing else, I can help by filling your stomach and giving you some better clothes to wear. I'd LIKE to bring you back to my rented house and see to it that you have a bath and a bit more food. One of my sons would be DELIGHTED to make and feed you anything you can think of until you positively burst! If you feel safe enough at my rented house to trust me and my family, perhaps you'll consider letting me bring you to Unity House so you can see for yourself how well you'll be cared for and protected."

She was staring at the clothes in her hands as if they were made out of literal gold. "I..." She bit her thin bottom lip with her tiny teeth. "I still think he'll come to kill me..."

I made an impulsive decision to reassure her that could be considered a bad action. "See that rat over there? It's chewing on a kitten, one so young its eyes and ears haven't even opened yet. It must have snatched it from its mother while she was out hunting for food, yeah?"

The girl nodded with a suspicious frown, as if wondering where I was going with this unrelated topic.

I pointed my wand at the rat and softly cried out: "Avada Kedavra!" The rat naturally fell over dead.

"Look. See? I just killed that rat with magic. And if any bad men come looking for you, I CAN do the same. Of course there are better methods to try first - such as creating barriers to keep them out. But I can promise to keep you safe no matter what. So, what do you say? Will you let me help you?"

She was now staring at the rat with tears in her eyes, and for a moment, I was afraid that I'd accidentally murdered her only pet. Then she looked up at me and nodded. "Alright. I'll come with you to have a bath and meet this son that wants to feed me. And IF you are telling the truth, I'll take a look at that place you're talking about."

Then she wiped her tears away, tugged on my sleeve with her other hand, and asked: "Can you REALLY keep me safe?"

I nodded in all confidence. "I can. I promise."

Nodding in acceptance, she clutched the clothes I'd given her to her chest. "Then I'll wait to put these on until after my bath."

And that's how I nearly adopted a new child. It's also why I stayed behind when the rest of you left. I'm simply going to coax her into staying at Unity House. However, I was serious when I gave her my word, and so, if she refuses to stay there, I might have to figure out how to legally take her out of the country with me until I can figure out what to do with her. I think if nothing else, she might actually feel safer at Unity Britain because it's clearly too far away for a boss thief to track her down and snatch her from.

But we'll see.

The only other thing I have to explain to you at this point is what happened after I brought her home and left her in Hazel and Pearl's care (for that bath). See... I was rather... snarly...

The whole situation had slowly but surely triggered my less than pleasant self. That part of me that turns into a dragon - or a hurricane - and goes on a rampage. Obviously, I couldn't just unleash that on the unsuspecting and innocent public, so I found an area that was populated by various thugs. Violent ones who were being violent towards each other. I happily imagined that at least one of them was the man the girl was so afraid of. And then I waltzed in and kicked all their arses.

I was so enraged, I don't remember all of it, if I'm honest. But I do recall clearly when it was all over and I was standing in a circle of unconscious bodies. I cast spells to make sure no one had died, and then cast first aid spells as necessary to ensure that no one died after I left. Thus, I am confident that I did not murder anyone. But I didn't exactly give them a bunch of love taps either.

Which explains the state I was in when I Apparated back last night. I talked to the two of you a little while I was taking a shower, but I think you were both tired enough that you took the basic overview as good enough (I hadn't even gotten to the rampage yet), and promised to support me whatever happened, but then basically went to bed. Hence me giving you all the little details in this email while you're on a plane and I'M still trying to persuade a young and frightened girl to let me bring her to Unity, sigh.

Maybe she'll be more receptive after we take a quick swim in the pool. It's certainly hot enough to NEED a swim! See you soon!

You're (both) everything I need and more, it's written all over your face, baby I can feel your halo, pray it won't fade away,
Draco

Chapter End Notes

Note: I can't remember exactly why, but I was in a murderous mood and if Chrissy didn't hurry up and email me, I was going to kill a bunch of non important characters in the story. Chrissie was like: "So what you're saying is I should wait to write my email until you're in a better mood?" To which I promised that if she wrote it relatively quickly, I'd spare their lives, and so Chrissie single handedly saved a bunch of thugs lives, lol ^_^
Chapter 319

Chapter Summary

Harry takes thing in hand.

Chapter Notes

See the end of the chapter for notes

Wednesday July 25, 2018

My Heart
My Soul
My Most Ridiculous of Men,

I apparated myself back, leaving our poor defenseless husband alone with all of those children on the airplane.

Haha! He is most definitely not defenseless and certainly in his element. I am sure he is being pampered by the older children - who've decided in the last month or so that waiting on the cute pregnant man hand and foot is the best thing to do. As well as being smooched all over by the gooey babies who have recently decided that Daddy Oliver is ALL of their favorite! For crying out loud! I bought a stable full of ponies, horses, unicorns, and thestrals and somehow I'm still not the favorite!

Well, it's not like they have terrible taste or anything, he is pretty damn wonderful.

Anyway, I popped back here after I got your email, only to find you sound asleep poolside while your newest charge swam herself circles around the pool. You can take the boy out of the cupboard but can't take the muggle out of the boy because I immediately was freaking out that you'd left a child unattended in the water. Duh Harry, that's what the monitoring charms are for.

I had a chat with little Miss Qismah while you napped. Poor Draco, all tuckered out from your temper tantrum! Seriously? I suppose, a group of violent criminals is definitely a better choice than some innocent customer service person, although probably not quite as good of a choice as just letting out your rage in the crystal room. I don't know, if they were truly violent then it's possible it was the better choice. Hmm, hard to come up with a good equation for which is better. Divide by two and then carry the rage.

After I got some very basic info from her, I let her swim a bit longer while I came up with a plan.

Long story short ... she doesn't exist. I asked my 'Mione to do a lookup from her end if there was such a child reportedly in existence on any international database she'd have access to. I asked Kamaria for access to her databases (I figured I'd do it myself and give her plausible deniability). A child with her name, with the birthday she gave me (even give or take a year), in Iran or any of the surrounding countries ... does not exist.

Too many kids in this area of the world don't exist. They've fallen through the cracks or lost their families to war or some other traumatic thing. It breaks my heart but makes this next step much easier. If Iran's proper paperwork channels don't know she's here then they sure won't miss her when she's gone. And if somehow we're (I'M) caught? I'll bat my green eyes, play the savior card, and plead my case. It's easier to ask for forgiveness than to get permission.

Seriously Love, you don't have to make everything so difficult. Once I've finished packing up a bag of things for her, Hermione should have procured our portkey and sent it to Kamaria to send along to us. We're bringing her with us to Greece. She can have a lovely holiday with a bunch of other teen/pre-teen girls. Swim her heart out. Act like a twelve year old for once in her life. And while we're there, we can tell her all about every single Unity House that is currently in existence.

Girl with no name? No identity? No home? Well that just means no limits. Where do YOU want to live sweetheart? Want to live nice and warm in California? Explore east Asian culture in Japan? Live in a climate completely unlike anything you've experienced in Britain or Canada? The world is your oyster!

I think we've got everything covered, we just need you to wake up sleeping beauty. The only thing I think we need to worry about is to make sure there's not anyone else under this disgusting cretin Qismah is scared of's thumb. Do we need to rescue any other innocents from his clutches? I suppose we'll try and get some of that info out of her once she's safely thousands of miles away from him.

Wake up!!!

Harry

Wednesday July 25th
Dear Oliver,

How was your flight with the wonderfully attentive kids? Harry must include Dudley and Donna (etc.) as kids, because he said you were all alone with them, haha. Apparently, Harry managed to pull the same trick he pulled for Mahafsoun all those years ago.

See, Mahafsoun didn't officially exist anywhere either, so she had to be issued an odd birth certificate to allow her to reside and be adopted in Britain. It seems that Hermione had no objections to issuing the same sort of birth certificate to Qismah, thus, she can legally come with us and be placed in our care until we can persuade her to stay in a Unity House. Who knows? Maybe she'll love the new one in France. Or maybe she'll have musical talents and want to go to Spain with Elena and her crew to start the new Unity there.

In any case, you might be wondering why I'm not trying to adopt her directly, and the answer is the same as it is for Harry's suggestion that he get me up the duff so he can watch us BOTH be pregnant at the same time:

I think I personally have enough kids, thank you very much. I'm not opposed to having more - if that turns out to be in the cards for us - I have simply reached a state where I'm not actively looking to grow our family any bigger than it already is (and I'm including the caboose in this ^_^).

In any case, with Harry having fixed the situation - and I'll admit, he really does have more experience with this part of it - I have no reason to remain in Iran. So, when the Portkey arrived, Harry, Qismah, and I all took it to the Manor, where we had a bit of time to wait for your flight to get there to drop off the extras and pick up the hoard of parents.

My parents were cool and refined, calmly waiting for their elves to finish packing for them. Molly and Arthur had already arrived to wait, and were also more or less calm - with the occasional outbursts of Molly wondering if she'd remembered to pack something and if she'd turned everything off so nothing burns the house down. It was your parents, Oliver love, that were a bit frantic. They kept calling to ask if they needed this thing or that. Then they'd call to ask if it was going to be hot or cold. Or both. They called to ask how much spending money they should bring.

To which, my parents advised around 10 or 20 thousand galleons, but Molly and Arthur assured them that they could have an absolutely LOVELY time on as little as 10 or 20 Galleons - which rather scandalized my parents. I think my mother nearly fainted!

In other news, I forgot to tell both of you, but I accidentally spied on a rather lovely scene between Orion, Ben, and Mara the other night. And yes, I do mean accidentally. See what happened was that I was going to take a late night swim after the both of you were sleeping, and I was barefoot and naked, so it wasn't like I had anything on me to make noise. Thus I padded up silently to the pool area, only to hear:

"I never thought I'd find love once, let alone TWICE," Orion murmured, holding Mara on his lap and stroking her hair.

"You are too kind to us, master," Mara replied in a soft and sultry tone.

He stroked her hair some more. "I'm not being merely kind at the moment, NOR am I being your master. You and Ben both just... fill something inside me."

Ben tilted his head curiously. "Does that mean I have permission to break character for a few minutes?"

"Of course," Orion permitted. Ben sat on a footstool next to the lounger Orion and Mara were on.

Ben reached over to take a hand from each of them. "You know, when we first began this odd relationship, I was just in it for the fun. Playing my part because it was thrilling. But I didn't think for one moment that it would ever MEAN anything to me."

"But it does," Mara stated with all confidence. She brushed Ben's cheek even as she snuggled into Orion's chest. "I feel the same. I feel like I just wanted to play a stupid and silly game for a bit, only I slowly realized that it's NOT a game and that... I never want to stop..."

Orion kissed her on the forehead, and then leaned over to kiss Ben. "I probably will never understand why, but I actually did love Farrah. That's why - after she died - I thought I would never fall in love again. That only her brand of insanity would do it for me. But being with you both... it's... I dunno, healed something - I suppose - in my heart." He sighed and shook his head. "I'd marry you both if it was legal in California."

I raised a brow at that and decided that it was time to stop lurking. "You COULD always move back home and marry them there."

He huffed a soft laugh, sounding like he was thinking he should have known I was listening in. "I suppose I could - eventually. But I really love California. I feel like I belong there. I feel challenged in the best possible way while running our bank with River, and I love having my older brother next to me to keep me from making the wrong choices."

I took a moment to dive into the pool and swim a partial lap before popping my head above water and wiping the wet hair out of my face. "Well, just keep in mind that you'll have our undying support - no matter WHAT you do."
Orion smiled and nodded. "Thanks dad. It means a lot that you, Dad, and Oliver are always behind me. I mean, I even managed to become a bit of an addict and none of you threatened to disown me for it. Instead, you let me get on with it whilst plotting how to get me to stop. It's probably a good thing River stepped in to literally get me out of that situation, otherwise I'm a bit afraid to know what you were planning."

"Oh..." I purred mysteriously. "Nothing important, just a bit of the Imperius Curse and possibly a dragon guarded tower."

Orion laughed somewhat nervously. "Heh..."

After that, I had a chance to freely listen in as they planned a bit ahead to prepare for their upcoming child. All in all, it was a lovely bit of time spent with my son and his... Family, I suppose.

And I had more to discuss, but I've run short on time. It seems the plane has just arrived and I need to help with the passenger exchange. Especially since your parents just popped over here and are in a bit of a panic, love. See you in a few.

Love forever and always,
Draco.

Chapter End Notes

FYI: Draco and Oliver have no idea why Harry thinks he's not the favorite dad. Oh sure, some of them find it easier to manipulate Draco and Oliver by using puppy dog eyes and pouting, but Harry's the one they go to when they want biscuits, conversation, and better advice than: Have you tried turning them into your minions and ordering/bullying them into doing your bidding?

I imagine Oliver giving advice on flirting with women is something along the lines of: Alright son, just try to think of a girl as a Bludger and stay as far away from them as possible, or if you MUST date a girl, picture them like a Quaffle and make sure to always catch them when they fall and guard them from everyone else chasing them until you can shoot them into your hoop and the care of your keeper. Wait, that sounds wrong somehow...

LMAO ^_^
Thursday July 26, 2018

My Loves,

Greetings from beautiful sunny Greece!

Well, to be fair, it's not sunny yet. The sun hasn't risen quite yet. I looked up the sunrise time and set an alarm for about an hour before the scheduled rise. I just, I need to be awake to welcome the sun. I remember the Harry I was all those years ago, discovering myself, discovering the world, and I needed this morning to welcome the sun the way I did all those years ago.

Please forgive me for not waking either of you up this morning to join me. I KNOW Draco will forgive me for not waking him up before sunrise, I think it's more likely he would NOT forgive me for actually waking him up that early, but hopefully Ollie will forgive me for this.

I want to invite the both of you to spend the sunrise with me tomorrow morning though. I figure Ollie and I can go to bed early enough tonight to wake up that early and I think it's likely we can just talk Draco into staying up UNTIL sunrise and then going to sleep at that point. Or you go to bed, wake up for sunrise and a shag, and then go back to sleep until early afternoon. Whatever you want.

I know that I need to share a sunrise here with my loves. Not want; NEED. I can't explain it but I just needed this one alone to be able to enjoy one together. Does that make sense? Or am I just babbling hysterically since it's so early and I'm tired?

Draco, this villa you rented is breathtaking! Much different from the sweet little beachfront cabin I rented during my first visit! But then again, I came alone last time and this time I come with a small army. A small army I built myself!

Speaking of our small army .... I get what you meant Dragon about not actively searching out or truly wanting to add to our family unless either Ollie or myself really push for another addition. Besides the caboose of course! The funny part of your rationale to me is that you seem to think it's because you feel our family is just fine and large enough. When will you ever admit to yourself about your enormous heart?

I thought when you and Ollie had your real emotional conversation shortly after you retained your memories, where you finally admitted that you might not have too little love but so much that you literally have to guard your heart, that you were finally aware of your ability to love.

You really think your reasoning is "I think I personally have enough kids"? Oh hunny ... I may have been so adamant about building our family and filling our arms and hearts with children that we are on our way to twenty-two, but if you truly took the shields off of your own heart? We'd have that one hundred plus children you "joked" about when we first got together. We'd have to start our own sovereign nation at some point there would be so many of them.

But sure, go ahead and convince yourself that YOU think we have ENOUGH.

Anyway, last night's flight was really something. Ollie, I say it all the time, but you truly are our calm. Our balance. Our rock in otherwise turbulent waters. How in Merlin's name did you end up this calm zen-like man when your parents are possibly more panicky than ME?!!
I almost went into the cockpit with Mr. Lott to ask him if he could turn on the seatbelt sign simply so your mum could stop pacing. There might be a path worn into the flooring after yesterday's flight! And your dad? Even at our wedding I've never really seen him drink. I think he had a glass of champagne to toast us that night and that's it. But yesterday he was knocking back firewhiskies like his liver had personally offended him and he was out for revenge.

It was probably about halfway through the flight before I recognized their behavior for what it was; fear. You told me that you had traveled quite a bit as a child. So I couldn't figure out what it was about this trip that was freaking your parents out. You always took portkey's, floos, or some sort of ship or train.

They've never been on a Muggle airplane and all of a sudden they're going on a lengthy international flight with their in-laws and a ton of children that they are really just getting to know.

(Note: Draco had implied in a previous P.S. that Oliver's parents had been on the flight to Iran, but part of Draco's confusion over not having seen them was that they actually Portkeyed there, and then back home again before the gala took place, thus they actually HADN'T been on a plane before.)

Luckily their neurotic behavior turned out in their favor. Iris' pacing did wonders when Gabe became extremely fussy. He had at least one seizure that I noticed on the flight so I wonder if the altitude was messing with his system. She just grabbed him up, snuggled him into her shoulder, and walked him all over the plane until he finally passed out in her arms.

And Leonard was drinking the firewhiskey but he seems to be a Harry-style drunk where he just gets silly and babbles. The youngest big kids ... the oldest babies ... the feisty foursome plus Nora ... whatever you want to call them, decided to latch on to Grandpa Leonard who gets a lot chattier when he's had a drink to loosen his tongue, and listened to stories of their Daddy Oliver's childhood.

I know he was telling stories partly because he was nervous and mostly to keep the kids entertained, but I am personally VERY thankful that I know the story of you being a teeny little boy, already in love with quidditch, and such a little scamp that your father found you sleeping with your broom!

I would pay good galleons to see a picture of pre-Hogwarts Oliver, wearing flying snitch jammies, cuddled up to a training broom the way he now snuggles with our husband!

I should sign off though, sunrise is in about fifteen minutes now. I can see the colors starting to edge up on the horizon. I don't want to miss a moment! I'll see you both in a few hours. Can't wait to spend the day in paradise with you!

Yours,
Harry

Friday July 27th
My glorious husbands,

There's just something about seeing your naked bodies in the gorgeous sunshine that just makes me want to touch them and lick them and do things that are not appropriate in front of an audience of small children. Thankfully for us, I was persuaded to be woken up in a really nice way this morning so that we could all watch the fantastic sunrise together.
Yes, my wake up was oh so nice; a teasing and edging that got me up and raring to go, but didn't finish me off and put me back to sleep when the goal was to remain awake. Horny and amorous, I was all over the both of you as we got settled in on the private beach for our villa, on a soft and thick beach blanket big enough for 8 or 12 people - so we had room to play around. And honestly, having an hour or so of peace while we watched the sun and simply caressed each other was so utterly perfect that I might be persuaded to do it again.

The colors that painted the sky as the sun rose were indescribable. Then - once the sun was up enough that the sky looked normal - beautiful, but normal - we finally got around to finishing that playing. After that, I am sorry to say that I basically passed out. I love the fact that the two of you teamed up to charm a large umbrella to protect me from the sun as it moved so that I could stay and sleep right on the beach without being burned to a crisp.

I also love that the two of you kept all the kids so occupied as they (came out and) played on the beach and in the water, that none of them dared come over and wake me. As I understand it, my parents and even Molly and Arthur simply took it in stride that I was sleeping naked on a semi private beach where anyone could come along and spy on me, but Iris and Leonard were so scandalized that they kept asking if they should conjure up an entire tent, or perhaps a bathrobe, to cover me, hahaha.

Thank you, Oliver love, for trying to explain to them (several times) that I am a nudist at heart and honestly don't care if the entire world stops by to ogle me whilst I sleep. So long as they keep their hands to themselves unless they get permission from the both of you, haha.

Anyway, the funniest part of today so far has been Qismah. She's really trying to fit in as she does understand that in most places, she will NOT be allowed to steal indiscriminately. That said, it's been expected of her for so long that it's basically a habit she can't quite shake. We're all tolerant of her stealing because we've been able to charm all our belongings to return to us after she takes them. Not to mention we could just summon something if it went missing.

Thus, she's sort of pickpocketed us all (well, except for me because I haven't been wearing any pockets to pick), and we've basically just smiled at her and treated her like any other kid. After eating - lunch for all of you, breakfast for me - we took the kids on the first of what's sure to be MANY shopping expeditions, and I basically made a deal with Qismah. Now that I was wearing pockets, I stuffed them all full of local currency. The challenge to her was that if she had an urge to steal (or legitimately buy) anything, rather than do so and risk getting caught by the authorities, she could just pick my pockets. The catch is that she had to take only the amount needed to buy the thing, and if she took too much, she had to put the rest back.

On my end, since I'd basically disabled the anti-theft charms specifically in regards to her (it'll still work on others), the challenge for me is to try to be aware of how successful she is. That way, I can remind her that she can just ask and I'll simply GIVE her the money she needs. I'm hoping that in this way, we'll eventually train her into NOT stealing everything she passes.

Honestly, I'm thinking that the arsehole she's afraid of (and thus must have worked for) MUST have made a killing off of her because she's so good at what she does that none of us have really noticed her take anything until it pops back with a noticeable sound like a mini Apparation.

Also, I think Qismah has fallen in complete and total love with Zaire. She seems to watch him as if he is the sun in her personal sky. I've noticed her spot a potential mark from time to time, and just when she moves to perhaps pick their pockets, Zaire hands her a bit more food and suddenly, the rest of the world seems to disappear for her for a few minutes. And it doesn't matter that he speaks a bit too fast for her translation devices to keep up with, she just hangs on his every word.
But moving onto something more serious for a few minutes. Remember when I said there were other things I wanted to tell you, but that the plane had arrived? Well, I had an odd, erm… I dunno if it was a premonition or a vague sense of unease or what, but I had a feeling like my friend - the dragon I refer to as Opal (the Antipodean Opaleye that lives in the Forbidden Forest) - was in trouble. NOT like fleeing for her life, but... sick maybe?

So, I called up Charlie - this was actually while we were still in Iran when I was up extra late one night because I couldn't sleep. Having finally fell asleep after calling Charlie made me forget to mention it until the other day, and now again because, well, Charlie just called me on my magimobile a bit ago while we were shopping.

See, he'd taken me seriously when I said I felt like something was wrong with Opal. So, he'd gathered up his dragon tamer kit - that's full of tools he might need in order to help the dragons in his care - and set off to find her in the Forbidden Forest by following the somewhat vague directions I'd given him. After all, I'm usually in dragon form myself when I go in there, and it's not exactly clear when saying: "So fly about 100 meters in from the east, and start descending with a slightly left tilt when you get to the copse of trees that smells strongly of mountain trolls."

Luckily, Charlie speaks dragon well enough by now that he understood my directions and managed to locate Opal. The reason it took him a few days to get back to me is that she was, well, very advanced in age, and so, unable to fight off an illness that a dragon half her age probably wouldn't have even noticed.

Charlie stayed with her until she passed, and he even respectfully asked her permission to use some of her scales and things for potions and whatnot to help other dragons as needed - which she gave permission to do so. Thus, he can say with all certainty that she has died and that it was a rather peaceful event. The only thing that truly concerns him at this point is that her three young ones are at an awkward age in which they CAN hunt and feed themselves, and yet, are erm… still rather young. Perhaps too young to be on their own.

He wasn't sure what to do because if he brought them to his dragon sanctuary, there's actually a chance that the other dragons - none of which are Opaleyes - might harm them as intruders while they're still too small to defend themselves from fully grown dragons. Also, they've been raised in the Forbidden Forest up until this point, and so, it's their home. There's not really a need to make them leave unless something bad happens, and so far, they've been just fine as they more or less fended for themselves as their mother's health declined.

So, I promised him that once I get home from Greece, I'll pop in on them. I feel that even if it's only once in a while, having the chance to take the potion to turn into a dragon and simply go flying with them might actually cheer them up. Thankfully, they have each other, so they shouldn't be lonely. Right?

Do you think I should bring them back to the Manor until they are a bit older? There aren't any older dragons to fight them over territory at the Manor, so it'd be safe. I'd just need to seriously strengthen the wards so that they couldn't go flying off and get noticed by the muggles. My parents wouldn't mind, right?

Erm... don't answer that. I'm certain I know they'd not be best pleased in the slightest. Damn it.

Alright fine! No young dragons at the Manor! sigh...

I wonder if maybe I should go camping in the Forbidden Forest a couple of nights each week? I have a small amount of free time at the moment because Hermione has FINALLY relaxed enough in her role that she doesn't need me quite so much. Thus I could actually spend a few months making sure the dragons can take care of themselves.

On the other hand, my good friend Robards has called me - the moment we were 'scheduled' to arrive home from Iran, via Bletchley for some reason - to remind me of something important we had discussed a while back. Something that has not only not resolved itself, but gotten a bit more urgent as time has passed. Something that... interests me...

But anyway, it's time to pause our shopping (I'm writing this as Siri and Zwei are trying to decide WHAT new clothes to buy, and are trying on everything to ask my opinion of it) and go eat dinner. So...

A simple sign off,
You are my sunshine,
Draco
Chapter 321

Chapter Summary

Minor drama in Greece.

My Heart,

Oh Love, I am so sorry to hear about your dragon. Opal was a gorgeous dragon and I know you loved her very much. It's absolutely lovely that Charlie was able to communicate with her and that she was able to give her consent for the harvest of her scales and whatnot. She's kind of like an organ donor in the Muggle world, she knew she had no need for those parts when she was gone from this world and so wanted them used for good.

Mostly I am glad she had someone who cared for her with her as she passed on. I know you probably wish you had been there with her, but I hope it helps give you comfort knowing that someone who loves dragons probably even more than you do was with her. That she didn't have to be alone.

I know you're grieving, and based on your email it seems you're aware of the ridiculousness of your request, but I really do want to explicitly state something. No. No, we are not having dragons come live at the Manor. We have a crazy assortment of animals who live on the Manor grounds but I really do have to draw the line at three adolescent dragons. In case you've been wondering where I would put my foot down, since it wasn't put down for a wild cheetah or a bear, this is it.

And at the risk of bringing up old fights that are long past, I don't want to control you. You are a grown man. I do not tell you where you can go, what you can do, etc. But, really? You're going to stay all night in the forbidden forest a few nights per week? My love. My Own. My Master. Please don't make me get into this with you. You have multiple small children who still need us in the middle of the night. Not as often as they did as newborns, but at least once per night. We have a pregnant husband and sooner rather than later we will have a newborn to care for.

I know we have elves and there are three of us. I know these dragons are important to you. But sleeping away from your husbands, your babies, and your newborn A COUPLE OF NIGHTS PER WEEK?!? For a FEW MONTHS?!? I'm not the boss of you, I don't want to tell you what the "right" thing to do here is.

I don't want to have to wake up in a bed without you in it.

Anyway, enough of the negativity. We are in paradise! We've been eating delicious food. We've done more shopping than any one family really needs to do. And we're about to do one of our favorite family activities! Surfing! It's been a really long time since I've been on a surfboard. I am ready for this. We had a bit of an argument amongst the kids whether we wanted to go surfing or parasailing. We thought for a bit that maybe we could split up into two groups, each going to their preferred activity. But since we have plenty of time and no schedule to follow, why wouldn't we just do them both? So today is surfing and tomorrow is parasailing.

I can't wait!
Speaking of, I am hearing my name called so I assume the group is finally ready and we are headed to the beach.

Last one to the water is a rotten egg!
Harry

Saturday July 28th
My foundations,

Here we are in a gorgeous place, doing things I quite love, and yet, I feel I have to apologize for only paying half attention. I mean I didn't drown whilst surfing, so obviously, I was paying enough attention to get by, but thinking about those poor dragons has had me nearly beside myself with worry. I may not have shouted about it, but meeting them was one of the top 100 moments of my life.

See, I'd been to the Forbidden Forest on and off back when we were living at Hogwarts, and had even gone flying with Opal as a dragon. When I took Oliver with me, one of the times I went to visit her in human form, he'd gotten a chance to meet Opal and see her eggs - and that was back in November. I'll understand if you don't quite remember it, because it happened at the same time we found out our son (Orion) was doing drugs, and I got in enough trouble that I'd more or less forgotten it myself.

Aside from that, I had visited Opal in the Forbidden Forest a few times afterwards, and at first, I thought it would be AGES before her eggs hatched, but to my surprise, they did so when I wasn't around to see it - sometime in May. That part saddens me, as I sort of wish I could have witnessed the event. In any case, right before Hazel's wedding, you may have found it odd that I went to hide out in the Forbidden Forest, but that's what I was doing. I was visiting with Opal and her three young dragons.

I'm going to have to actually pay a visit to Charlie, because he said the dragons were old enough to more or less take care of themselves, and I know baby dragons grow up really quickly, but I need to know for certain that they're doing alright. I wonder if HE'S been camping out in the forest with them???

Would you hate me if I popped over there for a few hours to check up on them?

Alright alright! Mind on my family! Focus on getting the littles to bed... Good thing I'm pacing anyway because I think Morgana must be teething or having a growth spurt, because she is FUSSY right now. Maybe she's coming down with something?

I wonder if I brought her WITH me to the Forbidden Forest, after all, dragon scales can be used in a potion to boost one's health, thus getting her over her cold before it starts. Yes, this sounds like an excellent idea!

But I suppose that literally bringing her with me would be pointless as I'd need to brew the potion in a real lab. I suppose that I COULD brew it in the potion's classroom in Hogwarts. My brother's probably there working on his lesson plan for next year. I - Oh! It seems Morgana just dropped off to sleep after all, I'll just set her in bed...

Yes, I trained my dictation device to pick up on low voices and whispers for when I need to dictate while pacing or otherwise rocking a child to sleep.
Alright, so, the kids are all in bed, Oliver's having a nice and relaxing bath, I have a lovely bottle of wine with my name on it, and Harry's baking a cake and some biscuits - Oi Harry! Are you baking the boys' birthday cake already? You should put some Spiced Brandy or Rumtoph in their cake. And decorate it with a dragon made out of icing. It could have cherries or berries as eyes.

I bought some gold dust if you want to sprinkle a little on the dragon (or other decoration - such as a snitch?).

Oh! I'm getting an incoming Magi-Skype call from Bletchley. Better sign off now!

Draco is distracted enough that he forgets to sign off and send. Dictation device keeps recording.

"Good evening Bletchley, how's your day going?"

"Oh, not too bad. Yours?"

"I'm working on my tan and surfing - we're going parasailing tomorrow - and trying to train a foster child not to steal everything she sees, but even with all of that, I'm a bit worried about a trio of young dragons. Their mother just died of an illness."

"Sorry to hear that - and good luck with the foster child. I'm calling because I'm trying to plan out this undercover mission that Robards assigned to me because he can't deal with it himself at the moment."

"Oh? Why not?"

"I'm not entirely sure, to be honest. It's weird, it seems like every time we start discussing it, he forgets what he's talking about to the point that I've had to ride HIS arse about it, for a change."

"That's strange. He's usually so focused when it comes to this sort of case."

"Yeah, but since he assigned the planning and execution of this mission to me, I've been wracking my brains on how to get it done!"

"I hope you're not calling to beg me to take it on. I already told you - and Robards too - that as much as I would really LOVE to do it, it's just really bad timing for me all around. I'm on holiday!"

"When AREN'T you on holiday???"

"Oi! I'm not ALWAYS on holiday!"

"Sure seems like it! Did you at least discuss the possibility of going undercover with your husbands?"

"Not really. I've hinted at it, but I can tell that this is bad timing all around, so it'll either have to wait for a better time, or you're just going to have to pick someone else to do the undercover part."

Heavy sigh. "I wish I could! I just don't... I'd love to have Ginger work it, but the operative needs to be male because the informant is straight. Of the male Aurors I have to choose from, only three have the right looks necessary, but all of them have significant others who refuse to let them consider this sort of mission, and not to mention, not a single one of them has your skill set. If this was just some secret meeting to obtain information, we'd have had it done MONTHS ago!"

"Bletchley, you're not telling me anything I don't already know."

Lighter sigh. "Look, if you really won't consider it, can you - as the Chief of Raids - at least do a thought exercise with me on who might best be able to accomplish this mission?"

"My only choice would be Fierston because - as you said - it requires a certain skill set, and he's the only one who can use Legilimency to kept everything an absolute secret."

"Which is why we asked him, but his fiancée is ADAMANT that he will not be doing anything like that."

"Do you have ANYONE that would pass the looks requirement and is willing to give it a go? I could always attempt to teach him enough Legilimency to get the job done."

"You could always talk to your husbands -

"Listen! I'm NOT going to pick a fight with my husbands while we're basking in the sun in Greece! Pester me again when I've been home a few days, and provided I'm not camping out in the Forbidden Forest to ensure that neither trolls nor Acromantulas eat those poor defenseless dragons, I MIGHT consider thinking about bringing it up in a vague conversation to test the waters! Until then, this crime is just going to have to continue unhindered!"

Heavy sighs and growls of frustration. (From both of them.)

"But -"

CLICK! Silence except for the sounds of pacing. The dictation device eventually sends the email.
Sunday July 29, 2018

My Draco,

Normally I aim most of these emails at you, but often at least assume you're both reading this, and occasionally specifically direct some of my commentary to our Ollie. Not the case with this conversation. Not because I am trying to keep anything from him, please know that if you don't talk to him in the next day or two, I will be making sure he's read your most recent email and we are going to ambush you and force you to talk.

But before I get into the reasoning behind that, I have a few things I wanted to say about the nondramatic issues.

Well, a little dramatic because I know you're upset, but much less dramatic than "if you don't talk to him I will!"

First of all, there's no need for apologies about your distracted behavior. No need for any apologies. You're grieving your dragon and concerned about her young ones. You have always been my animal-loving, wish you could save them all, big-hearted love. I knew as soon as you told me what had happened with Opal that you were emotionally crushed. You take as much time to grieve and worry as you need alright?

And in that same vein, of course I will not hate you if you have to pop over to the Forbidden Forest to check on your baby dragons! Nothing you could do would ever make me hate you, let alone something that your enormous loving heart is telling you to do. Heck, I wouldn't hate you even if you ignored my earlier request and spent a few nights a week in the forest for a couple of months.

I wouldn't like it, but I definitely wouldn't hate you or even be mad at you.

I wouldn't hate you if you brought those temperamental, possibly dangerous, young dragons to live at the Manor.

I wouldn't like it, but I definitely wouldn't hate you.

I wouldn't even hate you if you brought Morgana with you.

I certainly wouldn't like that. I might be a little mad. But not hate. SHE might hurt you though if you took her away from her other Daddies! Little Miss has gotten quite used to having all three of us at her beck and call and I don't think she'd appreciate being down to a single minion.

You need to do what you feel is right. I can give my opinion, I can give my love, I can give my preferences or advice, but I will not force you into anything in this situation. Just tell me what needs doing and I will do it.
Speaking of not being mad at you, I have to admit something to you that I don't think you're aware of and I don't think you'll particularly like. Keep in mind, I was not eavesdropping or doing anything inappropriate to find out this information ...

I heard your entire conversation with Bletchley. How you ask? You didn't sign off your last email and your brilliant dictation device caught the whole thing. I am going to skip over the part of the conversation where you mentioned hinting things to us but not actually telling us about them. I don't need to argue with you. I will just state, for the record, the biggest issues we've ever had in our marriage has come from lack of communication. So, I would like to officially ask that you be up front and honest. Now that you've been called out, I'd like to have a mature adult conversation the three of us.

If you need to catch Ollie up to speed first before we all three talk so that he has a little warning, I am totally fine with that. Or if instead of being scared at my threat to bring this conversation to him, you'd like me to do that to spare you the initial telling? I can do that as well. But the three of us NEED to talk this out before it becomes a full-fledged, massive argument that threatens our relationships.

I am going to give you my initial feelings and ask you a few questions about this thing you've tried hinting to us but never talked about: secret undercover mission. I am only going to tell you how I feel. I am not going to tell you how Ollie will feel. I am not going to talk Ollie into feeling the way that I do. He gets to come up with his own feelings and opinions on the matter just like you've been able to for (days?weeks?months?hmmm?) and just like I have been able to since I read your email last night.

I'm NOT getting in between you and Ollie to get him on your side, but I am also not going to get between you two and get upset with you for potentially upsetting him.

First, completely unrelated to your involvement at all. Are we wizards or not? You're the ONLY possibility to do this mission? The only one with the right looks - the only male - the only one whose significant others aren't saying a 'hell no'? Honestly, you morons are magical. There is polyjuice, there are glamours, there are spells that can alter physical appearance or gender. Not a single person is capable of ... oh I don't know ... wearing your face with an altered polyjuice? Ginger can't glamour her hair and shoot a spell at her bits to make them the right formation?

I mean, I personally think you're one of a kind and completely irreplaceable, but you can't be literally the only human being who can possibly make this happen.

If YOU don't want to do this mission, that is your call. You and I both know I will never tell you I want you to go on an undercover mission. But don't you dare act like Ollie and I are such monstrous controlling pieces of abusive shite that you are afraid to even talk to us. THAT makes me angry. We're not unreasonable.

If OLIVER doesn't want you to do this mission, that's up to him. Just like all of the ACTUAL AURORS have given their significant others veto rights (see it's not just me), Bletchley should be understanding, and YOU should be understanding, if YOUR husbands don't want you to do this. Our feelings are valid and while I know you might like it to be otherwise, it's not exactly insane for someone to not want their husband shagging other people undercover.

But if YOU want to do this and you're just scared of talking to us? Stop hinting to your Gryffindor husbands, wizard up, and tell us what is going on.

Again, these are only MY feelings. But besides your safety, when have I ever had an issue with you going undercover from a touching other people standpoint? It's a job. I know you don't actually want to shag these criminals or people who are criminal adjacent. Even if you manage to get off from sheer friction, it's not something you'd be looking forward to. It's no different than if you were an actor and had to kiss/pretend to shag a fellow actor for a role. When you're undercover that's exactly what you're doing, playing a role. Sometimes that character has to do things I don't want you to do, but that's the job.

To summarize, the three of us need to sit down and talk. Ollie needs to know what the talk is going to be about before we sit down to have the talk. But for me personally, as long as you leave after my birthday, I am willing to support you in this mission.

But that's enough drama! Let's go parasailing!

Your Harry

Sunday July 29th
Dear Draco - and Harry, but mostly Draco

While I'm not one to participate in this intriguing email exchange, I do usually read them because - as is often said - a lot of the time, things get brought up in the email that are important and need to be thought about before initiating conversation. It's weird, but it really does seem to help all of us communicate better when we have a chance to basically get some notes on a situation before talking it over. It's a bit like having the important points of a test written on the back of one's hand before taking it.

NOT that I've ever done that!

In any case, the last email has given me a lot of food for thought, and I'm really glad that the dictation device picked up on the entire conversation that apparently would not have been brought up otherwise. See, I knew from that conversation we had a while back, that there was some sort of important undercover mission that you've been asked about, but...

You are really very good at being subtle about it, because you SAID you've been hinting, but I don't recall picking up on any other hints. I understand why you initially declined, as you did say that we had too many things to do for it to be feasible (back during that conversation we had), but now that we're coming up on a time when you're going to be free to take it on - if you want - I...

Well...

I'm not sure what I think. I gather that it involves certain things that make you hesitant to even TALK to us about it, but I clearly remember that it's THOSE things that are what make you feel like you actually make a difference. That you can atone for your past and be a better person.

So... While I can't promise that I'll love the idea and give my full, unrestricted blessing... I DO actually want to talk the details over with you and have a chance to think them over before making any sort of decision on the mission.

How does that sound to you?

And for what it's worth, I didn't actually need to read the email (although that helped enormously) as I could hear quite a bit of the conversation from the tub as I was bathing. I was sort of wondering what to do about having overheard you, when the email came in and gave me a better understanding of the situation. That's why I spent a good portion of today while we were parasailing (one of the most fun things I've ever done! Remind me to get my parents a gift for... watching the littles for us while we were having such fun.) lost in thought.

I... I think I might be more or less on board. Like I said, the details are going to be important in making the final decision, but... I think I've reached a point in which I can be comfortable with you doing things in order to stop a - presumably major - crime.

Love and support,
Oliver

A little later on Sunday night.

Dear Oliver and Harry,

Alright, so we just had the big discussion. It had to wait for the kids to go to bed (or otherwise go to their rooms and do their own things), but I think it went well.

I know I know! I have a habit of waiting to discuss things like this until it's unavoidable, but I swear to you that I really did intend to talk about this - when I thought the time was right.

Alright, so back to the beginning, more or less. Shortly before I lost my memories, Robards had been contacted by an unknown person who hinted that they had some important information that they needed to share in a VERY discreet manner. So discreet that this person refused to give ANY details on themselves OR the thing they wanted to discuss - for fear that the wrong person (AKA the criminal) had the ability to actually spy on them so well that even sending an anonymous email to the Head Auror from a public computer while shopping would be immediately known.

However, as time passed, this person (hereafter known as the potential informant) managed to send more emails to Robards. At the very beginning, Robards had contacted me because his first thought was that with someone as extremely skittish and afraid as this person was, a person with my skills of Legilimency would be useful in doing the actual meeting - as we could have one completely non-incriminating conversation out loud while having an entirely more important one in my head.

At the very beginning, I expressed interest, but there wasn't enough to base an actual decision on either way. THAT is what I was referring to when Oliver and I had our conversation after I regained my memory and I explained to him how undercover missions help me feel like I can use my 'bad' skills to do good. But at that time, not only was there not enough to go on to create an official mission, but we were definitely much too busy to even consider it if there was.

And so, at that point, there really wasn't much to talk about. I suppose that I just didn't want to make a big fuss out of such a small potential possibility.

But then, very recently, I mentioned that Robards had contacted me via Bletchley. Which I still find a bit strange as this is the sort of thing that Robards normally keeps ABSOLUTELY secret until he's ready to act. It's normal for him to ask me if I'm interested - or rather, re-ask now that he had more information to tell me - but he usually never talks about such a case with anyone he doesn't directly plan to have involved. Thus him going to Bletchley so that the both of them could call me...

I suppose he simply decided that he was going to delegate it to Bletchley and just wanted to be certain it was the right decision before doing so. In any case, that's not actually important.

What IS important is that over the past month or so, that potential informant managed to send Robards 2 (and a half, since one was extremely short) emails giving slightly clearer information. Enough to know that the criminal is, erm… not necessarily dangerous so much as an evil genius - so to speak. He is using his magic to con hoards of muggles into giving him a ton of money.

The potential informant is actually his lover but they have one of those relationships in which neither quite wants to be exclusive, and so both play around with others. That said, the criminal is paranoid that she might betray him, and so, has her 'bugged' so well that it's a huge risk for her to use a public computer while out shopping. She can only do it when she has a valid excuse to cast privacy spells - such as when in a public loo or perhaps on a first date with a new playmate, but even then, she's dead certain he has an actually person watching her to read her lips and be sure that she's not saying anything she shouldn't.

Personally, I think she's being unreasonably paranoid, BUT if she's actually right, then I can completely understand why Robards and Bletchley think I'd be the perfect person for this mission. Yes, the person undercover would have to meet certain requirements to pass as a potential lover - but as Harry pointed out, there are magical methods of working around that. The truly important part would be the skills needed.

It sounds like the most important skill necessary for this mission is Legilimency, which is why I offered to give another person a crash course in it if he or she has ANY sort of aptitude for it. Note: Ginger does not have any aptitude for it. We've actually talked about it in the past, and I once let her try to read my mind when we were working together in the past, but as I said, she had zero ability, and so, nothing came of it.

With all of that in mind, this is how I would work the case - if I decide to do so AND you both give me permission because - no matter how much I balk and rebel against it - I DO recognize that I can't just do this sort of thing if one or both of you hates it.

I would arrange for me to meet the potential informant in a club or other place where it wouldn't at all be strange to pull a one off. I would then go through the motions of dancing and hooking up - flirting and whatever was necessary to utterly convince any and all spies that we are doing exactly what they think we are. Then I'd suggest going to a random hotel - where I would probably have to go through with the one off so that those 'bugging' spells that she's convinced he has on her only pick up what is expected for a one off.

Meanwhile, my mind would be at work obtaining all the information she wants to pass on. I would be multitasking. To be honest, I've never had to focus so intently on something so completely non sexual while shagging, that I'm not certain I can do both convincingly.

I can already hear Oliver asking why there has to be shagging involved at all, and the answer to that is that I honestly can't think of any other reason two people would be silently staring each other intently in the eyes WITHOUT arousing suspicion.

But basically, what I am saying is that I could do this mission and I even understand why I'd be the best choice for it based on my skills and the fact that only Fierston can do Legilimency and CAN'T persuade his fiancée into letting him. I think that Ginger could do most of it, but the actual exchange of information in her case would require words, and no matter how quietly spoken, those words could be overheard by any number of spying spells. Also, casting privacy spells could trigger suspicion, and the last thing anyone wants is to put the potential informant in actual danger if the criminal feels that she is betraying him.

But as I've been telling Bletchley (and Robards), as much as I am confident that I can do this mission, and actually do want to do it, I'm not all that eager to jump into it and risk angering one or both of you. Which is why I was waiting for the best possible time to bring it up. I was thinking once we were home from Greece, probably after I was reasonably less worried about those dragons and had a chance to introduce Qismah to Unity House.

But it's come to a head now. If I have permission (after we've all thought about it some more and discussed things again), then we can do the preplanning stage, in which Bletchley or Robards contacts the potential informant and arranges a date for the 'never met before, pull a lover from a club, one off' that we want the criminal to think is happening.

With how increasingly desperate she's been in her emails, I think just this bit will put her mind at ease until the actual date. Hopefully.

My only other option is to help Bletchley choose a different Auror and attempt to teach him or her enough Legilimency to accomplish the mission without endangering the potential informant. Which... could work IF anyone has a decent enough aptitude for it. That said, I don't think any of them do, or the Deputy Head Auror would have insisted that I train them in it long before now. Sigh...

I await your next discussion of this matter.

Alright, that sounded a bit cold and formal, but I'm trying to rein my anxiety in.

The best of my love,
Draco
P.S. Fuck it! I'm not going to be able to sleep until I pop in on those dragons in the Forbidden Forest at least once, so, if you should happen to wake up and come looking for me in the next hour or so, that's where I'll be. But don't worry, I'll come back before either of you normally wakes up.
Chapter 323

Chapter Summary

The boys talk and reach an agreement.

Monday July 30, 2018

My Everything,

Phew, that was a killer conversation. It took so much out of me emotionally and I was mostly silent through it. I can't imagine how emotionally raw the both of you are feeling right now. I mean, Draco the look on your face when Ollie said ...

Wait, I am getting ahead of myself.

So, I woke up this morning bright and early. Or dark and early technically. I knew we had a huge day ahead of us, I needed to get Siri and Zwei's birthday breakfasts ready, we were planning on having our big talk, and as soon as I'm done writing this email, I am taking off to bring the mischief twins for their Birthday Rafting Adventure!

Zaire woke up with me, never one to pass up an excuse to play in the kitchen. We put together an absolutely lovely breakfast, full of their usual preferences like pancakes but with fun additions that Zaire came up with. He added greek yogurt as well as local honey and nuts to top off the pancakes. Then he also made Dakos, these little bread bowl husks that were covered in chopped tomato, fresh cheeses, herbs, and olive oil. Then these little pastry things, loukoumades, which are fried dough served with ice cream and then again with the nuts and honey.

Honestly, if they weren't a tradition for our boys, I think they wouldn't have touched my pancakes and just filled themselves up on the loukoumades and dakos. Luckily they know their Daddy Harry is a bit overemotional and made a show of enjoying the pancakes as well. I know they were putting on a show, but I am okay with it.

After they gorged themselves and I had cleaned up the kitchen, they decided to go back to sleep for a bit before we set off on our adventure. Which gave us the perfect opportunity to have our discussion.

It was a bit early for you Draco, but I think you were so worried about whatever decision that Ollie and I had come to that you were willing to get an early start to the day if it meant you'd stop wondering what was going to happen. We were all cuddled up in bed - we might be at odds with the current situation but we always do better when we can hold each other. Assuring each of our husbands that while our words might be feisty, our love is a constant.

I started us out, "Draco, I don't understand why you still feel you have things to atone for. You've done so much good in your adult life it's not only canceled out your earlier bad decisions, but put you solidly in the 'obnoxious goody two shoes' category you used to place me in." You made a face at that but I pressed on, "I have given you my permission that always comes with the caveat that I don't love what's happening, but as long as you come home to me everything will be fine."
You gave me a sweet smirk and almost looked like you were ready to thank us for agreeing and move on with your plans until Ollie interjected, "Harry is not your only husband anymore. He's not the only permission you need. I have stipulations before I agree."

Again Draco, you nodded towards Oliver to continue. Although you did cross your arms; starting out a bit defensive darling?

"Alright, number one: I've realized with Harry's own kissing rules that I quite like having your kisses all for us. No mouth kissing at all."

Your eyes widened a bit, "Salazar that's going to be hard!" Then after taking a deep breath, you agreed with a "but okay, I can make that work."

Oliver gave a sharp nod and continued on, "Number two: I want you to completely avoid penetrative sex at all." Your eyes REALLY widened at that one. Oliver did at least follow that up with, "I understand that might not be possible without blowing your cover, which is obviously that last thing I would want. So I will concede that while I want you to avoid it, you can do what you need to do if it comes down to it."

Draco looked a little more relieved with that slight allowance, "That puts me in quite a dilemma, and I'm not sure I could have completely agreed without your concession that it is allowable if absolutely needed. It will be a challenge, but I can agree to that."

Another sharp nod from Oliver and he pressed on, "Good, halfway there."

I'm not sure if Draco was relieved to hear there were only four conditions or if he was terrified that they seemed to be increasing in intensity and we were only halfway there.

"Condition number three: if you are simply physically taking care of her, orally or with your hands, etc, I want you to cast an impotence spell on yourself. However, if the second request reaches the stage where there must be penetration, I want you to cast a denial spell on yourself. It's one thing if this woman gets to have you, she is damned well not getting your orgasms!"

Draco, I think you were so shocked at this one that you let a giggle escape. "Well that's certainly an interesting condition!"

"Are you saying no?" Oliver challenged.

"No, I was just shocked. I think it might be awkward, but I'm sure I can make it work."

Ollie you took a deep breath, "This one might be the hardest one." I could see a bit of fear in your eyes Dragon, until he said "I don't want you to use any of the endearments with her that you use for Harry and me. No calling her 'Luv' and no 'puppy' or 'mutt'"

Draco you gave us a saucy wink, "You said it might be hard. That's the easiest one. Absolutely not a problem!"

Ollie got a very stern look on his face, "Draco, those are my four conditions. Besides the one you said would be challenging - that I did give you an out if needed - are you really agreeing to these? Actually agreeing and not just saying yes and planning on hiding it from us or just asking for forgiveness later?"

"Oliver, asking for forgiveness is Harry's thing."

Hey. Rude! True, but still!
"I much prefer to never make a promise unless I'm confident I can keep it. So yes, I will promise to abide by your rules unless I absolutely have to break them, in which case, I will tell you about it right away. In return, all I ask is that you try to be understanding no matter what happens."

Oliver ignored the part where you asked for understanding and just pressed on, "You are agreeing? You swear on US?"

Draco's eyes narrowed considerably, "I feel this is a trap somehow, but yes, I swear on us."

Finally Oliver went from stern disciplinarian ... side note: we are totally playing around with that stern authority figure thing later! I'm thinking strict professor or maybe go really far-fetched and play intense quidditch captain giving his teammates a dressing down in the locker rooms.

Mmmm.

Sorry! Bad place to get distracted thinking about my husbands in sweaty quidditch leathers. In a steamy locker room. Really putting me through my paces.

Dammit! I did it again!

Anyway, Oliver lost his strict face and gave one of his thousand-watt Ollie smiles, he looked over at me to see my nod of agreement before saying, "Then Harry and I agree, ignore all of that, there are no conditions at all. Except of course to come home safely to us."

Draco, I don't think I've ever seen you so flustered. You sputtered out a "Wait, what?? Really?"

I took over the explanation because Ollie was busy giving you sweet little kisses all over your pretty face, "Oliver only ever wanted the assurance that we were loved and we were enough. Once he knew you were completely willing to follow those conditions, knew you were planning to honor your husband's wishes instead of pushing back in a temper, knew you were not only willing to agree but without trying to fight it or buck back? It meant they weren't needed."

Once the two of you were done with the kisses, which turned into snogging, which then turned into frotting to completion, Draco got into his own negotiations. That's where we didn't quite come to an easy solution, but I think that's more because we don't really know what will be best without the full background on the case.

See, Draco wants us to be there. You don't think it's particularly believable that you would go to a club to pull a one off without your husbands. You want us to come with, try not to blow your cover, and make it obvious that we gave our permission to play for the night.

See, I think there are probably ways to make it obvious he has our permission without having two idiot Gryffindors attempt to go undercover as well. I just don't think adding us to the mix will make it less likely the cover will be blown.

There's also the bit where you think Ollie and I will feel better about the whole thing if we can see the informant is just a normal woman and not a dangerous criminal waiting to hurt Draco.

I happen to think THAT is utter bollocks. I know for a fact that evil can look completely normal. Evil doesn't have a specific face. Or have you already forgotten about Umbridge and her inquisitorial squad of thugs?

Anyway, we can figure out those specifics when you actually start planning the ... raid? Undercover operation? Sting? Information gathering? For now, it's enough to know we have both given our blessing to continue on. We love you, we trust you.
But enough of that! I'm off to the rapids with my fourteen and fifteen year old sons!

Your adventurer!
Harry

Monday July 30th
My Amazing Husbands,

Honestly, you both manage to utterly blow me away when I'm least expecting it!

But before I get into that, let me tell you what happened with the dragons. It's why I was actually still up when we had our early morning negotiation. I went to the Forbidden Forest by taking a potion to transform into a dragon (Antipodean Opaleyes are actually rather hard for muggles to see when they're flying because they blend in with the sky), and flying there. As a dragon, I could fly fast enough that it didn't take more than an hour or so to get to Scotland from Greece.

It took a few more sips of potion to maintain my dragon form as I flew and once I got there, but the little dragons had no problem accepting me as they recognized me in much the same way their mother could always tell I was me no matter what form I take. I really think I must smell the same to them or something. In any case, they seemed rather happy that I was there to go flying with them.

I also had a strange urge to go hunting. I mean I suppose it's not that strange as I do actually take our kids out hunting with the owls when they're in the mood and I have time. I guess that dragon me felt this was a good way to bond with them and make sure that they truly were getting enough to eat.

Anyway, the dragons - two girls and one boy - are doing surprisingly well. They are already big enough to defend themselves from most attackers - especially since they protect each other. They're still no match for an adult dragon with hostile intentions, but I'm not so worried that they'll die of starvation. Also, the Centaurs seem to be keeping the Acromantulas away from them.

Once I returned home, I barely had time to slip in bed before you slipped out of it, Harry. In any other circumstance, I probably would have just passed out from exhaustion, but I was so wound up that I could only toss and turn until you came back into the room and 'woke' me. Thankfully Oliver is still in the stage of his pregnancy where he can sleep like a log without too much discomfort, thus my restlessness didn't disturb him.

Our talk went well, and while I still think that it would be more believable to have you two there to begin with, I take your point in that it would probably be disastrous for my cover. So I called Bletchley and we had a bit of a planning session. The good news is that because the mission is me going out on the pull as myself, I can use our famously kinky sex life as the perfect excuse for why the two of you aren't with me. Even better, I can take an undercover partner with me.

We're going to ask Ginger to glamour her face unrecognizable and be at the club for me to flirt with a bit to establish why I'm there (to pull), which means that she'll be able to back me up if anything goes wrong prior to the hotel portion of the night. Not to mention that she and Bletchley both will be monitoring me via Earbuds. There may not be any Contact Cameras - unfortunately - because I'm not certain I can risk them interfering with my Legilimency.

The point is that if I need to call for help at any time, I'll be able to. Honestly, despite planning for every contingency, almost nothing ever happens on these missions that isn't exactly what I expect.
I'm not including getting pregnant with Morgana in that statement because that incident was not the mission going awry, it was just an unwanted (at the time) result of doing the mission as planned.

So, now that everything is as set as it can get until the potential informant responds to the email Bletchley sent today, I'm more than likely going to pass out. Oliver has already obligingly agreed to be pampered and worshiped by our kids that are still here - I hear that they are going to be conducting this pampering on the beach - so I can sleep. Between him and all our parents, even Qismah should be kept well in hand.

That means, Harry, when you return from rafting with the boys and Persephone (who positively refused to let you leave without her), you should probably head off to the beach to join them. Unless you absolutely MUST have your way with me while I sleep. I'll not object. Probably.

The good news is that if I sleep my normal amount from this point on, I'll wake up so early tomorrow that I can wake YOU up happily for your birthday, for a change! I'm quite looking forward to it ^_^

Can I go where you go? Can we always be this close, forever and ever and ah!

Draco
Tuesday July 31, 2018

Happy Birthday to me!

From beginning to ... not the end since it's still technically my birthday, but from beginning to now my day has been exactly what I wanted it to be and more.

Nineteen years ago; still recovering from a war, still discovering who I was, and after a childhood of fulfilling others' expectations, I began to figure out what I expected of myself. I took the first holiday I had ever taken. I could have brought my best friends. I could have brought my new boyfriend. I could have brought my Godson. But at the time, I had to take this first step on my own.

Maybe I would discover that I wanted to live in a foreign country. Perhaps I would be one of those odd people who didn't actually care for the beach. What if after a lifetime of dreaming about seeing ancient ruins, I realized they were boring and I'd rather be at some tourist trap. There was the chance that after a day or two alone with my thoughts, I would realize I couldn't stand the sound of my own (brain's) voice and needed to surround myself with people.

Instead, I learned that while I wanted to spend my life traveling extensively, even going as far as to make temporary homes in different locations around the globe, Britain will always be my home.

Unsurprisingly, I was definitely one of those people who adores the beach. My favorite travel locations are usually as close to an ocean as I can get.

I love ancient ruins, although I've also found I'm a sucker for a good tourist trap as well.

I adore our crazy family and every loud moment, but I definitely enjoy the few occasions I can be alone with my thoughts to decompress. Although with two husbands and going on twenty-two or more children, those moments are certainly few and far between.

My first holiday in Greece was one of the first times in my life that I was able to discover for myself who I was and what I wanted out of life. In the years since then ... nineteen of them. Damn we've gotten old. How did that happen? Anyway, in the years since that very first of many travels, I have continued to learn about myself. I have grown and changed. I've fallen in love, yet never out of love. And my life is so far beyond any of the wildest dreams I had at nineteen, or nine, or any age really. But I've never come back here.

Although, side note: when I was talking about coming here, I kept saying we hadn't been back since my trip. I've also been alluding to it this entire email. Technically it's not true. We did come on a trip to Greece nine years ago. It was on the mainland of the country, we're on a separate island 770 something kilometers (480 miles) away. It might technically be the same country but that's like saying when we went to California and NYC they were the same place since they were technically the same country.

Also, that happened in that year following our original Unity Iran trip and much of that time following is a blur for me.

Anyway, what I was trying to say is that for all of our travels, I have never come back to Crete. Never come back to Kato Zakros. And even being on Crete this week for this vacation, we're staying on the other side of the island in Koutsouras. I worried that coming back here might change something about those memories I hold dear. Of having time to read on the beach, finishing the entire book in one sunny day. Just a lot of reapplication of sun charms. That my memories of the cabin I stayed in will go from sweetly charming to realizing it was a dingy hovel. I'm really not sure what I was worried about, but those memories have always been so perfect that I didn't want to chance spoiling them.

So, I had a backup plan. If my original plans fell short I had a cute cafe set up for lunch. I had a few theatre locations scouted out. A secondary beach we could lounge on.

But none of my backup plans were needed. After my delicious wake-up from my beautiful Draco, with my gorgeous Oliver enthusiastically joining in once he was woken by the moaning, and a nice breakfast with my family, we headed off for Zakros.

Or I suppose after a million goodbyes to the kids and reassurances from all the grandparents that we weren't needed and to enjoy our day off. Then a few more million goodbyes, we headed off for Zakros.

I brought the loves of my life to the sweet little cozy cabin I stayed in all those years ago. And it was perfect. Everything was charmingly exactly the same. The comfy beach chairs, the sweet little vase of flowers left on the table by the owners, even the ocean air smelled the same way it does in all of my memories.

And we did nothing more than talk, cuddle, kiss, just spending the day together. I probably did more talking than either of you combined, but then again I'm the birthday boy and you both seemed willing to allow me some special considerations. We walked through the cabin, christening each room thoroughly! And we went for a walk hand in hand in hand down the beach. I know you've both heard my childhood sob story a million times. Or maybe just once or twice ... I don't exactly love reliving it. But for some reason, I felt the need to explain just what that first vacation meant to me. And how I was ready to share this sacred space with the two of you.

I don't think I can type out everything I spoke of today. I think it's alright if we forget the exact conversations. Those words and feelings can live on in that space. Maybe we should come back here for our tenth wedding anniversary or some other special date. Maybe our fortieth birthd...... oh wait, Ollie is already past forty, maybe we'll come out here for his fiftieth!

Oh, I am going to pay for that later I'm sure.

But we'll have to come back no matter what to check on our marks.

With the day spent frolicking on the beach, making love on every inch of the cabin, and the emotional connections we strengthened today - my favorite moment was none of those things. Don't get me wrong, they were all wonderful, but the marks were my favorite.

Which marks do I mean? Well, I wasn't actually speaking of my newest brand, but that was a wonderful moment. After over a year of seeing "Property of Draco Malfoy" branded into my inner thigh, Ollie left his own mark on the opposite thigh. Now, "Property of Oliver Wood" graces the coordinating spot. Your names practically kissing each other every time my thighs come together. Mmm, I am getting hard just thinking of those matching marks of ownership.

No though, those aren't the marks I was thinking of. On the steps I watched my first Grecian sunrise from, I had spelled my initials "HP." It was with a full heart that I changed that mark I'd made so long ago. Turning the "HP" into a "HMW"

Just changing my original name to my married name would have been enough. But seeing the tears in my eyes, seeing how important that mark was to me, the both of you added your own initials, forever leaving our initials intertwined in this space. Burnt into what I think of as "my" steps, all future travelers will see "DM + HMW + OW"

Thank you for the calmest, and yet loveliest birthday I think I've ever had. Thank you for letting me drag you across the island to this little hidden cove. Thank you for loving me.

Now, I am going to sign off, go find you both, and drag you off to bed so I can show you just how appreciative I am of all the gifts I've been given.

Eternally Yours,
Harry Malfoy-Wood

Sunday August 5th (around 3AM)
Dear Harry and Oliver,

As you know, because I insta-owled you, I am currently in my office in the Ministry. However, you might both be sleeping and not actually reading your I-Os. So, I'll start by repeating them: I'm safe and in my office.

The mission didn't exactly go well, but I'll get to that. First, let me tell it chronologically so that it all makes sense when I write my official report.

I left you all in Greece on Friday so that I could Portkey to the Ministry to finalize the preplanning. I also popped into the Forbidden Forest when I had a few minutes to check up on the dragons, who seem to be missing their mum. In any case, I know you're all in bed at the moment so you can leave first thing in the morning and be back home in the Manor in PLENTY of time to celebrate Nora's first birthday with us.

But as I was saying, Friday was finalization, Saturday was the mission. That means I spent a few hours during the afternoon making sure that the tech was working perfectly for Bletchley and Ginger. Warning, Ginger wore a glamour, but she still wears as much perfume as ever, and so I probably reek of it.

Ginger was outfitted with Contact Cameras and Earbuds. Bletchley was burrowed in the incident room wearing Earbuds and watching footage from Ginger's cameras AND the mapping drones that we deployed at the club once we arrived.

A small twist to my plans was that Bletchley found a young Auror to help with the mission. Girly! I know, I was surprised too. But apparently, Girly doesn't have any significant others to prevent her from going to a club to pull, and while she also doesn't have Legilimency, she IS a fully trained Auror and NOT someone easily recognizable as such. I am, but that doesn't matter in this situation, and Ginger is, but she's wearing a glamour. Girly was wearing Contact Cameras and Earbuds, and her role was to alternate - with Ginger obviously - who I was dancing with and to help sell the
I verified that the tech was all in working order, slipped some mapping drones in my carry all watch to deploy at the Hotel for Bletchley to monitor when the only other contact he had with me was my earbuds (which also record audio, in case you forgot that). At the last minute, I decided to try wearing a pair of Contact Cameras after all, figuring that I could always excuse myself to the loo to remove them if they interfered. Once that part was ready, the three of us that were going to the club left to go get ready, which for me, meant a trip to the spa for a massage and facial with a mani/pedi and the tips of my hair died a gorgeous metallic blue.

Then I naturally dressed up in one of my best - somewhat casual - waistcoats paired with a sleek pair of black trousers and a crisp white shirt. Once I was ready, I headed off to the club. The potential informant was told that she would be meeting with me, and so, knew to look for me - although I was planning to arrive nearly an hour before the designated meeting time. Which I did. This was to give Ginger and Girly a chance to arrive at different times and help establish my cover story.

One of the nice things about Ginger is that she actually knows how to dance pretty well. This means that I was able to have a bit of fun before the mission officially began. Girly arrived right on schedule and promptly started vying for my attention. I danced with her a few times, but she's actually not that good at it, and so, I was glad to have Ginger to switch back and forth between.

The potential informant had been the one to specify place and time, and so, she'd chosen a club owned by squibs (that I sort of partially own, heh heh) that had a good mix of unsuspecting muggles, squibs, and witches and wizards all dancing and getting along with each other. It wasn't specifically LBGT, but it was an inclusive place, so there were a few gay couples on the dance floor as well.

But as I was saying (I must be tired, I keep going off track!), the potential informant said in her email that I'd know her by the fact that she has light brown hair that brushes her shoulders, would be wearing a satin blue dress that had asymmetrical shoulders - her left one being bare - and most importantly of all, she had a tattoo on her left shoulder of the iconic Slytherin Snake.

Why don't I have a tattoo of that?!

When she arrived - with two girl friends (to sell the fact that she's not here specifically to have a traitorous meeting with me) - I immediately spotted her and gave her a flirty wink to let her know that I was 'interested.' She flirted back, but otherwise ignored me until after they could obtain drinks and settle their plans for who looked good enough to dance with.

This part of it took patience. I definitely needed it to look like we were interested in each other, but NOT so interested that we just jumped in each others' arms and Apparated away. You know, the subtle part where I am like a snake slowly coiling around my prey.

At one point, when Girly was pretending to be frustrated with my fickleness, a man came up to me and grinned an invitation to do naughty things with him. I gave him a wary look.

"You're Draco Malfoy, right?" He asked, looking me up and down in appreciation.

"Yeah. Something I can help you with?" I wondered. He was good looking enough – with blond hair and vibrant blue eyes - that he should have interested me, but I was too focused on my mission to truly give him a second look.

"Oh, just that I wondered what you're doing here without your husbands."
"Oh? Did you want to dance with Harry? Or Oliver?"

He got close enough to put an arm around my shoulders. "You, actually. I just find it odd that you're out without them."

SEE?! I shrugged and gave him a polite smile. "My husbands are so gay that they seem allergic to fanny, and so, they've given me permission to have a bit of fun with a woman tonight."

This seemed to make him falter for a moment. "Wait... but aren't YOU gay too?"

I chuckled. "Seeing as I'm married to two men, I can see why you'd assume that, but I'm actually bisexual."

He grinned again. "Oh? So you'd be interested in a visit to the loo with me?"

I shook my head and gently pushed his arm off my shoulders. "Sorry mate, but no. I came here looking for fanny. I've got two of the best shafts on the planet waiting for me at home, if that was what I was in the mood for. Better luck next time!"

He was persistent, but my attention had already returned to the potential informant, who was giving me smoky eyes from across the room. I looked her up and down, very overtly, to get my point across.

"All I'm saying is that we could get each other off in the loo, and THEN you can STILL pull that bird over there."

I shook my head. "Sorry mate, not interested." Then I frowned curiously. "Why do you want me so badly anyway?"

"Are you serious?!" He practically shouted. "Have you looked in a mirror recently?!"

This made me give him a flirty smirk after all. "I applaud your taste, but as I said, I'm not interested. I'm about to go ask that bird over there to dance with me. If you want to help me out a bit, you could distract the two that have been trying to get in my pants all night."

He bit his lip in thought. "What is it about her that interests you more than those two?"

I grinned at him. "That's easy! She's playing hard to get and acting like she's barely noticed me. Like I don't matter to her, and that makes her a challenge."

"Ah..." he murmured in disappointment, perhaps realizing that him coming onto me was a big part of the reason that I just wasn't interested. The more important part being that he wasn't either of you. He didn't need to know that the most important reason of all was that I was actually working and not seriously interested in anyone here at all.

He stood there quietly watching me watch her for a few seconds before I decided that I couldn't risk blowing my cover by seeming TOO interested, so I turned back to Ginger, who was smirking at me knowingly even as she looked the bloke up and down. We danced, and it's probably a good thing that I'd not gone over and tried talking to the potential informant yet anyway, because she excused herself to the loo.

The dance with Ginger - and Girly, who decided to rub herself all over me, helping me not only sell the fact that I was on the pull, but also giving me an opportunity to make it clear that I wasn't into someone as forward as she was being. She and Ginger seemed to be speaking almost silently via their Earbuds, because they were having fun playing rivals even as they coordinated their actions.
A few minutes later, the potential informant was back with her friends, pointing to the dance floor. I looked around to see who might try to grab her attention before I could, and noticed that the bloke interested in me had decided to leave the club rather than watch me flirt with her - which was perfect as I REALLY didn't need him distracting me.

The potential informant accepted a dance from the first man to ask her, but a glance in my direction let me know that she was expecting me to come over and cut in at some point. Her two friends each found relatively good looking blokes to dance with, and from that moment on, seemed to lose all interest in her or each other. Clearly, they were on the pull too and - now that they were on the prowl - weren't planning to interfere with each other.

I let the potential informant have two whole dances with the man that she barely seemed to tolerate before going over and cutting in as expected. She looked so relieved that I could only assume the strain of pretending to be innocently not betraying her lover was getting to her. She shook that off, presumably reminding herself that she had a part to play.

"I didn't expect you to dance with me. You're married to TWO famous men, and I'm just a fil..."

I pressed a finger to her lips and shook my head. "Tonight, I'm just a man with permission to stray as I like."

She smiled at that. "So... does that mean we might end up, erm..."

"Spending the night in a hotel?" I finished for her, chuckling, because now that we'd made contact, she seemed a bit eager to get this whole thing over with. "I don't see why not."

"But..." She bit her lip with a frown. "Don't you think I'm being too..."

I stroked her spine, deciding to speed things up before she cracked and blew our cover. "Normally, I like my potential lovers to play hard to get and challenge me, but from the first moment I laid eyes on you, I knew you were it for the night. So we can do this the long way by dancing and flirting, or we can just go find a hotel room."

Before she could answer, a song came on that caught both our attention. Actually, we both grinned deviously. I pulled her in my arms and forced her to relax and dance with me as I sang to her.

"So you're a tough guy, like it really rough guy, just can't get enough guy, chest always so puffed guy, I'm the bad type, make your mama sad type, make your girlfriend mad type, might seduce your dad type, I'm the baaaaad guy..."

She laughed and took over. "I like it when you take control, even if you know that you don't own me, I'll let you play the role, I'll be your animal."

We both relaxed a bit and got into the dance at that point, until we spontaneously sung in unison a bit later. "I'm only good at being baaaaaad... Baaaad..."

She pressed a finger to my lips so that she could sing the next part by herself. "I like when you get mad, I guess I'm glad that you're alone," she paused to kiss me, but I put a finger on her lips as I was honestly trying to abide by the rules I promised to follow, even though I was given permission to disregard them. Instead of a kiss on the lips, I pressed my mouth against her ear and whispered the last bit of the song.

"I'm a bad guy..."

Looking antsy with excitement, she grabbed me by the hand and started dragging me toward the loo, before stopping abruptly and pointing toward the exit. I nodded in agreement and took the lead. Once outside the club, neither of us broke character.

"I can Apparate us to an excellent hotel," I offered.

She put an arm around my shoulder and seemed to breathe me in. "I'd like that."

Normally Harry, at some point, probably right about the time the mission started, you'd tell me that you don't really want to know all the details. So now that I'm reaching the part of the mission that you REALLY don't want the details of, I need to pause and let you know that I'm giving them all to you because they're actually important.

Harry... Oliver... PLEASE don't think of the following descriptions as any sort of attempt to make you feel bad. And keep in mind that I was doing a job. A serious job despite the fact that shagging was part of the plan.

I Apparated us to the hotel that I'd already booked a room at (that I also partially own), and since I had already done so, there was no need to check in. Simply pop into the room and subtly deploy my mapping drones. As I was doing this (behind my back), she tried to kiss me again, but I shook my head and said: "No kisses on the mouth, please. Anywhere else is fine."

"Oh?" She purred in a sultry tone as she dropped to her knees "Such as here?"

Well, if I'm honest, that WOULD give me an excuse to stare her in the eyes, provided that she looked up at me, so I gestured for her to give it a go. I'll skim the details slightly because I'm sure you can imagine. In any case, she seemed rather eager as she stripped me off and got into her performance. It took a minute or so for her to look up at me, but then our eyes locked and I slipped right into her mind.

Mentally, I sighed in relief as not everyone CAN be read. I had no way to know until this moment if it was even possible to have a Legilimency conversation with her. She was so focused on her task, that she didn't even seem to notice that I was in her mind, so I took a moment to look around.

As I assumed, the job was NOT so easy as a large package on a mental desk labeled: Information to leak to the Aurors. Instead, her mind was a bit cluttered, and...

There was an image of me tied to a somewhat gaudy green and gold bed. I figured that she must have taken the news of who her contact was to heart and mentally prepared for the situation. As I looked around a bit more, the actual woman pulled back a moment and looked down, inadvertently evicting me from her mind.

"Can you tell me about the Dark Lord?"

"WHY in the bloody hell would you want to talk about HIM... AT A TIME LIKE THIS?!?!" I asked in bafflement.

She huffed a tiny chuckle. "When else would I ever have a chance to ask?"

"Yeah but, he was an insane man who ordered me to commit murder. You CAN'T think that I'd want to talk about him when..." I gestured to the situation at hand.

"I suppose not... After then?"

I was still beyond confused "Erm... maybe?" After all, maybe this was part of what the criminal would EXPECT to hear if he's spying on her as much as she thinks he is. Maybe he managed to make her confess to a potential one off with me and he gave her permission so long as she pumped me for certain information. I'd need to read her mind some more in order to be certain.

At this point, she pushed me on my back on the bed and went to climb on, but I prevented her from that as well, saving it for a last resort - so to speak. Instead, I rolled her onto her back and gently bit her neck before looking into her eyes. As easy as breathing, I was back inside her mind.

To my surprise, she was mentally looking at her reflection in a mirror in a dingy public loo. She turned her face side to side to get a really good look at it, even going so far as to pry open her eyelids as far as possible and PEER into her own brown eyes. Then - with a smirk - she looked off to her side...

Where SHE was sprawled over a toilet, naked and... strange looking. The her that was looking at her cast a slew of privacy spells to close the stall door, lock it, and repel everyone from noticing that it even existed. The she straightened her neckline, adjusted her cleavage, and exited the loo.

This shocked me out of her mind! I gaped at her and wasn't sure what to do! After all, that COULD have just been an odd fantasy, but it seemed like a very recent memory. She took my pause as second thoughts or something, and rolled us around the bed again until she was about to straddle me.

"Wait!" I cried out insistently. Even my hands were held out in a gesture commanding her to stop. "I, erm… I forgot to cast the appropriate protection spells!"

She pouted at that. "Aww... I was sort of hoping you'd forget that..."

That made me shiver in revulsion. Before she could react - or even catch on - I pointed at her and nonverbally (and wandlessly, but that probably goes without saying) cast a spell to incarcerate her.

"Kinky!" She purred approvingly as I rolled her onto her stomach and sat on her back.

Then I put a hand to my ear and tapped the Earbud so that I'd be able to talk through it like a magimobile - but only to the team involved. "Bletchley, I think we might have a problem."

"Oh? What sort of problem?" Bletchley asked, a crunching sound made me wonder if he was eating popcorn.

"Ginger, are you still at the club?" I asked.

"Yeah Chief! We're just enjoying our night - but not TOO much in case you need us to back you up."

"Great! Can you go into the loo and see if there's a stall that's been charmed to repel people, and if so, check to see what's inside it?"

She sounded weary even as she agreed to go do just that. Sure enough, approximately one minute later, she was groaning in frustration as Girly gasped in astonishment. "It's our informant!"

"If our informant is currently lying dead on a toilet, then WHO in the bloody hell is in the hotel shagging you?!" Ginger cried out.

"That's what I'D like to know!" I shouted. Then it hit me. "Wait! Did you say she's dead?!"

At this point, the woman under me started struggling and cursing up a blue streak. Thankfully for me, she doesn't have the ability to use magic without her wand and with her hands tied up.
"Ginger, you two come here and take this potential murderer into custody. And whatever you do, DON'T make a fuss over the fact that I'm bloody naked!"

"Sure thing, chief!" Girly agreed in a tone that suggested that she was looking forward to it. I knew that with Apparation, I wouldn't have time to so much as summon a bathrobe, so I didn't even bother to move and risk letting the criminal escape.

Therefore, when the two Aurors and Bletchley arrived a few seconds later, I was still sitting on the incarcerated criminal. "I can't say for certain that this is the murderer, but - as I'll tell you in my debriefing - I have a strong reason to suspect that it's likely."

They took her into custody as I shifted to the side and sat on the bed with my head in my hands. There I was, trying everything I could to NOT get her murdered, and she went and bloody got murdered anyway!

Bletchley and Ginger took her in as Girly stayed behind to help me get dressed and collect my mapping drones. We also swept the room in case the criminal our informant was trying to betray had been a hundred steps ahead of us and had set this whole thing up and left evidence of it in the room.

It was clean.

Which meant that I had to go back to my office in the Ministry and try to figure out what in the bloody hell had happened! I'll be home... after I write my report. That might be an hour, or it might be five. I'll let you know if it's going to take more than an hour though.

All my love,
Draco
Chapter 325

Chapter Summary

Harry's a bit panicky, Oliver's keeping him calm, and Draco's got a bit more information.

Sunday August 5, 2018

Draco!

We were sleeping last night when you sent your insta-owls, and then still sleeping when you eventually sent off the email. We wanted to get an early start to the day. Even with as many adults as we brought and all of the elves, getting our entire family ready to fly home is a bit of an ordeal.

Which is why I didn't even read my email until just now that our plane is finally at the boring cruising portion of the flight.

It's been hours, HOURS, and you haven't sent us any sort of updates! I mean, of course I'm glad you're alright, but I figured at this point you would either have sent us a message saying you're done with office stuff and are awaiting our arrival at the Manor or an explanation why you are going to be late.

So, of course I am panicking. Maybe you were fine hours ago but what if the murderer somehow sent off an undetectable curse that doesn't activate for hours. And now that you think you're safe you're actually not?!?

Draco!!!!!! Let us know you're alright!

Your very worried husbands,
Harry and Oliver

P.S. Draco, while I of course want an update, Harry is the only one panicking. Don't worry, update when you can, I'll try my best to keep our Harry calm. -Oliver

Sunday August 5th
My patient husbands,

Sorry about not Insta-owling like I promised. I basically fell asleep in my office - draped over my desk. I got so caught up in trying to figure out what had happened, that I simply decided to rest my head on my desk as I thought it all over, and the next thing I knew, Bletchley was leading Ramsey into my office.

"Huh! I thought you'd gone home AGES ago! We were just stopping by to see if you'd left your report on your desk," Bletchley said. "But since you're here, would you like to know what we've discovered so far?"

"Of course!" I exclaimed in a tone that made it clear they were bloody stupid if they thought They both sat down after transfiguring the small and flimsy wooden guest chairs into plush and comfortable arm chairs. Bletchley gestured for Ramsey to say it.

"So we let the criminal we brought in sit in a holding cell for a bit until I came in for the morning and called Fierston in. By the time that we were ready to go in and interrogate her, 'she' turned into a man. This was not entirely unexpected as we knew that he couldn't really be the woman that he appeared to be - since she was currently in the morgue."

I nodded in understanding.

"Auror Ginger had checked up on him after a few hours, and reports that he's a man who'd been trying to dance with you at the club and-"

I cut him short in surprise. "Wait! You mean to tell me that our ENTIRE mission turned to shit because of a random horny man in a club?!"

"It looks that way," Ramsey replied with clear sympathy. "Fierston and I interrogated him, and while he didn't say much out loud, Fierston reports that he more or less confirmed that the murderer spotted you in the club, took an unhealthy interest in you, and decided to take the opportunity to have you - no matter what it took. Other flashes of memory suggest that it's not the first time he's used murder to get what he wanted, and so, you've taken down a genuine criminal. Possibly one even worse than the one we were after. Just…"

"Just NOT the one we were aiming for," I added with a sigh. Running a hand through my hair, I growled in frustration. "And our informant never once gave us ANYTHING to so much as HINT at the criminal she wanted to betray!"

Bletchley sighed. "There's nothing we can do about that now. All we can do is look into her background and see if we can determine who she was dating and in such an open relationship with. Which - at the very least - will point a finger at someone to keep an eye on."

Ramsey also sighed. "As to that, the unfortunate thing is that by the time Auror Ginger returned to the club to see if our victim's friends were still there, they'd already left - presumably with lovers they'd pulled for the night. And so, we have no leads to work with at the moment."

"I have an enthusiastic rookie named Henley performing a search of any database he can to see if our victim is in there somewhere," Bletchley informed me.

"So... what you're saying is that there's not much we can do until we ID our victim?" I stated more than asked.

"Unfortunately, that's correct."

Running my hand through my hair again, I stood up abruptly. "Fine, since there's no reason for me to stay here - my report is more or less finished if you want to read it - I'll be in the morgue," I said as I handed over my unsigned report for them to read.

"Why in the morgue?" Ramsey asked in bafflement.

"I want to go see if I can spy on our victim a bit," I replied, probably not explaining anything sensibly.

As I assumed, Ramsey continued to look as confused as ever, but Bletchley nodded in understanding. I popped down to the morgue, and to my surprise, Ramsey followed me. I gave him a curious look.

He shrugged. "It's technically MY responsibility to oversee all interrogations, and if you're going to attempt to interrogate a dead body, then I feel I should be on hand to supervise it."

I huffed a wry laugh. "Well, if you insist. Not that there'll be much for you to see."

It took us a few minutes to obtain permission to see and handle the body, but the coroner in charge had just finished her magi-autopsy, and so, had no reason to deny us.

The moment I could, I grabbed her cold and boney hand and held it between both of mine. Closing my eyes, I simply waited to see if anything would happen.

This was one of the stranger visions I'd ever had as I had to witness the magi-autopsy AND her murder before the vision moved on to more important things - such as her getting ready for our date last night. In that way, I managed to see the number on her flat door as she left and the address of the building when she exited. Best of all, her mates called her by name when she met up with them and gave them kisses on the cheeks.

"Claudia!"

I stuck with the vision a bit longer to see if Claudia would show me anything else I needed to know, and sure enough, when they Apparated off to the club, the vision changed to a scene that was probably the night before. A scene in which she was shagging a bloke and having a rather intimate conversation. The bloke seemed to have a respectable amount of stamina, but eventually, they were panting and tangled up in the aftermath of a good orgasm.

That's when they had a small talk about how Claudia planned to go out to a club with her friends to pull a one off. The bloke nodded in permission and gave her a kiss.

"I'm glad that you have plans. I have something important to do tomorrow."

She rolled her eyes. "You ALWAYS have something important to do on Saturday nights!"

He flapped his hand dismissively. "I'm just making money to keep us in this wondrous luxury!"

She sighed morosely. "Sometimes, a date would be better than earning a bit more money."

He kissed her again. "When I'm satisfied I have enough to retire, THEN we'll go on as many dates as you want."

"If you say so," she murmured as she snuggled up to her pillow and fell asleep. The vision ended then.

Unfortunately, she never mentioned his name and I didn't really have anything to help identify him - other than his looks - as they seemed to be in a generically decorated room, such as a hotel. Thus, IF we find a man she was apparently dating that looks like him, I'll know we have the right man, but if they were keeping their relationship a secret for any reason, I'll have nothing.

This was frustrating enough that I sat there in contemplative silence for a long moment before opening my eyes and setting her hand on her abdomen. Then I turned to Ramsey. "Her name is Claudia and she lives in a flat." I gave the address, watching as the coroner wrote it down in her file - as he would need to help locate and contact her family if possible.
At that point, I was going to leave, but I received a message summoning me to stop by Bletchley's office before going home. Thus, five minutes later, Ramsey and I were in Robards' office with Bletchley.

"We have a rather frantic man pacing the bullpen, INSISTING that his girlfriend must have been murdered last night," Bletchley announced.

"How does he know?" Ramsey asked suspiciously.

Bletchley gave him a tiny mirthless smile. "It seems that he confessed to being paranoid about her and had her spelled so he could monitor her if he wanted, and at some point, those spells just ended. He was asleep at that point, so he doesn't know exactly when, but when he woke up and noticed, at first, he convinced himself that she had simply managed to break the spells on her. Until he went to go check up on her at her flat and found that she wasn't home. And her friends report that they hadn't seen her after she left the club with a bloke."

Bletchley paused to give a genuine laugh. "Funnily enough, they gave him a description of the bloke she left with - that he's CERTAIN must be the murderer - and the description matches YOU almost exactly, Malfoy."

"Ha," I exclaimed dryly. "Must've been me then."

Robards chuckled. "Shall I have you placed under caution then, Malfoy?"

That made me laugh for real. "Only if you plan to explain to Harry and Oliver why I'm not home for Nora's birthday tomorrow."

Robards paled significantly. "No that's okay, I'd really rather not!"

I gave him a suspicious look. "Did.... Did Harry DO something to you?"

Unexpectedly, that flustered him and made him prevaricate unconvincingly. "Er, no! Not at all! Why would you think that? Erm, I think it's time for you to go home, Malfoy, so that the rest of us can get on with solving this whole bloody mess!"

I decided to let the matter drop, although I gave him a look that let him know that I WOULD be looking into it, and stood up to leave. "I'm only agreeing to go home - after I add a last little bit to my report - because I know that Harry and Oliver will be home soon, and if I'm not there to help them unpack, it'll be MY arse in trouble. Please call me if ANYTHING develops."

"Will do!" Bletchley promised with a cheeky salute.

I left Robards' office and returned to my own to add my vision to the report I was writing (that Bletchley had left on my desk after reading). Then I decided to write this email to document everything for you both. NOW I'm about to go home and reassure you that nothing is wrong. Hopefully the Insta-owl I sent earlier has calmed you a bit, Harry, my love.

See you in a few seconds,
I'll be the fire in your night,
Draco
Chapter 326

Chapter Summary

It's Nora's first birthday as a Malfoy.

Monday August 6, 2018

Dear Nora's Daddies,

These poor Grandmas! For months they have helped Nora plan her birthday party. You know in our house, because of the way we've built our family, the first birthday party is a very big deal. We try to make the most out of every birthday but sometimes the day is nothing more than a fun outing, cake, and a family dinner. But the very first birthday with us, whether it's when they actually turn one year old, or ten (Elena and Shtara), or four (Parker, Zaire, and now Nora), is a very big deal.

Well, we all know how much our little Nora Madeline Marseilles Malfoy loves the character Madeline. She has a few beautiful Madeline costumes ... actually I don't even think they qualify as costumes, it's just perfect recreations of the clothing Madeline wears in her stories. A costume implies it looks like a caricature of something, but instead our Nora just has a closet full of gorgeous clothing that happens to look like her favorite character's clothing. All of it lovingly made by her Nana Iris.

Because of Nora's love of all things Madeline and Parisian in general, we've been planning for an elaborate party highlighting those two things. We created a faux Parisian street, complete with fully functioning patisserie. Zaire had even planned out an entire 'menu' for this faux bakery. Greg had even made a huge (but smaller than the real thing obviously) recreation of the Eiffel Tower. We had already made little hat party favors, and Grandma Molly hadn't officially started the cake but she had created the blueprint design for it.

Grampy Lulu had even commissioned a little "playhouse" to look just like her boarding school.

However, all of those plans changed while we were in Greece. On one of our (many) beach days, or I suppose one of our few beach days that were spent on a public beach, a girl around Jaz's age made a comment when she saw Nora swimming. Nora is actually quite a natural in the water, but she is a little .... flaily. She uses her whole body, instead of mostly her arms, and it ends up with an extra flip from her feet and quite a bit of splashing. This girl made the comment that Nora looked like a mermaid.

Obviously this child was muggle or she would not have said our dainty princess Nora looked anything like merpeople!

However, Nora has also never seen real merpeople and decided that was the best compliment she's ever received. And now she's in love with the idea of mermaids. So, on the flight back from Greece she spent the entirety of the flight with her grandmothers conspiring to plan out an entirely new idea for her birthday party.

I think there's a chance that if it had only been myself in the discussion I may have been able to explain to her that it was too late to change her mind. That even though she loved mermaids, it's not as though she stopped loving Madeline, and she could have her original party as planned. However, someone turned those big baby blues onto her Daddy Oliver and got an "of course we can change the party plans Nora-Mine!"

Sucker.

So, the cake plans were changed to a sparkly under-the-sea cake complete with mermaid tails seeming to be splashing out the top. The patisserie was turned into an art shop with mermaid themed crafts the kids could create. However, the Eiffel Tower stayed as is. When we got home yesterday Greg came over for some last minute additions. When he found out the theme was changed he mentioned he could turn it into something else, she got a shocked look on her face and asked him why he would destroy something so pretty. In case you were wondering why the Eiffel Tower was at a mermaid party, that is why.

Grampy Lulu, a sucker as big as my Ollie as far as I'm concerned, kept the playhouse but told Nora he'd build her a little grotto/lagoon for her to play at being a mermaid.

When Nora grows up to be the biggest snob the Malfoy family has ever seen I am personally blaming Oliver and Lucius.

And maybe Molly! That cake was beautiful. And delicious obviously!

However, the best addition to the party would have to be from her Gramma Iris. She made her a full mermaid dress! It was gorgeous, shiny purple on top like shells covering a fairy tale mermaid's chest, and then shiny scales going all the way to a big ruffle at the feet to look like fins. I thought it was just a pretty dress until it came time that the kids all wanted to swim. I told Nora to go put on her swimsuit, she giggled at me and said, "Pas de papa! Je le porte deja!" She then popped off the skirt part and that's when I saw the bodice of the dress was actually a bathing suit.
That might have been the best addition to the party, but the best part of the day was when we were putting the birthday girl down for bed. Little tired girl, hair smelling of saltwater, a smudge of frosting still on her cheek, sleepily thanking her Daddies for the best day ever.

Fine, I will take a spoiled little girl any day when it puts that smile on her face. My little urchin princess.

Thank you for being the best co-daddies ever my loves!

I'll be, the greatest fan of your life,
Harry

Tuesday August 7th
My forgiving husbands,

I'm so sorry that I'm running late. I got caught up in reading Fierston's report on the murderer, but I SWEAR that I'm about to Apparate right over to St. Mungo's and should be there before Rowe finishes casting the hologram spell!

Still my guitar gently weeps,
Draco
Chapter 327

Chapter Summary

Draco was late to the Healer's appointment, so he doesn't know the gender and Harry and Oliver aren't telling him without proper incentive.

Our Dearest Draco,

Aren't you so excited about the birth of our upcoming .... child? Can you even handle how ready you are to dress them in little .... clothes? Can you believe our current ratio of boys to girls is going to .... be different?

Oh wait, that's right, you don't actually know which version of baby we're getting! Why is that again? I mean, we got in to see Rowe, she checked on the little caboose, and baby wasn't even being shy just showed off their stuff like Daddy Draco's little nudist with no shame. What would have possibly happened that you weren't paying attention to the reveal?

Now I remember! That all probably happened while you were late to the appointment!

Ollie and I really debated whether or not we wanted to mess with you. Seeing as you were there for the part where we knew both Ollie and Baby are doing extremely well, no issues or concerns, we thought messing with you about the big gender reveal is funny. We definitely wouldn't be hiding information like whether or not your two family members were healthy. But something as unimportant as whether we're going to let the Grandmas knit/buy/sew lots of ruffles or overalls is funny!

We will give you the information, but you may have to torture it out of us.

Love,
Your Knowledgeable Husbands,
Harry and Oliver

P.S. shag

Tuesday August 7th
My shagged out husbands,

Mmm... I do believe it has been a while since I got a chance to let go of my inner beast. The moment we got home from our appointment, frustrated by: "If you wanted to know the gender, Draco, you should have been there on time!" I went to the Crystal Room to do some destructive meditation.

While I was in there, I received your email with the challenge to torture the information out of you, and this delighted me. I've been wound up a bit lately, and despite the fact that we shagged more than should be humanly possibly on our holiday in Greece, I felt like it had been AGES.

And it sort of had been ages since we did anything to scratch my dark itch. And so - challenged in the best possible way - I took the time to insure that the kids were all occupied. I even went so far as to ask if Hagrid wanted the Feisty Foursome (which he did) and Minerva wanted Nora (duh!), and so, with the littles perfectly happy with my parents, and the older ones able to do their own things, I knew we'd have PLENTY of time for me to really work you both over.

I decided this called for a bit of a divide and conquer tactic. To that end, I tied Harry to a chair - rather than suspend him from the ceiling as he normally prefers - with a gag in his mouth. This gave me the opportunity to focus on Oliver for a while. I started by tying him up as well so that I could drape him over your lap, Harry, and spank him. I started relatively gently and worked into deeper impacts. That said, I kept in mind that he doesn't like spanking as much as you do, and so, I needed to balance on the edge of hard enough to give him a thrill and keep his interest, but not so hard as to turn him off.

The moment I felt I had him sufficiently warmed up, I switched his position so that he was sitting on your lap with his legs spread wide - held open by your legs. At that point, I Sounded him until he was babbling: "Oh Merlin, fuck Merlin, fuck! I'LL TELL YOU WHAT WE'RE -"

I cut him short by stuffing a gag in his mouth. "Hush now, love. There's no need to be hasty," I informed him. The Sounding made him quiver and shake - and whimper through his gag - until he orgasmed so hard that I almost didn't have time to pull the Sound from him before he erupted.

But I wasn't done yet. I decided to tickle his overly sensitive shaft with my tongue for a few minutes until his almost frantic squirming calmed. Then it was time to give him a break while I tortured you. I kept right on going until I'd given you each about a half dozen orgasms. You were definitely exhausted, having survived me spanking you, teasing you, pinching you, licking you, using a variety of toys on you, everything but shagging you.

Then, when you both gave me pleading eyes that suggested that you couldn't take another orgasm even if it saved your lives, I cursed you both into women - cast triple protection spells on you - and started all over again. By the time that I was ready to remove the gags and hear the announcement, neither of you had the energy left to speak, so I had to content myself with finally shagging you.

Strangely, after all of that, I couldn't sleep, so after returning you back to your true gender, I tucked you both into the bed in our playroom, wrote this quick recap, and am giving you both kisses. Since I can't sleep, I'm about to go visit the Forbidden Forest. I should be back before either of you wake up, but if I'm not, you'll know where to find me.

You took the words right out of my mouth, it must have been while you were kissing me, Draco
Chapter 328

Chapter Summary

It's a...

Chapter Notes

See if you can catch Harry's clue before Draco spoils it for you ^_^

Gods Damn it Draco!

I like a good torturing as much as or more than the next bloke, but you practically killed us earlier! I felt like I had all of my own orgasms and all of Ollie's. It was intense.

Really though, did you need to keep going after Oliver was willing to give in? You could have had the information so much earlier. But you just had to keep going huh?

Loving you is exhausting sometimes. Or being loved by you. Okay, not loving OR being loved by you so much as it's exhausting being sexually tortured by you!

Bring your torturous self home already so we can tell you! I could probably spills the beans in this email, but wouldn’t you rather us tell you in person?

Anyway, I’m sure you're having fun with your dragons, we’re just both awake and missing you.

But we do understand why you need to visit them, so don't worry that we're mad or anything. Just missing you and wanting to give you the news.

Your Husbands Harry and Oliver

Wednesday August 8th,
It's a girl! We're having a girl!

You know, the older I get, the more I feel I have in common with our girls. Maybe it's because they are more likely to go to a spa with me for the day. No I did NOT say that only girls go to spas or that boys hate them, just that when I want a spa day, it's usually the girls that volunteer to go with me.

And so, I am really excited to be having another girl! Maybe she'll be a dancer like Elena. Maybe she'll be a singer like Shtara. Maybe she'll be a business mogul like Viona. Maybe she'll own a spa like River.

River's not a girl, and he put more gray hairs on my head than the rest of them so far, but he turned out to be one of the ones that STOPPED worrying me almost the moment he turned into an adult. I suppose being magically bound to a Veela will do that to a bloke, hahaha.

Changing subjects (I didn't have a decent segue, sorry), my time in the Forbidden Forest was rather lovely. The dragons had already eaten their fill, so it was mostly romping, play fighting, and a bit of flying practice. They're at an awkward age in which I suppose they COULD fly a little bit if they had to, but that it's still a little hard for them and they don't seem inclined to care if they can fly yet or not.

I had to call Charlie, and he told me this is normal behavior. Their desire to fly will increase as they get bigger and need to go farther to find suitable food. So... they're doing well.

When I came back home - after you both had woken up and got tired of waiting for me - I was planning to go straight to bed and get some sleep, but Qismah came in positively bawling because she's afraid that I'm going to dump her off at some strange place where everyone hates her. Or worse, bring her back to her boss thief in Kermanshah.

After hugging her and calmly soothing her fears, I decided to bring her to Unity House and show her around. And that's when something miraculous happened. It turns out that there was a couple in their 30s looking for a child, having been fully vetted already, and haven't quite found the right one yet. They wanted someone unique. Someone who wasn't like every other child (in a general sense, they understand that EVERY child is different). Someone who was a bit of a rebel and needed parents who weren't 'normal' either.

Here's why: They're lesbians... with a twist. One of the two women is white but you almost can't tell because she's fully covered in tattoos and piercings, and is a survivor of the streets and a rather rough childhood. A muggleborn who slipped through the cracks until she was nearly an adult. The other is almost the opposite in every way. She's from a middle class, loving family. She's been through university and is currently a doctor. She's a muggle from a mixed family - meaning that she's half black and half southern Indian/Hindu. Together, they form a nearly perfect balance.

And they fell in love with Qismah instantly. Better yet, Qismah likes the fact that they have shown patience for her pickpocketing, even though she robbed them practically blind. She's... being cautious. But I really think that the three of them will be good for each other. So, even though I brought Qismah back to the Manor with me, I really think it's only a matter of time before she wants to meet those women again.

By that point, it was only a matter of an hour or so before dinner, and so, I went to the Ministry. Kevin Miller - the man who just lost his girlfriend to murder - was told how Claudia was murdered in the loo so that the murderer could Polyjuice into her. How it was the murderer her friends witnessed leaving, and how the murderer was already captured and had confessed.

So, Kevin Miller feels that justice is being served.

Steven Banks - on the other hand - is irate that he was caught so easily. He's vowed to AK me if he ever gets his hands on me, but the evidence of his past murders keep piling up (the more they search his home, the more they find), and so he will more than like never be free again.

I'm not worried.

In the meantime, Robards has assigned Ginger to covertly dig up dirt on Kevin Miller, and if she finds anything, I've been promised to be notified right away. Depending on what she finds, we might need to organize a raid, or we might just have to arrest him. And if she doesn't find anything at all, I MIGHT Polyjuice into a woman and try to pull him for a night so that I can wander around his mind. But that's not a possibility until Ginger works the case a bit.
In any case, I'm writing this from my office, but I'm signing off now because dinner should be starting in 2 minutes and I don't want to be late.

Candles raise my desire, why am I so far away?
Draco
Chapter 329

Chapter Summary

Harry wants to talk names, Draco is game, and Oliver is confused.

My Dragon,

You know, with this last mission happening the way it did, I’ve probably been more clingy than usual. Normally I’m quite understanding when you’re late. Especially if you have a legitimate reason for it and not just “you know I detest mornings Harry!”

I think I somehow had it stuck in my head that missions are dangerous and you’re perfectly safe otherwise. Instead, the mission part of your night was relatively safe and it was just some random coincidence that the murderer was there and thought you were pretty.

Now my world is a bit turned upside down and I’m panicking. I’ve half a mind to force an unbreakable vow out of both you and Ollie that we’ll never ever play and never go out in crowded areas where we’re more than two meters from each other.

Honestly, I probably need a lengthy session with Katja to figure out all my feelings about this. I’ve definitely struggled internally every time you’ve left the manor since that night. Even though the criminal is behind bars and looking to spend a very long time there.

Steven Banks huh? What cell is he being held in? Asking for a friend.

Okay, on to happier subjects! Our newest daughter! I am so excited! I’m sure I’d say the same thing if we were having a boy, but I’m just so thrilled she’s a girl!

So now can we finally talk names?!?

Frustrated,
Harry

Thursday August 9th
Names huh?

Nah, that one's too close to Gabriel, I suppose. Maybe Gwen - GUINEVERE! We DO have a Morgana after all...

We sort of like Eowyn or Arwen, don't we? Leia... B'elanna - no, that's probably too close to Elena... And T'pol is just too weird, even for me. Hmm...

OOO OOO! We could go big - REALLY big! Hera! Queen of the Gods!

UGH! Can't just ONE of our babies name herself?! Sigh...

Love me love me love me, oooooooo, harder harder harder,
Draco
P.S. Can we finally have a Girl Dragon???

About 10 minutes later
Harry,

I feel like I'm missing a joke or something. Is Draco serious? Where is he getting all these names from?

Oliver
My Dearest Ones,

Oliver; a long time ago in a gal ...... no that's not how this one goes. A long time ago, in this galaxy, Draco and I fell in love through emails. You know the story. But one of the things that was a significant part of our interactions was Draco's complete inability to read sarcasm through emails. It took weeks for me to tell him there was such a thing as the backspace key, he thought once he typed something it was there for good and no taking it back.

I am not ashamed to admit I used that to my advantage and let him spill secrets he probably wouldn't have otherwise.

When we decided to get married and have children, I am sure you will be completely unsurprised to hear that I spent a lot of time talking about names. I think names are so important, and I never want to force one of my children to end up with a name like Harry. But during this discussion, I made a few absolutely ridiculous suggestions. Unfortunately, Draco had no idea I was kidding and took the suggestions to heart.

When I told him I was kidding he laughed and said he had been kidding as well.

He was not.

So, if you look at all of his suggestions in his previous email you will see the insane suggestions I made such as Daffodil Libra. Names like Reina del Dragon and ... Girl Dragon were Draco's extremely helpful suggestions. I am sure he will try to tell us he was kidding, but I promise you that if you told him the caboose was to be named Sagittarius Aquarius he would be excited and start having personalized baby gifts engraved for her with that terrible moniker.

Please don't let him do this.

Draco Darling ... in your name suggestions, I just have to ask you a question. Have we truly had so many children that you've forgotten their names? You asked "Maybe Gwen - GUINEVERE! We DO have a Morgana after all..." Yes, we have a Morgana. Her name is Morgana GUINEVERE you absolute dingus! Are you going senile? Is this why you wanted to name them all variations of Draco? Because you knew you'd start forgetting their names and if they all had the same name you wouldn't have to worry about that?

On a more serious note, I still like my suggestions I made weeks ago. And in Draco's list of nonsense I really liked Eowyn or Arwen. And being a huge Star Wars nerd, you know I love Leia. But I repeat ... Ollie gets to name this baby with the exception of I would like veto rights in case you make some sort of terrible suggestion like T'pol.
Honestly Draco? T'pol? B'elanna? Durga? I have to assume while you got your memories back that you have some residual trauma we need to get fixed.

T'pol.

In Love,

Harry

Friday August 10th
Dear Harry and Draco,

I, erm... I have an idea, but I'm afraid you'll think it's silly...

I've been sitting and rubbing my stomach for the past few days, just enjoying the fact that I can feel the baby in there before she gets so big that I'm thoroughly uncomfortable. And as I do... A name has been dancing through my mind.

A name I really rather love but can be considered a tiny bit ridiculous. It just... It just FEELS perfect to me.

Before I tell you, I have to admit that something surprising happened. Remember when Draco got drunk and lost a bet? Well at first, I dismissed that as absurd and never going to happen, but recently...

Alright, so the name that's been stuck in my head to the point that I'm already calling her it in private is...

Serenity... Because this is the feeling she gives me.

Serenity Blaise...

I like the contrast. The first name is gentle. Soft. Feminine. Loving. The second one is fierce and determined. Confident. Ambitious.

I feel that together, these two names are the perfect balance of traits, and describe most of the things I want for this baby.

What do you think?

Even if you hate it, will you please pretend it's nice while you politely decline?

Anxious and waiting,

Oliver

Chapter End Notes

Reminder, Draco insisted that Orion have Draco as a middle name, and Zwei is literally Draco the second, and so, Draco didn't forget that Morgana has Guinevere as a middle name, he just doesn't see why they can't have another baby with that as a first game.
Also, it was Harry that actually first suggested that she liked Reina, and Draco really likes it, so that's why he keeps suggesting it in the form of Reina Del Dragon, but Harry seems to have been turned off by it, lol ^_^
Chapter 331

Chapter Summary

Harry and Draco love Oliver's choice of name.

Chapter Notes

See the end of the chapter for notes

Friday August 10, 2018

Oh Ollie!

Serenity? Serenity Blaise? Of course that's her name!

I have to pretend nothing. It's an absolutely lovely name! I suppose I shouldn't speak for Draco, but I will do what I promised I wouldn't do and totally step in and take your side on this if he doesn't love it.

I love that you've felt serenity while carrying her. You've waited so long for her that I am ninety-nine percent thrilled that your pregnancy has been calm, serene, and wonderful. The other one percent is jealousy that none of my pregnancies went as smoothly! I'd like to say it's one hundred to zero, but I can't lie. My poor stomach was never calm!

Even if you had suggested something like Girl Dragon, I would have just veto'ed it as kindly as I possibly could. But I really don't need to pretend.

I can't wait to see who our little Serenity Blaise will be. Our Calm Fire. Honestly controlled fire is the best name if we want our child to be a reflection of the three of us.

I'm going to go find Draco, make him read his email, and we are going to come find you to give you cuddles and kisses and talk to our baby girl.

Yours,
Harry

Friday August 10th

Oh Oliver!

I love it! It's a beautiful name! I'm going to come tackle you to the bed and - oh wait... Ooo! Harry's just arrived and he has the same thing in mind, so WE'RE going to come tackle you to the bed and have our wicked wicked way with you.

Incoming!
Draco

Chapter End Notes
Warning: Angst and drama ahead...
Harry is very sorry, but he has to go away for a bit, meanwhile, his husbands miss him even though they are a little mad at him.

Saturday August 11, 2018

My Husbands,

I'm so glad I had yesterday with you both, holding each other, talking to our newest daughter, and having this wonderful memory.

A memory that's going to have to sustain me for a bit. I am not sure how long. I uh, I have no idea when I'm going to have another day like yesterday. Hopefully sooner rather than later. I love you both more than anything else on this entire planet. In this entire galaxy. In this or any universe. You are my everything.

I ... received some news this morning and I have to go away for a bit. Not sure when I'll be back. I'm hoping to be home in time for Cassie's birthday, I sure wouldn't want to miss her first birthday as my official daughter! Not to mention needing to be home before we send off our Hogwarts-aged kids and my Hogwarts-employed husband. Uh. I just can't promise.

I will try to get to my email as often as I can, but I can't take my magi-mobile, my insta-owls, or even a real owl. I'm sorry my hearts.

Try not to worry about me. I'm not leaving forever. I don't want to leave. I don't need time away for myself. I just ... need to go.

Remember that I WILL be coming home to you both. To the husbands and family I love more than life itself.

I know neither of you were awake for it. I know you are both going to be furious with me. But I kissed you both goodbye before I wrote this and I will give you each another kiss before I leave. Know that the last thing I do before I apparate will be to remind my heart and soul who I'm coming home to.

Sorrowfully,

Harry

Saturday August 11th

Our Dearest Harry,

My morning began while it was still actually morning. When Oliver first woke up, he had no idea that you were gone. He simply assumed that you were awake and doing something - presumably in the kitchens or stables, or maybe even running circles around our track. He went about his day, showering, tending to the littles as they woke up, feeding them, playing with them, and so on.
Then they went down for their nap and he had a moment to sit down and check to see if any new emails had come in from you. One had. When that angered him and broke his heart - and yet, worried him more than anything - he woke me up, sounding a bit frantic. I held him and calmed him down until he was able to read to me your email.

I would have read it for myself, but his explanation of why he was so upset was: "Here, let me just read it to you."

When he was done, I took a deep breath and thought in silence for... I dunno. It may have been mere seconds or it may have been full minutes. In any case, I held Oliver, stroked his hair soothingly, and thought about your words.

Finally, Oliver just couldn't take it anymore. He grabbed me and shook me just a little, demanding: "What do we do?!!"

I sighed, shrugged, and shook my head a bit helplessly. "The only thing we can do. Wait for him to come home and have faith in him that he has a very good reason for this."

"How can you be so calm about this?!!" Oliver demanded, his anger taking over for the moment.

"Because... it's more or less exactly what I have asked of him over the years. Stay home and wait patiently as I go off and do some important thing that needs doing. How can I get upset with him for doing the very same thing?"

"Yeah but YOU tell us what it is you're doing and how dangerous it might be! HARRY JUST UP AND LEFT!!!" Oliver roared in protest.

"I only do that BECAUSE I didn't do that the first time. I just did it and prayed that Harry wouldn't notice something was off. And I did that because I was afraid that he would try to tell me not to do the thing I wanted to do - which was an undercover mission that was rather dangerous. I can only assume that Harry found out something important that he felt that only HE could or should do something about, and rather than risk our talking him out of it or forbidding him outright, he simply went off and did it."

"EXACTLY!!!!!"

I gave Oliver a tiny smile before kissing him. "Well, as far as I'm concerned, Harry never needed my permission. Had he asked, my answer would have been: 'Of course, whatever you want, Harry my love.' I probably would have added a question of: 'Do you want me to come with and help you or stay at home?' To which I can only assume he wanted me to stay at home because we have a sort of unofficial policy that the both of us should NEVER risk our lives at the same time so that - if the worst should happen - our kids still have one of their parents."

"OH GOD!!! Fucking Merlin's Bollocks! You think he's risking his life?!?!" Oliver wailed in horror, his hands gripping the sides of his face.

"I'm almost certain of it, and if I had to guess, I'd say that Harry asked someone or several someones in Iran to look into exactly who it was that was forcing Qismah to steal for him, and now that they've told him who it was, he's off to ensure this man - or woman - is never heard from again," I explained.

"If THAT'S really it, I swear I'll wring his bloody neck, right after I hug him to death upon his safe arrival home!" Oliver threatened.

I kissed him. "Calm down love. This is our Harry. He's not only going to come home alive and victorious, but he's going to already be beating himself up that he had to go in the first place. He's going to wring his own neck far worse than you ever could. So rather than plot his murder, you might want to consider visiting your Mind Healer and coming to at least a partial acceptance of the situation. Maybe even aim for complete support."

Oliver sighed, sounding a little defeated. "Am I really so wrong for being angry and upset?"

"Oh no, don't mistake my calm for lack of anger or worry. I'm simply planning to go destroy the Crystal Room for a bit. I might even run off to the Adventure Park to fight some Inferi, but I also know that I have the most important task in the world right now, and that's living as normally as possible until our husband returns and explains himself."

This evidently gave Oliver something to think about, because he was silently thinking long enough for me to visit the loo and begin my day.

And so, here's a warning to you, our missing love, we ARE a bit mad at you, but I will not express that to you directly. When you return home, the only thing I will express is my happiness that you're back. OLIVER - on the other hand - might just work himself up to Rage Halo levels of worry, and so, you might have to deal with that upon your arrival.

Be safe and come home in one piece,
All our Love,
Draco and Oliver
Chapter 333

Chapter Summary

Harry still can't say much and his husbands are trying their best to cope.

Wednesday August 15, 2018

My Understanding Husbands,

Gods above and below, I can't even begin to explain how sorry I am that I am hurting you. How hard this is for me to be away. How thankful I am that you haven't decided I'm not worth it.

Knowing that I am worrying you. That my actions are causing you distress. I swear to you, if there was something I could do to take this pain away from you I would. I just ... can't.

I know this feels like I'm doing exactly what I've told Draco for years is hurtful and cruel. I know I left with no explanation and I'm staying away without giving any reasonable amount of information. I just ... can't.

Oh! Wait! I can definitely tell you this has nothing to do with Qismah or her former 'boss.' I already took care of that situation!

Ollie, it's not what you're thinking! While we were still in Iran you'll remember I contacted Kamaria about taking Qismah out of the country. Well, in that discussion I explained the situation. I'm sorry I didn't tell you this when she got back to me, I must have gotten distracted with something. But they found the guy and he's got a rap sheet as long as my ... arm. So he's in custody and unable to come after her even if he had any way to find her.

Draco is right though, I want to wring my own neck for doing this to the both of you. I'm sorry. And I really will understand if this is something you will never forgive me for. I don't think I will ever forgive myself. But I know I wouldn't be able to forgive myself for not doing the thing I'm doing.

If I come back I promise I will take all of your anger Oliver. I know I deserve it. Please just keep yourself healthy.

And uh, Draco, maybe stick with the crystal room, I just think you guys sticking to the Manor is probably best.

Ciao,
Harry

Wednesday August 15th
Our Savior,

You know, after all these years, there's only ONE person I'd trust to save the world from evil, and that's you, Harry. Oliver - after some therapy - has come to the same conclusion. We may not know the details, but we know you well enough to know that this is important. Perhaps 'Save the World' level of important. Even if it's not that big, even if it's really small - such as save a puppy from an arsehole - we still know that it's important to you.

And so, we're continuing on as normal. If any of the adult or big kids ask where you are and what you are doing, we tell them the truth: that we don't know. If any of the younger kids ask (this is basically the Feisty Foursome and Nora as the babies/toddlers can't talk yet), we tell them that Daddy Harry is doing something important and he'll tell them all about it when he gets back.

Because of this, Eris, Viona, Elena, and Hazel/Pearl are ready to wring your neck when you return. They love you of course, and miss you like crazy, but they're not best pleased at all. You may need to face an Armada when you get back.

In any case, now that Oliver is more or less accepting (focusing on remaining calm so as to NOT alarm Serenity, who has actually lived up to her name already and KEPT him calm), life is rather normal. We have a big aching hole in our hearts - of course - but we're not letting that stop us from doing the things we'd be doing if you were home. So, for example, I've brought Qismah to Unity House a couple of times, and it's now official that the lesbian couple that fell in love with her ARE going to adopt her. As I understand it, it's going to take a bit longer than usual because of the international aspect - they have to double and triple check all possible paperwork to be absolutely certain they didn't miss anything about her somehow, but once that's done, she's all theirs.

In other news, I've been going for a few hours each evening to the Forbidden Forest, where I've been spending time with the young dragons, not just making sure that they're eating enough and keeping themselves safe and happy, but simply frolicking with them in dragon form. I've now completely run out of the last of the original anijuice potion that turned Charlie and me into dragons, and so, I've had to brew more using some scales from Opal. I actually started that a while ago, and so, have been using the new batch.

But don't think this means that I've been spending no time with our actual kids. On the contrary, I've been spending more time with them than usual, since not only do they keep coming to me to ask questions about you, but I'm home most of the time.

Side note, once Hermione found out that you are consensually missing, no amount of telling her to leave you to it made a difference. I'm quite certain that she's assigned a few Unspeakables to tracking you down and DRAGGING you back home if necessary. There are a few perks to being Minister after all.

Second side note, KISA is also not best pleased and may or may not be planning to punish you accordingly when you return.

As for me, I just wanted to let you know that you are correct when you said that what made me angry was the fact that you are doing EXACTLY what you've told me over and over NOT to do. Our entire Triad relationship nearly BROKE when I took off for a couple of HOURS to go persuade a young boy to give up a life of prostitution - despite my good intentions. My action led to us having to go to therapy and redefine the rules of our ENTIRE relationship! It led to ME promising things I don't necessarily like, but abide by because I love you both and you are THAT important to me.

And yet, it's fine if YOU do it. Not JUST take off and come back a few hours later to a couple of angry husbands, but for DAYS and possibly WEEKS!!! In your last email, you even hinted that you're not certain if you'll EVER come back! And so yes, I was VERY angry.

Not at what you are doing, but at the sheer HYPOCRISY of it!
But that anger was a brief flash that I easily worked through in the Crystal Room. What I told Oliver - and you via the email - was true. It's even truer now that I've calmed down. I am not upset by the fact that you are off doing something important that you can't tell us about. I'm not even upset that you took off while we were both still sleeping so that we couldn't attempt to stop you. I'm no longer upset that you are doing exactly what you made me vow never to do.

I'm simply worried. I'm worried that you went from being reasonably confident that you might return before September 1st to no longer certain if you'll ever come home. I'm worried that you are working completely alone with NO backup whatsoever - as far as you've told us. And I'm worried that you have alluded to the fact that you don't think we'll be entirely safe if we leave the Manor.

I AM a little upset that you didn't even attempt to ask for our help. This makes me feel like you've been ordered by a criminal to act alone and tell no one anything, which both frustrates and relieves me. You are being coerced into these uncharacteristic actions. Because if you weren't, you could have asked for my help and I could have organized an entire operation - undercover, raid, or otherwise. I could have given you all the backup and support and magi-tech you needed. AND I would have stayed behind in the command center, or even at home, so that you could do what you had to with the certain knowledge that me and Oliver are safe and cannot be caught up in whatever it is you don't want us caught up in.

But... when it comes right down to it, I'm actually surprisingly NOT angry. I can very easily picture myself in any number of situations in which I would need to do what you're doing, and I would almost certainly do it if I felt I needed to. I cannot be mad at you for doing something I would do.

So I am doing exactly what I told Oliver I was going to do. I'm trusting in you that you're doing this for an important reason, and I'm focusing on living as normally as possible while you're gone. I'm staying strong for the entire family, and I'm NOT allowing even the slightest doubt enter my mind that you will be back safe and sound. SOON.

I know you, love. You are NOT a patient man. I cannot see you allowing this to continue on for too long. A couple of weeks, sure. A couple of months, maybe. But you would NEVER let this drag out even as long as a year, because you HATE waking up alone, and unless you are currently sleeping with a companion for sheer companionship (which I would not mind but OLIVER might murder you for), you are going to get tired of waking up alone very very quickly.

I'm betting a hefty sum of money that you'll be back before the end of September. I'd actually be extremely surprised if you were gone that long. You're my personal hero and the Savior of the Wizarding World, and when it comes down to a magical fire fight, I'm dead certain you can win against all-comers. The one or two that MIGHT have stood a chance against you have all died. And so, you're going to get fed up sooner rather than later, erupt a glorious Rage Halo - the likes of which even I have never seen before - and fix this situation that has taken you from us. You're going to TRY to do this the better way, but in the end, you're going to RHH and come back to us.

Of that I have no doubt.

Thus, to prove that I am continuing on as normally as possible, I'm going to do the most normal thing in the world.

Sing to you.

Draco turns on his dictation device

"Hands, put your empty hands in mine, And scars, show me all the scars you hide, And hey, if your wings are broken, Please take mine so yours can open too. 'Cause I'm gonna stand by you, Oh, tears make kaleidoscopes in your eyes, And hurt, I know you're hurting, but so am I, And love, if your wings are broken, Borrow mine so yours can open too, 'Cause I'm gonna stand by you!

Even if we're breaking down, we can find a way to break through, Even if we can't find heaven, I'll walk through hell with you, Love, you're not alone, 'cause I'm gonna stand by you, Even if we can't find heaven, I'm gonna stand by you, Even if we can't find heaven, I'll walk through hell with you, Love, you're not alone, 'cause I'm gonna stand by you

I'll be your eyes when yours can't shine, I'll be your arms, I'll be your steady satellite, And when you can't rise, well, I'll cry with you on hands and knees, 'Cause I - "

At this point, Oliver interrupts.

"That's a beautiful song. I assume you're singing to Harry?"

"Exactly."

"Can I dance with you?"

"Of course love, c'mere."

The two dance in silence for a moment before Oliver notices the dictation device.

"Oi Harry, we miss you and we love you, so come back to us, yeah? Love you're not alone, 'Cause we're gonna stand by you!"

"Well said Oliver. Love forever, Draco and Oliver. Go ahead and send the email now."

Device sends the email.
Saturday August 18, 2018

My Loves,

I miss you so much it hurts. It's like there is a wound in my chest that I can feel slowly bleeding out. A gaping hole where my contentment in the arms of my husbands should be. DO NOT ever worry that I hate waking alone enough to attempt any companionship with anyone else. It wouldn't be right. It's not just waking alone, but waking without your comforting scents, your strong arms, the sounds of the heartbeats I live for. No one could fill that hole. Even if I had the time or felt safe enough to find companionship in that way I wouldn't want it.

You're right though, I am already sick of waking alone. When I am able to get some sleep at least.

I listened to your song. I could hear it and your love. My heart hurts so badly. I want nothing more than to come home at once. I just ... can't.

If I could CONTACT you I promise I would. I mean, I obviously am contacting you through email, but you know what I mean.

It's not that I worry I won't ever be able to come home, I just think the intensity of what I'm doing is getting to me. I was at a very low point when I wrote that and a part of me was terrified I would die before I could get home to you. Not that it couldn't happen, heck I could get hit by the Knight Bus on my way home from Unity one day. None of us ever really know when our time is coming. So, don't fear, I don't think I'm in true danger of dying.

You so lovingly reminded me that I am who I am. I am magically strong. I might not be as clever as either of you, but I'm not exactly stupid either. I am cunning. I have a ridiculously strong Rage Halo. And, most importantly, I have some very important people to come home to. I will come home! I will finish this! And as soon as I can tell you anything, I promise I will give you a minute by minute run-down of everything THE moment I get home.

Just a few things .... erm, uh, I never told you not to leave the Manor. That sounds like a warning. I didn't give you any warnings! Go wherever you want! I just think this time of year the Manor is so lovely! It's most definitely a better place to be than the stuffy old ministry to see Hermione or any of the AURORS. And erm, in the summer do you really think a forest is the best place to be? There are ... mosquitos! And your skin is so sensitive Draco. Plus, erm, malaria. You can't contract malaria when you're pregnant Ollie!

This couple adopting Qismah sounds lovely though. Maybe you should make sure she can see her new mums often, spending time at Unity with them should be a really fun thing for you both to do. Whenever.

I will face down as many angry family members as I need to when I get back. I don't want to upset the big kids OR the little ones with Daddy Harry being missing. The armada can do whatever they think I deserve as soon as I'm home. I have so many loved ones to come home to. My family is THE most important thing to me.

I think I've got this myself though, no need to send UNSPEAKABLES after me! And I have a feeling they won't know where to search anyway. I can be pretty sneaky after all. Remember I spent months on the camping trip from hell and only got caught when I said something I shouldn't have said. All that time with magical warding and inventions that should have kept us safe, and at the end of the day I got caught by snatchers because something I should have been able to trust, in that case my voice, couldn't be completely trusted.

I love you both more than life itself. Keep yourselves safe for me please.

Adios,
Harry

P.S. The image of you two dancing, Draco with those new green tips to your hair, and Ollie probably wearing your faded puddlemere training tee, is seared into my memory.

Monday August 20th
Our beloved,

First things first, Oliver is doing well, and Rowe has assured us that little Serenity is perfect. Oliver is a tiny bit depressed, and as a consequence, he's been sleeping a little more than normal, but since he IS growing a new tiny human, his extra sleep is a good thing. His magic levels are holding steady, and he hasn't needed any sort of magical boost. That said, Rowe has prescribed him the magic boosting potions anyway. She feels that there's no need for him to wait to take them until they're actually needed as they can't hurt him.

In other news, remember that girl that wanted an abortion? Well her baby was born Saturday night. Oddly enough, she called for ME to be with her during her labor. I was surprised because I'd really only talked with her a couple of times since she agreed to take the potion to speed up her pregnancy. Those were fairly basic and polite conversations that I didn't even think enough of to mention. But apparently, she feels that I am one of a very few people on the planet she can trust to be there for her, and so, I got to witness as little Borias was born.

Tabitha has everything ready to care for him as needed, but you might not be shocked to learn that I couldn't put him down long enough for them to do anything. I stayed at Unity last night caring for him. Don't worry, I'm not adopting the little peanut. Not only is he going to go back to his mother eventually, but I'm NOT that attached to him. I think the only reason I couldn't put him down was that he's so tiny and adorable, and I can't help but want the best for him.

I've set him up with a small trust fund should his mother end up dying before he becomes an adult.
In that case, Unity would naturally give him to his father or adopt him out to a loving family, but at least I will feel secure in the knowledge that he'll be able to go to specialized schools if he wants, or even just buy a house and work minimum wage jobs while still having that cushion of support.

Today, I managed to pry Borias from my arms and head off to the Ministry, where I simply went to my office and discussed Steven Banks. When confronted with the irrefutable evidence collected from his flat - of how he'd murdered at least 6 people at random to help him get something he wanted - he rather smugly confessed. He's apparently CONVINCED that he's so much smarter than all the rest of us, that we'd have never caught him if not for the sheer fluke of me twigging that something was off and bringing him in.

He still doesn't know exact details, but he seems to think that I had known the victim well enough to realize that she wasn't acting normally, and that's what made me think to check if she'd ever made it out of the loo of the club. Which is just fine as he doesn't need to know that I read it in his mind. In any case, since he confessed, there's no need for a full trial, just a sentencing. Which already happened and Steven Banks is now 'comfortably' sitting in a cell in Azkaban.

His sentence is large enough that he will never be free until he dies.

After that, I went home. Apparently word has spread about your voluntary MIA status. Thus, we ended up having a full circle dinner tonight. Hermione informed me that since she didn't have enough evidence of ANY sort to go off of, she had to release the Unspeakables from their assignment, as they had tried their best and come up with nothing. She well knows that you can hide anywhere and everywhere in this country and not be found if you don't want to be.

That said... You know how I said I would have been happier had you asked me to organize some sort of raid or whatever you needed? Well, there are two people on this planet who HAVE been on the run with you, who have helped keep your arse safe and alive no matter HOW hair-brained your schemes got. And those two people are practically sobbing (or were, about two hours ago) over the fact that you didn't arrive in the middle of the night and bring one or both of them with you.

Hermione specifically feels like you should have grabbed her, but understands that absconding with the current Minister for Magic might not have been the best idea. Which is why she and Ron both assume that you would have popped in, said: "'Mione, sorry I can't bring you with us, but I have need of Ron for a super secret mission and will have him back as soon as possible, even though it might take weeks."

For the record, they would have agreed without question, and only a little arguing that Hermione should have gone with anyway.

That's honestly the ONLY thing none of us can quite understand. Barring some sort of blackmail or other coercion, you have SO MANY people that you could have chosen to bring with you for backup and support. Yet you chose to run off alone. Even only one of us - even just RON (don't tell him I implied he's the weakest link in this sentence) - would have helped you immensely. Yet you ran off alone.

That's the part that worries us all more than anything. NOT the fact that you are alone, but the fact that whatever it is, you felt you COULDN'T bring any of us nor so much as TELL us what's going on. Sigh...

If - by some miracle - you manage to come home in the next few days, you'll have a chance to see ALL of our kids as even River, Orion, and Elena have come back to stay for a few days. Elena's finally got her school sorted to her liking, and will be officially moving to Spain in a few days. She's praying that you come home before she leaves.
So, last thing I want to tell you about before I sign off. Our Oliver has really taken being part of this marriage to heart. He's asked himself - during therapy while you've been gone - what it means to be a Potter/Malfoy/Wood man. He's meditated and communed with the energy of our daughter inside him, and finally realized something important.

He's a bloody internationally famous Quidditch Star! He's got wealth, power, and influence all on his own. Marrying us only increased what he already had. And yet, he's felt inferior to us because how could he ever possibly live up to the bloody SAVIOR?! Then it hit him...

The two of us have done whatever we could to make the world a better place. You’ve founded several Unity Houses and a Horse Rescue. I've used my businesses to fund a couple of charities, and made safe places for kids and adults - which by the way, Erma is doing better than ever and the project I hired out to her Landlord's sister is coming along swimmingly!

What I was saying is that I've done things that involve using my wealth and influence to help people and animals whenever I can. And that's something Oliver would be PERFECT for!

So, he's decided to host a fundraiser for his favorite charity - which is a small thing dedicated to giving kids opportunities to learn/play Quidditch, even if they can't afford it. I have persuaded him that if his fundraiser makes enough, he should talk them into expanding their purpose to funding kids so they can do ANYTHING - not specifically Quidditch. As in if a kid wants to ice dance, or paint, or learn Karate - you get the idea.

Try not to worry about us. Even though we are missing you with a bone deep ache, we're keeping our spirits up and keeping our faith in you. At the moment, that means organizing a fundraiser to help underprivileged kids. We hope you get back in time to see it happen :-)

Love always,
Draco and Oliver

P.S. Oliver here, Harry. My pregnancy has made my already unreasonable horniness go through the roof! If you don't hurry, I might manage to insist that Draco shag me so much that he chafes completely raw! Please come save him from that most horrible fate! Love you so much - Oliver

P.P.S. Roll my eyes. I have a salve for that.

Chapter End Notes

Note: I actually caught Harry's hidden message when I was reading the email the first time, because I thought some of the bold words were an odd choice. So when I finished, I immediately messaged Chrissie with: Contact the Aurors right away, got it! And she replied with: "That's literally the opposite of what he said!” Lol ^_^

But as you can see, Draco sort of took that advice in that he didn't purposely go to the Aurors to talk about Harry, lol ^_^

Also, if you remember, Draco actually set up a charity to give kids aid if they want to take a class or something they can't afford. So you might be wondering why he didn't mention it here. Well, it's because that charity was specifically for muggles and squibs. This charity of Oliver's is for Wizarding kids. ^_^
Chapter 335

Chapter Summary

Harry still can't say what's going on, and Draco and Oliver have that fundraiser.

Chapter Notes

See the end of the chapter for notes

Tuesday August 28, 2018

Oh My Beautiful Men,

If only I could come home and be with you both. I know at this point I have missed circle dinners. I've missed holding my Ollie while he grows our daughter more and more every day. I'm sure I've missed sending Lainie and crew off to Spain. I don't know, I may have even already missed the fundraiser by now.

I just managed to sneak away ... erm find some time to write to you. Hopefully you weren't too worried about my lack of response for the last few days. Shite, few days, I haven't messaged you for ten days? I know I requested you not search for me, that you trust me, but I have to say I admire your restraint that you haven't sent me multiple messages stating just exactly how much you hate me right now. I haven't messaged in ten days and I haven't seen you in seventeen at this point.

Over two weeks since I have seen you in person. Since I've been able to touch Ollie's expanding baby bump. Since I've been able to tell Draco how gorgeous you look with all the different color tips you've been doing to your hair and how much I like the new asymmetrical cut you're sporting.

I feel like I never tell you enough how wonderful you both are. This fundraiser for underprivileged kids? How amazing are you Oliver?!? I am so proud of you and your ideas! And Draco, you had a fantastic idea to extend it to other activities these kids might be interested in. I wonder if there's a way we could put it all together at once for kids who may be interested in multiple things or aren't sure what their 'thing' is. Like a summer camp where there are all sorts of daily activities so every camper gets to try a bit of everything.

And Draco, those contacts you invented that you guys use on raids? I mean, I bet at this point you wear them so often you barely even notice you're still wearing them! How did you manage to design something so intricate that people can see through your eyes and yet comfortable enough that you can wear them for days or weeks on end? You're just the most brilliant inventor!

Although, I suppose IF I had told you to not go to the ministry and you had gone to the ministry and I had found out about it ... I might be less impressed with your brilliance right now. Except definitely relieved that you managed to make it home and write me an email about it.

Maybe you should go spend some more time with Borias (in case you were wondering, THAT is definitely the kind of name that would have been vetoed! SOOOO glad you picked Serenity Ollie!)

I'm sure you're just attached to him because you know you have your own little cabooose on its way so you're particularly attuned to teeny babies. I imagine you looked quite fit holding that baby.
Nothing sexier than one or both of my men being amazing caretakers.

I hope I will be home soon. Originally I thought I could make it home by the first of September. Now I'm a bit scared since it's four days away. If I am not there by then please give Cassie my apologies. Let her know I love her so much and I promise to make her a belated breakfast in bed the minute I'm home and recovered.

Gotta run. I love you both so much I ache. Do they make a salve for this wounded heart of mine?

Au Revoir,
Harry

P.S. If you both still love me and want me when I get back I promise to chafe myself as raw as either of your libidos need!

Friday August 31st
Our Amazing Harry,

As it turns out, you were right originally. You made it home JUST before the first. You're currently sleeping - some much needed sleep, I assume - So I'll tell you a little about what you missed while you were gone.

First of all, it's surprisingly not much. Oliver insisted that he wanted to have that fundraiser of his today - the day before all the families send their kids to Hogwarts. So we've more or less been running around non-stop getting everything ready for the manor to host as many people as possible. Even with Pippa and all the elves, it was a rather daunting task.

Oliver more or less stayed home to work out details, make decisions, and take care of our kids while he was at it. I went out to various local shops to ask for donations of prizes to give out to the people that attend the fundraiser. I also had fliers made and distributed, and even went on the Wizarding Wireless to talk about the fundraiser and invite all the listeners to attend - or if they couldn't, how to send in their donations.

You've done a book tour or two, so you shouldn't be surprised that I went to the Daily Prophet and had them interview me, not to mention, went on the hybrid squib/muggle/wizard telly station.

All in all, it was a grueling couple of weeks, but Oliver and I both felt that keeping busy was the key to not falling apart from worry. It was also the reason that we didn't send you a hundred messages demanding an update.

It all culminated in tonight. The fundraiser. At the beginning, as guests arrived, many of them asked where you were, and we forced polite smiles and told them that you had pressing business to attend to. The fundraiser was a success! It had already made far more than Oliver had dreamed possible by the time dinner was served.

Dinner naturally was accompanied by a show to watch. As dinner was winding down, Oliver took a moment to stand up on stage and say a few words about why this charity was so important to him. Then we had a bit of a concert from some of the up and coming new talent of the wizarding world - including Zwei, although he's still going by the fully disguised mysterious performer. I think his stage name might actually be Mysterio - or something like that.

At the end of the night, I got up on the stage to sing a song to close out the night and gently urge everyone to go home. The song I sang was: "I believe the children are our future, teach them well and let them lead the way, show them -"

There I was, coming up on the end of the song, when I looked out toward the back of the audience and saw...

You.

I stopped singing so abruptly that everyone must've thought I'd suddenly bitten my tongue or swallowed an insect or been hit by a silencing spell or something. I stood there - speechless - examining every bit of you from across the thick crowd. You were a little bit tattered and battered, a few minor cuts and scratches. At first, I wasn't quite sure it was you, because you were wearing a glamour that must have been top notch when it was first cast, but was swiftly fading - revealing your actual features underneath it. Your wild hair, your brilliant green eyes. The thing that had first caught my attention was the dirty and torn clothing.

Honestly, aside from the glamour, you looked remarkably like you had at the end of the Final Battle. It was that more than anything that made me certain that it was you - your flashing green eyes on that shaggy and disheveled body... You'd even lost weight!!!

Now certain, I dropped everything (which was only a magi-microphone so that I didn't have to rely on an overly loud sonorous when evenly spaced speakers was a much better option) and ran to you at the very back of the crowd. Luckily there was an aisle down the center of the seats.

"Harry!" I cried out as I ran. It was this that made Oliver realize that the person I was running towards was you. He - being pregnant - couldn't exactly run flat out, but he did manage to jog lightly after me. I reached you in an instant that felt like an eternity. Throwing my arms around you, I pulled you close and held you so tight that it probably hurt. "Harry," I repeated softly, breathing you in before I kissed you, welcoming you home without a care for who might be watching.

"Harry!" Oliver exclaimed happily as he threw his arms around us and lay his head on your shoulder. You broke off our kiss so that you could kiss him, murmuring something like: "My beautiful husbands..." And then you passed out.

That prompted me to carry you to our bed as Oliver stayed behind a moment to explain to the audience that you'd been off on an important mission, and now that you were home, you needed your rest and that meant that we needed everyone to graciously go home. Not surprisingly, everyone was happy about this. It confirmed in their minds the myth that you must do heroic things that you kept secret from the general public. They quite happily left to go spread the word that you'd just come from another hard battle to save the world from evil.

By the time Oliver joined us, I had already tucked you in bed and was compulsively carding my hand through your hair. Oliver stripped off and climbed in bed with you so that he could hold you as you slept. But of course, I couldn't sleep. I had far too much adrenaline running through my veins for that. I felt like I could run a bloody marathon before competing in a triathlon before Krav Magaing a horde of soulless Inferi!

And so, I went for an hour's run around our track before firedancing my way around the ballroom for another hour or so, and then finally, I felt calm enough to sit down and write this email. You're home...

You're more or less safe and sound...

You're tired and worn out, but knowing you, you'll be awake long before you SHOULD be, dead certain that if you don't start your day at bloody 4 in the morning, you'll miss something important. And so, I'm going to sit here, drinking tea and watching you sleep, because the MOMENT you wake up, I'm going to hug you; hold you tight; breath in your scent and simply savor the fact that you still exist and that you've finally come back to us.

We all love you so damn much!

Sleep well, my love,
Draco

Chapter End Notes

Harry tells all in the next email, so if you have any guesses, now's the time to tell them!
And actually, there are clues in Harry's emails, but they are subtle enough that Draco didn't even catch them ^_^

The only thing I asked of Chrissie when she writing this arc, was that she let me write the part where Harry comes home because I wanted to write Draco literally dropping everything and running to him, so Chrissie was like: "Alright, I'll tell you some things - " and I was like: "No, just tell me what shape he's in when he arrives," so she did. I left ALL the explanation up to her ^_^

Honestly, I love when she gives me a bit of a puzzle to work through ^_^
My Loves,

I think the last few weeks of drama, fear, and planning have gotten the best of my wonderful men because, despite Draco's plan to stay awake and stare at me until I woke up this morning, he was sound asleep when I woke up. I had each of you sound asleep on my chest. Best wake-up I've had in a very very long time.

I was completely unwilling to wake either of you, as much as I want to talk with you and see those quicksilver and molten chocolate eyes I've missed so much, I'm sure the both of you are in dire need of good sleep too. So, as soon as I awoke, I shot one of those bloody uncomfortable bladder spells at myself, sat up as best I could without moving either of you very far from your perch (you're heads are now resting in my lap instead of my chest), and summoned my tablet so I could write to you.

I know I'll be giving my entire story a million times in the upcoming days; to you both when you wake up, to the rest of our family when they come blasting into the Manor demanding answers, the rest of our circle that will join that first mob, and of course later today when I will have to go back to the Ministry to give my official statement. But as always, I want to get it written down first. Give my Draco, and now Ollie of course, a chance to read it over. And write it all down so I'm sure I've got all my facts straight.

First, I want to apologize, if I thought there were any other options I would have told you both what was happening. If I thought there was a way I could get around the instructions I was given, I would have done so. Unfortunately there would have been absolutely no way to tip you off without making it obvious you'd been tipped off. You see ... okay let me back up to the beginning. I'm sure my narrative will wander all over the place, but I will try my best to do this as chronologically as possible.

Or, I suppose I won't back all the way up quite yet. I am sure you both are interested to know all the criminals responsible for the last few weeks of fear have been caught and are now in custody. Auror custody. Aurors that are well aware they were infiltrated and fooled from within. Aurors who are royally furious about that fact and are providing round the clock vigilant custody. The fuckers responsible aren't going anywhere!

I am going to do this chronologically like I said, but I'm mostly going to start from where I came in. The longest version would include the fact that this criminal infiltrated the ministry well over a year ago and has been, fairly successfully, sabotaging investigations as much as possible.

Three weeks ago, the day I left, I woke early. We had had such a beautiful day the day before and I woke up ready to take on the day. I was feeling invincible, as though I could take on the world. I decided to have a good run and hopefully come back to bed as the both of you were waking up with sleepy smiles and flushed faces. Obviously that didn't happen, but here's why. As I was on my run, an unknown owl delivered a letter. I know our warding keeps messages away that have any sort of dangerous substance, portkey, or howler, but since this letter only contained words and a fairly normal picture the wards let it through.

I got distracted by the enclosed picture first; it was an absolutely gorgeous shot of the two of you the night before in our ensuite bathroom getting ready for bed. Ollie was brushing his teeth, and Draco was behind him, chin hooked over Ollie's shoulder. Draco, you had your hand softly resting on the bump that is Serenity and the scene that repeated was Ollie bringing his hand up to cover Draco's. The two of you essentially smiling over your conjoined hands telling our daughter goodnight.

The letter was not nearly as lovely.

"Mr. Malfoy-Wood,
As you can see, we have eyes on your husbands. I am sure the promise of their safety will convince you to join me at the enclosed coordinates no later than 9:00 this morning. Tell no one. We may have eyes on other prominent members of your group of friends. If we find anyone has been alerted to this letter, we will not hesitate to harm someone in the enclosed picture. It would be a shame if you had to lose something so pretty."

I know you were both so angry that I didn't trust you enough to tell you before I left, but I couldn't risk either of you. Luckily I woke up early enough that I had enough time to send off the original email. At the time I didn't even know if that was coming too close to telling someone what was happening, but I couldn't let you both think I'd abandoned you. And the possibility of having eyes on other "prominent members" meant I couldn't risk trying to get Ron or Kisa to come with me since they sleep in the same bed as the Minister for Magic herself!

There was no one I knew that was either certainly safe to tell or safe from harm. I had to do this alone. I know this will probably take the both of you forever to forgive me for, but I truly felt I had no other choice. The letter had absolutely no magical signature to it. And when I scanned the picture the only magical signature was DRACO'S!

I had to assume you weren't the culprit.

And when I got to the coordinates, a rundown building near Diagon Alley, my ... blackmailer? Kidnapper? Accomplice? Whatever you want to call the criminal, he wasn't you.

It was a fairly generic looking blonde man. Dishwater blonde hair, brownish hazel-ish eyes, mild features. He is the kind of man you would never think was handsome or ugly, but someone you'd walk past and have a hard time describing two minutes later. He looked familiar like maybe I had met him at some point but you couldn't pay me to remember where or when that had happened.

I won't forget him again though. I didn't realize the doorway had a magic dampening ward on it and so he managed to disarm me when I paused in confusion when my incarcerous didn't work. In that moment of distraction he managed to hit me with an imperius. Now, I thought it was common knowledge, but you both know I can throw off an imperius. Have been able to do so since I was fifteen years old. But as I was fighting it off, it seemed to me that playing along a little bit before throwing it off could be useful. At least I'd know what the plan was.

The idiot truly thought he had me and so did the cliche villain monologue thing.

I'm sure you'll both have a million questions for me, and being chief of raids I am sure the aurors will give you carte blanche over any interrogation Draco, so I will just give the short version instead of word for word nonsense.

Basically, he and his partner? Sister? Lover? I don't know what they are, but the two of them had infiltrated the Auror department. How you ask? Ask fucking Robards’ assistant. Yeah, his overly peppy assistant Polly? A spy. A plant. A secret criminal who ended up with access to one of the most influential people in the DMLE. After she was hired, she played the long game and didn't do much to draw any attention to herself for a few months. She really got quite a bit of information when Robards was still able to contact you, but lately had been frustrated since he never attempted to talk about you or bring you into the department.

Eventually she started collecting information about high profile people in the Ministry. She found out about upcoming raids. She had access to all the records all of the aurors, and to all of your tech.

Yeah, tech like your communication contacts. I don't know if you caught my hints, but Draco you never took your contacts out after the failed raid at the club. I'm not sure if it's because it ended the way it did, I'm not sure if you were distracted by the fact that you knew we weren't super keen on you doing the mission at all, or if they're just comfortable enough that you didn't realize they were still in. But when Polly became aware she was still getting visuals from your contacts she decided it was time to implement their biggest plot.

Have her co-conspirator, Peter, send the letter, sending out confirmation that they could get to you with a private picture they printed from your visual in the mirror the night before. When I got to the location, he was to Imperius me and get me to rob Gringotts. They were going to just have me clean out the Malfoy/Wood/Potter/Black vaults since I have actual access to them. But if for some reason they weren't as full as they assumed (like if we had all our assets tied up in property or something like that) I would actually be imperiused into stealing from the bank. They figured the chaos of Harry Potter stealing from his family and then the good citizens of wizarding Britain would cause enough of a ruckus that they would be long gone before anyone realized I hadn't done it of my own free will.

Once he finished monologuing we got to the part where I either had to pretend to go along with my orders or let it slip that I wasn't imperiused. Well, I must have hesitated too long because he started freaking out. Apparating away before I could get out of the dampening field and able to shoot off some hexes or curses.

Luckily, he left an obvious trail so I was able to follow him. I apparated all over, following him for about half an hour, before he stopped me by pulling up his magi-tablet. He brought up the image of the Manor while you two were going about your business that morning. Said if I followed him on his next hop he'd hit the button and I could go back to being regular old Harry Potter since I wouldn't need my married last names anymore.

What followed was me giving him enough time to get away and not realize I was following his trail before I followed his trail. I spent every spare minute tracking him. I was in Italy, Spain, France, and what felt like every other country on the continent, following this knob. Every time I'd get close he'd pull up more images of you and I'd back off.
Until last night when I finally tracked him back to the Ministry. Apparently he hoped that with the two of you doing the fundraiser, and half the Ministry in attendance, it would be the perfect time to get back to his Polly, strip the Auror department of anything they thought would be useful, and make their getaway.

Well, when I caught up to them he tried to use the same tactic of bringing up images of you, but instead of intimate moments at the Manor I realized you were holding the fundraiser! You were both surrounded by Aurors!

I sent off my Patronus to Bletchley, in case you were wondering why he was missing for most of the evening, telling him and his most trusted aurors to get their arses to the DMLE immediately. He must have been in the loo or something since you didn't notice my stag running amok through the crowds. Anyway, I had been doing alright keeping Polly and Peter subdued, but when the aurors got there it wasn't long before they were both bound and ready to be brought to their cells.

Bletchley wanted me to stay last night and give my statement but I told him in no uncertain terms that I wasn't missing my brilliant husband Oliver's fundraiser and I wasn't going to spend another moment outside of the arms of my loves.

I apparated to the function and you know the rest from there.

Ooh, I see a bit of stirring from the beautiful heads in my lap.

So thankful to be home with my loves,
Yours as long as you still want me,
Harry

Saturday September 1st,
My loves - BOTH my loves,

Today has already been exhausting and it's barely even begun! Harry, after waking up and writing your explanation email (thank you SO much, by the way), you and Oliver gave me a quick release so that I'd go back to sleep for a bit while the two of you introduced Cassie to the birthday tradition in this house.

But sadly, I couldn't sleep for too long. It felt like only five minutes before I had to get up and help get our boys to King's Cross. Normally, this would be when we had to say goodbye to Oliver as well, but he'd already contacted Minerva and asked her to excuse him until Monday. She naturally did.

She sends her love, Harry.

And so now, I'm sitting at the table in our suite, drinking tea and thinking over your email. I may not have been able to determine the exact details, but you didn't really tell me anything I hadn't already guessed. That you were doing what you were doing simply to keep us safe. I will admit that a few things did surprise me.

For example, when you had hinted in your previous email that my contacts were so comfortable that one might not even realize they were wearing them, I honestly thought that YOU were wearing them. I was a bit relieved that you were basically telling me that you had a pair to help you document your mission. I even let my imagination run a bit wild with me and told myself that this may have even meant that you weren't alone, but working with a team of Aurors on a mission so secret that not a single one of them would dare to tell me that they knew anything about it. I was not upset by this, but rather happy that you had some support after all.

I'm rather glad I didn't know I was wrong, as that might have actually driven me mad as the days passed.

So, as I understand things, a man and his sister and/or lover obtained access to confidential information that only Aurors should have access to, and in doing so, plotted to use that information to their benefit. Until recently, that has mostly meant interfering with some of the raids and missions, but then suddenly they realized that they had somewhat direct access to me, and therefore to you.

Insanely, they forgot that you are you, and tried to force/Imperius you into stealing a lot of money for them. The only smart part of their entire plan was that you - having access to all our vaults (at least, the non dark ones) - would actually be able to get in and empty them all without committing an actual crime. YOU wouldn't actually be stealing anything, but rather 'voluntarily' giving it all to them.

It could have worked, except that you cannot be Imperiused, and chances are good that had he not realized that something was wrong, got spooked, and ran off like a bloody coward, you WOULD have taken him down right then and there. But he had just enough self-preservation to realize that the most powerful wizard in the world was now extremely mad at him, and he wasn't going to survive any sort of direct confrontation.

So he ran and you followed him, making him use the link he had to threaten you that he could hurt us if you didn't back off. I can only assume that at first, you must have believed that he had some OTHER form of surveillance on us, and as part of that, some THING ready and able to harm or murder us.

I really might pity him. Had he implied this threat toward one of the Unity Kids, you would have hunted him to the ends of the Earth. Had he implied this towards one of our actual Kids, you'd have hunted him to the ends of the Earth with a magically sharp knife in hand ready to strike him down the moment he got within sight. But he didn't do that. He threatened US and our unborn baby.

I'm honestly surprised that he and his sister are both still in one piece. It honestly wouldn't have shocked me to hear that they had mysteriously perished. And or vanished to never be heard from again. Or worst of all, found their way into Kisa's dungeon!

But no, you did the best thing and called for the Aurors to come in and lock them up. With what you say they've done, they're definitely going away for a long time. Hermione might even give special permission to have them kissed!

Now I have to admit to being a bit dense. As much as I'm loathe to admit it, I really might be the dumbest smart person you know, Harry, because you were practically screaming at me that I was wearing my Camera Contacts still, and I just didn't even - it didn't even occur to me! Each time you made a reference to our current looks - that you couldn't have known about if you were far from home as you claimed to be - I honestly just thought that you had a monitoring spell on us, or were 'hacking' into the MMMs, or were perhaps Magi-Skyping with Siri (or more likely Muffy) - who'd been sworn to silence - and getting updates on us each night.

After that bit where you were practically spelling it out for me, I really thought you were telling me that YOU were wearing them, and working with a team, so I assumed that you were getting those updates from a member of the team. I'd actually even convinced myself that Hermione was in on it, and that's why - despite pretending to be distraught - she'd given up and called off her
However, THAT was a strange conversation between the two of us, when I mentioned that you'd slipped a secret message into my email telling me not to go to the Aurors or Unspeakables, and also kept hinting that I should stay out of the Ministry. Hermione gave me a funny look like she'd just figured something out, and that was about the time she decided to call them off, so maybe she understood that you wouldn't be asking us to back off so much unless you had a really good reason for it.

At that point, you must have been certain that he/they really could get to us. Apparently we REALLY need to go through all the wards on the Manor again so that you'll remember that NOTHING (except for YOU) can get through our CENTURIES of wards!

Harry, please promise me that if anything like this should happen in the future, you'll realize that we are all safe behind the wards, and that it really would have been MUCH less hassle on you to just let us know what was going on and let us organize a quick sting on the criminals. For example, had you brought me with, even if I'd gotten caught up in the magic dampening ward and succumbed to the Imperius, I would have still been there to perform as the criminal expected, giving you more time to play along and come up with a brilliant plan to take him down.

More importantly, I would have insisted on us all using my tech, and so, someone would have been monitoring us and could have come to our rescue if needed.

But aside from all of that, I am not mad you did what you felt was the only thing you could do to ensure that we were safe. I probably would have done the same thing in your shoes. I just think I might have tried flirting with him at first sight to gain his trust, otherwise, everything else likely would have been the same.

But back to my understanding of the situation. At some point, you must have realized that all he really had on us was a feed from MY Contact Cameras. I assume that by that point, you were already close enough to taking him down that it was just easier to do that than come right home and let the Aurors handle it. Bonus, doing it the way you did, you have DEFINITELY ensured that both of the criminals are in custody.

In the end, the only thing that matters is that you are home, safe and sound. I'm looking forward to the three of us snuggling up and holding each other for hours tonight. Of me and Oliver prying every last detail from you, and then more than likely shagging you into a coma.

But before that, you have to go into the Ministry to give an official report, and I'm planning on going into the Ministry to chat with Robards and ask him if he'd like me involved in the interrogations, and even if he doesn't, I might ask for a few minutes with each of them anyway.

I only really have two questions for you, Harry. One: If he knew you were chasing him and kept spotting you and showing you images of us to get you to back off, then WHY were you bothering to use a glamour? And two... WHAT IN THE BLOODY HELL DID YOU DO TO ROBARDS?!?!

I wish I could pretend I didn't need ya, but every touch is OOO la la la, it's true, la la la, Draco

P.S. I'm letting Oliver speak for himself this time.
For all of you who are dying to know what Harry did to Robards, the answer is coming up very soon ^_^
Chapter 337

Chapter Summary

Oliver responds to Harry's email with one of his own.

Chapter Notes

This was actually supposed to be part of the last chapter, but when I posted the last chapter, I thought this one from Oliver paired with one from Draco, and it would return to Harry/Draco format after that, but actually, the next email after this is from Harry, so here is a half chapter of just one email from Oliver, oops! Sorry...

Dear Harry,

I will start out this message to you by thanking Draco for letting me speak for myself.

I truly went back and forth during your absence Harry. I was angry and scared. I was probably more scared than anything else and held on to my anger as a way to try and forget how scared I was. Our entire marriage so far has included Draco being in harm's way, then Draco putting himself in harm's way, and you being angry that Draco put himself in harm's way.

However, besides you being hexed by my stalker with the True Love's Curse, the only danger you've been included in, Harry, has been when you've rage haloed at someone else. I somehow forgot how easily you fall into dangerous situations. And that you often seem to think those situations are your sole responsibility. If Hermione hadn't just been unbelievably smarter than you, you probably would have gone off to fight Voldemort on your own.

Hermione being worried enough to send out the Unspeakables on your behalf was probably what really made it sink in to me that you were in danger. Which is when I went from being angry at you being a hypocrite to really quite scared. Every day that went by where you didn't come home increased that fear. And that you went so many days without even trying to contact us? Fear on fear on fear.

That's when it really came in handy that Draco forced me to go see Mia, my therapist. She gave me some tools to help handle the fear I couldn't ignore and to keep myself focused on other things to keep those fears as low as possible. Keeping myself busy finding MY way to save the world a little bit at the time was a huge distraction. And a good cause and a profitable distraction at that. I am really excited for seeing the spoils of my hard work.

And keeping Serenity calm, content, healthy, and safe was the biggest reason I had to keep myself calm.

I started out angry, moved onto terrified, and eventually kept myself a little angry, a little scared, and very distracted. I wish you had made different decisions, I wish you hadn't been put in the situation to begin with. But right now, I am over all of that and I am just happy you are home.
I read every email you sent us multiple times and the only thing I am still upset with you about is how adamant you were that Draco and I wouldn't love or want you anymore when you got home. I promised you forever Harry James, I plan on keeping that promise. I love you. I don't believe you need forgiveness, but if you feel you need it then you have it. Thank you for coming home safe.

Love,
Oliver
Chapter 338

Chapter by ladyroxanne21

Chapter Summary

Viona needs her dads.

Chapter Notes

See the end of the chapter for notes

Monday September 3, 2018

My Loves,

I wanted to respond to the both of you Saturday when you both took time to send me messages. But I thought spending even a moment of my spare time NOT wrapped in your arms was a ridiculous idea. I just tried to remember the things I wanted to say and spent every moment I could with the both of you. Which, for the record, is my plan for pretty much the rest of our lives at this point.

Until today when Ollie had to head to Hogwarts. I did plan on making Draco come with me to go stare at him on the quidditch pitch. Like a star-struck teen, I planned to hide in the bleachers pretending I was interested in the flying when I really just wanted to ogle the fit flying instructor. As you both know, that didn't happen.

Our beautifully perfect Viona went into labor this morning. First labors can take a very long time and technically Ollie was two days late for start of term so he went on to Hogwarts (not that Minnie wouldn't have allowed him to miss today as well) while Draco and I came to St. Mungo's to be here for my Vivi.

Why then am I writing instead of taking care of my sweet Princess? Because apparently my hovering was NOT helping! So Alric and Draco are in the delivery room while I am sitting in the family waiting room until I can "manage to be less hysterical than the woman trying to shove a human out of her body." So I am going to take this opportunity to finally respond to your messages while also calming myself down. Hopefully by the time I am done I will be able to pretend I am a normal, calm, rational, grown man and I will be allowed back in the room.

Ollie, your email was a bit shorter and didn't actually ask any questions so I will start with responding to yours.

I am so unbelievably proud of you and your fundraiser! You are one of the two most amazing men on the planet. You are clever and handsome. You make me feel safe and loved. You have saved me, and now you're wanting to go on to save the world. I am proud of you.

Draco, don't beat yourself up for not catching my hint about the contacts. I was subtle about it because I didn't want them to catch on to me sending you information. And now that I am home safe and sound, I'm glad you had the comfort from thinking I was with a team of people. And when Hermione took the Unspeakables off the case it seemed even more likely to you that I had help. Realistically she knew that if I was warning you off the Aurors and Unspeakables that something had to be very very wrong. She knew I wouldn't say that if I wasn't terrified of them knowing.

I KNOW the Manor's wards would keep you safe. I KNOW the criminals couldn't get through those wards. I KNOW you were safe from them when you were at the Manor. But since they had access to the contacts I thought there was a chance they had something on you that they could essentially detonate from outside the wards. Either a separate device or maybe they could detonate the contacts themselves. Muggle-tech remote controls aren't likely something Malfoys of generations ago would have planned for.

There were two reasons for the glamour. First of all, as I was chasing Peter through the continent, I was hoping a glamour would keep him from realizing it was me that had found him. Possibly giving me those extra few seconds I might need to take him down. And the first few times I caught up with him were in heavily populated areas. I'd be almost close enough to get off a clear shot when he would shout something like "Oi Merlin, is that Harry Potter?" That's when I would get mobbed by the crowds. I hoped that by using a glamour I would be able to sneak up on him AND not be an easy distraction for him to use to get away again.

There were a few times where I thought it was possible that I could have gotten to him, but it would have meant tipping her off and I couldn't risk either of you. I would have been home probably that same day if he had been working alone.

I actually didn't know I still had the glamour on until after the battle at the Ministry. As soon as I had the two of them cornered ... side note: you said siblings OR lovers? Yeah, no, siblings AND lovers. Blech.

Anyway, I think he finally realized I was going to chase him to the ends of the earth so he tried to get to Polly so they could flee together. Luckily for me the Ministry has been like a third home for me for years. Polly only knew the place as well as someone who'd worked there a year or so, and Peter knew it absolutely not at all. I had home field advantage and was able to keep them engaged and there so the Aurors could come subdue them.

Why I let the Aurors handle it when I so very badly wanted to make them pay for threatening the lives of my loves? I needed to be with the both of you more than I needed the bloodbath. Plus, I've promised my Ollie to try not to ever kill when there's another way. I swear, I would have taken the kill if I thought it was needed. I wouldn't hesitate if I thought NOT doing it would endanger you more. But they were in anti-apparition wards and the Aurors were on their way. I just needed to keep them distracted so I could get home to you.

Erm, Draco, the only other question you had .... what do YOU think I did to Robards?

I'm not going to cave without a little proof you know I did something.

I mean, I didn't do anything?

Love,
Harry

Monday September 3rd
Harry...
I WAS going to make you sit down with me so I could glare at you until you told me what I want to know, or maybe even slip into your mind to find out what you 'didn't do.' However, something far more important happened.

At 4:25 PM, our little Vincent Oliver was born. I know, that name surprised me too. I thought for sure that she would want nothing to do with her birth father, but she said she wanted to stick with V names and that Vincent was preferable to Victor. Plus, this way, he has a chance to be better than his namesake.

That's not going to be hard, if I'm honest, as Vince was rather stupid and may have genuinely been evil. So long as our newest grandson can be a decent bloke who is reasonably smart, he'll ALREADY be better than his namesake.

You - like Oliver - thought at first that Viona had suddenly claimed a new favorite dad, but nope. Apparently Viona really wanted to name her baby after her mother - who was brave enough to give her up for her own good - but she DIDN'T want the confusion of TWO Olivers in one family. And a boy named Olivia might be a bit traumatic, ha. So she went with Vincent Oliver as a hope that this boy can erase all the bad of that entire family - NOT that he'll know it until he's old enough to understand both sides of the story.

But here's the thing, despite the fact that by the time Olivia inherited the Crabbe family 'fortune' and estate, there wasn't MUCH left. Olivia barely had enough to live off of a couple of years, and then she needed to take a job. However, the estate (such as it is) still exists.

What I didn't know until today is that Viona was granted permission from her mother to do what she likes with the estate, and Viona being my most brilliant daughter, decided to remodel it. I would have thought that she'd have just blasted it to bits or left it to rot, but Viona has decided that the estate is actually rather lovely on a small scale, and would make a good home for her son if he should ever happen to want it as - not surprisingly - he is actually the next in line to inherit it.

Yes, despite the fact that girls can inherit the estate and magic tied to it, the estate itself prefers male heirs AND Viona actually talked it over with her mum and they both agreed that Olivia can name Vincent as her heir (bypassing Viona), and so, when she dies, our newest grandson will have an inheritance that is rich in... dark magic unfortunately, but still, we should have plenty of time to teach him to be a good and loving young man before he gets his hands on centuries of dark magic.

And besides, I have a feeling that Viona will attempt to go through as much as she can and get rid of anything she doesn't want her son to ever find. She could easily ask me to relocate that stuff to our dark vault, as simply throwing away dark magic is not so easy, nor a good idea. OR she could hire a curse breaker to come in and neutralize as much as possible. I don't know, we'll see, I suppose.

But she is right. From what I remember as a child, despite being run by a family that was very loyal to the dark side, the Crabbes DID have a small but lovely plot of land that would be perfect for a family. The Manor itself was rather cramped and dreary to my taste, but that's what the remodeling is for. All in all, I'm happy that little Vincent has an excellent start to life.

But perhaps the best of all was that you managed to calm yourself just in time to get back into the room and catch him as he came out. Thus it was you, my love, that got to be the very first to hold and kiss our little grandson. You naturally passed him to Alric after the cord had been cut, but poor Alric looked so overwhelmed by his emotions about having a son and being a father, that he more or less fainted. Luckily, I caught them, holding the baby as I wandlessly levitated Alric to a chair.

Viona was an absolute champ! Much like a fierce warrior, she didn't seem to notice the pain much, but when she needed to let out a shout, she really roared - powerfully enough to scare off all the dark little spirits that may have been lurking nearby. And when she was done giving birth, rather than succumb to her exhaustion, she perked right back up and watched us fawn all over him before demanding a chance to bond with her baby.

When she lay him on her chest and we all watched him root out her nipple and latch on for the first time, THAT was magic in its purest form! It was an all around good day.

After Viona, Alric, and Vincent had had a bit of rest, some members of our family came to visit. I could have won a bet had I actually made one, but as I suspected, Hazel and Pearl were ready to announce that their efforts were successful, and now Pearl is going to be having a baby in about 9 months - they'll find out the exact timing at their appointment on Wednesday.

So Harry... are you ready to confess yet, or do I need to torture it out of you? I'll be waiting in the playroom and if you aren't there in 15 minutes or less, I'll send Muffy after you to bring you to me so that I can tie you to the spanking bench and utterly annihilate your arse.

I'm gonna love you forever and ever, forever and ever, amen,

Draco

Chapter End Notes

So, at the part where Draco is taking about Viona and inheritance, as Harry points out in the next email, Viona CAN'T inherit the Crabbe magical inheritance, so what Draco is really getting at here is not that she was supposed to, but rather that now that she has a somewhat decent relationship with her birth mother, they've talked it over and agreed that even though Olivia could jump through hoops to re-Heir Viona, they've agreed that it's just better all around to leave it to the baby ^_^
Monday September 3, 2018

Dearest,

You're going to give me fifteen minutes to confess to wrongdoing before you ... torture me? Well that gives me just enough time to send off this email before I submit myself for questioning.

Our teeny little Vincent is amazing and wonderful and gorgeous and I caught him! He was gooey and gross, screaming his little face off, and quite possibly one of the most beautiful things I've ever seen. I can't believe I made it in in time to be the one to catch him. See? Being a neurotic mess seems to have paid off. My hour long exile into the waiting room meant I was in the perfect position when I was allowed back in the room.

Note to self: continue to be a panicking weirdo and good things will happen.

I am thrilled that Vincent will have a piece of his history to lay claim to when he's older. I've always made a big deal about wanting all of our children to know about their ancestry and their background. I continue that hope for our grandchildren and this background is no exception. His biological grandfather may have been a bad person, but the Crabbe family has traditions and a history worth remembering. I will personally do my best to help him find the good parts of their history amidst the obvious dark.

The one thing I am really confused about was when you said Viona and Olivia had a discussion about inheritances and why Viona was being skipped over. Are we literally talking about a legal standpoint? Because magically speaking, Olivia disinherited Viona from the entire family. I was there for the ritual. I remember it vividly not only because it was the first time a child was being left at Unity House but also because it was the first time I saw the face of my first child. It's not a moment someone forgets.

That round little pudgy face, big intelligent brown eyes watching the whole thing play out. Those same brown eyes I got to stare into earlier today as she screamed her son into the world. Those same brown eyes I saw in miniature when little Vincent stared up at me. Our baby girl is a Mama. A fierce mama bear that will wrangle the world into exactly the place she wants her son to grow up in.

I'm just so proud of her. My fierce, cunning, brilliant, sweet, little girl.

Just as I'm thrilled for one of my other girls and her beautiful wife. I am so glad Hazel and Pearl have managed to start their own family! The looks of absolute bliss on both of their faces when they announced their news was enough to make me weep.

Okay I need to end things here before I blubber all over the place ... again.

I am going to sign off and make my way to the spanking bench. Do your worst my love. I've been very very bad. I definitely need a full interrogation!

In anticipation,
Harry

Monday September 3rd
MERLIN DAMNIT!!!

Literally the DAY I go back to Hogwarts, you two have a full on torture session?!?! You had better describe to me IN DETAIL - Harry James - EXACTLY what Draco did to you!

Your poor left out husband,
Oliver
P.S. I'll be still living with the both of you at nights and thus commuting home after work, so maybe you can show me the better bits in person, yeah? ^_^

Chapter End Notes

Note, the answer is in the next chapter and I will be posting that in an hour or so ^_^
Dear Oliver,

Yes, Oliver. I am not writing to Draco.

Ollie, your husband Draco is a monster. A diabolical, evil mastermind the likes of which the world has never seen.

See, I went into our torture session a bit giddy. The man had practically challenged me to do my best to withhold information to my torturer. You know that I am not one to back down from a challenge. And when it comes to torture in the playroom? I always come out on top! Or on the bottom I suppose. Well, sometimes on top. But no matter where I am physically, when there's torture happening, I am the very very happy and satisfied winner.

This was not the case tonight.

I showed up right before the fifteen minute mark was up. I vanished my clothing, dropped to my knees, bowed my head, and said "I am here to submit to your torture, Master."

He got that smirky sound to his voice, that aristocratic drawl he gets, and very sweetly tied me to the spanking bench. I was so excited; sure I was going to leave a puddle under the bench. Or not so much a puddle since he put a ring on me. Perhaps a small puddle.

I was ready for anything he was going to throw at me. But he wasn't going to make this easy for me.

He started with his hand. Pinking up my arse nice and slowly. Didn't even ask for a speck of information during this time. The only sounds to be heard in the room was the steady, rhythmic slapping of his hand and my soft grunts and moans. Eventually his pampered rich boy hand got too sore to continue (yes, please read that as me sassing him since I am DEFINITELY sassing him!), so he switched to the paddle. Increased pressure, increased surface area, a little less personal. Although he did make it more personal by telling me every few spansks that he was getting me ready to spill all of my secrets. My only response to that was a mouthy "of course Master."

Good thing for me my Master likes me being a little mouthy and a hint bratty.

Switching to the crop meant all new feelings. His aim is so brilliant that I was feeling intense bursts of pain wherever he wanted them. I am sure I looked a bit spotted by that point. My arse was really... burning by that point, as well as my bollocks which he snapped every five or six arse croppings.

Every time that crop hit my swollen bollocks he would remind me, "you're going to give me what I need Harry."

Every time he said that I responded, "of course Master."

He was absolutely sure I was going to cave.

I was absolutely sure I wasn't.

After the cropping, Draco stopped torturing me. He came around my front and used my mouth to get his gorgeous cock good and wet. You could tell the torture session had gotten to him because he didn't stay in my mouth for long, preferring to be deep in my arse to finish himself off. He came around behind me, slipping in so perfectly. Hitting that spot so dead-on that I immediately saw stars.

The entire time he was fucking me, he was squeezing, lightly smacking, and pinching my arse cheeks. Keeping them hot and sore.

Eventually he groaned his completion into my ear. Pulling out, I felt one small drip as his cum slipped out of my arse and onto my reddened bollocks before he slipped a plug in.

That's when he picked up the crop again. Oh good, I was so excited. As wonderful as this had all felt, Draco never quite went hard enough for me to fly off into subspace. I was so ready, now that he'd gotten off once, for him to increase the tempo and send me flying. You know, I really should know by now that our husband is pretty clever.

He didn't start back in with cropping my overly sensitized skin. No, he began rubbing the end of the crop up and down my poor ignored cock. Slide down from bollocks to tip, slide back the reverse, light tap to the bollocks, harder tap to the plug my arse was clenching around, another stroke from bollocks to shaft to tip and back again. Again and again and again.

I began to babble. Begging him to just let me fly. Begging and pleading to at least be allowed to come. Promising anything. Promising to pleasure him, warm his cock, take as many fuckings as he wanted, promising the world if he'd only let me release my aching dick or fly off to a place where I wouldn't care.

That's when this evil man chuckled. Yes, chuckled. Into my ear, "Of course you sweet little mutt, I'll give you whatever you need."

I started thanking him until he kept up his maniacal laughter, "you just have to tell me what you did. All this torture will be over, you just have to admit your actions to me. Tell me Love, what did you do?"

Shite.

I tried to hold out, I really did. But I needed it. I needed to come. I needed to release. I needed damnit!

So, before Draco starts crowing to you that he won, I will tell you myself. I hexed Robards to be unable to bring up Draco in conversation or contact him directly. He can respond to him if Draco initiates conversation, he can talk about Draco to others if they bring up the topic, but if he so much as thinks to himself "hmm, even though Draco is mentally damaged and has lost his memories, I should probably show up and physically force him to work for me" he will all of a
I'm not even mad that you hexed Robards, as you CLEARLY felt it was warranted. At the time, perhaps even I would have agreed that it was - had I been in my right mind and knew what you were planning to do.

Strangely, I'm not even mad that you have this insane jealousy regarding Robards, as it more than likely means that you are afraid that he will one day order me to do that one thing that goes too far and results in my death.

Nope, I am not mad about any of that. I AM just a little bit disappointed that after all these years of me telling you just how important Robards is to me - in that he is a bit like a boss, partner, and co-conspirator all in one - you STILL try to interfere with him. Alright fine, it's a little bit cute, to be honest, that you are so jealous of what he means to me that you feel defensive. I can tolerate it, I just wish you would trust that I wouldn't associate with Robards if I didn't trust him and feel that he's a good man doing an incredibly shitty job BECAUSE he's driven to make the world a better place.

Sigh... It sounds like I'm a little more upset than I thought I was, but aside from being upset, I am not mad. I am not going to ask you to break the hex. No... I'm just going to ask you one question...

Harry James Malfoy-Wood... WHAT in the bloody hell did you KEEP from me?! Don't try to deny it! You may have caved to my torture and told me the thing you thought I was expecting to hear, but I know you, you used my Slytherin tricks and diverted my attention with one juicy bit in order to deflect attention away from something else. Something possibly WORSE.

So... What was it?

Giving you the best of my love,
Draco

P.S. To emphasize the point that I really don't mind you keeping secrets from me, you do not have to answer my question, in which case, I will break all curses on Robards myself so that I can ask him.
Draco,

Alright, before we get to the meat of this argument ... um talk .... discussion ... negotiations, I have a few teeny tiny little things that I disagreed with from your previous email.

Jealous? You think I am jealous? I would only ever be jealous of someone you were giving something you don't give me. Or subsequently I would only be jealous of someone who is giving you something you weren't getting from me.

It's why we were able to have such a long and satisfying playing relationship for as long as we did.

Side note: based on recent dirty talk, flirtations, and subtle references I think our Ollie is totally ready to start playing!!

As I was saying, we were able to play for as long as we did because I never had to be jealous. None of our playmates were ever getting or giving anything we didn't already share. I had your heart and your body, they occasionally got to play with your body under my watchful eye. Nothing to ever be jealous of.

Are you giving your heart to Robnards? Do you secretly cry while lying in his arms after losing one of your beloved animals? Has he ever watched your body swell with the proof you wanted a family with him? No.

Do you let him see you wake up soft and flushed? Have you traveled the world with him? Built a family with him? Have you collared him yours? No.

I get that he is important to you. He's the one person in your life who is willing to fuel your neurotic obsession with atoning for a childhood of bad decisions based on terrible indoctrinations. He puts you in danger. He puts my heart in danger like he also thinks you deserve to take on the worst jobs.

He treats your safety and your mental health like it's expendable. Somehow he's the only person who thinks you still have something to make up for. He is a manipulating monster who sees your insecurities and uses them to his advantage.

The only reason I haven't killed him, and believe me I really REALLY want to, is because he may be manipulating you for his own gains, but at least he is working for the good of society.

He reminds me very much of Dumbledore honestly. He has no problem taking someone who has scars from a traumatic past and using them for what he thinks is the greater good. He doesn't care that you've been in magical exhaustion as long as he gets what he wants from your visions. He hasn't cared that our unborn childrens' lives have been in danger when he has coerced you into working way too far into your pregnancies. Just like Dumbledore used my need for a parental figure to talk me into walking to my death for the greater good.
Do they both have long term goals that could be considered 'good'? Sure. But they're playing a game of chess and didn't care about the damage to mere pawns.

Okay, I let my own rage get away from me. I am sorry I am talking so badly about someone you care about. I am not jealous, but I do legitimately hate him for putting my husband in danger over and over again. I loathe him for every time I've seen our children worry you weren't coming home from a mission. I wish ill upon him for every time being around him has reinforced your need to fix your childhood misdeeds.

He uses your heart against you and I fear the day you will completely close off that big beautiful heart of yours to keep yourself safe.

Anyway, technically it wasn't a secret. It was a thing I knew that you didn't. If you had asked me about it, I would have answered. And when you DID ask me about it, I did the Malfoy thing: got what I wanted out of the deal (a delicious torture session) before coming clean.

So, negotiation time. You're saying if I don't answer your request for the rest of the information you will break the curse on Radish. And yes, there is only the one curse I do promise that.

What I'm wondering is, if I tell you the other pertinent information will you leave the curse in place? I will tell you what you want to know as long as you promise to leave the curse in place and not tell Regardless it exists.

Do we have a deal?
Harry

Alright, deal. I will leave the curse in place if you tell me what else you did.

You belong with me, I belong with you, you're my sweethearts,
Draco
Harry confesses to the rest of what he did to Robards.

Lovely doing business with you.

So, after that man came into our home while you were mentally unwell and thrust that item on you which forced a vision, I went to the Ministry and had a lengthy discussion with him.

He essentially acted quite condescending towards me until I had enough and freaked out. He very much gave me the small pat on the head, "don't worry about what the men-folk are doing little sweetheart" and told me in no uncertain terms that he wasn't going to stop bringing you in on cases just because I don't like, and I quote, "that your husband has stolen your whole saving the world celebrity status." He continued on, telling me I should get used to your world not revolving around me.

My rage got the best of me and I petrificus totalis-ed him. He was finally completely at my mercy, without the ability to make me feel bad with his rude comments and unsubtle suggestions that he's more important to you than I am. If I had to hear him laugh at me one more time, I think I might have actually broken my promise and gutted him.

Okay, this part is embarrassing, but in the spirit of abiding by our agreement with full disclosure I will tell you everything. I got a little serial killery and went full super-villain monologue on him. I may or may not have pulled a dagger out of my pocket. I placed the blade against his cheek, got in real close, and whispered this into his ear: "If I ever find out you've forced my husband to help you without his consent, you will wish I had just killed you. This is your only warning. If there is ever a repeat of today, I will follow you to the ends of the earth, petrify you just like I've done now, and..."

Damnit Draco can't you just leave the curse in place and let me just leave it at "I threatened him"? I swear the curse was the only lasting magic and the only other thing I did was threaten him. No? Fine.

"If there is ever a repeat of today, I will follow you to the ends of the earth, petrify you just like I've done now, and I will slowly remind you of all the people who matter to my Draco. I will take this dagger and - in my loveliest handwriting - fill your skin up with the names of Draco's husbands, children, and grandchildren. No amount of dittany will get rid of the permanent reminder of every person who is more important to Draco than you are. The people he lives for."

That's when he wet his pants and Oliver popped into the office to check on us. When Ollie left, I cast the curse I already told you about, unpetrified him, and then patted him on his head, telling him to "clean yourself up sweetie, wet slacks aren't a good look on you" and went home to my husbands.

Still not sorry,
Harry
Friday September 7th
My husbands,

Tonight was rather unexpected, wasn't it?

Fridays are usually rather light for Oliver, so he was able to return home when his last class let out at two. He arrived just after the Feisty Foursome insisted that they take Nora and the littles outside to their private park under ONLY the watchful eye of a dozen elves or so.

Thus, when he insisted: "Harry, Draco! Cast a denial spell on me and then try your best to suck me off!" We had no reason to deny him. His pregnancy may be going rather well and lacking in most of the inconvenient symptoms we had, but his hormone induced horniness is getting to be rather extreme. I'd almost feel sorry for him if the benefits to us weren't so bloody clear.

We naturally took turns granting his request, which not so surprisingly managed to frustrate him after a half an hour or so. He was begging us to finish him off, but yet wouldn't let us remove the denial spell. Apparently he was in the mood to become absolutely desperate.

Or maybe he just understood that getting off would only give him an hour or so of relief before he grew horny again, and thus hoped to wear himself out so completely that he just passed out and slept until Monday morning.

In any case, as dinner time was approaching, we basically had no choice but to call it quits as the youngest 8 loudly came back indoors and shouted out that they were hungry. I took the denial spell off Oliver and let him have his much delayed orgasm.

Then we all went to dinner, but as we were leaving our suite, a pair of surprise visitors popped in.

"Sorry to arrive unannounced, but it's not like we can message each other from the other world," the Viper greeted us with a grin that suggested he really wasn't sorry. He gestured to the Other Oliver - hmm... I suppose that after today, we should probably give him an official nickname. I vote for Owl - no wait, Falcon. It's more in keeping with Viper and Tiger.

"I brought Oll with me because, well basically, Draco's too busy recently, the boys are off on a field trip with their tutors, and I'm rather lonely. So I was Insta-Owling Oll and he mentioned that he's between games at the moment and also alone with nothing to do, so I suggested that we come over here and see what's been going on since our last visit," Viper explained.

I tilted my head back in interest. "What's Tiger up to?"

"Well, ever since he became Minister for Magic, he's practically LIVING at the Ministry. In his office. If I didn't know him so damn well, I'd almost think he was keeping a lover in his office for a bit of shagging to help him sleep at night!"

Harry frowned and put a hand on his shoulder. "I'm sure it's rough. Our Hermione's been so busy at times that her husbands and wife have been ready to strangle her."

I shrugged. "I'm tempted to apologize on his behalf, but if I'd won the election, I can easily picture myself working just as much. Lucky for me, I have two husbands who would be happy to sit under my desk and keep me calm and relaxed whenever I got agitated."

Harry moaned lustily at that idea, giving first me then Oliver a kiss.
Falcon narrowed his eyes at that. "I am inexplicably insulted by that! As if I am worth nothing more than a bit of entertainment as a sex slave..."

Oliver took Falcon's hand in his and squeezed it. "Before you go getting too offended, keep in mind that my husbands are currently straining themselves to keep MY unreasonable horniness under control." He rubbed his gorgeous bump with his other hand.

"Blimey! You're getting big!"

Harry bristled a little. "I think you mean gorgeous!"

"That too," Falcon conceded with a nod.

Before we could get too lost in conversation, our kids practically pushed us out of our suite. Dinner was as lively as ever, with a rousing debate on several subjects. My mother wisely offered to watch a movie or two with the kids before tucking them into bed later. This gave us no reason NOT to retire directly to our playroom after dinner was finished.

Note: We chose the playroom NOT for actual playing, but because it was one of only a couple of places that the kids are actively warded out of, and so, guaranteed privacy. That said, I think we all had the possibility of playing in the back of our minds. The first to actually say it outright (after at LEAST an hour of catching up) was Viper.

"My Draco gave me permission to play around as needed - since he's been working so much - but I haven't wanted to go to a club or something to pull a one off. Are the three of you interested in anything?"

We looked at each other in a bit of a circular motion for a few seconds before the two of us looked to Oliver. He was biting his lip in thought. Harry decided to take the pressure off him.

"We've not really talked about the possibility yet."

Oliver looked at Viper. "What SPECIFICALLY did you have in mind?"

Viper looked down to avoid meeting his eyes. "I'm actually rather mad at Draco - MY Draco. He's been working so much lately that I feel like I haven't seen him in months! And HE'S the one who's usually reluctant to play, but suddenly he's given me an all encompassing permission slip! I WANT to beat him up and FORCE him to tell me if he's cheating on me whilst in the office! … But I know he's not. He's not like that, and he's genuinely driven to work practically around the clock..." he ended with a heavy sigh.

Oliver looked confused, but judging by the look on Falcon's face, this was already old news to him. "And... So you just want to get off for a bit of stress relief."

Viper shook his head. "No, it's like I said, I want to beat Draco up."

I gasped in eager understanding. I suddenly felt REALLY on board with this idea. I was practically STARING at Oliver as I waited for him to think this over. Oliver studied my extremely hopeful expression for a moment before looking to Harry.

"What do YOU think?" He asked.

Harry was staring at the floor, looking rather concerned. "I well know that Viper can REALLY get into it when he's beating or torturing a bloke, so I'm concerned about obvious safety issues, but so long as he does so under my/our supervision and understands that I will obliterate him if he goes too far, I have no problem with it."

Oliver frowned again. "Draco, I know you DO enjoy a beating on a rare occasion."

"I wouldn't call it enjoy exactly," I muttered wryly.

"BUT the last time you asked for this, you felt you needed to be severely punished, and the two of us gave you what you wanted because you felt you needed it. WHAT can you possibly get out of it this time?" Oliver pressed.

I took a deep breath as I thought over how best to answer this. "Hmm... well I suppose... It's... It's because I'm... a... I'm like a fragile shell of good over a tightly controlled monster. If I didn't have you two and all our kids to keep me motivated, I'd probably just say fuck it and go off on a never ending rampage."

"You would not!" The both of you protested hotly. Harry continued. "You're such a bloody goody two shoes at this point that I have more darkness in me than you!"

I snorted in amusement. "You really believe that, don't you? Oh Harry... when I found out that you'd not only hexed the Head Auror but ALSO threatened to carve him up, did I ask you to apologize? Did I even care? Oh sure, I like and have a great deal of respect for Robards, but the monster inside me was perversely delighted to hear what you'd done. Seriously, how did I react?"

Harry twisted his lips in a tiny smile. "You laughed so hard that I could hear you long before you found me, threw me over your shoulder, and carried me to bed."

"Exactly!" I stated. "And even though the right thing to do - the GOOD thing - would have been to break our agreement and insist that you break your own hex and apologize to him, I have agreed to pretend like I don't know a thing. It AMUSES me to know that someone I consider a good friend has a very good reason to fear my husband. It'll keep him on his toes, I should think."

"But..."

I held up a hand to stop the both of you from arguing. "Listen, I'm a GEMINI! I have BOTH good and bad inside me. I don't HAVE to be all one or the other. I can be my own evil twin! But I like to keep the good in me more well fed and healthier than the bad, and THAT'S why I occasionally want and NEED a bloody painful beating within an inch of my life."

Viper snorted. "MY Draco tries to deny that there's any bad left in him. He'll submit to light impact play when I need him to - when he's bloody home - but he WON'T let me beat him up."

Oliver thought my words over in silence for a few moments before nodding. "Alright, so here's what I think. It sounds like this isn't going to be any sort of sexual, and I don't really want to see it. As we've danced around for a few months now, I think I'm in a really good place mentally, and actually WOULD like to try playing. With myself here," he jabbed a thumb in Falcon's direction. "Provided he's into it."

"I am," Falcon murmured, almost certainly not willing to pass that up for love nor money.

"I don't like the idea of the two of you going off on your own," Harry stated.

"I'm sure," I replied. "No, what I meant was that the two of us will be over on the bed - with a silencing spell so we can't hear what's going on with Draco, but we could still look over and see it if we wanted. And while we're doing whatever we decide to do, Draco can have that beating he wants. And then... well, if it evolves into anything more, I actually wouldn't mind. I know you..."
both feel like playing with your other selves is basically masturbation, and I think I agree, since it doesn't make me jealous or upset in the slightest."

I held up my hands to attract both your attentions. "So, these are the ground rules/expectations. I can get the beating I want, Viper can brutalize me to his heart's content, Harry will stop things when they reach the point he just can't take it anymore, and then they'll probably give me an excellent show of Viper topping Harry. Meanwhile, Oliver and his other self will be on the bed exploring all the things they want to try. If at any point, any single one of us wants to put a stop to things, we ALL agree to abide by it and stop, yeah?"

"Exactly!" Harry and Oliver agreed in unison. Their counterparts nodded in understanding.

I stood up and walked to the area of the playroom where we'd long ago installed anchors in the ceiling for ropes or chains. Then I held out my arms in a silent invitation for Viper to string me up. As he worked to secure me with ropes, I watched Oliver take Falcon by the hand and lead him to the bed. They cast a silencing spell and spent the first several minutes talking.

Once I was secure, Viper talked me through the necessary reminders on safe word usage and hard limits. I told him that since I wasn't pregnant (Harry cast a spell to be certain this was true, it was.), I would remove all hard limits. Except the one concerning permanent damage - as I don't want anything that can't be healed should I want it healed.

Nodding in acceptance, Viper walked around to my back and began by using lighter impacts. As always, HE needed to work himself into the heavier and more violent acts, because he wanted to be certain that at every step of the way, he was still in complete control of his actions and NOT giving into the urge to keep right on going until he'd killed his victim. That very urge is the reason Harry always insists on supervising the event.

In any case, as he began, I had the opportunity to just watch Oliver and Falcon. They'd apparently agreed to go rather slowly, as they were just starting to touch one another, and it wasn't the sexy sort of touching yet. Oliver lay on his back with several pillows under him to cushion every part that could become uncomfortable. Falcon was stroking his pronounced bump reverently, saying things that I couldn't read because he was looking away from me.

From there, Falcon kissed his way up Oliver's body until they were tentatively snogging. That evolved into more confident kisses. Little touches and caresses evolved into explorations, likely trying to determine what they had in common.

With a grunt, I lost track of the Olivers for a few minutes as Viper was now at the stage where he was laying into me with steady and evenly painful punches. I closed my eyes and savored it as close to silently as I could manage. When I opened my eyes, Oliver had pushed his doppelgänger onto his back and was teasing his shaft with both hands and tongue. Oliver had that eager gleam in his eye that let me know he was determined to prove just exactly why gay sex was better than straight.

The sight of them mesmerized me enough that I almost didn't notice the abuse raining down on me. Eventually, I just couldn't ignore it any longer and had no choice but to surrender to the ordeal. To give into the pain and let it carry me away. I can only assume that Oliver had cast a denial spell on Falcon, because the glimpses I caught all showed me that Oliver's vigorous mouth was really working Falcon's shaft - almost like a professional.

Between the two of us, he DOES have a lot of practice.

Simply because I know how much Harry doesn't want to think about it, I won't go into detail and make him relive my glorious beating. All I will say is that it culminated in an utterly divine trip to subspace for me. I felt like I was flying through the very source of magic herself for an eon or so before I finally came back to myself. At this point, I'd been tucked into the bed and - to my delight - I had quite a show to watch.

Oliver - who doesn't have the tattoo of the goal post on his chest like Falcon does - was riding Falcon's shaft. Falcon looked both captivated and confused by the sight of his other self riding him like a champ. Meanwhile, a slow and careful turn of my head showed Harry bracing his hands on the side of the bed as Viper pounded into him from behind.

I'll bet that neither of you can comprehend the profound sense of peace I had at that moment. Aside from the slightly surreal sight of both of my husbands being fucked by themselves, I felt like the world was perfect. I had everything I wanted and needed, and watching you both enjoy yourselves was a bliss that's hard to describe.

With a smile - probably a faint one as I was still coming back from subspace - I reached out and took a hand from each of you so that I could hold it while I drifted in and out, trusting that you'd both anchor me to this world and our wonderful life.

I may have even been babbling something along the lines of: "I love you both so much! I love you Harry - and you Oliver. I love you more than anything. I constantly feel like I can't breathe from how powerful my love for you both is, I just want to stare at you through these rose tinted glasses for the rest of my life! I love you so much that -"

"We get it man!" Falcon roared. "Please try to keep it to yourself until I no longer need to concentrate so hard!"

"I even love you too, other Oliver from the other world. You're so much like OUR Oliver, but he's so much cuter. He's bloody gorgeous! Right up there with OUR Harry! The two of them could win World's Fittest Bloke competitions!"

For some reason, my babbling was amusing everyone, as you all started laughing at me. I wanted to protest indignantly, but I was already drifting off to sleep. "I love you and I love you and I love you and I love you and I love you and I luh..."

I have to admit that that was my last vague memory before I woke up in the middle of the night to an urgent need to visit the loo. There were four of you still surrounding me in bed, only now EVERYONE was sound asleep. I had to be careful not to wake anyone as I pulled free from possessive cuddles and crawled out of bed.

After finishing my business, I just knew that I wouldn't be able to sleep again until I wrote it all down. So here I am, stroking my tender bruises as I type this. Now that I'm done, I'm about to crawl back into the pile, return to the middle of all those possessive cuddles, and hex myself to sleep if I have to. I don't want to open my eyes again until it's absolutely necessary.

If I'm not back again this time tomorrow, carry on, carry on, Draco
P.S. Anything interesting happen while I was passed out?
Chapter 343

Chapter Summary

Viper mentions a brilliant idea to Draco.

Saturday September 8, 2018

Good morning my sleepy loves,

Draco, I woke up similar to how you woke up in the middle of the night last night. I was wrapped in a cozy pile of limbs. When I came back to bed, I just looked at the beautiful sight; my naked doppelganger, delightfully nude Draco, and two fit Olivers. Such a beautiful sight. Only way it could have been prettier is if there were two Dracos instead of a Viper.

I suppose myself and my alter-ego aren't unattractive, but compared to Draco and Oliver? Meh, I'm not exactly my type.

We were certainly missing that Tiger. I mostly just missed having two Draco faces to look at, but poor Viper is really not doing well missing his husband. I, thankfully, can't imagine how he's feeling.

I am sad for you Draco that you didn't win the election because I want you to have every single thing you desire. But I am very very selfishly pleased you didn't win. Between how sad Blaise, Ron, and Kisa have been and now with how upset Viper is, I do not think I would have handled you being gone as often as the job would have required you to be.

I'm pretty sure Ollie's libido is glad as well.

Us three husbands really do prefer to spend all of our free time together. We're certainly not co-dependent, we have plenty of time to ourselves, we have individual hobbies and jobs, but when we can all be together or have at least two of us together, that's what we choose to do.

I think it helps that Draco and I married young and Oliver was starting out a new phase of his adult life. We didn't live alone as single adults for many years before we all got together. As we grew and changed, we built our lives around each other. Tiger had many many years of having no one and nothing to answer to but himself. Sometimes, hearing about their lives, I think Tiger still acts too much like a bachelor.

But then again, not my marriage, not my business. If it were my marriage, I would say something. As sexy as I find the idea of just sitting under your desk, either by myself or with Ollie, to keep you satisfied, I hate the idea that I would need to because I otherwise wasn't seeing you.

Last night was lovely, it was nice seeing Oliver playing and comfortable doing so. I would have, and will be, fine if our Ollie never wants to play. But it seems like he at least enjoys it in this context and it was probably his own feelings of inadequacy that was stopping him before. Again, even if we never do anything else, I am glad he got to participate in a playtime that showed him what kind of playing can include being in love without hurting your love.

I didn't enjoy the beating portion of the evening. I would have much rather been watching our Ollie discover... the Falcon? But I needed to supervise Viper more than I needed to watch the fun. Then again, maybe it was better for our Ollie to have a bit of privacy to start out the evening.

Although, as much as I didn't love the beating, giggly, lovey, sub-space Draco is absolutely adorable.

Dragon, that was exactly the type of playing I love. It was about US. All of us together, you needing to hold our hands and tell us how beautiful you found us, your eyes on us. One-offs at the club just aren't sexy, it feels impersonal even now that I know that your eyes are on us most of the time. You, reclining in the bed like a king, surveying your sexy subjects? THAT is sexy.

And it doesn't have much, if anything, to do with the fact that they were our doppelgangers. I have felt the same way when you've had me play with Blaise, or when we've had parties. It's personal and intimate.

You did miss some impressive combinations when you passed out though. And I have to say, I think I finally get your sharing kink, or at least your voyeuristic sharing kink. I watched Viper with our Ollie, don't worry I made sure he was very gentle, and it was absolutely gorgeous. I got to see what "I" look like while buggering my husband. Very hot.

Although I have to say, Falcon is fit, but he doesn't hold a candle to our Ollie. He's not as good at riding a cock or sucking a cock, his smile isn't as lovely, his eyes don't sparkle. I wouldn't say this to him, because it would probably hurt his feelings, but he's like a sad copy of a copy. Looks enough like the original that you know what it's supposed to be, but doesn't even come close to being the same thing.

Anyway, I am off on one of my morning runs. Maybe I will come back to some more pretty shagging to watch!

Yours,
Harry

Saturday September 8th
GOOD MORNING WORLD!

Last night was exactly what I needed. I still feel like I'm riding a high of love and tenderness. If any of our kids asked to have a baby dragon as a pet at this very moment, I would not only say yes, but I'd go help them get one as soon as possible. Maybe even three!

This morning was also rather lovely, even though I took a detour through alarmed territory for a couple of seconds. I don't know when it was, but it was probably a few hours before I normally like to wake up. Viper decided to kiss me awake until I could consent for him to have his way with me. At first, all I knew was that I was being kissed. It took some time for me to wake up, but when I finally did, I immediately knew it was the Viper and not my Harry.

I pulled back and tried to push him away.

A sleepy yawn caught my attention. "It's alright, Draco. Harry said that he was hoping you'd get a chance to play too, since all you really did last night was get beat up," Oliver informed me from where he was watching while snuggling up to his other self.

"You really don't mind?" I asked to be certain.
"Nope. Watching Harry and him together was so bloody hot that I felt like I was going to explode, and I'm dead certain it'll be the same for the two of you. After all, our Harry prefers to bottom, but this one always tops. It'll be a bit of a treat to watch."

I grinned at that. "Well, if you really don't mind." I pulled the Viper back in for some more snogging. Snogging led to some hot shagging that got even better when you returned and wiggled yourself underneath us so that I was in the middle of a hot Harry sandwich.

Mmmmm.......

After exploding and drifting among the stars for a bit, I was woken back up by Muffy, who informed me that some of the kids were INSISTING that I bring them out shopping and to River's Song. I had no choice but to capitulate, but as I was getting dressed in our suite, Harry and both Olivers were off making lunch or something, leaving the Viper alone with me for a bit of a chat.

I asked him what Tiger was actually doing that made him work so much, and he told me that it was some mad idea about hosting a TriWizard Tournament. I explained why it was not such a mad idea after all. Viper shrugged and said that it might have been a brilliant idea if Draco hadn't JUST finished hosting an international Dueling Championship - which is utterly Brilliant! I know what I'm doing on Monday!

As for right now, I have to sign off before the kids murder me for 'wasting time dad!'

Giving them something they can feel... all my loving'!

Draco
Chapter 344

Chapter Summary

Harry's like: Seriously Draco? o.O

Draco,

After reading my recent email, an email where I go on and on about how pleased I am that you didn't get the Minister position because you wouldn't have enough time with your family, where I discussed how hard of a time Kisa, Blaise, and Ron are having with Hermione being gone so often, and in the two most recent emails you and I BOTH discussed how upset Viper is with Tiger, your take-away is to recreate the exact scenario which has been causing Tiger to be so absent with his family?

So absent that his husband, Viper, felt the need to cross over to the other universe so he could beat up someone whose face matches his husband's face.

I mostly kid!

Honestly Draco, dragons? Baby dragons? Three baby dragons? I know you sometimes call me a moron, but I know exactly what you're trying to do. No dragons! Baby or otherwise!

In all seriousness, the idea of an international dueling competition sounds fun. I also like the idea of the three of us taking long weekends when Ollie isn't needed at Hogwarts to travel internationally for "meetings" to potential nations. And I know you, and 'Mione of course, will plan and execute it brilliantly. Just don't forget that the entire reason you came up with the idea is because a lonesome husband was sadly pouring his heart out to you about how much he missed his love.

Please don’t make us miss you.

Maybe you both want to miss me though. A couple of things hit me when I read your last email. First of all, were you honestly worried that Viper was kissing you? Do you think I, or Ollie, would leave a naked man we know you're attracted to in our bed if we weren’t alright with you snogging him?

Weirdo.

Secondly, and the reason I said the both of you might want to miss me …. Which is a completely nonsense sentence. You can’t want to miss someone, either you want them gone or you miss them when they are, those two ideas don’t exactly work together. But what I mean is, am I annoying you both?

You said Oliver said something along the lines of “our Harry mostly wants to bottom.” Do you both not like that I usually bottom? I thought our preferences aligned pretty well with you being MOSTLY a top, myself being MOSTLY a bottom, and Ollie being a pretty consistent top/bottom, 50/50 split. Am I being selfish with my preferences? Do you both want me to top more?

I have no problem … No wait, strike that. Saying I have no problem with something implies that I would only be doing it for your sake. I should say, I enjoy topping, but more than anything I enjoy making my husbands feel good. I enjoy satisfying you both. So please be honest with me, am I being selfish with the top to bottom ratios?

Or am I being completely ridiculous and I should have just read that as “ooh, that’s a fun sight I don’t see as often, I am going to enjoy the show”?

I should probably take it that way huh? You both certainly seemed to enjoy the Harry sandwich. Although, I hate that when two of the same thing encases something else we tend to call it a ____ sandwich. Technically, it was a Draco sandwich with Harry bread. You don’t call it a ‘bread sandwich’ it’s a Peanut Butter and Jelly Sandwich!

And speaking of multiple ingredients in one sandwich, over the years we’ve had multiple single ingredient sandwiches. As a triad, we regularly have sandwiches in many different layering combinations. Now that we are potentially back in the playing world, at least with our doppelgangers, how many layers do you think we could accomplish while still thinking it’s fun and sexy? Do you think we could cock to arse to cock to cock to arse etc. all six of us?

I kind of like a challenge and I already call middle!

Hurry up and come home, don’t let those children trick you into spending their entire inheritance! Dinner should be ready soon and before you think about just stopping off at Zaire’s Langa or Café Exquis … I made your favorite!

Your Harry

Monday September 10th
My dearest loves,

After spending a few hours in the Forbidden Forest yesterday, I arrived home at the perfect time to help Oliver with his extreme horniness.

Viper had spent the day with his kids catching up on little things, like the fact that Delphini is considering having another child, Harrison and Parker seem to be doing well, Tommy may or may not have found a steady girlfriend, and Bellerophon is considering asking his girlfriend to marry him. He also learned that the one-off having Parker's baby has officially signed paperwork giving Parker sole custody of the sprog once it's born.

The Falcon had a long chat with our Oliver, letting him know that while he had a good time and is grateful for the experience, he is most definitely straight. He might be willing to play with Oliver again in the future - because playing with oneself doesn't count - but he's probably not going to want a full on playing session like we had. I feel sorry for him as he obviously doesn't know what he's missing! He's definitely going to miss that conga line you were talking about!

But Viper and Falcon returned home after dinner last night. Today, I got up at my normal time, serviced Oliver when he popped in for a quickie during his lunch break (while you were feeding the kids, sorry), performed my daily routine, and then headed over to the Ministry for the afternoon.

Hermione LOVES my (er, Tiger's) idea! We are definitely planning out how to host an international Dueling Championship. Thankfully, professional Dueling is a thing, and so, the hardest part might be finding all the addresses to send invitations to.

While I was here, I popped in on Robards to see how that case Ginger is working was going. Sadly, it's going slowly, as she can't find anything on Kevin Miller at the moment that is incriminating. Just a regular hookup on Saturday nights in a posh Hotel room. So with nothing more to discuss, I returned home in time for Oliver to come back from Hogwarts and damn near wear us out.

Harry... I might have actually strained something! Good thing I know healing spells.

Love you both!
You're the medicine and the pain, the tattoo inside my brain, and baby you know it's obvious, I'm a sucker for you,
Draco
Chapter 345

Chapter Summary

Harry is loving the stay at home dad thing.

Tuesday September 11, 2018

My Best Friends,

I can't even begin to tell you how much I am loving this Stay at Home Dad thing! I should have done this YEARS ago!

I wake up in the arms of my loves. I get to go for a lovely morning run, sometimes alone and sometimes with 1-2 toddlers strapped to me. I don't however, ever take all three with when I go for runs. I skip running that day or I take a later run and drop them off with a grandparent for an hour or so. Or, wait, I should probably back up a bit. I pretty much never run alone. By alone, I meant without having to wear one of the babies but I still always have at least one running buddy.

Nora usually runs with me towards the end when I'm doing my cooldown. Atreyu just likes to find me, run next to me long enough to tell me about one of his animals, and then take off. Lily and Seph don't run often, but when they do, they usually like to find me about midway through my run. But Caelum has really taken up as my regular, beginning to end, running buddy. He's so agreeable, he loves to spend time with his age-mate siblings, if I didn't have these mornings with him, I think I'd be afraid of him slipping under my radar. I've loved every moment of catching up with my little guy.

Jaz and Vani have come out and spent time with me later in the day, but they, Zaire, and Shtara have absolutely zero interest in running with me. That's not completely true, Zaire would have some interest but mornings are his favorite baking time so he has other priorities.

By the time I'm done running and back to our rooms, I usually have a little bit of time to spend with Ollie before he heads off to teach. And I often have time to have a light lunch with Draco while he has his breakfast.

But the majority of my day is spent with these littlest kids of ours. We play with the animals in the stables. Side note: now that we don't have to be so particular about Morgana, she really loves wandering around the owlery. So if you ever come home and find feathers decorating her glossy hair, that's probably why. The kids climb all over the playground, we have midday quiet snuggles while we watch cartoons in the family room, and I get all the sticky hugs and kisses any one man could possibly handle.

Seriously, how did it take me this long to realize this is amazing? I get that I am in a bit of the honeymoon phase and will have bad days here or there, and days when I will feel like losing my mind if I have to sing one more nursery rhyme or watch one more episode of toddler cartoons, but for now this is just the best thing that's happened to me in a very long time. And in a few months time I will have a little Serenity to add to my days!

But today is not quite as mellow as I thought it would be when I woke up. I just received a message from Radin and Pantea Avin, Jasmine's biological grandparents, saying they decided to take us up on our offer to come to Wiltshire to visit Jaz. Which is obviously wonderful, but in their letter they mention that they've been nervous about actually coming out here to such an unknown place, so they didn't want to leave much time between deciding to come and actually setting out.

Which means their letter arrived today and they arrive tomorrow. Just enough time that if we didn't want them coming there's enough time to tell them now isn't a good time, but not enough time for them to work themselves up into a panic.

Oh, and they're bringing Rohzan and Kaveh as well.

I'm not sure where they'll want to stay so I'm spending today making sure the cabin is ready in case they want to stay there, making sure there are rooms within the Manor all in one area in case they want to be here, and I've called ahead to the Wizarding Hotel near Diagon and we have a suite reserved just in case they'd feel more comfortable in their own space.

This is so exciting but a little terrifying if I'm honest. The scariest part? They didn't say how long they were staying!

Okay, off to air out some rooms.

Love,
Harry

Wednesday September 12th
My dearest Oliver,

I think you might be happy to be at Hogwarts and not in the chaos that is the Manor today. The Avins arrived around 10AM. I personally was still asleep, but I wasn't the important one that needed to greet them.

As I understand it (Muffy and Dibby told me what happened), the Avins arrived to the rather intimidating sight of Harry holding Jaz' hand, Delphini and Sebastian holding Vanessa's hands, and my parents standing behind them all. Leah was on hand so that Jaz could make the introductions. Jaz explained that Sebastian was her uncle, that he and Delphini had adopted Vanessa, and that Delphini wanted to see for herself the people who were going to be spending a bit of time with her daughter (because Vani is almost always glued to Jaz). True to her word, Delphini was scrutinizing the Avins as if dead certain they were serial killers.

Then Jaz moved on to introduce my parents, who were in full Malfoy superiority mode. They graciously (if a bit coldly) welcomed the Avins to our home. Apparently Jaz sensed that my parents were unintentionally (or probably intentionally) making the Avins feel uncomfortable, so she tugged on my father's hand and asked him directly via BSL if he would please take off his Malfoy Mask and SMILE while inviting them to stay in a guest suite.

He tried to pretend like he had no idea what she was talking about, and then tried to negotiate a bit, but eventually settled for capitulating. He apparently gave the Avins a small but friendly smile as he then let them know that a guest suite had been prepared for them. Then he added that if the Avins should want anything at all, all they needed to do was ask for an elf to come help them.

Jaz gestured for my father to get on his knees (because he's so much taller than her) so that she could hug him and give him a kiss on the cheek. Then they took the Avins on a tour of the Manor.
One of the first things that seemed to overwhelm them was that Shtara was in the ballroom with an entire troupe of actors.

Apparently, her ambition has changed from simply starring in plays to starring and DIRECTING plays that she has written. So her brilliant self hired a full cast for a play that is based loosely on her life, depicting the struggle for a girl from the streets to make it big. To no surprise, it is full of powerful songs. Her plan is that once they're ready, she wants to take them on a bit of a tour of all the smaller venues, playing for a weekend or two here and there until they either fail or are invited to play bigger places.

Although, if it looks like they might fail, she has hinted that I could always by one of the bigger theaters and subtly suggest that they feature her, hahaha!

When the tour hit the dinning room, Zaire was ever so delighted because he'd spent all morning experimenting with new recipes to try on us before trying them on his customers. Thus, the dinning room looked a bit like a buffet for a luxury cruise. He wouldn't let anyone leave until they'd tried everything and given their opinions on it.

The tour eventually continued, only to be waylaid by a loud indignant shriek coming from the ice skating rink in the east wing. It seems that Lily was irate that her brothers and Persephone had decided that they should play something that seemed to be a combination of hockey and polo. Caelum was riding a unicorn, Atreyu was riding a thestral, and Persephone was in a harness that was attached to a rope anchored to the ceiling so that she could sort of fly around the ice rink as she played. This also allowed her to climb the rope at random and 'dive bomb' the others.

Harry was left to decide how to handle that as my parents continued on with the tour.

By this point in time, I was awake and eating breakfast in bed before starting on my morning routine. Since Harry wasn't feeding them and they hadn't been part of Zaire's tasting, the three current littlest were in bed with me, eating with their pudgy hands and making an absolute mess. Muffy was subtly trying to clean the mess as they made it, muttering about having to immediately wash the bedspread the moment we were off it.

I have no idea what, but something was making the littles LAUGH. They were laughing so hard over what seemed to be a private joke between them that I was afraid they were going to choke on their food. But they didn't. Instead, they attracted the attention of the tour as it passed by our suite. So, Jaz led the rest of them into our bedroom to find out what was causing the laughter - as her siblings had asked her what was going on.

Not able to determine the cause of the laughter either, Jaz sat on the bed with us for a moment so she could rapidly sign a few questions. The most important one was that she REALLY wanted some spending money so that she could bring her visiting family on a good tour of London. Agreeing that this was a good idea, I summoned some muggle cash out of my carry all watch. As I went to hand it over, my mother interrupted me.

"Draco! Really? That's ALL you plan to give her?"

"It's all I have on me at the moment," I defended.

"Looks like grandma will have to fix this," she murmured, pulling a coin purse full of Galleons out of her robes and handing it to Jaz. She then signed: Just have Leah help you exchange this at Gringott's before you go out into London.

Jaz gave mum a big hug and a kiss on the cheek.
"Oi! Where's my love? I gave you money too!" I protested. Jaz gave me a kiss on the cheek and then rapidly signed that she and Vani were probably going to take off now to bring the Avins on that tour of London. Delphini took a last scrutiny of them and gave her consent for Vani to go.

I held up a hand. "Just remember, they Portkeyed here from a different time zone. Chances are they're going to get tired after only a couple of hours, so try not to overdo it."

Jaz nodded in understanding, gave me another kiss on the cheek, and then ran off to show her family to their suite so that she could help them verify that the elves had already unpacked their belongings, and then they could Floo over to Gringott's to exchange that money.

It was only after they left that I realized I'd rudely neglected to say hi to the Avins, so hopefully they don't think I'm the worst father in the world.

In any case, I'm done with my morning routine and am going to head off to the Ministry for a few hours to help with the invitations now that we have a complete list of people and organizations to invite to an international championship. See you when I get home!

I get so weak in the knees I can hardly breathe,
Draco
Chapter 346

Chapter Summary

Harry is feeling a little overwhelmed by Jaz's tour.

My Loves,

Send Help!

Wait, wait, everything is fine! That was a silly and a bit sarcastic "send help," not an actual statement of danger.

After I sorted out the ice rink debacle ... which by the way was just Lily being furious because she was afraid the hooves were going to damage her precious rink. Once I assured her that the ice was spelled to avoid damage, no normal wear and tear like a muggle ice rink would be from skate marks and all that, she was then upset because she missed out on the fun because she had been so worried. So, as I started saying, after I sorted out the ice rink debacle, I went to find the group.

Calming Lily had taken so long that I actually caught up with the group on their tour. I realized it was just the small handful of them going on their tour of London and I offered to pop back home and let them go on their merry way. I was told that was absolutely silly and I should join them. I am so glad I chose to take them up on that offer. It was the best, and most hilarious, London tour I've ever been on.

See, when most people tour such an iconic place, they end up at the traditional tourist spots; Big Ben, riding a double decker bus, Westminster Abbey, Tower Bridge, right? Wrong. I popped in on their Harry Potter tour. Yeah, you heard that right. Our daughter actually took them on a Muggle tour of Harry Potter sights based on the book series about me. We went to King's Cross and the Warner Brothers Studio tour. It was hilarious and the funniest part was no one recognized me!

We had coffee at The Attendant, which is a converted toilet that is now a café. We burned out our retinas at God's Own Junkyard, a neon sign gallery/museum/thing. And then we went kayaking on the Thames.

But now we're all headed for dinner at Zaire's Langa, so you should round up the rest of the crew and come join us!

Love,
Harry

Wednesday September 12th

My silly little Harry,

I bet when you said round up the rest of the crew, you didn't literally mean everyone I could get a hold of. But I took you literally - since you so often do that to me, haha. I called up Viona to see if she, Cassie, and Alric were up for dinner at Zaire's Langa. Then I called Hazel and invited her and Pearl. Next I Insta-owled Sebastian and Delphini to let them know that Vani and Jaz (etc.) were having dinner at Zaire's. Parker and Harrison both responded that they were more than happy to leave the Hog's Head for a couple of hours to join us. As were Tommy and Bellerophon. And Jules.

After that, I Insta-owled both Siri and Zwei (and our Oliver, of course), asking them to consider leaving Hogwarts before eating dinner so that they could join us. Shtara was too busy with her troupe to stop for dinner, until I mentioned that they could always come with. Lastly, I rounded up the Feisty Foursome, Nora, our toddlers, and Sirius and his boys because he caught wind that Leah was already with your group, and naturally Pippa would be at my back. Also, my parents didn't want to eat alone tonight.

Thus when we arrived, it was en force. Good thing Zaire has plenty of room in his restaurant, hahaha! Even so, it was a tiny bit unfair of us to show up at dinner time when his restaurant is at its most crowded. If he didn't have wizarding space set aside specifically for us, I'd have graciously declined the invite.

During dinner, Leah laughed softly and told me how there were several people throughout the day that whispered to each other something along the lines of: "Blimey, that bloke over there looks like he's impersonating Harry Potter! Must be a big fan. I wonder what the real Harry Potter looks like now, he must be getting OLD!" Hahahahahaha!

Maybe you should write another book and go on tour with it so that all your millions of fans see what you look like currently and don't mistake you for an impersonator, haha!

In any case, dinner was as boisterous as ever. Jaz and Vani were excited because they've been nominated for an award for quality children's programming. Rohzan begged her grandparents to take her to one of the theaters' shows - Cats or something. Kaveh - despite being a couple of years younger than them - was getting on with Siri and Zwei, and was beside himself when they invited him to visit Hogwarts for a bit after classes were over tomorrow so that he could watch a Quidditch Practice.

As dinner was winding down, Shtara mentioned that she was considering adding a firedance to the play she's creating, but before she could make her decision either way, she needed to see if her actors were CAPABLE of doing it. Which led to me agreeing to try to teach them. Tonight.

So, now that I've settled on the perfect drumming soundtrack to practice to, I'm about to lead ALL our kids that are home and Shtara's entire troupe through a firedance. I am quite looking forward to looking over to see my beloved husbands watching me with lust in their eyes.

I don't want to be somebody without your body close to me,
Draco
Chapter 347

Chapter Summary

It's a lovely day with a minor hiccup.

Chapter Notes

See the end of the chapter for notes.

Thursday September 13, 2018

My Everything,

I was rereading yesterday's email about the lovely dinner we all had together, and the upcoming fire dancing (which was amazing obviously), and just random rambling about the day we were having prior to dinner. But I couldn't get the sentence "I wonder what the real Harry Potter looks like now, he must be getting OLD!" out of my head.

See, this is one of those things where I feel differently than most people on the subject of aging. I know people think about getting older and it freaks them out, they worry about wrinkles and grey hair, they panic that they no longer know what's 'cool', and depending on how old they are getting they start thinking about death.

I have such a different perspective. I love getting older. I really do. Every line next to my eyes reminds me of the thirty-eight years of laughter I've had. Every grey hair I find, although at this point they are very rare, reminds me that I've had almost twenty years of my beloved crazy family turning my hair grey with their antics. And every time I think about how getting older means getting that much closer to death, it reminds me that I will likely have the privilege of living a long wonderful life and aging out of life instead of being killed.

I lost, we all lost, so many people in the war who will never have to, never GET to, get wrinkles or grey hairs. Like my Fred, who only ever earned twenty years of laugh lines. Tonks, who never got to hear her child tease her about getting older. And mostly my parents, who never got the opportunity to get older.

And I realized it's been much too long since I've visited my parents. So, while my handsome men are off working ... bringing home the bacon ... clocking in their nine to fives, I decided it was a beautiful day to take the littlest off to visit their Grandma Lily and Grandpa James. And while I was packing up a picnic basket Sirius came into the kitchen to grab some food for his boys. When I told him where I was going he invited himself, Leon, and Pierre along. I packed some extra food and we headed out.

Jaz was out doing more sightseeing with the Avins while Seph, Lissa, and Cael have recently decided to give Traditions a try, so our little crew was just me, Trey, Nora Madeline, the trio of toddlers, Sirius, and Sirius' boys. It really speaks to just how many kids we have when I talk about how small our group was and it includes five children aged six and under.

For an afternoon spent in a cemetery, we've had a surprisingly lovely time. We spread out a blanket, had a nice lunch, and Sirius and I told the kids all about my parents. Obviously Sirius had a lot more stories to tell, but I managed to get a word in here or there. I cried, Nora cried, Trey got glassy-eyed, and Sirius sobbed like a baby.

Not that I want him to forget my parents, not that I think a new friendship will take away what he's missed all these years, but I think I am going to spend the next few months working on getting Sirius either a new set of friends, or a significant other, or both. I think he's really lonely. He has his boys, and they've been amazing for him, he's a fantastic Dad, but he needs a set of adults he can spend time with. People he can share his life with that can talk back to him in full sentences!

Although, Leon actually is signing full sentences so I should probably stop using that as a descriptor!

So, I have two months before little Serenity comes and I will likely be too exhausted to pull off a matchmaking service to help Sirius build his own circle.

Any ideas?

Anyway, we chatted and cried, ate our lunch, the littles ran around for a while, and now I'm writing to you while the toddlers nap. I hate that this is how my kids get to spend time with their grandparents, but if this is how it has to be, it's pretty special to see them all cozy and cuddling in the sunshine. After they wake up I think I need to give them a bit more of a fun Grandparent experience, so I'm going to spend the rest of the afternoon with Molly and Arthur.

Come join us if either of you get off work early?

Yours,
Harry

Friday September 14th
My wonderful worriers,

Everything is fine. Honestly, if I didn't tell you that we had a minor hiccup today, you wouldn't ever even know that anything had happened, but since I know you'll want to know, I'll tell you.

So what happened was that Hermione and I were in her office have a planning session for that international Dueling Championship, such as when to actually host it and where. Well, I pointed out that we could easily use the same venue as we did for the Triwizard Tournament, and she said that there should really be a more convenient venue for events where people don't necessarily need to use an entire Quidditch Pitch sized arena.

Which led to a discussion of whether the Ministry should invest in an event center, or if a private citizen should do it. So I naturally agreed to organize a team to get it done. Then we argued over whether or not that would be seen as favoritism for the Minister to give me the opportunity to do this without even discussing it with anyone else, and that argument got heated enough that we actually stripped down a bit and cast cooling charms.

That's when the minor hiccup happened. See it was technically after hours, thus NO ONE had an appointment to see the Minister, and her secretary (who prevents people from going into her office unannounced) had gone home for the evening. Therefore, the ONLY people that should have had access to the Minister's office should have been Ministry employees who were working late. Often, department heads do pop in unannounced after hours simply because they're working late due to pressing matters, and they know that Hermione will almost certainly still be in.
Today, it seems a person had entered the Ministry at around noon or so - at a point when the Ministry was very busy - passed through security check in, and basically found a nice empty office to wait in until after everyone else had left. Mostly.

Around 7 PM - just as we were considering calling it a night - this person burst into Hermione's office and managed to get a garrote made out of rope around her neck. This person either had no idea that anyone else would be in her office with her, or otherwise thought that I wouldn't be a threat. Unfortunately for him, but fortunately for Hermione, I was most definitely a threat. I Krav Magaed the man to the floor and had him incarcerated before he could fully register that his plans had gone awry.

So, if you're wondering why I'm not coming home when I said I was planning to, it's because Hermione and I are in a meeting with Robards and Roche. We've even called in the Head of the DMLE. And so, this might take some time before we even get around to questioning the culprit.

But since I have a few minutes before this meeting gets going, I just wanted to say that firedancing the other night was not just fun but relaxing. I can't remember why I don't do it more often. I might need to get back into the habit of doing it as part of my morning routine.

And did you see the Avins? Specifically Radin and Pantea. When they realized that Jasmine not only knew how to firedance already, but THEN had Rohzan and Kaveh beg to learn too... I thought they were going to have a panic attack, hahaha! But those kids correctly assumed that knowing how to firedance would be cool, and a fun way to show off.

Not surprisingly, I like those kids ^_^

Oh! Looks like the Head of the DMLE just showed up. I suppose it's time to get this party started. Hmm... I think I should call for Muffy to cater this since not many of us are likely to have eaten yet.

See you when I get home, whenever that may be.

They say dance for me dance for me dance for me, oh oh oh!
Draco

Chapter End Notes

When you are picturing the looks of horror on the older Avins' faces as their grandkids beg to learn firedancing, keep in mind that Draco insists that everyone be naked to minimize the risk of things catching on fire, lol ^_^
Chapter 348

Chapter Summary

Harry is rather angry at Draco and Draco explains what happened.

Friday September 14, 2018

Draco Lucius Malfoy!

You don't open your email with "there was a minor hiccup" then proceed to tell me all about bureaucratic planning for an upcoming event, and THEN move onto "Oh, by the way, someone tried to murder one of your best friends." I'm going through the email, reading it in the order it was written ... like a CHUMP, to come across the most important bit of information more than halfway through the message.

If my rage wasn't so focused on whoever dared attack Hermione you would be in serious trouble damn it!

But all of my rage is most definitely focused on whatever piece of human garbage tried to attack my 'Mione! I promised Oliver I wouldn't call in any more favors from Grandmama anymore. Well, at least THOSE kinds of favors, I'm still going to call her up when I want some help figuring out how to help Morgana or when I really need to try and outfox Narcissa. But if and when anything happens, just know that I most definitely did not call her. I won't need to. You both know that Grandmama loves me, but she doesn't love anyone quite the way she loves Kisa and Kisa's wife was just attacked.

You should probably jump inside that guy's head to make sure there isn't an accomplice or any additional information you can get from him before his head goes missing. And soon.

Don't worry about hurrying home, we're all safe and sound here at the Manor. Right now keeping the Minister safe and punishing the criminal should be the main priority. We get that.

And if you're reading this while killing time, I have an idea for the event center problem.

Yes Draco, this is how you bring something like this up ... AFTER the important conversation about the assassination attempt!

Anyway, instead of putting together a team to build the event center, why don't you put together a team who will assess different project proposals. If you open up the project to the Wizarding World at large, you can ask for bids and proposals. That way when it's decided who's getting the contract you will have a paperwork trail and proof of why that business was chosen to do the building. It will be the most affordable or the best design or a mixture of both. Either way, no one will be able to argue favoritism since the team will have chosen based on a certain set of criteria.

Obviously, I assume you and whatever business you'd be using will be the best, but if someone else is chosen, it will at least be one less thing on your plate right now to deal with.

Seriously, I think I need some of that healing salve of yours. Oliver's libido is getting more demanding! How is that even possible? I've visited him in between every single one of his classes today! And we've been switching up topping and bottoming. I thought that would mean neither of us would get quite as sore since we split the friction between the two locations. No! Now I'm just double chaffed!

Help!
Harry

Saturday September 15th - around 2 AM
My loves,

I just got home and am dictating this as I get ready for bed in the loo. I have surprisingly little to report. Once we had that big meeting I told you about, it was more or less unanimously decided that I should poke around the culprit's head and find every scrap of information I could. See, most criminals have rights and just going in and reading their mind actually violates those rights, and so, that's why Fierston and I have never had our skills officially documented.

Also, they only send either of us in when the case is important - like a murder or a missing child.

In any case, THIS criminal literally gave up all his rights when he tried to assassinate the current Minister for Magic - as that is considered treason. Treason automatically authorizes the use of anything and everything we deem necessary, and also might just result in execution. NOT the kind where a person is kissed by a Dementor and may as well be dead for how alive they are, but ACTUAL execution. In this case, probably a quick and painless AK.

So, with everyone in the room on up to the Minister herself telling me to go take a look around this bloke's head, that's what I did. The actual trip into his mind took several hours, but that was mostly because he had a bunch of shields in place and it took a lot of time to examine them all and determine how to slip around them.

When I finally got in - side note, they had called Fierston in to basically watch me work as he had never before had to get into a mind so well guarded, aside from mine, which he's never actually gotten into fully. Anyway, when I finally got in, I learned that our criminal is... how to put it... legitimately crazy. That's not going to stop him from being punished, but it makes me a tiny bit sympathetic to him.

See, he has a rather small group of friends, and when he hangs out with them, he never really talks. In fact, based off his memories, I'm not entirely sure he CAN talk. If he can, literally NO ONE ever asks him to say anything, and so, he never does.

Now, this small group of friends is part of a larger group of... acquaintances? Schoolmates? Regular partiers? Not sure, but basically this relatively large group of people come together regularly to drink, faff about, and babble about every little thought that enters their empty heads.

Both of you would probably listen to that chatter and think the same thing I did, that it means nothing but the random temporary thoughts of mildly (or sometimes heavily) drunk people. But when our criminal heard a lot of them complain about the Minister for various reasons, HE got it into his head that they were telling him that all their lives would be better if she no longer existed.

Now don't get me wrong, the chatter wasn't anything so dramatic as: "That Minister is doing a bad job and REALLY needs to go!" It was normal things like: "I can't believe the Minister legalized multiple marriages!" "I can't believe the Minister is married to two men and a woman!" "I can't believe the Minister spent so many Galleons on the Triwizard Tournament!" Things that could be compliments or complaints depending on how the person felt about those things.

Our Criminal took them all as complaints, and here's where the crazy comes in. He decided that the only way to 'fix' those complaints was to get rid of the Minister for Magic. Permanently.

Now you might be wondering how - if this bloke's so crazy - then why are his shields so strong? Well, it's BECAUSE he's crazy. They weren't purposely created, they grew as his mental instability grew and are natural. Which is why I was able to eventually slip around them.

But even with all that information I was able to find in his mind, I could NOT find his name, or his address, and any sort of identifying information. Normally, that might come up in conversations, but for this bloke, no one talked to him that he remembered. No one addressed him or called him by name.

Thus the Aurors have a job trying to find out exactly who this criminal is, but once they do - and probably even if they don't - they are more than likely going to sentence him to the maximum sentence. Although, much like you, I suspect he won't MAKE it to his sentencing. Not that I will have ANY idea what happened should he mysteriously lose his head.

But I'm ready for bed now, so I'm going to sign off and see if I can take care of some of Oliver's horniness before going to sleep.

I'd spend 10,000 hours and 10,000 more, oh, if that's what it takes to learn those sweet hearts of yours,
Draco
P.S. Harry, I put that salve in your bedside table drawer. I also slathered some on you while you slept.
Chapter 349

Chapter Summary

Harry's off doing something for Sirius, and Oliver and Draco are teasing him while he's gone.

Saturday September 15, 2018

Dearest,

You'd spend 10,000 hours and then 10,000 more? I know it sounds like a lot, but it's really not all that much when you think about it! It's one of those numbers that sounds like a lot, but when you break it down isn't all that much.

So, let's say it is going to take you 10,000 plus 10,000 hours to learn our hearts. That gives us 20,000 total hours.

For our first calculation, let's assume we spend six hours per day with each other. Because you're not going to learn our hearts while we're sleeping or while you're both at work and I'm at home so we're not even together. And six hours is probably being generous with how busy we are. Then on weekends we're more likely to spend the majority of the day together, so let's say Saturdays and Sundays are twelve hours per day. So six hours per day five days a week and twelve hours per day twice a week is thirty plus twenty-four which gives us fifty-four hours per week. Fifty-four hours per week times fifty-two weeks per year gives us two thousand eight hundred and eight learnable hours per year. That means you would completely know our hearts in only seven and twelve hundredths of a year.

Second calculations would assume you could be learning our hearts even if we weren't together or awake. Some sort of learning by osmosis I guess. So divide twenty-thousand by twenty-four hours in a day and you'll have us all learned up in eight hundred thirty three and a third days which is only two and twenty-eight hundredths of a year.

Divide both of those estimates in half since there are two of us, you could learn each of us in only 3.56 years or only 1.14 years if we go with the osmosis approach. Then divide either of those by half again since you said ten thousand hours and only added on the second ten thousand just in case, implying we're probably learnable after only the original ten thousand and you imply that you could have each of us fully learned in only 1.78 years or as low as .57 of a year.

A little over six months is apparently all you need to know our hearts. I can't speak for Ollie, but I think I am much more complex than half a year Draco!

Or my other thought was you were probably doing some sort of song lyric and ... awww that's sweet, I love you too!

Anyway, this is one of those rare Saturdays where I will certainly see you both, but probably not the full twelve hours I mentioned during my calculations. See, I promised myself and Sirius that I was going to work on building up his group of friends. But here's the problem, all the people I think are special and trustworthy and fun enough to be in our personal circle are already in our circle. But Sirius needs some people that he didn't gain through being my Godfather ya know?

So, I heard about this dating app. It's not a dating app ... or I suppose it's not ONLY a dating app. Basically it is a dating app but it has a friend-making area of the app. So even though I am very happily married and completely uninterested in dating, I can be on the site in the friend area and potentially match up with someone who is also interested in forging new friendships.

Well, I didn't want to just throw Sirius into the deep end and force him to create his own profile, learn on his own, and have to set up meetups and all that. So I created a fake profile. Not really a fake profile per se, just watered down version of myself to test out the app before I let Sirius loose on it. So I have a few potential meetups today to make sure it's a legitimate friend thing and not just a hookup app masquerading as a friendship app.

I promise they're not dates! I have all I need at home. Hell, with how sore my arse and cock are, I have more than enough! Not that I would even if I weren't sore, and definitely not complaining about how much action I've been getting, just trying to reassure you both how in love with you I am and give you a warning just in case you are thinking it's weird that I'm on this kind of app and meeting up with strangers.

Love you,
Harry

Saturday September 15th
Our darling Harry,

If I was writing for just me, I would say: "Go on and have fun, love. Hook up to your Heart's content. I trust and love you no matter what." But since I literally just wrote that and Oliver read it and gave me a look, I'm pretty sure I'm suppose to amend that to: "Go on and have fun so long as you stick to our rules." However, since one of those rules is that we're ALL supposed to be together during all fun, I'm thinking that Oliver's definition of fun is far different than my own.

So, to start over. Our Darling Harry, go on and have fun but not TOO much fun and please stick to our rules and not have to beg for our forgiveness later.

Sound good Oliver?

Oliver here, Draco's making this sound more dramatic and picky than I am actually being. I trust you completely. I know that your heart belongs to us.

I'm not talking about his heart, Oliver, I put a collar on that decades ago. I'm talking about his shaft, but by his own words, that's much too sore to do anything anyway. I wonder if my salve expired? I should make a new batch.

Draco! Don't encourage Harry to break the rules!

Like I need to encourage him to do that! He's been breaking rules ever since I met him.

But! But! You SAY that you collared his heart decades ago, yet he still managed to fall in love with ME!

That was fate, love, and not something that's likely to happen ever again.

But what if it does???
Then we get another husband, I suppose. Can't ONE of you fall into a platonic but deep and enduring love with a WOMAN so I can have a wife too? Not that I need a wife, but that it would be interesting to have a fellow bitch around when I'm in a mood.

ARE YOU DRUNK?!

Erm... Maybe just a bit...

Draco!

Yeah...

DRACO...

What?!

Our dearest Harry, I apparently must amend this once again. Under no circumstances fall in platonic love with a woman and make her our wife.

DRACO!!!

WHAT??!

WHY DO YOU EVEN HAVE THAT IN MIND?!!?

Huh? … Oh! You know, I think I'm just a little drunk and a bit horny, and then I read that Harry's off 'making friends' for his godfather, and it got me thinking that I haven't even had that sort of fun with my friends in ages.

AAAND???

And I'm thinking about it, is all. Come 'ere! I need to put my mouth all over my pregnant husband.

But Draco! Draco! Dra.... mmm... Yeah, keep doing that...

Dictation device can't translate the noises, so it sends the email without a sign off.
Harry is a bit horrified, Draco's tipsy and highly amused, and Oliver is temporarily sated ^_^
Okay, I suppose that makes sense, you can't be too careful. I ignored the fact that she called it a date because there's not really a word for a blind date in the hopes of getting a friendship out of the deal. That was my first mistake.

We ended up making light conversation around appetizers and a few more drinks. I didn't order alcoholic drinks myself, I wanted to make sure I didn't get the booze giggles so I'd be able to tell Sirius all about his potential new friend. She definitely had enough drinks to be buzzed but nowhere near utterly pissed. We're there for a solid hour when I turn around again and the guy she brought with is still sitting behind us, staring at us, and hasn't ordered so much as a water. Just sitting at an empty table watching our meeting.

I Gryffindor-up and decide to just talk about the creepy elephant in the room, why is he still here? Why is he watching us? Does she still feel unsafe with me? What is going on?

That's when she admits that she isn't just trying to date me for herself but she wants to bring me home. He likes to watch.

Wait what?!?

Yeah, she was on the friend version of the app, and instead of friendship, she wanted a one time hookup so she could bring me home to have her HUSBAND watch her get railed.

I let out a really high pitched giggle, said I needed the loo, and apparated the hell out of there. I'm now sitting in the back room at River's song waiting for my head to toe body scrub. I need to wash the yuck off before I come home.

What is wrong with people?!?

Yours,
Harry

BUWAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHA!

AHAAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHA!
HAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHA!

Oh Harry! I just ahahahahahahahaha! I can't stop laughing!

I love it!

Yes, still a tad drunk, but not too drunk to appreciate the fact that you went on a friend date - for Sirius - and they were a married couple that wanted to watch the wife be shagged by the great Harry Potter!!!!!! AHAAHAHAHAHAHAHAHA!

You know, had Sirius went, he might have actually taken them up on the offer, hahaha!

But then he probably would have tried to get the husband more involved then he really wanted to be ^_^ hahahahahahahahaha!

Poor Padfoot, maybe Viper should come back over and give him a good seeing to. Hey Oliver! It's a shame that you never got to - well not see exactly as neither of us watched it or anything, but a long time ago, Harry once walked in on Viper shagging Padfoot and he needed to be obliviated - which he obviously wasn't, but you know the feeling.
I feel like it's a waste of time going on a 'looking for friends' site, because - as a man who is also interested in women and happens to have a solid bad streak in him - it seems like whenever men SAY they just want to be friends with women, it's really because they're playing a long (hopefully not that long) game of make her feel comfortable enough to consider shagging. Which is not to say that the friendship is completely fake or invalid, just that men who have a hard time (or maybe don't look good enough to attract one offs) can feel a little bit better about themselves if they go the friendship route first.

BUT - setting all of that aside, hahahahahahahaha! Unless you used an entirely fake name/picture and went to the date using glamours, just the fact that you somewhat LOOK like Harry Potter would have had ALL the people on the friendship app hoping for more! I predict that in nine months from now, we're going to have another little Haz on our hands ^_^

As for the wife thing, I DID say platonic. I don't really want or need a wife, to be honest, and I never for one second thought that you wanted or needed one too. I just thought it would be interesting to have a woman around who is much like Pansy that I can be bitchy with and have a good row with and - OH! Say Harry, want to have a shouting match with me? It's been a while -

Oop! Looks like Oliver is getting mad at me. Seems like my polishing off of the bottle of wine (two of them, actually) has made him jealous. I'm gonna need to go over and polish him off too ^_^

You said that I tricked ya (tricked ya), 'cuz I, I didn't look like my profile picture, Draco
Chapter 351

Sunday September 16, 2018

Nooooo!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!

Okay, I need to clear up a few things! First of all, my profile on the app doesn't say I'm Harry Potter! It doesn't say I'm Harry Malfoy-Wood either. I used the name James, which isn't a lie, it's my middle name. And while I used an actual photo of myself as my profile picture, it was heavily filtered so it wasn't blatantly obvious it was me. I'm sure this sounds ridiculously egotistical, but if I made it obvious who I was I wouldn't get a moment's peace! I know better than to use my name and face on a public app like that!

And I didn't specifically look for a woman either! I set it at not caring if it were a man or a woman and the first person whose profile and mine got a connection just happened to be this woman.

We have been very lucky in having a close-knit group of friends that we've known for most of our lives. Sure, we've added to that list with people who married into our circle or we met through some business or other connection. But, for the most part, we haven't truly had to make new friends since we were eleven years old! Many people just aren't so lucky. Friends move away or pass away. Or you grow and change realizing you don't have much in common with the people you grew up with. I don't think it's such a crazy idea that grown adults would have a hard time finding new friendships!

I'm going to keep trying, hopefully I just happened upon this one bad apple who wanted something besides friendship and my Godfather's new best friend is only a click away!

Shut up! I can hear you in my head Draco! It's not Gryffindor naivety, it's Gryffindor optimism!

Anyway, all this talk about friendships reminded me it's been much much too long since I've spent time with my best friends. Well, at least my non-husband best friends, I love Ron and 'Mione but the two of you are the best friends I will ever have in my life.

So, I invited the Quartet and their kids to come over for tea and gossip. I'm not sure if Rod and Bee are coming, they are such a big grown-up eighteen after all and may have cooler things to do than to hang out with their parents and their uncles. But I hope they do, I always love getting extra time with my Godchildren, even when they're no longer children. And actually now that I have a few adult Godchildren I really enjoy it. I no longer have to be any sort of a parental role, I just get to be their friend. It's amazing.

Anyway, as I was saying, Rod and Bee may or may not come, but Ronni and Staci are coming. Since it's Sunday, I guess they are home from school for the weekend and wanted to come with. Obviously Tristan and Misha will come, they never pass up a chance to make mischief with our feisty foursome. And I can't believe we haven't set up a play date earlier, or maybe I do we ARE always busy, but I think Tatyana and Nora will get along like peas and carrots! That will leave Aleksei to toddle around with our babies while us parents gossip and keep an eye on them.

Would you lazybones hurry up and wake up already? They should be here in about two hours and you're both still snoozing away!

Ooooh, I know ... Incoming!

Harry
Sunday September 16th
Good Morning!

That wake up was certainly an excellent way to begin the day ^_^

So there we were, recovering in bed, when our Quartet arrived. They had already popped in on my parents - who were watching our littles - and dropped their littles off. Plus, their bigger kids had basically made themselves at home in our Manor - meeting Jules, who decided to come here for the weekend too. He had hoped to meet up with Romeo, but Romeo apparently has a big report due tomorrow.

Anyway, that left us being heckled by our best mates for still being naked and in bed. I personally have no shame when it comes to being naked and in bed before noon on ANY day, but the two of you wanted us to get up and dressed so that we could at least pretend to be civilized.

The moment we were all three dressed, all of us having opted for quick cleaning spells rather than a shower, our friends called for their surprise guest to come in. Marcus Flint. It seems that he and Blaise were having drinks at the Leaky not too long ago, and they talked about how Oliver is currently the Flying Instructor/Quidditch referee at Hogwarts, and Marcus started reminiscing about the good old days.

Now I had absolutely no reason to think that a Slytherin and a Gryffindor might not get along, but it seems that Harry was dead certain that a brawl would break out between the two of them and refused to stand anywhere other than directly between them. However, their interaction was completely normal interhouse rivalry.

Marcus told Oliver that he had no idea why McGonagall hired him since Marcus was clearly a better choice, and Oliver vowed that even pregnant, he could outfly/outplay him. And that started their impromptu match. They actually are getting along surprisingly well, and Oliver looks like he's having a blast as he flies around exchanging insults with Marcus.

Satisfied that Oliver was having fun, I grabbed Blaise and snuck off with him so that we could do a bit of best friend shenanigans of our own. Which basically means that we got a little tipsy and bragged to each other about our sex lives. His still includes the fact that he has impossible to resist sex magic, and so, is quite colorful, but mine is still right up there for kinkiness considering who my husbands are.

Eventually, we were called out of hiding so that all of us adults could play poker. I took a quick break to go to the loo and recap our day before this begins, but I'm warning you both now, tipsy or not, I can still out poker everyone at the table!

Hair toss check my nails, baby how you feeling?
Draco
Chapter Summary

Harry's not good at poker, Draco's eating everything, and Oliver thinks Blaise smells SO good!

Sunday September 16, 2018

This is unfair! This is ridiculous. It's poppycock, utterly bonkers, it's ... it's ... it's malarkey is what it is! I, besides Ollie, am the only sober person playing poker in a group of drunken fools and I lose. I lost badly! I lost my pants ... literally! When I ran out of money you somehow tricked me into betting my pants! Now I'm going commando in my denims and it does not feel good!

I'm not sure if I'm glad that we set a limit on how much money we're each allowed to use in the game overall, an important rule in a group of wealthy people I'd think. Or if I'm annoyed we set a limit since I technically didn't lose any money, just transferred most of it from my own hands to my husbands' hands.

You know, I thought I'd gotten really good at the Malfoy Mask thing. When I'm not RHH I am able to keep my emotions off of my face. I really thought I had it down! But then playing poker with some of my closest friends and it was like they could read me like a book! Maybe that's the problem? I have a good public mask when needed, but those closest to me can see through it? Either way, it sucks and I hate losing!

You know who else hates losing? Oliver and Marcus! To clarify, I didn't think their Slytherin versus Gryffindor thing was the issue, it was the two of them as people. I love quidditch, I really do, but I've never met two people who care more about quidditch than our Oliver and Marcus Flint. It's a lifetime rivalry, I wasn't sure it would translate well into mature adulthood without bloodshed.

And there wasn't bloodshed, they've both definitely matured over the years. Not enough to lose the rivalry or to keep them from attempting to outfly each other for hours until they were finally dragged off the pitch. But definitely enough that I didn't actually have to worry that someone was going to do something that might harm my beautifully pregnant husband.

So beautiful. Ungh, Draco were you as rock hard in your trousers as I was watching our Ollie fly? I mean, he's always bloody fit, especially so when I get to watch him fly, but when he gets all red-cheeked and intense? When his competitive obsessive nature comes out? Ungh, it's like every fantasy my early teen self ever dreamt of: sexy Oliver Wood in full competition mode flying around looking like a wet dream.

But I'm now in our suite writing this email since I've been kicked out of the poker room! Apparently me getting half hard while pantsless in my denims is "a distraction I can't afford Mutt! I will win this!" First I lose all my money, then I lose my pants, and now I lost the invitation to hang out with my friends! Fine! I will just go find all the little kids and do something fun with them. Maybe we'll have a massive mud fight out behind the gardens.

Oooh, yeah ... mud fight here I come!
Yours,
Harry

I love you Harry!

I love everything about you! You're beautiful and gorgeous and have a wonderful heart and a brilliant soul. Even when you're mad at me, I want you more than anything. I actually rather like it when you are mad at me.

Oliver, back me up here, our Harry is sheer perfection, innit?

Harry, I think Draco is more than just drunk...

What're ya talkin about?! I'm perfectly sober! I'm just in LOVE with these brownies Harry made! Just like him, they're sheer perfection! Chocolately and warm and just oozing with love!

I don't think Harry made those, love.

Why not?

Because Siri came in and gave one to EVERYONE except me. WHY would Harry make brownies that I specifically can't have? And besides, there's a whole batch of biscuits here that have things I know only Harry makes, because he makes them specifically for you, like the garlic, ginger, and lemon ones.

Mmmm, those are so fucking good! Pass them back over here!

And two, everyone who ate those brownies is now acting super giggly and happy.

THAT'S BECAUSE HARRY IS THE BEST FUCKING BAKER IN THE WORLD!!

HERE HERE! THREE CHEERS FOR HARRY!

Sighs... Draco, listen to me, you went from killin' it at this poker game to suddenly practically giving away all your money.

Pshaw! What do I need money for? I make so much that I probably earn 100 Galleons every time I sneeze!

100 Galleons a sneeze? Really? You can't really earn that much...

OLIVER! OLIVER!! You HAVE to taste these! What flavor is that, it tastes SOOOO good!

Those taste like pecan and fig pasties...

Harry is BRILLIANT! These could make their weight in gold!

Um Harry, I'm about to send you an urgent Insta-owl begging for help. Not only do I think everyone here is on something, but now Blaise is... mmm... glowing or something. He's mmm... he smells SO good! I can't remember why, but this mmm.... is wrong?

He's mmm.....

Oh Harry! You should see Oliver right now, he's so adorable! He's currently smelling Blaise like a puppy would, giving him little licks here and there to taste him too. I'mma sign off and lick him too!

Love you like a love song,
Draco (and Oliver, but he's too busy to say it himself)
Chapter 353

Monday September 17, 2018

Good Morning my Loves,

Hope the both of you are having a lovely Monday. I, am having a coffee Monday. Last night was beyond exhausting. But at least I don't have to go into work today, I am just able to putter around the Manor in my jams and play with the kiddos. Also, drinking a metric tonne of coffee because dealing with your arses last night was a nightmare.

I think I might feel sorriest for Hermione though, she not only has a hangover and her full time job she has to deal with, putting on the face of the Ministry, but she also has to deal with an exhausted and hung over Draco. I think I might add 'contact Nev and ask him to send Hermione some flowers' on my list of things to do today.

Merlin, I am so glad I had my tablet with me in the kitchens while you two got up to shenanigans last night! No matter how lovely you felt last night Dragon, if you had somehow lost all of your money to our friends in poker you would have been even more of a bear this morning than you already were. You dislike losing money ... hell you dislike losing period. And, despite mine and Ollie's constant reassurance that your arse is fit and lovely, I believe you may have been quite upset to find out you ate four batches of biscuits while under the influence of 'brownies'!

Yes, you idiots were given pot brownies! And since you didn't realize that's what they were, you ended up eating WAY more than you would have if you just wanted to get mildly stoned. You know I'm not averse to a little marijuana, our trip to Amsterdam proves that, but you know I wouldn't have tricked my pregnant husband into using it. Not that he had any.

And if I were to make pot sweets with the intention of not allowing Ollie to partake, why would I have made them out of brownies which I know is one of his favorite sweets ever? I'd have made them out of your garlicky-lemon grossness or even if I hadn't gone with something gross I'd have at least picked something like raspberry tarts which Ollie could take or leave. Not gooey, chocolatey, yummy brownies.

But a bunch of half-drunk, mostly-stoned people wasn't the only problem I walked in on when I came to save you all. I had to stop you all from Blaise's ridiculous veela sex magic. I can't always resist it, but similar to my resistance of the Imperius if I know it's coming I can shield myself pretty well. And I'm glad I could because I popped in on what could have very easily turned into an all-out orgy.

Don't get me wrong, it would have been dead sexy to watch, but since our Ollie hasn't explicitly stated he wanted to play with others besides our doppelgangers, I certainly wasn't going to allow it to happen while under the influence of the pheromones. If you ever want to play with someone who doesn't match one of our faces, I want you to be completely in your right mind. Both so I know you've not been coerced to do something you don't want, but also so that even if you do want it you will be able to remember it.

I will say, all that skin, those licking tongues, that image is going right in the bank for sure!

Hold on a mo' my magi-mobile's chiming

........................
Oh! The both of you should head home early if at all possible! Lainie and the kids are coming home for dinner! She's actually coming home for the entire week to visit so if you can't get off early it won't be a problem. Apparently she's hit that part of her pregnancy where her loves are irritating the piss out of her and she needs to hide from them before she murders them!

I guess my lazy day is going to be a little less lazy, I have to snuggle up my grandchildren and probably bake a bit more to make up for everything you ate last night! But I am still going to drink a lot of coffee and stay in my jammies!

Ta!
Harry

Monday September 17th
My beloved husbands,

Ugh! SO hungover!

Even though I am cranky and not in a good mood at all, I remembered that Kisa INSISTED that I meet with her somewhere private today to have a small chat. Well I did that and she told me some things that I CANNOT tell you two. However, the crux of the matter is that she needs me to go to Russia with her rather urgently. I erm… Might need to go even if you tell me not to.

Sorry?
Draco
Chapter Summary

Harry and Oliver are NOT happy, and Draco is in Russia with Kisa.

Chapter Notes

Alright, so, when I was discussing non-specifics with Chrissie about this arc, she said that she was feeling a bit of extra minor stress that week and couldn't really take a lot of prolonged drama and uncertainty, so I decided to write the whole arc as one chapter. Hence, it's a long chapter, and y'all are probably going to be like: "Why the fuck did Draco agree to no communication?!" Well, it was so that Chrissy didn't have to respond to a bunch of emails that basically said: "I'm safe and still can't tell you anything."
Plus, I think I upped the drama of it this way, lol ^_^

Draco Lucius,

After everything that happened when I was gone a month without telling you anything and now you want to do the same? Even knowing how mad both you and Ollie were at me for just taking off? You're literally telling us that if we don't say yes you're going anyway?

You're not even remotely sorry.

Since it doesn't matter to you if we say yes or no then I'll say nothing. Do whatever you'd like Draco. Have SOOO much fun in Russia.

Love, Harry

GODBUGGERINGMERLINDAMNIT!
Sigh... at least you warned us you were leaving and the general direction you were going to be in and a vague reference to why. Just promise us you'll be safe, Draco Lucius Malfoy.
- Oliver

Friday September 21st
My more than likely furious husbands,

I really AM sorry! I know it doesn't sound like it, but you know I wouldn't have dropped everything to help Kisa with something in Russia if I didn't HAVE to. Also note that even though I am writing this email now, I can't actually send it until I'm done, as it would violate my unbreakable vow to Kisa not to tell anyone anything until we're done.
Just so you know - actually, you're both probably well aware by now - Kisa couldn't tell her spouses anything either. She only told them that she had a bit of business in Russia that she needed to attend to in person and alone, and despite Blaise trying his best to go with her anyway, she managed to shake him off and leave when no one could stop her.

Keep in mind, I at least vaguely warned you that this was going to be less than good when I told you that I was going to Russia to help her with something I couldn't tell you about.

So, even though I can't send this email yet - and I've also been heavily spelled so that no one other than Kisa can contact me (We're actually both wearing a set of Contact Cameras and Earbud Communicators that I made specifically for the two of us that are not connected to anything but each other) - I'll tell you what's happened so far. I'm sure you've both tried to email me several times, possibly hundreds of times, but with the spells on me, I've received no communication at all.

So, before I say anything else, despite the fact that you're probably both half certain I'm dead because I won't respond to anything, I assure you that I am not.

Anyway, as I was saying, on Monday, Kisa and I met up in a random muggle café so that we could talk behind strong privacy spells and be assured that no one would overhear us. She told me that with her parents so old (Mind you, her mother is MY mother's mother, and so, is... old...) and with her permanently living in Britain for the foreseeable future, her mob is... concerned.

The way it is, ever since Kisa took on more of the active duties (even though she has always maintained a clean surface image so as to NOT taint her lovers and children, which currently, the most important member of that is actually Hermione because she's Minister for Magic), she's arranged it so that she has three trusted men doing most of her job for her.

It's worked out well because until relatively recently, she was actually in Russia, the acting Head under the name of her father. Well now, not only are some members of the mob growing concerned that Ivan is far too old to remain the Head of the mob (he's a muggle after all, and getting on in years), but they've realized that if he should pass and make Kisa the OFFICIAL Head of the Mob, she's not even there to do her job anyway.

There's been talk of overthrowing her, despite the fact that her father, her mother for a few years, and then Kisa herself have kept the mob stable, relatively peaceful, and most importantly, very profitable for all involved. No matter how one might feel about organized crime in general, the organization of it DOES have a purpose in that it maintains an order in a part of society that would otherwise be nothing but chaos.

With all of that in mind, we arrived in Russia early Tuesday morning - because of the time difference - and used a few days to plan out our strategy. That was when I created the tech for just us. Tonight, Kisa called a general meeting of all the higher up members of the mob. If you think of the organization being shaped like a pyramid - with Ivan at the very top, Kisa right below him, and all the others somewhere under her - this meeting was for the top 100. If you think of the mob more like social classes, these would be the nobles who rule over the commoners.

Now I think I'm confusing myself with analogies!

In any case, with the 100 highest ranking members in attendance, the meeting had the potential to be quite dangerous if any one of them had enough support to overthrow Kisa right then and there. Fortunately for us, none of them were ready to jump to that solution already.

The plan that we'd implemented without anyone knowing it was to have the meeting room heavily bugged with my tech. We also had it warded to the teeth, and each person that entered the room was told that they could not bring in ANY weapons or technology. Not even mobile phones! We told them (in muggle terms since most of them are) that we'd surrounded the place with tech that would disable any and all technology even if they managed to sneak it in.

Which was true enough. Our wards actually were designed to disable anything that wasn't specifically my tech that I'd keyed into the wards. This meant that - as stated - this meeting was designed to be a completely safe place for all concerns to be aired and addressed.

The members all thought that Kisa arrived and conducted the meeting all on her own. What they DIDN'T know was that I was walking around under a Disillusion Charm, listening into all their quiet grumbling and reading the minds of anyone who seemed to be mutinous. I was taking copious notes on everyone even as Kisa genuinely was trying to resolve all issues peacefully first.

The problem was that she was right to begin with, several of the higher ranking mobsters were growing dissatisfied with a leader who seemed to do nothing but pass her duties off to others. After the meeting was over, we spent several hours going over everything I'd learned, and also listening to all the surveillance recordings to see if I'd missed anything in all the grumbling.

So that was today. I'm currently too tired to sleep, but I'm going to try anyway.

All my love,
Draco

Saturday September 22nd
My loves,

Today, using the information we'd gathered last night, Kisa targeted some of the bigger dissenters. She's going to give orders to her top three men to assign those members 'important missions.' Missions that actually will be profitable to the Mob in general, but that will ALSO give those dissenters a golden opportunity. IF they take the opportunity - AKA betray Kisa/the Mob by keeping or misreporting how much money they obtained during the mission - then Kisa will have caught them red-handed and will be able to 'legally' (Mob law) deal with them.

She's hoping this base tactic will shake the foundation up enough to either expose ALL the problems, or at least make it known that she's NOT going to accept disloyalty.

Missing you both (and all our kids) so much!
Draco

Thursday September 27th
Well...

The first part of the plan was... a success? If you consider Kisa being right about the men she chose for those important missions betraying her, then the plan was a success. She sent them off to do things (illegal things, yes) that would bring a lot of money into the organization. As she predicted, each of those middle bosses got it into their heads that they could just keep some or ALL of the money and claim they plundered less than they did, or none at all - claiming there was nothing TO plunder.

Except that Kisa had a man who is blood bound to her father - and thus UNABLE to be disloyal - scout it all out before hand (before she even brought me in on this), and so she knew exactly what to expect, and more importantly, can PROVE that she's been betrayed.

She's currently busy making a show of punishing those men in front of the rest of the top 100. I'm happily not part of the actual room, but I am still surveilling the room via my tech, and I'm close enough to it that if things turn against Kisa, I can be there to rescue or help her regain order in about 10 seconds.

Thankfully, she just now finished her gruesome task without incident. Apparently, those still loyal to the Mob in general - even if they are less than happy with its current leadership - are excited by the idea of punishing traitors. A good deal of them have reaffirmed their loyalty to her.

Thus, we're making progress.

Wish I could hold you both and just snuggle, but alas, I must continue to sleep alone,
Draco

Wednesday October 3rd,
The beats of my heart,

We MIGHT be close to finished here. The initial elimination of several disloyal members DID accomplish Kisa's goal of shaking things up so that others would panic and make stupid mistakes. So there's a man - a direct subordinate of one of Kisa's top three trusted 'generals' (yes, I keep switching analogies, sue me!) - who has been doing the most, erm… power grabbing, I suppose. He's been trying to talk others into supporting him for MONTHS should he happen to murder his way to the top and take over as Head of the Mob.

I'm sure you can imagine, this is EXACTLY the sort of man Kisa needs to eliminate as publicly as possible, and sooner rather than later. She needs to make a blaring statement with this man that his actions will NOT be tolerated, that no matter where she lives, she's STILL in charge, and that she can and WILL step in and get rid of those who'd try to oust her.

So... once she accomplishes that, we'll be able to come home.

Well, more like once she accomplishes that AND calls another meeting so that I can turn invisible and read all the minds of those who are left to ensure that no one ELSE is plotting anything. THEN we can come home. Soon. I hope...

With every beat of my heart,
Draco

Thursday October 4th
My heart and soul!

I'm coming home! More importantly, I'm FINALLY allowed to send these emails! They'll probably reach you before I do as there are just a few tiny details we need to see to before we leave, but rest assured that we should be home within just a few hours.

Basically, it's exactly as I said. Kisa gathered up as many members of the Mob as she could - not just the higher ups - and explained that she'd been threatened with disloyalty AND a plot to take her position from her. After presenting all evidence, she made a very public example of the man responsible for all this trouble. Once again, I was an invisible person in the crowd, keeping surveillance to ensure that no one else started grumbling, ready to keep her safe if necessary.

Now that that unpleasantness is all over, I simply have to read the minds of her most trusted men - to verify that none of them was secretly involved with the plotting. Once I'm done with that, we're going to visit Ivan and Grandmama to report on our progress. AND THEN we can come home!

See you as soon as magically possible!
Draco
Chapter 355

Chapter Summary

Harry is pissed off, Oliver is upset but accepting, and Draco is home...

Chapter Notes

See the end of the chapter for notes

Friday October 5, 2018

Greetings Draco Malfoy,

Are you fucking kidding me? You are literally fucking with me right? I have been terrified for your safety, assuming nothing short of another attempt on one of our lives would be worth going completely radio silent for almost a month. And it's that you had to help weed out some usurpers in mob politics?

Fuck you.

I hear you're home by now. Whoop de doo. Yay. So glad.

I guess Oliver is still speaking to you so I'm sure the two of you are having a delightful reunion. Enjoy. I have zero interest in playing "welcome the conquering hero” with someone who's done what you did. You took a fucking unbreakable vow? To not so much as send an email saying you were alright. To not speak to or be allowed messages from your loved ones while you were gone.

Good thing you never took any other vows. Like marriage vows. Promising we were your world. No, you having to be in the thick of things, you having to play the martyr, you deciding your skills make you the only person on the planet who can possibly do anything is more important than myself. More important than your family. Cool. After years of apologizing away my unhappiness. After years of telling you it HURTS ME that you have this need to constantly put yourself in positions where someone takes advantage of you and your skills, this was more important than anything else.

More important than anything you might have missed. Like, oh I don't know, what if - like some of your other children have - our Serenity had decided to be born early? Not only would you have missed her birth, but you wouldn't have been able to come support Ollie and I, and you wouldn't have even been able to receive a message telling you what had happened. Lucky for us she's still safe and sound then isn't it.

You know who almost wasn't safe and sound? Elena's baby boy, your grandchild. Yeah, your daughter went into preterm labor. She ended up not having to deliver, but for a while there it was touch and go. Where were you? Not here.

You know what else you missed? Atreyu's birthday. Don't worry, he's fine, it's not like he was sad and cried wondering why his Daddy Draco didn't so much as send him a card wishing him a happy birthday. It's cool, seven year olds get over betraying heartbreak like that pretty quickly I hear.

You hurt your son, you hurt your daughter, you hurt and worried your husbands, all for what?
Because some adult toddlers decided to play power games? There wasn't a single other person who could be counted on to help support Kisa in her ability to take care of her own organization? Well then she's not that great of a fucking leader is she?

Your very first statement in the first email you wrote but didn't send ... "you know I wouldn't have dropped everything to help Kisa with something in Russia if I didn't HAVE to" is absolute bullshit. You didn't have to make an unbreakable vow. You didn't have to help her. You didn't have to promise not to so much as contact your family the entire time it took to weed out the usurpers. You chose to. You chose, like you always do, to do whatever the fuck you wanted to do that would make you feel powerful and important and fuck everyone else you might hurt.

I know nothing of the sort! You always choose your raid leading, auror helping, Robards dick-sucking, playing the hero over anything else. Always.

Fuck Harry, he and his anxiety he needs to be medicated for won't worry when he doesn't hear from me for three weeks. Who cares what that will do to his psyche.

Fuck Oliver, who's seven months pregnant and should avoid raised blood pressure and stress. Who gives a flying fuck what happens to him with the one child he's ever managed to become pregnant with.

Fuck Atreyu, a child who at the young age of seven realized his Daddy can't be counted on.

Fuck Elena, who was terrified she was going to lose her baby, she didn't need the support of her father.

Fuck my husbands, it's not like they wanted to celebrate our six month anniversary or anything.

I love you. I will always love you. But I honestly don't know if I can ever forgive you for this one. I thought there would never be anything I can't forgive you for, but you may have managed to find it.

When Oliver is done welcoming you home will you please let him know he can come visit me in my bedroom, I'd really like to talk to HIM.

Regards,
Harry

My Dearest Harry,

When I got home, before I even read your email to learn how angry you are at me, Oliver told me that I missed Elena's early labor and Atreyu's birthday, and then told me that you are so mad at me that I might be wise to avoid you until you were ready to speak to me in a civil manner.

Avoidance of your rage is not exactly my style, so I was pacing the Crystal Room, trying to decide WHAT to do to apologize. I assumed that any sort of jewelry or chocolates would just be an insult, so I came to the decision that the only thing I COULD do was submit to you in whatever manner you needed - even beating me until you got your rage all out.

So that's what I planned to do. I was going to go right into the room you have temporarily claimed as yours, get on my knees, and basically not say a word other than Sorry until you expended all your rage on me. I am sorry, I know you do not feel that helping Kisa in this manner justified the vow to not contact you.
That said, as sorry as I am, she's my Aunt. But for the grace of marrying you, her business is MY business. I would have been the one expected to help her out or even run it myself if I wasn't married to the Savior of the world. Kisa asked me to go with her and keep her safe - rather than any of her spouses - because she knew she could trust me to do that AND actually not be squeamish about the things she would need to do. But honestly...

I may not have said this before because I didn't think it would make a difference, but... I didn't actually agree until Grandmama herself asked me to do this (via Magi-Skype). She asked me in that way of hers that let me know that this was my family duty and that I really could not say no. It was then that I agreed to make the Unbreakable vow, which is also why - when I sent you the initial email asking for permission - I more or less told you that I would have to go even if you both told me not to. I was bound at that point.

In any case, as I said, I WAS going to go right to you and submit, but I received a Patronus in the Crystal Room that demanded my immediate attention. The Patronus was from Bletchley and told me that I needed to voluntarily come into the Head Auror's office this instant before he had to send out a team to come officially bring me in. It seems I'm the current main suspect in a murder investigation.

And so... As much as I want to and need to settle things with you as soon as possible, I also need to NOT be arrested for murder in front of all our children. I'll submit to you the MOMENT this matter is settled.

I'd do anything for love,
Draco

Chapter End Notes

When I got Chrissie's email, I asked her what Draco had to do to earn Harry's forgiveness, and she told me to have him kill a recurring minor character, so brace yourselves...
Chapter 356

Chapter Summary

Draco is a suspect in a murder...

Chapter Notes

See the end of the chapter for notes

My Draco,

First of all, the Malfoy Lawyer Armada is on their way. Not sure whose murder you could possibly be the main suspect for seeing as you've been out of the country for the last three weeks. The silver lining of you taking on that shitty command from Grandmama and Kisa is that there's no way you could have been nearby to kill anyone.

Yay.

Secondly, have you even met me? Do you really think going on your knees in full submission is the way to get ME over my anger? What part of the fact that I wear your collar and regularly call you Master makes you think submission is the right choice? My submission is a gift I make to you, not a punishment I need to take like a good boy. And again, seriously? I NEVER want to give or be given a beating. That's YOU. That would only help assuage YOUR guilt, it would have nothing to do with making ME feel better or want to forgive you.

At least, for ONCE, you are actually aware of why I am angry. You realize it's not that you had to help Kisa. It's not that you felt this was your responsibility. It's not that you were gone. I'm angry that you weren't able to be contacted. I'm angry you didn't contact us. Even when I was chasing someone threatening your life across the continent I still took the time to contact you. I'm angry you didn't think to tell Kisa or Grandmama that you would take a vow not to tell us anything but that you wouldn't vow to go completely radio silent. What if we had truly needed you? Why did your vow have to include not contacting your son on his birthday?

You could have maintained complete secrecy about what you were doing and we would have understood. But you didn't think to do that. You didn't think to make us a priority. To make contacting your husbands as a condition to your vow. I love you Draco, but when it comes to doing what other people expect of you the reality is that you want so badly to impress everyone else that you're willing to piss me off because you know I'll forgive you. You choose to constantly do things that hurt me over and over and over again because you know I've always forgiven you anything, loved you through everything. You don't need to care about my feelings because you'll never lose me.

But, for once I actually agree with you that I shouldn't be the priority right now. Let's figure out what you're accused of, get the proof needed that you didn't do anything, and get you back home.

Always forgiving,
Harry
Friday October 5th
My beloved husbands,

So here's what I know: Last night, Robards stayed late to work on a case after everyone else had left the Ministry. Today, for most of the day, no one had a reason to go into his office until Bletchley decided to see if there was any progress on that case Robards had been working on - that Bletchley had originally brought to him and was still supposed to assist with as necessary.

When Bletchley knocked on the door and entered the office, he found Robards slumped over his desk. At first, he assumed that he was simply exhausted and had passed out. THEN - after he tried to wake him - he realized that Robards was not only dead, but that he had scrawled my name in his blood on the paperwork for the case he'd been working. All magi-forensics so far have confirmed that it IS his actual blood, and so, they had to assume that he was writing the name of his killer - even though no one really believes that I would have or could have done it.

Once Bletchley wrapped his head around the fact that Robards was genuinely dead (the body isn't glamoured, transfigured, or polyjuiced into him), and that they had no real leads to work with yet, he had no choice but to call me in as a suspect until I could be cleared.

That part was easy enough as I legitimately WAS in Russia last night when the murder occurred. Naturally Bletchley needed me to have someone confirm my Alibi, so I told him that not only could my Aunt Kisa and my Grandmother both verify that I was most definitely in Russia, but that so could Hermione as she knew for a fact that I was with her wife (my Aunt) on business in Russia and did not arrive home until earlier today.

Thus, once Hermione came in and confirmed what I said she would, I was in the clear. NOW I'm in a meeting with the Head of the DMLE, the Deputy Head Auror (Roche), the Chief of Interrogations (Ramsey), Bletchley (the Lead on the Case for the moment), and Hermione. I thank you so much for sending in the Lawyer Armada, but the moment I was cleared of all charges, they weren't necessary, so I sent them away.

I have no idea how long this'll take, but I will be returning home the very second I am able. I've missed you both far too much to wait a moment longer than necessary.

Love everything about the way you're loving me, the way you lay your heads up on my shoulder when you sleep,
Draco

Chapter End Notes

There will be a trigger warning on the next chapter.
Ugh, I posted at the end of the last chapter that there would be a trigger in this chapter, but actually, it's in the next one, so y'all don't have to worry about it yet.

Saturday October 6, 2018

Draco,

I typed out and deleted a number of comments about the current situation. From being upset at Robards finding a way to screw you over with his final words to ... you know what? It doesn't matter what the comments were. They were insensitive and not what I want to say to you.

I am sorry for your loss. I'm sorry someone you considered a friend passed away. I'm sorry your mentor is gone. I hope your grief is easy and as quick as it can be. I will be there for you to hold your hand, be a shoulder to cry on, or to clean up the rubble I'm sure you'll be turning the crystal room into. I wouldn't wish this pain on you no matter how angry at you I was feeling.

But on to the current investigation ... how did they think for one single moment it could have possibly been you?

Alibi aside, there's nothing about this murder - and do we know it's a murder? Maybe he used his last moments to write your name on the file because he was married to his job and knew you'd be able to solve the case he'd been working on when he was at his desk dying. Or that he wanted to make sure you would be called in to solve the case of his murder. Or both.

Anyway, there's nothing about this potential murder that points to you. Anyone who knows anything about you knows you'd never leave your victim still breathing or with the ability to write your name with any substance. You're nothing if not thorough and he would have been dead before you left him there. And you're not sloppy! You wouldn't have left a body at all! He would have just gone missing and the investigation gone cold months later.

I would think name or no name left anywhere I'd be the most likely suspect. I had motive and opportunity.

Although, before you tell your fellow investigators that, our esteemed Minister would also be able to clear my location last night since she was with me. She has proof you were with Kisa in Russia, but she and Ron personally spent the evening with me while I screamed and raged and moved all of my shit to the other bedroom.

Oliver, bless his sweet little "I'm not taking sides between my husbands Harry James!" heart was unwilling to help me move my belongings. According to him, "throwing a temper tantrum like a toddler is not the way to solve marital issues."

He's lucky he's carrying our daughter or he'd be on my list of "husbands I want to punch in the face a little bit."

Let me know what you need please, I can send Muffy to the Ministry with sweets if you'd like which is currently my only helpful suggestion but I'm open to other ideas of how I can be helpful.

Love,
Harry

Saturday October 6th
My Harry,

I'm addressing this one specifically to Harry because Oliver and I have already reached an agreement. He's NOT over his anger at me, but he's willing to work through it - both in person and with his Mind Healer. Thus he does not need to be addressed directly, although I will be talking about things he should at least read in case I forget to mention them again to him in person.

As I was saying, my Harry, as you know, I was in the Ministry until rather late last night, and then when I came home, I was so bloody tired that I basically crawled in bed with Oliver and passed right out. THEN when I woke up, I went right back into the Ministry because I was assigned the Case of Robards' murder. Well, I was assigned to work it WITH Bletchley and Roche. We're ALL making it our top priority.

That's why - when you sent your email offering to help out in any way you could - I was surprised because I thought you were basically going to tell me that you'd postpone our fight until I solved the case and came home. Instead, you were sympathetic.

SO, I called for a break so that I could come home and get something to eat while I at least thanked you for being sympathetic. I popped into our suite - which you apparently hadn't slept in last night - only to find you there talking with Oliver.

We stood there looking at each other awkwardly for a moment, and then... I cracked. I think I normally would have held it all in until it was over and I could process everything in the Crystal Room or the privacy of the closet, but... I... it was like a damn burst. I threw my arms around you, buried my face in your shoulder, and sobbed out all of the feelings I've had to keep a tight reign on for the last several weeks.

You held me and rubbed my back, sort of humming soothingly, but the moment I felt like I could blow my nose and wipe my tears, I ran to the loo to do that in private, and then wrote this from our closet as I ate the bacon sandwiches Muffy brought me. I DON'T believe for one moment that this solves everything, and now I'm a bit afraid to face you, but I'm going to at least try before heading back into the Ministry.

Nothing else matters,
Draco
Chapter 358

Chapter Summary

As much as Harry REALLY likes winning fights, he's willing to set the argument aside, and Draco finds out who murdered Robards.

Chapter Notes

Okay THIS is the chapter that needs the trigger warning, but it's also a spoiler, so I'm posting it at the end. If you want to read the warning before the chapter, click on more notes right under this to jump to the warning.

See the end of the chapter for more notes.

Saturday October 6, 2018

My Dragon,

Sometimes, when I am very upset, or when anyone is very upset honestly, it's best not to say anything. The old adage of "if you don't have anything nice to say, don't say anything at all" is one of those sayings that really holds true. I said some things in the heat of my anger that I should not have said. I'm not going to take all of them back because I was truly angry and I meant a hell of a lot of them.

But I never should have said that I didn't know if I could ever forgive you for this. Of course I will forgive you. And after realizing that for once you actually knew exactly WHY I was angry got me most of the way to forgiving.

I'm not over being upset, but I'm no longer completely irrationally furious. I'm just mad and upset.

At this point I'm upset with myself as well if that helps at all. I'm upset I let my anger say things that were hurtful for no other reason than to be hurtful. I'm disappointed I lashed out at Ollie when he was just trying to be reasonable (although he really should know better than to try being reasonable. Not cool, Ollie, not cool!)

Nothing matters to me as much as loving my husbands, loving my family, and making sure they know I love them and always will. Even winning arguments. And as you both know, I REALLY like winning arguments. Like, a LOT. I lost sight of that, I couldn't quite see what was important through the red haze of anger.

I have to ask myself; do I want to fight? Do I want to win the fight? Do I want to be right? Or do I want the issue to be solved? My issue was at being left in the dark to worry. My issue was not about you being gone, but at being unable to contact or be contacted by you. If you are aware that's the issue and you're willing to promise you won't do that again, then I think we'll be alright.

And while I love knowing you trust and love me enough to break down in my arms, I hate you having to be so upset that you break down in my arms. I love you Draco, of course I'll sympathize with you. Of course I'll hold you while you cry. Of course I'll make sure Muffy makes you bacon sandwiches and sends you back to the ministry with a bag of biscuits and a stasis spell over your favorite Ben & Jerry's.

But for now I will lie in our bed with our gorgeous husband Oliver. I will rub his gorgeous bump and talk to our daughter. I will sing them both to sleep. Just come home to us. We miss you. We need you.

All of my (our) love,
Harry and Oliver (and Serenity)

P.S. Normally when someone has messed with my family I send Grandmama and Kisa after them, but who do I send TO Grandmama and Kisa to make it clear their behavior was unacceptable? Narcissa? Hermione? Persephone?

P.P.S. Definitely Persephone

Sunday October 7th
Well...

That was a surprise!

See, we had a procedure to follow, and the very first step was to let the Magi-Forensics team and the Crime Scene Investigators comb through every tiny scrap of evidence they could glean from the scene and the victim.

You want to know what they came up with? Not much at all. The blood in the office was all Robards. The magical signatures were all his (from casting various spells over the course of years). The FINGERPRINTS were mostly his with a smattering of other Aurors who have been in and out of his office over the years (he never allowed for a deep enough magi-cleaning that would have tidied those things up). As such, my fingerprints were in there and even YOUR fingerprints were in there, Harry.

That said, we both had Alibis from the Minister for Magic herself, and so, were above suspicion.

Ramsey had to go through and question all the other Aurors to insure that none of them happened to murder the Head Auror during the course of leaving their fingerprints in his office. When all was said and done, we really had nothing much to go off of. The really frustrating thing was that the Magi-surveillance spells that litter the Ministry here and there show that no one else went into the DMLE at the time of the murder.

So, the question became HOW in the bloody hell did someone murder Robards when he was all alone in his office and no one visited him? Magi-forensics and the Magi-autopsy basically confirmed that he was killed via a lethal overdose. An overdose of a combination of legitimately prescribed Mental Health Potions - Anti-anxiety, Anti-stress, Anti-depressants, etc - and painkiller potions.

SO, the mystery changed to HOW IN THE BLOODY HELL did someone manage to murder Robards while he was alone in his office AND use his own actual medications to do it?

While the others were throwing around ever increasingly absurd suggestions (such as maybe one of the junior Aurors did it after all because Robards was being even more of a hard arse than usual lately), I basically did the one thing I can do that no one else can. I went to the Morgue and took his hand in mine.

That's when I found out exactly what happened. Robards murdered himself. He was increasingly unhappy and under so much stress with no end in sight. He was bloody married to his job, and so, had less than zero ability to consider quitting it. He fell into a head space in which the ONLY thing that made sense to him was to just go to sleep and stay that way until his life magically fixed itself. Or maybe not wake up at all.

So... he had actually written in journals for YEARS. In his journal, according to the brief memory I was shown of him writing an entry, he recorded his increasingly unstable mental condition without truly realizing how bad he was getting. As he was slowly falling asleep, the realization hit him that he had actually murdered himself, that even though he hadn't fully intended to, he HAD taken a lethal dose of his medications, and so, was dying. That's when he cast a cutting hex on his finger (as his quill was too far away on the other side of the desk and he was rapidly running out of the strength to even reach for it), and wrote my name in blood on the paperwork literally in front of him.

Naturally, anyone seeing this would be curious as to WHY he would write any name at all at a time like that. What's the point? Was he trying to blame me? Was he trying to make me feel bad? Simply get my attention?

In a way, yes. As he lay dying in the vision, having written my name in his blood, he whispered: "Read my mind Draco, find the journal I kept. It explains everything..."

And so, having seen this in a vision, and rather shaken to my core, I returned to his office and opened his safe (using the password that was also shown to me in the vision) to find that yes, he did have YEARS worth of journals in there. I grabbed the most recent one and read through the last few weeks. As he suspected, his deteriorating mental state was blatantly obvious to anyone trained to see it.

I then sat down at his (newly magically scoured) desk to write my report so that I could have it on hand for the meeting that was called. At the meeting, I explained my vision and what had happened to an utterly gobsmacked audience. Not a single person there would have believed me if not for the journal.

Thus, if not for Robards writing my name, I may not have tried getting a vision from him (then again, I probably would have since I would have felt useless without at least trying it), and without the vision leading me to his journal, we would STILL be working our hardest to find a murderer when there's none to be found.

This is a sad day for the DMLE...

So, I've had some time to write this as the rest of the important people in the meeting took turns reading the journal and arguing over whether or not it should be believed (it COULD be planted to throw us off the trail after all), but now that they've reached an agreement that it's genuine, the Head of the DMLE - Robards' boss - has asked me to go to her office with her so that she could ask me more questions about my vision.

Her name is Penny Pettigrew - I know what you're thinking, but she's only distantly related to Peter Pettigrew. In any case, once she is done talking with me, I should be able to come right home.

I am human and I need to be loved,
Draco
Chapter End Notes

Trigger warning: Suicide/accidental OD of a recurring character, plus this and the next couple of chapters will also lightly touch on the mental health issues that led to suicide. If these things might be too triggery for you, please just comment asking for what happened and one of us will let you know :-)
Chapter 359

Chapter Summary

Harry and Oliver continue to be sympathetic and supportive and Draco has news.

Sunday October 7, 2018

Our Love,

You already lost your friend and mentor, you had to exonerate yourself from wrongdoing in his death, and then you had to use your powers to see what truly happened to him. And now? You had to find out first hand exactly his mental state when he ended his life.

I, we, are so sorry Darling. I can't imagine how you're feeling right now. And knowing that because this happened to the Head Auror, because this happened at the DMLE, because this happened in a way you were required to view it, it still isn't over for you. You now have to relive the whole thing, I'm sure you'll be pensieve-submitting your memories. You'll be giving statements. Over and over again you are being required to relive your pain.

When this is all over, when you've submitted your last memory and given your last statement, you can come home and fall apart in our arms. You can sob and scream, rage and hurt. We are here, waiting with open arms.

And when you've cried your last tear for the day, blown up your last vase, and glamoured the pink out of your weary eyes, we will be inviting our whole family for a lovely meal and game and movie night. Because not only have they all missed you these last weeks, but each of your children wants to be here for you.

Most importantly, you need to remember all the people who love you. You need to see why life is worth living. So you'll be getting a loud, crazy reminder of how much you have to live for. You need to see the people who are there to hold you while you hurt but want to see you moved on and happy as soon as you feel you can.

Please hurry home, I think we need you here almost as much as you need to be here.

Yours Always,

Harry and Oliver

My foundations,

Earlier when I came home, it was to a giant cuddle puddle. We watched happy movies that made us all laugh, and then we put the younger ones to bed so that I could talk to all our older ones (even Jules and Romeo) and tell them everything that happened over the last few weeks - to a certain extent. Even though Elena and Viona are well aware of the things Kisa does, I couldn't say some things for plausible deniability reasons.

After the older kids left or went to their rooms for the night, the two of you held me in comforting silence until Harry pulled away with a frown.

"What's wrong?"

I shrugged and looked away for a moment before saying it. "Nothing's wrong. In fact, most people would consider this thing so very right. I've been promoted to Head Auror..."

The two of you were speechless, so I decided to give you a bit of time to wrap your heads around the news. "I'm going to take a shower, be back in a few."

And with that, I ran like a bloody coward - I mean made a tactical retreat. I can already hear what you'll say: We're proud of you, but... please don't take this job.

I don't know... I haven't thought about it at all yet, and at the same time, it's been repeating itself in my head over and over since I first learned the news from Penny Pettigrew.

I can open your eyes, take you wonder by wonder, over sideways and under, on a magic carpet ride,

Draco
Harry and Oliver are trying to be supportive, and Draco is already finding that the job might be a bit more than he wants.

You big adorable baby!
I mean seriously, you cutie little coward. "I got promoted to Head Auror! Gotta go shower! Bye!"
If you were in an old Bugs Bunny cartoon, there would have been a Draco-shaped hole in the loo door.

Since you spent what I am sure is at least fifteen minutes of your fake shower just panicking and staring at yourself in the mirror, followed by enough time to write us the email, and then took an actual Draco-lengthed shower, you have left us plenty of time to respond to your current potential job offer. Then I assume you will read it, hide in the loo even longer, which will give me plenty of time to get Ollie naked and ready to ride me into the sunset. Take your time, I know you don't like being in bed with your sexy, naked, fucking husbands.

You weren't wrong in your assumption of how we would respond. We are both most definitely proud of you. You'd make an amazing head auror. You're brilliant and we can't imagine them finding anyone else even remotely as qualified. But yes, please don't take this job.

You know you will be loved and supported through any choice you make. But we wouldn't be us if we didn't help you out in our own way. So ... we've compiled a pros and cons list for your convenience.

PROS
You would be in danger less as the Head Auror does more managing from the sidelines than being in the thick of things
You could be responsible for so many good changes to the Auror department

That's it for Pros, because we don't want you to take the job but we had to put at least one or two things on the list.

CONS
You wouldn't be able to continue to be Hermione's advisor
Your husbands will hate every minute of it
You are about to have a newborn and need time to bond with her
The time commitment is astronomical, Robards was so stressed from the workload that he thought ending his life was the only answer
You can't continue to have mob ties if you are the head of law enforcement
You can't ever take justice into your own hands if you are the head of law enforcement
You would have to turn your husband in if he hypothetically ever took justice into his own hands
Seriously, such an intense time commitment

I am sure if I hadn't just heard the water turn off from your shower that we could come up with more, but that's what we have for now.
Anyway, I'm going to sign off and make Ollie scream himself hoarse with pleasure.

Yours,
Harry
and an already naked Oliver

Monday October 8th
The fires in my soul,

Here I am, sitting behind the desk in the Head Auror's office, thinking over my options. Last night was so wonderful in that - after I got out of the shower - you were both able to get me out of my head long enough for me to fall asleep and have a good night. But when I woke up - at the bloody crack of dawn, probably mere minutes after Harry slipped out of bed for his morning run - I had a distinct feeling of panic that the whole bloody world would fall apart if I didn't get my arse into the office as soon as possible.

Now that I'm here, I have to begin this job - which I haven't made a decision about yet - by going through and sorting all the files and whatnot left by Robards. I'm lucky in that for the most part, the only things in his office are 'current' cases that he was working on. Anything that had been solved to his satisfaction was moved to the Ministry archives. Thus... I only have a few hundred files to sort through rather than a few hundred thousand.

That said, since his mental state had been deteriorating for quite some time, he's got quite a disorganized mess in here. I'm sure the chaos made some sort of sense to him, but it's a bit like untangling a jumbled and knotted up skein of yarn.

I'm going to pause the sorting and this email here for a bit to attend a meeting to basically discuss what's going to happen from here on out. This is a meeting between me, Hermione, Penny, Roche, Ramsey, Bletchley, and a few other senior Aurors who want to be involved - such as Ginger.

Alright, I'm back from my meeting. It was surprisingly helpful in that the entire DMLE is currently running like a well oiled machine - despite the fact that Robards was apparently losing his mind. Thus, from an organizational standpoint, there wasn't much I felt needed to change. For example, the Head Auror's job is literally to oversee the entire Auror department (not the entire DMLE, in case you forgot that), and so, because the Aurors are more like muggle detectives and special officers, the Head Auror should really only be concerned with the Aurors and the progress that they are making on their cases.

I think that part of Robards' problem was that he liked to be not just a supervisor, but something of a silent partner to all his Aurors. Thus, let's say Bletchley was working on a murder case, or a missing child case - or a better and actually currently real example of Ginger trying to dig up evidence on Kevin Miller - Robards would not just have them come to him in his office and report what they know on the case as they made progress, but he'd ALSO work the case from his office in case he could come up with insights and perspectives they couldn't.

Or in other words, Robards was actively working dozens of cases in conjunction with his Aurors. His actual job description is MUCH less involved than that. That said, there's no denying that his method did often produce results in that he had such highly honed instincts that he was able to find the truth with little to no evidence in a pile of unrelated rubbish.

Penny Pettigrew has been Head of the DMLE for a while now, and she's currently feeling a deep sense of shame over the fact that she didn't see how rough Robards was being on himself. She just thought he was a typical type A driven personality. She is his boss but she also oversees the other side of the DMLE, as in the 'regular officers' who do things like patrol the streets, respond to calls, and try to stop crimes in progress. She said she could never understand why he was in his office so much since she herself had a very cut and dry 9-5 work schedule with the occasional bout of overtime due to emergency circumstances.

Apparently she is hoping that I will inject a good dose of my Malfoy superiority into the job by doing the job the way it's intended to be done, and doing it in my own good time - in other words, NOT be in the office working cases 20 hours a day. Good thing she hasn't met the Tiger, eh?

But then this little tidbit was brought up: It actually IS the Head Auror's job to not just oversee the Aurors but ALSO organize and conduct raids as necessary. Which is something that was made a separate job because I was better organized and willing to use tech - and Robards frankly needed a bit less on his plate. So I have the choice of merging the two jobs back into one, or keeping them separate.

Hold on, I have to pause my email here again and go attend ANOTHER meeting. This one is between the Minister and all the Heads of the various departments. I think I wouldn't normally be required to attend as Penny is technically the Head of the DMLE, but in this case, I'm attending as Hermione's Adviser.

So... That was rather boring and pointless...

Alright, so not actually pointless. Hermione was adamant that all the Department Heads A: make immediate appointments with Mind Healers to evaluate their current health (they're actually supposed to do so once a year but usually manage to put it off or just straight up refuse because they're 'too busy') and B: once cleared as mentally stable, attend training on recognizing and being supportive of those who are having mental health issues.

The reason I feel it was pointless is that this policy was actually created and put in place years ago, it's just been ignored and neglected, and so, unless Hermione really commits herself to insisting that it's followed, it'll just be a temporary flurry of activity followed by a gradual shift to the back burner again. Don't get me wrong, I am well aware of how important mental health is, I just don't see this particular policy being effective unless Hermione hires a person whose sole job is to ride everyone's arse and make sure they get their mental health checkups regularly.

But moving on.

One definite PRO to if I decide to officially accept this job, is that I have Pippa. She's been my trusted assistant for years, and in the time it took for me to attend that bloody tedious meeting, she's already tidied up this office and everything in it. We're currently going over all the files to see if there's anything important that legitimately requires immediate attention.

Huh... Apparently one of the files that Robards keeps in his active cases is actually NOT active nor a case. It seems that he was married once upon a time ago, and had a son, but his wife divorced him and took their son to America when he was just a baby because of major personality differences. Robards has basically stalked them from a distance, keeping current on where they live and work, and also where the son's kids go to school and even their grades.

Creepy. But... I'd probably do the same...

I should probably send them notification of his death. He has his sister listed as his next of kin, so she's actually due to come in in just a few minutes to discuss what happened and what she wants to do with his body once its released. Maybe it would be best to talk to her about this ex-wife, son, and grandchildren.

Oh hold on, she just arrived.

Well... it seems that she knew that Robards (who she actually calls by his first name, not surprisingly) had an ex-wife, but that apparently the divorce took place so quickly that no one knew about the baby. He must have decided to keep that bit a secret because he didn't want to feel like a failure that couldn't even parent his own child because his ex tried to keep the boy on the other side of the planet.

Gemma (Robards' sister) took the stalker file on the son and his kids, and has decided to go personally invite them to the funeral - which she's decided to hold on Saturday October 13th.

Huh! Interesting... Robards has a whole file that he keeps in a prominent place of people who went missing during the Dark Lord's reign of terror, who are assumed to be victims of Death Eaters but cannot actually be proven. Over the years, when the occasional body of one of them shows up and can be conclusively proven to be a victim of Death Eaters - or the Dark Lord himself - he moves their name to a different list. He seemed to be at least half obsessed with finding all the missing people and bringing closure to their loved ones.

Sigh... I always knew that he was a good man doing an incredibly shitty job, but I had no idea...

I suddenly feel like I failed him somehow, and I need to take a break and think. In the Crystal Room. I'll be there if you need me.

It's been a long road,

Draco
Chapter 361

Chapter Summary

Harry is offended and Draco is seeing reason.

Chapter Notes

See the end of the chapter for notes

Hold up, hold up, hold UP!

Uh, excuse you, YOU have Pippa? Pippa is our family's personal assistant and helps us all and no! Gods-be-thriced damned it, Draco, you will not be taking Pippa with you if you decide to take the Head Auror position officially. If the rest of us have to live without seeing you as often as we'd like we're not going to also lose the person who keeps our family running smoothly.

Nope. No. Uh-uh!

I have a couple of thoughts about your dilemma, and they essentially all come down to the same thing: I think you should take the Head Auror position on a temporary basis with the intent to taper off and go back to being part-time raid leader and continue as the advisor to the Minister. Which I know is different than my previous recommendation of "Dear Merlin, please don't take this damn job!" but also a bit different than "of course, if you need to take the job we'll support you love!"

I think it sounds like right now, while the DMLE is running smoothly and the Aurors seem to know what they're doing even without their Head Auror present, big changes need to be made for a multitude of reasons. This is what you're best at, taking a 'business' getting to know the inner workings, shaking things up and fixing what needs fixing, bossing everyone around until it's perfect, and then hiring just the right person to keep it going from there.

I love you, but I also know you very well, you love the challenge of creating something or directing a mess into a successful process, but the day to day minutia is not your favorite thing. Can you honestly picture yourself sitting at a desk, signing off on cases, doing paperwork? That's not you. You want to lead raids and terrify new recruits until they cry. You don't want to sit down and create a patrol schedule.

Now, as to those changes that need to be made, I am not an Auror (nor do I want to be one) but I've seen enough businesses flounder or fail that I have some definite ideas of what can help this transition. First of all, do NOT put the Head Auror and the Chief of Raids back into the same position. It is too much for one single person, there wouldn't be a system of checks and balances, and there's a reason Robards thought it important to hire someone else for the task. I think having a clear segregation of duties with minimal overlap is in everyone's best interest.

Secondly, the more duties piled on to the Head Auror means more things slipping through the cracks. I think you tend to look at Robards and his work habits with rose colored glasses. But even from the sidelines I could see mismanagement issues. Why else would he consistently need to force you into helping when he theoretically had himself and an entire team of Aurors at his disposal?

Maybe he got great results because he looked at every single case, but is that something that's completely measurable? If his Aurors knew he was working all of their cases simultaneously, do you think they were putting forth their best effort? If they weren't shown trust and knew someone else was doing their work alongside them, they likely weren't investigating things to their greatest ability. I'm sure there were some Aurors who appreciated the extra help or an extra set of eyes, but I'd bet just as many or possibly more used it as an excuse to not work as hard or at the very least not feel as confident in their own skill level. Maybe the solve rate would be higher if the Aurors weren't relying on him to solve their cases for them.

If he hadn't overloaded himself, maybe things like his mental health or the Polly/Peter situation wouldn't have slipped through the cracks. I'm not trying to speak ill of someone who's not here to defend himself. I just want to make sure you're not going into this restructuring phase with the idea that his management style should be recreated.

And I definitely don't think you should idealize the idea of burning yourself out so much that you have to keep a secret file about your family full of things you learned about them from afar. Ollie and I refuse to live without you, your children are just a tad bit attached to you! So you need to realize at the end of the day, it's JUST a job! I was all for using my name and fame to allow you to marry two men, I'm not going to put all that to waste so you could get married a third time to your job.

I'd better run, the babies seem to be waking from their naps, but remind me I wanted to tell you all about the terrible Friend Dates I went on for Sirius while you were gone.

Oh the humanity!
Harry

P.S. I am not kidding, you can't have my Pippa!

Tuesday October 9th
My Husbands,

Harry, you are most definitely right. I am not suited for this job - the actual job of running the Aurors. I DO like the challenge it presents, but there are FAR too many things to do each day. So I am going to take it on temporarily to fix the things that are wrong, but then hand it off to others.

But that's actually part of my dilemma. Roche, the Deputy Head, technically SHOULD be the most qualified to take the job, but he's adamant that he doesn't want it. In fact, he's suggesting that he might be close to the same mental state as Robards was and should take a nice long holiday. Thus, I have to find someone qualified for the job that's WILLING to take it. Interestingly, it seems that Roche has been doing the same thing as Robards by overseeing AND working most of the cases, so clearly, their job descriptions have to be redefined. Also, I think that no matter what, the Head Auror should have an assistant and/or secretary, so I have to hire one of those as well.

As for right now, I'm about to have a meeting with all the Aurors to discuss current events, current cases, and my plans for the immediate future of this Department. Don't worry, I already sent Pippa out there to warn them that I'm running on two days of less than optimal sleep, and that I'm not an easy man even when I'm well rested and in a good mood. My former students can attest to that! As soon as my fresh cup of tea arrives, I'll be on my way.

Alright, I'm back. That went better than expected. This is probably the best time that Robards could have chosen - if he had to choose - in that the majority of the current active cases being worked are minor crimes such as theft. There's only two major crimes, and one of those may not be a crime in that it's the disappearance of an adult man who may have just run off with a new woman. The other is a murder case, but it's gone cold, and so the Auror working it doesn't know what to do with it. If there aren't any leads soon, it'll be officially transferred to cold cases. Lastly, there's Ginger's case, in which she's slowly finding things that make her believe that Kevin Miller really is some sort of criminal mastermind like his dead lover said, she just can't find any ACTUAL crimes yet.

AH! Just two days of this and the sheer frustration is ALREADY making me want to wring someone's neck! This is why I am most definitely focusing my attention on the things I can do that I am good at. Like reading through Robards' files - and his journals to some extent - and weeding out anything important.

And Harry, really? You think that Pippa would stop overworking herself by being my shadow AND the entire family's assistant? Did you even realize that she spends her mornings off overseeing all those businesses (with Viona) so that I don't even have to go to Quarterly meetings anymore. She comes back in the afternoons to basically follow me around everywhere I go as silent as a shadow so that I often don't even notice she's there, and as she does so, she's kept current on all our family drama and activities.

Her diary on us must be MASSIVE!

Anyway, she's been invaluable to me so far in this job and I'm quite certain that she will help me get things settled and ready to pass on to whomever I hire. And for the record, I'm KEEPING the Chief of Raids job!

But PLEASE! Talk to me about ANYTHING other than Aurors and their duties! I have another meeting in about a half an hour, and I don't even know what this one is about! So yes, please PLEASE tell me about all those friends dates for Sirius.

You're (both) everything I need and more,
Draco

Chapter End Notes

NOTE: The British use the term diary for what we refer to as an appointment or datebook. Thus Draco is not suggesting that Pippa is keeping a massive first hand account of everything they do - although she probably does, lol - but rather that her appointment book that keeps track of everything they do has to be HUGE! Lol ^_^
Chapter 362

Chapter Summary

Harry describes his crazy friend dates and Draco describes a bit of a typical day as Head Auror.

Draco,

Oh the friend dates. I don't know if you're ready for this. Ready to hear this level of nonsense and utter buffoonery. Honestly though, none of them were bad the way that first one was bad. Despite your assumptions originally, that first one was the only one that seemed like they were there for anything that wasn't friendship. It's just that every single person I met up with was unapologetically awkward.

Or maybe I'm awkward. Do you think it's me? Do I attract weirdos?

There was one who seemed legitimately nice, but we had an weird moment I don't think his anxiety was going to allow him to come back from. His name was Travis, and we were getting on as well as two strangers who've never met before can get on. Well, at a slightly uncomfortable silence he decides to break the quiet by asking if I'd like to see pictures of a chair he'd recently finished.

Oh, I suppose I forgot, he made furniture as a hobby. Really beautiful detailed wooden carved furniture. Honestly, I kept his number just in case I wanted to order a specialty piece for a birthday or something.

So Travis is scrolling through a few pieces when we come across a ... erm ... compromising picture. Yeah, a picture of him wrist deep in his own arse. Like, good for you man, but I can never unsee that. He was so embarrassed he stuttered out an apology, threw some money at the table for the drinks he'd had, and hightailed it out of the bar. I would have been fine to keep chatting, I'm a kinky fucker after all, but his own humiliation at accidentally showing me that picture could not handle continuing our afternoon.

There was another one who was absolutely NOT embarrassed or ashamed of her activities. She tried selling me drugs. I declined as politely as I could while scanning the room for our waiter so I could get out of there. She then pushed the issue, trying to explain that I looked anxious and she could help me out with that. So I explained that I wasn't interested and part of that was my own history with having a beloved family member dealing with addiction. That's when she mentioned there was no such thing as addiction and what was their name, she probably knew them. No.

I stopped looking for the waiter at that, didn't even drop any money either before I left. You're a drug dealer with no moral compass? You can probably afford the whole bill.

Then, besides my first meetup where the wife wanted to cuckold her husband, this was the worst. Chad. Oh poor stupid Chad. We met up at the Leaky, and at this point I've had so many awkward encounters that Hannah Abbot is probably recording them. I think she's collaborating with Pippa on an embarrassing book about me. So Chad and I are chatting, I explain to him that I am hoping to add to my friend group particularly for my Godfather because most of his childhood friends were lost during the war.
And then this absolute idiot starts going on and on about how he and his friends have been together since childhood. Well, that's lovely but if he has such a solid group of friends I am curious as to why he's looking to add to them. Usually when you already have a good crew you don't look to add more, only bringing more people in when those relationships happen organically. No, he went on a two hour tirade about his friends, all the issues they have individually, and how they are a collective train wreck.

Trying to cover up how uncomfortable I was, I tried making a joke about understanding why he was looking to make new friends and distance himself from the aforementioned wreck. No, he is for all intents and purposes looking to add a new friend to come in and fix the friend group. This entire ... interview is the only word that comes close to what he was doing ... interview was to find the perfect person to come in and essentially 'flip' their group. Then when the group was done with all their drama, that person would have enough experience to move on to a new group of friends.

Poor, stupid Chad. And poor, stupid Harry who had to spend two hours listening to him. Stupid, stupid, Harry.

And then the absolute funniest meetup. I actually debated whether or not to tell you about this one. It's insane, and embarrassing. I am mortified as to how I reacted to it. But mostly I'm just so embarrassed by the fool I spent the afternoon with.

As I've told you before, my profile has my name as James and a heavily filtered picture of myself. Hoping to avoid the Harry Potter stalkers ya know? Well, I think I did too good of a job. I'm sitting at what has become my regular table at the Leaky, making small talk with Pat, and I ask what it was about my profile that caused them to swipe right. I am honestly curious, if I know that by saying I like quidditch I'm attracting nothing but jocks or by saying I love going out to eat I'm only bringing in pretentious foodies I want to know that.

My simple question let out a rant of epic proportions. You see, dear Pat loves Harry Potter. Is obsessed with the Boy Hero to hear them tell it. Has an entire room in their home dedicated to Boy Who Lived memorabilia. My name being 'James' is what sparked their interest because that's Harry Potter's middle name did you know? I couldn't get a word in edgewise, I was treated to a timeline of the life and times of Harry Potter.

The absolute worst part, the part I'm actually disgusted with myself for doing, is when I admitted I was Harry so that they would stop talking, I said, "I thought you'd be able to tell once we met in person, but I definitely don't need the play by play of my own life."

And they didn't believe me. I was told that I am shorter than Harry Potter. That my scar was obviously a fake. "I mean, sure it's a fairly good imitation, but the real scar isn't quite so faded, you really need to get that touched up." So I argued with this crazy person for a solid ten minutes, to prove I was the person they were obsessed with. I probably would have kept going, because you know how much I hate to step down from a challenge, except Hannah must have realized I was entertaining a lunatic because she came and brought the check. Which she had written, "Stop it! This person is a crazed fan, don't convince them you're you, run away before they believe you!"

Thank goodness for Hannah! I'm sending her jewelry.

Hope your meeting went well, but hurry home so you can laugh at me in person!

Yours,
Harry
Wednesday October 10th
My dear husbands,

If today was a typical day as Head Auror, I'm going to have to have Muffy bring a few things from our closet to have on hand as necessary. So my morning was rather productive in that I think I finally got through all the files Robards had classified as active. Most of them were actually reclassified as cold cases that he just refused to stop working.

Lunch was a quick but tasty plate brought over by Zaire himself - who was wearing a visitor's badge that said: 'rescue mission - bring dad lunch.' He had enough to - surprise surprise - feed the whole department and set up a bit of a buffet. He also stuck around for a bit to answer all questions and describe in detail how he made each thing.

The Aurors utterly love him now.

After lunch, I had another meeting that I'm not entirely sure why I was there. It was a departmental Head thing, except it wasn't run by nor did it involve Hermione. This is the second one in as many days, and since all that really happened was drinking a glass of cheap wine while discussing progress on some of the current issues they're dealing with, I'm thinking that it might actually be a daily bitching session designed to help them unload and relax a bit.

After that meeting, I spent the next couple of hours meeting up with the people that needed to come in to give statements or receive updates on their cases. So, for example, one person who had reported a missing necklace a month ago was in asking if it had been found yet, and the Auror working the case rather smoothly explained that it most likely won't be found unless the thief tries to sell it, provided that it was stolen and not simply lost.

About a half an hour before the majority of the Aurors go home for the day, a woman with two children came in to ask about her missing husband. The Auror in charge of her case assured her that he was tracking the man's financial information and would let her know as soon as the man stopped moving long enough to catch up with. The older child was about 7 and sat quietly enough. She seemed sad that her father was gone, but perhaps a tiny bit resigned to the fact that he'd run off with another woman. I'm certain her mother had ranted about that at some point, probably when she didn't think the kids were listening, or were asleep or something.

The two or three year old girl was a bit fussy and looked like she hadn't slept well for a couple of days. I offered to hold her to give the mother a bit of a break, and then managed to lull the girl to sleep rather quickly. This surprised and relieved the mother, who asked about a hundred more questions than necessary simply to give her daughter a bit of a nap. I didn't mind, until the girl groaned miserably and vomited all over me.

Sigh... Not the first time a child has gotten sick on me, and since we still have littles and are having at least one more, probably not the last time either. Babbling with embarrassment, the mother took back her daughter and cried out that she was going to take her directly to St. Mungo's. That left me to vanish the majority of the mess, but still, I needed to take a shower and get changed in order to get rid of everything and SMELL better.

Thus, I simply dismissed the Auror and headed off to the men's shower for the DMLE. On the way, I ordered Muffy to bring me a basket of my favorite products and a change of clothes. I noticed that the clock on the wall in the shower room announced that it was officially the end of the shift as I entered the room, but I decided to just take a quick shower there - rather than return home to do it - so I could go back to my office and finish up a bit of paperwork before going home.

It didn't take me long to strip off, maybe two minutes, and then I was stepping up to one of the shower heads to turn it on. The shower room is like any other shower room - much the same as the Quidditch locker room - in that it has one open area with several showers so that more than one man can take a shower at a time if needed. This has come in handy after raids when the whole raid team - or at least the male half - has needed to wash off potions or spell residue before being cleared to go home.

In any case, the water had JUST gotten hot enough for me to use, when the door opened and an Auror marched in.

"I'M FRUSTRATED!" Girly roared at me, stomping her right foot and raising her clenched fists as she roared to the heavens.

"About what?" I wondered as I tilted my head and let the water get my hair wet.

"I had a woman come in this morning, FRANTIC about the fact that her ex-husband has apparently abducted their son. So I've spent all day trying to track him down, going to his flat, his job, his parents, most frequented places, and NOTHING!! Not even his financials have shown anything! It's like he somehow managed to disappear!"

Even as I lathered up my hair, I made suggestions like asking his friends if they knew anywhere he might go to hide. I also asked questions like whether the woman thought this man would hurt their son, but the answer to that was unclear as apparently the woman SAID no, but had a nervous look to her that made Girly suspect that the boy might be harmed after all.

As I was scrubbing up my body, Girly was joined by Ginger, who started talking the moment she came through the door. "Your assistant said you'd be in here. I finally made progress on my case, but it turns out that Kevin Miller is innocent - or at the very least, innocent of what his lover had accused him of. See, he DOES get a rather large amount of money deposited into his account every week, and since he is also rather charming and didn't have a clear explanation for WHY he was getting this money, his lover must've assumed that he was conning it out of a bunch of people. But nope!"

She paused to shake her head and lean against a wall. "His money comes from the same couple, and so I looked into them. At first, it looked like he might be conning them, because they're filthy rich yet they've decided to give him 50 thousand pounds a week - in muggle money because they're muggle. So I kept digging and watching him until I realized that THEY are who he meets up with every Saturday night at the hotel."

"You think they're shagging him?" Girly asked curiously, looking happy to have something else to think about for a moment.

"I know they are," Ginger stated. "I went to the room they always rent - it's a posh one - and set up surveillance spells and the like a couple of hours before they arrived this previous weekend. The ONLY reason I didn't know what they were doing before today is that my sister and her three kids all got sick on Saturday and she had me come stay with them the last few days until they got better."

"AND?" Girly asked eagerly.

"And - aside from getting paid for it - Kevin's not doing anything wrong. He's providing them with a service, which happens to be letting them tie him up and torture him in kinky ways until they ALL get off and go home. It was like watching a bloody four hour porno! I was quite hot and bothered by the time I was done."
I raised a brow at her in amusement even as I was rinsing everything off as thoroughly as possible.

Ginger caught my unasked question and answered it anyway. "YES! I'm going to have to go pull a one off tonight and have my way with him quite thoroughly!"

"Blimey this is a posh towel!" Girly exclaimed as she held out the towel Muffy had included with my things.

I turned off the water, and then took the towel from her and immediately used it to dry my hair.

"Godric's great prick!" A junior Auror cried out as he entered the room. "WARN a man when you're going to be naked, Chief!"

I couldn't help but laugh. "I should think the DOOR warned you by saying: Men's SHOWER room."

He flushed and rubbed the back of his neck, even as he tried to be covert about eyeing me up and down. Oh... right. This was one of my students. The one I'm dead certain is gay.

"Did you need something from me?" I wondered as I finished drying my hair. I then wrapped the towel around my waist and walked over to the mirrors - which are thankfully spelled to repel fog from the showers.

"Er, no. I just came in here to take a shower after the jog I just had," he explained.

I gestured to the showers. "Have at it then, and don't mind me. I just have to fix my hair." Which I was already doing, using my wand to spell it into place.

Ginger was currently reapplying her makeup in the mirror next to me. "Mind if I ask why you always have the tips of your hair died different colors? Doesn't seem quite appropriate for the bloody Head Auror."

I chuckled. "I usually have at least one of my daughters ask me to take them to the spa on a weekly basis, and while we're there, they naturally want the full treatment. Well it's more about spending time with them than being pampered - unless I'm all alone, but still. So I get the full treatment too, but since I don't really want ALL of my hair dyed, I just dye the tips, and I choose wild colors because why not? It's fun and it usually looks good on me."

"I always thought so too," Girly murmured as she studied her face in the mirror on my other side. "My favorite is the time you had your tips dyed a bright pink."

"Erm HELLO!" Gay demanded. "I can't very well take a shower if YOU'RE in here!"

"Why not?" Ginger asked with a catty smirk. "HE did. And it's not like you're interested in women anyway, so we know better than to care about your scrawny arse."

"SCRAWNY?!" He roared in outrage. "I'LL HAVE YOU KNOW THAT I'VE BEEN WORKING OUT! I'M RATHER FIT NOW!" To prove this, he immediately stripped off.

Ginger looked him up and down with frank appreciation. I rather liked what I saw myself, but I didn't take more than a look because I'm shockingly NOT horny. I mean I could stand to shag if one of my husbands showed up and got me going, but something about being vomited on sort of killed my mood. In any case, Ginger actually was surprisingly mature and turned away from him after getting a good look.
"Alright, fine, you're fit, but you're still gay, so I'M not going to waste my time trying to chat you up."

Girly had also looked him up and down, but she must've seen him before, because all she said was: "You've filled out." She then turned back to her reflection. "Try using that stuff the Chief brought. It smells SO bloody good! You're sure to pull the entire club if you smell like that."

Gay decided to open a bottle and take a whiff. "Mmm! This really IS good! I've never even HEARD of this brand! Is it any good?"

I scoffed at him without even turning away from the mirror. "Of course! Nothing but the best for me!"

"Ooo, how much does it cost? Where can I buy it?"

"Don't bother," I advised dryly. "It's made especially for me by one of the companies I own, thus you CAN'T buy it, even if you COULD afford it."

"Then I'm stealing this!" Gay announced without any shame whatsoever.

I raised a brow in amusement. "Stealing from the Head Auror?"

"Definitely!"

I laughed, finding his sheer cheek funny. "Alright, consider it a gift. I have more anyway."

Girly decided that I was in a pretty good mood and decided to try her luck. "Say Chief? If I brought you something of that boy's, do you think you could 'see' where he went?"

I shrugged, deciding that my hair was as good as it was going to get at the moment. "I could try, so long as the thing was something touched by him recently. But it might not give me anything current enough unless it was literally dropped on the way out the door."

Ready to get dressed, I walked over to my clothes and tossed my towel on the bench.

"FUCK!" Gay blurted out, leaning over a bit to get a better view of my arse.

"Aren't you trying to take a shower?" I asked him pointedly.

"Right! Sorry..." he murmured contritely, turning to step under the water from the showerhead.

Sort of strange how I hadn't been ogled or harassed by the two STRAIGHT WOMEN while taking my shower, but the one gay bloke that entered the room couldn't keep his eyes off me. I'd think I was losing my looks if I didn't know better.

In any case, I managed to finish getting dressed and returned to my office to finish up my paperwork and write this email. I'm done with everything now and dinner is due to start at any minute, so I'm going to sign off and get to it before I'm late.

Ladies and Gentlemen will you please stand? With every guitar string scar on my hand, I swear to be overdramatic and true to my~~ LOVERS! Draco
Chapter 363

Chapter Summary

Elena has her baby.

Thursday October 11, 2018

My Loves!

Per usual when something happens where I need you here right away, I am also going to send you an insta-owl and if you don't respond to the insta-owl or this email within half an hour, I'll probably beg one of the house elves to go find you and drag your cute little arses over here! So, long story short, if you get this go ahead and skip ahead to end where I tell you to grab the emergency portkeys I asked Hermione to make for you and pop yourselves here to Spain.

Our Lainie just had her baby! With how long she was in labor with Rafael I think she was assuming it would be another long labor and didn't sent out any messages saying she'd gone into labor. She probably didn't want either of you pacing around the waiting room with your high levels of anxiety....

Fine! She probably didn't want ME wearing a path in the waiting room, or Merlin forbid HER room, with my frantic pacing. But she must have waited too long because she didn't even make her way to a room at the Hospital here. My Lainie-girl had her baby in the lobby of Santo Rosario!

But that wasn't the only surprise, it seems at the last minute Elena, Rodrigo, Ethan, and Rose (who picked the original name together apparently!) decided to change the name they'd planned for baby. They'd initially decided on Rio Estefan. But after this beautiful grandchild of ours was born, with Lainie's big brown eyes and a dusting of pale brown or dark blonde hair, they decided the name just didn't fit!

So hurry up and get your behinds over here. Myself, all four of our feisty foursome, Nora, as well as Morgana, Gabe, and Dylan, have already had their chance to hold the newest baby in our lives. You don't want to have even more people hold the baby before you do - do you?

Get here so you can hold the brilliantly beautiful Emilia Rosalind, she's quite impatiently waiting to meet her other Grandpas!

Love,
Grandpa Harry

Thursday October 11th
Sweet buggering Merlin!

Hold on love, I'm about to leave the Ministry in five seconds to floo to Hogwarts and grab Oliver - who is probably still in class and hasn't gotten any communications yet. Don't worry, I'll grab the Portkey from Hermione on the way. See you soon!
Love Draco (And Oliver, who I know will want to hold the little miss as soon as possible!)
Chapter 364

Chapter Summary

Now there's three of them doing it.

Friday October 12, 2018

My Loves,

Back to life. Back to reality.

With yesterday's insanity of trying to get everyone in to the hospital to see Lainie and Emilia, then get us all settled in the hotel last night. And trying to cram in all the cuddles we could today before coming home tonight. I might hate having to say goodbye to our kids and grandkids, but I'm definitely going to enjoy sleeping in our own bed tonight.

Especially since I am sure tomorrow is going to be hard. Obviously more so for Draco since you were so close to Robards Love, but you know how much Ollie and I hate to see you hurting. And we hate even more seeing you try to cover up that hurt with one of your masks. Which I am certain you are going to try doing tomorrow. Can't let the wizarding world know what a sensitive heart you have.

But that sadness and stress is for tomorrow, tonight before I drift off to sleep I want to write about how happy I am about the newest life we've been blessed with.

My little Emilia. So beautiful. She looks a little like her Mama, a little like her brother Rafael, and a LOT like her bigger brother and big sister Joel and Jayden. I think it so beautifully speaks to how our family is that no one bats an eye at Rodrigo crying over his beautiful new daughter while her little face is Ethan's in miniature form. Just like it never mattered which of Hermione's babies came out with red hair or darker brown skin than their mum, they are loved thoroughly and completely from the moment they arrive.

I do think it's funny, all the magic in the world and we still have scan mix-ups like the muggle ultrasound goofs. I'm glad they were quickly able to come up with another name, she would have made a silly looking Rio I think! Oh who am I kidding? They could have named her Princess Consuela Banana-Hammock and I'd cry and say it was perfect.

I'm just keeping my fingers crossed that our Serenity comes out a Serenity. Although her middle name is already Blaise, if the scans are wrong we can just swap the names around and have a Blaise Serenity. Blaise Cyrano? Meh, I doubt it will happen. It's pretty rare and our Ollie is absolutely certain this baby's name is Serenity. I trust "mother"s intuition.

I am glad to be home but I hate that we had to leave our loves all the way in Spain. I love that our children know who they are and what they want out of their lives. They know they have our love and support even if they want to live on the moon! But do they have to live so far away?!? Lainie has Joel, Jayden, Rafael, and now Milie all the way in Spain. River and Maha have Evie in California, and they dragged Ori out there too with our Gemi! And Mara will have that baby sooner rather than later and there will be a third grandchild practically out of spoiling range!
Not that I don't appreciate how close some of the other grandchildren are. We have Blake close by and always willing to spend a day with his Grandpas. Sammy and Lottie visit almost as often, only a tiny bit less since Miles and Colm do like to take them traveling as often as possible. Now we have little Vinnie. And Parker and Cassie's little ones should be here any day now! I'm being awfully selfish here aren't I?

And it won't be too much longer before our own little one is here to cuddle and spoil. Two months to go! Ugh, not sure why I even say that. I went late with my pregnancies, Draco delivered early, Lainie just gave birth a solid month early. We really have no idea when Serenity is coming, she'll do everything on her own time I'm sure. I just saw all of our little ones cuddle up their newest niece and my heart ached to see them hold their newest sister.

Although my heart was so full today that I think I can hold off a bit more. I think Lainie had that moment as a parent where you see your children as each others siblings instead of just "your" kids. When she had Rafael, I knew she cared for Joel and Jayden, but she hadn't taken on any parental role. Now though, with all of them living together, raising these kids as full siblings, they are really a little family. When Joel sat between Jayden and Rafael while they took turns holding Milie? I saw our Lainie who rarely cries with a river flowing down her cheeks. It really was a beautiful sight wasn't it?

Well, as much as I will miss them and wish they were here, Elena wasn't due for another month so they have loose ends to tie up at home before they can come for a visit. But they said they're coming to visit mid-November, right around her original due date, for at least two weeks. So we can get all the baby cuddles we need then!

Okay, I am off to dreamland, tomorrow is going to come much sooner than I'd like.

Goodnight sweethearts,
Harry

Friday October 12th
Oh Harry...

The both of you are currently asleep, but I'm awake even though it's going on midnight and I need to be asleep for so many reasons. But one of the reasons I just can't sleep is...

Oliver...

While we were in Spain, in the hospital trying to NOT crowd Elena's room all at the same time, Oliver decided to take a walk around. I suppose that it's only natural considering that he's pregnant and we WERE in the Maternity Ward anyway, but he gravitated to the newborn nursery. He was wearing both the translation earbuds AND the contacts I created that can pick up on spoken words even when you can't necessarily hear the person speaking - so long as you can see their lips moving. I've programmed them to have some ability to translate too, because Jaz needed it.

Anyway, because he was wearing those contacts, as he was staring at all the babies through the window to the nursery, he caught a conversation between nurses. It seems that they were discussing one newborn boy in particular, and how his mother has basically decided to give him up because she's already got too many kids and cannot handle a child with Down Syndrome.

Poor Oliver, from the moment he realized what it was they were actually saying, he says that his heart felt like it was torn from his chest and placed in the crib with that baby. He managed to keep quiet about it - convinced himself that the right thing to do was just not say anything and let the hospital send the boy to a Spanish equivalent of Unity House (which there isn't one until Elena finishes setting it up, but I suppose that she COULD take on a child early).

Yet we know our husband pretty well. He was quiet. Abnormally so. He looked constantly lost in thought, So, we finally gave in and asked him what had him so preoccupied. That's when he told us what had happened. We spent probably a good hour just holding him and comforting him.

It seems he didn't even think it until I said it out loud: "Oliver, love, if you feel like this boy is one of ours, then he probably is. Tomorrow - when I'm at the funeral service - call up our Lawyer Armada and bring them out to Spain. They won't be able to get you custody of that baby before Monday at the earliest, but they can definitely expedite the process. Harry can join you after the funeral and stay with you in Spain until we obtain official clearance to adopt him - unless he already has prospective parents, in which case, I'm certain you'll feel better about the entire situation."

Oliver looked gobsmacked. "We... we can do that?"

We both gave him a LOOK. That said, we wanted this to be Oliver's decision because it's HIM that feels the connection, but it's also him that has to realize that it's going to be a big responsibility to raise a baby with Down Syndrome. With me currently working as Head Auror for the foreseeable future, I can't guarantee him that I'll be any help, and even though I know that you can and will help him, Harry, it's still a lot - enough that even you need a bit of time to think about it as well.

As for me, I said it before and I'll say it again: So long as I'M not the one getting pregnant and being expected to get up a million times a night, what's one more child? We already have enough to start our own Sovereign Nation! Aside from mixing up names, I can't think of anything different between having 21 and having 22 children...

BLIMEY!

I should probably not say that out loud, it's a bit staggering...

I tell you what, my loves, tell me tomorrow whether or not to brace myself and I'll support you no matter what you decide.

Because of you I'm alive,
Draco
Chapter 365

Chapter Summary

Harry breaks it down.

Saturday October 13, 2018

My Everything,

This is probably going to be mostly directed at Oliver. Although I'll probably be talking with you after the funeral before I actually talk with Draco so I'll assume you're both reading this.

I think we all have a lot of concerns with the idea of adopting a newborn with our current circumstances. I think I will go objection by objection and tell you my take on each issue.

1- We have twenty-one official children, plus children-in-laws, honorary children, and a twenty-second child on the way due in two months.

Yeah, we have a lot of children. But we have the love and time to devote to them, the money to provide all of their needs and most of their wants, and once you hit the double digits what's another invite to the party? I am not trying to say we should just pick up every child we can until we literally have the hundred children Draco talked about having all those years ago. But do you think there is really going to be a difference by sheer numbers between twenty-one and twenty-two children? We live in a circus, why not add to our ranks.

2- This child, even if he doesn't have any of the additional health concerns that can often come hand in hand with Down Syndrome, at the very least he will have special needs due to that condition.

We have dealt with many special needs with our children. Some we knew about at birth or adoption, and some we didn't find out until later. We are a very lucky family, we have dedicated Healers who love and support our family and that we trust with our children's lives. We have the research capability, the travel capability, and the financial capability to meet those needs.

-We knew right away that Jaz was deaf. That meant changes for our family. We had to learn to communicate differently. And it only made our family stronger.
-When River came into our lives, we had to help him overcome the trauma of seeing his mum die in front of him.
-We've dealt with addiction with Ori.
-We had years of potions and surgeries to help Hazel transition fully.
-When Zaire came into our lives, we had to not only help him with trauma like we did River but he had physical problems from abuse and malnutrition.
-Trey has Lycanthropy.
-Gabe has Epilepsy.
-Morgana needed her magic bound.

And if her teachers' concerns are right, it sounds as though our Lily may have some sort of learning disability. Professor Bramble seems to think from observation it's highly likely she has dyslexia.
When have we ever said "that child has too many problems, let's not take that onto our already full plate?"

Never. That's when.

If anything, our family full of different needs would be the best place for a child who has a little something extra, we already have every specialist in the UK on speed dial!

3- Limited parenting time with Draco's work schedule, Ollie's work schedule, and our children we already have.

I am a stay at home dad. My hours are completely open for caring for children. Yes, we have twenty-one, almost twenty-two children. But ... eight of them are grown and out of the house. Not that they don't still need us, but me having another baby in my arms in no way takes away from how many times I can meet up with Hazel for coffee or meet up with Eris at the park with Luka. Shtara lives at Elena's school in the dorms when she isn't performing. Siri and Zwei live at Hogwarts during the school year and when he's not at Hogwarts, Siri is traveling with the Tornados.

Then the middles and littles. Zaire and Jaz, for all that they are only twelve and nine years old have decided to have full time jobs. They are so independent I find myself chasing them down and trying to get THEM to pay attention to ME! And the same can be said of the feisty foursome for the most part. At least the three oldest of them, want to be out exploring all day long. As long as I feed them, read them their bedtime stories, and make sure I'm always at least available to listen to a story about some animal they found in the forest they rarely have time for me.

All by myself, without anyone to help me, essentially has Nora, the toddler triplets, and will soon have Serenity to care for. Yes that's a lot. But I was being a big fat liar when I said all by myself without anyone to help me. These children have three grandmas who regularly tell us we don't let them steal the kids away enough. An army of house elves who love our children like their own. And while you both have full time jobs, it's not like either of you are hands-off dads. Even if you both worked full time, I could handle this many children on a day to day basis even if we added this little one.

And not trying to pressure you in ANY way Ollie ... but you know you don't have to work right? I know you love it. But you could take a few years off if you wanted to. You waited for babies for so long. We don't need the money. Come be a stay at home dad with me! We could be Draco's kept men. His pretty trophy husbands. You can go back to work when they are older. You can wait until they're all at least in Traditions, or headed off to Hogwarts. No pressure, you know I will support your career no matter what. But when I see you melt under a cuddle puddle of kids? I see how good you'd be at it.

So, with all that being said, Ollie it sounds like this child is pulling at you. Whether that means this is our child, or that you feel the need to be a safe space for him until he finds his parents, he's calling to your heart. How can we possibly ignore that?

I will never say no to adding more children to our family. I didn't feel the pull of this baby, but then again I didn't walk through the ward either. Does this feel right Ollie? Does he feel like ours? I think of the look on Atreyu's face when we brought him to Unity California, his sweet little accented voice saying "But you smell like mine." I know you're not a werewolf Ollie, but does he smell like ours?

Then let's go get him.
Wow. That got away from me. I was going to tell you your concerns were silly and that of course we can go get him. And as usual, it turned into a Harry babbling novella.

I need to get ready for the funeral, then wake up the blonde monster that lives in our bed to get HIM ready for the funeral. I'll see you soon. Just let me know if I should be bringing the lawyers and a diaper bag.

All of my love and longing,
Harry

Saturday October 13th
My solid foundations,

Today was harder than I thought it was going to be. I thought I was just going to pull on my Malfoy mask and sit silently in the back of the crowd during the service, but no. It seems that Robards didn't really have friends. He had work friends in that he was on friendly terms with Roche, Ramsey, and me - as the other three 'higher ups' in the Auror Department (although, to be fair, since Ramsey is the Head of Interrogations, he technically works for the other side of the DMLE too).

Robards has gone out drinking with his Aurors after hard cases and the like, but he never really had a mate to hang out with, watch movies, and talk about things that AREN'T work related. So... The man conducting the services asked the three of us if we wanted to say a few words before his sister. I was the only one who couldn't say no, and so, I had to come up with something more or less on the spot.

That's why my speech sounded so odd - I was at a bit of a loss for words...

"Looking around today, I can see that Robards was depended on by every Auror in the Department. All of us are sad that he's gone, but... none of us ever really knew him. He was a HARD man to get to know. Hell! Even after working with him for YEARS, I can't really say that I knew him. All I knew about him was that he was one of the few people in my life who understood that because of the mistakes of my youth, I am driven to make the world a better place for my children.

"He not only understood this about me, but he was willing to use my skills in ways that are best saved for the rare occasion when they're necessary. And so, I think maybe he thought of ME as a friend. It was most definitely the sort of friendship in which we gave each other what we needed - so long as you keep in mind that what he needed - the all consuming PASSION in his life - was to solve cases and incarcerate criminals. And along the same lines, I need to use the things I know how to do that others do not - the skills that I was taught by the Dark Lord and his followers - to do GOOD. Our...

"Our friendship was stronger than I realized... It wasn't until he was gone - and WHY - that I truly had a moment to sit down and think everything through, and I am left with just this... I failed him as a friend. I was clearly not there for him when he needed someone to talk to, and so, all I can do is pray that he has found peace and can rest.

"Well... That and I can do my best to ensure that his work will live on..."
When I sat down (somehow we'd been seated in the front row, opposite the Aisle from Robards' sister, all her kids, and his estranged ex-wife, son, and grandchildren), Gemma stood up to talk about her brother, and while I'll admit that I was so preoccupied with having failed as a friend that I didn't hear everything, the fact that she started with: "My brother most definitely was a HARD man to get to know, and I say that as the person who grew up with him," well... It stuck with me.

The only other part of her speech that caught my attention was when she talked about how her brother loved her kids. How he doted on them, watching them when she needed him to, and was basically wrapped around their tiny fingers. This made me wonder WHEN AND IF Robards ever bloody slept?! Sigh...

As I was saying, this whole thing has hit me harder than I anticipated, and so now that the funeral is over and Harry ran off to support Oliver while I stayed behind to have a few drinks with the mourning Aurors, I... I have to apologize for not heading out to Spain. I thought I might once my obligatory bonding time was over, but when that happened, I just...

I needed to get out of my head, so, I'm at the Adventure Park fighting Inferi. Please tell me everything that's going on with the little peanut, but be aware that I might exhaust myself to the point that I don't wake up again until Tuesday or Wednesday.

You're the ones I need, the way back home is always long, but if you're close to me I'm holding on, Draco
Monday October 15, 2018

Our Love,

Darling, we are so sorry for your loss. I personally may not understand it, but I do know how important Robards was to you. I know how hard his loss was hitting you even before the funeral. So, for you to admit that the funeral made things even harder for you emotionally than they already were means it has to be really bad.

Then, you admitted the crystal room wasn't going to cut it in this case and you needed the inferi cave? Oh our poor, sweet, husband. It seems you spent the night Saturday and most of the day yesterday there just raging out your grief. And then immediately went home and passed out. Poor Muffy had to shoot something like three cleansing charms at you apparently just to keep the stink from soaking into our bedding. Oh well, worst case scenario we go shopping for some new bedding. You love shopping! We could get something beautiful, maybe in deep reds and golds?

Anyway, as of the last time I tried insta-owling you there was still no response. Which I assume means you are still sleeping. Look, between your grief and how much you hate being woken, we normally wouldn't want to wake you for anything short of an emergency. We'd love to let you sleep until Tuesday or Wednesday like you warned us may happen, but we really need you here.

We can write out everything that's happened the last two and a half days you've been indisposed, and you know I'll babble my way through at least a summary (Harry doing most of the writing here!), but it's probably best if you came here and had the conversation with the lawyers and sit down with us.

I know you've already said you will support whatever Oliver needs to do about this baby. And that you know me well enough that you knew I'd get here, meet this little boy, and there would be no way in Hell we were going home without him. Well, surprise surprise surprise, this is what happened. The lawyers are doing what they need to be doing. We're enjoying our time visiting the baby and when we can't do that we're spending tons of time with our littles and Lainie's family. But we need you with us.

I got here Saturday evening after I left the funeral. I got to the rooms Ollie was in with the toddlers to find him sitting on the ground with Morgana pretty much standing over him yelling. "No! No Dada, no!"

Now, we all know our Morgana is quite demanding and knows exactly what she wants and wants it now! But she is almost never upset with her Daddy Ollie. I laughed a little as I walked in the door saying, "Well well well Miss Sass, why are you yelling at your Daddy hmm?" Only to get the rest of the way into the room to see our beautiful husband wasn't sitting on the ground to make playing with the toddlers easier, he was curled up crying. Those beautiful brown eyes, normally full of laughter, sometimes giving me that exasperated look, so often with the bedroom eyes....
Oliver here, just letting Harry know to shut it about my eyes and get on with the story.

Yikes! Morgana isn't the only sassy one in this family apparently! As I was saying before I was so rudely interrupted, Oliver's normally happy eyes were full of tears. I stayed very calm and asked him what was wrong ...

Oliver again, Harry panicked and started hyperventilating asking if myself, the toddlers, Serenity, or any number of people were alright while frantically wiping the tears off of my face.

Ugh, semantics Ollie. Shush you, I'm telling the story.

Anyway, sassy daughter, pretty brown eyes, Harry asks questions. Basically, Ollie was crying because he had just found out some unpleasant information about this baby, crumbled to the floor crying, and Morgana was displeased that her Daddy was so sad and decided to shout at him to stop crying in the only way she could.

Baby boy was in the NICU, he's very tiny and quite perfect. But he wasn't a newborn like we all assumed. No, he was born over two months ago and hasn't managed to go "home" yet. I'm sure you're assuming it's because he's medically unwell right?

Wrong. Besides being born slightly premature, which he did have to stay a few additional days for - and his mild heart condition they noticed upon birth which they quickly did magi-surgery on and is completely healed - he has no reason to still be in the hospital except his mother thinks bringing him home would be too much work with her already "so full" household (she has three other children).

Sorry, I should say she has three children. Because this baby is ours. Ours damnit! We're not bringing him home or sending him to one of the Unity Houses to make sure he's taken care of for his other parents. We're his parents. Period. The lawyers are taking care of the legal aspects right now. Not sure how long it will take because it's international but I guess she had just made her decision to give him up on Wednesday of last week but hadn't actually contacted any agencies or anything. So this adoption should be pretty cut and dry.

I can hear you asking if we've already decided he's ours, you've already given your blessing, and there shouldn't be any issues obtaining custody, why do we need you here so badly?

Draco, this beautiful boy, this little ray of sunshine, has lived his entire life so far in the hospital for no other reason than he would be too much work. He's not spent the first two months of his life with skin to skin contact with his family, making connections, in a place where he recognizes voices from the womb. He's lived in a plastic cot and been fed and held almost exclusively by medical staff. He's not been anybody's baby. And now he's going to be ours. We need you here, because you are a very important part of what being "ours" is.

Love, this little boy hasn't even been given a name. He's over two months old and has no one and nothing to call his own. Not even his own name.

Come meet your son, help us name him, and help us show him he belongs.

Yours in tears and hope,
Harry and Oliver

Monday October 15th
My husbands,
Aww! This little peanut is PERFECT!

Did you seriously ask me to help with names? Sigh... Alright, erm...

How about this? How about I just sit here and snuggle this little one, his naked little body on my bare chest as I breathe him in, while YOU two come up with the perfect name for him. After all, Oliver just came up with a brilliant name for our daughter to be.

Oh oh! I know! Sheng Long! hahaha! I kid...

So, the Lawyer Armada just left us and it's official. All it took was them coming up with a rather simple contract stating that we would adopt this baby boy and give him the best care in the world, and all his mother had to do was sign it and give up her rights to him. Naturally, she was sobbing from happiness and sadness. She really wanted to try to raise him with love, but she just didn't have the time to devote to his care, and she didn't think that it was fair to her other kids to remake her entire life so that it revolved around him rather than them.

Of course, it didn't hurt that we were prepared to reward her for doing the right thing by this little man.

Oh hey! I just thought of the perfect name! We could name him Gawain! Gawain Robards Malfoy-Wood, what do you think?

Oh look! He's sleeping! I could just kiss him a hundred million times!

Uh-oh! It seems that Morgana - who had been sitting on Oliver's knee while eating her dinner - suddenly noticed that I was holding another baby. She's now banging on my leg and crying: "No daddy! No! ME!!"

Alright, my little love, I can lay him down since he's sleeping and hold you for a bit, how's that sound?

Well, it seems that Morgana is insisting that I sing her a song, and that has attracted the rest of the kids. I guess I should take advantage of this and sing a lullaby, huh? See who I can get to drop off so that we can celebrate our newest child in private, eh?

Draco turns the dictation device on so that he can hold Morgana in one arm and Nora in the other while he sings them all a lullaby.

"When you were here before, couldn't look you in the eye, you're just like an Angel, your skin makes me cry, you float like a feather, in a beautiful world, I wish I was special, you're so fucking special, but I'm a creep, I'm a weirdo, what the hell am I doing here? I don't belong here .."

"Draco!"

"Yes, Harry, my love?"

"Maybe you shouldn't sing the kids to sleep with a song that tells them you're a creep and a weirdo!"

"What?! It's a gorgeous song!"

"Draco, try a different one."
"Alright love, hmm... I'd like to kill you with a kiss, I'd like to strike you down with bliss, I'd like to tie you up in knots, until your heart stops -"

"DRACO!"

"WHAT?! IT'S SOOTHING!"

"TRY AGAIN!"

"FINE! Hmm... Come little children, I'll take thee away, into a land of enchantment, come little children, the time's come to play, here in my garden of shadows..."

"You going to let him sing this one, Harry?"

"Yeah, Ollie, I LOVE this song."

"So it's fine if he creeps the kids out so long as he sings a song you love?"

"More like this one is subtle enough that I don't think they'll think anything other than it's a lovely song."

"Ah..."

"Hush my beloved husbands, before you disturb the kids and prevent them from falling asleep."

"Is it weird that he can sing that like its a lullaby and it still manages to turn me on?"

"No Ollie, that's pretty much how I feel."

"And you might as well send the email now - dictation device - because I'm never going to get through a bloody song..."

Device sends the email.
Tuesday October 16, 2018

Oh my Dragon,

I suppose I should have been clearer in my email yesterday. I definitely wanted you to come meet your son. I wanted you here with us while we learned and loved on this sweet baby. And we truly wanted you here for the naming process. He's your son, you should be happy with whatever name is chosen. But, Darling? When I said "help us name him" no one was actually asking you for suggestions. You have a one-track mind when it comes to naming. Or I suppose it's often a two-track mind. You either want to name them some version of Draco/Dragon OR you want to name them the most ridiculous suggestions you can think of.

I would give you the world if I could. And right now while I know you're hurting, I really do want to give you everything I possibly can if only I could see the sadness leave your quicksilver eyes. Side note: you should have seen how lit up with love your eyes were holding our baby last night! But seriously Draco? Gawain? I know how much you cared for the man, and I am trying to be supportive. I can even admit that while his methods were .... let's leave it at 'questionable,' that Robards was a good-intentioned man who did many good things.

But - and I don't want to hurt you while you're grieving - you know I did not care for him. I want to be here for you, but I can not name my child after someone I actively didn't care for. I'm sorry but no.

Also, it would possibly be a different story if his name wasn't awful! Gawain? That is awful. It sounds like some syndrome you need to overcome. "What do you have?" "I got diagnosed with a gawain, but I'm close to overcoming it! Pray for me."

However, as much as I tease you about the names you throw out for suggestions, I have to admit I really do love Eltanin. It's the brightest star in the Draco constellation. It actually sounds lovely. But with our little guy having DS means enunciation and speech clarity is likely to be a problem for him. Eltanin has advanced sound combinations that will likely be more difficult for him to learn. I want him to be able to say at least his first name as clearly as possible when he gets older.

Well, after much debate last night after most of the littles were asleep, we finally settled on Nicolas. My little Nic. Nicky. And yes, we actually took one of your suggestions. I can't wait to introduce our perfect little Nicolas Eltanin Malfoy-Wood to his entire family.

Although it will definitely be about a week until he gets a full introduction to everyone. Once we got through the ordeal of finding out if he was going to be put up for adoption. Waiting through the weekend. Dealing with the paperwork. Bringing you here to meet him. Picking his name. It's now the sixteenth. Our Lainie's birthday is Monday the twenty-second. As she's twenty-eight years old and hasn't lived with us in basically a decade, I rarely get the chance to celebrate her birthday with her. I don't think I've made her a birthday breakfast since her last year at Hogwarts! So, we will be staying in Spain through early Monday afternoon.

It will be a good excuse to relax and enjoy the babies for a few days and obviously help Lainie out with Emilia so she can rest up from labor. Obviously Draco, you can bounce back and forth so you can keep helping out at the Ministry, but Ollie, myself, and the littles can stay here until Monday. Ollie has his paternity leave kicking in so he doesn't need to be back to Hogwarts for a while anyway.

And I think it will be good for Morgana to have a bit of a distraction while she gets used to her Daddies having another baby in their arms.

Don't worry about her, I have a plan. Sibling rivalry is normal. Her being jealous of attention being elsewhere is totally normal at her age. But we can do whatever we can to stop it before it becomes a big issue. Obviously showing her that she's special and occasionally putting Nic down to give her attention is great. That way she sees she's not been replaced. But it won't always be a realistic option and she will have to learn that sometimes he will need our attention more. Just as sometimes she will need our attention more.

Knowing my Morgana the way I do, I think the best plan is to convince her that he is HER baby. She's fiercely protective of her loved ones. We KNOW this. So we just need to have her as involved in caring for him as her age will allow. "Morgana can you be a great big sister and get your baby a nappy?" "Morgana what song should we sing to your brother?" Any way we can possibly get her involved and invested will get her to a point where she might actually get upset with us if we aren't giving him enough attention!

But for now I am going to sign off and do the other part of my plan; exhaust the toddlers with outdoor play so they sleep deeply and early in the evening!

Wish me luck!
Harry

Wednesday October 17th
My caring men,

Since I had to go into the office today, and since Dean and Seamus wanted to have Dylan today/tonight, I decided to bring all three of them with me. After dropping Dylan off, I brought Gabriel and Morgana to the Auror Department with me. They were surprisingly well behaved, content to scribble on the walls of my office - I mean create art - as I had small progress update meetings with all of the Aurors on their respective cases.

Interestingly enough, as the day progressed, I had quite a few of the Aurors just forget to leave the office after they were done. Instead, they got comfortable on the floor and mimed animals and the like to the littles. Morgana tolerated this so long as Gabriel was laughing, but any time he pouted for even a tiny second, she would retaliate against the offender by bashing them over the head with her stuffed monkey.

At one point, the Head of the International Confederation of Wizards, British Seats, came in to ask if I planned to attend the daily meeting (bitching session), noticed the littles (not to mention half my department on the floor), and got all on his high horse about how the Ministry was no place for children.

Before I could tell him to go shove it, Morgana went from quiet and more or less happy to irate in about a second flat. She pointed at ICOW, BS and let out a high pitched screech. To his surprise - but not mine - the magical (and supposedly shatter resistant) hourglass on the shelf next to him, near the door, exploded and the sand flew around the room so that it could attack him rather relentlessly.

Sighing, I stood up, walked over, and picked Morgana up. "That's enough, love."

She gave me a look that suggested I was being supremely unfair in chiding her rather than him, but otherwise stopped throwing a fit and let the sand fall to the floor. I straddled her over my hip and turned to give ICOW, BS a look to let him know that I actually did feel him to be at fault.

"As you can see, I'm too busy to attend the meeting today."

He was looking Morgana over as if trying to figure out a mystery. "Is that one of your adopted children? Do you know who her birth parents are that she's so powerful?"

"I actually gave birth to her and her brothers - or well, I carried all of them until two of them had to be moved to Harry for all our safety. The POINT is that I AM her birth father, and if you think SHE'S powerful, try pissing her dads off."

I think he had enough sense to realize that the look on my face and the tone of my voice was not friendly to him in the slightest. He cleared his throat, looked like he was about to protest, then apparently changed his mind. "Right. I'll let the others know that you're not coming."

After he left, Morgana insisted that I put her down so that she could go back over to her brother and give him a kiss on the cheek before resuming her artistic picture making.

"They say that kids have a innate ability to judge a person's character," one of the junior Aurors murmured, stroking his chin. "I wonder what he did to trigger such a strong reaction in this little miss?"

"He opened his mouth," I stated.

Girly giggled. "So... word is that you took off the last two days because you were busy adopting a new baby."

"Yep, his name is Nicolas Eltanin Malfoy-Wood, he's two months old, and his mum had to give him up because she couldn't care for a baby with Down Syndrome," I explained. Then added: "And he's one of the most adorable babies you've ever seen."

"Aww," Girly purred happily. "When's his birthday?"

"August 8th," I answered. "Why?"

"That means he's a Leo. He's going to be the sweetest and most generous person when he grows up - a little ray of sunshine everywhere he goes," Girly predicted.

I smiled at her. "He will if Harry and Oliver have anything to say about it!"

"Since it seems like everyone has given their reports, do you think you have a minute?" Girly wondered.

"I suppose," I murmured.

"I brought a little stuffed puppy," she said as she pulled said puppy out of her pocket - that seems to have been charmed bigger on the inside. "I still haven't been able to find a TRACE of the missing boy or his dad, and his mum seems to be getting tetchy and, er... highly upset."

I nodded. "Understandable. If one of my kids went missing, I'm not sure I'd sleep until he or she was found." I sat in my chair and got as comfortable as possible since I had no idea how long the vision - if I got one - would take.

Funnily enough, not all the Aurors (and by this point, all of the ones who weren't already in my office had crowded in out of curiosity over the fuss Morgana had made) know about my visions. Only those who happened to be in class when Robards came in to hand me a finger knew. And Ginger, of course. In any case, because it's not a widely known bit of information, most of the Aurors looked a little confused as to what was going on.

Once I was comfortable, Girly handed me the toy. I took it and closed my eyes. The vision came quickly.

"I see the boy... He's about 2 years old with sandy blond hair and brown eyes and... he's got a look to him that makes me think he might be Autistic. He's playing with this toy dog, making adorable little woof woof noises. I think he might actually be... not deaf exactly, but hard of hearing because his parents seem to be arguing in the background, but he only perceives them as a sort of annoying drone...

"He looks up at his parents, allowing me to read their lips. The dad is shouting - and I could be wrong, but it looks like: 'Fine, you lazy bitch, I'll go to the store and get bread, milk, and eggs! Then YOU can make us some bloody sandwiches!'

"The dad is, oh... between 175 and 180 centimeters tall with light blond hair and blue eyes. The mum is closer to 160 to 165 centimeters with rich brunette hair and brown eyes. She looks... huh... She almost looks high.

"The dad storms out of their flat in such a furor that he slams the door, and for a moment, the boy seems like he's going to cry, but he sticks out his tongue and bites it to stop himself. Even so, he, erm... somehow manages to sneak around behind his mother so that she doesn't notice him. When he gets to the door, he tries to reach for the knob, but he can't open it, so he sits down in the closet next to the door and plays with his puppy, stroking it and making soft shh noises.

"The vision shows only this for what must be the equivalent of five or ten minutes. It's hard to tell as it's sped up and there's not exactly a clock. Suddenly, the mum yanks the boy out of the closet by his foot and shakes him. I cannot make out the words, but by the volume of the droning, she must be shouting at him.

"He manages to kick her, which makes her drop him. He tries to run, but he has nowhere to go except for under the nearest bed. She drags him out from under there, and then beats him with the stuffed dog - which might not SOUND too bad, until you realize that these big eyes are made out of glass and caused loud thuds on impact. I'm pretty sure one of the blows split his lip and caused blood to get everywhere. He's screaming and trying his best to get away. That droning is getting higher in pitch and I can't understand it until she grabs his head so that she can keep his mouth closed with her hand."
"Now I can see that she's screaming at him to: 'Shut up, you bloody brat! Shut your goddamned mouth!'

"He bites her fingers, making her smack him. Her eyes are utterly bloodshot, and I wonder if those minutes of quiet before the storm involve her taking something that drove her to this state. He tries to get away again, but she grabs him and none too gently brings him to the bathtub, which has already been filled with water. For all I know, it could be left over from his last bath - or hers, whenever that might've been.

"She throws him in the tub, but there's enough water that he doesn't hit his head. It's blurry, but now she's not just trying to drown him, but choke him at the same time. The vision starts growing darker, but suddenly, the boy is yanked out of the water and held to his father's chest as the man pins the mother against the wall with a hand. I cannot see his lips nor hear his words, but I imagine that he's yelling at her for trying to murder their son.

"After a long minute, in which the boy is staring at the toy dog on the floor and holding onto his father for dear life - but not crying, as far as I can tell - his father takes him away..."

After I fell silent, the vision done and yet I needed a moment to replace what I'd just seen with happier thoughts, one of the older male Aurors swore: "Jesus fucking Christ!"

"If any of that's true, then why didn't the dad just call us to take the mum away?" A younger male Auror asked.

Girly sighed rather heavily. "Well... according to the case file, the mother claimed that the father was abusive and had a record. Naturally, I had to look it up in order to try to find him, and it's true, he's been convicted of a lot of crimes, most of which are related to selling illegal potions and fighting rival sellers. I guess, erm, maybe he..."

Bletchley groaned unhappily. "With a record like that, not many would believe a man accusing his wife of trying to murder their son. Especially if her record's clean and she claims it was him."

"Even so!" The young Auror cried out indignantly. "That's what VERITASERUM is for!"

Ginger shrugged. "Maybe he assumed that we would be far more likely to throw them both in a cell until we sorted the situation out. Seems to me like he just wanted to get his son to safety and make sure that he's never harmed again."

Bletchley must have looked over at me and noticed that I was still rubbing my temples. "Roche, correct me if I'm wrong, but doesn't the investigation from this point shift to trying to gathering evidence on the mum? If she tried to murder her son, then aren't we obligated to bring her to justice?"

"Exactly so!" Roche agreed. "Auror Walters!"

Girly sat up a bit straighter and looked at him. "Yes sir?"

"I want you to investigate the mother. See if you can dig up anything on her. In the meantime, I'll personally call her and ask if we can send in a team of magi-forensic investigators to ostensibly look for things against him, but really, see if they can confirm anything from the vision."

That prompted me to hold up the stuffed dog. "I should think that even if she cast every cleaning spell in the book at this, there should still be some actual evidence on the dog. Blood around the eyes seems most likely to me."
"Right!" Girly agreed, taking the dog and putting it in an evidence bag to bring to the lab.

"Er, Chief?" One of my ex-students said, gaining my attention. "Something seems to be wrong with your son..."

I looked over and found Gabriel having a mild seizure. I immediately stood up and went over to take him into my arms. "It's alright. Everything is fine. It's just a little one. Muffy! Please tell Harry to document a mild seizure in Gabriel's Epilepsy journal."

"Yes master," Muffy's voice rang out even though she herself didn't pop into the room.

To my surprise, Morgana tugged on my trouser leg. I responded by getting on my knees and then sitting on my feet. "Something wrong, my love?"

Rather than try to reply, she simply stroked Gabriel's head and hummed. Her humming seemed to - well not exactly calm him because he's used to these and doesn't get scared or cry or anything, but erm… soothe him? In any case, after she pet him for a few seconds, he seemed to relax and his seizure tapered off until he was back to normal.

I smiled at him and gave him a kiss on his slobbery chubby little baby lips. "Hi there, love. Feeling better? Hungry?"

"Num num," Gabriel agreed as he made the sign for putting food in his mouth.

I set him in my lap so that my hands were free and signed even as I asked: "What would you like to eat? Caviar? Pâté?"

He made the sign for caviar, so I summoned a large jar of Golden Sterlet Caviar and a container of sourdough rye crackers out of my carryall watch. After relocating back to my chair, I made up a plate of crackers and caviar for Gabriel, making sure there was enough for Morgana too, who was crawling herself onto my lap. She licked the caviar off a cracker even as I munched on a crackerful myself. Then Morgana signed pâté, making me realize that I'd rather like some as well, so I summoned that and made up some crackers for the three of us.

One of the younger Aurors leaned over to loudly whisper in Girly's ear: "Do rich kids eat that? I mean they're still kids, right..."

Girly laughed but didn't say anything.

"Muffy! Do we have any of that tuna sashimi left?"

"Certainly Master," Muffy assured me as she popped into the office with a plate of perfect sashimi.

Morgana tried to steal the entire plate! "Mine!"

"Oh hell no!" I informed her. "I paid for it!"

"MINE!" She roared.

So I did the only thing I could. I duplicated the plate so that she had one of her own. Gabriel grabbed a piece off my plate and took small bites of it in his one hand as he ate crackers and caviar with his other. Have I mentioned how much I LOVE our kids?!

In any case, we were all shocked to find that it was almost time for the majority of the Aurors to go home. With a laugh, Penny Pettigrew dismissed everyone else from my office so that she could have a chat with me in private - aside from our kids. Then she basically told me that while she appreciates that I'm not overworking myself like my predecessor, she's a little disappointed that I took off so many days in a row. I told her about having a grandson and then adopting a new son of our own, and while she understood, she expressed concerns over my priorities.

That was when I told her that I'd basically decided to stay on until I could find the right person to take over the job. Which led to an in depth discussion on all the changes I wanted to make, such as hiring an assistant for the Head Auror, and possibly another one for the Deputy. Basically, I had thought and planned this out so well by now that she was impressed by the direction I was taking and gave me her blessings. Which honestly, saves HER from having to find a replacement for me.

After that, I decided to write this email, and now I'm going to use the international floo to bring me and the littles back to Spain for the night,

Only you (two) are my life among the dead,
Draco

Chapter End Notes

By the way, in case you are like: Wait, Draco bound her destructive magic???
What actually happened was that Draco took a long time to follow all the various strings of her magic so that he could bind SPECIFICALLY the ability to cause death. So she still has the rest of her destructive magic.
Thursday October 18, 2018

Draco,

It sounds like, minus that horrifying vision you experienced, you had a wonderful day at work and with two of the toddlers. Visits by some of your favorite Aurors, babies being artists, Morgana laying the smack down on someone who annoys you, food you consider yummy. Sounds like a real Draco kind of day.

We, as you now know, had our own version of a wonderful day yesterday. With the toddler trio off with you, we had time to do some more big kid activities. We just did them while Ollie and I each had a baby strapped to us while they slept. Ollie, for most of the time had Emilia strapped to him as she’s a bit smaller and I didn’t want to add much to the fact that he’s already carrying around one baby nonstop! I had Nic all cozy and cuddled up with me.

Lissa, Cael, Seph, Trey, and even Nora picked out our afternoon activity; ziplining through Toledo. Don’t worry, the babies and Ollie didn’t zipline. Oh, who do I think I am talking to? You’d probably think it was a fun activity to bring a newborn on provided you cast all the necessary safety spells.

I am sure you’re well aware, but ziplining was Seph’s idea with an intense agreement from Atreyu. Lily and Caelum agreed and thought it would be fun. Meanwhile Nora Madeline decided she wanted to be one of the big kids and decided to power through her worry and zipline with her siblings. The four bigger kids each went on their own, I zipped with Nora, and Ollie waited at the exit with the babies.

I had such a blast! I love watching the foursome in their death-defying element. I thoroughly enjoyed the thrill, it had that same wind in your face rush as flying, and I got to see this amazing side of Nora I’d not seen before. Her fierce determination.

When I first met our Nora, she was a toddler living alone on the streets of Paris searching for her Daddies. Her strength to survive alone, the dedication it took to walk out of the safe place she had been staying, took an intense amount of grit and determination. Since she’s been home, it’s not as though she has been in a bubble, but she’s certainly not a thrill-seeker like her big siblings. She seems pretty content to be a pampered princess and limit her “danger” to the kiddie coasters at the amusement park.

I am completely fine with this. She can be as reserved as she wants to be, she deserves to feel safe in everything. But today this determined glint came into her eyes and there was no talking her down. She was going to do everything her big siblings could do. When we were being strapped in, I could feel her shaking but her chin was in the air, her hands were clenched, and she was doing it.

Halfway through the zipline she unclenched and started screaming. I had a moment where I thought she was terrified and contemplated screwing the statute and apparating us the hell out of there. Until I realized she was screaming in exhilaration. She was thrilled and excited and running on adrenaline, but mostly she was proud of herself.

So she got to pick the evening activities. After ziplining, Ollie and I brought Emilia and Nic to Lainie and crew, then we took the …. Feisty fivesome? to a kids’ cooking class.
Where we cooked food that was better than traditional kid fare, certainly something that extended our kids already extensive palate. But it also wasn’t disgusting. I’m going to eat delicious food that is healthy and not boring old nuggets and chips. But that doesn’t mean I need to eat meat mush or nasty fish egg goo.

Since I’m on something so negative (seriously, meat paste and fish goo, blech) I may as well touch on the horrible vision you had to experience yesterday.

I feel so badly for everyone in the situation besides that garbage human ‘mother.’ You had to see it. The dad had to witness the end and decide between turning her in and escaping to safety, that poor boy had to experience it. But some of your visions have ended so badly that I can’t help but be thankful that as horrifying as the experience was, he’s alive, he’s somewhere safe.

It seems to me that this probably wasn’t a first incident. If the dad left and this child immediately tried to go with him and then hid? Shushing his toy dog? That tells me he knew to be scared of being alone with her.

I’d like to meet this woman, where does she live again?

Anyway, I can’t think about her or I will RHH all over the place. And I want to just have a good day with my babies. When you left for the office today you took the five bigger kids with, I think you said Nora and Trey were wanting to spend the day at Hogwarts while Lissa, Seph, and Cael were headed into the office with you. That left Ollie and me with Morgana, Gabe, Nic, and I’ll be popping back to the UK to get Dylan in a little bit.

Hopefully we’ll have the chance, without the bigger kids here, to really watch Gabe. I’m not surprised he had a seizure with you yesterday. If his record is as correct as I think it is, he seems to have mild seizures after portkeying, which is how you took them to the Ministry yesterday. But he didn’t have one last night and hasn’t had one today, which tells me the floo doesn’t seem to trigger his seizures. I know we will likely never cure his epilepsy or see him one hundred percent seizure free. But if we can be aware of certain triggers and keep some of the seizures from happening, I’d like to do that.

Hope today goes well and your team finds that bitch and makes her pay!

See you tonight for dinner! Which will NOT be fish goo.

Yours,
Harry

Friday October 19th,
My dearest loves,

I am SO glad that I didn't bring any of the kids to work today! I'm so busy that I don't think my arse has touched my seat for more than five seconds. I've been HOPPING all day! Tell you all about it later.

Love you both and give the kids kisses for me!
Draco
Chapter 369

Chapter Summary

It's been a day.

Chapter Notes

I'm sorry to keep you waiting, but my computer basically refused to respond to anything yesterday until I forced it to shutdown and gave it a break for the night. I might post another chapter in a couple of hours to make up for it :-)

Friday October 19, 2018

Love,

I'm sorry you've had a rough day.

Or actually, you never said you were having a rough day, just that it was busy. But either way I am also glad you didn't bring any of the kids with you today. We've been having the greatest, simply lazy, day. Only thing missing is you.

I suppose I should amend that to, the only thing missing was the rest of our family.

You headed off early, and I actually mean early and not just early for YOU, to the Ministry. The rest of us sat around Lainie's place, I made breakfast, the kids played, and we adults managed to have some fairly uninterrupted conversation. I've always liked Ethan, except when I thought he hurt my baby and was bossing her around during her pregnancy with Raf. Over the last few years I've gotten to know Rose very well and she and I get along really well. I absolutely adore Joel and Jayden, but that's probably not so surprising to anyone who knows me. I've yet to really get to know Rodrigo very well though.

And this morning was a good time to do that. He's not a bad cook himself, so he and I worked together on serving up breakfast for everyone. He's become quite a natural at the fatherhood thing just like you and Ollie are. He was wearing baby Milie for most of the morning - don't worry he wasn't cooking with hot oils or anything - as well as giving Raf, Joel, and Jayden little jobs to help out with when they came in and out of the kitchen. He seemed to have a ton of patience even when Jayden insisted on taking every individual grape off the stem by hand before plating the grapes.

And it's probably a good thing he's so hands on because Lainie's three loves have their hands full with her. She's spent the entire day resting on the sofa. Why you ask? Because the last few days she's been telling them she's taking a nap and then apparating to the site of Unity Spain and working instead. She's been pushing herself and when they caught her and dragged her to her Healer, she was instructed to take it easy. Then the Healer told Ethan, Rose, and Rodrigo to watch her like a hawk and insist she not lift a finger unless it's to cuddle her new baby.
Which is why our day today was lazy. And after ziplining the other day, I thoroughly enjoyed the enforced rest.

The bigger kids played board games. We all made a giant blanket fort and watched movies. Morgana, Gabe, and Dylan reconnected after being apart all day Wednesday.

Oh! I forgot to tell you yesterday. When I went to pick up Dylan from Dean and Seamus, I stayed and chatted for a little while. Dyl was, per usual, a little angel. And he's been picking up new words left and right. He's going to be our talker. Maybe a politician like his Auntie 'Mione! Anyway, it was so adorable, he's been calling them DeeDee and ShayShay.

How cute is that?!?

And I think my plan to get Morgana attached to Nicky is working! I have been asking her to help grab nappies, get his pacie or blanket, easy things like that. I always praise her like crazy, "wow, what a great big sister my Morgana is! Thank you babycakes!" things like that. Well, earlier today she was coloring with Raf and I asked Dylan to put Nic's blanket on him. Oh my goodness ... you would have thought I asked him to go punch Morgana in the face with the way she responded. She came rage-toddling across the room, "No! My!"

I was actually worried with how mad she was and how fiercely she was stamping across the room that she was either going to blow something up, accidentally hit Nic in the face with the blanket, or something along those lines. Nope. She got the blanket, and as soon as she got to the baby, her features softened into a sweet smile and she laid it on him so softly and sweetly.

I guess I've now created a bit of sibling rivalry between her, Dylan, and Gabe over who gets to help, but at least she's not going to be upset when we hold Nic all the time?

Oi, this parenting nonsense is hard!

Hope you get to sit down at least a little bit. Hurry back to us, we miss you!

Love,
Harry

Friday October 19th
My husbands,

As I said, today was a busy day. It started by me going in early because I couldn't sleep for some reason. I mean I DID sleep from about midnight to 5 am, and when I did sleep, it was soundly and restful. But then I woke up to go to the loo and could NOT go back to sleep for nothing. So I got out of bed and did my morning routine before going into the Ministry.

When I got to my office, I found Hermione about to write me a note asking me to come to her office as soon as I got in. Well since I was there early, she just told me what she wanted to talk about, which was that all of the people - teams, organizations, what have you - replied back accepting our invitation to an International Dueling Championship.

So that led to us popping in on a team of people who'd been selected to plan out the event. With final confirmation that the event IS going to be held, they were excited and we all devolved into a bit of a dance celebration for about a half an hour before their meeting got back on track. We listened to all their ideas, gave advice on the direction we wanted it to take, and then left to pop in on a meeting for members of the Wizengamot. They were discussing a few changes to existing laws that were being considered.

After that, Hermione brought me down to the morgue. "This is the young man that tried to murder me with a garrote," Hermione said, indicating a boy that looked SO young and innocent - even though he was in his 20s. "I personally understood that he had mental health issues and may not have realized exactly what he was doing. Thus, even though the official sentence he had been given by the Wizengamot for his act of treason was a quick and painless AK, I was trying to persuade them to give him a stay of execution until he could be given a year or so of Mind Healing - and then retry him based on that circumstance - maybe give him a lighter sentence if he could prove he was in a better mind and repentant."

"I take it the Wizengamot refused?" I asked based off the evidence of the dead body.

"Well actually, they hadn't decided yet, although they say they were leaning toward just getting it over with so that he didn't have to suffer through learning WHY he had done an unforgivable thing and then knowing that he had a death sentence that could be carried out at any time," Hermione explained.

I raised a brow, caught between being certain that I knew what had happened and not being able to ever admit to it. "Oh? So... what happened?"

Hermione sighed. "When you and my wife were in Russia dealing with... business, this young man - whose name was Trevor Blithely - mysteriously died in his sleep. We can't figure out how. He wasn't hit with an AK. He wasn't strangled. His Magi-Autopsy didn't show anything like a stroke or a heart attack, and there are no poisons in his system that we know of. So..." She shrugged helplessly.

I hugged her and rubbed her back. "I know it's rather sad to think of an entire life wasted, but - mentally incompetent or not - this was a young man who thought the easiest solution to a bunch of minor possible problems was to simply murder you. He... more or less deserved this. And more importantly, it looks like he died peacefully."

"I know," she murmured morosely. "I just, well, I don't know what to do with his body. It's long past time that it was released to his family for burial, but he didn't have anyone, and none of his friends seem to want to come in and take responsibility for him."

I shrugged. "So have him cremated and scatter his ashes in a beautiful lake or put in an urn in a mausoleum with a small plaque to explain who he was and what he did along with your sincerest wishes that he's at peace."

Hermione sniffed slightly and wiped her nose. "I... suppose I could do that..."

I kissed her on the cheek and held her comfortingly for a few more minutes. At that point, I was getting hungry and noticed that the clock charm on the wall stated that it was past lunchtime. "Come have lunch with me?"

"That sounds brilliant," she agreed, obviously trying to sound cheerful.

On our way out of the morgue, we nearly ran into a junior Auror who was dashing around looking for me. "Chief! We, erm, have a situation!"

This made Hermione chuckle a little and give me a kiss on the cheek. "Go on and deal with whatever it is. I'll just go home and eat lunch with my family - for once."

"You're just happy that whatever this is, it's NOT being brought to you!" I accused her in
"You bet your sweet arse I am!" Hermione admitted gleefully before lightly pushing me toward the Auror and making her escape.

Sighing, I rushed after the junior Auror, who started jogging, forcing me to get a bit more exercise than I'd anticipated having today. We got back to the Auror department in about two minutes, both of us just very slightly out of breath. Clearly I haven't done enough running OR exercising recently. No WONDER my arse just keeps on getting bigger!

When I stepped into my office, it was to find a woman I was planning to interview today looking around at the Auror department through the door with wide eyes and an eager expression on her face - like she was supremely overjoyed that there was apparently something dramatic going on.

"Sorry, luv, but I'm going to have to postpone this interview until a later date," I informed her. "Now if you'll kindly get the fuck out of my office?" I asked/ordered as I settled myself in my chair. Disappointed, she gave me an unhappy but mild glare as she left, passing Ginger. Ginger grabbed my hand and yanked me out of my chair.

"No time to get comfortable!"

Without a word, I let her drag me to an incident room. The moment we arrived, I realized that the majority of the Auror department was getting kitted out. Bletchley spotted me and gestured for us to go over to him and Roche.

"Alright, so here's the situation," Bletchley began. "We received a report of a drunken brawl in progress on or near the grounds of Stonehenge. The reason WE are being called in rather than the muggle police is that part of the brawl involves an intense wand fight. Our first job is to go in, break up the brawl, and then apprehend the duelers. After that, the second job will be determining who involved is muggle and needs to be Obliviated."

"Right," I stated in understanding, grabbing a couple dozen of my mapping drones and slipping them into my carry all watch. The contacts and earbuds were part of the standard kit, and so, I didn't need to worry about telling everyone to wear them.

Happily, I noticed that someone had already pulled up an accurate magi-map of the area. "Everyone who is on the ward specialization team, I want you to Apparate around the perimeter here..." I pointed out a nice spacious border that shouldn't be TOO cumbersome to work with, but also hopefully keep the entire scene contained. "And then set up all the standard wards."

"Right, Chief!" They called out in understanding.

"The rest of us are going to go in with our wands drawn, stunning EVERYONE we can to end the situation as quickly as possible. Stunning spells only unless you absolutely HAVE to cast something stronger out of self defense or defense of others," I ordered, probably unnecessarily since this was more or less the standard operating procedure.

Penny Pettigrew spoke up then, calling my attention to her standing in the doorway. "I've got the rest of the DMLE ready to go. I'm planning to have them outside the wards, at the ready in case someone gets through, or manages to break the wards in an attempt to escape. They'll also be on hand to provide backup if necessary."

"Perfect," I stated. In actuality, since the other side of the DMLE is officers who are usually called out to things in process - such as a drunken brawl - THEY were probably the ones who should be handling this whole situation, but I presume that since Penny wasn't demanding as much, she must have already decided to send in the Aurors with their more specialized training to handle things. The look she gave me reminded me that we'd worked together on raids before, and maybe she just wanted the whole thing to be as organized as possible.

So with our orders clear, I deployed my Aurors in waves, with the Ward Specialists going in first. I went with them to toss out my mapping drones and ensure that they were sending perfect signals to my magi-tablet. Once the Aurors and officers arrived, the situation was a rather simple one. We just slightly outnumbered the brawlers, and they weren't expecting us, so we were able to take the majority of them down quickly.

It was the ones that might be considered smarter that caused trouble, as they were actively shielding themselves from all spells even as they were trying to cast spells like Impedimenta in order to take us down without seriously hurting us - which would earn them a huge sentence if they were caught. They were doing their best to clear a path and escape, and somewhat ironically, the best tactic was to slip through their magic repelling shields and physically Krav Maga them to the ground.

I'm certain you won't be surprised to learn that I was quite kicking arse. I was able to take advantage of my subordinates trying to distract and Incarcerate them by slipping around behind them. It only took maybe ten minutes to get the troublemakers under control.

At that point, I was able to retire to the hastily erected command tent - that Penny had the Officers set up. I entered the tent and flopped my slightly exhausted arse into the first available chair.

"This is no time to be sitting!" Penny admonished me, yanking me right back out of the chair. She placed a hand on the back of my neck and pushed me closer to the interactive map so I had a good look at it. "This area here? It's OUTSIDE of the wards, yes?"

"Yes," I confirmed.

"So those three dots running around erratically are probably trying to flee the scene?"

I bit my lip in thought. "If that's the case, why didn't they just Apparate away? And besides, you're right, they are REALLY erratic. They're not escaping so much as fighting each other." I gestured around to a couple of the Senior Aurors and Officers who were now in the tent with us. "Form three teams. The first team will flank left, the second team right, and the third team will Apparate to this area to cut them off by erecting wards."

"If we're flanking, are we apprehending?" The seniors asked.

"No," I stated decisively with a shake of my head. "Your job is to contain them to a smaller area so that I can lead a group of those I know to be highly skilled in unarmed combat in to disarm and apprehend them." I then gestured to the lines I wanted the two flanking teams to form. "And remember, remain vigilant and cast shielding spells if you even so much as SUSPECT that one of their spells are going to go astray and hit anything at all."

"Yes Chief!"

It took a minute or so to get everyone - that wasn't charged to remain with those currently in custody - grouped and deployed. After giving the three teams two minutes to get into position and erect those wards, I gestured for those going with me to follow as I ran toward the trio of drunken duelers.
I know you're dreading some mishap - such as me getting caught with an unknown hex to the chest. Or MAYBE you're hoping for something exciting, like me running up and suavely Krav Magaing them all to the ground, but the truth is that the three of them had hexed each other so badly by the time we even arrived that one was collapsed and on the verge of dying, another had a broken leg and was trying to crawl away, and the third was still standing, but panting very heavily and bleeding from a good dozen open wounds on his body. I didn't even have to go near them.

Instead, I examined my magi-tablet to ensure that no OTHER people had escaped the original wards. As I worked, Aurors who were also trained medics took custody of the trio, ensuring that none of them died and rushing the most severely injured one to St. Mungo's.

I had shot you my first rushed and extremely short email when I was gearing up to head out, and now I'm writing this one now that I've returned to my office and have to write up an official report on the incident anyway. I'm about done with both and will be heading back to you all soon.

I love you, even when I'm sleeping,
Draco
Harry is feeling melancholic and Draco refuses to be dragged down by it.

Saturday October 20, 2018

My Loves,

As I sit here in the dark, in our borrowed little room in Spain, I can't help but feel a bit ... melancholic?

I am feeling a bit shell-shocked at the moment, and I think the best thing for me to do is to immerse myself in what scares me. Our children, especially our adult children, have lives that have absolutely nothing to do with us. It's just ... I know logically that they are their own people, I know as much as I love them with the entirety of my heart, they are not just extensions of myself.

It's easy to forget that when we are living together, or when they come to visit home. Their children, their friends, their love interests, all coming to us to meet us as an extension of our child. Even the friends or love interests we've known most of their lives like Pearl and Ethan, we essentially re-met when introduced as the significant other of our child. And since there will always be the part of me that sees Elena as an extension of myself, I see her loves as further extensions of our lives.

Is my babbling making sense? I look at our family as the solar system, all of our circle as pieces that gravitate to the "center," the "sun," the family. But tonight, at the little gathering of Lainie's friends she's made out here in Spain, along with the friends she's always had that traveled to celebrate her birthday, I realized she's created her own solar system.

Our little girl has a life that has absolutely nothing to do with us. She is the center of this world, her children, her loves, her friends gravitating around her. I'm so very happy for her. I'm proud of her for being someone who instills great love and loyalty in those around her. I am obviously thrilled she's growing this beautiful family and giving me more grandchildren to dote upon. But it was equally hard to see there's a part of her life that is separate from me, from us. To see this life she's built that has everything to do with her being the amazing Elena Rojas Malfoy and nothing to do with her being Harry, Draco, and Oliver's kid. It's hard as a father to know there's a part of her life we have nothing to do with.

But with that being said, she welcomed us with open arms and wanted us in her little solar system. We were introduced to co-workers and friends. I was introduced as "this is my Dad Harry" and "come here, I want you to meet one of my fathers-in-law, Elena's Dad Harry." We raised this beautiful woman who got out on her own, built her own world, and wants us in it.

So, that's why I am wide awake when you're both sleeping, and all the little ones are asleep. I can't stop thinking about how scary it is that our grown daughter doesn't need us. But I'm humbled to my core to know that she DOES want us.

Maybe I'll try to sleep now that I've got all these thoughts out and in writing. I hope my brain has settled. If I still can't sleep I'll probably go try and see if Lainie needs any help with her newborn since Nic is sleeping like a little prince and isn't giving me anything to do!

Torn,
Harry

Sunday October 21st
My darlings,

Harry, I refuse to be dragged down the: "My kids have grown up and are out on their own," spiral because I literally created a potion to stop them aging and keep them all 5 or 10 years old forever, but you refused to let me use it on them, so...

Draco has to take a break and finish 'not crying' over how grown up Elena is, on her second baby already! Salazar buggering Merlin! Time fucking flies! It's seems like we've only had her 10 years!

Anyway, as I was saying, I refuse to be dragged down that spiral. Instead, I'm going to play peekaboo with Nicolas, who already has a smile like a pure ray of light. No Oliver, I'm NOT going to hand him over yet! You can have him all day tomorrow when I'm at the Ministry.

I'm perfectly capable of feeding a baby! Oliver! No, Oliver! FINE!

Harry, Oliver just stole our son from me, so I'm going to gather up some of the other kids - such as the Feisty… Fivesome? And Joel and Jaden, and whoever else is here and wants to go on an adventure with me. Please snuggle Rafael and Emilia for me while we're gone.

Pour some sugar on me,
Draco
Chapter 371

Chapter Summary

Harry is concerned about Parker and Oliver has run off to support him.

Monday October 22, 2018

My Loves .... but mostly directed to my Ollie,

Today started out so wonderfully. I got up nice and early to make Lainie her favorite breakfast foods. And per usual when he doesn't have something pressing at the restaurant, Zaire made sure to get to Lainie's house early enough to help me out with breakfast. We had everything made, stasis charms keeping everything the perfect temperature.

Most birthdays I like to let the birthday kid sleep in a little but then I want to bring them breakfast in bed so I do wake them up eventually. Not so for the new mum. My Lainie-Girl can sleep as late as she'd like to, she's recovering from childbirth and waking with a newborn. If she wants breakfast a suppertime, I'm fine with that!

Luckily, she didn't sleep in crazy late so it was like a late breakfast, brunch-style meal. I got in about a gazillion snuggles with Joel, Jayden, Rafael, and Emilia. The bigger kids got in their final playtime. Playing some game "one last time" or remembering to pack that essential item they almost forgot. It was a great morning, and as much as I've loved our visit it was even greater knowing we were on our way home.

Anyway, on to the reason this is mostly directed towards Ollie. I can't imagine what you and Parker are feeling right now. Obviously I love Parker, and in no way consider him "less" my child than the children I've been able to claim since the beginning. But the reality is, he's only been my son for a very short time and he's been an adult the entire time. I'm so upset for him, and heartbroken for everything he's going through. I have to assume my heartbreak is a fraction of yours as he's been yours since he was in diapers. Or, hmm, maybe not diapers, he was three when he went home with you, he was likely potty trained.

Ahh, I'm getting off track. I have to put into perspective that everything and everyone is fine. They're all fine. No one is hurt, everyone we love is safe and accounted for. But it was a scary few hours that could have ended sadly or even tragically.

For the past few weeks, I've tried to keep track of all the upcoming babies. We had Lainie's Emilia and Ollie you and Serenity are almost there, Cassie's baby should be born soon, Orion's Mara should be giving birth shortly after Ollie, and Parker's one-off I knew was due any day.

Parker's one-off is currently the reason for the heartbreak. See, unlike the Orion situation where he is in a relationship with Mara and will most definitely be in the delivery room, or how the young woman carrying Cassie's baby has asked Cass to be in the room with her, Parker's baby's bio-mum had no interest in Parker being there for the birth. I understand him wanting to be there for the birth, but it is her body and her labor. He's getting sole custody, so he'll have the rest of that baby's life with them. I think he had finally come to terms with not being there but being able to come see baby almost immediately.
Except the damn woman decided she didn't like that he'd already won sole custody due to her underhanded actions in trying to trick him out of money and custody. She still would have visitation, but her actions showed she didn't have baby's best interest at heart and it lost her sole custody.

Well, it looks like she won't be showing up for visitation any time soon. The closer we get to the end of October, the weirder I found it to be that she hadn't given birth yet. I know Cassie's biomum is safely ensconced at Unity House and we'll know the moment she goes into labor. Not so for this other woman. She must have decided she didn't want to give up custody, not that I blame her for that, but she should have thought of that before she tried manipulating Parker into giving up his rights and his money!

She took off when she went into labor. She fled the country and thought that by giving birth outside of the UK, she would be able to get away without having to contact Parker. However, she didn't take into account that we have contacts all over the globe. We have people in high positions of wizarding power all over because of the amount of time we've spent creating Unity and Traditions. Ironically, she ran away to Russia. While in labor she began cursing Parker, cursing all three of us, and the entire Malfoy lawyer armada for forcing her to "give birth in this Merlin-forsaken hellhole!"

Rule number one ya dipshite, if you're hiding from a powerful family don't try to hide out in a country where they've created an orphanage, have family who live there, and have their fingers in their muggle mafia. Also ... maybe don't loudly curse their name.

All of these events led to us receiving a hysterical message from Parker while we were cuddling a very fussy Nic on the plane ride home. Side note: the plane might be best for Gabe's epilepsy but Nicky's ears hate the airplane!

Ollie left me to comfort little mister grumpy pants while he checked his insta-mobile that was dingering. Love, you should have seen the hysterical look on your face when you came back and tried telling me about her trying to kidnap the baby and hide from Parker.

As soon as we touched down, you were apparating away to Parker, leaving me with the rest of our crew.

Now I'm sitting at the Manor waiting for Draco to get back from the Ministry, waiting to hear ANY updates on our newest Grandchild, and trying to introduce a still kind of fussy Nicolas to his Grandparents.

One of you contact me already! I'm anxiously awaiting some information!

Love,
Harry

---

Monday October 22nd
Dear Harry and Draco,

I'm writing this from Russia. First of all, everything is fine...

So... When Parker and I arrived at the hospital with one of the Malfoy Lawyers - armed with paperwork to prove that this baby is Parker's and they legally had to give her to him - we walked into the private recovery room expecting a dramatic row, at the very least.
It seems that Draco’s dear Grandmama had heard word (through an AMAZING grapevine, apparently) that this woman was trying to steal one of her great... great? grandchildren, and decided to take steps. Thus, Parker and I walked into the recovery room to find dear sweet Grandmama calmly rocking little girl in a chair and feeding her, while having a soft yet, erm, intense conversation with Henrietta (the one-off).

I almost feel sorry for Henrietta, since she was trying to comfort herself by clutching her blanket, her eyes were bigger than saucers, and she seemed rather apprehensive of the six extremely large and burly men crowded into the room with Grandmama.

Erm... so... Well, Parker and I were able to prove (via the Lawyer) that he has sole custody of the child, which allowed us to bring her to a hotel for us to rest in a bit before our flight back to London. When we left the recovery room, it was to the assurance that Grandmama would take good care of Henrietta and ensure that she made it home safely.

Should I be worried?? Should I, erm… insist on bringing Henrietta home WITH us?? Or... should I just, erm… assume that Henrietta will be fine?

Help?
Oliver
Chapter 372

Tuesday October 23, 2018

Oh Ollie,
and our Draco as always of course,

I think you've finally realized, from a first-hand perspective, how hard it is to not let Grandmama take matters into her own hands. To let her, to ask her even, to fix something or someone when your loved one has been wronged. I love that you've been our voice of reason. I adore that you've really laid down the law and told us we can't continue to be judge, jury, and friends of the executioner. To stop playing God and allow things to happen as they should.

But I think you finally realized, even though you never told us we were monsters, how easy it is to become the monster who craves blood when you see the heartbreak in one of your loved ones eyes.

I can see the indecision in your eyes, even though you weren't actually with me when you wrote your email. The father in you wanting to protect your son while the rational part of you knows the woman was just desperately doing what she thought was best. However, I have to teach you the lessons my beloved husband (you!) instilled in me when I was willing to take things to Grandmama at the slightest provocation. You may feel like it now, but you do not want Grandmama to take care of this situation in the final way we know she can.

You don't want Parker to know you, or anyone else he loves, had a hand in the death of his child's mother.

You don't want our granddaughter to know you, or anyone else she loves, had a hand in the death of her mother.

That doesn't mean we can't accept some of her less deadly help. And I think her arrival at the hospital was already helpful. If not for her, Henrietta may have found a way to abscond with the baby before you could arrive. And while I know you don't truly want this woman's death, I also know you would accept it if that's what kept your family safe.

While you and Draco were with Parker last night, cuddling our newest little sweetheart, I removed myself from the room to have a good long chat with Grandmama. As soon as I got your email, I immediately messaged her to keep her eye on Henrietta but to not do anything with her until she heard from us. Luckily I'm her favorite and she listened to me.

I think it helps I told her if she did this to my exact instructions, I would forgive her for forcing Draco into the unbreakable vow. It does come with the knowledge that I will NOT forgive her for it a second time.

Sorry, off track again. We think we have a workable solution. But I realize it is not up to me. And as much as I want Ollie to make the call, I think Parker should get final say. So when you both get a chance to read this, we should all discuss it together, bring it to Parker, and let him have the final say.

Here are the options:

1-We let Grandmama do whatever she thinks is best ... please note that she thinks killing the woman is best. I disagree but it technically IS an option. Personally, I don't think we should even tell Parker this is an option, but again, not my call.
2-We take Henrietta from Grandmama's clutches and bring her back to the UK. We let the official legal battle commence. She will stand trial and/or make a plea bargain for her own actions. We completely wash our hands of the whole thing and allow the legal system to do what it needs to do.

3-Grandmama is willing to "take care" of the "Henrietta problem" differently from her usual style. With a bit of magic and muggle scheming .... Henrietta wanted to be in another country so badly? We give that to her. Grandmama will obliviate her of all memories concerning our family, Parker, or the baby. She will forget she ever slept with Parker, she will forget she ever was pregnant or had a child, and wake up in some different English-speaking country. She'll use a memory charm on top of the obliviate to add memories of wanting to move to wherever she goes, packing, saying goodbyes, etc. We can even send her off with a bit of cash so we know she'll be alright.

Thoughts? Comments? Concerns? Suggestions?

Now that's enough emailing from me, I have a new baby to smooch and cuddle!

Yours,
Harry

Wednesday October 24th
My beloved husbands,

Here I sit in my office (the Head Auror one, not the Chief of Raids one), FINALLY interviewing people for the position of assistant for both the Head Auror and the Deputy Head. It's... slow. I was hoping for, erm… less ego, if I'm honest, and more willingness to do the job competently with a pleasant attitude. So far, I've wanted to strangle most of them for being far too eager to present themselves in a good light and nowhere near content to shut up and listen to the actual expected duties.

Sigh... I'm seriously considering asking Pippa if I can just clone her two or three times...

In any case, holding little Phoebe yesterday with Oliver was amazing in that just watching Oliver's eyes light up, ah... It was gorgeous. I can't wait to see his eyes when Serenity is born!

Phoebe Rayne Wood, born on the 21st of October... She's such a cutie! She looks a little like Parker, but I never really saw the incorrigible Henrietta (ugh, what an ugly name!), so I can't say for certain which bits come from her. Speaking of, I'm rather glad that when given his options, Parker (and Oliver) decided that Obliviation was the best option. It just... prevents Henrietta from ever coming back and trying anything to extort money from us in the future. And besides, after running off to have the baby that had legally already been given to Parker, she was looking at actual jail time for kidnapping, and so in many ways, this might actually be the kinder option to her.

Naturally, we saw to it that she had enough money to start a new life and survive until she can get a job and support herself - in Australia because that's farther away than America.

Anyway, I'll be home after - oh? What's this? Harry, did you also get an Insta-owl from Oliver saying that he's going to be in a waiting room supporting Cassie, who's going to be in a delivery room witnessing the birth of her baby? I, erm… can't get away just yet. Harry, do you think you can have the elves and some or all of the grandparents watch Nicolas and the others so you can support Oliver as he supports Cassie? Or did Oliver ask you to stay home with the kids?
I suppose I'll have another tiny little peanut to meet tonight when I get home, or probably more like tomorrow considering how long labor takes.

Craving OHHHH constant craving,
Draco
Chapter 373

Chapter Summary

Oliver is having a rather hard time but putting on a happy face.

Chapter Notes

See the end of the chapter for notes

Thursday October 25, 2018

My Dragon,

Everything is fine. Everyone is healthy. Baby is finally here. But with that being said, I think you should get here to St. Mungo's as soon as possible.

First things first, at 12:02 AM, our newest grandson Brett Evan Burke-Wood was born. Solemn as a saint, staring at everything with an enormous set of blue eyes. He's adorable and I'm already firmly in love with him. As is Cassie, who's showing off her baby to anyone willing to stop and peek and a few people who I don't think were willing but terrified of her. She's such a sweet calm little thing, I forget that she's the baby who used to order me to stop crying! She's soft and sweet with a steel frame.

The person who's not doing so well with the new baby is our Oliver. He's putting on an absolutely wonderful front. I don't think anyone but myself is noticing his sadness. Not even Cassie, but that's probably because she's distracted by her new son. But while his gaze is fond and happy, well... he's congratulated Cassie about a million times. He's thanked her for making this little peanut his grandson. He's given little Brett about a million little kisses on his sweet baby head already. He really is putting on a good front of being completely thrilled.

He needs us Draco. I was doing my usual blubbering nonsense when presented with a new baby to love on. When Cassie managed to wrench the babe out of Ollie's grip, I went and gave him cuddles. And then I ruined everything. I said, "He's just beautiful isn't he Ollie? Besides maybe on our Nora, have you ever seen eyes that blue?"

In all seriousness, he has some startlingly beautiful blue eyes.

But the response wasn't what I expected. Instead Ollie looked at me with haunted eyes and said, "I have seen eyes that blue Harry, he has the same eyes as Edmond." I tried to cover my shock but I don't think I did a very good job since he followed that comment up with a broken, "I should have been prepared for it since they're biologically erm, related, but he looks almost exactly like Ed."

He really quickly shook himself out of the sad face, plastered on his smile, and kept going. I just think we need to be here with him while he's strong to make this day perfect for Cassie, and then drag him home to either let him cry it out with us, or we shag him so hard he forgets everything.

I personally vote shagging, but I can be flexible.

Or I can be VERY flexible ... while shagging.
I know it's going on 2:00AM at this point and you're probably exhausted from a long day at the ministry ..... but wake up and get here anyway! If it helps there IS a baby to cuddle.

Yours,
Harry

Thursday October 25th
My beautiful husbands,

I decided to play the arsehole card. I popped into St. Mungo's, gave Cassie a hug and a kiss on the cheek, kissed baby Brett, and then informed Cassie that it was past all our bedtime and I was insisting that my husbands come home and go to bed with me.

Without giving Oliver a chance to object, I Apparated him straight home, trusting that you'd either come with us, or say goodbye and follow within a minute. Once home, I pulled Oliver into my arms and kissed his temple.

"I know," I murmured. "It hurts. It's a painful reminder of everything that happened, but you'll overcome this and emerge stronger. You'll see."

"How can you be so strong?" He whispered in my ear.

"Too much practice at too young an age," I informed him, stroking his back and just holding him.

Harry, you popped in just then and wrapped your arms around the both of us. We let Oliver just process everything in his own good time. He just - not quite crying, but breathing heavily - sat there breathing us in until he was ready. He turned to you and gave you a tender kiss, which somehow turned into the three of us exploring each other with our hands and mouths.

I didn't necessarily think that he was going to be in the mood to shag, just wanted tactile comfort, but he proved me wrong by almost attacking you. That gave me a good show to watch before the two of you reached that almost lazy, sleepy but not quite tired enough to sleep stage. That's when I pulled you, Harry, between us and insisted on having a hot and delicious Harry sandwich - and I'm using the term correctly this time.

Mmm...

Oliver love, I hope you are feeling better now. I am not sure how long I'll be in the office today, but I'll try to come home as soon as possible to hold you some more if you need, but honestly, I think Harry might actually be better at the comforting thing. All I do is basically sit there in silence and hope you eventually feel better.

That said, if you're feeling up to it, I'm in the mood to go dancing and singing in the ballroom tonight. What say you both? Dance with me? Dance with each other while I sing nonsensical and silly love songs to you?

You see me I see you,
Draco

Chapter End Notes
NOTE: For those that don’t remember (it's really easy to miss), Cassie is adopting the baby that Ed's parents impregnated a teenaged girl with. Which is technically Ed's younger brother, and part of the reason Cassie decided to adopt him :-)

Chapter 374

Chapter Summary

Harry was wrong about why Oliver was upset, and Draco is singing silly love songs.

Chapter Notes

See the end of the chapter for notes

Thursday October 25, 2018

Love,

Things have gone much more smoothly today than I thought they would. Cassie brought Brett home and since I have every day off and Ollie didn't have anything scheduled on the pitch for today, we went to visit and help her settle in. We were all exhausted from being up late last night, but had a wonderful afternoon together.

I have to say, while it's been a bit overwhelming having all these babies born and adopting Nic all in the matter of weeks, I think we've got Morgana thoroughly used to seeing all of her Daddies with babies in their arms. She still doesn't like it I can tell, but she's sweet and tolerating for the most part. It is different with Nicky though, she has definite ideas of how he deserves to be treated and I will catch Hell if I let him cry for longer than it takes to stand up immediately and get to him. I worried at the beginning she'd be jealous of the attention, I should have worried that she'd latch on to him as her baby and demand we all treat him like a little prince!

I am much less nervous for Morgana's reaction to Serenity's arrival than I was a month ago! She's really turning out to be a fantastic big sister.

The other thing that's gone smoothly has been Oliver's emotional stability. I think yesterday's reaction really stemmed from being exhausted from it being late and from spending the day sitting around a hospital waiting room as well as his regular pregnancy induced exhaustion. All of that on top of the aforementioned pregnancy's hormones and the shock of seeing those eyes in miniature was too much for his brain at one in the morning.

And while I did accurately read the situation about him being sad, I misconstrued the why of it all.

I thought the reason he was upset was the reminder of his less than happy marriage with Edmond. That little Brett's face was going to be a constant reminder of the man he was married to towards the end when things were abusive and controlling.

This morning we woke up with one of those cozy, let's stay in bed, warm chats. Soft kisses and whispered words. And come to find out his issues don't stem from seeing the face of his ex in miniature bringing back bad memories. They stem from seeing exactly what he and Edmond were robbed of by his ex-in-laws. In bright colors and baby-soft skin, he held a baby that looked like what a baby of theirs could have looked like. The exhaustion and hormones were intense that all he could focus on was the unfairness of it all.

This morning he had much better perspective. He's obviously thrilled with another grandchild. And he lit up every time Cassie cooed over the baby.

And what little sadness he had seemed to disappear when Nicky gave him baby giggle after baby giggle.

Anyway, I'm going to make a nice dinner for Cassie before we head home (with extras in stasis for you don't worry!) and Ollie and I insist on taking you up on your offer of an evening of singing and dancing with you in the ballroom.

Hurry home,
Harry

Thursday October 25th
My darlings,

Today was rather productive in that I finally got a chance to conduct those interviews I've been planning. So now, I have a half dozen potential assistants who - on the surface - seem qualified to help the Head/Deputy Head Auror as necessary. I'm going to subject them to a bit of a trial by fire and have them each take a turn plunging into the deep end. They'll basically have to act as an assistant to the entire department - all on their own - and the two that survive the trial with the best 'scores' will be hired on.

I'm planning to instruct the department to give them absolute hell! I'm quite looking forward to watching this play out, hahaha!

When I got back from the Ministry, after a normal giant family dinner, I brought you both to the ballroom where I insisted that we dance to some lovely instrumental music for a while, in a sort of swaying triangle with no real sophistication. After - oh... an hour or so - I told you two to dance without me so that I could grab my acoustic guitar and strum a simple tune while I sang fragments of random love songs to you both.

"Oh no I'm not trying to be clever, but our love doesn't get any better."

"Cuz I~~~~ don't mind loving you, Cuz I~~~~ don't mind loving you~~~! I could be anywhere, I could be anywhere, I could be ANYWHERE with you!"

"You got me SOOOO in love with you, baby!"

"With just a few things from my car, blankets and you and maybe this guitar, rent out a room under those stars, howl at the moon like the monsters we are, I don't want nothing but you~~~ oh oh oh oh!"

"Please... please... please don't give up on me just yet, boy don't forget 'cuz this will always be true, you see me, I see you."

Eventually I must have got too stupidly insipid for even you sappy romantics, because you both decided to shut me up by tackling me to the floor and having your way with me. Ah.... I'm going to sleep well tonight.

And in the morning, well, it's back to the Ministry for me, but I'm going to be smiling the whole day.

I have nothing if I don't have you (two),
NOTE: The songs Draco was singing are all songs that Tom Felton has created/sang. Although I did change a lyric or two to fit our boys ^_^ I'll post one example ^_^ https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=gDJ43S3R4CU
Monday October 29, 2018

Finally!

My loves, I am having a blissfully wonderful morning. The sun is having one of its rare shiny autumn days. I had a fantastic run this morning, did a personal best time on our Manor track. Knock wood, the babies have been well behaved and wonderful this morning. And seeing as it's one of the last lovely days we'll have before a gloomy winter hits, I have all the littles at the Manor Park right now playing in the sunshine. While a sweet boy naps on the blanket next to me.

On top of my own personal great day, Draco you seem to think you're getting close to finding the best assistant to the Head/Deputy Head Aurors. Which means we're that much closer to you being done with that project and likely to be home more often. Oh, and the whole having the right assistant will mean the Auror department will run smoothly and competently. But who are we kidding, that is not exactly high on my list of personal priorities.

Then!!! As if those two things weren't already enough, Viktor (and Ginny and Keisha obviously) have finally gotten to Hogwarts to take over for our Ollie while he's on paternity leave! I know you're a ridiculously talented flyer love, but you having such a different center of gravity has made me worried for you every time you get up in the air.

So, Draco is doing finishing touches at the DMLE ... Oliver is walking Viktor through his duties ... and I'm playing with babies in the sun.

Life is good,
Harry

Monday October 29th
My beautiful husbands,

I'm so excited that Oliver is off on paternity leave - as soon as he finishes training Viktor in. Maybe the moment that I finish hiring those who need to be hired, we'll have just enough time before Oliver pops to go on a lovely little holiday.

But as for me right now, things are relatively quiet. The second of the six assistants I'm interviewing is in here running around like a chicken with his bloody head cut off! I'm not certain he's going to pass the test, which is sad really since the woman that had her trial on Friday seemed to kick arse at it. But happily, there's one more man (and three more women) to test, and so, if things go the way I want them to, I'll be able to hire a man and a woman as a balanced set of assistants to the Head and Deputy Head Aurors. And by extension, a little bit of the rest of the department.

But speaking of the Head and Deputy Head, well... Roche is adamant that he will not take the position of Head Auror, and he's also more certain than ever that he needs to basically take off on a nice long holiday and then when/if he returns, take a demotion to regular Auror. A senior one who probably does more than a regular one, but still, one who's not obligated to work on every case in the department at once.

So, in that vein, I've been wondering WHO in the bloody hell I can promote to these positions, and before I put an official advert out, I really want to go through everyone who already works here, as actual Aurors are probably going to make better Head Aurors than someone who thinks it might be interesting to come in off the street and take over despite having no real experience in this field.

So, I'm about to go out (of my office) and give all the Aurors secret interviews in that I won't actually tell them they are interviewing for the positions. I'll tell them that I just need to ask a few questions to help me - I dunno - fill out their yearly reviews or something, but based off their answers and how well they hold onto their composure when I go full hardarse on them, well, that'll tell me who's more likely to be able to handle the job.

We'll see. Wish me luck!

I want your number tattooed on my arm in ink I swear,
Draco
Tuesday October 30, 2018

Love,

I feel badly because I think all of my recent emails have probably been a mixture of boring and gloating. I just keep going on and on about how much I'm loving the stay at home parenting life. I talk about the little ones and all the fun we're having playing outside. I mention the little baby smiles I get all day long. And now, today, I am also going to be talking about looking at our beautiful husband.

While you are stuck at the Ministry interviewing for assistants and Head Auror or Deputy Head Auror or ... honestly I don't even know anymore. It's just so much and while I care what is happening to you, I don't think I could possibly care less what happens to that department if I tried. After years of emotionally battling that department, the drain of knowing they could explode into your and then our lives whenever they wanted, as far as I am concerned they can all take a long walk off a short pier.

But that's probably not very mature of me.

Meh, I'm not very mature!

I spend my days chasing toddlers around a playground, baking biscuits, playing with puppies, and watching cartoons. My life is sticky fingers, naptime stories, and peanut butter and jelly sandwiches.

Or, if you're Ollie, peanut butter and banana sandwiches because "jam has the consistency of snot, Harry!" There's me told I guess. I personally love a good jam, but if Oliver wants to stick hunks of sticky mushy penis fruit on his lunch, that's his own business.

Yeah, you're trying to hire professionals to care for our world's law enforcement and we're arguing about whether bananas or jam is more disgusting. I'm not even ashamed, just very very glad this is my life!

Although if you could hurry up and get all these people hired and trained that would be amazing. I definitely want to go on holiday, a little baby-moon before Serenity gets here. Not that we are ever baby-less, but you know what I mean! And I want you to join us on our afternoon excursions to parks and gardens. I want you home! Ollie wants you home! The kids want you home! Come be lazy slobs with us for a while!

Oh! And I know you probably won't be done with your hiring and interviewing by then, but are you going to be able to get off for a few hours to go to the Samhain ritual at Hogwarts with us this Shite! I've got to go! Ollie is trying to introduce peanut butter and bananas to our children! To our CHILDREN!!!

Love,
Harry

Wednesday October 31st
My beloved husbands,

Today's trial secretary is absolute shite! I'm glad that I have other options because while the bloke yesterday seemed a bit overwhelmed, he was at least somewhat competent. This bint today is bloody fucking up EVERYTHING! And while yes, she does seem a bit nervous, this goes above and beyond nervous! I'd swear she was mixing EVERYTHING up on purpose if I hadn't had a chance to take a peek inside her head (she was trying to flirt with me into forgiving her and gave me puppy dog eyes, SO easy to slip into!) and realized that she's a clumsy and forgetful cow who couldn't even organize her own knicker drawer if her life depended on it!

But the good news is that after terrorizing the entire bloody department yesterday, I have definitively decided on a new Head Auror and Deputy Head Auror. And I'll bloody break their arms if they don't accept the positions! Of course, I'm not going to be the one to offer the jobs - at least not alone. I'm going to stand well off to the side as Penny Pettigrew gives them the offers, and as I said, if they so much as hesitate to accept, I'm going to hex them!

So, keep this to yourselves until the offer is made and accepted, but Ginger is going to be Head Auror, and Bletchley is going to be her Deputy.

Now you may have noticed that I'm in a little bit of a mood at the moment, and while I'd LIKE to say it's ALL because of that sodding secretary and her continual fuck ups, it's actually NOT. Well, not entirely. See, I've...

Alright, I know that this is going to send my adorably panicky little mutt into, well, panic mode, but our department - and thus me - was sent an anonymous letter today that I sincerely hope is someone trying to play a very poor prank. Honestly, this almost has all the classic fingerprints of our 'trouble twins' Siri and Zwei all over it - in that if they were feeling like they haven't seen me enough, this would DEFINITELY get me to visit them at Hogwarts today.

So... They plan to take steps to ensure that EVERYONE has to pay attention to them. That they have to not only listen, but also understand that this group needs some serious help. Even if it means hurting every innocent person at the school and all of the guilty ones. Especially the guilty ones.
Which means that you probably WILL see me at the ritual today/tonight. Although you probably won't recognize me as I've decided during the organization of this 'raid' - I'm treating it a bit like a raid because this needs to be highly organized and utterly in sync, with everyone wearing all my tech and keeping their eyes peeled for everything. Anyway, I've decided that this is going to be a bit like an undercover operation as well.

Thus, I personally and all the Aurors in the Department are going to be at Hogwarts tonight. Not to mention a good half the other side of the DMLE (the other half will be here in the DMLE in case this is some ploy to get us all OUT so they can do something here). We're ALL going to be in costumes, but our costumes are going to be those fully covering naked body paint ones that I love. Ones that will make it impossible to tell who is who. We're all going to look like black and red demons with horns, long teeth, sharp claws, and long tails. Our cover story is that we're going to be a bit of a theater troupe planning to put on a performance at the very end of the night. If we make it to then with nothing happening, I'll confess that we had nothing planned and were just there to keep everyone safe.

But as I said, you'll almost certainly see me, you just won't know which one is actually me. In the meantime, whatever you do, DO NOT let on what's going on. Not only will you likely ruin everything for everyone, but you might actually trigger the group of students into going through with it either earlier than planned or possibly even after they've decided against it, because the fact that the panic about it is spreading will be enough to prove that they were right about it getting them attention.

So please, act as normally as possible and trust that I will prevent anything bad from happening.

But the storm is a'coming 'cross the hills tonight, like a vein full of rain to the hear~~~ts... that should FIGHT!

Draco

P.S. As I said, act completely normally, which means yes, go ahead and attend - as NOT might be suspicious, but please cast a preemptive shield spell on yourself, Oliver. Or if possible, enchant every single thing you wear for your costume to be as protective as possible.

P.P.S. Do whatever it takes to remain calm and NOT like you're expecting to be attacked at any bloody moment!

P.P.P.S. If something does happen, can the both of you promise me to basically shield yourselves and anyone around you as much as possible and basically wait inside the shields until the Auror Department handles everything?

P.P.P.P.S. And yes, I AM about to go discuss this with Minerva, so she and the Professors will be aware of what might happen so that they can ALSO cast shields to protect everyone at the drop of a hat if necessary.

P.P.P.P.P.S. I love you both so much! I have every faith that we will all get through today with nothing more alarming than the tension caused by being so stressed all day.

Chapter End Notes

Trigger Draco discusses a plot some students have to harm their classmates
This discussion continues into the following chapter
Thursday November 1, 2018

My Draco,

I'm sure this is where you're expecting me to tease you about your department doing a full raid for these kids causing problems and then the entire thing went off without a hitch. Expecting me to giggle about all those Aurors there in full body paint pretending to be a theater or dance troupe for what turned out to be absolutely nothing. But no, that is definitely not what I'm going to do.

While it ended up being an overreaction in this case, it could have easily turned out badly. Your team was on hand to make sure no one was hurt, to make sure the innocent, the partially guilty, the fully guilty, didn't get hurt. I am very proud of you.

Although, I do have to argue a bit with you. You mentioned that we would see you, but we wouldn't know which one was you. Um, excuse me, but I will always be able to spot you in a crowd. Don't worry, your disguise was flawless, I am sure no one but Ollie and me or potentially Pippa or Kisa would have known which one was you. But I'd be able to pick you out of any crowd. I was wondering if Ollie would be able to as well, but I also didn't want to make him feel badly if he couldn't. So, I asked him (quietly, don't worry) if he could find you in that crowd.

He got his competition face on, looked at the crowd of demons for about three seconds, and said with absolute certainty "Fourth from left obviously."

I smiled and told him I agreed. Saying, "not completely sure HOW I know, but there's no doubt that's our man."

"No one else moves quite like our Draco."

And yeah, he was completely right. No one moves like you do. All grace and poise. Like sex on two legs. But contained sexiness? Like, you are perfectly restrained but I can see the man underneath that will take me in every way possible. Who will take me apart and then put me back together in. And then ...

Gods damn it! Now I'm hard and want you. I want you both. My hot men who know every centimeter of my body. Know how to make me scream and cry and fulfill every secret need or want I didn't even know I wanted. My men who surround me with their bodies and their love, who will both be inside me physically and emotionally. Who ...

Fuck!!!

Okay, I am going to come wake you both up in your (my) favorite way. But first ....
Ollie's birthday is in ten days, we are planning something special for our husband yeah? A big party? A picnic? His favorite dinner? Or OOOOOOOOH! We could take that mini holiday like you brought up the other day! Yeah yeah yeah! Let's do that! But where?

Okay, we'll talk about it later, think about it! But first, prepare to get your world ROCKED!

Incoming!
Harry

November 1st
The loves of my life,

I'm inexplicably pleased that you were both able to pick me out of a group of costumed demons. I'm also glad that nothing terrible happened at the ritual, but what you apparently didn't realize is that the three students who had talked about hurting others, well they were actually overheard discussing specifics via all our monitoring tech and spells.

So, a series of discreet orders were issued and a couple of Aurors in costume were able to interest those students in some cool magic, which means that they were led away and taken into custody. They have been questioned and their parents have been brought in to talk about the very serious situation.

Hermione herself decided that these students don't need punishment so much as therapy, so they are being confined to the securest part of the Janus Thickney ward until the counseling staff feel they've fully expressed and worked through their issues. So... A relatively happy ending.

Even better, I just finished a meeting between Penny, Ginger, and Bletchley. Penny made the job offers, and after some weird arguing, they were accepted.

It seems that Ginger had been told her whole life that no matter how good she is, there is never going to be a female Head Auror because women just can't. She's confident enough to dismiss that notion on the surface but apparently it took root. So when offered the position, she spent about 10 minutes arguing that she can't be Head Auror because she's a woman. We had to convince her that if the Head of the DMLE and the Minister for Magic can both be women, then why NOT the bloody Head Auror?!

Once she managed to wrap her head around that - and looking a bit shell shocked - she accepted and is officially the Head Auror with Bletchley as her Deputy. I'm sticking around just long enough to pick their assistants, but then it's back to regular old Chief of Raids for me.

All that said, most importantly of all, plan out that holiday and decide how many kids we want to bring with us so that we can arrange to have them come with OR taken care of by some combination of Grandparents and house elves. I'm looking forward to it ^_^

I'm giving them something they can feel - all my lovin' - to let them know this love is real,

Draco

Chapter End Notes
So the inspiration for this mini arc came during a massage with a teacher. We were chatting and I made a thoughtless comment that offended her that I didn’t realize was offensive until it was pointed out. But basically, I wasn’t thinking about how trained and alert schools have to be for students going on a rampage, so I decided to put myself in her shoes and write it into the story.
Harry has a bit of anxiety and Draco decides to be proactive about it.

Friday November 2, 2018

My Loves,

I have spent the last roughly thirty-six hours racking my brain about where we should go on our little holiday. I came up with about six or seven different ideas and then just kept shooting down each one. I kept going to different places we've already been because I know them already, then I thought that was stupid, why go where we've been before. We want new fun experiences right?

So I started thinking about places we haven't been. Where would we like to go and explore? But then I realized that we're taking a massive group so what if I pick somewhere we've never been and it turns out awful. Now we're stuck in some awful place with a million children all because I wanted to try something new and different.

That's when I thought maybe we go somewhere Draco and I have been so we know it's good, but a new destination for Ollie who hasn't traveled quite as much as we have. It might be nice to introduce him to something we can vouch for without it being boring. That's when I worried Ollie was going to be upset at the fact that the two of us have already been there already and it reminds him again that he came into this marriage years after the two of us were together.

So now I was back to let's go somewhere brand new.

Ugh! There's a chance my anxiety is NOT actually helping the situation.

Finally, after hours and hours and hours, I think I finally came up with the perfect mixture of somewhere we've been already without it feeling like a secondary throw-away vacation. We are going to Hawaii.

We went years and years ago, but it wasn't a huge trip. It was a short trip that we added on to a trip to California. We spent a few days there but it wasn't the main vacation. Plus, we spent the majority of our time on one island and there are multiple places we could go that will feel like an entirely different locale than the last time. It's the perfect mixture, we know it's a fantastic holiday spot, there will be a million things our family will enjoy doing, but by doing a different area it will be a new experience for us to all enjoy together.

We can do helicopter rides over the volcanos, we will definitely go surfing, I'm sure there will be luaus and other local attractions, all of it interspersed with lazy beach days where we do nothing but drink fruity drinks out of coconuts and get gloriously tan.

Draco, if we leave Wednesday the seventh will that be enough time for you to be completely done interviewing assistants and ready to take off and pretend the entire DMLE no longer exists? If not, just let me know, I told Mr. Lott we wanted to tentatively leave on Wednesday but that I'd let him know sometime today if that was going to change.
Oddly enough he seemed unconcerned about which day he was going to be forced to fly to Hawaii for an all inclusive vacation with our family!

And speaking of family, yes, we are going to bring pretty much everyone. Well, anyone who's available. I would love to have a lovely holiday just the three of us, but it's just not realistic right now. Nicky is so new to the family, I'm not ready to leave him quite yet. And the baby triplets and Nora not only are experiencing their new little brother, but we are preparing for them to have a new baby sister in a month or so as well. I think it's important we spend some quality time with them before things get hectic taking care of another newborn.

But because I truly would like some time just the three of us, just think about us being pampered in a Hawaiian spa for the entire day. Listening to each other moan and groan through couples massages. Mmmmm, yes please. So, because of that we are bringing all the grandparents with. That way we will have plenty of adults on hand for when we want to be alone but we'll still have plenty of quality time with everyone.

Basically, all the children younger than Hogwarts age are coming with. Zaire is (forcefully) taking a vacay from his restaurant and being a kid for one damn holiday, so help me Merlin! And Shtara is still between shows, so she is coming as well. I haven't heard yet if Siri or Zwei are coming. I'm pretty sure Zwei will come and it will depend on Siri's training schedule. Hazel and Pearl are coming with. River, Maha, and Ori are planning on flying over from California. Eris and Luka, as well as Viona, Alric, and Vinnie are coming with. But Cassie, Parker, and Lainie's families have all decided to stay back with their newborns.

They did ask if we'd be willing to send them on a future trip to Hawaii when they were up to traveling. Well, Elena did because she knows me; Cassie and Parker are still pretty shy about asking me for things so I had to offer them the same thing after I'd promised it to Lainie.

I'm going to go start researching fun places to visit while we're there so I can put together a full itinerary! There's something so great about having a moment by moment itinerary that we end up completely ignoring.

Yours,
Harry

Monday November 5th
My bloody gorgeous husbands!

I can't bloody WAIT to go to Hawaii!!! Let's buy a holiday home there, yeah? That way, I can have a two way portkey made that takes us there and back and we can go every other weekend. Sound good?

I'm having an excellent day. My assistant trials are over, and just as I hoped, I was able to hire a nice balanced team of one male and one female. Before you go accusing me of giving the bloke more leeway than the others simply because I wanted to hire a male, he clearly kicked arse at the trial run. The woman who had her trial first - not the Friday we just had but the one before - she was the other one I hired. None of the others could even come close to her, except the bloke, he was a close second, and the only reason I think the woman was better than him was that I think she took an energy potion.

If it turns out that she cheated to get the job, I'll have to replace her with one of the others, but I sincerely hope not as they really weren't as good at the job. In any case, they're hired, I have Ginger all set to take over, and Bletchley is beside himself with excitement because he assumed that Roche was going to remain Deputy for several years yet and thus, the job wouldn't be available. Lucky for him that it is, eh?

So, with everything taken care of for the time being and Oliver not due for a few weeks yet (I have a Portkey and an all expenses paid holiday package I'm planning to give to Rowe so that she can either A: arrange someone to cover her duties if she needs to drop everything and attend to us in Hawaii, or B make use of after Serenity is born should it happen after we return, which it should), there's just one last thing I felt was extremely important for us to do before we leave...

Harry, with your anxiety running as high as it is, I'm concerned that maybe you need to up your potions for a few weeks? But even if not - even if your potions are perfectly fine - I think maybe you should have a nice long session with your Mind Healer. To that end, I arranged for Katja, Yesenia, and Mia to come to the Manor tomorrow for several hours starting at 1PM - which the littles will be down for a nap and then watched by my parents until we have all had our individual sessions and a joint session to clear the air if needed, and possibly a bit of another individual session if we feel we need it.

Basically, I want us ALL to head off on holiday with nothing weighing us down.

If I never met you, I'd be drunk, waking up in someone else's bed,

Draco
Chapter 379

Chapter Summary

Draco and Oliver know what Harry needs.

Tuesday November 6, 2018
or is it already Wednesday November 7, 2018?

My Own,

Look how far we've come, not only are you recognizing my own mental health concerns, not only alright with me taking potions but actually suggesting I may need a dosage adjustment, and voluntarily calling in my mind healer as well as your own. Offering your heart and soul on a platter, willing to submit yourself to a joint therapy session just to make sure your husbands are in the best place emotionally.

My own individual session earlier today went well. I did have a few things I was letting build up, not because I was hiding from the problem but because we have just been so unbelievably busy lately. We're always busy, but we've been going nonstop for months even by our standards. I felt so much more settled after my session. And then we had our joint session. Again, I don't think we actually "needed" to come to terms with anything in particular, but it's always good to check in and make sure we're still on the same page. And having neutral-ish mediators there to help facilitate any potential conflicts is very freeing.

But again, there's really nothing in particular that seemed to be eating away at me. Even the massive fight we had when you went off to Russia with no contact wasn't an issue anymore. You know my issue wasn't that you went to help Kisa or Grandmama, but that you weren't allowed to contact us or receive any contact from us. We were actually very easily able to come to an agreement that we understand if you may need to leave for something similar in the future. We even understand if you have to take a vow to not tell us anything that is happening. But that we will never be alright with having the ability to contact you taken away from us. We brought it up in our joint session but it was pretty clear to the three of us and our three mind healers that it really wasn't weighing on any of us.

Although you aren't wrong in that I've been carrying a lot of weight on my shoulders and worrying a lot more than usual. Somehow just incapable of releasing my feelings. And even though you've been home I've been ... missing you? But that's not quite right.

I'm not sure if Robards' death was a wakeup call for you that putting in a gazillion hours is NOT a healthy plan. Or maybe you were sick of the day to day minutiae of Ministry work. Perhaps you've been trying to make up for all of your time away while in Russia. Whatever the reason, you've been great about being home as often as possible. Home for dinner most days. Actually spending the weekend with us even if you occasionally need to step out of the room for a bit to sign something or check on someone.

We've even been shagging, if not as much as I'd like (I AM fairly insatiable) certainly a good amount. Kisses in the morning. Cuddles on the couch. Late night shags. Middle of the night shags. The occasional nooner when breaks from work and baby nap schedules line up perfectly.
So how do I miss you? I'll admit I could spend every second of every day with my beloved husbands, but we've never been those husbands who've been attached at the hip. We love every moment we are together, but if the others need to do something, or even just want to do something alone we are all supportive of the others being whole people in their own rights. I just can't understand why I've been so needy when I have everything I need right here.

But, after we finished our sessions and were having a lovely dinner together as a family an offhand remark by Lucius hit me like a sledgehammer. I knew exactly what I'd been missing. Draco, you were telling your dad all about our plans to leave for Hawaii tomorrow. Since I've fully come into Lucius Malfoy's life he has slowly relaxed into a much less strict and rigid man. He regularly laughs. He's in love with all of his grandchildren no matter their blood status. He's worn muggle jeans for Merlin's sake! But with that overall relaxation has come the drawback of him being much less particular about punctuality. You were reminding him that he actually needed to be ready to go at our scheduled departure time as it is a very long flight and we didn't want to lose precious time to him primping for no reason. When he responded with a snarky "Sir, yes sir" I knew exactly what part of you I've been missing.

My Master.

I haven't submitted to you in months. Oh my hell, I haven't had the chance to fly in over two months now! The last time I submitted was when we had the torture session the day Ollie went back to Hogwarts for the school year. Sixty-five days Draco!

Later this evening, after we got all the kids and babies to sleep for the night I asked you both to meet me in the playroom. You both came in a few minutes after I did, my gorgeous men, holding hands, smiling and chatting with each other. But what you saw when you came into the room had the both of you stopping in your tracks. I was naked, on my knees, wrists crossed behind my back. But instead of my head bowed in submission I was staring at you. My eyes were wide and I had them bore right into you, pleading, and if the way I felt is any indication I'm sure they were wet with unshed tears. "Master please. Please, please, I need you."

"Little Mutt, I'm here. You need a spanking hmm? Should we get you all strapped up to your bench?"

I was torn, a spanking sounded delightful. I can't remember the last time I turned down a spanking, or any impact play honestly. I think I stuttered a bit in confusion because your eyes softened and realized something wasn't adding up as usual.

Our Ollie interjected, "Draco, look at him, he doesn't even know what he needs. But I bet you need something softer love don't you?"

Draco, your eyes lit up in recognition, "Oh, I know just what this sweet one needs if it's not a spanking he's after."

Oh thank goodness, I sagged in relief. I didn't know what I wanted but I knew my Master would know. "Thank you Master and Sir, thank you."

"Of course Mutt, why don't we get you all set up. You stay on your knees and breathe for me while I get what we need."

I kept my good posture, but emotionally just melted into a puddle. I sat my arse down on my heels, dropped my chin down, and closed my eyes focusing on my breathing as I was told. I could hear the two of you moving around the room, whispering to each other, but it all just faded away with each breath I took in and out. I didn't need to worry about what you were saying or doing, I was told to kneel and breathe.

Eventually you came over, and using your stern yet soft Master voice told me to give you my wrists. You clamped on my fur-lined leather cuffs telling me "doesn't that feel nice? I've got you. Even when I'm not touching you, I've got you." Then doing the same thing to my ankles. A physical presence, a reminder of ownership, the snug fit grounding me.

The two of you moved to the table and chairs, chatting softly and drinking (wine in your case and juice in Ollie's) while I knelt at your feet. You had a cushion for me to kneel on and you lovingly stroked my hair. But if I hadn't felt the cuffs hugging my wrists and ankles, or felt your fingers gliding through my hair, I would have felt completely invisible. I didn't need to be Harry the husband, Harry the dad, Harry the savior, there were no expectations. Just kneeling, breathing, feeling.

I honestly have no idea how long I knelt there at both of your feet. I did notice Ollie occasionally joining you in stroking my hair, your fingers intertwining occasionally. He would also run his hand down my spine from time to time.

My drifting mind faded back into consciousness when I heard you asking if I was cozy enough for our next activity. I'm pretty sure I gave you a smile, nodding away but not having the energy to speak quite yet. Ollie held my hand while you picked me up bridal style. I felt so safe, both of you keeping me from unraveling. You used the links on my cuffs to lock me into our swing, then shot a stationary spell at it so it wouldn't move. Seemed odd to stabilize a piece of equipment designed to swing back and forth but I wasn't in charge.

You seemed to chuckle at my confused face and even though I didn't need an explanation, gave me one, "The swing will keep you splayed out in the perfect position both your Sir and I will be using it for its proper use when we're good and ready, but I need you nice and still for this first part. Are you ready to give up control love? I know you're feeling quiet, but I need your verbal confirmation Harry James. Can you at least give me a color?"

My loves, so worried about my safety even when I'm pliant and willing. Probably even more when I'm pliant and willing. "Green Master and Sir. So very very green please."

"Green hmm? Just like these lovely cuffs of yours. And just like the matching ring I'm going to put on you. That's right Mutt, I don't want you to have to worry about a single thing. Not even about when you'll be allowed to come. All of you belongs to me."

Oh thank all the Gods. I have no control. I have no worries. No power. I just get to BE.

Ollie strapped my cock and bollocks up in the leather ring while you pulled out the sounding tools. Oh fuck me sideways. I love/hate those!

I'd love to describe everything the two of you did to me. Based on what time we got into the playroom and then when I noticed the time when I finally came out of my subspace I think you must have edged me for hours. My cock is deliciously raw on the inside from the sounding. My arse feels well fucked so I assume you both got a good buggering out of your system. My knees are a bit sore from kneeling for so long. I feel so beautifully cared for. Every time I shift I can feel how loved I was last night? This night? A few hours ago?

But the thing I feel most is how clear my head is and how much weight is off of my shoulders. I feel free and unfettered. Thank you my Master and my Sir. Tonight was exactly what I needed.

Now I am going to try and go back to sleep for at least a few more hours. We have a long day ahead of us so I should probably be well-rested for it. I'm going to climb back into bed and cuddle the both of you SO HARD!!

Yours in all ways,
Harry

Thursday November 6th
The fires in my soul,

After a LONG plane flight from London to Hawaii, we've finally arrived. With six Grandparents, the three of us, most of our kids, our entourage, and an army of house elves, I honestly have NO IDEA how many of us there are here. I'm pretty sure that Pippa just confounded a hotel to rent us out an entire floor. We haven't actually arrived there yet (and are currently in a bus on the way), so maybe she managed to find a house big enough for all of us.

In any case, we're here in Hawaii and are planning to have as much fun as possible for as long as possible. The only thing I actually have on my list of things I have to do whilst here, is I have to visit that farm that Orion more or less owns (I can't remember if we ever officially put it in his name, or if it still belongs to the conglomeration). I want/need to do this to make sure that it's still doing well and doesn't need anything. For example, if they need to replace some trees or something, I'd like to make sure they have the funds to do so so that the business continues on successfully for the long run.

Other than that, and a bit of surfing, I have no plans and leave everything up to you.

And if I were the King of the world, tell you what I'd do, I'd throw away the cars and the bars and the war, make sweet love to you,
Draco
Chapter 380

Chapter Summary

They're in Hawaii!

Chapter Notes

Trigger warning! Draco has a vision that - while it's not stated explicitly - refers to a rape. But I tried to make it subtle enough that you're not quite certain what happened.

Thursday November 8, 2018

My forgetful love,

Official list of all of your fellow travelers ...
You, myself, Oliver
Viona, Alric, Vinnie
Eris and Luka
Hazel and Pearl
Shtara, Zwei, Zaire, Jaz, Persephone, Lily, Caelum, Atreyu, Nora, Gabe, Dylan, Morgana, Nicolas
Sirius, Pippa, Leah, Pierre, and Leon
Sebastian, Delphini, Vanessa, and Balian
Mr Lott of course, we don't have a self flying airplane
Gavin and Della
The Malfoy Grandparents
The Weasley Grandparents
The Wood Grandparents

And then tomorrow, River, Maha, Ori, Ben, Mara, Evie, and Gemi's flight gets in and they'll be joining us.

So forty-one for now, and by tomorrow we'll have forty-eight.

While Pippa was searching for locations, she came across a rental airbnb. It was an entire villa. So we'll all be in one location, but instead of being enclosed in a big hotel, we're spread out in a dozen one or two bedroom suites. It's right on the beach but there's also a pool. We'll all be in different buildings but in a beautiful enclosed community. The kids can dart back and forth between the buildings without disrupting a bunch of other guests or being cooped up inside.

It's absolute perfection as far as I can tell from the pictures and the description. And yes, if it's as perfect as it looks you definitely have my permission to try buying it so we have a permanent hawaiian vacation locale.

Oh! I almost forgot!! Greetings from beautiful sunny Hawaii!
But I have had quite enough of typing and I think everyone has picked their suite and changed into their swim clothes.

Last one to the beach is .... lame and not on the beach!

Harry

Saturday November 10th
My perfect men,

Tell me, why oh why don't we come spend EVERY winter in paradise???

Tonight has been so wonderful. We went to a luau that is rather well attended because of the excellent show the hula dancers put on. Now normally, they don't allow any of the guests to join in with the professional dancers, because they don't want to scare away their paying customers, but I am not a normal customer.

There was one hula dancer in particular that was just so... I am really trying to come up with a descriptive word that does her justice without triggering either of you to mistake my interest for more than it is, but all I can come up with is exotic or gorgeous. Please understand that I am appreciating her beauty from the perspective of someone who likes dancing and can appreciate a lithe and sensual dancer.

In any case, the moment I saw her, I was instantly in a form of non romantic love. Like... a fan? A person who appreciates fine art? So I insisted that our waiter bring me to the owner of the establishment and bribed him to let me join her on stage for a performance. I didn't even have to cast a Confundus on him! He just took the money, shrugged, and told me it would be my own fault if I made myself look like an utter fool.

So, since I was only wearing a loose iconic 'Hawaiian' shirt - in green and silver - over a pair of black men's yoga pants, I stripped the shirt off and asked to borrow a set of poi spinners. Once I was ready, the owner had the announcer announce that a special guest was going to go up on stage with Hana (the exotically gorgeous performer). She wasn't sure what to do, since we hadn't talked to her at all before I arrived on stage, but I went over to her and asked her to simply do her favorite dance while I spun the poi pots.

She looked a bit skeptical that a (very) white man would know any sort of ethnic dance, but she can't have known that I'd been practicing with Elena long before Elena literally opened a school that taught dance - among other things. In any case, she shrugged, gave me a warm and somewhat sardonically amused smile, and agreed. So she danced and I flowed around her while spinning poi.

SO FUN!

And when I was done - after a flattering standing ovation - I returned to our table with the rest of you (it wasn't our entire family as all our parents had insisted on staying at the beach with our 9 littlest - and all the other babies so that the parents could have the night off. You both looked so happy to see me looking just a little sweaty from my dancing and rewarded me with kisses.

After the entire show was over, Hana came over and gave me a couple of kisses on the cheek and asked if we could take a few selfies with each other, and then we got to chatting and agreed that she should come over to our Villa on her next day off so that the two of us can dance with each other some more and maybe come up with a routine in which we both hula and fire dance together.
I'm quite looking forward to it!

Thus, I was in a very happy mood when we returned to our accommodations. Part of me wanted to surf while part of me wanted to shower and shag for an hour or two before passing out. The horny beast in me won out because I opted to take a shower and save the surfing for tomorrow. In our actual - it's hard to describe, it's like the entire villa is made up of smaller houses, so our, erm… house? In our designated suite, the shower is made up of dark brown bricks and glass. I asked you both to wait on the sofa while I rinsed off, because I wanted to be clean, but then I also wanted to order you both to lick me all over, mmm.

In the shower, I rested my head against the wall and just let the water flow over me for a few moments. Almost immediately, a vision came. It was of a woman with long hair that looked sort of dark blonde while wet. She was also in a similar position as me, her hands bracing her away from the wall as she let the water flow over her. I couldn't quite tell her age because I was inside her, I suppose, and the only reason I knew she was a woman was that she had looked down at her body and then over at the mirror for a moment.

In any case, as she was relaxing into the warmth of the shower, she closed her eyes and hummed softly. Suddenly, a hand pressed her into the wall, a body crowding up against her. She gasped in surprise and looked around to see an older man behind her, and since she/I/we couldn't really see him except for in the mirror, I cannot be certain, but I believe that he was preparing to enter her. In normal circumstances, I probably would have welcomed such a surprise, but she clearly did not as she pushed him away and glared at him.

"What do you think you are doing?" She demanded.

"Whaddaya think I'm doin'?" He slurred very thickly, swaying woozily.

"You're clearly too drunk to see straight, dad! I'm NOT mom! Go find her!"

"Whaddaya mean?" He was swaying even more and nearly fell off his feet.

Heaving a snarl of disgust, she pushed past him and left the bathroom. After that, I came out of the vision and was able to finish my shower, more than a little disturbed. I mean in all the visions I've seen, there's almost always someone dying, or at the very least, getting badly hurt. This one DIDN'T have any of that, but the sheer thought of my father getting so drunk that he tried to shag me, well, I nearly lost everything I ate at the luau! Blech!

After that, I grabbed a towel to dry my hair as I wandered back out to the two of you, who were already kissing and feeling each other up as you sat on the long gray sofa with the white and green pillows all shoved to one side. Smirking, I sat on the dark mahogany stained wooden coffee table topped with glass. To my surprise, another vision overwhelmed me, and it was graphic and horrible enough to completely ruin my mood for at least a good three days!

Once again, I was nearly sick, heaving into my hands until one of you handed me a small waste bin and the other rubbed my back soothingly. I begged you two to let me go to bed and sleep off the unwanted bad images and mood, and so, I went to bed and wrote up this email to purge myself and try to recapture the happy feeling from before. Now that I'm feeling a bit better, I'm going to go to sleep. I sincerely hope the two of you had some magical memories under the ocean, or on the beach, or just plain on that Merlin cursed coffee table.

I love you tomorrow, you're always a day away,
Draco
Our Heart,

Oh Darling, I am so sorry you had to deal with whatever vision seemed to slam into you. I think it's time to thoroughly discuss how to handle your visions. I know they seem a blessing when you're saving lives, but they also hit you out of nowhere. What if you were slammed with a vision while flying on a broom or holding one of the babies? Someone could get seriously injured when you blur out. Maybe it's time to block or semi-block your visions the way we blocked Morgana's specific magic.

Anyway, we're hoping you managed to get some rest. I know you don't want to miss surfing but I don't think the kids would have let us put it off another day. So, we've taken everyone with, from adult kids down to teeny tiny newborns. You are alone in the silence of paradise. But the elves are on call so the moment you wake they will let us know.

Don't you worry about missing surfing though, even if you don't wake up in time to come join us, you KNOW it will take zero effort to convince everyone to come back out for more surfing. Sometimes I think our children are part merfolk.

Get rest, clear your mind, join us if you're feeling better!

Love and sunshine!
Harry and Oliver

Monday November 12th
My gorgeous husbands,

Is there anything better than spending an entire Monday afternoon surfing? No time for writing, I'mma surf more!

Your husband for life!
Draco

Tuesday November 13th
My amused husbands,

I was wrong! There IS something better than spending an entire Monday surfing, and that's spending an entire Tuesday dancing! Hana came over as promised and spent the afternoon dancing with me, Viona, Jaz, Vani, Zaire, Shtara, and Orion. Pearl joined us from time to time as her morning sickness allowed, but Hazel was busy designing something gorgeous inspired by the Hawaiian sunset. (And the others were off doing their own things.)

One of the best parts was when Morgana and Dylan noticed that I was firedancing and decided to try imitating me. They were just SO FREAKIN' ADORABLE!!! After a couple of hours, we were ready to take a break, and so all of us tanned our naked and sweaty (firedancing is hot and sweaty by definition after all) bodies in the beautiful sunshine next to the pool, while eating a nice snack of local foods catered - well, by Zaire actually. As usual, he's already gone on at least one food tour and made up his favorite foods.

I'll admit that the entire barbecued pig has been FABULOUS!!!
Anyway, the break ended before we ended up getting burnt, and the dancing resumed until Hana and I worked out a lovely routine to perform just for fun. She actually wonders if I'll be in the mood to perform it with her at the luau (where she works) this weekend. I'm not certain yet if we'll have plans, but I kind of want to do it.

Actually, I had to laugh because Orion seemed to think Hana was exotically beautiful too, only his admiration seemed to come from a businessman standpoint. He was trying his best to talk her into letting him set her up with a show in either LA or Las Vegas. At first, she seemed to think he was joking, but after he told her how he owns a fairly successful club and used to perform there himself - and then proved it by dancing for her one of the routines he'd performed - she seemed... pensive. I think she must have noticed that we're a wealthy family, so maybe the idea of a man offering to fund her trying for a bigger and more lucrative venue, well...

I'm sure it must be tempting.

That said, Ben and Mara both looked like they couldn't quite decide whether or not to be jealous. Maybe Orion noticed this, or maybe he just obliviously did it, but after spending a good hour flirting heavily with Hana, he left her to think his offer over, and returned to his lovers with just the right mixture of sweetness and, hmm... attention to their needs. They're his submissives, and they seem to play their roles about 98 percent of the time, but that's what seemed to reassure them the most. That he didn't break his role while he focused on them and had them be submissive to him in a non sexual way in front of everyone. Like he was not hesitant in the slightest to claim them as his in public.

That reminds me! I need to have one or both of you pamper me soon. Or maybe you'd rather we went to the spa as suggested? But before that, I actually want to go to that Macadamia farm of Orion's, so that's basically the first and only thing on my agenda for tomorrow, since Orion is officially here and ready to go too.

As for right now, I'm going to sneak off with at least one of you and have a quickie before dinner.

Stay close to me, don't let me be alone, it's tearing apart my blue blue heart,

Draco
Chapter 382

Chapter Summary

Harry is not that easily distracted.

Tuesday November 13, 2018

My Love,

Greetings from paradise! I certainly wouldn't be against the idea of settling down to live in paradise forever. Even just "wintering" in paradise. But keep in mind there may or may not be a very specific paradicial backup plan island that we may or may not live out the rest of our lives on. So.....

I could also argue that paradise is wherever I am as long as it's with the two of you!

But in all seriousness, I really think it's time to figure out how to solve the problem of your visions. You were trying so hard to distract yourself from telling us about your vision that you went over the top, practically screaming in your email. Being big and loud, talking about the best days ever full of surfing and dancing. Trying to distract us and yourself with discussing Orion's romantic life.

You were working so hard at pretending everything is fine that you completely forgot to describe our husband's birthday celebration! I know you tend to focus on things like fire-dancing but it not like you to completely forget an amazing day of worshiping your husband, fun activities, and birthday shags.

Not that you were wrong in talking about the fun day of surfing we had. "Is there anything better than spending an entire Monday afternoon surfing?" going on to add "There IS something better than spending an entire Monday surfing, and that's spending an entire Tuesday dancing" But .... uhm maybe better than either of those is spending an entire Sunday with your husband on his forty-third birthday.

I have to admit though, watching Morgana and Dylan firedancing WAS probably as good as the birthday celebrations. I could go on and on for hours about how ridiculously cute they were! I don't think I've ever been that thankful you invented that print out your memories pensieve. THAT one is going on the wall!

I could also probably go on and on for hours about the lovely birthday breakfast we had with Ollie. I could write more words than any human possibly needs to describe the evening of shagging under the stars we had. I could probably write an entire novel (each) to the beauty of my husbands. But I won't.

Instead, I want to talk about the amazing activity we did ... that also got our Ollie thinking about his charity and ways to expand it.

We played Pa'ani Lani with the Hawaiian wizards! I can't even ... how would you even describe it? It was part water polo, part beach volleyball, a lot of quidditch, and a bit of quodpot thrown in for good measure. Draco, the first time the quaffle exploded I thought you were going to wet your pants! It was hilarious!

Sorry, you probably didn't think it was quite as funny. Actually, maybe that's why you didn't describe the birthday celebrations!

Nah! Probably not. You would have at least described the dinner on the beach and the shagging. Even if you left out the game time.

But those hours spent playing were some of my very favorite here on the islands so far. First of all, you know how much I love flying. Secondly, seeing Ollie in his competitive glory? Insta-boner. And seeing the both of you in those teeny tiny trunks the players call a Pa'ani uniform? Mmmmmmmmm, yummy.

Really though, once I got a handle on the rules it was a fantastic game. It took all of the best elements of all four sports, took out the sucky parts (seriously, even as a seeker I think the point differential between goals scored and snitch caught is ridiculous) and then set the entire event on a beautiful ocean/beach combo. What's not to love about it?

Except obviously the exploding quaffle, apologies again for laughing so hard!

Obviously we don't have a tropical beach in Wiltshire but I'd love to figure out how to bring the game home with us. At the very least I'd like to come back more often. Which will probably be quite easy since Ollie wants to extend his quidditch charity to include versions of the game in different locations, like the American Quodpot and now with the Hawaiian Pa'ani Lani. I haven't done the research but I assume there are probably variations throughout the overall wizarding world. We already saw it a little bit with the Canadian version of quidditch which is exactly the same as ours except played lower to the ground and usually in full winter garb.

Anyway, I'm sure you noticed that we haven't seen much of Ollie since his birthday, it's because he's been researching and note-taking on ways to expand his charity. You and I will have to drag him out of research mode soon, I don't want to spend this entire trip missing you while you're dancing with Hana and missing Ollie while he works on his charity.

Two husbands and I feel like I've spent half the trip so far missing one or both of you!

Then again, YOU are probably avoiding me so we don't have to have a conversation about cutting back on your visions.

Not that easily distracted,
Harry

Wednesday November 14th
My beloved husbands,

First of all, I didn't describe Oliver's birthday because I knew you'd do a better job describing the emotional aspects of it, and plus, you seemed far more interested in the game... Sigh. I suppose that I will have to get more used to playing the game since Oliver loves it so much, but yes, my first experience with it was not the most, erm... thrilling...

Although, playing any game on the beach is most definitely better than playing in the stormy Scottish Novembers.

Second of all, I am not interested in potentially destroying my ability to have visions. Yes it is a pain in the arse to have them unexpectedly while on holiday, but I'd rather have the occasional unwanted vision of a disgusting drunken incestuous rape than never have any visions at all, and so far, the ability has mostly only come when I consciously wanted it to. Only on the rare occasion has it happened unexpectedly, and I think that it's mostly because I focus so much on solving crimes with my visions, that my power assumes that I want to see ALL crimes I come across.

But on to more important things. My trip to Orion's Macadamia farm today was brilliant. The income they earn from Orion having branded the Macadamias and selling them directly to specialty markets is big enough that the farm is prospering and in very good condition. Things are going so well for them that we were able to have the entire business meeting while taking in the sun next to a lovely pond they had installed.

Have I mentioned yet how much I love having NO tan lines?

Tonight's shaping up to be a rather lazy one. We've all agreed to sit under the stars and just be together as we take turns holding Nicolas and singing to the littles. The Feisty ones will probably run around playing some game or other, but they'll be with us as well. Even Zaire and Jaz - who have been half working since we arrived - have decided to do nothing important tonight but hang out with the family.

Well, I'm certain Zaire made a feast of some sort to enjoy while we relax. But the point is that we're all going to be together and doing nothing but spending time with each other. Probably around a bonfire.

Oh! Such a hard life we lead!

Last one there is a rotten dragon egg!

Nothing's gonna stop me but divine intervention,
Draco
Chapter 383

Chapter Summary

The family is having fun but Draco is concerned that he's going to get fat.

Chapter Notes

See the end of the chapter for notes

My Everything,

Absolutely all aspects of our holiday so far have been wonderful. The weather is perfection. You know I could spend all my time at the beach if given the chance. I've had children and grandchildren to cuddle and spoil. We've visited cool places. Bought WAY too many souvenirs. Played flying games. Visited Wizards and Witches from this beautiful place. And eaten so so sooo much good food. But I bet the both of you can probably guess that none of those have been my favorite part of this trip.

No. My favorite parts have been the times we've done nothing special. That we've just spent time together as this big, ridiculously large, pieced together quilt of a family.

We've spent our days on fun adventures, but every single evening before putting the small kids to bed, we've all gathered in the middle of the circle of little houses and just talked. Sitting around the bonfire, singing about a million songs together, telling tall tales, roasting marshmallows, and just being together. It's been amazing, although panicky Harry is certainly pleased we have magic and the ability to ward the bonfire. Can you imagine my anxiety running rampant with seven highly mobile almost two-year-old toddlers let loose around fire?

But last night was probably my favorite evening so far. It started out as each evening has, our whole group slowly migrating to the seats around the fire. Filtering in a few people at a time. We'd start singing a few songs, there was plenty of teasing, lots of cuddles for the little ones as they checked in with their favorite grownups. I'm assuming it's because you've been spending so much time learning about Pa'ani Lani, but Draco was feeling extra needy for Ollie's attention, so he had you sat across his lap while stroking your bump.

I'll admit I was a bit jealous that you were cuddling and Draco was getting extra time with Serenity, until I realized your full arms meant I had Nicky all to myself and just about cackled in glee.

While Draco held Ollie, Hazel was similarly holding Pearl and Ori was cradling Mara. It was such a wonderful sight; we had our parents holding some of their great-grandchildren, sweet children singing silly campfire songs, newlyweds and brand new parents sitting next to their teenaged siblings teasing and bickering like they're still kids themselves. I know that neither of you was surprised when I teared up.

Sometimes I like to just let these sweet moments pass without saying anything about them, not wanting to jinx the good times by calling them out. But I had to say something in that moment, "Dragon, you're holding Ollie while he carries our baby just the way you would hold me when I was carrying Ori. And now Ori is over there holding his love who's carrying his baby. Our son has the same look of adoration I saw in your face all those years ago, and that I can see in your face tonight."

I sniffled a little but couldn't help but scootch myself closer to you both so I could at least steal some kisses. "Love you both and our family so much."

You both gave me that "aww, our Harry is such a sap" look but I think you were feeling almost as emotional as I was. I know I have a very obvious "sap" face, but the both of you must as well because we were called out on it. "Oi! Lovebirds! What are you getting all dewy-eyed about over there?" You may not have grown up with Gavin, but he sure teases just as much as any other little brother I've met!

I proceeded to tell everyone what I had been talking to you both about, how lovely I found it that our family is growing in many directions but some things never change. Bringing up how much it warms my heart to see Ori and Haz fawning over their pregnant loves. Somehow this led to the usually quiet Mara asking if I would tell her about my pregnancy with Ori. She was curious if we had similar symptoms ... unfortunately for her yes we did/do. She's measuring big and is still nauseated even this far into her pregnancy. I blame Orion and Draco, Mara agrees!

But that sweet moment of camaraderie led to the entire night talking about each child's arrival into our lives.

Each child seemed enthralled to hear us tell how they came to us. Shtara preened when we talked about her contagious grin and dynamic personality that I knew instantly belonged in our family even though it took Draco an entire five minutes!

Atreyu giggled but hid his blushing face when I talked about his little naked bum hiding out in our backyard in California.

Narcissa and Lucius talked at length about taking on all four of their youngest children after almost two decades of having only one (utterly spoiled) son.

Ollie your parents told an absolutely adorable story about you as a little boy, and I very selfishly hope our little Serenity looks just like her Daddy Oliver because it sounds like you were the cutest!

Molly talked about how easy and lovely each of her pregnancies were (she's lucky just like you Ollie with easy pregnancies, so I hate you both just a little) except her pregnancy with the twins was just a bit more exhausting. Which led to a bit of a tearful reminder that one of her twins is missing.

Luckily, Lily and Caelum quickly wanted to hear all about how THEY were a set of trouble-making twins so we were able to swing things back to happy stories. Although Seph did NOT like the reminder that she's not technically a triplet but Cael and Lissa ARE actually twins.

Her birth story is one of the most exciting stories though so she was quickly placated by having what she thought was the best story.

Sirius even told about sitting in the waiting room with my dad when I was born. Apparently at some point my mum kicked him out because his anxious pacing was annoying the hell out of her. I guess she had Remus in the room with her until right before she began pushing.

I love the big moments in our lives; weddings and births, ceremonies and parties, holidays and seeing the world, but memories like this will be seared into my brain for always. Telling stories of our beautiful family around a campfire in paradise.

Little Harry in the closet would never believe me.
The circle won't be broken, by and by lord, by and by,
Harry

Sunday November 18th
Ah! My beloved husbands!

Everything is wonderful! Harry, did you hear? Apparently my parents heard us joke about whether or not we wanted to buy this Villa, and thought: Why the fuck not? So they bought it! And perhaps best of all, the entire family can use it as they like, thus even both of your sets of parents can Portkey in whenever they feel like it.

Last night was so much fun! I got a chance to dance again with Hana - at her luau as suggested. Then I roared with laughter when the owner tried to pull me aside and offer me a job! That wasn't actually the funny part, the funny part was when - after I declined because I don't need a job at all, let alone such a low paying one - Hana herself handed in her 2 week notice. When her boss demanded to know WHY she was leaving them - being one of their best dancers - she told them that one of my rich boy sons offered to fund her so that she could move to either LA or Las Vegas and dance in her own show.

She's leaning towards LA since it's closer to home and she could visit her family easier.

That said, Orion is now ALSO trying to talk her into heading over to London for a week every quarter to dance in the Hog's Head. Ever the businessman, our son is. Gotta love him!

The only minor downside so far is that I 'caught' a girl surfing on her own at the tender age of 11. I mean she is a native, and does seem to be nearly a professional at it, so I'm probably overreacting, but I still cast a slew of safety charms on her so that she couldn't be thrown off her board and drown. She looked at me like I was ten kinds of crazy for surfing with Morgana strapped to my back, but since Viona did something 'nearly magical' just then and distracted the girl, she didn't finish her lecture on surfing safety.

To no surprise, Zaire invited the girl to come eat some of the food he's cooked up. We may even learn her name, haha!

But MMM! Zaire made a pizza that's to DIE for! I may have to hex my mouth shut so I can't eat the whole bloody thing! But it's got some of the leftover pig from the roast shredded on it with thinly sliced pineapple rings, bacon, barbecue sauce, and onions, mmm. I'm going to get SO FAT if we stay here much longer! How in the buggering HELL does Zaire manage to stay so thin?!

Ugh, I think I'm going to have to go jogging along the beach tonight to run off some of my ever expanding arse, sigh...

But first... more pizza!

It's burning down, it's burning high, when ashes fall, the legends rise,
Draco
P.S. Will one of you PLEASE come stop me before I gain another 10 stone?!
So this here is an example of our boys NOT taking in every child they come across. See, I had planned for Draco to look into the girl's background and decide to take her on as a foster child - or possibly adopt her - but Draco gets so very distracted in the next email that he completely forgets about her.
Chapter 384

Chapter Summary

Draco is alarmed, and Harry and Oliver are also rather alarmed.

Trigger warning: underaged sex

Chapter Notes

Okay! This is important, so this chapter STARTS with a Draco email. It's a sort of long one too, and so is Harry's, so it doesn't feel right to put a third email at the end to return to the normal Harry/Draco format. Also, Chrissie is leaving in the morning on a trip with her sister to have lots of fun, and because of that, I MIGHT write a few Draco emails in a row. I haven't decided yet if I'm going to wait and write one long one, or write a bunch of little ones from Draco (I already have a good reason as to why he would need to do so). Thus, until I've decided, it will probably stay in Draco/Harry format with me using this current situation as a reason to change it back. If it doesn't work out the way I plan, I'll just change it back when there's a series of short emails ^_^ I know it probably doesn't matter to y'all either way, but with it being Harry/Draco for so long, it might be jarring for it to switch so suddenly and then stay that way for no apparent reason :-)

Sunday November 18th - about 2-3 hours after the previous email

My solid foundations,

I just had a flashback to when River was a teenager, ugh...

So... there I was, jogging on the beach - the two of you putting the littles to bed - when I nearly ran over Zwei... and some girl. NOT the one that Zaire invited to dinner mind, but apparently just some random girl Zwei had met on the beach earlier.

To be fair, they WERE trying to be discrete, and not literally in the middle of the beach where just anyone could see them, but I'd noticed something odd out of the corner of my eye and went to check it out. Under one of those lifeguard towers, a muggle repelling charm shone like a star, probably making the beach blanket slung over the side seem more covering than it actually is.

And yes, I'm dwelling on the little details to stop myself from freaking out over the important detail, which is that our FOURTEEN YEAR OLD SON was in a position with a NEWLY MET girl, that required him to give me THIS EXPLANATION!!!

"DAD! Why are you so upset?! We used protection!"

"WHY AM I UPSET?!" I roared incredulously. "UNLESS SHE'S OF AGE, HER PARENTS CAN LEGALLY HAVE YOU CHARGED FOR THIS!!!"
"I'm 16, sir, which is the age of consent for Hawaii," the girl informed me.

I rubbed my forehead and did my best to calm down. "Listen, I'm sorry if I'm coming off as an arsehole at the moment, but I have no way to verify if you are telling the truth. As a father, I HAVE to protect my son, which means that I have to insist that you both get dressed and say goodbye to each other."

"Merlin damnit, dad! Ever since you became Head Auror, you never let us do anything fun!" Zwei yelled.

"I BEG YOUR PARDON?!" I demanded since I can't recall restricting him in any way.

"You care more about the LAW than about HOW I FEEL!" He shouted.

 Seriously tempted to hex him, I had to take a step back. "Oh??? So it's somehow LOVE then? Something so important that we should all just let you have your way in this? DESPITE the fact that you CAN'T have known her longer than a couple of weeks!"

Zwei seemed to realize that he didn't have a leg to stand on because he rubbed the back of his neck and looked at his feet. "No, I just met her earlier today. I MEAN that I like her and when she asked me to have fun with her, I thought that it would be a good opportunity to find out what all the fuss is about. I was responsible enough to use protection, and it's really not fair of you to get mad at me like I was purposely getting her up the duff or too drunk to even care or something."

Suddenly feeling defeated, I basically plopped onto the beach. "Listen, I can't just say: Oh, you were responsible? Good for you son! I'll just go and let you get back to it! … I know it SEEMS mean, but I have to be the arsehole dad and tell you that at your age, being RESPONSIBLE means thinking about the law and waiting until you CANNOT get into trouble."

Zwei got a rather shrewd look on his face. "But I actually sort of did. Think about the law, that is. I asked her how old she is, and she told me 16 - which is the age of consent - so unless she lied, which I KNOW our lawyers could have the charges dropped in that instance, it's not ME that can get into legal trouble..."

"Wait, what?!" The girl asked in surprise. "You mean you're NOT 16?"

Zwei sort of smirked at her. "Hey, you didn't ask."

For whatever reason, such blatantly Slytherin actions from our firmly Gryffindor son managed to put me in supportive father mode. "Alright, so, now that I've reacted and then had five seconds to think, let me ask another very important question."

Zwei looked at me warily, even tilting his head to the side and squinting his eyes almost suspiciously.

"Did you at least have fun?"

He smiled at that. "Yeah. I liked it a lot."

I sighed in relief since - even for boys - a first time can be traumatic if one isn't ready. Then I looked to the girl, who was already back in her bikini and now wrapping a sarong around her waist. "And you?"

She looked confused. "Why do you care?"
"Because if my son can't make it good for his partner, then he DEFINITELY needs to wait until he can."

"Huh!" She exclaimed in surprise. "Well, don't worry about that. I'd swear he was almost a pro. NOT that I actually know what a pro is like, just that, um, you know, I couldn't tell that it was his first time, unless he was just saying that to get you to stop yelling at him."

"Nope, NEVER lie to dad! He can read minds!" Zwei informed her.

She laughed. "My mom is like that too! She's going to take one look at me when I get back, shake her head, and ask me if I've remembered to take my birth control pills. Which I have!"

The two of them gave each other flirty smiles that made it easy to see that they really did like each other and there didn't seem to be any coercion on either side. I sighed and then groaned unhappily.

"Listen, you should go talk to your dad. I mean definitely wait until all the little are in bed and he's got a few minutes for a private chat, but I'm very not good at this part of parenting. He's a born natural at this and will know exactly what to say."

Again, the girl looked confused. "Why would I want to talk to my dad? And how would YOU know what he's like???

Zwei laughed. "No, he's talking about MY dad. My other one. Dad, can't I just go take a bath, Magi-Skype Siri, and talk to dad about it at the crack of dawn tomorrow when HE goes running across the beach?"

"You plan to get up that early?" I asked in surprise.

"Maybe?"

I gave him a dry look.

"Besides, this way, you'll have emailed him the news and he'll have had a chance to react before I talk to him," Zwei added.

I sighed. "Fine. So long as you know that I WILL be telling him." I then pulled out my magi-tablet so that I could write this email before finishing my run. Call us cowards, but Zwei's suggestion sounded a bit brilliant. Tell you and let you react before I have to face you and say: "Harry, despite having two sons and four daughters grow up and have sex, I STILL have no bloody idea how I'm suppose to react."

Zwei laughed, kissed me on the cheek, and then held out a hand to the girl. "Come on, I'll walk you back."

"You have two dads?" She wondered, looking slightly impressed by this.

"Actually, I have three," Zwei informed her with a grin.

"RIIIIIGHT…" She drawled in disbelief. "I want to ask you how old you actually are, but I don't think I can believe you now."

"Then why should I tell you?" Zwei asked rather cheekily.

"Zwei!" I chided.

"Your name is ZWEI??"
We both laughed at that. Zwei bowed to her in a fairly princely manner, considering that he was wearing only a swim cozzie.

"Draco Lucius Malfoy Jr. at your service. That there is the first one, and so my nickname is Zwei, meaning Two. And I'm 14."

"14 huh? Never been with someone as young as you before. You sly dog! I'm actually a little impressed by how you managed to ask me all the pertinent information while avoiding giving it in return!"

He smirked at her again. "You seemed too... distracted to care."

She ruffled his hair. "Well I WAS rather distracted. I've never even seen a boy as good looking as you before. And I LIVE in a place where hot boys go surfing all the time!"

Zwei shamelessly preened at that. The two of them walked away, giving me time to write this. Now I'm going to finish that run I was on and hope you read this before I get back. Actually, I might run much longer than I normally would, and so, if I seem to be taking a long time, you could always come find me and shag me under these gorgeous stars.

There's no one quite like you, you push all my buttons down, I know that life would suck without you, whoa-oh-oh!

Draco

Monday November 19, 2018

Loves,

Flashbacks to teenaged River indeed. Yes Draco, I read your email before you got back. Although I don't think it did you as much good as you thought it might.

Hope your run was wonderful because you came back to a brilliant teenager versus dads epic argument. Zwei shouting about us not letting him have any fun. Saying the same crap he did to you "Ever since Dad became Head Auror, he never lets me have any fun! Now I have three buzzkill dads!"

"Well, lucky for me then that I have always been a buzzkill huh? Draco Lucius Malfoy Junior ..." Zwei's jaw dropped when he heard me pull out his full name, "you are fourteen years old. What you did tonight was illegal. It was unsafe and -"

Zwei interrupted me "Nuh-uh! She was sixteen, that's the age of consent in Hawaii, I didn't do anything illegal!" He then made a face like he'd just had an epiphany "AND we used protection, muggle and magical both!"

Yes child, all good arguments begin with the mature "Nuh-uh" argument. "YOU are not sixteen. YOU are not the age of consent. You're dead lucky dad is the one that found you. What if it had been a muggle police officer? Depending on how their specific laws are written, that girl could have been charged with statutory rape. She's a child herself and both of your actions could have her registering as a sex offender for the rest of her life. Did you use protection against that outcome?"

Oddly enough he didn't have much to say to defend himself at that point. So I kept going. "Look around yourself Zwei. This is a fertile family, protections spells aren't 100% foolproof. Are you ready to be a dad right now? Are you ready to give up your youtube career to deal with night feedings? You ready to attach yourself for the next eighteen or so years to some girl you just met? Being ready for sex is way more than just knowing the protection spells and eating a god damned peach or two."

"But Dad says ..."

Oh good, he was about to throw you right under the bus. "You and your dad having a chummy moment where he gets all puffed up about his son being some pubescent Casanova is not going to help you with me Draco." He actually flinched at me using his name at that point. "I'm not going to say your dad's opinion doesn't matter, he's one of your fathers and has every right to his own parental preferences. But I can tell you right now that I have zero fucks to give regarding your dad being proud that you 'at least had fun and made sure she had fun.'"

At that point Ollie chimed in even though he's been fairly standoffish with the older kids, not really sure where he stands on any sort of parental authority. I think the fact that he read the email with me and saw where Zwei said outright that he has three dads seemed to be what he needed to hear. "Zwei, you act as though none of your dads has ever been a hormonal teenage boy curious about shagging. We've all been there; you wanting to know what the fuss is about is not a good enough reason to put yourself or your partner at such a risk. Knowing you were underaged and you were willing to bring in the Malfoy lawyers to get yourself out of trouble while not caring what kind of trouble she would have gotten in, tells us that you are absolutely not mature enough for sex."

Leave it to Oliver to be the voice of reason.

And Draco, that's where we were in the argument when you joined us from your run. So you were there for the finale of the fight. Or the finale of THAT fight, you were certainly there for the entirety of ME being quite displeased with YOU. Seriously, "I'm sorry if I'm coming off as an arsehole" "did you at least have fun?"

Ugh. Alright, you did SO MUCH better than you did when River was growing up. You told him about the legalities and how being responsible meant waiting until it was a decision he could make legally. You praised his use of protection while reminding him that just because he used protection still didn't make it alright. I know you've struggled with this issue for our entire parenting lives, being torn between knowing sex is natural while realizing that doesn't mean it's the right thing to do or the right thing for parents to allow or approve of.

Although trying to make me deal with it in the morning before my run so you don't have to be part of the discussion was pretty shady.

Anyway, after Ollie dropped the "you're not mature enough" bomb on Zwei, I threw out one last comment that had him practically roaring and stomping to his room. "I am just so disappointed in you Son, you seem to think being clear headed when making these decisions means I will be proud of you thinking it through. But it tells me that you thought the entire thing through, including legality, and were willing to potentially ruin this girl's life to get what you wanted. You were willing to be deceitful about your own age, you were willing to let her take the fall since she was the age of consent. And you did it all completely sober. I thought you cared more for other people than tonight's behavior proves."

So, long story short, parenting teenagers is the worst and I might be willing to renegotiate that anti-aging potion you invented.

Frustratingly Yours,

Harry
Chapter 385

Chapter Summary

Draco and Zwei reach an understanding.

Chapter Notes

Note: this is still in Draco/Harry format, so Draco's email is first.

See the end of the chapter for more notes

Monday November 19th
Excuse you?!

JUST because I was relieved that he had a good experience rather than a bad one, doesn't make me PROUD of him! It makes me disconcerted, alarmed, and frustrated! But yes, relieved that he wasn't coerced or pressured in any way.

I'm also rather relieved that Zwei has only been popping in on weekends (which must actually make it hard on him at school, despite Portkeying to make the time difference possible to negotiate), and thus, has already gone back to Hogwarts. Hopefully, we'll ALL be a bit cooler headed when he comes back.

But before he left, he actually came to me and wanted to talk.

"Dad... can you talk to dad for me? I HATE that he's so disappointed in me. I may not have been an expert in the law BEFORE it happened, but I looked it up since then and now I know for certain that Keela would not get into any sort of legal trouble. And actually, I may not have said it, but I was assuming that our lawyers would protect her too, if it came down to it. BUT - as I was saying - I looked up the law regarding age of consent and statutory rape, and Hawaiian law is specifically written so that if 14 and 15 year olds are with someone up to five years older, and it was all CONSENSUAL, then no charges would be made. So... Can you please tell dad there's no reason for him to be disappointed?" He was trying his best to NOT cry, but his lip quivered tellingly and a couple of tears escaped anyway.

I felt a bit stuck between a rock and a hard place because despite his research, I think he's missing the point - in that he needed to know all of that BEFORE making such a decision - however... He's a teenager. I can't exactly expect a fully grown ADULT to do that sort of research before making such an important decision (I mean they should, but people don't always think about what they should do), and so I felt like I should give him a little leeway.

Also, I guess I just didn't want to turn a good experience into a BAD one by traumatizing him about it after the fact. So I shoved away all the anger I still had into a tiny box temporarily so that I could sigh and give him a hug, rubbing his back.

"Listen, I'll talk to your dad, but you should really do so yourself. Either in person before you leave, or by email," I advised, but I have no idea if he did either. Considering that he's been basically skipping Mondays due to the time difference between here and Hogwarts, he may have stayed long enough to talk to you, OR he may have used needing to get back right away as a bit of an excuse to leave and email you about it. Either way, I think he's reached the genuinely apologetic stage.

Harry. Oliver... As dads, I KNOW we're supposed to be responsible and hold our kids to high standards so they know right from wrong, but... In this VERY grey area... how are WE supposed to know what's right and what's wrong?

I mean, think about the law itself. Statutory rape by DEFINITION is consensual, and only exists because ADULTS feel like they have more right to decide what a teen does with his or her body than they do. IS that right? MERLIN DAMN IT! THIS is why I HATE bloody parenting teenagers! There IS no right or wrong! Just shades of dismal grey layered over each other until it's all just one big gigantic mess!

Sigh...

Hang on, Eris just came home looking... high?

Oh, erm… I'm going to have to sign off now and have a MUCH more in depth chat with Eris. She's, erm… concerned about something and is actually asking if I can get a vision off her clothes. So...

All in all, you're just another brick in the wall,
Draco

Damn it Draco!!

I did a whole skimming thing with your email because I was a little distracted. I started to respond and had probably two or three paragraphs written. Basically: boo hoo, Zwei is sad that I’m disappointed in him. Maybe he shouldn’t have been so cavalier about other people.

Also, he did not talk to me and hasn’t emailed me. So either he’s not as upset as you thought or he is WAY more upset than you thought. Either way I’m going to either call or message him later.

But in more important news, Eris looks what and wants you to what now?!?

On my way!
Harry

Chapter End Notes

WARNING! The next chapter contains references to an event that - while not described graphically at all - triggered Chrissie so hard that she nearly threw up.
Chapter 386

Chapter Summary

Draco has a vision of what happened to Eris. Oliver is being as supportive as he can be, and Harry is in Rage Halo mode.

Chapter Notes

WARNING!!! This is the chapter I talked about at the end of the last chapter that triggered Chrissie so hard that she nearly threw up. The way the vision is told, nothing GRAPHIC is said, but you have a really good idea of what happened. Thus, if you think you might be triggered and would rather just ask us to tell you the important parts, you can safely skip Draco's half of the chapter, which is still the first email. Actually, Harry's email recaps what happened safely enough that it shouldn't trigger anyone.

Lastly, please note that neither Chrissie or I are advocating that Harry's actions while in Rage Halo mode are what SHOULD be done, but since this is a fantasy world in which our characters can get away with anything, we like to push things from time to time.

Monday November 19th

My solid rocks of strength,

So... As I said, Eris came home - around 2 in the afternoon - looking disoriented and out of it, as if she was high. She stumbled a little and seemed relieved that I was the first person she came across. I actually caught her as she nearly fell off her feet.

Then after I got her seated in a nice comfortable yet supportive chair, she said: "Dad... I don't remember where I've been the last... Day? And since I woke up in a strange bedroom to find the aftermath of a massive party strewn about an unknown house, I can probably assume that I simply got blackout drunk again, but... I dunno. I feel... like something happened... Can... Can you try to get a vision off my clothes?"

I inhaled a long and deep breath because this could go in SO many directions, and NONE of them are directions I want to SEE. Nodding, I finished off my previous email to you, and then decided that I NEEDED to make a cup of tea and drink it before doing anything else. Also, I felt like Eris could almost certainly use a bracing cup of tea as well.

So I made a pot of tea, by hand so that I could have some time to mentally prepare myself for basically anything. To my eternal relief, the both of you came rushing in before anything else happened. You both put your arms around Eris and held her tight.

"What happened?"

She shook her head. "I don't know. That's why I need dad to get a vision and tell ME."
I looked her dress up and down. It was a sleek mini dress in dark blue that was obviously made by her since it consisted of the highest quality materials and looked almost elegant in its, erm… 'come take me now' message. Nodding since I felt a tiny bit prepared now that I'd drank my tea, I gestured for her to hand me her dress so that I could have the vision while sitting comfortably rather than standing over her.

She took it off and tossed it at me.

The vision came almost the instant it was in my hand.

"Alright, I see Eris, she's handing Luka off to Hazel, who has promised to watch him for the night. After that, she Apparates to a shadow near a large house - almost a mansion. From the shadow, she walks to the front door, which is wide open and it's clear before she even takes a step inside that there's loud music blaring and a party in full swing.

"Once inside, she notices a - Salazar damnit! It's a bloody orgy!" I took another long and deep breath to calm my nerves, since I didn't really want to see ANYTHING involving our daughter at an orgy.

"After looking around and admiring some of the, erm… piles? Of people shagging, she finds a man that makes her smile. He looks up from the vagina he was servicing to find her watching him. 'I'm so glad you came after all!' He exclaims, beckoning her to come join in. She promptly strips off and I'm going to try my hardest to fast forward this vision until it seems like something bad is happening, and hopefully, I'll get to the end with no such thing occurring!"

With my eyes closed and biting my lip in concentration, I fast forwarded through hours of our daughter thoroughly enjoying herself at that orgy. Harry, I am probably going to need you to Obliviate this entire vision from me later on! Oliver, I'm DEFINITELY going to need you to hold my hand and rub my back while he does so!

In any case, there DOES come a point in which...

"I'm letting the vision go at normal speed now because Eris is snuggled up to that original bloke and looking around sleepily. She really looks like she's exhausted and about to pass out, but something is prickling up the back of her spine. Scrutinizing everything suspiciously, she finds nothing out of the ordinary. By this point, she feels like she's dying of thirst, so she reaches over to the coffee table and takes a cup of some sort of mixed drink to wet her mouth, but it's tasty enough that she downs the whole thing, sighs happily, and lays her head down to snuggle some more.

"That's when the vision goes black, BUT I can tell that it's still happening because I can sort of FEEL what's happening. First of all, there's something over her eyes - like a blindfold - that she's trying to remove, but her arms are pulled away and trapped behind her back as she's picked up and carried away. It doesn't feel like far, because it only takes a minute or two, but then she's gently placed on what feels like a bed. She's trying to fight, but all she can manage is a weak struggle as her arms and legs are tied to - the bedposts, probably.

"After struggling for a bit, the vision really does go black and stop, as I assume that she must have passed out. So..." I sighed, tossing the dress aside before even opening my eyes. In fact, I kept them closed because I wanted to try to analyze the last bit of the vision for a few minutes, to see if I could pick anything else out of it before locking it in a box in my mind.

"I cannot say for certain what happened, but based off the assumption that Eris woke up with the ability to just slip out of bed, get dressed, and come home, the most likely thing that happened was that she was slipped something in that drink that made it hard for her to fight back, and also took away her memory of what happened. Thus... something bad must have happened...."

Eris sighed and hugged her knees to her chest. "I actually can't remember most of the night, and THAT is what makes me the most angry! I went there intending to have a bloody brilliant night, and apparently I did, but because some ARSEHOLE - who probably could have just joined in at some point - decided to go the shady fucker route instead, I don't remember much beyond the first 30 minutes or so!"

I think it was probably obvious to all of us that she was placing her anger in a relatively safe place so that she could avoid the part that truly deserved it. Even so, Oliver pulled her into a comforting hug and hummed soothingly as Harry was in RHH mode - and I knew this for certain without even opening my eyes because the room was rapidly growing unbearably hot and the air was whipping about with loud whooshes. Not to mention that things were flying around and hitting other things such as the walls.

I focused on the only thing I could. "I'll, erm... I'll put the whole vision in a Pensieve for you, Eris my love. That way, YOU can comb through it and see if you can figure out who the shady fucker was. Maybe we can have some local Aurors come in to go through it with you, but I CAN'T watch that again!"

Eris groaned a whine. "Do I HAVE to? What if all I really want is to just take a bath and forget anything ever happened?"

I finally managed to open my eyes and sit up straight. "Well... I suppose if that's what you really want, but as the former Head Auror, I would advise you to report this because if you don't, this fucker will just continue to do this to other women - and maybe even men - until he IS caught. And what if he never is? Do you REALLY want that on your conscious?"

Eris picked at some lint on her bra as she thought this over. "I, erm... I can remember that before I left for the party, I had put a magically enhanced Diaphragm in (and cast anti STI spells) so that I didn't have to worry about accidental pregnancies or condoms - although I'm fairly certain that those were used in abundance. My concern is that it wasn't there when I went to take it out during my morning loo break. Is it too soon to cast a test spell to see, erm..."

I groaned and yanked on my hair. "I think actual conception has to happen before you can test for it, and it can take up to a couple of days after the fact for that to happen. I think we should just cast a morning after spell to ensure that it doesn't happen."

She shook her head. "In a family like this - in which we go out of our way to adopt kids because we have so much love to give - do you REALLY think I want to cast a spell to prevent the smallest POSSIBILITY of a baby?"

"But..." I faltered because she might feel different once she realizes that the father of said potential baby is a bloody RAPIST! In any case, I have always been committed to being supportive - so long as I'm not in the midst of a rage. Sighing because I had no idea what to do, I abruptly stood up.
"Look, I think we ALL could use some time to think things over. You suggested taking a bath, and that sounds like a bloody BRILLIANT idea to me. I'm going to go take a shower, and then a bath, and then just probably meditate and clean up and organize my mind for a bit. Do what you need to do and we'll all talk about this more later, yeah?"

"Yeah," Eris nodded in agreement.

And - once again feeling like a bloody coward - I practically ran from the room so that I could try to come to terms with and cope in peace. Of course, writing this is a big part of that process, and easy enough to do from the bath. I'm ready now for one or both of you to come join me since you both probably need comfort too. So, let's all comfort each other.

Did you see that shooting star tonight, were you dazzled by the same constellation, did you and Jupiter conspire to get me, I think you and the moon and Neptune got it right,
Draco
P.S. I might actually be serious about that Obliviation. Right after I extract the whole thing for Eris, should she decide to pursue the criminal.

Tuesday November 20, 2018

My Loves,

I will be home soon. I erm, I'm just very safety conscious and with our current concerns with the environment and my own anxiety, I couldn't just leave this fire until it was completely out. So as soon as the last embers have cooled I will be home in your loving arms.

Hopefully your very forgiving and loving arms. I know I know I know, I've promised to not get Grandmama involved in "taking care of things" and I didn't. This time I did it myself. Which I know goes against the spirit of the promise. I know I can't be judge jury and executioner. But Eris is my baby girl. And he hurt her. He stole from her. He stole her innocence, he stole her ability to feel safe, he used her body against her. He took her memories, rohypnol (that's what he used) memory loss has no recovery. Not even a master legilimens can get those memories back.

I know enough about the justice system, both Muggle and Magical, to know some piece of gobshite will make this into her fault. "What was she wearing? She was having sex so she obviously wanted it? What kind of slut goes to orgy parties? She's already a teen mom, she's probably trying to trap him and ruin his life." People are disgusting, guilty people walk free, and too often girls end up the innocent bystanders.

Not on my gods damned watch.

Which, also, I KNOW you meant well. And that you were scared and panicking and grasping at what you could possibly say after witnessing a terrible vision of your child but ...

Draco, while I understand where you're coming from wanting this man caught and charged and put away. As the person who literally just tore him limb from limb made sure he didn't ever hurt anyone else, I know you wanting Eris to come forward with evidence and testimony was all coming from a place of love and care. But his behavior is HIS responsibility. When you literally asked her if she wanted that on her conscience? She was just traumatized, her body used against her will, and that message told her she was to blame and would be partially to blame for any further rapes this monster perpetrated in the future.

Not okay.

Whether you forgive me for disappearing for the day. Ollie, whether you forgive me for taking justice into my own hands. I NEED to know that Eris is told explicitly that assigning her A SINGLE OUNCE of blame or credit for these actions was spoken in fear and is COMPLETELY UNTRUE.

NEVER tell a victim it's there responsibility to report. NEVER tell a survivor that they MUST make a choice to speak out before they're ready. She should hold exactly zero percent of the blame.
ZERO. Any reporting or not, any recovery, any ability to move on from this has to come from her and at her pace. We can offer advice, we can support, we can hold her hand while she gives testimony or speaks to her mind healer. But we do not get to dictate how she chooses to handle this.

Anyway, I'm exhausted .... physically and magically. I just want to come home, shower every bit of grit and grime off of myself, get myself good and obliviated, and sleep for a solid day or two.

At least this took my mind off of Zwei for a few days?

Ugh, if he messages let him know I'll be calling to talk with him as soon as I wake up. And assure him that I was disappointed in his actions but that I will always love him completely and unconditionally.

Cooling off,
Harry
Chapter 387

Chapter Summary

Harry comes home and goes straight to bed. Oliver comforts him, and Draco gets a vision off of Harry to find out exactly what happened after Harry left.

Chapter Notes

While I don't think anything in this chapter should trigger anyone, Harry's actions are described and they are not pretty. You'll probably be happy to know that the next chapter goes back to happier times. Draco's email is still first, and I have decided to keep it that way until the posts catch up with where we currently are. It'll probably be about a week or so ^_^

See the end of the chapter for more notes

Tuesday November 20th
Harry...

I suppose that I wasn't really surprised. When Oliver came into the bath with me, he slipped into the tub behind me and pulled me into him so that he could hold me in that wonderful warmth and stroke a hand up and down my arm soothingly. Then he told me the really not surprising thing.

"Practically the moment you left the room, love, Harry - still very much in Rage Halo mode - gave Eris a fierce hug, kissed Serenity via my bump, gave me a kiss, and then whispered in my ear: 'please forgive me, my love, but I'm going to go kill me a rapist.' And since he Apparated away before I could so much as take a breath to protest with, I couldn't really do anything to stop him."

I sighed in acceptance. "He will too. And I can't say that I blame him. More than half of me wants to go do the same thing. It's just... I suppose working with the Aurors so long, I have become accustomed to trusting them to see that justice is done. But yes... I very much want to find that bastard and do a few things I've seen Kisa do - to him."

Oliver sighed. "I really hope he just catches the rapist and brings him into the Aurors, but... Godric! If it was Cassie...? I think I might have a Rage Halo of my own, and... I would probably let that Halo do anything it wants..."

I chuckled slightly. "Maybe now you can understand a little better why we became a little cavalier about having Grandmama take care of problems for us." Then I sighed rather heavily. "I don't like the idea that Eris might get pregnant with a RAPIST'S child. I mean we'd love the baby either way, but... how do you think that baby is going to feel - one day in the distant future, when he or she is old enough - and we explain that, well... this was premeditated rape of the worst kind. How would YOU feel knowing that your father was such an evil man?"

"Why would we EVER tell the baby that?" Oliver asked in horror.
I shook my head. "Even if we didn't, our kids are all so powerful. This sort of thing would probably become a vision that the child saw if he or she hugged their mum after she was wistfully thinking about it. I mean, there are a LOT of ways the information might come out, and then not only does the child know what happened, but they also know we all went to great lengths to hide it and lie about it."

Oliver sighed in defeat. "Yeah... I'm not saying that I fully agree that your hypothesis is worth aborting an actual baby over, but... I suppose that it wouldn't hurt too much to ask Eris again if she'd at least reconsider the morning after spell. Maybe she's changed her mind and just needs a bit of support to go through with it."

"Yeah," I murmured in agreement. So, despite wanting to remain in the bath all night, we got out and dried off so that we could make some tea and eat some Ben and Jerry's while trying to talk to Eris again. She also was fresh from a bath - in a bathrobe with a towel wrapped around her hair - riffling through the freezer for some ice cream.

We had a nice long chat, going around in a series of circles for a bit before Eris sighed and nodded. "Yeah... I suppose you are right. It's just that I was sort of hoping for another baby, but I'm not in a relationship nor do I really want to be in one yet. But having a baby from THIS situation would... I think I might actually always look at that child - especially if it's a boy - and wonder if he's going to turn into a monster like his father. I think we all know that all the love in the world can't stop some people from giving into their evil nature."

"True..." I murmured cautiously.

"So," she stated decisively. "I'll make you a deal; cast a pregnancy test spell on me, and if there ISN'T already a positive result, then you can cast the morning after spell to make sure there won't be one. But if it's already positive... I will need to think it over a lot more before I make any decisions..."

I nodded in agreement, and then cast the test spell, which came up black. Sighing in relief, I promptly cast the morning after spell. Then I held out a vial of silvery liquid.

"This is the memory of the vision. Even though I went through it in a sped up manner, the vision will be normal speed when you go to view it. Thus, you can enjoy the good bits before the bad part, and actually, you can always avoid the bad part. And you know what? I'm really sorry I implied that you have any sort of responsibility to stop him from doing it again. I guess I really AM too much in Head Auror mode to consider feelings at the moment."

She took the vial and kissed me on the cheek. "I..." She sighed in defeat. "Yeah, I suppose that the right thing to do would be to protect others from him, but I'm fairly certain that's EXACTLY what dad is currently doing, and I'm so relieved that he's taking care of things so I don't have to, that I'm just not going to think too hard on any of it, and try my best to put the whole thing behind me."

I nodded in agreement and hugged her tight. Then Oliver hugged her and we all ate ice cream until we ran out and had to send River out to buy some more. After that, the bigger kids, from Jaz on up, sat in the kitchen with us as we all talked over various strategies that they could try to make sure that none of them are ever in a similar situation in the future. And before you think that my advice was for all of them to just avoid the whole possibility until they're married, actually, I opted for more reasonable advice like not going to strange parties without a person they trust to keep an eye on them.

Which might have been tricky in Eris' situation, because which of her siblings could she have just been like: "Oh hey, I'm going to an orgy, want to come with and keep an eye on me so I don't get raped?" And besides, even if she had - say Orion and his lovers - at the orgy with her, who's to say that they wouldn't have gotten so into things that they passed out before her and missed protecting her anyway?

MERLIN BUGGERING SALAZAR!!! Why did it take me until NOW to think of the fact that she could have asked her bloody ELF to keep an eye on and protect her?!?! Sometimes, I SWEAR I really am the stupidest smart person I know!

Sigh...

In any case, we're just waiting for you to return... Which I think you just did. I heard a crack of Apparation, let me check...

Yep. You came back and... since you looked rather worse for the wear, I let Oliver guide you to bed and stroke your hair until you were asleep. Then I took hold of your hand and closed my eyes so that I could get a vision from you.

I didn't say it out loud, because I could tell by the expression on Oliver's face that he didn't really want to know the details, but I DID silently see everything from the moment I left the room yesterday. I saw you kiss our daughter and husband, and then Apparate away.

You popped up on the beach, casting a spell to track Eris' magical signature back to the small mansion she'd partied in. You cast a disillusionment charm to prevent people from trying to stop you, and basically walked right into the mansion and followed the trail past a handful of women cleaning up the mess from the party, all the way up to a bedroom.

A good look at the bed proved that there was dried evidence you could use if needed - certainly Aurors and even muggle police could use that to convict the culprit - but you also spotted that there wereropes still tied to the headboard, as if the criminal didn't really know or care that they could be used to convict him. Maybe he'd used gloves and thought they would be completely free of all his DNA? But the fact that he left a lot of DNA on the bed makes me wonder if he just didn't care about anything like that - or maybe he's so stupid that he doesn't even realize it's a possibility???

In any case, you used the ropes to get a sort of magical compass to point him out, and then followed the trail all the way to a relatively small house that's sort of halfway between that mansion and our rented villa. Once at the house, you - still very much in RHH mode - went inside and confronted a man who was sprawled out in a recliner, wearing only dingy Y fronts that were pushed down a bit so that he could wank to a porn he was watching on the telly. The porn itself seemed to be about a young girl having fun with a much older man.

But that's probably not important in the slightest. Using a Crucio to get your point across, you asked if he had dared touch so much as a single hair on our daughter's head, making sure to describe her in detail so that he'd know who you were talking about. He...

Oddly enough, he looked really familiar to me, but I couldn't put my finger on why.

After a few more blasts of the Crucio to get your point across, you asked if he had dared touch so much as a single hair on our daughter's head, making sure to describe her in detail so that he'd know who you were talking about. He...

Oddly enough, he looked really familiar to me, but I couldn't put my finger on why.

After a few more blasts of the Crucio to get your point across, you asked if he had dared touch so much as a single hair on our daughter's head, making sure to describe her in detail so that he'd know who you were talking about. He...

Oddly enough, he looked really familiar to me, but I couldn't put my finger on why.

After a few more blasts of the Crucio to get your point across, you asked if he had dared touch so much as a single hair on our daughter's head, making sure to describe her in detail so that he'd know who you were talking about. He...

Oddly enough, he looked really familiar to me, but I couldn't put my finger on why.

After a few more blasts of the Crucio to get your point across, you asked if he had dared touch so much as a single hair on our daughter's head, making sure to describe her in detail so that he'd know who you were talking about. He...

Oddly enough, he looked really familiar to me, but I couldn't put my finger on why.

After a few more blasts of the Crucio to get your point across, you asked if he had dared touch so much as a single hair on our daughter's head, making sure to describe her in detail so that he'd know who you were talking about. He...

Oddly enough, he looked really familiar to me, but I couldn't put my finger on why.

After a few more blasts of the Crucio to get your point across, you asked if he had dared touch so much as a single hair on our daughter's head, making sure to describe her in detail so that he'd know who you were talking about. He...

Oddly enough, he looked really familiar to me, but I couldn't put my finger on why.

After a few more blasts of the Crucio to get your point across, you asked if he had dared touch so much as a single hair on our daughter's head, making sure to describe her in detail so that he'd know who you were talking about. He...

Oddly enough, he looked really familiar to me, but I couldn't put my finger on why.

After a few more blasts of the Crucio to get your point across, you asked if he had dared touch so much as a single hair on our daughter's head, making sure to describe her in detail so that he'd know who you were talking about. He...

Oddly enough, he looked really familiar to me, but I couldn't put my finger on why.

After a few more blasts of the Crucio to get your point across, you asked if he had dared touch so much as a single hair on our daughter's head, making sure to describe her in detail so that he'd know who you were talking about. He...

Oddly enough, he looked really familiar to me, but I couldn't put my finger on why.

After a few more blasts of the Crucio to get your point across, you asked if he had dared touch so much as a single hair on our daughter's head, making sure to describe her in detail so that he'd know who you were talking about. He...

Oddly enough, he looked really familiar to me, but I couldn't put my finger on why.

After a few more blasts of the Crucio to get your point across, you asked if he had dared touch so much as a single hair on our daughter's head, making sure to describe her in detail so that he'd know who you were talking about. He...

Oddly enough, he looked really familiar to me, but I couldn't put my finger on why.

After a few more blasts of the Crucio to get your point across, you asked if he had dared touch so much as a single hair on our daughter's head, making sure to describe her in detail so that he'd know who you were talking about. He...

Oddly enough, he looked really familiar to me, but I couldn't put my finger on why.

After a few more blasts of the Crucio to get your point across, you asked if he had dared touch so much as a single hair on our daughter's head, making sure to describe her in detail so that he'd know who you were talking about. He...

Oddly enough, he looked really familiar to me, but I couldn't put my finger on why.

After a few more blasts of the Crucio to get your point across, you asked if he had dared touch so much as a single hair on our daughter's head, making sure to describe her in detail so that he'd know who you were talking about. He...

Oddly enough, he looked really familiar to me, but I couldn't put my finger on why.

After a few more blasts of the Crucio to get your point across, you asked if he had dared touch so much as a single hair on our daughter's head, making sure to describe her in detail so that he'd know who you were talking about. He...

Oddly enough, he looked really familiar to me, but I couldn't put my finger on why.

After a few more blasts of the Crucio to get your point across, you asked if he had dared touch so much as a single hair on our daughter's head, making sure to describe her in detail so that he'd know who you were talking about. He...

Oddly enough, he looked really familiar to me, but I couldn't put my finger on why.

After a few more blasts of the Crucio to get your point across, you asked if he had dared touch so much as a single hair on our daughter's head, making sure to describe her in detail so that he'd know who you were talking about. He...

Oddly enough, he looked really familiar to me, but I couldn't put my finger on why.

After a few more blasts of the Crucio to get your point across, you asked if he had dared touch so much as a single hair on our daughter's head, making sure to describe her in detail so that he'd know who you were talking about. He...

Oddly enough, he looked really familiar to me, but I couldn't put my finger on why.

After a few more blasts of the Crucio to get your point across, you asked if he had dared touch so much as a single hair on our daughter's head, making sure to describe her in detail so that he'd know who you were talking about. He...

Oddly enough, he looked really familiar to me, but I couldn't put my finger on why.

After a few more blasts of the Crucio to get your point across, you asked if he had dared touch so much as a single hair on our daughter's head, making sure to describe her in detail so that he'd know who you were talking about. He...

Oddly enough, he looked really familiar to me, but I couldn't put my finger on why.

After a few more blasts of the Crucio to get your point across, you asked if he had dared touch so much as a single hair on our daughter's head, making sure to describe her in detail so that he'd know who you were talking about. He...

Oddly enough, he looked really familiar to me, but I couldn't put my finger on why.
Once he was clearly nothing more than the remnants of an explosion (or ten), you summoned all the bits up and cast a spell to burn them in a bonfire - waiting patiently for it to burn all the way out. Then, just to be SURE that there was NOTHING that could be identified in any way as him (should anyone think to test a random beach bonfire for his missing body), you gathered up all the ashes and tiny bits of burnt bone, Apparated them to one of the active volcanoes, that slow one by the look of it, and tossed the remains in, watching as they all disappeared. I'm beyond certain that no one would bother to try combing them out, even if they WANTED to find his remains. Which, considering that he was living alone and by all appearances a sleezy rapist, probably no one will care that he's gone anyway.

So, with the vision ending with you Apparating home, I let go of your hand and kissed you on the cheek, carding my fingers through your hair.

I love you and I do not blame you in the slightest for ensuring that our daughter/s (and sons) and everyone else in the world is safe from that man. Also, I'll be right here when you wake up. If you want to talk about it, or maybe cry about it, I'll hold you and listen to everything. Oliver doesn't look like he plans to leave your side either. Thus we'll be here 'til the end of time if that's how long it takes for you to wake up, but knowing you, it'll probably be a mere two or three hours before you wake up in anxiety mode.

Oh-oh-oh I~~~ keep on falling, in and out, of love with you, I~~~ never, loved someone, the way that I, love you!

Draco

P.S. I think all our Mind Healers are about to get a nice all expenses paid vacation to Hawaii.

P.P.S. Zwei called, but I told him that there was a bit of a family crisis going on and that you'd call him back later. You may not be surprised to know that Oliver took the call from me and explained things to him, so, he knows what happened and is worried about you - and Eris, of course.

P.P.P.S. Erm... thank you...

Wednesday November 21, 2018

Erm ... you're welcome ...

Thank me for what? I've decided the last three days have never happened.

Alright, that's less than healthy. I will be ignoring it, locking it away in my mind, until I can completely unload on my mind healer. Yes, I agree, a Hawaiian vacation seems just the thing for the healers who keep our minds running at peak performance.

Well, at least not at suboptimal performance?

I am going to pretend the last three days haven't happened just like I said ... after I cover a few things.

I am really proud of Eris for understanding exactly what the morning after spell would do. It doesn't abort an implanted fertilized egg. It keeps it from implanting, which is something a woman's body often does all on its own. By having you check with the pregnancy spell first she was able to breathe easy knowing all she MIGHT have accomplished was keeping any implantation from happening.

I'm so torn about her wanting a baby right now. She is so young. She's got so much time to build her family. The father in me thinks "what's the rush Eri!?!!" But I completely understand where she's coming from. How many times throughout the years have I turned to either of you and said "someone is missing"? And for someone like Eri whose best friend in the entire world is her sister I can see her wishing Luka had a sibling close in age as well. Someone to be his forever friend the way her siblings are to her.

But that doesn't mean she has to put up with what happened. She doesn't need to have a partner if she doesn't want one. She can bring a child into the world in so many ways. She could always adopt. She could choose a friend, someone close to provide the sperm: either as a co-parent like Sebastian and Delphini have done or as someone who donates and walks away. She could go to an actual sperm bank and choose from a portfolio of swimmers. So many ways she can grow her family.

I actually look forward to talking with her about all of her options sometime soon, but after all of this has blown over a bit. Maybe on the flight home to Wiltshire.

The flight should be plenty long enough that I could potentially have a long talk with the bigger kids the way you did while I was on my .... hunting trip. I'm sure you covered a lot of important areas, but even more important (to me) than ways to keep themselves safe is to make sure they know that they could fail to follow every single one of these plans and anything perpetrated against them would be zero percent their fault. I NEED my children to know that they could come home from an orgy, having been assaulted, and know that they will have complete love and understanding given to them.

Seems like we've done pretty well on that front so far since Eris came home in exactly that situation and knew she could come to her dads. For the fact that this was a horrific event I wish had never happened, I am so proud and pleased that our daughter knows she can come to us no matter what.

The other thing this whole event did for me was put my anger at Zwei into perspective. Look, he was a little shite. He was immature and he is SO obviously not ready for sex. He may have thought about his partner after the fact, he may have assumed our lawyers would help her as well, but he didn't think about that to begin with.

Because he's an idiot teenager. I've made some massive teen-aged mistakes myself. I don't want to tell him "no big deal, do whatever you want mate" but he wasn't being a monster, he was just being an immature teenager. When I woke up this morning I called him and he and I had a long chat. I pretty much altered one of my phrases I've said to you a million times over the years Draco; what you do or think initially is what you were conditioned to think (by your body's hormones going cuckoo for cocoa puffs) and what you do next determines who you are. Well, it took a few hours but after his initial immature selfishness he went and researched the laws surrounding what happened to make sure she wouldn't be charged with anything. It came later than I'd like, but he did make the effort to fix what went wrong.

I'm still not letting him out of my sight besides school for at least two years.

But after a long, mostly wonderful, trip I am ready to go home. We leave Friday morning. I will miss the sunshine. The beach. The palm trees. But I'm ready to be home.

We have Christmas presents to shop for! We have baby items to prepare (shopping spree anyone?). We have grandchildren we haven't seen in SO LONG that we need to cuddle and spoil. I bet Milie, Phoebe, and Brett will be practically unrecognizable by the time we get home! They'll probably be walking and talking and have no idea who their Grandpa Harry is at all!
But before that .... one last shag on the beach under the stars tonight my husbands?

Last one to the sand .... is the last one to come!

Harry

Chapter End Notes

Okay, so, here's an example of me being all like: NEW BABY!!! And Chrissie being like: NO MORE BABIES FROM UNHAPPY SITUATIONS!!!

So... no baby.

But here are the reasonings: While we both (and probably all you readers) agree that this family DEFINITELY would have loved that baby, sometimes, the responsible thing to do is actually choose better circumstances for a baby to be conceived. So the issue WASN'T lack of love. It was literally just wanting any and all future babies to be conceived in wanted and/or planned situations.

Also, we had one newer reader comment on a previous chapter (she's still catching up) that as a nurse, she would actually like to see a situation in which abortion isn't treated like a horrible or invalid option, as we have actually tried to keep this story fluffy by never going there. So, that confirmed in our minds that this was the right decision to make (we'd already written it before she commented), but I've also been thinking about having a new situation in which I follow that reader's request - meaning have a character choose that because it's what she feels is best despite being financially and emotionally CAPABLE of caring for a baby.

All of this is basically to explain why - if you feel even the morning after spell was a bit too much - we felt that it was the right decision for this situation.

THANK YOU ALL FOR STICKING WITH US THIS LONG!!!

Rest assured, even though we've slowed down recently due to real life being a bit of a pain, and this never ending winter giving us a touch of SADD, we're both planning to keep on writing this story ^_^ My only thoughts on that is that I might just arbitrarily end this part and begin a new one - not to necessarily jump time or anything - but to simply avoid having a million chapters for this one part, lol.

Love y'all! <3
Chapter 388

Chapter Summary

Mind Healing and a plane ride home.

Thursday November 22nd
The loves of my life,

Today, our Mind Healers arrived, clearly excited to have a nice holiday in paradise - even as they were curious by what prompted us to invite them here. We did a bit of a joint session first, so that I could explain things calmly and rationally and spare the rest of you that ordeal. Eris' Healer was brought in as well, so, once the situation was explained, we all went into our separate sessions.

From the look of it, I was not the only one who came out looking refreshed and unburdened.

I won't ask the details of your sessions, but as I was explaining to Yesenia that I'd actually had a few disturbing visions during this holiday, I realized why the man you, erm... took care of... why he looked so familiar to me. HE was the same man from my other vision, the ones in which his own daughter suffered at his hands. I can only assume that after that event - which must have happened on a holiday since they were in a rental villa - his wife and daughter left him, since he was living alone in a small house when you found him.

Part of me wishes I could send the daughter an anonymous note assuring her that he can't do that ever again, but the rest of me just wants to leave well enough alone.

Yesenia had me tell her more about those first visions than I told either of you, and together, we realized that he didn't really seem to know what he was doing, and thus it was probably his first time. That said, he had also slipped his daughter something to make her fuzzy and disoriented - but since I was her in the vision, I can sort of guess that it wasn't Rohypnol, in that it felt different. More... like opium actually.

None of that really makes a difference except that he was CLEARLY a serial rapist by the time he got his hands on our daughter. Thus, right or wrong, Yesenia and I agree that it's for the best that he's gone for good.

I feel fairly at peace now and can put the whole incident behind me - aside from being there for you and Eris as needed. I also look forward to getting on the plane home, and probably sleeping most of the way there. Feel free to molest me in my sleep ^_^

Forever,
Draco

Friday November 23, 2018

Tell everybody I'm on my way!

No matter where we go on holiday, no matter the location, even if we end up on one of those holidays where not a single thing goes wrong ... is there anything better than knowing we're on our way home? Knowing that when I lay my head down tonight it will be in our own bed on my own pillow. That we'll read the kids bedtime stories in their own beds. Be able to stroll through the gardens if we're not too tired after we get all the littles to sleep.

I just love our home!

Not that I don't LOVE our holidays. I'm already thinking to myself where I'd like to go next. And with that being said, after Serenity is born and Ollie is feeling well enough to travel, we should go to Japan! We've not been back in ages. And I kind of like the idea of Serenity's travel book starting with the same trip Viona's travel book started on.

But I suppose I'm getting a bit ahead of myself. We're not even home yet from this trip. I should let my rambling brain start making plans for when we get home! Tomorrow we're going shopping! Or at least I am going shopping. I want to get all of my Christmas shopping done and out of the way before Ollie gives birth. I don't want to have to rush out and get anything done after the birth. I will be too busy cuddling my teeniest princess.

I'm so excited to see what she looks like. I can't wait to see Ollie's expressive eyebrows in miniature, maybe over a pretty set of silver eyes. I can't wait to see Draco get frustrated if her hair is as unkempt as mine. I want to see Ollie sob in happiness this time when he sees a baby who looks like someone he loves. I just ... ugh can she be born already?!?

I know, I know, I know, babies come in their own time. But damn it! I want it to be her time NOW! It's weird, you spend thirty-six or so weeks hoping against all hope that they won't be born too early. That they stay safe and sound in their warm little bubble. And once they hit that mark of "they'd be completely healthy if they were born now" moment, I become insanely antsy to meet them this very second!

But Ollie's not due for another three and a half weeks, and he could go late and it could be another five or six weeks before our newest comes to join the family. Can one of you just knock me out and keep me unconscious for the next month so I don't have to think about it?

Oooh, never mind, Ollie's giving me the eyebrow. You know the one Draco, the one where I can tell his hormones are making him randy as hell. I'm going to drag him off to the back bedroom of this plane.

Join us won't you?
Harry

Please drop by the archive and comment to let the author know if you enjoyed their work!