Xin flushed and looked away, a pout on his lips. “It doesn't have to be sexual...even if it's sensual. And I'm supposed to do this with someone I trust.” Ford felt himself go light headed, catching the meaning behind that. “You...trust ME? Why? You saved our lives but we barely know each other.” He stared at the dragon who blushed faintly.

“I don't know.” Xin admitted. “You're a snobby know it all with no common sense and more awards than your ego has room for-”

“Hey!” Ford protested.

“-but for some reason I feel safe around you.” or at least, his fear wasn’t overwhelming, which was better than anyone else managed. “Like...I want to tell you stuff or just... Be near you…” Xin frowned. “Which is super odd. I'm starting to think it's some kinda weird Ford Pines ‘thing' because something similar happened with a Ford I met in another dimension…” Xin thought back to a young teenaged Sixer who had been surprisingly nice to hang out with (when he wasn’t being an absolute shit-head of a human being), he was rambling now and Ford stroked his antler to pull his attention back.

“!!” Xin’s whole body shivered. Ford quickly let go of his antler, despite being scientifically curious as to how the appendage even felt sensations, were there nerves? He shook his head, not important right now. “So you think there's some kind of...what? Resonance between you and ‘Ford Pines’ that you meet?”

Xin shrugged. “I don’t think that’s it, not REALLY, but sort of? I don't know what this is. Or why it happens. But I feel safe around you and I didn't immediately panic and kill everyone around me when you pinned me down this morning…” Ford nearly felt his heart stop at that. “O-oh…” Xin nodded, not noticing the horrified relief on Ford’s face. “That happened the other times I tried to get someone to help me with ‘bondage therapy’ and it made it quite difficult for me to get much progress in that area…”

“R-right…” Ford was incredibly relieved for this weird resonance or whatever. The thought that Xin could have accidentally killed him and the children this morning was...distressing. Xin looked up at Ford pleadingly. “Since you can actually hold me down without me panicking...could you help me with this? I’ll free your brothers from the deal...?”

Ford stared into Xin’s eyes and took a deep breath. “Alright...Yes. I-I can help...” He told him. Xin started wagging his tail excitedly and hugged the six-fingered man. “Thank you, Sixer!” He squealed into his shoulder. Ford absently noted that it felt nice to be hugged like this.

It took a while for Stan and Seb to put the kids to bed, as surprising as it sounded. Diego started crying as soon as he felt himself being placed on a bed, while the twins whined and threw a tantrum, claiming they were not tired but clearly lying. Wanda threw herself onto her bed and wished Seb good luck with Xin. The brothers tiredly met in the new magic hallway and looked around. “Where are Ford and Xin?” Stan asked. Seb deadpanned. “Do you think I have powers to magically-Oh, right. HAHA! I DO!” He closed his eyes and used his mind’s eye to search through the rooms. Carla resting, Shermie on his laptop, Dipper finishing his homework, Mabel watching videos, Dillon listening to music and-

“Oh my god...” Seb whispered and blinked to get rid of the image. He rubbed his eye. He was hoping he saw wrong...

“What? Which room is it?” Stan asked. He saw the way Seb's eye darted to a certain room and began walking over. Seb gasped, face red “Wait! Don't-!!” Seb tried to warn him.

Stan opened the door and froze at the scene before him. His elder brother, the nerd, boring stick in the mud who wouldn't even look twice at a beautiful woman walking by... was straddling Xin on the bed, pinning the man’s arms above his head as the smaller man moaned breathlessly. “Ngh...harder please...” Xin gasped as he writhed on the soft bed sheets. Ford had an oddly determined look on his face as he flipped the other man over onto his stomach and pulled his arms up and back, making Xin arch back in a position that looked pretty painful but only made him moan louder as his spine made some cracking, popping sounds. With the noise Xin was making, the two hadn't noticed the door open.

Stan's mouth dropped open and his eyes bulged out as he watched. Sebastian was covering his face behind him while holding in a mortified scream. On the bed, the sounds were getting more intense as the bedsprings squeaked. “Ah!” Xin cried out as Ford twisted one of his arms. “Oh!” He gasped when he was pressed hard into the bed. His body shivered and he moaned again, his tail wrapping tightly around Ford’s arm. “F-Ford!” Xin’s face was flushed as he was manhandled roughly. Stan could finally see that Xin’s clothes had been partially ripped off, exposing his smooth shoulders and bare chest.

Seb’s mind took him to that dimension where Bill liked his brother and the tent, and the screams, and he whimpered softly before his eye rolled up and he dropped to the floor in a dead faint. Stan was bright red and was sure he shouldn't be watching this. A part of him was cheering though. ‘Sixer's finally getting laid!’ but why did it have to be with Xin?! He slowly closed the door and was quite glad the two hadn't noticed them come in. He turned to see Sebastian passed out on the ground. He almost wanted to faint as well but he picked up his brother and carried him back to the main house where Wanda was sitting on her bed reading. “Oh. That was fast. Miz normally demands at least a half hour of headpats before she's satisfied.” Wanda blinked. She’d been roped into petting the girl sometimes around bedtime when she snuggled into the bed with them. It was almost cute how much Miz demanded attention.

“Ah...things kinda escalated from simple headpats...” Stan said sheepishly as he dropped Seb onto the bed. Wanda looked confused before she saw the blush on Stan’s face. And the lack of the oldest triplet. “No?!” She gasped. “Xin...and...with FORD?!” She had known that guy since High school, she NEVER in a million years would have thought that boy would have sex! Stan made an embarrassed sound. “I guess my brother’s not as boring as we all thought? Or...maybe he just has a thing for Xin? Or...Bill I guess…” he made a weird face. “Actually...that might explain a lot...if Poindexter and his Bill had been like that...no wonder he was so angry and never dated anyone since then…”

Wanda grimaced, and shivered. She left her book aside and looked at her husband. “He passed out… well, I guess it makes sense… since, you know, Sebas was-”

“OH MY GOD! SHUT UP! NO!” Stan cried, cursing his brain for trying to imagine it. “You know what? I-I need to lay down...see ya…” He stumbled out of the room and to the second house. He passed by the door and whimpered before running away to hide with his wife.

Even nice, Bill Cipher somehow found a way to mentally traumatize the Pines family… again!

Xin panted, face flushed and feeling… rather content, all things considered. He laid on the blankets and sighed happily. That felt really good...even got all the cricks out of his back as Ford twisted him like a pretzel. The larger man was also panting as he laid next to him, it was quite a work out. “My hands are cramping.” Ford complained. Xin laughed. “Maybe we should use ropes next time?”

“Where would we even find rop-wait, never mind, almost forgot who I was talking to.” Ford groaned with an arm thrown over his face. The two laid there quietly, catching their breath from the surprisingly strenuous activity. After all, they couldn't stimulate true binding if Xin didn't struggle against Ford's grip. The two ended up wrestling somewhat as Ford tried to pin Xin while the smaller man tried to break free. Of course their clothes had gotten torn up in the process but Ford wasn't all that worried, Xin could easily fix it and he wasn't wearing one of his best shirts or anything. He was coming to his nibling’s 5th birthday party, he had been prepared for his clothes to get destroyed anyway. Ford groaned as he rolled over and lamented the only downside, the scratches that had ended up happening on the both of them.

Xin’s nails were kinda sharp.

Ford traced a cut along his side, Xin had apologized and offered to heal it but Ford said he didn't mind. He used to fight with monsters and had gotten way out of shape and rusty at it over these past 5--6-- (how many?) years. He told Xin to leave the cuts so he could remind himself of how he needed to practice again. If he couldn't keep himself from getting hurt wrestling another person, how would he do against something like a gremloblin?

He looked over at Xin, who didn't have cuts and scratches along his body since Ford kept his nails carefully trimmed. Instead the smaller man had hand shaped bruises all along his body. Ford frowned. Those looked painful. “Aren't you going to heal those?” He asked. There were distinct fingermarks along Xin's chest where he had placed his palm and pressed Xin down into the bed. Ford could count six fingers on the bruise.

“Nah. I like the way they feel.” Xin sighed. Ford raised an eyebrow and Xin clarified “Pain is hilarious~” Besides, this was less pain and more of… a pleasant ache. Xin made a face. Whoa, he… liked this sort of thing? Not sexually, he wasn't turned on or anything, but it felt good. Almost like when he used to get massages, except more… intense. He’d tried out all sorts of things, with his bricks being a ‘thing’ way back when, he’d needed some rough handling in order to really gets a deep tissue massage, this reminded him of it.
“...right...” Ford kept forgetting this was actually Bill Cipher. He was nothing like the sadistic triangle that haunted and tortured him all those years ago...and then suddenly he would say something that very much reminded Ford that he was still A Bill Cipher. Ford sighed. Now he wanted to sleep. Or maybe take a bath first? He felt the smaller man’s head falling onto his shoulder and he looked down at Xin. Di-did he fall asleep?!

“Xin?” He whispered. He didn’t know Bill Cipher could sleep, wait no, he fell asleep that one time 18 years ago after Stan had given him a head pat, rather, THIS Bill Cipher could sleep, his own probably didn't. “Xin?” He tried again, but the man was unresponsive. The scientist sighed tiredly. Very well, he was going to sleep with a nice version of his enemy tonight... he... he could do that...

He took off his glasses, left them on the nightstand next to the bed and stretched as much as he could to reach the switch. “Good... good night...”

Ford closed his eyes and couldn't help but notice how warm and comforting it felt to sleep next to Xin.

It was so warm he didn't even need blankets.
Chapter 24 - Unexpected connections

Mabel woke up early, like she always did, and was really confused when she didn’t wake up at home. The events from yesterday came back and she smiled. Right! They all were with Uncle Sebas! She picked up her phone, the first thing she did in the morning and, like a normal person, checked her messages “Blah, blah, work shifts, blah, blah, oh Rini’s going to adopt a puppy? Lucky~! Oh! Mom wrote to me!” She texted her Mom about all the things that happened during the twins’ birthday party and then the delicious food they had after and the incredibly cute man who was friends with her Uncle. Her mom took a bit to reply, but when she did, she sent lots of laughing faces. She asked about Dipper (who was still sleeping) and about Dad (who had fallen asleep with his face on his laptop last night, haha). Mabel snapped a new photo to send her mom.

Her mom sent her a picture of Waddles who was eating breakfast back in California and Mabel cooed, telling her Mom to kiss Waddles for her before saying bye. She wanted to find food herself. Walking around in an oversized t-shirt and sweater, completely disheveled, Mabel got out of her room and went into the hallway when she saw another door opening. Her brown eyes widened when she saw Xin coming out, and moments later, Uncle Ford came out too! Both of them had slept in their clothes from yesterday! What was Xin even doing in her Uncle’s room?

She turned around and ran towards Dipper’s room. She jumped over her sleeping twin. “Dipper! Dipper! Wake up! Wake up right now damnit!” The exhausted teen angrily threw her away as he rolled around, “Go bother Dillon or something, I’m tired…”

Mabel shook Dipper by his shoulders. “This is serious shit, DipDot! Wake up! I saw Xin coming out of Uncle Ford’s room!” Dipper’s eyes shot open. “Nope. Definitely don’t want to think about that.” He said before burying himself back in his sheets. Mabel shook him. “Dipper this is serious!”

“But what if this means uncle Ford is finally gonna get together with someone?” Mabel yelled in her brother’s ear. “Ugh...I’m sure they were just...staying up late talking about science and stuff.” Dipper tried as hard as he could to make an excuse. “But Xin’s clothes were all wrinkled and Uncle Ford’s too! And they were all disheveled and wearing yesterday’s clothes!”

“Everyone's disheveled in the morning when they wake up. Have you seen yourself? And especially if they slept in their clothes without changing.” Dipper deadpanned. Mabel narrowed her eyes. “But, with what Zoe and Zu-Zach told us yesterday-”

“We were misunderstanding a toddler’s explanation, Mabel…” Dipper groaned. “Please, I don’t want to think about this!” It was like thinking about their Mom and Dad doing it! Gross! Mabel rushed out of the room and Dipper thought she was finally dropping the subject. The door slammed open and she rushed back in. “They’ve got cuts and bruises!” She cried. Dipper covered his face with the pillow. Nope. Nope. Mabel climbed into the bed next to him and leaned her head on his shoulder. “Dipper, if Uncle Ford is with Xin…”

“Nope…”

“And he can shapeshift into whatever he wants…”
“NOPE!”

“That means Uncle Ford could theoretically get us a new cousin?”

“OH MY GOD! GET OUT OF MY ROOM! IT’S TOO EARLY IN THE MORNING FOR DISTURBING TRAUMA!” The boy tried pushing Mabel away, but she resisted. “Help me find out what happened!” she whined.

“Nope. This is a mystery the mystery twins will not be solving.” Dipper laid down on his stomach and covered his head with a pillow. Mabel pouted before grinning. “Well maybe YOU won’t help me but I bet Dillon would!” She raced off. Dipper decided to let her and Dillon handle this.

“Dillon! Dillon wake up!” Mabel slammed open his door and startled him into rolling off his bed. “Mabel? Wha-Whas wrong?” He asked groggily from the floor. The girl approached her cousin and smiled. “We’ll be the Mystery Twins today! I have a mystery to solve!” Dillon raised an eyebrow with a small smile. “Oh yeah?” It felt nice to be taken into consideration. “What is it?”

“I totally saw Xin coming out of Uncle Ford’s room all disheveled and with cuts and bruises! Help me find out what happened!” The boy blinked, stood up, marched towards his cousin and lifted her effortlessly from the floor by her arms. He calmly walked towards the door, placed her just outside and smiled. “Thanks, I didn’t need that mental image so early in the morning, I think I need bleach for my mind now.” He closed the door in Mabel’s face and the girl scowled, thoroughly offended.

Fine. She would have to do this alone then. She walked off to find Xin and Ford. The two were in the kitchen where Xin was preparing breakfast. Ford had immediately gone for the coffee machine.
“Hi~” Mabel smiled a bit too widely. “I slept well! Did YOU sleep well?!” Xin smiled. “Yeah, quite well, Shooting Star.” He nodded. Mabel raised an eyebrow. “And you Uncle Ford?”

“Um, well, I guess, yes…” Ford nodded, confused at the strange tone Mabel asked the question with, and poured coffee into a mug. Mabel pouted. Ok. New plan. She made a show of gasping when she saw the bruises along Xin’s wrists (oh my~was uncle Ford actually an aggressor in bed?! She blushed at the thought. She’d read that some asexuals still had sex if they were with someone they liked. So was this...) “Gasp!” She said. “How did you get those bruises Xin?” Xin didn't even falter “Bondage therapy.” He said with a straight face.

“Ah hah! I knew—Wait what?” The girl scratched her brown hair. “Wha—What is that?” If you interpreted it literally, it could mean what she thought it meant, but she would let them defend themselves. Innocent until proven guilty, right? “Xin has panic attacks that cause the deaths of all people around him whenever he gets magically bound. And as a demon, he gets summoned a lot and some Summoners put binding seals around the circle just as a matter of course.” Ford adjusted his glasses. “He wanted to try some exposure therapy to get over this by experiencing some physical binding. The problem is, he panics almost as much from physical binds and anyone he tries to get to help him with it gets...torn apart.”

Ford grimaced. He'd asked Xin for more clarification and the demon/dragon had brought up some previous attempts using some of his own Bill clones. Apparently even holding himself down with more of himself would trigger a panic attack. “For various reasons, I don't seem to trigger the same Fright to Fight response, or at least, it’s at a level he can handle without going over the edge, so Xin asked me to help him with getting him comfortable with the feeling and therefore, less afraid.” The man concluded before calmly taking a sip of his coffee. Mabel looked between the two of them. “So you didn’t have rough sex 50 hues style?” She felt relieved and disappointed at the same time.

Ford spat all his coffee to the side as Xin gripped a pan so hard it bent. “Naw.” Xin finally said cheerfully. “I'm not into that.” then a pensive look came across his face. "But that might be interesting to watch..." The curly haired man started coughing and hitting his chest, feeling his face heat up. “M-MABEL!” He cried. When the heck did she learn to speak like that?! (He didn't know what 50 Hues was, but the rest of that sentence--) Why did she have to say it so bluntly! “I-I have-I wouldn’t-ARGH!” Ford was mortified. Mabel grinned as her uncle stuttered and pulled at his hair. “Ok, ok, I get it. Nothing happened…”

“Can you help me wake up everyone, Shooting Star?” Xin asked the teenager and Mabel saluted before going away. She had to tell Dipper and Dillon before he tried to bleach his eyes or eat a tide pod. She had seen a kid at school eat one and they got sent to the ER.

Ford groaned. What on earth gave Mabel that idea? He really didn't get it. He took another sip of his coffee. Xin spoke up casually “I suppose it felt as good as what I’d imagine sex to be?” Ford spat out another mouthful of coffee. Xin flicked a finger and cleaned off both sprays of caffeine. “Y-you waited for me to take a sip on PURPOSE!” Ford sputtered. Xin giggled. “Of course.” The man grumbled and quickly took a sip of his coffee so he wouldn’t be interrupted.

"I’m sure what I did last night was more of a chiropractic treatment than real bondage anyway.” Ford rolled his eyes. What had started as Ford simply pinning Xin down while he tried to break free had ended up as Ford pulling and pressing on all sorts of pressure points along Xin’s body to ease some of his back pain. The dragon certainly seemed to enjoy that. "That feels amazing! I've had that ache in my spine for AGES!"

Xin snorted. “Well, I think I prefer it.” His fear had lessened significantly when he realized some of the rough handling had actually worked out the soreness in his physical form’s back, among many other areas. Xin smiled at the thought. “Really though, thank you.” He told Ford sincerely. The scientist let out a laugh. “It’s fine. Helping you get over a fear so that you don’t accidentally kill people is a good thing.”

“Daddy...Daddy...Poke-poke…”

Seb jumped with a cry when he felt a strange thing on his face. The twins were giggling and holding their acorn puppy as they laughed. “Hey…” He mumbled sleepily. “Can we get breakfast please?” Zach asked. “We want to eat breakfast with everyone and watching TV like yesterday.” Zoe demanded. “Ok...Ok...Just let me wake up a bit more...and...” Seb fell asleep once again, resting his head on Wanda’s back.

The twins huffed. “DAD!”

“Fine! Fine!” Seb grumbled before he moved and wiggled as much as he could to wake up Wanda too. It was a weekend, she had to suffer with him. The twins skipped downstairs with their parents, Sir Bedazzle running behind them, and instead of going to the kitchen with them, they got distracted when they saw a door that definitely hadn’t been there before!

Seb rubbed his eye when he entered the kitchen but both Wanda and him froze when they saw Xin and Ford. Ford had scratches...Xin had bruises... Oh. OH! Ford looked up and raised his hand. “Good Morning Sebastian. Wanda.”

Xin looked over his shoulder and said a “Mornin’!” as well before going back to his cooking. He'd made many pancakes, omelettes with all sorts of fillings (cheese and broccoli, potatoes and ground beef, mushrooms etc.) and toast. Xin had loudly told Ford that he knew how to use a toaster, which confused Ford. Why did Xin feel the need to clarify this fact? Seb approached his brother and looked up at him, putting his hands on his shoulders. “I...I just want you to be happy, ok? So...So you are free to do whatever you want as long as you’re both okay with it.” The older man raised an eyebrow in confusion. “Al...right?”

Wanda, a bit more casual, patted Ford’s shoulder as she moved towards the fridge to take out the twins’ milk. “Congrats, man.” What in the name of Tesla was going on? Ford gave Xin a look but the other man shrugged and turned back to his food, not caring about what they were on about.

“Mommy! Daddy, there’s a door to another world in the hallway!” The twins came running up to them with worried expressions. “Sir Bedazzle ran into it but we were too scared to follow him and now he’s gone!” Zoe cried and hugged her mom’s legs. “Dad, save him!” Zach pleaded with tears in his eyes. Despite the pain the twins were feeling, Seb couldn’t help but laugh out loud. “Hahahahahahahaha!” The betrayed look on their faces were hilarious.

Xin sighed. “Don't worry, kids. I made that door. It’s where all your relatives are sleeping. Sir Bedazzle is fine.”

“Yup!” Xin nodded and glared at Seb who continued laughing. Wanda rolled her eyes and didn’t even comment when Zoe whined and kicked Seb’s leg hard before running away shouting “MEAN!” Seb stopped laughing and glared at the kids. Oh, shit. That hurt! “Hey! Come back here, young lady! Zoe! ZOE!”

“Don’t laugh at them. If you do, do it in private.” Wanda threw him an ice bag from the freezer. Xin laughed. He loved watching these little humans interact. He hummed to himself cheerfully. Wanda looked at him and noticed some painful winces as he moved around with the bruises along his arms. Unknown to her, they were much darker the night before but his healing had made the bruises a lot lighter. A good thing too since if the adults had seen how dark the bruises were, they might have found it worrisome.

“Xin, you can lie down and rest. You must have had a rough night.” Wanda went over to take over the breakfast duties. Xin waved her off, wincing a little when his bruises ached. “It’s fine. I like cooking.”

“But aren’t you...sore?” Wanda asked. “A little I guess? But it actually feels pretty good.” He rubbed his butt absently, trying to fix his skirt. He repaired his clothes but apparently he slept on his skirt kinda weird so it was sticking up at an odd angle. Wanda blushed a bit and nodded quickly before turning around to make the twins’ breakfast. Ok. It was fine, people liked different things…

Meanwhile, Mabel was unable to wake up anyone. Her dad, with the red imprint of his keyboard on his face and many ‘Cccccvcvvffff’s in his Word page, didn’t want to be moved, Dipper locked the door of his room and Dillon was way too strong to pull out of bed. Fortunately, Diego was unaware of everything, so she just picked him up, told him to knock on his parents bedroom (Mabel, as much as she wanted, couldn’t simply burst in because Aunt Carla was there), and she got ¾ of the Pines-McCorkle! Yay!

Diego glared at his cousin for waking him up and clung to his Dad as they obeyed Mabel and went to the kitchen. Stan sputtered when his sharp eyes instantly caught sight of the scratches along Ford’s skin and bruises on Xin. He immediately wanted to walk away because, ok, it’s great to know his triplet finally got laid, but he wasn't sure why Ford liked it so rough…

“Ah...morning Sixer…” Stan coughed. Carla was blushing as she caught sight of the two men. She locked eyes with Wanda and the two shared an embarrassed shrug. “Good morning, Stanley. How was your night?” Ford asked as he ate a plate of eggs and toast. Xin kept pushing more food onto him (“Coffee is not a breakfast!”).

Stan shrugged “I had a nice, quiet night…”

“Same. I slept quite peacefully.” Ford munched on his toast. Seb started laughing like a dying whale as Wanda snorted loudly and had to cover her mouth to muffle her laughter. It was both because of the statement AND Seb’s laughter. Stan grinned. “Yeah, I bet...it was a tiresome night yesterday, yeah?” He teased, but Ford didn’t seem to notice. “Quite.” Ford responded primly. “It had been a busy day and I am grateful Sebastian allowed us to stay the night.” Sebastian responded with a wheeze and fell backwards as he cackled. “I-I need to tell Sherman…” He managed to wheeze and crossed his legs. “I’m going to pee myself!”

“He really should have used the restroom after he woke up.” Ford shook his head, even as an adult, Seb was still so absent minded. Xin pouted. “He didn't even eat yet…” he placed the plate down anyway. Carla took a plate and thanked him. Stan couldn't keep a straight face when he sat at the table too. Mabel, who was watching, sort of amused and confused, wondered what was so funny. “Uncle Sebas, while you’re there laughing, can you get Dad and Dip Dot? I can’t get them to wake up.”

Seb wiped a tear from his eye, a little more calmed, and nodded with a huge smirk. “Ok, ok...I-I’ll go…” Seb left the room while giggling. Stan wanted to facepalm, really Seb? They should be more supportive. Stan grunted. “Congrats by the way. I hope you two used protection.”

“Oh. We do have a safe word.” Xin stated simply as he went to get more plates. He had to stand on his toes to reach the shelf and his skirt lifted to show off more bruises all down his legs. Carla and Wanda shared a look as Stan imploded with laughter inside. Ok. He got why Seb was laughing. God, this was stupidly hilarious. Oh God...Stan noticed the bruises. What was Ford even into?! And it was his first freaking time! He blurted out “Isn’t that a bit much for your first time?” before he could stop himself. Stan immediately covered his mouth as Carla and Wanda glared at him. “Well...I guess? But I was just so happy I could finally find someone to do it with me. I've only done it with some of my clones before but they all got ripped to pieces.” Xin stated with a shrug, referring to his previous attempts to try and get over his fear of being bound.

Stan was speechless while the two women’s jaws dropped open. Mabel pouted. She still didn't understand why everyone was so shocked. Xin and uncle Ford were just doing some physical therapy right? Diego wasn’t even paying attention as he happily ate his breakfast. Mabel wanted breakfast but she wanted to wait for everyone to be here first.

They all heard a loud obnoxious laughter coming from the magic hallway. That was Shermie. A few moments later the two younger Pines Brothers, followed by a groggy Dipper and two excited children carrying Sir Bedazzle, entered the kitchen with shit-eating grins. “Oh god, Seb...” Wanda muttered. He just couldn’t stay silent, huh?

Xin waved “Morning Black Belt, Pinetree...little gremlins.” The youngest twins giggled as they ran up to hug Xin’s tail. The dragon yelped in pain. The kids immediately let go. “Did we hurt you?” Zoe asked in worry. She and Zach looked at their hands to see if there was fire. Xin shook his head. “It’s not your fault. Fordsie pulled my tail a bit too hard last night...” The five adults plus Dipper choked. Zach nodded. “Oh! He pinned you down to the floor again?”

“And you liked it this time too?” Zoe asked, reaching for their plastic watering can to water the acorn-puppy. “Yeah. But he pinned me on the bed this time. Much more comfortable.” Xin nodded. This time Seb didn’t find it funny. “You did it in front of the twins?!” Ford sighed. “I didn't recognize Xin when I first met him yesterday and thought he was a burglar so I pinned him to the ground.” He rolled his eyes. “You were there Seb.” Stan looked at Seb with wide eyes. “The fuck?!”

“You pin burglars to the ground...” Shermie whispered. “Ford...what?!” He was working under the idea of what Seb told him and he didn’t want to imagine what happened to the poor bastards that decide to rob his oldest brother. What kind of specific kink was that?!

Seb frowned. Ok. Right...Ford was pinning Xin to the ground in the morning...the twins, fortunately for both of them, didn’t see anything, but if they weren’t there would Ford have...? Did he realize he liked to hurt his partners right then and there? Discovered the spark that made him interested in...for lack of a better way to put it, the physical pursuits?

“Ford...I didn’t know you were like that.” Seb said. Then again...Ford, even way back when, liked to feel superior. He liked having power over others. He liked to be the one in charge. He...Seb didn't want to word it like this but, he liked to hurt others. Especially back when he was angry with the world and with Bill and with Seb. Actually...was that what this was? Some latent desire of Ford’s to hurt Bill Cipher, any Bill Cipher. And...Xin just so happened to...enjoy it? It was a dark thought but it made sense to Seb.

He frowned and turned to Ford. He was afraid of Xin getting hurt...more hurt at least. “Don't go too far. Even if it's you, if you hurt Xin, I'm going to set you on fire.” Ford raised an eyebrow. “Of course. I would never deliberately hurt him. We do have precautions. Besides, Xin can use magic.
to break out if it gets to be too much for him.” That made Seb feel somewhat better. He hoped the two were careful. “Well...as long you're both happy.” He said, still completely misunderstanding the situation.

“I…. guess?” Ford rubbed his nose in confusion but decided to get back to his breakfast. The twins were petting Xin’s tail gently to try and make him feel better. “Still hurt?” Zach asked as he looked up at Xin and the dragon smiled at him gently. “I feel much better.” Zoe looked at Ford. “Uncle Fordsie you have to be more careful!” She scolded and Ford chuckled a bit. “I will.” He didn’t want to continue talking about this anyway. Everyone seemed to be weirded out by the fact that he was helping Xin with his fear therapy.

After the situation was kind of solved, albeit with a huge (and HILARIOUS, to Xin anyway) misunderstanding still in the younger Pines’ minds, and after Dillon finally came down, they finally had breakfast properly. Xin had been making them eat even before everyone had gathered. As Xing happily passed a plate to each human, the other Pines brothers couldn't help but snicker from time to time. They knew they shouldn't tease Ford about his sex life, they had kids! They HAD done it before! Many times! Hell, Shermie had absolutely nothing to tell his brother, but the fact that Ford finally got laid was too funny to pass up.

Today was April 8th, Saturday, a day of rest and relaxation. Shermie and his twins had to leave at midday tomorrow because Dipper still had to finish his course before summer, but the Stans could stay a little bit longer, they had to take a break from work anyway.

“Daddy, after eating can we go with everyone to the park to play?” Zoe asked. “We want to show Diego our favorite swings!” Zach smiled. “Alright, but after you make your bed, change your clothes, brush your teeth and take all your presents to your room because Dad and I are not going to do it for you.” Wanda gently told her children.

“Yeah, the same goes for you, Diego.” Stan said absently as he ate his breakfast. “Except for the present thing, I guess.” The toddlers groaned loudly and Zoe, out of spite, started hitting her head on the table. “Zoe, we talked about this.” Seb sighed as he put a hand on her small forehead to stop her.

“Xin can take all the presents upstairs and put them in their places!” Zach argued. “Xin can’t do everything for you.” Wanda shook her head. The twins looked at Xin pleadingly and the demon shrugged. “You have to obey your parents.” He said, even as his mouth twitched from trying to hide a smile.

“Urgh! Fine! We finish that and then we can go to the park?” Zoe extended her hand shake with her Dad as a small flame appeared around it. “Uh huh. But I want you to do it well, not half done.” Seb’s own hand caught on fire and he shook hands with his daughter. “Come on, Zach! We have to go change!”

“Should we worry about their deals actually working?” Stan asked as his niblings and son ran away. Seb looked sheepish. “I haven’t really tried talking to them about that...But I have a feeling their deals would actually work…” Wanda grumbled. Troublesome magic!

“Oh! It’s been decades since we’ve gone to the park!” Mabel squealed and grabbed her brother’s arm, making him drop his fork. “This’ll be so much fun!” Dipper sighed, grateful he finished his homework the night before. “Mabel, it hasn't been decades! We’re not even two decades old!” Dipper frowned. “Do we need to make our beds too? Isn’t there something about bed bugs or something?”

Xin commented absently. “The thing with making the bed is that humans think it looks and feels nice.” he paused “And also because it’s a trained habit to teach people to be neater and cleaner. But frankly, if you vacuumed, dusted and cleaned your sheets regularly then it shouldn’t matter if you don’t make the bed.”

The adults nodded. “So it’s just practice for getting people used to a routine of cleanliness?” Ford asked. Xin nodded. “Exactly. In fact some people believe the upside of a neat bed is worth the work even without the cleanliness factor. And if you're washing and airing out the sheets regularly then it’s the same either way…it just makes things look nicer and if you think about it, if you went to a hotel room and the sheets weren’t neat, you would feel grossed out right?” Xin explained.

The Pines finished eating so they could clean up and get ready. They promised the kids they would all go to the park after all, and all of them meant ALL of them. “I don’t have appropriate clothes for a park day.” Mabel pouted when she realized the clothes she brought from home where a little formal. Dipper shrugged and simply wore his jeans and t-shirt from yesterday. Ugh. Boys.

Xin grinned. “Never fear! I'm here!” He waved his hands and clothes popped into existence. Mabel picked up a shirt and questioned “Why is everything flannel?” Xin blinked. “I was going for plaid. I guess I’m still getting them mixed up…”

Mabel nodded and Xin grinned. “Well what do you want to wear?” Mabel found a pink flannel she liked and grinned. “Can I have black shorts, maybe…a white t-shirt? With lots of smiley faces!” The girl smiled. “Boom! Done!” Xin grinned. Mabel squealed. He even added a small shooting star on the upper part! It was like having a fairy god-mother!

Stanley frowned. “Don’t you have problems granting people stuff without anything in return?”

“Oh I'm definitely getting something in return~” Xin purred as he fluffed Ford’s hair. Everyone coughed loudly. Mabel blinked. “Well, thanks! I’m gonna go change!” She ran away with her garments. Xin magicked his own clothes into an oversized t-shirt and jeans. He also had to retract his tail and antlers. Everyone felt more weirded out seeing Xin in casual clothes than they did when he was in the butler or maid outfit.

Seb put on some old clothes (because he knew he would end up with grass on him), kind of fixed his hair, brushed his teeth and went to check on the twins. It’d been around half and hour and the twins hadn’t come back downstairs. Knowing them, they got distracted by something.

Zach was only wearing a t-shirt and underwear, Zoe was only in her pajama shorts and they were playing with their toys and Sir Bedazzle who, now that he thought about it, hadn’t been watered yet.

“Guys…” the man sighed. “Daddy!” They grinned. “We were doing everything but we ended up playing…” Zoe explained. Seb sighed. “Well you won’t have to make your beds today…” the twins cheered “…but we’re all gonna wash the sheets when we get back from the park.” They groaned. Seb smirked. “Either we wash the sheets once every 2 weeks or you make your beds everyday. You pick.”

“…wash.” They both said. Seb laughed. “Well go finish changing and brushing your teeth. I'm going to water Sir Bedazzle.” The twins nodded and went to the bathroom first. Seb grabbed the acorn who barked happily at his owner. Water! “You are a weird little shit but I still like you.” Seb declared before putting the acorn under his arm to take him downstairs. Instead of having plates with water and food, the kitchen had a small laundry bin where Sir Bedazzle knew he had to climb into to be watered.

Seb grabbed the watering can and laughed at the excited and expecting look the acorn puppy gave him. “Here you go, Sir Bedazzle.” Seb watered the pet and it closed it’s large eyes to happily bathe in the cool water. “Who’s the best acorn?! You?! You are!” Seb cooed at their pet who was now splashing in the bin. The kids always wanted a pet but neither him or Wanda wanted an animal. This was WAY better.

The twins came downstairs ready to leave, and one by one, their family crowded into the living room. The last two were Xin and Ford. Shermie, Stan and Seb snickered behind their hands. Wanda looked at Carla, who was packing a bottle of water to take. “They’re such children.” the two sighed over the Pines men. “Tell me about it, girl.”

They noticed that with Xin wearing a short sleeved shirt now, the bruises along his arms were in clear view. Now, they knew it was from a consensual romp in the sheets but the neighbors would probably talk. Wanda walked over “Xin? Could you wear long sleeves instead?” Xin shrugged and changed his shirt, to Wanda's relief. “Sure?”

“Thank you, I mean, it’s not like I’m controlling you, but you know how there are assholes everywhere and-”

“Hey. It’s ok.” Xin smiled as he put his hands on her shoulders and nodded. “It's like how my friends don’t like seeing my bricks misaligned.”

“CAN WE GO NOW?!” Zoe moaned. “We aren’t getting any younger here!” The impatient girl tapped her foot. “We’ve been waiting, like 5 hours!” Diego complained. It’d been 10 minutes, but the family agreed and the 15 people left the house chanting “Park! Park! Park! Park!”

They were quite a large group and it was early in the morning but they were having too much fun to worry about that. Some of the neighbors shook their heads when they saw the group walking down the sidewalk, but they had to admit it was adorable seeing such a close knit family.

The Pines family marched on, not realizing their smiles and joyful mood was infectious. Xin was nibbling carefully on the feelings around him. Didn't want to overdose and get sick. That would certainly put a damper on things. He wasn’t wearing a headband, aiming to get more practice on filtering by himself before he absorbed them. He didn’t want to rely on it all the time. Though happiness was a nice treat.

“I’ve been staring at the edge of the water long as I can remember! Never really knowing why~” Zoe sang loudly and soon enough, Mabel was joining her little cousin.

“I WISH!” Mabel dramatically sang. “I could be the perfect DAUGHTER!”

“Mabel, honey, don’t shout, people might still be sleeping.” Shermie scolded softly but Seb screamed. “BUT I COME BACK TO THE WATER!” Xin laughed and joined in. “No matter how hard I try~” The dragon linked arms with Seb who looped his arm with Mabel as she picked up Zoe. The four of them sang together “Every turn I take, every trail I track, every path I make, every road leads back~”

They threw their heads back “To the place I know where I cannot go~where I LONG TO BEEEE!!!”

Shermie, Stan and Ford groaned. Great. Now there were FOUR of them! The rest of the family rolled their eyes. “Why, please.” Dipper whined in embarrassment when he noticed a neighbor staring at them from their window. “Hey. I didn't see you complaining when you did that amazing solo fighting zombies, Pinetree.” Seb reminded him. Xin giggled. “If we were singing BABBA he would join in…”

Dipper gasped and slapped a hand over Xin’s mouth. “Shhh!!!” He hissed. “No one must know!” Xin gave a sly smile full of sharp teeth. “What’ll it cost to keep me quiet I wonder~?” Dipper stared at Xin in panic and tried to think of something he could bribe him with. His mind raced and landed on the first thing he could think of, “Uncle Ford is ticklish!”

“Oh?” Xin blinked. Dipper was blushing but he nodded. “It's around his ribs...if...if that information might interest you…” Xin wasn't thinking about what Xin might do to his uncle with this information, definitely wasn't! “Oh~I'm sure I can find some use for this~” Xin purred. Dipper suddenly wanted to apologize to uncle Ford.

They made it to the park and the children (plus Mabel) immediately ran off to play on the jungle gym. Xin raced after them too. “I call dibs on the swings!” he laughed. He pouted when he saw he was too tall for the kid swings. He glanced around to make sure there were no other people watching and 'poof'ed into Miz.

“Push me!” She demanded as she sat on the swing and kicked her legs. Ford sighed at the demon’s childishness. “Aren't you several billion years old?” He asked as he walked over to give her a push. Miz cheered as she swung into the air. “I'm almost 700 billion years old!” She laughed. “My point
“Well you're too big. Hah!” Miz stuck her tongue out at him. Seb pouted and looked at his younger brother. “Hey, Shermie~Want to make a deal~?” He could make swings if he used his powers through deals. “No, I don’t like magic.” Shermie winced. Seb turned his pleading look to Stan who also shook his head. “Nope~”

Seb pouted as Miz’s cute laughter rang out. Zoe and Zach ran over to the swings. “I wanna swing too!” Zach climbed onto another child swing and kicked his legs.

Ford began pushing all the children. There were plenty of swings after all. Even Diego got to sit on one. Ford huffed as he ran back and forth between the four swings and gave each one a push. “Help please? I can't push all of them!” he called out to his brothers.

“I’ll help ya with that if you make a deal with me!” Seb grinned at his oldest brother. Ford groaned. “No.”

“Oh come on!” Seb whined as he leaned on his wife, complaining “Wands! None of my brothers will make a deal with me~!” He kissed her cheek and licked it. “Make a deal with me! You’re my wife!” The woman rolled her eyes as she wiped her cheek. “I was going to, but you licked me so now I don’t want anything.” She teased. Seb groaned and threw himself onto the grass. “Why won't anyone make a deal with me~?!”

“Because you're not offering them anything.” Miz teased. “I am not omnipotent or all powerful though! I need to get them to agree and they have to tell me what they want!” Seb whined. Miz was going to tease him some more but she “Eep!”ed when Ford pushed her higher. “N-no more! This is good!” She clung to the plastic tubing around the swing’s chains and squeezed her eyes shut. Ford raised an eyebrow. “You don't want to go higher?”

“Nope! This is good!” Miz said as she kept her eyes closed. Zach was kicking his legs. “Well I want to go more high!” He demanded. Ford pushed him higher but was watching Miz cling to her swing until it lost some height and she opened her eyes again. “Are you...afraid of heights?!” He asked incredulously. Miz pouted. “Just a little bit.”

“Which means I know EXACTLY what happens when a physical body falls from a great height while trapped in gravity’s clutches.” She mumbled with a faint blush. Stan came over to give her a reassuring smile. “No problem. I was afraid of heights too.”

“Have YOU ever gotten caught in the orbit of a collapsing star and got pulled in?” Miz grumbled. Stan rolled his eyes. “No, but I fell off a tree once and broke my arm. That sucked.” Miz laughed. “Not as much as a black hole!” The two laughed and Miz relaxed a little (See?! Stan got her joke!) Ford pushed the other kids until they got bored and asked to be let off. Except Zoe who waited for the apex of her swing and jumped off, making the adults scream out in panic.

A yellow glow surrounded her and Seb held his hand out with his eye wide. “ZOE! Don't DO that!” He screamed as his heart pounded. He lowered her to the ground and ran over to hug her. “Shit I was so scared!” The man cried as he picked up the toddler. Wanda ran over to them. “Is she alright?! Did you hurt yourself? Do you need something?” The blonde child groaned and pushed their hands away. “I’m fine! Daddy, you ruined my jump.” She grumbled. “You could have gotten hurt!” Seb scolded.

“No I wouldn't! I'm stwong!” Zoe insisted. “No, no! I don’t want you jumping like that! It was too high, you could have landed wrong and broke something!” Seb was tense as he scolded his daughter. “Please don’t do that again.”

“Ok, ok...Can I go now?” She asked impatiently and Seb sighed before nodding.

Seb sighed. “I know. But...ugh... I get so worried...they’re so small and anything can happen to them...” He remembered when he had to take care of his brother’s twins. He had heart attacks daily because of Dipper and Mabel’s antics. Zach had brought a ball with him and now he was playing with Zoe, Diego and Dipper. “But Dipper is older!” Diego complained as he teamed up with Zach.

“He counts as half. He doesn’t know how to play!” Zoe smiled. She kicked the ball and the little boys ran after it. Both Zoe and Zach practiced, but she was much better. Dipper pouted. He knew how to play soccer! He ran after his cousins. He had the ball in front of him and kicked, but missed. “Seriously?” He stared at the ball. The adults laughed loudly at the older boy as Zoe came behind him and kicked, making the ball fly away. Miz came off the swings, swaying a little, and ran off to play with the kids too. She kicked the ball and it sailed through the air to hit Dipper in the stomach. “Oops!” She laughed.

Mabel winced and tried to get over to her brother to check on him, but she was hanging upside down with the blood pooling in her head, which made her slip. She fell to the sand with a thud. Shermie sighed. He was too old to deal with these kids (never mind the fact that he was only in his mid 30s). “Are you ok, son?” Dipper took a mouthful of air. “Y-Yeah... at least it wasn’t lower.” He pouted at his aching stomach and walked towards his Dad to curl up with him on the grass.

“Pfft!” Dipper rolled his eyes. Miz ran over and flopped on top of him. “Sorry! I didn't mean to hit you!” She wailed. “Did I break your delicate organs?” Dipper smiled wryly at her. “I’m fine, I think, Miz...I just want to rest.” He looked up at the green-eyed man. “And I AM in shape! I want to see YOU take a cannonball from a demon to the stomach and walk it off.” Shermie raised an eyebrow at Miz. “No offense but Miz looks like I could break her with one hand...”

Miz shrugged. “I'm not sure that...” She trailed off with a contemplative look. “Hey Fordie! Can we try it while I'm in THIS form later?” Ford turned around at his name. “If...you want?” Stan hid his head on his wife's chest as he cackled and Seb almost broke his neck from turning around so fast. Shermie looked horrified. “No! Nope! I don't care how old Miz really is!” He covered his eyes. “Stanford you are sick!”

“But-But why?” Ford frowned, utterly confused about why the idea of helping Miz with her exposure therapy was so wrong. “She asked me!” Wanda and Carla had odd looks on their faces (all the adults still believing that the two had just had sex the night before). Carla turned to Miz with a worried look. “It's not that we don't...accept this, but you're just...so small. It might be too much for you.” Miz pouted. “I...guess you're right...” It WOULD be much harder for her to break free when she was half his height. She shrugged and ran off to play on the jungle gym.

Seb groaned in relief and fell backwards. Stan collapsed next to him with a perturbed look and Shermie tried to look anywhere but at Ford. He ended up with his face on Dipper’s back, blushing. “I'm the only normal one in this family...” Shermie realized in despair.
Seb groaned. “Sixer...even if she asks you...there are some things you just can't do. As an adult you need to be the responsible one and refuse.” Wanda giggle-whispered to Seb. “Speaking of being a responsible adult, say something responsible~” she teased. “...Taxes...” Seb whispered back.

“But...she IS an adult...?” The man with glasses was so confused. Seb groaned with Shermie as they both buried their faces. “But she's...tiny. And you're...twice her size...” Sebastian blushed. Why was Ford so stupid despite being a genius?

Ford nodded. “True. It does put me at a much greater advantage. She won't have the leverage needed to fight back properly. Though I suppose it means our sessions would be more effective with a higher simulation of threat...” He continued to muse aloud to himself as everyone stared at him in horror. “What?!” Seb and Shermie said at the same time. Stan groaned loudly and pulled Carla towards him. “Please make him stop...” The man sobbed.

Ford blinked innocently. “Well we agreed that I would hold him down while he tries to break free from my hold. I've been trying a couple different suppression techniques. Stanley, remember that Fenishian choke hold we learned in Dimension 6-Alpha dash? Xin really seemed to enjoy that one...”

Shermie covered his son’s ears. Dipper was in pain so he wasn’t listening anyway.

"Ford, just shut up and let me be in peace for one second... what you do with-with Xin is something private!” Stan cried as he used Carla as a shield while she was laying down on his broad chest. “Oh. I wasn't aware this was something to be kept secret...” Ford shrugged. “Yes!” The five adults cried. The six-fingered man frowned. Seriously, they were so weird. He thought it was an interesting topic. Physical therapy for a normally incorporeal demon.

Exposure therapy for Bill's anxiety by placing him in a situation similar to their trauma, but in a safe environment with no intent to cause harm. He wanted to study Xin's physical reactions more. How extensive was the nervous system of his constructed physical bodies? Did his pain receptors redirect to pleasure centers in his brain? There was so much he could learn from studying him. The very thought shot a thrill through him, energizing him in a way he hadn’t felt in a while. The joys of discovery!

The park was slowly getting more kids and Zoe pouted when their swings were occupied. Mabel had a great idea and crouched in front of her cousin. “How about a water balloon fight? We can go to your house and bring them!”

“Oh!” The younger girl gasped. “Yeah that'd be so cool! Let’s go!” The only Pines girls ran away giggling. Seb stared at them in worry but Wanda took his arm. “They'll be fine. The house is nearby and Mabel will be with Zoe.” Seb nodded. “Right. You're right. I'm sorry...” He sighed. “I need to learn to relax don’t I?” Stan grabbed his brother’s arm and pulled him up. “Hey, kids!” The little boys turned around. “We’re joining in!” Their sons cheered at that.

“Oh. Looks like the park is full.” An annoyed voice rang out. The Pines turned to see Carol and Amanda (who looked a little unhappy and scared as she sent her mother a distressed look). “Hey...” Seb grimaced at the sight of the blonde woman. Stan glared at her as their sons looked at the adults, confused. “Hi-Hi Amanda.” Zach waved at her shyly. She smiled back but her mother shoved her behind her. “Don’t talk to her.” Carol snapped. “Of course you have to invade the playground all for yourselves.”

“Hi, Carol...did you just come to ruin our day with your horrible face or did you come to apologize to my son?” Seb grinned, doing everything in his power to not snap. Carol sniffed and turned away, grabbing Amanda's arm to drag her away. The little girl turned back to give them a sad wave. Zach sniffled. It's not fair that Amanda couldn't play just because her mom was a meanie. He frowned when he heard Amanda whine, “Mommy that hurts!” as Carol yanked on her arm to make her walk faster.

Seb ruffled his baby’s hair. “You still up to play, champ?” Zach sighed when he lost sight of his neighbors. “Yeah…” He didn’t know what to do.

Miz frowned in the direction of the woman and flicked her fingers. A wide, vicious smile spread across her face (using magic on people without permission was bad, but people who’ve hurt the ones she cared about were fair game) and Dipper shuddered when he saw it. He kept forgetting she was actually Bill Cipher. He was suddenly worried about that neighbor. Even if she was a bit—a jerk to his cousin. “What did you do to her?” Dipper asked her. The girl giggled. “If she's gonna BE a dick, she's gonna GET a dick…”

“...Bill. No. You can’t DO that! Bill, I am NOT joking!!” The boy panicked. Miz scoffed. “I don't see the problem here. She's just gonna slowly turn into a man over the next month or so.”

“But-But!” The boy started stuttering. “You really can’t do that! She’s an asshole but-”

“Please-any trip to the doctor will reveal a dormant genetic quirk that has suddenly become active and flooded her body with the relevant hormonal levels needed to cause the physical changes...she can change herself back to normal via surgery and opposing hormone treatments.” Miz climbed the jungle gym to dangle upside down. “You know, like all other people have to do in order to be who they want to be.”

Dipper shook his head. He was a witness of a terrible spell. He knew people did that but really?! It was a horrible punishment, but Dipper had to admit it was pretty mild compared to other things the Bill from 5 years ago did. What he did to Pacifica’s dad? Ew.

“I won’t be able to keep this a secret, the guilt will kill me, Miz.” The teen looked at the laughing girl. “Can I tell them?” He asked nervously. Miz shrugged as she climbed around like a sloth. “Sure. I don't care.” She looked at Dipper. “I just think she should know how it feels. It’s not wrong right? Making her have a taste of what she insults other people for?” She tilted her head in innocent confusion.

“It’s not wrong to make her empathize, I wished she understood Zach too, but...but changing her sex will-will be too traumatic! They have a daughter.” Dipper protested. “I’m not changing her sex, I'm making it so she has a chromosomal disorder and is actually genetically male now.” Miz still didn't understand what the problem was. “It didn't affect her daughter because she was born before the gene went active. And all I’m doing is flooding her with male hormones, any changes she’ll undergo are the same as anyone else on hormone treatment.”

Dipper groaned. He wasn’t gonna be able to convince her. He ran a hand through his hair and walked towards his youngest uncle. “Uncle Seb, Bill turned that discriminatory witch into a man.” Dipper said softly. “WHAT?!” Seb turned to look at Dipper and the ball hit him square in the head. “I get more points for hitting him, right?” Stan laughed.

Seb rubbed his aching head and looked at his nephew. “What do you mean by that?!?”

“Um, Miz changed her DNA. Or something.” Seb blinked before exploding with laughter. You just couldn’t mess with Bill Cipher! Dipper groaned. “It's not funny, Uncle Seb! Make Miz change her back!”

“I ain’t doing shit! That bitch made my baby cry, she deserves to suffer.” He patted the boy’s curls. “When you have your own kids with Pacifica, you will understand.” Dipper clicked to Miz and gave her a thumbs up. She giggled and waved back, swinging from the jungle gym by her legs. Dipper sighed to make his blush disappear. He was not going to convince this man. He tried at least...he went to sit down under the tree shadow with his aunts and Dillon, pulling out his phone. It was that woman’s problem she messed with the Pines family to begin with.

“TAKE THAT!” A high pitched voice shouted. Dipper cried when a water balloon exploded on his face. He sputtered as he heard his sister and Zoe laughing. He laughed as well and got up to grab for a water balloon too. “You guys cheated!” He still worried about the spell Miz had cast though. Maybe he should talk to uncle Ford instead. He robbed a few water balloons just to get Zoe and Mabel back for hitting him and made his way over to Ford.

Ford was writing something when he saw Dipper approaching him. “Um, you should put that book away. Mabel and Zoe got water balloons.” The eldest triplet looked up and saw Shermie, who was napping on the floor, getting attacked. “Thanks for the warning.” Ford chuckled. “Um...you saw that woman who was a bitch to Uncle Seb and Zach?” Dipper asked awkwardly. Ford nodded “Quite the unpleasant woman.”

“Ah...Miz cursed her or something?”

“What? No. She...she turned that woman into a man…”

“Oh. Is that all it is?” Ford shrugged. “Well, serves her right.”

Dipper groaned. Not Ford too! “Come on, Uncle Ford!”

“Well, it’s true, Dipper. She shouldn’t go around shouting stuff at people, even less at children and without any real argument. Maybe now she will learn that the body has nothing to do with someone’s mind or gender.” Ford said in a know-it-all way.

“But changing bodies is horrible! I was trapped in Mabel’s body for an entire day once and it was awful!” Dipper cried.

“You...never told me about that?” Ford raised an eyebrow. Dipper flushed. “It was really awkward. Mabel and I don’t really talk about it.”

“Well, even if you did, there is a difference. You were swapped into a body that wasn’t your own, while she will have a change within hers, it will still be her body…” Ford wondered what exactly Miz did to that woman’s body, it sounded pretty interesting. He should ask her tonight. Dipper groaned. “At least please try to change her mind? You...you two are close...right?” Dipper asked. Ford stared at Dipper. “I met William 18 years ago and met them again only yesterday, so I don’t know what you mean by close. But regardless, I don’t see the problem here. That woman isn't going to die or melt into a screaming pile of flesh so I think it's fine to let her be punished for at least a little while.”

Ford looked over at where Miz was going down the slide while squealing “I suppose I could ask Miz to break the curse after that.” Dipper nodded, relieved he would AT LEAST try to talk to Miz. “Thanks, Uncle Ford!” Ford ruffled his wet hair and Dipper joined his cousins to play with the water balloons. Ford took that time to walk over to Miz as she was back on the swings. “Is that woman truly a man now?” He asked casually, sitting on a free swing.

Miz hummed as she swung herself. “It's going to be subtle changes over the next month or so. She's not gonna grow a real dick or anything but there will be physical differences.” She swung herself with a frown. “Did I do bad?” she asked quietly. Ford smiled. “I don’t think so. I agree with you that she deserved some sort of punishment.”

Miz grinned and stopped swinging. “You have a twisted mind too, Fordsie~” She stood up from the swing and poked his nose. “You agree with me and Sebas that, that woman deserves to suffer…” She purred, her face getting closer to his with a teasing grin. “I think that's why I like you guys so much.” Before Ford could respond, she skipped merrily over to the bucket so she could join the water balloon fight.

Ford felt cold. He was twisted? Was that really true? Ford had prided himself in his moral code. He wasn't a cruel man, at least he didn't consider himself to be one.

“Join me, Sixer. Take your place by my side. You fit right in with my freaks!” Ford shivered at the memory of HIS voice. The Bill Cipher who had acted as his muse for a few years. Who had tricked him, betrayed him…

...who had asked Ford to join him. Offered him power beyond imagining if he would only agree to join him. Ford had refused of course.

He had never really thought about why Bill had insisted on it. What had made Bill want him to join his gang. Ford shivered. He thought of how Dipper had seemed so worried and distressed about Miz's karmic retribution towards that woman. Ford sighed. Was there really something twisted about him? Worried, he walked closer to his family. He didn’t even want to be too close because he thought they would be bothering him and not let him work… Stan had bought sodas from a nearby store and was giving one to everyone not involved with the water fight.

“Want one, Sixer?” Stan asked with a grin. Ford nodded and his eyes widened a bit when Stan threw the can at him. His reflexes hadn't dulled so he caught it before it smacked into his face. The Stans settled down on the grass and watched their youngest triplet getting attacked by his twins. Miz refilled the bucket with her powers and all the cousins laughed when she poured it over Seb. “AH! COLD!”

Ford held the can between his six-fingered hands. “Tell me, Stan...do you think I am… a bad person?” Stan was immediately frowning. “Woah, um, if this is about you and Miz, we were just giving you a hard time. Y’know since she looks so young but actually isn’t and…”

“That's not what I mean.” Ford looked at his soda can. Pitt Cola? He wasn't aware they sold that outside of Gravity Falls. “Do I...have a skewed moral sense?”

“Pfft! You are the most nerdy goody two-shoes I have ever met, Ford!” Stan laughed, relieved that this wasn’t something serious. “You wanted to stay in Gravity Falls and fight Bill.”

“But that was my fault, I couldn’t let the town—”

“Besides, morality is relative.” The younger man sipped his soda. “You really should have learned that from me while we were in space....” He joked, but his brother didn’t laugh or smile. “What... even made you think that?” Stan asked. Ford looked over to where Miz was running around, shrieking with laughter as Seb and his gremlins yelled and threw balloons at her. “Miz said she liked how twisted my mind was.”

“Oh...no offense Sixer, but you were willing to...ah...have a ‘session’ with her when she looks like a child...that's pretty twisted.” Stan knew she wasn't a real kid but...still. He wouldn’t do it, and he liked having ‘sessions’. Man, he should start calling it in front of Diego. Pretty convenient way to talk to Carla about their sex life without the kids finding out.

Ford looked down. “I didn’t know...” He said quietly. “Stanley. I wasn’t a good brother, in either of my two chances. I know it wasn't entirely my fault...but I still had the chance to be different. And I wasn't. You were a much better brother to Sebastian and Sherman. We both grew up in the same house.” Ford winced as he remembered how much he just... didn’t even care about his other brothers, always off in his own head and only thinking about himself. “I don’t want to be a bad person, Stanley.” Ford looked up at his brother, upset. Stan rubbed his arm. “Kids fight each other all the time. It doesn't...make you...bad.”

“Stanley, Don't make excuses for me. Stanley please, tell me.” Ford stared into his triplet's eyes. “Am I a b-bad person?” Stan couldn't help the scowl. “I'm not saying you're bad. But you DID try to kill Seb...multiple times. Not as a child, as a full grown adult. A paranoid one.” Ford's face fell. “I know.” He placed his hands behind his back. “I still feel awful for that.”

“That's not the point, Stanley!” Ford's voice wavered. “Bill might have put me against Seb, but all he did was make me angry. He didn't actually change my thoughts. I...I had justifications for what I did to Seb. For how I treated him. I...” Ford hunched over himself. “I told myself, convinced myself that Seb deserved to suffer, as punishment for the crimes from his past life. And just now, I said that toxic woman who made Zach cry deserved to be cursed…”

“Wait curse? What curse? When did THAT happen?” Stan's eyes went wide. “Miz cursed her to slowly turn into a man, Miz asked me if doing so was bad. She...asked me to tell her if it was a good or bad thing to do.” Ford stared at Stan, eyes growing wide as he realized why that was. “…she asked me because she doesn't know. I don't think she can tell right from wrong. And I told her it was fine. But was it fine? Was it good? I thought such a curse would be a fine punishment for that woman's cruel, ignorant words, but Dipper was very upset by it.”

Stan thought about what Ford told him. Eventually, he responded. “I...I think curses are not good...that woman was a jerk to Zach but...maybe that woman deserved something less...extreme?” Stan was at a loss here. He didn’t know. Magic was something powerful and he had seen how bad it could be. “And just ‘cause you think it's fine while me and Dipper don't, doesn't make you a bad person. You just... have different ways of seeing the world. Maybe it means you're a little twisted but it doesn't make you evil or bad.” Stan clapped his brother's shoulder. Ford didn’t look any happier though.

Stan sighed. “If you really feel bad about this, you can ask Miz to...lessen the curse? And maybe come talk to me in the future if you're not sure what ‘ta do. I'm not exactly the straightest arrow in the stack but I like to think I'm a good guy and ‘someone you can trust!’” He quoted his slogan and Ford gave him a little smile.

“Alright...thank you, Stanley.” Ford still felt a little unsure but he trusted Stanley to know what to do. He sighed and got up. “I'm going to ask Miz to lessen her curse into something less...invasive.” He walked over to see the girl soaking wet, brushing her long dark hair from her eyes. “Miz?”

“Yeah, Fordsie?” She tilted her head innocently. He sighed. “Genetic alteration might cause major problems down the line. Is there any other way you could curse her?” Miz paused and her eyes seemed to be staring off into the distance. Finally she blinked and flicked her fingers. “Fine. I'm just gonna make her slowly go bald instead.” She pouted. “Less fun I think.” Ford smiled and reached out a large hand to ruffle her hair. “Thank you.” She squealed and nuzzled his palm. “Sure, whatever~” she laughed.

“I'm hungry~” Zach announced. Diego whined as he held his stomach. “Hungwy…” the twins and Diego all held their stomachs and droned “Hungwy~” immediately after that, Mabel joined them. “It’s amazing how much they’re like you.” Carla commented, looking at the Pines brothers. Stan, who had his shirt wet because Seb suddenly came up behind him and shouted “Blergh! It’s me!”, and threw a water balloon at him, grabbed her by the waist. “We Pines are too awesome for you to understand, that's all. It's not your fault.” He shrugged.

“Can we go eat somewhere~?” Zoe pleaded, spitting her wet hair from her mouth. Then her eyes widened, “WcDonalds!” She shouted. The toddlers started chanting around their parents and everyone laughed. Dipper grabbed Mabel before she joined them. “That’s their turn now, sis. It’s their turn to be the adorable ones.” Dipper said solemnly. Mabel gave him a dead stare. “I have lost my adorability card. Who even AM I anymore!?” She flung herself onto Dipper dramatically. “I DON'T EVEN KNOW WHO I AAAAAAM!!!!”

“Alright! Alright!” Seb was the first to give up. He just couldn’t resist it when they looked up at him with their large eyes and wobbling lips. Besides, a family lunch sounded fun! “But we need to get changed first.” He pointed out. Miz flicked her fingers and everyone’s clothes were dried. “I want WcDonalds, Sebastian Pines! I don’t have time for you all to change!” She ran up to pull at his hand. “I haven’t had a real human fast food experience in eons!”

“You’d be caught dead if you tried to go in one of those. Like, literally, the fast food places carve you up and serve you.” Miz pouted. “Awful service really.”

“Space sounds like a messed up place.” Wanda commented dryly. “I vote we stay here on Earth with our normal fast food that probably doesn't contain human flesh.” Miz hummed. “I always wondered what humans taste like…”

“Me too!” Zoe said as everyone took a step back. Seb couldn’t say he hadn’t thought about it too, but he kept quiet about that. “Zach and I saw a movie we shouldn’t have seen and a mean man bit another man and he huwt him because blood started coming out.” Zoe said bluntly. “That was supposed to be secret!” Zach whined and threw fire at her. It was just to startle her because it wouldn’t hurt her. “Hey, hey! Don’t fight with fire or no WcDonalds for you!” Wanda scolded. “And no TV for a week, thanks for being sincere. You owe me 10 bucks, dear, I told you that DVD was left out for a reason.” Seb grinned at his wife.

“How are we going there? Walking?” Dillon grimaced. Stan laughed. “We’ve got a bunch of cars between the lot of us.”

“I can walk. Better yet, I can teleport us there.” Miz spoke up quickly. “Yes!” All the cousins exclaimed, excited, but Seb’s eye widened. “Wait, Miz! Wait!” Before he could do anything, the girl grinned and they already left the park. Seb gagged when they appeared in an alleyway. Miz wasn’t dumb, she wouldn’t make 16 people pop up in the middle of the restaurant. The adults cursed under their breaths, the teens groaned and the toddlers whimpered and clung to their parents’ legs.

“That was not fun…” Zoe pouted. Miz rolled her eyes. Weak humans. “Molecular transport takes some getting used to.” She shrugged. Wormholes would be less disorienting but required her to fold reality, which used more energy to do. “It’ll be less uncomfortable next time since your atoms would be more used to it.” Dipper groaned. “Even time travel didn't feel that bad.” Miz pulled on Ford's hand. “Come on~” she dragged him over to the door. “I want a Big Whack! And a fish fillet! And chicken nuggets! And fries!”

“Am I supposed to pay for you?” Ford asked wryly as he followed her into the restaurant. It was decently busy but not too much. There was a large play area to the side where a couple of other children were already running around. “Well I can't exactly give them GOLD now can I?” Miz whined. Stupid paper money system. Why did people have to stop accepting precious metals as currency anyway? Oh right, paper was easier to carry around. Ford nodded. That was fair. Miz leaned against him. “I can pay you back in gold or whatever other material you want later.”

“...well I HAVE been meaning to get some Uranium for my experiments…” Ford mused.

“You better not be building a nuclear reactor in your workshop~” Miz teased. Ford scoffed. “I have a good team back there...and at least Uranium is relatively harmless when handled properly.” Though… if all the safety protocols were in place, he could build a small nuclear reactor...

“That's good, wouldn't want more nuclear waste ending up in Gravity Falls’ water supply…” Miz rolled her eyes. “They’re fucked enough as is.” Ford blinked as he thought about that. Okay, yeah, probably a bad idea then. “Quite.”

The two made it to the counter as the rest of their group came in, the kids screaming for a Chipper Meal. The woman at the register, who looked quite tired even this early in the afternoon, managed a polite smile. “Hi. Welcome to WcDonalds, where we put the Whack in your snack.”

“Right. Yes. I would like a Big Whack, large fries, chicken nuggets...ah... the 30 pieces one...” (Miz probably wanted the largest amount.) Ford looked at the menu. He didn't eat at such establishments often and didn't know what they had. “A coffee.” He said at last. Miz poked him in the ribs and he squeaked. “You need more food than that! I know you’re actually a little hungry.” He just didn’t know what food was here and was too awkward to stand there and stare at the menu in silence as he read through it. Luckily for him, she knew what he would like. One of the perks of being a mind-reader. She turned to the cashier and smiled kindly. “A fish sandwich and a WcChicken also. And some barbeque sauce please.”

“Is that it?” The girl asked. Miz looked over at the drink machine. “A cup for water.” She grinned. The woman nodded and tapped a few buttons. “That'll be $22.45” she said. Ford was amazed how cheap that was for 3 sandwiches, nuggets, fries and a coffee. Of course, this was the reason people ate at such establishments. Cheap and quick. He pulled out exact change (because he was the type who did that) and handed the women his money.

She printed out a receipt, something Ford found useless, what was he going to do? Return the food? But he took it with a polite nod and Miz waved at the woman “Thank you very much ma'am! Have a nice day!” The cashier smiled a bit brighter as she waved back. Ford looked down at Miz while they stepped over to the waiting area where a few people were waiting already. “That was...kind of you.” He was a little surprised at it. Miz shrugged. “I've worked at a dine and dash restaurant. I know how much it sucks. So I want to try and be nice if I can.”

Ford found himself smiling. “I didn't realize you worked before?” He tried to imagine Bill Cipher manning a cash register and nearly choked. It was too ridiculous to think about. Miz nodded, not seeing the hysterical look on Ford's face as she stared into the kitchen behind the counter. “I worked multiple jobs. Not all of them as Bill of course. But I wanted to earn actual money I could use. You know the Federation only accepts Credits. I got sick of pawning off metals and gemstones for money.” Hooray for alternative income.

“That's surprisingly considerate of you.” Ford was amazed all over again just how different this Bill Cipher was from his own despite their similar personalities. While Ford and Miz waited for their food, his triplets and younger brother all leaned on the counter as their wives took the toddlers to wash their hands.

“Hi! We want food!” Stan smiled at the woman behind the counter. She frowned and leaned a bit to search for the man. Didn’t she just take this man’s order? “Um, weren’t you just here with your daughter, sir?” she asked politely. Shermie and Seb started laughing loudly and Stanley grinned widely. “Yeah...that was our brother, we’re triplets.” he pointed at Seb who waved with a ‘Whattup’ “And even add Shermie if you want, we look kind of similar too.”

“But yeah, you could say he was her ‘Daddy!’” Shermie whispered to Seb and he nearly fell to the floor laughing hysterically. The woman smiled, confused but amused by the men’s antics. “What can I get for you?” Stan ordered his part, Shermie did his and finally Seb. They paid and went to stand up behind Ford with huge grins. Seb noticed Miz was holding hands with Ford, her small fingers intertwined with his own, one finger between each of his. Seb wanted to squeal at how cute it looked.
Then he remembered what Shermie said seconds ago and the cute moment was ruined for him. He gave Shermie a light slap. The man protested but saw the angry pout on his older brother's face and laughed. The three men quietly snuck up behind Ford so they could eavesdrop on their conversation. “-nd I got fired because I was sassing the customers. I couldn't help myself you know? I don't have a filter and when I get grumpy I let everyone know.” Miz was complaining. “It WAS quite rude of them to fire you over text message. No warning or anything?” Ford gasped.

“Naw. They just texted me ‘You don't have to come in tomorrow’ and that was it.” She sighed. “I know it was my fault for being rude to people but...they weren't even paying me all that much so I guess I don't really give a fuck in the end.” She pouted. “I do miss the free tea though. That was the best perk of the job.”

The brothers pouted. This wasn’t something interesting they could use against Ford later…But on the good side, who knew Bill Cipher had a job? A job besides being a demon god at least. Did that even count as job?

Finally the food arrived and after taking the trays, Wanda asked, “Did everyone wash their hands?” Miz rolled her eyes. “I cleaned you all during the teleport.” She shuddered. “I hate getting dirt on me.” Stan laughed. “Really now?”

“It gets between my bricks and feels so gross. At least if it was salt I can just rinse it off in the shower. But dirt and sand just feels gross.” He nodded slowly. He had never thought of how Bill’s triangular body worked. Well, he did, he was always thinking and theorizing, but he never thought of asking his “muse”, fearing he could offend Bill and he would leave. Maybe...Miz would let him see? Brightening up at the thought, he let Miz steal some fries as he took the tray to the table.

“You’re going to eat all that?” Carla laughed when Miz sat and opened two of the sandwiches. “I like food!” The demon said simply. She took a bite of the Big Whack and moaned. Burger! Real cow flesh! Space Boof tasted similar enough but it really wasn't the same. The taste was nostalgic.

“Dad I want to take the tray!” Diego made grabby motions with his hands and Stan grimaced. “I got this.” Seb whispered to him and nodded, telling him to give Diego the tray as he was giving his twins one for each one to take. The toddlers grabbed the trays and took them to the table proudly, with Seb keeping them still and floating so it wouldn’t be too heavy for them. He winked at Wanda when she saw it. She rolled her eyes fondly. The kids slid the trays onto the table and cheered, climbing into the chairs and going for the fries immediately.

They let them, as long as they eat the hamburger too there was no problem. The Pines joked and laughed as they had lunch. Miz told them about the less perturbing fun adventures she had and the weird deals some people called her for. Ford and Stan told them a bit about space and the other dimensions they’d been to, something they didn't do much. Everyone listened and paid attention, even the kids. They were really close, and they wished they could be like this every day, see their niblings and brothers everyday.

It was Dillon who brought it up first, staring at Miz when she finished her own food and began snatching bits from other people's trays. “Where is all of that going?” Miz paused with her cheeks bulging as she shoved an entire chicken nugget in her mouth. She flushed. “M-my thighs…and my belly… if I need to store energy that I can't contain within my Self.” She admitted in embarrassment. Stan snorted. “Is that why you're so bottom heavy?” Clara smacked his arm with an indignant “Stan!” while Miz buried her face in her hands and whined. “I burn it off! I do!” Miz wiggled in her seat. “And it's not my fault my bottom gets wider when I grow larger! I'm an equilateral triangle!” Seb couldn’t help but laugh and he was equally smacked on his arm by his wife. “Don’t be mean!”

“Well, at least I can grow taller, unlike SOMEONE!” Miz sipped her lemonade (ask for cup of water, put NOT water in it! Mwahahaha! Truly she was the epitome of evil!) as everyone lost their shit at the incredibly sick burn. Seb huffed. No fair that he didn’t have shapeshifting powers like Miz. How did she do that anyway? “Well, you’re still pudgy.” Seb pouted. “I’m fluffy!!” Miz protested.

“But you're not a triangle?” Zach was quite confused. Miz sighed. “I have multiple different forms. I'm currently a dragon but my main form is a triangle.” She pressed a hand to her leg and wondered at how unfair it was that her humanoid forms were capable of gaining weight if she stayed in them too long and ran out of room in her personal Capacity. At least she could literally burn it off by throwing around her powers and using up all the stored energy. It was still embarrassing. Luckily she always returned to her base form if she shapeshifted back and forth. Though that might have been from the energy loss. Note to self, test that out.

"I wanna see your triangle form!” Zoe bounced in her seat. Miz giggled. "Maybe later, some other time."

Of course the problem of getting back to the house came up (no one wanted to risk teleportation while on a full stomach.) They picked up the children and carried them as they walked back to Sebastian and Wanda's house. It was far but it wasn't too far. Seb held Zoe while Wanda carried Zach. Stan was holding Diego while Ford found himself carrying Miz. ("Pick me up, mortal!"). There was light conversation but for the most part the walk home was quiet. Everyone was tired after eating, so close to slipping into food comas.

They finally made it home and, more tired than expected, they all settled down for a midday nap. That walk under the spring sun was exhausting. They all collapsed in the living room, cuddling with their children. Ford was still holding Miz. He was running his fingers through her hair as she purred. She had demanded he keep up his side of the Deal, to which Ford complied with a fond chuckle. Seb sat beside Ford and reached to pet her too. “This is the best happy ending.” Miz murmured. “You did good Seb.”

Looking at her and knowing what she’d been bottling up inside for the past few weeks, Seb said. “I know you’ll find it too. Your own happy ending.” Miz pressed her head against Seb’s chest. “I hope so.” She drifted off to sleep while wondering if some thing like her even deserved a happy ending.

Unsurprisingly, it was Mabel who woke first. The sun had set and everyone else was still asleep. She looked around blearily until she remembered what happened. Right. They all played and ate and passed out. Mabel carefully got up from the people pile (most of them were slumped over the sofas but a couple had gone to their rooms in the magic guest wing of the house) so Mabel clearly saw Ford, Seb and Miz curled around each other.

She silently squealed and pulled out her phone for a picture. The sun may be going down but there were many faint night lights around the house (Seb had a habit of waking up in the middle of the night and after nearly falling down the stairs once, Wanda had them installed) that gave her enough light to get a cute photo. She cursed when she realized her phone wasn't on silent and the distinct click of the camera rang out in the silence of the room, loud from it's suddenness.

Ford was the first to stir and open his eyes, narrowing them as he looked around for the source of the noise. Mabel grinned sheepishly. “Hello, uncle Ford.” She greeted. “Hello…” He yawned and, still tired, unconsciously snuggled closer to his human sized pillows. Mabel cooed. “Just continue sleeping, you big owl…” She planted a kiss on his cheek and went to her room. Ford obeyed and closed his eyes again.

When the parents of the toddlers woke up that evening, the first thing they realized was that sleeping on the couch wasn’t really fun anymore. The second thing was that they never gave dinner to their toddlers and they will be demanding food sometime soon.

Carla and Wanda snuck out to the kitchen to start working on dinner only to stop when they found the Pines Triplets already working. “Sixer stop trying to help you suck at this!” Stan laughed while Ford scoffed. “I am perfectly capable of preparing a meal! I lived on my own for quite some time.”

“Yeah but even if YOU can somehow survive on coffee, our kids need real nutrients.” Sebastian stirred the pancake batter. Ford pouted. “I can make more than coffee! I can make eggs and...toast! And pasta!” Stan scoffed. “You’ve already burned two eggs, just let us handle this. We’re professionals!” Never mind the fact that they were making breakfast food for dinner. Fuck food rules!

“No you’re not.” Ford protested. “You went to college for business and-”

“Why do you always assume we need a degree to be good at something? I thought you got over that.” Stan teased. Ford flushed. “Well I do admit you can be quite skilled in a field even without a degree, but that doesn’t make you a professional.”

“You’re a professional.” Seb laughed. “A professional buzz kill~” The two younger triplets laughed while Ford sputtered and crossed his arms. “Well fine, I guess you don’t deserve my help with dinner!” Wanda and Carla watched them discuss back and forth. It was so funny to watch. “Oh no, Stan, we lost the company of Stanford Pines! What should we do!” Sebastian cried. “Maybe we can cook faster?” Stan sniggered.

Ford huffed, offended, and turned to leave, but found his two sisters-in-law watching them with their arms crossed. “Oh...good evening.” He straightened and gave them what he hoped was a polite smile. Wanda and Carla laughed at his awkward face as Wanda walked inside. “Don’t worry, handsome, I still think you make pretty great coffee.” She joked and patted Ford’s cheek before moving to kiss Sebas. The younger man pulled her closer to him, holding her by the waist while glaring at Ford. When they pulled apart, Wanda laughed. “You don’t mind if I call him that, do you?” She pouted teasingly. “Of course I mind, I’m MUCH more handsome than Sixer.” Seb pouted.

“You’re triplets.” Carla laughed as she went up to kiss her own husband. Stan rubbed his nose against hers. “Morning, most handsome~” Carla laughed as she gave Stan a little squeeze. “I thought that we were triplets?” Seb raised an eyebrow. “Yeah, but my Stanny is better.” Carla grinned. Wanda pushed up her sleeves. “Oh you wanna fight for the title, McCorkle?”

Stan and Seb beamed at the thought of their wives fighting for them.

“We literally can’t look any more handsome than the other scientifically speaking if we are identical triplets…” Ford mumbled, confused. Was it what couples usually did? Acting all sweet and fighting for their partners? Stan and Seb looked over at Ford and frowned. “Too bad Miz is still asleep. I would have liked to see her get in on this too.” Stan sighed. “That would make it a three way battle for which of us is the most handsome.”

Ford scratched his head. “I suppose...but why Miz specifically? I mean, Carla is clearly going to choose Stanley and Wanda chooses Sebastian, are you hoping for Miz to be the tie breaker?” His brothers rolled their eyes so much they disappeared behind their eyelids. Someone help this poor, naive, stupid man! “Ford...” Seb whined. “Why are you so dumb?”

“I am not dumb!” Ford glared. “I have 12 PhDs.” He stated proudly, even after all this time he couldn’t help bragging. His brothers both rolled their eyes. “I feel...kinda bad for Miz now.” Stan muttered. Seb shook his head “I don’t know what she sees in him.” The two turned to each other and said in unison “Probably the great sex.” unfortunately, Ford didn’t hear them, going back to check the coffee machine.

Ford just comforted himself with passing them whatever stuff they needed as they worked on making breakfast-dinner. Their wives (the beautiful rays of sunshine that they were) said they would wake up the rest of the house so the triplets were alone once again as the women left the kitchen. Seb pouted when he remembered how Wanda called Ford handsome. “Do you think they would recognize us if we dressed the same?” Stan rubbed his chin. “Worth a shot. We can all change our clothes and see if there’s any difference?” He looked down at his clothes. “No offense Seb, I don’t think your clothes would fit us.” Sebastian scoffed and held out his hand. “Deal to make our clothes all look the same for the next half hour?”

“And what do I get in return?” Stan narrowed his eyes at the youngest triplet. “What else do you want besides my unconditional love, you ungrateful sack of flesh?” Seb pretended to growl. Stan snickered and shook his hand. “Deal.” The blue flame flashed out and the three of them found themselves all dressed in a trenchcoat, a sweater that covered their chins and dark glasses. Stan pulled at his sweater. “Do we really need to cover our chins?”

“Yes.” Seb folded his arms over his chest. They all had gloves on as well. Stan shrugged. “Fair enough.” Ford sighed. “I don’t see the point of this but it IS an interesting experiment.” To their surprise, the first person to walk into the kitchen was Miz. She was yawning as she rubbed her eyes and the men immediately went quiet, waiting for her to notice. Miz blinked and stared at them. She blinked again, a confused look on her face. She rubbed her eyes and squinted at them, thoroughly perplexed. “Huh?” Stan and Seb barely managed to hold in their laughter as Miz continued to look back and forth at them with a cute, lost expression. “Eh?!” She cried. Wanda and Carla came in at that point and stopped dead in their tracks. Stan put his hands behind his back and coughed a bit. Preparing for the show. “Eh, good evening, Miz.” They could imitate each other’s voices almost perfectly. This was going to be so fun! Miz turned to Stan. “Fordsie?” she asked.

“Clearly.” Stan sighed. “My brothers wanted to try an experiment to see if Carla and Wanda could recognize them, but I am clearly not participating in their games.” Carla rolled her eyes. “Really Stan? I can tell it’s you.” She walked up to Stan and pulled his glasses off to kiss his nose. “I’m your wife. You think I can’t tell?” Stan laughed. “Well you got me, but can Wanda find Seb?”

Miz was staring at Stan in shock. “....not Fordsie?” she asked. She looked at the remaining two men. Ford and Seb remained silent, not risking their speech giving them away. even if they could do perfect impressions of each other, that was clearly not enough since Stan was found out immediately. As Miz continued to look between the two of them with growing agitation, Wanda laughed and walked over to Seb, easily picking him out and giving him a kiss on the nose as well. “I admit it threw me off for a second, but I’d know you anywhere.”

“Clearly because I’m the most handsome right?” Seb coo’ed at her. “If you hadn’t chosen me I would have cried forever.” Wanda rolled her eyes. “You need to stand up straight, remember what I’ve been telling you? Ford has a perfect posture.”

Miz turned to the remaining man. “...Ford?” she asked, looking so unsure of herself that Ford sighed and pulled his glasses off. “Well this was an interesting experiment.” He pulled out his journal. “Miz, you...really couldn’t tell which one of us was which, could you?” he asked her with a firm expression. Miz looked down, ashamed. “....no…” Ford nodded and took off his gloves to write down this observation. “Is this something all Bills have trouble with? Telling us apart?” He wondered aloud. Miz flinched. “...I'm sorry…”

“No, I wasn't blaming you. This is very interesting to know.” Ford jotted down more notes. “Tell me, how do you normally tell us apart?” Miz looked up at him before fiddling with her dress and shrugging. “Like...your colors...and your outline…”

“What is that supposed to mean?” Stan frowned. “That doesn't make any sense.” The others were now watching the proceeding, not quite interrogation, with interest. Ford pointed at Wanda “Miz, can you describe Wanda for me?”

“Um...she's got yellowish hair that goes 'shoop' down like that and green eyes...and she's female.” Miz replied. Wanda raised an eyebrow. What sort of description was that? Ford nodded and pointed at Carla. “And her?”

“She's got brown hair that goes ‘floof and boing’ and it's really long.” Miz made hand motions that looked like she was drawing Carla's hair. Now the other people in the room were frowning as they listened. Ford scribbled some more stuff down. “Now describe me and my brothers.”

“Ah…” Miz looked over at the other two. “Well Seb used to be half yellow but he's only brown now. And he has an eyepatch. Stan is bigger and doesn't have an eyepatch. And you...have glasses and the funny chin.” Miz concluded.

“Please describe our faces.” Ford asked. Miz looked stumped. “You've got two eyes, a nose and a mouth.”

“But what do they look like.” Ford stressed. Miz struggled a little “Your nose is a slightly darker color? You have fluffy eyebrows. Your chin is kinda squarish?” She was beginning to look distressed. “I'm sorry.” She hung her head and sniffled. Ford pet her head. “It's ok. I'm not mad. I don't think this is your fault.”

“Ford? What the fuck is going on?” Stan asked. The eldest brother sighed. “This Bill came from a society of shapes and colors. Her species probably evolved to see things by their shapes, their 'outlines' as it were.” he looked at her distressed expression. “We humans, evolved to see faces, specifically, human faces. We're so good at it that our brains will even mistakenly believe we see faces in places where there are none, like weirdly shaped rocks or shadows.” Seb snorted something along the lines of “Rock that looks like a face, rock.”

Ford looked at Miz who seemed quite upset. “This is an ability that I'm certain Bill's species doesn't have.” He ran a hand through his hair. “Which amazes me that he's capable of creating a human form so detailed.” Ford stared at Miz with narrowed eyes. “That form you're wearing. You copied it off someone didn't you?”

Miz's eyes went wide and she looked away. “I'm sorry…” She repeated. Ford shook his head. “I'm not mad. I just want to confirm my hypothesis. You mentioned that you only have a couple of human forms that you can swap between. Is this because creating a human form with a unique appearance is difficult for you?”
Slowly, Miz nodded. It had taken her a lot of tweaking to get Xin's body right. She had to physically put her hands on the construct to mold and shape it. Imagining the face in her head didn't work all that well. Even Jan-Jan's form had been based on/inspired by multiple fan art she remembered seeing from back when she was human. William's form had taken a lot of work too. And Miz's form...was simply what she remembered herself to be. This form was a copy. Taken straight from her memories. Splotchy and blurred as they were. Ford wrote down this confirmation.

“Miz, or rather, Bill Cipher, is face blind.” Ford said simply. “Of course, this doesn’t mean she can't learn to tell humans apart, but it seems she has no natural ability to discern the details of a human face and must use context clues to know who people are.” He laughed “How fascinating. But this also means Miz will not be able to accurately tell us which of us is the handsomest. Even if she’s capable of telling most humans apart and judging their appearances, triplets like us or any other humans who are similar looking will be all but impossible for her to tell apart.”

Seb frowned. “But...I don't have any problem with that?”

“You're human.” Ford told Seb. “Your body is human and so is your brain. Miz however, ISN'T human. Even if she can make herself look like one.” Seb hummed, curious. Still as Bill, he could recognize a human face, he remembered seeing those guards when he was arrested...Although he hadn’t known what they were and that memory is filled with a tremendous sense of confusion. He was pretty sure being face blind wasn’t a Bill Cipher thing, so much as it was a Miz thing. He pointed that out and Ford only looked more interested. "So perhaps Miz's dimension of Shapes were built biologically different, or yours was. I would have to meet with more Bills in other dimensions to know for sure."

Ford petted the girl's hair when she still appeared distressed by this subject. “I'm sorry...I can try harder?” She apologized again. “The fact that you can tell us apart normally is fine. You're doing very well. You have nothing to be sorry for.” Ford assured her. “Actually I find this all quite fascinating.”

“...I can still tell handsomeness apart you know?” Miz mumbled. The men all laughed. “Ok. Tie breaker. Which triplet is the handsomest?” Seb asked as he stood up straight and gave her a charming smirk. “Seb.” Miz grinned. “2nd is Ford and then Stan.”

“Hah! I win!” Wanda cheered while Stan gasped dramatically. “Yeah well, your vote doesn't count anyway.” Carla kissed her husband. “It's alright, Stanny. I know I've got the cutest one.” Wanda looked at Seb and shook her head with a pout. Nope. She wasn’t right. She didn’t know what she was talking about. Sebastian laughed and sat Wanda on the kitchen’s isle to give her a kiss on her lips. “I’m the luckiest one too.” He whispered to her.

Stan narrowed his eyes and picked up Carla as well. The woman yelped, startled. “I can do push-ups with my wife on my back! I don’t need a table.” He taunted. Ford rolled his eyes. Couples. He was glad he wasn’t like them and didn’t do their ridiculous ritual of showing their affection. Miz sat down next to Ford. “Fordsie, are you upset that I said you aren't the most handsome?” Ford laughed. “I am not upset, Miz. Don’t worry. I don’t really care about that.”

Ford patted her head with a smile. “Alright, thank you.”

Shermie entered the kitchen, talking on the phone and with Mabel on his back, still sleepy. “Yes, Abi we are fine, yes the twins are happy and we miss you so, so, so much!” He cooed as his older brothers watched him. “Yes, we will be arriving home tomorrow, honey...Dipper asked if you could buy him pens...yes, he bit through the ones he brought here...ok, sweetie, love ya.” He hung up while his brothers and sisters-in-law all said “Aaaww!”

“The little baby lovebirds!” Seb grinned. “Urgh, don’t bother me. You’re just as bad.” Shermie pushed Seb gently. He glanced around. “Why’re you all wearing the same clothes?”

“We had an experiment to see if Carla and Wanda could recognize us even while we looked the same.” Seb explained and Stan laughed. “YOU wouldn’t be able to tell us apart though.”

“What?! Of course I could! I was a kid when you all dressed up the same to try to confuse me!” Shermie protested. “Ok, turn around then.” Wanda instructed. Shermie groaned but obeyed. The triplets put on their disguises and Carla told Shermie he could turn around now. “Fuck...why are you even the same height now?” The younger man mumbled. He really sucked at this. He looked at their hands. Gloves. His mortal enemy. He looked at one of them and pointed. “You are definitely Sebastian.”

Seb laughed. “Aaaww, you can recognize your favorite brother!”

“And I could see the eyepatch.” Shermie confessed sheepishly. Mabel was still clinging to his back, stirring slightly. “Alright you two...” Shermie looked between the remaining two. “Stan...ley?”

The rest of the family filed in. Miz had left without them noticing and came back in as Xin with the twins. He had them tucked under each arm and they giggled as he swung them back and forth. “Come on gremlins, everyone's gonna be leaving after dinner so make sure you say bye to them.”

“No...” they didn't want their cousins to leave. They wished everyone could live nearby. Xin handed the kids to their parents before flicking more food into existence to feed the large, hungry family. Mabel was gently placed on a chair. “I am getting too old to carry you like that, sweetie.” Shermie apologized when Mabel pouted. “Old he says...” Stan rolled his eyes. The guy was just in his 30’s, what was he complaining about? They lost their better years being trapped in the portal or working on said portal. Stan couldn't believe he was already in his 40s. Where had all the years went?

As they set the table, Dillon, carrying Diego, and Dipper came in, yawning. “I passed out on the couch and now I’m dying.” Dillon groaned. “Hi Mommy! Hi Daddy!” Diego waved at his parents. Dipper waved at everyone as well. “Can’t you stay a little longer?” Zoe asked as she climbed into her chair. “I want you to be here with us forever!” Mabel ruffled her hair “That would be awesome but we have school and jobs. I know first hand that wishing for something to last forever is a bad idea...”

“Why would it be bad to wish that my family is always with me?” Zoe insisted.

Xin grinned “Because you might get trapped in a bubble with caricatures of your friends and family who ride skateboards and dab after every sentence...” Dipper shuddered violently. “Ugh, I hated that guy...I hated him so much!” the memory of Dippy Fresh still haunted him. Those stupid glasses, that obnoxious voice...

“You broke his neck.” Mabel commented lightly as she took a bite of her toast. Shermie stared at that information. “I’ll just ignore that, I guess.” Shermie nodded as he poured himself coffee. “Yup. Ignore the fact that my son apparently murdered someone…”

“He was a nightmare figment of Mabel's imagination.” Dipper groaned. “Not human, not even alive. But 100% evil.”

“Besides, you’ll get to see your cousins again soon, kids.” Wanda handed them with glasses of milk. “Dad’s birthday is next and it’s your Uncles Stan's turn to host it.”

Stan smiled. “Right! We can even go to a trip to New Jersey to show ya the beach we went to as kids!” The cousins smiled in excitement. That sounded nice! At least one summer to relax and take it easy before they go back to school and in the toddlers’ case, start kindergarten. “It'll be weird not spending summer in Gravity Falls.” Dipper admitted. Ford laughed “There was weirdness in Jersey too. You'll find things to do.”

“Plus, Ma tells me the boardwalk has new shops and attractions.” Stan pointed out. He smiled. “Remember when we hunted the Jersey Devil?”

“That thing almost killed us. Good times.” Seb laughed.

The family chatted and laughed for a little more before dinner was over. Zoe and Zach watched sadly as their family’s bags were brought to the front door. They knew they would see each other soon, but they didn’t like waiting. Diego didn’t seem too eager to leave either and clung to Seb’s leg as Stan tried to pull him away. The kid was strong as hell! “No! One more day!” He pleaded. Seb and his family, Xin included, stood by the door to wave at their family’s cars. Mabel waved excitedly as Dipper put on his earphones and smiled at them, sitting on the passenger seat next to his dad. Diego was shouting, and Dillon was laughing. Finally, when the two cars were gone, Ford walked towards his car as well.

“Well, I'm off to my research.” He grinned. Xin pouted. “Can I pop by to visit you for another session?”

“Of course. We have a Deal don't we?”

Seb and Wanda were both blushing heavily. How could they talk so openly about that? Xin grinned and gave Ford a quick hug before he got in his car. “I'll be seeing you tonight then~” Xin giggled.

“See you in the summer, Sixer!” Seb smiled and his brother returned it. “See you in summer.” He nodded. The five of them sighed when Ford’s car disappeared. “Well, that was a fun weekend…” Seb said lightly as he closed the door and the twins ran inside. He sat down on the couch with Wanda and Miz (Xin having shrunk back into his other form) happily climbed between the two of them. It didn’t take long for the twins to come back screaming.

“Sir Bedazzle’s not hewe! He’s gone!” They cried. Seb took a deep breath, closed his eye to search for the acorn and then nodded. “Ok…” He pulled out his phone and dialed someone.

He sighed. “Can't believe Shooting Star tried to steal our pet.” Miz leaned against him and giggled.
“Can’t you really?” She teased. Seb coughed “No, this is definitely something she would do.” Minutes later, the bell rang and Dipper was standing behind the door with the happy creature wiggling in his hands. “I can’t believe you, Mabel!” He shouted at the girl in the car who was being sternly scolded by Shermie. “Hey, so, here’s Sir Bedazzle.” The boy laughed sheepishly. “She was hiding him in her backpack.”

“Sir Bedazzle!” Zoe and Zach cried as they ran up to take their pet back. The Acorn-puppy barked and licked them as soon as he was back in their hands. The twins hugged him close. “Don’t let people kidnap you again!” Zoe scolded. Sir Bedazzle just gave her a cheerful, clueless look and barked.

Seb patted his nephew’s shoulder and nodded. “Thanks, Pinetree, now go.”

“Sorry, man…” Dipper apologized on Mabel’s behalf and trotted back to the car. Mabel was pouting angrily. Now this time, for real, Shermie and his kids left. Without taking anything from the house.

The couple (and Miz), again collapsed in the living room. A long, weird weekend, but fun. Just like Pines were used to. Miz snuggled on Sebastian's lap. “Pet me?” She asked. He laughed and ran his fingers through her hair. She purred quietly. Wanda watched them and sighed. “I can never tell what I should feel here.”

“What do you mean?” Seb asked.

“Miz...is like a daughter. An older sister to our children, a younger sister to you and part of me feels like she really is another child. But she’s older than our planet and can be an adult sometimes. So I don't know how to feel.”

Seb leaned on her shoulder as he continued to pet the purring girl. “Don’t think too much about it, love...nothing will make much sense when it comes to Bill Cipher…” He kissed her pouting lips. “You just need to know she likes you a lot, like, I bet she would be growling at you if she didn’t, and she’s my friend, my soul sister, a crazy demon that likes head pats and loves taking care of us and the children...as long as you continue pampering her when she wants, she won’t mind what you think of her as.”

Wanda really didn't understand. But she supposed it was simply how things were when you marry a magical former-All powerful demon and currently have his demon sister living with you. She brushed Miz's hair as well. “It's just weird to think of Miz as my daughter...and knowing she's in a relationship with my husband's brother...as an adult man.”

Seb laughed at how stupidly hilarious that sounded. “Well...you are right, I can’t argue with that...but you aren’t very different” Miz (half dozing off) grabbed his hand when he stopped patting her to let him know he shouldn’t stop. “Your poor mom would faint if she knew you have...demon powers…”

“Do you think she would mind if she knew you have...demon powers…”

Seb closed his eyes and sighed contently, glad he was actually alive to be with them today, glad the Axolotl didn’t actually let him die when he tried ending it. “Just don’t think about it... just freeze your brain...” He sang softly, remembering the musical they illegally watched on MeTube and the woman laughed. “Dork…”

Wanda closed her eyes and relaxed, enjoying the warmth of her husband’s embrace and Miz who acted like a little radiator. They all jumped when the sprinklers turned on and soaked them as the twins screamed "’She/He did it!!’"

Miz helped tuck the kids in that night after a story about one of the adventures she had with her friends. The kids loved hearing about the chaos they got up to. Miz kissed them both on the forehead and left the room. Sometimes she shared a bed with one of them and sometimes she slipped in with Seb and Wanda. They asked her if she wanted her own room but Miz just couldn’t stand sleeping in a room alone. Tonight however, she was going to visit Ford. She sighed as she wondered what they would do in their session tonight. She said her good nights to Seb and Wanda before dispersing her physical body and flying through the Mindscape towards where she could feel Ford was. She worried a little about whether he remembered.

Ford reached Gravity Falls a few hours ago and marched from the Shack towards a door that led to his research center. It was late in the night, but his scientists, just like him, were masochists and liked to stay awake long into the night while researching. With his trusty coffee mug in hand, he swept through the hallways. “Dr. Pines.” A woman, with her third cup of coffee in hand, saluted him as she walked past. Ford gave her a polite nod. “Dr. Curie.” they exchanged no other words, both being in a rush to get back to their projects. He entered his personal workspace, a large lab with a sturdy desk, multiple computers and plenty of half-finished projects littering the lab benches. He took a sip of his coffee and picked up a clipboard to check on what needed his attention first.

Ford jumped and nearly spilled his coffee. He turned to see Xin leaning over one of the lab benches, examining the prototype solar engine he was working on. If he got it working they could make solar powered cars without having to manufacture new cars, simply attach the panels to the roof and it would convert the energy over into any electric car. It would help cut down the CO2 emissions and make it so petroleum would no longer be so necessary. Frankly, he had all the knowledge and technology needed to make such a thing but the oil companies weren’t very happy with the idea of solar powered cars cutting off their profit and were doing their best to cut his funding or otherwise impede his progress. Also, while Ford’s engine worked, it didn’t have a good enough battery storage yet to power a car for more than 8 hours before it used up all it’s storage. Perfectly fine when it was sunny out, but it would be next to useless otherwise.

He stared at Xin for a few seconds before he remembered he HAD in fact, invited the man over this night for another session. He sighed. “Right, I forgot.”

“What’s with this container? You can’t use Alkaline batteries to hold solar energy. This is a solar panel right? They require a different kind of battery...you’d need Lithium for this.” Xin poked at the prototype. “Of course, Solariathian works better but I don’t think humans have discovered that particular substance yet…”

Ford felt his face light up as an epiphany hit him. He was friends with a NICE Bill Cipher. A brilliant, all-knowing Muse who would definitely know how to help him with his research.

Just like his Bill had been before the betrayal...

Ford shook his head. That Bill may have been using him the whole time...but...Ford didn’t like to admit this, not to anyone else and least of all to himself, but he had really admired his Bill. Speaking with him had been like a breath of fresh air after being trapped in a stagnant basement all his life. Finally he had found someone who GETS IT. Someone just as intelligent, no, more so, than he was and offered him so much insight into all sorts of technological advancements he’d never even considered.

Bill had truly been his muse, his inspiration, his GOD. Ford sometimes thought back to the time before he’d learned his Bill’s true nature. How much he had cherished every moment he had together with his muse. How much he looked forward to seeing Bill in his dreams so he could discuss all sorts of ideas he had for inventions and innovations that could change the world.

Bill Cipher was dead. Killed in order to save the world and Ford was glad for it. But a small part of him had despaired over losing him. His knowledge and insight that Ford craved even now. He never quite got over Bill. And now...he had Xin, a Bill Cipher from another dimension who was NICE and liked him and could probably be convinced to help him with his research. Like his Bill had promised to do.

Ford shook his head. He was getting ahead of himself. He was just...so overwhelmed at the idea that he could have this. Have Xin here with him as the Bill he’d always dreamed of having. The perfect Bill Cipher. Intelligent, kind, supportive...dear god he had longed for this. Ford took a deep breath and tried to compose himself. He had to remember that Xin wasn’t his Bill. There was no guarantee Xin would agree to helping him with his research. Ford tried not to get his hopes up.

Xin wagged his tail back and forth lazily, dressed in a simple cheongsam with a high slit along the sides to expose his shapely legs. He poked around at Ford’s research and found himself amazed all over again at the innovation of humanity. Ford had built a working Temporal Displacement device without any of the solid Helium microchips that Time Baby constructed his Time Tapes out of. Of course, Ford had labeled the device ‘Always fresh sandwich holder’ so Xin had a feeling Ford actually didn’t realize what he had built. Then again, that body switching Electron Carpet was amazing in ways that Ford never seemed to realize either...

Xin picked up another device, his scan showed it was a solid light projector. The settings weren’t fully stable so it would flicker out after a few seconds of being switched on but all it needed were a few crystals inserted inside the area in front of where the light emitted and it would be a working…

“You built a lightsaber ?!” Xin laughed as he flicked the cylindrical device on to see a pale white beam of light appear before it flickered out. He liked it. Ford even built a soundbox into the side that made the ‘PSSSRRR’ noise when it turned on.

“Eh...I was trying out a few things and a man was speaking about the latest movie he saw so…”

Xin was amazed by the man’s creations. He knew Fordsie’s talents went much further than the portal and Electron Carpet. Canon Ford would have changed his world if he hadn’t been trapped between dimensions, he hoped this Fordsie had the chance to do so. He seemed to be doing well for himself, his own lab, his own research facility with a bunch of other scientists...

Xin made a promise to himself to help his own Ford achieve such heights, no, MORE! He would help his own Ford be a man who changed his world. Ford sat down on his desk and watched Xin examine the artifact, his tail wagging excitedly. “I love this!” He finally declared. “You’re such a dork and I love it!” The man rubbed the back of his neck awkwardly, feeling his cheeks heating up at the praise. He loved praise dammit…

as an inventor as well.” Shermie helped out too. Ford was amazed, he had to admit that he never thought much of his youngest brother, Shermie was so much smaller and Ford just hadn’t CARED… but the youngest Pines brother was just as amazing and brilliant as the others, in his own way. After all, teenage father, made it through college and got himself a well paying programming job that allowed him to support his equally young wife and twin children… all before the age of 25...

Xin nodded, making a note of this. “Are you busy with anything right now? We can have our session another time?” he didn’t want to bother Ford while he was working. Ford considered what to say. On one hand, he wasn’t exactly busy, on the other, he didn’t want Xin to leave. Ford scratched his head and tried to think of a way to ask Xin for his help with the projects. “We can do a quick session? And then…if you want…if it’s not a bother, do you want to help me...can you help me look over some of my work and check for errors?”

Xin tilted his head before grinning. “Sure, no problem!” He looked around the lab. “Hm…you don’t have a bed or a sofa in here?” He wasn’t sure how it’d feel to do it on a hard metal table. Would it be uncomfortable? “We could go to the Shack, I don’t have a bed in my workshop.” That was silly. He barely slept anyway. “Or...we could go to the lounge? There is a small room with couches where people rest…sometimes. I bet it’s empty right now.”

Xin shrugged. “Alright. Are we going bare handed or do you want to try with some ropes?”

“It would be...interesting to see your reaction with ropes, but do you feel comfortable with that already?”

“I...don’t know?” Xin frowned. “What if we just tried tying my hands as a test? No other stuff yet, just seeing how comfortable I am with my hands bound?” Xin placed a subtle protection ward around himself, so even if he panicked, his power would get redirected out into space instead of hurting the people around him. It wasn’t a perfect solution since too much of that and there’d be a mysterious new planet popping into existence nearby-- but it was just a precaution.

“Alright.” Ford nodded. “Let me look for ropes and we can go.” He searched in some boxes, in his drawers, and eventually found some. He hoped it wouldn’t hurt Xin too much. “Ok, I got them, let’s go.” Xin watched Ford take off his white lab coat, leave it on his chair, and followed him through the hallways, retracting his tail and antlers as he went. As Ford said, there was a nice area in the center, away from the loud and noisy workplaces and laboratories, with couches, a small kitchen, a microwave and a TV. There were a few scientists who gave Xin weird looks as he followed after Ford, his bare legs occasionally peeking through the slits in his cheongsam. Heck, if Xin could get away with not wearing pants, he was gonna.

Xin sat down on the couch and looked at Ford. “Just tie my wrists together in front for now.” He held his hands out and Ford took them gently. He held Xin’s slender wrists and compared how dainty the dragon’s hands were compared to his own. He could encircle Xin’s wrists easily with one hand. “How tight do you want it?” He asked. Xin looked down at their hands. “Not tight, perhaps just loop the rope around?” Xin wiggled his fingers. “I don’t actually have much experience with tying knots physically. Just materializing them already in place...” Ford grinned. Well, here was something HE knew more about. “I know plenty. Back when my brothers and I were planning to sail around the world, we learned all sorts of sailor's knots.” He remembered one which was very secure but could still be undone easily with just a few twists. That should be good in case Xin started to panic and he had to get the rope off him quickly.

Xin’s eyes never left Ford’s hands, watching him through the whole process. Ford held Xin’s wrists together (with Xin trembling the whole time), commenting on how slender they were, and looped the rope around them. He tied a simple bowline knot. He made sure it wasn’t too tight and tugged it lightly. “How does that feel?”

Xin raised his hands up and twisted them, checking to see that he really couldn’t break out. His heartbeat picked up a little and he took a few breaths to calm himself. Ford was immediately petting his head. “Is it too much? Should I take it off?” He asked with worry. Xin whimpered a little but shook his head. “No. I-I’m fine...I can do this…” He breathed carefully for a while as Ford sat beside him, watching him closely for any signs of escalating panic.

After a minute or so, Xin calmed. He closed his eyes and breathed out carefully. “Ok. I think I’m good now.” He tugged at his hands again. It was firm but it wasn’t tight enough to cut off his circulation. That’s good. He sighed and leaned against Ford’s chest. “I hate how slowly we’re going.” He admitted. “Well the point is to get you comfortable with this. We need to take it slow. Bindings are a major point of fear for most people, it’s okay for you to feel apprehensive about it.” Ford assured him. Xin nodded “I still feel like a baby for getting worked up over just some rope.”

“Everyone has their own levels of comfort. You don’t need to force yourself.” Ford assured him. Xin hummed as he tugged on his hands again. “I think I prefer your hands. This is interesting but, ropes feel kinda impersonal. The texture is nothing like your skin.”

“Do you want me to take it off?” Ford reached for the end of the rope but Xin pulled his hands away. “Not yet. We haven’t even tried anything with this yet.”

Xin waved his bound hands up and down “Like, tugging, what if you were pulling at me?” Ford took the long end of the rope and tugged lightly. There was some resistance from Xin as he pulled back. “Are you suggesting a tug of war type situation?”

“Yeah. I’m being JUST tied up, so now let’s try something more active.” Xin tugged and pulled Ford forward with a yelp. Ford braced himself against the couch with one hand and looked at Xin’s grin. “A competition?” the scientist asked. The dragon/demon responded by tugging again, stronger this time. Ford narrowed his eyes in challenge. “Alright then.” He pulled, a quick, sharp tug that got Xin’s hands to point away from his body. The bound man tried to pull back but Ford had more leverage here. He got up off the couch and gave another sharp tug. Xin yelped as he was pulled up into a standing position. He grumbled “Hey! At least give me some time to pull back!”

“Nope, I’m winning this one.” Ford teased as he continued pulling Xin forward off the couch. The smaller man tugged back, the motion straining against the taut rope. It tightened a little and Xin grimaced. “Does this loosen if we pull on the other end?”

“I don’t think so, should we stop before it gets too tight? That could make it too difficult to get your hands free afterward.” Ford loosened his grip in worry. Xin hummed. “I can just burn it off if it’s too hard to untie.” Ford tightened his hold on the rope when Xin gave a hard tug that pulled Ford forward and he lost his balance, toppling onto Xin and pinning him to the sofa with his larger frame. Ford felt Xin’s legs come up on either side of his hips and wrap around his waist. “Hah!” The dragon cheered. “Now you can’t get back up!” Xin couldn’t help but be reminded of wrestling with little Sixer back in that other dimension. That had been fun. He wondered how that bitch was doing?

Ford struggled a little, dropping the rope and pushing his hands against the couch to try and stand back up. He felt Xin’s legs tighten around his waist. “Xin, let go, I can’t pull on you when I’m on top of you.”
“Never!” Xin laughed as he placed his bound hands behind Ford’s head, entrapping his head within the loop of his arms. “Now who’s got no leverage?” He grinned up at Ford, their faces inches apart. Ford was starting to feel his back ache in this bent over position. “Well you forgot to take one thing into account!” Ford smirked.

“My arms!” Ford pushed himself back and up with his arms, Xin crying out as he was lifted off the couch, his arms still behind Ford’s head while his legs tightened around Ford’s waist, holding the man upright so he wouldn’t slide down Ford’s chest. Xin growled as Ford stood up. “That’s cheating.” The dragon declared. Ford placed his hands on his hips. “Since you’re hanging off me, that means I’m still pulling on you. Therefore I win!”

“I don’t think that was in our rules.” Ford raised an eyebrow. “Rules shmules—all that’s important is that I’m winning!” Xin cheered. Ford rolled his eyes. He grabbed the long end of the rope again. “Well, let’s see who’s winning when I do THIS!” He threw a bunch of the other end of the rope into the air where it looped around a beam on the low ceiling. He saw Xin’s eyes go wide and smirked before pulling at the end of the rope, dragging Xin’s hands up into the air and away from Ford’s head.

Xin struggled with his arms up in the air, unable to pull them down and with his legs around Ford’s waist the only thing keeping him from falling. “Augh! No fair!” He whined as he wiggled back and forth. Ford laughed as he pulled harder, trying to lift Xin into the air, it was pretty difficult, the rope was merely around the top of the beam, there was no pulley or other device to make it easier so Ford had to pull against Xin’s weight and gravity to try and lift him.

“Whoa! Whoa!” Xin cried as he was slowly pulled away from Ford. “Hey! No fair!” He tried to keep his grip on Ford’s waist with his legs but his arms were pulled taut and if he didn’t let go it might start to hurt...but letting go would put all his weight on his arms, which would also hurt...

It was also starting to feel pretty good.

“C-cheater!” Xin panted as his arms began to ache. Ford’s shit eating grin make him growl and he unwrapped one leg so he could lightly kick him in the side. “Quit smiling like y-you...oooh....” Xin moaned before he could finished his scolding when Ford tugged on the rope and make him bounce in the air. “Ah...ffftuck....” He whined, as his spine popped. “Oh...that...that’s pretty good...” he moaned. Xin’s legs relaxed and he slid away from Ford to dangle in the air by his arms. his toes barely touched the ground and he whined. “Stupid leverage!” He grumbled as he tugged ineffectively at the rope. Ford chuckled. “So, are you enjoying yourself?”

“I would enjoy it more if you didn’t look so smug.” Xin pouted. Ford was going to respond but a man in a lab coat walked into the room, took one look at them and turned around on his heel to leave. Ford and Xin stared at the man’s retreating back. “Who’s that?” Xin asked.

“That’s Dr. Jerald, he’s a mechatronics engineer, currently he’s working on soundwave applications with moving speakers.” Ford explained. Xin hummed, moving a little to try and rotate his shoulders into a more comfortable position. “I’d like to meet your co-workers sometime.”

“Oh, I’m sure they’d love to meet you too.” Ford smiled at the thought. With Xin’s brilliant mind contributing, he was sure everyone’s projects would progress much faster. Speaking of which. “Hey Xin, so...you’re ok with helping me with my projects right?”
“Yeah? I already s-said that’s fine…” Xin panted as he purposely moved so that the rope would pull him in a way that stretched his side, ooh~ that felt nice…

“No-not particularly...shit, can you lower me a little so I can get this stretch?” Xin swung around a little by lifting his legs off the ground deliberately. Ford allowed the rope to drop a few inches and Xin planted his legs on the ground in a wide stance and leaned forward, his arms pulled behind him and his spine made a few more popping sounds. “Fuck yesss~”

“You really like stretching huh?” Ford noted. Xin nodded with a content expression. “The problem with taking a form that has bones and muscles, they get all stiff and sore. I have to stretch constantly just to work out all the kinks.” He rotated his shoulders and arched his neck to the side, producing another pop. “But a lot of stretches are hard to do on my own, I need something pulling me to get far enough.” and even as a triangle he just started… Aching, from having to hold in all his energy all the time. But stretching, even if it didn't release that energy, still released tension somewhat, like his physical body tricking his mind into thinking he had eased the pressure.

“I never thought of it like that.” Ford nodded. “I have found my back hurts after being bent over my lab desk all day. A good stretch really does do wonders.” Xin moaned as he shook himself. “For me, I tend to fall asleep curled up or on my side and it’s terrible for my spine.”

“Is that why there are so many kinks in it?” Ford frowned. “I wasn’t aware even all powerful demons had to deal with the mundane pains of bad sleeping posture.”

“It only happens when I do so in the form of something with a skeletal structure.” Xin admitted. “But as much as it sucks, the feeling of my bones popping is...wonderful~” he purred. Ford looked like he wanted to pull out a journal and write more notes down. “Fascinating. Also, there was something I was curious about...I’m not sure if you would be comfortable with it though.”

“What?” Xin asked, his eyes half lidded as he twisted himself again, it ached so good~

“I would like to study your triangle form as well.” Ford admitted. Xin froze and looked up at the scientist. “My...real form?” He asked slowly. Ford nodded. “As interesting as it has been to see how your constructed body’s nerves match up to a human’s, I am incredibly curious as to the anatomy of a Triangle.”

“Well I’m telling you straight out, my anatomy is different from both your Bill Cipher and Seb’s past self.”

“How so? Are you not the same species?” Ford blinked. Xin shook his head. “I’ve compared notes with Seb before. Our homeworld’s are...different. In my world, all people are Shapes and your sex is determined by your genitals, much like humans I guess? But in Seb’s past life, only males were Shapes. All women were Lines.”

“...I would have loved to study that as well…” Ford frowned. How did reproduction even work with a species like that? Xin panted as Ford’s distraction made him release his hold on the rope and the man dropped to his knees, his arms finally allowed to come back down. Xin wobbled over to the couch and laid down “Shit...that was kind of nice...not what I was expecting but...nice...”

“Oh, is this session done?” Ford blinked, finally back to the present. Xin nodded. Ford knelt down to untie his hands, noticing the painful looking abrasions on his wrists. He cursed. “Shoot! I’m sorry, I didn’t realize it would be that tight…” Ford berated himself. He went too far. He gently touched the skin along Xin’s wrists which were rubbed raw, a bruise already forming and some of the skin bleeding slightly.

“I’m so sorry. I didn’t mean to hurt—”

“It’s fine, Fordsie.” Xin took back his freed hands and licked at the blood. “It’s just a small abrasion. It’ll heal by tomorrow.”

“But you’re bleeding…” Ford gently cradled Xin’s hand. “I should bandage them.” He picked Xin up, making the dragon yelp, and carried him back down the hallway. “I have a first aid kit in my lab.”

“I told you I’m FINE Ford!” Xin whined. “It’s barely a break of skin. I’ll be healed soon! Don’t waste your bandages on me!”

“But I want to help.” The man replied as he carried the shorter man back to his workshop. A few scientists were whispering to each other and dramatically turned to look away and do literally anything else when they saw their boss carrying the man they saw him with earlier. “You owe me 10 dollars…” A woman whispered to her work partner.

“Ford, Stanford, I’m serious, let me go!” Xin pushed at the man’s chest when Ford pushed the door to his workshop with his foot and closed it again with his hip. Ford wasn’t going to drop the subject until he got him bandaged. He didn’t want to leave Xin like that, it was going to bother him later. Xin pouted when it seemed Ford really wasn’t going to stop and growled “Alright, plan B then.” Ford cried out in surprise when Xin began to glow and his form shifted. Ford’s eyes widened in horror when a bright yellow, glowing triangle appeared before him.

He knew this wasn’t his Bill but in that moment his mind blanked with fear and he froze.

Bill shook himself to get used to being a triangle again and looked down at Ford. If he had a heart it would have broken at the expression of terror mixed with unconscious hate on his face. Bill flinched back and shrank down to barely a foot long as he tried as hard as he could to not hold it against Ford. It’s not his fault he got fucked over by the Bill Cipher of this world. “...This was a bad idea…” Bill mumbled as he backed up. Ford blinked, his mild panic abating at the sad tone of Bill’s voice. “Wait! No, I’m sorry! I just…” Ford sputtered. He reached out and took Bill’s hand. “Don’t go. I’m sorry, I was…surprised…”

Bill looked down at his hand, so small and cartoonish. His wrists were thinner than Ford’s fingers like this. The contrast was striking and Bill wasn’t sure how to feel about this. He tugged on his hand but Ford didn’t let go. “Ford.”

Bill looked up into Ford’s face. He sighed. “You obviously haven’t gotten over your Bill yet. I don’t think it would be right for me to be around you in this form.” Ford shook his head. “I’m fine. I swear, I was just surprised.”

“Right.” Bill said, not sounding like he believed him. “It’s getting late anyway, I should head back…”

“Ford.” Bill sighed. “We can meet up tomorrow night if you want? I think I’m done for tonight.” He pulled his hands out of Ford’s grip, slipping partially into incorporeality to do so, and Blinked away into the Mindscape, his physical form turning into a shower of lights that quickly faded. Ford stood there with his hand out. Finally he sighed and dropped his arm back to his side. He berated himself again for being an idiot and upsetting Bill. “Why am I such a mess?” he groaned as he sat at his desk. He felt tired and disappointed with himself. So lost was he in his own head, Ford didn’t notice all his assistants gathering in the hallways outside to discuss what Dr. Jerald said he saw in the breakroom.

After the mysterious explosion two weeks ago, this was the most interesting thing to have happened!

“I swear I saw that black-haired man tied up to the beam on the ceiling!” Jerald whisper-hissed.

“But what were they doing?” Dr. Wexler pressed.

“I-I didn’t get to see very well, Dr. Pines was with his back turned to me, but-but-”

“But what, man?!” Dr. Clark shook him.

“I saw-I heard the other man...moaning…” Jay Jerald said with an embarrassed wince.

The other scientists gasped. “Really? Dr. Pines and...but…” Dr. Wexler blushed heavily. “H-he would never do s-something...like...like…” She covered her face, she had seen the attractive young man walk through the halls. He WAS quite effeminate...but...but…

“Why would they do that in the breakroom?! S-shouldn’t they be going somewhere more...private?!” Dr. Poddar choked out.

“...maybe they wanted people to see?” One of them pointed out “Some people are really into that.

“Urrgh! Guys, I can’t get this out of my head!” Jerald cried in horror as he covered his face with his hands. He had frozen when he saw...the pleased expression on that man’s face and the sounds (oh lord, those moans) as he was tied up!

“But...they had clothes on, right?” One of them asked shyly.

Dr. Jerald nodded. Thank Tesla they still had clothes on!

“Maybe...Dr. Pines was...trying something out?” Another woman (not a scientist, one of the receptionists) suggested. “You know...I never thought of him like...you know…” She trailed off. “The kind of man who would do that in the middle of the break room.”

“Like what? Are you seriously trying to say Dr. Pines was...what? Conducting some sort of stress test? An experiment with how much weight a person can carry on their arms?!” A man pulled on his hair. “Even if that were true, why was he experimenting with an incredibly attractive, provocatively dressed man?!”

“Ok, I don’t know! I’m just a receptionist, alright?!” The woman groaned. The coffee boy (the newest intern) approached them excitedly, wanting to know what they were talking about, and the scientists grinned among themselves.

“Y-Yes! I’d love to!” He lit up at the chance to actually help out with some SCIENCE for once. Jack Goodman had taken the internship because he wanted a look at all the cool gadgets they were building here but for the most part his job just consisted of bringing people coffee, LOTS of coffee. Only Dr. Pines actually let him help with science stuff. But that was mostly taking notes and checking over the readouts. He DID get to build his own mini-robot, which was cool.
Dr. Wexler pointed at the door to Ford’s lab. “Can you go ask Dr. Pines who that man he brought with him is?” Jack paled. Going near Dr. Pines?! And into his office?! At this hour? The doc was very particular with when people were allowed in.

“10 bucks that’s his boyfriend!” Dr. Clark, bet suddenly.

Dr. Jerald shook his head. “I am not participating in this.” He didn’t want to know what it was, he just wanted to get back to his science. His nice, simple science involving using sound-waves to blast buildings apart from a speaker mounted robot. (Okay, maybe he and Dr. McGucket were having too much fun with this joint collaboration of theirs…)

Dr. Poddar nudged the young man in the direction of Ford’s workshop and the poor kid looked at the scientists who all gave him a thumbs up before hiding to spy on them. Jack sighed. He should have studied Law like his Dad wanted, but no! He wanted SCIENCE and now he had to face the scariest and most mysterious man on Earth to ask about about his romantic life or something! He gently knocked on the closed door and leaned in to listen. “He-Hello? Dr. Pines?” There was no response. He looked back at the other scientists, hidden badly behind some potted plants and chairs. They all waved at him with a ‘Go on.’ hand gesture. Jack whimpered. “Dr. Pines? I’m coming in now…”

He opened the door warily, the last time someone at the lab had opened Dr. Pines' door without asking first had gotten a face full of a one eyed tentacle creature. The poor scientist, it was Dr. Poddar, had a swollen face for a whole week afterward. The intern braced himself for any explosions or monsters but nothing happened so he opened his eyes and saw Dr. Pines slumped over his desk. “Dr. Pines?!” The man stirred and turned to face Jack, who was shocked to see the incredibly sad expression on it. “Dr. Pines are you alright?”

“Y-you, sir? But...you’re a genius.” Jack stuttered. Ford sighed and slumped over his desk again. “I have been told by my brothers many times, that I am the worst when it comes to social interaction.” He admitted. Jack nodded slowly, yes, Dr. Pines was too intimidating for most people to talk to. “What happened sir?”

“A...friend, showed me their true self and I reacted badly. Now I’m afraid they won’t want to be around me anymore.” He sighed. “It wasn’t entirely my fault! He looked so much like… someone I once knew, I found myself reacting without thinking and I hurt his feelings…”

Jack furrowed his brow in confusion. That...sounded almost like…

“Well...have you apologized?” Jack suggested. Dr. Pines nodded. “I did but he left anyway. He said he was done for tonight, even though I asked him to stay…”

“W-well he said he’s done for tonight? He didn’t say he was done for good right? Which means he might be willing to come back another time?” Jack tried to cheer him up. It seemed to work as Dr. Pines perked up. “Yeah. You know, I’ll call him tomorrow. Apologize properly.’ The scientist got up to pat Jack on the back. “Thank you Mr. Gooseman. I will plan out my apology speech right now!” Jack twitched a little. “It’s Goodman, sir….,” Ford nodded absently, already turning to pull out a notebook to begin drafting out an apology.
“Um...from what I can understand, h-he said…” Jack blushed. Dr. Pines said that whoever the other man was, he showed Dr. Pines his ‘true self’ and Dr. Pines had reacted badly. The only thing Jack could think that meant was...”-that the other guy might have been...trying to…” Jack whispered “…take his clothes off...and Dr. Pines apparently reacted badly to what he saw…” Jack thought of what else their boss had said and tried to put it in words he understood. “...and that the other guy had reminded Dr. Pines of...I think, his Ex, and Dr. Pines had reacted really badly and hurt the other man’s feelings. So...he left and now Dr. Pines is planning out an apology letter.”

Everyone gasped at Jack’s explanation. Eventually Dr. Clark smiled. “You all owe me 10!” Dr. Wexler crossed her arms over her chest. “I don’t owe you anything, I need evidence. Did he explicitly said he was his boyfriend?”

Jack hummed and looked down. “N-No...that’s just how I interpreted it...he-he said ‘showed him his true self’ and that he reminded him of someone he once knew.” He made quotes with his hands. “I-I’m not sure what else that could mean…”

“So you won’t pay me?” Clark asked disappointed.

“He-he’s going to call him tomorrow...so maybe we-we could...eavesdrop?”

The scientists seemed to consider it and finally agreed. Yes. That sounded better. They wanted to know for sure what their boss was doing with that handsome man. If Ford knew what his staff were planning he’d probably fire the lot of them. Unaware of their gossiping schemes, Ford was crumpling up another another apology note.

Bill flew through the Mindscape holding back tears. He knew Ford didn’t mean it but it was still...rude. “He’s the one who WANTED to see my Triangle form anyway!” He muttered. “Stupid Ford.” He sighed. Settling down on a random rooftop, he lifted up his hands. He was in the Mindscape, his physical body dispersed, therefore the wounds on his wrists were no longer here. Even so, he remembered them.

They ached faintly. It felt quite nice.

Bill sighed and pressed his hands to his eyelid. “I really am Bill Cipher aren’t I?” He groaned and flopped onto his back. Maybe he shouldn’t do this anymore. Becoming more like Bill...he didn’t really want that. But sometimes he would forget. He would forget that being like Bill was something to be avoided. He would forget WHAT was a ‘Bill Trait’ or...whatever? At which point did Bill begin and Zyun-Jan end? Or the other way around?

He...she, didn’t like pain. She hated it.

Screaming. Crying. Frustration. Self hate. A thick school textbook slammed down onto her hand repeatedly. Punishment. The pain was punishment. Because she wasn’t good enough. Because she wasn’t GOOD. The crunch of a bone. A textbook falling from a shaking hand. A bruised hand cradled close. This was a punishment. It hurts because it’s a punishment. It hurts because that’s what she deserved.

Bill shook his head. No. Zyun-Jan hated pain. He rolled onto his side and sighed. It’s not like he forgot on purpose. There were just so many more things to think about. His life as Bill, his Friends, his children…

Bill allowed the tears to build up and leak. Crying is a good thing. Yes? Maybe if he cried enough it wouldn’t hurt anymore. He missed Quackers. He missed Pynelope. He missed Pyrone. He wouldn’t have had to go through this alone. Xanthar would have comforted him. Ammy would have-- Pyronica would have-- everyone would have--

But what did he do?

Ran away like a coward.

Ran away to live inside someone else’s happily ever after.

Bill groaned. He shouldn’t have come here. He should go home.

Zach and Zoe pulled at his hands chanting “Story! Story!” With those wide, innocent smiles.

So much like Will. So much like Thermal Pack and Ice Pack.

Shit. Bill laughed bitterly. He ran away to try and get over the deaths of his children his brother only to get himself attached to MORE children. “Fuck my life…” He laughed. He laid there and thought. What was he going to do? Who was he going to be?

Seb had found his happy ending. A man who reincarnated and suffered and eventually found happiness. Could Bill be like that too? How? What did he have to do to get his own happy ending? Maybe he should ignore his own Pines family altogether. Stay in space with his Friends and spend each day searching for things to do.

 Spend the rest of existence trying to fill his time with stuff. Entertainment, food, games, parties...maybe go out and help some people in trouble. Get shunned for doing do. Get mad. Kill a few people. Feel bad for it. Cry. Rely on others’ pity to get by.

When did he become such an awful person? Bill couldn’t remember. He was so broken. He knew there was something wrong but he couldn’t really tell what it was anymore. There should be a solution, a correct path forward, but for the life of him, he couldn’t think of it. He felt like he knew the answer. It was on the tip of his tongue but he couldn’t put it in words. Couldn’t even conceptually realize what it was.

Sometimes he had moments of clarity, when he understood what was wrong, understood how to be better. But then that moment was gone and he just wanted to have fun to distract himself from the horrifying existential thoughts of what living for eternity really meant. The Earth would die, humanity would go extinct, the universe would end. And Bill Cipher would still be here.

Mortality was a terminal disease and everyone had it but him and those few who were tricked into staying with him forever and ever. In those moments of clarity, Bill was at peace with mortals being mortals. They were at peace, they had found rest. They didn’t have to suffer or struggle anymore. The only one suffering was him.

The dead do not mourn.

Bill hated his wildly oscillating thought process sometimes. How had he gone from Ford hurting his feelings to philosophical thoughts on the nature of death and mourning? Bill wanted to do what he always did, set these thoughts and feelings aside so he could just be happy. He wasn’t... ignoring those feelings, just pushing them away to experience later. But there was so much backlog. It builds and builds until a single event triggers the landslide of everything hitting at once.

Maybe he should just let this happen, ride out the emotional horse tornado around and around and around until everything is spinning and he didn’t know his lefts from his wrongs. Bill got up slowly and tried to make his way to Seb’s house. His thoughts were quickly spiralling out of control. Topics popping in and out as they scream and shout. All the things he could do. All the things he could see.

Would you? Could you? Here or there?

Would you? Could you? Anywhere!

“This is why I HATE letting my mind drift!” Bill screamed in frustration. He had to get his own mind back under control. He couldn’t focus, couldn’t think. Think, think, blink, ink, sink, shrink… see?! This is what happens if he didn’t have something specific to think about! Everything gets thought at once. Every fear and insecurity, should he run or should he let things be?

His ups were his downs. He breathes while he drowns. Everything was here. So put them over there. But there was here and here was nowhere!

Bill couldn’t remember how he made it back to Seb’s house but he did. He stumbled through the walls until he reached Seb’s room. He and Wanda were already asleep. Bill shifted into Miz, sighing in relief as some of the torrent of thoughts, emotions, sounds and images were...not gone per say, but muted. She crawled into bed, exhausted and dizzy and distressed. Sleep sounded good right now.

Sleep to let her mind sort out what the fuck it wanted. Sleep so she could let go of caring, thinking, existing in a state that required actual thought and care and attention and fuck, she didn’t care anymore. She just wanted this all to stop.

Miz curled up on the bed and let the dizziness inside her mind spiral her thoughts around and around until she finally fell asleep.

Chapter 25

-Your name-

-----

When Wanda woke up early in the morning, she found herself sandwiched between her husband and a little dark-haired girl. She tried to stand up, but Seb had one leg over her and he was hugging her waist. “Seb...Sebas...”

“Um…” Seb muttered and snuggled closer to her back. “Let me go, I have to get ready for work…” She groaned a bit and pulled away. The man moaned sad. “Warm...hug…”

Wanda slowly stood up and pushed Miz closer to Seb. “Here. Hug Miz instead…” She giggled when Seb caught the girl and curled up around her. As much as a part of her told her she should feel jealous, her rational part didn’t allow her to feel that way. Miz was Seb’s sister! The blonde gave her husband a kiss on his cheek. “See you at night...Take care of our babies...I think they have an appointment with their pediatrician for another vaccine today, please, check it out.”

With that, the woman quickly took a shower, changed, kissed her sleeping babies goodbye and left, she would buy breakfast when she was close to the office.

The real alarm to wake up in the household rang around an hour and a half later and Seb blinked in confusion when he saw he was holding Miz. “Hey…” He ran a hand through her hair. “Good morning…”

“Uwu…” She hugged her pillow and Seb laughed. “I’ll go wake up the twins for daycare…” He let go of the demon girl and yawned as he started his daily routine. First he took a shower and changed his clothes, he shaved the parts he didn’t want for the beard he was growing and combed his hair a bit as well. Then he went to the twins’ room to get them out of bed, get them changed, feed them, see that their hair was combed and their teeth washed, that their little backpacks had all they needed for the day, before taking them to preschool. What did Wanda tell him? Doctor appointment? Oh dear Ax, the twins were going to throw a tantrum today...

While the three had breakfast, and Sir Bedazzle rolled in his bin full of water, Miz came downstairs.

“Hi, Miz!” Zoe and Zach waved, happy and innocently eager to start a new day. Miz smiled faintly at them. “Hey little gremlins…” she rubbed her eyes and yawned. She felt a little unhappy but Miz turned to the kids. “Oi! Prepare yourselves, this afternoon you shall face a harrowing quest!” the twins stared at her with wide eyes. “What quest? Will we fight a dragon?” Zoe gasped as she stood up in her chair. “Will we fight you?” Zach asked, bouncing in his seat. “You shall be facing the most dreaded beast of all! Doctors!” Miz cried dramatically. The twins both gasped. “Nooo!!!” Seb sipped his orange juice, amused. The twins stood up and pulled their dad’s arms. “Noo!!” They screamed again, louder this time.

“Dad, no! I don’t want to go!” Zoe pleaded. “It hurts!”

“I hate it! I hate it!” Zach hugged himself. He hated seeing needles and the liquid they put inside. It was scary and he didn’t like it.

“No one likes doctors, but I don’t want you catching anything that can hurt you, especially now with idiots not wanting to vaccinate their children.” Seb sighed. Seriously, humans were weak as fuck, and vaccines were invented for a reason. “But I don’t like needles!” Zoe whined and her hands started burning, itching to release her flames. “I will bite the nurse if we go!” She threatened. “If you bite the nurse, I will bite YOU and you will be grounded.” Seb smiled. “If you two behave, we can buy ice cream later, but ONLY if you two behave at the doctors. And school. Deal?”

The twins shared a look and sighed. There goes their plan to take revenge on that kid who broke Zoe’s color pencil. “Deal.” They nodded warily, but didn’t shake hands with their Dad. It was dangerous to negotiate with something like the doctor, Dad could find a loophole and make them regret it later. “But we still don’t like it.” Zach shook his head. Miz giggled. She loved these humans so much...

“I hate needles too. I used to cry when I had to go to the doctors.” She admitted. The twins turned to her in surprise. “Really?” Zach asked. Miz nodded. “But I got over it. Because I’m stronger than my fear! If it’s scary I just have to look away from the needle and think about something else. Besides, the doctors are just trying to help. You don’t want to get sick right?”

They shook their heads. Zoe had gotten a cold once and she hated it. And Zach didn’t like being sick either.

Seb grinned and attacked the twins with kisses as rubbed his beard on their soft, chubby faces. “I don’t want you getting sick either my small, baby monsters!”

“GAH! Dad!” Zoe whined, pushing his face away from her. “Shave!” She shouted as Seb simply laughed. “Nope. I like my beard, kid. Makes me look special and cool.” The twins rolled their eyes. Daddy was silly. His beard was itchy but he kept it anyway. They turned to Miz for help. “Shave?” They asked. Miz cackled and held up an electric razor “Well…”

“No!” Seb covered his face and ran away, just when Miz stood up. “Oh come here, Sebas…” She sing-songed. “I just wanna talk~” She walked towards the bathroom where the man had locked himself in, thinking it would protect him. How cute.

“Shave Daddy!” Zoe cheered and Miz grinned. She simply phased through the closed door and the twins laughed when they heard their dad screaming in surprise. Inside, Miz was holding Sebas down and trying to apply shaving cream to his face. “Now I’m just gonna admit I’ve never done this before~so I have ABSOLUTELY no idea what I’m doing!” Miz laughed maniacally. Seb screamed. “You’re not even supposed to use cream with an electric razor!!” He wailed. The razor buzzed. Miz was merciless. There was a silence. The twins outside held each other as they strained to hear. Finally the door creaked open slowly. “D-daddy?” Zoe whispered.

A heavenly chorus sang out “Ahhh~” as bright light shone from within the bathroom. Seb stepped out, his face smooth and shiny, his hair perfectly combed and a large pout on his lips. Miz stood behind him, holding the light effects and trying hard not to laugh. She didn’t succeed. “PFTH! AHAHAHAHAHA!”

The twins stared in shock at the man who MUST be their dad but he looked so...naked without his beard. It made him seem much younger and they were amazed at how different it looked.

“I’m ALWAYS pretty!” Seb complained as he rubbed a hand on his smooth chin. Eh, it’ll grow back in a week right? Damn body hair grew fast, but at least his beard was included in that growth. “I can’t believe you shaved off my beard…” He grumbled at Miz who looked entirely too smug. “It looks better this way.” She insisted.

“But I liked it!” Seb complained with a groan. “And Wanda liked it!”

The twins looked away, and attempted to whistle. Suuuure. Mommy liked it.

Seb didn’t notice the looks on his kids’ faces and looked at them. “Alright, it’s getting late. Go grab your backpacks, little traitors.” The twins laughed and went to their room. Seb went to grab their lunchboxes and moodily tossed them onto the couch.

“You really look better this way…I said you were the most handsome, didn’t it? I know what I’m talking about.” Miz smiled up at the man. “Stick with this, or a goatee. That looked hella good on you.”

“Ok, alright, I get it, thank you I guess…” Seb smiled and ruffled her hair.

“We’re ready!” The twins came running down the stairs. Seb grinned “Alright kids, first one to the car gets to choose the radio station!” The twins gasped and raced off (pulling on their velcro shoes), pushing each other to try and get ahead. Seb got his keys and slipped his outdoor shoes on. Miz, as per usual, stayed behind to look after the house. Seb had asked her once if she wanted to come with them to school but she had shook her head. “Too many questions if I show up. Frankly I’m amazed the neighbors haven’t asked about why there’s a random girl living with you.”

Seb waved goodbye to Miz as he opened the car door for the twins to climb in, sitting down in their safety seats and waiting to be buckled in. “I’ll be back soon.” He called over his shoulder. Miz nodded. “I’ll clean up the kitchen.”

“You’re an Ax-sent gift, Miz!” Sebastian laughed as he finished tending to the kids and drove off. The twins waved at Miz as they lost sight of the house. “How come Miz doesn’t have to go to school?” Zach asked innocently. Seb grinned. How cute. They were so naive! “Because Miz isn’t really a kid. She already went through school, but likes to look like a little girl.”

“She went to a dragon school?” Zoe asked with her green and brown eyes wide. “Eh...yes. Definitely dragon school... and probably a triangle school?” Seb nodded without looking away from the road. “I want to go to dragon school!” Zoe exclaimed after a few moments of quiet. “When you become a dragon, I will send you to dragon school.” Seb humored her. Zoe growled. “I’m a dragon now! Rawr!” her hands caught on fire. Zach tensed up. “Zoe! Dad is driving! Don’t scare him now!” Seb checked around to see if there were any cars on the road too and grinned. He faked a startled cry and sped up a little, making the twins shriek. “A dragon is going to attack me!”

“Wait! Wait! I’m not a dragon anymore!” Zoe explained quickly and Seb stopped the car a bit harder than necessary. The twins laughed when their bodies jerked forward. Seb looked at the backseat. “Are you sure you won’t turn into a dragon and attack me?” He pouted. “I won’t! I promise!” The girl put a hand over her chest solemnly. “I will use my dragon form to attack dumb kids who bother me.” Zach laughed. “But what if a knight appears?” Zoe stuck her tongue out “If you’re the knight then you can defend the dragon!”

“Good girl.” Seb grinned and turned on the car again. They finally reached the cute, colorful building of their preschool and the twins struggled to get free. They wanted to go! Their Daddy kindly unbuckled them from their seats and they jumped out of the car, running happily inside. “Hi, kids!” one of their teachers greeted. She was at the gate, checking to make sure everyone was arriving and in case anyone strange was loitering outside the daycare.

“Hi, Miss Blossom!” They waved at her as they ran inside to their classroom.

Seb watched them run inside and sighed. He handed the young woman with a blue apron at the entrance their lunchboxes. “They forgot this…” Miss Blossom blinked in surprise at the Pines twins’ father. “Oh. You shaved, Mr. Pines?” He blushed. “Eh, Zoe got annoyed at my beard scratching her and demanded me to shave.” He sighed. “My poor beard...it was innocent!”

Miss Blossom laughed, taking the lunch boxes. “Well it’s a good look for you.” Sebastian gasped. “Not you too!” The daycare worker laughed and walked back inside to put the boxes away. Seb rolled his eyes, they were wrong, his beard was awesome!

The man returned to his car, argued with another parent who was scolding him for parking like that, and went back home. He had to finish that drawing and try out that new program he had been recommended to design things digitally. Modern times made everything about computers! It wasn’t long before he was home and found Miz doing the laundry. Seriously, best roommate ever. He gave her a wave before going to his ‘office’ to work. That was how the past few weeks had been. Quiet normalcy as he lived his life peacefully with his family and (spiritual) little sister.

Not for the first time, Seb wondered how long Miz was planning to stay. He now knew that she was hiding out at his place because she didn’t want to go home and confront the fact that her children had died (which, he sort of understood) but now that the knowledge had come to light, did she still have a reason to stay?

Did Seb WANT her to stay?

If he was being honest, yes. He wanted her to stay. She was like a little sister and the children loved her. But...didn’t she have her own life back in the other dimension? Her own friends and family who might be missing her? He knew that time didn’t pass in another dimension unless it was observed and all that, but still. He didn’t want to make Miz stay if there was something important she had to do back there.

It wouldn’t be right to keep her here, selfishly, if her own family and friends were waiting for her. He looked down at his finished drawing which seriously needed to be sent to the company because his manager was going nuts, and sighed. Should he tell her about this? If he asked her how much longer she would stay he was almost totally sure the girl was going to get offended and sad. He knew because he knew Miz, she’d think he was kicking her out and that was the last thing Sebastian wanted to do...

A small part of him wanted her to stay forever. He loved being with her, she helped him with the house and with the twins, something he had to do alone before and he was incredibly grateful for it...

If she didn’t have any hurry to leave, if she didn’t want to leave...then why should he worry...right? If Miz liked being with them, if the kids liked her and Wanda had no problem with her presence, Wanda even told him she saw Miz as a daughter! (His wife was so cute, what the hell?!) , who was he to tell her to go to a place she didn’t want to confront? Seb smiled happily as he attached the drawing to his manager’s email. Yeah. He was right. Miz could stay as long as she wanted because he wanted her to stay. It was a win-win!

In the other room, Miz was humming to herself as she worked. Chores were so much easier with powers. She floated the laundry bin, which was pretty heavy, what with 4 people’s worth of clothes in it, down to the basement and sorted them by colors. Wash the lights first, the delicates and lights go together. She tried hard not to feel creeped out. Basements were just...creepy. Maybe if it wasn’t so...barren? Miz waved her hands and created more lights, flooding the cold basement with a warmer, yellow glow as she colored the walls pastel pink with flowers and made the ground a pretty grass green.

Much better!

She scooped in the detergent soap and turned the washing machine on. While the wash ran, she could go back upstairs and prepare lunch for Seb later. Plus, there was still the mess in the backyard from the party that needed to be cleaned up. It was all very domestic and calming. Miz wondered if maybe she should get a real job as a maid. It was something she enjoyed, so maybe she should go for it? How WOULD the multiverse feel about Bill Cipher putting himself up for hire as a maid service?

The idea made her laugh until she was gasping for air. Once the hilarity of the look on Time Baby’s face went away, Miz quieted and frowned. She missed home (As afraid as she was to go back). But she also wanted to stay with Seb. Maybe she could do both? The Void of Doors was her true Dreamscape after all. So maybe she could go home and just...visit Seb in her dreams whenever she was asleep? If the only place she was going was to Seb’s dimension, she wouldn’t have to worry too much about the required safety features she had to manually set up every time she came through the Doors. And she could see if it was safe to go back to Blue's place...

It would be nice if she could have both. She was greedy like that. If there was a choice for one or the other that she wanted, she would take both and nuts to anyone who tried to stop her. She would need to head back home in order to set this system up though, a true, solid link between her Exit Door and Seb’s. She would need his permission to mess around his Mindscape for that.

She went back upstairs, lazily waving her hands to gather up the trash in the yard for recycling, and knocked on Seb’s door.

“Come in!” Seb shouted from the inside and Miz did so. “Hey Seb?” she began. “Would it be okay if I linked my Dreamscape with yours so I could travel back and forth between my dimension and this one without having to go through the exit doors within my Dreamscape each time?”

“...Uh?” The man looked up at her confused. “You-You want to link your Dreamscape with mine…”

Miz nodded excitedly. “Can I?” “Eh…” Seb grimaced and scratched his head. “I don’t know. It doesn't sound safe.”

Miz thought about how she could make it seem like a good idea.“You can even come to MY side and meet my family?” Miz pointed out. “I’m sure 8-Ball would love to see Stanley again too, they seemed to get along back when he stayed with me.” Now, that sounded more interesting. “Really? That…” That sounded awesome. His brothers got to meet his friend’s family, it was only fair if he could too! “This link...It would only take you here in your spirit form...and me to your world in my spirit form, wouldn’t it?”

Miz nodded. “I came here in spirit form and built a body, I can do the same for you and anyone else who wants to come over.”

“So if they wanted to, the twins or-or Wanda could go too? But are you sure nothing can get from your world to mine if we do this?”
Miz scoffed. “The only way that would happen is if someone could break into my Mindscape! And I’ve been working on adding protections! There are multiple runes and security features everywhere! You won’t be in any danger!” She insisted.

The brunet man bit his lip in thought. This was Miz they were talking about. She was his friend. She wouldn’t let anything bad happen if he accepted...but one Bill Cipher got into his mind already and his mind had to be destroyed in order to defeat him... He was not afraid of Miz, he was worried something could happen to his mind. What if somehow, Miz’s presence did something to his mind accidentally? What if he went insane?

“You...planning to leave already?” He asked softly. She shook her head. “I just...wanted a way to be with both my family AND yours.” She tried to figure out how to explain this “I can manually travel back and forth but it’s dangerous to have to open my Exit door so often. Even with my security features, I don’t want to risk it. But if I directly link us up, I can come to you freely without having to risk the Void, or have my own Door open.” Though, she would still check the Void now and then, to move Doors around and finalize the protective cage of Doors surrounding hers, Seb’s and Blue’s Doors.

Seb bit his finger as he thought. “Can you promise me your presence won’t, won’t damage my mind? It’s been stable for years after-” He lifted his eyepatch to show her his lack of eye. “-You won’t accidentally make something go too crazy....right?”

Miz placed a hand over her heart. “I promise I won’t touch anything. I’m just going to put a door in an out of way place, away from any of your stuff. I’ll mark it so it’s clearly visible and different from any part of your mind.”

Seb took a deep breath. Ok...he-he thought he got it. Miz wouldn’t let anything happen. “Ok...” He nodded. “I accept.” He held out his hand and Miz held out her own, blue flames danced along both hands. “So it’s a Deal, your dimensional door will link directly with my Mindscape and mine with yours.” Miz stated clearly, just to let Seb back out if he really wanted to. The man hesitated before smiling and shaking her hand, “Deal.”

The flames flickered up their arms and both of them had a moment of vertigo. Miz whimpered as she shook her head. “Ugh...that felt weird.” Seb groaned and massaged his temples. “Urgh, tell me about it...” He looked at his body for any change but of course found nothing. “So...It’s done, right?” Miz scanned the human’s mind and grinned when she felt the Door, clearly visible and different from anything in his space-like dreamscape. “Yup!”

Seb laughed nervously and sat down again. He was so paranoid, thinking Miz would make a deal to hurt him... “What—What are you doing now?” Miz laid down on a couch in Seb’s office. “I need to see if it works.” She admitted. She closed her eyes and appeared to go to sleep. “Eh...ok?” Seb raised an eyebrow, wondering if she left and left the body just to piss him off. When Miz’s body continued to ‘sleep’, Seb decided to go back to work and not worry about it.

The world was a pale pink. Miz, Bill now, blinked slowly. His bricks pulsed lightly with a healthy golden glow as he looked around. Wait, this was the Space between Spaces! Oh... oh right, the AXOLOTL of this dimension probably Felt her making that connection and now...

...now he was probably going to have some words with him. Bill sighed. Right, should have figured this would happen. For a second, Bill worried about whether this Axolotl was going to be terrifying like the one he met in Blue’s dimensional set, but then he relaxed. This Ax should be nicer. He was kind enough to allow Seb to come back to life, so that he could be with his family after all. This in mind, Bill held back his fear and decided to greet the salamander with an open mind.

“Hello?” there was no response. “Hewwo~?” He tried instead. “Hewwo~? Is anywun dewre~?”

“If you’re attempting to do one of those ‘meme’ things, please stop.”

He turned to see a large pale pinkish salamander giving him a deadpan stare. Bill giggled. “You know memes? My Ax doesn’t.”

“Youre dimension doesn’t yet have human internet.” The Axolotl responded with a sigh. “It floods through all of the multiverse, spreading like a virus until even some of the Time Police dab while arresting people.” he grimaced, “Please don’t let my counterpart have to go through this too.”

Bill responded with a cheeky grin “I make no promises~” So the humans in THIS dimension have spread their memes even into space? Nice~

The Axolotl sighed. “What are you doing here, Bill Cipher?”

“Well, technically, I think YOU pulled me here while I was attempting to get into my Dreamscape to see if the Doors I just built were working properly, but so long as I’m here, I might as well introduce myself! I’m Sebas’ friend!” MizBill smiled proudly. “You know, he was a Bill, crazy guy, wanted to kill the Pines once upon a time...”

“I am aware who Sebastian Pines is, I created him and I have watched over him for years...still do.”

MizBill hummed with curiosity. “Can...can I curl up with you? My Ax lets me do it…” He mumbled shyly (having fortified himself the instant he realized where he was, so it should be safe, and he would get a basic read on this AXOLOTL) and the giant salamander managed a small smile. “Very well, if you wish.”

MizBill happily floated towards the Axolotl and curled up against his side. Ah...soft and warm, just like he liked his Axs... nothing at ALL like Blue’s Ax... “Are you the same Ax from Sebas’ previous life?” MizBill asked curiously (was pretty sure he was, but he might as well get confirmation), watching his mental form's own bricks glow yellow in the darkness of space. It was fascinating how this world can be entirely pink and white while still being dark.

“You are correct...I am the God for many dimensions, as are many other Axolotls...but I was not originally in touch with your Axolotl until recently, after you came here, the first time.” The Axolotl blinked slowly down at MizBill. “You created the connection. You and he, are quite unique, from what little I can see.”

“Eh, dad is dad...he helped me a lot when I first became immortal.” MizBill shrugged. “Why didn’t you help your Bills?” His tone wasn’t accusatory, just, curious. “It just wasn’t meant to be...my Bill Ciphers live out their lives, do what they choose and then perish at the hands of the Pines family where they would invoke my name for a chance at redemption.” The Axolotl stared at Bill unblinking. “I do not interfere in what they choose to do.”

“You can decide what Fate they have?” MizBill asked. “Like, Seb became...Seb, but in other fanfics I have read, Bill reincarnated as other people and in different situations.”

“...I am not sure I understand what ‘fanfic’ you speak of, but yes, I decide which Fate they have after their deaths.”

“What have you done to the Bill that THIS Pines family defeated?”

“It is a private Deal, Bill. I am not allowed to tell you.”

“...reincarnated as a frog it is then.” MizBill shrugged. “So...is it okay with you that I linked my mind with Seb’s?”

The Axolotl smiled a little “Sebastian has completed his mission...I have guided him through the process, but now he can choose what to do on his own. I think he has learned everything needed to continue his life as a human in a responsible way.”

“So...is that a yes?” the little triangle nuzzled with this Ax, does that make this one his uncle? His uncle Ax?

“Yes, as long as you don’t risk his or his family’s life, he has earned his peace, I wouldn’t want it to be ruined...” Ax stroked MizBill’s tiny triangular form with a paw. “Is this alright? I am used to dealing with less... polite Bill Ciphers.” This Ax must be the most patient one, even more than Bill’s own! Was that even possible?! MizBill giggled at the tickling sensation of the Axolotl’s paw. “That’s fine. So...does that make me the good child?” He batted his eyelashes innocently. Ax gave him a pat on the head and rolled his black eyes “I suppose you are.”

“That’s good to know.” MizBill sighed and slumped over the Axolotl’s hand. “…Is Time Baby gonna be pissed when he comes back?”

“He is always angry about one thing or another.”

“You should try to raise him better.” MizBill grumbled. “I know you’re pretty hands off most of the time but still. You know he disintegrates his own workers just for the heck of it?” The Axolotl sighed. He couldn’t take care of everything...

“I am glad you became Sebastian’s friend...he didn’t have it easy in this life either...” Ax ignored MizBill’s glare. Oh, and whose’ fault was that? “So I am glad you like him.” MizBill scoffed. “You could try making more of an effort you know?” He poked the Axolotl’s cheek “I shouldn’t have to clean up other people’s messes all the time, even if I like cleaning.”

“I...admit I didn’t think a few things through.” The white salamander admitted with a sheepish voice. “He wasn’t supposed to be treated that badly by his human father, but it was an unfortunate oversight…” The Axolotl sighed. “And the horrible pain he had to suffer from that zodiac on his back?” MizBill huffed. “I was containing his powers, pure energy, there was no way to make it painless, just progressive. It was meant to be gone when he reached Gravity Falls.”

“And you couldn’t have...oh, I don’t know, told him to go to Gravity Falls after he was originally kicked out of his house?” MizBill asked sarcastically. There was a long silence before the Axolotl ducked his head, “I...didn’t think of that…”

MizBill facepalmed. “You’re an idiot. Oh my cheese, you’re an idiot just like Seb and Ford!”

The Axolotl looked properly chastised. “Alright...I admit I was wrong...BUT! ” He lifted a paw. “He wouldn’t have grown as a person!” MizBill’s glare stayed. “And he would have given his dark self his body once he HAD powers... that would have been worse.” When MizBill’s glare didn’t waver, Ax mumbled “And he wouldn’t have met Wanda again.” MizBill blinked. “Ok, fine. I’ll accept THAT as an excuse.” He gently hit the Axolotl’s paw. “Still, he suffered…”

Ax sighed again. “I know…but look what he has achieved, Sebastian… has his family back…” MizBill interjected “Which I helped with!” The Axolotl rolled his eyes. “He would have finished the portal on his own anyway, the boy is intelligent, he just doesn’t believe it.”

“Yeah, but I helped make sure the Stans survived their first tumble into the multiverse. Do you have ANY idea how many Fords actually didn’t survive their first trip?” Miz knew this well after what had happened with Blue’s dimensional sets. The Ax smiled sadly. “I know...But I knew they were going to be fine. I knew they would make it.”

MizBill grumbled. “Well, your LITERAL Deus Ex Machina aside, what’s going to happen to Seb now? He’s...mortal…” The triangle looked down and the Axolotl gently stroked him. “He is human, Bill...I am sure you know what will eventually happen to him...” MizBill made a sniffing sound. “Bill...I understand it hurts…but Sebastian is happy right now... and you love him, think of him and enjoy your time with him now instead of dwelling on things that can’t be stopped .” MizBill whined “But they CAN be stopped. I can make him immortal. I can make their whole family immortal!” Ax bumped his head against Bill’s side. “And you know why you can’t. You know that isn’t right.”

“Doesn’t mean I can’t complain about it.” MizBill growled. “Why is it fine when I make my alien friends immortal, but the second I try to sink my Deals into a human, everyone’s like ‘No, you can’t do that’ and make such a fuss?”

“Those Friends you chose were all broken, lonely souls. Without you they wouldn’t have found happiness on their own. But Sebastian HAS. He’s found his happiness and you shouldn’t interfere with that.”

“Is that all it is?” MizBill blinked. “So...you mean there is no one out there, in all the multiverse, who would have cared for or loved Pyronica and the others?” That...was a depressing thought. Especially in the dimensions where Bill was an asshole. That meant that even if their Bill was a horrible person, he was still their only hope for happiness and acceptance. “That fucking sucks.” And now MizBill wanted to adopt all of them as well-

Wait.

MizBill looked up at Ax with panic. “What happened with this Bill’s Henchmaniacs? Are they still in that collapsing dimension? Without Bill to take care of them?” he shivered “And what about Seb’s original Henchmaniacs from his past life? What happened to them?!”

The Axolotl stayed silent and Bill understood what that meant. He sniffled and began to sob quietly. He knew they weren’t HIS friends but...this was sad. “T-that’s not fair…” he whimpered. The Axolotl pet his side softly. “They were dangerous criminals who found joy in killing others…” Bill shook his head “Bu-but...I could have...I could have helped them...like I’ve helped my own friends…”

“... maybe you could have, but it’s too late for that now. They will reincarnate back into the world like all others who have died. It’s all I can do for them.”

MizBill cried and held onto his paw, wiping his eye on Ax’s cool limb. “I hate this…” The Axolotl hugged the ‘good kid’ to his chest. He didn’t know too much about this Bill’s history, he hoped his counterpart was dealing with him better than this. It would be a shame for this Bill to end up completely broken like the ones he dealt with. He didn’t deserve it. After a while his sobbing...
finally quieted down and the Axolotl saw that Bill had fallen asleep, his exhaustion from his Deal with Sebastian and emotions wearing him out. The Axolotl curled around the triangle and went to sleep himself.

Seb leaned closer to inspect Miz’s body. Did she breathe when she was in a human(ish) form? He couldn’t remember. He hoped she was alright… how long did it take to check on a dimensional connection? Seb had finally finished organizing the spring-summer fashion show for his brand. Fuck his manager forcing him to do this! He knew it was to get more recognized...but still, he liked it when he only made personalized dresses. It was fun. Now he barely had time for that.

He went to the kitchen to prepare lunch while he waited for Miz to wake up and took Miz with him. He left her on the couch, just so she wouldn’t be alone when she woke up. While he started on the rice and soup, his phone rang and he quickly answered. “Sebastian!” Wanda shrieked from the other side, making him wince. “Are you free?!”

Wanda didn’t laugh. This was serious. “I was called in the middle of a meeting when I specifically told them not to call ME, and they told me the kids had a fight with some boys. Please go check on them.” Seb groaned. Again?! “Alright…I’ll go.” he heard Wanda yelling on the other end, “Give me a fucking moment, stupid! That wasn’t for you, honey, I have to go, bye!”

Seb turned off the kitchen stove, pouting at his half cooked soup and looked at Miz. Fuck it. He wasn’t leaving her unconscious here. He carried her bridal style to the car, sat her in the passenger seat awkwardly and buckled her seatbelt before speeding to the Daycare. Damn kids! He loved them so much but they were so unpredictable!

Like him, he couldn’t help but admit…

To his incredible relief, Miz began stirring when they got close to the Daycare. “Hey Miz, sorry about moving you, an emergency came up an-” Seb was cut off when Miz began crying out with a tone of panic. He couldn’t glance over since he was driving, and pretty fast at that, so he asked “Miz? What’s wrong?!”

“Ah...ah...ah…” She was half turned and trying to curl herself into a ball. Another driver honked at Seb angrily when he drove past them and Miz flinched violently, covering her head and sobbing. Ok, now Seb was worried, the Daycare was right there so he quickly pulled over and turned the car off. “Miz?”

She was whimpering as she trembled in the passenger seat. Seb really wanted to see what was wrong, did her visit to the Doors not go well? Did the connection not work? But the twins… Seb bit his lip. “Hey Miz…it’s okay…” He reached out and gently pet her head, she seemed to have calmed down once the car stopped moving at least. “Look, I...need to go check on the twins. I’ll be RIGHT back ok?” He waited for her to nod before he left the car, throwing her one last, worried glance.

The worried man entered the Daycare, only to be attacked and insulted by a woman. “Your kids are monsters! What kind of parents allow their children to behave like savages?!” Seb ignored the woman who angrily followed him and headed for the principal's office, where he found his twins curled up in a corner, trembling, as another boy was getting attended to by a nurse, who was bandaging a large part of his arm.
Oh boy…

The kids’ teacher was worriedly speaking to the principal when both women noticed him. “Oh, Mr. Pines! You’re finally here!”

“You shouldn’t have called my wife, we have explained already that in any emergency you call me. Multiple times.” Seb said seriously, growling as the woman sat with the injured and bruised boy. “They would be better if their mother was present!” The angry mother snapped. “Shut up!” Seb snapped back at her and walked over to the whimpering twins. “I wanna know what happened.”

“Mr. Pines…we have been very tolerant with Zully’s preferences, but today she-”

“I am not addressing you.” Seb looked at the teacher angrily. “I am talking to them.” He crouched in front of his children. “I wanna know what happened.” He repeated. Zoe wiped her eyes and Seb noticed the smudge of blood on her mouth. Ok. First mystery resolved. “He was mean to Zach just because he wants to hurt him!”

“Why was he mean?”

“I-I told Miss Blossom my name was-was Zach now...but-but then she said I was a girl and that I couldn’t be called Zach…” The whimpering boy sniffed and Seb’s glare hardened. “What else?”

“Then during break time Za-Zach went to the bathroom and that boy pushed him because he said he couldn’t go to that bathroom even though he’s a boy too and then called him a girl!” Zoe growled, her eyes slowly turning red. “He tried...he tried to make me show him if I was really a boy but I got angry and I kicked him away and started punching him…” Zach admitted quietly. “Then I helped too and bit him really really hard!” Zoe nodded firmly. She leaned in to whisper something to her dad. “I didn’t burn him though, but I really wanted to.”

Seb turned to look at the woman who insulted him. “Alright. What were you saying about my kids?” He growled. “Your son, tried to make my son show him his genitals!” The woman, blinded by the anger, turned to look at the principal. “You shouldn’t even be letting girls into the boy’s bathroom! You’re messing up her head! My son didn’t want girls in a space for boys!”

“A fucking bathroom is a fucking bathroom!” Seb stood up in front of the kids who were still curled up on the corner. “And we’ve told you how Zach feels! You should make him feel safe at school!” He snarled at the teacher and principal.

“We-we have accepted a lot about...your child, Mr. Pines...but the norms are clear...and that child’s birth certificate and papers establish she is a girl…” The principal said, almost guiltily. “And your kids have hurt John…”

Seb sighed. “I WILL apologize for that. I’ve told them that it’s not right to hurt others. So, how about this, Zach and Zoe apologize to John for hurting him and he apologizes to Zach for the sexual harassment. Deal?”

The woman seethed. “Your child’s face is covered in my son’s blood! And you’re acting as if nothing big has happened!”

“Ok, listen, lady, I am trying to solve this like a decent person and YOU aren’t HELPING ME!” Seb shouted. “Your son shouldn’t have made those stupid comments in the first place! He shouldn’t have called my son a girl in the first place! OR attempted to harass Zach into flashing him! And I am offering A LOT by even making the twins apologize to HIS LITTLE ASS even though he deserved it for insulting Zach and trying to see him NAKED!!”
“Yeah!” Zoe grinned maliciously at John. “Silence, Zoe!” Seb scolded her. She pouted but sat back down with her brother. Seb was staring at the woman. “I don’t care about any of the confusion with Zach’s gender. Tell me THIS, do you think it’s ok for your son to demand to see someone’s genitals? Is that something you taught him to do? Check someone’s body to see what they have? Because that’s disgusting.”

The woman drew herself up angrily. “Well if your child doesn’t want to be checked then she shouldn’t.”

“So what I’m HEARING here is that YOU think it’s OKAY for people to STRIP CHECK other people to see if they’re male or female?!” Seb sneered at her. “Do you do that too? Just demand anyone you meet to drop their pants so you can get a nice, long look at-”

The woman slapped him. The principle and one of the teachers were watching awkwardly, unsure what to do. Zoe and Zach gasped. The woman hit their dad! Seb slowly turned his head back to look at the woman. “Oh my. And YOU were the first to react with physical violence? And you have the GALL to critique how I raise my kids?”

Seb turned to look at his shocked kids. “Bring your stuff, we’re leaving.” The twins didn’t need to be told twice and ran away to get their backpacks and lunchboxes in the classroom. Lucky for them, it was recess.

Seb left the room with his head high and calm, but he was shaking with rage inside. He wanted to kill them...how the fuck dare they?! He met with the kids in the hallway and they grabbed his hands. “Is your face hurting?” Zoe asked innocently. “Nah…” Seb smiled down at the twins tiredly. They walked outside where the car was parked and Miz was staring nervously out of the open window.

“Miz!” The twins gasped with a smile, their fight easily forgotten because their Daddy put those dumb people who were shouting at them in their places, and ran towards the car. Miz noticed they were approaching and smiled in relief. “Hey you little monsters, is it time to pick you up already?” She slipped out of the car to wrap the two of them in a hug.

“Um, no. But Daddy picked us up earlier because we hit a kid, but he deserved it so it’s ok.” Zoe nodded and Miz smiled. “Of course it’s ok if he deserved it.” The black-haired girl looked at Seb leaning against the car. “Are...you ok?” She thought the weird face he was making was because he was sad or worried, but he suddenly snorted.

“They beat the shit out of that kid…” He whispered, holding back laughter just for the sake of being a responsible parent. No. You don’t laugh at other people’s disgraces even if they were funny as hell. Miz laughed and ruffled the twins’ curly blond hair. “Nice~”

Seb looked at Miz, she seemed fine now. What had distressed her so much earlier? He wondered if he should ask. “Well, no sense sticking around here. Come on, let’s go home.” He helped the twins climb back into the car and noticed Miz hadn’t moved. “Miz?”

“You go, I...kinda want to check out the neighborhood. I haven’t really left the house much after all, and if I’m gonna be staying long term now, I might as well see what else there is around here?” It was a very clear explanation that made perfect sense...but Seb had seen enough bullshit to recognize bullshit when he heard it. Also, this wasn't even nearly at Miz's usual levels of half-truths, meaning something was really bothering her.

“Miz, what’s wrong?” He knelt down to look her in the eye. She pressed her lips together. “You’re not falling for it huh?” Seb snorted. “Who do you think you’re talking to?” She rolled her eyes.
“Right...of course.” She sighed. “I’m afraid of cars.” Seb looked at his car where the twins were waiting to go home, and back at the pouting girl. He grinned. “What? Why? Are cars in space too horrible? I drive pretty decently...” Okay, so he DID speed a little earlier but he was usually a very careful driver.

Miz sighed. “I… had an accident in a car… before being a demon, you know, as a mortal… and I’m terrified of being in one.” Seb pouted. Being scared of something wasn’t nice. He remembered when he had a complete aversion to water, it made you panic, just like Miz had done when she woke up. “Oh...I didn’t know...” He rubbed the back of his neck. “Sorry for dragging you here.” She shrugged “It’s...fine...” she was rubbing at her arms and shivering.

Seb wondered if he should try to help her get over this fear? Like how Mabel had helped him with his water problem? “Hey...if I drive really, really carefully, would that be ok?” Miz turned up to look at him and hesitated. “Well-

“You!” The both of them jumped when the angry mother from earlier stormed out, dragging her son behind her. She glared at Seb. “Ugh!!” Seb groaned. “What do you want now?!” He snapped. His bad mood coming back. “We aren’t in the building anymore, so daycare conversation is over!” He glared. He was glad the kids were already waiting in the car. The woman opened her mouth to say something but her eyes dropped to Miz, who blinked curiously up at her. The woman took in Miz’s obviously asian features and frowned. “Who’s this?"

“None of your business is who she is. We’re going home. Good day.” Seb said with a strained smile while placing a hand on Miz’s shoulder and moving himself in front of her. The woman frowned. “Is she your kid?” She looked down at Miz. “Do you know this man?”

Miz blinked. “Yeah. Seb is my dad.” She responded. At the confused look on the woman’s face, Miz rolled her eyes “Adopted.” The woman glanced up at Seb and then at Miz again. She huffed and turned away, dragging her son behind her. Once they turned the corner, Seb remarked “Well, the rumor mill around the neighborhood is going to go nuts.”

Miz giggled. “Well it’s true! I AM pretty much your family?” Then she hesitated, looking strained. "...right?"

Seb ran a hand through her hair and grinned. "Of course. You're my precious soul-sister. And… I guess my daughter now?" He wondered how that would work. Miz perked up, relief flooding her. It wasn't a full confirmation but it WAS a confirmation. She was his Family, not the bad type of family either. The good type.

She looked back at the car. “...how close are we to home?” she considered it.

“Like, a 5 minute drive.” Seb assured her. Miz fidgeted a bit. “Ok…” She opened the door and climbed back in. She trembled but buckled herself in and curled down low in her seat, covering her face with her arms. Seb sent her a worried look. Miz’s eyes were squeezed shut and her breathing was a little erratic. But she still forced herself to stay in the car. Seb drove carefully, it wasn’t too far and it was all along quiet neighborhood streets so he could go slowly. The twins were whining in the back, tired from sitting for so long.

“Daddy, can we go for ice cream?” Zoe asked as Seb turned the car down another street and the man laughed. “What do you think happened back there, kid? I’m still upset you bit him, ew, now I want you to wash your mouth when we get home.”

“But you said he deserved it.” Zoe whined.
“Yeah…” Seb nodded slowly, giving Miz reassuring smiles from time to time. “But even if he deserved it, it doesn’t mean you should have done it…” Seb sighed. Give him a break! He was having conflicting emotions right now and he didn’t like it! Should he even ground the kids? Biting and punching were bad…but that boy started it, and Seb would have reacted the same as a child…

“Ok.” Seb finally declared. “You aren’t grounded, but we aren’t going for ice cream after the doctor’s appointment either.”

“WHAT?!” They cried. “But we had a deal!” Zach pouted. “Ah ah! We made a promise!” Seb sing-songed and Miz managed to laugh a little bit. “And you broke it. We said you would behave at school and biting is not behaving…” The twins both whined but couldn’t say anything to defend themselves. They DID bite that boy, even if he deserved it, and biting means they weren’t behaving. Miz couldn’t help but smile and tease, uncurling slightly when she realized the road was quiet and there weren’t other cars driving around, “Well, I was behaving, so do I get ice cream?”

She teased as the twins gasped in horror. “No! No fair!” They cried.

“Hey, hey! Don’t shout!” The man winced at the high pitched scream squared. He sighed in relief when he saw the house and he opened the garage to park the car. The twins were pouting in the backseat, pouting with frowns (looking absolutely adorable), Seb and Miz couldn’t help but laugh (though Seb noticed Miz’s knuckles were white from how tightly she was holding onto her seat, half curled defensively away from the sides of the car). The twins were unbuckled and sent to wash themselves and change their clothes, while they took their backpacks from the trunk.

“Are you ok? You seemed a little better this time?” Seb asked the girl. Miz smiled softly. “The distraction helped. It got my mind off it.” She rubbed her arm “Also, no one was honking at you so that was good.” She still shivered. “Well, I’m glad…” Seb smiled.

“Do I still get ice cream?” Miz asked and the man sighed. “Ok, yes. There’s a bucket hidden behind some frozen meat in the fridge. Enjoy yourself!” Miz cheered and raced off, trying to settle the trembling in her hands. Seb shook his head. Really, it was difficult to remember she was (probably) an adult. He checked the time, still a few hours before the twins’ doctors appointment. Well, hopefully he could get some more of his own work done before then.

Miz hummed to herself as she pulled open the lid for the ice cream before realizing she and Seb hadn’t had lunch yet. She looked sadly at the ice cream before putting the lid back on and pushing it back into the freezer. Real food first. As much as she loved ice cream, it wasn’t particularly filling. Especially when her hunger began acting up.

She looked over and suddenly realized there was rice on the counter along with what looked to be the beginning of soup. She checked on it and sighed in relief that Seb had remembered to turn the heat off before he left. She hummed and thought about what she could cook. Well the twins still had their lunch boxes. Feeling lazy, she flicked her fingers and summoned them to her. A quick check inside showed they had some sandwiches. Hm...rice, stew and sandwiches? Meh. She could work with that.

She summoned some cauliflower and started working.

Seb collapsed on his couch when he was back. Stupid preschool…

He got his drawing ready, looked up the model’s measures and started cutting the fabric. Ugh. Due to his procrastination, he was the one who had to make the last two dresses for the show. It was alright though, he liked it. As he worked, he called the model to agree on a date for her to come by and try the dress on at least twice, called his angry manager, who was upset he didn’t have everything ready, to tell him to calm down because he was working on it and he always finished on time, and as he sewed the fabric happily, he decided to try calling Wanda as well to inform her of what had happened.

It should be her break time, so she would be able to pick up. “Sebas?” Hehe, he knew it!

“Hi, honey…I took the children home earlier…”

“Really? Ugh, please tell me they aren’t hurt…” Wanda asked from the other side of the phone.

“Nope. They’re fine….” Seb laughed sheepishly. “But they punched a kid several times until he turned into a blueberry…and Zoe bit the boy hard enough to make him bleed. Cool, huh?”

Wanda fell silent. “Are you kidding me…?” She asked faintly. “Oh my god...And why-”

“Nah, the kids weren’t at fault this time. A kid insulted Zach and they just defended themselves.” Seb said as he put the first piece of fabric on the mannequin. “I also fought with the kid’s mother…I’m sorry.”

“I can’t believe you, Sebastian!” Wanda shouted. “How are we even going to go to the next PTA meeting now?!?” She groaned. It was too much information to dump on her all at once.

“Yeah...about that…” Seb grimaced. He looked at his drawing and started sewing the detailed work by hand. “I was thinking of pulling them out...they’re starting kindergarten after the summer anyway!” before Wanda could protest, he added “Besides, Miz is here to look after them now. Plus, I’m sure she can teach them reading and writing much better than the teachers at the daycare.”

Wanda sighed from the other side of the phone. “Well...I suppose you’re right.”

“I’m always right! Except when I’m wrong, but that doesn’t happen often~” Seb laughed. Wanda groaned in affectionate exasperation. “Right. Well...we can talk about this when I get home.” Seb nodded. That’s fair. The phone made the beeping noise that signaled another incoming call. “Well, talk to you later Wanda, there’s a call on the other line…”

“Love you too~” Seb clicked the button and heard Stanford’s voice, “Hello? Sebastian?”

“Oh, what’s up, Sixer?” Seb asked. “It hasn’t been a day! Ya missing me already?” He laughed. Ford cleared his throat “A-actually, I would like to speak with Xin...or Miz? Or whoever he is being currently.”

“O-Oh…” Seb’s smile was erased off his face. Right...his brother and Miz...he shuddered a bit. “Alright, let me see where she is, I bet she is still eating-FUCK I DIDN’T FINISH MAKING LUNCH!” The man ran to the kitchen with his phone in hand and sighed in relief when he saw Miz was finishing cooking their food.

“Miz, I love you!” Seb cried and then looked at his phone. “Don’t worry, Sixer, I mean it in a brotherly way!”

“O...kay?” Ford was confused. “It’s Fordsie, Miz, he wants to talk to you.” Seb offered Miz his phone. She took it with a brief look of uncertainty. Seb didn’t miss that. “H-hello?”

“O-Oh! Xin...Miz, right now...right?”

“Right…” The girl repeated awkwardly. Seb could hear what Ford was saying because it was in hands free mode. “What’s up Fordsie?”

“I’m sorry! I didn’t mean to hurt you. I was startled and...I reacted before I remembered and I just want you to know that I won’t do that again. I’m so, very sorry.”

Miz’s face went expressionless. “I told you it’s fine. I shouldn’t have...you’re obviously still uncomfortable with me being...well...ME...and-” She sighed, rubbing her face. “I think we shouldn’t mess around with ropes again for a while...your hands are good enough...” Seb gaped in shock, not knowing what was bothering him more. The fact Ford hurt Miz or the fact that HE USED ROPES!

“I am not uncomfortable doing it with your true form!” Ford insisted and Seb’s mouth opened even more. “Please...give me another chance! I know my...rejection of your triangle form must have hurt your feelings but I swear I won’t-”

“It’s fine.” Miz said firmly. “You still hate Bill. I get it. We...we don’t have to...I won’t force you to...look at me when I’m like that.” Her voice wobbled a little. “You shouldn’t have to force yourself to...”

“But I’m not! Really! Please Miz, I really DO want to try it with you in your true form.” Ford begged. “There’s so much I can learn about your anatomy and…”

“Maybe not now.” Miz shot him down. “We’re still new to this, I don’t...want us to rush it. Let’s just take this slow. I can...try meeting you in my true form and...just...hang out. No touching, no sessions, just...hang out.”

“...Ok.” Ford agreed. “If that’s what you think is best.” He sighed. “I really AM sorry.”

“I know.” Miz closed her eyes and breathed. “What the other Bill put you through was awful. I shouldn’t expect you to be over it, even if it’s been 5 years.” after all, Ford had been haunted by that other Bill for nearly two decades. That was a long time for humans.

“Yeah.” A sound came from the phone like Ford had sat down on a rolling chair. “He...hurt me, betrayed me...nearly drove me mad with those...nightmares…”

“He chained you up as well…” Miz added. “That...must have been unpleasant. And us, with the ropes and...I think we shouldn’t try using anything more than our actual bodies for a while.”

“...That might be best.” Ford’s voice was slightly muffled, like he was rubbing his face. “When can I see you again? For either a normal session or just...hanging out?”

“Hm…” Miz stirred the food in the pot. “Maybe tomorrow night.” Ford made a sound of agreement. “Alright then. Thank you, for giving me another chance. I really am sorry.” Miz managed a smile “It’s ok. I forgive you. You’re too cute to stay mad at anyway.” Ford chuckled lightly and the two said their goodbyes before Miz closed the call and handed the phone back to Sebastian.

The poor man received the phone with a trembling hand. What the heck did he just hear…? Ford and Miz were going to try it out in Miz’s BILL FORM?! How...how would that even work?! Holy Fuck, he didn’t need that image in his head! “I-I think I am going to...go find the twins...yeah…”
He stumbled out of the kitchen and bumped against a wall. “AAAHHH!!” He screamed once he was out of view and Miz rolled her eyes. What a silly man…

Seb wasn’t kidding when he said he was going with the twins, they saw him reach Zoe’s bed to lay down. Sir Bedazzle, who was in his tree house napping until Seb woke him up, got out and jumped over Seb’s butt, barking happily. He loved all his owners! “Hehe, he’s on your butt!” Zach pointed out usefully. Seb groaned into the pillow. “I need to bleach my braaaain!” Sir Bedazzle jumped on Seb’s back and rolled around, barking innocently. The twins looked at each other and shrugged. Daddy was weird.

“Kids~ lunch is ready~” Miz called from downstairs. The two cheered and raced downstairs, Sir Bedazzle running after them, barking and jumping on his little legs.

Seb stayed there a few minutes until the twins and Sir Bedazzle came back for him. “You need to eat too, dummy!” Zoe said as she pulled his left leg and Zach the right. Their acorn puppy barked in support. “Noooo!!” Seb moaned and held onto the head of the bed. He didn’t want to go down and see Miz right now! She just talked about how she had sex with his brother using ropes right in front of him!!

The twins shared a look and nodded. Seb yelped when a blue and green glow surrounded him and lifted him off the bed. The twins had been practicing with Miz and found they worked better if they used their powers together. The two squinted in concentration as they carried him down the stairs that way.

“Kids! Put me down!” Seb ordered. “Nope! We are eating lunch and Miz said all of us must eat together!” Zach announced. He was the first to lose his concentration when they reached the table and half the glow disappeared, leaving just Zoe’s green. Zoe smiled at the delicious food. She ran towards it to take a seat, the green glow left Seb entirely and he fell to the floor with a thud. “Ugh…”

“Come on, lazy butt, the sooner we eat, the sooner I can clean the dishes.” Miz called out. She was already scarfing down her fried rice with stir fried cauliflower and chicken. There were small bowls with soup next to everyone’s bowls and the cheese sandwiches were lined up neatly in the middle of the table. She took one and dipped it into the soup before taking a bite. The twins were chewing on their food with happy smiles, bits of rice stuck to their round cheeks.

Seb slowly stood up from the floor and took a seat next to the twins, on the opposite side from Miz. He slowly grabbed fork and stuffed his mouth with chicken and rice. When he managed to chew and swallow everything he put in his mouth, he looked at Miz with a sigh. “If...If your...sessions with Ford, you know...if they aren’t going well or...or he hurts you...just-just tell me ok?” He said finally. They were both adults, at least he thought so, and they were consenting to have kinky sex... however, he wouldn’t allow Ford to hurt his...little sister!

Miz nodded. “Of course. I’m not gonna let him do anything to me I don’t want.” She lifted the bowl to drink the soup. “I mean, they do hurt, but in a good way? You know?”

“I-I don’t really know, yeah…” Seb said blushing. “We-we don’t do it that way…” He mumbled in embarrassment. The twins looked at the clock and, remembering how to tell the time, they realized that if they dilly dallied, they could probably miss the doctor’s appointment. So, Zach and Zoe started eating very slowly, even when the food was delicious. It was worth it if they missed having to get shots! Miz frowned at them. She flicked her fingers and suddenly the food smelled like the most delicious thing they had ever experienced. The twins’ mouths watered and they couldn’t hold back from eating quickly. It was so good. Within a few minutes they had finished their food AND drank the soup. They blinked as their senses seemed to go back to normal and gasped at Miz.
“No fair!” Zoe whined. She knew the dragon must have used some kinda of magic on them! That shit eating grin on her face proved it. “Well, looks like you two are done eating~” She sang. She wasn't technically using magic on them, she magic'ed their food.

“N-No!” Zach bit his lip as he thought of something to say. “We-we are still hungry! Yes! Right, Zoe?” He asked his sister and the girl rubbed her tummy. “Really hungry...I guess we will have to stay here and eat because we need new-tree-rents to grow up!”

Seb realized what they were doing as well. “Well, you can have a second plate…” The twins beamed. “AFTER your appointment. And I want to see you eat everything when we come back.” He stood up, taking his empty plate to the sink to rinse. “Go brush your teeth.”

Miz grinned madly at the worried look on the twins’ faces. She loved when Seb used his Dad Powers to order the kids around! She snickered like the evil little demon she was as the kids walked off with their heads hung low. She gathered up all their plates and bowls to put next to the sink so Seb could rinse them. “So they’re getting a check up or just shots?”

“Both.” Seb replied. “I also want to ask the doctor what to do about Zach.” Miz nodded. “Well he’s still only 5 years old. If he’s still a boy when he’s older he will need hormone treatments...if he wants them.” She frowned. “Would you...want me to just...turn him into a boy?”

Seb looked at Miz with his eye wide. She could do that, couldn’t she?...But what if she did, what if he accepted her offer to change Zach entirely and he...decided it wasn’t what he wanted? They were trying to be supportive of the twins’ decisions and this was one of them, but maybe they needed more time?

“Do you think he might change his mind later? We wouldn’t mind either way but...I can’t be certain of what he wants yet…” Seb laughed nervously. The twins still struggled to tie up their shoes correctly, he wouldn’t want to make such an important decision for Zach. Miz patted his back. “Not right now. When he’s older and can make a proper, informed decision.” She shrugged, "Besides, some people do change their minds. But that's on them. Their body, their feelings, their choice."

“...You don’t want to come with me? I...I will break if the twins start crying in fear.” He pouted. “Maybe...you can tell me more ‘bout your relationship with Fordsie?” Miz hesitated at the idea of going back in the car but sighed when she realized she couldn’t keep avoiding them forever. Out in space it was easy to do since cars weren’t really a ‘thing’ that people bothered with. But if she’s gonna stay here on Alternative Earth then she had to get over this. Plus, she hated being so afraid of them.

“Fine, I’ll come along. You know it helps if they have something to hug while getting their shots.” She told him. “I used to bring a little stuffed animal with me.” and when she was older, she would just listen to her ipod really loud and pretend she wasn’t sitting there as the vampires- wait, sorry, doctors, jabbed her with needles. She remembered how her mother would laugh whenever she called the doctor a “吸血僵尸”!

Seb smiled widely and hugged her. “Thank you! I’ll ask the kids to bring a toy, wait for us in the garage.” Miz nodded and slowly walked towards the car. It was a nice, scary, black car. Wanda had a gray one while Seb’s was black. The three Pines came and Seb was helping the twins carry at least 6 stuffed toys in his arms. “They wanted to take them all…” He sighed. He sat the stuffed toys on the twins’ legs after he buckled their seatbelts and then turned around to buckle Miz’s seatbelt. She was sitting in the back this time, between the twins.

“Yeah, Daddy! Drive super, super slow!” Zoe supported the idea with a smile. If they went slow enough they could miss the appointment. Seb rolled his eyes while Miz giggled. “I should be fine. After all…” Miz reached up to hug the twins “I’ve got you two here to protect me right?” She was shaking a little but smiled regardless.

“UH HUH!” They exclaimed. “We only use magic for good because we help people!” They agreed. Seb smiled and started the car before driving in the hospital’s direction. Miz was tense during the ride, this time longer than the distance to the Daycare, but the twins kept her occupied and distracted by telling her the names and history of their stuffed toys. Apparently, Mrs. Fwuff the Kangaroo had a divorce with Mr. Pom, the Dinosaur. Who knew?

Eventually, while classical music played softly on the radio, they reached the hospital! Seb left the car to the valet parking and threatened to make his life miserable if he found so much as a scratch. The twins held two stuffed toys each to their chest with one arm as they held onto Miz’s hands with their other. If you looked at them, you would coo at the sight of a grown up man carrying four stuffed toys, 1 penguin, 1 crocodile and two puppies, while a little girl held hands with a set of twins.
He registered them in for the appointment as Miz and the twins waited and then they only had to wait for the kids’ pediatrician to call them.
Miz chatted with the kids, distracting them from the upcoming examination and subsequent shots. A few other families were in the waiting room. A mother with her son was trying to calm the boy as he fussed. “Come on Jeremy, the nice doctor will give you a check up and then you get a nice piece of candy. Isn’t that nice?”

“NO!” The boy shrieked, throwing a tantrum right there in the waiting room. “I hate the doctor! I hate her! No! No!”

The doctor’s assistant called on Jeremy’s mom to go in next and she took her screaming child inside. The twins shifted nervously and scooted closer to Miz and Daddy. “Scared.” Zach and Zoe whispered.

Seb stroked their blond curls. “Don’t worry, that kid was scared because he was a little kid and you two are big kids right?” They sniffed and nodded. “Yeah...we’re five…” Zoe showed him 5 little fingers and Seb kissed her tiny hand. “Exactly! And you know the doctor is only there to help! That kid was too young to understand.”

The twins pouted but nodded. They understood. “Yes…”

Miz patted his shoulder. “Good job…” She whispered. The twins sat up straighter after that, trying to prove they were strong and not scared. Miz couldn’t help but remember all the times she’d been in a hospital as a human...the time she broke her leg was the worst. She sincerely hoped the twins never break any of their bones. She shivered at the memory. Even now she hated stairs, and looking down from the top of stairs, and heights in general…

The higher up you were, the more things broke when you fall.

Seb’s leg started bouncing as he got distracted, thinking about the upcoming fashion show, and the twins giggled, putting their toys on their dad’s leg to watch them jump before falling to the floor and repeating the process. Even Miz joined in with the game. Eventually, the twins’ names were called by the assistant. “Zoe and Zully Pines?”

Zach pouted angrily and pulled at his dad’s sleeve. “Dad…?”

“We’ll change it, ok? Let’s go.” Seb sighed, so many things to do, and grabbed the twins’ hands to take them inside the doctor’s office.

She was a nice woman, middle aged, with dark hair and dark eyes. She had been the twins’ pediatrician since they were born. Wanda and Seb trusted her a lot, she was the best they could find for their babies.

“Oh, hello little ones!” She greeted the nervous kids with a kind smile. “We’re going to do a full check up today alright? Look at you, you’ve both gotten so much bigger.”

“We turned 5 last Friday…” Zoe shared with the woman. “All of our family came to visit us! My daddy’s triplets, uncle Shermie, my cousins, and we got lots of presents!” She was warming up already. Seb and Miz smiled at the girl’s social nature. Seb looked like such a proud papa it was hilarious.

“Did you like the presents you got, Zu?” The doctor absently realized the younger twin still wore their hair short.

“Y-Yeah…” He smiled a bit. “But my name…” He trailed off. What if she also shouted at him like the teachers or Amanda’s mom did? He hated being called a girl…
“His name is Zach now…” Zoe smiled. The doctor, Dr. Marshall, only hesitated a second before smiling kindly. “Well that’s a very cool name. Is it short for Zachary?”

“Alright...Who’s going to start with the check up?” The doctor wondered aloud. “I’ll do it!” Zoe volunteered and climbed onto the examination bed without help! The paper sheet rustled as she got on. Dr. Marshall laughed “Alright then Zoe. Just sit down.” She glanced over at Miz. “And who’s your friend?”

“That’s Miz! She’s our new big sister!” Zoe replied, wiggling her feet. Dr. Marshall nodded. “Well it’s very nice to meet you, Miz.” She held out a hand and Miz shook it. She glanced at Sebastian. “A new sister?” she questioned him. Seb grinned and shrugged “It’s a little complicated.” She accepted that answer and moved on. “Alright Zoe, I’m going to check your heart beat now…”

The exam went by normally as she wrote down notes on her clipboard. Finally it was time for the vaccine shot. Zoe whimpered and clutched her stuffed animals. Miz came over and placed her hands on either side of Zoe’s head. “Zoe. Look at me.” She smiled. “Can you count how many eyelashes I have?”

Zoe giggled. That was silly. But she still stared closely at Miz’s face, she liked Miz’s eyes. They were so dark they looked black. It was really cool. “1, 2, 3, 4…” she counted off. She heard the snapping sound of latex and felt Dr. Marshall take hold of her left arm. She faltered and let out a whimper. “Shh, it’s ok, come on Zoe, you lost count.” Miz pulled her attention back to her, pressing her face close, their foreheads touching. “Come on, you count my eyelashes and I count yours.”

“O-okay…” Zoe tried really hard to focus on Miz’s face instead of the cold swab being brushed over her shoulder. “1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6-” She laughed a little when Miz began poking her cheeks with her thumbs, Miz’s nails were pointy. “-7, 8, 9, 10, 11…”

“Done.” Dr. Marshall said. Zoe blinked in surprise. It was done already? Miz pulled back with a proud grin. “See? That wasn’t so hard.” Zoe looked over to see Dr. Marshall put a cotton ball and bandaid over her shoulder. “Oh.” The five year old grinned. That wasn’t scary at all. She laughed as Miz picked her up into a hug.

Zach, who was sitting on his dad’s lap, looked up when Zoe was released from her hug. “It didn’t hurt?” He asked softly. “Nopey!” The blonde girl smiled. “Miz made something magical because it didn’t hurt!”

Seb put Zach on the floor and nudged him to go to the bed. “It is your turn, baby. You’ll see it doesn’t hurt.” Seb, not even drunk or possessed, would get a shot himself, crazy huge needle in his arm? Hah! No thanks! But kids had to get them.

“Oh, there we go!” The woman picked up Zach by his armpits and lifted him up to the examination bed, the paper Zoe had been sitting on, crunched. Just like she did with Zoe, the doctor checked his eyes, his throat, his heartbeat, his weight and height. There was a chart with the averages of height and weight by ages and sexes. The light blue part was for boys, and the pink part for girls. Zach innocently searched for his age in the blue part and hoped he was in the right height.

“Oh, Zach, can you sit down again for your vaccine?” The doctor asked as she checked the kid’s file. Miz was by the nervous boy’s side immediately and held one of his tiny hands while Miz grabbed his stuffed toy with the other. “Hi Zach!”

“Hi…” Zach winced when his arm was grabbed. “Dad…”

“Hey, why are you scared?” Miz made the dinosaur ask. “I am here to protect you! Let’s see! Can you sing the alphabet to me? Oh! I never learned it!” The dinosaur wailed.

Seb took his phone to snap a photo to show Wands later.

“Um...Is that all the letters?”

“I also know the alphabet!” Zoe offered innocently and Seb picked her up to sit her on his lap. “Sing it for me?” That way, both of them would be distracted.

“No...l, m, n, o, p…” Zach continued. Dr. Marshall wiped the little drop of blood and put a cotton ball and a bandaid on him. “There you are, Zach, you two were really brave!”

Zach poked at his bandaid and smiled at Miz who also pulled him into a hug. “You see? It wasn’t that bad!” She squeezed the adorable toddler. He hugged her back. Miz made everything better.

Seb looked over at Dr. Marshall. “Hey, Miz, can you take the kids outside for a bit? I have to talk to Dr. Marshall about a few things.” The girl nodded and took each of the twin’s hands and exited the exam room. “Come on you little monsters, you don’t get ice cream but you DO get a lollipop.”

“I want ice cream more…” Zoe whined. Miz lowered her voice to whisper “Maybe the lollipops will magically be ice cream flavor…”

“Ohhh! I want chocolate fudge!” Zach jumped in excitement. Zoe tugged on Miz’s hand “I want strawberry!” The door closed and Seb grinned wryly. Of course Miz was going to help them cheat. He shook his head, well, they did very well taking their shots so he wasn’t going to say anything. Dr. Marshall was watching him “I’m guessing you wish to speak to me about Zach?”

Seb nodded when he saw the door closed. “You may have noticed he has changed his name now…” He laughed nervously but without humor. He bit his lip. “Wanda and I were reading about this...we-we want to make Zach happy, but-but are we really helping him by letting him do this?”

Dr. Marshall gestured for Seb to sit down. He did so, bouncing his leg and wringing his hands together. She gave him a gentle smile. “No one knows for sure what is good for their child. But Zach is still young. I say you let him be whoever he wants to be. Within reason of course. Don’t attempt to get him any corrective surgeries or hormone treatments, not yet. Once he’s older you will know for sure.” She sighed and looked at the chart where she’d written down their measurements. “I think you and Wanda are doing a fine job. You’re supportive, which is more than most families are. Now, I don’t suggest anything drastic like legally changing his name and documents until he is older, which would bring with it, an entire set of problems, but until you know for sure, you shouldn’t permanently change anything.”

“But what if he is completely sure now?” Seb insisted and frowned at his leg bouncing. He manually stopped it with his hands. Dumb body. “What if not doing anything now is going to make everything horrible in the future?!“ Seb didn’t want his kid hating them, hating him. He would die if he lost Zach.

“Today they had a fight with a boy after the teacher called Zach, Zully in front of all the kids…” Seb confessed. “The other boy didn’t let Zach get in the boy’s bathroom and...demanded that Zach show him he was really a boy…” Seb coughed and the doctor frowned worriedly. “Should we really just...let that happen? Zach is not an aggressive kid but he seemed to be really upset by being called a girl…”

“Like…” The doctor sighed. She hadn’t had many cases about this. She wasn’t used to dealing with stuff like this, not with children THIS young. “Like I said, we shouldn’t rush things…” The woman smiled warmly at the worried, pouting man. “You could take Zach to the psychologist maybe? To start knowing how he feels about this.” She sighed. “I’m a pediatrician, not a child psychologist. My best suggestion is you get Zach to a professional to talk about how he feels. He might have to speak with them long term as he grows up and puberty happens, since a lot can change during that period of a child’s life.”

She reached out and patted Sebastian’s hand. “And I can see that you only want to do what’s best for Zach in a way that would make him happy. In the end, support from his family is what he needs most.” Seb nodded, tearing up faintly “And you’re doing a great job, you and Wanda are wonderful parents.” Seb wiped his tears from his brow and smiled. “Ok...thank you…” The woman grabbed four lollipops she forgot to give the twins and smiled. “It’s alright, Sebastian. here, for you and your...older daughter.”

Seb’s eye widened and he grinned a bit more. “Thanks, Doc!” He took the lollipops happily and the doctor chuckled when he stood up. “Thank you.”

Seb walked to the door and went to the waiting room to meet with the twins and Miz. She was telling them a story about discovering a species of alien that looked exactly like a cheeseburger and how she had accidentally eaten their king. Some other parents and children were listening to the story as well and laughing as they thought she was simply making up a story to entertain the twins. Seb shivered at the knowledge that Miz was, if not cannibalistic since those burger people aren’t Flatlanders and therefore by the definition of cannibalism it didn’t count, a man eater. “I apologized! And I even brought them all back to life afterward. The Souls didn’t get pulled away since they were in my stomach and I can’t digest Souls without permission…”

Seb sat down so Miz could finish her story. He didn’t want more parents getting angry at him today. It took a while, but the girl finally finished her story and everyone, children and adults alike, clapped. “Thank you, thank you!” Miz smiled. Ah! The feeling of happiness coming from them tasted so good!

Zoe noticed her dad sitting there on his phone and trotted towards him “Daddy, did you hear Miz’s story?” she threw herself into his lap, laughing. Seb grinned and ruffled her hair “I sure did. Now, you want your lollipops?” He held them out and Zoe grabbed at them immediately. “Gimme! Gimme!”

Seb held his hand out of her reach “What do you say?” He had to teach them manners after all. They sucked, but they had to learn them. Zoe and Zach both stared at him with wide eyes “Please~?” Dear lord their puppy dog eyes were getting better. Seb laughed and handed them the candy.

Gah! He loved them so fucking much! The mystery twins had made him weak and his children had him on his knees for them! “Let’s go home, squirts.” Seb dragged Zoe closer to him as she struggled to open the paper and they walked to the exit. Miz grabbed the toys and Zach before she followed Sebas.

“I don’t get a lollipop?” Miz pouted as they walked. The man ignored the girl until they reached the parking lot. He handed them the ticket to get his car back and pulled out another lollipop from his shirt pocket. “Tah-dah!” He then held it above her head and watched her jump for it. The angry pout on her face was adorable. “No fair!!!!” Miz wailed.
Seb laughed wickedly as the twins licked their lollipops with amused expressions. “I will kill you in your sleep!” Miz growled. “Oh yeah?” Seb raised an eyebrow. “You wouldn’t do that.” He grinned. “You love me!” He crouched and hugged the twins. “And you would leave these little babies orphans!” Miz folded her arms and shrugged. “Wanda will still be here.” Seb laughed and handed her the lollipop. “Well I’m sure my babies would miss me if I was gone.” Zach and Zoe nodded “Don’t kill daddy. Even if he’s a meanie butt.”

Miz grumbled, tore off the paper and put the candy in her mouth to suck on it. “I still know where you sleep…” The car was brought out, Seb gave the poor young man an intimidating look, just because he was a meanie butt, before getting the kids and Miz (who hesitated a little but still went in, trembling) into the car.

“Daddy we want to eat something!” Zoe roared with her hands in the air. “Fries!” Zach declared. Miz smiled a little as she burrowed herself deeper into the seat, gripping her seatbelt tightly. Seb grinned as he drove carefully. “You said you were still hungry after lunch… You can eat your second plate when we get home…” He laughed madly as the twins started hitting the window, trying to escape.

The twins apologized for lying about still being hungry and were saved from eating again. Seb took them to their room and after a bit of struggle, got the kids to take their nap. Wanda and him had read it was good for them to nap at least a few hours everyday, so they had been doing that since they were babies.

Glad for the moment of peace, Seb and Miz worked on folding the clothes. Miz collected the laundry and Seb ironed them while humming. They heard the front door opening and Seb left the iron aside to go check. To his surprise, Wanda was closing the door and moaning as she kicked her shoes away. “Hey!” Seb smiled widely. “You came home early today!” He leaned to get his deserved kiss. “Oh my god you shaved!! Finally!” Wanda smiled widely. “What the heck do you mean-” She cut him off when she grabbed each side of his face to kiss his lips passionately. They were separated by Miz who came to say hi too and hugged the blonde. “Welcome back~” She sighed as she nuzzled Wanda’s side. “I shaved him! You like it?”

“You didn’t like my beard…?” Seb looked offended and Wanda made a sheepish grin. “I like it more this way…”

Miz looked up at the blonde woman. “It was a nice day. I kept your husband from destroying the house~” She sang. Seb gasped. “Lies and slander!” Wanda rolled her eyes. “Well, thank you anyway Miz.” She turned to Seb who had accepted the fact that no one liked him with facial hair. “How’re the twins? Are they alright? You remembered to go to the doctors right?”

“Of course I remembered, duh!” Seb stuck his tongue out at Miz. Wanda sighed. Was she raising 2 or 4 kids? “The check up went fine! The kids behaved really well.”

“I got them distracted!!” Miz smiled proudly. “It was the same with Pyrone and Pynelope, they hated getting their Standard Immunization shots. But since we travel through the multiverse a lot, it was incredibly necessary for them to be up to date.”
Seb blinked. Pyrone and Pynelope? What kind of names were those? Wait, they sounded like…

“Wait! Are those...Pyronica’s children?!” He cried. Well, Miz DID mention that her kids were adopted, so...she took in Pyronica’s kids. Well, yeah, actually that made perfect sense. Miz nodded. “I should show you some memories of them. They were such cute children…” She looked sad for a bit before shaking her head. No, no angsting right now.

“I bet…” Seb smiled kindly. Wanda glanced between the two of them. “I will come down in a bit, I wanna see the twins.” she said before going upstairs. “We’ll be doing laundry, honey, see ya there!” Seb grinned goofily when she saluted and gave him a thumbs up.

Seb and Miz returned to the laundry room, Miz had disconnected the iron just in case before leaving the room, and they went back to their chores. “I just remembered…” Seb connected the iron and looked at the garment. He liked this shirt from Wanda, it looked hella good on her. “-=Wanda sort of wanted to have triplets...can you imagine the damn chaos?!=” He laughed. “My mom says we were exhausting…”

Miz blinked. “So...are you saying…” her form shifted and suddenly there was a tiny blond toddler standing there. She/he(?) looked just like Zoe and Zach, or rather, like a mix between the two. “…like this?” the child asked in a high voice.

Seb gaped and crouched in front of Miz. “No way…! You-you look just like the twins!” He poked their belly, staring at the heterochromatic eyes, but instead of having a left green eye and right brown eye like Zoe, they had a right green eye and a left brown one. The child squealed when Seb poked them. “That tickles!” they laughed. The child brushed their long, fluffy hair out of their eyes.

“Well, I guess you’re my kid now.” Seb grinned. Wanda chose that moment to enter the room but stopped short. She had just been with both kids!

“Look, Wands, we have triplets now!” Seb declared picking up the kid by his/her(?) armpits. Miz(?) squealed and kicked their little legs. “Weee!” they cheered as they were lifted up. “You better not drop me or I’ll bite you!” Seb laughed. “You sound JUST like Zoe when you say that!”

“Cool, huh?!” Seb smiled. Wanda chuckled and walked towards her husband and Miz. “You do look like them…” She was squealing mentally. It would be so cute if Miz really was their triplet! But then she remembered who and what Miz was. Wanda sighed. “As nice as this is, we can’t just suddenly have another child. Miz is fine since we could say we adopted her from overseas, but a triplet? That’s too much.” Seb and Miz pouted at the same time. Now that Miz looked like the twins, their faces looked almost the same. “But you wanted triplets!” Seb whined and hugged Miz to himself.

Wanda laughed sheepishly. “How would we even explain it?” The world had laws and logic that magic like this simply couldn’t account for. “I could erase and change everyone’s mind!” Miz shrugged. They paused. “But that’s probably a bad thing to do huh?” Wanda sighed. “Well, yes, there’s that. But also…” the blonde woman grimaced before she looked up at Seb. “Miz is dating your brother and that would make this MUCH too...weird…”

Miz blinked in confusion. “Dating Ford? What do you...oh…” a mischievous smirk appeared on their chubby little face. “Yeah, I can see why that would be...problematic…” they giggled.
Seb shuddered. He hadn’t thought of that. Ah! Nope. Nope. He just thought of Ford with Miz in THIS form and he would have to slit Ford’s throat for that and he really didn’t want to. “Wanda’s right. No triplets. Only I can be a triplet!” Miz giggled and ‘poof’ed back into Miz, which made Seb nearly fall over at the sudden change of mass. “Warn me first!”

Miz got back on her feet. “So—me and Ford huh?” she pressed her lips together. “So that’s why everyone was acting so weird…” she grinned, a wide, maniac expression “That’s pretty hilarious…” Miz purred. Seb and Wanda weren’t sure what she was muttering about.

“So…” Seb coughed, glad he wasn’t thinking dark things anymore. “When...did this all happen? I know you met him before so…” He went back to ironing as Wanda helped him to fold the clothes. Miz shrugged. “I’ve seen Fords in different dimensions.” She grinned “And YOU were there for that other Bill who was dating his Ford~” she giggled pervertedly.

“What?” Wanda asked as Seb gagged. “Please don’t remind me…”

“Is it...normal...for demon Bills to...like Stanford?” Wanda asked and turned to look at Seb. “Did you like the Stanford you had in your past life?” She asked innocently. She was not saying Seb liked his brother now, but it would explain why he liked him so much, even when Ford treated him like shit.

“EWWW!!!! NO!! I JUST WANTED TO USE HIM!” Seb complained. Miz made an exaggerated gasp “So you just USED your Ford? Oh my~” she was grinning so hard, her cheeks were starting to hurt. “But to be fair, he is quite handsome and those rough, strong hands of his can grab you in just the right way and~”

“STOP!” Seb shrieked and covered his ears. “MAKE HER STOP!!” Seb sobbed at Wanda who looked quite uncomfortable as well. “Maybe you can talk about something less...private.” Wanda asked as Seb cried on her shoulder. Miz giggled like the demon she was but mercifully stopped talking about it. This was a misunderstanding, yes. But it was too funny not to play along. She wondered how long she could keep this up until Ford realized and tried to correct people. Well...Mabel knew and perhaps she could get the teenager to play along. Mabel was very much an agent of chaos as well. It’s why Bill actually liked her.

Wanda patted her husband’s back. “There...there...it will pass…” Seb sniffed and glared at the grinning girl. Now he didn’t want to know anything about her relationship with Ford. Ugh. He tried to be nice here but life just really didn’t let him!

The clothes were ironed and folded by the couple as Miz watched them happily, thinking of more ways to tease (traumatize) them (not in a bad way!). They were going to take the clothes to their respective rooms when they heard a little tired voice calling Seb. “Daaaddyy…..!” Looks like the twins woke up from their nap. Miz helped them carry the laundry while the parents went up to check on their kids. She had an idea of another fun prank later.

“Mommy!” The twins gasped and hugged their mom tightly. She came earlier today! “Hello, my babies.” Wanda hugged them back, kissing their round cheeks. “Mommy, a boy bothered Zach today but I defended him!” Zoe announced, obviously deciding to leave out the fact that they got in trouble and Dad had to pick them up. Wanda smiled “Oh? You did? That’s my big girl.” She sat down on Zoe’s bed as Sir Bedazzle ran around them, barking. “Well what else did you do today?”

“We went to the doctor and we were really good!” Zach sat down on Zoe’s bed. “And we got a lollipop, but Miz helped us and it didn’t hurt!”

Now she had to thank Miz even more! Sir Bedazzle jumped onto the bed, ‘sniffed’ the phone and licked it. His saliva was plain sugar water, but Seb still grumbled. “No! Sir Bedazzle!” He scolded. The acorn puppy barked and wiggled his body back and forth. Miz pet his head and grinned. For a random creature given life just for fun, he was coming along nicely. If he lived for a full year...would he gain an actual Soul? This was something she wanted to experiment with. Even if he didn’t, perhaps his children would have Souls. Miz debated creating more Acorn puppies, Mabel would love to have one...

“Well, do you think it’s time for dinner yet?” Wanda asked her husband. Seb stroked his chin, startled once again by it’s smoothness, “Sure. What do you guys want for dinner?” The twins bounced in place. “Fries!” They cheered. Sir Bedazzle jumped up and down with them. “Fries! Fries! Fries!” They jumped so hard, the little acorn was sent flying, and would have hit the floor if Miz hadn’t caught him.

“Ok, just because you behaved we can make chicken sandwiches and fries, but don’t get used to it!” Seb warned with a smile and the twins shouted so loud the neighbors could probably hear. He shook his head, his kids really were just like him. He doesn’t know how Wanda put up with them all. He was grateful for it though, it made him love her all the more. “Sh...the neighbors will get mad...” Wanda silenced them with a giggle and Seb stood up. Fuck the neighbors. If his need to make noise had been satisfied as a kid he would be more merciful right now. “Let’s go make FRIES!!” Seb shouted and the twins screamed even louder before running out of their room, followed by their screaming dad.

Miz looked at Wanda. “Kids, am I right?” she rolled her eyes. Wanda snorted. “Were your children like that?” She wasn’t sure if it was ok to ask such a thing but aside from a wistful look, Miz still smiled. “Yeah. I had 4 kids, one now. Ammy’s the oldest but he’s also immortal like I am so...well...” She ran a hand through her hair “I think he’s also my biological child? Not sure how that happened though...”

“Well I think he was born from a Piece, which is kind of like an egg. I ejected one a really long time ago. Normally a Piece cannot survive long enough to hatch if it’s not inside a Slot, that’s essentially a womb, but through some miracle, Ammy’s Piece survived and he was born. It was an accident, I hadn’t meant to create a child...but I’m really thankful it happened.” Miz smiled at the thought of her first born, Ammy was a strange child, but she loved him all the same.

“And my next two kids were twins too. Pyrone and Pynelope. Not my kids, technically. My best friend was pregnant. Her species eats their mate so I offered to co-parent and help her raise her children.”

Wanda blinked. Eating their own mate. Well, she’s heard of animals who did that...but thinking of a sentient person doing that to another person was...disturbing. “I would like to hear about them sometime.” She said instead. She was trying hard to be accepting of other species and their culture. Miz nodded. “I’ll show you guys my memories of them sometime.” She looked away. “And then...there was Quackers.” She frowned. “I made a joke about giving up a first born in exchange for a Deal and this crazy bitch took it.”

“What?! Someone gave you their first born?!” Wanda was indignant. What was wrong with that...alien?! They should have protected their kids, not sell them to a fucking demon!! She took a deep breath to not lose her calm. “You took care of that child I guess...you like children...”

“Well...At first I didn’t want to get attached, I knew Quackers was mortal and I knew it would hurt to lose them if I lost them as well...but, fuck, that kid! You should have seen her! She was so adorable!!” Miz hugged the acorn puppy tightly. “I...couldn’t resist. She seduced me with her cuteness!” She groaned. “You try having a Pladibear hug you and NOT go ‘Awwww~’ they’re so fucking soft! Like...a fluffy marshmallow!”

Wanda had no idea what a Pladibear was but it really sounded adorable. She smiled widely, loving the way Miz got excited talking about her kids. It was sad to think that they had all passed away...but...perhaps talking about them would help her mourn properly?

Sir Bedazzle whimpered at being crushed so hard. He wiggled his stubby little legs and Miz let go. The acorn puppy immediately ran off downstairs to be with his master. At least master doesn’t crush him! Wanda watched the acorn run away. Huh. “I really can’t believe we have an acorn as a pet...” Miz grinned. “He’s a special pet for a special family.” Wanda smiled and pulled the girl for a hug. “Urgh! You’re so cute!” The blonde stroked her hair. Miz purred.

It felt weird to have...a mother? That’s kinda what Wanda is. Miz considered that. Jessie was a sister figure, so was Pyronica. Queen...was like an aunt. But Wanda was very much like a mother. Miz hummed as she nuzzled Wanda. She missed having a mother. Ax hadn’t seemed all big on the whole, finding Bill a mother thing… so... was this acceptable?

Wanda looked at her. “Do you want to go check on the kids and Seb before they burn something down in their excitement?”

Miz smiled widely. “Of course!” The two got out of bed and ran downstairs, content with each other’s company. Wanda was happy to have Miz, it was weird she got used to thinking of her as a daughter considering she was MUCH older than her. She just couldn't help it! If Stanford hurt her she would chop his dick off! The two made it downstairs just in time to see a chicken breast go flying across the kitchen and splat against the wall. It slowly slid down the wall with a wet sound and Miz’s eye twitched. There were potatoes spilled along the counter and floor, there were slices of bread spilled everywhere and Seb was staring at his wife and sister. “…I can fix it?” He squeaked.

The two glared at the guilty-looking Pines. Seb winced. “The twins did it! I tried to stop them!”

“Get. Out.” Miz whispered. “You three are grounded! Shoo!” Wanda scolded as dad and kids immediately ran away to hide. “We told you it was a bad idea to use magic!” Zach shook his head.

“What!? You little- You were the ones who wanted to see me do it!” Seb argued with the twins. “At least Mom grounded you too.” Zoe mumbled.

Seb scoffed at her. The disrespect! Of course he wasn't grounded! He was a grown man! They heard Wanda’s voice from the other room “And yes! You’re grounded too, Sebastian Pines!”

The twins laughed mockingly at their dad. “”’You are grounded! You are grounded!”’ They chanted as Seb moped with his legs drawn up to his chest. “What are you laughing at, little pests? You’re grounded too!” Seb scowled. He didn’t like when the twins laughed at him. Miz came out of the kitchen and glared at them. They stopped in their tracks and gulped. Slowly, Miz said “Go sit in the time out corner.”

“Day 437...We have been in the corner for almost a year now...I can’t remember what civilization looks like…” Seb muttered, putting a six-fingered hand on the wall.

“We have no food…or water…our only chance of survival is eating one of us… I wote we eat Zach…” Zoe sighed sadly. “What?! Why me?!” Zach stopped feigning death and looked at his dad and sister. Seb nodded sadly. “I’m sorry Zach, but you are the one we must eat to survive.”

“You’re the most new-tish-us.” Zoe added. She and Seb nodded solemnly in unison while Zach gasped at them. “I can’t believe you two are going to eat me!” The little boy wailed. He’d had nightmares if being eaten before! “I am sorry, son…” Seb grabbed Zach before he could get away and opened his mouth as wide as he could. Zach screamed loudly with tears in his eyes and bit Seb’s arm in his panic. “Ah! Fuck!” Seb let the boy go and cradled his arm as Zach cried. “Mom!! Dad and Zoe wanted to eat me!”

“For God’s sake, you three can’t stay put for more than 20 minutes?” Wanda called from the kitchen as she and Miz made dinner. “Don’t scare my baby, Sebastian!” Wanda shook her head. He was lucky she loved him. Miz managed to clear off the kitchen via ‘magic’ to clean the ingredients so they could still be used. Wanda pan cooked the seasoned chicken breast while Miz cut up the potatoes into thin french fry shapes. A pot of oil was being heated in preparation for them. The little girl was humming as she worked. Wanda wasn’t all that good of a cook, that was generally Sebastian’s job, but she wanted to learn and Miz had been teaching her a lot.

“Don’t bite, Zachary! Your teeth are like little needles!” Seb grimaced. Fuck, were his teeth like that as a child? No wonder the kids he bit had to be taken for stitches, it hurt! “Then don’t try to eat me!” Zach pouted. Zoe groaned and started hitting her head against the wall. Seb stopped her. Didn’t want her to give herself brain damage or anything. “Then what do we eaaatt? We’ve been here since, since forever!” She cried.

“It’s barely 20 minutes.” Wanda called out. Miz tutted “Hunger makes everything seem longer.” The Pines groaned and laid down on the floor, staring at the ceiling. Time out was lasting AGES! Seb made a cushion from the couch levitate from the couch to his spot and used it as a pillow. The twins did the same and they waited for dinner there, looking like stray puppies as they stared longingly at the kitchen. “Oh my god, you three are so over dramatic!” Wanda cast them a glance before rolling her eyes. Sir Bedazzle was nuzzling the twins and Seb, worried that they might be dying. “Arfk?” Sir Bedazzle barked. Zoe stared at him. “Hey…what if we eat Sir Bedazzle?”

“Why not? He’s…edible, no?” Seb continued teasing his son. Zach was so good and kind it made him and Zoe want to make him turn red with anger. Reminded him of Dipper…it was fun to piss him off. “No!” Zach whined and the acorn poked his ‘head’ out of Zach’s shirt collar and smiled innocently. Zach pushed him back down. “Get him!” Zoe cried and threw herself over her brother to get Sir Bedazzle. “MOMMY!!” Zach cried again.

“Fuck, what did I just say, Pines?!” The blonde cried in exasperation. She glared at Seb. “It was Zoe this time!” He grinned. At her unimpressed look, Sebastian wilted and groaned. “Zoe, sweetie, you can’t eat our family pet.” he said, just to attempt to sound like a responsible parent. Zoe pouted even as Sir Bedazzle poked his head out from Zach’s collar to lick his face.

“Well, good news, idiots. Food’s done.” Miz laughed and the three hungry demons cheered as they scrambled to their feet. They slid into their chairs eagerly, the smell of food making them drool. “Shit, that smells great! What the fuck did you two do?!” Seb asked. Wanda blushed. “It was Miz’s idea actually.”
“I coated the chicken breasts in some herbs, a little olive oil and rubbed them with some garlic salt before letting Wanda cook them. The fries are also lightly tossed in herb oil and salt after frying. Then we toasted the bread in the pan that we cooked the chicken in so it soaked up all the juices and flavoring that came out when the chicken was cooking…” Miz explained.

She held up a bowl “Also, I made a salad…which you’re probably not going to eat, but I put some dark leaf lettuce, tomatoes and goat cheese in your chicken sandwiches so at least you get SOME vegetables.” She placed the bowl of salad down for Wanda. Unlike the rest of the family, Wanda didn’t have a black hole for a stomach.

The twins started pulling out the vegetables from their sandwiches but Seb stopped them. “No, no, you are eating them, kids. And no buts.” He warned. When it came to his children’s well being, he totally transformed into a responsible parent. The twins pouted, yucky vegetables, but agreed because at least they got delicious fries and that didn’t happen every day.

Miz sat down with them to eat and everyone ate happily, moaning at Miz’s cooking. Zoe dared to say she was better than her Daddy and Seb got offended. Wanda knew she would never hear the end of it later. Oh God…

“Hee hee~” Miz teased. “Watch out Seb~I’m gonna steal your kids from you~” She took a bite of the chicken sandwich and sighed. Ahhh~she missed Earth spices so much! She wondered if she could take some of the herbs from Earth and reconstruct them back home and make Xin’s farm planets grow them? She’d forgotten to do that last time. Especially Dill. Goddamn she missed Dill. She sighed. She missed home… she didn't actually manage to go back after all.

After dinner was finished, Seb took the children to the bathroom to help them take a bath while Wanda got her things ready for the next day. Miz flick-cleaned the kitchen with her powers because she was too tired to do it manually and loitered at the bathroom door. “Hey Seb?” Seb was taking the little kids out of the tub and wrapping them in their bathrobes when Miz entered. “Hey, what’s up?” He pulled Zach’s hood up to look at the bear ears it had.

Seb stopped and slowly looked at Miz. He glanced at the sleepy kids next to him. “Kids, wait for me in your room, I’ll be there in a second, finish drying yourselves.” They nodded, too tired to argue, and Seb was left with Miz. “You’re…really leaving?”

“I’m not gonna be gone forever~” Miz rolled her eyes. “In fact I promised to meet with Ford tomorrow night, but, yeah. I need to go home and see my family…I…miss them…” She needed to go back and apologise for leaving. She rubbed one leg against the other “…also, while I lost my son and daughters…Ammy lost his brother and sisters. I…shouldn’t have left him and everyone else. I mean, Pyronica lost her kids. Her ACTUAL kids…and here I was, selfishly thinking only of my own unhappiness…”

“You were not selfish, you were hurting too and you could have done something you would regret later…you needed time to heal…” Seb angrily blinked his tears away. “We will miss you.” The man pouted. “Even if you stole my title as best chef…”

Miz laughed “I should be back by…tomorrow afternoon? Getting the timezones between dimensions right is always annoying.” She hugged him. “Here’s hoping you can survive tomorrow morning without me.”

The man’s eye widened. “So you won’t leave for years this time…right?” Seb asked sheepishly. He… had been afraid that was what she’d meant by the fact that she was leaving. Miz hugged his stomach. “I’ll try not to. Now that our doors are directly connected, I can get a better grasp on the timeflow here so I can input myself back into your lives with only a few hours of difference or so, best case scenario.” Seb nodded and stroked her hair. “Alright, kid...tell your friends I said hi, and that I should be meeting them soon!” Miz nodded. “I’ll say good-bye to the gremlins and Wanda first though!” She and Seb went off to the twin’s room so they could help them change and say good night. The twins were horrified to hear Miz was leaving but calmed when they learned it was only for half a day. “So...you’ll be here when we come home from school?” Zach asked. Seb groaned. Right. The school problem. Miz nodded. “I might be a bit late, a few days at worse, but I WILL come back.”

“How long will you be gone?” Zoe demanded. Miz sighed. “I promise that I will come back, even if I’m late, I will come back to see you all.” She also created a letter telling Ford about her trip back to her own dimension, just so he wouldn’t worry if the worse case scenario happened and she didn’t make it back on time. She teleported the letter directly into his lab and knew he’d find it eventually.

The twins hugged the black-haired dragon one more time before Seb tucked them in. He had to read them a story, but they would have to wait until he said bye himself. Miz said bye to Wanda, reassured her that she would come back, and allowed her physical form to disperse. Wanda sighed. “Is it normal to have an adopted daughter who is secretly an all powerful demon god from another dimension?”

“You mean with official documents and everything?” Wanda pursed her lips. “Part of me wants to but...she doesn’t age. And if she had papers, social services will wonder why she isn’t going to school.”

“Okay,” Wanda rolled her eyes. “She is still immortal. How would we explain that to people? Both her as Miz and her as Xin, they’re fine for now but what about a year from now? 5 years? 10?”

Seb frowned. “Maybe we can ask Miz to shapeshift herself older?” Wait...if Miz had trouble with faces, she might not know how to make herself look like she was naturally aging. He had a feeling she could make herself ‘old’ but it would be a quick and sudden change as opposed to the gradual shift in age that normal humans went through. Well she seemed to be able to copy features from other people so...perhaps he and Ford could teach her how to copy off Mabel and Dipper and age as they did.

A conversation for another time. Seb read his children a story and kissed them both. For now, sleep. They had an early morning tomorrow. Seb was not looking forward to the talk he would need to have with the day care about pulling Zach and Zoe out. He also had to find an elementary school to enroll them in. Auughh…

Wanda kissed him softly. “Worry about those things tomorrow. Come on.” She led him to bed and he was slightly glad Miz wasn’t here at the moment. He loved his friend/sister but tonight he just wanted to cuddle his wife. The two snuggled together under the sheets and fell asleep.

Chapter 26
-Eyes skyward-

Miz was late.

Sebastian didn’t blame her, if she was living with her family on the other side long term and then travelling back here to be with him, of course things might be a little late. Still, he was relieved when she finally returned a couple days later. Miz was immediately beset by the angry twins who hugged her tightly and cried about how they were afraid she wouldn’t come back.

“I’m sorry! I swear I would never leave forever!” Miz hugged the children tightly. “It’s hard to aim myself in time, you know?”

“Don’t leave ever again!” Zoe demanded. Miz sighed. “I can’t do that. I have my own family back home.”

“But...but we’re your family too, right?” Zach asked her. Miz kissed his forehead. “Of course you are. And that’s why I’ll always come back, even if I have to leave now and then.”

“Aaaww, that’s so sweet I think I will throw up!” Seb called from the door. Miz laughed and tackled the man to the floor in a tight hug. “I missed you too, poop head, don’t be so jealous!”

“Who said I missed you, kid?” Sebastian joked and hugged the girl tightly to show her it was a lie. They finally broke apart and Miz sighed. “How late am I?” Seb pet her head. “It’s not too bad. Just a couple of days as opposed to 5 years like the first time.” Miz nodded. “Right, I think I’ve got the calculations down by this point. I should be back on time during my next trip.”

“Right, you should go call Sixer. He’s been moping because he thinks he scared you off by hurting your feelings.” Seb told her. It was annoying to get a call from him every night, asking if Miz had returned. Miz rolled her eyes. “That baby. I told him I might be late! Dimensional travel is difficult!”

She grumbled fondly as she walked off to find the phone so she could call him. The twins trailed after her, not wanting Miz to leave their sight. Zoe was tugging on Miz’s dress and demanding to be picked up. Miz grinned and lifted both children to hug against her chest. “Oof! You’ve gotten heavy in the last few days~” She teased.

“No we haven’t!” The twins protested. Seb shook his head as the three left the room. Well. It was nice to have Miz back. He frowned. Right. He and Wanda were supposed to find an Elementary school for the kids. He worried about finding a place that would treat Zach properly. He also needed to talk to Miz about taking over as the twin’s pre-school teacher since he’d withdrawn them from the daycare.

He had tried to fill in as a teacher for the twins but he had his own work to do and couldn’t give them as much time as he’d liked. Instead he just put on the Children’s Programing channel and had the happy puppets and people in costumes teach the twins about the alphabet. It wasn’t a good solution. He was glad Miz was home. He jumped when Sir Bedazzle suddenly ran between his legs after Miz and the twins, barking happily. Oh circles, at least there was only one plantimal he had to watch out for...

“Hey Miz!” Seb heard Zach say from the other room. “Shouldn’t Sir Bedazzle have a friend? So he wouldn’t be lonely when we have to go to el-lam-men-terry school in the fall?”

Seb’s eye widened. Oh no.

“No. No. No.” Seb ran for the door. “We don’t need another pet…” Please, no! No more! Mercy! He loved Sir Bedazzle but it was getting harder to explain to the neighbors why they’ve never see his dog when they could hear it barking all the time. He had to claim Sir Bedazzle was strictly an at home dog. Josh and his husband from a few houses down wanted to bring their dog over for a puppy play date and it was getting harder to turn them down.

“Miz wait!” He burst into the room with a panicked expression, but it was already too late. Molecules were changed, matter was formed and a little creature, slightly smaller than Dazzle opened their eyes after a yawn. The twins cooed at it. Sebastian stared. Unlike Sir Bedazzle who was clearly an Acorn, this Plantimal was a Maple seed with a round body and a long wing-like tail. Sir Bedazzle walked up to it and yipped curiously. The new creature tilted its head at the Acorn Puppy and let out a soft “Mewl?”

“We have a kitten now!!” Zoe came running and smiled widely. The toddler picked up the little plantimal and stroked their head. “What do we call him?! The kitten purred at the gentle touch. “This time it’s a she.” Miz clarified and the blond girl apologized to the kitten. “How do you know?! They’re plants!” Seb frowned. Miz stared at him. “I just do~”

Seb groaned. Great. There was another magical/weird plant in his house now. He sighed even as the twins discussed what to name their new pet. “Her Majesty Queen Fluttertail, Lady of the Feywilds!” was the name they eventually decided on. Queen Flutter for short. Seb had no idea where they came up with these names.

Sir Bedazzle and Queen Flutter stared at each other before the acorn made a happy sound and nudged Zoe. “Arf?” he asked. Zoe put Queen Flutter down and the two began to coo cheerfully at each other. The blond children squealed as their pets got along. “Daddy! Look how adorable they are!!” Zoe screamed. “I think I’m gonna explode!!”

“Yes, well, I guess I have to admit she is pretty cute…” Seb nodded. “But we can’t have another one of these, kids.”

Then it happened. Seb was viciously attacked. Not by one or two, but by five sets of huge pleading eyes: the twins, Miz, Bedazzle and Flutter.

“ARGH!!” The man screamed. This was too much for him. “FINE!!”

The children ran off to play with their new pet and Miz gave Seb a smug look even as she found the phone to call Ford. “You're welcome.”

“I didn't thank you.” Seb grumbled.

“You will, the twins are happy and you love when they’re happy.” She shrugged and started dialing Ford. “Besides, now they've forgiven me for being late. So there.”

“So that was your true plan!” Seb groaned. “Are you going to get them a new pet every time you're late?! My house can't handle that!”

Miz giggled. “Not every time. I'll have to switch it up so the twins don't get bored...oh! Yellow Fordsie!” Miz greeted when Ford picked up the phone.

Seb rolled his eye. Like hell he would let the twins get bored of the plantimals, they were their responsibility too! He looked at Miz speaking to his brother and wondered if he should leave to give them space.

Nah. He stood closer to Miz to shout. “HEY FORDSIE LOOK WHO’S BACK!” Miz and Ford jumped on both sides of the line and Miz rolled her eyes before putting it on speaker mode. “-eck Sebastian?! What was THAT for?!” Ford complained. Seb cackled. “I just wanted to let you know that Miz returned.” He said innocently.

“I can tell.” Ford said sarcastically.

Miz tapped the phone. “Hey. Sorry I'm late Fordsie. I just flew in from my dimension and boy are my arms tired.” Seb snorted while Ford seemed to think she was being serious. “Do you use your arms to direct your flight? Is that why Bill would wave them around so much? How does that work? Are there muscles in those thin limbs?”

“....Sixer...I think she's joking...” Sebastian face palmed. Why did Ford believe everything? No wonder he was so easy to fool. Ah, he loved him anyway…

“She is?” Ford responded while Miz and Seb laughed at the dumb genius. “Miz made the twins another plantimal, Sixer!” Seb informed his brother. “A cat this time.”

“That's amazing! I would love to study it. Both of them actually. How are they both plant and animal? How do they move? How do they vocalize?”

Miz and Seb glanced at each other before they both said “Neeeeeerd!” and laughed. Miz was quick to reassure Ford they weren't making fun of him. “You're adorable, Fordsie. Hey, are you free right now? Want to come over?”

Seb choked. Really? Right NOW? In HIS house again?! When his babies were present and could hear?! He already placed the room Ford and Xin shared under a partial quarantine, the rooms magically cleaned themselves anyway. “I am actually a bit busy on a project. I would appreciate it if you came later, it’s much better that way, or I could go, either way is fine.” Ford replied.
“You wouldn’t like it if we did that in your place!” Sebastian grumbled.

Miz hummed. “Well, is there anything you need help with on your projects?”

“T-that would be wonderful!” Ford seemed to perk up eagerly. His voice sounding excited.”I have been meaning to ask you about the solar batteries…”

“Oh, right! Yeah I can help with that!” Miz looked at Seb. “I’ll go with Fordsie, you three will be fine while I am gone?”

“Uh...sure...yeah. we can survive a few hours…” Seb muttered. As long as they didn’t fuck in his house again, it was fine. Besides, Ford was working in his lab. There’s no place to fuck there right? As if crushing his hopes on purpose, he heard Ford ask “Are you still willing to do a session? In...whatever form you're comfortable with? I...am fine with your true form, I swear I am!”

Miz frowned. “If I do take my true form, we won't be doing a session. Even if you say it's fine...it really...hurt my feelings when you reacted badly. I don't want that tainting our time together.” Seb pushed aside his shock to scowl. Right, Ford was dumb. “I don't want you hurting my friend, Sixer or I will cut off your toes and feed...feed you those!” He threatened. “I trust you know how to respect her even with your...rough moments.”

“Of course! I would never willingly harm her. In fact I had been trying to treat Xin's wounds but...he refused.”

“I was gonna heal anyway. I didn't want you to waste your first aid supplies. What if you got hurt during an experiment and you needed them?” Miz protested. Seb made a face. “Just...don’t get hurt...” What the heck was wrong with them? He wouldn't treat Wanda like that, the thought hadn’t even crossed his pure innocent mind until these two fuckers started mentioning it so casually!

“The bruises are part of the sessions, Sebastian, they can’t be stopped.” Ford told Seb matter of factly and the younger man deadpanned. “...Right…” He stood up. “Be back for dinner, I’m making spaghetti.” Seb patted Miz’s head and stood up to go scream somewhere at the horrible mental image his mind was trying to come up with.

Ford sighed. “I would like for the bruising to be less prominent though. I feel rather uncomfortable with the idea of you being injured from our activities.” Miz shrugged “But I like the way they feel.”

“Yes, that's part of the problem here. Is the pain thing, a Bill thing?” Ford questioned. “...I think it's a me as Bill thing?” Miz mumbled. “It's just...how I am...pretty fucked up, huh?” She tightened her hold on the phone. Ford frowned. Was he supposed to agree? Or to deny it? “So...you will come, right?” The awkward scientist said at the end, sidestepping the question altogether. Ford heard the phone hang up but before he could worry about how he might have offended her, he jumped at the “Tah dah!” shouted next to him. He turned to see Miz grinning at him. “So, battery?” She asked as she looked over at his work table covered in machine parts.

“Yes, uh, I would appreciate it if you checked over my progress?” Stanford had never asked for help in his projects, except for the portal, it made him feel useless, but Miz was different, she was a literal Knowledge god! She was a good Bill, he needed to take advantage of having her as a friend! (In a way he’d always wanted from his own Bill, had thought he did have with his own Bill--) Miz fiddled with the items on the desk. Ford heard her mumbling under her breath “...silicone...sodium...possibly glass?”
The two quietly worked together, Miz pointing out corrections and even went on a long rant about reactions, decay and oxidation. “You know what? We should make some aerogel. That’ll be a fun way to get you a better insulator for your machines.” When Ford asked about it, she responded with, “It’s like making jello, except you replace all the liquid with air!” At one point she got frustrated at the mess his lab was in and started sorting everything by type, size and function. Ford protested of course. “I don’t need to clean-- it takes time away from working!”

“No. I am putting the screws here, in a neat little pile, organized so we don’t have to dig through your stupid tool box to find the one we need!” Miz glared at Ford. “We waste more time trying to find stuff otherwise.”

Ford pouted. Now he wouldn’t find anything! He had his own order! Miz didn’t let up her glare. “Look, now all the screws are HERE--” she pointed at the cubbies she had created and sorted the screws into “-and they’re all neatly labeled so you can easily just read them and grab the ones you need.”

“But I knew where my stuff was before!” Ford whined. Miz rolled her eyes “Hence why it took you 3 minutes to dig out the bolt you needed to tighten the panel on your mini weather generator and by the time you did, the reaction had faded and we had to spend 20 minutes getting the machine back up and running to churn out another cloud.”

Ford flushed. “...well I…”

“Nope!” Miz scoffed. “I am cleaning and organizing this mess.” She continued working as Ford whined like a child. Really, she was even making new shelves and other tables to sort things into. Her OCD demanded it. Ford had stopped protesting and was now just pouting in a corner. Miz lifted and placed a huge tank of liquid helium and sighed. Everything neatly in its place.

“I wanted it my way!” Ford whined. He refused to admit it was useful to see how many of each component he had. With them all placed together he could easily see his supplies of Rhodium chunks were running low. But he still refused to admit the lab looked much nicer and more spacious now that things had been moved. There was more room to start new projects now. Okay fine, he was actually very impressed. But he didn't want to admit he was a slob.

“Yeah, you can live in your mess all you want, you awful messy child, but not when I’m here. Seriously, how did you survive like this? No one said anything about this mess?” Miz pouted as she sent the dust into a swirl of clicking molecules to create another shelf, this one was empty for now with little blank labels that Ford could write words on once he put stuff in them. Ford scoffed. “No one had a problem with my lab.”

“I bet they just couldn’t say anything because you’re their boss and you write their paychecks.” Miz deadpanned. “When I meet your mom during your birthday, I’m gonna tell her what a messy boi you are!” She stuck her tongue out.

“Wh-What?!” Stanford gaped. “Are you going to tell my mother I don’t keep my lab organized?”

“Yes. Maybe she can make you listen to reason, you clearly keep pouting at me like a child.” Miz had her hands on her hips and Ford was struck by how ridiculous this looked. A girl half his size, looking down on him as if he was the child. “I...cannot believe you are telling on me to my mother.” Ford said at last.

“It’s a sacrifice I’m willing to make.” Miz said solemnly. Ford snorted. “What sacrifice?” He started laughing. This was so ridiculous. Miz giggled and the two just sat around and laughed over the situation. “But seriously though, I WILL be telling your mom.” Miz clarified.
“I am a grown man. She can’t ground me anymore.” Ford sniffed as he tried to look superior. Miz floated up so she could pat his hair. “Of course you are. Such a big boi.” She cooed. “Your mom can ground you no matter how old you are.” Miz added. “Seb and the kids get grounded all the time!”

“Have you seen the shit those three do sometimes? Wanda and I have to do something to get some peace in that house!” Miz groaned as she floated on her side. Ford tugged her back down. “Maybe Sebastian needs more discipline.” He laughed. “Maybe give him a time out?”

“We’ve tried. He gets bored.” Miz allowed herself to be placed back on the ground. Right. Gravity was a thing she was supposed to follow now. Ford laughed. “Sebastian had never stayed put in his time out as kids…” He said. “Every time I saw him, he was ALWAYS grounded in the corner!” He laughed but Miz frowned a bit. “Well, Seb can’t sit still due to his ADHD so I can only imagine how awful that was for him.” After all, she had some issues with her attention span too. Short attention span combined with an odd hyper focus and also a propensity towards multi-tasking. Gosh, she was a mess.

Ford frowned a bit in thought. He...didn’t know that, actually, he knew that Sebastian had that condition but hadn’t really followed that train of thought. “Well, he got more in trouble for not obeying...that must have been bad indeed…” The man rubbed his arm. He didn’t like to remember when they were kids, not when he realized he had been horrible to his younger brother. Miz squeezed his arm. “It’s ok. You three are fine now. That’s in the past.” She smiled. Ford smiled slightly too. Miz frowned suddenly. “Is your father still alive? Would anyone mind if I fed him his own eyes?”

“...I wouldn’t wish that on anyone to be honest.” Ford sighed. “He wasn’t the best father-”

“He was an abusive asshole who literally made Seb PAY him to be allowed to sleep in his house. As a CHILD.” Miz scowled.

Ford frowned profusely. “What are you talking about?! What-When…” He fidgeted with his hands.

Miz blinked. “Seb never told you? He’s been working a job since he was like...what? 14? I’m not sure how old he was, to earn money to pay Filbrick so he would be allowed inside the house. Heck, when your father threw him out, Seb’s first instinct was to go to his workplace to find a place to stay...which…” She winced. “…didn’t work out since his boss passed away a while before…”

Ford slowly sat down on his chair and ran a hand through his hair. How could he have been so blind?! They had been kids! Why didn’t Seb tell them?! “Do...do you know...if Stanley knew about this?” That had been so long ago, he knew Seb was fine now, they were all fine, but he hadn’t thought of where his brother went to after he was...kicked out…

Miz shook her head sadly. “Judging by your reaction, I don't think he told anyone about this, not even your mother. You know how Seb never wants to bother people with his problems.” She could relate, but she hated how Seb did this as a kid. Children were SUPPOSED to ask for help! Ford groaned and covered his face. “Why am I so blind?!” Miz raised an eyebrow. “You’re generally pretty lost in your own head. You don’t pay much attention to others.” Her observation just made Ford feel worse. He needed to get better at this.

“So...feeding Filbrick his own eyes, yay or nay?” Miz asked and sprouted a tail just to wag it.

Ford lifted his glasses and rubbed his eyes. “Don’t, please.” He didn’t know much about the old man. He only knew he was still in their old house in New Jersey. He stayed there after Mom left him. Miz considered it. “I'll give him a chance to make up for it.” she grumbled. “Your Bill kinda fucked him over. And if YOU could get over yourself, I'll give him a chance to do so as well.” Filbrick's wife left him after all. Perhaps his time away from his family gave him some time to think over his life and actions.

Ford blinked. “Wait. Bill...knew father?”

“Yeah? You didn't know? Your Bill made a Deal with your father back when he was a teenager in exchange for his first born or something like that…”

“He did WHAT?!” Ford gasped. He couldn't believe Filbrick would do something like-Well, no he could actually believe it but why the heck would he do that?! “And what was the deal about?!”

Miz frowned. Her eyes flickered to get the details and Ford couldn't help being entranced by the images he could see. Was that...a younger version of his father...with...a twin?!

“Those idiots summoned Bill...for FUN!” Miz hissed. “Of all the stupid-well, to be fair I've also dealt with stupid teenagers summoning me for shits and giggles but I don't...kill them for it…” Ford paled dramatically and he stumbled back. He leaned against the table and took a deep breath. “He summoned Bill Cipher?! Wh-Why the he-He-Urgh! Who did Bill kill?!”

“Pretty much all his friends…and then possessed Filbrick’s twin brother…” Miz winced. “Wow. Your Bill was REALLY an asshole. Even Seb's past life didn't go that far.”

“He didn't have one anymore, look... Bill killed this kid in front of him.” Miz still hated the asshole, but she did feel sorry for this. No one should have to go through that. “And he called that other boy ‘brother’ so I'm guessing that if your father DID have a twin, Bill erased him when he killed him.”

Ford closed his eyes and ran a six-fingered hand through his curly hair. He couldn't believe this… Miz frowned worriedly and put a small hand over his arm. “I am sorry you had to learn this now…” She told him. “I just...saw some things and...I had to tell you.” Ford shook his head. “No, it's fine. I rather know the truth than live on in ignorance.” He sighed. “I'm still mad at father, but now I want to talk to him. Figure out what happened from his side of the story…” he closed his eyes, “...see if father feels any guilt over how he treated us and Sebastian.”

“...if he doesn't, does that mean I can mess with him?” Miz asked. “Even if he has a tragic past, it doesn't excuse the abuse he put Sebastian through.” Ford nodded. “No mutilating him, and I know…” He sighed tiredly. They were planning to go to New Jersey in the summer anyway, maybe then he could have a talk with his father. He hugged Miz's small form to himself. “Thank you for telling me this. I have a lot I need to think about.”

Miz nuzzled his chest. “Sorry that I just turned your world upside down…”

“No. You did nothing wrong. I admit, it is distressing to know Bill had a hand in my...I can't say conception, but my birth and the circumstance around it.” Ford sighed, resting his chin on the top of Miz's head. She was quite soft and nice to hold. He absently squished her belly and the girl squealed. “That tickles!”

“Oh it does?” Ford questioned with a grin. Miz frowned. “Wait! Don't you dare, Sixer!”
Ford squished her belly again and Miz squealed again. “No!!” She tried to smack his hand away but the man laughed and poked her belly. She giggled and shoved at him. “Ahahah! S-stop it! Fordsie, you asshole!” She laughed as she wiggled. She got her revenge by tickling his ribs and the man let out a loud bark of laughter. “Revenge!” Miz took advantage of Ford’s loosened grip to start tickling him in earnest. The poor man spasmed as the demon tickled him. He usually only felt weird and jumpy when people tried to tickle him but he had been laughing before, so now his body couldn’t hold back the natural reaction.

“Wa-Wait!” Ford cried but Miz had no mercy for the man. She wanted him to beg!

“Mi-Miz! Mi-Miz!! Ah! S-S-Stop!” Ford snorted and tried holding back his mad laughter. He wasn’t doing so well in that regard, twitching and sliding off his chair as he was tickled into submission. He laid on the ground, shaking and curling in on himself, trying desperately to protect his sides from her fingers.

“Mwahaha! I’ll never stop!” Miz crowed. She knelt over him, pretty much straddling him as she jabbed her fingers into any opening she found. Stop was stop, but tickle wars had no such rules! Well, she’d stop if it looked like he couldn’t breathe. She wasn’t heartless (currently.) Ford realized he couldn’t win with a defensive strategy and struck back, placing his large hands along her sides and squeezing. She made a choked gasp and squealed. Ford began his counterattack, wiggling his many fingers along her squishy stomach and grinned in triumph at his long arms easily holding her far enough away that she couldn’t retaliate.

“Ahahahah! Fo-ahaha! Ford-hahah!” She gasped “Can’t breathe!”

Ford placed her on the ground where she drew in large gasps of air. Ford was panting heavily himself, his sides aching and his body protesting the tickle attacks it had been forced to endure. The phone rang. Ford answered when he saw it was Stanley. “He-hello?” He asked, out of breath. “Whoa, you okay Poindexter?” Stan’s voice came over the phone. Ford laughed. “Y-yeah...just...went through something strenuous.” Miz groaned loudly in the background. “Hah...hah...you...oh god...” she panted, face flushed and somewhat light headed. Stanley sputtered “IS THAT MIZ?!”

“Wh-why yes. She ca-came to vis-sit me earlier.” Ford huffed. Goodness, he’d forgotten how tiring it was to be tickled. “What did you call me for Stanley?” there was a strange choking sound on the other side of the phone line. Ford raised an eyebrow. “Stanley? Are you alright?”

“I can’t believe you- with Miz- oh my god!” Stanley sputtered. “Were you at LEAST gentle with her?!” Ford frowned. How did Stanley realize they had a tickle war? “Well, it escalated pretty quickly. She was quite aggressive so I was forced to respond in kind-” he was cut off by Stan shouting “I DON’T WANT TO HEAR ABOUT IT!”

“Um...alright then?” Ford looked over at Miz who was panting and whimpering softly. “Miz? Are you alright?” he asked, a little worried now, had he been too rough? He hadn’t been taking his strength into account. “My everything hurts...” Miz gasped miserably. Stanley, who could clearly hear Miz’s response over the phone, went pale. “Oh...oh my god Ford...I can’t believe you! She’s...she’s so TINY!”

“Yes, I may have gone somewhat overboard.” Ford admitted. He knelt down and gently picked the girl up. “I’m sorry for that Miz. It won’t happen again.” he assured her. She merely groaned again and slumped in his arms. “I don’t think I wanna do that again...” she whined. Ford sat back down on his chair, setting his phone to speaker mode so he could properly comfort the girl. “I also think we shouldn’t have a repeat of this. It was an unpleasant affair for both of us.”
“Ah! Oh my god! Sebas is going to KILL you!” Stanley freaked out on his side of the line. Ford was very confused now. “Yes, he did threaten to cut my toes off if I hurt Miz…but she’s not…injured.” Miz groaned. “I think you bruised my sides…” which WOULD have been a pleasant sensation if her stomach didn’t feel like it was contracted painfully. The internal pain didn’t feel as nice as the external ones.

“....Sebastian is going to cut my toes off…” Ford groaned. Stan made a half hysterical bark of laughter. “Sebastian is gonna have to get in line because I have half the mind to punch you. What the hell were ya thinking Sixer?!” Ford sheepishly scratched his nose. “To be honest, I wasn’t. Miz had me helpless on the ground and I was just trying to fight back.”

“You started it though.” Miz mumbled.

“I couldn’t help myself. The sounds you made were too amusing.” Ford answered. “...and adorable.” He couldn’t help but admit. Miz giggled weakly. “Aw~you think I’m adorable?” She flicked his nose. “I liked your squealing too.” Ford scrunched up his nose and poked her back.

“I don’t want to listen to this!” Stan half sobbed. His nerd brother was apparently a beast in the bed and Stanley REALLY didn’t want to know. No one! Absolutely no one including him and Sebas, went around explicitly telling everybody what technique or some shit and the things that happened while they had sex, what gave Ford the idea they could?!

“OW!”

Stan heard the yelp and blinked. “Sixer?”

“So-Sorry, Stanley, Miz bit me!!” Ford shouted accusingly as he shook his hand and the middle triplet heard Miz saying “Don’t be a baby, Fordsie, I didn’t bite you THAT hard, I could have taken your arm off but I didn’t!”

“So, anyway, why did you call, Stanley?” Ford asked when the adrenaline from the tickle war ran out. Stanley groaned “I was going to check about when you were going to come to my place for our birthday. I know it’s still a couple months off but since everyone was going to come for the summer, I needed to make sure there was room for everyone so I figured I might as well start preparing early.” since everyone would meet up in New York for a while before they headed out to Jersey.

“Aaaww!” Miz cooed next to Ford. “That is so sweet of you, Fish!” She hummed. “I could make another expansion like I did with Seb’s place on the hotel rooms when we get to Jersey! Would you like that?”

“Magic hotel room! Of course I’d love that! We would only need to rent ONE room! Haha, Carla would be thrilled.” Stan grinned at the thought of a magically expanded room that wouldn't cost him any money to get. Seriously, being friends with an all powerful demon god was so convenient.

Ford hummed. “Well, as to when I would go, I am not sure when exactly I would arrive in New York.” Driving would be tiring (and take forever), so maybe a plane? He would need to buy tickets soon… “What did Seb say? Have you already called him?”

“Yeah, he says he’s coming here a few days before our birthday. The twins aren’t going to preschool anymore so they can leave earlier BUT Wanda has work so that’s the earliest they can “leave.” Stan shrugged. Ugh. Real life responsibilities~

Miz pulled Ford’s sleeve. “Why don’t you go with Seb and travel with them? Everyone likes seeing twins and triplets in public places!”

“Yeah, listen to Miz, that’s a good idea.” Stan nodded, but they couldn’t see him. Ford agreed but then looked at the black-haired girl. “What about you? Will you just...teleport there?” she hummed and twisted to sit on Ford's lap more comfortably. “I probably will. I don't really like physical transportation vehicles.”

“What? Do you get motion sick?” Ford asked. Miz pouted. “Just a little.” Stanford raised an eyebrow but didn’t comment. He could ask later about that. Stan sighed. “Well, bro, I have to go, gotta work. Behave you two!” He warned. “And for Moses’ sake, be more careful when you do...that!” Stan was glad that Miz was actually billions of years old or he’d have to report his brother to the police. “We will, Stanley.” Ford nodded as Miz snorted. This was too fun! She wondered when Ford would realize what his family was thinking of them… “Yes, Fish! We will!” She giggled. This was too stupidly funny.

“I won’t tell Seb just because I love you, and I want you to keep your toes…” Stan said. “See ya.”

The man hung up. Now that they were alone again, Ford sighed when he remembered what he had learned from Miz earlier. That being the sheer depth of the abuse Sebastian had suffered under their father. He wasn't sure how to handle this information. Sebastian was fine now. He was happy. He had a loving wife and beautiful children. Ford didn't want to bring up bad memories by asking Seb about it. But he really wanted to know. It annoyed him to know that he had been completely oblivious to his brother's abuse. And how many times had he heard Seb cry as he was punished and he had never intervened? How many times he had heard and he had thought to himself his younger brother deserved it? Thought Seb was always behaving bad and he had to be grounded?

Miz snuggled into Ford's lap and yawned. “You're thinking too loudly.” She poked his chin. “Am I?” He frowned. “If you're really worried about this, just apologise and tell Seb that you're gonna be a better brother from now on.” She stretched languidly and sighed. “Actually, I'm glad to hear you feel guilty about this.”

“...why?” Ford frowned. Did she like seeing him agonize over his own guilt? Miz played with Ford's hand, lightly pinching his fingers “It means you've finally gotten over yourself to think about others. It's nice to see you're not as much of a jerk anymore.” Ford frowned. He wanted to argue he wasn’t a jerk, but he really couldn’t. He had been a jerk. As a kid and as an adult, his brother protected him and saved him so many times and he never thanked him as he should...

“You are right.” He admitted at the end. “I was a jerk...And I will apologize to Sebastian. Should I call him?”

“You crazy? You’ll apologize in person, when you see each other again, or I’m gonna tell your mom you didn't even give your brother a proper apology!” Miz complained. “Besides, this is probably going to be an emotional confrontation so you'll need to be physically there to hug him when Seb starts crying.”

“How do you know Sebastian is going to cry during this conversation?” Ford raised an eyebrow. Miz scoffed. “Seb's a cry baby.” Ford twitched. “...isn't it rude to say such a thing?” Miz shifted again to lounge on Ford's lap, he wasn't nearly as comfy as Xanthar but he would do for now. “It's true though.” She pulled on Ford's hand to bring it closer so she could continue playing with his fingers. “To be fair, I'm also a cry baby.” She pouted. “I feel like we have trouble processing intense emotions. I know my other brother, Blue, was totally mind blown when he realized he could feel more than one emotion at once.”
Ford raised an eyebrow as Miz continued pulling his six fingers. “So...It is a...Bill thing to be a ‘cry baby’?” Now that he thought about it, Miz was right. Seb cried real fast, both as a kid and as an adult. “Do you think he also has trouble with his emotions?”

“Dunno if the crying is a Bill thing, Blue doesn’t really do it. Might be an issue, he has no way of really venting... but besides that, do you know your triplet, Fordsie?” Miz giggled. The man pouted. “Apparently, not as much as I thought I did...”

Miz hummed. “He has trouble with emotions but he learned how to express them properly over the years. Wanda helped a lot. His therapist helped a lot. Stan and everyone else helped a lot.” She frowned. “I'm a little better than he is at UNDERSTANDING how human emotions work or at least... faking like I can express it like a ‘normal’ human. I just...” she ducked her head “...sometimes I forget. Sometimes I think...I lose track of what is considered appropriate anymore.” Living among humans has been making her work harder on keeping her moods in check. Staying in a humanoid form helped somewhat to quiet the non-stop noise in her head. Though...she should tear herself open to bleed out some of this soon... wait, no. She wasn’t supposed to do that anymore. Miz sighed. She wasn’t supposed to self harm anymore.

Ford stroked Miz’s long hair and the girl purred. Ford thought it might be difficult for someone like Bill to differentiate right from wrong, even if Miz was good. “Why do you like being with us? I mean, not just our family, but humans in general.” he noticed how, aside from maliciously cursing a woman for making Zach upset, Miz had been...very polite and kind towards humans. That cashier lady, the other parents at the party...

Miz snuggled against Ford's hand “I like humans. You're interesting. And fascinating.” She rolled her eyes “You’re also incredibly stupid sometimes and often you do things that piss me off but it's not any more or less than what other alien species do so... generally, I like you more than I dislike you. If that makes any sense?”

The scientist hummed in thought. It made sense, a bit, well, this was a Bill Cipher, it won’t make more sense than this. “That’s interesting...Are aliens still alive in our time? I found a crash site a while ago but I wasn’t sure how long ago it happened.”

“Well in MY dimension, that ship crashed like...30 million Earth years before you humans started keeping a proper record of timekeeping and years?” Miz scrunchied up her face in thought. “But aliens are still around. Most of them just don't think there's anything of worth here to visit. But in MY dimension, they stay away because I claimed the Earth as my own and I threatened Time Baby that I would devour anyone who dares to lay a hand on it.” Maybe she should let up on that, lots of human cultures learned stuff from observing the night sky and she couldn’t keep them isolated forever...

“Oh.” Ford pouted a bit. “So we will never make contact with them?”

“Nope! Well, not for a while at least.” Miz teased and poked his nose. “What other alien would you want anyway? You have an interdimensional All knowing god right here!” She motioned to herself smugly. Ford smiled a bit and patted her head. “You're right.” The man looked at Miz and smiled. She was an alien...that was so cool... He had been thrilled to meet Bill Cipher originally. An otherworldly creature. More than that, an interdimensional being of pure knowledge. A muse. It was the greatest thing that had ever happened to him. He had been so ecstatic to spend time with Bill and had wanted to ask so many questions. But he always held himself back, afraid of scaring the ethereal creature off by sounding too eager, too needy. And then Bill had betrayed him. Twisted him up inside until he was paranoid ball of nerves and hate.

He looked at the soft girl purring in his lap. What sort of miracle had brought her to him? A Bill Cipher who wasn't evil. Sure, she didn't really have a moral compass, offhandedly mentioning eating people and he was sure that despite her innocent appearance, she's probably killed (and subsequently eaten) hundreds upon thousands of people. That thought made Ford somewhat uncomfortable. Murder was wrong. Miz was most probably a murderer...but his own triplet had been a Bill Cipher in a past life...

It was very confusing to think about. About being able to love someone who was a killer. But he and Stanley had done plenty of unsavory things while on the other side of the portal. Besides, he had learned over the years that context was important. The world wasn't just black and white. Seb used to be Bill Cipher and he had killed countless people as Bill, but Seb wasn't like that anymore. Miz...might still be killing people somewhere but she was here now and she hadn't killed anyone...

Ford wasn't sure how to feel about this. He didn't like the idea of Miz killing people. But could he really make her stop? Especially since he's realized over the years that murder does not equate evil. He still found the idea to be wrong but murder was a human concept. He's hunted plenty of alien beasts for food in his years traveling the cosmos. Miz, Bill, wasn't human. Even if they did a good job of pretending to be one. The concept of murder was the killing of a fellow man or sentient, thinking person. Ford could try to make her stop, or tell her that she could try NOT killing people? Ford didn’t really know enough about her circumstances. As long as Miz doesn't harm anyone here or attempt to start the apocalypse then it was fine.

The girl snuggled closer to his chest and yawned again. Ford hummed in amusement. “Are you tired?” He asked as he brushed her hair aside. She nodded. “Dimensional time travel tends to do that.” Ford looked around. Not very many places for sleeping in his lab. Miz climbed onto him and clung on like a monkey. “I'll just sleep here…”

“Really?” Ford pouted. He looked down at the girl. “I could take you to the Shack…” He offered. “No. Here.” Miz pouted. Ford groaned. “You'll be in the way of my work….” When Miz didn't budge, Ford realized he would need to change tactics. Miz wasn't going to go home to Seb until dinner time which was, Ford checked the time, still 2 hours away, so he had to find something to distract her with. “If you go to the Shack, you can see Soos and how the new Mystery Shack tours work.” He mentioned. Miz's head popped up with interest.

“I could?!” She asked, her dark eyes widening. Ford grinned. “You'd be surprised how well the Shack’s profits go with the research center so close. Soos hasn’t even changed anything, all the attractions are still fake, but he just says they come from the center and charges double for them...Seb and Stan were really proud of him.” Ford rolled his eyes. Miz giggled. “I want to meet Question Mark and-” She gasped. “Is Melody here too?!”

“Oh! Soos’ wife. Yes, she is helping him as well.” Miz jumped off Ford and pulled him up. “Come on! Come on! I wanna see them!”

Ford shook his head at her childish antics and let her pull him toward the door. They passed a few of Ford's assistants who blinked at the little girl pulling their boss. It didn't escape them how similar this girl looked to the mysterious man they saw Dr. Pines with a week ago.

“I was actually thinking you could go alone…” Ford mumbled as Miz pulled him along. She pushed open a wooden door that took them to the inside of the Shack. “Ford, the house is a mess.” She wrinkled her nose, seeing dust and piles of papers. It looked almost as bad as how Seb found it before the portal accident. “Seb kept this place much cleaner.” she complained. “Well, I am sorry for dedicating my time to my research.” The six-fingered man pouted. Miz sighed. “At least you aren’t down in the basement anymore…” she proceeded to sneeze. A dust bunny turned into a centipede snake, which hissed before crawling under some supplies and disappeared from view.
Ford had time to widen his eyes in alarm before Miz sneezed again.

“Ha-cheui!” She squeaked. More and more random objects in the room began turning into weird creatures and escaping from sight. Ford was beginning to panic now. He picked Miz up and tried to cover her face. “Mph-cheeh!” she sneezed. Ford looked around frantically. “G-get rid of the dust!” he told her.

Miz whined and attempted to swirl the dust away but she sneezed again and the clump of dust turned into a centuartuar. Ford decided to simply take her out of the room. He closed the door and winced when Miz sneezed once more. “Ok...maybe I should clean more often...” he admitted. Miz sniffled miserably. “You think?” The man rubbed the side of his neck awkwardly and Miz glared at him, wiping her nose. “I bet the lab is only clean because you have people that clean for you!” She accused and Ford couldn’t actually deny it. There was a thumping sound from behind them as the centuartuar clopped around in the storage room, banging on walls and stumbling over things.

“What was all that anyway?” Ford asked. He looked around and found they were in what used to be Seb’s office. As he sometimes used this place, it was less dusty. He opened a window just in case. “How can you be allergic to dust? You don’t have a nose in your original form, and what was all that crazy creature-making sneezing?” Miz grumbled. She'd been incredibly sensitive to dust as a human. Even if this body wasn't, it kept many quirks from her human life. Like her allergy to melons. And propensity towards hiccups. She rubbed her nose again. “This body has a nose. And it certainly doesn't enjoy dust.” Ford looked around for a tissue or handkerchief. He found a roll of paper towels to hand her.

Miz blew her nose. “And...my powers tend to go haywire if I'm not keeping them under control constantly.” This even happened throughout all her other forms. Funny (or not so funny) her Bill form was capable of hiccuping and when they got bad enough his powers would start to slip out of his control. Which was half the reason why drunk Bill was something the multiverse feared.

“Oh, yes, I suppose.” Ford chuckled sheepishly. “Soos takes good care of it.” Miz sniffled once again and took a deep breath before grabbing the man’s hand and getting out of the room. Ford rolled his eyes as Miz dramatically held her breath as they walked to the Gift Shop’s door. She lifted a hand into the air to swirl the dust into gold coins as she went. She pushed the door open and took a deep breath before leaning against the door. “You’re so dramatic.” The scientist sighed. “...did you just make gold?!” a couple of the coins had rolled into the room before she closed the door.

“Basic alchemy.” Miz wiped her face again. “Bleh.” Ford knelt to examine one of the coins and picked it up in awe. Being able to simply...create anything she wanted...no wonder Bill Ciphers tended to become corrupted. Ultimate power leads to ultimate corruption right? He was suddenly worried about how Miz would grow up. She claimed to be a relatively young Bill Cipher. Hopefully, living among humans would teach her not to be problematic when she was older.

“Oh, Dr. Pines!” Both turned to look up and found Soos staring at them. Miz cooed. He was wearing a suit! Elegant like his former boss! She went right up to him and poked his stomach. He chuckled. Miz's face lit up. “It's like the Pillsbury Dough Boy!” she poked him again. “Miz! Stop!” Ford scolded and pulled the girl gently away. “Um, hello Soos.” Ford nodded respectfully. “Um, this is Miz, I am sorry for that.”

The former handyman laughed. “No probs Dr. Pines. Kids like poking me.” He grinned at Miz. “Hi little dood. I'm Soos.” Miz grinned back “Hi Question Mark! How're things at the shack?”
“Hey...Seb called me that too!” Soos chuckled. Miz raised an eyebrow and Soos frowned. “Wait a second…” the round man bent down to look closely at the little girl. She innocently blinked her dark eyes and Soos shrugged. “Huh. Almost thought you were someone else.” she can't possibly be the triangle dude. He was dead and he had yellow eyes. “Who?” Miz asked, tilting her head. Ford sighed tiredly. “Oh, it’s not important, dude! Have you looked at the souvenirs? You can only find them here at the Mystery Shack!” Miz’s eyes widened and she immediately went to look around. “Ooh~”

Soos and Ford watched Miz skip around to look for a souvenir. “Who is she, Dr. Pines?” Soos asked. “I saw you come with her from the house.”

Ford wasn't actually sure how to put this. Soos deserved to know the truth though. “She's...well please don't panic when I tell you this. It has to do with the portal and the things that happened years ago...”

“Dude. Is it bad?” Soos asked before his eyes widened. His mind raced through all the fanfics he'd written about the Pines family. Portal. Years ago. Soos stared at the little girl who, now that he was looking closer, was floating off the ground in order to look at stuff on a higher shelf. He gasped. “Is she your alien daughter from space?!”

“Yes-Wait! I mean, no!” Ford cried, disturbed by the idea. “She...you know how Seb was Bill, right? From another dimension, Miz is Another Bill...but a good one.” Soos looked at Ford as if he had grown a second head. “Are you serious, dude?” Ford adjusted his glasses and nodded. “I am completely serious, Soos. But she is a good friend of ours! Seb is a really good friend of hers and she was even the one who helped me and Stan when we first fell through the portal.”

Soos blinked. “Ok. That's cool. So is this triangle dude a dudette?”

Stanford blinked slowly. “Um, yes...I, yes, Miz is a dudette half the time, it's a little complicated…” Ford frowned, the word felt strange in his mouth. “Aren’t you...worried?”

Soos hummed. “I don’t think so.” He shrugged. “I trusted Sebas. But I’m gonna need to meet this dudette first to know if I should worry or not.”

Ford gaped unbelieving. “H-how are you so...ok with this?”

“I’m a simple guy, dude.” Soos smiled and adjusted his bowtie. “The triangle guy was, like, a super scary dude, but Sebastian was one too, and he was nice. Miz also looks nice…” Soos seemed to think of something. “I mean, I don’t know Miz, so I can’t judge her but...” He looked at his former boss’ brother knowingly. The two glanced over at Miz, who was trying on all the different hats in the gift shop. At the same time. Just...stacking the hats one on top of each other as they began magically floating. She was giggling with each new hat, tilting her head back to watch them orbit around her head.

“I think I like her.” Soos nodded with a smile. Ford hummed, admiring Soos’ truthfulness. It had always been difficult for him to trust people because of fear of getting mocked or bullied for his hands. And here was Soos, trusting and smiling at Miz after another Bill Cipher like her caused Weirdmageddon.

Miz came over, the hats rotating around her like a mini solar system, and pulled on Ford's hand. “Which one should I get?” she asked. Ford looked around, glad that no one was around. He smiled at the blue and white hat. Dipper had had one of those, didn’t he. “I would recommend this one.” He tried putting it on her head but it only floated. Huh.
“Ooh! This is Pinetree’s hat!! Eee!” She squealed. She tilted her head back to try and see the hat but it kept floating out of view as it stayed an inch away from the top of her head. She started batting at it with a hand and giggling to herself, thoroughly distracted. Ford and Soos looked at her with bemused expressions. It was actually pretty hard to remember she WAS an all powerful demon. Suddenly, the little bell on the door rang and a woman entered the gift shop. “The tourists just left, Soos-Oh, Dr. Pines, what a surprise!”

Miz’s head turned around so fast that if she were human she could have broken her neck and was suddenly in front of Melody. “Ooh! You must be Cadenza!!!” she squealed. Melody blinked at the little girl “Ah, no, my name is Melody.”

Miz grinned. “I know what I said.”

Ford interrupted “Hello Melody. How are you?”

“I’m doing fine, thank you, Dr. Pines!” The woman smiled and Ford felt that smug feeling inside him. Damn, how he loved to be called Doctor. It never got old. “Do you need something?” Melody asked, closing the door.

“Oh no, I just wanted to show Miz the Gift shop.” Ford nodded at Miz who was circling around Melody and making airplane noises. Melody laughed. “Well hello Miz.” She smiled at Ford “Are you babysitting for someone?”

Incredibly glad she didn’t call Miz his daughter, Ford adjusted his glasses and put his hands behind his back. “Yes, you could say I am!” Miz snorted. “What a terrible decision, really!” She teased the glaring man. “I'm the one babysitting ol' Fordsie here.” She said proudly. Ford made an offended sound.

Melody laughed. “You're taking care of Dr. Pines huh?” Miz nodded. “He doesn't clean his stuff. Like, EVER!”

“Yeah, he never does.” Melody agreed. The only decent place was the kitchen and other shared living spaces because Soos and her lived here with Abuelita (with the scientist’s permission). Knowing Ford, she still couldn’t believe they actually got him to agree to keep the Mystery Shack. “You know, Dr. Pines, Seb kept the house clean everyday waiting for you to return, you should try keeping it that way.” Soos commented lightly, meaning it like a joke, but Ford felt his heart clenching a bit.

“I know.” Ford forced a smile on his face. “Can we go back?” He asked Miz sheepishly. She shrugged and took the hat down to cover her face in case more dust happened. “Ok. But you have to find me a place to nap.” She yawned, hiding her sharp teeth behind the hat.

Ford almost groaned. Right. She wanted to sleep. He wished he didn’t need to, Miz was weird indeed. “Come on.” He opened the ‘employees only’ door and Miz made a pained expression before going back inside the house. At least they weren't going through the storage room this time. Ford took her to the second floor and to his room. When he didn’t fall asleep in his lab, he would sleep here. “You can rest here. There isn’t dust here.”

Miz gaped in awe. Dipper and Mabel changed bodies in this room! The carpet was gone, it was being perfected at the center now (as part of an entirely different experiment), but it still looked like a hella awesome room. She jumped onto the couch-bed and bounced a bit. “Ok. Make sure you wake me later so I don't miss dinner. Seb is making pasta!” She snuggled into the couch and before Ford could respond, fell asleep.

He looked at Bill. He could go, right? Or did he have to stay? Miz looked fine on her own, but when Ford stepped away, Miz let out a soft whimper. Ford sighed and grabbed one of the books on his bookshelves to read while the demon napped. It was only efficient to stay after all. He would be able to wake her up for her dinner at Seb’s place. He adjusted his position next to her and opened the book. Miz unconsciously crawled to lay her head on his lap and he found himself not really minding the closeness, petting her head with one hand as he read.

“Daddy, can we have dinner already?” Zach asked Seb as he watched TV. “If you don’t give us food, we will...um...I’ll make Queen Flutter pretty clothes with your pretty clothes you tell us we can’t touch!” Zoe grinned evilly.

Seb looked at his toddlers and frowned. “You are a little monster, you know that?”

“I am told.” Zoe nodded.

“And I want us to eat like a kind of normal family so for those two things to happen, we have to wait. I ain’t discussing this.” Seb turned on the volume a bit more. “DAD!” Zoe whined but got no response. “I’ll burn the house down!!” She threatened, showing her dad her pointy teeth. “Zoe, no!” Zach pulled her arm. He was always the one to talk his sister down when she wants to resort to violence to get her way.

“Well, then I will burn your toys if you burn the house!” Seb growled distractedly, still watching TV. “NO!!!” The girl screamed and pulled at her dad’s arm. “DON’T BURN THEM!” She screamed. Only she was allowed to burn them. “Then stop screaming!” Seb said as calmly as he could. Zach watched the exchange awkwardly. He cuddled Sir Bedazzle to his chest and whimpered. Seb and Zoe stopped when they heard Zach’s distress.

“It’s ok, Zachy...I won’t burn the house…” Zoe looked down guiltily and Seb picked up the little boy to sit him on his lap. “And I won’t burn your sister’s toys.”

“I don’t like it when you yell...” He stroked the puppy’s head. Seb kissed his tiny forehead. “I know, we’ll try not to do it as often ok?”

“Ok…” Zach smiled. Luckily for them, Miz came back at that point, materializing out of the air and face-planting on the ground. “Uuugh…”

“Miz!” The twins both cheered as they went to hug her. Seb blinked when he saw the hat floating above her head. Oh. Looks like she couldn't wear a proper hat either.

“We missed you!” The children declared and Miz disheveled them even more by ruffling their hair. “I know, I missed you too!” even if it had only been a few hours. “Were you in the Mystery Shack?” Seb asked. It took him a second to recognize Pinetree's old hat style. Now he was grinning like a dork.

“Yup! Fordsie took me there! And I met Question Mark and Cadenza!” She informed her friend with an excited grin. Seb was confused for a bit before he realized what she meant. “Oh. Melody right?” Miz nodded. “She seems nice. Kinda sad I didn't get to hang out with her more. I was Seb grinned like a little shit. “Sleepy wittle baby?”

“Shut up, Pines.” She rolled her eyes. “So, can we have dinner?” Miz asked excitedly and Seb groaned while Zoe cheered. “I was just telling Zoe we should wait for Wanda….” Miz raised her hand and flicked. There was a scream from outside. “HOLY SHIT!!”

Seb buried his face in his hands. “Did you just teleport Wanda and her car back home from wherever she was driving?”

Seb and the twins ran outside and Seb gaped when he saw his wife’s car. She was gripping the wheel tightly and she had a horrified expression on her face. “Hey, Wands! You drove so fast you travelled faster than light! You should be ashamed!” He teased and the still shocked woman glared at him with all her might, only holding herself back because she saw the twins there and cheering that she was back.

She got out of the car and slammed the door. She almost had a heart attack!! They were all so lucky she was stuck in traffic, insulting an asshole and not actually driving! The twins hugged her legs. “Hi mommy!” Zach snuggled closer to her. “Now we can eat!” Zoe cried relieved. “Did I scare you?” Miz came out of the house as well, and the blond’s anger turned into surprise. “Miz!!” She smiled widely. She hugged her pseudo-second daughter. “I nearly had a heart attack. Please don’t do that again.” She scolded and Miz nodded. “Sorry, Flower Crown…”

Wanda huffed. Really. She was raising four children now. She stared at Seb. “You're in charge of making sure this doesn't happen again,” she told him. Seb gasped. “I can't control Miz's power use!” Wanda rolled her eyes as she walked over to kiss Seb. “Well you're a father. It's your job.”

Sebastian whined and moaned loudly. “But I can’t!” He whined. Miz grinned deviously at him and Seb suddenly feared for his mortal life. Zoe whimpered and pulled his pants’ leg. “Can we have dinner now?!”

“Yes, NOW we can have dinner.” He laughed while the twins and Miz sprinted back inside chanting “Pasta! Pasta!!” Seb and Wanda held hands as they entered the house at a more sedate stroll. “I'm glad Miz is home.” Wanda said. Seb nodded as he lightly bumped his head against hers. He smiled excitedly “Do you think we should get the official papers now?!”

“...for her adoption?” Wanda asked. Seb nodded. Wanda frowned a little. “I do want to take her in officially. But…” she sighed. “How would we explain her? Especially once people realize she doesn't age?” Seb pouted hard as he closed the door. “We can figure something out…” He mumbled. “We have magic by our side…do you really want to ‘adopt’ her?”

They stopped before reaching the kitchen. “Why do you say that?” Wanda asked. Seb looked down and scratched his head. “You didn’t want another kid…” He said softly. Wanda sighed. “This is completely different.” She said. “You know why I didn’t want another one but I love Miz, she’s so sweet, and loves you and the twins so much! I am just taking precautions, I don’t make important decisions without checking it's feasibility…” She stroked his cheek. “It’s the lawyer in me…” She pouted. Seb hugged his wife. “I understand. This isn't Gravity Falls where people just ignore anything weird…” Wanda smiled and stroked Seb’s curls. “We can think of what to do, for the papers I can call an old pal of mine-” Seb started to say.

He did what he wanted. And Rico stopped trafficking drugs ages ago!

They got to the kitchen where the twins were helping set the table as Miz served the plates for everybody. Seb grabbed two plates, Miz grabbed two more and Wanda grabbed the last one plus a jar of passion fruit juice. Zoe moaned loudly when she sniffed her food and started inhaling the meat and tomato sauce covered pasta. Zach, Wanda and Miz rolled their eyes when Seb did exactly the same. Wanda was glad he was eating so well. These past 5 years have been good for him.

“Um, Miz...we would like to ask you something…” Wanda handed a napkin to her daughter and to her husband. Miz looked up from her own plate, cheeks bulging with food. “Mm?” She asked. Wanda couldn't help but smile at the sight. She sobered quickly, “Miz, if…” she bit her lip. Sebastian took Wanda's hand, showing her his silent support. She took a deep breath, working up her courage. “If I said we wanted to adopt you, officially, would you...how would that make you feel?” Wanda asked.

Miz went still. Adopt...her…? She swallowed. “As in...you would be my mom?” Her constructed heart pounded. This was...this… “Like, actually being my...mom?” Her hands shook. How would...why would…

Wanda nodded. “In these past few months that I've known you...I've found you to be a bright, fun and wonderful person.” She sat straight “I know you are actually much older than I am but you look and act like a child and do not seem adverse to being treated as one so long as you aren't being talked down to.” Sebastian hugged Wanda, giving her the confidence to continue. “I care about you a lot. My husband cares for you and my children already treat you like their sister.” Wanda had a soft expression on her face. “So, Seb and I have been thinking that we could make it official.”

Miz stared at them wide eyed. “I…” she paused. Wanda assured her “You don't have to answer me now. Feel free to take your time with it.” Miz looked away, brows creased as her hands fidgeted with her dress. She nodded faintly. “I will need some time.” She said, sounding a little guilty. Wanda smiled. “That's fine. Take as much time as you need.”

“Yeah, we aren't pressuring you to do something you might not be comfortable with.” Seb said just as the twins started shouting. “Sister! Sister! Sister!” The brunet groaned at the twins. “What did I just say? No pressure!” He scolded and Wanda rolled her green eyes. “My point is--” Seb took a sip of his juice, damn he loved this shit. “Even if you decide not to, you are still part of the family!” He smiled. “I just thought it would be nice to do this.” Miz nodded with a small smile. She was confused and somewhat unsure. Why would they want to adopt her if they already had two beautiful babies? Did they actually want her this much? But why?

Dinner was finished, Queen Flutter was watered, she purred and meowed happily the entire time, and then it was time for the twins to take a bath. Wanda went with them to help while Seb stayed to clean everything. Mutual cooperation was more than needed when one had more than one little kid.

Miz was watching Seb work, calm but unblinking. Finally she spoke up “I already have a dad. That's Ax. So I won't be able to call you dad.” Seb nodded. “That's fine. I understand.”

“...I haven't had a mom in so long…” Miz played with a lock of her hair. “It...would be nice...but…”

“But?” Seb prompted. Miz took a shuddering breath. “What will I do when you all die and leave me too?” Seb frowned a bit. He put the plate he was drying aside and looked at Miz. “I...I didn't think of that…” It was scary to think of his own death now that staying alive only depended on him. “I'll be orphaned again…” Miz whispered. “It would suck either way when you die but adoption means family, means responsibility and a whole bunch of other things…” she looked at Seb, gripping the table until her knuckles turned white. “…why...would you even want all that responsibility?” Why...would you even want me?”

“Because I love you.” Seb shrugged with a small smile. “And it would make us, it would make ME really happy to have you as part of my family...officially.” He left the cloth and the plates and sat down next to Miz. “I know I can’t really say I understand all of what you’ve gone through, being a dumb human makes that hard to do...but maybe we can...try to, I don’t know, establish and understand that certain things will eventually be happy even if they're sad, it will help you for when you meet more mortals….” He drew the sniffling girl closer to him. “I suppose you can think of it as filling your life with happy memories. So even when we're gone you can look back and smile instead.”

Miz gripped Seb's shirt. “I don't...I…” she sighed ‘I'm still getting used to having lost my kids.
Pyronica still visits our grandkids but I just can't. I don't know how she has the strength for this.”
Miz closed her eyes and leaned against Seb's chest. “You know, I wasn't all that close to my triangle parents.” She admitted. “Oh yeah?” Seb rubbed her back. “That’s one more thing we have in common then.” He smiled a little. “They were dicks...I can’t complain now though, I love my human Ma...and you have us now, you have Ax, I still find it hilarious that he's your dad, you have your friends...Miz, you’re not alone and I want you to really enjoy our time together, not thinking about when we'll be gone, where’s the fun in that?”

Miz nodded. “I know that. I get it...just…” she moved Seb's hand onto her head and he began gently petting her. “...I...really want to have a mom again. Even if my triangle father-” she spat “- was a bit of a neglectful dick, mother had tried to show that she cared for me...I...miss that.”

“Aaww~” Seb snuggled the girl closer to him. “I will be your mom.” He declared and Miz exploded with laughter. “No!! I don’t want you as a mom! Back off!”

“Hey! I would be an excellent mom, mind you!” Seb crushed Miz in a tight hug, making her scream and kick. “Let me go!” She laughed. “No!! I need to keep you warm, my offspring!” Seb

“Why are you two screaming so much?!?” They looked up and found Wanda there glaring half-heartedly. Seb snuggled Miz to himself “I’m going to be Miz's new mother~” he sang. “No you're not!” Miz laughed. “Even if you are a good house husband.” she pulled at Seb's arms. “You're not mature enough to be my mom anyway!” Though, to be fair...her original human mother DID enjoy setting stuff on fire...and had once called her ‘refrigerator’ instead of ‘daughter’...

This was a woman who once pointed to a flock of sparrows and said “If I filled a shotgun with sand and shoot them, it would stun them long enough for us to grab a feast! They're so small we can eat them like popcorn!” and dear lord she missed her human mother.

shrugged. She was grinning though. “Yes I am!” Seb insisted loudly and Wanda rolled her eyes, tired. Dear God. “No you aren’t! You're a big baby!” Miz teased. “NO I AM NOT!” Seb shrieked. “Wanda!!” He whined in the woman’s direction

“You are a big baby.” Wanda agreed and Seb pouted angrily. “I’ll sleep with the twins tonight!”
He declared, upset and left the room. Miz and Wanda both laughed. There was a ‘thunk’ of the door closing and the two women were left alone. Wanda looked down at Miz who was looking up at her.

“So, we should talk.” Wanda decided. Miz nodded. “Yeah. Us adults have to discuss grown up things.” She grinned but it turned serious. “Are you ABSOLUTELY sure you want to adopt me?”

Wanda smiled gently and stroked her cheek. “We are definitely, absolutely sure we want to adopt you...we might need to make a few ‘not so legal’ things to get the papers and you might need to ‘grow up’ to make it look normal...but we totally want you to be part of our family.” Wanda looked at her hands. “We might be asking too soon...but Seb is really excited about this...when the twins were still babies, Seb told me he wanted another kid. I didn’t want to have another kid because I didn’t want to get pregnant again...he was really sad, but I wasn't going to give in...we talked about adoption but we didn’t discuss much. I think you’re the perfect daughter in this context!”

Miz fiddled with her dress. “I don't know if I'll be able ‘grow up’. I suppose I can try shapeshifting myself taller but I don't know what normal ‘aging’ is supposed to look like.” not to mention this ‘body’ was technically an adult. She was 27 years old...she just...happened to look incredibly young. Well, there was that ‘older’ teenaged form that Blue made for her. She could set that as the final point of a shapeshift sequence and set herself now as the starting point and simply set this vessel to slowly shift into that ‘older’ form over the course of 10 years? It would simulate aging. But after that... She would need to create an even older form to set as the next final point. Well, she had ten years to figure that one out.

Wanda chuckled. “I think that’s fine...Do you want to be ‘adopted’?”

Miz looked down at her hands. “Do you want to hear a story?” She responded. Wanda blinked, confused. “What?”

“I had a human family once. A long...long time ago.” Miz spoke. “There was a dad who was always working. He meant well and he loved us but he didn't know how to interact with us.” She closed her eyes, immersed in her old memories. “We fought now and then. He was a huge man child who threw tantrums when he was angry. I think I learned most of my bad habits from him.”

Wanda remained quiet. She didn't realize Miz had been taken in before. It must have been in some other dimension. She remembered Seb talking about alternative dimensions once.

“And my human mother was kind and hardworking. She wasn't the best at traditionally womanly things. For many years she could only cook the same meals for dinner. Rice, fish and boiled vegetables. And this was when she wasn't just buying food from McDonald's to bring home.”

Wanda blinked. Ok. Definitely another dimension. McDonald? What kind of name was that? Alternative dimension WcDonalds?

“But she still tried her best. I think...she blamed her own lack of cooking skills for the fact that I never grew much. Malnutrition and all that.” Miz sighed. Who knows. Maybe it WAS due to malnutrition that she never ‘grew up’ like a proper woman. “I was always thin and hungry. This was before my father started a restaurant. He used to work as a dishwasher. Mom had a cubicle job with a trade company. It wasn't a lot of income to raise me and my little brother...who I eventually learned was a sister but that’s a whole different story. We were hungry a lot. And left alone a lot. We didn't have many toys. But it was fine. Because we had each other.”

Wanda reached out to take Miz's hand. The girl squeezed back without looking at her.

“We got older, dad started up a restaurant with some business partners and it was small. But it grew and money started coming in. My parents started buying us toys and clothes and there was food that dad brought home from the restaurant so we could heat it up in the microwave to eat whenever we were hungry.” Miz smiled a little at that. She loved ramen, still did, but cooking ramen for herself and her younger sibling was all she could do as a nine year old. She learned how to make rice as well but without proper cooking experience she couldn't prepare any meat or vegetables until she was 11. Having leftovers in the fridge was a godsend.

“Eventually we moved to a bigger apartment. Mainly because mom found out she was pregnant and we simply didn't have room for another child in the house.” At that time, her cousin was living with them too. So it was her parents in one bedroom while she shared the other bedroom with Zyun-Zeon and her cousin Faye who was 16. They moved to a three bedroom apartment just so there would be space. “And things were going well. I was in school. I still wasn't growing much and I didn't have many friends but I was happy. Eventually we moved again to an actual house, not a shared apartment building, a real house. And life continued on.” She remembered that house fondly. She had been so excited to have a yard and a porch and a personal washing machine.

Wanda watched her quietly. Her mind was racing at this information. It sounded like Miz had really stayed long term with a human family. She was almost afraid of hearing how this story ended.

“I made some real friends in high school.” Miz smiled fondly. “We all remained friends even after we graduated. Of course…” she gestured to herself. “I still looked like this. But other than some startled looks, people just...chalked it up to me being Asian and left it alone.” Wanda couldn't help but let out a snort of laughter. Maybe they could use that as an excuse too?

“I took care of my little sisters until one of them was old enough to move out and the other was in her mid teens… and then the accident happened.” Miz shuddered. Wanda felt her heart sink. Here it was. The sad part. “A friend was driving me home at night. It was late. It was dark. He was distracted. I was distracting him…..” She squeezed Wanda's hand. “I shouldn't have distracted him...I shouldn't have...I should have just stayed quiet and let him focus on the road…”

Wanda moved over to pick Miz up in a hug. She had a feeling she knew where this was going. Miz gripped onto Wanda's shirt. “I noticed we were in the wrong lane. He made a turn because the light turned green...but we were in the wrong lane…” she closed her eyes tightly. “The other car honked right before they hit us...” she sobbed. “And...and we flipped. And then I was upside down...and there was a gas leak...we couldn't get o-out and…” she broke down crying.

Wanda hugged the distressed girl as she sobbed into her shirt. She didn't know what to say. She wanted to ask why Miz didn't use her powers but if she had just gotten into such an accident, she might not have been able to think about that. She heard from Seb about the accident he had once. How he had simply panicked and ran away, unable to think about anything coherent. Wanda stroked Miz's hair until the sobs faded into sniffles and hiccups. She wanted to say something reassuring but wasn't sure what. Miz gasped and tried to get her breathing back to normal. “A-and then I died and… and then I woke up again but I was somewhere else, some one else and everyone was gone. My family, my friends, my sisters…” Miz hiccuped quietly. Wanda quickly caught on to what Miz was saying. Her human family and friends were long dead. She knew Seb had reincarnated, it sounded like...Miz had too.

Wanda hugged the girl close. Her heart ached for her. How must that have felt? To lose everything and have to continue on without them? “Oh sweetie...I can understand why you aren't...eager to get a new human family.” Wanda said at last. Miz sniffled. “But I really like you. And the twins and Seb and...and I really want to have a mommy again but I feel like a bad daughter for wanting to replace my other mom...and…”

“You are NOT a bad daughter for wanting a new family.” Wanda told her. “And...while I can't promise that you won't be taken from us or that we won't d-die in some accident...between me and Seb, we should be able to keep the lot of us alive.”
Miz nodded slowly. “T-then...can we make a Deal? You and everyone else aren't allowed to die on me from accidents ...a-and if I get destroyed from something...” she hesitated. “Throw my remains through a portal. I can only time travel between dimensions so if I take a thousand years to reform somewhere ELSE...I can still return home to you.”

Wanda shuddered. She didn’t want Miz getting destroyed...and...this deal would protect them, not only her, she wouldn’t have to worry about Seb or the twins being in danger because of accidents... “But...only if it’s an accident or something stupid right? No interfering in...natural death?” Wanda clarified. She was a lawyer after all. Miz frowned but nodded. “I do retain the right to prevent deadly diseases though...is that alright?’

“Yes.” Wanda nodded in agreement. They always had mini heart-attacks when the twins fell sick as babies. Their immune systems weren’t that strong. Magical protection sounded incredibly beneficial. “Yes, that is quite alright.” The two discussed the intricacies a bit more, fixing the wording and intent as they found one they both agreed with. "Alright. And that's the Deal.” Wanda extended her hand.

“Then...it's a Deal.” Miz held out her own hand. “The Pines bloodline and those married into them will not be felled by sickness or deadly harm that would take them before their Time. In exchange…” she took a deep breath, her eyes shining with tears and a hopeful expression “…you will take care of me and...be my new mother.”

Wanda listened carefully to Miz's terms. As a lawyer she knew well how people could twist words. She clearly noticed Miz's wording to include Seb's brothers and their families as well. But, this was fine. If Miz wanted to sneakily protect the rest of the family as well, Wanda had no problem with that. “Deal.” She said, taking Miz's hand. The fire flared out. Wanda had to close her eyes at how bright it was. There was a tingling in the air, like Reality was twisting . She shivered. Magic was always somewhat scary to her. But she had long since accepted it would be a part of her life when she married Sebastian Pines. The light faded and she “Oof”ed when Miz barreled into her with a tight hug. The demon was shaking. Wanda hugged her back, holding the girl as she sobbed again, this time in relieved joy. This girl, her daughter, Wanda felt somewhat faint at the thought. She had a magically adopted daughter now. All that was left to do was getting the boring human paperwork out of the way to make it "official’.

“Oh, sweetie...It’s alright…” The blond stroked her hair as the girl tried, and failed, to stop crying. “You can cry as long as you want, ok? I am here, you aren’t alone.”

Miz eventually calmed down, but she stayed laying against Wanda’s chest, just listening to her heart pump the blood through her body. It was really soothing. Wanda slowly stood up, still carrying Miz who was clinging to her, and turned off the light in the kitchen to go upstairs. “Do you want to sleep now? Let’s go find Sebastian.” She whispered to Miz. Her daughter nodded. “I'm...tired.” That was an understatement. She’d just used a lot of power placing protections on Wanda, Seb, the twins, Shermie, Abigail, the other twins, Stanley, Carla, Dillon, Diego, Stanford, Kari...even Filbrick and his family, just because.

‘Besides…’ Miz thought viciously. ‘I won't let Filbrick die until I've made him suffer for what he put his family through…’

Wanda carried her effortlessly upstairs and they went to the twins’ room. Wanda was actually expecting to see the twins and Seb, stubbornly sleeping with them, but the three, plus Dazzle and Queen Flutter, were laughing and playing by throwing stuffed toys at each other.

“Sebastian, I put the children to bed!” Wanda whined. “And I came to play! Bam!” He threw a stuffed pony at her and Wanda watched it fall to the floor, unimpressed. “Very funny, William.”
The three Pines booed at her at the name and the blond sighed. “So, can we go to sleep now? I am tired, Miz is tired and the twins need to sleep.”

“Daddy is not a big baby! Dad is a cool daddy!” Zach defended his smug looking father. Wanda couldn’t believe Seb told the children about that! “Well, better for us then!” She smiled. “I can sleep more comfortably with my daughter.” That caught Seb’s attention. He stared, wide eyed. “Wait…she…she said yes?!” but Wanda was already smugly walking off as Miz giggled in her arms. “Wait! Wanda!!!” Sebastian whined.

“We can talk if you put the kids to bed~!” The woman called from their room. Seb sighed and turned to look at his kids. “Alright, gremlins, ya heard your mom!” Seb had a hard time getting them in bed. They even started putting on their normal clothes, claiming they couldn't go to sleep without Pj's! But eventually, after a story of little annoying gnomes getting kicked in the faces and tasting their delicious blood, the twins fell asleep, hugging a plantimal each.

Seb kissed their foreheads, wished them good night and slowly exited their room to go to his. Wanda was getting ready to go to bed, her clothes already changed, and Miz was laying down in the middle of the bed staring at the ceiling in her own sleeping clothes. “There! The kids are sleeping!” Seb huffed. The two women grinned. Seb pouted. “Now can you tell me what happened?” Miz giggled. “Nope. But Wanda's my mom now. And that's all you need to know.”

Seb kicked off his shoes and threw them away. “Why don’t you want to tell me? I deserve to know!”

“Nope.” Wanda took off her earrings and put them on her nightstand. “Now change your clothes please! We want to sleep.” Seb pouted and sat down heavily on the bed. Miz looked up at him curiously and the brunet sighed before laughing. “Alright. I guess it’s a mom-daughter shit and I respect that...but remember she was mine first!” He stuck his tongue out playfully. Wanda laughed and kissed his nose. “Of course.” Miz snuggled into the sheets.

Sebas grabbed his Pj’s from under his pillow and went to the bathroom to change his clothes and brush his teeth. In a few minutes, he came back and laughed when he saw Wanda flopped around, trying to stand up to get her purse. “Phoneee~” She moaned. “Plug ittt!” She pointed at the purse she threw onto a table. Seb rolled his eye and did as asked. He took off his eyepatch and pushed Miz closer to Wanda so he could get in bed. Not even the twins slept with them this often and he had a tiny demon trying to steal his part of the bed from him.

“I can fix that!” Miz turned to look at Seb. “So I can share?” Seb yawned and nodded, snuggling against his pillow. “Ok…”

Content with the response, the tired demon snuggled between the two humans, turned off the light and fell asleep.

Seb and Wanda spent a few weeks working through the adoption papers. Having to make up a backstory for Miz in order to give her identity papers wasn't as difficult as they thought. Despite the very controlling government, some rural farming villages in China had people who didn't get properly registered. They simply claimed Xin was an immigrant friend who brought over his younger sister to try and find a better life for themselves.

Due to some weird immigration laws, Miz would need to be adopted to be allowed to stay and thus, Seb and Wanda took her in.

All in all, they were geniuses! And after a few changes between Miz and Xin, sometimes both, they officially adopted their daughter a month and a half later. The twins didn’t understand much, but they were super excited to have Miz as an ‘official older sister’ like their parents said.

The twins were another pending problem. As they will be away all summer, they needed to find them a good elementary school to enroll them for kindergarten. Seb was annoyed they didn’t want to give them the possible future teachers’ information. Did they really expect him to just leave his kids there with strangers?! Miz stared at him deadpan. “Just tell me their names or which school you're looking at.” She said. “Duh.”

Seb facepalmed. Right. Bill Cipher. All seeing, all knowing. As Seb gave Miz the list of schools, Wanda thought Seb was exaggerating a tiny bit, but she saw why he did it. He had told her his teachers had been mean to him for being different, of course they didn't want that happening to the twins. And Zach. She had no idea what to do with her baby’s…situation. What could they do? She wanted them to treat Zach how he felt, but they definitely had to talk to the principal and a psychologist to get their support and so many things that made the twins’ enrollment much more difficult.

“What should we do about Zach?” She asked. It was just the three of them in the dining room at the table plus the papers and requirements. Seb groaned. “I don't know. We just...have to make sure Zach is happy. Why is this so hard?”

“They will ask for his identification, and they will know he isn’t biologically a boy…” Wanda mused to herself. “Do you think...we can convince them to treat him like a boy? If we ask nicely.”

“Or with violence.” Seb added but Wanda shut him up. Miz shrugged. “You could change his papers to say he's a boy?” Wanda sighed. “But what if that causes problems as well? They have a changing room when they go to PE class.”

“Zach won’t like changing with the girls either.” Seb ran a hand through his hair. “But he will feel bad when he sees he’s not like the other boys…” He pouted hard. “And the fucking bathroom…” He mumbled. Miz groaned and put her head down on the table. “How about you tell them Zach is sensitive about his body and they give him a private changing room?”

“That...could work.” The parents nodded slowly. “Yeah I like that.” Seb grinned.

Miz finished scanning the schools and gave them a surprisingly much reduced list, with only teachers who didn’t have a dubious or dangerous history. Wanda took some of the reject schools “I'm going to see about getting some of these teachers fired.“ she growled. There were two pedophiles on this list. TWO!

“Don’t show it to me or I’ll kill them!” Seb called as she stood up and left. Miz nodded in approval. Seb looked at his adopted daughter reading about the filtered out schools. “I hope Zach feels happy…”

“He'll be fine. Zoe's with him. She'll beat the shit outta anyone who tries something.” Miz grinned. That little spitfire reminded her so much of Pyronica. Takes no shit from anyone. She wondered if she should introduce her two families to each other. She had to. She definitely would. Maybe when all of them were in New Jersey!

“I don’t want Zoe to feel it’s her obligation to protect Zach, I mean, I know she will...but I felt bad Stan didn’t get to make many friends growing up because he stayed with Sixer and I.”

“Fish would have done it anyway! He's a softie for you guys!” Miz assured. “And Zoe loves her twin.”

“I’ll convince Wanda to get them to boxing or karate or some shit...she doesn’t want them getting hurt, but that shit is really important.”

“I taught my kids how to break someone's wrist and handle firearms ever since some assholes attacked their childgarden and tried to kidnap them.” Miz told him. “Oohh!” Seb grinned. “I like that, and that’s terrible, kidnapped? I guess it’s because they were your kids,” Miz nodded. “I tore them to pieces. And traumatized a bunch of children. Not my best moment.” She kicked her feet a little. “So when I adopted my daughter, Quackers, I went out of my way to pretend she WASN’T my kid. Made it clear that I didn't care about her at all while dumping her on some ‘random person’.” She smiled, nostalgic and bittersweet.

“That... sounds pretty clever.” Seb grinned. “Of course. Who do you think you’re talking to, human?” She teased. Seb pushed her and she fell from the chair with an ‘oof!’ “Curse you gravity!”

Seb laughed at her as she continued pouting. He entered the website of another school and hummed as he read what they had. This was so difficult. They sounded nice, but were they really nice? What if the kids were shittier than normal? He didn’t want to get into fights with the parents every day...

“How did you keep your kids from being bullied and stuff?” Seb asked Miz. She grinned. “Threats and money. Mostly money. The threats made it hard for them to make friends.”

“Um...I guess threats aren’t an option then...I want them to have friends…” Seb muttered. “And I can't just...throw money at the school to give them special treatment!” Miz flipped through the papers. “Hm...I could invisibly follow them to school and...’dissuade’ anyone from messing with them?”

Seb hummed. “I...I don’t know, they need to learn to defend themselves too...just look what happens when you don’t.” He pointed at himself. He suddenly shouted, “AAHH!! I just want them to stay at home forever!! At least then we wouldn’t worry about this!”

Miz understood. She had felt the same. “But homeschooling means they won't learn how to interact with other kids. And they wouldn't be able to make friends.” she pointed out. Seb moaned and tugged at his hair. “I have a headache~” he complained. Miz patted his back. “Go take a break. Play with the twins. Their episode of Those Little Ponys is ending soon anyway.” she shifted into her William form, complete with maid outfit. “I'm gonna make lunch.”

“I hate that show…” Seb mumbled before he stood up anyway. The twins and Miz loved that show. Even Zach liked it despite the show being aimed at girls. Seb remembered Zach claiming he wanted to be a unicorn and Miz had turned his children into horses for a day. That...nearly gave him a heart attack. It was one thing, turning Mabel and Dipper into magical creatures and a completely different thing was seeing said magic on his kids. It was...unnerving. He wanted to check on his kids just to make sure they hadn't been turned into horses again. “What are you going to cook?”
“It will be a surprise, now leave!” William shooed the man away. The twins were used to the idea that their sister was sometimes a brother. And sometimes a triangle. Miz had gone back into her Bill form once, just to show them what she ‘really’ looked like. Wanda was a little startled but had pulled the triangle in for a hug and told her she was still her daughter no matter what she looked like. Bill cried for a long time after that.

Seb went to find the twins who were all spread over the couch watching TV. Um, was this healthy? He doubted it. There was this article saying they shouldn’t watch too much TV. “Hey, little demons.” Seb sat down next to them. “Hi, dad!” They cheered. Dazzle barked at him and jumped into his lap to rub against him. Queen Flutter meowed in recognition and closed her eyes again. She was napping, her owner wasn’t that important.

“Yes!” The toddlers nodded. “I want to learn more stuff!” Zach grinned. “And I want to play with lots and lots of friends!” Zoe added and Seb smiled. He felt the same when he first started school.

“What would you think of getting in karate lessons after gymnastics?” (They hadn't been back to the gym in a while and hadn't had a need to since Miz got them tired out from playing together. Even Seb felt fine despite not going to the gym, having worked off a lot of energy keeping up with the lot of them.) At their confused faces, Seb continued. “Uncle Shermie knows a lot of karate, which is a japanese martial art, and Uncle Stan knows how to box really well...we can ask them to teach you a bit of each so you can choose which one you want to practice...I think it is important for you to learn how to fight and defend yourself.”

Zoe grinned so wide Seb could see all her fangs. “So I get to beat people up?” Seb rolled his eye. “No. It's only for self defense.”

“That’s boring.” The girl pouted. “But I still want to learn from Uncle Shermie and Uncle Stan!” Seb ruffled her disheveled hair. “But if I don’t want to do it?” Zach questioned. “You will thank me later.” Seb told him. “That’s not fair...You said that we get to choose what we do, but you’re making me do this.” Zach pouted.

Seb paused and looked at the kid. “That’s nice...but I am your dad and I still get to choose some things.” He stuck his tongue out. “It will be good for you, Zachy, I promise.” Zach blew a raspberry. Seb poked his nose. “None of that, young man. You don't have to practice forever. Just a couple of lessons until you can protect yourself if someone tries to hurt you.”

Zoe grinned evilly. There were many interpretations for that… “I want to learn! OH! I want to buy all my colors, and backpacks and notebooks! Can we go now?!” Seb gasped. “I forgot about school shopping!”

Summer was starting soon and he wanted to get all the school supplies shopping done before they left for New Jersey. He got up, picking up the kids as he went and rushed back into the kitchen. “Mi-William!” He cried (and it was weird how Bill had named this form William, like Seb's middle name) “We need to go school shopping!”

William's large eye widened before his pupil dilated into a large black, sparkling galaxy in excitement. “School supplies?! Like...like color coded folders and binders and notebooks and pencils labeled by number?!” He squealed.

Sebastian blinked. “Um…”

“And heart shaped hole punchers? And little transparent plastic rulers? And...and erasers shaped like ostriches?!” William continued to gush. Seb's eye twitched. “...kind of?” What the fuck sort of school supplies was William thinking of?!

“Right…” Seb coughed awkwardly, staring at the literal sparkles twinkling around William's head. “So, I was thinking we all head to the supply store after lunch and get their stuff? At least the basic stuff before we know what school they are actually going to.”

William nodded. “Ok. Go get mom and tell her lunch will be ready soon.”

Seb grinned like a huge idiot at what William called Wanda and he looked at the kids he was carrying under his arms. “Let’s go find Mom to eat and go buy school stuff!” “YAY!” They cheered. They stamped into Wanda's home office room, startling her by chanting “Lunch! Lunch! Lunch!”

“Holy god!” She put a hand on her chest as a yellow, blue and green glow lifted her off the ground. “Hey!” The Pines carried her back into the kitchen as Wanda pouted. This was her life now… Wanda spotted Miz's William form plating the food and laughed. “Do you always have to wear that maid uniform?”

William gasped dramatically “It’s not JUST a maid uniform! It is my battle armor for the trials of protecting the household from dirt and grime!” He placed a hand into the air and swished his arms around flamboyantly. “For I am not a simple maid! I am…” sparkles twinkled around him as he posed heroically.

“The dashing duster that cleans between the cracks!” He twirled, his skirt bouncing as he went.

He stood with his arms twisted into a pose that Wanda was SURE came from some sort of anime.

“I am Magical Chaos ☆ Illuminaughty!” A bunch of flashing rainbow lights appeared behind him as he floated in the air, pose going back into something more casual as he floated back down.
“.....” Wanda turned to stare at Seb who was muffling hysterical laughter. She didn't know how but she was sure this was something from his side of the family. “I don’t get it.” Zoe complained and Zach was just frowning. The blonde finally smiled, confused but not that confused. “You really ARE part of this family…” she chuckled.

They all sat down to eat lunch. Chicken fried rice with chopped up string beans and mushrooms. “The vegetables are good for you Zoe, I can see you picking them out.” As well as some cheese and broccoli soup. “Oh my gosh. Zach's actually eating the broccoli!” and had a great time. As soon as everyone finished eating, William flick cleaned the kitchen, shifted back into Miz and followed everyone out to the car. (She WAS going to conquer her fear! She was!) The twins were buzzing with emotion.
Some neighbors waved at the family. “Oh. Are you all going shopping for school?” Kent from a few houses down asked as he came by with his wife. The couple had been improving their relationship in the past few months, wanting to reconnect with each other after seeing how close the Pines family were. The two had begun taking walks together whenever Kent didn't have work and just spending quality time together. “Oh. And little Miz is here too. Hello dear.” Kent's wife, Jasmine, smiled at the girl. They'd all heard about it. Xin, that handsome young man from the birthday party months ago, had lost his parents and children in an awful car accident. The only survivors were him and his dear younger sister. With Xin off working as a butler in some unknown wealthy household, he worried about his younger sister and had left her in the care of his good friends.

Everyone thought it was very kind of the Pines family to take the girl in. Poor thing must have been traumatized at losing her family. They saw Xin around the house often so they knew he wasn’t simply dumping his sister on them. Besides, the poor man had lost his children and was in no shape to raise his sister. Giving her to a stable, loving household must have been a hard but well thought out decision. The housewives gossiped and easily bought the cover story. It was suitably melodramatic. It must have been true!

“Hello mister and missus Cornwell.” Miz chirped at the couple (playing up the little girl aesthetic, she was going out of her way to look younger than she already seemed, thinking it would make it easier to explain away the adoption if she was a little younger). They cooed. What a sweet girl. So polite.

“Hi!!” The twins waved at their neighbors, seeing Miz do it, they guessed they had to do it too. “We are! We are buying backpacks and colors and cute notebooks!” Zoe informed them as she tried to climb into the car. Seb helped the twins get in and got them buckled in their special seats. Safety! Safety first. Especially for little, fragile kids. ESPECIALLY if they were his babies.

“Isn’t it a little early to buy school supplies?” Jasmine asked curiously. She and Kent were still waiting for the school list of supplies for their son Xavier.

“Well, we are slightly running out of time, we have to do all this before summer.” Seb told them simply. He didn’t know if oversharing was good. Zoe said loudly “We're gonna live with our uncle Stan for the summer!” Seb stared in deadpan at the girl. “Yeah, because it’s daddy and uncles’ birthday!” Zach added with an innocent smile. Dumb, adorable kids… “Yeah...that. Miz, get in the car please…” He said lamely. Miz hesitated before doing so. No, she could do this. She could!

Miz climbed in, settling herself in the middle between the twins. They both reached out to take her hands after she buckled in. Being in cars was still stressful for her. The twins pet her hands, to try and help. Miz felt her Deal of Protection spread a barrier around the car. Even if they were hit by a freight train, they should be fine. That DID make her feel much better. She still trembled, pressing herself down and into the seat as much as she could.

The neighbors waved their farewells as Wanda sat behind the wheel first, smugly grinning at Seb. “I won.”

“Cheater, I was putting the twins in their seats…” He grumbled as he sat in the passenger seat. As always, the twins got to choose the music (their children's own cds) and Wanda drove them to the store. The twins took Miz's mind off the road by making her sing along and the family trip went by smoothly.

The supply store (Paperclips) was filled with some other families who were doing early shopping. They weren't the only family going on a vacation for the summer after all. Miz winced at all the emotions in the air and clamped down on her senses, limiting herself to just the ‘human’ ones for her own mental stability. A Seal-headband would work better but this was only going to be for a little while, she could hold her Empathy and Telepathy shut for a few hours. The twins wanted to run away but Wanda managed to catch them. “We’re sticking together ok?”

They pouted, that wasn’t fun, but agreed. They didn’t want to get lost anyway. They pulled hard on their mom’s hands though and Wanda eventually gave Zoe to Seb. “What do you want first?”

“Colors!” They exclaimed. They skipped towards the colorful section and Zoe immediately grabbed a box of 48 color pencils. “Mine!” Zach also wanted the biggest box and hugged it to his chest. “I want this one!”

“I think 12 color pencils are enough.” Wanda grimaced. “Why do you need so many colors?”

Miz looked at Seb about to give in, but luckily for everyone, their mom was immune to puppy eyes. “Nope. We are getting the box of 12.” Wanda said firmly. Zach and Zoe whined. Miz whispered “Don't worry, I can duplicate and change the colors when we get home.”

The twins stared at Miz before squealing in glee. Best. Big. Sister. Ever!

“You’re going to spoil them.” Wanda rolled her eyes. Miz huffed. “Fine. You’ll get another color for each chore you finish when we get home.” She said instead. Zoe whined because that meant she had to do wooooork~ But Zach nodded. He could do chores for more colors.

Wanda put the pencils into the cart as she checked the prices of the other supplies. Seb secretly thought Miz’s ability to create more color pencils would be super useful. He knew the kids would lose their colors at school and buying the more expensive big box was a bad idea. Seb wrapped a hand around his wife’s waist as he looked around at the stuff. Miz caught up with them at the cart where the twins put more colors that they found, their big markers and their chosen pencil cases, both of them featuring images of that dog rescue show they were into. “We want these ones!” They declared and ran away to find more stuff.

Seb ran after them. “Don't go off by yourself!” He wailed. Wanda rolled her eyes. Children. The lot of them. She got some packets of wider spaced lined paper for young children. If the kids needed binders they would need these. She trusted Seb to get the kids back while she handled this. Hm...small rulers were probably a good idea.

She grabbed some pencils, erasers and sharpeners. They were the same to avoid the twins fighting over the colors. Seb came back, panting and carrying each twin under his arms. “If you guys run off again you won't be allowed to choose which folders and notebooks you want.” He threatened. They whined. Wanda laughed before looking around. “Where's Miz?”

Seb's eye widened and he looked around. “Shit.”

Miz was wandering down an aisle with different paints. Washable finger paints, acrylics, watercolors… she knelt down to pick up a set that looked pretty good despite the cheap price. So lost was she in her examination that she didn't notice the man coming up behind her. This man had been loitering around the store for a while, watching, observing… he grinned as he found a suitable target, a cute little girl alone in an aisle in a store full of frantic parents and children running around, with no one who seemed to be her parents in sight. She was older and larger than his usual targets but he’d been growing bold recently. He smoothed out his expression, pulled his cap down over his eyes (not that it mattered since he was wearing a fake beard that hid the rest of his face), checking his clothing over to confirm he was dressed in similar colors to the staff, with an apron and everything. “Hello miss. Do you need help finding anything?”

The little girl blinked up at him before smiling. “Um… do you have a sealant here? Like an acrylic spray or a varnish?” The man nodded, “Of course. This way.” He walked off confidently and heard the little girl following behind him. This was almost too easy. People really did blindly obey those whom they believed to be in power, and in this case, it would be the authority of being a staff member. He engaged her in casual conversation about what craft project she needed the sealant for, just to keep up the act of being a staff member. The girl was chattering on and on about her work, completely at ease with following him. The man grinned even as he reached into the pocket of his apron to flick open a small bottle and douse some cloth with the contents, all inside his pocket. This motion was hidden as the girl was still behind him. “We keep the sealant in a back room, it’s too dangerous to have lying around you know. Especially the aerosol type.” they were near the back of the store now, there was a door here for supplies and shipments. It led outside the store. The man knew that there were no shipments at this time of day, and that no real workers would be back here.

The girl was frowning a little. Seems she was catching on. Unavoidable, since she was probably old enough to have learned to be suspicious. But they were almost to the door. The man knew there wasn’t a camera back here. He moved a hand behind her, to her shoulders, and pushed her out the door he opened before stepping through it himself, grabbing onto the now struggling girl and covering her mouth with the cloth he’d just soaked with chloroform.

She screamed and thrashed, a lot stronger than he expected. But her attempts to scream only made her breath in more and while he nearly lost his hold on her as she gave him a violent back kick, he could feel her movements growing sluggish. The man cried out as the girl felt burning hot for a moment (was that fire?), but before he could do more than react in pain, the girl slumped over. The man winced and looked down at his hands. He had some light burns. Wasn’t sure how that happened. But the girl was unconscious and there were no cameras here.

He heaved her up over his shoulder and made his way to his car. It wasn’t like he hurt his targets. All he wanted with them were a few photos and then he’d deposit them back in the store to be found by their families. No harm, no foul. And there were people who paid good money for those photos. The man got his keys out to unlock his car.

At least, he tried to.

The man felt a strong grip on his neck. He coughed and had to crouch down and drop the kid to claw at his closing throat. He-he couldn’t breathe! But despite the pressure, his hands didn't feel anyone there. He clawed at the air and his eyes rolled up as the pounding sound of his own pulse began to throb through his skull.

Sebastian clenched his hand into a fist and crushed the monster’s neck even more. “Die, stupid, die…” He whispered. The man fell to the ground in the parking lot and Seb frantically ran towards the man’s car to get his sister. “Miz! Miz!” He worriedly examined her and sighed out in relief when he saw she was alright, just unconscious. “Oh, fuck, Miz…” He cradled the girl towards him and kicked the unconscious man in the balls. Too bad he was unconscious and couldn't feel anyone there. He clawed at the air and his eyes rolled up as the pounding sound of his own pulse began to throb through his skull.
JUST knocking him out, “I expect that asshole to rot in jail.” The worker was horrified and quickly called for the police. Seb sighed in relief. If he hadn't spotted Miz with his Sight and saw what happened…

He shuddered. Even if she was an all-powerful demon, she was vulnerable in this form. Dragon strength wouldn’t mean shit if she didn’t have leverage. “I’m sorry, I… I need to get back to my other kids.” Sebastian told the worker, who winced. “I think the police need your statement.” Sebastian held Miz closer. “Sorry, I NEED to get back to my other kids.” The worker looked sympathetic, finally nodding and letting Seb leave. He carried her back into the store and found Wanda who had put the twins into the shopping cart so they couldn't run off. Thank Ax! “Oh. Did Miz fall asleep?” Wanda asked. Seb gave a shaking smile. “Y-yeah…” Wanda frowned, easily picking up on his mood. “What happened?”

“Don’t let the twins leave the cart ok? I-I’ll tell you later.” Seb whispered, still holding Miz and not planning to let her go. Not until they were safely home. He was a little worried that she wasn't waking up though. Wanda frowned but didn't push it. They finished their shopping much faster now that the twins were in the cart. They grabbed basic color folders because they didn't know which color they needed to use for each subject, paint, some paintbrushes, adorable wheeled school bags and matching lunch boxes.

Miz was still unconscious.

The couple paid for their supplies and loaded their stuff into the car. Wanda frowned at the police cars but Seb hurried on. The twins were worried now as they watched their mom buckle Miz into the car. Easily picking up on their dad's distress, Zoe gently poked Miz's cheek. “Why isn't Miz waking up?” She asked. Seb sighed. “I'll tell you when we get home.”

“But why?” Zach pressed and Seb sighed. “Because it’s safer to talk there.” It was him who drove this time and everyone noticed Seb’s worry, he was really easy to read. The twins patted their sister’s hand softly. Wanda was worried now as she looked out the window. The police were carrying a man into their car. Another officer was holding up a bottle and a rag. Wanda’s worry got worse. What had happened?

The Pines returned home and Seb left Miz laying down on the couch as they unloaded their purchases. He didn’t want the twins knowing about this, but he would die if they ever found themselves in danger and he wasn’t there to save them. It was better to let them know.

Sir Bedazzle barked happily when he saw them arrive while Queen Flutter floated towards them to see who it was and went back to the couch to sleep. Seb sat the twins next to Wanda and he sat down next to Miz to explain what happened. “Ok, first of all...you know how there are bad people? People who hurt others.” The twins gasped and hugged their mom, scared. The blonde sighed heavily. She immediately understood what had happened and she was doing everything in her power to keep calm. “Sometimes, because the kids don’t know, they tell them they-they are friends of their parents, or offer them things just for them to come with them…” She added. If they were going to have this talk with the kids, she was going to make sure they understood.

“No…” Seb took a deep breath. “There are also bad people who hurt children, and take them away from their parents when they aren’t looking…”

The kids gasped and hugged their mom, scared. The blonde sighed heavily. She immediately understood what had happened and she was doing everything in her power to keep calm. “Sometimes, because the kids don’t know, they tell them they-they are friends of their parents, or offer them things just for them to come with them…” She added. If they were going to have this talk with the kids, she was going to make sure they understood.

“But why?” Zoe asked with a pout. “Because they are sick people.” Sebastian growled. “A bad man tried taking Miz away. He was going to hurt her…” The twins whimpered. “But you saved her…” Zoe said. Daddy MUST have saved her! Because Miz was here. Seb shuddered, “Because we noticed on time that she was not with us, kid. If you wander away from us, anyone could get close to you and try to hurt you and we don’t want that.”

“But I won’t let them! I will kick them and burn them and bite them really really hard! And I would never listen to them if I don’t know them!” Zoe growled. Despite their fear, the parents managed a small smile. “Good.”

“I can also bite them.” Zach nodded, determined. “And I won’t listen either.” Wanda hugged her little demons closer to her. She was so worried about what happened. It was supposed to be a safe place! She was so glad Seb managed to stop- Wanda froze. “What happened to the kidnapper?” She growled, making her husband growl as well. “The police took him. Don’t worry, I told a real staff member and he called the cops. If the police search that man’s car, they’d find all the evidence they needed to put him away.” Seb would have easily killed him but he was actually hoping that man would get punished. Besides, if, by some bullshit, that man got free, Seb was sure Miz would punish him for trying to kidnap her. He looked over at her and worried. Wanda was wide eyed when she realized, “How did someone knock Miz out?!?”

Sebastian hissed. “He drugged her.” Wanda gasped. She didn't realize demons could get drugged. She shivered and hugged her children close to her. Even with magic. There could be loopholes. A drug that merely knocked people unconscious wouldn't count as harming them lethally. And also, Miz wasn't included in the Deal for protection. She wasn't of Pines blood, nor was she married into the family. Wanda sighed. This wasn't good for her stress levels.

“I-I’ll take Miz to our room…” Seb said softly and gently picked her up. He carried her upstairs and laid down next to her. “Miz, you scared the fuck out of me…” He whispered as he closed his eye. “I know you would have been fine…But I was so scared…” Miz breathed softly. Out cold with a peaceful expression. Seb brushed her hair from her face. “I...didn't know you could get drugged. Shit. I wonder if you knew?” he sighed. “Well, this will be something new for me to get nightmares about…” he complained. “When will you wake up? Do drugs affect you like any other human when you’re in this form?” He laid down and stroked her hair.

Wanda and the twins, followed by Sir Bedazzle, entered the room. Wanda sighed as Zach and Zoe climbed into the bed to look at Miz. “She will be ok, right?” Zoe asked with a pout. Seb sighed. “She will be fine. I don't know how long this will last though.”

“We will stay here until she wakes up!” Zach declared and grabbed his dad’s pillow to curl up next to the unconscious demon. Zoe grabbed the second pillow and curled up. Five seconds passed before she looked up at her parents pleadingly. “Can you bring me my toys?” She asked with a pout. “And Bringles!” She smiled adorably.

Sebastian rolled his eye. “I’ll bring ya toys, but we had lunch only a few hours ago.” He almost threw it up today after watching the asshole trying to take HIS friend away, but that was not the point. Wanda and him went to the twin’s room to get them toys, their room was already stolen anyway, and Wanda grabbed his hand. Now that they were alone, the woman could stop pretending to be strong for their kids’ sake. “I-I’m sorry…” She felt horrible for this. Miz could have gotten hurt, it could have happened to the twins and she wouldn’t have known…

Seb grimaced when she let out a sob. “Wands...Don’t, really. If you cry I'm gonna start crying too.”

“I-I didn’t even re-realize she wasn’t there! Someone could have hu-hurt her!” Wanda cried out. Seb pulled her into a hug and sat both of them on Zoe’s bed. “No, it wasn’t your fault, ok? Miz would have killed that guy when she woke up...she would have been scared, but-”
“But she trusted us...she trusted me to be her mom and I couldn’t protect her.” Wanda sobbed, utterly failing to hold back her tears. “It wasn’t your fault...It’s ok, if anything, this was my fault, she was with me when I went to get the twins...please. Fuck, don’t cry...” Seb sniffled, really close to crying himself. No! No! Control your emotions! Control them I said!

They stayed in each other’s arms, breathing heavily and just calming down from the horrible sensation they were feeling. They were so scared. Miz had almost been kidnapped. It happened. But Miz was fine, they were fine. Everyone was fine...They had to go back to their room when they heard Zoe shouting, “My toooys!” They grabbed most of the stuffed toys Zoe had on her bed, which were a lot, and took them back to their bedroom where the twins were waiting.

Zach was playing with Miz's fingers while Zoe rolled around the bed. She perked up at the sight of her toys. Seb and Wanda watched in bemusement as Zoe arranged her dolls on top of Miz Mountain. Seb couldn't help but snort. Would Miz be annoyed if she woke up like that?

Wanda wanted to stay with Miz until she woke but she also wanted to get back to starting a case against those pedophile elementary school teachers. After this scare, she worried about the safety of both her children and others. She closed her eyes and breathed. “I have some work I need to do.” She said. She was determined now. She needed to get awful monsters like them behind bars where they wouldn't be able to hurt any children. She didn't know what the man who tried to kidnap Miz intended to do to her but she didn't care. She was going to go after people like him, men and women who would dare to harm children. She knew the law. She knew how to use it. She was going to find these monsters, find proof of their wrong doing and have them locked away for life.

She kissed her husband’s lips before leaving the room with determination shining in her green eyes. The twins watched their mommy go before continuing to build a toy pile over Miz. Seb stared dumbly at Wanda and sat down on the bed. “Wow...” he said, totally in love.

Bill felt his consciousness drift and flow before abruptly snapping back into place. His first thought was 'I was drugged!' followed by ‘Need to escape!’ which generally meant he retreated back into the Mindscape where he was safe. No one could hurt him there. It was HIS space. He was god there. A master of the mind.

Once he was in the Mindscape, some of his panic ebbed and he was able to see where he had been kidnapped to...wait. This was Seb's room? Bill looked around in confusion. Zach and Zoe gasped when they saw Miz's body disperse and turn into a faintly transparent triangle. They could see into the Mindscape, much like their father. “Miz!” Zoe cheered. Zach was staring wide eyed. A bright yellow triangle...

“What...?” Bill blinked before flicking through some images. “Oh...” Seb had saved him before anything bad happened. “Oh...” Bill's bricks dulled to a sickly pale color. He...he had...Bill shivered, his Sight having caught what that man's intention toward him, HER had been. His large eye watered and the triangle flung himself onto Zoe with a sob. The toddler gasped and hugged the crying triangle, feeling a little odd because she couldn't really feel him but also sorta COULD. Why was Miz-ah-Bill(?), crying?! Did he have a nightmare? Those made her cry. She looked at her equally worried brother and nodded. Zach understood the silent instruction and ran off to get Daddy or Mommy.

“Dad! Dad!” Zach cried frantically. Seb was chilling in the twin’s room (having gone to try and clean the house a bit before collapsing onto Zoe’s bed) reading a book. Zach threw himself over him. “Dad! Miz-Bill, woke up but he’s crying a lot!” Seb’s brown eye widened and he made his way to his room. He saw Zoe patting Bill’s back as his bricks flickered into a grayish yellow. The triangle had shrunk down to the size of one of Zoe's dolls, clinging to her and sobbing. Zach pulled on Seb's pants. “What do we do?”

Seb walked towards Zoe and sat down. “Bill? Bill, can I hold you?”

Bill, still crying, shook his frame. No, he was still scared, but he wanted Seb, which made it so frustrating! “Do you want Wanda?” He tried. The two had gotten really close in these few months they lived together. Bill sniffled and nodded. Seb got up to go get his wife. He found her snarling at her computer and typing out an email. “Wands, Mi-Bill woke up and he's crying.”

Wanda immediately looked up. “Oh. Is she, eh, he in triangle form?” she got up from her seat and headed to her bedroom. She saw Zoe...hugging empty air and trying to reassure the space between her arms. “Di-did Bill turn invisible?” She asked.

Seb looked between Wanda and the kids and he realized the problem. “Oh…” He walked towards Wanda. “You want to see Bill?”

“Yes, of course!”

“Do you trust me?” Seb asked asked and Wanda nodded. He gently sat her down. “Ok, don’t get mad.” He grabbed Wanda’s hand and with a little bit of concentration, damn he was rusty at this, pulled her out into the Mindscape. Wanda made a startled noise while her body slumped over on the bed. “What?” She looked down at her body and was going to panic but she heard quiet sobbing.

She looked over to see Bill crying in Zoe's arms. “M-Bill?” it had taken her a while to get used to the fact that when her daughter(son) was in a different form, they wished to be called by the name of that form. As for gender...that changed pretty often and it was lucky that Bill didn't mind if they got it wrong. The demon looked up from where he was pressed against Zoe and saw Wanda.

The woman let out an “Oof!” when Bill flew over to her and clung to her chest in a tight hug. “H-he was going to-he wa-was planning to…” he sobbed. Wanda ignored how she seemed to be floating and gently stroked Bill’s back frame. “I know, sweetie…I know. You're safe now. You're safe now.” Wanda closed her eyes and held back her own sobs.

Zoe stared at Bill clinging to the air and made a confused sound. Seb sighed. “He's talking to mommy, that's what I did when she fell back.”

“Why can’t we see?” Zach asked. “Because it’s a place called the Mindscape. I’ll teach you when you’re older.” Seb couldn't see or hear Wanda either. He couldn't see the Mindscape if he didn’t go there himself, the only reason he (and the twins) could see Bill was due to Bill being so powerful that anyone with enough magic could. Plus, Seb used to be Bill and his children inherited Bill's power, therefore they could see Bill. To put it another way, they were attuned to his energy signature.

“M-Mom…” Bill didn’t seem to get any better, but at least the sickly pale yellow was getting a little brighter now that Bill felt safe. “I know, I know, it’s ok, they can’t hurt you, I promise, we will make him pay.” Wanda said firmly. The Pines awaited anxiously, both Seb’s and Zoe’s leg were bouncing to release their stress. Eventually, Bill managed to calm down and he was reduced to occasional sniffles. He wiped his tearful eye with a little black limb and looked at Wanda. “I'm sorry I wandered off…I didn't think...anyone would…”
“No, baby, this was not your fault, I swear.” Wanda took one of his tiny hands and rubbed it with her thumb. “This wasn’t your fault at all.” Wanda assured him. Bill whimpered. “I shouldn't have let my guard down…” he knew there were bad humans out there. He knew this. He should have... He pressed himself close to Wanda, his new mom, it was still amazing to think that someone really wanted him as their kid, and tried his best to draw on the love and comfort she was giving him.

Wanda held Bill until his trembling stopped. But she also noticed his yellow color was beginning to turn red. “Sweetie? Are you alright?” She asked. Bill looked up at her “Can I kill him?” Wanda paused, she held one of Bill's tiny hands. “No, you cannot.” This wasn't the sort of mindset she wanted her children to grow up with. The fact that Bill asked for permission first was comforting, it meant he wouldn’t go off and just DO it.

“Then can I plague him with nightmares?” Bill asked instead. Wanda hesitated. The would-be kidnapper deserved to be punished. She heard from Sebastian that Bill was a dream demon who could grant dreams and nightmares. They were probably something Bill defaulted to. She still hesitated, not wanting to promote malicious retaliation, no matter how deserved. And even when Sebas seemed to promote it in certain situations...

“That man's thoughts as he manhandled me were ‘Her chest is soft’.” Bill hissed.

Wanda made a horrified sound. How could there be so many disgusting, sick people in the world?! “Ok…” Wanda agreed because frankly, the angry part of herself wanted some retribution. “--But-!” ...the rest of her wanted justice, that was Wanda’s entire life, and as much as she wanted that man to suffer… a mother was supposed to set a good example. “You cannot harm him or drive him insane. He still needs to be put behind bars.” Wanda grinned wickedly. “The other prisoners would deal with him then.”

“Parameters?” Bill asked. Wanda considered it. “He can't suffer if he's insane and if he's insane they might give him a lesser sentence. So you can’t break him.” Bill nodded. “Ok. I'll be right back.” He gave her a quick hug. “Thank you, mommy.” And then he flew off. Most likely in search of the man who had tried to take her. Him. Pronouns were hard.

“You're....welcome?” Wanda wasn’t sure if she’d made the right call. She might have let her own anger affect her judgement...

The three Pines watched Bill disappear. Seb frowned a second before his eye widened. He pulled himself out of his body, the twins winced when his body fell to the floor and Seb grinned at Wanda, who was staring ahead and didn’t even seem to realize she was out of her body yet, or rather, forgot about that in the time since. “Hey, love.” he grinned. “Enjoying the out of body experience?” Wanda looked at Seb, floating just in front of her and then she looked at their bodies. “What the fuck did you do?” She finally reacted to her current situation now that Bill was gone.

dimension. The Bill we fought years ago couldn’t create a body at all, he needed to come to the 3rd dimension through a portal and create it here.”

Wanda hummed in thought. “So you all have different powers despite being the same type of creature?”

Seb pouted. “I am not Bill.”

“Right. I’m sorry, baby. Your past self.” She corrected herself. Seb nodded. “The powers are...similar, but not exactly the same, and how we can use them is also different. Um, my past self couldn’t use his powers freely like Miz does because he, and our Bill, were trapped in the Nightmare Realm, which was the remains of the 2nd Dimension, and could only use them by making deals with people until he got to the 3rd dimension...hence now, as human, I literally can’t use my cool ass powers if it isn’t through a deal.” Aside from basic levitation and fire.

Wanda frowned but nodded. She kind of understood, but this was still a lot to get used to. Even if it had been years. “And I suppose pulling people's souls from their bodies is another one. Is...is this safe?”

“Oh course! I did it all summer back when I was taking care of Mabel and Dipper and nothing bad happened!” Seb grinned. “Dipper was even pulled out of his body by BadBill.”

“What?!” She cried. “It’s ok. Mabel saved him later.”

The blonde pouted. “I feel you three went through some things much more dangerous than you want to admit.”

Seb blew a raspberry. “It’s fine! I can even pull the kids here too!”

“Oh my god, leave my babies out of this!” Wanda was about to ask to go back to her body when Zoe and Zach stood up on the bed and started waving their arms. Seb cried startled when Zoe’s hand punched through him. “WE WANT TO SEE! COME BACK!” She ordered.

“Oh, this is another thing. You are basically a ghost while you are here. Can’t be seen, heard or touched.” Seb explained. Wanda nodded, already figuring that out. “Well I want to go back now. Do I just...fly in there or...” she tried to float down, not quite having the hang of it yet, and startled when Zoe's hands caught fire. “I WANNA SEE!” she whined.

Wanda flipped through the air, dodging the fire and squeaked in surprise when she landed in Seb's body by mistake.

“Oh boy...” Seb bit his finger. Should he? Or should he not?

‘Seb’ blinked his eye open and sat up “Zoe! What did we say about fire in the house?” He scolded before going still and slapping a hand to ‘his’ mouth. ‘Seb’ looked down at themselves and gasped. “Oh no.” Wanda groaned as she saw that she was now in her husband's body. She saw her own body stir and sit up. Her eyes faintly glowing yellow. “Fuck.” She said. Her body started laughing madly.

Seb, in Wanda's body, cackled. “This is HILARIOUS! I wonder if this is how Pinetree and Shooting Star felt when they switched bodies?” He was...a little weirded out but was mainly curious about being in a female body. He grinned like a maniac “Hey Wands! You don't have work today right? Wanna see how the other half lives?”

The twins shared a confused look and looked between their parents. What in the name of everything fun was going on here?!

“No.” Wanda growled. “I luckily don’t have work today, and we aren’t doing that. Give me back my body!”

Seb grinned. “Nope.” At his wife’s angry expression he quickly waved his, her(?), arms. “It's just for a while! I give you full permission to play with my body however you want. And you can tell me what I am and am not allowed to do.”

“I don’t get it!” Zoe whined. “Why are you talking so weird?! Stop it!” Her ‘mom’ grinned and crawled towards her. “You see, my precious baby, Mommy and Daddy are making an experiment!”

“No we aren’t! Don’t listen to your father! I’m not part of this…” Wanda said lamely (trying to hide her interest in the idea) and Zach looked up at ‘Seb’. “Are you...acting like each other? Why?”

‘Wanda’ grinned. “Well, mommy and daddy switched bodies. And so, we’re going to need you two to go back to your room for….say...a couple hours…”

“Hours?!” ‘Seb’ sputtered. Wanda blushed as all sorts of ideas were going through her head. She shook her head. Nope. She had to be the responsible one here!

Zoe pouted angrily but her twin and her agreed to leave the room. She was confused and didn’t like to see Mommy acting like Daddy...or Dad in mom’s body! She hoped they stopped being so weird by dinner. She wanted her meal to be a decent one! The twins left and closed the door behind them. Then Sebastian turned to look at Wanda with a huge grin. This was too good to be true! “They’re gone~ what do you want to do?”

Wanda threw a pillow at him (at her body) and it smacked her in the face. Seb giggled. “You can’t lie to my face, your face haha!, and tell me you aren’t curious about this thing! Like...you can pee standing up!”

“Ew. I wouldn’t change bodies just to look at myself pee.” She grimaced and absentmindedly looked down at Seb’s lower body. She shuddered. That would be weird. She noticed Seb getting up and stripping his, HER, clothes off. “Wait! What are you doing?!?” Wanda cried as she blushed. Was he really going to do it right here and now? In HER body?!

“I’m going to try on your dresses!” Seb squealed. “I’ve always wanted to! They look so pretty!”

Wanda stared at him before face palming. Right. Her husband was a pure cinnamon roll. He ran towards her wardrobe and grabbed around 6 dresses and went to the bathroom. Wanda sat down on the bed, spreading her legs a little because it was really uncomfortable to try not to think about the change when she could clearly feel it, and grumbled in annoyance. She tugged at the shirt’s collar neck and groaned louder. “Sebastian! I don’t really want to stay like this for hours!” She warned. “Can we please change back now?”

Seb didn’t reply and took a few more minutes to try on the first dress. “Look!” He finally announced. “You should keep your hair like this with this dress, it looks awesome!” He came out of the bathroom and smiled at his wife. She rolled her eyes but had to admit she looked pretty good. Why was her husband so much better at this than she was?

“That's great, Seb. Can we switch back now?” She sighed. Seb pouted at her. Wow, is that really what she looked like when her lips did that? “But you’ve got so many nice dresses~” he whined as he gave her some puppy dog eyes. This looked super weird. She rolled her eye. Right. Only one eye now. That was a strange feeling.

“Yay!” Seb cheered and went back to the bathroom. Wanda waited until he was inside again and she carefully lifted his eyepatch. Using a mirror, she sighed sadly at the hurt socket. Her poor baby. It had been years and yet it still looked painful. She glanced at the bathroom’s door and slowly started unbuttoning her shirt. She was blushing, which was weird because they had done this lots of times before and it was usually Seb blushing....maybe his body was affecting her. She glanced at his naked chest and grinned, making a serious, masculine face. “Look, I am a guy and I walk around shirtless…” She whispered.

She started posing and making faces in the mirror. Damn, she almost swooned when she gave herself a charming, flirty wink. Too bad Seb was too shy to give her these sexy expressions. (Unless he's drunk). She continued making sultry faces at herself with her husband's face and blushed harder. He really was the most handsome.

“What are you doing?” Wanda jumped at the sudden voice and out of instinct covered her chest. Seb was wearing another dress, a dark purple one this time and had her hair in a few curls.

“Uh...admiring you?” She grinned sheepishly and Seb cackled. “Yeah, I can see that…” Wanda blushed and coughed. “Yes, well, you did say I could do what I want with your body...within reason.” She had her hands over her, his, chest and couldn't help but feel up his pectorals while she was at it. Ooh.

Seb noticed what she was doing and blushed a bit, but decided he could have fun with this. He crossed his arms over his chest, just under Wanda’s breasts and lifted them up a little bit. “I love when I see you doing this…” He teased.

“Sebastian!” Wanda cried and her hands fell to her sides. He laughed and bounced her breasts “This feels so weird.” He giggled. Wanda rolled her eyes. “Well, nice to see you’re having fun.”

Seb laughed and pulled Wanda down for a kiss. Fuck weird kisses. He felt his body go tense but it soon relaxed and his wife put her hands on his now wide hips. Seb put his arms on her shoulders and pulled on his curly hair. Revenge! Wanda laughed, huffing warm breaths against him. “This is so weird.”

Seb gasped and felt Wanda’s lips against his. It was weird. “You like weird, you wouldn’t like me if you didn’t.” He argued and Wanda grinned. She picked him up like he sometimes did (marvelling at how easily she was able to lift him, herself?) and kissed him again. He stumbled back and she fell to the bed with Sebastian over her.

The two kissed in earnest. Holding each other close and enjoying each other's company. Wanda's hands began to wander over Seb's, her own, body. Which was weird but she was ‘enjoying’ herself. The body she was in certainly enjoyed what they were doing...

“-o I plagued him with images of black eyed children tearing his skin off in strips and eating them, so hopefully this means he will never be able to look at children again…” Bill swept back into the room and paused. He turned bright orange and flew out of the room, screaming. He really had to come in at this precise moment! Ugh! Humans always in heat! He went to hide with the twins. If it weren't his mom and Seb, he might have stayed to watch- but nope, nope, nope!
Seb moaned slightly as the body he was ‘possessing’ was also enjoying this but he wasn’t sure he wanted to do that. “Wa-Wanda…” He breathed out. Wanda made a sound and her hands travelled down to his thighs. Were they really doing this?

“I-I ...stop…” Wanda opened her eyes. “I-I am not sure we should take this THIS far…” Seb made a pout. The blonde seemed to realize getting horny while looking like this wasn’t probably the best. She sat up and Seb looked up at his own face. “Are you upset?”

Seb leaned against Wanda’s chest. “It doesn’t mean we can’t do more fun stuff! How about going out? Somewhere where we can dress up with nice clothes and not carry a unicorn bag full of t-shirts, water and snacks for the twins.”

Wanda thought about it. “And after that, we can change back?” Seb smiled. “Yeah! Deal?”

Wanda made a ‘whoosh’ sound and extended her right hand (wow it had 6 fingers!) and grinned like Seb did when making a deal. “Imagine there’s magic fire there.” She said.

Seb laughed loudly and shook her offered hand. “Alright! Let’s get ready! I’m wearing this dress, so move. I’m going to take a shower.” He declared as he stood up.

“What? In my body?!” Wanda whined. Seb rolled his two eyes. Awesome. “I don’t give a fuck. And no one is stopping you from doing the same...you don’t have to if you don’t want to but it’s sad you want people to see ‘you’ going out with me looking like a hobo.” He huffed in mock anger.

“Alright, fine!” Wanda huffed, and blushed a little bit...

They took a while getting ready. Wanda couldn’t believe how exciting this was for her husband. Wanda usually got ready fast. It was Seb who took a lot of time. Now, he was taking even more. “I want you to look prettier than you already are!” He claimed.

Wanda, much to Seb’s annoyance, refused to put any makeup on him this time, shaved his growing beard and chose a tie to wear with a beautiful dark blue suit, a yellow tie, but a TIE! Not a bowtie! She wanted to see him wearing a tie for a change. She examined her man’s body in the mirror. Damn so hot, and the little gray hairs made him look so mature and sexy...

“Seb? Should I call the nanny? I am not sure when Miz will be back!” She tried coming into the bathroom and Seb slammed the door shut. “DON’T SEE!” Wanda rolled her eyes. “Yes, tell the twins.” Her voice ordered her from the bathroom.

She walked towards the kid’s room and wondered if she should act like Seb. Zoe seemed particularly distressed at their change… “Um, kids?” She called and knocked on the door.

Miz opened the door. “Oh, Miz! Thank God you’re back!” Wanda smiled, glad to see her daughter, once again in her girl form. Miz blushed hard. “Ah...y-yeah…” she saw how ‘Seb’ was dressed up. “Oh. A-are you and mommy going out?”

“Yes. I'm glad you're home. Are you alright?” Wanda knelt down to check on her daughter. Miz was still blushing but she nodded. “I feel better after I traumatized him for life.” She couldn't really look at Seb right now. Why had they started doing..that? Was it from relief that she was saved before anything happened? She did hear once that people who've been through stressful situations tended to...celebrate afterward…
That must have been it.

‘Seb’ pet her head. “We're going to be more careful from now on. Alright? I...I won't let anyone hurt you again.”

Miz smiled sadly. She knew there was no way she could be kept from harm but she appreciated how Seb and Wanda still tried. “Okay Seb.” She hugged him. “Have fun on your date with mommy.”

Wanda smiled wryly. Right. She was Seb right now. Oh. Did Miz feel like this when she changed forms? But since her changes were her own other forms and not someone else’s body, she might have an easier time with it. Something to consider…

“Well, can you watch the twins while we're out?” Wanda asked. She knew Miz WOULD, but it was only polite to ask instead of just assuming. Miz nodded. “Go have fun. You two haven't had a proper date in months.”

“How did you know—oh, right. Magic.” Wanda sighed. Having a child with All Seeing powers was odd. Especially since they didn't seem to work unless she was paying attention...which...Wanda sadly thought Miz was going to do from now on out of paranoia. This incident ruined her feelings of safety. Just because she was around humans and not aliens didn't make her safe.

The twins walked to the door and looked at their Dad, hoping it was their Dad again. “Why are you dressed up like that? Where are you going?” Zach asked.

Zoe sighed in relief. They were back to normal. “Can we go?! Are you going to McDonalds?!” Zoe asked, her eyes widening.

Miz hugged the children. “Nope. They're going on a date. Which means we get the house ALL to ourselves…” she whispered. “…which means we can eat whatever we want and watch all the movies they say we can't.”

The twins grinned evilly. “And we can order pizza?!” Zach whispered loudly. “No, of course not…” Miz shook her head. “Yes we are.” She whispered to them.

Wanda rolled her eye. Miz spoiled them too much. “I’m ready!” Wanda turned around at the sound of her own voice and gaped big. It wasn’t fair Seb got her to look like this and she couldn’t wear it! The cleavage was a bit too much for her liking but she couldn’t help but admit she looked beautiful.

“Daddy is so shocked he can’t speak!” Zach giggled. Sebastian laughed. He had been shocked to see Wanda dressed up like this indeed. She didn’t do this much. She was beautiful, but sometimes she didn’t believe it.

“You’re shoes are huge.” Zoe crouched and pointed at her ‘mommy’’s heels. Wanda hated these high heels. She said they were too tall. Seb was going to prove to her that she was overreacting. “I haven’t worn this in forever!” Seb smiled. “What do you think, Miz?”

“Your shoes are huge.” Zoe crouched and pointed at her ‘mommy’’s heels. Wanda hated these high heels. She said they were too tall. Seb was going to prove to her that she was overreacting. “I haven’t worn this in forever!” Seb smiled. “What do you think, Miz?”

Miz rubbed her cheek, embarrassed. Wanda looked beautiful, but she didn’t want to see her doing...that with Seb. “You look pretty, mom.” she admitted with a blush. “Hey, how late are you guys staying out?”
“I don’t know.” Wanda said after coming out of her shock. “Maybe...I am?”

“Wow, that’s late.” Zach grimaced. “You will be tired.”

“Right. We should order a taxi.” Seb nodded with a smile. Driving didn’t seem like a good idea. Maybe they could have wine! “Thanks for reminding us, kid-baby!” He corrected himself. Miz nodded. “Don’t worry. I’ll have the twins in bed before then.” They whined. “None of that. Sleep is important.” Miz huffed.

Seb cooed when Wanda kissed the kids and Miz on their foreheads. “Good night!”

“Alright, alright.” Seb gently pushed her away. It has been a few hours since he had gotten boobs but he didn’t like the feeling of getting them touched.

Only Wanda was allowed to do that...

Seb called a taxi while the twins and Miz waved at them as they left. “Mom was acting a bit weird…” Miz hummed and looked at the blond toddlers to see what they thought.

Zoe shrugged. “Mom and dad were acting weird. They said they were acting like the other.”

“And that they sw-sw-swoched their bodies? What does that mean?” Zach asked innocently.

Miz paled. Seb and Wanda had switched bodies?! And they were about to have sex as the other before she ran away?! AAAAHH!!! She immediately rushed them all back into the house and said “HEY WHAT DO YOU GUYS WANT FOR DINNER?!”

“Pizza!” “Ice cream!” The twins said at the same time. They looked at each other. “Pizza ice cream? Ice cream pizza?”

Miz grinned too wide to be normal “I can DO YOU one better! You're not allergic to nuts right?” The twins shook their heads. “Great! Have you heard of nutella pizza? With strawberries and ice cream on top?”

The twins never realized something so magical existed. Miz set to work materializing everything she needed for this. Chocolate~

She was gonna get SO high off chocolate tonight!

Wanda had underestimated how much of a light head Seb was. Their dinner had gone splendid, she had played her part of gentleman and Seb made her laugh and be utterly surprised at how elegant ‘she’ held ‘herself’. It wasn't until they started drinking that problems arose. Wanda felt tipsy with half her cup, and when she was finished, she started feeling dizzy and everything felt funny. Seb, not used to not fainting after a cup, didn’t drink responsibly and had a few more drinks before they took effect on him.
“I love you!!” Seb clung to Wanda who was giggling. “I love eaattinngg!!” Seb added as he tried to finish ‘her’ desert.

They were conscious enough to call their taxi though and Seb nuzzled Wanda on their way back. “You wuuun’ give me yer jacket? I g-give you my jacket every time.” Seb complained.

The driver frowned, a bit confused.

Wanda took off her jacket and wrapped it around Seb’s shoulders. “There!” She exclaimed proudly at her good deed.

“My ssshtupid feet hurt.” Seb scowled drunkily.

“I toollldd youuu!!” Wanda laughed loudly.

They got home giggling madly, and the first thing Seb did was kick the shoes to the grass. “Die in hell!!” He screamed. “Ssshhh!! Shut up!!” Wanda laughed. Seb looked into the jacket he was wearing, temporarily Wanda’s, and searched for the keys. He whined as he tried and failed to put the key on the keyhole. “Aaahh! I wanna get in! I wanna see my babiiess!! DOOR! OPEN!” He demanded.

Wanda tried the door but since there were three door knobs for some reason, she couldn't figure it out either. Seb was sobbing as he thumped the door. “We...we can't go HOME!??” He wailed. Wanda shushed him and hugged her now shorter husband...wife? She was so confused right now. Hugged him to her chest. “Ish ok...I'm...ssshure Mish will let ussh in…”

To both their relief, a small light turned on from inside and the door opened to show Miz yawning and rubbing at her eyes. “I can't be-believe you two got too drunk to open a door.” She yawned. “How did you even make it home?”

“Miz!” Sebastian cheered and toppled over to hug her. “You're...the besssshh!!” Miz smiled wryly. “Yes I am. Now get in here.” She got the two inside and levitated them upstairs. “Are you coherent enough to switch back or change clothes?” She asked.

“Ppphhhfitt!!!” Seb moved his hand. “We-We are perfectly capable of changing!” He growled at Miz. The demon laughed, because seeing Wanda's face do that expression was hilarious. “Alright, whatever you want...just shut up.” She yawned again and went back to the twins room. It took her half an hours worth of bribing to get them to sleep. She wasn’t risking that with their loud-ass parents. Maybe she’ll block sound from the twins’ room to sleep in peace. Her bed was on a shelf formed out of the wall with a ladder, like a bunk bed.

“Bye, baby!” Wanda waved happily and they watched Miz go back. Seb looked down at his, Wanda’s feet. “Carry me!”

Wanda rolled her eyes. “I'll probably drop you.” She did hug Seb and the two stumbled their way to the bedroom. They took off their clothes somewhat clumsily, Wanda fumbling with the tie and just managing to loosen it enough to skip over her head. Seb was naked aside from Wanda's panties. He ripped her bra off and heaved in relief.

Wanda, already flushed from the alcohol, squealed. “Seb! Put on some clothes!” She pulled off the shirt, barely managing to get the buttons enough to just slip it off. After kicking off the pants, she was also just in Seb's underwear. Seb grinned, not wanting to sleep yet.

"Hey~ I've got a super weird idea~" Seb purred at Wanda. "Weeee should try it out like-like this!! It'd be sooooo weirddd!!" He laughed, pressing his currently curvy body against his own borrowed one. The situation was so unique and weird it called to him, it drove him mad and he needed it!

Wanda recognized that this was a unique chance...and for once it was Seb asking for it. Maybe they didn't have to do it fully (because she wasn't sure how to use this body), but there were other ways to have fun without going full way-

She grinned and pressed her lips against his as she easily picked up his borrowed body and sat it on her lap. "Well~ If you insist…" She whispered.

Wanda laughed at his pouting, red face and Seb curled up against her with a content, sleepy sigh. The day had been scary at first, but Miz was safe and this body swap and night fun totally helped to ease his nerves. It was actually lots of fun. He could see how he would like to try this again some other time. Just to spice things up in the bedroom. That was his half alcoholized mind talking though. He would die of embarrassment before even suggesting it while sober, even if he knew Wanda enjoyed herself as well.

He felt Wanda cleaning the both of them off with the cover sheet. She carefully wiped the ‘results of their fun’ off them and he twitched when the cloth rubbed against the sensitive areas. Wanda sighed and declared the cleaning done. She threw it to the floor, wrinkling her nose. They would need to do the laundry tomorrow. Her still drunk mind thought that there was something she was forgetting but couldn’t really concentrate on that right now. She was so sleepy. Wanda yawned and pulled the covers over herself and cuddled up to her husband, who was already half asleep.

This had been a nice evening. She and Seb hadn’t really done it as much since the kids came. Kinda hard to have their romp in the sheets when the children could run in at any time. At least now, if the twins woke up in the middle of the night, Miz would be there to help out. Ah...they also hadn’t been able to do it because Miz liked to crawl into bed with them...Wanda shook her head. Well, it was a good thing she had her own bed in the twin’s room now.

“I luv you, Wanda…” Seb muttered before falling asleep, pressing his large naked chest against her. The woman smiled and closed her eye. Urgh. The eyepatch was itchy. She didn’t want to sleep with …it...

Eyepatch.

She looked down at herself. She didn’t have her breasts. She had a dick. Body swapping! It suddenly hit her that this was what she had been forgetting. “Seb...Seb...we gotta turn back…” She shook the sleepy ‘woman’ gently. “Let me sleep…!” He whined.

“N-No! Fuck you! Changee uss baaaack!” Wanda whined. Seb sleepily extended a hand. Ok. He would try to do this sleeping. He was so comfortable! He grabbed Wanda’s hand and ‘pulled’, but nothing happened.

He opened his eyes and tried again. Oh no. Wanda grimaced at his panicked expression.

“Ah...I can’t use my powers...since...” he began sweating “...YOU have my powers?” Of course that didn’t work like that, but Seb was too drunk to remember. He was too drunk to realize that he was simply too drunk to concentrate on USING his powers.

“No, no, are you kidding me?!” Wanda panicked. Seb hugged his wife. “Shhh....shuu...it’s ok...M-Miz can switch us back tomorrow...” He assured her.

Wanda groaned and buried her face into the pillow. She didn’t want Miz knowing what happened (not remembering right now that her adopted daughter already knew.) Seb once again snuggled against her and stroked her arms. “Shh...Sleep...Lullabee, lullabee...Honey bees in the tree...” He sang sleepily before falling asleep. Wanda frowned but her exhaustion and drunkenness didn’t let her stay awake much longer.

It was unnecessary to say the two woke up screaming after seeing each other’s faces. It took them a little to remember what happened, the evidence was clear on the floor, and they blushed in embarrassment. Damn alcohol...

Luckily, they no longer had to take the kids to preschool, Miz easily teaching the kids how to read and do basic math. In fact, Wanda was sure her kids were going to be way ahead of the other students once Kindergarten started. Still, even if they didn’t have to worry about the twins for now, Wanda still had a job to go to. She and Seb scrambled out of bed and quickly took a shower together, not even having time to enjoy each other’s company among the hot spray of water. Wanda and Seb quickly got dressed, couldn’t show up in front of Miz naked after all. The shower also helped to get the smell of what they had done last night off themselves.

It was only when they were fully dressed did Seb slap a hand to his forehead. “Wait!” Wanda paused. “What is it? I’m going to be late to the office!” Seb grinned sheepishly and looked away. “I just remembered how to change us back...”

Wanda sure hoped the children couldn’t hear the words she responded to that statement with. Responded loudly with. For two solid minutes. “Do you even know how fucking worried I was?!” Wanda pulled at her (Seb’s) hair.

“You can’t totally blame me completely! I was drunk! I couldn’t think! I actually thought you had my powers!” He responded. “Just change me back already.” Wanda grumbled, annoyed. Seb gave her a tentative kiss on her lips before offering a hand. Now sober, he could concentrate on pulling Wanda out of his body and he pulled himself out of hers.

They floated back to their respective bodies and Wanda took a deep breath before touching her chest. Yes! She was her again!! Seb looked at his hands and grinned. “You see? Harmless.” Wanda flicked his nose before kissing it. “You’re lucky you’re so handsome.” she grumbled. Seb laughed sheepishly. There was a knock on their bedroom door.

“Are you two done? I made breakfast?” Miz’s voice was slightly muffled by the wood but Seb grinned. “I fucking LOVE YOU Miz!” Wanda grinned as well. Thank god for Miz. She and Seb opened the door and the one eyed man knelt to pick up Miz in a hug. She squeaked before laughing as Seb swung her around. “I take it you two had a nice night?” She asked when Seb put her back on the ground. “Yeah. It was great to have some alone time together.” Seb laughed. The three of them headed downstairs.

It was still pretty early so the twins were asleep. They’d stayed up waaay too late the night before and were too exhausted to get up. Wanda entered the kitchen to see that Miz had made scrambled eggs with ground beef, cheese and broccoli, toast and apple juice. Wanda sighed and gratefully sat down. “What would we do without you, Miz? Thank you.” She began eating. Miz blushed and had a sweet smile. “Y-you’re welcome mommy!” It felt so great to know she was helpful. That she could take care of them, give them whatever they wanted. That she was allowed to. Gray had always been dismissive of her attempts to ‘help’ with the family finances, and Orange had seemed confused whenever s/he tried to do chores around the house (since that was Orange’s job).

Seb was going to eat as well but suddenly realized his bladder was full. “Ah!” He rushed to the ground floor bathroom. Wanda blinked at him. Oh right. They hadn’t gone to the bathroom yet today...wait. Why wasn’t HER bladder full? Unless…

Miz spat the apple juice she was just about to drink and Seb returned with a scowl, drying his hands on the towel. He tossed the towel lightly at Wanda. “Excuse me?! What do you think I am?! Some animal?! I went to the bathroom like any human would, on the toilet, and I can’t believe you almost made me pee my pants right now just because you didn’t want to pee standing up!”

Wanda frowned. Seb DID take a lot of time in the bathroom after she had already dressed. She noticed he did her make up for her and thought it was merely that. She blushed. She had been too embarrassed to pee like a man.

“I’m sorry…” She looked down. “I shouldn’t have jumped to conclusions. That was very unprofessional of my part.” The blonde pouted.

Seb huffed and grabbed a toast from the table. “Miz. Tell Wanda I ain’t talking to her for not trusting me.”

Miz blinked, wiping her face of apple juice. “Ok.” She glanced at Wanda. “Mommy, Seb says he’s not talking to you because you didn’t trust him.”

“Come on, Sebastian! I was just making sure…” She apologized. The man took a bite of his toast and sipped his juice. “Miz, tell Seb I am sorry!” She didn’t want to leave for work with Seb angry at her for such a silly thing.

Miz mumbled through a bite of her eggs, “Seb, mommy says she’s sorry.”

“Then tell her I don’t give a fuck.” Seb pouted.

“You are literally right there! Talk to each other!” Miz whined. She just wanted to eat her breakfast.

“Well then, tell Sebastian that if he’s too petty to accept an apology then he doesn’t get one.” Wanda grumbled as she stabbed her eggs. Seb scoffed. “Well, tell Wanda that if she gives up on apologising so easily then she’s obviously not sorry at all!”

Wanda was going to retort but she and Seb both froze when they heard Miz let out a soft whine of distress. They turned to the girl whose lip was trembling, a sad look on her face. Seb immediately went to her “No, no, don’t cry. It’s ok. We’re not mad!” Wanda got out of her chair to hug Miz. “Shh, shh, we’re not fighting. We’re just dumb.” She and Seb didn’t mean to upset her. Miz sniffled. “You’re not fighting?” She looked up at them with watery eyes. Seb shook his head. “We’re not fighting.” Wanda brushed her hair. “Yeah. We’re just being dumb.”

The girl sniffled but it didn’t seem like she was going to cry so Seb and Wanda heaved a sigh of relief. Wanda looked at Seb “I’m sorry I assumed that of you.” She said. Seb sighed. “Yeah, don’t worry. I accept your apology.” Miz hugged them both. “...my human parents fought all the time.” she mumbled. “Please don’t…”
Seb winced, thinking back to Filbrick. Wanda bit her lip. “We won’t. We’re sorry. Don’t worry, we weren’t actually mad at each other.” The two adults hugged the demon and after one more reassurance that they weren’t angry (Wanda even held Seb’s face gently and kissed his lips to show Miz proof) they continued having breakfast. Wanda was a few hours late for work, in her panic of waking up and not remembering why she was in Seb’s body though, she plugged in her dead phone and was spammed with hundreds of messages from work. There was one that only said ‘What was with those files you sent?! You’re opening a case on these elementary school teachers?’

Wanda groaned. Miz looked over. “I can teleport you and the car to work?”

Wanda shuddered but looked at the hour. She gulped down her apple juice, swallowed the rest of her scrambled eggs and looked at Miz. “Am redeh!” She said as she had the food in her mouth. Miz nodded and flick cleaned their dishes. Wanda kissed Seb goodbye, and Miz followed her outside, sticking close with her fist gripping the woman's shirt. Wanda noticed and saw the way Miz was looking around herself, checking that no one else was nearby.

She felt sad at that. Miz didn't feel safe anymore. Wanda's heart panged with the pain of knowing she had let the girl down. She was her mother now. She should have kept Miz safe.

They got to the car and Miz buckled herself into the passenger seat. Wanda wondered if she should start the car or…

Miz's eyes were flickering through multiple images. She tilted her head. “Sit back and hold on.” She said before Blinking them and the car to their destination. Of course, she had a perception filter over Seb's house. Small things like fires will still be noticed but Wanda's car suddenly vanishing? Nope.

Wanda squeaked. The feeling of teleportation never failed to make her feel dizzy. She gasped when the car thumped lightly onto the ground. Magic was...amazing sometimes. She could see her office outside. “Thank you, Miz.” She smiled (even if she was a little uncomfortable at the idea of magic being used so publically, she didn’t want to discourage Miz from wanting to help). Miz seemed to glow at the gratitude. She always looked so happy when they thanked her for something she did. (And that made Wanda wonder about her home life back in the other dimension. It left her feeling rather unsettled at how much Miz craved positive attention.) Wanda got out of the car and noted that Miz even dropped them into a proper parking spot.

She heard the passenger door open and shut as Miz pattered over to cling to her side again. “Miz?” Wanda looked down at the girl before smiling. “Do you want to come to work with me today?” she had brought the twins in before, when they were younger. Her coworkers had all squealed over how cute the twins were. Unfortunately, they weren't well behaved enough to come over often. Too much like Seb she was afraid...

Miz nodded, hugging her side. Wanda brushed her hair fondly. “Alright. I think I have some paper and pencils so you can draw while I work.”

“Ok…” Miz always wanted to see Wanda work. She saw Seb drawing and designing his stuff, cursing at his manager too, their relationship reminded her of Jan-Jan and his own manager, but she had never seen her mom in action and kicking ass. It sounded fun.

The two of them entered the building and Wanda waved at the kind receptionist before walking with Miz towards her office. “What is your specialty?” The girl asked, hand firmly holding onto Wanda’s. People turned to look at them and it made her really nervous. “Criminal law, I have a PhD in that actually.” She smiled proudly. “But I took a few years in Spain to study international law. It was a nice experience.” Miz nodded in awe. That was so cool. “And everyone here is a criminal lawyer too?”

“Nope. We are specialized in different things. Here you will find the best lawyers...starting with me, of course.” She joked and Miz laughed. “I see why you are married to Seb…”

A man with a cup of coffee in one hand and a binder under his other arm smiled at Wanda. “Hey Wands~!” He smiled. “Let me say you look wonderful...new...makeup style?” He tried awkwardly. Miz frowned and hugged the blond’s arm. Was he trying to flirt with her mom?! She was married and had kids!

“Yes, actually, Oliver, my husband did it for me today.” From inside her body, but no one needed to know about their crazy weekend. Oliver chuckled awkwardly. “Oh, yes...your husband...Haha, Steven?”

“Sebastian.” Miz growled. The man finally looked down and saw the asian girl clinging to his work partner. “Hey, and who are you?” He asked gently.

“Oliver, this is Miz, our daughter, we adopted her a few weeks ago.” Wanda presented Miz, who wouldn’t let go of her. Still, Miz gave the man a polite nod. Oliver blinked. Adopted...“Oh. That's...nice.” He said lamely, unsure what to say to that. Miz pouted at him. “Can I see your office, mommy?” she tugged at Wanda's hand.

“Of course, sweetie.” Wanda made a note to text Seb and tell him Miz was staying with her today. They got to her office and Wanda sighed. Miz frowned at the door. “Was he...?”

“Yes.” Wanda groaned.

“Isn't he married?” Miz had seen the ring on his finger. Wanda rubbed her face. “They're separated.” Miz continued to frown. “But you're happily married…”

“And I am happily married.” Wanda agreed. “At first I thought he was just being polite, but then he started...I don’t know, talking more to me? He hasn’t actually tried anything, if he did, I would have told him to fuck off.”

Miz mumbled about biting off fingers. Wanda sighed. Miz really was a demon. “You can't bite off his fingers. Humans don't do that sort of thing.” Miz pouted. “Sure they can. Humans have a bite force strong enough to crush bone. They just don't have teeth that can handle it.” She informed her. “That’s why Seb and probably the twins can actually do it.” Seb had sharp teeth, the kids had little sharp teeth, just like she had in her Bill form. Miz had little fangs as well but they weren't as pronounced.

Wanda sighed and pulled her laptop out. “Anyway, just don’t bite him, please. I don’t need him suing me.”

“I make no promises.” Miz said sweetly.

“It is not a promise, it’s a mom order, you can’t disobey.” Wanda’s words were firm. Miz whined. Mom orders were unfair. Wanda snickered. Miz pouted. If the multiverse could see her now, the great demon brought down by a mom order. “Well if he tries to touch you, I get to kick him in the shins.”

“Alright.” Wanda agreed distractedly. Miz sat down on a swivel chair and spun around lazily. “Have you told Seb?”

“Do you want him to kill Oliver?” Wanda snorted, remembering how Sebastian beat up one of her old co-workers at the old firm she used to work at for harassing her while she was pregnant. “I can handle myself. I’m a grown woman.” Speaking of Seb, she texted him and told him Miz was staying with her. “In that drawer over there I have papers I don’t need and pens. You can grab them if you want to draw.”

Miz squealed childishly and grabbed the offered stuff to use. She immediately set off doodling characters. Been a while since she just...doodled. Having to work on a real manuscript for a book was different and more stressful.

Wanda looked at Miz and smiled. How could such a cute girl actually be an All Knowing demon? It was difficult to believe. She opened her files, deciding to work on her client’s case (she was glad it was just here in Oregon and she wouldn’t have to travel to another state), before continuing with the teachers. Ugh. Disgusting monsters…

Miz kicked her legs and hummed to herself as she drew. She glanced up after a bit. “For Rachel Smith, check on a case filed in 1983 for an incident of harassment.” She commented before going back to her drawing of a fairy. Wanda blinked and did a quick Google search. She found the relevant article and grinned viciously. This could be used as evidence against the teacher. She wouldn’t allow a disgusting woman like that to run free, perving on children.

“Thank you, sweetheart!” Wanda ruffled her dark hair and Miz blushed a bit. “You—you’re welcome...I can help more…” She put her drawing aside and went to sit on the woman’s lap so both could look at the computer. Miz searched deeply into the horrible teacher’s past, told Wanda what to look for and where. She dutifully located the right information, filed it and started writing the cases.

They worked as a team for hours, laughing in glee at the information that will definitely put the perverts and pedos behind bars! Wanda kissed her forehead.

Eventually, some co-workers heard Wanda brought one of her daughters. They didn’t know Zach was a boy and thought the skillful lawyer still had twin girls. They knocked on the door. “Wanda?”

“Come in!”

The women entered excitedly but instead of the blond babies they saw last time, Wanda was holding a black-haired girl. “Good afternoon. What is it?”

“We wanted to see your daughter!” One of them said. Wanda grinned. “This is Miz. Sebastian and I adopted her a few weeks ago.” she said proudly. Miz gave the women a shy smile. “Hi-hello.” she nuzzled back into Wanda’s chest, somewhat timid. Wanda hid a frown at that. Oh. She was getting worried now, about how scared Miz seemed to be. She was being very clingy. The other women didn’t notice, having no experience with Miz and how outgoing she normally was.

They all squealed. So cute~

“Hello dear. Miz was it?” One of the women knelt down to smile at the girl. “How old are you, sweetie?”

Miz hesitated. Well, technically this body was supposed to be 27 since it was based on her real body back when she was human, but it didn’t look 27 (and she’d been sort of making herself appear even younger just so she could be properly pampered)...plus it would be weird for her to behave the way she did if she really was...

“She’s turning 13 in October.” Wanda responded. She and Seb had debated on what age to put on her papers and settled on 12. When they asked Miz when she wanted her birthday to be she had said “HALLOWEEN!” which made Seb snort with laughter. And of course he wrote down 31st.

“Aaww. Well, I am Mary.” The woman introduced herself. “How are you feeling living with Wanda and her family? They are excellent people!”

Miz brightened up. “I love them. I love my little brother and sister and Seb and mommy.” The women all noted that she didn't refer to Sebastian as her father. They gave Wanda a look and the woman shrugged. They accepted that. Some children weren't ready to accept certain terms yet. Especially if the child was adopted and might still have lingering feelings for her original parents. And then they noticed the other part of the sentence.

“Brother?” Mary asked. The other woman looked confused as well. Wanda sighed. She liked to keep the office professional, she didn’t like to overshare like her partners. She guessed it was her fault for not updating things about her kids. “Zully is Zachary now. He is a boy.”

“O-Oh…” Of course they had heard about cases like that...but wasn’t the kid too young to know? They just hoped Wanda and Sebastian weren’t imposing these new modes on their kids.

“Ok…” They nodded.

“You have a cute kid, Wanda!” Gina, another lawyer, smiled. Wanda hugged Miz towards her and kissed her cheek, making everyone coo.

“You should bring the twins another day too.” They smiled. Wanda laughed. “Maybe I will…” She wouldn’t. The twins were destructive chaos-lovers like her husband. She loved them but they needed to grow up a little bit more before she could take them to important places for more than a few minutes. Miz was chaotic only when she got bored and she was easily distracted.

The women said their farewells and went back to their own work. Wanda and Miz were alone again. Miz looked up. “So~does this mean I get a birthday party on Halloween?” Wanda laughed. “Of course!”

Miz cheered. “I haven't had a birthday in eons!” She celebrated her friends birthdays but since she didn't know when her own birthday was and October didn't exist, she didn't know when to celebrate her own birthday. Plus, there wasn't much she needed in terms of presents. But...it would be cool to have a human-type birthday party.

Wanda hummed. “What are we going to do with you and school?”

Miz pouted. “There's no reason for me to go to human school. I can tell any teacher more about their subject than they know.” She didn't want to have homework again. Homework sucked.

“Alright. If anyone asks, you will go to the future school the twins are going to.” Wanda nodded to herself.

Miz groaned. “But social services will notice I'm not actually at school.” She thought about how the Dursleys bullshit where Harry went in the books and figured they got away with it because Harry didn't have many real papers...or the wizards fucked with the social workers who should have noticed the abuse...

“You are right…” Wanda (not knowing what her daughter was thinking about) hummed and played with her laptop’s pen. “You can make it look like you are in school?”

Miz shrugged. “I guess, I can fake some memories of me being in class? Or I could just sit through some high school exams and ‘graduate’ early as a genius. Social services will come from time to time and we can bullshit our way out until they stop coming,” Wanda laughed. “Yay for illegal things!” It actually wasn’t. If Miz really completed the exams, she’d be allowed to not go to school.

Miz crawled back to her mom’s lap and hugged her, leaning on her chest. “I’m glad you adopted me though…” She was still a little scared of the inevitable future, but she felt just so happy with the Pines as well as her friends. She knew she made a good choice. Ax even said that she should do this. Something about how -Human interaction with morally sound people will help teach you what you can or can't do-

“And we are glad you accepted…” Wanda moved a lock of hair from her face and kissed her forehead. Miz snuggled on her chest and stayed there as Wanda worked. It wasn’t that uncomfortable. Miz was tiny. Not even 5 feet tall.

“Would you guys like to meet my friends?” Miz suddenly asked after hours of silence, startling Wanda who thought she was asleep. “I mean, maybe not today...But someday…I was thinking I could pull everyone into a dream and have you meet each other?”

“O-Oh…” Wanda hummed. “I guess it’ll be fun...As your adopted mother I think I deserve to know who you are friends with.” Miz giggled. “And the twins too?” Wanda asked.

“Everyone!” Miz cheered. “Stan and Ford already met them once so they can say hi again!”

Wanda chuckled. She will guess it had to do with the portal. “Alright, that would be really nice.
Maybe when the triplets see each other for their birthday? We will be in New York for the party before we go to New Jersey.”

Miz snuggled against her chest again in content. “Ok~” She relaxed. Wanda went back to work.
Then Miz asked. “Why did you switch bodies with Seb?”

Wanda almost closed the Word document she was saving. “Wh-What?” She laughed sheepishly.
“Why...how do you know that?”

“All-knowing?” Miz shrugged. “Besides, you two were acting extremely weird. First, Seb was standing straight. He has this weird habit of leaning to the right. You were laughing like crazy and called the kids little monsters. That’s Seb’s nickname for them.”

Wanda covered her face embarrassed. “It was an accident.” She said lamely. Miz grinned.
“So...what was it like? I’ve only possessed people for Deals or quick romps, never really spent much time enjoying it.”

Wanda blushed a bit more. “We-well...I felt...taller, but a little...Seb isn’t much taller than me...and...being a man is...weird.” Miz giggled. “Oh really~? But you two seemed to be having a lot of fun!” it was embarrassing and traumatizing to think about but her desire to tease Wanda was stronger.

“Stop!” Wanda whined. “Seb forced me to stay in his body because he didn’t want to leave mine!”
Miz frowned. “Forced?”

“Well, not really but he wanted to dress up and wear my clothes.” Wanda sighed. If she didn't know Sebastian so well, she would be worried about how much he enjoyed wearing traditionally women's clothes. Then again…
Wanda glanced down at Miz, who blinked innocently. Miz was a Bill Cipher and she was gender fluid, was Seb a mild version of that? She decided to talk to him about that later tonight. “Well, it was an interesting experience at least.”

Miz grinned. “Having a dick is weird right?”

Wanda scowled at her. “I don’t want to talk about my husband’s dick.” Miz burst out laughing. “But what did you think?” Her bodies changed genitalia every time, she was used to it, but Wanda wasn’t.

“Well…” Wanda blushed. “It was weird. It was like having something between my legs...and it was kind of annoying...and…” She lowered her voice. “Erections…”

Miz burst out laughing. “They're fun! And funny looking!” She liked the feeling. It was quite pleasant. Wanda blushed. “Well, you change sex all the time so I suppose you’re more used to it than I am.”

“Yeah, that’s true…” Miz agreed giggling. “Whatcha think of the sex?” she blushed even as she asked this. Her mouth running off as her lack of brain to mouth filter had her saying every random thought she had.

“Oh my god, stop.” Wanda groaned. “You’re my daughter, I won’t tell you about this.” Well. She knew she would eventually have to give the twins a more indepth talk about the birds and the bees once they were older...but this was different! Miz already knew! “You're a very twisted child.” Wanda sighed.

“Of course!” Miz agreed. “I’m a demon after all.”

Wanda adjusted Miz on her lap to rest her chin on her head. “I guess you are…” She chuckled and looked back at the screen. She wondered how Seb was doing with the twins, Wanda knew Seb was a great dad despite his distracted nature, and he had taken care of the twins since she went back to work. She bet everything was more than fine!

Chapter 27

Weirdness attracts weirdness

---

Nothing was fine. Everything was a huge disaster!

“Dad! Find him!!” Zoe screamed. Zach was crying on the couch. Sir Bedazzle ran away when Zach left the door open by mistake. He had wanted to pick up the mail and the acorn puppy ran off. Now his son was blaming himself and Zoe was angrily demanding for Seb to do something. Seb was trying very hard to scan around and find Sir Bedazzle but the crying and screaming were too distracting for him to concentrate.

“Quiet please! I'm trying to find him!” Seb wailed. How had things gone to shit so quickly?! First he had gotten the twins awake for the day with a nice breakfast, but then the twins realized Miz wasn't here and started complaining. It took Seb 20 minutes to explain that Miz was with Wanda today and no, they couldn't go to Wanda's workplace.

Cleaning the dishes without magic was annoying and while Seb had been busy at the sink, Zach and Zoe had run into the kitchen, screaming about how Sir Bedazzle had gotten outside and run off. Seb was relieved the kids hadn't run outside. He and Wanda had made it clear they should NEVER go out without one of their parents with them. With the lecture yesterday about Miz's almost-kidnapping, they were more careful, at least when they remembered.

Now though, Seb had to worry about the neighbors seeing Sir Bedazzle and asking uncomfortable questions.

Zach continued sobbing, albeit a little softer, and Zoe scowled. It wasn’t fair! She was worried! Seeing shouting at dad wouldn’t help their situation, she decided to scold Zach. “Why did you open the door? You can’t open it! And now Sir Bedazzle is going to die and be eaten because of you!” She sniffled.

Zach started crying even louder, clutching the cushion to himself. “I-I am s-sorry!!” He wailed.

“SHUT UP BOTH OF YOU!” Seb growled, and his eye turned red. It was something that changed after his yellow eye exploded. “Stop shouting at your brother, it was an accident! If you just close your tiny ass mouths for a second I can find Bedazzle!” Seb snarled, frustrated at all this.

The twins shut up and put their hands over their mouths. Dad was really scary when he wanted to be. Seb huffed and scanned the neighborhood by the triangles he had carved along the years. Yeah, he was paranoid, let him be! He cheered when he found the acorn puppy in the park. No one was there! They were saved! “Ok! I got him! Come on.”

Zoe squealed and ran towards the door, Zach sniffled and grabbed his hand. “I’m sorry, daddy…” Seb squeezed his hand softly. “It's fine Zach. Come on.”

The three of them headed off to the park, Zoe running ahead while Seb yelled for her to slow down and not get too far.

And he thought Mabel and Dipper were stressful. These blond little demons were going to kill him one day… he glanced down at Zach, walking calmly next to him, then Zoe, who just tripped and fell face-first to the floor because of her untied shoes. Zoe would, at least.

“You ok, pumpkin?” Seb asked as Zoe stood up. She giggled. “I hurt my face.” She rubbed her chin and Seb panicked when he saw blood. He wanted to take her home to clean that, but if they took any longer, someone could see Sir Bedazzle and panic. It would be amusing to see, but not too good for his relative inner peace.

He picked both children up and sprinted the rest of the way to the park. “Sir Bedazzle?” He called out. To his relief, he heard the distinctive bark-squeak of their family pet. Zoe wiggled in his arms. “Sir Bedazzle!!!” She cried.

Zoe escaped from Seb’s arms and ran towards the barks. Seb put Zach on the floor and they ran after the excited little girl. Their acorn puppy stood up from the mud he was rolling around in and ran towards his owners with his little legs. They came to play with him! This place was so, so nice! And the cool, fresh soil was something the puppy had never felt. The grass in the backyard was too thick for him to dig through.

Zoe threw herself into the mud as well, Seb held back his cry, and hugged Sir Bedazzle. “You are a silly, dummy! Please, please never run away again!!” he wailed. Sir Bedazzle barked happily and licked his owner. He had no idea what they were saying but he liked how Zoe was playing in the mud too. He wiggled out of Seb’s arm to go play with Zoe now.

The toddler laughed and laid down on the mud to throw and catch the little barking acorn. Seb gaped. Well. Those clothes were totally ruined… Zach pulled his hand. “I want to play too!” Seb let him do it, reluctantly, he would throw a tantrum if Zoe was allowed and he wasn’t, Zach giggled and joined his sister.

Wanda was killing him tonight...

He sat down cross-legged on a bench and let the kids just play. Fresh air. Little humans needed fresh air.

Zoe and Zach, totally covered in mud, sat on the swings with Dazzle on Zach’s leg, and just enjoyed their playtime in a carefree manner. Eventually, when kids got out of daycare or pre-kinder, the park slowly started filling in. Seb grimaced. “We should probably go…” Some nannies and moms gave the dirty twins weird looks. Seb shoved Sir Bedazzle under his arm and hoped people thought he was a doll.

“You two are taking BATHS when we get home!” Seb grumbled. The twins whined “Noooo!!!”

“Yeeesss.” Seb laughed and grabbed the kids’ tiny hands. They were so tiny, oh god! So little! “I want to hold Sir Bedazzle!” Zoe raised her free arm and made grabby motions. Seb rolled his eye. “Ok, but hold him tightly.” He warned and gave the puppy to her. They walked back home and Seb immediately ordered them to take off their wet and dirty sneakers.

They tried to escape from their bath, but they had a magic dad, so it was useless. Seb lifted them in the air and locked the three of them in the bathroom. “You can’t stay dirty.” Seb explained as he lifted a pouting Zach’s shirt over his head and pulled it off. Still, Zach got into the bathtub while Seb had to levitate Zoe into it.

“Can we get toys?” Zoe asked after she was put on the bathtub next to her brother. “No. Then you won’t want to get out.” Seb grinned. “We will have a fast bath and then you can play.” He poured water over Zoe and Zach’s hair to get it wet before washing the dirt off their bodies and hair. They usually bathe almost all by themselves, but they were super dirty today and needed help. Zach held Sir Bedazzle, who was splashing the water and squeaking cheerfully. Yay! Water!

“Ok, I’ll bring your towels, stay here. I’m being serious! I’ll be watching you!” Seb stood up and went to their room to find their towels. The twins shared a look. Sir Bedazzle recognized that look as ‘something fun will happen’ and wiggled as he floated by on the water.

Seb came back and panicked to find the bathtub empty. “Kids?!” he looked around frantically. He heard a muffled giggle and felt water drip on him. The former demon looked up and groaned. The twins were lifting each other into the air to float on the ceiling. “Get down here. I need to dry you off.” Seb reached for them but they floated away from his hands with more laughter.

Seb grinned. “If you don't get down here~you won't get to watch that silly horse show~”

“It’s called Those Little Ponys!” Zach protested. Seb rolled his eye. “Why do you all like that show so much anyway?”

The twins floated down so Seb could dry them. “Because MiracleNote is the nicest pony! And he always lets people know that there is some good inside them.” Zach gushed. Zoe nodded and also regaled Sebastian with the story. “Like when he got captured by Munchy and everyone in town said she was evil but he was nice to her and it turns out she was just sad and wanted a friend!”

“Right~” Seb nodded, not really paying attention. He would never understand this show. “And PetalKick is the coolest! She can kick a whole building over!” Zoe squealed. Seb paused. What?

“And CrimsonGem is like you daddy.” Zach said as Sebastian towel dried his hair. “Really now?” The father asked. Zach nodded. “He likes to make pretty clothes too.” Zoe spoke up “AND he has a twin sister! But she's mean.”

Zach tilted his head. “Miz says that she's a Tsun-Tsun.”

“What the heck is a Tsun-Tsun?” Seb asked. The twins both shrugged. Seb sighed. He hoped it wasn't a bad word. He should pay more attention to what Miz was teaching his kids.

Well, to be honest with himself, Wanda and him cursed a lot in front of the twins. A LOT. They were really bad-mouthed and it was Miz telling them they couldn't say those words. Now he doubted it was something bad. As soon as the kids were dry and dressed, they raced off downstairs to turn on the tv.
The theme song came on and Seb sighed. Well, nothing to do right now. He finished his work for the week and had some free time. Might as well see what all the fuss was about. He sat down with the kids as they sang along with the theme song. Ugh. They were so colorful. What was so great about talking horses?

I marathon later…

“Noo! She's not your fiancée! Dammit! Why doesn't anyone notice she's an imposter?!” Seb screamed at the tv. After the new episode for this week, the channel started playing reruns of past episodes and Seb actually found himself quite invested. There were a few episodes the twins hadn’t seen yet. Such as the season finale, the Musical Wedding.

“Gaah! The tension is killing me!” Zoe bit Zach’s arm and the boy whined and punched her. “Shut up, you two! I’m watching!” Seb snarled. Nothing had got him this excited since The Duchess Approves.

On screen, a regal looking alicorn with a flaming mane looked at the ‘happy couple’ “We are gathered here today to celebrate the union of two ponies.”

“Nooo! Why can't anyone tell that's not the princess?! She's been acting like a bitch this whole time!!!” Seb wailed. Zach slapped him lightly. “Language!” he complained.

“Don’t worry! It will be stopped! It HAS to be!” Zoe clung to her dad’s arm. They all stared, enraptured, when the doors to the grand hall were kicked right off their hinges. A bright yellow pony with a green mane stomped into the room. She lowered the leg she had just smacked the doors with and screamed. “I OBJECT!”

“YEEES!!! YES! YES! PETALKICK MADE IT ON TIME!!!!” Seb cheered as he jumped on the sofa. The twins imitated their father and stood up to shout. “YAY!”

“Petalkick? What is the MEANING of this?” An orange pony with a crimson mane gasped. “I know you're upset that MiracleNote didn't choose YOU but-”

“Shut it, Ruby. This isn't about me.” Petal cut her off. She pointed a hoof at the pony in the bridal gown. “That's NOT princess MiraculousMelody!”

All the ponies gasped.

“YEAH! You tell them!” Seb screamed. On the tv the other ponies looked between the two ponies. “What proof do you have that I'm not Miraculous?” The bride scoffed. “You've been trying to ruin my wedding all day!” she sniffed, looking upset.

Petalkick stamped a hoof to the ground, cracking the stone floor. “Because, in ALL this time, you haven't sang a SINGLE SONG!”

“THAT'S WHAT I SAID!” Seb screamed at the tv and hugged his kids tightly towards him. God dammit he was invested now.

“Dad, I can’t see!” Zach whined and Zoe pushed to be let go.

It was then that the REAL princess showed up. She was dirty and her mane was a mess but she marched into the grand hall and everypony gasped. “It's true. That pony is an IMPOSTER. I am the true Princess Miraculous Twinkle Hope Melody!”

(Seb wondered about these names. He wondered a lot.)
The fake stared for a few seconds before she began to laugh. “Well this is all well and good...but you're TOO LATE!” A magical wall of green flames sprang up around her and MiracleNote, whom everypony could now see was in a hypnotic daze. The fake wrapped an arm around him and sneered. “He is MINE now!” She laughed maniacally as her body was engulfed in flames, the fur and skin burning off to reveal a pitch black skeletal horse with molten lava eyes.

“AAAAAAAAHHHHHHHHHHHHH!!" Seb and the twins all screamed as they clung to each other. “Holy shit! This is a kid's show?!"

"She's a NightMare!" CrimsonGem gasped alongside his twin.

The skeletal horse screeched with laughter as chains sprang up from the ground to wrap around the unresponsive MiracleNote. She sneered at the horrified gasps on everypony's faces. “Sorry ponies~”

She nuzzled her skull against MiracleNote. “-looks like you were too slow~”

The two were engulfed in flames and the real princess screamed as she ran to try and reach her fiance. “Noo!” She was a few steps away from them...

And then the TV shut off.

“NOOOO!!!” The Pines cried. The lights had turned off as well. A blackout. They stared blankly at the Tv and blinked in unison 2 times. The neighbors were complaining as well, off in their own houses. But Seb's group...They all took a deep breath and Screamed.

“AAAAAAAAAAAAAHHHHHHHHHHHHH!!!!!!”

Sir Bedazzle started barking, Queen Flutter hissed and went to hide, and the neighbors winced at the loud, high pitched scream which HAD to come from the Pines’ house…

“ARE YOU KIDDING ME?! NOW?! IN THE FUCKING MIDDLE OF A CLIFFHANGER?!”

Seb’s hands caught on fire and his eye turned red.

Zach and Zoe’s eyes turned red as well. No one interrupted their Tv time...No one...

---

Miz and Wanda had a nice day together. Wanda took Miz for lunch at the small but delicious restaurant she always ate in. She ordered a salad and Miz ordered eggplant parmesan with extra shaved cheese. When it was time to leave, the two dodged seeing Oliver on the hallways and ran to the car laughing. Miz was sleepy, so Wanda calmly drove home. Luck was on her side, and there wasn’t much traffic. Also, Wanda discovered that Miz was rocked to sleep by the car if she felt safe. The girl had a hand gripping onto Wanda's shirt the whole time.

The blonde almost didn't want to wake her when they finally got back to their neighborhood. "Miz? We're home." Wanda gently shook her shoulder until her daughter stirred. "Uwu…"

Miz stumbled out of the car with a yawn. Wanda looked up at the dark house. “Oh, looks like there is a blackout...Seb didn’t tell me.” She looked at her phone just in case. They took two steps and they blinked when they saw the broken window and large flat screen tv on the front lawn.

At first they both panicked. A thief. A murderer. Someone was home and they were in danger, but a quick scan from Miz let them breathe again. "No intruders." Miz reassured her. "What the fuck is the TV doing here?!" Wanda exclaimed. Miz shook her head. "You won't like the answer..."

They entered the home and found furniture, floors and curtains burnt, plus the house was flooded with the extinguisher foam.

Wanda's eye twitched.

"Miz..." she said calmly. Too calmly. Miz blinked. "Yeah?"

"Where are my dear husband and children?"

"...hiding in the cupboard in the laundry room." Miz responded. She could have lied, but she didn't. Sorry dudes, you're on your own.

Wanda ruffled her hair and she walked towards the laundry room. The demon bit her lip. She shouldn't have told her. Wanda was going to murder the Pines...which meant she needed to get some chips and watch the carnage! Miz hurried after Wanda and materialized a bowl of cheese puffs.

Wanda saw the stuff that used to be in the cupboard were tossed all over the floor to make room for a grown man and two kids. Wanda heard sobbing. "...I felt Mom come home..." A little voice sobbed. "Shh...she won't find us..." Seb whispered. "Are we going to die?" Another little voice asked fearfully.

Wanda glared. "You three. OUT." She ordered coldly. Miz floated in the air and ate her cheese puffs. Let the carnage begin~

Seb and the twins let out terrified squeaks. "No..." Seb pleaded with a whimper and hugged his kids closer to him. "We are sorry..." The cupboard spoke again. It was Zoe this time. "I said GET. OUT! NOW!" Wanda shouted. "Nom. Nom." Miz munched on her snacks. She was fixing the house as she ate. Can't have the neighbors see the destruction. They might call the police.

The Pines whimpered before crawling out of the cupboard. "H-hey Wands...y-you're home huh?" Seb laughed awkwardly. The twins were cowering behind him. The look on Wanda's face was something Miz saved away for future nightmares she could craft.

"Damn. I have a cool mom." She grinned as the woman terrorized her family.

“So~I gotta say, that was wicked cool.”

"I'm glad you fixed the house." Wanda sighed. She and Miz (or, Xin right now) were enjoying a nice dinner of lasagna. The dragon had his tail out as he lounged on his chair. "Sorry about the TV though. I didn't really bother to scan your original one so I can only rebuild it with the design I know from outer space."

“It's fine. I think the new one has better definition.” Wanda assured her (current) son.

“Wanda? We're sorry. Can we leave time out now?” Seb whined. Zach and Zoe grumbled. The three of them were sitting in the time out corner. Of course, Wanda wasn't cruel. They each had a stuffed animal to hug and even a plate of food. Wanda sighed. “I cannot believe you three trashed the house.”
“But Miz can fix it.” Zoe protested. Xin scoffed. “Sure I can. But I shouldn't HAVE to.” His tail curled around lazily. “Oh right, mom, I'm going to visit Ford after dinner. We made plans to hang out tonight.”

Wanda coughed. “Oh. Ok. Have fun.” She was glad her adopted child was in the form of an adult man right now. It was slightly less weird to think about him being in a relationship of that nature when he didn't look like a child. The dragon took another bite of food. “Last week, I asked Ford if I could spend the night. Is...is that ok?”

Wanda blinked. “Are you really ok with-”

“We're not having a session.” Xin said. “Just hanging out.” He liked helping Ford with his projects but he was hoping to get him out of his lab tonight. Wanda heaved a sigh of relief. “I'm still...worried.” She admitted.

“It's not as scary when I'm an adult.” Xin looked down. “Besides, I hate having these stupid weaknesses.” His tail twitched with his mood.

“Ssh, you don’t speak in time out.” Wanda reminded her husband. Seb whimpered. This was so humiliating. This wasn’t even their fault! It was that stupid pony being a bitch and the stupid light’s for turning off.

Wanda placed a hand over Xin’s own. “It’s not a weakness...it’s ok if you still feel nervous, but if going with Ford helps you, then you can go.”

Xin hugged the blonde with a huge grin. “Thanks! See ya later!” He looked at the Pines, grounded. “Enjoy time-out~!” He teased before blinking away.

Ford carefully measured out the chemicals. He had to pour it gently into the other beaker. Any sudden movement would disrupt the solution and he wou-

“Hi Fordsie!”

Ford jumped and his eyes widened in horror before an explosion rang out. The entire building shook and he could hear people screaming outside. He patted himself down, amazed he wasn't burnt or harmed in any way. His lab bench was gone though, melted and bent via the force of the reaction.

Ford turned to see Xin, blinking at the destruction. “Xin! What did I say about startling me while I was working?!?” Ford cried.

“I'm pretty sure you said 'Augh!’ the last time I did this.” Xin shrugged nonchalantly. Ford glared. “My experiment is ruined!” He really found it frustrating to have his work set back. At least none of his notes had been destroyed but STILL. Xin clapped “Actually this is perfect. I was thinking we could go out tonight. It's boring to be in the lab all the time.”

“Go out?” Ford blinked. “Where?” Xin took his hand. “The forest of course! Since when have you stopped trying to discover all the Weirdness in Gravity Falls? You haven't even discovered the color changing mushrooms! Or the underground magical black market.”
Ford's eyes widened. “I KNEW there had to be one. I just could never find the entrance.” Xin tugged on his hand “Well we're not going there tonight.” Taking Ford, a HUMAN, to the magical black market? Not a good idea. “Nope. We're gonna go visit the unicorns~”

“Then why are we going to them?” Ford complained. Xin sighed. “Because their hair can be used for more than JUST barrier spells and also I thought I should get a photo of them for the twins. Those pretentious dicks might be the worst but they ARE pretty.”

Ford was interested in learning what else the unicorn hair can do “Alright. But if we're going into the magical section of the forests, let me bring my journal.” Xin rolled his eyes. “Sure. But bring your phone too. I want those photos.”

“Can we also get some size changing crystals? I've been meaning to run some experiments on them.” Ford requested. Xin nodded “Sure. They're on the way.” He wrapped his hand around Ford's and Blinked them away into the forest. Ford swayed as soon as they appeared. “Ugh. Teleportation...still unpleasant.” Xin ruffled his hair, enjoying the fluffiness “You just need to try it more often.”

“Will you teleport me to more places?” Ford adjusted his glasses and Xin grinned. “I can! Going on adventures with you should be really fun!” He flicked his nose and Ford covered it with his 6 fingered hands. “Ow! I hate that …” the man pouted.

“No you don't~” Xin sang as he sauntered away into the forest. He had his tail and antlers out, no point hiding them when they were this deep in the woods. No townspeople came this far in. They knew how dangerous the magical parts of the woods were. Ford squinted. The sun had set half an hour ago and he was having trouble seeing. Xin's antlers glowed, which at least let Ford know where he was.

“Xin! I can't see.” He grumbled. He saw the antlers turn around and head back to him, lighting up the area as he came closer. “Right. I forgot how bad human night vision is.” Xin poked Ford's glasses and the man blinked as he could now faintly see around him. It wasn't bright, more like being able to see in a room that had all the curtains drawn. But it wasn't pitch black anymore, which was an improvement. “Thank you.” He nodded at Xin. The dragon grinned. “No problem, Fordsie.”

They walked around in a comfortable silence. Ford held his blue journal, the one Xin actually gave him years ago and had infinite pages, as he looked around. Xin smiled warmly at the book. He was really glad Fordsie liked his gift.

They got to crystals’ cave and Ford crouched to grab a piece. “Do you know Dipper discovered how to use it efficiently using a flashlight when he and Mabel were 12? It really amazed me when he told me...he passed out when I told him how proud I was, for some reason, but I have been meaning to make an improved prototype to use the crystals.” Ford carefully wrapped the piece of crystal in a handkerchief so no accidents would happen.

“Hah! I bet he did. Pinetree is so easily overwhelmed.” Xin snickered. “He likes praise. More so if they're from you.”

“Really? And why is that?” Ford asked naively.

“Because you're his cool science uncle who wrote the journals he obsessed over the entire summer. He admired you a lot!” Ford blushed slightly. “I am sure he still does, but I guess he controls it more or just grew up out of his fanboy phase." Xin shrugged before he thought of something. "Have you thought of getting an apprentice? And no, I am not saying like Jess, yes I know who your new intern is, the poor girl worked her ass off in college just to earn the internship just to serve you guys coffee, that’s super mean. You're the only scientist here who actually lets her do science." Xin shook his head. “I’m talking about getting a pupil, someone to pass all your knowledge to.” He patted Ford's head.

Ford shrugged. “I really haven’t thought about it...I work fine on my own, and I think you’re the best work partner.” and… he hadn't realized that the other scientists were only using the new interns for coffee runs. He needed to speak with them about that. Also, he should probably text Viola back. She was working at a wildlife preservation sanctuary that was taking care of frogs and toads that were suffering from genetic mutations from polluted water. She requested for Ford to find a way to make water purifiers that could clean lakes and ponds.

As that aligned well with his environmental research, Ford was glad to add that to his list of projects.

Xin grinned. “Thanks. I guess? But I'm just saying that even if Dipper's set on making his own ghost hunting show, I'm sure he'd like to have expeditions with you too.” Xin sighed. “In the past few months, you've just been doing nothing but research. I think I'm the only real social interaction you've had. You haven't even had lunch with your nerd friends recently.” He pouted “Isn't that bad? You should hang out with people more.”

“I have you.” Ford pointed out. Xin rolled his eyes. “I'm a person, not people.” He flicked his tail around as he watched Ford gather crystals. “You know, I can think of multiple inappropriate ways to use those…” he commented. Ford looked up. “You mean like irresponsibly shrinking someone and trapping them in a jar? Mabel told me about what Gideon did.”

Xin allowed a slow smirk to form on his lips. “Nope. I meant...using the crystals to grow certain...specific things…” Damn he would want to see that. Ford still looked quite confused. Xin sighed. “You're no fun.” it looked like Ford wouldn't get it unless he said it straight out. No matter. Xin reached out to grab a crystal for himself. He could use this for his personal fun times. Also, scanning them to see how they worked and Paste them around back home.

“So, I'm pretty sure you've gotten enough crystals right?” Xin asked Ford while the man carefully stored his pickings in his pockets. “Yes. These should be sufficient for my experiments.”

“You know. You could use the growth rays to increase food supply. But does the ray also increase the size of the cells within the area of effect?” Xin mused. “It would make more sense than merely causing all the cells to rapidly multiply and subsequently be destroyed when you shrink them back down.”

Ford immediately opened his journal to scribble into it. “I hadn't even considered that! Brilliant. I will need to test that when I get back to the lab.” Xin tugged on his jacket. “Nope. Once we get you home after this little adventure, you are going straight to bed.” Ford frowned “But my research-”

“You haven't slept in two days. Don't think I can't tell.” Xin bopped his nose. “If your brothers knew how unhealthy you were living they would come up to Oregon and kick your ass. Or maybe I should tell Ashton and let him kick your ass.”

Ford rolled his eyes. Xin should stop worrying about him this much. Contrary to what he believed, he didn't need to be reminded to sleep or eat. He wasn’t a kid. If his body wasn’t asking him to do those things, then he wouldn’t lose time on something so trivial!
Xin rolled his eyes as well, hearing Ford's thoughts (he thought too loudly. Xin wasn't even trying to listen in). Seriously, this idiot was going to pass out one day and he would be here to rub it in his face and say ‘I told you so~’. He kept quiet though, getting to see Ford’s pouting face was much more fun.

They walked towards the part of the forest where unicorns lived. As they walked, Ford vaguely wondered how the girls managed to summon the unicorn if a deep voice was needed to chant the ancient text. “Alright… If I am correct -which I always am-” Xin rolled his eyes at that. The years haven't changed Ford's ego much. “This is the place.” Ford said as he looked at a clearing. “But where would we find a druid this late at night?”

Xin shrugged. “We could just try asking nicely. You know, like normal people?” Ford sputtered. “Bu-but the door won't even appear if-!”

Xin sauntered up, his tail swishing back and forth, and knocked on...air? “Greetings and good evening. I am Xin. I humbly requested passage into your glade, oh noble unicorns.”

Ford stared. “There’s no way that would-” he was cut off when the huge, fancy door appeared and opened, a flock of moths fluttering out as a silvery glow emanated from the door. If Xin could whistle, he would have. Nice dramatic effect. Using moths instead of butterflies because it was night, he could appreciate the Unicorn's aesthetic choices. He looked in to see a unicorn with a rainbow mane, lounging next to a waterfall.

“Gimme your phone.” Xin said before digging through Ford's pockets. Ford protested when Xin pulled out his smartphone. “I could have just handed it to you!” The man grumbled. Xin chuckled as he floated and vanished his shoes, it would be rude to have shoes on inside their home after all. Even if unicorns were jerks, didn't mean he had to be an asshole to them too. And really, shoes off inside the house was normal. Xin floated inside. "Wow you've got a lot of photos of frogs." Xin noted. Ford shrugged. "My old intern still sends them to me. Miss Viola got a job at a wildlife animal clinic. She's a very nice girl, I think you would like her." Xin hummed, "I would love to meet your students." before flipping through the frog photos, then closing out and getting the camera on. “Can I take a picture? Your silhouette is gorgeous.” He praised.

The unicorn blinked. “No photos. Our existence is a secret.” She said in a high pitched voice. Xin pouted. “But you're simply so pretty. Besides, with how much CGI has improved in the last few years, any human who sees the photo wouldn't even know it was real.” the unicorn considered his words before she glanced at the long, scaly tail, glowing golden antlers and sheer amount of energy this human-disguised magical creature gave out.

She quickly realized what this was. A dragon. She held back a shiver. She thought the dragons had left the world centuries ago in the great migration to the alter-world. They were a race too proud to hide from the encroaching spread of humanity and had opted to leave, rather than hide themselves with magic like most other magical creatures. She considered his request. She didn't want to anger the dragon, especially since this one seemed unusually docile.

“Thanks.” Xin grinned as he positioned himself to get a good angle. Ford was still staring with his mouth hanging open. Xin simply asked the unicorn for the photo...and she agreed! But, how? He didn’t doubt Xin was a good friend, but he definitely didn’t have what one would consider a ‘pure heart’...did he even have a heart? In this form, probably...

Ford tried to step in but found himself lifted into the air. “Shoes!” Xin and the unicorn both scolded. Ford grumbled and kicked his boots off before going inside. Xin sighed. “I apologize for my companion. He doesn't always remember cultural niceties.” There, he took the photo and grinned. It came out really nice. He was sure Zach and Zoe would love it. The unicorn nodded. “Humans do tend to be rude. Why, many years ago, I was assaulted, assaulted I say, by some girls who cut off my hair!”

She squinted at Ford. Then she did a double take. He was different colored but he looked a lot like…

She neighed and backed up. “You! You were with those girls who attacked me!” Sure, after the end of the world that almost was, she had somewhat forgiven the humans for that awful fight, but she hadn't forgotten! Ford blinked. “No. I have...not been to this place in over 18 years.”

“I think she means Seb.” Xin shrugged. “Sorry, this is the triplet brother of the person who attacked you.” He tried to soothe the unicorn's nerves. She calmed and stared at Ford more closely. “Oh. Well. I suppose you are right. This one is not a maiden after all.”

Ford snorted. The unicorn thought Sebastian was a maiden?!

“But I'm keeping an eye on you! No funny tricks!” The unicorn snorted as she stomped a hoof on the ground. Ford tried his best to look non-threatening. “I promise there won't be funny tricks coming from me…” Ford raised his six-fingered hands with a smile. Haha, maiden…

Xin turned to look at the unicorn. “Oh beautiful creature, we have ventured from afar to request a favor from you. If you find it in your generous heart to grant us a lock of your hair, I would really appreciate it!” he requested. “Of course, it wouldn't be for free. That would be incredibly rude.” he scoffed. "What sort of person just asks for a part of someone's body without offering anything in return?"

“Indeed.” The unicorn sniffed. “People just don't understand that we don't give up a part of ourselves without anything in return.” Ford blinked. “But...don't you grant your hair to those who are pure of heart?”

"The pure of heart thing is bullshit." Xin and the unicorn, Celestabellebethabelle, responded in unison. At Ford's gobsmacked look, Celestabellebethabelle clarified “When humans come in and just, started asking for our hair without even offering us anything in return-”

“So rude.” Xin nodded in understanding.

"-we started making excuses to refuse them. Because APPARENTLY a simple ‘No.’ means nothing to them.” she snorted. “I do admit I may have gone a little overboard with my ‘pure of heart’ scam but who can blame me? It's not MY fault they're bad people.”

Ford stroked his chin. Guess he was wrong about unicorns...and the girls and Seb beat her up years ago. That wasn’t good for their reputation as humans. Celestabellebethabelle giggled “Also, that devastated look on their faces when I crush their hopes and dreams never fails to make me laugh.”

The scientist pouted. That wasn’t nice. Xin laughed and wrapped an arm around Celestabellebethabelle’s neck. Oh man, he was wrong about unicorns too. They were assholes, but they were FUN assholes. “I know right?!“ Xin snorted. “Honestly, same!” The two magical creatures cackled about how much fun it was to fuck with humans. Ford twitched. Nevermind. She really WAS a terrible person. He pouted as the two traded stories of people whose dreams they crushed. Xin coughed, well, anyway. Back to the matter at hand.
“So what sort of things do you take in exchange for your hair?” Xin let go of her and sat down in mid air. “I'm sure, like any self respecting creature of magic, you change the price depending on who's asking.”

Celestabellebethabelle huffed. “Of course! But I like you, so I’ll give you a special discount.” she looked him over. His hair was pitch black, not as colorful as she was used to seeing from her brothers and sisters but that's what made it exotic and pretty. “Hair for hair. I give you one of my locks and I get some of yours...from your true form, not this human disguise you are wearing.”

Ford winced. But did Xin, did Bill even have a dragon form? But despite his worry, Xin merely grinned. He hasn't gone full dragon form in...a really long time. “Sure.” he learned how to emulate dragon DNA from a species of space dragon he met out in the multiverse. Then he merely mixed it with other DNA traits from dragons in other dimensions to create something unique. He waved for everyone to step back and let him concentrate. He obviously couldn't take his dragon form at full size. So he had to make sure he was small enough to fit in here.

Ford was furiously writing in his journal to try and record this event. He gazed in awe as Xin's body stretched and twisted. Golden scales overtook his skin in a rippling effect as his face elongated into a snout and his clothes were torn apart by his growing body. There was the sound of cracking bones and Xin moaning ecstatically at the sensation of his transformation. Ooh~yes~Ford and Celestabellebethabelle both blushed. Was...was it supposed to sound like that? Xin fell to his hands and knees as his changing body could no longer stand upright. His bones shifted, his hands became claws and he panted while the last of the transformation petered out. He trembled. Fuck that felt so good. He blinked down at the red faced Ford and Celestabellebethabelle while his long, serpentine body wiggled. “S-sorry. It just feels real nice, you know?”

Ford coughed awkwardly and couldn't help but stare at the magnificent creature before him. He admired Xin’s dragon form a lot and he had so many questions, but he couldn’t start asking now, it would blow their cover. Celestabellebethabelle shook her head, getting over her initial shock. This dragon looked different than she expected, where were his wings(?), but he looked pretty nice… “It-It is alright…” She nodded. She figured he just felt nice from dropping that cramped looking human form. That must have been it.

She got up to inspect him. Yes. His hair would do nicely. She nodded to her Saytr friend who came out with some shears. “A lock of your hair for a lock of mine.” Xin nodded, laying his head on the ground so they could reach. The saytr cut a lock of Xin’s mane and then proceeded to cut Celestabellebethabelle’s. He gave Xin the colorful hair and the unicorn received the pitch black ones. Xin had trouble holding things with his claws and rolled his eyes. “Hand it to my human. He holds stuff for me.”

Celestabellebethabelle nodded. Oh. So the human was the dragon's servant. Well, she approved. As a creature who couldn't hold stuff either, she could see how keeping a human around would be useful.

Ford sat down on the floor, watching in shock. Was Xin really calling him ‘his human’?! Like some sort of Servant?! “Xin!” He complained when the little creature gave him the hair. The dragon snorted. “It's fine. You have pockets. I don't.” He wiggled his tail and did a few stretches, getting used to his form. Oh~this was pretty fun. His usual forms were small and compressed. Being so large was quite nice.

Ford held the long lock of hair and looked at it. This time it wasn’t covered in blood… “We thank you a lot, but we shall leave now.”
“Aw, what?!” Xin looked at Ford. “But being here is nice! I wanted to chat more~” he whined.

“We have stuff to do in the lab…” Ford replied. Xin snorted. “Well I don’t want to change back yet. It feels real nice to have some time where I DON’T have to cram myself into a tiny vessel.” Xin shook his head. Ford sighed. Actually…maybe he could use this. “Ok. You don't have to change back. But can we still go back to my lab? I'm sure it's large enough for you to fit.” Ford really, really wanted to examine Xin's body. A dragon! A real(ish) dragon!

Xin lid his eyes at the human. “What's in it for me?” He asked. Ford paused. “A session?” He asked. Xin shook his head. “I'm not in the mood for something like that tonight.” Ford pouted, much like Seb did when he was put in time out. “But I've never wrestled a dragon before. And I invented a new type of rope we could use~”

Xin considered that. “What kind of rope?” he asked finally. Ford grinned. Hook, line and sinker. “It feels soft and doesn't chaft at all. I've tested it. You know how you complained about how it was a waste that you kept tearing through my cords? Well this rope stretches so it can tie you up firmly, just the way you like, and you can pull yourself out without breaking it.”

Celestabellebethabelle was staring wide eyed at the two of them. Were they talking about…oh my. She's heard about Gnomes and their squirrel ‘baths’ and her brother Twinkletwittersparklepuff enjoyed having his tail pulled but she didn't realize dragons had kinks too.

And with a HUMAN nonetheless. How scandalous. She blushed and looked away. Oh...and now she was imagining it! Ah! She just got the greatest inspiration for the next smutty storytelling session she and her sisters were going to do at their next sleepover--this would DEFINITELY beat out Miramirabellossom's story about how the multibear was conceived!

Xin hummed before agreeing with a nod. “Alright. Sounds interesting.” He smiled at the proud human. Yes! He convinced him! Xin turned to Celestabellebethabelle who was breathing heavily for some reason and nodded at her. “Thank you very much for your time. Farewell.”

“O-oh! Yes! Farewell yourself sir Dragon.” Celestabellebethabelle tapped a hoof on the ground rapidly. “Do come by and visit any time. I'll even allow your human to come along.”

Xin nodded and got to his feet, turning himself around carefully so that his bulk didn't hit anyone as he squeezed through the door to head back out. Ford followed, mind busy with strategies on how to hogtie a dragon. Wrestling a dragon! How amazing was that? Like a hero from the fantasy books he'd read as a child. Of course, he wouldn't be slaing THIS dragon.

Ford did glance at the unicorn worriedly though. She looked flushed and was panting quite heavily. He hoped she wasn't ill.

They left the unicorn’s magic home and Ford looked up at Xin, walking easily on his new 4 legs. “Can I touch your scales?” Ford asked before he could stop himself. Xin glanced down and shrugged, the motion making his whole body undgulate. “Sure.”

Stanford raised a hand and stroked Xin’s side. It was incredible how soft his scales felt despite being tough. They were somewhat flexible. He was really warm. “Oh…” Xin purred. That felt quite nice. Like being pet but on his body instead of just his head. His XinDragon form was very different from his MizDragon form, so this was a new sensation. Ford was marvelling at how the scales were rectangular, like bricks rather than the rounded shapes of real scales. How did that work? He ran his fingers over the large scales, each one looked to be the size of his hand, and saw how they overlapped each other, forming a smooth texture in one direction.
He tried petting against the direction of the scales and found it was rough when he pet that way. Like shark skin. Xin whined a little. Ford immediately pet him in the proper direction. “Sorry. Was that uncomfortable?”

“A little. It felt like being pinched. But...not?” Xin wasn't sure how to describe that feeling. He picked his way among the tree roots. Ugh. Walking was so annoying. He folded his legs up against his sides and floated, slithering through the air easily. Much better. Ford stared. “How does that work when you don't have wings?”

“Magic. Duh.” Xin rolled his eyes. Well, it was Weirdness technically, but magic was easier to say.

“Oohh.” Ford nodded and walked next to the large dragon demon. “You know…” He started, watching his boots make little branches crunch. “Sebastian can’t shapeshift freely...only into his demon form...I think it would be amazing if he could do what you can.”

“I think it would be a problem.” Xin chuckled. “One, you wouldn’t leave him alone. Two, it wouldn't have made it easier for you to trust him when you were a paranoid ass. Third. Your little crazy niblings would be able to shapeshift as well and they are a handful as they are.”

Ford rubbed the back of his neck. Right…

They went back to the Shack/Research Center and the few scientists walking around spat their coffee or dropped their notepads when they saw their boss walking in with a huge golden dragon following him. They already passed some late night woodsmen gathering firewood who just muttered “Nevermind all that.” before hurrying off. Ford had been too busy writing in his journal to realize it would be odd to have a dragon with him. The Shack was somewhat away from town so there weren't many people here anyway.

Dr. Poddar stared at the LITERAL dragon with wide eyes. “Ah...who's your friend?” Ford rubbed his eyes as the night vision suddenly vanished and looked at his colleague. “Oh. Dr. Poddar, greetings! This is Xin, a dear friend of mine who kindly agreed on testing the new ropes I created.”

“Yeah, the ropes sound quite good!” Xin wagged his tail. Dr. Poddar choked. Xin...was the name of that attractive man Dr. Pines had been...oh. He stared at the obviously eastern style dragon. Oh. OH…

“Well, we have work to do. We will be off now. Good night Dr. Poddar.” Ford nodded at his employee before heading to his lab. The scientist just stared at the long golden body filling out the hallway in shock. His boss was fucking a dragon. And he was planning on...fucking the dragon...AS a dragon...

Everyone had to hear this! This was way better than the dumb little monster Dr. Clark accidentally created but panicked and killed with a book!

As the scientist ran away to gossip, Ford and Xin reached the man’s lab. Xin had to squeeze his way through the door, stubbornly refusing to shrink down to fit. Even after the door closed, the other scientists CLEARLY heard the sounds and felt the loud thumping coming from within. They all blushed. Even if it was a scientific wonder...they couldn't believe their boss was fucking a dragon.

Xin left a few hours later, thoroughly satisfied and feeling more confident and less afraid. Ford really was the best in helping him. He was fun, and when he did something, he put his full concentration into it, that was why he hurt so nice~ Harsh, but measured and planned. It even took his mind off his fear from Miz's almost kidnapping. All in all, an evening well spent.
He thought about sleeping over, but Ford apparently wanted to pull an all nighter and therefore wouldn't be in bed for Xin to cuddle with, so the dragon went home instead.

He didn't feel like cramming himself back into a human form and merely shifted into Miz's Dragon form which was a quarter of Xin's current size but still roomier than a human form. She curled up on her bed in the twins room and drifted off to sleep.

She would be awoken the next morning by excited children petting her all over. It was quite nice.

Wanda got a job in Los Angeles, called by someone specifically requesting for her. She would have to leave for a few weeks for this job. Seb didn’t want her gone for so long. “I’ll miss yooooou~” He whined. "I wanna know you'll be okaaay~"

Wanda sighed. “But I have to go. This is important.” Seb sighed. “I know. It’s an important client.” He pouted before perking up. “What if I come with you?”

Wanda glanced over while packing. “And leave the kids alone?” She asked wryly. “I know Miz can take care of them, but that’s not really a good idea…”

Seb shook his head. “I meant that we can all come with you. I mean, I'm free and really, who cares about daycare? It's not like preschool assistance matters for school later. And we still have time before we need to go to New Jersey. So why don’t we all take a trip to Los Angeles?”

"Wanda laughed. Well… I guess you’re right. It would be nice to have a little family trip.”

“Great! I’ll go get the booking done!” Seb grinned. “Oh! Oh! Maybe I can take this chance to go and see Linda again!” It’d be nice seeing her. Then he thought of something else. “Hey… do you think… that Miz needs a therapist this time?”

Wanda blinked. “Wait. You mean… for what happened with her children?” Seb nodded. “But also, she’s afraid of cars, and I don't get why. And… She's gotten better at hiding it, but she's still a little afraid of being out in public places.” Seb shuddered at the memory of her almost kidnapping.

Wanda paused. “Right. That too. Um, yeah. We probably should have done this much earlier.” She felt bad about it. She hadn’t actually thought about it. Miz seemed to be doing okay most of the time. But… that might have been worse actually. Seb had seemed ‘okay’ and he clearly wasn’t.

“Alright. I’ll go and work on my case. You… see if maybe you can find a therapist for Miz. Maybe Linda knows someone.” The two nodded, that was the plan.

When the kids were told they were leaving school for a few weeks, they couldn't be happier. YAY! NO SCHOOL! But Seb said it was only under the condition that they got some kind of learning from Miz every day and practicing their numbers and letters. Zach and Zoe accepted because heck yeah! Learning with Miz was so much fun! It was better than school! The only downside of not having school anymore was that they couldn’t see Amanda. Missus Carol never came over anymore. And when the twins had gone by the house to try and see Amanda, they were told to “Get off my property!”

Everyone was packed and at an airport within the day. The Plantimals were teleported over to Mabel (who demanded the chance to pet sit for them). Everything went without any incident, aside from Miz clinging to them so close Wanda had trouble walking while complaining of a headache, and unless you counted Zoe suddenly hugging a distracted pilot as he walked past them. He smiled at her though and ruffled her hair. Zoe spent the whole ride staring out the window at how cool everything looked from up here, until she passed out at least. That was good since she remained asleep when the plane landed and didn’t feel her ears pop.

Their trip to the wonderful city of Los Angeles really started the day after. Seb, like a good husband, decided to accompany Wanda to the police station while Miz stayed with the twins at the hotel. They were more than happy, they had a pool, a tv and snacks they bought before so they wouldn't have to touch the ones of the room.

Wanda was supposed to meet with her client at the police station where he was being held. "No, Seb, you can't come in with me. Please."

"But he's a murderer!!" He whispered with a grimace. "I'm not letting you get in with a murderer!"

Wanda deadpanned at him. "The whole reason I'm here it's because we don't know for sure if he's the murderer, I'm supposed to defend him and choose his best course of action... But no. You still can't come in with me!" Seb growled at her, but the blonde rolled her eyes. "After this, we can pick the kids up and go have lunch. But let me do my job ok? I don't interrupt you when you're meeting with your clients." She reminded him and Sebastian let a long, whiny sigh before accepting.

They nodded at some police officers going in and out and Wanda looked around. "Ok~ Look at those chairs. Go sit over there." She ordered her annoyed husband while she approached the woman she had to talk to. "Hello, I'm Mrs. Friedmann, Mr. Wegyler's lawyer."

Seb looked at the woman who turned to look at his wife. She was blonde like Wands, but she had her hair tied up in a tight ponytail. She was wearing boots, some jeans, a t-shirt and a black leather jacket. "Detective Decker." She introduced herself before telling another officer to take her to the room her client was with.

Once Wanda left, the police woman (detective) looked at Seb, confused. "Eh, hello. How can I help you?"

"I'm Mrs. Friedmann's husband. I'm just waiting for her." Seb shrugged. "I didn't want her coming to see a possible murderer alone." Detective Decker smiled. "That's very sweet. But she'll be fine. We have security in case of any incidents. There's coffee over there if you want, Mr. Friedmann, treat yourself." She nodded before walking away. Seb opened his mouth to correct her but she was gone.

Huh...Mr. Friedmann...Sebastian Friedmann~ That didn't sound half bad.

Seb didn’t really feel like coffee, he drank it when he needed to survive, but he was bored and didn’t like just sitting here with nothing to do, so he went to check out the snack table. He chuckled at all the donuts he saw. Well, he wasn’t going to judge. Donuts were delicious!

While he ate, he hoped the guy who hired Wanda was innocent. She always felt sad when she knew they were guilty. And despite that, she had to try to get them the least harsh sentence. Or worse, they lied and Wanda ended up helping criminals without her knowing. She was very careful with not doing anything with her clients outside of their meeting time. He told her she should only see cases of innocent people, but she had laughed and said it didn't work like that. "You can't know if they're innocent or not when you first take the case. Only after you find out the truth, but even then..."

Detective Decker came back and sat behind a computer to type something. She sent him another smile, which he returned, and went back to typing. He closed his eye to See the case. He was really bored! So an old man was murdered in an alley, huh?
Apparently Wanda's client was suspect number 1 as he worked with him. When they arrived to the crime scene, he was there, and one of the children of them man saw him in the room when he arrived. Even worse, the victim’s will dictated that Freddy, that was her client, would inherit the store and half his money. Geez, that sounded bad for Freddy. Especially when the man seemed legitimately broken up about his boss’s death.

“I’m boowed~” Zoe sighed. They’d already gone to play in the pool. Miz even taught them how to swim better. But she wanted something… more challenging. The three siblings were currently sitting on pool chairs as other hotel guests played in the pool. They shared one pool chair together since those things were so big. Miz hummed as she wrung the water from her hair over the side of the chair. “Well… what do you wanna do?” the dragon asked, lying down after she got as much water out as she could without using her powers. She was watching the other people around the pool.

“I dunno….” Zoe admitted. “I wanna see what mommy and daddy are up to.” She declared. Miz shrugged. Sure. “Well, we need to go get changed first.” She reminded them. Going to the police station in swimsuits probably wasn’t the best. The three went back up to their hotel room and Miz helped the twins shower, getting into the stall with them for her own shower while she was at it. Showers felt nice. She loved the hot water. The three got out and dried themselves, debating over what clothes to wear. Zach thought that if they were going to where mommy was working, they should look “Pwofessoral!”

So Miz giggled and materialized tiny little suits for the three of them. They were going to be fancy~

The three left the hotel, or at least they tried to. “E-excuse me. Miss?” One of the staff called out. “Where are your parents?” She was quite worried seeing these children about to walk out the door of the hotel without any adult. The asian girl looked to be a young teenager, which was maybe old enough… but still shouldn’t be out without an adult!

“We’re going to visit mommy at work!” Zoe cheered. Miz tried to reassure the hotel staff. “It’s right nearby. At the police station.” The staff was still worried. But the police station was only a few blocks away. And this close to the station, no one would try anything… right? “Do you need me to walk you there?” The staff asked instead. It wasn’t part of her job, but she didn’t feel right letting these kids go off on their own. Miz tilted her head at her. The woman shivered. That gaze was so intense. Finally, the girl smiled. “Okay.”

They headed off together after the woman called her manager and explained the situation. They made it to the station without incident (the children sticking close) and the staff lady returned to the hotel, reassured that the children should be safe in the station.

Miz looked around. There were so many people here. (She tightened her hold on the twins.) This building was pretty big. Hm~ how were they going to find mommy here? Miz was going to See but was distracted by Zoe escaping from her grip and running towards a fancily dressed man. ""M gonna ask!" she shouted. Miz went after her (Zoe still didn't understand that running off was dangerous !) “Wait! Zoe!”

Zoe pulled at the man's pant leg and he let out a high pitched scream. "A-Ah! Li-Little human!"

"Can you help us find our mommy? She is working here now." Zoe told him.

"If your 'mommy' is hot, then maybe." the tall, black haired man answered sincerely in a really nice British accent. Miz felt a blush forming. Wow. What a nice voice. And... more than that...

She let her eyes roam the man up and down. What was the word for this? Smexy~

....and not human.

Miz raised an eyebrow as she and Zach walked over at a more sedate pace once she sensed no malice from this man. In fact, he was a little intimidated by Zoe as she babbled on and on about how awesome her mommy was. Miz came up and the man looked over to see Zach and groaned. “Another one?!”

"I'm Zach! "This is my brother! Look Zach! Mister does funny faces when you get closer!" And indeed, the poor man stepped back, raising his hands to protect himself, all while grimacing at the two toddlers.

Then his gaze shifted to Miz and he... paused.

The two divine-demons stared at each other. Almost like they were sizing each other up. They were interrupted by a woman coming over and poking the man. “What are you doing with these children?”

“Ah. Detective.” The man turned to grin at her, moving to place her between him and the small humans. Children. Uuuuu. “It's not my fault, Detective, I swear! The little lady assaulted me!” He whined, pointing at Zoe. The blonde giggled. Mister called her a lady! The woman rolled her eyes before turning and squatting down to talk to the kids. “Hello. I’m detective Decker. Where are your parents?”

“Mommy is working here!” Zoe said proudly. Miz explained, “She’s a lawyer. Got hired to defend someone. We got bored so we came to find her.”

"Ooh~ You're Mrs. Friedmann's kids?"

"Yeah!" the twins chorused. Detective Decker smiled.

"Your daddy is right over there waiting for her. You can go with him, but let's all be quiet and stay sitting, ok, sweeties?" She said, with an obvious experience dealing with kids. "We are all super busy and it's dangerous for you to be running around, ok?" The blonde detective smiled.

"Kaaaaay~"

The three children went off and Detective Chloe Decker stood up, brushing her pants off absently. She turned to her companion and saw the British-seeming man was still staring at the children. “What?” She asked. He frowned. “That child isn’t human.” He stated plainly.

“What are you talking about now?” Chloe groaned. The man continued frowning. “I can’t... tell what she is. She feels like a demon, she’s obviously wearing that skin. But it’s not a corpse. She's not like Maze. And more than that, I don’t know her.”

Chloe rolled her eyes so much her irises disappeared. "Lucifer, I know you think you're the Devil or something--"

"Oh, Detective I don't think I am, I AM." Lucifer whined. She still refused to believe him

"But leave little kids out of your roleplay or whatever, ok?" She patted his shoulder and walked away. Lucifer frowned and pursed his lips. Oh well, he'll have to investigate on his own~ They were the new lawyer's kids, huh? This sounded very interesting.
Seb blinked as little hands wrapped around his legs. He looked down. "What're you gremlins doing here?" They were dressed in cute little suits. Where'd they get those? Oh wait, Miz. Yeah, the answer was always Miz

"Hiiii daddy~" Zach rubbed his face against Seb's leg. "We got bored. Wanna see mommy working."

Seb cackled. "Well, sorry to disappoint but we're not allowed in. Not even I'm allowed in." The twins whined at that. Miz came over while rolling her eyes. "Client confidentiality is a thing. Mommy's a professional"

Seb sat back down in one of the waiting chairs. "Uuuh. Well I'm kinda bored too." He pulled out his phone to look up any exciting places nearby. They were in Los Angeles. There should be plenty of places to have fun here. Disneyland… other theme parks…

A SKY SLIDE?! Dude that sounded amazing~!

"Hey kids~ there are some cool attractions we can go to while mommy does her boring work stuff~" Seb sang. The twins cheered, bouncing in place. Some police glanced over as they heard the high pitched squeals. Seb looked over at Miz and found her staring off. He followed her gaze to see she was having some kind of staring contest with a handsome man… oh. That was Linda's client!!! Oh gosh, the world was so small...And he was much more handsome in person. Seb averted his eyes. He was married for Ax's sake!

Wait. Speaking of Linda. Seb should get Miz to Linda and get her opinion on what the girl needed. Maybe not today though. Today was for sight seeing and having fun. "Come on Miz. We're gonna go check out the city."

As the family left the station, Lucifer got a light whap on his arm. Chloe glared. "If you keep staring at that little girl, I'm going to have to arrest you." She warned half jokingly (and half seriously, because Lucifer was a very strange man and she worried about his interest in that girl). Not that Chloe really believed he would do anything to her, Lucifer wasn't an upstanding citizen, but he wasn't a sicko either.

"She was challenging me." Lucifer pouted. "Did you see the way she was glaring at me? Like a predator trying to move in on my territory!"

"Sure." Chloe rolled her eyes. "Can you stop being so dramatic for once?" Lucifer huffed with mock offense and walked off, pausing when he noticed his shoes untied. Odd. "Where are you going now?" Chloe sighed. "Oh just having a little chat with the 'mother' of that creature. Frankly I don't think she's her real daughter."

"Lucifer that's rude! She's most likely adopted." Chloe called out as he walked away. She paused as what he said really registered. "Hey! Mrs. Friedmann is with her client right now! You can't just--!

Oh course the Devil didn't listen to her. He was already inside the private room where Wanda was getting the details of the case and her client's statement on what he was doing at the time the murder took place. The problem was he was alone at the time, didn't have anyone to confirm that he was where he said he was. No alibi. Wanda was distracted when the door opened and a very handsome man came in. "Excuse me. Hi−" He grinned charmingly as he always did. "You wouldn't happen to be able to tell me what that creature posing as a human child is, would you?"

Wanda blinked. What? Wanda stared at him before blinking again. "Uh… hi?" Lucifer sighed, making Wanda look at her client who was too sad to even react to the man in the room.

"I-Who are you? I don't know what you're talking about? I'm sorry, I'm in the middle of something right now..." She trailed off.

"That creature. The one with the other little humans. Your children, I'm told." The handsome man stressed. "What is she?"

Wanda paused, she remembered Seb texting that he was taking the kids out. Had they been here? Wait. Did this man notice something off about Miz? Was he some kind of demon hunter? Oh, Wanda felt like she watched too many TV shows… but what if he WAS a demon hunter? Or dragon hunter? Whatever--! But he knew Miz wasn't human. Or suspected?

Wanda looked nervous and the handsome stranger smiled at her. "Oh, I can tell you know something, dear~ Why don't you tell me so we can all go back to our business~"

"There's nothing wrong with her..." Wanda looked away.

"Oh, lying is a very bad sin, you know that? But I can let it pass, as you seem to be wanting to protect her." He leaned closer to the really uncomfortable woman and his eyes turned red.

Wanda gasped and jumped away from him, just in time because the door was thrown open. "Ah! There you are! Hasn't Chloe told you to stop bothering people here?!"

"Ah, Detective Douche, you have the perfect timing don't you?" Lucifer sneered at the short man.

Wanda looked back and forth between them. "Look, I don't know what this is about, but I have a client to talk to and--"

"Oh he's definitely guilty. Look at him all nervous and crying. He's definitely acting so don't waste your time with him and tell me what I want, please~" Lucifer dismissed.

Wanda glared. Oh hell no. "You, shut up. You can't just tell me how to do my job--!"

"We're so sorry, Mrs. Friedmann, I'll take Lucifer out of here! Sometimes he doesn't know his place!"

"You don't know your place!" Lucifer protested.

"I'm Detective Espinoza by the way. Move it!" Dan pushed Lucifer out of the door

Wanda blinked. "Lucifer?" She had a bad feeling. The handsome man turned to grin at her. "Lucifer Morningstar, the Devil. A pleasure~" He said before Dan closed the door behind them.

Wanda slumped in place. She was tempted to believe he was some crazy man, but her own husband used to be a demon... and his eyes-- They turned RED. Just like Seb's and Miz's did when they were angry... just like her own children did when they were angry...

Great. The literal Devil was interested in her daughter. Yeah, no. Wanda was gonna have to get some holy water or something right?

When she left the station, Lucifer wasn't there anymore and neither was Detective Decker. She asked a random police officer about the man in the black suit and he grinned. "Oh, Lucifer’s great. He's Chloe's partner."

"He's a detective?!"

"Nono, he's a civil consultant, but he's very good at making people talk and all that. He's kinda eccentric, but he's cool. He brings us donuts!" The officer smiled.

Wanda seriously didn't like any of this. Why would the Devil be working with the police?!

Wanda met Seb in a restaurant he told her he was at. In the end, they didn't go to any theme parks, but they had a tour in a red bus that had an open roof and they very much enjoyed waving at the people below as if they were stars.

"Mommy!! You won already?!!" Zoe asked as she chewed her chicken. "No, sweetie." Wanda managed a smile and sat down besides Seb. "Today was just meeting with my client and learning about the case. Now mommy needs to do some investigation to find the real bad guy." And also any evidence to her client’s innocence.

The man grinned and kissed her lips eagerly. "Hello~" He purred, glad to see her again. Seb frowned when Wanda seemed distracted. "Everything ok?"

The blonde glanced at Miz devouring her dish (a large plate of shrimp scampi). "Yes, I'm ok, sweetie." She rubbed his hand. "We can talk at the hotel. In private." She managed a smile.

Seb nodded but now he wasn't enjoying his food very much. Did something upset her? Did someone do something to her?!

The twins fell asleep on the way home because they were little babies who still needed naps, so Wanda and Seb carried them to the room they shared with Miz (the kids got their own room together while Wanda and Seb had a different one.) "Knock on our door if you need us." Wanda told Miz. "But don't spy on us!" Seb warned his sister with a pout. Miz giggled. "Sure whatevers~" She tucked the twins into bed and settled down for some good old fashioned Flickering to look up that man she saw. He had such a weird energy signature. Something she had never felt before. But she was sure he was very powerful. Ooh~ the literal devil? Lucifer himself? Oh my potato, she HAD to tell Blue about this! He'd find this hilarious!

It was still weird he was on Earth though. He was supposed to be ruling hell, wasn't he? Erm… which Lucifer was this? The one who just noped outta Hell for funsies… or the one who handed the keys over to Morpheus before he bounced? Eh… it was hard to tell. Curse you multiple timelines! Well, it didn’t matter in the end. Miz tilted her head as she leaned back in her chair. So he was the literal Devil. That was pretty neat. It meant there was a ‘God’ here? Well. Funny, since there was an Ax here too. And… from what she could tell… Ax was still higher. Hah! Well… it wasn’t all that important. The fact remained that the Devil was real and… he was really hot. Dammit!

Miz giggled and kicked her legs. Well… so long as she was here for this mini-vacation~ she might as well play around! She wondered if pranking the Devil would be considered an act of ‘Good’? She didn’t know this man, and she didn't fear him. So the idea of teasing him made her giggle with a bright blush. She couldn't help but wonder if he realized what she was…Or maybe if she caught the attention of that devilishly handsome man~? Miz laughed again. Ahhh~ she wanted to tease him! Her powers thrummed through her veins, rearing up eagerly. Something about that man stirred their appetite and they wanted to feast—metaphorically of course, Bill didn't really want to eat him. Really she didn't!

Miz pulled out her Com. Hm. She'd been so distracted she hadn't thought about trying this out. She DID edit Stan's phone. Maybe this would mean she could contact him much faster than through the Tumblr account. --Well, now was as good a time as any to try it!

She grinned and typed out a message. [Hey~ guess who I just maaaaaet~]

The literal Devil! Miz cackled at the thought. Lucifer in this world wasn't just another alias for Bill, how interesting!

---

In another dimensional set, Stan frowned as his phone buzzed in his pocket. The heck?

He looked down and frowned as he reached for his pocket.

"Problem?" his twin brother asked him, turning away from the stove.

Stan just grumbled as he pulled out his phone and tapped the thing unlocked.

Number he didn't recognize at first, then the name resolved (he had a slow, dumb "smart"phone, so sue him!) and he tried not to let his face change expression as he shoved it back into his pocket. (Shit. Now he was wishing he had actually added a better lock number thingy to his phone. He didn't use the damn thing that much!)

Stan shoved himself up, grumbling, and headed for his bedroom, trying not to twitch.

"Hm," said Ford Pines, watching his brother amble off.

Miz rolled onto her side, looking at her phone. Stan left her on [read] without responding! Hm… he might be busy. Or he was getting the phone to Bill? Then she got a message back, finally, and it read: [What do you want dragon lady. Busy here.]

[I just met someone interesting and wanted to tell brother. Thought he'd get a kick outta it] she typed back. Ok. So the synch worked! Good to know.

There was a very long delay -- almost three minutes! -- long enough that it had her wondering exactly how much time delay was happening on that end, and how much was actually her brother's Stanley Pines [Did you know what the kid was planning on doin after you left] was the next message that came on through. Miz paused. Oh. So that meant he succeeded. She thought about her response and wrote, [He wanted to keep the Agreement. Didn't realize certain things counted back when you first made it. So he had to fix that. And you couldn't know until he succeeded.] She hoped Stan wasn't too mad about that.

There was another long delay.

[So you want to talk to the kid right]
Well, I mainly just wanted to know if this text synch actually worked. I think my Tumbrs out of synch with your dimension again. Miz tilted her head. But I do miss chatting with brother.

Long pause again. I'll hand him my phone. Not using it much. There was a shorter pause. Gonna tell him that you don't know shit about operational security. That's penalty ONE middling pause [for keeping this shit from me]

Miz winced. Sorry then, [he asked me not to tell]

Don't care. You're getting at least two penalties for this

...that's fair] Miz grumbled. The next message took awhile, but when Miz read it she could see why. First ones for being shit at lying. Kid didn't tell my twin about you. Been keeping it under wraps. Almost saw your message on my phone in the kitchen. Bad planning Miz. Real bad] A shorter delay. Second ones for not telling me outright. You know better. I know you do. Shorter pause. [What would your sister say about that one huh]

...I wanted to. Once I realized it myself, at least. Took me a while to realize. I cant tell people apart that well. Was confused. But when I did figure it out I wanted to tell you. I did!] Miz bit her lip. A little bummed out now. Had to get cursed to keep my mouth shut at least that was broken now. That and the whole 'hitting' one. It wasn't as much of a problem on this side apparently.

Miz frowned when the next message came through not long after her send. Does your sister think it was the right thing to do keeping your mouth shut on this whole stupid thing

She consulted with the Zyun-Kei in her head. Was it a bad thing? Even if brother asked her to keep quiet? The mental Kei rolled their eyes and frowned. Ah. No. She's mad at me now. Miz sighed. Yeah I bet. Penalty two right there. You let her tell you everything stupid about what you did there Miz.] Longer pause. Too mad to think straight at you right now. Gonna hand you off to your brother before I chuck this thing out the window

Ok sorry again

There was a much longer pause this time. And finally, a response. Stanley is angry and says that you told him enough when he asked something non-specific that he could have figured it out. Miz received next. Doubtful. But he would have asked after other family members. Be more careful. A short pause. More reading. One minute.

Miz pouted. It was hard to lie when she really wanted to tell the truth. Well, she would wait. She rolled around the hotel bed. Hm... she wondered how she could prank the Devil next?

Miz waited for the count to hit 10 and the [Test ends. Delay count? Test send back?] before she tried typing back. 1 pause. 2 pause. Like this? She typed back. That counted right?

Probably enough. I'm monitoring it differently from my end.] Miz got back. I can read more from the timestamps. Have my system focused on the signals now. A short pause. Should I clone the module you added to Stanley's phone?

That might help. So I don't end up bothering Stan when I'm trying to reach you] Miz sighed. Probably should have done that to begin with. Also also! You won't believe who I just met over here in Seb's dimensional set!}
[Question first.] she received back. [What color is your hair?]

[It's currently black. I'm in my Miz form]

[And what color is my hair currently?] Miz raised an eyebrow at this. [Well the last time i saw you it was black and blue. I don't know about currently] did he change it?

There was a short pause. [Good enough. You should be you.] Another short pause. [You are safe in his set now?] Slight pause, then [Who did you meet?] and [Switch to <cipher writing?>] which left Miz blinking, not just because it took her a moment to switch decoding it using the Vigenere cipher she was used to using with her brother, but also because she realized his replies were coming in was faster than anyone human could physically type.

Just went to show how awesome her big brother was. (She only found out later that he'd just temporarily hooked up his cybersuit to read the input directly from his brain and put his own phone, with Stanley's little module from Miz attached to it, on full-silent in his pocket before returning Stanley's phone -- sans module, and with all text messages from Miz already wiped -- to Stan's own. All to avert any potential suspicion, as her brother went about his day as usual.)

[Well I just met Lucifer Morningstar! :D] she told him. [he's a person here. A demon but not a Demon. And he's cuuuuute]

Miz cackled. [its fiiiine~]

[Glasses first. Glasses.] was what she got back, which left her pouting. [Are they on yet? They'd better be on yet!]

[He's not here right now ] She pouted harder.

[Don't care.] She could nearly hear his frown through the phone. [<Glasses on now. MENTAL glasses on later.>] Pause. [But not Glasses. Just glasses. Yeesh. Stupid modern American English capitalization grammar rules.>]

Miz materialized the glasses, copied from the pair that Bill made. [<fine theyre on>] she blinked and adjusted their size and shape to something more fitting.

[<Good.>] Slight pause. [<I'm a 'person' here, too.>] he noted, which left Miz tilting her head at her phone a little bit and blinking again. [Yes? And that's fine too. But I just thought it was fun that apparently the abrahamic god exists here>]

[<nope>] she hadn't seen anything even close to it.

[<So the Abrahamic God is not a demon-from-the-Outside there, then. Interesting.>]

[<nope. In fact, from what I've been able to see, the Ax in this world was so lazy that he made God and Godesses to create the universe FOR him>] which was hilarious and incredibly irresponsible of him. [And also he has it easier because humans don't pray and bother him, but his Gods] Did that mean Lucy was Ax's grandson?!

A pause. [<Just the one universe? Dimension? Or all of them?>]
[there IS a multiverse of alternative dimensions. With another version of God for a couple of them. Not all. The rest seemed to be left to do as they want without input.]

Miz shrugged.

[Delegation is a thing.] her brother seemed to note. [Do the gods ever 'go bad'? Disobey orders?]

Miz thought about that. [well god apparently got so distracted with watching humans that he neglected his own wife and children. And when they complained about the lack of child support, he banished them to Hell. Not cool.]

[...Was that something the lazy lizard there wanted to have happen.] she read next, and Miz hummed at the flat affect the lack of question mark implied. [don't think so. He just left them to do their own thing.]

There was a longer pause. [Does Seb's lazy lizard talk?]

[yes. He's a dork.] Miz huffed.

[Ask.] [Don't assume.] what was she got next. [Never assume.] [That's how they GET you.] Then Miz huffed out a breath at the next [It may lie. Be careful.]

That part about the not assuming things was fair, though. [Ah ok. I can ask next time I bother him.]

Up above in the Space between Spaces, the AXOLOTl groaned and whimpered. Noooooo. It was bad enough Seb kept cursing his name and using it however he wanted and waking him up! (He should have followed a human religion and bothered Yahvé!) But this other Bill could actually get to where he was! Uuuuugh. He hated babysitting. But Miz's AXOLOTl kept pestering him for updates on how his precious daughter was doing while she was away and wouldn't leave him alone. . . .

[but I just wanted to tell you because I found it funny that the Lucifer in this world isn't just another Bill under an alias.]

[This is funny?] she received from him next.

[It's funny to me.] She insisted.

[Why?] was her brother's (presumably) mystified response, given the time it took him to send it to her.

[Because now I can't help but think god named his son after BILL.] Miz cackled as she laid on her back, holding her Com above her. [But anyway, he's cuuuute~ and I wanna mess with him.]

[The proper term is spawn, and 'Lucifer Morningstar' is two times removed from even being a part of the name of 'Bill Cipher.]

[You like to mess with cute godspawn that also have one of my names?] Another pause, then: [What does this messing involve?]

[This ISN'T another SQUIRMY thing, IS IT!?!?]

[....might be a squirmy thing. And it's more like i want to see him flustered. He's cute and being flustered is even cuter.]

[HM.] was her brother's reply. [I am less than enthusiastic about helping you with the flustering.] Oh good, brother understood why she'd messaged him in the first place -- for his help and ideas! [This sounds like a 'you will want to remove your glasses' sort of thing. Is this a 'you will want to remove your glasses sort of thing”?

Miz blushed. [<maaaaaaybe~?>] she scoffed. [<I just like embarrassing people. It’s fun. I untied his shoelaces earlier>]

[<He was wearing shoes with shoelaces?>] she got back from him. Miz rolled her eyes. [<Yeah. Is that important? He was in human-form and stuff. Human-ish. Not the same kinda of -ish as you are. Speaking of, i just realized what your human-ish form reminded me of. Like… do you know a lady named Eclipsa?>] that was something Miz had been wondering about.

[<Yes, I know an Eclipsa.>] she got back almost immediately. But there was an odd pause there, before he wrote back, [<And yes, I know what kind of human-ish I am. Don't write it over this here.>] Oh. He must not have realized why she was bringing it up right away. [<Was it really not that obvious?>] he asked her next. [<You can See things just fine?>]

Miz huffed. [<Well I hadn’t seen Eclipsa in person in… eons, from my point of veiw. I should go check up on her, my version of her. Also, is this one of those ‘don’t talk about it in case people are spying’ things?>]

[<Yes, operational security is a Thing.>] Slight pause. [<And I don't know if shoes with shoelaces are important over there, I've never been to Seb's 'set.>]

Miz would never really get the hang of that operational security thing. She didn’t think about that very often. Though… she probably should. Miz shivered at the memory of what happened at the supply store. That wasn’t the same thing, but it was still something she should have paid more attention to. It shouldn’t have happened. [<Well I think it’s important to know he doesn’t wear velcro shoes.>] the Devil in velcro… huh...

[<He was flustered because his shoes were untied?>] [<Not angry? Or upset? Or wondering who it was who did it?>]

Miz shrugged. [<He didn’t really react much beyond confusion. I think I need to step up my game>] Something more noticeable than untied shoelaces.

[<You really want to do this?>] A short pause  [<This is important to you?>]

Miz thought about it. The squirming feeling inside of her powers really, really wanted to mess with that man. [<I want to.>] she decided.

There was a long pause. Then… [<What things does this Lucifer like and dislike and love and hate and not care about at all?>] she got back from her brother. [<You need to study your subject, in order to plan and push and pull them all around effectively, to get the final response that you want. Learn the nature of the being, and then manipulate their 'nurture' by changing the environment. I've found that tends to work best, to avoid messy problems with free will or breaking other beings' minds.>]

Miz nodded. That was good advice. [<Well… he’s very vain and self centered. I can start from there and work my way up. Maybe messing with his clothes. Also. daddy issues. He’s got ALL the daddy issues.>] She briefly wondered if this was considered ‘bad advice’ in terms of being ‘bad influences’ but then shrugged. She wasn’t gonna hurt the Devil. Just… get his attention. She giggled, oh, why was she feeling so bubbly?

[<just teasing him- im not gonna hurt him- but like- i dunno. I just wanna mess with him>]
There was a long (thinking?) pause. [Teasing can hurt?]

Miz frowned at her phone. [Yes. Sometimes teasing can hurt. If you do it too hard, or you hit a point that hurts someone’s feelings, or make them think that you’re trying to actually hurt them, instead of just having harmless fun.]

[Hm. Flustered. Low-end uncertainty, plus slight warmth, no cold, leading to slow realization, then a dash of embarrassment, and maybe a high-end uncertain smile at the end, before settling out with no persistent long-term effects beyond the thought that ‘Miz has messed with me’ or ‘I have been messed with’. Zero panic, no potential that the ‘thing’ you have done might possibly be mistaken at any point for an attack of any kind.]

[that is a better way of putting it. yes.] Miz loved how her brother could analyze and put in words the situation so clearly.

[Shooting Star likes glitter. Glue glitter to all of his things when he is not looking. No glitter, then everything is glitter.] Slight pause. [The glue is important. Glitterbombs are an attack. Loose glitter is an attack.]

Miz made a slight face at that. She didn't really like glitter. [Maybe something less messy. I’m not shooting star.]

[Hm.] Another pause. [Does he like hugs?]

Miz cackled. [Zoe, Seb’s daughter, hugged his leg and he was so afraid of her! It was hilarious! I think he’s scared of kids.]

[Hm. Not that then. Scared is panic is on the ‘no’ list.] Another pause. [Do you have the list of things he like and dislike and love and hate and not care about at all?]

[Well he seems to like sexy stuff. I’m not sure if I wanna do stuff like that, but I can mess with his clothes.]

[Turn all his clothes a single color that he likes but does not ever wear.] was what she received from him next. [Or make them instantly three sizes too big. Or both.] Slight pause. [Gold or silver or bronze may be a good color. Most people like or do not mind but do not wear one of those.]

[I’m gonna untie his shoelaces a few more times to see if he notices. But I like the idea of changing his clothes. He has a lot.] She didn’t want to use the same things her brother suggested, she was gonna try out some others.

[Is he a snappy dresser?] she was immediately asked next. [Yes. Very fancy. Cares a lot about looking good] Miz nodded. Also, suits were sexy.

[Be careful.] her brother wrote to her next. [Making him not look good would be seen as an attack. Then you get ANGER, not only or just flustering.] Slight pause. [Replacing clothes would work better. New fashion choice is important; slightly off but not so far off that anyone else would notice is good. Current clothing needs to remain in sight, and otherwise clearly un-messed-]
Miz pouted. She kinda wanted to do that though. Just to see what happened. [Fine, I won’t make his clothes look bad.] she agreed.

[Alternately, swap the one shirt he is wearing with another shirt that he knows he owns that is clearly a different color or other-type of shirt and get everyone else to say that no, that was the color-or-type-of shirt he was wearing before, what is he talking about? And have them add a compliment on the shirt choice that he obviously did not make, for further ongoing and longer-continued flustering?]

Miz nodded, noting all this down. That one might be a little harder. [Well i think i have enough to begin this operation. In other news, how’re things going over there? Stan seemed mad] And wilted a little. She didn’t like Stanley being mad. Less so when he was mad at her.

[Stanley was more worried than mad.] her brother told her. [And also very mad. But he is more mad about things-with-me than mad about things-with-you.] she read from him. [Reminding him now is-and-was better than him thinking about you and this later.] Miz nodded. Right. Humans getting upset and then slowly getting over it after stewing a while should be a thing, right? So she hoped he would cool down by the time she went back to visit.

[Is that all the help that you wanted?] she received from him next.

[It was less help, and more that I missed you and wanted to talk to you again] Miz admitted. [are you doing ok? Are you eating okay? Sleeping okay? Has that Stanford tried to hurt you after finding out the truth?]

[I have missed you too.] her brother sent back after a moment. ['Okay' is a word that means everything and nothing. I am 'fine'. I am eating and sleeping when I am supposed to eat and sleep, as many times as I am supposed to do it. Stanford]

And Miz blinked as he realized that he’d stopped. There wasn’t even a period there. Did the connection cut off? She thought that might have been it.

[Stanford helped.] was what finally came through after a long time. [I did not expect that.]

Wow. What? [Seriously? Wow. that’s…. nice?]

[I was tired.] he sent to her. [And not thinking.] [I saw him, and he started ASKING QUESTIONS.] ...Okay? [ACTUAL QUESTIONS.] he sent her next, and it left Miz blinking all over again, because she wasn’t completely sure what her brother was trying to say… [I told him what I was going to do. Except not. Because I told him. Because I was tired, and it was a bad idea, so I was not going to do it. Except I told him about it.] Uh oh. That couldn’t be good. [And then Stanley was there.] Oh shi-- [And Sixer didn't tell him.] Wait, what? [Sixer helped instead. He talked Stanley into all the things.]

Miz nodded. [Ok. So he helped you hide it. And then you got Stanley’s twin back. And… the agreement is still going.]

[No.] Slight pause. [He DIDN’T help me hide anything. He told Stanley to come down to the basement WITH US and told him to WAIT. We all FELL ASLEEP first.] Another pause. [And then he told Stanley not to ask any questions! AND to give me all of my Weirdness, just for doing this one thing, so I could do all of everything I needed to do QUICKLY!]

[Oh. Well. at least you got Stan’s twin back. And stuff? And stan didn’t break the agreement?]
Miz felt like this was really complicated. But... it worked? Maybe?

[Yes, I got Stanley's 'Ford back. Yes, the agreement is now all fixed and not in any way broken.]

Another slight pause. [<'Ford is not as fun as I remember him being.>]
[<As he used to be. Not as fun as he used to be.>] Hmm~-. Had her brother just corrected himself? Or had he just tried to lie to her, there?

[<Huh. Being dead might do that to you.>] Miz shrugged. [<I think that could be it?>] There was a long pause. [<I think it is the almost taking liberties with my personal space.>] Slight pause. [<It is probably-almost-completely the almost taking liberties with my personal space. I have to share Stanley's house with him. It is ANNOYING. He is ALWAYS THERE.>]

[<Oh.>] Miz frowned heavily. Wait. [<Is he trying to FORCE himself on you?>] She growled.<[Tell him to back off. Tell Stan that it makes you uncomfortable!>]

[<He is NOT forcing himself on me.>] he wrote back. [<I KNOW how to show proper human body language for 'BACK OFF, YOU CAN'T EVEN APPROACH ME IN THE FIRST PLACE, I WILL CUT YOU!!' I'm not UNCOMFORTABLE, he's just ANNOYING.>] Split-second pause. [<It's STANLEY'S house, NOT HIS!>]

[<Unwanted advances can be both physical or verbal. He shouldn't be allowed to do that to you. Put Pine Tree and Shooting Star between you. Annoying you by being in your space is still harassment or something. That’s why humans have restraining orders!>] Miz wanted to go over there and whap that Ford, just to make him leave her brother alone.

[My personal space is THE HOUSE!>] he wrote back to her. [<I don't want to stay in the attic all of the time always! Or Stanley's room! He never just stays wherever and works, he always ANNOYS me with MORE QUESTIONS.>] Middling pause. [<I think not being in his mind whenever I wanted was a thing I did not 'appreciate' before now.>]

Miz paused. [<Ah. You don’t like him even being there. And he just keeps trying to pester you.>] okay that was a little harder. [<then... entice him to leave. He’s like the mini-Ford right? Distract him with something and get him to leave.>] she paused. [<Do you want me to come over and pull some of his attention off you?>]

[<GOOD.>] her brother wrote. A pause. [<I WILL get him to leave, that is the plan, it WILL work out, but I have to do it PROPERLY, so that it will WORK and he will STAY AWAY doing all of the OTHER things, yes.>] There was another pause. [<I'm WORKING on it. But I can't RUSH this! I WANT you to be able to come BACK!>]

Miz smiled at her Com fondly. [<I will wait. I want to come back too. Maybe I can set up some way to go back and forth to your Set more easily someday.>] The method she did with Seb probably wouldn’t work with Blue. He was... sensitive to any sort of mental changes. She wouldn’t ask that of him.

[<I don't want you to wait, but I will need to ask you to wait, because I want you to be able to come back for much longer with absolutely none of the problems. So I am asking you to wait. Please.>]
[<I will.>] Miz sighed. [<I love you.>] she told him, just to say it. She liked to remind him. Even if he already knew.

[<Good. I love you, too.>] There was a pause. [<Ford doesn't pester me, you know, that isn't the problem. He just won't stay away from me when I'm there. He always has to be doing some kind of thing, and he always wants me giving him all my attention when he's doing it. If he was just more like that Stanford>] ...oops. Did he just cut off again? [<I hate that I just started writing that.>]

Miz grumbled. [<Grass is greener or something. About 'Ford though, I think he likes you. But not enough to respect your feelings. Like Gideon with Mabel.>] Longer pause. [<He did do more of the smiling and look more excited, when I did the one age-up thing in front of Stanley and Sixer. And then made a really dumb face when I aged myself older than Stanley after that. And then didn't look as excited anymore when I went back to looking like I usually do again.>] Slight pause. [<I didn't think it was going to be much of a problem, though. He SHOULD have stopped paying attention to me, 'because female humans don't do 'his' kind of science'.>]

Miz glared. [<yeah i think he likes you. And not the good kind of like.>] so 'Ford liked older women? Ah… she had no right to judge, but… at least he wasn’t into teenagers? That was… good. [<Yeah, okay, so he’s kinda sexist? But still has an interest in you. Because you’re cool and amazing. That wouldn’t change whether you’re male or female.>] [<'Sexist' is a scale. I've Seen worse.>] Ooh, that came across as super-loaded somehow. [<Male would probably work better in theory, but my stupid human-ish body's brain chemistry is more touchy like that in practice. I don't want to do that again around 'Ford until I've had more practice at controlling it all so 'low in the body' like Stanley keeps wanting me to do.>] Slight pause. [<I was A LOT more smite-them-all for offending me when I was male human-ish before. It was DIFFICULT not to do all of the REALLY fun things.>] Slight pause. [<Or maybe that was the maybe-concussion. One of the two.>]

[<yeah testosterone can do that. Just… ignore him? And let Stan know that you don’t like the way ‘Ford is behaving around you?>] Miz couldn’t believe that Stanley would allow something like this to happen right in front of him.

[<Just ignoring him' means a thing that doesn't go well with either six-fingered Stanford. And it means two different things, one thing to each. 'Ignoring him’ entirely can be a mental attack. Agreement problem. --I'm WORKING on getting him GONE.>] [<Tell him yuo don’t like answering all his questions. And that he’s annoying you.>] Miz sighed.

[<Well, good luck on getting him gone.>] Things sounded like it sucked. [<Well if you ever need to rant and complain, I’m here to listen.>] Miz laid back down. quiet about it or to tell you about it?> Miz wondered if he could understand this point.

[<Tell me about it!>] he sent her immediately. [<Everything can be fixed! EVERYTHING. --I will help you!>] he sent to her, next. [<Unless it is a thing that is an operational security thing. Then wait until I am in my attic room in the house, to meet you at the picture on my door. Yes?>]...which meant in her Void of Doors, okay. (Not like it could mean anything else; the attic didn't actually have a door, only an opening from the floor up from the staircase.)

[<Well I’m okay right now. And I guess you’re fixing your thing too. But it would be nice to chat now and then.>] Miz glanced over at the twins, sleeping on their shared bed. [<I feel kinda bad sometimes that I can’t be with everyone I care about, all the time.>]

[<Chatting is fine. I don't NEED to complain.>] Slight pause. [Even if I want to sometimes -- it's FINE!] Another short pause. [<You can't be with everyone all at the same time. Space doesn't work that way. Not without breaking in all the BAD ways.>]

[<I guess… I just…>] Miz wasn’t even sure how to put it. [<I kinda want to be able to come and go without feeling bad for leaving someone behind just to be with someone else.>] Was that selfish? She always wondered about that. But she felt bad for having to leave Blue. And she felt bad for leaving Xanthar. And for leaving Zach-- wait. Uuh, Seb and Zoe and Wanda too. And just… everyone here who was her new family.

[<We have an infinite-forever. You can spend an infinity with one of us, and an infinity with another of us, and keep on doing that. I am trying not to be selfish.>] A pause. [<As long as the infinity doesn't go on forever as a larger infinity that isn't interwoven with all of the other infinities that are going on there forever, then it isn't a 'never see you again ever.' Yes?>]

[<Yeah you’re right. Thanks. That makes me feel better.>] Miz smiled, moving some pillows around and slumping over them. It was getting late. She really should go to sleep.

[<And I can come and visit you, too. If you want me to.>] was the thing that she received from her brother next.

[<That would be AMAZING! I can introduce you to Seb’s family-- and Zach and Zoe-- they> Miz was so excited at the idea, [<They’re my siblings now too! Since Wanda (seb’s wife) adopted me officially. And if they’re my siblings, they’re yours too>] She paused. [<If you want that. I’m not going to decide that for you.>]

There was a long pause. Long enough that Miz started to get a little worried.

[<I don't think that if we have other siblings, that they are automatically each other's siblings, too.>] she got back from him next. [<That’s fine>] she told him. [<That sort of thing is something only you can decide.>]

[<No, it isn't fine.>] she got back from him next, after a shorter, but still worrying, pause. [<Are you… okay?>] Miz asked, worried about how… sad his texts looked.

[<I am fine.>] she got back from him faster, closer to his usual speed. After a bit longer, she got back from him, [<I would like to meet your other new siblings? Who are this Zach and Zoe? Does Seb know them?>] Miz blinked, and she looked back at-- oh whoops! [<Or are Seb's family your siblings now, too?>] she read next, and she giggled as she realized how he might’ve gotten confused even further after rereading it. [And also your something-else, because Seb's wife also 'adopted you officially' as her… what?>] [<They’re Seb’s children.>] Miz smiled as she rolled off the bed and over to the twin’s bed to take a photo of them to send over. [<They call me big sister. And yeah, Seb’s family is my family now. I… kinda missed having a family. Like a human family. My shape family weren’t all that great aside from Will. But Wanda’s my new mommy. And she actually loves me and the twins. And she’s really nice>] Miz wasn’t sure if she explained this properly. [<But they’re my family in the way that Stanley would describe it, I think?>] She paused. [<So… technically, this makes Seb my dad, but he’s not my dad. He’s a me who is also me, so I still think of him as another older brother. Ax is still my dad.>]

There was one of those longer pauses again. Miz waited. [<Seb has HUMAN SPAWN!?! WHY?!?>]

Miz cackled. Yeah. She was surprised too! [<Yeah. He got together with a human woman and uh…. They were sort of an accident? But he has them now. And they’re wonderful. I bet they would love you. Zoe’s an agent of chaos in all the fun ways. And Zach’s such a sweet boy. Reminds me a lot of>] she stopped there. Something niggled at her. A thought at the edge of her senses. But she shrugged it off. [<Anyway, they’re really adorable>]

[<THAT IDIOT.>] she read from him next. [<Is ANYTHING over there even a LITTLE BIT FIXED???>]

Miz blinked. Well, that hadn't been what she’d been expecting her brother to say at all. [<Define fixed?>]

[<NOT going to end with HIM and ALL OF his SPAWN DYING HORRIBLY from something STUPID after all the STUPID THINGS HAPPENING TO THEM and NO REAL CHOICES for ANY of them EVER on ANYTHING. EVER.>] her brother wrote back to her, promptly. [<AS A START.>] Slight pause. [<AND NONE OF THEM COMING BACK LATER. SINGLE-LIFE, DUMB MEATBAG, NO-CHOICE-EVER BODIES.>]

Miz felt her heart thud in her chest. Ah… yeah… they were going to age and die and leave her and-- [<They… don’t want to be immortal…>] She’d asked. [<That’s… I think some people don’t want to live forever.>] Brother’s Stanley sure didn’t. But he’d been willing to do so, if it meant keeping an eye on Bill… if he really had to do so to make sure his family was safe.

[<Then you aren't EXPLAINING it PROPERLY.>] her brother wrote to her. [<And all of the things are still BROKEN.>] Miz felt her heart clench in her chest again, and then her brother wrote, [<They wouldn't THINK or FEEL like that if everything was PROPERLY FIXED.>]

[<But what if I changed things so that no one could age EVER and they lived on and on? What if I did that and… and they didn’t like it?>] What if they got mad at her?

[<NO.>] he wrote back to her. [<I TOLD you. The PROBLEM isn't DYING, it's STAYING DEAD.>]

[<So… should I make it so that reincarnations keep their memories? So they can come back?>]

[<YES!!>] she read from him next. Then: [<Did you See anything at all about how it works for all of the demons-from-the-Outside that are HERE, where I am?>] he asked her.

Ah that made much more sense. [<I could probably do that for reincarnations. It’s a mind thing, for their memories. Normally thier minds get reset during the soul cleansing that the AXOLOTL does, but I HAVE asked dad to lessen the intensitty of his cleaning. And if I had a direct hand in protecting their minds, that would help keep them intact.>]
<It isn't JUST the remembering, little sis.> he told her. <It's ALSO the CHOICE. Reincarnation doesn't LET you choose who and what you WANT to be NEXT. OR your STARTING location. AND you don't just get to STOP in the middle if you want without DYING ALL OVER AGAIN.>

<Well, I haven't seen much about those demons from the outside, but they're different.> Miz grumbled. <Normal reincarnation is kinda random. Ax can sort of choose where they end up, but that requires him to judge them and what their wants and desires are. But demons from the outside is different. Because when they die, they're not actually dead. From what I've Seen when I met your Ax and Saw everything> Miz shuddered. She was STILL picking through her memories of what she'd Seen up there.

<Yes.> he wrote to her. <And YES! But if you have to CATCH them to KEEP them from getting their Minds WIPED out of existence, you can GIVE them the choice THEN on ALL OF THE THINGS.>

<I can set up a system. Everyone who dies can be given a choice right after their death, for what they want in their next life. But if everyone asks to be born into a rich family or something, thing's are gonna get harder to handle, wouldn't it?>

<Yes!> Slight pause. <NO NO NO -- you're thinking TOO SMALL.> Miz could almost hear her brother's chittering sigh. <You let them choose EVERYTHING. AGE, SPECIES, RACE, LOCATION, 'starting gear' -- EVERYTHING. ALL OF IT. Yes?> he told her.

<What if there aren't any living families that match their specifications for what they want? This world isn't like yours. The Ax here is too lazy to spin up a new dimension that works for what they want.>

<They don't have to start out as some kind of CHILDLIKE SPAWN. They can start out ADULT. CHOOSE what they want their OWN BODIES to LOOK like, to BE like -- like your 'growing up' of your adult body, getting to choose all the extra curves and things, like I did for you then! WHY NOT? Did YOU like starting out as a small not-a-human triangle all over again? Or NOT getting to look like you wanted? --MOST living beings don't!>

Ah… Miz took a deep breath. <I didn't like being a baby. That sucked. But…they… kinda need to be born. That's… having people just die and come back as an adult would mess with the system. Too many new people. No histories. And starting gear isn’t gonna work the same. I could set them up to have a social security number or something, but the other humans would get all suspicious of these new people popping up from out of nowhere. Apparently people need 'histories' and 'background' and 'birth certificates' and stuff. Seb had to call up Rico to get my documents forged when he and Wanda adopted me.> She huffed. <I would have to set all of that up! And what if people want to come back with specifics? What if there weren't an job openings for what they wanted? And if everyone chose to come back rich, where is that money coming from?>

<That's why it's called FIXING IT, little sis. You make EVERYTHING like that for EVERYONE, and it's just the NEW NORMAL. EVERYONE does it, and EVERYONE GETS to do it, so NO-ONE even wants to TRY to make it that difficult for anyone else. --Unless there are SOME beings who WANT to do it that way, in which case you have a different dimension for all of them to go to!>

Miz whined. <that sounds so hard! It would take forever to work out all the issue and bugs and kinks and problems!> She slumped over onto her own bed. <Like, if no one chooses to be a farmer, who’s gonna grow the food? If no one wants to be a retail worker, who’s gonna man the shops? How will the economy work if everyone’s rich? Not that i want people to be poor, that fucking sucks, but like… who’s doing any of the jobs that keep a society running? The trash collectors, all the sanitation jobs?>

[<Make it so no one dies if they don't eat or drink. Set up stupid non-sentient non-sapient manufacturing machines to clone all of the things for you, if you REALLY want to make it a physical store with all the 'manning' and 'making', and there aren't enough beings who are wanting to do it. That's what setting up the automated system for you is for! Doing all of the things for you that you DON'T WANT to do, along with EVERYTHING ELSE for EVERYONE ELSE who has any of the things that they DON'T WANT to do EITHER.>]

Miz thought about it. This… would require scrapping the ENTIRE system and starting from scratch. [<Ok I might need to create a new dimension to do this in. Like, people die in this world and get reincarnated there into the new system and then eventually all souls will have moved from one to the other…>] she thought hard about it. [<I’m gonna have to ask the Ax here and my dad for feedback on the plausability of such a system. And probably ask a bunch of humans about whether they’d like for the implementation of such a system.>]

[<Yes!>] her brother told her. [<Porting those Minds and Souls that already exist is the EASIEST way to do it! And ASKING FIRST is good for not leaving anything out, if you aren't going to try and be ALL-KNOWING first. Systems need feedback to function properly!>] A slight pause. [<If I didn't have to FIX EVERYTHING ALL AT ONCE because of the demons, I'd do it EXACTLY LIKE THIS, TOO.>]

[<Probably gonna need to test run this. Alpha, Beta and all that. With frequent updates. Uwu that’s gonna take so much work!>] She got a headache just thinking about it. Then she thought of something else. [<What if I helped you? Like, maybe blocking the Demons off from your areas?>]

[<NO.>] he wrote quickly to her again. [<You DON'T UNDERSTAND. You DON'T know what it’s like out there. I'm NOT kicking them out! They>]

There was a long pause.

Miz paused. What exactly were these Demons from the Outside like? She'd never met one, but everything she heard about it was… awful.

[<It is HELL Outside, there.>] he wrote to her. [<Demons come HERE, to HAVE FUN. To ESCAPE. --If I DON'T fix everything all-at-once, take it ALL over and ALL away from the stupid lizard ALL-AT-ONCE, IMMEDIATELY -- I WON'T be able to KEEP them here! I WON'T RISK them getting STUCK THERE, ALL OVER AGAIN, FOREVER!!>]

Now she was curious about what the actual fuck the Outside was like. Could she get there? Could she see? [<Ok I don’t mess with the demons.>] she assured him. [<So… you want to save the Demons too?>] That… was something she hadn’t been expecting.

[<MESSING is fine, just NO BLOCKING them, little sis!>] he wrote to her. [<The STUPID LIZARD does enough of THAT already, and OF COURSE I WANT TO FIX ALL OF THE THINGS FOR ALL THE OTHER DEMONS TOO!!>] he wrote to her next, interestingly enough. [<Demons have Rules that need to be followed, too! And demons have it EVEN WORSE! Demons aren't allowed to even BREAK those Rules and have it STICK, let alone GET AWAY with it! It ISN'T FAIR for DEMONS here, EITHER! The STUPID lizard HATES them!!>] he told her. [<It isn't THEIR FAULT that the STUPID LIZARD set up EVERYTHING WRONG!>

Miz thought about it. So her brother wanted to save them too. [<...you’re a good person>] She told him finally. As awful as he was sometimes, in the way he treated people when he didn’t understand what they really wanted. He still… wanted to help the Demons. When anyone else probably would have shut them out of the Game altogether.

[<I am the BEST of the WORST!>] There was a slight pause. [<Just because it would be EASIER to kick them all out FOREVER, DOESN'T mean I'm going to do it. EASIER is NOT always BETTER.>] Slight pause. [<If I wanted to do THAT, I would have done THAT a LONG TIME AGO. And then there would be NO MORE DEMONS LEFT except for just and only ME around here.>] he wrote to her. [<You KNOW that, right?>]

[<Yeah, you’re skilled enough to do that. Okay. Got it. No blocking.>] Miz grinned. [<That sounds hard. But I’m willing to help if you need the power for it. If there’s one thing I’ve got, it’s energy. I’m getting better at using my powers with less leakage. More efficient. Living here in Seb’s dimension is good training.>] She was getting stronger. She could feel it. And… as much as that scared her, if she could be of use to someone...

[<Power isn't the problem, little sis, it's the omniscience. I have only ONE Eye. I'm… still working things out.>] Slight pause. [<Also, there is all of the intermediate over-fixing I will need to do in all of the places all across everyplace-forever. But also some certain places SPECIFICALLY. I… may TECHNICALLY still be working out all the math on everything, still. TECHNICALLY. --But I WILL get it ALL FIGURED OUT.>]

[<Well, I’ve got an Eye to help you out with whatever you’d need. And if things could be fixed like that… the way you’ve thought it up…>] She could See everything everywhere all at once. She just couldn’t process and understand it all. That was why she purposely limited her Eye to seeing only through certain things. But… if her brother needed that sort of thing, she would do it.

[<HM.>] Another pause. [<You DO do things differently than I do them. And if we DO end up working together on this, or other things -- HA! Like SEB’S ’set! -- then we should both spend a LITTLE more time PLANNING OUT how we’re going to be WORKING THINGS OUT, to avoid potential PROBLEMS where things might be LOST in TRANSLATION because of an ASSUMPTION.>] Slight pause. [<I didn't ASK you as much about that as I would have wanted to, with infinite time to kill from dead to even-deader.>] [<We could compare more notes on more specifics later?>]

Miz yawned. [<We should, yes. Later yes. My vessel with a dreamscape is getting sleepy.>] She shuffled herself under the covers, yawning again. [<need to talk about that. Figure stuff out>] She rubbed at her face. Wow. It was this late already?

[<I should probably eat another few things, and then go back up to my attic room again.>] Slight pause. [<I have NOT been biting your vessel-dolls. They are fine.>] Slight pause. [<Or clawing. there has been no biting or clawing of either of the vessel-dolls that are here.>]

Miz giggled. [<That’s good. Remind me to get you some other pillows to bite and claw the next time I’m there.>] She yawned so hard there were tears in her eyes.

[<AHA! I have SEVERAL now, though!>] her brother typed to her. [<shooting Star made them for me! But you can make more for me, too, I will accept them!>]

[<ah okay. Good night brother. I’m gonna go to sleep soon.>] Miz blinked slowly at her Com. There was so much running through her mind. All the things she learned, all the things she would have to do...

[<Good night, little sis. Quiet night and pleasing dreams.>]

[<kaaay~>] Miz typed out before placing her Com down and tucking her face into the pillow. It was nice to have chatted with him again. Even if it was just over text. Miz drifted off with a smile on her face.

Wanda was a very straightforward woman. So she didn't hesitate to tell her husband about the man she saw. "He was asking about Miz, Seb…"

Seb was rubbing his head. "The-The devil? But...He shouldn't exist...Human religions are supposed to be variations of adoring the Axolotl…"

"Well I saw him. He's hot, british and wears a suit!

"I guess the Devil does wear Prada…" Seb muttered to himself, but it only made Wanda more exasperated. "Seb!"

"I'm not sure it's all that important if he does exist. He is nothing but a lesser deity then." Seb, a human, waved a dismissive hand as he talked about a deity far more powerful than him. He didn’t care. He already knew the Axolotl was the most powerful existence. So what did it matter if other demons existed?

"He was too curious about Miz! What if...there's demon fights! Or-Or demon fights for territory and Miz is making him angry!"

"...Demons are not wolves, Wanda." Seb laughed. "I'm pretty sure there's nothing to worry about~" He purred. "Besides, Miz can protect herself if anything weird happens." He reassured her. "She’s powerful, she’s a being of pure energy. And more than that, she’s strong enough to tear her way through dimensions. You don't even know how difficult that is? But she literally does it in her sleep.” Seb nodded to himself. “If any demon picks a fight with her, she’ll kick their ass.” And probably eat them, now that Seb thought about it. Man, he was glad Miz was on their side.

Wanda relaxed into his arms at his words. He was right. Miz was strong. She looked like a kid, but she wasn't. "...It's still weird that the Devil is working with the police though."

"Hella. And he's been Linda's patient for a while now...I~ May have seen him when I was making sure she was ok~" Wanda hummed and cuddled against his chest. "Well, next time I see him I'll know what to do. Thanks."

"You're welcome. Now, can we sleep? I was not wearing appropriate shoes for sightseeing." Seb complained, which made Wanda laugh.

The next day, Chloe was very surprised to see Lucifer actually early for work. "Huh, did your dates not show up yesterday so you didn't oversleep for once?"

"No, we had a very fun night, but that's not the point. I came because I want to help with the case!"

"Really? You care about the case?" Chloe raised an eyebrow. Lucifer nodded and pointed at himself. "Yes. My case. Yours is pretty dumb and boring if I may say."
Lucifer was already ignoring her, he perked up when he saw the family of the hot lawyer appear and told Chloe “Bye~” before leaving. "Well, call me when your case turns more interesting!" Lucifer grinned before following the Friedmann family.

Lucifer calmly walked behind the man and the three kids. While that totally-not-human girl emanated supernatural energy from her body... The man and the little humans... also felt rather odd for humans. They were definitely human, but... there was something there, like a spark. So maybe talking to them would be easier than interrogating the very hot wife.

Before he could get closer though, he jumped back when his brother’s ANNOYING form appeared out of nowhere and pushed him aside. He might be wingless but he sure mixed with crowds!

"Urgh! Brother, I was in the middle of something! You couldn't choose to appear at some other moment?!” Lucifer poked Amenadiel’s head and groaned. "Great. I lost them!” He threw his hands in the air.

"Lucy, you told me about the demon you felt. And I came just as you asked.” The large angel frowned. He had been worried, okay?

"So, she does feel weird, doesn’t she?!” Lucifer smiled and Amenadiel sighed. "It is worse than I thought, Lucifer. I don't think that's one of your demons. That one doesn't feel like Mazikeen at all."

"I know! And that makes her even more exciting!” Lucifer practically bounced in place. He was a few billion years old, it was hard to find something new to discover. Oh, Earth was full of mysteries~. Amenadiel scowled. “Focus. She may be dangerous. She’s powerful.”

“She’s also in the form of a human child, and has a human family.” Lucifer waved him off. Amenadiel shook his head. “How do you know she isn't planning on killing and feasting on everyone here?” Lucifer frowned at that. Everyone here included the detective. That would be... unfortunate. Yeah.

Before the two angels (one angel and one fallen) could say anything more, Lucifer’s pants fell. His underwear too. He blinked at himself, confused about how that happened. His... belt was gone? But that didn’t explain his underwear... it almost felt like something had yanked his trousers and boxers to the floor. Amenadiel covered his eyes. “ARGH! LUCIFE--!”

Lucifer turned to look around the corner where the Friedmann family disappeared, not bothering to put his clothes on again and ignoring all the startled cries around the office as the other police officers noticed his state of undress. “Did she...”

Chloe stormed over. “Lucifer! What are you--” she was cut off when he held up a finger and pressed it to her lips. “Ah, ah, Detective. This was not my fault this time. I told you she was dangerous. This is CLEARLY an attack on my person!” He pouted at her. “I need you to arrest that creature for striking against me.”

Chloe blinked. Mentally processed this. Creature must refer to that girl from yesterday, Mrs. Friedmann’s daughter. That was what Lucifer called her. Then Chloe laughed in his face. “Wait, that little girl pants’d you?!” She cackled and shook her head. Well, if that girl was up for pranking that no-good smug bastard, she was all for it. “Just put your pants back on before I have you arrested for public indecency.” Chloe patted Lucifer’s shoulder and walked off, still laughing.

Lucifer, slowly pulling his pants on, stared at the detective with wide eyes. "But! Detective!” He whined. “She stole my belt! It is gone! Do you even know how expensive that was? It was a Versace!” Wasn’t the detective supposed to prevent hate crimes like this?!

Amenadiel walked up and stared at him once he was decently covered. Lucifer huffed and ran his hands over his clothes. "I hate to admit it, brother. But I think you're right. That demon girl IS dangerous!"

"So...you came to that conclusion...not because of the incredible amount of supernatural energy she has, or the potential danger she could pose to the helpless mortals... but because she stole your belt?" Amenadiel deadpanned. Was he serious?!

"No one messes with the Devil and gets away with it! And no one messes with my clothes if I can help it." He growled. Amenadiel paused and almost rolled his eyes. “I was going to tell you to stay away...but on further consideration, I’m going to let you handle this yourself.” It wasn't an attack, a real one, just clothes, so he thought Lucifer could manage it. And then he was gone. Lucifer pouted, holding his pants. “I need a new belt now…” He grumbled.

Lucifer was declaring war on that strange demon girl.

Miz couldn’t whistle. It was something she just never figured out how to do. The fact that she didn't have lips for most of her life might have been part of that. So instead, she hummed a cheerful tune as she twirled a belt in her hands.

"As funny as that was, Miz, you really shouldn't tempt the Devil. It may cause trouble." Seb smiled at her, trying to sound responsible and failing miserably.

"Oh come on~ What can he do~? Throw me back? I'm sure even you can fight him." Miz shrugged, examining the belt in her hands. It was really high quality. Huh.

"Hah, no thanks." Seb laughed sheepishly "Don't bring trouble to yourself. We don't want to worry Wanda, ok? She said he sounded interested in you."

Miz blushed and twirled a lock of hair. Oh wow! He was interested in her?! That just meant she wanted to mess with him even more! She pressed her hands to her face. Damn handsome men! Enticing her to tease them! The only downer was his lack of embarrassment to getting pants’d. Why, if she’d done that to Fordsie, he would have let out such an adorable cry!

….yeah, she might have a problem.

Miz shook her head. It wasn’t her fault that seeing cute guys (or girls) being flustered was so adorable! It’s half the reason she liked teasing or setting up HILARIOUS misunderstandings! Ooooh~ maybe she could do something like that! She wasn’t sure why, but her instincts were rearing up in interest about that man. It made her feel giddy. And giggly. And kinda hungry for some reason? Well, it wasn’t a bad feeling, made her a little light headed, but not in a bad way.

Seb pulled at the twins' leash, unaware of his spiritual sister's naughty thoughts. "Well, as long as you don't get in real trouble, I think that's ok. You have a dad who cares for you, wouldn't want him worried over you fighting some other demon." Seb reminded her with a gritted smile. Yeah, a dad Ax who loved her. He still felt weird when he thought about that.

"Ok~" Miz giggled as she skipped. "I'll make harmless pranks, Seb~" She covered her burning face. Ahhhh what was wrong with her?

"Are...Are you ok?!" Seb grimaced and poured some water on her hair, afraid she was going to
The water steamed off. Miz nodded. "Yeah, just...Thinking about what to do next~" Oh-what if she switched out his suit for a maid uniform! Yeeeees~! Or was that too noticeable? Maybe something more subtle...

Seb raised an eyebrow but shrugged it off. “Hey kids. Wanna go to an Aquarium today?”

“Yay! Fishies!” the twins and Miz cheered.

---

Lucifer was stalking his prey.

Well, not stalking.

Okay, no. Yes. He was definitely stalking her.

The little girl was with her ‘father’ and ‘siblings’ at the Aquarium. Lucifer got a call from Chloe about the on-going case, but he hit the ‘reject call’ button and ignored her. This was more important. He needed to know what this creature was. How it used its powers. What it wanted from him. Ask for his belt back.

Okay, scratch that last one. The Devil wouldn’t stoop so low as to ask for his belt back! He was going to take it back! Yeah! Lucifer saw the little family turn a corner past the jellyfish and he followed behind them.

At least… he thought he did.

Lucifer blinked.

The tank of jellyfish was in front of him. That… that was the corner he just went around. But…

Lucifer looked around in confusion. He was sure he went around that corner. It would have put the jellyfish behind him. But... he looked around. Then he went up to walk around the corner again. He blinked. The jellyfish were still in front of him, another corner just past their tank. Wait. He tried again, running up to the jellyfish tank and turning the corner around it. No. He... he was back here again!

Miz giggled as she heard the Devil’s annoyed scream in the distance. Yeah, spacial loops were fun. She wondered how long she should keep him there until she finally released him?

Lucifer Morningstar was not having a good time.

That creature was clearly messing with him! This was psychological attacks! Why, just earlier, he’d tripped because his shoelaces were untied again. And somehow, all his underwear were replaced with frilly panties! He liked them, but that wasn’t the point! And that was yesterday when he went home once he escaped the Aquarium! This morning, his suits had all become gold. Like... actual gold was woven into the fibers. That was also not that bad (in fact he rather liked them) but this was still clearly that creature messing with him!

He had recorded his jellyfish prison from yesterday and showed it to the Detective, but when he showed her, the video glitched and couldn't show how it repeated again and again! And she claimed he was making this up!
"Detective, I don't lie!" The Devil growled. "This is all true! She's torturing me! Why won't you do anything to help me?!!"

She raised an eyebrow slowly. “So… she’s… torturing you?”

“Yes! I don’t know how she did it, but she’s untied my shoelaces on three separate occasions just today!” He stressed. He tripped earlier while walking to the station! Chloe let out a, “Pffth!” which only made Lucifer whine more. “You’re not taking me seriously Detective! She’s even managed to get inside my house!”

Chloe looked skeptical about that. “How would she even know where you lived?” she thought of something else. Perhaps he was simply blaming his recent bouts of misfortune on the girl? "I’m very surprised you haven't claimed this is just some of your Dad’s or Mom’s deeds…”

Lucifer thought about it. "You're right. It must be my father!!"

"Why did I even…” Chloe groaned and went back to the photos she was checking through for the crime scene. It had the son's fingerprints but it was because he hugged his father. The victim was missing his jacket. That was quite odd. He had it on in the other photos taken from before his death. Where did it go...

"He must have sent this… this new version of a demon to torture me for disobeying him and his dumb Plan!" He gasped. "Torturing the torturer of sinners…” He whispered. “Ah huh.” Chloe grunted absently, circling something and flipping a few more photos. She was on the verge of figuring this out.

"Detective, I'm talking about my safety!" Lucifer snatched her photos away.

"Oh, come on, Lucifer!! She's like 13 years old!! Stop it! We haven't advanced anything with the case!” They already interviewed the victim’s children, except two who lived somewhere else. One was coming and the other hadn't visited in 10 years according to one of the victim’s daughters. They all had proven alibis and had no real reason to murder their father. They didn't even talk to him all that much.

"The murderer is Friedmann's client! Just write that down and be done with it. Lets focus on me now?"

Chloe snapped, grabbed her papers and walked away. "You're insufferable today! Go talk to Linda! I hope she kicks some sense into you!"

Lucifer watched her go with a sad look but the Detective had a point! Linda will hear him out and tell him what he wanted to hear! Lucifer got up to leave and as he opened the door, a bucket fell over him. It didn’t hurt, but a liquid was splashed all over him. He grimaced and wiped his face. The bucket was also mysteriously gone now.

"AARRGHHH!! This suit was new, you little shit!!" He raged at the ceiling.

Up in her hotel room, Miz rolled around on her bed, laughing. Ok, maybe this one was a little mean. But she would fix it. Later.

Lucifer noted that his suit was unharmed despite the strange liquid. He paused. Okay. That was… good? He brushed his hair back and huffed. At least that creature knew enough to not mess with his suit. Otherwise Lucifer would have had to track her down and throw her through a wall!

As he left the station, he didn’t notice the incredulous stares from all the other officers. His hair had turned a bright, garnish orange color.

"So we're visiting the therapist that helped you?" Miz asked as they walked over to the building. "Yup, it's been fun these past few days, but I can't postpone it anymore. Besides, maybe Linda knows someone who can help you." He ruffled her black hair with a comforting smile.

"Who's Linda?" Zach asked as he walked besides daddy and they all stopped in front of a building and got inside. "She's a super cool doctor that helped daddy when he used to be super scared all the time." Seb explained. "She is a doctor who helps by listening to you talk. If you ever want someone to talk to, tell us. We can find a nice doctor who'll listen to you."

The twins shrugged and they went to the office. "Are you sure she's free right now?" Miz felt a little bad about bursting inside. It was kinda rude. Interrupting people while they were working on something important, like helping people, was rude.

"I just checked. She seemed free! but I also want to surprise her!" Seb told her before pushing the door open. "HI LINDA!!!"

Linda was having a very hard time trying to keep this professional. But it was so, so hard~ Lucifer had all but kicked out her previous patient (luckily they were done). He was wearing a hoodie and hiding his hair. He looked so pissed but also...embarrassed. That was something she'd never seen in him.

"Doctor, I'm being bullied and I can't find the culprit to punish her!!" He sniffled.

"What's wrong, Lucifer?" She asked kindly. "Why do you think you're being bullied?"

He whimpered and took off his hoodie. Linda’s jaw dropped. "What did you do to your hair?!" A snort escaped her mouth before she could stop it. Oh god, he looked so funny!

“I didn’t! Th-that demon who tortures demons did this to me!!” Lucifer practically wailed. "I've spent hours washing it with different products and it doesn't come off! Maze is now mocking me and losing her respect is NOT a good idea!"

Linda covered her mouth. "So...Maze didn't do this?"

"No! But she would get along with the demon girl who did!!" Lucifer wailed.

"A demon girl?" Linda blinked. Another demon?

"She is clearly an updated demon sent by my father to torture me! It’s a low move part of his vile plan to force me to go back!!"

Linda managed not to laugh. “And… you think… this demon girl dyeing your hair… is part of some… what? Nefarious heavenly plan to make you go back to Hell?"

"My looks are everything! How will I LIVE if I don't look good?!" Lucifer stressed. No one will want to go to bed with him looking like an orange! Linda had to cover her mouth again. “I’m sure you’ll survive.”

Before Lucifer could respond, the door was thrown open, reminding Linda she needed better locks as everyone just burst in here as they wanted.

“HI LINDA!” A very familiar voice called out. Linda blinked, pleasantly surprised. Her anger at being interrupted even disappeared. “Sebastian!” She smiled. Ah, her sweet, darling Sebastian. Such a good boy. Even if he was a demon. Such a sweet little cinnamon roll! Nothing at all like the frustrating man-child she was stuck dealing with now. Even if Lucy was hot (and she slept with him a few times).

She was about to stand up to greet him properly when Lucifer shot to his feet, eyes red and snarling. “YOU!”

For a hot second, Linda thought he was talking about Sebastian. But then she noticed the children beside him. Were those Zoe and Zully?! They were so big!! And she also saw that Lucifer was pointing at the eldest, a little Asian girl. Said girl was grinning wide, a faint blush on her face. “Me!” She cheered.

Lucifer growled and raised a hand to throw her violently against a wall, the same way he dealt with most people who pissed him off. "MIZ!” Seb shouted as Linda screamed "LUCIFER!” Miz groaned as her back hit the wall. Wow...That hurt really nice… got that kink in her spine out. Her blush grew. “Well~ someone’s excited to see me~” She sang.

"THE FUCK!!" Seb growled as he turned to face the Devil face to face. With his own eye red, his hands burst into flames. "You seriously didn't just do that…” Seb growled. Linda’s eyes widened. Yeah, she knew Sebastian was a demon too, but this was the first time she’d seen proof.

Lucifer tried pushing Seb away to go after Miz, but Seb grabbed his wrist, making him let out a startled cry as the fire burnt him!, and pushed him back before throwing him back with his other raised hand. A...A human… He checked his arm. It was burnt...But the detective wasn't around….

Zach and Zoe were worriedly hugging Miz. “A-are you huwt?” Zach asked. Miz patted their heads. “Don’t worry. I’m fine. My vessels are a lot more durable than they appear.” She was more focused on making sure the protection around the twins and Seb would keep the Devil from touching them. From what she’d Seen about him, this Devil wasn’t quite the evil-incarnate that the Bible claimed he was. Like fuck, he wasn’t even as bad as her brother (Blue) was half the time! And… wasn’t that a little upsetting to think about. That her beloved older brother was just… a more malicious entity than the Biblical Devil. (Not that it’d stop her from loving him regardless. He was still a good person, sort of, in his own odd way.) She flicked her fingers and fixed Linda’s office wall.

Seb advanced towards Lucifer, but Linda began moving to stand between them. "OK YOU TWO! STOP!!" She had one hand on each man's chest. "Calm the FUCK down and tell me WHAT'S going on!!"
"So you're part of the demons, huh?!" Lucifer sneered at Seb. "You and that monstrous creature that has been tormenting me!" Demons with fire powers! Definitely dear Daddy's doing!

"Wait, that’s the demon that dyed your hair?!" Linda pointed at Miz with a grimace. The little girl waved back. “Hi! I’m Miz! I’m technically a dragon, but yeah, you can call me demon too if it makes you feel better~” She blushed with her hands pressed against her cheeks, wiggling back and forth. Linda made note of that.

"D-Dragon?" Lucifer gasped for air. He thought those were extinct. "Why has my Father sent you?! To torture me? To send me back to Hell?!

Miz scoffed. “No one sent me. I just like teasing you.” She gave him a sharp toothed grin. “Your hair looks adorable~”

Lucifer seethed but Linda raised an eyebrow. She glanced between the two. She had a theory. “Hello, ah… Miz, was it?” The girl(dragon?) turned to her. “Yup.”

“You… are you bullying Lucifer?” She asked. Miz shook her head. “I’m not bullying. I’m teasing. Bullying implies I’m hurting him.”

“You ARE hurting me!” Lucifer wailed. “My FEELINGS!”

"Aw~ Poor baby~" Seb sneered mockingly. Apparently, Seb lost any respect he had for him after he tried hurting Miz.

Lucifer clutched his hair. “You ruined my beautiful hair!”

Miz rolled her eyes and flicked her fingers. “There. You’re a brunette again.” A very cute brunette~

Lucifer tried pulling at his hair to get a look. It was all disheveled and curly but at least it was back to normal. Seb also blushed because Lucifer did look very handsome but he covered his feelings by crossing his arms.

Linda was in full analyzing mode. “Why are you teasing him?” She asked. Miz shrugged, wiggling in place. “Because he’s cute when he’s flustered.” The Devil’s eyes widened. What kind of reason was that?!

"Linda, why do you know these humans?" Lucifer grumbled. He rubbed his arm. It was already healing, but the fact that this human(?) even managed to hurt him was…worrying. He wasn't supposed to be hurt unless Chloe was around… "Sebastian was my client before you. So please stop glaring at each other."

"He hurt Miz!" Seb hissed. “I’m fine Seb.” Miz sighed. Yeah, maybe she should have blocked the hit. She was just too curious to know how strong the supposed ‘Devil’ was.

"Your demon pet started it!" Lucifer hissed back. So she was just bothering him… just because?! Not because of God's orders?! He wasn't sure if that was better or worse … especially when she kept glancing up at him and then looking away while wiggling back and forth. Linda glanced at Lucifer and then back at Miz. "Do you...Do you like Lucifer?" Miz's eyes widened (as well as Seb's and Lucifer's) and she crossed her arms. "N-No!!" she sputtered.

Lucifer stared incredulously at the dragon girl. "You've been torturing me nonstop...because you have a crush?! Like some school boy pulling a girl’s hair?!" She might as well ask him to have sex! (Though her human form seemed young and the thought creeped him out. If she found a different vessel, he’d be glad to help!) "You should have just told me~ It's no shame to like me~ I have that effect on women and most men~” He glanced at Sebastian who was trying to avert his eye.

Miz turned bright red. "I don't!" She squeaked. Eh?! Was this a crush?! Well… she WAS squirming all inside-- but th-that--! Oh shit. She had a crush on the Devil. Shit.

Sebastian and Lucifer shared a look before bursting out laughing. Miz only blushed harder as she heard the handsome man's laughter. It was so deep and Lucifer did it while grinning softly, while her brother just wheezed like a seal and leaned on his knees.

"Oh, oh, this is rich." Seb wiped a tear from his eye and looked at Lucifer. "Sorry for burning you, but you seem fine now. I don't want to be on the bad side of the Devil, so hi, I'm Sebastian Pines." He stretched a hand to shake.

"And I don't want to be on the bad side of a human who seems to be powerful enough to rival my own power so, Lucifer Morningstar, a pleasure." He chuckled and shook Seb's hand. "Though, I thought you were Friedmann."

"That's my wife's last name."

"You took your wife's last name? Not that there's something wrong with that. It actually surprises me you have the courage to do that." Lucifer looked down at the short man. He seemed to be even shorter than Dan. Hah. Stupid Dan.

"No, she didn't change her last name when we married." Seb shrugged. Lucifer raised an eyebrow. "Neat." Seb complimented his nice suit and soon enough the two were talking to each other in a friendly manner, as if they had known each other for years. Linda stared at the two, dumbfounded. That was...unexpected. Zoe went over to the two men and pulled mister's pants, making him jump back. "Is your name really Lucifer? My friend's mommy says the Devil is bad."

"Carol is bad." Seb grumbled. Lucifer laughed. "Ah~ let me guess? Christian?" Seb nodded. "She’s also a bitch. Made my son cry on his birthday." Seb ruffled Zach’s hair. Lucifer frowned. Ok. Murder and stuff was common sinner things, but making a child cry on their birthday? That was just low. He looked over at the ‘dragon-demon’ and found her still looking away and blushing. Oh. So she really did have a crush on him. Well, his charm was that potent. She also seemed really flustered at the idea of having a crush on him.

Then Lucifer blinked when she pulled out a pair of glasses from seemingly out of nowhere and put them on. "Can't believe Blue was right." She muttered, adjusting them.

"Well, Linda, I think my problem is solved!” Lucifer smiled at his therapist. "It's so nice talking to you, but now I think I'm leaving with my new friends and get them to know me better. That way Miss Miz will realize I'm a real catch but not really her type and stop bothering me. Can I invite you for a drink?” Lucifer pointed at Seb and the kids.

"...They're five.” Seb said.

"Well that’s a great time to start!” Lucifer grinned. Seb rolled his eye. “Yeah, no. No alcohol for the kids until they’re adults.” Miz raised her hand. Seb pushed her hand down. “Nope. You’re not allowed any either.”

“Actually, there’s something I wanted to ask you.” He told her. “And I’ll transfer over the money for it as well.” Linda blinked. “You don’t have to~”

needs a therapist.” The dragon looked up at him, odd look on her face. “Ah… I do, but is this really okay?”

“She’s helped me and apparently the Devil himself. If there’s anyone who might be able to handle you” Seb pointed out. Linda looked at the girl. “I’m not really meant for handling children.”

“Miz is several hundred billion years old.” Seb deadpanned. “She’s just... “ He trailed off. Okay yeah, it was kinda weird that Miz liked pretending to be a child. Especially if she was dating his brother, and wasn’t that just a really messed up thought? Wel, in another form at least. And she did seem a little different in her different forms. Every vessel had another name after all.

Linda stared at the ‘child’ with wide eyes. Even Lucifer had his jaw drop a little. This creature was older than him? Older than Existence itself? But it was his Father who created everything with mom unfortunately. How is that even possible!? There was nothing before them!

"She shows her childish side by being one. She's got other forms to do other things." Seb shuddered. "But her core issues remain the same. She… needs help. The way I did. And I don’t know who else I can trust with her." Seb pleaded. “I care about her. I want to help her get better.”

Linda hummed in thought. She looked at the curly man's face and sighed. How could she deny anything to that adorable cinnamon roll? "Very good. Let me talk to her a little bit, no-you don't have to pay me for this-

"Are you still accepting my offer for a drink?" Lucifer asked with a raised eyebrow which made Seb blush undesirely. "I wan’ lemonade!" Zoe told Mr. Lucifer innocently. Lucifer frowned. "...I can see what I can do, cub."

"Are you ok if I leave you here with Linda? You can just pop up whenever we are. Linda is the best." Seb grinned. Miz nodded with a smile. "Sure go to the Devil's lair, Seb. I'll catch up later. You'll like his house. It's very stylish."

"I knew you had invaded my home!" Lucifer cried offended.

While Linda and Miz talked, Seb gaped at the beautiful car Lucifer presented to his new friend and his human cubs...One of them had been trying to bite him for awhile now. He liked the audacity, but he'd appreciate not having human fluids on him...without his consent.

"Wow!" Zach rushed inside, standing on the white seats. Both demons winced hard at that and Seb forcefully sat him back down and buckled the two into their seats. Lucifer sat behind the wheel and looked back with a grin. "Ready?"

"Daddy, look!" Zoe found a nice red bra and put it over her head. Seb shrieked and Lucifer reached to grab it and throw it away. "Haha! Oops!"

"Hey, thinking this through, I think we're finEEEE!" Seb gripped to the seat for dear life while the happy toddlers squealed when Lucifer sped up. Wee! Like a rollercoaster!

Seb realized this Devil wasn't much 'causing evilness' and 'causing chaos' as much as he was a player. He owned a bar called the Lux (it was still empty as it was daytime, but he still covered his kids' eyes) and then they went up to the penthouse of the building. Much like Stan's house worked, the lift opened in the living room.

Sebastian let out a sigh of relief when he realized the place was clean from things 5 year olds couldn't see. "This was terrible."

His kids immediately took off their shoes and ran around wildly, climbing on the couches and jumping around.

"Oh nonono! Shoo! Shoo!" Lucifer waved them away, but Zach and Zoe shrieked with laughter and ran elsewhere. "Ugh. Human children. As reckless and rogue as real demons!" Lucifer hissed. He walked over to the bar and prepared himself and Seb something to drink.

Was this considered social pressure? If he didn't drink, the Devil would think he was a weakling and his earnt respect would fade away! If he had just half of that, he'll be fine.

"My lemonade!" Zoe demanded as she tried reaching the counter. "Me too! Me too!" Zach jumped up and down. Seb sat down, embarrassed at his kids' attitude as Lucifer grumbled. He got water, some ice, some lemons and sugar. What was the point of drinking anything if it didn't have delicious alcohol?

"Lucifer, the fuck is all this laughter?" A female voice grumbled annoyed as a woman dressed in sexy black clothes made her way towards them. Seb stared. Then he covered the twin’s eyes. They were too young for this shit. The woman stared down at the children. Then she glanced up at Lucifer. “You found more?” She raised an eyebrow.

Lucifer shrugged. “It’s a gift.” Mazikeen huffed. Right~

Zoe pulled Seb’s hand off her face and gasped at the cool lady. “Your clothes are AWESOME!” She squealed. The demon raised an eyebrow at the tiny child. Well, the other child was bearable, maybe even ‘enjoyable’ to be around. Perhaps these two would be entertaining as well.

“Hi! I’m Zoe! I like burning things!” The little human said. And it was at that moment that Mazikeen knew that they were going to get along great. “Hey, wanna see my knives?” She crouched in front of the little human with a smile. Zoe’s face lit up with glee and Seb just buried his face in his hands. This was a bad idea.

"Please no…” He hoped she didn't let her touch things that have been in people...in a different way.

"You have a cool scar! My brother has a cool scar on his head too!" Zoe pulled a very shy Zach towards her to show the lady his scar from when he fell. Zach blushed and tried returning to his dad, but he couldn't so he accepted he was going to go see some knives.

Lucifer grinned and put the glass in Seb's hand. "Here. You need this. Little humans are the most stressful things...So, tell me. How do you have powers?"

Linda took a deep breath when the door closed and she was left alone with this dragon-girl. “So, I suppose we should introduce ourselves. I’m Linda. I was Sebastian’s old therapist.”

“I know.” The creature that looked like a little girl told her, sitting down on the couch. “Linda Martin, Therapist, former phone sex operator. Married and recently divorced. Currently dating the eldest angel, Amenadiel…” She recited off. Linda’s eyes widened. “Wait, what?”

The girl grinned. "I'm Miz. But that's just the name I'm currently using." She leaned back to relax on the couch. "I'm Bill Cipher. I'm a shapeshifting demon god of Knowledge. Currently, I am a dragon." She grinned at Linda. "And I know too much."
Linda massaged her temples. "Alright. Okay. Where do we start?" She clarified with, "What's… if you know it, what's the problem?"

Miz looked down at her lap. "Well I was told that my issues, and talking about them, was the problem."

"..." Linda didn't know what to say to that. "Start at the beginning?"

Miz took a deep breath. "So it started when I died."

"...nd then Time Baby kept yelling at me, demanding me to kill my target. And I just wanted him to stop yelling…"

Linda had put down the clip board ages ago. Perhaps sometime after Miz admitted to eating her little brother. There was simply way too much here. 600 billion years worth of stuff, if her age was to be believed.

"...then there was Handsy…"

Linda had heard way too much. And she wasn't sure where or how to start dealing with something like this. "Abuse and trauma aren't easy topics." She rubbed her face. "You have a lot."

"Like, a hundred chapters worth." Miz grumbled. Linda nodded. "Right… this isn't something to be done in just one session, this isn't even something that can be done by me."

"I can teleport here. Distance isn't a problem." Miz told her. Linda sighed. "Well, addressing the things you brought up is one thing, but most of your concerns and worries over your trauma seem to be in how you want to stay in control of your powers." Linda sighed. "I know nothing of Magic. I don't know how I can help."

"I just don't want to be scared anymore." Miz said miserably. Linda looked on with sympathy. "Fear isn't something you can just get rid of." She thought about it. "And I'm not qualified to help you."

"Then…what do I do?" Miz whimpered. Linda took a deep breath, "I will ask around for other people I know who specifically deal with cases like yours. I will find you a therapist."

"We were actually hoping you'd help since you already know about demons." Miz sighed. Linda's mouth quirked into a grin. "Yes, well, that still doesn't make me qualified. But I will still try my best to help. You're a very sweet girl, if somewhat… lacking in morals. But I have to deal with Lucifer all the time, so…"

Besides…

"...and you could recontextualize your experiences. Even if you say you're a demon god, it wouldn't mean you're blowing your cover, so to speak." Normal people wouldn't believe it after all.

Miz nodded slowly. "O-okay… I guess… what should I do for now?"

Linda sighed. "I can't make you do anything. From what I've heard so far, you're suffering from a lot of guilt. I can't make you forgive yourself. That's something only you can do."

"But I… I can't..." Miz struggled. "I can't apologize to the dead. All the people I killed won't ever be able to forgive me. So how could I forgive myself?"
"They're dead. They can't forgive you, you need to do that yourself." Linda repeated. Miz shrank in on herself. "What if I can't? What if I deserve this?"

"You don't."

"You don't know that!" Miz hissed. "I'm awful and a m-monster and a murderer and I keep hurting people and I don't know how to stop!"

"Miz." Linda said gently. When the distressed girl looked over at her, Linda gave her a soft smile. "The fact that you worry about this is proof enough that you're not a monster. You're just a girl-er… demon god, who made a lot of bad decisions in life that you regret. And we've all done things like that. Making mistakes and wanting to fix them just makes you human, well, not human, but you get what I mean, right?"

Miz nodded slowly.

"But you care about people. And you love Sebastian, don't you? You love the twins. You love Wanda."

"...yeah…"

"If you can love them, then you're capable of loving yourself. And that means learning to forgive yourself for your mistakes."

"And if I keep making those mistakes? If I never learn from them?" Miz asked.

"Then you just keep on trying. Because you'll never be perfect, no one is. We're all just works in progress. And that's okay."

Linda laughed. "The fact that you're willing to try to change is already a good sign." She smiled at Miz. "It's ok to mess up. That doesn't make you a monster. Now, I'm going to ask around with my colleagues to find someone who's qualified to help you."

"Okay…" Miz got up and thanked Linda again before leaving. She wasn't sure what to think.

"Luuucifer, stop it." Seb grumbled as the man insisted on him finishing his glass. "I can't believe you're rejecting my drink." The devil pouted.

"I still need to watch my kids. And I ain't leaving them with your knife demon...no offense." Seb turned to look at his twins, learning from Maze how to hold the knife properly before throwing it into the wall.

Wanda would murder him if she found out.

"Give me water." He demanded. Lucifer rolled his eyes at the one eyed human and threw it at him. "So, you were telling me about your very interesting set of powers~"

Knowing who you were dealing with was very important after all. Better keep it a friend than foe.

"You know Bill Cipher?"

Lucifer nodded slowly. The name made noise to him. "You said you were him...in another life. Hah, how is that possible, souls aren't recycled." He grinned.
"Oh sure they are, well, for the most part. Mine was some sort of second chance/ punishment from the Axolotl, you know, cute guy, can be a dick, God of space, creates everything?"

"...I can assure you my father doesn't look like a salamander." Lucifer deadpanned, which made Seb laugh. "The Axolotl is not your father! Duh!! for all I know, the Axolotl created your parents, who created you." Seb hummed. "Which means Ax is more like your grandpa than anything."

(In the space between spaces, Ax covered his eyes, almost in shame. Sebastian HAD to draw weirdness and the supernatural towards him, didn't he?? He hoped this wouldn't cause a problem with Yahvé and the other gods… he made them just to do his job for him, he didn't want to deal with this… he had several dimensions to oversee already!)

Lucifer blinked before gritting his teeth. "You mean...My father was created, there's someone above him who I was never told about!! He lied!! Again!!"

Seb winced. "Yeah, apparently. Sucks. But don't get too worked up. Ax wouldn't be a good grandpa anyway."

(Hey!)

"Dads suck either way." Seb shrugged and drank his water.

"Your dad is a bitch too?" Lucifer grumbled as he took a shot of his drink.

"Yeah...He hated me growing up. Beat me up. Lots of trauma. I had to go talk to Linda about it." Seb sighed. "I wanted him to die for years...but now I'm just...at peace with it? Not at peace, but I don't see him and he doesn't see me, so I'm ok with that.."

Lucifer snorted. “Yeah, haven’t seen my father in ages.” He took another shot. “And good riddance.”

The two fist bumped.

---

“My client’s not the murderer.” Wanda said plainly. Everything she’d found out about this case pointed toward that. Detective Decker glanced down at her evidence folders. “You might be right.”

She pulled the papers back into a folder. "This doesn't make any sense. He’s still our only main suspect. Everyone else has an alibi. But your client's potential motives don't fit with the rage of the homicide...Besides, look at this. His jacket went missing. Why would it? Your client doesn't have it. We made sure of it."

The two blonde women sighed and leaned on the table. Wanda looked around. "Isn't Lucifer supposed to be here?"

"Well, yeah, he's supposed to be." Chloe rolled her eyes. "But he is very apprehensive of your older daughter. He believes she's torturing him or something and doesn't want to come...I'm sorry, he usually behaves better...and he's very helpful when he wants to be. I'll call him."

Wanda blinked before groaning. Oh Miz was so grounded. Pranking the Devil wasn't a very intelligent idea. At all.

"Lucifer? I need you."
"Oh? You need me, detective~?"

"Urgh! For the case!" Chloe sent Wanda an exasperated look and she nodded solemnly. Men.

"Well, I'm sorry, Detective, I don't like this case. I'm bonding with my friends! And you just interrupted a very good piano duet! Sebastian's quite skilled! Almost like me!"

"Hah! You'd wish you were like me!" Seb's voice was heard on the phone. "Seb, where are the twins and Miz?!

"Oh your human cubs are well watched, dear~" Lucifer purred on the phone. "And your demon girl and I are at peace now. She is eating all my food though and-nononono! Little girl! Hands off my piano!!"

"Wan' play too! I can play it very well!" Zoe squealed over the speakers.

Chloe frowned at her phone before hanging up. Looks like those two curly brown haired men were having a blast, leaving them to solve the case on their own. She groaned into her palms. Should she be worried for poor Wanda's husband being pulled into Lucifer's orbit? Well, despite the way he acted, Lucifer was gentle with children (she'd even say scared of them), so at least the kids would be ok.

"Well. We better get to the bottom of this." Chloe didn't usually work with anyone else, but Wanda was here and Lucifer was not. The detective was allowed to work together with the lawyers for cases, so why not? The two women headed out to begin questioning all the people involved.

First off, they had to know more about that jacket. It was taken, why? Was it significant? If so, then who in the victim's social circle was it significant to? That would help them pin down a real suspect.

They questioned one of the victim's children about their father's jacket. "Oh, my youngest brother Hayden gave dad that jacket for his birthday years ago."

"And where is Hayden?" Chloe asked. The woman shrugged. "I haven't talked to him in years. He doesn't want to speak to any of us. He only responded to my email about dad to say he was coming, nothing about how he was doing or asking how I was doing."

That was suspicious, but it didn't mean anything on it's own.

"Estranged relationship. Did something happen between him and his family?" Wanda wondered.

The two questioned a few other people before resolving to wait for Hayden to arrive in town.

"You know… I could just tell you who did it, how and why." Miz pointed out that evening when Wanda got back to the hotel. Wanda sighed. "While that would be helpful, I need solid evidence. Can't tell the court that my daughter just 'knows' stuff." She brushed Miz's hair as she sat on her lap. "But if I get stuck, I would appreciate a hint."

Then Wanda turned to address the other issue. "Why're you here?" She deadpanned at Lucifer. The Devil scoffed. "I am merely gifting you all with my presence...Could gift you even more than that, dear~"

"You do know she's my wife? Right?" Seb growled at him. Lucifer waved a hand lightly. "Oh, don't get jealous, Sebastian, you're invited too, the more the merrier." The Devil grinned when the couple blushed and covered their faces. Funny how despite their obvious desires, neither have accepted yet. Must be a very strong compromise they got there. Huh.

He watched the way Miz cuddled in Wanda's lap, purring. "Is that creature your child or your pet?"

"Funny, I was gonna ask if you were the Devil or a stuffed animal." Wanda shot back, a bit snappier than necessary. Lucifer, tied up with ribbons from Zoe and Zach playing dress up with him, raised an eyebrow. "Touche."

"Ask the 2nd brother about what he was doing the night of the murder. And when the youngest gets here, ask him where he was living." Miz commented as she slipped in and out of a light doze, relaxed in Wanda's arms.

"Mr. Devil man." Zach pulled the man's pants.

"Call me Lucifer." Lucifer glanced down at the twin with brown eyes. "Kay. Mr. Lucifer, you live in Hell, no?" Zach asked.

Wanda rubbed the bridge of her nose. "Zach…"

"No, I live in Los Angeles, boy. In the penthouse where you painted the walls." Lucifer hissed.

Zach hummed. "The-the devil is a meanie, no? Because he makes people do bad things, like the man from the very big storybook."

"Zachary, I already told you to ignore what Carol and her church said!" Seb groaned. He glanced at Lucifer who was staring at the toddler intensely.

"I made meanie things because my father forced me to. He's the one to blame, not me. I punish bad kids, but He wishes for bad things to happen." Lucifer waved his hands to get freed from the ribbons. You think I'm bad?" His eyes turned red, and to his surprise, Zach giggled.

"I can do that too!" His eyes turned blue and then red, making Lucifer jump back a little. "I think you're nice and you played with us...So...because you're nice, Zoe wanted me to ask you if she could keep this." The kid pulled out a little statue, making his parents frown. When did she grab it?!

At least she didn't grab anything else…

Lucifer laughed. So all this was to get a favor huh? "Well, your little hands already touched it so yeah. Keep it and your germs away. I didn't like it anyway." They heard Zoe's happy squeal from behind the door frame.

Wanda massaged her temples. God damn why…

--.--

The next morning, Chloe was surprised to see not only Lucifer, but Wanda and Sebastian. "We're back on the case, detective!" Lucifer guided Seb inside as his assistant, as he did with Candy when he married her, and Wanda sent Chloe an apologetic look. "The creature told us we must interview the youngest and 2nd brother. One of them must be the culprit and I must punish them! Maybe Wanda's client is innocent after all. This is not for money, this is about vengeance against a horrible father!"
"You said it!" Seb exclaimed.

Chloe nodded. "Right...Well, I came to that same conclusion..." She moved away from the computer. "The 2nd brother told us he was at home watching TV when it happened, a cooking show, but that day, that channel wasn’t transmitting it."

"Pfft. Cook kings are only on Wednesdays at 5pm! What an idiot." Seb mumbled. Chloe nodded.

"So he lied about his alibi. But we have nothing else on him definitively. Right. And the youngest brother Hayden, we couldn't contact him for days and none of the siblings say they saw him, but we made a deeper investigation and found out he bought tickets here a few days before the murder."

Wanda nodded slowly. "Right. So maybe the brother whose alibi doesn’t match...He could have seen his brother. And lied to protect him." Seb winced. Yeah, if any of his brothers killed anyone, he’d probably lie to protect them too. They all agreed to go and interview the brothers, dig at the alibi and family situation.

Lucifer and Chloe went off together to talk with the 2nd brother again.

“So, you and Wanda’s daughter made peace on your prank war?” Chloe couldn’t help but tease. Lucifer groaned. “Well, apparently, she has a crush on me. My Charm pulled her in.” He grumbled. “Which is flattering, but she just isn’t... well, she looks like a child.” Lucifer sighed. Chloe stared at him. “Well.” She breathed. “At least you have standards. You have turned her down and explained to her that you can’t, right?”

Lucifer shrugged. “I’ve told her that her current body is much too young for me.” Chloe’s jaw dropped. “Lucifer! She’s like 13!”

“It’s not a game , detective.” He groaned. Chloe clearly didn’t believe him. They got to where the 2nd brother, Leonard, was at his workplace. “Well enough about that little monster. We have a man to interrogate.”

“So, you found the proof you needed?” Wanda asked once they met back up in the middle of the police station.

“Yeah.” Chloe grinned. "Your client told us he only knew what happened because he was called. When he arrived, the police arrived at the same time as Leonard. So WHO called the police if Leonard was supposedly at home watching the cooking show that wasn't even airing? How did he know?"

"We got the information right out of his dirty, liar mouth~" Lucifer grinned and rubbed his palms. Oh, the man simply broke down in tears! Seb hummed. "Well? What IS it? How’d it all happen?"

"Oh, he tried framing dear Wanda's client~ His dear old abusive pops was dead so he had to make it so that someone else did it. He called the police and appeared after it, touching his body to justify his old fingerprints."

"So HE was the murderer?"
Chloe shook her head as she headed to her car. "No. It was the youngest brother, Hayden. There was Leonard's blood on the body because he said he had a cut…or he didn't. Hayden and Leonard are identical twins."

Seb winced even harder. He did what he did…Like when he used his own blood to fake Ford's death…

"We couldn't have known. We didn't even have any criminal record of Hayden or Leonard and he kept calling him youngest brother." She called a group of police officers to follow her as Wanda, Seb, and Lucifer walked beside her.

Chloe addressed the officers. "Hayden is hiding at Leonard's home, I already shared the address with you. Let's go."

Seb looked at Chloe. "Leonard will go to prison? He didn't murder him...He was just trying to…" He felt silent. He felt bad for that man. Wanda rubbed his shoulder. "He covered for a murder, Sebas."

"And the jacket?" Wanda called.

"Let's go find out." Chloe called back. "Thank you so much for your help, but don't come in, it might be dangerous." She smiled before dragging Lucifer with her.

When they were out of sight, Seb blinked at Wanda. "I wanna see what happened." Wanda groaned. "Let the police do their thing. Don’t interfere."

“I’m not gonna. I just wanna see what happened~” But Wanda made him sit down in one of the chairs in the police station. "Please, Sebastian. Have some self preservation. If not for you, for me."

"He covered for a murder, Sebas."

"And the jacket?" Wanda called.

"Let's go find out." Chloe called back. "Thank you so much for your help, but don't come in, it might be dangerous." She smiled before dragging Lucifer with her.

When they were out of sight, Seb blinked at Wanda. "I wanna see what happened." Wanda groaned. “Let the police do their thing. Don’t interfere.”

“…Did he just leave to see an arrest happen?!“ She screeched. Miz, Zach and Zoe made an appearance. They were moaning. "Mom! Daaaa! You said we'd go to Disneyland! We're so bored at the hotel!" Zoe threw herself to the floor. Some officers stepped around her, looking bemused.

Miz groaned. "Did you find out Hayden is the murderer already? Oops~"

Wanda smiled and nodded. "Yup. The police will handle it from here." She patted Miz’s head. “Thanks for the tip.”

"So we can go eat something and go to Disney?!” Zach gasped, squeezing his cheeks.

Wanda nodded. "Yeah, let me just talk to my client, handle a few things and were free to go. Seb can you--" She stopped when she found her husband was gone. "...Did he just leave to see an arrest happen?!" She screeched. Miz clicked her tongue. “Yeeeeeh~? Did you think he wouldn’t? Mom. You know your husband.” Miz said, sounding a bit accusative.

“Uuuuurrggghhhhhhh!" Wanda groaned. “Don’t worry. No lethal harm will happen to him, the spell will protect him anyway.” Miz assured her. “My brother might be kinda stupid sometimes. But he isn't an idiot.” Wanda sighed and sat back down. “Well he’s going to be in so much trouble when he comes back.”

Miz pouted. “I kinda wanna see what’s going on too.” Wanda ruffled her hair. “Nooooo~ you and Seb are both going to be grounded if you try that.” Miz whined. “Noooo~”

The twins pouted. Does this mean they weren't going to Disney??
Seb hummed a spy movie theme as he snuck around the house. It was relatively easy to find them. He only saw where they were. It did feel a little harder than normal, the black nothingness from opening his Eye took longer to clear up. He really needed to go back to practicing again, especially when his yellow eye always channeled his powers much easier. With the cursed thing gone, it was only his normal eye doing all the work. And he hadn’t really been keeping it up. Seb didn’t want to lose his powers because of disuse. Burning through the energy at the gym was one thing, but actually USING his powers… well… he’d gotten rusty.

He hid as the police, Chloe and Lucifer barged into the house. Hayden was inside, curled up behind a sofa with his hands in his disheveled blond hair, rocking back and forth. "GO AWAY!"
The young man screamed.

"Hayden Macrame, please come with us. We have some questions for you."

"No! Leave me alone! This-This is brother's house! Get out!"

"Your dear brother was arrested because of you." Lucifer taunted. "Trying to patch up your mistakes. Killing the old man wasn't really a good idea. Now he’s the one who’s going to prison because of your actions~"

Hayden slowly came out from behind the sofa, and the officers raised their guns seeing him armed. "You-You don't understand!! It's his-his fault!! He forced me to! I-I couldn't take it!" He cried, hands shaking as he clutched his gun.

"Who forced you?" Chloe asked and Seb felt he was watching some criminal series.

"H-Him! My-My father!! He-He always hurt me! He hated me since the day I was born!!" Hayden shouted with tears in his eyes. He was trembling so hard the gun shook.

Seb flinched.

"You don't know what it's like to live with that kind of monster!! He abused me!!" Hayden cried harder. "I-I had to do something! I couldn't sleep!!"

"Please drop the gun." Chloe told him calmly.

"I tried being good all my life! I l-le-let him touch and use me all the time as a kid! I even tried making up for him now! I don't have anything because of him!!" The man truly looked messed up. "I even bought him a jacket! With-with the little money I had! But he didn't even thank me! He just insulted me for not giving him an-anything better! I-I couldn't take it anymore! I wouldn't have been able to sleep knowing he was still ALIVE!!"

Seb was trembling almost as much as Hayden was.

"Please, Hayden, we can talk about this somewhere calmer, put the gun down." Chloe said softly, as if talking to a child. "What happened to you was awful, but it’s not too late. Please."

"I want my brother. Leo is the only one who cares about me!" He put his hands on his head again. Chloe tried approaching but he quickly pointed at her with the gun. "I-I'm sorry, I didn't want to get him in trouble. He called me to live with him! Paid for me to come here! But he found me! He found me shooting him! He-I didn't want him to get hurt!! I'm sorry!!"

Hayden pointed the gun at his temple as he trembled and gasped for air.

The officers lowered their guns and went alert. Even Lucifer was frowning. "Don't do that, Hayden.”

“I—I can’t can’t--” The man had his finger on the trigger, “—I---Leo… I’m sorry…”

BANG!

Chloe gasped. Lucifer’s eyes went wide.

Hayden didn’t fall to the floor. Instead he stared at the bullet floating just next to his temple with a faint yellow glow.

The gun flew out of Hayden's hand. Chloe quickly ran over to handcuff him. She didn’t know what just happened, but he wasn’t dead so she was just counting her blessings.

The police escorted Hayden into a car while Lucifer met Sebastian at the back of the house. He hissed. "You could have gotten killed!"

"So do you. If the fact that the detective makes you weak is true." Seb shot back at the tall, beautiful, sexy man. He glanced at the place where the police's lights were glowing. "It-it's not fair...His father should be the one arrested."

Lucifer hummed. "He'll get the punishment he deserves, don't worry."

"I...I might have ended up like him...If I hadn't had help..." Seb managed to move on with his life, got help, support. Hayden didn’t. "That bastard wasn't worth ruining his life for..." Seb muttered moodily. The Axolotl might be an ass, but he did somehow manage to keep Seb from ending up like that...Filbrick beat him up, but he didn't... even Filbrick had never touched him.

And Hayden just kept trying to get his approval. It was so sad.

Just like Filbrick wasn't worth getting angry for. He was his past. Seb didn't have to ruin his own life because of him.

Lucifer made a humming sound. Yes. That was something to think about. His Father wasn't worth it. He shouldn't give him the pleasure to see him even react to him or think about him. Lucifer kept telling himself that. Self denial was how it worked.

Seb asked Lucifer to please take him back to Wanda before she got even more mad. "I know you can fly, you moron." He complained when Lucy said he didn't bring his car.

"Maybe ask the Detective~" Lucifer shrugged it off.

"But then she'd know I came!" Seb wailed.

“That sounds like it would be your problem, not mine.” Lucifer grinned.

"You're mean!!"

"I'm the Devil, dear."

"But you don't have to be mean!"

Eventually Chloe found out because the two curly haired men started shouting and arguing. She called her former companion for this case and told Wanda that she had her husband. She sat Seb and Lucy in the backseat of the police car. The two were nudging each other like children.

The trip back to the station was a test of Chloe’s patience. “I swear if you two don’t shut up I’m TURNING THIS CAR AROUND!”

"No!! Detective~~" They complained. Those two were IDENTICAL. Chloe had to bear with Lucifer at work, but Wanda was married to Sebastian! Goddam. She must really love him to put up with this...Well, it wasn't like she disliked Lucifer's presence! She-So she actually loved it quite a lot! But he was so insufferable sometimes!

Chloe blushed a little.

She was glad Lucifer didn’t notice. Smug bastard would never let her live it down.

---

“Thank you for all your help.” Chloe shook hands with Wanda. The Pines-Friedmann were leaving Los Angeles.

"Thank you for your hard work." Wanda complimented. "You are a great Detective. And trust me. I have seen quite a few." The two blonde women hugged.

"I'm still confused why Lucifer invited you all to my house." Chloe glanced over at him.

"It's to say goodbye to them! And look at your cub! She's happy with the tinier cubs." Lucifer waved at the twins and Chloe's daughter, Trixie, playing with some dolls. Trixie was older than them, but wouldn't miss a chance for a tea party. Besides, she could do a campaign from now so they'd vote for her as president of Mars.

"Mom! Can't they stay?" "Please!" Zach pouted and glanced at the girl with a small blush. Miz shook her head. "Nope. We gotta go back remember? We have to meet with everyone in Uncle Stan's house for the summer~" She was still wearing the glasses. Damn Lucifer and his sexy, sexy ass.

"Awww…" The twins whined. Trixie pouted too. “We can stay in touch though. Your sister Miz has an email right? Or a phone? Mommy won’t let me have a phone yet, but I know her number.” Trixie told them. The twins (and Miz) grinned at that.

"Thanks for putting up with us." Seb grinned at Chloe who rolled her eyes with a chuckle at his charming smile. Men. "You're welcome. Don't sneak to more arrests though!"

"No promises-Ow! ok! I won't!" Seb rubbed his pinched arm. Wanda glared.

They said bye one last time, Maze said bye to her little blonde friend too, gifted her a nice sheath for her first knife and that got her a hug from Zoe she gladly accepted.

When they were in their car going to the airport, Miz got rid of her glasses and sighed in relief. Gosh, she was so glad that was over. She had the number for a therapist but...she didn't know how much longer she could have stayed there. Lucifer was REALLY sexy~ It had to be magical, damn cheater!

She wasn't complaining of the sights she got back at home though~
When the demon girl and the twins fell asleep, Wanda twitched awkwardly next to Seb. "Seb…" "Yeah?" "...Do you think we should have accepted Lucifer's offer…?" She lowered her voice, "...for that threesome?" And fuck, but Wanda was very tempted to take him up on that.

Seb’s only response was a crimson red face and an awkward loud laugh. “Yeah, no. I don’t think I like the idea of the Devil getting his hands on you.”

Wanda laughed, leaning over to kiss his nose. “Well, you’re the only one for me~ that’s demon enough.”

“Not a demon!” Seb whined, but his mouth quirked into a grin. “Man, can’t wait to tell Ford and Stan that I met the Devil! Hah!”

The two couldn’t wait to spend the summer with their family.

KEEPING UP WITH THE PINES

After Wanda finished her job in Los Angeles, they had a few more weeks to get everything set up. June arrived and the Pines were all in a rush. Shermie was going with his wife and twins once Dipper finished his courses and Abi got time off work to come along this time.

Seb and Wanda got stressed getting all the packing done (along with the paperwork for what happens after summer), but it was definitely worth it. They found the perfect elementary school, they talked to this new principal (Seb promised not to mess with this one), Zach’s name and situation was resolved too, which was a great relief. And best of all, Amanda would stay in the twins’ old school (which had elementary) and they wouldn't see Carol again!!

While they prepared their bags and bought tickets for the planes to be able to leave to the other side of the country in peace, Zoe was lazily playing with Daddy's tablet. Well. Not the working one, she didn't want to get shouted at because angry Dad was scary Dad, it was an old one she and Zach could use.

She was snuggled on the couch, scrolling through boring videos in ThemTube while Zach colored. "Zachy~ How do you spell monster?" She asked her twin, wanting to find cooler videos. The other blonde frowned.

"Uh...M and o is mo...Mon...M-o...s--t-e..."

Zoe typed that down and the automatic corrector changed it. Zach sat down with her to see. He wanted to grab the tablet but after some whines and pulls, Zoe stayed with it. They scrolled down until a video caught their attention. It was about a monster head!

"Hi, welcome back to Dipper's guide to the unexplained. Anomaly 42: Tooth."
The twins gasped with big smiles on their faces. That was Dipper!! As a kid! And Mabel was there too!! The video was very scary for the 5 year olds, especially Mabel's creepy bear.

Dad entered the living room with an empty cup to get more of Miz's tea from the kitchen and both gremlins jumped on him. "DAD! LOOK! Dipper and Mabel as kids!"

Seb stared at the video and grimaced. "Oh my god, did Dipper really upload those videos?" He then laughed. It was the twins' channel! So funny! The video didn't have that many views but it had lots of followers, that was adorable.

He sat with his kids to watch more of the old videos on the channel (as the new ones seemed to be Math classes? Wut? Animations or something?) and got a good laugh out of it, especially with an old video burning down the curtains in his house as he tried to summon a ghost.

"He recorded most of that in Gravity Falls. You can bother him about it when you see him in a few days." Seb snickered.

Zoe rubbed her palms together. Oh, she was counting on it~

--.--

Finally it was time to leave. They were taking Sir Bedazzle and Queen Flutter in cages, because the twins ‘couldn’t leave their favorite stuffed toys at home’. Security thought it was hilarious how the adorable twins took them in little cages as if they were real animals.

Seb and Wanda were tense through the whole process of revision and scanning, but fortunately for them, everything went fine.

Ford was with them. He was convinced into going with them together as family. Miz wanted people to coo at them for their status as ‘twins’. In the scanning it took him a little more time though to convince them he didn’t have a bomb or a dangerous metallic object on his possession. “Surgery plate!” He quickly explained while rapping his knuckles against his head with a metallic clunk.

Seb helpfully added, “Yeah! His skull was crushed! Like a grape! It was seriously horrible, it was the same accident I lost my eye in! Look! HAHAHA!” He lifted his eye-patch and showed the red and black scars. The security guys were so disturbed, one even gagged, and they let the Pines go.

The two triplets fist-bumped and Wanda rolled her eyes, holding the kids’ hands. Miz followed closely. She wasn't clinging to her anymore but she did keep an eye out and stick close. She also kept a close eye on the twins, more worried for their safety than her own.

They had to wait an hour for their flight and Seb was already hating it. The twins weren’t normal gen alpha kids. He could give them his phone to watch videos but they wouldn’t sit still. They wanted to run around and he didn’t look forward to running after them. He pulled out from his bag something that made Wanda frown in disapproval and he quickly put the child leashes on the twins. “Now you are safe!” He declared proudly. They were like little backpacks, but only he could take them off. Mwahaha!

“Let go!” Zoe tried to run away but the elastic rope only extended so far. She rubber-banded back with a squeak. “No use on fighting it, kid...it’s happening.” Sebastian sat down between his triplet and wife watching the kids try to run, bite or nibble on their leashes.

“I am not sure you should put your children on leashes, Sebastian.” Ford commented lightly, watching Zoe on the floor twisting and turning. Miz spoke up “But you put ME in leashes.” She was sitting beside him as he absently pet her head, she had trained him well. Seb and Wanda both choked.

“That's different. I put you in harnesses to ride you.” Ford corrected. It took some begging but he got her to agree to let him ride her dragon form. He made the harness both to keep himself from falling off and because he thought it would be cool to be a dragon riding knight.

It was...one of the most amazing experiences he’d ever had. They had flown around for hours. Xin told him about the elements in space, far more than the ones humans discovered here on Earth, their atomic weight, the classification they got, and he listened with huge big eyes. Ford's cheeks turned pink at the sudden memory of...how warm and...comfortable he felt talking with Xin… their time together was so intellectually stimulating! It was thrilling, exciting-- he felt so alive, up there in the sky late at night. The wind blowing through his hair, the stars up above him. Xin’s voice recounting the planets he’d been to…
Seb and Wanda made more strangled sounds. In his shock, Seb almost let the twins escape. Luckily Wanda grabbed the other leash.

“Yeah it was pretty cool~” Miz shrugged. “But at first you got a bit crazy pulling and steering me. I like being able to move my head on my own.” Miz gave him a teasing grin. Her adopted parents were blushing heavily. How could they talk about it so nonchalantly in public?!
It took a bit more of waiting, in which Miz passed out on Seb's lap as he stroked her hair, but eventually, they started boarding and as they had small kids, they went first! Woo! The flight lasted around 5 hours and while each parent would sit with one twin, Miz was sitting with Ford. She was glad he accepted. She felt safe with him. He was a friend, and he was big. And had a jacket she could hide in. They boarded the plane and to the passengers, flight attendants, and even the captain's joy, the twins fell asleep. Everyone made a collective sigh of relief while Seb and Wanda took the unique chance to sleep as well. Miz spent the time chatting with Ford about carbon nanotubes and how the specific pattern of molecular bonds gave substances with those structures their incredible strength, as well as how to construct them.

Miz HAD decided to simply take the high school graduation exam in order to forgo schooling.
College wasn't REQUIRED after all, so as long as she had her high school diploma, no one would bother them about it. It had caused quite the stir in Seb and Wanda's neighborhood when the news that their adopted Chinese daughter was apparently a genius got around. Miz got a bunch of invitations to various colleges and had wanted to turn them down, what need did she have for school? She knew having a college degree would make it easier to get a job but...she wasn't really planning to do that. She wanted to help raise the twins. Maybe after they grew up she might consider it. She didn’t want to work for anyone so she didn’t need a college degree to impress an employer.

Besides, if all else failed, she’d just create gold and jewelry or something to pawn for cash.

The other passengers on the plane just stared at the little girl engaging in deep scientific discussion with a man who looked like a college professor and wondered what was happening.

It was a quiet trip. Miz eventually fell asleep, leaning against Ford's side as he wrapped an arm protectively around her.

Stanley was at the airport waiting for his family to arrive. The summer was finally starting and he couldn't wait to see his family again. Carla’s arm was tired of holding the cardboard. “Are you sure they were arriving at this hour?”

“They left in the morning so they should be here by now…” Stan groaned. Dillon stayed at home with Diego. They had better cleaned up their rooms...

“Stanley Pines!”

“Oh fuck.” They muttered before some people with cameras and microphones approached. Sometimes it sucked being a famous sports star and businessman who had the added mystery of having disappeared for 13 years. Even though it's been 5 years since then, they still wanted to hear about his life.

His cool ass lie wasn’t enough for them! They were so insufferable. “Who are you waiting for, Stanley?” One of the reporters asked. “My brothers.” Stan deadpanned. Why couldn't they just leave him alone?

“Your birthday is in a few days? What are you planning?”

“Carla, are you and your husband doing anything special?”

“Can you tell us what you’re planning next?” One of them asked. Not only was Stanley a subject to talk about in the sports world, Carla was quite well known for her work on Broadway.

Ugh. They didn’t ask for this. The couple sighed. Maybe he should have worn a disguise? The voice over the loudspeakers announced the plane was landing. Oh thank god. Stan tried to ignore the paparazzi. The sooner he met up with Seb and Ford, the sooner they could leave.

Seeing Stan and Carla weren’t moving away, the paparazzi continued pressing, taking advantage of their situation. Stan was asked a few things, he responded to the easiest ones, like the incoming games and stuff like that. No comments about his kids, or Dillon’s graduation, which they had also assaulted them about, or his brothers’ private lives. They had been on the news for a while, getting them involved again would be a dick move. They should give their own info themselves! Well, Stan managed to charm the subject away from his brothers as he regaled the paparazzi with stories.
Zoe slowly opened her eyes. Disappointed at herself for falling asleep. She wanted to watch the whole plane ride! She lifted her head from Daddy’s shoulder and yawned, hearing a muffled voice saying they were about to descend...whatever that means. She yawned and suddenly whimpered, feeling super weird. She couldn’t hear that well and there was an annoying sound- her ears popped at the sudden movement of the plane and she started crying when her ears continued ringing louder, hurting. “Daadd!” The little girl wailed. Seb woke up startled and held his upset daughter, cradling her to his chest, as he held back his own cries when his ears popped. Fuck that shit hurt!

Wanda was sitting behind him and the two were still passed out, Zach leaning against Wanda and sucking his finger. “Shh, it’ll be ok…” Seb whispered as the plane reached the landing track. God, he hated planes. Zoe wiped her tears and looked out of the window as the plane jumped and moved super fast. It...it actually looked really cool...When they returned home, she wouldn’t fall asleep so she could see how the plane leaves the ground. Her pain was long forgotten.

Miz jumped when the plane landed and Ford woke up startled when she clung tighter to him. He looked around and looked out of the window. “We are here…” He pet her long hair. They got out of the plane, each twin holding a cage for each plantimal while Ford held Miz’s hand, and Zoe gasped when she found herself looking down at huge stairs. The wind was blowing wildly on the track and when she looked up, she saw the huge white and blue plane. It was so big!! She loved it! She was glad she woke up in time to see it all up close.

Seb carried her and didn’t let her go down the stairs herself. It made her pout, but then they were taken to the airport in a cool cart. “We can go to Uncle Fez’s house now?” She asked when she was reunited with the rest of her family. “First we need to find our luggage, Zoe.” Ford smiled slightly at the skipping girl. “We can’t leave without them.”

The twins squealed when they saw the funny looking carousels where luggage started appearing. They didn’t get to really explore the airport during their trip to Los Angeles, so they wanted to do that now. Seb looked around. “Where do we go to find our bags?” The adults got distracted and the mischievous twins escaped from their grip to play. Miz went after them, not wanting anything to happen to them in this place with so many people. Too many people. Too many strangers. All those thoughts and emotions crammed into a small space. So much irritation, anger, impatience, worry, stress...

Miz whimpered and started blocking them out. But she shouldn’t block them out because she needed to sense their intentions in case someone bad was here. She had to keep the twins safe. She ran after them and whimpered at the forming headache. Just like the last time she’d been at the airport. “Guys! Slow down!” She caught up to the twins, it was so much harder to do stuff without her powers, and scooped the two up, one under each arm before they managed to climb into the turning carousel. “What did mom and Seb say about running off?!” She scolded.

They wilted. Right. They were supposed to stay close to mommy and daddy or else bad people might try to take them away. “B-but you’re here.” Zoe protested. Miz put the twins back on the ground but held onto their hands. “Well what if a bad person tries to take me away?” She asked them as she led them back to the luggage area where Wanda had noticed all three children missing and was panicking. Zach held the little cage with Queen Flutter a bit closer to him. “Then we will stop them!” he said. Miz sighed. “But you won’t be able to use your powers here. Too many people...and cameras.”

She hated that. She hated having to hold back her powers. The massive headache didn’t help her mood. She narrowed her telepathic range through sheer concentration and groaned in relief. Too many people. If there was one huge stand out between humans and the various alien species she’s met, humans had higher population count. There were just...so MANY of them. Most of the planets she’s been to weren’t able to support this much life. Or have species living in such close proximity to each other in such a small space.

“Oh thank god!” Wanda spotted Miz leading the twins back and ran up to hug them. “What did I say about running off? I was so worried!”

“That we shouldn’t…” Zoe mumbled guiltily. “But, Sir Bedazzle wanted to see around!” She lied, showing her mom the cage. Wanda scowled. “This is not funny, Zoe.” She grabbed the twins’ hands and handed Zoe to Seb who was grabbing their last bag. “Take care of your daughter.” She muttered before grabbing one of their waiting bags and walking to the exit with Zach, who looked guilty. Miz whined at the pain and walked towards Seb. Zoe was placed on her dad’s shoulders with a sigh. “Don’t make mommy and daddy worry like that.” Seb scolded the toddler. “I know you can behave better. You are the stronger twin and it’s your job to keep your brother safe, right Fordsie?”

Ford looked down at Miz who wanted to be picked up as well and he sighed. He lifted the girl up and carried her so she could lay her throbbing head on his shoulder. Ahh~ much better. “Sebastian is right, Zoe. You must give Zach a good example. Like I always did but none of my brothers listened to me.” He sighed in mock disappointment.

Seb punched his shoulder and the two trotted towards the exit to find Wanda. They found her looking around for Stan and Carla. There were lots of people holding cardboards with names or offering them a taxi, but Seb grinned when he spotted them surrounded by cameras and paparazzi. “Ah, there they are!” He walked towards them as Wanda and Ford shared a look.

“Hey, Fez!!” The hungry eyes of the reporters turned around and smiled when they saw one of Stan’s triplets walking towards them. As hungry animals, the cameramen and paparazzi ran towards the grinning man and little girl. “Sebastian! Why are you visiting?” “What are you wearing? Did you design it? Who is that? Your daughter?”

Wanda and Ford hung back and sighed. Was there a way to sneak over without being seen? Ford nudged Miz. “Hey. Can you put up a perception filter?” The girl groaned softly but nodded, keeping her eyes closed. Too many emotions everywhere. She sent a weak pulse of her power out around them and gave a weak thumb’s up when she felt the filter block them from anyone who wasn’t of Pine’s blood or married into the family. That was a decent parameter for this. Ford looked at the girl hugging him. “Are you ok?” Wanda touched her forehead. “Do you feel sick, sweetie?”

Miz shook her head. “Can we leave soon...the emotions overwhelm me…” She whispered and they nodded. They managed to cross the crowd to meet with Carla who was busy watching Seb and Zoe smugly grin and pose for the cameras. They were so alike it was annoying. Wanda hugged her sister-in law and Zach gave his aunt a little kiss. Stan was saved and pulled towards them. “Heya, Sixer! Oh! Miz also came!!” He grinned and hugged his older brother. “Hello, Stan.” Ford smiled. “We noticed the reporters followed you here.”

“Ugh. Yeah. It happens sometimes.” Stan blinked when he realized all the reporters had turned away from him. “What the? I know Seb’s living it up for the cameras but how did he get ALL their attention?” Ford and Wanda laughed. “Well, my dear daughter put up a...what did you call it? Perception filter?” Wanda looked at Ford for confirmation. He nodded. “Yes. It’s good to see it worked.”
Stan blinked. Then did a double take. “Wait, DAUGHTER?!” He cried. Ford blinked. He’d missed that part of Wanda’s statement. “You adopted Miz? Officially?” He gasped. Wanda smiled proudly and held Zach’s hand tighter when she felt him trying to escape. “Yup! Like, a few months ago! She’s my baby now.” Carla cooed and congratulated Wanda as Stan made a disturbed expression. Miz was their daughter, she was MORE than dating Ford, and Seb hadn’t killed him yet? Wow. Surprising self control!

“We can talk more about this at home?” Carla asked. “We left the kids alone at home.” She pouted a bit. She was worried about Diego mainly, Dillon was more than old enough. It should be fine but sometimes Dillon couldn’t keep his baby brother under control. “But how do we get Seb and Zoe away from them?” Ford wondered aloud. Miz mumbled “Distract them with something else...once he leaves their line of sight...”

“So...like...hey Seb!” Stan called out. “Tell them that you need to find Wanda, and then point towards somewhere away from us.”

Seb looked at them plotting and rolled his eye. Killjoys. He coughed. “Well, I have lost my wife around here, so I need to go find he-Oh my god! There she is!” He squealed and pointed away from his family, just like he was told to. The people gushed and looked around so Seb snuck away from them and went towards his family. When the paparazzi looked back at him, he was gone. Seb put Zoe on the ground and laughed. “You never let me have my fun!”

“Yeah! We were being famous!” Zoe giggled and tried climbing on her Uncle Stan, who easily picked her up. “We can go now!” The middle triplet exclaimed relieved. “You made us wait for you for hours!”

“Not my fault the plane was delayed.” Seb groaned, rolling his neck to get the cricks out. “Man, I can’t wait to sleep on a real bed!” The group headed off, leaving behind a thoroughly confused group of reporters who suddenly realized they had lost track of Stanley as well. Carla looked at them in wonder. “This is so useful. How’d you do this?”

“Can you teach us?” Carla smiled widely at them. Seb laughed. “Sorry, Flower, I don’t do that, you’ll have to ask Miz, but mere mortals aren’t able to hold the powers we have.” He stuck his tongue out.

“Oh, shut up.” Carla rolled her eyes. Miz mumbled. “I can teach you how to make runic spells that ward off attention...” Seb blinked at her. Really? He didn’t know about that.

They went to the parking lot where the van Stan rented was waiting for them. He helped them put the luggage in the trunk with ease and then, after complaining about how expensive the ticket was, he drove off. The twins sat on their parents’ laps and looked out at the city. The plantimals were in their cages, they wouldn’t be released until it was totally safe. “Mom is going to the house as well, she’ll be happy to see you two idiots...and Shermie, eventually, he gets here tomorrow.” Stan informed them as he drove. “Hey Sixer, how’s the Mystery Shack going? I invest in your place to keep that money making tourist trap running!” He laughed and Seb grinned at Ford’s pouting face. Stan had fallen in love with the Shack the moment he saw it, Seb remembered how he even acted as Mr. Mystery a few times. It was so fun.

“It’s fine, people still fall for fake attractions...I thought you would ask me about my research.” Their oldest brother replied, mildly offended. Stan laughed. “I would but I’m not interested in nerd shit.” Ford pouted even harder as the other adults laughed at him. Well, at least Miz appreciated his ‘nerd shit’.
Miz tiredly looked at the twins. “Don’t repeat that word until you’re teens.” She warned and they shrugged. They didn’t know what it meant anyway. The triplets talked happily. They had missed each other a lot. Their birthday was in a few days and they didn’t want to admit they were kind of excited. Men in their forties weren’t supposed to be excited for their own birthdays.

Finally, Stan pulled over at his house where he saw Dillon opening the door for a tall old woman. “Ah, just in time.” He grinned as the car stopped. “Ma!!” Seb gave Zoe to Wanda as he got out of the car. The man’s shout startled the woman who turned around and smiled widely. “Sebas!” Seb laughed and picked her up before hugging her gently. He missed his mother.

Kari laughed. “How’s my little man?” Seb placed her down gently. “I’m not little.” He protested. Kari poked his nose. “Of course not. You’re a big boy now~” She teased. “Now where are my grandbabies?” She looked around as Wanda released the twins, who ran up to hug Kari’s legs. “Hi granny Kari!”

“Oh, you two are so, so big!” She exclaimed and, with a little bit of effort, picked up Zach. “I missed you so much! I am so sorry I wasn’t at your birthday.” She rubbed noses with Zach and placed him down. “It’s ok, granny!” Zach smiled. “We understand!”

“But we missed you too!” Zoe hugged her leg as tight as she could. She wouldn’t let go. As Ford and Stan got the bags out, complaining about Seb not helping, Wanda walked towards her mother-in-law. “Hi, Kari.” She smiled and Kari smiled. “Oh! Oh! Come here, my dear girl!” She hugged the shorter woman. She loved both her daughters-in-law, but Kari loved Wanda for making her son so happy after what he went through. She was glad Wanda appeared in Sebastian’s life.

“Look Ma! I brought you the other one too!” Stan called, punching Stanford’s arm. The poor scientist oof’ed. That punch, compared to the one Seb gave him, hurt. Miz clung to Ford’s leg at the sight of the stranger. Well, the triplet’s Mom wasn’t a ‘stranger’, but Miz didn’t know her personally, even if she Saw stuff about Kari. But Sebastian adored her! So she was ‘safe’. And more than that, she was a ‘mom’. Miz peeked out and Kari’s eyes zeroed in on her. “Stanford Pines! Did you finally get me a grandchild?!” She squealed in glee. Ford twitched. “N-No! I-I mean, this is Miz, she’s Wanda and Seb’s newly adopted daughter…” He said awkwardly.

Kari was disappointed when Ford said this cute little girl wasn’t his daughter (and frankly, she was too old for Ford to have suddenly produced a daughter, but one could hope and dream) but she turned to grin at Wanda. “You adopted a child?” Wanda nodded. “Miz was friends with Sebastian and...due to some circumstances, she started living with us and eventually we decided to take her in for real.” Kari nodded and crouched to look at the girl. “Hi, Miz, I’m Kari, I’m Sebas’ Mom…” She held out a hand calmly, not reaching for her, the child seemed shy.

Miz nodded with a small smile. “It’s a pleasure to meet you, Ms. Kari…” She took the woman’s hand and shook it. She came out from behind Ford. Kari seemed like a nice person. Well, she HAS to be a nice person. She raised Seb after all. Unlike her horrid husband. The twins came over to hug Miz. “You’ll love granny Kari.” Zoe said. “She’s really nice.” Miz smiled. “I know.” From what she’s Seen, this woman was someone who would fight for her children now. Because she wasn't afraid anymore.

“She is really pretty.” Kari told her second youngest son and his wife. Then she looked at Ford once again. “But I still want a grandchild from you!” She said sternly. Ford groaned loudly as Stan and Seb snickered. “Mom, I told you I don’t want to have kids.” Ford deadpanned. Kari looked at the kids. “Would you want to have a new cousin?”

“Yes!!” the twins cheered. Miz giggled behind her hand. Kari turned back to Ford. “You don’t even need to marry a girl...or a boy, if that’s what you’re into, I won’t judge…”
“Mother!?” Ford sputtered.

“...but I’m sure you can adopt a child too.” Kari sighed. “I just want to know you won’t be alone.” She hugged him, her head only coming up to his chin. “I worry about you being sequestered away in your lab all the time.” Ford rolled his eyes. “A child would get in the way of my work. I have many experiments that require my attention throughout the whole day and it would be irresponsible for me to have a child and be unable to care for them.”

Everyone sighed. Of course. His work was more important. Miz spoke up “There’s nothing wrong with wanting to focus on your work and career.” Ford ruffled her hair. “Thanks for understanding, Miz.”

“Well, let’s not stay outside!” Dillon called from the entrance with a grin, his slightly tanned skin making his white grin even whiter. Kari walked towards her oldest grandkid and kissed his cheek before going inside. The triplets grabbed their bags and luggage before following Stan inside. Diego came running down and into the hall. “Guys!” He squealed at his twin cousins. He ran towards them for a hug. “Come on, let's go play in my room!”

“Hey squirt! Say hi to your uncles and aunt first!” Stan barked. Diego moaned and quickly hugged Uncle Seb, Ford, aunt Wanda, Granny Kari, Miz, and then took the twins upstairs, but not before releasing Sir Bedazzle and Queen Flutter. “We have a new pet!” Zoe exclaimed as they ran to their cousin’s room.

Stan sighed. “I’ll make sure the doors are closed…” He walked away and Carla smiled. “Come, I’ll show you your rooms! The hotel in New Jersey is already reserved so we just need to go in a few weeks, pay and enjoy!”

“Thanks, Flower.” Seb grinned. They all followed her upstairs while they chatted about how they have been doing. Kari sighed. “And I’m guessing Ford still hasn’t found anyone. Really dear, you’re quite lucky your brothers have all given me grandchildren or I would be nagging you more about this.” Everyone was sweating nervously and kept quiet that Ford was...dating Seb and Wanda’s adopted daughter...because that was pretty messed up if they thought about it that way… so, just accept that life was weird and being in a relationship with a shapeshifting demon god was weird and just go with that.

They all looked at each other and in unison, decided not to bring that up and hoped Ford wouldn’t bring it up either. Miz wasn’t paying attention as she looked around the house, already burning small triangles into hard to notice places as she went. She did this around Ford’s lab as well. There were already PLENTY of triangles in Gravity Falls but more was always good. She wanted to keep an eye on Stan’s family to make sure they stayed safe. Speaking of safe, Miz noted that Dillon (and little Diego) apparently had a live in bodyguard called Sasha who was also…

Carla took them upstairs and showed them to their rooms. Ford’s was the smallest but it was ok because he was alone. The twins would share with Diego, Seb and Wanda got their own, Shermie and Abi another, and Mabel and Dipper would sleep with Dillon. Miz looked over at Ford “So are we sharing your room?” Ford considered that. “Yes, I suppose we will. All the other rooms are too full.” All the adults aside from Kari made coughing sounds. Kari just thought it was adorable how Seb’s adopted daughter liked her eldest son son much. It made her glad. She saw how Miz had been holding Ford’s hand earlier.

Stan also officially introduced Sasha to his brother’s family. “If you can, protect Sebastian’s kids too, like last time.” Stan told her. Sasha nodded. More children to add to the list. She almost got a heart attack with the twins last time. She glanced over at the eldest girl, who was staring at her with sparkling eyes. “Um…” Sasha wasn’t sure how to feel. The little girl was whispering, “Battle maid, battle maid, battle maid—” under her breath.

Sasha was saved by the children coming back into the room. They were followed by these strange… animals? “Oh yeah, these are their pets. Don’t think too hard about it.” Stan waved off. Zoe started screaming. “I WANNA GO TO THE POOL!!” She squealed and pulled her mommy’s hand. “Bathsuit! Bathsuit!” Wanda looked over at Carla and the other woman nodded. “It’s a hot day, why don’t we all go swimming?” The children cheered.

The twins searched for their clothes in their bags and started throwing the clothes all over the ground. Seb lifted them up and put them under his arms. “Don’t do thaaaaaattt! Do you know how long it took me to pack??!!” He growled playfully and took them to their room to change them. Wanda picked up the discarded clothes and followed her family. “We will meet you there.”

Zoe put on her blue and green swimsuit and sat down impatiently to get her hair tied up by her mommy. Seb bit his lip. How could he be so stupid to forget about Zach? Was it correct to let him go shirtless? (Seb never did). Should he wear a swimsuit like Zoe? To be honest, no one would be able to tell the difference…but… it worried him. He looked at Zach sitting on the bed and waiting patiently.

Miz came into the room. She didn’t have any clothes since she simply shapeshifted her clothes. She looked over at Seb’s panicked, worried face and how he was staring at Zach. Oh. Right. She sighed and walked over. “It’s fine. He’s 5 years old. Besides, the whole ‘Only boys can be shirtless’ thing is bullshit. Just ask him what he wants to wear.”

“Like Diego. He has a SpiderMan swim trunks!” He smiled. Seb smiled back. He had an idea. He extended his right hand in flames. “Alright...How about I get you cool Spider Man swim trunks too...but you wear a shirt like Dad?” He never took his shirt off anyway. So it’s not weird if Zach wears his shirt like his dad does, right?

“No. That’s silly!” Zach giggled at him and Seb pouted. The flames disappeared for a second. “Alright...then, you give Dad a kiss?” He still needed to change the swimsuit to trunks. Ok!” Zach shook his hand and kissed his cheek. Seb went to look for the swimsuit and when he held it, the garment started changing and transmuting. Hehe, he still got it… He gave the shorts to Zach and he went to the bathroom to change. He wasn’t like Zoe who changed anywhere.

Seb sat down on the bed and watched Zoe escape the room with her face and arms covered in sunscreen. “So, Zach called me silly for wearing a shirt to the pool…” Miz and Wanda laughed. “Well, most men don’t. No offence Seb.” Wanda said. “You just happen to be very shy about your body.” Seb pouted. He still had his zodiac on his back. He didn’t hate it as much as he used to but it was still...not something he liked to let people see. Wanda patted his back. “It’s fine. Who cares what anyone else thinks. If you want to wear a shirt, you can wear a shirt.”

Zach came out, proudly shirtless and ran for the door. Wanda grabbed him before he could get far. “Sunscreen first.” she said, motioning to the windows. They might block the UV rays but she still worried. He whined but held still as Wanda covered him. The instant she was done, he was off, running downstairs chanting “Pool! Pool! Pool!” Wanda shook her head fondly. “Well I’m going to get changed too.” She went off to the bathroom, leaving Seb and Miz on the bed. Seb sighed. Miz patted his arm. “What’s wrong?”
“Am I... getting worried for nothing? I know it’s bullshit that only men can be shirtless... but, when he grows up? He won’t be able to do it... and he will feel bad...” Seb rubbed his arm. “I thought getting him used to wearing a shirt would make it normal for him, even if he grows up and still considers himself a boy... it would be... ‘normal.’” He made quotation marks.

Miz sighed. “Look, once he’s older and can make a real decision, I can shapeshift him... if he wants me to.”

“I know.” Miz grinned. “You’re a mama hen.” Wanda came out of the bathroom with her swimsuit and shorts. “Now go change your clothes to go to the pool!” Miz pushed him to stand up. She went up to a mirror to change her own clothes, her simple tshirt and pants turning into a cute one piece with ruffles around the chest and hips. She skipped out of the room, she didn’t need sunscreen! HA!

Wanda still wanted to feel like a mother for her and caught Miz in the hallway. “Kari will ask why you don’t wear sunscreen, and Seb and I are your parents~” She grinned as she applied the white substance on her face. Miz pouted. It made her skin feel sticky and she didn’t like it. But she let Wanda put it on her and ran off as soon as she was done. Miz passed by Ford’s room and noticed he was sitting at the desk, fully dressed. “Ford~ aren’t you gonna come swim too?”

Ford grunted as he wrote out some equations in his journal. Miz narrowed her eyes. She flicked her fingers and Ford yelped as his clothes swapped out with the swim trunks he had packed. Ford blinked down at himself while Miz blinked at him. “...you’re a lot hairier than I thought.” It looked to be mostly along his chest, legs and arms. It was also really curly. She went up and started petting his arm hair. Teehee. It felt funny. She liked the texture. Ford grumbled as Miz pulled at his arm. “What are you doing?”

“I’m seeing how springy your body hair is.” Miz replied. She pulled a strand straight and let go to watch it spring back into a curl. This was hilarious. “I’ve never seen you without your turtleneck before...” She looked up and saw his star tattoo. She snorted with laughter before she could stop herself.

“Oh, that’s enough.” Ford gently pushed her away and went to look into his bag for another shirt. Miz giggled and sat on his bed. “It’s not my fault you got that tattoo, but I’m glad you did, I like it~” She teased. “Stop...” Ford groaned and put on another turtleneck. Who the heck brought turtlenecks to their SUMMER vacation?!

Miz stared at him deadpan. “How are you going to swim with a turtleneck on?”

“I will not.” Ford replied easily. “What?!” The demon shrieked and he rolled his eyes. “I have work... and I don’t want to swim.”

“If it was with strangers, I would understand, but your family is downstairs! Go down and spend time with them! Human life is short and you should spend it with people you love!” Miz pulled at Ford’s hand, dragging him out of his room. “But-”

“No! No buts! You don’t even have to swim! Just talk, maybe eat snacks, or hang out with them. Be in the same general area as everyone! You can bring your journal with you. Don’t hole yourself away in your room!” Miz pulled at him. Ford sighed and gave in, as long as he could bring his journal with him, he didn’t mind, letting the small girl drag him down the stairs and to where the pool was. Seb and Wanda were already there along with Kari, Stan and Carla. The children were in the pool, splashing around in the shallow end. Stan was getting on the diving board on the deep end. “Watch out~for the STANonball!” He cheered before jumping down in a cannonball. The splash sent water spraying everywhere as the children laughed and Carla groaned loudly. “You can’t just add your name to everything!”

Miz grinned at that perfect opener. “Why not? You can’t STANd it?” Carla turned to stare at Miz in utter horror. “No. There’s two of them now!” Seb was dying in his pool chair. Miz grinned wickedly “Well, if you’re not a fan of this sort of thing, I can underSTANd. Not everyone can handle such puns.”

Carla covered her ears. “Please stop~”

Miz opened her mouth but Ford covered her face. “Don’t be cruel. Carla is our host and we shouldn’t upset her-” He admonished. Carla sighed in relief. “-there is a STANdard of behavior used in polite society.” Ford finished with a grin directed to his sister-in-law. See? He could hang out and joke too! He didn't...hole himself all the time!

Carla screamed and pushed Ford and Miz into the pool.

The two screamed as they splashed in and Sebastian fell from his chair due to how hard he was laughing. The twins and Diego swam towards the fallen duo and poked them. “Uncle Ford, you can’t swim with this shirt, it’s too heavy!” Zoe informed him as he and Miz came to the surface, coughing and trembling. She poked his side and Ford made a squeak before he tried getting out of the pool. Seb used his powers and kept him in. “Stay~”

Stan quietly, like a shark, sneaked up from behind and grabbed Ford. The oldest triplet, who lost his glasses during the fall, gasped for air before he was captured and brought underwater.

Diego cheered for his dad and the twins watched in confusion. “Will Uncle Stan kill Uncle Fordsie?” Zach asked. Miz managed to crawl out and sat on the border of the pool. “Don’t know.” She shrugged. After almost a minute of worrying, the Stans broke the surface with a loud gasp, but Stan had managed to take off Ford’s turtleneck and was waving it like a trophy. “HAHA! YEAH!!”

“Stanley! Give that back right now!” Ford grabbed for his shirt but Stan laughed and threw it out of the pool. It landed with a wet SPLAT on the tiled ground. “You can’t swim with that thing on.” Stan grinned. Ford sighed. “I wasn’t even planning to swim...”

“What?!” His little niblings questioned. “But everyone is here having fun!” Zoe pouted. “You don’t want to have fun with us?” Diego sniffed. Ford paled. He couldn’t see shit, but those little silhouettes looked really sad. “Great job making our kids sad!” Seb complained at him. Wanda looked at Dillon pleadingly and the teen lifted the chair and threw his uncle into the water. The Stans screamed as Seb fell over them with a loud splash.

Kari laid down in the now empty chair and put on her sunglasses. Ah~it was nice having her family together. She couldn’t wait for Shermie and his family to arrive tomorrow.

The day passed almost too fast for them. Soon it was time for bed and everyone retired to their rooms. Stan and Seb pulled Ford aside and told him he wasn’t allowed to do any ‘sessions’ with Miz while they were here. Ford nodded. Of course not. What kind of man did they take him for? So he changed into his pajamas and crawled into bed with an exhausted sigh. Miz was snuggled into the sheets beside him. She seemed to have passed out the second her head hit the pillow. Oh right, didn’t Sebastian mention something about Miz going home to her own dimension while her vessel in this dimension slept?

He reached out to brush her hair from her face, she had rolled around a bit and was getting close to the edge of the bed. The idea that Bill/Miz had set up this permanent connection between their worlds because she wanted to stay with them was very...humbling to know. Ford also dearly wanted to learn more about this connection. How did she manage to link their dimensions without a portal? He sighed. He could think about this tomorrow. He was tired. His brothers had cruelly kept him away from coffee all day. Ford relaxed on the bed and let his eyes slip shut, pulling Miz closer to him before he fell asleep.

It was early in the morning, around 7am, when the doorbell rang. Stan was kicked out of bed with an “It’s your brother.” so he went down the elevator and opened the door for his exhausted younger brother and family. “Looking nice.” He teased before yawning.

“Oh shut up, the flight was at 1am.” Dipper grumpily pouted and walked inside. Mabel yawned as well and threw herself onto the couch as soon as the elevator opened into Stan’s penthouse. “You can go to the beds...upstairs...” The tired family of four passed out. “...Or not. Ok, see ya later then.” Stan went back to sleep.

At 11am, the Pines managed to function correctly and could celebrate the arrival of Shermie and his family. “Diegoooo!” Mabel squealed. Said boy screamed and went to hide from his crazy cousin. Mabel laughed maniacally as she cornered him, her hands making pinching motions. “There’s no escaping from my LOVE!”

Diego screamed one last time before his saviors appeared. Zoe and Zach stood in front of him and with their hands stretched they lifted Mabel into the air. “Get your ugly love away from our best friend cousin!” Zoe ordered and they made her float back. “Uncle Shermie, Mabel needs time out because she is bothering Diego!” Zach informed his youngest uncle as they put Mabel next to him.

Dipper snorted with laughter. Served her right.

“But he is so adorable!!” Mabel insisted. Her mom shook her head. “Mabel please, sweetie.” Dipper grinnned at her and made a mocking face. Mabel stuck her tongue out. “Jerk!” The older set of twins made various faces at each other. Seb and Wanda came down and laughed at them. “Pinetree, if you make that face for too long, it’s gonna get stuck like that.” Seb said ominously.

Mabel gasped. “Dipper would look more dumb than usual!!” She put her hand on each of her cheeks in surprise and Dipper groaned. “Stop picking on me!” He whined. Seb grinned at his niblings. They had grown up but they were still the same...

Wanda looked around. “Strange. Miz is usually awake by now.” Seb frowned. “Right. Ford never oversleeps.” The guy hated sleeping, he was crazy. “I’ll wake them up.” he offered and ran upstairs. He stood behind the door and took a deep breath. Ok, he will trust he wouldn’t see anything traumatizing inside...

He knocked, just in case. “Sixer? Miz?” No response. “Alright...I'm coming in.” He opened the door, bracing himself for the worst...and blinked in surprise. They were sleeping together but...

Ford laid on his back, expression slack and peaceful. Miz was laying on her front on top of Ford’s chest, head tucked under his chin and a faint smile on her lips. One of Ford's hands was on her back and their blanket had been half kicked off, not that it would be a problem, Seb knew from personal experience that Miz was like a hot water bottle. He watched for a bit before pulling out his phone and snapping a picture. It was too cute to pass up.

He decided to let them sleep in, closing the door softly and heading back downstairs.

Seb huffed. Sure. Ford neglected his needs in the name of science and he was fine! But Seb had neglected it because he didn't have money to eat and his weak ass teenage body passed out on him and gave him anemia. He didn’t realize he was thinking aloud. “Well, Ford at least eats SOMETHING! You simply didn’t eat at all and you were a teen.” Wanda frowned. Those were dark times she hoped they’d never repeat.

Seb yelped when he was almost tackled down. He looked up and Mabel was laughing, clinging to his back. “Hey Uncle Seb! Aunt Carla told me you went into the water again! I am so, so proud of you getting over your fears!” She said and Seb grunted when his back protested a bit. He could carry Miz and the twins, but Mabel was much heavier now, even if she was thin. “To be honest, they threw me in...pumpkin, you’re going to break me! Get off!” He complained.

“Nope! Can we have breakfast? The little sandwich from the plane was horrible!” She stuck her tongue out. Dipper yawned and nodded from the couch, he was on his phone. “Uh huh. Horrible.”

Stan also came in and Mabel released her poor Uncle. “Aaww! I love it when we are all together like a huge family! I brought different colorful sweaters! Look!” She untied the sweater from her waist and put it on. It was a loose sweater crop top this time, with a U neckline. It was a sweater more suitable for the warmer weather of the city and for her age, but the green sweater still had kittens and words that read PAWESOME!

“Looks great, sweetie. Well! I’m starving! Why don’t we have breakfast?” Stan grinned. “Where are the kids?” Carla asked just as they heard laughter and a splash.

“POOL!”

They set the table in the dining room, one for the adults, another one outside near the pool they called the “cousins table”. Dipper knew it was just the kids table. Mabel, him and Dillon, eventually the twins and Diego, had always been excluded from the huge, adult table. Even now that they were 18 and technically adults under the law, they still refused to change their outdated laws.

Diego, Zach and Zoe were all wet when they sat down to eat. Sir Bedazzle was paddling in the pool as Queen Flutter (?) rested on a pizza float in the pool. Mabel squealed when she realized there were two animals now. “AUUUGH~you guys are sooo lucky!”

Dipper wondered where Uncle Ford was. He knew he had come, but he hasn’t come down yet. He looked around. “Hey, where's uncle Ford?” He asked. Seb responded as he helped out with making breakfast. “He's still asleep. Let him sleep in, that guy doesn't get enough of it.”

“Ford? Sleeping?” Dillon raised an eyebrow. “You sure he isn’t unconscious or something?” He gasped dramatically. “Is he breathing?!”
“Calm down, kid, he is breathing, I checked up on him myself.” Seb smiled. “He is just tired, as wild as that sounds.”

“Heeyyy!” Mabel grinned. "What will we get for our birthday?"

“Pardon?” Seb looked at her and she grinned.

"Mabel, you have to give your uncles presents. Their birthday is tomorrow.” Abigail rolled her eyes.

“A plantimal!” Mabel squealed. She pointed at Queen Flutter who was swishing her tail and sort of flying over to inspect Diego. “I want one!” She begged. Shermie groaned. “The pig was bad enough…"

“Excuse me, Dad, Waddles is the best! But I REALLY want a platimal too!” She pulled her uncle’s arm. “Please!! I’D GIVE YOU MY BLOOD!” She cried dramatically and Seb cackled. “I guess we could ask Miz to make you one…” Mabel cheered even as Abigail and Shermie groaned. Abigail looked at her husband “Will we even be able to afford to care for another pet?”

“The plantimals are actually pretty easy to care for. Just give them water and sunlight everyday. They don't really poop but they do produce water and sugar...and oxygen of course.” Wanda assured her. Mabel was jumping around with joy. “And I won't have to wait for summer, I can get one now right?” She pulled on Seb's arm.

“Well, Miz is still asleep upstairs with Ford so…” Seb started to say but Mabel had run up the stairs. “Hey!” Seb gasped “Don't wake them up!”

Mabel didn’t hear though and squealed as she searched for Miz. Abi looked at his groaning and facepalming brother in law. “I am sorry…” She apologized on her daughter’s behalf. “Mabel can be really impulsive.”

“And crazy! Yeah!” Dipper high-fived Dillon. Seb sighed. He just hoped they were woken up kindly...

Ford was amazed at the wild journey he and Miz had embarked on. She had showed him her dimension, he got to meet Jheselbraum again, although this was a different version of her. He held hands with Miz as she pulled them back home. “This...has been amazing.” He grinned. Being able to explore the wonders of space without the stress of fighting to stay alive was...nice. Miz squeezed his hand. “I'm glad you liked it. Thanks for agreeing to help me test if I can bring you guys with me to my dimension. Sorry I didn’t take you to meet with my friends again though.”

“Of course. It was no problem at all.” Ford nodded “I am always willing to help with breakthroughs. This has been an amazing night.” He couldn't wait to write this down in his journal. The two came through the dimension door to find themselves in the Mindscape, floating above their bodies.

“Well, it should be about time for me to wake up.” Ford smiled as he floated toward his sleeping body. He noted that Miz had somehow ended up on his chest over the night. Did their bodies still move in their sleep despite their souls not being in them? That was a fascinating thing to consider. Just as he was about to fly around Miz to slip back into himself, the door slammed open “MIZ!
Ford startled and fell into a body.

Mabel blinked when she saw the position her uncle and Miz were in. Awwww—that's so cute. She saw Miz wake up with a gasp and tumble off Ford to lay on her back, staring wide eyed at the ceiling. “Good morning Miz!” Mabel waved.

‘Miz’ got up and gasped as she stared at her hands and then over at Ford. “Oh shit.” ’Ford’ stirred and sat up as well. ‘Ford’ blinked down at her and then at his six-fingered hand. “Are you fucking kidding me…?” ’He’ whispered.

‘Miz’ grimaced, horrified. “I am still dreaming...are we in another dimension?” ‘She’ asked faintly. ‘Ford’ laughed, somewhat hysterically “Nope! I think we just came back wrong…” his grin was...unnatural looking, kinda creepy actually. “This might be FUN!” ‘Ford’ giggled. ‘Miz’ shook her head. “No it won't be fun! We have to change back right now!”

“Pfth~where's the fun in THAT Fordsie? Come on, I wanna see what it's like to be tall!” he stumbled out of bed and went to stare at his reflection in the mirror, poking his chin and ruffling his hair. ‘Miz’ however, seemed to be having traumatic flashbacks to the last time a Bill Cipher had possessed Ford's body.

“What the heck is going on?!” Mabel cried, startling the two who hadn’t noticed her standing there. She saw her uncle Ford grin at her “Hey Shooting Star! It seems there's been a mix up this morning. HAH!” Mabel flinched at the yellow eyes. “Bill? Or...is that Miz?” She hoped it was Miz.

“It's Miz…” Ford groaned in Miz's high pitched voice. The sight of those yellow eyes was really freaking him out. As well as the fact that his body was being worn by someone else. It was bringing up bad memories. Miz seemed to notice his distress and her smile faded. She sighed and came back to sit on the bed, easily picking Ford up now that he was so small and placing him in her (his own) lap. “Sorry. I forgot that this might not be as fun for you as it is for me. Mental attack?” She mumbled as she hugged him, large arms easily enveloping Ford's current tiny form.

Ford groaned. “It's not your fault. I'm just...I don't like the idea of someone else taking my body to do who knows what to it.”

“But...you DO know what I'm doing with it. You're here, watching me. I just...wanted to see what it's like being in you for a bit...you can tell me to stop if I do something you don't want and I promise I won't do anything invasive.” Miz assured him.

Ford seemed to consider it. Miz really seemed to want to be in his body...and while she was Bill Cipher, she was good, she was even telling him she would take care of his body... “Ok...but just for a while, then I want my body back.” Ford coughed. Damn, he hadn't had a voice this high pitched since he was 12...

Miz grinned widely and hugged Ford tightly. “Ok! Thanks Fordsie!!” She looked at Mabel who was staring at them in utter confusion. “You didn’t see anything…” She warned. Mabel nodded slowly. “Is this...like that carpet thing?”

“Yup.” Miz grinned as she got up, picking up Ford to hug him to her (currently his) chest. Oh~her body was squishy and nice to hug. No wonder all her friends liked to hug her. She hugged Ford closer and grinned when he squeaked. “Come on, Fordsie. Let's see how long it takes for people to notice.”
“Considering your eyes are yellow, glowing and slitted, I’d say...like 2 seconds.” Mabel commented dryly. So they switched bodies. She shuddered. That had been an awful experience. Dipper's body was so...sweaty.

Miz pouted before she looked down at herself (Ford's body) “I feel weird.” She frowned. Her belly hurt. Like it was full. She whined uncomfortably and pressed her legs together. Ford's eyes widened. “Bathroom! Now!”

Mabel’s brown eyes widened as well. Yeah...she wasn’t staying any longer. “So...tell me when you are back to normal? I want a plantimal…” She mumbled and went downstairs.

Miz stood up and managed to walk, still pressing her legs together. “This is horrible...having a real body is horrible...” she whined. Ford wiggled out of her grip, dropped to the ground and pulled Miz into the bathroom. “Hurry! I don't want you to pee yourself!”

Miz got in front of the toilet and dropped her pants. “How...how do I do this?” She blushed at the sight of...oh my~

Ford blushed as well. He snapped his fingers, not noticing Miz's startled look at the fact that he could. “Concentrate! Just...let it out! I don’t know! People usually don’t have to explain to others how to do this!”

Miz whined and...let go. Sort of. She quickly noticed she was going to miss the toilet and reached her hands down to...aim better. It was relatively simple after that. She moaned in relief. So THAT was what it felt like to empty a bladder. She had forgotten. It had been much too long. She continued moaning while Ford blushed furiously. “Um...you can let go now.” He said quietly.

Miz looked down. “How do I clean it? I'm supposed to wipe it right?” Ford buried his face in his hands and groaned. “Y-yeah...you just…”

As Ford explained how everything worked, Miz couldn't help but stare at it. Her Xin and Jan forms had dicks but they didn't look like this. Probably because they were based off drawings she's seen. Still, she couldn't help prodding at it. It was so funny looking. And big. "Is this really so interesting to you?" Ford groaned, face red. "I haven't felt waste production sensation like this in pretty much forever!" Miz pouted. "It's... weird."

Miz pulled her underwear and pants back on before washing her hands. “You can touch mine if you want.” She told him. “I give you permission to explore my body as much as you want. It's only fair.” It was just construct after all.

“No. I do not wish to explore your body.” Ford sighed. “Let’s just please go downstairs.” He said and Miz giggled. “Alright!” she flicked her fingers (pouting that she STILL couldn't snap them, how did Ford make this look so easy?!) and changed both their clothes. She dressed herself in the usual collared shirt and pants that Ford liked to favor when NOT in a turtleneck while Ford was now in a cute green sundress with frills and ribbons. Finally, Miz put on a pair of sunglasses. “Ok...how's this? How do I look?”

“...like my father.” Ford stared up at her. Miz immediately snatched the sunglasses off and crushed them. “Ok. No sunglasses then.”

“But wouldn’t people notice you are possessing me?” He sighed awkwardly pulling on the dress Miz put him in. He felt so dumb. Miz hummed, stroking his chin with his six-fingered hand. So cool~ “I...can put up a perception filter!” She grinned and flicked her fingers. “There!” She coughed and made a serious face. “Greetings, family, I am an owl who doesn’t like going into the pool.” She put her hands behind her back. “Fascinating! I will write it down immediately!”

Ford scowled and smacked her in the stomach, but it didn’t hurt Miz at all. “I do not sound like that!” He whined as Miz cackled and wheezed “Try me!”

Ford rolled his eyes. “I will not be playing along with this charade.” this was ridiculous.

“But you have to!” Miz insisted. “They will notice!” She hummed. “Imagine you’re a character in DD&moreD! You HAVE to stay in character during a game!”

Ford blinked. “You...know about Dungeons, dungeons and more dungeons?”

Miz rolled her eyes. “Of course! My dimension has a similar game with slightly different rules but It's essentially the same thing. I DM for my friends once a week for our games.” She grumbled “But they're always more interested in killing all the NPCs instead of following the quest...which is valid I guess, they're free to do what they want and I don't want to railroad them to much…” she trailed off when she saw the wide eyed eager look on Ford's (her own) face. Shit. She looked fucking adorable.

A high pitched squealing sound was coming out of Ford as he bounced in excitement. “You play DD&moreD!” He squealed. Miz blinked. “Um...yes. What's...the problem?”

“Play with me!” Ford grabbed her hand and tugged on it. Miz blinked. “Oh hey. You're in character.” She yelped when Ford pulled her out of the bathroom. “We need to get Dipper! We can have a session together!” Ford actually giggled as he bounced merrily down the hall, dragging Miz behind him.

It’s been so long since he had played! When was the last time? Oh right, Probabilititor wanted to eat his and Dipper’s brains. “Remember to stay in character though!” Miz laughed, loving the deep voice coming out of her, and Ford waved a hand. “Yeah, yeah.” He could do that. It was like acting...like a child, and Mabel. He could do it.

He slowed down when he saw his family eating in the dining room. “Hey, you finally woke up!” Stan grinned. “We thought Shooting Star would wake you up, she luckily didn’t.” Seb looked at Mabel who was on the couch, coughing awkwardly.

“Oh she did. It was quite startling.” Miz said with a solemn nod. “Shermie, you should tell your daughter she cannot simply enter someone's room without permission.”

“Good job, dumb head!” Dipper teased and poked his sister’s cheek. The girl grumbled and hid her head on the cushion. “Don’t think I haven’t tried…” Shermie mumbled.

Ford squeaked when he was suddenly picked up and sat on a chair. Wanda smiled down at him and kissed his forehead. “How did you sleep sweetie? I made your favorites~” she grinned. Seb laughed. “We made everyone's favorites!” That's what happened when 5 people got to cook breakfast all together.

A HUGE plate of food was pushed in front of Ford. He felt faint just looking at it. Did Miz really eat this much?! For breakfast?! No wonder she was so squishy…

“T-thank you, mom.” Ford only stumbled a little as he stared at the stack of pancakes drizzled with syrup, ground beef and onion omelette, a toasted roast beef sandwich and French fries. What kind of breakfast was this?!

Wanda pet his cheek before sitting back on her chair. Seb walked over to Ford. “Are you planning to sit down and eat something more than coffee? I have important news for you, a human body doesn’t survive on that!”

Miz grinned, Seb looked so small from this height, and pulled the man to him in a hug. “Thank you, Sebastian.” She said as Ford watched them. “You are a great brother! And I appreciate everything you do for me.” Seb tensed up at the sudden hug but quickly relaxed and hugged his older brother back. “You-You’re welcome, Sixer…” he sniffed and smiled.

Miz patted Seb's hair. “I think I WILL eat food like a proper human being today.” She declared before sitting down next to Ford, who kicked her under the table. “What about staying in character?!” He hissed at her quietly. Miz ruffled Ford's hair with a laugh. “Miz and I had a talk this morning about taking better care of myself.” She said loudly.

“Aw~that's so sweet.” Kari cooed at the girl. It was so cute how close they were. Then again, with Wanda and Seb handling the twins during the trip over, Ford had probably been in charge of little Miz.

Miz filled her plate with some food, feeling slightly jealous that Ford got to have her favorite breakfast stuff. But it was ok. There was a spinach and cheese omelette here that looked good. And plenty of corned beef hash. Ford's eyes widened at the food she piled onto her plate. “You can't eat all that! You're going to make yourself sick!” He hissed quietly.

Miz pouted and sat back down before she could grab more stuff. Everyone else were engaging in conversation so their own whispered discussion was ignored. “But I want to eat~”

“Well, my body isn't used to it.” Ford said. He looked longingly at the coffee pot. Wanda had placed a tall glass of Lactose-free milk in front of him. He sighed. Then he grinned. Well, if Miz was going to put all sorts of food inside his body…

He turned to Wanda with a wide eyed pleading look “Mommy? Can I try some coffee?” He bat his eyelashes adorably.

Wanda looked at her and coo’ed. “Are you sure? You usually don’t like bitter things.”

“I am completely sure! Can I? Sebas?” He pouted. Miz narrowed her eyes at him. Seb patted Ford’s head and passed him the coffee. “Ok! But you will finish whatever you serve yourself.” He joked. Ford grabbed the coffee, pushed the glass of milk aside and in another cup he poured the warm, bitter bean juice. Ahh~ Morning coffee.

Miz rolled her eyes. How could Ford drink it black? No cream or sugar? Ugh. She took Ford's cup of milk. It would be a waste if no one drank it after all. Seb looked confused that ‘Ford’ wasn’t going for the coffee. “Sixer? Are you...ok? You haven’t drank milk since we were...kids.”

“I am perfectly fine. I had an incredibly nice rest last night and I don't need to rely on caffeine to function like a human being right now. Besides, I don't want the milk to go to waste.” Miz said, licking the milk off her lips.

Stan snickered and Carla hit his arm. “Don’t be mean.” She said and Kari nodded. “Yes, leave your brother alone, Stanley. Are you really so dependant on caffeine to function, son?” The elderly woman asked. She drank coffee too, but she didn't drink it daily...now.

Miz grinned. “Actually, I do, mother. I overwork myself until I pass out from exhaustion or hunger and I keep my lab a complete mess.” She sighed, faking guiltiness. “In fact, there's so much dust that Miz started sneezing and choking when she came over once…”
Ford choked on his coffee and looked at Miz. She didn’t!! Kari gasped. “That's awful Stanford! You better be shaping up better from now on! That is no way for an adult to live.”

Miz grinned in satisfaction as Ford groaned and covered his face. This was so embarrassing. He was getting scolded indirectly! He frowned at his coffee mug. Also, the coffee tasted more bitter than he was used to. He grimaced. He almost wanted to get some sugar. Well, he was in Miz's body and her tastebuds were different.

“And if you can give me grandbabies soon, that's more important!” Kari continued and ‘Miz’ spat the coffee ‘she’ was trying to drink. Seb patted her back to help her.

‘Ford’ sighed. “I am very sorry, mother. I am simply too busy with work.” ‘he’ shook his head sadly. “Besides, I'm incredibly boring and a huge nerd and don't pay attention to the needs of others because I'm too lost in my own thoughts and my ego so it's not like I can find a partner anyway…”

Ford kicked Miz under the table. “That is not true!” Ford argued with his face bright red. Miz patted his head. “I, Stanford Pines, am a huge neerdd! And I am proud of it and my singleness!” Ford kicked her again, stronger this time. The teens watched the exchange with confused expressions. “Ten bucks that he’s drunk.” Dillon gave his cousin a bill.

Dipper studied the pair. “Twenty bucks Miz is using magic on him.” Mabel covered her face and made a frustrated noise. “25 they switched bodies…” Her awkwardness better served for something. The boys grinned and placed the bets. That was the most absurd thing! Why would they switch bodies? Dipper knew an electron carpet was needed.

“Miz, stop hitting Stanford.” Wanda scolded and put her hands on his shoulders. “But are you listening to what he is saying?!” ‘Miz’ whined.

“We know you like Ford, it’s weird hearing him talking bad about himself like that, but he is just joking, aren’t you Ford?” Seb looked at his ‘brother’. ‘Ford’ sighed self deprecatingly. “I have been doing a lot of soul searching. Introspective looks on my life and what I have been doing all this time. I know there's nothing wrong with pursuing my career, but blind devotion to my work at the exclusion of my own family and friends isn't healthy and it's about time I made some time for more than just my research.”

Stan wiped an unmanly tear from his eye and started clapping. Eventually, his other brothers followed him and everyone ended up clapping and cheering at the man with glasses. “Oh sweetie.” Kari hugged her eldest son and ‘Ford’ hugged her back gently, not without sending ‘Miz’ a smug grin.

Oh Ford was getting revenge for this. He looked at his coffee and sighed. He was sorry. He spilled it and started shrieking. “Ew! This is horrible!! I don’t want this!” He shrieked and threw a tantrum. He grabbed the sugar and, like a brat, poured it onto the floor beside the spilled coffee. Sir Bedazzle and Queen Flutter ran towards it to lick the brown substance up.

Seb grimaced. "What the heck?!"

Wanda sighed. “I told you that you wouldn't like it.” She picked the girl up and hugged her. “I know you were probably trying to be like a grown up and drink coffee but maybe you should just stick with your usual foods.”

Ford struggled against the hug. “Urgh! Let me go, Wanda!!” He complained and Miz gasped. She didn’t want Wanda to get mad at her. She reached out and picked ‘Miz’ up. “Come on Miz. You got coffee on your dress. Let's go get you cleaned up.” She carried Ford back upstairs. Ford tried to throw the best tantrum he could. It wasn't fair that he could just be carried off without being able to cause more trouble. Curse this tiny body!

“Help me!!” He ended up screaming. “Help me please!! He-He is crushing me! I-I can’t breathe! AGH! AGGHH!!” He made choking and crying noises that were heard in the dining room. It had been useful as a kid when he was being bullied. It usually called some grown up attention.

“Shut up!” Miz growled. Ford bit her hand. “Ah!” She dropped him. “Seriously? At least what I did was just pointing out what you do wrong! You're just being a jerk!!”

“Well you shouldn't have made those weird speeches!” Ford hissed back. Miz gasped. “I didn't say anything that wasn't true! You're going out and living your life by pushing your family away and isolating yourself!”

“That is not true! I see my family!” Ford growled. “No! You call them! That’s not seeing! You have a family that cares for you! And you don’t take enough time to talk and be with them now that you are seeing them face to face!” Miz cried.

“Ahem.”

The two turned to see the whole family staring at them. Mabel held out her hand. Dillon and Dipper slapped some cash into it. “Can't believe you got it right.” Dipper groaned. Wanda sighed. She should have expected this. Miz had seemed so interested in asking her about what it had been like being in Seb's body. Of course she would try it out for herself.

“So. I think you two should switch back now.” Wanda said firmly. Kari looked confused, as did most of everyone else. Dipper explained “They switched bodies.”

Kari blinked. “So...it was Ford who tossed the coffee and threw a tantrum?” Ford blushed. It had been very embarrassing to do that. But he wanted to make Miz get in trouble.

“Yes.” Miz grinned.

“So...it was Miz who said that to me…” Seb rubbed the back of his neck.

Miz waved her hands “But Ford really DOES care about you! He's just too much of a Tsun-Tsun to admit it out loud! So I wanted to let you know…”

“What the heck is a tsun-tsun?!” Seb cried but Wanda looked at ‘Ford’ sternly. “Miz. Change bodies, now!” Miz groaned loudly. “Ok, ok, mom!” everyone shuddered at how weird that sounded. She grabbed Ford’s little hand. “Come on, Fordsie…”

“I don’t understand.” Abigail pouted. “And I am more lost than you.” Kari sighed. Ford and Miz’s bodies slumped over for a second before they both stumbled and gasped. “Ugh…” Ford groaned and placed a hand on his stomach. “How much did you eat? I feel bloated…”

“Uwu...you didn't finish eating. And my mouth tastes bitter!” Miz wailed.

Seb led Abi and his mom away to explain a few things as Wanda stayed to scold both Miz AND Ford. “But why me?!” Ford complained. “Because you poured the sugar on the floor and the plantimals ate it all!” The blonde glared at her brother-in-law. They could hear the high pitched squealing of the severely energized plantimals racing around the kitchen, bumping into things and going absolutely nuts.

The children, wet from being in the pool, tried to catch them and left trails of water everywhere. Zach screamed when he slipped and fell backwards, luckily he wasn't hurt. Ford winced. “Alright... I will admit I wasn’t on my best behaviour...” He didn't know what to say. “And I guess I was also trying to tease Sixer a little bit...” Miz scratched her head.

“Should we get a fairy to turn Uncle Ford into a kid again to learn a valuable lesson?” Mabel wondered. Her twin shook his head. “Won’t help.”

Miz pouted. “But nothing I said was untrue.” She insisted. Wanda picked her up in a hug. “I know sweetie. You were just trying to help.” Ford frowned. It wasn't fair that she wasn't being scolded as much as he was.

Kari came back over. “Well, even if it wasn't you who said it, Miz is right. You haven't done more than call and while I know it's difficult to travel it would be nice to see you. I'm sure these new fangled phones have a... what was it called?” She asked.

“Face Chat.” Mabel answered. Kari nodded. “Yes. That. I would like to see you sometime.”

Ford looked down to the floor and nodded. After everything was settled, the huge family went to the living room. The teens were on their phones, the kids got annoyed no one else wanted to go to the pool with them so they changed and now they sat down to play with the plantimals. Ford was twitching. He was sitting here. Doing nothing! Ugh! He couldn't take this anymore! He tried to stand up and go to his room but everyone stopped him if he did so he couldn’t. He looked at Miz purring as Wanda stroked her head and sighed. “Miz...”

“Um?” She hummed without opening her eyes. “Can...can we...Remember you said we could play Dungeons, dungeons and more dungeons?” Ford couldn’t believe he was saying this, but he was bored! He wanted to do something!

Miz brightened as Dipper looked up too. “Ok. Are you going to be the dungeon master?” She asked. She waved her hand to make the grid paper and divider materialize on the table.

“Woah what? Nerd game?” Stan looked up. “Oooh!” Mabel squealed. “Remember we won, Uncle Stan? Let’s play again and beat these nerds!” She pointed at their brothers who were sitting next to Miz. “Oh I am in!” Seb jumped from the couch to high-six Mabel. The twins and Diego peaked up. “We want to play too!” Zach announced. It was a board game! Those were fun! And this one had lots of funny-looking pieces!

Ford sat behind the divider. “This isn't a competition. A true game of DDD is about world building, story telling, choices and consequence. We won't be playing for our brains this time.”

Miz held out some blank character sheets. “So~do you guys want to make your characters or do you need some pre-gens?”

Mabel twitched. “I have no idea what any of those words mean.” She grinned awkwardly. Dipper groaned. “Pre-gen means pre-generated. Like, a filled out character sheet with all the stats and skills already calculated out. It's generally used for new players who want to jump in and play without having to do all the math first.”
Miz held out the papers. “So...these are generally done via Class. So I've got an Archer, Warrior, Thief, Druid, Wizard…”

“Oooh! I want Thief!” Mabel grinned and rubbed her palms together.

The twins and Diego didn’t understand but they wanted to play too. Seb grabbed them and sat them on his lap. “We will be the cool Wizards!!” He cheered and the twins cheered too. “Diego, do you want to be a Wizard?”

“No…” Diego hummed in thought. He wanted Dad to play too but he didn’t like it. He went to sit next to Ford. “I will be your helper, Uncle Ford!” He looked down at the toddler and grinned. “Alright.”

“Conjuration!” Seb beat the twins on answering. It took a bit of work to get everyone settled down. There were too many of them for everyone to get their own character so a bunch of them teamed up to share a character. Miz frowned. “The largest group I've had to play with was 9 people...and that was hectic enough…”

Ford was looking at Dillon. “Do you know the rules?” The teenager sheepishly shook his head. Ford handed him a thick book. “Ok, here's the rulebook. If someone has a question about spells and stuff, you can look it up for them while I continue with the story.”

“I will help too!” Miz said. She sat between Mabel and Wanda. “Ok so first I need to explain what the stats are…”

The Pines listened carefully to Ford and Miz explain as simply as they could for mere mortals. Mabel still thought it was too much math and thinking for a board game, but then again, when they played Capitalism and Idea at home, she made the most elaborate and complex plans to win...so maybe all games had the nerd part in them.

The game took longer than it should have, but they were letting 5 year olds play so it was expected. They wanted to read the spells and count the numbers, just like they were learning. Ford found himself not really caring. He liked to see his niblings enjoy the same games he did.

Carla, Wanda and Kari took photos of the cute moment. Miz smirked and considered this a job well done. Social interaction? Yes!

Shermie, who had been starving (they've been playing for HOURS), ordered WcDonalds and everyone sat in the living room with their food, deeply concentrated on their game. Ford rolled some dice behind his divider so that they couldn't see what he got. He grinned mischievously.

“Sometime in the middle of the night...which one of you is on watch?” Ford asked.

Mabel raised her hand “I was!” Ford nodded. “Well in the middle of your nightwatch, you notice a strange sound. Roll Perception to see if you recognize what it is.”

“Which one is that again?” Mabel looked at her paper. Miz pointed. “There, under your Wisdom stat. Perception is one of the abilities affected by your Wisdom stat. It says here you've got a +1 Wisdom and...for your abilities you have...proficiency in Perception so that's an extra +2...meaning you roll the dice and add 3 to your number.”

“YIAH!” Mabel rolled the dice dramatically and stuck a few fries on her mouth. The dice stopped.
“14. Plus 3 is 17. “Do I see it?! Can I see what it was?!”

“Hm…” Ford looked over his notes. “Sorry. You'll need at least a 20 to identify it. So you continue sitting there, not noticing what it was.”

“No!” Mabel groaned and sipped her soda with a pout.

“The night goes on and suddenly…” Diego leaned in and whispered something to him. “Oh, that’s nice! A huge spider jumps out of the forest and into the clearing where everyone is asleep except you. Ford laughed evilly. “Everyone roll initiative!”

Seb gave the dice to Zach as everyone else rolled their dice. “Yay! We got 32!” Zoe hugged her twin tightly. Dipper got 25, Mabel 28, Dillon 16 and Miz 34.

“No!!” Zach pulled on his curly hair when Miz got a higher number. She cackled. “Clearly I’m the best~”

“Ok...so Miz goes first. Roll...hm...to see if you wake up so you can fight off the spider.” Ford grinned. Miz rolled and groaned. “12…” She thumped her head on the table. Ford laughed. “You are still asleep. Ok, team Seb, your turn.”

“Go, Zoe, it's your turn.” Seb whispered to his daughter. Zoe kissed the dice and threw it. The dice seemed to be about to fall on a low number so Seb moved it with his mind. “One, two, three...24!” Zach cheered.

Diego blew a whistle. “No magic!”

“We didn’t! blasphemy! you can’t prove it!” Seb accused his nephew. Miz slapped a hand on the table. “Objection! I clearly felt you use magic!”

“Urg!” Zoe pushed her dad away. “Can we roll it again without Daddy ruining everything?” She made puppy eyes at Ford. He hummed “Alright. But if anymore cheating happens I will make it so your turn gets skipped.”

“Ok!” Zoe threw it again, Zach tackled their dad to the floor, and the dice fell on 20. “Yes!” She roared. “We see the horrible beast and we burn it?”

Ford laughed at their eagerness. “Well you wake up, unfortunately, waking up takes up your turn so you won't be able to attack until next round. But at least you're awake enough to defend yourself if the spider attacks...and it's the spider's turn now.”

“What?!” Mabel groaned. “The spider rolled higher than me?!”

They heard the clattering of his dice. “What's your AC?” He asked. Dipper replied “19.”

“My turn!” Mabel rolled her dice. “28! Ha! I'm up and ready for shanking!” She had been having too much fun with stabbing things throughout the campaign. Dipper picked up his dice to see if he could wake up. “Natural 1?! Ugh! The world hates me!” He complained. The twins and Diego laughed at him.

Ford sighed. “You are dreaming of eating a cheese sandwich but it turns into eyeballs. Take 1 psychic damage for nightmares.”

Dipper grumbled as he changed his Health points. “Stupid...unfair...everything is picking on me…” Dillon gave his cousin a comforting pat and rolled his own dice. “25. I'm awake as well.”

Ford nodded “Back to the top. Miz, try again.” She rolled and cheered “Natural 38!”

“You leap to your feet, wide awake and can even use an action this turn. But you cannot move any squares. Just use an action.”

“I use my action to wake up Dipper!” Miz said. Dipper gave her a grateful look. Ford nodded. “You manage to shake Dipper awake. He comes to and sees the giant spider looming over him.”

Dipper and Miz high fived each other.

“Seb's team, what are you going to-”

“SET IT ON FIRE!” Zoe screamed. Ford laughed. “Which spell are you using?” Zoe looked at her spell list. “Bo-Bonfire!” She said. Ford nodded. “Which means the spider needs to make a Dexterity saving roll to see if she can dodge the fire.” He rolled “I got a 13, plus 3, 16. What's your spell effect score?”

“LET HER DIE!” Father and kids roared. “Our spell defense is 19! HAH!” Sebastian cackled. Ford rolled his eyes. “Roll for damage.” The spider ended up taking 18 fire damage. “Now it's the spider's turn. She will attack…” clattering dice “…Dipper again.”

“You're targeting me on purpose!” Dipper protested. Everyone laughed and the battle continued. Mabel managed to get a Sneak Attack on the spider while it was distracted attacking Dipper and Dipper was able to fight back and chop off one of it's legs. Finally, Zoe finished it off with another fire spell. Ford made a mental note to attack the party with something that was immune to fire. Seb’s team was strong with that.

Shermie was napping with his head on Abi’s lap. Wanda, Carla and Stan had gone to buy a few beers and were drinking and laughing outside as their family killed an imaginary spider and celebrated their victory.

“We killed it, Wands!” Seb called from inside the house. Wanda shouted back. “That’s great, honey!!”

“Killed it!” Zoe and Zach cheered. Ford dolled out the experience points and decided this would be a good place to wrap up. “This has been a good introductory course. Tomorrow we can send you all on a real quest.” He spent today letting them wander around freely. It resulted in the party raiding a bandit camp, Mabel stealing everything that wasn't nailed down and Seb's little group of pyromaniacs burning down the entire camp while Miz systematically stripped the clothes off every bandit they defeated, leaving them alive but naked at the edge of the town so they could be arrested. He made them set up camp to sleep for the night to introduce the concept of a Long Rest and doing night watches to warn the party of nighttime ambushes. All in all, he was sure they had learned a lot about how the game worked.

“Woo! We leveled up!” Miz and Dipper cheered. Miz jumped on the tall teenager and hugged him in delight. Dipper blushed.

“Aarghh! I am the spider and I will eat you!” Zoe showed off her little fangs. Diego and Zach ran away screaming as Zoe ran after them laughing madly. “Just don’t burn your cousin and brother, Zoe!” Seb warned. As Ford and Miz talked about the second part of the game, Sebas saw his wife and brother come back inside. “Heey! You’ve been drinking without us?” He pouted. Stan rolled her eyes. “And what did you want us to do while you played? Go to sleep like Sherman?”

“Maybe.” Seb mumbled. He couldn’t believe the other adults didn’t join in. And that they got to drink without him. He pouted. “Is there any left?” He asked. Stan held up a crate with a couple beers. Seb took one delightfully. Miz glanced over “Ooh~what're those~”

“Adult drinks.” Seb said simply and bit off the lid of the bottle. It didn’t hurt, but a normal person might have hurt themselves. Miz pouted. “I am an adult…” She whispered and searched for Wanda. “Mom, can I have a beer?” She wouldn’t even drink that much, just a little. “Sorry honey, Seb’s mom would be horrified if you’re drinking while looking like a child.” Wanda grinned sheepishly. Miz pouted and Ford, wanting a bit of revenge for this morning, walked over to grab a bottle for himself. “Hm. Pear beer? Haven’t tried this kind before.” He said with a grin. Seb was tilting his head back and drinking his own bottle. “It’s sweet!” He commented, which only made Miz pout harder. She wanted to try sweet beer.

“Can I sneak a bottle back to my room?” Miz begged Wanda, tugging on her shirt. “Please? Pleeease~?” She gave Wanda a wide eyed look with wobbly lips.

Wanda was about to reply that it could be risky when she looked at Seb grabbing another bottle. “Pines! You can’t drink more than one!” Wanda ran towards him. Miz grinned wickedly and grabbed a bottle before quietly snaking to her room. She was Bill Cipher and no one told her what to do! (Besides, this wasn’t a mom order, hehe). She popped open the lid and sipped on the cold liquid. Ooh~it really WAS sweet~

She hummed as she sipped on the liquid. There was a mild burn but it wasn’t as sour/bitter as most beers she’s tried. There weren’t any bubbles and carbonation either so it didn’t hurt to drink it. She heard some footsteps outside the door and froze when it opened and Dipper walked in with Mabel and Dillon. “Ah…” Miz hid the bottle behind her back. “You saw nothing.”

“Like heck we didn’t!” Mabel laughed. “I want to try some too!” She went over to the bed and sat next to Miz. “I mean, we’re almost in college already right?” Miz looked up at Mabel before turning her gaze to Dipper and Dillon. “Are you guys here for the beer too?”

Dipper blushed. “I’m just curious what it tastes like.” He protested. Dillon nodded without shame. “I know what it tastes like, but I can’t drink in front of Ma or Diego, Ma says it would be setting a ‘bad example’.” Dillion air quoted. Mabel gasped. “Uncle Stan lets you drink?”

“Yup. You practice somewhere safe so you don’t go around fucking up and being an embarrassment. I was actually surprised you guys never drank. Not even in parties? With friends?”

Dipper blushed and Mabel shrugged. “Dip-dop doesn’t go to parties, and I’m the designated driver so I can’t drink.” Dipper muttered “…can’t believe your friends trust YOU to drive them places…” He still couldn’t believe she got her driver’s licence before he did.

“I’m actually the saint in my group of friends. Except with Candy and Grenda, those two are super cray-cray!” Mabel cackled loudly. Dillon put a hand on his chest. “You? The saint? Are your friends like, insane or something then?” He teased. Mabel blew a raspberry at him. Dipper rolled his eyes and noticed Miz chugging the bottle. “Ah! You’re taking all of it!” He whined. Miz giggled. “Dun worry~ I made it so this bottle doesn’ run out~”

“Oohh! Gimme!” Dillon took the bottle from the demon and gulped it down. “Ah! This is amazing!” He grinned. Mabel showed him her plastic cup. “I don’t want to touch your saliva. Here.” She smiled adorably. Dillon rolled his eyes and poured the alcoholic beverage into her cup.

Miz sighed and fell backwards, staring at the ceiling. Ah...she thought she drank too much... mom was right... “Dun let me get out of thiss room!” She slurred and the teens agreed. If grandma Kari saw her drunk...and saw the teenagers with the bottle...the three teens shuddered. Grandma Kari was SCARY when she was mad.

Miz hummed as she drank her cup of beer. Mm~she needed to see if this brand came in other flavors...did they have blueberry beer? Orange beer? She giggled. The teens passed the bottle around, taking sips and laughing lightly, hoping they wouldn’t get the attention of the adults downstairs.

The adults downstairs had their own problems. “Sebastian! Put the bottle down! That’s enough!”

“NO! YOU AREN’T THE BOSS OF ME!” Seb screamed at Stan who groaned. He was worse than Ford! “I will put allll the alcohol in the pool and we will have drinks forever! With maaAgic!”

The twins and Diego were really confused. The adults were so weird. Their dad/Uncle Seb was weird. They grabbed the plantimals and went upstairs to play in Diego’s room, where it was less noisy with the triplets’ shouting. On the way, they saw their big cousins in Miz and Uncle Fordsie’s room. “Whatcha doing?” Diego asked.

Dillon snorted the drink out of his nose and Mabel shrieked. Dipper blinked slowly, already swaying slightly. “We...didn’t close the door?” He asked. Mabel facepalmed. “We forgot to close the door.” Dillon, the most capable of holding his alcohol, smiled at the children. “We’re just having some big kid boring playtime. You guys go play, we’re gonna talk about boring things like college courses and school...and financial aid...student loans can kill you.”

The elementary aged kids all scowled. “Ewww!” they all cried before running away. Dillon smirked. Works every time.

“Eewww!” Mabel cried too and laid down on the bed. She was a big kid and she didn’t want to hear about that either. “Guuyss! You know what would be cool?! We should go out somewhere! My boyfriend is 21 already! Yes?” Dillon suggested. “Miz? Are you coherent enough to come as well?”

The twins looked at each other in doubt. As much as they (Mabel) went to parties and drank, they were calm kids, they wouldn’t sneak out or do risky stuff like other teens. “Our parents won’t let us…” Dillon hummed. “Ok, not somewhere crazy...Maybe, the mall? We aren’t that tipsy! But seriously, it’s summer, and I don’t want to stay in the house!” He begged. The twins looked at each other. “Ok, but can we tell our parents we’re going to the mall first? I don’t want them to worry.” Mabel said.

“I wanna come too~” Miz got up and flopped against Dipper’s back. “I never went to a mall on Earth beeefooore~” She begged them. Yay~mall! Stores with stuff to look at and touch! Dipper sighed. “But...you’re obviously...more drunk than we are…” He pointed out. “Can you even walk straight?” Miz scoffed. “Then carry me.” She wrapped her arms and legs around him, nuzzling his face with her own. “I wanna piggyback ride...why’re they called piggyback rides? You’re not a pig?” Mabel frowned. “Now she is asking the real questions.”

Dipper picked up his ‘cousin’. “I’ll trust your drunkeness will eventually pass. Don’t speak in front of anyone ok?” Miz nodded and snuggled closer to his back. Heheh...the room was sparkly~ Dillon was already excitingly calling his boyfriend. “Well, he’s going to meet us at the mall.” He grinned. Mabel and Dillon held hands and squee’ed. “I can’t wait to meet your boyfriend!” Mabel was so excited to see how cute he was in person. Dipper tried to get up from the bed and wobbled a bit. “Ok...hold on, I’m not used to giving people piggyback rides.” He said. Miz nodded. As she pressed herself closer, Dipper blushed. “Ah...m-maybe have Mabel hold you instead?” He stuttered. “I-I’m no good at it!”

Miz blinked as she heard Dipper’s mental screams of ‘OMG SHE HAS BREASTS?! I CAN FEEL THEM?! AH!!!’

“Sure you are! But you only give Pacifica piggyback rides~” Mabel teased as she took Miz from his back. She held her firmer than Dipper did, even when she was shorter than her twin. No fun. Dipper was shorter than her until they were 15, suddenly Woosh! She grumbled. Damn tall male Pines. Mabel held Miz close and blinked. She glanced back at the somewhat sleepy girl. “You...aren’t wearing a bra...” Mabel commented.

Miz blinked. “But...I don’t need one. I’m not big enough to need one.” Mabel shook her head. “Even so, you should at least have a training bra. Girls usually wear them.” She remembered how her mom sat her down to explain this to her as she got older. (A good thing about having young parents was that they’d talk to you like friends). Miz whined. “But bras feel uncomfortable…” Mabel hummed. “Well then we just need to find you one that is LESS uncomfortable.” She nodded and turned to the boys. “Guys, we are going BRA SHOPPING!”

“Pleaseanythingbutthatnoway!” Dipper wailed. Miz came to his rescue by saying “I can just materialize a bra, I don’t need to buy one.” Dipper heaved a sigh of relief until Miz continued “But I don’t know what kinds I need so we might have to go to the store and try stuff on…”

Mabel ‘whoop!’ed and made her way out of the room. “BRA SHOPPING!” She gasped. “Oh! We are going to the beach too, right? We should definitely buy bikinis! I haven’t brought enough!” Dipper groaned.

“How many did you bring?” Dillon laughed. Mabel shook her head. “Just four.” Miz gasped. “That’s nowhere NEAR enough! Especially if we’re gonna be going to the New Jersey beaches! You need at LEAST 7! One for each day of the week!”

“That’s what I told my dad but he didn’t give me enough money!” Mabel grumbled about her allowance. It was fine when she was a kid but now she had to buy adult make up and clothes, which were more expensive. Miz giggled. “If you need money for shopping, I can make some gold for you guys to trade in for cash~” Mabel and Dillon gasped. “So...like...we can have as much spending money as we want?”

“Yup! I can literally create gold or any other precious metal so...” Miz shrugged.

“Sweet.” Mabel and Dillon smiled. Dipper made a face. Dillon patted his shoulder. “Don’t worry. We don’t actually have to be with them. We can go buy clothes for ourselves too.” He told his younger cousin. Dipper heaved a sigh of relief. Mabel carried Miz downstairs. The demon managed to burn off some of the alcohol by materializing some fancy golden necklaces, it was much easier to pawn off jewelry and claim it was old stuff they didn’t need anymore, than trying to hand over a chunk of gold. Dillon held onto the necklaces (in an antique looking box, just to complete the look) as Miz created them. He folded the jewelry up neatly into his pocket as they got downstairs.

“With whom?!” Shermie called out, his green eyes dilated. “With Dillon and his boyfriend.” Mabel responded. “No! You can’t go without someone I don’t know. I don’t know him! So you can’t go! Suck it!” Shermie fell over Seb who was hugging Sir Bedazzle and sobbing because he was just “Too cute for this world!” The adults were obviously very drunk.

“But Daadd!” Mabel sobbed. “Come on, Uncle Shermie, we will be fine!” Dillon said. “We’re pretty much adults already.” He groaned when he saw his own father lying slumped over the back of the couch. “We have our phones, and we’ll stay together.”

“You can’t go without an adult over 30 years old.” Shermie said. Everyone whined but Seb blinked and looked around. “Ssixer can go with you…” Indeed, Ford was the only adult in the room who wasn’t drunk, having just drank a little bit to spite Miz and giving up his bottle to Shermie when he woke up. Ford blinked, looking up from his journal. “Me?!”

Dipper made a sound at a pitch only dogs could hear. Miz’s head shot up and looked around in confusion. “Uncle Ford is coming with us? Yes!”

"Well, Sasha is coming with you too." Stan added. "You know, like she always does when you go out without us." He reminded his oldest son.

Dillon looked away. Sure. Always.

“Um, what? Where?” Ford blinked, looking so much like a confused owl that Miz nearly squealed. “To the mall.” Dillon was slightly upset, but going with uncle Ford who could easily be lost or convinced to leave was way better than not going.

Ford would be easier to ditch than Sasha. But at least Sasha was quiet and unnoticeable most of the time. In fact… Dillon looked around. She was here earlier and now he didn't see her. She was already 'on the job'.

“Um, sure, I guess I could?” Ford shrugged.

Everyone cheered. The twins made pouting faces at their drunk parents and got 100 bucks each! Haha! This was going great for them! Miz was creating gold to pay anyway! Dillon just grabbed his almost unconscious dad’s wallet and shoved it in his pocket. “Let’s go!”

Sasha suddenly materialized beside Stan. "Sir. I believe it might actually be more prudent for me to remain here. You and the missus are impaired and the youngest of the children are here. I should stay to make sure they are alright.”

"Oh. Okay…” Stan slurred as he laid on top of Carla to kiss her.

Ford calmly grabbed the keys for Stan’s car and the teens plus Miz got in. Dillon indicated where to go. Ford was quiet, still surprised he was put as chaperon. He looked in the rearview mirror and noticed Miz was cuddled up against Mabel. She looked sleepy. Was she tired out already? It was only the afternoon. He wondered if her physical form affected her state of being. He heard that children needed naps and stuff, right?

They got to the mall without much trouble and the kids told him that they would be splitting up, the girls were going to the women’s undergarments store and the boys were heading to the pawnshop. Ford looked torn as to which group he should follow but upon seeing the Vanessa’s Private Affair shop and all the...bras and frilly underwear, Ford abruptly turned and escaped with the boys. Dillon got a text saying his boyfriend would be waiting for them at the pawnshop. Ford and Dipper both shuddered. Thank god they didn’t have to go with the girls into that store.

Miz rubbed her eyes, she was feeling a little more aware after spending the car ride burning off her powers and the ethanol in her system by altering the shapes of clouds in the sky as they drove past. She was sure Ford and the others hadn’t noticed. Mabel carried her into the store and crouched down so she could get off. Yawning, Miz blinked around at all the fancy, frilly underwear.

“Ooh…”

She’s only ever gone clothes shopping with Pyronica. And hasn’t really bothered with underwear before aside from some sexy lingerie for her Bill form for fun. Though, she won’t deny it hasn't crossed her mind now and again.

“All right! First we get a cute bra, if you don’t find anything you feel comfortable with we could try a sports bra, I like those, I use them when I don’t feel like spending too much time on my clothes, and then we go looking for bikinis, ok?”

Miz smiled and nodded. This should be fun! This Mabel was so nice and kind. A shop attendant came over and smiled at them. “Hello. What can I help you with today?” She said in a friendly manner. Mabel gestured to Miz with a flourish. “This little lady needs a bra!” She said. They decided to buy one actual pair and find others that Miz liked for her to materialize later. That way they didn’t have to spend too much money.

The shop attendant smiled down at Miz. “Well, is this going to be your first bra? Do you know your size?” Miz had one hand on Mabel’s shirt. “Um...I don’t know?” The woman didn’t appear upset at the answer. “Well come along, we can measure you.” She led them to the back of the shop where the changing rooms were. “I don’t have to take my dress off right?” Miz asked. The woman shook her head. “I can measure over your clothes as long as they aren’t too thick.”

Miz’s dress had ruffles on the chest area so no one could see the shape of her chest but the woman took out a tape measure and wrapped it gently around her, pressing the ruffles down. Miz felt the heartbeat of her vessel pick up in mild panic but she was able to grip onto Mabel’s hand and keep herself calm. If she hadn’t gotten used to more intense constrictions with Ford...she wasn’t sure she would have been able to handle this.

The woman made a startled sound as she pulled the tape measure a little tighter, flattening down the ruffles so she could get Miz’s actual size. “You’re larger than I thought, still small, but larger than your size would indicate. You should have gotten a bra long before now.”

“It still helps your breasts grow shapely. You will thank your sister for bringing you when you grow up.” The woman smiled. “I will show you the models we have for you to choose from, alright?” Mabel and Miz sat down and waited.

“Do you think Uncle Ford will be fine with the boys?” Mabel asked. Miz hummed and eventually shrugged. “I guess, it’ll do him good to socialize.” Besides, what’s the worst that could happen?
Ford met his nephew’s boyfriend. The first and only time he met him was at Seb’s and Stan’s wedding. He didn't quite pay attention to him so seeing him now gave him the impression of ‘rascal’. He was smoking, had an ear filled with piercings and he had a piercing on his nose, as well as hundreds of tattoos on one arm while the other was being slowly filled in. He politely shook his hand, the boy actually confused him with Stanley and came up to hug him with a loud “Yo, Dad~ My man!!” Phillip fingergunned him before daring to do so.

"Eh~~ Phillip, babe, that's~ not my dad. That's my other uncle Stanford." Dillon grinned as Dipper chuckled behind his hand.

Phillip gasped, horrified and let go. Oh my god! And it had to be today that he showed more affection to his 'father in law!!' "Oh my god, I'm so sorry, sir. I-I'm Phillip Abbott…You-You met me that time in the-the wedding…" He said lamely.

The two cousins giggled while Ford stared at Phillip unimpressed.

The ginger boy wanted to socialize and get to know Ford, so he started asking him lots of questions. Ford replied dryly but the teen didn’t notice or care. When the conversation changed to what Dipper was studying and how it was his dream forever, get good grades, get into a technical school, start a show about ghost hunting.

Phillip, grinned at him. “That’s awesome dude!! I'm in med school right now and I wanna be a pediatrician, maybe specialize in endocrinology, but I didn't know what to study since the beginning like you!”

Then Ford did a double take. The kid was intelligent, he finished second in his class at high school and he was getting good grades while studying medicine… Ford felt bad for judging him so quickly. Then he blinked. “I think my other brother, Sebastian, might want to speak with you.”

Phillip looked over at him. “Huh?”

“Oh, right.” Dipper nodded. My cousin Zach is...well...he’s a female but he says he’s a boy now.” Phillip gasped. Lgbt baby? "Is he alright? Is he getting the support he needs?” Ford quickly reassured him, “Don’t worry. Sebastian and Wanda are very supportive parents. They just don’t know what to do. They want to help him but they’re not sure how to go about doing so.”

“Well, if Zach is a boy, he could get hormone treatments.” Phillip said. “Zach is 5 years old.” Dillon deadpanned. Phillip winced. “Oh...yeah...I think I can see what the problem is.” He frowned. “There’s...no right answer for when a kid should be given hormonal treatments. It’s not JUST for gender reassignments either, I’ve read articles about giving children growth hormones if their parents don’t think they’re growing or developing fast enough.”

Phillip shook his head. “Hormone treatments are always a tricky thing. Some doctors worry about what the long term effects would be, especially if it’s being used on a child who hasn’t started or finished puberty yet. It might cause problems when he’s older if he’s treated now. But-!” He said when everyone’s expressions fell, “Some children who are forced to go through puberty and develop into a body they don’t feel right with, can get...feelings of anxiety, self esteem problems and other fun things.” He sighed sarcastically, running a hand through his hair. “So, if they know FOR SURE and if Zach knows FOR SURE that he is a boy, there are hormone blockers that can delay puberty for a while to prevent any changes until he decides for real. In case he changes his mind when he’s older.”

Phillip continued. “Hormone blockers are mainly pretty safe, but they might have problems if they’re used for too long. Basically, it all comes down to how Zach feels. You said he’s 5 years old? He might be too young to know for sure, so...I’m not an actual licenced pediatrician yet, so don’t take my word or suggestion as law, but I think you let him wait a few years, maybe until he’s 9 or 10, since that’s usually when puberty starts, and if he’s still absolutely sure that he’s a boy, then he can get the proper hormone treatments. But if he’s absolutely sure, he would need to start his treatments before age 12, so that there would be less issues caused by puberty.”

Dipper, Dillon and Ford nodded. “Thank you very much Phillip. Do you happen to know any pediatricians who specialize in this sort of thing? I would like to help my brother and his family as much as I can.” Ford said. Phillip nodded. “I can ask around. Here’s my number if your brother wants to call me and talk. Once again, I’m not a fully trained pediatrician and you shouldn’t go with something just because I say it.” He giggled nervously.

“Even so, your suggestions were helpful. Thank you.” Ford nodded.

“The doctor inside you turns me on…” Dillon whispered to his partner.

The pawnshop owner stared at them. “Um...if you’re done with your conversation, I’ve calculated out how much the gold is worth…” The pawnshop owner said as he held up the necklace. “This comes out to $1100.” He said. Dipper and Dillon gasped. “T-they’re worth that much?”

The pawnshop owner frowned at them suspiciously. “You didn’t know? These are most likely 24K gold. I’ve never seen gold so pure. And the craftsmen ship is exquisite.” He had been surprised when he tested the piece with multiple tools and found every result to be ‘This is really nice gold’. He had been surprised that there was no stamp indicating it’s karat rating but when he tested it and compared it to the 22K gold he had in the shop, the necklace came out as more pure.

The pawnshop owner kept quiet that this necklace was worth MORE than he told them. True, if he were to melt the gold down to sell off to craftsmen it would be around that price, but if he sold the necklace, as is, to a collector or someone who planned to wear them? Worth so much more, the fine detail work on the ornamentation was beautiful. The chord itself was a double rope chain made of pure gold. He stared at these plainly dressed people. “Where...exactly did you get this necklace?” He asked suspiciously.

Dillion smoothly took over the conversation, easily noticing the man’s suspicion. “They were an heirloom passed down in our family. But none of us really needs it and we thought we would trade it in to see how much it’s worth…” Dillon leaned against the counter with a smirk Ford had seen Stan wear before. “And I think you’re trying to cheat us out of the true value of this piece.”

The pawnshop owner frowned. “But that is the market price for gold of this weight and karat.” Dillon scoffed. “And yet, you haven’t even told us what the price for the necklace is. We came here to sell the necklace, not the gold.” The pawnshop owner was now sweating.

Phillip smiled goofily. He loved when Dillon did that...

“So.” Dillon looked at his nails. “Will you kindly tell us what the real price is? I wouldn’t want to report you for being a fraud…and trust me when I say that I have the means to do it.” Ford couldn’t believe how much Dillon was like Stan...it was truly amazing how not only physical traits are passed down by DNA, but attitudes and personality as well. Or had Stan taught his son how to do this?

The pawnshop owner grumbled. “$3600.” He said. Dillon smiled, almost serenely. “There. Now that wasn’t too hard right?” The man handed over the wads of $100s, $50s, $20s and grumpily kicked them out of his shop. Phillip grabbed Dillon’s face and kissed his lips. “You are our saviour…” He whispered. Ford blinked at the wad of cash that Dillon quickly shoved into his bag. “How...where did you even get that necklace?”
“Miz made it.” The boys responded. Dillon sheepishly patted his bag. “She actually made two more but after this...I don’t think we should try pawning these two off at the same place.” Holy shit, having a magical PURE GOLD producing demon/dragon thing in the family was AMAZING...also, he was going to have to ask his dad to help him put this money into his, Dipper and Mabel’s bank accounts. It would be too suspicious for a teenager to walk into a bank with a bag full of money.

He looked at Ford and grinned. He pulled out his Dad’s wallet from his pocket. “So~ How do you feel about being my dad for a second, Uncle Ford~?”

“What? Why?”

“I was a minor when I got my debit card so it’s under my dad’s name. You can go to the bank, put this money into our cards and we can shop happily without people thinking we robbed a bank!”

Ford sputtered. “B-but I’m NOT Stanley! This is…” he lowered his voice “…isn’t this fraud?”

Dillon sighed and hugged his uncle. “When there aren’t cops around, anything is legal.” He whispered back and the other boys laughed. “Now move your ass, dad!”

“Yeah, Mabel will start spamming me if we don’t give them their part soon.” Dipper said. Dillon sorted out the $20s to pass out to Dipper and Phillip. “We can keep these ones since they’re less suspicious, but the $100s and $50s will need to be deposited.” He said.

Phillip looked at the $20s. “I get some too? But isn’t this from pawning off a family heirloom?” Of course Phillip wasn’t told about weirdness...yet.

Dillon kissed him. “Well~would you like to be family~” He teased. Phillip laughed and kissed him back. “You little sneak! That was smooth as fuck!” The two continued to be adorable together as Dipper and Ford headed to the bank. Dipper rubbed his arm. He was happy for them but public displays of affection of any kind still weirded him out. Ford was simply worried about pretending to be his brother. It...shouldn’t be that hard, right? Seb mentioned that the Stanley from when he was Bill pretended to be his brother for 30 years, even tricked and killed Bill/Seb that way…

“Hm…” Miz turned in front of the mirror and looked at the bralette she was trying on. Since she didn’t actually NEED the weight support, she opted for the cloth and elastic solution. It was much more comfortable. And it covered her breasts and nipples, which was all she really needed for modesty anyway. She was currently wearing a lacy black one that had a nice crisscrossing on the back. She admitted it was cute.

“Cute. Approved.” Mabel nodded. The two were in a changing room. As Miz didn’t want the strangers touching her, she agreed to let Mabel come in with her. Miz chuckled. “Shooting Star, you approved all of them!” The teen laughed as she looked at the light pink bra she picked up for herself. “Well all of them look cute on you! Would you mind if I try this on here?” Miz shook her head. “Knock yourself out.”

Mabel took off her sweater and Miz couldn’t help but stare. “You’re...actually pretty big.” She commented. The sweaters hid Mabel’s size very well. Miz looked down at herself and cupped her breasts. She had long since gotten over the fact that she would never grow any larger...but...still… (and she had the older Miz that brother made for her, at least she was big like that!)

Mabel smiled softly. “Hey, we both look awesome just the way we are!” She wasn’t that big either, but maybe for Miz it looked like she was? Mabel took off her bra and turned around. “And you looked hella cute in those bralettes! There are girls out there who would kill to rock them like you do!” She put on the new bra and adjusted it without any shame in the world. “How does it look?”

Miz looked the other girl over. “It looks nice. Really makes your profile stand out.”

“Aaww!!” The brunette squealed and hugged Miz. “I’ll get it then! I have one similar, but I wore it too much, the straps and the fabric are like, falling apart!” She giggled. “We have to choose which one you’re gonna actually buy. I’ll tell Dipstick to bring us money.”

Miz sat down and hummed at the options. They were all so cute.

“Fraud! Fraud! Fraud!” Dipper, Dillon and Phillip chanted softly as Stanford trembled in front of the bank. “Kids, I really shouldn’t-”

“Mr. Pines I didn’t notice your hands until you said you were worried about it. Don’t worry!” Phillip assured him.

“There is nowhere in the ID that says how many fingers you have! Go in!” Dillon kicked his uncle forward and Ford stumbled inside with the money in the bag. The teens gave him a thumbs up. Ford sighed. He coughed and shifted his tone to be more gruff. “Hello. I’m here to deposit some money into my son’s account.” Ford was told that Dillon had an app on his phone that would allow him to transfer money from his own bank into others. Vanmo?

The bank teller looked up. She asked him for his ID and the bank number. Ford handed it over, worrying about how Dillon had stolen (“Borrowed.”) Stanley’s wallet. “Here you are.” The woman looked at the photo then back at Ford with a confused look that made him tense up. This was it. He was going to prison. He was a criminal! He would be tortured for trying to pass as his-

“And could you take off your glasses, sir?” She asked kindly. Ford nervously obeyed. “Oh. There you are. Sorry, haha we are very strict on this but I suck at recognizing people if they don’t look like the photo, my bad!” She grinned sheepishly. She typed on her computer and quickly found his files. “Stanley Pines, yes?”

“Yeah.” Ford said. The woman typed a bit. “Yes, your son’s account is here, so you’re putting in some cash for his account? What’s the occasion?” She asked, just as friendly conversation. Ford hoped she didn’t see him sweat. “Just a little gift. He got into a good college and I wanted to surprise him.” Ford bullshit.

“Oh, that’s so nice, Mr. Pines…” The woman nodded. She asked for the money and Ford awkwardly put the cash on the counter. She didn’t seem surprised at the amount though, she saw this everyday, and simply registered the amount, typed down something on the computer and smiled. “Done!”

“Thank you very much ma’am.” Ford said as he turned to leave. Finally. Now he just had to get out of here-

“Wait!”

Ford froze. Oh no. She’s caught him! He was going to be arrested and then sent to jail and then he would never be able to return to his lab and work on his projects-

“You almost forgot your ID.” The woman held out the little card. “Y-yes. Ahaha. Sorry, I’m rather absent minded.” Ford laughed and went back to take the card from her. She smiled “It’s alright sir. I once had a woman forget the wad of cash she JUST withdrew.” Ford laughed and nodded. “Right, well, thank you again.” He got out of there and heaved a relieved sigh the instant he was out of view of the bank.

“How! Way to go, uncle Ford!” Dillon smacked him on the back with a laugh. Ford stumbled. “Y-yes...right. Well, I don’t plan on doing that ever again.”

“Aaw~ What?!” Phillip laughed. “But if you have a twin-triplet- you HAVE to take advantage of it! Why do you even have a twin for then?”

“To get extra candy on halloween as a kid.” Dipper said fondly. Phillip raised his arms in the air. “My dude!!! Awesome!” He high fived Dipper with both hands. “N-No...Just-transfer the twins the money…” Ford frowned a bit. Phillip was a nice kid, but Ford was starting to see why Dillon liked him so much. “Woah what?! Twin?!” Phillip looked at Dipper. He nodded. “You’re also a twin and didn’t tell me?”

“That’s awesome...though you can’t do massive fraud with a sister.” Phillip sighed.

“You shouldn’t do massive fraud either way.” Ford mumbled. The kids weren’t listening as they laughed and went along through the mall. Dipper pulled out his phone. “Oh, Mabel is asking for the money.” They stopped in front of the undergarment store. Dillon nudged Dipper. “Go on, go in there and give your sister her stack of $20s.”

“Nuh uh! No way!” Dipper blushed, seeing so many women shopping and laughing, holding up bras to themselves and looking in mirrors. “I have a girlfriend. Why don’t you go in? You’re gay! You are immune to women...right?” Dillon rolled his eyes. “That’s not how it works.” Dillon and Dipper turned to Ford. “You’re an adult, you’re supposed to be the responsible one.” Dillon told him. Ford crossed his arms. “I just committed fraud. I’m not doing anything else.”

The teenage boys laughed but quickly sobered up. “You go in!” Dipper insisted. “No, she’s your twin!” Dillon said back. “Goddammit, fuck it. I’m going to find her!” Phillip groaned. “What does she look like? Should I go in and look for a girl Dipper?” Dipper rolled his eyes and showed him a picture of Mabel. “She is with our cousin, she has black hair, asian complexion.”

Phillip nodded easily, grabbed the money and got in. “He’s so brave…” Dillon sighed dreamily.

Mabel and Miz stood in the store. Dipper said they were coming over now. Mabel had the pink bra she wanted in one hand and made Miz Scan and Save a couple others she wanted but wasn’t going to buy. Miz would create them once they got back to the house. Miz had the nice black bralette with the little bowtie shaped decoration in the front. It was a small bowtie but she liked it. They looked over when a voice called out “Hey, are you Dipper’s sister?”

Mabel looked over and her first thought was ‘Cute boy!’ followed by Dammit! Dillon’s boyfriend.’ “Yeah! Who asks? Cuz if you are single, I’m free tonight~” She smiled, trying her luck. The light ginger boy smiled. “Sorry, sweetheart, I’m taken by your cousin.”

“Oh.” Mabel pouted and Phillip laughed. “Well you see neither of them had the balls to enter, so I volunteered to bring you the money!” He bowed and handed the wrinkled bills to her. “You’re welcome! Nice bra!” He saluted and walked out of the store calmly.

Mabel pulled her hair. “Why are the cutest boys gay?!” Miz patted her back comfortingly. “I’m sure you’ll find someone.” Mabel looked over at her. “And you’re a cute boy half the time but I can’t be with you either.” She sighed. Miz laughed and gave her the chosen garment so she could pay. “Thanks…I guess?” To be fair, she did make her other forms purposely attractive, in that weird way of attractiveness where she could tell they were attractive but couldn’t express in thoughts or words why they were good looking.

The boys cheered when Phillip returned. “There! You three are so ridiculous! It’s just a store!” He looked at Dillon and leaned on him. “You know what I want? I want a drink!”

“Nope.” Ford shook his head. “You all are not allowed to drink.” Well, Miz was technically an adult, but not really. “Pft! I’m 21, sir. Thanks for thinking I’m younger~” Phillip grinned.

Ford deadpanned at him. “Still no.”

"But if you're sooo worried, then we both can have a nice drink and we give these babies apple juice boxes! How 'bout that?” Phillip suggested with a teasing grin. Ford shook his head. “I’m driving the children home.”

Phillip looked at Dillon. “How is he so different from your dad?” Dillon grinned. “And you haven’t even really met my uncle Seb yet.” Ford had the distinct feeling they were making fun of him. Dipper at least, looked a little sheepish. “Alright~We’re done here and now it’s off to the bathing suit store~” Mabel cheered as she and Miz came out with their little bags.

“What’s your name, kid?” Miz asked the ginger, she knew, but it was nice to actually introduce themselves.

"I’m Phillip! I am Dillon’s boyfriend, and if you didn’t know boys could like each other, now you know!” The boy smiled down at the little girl. “Of course I knew!” Miz said as she walked next to Mabel. A quick scan told her he was a good kid, but it didn’t mean she could trust him yet. “I’m Miz.”

“She is our Uncle Seb’s adopted daughter.” Mabel grinned at that. She glanced at Dillon, wondering if it would be alright to tell Phillip about magic. Phillip blinked at the little girl.
“Miz...wait, the same Miz who created the necklaces?”

Ford facepalmed. Where was a memory gun when you needed it? Damn this perceptive young man!

Miz looked up at Phillip when he crouched in front of her. He reached for Dillon, ‘accidentally’ touched his butt, and pulled out the golden jewelry. “You created this necklace?! How?!” Miz looked up at Dillon and then at Ford. Should she? Phillip seemed nice but…

Ford shook his head but Dillon nodded. Miz frowned. She looked at Dipper and Mabel. Mabel nodded and Dipper looked over at Ford and shook his head too. Miz groaned. It was a tie. She reached up to her ear and flicked her fingers, making a quarter appear. “Heads I tell you, tails I don’t.” She declared. Ford shook his head harder. “Don’t-!” Miz flicked the coin. Phillip stared in confusion. When he saw her make the coin appear he wondered if she was a magician. Coin behind the ear was the oldest trick in the book.

The coin plinked to the ground.

Heads.

Ford picked Miz up. “No. You can’t tell him.” Miz whined. “But...family is allowed to know right? And Dillon plans to marry him once they graduate from college so…”
“H-how did you know?!” Dillon gasped. Phillip looked over at him. “Really?” He asked with wide eyes. “You...really like me that much, babe?”

“Y-Yeah...Miz just ruined my 7 year plan...” He whispered. Fuck. Phillip leaned closer and kissed him, momentarily forgetting about the magician girl because oh my god, oh my god, Dillon was actually planning to marry him!! Ford looked at Miz as the teens shared a passionate moment. He’ll...just ignore that. “Are you sure you want to tell him?”

“He’s clean. I think I can tell him.” Miz said as she dangled from Ford’s arms. And he was going to be family in a mere 7 years anyway. She didn’t see the problem in telling him. Ford sighed. “If you’re sure.” He placed Miz back on the ground. Dillon and Phillip were murmuring assurances to each other. Dillon was smiling as he realized how happy Phillip was about his intended proposal. “Well...when I DO pop the question, can you pretend to be all surprised an’ stuff?” The two laughed. Phillip kissed his nose “Of course, babe. So, is this whole secret something only family is allowed to know?”

“Well, it NEEDS to be kept secret. You can’t tell ANYONE.” Dillon told him. Phillip nodded solemnly. Ford looked around “Can we move this to a less populated area? Without cameras?” Phillip looked worried now. How intense was this secret? They went to the bathroom and rest area of the mall. The rest area was for people to sit as they waited for the bathrooms. Miz looked around and spotted the security camera pointing down the hallway. She quickly triangulated (hah!) to find the blind spots.

Finally she sighed. Phillip was now looking nervous. He didn’t expect his simple question to lead to something so important. He watched as Miz raised her hands up, cupped together as if holding water. His eyes went wide as gold, ACTUAL gold, began to form between her hands. Little gold pellets forming one after the other. “Holy shit.” He hissed. Dillon nodded. “And apparently, it’s 24K as well.”

“It’s easier to create pure gold than it is to purposely put in impurities.” Miz stated. “Gold is an element. So I just draw together the protons and neutrons and click them together until they become what I need.” She handed the gold to Dillon who opened his bag for her to dump them in. Phillip was running a hand through his hair “Holy shit.” he repeated. “Holy...shit.”

What the heck?!

“So your uncle adopted a-a magic kid who can manipulate atoms to her will or some shit??” He understood what she meant. Basic Chemistry but holy shit she was USING OTHER ATOMS and creating GOLD!

The twins and Dillon looked at Ford. Should they tell him more? Ford shook his head and when he made a wiggling motion with his hand. ‘Don’t tell him now but after he’s officially part of the family we can fill him in.’ The three cousins nodded even as Phillip continued to lose his shit over this knowledge that such a thing was EVEN POSSIBLE. He stared at Dillon. “Is your uncle a billionaire?” He asked. Dillon shook his head. “No, he’s just an upper middle class dude with a successful brand of clothing living in a nice neighborhood.”

“How is he not the richest man in the world?” Phillip asked. “Because mommy said I wasn’t allowed to just make gold whenever I want.” Miz pouted. “Something about how it would unbalance the economy or something.” She pointed at Ford “But Fordsie asks me for stuff like Plutonium and Uranium all the time.”

“How is he not the richest man in the world?” Phillip asked. “Because mommy said I wasn’t allowed to just make gold whenever I want.” Miz pouted. “Something about how it would unbalance the economy or something.” She pointed at Ford “But Fordsie asks me for stuff like Plutonium and Uranium all the time.”

“Are you building a bomb?!” Phillip gasped at Ford who hurriedly shook his head. “No! I’m a scientist! I need them for some experiments I’m running!” Miz spoke up “Also, there’s so much dust in his room I can make a LOT of stuff." Poor Phillip felt dizzy. “I-I think I’m gonna pass out…”

“Philly, no, we haven’t gone to any stores yet!” Dillon warned. His boyfriend shook his head. “How are you just accepting this?! This is-this is incredible and you are like meh, have seen better, like what the fuck?!”

“Weirdness is part of our family.” Dipper shrugged and Mabel patted Phillip’s shoulder. “And it welcomes you with open arms!” She gave him her patented Mabel smile. “Besides, if you can’t even handle THIS much, you’re gonna faint for real when you meet uncle Seb and his other kids.”

“Can they manipulate the atomic makeup of the world around us too?” Phillip groaned. Uncle Seb was the guy who adopted Miz right? How did he even FIND a magical daughter?

Mabel laughed “No. At least, I don’t think so. But they can set stuff on fire and lift objects with their minds~” Phillip stared at her and then at Dillon as Dipper glared at Mabel. So much for keeping this a secret.

“Are you secretly some kind of Fey prince?” Phillip asked. Dillon laughed. “No. I’m 100% normal human. To my disappointment.”

He looked at the twins and asked the same question. “I think my superpower is how adorable I am! And perfect! Also Dipper has a birthmark shaped like the Big Dipper!” She lifted his bangs and Phillip grinned before Dipper pushed her hand away and fixed his hair. “Woah…I know boyfriends usually don’t say this…but I totally want to meet your family…”

“Come tomorrow. It’s my old man and his triplets’ birthday. Then you can faint cuz I wanted to look for a t-shirt hours ago!” Dillon grabbed his hand and pulled him up and everyone returned to the stores to buy more stuff, because capitalism! Mabel dragged them all to the Summer Shop for all your beach/pool needs. She and Miz gazed at the colorful array of bikinis and sighed longingly. The squeals they made as they dove into the racks and picked stuff out made the boy’s wince.

“So...can we go check out other stores?” Dipper asked. “No! You guys need to critique our bikinis!” Mabel called back. Dipper shuddered. He didn’t want to do this. Dillon and Phillip rolled their eyes and Ford just looked confused. They sat down and a couple other guys sitting nearby gave them a sympathetic look. “Girlfriends?” One of them asked. “Sister and cousin.” Dipper responded. They nodded. A solemn show of male suffering.

“Are you ready yet?” Dillon moaned. “No!” Mabel said. “But you will love it!”

“Mabel, girl, I am not that kind of gaayy! Let me go!” Dillon wailed. He didn’t know about clothes or anything people liked to stereotype him with. Phillip rubbed his hair. "And I only know about male clothes!" Dipper groaned “This is something that uncle SEB is for!”

“I...don’t understand? They come out and we just tell them it looks nice, right?” Ford said obliviously. All the men stared at him before shaking their heads. “You poor, poor idiot.” One sighed. Dipper facepalmed, wanting to defend his uncle but unable to really say anything about this.

“Ta-dah!” How’s this?!’” Mabel came out in a colorful tie-dyed bikini that had a little skirt-like section along the pants part. Miz was shyly tugging at her own bikini. Dillon blinked. “Are you wearing a-”

(hah!) it and demanded that she try it on. She glanced at Ford. “H-how do I look?” He glanced over and said “You look fine.” There was a resounding slap as all the other men face palmed. Miz frowned. “You...don’t think it makes me look fat?” She tugged at it again. Ford responded despite all the other men shaking their heads frantically. “Well, you ARE rather bottom heavy. And somewhat rotund...” He said frankly. “Especially around your belly.” The other men were already writing Ford’s funeral rites.

“How-how do I disown myself from an uncle?” Dipper muttered. “I don’t know him…” Dillon groaned. The other men looked at Ford as if he was insane.

Miz looked down with a faint “Oh.” she glanced up at Ford again “Is that bad?” she asked. Ford shook his head. “No, it merely means you have a good storage of nutrients to burn off in case of survival situations.” He nodded “And the heavier weight along with your low center of gravity means you are more grounded and less likely to topple over during a fight.” He had learned this during his 13 years running for his life and going hungry when he and Stan couldn’t find edible food. “Also, it makes you very nice to hug.” Ford added, because Stanley always told him that he should compliment women. Miz blinked at him and smiled. “Ok.” and turned to go back to the changing room.

The men and Mabel gaped at the calm man sitting next to all of them. Ford frowned. He didn’t like the looks he was getting… “Yes?”

“Dude…” A male employee who was also watching gaped. “I didn’t understand shit of what you said, but you didn’t die.” A boy told Ford. “We all thought you were dead.”

“But I am clearly alive?” Ford muttered. He didn’t get it, which was frustrating, he usually understood lots of things. Mabel considered her uncle’s words. He was sincere and blunt...but it wasn’t in a bad way, that was nice. And he made Miz smile when she was worried about the bathing suit.

“I’m sorry, don’t disown me…” “I do know you…” The other Pines boys apologized.

Ford looked around in confusion. He scratched his head.

The process got easier from there on out. The other men compliment their girlfriends/wives/daughters as the women came out to show off their bathing suits. Miz was a little more confident when posing for the boys and the other men started secretly revering Ford as some kind of god. They left the store with 8 more bikinis than they entered with, Mabel and Miz each buying 4 while Miz had a bunch of others Saved for later.

There was now a wardrobe inside her Mindscape that had a copy of the molecular makeup for any piece of clothing she scanned to be called up and Pasted into the world at any time. It was much like the shelves she had that contained various other things she’d scanned over the eons she’d been alive. She should probably organize them soon. She didn’t want her Mindscape getting cluttered.

Now that the girls finally finished their shopping, the boys got to choose the other stores they visit.

First, much to everyone’s surprise, the kid who had been shouting massive fraud all evening wanted to go to the bookstore. Dillon, Mabel and Miz cooed, Dipper rolled his eyes and Ford was just excited to go into the bookstore. Phillip searched for the book he was recommended by his college friend and because they didn’t have it anymore, he reserved one. It was about cancer and the new methods that had worked on different occasions. Ford thought about how curious it was that Phillip seemed so educated and cultured despite his crazy appearance. He was glad his nephew was with someone like him though.
Dillon spent 5 minutes inside a store and bought 4 t-shirts. $2 \times 1$, cuz he realized he didn’t have many short sleeved ones, and it offended the girls that he didn’t even stop to see if he really liked it. Then, they passed by a new robotic place, which sold drones, motorized little cars, robots, planes and everyone stayed inside the store for a few hours, gushing and giggling excitedly. Miz scanned everything. She should try and study them later, being an All Knowing entity required actual research after all.

Ford had to admit they were pretty well made, but the one he built the twins was better~ Speaking of…

“How are the twins enjoying the drones I made for them their birthday?” Ford asked Miz. She blinked before laughing, “They used them to drop water balloons on Carol when she was outside.” That had been nice. Bonus, the water soaked through her awful wig and it fell off, letting the whole neighborhood know that she was now bald.

“They-” Ford snorted and felt terrible that he didn’t feel terrible. “They really did that?”

“They love your gift, they use it every time. I think they’re gonna break it soon, they break everything they touch.” Miz giggled. “I will take that into consideration for gifts in the future.” Ford nodded.

After that they went to the GameGo store and Miz coo’ed over the new BakeMon game. Hm...she scanned a box with the hand-held system and a couple of the games she was interested in. Dipper noticed her doing so and shook his head. “No, we have to support the game companies.” She wilted and Dipper pet her head “It’s ok, I’m not mad. Just...no pirating games. Ok?” Dipper bought a new game for his video game console, yes, he still played! And Mabel patted his head as he grinned down at it. If worse came to worse and their trip to New Jersey ended up boring, he had something to do.

Ford noticed Miz glancing longingly at a small stuffed toy. He picked it up and carried it to the counter “How much is this?” he asked. “$15.” The cashier. Ford nodded and paid for it. “Here.” He handed it to Miz who lit up and hugged the yellow...rabbit (?!) looking creature to her chest. She then jumped on him and hugged him tightly too. “Thank you Fordsie!” She gave him a happy nuzzle and ran off to show Mabel her new doll.

Dipper and Dillon were smiling so widely their cheeks hurt. Aww~

“I guess they really are together...huh…” Dipper scratched his head. It was still really weird to think that uncle Ford was dating the Bill Cipher from another dimension...but they were actually really cute together. Then Dipper face palmed because he remembered that uncle Seb had adopted her and if he thought about it too much he was going to scream. Well, uncle Ford was with Xin, not Miz. And he was pretty sure Ford wouldn’t do anything with Miz. Urg, don’t think about it!

He took a deep breath. Happy thoughts...happy thoughts...

The summer sky eventually turned black and Ford deemed it too late for the teens. It was only 10pm, but Ford had been left in charge and he had to take care of his brothers’s children, no matter how old or ‘mature’ they claimed they were. The cousins and Phillip managed to convince Stanford to have pizza first and the six of them took a photo, under Phillip and Mabel’s insistence, at the restaurant. Miz devoured an entire pizza on her own, prompting Phillip to ask if the food was needed for her to keep her powers working...which was technically a yes.

Phillip kissed Dillon good night, promised he would visit, and went to find his own car. The Pines put all their bags in the trunk, climbed into the car and sighed tiredly. Cool day, but they were tired. When they were back home, they found every adult passed out on the floor with their respective toddlers curled up next to one of them, a blanket they dragged from their rooms covering their tiny bodies.

It was adorable, but irresponsible as hell.

Miz floated everyone to their rooms and tucked them in properly. She and Ford said good night to the others and retired to their shared room. As Ford lay down with a tired sigh, walking around the mall all day was...exhausting, he felt Miz snuggle up to him. He looked down and smiled “Good night Miz.”

“Night Fordsie.”

Ford reached over to turn off the light. Miz nestled into his chest, already asleep and hugging the doll he bought her.

CHAPTER 29 Fluff is what makes the world go around

Blue: Hello! I hope all of you are ok and staying at home! Hope you like this chapter!

Also, can anyone explain why Animal Crossing is such a big deal?

When Seb opened his eye, it was only to discover Wanda wasn't next to him. Urgh. His head was killing him but he smiled a bit. Today was his birthday~

He searched for the twins in Diego's room but they weren't there either, none of them. Seb scratched his head. Stan and Ford didn't take long to come out of their rooms as well.

"Fuck, my head wants to kill me…" Stan complained, but smiled and hugged his brothers. "Happy birthday, idiots."

"Happy birthday, Stanley." "Happy birthday, Fez!"

"Where IS everybody anyway? Carla isn't here…" Stan scratched his stomach. He knew Aaron and Sasha weren't here. He'd given them the summer off, paid vacation and all that. He figured they were safe enough, heck, they had the whole family here after all. At least… they were supposed to. "Wanda and the twins aren't here either and I checked, Shermie and Abi aren't here either…" Seb yawned. "Did they leave us here?" the three walked around the house but didn't find them. Ford noticed a note on the dining room table.

"I have no fingers and yet I point, I have no legs and yet I run. Although I have hands, they hold nothing. What am I?" He read off the piece of paper.

Stan stared at the paper. "Well, it was nice having a family I guess, I'm going back to sleep." He turned around and Seb stopped him. "Fuck you!" He laughed. "We need to find them!" He snatched the paper from Ford and read it again.

"Point...Run...Hands...Time? Clock?" Seb guessed.

"You suck, and your last name used to be Cipher?" Stan questioned. Seb flipped him off.

"Wait. I think he's got it." Ford walked over to the large clock on the wall. He inspected it and found another sheet of paper. "I start with M and end in X, yet the letters within me are never ending. What am I?"

"Why are they torturing us? Is it like that horror movie?" Stanley groaned.

"Shut up, this is fun!" Seb smiled. "But I don't have idea this time...genius?" He looked at his oldest brother for help. "What is it?" Ford frowned at it. "Letters…" he was somewhat stumped. Stanley rolled his eyes. "Well, while you two are messin' with that, I'm going to check the mail…"

"OF COURSE! Mailbox!" Ford cried. He and Seb ran outside to the mailbox and Stanley rolled his eyes. Nerds. He went out to see Ford pulling another note out of the mailbox. "If you drop me, I am sure to crack-"

"An egg!" Seb roared. Ford grimaced and continued reading. "-but give me a smile and I'll smile back."
"Oh. Mirror! That is definitely a mirror!" Seb smiled proudly. He was getting excited for the game, his leg bounced up and down.

"There's a bunch of mirrors in the house!" Stanley groaned. Ford hummed. "There's that large full body mirror in the main hallway." He said. "It's in the public area of the house and not in a bathroom or bedroom. Plus it's part of the wall."

"Eh. We can check it." Stan shrugged. The triplets went off to the mirror and Ford looked around. He made a startled cry when his hand sank into the glass. "Oh. I guess they got Miz to help with this little game." He grinned and stepped inside.

"I was wondering how they prepared everything so early. Come on, Fez! The sooner we finish this, the sooner we get to eat breakfast~" Seb grinned. "Ok! Move it then!" Stan shoved Seb through the mirror and he crossed as well.

They stepped into a room with doors all along the walls. In the center of the room was a table with another note. A lamp hung on the ceiling with a dangle chain. Ford went to the table and picked up the note while Stan looked behind him to notice the mirror they entered through was gone.

"Ah...Ford?" Seb grinned at the sight. "Cool. Danger. I like it."

"To find the right door, simply answer this. I can't be seen, found, heard or smelled. I lie between stars and under hills. I fill empty holes and travel faster than light, I'm scarce in the day and everywhere at night. What am I?"

"Great we'll never get out!" Stan just wanted to get Diego's card and a nice breakfast. Now he was trapped in a mirror! "Darkness?" Seb ignored Stan sulking and looked at Ford. "Cuz, no darkness in the day…" He looked at the lamp hanging above them and pulled on the chain. The light went out and they all blinked to adjust. There was a trail of glowing footprints along the ground away from the table and towards a door.

"That's so cool!" Seb laughed and the youngest triplet followed the footsteps, followed by a grinning Ford and a relieved Stan. Seb opened the door. They found themselves in a pretty room with images along the walls. There was a book, a letter, a bucket, a cloud, a maple seed, a dandelion, and various other objects. Once more there was a table in the middle with a note. This time Seb snatched it up to read. "What moves without seeing and cries without eyes?" He sat on the table and thought. "What...moves..." Ford and Seb hummed aloud. Stan looked at the images. "Cloud." He suggested. "It doesn't cry...but water falls from it?"

"Brilliant Stanley!" Ford said. Stan grunted and pushed on the cloud. The section of wall slid up and there was a long, dark hallway. Seb ran inside while calling for his brothers to hurry up.

"Move your asses!" he was living for this. They came to a stop. Suddenly the ground swayed and Stanley nearly fell onto Ford. They looked up into the dark and noticed the outline of a door. Seb stood up and felt around until he found the doorknob. He opened it and stepped outside. "Holy FUCK!" The Stans went out and gasped as well.

They were on a boat.

Out in the middle of a beautiful ocean with warm sunlight and the cool ocean wind. The sails were proudly opened as the boat swept along through the waves.

"Woah..." Stan's eyes widened. Despite their dream having been just that, for the longest time he actually thought he could sail around the world with his genius triplets. The three of them against the world, hunting monsters and getting hot babes. "This...this is just like I imagined it..." He whispered, wiping a tear away before his triplets could see.

Ford looked around. Is this...he went over to the side of the ship and looked down.
"Stanley...Sebastian..." He called to them. They came over as well to look down. There, emblazoned along the side of the ship...

Pines-o-War II

"No way..." Seb grabbed the wood tightly and looked down. It actually looked real... "Are we dreaming? Did Miz put us in a dream? I want ice cream rain!" He shouted to the blue clear sky and waited. To his disappointment, there wasn't any ice cream rain. Ford looked over at the horizon. "Wait. There's...land..." His brothers ran over to look as well. Yes. There was a sandy beach coming up. It was getting closer as they sailed towards it.

There was a 'poof' and a sheet of paper appeared in front of Stan. He grabbed it before it was blown away and read it out "What do you throw out when you need it but retrieve it when you don't?"

"A ball! Right?" He looked at his triplets. It made sense to him. Ford rolled his eyes. "Actually. I think they mean, an anchor." He said as their boat got close enough that they could see the beach clearly. "Yeah, that too." Stan blushed.

He walked over and found the anchor as Seb stared at the beach. There were tables and chairs set up along with their missing family, who were all cheering. "HAPPY BIRTHDAY!"

The triplets smiled widely and jumped off the boat to run towards them. The first one who hugged the three men was their mother who smiled widely and thanked the skies they were once again celebrating their birthday together. "Happy birthday, my boys..." She whispered. Seb was tackled by his laughing twins and Diego clung to Stan's leg. "You did it! Was it hard?!" Diego questioned. "Was it too scary?!"

"Of course it was! But nothing scares your old man!" Stan hugged the kid laughing.

Ford smiled at his brother getting covered in sand and he saw Miz standing there with a smug grin. "You did this..." She nodded. "Everyone else helped. Mabel designed the Cloud room. She actually wanted to make it more difficult by making you have to tap on an actual cloud, but Dipper told her that was too difficult." She hugged her doll and fidgeted "The boat is my birthday gift to you three...do you like it?"

Ford looked at their boat. He didn't know what happened to the original, he had been too angry to care. Seeing the boat was like reliving the best memories he had. The adventure triplets against the world... "I love it..." He crouched and hugged his friend. Miz snuggled against him. She was glad, she worked hard on it. Finding the old, half destroyed from neglect, old one, restoring it...

Zoe crowned her dad with a yellow crown, they crowned Stan with a red one, and Ford received a blue crown. "Sit! Breakfast!" She pointed at the table. "Uncle Sixer gets to drink the smelly juice just because it's his birthday." Ford laughed as they brought him a coffee pot. There was a literal feast on the table. He wondered how long it took to cook everything. He also realized they were on Glass Shard Beach. Everyone must have moved here while they were still asleep. He supposed they would be heading back to New York after the party to get their stuff, or Miz would just teleport them here? Were all their belongings already here?

While Ford was overthinking, Seb ran up to kiss Wanda. "I see you're in your bathing suit early in the morning~" He grinned. She laughed. "Yeah. We were going to spend today on the beach." No one seemed to come to the beach. Kari explained that it was because most of the place was full of litter. Miz had fixed that, her power sweeping throughout the sand until they were clean, soft and glimmering. Kari said that they might have to change the name of the town once people realized what had happened. Phillip had lost his shit again at the apparently super magical girl.

The triplets found themselves wearing normal clothes, not their Pj's like how they started the adventure and music was turned on. First, the kids gave their Dad and Uncles the presents they made for them: handmade cards with pen holders made with little painted sticks. Mabel gave each triplet a box with a sweater. Ford's one read 'Made' , Stanley read 'in' and Seb 'the 70s.' Everyone laughed. "Now I want you to wear it forever!" She giggled.

The party was loud and boisterous. After all the presents and food, they brought out the cake. A huge three tiered monstrosity with a different type of cake for each layer. Chocolate, red velvet and funfetti. They sang loudly and off tune with altered lyrics (since the happy birthday song is still under copyright and cannot legally be used in this fic) before the triplets stood around the cake, a candle for each of them.

"Make a wish!" Carla cheered as she held up a camera to record this. The triplets hummed about what they wanted before blowing the candles, making everyone cheer and clap.

"I want to blow the candles too…” Zach pleaded and Seb happily picked his boy up. He created a little flame in his finger like a lighter and turned on the three candles again for the twins and Diego to blow them again.

Dillon's eyes widened and looked at his boyfriend, who was staring at his uncle Seb now. "Right! I will formally present to you, my other uncle." He grabbed Phillip's hand and dragged him over to where Seb was helping to cut the cake. "Uncle Seb, this is Phillip, my boyfriend!" He dramatically pointed at the awkward thin and tall teen. "Oh! So you're the kid Dillon neeeever shuts up about?! He's a handsome one, good job, Dillon!" Uncle and nephew high-sixed.

Phillip blushed as he rubbed the back of his neck. Sebastian. He was like a dad to Dillon when Stanley was-kidnapped? That was how Dillon described it at least. His boyfriend was really fond of the man with really sharp teeth and just one eye.

"So, other Mr. Pines? How is it that you have powers? I know about your magic daughter, so cool, almost died, but your secret is safe with me." The ginger patted his chest. Seb smiled. "We just do." He shrugged. Phillip pouted, but didn't press the subject. He would get to know when he was officially family anyway. The thought made him smile like a dork.

They all settled down with the cake and chatted among themselves. Miz brought up that she wanted to introduce her Pines family to her Maniac family. Which brought up the question of what that meant. "Well, Seb and Wanda adopted me so I'm their daughter but out there-" she pointed up at the sky "-is a family that I adopted. They're like my sister and brothers and uncles...and one son... my other children died…"

Anyone not in the know stared at her. "What?"

Seb sighed. "Well, I might as well tell you." He turned to Kari, Abi and Phillip. Dillon grinned.
Guess Phillip wouldn't have to wait to learn more stuff about his family. "Miz is a shapeshifting alien who's actually older than planet Earth itself." he scratched his head "But she, sometimes he, is a good friend of mine and my triplets. She's the reason they survived out there behind the portal and she helped me fix the portal to get them back."

Phillip, much quicker to put two and two together, Dillon's dad was kidnapped for 13 years, Miz was apparently an alien, Miz helped them get home…”Wait. So your dad was abducted by aliens for 13 years until a nice alien helped send them home…and then started living with you?"

The Pines, who were used to weirdness, shared a look. You know what? That worked. "Yes, kinda." Seb nodded. "You got it...almost right." He gave him thumbs up. "What...what does a portal have to do with this though?" The young man asked. Ford coughed. "I was building an interdimensional portal in my basement. There was an accident…"

"This is like the plot to a sci-fi movie..." Phillip groaned. "Yeah, more like a horror movie." Stan shuddered. "Space is a dangerous shit. The portal sucked both me and Ford into it. And we were completely sure we were gonna to die, but we luckily met Miz who helped us." He explained. "Not return, she couldn't reopen the portal from HER side, but she helped us be ready to face the dangers of alien worlds."

"She actually helped me fix the portal." Seb ruffled her hair. "I would have taken a little longer if we hadn't met that day." he grinned "And it was by chance. She was exploring the multiverse and happened to tumble out here, on Earth. Smacked into me when she fell too."

The little twins and Diego listened in awe as they ate cake. Woah. They didn't know all of this! "And then Miz became our sister!" Zoe squealed. Kari listened in shock. It was always upsetting to realize she was lied to for 13 years. She believed Stanford was dead, that Stanley had been kidnapped, basically dead! And they actually had been in another dimension. Unfortunately, she already pulled their ears for building crazy, dangerous stuff and for lying to their mother, so she couldn't do it again.

"Wow…" Phillip rested his head on Dillon's shoulder. "That's some crazy shit right there…"

Kari turned to Miz, dressed in a cute yellow bikini with ruffles along the chest and a skirt-like section for the lower half. "Thank you. For protecting my children and bringing them back to me." Miz blushed at the gratitude. "O-oh…" she wiggled in her seat, very happy at the feelings she was tasting from the old woman.

Phillip blinked. "Wait. If you're a shapeshifting alien, then this isn't your true form, right?" Miz nodded. "Then...what IS your true form?"

"My actual true form or the default form I enjoy using?" Miz asked. Phillip blinked. "There's a difference?"

"Well there's this thing where I can shed my vessel to reveal the real me, which is made of pure energy, but I think that drives people mad if they see it fully?" Miz turned to Ford "That's actually what Fiddleford saw when he got sucked halfway into the portal. He saw another of my kind shedding his exoskeleton to feed. In the Nightmare Realm. Things there look more intense than they normally do." In other words, poor Fiddleford had seen the Bill from THIS dimension. Ford and Seb shivered. Phillip blinked."So your true form is too horrible to watch?"

"Yup. And no. It's just… overwhelming for people who aren't prepared, especially if you're up close to it. Imagine like being suddenly in front of the sun, inches away from it. But there's my default form, which is what I looked like before I became a being of pure energy," Miz shrugged. Seb knew she could show them all her Bill form...but was it a good idea to do that? He didn't know.

"How did you meet Miz then?" Phillip asked Seb. "I guess she didn't appear before you in her true form?" Seb paused. "Not in her true form, no. She was in her default form which...um…" He looked over at her. "I essentially look like a triangle. My species were a race of geometric shapes." She shrugged. "Have you read the book Flatlands?"
"Are you kidding me? That is so fucking rad!" Phillip eyes widened. "Wow, wow hold up. Flatlands? From Edwin Abbott? I am almost sure we're related! The one that talks about dimensions?!" Dillon rolled his eyes. His boyfriend was such a nerd. Wait, he was related to the guy who wrote Flatlands?!

Miz nodded while Seb looked confused. Someone wrote a BOOK about the Flatlands? How the fuck?! "The Flatlands were real. Though, they weren't entirely like what the book says. Mister Abbott took some artistic liberties." Miz explained. "The gist of it is similar. It doesn't matter anymore though because the Flatlands were destroyed eons ago..." Miz looked sad for a second. Seb just grinned. "They were assholes, glad they died." He nodded solemnly. Phillip scratched his head confused. Well, in the book they were really strict, but a REAL society like that sounded horrible.

"Wait!" Phillip turned to Miz. "You're a triangle..." he gasped. How...awful had she been treated in her society? Miz sighed. "Yeah. I was the lowest caste. But it's fine. The Flatlands are long gone and there are only a few of us left. Sort of." She glanced at Seb. "The dead enter the cycle of reincarnation. Normally they get wiped clean of their past memories but some people retain them."

Phillip looked between Miz and Seb, picking up on what she was implying. "So, mister Sebastian is a reincarnated shape from the Flatlands who remembers his past life...and...is THAT why he has powers?"

Seb stared at how Miz easily manipulated Phillip into coming to his own conclusions that were both correct AND inaccurate. She was implying that Flatlanders were an alien species, that had weird powers, sidestepping the entire 'becoming a demon' thing and Seb's 'used to be Bill Cipher' thing. And this would also explain why Miz, a survivor from Flatland, stayed around Seb as the closest thing she had to her kind. Without having to explain the whole dimensional counterpart mess. Seb nearly whistled. She was GOOD.

And he had to give Phillip some credit. He was very intelligent!

Phillip started shaking Dillon's shoulders, almost making him drop the cake he was trying to eat. "You. Have. the. Best. Family. Dillon! AAH!" He squealed high-pitchedly. "Ahhh! AAAAAH!" The ginger teen didn't even know what to say. He was talking to an alien! And a former alien! Who was his boyfriend's uncle.

Dipper and Mabel rolled their eyes. Newbie.

Miz grabbed a piece of cake and grinned. She was enjoying the emotions coming off him. He really was shook. She took a huge bite of the cake and moaned. She didn't make this cake, but damn, she needed to know where they bought this to congratulate them! Kari was staring at Sebastian. It was so weird to think he was a reincarnated alien. Hearing it at all felt like it was a huge revelation. But at the same time...it explained so many odd things she had noticed about Sebas growing up...and his magical powers.

She wondered if she would have been able to do better if she had just...known...

Seb smiled slightly, unaware of her thoughts and hugged her just because he was a hugger. He didn't know what he would have done if he hadn't had his mom growing up.

The blond twins hummed, their little faces covered in chocolate. They didn't know what re-cant-nated meant. "So we are aliens too?" Zoe smiled. Wanda crouched and wiped her face with a wet baby wipe. "No, you aren't. You just have powers. You're both perfectly human. And so is Sebastain."
Zach pouted. "Not fun." He said and everyone laughed. Zach hummed at the idea of dying and getting born again. That sounded...

"So...you're like...the last of your kind?" Phillip asked, very fascinated. Miz nodded. "Sort of. There are a couple other Flatlanders somewhere out in the multiverse. There was one who went insane and started wanting to destroy other planets to hide from his own grief..."

The Stans, Seb and the older twins winced.

"...and he had to be put down for the safety of everyone else." Miz finished. Seb rubbed at his missing eye, both remembering his and Bill's death. "Yeah. That sucked."

"Cool~" Phillip giggled and hugged Dillon's arm. He looked at his cake and stole a bite. "Hey!" Dillon protested. "Can I see your shape form then?" Phillip asked Miz. Dillon smacked his arm. "Don't be rude!" Miz looked around. "Not here, but tonight, when I take you all to meet my alien family."

"Are they the other surviving Flatlanders?" Phillip asked. Miz shook her head. "Some of them look like it, but no, we're all different species." She grinned. "I've been telling them about my human family and parents, they really want to meet you all." Everyone cooed and aww'ed. Ford smiled at the memory of Miz's friends. Now that he wasn't scared as fuck, it would be nice to see them again, maybe talk more to them. That alternative 8-Ball had been interesting, but he knew Stanley, at least, would like to see his old friend 8-Ball again.

The kids got bored of being on the sand and went to the shore to play. They were going to make sandcastles. Seb watched them closely. This fucking waters almost killed him when he was around their age. The teens also went to the water, farther away, and they struggled to take a cool photo. Everytime they managed to get the best pose, waves came and knocked them down.

Ford sat down and Miz crawled on his lap. "Do you want to go into the water? We won't laugh at your tattoo~" she teased, poking at his neck. Ford rolled his eyes. "Regardless, I think I'd much rather just enjoy the view." he pet her hair and she purred against him. They just sat and enjoyed each other's company for a while before Miz spoke up "You know, there is ONE problem with all this."

"What's that?" Ford asked. Miz leaned against his chest "I have no idea how I'm supposed to top this for your next birthday." Ford hugged her. "You don't have to. A simple quiet birthday is good too."

"Really?" She pouted. "Yes, I just...enjoy being with my family..." Ford said softly. There. He said it. He liked quiet and peace, he was in love with his work, but he didn't want to be like Miz called him out for. He liked being with his family, he just didn't know how to. His people skills weren't good like Stan's. Even with his therapy, Ford just... wasn't like Stan. He didn't need to be around people all the time to be happy. But... quiet time like this, with a small group of people, wasn't bad. Miz looked up at him. She booped his nose. "Dummy. They're happy just being around you too. You don't need people skills to be with people you care about."

"Miz! Come on! The water's actually warm for once!" Seb and Stan called. The one eyed man had gone out to play with his kids in the shallows, partially because he was worried and partially because Zach and Zoe had dragged him over. Stan was just splashing around with no embarrassment at his behavior. Diego was embarrassed enough FOR him.

Miz grinned and got up. "You sure you're not coming?" She asked Ford.
Ford nudged her forward. "Yes, yes. Go play with them." He smiled slightly. Miz grinned. "You know where to find us if you change your mind." the quiet scientist nodded solemnly. He felt someone sitting next to him. He looked up and saw his mom. She put on her huge sunglasses. She wouldn't force Stanford to go to the water if he didn't want to, he was a grown up man after all, but she wanted to accompany him.

"Yes?"

"What? I can't sit next to my eldest son?" She questioned. "N-No...I mean, of course you can..." It has been a while since he had seen his mother. Ford wasn't sure what to say to her. Before, there were others around to talk to her as well, but he was alone with her now. He didn't know if he should try to strike up conversation or just sit there awkwardly.

Kari knew how to talk to her boys though. "How is your research going?" She never understood half the things Ford talked about as a kid, even less now, but it made him happy to talk about science. "Oh! We are actually doing quite well! I have been making progress and my colleagues are working hard. I am sure in a few years we will have potable water everywhere! There was also this woman working on-" Kari smiled. There it was. His face was so animated when he spoke of his work. He was in his 40s now but if it involved science, he was every bit the excited child she remembered.

"Guys! Group photo!" Mabel spat her wet hair out of her mouth and picked up Zach to run back to shore. Zach squealed. He liked being carried. Everyone went to the sand, complaining at the sand sticking to their wet, salty bodies and Mabel searched for her selfie stick in the bag she brought. It was practically luggage, but she had to bring the essentials for a beach day! Besides, Dipper put his clothes in her bag too. Everyone crowded around Ford and Kari, both of them complaining when Seb and Stan hugged them and got their clothes wet as Mabel shouted. "Ok! Shut up and smile!"

"Say something stupid!" Stan smiled and everyone made a funny face. "Something stupid!" Click! Photo taken.

They spent the entire day at the beach. The triplets noticed their family had everything planned. They pulled sandwiches and snacks from baskets and they had a cool picnic in front of the sea. The ship bobbed, sunlight shining off it's sails, which had folded back up.

Zoe whined, disgusted at a bird who approached her to try to steal her food and she threw a rock at it with all her might, hitting the animal right in the eye. It shrieked and squawked, flaring its wings. The little girl screamed loudly, scared. Seb ran over and waved his arms. "Shoo! Go away!" The bird squawked one last time before flying off. Seb growled. Damn seagulls.

Zoe sniffed and clung to her dad. "Kill it!" She sobbed. "We already talked about this, no killing unless the other one started it." Seb said. "No killing at all!" Wanda shouted from her where she was lounging on a towel.

"But that bird started it!" Zoe huffed and didn't let go. Stupid birds...

"...I can make chicken for dinner tonight?" Miz offered. Zoe brightened up. "Yes! Kill the birds!" Seb rolled his eye and sat her on his lap to continue eating. Zoe stole bites from his sandwich but he didn't mind. Miz was walking up to some seagulls and trying to entice them closer. Stanley groaned "Don't encourage them!"

"But I wanna pet them..." Miz whined as she carefully held out a bit of her sandwich. "Come on—it's not like I'm going to eat you~” she sang.

"No! Don't get it closer!" Zoe cried. Seb sighed. "Miz, be careful." The demon nodded and crept closer. Almost...the seagull snatched her sandwich and flew off, knocking her over as it went "Ah!" She sputtered and shook her fist at the retreating bird. "YOU UNGRATEFUL LITTLE-!"

Everyone laughed as the girl stood up angrily. She looked at Zoe who was giving her a 'I told you so' look. "Yeah...well..." Miz blushed and folded her arms "I didn't want to pet you anyway! Baka!" Phillip choked on his soda. "She's a Tsundere alien!?"

"I STILL don't know what that means?!" Sebastian groaned as he flopped over onto the sand. Dillon, Dipper and Mabel burst out laughing. "You should ask Soos about it sometime." Dipper said as he tried to catch his breath.

"Yeah, I guess I—What the fuck, Soos hasn't called me for my birthday!" Seb gasped. "There is no respect anymore." Miz poked his stomach, making Seb laugh. "Soos is in Oregon. We're in New Jersey. Do the math."

"Three hours." Seb rolled in the warm sand with a grin. Wanda sighed. He better shower before getting in their room. "I want my call!!"

"Call from Uncle Soos!" The twins jumped over their Dad and started burying him. "Help! I'm getting buried alive!" The man wailed. "Miz! Help!" Miz sat next to him and sighed. "Alas, I can do nothing, for sometimes, being buried is how we all feel, when the despair of the unfeeling world gets to be too much~"

"Don't give me that philosophical bullshit! Miiiiiiiz!" Seb coughed when the twins poured sand on his face. "Hey! That's not how you do it! HELP ME! I'm going to die!" He cried desperately. The twins were going to kill him! Stan leaned back and put his hairy arms behind his head "You're on your own." Ford frowned, unsure if such an activity would actually kill him. "Perhaps you can put sand on his legs and body so he cannot escape, but leave his face free so he can continue to scream?" He said, following what he logically knew from the twin's dispositions to appeal to them.

The kids gasped and gave their uncle a huge fanged smile before moving the sand from their crying dad's face to his neck and body. "Thanks, Uncle Fordsie!" They said adorably before continuing torturing their dad. Everyone else stared at Ford in shock.

"What the heck, I said help, Stanford!" Seb glared and his brother blinked. "But now it is at least safer, you can't choke on the sand, and your children are happy." Ford argued with a shrug. Miz tilted her head "That makes sense to me." Everyone groaned. These two.

"Well...if I'm going to be buried alive...I would like a juice pack please." Seb gave in. Miz took one of the fruit punch packets and stabbed it with the straw before placing it next to Seb's head. "Thanks." He sucked on his drink and pouted as Zach and Zoe continued to pile sand onto him. He coughed when he felt himself gulping down sand. Urgh, little demons torturing him!

Diego joined his cousins after his father allowed him and Seb simply laid down and closed his eye. "Wanda, can you write my will for me?" His wife rolled her green eyes. "You're so dramatic, honey..." Mabel looked at her twin. "Do you want to get buried?!"

"No." Dipper deadpanned. "He said yes! Come on, guys! Help me!" Mabel, Dillon and Phillip stood up and chased Dipper. "Get him!" Mabel cried and her brother screamed. "HELP!" Dipper was dragged to the ground and quickly beset by his cousins. Dipper reached out to his parents "Mom...dad...help~" Shermie put on his sunglasses and closed his eyes as Abigail napped on a towel to try and get a tan. "That's great, Dipper…" He mumbled without even looking up. Dipper stared at Seb and they both gave a sad sigh. Abandoned by their family's at a time of need. If their arms were free they would have fist bumped.

Dillon and Phillip grinned before putting Dipper above Seb who was already covered in sand and started covering Dipper who continued struggling. Their little cousins helped by bringing water and wet sand to make it more dense and difficult to escape later. Miz didn't help but she didn't hinder them either. "Looks like you guys are going to spend some quality time together."

"Miz, I don't like this, help us!" Dipper was already unable to stand up and in the way he was positioned, he formed an X with Sebastian. "I have resigned myself. The water will rise and we will die." Seb said solemnly. "Daaad! Tell Mabel to stop!" the boy cried. Zoe lifted his brown bangs to look at his birthmark. "Ooh~ Pretty!"

Miz sat on the sand and patted Seb's curly and sand-covered hair. "I wouldn't let you two die." She assured him. "But think of it this way— the sand is going to make your skin super smooth once we dig you guys out." That caught Seb's attention. "Like, exfoliating?" Miz nodded. "More like sanding off all the dead skin." The birthday man grinned and closed his eye. "Ok!" He squealed excitedly. Dipper didn't care and continued struggling. "I don't want smooth skin!!!"

Half an hour passed and Dipper realized he wouldn't be let go. He lifted his head a bit and found out Seb had fallen asleep. Good thing the sun was being blocked from their heads, because they would have ended up all burned and red. Their family didn't have much luck getting a tan. Everyone packed up as the sun began setting after their long day on the beach. "How're we getting back to New York?" Stan asked. Miz pointed at the boat. "Once we're out of sight from the shore, I can teleport us. Then I just shrink the boat down so you can keep it around and deploy it whenever you want to go sailing."

The teens and the children helped Dipper and Seb escape from their sand prison and everyone got in the boat. "I don't wanna leave…" Zoe pouted as Wanda carried her to the boat. "We'll come back, don't worry."

Miz rubbed her palms together. Take the family to New York, make sure they were absolutely clean from sand, she didn't want it in the house, and then take them to meet her other family. She should tell Pyronica or Hec so they could tell everybody, though it would be hilarious to see their shocked expressions when she came in with so many humans! Well, she would have to build a construct for all of them first.

Once everyone got on the ship and Stan pulled up the anchor, Miz flung the sails out and they took off into the sunset. Mabel was taking photos like crazy. Phillip and Dillon were doing the Titenic pose, while Stan shouted "Hey! Hands off there!" from the background. Miz waved her hand to dry and clean everyone. Hm...it was going to get cold here soon, she should ask Mabel for some sweaters.

Seb snuck up behind Stanford who was watching the horizon and shouted. "BLERGH!" Stanford jumped and he would have thrown his triplet off board if he hadn't calmed down fast enough. "Dammit, Sebastian, don't do that!"

Seb was laughing but he had a hand on his chest as his heart hammered against his ribcage. "Wo-Worth it…” he gasped. Ford rolled his eyes. "I'm still tempted to throw you overboard." Mabel ran by and threw sweaters at them. "SWEATERS FOR EVERYONE!" Ford pulled the sweater off his face. "Do we really need this? We're going to be at Stan's house soon."

Mabel scoffed. "It's still going to be cold once it's night time. Besides, you need to wear your birthday sweaters!"

Ford rolled his eyes with a smile. "Right…” He put on the soft garment and his niece squealed, hugged him and ran away to give everyone their sweaters. Zoe and Zach trailed after her, wanting to help deliver them. "How did you make them so fast?" Zach questioned. Mabel gave him two sweaters so he could give Stan and Carla. "You aren't the only one with superpowers, Zachy." She poked his nose. He gasped. Sweater super powers. That sounded amazing.

Miz looked over. "Ok, I think we're far enough. Teleporting in...3...2...1…"

Everyone braced themselves as they were swept away into the air and reappeared in Stan's living room. "Oof!" Miz floated down gently and landed to sit on top of the pile. "Woot! Successful transport!"

The humans all stumbled and groaned, still not used to teleportation. Miz clapped her hands as the Pines stood up. "Clean yourself, I cleaned the sand off you, but even I can't do much for your general ickyness! And be fast, I want you to meet my other family!" She smiled widely. She was going to eat, needed a lot of energy to create 15 vessels! She went off to order some pizzas and subs.

Everyone obeyed the demon/alien. Dillon almost managed to sneak Phillip into his room, but Stan caught him and sent him to another bathroom with a stern look. No funny business in his house, not one he could potentially see at least...he hoped Ford and Miz weren't doing anything.

They weren't. Miz was busy preparing herself some snacks to tide her over until the food delivery arrived. Should she feed the Pines? Nah, their constructs wouldn't feel hunger anyway, and they could eat with her if they wanted to! She hummed happily to herself as she searched for her ingredients to make the best dinner ever. What will they think about them? They said they were excited about meeting them, but what if they didn't like them?

Everyone came down to see multiple boxes of pizza and many subs lying around along with a gorgeous spread of other food. Miz was already inhaling the subs. Wanda sighed. How much did this demon eat? "Pizza!" The teens and children squealed and went to grab a slice. Miz laughed. "There's plenty of food."

"Zoe, wait! Let me dry your hair!" Seb went after her and wrapped a hat towel on her long hair. Everyone sat around to get some food too. "Once we're done eating and it's time for bed, I can bring you all to my world through your dreams."

"Sleepover!" Mabel and Phillip squealed. Stan grumbled but accepted the sleepover. He knew Phillip was a good boy. Carla patted his arm proudly.

The family finished eating and Miz sent them to sleep. She would take no buts and no fucks. She was too excited. The Pines said their goodnights and Miz pushed Ford into their room. Ford tilted his head and the demon narrowed her eyes. "Can you sleep? I can't take you there if you don't!"

Ford rolled his eyes and laid down on the bed. "You are quite excited about this." Miz sat down next to him. "Of course I am!" her tail popped out to wag back and forth. "I want you guys to meet each other...I hope you all like each other…” Ford pet her head. "Well Stanley and I like them. I'm sure it'll be ok." He laid down and relaxed. "Good night Miz." She laid on his chest and sighed. "Night Fordsie."

Everyone opened their eyes to find themselves floating in a dark void. Stars twinkled in the distance. Everyone panicked for a second before they saw Miz floating with them. There was a huge pyramid floating below them that caused a few instinctive flinches from the Weirmdageddon survivors. "Whoa." Shermie waved his arms. "Is this...space?"

"Is that your spaceship?!" Phillip cried. Miz giggled and floated them all to the large triangular opening on the side of the Death Star. "It's technically a ship. I haven't really flown it anywhere though, so it's more like my house." The group touched down on the ground and stumbled slightly. Miz looked around. Still early 'morning' so her friends should be waking up soon. She floated there and looked at the humans. "Um...so...I'm going into my triangle form now. So, don't freak out or anything..."

Phillip nodded eagerly, Kari just raised an eyebrow and Shermie and Abi nodded. "Oh I am so ready!" The ginger teen grinned. Miz closed her eyes and began glowing. Her body came apart back into free floating particles and rebuilt themselves into the shape of a 5ft tall triangle. She kept her dress, just to make it clear it was still her. She opened her eye to see everyone staring at her.

Seb's family were deadpanning, used to her triangle form, Ford was a little more comfortable with her form, the dress really helped. Stan was calm but his family was gaping slightly at Bill. Dillon suddenly remembered Mabel described Bill Cipher like a 'fancy jerk'. Miz did have a top hat and a bowtie like the twins said, along with the little dress. Said twins looked a little awkward while their parents gaped in surprise. Kari blinked, she had expected a more...alien form, this form was kinda adorable, and quite familiar...Phillip lost his shit.

"Holy fuck! You look so fucking cool! You really are a triangle! And you have one eye!" He cried. Bill rubbed her arm self-consciously. "My friends are more used to this form..." Wanda patted her top hat. "Bill, it's ok, honey." Wanda smiled. The triangle hugged her before turning to look at everyone. "Ok, your bodies are in your dimension, I brought your minds here, and I will create bodies for you to wear, it's the only way you can interact with everyone."

"Our bodies..." Shermie looked down at himself, seeing his body was transparent. Oh.

"I want wings!" Zoe wiggled in her place. "Pretty wings!" Bill flicked her fingers, "Done." Zoe felt herself materialize and felt something on her back. She looked behind herself to see glimmering butterfly wings. "WINGS!" She tried opening them but it was hard.

Wanda frowned worriedly but Seb patted her shoulder. "It's just a construct, it's not her real body." Bill flicked her fingers again and everyone gasped when their new bodies materialized. "Any requests? I can do alterations?"

It was so much easier to shapeshift constructs than people's real bodies. She could design the constructs without pain receptors after all! She normally kept them because pain was a danger sense but if it was going to be a fun short term thing for the Pines family, she forwent that part of the construction process.

"Give Dipper a deer body!" Seb teased and Shermie hugged his son to himself. "Don't you dare!" He growled but Mabel stepped in front. "I want wings! Angel wings! All fluffy and pretty!" the adults rolled their eyes but Dillon groaned when Phillip jumped. "I want horns! Like a demon! And a tail!" He wiggled excitedly. This was so FUCKING cool!
Miz waved her hand and Dipper groaned when he looked down at his body and realized he had a tail and deer ears now. "Really?!" He blinked and touched his head. "I've got antlers?!" He didn't have antlers before...then again, he was a child back then. At least he wasn't a full deertaur this time. Mabel was flapping her new wings awkwardly as she tried to fly. Phillip gasped at his tail. He grinned mischievously at Dillon. "Hey~does this make me an incubus?" He purred.

"I don't know what that is...but say it again." Dillon flirted and hugged his boyfriend. Phillip wrapped his tail around Dillon's leg. "Ah! No! Stop!" Stan ordered and Dillon scowled at him for ruining his fun. Bill laughed. "You all are so boring! Too used to your bodies." She gave everyone else a construct. She sighed. She had wanted to see them all different.

"Hey~ This body looks familiar." Seb mused as he examined his arms. Bill giggled awkwardly. "Well~ I think you looked so nice in that form!" It was a mix between his normal human form and the vessel she created for him in Blue's dimension. His hair was sticking up and glowing half yellow, his eye was a lighter brown while his arms had black markings.

"I can give you your normal body if you want?" "Nah, it's ok." Seb reassured Bill before showing off to Wanda who was gaping with conflicted emotions.

Oh well. "My friends should be waking up soon, I need to go make breakfast."

"Wait. Isn't it nighttime?" Stan asked. Bill nodded. "In YOUR dimension it is. Here it's early morning." "Oh." Stan nodded.

"Oh! Almost forgot! Boop!" She smiled and the Pines except Stan and Ford gasped when they felt a shiver run down their spines. "Now you can talk to them! Wait here! I will go find everyone!" Bill squealed and flew away. As Bill left the room, Dipper and Mabel looked around warily. It was the Fearamid...but...not? The one they had been in 5 years ago had been pretty empty, lots of free space for dancing demons. This one though...

"They've got a huge flat screen TV?" Mabel gasped. "They have...video game systems?" Dipper's eyes sparkled. He looked at the consoles and shelves of what were clearly alien video games. He could recognize a controller even if the buttons looked different. So cool~

Dillon and Phillip stared at the Space Idol Jan-Jan posters along a wall. Mabel gasped when she saw them too. "Ooh~who is THIS alien hottie?" The ginger's tail started wagging and Mabel twitched her wings with a grin. "He looks kinda human, though? I mean, aside from the extra arms..." Dipper commented and his cousins drooled. He rolled his eyes. "Even in space, there's divas..." He muttered.

Seb looked around the place too. Huh. So this was Bill's home? It looked quite cozy here. The couches were all soft looking and there were large, colorful pillows everywhere. He saw Stan turning on the TV (Right, he and Ford had been here before), then at the teens staring at a poster and raised an eyebrow. Bill liked a singer? He didn't know that. He heard the sounds of pattering footsteps and clinking chains. Seb looked over and saw a large green ogre run into the room.

"STAAAAAN!" 8-Ball rumbled with joy. Stan looked up and grinned. "Eights!" He leaped off the sofa and landed on the ogre in a bear hug. "How've you been, man?" The two laughed. Shermie stared at the large creature...alien? His eyes widened when a GIANT ALIEN LADY sauntered into the room. Those hips though! And she was pretty much naked. Holy shit!

"Stanny! Fordsie!" She squealed. "I haven't seen you cuties in forever!" She licked her lips. "My~you look even more delicious than I remember~" Carla scowled. What the heck was she talking about? "Haha! You look awesome yourself, Hot stuff!" Stan used the nickname he gave her years ago. Carla, picking up Diego for a better effect, stomped towards her husband. "Stan? What's happening? Who is this woman?"

Stan sweated. "Ah...it's not like that, I swear! Pyronica's just a friend." Said Cyclopian blinked down at Carla. "Ooh--is this your mate? She's pretty." She crouched down to look at them. "Is this your child? He's so small!" Diego stared up at her in awe.

"You are a Cyclops!" He exclaimed with a grin. Carla relaxed at the fact that she wasn't really flirting with her man. "Oh, his name is Diego, I am Carla." She introduced herself. "And, yeah, I am Stan's mate." She grinned proudly. Pyronica still couldn't believe how humans made babies so small. "Hey, Dillon, stop flirting with your boyfriend and come over here." Pyronica saw a young man who resembled Carla trot over them. "This is my older son, Dillon!" Stan introduced him proudly.

"'Sup?"

8-Ball crouched to look at Diego when Carla put him on the floor. "He is tiny..." The ogre tilted his head to look at it. A small gelatin-like creature poked its head out from 8-Ball's side and squeaked. "Here Toobie. A baby. Like you." 8-Ball pulled the squishy alien down and placed him in front of Diego. "I'm no' tiny! I'm almost five! I'm a big boy now!" Diego protested. 8-Ball gasped. "Five years old? How are you capable of speech? And...movement?" He poked the child gently. "Nymphs take at LEAST 10 years to develop that much... and Toobie still can't talk yet!"

Diego giggled. "I can also write my name, and everyone's names, and the colors, and I know how to read and count till 100!" 8-Ball gasped again. Humans were so intelligent! Was that why Bill liked them so much?! Seb stared with his jaw dropped at Pyronica talking to Stan and Ford. It was weird, they had fought against their other dimensional self just 5 years ago...

The rest of the Pines awkwardly waited for Bill to return. A couple other aliens came out and greeted Stan and Ford. Kryptos came out, sneered at Ford and turned to leave. "I'm gonna help Bill in the kitchen." He muttered.

"Bill?" Shermie asked. Seb sighed. "Miz uses a different name for each of her different forms. So, triangle is Bill, little girl is Miz, adult man is Xin and cyclops is William." The other Pines stared. "That's so confusing."

Seb shrugged and smiled. "You get used to it." Dipper tensed up when Teeth and 8-Ball approached him to say hi. "Don't eat me." The teen pleaded with a wince, his fluffy, brown ears falling. Teeth gasped. "W-why would we eat you? You're...Bill's human family right? He told us about you."

8-Ball stared at Dipper. "Are you Bill's new little brother? He didn't really explain it too much." Dipper calmed a little. These two...seemed very different from the ones he met during Weirdmageddon. Dipper shook his head. "I'm Mi-er...Bill's cousin now." 8-Ball gave Dipper a lopsided smile. "I used ta have brothers an' sisters until my sire threw me out for my weird eyes." He shook his head and his eyes made crackling sounds. "So I'm glad Bill's got some brethren now. He's been a lot calmer an' happier recently."

"Oh, really?" Dipper tried to spot Bill, but he wasn't in the living room. Where was she anyway? Also, pronouns were confusing Dipper at the moment.

Meanwhile in the kitchen, Bill sighed at Kryptos' whine. "Why did you bring them again?" the compass complained as he helped Bill stack the sandwiches. "Well, it was their birthday and I wanted you all to meet my other family." Bill pouted. "You haven't even seen Seb and my mom."
"I don't need to. I know what Stanford and Stanley look like." Kryptos sighed. Bill nudged him. "This is different. Seb and Wanda are my PARENTS. Don't you want to meet my parents?"

Kryptos blushed. "Oh. Well..." he grinned. "So you're introducing me to your parents huh?" Bill nodded, unsure what those emotions he was tasting meant. Eagerness, giddy anticipation...

Bill shrugged. Guess Kryptos was more excited to meet his family than he thought. He carried the breakfast for his friends and floated back out to the living room. "You'll like them. My new mom is really nice." Kryptos smiled. "I will be the perfect gentleman around them." he assured her and Bill gave him a hug "Thanks Kryp."

They went out to the living room where the rest of his maniacs were sitting around, chatting with the humans. Bill saw Dillon, Phillip and Mabel in front of the posters of himself as Jan-Jan. It was kind of narcissistic but he actually really liked those promotional posters Ivan made him pose for. He looked good in them~

Keyhole was chatting with them. "Yeah! Space idol Jan-Jan is the BEST. I've got all his songs downloaded into my e-Pod." He held up his music player. "Maybe Jan can give us a private concert later."

"Wait, you guys can rent him out for a private concert?" Dillon asked. Keyhole gave him a strange look before he realized. "Oh. You didn't know. Jan is one of Bill's other identities." The three stared at the alien. "Wait. Wait. You mean...that little girl...can turn into a super hot guy as well as a triangle?" Phillip asked. Mabel giggled. "I've actually seen her in another hot guy form. And you did too~ right Dillon?" Dillon grinned "Such a nice ass..." The two sighed. "We should ask him to go back into his Xin form at some point." Mabel said.

Phillip looked over to see Miz...ah...Bill, come back into the room, huge plate of sandwiches held in front of him. "Well, no time like the present. Let's ask him to turn into sexy eye candy." Keyhole tilted his head in confusion. Eye candy? Like candy you eat with your eyes? The only person he knew who ate with their eyes was Bill. He was certain humans didn't, Stan and Ford ate with their mouths, so he wasn't sure what they meant.

Zoe and Zach were saying hi to all the nice aliens because they were Bill's friends and enjoyed the coos and compliments they received. They approached the coolest alien, the pink cyclops, last. "Hi! We like the fire you're making." Zoe pointed out. "We can do it too! Do you want to see?" They asked innocently. Seb and Wanda winced a bit and ran towards the twins. "Hey, don't bother Pyronica." They picked up one kid each. "We just said we liked her fire all around her body." Zach replied.

Pyronica stared down at the children. Oh. They were so small. They looked so delicate...fragile. "It's fine. They're not bothering me." She assured the parents. "So...are you two the humans who adopted Bill?" she looked them over. Bill had said his new mother was yellow-ish. She approved. It made sense for Bill to have a yellow mother, in her humble opinion.
"Yeah, I'm Wanda…" She felt a little intimidated standing in front of the huge woman, but she seemed nice. "You must be Pyronica, Bill talks a lot about you." "A lot." Seb smiled. "I'm Sebastian, Stan and Ford's triplet."

"Really? You don't look a lot like them." Pyronica shrugged. He was shorter, and he was missing an eye. Humans had two of them, "But he is!" Zoe insisted, wanting to flap her new wings but dad was crushing them. "I'm Zoe, and he is my brother Zach." She pointed at the other kid.

"Hello~" Pyronica cooed. Human babies were so cute! Bill suddenly floated towards them. "So~I see you've met~" Bill nudged his best friend "So? What do you think? Aren't they amazing?" Pyronica laughed. "I only JUST met them, Bill!"

Bill hugged the four Pines. "Well, they just are!" Wanda hugged him back. They let go and Bill floated around, making sure her guests were comfortable. They seemed to be doing fine, that was good, it was a relief. Kryptos floated over, kind of unsure how to approach. The twins wanted space breakfast and as Seb handed them one sandwich from the table, Bill pulled Kryptos towards them. "Kryptos, this is Sebastian and Wanda, my adoptive parents. Seb, mom, this is Kryptos."

"He-hello." Kryptos stared at them. "I thought you said Sebastian was their triplet. They look nothing alike." He commented. Seb groaned. "What do you all say that?" Kryptos tilted "Well they have two eyes. You have one."

"Yeah, well, I don't have an eye." Seb said and lifted the eyepatch for the alien to see. Kryptos grimaced at the red and black scars under the black eyepatch. "But I still look like them."

"You also shorter." Zach added usefully. Seb deadpanned. "Yeah, that too." He didn't like how everyone always pointed that out. Not that he was ashamed of his height but it was sad that he didn't match his triplets. Kryptos floated down. "So...you two are Bill's new brother and sister?" He smiled. They were very cute. That Sebastian man was also someone he approved of. He could feel the power coming out of them. A shame his mate appeared to be a boring human. Kryptos could admit he liked her yellow hair though. "Well, it's very nice to meet you two." He held out his hand for a shake.

"Why are you wearing gloves? Are you cold?" Zoe pulled it out to see one without giving poor Kryptos any time to prevent it. The little girl looked at the little glove and giggled. "They are so little like dolly gloves!"

"Zoe!" Seb snatched the glove from her and gave it back to Kryptos, who was cradling his hand to his front. "I am so sorry, man..." "I'm fine...I have to wear them because I still have a little trouble with my powers and Bill made me gloves to help block them." Wanda and Seb stared at the crackling electricity they could see along his hand. Zach noticed as well, not distracted with trying to escape from his mom's arms, and gasped. "Are you like a Pikachu? Can you shoot electricity to the meanies?"

"Pikachu?! Where?!" Zoe struggled even more and Seb held her tighter. "I am stronger though because I have fire!" Kryptos pulled his glove back on. "What's a pikachu?"

"A Backpack monster!" Zoe gasped. "How can't you not know?! They are the best and they are adorable!"

"Maybe they don't have bakemon here." Wanda said simply. "Yeah, go bother Uncle Sixer, look, he's just sitting there alone!" Seb pointed and the twins ran towards their uncle with the intention of crushing him. Kryptos laughed nervously when he realized he was alone with the adults. What should he say? "So, how has Bill been over on your side?" He asked. Might as well get some answers. All they knew was Bill ran off to grieve in another dimension and felt somewhat better, though no less sad, when he returned.

And he's been doing much better since then. It's been nearly a thousand years since the twins and Quackers passed away. Kryptos sighed. Sometimes he wished they HAD taken Bill's offer.
"We know she is still grieving, but ever since we took her in, we've tried to make her feel better. She is doing so much better, but something like that isn't forgotten easily." Wanda sighed. "She just spends time with us, help us and teaches the twins." Kryptos nodded at that. Of course she would. Bill liked teaching, she loved kids. "Oh, she also helps Ford at his research center! They love working together" Seb added with a smile. Ford REALLY looked forward to his meetings with Bill~

Kryptos hid a scowl. "Oh." He tried to be polite. He sighed. "I guess Bill can't help but want to help people." It was one of the things he loved about her but it was annoying that she had to go out of her way to help that man. Frankly, if that Ford man was less boring he might have accepted Bill's unnatural fascination with him but he was a boring stick in the mud. Why did Bill enjoy hanging out with him so much? Well. At least they were just doing science together. "What do they do together?"

Seb shrugged. "Not sure. I think Sixer mentioned he was working on a water purifier."

You see? Boring. Kryptos made much better stuff than him and he didn't get to do science with Bill as often...of course, Kryptos admitted it was because his own vast intellect meant he didn't need as much help and hand holding as that human surely did.

"How is Bill over here?" Wanda asked the alien, both her and Seb oblivious to his jealousy toward Stanford. "Do you think she's getting better?" Kryptos sighed and looked at the woman to answer. "She is happier..." He nodded. "She hasn't broken down screaming in at least 60 years. That's an improvement." Wanda and Seb winced. "Wa-was it a normal thing? For her to just...break down?"

Kryptos nodded solemnly. "Sometimes Bill just starts crying out of nowhere. Just...besides herself. Like she couldn't take it anymore and can't even tell us what's wrong because all she can do is cry until she passes out." He rubbed his plane. "But like I said, she hasn't had a relapse in around 60 years now. Hectorgon says she might finally be improving. I've also noticed she's a lot more cuddly." He blushed. He enjoyed that.

They certainly didn't like how Kryptos talked so easily about Bill crying. She didn't cry with them, why didn't she? It would be better for her to come to them if she was feeling down so they could help...

"Bill is really cuddly." Seb agreed as he grabbed a sandwich from the table. He sniffed them. What were they made of? "I guess it's a good thing. She seems like she needs all the hugs she can get." He took the sandwich to his mouth and chewed. Oh! He liked it! Kryptos blushed harder. He was grateful that living with humans made Bill more open to cuddles. He thought of how Bill had excitedly jumped onto his bed, claiming she wanted a sleepover a few months ago. That had been nice.

"Bill! Can't you turn into your sexy form and sing for us?" Mabel asked as she bounced excitedly in front of him. Bill blinked. "Oh. You know about my Jan form?" Mabel nodded. "I wanna see it! Not just as a poster! Please?" Bill hummed but then saw Dillon and Phillip giving him huge pleading brown eyes. "Please~?" The boyfriends begged. She nodded. "Ok! Fine! Just because I ship you two!" Mabel high-fived the boys.

Bill's triangle form started changing, the teens and Keyhole grinned excitedly. Jan blinked and examined his body. Perfect as always. He shook his hands and rotated his shoulders to get settled back into a 4 armed form. Everyone jumped when the young couple and Mabel screamed. "You look SO much better in person!"

The twins and Diego, who were examining the games Bill had, rolled their eyes. Their cousins were crazy, more than adults. Jan flexed his four arms and they screamed like fanboys again. "Bill, you're going to kill the humans." Pyronica laughed as she rolled her eye. What was it with his Jan-Jan form that drove everyone nuts like this? She pouted. If only Bill was interested in wild sex, she would have LOVED to have more threesomes with him. Maybe invite Kryptos to join in, poor guy was SO thirsty.

Jan posed, half leaning on the back of one of the couches. He arched his back and languidly raised his arms to spread up and above him in a gentle curve. Mabel swooned. Dillon and Phillip drooled. The adults were blushing. Oh...oh goodness. Seb gasped. "Can you please not pose sexily? You're my child now!" He blushed. Wanda felt very weird about this. "Do you purposely make your male forms inhumanly attractive?" Jan shrugged. "Yes?" Wanda rolled her eyes. She knew it.

"Please stop, we will die, and you are making everyone question their sexuality." Dipper covered his face, his ears dropping and new tail moving and twitching awkwardly. Zach climbed over Dipper and pulled on his new antlers. "What's that that you said? What's sesh-amity?" He stroked the smooth white antlers.

"Bill, I want antlers too!" He declared, forgetting his initial question and saving Dipper from embarrassment. Jan laughed. "Sure kid." He flicked his fingers and Zach giggled when little rounded antlers came out from the sides of his head. He got off Dipper and ran over to where his sister, Diego and granny Kari were playing with the giant fluffy creature that Teeth had introduced as Xanthar. In fact, all the maniacs were gathered around Xanthar and the children, marveling over how small human cubs were. Kryptos was the only one still with the adult human group, not wanting to leave Jan alone with them.

While everyone was busy blushing, Ford walked over to take one of Jan's hands. "Amazing! What causes the markings to move? Is the color caused by melanin or something else?" He traced his rough fingers along Jan's soft, smooth skin. Jan blushed. "It's actually the skin cells themselves changing colors. So it's not that the marking are moving so much as, my skin is constantly changing colors between normal and black."

"Like a chameleon?" Ford asked with a smile. Jan considered it. "Well I haven't seen any Earth chameleons yet to answer, but I DID base some of this form's biology off a species of bird from planet Denenmuch that can change their skin and feather colors via hormones..."

Ford shamelessly traced another marking and Jan closed his eyes with a content sigh. Kryptos growled softly. How dare he touch Bill/Jan?! He had to respect his boundaries! Ugh! He hated this human so, so much! Ford didn't seem to notice either Kryptos's ire, nor the growing blush on Jan's face. Ford began tracing up Jan's arm, noticing that the places where he applied pressure to Jan's arm would cause the skin around it to send out more shifting black markings. He noted how the normal markings only seemed to go along Jan's forearms but if he squeezed Jan's upper arm and shoulders, more black tendrils appeared along his skin.

"You're so amazing." Ford said breathlessly and Jan blushed at the compliment. "Are the color changing skin cells pressure sensitive? Can-Can I continue?" Ford asked and after Jan nodded, he poked a little harder, wanting to see the way Jan's skin reacted to different levels of pressure.

Jan mewled softly when Ford pressed a few fingers along his collarbone to see the markings form along his neck and chest. "F-Ford" Jan gasped when Ford's roaming hands started going along his chest, pulling down Jan's tunic a little to press firmly his sternum. Each part changed differently!

Dillon twitched at the faces Jan was making though and grabbed Phillip's head to drag him close in a strong kiss. He refused to see that! If he was getting aroused, it would be because of his boyfriend! Phillip pressed him close, thinking exactly the same.
Seb looking away. WHAT WAS GOING ON? He was suddenly glad that the children and his mother were distracted playing with Xanthar. Kari hadn't noticed what was happening over here yet. Wanda and Kryptos both ran up to snatch Jan and Ford away from each other. "Stanford Pines! What are you doing!!" Wanda hissed.

Seb sighed in relief. Wanda, his love, saviour of the day!

"What?" Ford frowned at the raging blonde woman. "I just wanted to see-" Wanda cut him off. "No! I don't want you to do it! Is that clear?!" Ford shut his mouth and nodded quickly at his sister-in-law.

On the other side of the room, Kryptos was looking over Jan worriedly. Jan was flushed and panting softly. Kryptos will admit he looked very enticing right now, but that wasn't important. "Jan! Are you alright? Why didn't you push him away?" He cried. Curses, Pyronica and the others were gathered around Xanthar and the children. He also spotted an elderly human sitting on Xanthar's arm, petting the loaf. If Pyronica had seen what that human dared to do to their sweet, innocent Jan, she would have bitten his head off. Friend or no friend.

"O-oh...my...that...that was..." Jan sighed. "I'm fine Kryptos..." He smiled at the compass reassuringly. Fordsie did ask for permission and he accepted. "To be honest, I hadn't actually known my skin reacted to pressure like that." He pouted "I guess...I was kinda curious too?" Ford didn't even do anything explicit, maybe his body just felt very sensitive at the moment.

He wondered if it would make their sessions more scientifically interesting if he and Ford did it while he was Jan?

"I am not sitting in a corner!" Ford cried. Kryptos moaned tiredly when he heard the human triplets, Sebastian and Ford argue. "Yes, you will! You have to learn NOT to do certain things in front of everyone! Like touching my son! So shut up and go to the corner!" Kryptos approved of this Sebastian man. Yes, make the problematic Ford sit in the corner!

"Sebastian, I am not going to the corner!" Ford glared. "I still don't understand what was so wrong?!" He just touched Bill's (Jan was it?) markings! It wasn't weird...was it? It was like touching a cool tattoo! Most important here: Jan let him!

Kryptos was about to electrocute the fuck out of the human with squared transparent glasses on his face when he was unluckily spotted. "Touch my brother, and I'll fight you." Seb warned the Polytool with a smile. He saw the look on his face and recognized desire to maim when he saw it. Kryptos scowled. "But he was-!"

"I know. But he's my brother, and you don't get to touch him. If he's getting beat up for touching Bill, it'd be by me." Seb responded. Kryptos blinked. Oh... "Alright then. Just give him a punch for me."

"You'll punch me?" Ford whispered in confusion. For Tesla's sake, what was going on?! He touched HIS ARM AND STERNUM WHAT THE-?

Kryptos was disappointed that Ford wasn't being torn limb from limb. And then Sebastian's words sank in. With Bill. WITH Bill. He turned to Seb with his eye wide. "W-what do you mean WITH Bill?" Please don't be what he thought it meant. Seb blushed.

"I know. It's...well...they got together before I adopted Bill so I don't know if I'm allowed to break them up. But...yeah. They've been together for a few months now." Seb informed the Polytool before joining everyone. His worried frown was replaced by a squeal when he saw Zoe's hands and arms on fire, imitating Pyronica.

Kryptos floated in midair with a wide eye and his mouth hanging open. B-Bill was...he was…

Dipper, easily recognizing the look on Kryptos's face, he had the exact same expression when he heard Wendy agreed to date Robbie, walked over and patted his back. "I feel you man." He sighed.

Mabel was burying her face in her hands and trying to muffler her embarrassed squeals. That was unnecessarily hot. Stan, Carla, Shermie and Abigail were all blushing. "Was that...just..." Abigail twitched "...is your brother dating...his adopted niece?" Stan groaned. "I know. It's fucked up. But...they're...really cute together… and they're not together when she's a child."

This was basically Jan's fault, for enjoying the touching too much!

Mabel looked around and noticed Dillon and Phillip snuck out to continue making out. The lucky bastards. She wished she had a boyfriend to forget what she just saw too!

Shermie's eye twitched. He had seen dark sides of his oldest brother he never thought he would find… "Look, as long as they don't do anything together while she's Miz it shouldn't be a problem. She's like...billions of years old so if anything, Ford's the child in this relationship…" He tried to reassure himself. Stan made a suspicious cough. Sure!

"It's still weird…" Abi rubbed her arm. She looked at the other half of the family laying with the cute, fluffy loaf. "I am so glad your mom didn't see, what would she think?"

"That my brother has gone insane." Stan rubbed his nose. "Where is Jan anyway?" They all looked over to see the demon was munching on sandwiches as if nothing had happened. Well. Maybe it was just business as usual for them? And...Stan did not want to think about that. Mabel was going over to Jan now. "Um...are you still up for a private concert?" she asked. Jan grinned. "I can do you one better…"

He waved his hands "OI! Who wants karaoke?!!"

"Me!"" Mabel, Zoe, Seb, Teeth, Pyronica, 8-Ball and, Keyhole, though his excitement was internal, cheered. Jan floated over the karaoke machine and hooked it to their giant TV for the lyrics. Mabel clung to her youngest uncle. "Remember Love Patrol Alpha? We should bring it back!"

"TOTALLY!" Seb roared. "I still don't agree with this!" Dipper glared. Ford, who was studying the alien language on the book, wrinkled his nose when he looked up. No. He guessed he had fun with Mabel but he wasn't repeating it.

Mabel was already scrolling through the song list. "I don't recognize half these songs." Dipper rolled his eyes. "Different dimension remember? The fact that you recognize ANY of them is amazing enough."

"Pfft, remember I am amazing, little brother."
"I'm taller now, though."

"Yeah, but I'm still older." Mabel sighed. "More mature and experienced than you." She ignored her twin's offended complaint and looked at Jan. "I don't know which song I want! They're all so good!

Jan hummed and tapped on his lips, pressing on them in thought. Mabel flushed. Was he doing this on purpose? Wait, no, Miz would pull at her lips while she was thinking too. Dammit. "How about some EMPRESS? Or BABBA?" Jan suggested. Dipper's head whipped around. Did he just say-

Jan and Mabel grinned. Gotcha. "I guess no one wants to sing any of this, pass it, Jan…” Dipper stood up. "Wait! I-I will join you…” He said softly and everyone started clapping at the teen who blushed brightly. "Sing Dipper!" Zoe cheered. "Sing! Sing! Sing!" The twins and Diego chanted.

Dipper blushed as he went up to the selection screen and clicked on Disco Girl. Everyone cheered as he stood there with the mic. He was shaking. He jumped when Mabel and Jan got up to stand on either side of him. "No worries Pinetree. We can sing together with you.” Jan grinned at him.

Dipper blushed at how close Jan was. Damn, purposely attractive form. "Right…"

The music started and with his sister and cousin beside him, Dipper actually found himself having fun as the song went on. Everyone clapped afterward and Dipper sat down on the couch beside the large red hexagonal alien. Teeth went up to take his turn. Then Mabel. Then Pyronica. Then Jan...which...was…

"I'm hot, sticky sweet~From my head to my feet, yeah~" Jan was rocking his hips back and forth to the drum beat as he sang. Mabel's eyes were glued to his butt as Jan was looking at the TV and facing away from them. "Cause I'm hot, say what, sticky sweet~From my head, my head, to my feet~"

None of the maniacs knew what the song was about but the adult humans blushed at the lyrics. The way Jan was dancing made it worse.

It wasn't a bad song. The guitar and drums were a good beat to tap your foot (or shake your hips) to. Dipper thought it would be less weird if Jan had been singing and dancing as Miz, or even as a triangle.

The children were innocently singing along "Pour your sugar on me~" Yeah, it was cute when the kids sang it. It was like little kids copying the words without knowing what the words meant. Dipper glanced up from his hand to see Jan wiggling and had to look away again. Sigh.

The human couples shared a horrified look. They stayed quiet until the song finished though, because as much as they wanted to save their babies, they didn't know, and what they didn't know wouldn't hurt them. Besides, Jan's voice was hypnotizing and everyone's attention was caught up in it. Jan finished the song and everyone clapped for him. He ran a hand through his hair, gasping for air (not from the song, but from dancing the whole time), and smiled. "Did you like it, guys?!" He asked, looking so eager for their opinion that Seb closed his mouth and Wanda responded "It was great. But can you choose a song with less problematic lyrics?"

Jan blinked innocently "But...isn't the song about candy and melted chocolates?" Everyone stared at him. Wanda made a weird expression. "Ok. Well, um...can I check the lyrics for your songs before you sing them?" Jan still looked confused but nodded. "Ok mom."

Things settled down after that. Everyone was dragged up to sing at least one song. Jan hugged Keyhole and carried him up to sing with him because the Lockin was too shy to go by himself.
They found decent songs the parents approved for the kids and they watched them sing passionately. 8-ball wiped the equivalent of his tears. Human cubs were the most adorable cuties… no offense to Toobie.

Wanda wondered about the songs Jan seemed to like. She was very horrified to learn about how explicit the lyrics for songs were. What was happening to the youth? Blow my whistle? Seriously? Who approved that song? Some of the songs Mabel chose had even more explicit lyrics! And these were apparently allowed to play on public radio stations for pre-teens and teens?!

Seb thought some were cool, even with the 'metaphors', some were plain sexist and explicit and it made him want to vomit. Then he laid back and hummed. If Bill Cipher was dead, it meant there wouldn't be any more illuminated minds until humanity disappeared? That was just a shame. It was humanity's fate to continue making horrible songs until the end of time. Music from when he was younger was waaay better.

Jan chose another song and Wanda skimmed the lyrics before raising an eyebrow. She muffled a laugh. "Ok. Yes. I think this is fine." Jan hugged her. "Thanks mom!" The music started and Wanda tried hard not to laugh.

Jan started with a speaking intro "Love songs used to be so beautiful…" He sighed dramatically into the mic. "Let us go then, you and I, when the evening is spread out against the sky. Like a patient etherized upon a table. -T.S. Eliot." Jan quoted. "Nowadays, thanks to corporate-ly-owned pop stars, love songs are even more beautiful. How beautiful are today's love songs? I'll show you." The music picked up in earnest as the Pines family stared in confusion.

Jan posed and started singing "I love your hair, I love your name, I love the way you say it~I love your heart, and you're so smart, 'cause you gave away it~" He mined taking out his heart. "I love your sis, I love your dad, I love your mum~But more than all of that I love the fact that you are dumb~"

Everyone's mouths dropped opened. What...was happening?

"-enough~To not realize everything I've said has been said before~In a thousand ways, in a thousand songs~Sung with the same four chords!~But you'll still love it and let me finger you!"

"Finger you?!!" Mabel blurted out incredulously. Jan laughed into the mic "Yeah! Finger you!" He took a deep breath. "Finger you!" He growled in his demon voice before laughing again. Seb stared at Wanda. How did she approve of this?!

Jan danced, running his free hands down his chest teasingly "Oh girl, I hope you don't think that I'm rude~When I tell you that I love you, boo~I also hope that you don't see through~This cleverly constructed ruse~Designed by a marketing team~Cashing in on puberty and low self esteem~And girls' desperate need to feel loved~" Jan sang. By this point some of the adults were starting to figure out what this song was meant to be about and were muffling laughter.

"America says we love a chorus but don't get complicated and bore us~Though meaning might be missin'~We need to know the words after just one listen, so…" Jan waved his arms in the air. "Repeat stuff, repeat stuff, repeat stuff, Repeat stuff, repeat stuff, repeat stuff." by this point, Wanda was laughing hysterically. "Yeah! Repeat stuff!" Jan cheered.

"I love my baby and you know I couldn't live without her~" Jan placed a hand on his chest and swooned backward as he sang "But now I need to make every girl think this song's about her~Just to make sure that they spread it like the plague~So I describe my dream girl as really, really vague-
He straightened up and pointed at Mabel, who looked like she wasn't sure if she should be insulted that this song was making fun of the types of songs she liked. "I love your hands, 'cause your fingerprints are like no other~I love your eyes and their blueish, brownish, greenish color~I love it when you smile that you smile wide~And I love how your torso has an arm on either side~"

Dipper was rolling on the sofa, laughing hysterically. These were LITERALLY the types of songs Mabel always listened to when she was younger! Jan dramatically pointed at Stan. "Now, If you're my agent, you might be thinking, oh no, sound the alarms~You're not appealing to little girls who don't have arms~But they can't use iTunes, so [beep] 'em, who needs 'em?!" Jan screamed into the mic.

Then Jan waved a hand to split himself into two. The two began to sing together, one in Jan's normal voice and the other with his demon voice.

"Oh girl, I hope you don't think that I'm rude~"

"I am a servant of darkness!"

"When I tell you that I love you, boo~"

"I am the Void!"

"I also hope that you don't see through~"

"The rivers shall run red with the blood of virgins!"

"This cleverly constructed ruse~"

"I take many shapes…"

"Designed by a marketing team~"

"This is one of them!"

"Cashing in on puberty and low self esteem~"

"The strong will be made weak!"

"And girls' desperate need to feel loved~"

"And the weak shall bow before me!"

Jan jumped and the two of them fused back into one. "SWAG!"

Everyone turned to stare at Wanda. "Really? You decided this song was appropriate?" Carla deadpanned. Wanda snorted with laughter, gasping for air. Stan was pounding a fist on the side of the couch. "AHAHAHAHAHA!" He was nearly dying as he laughed. Dipper was wheezing on the ground, having fallen over from laughing so hard.

Seb had fallen over as well. "AHAHAHA! MY SIDES! OH GOD I'M DYING!" Ford looked up from deciphering his book. "Do young people really listen to songs like this?" Kryptos scowled at him. How dare he be so dismissive of the songs that Bill liked? What did Bill even see in this human?
"Why are they laughing so much?" Keyhole asked confused, the song sounded great! Hectorgon and Pyronica shrugged. "I don't know...maybe they understand the lyrics?" She sighed. Humans were so delicious looking, but so weird.

"You are the best singer!" Zach and Zoe, not getting why everyone was laughing so much either if the song was pretty, and ran up to Jan. The space idol smiled and used two of his arms to carry the twins under his arms.

Jan smiled, glad the Pines enjoyed the song. He looked at Ford who looked confused. "Oh, this song is just a clever parody of all the real shitty love songs that sound like this. Look, that's why Mabel is upset, because she liked these kinds of songs." Ford looked to where Jan was pointing with a free hand and saw his older niece pouting as Dipper and Shermie bothered her.

"Oh!" He chuckled. "I understand now."

'Because you are a stupid, slow, human!' Kryptos hissed in his mind.

Jan sat down with his adopted baby siblings, now on his lap, and leaned on Ford's shoulder. "Are you reading that?" he asked incredulously and Ford shook his head. "I have been trying to decipher the language for a while." The twins looked at the weird letters. "What if we help you?" Zach offered. "We make a deal, you understand it and you read it for us later!" His little hand was engulfed in flames. That is what he understood from daddy about deals. They could offer whatever but they had to get something in return!

"You can make deals?" Ford looked at his tiny niblings in surprise as Jan rolled his eyes. "Not yet." He looked at the curly blonds and put a hand over Zach's to turn off the blue flames. "And you know Mom and Seb said you weren't allowed to." he scolded and stuck his tongue out.

Keyhole gasped. "Some humans can make Deals?" Seb winced. "Well, actually, they got that power from me." The maniacs turned to him. "You don't feel like a human." Kryptos commented. Seb blushed "I am! This body is kinda modified and well...I'm also...kinda...a reincarnated Bill Cipher from an alternative universe."

"Wait. So...you're a Bill from another dimension..." 8-Ball shook his head in confusion. "And you...adopted Bill as your kid?"

"Leave it to Bill to adopt himself." Hectorgon laughed fondly. "We really shouldn't have expected any less."

Seb pouted distressed. "Wait. It isn't like that either...I am not really Bill anymore." He was going to have an identity crisis again.

Kryptos was shaking, ignoring the human's words. So...Bill was adopted as a child by his alternate universe self and was...dating his counterpart's brother? That was...actually the sort of fucked up thing Bill would do. Crazy maniac that he was. This almost made sense, except that it DIDN'T and that's probably why Bill was doing it. He sighed. "Why did I have to fall in love with someone like you?" He muttered. Why did it matter if he said it aloud? Bill wouldn't understand it anyway.

He was right. Bill didn't understand, but the group of humans turned to stare at him with their weird two eyes, wide and shocked. He had apparently muttered it loud enough for their poor human hearing to catch what he said. Mabel gasped. "You love Bill?" She glanced at Jan who was playing with the twins, twisting his multiple arms together to tickle them, oblivious to their conversation.

The maniacs all sighed. "Poor Kryptos has been enamoured by Bill for over two millennia."
It's...pretty depressing." PaciFire rumbled. He gave the compass a comforting pat. Mabel gasped. "Did he turn you down? I'm so sorry."

"Hah!" Kryptos barked. "If Bill rejected me I'd be better off!" He scowled down at his hand. "I LITERALLY can't tell him how I feel." Mabel frowned, her need for romance rearing its head. "What do you mean?" Kryptos scowled harder. "I mean THIS!" He got up and flew over to Jan. "Hey. Bill."

"Huh? What's up Kryptos?" Jan asked. His eyes widened when Kryptos leaned in and kissed his cheek, caressing his face. "I love you Bill." He said. Jan's eyes went wide and he fell over bonelessly. Zach and Zoe gasped. "What did you do?!"

"3...2...1..." Kryptos said with the tone of someone who had done this many times. Jan's eyes lost their blank glassiness as he sat back up. "Whoa. Did I pass out again? Huh...I must be more worn out from crafting your bodies than I thought..."

Kryptos made a frustrated noise. "You see?! He does this EVERY time!"

The twins were ready to cry, hugging their Uncle Ford when they realized Jan was fine. Then they were just confused. They decided it was better to touch his six-fingered hands. They were so big and looked like their dad's right hand.

The older set of twins, the rest of the adults and the maniacs blinked at them.

"So...you tell them you love him, and he suddenly...resets himself to forget it?" Dipper raised an eyebrow. Mabel batted her wings and laughed. "Sounds like something that would happen to Dipper!" The teen pulled at his sister's wings to drag her to the floor and Mabel screamed, startled.

In revenge, the girl pulled at his white and brown tail. "Ah!"

"You two stop it!" Abigail scolded.

Ford's triplets and Shermie shared a worried look. What was their older brother thinking about this? Kryptos clearly confessed he loved Bill, heck, for millennia apparently! Then, why was Ford not doing anything? He was dating Bill, wasn't he?

Ford left the twins on the floor for them to go with their parents and he turned to look at Jan. "You really don't remember what Kryptos told you?" Jan tilted their head. "Eh, were we saying something?" The Pines brothers held their breath. Ford leaned in "Fascinating. What could be causing this?"

"The fuck?" Shermie muttered. The younger triplets frowned. Did-didn't he just hear what Kryptos said?! He said he loved Bill! The demon he was dating!

Kryptos glared at Ford. "It's because of my Deal. I'm Bill's Friend until the end of time." Dipper winced. "Did...you make a deal that friendzoned you for eternity?"

Kryptos blinked "Yeah, that's what I said too when I realized it." He sighed. "I'm convinced that Bill didn't realize what that wording meant when he made the Deal." He went up to take one of Jan's hands. Jan looked confused for a second before hugging Kryptos with a fond smile. "So Bill literally cannot comprehend what I'm even saying when I confess and short circuits to forget when I DO get through to him."

"Man...that sucks..." Dipper said softly. "Dipper knows a lot about the friendzone." Mabel teased but the teenage boy looked at his twin. "Well, I'm sorry, who's the one with a partner here?" He put his hand on his ear to better hear her response while Teeth and Keyhole shouted "OOOHHH!". He destroyed the human girl! They high-foured the boy and Mabel fumed.

Ford hummed and stroked his chin. "So Deals can even affect Bill negatively? Interesting." His brothers stared at him aghast. "Really?!" Wow...Ford must be...really secure in his relationship with Bill...or he didn't care? Were they in an open relationship?

"Yes." Ford looked at his brothers, mistaken their shocked expressions for being surprised with the new information. "I didn't know this, I always thought Bill's deals couldn't affect him like that." He nodded with a grin. "Did you know about this, Sebastian?" He looked at his younger triplet who shook his head slowly. Why was he changing the topic? Apparently he really didn't care...Or maybe he didn't know how to defend his partner? Seb would have resorted to violence if someone did that with Wanda. Kicking Kryptos would be quite easy for his tall brother but Ford wasn't doing anything.

Kryptos glared at Ford. "It's not funny." Ford looked taken aback. "I wasn't laughing..." the compass scoffed. "Well at least I can always wait for you to die of old age. Then Bill will need comforting and I'll be here."

"That's very kind of you to do so." Ford nodded. Kryptos and everyone else blinked in surprise. Did Ford...not complain about Kryptos because he had already thought about the fact that he would die before Bill and was grateful to know that someone else would take over loving her in his stead? That Bill wouldn't be alone after he died? Was Ford really thinking about his relationship that far off? Kryptos blinked at the human. Was he...giving Kryptos the go ahead to pursue Bill because the human understood his own pathetic mortality?

"What are you guys talking about?" Jan chuckled sheepishly. "Yeah! We don't understand!" The twins tilted their heads. "It's adult stuff, don't worry." Seb grinned at the three.

Diego, sitting on 8-Ball's shoulders, directed him towards his Dad. "Stan! Your cub wants to tell you something." The ogre pulled Stan's arm. "Yes?" Stan looked up at the dark-haired kid. "Pops, where's Dillon? He disappeared!"

"I'm on it!" Jan's eyes flickered and he started blushing. "Oh~they found the Spa room and are...erm...enjoying themselves..."

"You have a SPA room?!!" Seb gasped. Stan grinned at the memories. "Yeah, that place was nice~"

Wanda raised an eyebrow at Jan's choice of words and Carla frowned, her protective mama instincts kicking in. That better not mean what she thought! "Enjoying themselves?" the youngest twins asked. Jan blushed. "They're kissing!" He hissed. He and the twins all went "Bleh!"

"So many mouth germs!" Jan wailed.

"Just kissing?" Stan pressed. Two teens, alone, sneaking out from the group to be more alone...that sounded suspicious to him. Jan froze. "Well...yeah? Phillip's got this thought of waiting for Dillon to be older before they go any farther..." he flushed. "They're using tongues! Eeew~"

Carla and Stan sighed in relief. Their older baby was safe. They heard the last part of Jan's sentence and laughed. "That's my boy."

It was everyone's else's turn to make disgusted faces. "Eeew!" The couple rolled their eyes. "Grow up".

"We should all go to the spa! Enjoy ourselves!" Mabel squealed. Spa day! Pampering! Yes! She tugged on Dipper's arm "Come on! I wanna see what alien spas look like!"
"I doubt it's that different..." Dipper said as Mabel pulled his arm. "Where is it?" she looked at Jan who smiled excitedly, eager to show her spa room to his other family. "I'll take you! Brace yourself!" He teleported the humans and the maniacs to the room, where Dillon and Phillip screamed loudly when their 'session' was rudely interrupted.

"GUYS!" Dillon glared. "We. Were. Busy!"

Jan walked over with some face towels and began cleaning them off, fours arms busy holding their heads as he went. "Gross. There's spit everywhere!" Ugh. Saliva. How gross.

Phillip blushed as the cute alien cleaned them. "We...are sorry?" He noticed Stanley, who was narrowing his eyes at him because he had his hands on Dillon's butt, and grinned sheepishly. "Hello, Mr. Pines…"

"You are lucky I approve of you." Stan crossed his arms over his chest. Jan cheerfully stripped his shirt off and went to take off his pants while everyone cried out in surprise. To their relief, he had some swim trunks underneath. Then they stared as he jumped into the swimming pool sized Jacuzzi.

The twins struggled to escape from their parents' grip. "Pool! Pool! Pool!" Jan flicked his fingers and everyone's clothes changed to something more spa-appropriate. The twins and Diego immediately jumped into the jacuzzi with Jan. "Ohh! It's warm!" Zach's eyes widened. Mabel squealed and jumped in "Woot!" And brought Diego closer to her to hug.

Pyronica grinned before going off to her own tub. It was a sizzling purple liquid that smelled like a mix of lemons and cooked beef. "Right, humans, stay away from the acid tub." Hectorgon mentioned as he hoped by "Bill told me they cannot handle PH levels lower than 5 without burns…"

"Bah! I do what I want!" Seb declared. Wanda pulled his arm deadpanning. "Don't."

Kryptos huffed as he saw Ford standing there, with his stupid six-fingered hands behind his back. Why did he even have so many fingers?! When Sebastian's baby grabbed his glove he saw 5 fingers! Every one of those other humans had 5! Urgh! Why?! Was he a freak too or something? He knew he was just purposely trying to find fault with this man who somehow managed to grab Bill's interest. He was self aware enough to realize that. It didn't mean he wasn't mad about it though.

Kryptos yelped when Jan came out and grabbed him and Ford, dragging them both into the tub. "Come on nerds! Into the tub with you!" He giggled. Kryptos blushed when he was hugged close to Jan's chest. "I used to take baths with my brother when I was a kid!" Jan sighed at the memories. Of course, his memories were getting mixed up again. It got hard to tell stuff apart sometimes between his memories. Especially as the years went on.

"That is so cute!" Mabel squealed, watching her uncle cough the water he accidentally swallowed in his surprise. "I took baths with Dipstick as little kids too!" Dipper blushed when his parents made a loud "Aaawww!" as they remembered. He sighed. "Thanks, Mabel. No one needed to know that."

She frowned and hugged Diego closer to her. The poor kid was screaming and the twins tried pulling him away. "It's adorable, shut up!"

"I...think the kid isn't liking your strangling..." Kryptos muttered. "Free Stan's cub!" 8-ball cried as he watched them.
"Cub?" Carla raised an eyebrow and Stan shrugged. Finally, Dillon had to get in and rescue his brother. "Stop it, he doesn't like it." He told his cousin as Diego escaped with the twins.

Mabel groaned before looking over at Keyhole and narrowing her eyes at him. These versions of Bill's friends were smaller and cuter. Keyhole squeaked before he got grabbed by Mabel. "Ahh! Help! The human is going to strangle me!"

PaciFire reached over and plucked the turquoise alien out of her hands. "You are a scary human." The demon-imp muttered. "WhAT?!" Mabel cried, offended as her family laughed, especially Stan and Seb. "I am the most adorable creature on Earth! Has been since 1999!" She huffed and crossed her arms over her chest.

"Of course you are, pumpkin!" Seb reassured.

Ammy floated up to her. "You inspire terror in your own kin. Clearly, you are an awe inspiring monster." he raised a tendril and wiggled it. "I do not have thumbs so just pretend I am giving you a thumbs up."

Mabel gaped at the floating creature. Did-did he just call her monster…? She sniffed and went to curl up with her mom. She hated the world now. Dipper rolled his eyes. So dramatic...she was the only one who cried giving her short speech in their graduation. He still loved her though.

Seb leaned in to look at Jan in the Jacuzzi. "So, what do I do around here to get a massage, kid?"

Jan blinked. "We...don't...really have those here...I mean...it would require getting someone to give massages...and um…” he drew his arms around himself in a hug. "Not...not...really...um…” He looked away.

Seb frowned worriedly, but before he could ask anything, Wanda nudged him with an annoyed sigh. This dumb man. The blonde woman touched Jan's cheeks and he looked up at his mom with a sad look on his face. "Baby, it's ok…” She said but gave him a look that could be interpreted as 'this conversation isn't over. We will talk at home'

Jan nodded. "Ok…” He perked up and pulled Ammy close. "This is my son Ammy. He's the only one who was immortal...and um...so...you have a grandson now!" The multi-blocked creature blinked at Wanda. "Hello grand mother. Oh, matriarch of our clan." He said in monotone.

Wanda snorted. "Hi, Ammy...you can just call me Wanda…." She didn't feel ready for that title yet!

"Alright, Wanda." Ammy nodded. Wanda pulled Seb closer to her. "This is Sebastian, he is my husband." "Sup!" Seb saluted. "And-" She pointed inside the Jacuzzi at the twins trying to playfully drown Diego and Jan trying to stop them. "The kids trying to drown that kid are our children, Zoe and Zachary."

Ammy nodded at Seb. "Hello grand father." (Seb put a hand over his chest, offended. Sorry but no. He was no one grandfather!). He floated over and dipped into the water. "Hello aunt Zoe and uncle Zachary." He greeted them as he watched them splash around. The kids gasped and looked at the creature. They hadn't seen him before! "You look funny!" Zach commented. Zoe grabbed him and hugged him to her chest. "Can we keep him?!"

"That's Jan's son, and no, we can't." Wanda said. Seb tugged at his brown hair. "I-I don't look like a grandpa, right?"

"Ah. Yes. Hugging. The means to which sensory based organisms display their affection. Or to strangle their prey. I assume you are much like mother is. This is good. Mother needs hugs."
Ammy hugged Zoe back. "I am glad your adoptive family has been able to see to your needs." he told Jan.

"I didn't understand what he said, but he sounded funny." Zoe told her twin and he nodded. Jan grinned at Amy. "They are the best adoptive family." Wanda smiled proudly and Seb hugged her closer to her. Yeah, he knew they were the best!

The Pines and the maniacs relaxed at the spa. Kryptos tried to just relax when he closed his eye and decided to ignore Stanford talking to Jan. It was ok...how much could they talk anyway? Jan spent time with them and his adoptive family. Besides, they didn't seem like the type to do anything inappropriate, Ford was a slow human...it-it wasn't as if they would have kids together or something! What an absurd thought!

Kryptos snuggled into Jan's chest, enjoying the one upside to Bill getting together with humans. He was much more open to snuggling and touching. Kryptos took this chance to press himself close to his friend and enjoy the energy that flowed out of him constantly. Ford chatted with Jan about how his 4 armed form worked.

"I suspect the many arms would cause muscle pain?" Ford commented as he trailed his fingers along Jan's arm, once more pressing to see the markings spread. They were on the other side of the Jacuzzi, away from everyone else so Ford figured this was private enough. Kryptos was dozing off as Jan stroked his sides and angles.

"Yes." Jan moaned. "Making this body always means my muscles are tense and stiff. It's really annoying…” He giggled when he saw Kryptos' hand floating limply. Aaw~ he fell asleep!

"Sebastian sometimes grows a second pair of arms when he is angry." He remembered seeing that form. It was really creepy. Almost got killed by it. Jan grinned. "Have seen it. It looks cool as fuck on him." It embarrassed him when it happened to his Bill form, but for Seb it looked fine. Must be because it was adapting to a human form that made it hot.

Turning into a spider-like pyramidal monster was just...less cute. Jan flushed. He didn't like looking ugly. He remembered how the Federation once posted a picture of him when he was twisted into a horrifying mass of limbs and eyes. It was SO embarrassing! Why did they have to post that image across their news stations?!

Ford pressed his thumb against his markings again. Fuck. He was so obsessed, it was so hypnotizing…Jan whined and Ford looked at him. "Did I hurt you?"

"No, it just feels...pretty good." Jan shivered. He wondered if bruises in this form would affect his markings. Hm...more arms might make things...interesting in their sessions. Jan rolled his shoulders. The hot water felt so nice on his body. Stanford grabbed one arm and ran a finger along it, from the shoulder to his hand, watching entranced as the markings shifted and adjusted to his passing finger. Jan gasped.

"That...also felt nice?" The man asked with a soft blush. Jan nodded. "Your hands are really rough. I've noticed this before. How do you have so many calluses when you just work in your lab all day?" Jan asked, brushing some of his bangs back, the water trailing down his face. Ford scoffed. "Just because I'm stuck indoors, doesn't mean I don't do hard work." Ford held up Jan's hand. "Your hands are soft, but even you have a few calluses."

Jan's eyes widened a bit and he looked at his hands. Then he laughed. That was fun. Could it be from holding the mic? That was the only constant physical thing he did with this body actually. "I guess I have, but you still have way more, Fordsie!" He poked his nose and Ford covered it, making the demon laugh again. He didn't like to be poked in the nose…and then Jan had stolen his glasses, he couldn't see anything past Jan's dark face.

"You are extremely blind!" Jan declared when he tried them on, and Ford scoffed. Bill needed glasses as a triangle, he didn't know what he was mocking him for! Seb didn't need glasses before and he used to tease him about it, after Weirdmageddon, his sight got slightly worse and now he wore contact lenses though he denied it. Stan had always needed glasses too, he bet he had a higher number than him now for not wearing them!

Ford was very defensive of his glasses. Jan finally gave him his glasses back, though they were fogged from the steam. Jan flicked his fingers and Ford felt his glasses clear up. "I made them waterproof! You're welcome." Jan peered up at him. "You look good with glasses on." He commented. "Glasses are sexy."

Ford blushed but managed a nervous laugh. "Haha, thanks...I guess…" He touched his glasses, not knowing how many times Bill/Miz/Jan had cursed/improved them. He better not lose this pair. They were special…

Jan pressed his hand on his face and formed his own pair of glasses. "How about me? Do I look good with glasses?"

"You look...great in glasses!" Ford nodded. "That frame goes well with your facial bone structure." Jan cooed and hugged the scientist. "Thanks, Fordsie!"

Ford's brothers and their wives watched the pair with shitty grins. They had to admit they were so adorable together. Mabel was squealing and punching Dipper's shoulder "Lookie! They're matching~"

"Ow. Ow. Ow." Dipper deadpanned before swimming away from his sister. "Do they have a sauna room?"

"We sure do!" Teeth grinned as he held out his hand to help pull Dipper out of the pool. "Me and Xanthal were gonna go. Wanna come with?"

"Sure." Dipper shrugged. He followed the two and decided he might as well try to get to know them. "So...how did you guys become friends with Bill?"

Teeth shrugged. "He gave me a place to live when my roommates and colony threw me out into the street." He patted Xanthal's side. "And the big guy here was being kept by some asshole who would slice off pieces of him because his species is considered a delicacy."

Dipper looked horrified. "T-that's awful." He looked at the purple creature with pity.

Teeth hugged Xanthal's large arm. "Yeah. Most of us didn't have the best...lives. Bill found us, took us in. And offered to give us what we would ever want...if we agreed to be his friends until the end of time." He laughed awkwardly. "He literally gave us an offer we couldn't refuse."

The teen hummed. But it was an offer, Bill/Miz didn't force them to be his friends. And he did it to help all of them. It was still incredible for Dipper to believe Miz was a GOOD Bill Cipher. The demon tried to kill them, he still had nightmares now and then, but here was Miz, helping everyone, helping his uncle Seb with the little twins, and...he shuddered. Dating Uncle Ford.

That was the weirdest thing from all of this. He had so much to tell Pacifica!

"So, you are Bill's cousin now, right?" Teeth asked as they walked. This Teeth looked much kinder than the Teeth that had tried to eat him during Weirdmageddon. "Yeah, adoptive. My dad is Seb's brother, and Seb adopted her."

Xanthar nudged Dipper kindly and rubbed his bread face against him, making the teen laugh.

Teeth chuckled. "He likes you." Dipper patted Xanthar's arm and they got to the sauna. The teen was still with his trunks and wrapped a towel around his waist. They turned on the fire and the sauna started doing its magic. The two aliens and the human sighed happily.

The first time he went to a sauna was with Pacifica. She took him with her family to a private club a few years ago and complained just a little bit about losing her private sauna at the Manor, but that this was fine as long as he was there. Needless to say, he was red from blushing for the entire trip.

"So, I've only really seen Bill as Miz and Xin. Is it...normal for his personality to...change a little when he does that?" Dipper asked. When he had met Xin, he was playful and friendly, much like Miz, but he was more mature, whereas Miz acted like a real little girl. And now as Jan he was...weirdly flirty. And Dipper wasn't sure if that was just his imagination or not.

Teeth winced. "Bill is...in, ok, you know how some species can have mood swings?" Dipper nodded. "Well Bill has personality swings. And a maturity level that slides back and forth between child and adult. When he's in parent mode, he tends to be more calm, strict and responsible. And in child mode he's emotionally starved for affection and clingy."

The mouth laid back on the bench. "He normally falls somewhere in the middle while leaning to either side in certain situations. But when he goes into his different forms, he kinda...narrows the range his mental age oscillates between. He's more stable."

Dipper nodded. That was weird. But it make a weird sort of sense. He read somewhere that the body affected how the mind feels. But that was for humans. He didn't know how that worked for triangular aliens gods.

Meanwhile, back at the Jacuzzi room, Wanda was chatting with Pyronica as the two dried off to sit in the comfortable lounge chairs. "So, I heard that Bill had lost his children. But, Ammy is his son right?"

Pyronica's expression turned bittersweet. "I had twins. A son and daughter." The Cyclopian looked over at Zoe and Zach, seated on Seb and Mabel's shoulders as they played. "And they were my children...but Bill adored them." She sighed. "And that's why I couldn't let Bill keep them."

Wanda looked confused. "What...do you mean?"

Pyronica laid back on her chair, twirling a lock of hair. "I had twins. A son and daughter." The Cyclopian looked over at Zoe and Zach, seated on Seb and Mabel's shoulders as they played. "And they were my children...but Bill adored them." She sighed. "And that's why I couldn't let Bill keep them."

Wanda looked confused. "What...do you mean?"

Pyronica laid back on her chair, twirling a lock of hair. "Bill wanted to keep them forever. He wanted to force them to stay by his side just like we do. But I couldn't let him do that." she closed her eye. "I chose to stay with Bill. I was the one who suggested he make a Deal for us to be friends. Because I felt like I was taking advantage of his kindness when he took me in."

Wanda gazed at the other woman. "Then what's the problem?"

Pyronica gave a bitter laugh. "Bill took my offer as an excuse to trap me by his side for all eternity." She turned to Wanda who had a horrified expression. "Don't take my words to mean I DONT' want to be here, I care about Bill and I don't really mind being here." She looked around, checking to see that Jan was thoroughly distracted with Ford "And I have nowhere else to go. If I go out without Bill's protection I will get arrested."

"What?!" Wanda gasped. Pyronica laughed. "I may not look like it but I am an awful, terrible person. I have no idea why Bill likes me so much." She folded her legs up to her chest. "I eat people. I kill people. Because I enjoy doing so. There are people I am nice to, but only because I like them. But I like killing people. Being able to lord my power over them and know that I'm strong enough that they can't hurt me anymore."

She growled. "And I guess I went overboard because the Federation hates me. They want me imprisoned or working for THEM. They want to make me a non threat to their silly laws."

"What does this have to do with your children?" Wanda asked, trying to hold back her horror at this alien woman's nonchalance over her desire to kill people. Pyronica groaned. "Because my children are a lot like me. 'Course, they're much kinder than I am. Bill raised them well. But the Federation hates them by proxy."

She clenched her hand into a fist. "Bill keeps me out of prison by selling himself to the Federation's leader. He works for that asshole, kills for him, does all sorts of awful things in exchange for Favors that he uses to keep me, to keep all of us safe." Her fire flared along her arms. "And I hate it. I hate how Bill willingly goes along with that stupid baby, allows himself to be USED by him, for our sake."

Wanda edged away from the angry woman. "But I can't make him stop. If Bill had to choose between the deaths of everyone on an entire planet and me, he would choose ME every time and this breaks him inside." Pyronica wouldn't have told anyone about this, but Wanda was Bill's adopted MOTHER. Who else was she supposed to talk to? The AXOLOTL never responded to her questions and demands. This was all she could do.

"If my children were allowed immortality, Bill would need more Favors to keep THEM safe too.
He would need to do more jobs, kill more people, kill a bit of himself each time." Pyronica stressed
"I don't want to put that on him. So even if losing my children hurts him and me and everyone else, if HAD to happen. We are all terrible people and so is Bill, but he's a terrible person, FOR our sake." she sighed. "Bill said he was not going to kill for Time Baby anymore, but he's still taking jobs. I know he is."

The blonde human was speechless, her face gone pale. She didn't understand anything about this.
Seb had told her how bad their Bill was, and what awful things Bill did, but thinking Miz had to do it for her friends' sake...

"I am sorry..." Wanda mumbled. What else could she say? She couldn't help. They couldn't do anything.

Pyronica shrugged. "Don't apologize for things that aren't your fault. Bill does enough of that." She laughed bitterly. "You know what's the crime the Federation is pinning on us recently? Since we've been behaving these past thousand years? Since we haven't killed anyone and tried our best to be on good behavior?" She fell back on her chair. "They're saying that us EXISTING is a crime now."
She shuddered violently. "So Bill needs to pay off Time Baby with jobs so that we get to keep our freedom." She hissed.

"What." Wanda deadpanned, her need for justice tingling. "That is the most stupid shit I have ever heard!" She cried, smacking her seat and splashing water to her face "He has NO right to do that! If you haven't done anything!" That Baby WAS an asshole. "Existing isn't a crime!"

Pyronica shrugged. "We all know, that's why we hate him even more than normal people." she poked her finger into the water, watching it sizzle. "That's why we're thinking of overthrowing the Federation. Kryptos brought up the idea a while ago but Bill said it wouldn't work. Something about how anarchy and destruction of a far reaching governmental system would kill billions of people and create a power vacuum that would be filled by some OTHER dictator…” Pyronica frowned. "I confess, I'm not smart enough to understand what that means."

Wanda blinked. "Well, I am not really sure how politics in space work…” She started. International law didn't apply in another dimension. "But, I can assure you Bill is right. Getting the power by violence theoretically could apply if the people doing so are morally responsible. The dictatorship is overthrown but those who take the power form a government of transition towards a democracy and opens elections for the people to choose." She ran a hand through her wet hair. "But that is an utopy. The candidates might try something similar, or even worse, be people who trust the dictatorship, so it would be a dictatorship concealed by democratic practices."

Pyronica blinked at the female human. "To be honest, I have no idea what the heck you just said." she frowned. "But Bill once said that there were a few members of the council who are actually decent people and he is hoping that putting more support behind them, giving them more political power and higher seats, would mean they can do more to try and change the Federation for the better." She groaned. "I don't get it. But that sounds like a long term sort of thing. So Bill's planning to bare with this until good people make it into power and the government stops being shit. But...doesn't that suck?!"

Wanda nodded. "A lot. But that is how politics work, which sucks. Trust me. If you knew the shithead we have as president back home-! Um, you see, on Earth there are only humans, and people like him promote hatred towards people who are from other countries?” Pyronica blinked confused. But they were the same species, why would he do that? "You have countries here? Anyway, bad president, makes the poor poorer and the rich richer. Disgrace." She concluded.

"That sounds a lot like the old law about needing a Federation ID to get a job but being unable to get an ID without money while you can't make money without a job." Pyronica shrugged. "The only reason such a thing isn't around anymore is because Bill had a long talk with Time Baby and got him to change that."

Wanda sighed and leaned back, letting the warm water get to her hair. "Ah...societies like that everywhere. We should just live in anarchy...that was a joke, by the way, don't ACTUALLY do the whole anarchy thing." She warned and the Cyclopian laughed. "Kryptos said we should just kill Time Baby and be done with it. I have no issue with that. Hectorgon just wants to get rid of certain members of the council."

"Well, I get the feeling…” Wanda muttered, surprising herself of her thoughts. Sebastian's view of the world was really influencing her.

"I like you.” Pyronica declared. She approved of this woman to be her best friend's mom. Wanda grinned. "I like you too…?" Yes, she murdered people, and that was awful...but she wasn't a bad person right? (Wanda had to hold back her instinctual reaction to call this alien a murderer who needed to be tried for her crimes.) Besides she didn't know what society was like here. Maybe that was normal? Even so, she could continue being her son's best friend. She obviously cared about Bill.

Wanda jumped startled when two little wet heads came out of the water gasping for air. Zach looked back at where Seb and Jan were watching them. "You saw, Dad? We swam here holding our breath!"

"Good job!” Jan called with a grin. Pyronic and Wanda looked at the blond twins. "Mommy, do you want to play with us?” Zoe asked. Wanda shook her head with a grin. "I think you are fine with dad.” Actually, how long have they been in the water? She saw how wrinkled Zach and Zoe's fingers were. "I think you've been in the water long enough. You're turning into prunes!” Wanda cried as she got up to pull the twins out.

Pyronica gasped. "Humans transmute if they're in water too long?!" She stared at the children's wrinkled fingers. "Oh no! They're shriveling up!" she cried in panic. "Jan! They're dying!"

"Don't worry. This is normal for humans. If you take them out of the water they reflate back to normal." Jan climbed out of the pool, stretching his arms and brushing his hair back. Something incredibly hot looking, everyone complained internally. "Come on gremlins, let's get you two dried up." He pulled out towels and helped Wanda wrap them up.

Wanda stared up at her son. He was taller than her in this form. She couldn't help but think that he might be taller than her husband as well. She looked over at Seb. "Honey, come over here please." To be honest, many were taller than-

"Yes?" Seb climbed out of the jacuzzi and grabbed a towel Jan was offering as the space idol continued drying the shivering blonds. Wanda snickered as her theory was proved correct. Jan was shorter than the Stans but still taller than her dear, adorable and naive husband, who tilted his head confused as her laughter became louder.

Stan and Carla noticed they were getting out and got their own kid out as well. Mabel got out and it was when she was wrapping the towel around herself that she noticed her brother's absence. She looked at her parents who were busy grinning happily at each other. "Mom, Dad, Dipper is missing."

"That's great, sweetie." Shermie said absentmindedly and the girl groaned annoyed. Jan shook his head disapprovingly at Shermie before addressing Mabel. "He's with Teeth and Xanthar playing video games, don't worry." From what he saw, they had been in the sauna, but then got bored and Teeth showed Pinetree his games. The two seemed to have connected really well!

"Cold..." Zoe, wrapped around in a towel, snuggled against her dad's smooth leg and he picked her up with a smile. Hugging him wouldn't help her getting warmer, he was also wet and cold. "I want to play with them too!" Zach's little brown eyes widened and pleaded with his older brother. Jan grinned. "Alright, there's heated changing rooms and fresh clothes for everyone. Let's get changed and go play video games!"

"Yay!" everyone cheered. Kryptos, who was placed on a bench when he fell asleep, woke up with a startled gasp, pushing the towel Jan had wrapped around him to the ground. "Hwah?"

"Hey Kryptos, we're gonna go play videogames. You wanna come with?" Jan asked. The compass quickly picked himself up and flew over "Might as well." Since the aliens didn't really need to change clothes, they headed off first while the Pines, Phillip and Jan went to the changing rooms.

Dillon and Phillip stared at Jan when he walked into the changing room but Seb gave them both a stern look and pushed Jan and Zach into a large stall and pulled the curtains. "Do you HAVE to make yourself look so hot?" Seb grumbled. Jan shrugged "If I'm going to shapeshift, I'd prefer looking nice."

"There's looking nice and then there's looking seductive." Seb felt he had to clarify this. Jan pouted. "Well I originally made this form so I could stare at myself for eye candy." Seb couldn't help but think that explained so much.

Zach was sat on the bench in the stall and he looked at the men kicking his little legs. "What is eye candy?" He asked innocently. "Is it candy with the shapes of eyes?"
Seb blushed a bit as he started drying off the toddler's chest and put his new t-shirt on him. "It's...something or someone who looks really good for your eyes to enjoy." Zach nodded slowly. "So if I see a really good cake, it's an eye candy?"

"Theoretically speaking, yes. But I'd prefer if you didn't use that expression...it...it's for grown ups...yeah..." Seb pouted as he patted Zach's legs gently with the towel before helping him put on his underwear.

"Ok." He agreed and the man sighed in relief. Jan just rolled his eyes. They changed their clothes, (Seb kicked Jan out when he was ready so he could change), and then they met everyone in the living room.

"Hey, guys! Look! These games are so cool!" Dipper was laying on the floor next to Teeth as he played. The little twins and Diego ran towards their older cousin and sat down next to him to watch. The adults settled down on couches and Jan ran to the kitchen to get snacks, grabbing both Ford and Kryptos to help him. "Come on nerds! Help me carry stuff! You need to exercise your weakass arms!"

Eventually, Zach pulled on Dipper's jacket. "We wanna play too." The teen looked at the kids and grinned. "Sure." He gave the toddler a free unplugged remote. When he went to his friends' houses to play, they always did this with their younger siblings whenever they bothered them. The kids smiled brightly but Shermie narrowed his eyes. "Dipper, let your cousins play."

"But the game is just for two!" He complained. His mom shook her head. "Then take turns"

Dipper sighed heavily. Teeth patted his back. "I've got Plus Punch Sisters. They allow up to 6 players at once." He got a few more controllers out and switched the game out. Dipper pouted. "But I was so close to beating you." PaciFire sat down heavily and laughed. "There's no way you'd beat Teeth. He's an expert warrior of all fighting games."

"Oh yeah?! Well, my bro bro is the best at video games! He is the king!" Mabel sat next to her younger brother and the boy smiled at her. The support was really nice. "And I bet he can kick your mouth butt!" Mabel challenged.

Zoe and Diego giggled. "You said butt!"

"Yup! I said it! Whatcha think? Or are you too scared to challenge my cool nerdy twin?" Mabel looked at the mouth. Teeth grinned. "A challenge huh? Sure. But when you inevitably lose, I want you to refer to me as Teeth the Lord of Fighters!"

"Yeah, well...if I win, you have to call me Dipper the Great!"

"That's a stupid name~" 8-Ball chuckled. Keyhole poked his arm. "Don't be rude to Bill's cousin."

Mabel raised her arms to placate their competitive glares. "Alright, alright, people! We're going to start the match. Best two outta 3!" The toddlers watched their cousins and adoptive family get ready to play.

The controllers were hooked up for 6 players, Teeth and Dipper stared at each other. Zoe, Zach and Diego got controllers too. Everyone looked at the 6th controller. "Who's our last player?" Teeth asked.

"Phillip wants to play!" Dillon pushed his tall boyfriend towards them and sat him down between the aliens and his cousins. The ginger teen blushed as he was handed a controller. Dillon was doing this on purpose, he knew he got...competitive.
"I don't know how to…" He mumbled. Dillon sat down with the toddlers. "They don't know how to play either and they enjoy it anyway." He ruffled his brother's and Zoe's hair. The children cheered. The game started and they were on the character selection screen.

Dipper stared at all the weird alien characters. "Is that...Bill?" He stared at the yellow triangle on the screen. PaciFire cackled "Bill liked this game series and donated a bunch of credits to the Dev team. They made him a playable character, but had to work with Bill to get his moveset. Something about game balance."

"I was too overpowered!" Jan complained loudly. "I had to demand them to nerf myself!" Dillon glanced over "Why would you want to have them nerf your character?"

Jan rolled his eyes as he set down the large tray of snacks. Kryptos was wobbling behind him with another tray. Ford was having an easier time of it, having more muscle than the compass. Jan finished serving some of the food and continued "Well what's the point of being in the game if my character is banned from official tournaments?!" Jan sat down.

"Also, Bill gets some weird, sick sense of satisfaction in beating himself up in the game." Hectorgon grunted. Jan giggled. "I make funny sounds!"

"I want Bill!" Zach declared but Zoe stuck her little tongue out and chose it first. Zach gasped and whined loudly. "I said it first!" He pulled his sister's braid (which their mom did for her) and Zoe screamed before punching him in his chest. "HEY!" Seb shouted and went to separate the fighting kids from each other. Wanda sighed tiredly as Pyronica gave the kids a soft smile. Strong kids, she liked it. Oh cool! Humans changed their eyes' color when angry like Bill!

"You can BOTH play as Bill. He comes in different colors." Keyhole winced at the snarling children. No wonder Bill accepted being adopted into this family. Keyhole showed them which button to click to shift through the different colors. Zoe settled on Pink. Zach clicked around. "How come there's no blue?" he felt like a blue triangle would be... Right.

"There just isn't." Jan said quickly.

"But why not?" Zach pressed with a whine. "I just didn't want to be blue!" Jan grunted in annoyance. Zoe, still angry with her twin for pulling her hair, stuck her tongue out. "You are annoying." Zach growled and bit her arm. The twins once again started hitting each other, their little hands on fire, and Seb raised a hand to float them away from each other, one to each side of the couch, and dropped them harshly, growling as well. "Can you behave?!"

Keyhole nodded to himself. He was totally sure that's why Bill chose these humans as family now. They were crazy. Zach, knowing he could get grounded, ignored his twin and settled on a Black Bill Cipher. Teeth chose a creature that looked like a goat with shovels for feet and two heads. Diego chose a humanoid with bat-like wings. Phillip flipped through all the characters. "This would be easier if I knew how any of these guys fought. Or who they are." He eventually settled on a creature that seemed like some sort of martial artist. He squinted at the screen. "Is it just me or does she have 4 boobs?" He asked.

"That's Shun-Lo. The first female character in fighting game history! They finally allowed her into the game!" Teeth grinned. Phillip rolled his eyes. "But...why does she have 4 boobs?"

"Because that's what her species looks like." Teeth shrugged. Stan whistled. "I remember meeting a few of 'em. Right Sixer?" A loud slap followed his sentence, followed by an annoyed whine. "Oh come on~!"
Ford grumbled as he offered the food from the tray to Abi and Shermie. He didn't like being a butler. "Yes, I remember, Stanley. You seemed quite eager to meet them." He smiled like a little shit.

Another slap. "Dammit Sixer!"

Diego and Dillon rolled their eyes. Their dad never learned. The game started and the children immediately began to button mash. Phillip was testing out the buttons in different combinations to work out how his character worked. Dipper and Teeth were already attacking each other, pretty much ignoring the other players.

"Go, Dipper!" Mabel cheered. "Kick his butt! Your honor and entire future depends on it!" She roared.

The kids started attacking Phillip, laughing as he finished testing his character. The teen grumbled and ran away, he didn't want to kill them, they were little babies. He ran up to where Dipper and Teeth's characters were and attacked Dipper first while he grinned wickedly.

"Go Teeth! Kill the humans!" Keyhole cheered.

Zoe made her Bill jump slam on top of Dipper and gasped when she remembered something that had slipped her mind for a while. "Hey Dipper! Why don't chu make more monster hunting videos anymore? Math videos are boring and I don't understand" She pressed buttons randomly.

"What?" Dipper was somewhat distracted as he had to run away from Zoe, as she chased him, spamming the ground pound attack. Zoe bounced in her seat, mimicking the jumping of her Bill in the game. "Your videos! You made them when you were little. And then they became math videos instead." She blew a raspberry.

"Wait..." Dipper barely jumped past a few more attacks, Teeth wasn't letting up and he was being attacked from both sides. "You found my ThemTube channel?" Dipper shrieked.

"Yeah! A mailbox, umm, a big teeth, little aliens, daddy appeared in that one! His hair was so funny!" She whispered that last part.

Dipper chuckled at the memories. Oh right. His guide to the unexplained. "Yeah well, I wasn't allowed to try summoning ghosts anymore. And going monster hunting in the Falls wasn't the same anymore since most of them knew me after... after a thing that happened. And I got into animation so I practiced by making math tutorials and lessons. They're pretty popular actually."

"Neeeeeereed~" Jan teased with a laugh. "I'm kidding! I like nerds!"

"Well, this nerd got a scholarship to start school next summer with one of his animations!" Dipper grinned as he massacred Phillip.

"Really?! That's awesome! Congrats dude!" Dillon would give him a high five, but his hands were busy. Also Phillip was pouting since his character got killed. "Awww..."

"Yeah. I didn't know schools could do that." Shermie grinned. "But I'm so proud of Mason."

Dipper grinned at the praise while Zoe and Zach wondered why he called him Mason when his name was Dipper.

Mabel rolled her eyes. "His videos are kinda cool though! There are like nerd math characters and there are like backstories and lore and hidden info." She ruffled her brother's curls.
"There's Lore in your math tutorials?" Stan stared. That's some next level nerd shit.

"But… " Teeth questioned. "What do you mean by 'nerd'?" The way he said the word sounded different from the way it was said by Jan earlier. The humans blinked as they noticed that. Jan explained. "Oh right. Translation and all that. You all hear English right now, but Teeth and the others don't speak it. Or understand it. And I'm not speaking English right now either. You all hear the translation so it sounds like it, but some words don't translate back and forth the same."

"Wait. So when you say 'nerd'..." Ford glanced down at Jan. The alien shrugged. "In English, the word 'nerd' was invented by Dr. Seuss. He doesn't exist here yet. So when I say nerd here, the word is actually dok-shuu-yan. Which has a similar meaning, as in, a person who is very learned in academics. But also with the connotations of being a bit of an awkward person who needs to be taken care of, since their time spent on learning has made them neglect their physical bodies." Jan shrugged. "My automatic translator can give all that context and just defaults to words you know and understand, to the most accurate it can go."

"...that's fascinating." Ford adjusted his glasses. "I suppose I hadn't actually thought about how certain words only exist in certain languages due to context and the people who invented them."

"So what we hear and what they hear is different?" Wanda thought that was amazing. Jan nodded. "So when you say Nerd and when I say Nerd, it sounds different."

Kryptos left the tray on the table again and sat down tiredly. Really, Jan should stop making snacks, they were a lot of people, but there would be leftovers for weeks! He looked at the human wearing glasses talking all smiley with Bill. The compass growled. Stupid Ford. Stupid! He had the privilege of being with Bill! He put down the food and floated over to sit on Jan's lap.

Kryptos took this time to snuggle closer to Jan's side. He shot the six fingered human a smug look but was disappointed when Ford didn't seem to notice or care. Well, screw him. Kryptos 'eep'ed when Jan started petting his side. "What's with the jealousy? Do you want to play PPS too?"

Oh right. Bill could Feel it. Kryptos felt a little ashamed at forcing him to have to taste something like this. He forgot he could.

"U-um...no. I'm fine." Kryptos blushed. Jan giggled and turned him to look at his eye. "You know you can tell me~? They're my new family, but you guys are my best friends and my 1st adopted family!"

Kryptos hummed. Yeah...friends… "I know Bill, your new family is really nice." Screams were heard in the background. "And I am glad you have them...and that they make you happy."

He was glad for that. Even if he was kinda miffed that Bill had started dating a human, he would accept it (begrudgingly) so long as Bill was happy. That was all he asked for. (Kryptos's main issue wasn't that Bill was dating someone, it was that this human didn't seem like he was worthy of Bill. Bill deserved the best, someone who could devote themselves entirely over to him and treat him like the god he was. Someone who could maybe match some of Bill's greatness. But this human was… Bland and powerless and he just... didn't... well, Kryptos didn't understand what Bill saw in him.)

They played long into the day, Phillip, Teeth and Dipper trying their best to destroy each other while the children ended up running off the platform and dying or throwing themselves off it by accident. At the end, Teeth won and was jumping around as he gloated. Everyone got a turn to play and soon Jan told them it was time to go home. The twins whined "But we wanna play some more~"
Jan tucked them under his arms and scolded them while everyone else said their farewells to Bill's friends. Kari gazed at the huge, rowdy group. She'd been quiet most of the night, too lost in thought about all this, aliens being real, her new granddaughter being one. And also being an adult man sometimes. This wasn't what she was expecting for a family but she didn't dislike it. She gave Xanther another pat, the purple alien was so soft, and went up to Jan and the twins. "Well, even if you're a triangle alien shapeshifted, I'm very happy to have you in my family." She told him.

"Aaaww~!" Jan hugged the woman gently with two of his arms. "I'm also glad to be part of your family! Thank you for raising these four boys so well!" Kari and her sons blushed at his words. Jan looked at the humans when they finished saying bye to everyone. "Are you ready?" Everyone nodded.

"I lost because I was uncomfortable with the antlers and because Zoe had been kicking me." Dipper muttered and Mabel giggled. What a sore loser. Jan blinked them away. The constructed bodies were placed in stasis up in the penthouse so Bill wouldn't need to remake them next time. They were a little creepy but no one went up to the penthouse anyway so they didn't have to deal with the blank, soulless stare the empty vessels had.

The Pines went back to their real bodies and collectively took a deep breath before continuing to sleep. Miz blinked sleepily, her body was still tired, and looked at Ford next to her who was knocked out. She smiled and curled up closer before closing her eyes and going back to sleep. It might be kind of creepy to want two families but she didn't give a shit. She hugged the doll Ford had bought her through the night.

Ford awoke to find Miz dozing on him. He noticed that they were holding hands, Miz must have gripped him in her sleep. Ford was about to pull away, but paused as he really considered it. He… Never really held hands with people growing up. He always felt uncomfortable doing so.

But… he thought back to it. Holding hands with Miz. Holding hands with Jan. Well, yes, Ford had been fascinated by Jan's hands. But it wasn't just the scientific curiosity that made Ford hold onto the other man. Ford's free hand flexed, imagining the sensation of when he had held Jan's slender hands in his own. They had been warm.

Comfortable.

In a way that Ford never felt before. He hadn't noticed this when he was with Miz, since she was a child and holding her was simply protecting her as anyone should do.

But holding hands with Jan was… nice. Ford blinked at that. It had felt comfortable, something he never felt when it came to his hands. No one aside from his brothers and mother had ever wanted to touch them. And Stanford had gloves on most of the time, just another way to distance his hands from other people, because it always made him uncomfortable.

But here, and back there, his hands had been free. And he'd felt someone's warmth against his own. Skin to skin. And it hadn't felt wrong or uncomfortable at all. Ford looked back down at Miz, still breathing softly as she slept. He wasn't wearing gloves now. And Miz's hand felt warm. He squeezed gently, smiling when she squeezed back, unconsciously in her sleep.

Ford had packed gloves for his summer vacation, for when they went back to Jersey. Just-Just in case. For when he had to be out there, around people. But...

He… wasn't going to wear gloves today. And maybe he didn't need to at all anymore. Not even in Jersey.

Seb sighed as he held onto the child-leash to keep his kids from running off again. New York was a big place and the little demons didn't want to stay with the group.

"I wanna see everything!" "Can we have a hot dog?!"

"No, no you can't!" He cried exasperatedly. He mentally apologized to his mom. Now he understood the pain. And there were three of them, he would have died. His mom was a miracle worker. A true saint!

Mabel had a brand new sweater on her, one with the letters NYC, the statue of liberty and a star with a man on top. She was skipping next to her family and taking lots of photos to share with her friends.

Diego was being carried on Dillon's shoulders, successfully keeping him entertained. Though he wasn't as crazy as his cousins, so he wouldn't run off anyway. Stan and Carla looked over at Seb being dragged by the twins on their leash and let out a sigh of relief that their children were better behaved.

Ford was determined to take this time to...hang out. However, he was somewhat bored and wasn't sure what to say to everyone. He stayed by his mother's side, she was old, he worried about her stamina since they were going to be walking through the city today.

Wanda and Miz held hands as they laughed at Seb's suffering. Wanda finally felt bad for him and sternly called out "Zach! Zoe! Come back here or we're not getting ice cream later." the twins gasped and ran back, dragging Seb along. Miz sighed. "We should find a way to get them to behave without bribes."

"Won't work." Seb panted as he caught his breath. Gah! Really, how much energy could be stored in those tiny bodies? "They have no solution." Zoe scratched her arm, it felt funny. "Daddy, thirsty." Seb sighed before taking out her water bottle and giving it to her. It wasn't the hottest day, but the last thing he needed were the twins spontaneously combusting from the heat.

Kari smiled fondly at the twins. "They are just like you, Seb." She told him with a smirk. Seb rolled his eye when Wanda and Miz gasped. "God help us." Wanda exclaimed. "It is a dark day indeed, however will we survive when they grow up?" Miz pretended to faint and Wanda picked her up with a laugh.

"Can we go watch a play?!" Mabel not so subtly pointed at her sweater. Shermie and Abi rolled their eyes. "No. You saw the bootlegs already." Abigail reminded her. Mabel whined. "But we're here! In New York City! Fancy streets, fancy restaurants~" she paused to watch a group of teenagers walk by "Fancy boys~"

Stan gently pushed her forward. "There's more we can do here than watch overrated musicals, kid." Mabel gasped in offense as Carla rolled her eyes. "The guy who wrote it is actually a great person, Stan."

"Meh."

Miz tapped on Wanda's shoulder "Ooh! There's a restaurant with authentic Italian pasta!" She pointed at a fancy building. Wanda hugged the girl "Are you hungry already?" She asked. Miz paused to consider it. "Not hungry...but...I could nibble something…"

Wanda narrowed her green eyes playfully. Nibble always turned into something more. "Well…"
She looked at the hour, it was almost 2pm. "I guess we could have an early lunch, so we have more time later?" She suggested. Seb looked at her tiredly. "Whatever is fine if I get to sit down." The twins were a handful and he was the only one who could control them, Wanda wasn't able to measure up to their inhuman strength when it came to pulling them. Miz would help but she had too much fun watching Seb struggle.

"Hey, you guys want to stop for some Italian lunch?" Wanda asked. The rest of the Pines looked over. "Sure. But isn't Italian food expensive?" Stan grumbled. Miz held out a large ruby. Stan practically made a cha-ching sound effect as he reached for it. "Ooh~"

Wanda frowned. "Miz, you can't always do that." She scolded lightly. Miz leaned onto Wanda since she was still carrying the demon. "But I don't do it all the time."

"If you don't want it, I will gladly take it!" Stan offered. The older male Pines and their mom rolled their eyes. Wanda sighed. "Ok, we can use it...but just this once! Stan, be a dear and take it out of your pocket." She said without even turning to look at him. She noticed Miz was no longer holding it and knew Stan's quick fingers had already taken the jewel without people seeing him do so.

Stan grumbled and handed the jewel to a grinning Seb. "Not fair."

Dillon groaned. "We'll have to go to a pawn shop again…"

"Again?" Carla asked and Ford nodded. "The kids got some gold from Miz a few days ago, when you all were drunk-" He shook his head disappointed. "So they could buy things at the mall."

"Wait…" Shermie frowned and looked at his twins. "I remember giving you money! And you got more from Miz?! Give me back my money, you dirty thieves!" He very maturely called his children.

"No! It's ours now!" Dipper smirked and high-fived his twin. Mabel seemed entirely unashamed even as Shermie groaned. He was certain his children picked up bad habits from Seb and Stan. That was the only explanation. Of course not from him! He was clearly a saint!

Stan and Dillon went to find a pawnshop while everyone waited at a park. Seb still held the twins on their leash. He didn't have enough energy to chase them around. "Let go!" Zach pleaded. "Diego is playing!" Seb shook his head. "Diego behaves." the twins whined. Zoe began biting on her leash. Seb laughed. "Nice try. I had Miz curse those to be unbreakable! Even I can't bite through them!"

The twins gave Miz a betrayed look. "Meanie!" They whimpered. Miz shrugged. "He offered me chocolate." Wanda glared at both Miz and Seb. "I thought we were trying to NOT bribe our children?"

Seb kissed her angry, wrinkled nose. "Well, the thing is, Wands, I can bribe Miz 'cuz she's my sister. She's your kid!" He grinned, but Wanda didn't find it as funny as he thought. The twins continued pulling and biting their leashes, getting distressed. Dipper sat down next to them on the grass. "Come on, kiddos, you could probably get Seb to take it off if you behave." Zoe sniffled. "Yeah?" The teen nodded. "How about playing 'I spy' in the meantime? I'll start ok? I spy...an orange thing...it's long, for the traffic…"

"Traffic cone!" They giggled. "My turn!" This way, Dipper kept his hyperactive cousins busy, gaining grateful smiles from his aunt and uncle, until Stan and Dillon came back. "They questioned where we got the gem but between the two of us-" Stan slung an arm around Dillon's shoulder "-we managed to double how much we got from this." Stan ruffled his son's dark curly hair. Dillon smiled proudly. He liked doing stuff with his dad, especially when those moments involved Stan saying he was proud or impressed with him.

"Now we can go to the restaurant?" Miz questioned. They had been waiting for a while now and she was hungry for real, as most of them were.

They agreed and walked into the restaurant. The waitress gaped slightly at the huge group but kindly offered to join two big tables for them. The little twins had their leash taken off and they hugged their Dad, grateful. They promised they would behave.

The other customers stared at the triplets with amused smiles and giggles, everyone loved identical siblings! Stanley casually put on dark glasses just in case. Ah, the fame was so overwhelming sometimes...

The waitress approached the family and started giving out menus. She gave menus to the adults and Dillon. Mabel gasped in offense when the waitress left and didn't give her or Dipper a menu. Were they really that baby-faced?

Miz scooted over to Wanda and read her menu. "Lamb meatballs? Ooh~" the two discussed what they would like while Seb was in charge of picking out food for the twins, who were demanding ice cream. "So...here's the kid's section of the menu, what would you like?" He gave the menu to them, it was important to make them feel included and make their own decisions, within reason, of course.

Zoe asked for spaghetti which used a few ingredients to form a happy face, and like the other options, it came with a drink and a chocolate popsicle while Zach asked for a lasagna off the kid's menu.

Mabel also wanted the chocolate popsicle but her dear twin reminded her that those meals were small, for kids, and she would be hungry later. Mabel made sad noises "Curse my adult body!"

"You're nowhere near an adult." Shermie deadpanned. Abi giggled. Mabel asked if she could get a popsicle anyway. "Can't I get the kid's meal and then a bunch of sides?" She asked.

Abigail stared at her daughter. "Only if you actually finish eating. I don't want to carry your leftovers all day."

"I can eat them!" The trash compactor shaped like a little girl said cheerfully. Wanda poked Miz. "Wouldn't you explode if you ate that much?" Miz shrugged. "I can convert the food into pure energy and the leftover elements just faze out through my skin." So she wouldn't have to deal with her vessel's stomach being too small to hold the food. The only real issue was long term storage...

Carla sighed. "I wish I could convert food into pure energy." Stan pulled her closer. "You look amazing, shut up." He loved his wife's curves, what the hell was she talking about?!

The waitress returned to put tablecloths and utensils on their huge table and gave the kids special ones so they could draw. "Can we get one too, pleasee?" Mabel smiled at the waitress and hugged her deadpanning twin. The woman came back with two more and the crayons. Mabel and her little cousins squealed excitedly.

Miz was already drawing something. Wanda looked over "Is that me and Seb?" She asked. Miz nodded, filling in the eyepatch with the blue because there wasn't a black crayon. She then drew the twins, Stan and his family, Shermie and his, Kari and Ford. Wanda snorted "Why are you giving Ford such a big butt?"
"Because it's funny." Miz replied. Ford pouted from where he was on the other side of the table beside his mother.

"That is not funny." The scientist complained as everyone laughed, because it was funny. "Of course it isn't funny!" Seb agreed. "It's hilarious! You would wish to have a butt like this!" Stanford mumbled something about no respect anymore and his mother laughed softly. "My dear, don't get upset about that."

"I'm not upset, I am annoyed." Ford deadpanned. Seb cackled as he looked over Miz's drawing. "Seriously though, that's a really nice butt. I'd want to have a butt like that." He joked, partially seriously. Miz looked up "I can do that~do you really want it?" she would take any opportunity to shapeshift someone. She really would.

"No, I really like him like he is right now!" Wanda quickly said. She'd appreciate it if her husband had a smaller butt than hers! Seb laughed and nibbled her hand. "Really? Will you be jealous?"

"Yes." She said frankly. Miz was about to intervene when they were brought both garlic bread, regular bread and olive oil for dipping. Ooh~ The kids were already getting one so why couldn't she? She grabbed one and dipped it in the olive oil before taking a huge bite. Mabel and Dipper looked at each other before practically throwing themselves to the table to get them.

"Hey! Eat like civilized people!" Carla and Abigail scolded as their husbands and children began fighting over the bread like sharks. Stan laughed as he snatched some bread "Civilized people get the smallest pieces!" He gave Diego half of his garlic bread. Carla smiled fondly at that.

Other customers stared at them, worried for the sanctity of the restaurant.

As everyone settled down with their bread, Miz continued the conversation. "I can give anyone a bigger butt if they want." She shrugged. Body modification was easy. "Or any other changes they want. I can even make the change a gradual thing over time so people don't get suspicious."

"Make me taller!" Seb's eye widened and lit up. Everyone groaned. "You are still obsessed with that?" Ford raised an eyebrow. "Well, no…but it's not fun being triplets and being so much shorter than you." Curse Filbrick, it was his fault for not letting him eat.

"Sebas, you're fine just as you are." Kari reminded him. Zoe, with her face covered in crumbs, nodded. "Yeah! You're still the best dad even if you're a shortie."

Seb wiped the girl's face with a napkin. "Thanks, baby, but I still wanna be taller." He looked at Miz. She nodded and flicked her fingers. "It'll take a few years for you to match your triplets though." Wanda sighed. "Well, at least if it's gradual I'll have time to get used to it." She kissed her husband. "Frankly, I think you're fine the way you are." She leaned in to whisper "Besides, this means you'll have to adjust all your clothes as you grow or they won't fit."

"Fuck." Seb spat when he realized Wanda was right. Was changing all his wardrobe worth it?

"Sebastian, don't curse in front of the kids." Kari scolded her son. Seb shook his head. "They're used to it!" Wanda and Miz smacked him on the arm lightly. This idiot! "He's joking, Kari!" Wanda said quickly. Miz rolled her eyes "At least say Fudge or Frog instead."

Wanda nudged Miz's side. "If he does grow, make it like… an inch at most. He's cuter when he's small." Miz raised an eyebrow. "Oh~? And what's in it for me?"

Wanda groaned. "I'm not bribing you." She declared. Miz nodded. "Yeah, that's fair. But just imaaaaagine it~ Seb being super tall~ Hitting his head on the door frames~" The Stans hit their heads sometimes, it was so funny.

Wanda choked on her drink (really shouldn't have taken a sip of water) and her eyes were wide in horror. Nooooooo! She didn't want her cute little Sebastian to be so tall! His tininess was his charm point! His iconic look! She set her jaw and very quietly said, "You get to choose which restaurant we go to for dinner."

"One inch it is! I mean, who needs tall people, am I right?" Miz cackled. Seb looked over. "What're you two whispering about?"

"Nooooothing~"

The waitress came back over. "Is everyone ready to order?" She went around the table to get everyone's choices written down. Shermie told her about his nut allergy and she wrote that down too. Allergies were dangerous and it was very important to accommodate for that.

Seb leaned back on his chair. "Ah~ I remember when you almost died, Shermie. Thank you, you scared the heck out of me."

Shermie frowned. "I...don't remember?" He scratched the back of his head. "When was that?"

"Kid, you almost died! Sebastian took you to the hospital when you were 2!" Stan exclaimed. "Aaw! Uncle Seb saved Dad!" Mabel cooed. Shermie shrugged. "I can't remember. I was two. It isn't that important, right?"

Ford looked at the green-eyed man. "Since that day, Sebastian started liking you, we all thought he would have let you die." Kari hit his arm. He was too direct.

Shermie blinked. "Excuse me?" he cried. Kari sighed. "When you were born, Filbrick kicked Seb out of his room and threw him into the attic. Seb was terrified of being alone up there and he blamed you for taking his room." She sighed. "I should have said something. I shouldn't have let that awful man do that to you." She felt so guilty about how complacent she had been. Because she hadn't wanted to anger her husband.

The brothers softened their gaze. "Mom, it wasn't your fault..." Seb assured. "It-It was a long time ago..."

"I still should have protected you..." She said softly and Ford, slowly, as if scared, put a hand on her shoulder to try and comfort her. Apparently it worked, she grabbed his hand, bigger than hers now, and stroked his six fingers. Ford initially tensed up, but relaxed as he felt it. He liked it when his hand was held. Ford hadn't really thought of that before.

Shermie rubbed the back of his head. "I'm glad you started liking me though...you are my favorite brother..." He saw the Stans scowling at him. "Like...you guys! Haha, I also love you! You are my favorite in-in other stuff! How did you even notice I was allergic?" He changed the topic. Everyone listened in, curious.

Sebastian blushed and laughed awkwardly. "I...I was babysitting you...and I started throwing you some cereal that came with nuts. I threw the cereal on the floor, nuts included because you were incredibly annoying as a baby-" He huffed. "And you started eating it from the floor like a savage."

"That was not what you told us," Kari frowned and Seb laughed awkwardly. "Needed to survive, you know?" Dipper looked at his Dad and snorted. And his dad always told Mabel off for eating from the floor. Seb shrugged "Well he started choking, I was so scared. No one else was home so I couldn't get help and I was so afraid Shermie would die." He kept quiet about how Bill2 had wanted Shermie to die "So I picked him up and ran to the hospital as fast as I could. I nearly fainted from exhaustion."

"Woah…” the teens breathed out. Mabel tried to picture her uncle as a little 12 year old carrying her dad as a baby. That was so heroic. Nothing a bad Bill would do.

"I called home, we didn't have mobile phones and Wutsapp at that time." The teens shuddered. How did they survive? "And luckily for me, Mom and Filbrick returned from who knows where, I can't remember, and they came to the hospital with the Stans." Seb avoided saying how Filbrick tried to hit him at the hospital...and got to do it later, in the privacy of the attic where no one could hear him sob. Miz narrowed her eyes at Seb. Well, that was something else she was adding to the list of awful things to do to Filbrick when they got back to jersey.

"Mom screamed at us in front of all the other kids at the arcade…” Stan mumbled, still remembering the laughter and how they were dragged away. Luckily they got their bet money before that. "I was panicking ok?" Kari protested. "We got a call from the hospital. What was I supposed to do?"

Abigail and Carla patted Kari's hands, reaching across the table to do so. Wanda would have done so too but she was sitting too far away.

"And that's the story of how I discovered you are allergic as heck and saved your life! Fin." Seb bowed his head and the Pines clapped. Even when Kari knew Seb probably got over it, she still felt bad for letting her ex husband treat her baby like that. She was just glad he turned out to be ok. He had the memories and personality of an apparent alien, demon thing. She wondered why he didn't turn out as a murderer or something worse...

Finally, the waitress started bringing their plates. The children's (and Mabel) were brought first. Zoe looked at the smiley face made from cheese, jam and olives and whimpered. She couldn't eat it. It was too cute! Zach looked over and patted his sister's back. "Don't worry. I think he would be happy to be eaten."

Zoe tearfully poked the face with her fork. "But he's so cute." Seb was covering his mouth to muffle his laughter. Wanda poked him. "Don't laugh. That's mean."

Seb really tried not to, his daughter was actually suffering at the thought of killing the smiley face, but when she sobbed as she took a part of his pasta face to her mouth, he burst out laughing. Zach glared at his Dad. "You're mean! Shut up!" He demanded. Miz rolled her eyes as she waited for her food impatiently. "Don't laugh at your kids, Seb!" everyone else sighed. Diego patted Zoe's back since he was sitting on her other side. "It's ok. Your dad might be a jerk."

"Hey!"

"-but at least he's going to get punished by your mom later. I've seen mom give my dad that same look before."

Zoe sniffled. "Yeah…” He was right. "Uncle Stan also has to sit in the corner when he is mean?"

"He sits in the corner everyday." Dillon agreed as he grinned at his scowling dad. That wasn't true! He had been punished in other ways, but he hadn't been in the corner since he was a kid!

"Mommy, will you make Dad sit in the corner for being mean?" Zoe took a sip of her lemonade, her green and brown eyes glassy. The glass was so cute too. It had a cool straw. "I will, sweetie, now eat, the smiley face will be sad if you don't eat him." Wanda said.
Seb groaned loudly. Corner?! Again?! Miz gave him a smug look. She'd never been sent to the corner before. The rest of the food began to come out and everyone dug into their food. Miz pulled out a device that looked like a smartphone but more advanced. She fiddled with it and grinned. "Cool. I got the connection back up. Darn thing keeps cutting out on me."

"Is that a phone?" Mabel asked. Miz shook her head "Sort of, it's a Com. Which is more like a handheld computer, though, I think all smartphones and electronics you humans make nowadays are like that. Making computers super small and stuff." She twisted a piece off and placed it on the table where it began projecting a holographic image above it. "But my Com has a bunch of functions that human technology hasn't gotten to yet. I built it by scanning a bunch of Federation tech and mixing them up together. So I guess that makes it a PC."

"You built it?" Ford and Dipper's eyes widened. Mabel bit her ravioli and grinned. "Now I want a plantimal AND a Com!"

"Too bad you're getting neither!" Shermie shrugged. Mabel groaned. "But you said I COULD!" she distinctly remembered SOMEONE telling her she could have a plantimal. She stared at Miz. They gave her chocolate! Sadly, it appeared Miz had forgotten, on account of being drunk.

Miz nodded. "Well, I built the hardware, the actual programming inside it was made by Hectorgon. Ugh, I hate programming. I can do it if I have to but it gives me a headache." She pressed a few buttons. "Currently, I've managed to connect into the interdimensional signals for Tumblr. It's my blog."

Ford twitched. Dipper stared with his mouth agape. "You mean, you've got cool alien tech...and you're using it to check a blog site?"

Miz nodded. "Oh right, hey Seb. Guess what?" She grinned at him. "BlueBill uses Tumblr too!"

Seb looked up from his food and slurped the pasta. Wanda frowned. "Blue Bi...Oh! Yeah! I remember! On Tumblr? Have you been talking to him as well?" He looked at his confused family. "He is another Bill we met, don't worry." He waved a hand.

Miz grinned. "Yeah. Our signals don't match up very often so we just send each other messages whenever we can." she tapped a few buttons. "He's doing well. His Ford is still being a dick the last I checked. Well, sort of? One of them was being super creepy and can't take a hint that brother's not interested in him. And the other one's... almost decent?"

"HAHAHA! Remember when you traumatized him?!" Seb explained. He was a little confused about how there were apparently two Fords over there now, but he would think about that later. "But the look on his FACE!" Miz and Seb started laughing loudly as everyone watched confused. "When I ate your vessel!" Miz wheezed.

Seb wiped a tear from his eye. "Ah..." He looked at his triplets. "Those Stans were old men, like the ones from my past life's dimension." He grinned at the Stans' horrified expressions. "Good thing is, my Fordsie isn't a dick anymore, eh?"

Ford looked down and took a sip of his drink. Yeah, no need to remind him about that...he said he was sorry, didn't he? "This other Ford, he's a mean person?"

Miz nodded. "He trapped Seb in a magic circle...and from what I've SEEN, he was so sleep deprived and paranoid he nearly shot his Stanley once." The two set of twins and the two brothers gasped softly. "But Uncle Fordsie is great and cool!" Diego defended his oldest uncle with a pout.
Stan gulped down his food and laughed awkwardly. "Well, Ford also almost killed me with a crossbow...but he didn't mean to, his mind was pudding from an evil Bill messing with him..." Ford sunk a little more on his chair. Right...the crossbow. "We-well...that was in the past...I wouldn't do it now..." His mom shook her head slowly. So that was what he was doing before he 'died'. These dumb boys.

Seb smiled softly, noticing his triplet's crestfallen expression, and said. "Of course you wouldn't, Sixer! We all made dumb mistakes in the past, but, we are finally together and...I'm glad we lived to enjoy this with all of you." He smiled as he absentmindedly rubbed his long-healed wrists. Luckily no one noticed or commented. He raised his drink and proposed a toast for their family.

"To us together now and many more years together in the future!" He raised his strawberry milkshake, Wanda refused to let him drink this early in the afternoon. Everyone raised their drinks as well. "To family!" Mabel yelled. They clicked their cups together. A few other diners looked over at their loud table and shook their heads. The Pines didn't notice their annoyed expressions, too busy enjoying themselves.

As predicted by Dipper, Mabel finished her food and wanted to steal from his plate. "Don't be selfish!" She whined. "I told you not to order that! Mom!" Dipper whined back. His parents sighed tiredly and poured a bit from their plates onto Mabel's plate. She smiled brightly. "You're welcome, sweetie." Shermie rolled his eyes. And these two were turning 19? At their age he was already working and paying taxes! While raising TWO toddlers! Mabel had ordered a bunch of side dishes but since she was sharing those with everyone, it wasn't enough to eat for her.

Ford got the grilled salmon and felt a hungry gaze boring into him. He looked up to see Miz staring at his plate. "Fish~"

Wanda looked at Miz. "You already ate yours, Miz, let Ford eat."

"It's alright, I am kind of full anyway." He pushed the entire plate towards the demon girl. Seb caught the plate before Miz got her hands on it and cut it in half. "Ford, you haven't eaten sheep." He returned half the salmon to his brother. "And then I'm the one with eating problems." He mumbled to himself.

Miz dug into the fish with gusto. Ford ate his under Kari's stern gaze. He wasn't sure if he was being treated like a child or not. He was 43 for Einstein's sake and he felt 4, when they wouldn't be allowed to stand up from the table until they finished their food. He stared at the way Miz was eating and wondered why a being of pure energy even needed the food. She did say she converted food in energy… Ah, he really wanted to study that. Perhaps Miz would agree to that later on, he'd ask tonight.

He finished his food though, and after the kids and Mabel were brought their chocolate popsicle, Stan paid for the food, complaining that if they didn't have Miz with them, they would have spent a lot of money today. Miz shrugged. Ford blinked and thought about it. "Did you convert your own energy into mass to create the gemstone?"

Miz blinked "Yes? If I'm going to eat and get more energy anyway, I can afford to burn some off." She tilted her head. "Besides, moving around too many particles from the world around me means there's less of the normal particles that could be used for something more important than gold or jewels."

Stan scoffed. "What's more important than gold?"
"Oxygen, hydrogen, carbon and the various molecules they create." Miz responded. "Gold uses up 79 protons, 79 electrons and 118 neutrons on average. If I pull the particles I need to make gold from the air around me, that's a lot of other elements I need to cannibalize and restructure just to make one elemental atom of gold."

She held out her hand "And then, to make the gold viable for use, I have to build on it, drawing in more and more particles from the world around me to stack onto each other until I've got something even visible to the human eye." She closed her hand and leaned back in her chair. "If I do that too many times, I'm actively making it so there would be less stuff around to be made into the things humans need to survive."

Wanda stared down at her daughter. That...wasn't something she considered before. Ford nodded. "And I'm guessing you get around that issue by creating mass spontaneously with your energy, your very being."

Miz nodded. "My body is converted into the world around me. I can generate more energy, thereby regenerating my true self, by feeding off molecular bonds by eating stuff or emotional energy I can get by feeding off sapient creatures."

Dipper stood up "Wait. Are you saying...that Bill Cipher creates nightmares so he can scare people and feed off their fear for sustenance?"

Miz nodded. "Well, yeah. I can feed off any strong emotion but Fear is EASY. Despair, Greed, Anger...those are easy to get." She shrugged nonchalantly. "If I want someone sad, I just have to take away something they care about. If I want them jealous and hungry, I dangle something they want in front of them. If I want them mad...well, you get the idea."

There was an awkward silence around the table. Mabel spoke up meekly "Can't you do happy emotions like love and joy...or that squeeing feeling inside when you see a cute animal?"

"Well...yeah. But those are harder." Miz didn't seem to notice the mildly disturbed faces, looking down at her hands. "What makes one person happy might not work for someone else and maniac love, or crushes are such a similar thing to stressful obsession that I get them confused half the time anyway."

"What about true love?" Dipper asked. Miz sighed. "It's too sweet for me to digest. I start vomiting. Or bleeding. Depends on what form I'm in."

Stan clapped his hands together and stood up from the table. "Well that was a cheery conversation, how's about we forget this and head off to have some mindless fun in the city? Eh?" He grinned a bit too tightly. Miz was confused about the taste of the emotions in the air. "Did I...say something to upset you all?" She frowned. Mental attacks again? But she was just clarifying what they asked of her.

"What? No, sweetie." Wanda took her hands. "We were just surprised with this new information, no one knew about this."

Everyone nodded when the two of them looked at them. "I think it was quite interesting to learn this." Ford smiled at the demon. Miz looked down at the twins when they hugged her. "We don't know what a croton is, but we aren't upset that you use them from air!" Zoe assured her sister, making everyone snort with laughter.

Miz smiled widely, glad her family wasn't really upset with her for playing with other people's emotions in order to feed off them and raised her arms at Ford to be picked up. The scientist rolled his eyes but accepted, holding her with his arms because putting her on his shoulders was too tall for her. "You know what? I want to head off for some mindless fun!" Her mood totally changing. "What do you suggest, fish?" He looked at Stan.

Stan grinned. "There're some amusement parks." Carla patted his arm. "And museums…" Miz's eyes lit up. "Art museum?" Ford chuckled. "You want to see the art museum?"

"Of course!" Miz laid against Ford and sighed. "I miss going to museums. I should probably take my friends to one sometime. Maybe they've forgotten about the other one we destroyed by now…"

"Your friends destroyed a museum?" Shermie repeated as they walked, guided by Stan and Carla. Seb had put the twins on their leash again and this time, he had to pull them to walk. They didn't want to go to the museum.

"Yup!" Miz grinned. "They're chaotic monsters, I love them." Seb rolled his eye. Stan guided them through Central Park which was beautiful at this time of the year. The trees were bright green, squirrels ran around and it was full of people. Dipper and Mabel walked along after the younger set of twins and laughed at the way they growled at squirrels.

"Uncle Seb, how did you make them so much like you?" Mabel raised an eyebrow. Seb sighed. "I don't know…" He said lamely. "Sometimes it's cute, because I know I'm cute as hell, but they are also a handful…" And they were just 5! He didn't want to imagine when they were teens! They could kill him!

Zach lifted a squirrel with his mind and quickly caught it by its tail, watching as it twisted and squeaked in his grip. "Look! I caught one." The boy told his twin. Zoe searched around for a rock. "Let's watch it explode!" She grinned wickedly.

Seb felt the twins stopping and he saw on time what Zoe was going to do to decide its fate. "No! Wait! Don't kill it! Kids!" He cried and freed the squirrel. "What the heck have I told you about this?!" He glared at the little blonds. "No killing animals!"

Ford and Stan shared a look and shuddered. Ford needed even more fingers in his hands to count how many animals Seb had killed as a kid just for fun. It made sense he did it because he was still transitioning between Bill to Sebastian, but fuck was it scary to see him covered in blood.

Miz frowned. "You can't kill innocent animals." She scolded the children. "If they attack you first, then it's free game, but if they don't then you can't." Ford gave her a flat look. "I don't think you should be killing animals no matter the reason."

Miz raised her eyebrows at him. "What do you call that fish you just ate? Or any of the other things you kill?" Ford sighed. "That's different. Food is something that we need to survive." Miz nodded and turned back to the twins "Don't kill something unless you plan to eat it." She called out.

Ford couldn't facepalm since he was holding her but he groaned. The twins looked at the squirrel. "So...we have to eat that?" Wanda shook her head. "Don't you dare! You don't know where that thing's been!" The twins stared at each other before looking at their parents. "So, how come you guys don't eat the bugs you kill?"

Miz sighed. "Well bugs don't taste good. Plus, you should always kill a mosquito! They suck. Literally."

Zoe and Zach giggled. They will kill mosquitoes when they see one. The twins started skipping once more, happily jumping around Seb and Wanda. The blonde woman sighed tiredly. She wished she had known Seb as kids, maybe that way she would know how to control the twins. Maybe she should have a good long talk with Kari later.

Eventually, after some pleas from Mabel to take a group photo, buying cotton candy, and then carrying said cotton candy because certain little blonds didn't finish it, they reached the art museum.

"Boothinggg!" Zoe moaned and tried throwing herself to the floor, but the leash kept her somewhat straight. Diego actually seemed excited to go. Dillon and Stan rolled their eyes. What a little nerd.

Miz was already jabbering about the statues and paintings they could see while standing in line to buy the entry tickets. "-nd the original Realism movement was all about painting what real life was like. You see, before then paintings tended to be Bible stories commissioned by the church or portraits of rich people, but then they began depicting more humble things like farmers, not romanticized but in all the gritty detail of reality. Notice they don't make the subjects of the work conventionally beautiful and flawless like what you see in the-"

As Miz acted as a tour guide, the Pines approached the counter to buy tickets. The kids entered for free while the teens and the adults paid a cheap entrance. "Where should we go?" Stan asked. He didn't want to pay extra for the tour guide because they had Miz after all! She looked at the map and pointed out a route that would take them through each exhibit. "And I can bore you all with random art history!" she scanned a bunch of what happened here. And some of it was similar to her own dimension. Well, the prehistoric art at least, which they didn't have here. But she saw an Asia section that featured ancient pottery and even a bone flute!

They went through the museum, picking up many other guests who began to follow the group in order to listen to Miz talk. At one point Miz got into an argument with an actual tour guide over the origin of a certain statue…

"Archeologists today still debate over why this triangular figure exists in so many different ancient cultures..." the official tour guide said. Miz interrupted as Seb snickered "Actually, there's a really simple reason. A creature that looks like that appeared before them and they began to worship him."

The tourist guide gave the girl a smile. "That is not a valid theory. What? Are you suggesting an alien came to those cultures?" He asked.

"I'm saying that all the ancient civilizations throughout history have a common theme in their depictions of this triangular figure." Miz stared up at the man with her hands on her hips. "And much like how multiple cultures have various depictions of dragons based on the dinosaur bones found by the ancient people, it's very possible that some sort of triangular creature used to be around back then. And what's more, that they traveled worldwide and was seen, and remembered by these civilizations."

At the confused expression of the man, Seb grinned. "So yeah, we are saying a triangle alien was around and seen by these lucky people."

The tour guide shook his head, what a crazy group, seriously, and led his group away to the next exhibition. Miz waved at him. "I don't know what's so difficult to understand, seriously, I'm all over the place!" Ford chuckled. "Some people just can't accept that their view of reality is wrong."

"And why CAN'T I reveal the existence of aliens to humanity?" Miz asked him as she took his hand.
"Because humans panic and are scared of things they don't understand...besides, I am pretty sure we would be the first one to try to attack, have you seen those movies? Other countries wouldn't be that dumb to go against superior beings!" Seb shrugged. "We would kick the aliens' butts!" Mabel exclaimed and high-fived her twin and older cousin.

Miz stared at them. "You DO know that Time Baby is going to reform himself in less than a thousand years and then take over the Earth right?"

"Wha?" Seb looked at her. Fuck…”I guess I shouldn't have killed him...right?"

"Time Baby?" Everyone not familiarized with weirdness muttered. "One of the leaders of the Federation in my world, and a Time dictator here." Miz explained. "Wait. I?" Ford looked at Seb. "What do you mean, I?" Seb laughed awkwardly. "We should go see the paintings, huh?"

Ford glared at him and Seb flinched. "It wasn't my fault? Bill was bothering me...then that asshole appeared and I kind of...shouted at him and killed him?" Miz raised her hand "Can confirm, I can shout at things and they die. It's super weird."

"You killed Time Baby?!" Ford cried, pulling at his hair. "Shh!" Seb slapped him in the mouth. "You don't need to shout, and he will regenerate later...and apparently take over Earth...but we won't have to worry about that." He smiled. He killed Time Baby twice. That was a big achievement.

"Ok ok, enough of this. We paid so we better start seeing paintings and act as if we understand the deep meaning behind them." Stan pushed his brothers forward. Miz shrugged and put this behind her for now. She didn't like having to hide her powers in public. She continued their tour through the museum, pointing out everything wrong with the information that humans had about the artifacts.

Dipper groaned. "The worst part is, I can't use any of this information in school because the teachers won't believe me!" He grumbled. That was the problem with getting information from someone who was there versus what humans theorize based on artifacts left behind.

"Just use the false information they gave you." Miz assured the teen. "Keep them in their ignorance but you know the truth now." They had a pleasant time at the museum, barring a few arguments that broke out between Miz and the tour guides. "Dammit! Why do people always think Cleopatra was a sexy seductress? People liked her because she wasn't JUST a pretty face! She was an intelligent woman who frickin' grew up in Alexandria! You know? The CITY OF KNOWLEDGE? She was really smart and witty and INTERESTING to talk to! That's why the emperors were so enamoured with her!"

Ford picked Miz up and carried her away. "I am...so sorry..." he said sheepishly to the startled tour guide.

Zach was very interested in the history behind the paintings, even if he found the paintings themselves to be boring. The way Miz explained stuff always made it sound interesting. He pouted at his twin who was now laying on the floor and refused to walk another step. Oh, Zoe, why was she always like this?

He pulled her leash in addition to dad. "Come on, Zoe, I wanna hear Miz explain more paintings." the girl whined and put her face on the floor. Wanda freed her from the leash and picked her up with a serious face. "What's wrong with you? Can you behave?" Zoe responded with a whine and hid her face on her neck.
Seb came over "What's wrong, baby?" He pet her head. "I...I don't know..." She mumbled. She wanted to behave but she also wanted to go and because she couldn't leave she wanted to burn and break stuff because dumb humans were boring. But her leash kept her from doing that and it angered it and made her want to cry.

Wanda bounced Zoe a little in her arms. "Do you want to sit down? Or are you bored? Do you want to go somewhere else?" she didn't want her baby feeling upset. The little girl just whined again, unable to put her feelings into words and defaulting to unhappy sounds. Wanda sighed. "You guys go on. I'm going to take Zoe outside and let her play in the park for a while."

Zach made to follow her but his leash held him back. "Can I go with Zoe?" He asked. Seb looked back and forth between them. "Well, don't you want to finish the tour?" he asked his son. Zach looked conflicted. He wanted to stay but he didn't want to leave Zoe. They've never been apart like this before. He watched his mother walk away with Zoe in her arms and didn't know what to do.

He sniffled, and Seb was about to panic, when Dipper called the kid. "Hey Zach! How about you walk with us? Only big boys though! So no crying."

"Nothing wrong with crying, whether or not you're a boy~" Miz called back to them as Ford carried her farther away."What about-" Mabel frowned and Dipper pushed her away "Only boys!" He repeated as Mabel pouted. Zach looked one last time at where mom had been standing and then at Dipper with a smile. "Ok..." He promised to be good and Seb freed him from his leash so he could run towards them and take Dipper's hand.

Seb sighed in relief. Zach needed to learn how to survive without Zoe for a little bit...he knew firsthand how bad it was to become dependent, he was like that with his triplets.

He joined his triplets and continued walking around. Stan shook his head slightly. He thought they were pampering the twins a little too much. He spoiled his boys too, but if Diego thought he could throw tantrums to call their attention and didn't want to walk, he would tell him to suck it up and be a man!

Ford continued holding Miz to stop her from attacking poor tour guides about their inaccurate historical knowledge. "Maybe you should just let them stay ignorant?" He suggested. Miz gave him a flat look. "And would YOU like being kept in the dark about true history?" Ford blushed. "Well...no..."

They finished the tour, somewhat tired from walking and with too many mind blowing revelations from Miz to handle. The group left the museum and found Wanda and Zoe sitting at the park near the pond.

"Splash, splash, feeding the fishies." Zoe sang happily as she threw fish food into the water. Wanda bought a little bag of food to keep her entertained. She had burnt off her energy, quite literally, burning sticks in her hand (Wanda made sure no one was watching), and now she was more calm. She wondered how Sebas handled tantrums as a kid. His powers were contained by a seal, it must have been so uncomfortable to not be able to release his stress by burning stuff.

Zoe waved at everyone when she noticed her family coming towards them. "Look! I'm feeding the fishies!" She gave the bag to her twin so he could feed fishies too. Wanda looked at Seb and walked towards him. "I had to let her burn some wood, she was really upset." she told him. Seb sighed. "Geez..."

Mabel went over to feed the fish too. The family settled down in the grass, relaxing after walking off all the food they ate for lunch. Miz found a tree to stand beside so she could be in the shade.
Meanwhile, the kids played, running and jumping around. They had to enjoy all the time they could because when summer was over, they would have to go to school! And that was scary and boring. The adults and the teens watched them play and checked their phones. The teens had been forced to keep their phones on hold while having lunch and at the museum or their parents would take them away, but now they were able to use them freely.

Their quiet time was interrupted by a male voice calling out-

"Carla? Izzat you?"

The brunette took one glance and then had to double back for a second one. Oh gosh. "Ah, hi Zed?"

It was a man with long hair tied up in a man bun.

Stan looked at Carla with a raised eyebrow "So? Who's this?"

"He's...Zed, my...ex..." Carla spoke softly. Stan's eyes widened. WOW. WOW...

Carla winced a bit when she noticed Stan growling a little.

"Oh, how long has it been, huh?! Like? 15 years? Maybe even more!" He laughed easily. Stan frowned a little at all...him. He had this natural...hippie vibe. Ugh. He thought those were gone.

"Are you Stanley?! Hello! I'm Zed. I'm so glad you are safe now" He smiled at Stan. "How's your son, Carla?" He asked in a friendly way. Carla pointed at the boys. "He's over there. And our youngest kid is playing there." She explained.

"Wow! Dillon is so big now!" He gasped. Before Stan exploded from how much he was shivering, a woman and a kid approached them. "It was very nice seeing you, Carla! We need to go now, our entirely organic vegan meal is waiting for us~"

"Meat is murder, peace sis~" His partner smiled and walked away.

Stan and Carla stayed silent for a second, blinking, before Stanley turned to look at his wife, who was looking embarrassed.

"You replaced me with a hippie? Seriously, woman?"

"Excuuuuuse me? Whadda ya mean replaced?" Carla glared. "You were straight up GONE and left me alone to raise our kid! I had no idea if you'd ever come back, or when. And for your information, this woman has NEEDS!"

The two glared at each other. Everyone else backed away, scared of getting in their fight. "Hey, let's go and hang out... over there! Waaaaay over there!" Wanda said loudly as she herded everyone away to give the two some privacy.

"I can't believe you-" Stan started, but Carla poked him. "And what about you? Are you saying that YOU, Stan Pines, mister libido king himself, never had someone in the 13 years we've been apart? I mean, so you didn't sleep with that Pyronica lady, cool. But I know you, Stan Pines."

"Well if I did it too then you have no right getting mad at me!" Stan cried. Carla snarled, "So it's okay for you to get mad at me for a short fling back when Dillon was 2?!!" Stan looked taken aback. Carla continued, "It'd been over a year. It was finally dawning on me that you were really GONE, and that maybe... you won't ever be coming back. I got depressed. I got desperate." She was shaking as she glared up at him. "I just wanted someone! Anyone at all! I just... I couldn't spend another night ALONE!"
"Carla… I…"

She wiped at her eyes. "It didn't even last a year. Zed was nice, but he wasn't YOU." She was turned away from him. "It was a long time ago, Dillon doesn't even remember him. I'm sorry I didn't tell you. But it wasn't important. Zed was nice, but he didn't mean anything to me. Even when I tried. He wasn't you, and being with him only made me feel worse."

Stan was silent for a moment, before he ran a hand through his hair and huffed. "I felt terrible ok?!" He finally admitted it. "After doing it...I tried not to, but I failed a couple of times. I missed you. I'm a grown man with needs. Heck, I tried really hard not to! To keep it to myself. I remembered you, our engagement, and that helped, most of the time. Sometimes it didn't, and it only made me mad and frustrated. But like ya said...It wasn't you. I wanted YOU. The woman I wanted ta get married with!" He smiled a little bit, staring at the floor, hoping he wasn't blushing like some girl.

"It only made it worse when I fucked up and Ford only scolded me and told me he told me not to...There was this woman I almost got married to, out in space, an accident! I swear!" He said quickly. "I'm pretty sure she spiked my drink, she was a bitch! But clever. She stole a few stuff from us, luckily not our equipment… She had like fluffy gray hair and a very sharp tooth, It was weird, you could prolly imagine the shouting that came from Ford that day." He gave Carla a small smile.

Carla leaned on his shoulder and closed her eyes. "I should have told you, shouldn't have kept it from you." She slumped in place. "But I didn't think it was important since it was so long ago. And you were finally here, now. And I just…"

"Yeah, I get it. Sorry for… getting all mad and stuff." He waved a dismissive hand and lifted his woman's chin to kiss her. Yeah, she was his now. It was ok. None of them would need to do that again. They got from each other everything they needed. Physically and emocionally.
Suddenly, they were a loud cry. Seb immediately thought it was one of the twins, but to his surprise and worry, it wasn't them, it was Diego. The kid came running towards them, followed by Zoe who had a really scared look on her face, and seconds later, Zach joined them after he got rid of the problem by setting it on fire. "Daddy! A bee attacked Diego's hand! Help him!" Zoe cried.

"Oh god, my baby!" Carla picked up her crying child. Dillon was quickly by his side, rubbing his little brother's back.

"I killed the bee!" Zach looked proud of himself. Seb wasn't going to tell him it would have probably died anyway. They panicked when Diego began gasping for air. "Hospital!" Carla cried as she looked around wildly. Miz ran up and held onto Diego's hand.

"Miz! Can you heal him?" Stan cried. Miz frowned. "I never healed a bee sting before… venom isn't the same as a physical injury..." she squeezed Diego's hand. "But I can keep him stable until we get to a hospital."

Everyone nodded, worried for the sobbing kid. Stan picked him up and put a hand on his head as he ran to the street. Miz trailing after him. Carla screamed for a taxi driver who immediately stopped and the four of them got in.

"We will be there as soon as possible!" Sebastian assured his panicking brother before they rode off.

"What the hell! Why were you even playing in there if you know fucking bees are everywhere?!" Dillon sternly looked at his little cousins who flinched away. They were sorry, they didn't know bees were there…
"Hey!" Seb snarled at his oldest nephew. "This was just an accident! Don't try to blame my kids, Dillon Pines!" He spat as the twins looked down ashamed.

"I never said-" Dillon started by Seb growled. "You were thinking about it!"

"Man, no one knew, they're just kids, calm down..." Dipper put a hand on his shoulder. Wanda placed a hand on Seb's shoulder. "It's alright. Miz is with him. She will make sure nothing happens."

'How did he even get stung? Shouldn't my Deal with Miz have prevented that?' Wanda worried internally. Was this one of those loopholes? The Deal said they wouldn't be harmed but...did it only work on immediate lethal harm? A bee sting allergy was different. It was the person's own body overreacting to the sting right? Was that what this was?

Wanda hid her worry. This loophole would mean the Deal wouldn't protect them from allergies. But an extreme allergy like Sherman's could actually kill them...in that case the Deal would work? Ugh, magic...

Seb inhaled deeply to calm himself. Everyone was worried, he shouldn't shout at Dillon either, he was worried for Diego, he understood. "We should probably go see them." He declared, checking his phone to see if Stan sent the location of the hospital they were in.

They took a taxi there and after speaking to the receptionist, the family was taken to the ER pediatric room Diego was in and mindlessly watching a cartoon. Miz was sitting on the couch with Carla and Stan, also watching the cartoon. Dillon smiled in relief when he saw Diego was fine, and sat down on the bed with him. "Hey...are you ok?"

"You gave us quite the scare, kid!" Shermie joked and Diego looked at them with a grin. "I'm fine now! It really, really hurt when I got here and I was really dizzy, even with Miz helping, but then before I felt even worse, I started feeling much better! And then with the medicine I felt even more better!"

Ford rolled his eyes, language, but still smiled at the kid. He was glad he was fine.

Wanda blinked and looked at Miz who winked at her and the blonde smiled widely. So that was it...Diego's allergy was turning lethal...and the Deal got him healing before help arrived. That made much more sense...she mouthed a 'thank you' at her daughter. Miz nodded and turned back to the tv, wishing she could change the channel but Carla had the remote.

The room wasn't big enough for the whole family but everyone shuffled in and out to check on Diego and express their relief. Zach and Zoe tearfully apologized but Diego told them it wasn't their fault. That brought up the question of how Diego had been stung in the first place.

"Because the bee attacked in self defence." Miz said quietly. "My Deal only protects you from accidents and intentional harm. A sentient creature attacking in self defence is allowed." After all, what if some member of the Pines family was...say...an abusive asshole? She left that hidden feature of the Deal in so that people can still protect themselves from them.

Dillon crouched in front of the twins who were sitting with Seb, and smiled awkwardly. "I'm sorry for snapping at you, kiddos..." He apologized, he looked at his uncle with a guilty expression. The twins hugged their cousin. "It's ok!" Zach smiled. "We forgive you!" They stayed at the hospital for a few more hours until Diego was deemed stable enough to leave. It actually surprised the doctors a little that he recovered so fast. "But if he's allergic to bees, you should keep an epipen around. Just in case." the doctor told Stan. The middle triplet nodded "We didn't know he was allergic to bees."

The family all went home after that, worn out from the day and wanting nothing more than to relax. Miz and Seb made dinner, they decided to switch out who made dinner for the next week so it would be Seb/Miz, Carla/Kari, Abigail/Wanda and Dillon/Stan.

Kari had wanted Ford, Shermie, Dipper and Mabel to have a turn cooking too but Shermie sheepishly said he only knew how to make sandwiches (to which Abi replied with a loud "They're damn good sandwiches though! We raised two children on sandwiches alone!" "...Mom, that's not how..." "YEAH! SANDWICHES!"), no one trusted Mabel to make their food ("Whadda ya mean glitter isn't edible?!"), Ford wasn't much of a chef (unless coffee counted), and Dipper didn't know much either, but he was willing to help others if needed.

As Seb cooked, Mabel curled up next to her grandma who started petting her curls. "Why don't they let you cook?" Kari asked. Mabel sighed dramatically. "You know, Grandma, people get jealous of those better than them...I don't know why they don't trust me if my cooking is delicious!"

"Is not that we don't like it sweetie..." Abigail started. "We don't like it." Shermie coughed and she nudged him. "Mabel could totally kill us all with glitter in our food!" Seb called from the kitchen and Kari raised an eyebrow.

"You don't comprehend my art!" The girl called back. Kari laughed and shook her head. The only thing she could thank Filbrick for was giving her 4 beautiful babies.

Seb and Miz finished cooking and the kids helped to set the table, feeling super proud of themselves. Everyone's mouths watered at the sight of the steamy and delicious food. Seb and Miz were the best chefs in the family. They made sautéed cauliflower with rice, scrambled eggs and fries. Seb knew it would be the only way to get the twins and Diego to eat the cauliflower. For the meat dish, Miz made some grilled teriyaki skewers with broccoli. She also used the water used to cook the broccoli as a soup base, adding cheese and spices to make something warm and savory.

It was a lot of food, but the Pines really liked to eat, even Seb was starting to eat more, which Wanda and Miz were incredibly proud of.

"Uncle Shermie, food is ready, come!" Zoe climbed over her uncle and excitedly bit his bare arm. "OW! Zoe!" Shermie exclaimed and rubbed his arm. Damn, it hurt! He looked at the toddler's parents with a pout and while Wanda looked apologetic, Seb was laughing his head off.

That was his baby! He was so proud of her!

Miz tilted her head at Zoe. "Does he taste good?" Zoe shrugged. "Not really." Miz looked over at Shermie who was rubbing his arm. "I wonder what humans taste like..."

The Pines family all gave a collective shudder. "I'm sure we don't taste good." Stan laughed nervously. Miz pouted and turned to Ford. "Can I bite you? Just a little?"

"No biting. I don't want teeth anywhere near my body parts." Ford scolded. All the older Pines except Mabel and Kari began coughing. "Hey! Let's eat dinner!" Stan said loudly as he sat down to eat. They had a lively dinner and settled in the living room for a movie before bed. The problem was WHICH movie.

"Ghost Harassers has a full documentary movie~" Dipper whined. He held up the DVD. "Come on~please~?" he begged. "Dream Boy High XVI! The return of the Boogie!" Mabel shook her

"Gah! Too many options!" Seb pulled at his hair. "How about we send the kids to bed and we stay to watch a real movie?! Everyone wins!" He was hit by a pillow glowing blue. Zach glared. "No, bad dad!"

They decided to go for a classic children's movie, so they put on Belle and the Furry Dude. Mabel squealed. She loved the life action movie! Miz grumbled about how the live action movie was awful and destroyed everything good about the original animated movie. "They TELL her about the curse! That means it can't be true love because she KNOWS that if she DOESN'T love him, they're gonna die! That makes her declaration of love unauthentic and caused by guilt and sympathy, not real love!"

Miz threw such a fit about it, they watched the original animated movie instead. Phones were put away on a table because it was family time and after a "No, Sherman, we all have to work, suck it.", all of them were curled up in front of the huge flat TV. The kids insisted on popcorn, even when they just ate, and now they had a little bowl for them to share.

Wanda smiled and hugged Sebastian's arm as the movie started. She remembered the dresses he made for her cousins as kids...

Shermie commented that the love wasn't authentic in this version either because the girl must be going through Stockholm syndrome and Miz went off on a rant again about how THIS wasn't Stockholm syndrome at all.

"Belle was not imprisoned against her will, she ASKED the beast to take her in place of her father. She made a choice to be a prisoner in order to save her father. And she's an angry, uncooperative prisoner who refuses to do anything the beast asks of her until HE concedes and starts treating her better. She was afraid of him, but she was defiant. That's not Stockholm." She said heatedly. "You know what IS Stockholm syndrome? Rapunzel and her adoptive witch mother. The witch treats Rapunzel like a possession and manipulates her with lies. And yet, Rapunzel loved and trusted her because she thought that was her mom. And then there's Frollo and Quasimodo in which Quasi LITERALLY calls him MASTER!" Miz was very much angry about this.

"The only issue with Belle and Beast's relationship is that people who DIDN'T understand the point of the movie thought it was about how if your partner is angry and violent, you should stay with them to help because obviously they're a nice person underneath. Which WASN'T the point." Miz explained. "Notice what happens whenever Beast is being mean, or yells or is violent? Belle turns away, scolds him about it and even runs away from the castle. When he realizes he was wrong for acting and treating her the way he did, he tries to change and be nice, attentive to HER needs and treats her with respect like a decent human being, she then, and ONLY then, responds with true kindness and understanding of her own. That's what the point of the movie was! Mutual kindness and understanding. Belle is a nice girl, but she doesn't put up with bullshit. That's why she can't stand Gaston!" Miz pointed at the screen.

"Like, you see that scene where Belle and Beast are eating? He's trying really hard to use a spoon but he can't. Belle can SEE that he's trying so she finds a compromise in the middle where she sips from the bowl, letting him know that she is going to eat in the way HE does as a way of letting him know it's ok to not be able to eat like a human, as long as he tried. Made an attempt, because that's what this is. The movie is Beast trying to better himself and not be a dick anymore. Belle can see that he's legitimately trying and THAT'S why she stays."

Everyone blinked at Miz's rant. Eventually, Zach smiled. "That's adorable." He cooed and Zoe shrugged. "I am just here for the songs." The little girl said and Miz rolled her eyes. The movie finally finished, so it was time to go to sleep. As always, the kids made a fuss and tried everything in their power to escape, but they had all the adults against them.

Miz looked at Ford who had gone back to the table once everyone struggled with Diego and the twins. "Are you going to sleep now? I'm tired."

"You can go, I have to finish something first." He looked down at his book and Miz thought his concentrated face looked pretty hot. Damn handsome Pines boys. She slid a little closer and spent some time just staring at his face. It wasn't like she COULDN'T see his face, or any other human face. It was simply more difficult for her to tell people apart without all the other cues she had to look for. Hair style, clothing, colors, shape… She COULD tell people apart. She had aesthetic types after all.

If Ford noticed her scrutiny, he didn't react to it. Miz continued to examine him, tracing the edges of his profile with her eyes. She liked the curve of his shoulders. Stan was slightly wider, rounder. Seb was thinner and had sharper angles, which she decided meant that He was the handsomest (heck, she grew up as a Shape, some of it rubbed off on her). Still, she really liked Ford too. He had a distinguished look about him, his face set into a slight frown as he concentrated.

She reached out to brush a finger along the few gray hairs forming at his temples. Ford startled. "Miz? What are you-?"

"Don't mind me. Just admiring the view." Miz continued to brush her hands through his hair. Ford blinked at her before going back to his book, writing something down. He relaxed at the sensation. It felt kind of nice having his hair brushed. Soothing. He commented quietly "Do you find humans aesthetically attractive?"

"Some humans. I'm kinda picky." Miz said. Ford nodded. "Do you find humans sexually attractive? I know you said you were Ace, but I'm told that there's a difference." He might as well learn more about her. He flipped his book over to the chapter dedicated to his observations and study of MizBill Cipher. The word William was on the top of the page. He remembered how he started this entry around 18 years ago.

"Sexually? Ugh, not really. I mean, I do like to watch humans copulate sometimes. But I just like WATCHING. I'm not really into...actually laying with any of you. No offense."

"None taken. I think I feel the same way, I think that's what being asexual means, from what I've read up on it.". Ford nodded. He paused and his cheeks warmed up. "You-You like to watch humans have sex?"

Miz paused and then it was Xin sitting there, leaning against the table. There. More age appropriate. He nodded, a faint blush on his face as he slid his finger around on the table, unable to look Ford in the eyes. "It's entertaining. And I created an entire planet while I was drunk once...in which various porn stuff happens on it...and I kinda..." He ducked his head, bright red, but still grinning "...get off on watching them..."

"O-Oh..." Ford blushed even redder. "That...is...I didn't know..." He frowned. Bill made his own planet to watch porn... "I didn't expect that." His face looked slightly disturbed.

"Don't tell anyone!" Xin pleaded and Ford gaped at him. "Do you really THINK I would mention such a thing to anyone?! Do you know how annoying my family is?" He joked. Stan and Shermie would never let him hear the end of it. Xin wiggled in his seat.
"Well...anyway...despite that, the idea of doing it myself is just...gross. And humans have all those gross, slimy fluids that are just...ew...I wouldn't mind touching, but actually doing it? No way"

Ford laughed. "Yes. It is rather unsanitary to think about."

Xin winced. "You must understand...right? You mentioned you weren't interested when we met that other 8-Ball." At his nod, Xin grinned a bit wider. So he understood.

"Actually, I can sort of understand about reading porn but not wanting to experience it." Ford was blushing so hard he felt like his head would pop off. "I... ah... might have read a few books that weren't strictly about science."

"Oh, really now?" Xin thought Ford was the type of asexual who simply didn't feel anything at all. Ford coughed. "I was a teenager once. Raging hormones and horniness were...problems I had to deal with."

Xin scooted his chair closer with a grin. "So you do feel romantic attraction either? To women? Men? Both?"

This time, the scientist looked less sure. "Eh~ I'm not sure. I had some random crushes on girls in my school. Never went anywhere, I didn't know how to talk to girls. Still don't." Xin gave him a long look and then poofed back into Miz and grinned.

"You're talking to me just fine." Miz shrugged. Ford paused. "Not quite sure this counts." He chuckled "And if I ever felt something for a boy I have no way to distinguish it now. Or know if it was simple admiration or not."

"I'm pretty sure you have a thing for Tesla." Miz deadpanned. Ford snorted so hard he choked. After he managed to get his lungs working properly again, Ford laughed. "He was my idol, don't... ah... not quite the same, but I guess in some way, I had a 'thing' for him. I-I am told he qualifies as quite handsome." Ford admitted.

He reached a hand out to pet Mi's head and was surprised when she poofed back into Xin.

"Well I think you're fine talking to anyone, girl or boy. You just get stressed when you're in situations where you think you need to act in a certain way, but don't know what that 'way' is."

Ford blinked. That was... an incredibly accurate description of his anxiety.

Xin leaned into Ford's hand. "Me though? I have no issue talking to people, even when I have a crush on them. I mean, like, whatever, right? Though I do get all these squirming feelings inside me, so that might get in the way of smooth conversation." Xin leaned against the table again, slumping in place.

"I'm more... concerned with choice. I don't want to be told who I'm allowed to be with, or even that I HAVE to be with anyone at all. Things were really strict back in the Flatlands. The Council decided who you were Paired with. And once you were Paired, you had to Click and produce children. You were required to." Xin scowled. "That was what really pissed me off. The fact that I wasn't allowed any choice in the matter, regardless of my sexuality."

Xin looked up at Ford. "But I guess... if I ever found someone I actually liked in that way, and if they wanted to do something physical, I wouldn't mind some touching. I like touching. And I like making people feel good."
Ford adjusted his glasses and nodded. "My mother basically tries every time she sees me to find someone for me to have kids with."

Xin couldn't help but burst out laughing. "Granny Kari REALLY wants grandkids, but I'm sure she'll accept it someday! Maybe convince one of your brothers to make another kid!" She suggested as a joke. "And there's always artificial insemination."

"But I don't even have a partner to do that with." Ford sighed. "Besides, I'm much too busy to go out and date. I can't just pick some random woman, that's irresponsible and wouldn't be fair to her or me." He sighed "And I wouldn't want to have a child with someone that I didn't like. And I might even have to marry her, just for the sake of polite society. I don't have the time to get to know someone like that, even less to take care of a child!"

"Well, sucks to be you." Xin giggled. Ford rolled his eyes. "Well, you've had kids. How did that work?"

Xin paused. "Well...Ammy was an accident. A virgin birth, as it were, when one of my ejected Pieces somehow got incubated and gained a Soul."

"I would love to study your reproductive system someday." Ford nearly bounced at the thought. Xin shot him down with a "Naw, no way. Nothing related to my reproductive parts." and Ford pouted like a sad owl.

"As for my other kids...well, they weren't mine, technically. Quackers was given to me through a Deal when her asshole of a mother willingly sold her own firstborn to me…"

"That's horrible!" Ford gasped.

"...and Pyrone and Pynelope were Pyronica's kids. Speaking of having children with someone you don't know, since Pyronica's species eat their own mates, it's actually normal to not have emotional connections with their mate. There are some who DO fall in love...but that just makes it tragic."

"So you became the kids'...dad?" Ford asked. Xin shrugged. "I don't know...They called me both...but it didn't really matter, I just loved them a lot." He smiled a bit, somehow managing to look sad while doing so, and leaned on Ford's arm. Ford stroked his hair comfortingly. "I bet you did, you are really good with kids, and when I met them they seemed to love you as well."

"I know...I still...miss them." Xin sighed. "Sadly, my grandkids don't like me and want nothing to do with me once their parents died." he closed his eyes "Rince hated me ever since she was a baby. I never understood why…"

He hugged Ford's arm, trying to put this thought behind him. It was a long time ago. Heck, his grandchildren were long dead by this point. He had decided to stay out of their lives, there was one time he tried, just… tried to stay in touch, but…

"Everything wrong with us is YOUR fault!"

Xin shook his head. That was a long time ago. Don't...don't think about it. Ford gazed down at the sad looking man and hugged him a little tighter. "It's ok…" He said, confused as to how to comfort his friend. He was terrible at this. "We like you a lot, and your friends too...you don't need them, if they didn't care about you."

Xin buried his face in Ford's shirt. He took a few deep breaths, allowing himself to calm. It's fine. He had his Friends and new Family now. They loved him and it was fine even if not everyone loved him, because the people who mattered loved her. Best of all, they were people he CHOSE.
Only Ammy was actually related to him... Seb and Blue, technically. Everyone else was someone who chose to be with him because they loved him and not due to familial obligations.

"You're right…" he rubbed his cheek against Ford's chest. Oh, he liked his cologne. Nice~ kinda a sweet, spicy smell. Xin wondered what it tasted like...

Ford finished reading his book, stroking Xin's long black hair from time to time and chuckling at the soft purrs he made. Ford pulled Xin closer when he felt the dragon's breathing going even. He wasn't sure what happened next, everything was so warm…

Ford blinked, lowering himself slowly. His eyelids felt heavy, and Xin was so soft against his side. Warm...

Stan, wearing his boxers and his undershirt, glared moodily at the two idiots who were cuddled against each other at the table. "Can you go to your room now, Poindexter? It is like, 2:30 am." No response. Great. They were fucking asleep. He looked at them closer and rolled his eyes. Ford was drooling on his book and mumbling stuff, probably Pi.

Ok. Fine. They could sleep there. Who cared?!

He came back one last time to cover them with a blanket. He was a good brother.

Ford woke up the next morning with his fluffy hair trapped between Xin's antlers. Needless to say, his triplets laughed at him for it.

Wooo They're up for a summer full of adventures! Stay tune~

Chapter 30: Let's go have fun

Chapter Summary

I mean, what're summer vacations for?

Slices of Life and Family

Chapter 30

-Lets go have fun-

---

No one would say it, but they were rather glad to get back to their summer vacation. Forget all their worries and stress and just... have fun. So Stan thought it’d be good to take everyone out for a day at the park. Not the boring flowers and jungle gym park either. Naw, he wanted Rides and ROLLER COASTERS and--

It should've been a simple family day at the amusement park. Should.

In no particular order, the bumper cars had somehow escaped from the pit they were meant to be in and ran wild across the grounds with the older set of twins screaming as they tried to get off but couldn’t, the ferris wheel doubled in speed, an entire street was filled with cotton candy, Miz had turned into Xin at some point because there was a ride that she was too short to go on, there were so many bubbles floating through the air that people couldn't see where they were going, Stan convinced Seb and Miz to help him cheat on the carnival games, the younger twins set the haunted house on fire, the pirate ship ride got stuck in the upward position and caused the terrified riders to cling to their seats for 20 minutes...and the Pines family were thrown out of the park and banned for a year.

“RUN!!” Sebastian screamed as everyone laughed and ran away from the cops and security guards. Shermie, Abigail and Kari (who was being carried by a laughing Stan) were terrified but the rest of the family was having way too much fun. “This is nothing! We got chased by a gnome monster once!” Mabel exclaimed as they lost sight of the cops. “Oh yeah! I remember that day.” Dipper panted. Shermie frowned. Where had he sent his kids that year?

When they were safe, Diego clung to his Dad’s leg laughing. “Again!”

“Again!” the little twins cheered, floating in the air surrounded by a yellow glow. Wanda panted softly. It was obviously tiring, but good thing Seb and her had been going to the gym. "I think we've destroyed enough today.” She complained.

“Destroying is fun!” Her three kids and Seb argued. “Do you think we got banned?” Carla mused and Stan nodded. “Definitely. They saw us…” But he wasn’t going to be caught alive!

Ford had a huge grin on his face. He had missed feeling adrenaline running through his veins! It reminded him of when he was young and exploring Gravity Falls for the first time. He was glad. Even the roller coasters hadn't gotten him this worked up. He felt a hand squeeze his own and realized Xin was still holding him from their mad dash to escape the park. Xin had a wide smile on his lips and a faint flush from the excitement of the day. “We should do that again some time!”

He grinned back. “Absolutely!” Xin cheered and jumped up to cling to the oldest triplet, who in return, held Xin firmly with his hands on the dragon’s wide hips to keep from falling over. “Xin! Warn me first!”

Shermie looked between his older brothers, all of them happy and excited that they were literally chased out by the police and sighed loudly. Even if Sebastian was the one who used to be a demon, the three of them were crazy as heck.

“Can we set more things on fire?!” Seb pleaded and pulled at Wanda’s hand. The twins started pulling her shorts as well. “No,” Wanda was firm about this. “Can we go to the pool then?” Zoe suggested. “With water balloons?!” Mabel smiled and Stan shrugged. “Why not?!”

They returned to their house and changed clothes to get in the pool. Miz and Mabel wore their new swimsuits and jumped into the pool together (after Miz secretly cleansed the pool of all contaminants, eeeew). “Come on Dip-Dop!” Mabel waved at her brother. “It's summer!"

Dipper rolled his eyes. “We're gonna go back to New Jersey for the rest of summer anyway. There's a beach there.” He yelped when Mabel and Miz pulled him into the pool.

“Yay! Dipper is in!” Zoe exclaimed. She threw her acorn puppy into the water who fell with a small ‘plop’. Zach tried to get Queen Flutter in as well, but the maple kitten hissed and flew away. Sir Bedazzle wiggled his little legs and barked as he tried to swim, bobbing along through the water.

Zoe grabbed the struggling puppy and put it on her older cousin’s head. “Stay there!” She told Sir Bedazzle and swam away to play with Diego and her brother. Dipper sighed and the plantimal licked his forehead. “Arf!”

Dipper left the acorn puppy on the edge of the pool and watched him shake himself before running away. He wondered if that plantimal thought he was a puppy. It seemed like it.

Uncle Stan joined them first, and eventually, all the family sans Carla and Kari were in the water, splashing each other. Carla refused to get her hair wet and Kari was simply content with seeing them so happy. Ford had been dragged into the water under the combined force of his brothers and was brushing his hair from his face.

Seb grinned. This vacation was going to be the best!

Going back to New Jersey was certainly something for the four brothers, the birthday trip didn’t count since they stayed on the beach the whole time. The triplets hadn’t been here since they were 17 (except Seb to visit Matsuda’s grave a few more times) and Shermie hadn’t stepped foot in the town since he moved to Cali with Abigail. Kari looked around at the city that used to be their home with a sense of melancholy in her green eyes. How long has it been? 18 years?

They first went to the hotel where they reserved rooms. Stan and Carla shared one, Dillon and Diego another, Seb and Wanda had their own but connected to theirs, was a room with three beds for Miz and the twins. Shermie and Abi shared and the older twins, Ford and Kari had their own rooms. They could have tried Miz’s idea to simply expand the room via magic, but it would have been too suspicious when the cleaners came.
Miz promised Ford to visit though. There wouldn't be a problem with leaving the twins, because Seb and Wanda were right there. She was very, very excited to keep Fordsie company!

For his part, Ford didn't want to admit that he was glad for that. It was...nice to share a room with someone again. He didn’t think he’d actually want to have someone else around like that again. But he shared with Stan all his life, and McGucket once he got to college. His house in Gravity Falls always had some new specimen he caught nearby… and even behind the portal he’d been with Stan for 13 years...

Even when New Jersey was a complicated memory for the Pines brothers, they wanted to show their families where they grew up. Carla, Wanda and Abi already knew, but not their kids. “Do we have to walk?” Dillon complained. “Yes, shut up, it’ll be fun! I’ll show you where I lost a baby tooth! I bet my dried blood is still there!” Seb exclaimed and everyone let out a loud ‘Ewww!’

They walked around, chatting and laughing before a voice cut through their conversation. “Oh my god! It’s the freaks! Wow. There's more of you now?”

They turned to see a large blond man. It took the brothers a few seconds for recognition to set it. “Crampelter??!” The man, still as ugly as they remembered, grinned at the Pines. “I knew I would recognize your faces anywhere.” He laughed. “It's the SAME face after all!”

“I'll kill him.” Seb said simply and Wanda held him firmly, because she knew he would. Miz frowned at the man. Crampelter looked down and spotted her. “Whoa seriously?” He glanced up at Ford who was holding her hand “You got with a chink?” He looked around “No sign of the mother, hah! Did she leave you after seeing your fucked up hands?”

Ford narrowed his eyes and was going to retort when the large blond man suddenly fell over, clutching at his throat. Ford felt Miz squeezing his hand tightly. “Miz! You can't do that. Let him go.” Miz stared at the choking man. Her eyes had turned red with a slit yellow pupil. “No.”

Miz ignored them. “He hurt you.” This stupid Piece of shit hurt the triplets since they were little kids, and hadn’t even made any effort to try and change to be a better person even after all this time. She was going to make him pay. The man's eyes rolled up and his face was turning blue. A woman ran over to him. “Claude! What's happening? What's wrong?!”

“Ah, don’t worry, we were really happy away from here as well. We could finally breathe without “Threats now, freak?” Crampelter swung his other arm which Seb also caught. “Back off. Just leave us alone and we leave you alone.” Seb glared. “And if you really want to start something…”

“Claude, just leave them…” His wife pleaded but Crampelter glared at her. “You shut up!” he tore his hand away from Seb and swung at her. She managed to stay back and dodge the hit, as if she had seen him do such a thing before. She flinched and stepped back a few more steps when he reared back a second time.

“Ok, that’s it!” Stan growled and threw his jacket to Dillon. He swung at Crampelter and hit his nose. Suddenly, Sherman was trying to pull Stan away as Crampelter tried hitting Stan back. Seb and Ford joined in and the kids gaped as their parents started fighting in the middle of the street.

Wanda ignored them and walked over to the scared looking woman with a frown. “Ma'am. Did your husband just try to strike you?” She knew he did, they all SAW it, but she had to ask anyway. “Does he do this often?” the woman shook her head. “N-no. He's...not normally like this…” she couldn't look at Wanda though. Wanda spoke softly “My name is Wanda Pines, I'm a lawyer. What's your name?”

“I swear he is not how you think! I-I think he has been drinking…” She excused him. Wanda sighed. “Even so, there are plenty of people who can be drunk without being violent.” Her adorable lightweight husband, for example. Whenever he wasn’t pent up with that magical energy thing he had.

“Dad, stop fighting!” Dillon called annoyed. “You'll call the cops’ attention!” Stan ignored him as he roared and jumped at the other man. Crampelter and him were covered in growing bruises as they attacked each other. “I am sick of you, stupid piece of shit!! Just leave my stupid family alone!!”

Mabel and Dipper carried the scared little twins as Dillon held a really confused Diego. Kari just took a deep breath. Miz was whispering “Kill him, kill him~” They finally managed to separate Crampelter and Stan from each other. Shermie held Crampelter as Seb and Ford held a growling Stan.

“Stop it! Just fucking leave!” Seb cried. “What's the fucking problem you have with us?! YES, WE ARE FUCKING FREAKS, if you have a problem with that you can shove it up your ass !!”

The two set of twins would have laughed if this wasn’t so serious. Crampelter sneered. “I just think you freaks shouldn't be allowed out in society!” He opened his mouth again and Miz flicked her fingers. “-Your fingers are creepy and I'm terrified that you might be contagious and everyone likes Stanfreak even though he's a freak and it's not fair that you guys are so special and all the teachers liked Ford even when he's a stupid nerd. I'm jealous that Stanley is a rich and successful sports player and it's not fair that he gets to live it up and be happy even when he's some loser from Jersey just like me!”

Crampelter slapped his hands over his mouth, eyes wide. Why had he said that?!

Seb’s eye widened a bit and raised an eyebrow. “What?” He looked at Miz who was grinning proudly. He caught what she did and grinned wickedly. “Oh yeah? So you're jealous of my brothers? You know, my nerd brother has an important research center and is recognized in the scientific community. Are you jealous of that too?” He taunted.
Crampelter glared and opened his mouth but instead of the posturing lie and taunts he wanted to say, his mouth spoke up about the insecurities he'd suppressed all his life “It's not fair! What makes you freaks so great?! Why are you so much better than me?! I hate you all! You're all freaks but people still like you! It's not fair!”

Seb folded his arms. “Well, maybe if you tried to actually DO something with your life instead of wasting your time picking on us…”

“But I’m too stupid for that! I was never good at anything in my life, that’s why I picked on you when you were much younger and smaller than me, it made me feel better with myself to attack your insecurities to hide mine.” Crampelter grimaced. What the fuck?!

Everyone was staring in shock, even the cursed man’s wife. Miz giggled. Truth curses were so much fun. “And when school started getting harder and I realized that I just couldn't make anything of myself I got so mad that I took it out on everyone around me until all my friends left me and—” Crampelter clamped his hands over his mouth.

His wife walked up to him. “Claude...is this...true?” He turned to her “Yes! And I'm such a failure that I can't even get a girlfriend and only got you because we were both drunk at that bar and I got you pregnant. I'm terrified of being a father and I know I'm not any good for us. I can see how Emmie hates me and I can't stand it but I only know how to react by getting mad because I don't want to talk about my feelings because that's stupid and only nerds and losers talk about their feelings—” he squeezed his mouth shut again. Why was this happening?!

“I think you have a lot to talk about, man. I hope you don’t ruin any more lives.” Seb nodded and patted his shoulder. He grabbed Zoe from Dipper and started walking away. “Oh, and that sucks. My children love me.” He couldn’t help but taunt him one last time.

Crampelter glared at them as they quickly followed Seb but he kept his mouth shut because he would have cried “You’re right!”

When they were away, the triplets and Miz started laughing loudly. Stan winced a bit at his bruises but still laughed. Wanda frowned. “It's not funny. That man needs help.” Miz shrugged. “And he'll get it. Once he stops lying to both himself and the people around him.” from afar they hear Crampelter shout out “I REGULARLY COMMIT TAX FRAUD!”

Mabel winced. “If he doesn't get arrested first.” She glanced at Miz. “I know I normally say that honesty is the best policy but...yikes.” She was a little worried that Miz just straight up cursed that man, but she didn’t know how to bring it up. Miz rolled her eyes. “Well, despite all his issues, he doesn't feel any guilt over how he treated you guys. So I'd say he deserves this.”

“I had forgotten about that guy.” Ford mumbled as Stan laughed. “Well, I beat the shit out of him, and I got this!” He searched into his pocket and Carla glared at him. “I swear that if you stole something from him...” Stan slowly put the item back in his pocket while Carla and their kids facepalmed. “Seriously dad?” Dillon deadpanned. “I need to buy ice and who caused these bruises?! Him!” He argued. He was simply getting his compensation!

“Did that man pick on you too, dad?” Mabel asked Sherman as they walked. “Well, not at school because he’s way older than me, but when we learned your mom was pregnant with you two he was the first one to harass me about it. And he was a grown ass man at the time, messing with a teenager!” The twins scowled annoyed. “What an asshole.” Dipper stated.

Seb sighed as he hugged Zoe. “Well, I think I'll be happier if we just stayed away from him for the rest of the summer.” Stan laughed. “If his damn mouth keeps doing that, he's probably gonna hide away in his house for the rest of the summer!”

“Daddy, I want ice cream.” Zoe asked and Seb smiled. “Hey, guys, you think that store we used to go as kids is still around?”

“We should check!” Stan nodded. Ford, still holding Miz’s hand, frowned at her. She pouted. “What? I didn’t hurt him. So it’s fine right?”

Ford sighed. Well, she wasn’t wrong. But that didn’t make her right. “Even if someone isn’t a good person, you shouldn’t go around using your powers on them like this all the time. We should avoid calling attention to ourselves. No powers in public.” Miz pouted but nodded. “Ok, but if I meet more people who hurt you all, I’ll get mad. And I’m not going to hold back on protecting you all.” She warned. The man with glasses smiled and ruffled her hair. “I appreciate your concern, but we are grown adults now, not kids.”

They heard Stan cheer. “Look! The ice cream place is still here!” Stan and Seb raced for the building, laughing like children. It wasn’t large enough for everyone to fit inside so they sent a few adults in to get the treats for everyone else.

“Aw man...this is so nostalgic...” Seb sighed as he licked his ice cream cone. “Hey, wanna head to the harbor and check out the docks for stuff?” His twins cheered and hugged his pants.

The sun shone down at them as they walked. “Everything looks samey...but also different-y.” Shermie commented, making a face that reminded Seb a lot of Mabel. Wow, he really resembled the twins. Or rather, the twins resembled him. Those Pines genes. The little twins saw the beach ahead and wanted to run off but Seb caught their hands. “No, behave. We will stay with everyone, ok?”

They all walked around licking their ice cream and listening to the sound of the waves. They passed some fishermen and townspeople. The children wanted to check everything out but they had a quiet day out otherwise. Miz stared at the boats. Fish~

Ford noticed her longing look and chuckled. “Seriously?”

“I love fish, let me be.” Miz punched his side jokingly. “Steamed fish, grilled fish, raw fish, ground fish...”

She spent the rest of the day talking about all the different ways to prepare fish. Ford nodded, wondering if it had to do with anything Bill related or it was just Miz’s personal likings. Anyway, he should remember this for the future, who knew when it could be important.

“You always came to the beach?” Dipper asked the adults. Shermie huffed. “THEY went to the beach, they never took me, nice big brothers they were.”

“You ungrateful brat, I always took you out!” Seb complained. “Yeah, but not the three of you.”

“Did you seriously expect us, as teens, with an image to uphold, to take our toddler brother everywhere? Do you know how embarrassing that would have been?” Stan complained. Shermie shrugged and looked at the women. “You see? They thought I was an embarrassment.”

Miz frowned. “I took my youngest sister with me everywhere, with my last human family.” Which made everyone wonder about what other human family Miz had. “How is that embarrassing?” She legitimately didn’t know.
“Stan was the popular one, of course it was embarrassing for him because his friends were jocks and idiots.” Seb shrugged. “Like that one time we accompanied Fordsie to buy his DD and more D game, the ‘cool’ one with the rap song, and you abandoned me there with Shermie and Ford JUST because they saw you!”

Dipper burst out laughing. Diggity Dungeons...

Miz stared at Ford. “And...THAT wasn't embarrassing?” She raised an eyebrow at him. Ford blushed. “It was a dark time in my life…”

Shermie grinned widely. “Right! I remember! It was that time you started wearing all colorful and neon clothes, right?”

Ford didn't want to admit that Miz judging him hit harder than expected.

“I was excited and many people were doing the same!” Ford complained. “The 90s were dark times…” Seb nodded to himself. “I want to see pictures!” Mabel demanded. “I NEED them! Grandma, I’d gave you my blood!”

Kari chuckled. “I do not have my albums here I’m afraid...they are in New York at my house.” Mabel groaned and Ford sighed in relief. “Miz! Can you magic them to us?!” Mabel looked at the girl pleadingly. “No, please!” Ford pleaded and Miz grinned wickedly.

She looked around to make sure no one was watching before flicking her fingers and pulling Ford’s jacket open to tug out the photo album that was now in there. “Boop! One album of embarrassing photos!”

“Of Ford?” Stan grinned.

“Of the four of you~” Miz grinned even wider as fear and dread started coming out of them like waves. Ah~ Fear! “I’m just being fair of course. Fordsie shouldn’t have to suffer alone.”

Now the brothers were panicking. “No! Please! Stop it!” They knew those photos shouldn’t even exist! For all they knew, Miz could have created them looking into theirs and Mom’s memories! “Let’s go somewhere to look at them!” Miz announced and everyone followed her laughing.

The triplets and Shermie stayed frozen to the floor. “So...how about a collective suicide?” Seb muttered. His brothers all whimpered and nodded.

They sat down and Miz cackled as she opened the album. Mabel squee’d “Omigosh! They’re so TINY!”

That was a cute photo. The triplets were little and drinking from their feeding bottles with their little eyes closed. The triplets shared a look. That wasn’t that bad...

In the next one they were a little older, and were sitting on a mattress staring at something. It was easy to spot Seb and they had to look at the babies’ hands to see who was Ford and who was Stan. They really looked similar. Kari put her hands on her chest. Her babies~

“OH MY GOD!” Mabel roared. Why were they SO cute!!??
“I know.” Kari smiled as Carla and Wanda squealed. “Daddy, why is your eye yellow?” Zach asked, pointing at the baby. “He used to have his eye like that, but he doesn’t have it anymore.” Wanda explained easily. Zach nodded and accepted the explanation.

Kari flipped the page and everyone laughed. The triplets were eating spaghetti. A little Stanford was crying his eyes out, judging by his red face, Stanley ate his food oblivious and Seb was smiling widely, showing off proudly his front tooth and 2 little fangs and an empty bowl he definitely poured over his brother’s head. “That was a good day.” Seb commented and Ford glared half-heartedly at him.

“Wait, you remember this?!” Stan gaped and Seb shrugged. “I was conscious as a baby...my body was just way behind me.”

“So you remember being a baby?! Everything?!” Shermie exclaimed and Seb nodded slowly. “You...don’t?” What the heck? He thought everyone remembered it! “No? My earliest memory is at...4? Maybe 3.” Ford scratched the back of his head.

Kari took a hand to her mouth, eyes wide. “Oh god…” She couldn’t believe Sebastian remembered those years! She sobered when she remembered how much she fought with Filbrick when they were just babies, the things Filbrick and his family called Seb...and he was hearing it all...she slowly turned the page, regretting not doing something sooner.

They saw ‘photos’ of Stan and Ford asleep, Ford slumped over his pillow with a book on his face and Stan halfway off his bed. “Where’s daddy?” Zach asked.

“I didn't share a room with them.” Seb responded. He was also sure now that these photos weren't real photos but images received via Miz's All Seeing powers. There was a photo of little Seb clinging to a much younger Kari's dress, peeking out from behind her. “Aww~granny Kari was so pretty~”

“I'm still gorgeous.” Kari laughed. She was sitting down with her grandchildren surrounding her, on her lap and was tracing the photos fondly. There was a photo of child Seb and Stan trying to escape bathitime, convenient items in the foreground of the shot blocking anything explicit. Kari laughed. Magical photo album? Amazing.

There was a photo of the triplets at Halloween. Everyone laughed at the adorableness. Then there was Shermie being born. Seb's dark scowl aimed at the baby even as he clung to Kari's side, knuckles white. Shermie's bedroom being set up. Kari paused at the photo of Sebastian huddled in the dark attic, alone and far from his family. Oh...

There were photos of Seb glaring at Shermie and eventually the panicked look on Seb's face as Shermie choked. They gasped at the photo of Seb carrying Shermie in his arms as he ran, a look of desperation on his face. These were DEFINITELY photos formed from magic. Kari was...amazed actually.

She considered her adopted granddaughter. “Miz? Wanna learn how to scam people with psychic readings?”

“Ma! Don't teach Miz terrible things! Besides, she's already pretty good at that sort of thing.” Seb sighed. Stan scoffed. “I bet she doesn't even need to do FAKE psychic readings…”

Shermie stared at the progression photos of Seb handing the baby Shermie off to the nurses at the hospital. Wow. Seb really did save his life...he gave his older brother a quick hug.
The photos progressed as the triplets got older. The three of them playing at the beach. Finding the boat. Standing on each other's shoulders to try the trench coat trick for sneaking into R rated movies. Eating meals together. Kari flipped the pages as everyone giggled and Aww'ed at images of her children growing up.

There was a photo of Filbrick, tall, imposing and Seb, tiny little Seb, who had always been smaller than his triplets, crying on the ground, holding a hand to his red cheek. The children gasped and turned to look at Seb. He flushed. “I...I broke something. He...he was just punishing me…”

There was a photo of Filbrick tossing Sebastian outside the house, the snapshot taken while Sebastian was still in the air, mid-throw, Filbrick's face twisted into a scowl. Seb looked away “I did something bad again...it just...happened.”

Zach and Zoe were frowning. “Who is this mean man?” Dillon, Diego, Mabel and Dipper were frowning as well. Kari tightened her grip on the book. The brothers were quiet. “That's grandpa Fildick.” Miz said. Her tone was cheerful in a way that lent to a sense of foreboding. “He was really mean.” The twins looked confused. “Not Grandpa Matsuda?”

Miz shook her head. “Filbrick was granny Kari’s husband. But he was never a dad to Seb. That’s why Matsuda was Seb’s dad instead.” That seemed to explain enough, so the twins just nodded. “I’m glad Fill-bic isn’t our grandpa. He looks mean.”

There were photos of the Stans cheerfully playing together right next to photos of the beatings Seb received from Filbrick. Kari trembled. She couldn't see Miz's face since she was sitting in her lap with her back towards her. The younger children were beginning to look distressed. “Why is Fill-bic hurting daddy? Why does he keep doing it?” Zach whimpered.

“Because grandpa was scared and angry and instead of talking about how he felt, he hit daddy to make himself feel better.” Miz explained. Zoe whined. “L-like that fat man from this morning?” Kari felt Miz nod. “Exactly. But WORSE, because Fildick was a dad and dad's are supposed to take care of their kids…”

Seb grimaced and looked like he wanted to stop this whole thing. He looked away, what was this about?

The next photos featured the triplets a little older, teens now, and were in the living room with Shermie. They were grinning with food in their mouths, so it wasn’t a toothy smile, and Shermie’s mouth was covered in chocolate. It would have been a cute photo but Seb's face was a little bruised. “Oh...I...I fell.” Seb tried to excuse lamely but no one bought his words. Not with the other photos of what Filbrick did to him.

Kari trembled. The guilt was tearing her up inside. Seeing the photo, seeing the bruises that appeared on Seb's tiny body as the photos went on...she should have done something. She should have stood up for her baby more. “Not your fault, granny Kari.” Miz leaned back against her. “It wasn't your fault. It was only his fault. You're a victim too.” She reassured the old woman.

Stan gently flipped the page to continue looking. He had a pretty good suspicion this album wasn’t to embarrass them… He narrowed his eyes. Miz was trying to get something here, he knew a scheme when he saw it.

The next page made everyone flinch. Broken glass in a store. The triplets and Shermie staring at the football that had been thrown. “I-I threw the ball...should have listened to you, Sixer…” Stan smiled sheepishly. Seb covered the twins’ eyes at the next photo, where he was leaning on his hands in the glass, Filbrick had kicked him to the floor.
The kids weren’t allowed to look as the photos of Seb progressed, it showed how Seb ran away from the house, clutching his bloody hands to his chest as the man with glasses yelled something at him. The next photo featured Seb in a park helping an old man.

“Oh my god…” Seb whispered as he blinked back his tears. He hadn’t seen him since the funeral...he looked so healthy here, and smiling. “Who is he?” Mabel smiled. “He looks like a kind grandpa who gives you candies.”

“Matsuda...M-My fa-boss, my first boss…” Ford frowned, remembering the conversation he had with Miz months ago. Seb worked to earn his stay at the house...

"Grandpa!!” The young twins cheered. Kari didn't correct them.

The man, Matsuda, was treating Seb’s hand and the teen (why was he still so short?) smiled tearfully at him. A photo of Seb helping Matsuda in his workshop. “This man was the one who taught you to make clothes?” Kari gasped. Seb smiled proudly. “He was the absolute best! He even helped me with homework when I didn’t understand and no one was willing to help me, not even the useless teachers.”

“I could have helped.” Ford frowned and Seb smiled. “No offense, Sixer, but you had an incredibly short temper when it came to teaching me...I understand Stanley was easier to work with.” Stan shrugged. “We're just not as big on nerd books.” Ford rolled his eyes. Ugh, why were his brothers like this. They continued through the photo album.

Things got worse as they got older. Seb was isolated more and more as Ford tried to avoid him while Stanley was trying his best to be there for both of them. There were some photos from the dance that made Wanda smile. “That’s when Seb and I officially met.” She fondly traced the photo of Seb smirking as he utterly roasted the boy who had tried to use her.

Zach and Zoe cooed. “Mommy looks so young!”

“Mommy is still young!” Wanda complained. Carla laughed. “You know, your meeting will never be more romantic than ours~” She taunted the blonde. Stan nodded solemnly. “I was her hero. I punched a thief in the face.” Diego and Dillon gasped. So cool. Miz made the photos appear on the next page. Stan saving Carla as people cheered at him. Then watching the movie together and then kissing in the cinema. The kids made disgusted noises.

“You kissed on your literal first date?” Seb deadpanned. Stan shrugged “What can I say? I’m the best~” The brothers shoved each other playfully. Mabel and Dipper stared at their parents. “How did you two meet?”

“In a party.” “At school.” They said at unison. They looked at each other with frowns. “What the fuck? I met you at Jimmy’s place!” Abigail frowned. “Abi, we shared classes!” Shermie grimaced. “You looked hot at that party though…” She teased and the youngest Pines brother while he rolled his eyes. “We dated for a while, it was really nice. Your mom knew everyone and we got free passes to cool places with cool drinks and fun things to take.” Shermie explained. Kari and Seb scowled at him disapprovingly, not liking to hear about when the man used to do drugs.

“And before we knew it, you two little blessings came into our life!” Shermie smiled at his grown up kids. “Your dad was pissing himself when you were born.” Seb grinned. “He called me up crying and screaming for help.” Everyone cooed when the magic photo illustrated the day. “Oh yeah? Well, I was young, and away from mom. Why don’t you tell everyone how you called me crying as well when your twins were born?”
“They were premature and I was scared!” Seb shrieked. Stan rolled his eyes. They had been super chill about Carla’s pregnancy. He had been more worried about Dillon’s self esteem actually. Stan sighed. Once more, he was the only normal one in the family. They looked at the photo album. “So...how did Miz and Uncle Ford meet?” Dipper asked. They all stared at the magical photo album in anticipation even as Ford buried his face and Stan coughed.

“I, contrary to popular belief, have a lot of self control… sometimes ” Miz laughed as Ford moaned. “Besides, I had just met you at the time, so I put two and two together and decided I couldn’t let your triplets die.” she reached back to pat Ford's leg. “I came pretty close though.”

Seb shuddered. “I'm very grateful you didn't kill my stupid brother.” Miz smiled at his friend. “Then I helped them survive. Oh look! Stan is playing with 8-Ball here!” She showed them the photo.

“Dad, you had long hair like a girl!!” Diego gasped and Carla snorted loudly. There was a photo of William holding Stan down and dressing him. “Aren't we skipping forward too much?” Dillon asked. “I wanna see dad when he joined the football team!”

“Ah, those were good times.” Stan nodded. “It was in college! Show them!” He looked at Miz. “Please~?” Mabel poked his cheek and he sighed. “Please.” He added. Kari’s heart skipped a beat every time she remembered how her free spirit went to college. She had been so incredibly proud.

Miz (with her plan in mind: showing everyone how badly Filbrick had treated Seb to try and make them mad enough to allow her to go after the man) turned the page and there were photos of the Stans getting their high school diplomas and getting into college, there was a photo of Stan with his football team...and a few members of the family winced. Seb was nowhere to be seen.

“Where is dad?” Zach asked again. Why wasn’t dad in most of the family photos? It didn’t make sense. Seb ruffled his hair. “I was babysitting Jackson Novikov.”

“The ice skater?” Dillon blinked. Seb nodded proudly. “But why aren’t you at your graduation?” He asked. They were the same age, so babysitting happened at the same time.

“I...didn’t graduate with my brothers...” Seb said softly, feeling his chest clenching painfully. Wanda squeezed his six-fingered hand. Dillon looked confused. “Why not?” Half the family winced. Miz turned the page and leaned back with a sigh. "Well, that's because of this."They looked at the photos and froze. After a few seconds Dillon said firmly “I want to punch grandfather.”

The twins’ eyes turned red. “I will burn him.” Zoe felt her fire forming in her palm. “Me too!” Zach growled and the rest of the cousins nodded. “Guys, guys, it’s ok! I don’t care about that anymore! I-I broke Stanford’s project and I know he hated me, it wasn’t that surprising...no one probably cared except for you, guys...” Seb looked at his mom, Stan, Shermie and Wanda.

Wanda closed her eyes. No one wondered why Seb wasn’t in school after that. She had heard people laughing...feeling relieved they wouldn’t have to see him again...It wasn’t fair.

Miz spoke up softly “I know where Fildick sleeps. And that his bedroom window isn't secure.”

“No, you guys aren’t doing shit. Just ignore it please.” Seb begged his family. He didn’t want to be anywhere near that man. He was fine as it was. He was happy with his real family. The blond twins stared at the photo of the Pawnshop in concentration, memorizing every detail.

They urged the photos to be about happier things. Stan making friends and doing well in college, Ford and Fiddleford being lab buddies and Shermie raising a tiny Mabel and Dipper, mixed up as well. There were photos of Wanda finding Seb again.

The next photo made everyone gasped. It was Seb, but he had his eyepatch over his right eye, grinning as he looked around the room full of dead people with his yellow eye. Seb choked down a sob. “N-No! It wasn’t me!” Miz blinked. Shit, she hadn't actually meant to show that particular one. Shit, but this was something that had been on her mind for a while and it just--

"Sebastian, what the-" Ford whispered and stared at his brother in shock. Wanda averted her eyes. Seb told her but...God, this was horrible.

Seb looked at Miz with a tight mouth and a glare, but tears in his eye.

Miz winced back. "Sorry, but it just..." she wiggled.

"Do you think I don't have a reason to not talk about this?!” Seb spat as his eye turned red.

"But--" Miz shrank back, not used to being yelled at by Seb. "It was not your fault!" Miz insisted. "You wanted to die and Bill took advantage of that.” Miz said quietly. "He talked you into it, he tricked you into letting go and giving yourself to him. But none of that was your fault.” She looked up at him. “It was the assholes who kept stressing you--" she tried to say.

"Shut up!" Seb shouted and Miz winced. She realized Seb was looking at Zach and Zoe. Shit, she said all that in front of them, didn't she?

"I don't care. I never wanted to talk about that." Seb growled. It hurt. It was the most horrible thing he had done, he surrendered to his demon part, he didn't want to relive the pain again, didn't want his family to know.

"But you can't keep this all bottled up forever. Either you talk to your family about it or I keep showing photos.” Miz was being stubborn now, bristling up in response to the push back. A part of her (probably her mental Zyun-Kei) was saying this was a bad idea, but she couldn't stop now.

Stan tensed. This wasn't good.

Seb glared as his hands burned. "You are not telling me how to fucking deal with my life, Bill.” He said, managing to make a very deep voice as opposed to his usual high one.

Miz's eyes went wide. She trembled and shrank in on herself. Wanda reached down to pull her up and away. "Miz. You did something very bad. Apologize."

"I'm s-sorry…” Miz whimpered.

"It’s over, it’s done! It’s in the past! Why do you think you can bring it back up?” He gasped. Miz played with the bottom of her shirt, pulling and twisting the fabric. “Because there were things left unsaid that I thought should be addressed. Because I want to see you all talk about this instead of ignoring it.”

"But I didn't want to do that. And you shouldn't have forced me to."

Everyone else was shocked and didn't know if they should look away.
"I… just…” Miz’s knuckles were white where they clenched her shirt. Then she closed her eyes and took a deep breath. "I'm sorry. I shouldn't have…"

Seb rubbed his eye with his forearm. He just wanted to forget about it. Forget it happened. But he couldn’t, he still had the occasional nightmare…though they stopped since Miz started living with him…Maybe Miz saw…But still, it wasn’t her place!

Miz sniffled. "I'm sorry."

Seb sighed, ran a hand through his hair and wondered what to do in this situation. Miz did something bad. And like the twins when they did something bad, she had to be punished. But what exactly could he even do? Then it hit him.

"You're not allowed ice cream for a week." Seb finally said. "As punishment for pushing into things that weren't your business."

The look of horror on her face was enough to make Seb crack a smile.

The mood changed after that. The kids were sent to play somewhere else while the teens and adults were just sitting there, staring at nothing. Miz was hugging her legs and leaning against Ford while Seb was leaning against his mother. None of them wanted to ask about what they saw, and honestly no one wanted to know.

Ford was still thinking too hard though, trying to piece the information he got together. Seb was on the streets, because Filbrick kicked him out, then he lived horrible, to the point he wanted to die, and he gave up his body to Bill? Well, Bill as in his demon self…and he killed...

Miz pinched his side softly. “Not your fault. Fildick’s fault.” She sighed. Ford shook his head. “Our father may have thrown him out…but I was the one who chose to not care about it…”

“You were a stupid teenager, who grew into a stupid adult.” Miz poked his side. “You were spoiled, idiotic, selfish, blind to your own faults, pig-headed, stubborn…” With each word, Ford curled into himself more and more. “…and then you grew past that.” Miz finished. She draped herself over Ford’s shoulder, still feeling down for hurting her soul brother, she didn’t mean it.

“You got over yourself. You realized you were wrong and you’re trying to make up for it.” She said simply. “Most idiots I know never move past their own ignorance. You’re trying. You’re better.” She sighed. Ford looked up at her. “Not gonna lie, you were an absolute asshole. But you’re trying not to be. That says a lot, you know?”

Ford sighed. “But it doesn’t change how much I hurt Sebastian…it doesn’t make up for everything he had to go through because of my stupid…selfishness…” His shoulders shook. He already apologized to him, but everytime he thought about their past, it was like bringing it up all over again.

He treated him so bad, and Seb still spent 13 years fixing that portal just to get them back.

Miz sighed and smushed Ford’s cheeks. "Seb loves you and Stan." She really shouldn't have insisted...Brother said she had to work on that. Why were mental attacks so hard to figure out? "Don't forget you still had your own issues created by your horrible father. And to be fair--" She lowered her voice. "Seb was a difficult child to be around. You were ALL idiots back then.” She pinched his cheek. “And you all grew up and got over it.” She stroked his sharp jawline and smiled. It made her feel a little better when she managed to make him smile as well.
"Hey, guys, I'm hungry...Um, how about we go eat? My treat!" Miz offered, looking at Seb carefully. He rubbed his face. "And where're you getting that money from?" Seb managed to joke. He was still mad, but he couldn't stay mad forever. He got a lot of hugs from his mom and while Sebastian still wasn't in any state to talk about what went down between himself and his demon half, he understood that Miz had been trying to help in her own fucked up way. Sometimes she understood people and sometimes she didn't.

Seb walked over and ruffled Miz's hair. "As part of your punishment, you have to wait till dinnertime, when the sun sets." Miz whined. "Noooooo~!" He left her and she glanced at her growling stomach. "Uwu..." Careful to note any malicious intentions, she walked off to find food.

Miz looked around and stared at the hotdogs on the cooking rack. Creating matter used up a lot of energy, but simply moving things around was easy.

She made a grasping motion but before she could have that delicious hot dog in her hands, her shoulder was grabbed and she was turned around. Her eyes went wide and she tensed up for a second. Hey~ It was Fordsie! She relaxed.

"Are you trying to steal from that hard working man?" He raised an eyebrow. It distracted Miz a little, he looked handsome when he did that... "...I'm hungry and Seb said I couldn't eat yet." she sighed. Now Fordsie will get angry at her too.

"Well..." He glanced back at the family and then at Miz. "There's nothing about me buying something for myself and letting you have some." He grinned. "If you want?" Ford laughed when the demon clung to him. "YES! Thank you~"

"As long as you don't try to steal again. It's wrong, this guy works hard." He cautioned with a stern look. Miz nodded eagerly. She was going to leave him a ruby, but it was so cute of Fordsie to try and teach her right from wrong~

Wanda crossed her arms. Dumb Ford helping Miz cheat...Expected from a partner though...

It didn't take long to go eat because the group accepted they were hungry too. They argued over which restaurant to go to before finding a sandwich/burger place. “There, we can all choose which thing we want and there won't be an issue.”

They all agreed and sat down to check the menu. Miz was drooling at all the different fish sandwiches. “Monkfish?” She gasped. “Swordfish? Tilapia!” She drooled. “I don't know what to choose!” Zoe and Zach gagged. “Fish is gross.” Zoe said. “They're slimy!”

“Fish is delish!” Miz said vehemently. “Ooh~do they have yellowtail?” Dipper and Mabel laughed. “You really like fish?” Miz nodded. “I like all meat but fish is nice because there's so many different kinds that all taste different!” She sighed happily at the thought.

“Well you need to decide on one.” Dillon pointed out. Miz whined. “Either Swordfish or Monkfish...” she couldn't decide. Wanda patted her head. “We have all summer. You can try a different fish everyday.” Miz lit up. “Ooooh!” She looked at the menu. “Eeny meeny miny you!” She declared. “Monkfish!”

Dipper and Mabel shuddered.

They ordered some things to snack on while waiting. “Seb! You should totally get the swordfish.” Miz said immediately to her brother. She quickly remembered what happened and looked down. "You know, if you want, don't want to force you or anything..."
Seb pouted. He shouldn't have shouted like that, he was upset, and Miz WAS in the wrong, but he didn't want her to be afraid of suggesting things! "It's-It's ok… suggestions are fine, but if its something serious, we need to talk it out before you do anything." He tried smiling. Wanda rubbed his shoulder. "If you get swordfish she's gonna steal it." The blonde teased.

"Theft is fine if you're hungry!" Miz declared. Ford and Stan winced at the memory of stealing food while in space.

"I never stole when I was hungry." Seb told her (making Stan and Ford feel more guilty) and ordered a swordfish anyway. Everyone shifted awkwardly. Zoe and Zach looked up from their fried fish. "Then what did you eat when you were hungry?" Zach asked innocently.

"I didn’t…” Seb smiled. "I just waited until I was not grounded, or until I found someone who would hire me to wash the dishes at a restaurant in exchange for food.” He looked at his mom, as if he was going to tell her he learned to be good from her, but she was looking at him sadly.

"Miz.” Kari said simply “You can't take Sebastian's food.” Miz nodded and went back to stealing Dipper's fries. Ford, Stan and Shermie were quiet.

"Miz makes sure we all eat though.” Seb told his mother with a small grin. He really didn't want his sister to feel bad because of him. " She would create the ingredients herself if she had to. Or teleport lunch to Wanda if she forgot to grab it in the morning. And reminds me to eat when I get engrossed in my work."

“It’s ok, I have Dipper’s fries.” She took another one. Dipper groaned. “Why me?!" Mabel grinned and took another fry. Shermie chuckled “Do you want us to buy you some fries?”

Miz nodded excitedly and Dipper looked at his dad like he was some kind of benevolent god, saver of fries. Shermie laughed. “You kids eat a lot. Watch out or you might turn into your food.”

“Is this just always going to be a thing?” Dipper groaned. “This fascination you have with eating humans?” Miz pouted. “Well, don't you guys ever wonder?"

“I heard they taste like pork.” Seb mused. “LOOK a distraction!” Dipper pointed as the waitress brought out the other food they ordered. Seb tilted his head in thought even as he picked up his swordfish burger. “Would Miz be so curious about the taste of Flatlanders, I wonder…”

“They taste like wheat.” Miz answered as she stole another fry. Everyone around the table froze except Seb who nodded. “Oh, right. You ate your brother…by accident…”

“And the ground up bodies of the dead.” Miz shrugged. Stan groaned. “Can you two NOT?! Some of us are trying ta eat here!”

Seb ignored him. “How did you eat dead people?” He shoved a few fries to his mouth. Miz shuddered. “It was actually pretty horrible to discover. This fucked up Flatland used the corpses of dead people and other shit to make baby formula.”

Everyone gaped horrified and Seb stuck his tongue out. “Horrible, but not surprised. All Flatlanders are disgusting little creatures.” Miz nodded. “So I'm used to cannibalizing my own kind.”

“Oh, so, I didn't need to know that…” Stan pouted, disgusted at the idea. The family continued eating, eventually the traumatizing information was pushed back to enjoy and laugh in the company of their big family.

--.--

After eating, the Pines headed back to their hotel to change and get ready for a beach night. They had to enjoy the beach while it was clean and beautiful after all. With the summer pulling in tourists, it wouldn't be long for things to get dirty again.

The women rocked their bikinis, and the 3 youngest brothers gaped at their wives. Goddammit they were some lucky bastards! How the hell they managed to get wives so pretty as them?! They attacked them with kisses the moment they saw them.

Miz was wearing the swimsuit she bought too. She blushed when Wanda told her she looked lovely. They all headed down to the beach, lit up with torches as people played and some even grilling barbeques, where Mabel immediately ran towards the nearest group of teenage boys, screaming loudly “HEYO! GUESS WHO'S SINGLE AND READY TO MINGLE!!”

Shermie and Abigail facepalmed when the boys ran away screaming in fear. Abigail held back a sob “We're never going to get grandkids!” Shermie patted her back. “Don't worry. Dipper has a girlfriend. Besides, we're still too young to be grandparents, give her time until we actually look the right age.” Abigail wailed “We will never get grandkids!”

Dipper twitched. “Oi?!” He growled at how everyone always picked on him. He held a bag with another whole order of French fries his dad had bought him to-go. He munched on his fries to make himself feel better.

“Gimme your fries.” Miz jumped to try and snatch the to-go bag from Dipper. He held it out of her reach. “No! These are mine!” Miz pouted and jumped again, Dipper backpedaled, tripped over his own feet and sent the bag flying. The fries flew everywhere and the seagulls descended upon them like the ravenous flying trash compactors they were.

“Aaaaahhhhh!!” Dipper shrieked as they surrounded him.

While everyone was distracted by the flock of seagulls, Miz snuck up to her siblings. “Hey. Come on.” Zoe blinked at her sister. “Where are we going?” Miz pulled them away from the family trying to fight off the seagulls. “We're going to see meanie grandpa.”

“What? He's not my grandpa and I don’t want to see him! He was mean to my daddy and he hurt him and made him cry!” Zach sniffled. Miz and the kids walked away from the adults’ sight. “And that’s why we’re gonna make him pay, because no one hurts Sebas and gets away with it, right?”

The twins’ eyes turned red as they grinned maliciously. Miz knew the distraction she caused would buy them at least 20 minutes…

“Ahhh! They're in my shirt!!!!”

...make that 30 minutes.
Miz held onto Zach and Zoe's hand before Blanking away.

----.---

They appeared in the alleyway near the pawnshop. Miz huffed. Good thing she ate all those fries. Starches like potatoes worked wonders for building up her energy. “Alright. Let's fuck him up.” She growled. Her brother and sister grinned with mouths filled with needle-like teeth.

“What is the plan? Can we burn his face?” Zoe asked excitedly. “We can make things float and break all the glass and cut him like he made daddy cut his hands as a kid!” Zach growled.

Miz was so proud. They were adorable, but evil inside when they needed to be. “Well…” She grinned, her eyes turning yellow. “Let's try absolute terror first…”

The demon and the kids entered the store, smiling. The man behind the counter wasn’t like the one in the photos, hitting their small daddy. His hair was almost white, and he was old, much older. He was practically defenseless...even better! Miz scowled. This fucker hurt Sebas when he was a kid, also defenseless and unable to protect himself. He deserved to suffer.

“Yes? Good evening…” He greeted them seriously. He wondered what 3 kids wanted in the store. The Asian looking girl had her head down as she glanced around the shop. “Nice place” She said in a curious voice. Filbrick sighed. “Look kids, you should get back to your parents before they worry.”

“Are parents supposed to worry?” The girl asked, still not looking up at him. Filbrick internally cursed whatever parents these kids had for letting them wander around unsupervised. “Yes. I’m sure your parents are very worried.” he watched one of the blond children flip his open sign to closed.

The girl walked around until she was in front of the counter, looking at his displays. “It's funny you should say that…” She slowly raised her head to look at him while the other two kids stood to either side of her with wide, disturbing grins.

“...considering YOU’VE never cared.” The girl grinned at him, eyes wide and glowing yellow with slit pupils.

The man’s eyes behind his glasses widened and he quickly stood up from his chair. He took a hand to his chest. Those eyes! Those eyes! “No, no! What do you want from me?!” He cried. “Oh~nothing much~just here to get a little...vengeance for what you did.” The girl walked forward and the two other children began giggling. The shutters on the store all closed. The door behind him that led to the house clicked shut and locked itself. Objects around the shop began to float.

“Tell me, dear Filbrick~” the little girl (No. Not a girl. A demon!) purred. “For what reason, did you mistreat your children so?”

“I-I never...I never…my sons had everything I could gi-give them! They had a house and food!”

“LIAR!” The blonde girl screamed and threw an object at him, just missing because she didn’t want to hurt him yet. Her eyes turned red. “You hurt one! You didn’t give him a house or food! You were a BAD dad! Don’t lie!!”

Filbrick screamed and closed his eyes when the object broke just next to his face. “I do-don't know what you're talking about!” He stuttered. He tried to run but his legs were frozen. He could only watch in horror as the three demons stalked closer.
“LIAR!” the little boy growled. He waved his hand and the display cases all shattered when the objects inside slammed against it. “You yelled at him and hit him! You pulled his hair and made him CRY!”

Filbrick gasped when his feet began to move on their own. His hands also began to move without his control. They were reaching down, toward the broken glass on the ground. “No! No please!” He cried. “Please stop!”

“Please?” The demon with the yellow eyes asked, tilting its head to the side. “That's what HE said too. But you never listened. You never stopped.” Filbrick cried out as he fell to his knees, wincing at the sharp prick of glass through his pants. His hands were hovering right above the glass. “So…” the demon came up and pulled his glasses off, forcing him to stare directly into its horrible eyes.

“... why should we?” The demon asked. It stared down at him and frowned. “How many sons did you have?” The man's sensitive eyes narrowed as they were filled with tears. “Th-Three…”

“Wrong answer.” Filbrick's hands were forced down into the glass and he screamed. He shrieked even louder when the two blond kids stomped on on his hands, grinding them into the glass shards. “That’s not true!! You had FOUR!” They screamed. “And you hit him and punched him and insulted him when he did nothing wrong!” The boy spat. They had angry tears shining in their eyes.

“Please let me go! I haven’t seen that-that demon for almost 20 years!” He sobbed, watching his blood slowly coming out of his hands.

The demon with yellow eyes grinned. “That boy wasn’t a demon, much less the one you were thinking about...I, on the other hand, am, and a very powerful one at that...and I don’t like shitty parents…” She sneered.

Filbrick trembled when she placed her hands along his neck, her hands were so small it took two to reach around, and began squeezing. He wheezed and gasped, he wanted to get away but he couldn't move. The two blond demons were still stepping on his hands, crushing and grinding at his fingers.

Filbrick couldn't even look away from those eyes. They stared at him, unblinking and filled with malice. His vision was beginning to swim. He was going to die...

He was going to die, killed by demons, like his brother, he would die alone, without any family, no one was going to know. He lost his wife, and his sons...he was going to die.

Before the twins could join Miz in squeezing this horrible man's neck, they hear the door being blown open. “WAIT! STOP!” They turned around and saw Sebastian with his triplets, panting and with a pained grimace on his face.

“Daddy?” The blonde girl winced. Filbrick gasped for air when they let go of his throat. He watched in disbelief as that demon who replaced his son waved his arms and made the children float away from him. “You three are GROUNDED!” Seb gasped. The girl with the yellow eyes, which faded into a dark brown, almost black, whined. “But Seb~”

“No. You three are in SO much trouble you hear me?!” Sebastian yelled at them. As Filbrick gasped for air and stared at the knowledge these little demons were that demon's children, his eyes widened as two ghosts appeared. “S...Stanley...St...Ford?” He croaked through his bruised windpipe. He had seen the news, but to actually see them...He went to Stanford's funeral, Stanley was declared dead as well.
Stanford, yes, he had six fingers, glared at the asian-looking demon. “You seriously took the twins here to kill our father! If Seb hadn’t looked for you with his powers you would have made them commit a crime!” He scolded the girl, sounding more worried about the act than the fact that Filbrick could have died. She frowned. “But HE DESERVES IT!”

“This is our, MY problem with him, not my kids’ and not yours, Miz!” Seb sniffled. “Please get them out of here…” He pleaded, unable to hold back his tears. Stan nodded and easily picked up Zach and Zoe under one arm and Miz under the other. The children whined and protested as Stan carried them out of the shop. Filbrick only realized then that he was shivering. He also realized that Ford had been picking the glass out of his hands and bandaging them.

Filbrick stiffened when the demon came closer. “How is he, Sixer?” He was staring at Filbrick, the old man trembled. Ford sighed. “A bit of blood loss, shock and a bruised trachea, otherwise, he’s fine. So long as his cuts don’t get infected at least.” Seb sighed. “Thank Ax we made it on time.” He was so relieved.

The man wearing an eyepatch looked down at the old man with tears in his eye. “...S-See? I didn’t kill my brothers…” He said softly. “I-I brought them back, I can be good, Filbrick…” Seb quickly wiped his tears. He wasn't ready for this and Miz forced him to dive head-first to it. She was in SO much trouble after all this! No deserts for the ENTIRE summer! Or maybe even the rest of the year! No, 5 years!

The old man coughed as he stared in disbelief at him. The younger man looked around and Seb slowly picked up the discarded glasses. He turned to the man. “We...as kids, we thought you didn’t have eyes for the longest time…” He smiled sadly and offered him the pair of dark glasses.

Filbrick was still too stunned to move. He was so confused as to what had just happened. He would have thought he imagined the whole thing if his hands weren’t in pain and his shop hadn’t been trashed. “W-wha…” He gasped. Seb sighed. “I’m really sorry about this. Miz and my kids were...really mad about, you know, fucking me up in my childhood.”

Ford crossed his arms over his chest. Miz had told him, he probably knew better why Filbrick treated him that way for more reasons than being ‘the freak son’ or ‘being a bad kid’ “And with reason...everyone is mad about what happened…” Ford sighed.

Filbrick was still gaping in shock, unmoving. “Your...kids…” He whispered. Seb put his glasses just in front of him and looked down, rubbing his arm. “Y-Yeah...I-I guess your grand...children, biologically, but they really aren’t anything to you, and I don’t want them to be, you were never my father...and you never wanted to be, but that's fine…” He sniffled and looked around. “Geesh, this place looks worse than I remember...I-I apologize for this...um, I’ll tell Miz to pay for what they broke…”

Ford scoffed. “Trashing the place should have been enough. I think that’s fine. Have Miz pay for his hospital bill instead.” He got up, Ford didn’t really care about them terrorizing Filbrick or breaking the glass, but he didn’t want Miz talking the twins into killing the man. Murder of humans was wrong. He, and everyone else, really needed to get that through to her. Ford sighed. Miz really didn't have morals. That... was something they would need to work on. Least she grow up to be the same kind of monster the other Bill Cipher had been. Ford didn't want that.

Seb looked at his hands and rubbed his extra finger. “Um...this is a horrible moment to ask this but...have you cleaned the attic since...you kicked me out?” Filbrick shook his head slowly, silently. “Um...can I go? I know you kicked me out...but I would like to go in, just a moment.” The younger man asked sheepishly. Filbrick frowned a bit. He was asking him to go in the house?!
Ford, annoyed, just opened the door leading to the house. He didn’t know what Seb wanted to do, but if they waited for an answer, they would never leave this place. His triplet instinctively winced when he passed next to the old man, still on the floor, and went upstairs. Ford looked at his father and sighed before extending a six-fingered hand. “Don’t stay on the floor…” He muttered. Filbrick grabbed the hand, bigger than his now, and stood up in pain. “H-How are you back?”

“My brother just answered you. He saved me, and he saved Stanley.” He looked at the open door. Seb quickly made his way to the attic. He hit his head on the upper door frame and cursed. “Ah, fuck!” He rubbed his aching head. This place...looked even smaller now that he had grown up.

Everything was covered in dust and cobwebs, but the bed was still unmade, just like he left it that day...he reached down and smiled fondly at the beheaded teddy bear he always had hidden. Oh man...He opened the drawers and laughed softly. He pulled out his sketchbooks, full of drawings from when he was little. They were really disturbing at first, but they slowly changed into real stuff, very detailed, like landscapes, fruits, people...

He wiped his tears with a hand. Most of his childhood treasures were here. Triangular rocks he found, the first baby tooth he lost that the tooth fairy ‘forgot’ to pick up, drawings, colors, the first scarf he knitted. He wanted to take everything with him. He didn’t have many things as a kid, he wanted to save a small part of his childhood...he decided to just take Robespierre and his drawings. He closed the door and went downstairs, where he found Ford and Filbrick awkwardly standing there.

“Um, we can go now, Fordsie…” He nodded. Ford looked at his brother and then at his perturbed father. Well, if they weren’t going to talk about this, then as he was the only other person who knew, decided to intervene. “Father, why don’t you like Sebastian?” He saw Seb stop by the door and tense up. Filbrick froze. “I have no idea what you mean.” Ford glared. Was he seriously going to deny this?

“It’ll be me breaking the rest of the store if you don’t tell me.” He said calmly and wished he hadn’t left his gun. “Sixer, Sixer let’s just go…” Seb pleaded. “I know why he hates me, I know it, I was a monster and a freak, I cost him a lot of money for repairs and hospital bills, and I ruined his reputation, I get it, can we leave?!”

“He is blaming you for something you didn’t do! He blamed you all our lives! Tell him! Tell my brother why you made him suffer, completely unjustified as we grew up!” And why he had put him against his own triplet, telling him how he couldn’t be as much of a freak as Seb was, to be better...making Ford constantly compare himself with Seb until he began to be ashamed of his own brother, hate his own brother...hurt his own brother…

Filbrick trembled when Ford grabbed his shirt halfway through his demands. Seb was pulling at Ford’s arms. “Sixer, it’s fine...put him down…” Ford shook his head. “You don’t understand. Miz told me.” Seb froze. “What? Miz said…” He shook his head. “Look, I know Miz is mad, but that doesn’t mean-”

Ford snarled “I want to hear him SAY it.” He shook Filbrick lightly. “Tell Sebastian WHY you treated him like that.” He shook the old man harder. “Sixer please stop!” Seb tried to get his older brother to let go.

“BECAUSE HE KILLED MY BROTHER!” Filbrick shouted.

They all froze. Seb looked confused. “I’m...pretty sure I didn’t.” He frowned. “I’m sure I would have remembered killing any of my uncles…” And that wouldn’t explain why Filbrick has hated him since the day he was born.
“Yes you did! I-I don’t know how-how the fuck you came back and ruined my life but you killed him and replaced the son I should have had!”

Seb flinched, the screams reminding him of the times he shouted or insulted him while Ford growled. “YOU FOOL! Sebastian is NOT that demon!” He clenched his fists. “I MET the demon that killed your twin. He ruined MY life. It was his fault Stanley didn’t see his kid grow up! He...he attacked us! Sebastian KILLED him! Saved us! Sebastian is NOT that demon. He NEVER was! I WATCHED Sebastian kill the demon that had been haunting our family!”

Seb looked at the man with tears in his eye. “Wh-What...?” His tears streamed down. He would have understood if Filbrick said it was because he hated his eye, everyone did, because he wasn’t normal...but his father hated him...because he thought he was BILL...

“You thought...you thought I was that demon...because of my eye?! That’s why you treated me like SHIT for 17 years?!” Seb sobbed and cried, hating to not be able to keep his emotions under control. “I was just a child!!” Filbrick looked confused. Ford growled “RED OR YELLOW EYES ARE THE MOST COMMON COLOR FOR DEMONIC POSSESSION AND THOSE WHO ARE CURSED BY THEM!” He snarled at his father whose eyes were going wide with realization. “You treated Sebastian like SHIT for our ENTIRE lives because you MISTOOK HIM for a demon!”

“B-But...” The old man frowned. ‘DAD, DON’T HIT ME! I’M SORRY! YOU ARE HURTING ME! I’LL BE GOOD!’ ‘YOU CAN’T BE GOOD, MONSTER!’ ‘DAD! I DON’T KNOW WHAT I DID! PLEASE TELL ME! ‘YOU KNOW EXACTLY WHAT YOU DID DEMON!’ ‘I can’t breathe...sir...please...stop...’ ‘-I wish you were dead’

“And you know why this stupid demon has been bothering us and following us our entire lives?! Because you SOLD us to him!” Ford screamed. “You let him into our lives! You promised him pawns for him to play with! Because you were stupid enough to invoke him!!” He spat, it was all Filbrick’s fault that he lost 13 years of his life behind that damn portal!

Seb sobbed and closed his eye. Linda told him he was wrong for thinking he deserved those punishments his entire life. That he deserved to be beaten up to pay for what he did in his past...but he didn’t. Not only because he was innocent...but because the Axolotl didn’t want to punish him that way...that was all Filbrick punishing him for something HE didn’t even do...

Filbrick felt like he was suffocating. His throat felt tight even though no one was squeezing him anymore. Sebastian...wasn’t the demon...he never was...he was his son...his son who had been cursed and had suffered...because of him...

Filbrick let out a sob, matching Sebastian as the two began crying. Ford trembled. Frankly, he wouldn’t have cared if Filbrick died. He just didn’t want Miz and the children to be responsible for it.

He walked up to his brother who clung to him the second he was close enough and continued crying. Ford sighed and rubbed his back. “Sh...this wasn’t your fault, it’s ok...” He held his younger brother. “I-I am sorry...” Filbrick whispered. He hadn’t, the demon said, he thought...He fucked up, everything was his fault... “Se-Sebastian...I...”

Seb sniffed. “It’s ok, no need to apologize. You-you can’t erase my scars or fix my self esteem and psychological traumas with a sorry, but...ok.” Ford sighed. What a fucked up family they were. “Ok, let’s go Seb, I don’t know how long Stan can hold your children.”

They glanced outside to see Stan crying out as the children crawled all over him, pulling at his face and clothes. Miz was hanging upside down in Stan’s arm, shrieking and waving her arms.
“Settle down you little monsters!” Stan cried as he pulled Zoe off his face. Zach was biting his arm. “Ow! You little-!” Miz whined as she kicked and tried to get out of Stan’s grip. “Put me DOWN!” Seb and Ford sighed. “Sometimes I wish they didn’t inherit my powers…” Seb groaned softly.

Seb looked at the old man. He was looking down in shame at the ground with tears in his dark brown eyes. “Good bye, Filbrick…and, thank you...even if you were mean to me, you still gave me my family, and I love them more than anything in this disgusting world, so thank you.” He smiled sincerely. Ford shook his head. Family was really important for him. He was trying to be like Seb...he wasn’t ashamed of his brother, he loved him, and he was proud, he wanted to learn from him as well.

Even with Seb being the way he was, he knew so much more about human relations than Ford did. They got outside and walked over to where Stan was waiting for them, looking close to tears. “There you are, guys! Hurry and take these little demons!” He was covered in bite marks and scratches. Seb laughed, wiping his eye and grabbed Zach and Zoe easily, having gotten used to manhandling them. The twins slumped in his arms. “Aw…” He hugged them to himself as if they were stuffed toys. His babies ...they were worried for him, and he appreciated it a lot.

Ford saw Miz pulling at Stan’s hair and rolled his eyes. “Miz, you’re too old to be acting like this.” He reached up and pulled her off. She grumbled at being manhandled. "Are you mad?" She mumbled. To her surprise, Ford shook his head. "I know you were doing it for us, so thanks…” The demon grinned wide and hugged his neck tightly.

"But it was still wrong and you shouldn't do it." Ford scolded. "Attacking people to protect us should only be done if they were an immediate threat. Attacking people for something that happened years ago is just petty revenge." Miz slumped, frowned over his shoulder. "But he needed to be punished."

"And that wasn't for you to decide, much less dragging your brother and sister into it." Miz whined. Finally, in a quiet voice, "...fine."

“Did everything go ok in there?” Stan nodded in the direction of their previous house. Seb and Ford sighed. “Well...at least it seemed he felt bad for hurting me...I don't think I can't forgive him yet though…”

The middle triplet pulled him into a hug. “You don't have to.” He assured him. The brothers hugged. After this, they had to meet with everyone again. Poor Wanda almost died when she noticed her children were gone.

Filbrick put on his glasses and stared at his bandaged hands with a troubled expression. He stared out of the pawn shop's window and watched the triplets walk away with the three...wait. Why did they have powers again? The curse? He sighed tiredly. He...actually didn't care right now. “I am sorry, son…” He whispered.

---

The brothers returned to the group and they were met by a relieved cry.

“Don’t you EVER run off like that again!”

Zach, Zoe and Miz knelt on the sand and hung their heads as Wanda scolded them. “"Sorry mommy…”" They chorused. Wanda hugged all three of them. “Do you have any idea how worried I was when we looked back and saw that you were all gone?” She trembled. She had been so afraid. Thank god for Seb’s powers. She didn’t know what would have happened if her husband wasn’t capable of just LOOKING and finding them. Wanda held them tightly. “Don’t do that to me. Ok?”

“"Yes mommy…"” The children sighed. Wanda nodded. “Also, you’re all grounded the second we get home after vacation.”

The adults laughed when the kids joined Mabel and started chasing the teenage boys away by shrieking like the little demons they were. Their older cousin cried in horror when Zach and Zoe chased away two boys by trying to bite them.

“AAAH! THIS FAMILY IS INSANE!” Mabel screamed frustrated. Seb raised his soda as he curled up on his wife, tired out from crying too much. “Sure we are! What’s your point?!”

Dipper snorted. “Mabel, you were scaring off the boys even before they joined in.” His sister pouted. “You're all jerks!” She stomped off to the water “I'm gonna go find seashells instead!” Miz and the twins ran after her “Shells! Shells! Shells!” They chanted.

Wanda sighed. “They DO remember they're still in trouble right?” Seb laughed lightly, exhausted and just wanting to nap. “Probably not.” Wanda groaned, hugging Seb to her. “We need to find a way to properly discipline them.”

“No ice cream for dessert tonight or any night for the rest of the summer?” Sebastian suggested. Diego, playing in the sand nearby, gasped. “That's too mean!” Wanda nodded. “No dessert sounds like a good punishment.”

Back at the water, the four of them picked around, searching for seashells. “I found a crab!” Zoe held it up. “It's dead!” She giggled. The little blonde opened her mouth to bite it and Dipper (who had been sent by the adults to keep an eye on the kids) screamed, and smacked it away from her.

Mabel rolled her eyes. Her cousins were so weird sometimes. She was looking out at the ocean when she spotted movement. “Oh! Is that a dolphin?” She squealed. The other kids looked over. “No, it's lumpy…” they all watched the gray shape swim and Miz gasped. “A manatee! I didn't know they came this far north!”

Mabel lit up “Oh! It's so beautiful!” she splashed into the water and waved at it. “HI~! IF YOU'RE GOING BACK TO YOUR KINGDOM LATER, PLEASE TELL MERMANDO THAT MABEL SAYS HI!” Dipper rolled his eyes. “Mabel, it's a manatee. They can't talk.”

“Who is Mermando?” Zach asked and Mabel sighed. “He was a pretty boy I met when I was 12...and my first kiss...and Dipper’s first kiss!”

“Mabel!” The boy shrieked. “I was giving him CPR! Stop with that!” He complained and the girl giggled. “Well, anyway...Mermando wrote me letters until he was forced to marry the Queen of Manatees…”

The twins frowned. Mabel’s friend married one of those lumpy grey animals? They shuddered. “Did he send you more letters?” Zoe asked. “Sometimes…” She sighed. “I miss him, he was a nice boy.” She bet that if he wasn’t a merman, something could have worked between them. “But, stop talking about me! Let’s find more pretty seashells!” She declared.
The cousins continued playing, unaware that the manatee was still watching them from afar, silently, observing. When the sky started turning black and the Pines packed to leave, the manatee nodded and dove back into the water.

He had a mission to fulfill...

--- ---

“Kids!! Don’t go too deep into the water!” Seb scolded the twins the next day. He couldn’t go farther than the shore, still scared of actual ocean water. Miz dove into the water, swimming far into the ocean. She missed playing on the beach. Should probably bring Kryptos and the others to a beach soon. It was tourist season on planet Ziziks and she wanted to try their fancy drinks. Seb gave her a few worried glances but was more focused on the twins.

Miz swam back to shore and scrambled to her feet. “We need to teach you how to swim.” She told Seb. He crossed his arms. “I don't want to hear that from someone who can only doggy paddle. And I learned how to swim! Kinda. I just...don’t like to not feel the ground.” That was why he preferred the pool.

“Hey! I can do the frog stroke too!” Miz protested. Zoe stared at her in amazement. “Can you teach us how to swim like a frog too?” Miz grinned “Sure! Come on, we'll find a spot with better height...”

Seb pouted from his spot and Wanda came to him, hugging him from behind. “Sweetie, it’s ok, Miz wouldn’t let anything happen to them.” She kissed his back. “Come, I’ll apply your sunscreen, you’re already turning red.” She giggled. Seb pouted but allowed her to drag him to their towel.

Mabel grinned when she saw a boy with a little girl. She searched around, grabbed Diego under her arms and ran towards the cute boy. Diego kicked and tried to escape. “Put me down!”

“Shush. You're my ticket to flirting.” Mabel ran over. “Hey there! Are you babysitting your siblings too?” She grinned.

The boy looked up at the girl and smiled. “Haha, hi there, no, this my daughter.” Mabel's grin faltered. “Oh...she's lovely. Is her mother here too?” The boy nodded with a smile. “We're still saving up money for the marriage.” He picked up his daughter and snuggled her fondly. “I love them both and I'm working hard for us.”

Mabel's grin turned into a more gentle smile. “That's really sweet. I wish you good luck.” She could tell by his smile that he was really happy and she couldn't help but feel happy for him. She picked up Diego and walked back to the group after waving at the boy. She wondered if Dad was like this boy when they were younger. He always said he was super proud of them. Diego freed himself and ran towards the twins to play.

With a disappointed expression, the girl walked along the shore, watching people play in the water. Failed summer romances since 2012...

A splash.

Mabel looked up to see a manatee. “Oh. Hello little guy.” Mabel waded out into the water and cooed at it. “Aw~you're so cute~” The manatee blinked and flapped its fins. “Is it safe if I go closer to pet you? You look like a water puppy!” She squealed and swam closer really slow. To her surprise, it swam closer to her and snuggled against her. “AAwww!!” Mabel cooed loudly.

Mabel pet the manatee with a wide grin. Oh my gosh! This was really happening! The manatee nudged her with its large head, making Mabel giggle “That tickles.” It nudged her again “Whoa. You're, ah...stronger than you look huh?” Mabel stepped back as it nudged her again. The water was getting deeper. Mabel laughed nervously as she was pushed further and further into the ocean.

“Look, you're really cute but...I need to get back to shore…” Mabel tried to swim off but more manatees came out and began to surround her. “Whoa. There's...a lot of you. Ah, is there a migration going on?”

They all nudged her deeper into the ocean, the water was up to her shoulders now. “Uh...guys?” Ok, this wasn’t fun anymore! She looked at the shore and waved her arms frantically. “HELP! GUYS! HELP!”

“Shit. Just grab her!” a deep, gruff voice said. The manatees swarmed her before hitting some kind of invisible barrier. “Fuck! A protection spell?” “What should we do?” “Deploy the nets!”

“AAAAAAAAHHH!!!!” Mabel shrieked as a net of slimey woven seaweed was thrown over her. “GUYS!! GUYS!!! HEEEEELP!!! DIPPERR!!!!” She screamed before she was pulled underwater.

On the shore, Dipper gasped as he saw it. “MABEL!!!!” The other adults saw it as well and began screaming as they ran toward the water. Miz ran out until the water was up to her chest. “Shit. They're too far down and there aren't enough triangles in the ocean!”

“What?! They?! Who has my daughter⁈” Shermie screamed as he swam against the waves. “Mabel!!!!!” He was grabbed by Stanley and pulled back. “If you drown, idiot, we can’t save her!!”

“Don't worry! The Deal ensures she's not harmed lethally so she wouldn't drown. But I don't know if she can escape and swim back…” Miz was staring into the water, flickering. “GODDAMN why aren't there more triangles here⁈” She punched the water in frustration.

“Who took my daughter⁈” Abigail gasped as she looked around frantically for any signs of the kidnappers. Dipper went to hug his mom. “I saw some kind of seaweed net…”

“They probably couldn't touch her directly because of the Deal.” Wanda sighed. “But, what were they? Who were they?”

“Manatees…” Miz hissed. Everyone blinked. “What⁈” Ford shook his head. “But...manatees are gentle herbivores? They can barely swim…” Dipper was frowning though. “Well...Mabel talked to one yesterday. She asked them to give a message to Mermando…” Dipper gasped. “Maybe Mermando asked them to bring Mabel to him!”

“Who the fuck is MERMANDO⁈” Shermie screamed. Miz, Seb and Dipper deadpanned. “Well, Dad, if you remembered what we told you about Gravity Falls, you would know he is a merman we helped to return to the water and was one of Mabel’s summer romances...guess you weren't really listening to us that time after all.” The boy crossed his arms.

“So my baby has been kidnapped by the manatees because of a mermaid ex-boyfriend⁈” Shermie pulled at his hair. Ford was staring at the water. “How do we get her back. Even if the protection lets us breathe underwater, we can't swim that far.”

“We could take the boat.” Stan frowned but Seb shook his head. “Even with that, they're still UNDER the water!” He whimpered. The ocean was dangerous! He knew it!

“Guys. I have an idea.” Dipper spoke up. “Uncle Seb, you turned us into merfolk that one time! Do it again!” Seb looked at his family and shook his head worriedly. “I don’t think I can change all of you without repercussions, my powers aren’t that strong anymore.”
“You don't have to.” Ford said. He placed a hand on Miz's head. “We've got help.” They all stared at Miz. She nodded. “I made a mermaid transformation effect once. I'm sure I can do it again!”

Seb picked up the kids and handed them to the worried women. “You stay here with the kids. We're going to save Mabel.”

Carla and Wanda shared a look. Wow. That was sexist as hell, but they'd take it because they didn't want to go into the ocean.

Zach and Zoe protested “We can help!” Diego nodded “I wanna help too!” Mabel was annoying but he still loved his cousin and was worried for her.

Seb groaned. “No. It's too dangerous.”

“I still think we should bring out the boat.” Stan insisted. “You just want an excuse to sail.” Ford frowned. “Well we HAVE a boat now! Why shouldn't we?” Stan whined. Ford rolled his eyes. “Well, we need to save Mabel first.”

Shermie grabbed Stan by his shoulders and shook him. “Fucker, my daughter was kidnapped and you're trying to go SAILING?!”

“Look, she's not drowning and maybe this is all a misunderstanding?” Stan wince. “I just really want to go sailing. We PROMISED each other that we would!” Ford and Seb sighed. They understood where he was coming from. Seb reached out and hugged Stan. “Alright. How about this, 15 years from now, when all the kids are grown up, we're gonna go sailing together for a few years, just like we promised.” He looked at their wives. “You two are also invited!” They giggled.

“...Promise?” Stan looked at his triplets. Ford and Seb nodded. “Promise.” they owed Stan this, for putting up with them all these years, always caught in the middle playing peacemaker. The brothers hugged. “We promise. In 15 years we will all go sailing.”

The happy moment was broken by Shermie punching them. “Ok! That's great! My daughter is still kidnapped! Now let's go save her!” Seb whimpered at the punch. Shermie still trained...ow.

They decided that Ford, Miz, Dipper, Shermie, Seb, and Stan would be on rescue duty.

“Hey! We want to come too!” the children complained. “Meanie!!” Seb sighed. Miz knelt down in front of them. “You are helping. We need to know how to get back here, there aren't enough triangles so I need you three to hold onto this.”

She handed them a large triangular frame. “This will be a screen so you can see through these-” she held up multiple necklaces with a triangle pendant. “-which I will give to each member of the rescue party. You can speak through this frame to us, so if you see something that we miss, tell us. Ok?”

The little twins and Diego looked up at Miz and nodded solemnly. They will be the best guides! “Ok, we will!” Zoe nodded.

Miz ruffled their hair and gave each person a necklace. “Alright. Let’s go now!” They hugged the family they were leaving behind and ran into the water to get away from curious eyes that might see them transform. With each step deeper into the water, Seb’s heart beat faster. For Shooting Star...do it for Shooting Star...

Miz closed her eyes in concentration. “Ok. Brace yourselves.” Her power reached out and everyone shuddered as the feeling ran through them. The change was quick. Their legs fused together, starting from their pelvis and spreading down. Gills formed along their chest, right over where their ribs (lungs) would be. Small flaps of skin formed between their fingers. Most of them lost their balance and fell into the water as their legs grew and were replaced by a long tail.

They flopped around in the water for a bit, trying to get used to their new anatomy.

Ford stared in fascination at his dark blue tail. What the heck?! This was amazing!! Seb was in a similar state, squealing and giggling at his long yellow tail. Shermie and Stan started screaming underwater and Dipper rolled his eyes, getting used to his light blue tail. “Calm down!” Stan looked at his red tail and shuddered. “Where the hell is my dick?!”

Miz swam around easily with her glowing golden tail. “It's retracted inside. You can coax it out if you get aroused but that's not important right now!” She looked around. “I don't know much about the ocean so I have no idea where to begin looking.”

They blushed as Seb looked around. “We could ask? Manatees don’t even live here! We have to go south and maybe we could meet another mermaid who can help us!” This reminded him of Looking for Memo. Hehe...fish.

“Alright! Should we split up?” Stan asked, reassured that his dick wasn't gone. Ford frowned. “I don't know if that's a good idea…”

Miz swam a little ahead of them. “As long as all of you have a triangle on you, I can find you. I can teleport to anywhere I can See, so if one of you finds something, tell your necklace and the kids can pass the message along.” She looked around “Speaking of...can you guys hear us?”

-Yeah. This is really cool!-
-REALLY STAN?! You're worried about your DICK?!

Stan winced as Abigail and Carla's voice screamed at him. “I panicked!” Stanley wailed.

His brothers rolled their eyes. They would never find Mabel like this… “Ok.” Shermie started. “You and me Dipper, we'll search together, Ford with Miz, and Stan with Seb.” Seb nodded and looked at his hands. Ooh~ They looked so cool...were they like fins now? Ford rolled his eyes and sighed. He knew Stan had to go with Seb to keep him from getting distracted. “Alright. Whatever you see, you inform us.” Everyone nodded and swam in different directions, searching for Mabel or a manatee to threaten.

They didn't get far before the kids told them over the chat -It's too dark. We can't see- Miz nodded and the triangle pendants began to glow like her tail did, shining like a spotlight. They continued swimming, passing many fish and other aquatic life. Seb got distracted a few times and Stan pulled on his tail. “Where IS everyone? There's nothing here but fish!” Ford and Miz swam near them, having circled around.

“Well, merfolk have never been seen for a reason...they must be very good at hiding…” Ford explained. Seb swam towards some fish and grinned. “Hey excuse me, delicious fish! Do you happen to know where the Queen of Manatees live...or how to get to Sydney?”

Ford smacked him in the back of his head. “This is serious!”

Miz swam up to a fish, which tried to swim away but she snatched it and held it close. “Take me to the undersea kingdom or I'll eat you.” The fish looked terrified. Ford sighed. “Miz, it's a fish. They can't talk.”

“You don't know that!” Miz muttered as she tried to stare the fish down. “Talk! I'll count to 3. Then I'll start taking off scales one by one.”

“Miz, please stop threatening the fish. It can't talk.” Ford sighed. He didn't know why they were still here, they should keep searching. “One…” Miz started and Seb laughed maniacally, slowly swimming closer and opening his mouth over the fish’ head. “Two…” Ford groaned. “Just leave that poor fish alone.”

“And that's thre-” Miz pinched one of the fish's scales. “No! Wait!” the fish whimpered. Ford’s eyes widened. “What the-?!"

“Please don't kill me!” The fish sobbed. “I have a wife and 200 children to protect!” He had never seen merfolk so crazy and scary! Miz grinned. “Well~then you know what you'll need to do~” she purred as she gently caressed the fish's side. The fish whimpered.

Ford was staring in absolute confusion. “What?!”

Miz hummed. “This one had a Soul.” She said. “Not all of them did, so this guy stood out like a sore thumb.” She grinned. “So, start talking. Where's the undersea kingdom?”

They met up with the others and began to swim, following the terrified fish. He tried to escape once. Miz made sure he wouldn't try again.

Shermie shuddered. “Sebas, your daughter is terrifying.” He looked over at the whimpering fish that was missing one of his fins. “Oh, I know, and I am so proud of her.” He purred and patted her head. Miz purred.

-Woo! That’s my daughter!-
-Pull another fin!-

Shermie sighed. All his family were terrifying. Dipper looked around, trying to spot something that would help him remember the way, but all he saw was rocks, sand, water and dumb plants.

The fish whimpered again. “A-After showing you...I can leave right?” Miz petted his side. “Of course, Martin.” she purred. So delicious looking~ “And I'll even heal your fin. But you shouldn't have tried to escape from me~”

The fish (who's name was Blurniblub, but he wasn't going to argue with the hungry looking mergirl) nodded. “Yes mistress, I understand mistress!”

“Miz! That poor fish.” Ford sighed and shook his head. However, he was more interested in his new body. His chest, despite looking human, was covered in pale blue scales. They started lightly around his gills, and turned deeper and larger as they reached his tail. His gills were opening and closing, Ford wondered what was happening to his lungs. Would they be functional if they got out of the water? What if he tried breathing through his nose? This was all so amazing, he wished this wasn’t a rescue mission so he would have time to study it!

Finally, they passed through some sort of barrier, one second there was nothing but sand and rock, then they all saw the world shimmer and a vast undersea city appeared. “Whoa~” they all gasped.

Merfolk and aquatic mammals swam around, working, chatting. Some merchildren swam around laughing. As promised, Miz healed the fish, who swam off as quickly as he could, screaming.
“What a nice guy.” Miz grinned as she waved goodbye to his retreating form.

“Is this Atlantis?” Shermie gasped in awe, looking at everything despite his worry. Dipper wished he had brought his phone. It was waterproof! Would it have worked here?

“Naw, that place is a few thousand miles off that way...or at least it WAS a few thousand years ago...” Miz commented. “Huh...looks like this world’s Bill had plenty of Deals with them before the country fell...” reminded her of her own interactions and subsequent destruction of Atlantis.

“Focus guys! We need to find Mabel!” Dipper swam forward. The others quickly followed behind him. They attracted many looks from the merfolk around, (they were so pale! Who were these strangers?) and the temporary mermen stared back in wonder. Only one of them was stupid enough to voice it out loud though.

“Damn, look at those hot mermaid gals!” Stan gasped.

-Can someone hit him?!- Carla and Dillon deadpanned over the communication necklaces.

“On it!” Shermie punched his older brother in the stomach. “You’re married, poophead!” As Stan whimpered and held his stomach, Ford swam up to try and speak to a nearby merman. “Excuse me? Hello. Have you seen a human girl get dragged through here? Looks a lot like us?”

“They speak Spanish?” Seb gasped. Languages! His one strength! He was a master in languages thanks to the little knowledge he kept. “Ah, hola, disculpa.” He approached a mermaid. “Estamos buscando a una niña humana. Cabello marrón, largo, fue secuestrada por unos manatíes.”

Shermie stared at his brother in awe. He didn't know Sebastian spoke Spanish. That's pretty cool. No wonder Seb was the best brother. He was so talented.

“¿Niña humana?” The woman repeated and hummed. She called the merfolk she was with and asked them if they saw a human girl. “¡Yo la ví!” One woman smiled and Seb smiled. “She said she saw Shooting Star! ¿Dónde la vieron?”

While they were talking, a little merboy who appeared around 14 swam up to Miz and poked her glowing tail in fascination. “¡Qué linda!” He gasped. Miz squeaked. “H-hey! Hands off!” She curled her tail up. The merboy grinned at her. “Ohh, ¡Extranjera! Me gusta. ¿Cómo te llamas, preciosa? ¿De dónde vienes?” The merboy waved his tail excitedly.

“M-me llamo Miz…” Miz stuttered with a faint blush. Was this kid seriously flirting with her? She wasn't really used to that. He thought she was pretty? Oh...

“Ok, ¡gracias por su ayuda! ¿De verdad creen que podamos entrar sin que nos vean?” Seb continued his conversation as everyone floated there, feeling useless. Dipper kind of understood what was going on from school but wouldn’t dare to attempt speaking and saying something wrong.

“No. Si quieren sacarla de allí tienen que tener cuidado, la reina siempre tiene guardias alrededor del palacio.” The woman shook her head.

“Buena suerte, gringos.” Seb rolled his eyes, still not knowing why he was always called that and nodded politely. “Gracias.” The citizens swam away and he looked at his group. He frowned at the kid talking to Miz and Miz blushing, understanding only a few words here and there (her Spanish was rusty ok?! She hadn’t used it in like… billions of years!).

“¡Hey! Fuera de aquí.” He growled and the kid quickly swam away. “Ok. They said Mabel was dragged here in a net and taken to the palace’s dungeons.” Shermie gasped. “So, we have to be careful getting in because guards are everywhere.”

“So it’s a jailbreak huh?” Stan grinned. “We had quite a few of those during our time in Space huh Sixer?” Ford adjusted his glasses “Indeed.”

“How are your glasses even on your face?” Shermie asked. ““Magic.”” Was the chorus of answers. “Let’s go save my niece!” Seb exclaimed and they all swam in the direction of the huge palace. Once there, they would think of a plan.

---

Mabel sighed and hugged her knees to her chest in her cell. She wondered what she did to get in this mess. Those manatees seemed so adorable and then they just attacked her! She wasn’t drowning for some reason. Maybe it was Miz’s doing.

Some of the manatees spoke English (they said that a scout had heard her say her name, and recognized it as the first love of the Queen’s husband) but most of them only knew Spanish. She wished she had paid more attention in class...

She wasn’t sure what was happening. The few manatees that knew English said that the Queen would be coming by to see her later.

“Let me see Mermando, you big soft blubs!” The teen gripped the bars. The guards who knew english chuckled. “You aren’t seeing the King! And after our Queen decides what to do with you for stealing her husband’s heart...you will never see anyone else again! They laughed.

Mabel gasped. Manatees were evil?! How could this be? Wait. Stolen heart? “Mermando still likes me?!” She gasped. Her cheeks turned red and she looked down. She...hadn’t expected that…

“We don’t have to talk to you, human.” They shook their heads. “Now be silent or you won’t be fed!”

“I don’t want your food, uglies!” Mabel yelled. “I can’t believe I ever thought you were cute!” She kicked at the coral bars. The prisons were large corals, not the pretty pink ones, but a dark dreary blue that they pushed a large rock against to close off the opening they shoved her through. Mabel tugged on the bars but it did nothing. “Let me go!”

The guards laughed. “Just be quiet while we get the Queen. She will decide what to do.” Mabel snarled “I’LL NEVER BE QUIET! LALALALA! I’M BEING REALLY LOUD! GWAAAAA!
BLAAUGH!!”

The manatees winced and backed away. “Ugh…her voice is so grating!” “Make it stop!” “Shut up!
That's so annoying!”

“BEING ANNOYING IS MY SPECIALTY! BWAAAA! BWAAAAA!”

“Someone get the Queen fast! My ears are gonna explode!” They shouted. As Mabel screamed, she hoped her family would find a way to save her. They always knew what to do.

One of the manatees swam off in a hurry while another one swam off to get a gag. He came back with an octopus and shoved it through the bars of the jail cell. “Shut up!” He growled.
“LALALALA-Mmph!!” Mabel was cut off when the octopus plastered itself to her mouth. “Mmmph! Mmmph!?!?” She pulled at the tentacles. The manatees sighed in relief. “Sweet mercy…” They relaxed. Mabel glared at them. Did they really think a GAG was enough to stop her? She was Mabel FREAKING Pines and she was the MASTER of annoying people! And it ALSO applied to mean MANATEES!

She started stomping her feet and slapping her hands on the bars. The manatees stared at her. “What are you doing?” She ignored them, slapping around the coral and listening to the sounds it made. Sounds were a little different underwater so she was going to have to improvise. She continued to slap at the coral until it began to shake, the vibration making a soft sound. She continued hitting the coral, making it vibrate more and more.

“Stop that. What are you even doing? It's not gonna break.”

Mabel frowned at the idea they might not have music. It would make sense. But that was so sad! Maybe that was why they were so mean! They didn’t know how to have fun!” Mabel continued making the corals vibrate, making different soft sounds. The manatees really looked confused and Mabel sighed behind her octopus gag. A world without music was a world she would hate to live in...

The manatees realized she wasn’t doing anything dangerous, and while the sounds she made were weird, it wasn’t as annoying as her voice. They sat there, waiting for their Queen to decide what to do with this human girl already.

There were little bubble streams nearby that the manatees went to get a few breaths of air. They still weren’t sure what the human girl was doing.

Mabel hit the coral, her hands were starting to hurt but she was getting close. The vibration of the coral was letting out a very low pitched rumble and she saw the manatees start to shudder. “What...what's happening?” One asked as he felt dizzy. Mabel kept it up, feeling a little nauseous herself but refusing to stop. The octopus on her was twitching as well.

“Hey! Stop whatever you're doing!” A manatee shouted. He shook his head, he felt kind of sick. Mabel grinned through her gag. She had found this out by accident. Low sounds, like bass, made people sick. She knew this because Dipper threw up once when she turned the speakers up really high! Mabel hit the coral piece that sounded the lowest and grinned.

“Aahh! This human is attacking us!” The manatees whimpered. Mabel did it again and the animals cried. The octopus fell to the floor and crawled away and Mabel cried in victory. She was about to start screaming when two new guards appeared, shielding a manatee wearing a seaweed dress and a crown. “Oh...” She muttered.

19 year old Mermando sighed and laid down on the floor. He was so bored~! He looked up and saw his wife was going somewhere with some guards. “Where are you going?” He asked softly and she smiled. “It's not important, dear, you just continue doing what you are doing.”

The merman smiled softly and continued sulking with boredom, his long dark hair was splayed everywhere and his tail twitched from time to time. He twirled his trident in his hands and threw it up only to watch it fall again. Hehe. “Ah…” Why did he have to rule over here so well? Nothing interesting happened, ever!

As if the gods heard his pleas, the palace’s doors were thrown open and Mermando jumped to his tail, watching some mermen and manatee guards pushing 6 struggling and screaming mermen plus a mergirl who was cursing them in...was that Cantonese? He wasn’t sure.

“Your Highness, we found these merpeople trying to sneak inside the castle! They were destroying the marketplace to distract us!” They informed him in spanish.

“I told you this wasn’t going to work!!” Dipper screamed and kicked out with his tail. “Dad this is all your fault!”

Mermando frowned at the men. Wait, they looked...familiar. “Esperen, wait…” The merman swam closer. “Dipper?” He gasped. The teen’s hair was floating everywhere so his birthmark was fully exposed. He remembered seeing it when Dipper saved him as kids. “Dipper! That is you! What are you doing here?!” He looked down. “And how are you a merman now?”

“He speaks English! Yay!” Stan cheered.

“Hey kid, we're looking for Mabel, she was kind of kidnapped by some manatees.” Seb told him. Mermando smiled. “You are Mabel’s uncle! Wait, kidnapped?!” He gasped.

“Yes! By your manatees! Give me back my daughter, fish kid!” Shermie growled.

“Dad, stahp, you're embarrassing me.” Dipper pleaded. Mermando looked confused. “Mabel is here? I do not understand.”

“Wait, you didn’t know?” Seb asked and Stan deadpanned. “Can you order your guards to let us go?” He grunted.

“Oh, right. Let them go! They’re friends!” Mermando told the guards and they swam away. “I wasn’t aware Mabel had been brought here.” The king hummed and then gasped.”Oh no! That must have been Sarita!”

“Who?” The Pines and Miz echoed. “My wife!” Mermando said. Everyone nodded. Right. Mermando began swimming away “I must go!” He cried in worry. They followed the merman, also worried. They hoped Mabel was alright.

“MUAAHAHAHA!! I'M AN INDESTRUCTIBLE GOD OF CHAOS!!!"

“AHHHH!” “HOW DID SHE GET LOOSE??” “AAAAUGH! SHE'S TOUCHING MEEEE!!”

Mermando and the rest of the rescue party stared, dumbstruck. A manatee guard swam past, sobbing. Miz had a wide grin. “Oh hey, the protection Deal really DOES work!”

Mabel turned from where she was smacking spears out of the guard's hands with her bare hands. “Oh. Hey guys…” She did a double take. “You're all merpeople?!” She did another double take “Mermando?!”

“M-Mabel! My old friend!” Mermando cried as he swam forward. The two embraced, spinning around in the water, laughing as they hugged each other. “I have not seen you for so long!”

“I missed you too!” Mabel sniffled as she held him. She petted his long hair. “Your hair has grown longer...and you're so much taller.” Mermando chuckled. “You look different as well, a nice different.”
Shermie blinked at the two teens hugging. Mabel looked so happy...was this an inverted Little Mermaid story? He had never seen his baby girl so happy…

“EH HEM!”

Everyone turned in the direction of the voice and saw the angry Queen staring down at them. “Sarita, this is-”

“Yes, I know who this human is, Mermando!” She exclaimed angrily. The merman frowned, still holding Mabel’s hand unconsciously. “Why did you give the order to take her here? Her human family was worried, they had to turn into merfolk to come here to get her!” He shook his head. “Why?!”

“She was trying to kill me!” Mabel exclaimed. Everyone gasped. Mabel pointed at all the spears that they had tried to stab her with, they were snapped and broken, the Deal protecting her from lethal harm.

The Queen sniffled and whimpered. “Because you still think of her! You still like her, Mermando! It's been 6 years! You never think of ME like that!” She admitted.

Mermando sighed. “Sarita…” he let go of Mabel's hand so he could swim up to his wife. “Mabel was a dear friend. She and her family saved my life. They helped me get back home, back here.” He held Sarita's flippers. “I admit, I may not have been the best husband...but I am still your husband.” He kissed her round snout. "And I do love you. I'm sorry if you got the impression that I didn't. I admit, I wasn't happy with the marriage at first, but you're someone I've grown to care about."

The kids, Dillon and their mothers gaped at the sight in the mirror. Zoe looked up at her mother with a grimace. But Mabel was so much prettier than Sarita!

Sarita sniffled and nodded, nuzzling against his face. Mabel smiled sadly and went to stand next to her Dad. Shermie hugged her and Abi pouted, seeing her baby sad made her sad.

The Queen turned to look at the merfolk and the human. “I apologize for my behaviour...I may have overreacted.” She spoke in English, her carribean accent strong. “Please, Mabel, let me offer you a feast. Mermando’s friends are all welcomed here.”

“Please, follow us! You are welcomed here!” Mermando motioned them to follow him and everyone swam after the rulers of the undersea nation. Mabel looked at Miz. “Can you turn me into a mermaid? You will recharge in a bit anyway…” She smiled. Miz rolled her eyes. “Sure.” She flicked her fingers.

The girl gasped as she felt the magic changing her. It didn’t hurt but it was super weird. Soon enough, Mabel was covered in shiny pink scales, gills, webbed hands and a long tail. Her smile widened and she swam towards her Dad and Dipper to hug them tightly. “Look! We finally match!”

Miz giggled and her stomach growled. Ok. Now her fish! The chefs, merpeople, brought them lots of different kinds of fish and Miz felt like she was in heaven. Since they were underwater, they weren't cooked in the traditional sense, the fish were killed and cleaned, their scales carefully ground off using a rough stone and then de-boned. Miz slurped up the fishes with a bright smile.
Everyone else stared at the raw fish and debated whether it was safe to eat. Stan squinted at it.
“It's...almost like sushi?”

“Yes, just eat, Stans.” Miz said, noticing Ford was wary of eating as well. The Pines ate the offered fish, ignoring how their family on the surface was gagging.

When everyone was done and the poor servers sighed in relief after swimming back and forth to bring the girl so much food, Mermindo motioned for Mabel to follow him. The girl sighed. She wondered what he wanted to say...she just hoped he wasn’t too harsh friendzoning her...

“Mabel...it really is nice to see you again.” Mermindo sighed. “Even if it wasn't under the best circumstances.” Mabel nodded. “I'm sorry I haven't written to you in a while, life has been busy.” She frowned. It wasn't fair to use that as an excuse. She could have tried to find some other way to keep in touch. Mermindo looked up wistfully. “I never got to see much of the world above the water. I was too afraid and lonely to enjoy my time up there before.”

“I'm sorry.” Mabel played with her hair. “Hey, maybe we could take you up? My cousin Miz can make you human for a little while? Like how she made us into merfolk?”

Mermindo smiled. “That would be amazing. But, I cannot leave my people. Things are peaceful now, but there has been some worry about the rising temperatures these past few decades.” He looked away to his city. “It has allowed us to venture into deeper waters, farther from the surface world...but every year, there are less fish for food. We have been farming and breeding them in order to feed my people, and Sarita's people are fine with plants, but I worry.”

He shrugged. “I am sorry for telling you my troubles. The kingdom is perfectly fine otherwise.” Mabel frowned. “I don't mind, if you're worried, I'll listen. You're...you're my friend after all.”

Mermindo sighed. “Mabel, I'll be honest, if things had been different...I would have liked for us to be more…” He gazed into her eyes. “It's kind of unfair. I have my duty to my people, to my wife.”

Mabel's eyes watered “So you really love her?” She asked. Mermindo bit his lip. “To be honest, not at first.” He laughed “I was young. I had so many things I wanted to do, and then I was to be wed to a girl I didn't know. It was...hard, at first.” He shook his head. “But I got to know Sarita over these years and I am fond of her. She is strong, intelligent, and cares deeply for her people and mine. I love her.”

The temporary mermaid wiped her eyes, even when no tears were falling. “I am glad you are happy with her, Mermindo...you're a nice guy, you don't deserve anything less!” The girl declared and hugged the merman, hearing his many hearts beating, and giggled. Mermindo hugged her back. “We can’t lose contact again!” he stated. “I can see about finding some other method of communication…”

“Build a triangular frame.” Miz said, popping out from behind a rock with a slab of fish meat in her mouth. Mabel and Mermindo jolted. “H-how long have you been there?!”

“Oh~a while~” Miz grinned. She swallowed her fish. “Build a triangular frame.” She repeated. “A decent size. That way I can enchant it and you can facetime whenever you want!”

“Face...time?” Mermindo tilted his head as Mabel squealed. “Oh Miz, thank you! Thank you!” She hugged the demon to herself. Miz snuggled into her cousin “In exchange, sneak us your dessert tonight, mom's still grounding me and the twins so we don't get any.” little blue flames appeared in her hand.
“Deal!” Mabel shook Miz's hand and smiled at Mermando, who was still looking at them confused. “We'll get to talk more now! This is Miz, my cousin, and if you get a triangular frame, we will be able to speak face to face, as if we were looking at each other!” She explained and Mermando nodded in understanding. The two friends hugged excitedly and laughed.

“I...I’m fine being your friend, Mermando! As long as I am your BEST, BEST friend!” The brunette girl told her fish friend who chuckled in his nice sexy deep voice. “You are my best friend, Mabel…”

The two laughed before swimming back to join everyone else. Miz looked around. So the rising temperature of the planet was causing problems even down here. She frowned. How did the humans allow their planet to become like this?

She decided to begin working on some way to pull the carbon from the atmosphere...anything to try and fix all the shit that's been happening on this planet…

After all, she wanted to be sure they could continue to live here healthily for as long as possible. Humanity would only last so long, she knew that. But she didn't want them to have to disappear too quickly.

They couldn’t leave the palace until Mabel deemed the frame perfect enough, the right size, and triangular enough. Miz enchanted it and told Mermando to take care of it. Goodbyes were always bitter sweet, but Mabel left assured that she wouldn’t go years without seeing her friend. She even hugged the Queen as hard as she could, smiling widely. “You are a really lucky, girl! Take care of him!”

The guards shivered and trembled, too scared to try to protect their Queen from the insane mermaid. Sarita giggled and hugged the girl back. “I will, thank you!” After one last hug, Mermando and Mabel said bye and Miz took them back to the beach, transforming them once again into humans on the way. They tiredly swam to the shore, kicking their numb legs until they reached the sand. The Pines groaned and laid down on the sand, awaiting death.

Abigail hugged Mabel tightly the instant they rose out of the water. “I was so worried!” She sniffled as she clung to her daughter. Mabel hugged her mom and hid her wet face on her neck. “I’m sorry for your merman friend…” The dark-haired woman said softly and Mabel smiled slightly. “It...it’s ok...Mermando is happy with his wife...but he liked me, so, maybe there is someone else who can like me as well…” Abi hugged her even tighter as Dipper and Shermie stared at her.

Gee, thanks, they also existed?

The twins squealed and threw themselves over Seb. “You were a cute fish!” Zach laughed. “We want to be fishes too!” Zoe giggled. Seb answered with a groan and Wanda got the kids off him. “Maybe later ok? I think it’s time to go back to the hotel.”

“Yeah, we're hungry.” Carla sighed. Stan groaned. “Me too.” Carla glared at him. “Didn't you just eat?” And he was also surrounded by beautiful mermaids serving the food. Stan shrugged. “Raw fish ain't my thing.”

They went back to the hotel, thanking Carla for choosing a hotel close to the beach. Most of them went to have dinner, but Seb took a shower to get rid of the sea water smell on him before passing out. ‘Aw~ what a baby.’ Wanda smiled fondly.
Wanda covered him with the blankets, kissed his lips and let him sleep as she took the twins to eat with the rest of the family. They walked by a part they had never been before and Dillon announced he found the game rooms with table soccer, pool, billiards, and ping pong! It was kind of late so they preferred not making too much noise, but they would definitely go some day. Mabel was already talking with Mermando via her triangle frame and showing him around the hotel. She had to explain she didn’t live in a castle and she also explained how hotels worked. In her random walk she found herself lost and accidentally discovered a spa room and a pool! Damn, this hotel had their best stuff all hidden!

The family finished eating and tiredly said good night to each other before making their way to their rooms. Today was a fun day and they still had all summer to have more weird adventures.

-The next day-

“Woo!” Stan laughed as he came down for breakfast at the hotel dining hall. “Another day, another romp through the beach full of lovely ladies in skimpy clothing~” Carla rolled her eyes. If she didn’t know her husband loved her dearly she would have been more upset about his flirtatious nature. Still, it was rather grating on her patience that he always did this, as if her feelings didn’t matter. The family joined some tables and sat down to eat. Wanda was keeping the twins and Diego from eating just cereal for breakfast.

“I know! The beach is fun! We can even take the boat for a sail!” Seb smiled as he sat down in front of Stanley. The older man’s eyes widened. “You're totally right!” He looked at the table with food. “Carla, be a dear, can you get me breakfast~?”

Carla sighed. “Lazy dumbass, if you keep ordering me around like that I might get annoyed. You didn’t even say the magic word.” Stan laughed. “Abracadabra?” Carla huffed and went off to get herself breakfast. If her lazy husband wanted something he should get it himself! Seb frowned at Stan. “You should be nicer. She’s your wife.” Wanda sat down next to Seb. “Yeah, dick. Get your own food. Don’t you have hands?” Stan groaned and slumped over his chair. “But I’m on vacation~”

"And so is Carla. You can't go making her work when she's also here to relax!” Seb frowned.

Ford came over and frowned. “Regardless, she IS your wife, should you not at least say please?” Stan rolled his eyes. “Don’t want to hear that from the guy who refused to say thank you.” The Stans glared at each other. “Come on, guys, I don’t think it’s too serious.” Shermie chuckled softly. “I mean, couples make each other happy, right? It can’t be that hard to bring breakfast? It’s not like he’s asking Carla to make him a sandwich.” He flinched at the glares now directed at him. Dipper and Mabel rolled their eyes. Dad should shut the fuck up before fucking it up more.

Shermie turned to Seb and Ford for support. Seb shook his head. “I’m the one who makes the sandwiches, so don’t look at me. Ford sheepishly rubbed the back of his head “I...can sort of make a sandwich? Wait, what is this conversation about?” Miz, sitting beside him, rolled her eyes “About how some people aren’t expressing proper gratitude towards their partners. Or making demands and feeling entitled to their partners obeying without question.” Ford nodded before looking confused. “But... Don't you like making the food?”

And now everyone was glaring at poor Ford too. Miz’s eye twitched. "That's not what this is about.” A small argument started when Carla came back without bringing any food for Stan. The children stared at their parents as they began to bicker. Zach and Diego whimpered while Zoe frowned. Mabel, Dillon and Dipper were attempting to calm the adults but the argument was beginning to escalate.

“I guess if they don’t go political-” Dillon started.

“I just think women have more privileges! All they have to do is look pretty and guys will do anything for them!” Stan complained loudly. “Are you serious?!” The women screamed. “Women have been oppressed since stupid sexists were in power!” Carla growled. “But men gave them rights eventually…” Ford pointed out timidly. “WHY DIDN’T THEY HAVE IT IN THE FIRST PLACE?!” Wanda roared.

“They went political…” Dillon sighed.

Finally Miz slammed her hands on the table “You know what?! SCREW THIS!” she had a pounding headache from all the angry emotions and she was pissed now too! Her power reached out and the world twisted. A perception filter ensured no one else noticed the change. The arguing couples gasped softly as a hot sensation filled their bodies and it made them shiver, but before it actually burned, it was gone. It took them a few seconds to realize what happened.

Stan stared down at his, or rather HER chest. “W-what the?!” Everyone else gasped at their altered bodies and stood up to examine them better. Miz had swapped everyone except Kari, Zoe, Zach and Diego.

Stan started screaming as if he was being murdered, along with most of the table who were affected.

Dipper shakily touched his face, and his hands, and pulled a long strand of curly brown hair. “Why were WE included too?! We weren’t even involved?!”

“Because you all annoyed me! And I wasn't paying attention! ...Sorry 'bout that.” Miz, or rather, Xin huffed as he crossed his arms. “But it isn't all bad. I mean, you should see how it feels to walk a week in the other’s shoes.” They all gasped. A WEEK?! Stan screamed again, willing his voice to go deeper again with each shout, but he couldn't.

Kari was looking around at this blatant display of magic and could only say one thing.

“I HAVE DAUGHTERS NOW! YEEEEEES!!!!”

“Seriously?” Mabel looked at her Grandma deadpanning. Then coughed. Oh god. This was for real...her voice was deep and it sounded pretty hot but this was also scary as fuck!! She felt around her chest to find that her breasts were gone! And...ooh, there’s some muscle here… hang on… She grinned as she felt herself up.

Stan blinked. He looked down, freaking out, and saw that his hair reached past his shoulders, even longer than when he had a mullet. His muscles weren't gone, he still had muscles but he couldn't see them as well. He was all curvy! WHY!!!! He faintly realized that if he saw a woman like this he'd probably find her incredibly hot, a real Amazon type-- but it was weird when it was himself!

Xin grinned. “I think I did a pretty good job.” He nodded to himself.

Seb was squishing his new boobs curiously. “Huh...I’m so slim.” He had been in a female body before so it wasn’t as weird for him. But this was his own body, just female. Wanda was also a bit more well adjusted, though she found herself towering over her husband. “Whoa. I’m...really tall as a man…” She commented. Seb finally looked up at his wife and his jaw dropped. “Holy shit. Wanda, you’re…” His eyes roamed up and down his wife’s tall, muscular form “...super freaking hot~”
The kids all let out a loud “EWW~” They were eating, damn it! The kids couldn’t care less about their parents’ changes.

Wanda blushed. “Re-really?” She glanced at her husband as well, his hair fell in lovely long, well-formed curls, he was still wearing his eyepatch, but his brown eye had even longer, lush lashes. She had to admit he looked pretty too. So petite and slim. Wanda was almost jealous of his slender figure. Wow.

Kari smacked her hand. “Hey! Don’t touch my daughter like that.” Wanda blushed. “Sorry, Kari…” Seb was rubbing his chest. "Huh. I guess I'm not fat enough to have big breasts." They were a nice average size, Wanda blushed. "Don't play with them! The kids are…” she trailed off, the kids weren't even paying attention.

Kari examined her new daughter “Hm…” Kari placed a hand on Seb’s shoulder. “I’m...so proud.” She sniffled. Seb blushed. “Ma!” Kari laughed. “Don’t slouch, stand up straight, be proud! You are a beautiful woman and you should own it!” That made Seb slouch even more in embarrassment. He couldn’t be that beautiful right? He was used to people saying he looked weird…

Xin turned to look at Stanford and he couldn't help but smile fondly. He looked so confused and lost! And his hair was all curly and fluffy and his glasses were now a little big on her face and oh Ax! How cute!! Xin blinked and tilted his head. Huh. Ford's already lovely butt was even rounder now. Nice. He had simply set them to switch sex, wasn't sure how it'd all translate over.

Stan, Ford and Shermie groaned. “Please change us back?” They whimpered. Xin shook his head. “Nope. The Curse will last a week and then break on its own. I kinda… set it up that way. Sorry. Besides~” He went up to place a hand on Seb’s other shoulder. “Seb~You can wear all the dresses you want now~” He whispered.

Seb’s eye lit up. That...that’s true! He...he could dress up all he wanted! Do his nails! Style his hair! Wear those pretty, fluttery dresses he loved! "EEEEEEEEEEE!!"

The now men winced a bit. Now Seb's shrieks were even higher. Well, looks like they weren't getting any help from this side.

Carla was staring at herself in shock. Her arms were so thick now? And ew, why were her arms so hairy, like Stan’s?! GROSS. Abigail wasn’t as muscular as Wanda, but she was quite tall, stumbling as she got used to the new height. Stan was poking his breasts experimentally. Ford was examining himself more clinically, marvelling at how such a thing was possible. Did Xin simply double their X chromosome? That shouldn’t be enough to do this right? A full on transformation like this reminded him of being a let man yesterday, simply fascinating. Entire genetic reconstruction from the ground up. And in an instant too! Shermie sat down heavily. “I can’t believe this is happening…”

Dipper and Mabel had switched bodies once so it wasn’t AS weird as it could have been, heck, Dipper had been a pig for a while. Still, Dipper covered his chest and made distressed sounds. Mabel didn’t have boobs back then! Which he was really grateful for, that would have been TOO awkward for his poor little preteen heart.

Mabel examined her brother. She had to admit that they really looked similar, but they still had their differences. Mabel didn’t have the weird peach fuzz Dipper had, thank god, and...she grinned. “At least your boobs aren’t bigger than mine.” Dipper screamed and Dillon sighed, putting his head on his palm.

Diego looked at his mom. “Mommy, do I have to call you Daddy now?” He asked Carla, who was running a hand through her shorter curly hair.

Xin put his hands on his hips as he examined everyone. “Hey, can you triplets stand next to each other? I want to see how you all turned out compared to each other.” He gently pushed Stan next to Ford and pulled Seb over as well. “Hm…” He tilted his head with a sly grin. “So Seb’s got the petite look, Stan and Ford are a few inches taller than him, Stan’s got the thickest arms and muscles and Fordsie has the biggest butt!” He observed cheerfully. “That’s pretty good, I wasn’t really sure how you’d all turn out. Good to know you all turned out pretty hot.”

“They were handsome as men.” Kari smiled. “It only makes sense they will be gorgeous as women.” She was just so happy! Imagining her baby boys had actually been baby girls! And FOUR! She always wanted daughters.

Xin then turned to look at Shermie and the others. “Shermie’s really pretty too, a slim, athletic build, very perky.” He noted. “Less fat than his brothers, I guess this means he’s been keeping himself more in shape than they were… makes sense, Stan was focused on bulking up.” Xin looked over at the former women. “I’m… very surprised how mom and the others turned out though. Who’d have thought mom would be a stud?”

Wanda blushed madly as Carla grinned amused. “You actually look pretty hot, Wands.” She complimented. Then she realized something. If she was a man…”Does that make me gay?” She wondered.

“I think so.” Abigail nodded solemnly. But it was weird. She still felt attracted to Shermie. “Xin, explain? I’m having a sexual orientation crisis.”

Xin shrugged. “You still love who you love. Regardless of sex. And you still have preferences beyond that. Don't think about it too hard.” He nodded at them. “So just enjoy a week like this and see if maybe you all learn something.” He sat back down to finish eating breakfast, he was feeling pretty ravenous after this use of his power. And maintaining the perception filter. The 3rd dimension always made his powers more difficult to use, even if the barrier was weaker here.

Everyone sat down, some of them shifting in their seats, trying to get used to their new bodies. Stan, Dipper and Shermie whimpered at their loss from time to time. It was as if... there was nothing down there! On the other hand, the women were shifting as they felt something that shouldn't be there and had to sit with their legs apart. Seb and Wanda were the only ones who seemed alright, though now his hair was extremely long, almost reaching his waist and he couldn't stop spitting his hair away or getting it over his food. URGH! He needed a fucking hairband!

Carla, deciding to be a dick, like the one probably resting in her pants, looked at Stan. “Love, can you bring me some napkins please?” Stan grumbled. “No.” Carla made a show of looking astonished. “Really? You won't even bring your husband a napkin? But I thought women were happy when they made their husbands happy.” She pouted.

Stan grumbled. “Not gonna do it.” Xin made a show of lidding his eyes at Stan. “I wonder if I should tack on an extra week…” everyone glared at Stan. “Stan! This is your fault! Go get your wife a napkin.”

Stan growled loudly as he pushed his chair back and went to the buffet table. His face was red and his fists clenched. Everyone looked at Xin nervously. Xin nodded, pleased. “A week it stays.”

Everyone sighed in relief. They continued eating, Stan eventually came back and angrily handed his wife the damn napkins. “Thank you, love. See? It wasn’t that hard. And I'm even thanking you for it.” “Whatever, let me eat.” He stuffed his mouth with food.
Mabel swallowed her bite of toast. “We should get names while in this form!” She declared. “I’m thinking of...Markus—that sounds cool right?”

Xin gasped. “That’s an excellent idea!” He turned to Dipper “Then, should Pinetree be Mary?” He and Mabel turned to each other with a wide grin “Cause he’s a lamb?!” The two laughed uproariously.

“I hate you both.” Dipper folded his arms but quickly let go when it squished his boobs, still not used to feeling their bump there. He wondered what Paz would say about this…

“Oh! Mommy should be Walter because it also starts with W!” Zach added, proud of his contribution. He had practice back when he was deciding his name. Wanda, currently Walter, smiled at her son and ruffled his hair. “That sounds wonderful sweetie.”

Zoe stared at her father “So daddy is...Sabrina!” She declared. Walter laughed. “So it's Sab for short?” Sebastian/Sabrina hummed to himself “I like that. It's cute.”

Kari looked at her now oldest daughter awkwardly drinking his/her coffee. “I always liked the name Stefania…” Ford choked a bit. “Oh– And you can be Fania for short! Yeah!” Xin high fived Kari.

Mabel looked at her parents . “Dad, you are Shelly now and mom...Abraham!” The ‘boy’s eyes sparkled. Both shrugged. Ok. Take it as it came, that way the overwhelming thought of being the opposite sex wouldn't crush them.

“And these two are Stania and Carlos!” Seb/Sab finished. Said people were glaring at each other. “And Dillon can be Danna.”

“If dad is a girl does this mean we take mom’s last name for now?” ‘Danna’ asked calmly. Everyone looked at each other and shrugged. “The hotel rooms are listed under the Pines family, so I think we have to keep that.”

“It’s ok, I don’t mind taking my wife’s last name.” Carlos grinned teasingly. “I love women! And I flirt with them all the time but it’s just a game!” She said with a forced smile. “Right, guys?”

Stan scowled. “Well I'm going to get jealous and nag you about it even when I know you’re not being serious.” The couple glared at each other while everyone sighed. This was going to be a long week.

---

They managed to get a kind of normal breakfast, except for the fact everyone had been sex-swapped.

Zoe pleaded to go to the beach again, but the adults immediately blushed. “Like-like this!” Walter squeaked. Zoe deadpanned and nodded. “How else, dad?!” She smiled and Walter pouted with narrowed eyes.

Xin smiled widely. “I’ll get you all new swimsuits!” He squealed. He grabbed Fania’s hand. “Come on, let’s go somewhere more private.” he grinned. “I’m gonna need to create these from scratch.”

Everyone was dragged back to the hotel rooms by the children. Dipper requested to just have a t-shirt and shorts.
Markus measured herself with Dipper and gasped. “Bro bro, I think you could wear my bikinis! I already paid for them! And we’re the same inverted height!” She squealed. Dipper shook his head. “Definitely not. Leave me alone!” He cried when his sister easily picked him up. “Cute outfits!!” Markus roared as she took him to everyone.

Dipper felt like the pronouns were getting very hard to keep track of.

Sab was thrilled to try out different swimsuits in front of the mirror. S/he was a little worried about his tattoo showing, but his hair was long enough to cover it if he had it down. He pulled at his straps, pushed his breasts up and turned this way and that to look at himself. “I guess I have a nice figure?” Walter laughed. “You’re gorgeous.” He said. Then she shook her head. Ugh. Was...was the switch doing something to his, her head?

She looked over at Xin “Did you do anything to our heads as well?” Xin blinked and looked a little guilty. “Not on purpose...I can check to see if anything's happening?”

Walter nodded and sat down to let Xin examine his, urgh, her mind. The man touched the blond’s forehead. Xin frowned. “Well...it isn't directly messing with you. It's more like...if you're open to the idea of it, you start shifting towards it.” Xin looked pained. “I'm sorry...did I do bad?”

Seb and Wanda shared a look. It was...worrying. “But...this will only last a week, right?” Wanda asked. “Will we regain our... memories if we forget them?” Xin nodded.

“The curse will break after one week and you'll turn back to normal. It's...not like it changes your memories, just...your perceptions.” he frowned. “I've never had any problem switching back and forth...I guess I never thought about this?”

Seb gaped. Damn... that sexy voice was making him shiver.

Walter trailed his hands down his chest. “This is so weird...I'm so muscular. How did that happen?” He guessed she focused on training more during their gym trips than she thought. Sab came forward with a light blush “Well I think you're really hot...” she said. H/she reached for his wife/husband's chest. “Can I touch you?” Walter grinned. “Only if I get to touch yours~”

Xin smiled, his job was done here, and went to the next room. Shelly and Abraham were surprisingly taking this very well, maybe because their kids were suffering it as well, and they accepted the clothes Xin gave them. Mabel was sad she couldn’t wear her new bikinis, but they were in good hands. Dipper came out of the bathroom deadpanning. “I feel utterly ridiculous with this.” He declared. Mabel gasped. Dipper looked better than her in that!! What the heck?! “Why are you cuter as a girl than I am?! That’s not fair!”

Dipper walked over to the mirror and pouted. His body had finally become a real man’s body...and now he was the exact opposite. He lifted her bangs and looked at his birthmark. This was the only thing keeping him from thinking he was some kind of weird Mabel. He was Dipper Pines. Boy or not. He decided to put on beach shorts. It made him feel a little more comfortable.

Dipper could admit, faintly, that he did make a cute girl. His lifestyle of just sitting around reading all the time didn't lead to many muscles so he was a little squishy. Dipper looked over at his sister who was now beefier than he was as a guy. Not fair that Mabel got all the muscles!
Mabel was still staring at her brother “Ugh! Why are you a cuter girl than I am?” She repeated. She looked over how soft and petite Dipper's female form was. It's not fair Dipper got all the cuteness, that was HER thing!

Xin was watching the twins with a grin. “Everything's fine, Pinetree? Shooting Star?” The teens nodded. “We are so ready for beach day.” Mabel smiled. “Absolutely not.” Dipper shook her head.

Abigail was tightening Shermie’s bikinis straps. “I love this bikini, I need one like this when I’m a woman again…” She said longingly. Shermie was staring at himself in the mirror with awe. “I look like some Amazon warrior.” He flexed and made a face. Dipper scowled. Seriously?! Even as a woman his dad was muscular. Dipper didn't even realize women could have abs as marked as that. Stan’s woman form was muscular, but in a more beefy way, while Shermie had a more specific definition. Dipper looked down at his belly and poked it. His finger sank into soft belly fat.

Xin nodded. “Well, glad to see you're all having fun. I'm gonna go check on Stan and Carla...since, you know, they caused all this…”

They waved at him and he went next door. He found Diego on the floor, wearing his trunks and looking miserable. “We will never go to the beach like this…” He whined. Xin looked up and saw Stan fighting with Carla.

“JUST WEAR IT!” Carlos screamed. “FUCK YOU! I will never put on this shit!” Stania shouted back. Dillon was on the bed with his bikini already put on and waiting for them to finish their bickering. Good girl. Xin sighed. “Stan. Shut up and wear SOMETHING. It doesn't have to be a bikini if you don't want to. I can make one piece suits too.” Stan shook his head. “No. It's girly and frilly.”

“Well then, how about this?” Xin flicked his fingers and an extremely plain black one piece swimsuit appeared on Stania. Stan looked down at himself. “I'm showing too much skin.” He complained. “You walk around shirtless half the time. Why is this any different?”

“For I'm a woman and it feels weird…” Stan grumbled, covering his chest. Carla crossed her arms. “And why? You think a woman shouldn't show skin?” She growled. “You like seeing women show their skin. And now that the shoe's on the other foot, you have a problem with it?” she scoffed. “Remember that dress you wanted me to wear for our anniversary? I told you it was too revealing for me but you insisted. Well, now you know how I feel.”

“Everyone will stare at me!” Stan blushed and Carla grinned. “Like married men look at them?” She sneered. “You don’t like others doing the shit you do! Well suck it!! You will know what it feels like!” She spat. She turned to Xin with a maniac grin. “Turn his swim suit into a sexy bikini.” She requested. “Please.”

Stan’s eyes widened. “No! Don't! I'm going to die of embarrassment!” Xin sighed and modified just enough to not look plain and boring.

“Dillon, can you take Diego down to the beach first while I deal with your parents?” Dillon nodded and got up, put on one of his t-shirts that was now big enough on her new body for decent coverage, picked up his brother and left the room. “You kinda brought this on yourself, dad.”

Xin crossed his arms and looked at the couple. “This is for you to learn empathy.” He reminded them. “Not just you Stan, everyone. You're all in this together.” Carla/Carlos was already in a pair of swim trunks, shirtless and trying not to feel self conscious “Yeah. Now you have to see what I'm always going through.”
Stania stared at her reflection and traced her curves with her eyes and fingertips. She couldn't deny she looked hella nice...Like an Olympic athlete and damn those women were hella cool.

Stania blushed madly as he felt Carlos' hands squeezing her butt. “You look amazing and I love your curves~” Carlos purred. He dragged the middle triplet closer to him and kissed her.

AAAAAANNDAAA that's Xin's cue to leave. He turned and left after realizing the couple probably weren't going to the beach today, they were more invested in another activity....

He went to Ford's room (the door was locked, but he knocked first and announced he was coming in unless Ford said “No.”, which he didn't), and found the human standing shirtless in front of the bathroom mirror, looking between a mix of horror and curiosity. Xin snorted. This huge nerd. He closed the door behind him and walked over to stand behind the scientist. “Having fun?” The dragon asked.

“AAHHH!” Was his response as Ford jumped and turned around to glare at him. “X-Xin!” Ford grumbled as he turned his body around so he wouldn’t see much of his chest. Wow. She looked really nice.

“Don’t stare. I don’t like it.” Ford/Fania (Xin still wasn't sure which name to use) frowned as he covered his chest and Xin nodded. “Sorry for that, I didn’t mean to pry.” Xin grinned. (She REALLY looked nice though, aesthetically, Ford made a very pretty woman). “So...beach? Yes? No?” He held up a hanger with a cute one piece suit. “Colors? Pattern? Come on, gimme something to work with here, Fordsie.”

Ford put on his sweater again and sat down on his bed, realizing he could close his legs with no problem at the moment, and he shook his head. “I am not sure I want to go out like this?” He wasn’t even comfortable wearing a swimsuit as a man, much less in a body that was not his. Well, technically it was, but...yeah...

Ford stared at Xin's exposed skin. “Scales…” He whispered. Xin blinked and looked down before flushing. “Shit. I've been using too much power today…”

“Are you losing hold of your human form?” Ford asked as he reached forward and trailed his/her fingers down the brick-like scales that were slowly growing out of Xin's skin. Xin shivered. “Looks like it. Damn. I need to get some food.” He raised one of his arms and watched the scales slowly spreading from his shoulders and down his arm. “Ew...it looks like I have some horrid skin condition…”

“No it doesn't.” Ford shook his head as he rubbed his fingers along the smooth scales. “They're pretty.”

Xin flushed. Pretty? Bu-but...it was so creepy looking...wasnt it? “But isn't it gross? Having scales “growing out like this?” He tried to focus and stabilize his human form, to stop it from growing more inhuman traits. Ford laughed, his voice sounded so weird, he was used to having a deep voice, but this one was...He didn’t know how to describe it, it sounded...appropriate for a female version of himself. “Not at all. They're amazing.” He took Xin's hand and stroked the scales “Their color is vibrant and they're evenly spaced, I wonder if they're applicable as body armor? Like real scale mail?”

Xin blushed as Ford complimented him. This damn nerd didn't even realize it. “…you'd be a real ladies man...if you learned how to do this on purpose you know.” Xin muttered before shaking his head, “So…~ beach?”

Ford blushed. “Ok...but...” he looked away. “But what?” Xin asked, tilting his head to the side. “I...I need to go to the bathroom...” He whispered, embarrassed. “Can a person hold it for a week?” Xin burst out laughing. “Hey, if I could pee using your dick, you can learn to pee with your holes too!”

“Can you not say it like that?!” Ford stuttered. “And I prefer dying thank you.”

“You Pines are so dramatic. Can you go pee already so we can go to the beach?” Xin asked, exasperated. He was hot! He wanted to go in the water! Though he would need to get his stupid scales to go away first. Or slap on a Perception Filter and not have to bother. Maybe he’d do that. Since Fordsie seemed to like complimenting them and all that.

“For science~” Xin whispered.

“...Ok…” Ford/Fania grumbled her responde before stomping to the bathroom.

“Just sit down!”

“I am not stupid, Xin~!” Fania called from the bathroom, making Xin roll his eyes with an amused snort and turned around to give Fania some more privacy, just in case. In the meantime, he glared at his reflection and forced his scales to recede.

She took a few minutes to come out. Probably pissing herself in fear of peeing, but the woman eventually came out, blushing. Xin had managed to make some of the scales retreat, but not all. He needed to eat something. “You see? Not that hard! Now, which bikini do you want?!” He asked.

“Just-Just how did you get Stan to accept? Just-” She stuttered her words, showing just how hard she was trying. “What’s the least ridiculous or-or that shows less?”

“Just a bathing suit? Are you sure?” Xin clarified. “Wait. Am I allowed to modify it? It’ll be really nice! Nothing overboard” Fania blushed. “As long as it still covers my skin.” Xin nodded with a huge grin. Oh he was gonna have fun with this~

“Cool, but first-FOOD!” Xin threw Fania her boots and dragged them both back downstairs to the dining hall. They had taken so long that it was early lunch in the hotel by this point. Xin was glad for the perception filter he’d slapped on hiding his scales, and he went to grab a plate to choose from the buffet. This hotel was amazing. Expensive, but amazing. The all you can eat buffet was the best part~

Xin piled two plates high with food and made Fania get a plate full of stuff too. Fania rolled her eyes as they sat down and Xin began scarfing it down. “You're just constantly hungry, aren't you?” Fania took out her journal to start writing stuff down. It was important. Bill liked food, she should consider that for their visits, maybe that convinced him to stay with her longer.
Xin shrugged, moaning softly. “Well it takes twice the amount of power to do anything here as opposed to my own dimension, so I'm burning through stuff pretty quick. Plus, being in a physical body all the time is kinda draining. I use less energy as a triangle. And over on my side, I spend a lot of time flying around to do things that get my stores refilled. But it’s not all bad to be hungry.” Which was actually good. Having too much energy build up led to side effects like exploding.

Fania nodded. “Well, maybe if you found some way of storing your energy more efficiently…” Xin paused in the middle of slurping some Lo Mein. “That...is actually a good idea…” he paused to look down at himself. He's always been just compressing his energy inside himself which eventually led to explosions once he could no longer hold them. But it was obviously not a good method. What could he do? While he was in Seb's dimension, he burned through his power pretty quick. Back in his OWN dimension, where manipulating reality happened by simply thinking about it, he would get too much energy built up until he exploded, vomited everything out or used it up on purpose.

It wasn't a very good way to do things. Xin wiggled his butt, wishing he could let his tail out, as he thought about it. What if he split himself in half and sent half of himself back to his own world. So the energy would be shared between them? That seemed like a decent plan. Brother had approved of the idea for leaving half of himself in the Nightmare Realm for storage. But since he was behind a Door right now, it wasn’t something he could do.

And the only other option he could think of right now would be converting the energy into mass that he could repurpose for later use, essentially, fat. And Xin's butt was already too big. He frowned down at himself. He liked big butts (and he would not lie) but sometimes he wondered if he shouldn't have designed this body like this.

The swim suit he was wearing felt a little tight for one thing. He pulled at it and sighed before making the shorts larger. He looked at his reflection in a nearby mirror and flicked his hair. Yeah, he looked good. Right? He was attractive, he had made this body to be. He felt his stomach heat up as he digested and sighed in relief when he could stabilize his form. The scales receded and he ran a hand over his smooth skin with a sigh of relief.

He looked around for Fordsie and snorted loudly when he found the brunette woman at the buffet table. She had left her food, rude, but she was staring longingly at the chocolate cake they were serving as dessert. Ford hated to admit it, but his sweet tooth was stronger than him.

As it was around midday, there weren’t many people eating yet, and the man behind the table took that chance to make a move. “Hey, beautiful, see anything you like?” Ford froze and looked at the man. “Mm…”

“Because I see everything I want in front of me~” the man waggled his eyebrows.

Xin didn’t know if he should laugh or frown. He decided to scowl instead. Ford grimaced. Fuck, fuck, ew, ew. “Alright…” He whispered. The waiter handed the woman a piece of cake. “I’m Martin, I saw you came with your family, am I right?”

“That’s none of your business…” Fania huffed. Ugh. He didn’t want to deal with this. S/he walked back to where Xin was and frowned when she managed to hear the waiter whispering to himself, her ears trained after years of trying to survive in space. “Ugh, bitch, her sisters looked better anyway…” Fania blinked. What did that fucker just call her?!

Xin also heard him and was about to give that piece of shit what he deserved when Fania came back to the table. “Fordsie, are you ok?” She left the cake, because she wouldn’t sacrifice it, then Ford went back to the man...
And socked him right in the nose.

Xin burst out laughing. Fania scowled at the waiter. “That was for calling me a bitch!” The man groaned in pain while Xin continued laughing, pounding the table with a fist. Fania huffed and headbutted him in the forehead, bringing another fit of laughter from the dragon. “And that’s for being a fucking gross human being! What the fuck makes you entitled to talk to women like that!” Then she came back to eat her chocolate cake. Xin giggled and wiped a tear. “I would have done that if you hadn’t beat me to it.”

“He was being incredibly unprofessional. As a waiter, he should not be flirting with the guests. It's improper.” Fania complained. Xin grinned “I've already sent off a formal complaint of his conduct. There's an evaluation form filled out about him, ready and waiting for the owners to see.” Xin purred as he bit into a pork chop. He held up the paper he filled out to show Ford/Fania. Fania giggled. “You...really would have punched him as well for me?”

“Of course, Fordsie!” Xin smiled. “Do you think I would have let him treat you like that?” He continued eating and Fania blushed slightly. “Ok...” She tucked a long lock of hair behind her ear. Ford seemed confused by his behaviour, but didn't pay it much attention. First cake, then meeting everyone at the beach.

Xin peered over. “Are you only getting cake for lunch?” He asked before sliding over some chow suey. “Eat.” He told her. “We're gonna be playing on the beach again and you need your energy. What if someone gets captured by manatees again, right?” he grinned.

Ford laughed and rolled his eyes. He had to admit that adventure was fun, like, how was Xin able to modify their bodies and genetic information so easily? It was amazing! He had GILLS!

He/she watched Xin scarf down another plate of food. Well, obviously he needed to use a lot of energy to do so, but still. It was impressive. She ate some more food, because if they really did have to fight off a herd of blood thirsty manatees again...

Fania looked down at the pasta. “Well, I can’t eat all of this. And I know you’re worried about me getting food, but I... I’m going to handle my own diet. I don’t need you to be my mom for this.”

Xin looked over. “I guess you’re right. You’re an adult. But if you forget or miss a meal, I can remind you. Right?”

“As long as you’re not forcing me to eat when I don’t want to.” Fania thought about it. “I don’t eat much at night, it gives me weird dreams. I’ve gotten used to light meals in the evening.”

“I’ll keep that in mind.” Xin nodded, taking another spoonful of his own food. He still worried, ok? He really wanted her owl to be ok.

They finished up their lunch and went upstairs so Xin could make Fania's swimsuit. It didn't take long and Fania stared at herself in the mirror. “Ah...it's really...very much there.” she blushed. Xin grinned. “It's cute! You said I could do what I want with it~” she blushed. Xin grinned. “It's cute! You said I could do what I want with it~” it was pretty, and blue, and it looked like a cute short dress, made of swimsuit material. The skirt was very fluttery, swishing and bouncing as he moved and the back was open, showing her scar-covered skin. There was a crisscross of fabric but otherwise, the back was exposed. She put her hair down and it covered her back, so it wasn’t too much of a problem. Heck, Fania was more embarrassed by her tattoo.

Ford/Fania sighed. “Well, at least it's covering more of me...” s/he walked off, not noticing how the skirt would bounce up with each step and show off her large butt, which had a bikini bottom with a modest trim. Xin grinned. Butts were nice~
Dipper was in hell.

“Hey sweetheart, you're looking lonely~” “Wanna come have some real fun?” “Come on hot stuff, ditch the children and come hang out with us~”

The teen clenched his fists as the guys followed him around. These stupid assholes really didn’t know how to take a no for an answer and continued asking him to go drink something. The dock had some nice restaurants, bars, cafes, but Dipper DIDN’T WANT TO GO WITH THEM!

“I’m taking care of my cousins, fuck off.” He glared. The guys were much taller than him/her. If he was a boy, they would be the same height. Mabel was aghast at all the attention Dipper got from hot guys.

“Go away! Leave my cousin alone, ugly!” Zach cried and kicked one of the boy’s legs. “Go away or I am calling my dad!”

“Oh yeah, brat? And what will your daddy do?” the teenage boy taunted the toddler who growled. “DDAADDDDD!!!!” He screamed, making everyone flinch. Seb and Wanda took a while to realize he meant his temporary dad, so Wanda sighed and walked over the kids and Dipper. “What’s wrong, Zach?”
The boys gaped slightly at the muscular tall man crouching in front of the little kid. Dipper flipped them off with a smug grin as the boys walked away, they needed to wait to try again.

‘Oh yeah, my new uncle is strong as fuck and will break your noses if you don’t leave me alone!’

Mabel was sulking next to her Grandma under an umbrella. “How is Dipper getting asked out and not me?!?” Markus complained with a whine. Kari laughed. “I’m sure it’s because he’s not the one pursuing them. Some boys have delicate egos and knowing that you’re so much better than them, makes them too afraid to approach.”

Markus groaned. “I just don’t get it. I’m charming and adorable!” Kari patted his back. “Well, do you want to try flirting with boys as another boy? See if maybe that makes a difference?”

Markus blushed. He loved flirting with boys but...Markus looked down at his flat chest. Could he still flirt while he was a boy? How would he even find someone who would be into this? Markus looked over at Dillon, Danna now, who was very much enjoying the attention she was getting from all the boys.

“Hey Danna!” Markus ran over, noticing the men looking him up and down and making jealous faces when Danna turned to him with a bright smile. “Oh, hey Markus. Guys, this is my cousin Markus.” The hostility in their gazes faded, ok, not a rival.

“Hey guys!” Markus waved cheerfully. “Can I steal my cousin for a little while? I need to ask her something.” The boys made sad sounds but agreed. “See ya later, guys~” Dillon waved with a sweet smile and the boys melted. Markus took the girl away and raised an eyebrow. “Aren’t you with Phillip?”

“I’m sure my baby would understand how lucky I am, we usually look at other men together.” Dillon shrugged. Mabel sighed. “Ok, anyway. Dipper is getting flirted at and I never get that when I’m a girl. Should I try flirting like a boy?”

Danna stroked her chin in thought. “Maybe it wouldn’t work. Not everyone is gay, for one.” Mabel realized that it would look kind of gay. “And you could get punched and I would hate that...why don’t you try flirting with girls the same way you do as a girl? See how girls react?”

Markus pouted. “But I don't like girls that way.” Dana laughed. “Well, you don't have to be serious about it. This is just for fun. Want me to come with you?”

“...maybe.” Markus admitted. He sighed. “Why is this so difficult?” Dana laughed. Dipper walked up to them, groaning. “Ugh...why're guys so...annoying!?” His sister/brother and cousin laughed at him. “You need to be more assertive with your refusal. And kick'em in the balls!” Markus laughed.

Dipper hummed, considering the option. “Yeah, I think I’ll do it! If they really can’t take a hint. What are you guys doing? The kids are with their parents already so I don’t have to babysit. ” he followed behind the other two. Markus ran his fingers through his hair “I'm gonna try and flirt with a woman to see if there's something wrong with my flirting method or if it's just the boys who are the problem.”

“And then we can find some gay guys for you to flirt with too.” Dana, the best wingman, suggested. Markus nodded. Dipper sighed. “I feel like this isn't going to end well...”

Markus spotted a group of girls sitting around chatting. “Alright. Let's do this!” he brushed his hands down his chest. “Alright. I'm hot, I'm single and I'm ready to mingle!” he walked over with a huge grin. “Hello! I'm Markus! And I think you're all really cute! So I thought I should introduce myself and get to know you all! I can start! My hobbies are knitting and arts and crafts!”

The women blinked at the young man and giggled. “Seriously?” One snorted. Markus nodded. “I've been knitting sweaters for myself and my family since I was 10. Oh, that's my cousin and my twin sister over there, we are on a family vacation!” He pointed at Danna and Dipper, who waved back, Danna was giving Markus two thumbs up. The women cooed. “Aw, that's so cute.”

They moved to make space. “So you think we're cute? Which one of us is the cutest?” One laughed. Markus hummed as he looked at them. “You've got really pretty eyes, they look like my favorite color of beads, but my real favorite color is rainbow.” The girl with the greenish eyes giggled. Markus turned to another one “And you are really rockin’ that one piece. The pattern really accentuates your figure and the color compliments your skin tone.” the girl with the dark skin looked down at herself with a smile. Markus turned to the last one “And I LOVE what you did with your hair. I can never get mine to curl like that.” Markus ran a hand through his curly hair. “Mine just goes all over the place no matter how much I brush it.”

The three young women laughed. “So...are you actually flirting to try and get with us or?”

Markus pouted. “Naw, I'm not actually into girls. No offense, but my flirting method with guys never turns out well so my cousin suggested I talk to some girls and see if there's a difference.” He shrugged and the girls all giggled. “Well, you're very enthusiastic. It's not bad though.”

Another one nodded. “It's actually too bad you're gay, you seem much nicer than some of the other men who've tried to flirt with us.” “Yeah, you've honest and upfront. And friendly. It's nice.”

Markus sat down with them, groaning. “I KNOW right? There was a group of them hounding my sister just now. Like, what the heck?” He sighed. “Worse is that I really wished they would come to ME like that! What's a guy to do to get some attention around here?”

Dipper stared slack jawed at Mabel/Markus easily chatting with the girls. “Is this really happening?” He groaned. Danna scratched her cheek and shrugged. “I don't think he's even flirting anymore. Looks like Markus just made some new friends.”

Meanwhile, back with the rest of the family, Sabrina was hugging her legs under an umbrella as she whined to herself. Dumb Bill2, dumb tattoo. She didn't want to wear a bikini anymore if her stupid tattoo was going to show all over! She thought her hair would cover it, but the wind would blow and then she had to cover herself. She looked around and found Walter’s shirt. There. Much better. Covered. Like it always should be...She glanced down at herself and groaned. Great. Now it seemed she was naked below because she was still wearing the lower part of the bikini.

She couldn't even get a hug because Walter was busy looking after the children.

A guy selling ice-cream walked by and Zoe screamed for Sab to buy them. “No. You're still in trouble.” Sab reminded them. “No dessert for the rest of the summer.” The twins gasped. “B-but Miz was the one who--”

“And Miz isn’t allowed any dessert until NEXT summer.” Sab pointed out. “Unless you two want to have her punishment too?” The two quickly shook their heads, looking horrified at the idea of no dessert for a year. Truly, attacking the mean old man was something that was really bad, since mommy and daddy never punished them THIS badly before!

“I want strawberry, honey!” The blond man grinned down at the twins, who gasped and tackled him down to the sand. “Uncle Walter, stand up! Throw me again!” Diego complained and the blond chuckled as he threw the kid to the air, making him squeal. The twins were laughing, waiting for their turn. Mom as a Dad was so cool! He was strong and really tall! And Dad as a Mom was cool too! She was so pretty and her hair was so long and soft!

“Well I’m gonna get ice cream for everyone who isn’t being punished right now.” Sab told them all before she went to the ice cream truck. She got the strawberry for Walter and some popsicles for everyone else and then came back to continue moping over her tattoo making it so she couldn’t show off her adorable swimsuit to everyone. She was sour now and she knew it wasn’t that big of a deal, wearing a shirt, but it just pissed her off and ruined everything.

That was about when Xin and Ford joined them.

Sebastian gaped but managed to smile. “Daamn! Who are you, and what have you done to my sister?!” Kari looked up and squealed loudly. Fania looked so adorable!! Kari was kind of trying to forget for a moment they were actually tall masculine men magically transformed. Let her live out her lifelong dream of having daughters.

Fania rubbed her arm awkwardly. The kids gasped and ran towards them. “Aunt Fannnyyy! You look so cute!” Zoe roared and hugged her actually- uncle’s legs. Ford had his face entirely red, but he managed to smile. “Thanks, Zoe…” Xin snorted quietly (“Fanny! Hah!”)

Diego also told him he looked pretty, just like Dad always said, and looked at Xin. “Xin, will my parents come now?” Xin smiled sheepishly. “No, sorry, champ. They were...not up for beach day.”

“Aww...they got angry with each other?” Diego asked sadly. Xin blushed slightly, remembering he saw the ‘Do not disturb’ sign being put out. “I can assure you they are more than happy with each other right now.” Walter and Sab coughed, blushing. Ford sat down in the sand and brushed his long hair out of the way. “Well, since Stan's stubbornness is what caused this whole mess, I do hope he and Carla can work this out.”

Xin coughed. “They're working out all right.” Sab swatted his arm. “You are such a perv, oh my god!” Xin laughed. “Well Shermie and Abigail aren't coming down either. So...it's just us today.” Ford spat his hair out of his mouth. “Pleh! Pleh! Can’t you make this shorter?! This is annoying!”

“NO!” Kari and Seb roared. “You look pretty that way, Stefania, suck it!” Kari scolded, having learned plenty of slang from her grandchildren. “Be grateful YOU CAN show off your back!” Seb crossed his arms jealously. Ford brushed back his hair again. Xin knelt down behind him. “Hold still, I'm going to braid it.”

“Braid it?” Ford sighed when he felt Xin’s hands stroking his long brown curly hair. Well, at least it felt nice~ Xin took the hair and separated the strands carefully so as not to pull at them. Sab leaned against her mom and the both of them cooed. They were enjoying this too much to be healthy. “Ma, you really would have liked it better if we were born girls?” Seb asked curiously. “What would you have done?” Xin sighed. “If you had been women, maybe...Filbrick wouldn't have hit you…”

Xin scowled. “Still think I should have ripped his eyes out…” Ford reached back to grip his hands. “No. That would have been bad. You...don't want to be bad. We won't LET you be bad. We won't let you become like the other Bill.” Ford was very worried about that, he didn’t want this Bill to go down that path.

Seb huffed. He knew Filbrick would have hit him anyway… “Nothing can stop that crazy asshole. He was even more insane than my past self, and I WAS insane.” He looked at the man. “But you are an adorable cutie pie.”

“I AM insane.” Xin pouted. Why didn't anyone take him seriously when he said so? “But not...in that way. Everyone's a little insane.” Seb shrugged. Xin grumbled. “I just want him punished for what he did to you…” Seb sighed as Wanda went over to hug her/son/daughter. “We know sweetie. But even if ripping out someone's eyes might be normal in space, it's not the right thing to do, there OR here. Earth has laws and customs and societal norms, and the murder or maiming of others is something that I as a lawyer cannot allow.”

“Which sucks!!” Seb moaned. Walter gave her a glare. They're supposed to be setting a good example for the children. Xin leaned back into his (current) father's embrace. “Stupid laws!” he grumbled.

“Daddy! Mommy!” Zach and Diego ran towards them. “We found a squishy thing! Can we touch it?” Zach asked excitedly. “A squishy thing?” Walter muttered, then his narrowed eyes widened. “Zoe, don’t touch it!!” He cried and ran to stop his daughter from touching the jellyfish. Knowing her, she’d want to take it back to the hotel.

Walter ran across the sand, the sun glimmering off his muscles and a flock of women all stared as he ran past. “Oh my god. Did you just see that guy?” One asked. Another was fanning herself as her eyes remained glued to his backside. “Finally! There's just been teenagers all over this damn beach!” Another was already walking in his direction “Finally, a real man!”

Innocent Walter, unaware the hunters had chosen him as prey, finally got to Zoe who was luckily only touching the bell of the (luckily) dead jellyfish. “Wait, no! That’s a jellyfish, you can get hurt!” He pouted. “Go, go with your mommy.” He ushered her back in the direction of Sab and he sighed. He should call a lifeguard or something to take this thing away. Some other little kid could get hurt...

The women sighed, seeing the sexy man saving a poor little girl from the horrible beast. They made their move. They were friends vacationing together and what a godsend to see this beautiful hunk of a man! “That was so brave…” One of them sighed dramatically. Walter blinked. “Um...not really?” He wasn't sure what they meant by that.

“Running so quickly just to save a child from a jellyfish.” Another woman sighed as she came closer and placed a hand on Walter's arm. Walter blinked “Um. Yeah, of course. This is dangerous.”

They smiled and one of them slowly traced his muscled arm. “You’re so strong~ You must lift weights, no~?” One of them purred. Walter shook his head nervously. What was going on!? “We were wondering if you would like to keep us company...We aren’t from around here…”

“What? Company?” He muttered. Was being a man making him slow to understand stuff? The woman giggled and ‘accidentally’ bumped their breasts on his arms and chest. “Yeah, to have a drink!” Oh...Oh! “Wait, I can’t” Luckily for him, Zach ran towards him. “Daddy, I can’t find your wallet and I want a snack!” He paused. “And it’s not a dessert snack.”

All the women stopped at once. The kid looked exactly the same as the one this sexy guy just saved. Were they his?! And twins?!

“You have kids?” Suddenly he felt much less desirable. Walter smiled widely, super proud. “Yeah, three! An older daughter and twins!” he subtly shook their hands off. “And a lovely wife whom I love more than anything!” He said loudly. The women all slumped in disappointment.
Sabrina looked over and waved. “Walter~the kids want snacks that aren’t ice-cream! I don’t know if that counts against their punishment though.” The women all stared at the wife.

They all froze as Sab made his way over to them, holding hands with the little blonde girl from earlier. The sun was glimmering off her smooth, silky skin and her lovely hair curls bounced as she walked.

“Whatcha say, Mr. Law man?” Sab stopped when she saw the women surrounding her husband. She narrowed her eye but didn’t want to start a scene. Instead, she brushed her hair back, letting the luscious locks wave through the air. “Oh Walter~the sun’s getting hotter. Can we all go get some iced drinks together~?”

Walter stuttered incoherently, unable to think straight, and only managed to nod at her. The kids happily grabbed their hands and they went back with everyone. The woman scowled. Lucky bitch. She wasn’t even that cute! She didn’t even have an eye! She didn’t deserve him!

They gasped in offense when Sab turned her head at them and flipped them off with 2 middle fingers on one hand. Sab huffed. Who did they think they were? Trying to steal HER man! Seb blinked. His woman, right. Wow, this spell was strong. He looked up at the blond. Wanda didn’t seem to mind, she looked like she took it really well and was adapting fast to being a man.

The little family cheerfully went to get more something cold to drink. No dessert meant no ice cream, but iced soda was fine. Walter also said that candy, pastries, cakes and other sweets were included in the ‘no dessert’ punishment. Fruit was fine.

“UUUGH YOU’RE TRYING TO KILL US!” Zoe complained. “Well, you were trying to kill a human being.” Walter scolded. “And murder is wrong. This will let you know that.”

“No, we didn’t! We wanted to scare him and hurt him, but not kill him!” Zach explained solemnly.

“It still isn’t right to hurt someone else if they aren’t trying to hurt you first. I know he hurt Sebastian when he was a child, and that is WRONG, but you still shouldn’t hurt him. Punishing bad men like that is my job.”

“So… are you going to punish the bad man?” Zach asked. Walter sighed. “It was a long time ago, it’d be harder to press charges, especially since Sebas is an adult now. The easiest thing to do would be suing him for it.”

“Grrrr!” The twins hissed before running away like the little gremlins they were. Sab hugged Walter’s arm onto her breasts with a fond grin. “Well, I don’t want to bother pressing charges. I just don’t want anything to do with him. I think letting him live and die all alone with no one around is a better punishment. He’s alone. Mom left him. That’s punishment enough.” Sab grinned, a little evilly. Walter nodded at that, accepting Sab’s choice.

“If that’s what you want to do.” Sab grinned and stood up on her toes to kiss Walter. Judging by the blush and happy smile on Walter’s face, he really enjoyed it. Walter pulled her closer to him. He put his big hands on her hips as he rested his chin on her head. “I love you, Sab…” He whispered.

“Love you too, Walt.” Sab nuzzled her husband. This...was going to be an odd week, but she didn't think it would be bad.Sab wondered if they could...enjoy themselves tonight~

After all, Stan and Shermie were already trying it out, it was only fair if she got to try as well...um, she briefly wondered if Xin and Ford would try as well...

Chapter 31

-Fun in the sun-

----

After they got bored of swimming and playing in the sand, Kari and Xin demanded that they all needed to go clothes shopping. For that, everyone had to go get ready first. Take a bath to get rid of the sand and wet clothes and put on some others. It took a while, they were a lot of people and they had little kids who still needed help.

It also took longer than necessary because the teens and Ford were refusing to take a bath. Seb rolled his eye. He had knocked on Stan and Shermie’s doors to inform them about the shopping trip and he had the decency to blush when Stan opened the door, wrapped up in a blanket, looking disheveled and completely happy.

“Well, did you finish having sex with Carla?” Seb crossed his arms. “Get ready, we’re going to buy clothes.” Stania nodded slowly. “Not done yet! But she passed out after our third round…” She grinned. “But we can go shopping…” Seb (blushing) was sure that after having all this time for themselves they wouldn’t mind taking a shower.

When he went back to the teens and Ford, Xin was still trying to get them to take a bath. “Seriously, it's your own body. You can't go out covered in sand!”

“Nope! I will never take a bath, I prefer being a sand monster.” Mabel crossed her arms over her now flat chest. Dipper imitated her. “Yeah, I’m not taking a bath either. Change us back.”

“I can’t change you back right now, the curse is set. Sorry ‘bout that by the way.” Xin deadpanned. “Now get your asses to your rooms and PLEASE take a damn shower!” He kept quiet about how he’d be able to break the Curse at any time. He just didn’t want to.
Dillon sighed defeatedly. He didn’t want to admit this, but he wanted to go to the bathroom, so he would have to see his body eventually. “Can I get paid? Consider you just modified my chromosomes and I am a shocked innocent victim because of my parents’ fuckery.”

Xin tilted his head before handing Dillon a pearl necklace. Seb groaned and stepped up to take the pearls before Dillon could. “Stop that. You can't just keep handing these out.” Xin pouted. “But they're pearls. Not gold. It won't mess with the inflation for gold value!”

“Um, teen waiting for their pearl necklace here? Aunt Sab?” Dillon pouted impatiently. “I will even wash my hair with a hair conditioner or whatever the other bottle is for.” Seb sighed and handed him the necklace. Danna grinned and ran to her room. She wasn’t lying, she actually was starting to get annoyed at the sand that had gotten between her breasts.

Xin turned to the twins. Mabel blushed as she looked down at herself. “I mean...I won't say I'm not...interested to know what I look like but...I don't know if I can...I mean, a bath means I'll have to touch it!” She gestured vaguely to her lower half.

“Same.” Dipper deadpanned. Xin rolled his eyes. “Well, maybe if you try…” Dipper shook his head. “Nope. Never. I don't want to.”

“...have you never touched a woman's body before?” Xin questioned. “Not even Llama's?”

“Not like... that way…” Dipper rubbed her arm. “We just kiss…” He admitted. Mabel booed. Xin waved for her to stop. “Hey, he's going at his own pace. Just because you're dating doesn't mean you HAVE to have sex. That's stupid and problematic.” Xin turned to Dipper and placed his hands on his (her?) shoulders. “It's fine if you haven't gotten that far. You shouldn't feel pressured into doing it just because people expect you to.” Xin gave her a comforting smile. “What matters is your comfort and how YOU and Llama feel. Ok?”

Dipper smiled gratefully at him. “Thanks, Xin…” The dragon nodded. “You're welcome.” Seb rolled his eyes. “Well, you still need to take a bath, virgin or not.”

Dipper and Mabel whined. Xin scoffed. “You SHOULD do this. After all, I bet your school didn't teach you shit about sexual education, this will be a good learning experience. It’s literally your body! And wouldn't you rather learn here, with your own bodies, where it's safe, than when you're actually trying to do it with your partner in the future?” He looked back and forth between them. “Wouldn't you like to learn how this works so that when you DO decide to get with someone in the future, you have an idea of how it works?”

The twins grumbled, annoyed. They knew Xin was (sort-of) right and it actually made sense. Stil...embarrassing. “We want money as well.” Markus finally declared. Seb rolled his eye. Kids these days...

“Try not to spend it all in one place.” Xin muttered as he handed each of them a pearl necklace as well. Xin paused. “Where are you even going to exchange that after we kinda...got the pawn shop closed down?” Seb sniggered. “There are other pawn shops. I can show you guys around after we're done showering.”

The twins nodded and left for their room. They’ll have to take turns... Seb and Xin turned their attention onto Ford. “So. Why are you still here? Please tell me you aren't even more embarrassed than the CHILDREN about this?” Sab glared.

Xin looked at his hands. “Do you want pearls to go take a bath as well?” He was going to need more food after this. Maybe he should start feeding more actively on the emotions around here to Ford sighed loudly. “I still find this change...uncomfortable. You should have only changed Stanley and Carla.” Sab gasped. “And let Stan go through this on his own? Where is your sisterly love?”

Xin blushed. “I was kinda annoyed and hit all of you with the Curse. The children and granny were exempt since they didn't fall under the parameters at the time.” He tugged at a lock of his hair. “Sorry.” Seb wrapped an arm around Ford's tense shoulders. “Fordsie, this is cool, and weird! Don’t you like weird things? Please~ Ma really wants to spend some time with us! Um...do it for science!” He pleaded, knowing that word convinced his brother to do almost anything.

“I think that’s called body dysphoria or something.” Xin rubbed his chin, “I’m not sure what terms are anymore. I think that’s right?”

Seb pouted hard. “I know that you might not be liking this...but it really isn’t that bad as a temporary thing…” He said softly. “We are still triplets, we’re still the same, being women doesn’t change that. You’re still our oldest sibling and the most intelligently dumb genius to ever exist!”

Ford sighed. “I guess, but I feel how I feel.” Xin hugged her. “Would you like me to manually remove the mental dissonance so you didn’t feel so uncomfortable? It might be a little difficult with that metal plate though…”

Ford lifted her glasses to run a hand across her face. He didn’t think it could work...and he’d appreciate not having Xin trying to get in his mind, even if he was a good Bill. “I...no, it...I can bear it for seven days…” He said softly, almost to himself. Seb smiled widely and hugged him. “Yes! You're best! Hey, how about you take this as an experiment? Measure how the spell affected us all and all that stuff...Scientific method~” He sing-songed.

Ford sighed. Looks like he would have to. “Well, I suppose I may as well. But I'm not going to like it.” He slumped off to his room. Finally, it was just Sab and Xin. “Aren't you going to take a shower?” Sab asked her son. Xin sighed. “Well Ford's got the bathroom. I'll have to wait.” Xin's stomach growled. “-and I think I'm going to head down for some food first.”

Seb nodded. “Alright. Have fun I guess.” He waved bye to Xin as the dragon headed back downstairs. Xin opened up his empathic senses to start actively absorbing the emotions in the air. He normally had it turned off nowadays (as much as he could with something like this at least), and shielded himself when they were out in public due to getting overloaded, but maintaining this curse and the perception filter was draining from him constantly so he might be alright with opening back up.

Xin stumbled a little as the emotions flooded in. All the guests and workers at the hotel. Keeping his empathy closed for so long made it surge out once he let go. The range slowly shrank back to the usual area. He moaned softly as he felt his power fill back up, his abilities converting emotions into pure energy. Frustration. Joy. Excitement. Worry. Lust. Confusion. Irritation. Xin shook his head, there were so many flavors. He went downstairs to the dining hall and passed a few groups of women who turned to stare at the shirtless man.

Lust.

Xin stumbled slightly. Oh. That was a huge spike in emotion right there. One of the women reached out to grab his arm before he could fall. “Are you alright?” She blushed as her eyes roamed down this handsome man's bare chest. Lust.
Xin shook his head. “Ah...I'm fine, just a little tired from being in the sun earlier.” He pulled his arm from her grip. “S-sorry, I don't like getting grabbed like this. Thank you for catching me though.” Xin swayed as the waves of emotions hit him and were absorbed. Maybe this had been a bad idea. Probably shouldn’t have gone without his headband.

The group of women began to surround him. “No problem. Say, are you free right now?” One asked as she allowed her eyes to roam around his form. Xin was still dressed in only his swim trunks and sandals. She and her friends had failed with that hot blond earlier but this more delicate piece of man meat didn't have a wedding ring. Lust.

Xin blushed as he felt himself start to grow warm at the intense flavor in the air. “W-well I was going to go eat a late lunch…” the women all grinned. “Then, can we accompany you? We're here on vacation and don't know anyone except each other.” they came closer and Xin shrugged. “I guess? I'm just going to be eating though…”

“That's fine.” one woman said, looking down at the nice curve of his butt. Another was admiring his slanted eyes. How exotic. Lust.

Xin was blushing pretty hard now. He tried to extract himself politely from the group. “Um, c-can I get to the dining room please? You're kind of...in my way…” He managed to get past them, having to slide through them and made a run for the dining room. Women were scary.

To his dismay, they followed him. The group giggled at how shy this man was. Xin, meanwhile, was trying to muffle some moans as the energy he was absorbing started to affect him. The saturation of Lust was making him feel warm and pleasant all over. Xin quickly cut his powers off. Nope. Too much. No more please. He clamped down his Empathy and held it.

His stupid body had been about to react. That would have been embarrassing. Unfortunately, just because he cut off the absorption, didn't stop the women from sitting down at his table and trying to talk to him. At least he wasn't being overloaded by lust anymore.

“Ooh and where do you come from?” “Are you all alone here?” “If you want we can keep you company…” Another woman slowly traced his hand with a finger. Xin pulled away. He didn't like this! Stupid sexy body! What could he do to get food and get these women off him?

“G-Guys, I-I-I have a girlfriend!” He suddenly burst out without thinking. “Y-Yeah, a girlfriend! Her name is Stefania, she’s a mad genius, and-and pretty and-and I’m with her and it’s definitely not a lie.” He blushed as he lied, not used to directly lying in such a way. (He was usually much better at it! Damn distractions! That’s what he got for being so down in his vessel, letting physical sensation affect him!) But, if he was honest...being with Fordie wouldn’t be...bad. Besides, everyone already thought they were together...he doubted Stanford would want to be with him though. (Not to mention Blue would be SO unbearable if he found out his precious little sister might have a bit of a ‘squirmy feelings’ for someone, and a Stanford on top of that.)

The women easily picked up on the lie, grinning like sharks. Aw~he was shy~that made this more fun for them~ one took hold of his arm in a light hug, making him stiffen and it was only all his sessions with Ford that stopped him from throwing her off him. “A girlfriend? Really?” Xin shuddered. Another wave of Lust, it was harder to block it out when they were directly touching. He clamped down on his Empathy with all his mental strength. No. No more. He hid a hand beneath the table and formed a modified headband as a bracelet. And yeah, he wasn’t wearing the cyber gauntlet, didn’t think he needed it. And it felt weird when he was playing in the sand.
To his embarrassed horror, his stupid body was beginning to react. Especially when the women began playing with his hair and squeezing his arms. “It's so soft, what conditioner do you use?” One marveled. “It's not even tangled despite the salty sea air.” “Your skin is so soft~”

Xin clamped his legs together (glad for the long table cloth) and gently pushed the women off him. “Please stop. I'm not comfortable with this.” He glared. Enough was enough. His power hummed under his flesh, his instincts begging (demanding) him to do something awful to these women for daring to touch him.

“What~but you're clearly enjoying the attention~” one pointed out and Xin cursed at the fact that he was only wearing swim trunks. He blushed as he covered himself. “Just ‘cause my body likes it, doesn't mean I want this!” he growled. The women sighed. “Why not? Are we not good enough for you?” “Come on, this is our vacation~” “It's not like we want a full relationship~just a little fling~for fun!”

Xin growled. “That's the problem! I don't like flings! If I'm going to do something like this, not that I even want to, it would need to be with someone I love and trust! Not some random strangers!” he cried vehemently. The women looked taken aback. Weren't men supposed to like sex? One of them sighed. “Alright. If you really feel that strongly…” they looked disappointed. To Xin's relief, they left.

Which meant Xin had to sit there, hiding his boner under the table and wait for the damn thing to go away. Stupid physical reactions to lust energy...

At least he wasn't hungry anymore. This was plenty energy to get him through the rest of the day. (Lust was really a powerful source of energy… well, he understood now why the Succubus race were so hooked on it as a source of nutrition.)

Alright, Xin, calm down! Think of un sexy things! Think of unsexy things! He screamed in his mind. Stupid body, stupid! To his incredible relief, his boner went away. He simply thought about cute puppies and kittens. Wholesome and not sexy.

Before he was preyed on again by scary women, he went upstairs to his room to get ready himself. He sighed. That was so close…but he was proud of his self-control. He was really glad for his sessions with Fordsie (else he’d have shoved them bodily off him, or even hurt them in his panic to get away), he should have listened to Jessie earlier (about getting someone to do the exposure thing, for desensitization). He went to the room he was supposed to be sharing with Zach and Zoe. Zach was with Walter in his room for the shower and Xin could hear Zoe and Sabrina showering here.

He debated if he should turn back into Miz, just to avoid such incidents in the future. Xin went to sit on his bed and sighed. He liked being sexy. He designed his forms to be sexy. But he didn't really think of what that would mean. Xin was a nature god, worshipped and revered by his people, they would never dare to try and seduce him like that, it was disrespectful. And blasphemous! And Jan had bodyguards specifically to prevent such attempts. He had never really dealt with this sort of thing before on a personal, up close level.

Sure there were the occasional idiot summoner who thought they could entice Bill Cipher for sex as payment for a Deal (Ewww) but they never really got a reaction out of him. He simply wasn't interested and those people had never really desired him for his body. But people desired him like this. Xin stood in front of the mirror and trailed his hands down his body. He made himself sexy, but he'd never thought of himself as desirable.

Xin sighed, unsure how to feel. He liked looking hot, but he didn't like other people reacting to his hotness and being touchy feely with him. He made himself sexy for his own enjoyment, not for other people. He didn't want to change his appearance, he worked hard to design Xin. Frankly, he didn't know what to do.

The sounds of the shower cut off and Xin decided he would ask Sabrina about it. Maybe she/he would know.

He laid down facing the ceiling as the two came out. Sabrina, wrapped with a towel around her chest (this was so much easier when one had breasts to support it instead of a flat chest), sighed loudly when she forgot to bring clothes. Guess she’ll have to wait for Walts to finish. “Zoe, go grab what you want to wear.” She instructed the little girl enveloped in a crocodile bathrobe. Zoe nodded and went to the drawer where she put all her clothes, all by herself!

“Daddy, will you be a mommy forever?” She asked curiously. “No, just a week.” Seb sighed and the girl looked up at her. “Oh, ok. I think you and mommy look nice this way too. Mommy is a lot, a lot, a lot bigger than you as a boy. Like, this big!” She climbed to the bed and jumped to show just how tall her new daddy was.

Seb laughed and walked over to jumping girl with some shorts and underwear to dress her up, seeing Zoe was too distracted right now. “Yeah, she’s taller.” Zoe looked at Sab’s chest, half covered with the towel, and she curiously put her little hands over her mother's chest to feel them and poke them. She hugged her, resting her face between the soft chest...and bit her.

“OOOWWWW!” Sabrina shrieked and pulled Zoe off her. “Ow! What the fuck?! Why did you bite me?!” She whined, and rubbed her aching chest. Zoe pouted. “But they're so soft and I thought they would be chewy…”

“You don't bite breasts!??” Sab scolded her daughter, with a very confused and worried expression “Just, don't bite people in general! Or I’ll have to bite you back!” (Like Blue had suggested.)

“Not fair! You bite people too! You already bite me!”

“I don’t bite you hard, and that’s not true, I stopped biting people!” ...well, he bit people less, he thought to himself. (Ok, no wonder Zoe never learned, she saw her dad doing it too… Seb resolved to be a better role model.) Zoe pouted. She thought it would be ok. “I’m sowy, mommy.” She also bit real mommy, but she never shouted like daddy did. She was going to stop, she didn’t want to hurt her. She started biting her finger instead.

“Zoe, stop that. When I say no biting, I mean no biting yourself either.” Sab sighed. Seb knew, she was being a hypocrite, but she wanted Zoe to grow up...not like her. Xin took that time to speak up. “Have you tried giving her chewing gum? The no sugar kind?”

Sab frowned. She was a little young to have chewing gum, but she guessed it was better than having Zoe hurt herself with the little needles she had as teeth. And perhaps Seb should try if it works for him too. “Ok, we can get chewing gum, ok? The non-sugar kind because cavities suck. But first, let’s get changed.” She motioned for the giggling girl to get closer to dress her up.

As they dressed, Xin commented “Hey Sab?” Sabrina hummed “What’s up?” She wasn't really paying attention, more focused on getting Zoe into her clothes. “How do I keep people from lusting over me?”

“Uh?” The woman blinked. She stopped half way in getting Zoe into her t-shirt and the girl shrieked. She was trapped! Help!! “From, lusting over you? Well...that isn’t something you can stop, I think. People will look at you, naked or covered from head to toe if they find you
“Some ladies earlier tried to solicit me. They touched me even when I told them I wasn't interested…” Xin rolled onto his side. “I don't want them to do that.” Sab's eyes went wide. “They TOUCHED you?!” she growled. Xin nodded, curling in on himself. Sab wanted to find these women who dared to molest his brother/son and bite THEM.

“They were letting out a lot of Lust and even made my body react...I...didn't like it…” Xin admitted quietly. His tail came out to curl around the blankets for comfort.

“Oh, Xin, I’m so sorry to hear that.” Seb sat down next to him, ignoring Zoe who fell to the floor as she tried pulling her t-shirt down, and hugged him. “That was not nice, but while there are assholes everywhere, like those women and the bitches trying to flirt with Wands, there are respectful people too, who wouldn’t touch you. I think it was just bad luck…” She rubbed his shoulder. “Do you want us to go hunt them down?”

Xin shrugged. “I don't know. I want to do something horrible to them, but I think that would be considered ‘bad’ right?” It was Sab’s time to shrug. “Yeah...to some people. But morality is relative!” She grinned. “And if it was me, I would have hurt them...though, as Wands is my conscience for human morals, I guess it relies on me to tell you, don’t do it and we can forget about the incident by shopping.”

Xin smiled. “I'd like that.” Sab gave him a hug. “Well, go take a shower then.” Xin nodded and sat up, resolving to put this behind him and just enjoy himself. He went to the bathroom, still warm and misted up from the previous shower, and pulled his swim trunks off.

He couldn't help but brush the condensation off the mirror so he could look at himself. He blushed a little as he posed, naked in front of the mirror. He shook his butt and muffled a laugh, that was a nice butt. He remembered designing this body and having too much fun making the butt larger and larger. He placed a hand on it, so round and soft. He blushed.

R-right. He came in for a shower. He almost tripped in his haste to get in and slide the curtains closed. Damn. Now he really wanted to touch himself. The lust he'd absorbed earlier was still buzzing under his skin. It would take a while to convert it into pure energy without the emotional flavor but he could get it done much faster by indulging in the lust to get it out of his system.

He did this before and after Jan's concerts too sometimes.

Xin blushed. How long had it been since he'd last indulged? And...wouldn't it be better if he got this lust out of his system before they went shopping? He checked to make sure the curtain was fully closed and allowed his mental barrier to drop.

Eventually, he got up and finished washing himself off. Ugh. Stupid Lust. The other emotions he fed on would make him happy or sad or agitated or whatever, but Lust always affected his physical body and it was really annoying. He ended up using magic to clean his hair since he was taking too long in here and finally turned off the water after he scrubbed down the tiles to make sure all traces of his fun were cleaned off.
He squeezed some of the water out of his hair and sighed. He did feel a lot better after getting that out of his system. He also felt mildly ashamed for having to do so. He blushed, he didn't fantasize about being fucked very often, he normally fantasized about watching other people get fucked. Xin shook his head. Well, whatever, it's done, he was satisfied and he had a nice day of shopping to look forward to.

As Xin took a shower, Sabrina called Walter. She pouted and told him to bring her his clothes. Walter laughed at her, rude, but he agreed. He was changed and Zachary was dressed up as well. When Miz changed them, she also somehow changed the clothes they were wearing at the moment. They looked the same, but they were adapted to fit their new taller or shorter frames. In case of the former men, they got bras, but Seb was sure his brothers and nephews threw them away the second they noticed they were wearing them.

They had to wear the same clothes again, but at least they were going to buy some new clothes for the week, and if they didn’t put on the magic bra, he’d force them to get one.

She thanked the blond when he brought her clothes and quickly changed to check on her sisters. First she went to Abraham and Shelly. Good, they were ready. And aaw~, He helped her put on her bra! That’s so sweet. So mature~ The older twins were ready as well. Mabel definitely forced her brother to wear it, haha. He high-sixed her for the good job of getting Dipper dressed. Dillon was ready as well, watching cartoons with Diego, both curled up on a bed. He cooed loudly at them. He was scared of going to Stan and Carla, and when he heard a “Over my dead body you are putting that on me!” He decided not to bother, he trusted Carla to get Stan to suck it up.

Finally, he went to check on her oldest sister/brother. She knocked on the door. “Fordsie, is me! Your favorite sister! Can I come in?”

The voice that replied was kind of muffled but she heard the ‘Come in’. Seb entered the room and closed the door once again. Turns out Ford was in the bathroom. “You ok?”

“Urgh! Damn it!! Ye-Yeah!” Sab leaned back. “Do you need help with something?” She made a shitty grin. If it was what she thought it was…

Haha! There it was! Sabrina stood up and opened the bathroom’s door. Fania screamed angrily, holding the damn piece of underwear he couldn't put on his chest. Seb cackled as the older woman shouted. “Get out!”

“I can’t believe you’re really putting it on willingly! You’re the only one besides me who did so, congratulations!” Sab grinned widely. Ford growled and sat down on the toilet lid. She was wearing pants already, that was good. “I didn’t want to...but this” She gestured at her chest. “Was bothering me too much to be bearable and I guessed that if it had some kind of support-”

“A bra.” Seb said usefully and Ford grumbled. “Yeah, that. But I can’t put it on! What kind of useless contraption is this?! It’s impossible!” He just wanted to put the damn thing on and his shirt (which had been shrunk and cut in a more ‘feminine’ form, much to his shock), and be over with this already.

Sebas laughed and nodded. “Ok, here, let me help.” He ordered the sulking woman to turn around and easily strapped it on her back. While her breasts weren’t small, by a glance Sab could see all his sisters’ were slightly bigger. Fair, they were much larger than him. Ford gaped at him. “What?
How did you do it so fast?"

“Well, I have a wife, and I’m not a dumb nerd like you, I’ve seen how bras work.” He teased. Ford huffed. “Whatever.” He grabbed his shirt and angrily put it on. He looked up, seeing Seb admiring his long hair. “Seb...did you want to be a woman?” He just wanted to know, he was taking this too well. Sab shrugged. “I don’t mind either, I would have complained the same if I was reborn as your sister...I think I don’t see much of a difference...and I think it comes from the fact that in my past self humans were just humans…” She explained softly. “Being a woman is nice too, and...I feel nice, pretty, I guess, prettier…” It was harder to imagine himself as the monster or freako and other negative things with this female body.

Ford hummed. “Bill doesn't mind being male or female either, maybe it's an alien thing?” he wanted to write this down. Sab shrugged.

“I don’t know, I am not an alien.” He reminded him with a smile. “But I don’t really care if I am honest. Just try to enjoy the positive things about this, make Stan learn not to be so sexist, maybe you can learn a little more about women this way~ Now move it. Because we’ve taken too long already.”

Ford laughed lightly. “Alright.” He quickly got dressed and they met up with everyone else outside. “Where's Xin?”

“I think he's still in the shower, he went after all of us after all.” Sab said. She went to the twins and Miz's room and saw Xin stepping out of the bathroom with a towel wrapped around his chest. “Hey, we're all ready and waiting on you.” Sab and Fania grinned. Xin blinked and laughed. “Well then it's a good thing I can just do this…” He flicked his fingers and was dried instantly, he squeaked when his hair fluffed up.

Sab snorted. Xin blushed as he brushed his hair out of his face. “Not funny.” He mumbled. Sab laughed outright. “Yes it was!”

Xin took off his towel to reveal a simple t-shirt and shorts. “Whatever, let's go shopping!” they left the room with Sab muffling laughter and Xin pulling his hair into a ponytail. He also made sure his tail was hidden away.

“Alright, let's hit the stores!” Kari, Markus and Sab cheered. Most of the family rolled their eyes. “What's the point of spendin’ money to buy clothes just for the week?” Stan grumbled. He wasn't wearing a bra and had stolen one of Ford's turtlenecks when Carla told him his nipples were showing through his shirt. He was glad Ford was weird enough to bring a turtleneck to New Jersey...in summer.

It was...unfair. If his nipples were showing as a man, no one said anything, but when he was a woman, he was suddenly wrong. What a shitty shit.

Kari sighed. “Just indulge your mother, dear.” Stan grumbled and nodded. “I ain't paying for this.” He pointed out. Carla kissed his forehead. “I will pay all you want, dear.”

Xin held up a hand “I can turn some sand into pearls? It'll be easier than making them from scratch.”

“Oh~ Money!” Stan’s face lit up and everyone rolled their eyes. Xin went to the shore and, making sure no one was watching, he made some pearls for everyone. Stan was kind of right, they shouldn’t spend on clothes they would wear for only a week, this was his way of apologizing. Everyone did stare at him oddly when he shoved a handful of sand into his mouth.
“Doesn’t that...taste awful?” Dipper grimaced. Xin nodded. He spat out the pearls and gagged.
“Ugh. This is so much worse when I actually have taste buds...” he coughed. “I demand ice cream to make up for this awful experience.”

“Soda. No ice cream.” Zoe reminded him usefully. Xin groaned. “But I can’t drink sodaaaaaa!”
Sab snorted. “Then suffer.”

Stan was scooping up the pearls, marveling at them. “Huh...they're pink.” He grinned. “That's gonna make them worth MORE!” He squealed. Ok. Now he wouldn’t mind buying some stuff.
The money wasn’t his! He reluctantly gave everyone, except the kids, a bunch of pearls.

“I think we should spend this care-who am I kidding! Let’s go waste all this money!” He shouted and the Pines chanted. “Money! Money!”

Ford sighed. Why was his family like this? He followed along and tried not to feel embarrassed (failing horribly) at the people staring at his group chanting “Money! Money!” He felt a hand curl around his and saw Xin grinning down at him. “Just laugh at those dorks, Fordsie.”

“Do you wanna go off and buy me an ice cream?” The dragon begged.

Ford looked at the pleading slanted eyes and smiled. “You’re still being punished, so no.” He quickly added, when he saw Xin’s smile drop, “But other snacks are ok. As long as they’re not desserts.” Xin perked back up, wiggling his hips back and forth. “Okay!” The dragon laughed and ran off in the direction of the stores, pulling Ford along behind him.

Ford noticed them attracting some glances and ducked his head. Xin seemed more interested in getting a snack. They got to the food stalls along the boardwalk and Xin scanned through the options. Huh. Same kinda shops as back in Brother’s dimensional set. “Ooh~Can I get a box of cheese curds?” He asked the cashier. She nodded and glanced at Ford. Ford shook his head “I’m fine.” The cashier nodded and placed in the order. “That'll be $2.89 please.”

She looked at Xin but Xin turned to Ford, since he didn't actually have any cash. “Fania?” Ford laughed and took out his wallet. Some of the other patrons in the food stall frowned. After Ford paid and Xin cheerfully skipped in place with his snack, a woman and her boyfriend came up to them. “You're making your girlfriend pay for you?” She huffed.

Ford and Xin blinked in confusion. “I don't have my wallet.” Xin shrugged. Well, he didn't have any human money...hm...he should ask mom and Seb about getting an allowance. He babysat the twins lots of times!

Ford blushed. He wasn’t Xin’s girlfriend. He-he wasn’t even his boyfriend! Xin wouldn’t want to be with him anyway. He proved with Cathy that he totally sucked at relationships. “I-I don’t see what’s wrong if I pay for him, even if he had his wallet…I do it all the time.” He mumbled to the couple. The woman gasped. She glared at Xin. “Aren't you a man? You should take care of your girl.”

“Excuse me?” Xin blinked. “I mean...I do feel kinda bad about making Fania pay for me all the time, but I don't have money…”

“And he doesn’t need to take care of me! I am perfectly capable of taking care of myself even as a woman!” Fania spat at the couple. She turned to look at Xin. “You shut up, If I cared, I would have told you!”

Xin smiled softly. “Oh. Thanks Fania.” He nuzzled Ford's head. The scientist gave him a hug.
“Come on, Xin. We should go catch up to the others.” They left the stall, hand in hand.

The rude couple shook their heads. Feminazis ruining traditional relationships....

Xin caught that thought and frowned. “I bet they don't even know the definition of feminism…” he muttered. He licked at his cheese curds, his tongue was longer than a normal human one so he easily reached into the little box, disregarding the fork entirely, as he curled around the snack and pulled it back up into his mouth. Jan’s body had a longer tongue, but he didn’t need a tongue that long for eating snacks! He did feel bad that Ford was always paying for him though. “Are you sure you don't mind paying for me all the time? I can ask mom and Seb about getting me my own bank account?”

“You don't have a job. I do. And I make enough money to buy you some silly snacks.” Ford rolled his eyes. “Don’t listen to people who can't mind their own business, don't worry about it. Besides, you're always helping me with my experiments and teaching me stuff.” he squeezed Xin's hand. “And you're taking care of my brother and his family. That's more than enough payment.”

“...O-Ok.” Xin nodded, twining his fingers between Ford's “Thanks.” He licked a cheese curd while he felt his face heating up for some reason, he even forgot about the gross taste of sand...Fania didn’t let go of his hand, and he found he didn’t mind. The two made it back to the others, Xin being able to See where they were, and walked into the clothing store to find Kari already pulling out dresses to put her children into.

“Ah, there you are, Fania! Just in time! Here. Try this one on.” Kari squealed as she held up a pink and white monstrosity. Ford screamed and turned pleading eyes onto Xin. “Help?” Xin laughed. “Sorry, even I can't go against granny Kari.”

“Noo!” Ford was dragged off and Xin finished his snack with a grin. He yelped when Markus pulled on his arm. “Come on, Danna and I want to see you in some sexier clothes too!” He purred. Xin blinked. “Can I toss out my trash first?” Markus crossed his arms like the impatient boy he was. “Fine. Make it quick.”

Xin tossed the empty box into the trashcan and Markus pulled him over to the other side of the store where the men's clothing were.

Danna was ready and waiting with a whole stack of clothes. Xin noted that there seemed to be a lot of leather. The cousins grinned at him as they pushed him into the changing room. Xin didn't mind, back in his first life, her friends had made her try on all sorts of cute clothes too. She was small and they loved putting her in all the clothes they liked but couldn't wear because it didn't come in their size. So being used as a dress up doll felt rather nostalgic.

Xin hung up the clothes and pulled down the first one. Oh~this was actually pretty nice~ he hummed cheerfully and wondered if the Pines were having as much fun as he was.

“Ma...please stop...I'm gonna die…” Stan whined as Kari and Carla fusses over his hair. “Should we tie it up?” “No, leave it down, it frames her face so nicely.” Stan pulled at his skirt, trying to make it cover more of his legs.

Walter and Abraham were sitting outside the changing room, laughing their heads off. They wanted to find some clothes for themselves, but they wanted to see the triplets and Shermie first. Their pained expressions, sans Seb, were something they couldn’t miss.
As Kari and Carla took care of Stan, Seb was fixing up his older sibling. “Fordsie, I swear this blouse looks good on you! You don’t even need to wear heels with this!! And these shorts look perfect on you!”

“Help me! My integrity is being violated!” Fania wailed. Seb opened the door and the two came out. She was wearing a really cute strapless yellow and white summer dress, high heeled sandals and her hair down, while Fania’s first outfit was a baby blue short sleeved blouse, white shorts and for now barefeet.

“Hey guys! How do we look?!” The men gaped.

“Beautiful as fuck.” Walter gasped. Fuck, he couldn’t stop staring at Sabrina’s chest! And her slender legs, and the way her hips pushed the dress just perfectly- Gah! He felt like a pervert! Stupid new male hormones!

They didn’t realize this, but the sudden sex change made their hormone levels drastically different than they were used to, making them all going through something similar to teenage horniness from their bodies ‘changing’. It was why Carlos and Stania as well as Abraham and Shelly had gotten down and dirty with their spouse so easily. It was especially noticeable in the youngest couple, who after having kids so young, barely did it anymore, focusing on companionate love. But they were rediscovering how fun it was.

Back with Xin, he had paraded a few outfits in front of Markus and Danna, posing elegantly. Dipper was sitting there, blushing profusely. Stupid sexy dragon making everyone question their sexuality. “Aren’t you embarrassed to show so much skin?” He asked when Xin posed with some pants that had open sides with laces holding it together.

“Not really? My clothes tend to be skimpier when I'm performing on stage as Jan.” Xin shrugged. A few people passing by heard the comment and immediately blushed as they misunderstood. Xin brought his hands together and arched back in a stretch, thrusting his chest out. “At least these clothes aren't see through.” he added.

The random strangers who had been watching this little fashion show all choked before running away when Markus glared at them. Danna was snapping photos this whole time. “Oh. Lean against the side of the door frame and turn your head to the side.” She said as she positioned herself to take the shot.

Shit, they had so many good shots. Xin was really photogenic. Danna wondered if the dragon would allow her to submit these to a magazine. He could be a model if he worked out a little more. Xin pouted and lidded his eyes as he leaned against the door frame, one hand holding up his hair. Markus was squealing loudly.

Dipper sighed. “How long is this gonna take?”

“Why? Do you want it to be your turn to try on clothes?” Markus asked.

Dipper’s eyes widened and he shook his head. “Nope. I'm fine. You three have fun!”

“We still need to get clothes for ourselves, Dipper.” Danna shook her head. Markus handed Dipper the pile of clothes that he and Danna had deemed ‘Must buy’ and sighed. “Ok, Xin, try on one last outfit and then help us with finding ours ok?” Xin nodded and closed the door again. He held up the next pair of pants. “Um...these look pretty tight.” he called out. The other pants were a tight fit but their opened sides and strings allowed them to stretch. This pair was straight fabric. Markus called through the door “Tight pants are sexy.”

“No they aren’t…” Dipper mumbled, remembering Pacifica wanted him to try one on but he refused because it looked just so…no. Besides, tight pants was Robbie’s thing!

Xin sighed but began pulling on the pants. He grunted as he got them up and then paused. “Um…” he blushed. “What's wrong?” Markus asked through the door.

“They don't fit over my butt.” Xin called back.

There was a short silence before Danna, very softly asked. “Can we see?” Dipper groaned and covered his face. He was just going to buy the same white shirt 7 times and some jeans and be done with it.

Xin fumbled for the door lock and it clicked. Danna and Markus went in and blushed. Xin had managed to pull it up almost all the way but the fabric was straining on the curve of his butt. Xin was blushing heavily. “This one doesn't have strings on the side for me to loosen!” He wailed. “Well then take it off.” Markus stuttered, staring at his butt. Xin pulled at the pants. “I'm stuck.” He whimpered.

Dipper groaned loudly. “Can you move faster?!” He called from outside. Markus and Danna glared. “We’re busy, Mary! Be patient!” Markus was examining how to get the pants off the man and Danna was trying to pull them down, blushing madly.

The boy-turned girl sighed. He stood up and walked over to the dreaded zone-- the girl’s zone…he sighed. He better get some decent clothes already or he’ll never get to leave this place. Maybe he should just copy Paz’s style. That would be easier...

“Wait! Don’t pull so hard!” Xin yelped. “I don’t want to break them!” He felt them strain. Danna growled. “Then just fix them afterward!” He pulled and Xin squealed when the fabric snapped, his butt bouncing as it was freed. Markus was drooling and awkwardly put his hands on his lower zone when he felt it twitch. He didn’t take his eyes off Xin though.

“Ok…we broke the pants…you can fix it right?” Danna asked. Xin was panting softly “Oh god! I can breath again!” He slumped against the wall. “Stupid tight pants…” he grumbled. Danna blinked at the other man. “Are you…wearing panties?” she asked incredulously. Xin shrugged. “They’re soft and comfortable.”

Danna snorted. “They have Salutations Cat on them!” She laughed. Xin grumbled and waved for them to get out so he could take the pants fully off and fix them. “They’re cute!” he defended his choice in underwear. So what if he had Hello Kitty underwear?! (Also, he couldn’t believe it was called Salutations Cat here…)

Markus looked up to the roof and took a few deep breaths. Ok, ok! Don’t panic! This was just a boner, teenage boys had them all the time, no? if she calmed down, it would go away, right?

Xin and Danna were too distracted to notice Markus's state. Xin was blushing as he covered his butt with a hand, not really succeeding. “Look, my choice in underwear isn't important.”

“And I’m saying that you need proper support. Get briefs if you like the hugging feeling. Panties just don’t give enough support for your balls.” Danna argued. “I can see your panties straining from here. And you’re flaccid right now. If you get hard you’re going to stretch them out and ruin them.” Danna frowned. “Are these the same underwear from your Miz form? No wonder they don’t provide support!"

“Well I don't really look at men's underwear so I only know how to make boxers. And I don't like boxers!” Xin pouted. Danna sighed. “Wait here, I'm gonna bring you some briefs so you can scan them…” she got up and left, closing the door behind her.

Xin pulled the pants off before he remembered Markus was still in here. “Oh, um...can you turn around or-?”

“Yup! Yup! I’ll turn around!” The boy curled up on the floor and faced the wall. “Think of puppies...think of puppies.” He whispered. Danna quickly came back and gave Xin the different underwear for him to choose from. “Markus, move your ass from here. Let Xin change.”

Xin looked over the briefs and nodded. Ok. He could work with these. His underwear shifted and he hummed as he wiggled his butt. Ok, that did feel a little more comfortable. Markus blushed “IT'S FINE! I'm not looking!” he wasn't. He was staring at the wall and trying very hard to think about not sexy things. Baby dogs. Baby cats. Baby seals. Round. Bouncy.

“Shit!” Markus curled into a ball. How did guys deal with this? Just...random boners? Did all men get random boners? She heard that they did. As much as Mabel liked cute guys, she's never really thought about their dicks. Heck, she tried her best to avoid touching her own when she showered. But it wasn't a problem then. It is a problem now! Her pants were straining and she wanted to touch it but she held back. If she left it alone it would go away.

Markus heard the rustling of fabric as Xin pulled his walk in clothes back on. “Ok. I'm set. Markus? Do you want to use my changing room to try on your stuff?” Markus nodded. “Yes. That's fine.” He blushed. Xin left the changing room and Markus sighed in relief. He sat back and glared at his boner. Well, at least he was still only interested in boys.

He remembered his parents being a little confused at how they were still interested in their spouse despite being the opposite sex. Markus thought it was a true love sort of thing. He sighed and leaned against the wall. Nothing to do but wait for this to go away. He heard some footsteps. “Markus? I picked out some clothes I think you might like?”

“Thanks Danna.” He called back. “I'm going to hand them over the door ok?” Danna said. Markus nodded. “Thanks.” the clothes were thrown over and Danna left.

Outside the changing room, Danna and Xin were sorting through the clothes. Xin was fixing the pants subtly, glad that changing rooms didn't have cameras. “I liked those pants. And these. These were a little too tight as well. These are ok. I like the pockets on these…” Danna nodded. “So we'll get you this shirt and these...and this one too...hey, you think you can pay for these and wear them out?”

“I don't see why not. Let's go ask dad.” Xin and Danna walked off, Xin dumped the rejected clothes into the bin at the entrance to the changing rooms. There was a lot of laughter coming from the adult section of the store.

“Oh. I like that dress.” Abraham laughed as his wife came out with a poofy green sundress. It was backless with ribbons running across it. Sab was already fixing her youngest sister's hair to go with it.

Ford was sighing as yet another pink dress was handed to him “Why pink? Can I at LEAST have blue...or red?” Was his only real complaint. It wasn’t fair!
“Because pink looks amazing on you, sweetie!” Kari smiled. She would dress the 4 of them in pink like she always wanted if Seb and Shermie hadn’t chosen the colors they liked already. As the Stans were still complaining, she got to choose their clothes.

“I will never leave the hotel if I have to wear this!” Stan motioned at the clothes he was wearing. “Are you insane?! Besides, YOU are the one being sexist! Not all women wear dresses!” He argued.

“Yes…” Carla nodded and pulled down the cleavage to its right place. “But this is the kind of thing I always wear…so you are doing it too.” Stan grumbled. “Then I get to choose what clothes you wear! Deal?” Carla scoffed. “Sure.” She agreed. It's not like men had anything weird, their clothes were just shirts and pants. Easy.

“Dad! I picked out what I want.” Xin came up to show Walter his pile of clothes. “And this store has a discount if you have the passcode.” He leaned in to whisper “It's Holy Mackerel.” he was a little surprised to find this out.

Back then, a long time ago, there was a secret society called the Royal order of the Holy Mackerel, not just the Pines ancestors but a few other families had been part of it. A lot of them owned stores around the area. Xin thought this was pretty neat.

Walter nodded. It was good to know there was a way to save money, even if Stan had sold the pearls earlier. He had realized that the owner of the pawnshop didn't take him seriously as a woman and he had to barter twice as hard to get the pearls sold. It was a humbling experience for Stan. Though he responded to it with frustration at the pawnshop owner being an asshole. So women weren’t exaggerating when they said people didn’t respect them. He thought they did, but it wasn’t true. Huh.

“Ok, son, you can just go buy it. Do you have enough money?” Walter asked. Xin looked over at Dillon who nodded. He had used a different strategy with another pawnshop owner, that being leaning against the counter and pulling at his shirt to distract the man enough to drive the price up. It worried him a little how he seemed to drool over her, who was literally just barely legally an adult. Danna knew some guys were into younger women but...geez.

The two ran off to purchase the clothes, debating which ones Xin should wear for today and getting the really nice discount. After Xin got his clothes bagged, they went back to the changing room.

“Hey? Markus? Are you done in there? Xin needs to change.”

Markus, who had thankfully managed to calm himself, looked up from the shirt he was buttoning up. “Almost. I kinda only got to try on two outfits.” Stupid boner that took too long to go away. Xin nodded. “It’s ok, I’ll wait. Do you want us to hand you something?”

Markus smiled gratefully and poked his head out. “Thank you! Can you get me a few more t-shirts please? A jacket and white sneakers? I’m 42.” Well, that was Dipper’s size in shoes, but she was his height now!

Danna offered to get him cool boy clothes and soon enough, Markus had enough clothes for the week and then give to Dipper when they were back to normal. Speaking of Dipper…

“Where IS Dipper?” He looked around. Xin told them he was going to change. So Danna and Markus had to go find the girl. “Mary?” Danna called out. There was no response and Markus sighed. “Dipper?”

“Oh, hey guys.” Dipper walked over to them with a smile and Danna frowned. The little bitch…
“Dipper, where were you?!” Markus pouted and hugged his brother/sister. Dipper showed her the bags she had. “I went to get clothes? For the week?”

“I trust you chose decent clothes.” Both Markus and Danna crossed their arms. Dipper rolled her eyes. “Yes. I asked Pacifica for help. Before you say anything, I texted her, saying it was for a cousin, he helped me choose, that’s it.”

“‘Aww…’” they pouted. “I wanna see how Pacifica reacts to seeing you…” Markus sighed. Dipper rolled his eyes. “Not happening.” They heard footsteps as Xin walked over, tugging at his pants. “Seriously, all these pants are a bit tight, even the adjustable ones…” He muttered. “I see you found Dipper. So…does that mean only Danna needs clothes?”

Danna looked around and nodded. “I guess so. Markus, can you help?” The boy squealed and grabbed her hand before dragging her to the teenage girls’ zone. “You will look so pretty! I promise!” he squealed.

Dipper sighed and glanced over at Xin. “Aren’t you embarrassed to wear that?” He asked. Xin looked down at his outfit, a black tank top with a bunch of straps along his shoulders. His pants were also black (Markus and Danna both agreed it was a sexy color on him) and had ribbons along the sides to adjust the tightness. Xin had to loosen them a lot, to the point where the sides of his legs were showing between the ribbons. Xin shrugged. “I don’t see a problem?”

Dipper looked at him and blushed a little bit more. “Well, it’s more important if you like it, so, don’t mind me, I’m just weird.” Xin laughed and ruffled her hair. “Alright, Pinetree...want to check on your parents?”

“Oh, that sounds more fun…” The girl grinned and the two ran back to the changing rooms Kari and Sebastian declared theirs. The adults looked up with a smile which quickly became shocked. Sab and Walter gasped. “Xin! What are you wearing?!”

“Really? Why does everyone have a problem with it?!” Xin threw his hands in the air, his shirt lifting with the movement to expose part of his stomach. The adults all stared at him, slack jawed. Stan bluntly said “You look like a slut.”

Carla lightly smacked his arm. “Don’t say it like that!” Walter glared. “Don’t call my son a slut!” Stan scoffed. “Ow! You were all thinking it. This is gender violence!” “Shut up, Stan.”

Xin looked down at himself. “This is considered slutty?” He looked confused and a little upset. “But my crotch and nipples are covered.” Walter walked over and hugged him. “Don’t listen to Stan...he says mean things because he feels humiliated right now and he thinks HE looks like a slut, because he thinks of women that way. Don’t mind him.”

“No, I don’t!”

Carlos nodded and patted his shoulder. “Stania is just being mean.” Xin pouted. “But you were all giving me that look too…” Walter and Sab winced. “Well...you...are showing a lot of skin…”

Xin pouted harder. “But I think it looks nice...and Markus and Danna picked them out for me.” The adults groaned. They really should have had someone watching the kids while they were trying on clothes. Of course Danna and Markus would pick out something like this for poor, innocent Xin who didn’t know better.

Speaking of kids, Zoe and Zach ran up to poke Xin's legs. “We can see your butt!” Zoe giggled. Xin squeaked. “Qu-quit that! It tickles!” he covered his butt as his siblings laughed.
All the adults sighed, Walter and Sabrina shared a look. Ok. This was on them for not being responsible and checking what he was looking at. Dipper sat down and looked at the huge pile of clothes. “So, you guys picked something already?” Sab nodded excitedly as Stan huffed and Ford sighed.

“They chose for me, which is the same.” Ford sighed. They were back in the clothes they came with and despite how feminine the clothes were because they were dresses, most of them were allowed to get a few flannels, and simple pants. Thank the universe for Carla intervening for him and saying he was behaving well and deserved to choose some of his own clothes as well.

She was so nice.

Stan was still pouting hard. They got bras, again, and he said he wouldn’t wear one, again. They were so annoying! There was no way in hell he would willingly leave the changing room- “If you don’t wear it, we won’t... continue back at the hotel…” Carlos warned so Stan grabbed the damn thing and got back inside.

He didn’t want to admit it but, having a session (to borrow Sixer’s codename for his time together with Xin) as a woman was...amazing. He had been a little hesitant at first, the idea of being penetrated was scary but the second she and Carlos had started going at it… Stan flushed. So, apparently women could have multiple orgasms at once, that was pretty amazing.

The other adults were sorting through which clothes to buy as Sab and Walter tried to find some way to explain to Xin why his clothes were...somewhat inappropriate. Xin just didn't understand. “But nothing explicit is showing. And they look cool.”

“Your butt is showing.” Sab deadpanned. “No it's not. These are just the sides of my legs.” Xin protested. “And the contrast with the criss crossing ribbons looks cool!” Sab and Walter groaned softly. What could they do? They didn’t want Xin to feel bad! But he wasn’t going to like it when assholes started looking at him...what to do, what to do...

“Walter, we’re going to go look for clothes, coming?” Abraham asked the blond who bit his lip. They needed to finish shopping… “Ok, you can wear it.” He nodded. “But if you start feeling uncomfortable, just change into something else ok?” After all, it wasn’t him or Seb paying, so it was fine. If Xin had a problem, he would change, if he didn’t...then Walter had to let her son do what he wanted...

Xin hugged him. “Thanks, dad. Now go, go dress up like a handsome man and make your wife proud!” The blond laughed and followed his friends. Meanwhile, Stan came out, grumbling but already changing. This was stupid, bras were stupid, he felt stupid.

Ford came out as well and paused with wide eyes as he saw Xin walking away. His eyes were caught on the way the dragon swayed his hips. The low cut top, the way his tawny skin showed through between the black ribbons... Ford shook his head. That was... he blushed, tucking a strand of hair behind his ear. He knew, intellectually, that Xin was attractive. But... what was that phrase again? The clothes made the man? Ford didn’t understand why the black, ribbony clothes appeared more attractive than Xin in swim trunks. It was technically showing much less skin than the swimsuit, since Xin wasn’t shirtless now, and yet, it was more enticing...

Ford covered his blushing face. What was wrong with him???
He was still staring at Xin as the dragon lounged against the wall, hands in his pockets, a serene expression on his lovely face.

While Ford was having his mental crisis, Kari smiled at them all. “Alright! Now that you have clothes, we can go fulfill my second dream! Hair dresser!”

“No” Stan and Shermie said as Seb exclaimed a loud “Yes!” He’ll finally be able to enjoy a day at the hairdressers without people giving him weird looks!! “Can I get my nails done too?” Sab asked. Kari laughed. “Of course, dear.”

“Well, since Dipper and I are done, can we head out and explore the town?” Xin asked. Sab furrowed her brows in worry but glanced at Dipper. “Ok. But you two be careful. Don't accept food from strangers.”

Dipper scoffed. “Of course. I'm not stupid.” Sab rolled her eyes. “I was talking to Xin.” Dipper blinked and looked over at Xin who was pouting. “But...free food…” Dipper groaned. Oh great. He was going to have to babysit his cousin...who was secretly a several billion year old demon...who had the personality of a child...
“Don’t worry, I’ll watch him.” Dipper nodded and Sab smiled at him. “Thanks, Pinetree. Now, where was I? Oh, right. Stania! Fania COME HERE, YOU CAN’T RUN AWAY FROM ME!” She found Fania petrified with her face red, but Stania had run away. Xin laughed. “I know they’ll eventually have fun, getting your hair and nails done is relaxing! Come on, Dipper!” He pulled her outside.

The women at the hairdressers were confused when a woman came in, pushing three more inside, who were crying and trying to escape. “Don’t mind them. We need a haircut, and manicures!” Sab grinned maniacally and the Stans and Shermie feared for their lives. “Also...wax, eyebrows, legs.” she said with a tone of voice that was both excited and malicious. He was used to doing it...but not them. Mwahaha.

“’”NOOOOO!!!!’” the three women wailed.

“So, where are we going?” Dipper asked as Xin pulled him/her down the street. The dragon was attracting some stares and Dipper pulled his hat down lower in second hand embarrassment. Xin didn't seem to have noticed (his Seal blocking it all). “Well, there's a carnival in town and I kinda wanted to see it.” Xin squealed. Dipper sighed. How was this Bill Cipher? Alternative dimensions must be weird. Then again, uncle Seb was a Bill from an alternative dimension and he acted like a huge man-child half the time... and the evil Bill had thrown a tantrum when they started beating him too... and Blue was... well... maybe all Bill Ciphers were just like that.

Oh god, were all Bill Cipher's secretly just kids!?!?

He wondered if their Bill would be different if he was reincarnated or whatever.

“Ok, carnival...With lots of people with eyes...to see us.” Dipper mumbled and Xin laughed. “Yes, humans have eyes, Pinetree, not that weird.” Dipper looked at his companion’s legs and blushed. Oh man...

They made their way to the carnival and Dipper noticed a group of men smoking in an alleyway who were eyeing them up. Dipper gripped Xin's hand tighter. “Hey, can you...like...put up a force field around us?”

“Why? Wouldn't that be suspicious if people in the crowd bump into invisible walls?” Xin blinked at the girl. Dipper sighed. “Well, can you put up some kind of...protection thing? Or some barrier that keeps away people with malicious intent? Are you worried?” Xin looked around. He was worried about being alone, but he was in Xin’s body now, much bigger than Miz. And Dipper was with him. “You’ve got that friendship bracelet from Blue protecting you.”

“That’s just for lethal harm stuff. I just think we need an extra space barrier. Just...a little. It's just us here, alone. And I'm supposed to be looking after you.” Dipper admitted. “But I’m not dumb like Uncle Stan and I know women are at a higher risk being alone, that’s why Mabel always writes to me when she gets out and stuff...” He rubbed his arm. “I’m just a little paranoid like always, but, please do it?”

“Alright.” Xin flicked off his Seal and winced. Oh. Ooh. He twitched and glanced over at the group of men. One. He turned and saw a woman pushing a baby stroller and staring at him. Two. He turned again to see a few people who were frowning at him. Three. Xin frowned. There sure was a lot of hostility here. He shook his head, slowing down his steps so he could walk side by side with Dipper. What was this flavor? It was more than just hostility. There was a distinct flavor of lust mixed in with the disgust. He shook his head again.
“Well...these are some pleasant emotions.” he muttered sarcastically. “Ok, one malice barrier coming right up.” He flicked his fingers and enclosed them both. “Seriously, what is their problem?”

“They’re probably jealous of you.” Dipper laughed. Xin nodded. “That must be it! I’m just too hot for them!” He grabbed the girl’s hand. “Come on, I want cotton candy!” he put his Seal back on so he wouldn't get overwhelmed by these emotions. He didn't want them bringing him down when he was trying to have fun. “Wait, I thought you weren’t allowed to have sweets.” Dipper deadpanned.

Xin shushed him. “‘Dad’ doesn’t have to know!” He glanced around and then whispered, “Also, I’ve realized the one grounded is Miz. Not Xin.” Dipper continued to deadpan. “That still counts. Besides, I’m not gonna help you cheat on your punishment.” Xin whimpered. No fair….

Back at the clothing store, Carlos came out of the changing room, showing off how good it looked on him. Walter and Abraham all cheered. They were taking care of the kids, because their husbands’ were suffering somewhere, and said kids were on the floor, bored. Why did adults always spend so much time on clothes?!

“It looks amazing! That color suits you so well!” Abraham exclaimed. The other men sorting out the clothes looked at them funny.

“Yeah, it looks fine, but you know what’s pissing me off?” Carlos got closer to the other men. “Body. Hair. Like, how do men stand having all their bodies looking like apes?!” He stared at his arm with anger shining in his brown eyes. Abraham groaned and nodded. “This guy here doesn’t understand the struggle!”

“Hey! Of course I do!” Walter pouted. “But you’re a blondie, and your hair is straight, it doesn’t even look that bad!” Carlos shook his head and Walter pouted harder. The workers around giggled a bit at the group of friends.

They had some clothes for the week already, plus underwear and socks. As they were quite tall, they really hoped this would fit their husbands later. They were too pretty to go to waste. “Dad~ Where is mommy and my aunts?” Zoe groaned. She was hungry again!

Walter looked at the other men who shrugged. “Right...Where are they?”

It turned out they merely had to follow the sounds of horrified screaming. The three (current) men stood in the hair salon and held back laughter at the Pines daughters (except Sab) whimpering like scared animals and sobbing as they were waxed. “Why would women subject themselves to this TORTURE?!” Stan shrieked as another strip of paper was torn off his leg, plucking a whole line of hair. He had lost SO MUCH body hair turning into a woman, and now he was losing what little was left.

“Because it’s expected. And because men would complain if we didn't.” Carlos grinned triumphantly. Ha! See how he feels. Carlos was really enjoying this whole, sex-swap thing.

Shermie sobbed loudly as the poor confused worker forced him to raise his other arm to get to his armpit. “Please, no...mercy! Merc-AH AH!”

“This sucks!” Stan wailed. And, yeah, he did like it when Carla shaved, and despite not complaining, he never said it was the best looking thing in the world. But… but… he didn’t think women had to go through something this painful to be hairless! And Seb wasn’t even flinching. Hell, none of the other women here, being waxed, were flinching! Holy shit!
“Really? You guys are such babies.” Seb rolled his eye, only hitching his breath a bit when his strips were ripped off, but otherwise unaffected. “You already have less hair right now. Imagine how I have to go through this when I'm in my proper body.”

Walter walked over to her and kissed her forehead. She was used to going with him to the hairdresser. “You are so brave…” he whispered and grabbed her face gently to turn it around and kiss her lips, effectively distracting her as the worker finished her waxing.

Kari rolled her eyes as Ford went limp. God, they were seriously so dramatic!! She wondered where they got that from, definitely not from her! “When this is done, you can get your hair and nails done.”

“Will we die as well?” Stanley asked faintly. Carlos rolled his eyes “Pfft no?” Abraham, who couldn't stand his hairy arms anymore, went to order a waxing for himself as well. Carlos nodded. “Me too please.”

“What?! But a man NEEDS his body hair! You can't wax it off!” Stan gasped. Carlos rolled his eyes. “Well I think it's annoying.” He brushed a hand over his hairy arms and shuddered. “I feel like a bear.” And that was just what was exposed.

“Besides, Sebastian does it.” Wanda added. Stan deadpanned at him. “Sebastian is weird, he doesn’t count!” He complained and let out a shriek when his poor leg finished being tortured and the last strip was torn off.

“Hey!” Seb pouted and clung to his husband. Wanda kissed his lips. “Don’t worry, baby, I love you with or without hair.”

Stan looked at Carlos. “Please don’t wax it? Just...trim it. That’s the least damaging thing you can do to yourself.” He deadpanned. Carlos wanted to do it just to annoy him, but his pout made him coo. Besides, it was probably going to hurt like hell so both him and Abraham thought better about it.

“You know, while they do this, it’s our time to sit there and complain ok?” Abraham pointed at the waiting room and the three waved at the trembling women before sitting down next to other men waiting. They burst out laughing. It took longer to get them to stop moving for their eyebrows, but after lots of screams and tears, their eyebrows looked cuter now! “You three should feel grateful. You have thick healthy eyebrows, there are poor women out there who don’t have eyebrows at all!” Sab pouted at them as they rubbed their red faces. “You know there are some women who tattoo their eyebrows on?” He thought it looked ridiculous, personally.

“Now come on! We are getting our hair and nails done now!” She squealed. The Stans and Shermie groaned and decided to bitch about it, but couldn’t complain too long as their long hair was washed and massaged. The four of them moaned. God, this was amazing...

The staff and other patrons at the salon were very confused but the perception filter prevented them from really figuring anything out. They were simply left with a sense of ‘Something's weird but we don't know what.’ Walter sighed. “Do you think we're being too hard on them?” He asked his friends. Abraham shrugged “Maybe just a little?” Carlos laughed. “No way! This is fun! Besides, Sabrina's been really happy today…” they all paused to consider that.

Abraham asked quietly “Hey, what would you even do if he wanted to stay this way? I doubt you’d want to.”

Walter looked at the bags he was holding. “He told me he didn’t mind which body he had…” He
He looked at his temporary wife telling Ford to relax for the manicure because no one gave a single fuck about their hands. “He likes having fun...if this was the other way round...I think he would also enjoy being a man…” Walter, wow, he had gotten used to this body already, hummed. He still loved Sebastian/Sabrina though...he loved him as a person, but he didn't like women.

Walter had seen plenty of other attractive women today but he didn't care for them other than noting that they were cute. He wasn't attracted to them. And yet, when he looked at Sabrina, her sweet expressions and slender legs caught his attention and he found himself staring at her. But...would he still feel the same once he was Wanda again and Sabrina didn't change back?

He bit his lip and chewed on his fist. He hoped he was getting worried over nothing. Seb was just having fun, like she was doing and all of them were doing. It was just a HIM thing, he liked crazy, weird things, and he definitely liked to stress her out with his perception of fun, like during their honeymoon.

Speaking of fun. “You two didn’t go to the beach today…” He lowered his voice as he asked the other two. “Did you have sex like this?”

Carlos puffed out his chest proudly. “Fuck yeah I did. Stania acts all high and mighty but I had her screaming my name and begging for more.”

Abraham blushed “We were curious and tried it out for fun. Oh man, Shelly's leg muscles are really something…”

Walter gasped with his cheeks bright red. Wow. “That’s...awesome.”

“Wait, wait. YOU two haven't tried yet?!” Carlos gasped. Walter shook his head. “We were at the beach all day, you know, watching over YOUR kids!” He smiled. “I guess we can try it out tonight.” He laughed excitedly. The other two men nodded. “Do. It. Don’t let the week pass. You go tonight, to your bed, and make Sabrina scream!” Walter blushed but nodded anyway.

“They’re lucky they can’t get pregnant.” Carlos said and immediately sat up straight. He looked at Walter. “They CAN’T get pregnant...right?” Carlos started panicking.

Walter's eyes widened. “I...don't know?” Oh fuck. “B-but the curse only lasts for a week! S-so…”

“But stuff can happen in a week! What if we fucked it up!? What if we somehow altered it??! Oh fuck! Oh fuck!” Carlos felt like he was going to faint. “You didn’t use a condom?” Walter frowned. “Do you think that was my priority at that moment?!” the dark haired man screamed. Abraham and Carlos started shaking the blond man. “CALL XIN!”

Abraham sat up “Wait! He's with Dipper right?!” He pulled out his own phone and started calling. The three men sat around, tense and worried as the phone rang. They thought Dipper wouldn't pick up but finally it clicked.

“Mom? This is a really bad time…”

“Dipper! I need to talk to Xin!” Abraham shouted.

“Ah...can this...wait?”

“No, this is really important.” The three men huddled closer to try and hear. There was a strange noise, like...sirens? Also, Dipper was panting as if he was running.
“Ok...hang on...Xin...yeah? Yeah...mom wants...talk...ok...” there was a shuffling sound as the phone was passed over. “Hey uncle Ab! What's up?”

“Xin, can the girls get pregnant?” Abraham asked. There were more shuffling sounds and a grunt, the distinct clicking sound of a chain link fence and Dipper yelping in the background. “Naw. They won't start their cycle until after they spend an entire month as a woman first. It takes time for the body to build up all the nutrients and stuff to make the eggs, you see? Just like you CAN’T get them pregnant without viable sperm. Which, you don’t have yet, you’ve got stuff to discharge, but it ain’t potent. And even if you did, like I said, their uterus isn’t ready for that sort of thing.” Xin responded. The men sighed loudly in relief and faintly heard Dipper in the background “Are they still after us?” and a voice they didn't recognize shouting “Get back here you fuckers!!” more shuffling and Xin said “Well, if that's all, I need to hang up now. Kinda need two hands to climb this wall…”

In the background they heard “You can't get away! Fuck! Stand still you fuckin' fag!”

“Ok, bye uncle Ab~!” Xin said cheerfully before hanging up.

The three melted on the couch in relief. Thank God, Carlos was crying. They looked at the sisters and Kari. They were getting their haircut, eyes closed and getting a manicure, completely unaware their partners almost died from a heart attack. Sab just wanted them to cut her hair a tiny bit because she liked it’s waist-length, Shermie asked to get it bra strap-length, he couldn’t have it all long like Sab wanted. Ford and Stan wanted it gone but Kari told the workers to cut their hair armpit length.

Once the relief from knowing they couldn't get their husbands pregnant faded, Abraham frowned. “Did...did it sound like something bad was happening with the boys?” The other two paused. “I'm sure it's...nothing...” Carlos chuckled weakly before his smile dropped. “Oh fuck.” the three sighed.

Ok, so, if Dipper was honest with herself, this wasn’t really their fault. It was those fuckers who had been staring at them all day. They had been having fun at the carnival, eating snacks, going to games, bothering nobody basically, when they decided it was probably best to head back. That’s when the problems began.

“We are lost.” Dipper deadpanned as Xin growled. “I know where we are!”

As they walked they passed by a group of men, smoking what seemed to be weed from the oddly sweet smell. They started whistling. “Damn!! Hey pretty what are you doing here?” “Fuck, I'd totally bang you.” “Hey baby come on, smile.”

Dipper growled and only his self-control stopped him from punching them in the face. Xin pushed him forward. “Just keep walking...they're just stupid humans…”

Then one tried to touch Dipper’s butt, but the spell threw him backwards and onto the ground. As the men frowned in confusion, the girl snapped and with a good kick, she planted her sneakers on his ugly nose. “The fuck is your problem!?” Dipper grabbed the stunned man’s wrist and with a swift movement, swung him to the floor. Contrary to popular belief, Dipper did train! He knew a little martial arts! “Don’t touch me, fucker!”

The man on the ground, who was probably high now that Dipper thought about it, looked dazed. His friends laughed. “Hah! You just got beat by a girl!” Xin tugged on Dipper's sleeve. “We should go.” He was worried about things escalating, and worried about the thrill of joy inside himself that wanted things to escalate.

And then one of the men slapped Xin's butt and all Hell broke loose. “Eep!” Xin squeaked as the barrier repelled it but he still jumped and covered his butt with his hands. Dipper snarled. He was supposed to be looking after his cousin. “Hey! Hands off!” He kicked the guy. They were starting to attract attention.

“Look at this? He's letting his girlfriend fight his battles!” One of the men laughed. Xin looked confused before he finally realized what was happening. Then he got mad. Dipper blinked in surprise when Xin kicked a guy and sent him flying. Oh right. Dragon.

“What the hell?! You don't touch people without asking first!” Xin scolded the men. They were starting to look irritated. “What? It's a compliment. It means you're hot stuff.” One trailed his eyes down Xin's body with a crooked smirk. “The feistiness just makes it all the sweeter…” Xin scowled at him, baring his teeth with a growl. Ew. No. He didn't want that.

That's when they started trying to grab him, another sneaking behind Dipper to try and box them in. This time they weren't just sent flying back. This time, they got set on fire.

“AUUUGH?!” They screamed. Dipper winced. He took Xin's hand “RUN!” He shouted. They took off while the men rolled around on the ground to put themselves out. “Hey! You FUCKERS!” One of the men yelled at the two of them. Some of the onlookers had called the cops. Dipper ran and pulled Xin with him. “This is bad! This is sooo bad!” he groaned.

“I think they're chasing us.” Xin pointed out. Dipper groaned again. “Dammit!” He heard sirens. “Double damn it!” It wasn’t fair! Those dicks should be the one chased! He looked around for where they could run to. His phone rang.

It was his mom, well, temporary dad, and he wanted to speak to Xin? Right now?! He gave Xin the phone and heard him give an explanation about...eggs? Periods? What? They climbed a fence at one point before going into an alleyway. They hid behind a dumpster and waited for the cops and the few men to lose sight of them.

“Are they still after us?” Dipper whispered. He and Xin turned to see one of the men who had attempted to molest them earlier turn a corner into the alleyway and spot them. “Get back here fuckers!” and begin running at them. They ran down the alley. ”You can't get away! Fuck! Stand still you fuckin’ fag!” the man yelled. Xin quickly said goodbye and hung up, handing the phone to Dipper before giving the now shorter girl a boost up the wall to reach the fire escape ladder.

Xin made a pretty impressive standing jump and caught the ladder himself. The two climbed quickly as the man screeched at them. “Where do we go now?” Dipper asked. Xin looked around. “No cameras...I could teleport us...but I want to make those jerks pay for trying to touch us.”

Dipper glared down at the high, angry fucker. He wanted him to pay too. “What do you suggest? Give him and his fuckboys a nightmare?” The teen shrugged. Xin tilted his head “But that would require them to sleep first. I was actually thinking of ripping their balls off…”

Dipper whimpered and pressed his legs together. That was horrifying...every man needed their balls. He sighed at the empty feeling in his pants. BUT! Those guys were not men, they were beasts who could do worse to any innocent person. He grinned. “I will not tell your mom if you do it. But, do it in a way that wouldn’t kill them or cause medical problems.” His lawyer uncle had a strong socratic sense of morals. Dipper was sure Walter was unable to wish harm on anyone. Not outside the law anyway.
Xin’s eyes were flickering. “If it makes you feel any better, two of those guys actually HAVE raped women and one young teenage boy. The rest have molested but didn't manage to penetrate…” he shook his head with a disgusted look. “Ugh...didn't want to see that…”

Dipper looked horrified. “Please burn them alive.” He didn’t want to share air with scums. Then he felt horrified at what he was even suggesting. “Just-- don’t kill them. Forget I said that part!” Dipper added quickly. Xin flicked his fingers and Dipper heard multiple blood curdling screams come from the alleyway below them. “Well, I punched that guy’s balls. His friends, who've raped before had theirs explode.” Xin grinned. “What else can I do to them?” Human castration had been around for centuries! He knew how to get rid of them without damaging their health…

(If BlueBill’s Stanford had been here, he’d have been horrified and felt entirely justified to point out to everyone that this was proof of the man-eater’s wickedness.)

“Burn their pants.” Dipper had an evil grin on her face. “Make them suffer. But don’t kill them or cause actual harm.” Xin giggled. “Ok~” Dipper looked over the side of the roof and saw the men lying on the ground, screaming in pain. One was clutching his crotch as blood began staining the fabric. Xin flicked his fingers and the man shrieked louder when his crotch caught fire. Enough to hurt, not enough to burn. Heck, Xin even healed their wounds so they wouldn’t bleed out or have any health complications!

Dipper laughed. Served him right. Now he’ll never hurt anyone again. Ugh. So disgusting. “Our job here is done.” He nodded. They were vigilantes. Xin purred as he tasted the Pain and Fear (taking off his Seal for this). Ooh—that was a nice flavor~ his eyes were glowing red as he gazed down at the sobbing men. Oh, these delicious flavors were doing wonders for getting his energy levels maxed out. And being allowed to do this, from Pinetree of all people? Ooooh~

Dipper wasn’t even paying attention to the screaming men. He was texting his dear girlfriend about how they made justice today. Pacifica laughed, not knowing what exactly Dipper was referring to, but sent him a few hearts. Aw~

They called the police, Xin leaving ‘video’ evidence of their crimes beside them, before he teleported his cousin back to the mall.

Xin practically buzzed with energy. He whined softly. “Dammit. Now I'm horny…” he felt a little itchy and restless. Dipper blinked at him. Seriously?!” Xin shrugged with a blush. “Leftover Lust from them…” He muttered quietly, “Don’t worry, it’ll pass.” Dipper nodded and patted Xin’s shoulder. “Thanks for helping me there.” The man smiled and ruffled her long brown hair. “Of course, Pinetree, you’re my cousin!” Dipper texted Mabel to ask where she was and Markus said he finished shopping with Danna and now they were eating pizza at the food court.

Needless to say, Xin dragged the smaller girl over to the food court while cheering, “PIZZAAA~!”

(A small part of Dipper was still horrified at what he’d allowed Xin to do. Heightened adrenaline had lowered his normally reserved inhibitions. But the thought that this experience would stop those men from hurting anyone again in such a way, mollified him somewhat.)

---

The three men blinked in amusement as the Pines girls stumbled towards them, half asleep. Their hair was nicely cut, their nails were pretty and painted and the four of them had an expression of pure bliss. None of them could deny this was a very nice experience. They were denied this joy as men…
“Getting your hair washed and massaged is the best thing in the world.” Shelly mumbled and she hugged Abraham, her hair barely reaching his neck. “Be careful with your nails, baby, you wouldn’t want to ruin it.” He kissed her forehead.

“Stania? How are you feeling?” Carlos asked. Stan mumbled as he leaned against his chest, totally out of it. Carlos laughed and stroked her hair. “Ah this is nice~ What did they use? Your hair is so soft.”

“No idea...I feel drugged…” Stan closed her eyes. “Can we go already? I’m tired.” Carlos leaned in to whisper. “If you feel too tired, maybe we can continue tomorrow.” Stan’s eyes widened. “I’m not that tired!”

Kari put her hands over her chest and sniffled. Her babies were so pretty as both boys and girls! She kissed Fania’s cheek, who was staring at his hands. That woman didn’t mind his fingers...he bet she didn’t even notice. Hands were hands and it was her job to paint the nails. “I also think we should go back.”

Sab who was kissing Walter, nodded. “Ok…” she pulled out her phone “So, are the kids all together?” Walter, Carlos and Abraham began coughing.

Sab narrowed her eye and Stan looked around. “Carla...where’s our squirt?” Everyone looked around for Diego and the twins and the men panicked. “But they were here!” Abraham cried.

“Maybe they went with their cousins?” Ford suggested.

“Di-Dipper and Xin are not here…” Abraham muttered. “And I don’t know where Mabel and Dillon are.” Sab groaned and closed her eye to search for them. She had to do everything around here! Ok. The teens and Xin were eating, the kids… “Uh?” She said and Walter and Carlos grimaced. “Where are they?!”

Seb turned around and went back to the couch the men had been sitting on. Just next to it, on the floor, half hidden by a stand of magazines, were the kids sleeping. “You three are fucking idiots as men.” She scolded as she picked up Diego to give to Stan. Stania let out a relieved sigh and hugged her kid, cradling him to her chest. Then Sab repeated the process with the twins, but she gave Zoe to Fania.

“Baby...I am sorry...can I hold them?” Walter pouted. Sab huffed. “No. She’s fine with Ford.” Ford blushed when Zoe snuggled against his chest. Sab folded her arms “This is punishment for you three losing sight of them.” The three men sighed. They knew this was their own fault.

“Now let's go find the other kids. They're at the food court.” Sab told them as the group headed off. “‘Food!’” Shermie and Stan cheered. Kari giggled behind her hand. Actually, men or women, their personalities haven't changed. She paused. She guessed it was because that had nothing to do with their sex. Still, she was grateful for this day to indulge in spoiling the daughters she's always wanted. She sighed. Four sons and four grandsons. Out of all of them, she only got two and a half granddaughters (since Miz was a boy half the time). Those Pines genes were very masculine heavy.

Not that she didn’t love them though. They were her baby boys. Kari looked at Fania holding Zoe with a warm smile.

They met with the teens as Markus and Danna cooed at how beautiful their moms looked. Shelly blushed and Stania scoffed and denied liking it, also blushing heavily. When they got to a location with no people or cameras, Xin teleported them back to the hotel.
The kids woke up when they got back while the teens, Xin and Ford volunteered to watch them as the couples claimed they were tired from the day. Their innocent hearts couldn’t understand the meaning behind that. Anyway, they all went to the game room, decided to teach the kids how to play billiards.

Carlos gave Wanda thumbs up before saying good night. Wanda/Walter turned to his wife. Sab was innocently fixing up the bed so Walter could take a nap. Walter smiled fondly. “You know, actually, I don’t think I’m THAT tired yet…” He had something in mind-

“Let’s go to the bar!” Was his alcohol-loving, but unfortunate lightheaded, wife’s response. "Relax after this very stressful day huh?” Sab grinned. Walter sighed. “Well I’m limiting you to only one drink. You’re even smaller than you normally are. So, you’ll be even more of a lightweight!”

“Fiiiine~ I’ll be careful.” Sabrina sighed. They suggested the bar to the other couples. Stan looked like he really wanted (and needed) a drink. “Yes. Bar sounds amazing, I fucking need alcohol right now.”

They didn't even bother to tell Xin and Ford, they didn't drink, besides, who would watch their kids? Mwahaha~

There was a bar in the hotel, it wasn't really crowded, just some couples and single people drinking, playing billiards or watching the running football game.

Wanda and Seb got a table, as well as Abi and Shermie, while Carla and Stan sat at the bar counter. Carla grinned as Stan slumped on the counter and barked at the barman to bring him something to destroy his liver and taste buds.

"Stania, sit like a lady~ Close your legs." Carla teased him, only to be flipped off.

"Who are you, my mom?! Imma sit however the fuck I want--give me that!” He snatched the drink from the barman's hand and gulped it all down at once. Stupid Xin, stupid magic, stupid brothers being so comfortable with this.

The barman looked at Carlos. "She's on one of those days, huh?" Stan gasped, offended because NO?! He was angry because this day was horrible?! Not because he was...oh…

"Yeah, she is, don’t worry, I got this." Carlos answered for him as he rubbed Stan’s, much thinner than before, waist. "You’re an asshole, Carla." Stania grumbled as he fought down a blush at being treated like this.

"Oh, I am. You better not say this ever again to anyone, or let your friends say it. Doesn’t feel nice does it?” Carla asked him knowingly.

Stan got another drink and focused on the running game. That was his former team, nice~He was the coach of the youngest bunch of newbies for that team, in college or barely out of it. They had to start training if they wanted to make the roster for official games after all.

Now Carlos slumped over Stania's shoulder, resting his round chin on her. "Um what's happening now?” Despite going to almost every game Stan had since they were 15, she still didn't know the first thing about football.

"They're forming the 3-4-3 tactic, babe, it's heavily offensive, which means they're going for the points rather than keeping the other team away." Stan illustrated that on a napkin and Carlos nodded, concentrating as he sipped his drink. "Probably the coach is going to make them do from 'ere a triangular movement-yeah, there it is! Run, Georgo!” Stania screamed at the Tv.
A couple of people, including them, cheered when he scored.

Stan facepalmed.

"You saw that? That was a great long throw ball." Stan knew for a fact this idiot was trying to sound all smart.

"I think that was a triangular movement." Carlos commented before looking at Stania for clarification.

"Yeah. It was." She glared at the idiot.

The man laughed. "You like football, little lady?"

"I ain’t little. Nor a lady." Stania growled. The men laughed again. Stania really didn’t like his tone. "It’s okay, it’s very cute.” The man ‘assured’ him, as if he thought that would make Stania feel better. It didn’t.

The man continued babbling nonsense to Carlos, who just nodded awkwardly because, nonsense or not, he still didn't know anything about Football. Stania was going to explode!! What the fuck?!!! "Dude, what the fuck are you talking about??"

The man waved a hand dismissively. "It's just football theory, it's too much to explain.”

"It’s bullshit, is what it is!” Stania raged. “You’re just makin’ up words at this point. And you don’t know what the fuck you’re talking about! Heily is on Defense because that’s what he trained for! Not because his ‘hands are made for shoving’ or whatever the shit you just said about him!”

"Football is a men's sport, you just don't get it, sorry." The man shrugged. "It requires a lot of thinking and planning."

Carlos covered his mouth as his eyes widened. Oh no. He really should stop this now...But getting in the crossfire of Stanley's rage wasn't a very intelligent idea.

"I KNOW 'bout football, dipshit! Unlike you! I am a professional coach, you moron!"

“Yes, yes. I’m sure you’ve read a lot about it. But watching videos online and managing your kid’s team isn’t the same as actually being out on the field, playing it.” The man dismissed Stan’s words entirely, not even listening to him.

Stan wasn't sure how to react to this. No one had ever underestimated him this way. Not as a coach, or at work… no one had ever so completely disregarded him like this.

It felt horrible.

He turned to look at the game, annoyed, but the asshole shut up (for now) so he thought he could go back to enjoying the game.

"Ooohh! Noo, you dumbass! what did you do?! You had the ball right there!" She turned to look at Carla. "You saw?! He fumbled--"

“That was such a bad play, huh?” The man interrupted, nudging Stania’s arm with his elbow. “I don’t know if you saw it but--"
Stania shoved the man away from her. Personal space! “Yes I saw it! Didn’t you hear me say--”

“He didn’t pay attention to when the ball was thrown to him, really bad focus there. You see his eyes? He’s dazed from being tackled earlier--”

UUURGH FOR MOSES’ SAKE!! “Shut up! Stop talking to me! What the hell is wrong with you?!” Stania snarled. “I never asked you! I never asked for your fucking opinion! I was just here, talking to my--”

“Look, sorry,” The man held up his hands, smiling and giving Carlos a look like, ‘Wow, crazy women, am I right?’ the man gave Stania another smile. “I just thought I would help explain it to you, since it seemed like you were interested in it.” He spoke like Stania was a child being unreasonable, “I was just trying to help.”

“Help THIS you condescending asshat!” Stania decked him across the face, making the guy fly back and land on the ground with a bounce. The bar went silent. Stania stood there, panting heavily through her teeth before she snarled and stomped off. Carlos winced. “Ah, you seriously should stop treating my wife and other women like they're idiots.” He told the dazed man before leaving to catch up to Stania.

Stania was fuming and kicking a decoration in the hallway, hitting it so much it was shaking and about to fall.

"Stan...Stanley, stop."

"NO!"

"If you break it, you're going to have to pay for it, and I doubt you want that." Carlos pulled her away. The argument seemed to be valid enough for his wife because she stopped struggling and just slumped in his arms. He knew this had been a very low blow, right in her ego.

"He was a fucking asshole." Stan growled.

"Geez, yeah." Carlos winced a bit. "Sorry for not doing anything…" He heard the slightest sound of a snuffle and a broken exhalation before Stania rubbed her face on his chest. "Why does he think I have fucking brain damage just because I'm a woman…?"

“Because you’re a woman. Not everyone treats us like that, but it happens pretty often.” Carlos sighed, leaning down to hug the distressed Pines brother. “It’s… ‘normal’.”

“Normal sucks.” Stania hated all this.

"A lot." Carla agreed. Stania rubbed her eyes. "I'm sorry...I shouldn't have said those things." She mumbled her apology as if it burnt her insides. She wouldn't cry though. She wasn't a pussy.

"It's ok. We're both going to learn stuff this week, ay?" Stania yelped when Carlos picked her up, so she wrapped her legs around his waist. "How about we go make things better~?" He offered with a perverted look that could only be matched by Stania's own.

"I'd love that~" Stania rubbed her pelvis against Carlos and felt a shiver running down his spine. She was put down and the couple quickly made their way to their room.

"...His definitions were so fucking wrong…” She still complained.

They weren't the only one who had the same idea. Soon enough, the other two couples said they... were bored and tired and that they were going back to their rooms now.

Seb once again ruffled the bedsheets so they could sleep and searched for pjs when Walter put a hand over his "Hey~ I'm not really that tired."

"Oh, come on, Wands! Make up your mind~!" He innocently complained. Walter leaned over to nuzzle against Sab’s neck. “Well~ we can sleep… so I suppose you’ll have to… undress…” He trailed a large hand down Sabrina’s side, going over her thin waist, her hips and then her thighs. She laughed. “Oh? So we’re going to ‘sleep’ are we~?"

Walter couldn’t wait anymore. He wanted to try this, he NEEDED it! “I want to spend the night with you, just the two of us, baby.” He tilted her head backwards to kiss her lips and his hands moved upwards from her waist to cup Sab’s breasts. So soft and round... Sab smiled into the kiss. “Then let’s ‘go to bed’ shall we?”

The couple stayed there for a while, still gasping for air and just hugging each other. “I love you...I love you so fucking much…” Walter whispered, burying his face in her breasts. Sab sighed contently and closed her eye. “I love you so fucking much too.” As no one was going to burst in, they didn’t bother to clean so they just got under the blankets and cuddled.

They were damn perverts but that felt fucking amazing.

When they were about to fall asleep, they heard noises, gasps and moans from the room next door, which sounded very much like...Stania...and...Carlos...

Walter and Sabrina hid under the blankets, groaning in embarrassment. They were probably heard!!

“I wonder why they're all so tired? We didn't do all that much today.” Ford wondered as he and Xin sat beside each other in the spa. The teenagers were watching the kids in the game room so the two had gone to the sauna to relax.

Xin coughed, wondering if he should tell this innocent owl what his brothers were up to. “Well…” he looked around to check that no one else was nearby. This place had small, private booths and they were lucky to get the place to themselves. No cameras either. Xin allowed his tail to pop out with a groan. “Your brothers are having wild sex with their wives.”

Xin laughed loudly at the horrified expression the woman made next to him. “Wh-What?!” She shrieked. “But-but they are...like this!” She motioned to her body. Xin nodded. “That’s what makes it more fun, trying it out from the other’s point of view.”

Ford screamed into his hands. For everything that was possible, that was completely disgusting!! “Ew!” He whined childishly and Xin laughed again. “I know, I know, but they are happy and enjoying it.”

Ford was blushing hard, it only made Xin laugh more.

Xin leaned against her. "It's so weird, we're both asexual but we feel different about stuff. For one, I feel the need for sexual satisfaction, and it's annoying to have a sex drive...when I, myself have no desire for sex. Xin muttered quietly. He looked down at his hands and the towel wrapped loosely around his waist. “But you don't seem to get much of this, whatcha think?”

"I think it's gross." Ford crossed his arms and pouted. Xin cooed at how cute she looked. "I try not to think much about it." She was wearing a towel around her slim waist and her bra. She rubbed her legs together at the empty feeling and adjusted the towel around her chest. She looked up at Xin, wondering if he was seeing...

Xin wasn't looking at her though, more focused on poking his tail and lost in thought. “I don't get it. Like...why do people care so much about sex to the point that some people go after people who AREN'T willing?” He growled lightly, remembering the assholes he'd met earlier that day. “Like, if I get horny, I do it myself! I just masturbate and I’m satisfied.” He clenched fist. “How could people ever want it so bad that they would force themselves on someone else? I just don't understand…” he might have fantasies about weird stuff but they're just fantasies. He knew there were things that should never be done to real people!

Ford frowned. “I don't know either.” He pushed his breasts up and adjusted them. He was sweating.
S/He looked at Xin again. Fania did it again, adjusting hi/her breasts. Xin didn’t seem to notice.

“So...do you agree that people who force themselves on others like that should be punished?” Xin asked quietly. Ford nodded. “Of course!”

Xin's tail curled up. “I wonder if I'm similar to them?” Ford looked up in shock. “No. Of course not! Why would you say that?” Xin ducked his head in shame. “I like watching people fuck...without their permission.” He gave a bitter laugh. “The worst Voyeur in the multiverse...even created a whole planet for it. A porn planet! A planet filled with people I can experiment with. So I can twist their bodies for my own amusement and then watch them go at it with each other.” He shuddered.

“Doesn't that make me just as bad? Even if I'm not touching them...” he questioned. “I've never touched someone with my own hands in such a way, but I like watching them. Is that...just as bad?”
He pulled his legs up to his chest, burying his face into his knees.

Fania hummed in thought, momentarily forgetting about...whatever she was trying to do with her breasts, and analyzed the circumstances before she put a hand over his. “I think you’re insane,” she said bluntly, “There are things you do that are just as insane, but you aren’t a bad demon.” The woman laughed. “You’re also not a bad person... you said you experiment with them, are you forcing them to do anything they don’t want?”

“No, I just made a little transformation Curse that they could walk into and activate willingly, and I give them a free try at the Curse a second time, to change things, if they weren’t happy with the effects of the transformation the first go around... and I put them in situations where sexy times can happen. But everything they choose to do is on them.”

“Then you're not evil.” Ford shrugged. “I'm guessing you haven’t killed anyone on this porn planet of yours?” Xin shook his head and Fo/Fania laughed. “See?”

“But...I cursed you all into the opposite sex. I...messed with your bodies in a way more intimate than anything...and it was just a whim...” Xin said softly. “Just because I got annoyed and because I COULD.” he shivered. “I've done stuff like that before. In my Deals, in my experiments...just...for fun...” Those were all the things that other Stanford always accused him of... and he was right, and Xin hated that fact so very much...

Fania sighed. “Well, if you feel bad about it...then...stop doing it?” She wasn't sure what to say.
“Or, ask for permission first?” She suggested as she rubbed Xin's arm. “I mean, I guess being turned into a woman was...a little distressing at first, but I've learned a lot.” She scratched her head sheepishly. “Like how much pain they go through to look nice...simply because they're expected to look nice.” He frowned. “Which is incredibly unfair. Stan could go around with his hair disheveled and his clothes unkempt but no one bats an eye. But if Carla doesn't put on makeup for a day I hear people talk about it.” Ford frowned. “I hear about it, even all the way in Oregon. Those damn paparazzi that follow Stan and Carla everywhere will comment on it and the damn thing shows up on the news.”

Xin gave a bitter laugh. “So much for equality huh?”

Ford nodded. He was sorry for saying there was equality in America, way back when. Just because he tried to respect women didn't mean others did. And even then, Ford admitted to himself that he’d been pretty awful at times too, not maliciously so, but simply because he’d grown up in that kind of culture and had learned that it was ‘normal’, even when he now knew it wasn’t. He had never even thought about the reality. He grabbed Xin’s hands and looked at his friend.

“Besides, if you feel bad about what you do, then you can’t be that bad. Bad guys don’t feel guilty over what they do. And you need that guilt to push you to try to be better. I know you can try. Like...how I’m trying to be closer to my family...and, you told me trying is a lot…” The brunette smiled sheepishly at Xin.

Xin squeezed Ford's hands and pulled one of them up to his cheek without thinking. “I guess you're right.” He laughed. “Geez, look at me, I tell others that they’re not bad people and now you're telling me...but...I still feel like a bad person...whenever I think about what I've done...what I continue to do…”

“Well, baby steps. From now on, don't transform people without asking first? Unless it’s an emergency or some other extenuating circumstance.” Ford suggested. “You know, the merfolk transformation a few days ago wasn't bad. I...enjoyed it.”

“Really?” Xin grinned. Ford nodded. “I actually wouldn't mind that again someday! If only so I can travel around underwater and see all there is to see.”

Xin laughed “Of course you did, you big nerd!” He giggled. "As a merman? Or a mermaid? It would allow you to see if the body dynamic changes~" The dragon laughed loudly when he saw Fania actually thinking about it.

Ford laughed and ran a hand over his chest. “Ugh, I'm sweating.” He complained, the towel slipping down to his wide hips, but still covering his crotch. Fania was glad for that. Heck, she was only allowing her towel to drop since it didn’t seem like Xin cared. Which was nice, not being ogled at.

Xin laughed. “That’s the point, nerd!” The dragon laughed.

“But it's collecting between my be-breasts and it feels uncomfortable.” Fania complained. Xin rolled his eyes. “Well, you're not even supposed to be wearing a bra in here, you're supposed to be naked and just have a towel.”

Ford pouted hard. Xin rolled his eyes again. “You were already chest-naked this morning in front of me and I didn’t care. Just do it, you’ll feel better.” Then the dragon giggled. “Do you need help taking it off~?”

"...Maybe." Unhooking the bra sounded like a challenge.
Xin grinned as she sat down a little closer. "It's ok, I'll help." He reached for Fania's back and gently unhooked the bra. His breasts hung a little. Xin reached to the front part of the bra, and cupped her breasts in his hands for a few long seconds before freeing her chest. Xin looked at them as Ford's chest bounced free before looking directly at him/her.

Fania reached for her towel without seeing and pulled it up to cover her big chest with a hand. She stared into Xin's eyes, they were so close, with how the dragon had gone right up in order to help her take her bra off... She never noticed Xin's eyes were coal black... (Miz's were a deep dark brown that looked black.)

"You know, you look amazing as a woman..." Xin said bluntly, speaking up at last after looking Ford over.

"Th-Thank you I guess... " He...still wasn't used to anyone complimenting him for his aspects as a man (except for Xin of course)...it was even WEIRDER to be complimented as a woman.

"Ok...tha-thanks..." he repeated, for lack of anything to say, looking down at his breasts.

"So...these don't turn you on? Even if you're admiring them?" He asked curiously.

"Yeah, like I said, I may like watching the action, but someone's body itself doesn't really affect me." Except for transformations, but he wasn't about to tell Fordsie that. Fania laughed. "That's an interesting way to say it. So you're interested in the process, but not the parts?"

"Like how people like watching movies but not enjoy sitting through all the rehearsals." Xin corrected, then laughed. "And to phrase it another way..." He scooted even closer, pressing against Fania's side with a grin. "I love watching horror movies, but I don't want to be part of one."

"Hm." Fania thought about it. "Neither would I." She glanced up at Xin's grinning face. "Do you like horror movies, for real? Or were you just using it as a metaphor?"

"I love horror movies! But I'm not allowed to watch them anymore." Xin rolled his eyes. "Why's that? Wait, you're a psychic being with reality warping powers, of course you're not allowed to watch horror movies." Fania deduced on her own.

Taking advantage of being so close to her, Xin reached for her waist and tickled her. "You're such a nerd!"

"AAAAHHH!!" Fania shrieked and tried kicking Xin away all while trying to keep the towel around her body. The two scuffled on the sauna bench, laughing and shrieking as they poked each other. It was a good thing it was late. They had this sauna room all for themselves. They ended up on the floor on top of each other, laughing. That was almost like a session. Xin tied up both their hair into buns (so they didn't accidentally pull them), but didn't feel like standing up, and neither did Fania. Resting on him, with her arms under her cheek, Fania looked at him curiously. "Are there saunas in space? This makes you sweat, but do aliens sweat? They liberate toxins through it?"

"Like, bajillions of them!" Xin laughed breathlessly, panting a little. "Most of them are natural as well. Volcanic planets are a dime a dozen! They're the new ones, the ones with molten cores still burning hot through a half formed crust. They haven't been around long enough for the mantle to close up into what you'd call 'land', which leaves the whole planet a sweltering hellscape of fire and heat." Xin laid his head back on the ground, finally catching his breath. "So naturally, a more advanced alien race looks at this burning ball of fire and goes 'Hey, we should build a luxury resort on top of it!' and then we have saunas and hot springs!"

Fania laughed. That was so cool!! "Even in space, all people care about are profits, huh?" She asked. She was so close to Xin his face wasn't blurry anymore even with her glasses off. Fania could see the slit pupils in his dark eyes, which were only visible against the black irises due to Xin’s pupils having a faint glow around the edges. She could see the way his pupils contracted as he focused on her in return. Their noses were so close they were touching, they could feel each other's breathing. And Fania noted that she really wanted to study the anatomy of Xin’s ‘odd eyes. Pupils were for letting light in, but it almost looked like there was light coming from inside the dragon’s eyes...

Fania realized belatedly, that her towel had been flung off during their rolling around. And so had Xin’s. She was laying on him, her large breasts pressed against his chest. One of her knees was pressed against the ground between his thighs as her other leg straddled his leg. She was sweating all over, and Xin’s skin was hot. But he wasn’t sticky, like Fania knew other sweaty humans would be. Skin to skin contact was gross because of the way humans stuck to each other. But Xin felt smooth, dry but not rough. She suddenly realized that touching Xin felt comfortable. Well, she knew that already, having fallen asleep many times after a session with him before, but she hadn’t actually thought about it that way. And… here, pressed so close against him, Fania felt herself heating up, and it had nothing to do with the sauna.

Xin watched, breathless, as the brunette traced his chest with her slender 6 fingered hand, it was rough though, Fania’s hands were callused from constant use, it felt so good~ (Xin loved their texture against his skin) and her breasts shifting and moving just so slightly...her nipples pressed against his chest. ”Xin...” Fania said in a whispering tone. ”Yeah?” Xin stared up at her, holding back a purr from the way she was stroking his chest.

“...I...” Fania swallowed, trying to find her words.

A sharp beep sounded, making the two scream and jump, smacking into each other and wincing in pain. Xin rubbed his cheek, where Fania’s skull had impacted when they both jolted, and looked up. ”Oh. Our time’s up.” The timer was there for the safety of the guests. Too long in the sauna led to health risks after all. He stood up, searched for his and Fania’s towels and the two covered themselves back up. Fania wrapped herself slowly, not really wanting to leave yet.

“Hey, we can continue our discussion in the shower room?” Xin told her, and Fania felt a smile tug at her lips. ”Sure. If they have co-ed showers.” Xin cackled, ”That’s what perception filters are fooor~” He offered Fania a hand as he dramatically bowed. The scientist rolled her eyes and took it. ”Thank you.”

The two found a shower room for Fania to rinse off her sweat. Xin didn’t really need to, but he showered with her anyway so they could keep talking.

"Xin, this change, does it...make you feel different?" Fania asked softly.

"Like, mentally? I know mom and Seb have been a little confused since apparently their gender identity has been flip flopping and it's kinda worrying.” Xin said. ”It shouldn't be happening. Gender isn't related to biological sex after all. I'm a little worried that I did something wrong.”

Fania-Ford blinked. He JUST realized he had been...wow...He had been seeing himself as a woman all this time? That was something to look into, but he was referring to... other stuff (the warm feeling between her legs, for one. The way her heart was racing, for another), but nope. No way he was asking Xin about that.

“Maybe it’s easier to change it to match their sex. You know how complicated it is when you don’t match...like Zachary.” Ford theorized.
Xin hummed. “But Stan hasn't, as far as I know. From what I could tell, if the person I changed is open to the idea of being the opposite gender, they...mentally swap without even thinking about it.” He waved his tail lazily. “Which, I can't tell if that's a good thing or not? I mean, what about you? Do you feel like a woman right now?”

Ford blushed. “I...must admit that now that I've been relaxing and talking to you...I found myself not really caring about being Fania or not. It's more important to be me." They finished showering and with towels around themselves once again, they sat on a bench. Xin hummed. “You know what? I think I've figured it out.” Ford blinked. “Yes?” Xin pointed at him. “You, me, Seb and probably all of us except Stan and Dipper, we don't base our identities on what sex we are.”

Ford blinked. “I'm not sure I understand?” Xin leaned back against the wall. “For you, you're a scientist first and a man second. I'm sure, whether you're male or female, you'll always be a 'scientist'.”

“...thanks?” Ford wasn't sure if he was being complimented or teased.

“And it's the same for the rest of us. We are US first and our sex second. But for Stan and Dipper…” Xin frowned. “Dipper spent so much of his life being worried about ‘being a man’ which tells me that he puts the fact that he's a boy before being himself. Same goes for Stan. He is a manly man, who's very attached to the idea of being what your asshole father beat into him the definition of a man should be. Someone gruff, muscular, stubborn...hairy.” Xin grimaced. “Stan's spent his life putting his sex first, he's built his entire sense of identity and self worth upon that very subject.”

Ford considered it. Xin wasn't wrong. That DID sound a lot like Stan. He always talked about how he didn't do girly things like cry or talk about his feelings. He excused a lot of the stuff he did on his sex. He always worked to maintain his persona of being a ‘real’ man…

_Just like father had always told them._

Xin growled. “Your dad fucked you all up. Heck, Dipper is a little hesitant but even HE'S more open to being more than just his biological sex.”

Ford played with his sixth finger and smiled. “Well, Stan will never admit it, but I saw he enjoyed having his nails done." Xin took the woman’s slender but calloused hands and looked at her nails. “Ooh~ Pretty. Sebastian picked it out didn't he?” Ford looked down and nodded. “I don’t know about this stuff.” Xin giggled and hugged her. “It’s ok, you still have a week to learn…” Ford sighed and sank into the hug.

“If Stan begrudgingly enjoyed being pampered, perhaps there's some hope for him?” Xin grinned mischievously. “After all, he certainly enjoys one of the other parts about being female.” Ford flushed. “Have you been _watching_ them?!” He choked.

“Of course not. But I can _feel_ their Lust from down here. God. They're STILL going at it!” Xin frowned up at the ceiling. “I guess he's not a former football star for nothing. That stamina...how does Carla keep up with him?”

Ford was bright red and searching for some way to change the subject off his brother having intercourse as a woman... "Xin, I realized we left the children without supervision--"

The dragon easily saw around. "They're at the pool now. Must be tempered. Wanna go check on them? The older kids are watching, so it’s not like they’re alone.”
“Yes. That would greatly reassure me.” Ford got up, face red from what they’d been talking about and trying to take his mind off the subject. ...And from the ongoing tingling sensation between his legs. As he breathed and, for lack of a better word, meditated, it was slowly going away. Seriously, what the fuck was going on with him? He felt like a dumb teenager again, feeling horny all the time for no reason--

Ford looked up just in time to see Xin’s towel slip and fall a few inches before the dragon caught it and pulled it back up. Oh no. The tingling was back! Goddammit!

Xin gave them swimming clothes again, and, to his surprise, Fania accepted the bikini he offered as a joke. ‘Whatever, yeah.’ Was his answer. It looked really, really good on her!! Damn Pines genes even here!

"We were wondering where you were!" Mabel waved at them as the two approached the pool. Dipper was being drowned by Diego and Zoe.

"We lost track of time, but we're back." Ford nodded.

"Get in! Play!" Zach called out at them.

Xin laughed. “How about we all hang out for a bit, but then we sleep! We can't stay here all night.” He suggested. His little brother and sister cheered. Dipper and Markus were watching their uncle/aunt with surprised looks. Woah.

Xin easily picked up the brunette and yeeted her in the pool despite her screams. The cousins moved away and Ford hit the water with a loud splash. After that, Xin jumped in.

Zoe cackled like the gremlin she was. “So what’re you and uncle Sixer doing?”

Xin picked Zoe up to place in his lap for a hug. “Why, we discuss deep philosophical questions.” He laughed. “Like, how many cat's can you own until you've reached peak happiness? If having one cat increases your dopamine and having a second gives even more, at what point would you overdose on cats?”

Zach climbed onto his brother as well while the older twins giggled and sat down in front of them. “Well, we don’t have cats, but Queen Flutter is cute and we love her and we need more! I say...at least 5 cats at once.” Zach showed him 5 little fingers. “But I like dogs too.”

Xin nodded. “Having more maple cats sounds like a good thing huh?” the younger twins nodded. “But!” Xin said “Happiness only goes up to a certain point. And once you reach max, it takes more to get you up that high again. Which means that having a lot of cats will make you super happy for a while until it doesn't work anymore because you've oversaturated yourself on cats.”

The younger twins gasped in horror. There was such a thing as too many cats? Xin nodded solemnly. “And when that happens, people think the answer is MORE cats. So they get another cat and this new cat will give them another spike of happiness...until it fades too. So, what do you think they do?” He asked them.

Zoe scrunched up her face in confusion. “They...get more cats?” She asked. Xin nodded. “And what do you think happens after that?”

“They...stop getting happy off that cat...so they have to get another new cat?” Zach guessed. Xin nodded again. “And of course, as much as you like cats, you can't keep doing this forever. That'll be too many cats and you'll still never feel satisfied. Do you understand what I'm saying?”
The twins nodded. “So...we don't need more cats. Because having one is good enough. And if we get too many then we'll never be happy.”

Xin hugged them. “Yes. That is exactly it. You're so smart. You know there are plenty of adults who haven't been able to understand this concept.”

Markus blinked. “I don't get it.” Dipper rolled his eyes. “Xin's saying that constantly seeking out things for the sake of pleasure, makes you unable to appreciate what you already have. And that if you live your life constantly trying to get more and more, you'll just end up unhappy and unsatisfied.”

Markus floated backwards and nodded. “Oohhh~ So you are saying that even if colorful stickers make you happy, you can't use stickers to be happy?” Dipper blinked and sighed. “Yes. Ok, that applies too.”

Ford rolled his eyes. Kids...

Zach kicked his legs and pushed his hair back as it was plastered to his forehead with water. “Xin...How did you turn mommy into daddy and daddy into mommy?” Zoe hit his arm. “Duh! Magic!”

“Um...can you turn me too? Because I’m a boy, but...I don’t look like my Dad...and I look like Zoe, but she’s a girl.” The little boy said and everyone fell silent. Xin pressed his lips together. “I...I want to...but I don't know if this is the right thing to do. There’s the legal papers and we’d have to make an excuse to your pediatrician and your hospital records... You're still so young…” He blinked. “Alright. How about this? When you turn 18, I'll turn your body into a guy like your dad. If that’s still what you want, once you’re older.” Xin glanced up at Ford. “That's consent, right?”

He nodded with a smile but Zach pouted. “But that's too long!”

“I think this is best, baby.” Markus stroked his hair. “As a big kid, you will know if that is your actual decision, and you will be happy because you know you decided by yourself.” Xin hugged Zach. “How about this? I will make sure you don't grow up like Zoe does, so until you're old enough to decide for real, you won't be forced to look like her before your 18th birthday?”

The kid hummed before nodding. “Ok. Deal.” He extended his hand with flames to seal it, just in case. Xin shook, his own hand on fire. Zach grinned. “I can't wait to grow up!”

Xin hugged his little brother. “Speaking of growing up...you two are gonna start school soon~”

Markus cooed and Dipper smiled. “You two are lucky. We’re part of the percentage who face dangers with a friend always by your side.” She/he high-fived his brother/sister.

“And you make friends!” Markus added. The twins grinned at that information. They loved making friends! The only had Amanda, and she’s awesome, but more friends would be cool too! Xin grinned at the older twins “How’re things with you two? Miss elementary school?”

“Welp! I already got accepted into my school!” Dipper said proudly and everyone clapped excitedly. “It’s in California so I’ll still be close to my parents and you guys.” He blushed when everyone went “Aaaaaww!”
“Well, I-I am still not sure…I'm in general studies right now.” Mabel rubbed the back of her head. “Um, but mom and dad said I should find something I like…maybe something related to arts or knitting! Or I could try politics and become president of HUGS!” She smiled. Xin grinned. “Go talk to Seb later. He's got some contacts in the textiles and fashion industry. I'm sure he can get you some recommendations if you really want to get into that. As for politics, I could make a few Deals…” (He was also planning to tear the American government apart and fix it, he just needed permission…)

Mabel rubbed her arm, unsure “I don't want to get in just because I have connections…” Xin scoffed. “Mabel, in the working world, it's ALL about connections, money and status. Finding a GOOD job in the current market is all but impossible without connections and recommendations. Society is fucked.”

Mabel wilted. “That sounds scary and grown up. I don't know if I'm ready for that yet.” Dipper hugged her. “But we'll all be here with you. We'll help you figure it out together.” She hugged him back, enveloping Dipper's slender form with her muscular arms. “Thanks, bro-bro.”

Zoe raised her hand. “I want to do what mommy does…um...kick ass!” She repeated what she heard from dad once. “I want to be a cop!” Zach added. Xin ruffled their hair. “That's my little sis and bro! Taking down bad guys!” He blinked. “Hm, I'm sure you'd be able to easily subdue criminals with your telekinesis and prevent them from hurting people or escaping.”

The twins high-fived and then they looked at their Uncle, watching them with a fond smile. “Did you always know you wanted to be a scientist and see monster’s guts?” Zoe grinned.

Ford blinked. “Eh, I don't see monster’s guts, Zoe...not anymore.” He whispered to himself. “To be honest...I wasn’t quite sure, the possibility of studying the paranormal and being in a scientific career was given to me in my last year…” Without a scholarship, he knew he’d have to work to pay for college… and he just… wasn’t made for that.

“What about you Xin?” Zoe asked. “What are you going to do?”

Xin blinked slowly. “Me?” He paused. “I don't...know?” He scratched his head. “I haven't really thought about it. I've already got my high school degree and I can easily get a scholarship on my grades alone but technically I can start working now. Except everyone thinks Miz is like...13 years old.” He leaned against the wall. “I don't know what I wanna do. I was planning to help take care of you and Zach until you grow up.”

“But what are you going to do afterward?” Zach asked. Xin didn't know. He didn't think about it. He just wanted to stay with Seb and everyone else. But he couldn't live with Seb and Wanda forever, right? Kids were supposed to move out when they grew up, right?

But he didn’t want to leave them...the twins looked at him and they smiled. “You can kick ass with us!” Zoe shrugged. Xin smiled. They were so adorable.

“Zoe, don’t say that.” Ford scolded lightly and the girl frowned. “But mommy an’ daddy, does that! Ass, ass, ass!” Her brother joined in with the chanting and Ford pinched the bridge of his nose as the older twins laughed loudly. It was so painfully clear they were Seb’s kids.

Xin giggled and splashed his pouting face.

Dipper rolled her eyes. “Does he have to act like a child even when he looks like that?” Markus shrugged. “I dunno, with the whole Chinese thing, he looks like he could be anywhere between 19 and 25?”
Ford shrugged. He was used to childishness. Paternity had gotten Seb a little more mature, but barely noticeable. He was still reckless and childish. It was part of who he was.

Xin’s hair was flowing around him in the water and Ford suddenly realized his tail was still out. “Xin!” He hissed and looked around for others. “Relax, perception filter.” He dragged the temporary woman closer to him with his tail. The two stared at each other before Xin smiled and moved Ford’s hair away from his face. “There! Your bun unravelled. Want me to help you pull it back up?”

Ford sighed and, with a blushing nod, he turned around. (For some reason, he thought it was stupid to miss a chance to let Xin touch his hair and feeling his warm body close to him again--AaAh, the warmth! the tingling!)

Xin gathered the long brown locks and gently tied it up. “A-Aren’t you a fire spirit? You seem quite at home in the water.” Ford said, to fill the silence.

"I suppose, but I always liked water best. It’s my favorite Type for BakeMon.” Xin said, swishing his tail lazily through the water. “I always started with Water.”

The scientist laughed. He understood that reference, the twins had once sat him down to show him their collection of BakeMon cards. He was a good uncle and listened to everything they said. Though the names, he didn’t remember. There was...Pikachu...green Pikachu...fire Pikachu...

Xin freed her and turned her around. "There. Much better!” The dragon smiled warmly.

“Thank--Ah!” Fonia was hit in the head by a beach ball. “Sorry, Uncle Ford!” Dipper laughed and Markus hid behind the little twins. Ford narrowed his eyes and grabbed the floating ball. “Come back here!” The cousins all screamed and swam away as Ford chased them with the beach ball. Xin grinned widely, incredibly proud of his owl. He frowned. His? Eh, he really needed to work on this possessiveness thing, didn’t he…

Xin swam off deeper into the pool, the water felt nice. He surfaced with a gasp and brushed his hair from his face. He heard a giggle. Xin turned to see a young woman outside the pool, standing a meter away from the border.

Xin blinked. “Um...hi?” The woman sat down on the edge of the pool, cross-legged. “Hello~ I guess coming to swim at night was a better idea than I thought…” She said sheepishly. “I’m Amelie, what’s your name?”

“...Xin…” The dragon frowned and hid his tail behind him under the water just in case. Well, she wasn’t being weird, and Wanda did always worry that he wasn’t making any friends with normal humans who weren’t in the family. And this girl wasn’t trying to impose on her personal space… so… well… might as well talk to her?

“Hello~ I guess coming to swim at night was a better idea than I thought…” She said sheepishly. “I’m Amelie, what’s your name?”

Well, she wasn’t being weird, and Wanda did always worry that he wasn’t making any friends with normal humans who weren’t in the family. And this girl wasn’t trying to impose on her personal space… so… well… might as well talk to her?

“That’s a nice name…” She smiled kindly. Xin couldn’t feel anything malicious from her, so it must be ok. “Thanks, I like your name too.” Amelie smiled and looked at the kids playing. “Are they your family?” Xin smiled proudly. “Yup! My adoptive family. Have you come with your family or with friends?” He swam a little closer and leaned against the side of the pool.

“I came with my parents. We’re going to an aunt’s wedding.” Amelie shrugged. “I don’t know anyone here and I didn’t really want to go out on my own to meet people…” She twirled a strand of her hair around a finger “I wasn’t expecting other people to be at the pool so late,” Xin laughed. “Yeah, well, my little brother and sister refuse to sleep. I figured letting them swim for a bit would tire them out enough I’ll be able to tuck them in.”
Amelie looked over at the children splashing each other. “That sounds nice. I’m an only child. Always wanted a sibling. It’s kind of lonely.” She looked a little wistful. Xin smiled and pulled himself out of the water. He sat down beside her, his tail just out of view, hidden behind his hair. “I love my siblings. I’m...really happy mom adopted me. But even if you’re an only child, I’m sure you’ve got your friends right?”

Amelie nodded. “Yeah. I wish they could have come too. It’s gonna be boring by myself all summer.” She looked (and tasted) sad. Xin felt a little bad. “Well, if it’s not too weird to hang out with someone you just met, my family’s gonna be here all summer too.” Amelie lit up. “R-really?”

Xin brushed his hair behind an ear. “I mean, sure? I...don’t really have any friends outside of my family. I’m actually a little shy around humans.” The dragon admitted. Amelie laughed. “What? Do you talk to plants instead?” Xin blushed. “Only sometimes…”

Amelie giggled. “Well I heard talking to plants helps them grow.” Xin scoffed. “Naw, there isn’t enough carbon dioxide for that. The real reason why people say that is ‘cause the people who talk to their plants generally pay more attention to them and therefore take better care of them.”

The two chatted, Xin was actually having fun. Markus stared at them and squealed. Her inner matchmaker coming to the surface. “Ooh~who’s THAT?” She ran over with a wide grin. “Um, Amelie, this is Markus, my cousin, Markus, Amelie.” The teen grinned widely at the girl sitting next to Xin. “You’re so pretty! You two look adorable together!” Dipper, Ford and the twins noticed Mabel bothering Xin and spotted the girl beside him, she looked to be in her early 20s. Dipper sighed. “Mabel, leave them alone.”

Fania watched Xin laugh as he talked to that girl. Oh, looks like he was trying to make a human friend. That was good, Fania knew that was a good thing, Bill needed more human interaction. But Fania also felt a little… lonely without the dragon’s warm presence behind him.

“Xin! Is that your girlfriend?!” Zoe screamed as she pointed at the girl. Xin laughed. “Nah, I JUST met her. This is Amelie. Amelie, these are my little brother and sister, Zach and Zoe.” The girl squealed. “Oh my gosh! Twins! That’s so cute!”

“Twins kinda run in the family. Markus has a twin sister, Mary. But we all call her Dipper.” Xin explained. “Dipper?” Amelie giggled. Zach nodded. “She has a birthmark that looks like the constellations.” He smiled. Zoe nodded. “And our mommy has two sisters! They look the same but they also don’t!”

“Triplets.” Xin explained. Amelie nodded. “Wow. I heard twins were genetic but...geez.” Zach and Zoe swam up to her. “Are you going to be Xin’s girlfriend?” Xin glared and the girl blushed. “We JUST met, we can’t be dating if we just met.” Xin scolded them.

Luckily, Dipper and Ford had swam over and distracted Amelie. “Hello.” Ford nodded, putting his hands behind his back unconsciously. “It’s nice to see Xin making friends...”

Amelia smiled. “Are you...his...mom?” She tried, but it was almost impossible. This woman was not old enough for that. Wait, no, he said he was adopted.
“NOO!” Ford cried horrified, the thought was disturbing. “I-I am his...eh...un-aunt? It’s my sister who adopted him.” He coughed. “It’s nice to meet you, young lady.”

“The pleasure is mine.” Amelia smiled. “This is our Auntie Stefania! One of our mommy’s sisters!” Zach declared proudly and Amelia nodded, taking in her face and features to try and imagine the other two women. Couldn’t be that different, right? Amelia shook hands with the woman and both blinked at their discoveries. Ford noticed the girl’s hand was unusually cold, while Amelia noticed she had 6 fingers! That was so cool! Neither of them commented on it though. No need for that.

It was when the little twins started yawning that everyone knew it was time to go to sleep already. Xin picked his little siblings out of the water and wrapped them in their crocodile and bear bathrobes. “It was nice meeting you, Amelia, hope we can meet again some other day!” Xin grinned at her. She blushed. “O-okay! Hope to see you too!” They waved to her and left, the girl going in the pool to swim for a bit on her own.

As soon as they were out of there and wrapped in towels, Xin hiding his tail under it, Markus turned to him with a grin. “Sooo~you made a pretty new friend~” He teased. Xin sighed. “She’s lonely, none of her friends are here. Why shouldn’t I try to make a friend?” Ford patted Xin’s shoulder. “Well I think that was very kind of you.”

Dipper sighed. “And how are you going to explain how your family all changed sex a week from now?” Xin waved a hand. “Details, I’ll find a way.” Dipper groaned. This was going to end horribly. They weren’t in Gravity Falls! People weren’t going to just...ignore this sort of thing. Even WITH the perception filter.

Xin just waved off his concern again. Dipper wanted to sob.

Slices of Life and Family

Chapter 32

The summer goes on

Xin helped the twins bathe, change and tucked them into bed. He gave them each a kiss on the forehead. Their irresponsible parents had been having wild sex somewhere so it was on him to take care of these little monsters. The pool actually worked because they went to sleep without protest. Xin smiled at them fondly and flicked the lights off before going to Ford's room.

“Hey, Fordsie? I can spend the night with you, right?” He asked. Ford’s hotel room was next to Sebs’s, which was next to Stan’s. Ford opened the door. “Xin? What?” The dragon was in an oversized t-shirt, his preferred pajamas. “I was wondering if we could have a quick session? And then just...snuggle?” Xin asked. Ford blinked. “Well...I suppose it would be a good test of my strength in this body...” He frowned in thought. "You're going to come every night? Not that I mind!! I was just wondering."

“It's fun. Also, I don’t like to sleep alone. But the twins kick.” Xin admitted. “Besides, there’s plenty of room since you’re not sharing with anyone.” Ford laughed. “Sure.” He stepped back and Xin bounced into the room, wagging his tail eagerly. “Hey, maybe I’ll actually overpower you this time~” Xin laughed. Ford snorted. “Well, if you do, this means I need to train harder...”

In Seb and Wanda’s room, the couple were lazing in each other’s arms peacefully. Walter had a hand on one of Sab’s breasts, not squeezing or anything, just lying on her, taking comfort in each other’s presence. They had gone multiple rounds and they were both exhausted. “This...has been wonderful...” Sab sighed. Walter nodded. “As nice as it is, I am looking forward to when our bodies turn back to normal, and doing this again as ourselves.”

Sab mumbled something sleepily and Walter chuckled. They sighed and were about to drift off to sleep when a thump sounded from the wall leading to Ford’s room. They blinked. A thumping came again. They heard a muffled “Ahhh~” and sat up. Was that Xin’s voice?! There was a grunting sound that Sab recognized as Ford’s female voice. The parents blushed.

“Fffffuck! Fordsie~how are you STILL so go~ooh~od at this?!”

“Ahhh~S-sooo tight...”

“Hey! Using your tail is cheating!”

“Well you’ve got me tied to the bed post! I need SOME leverage!”

“Well if you’re gonna be like that, I’m just going to leave you tied up all night.”

“...That actually doesn’t sound half bad...”
Sab and Walter blushed madly and covered their ears. It was bad enough they had to hear Stan and Carla going at it. “I can’t believe they’re still doing this…” Walter groaned. “I know they got together before I adopted Miz...but STILL…”

“Well…” Sabri yawned. “We did it...I guess they also have the right to try it this way.” She snuggled closer to Walter and covered her face with a pillow. “Besides, he’s not Miz right now…” Sab sighed. “Just...put a pillow over our head and go to sleep...I’m tired…”

Walter nodded and, ignoring what sounded like Xin having sex with Fania, he drifted off to sleep.

Xin was panting hard when they finished their session. It had been amazing! Ford’s hands were so much smaller but they still left tiny six-fingered marks over him. She knew she wasn’t training as hard as before, but Fania was glad to know she was still just as strong as a woman, (She did break that guy’s nose in the morning), enough to have Xin wiggling like a snake as he tried uselessly to escape.

Ford, wearing the loose shorts and t-shirts Seb insisted she needed to get as pjs because she ‘looked amazing in them’, collapsed next to his/her wrestling partner, sweating lightly. “Ah! This was amazing!” He laughed. “We haven't done this in awhile.” Xin nodded and dragged the woman closer to him. He said session AND cuddles, and cuddling Fordsie who was FINALLY shorter than him, sounded amazing.

Fania rolled her eyes when Xin’s tail hugged her waist. She easily curled up next to the dragon, resting her head between his shoulder and chest. “Now I’m tired.” she said and Xin giggled. He turned off the light and they talked for a while in the dark. About Ford’s upcoming projects, new things he had in mind, Xin's idea for a carbon scrubber to pull the excess from the atmosphere, the Island and what they were going to do with it, how the news that all the children had gone missing was apparently being kept quiet, but the info was being leaked and people were unsure how to deal with it (some were rejoicing that the children ‘escaped’ or were ‘rescued’, while the more pessimistic claimed that the US government had finally killed them all and dumped the bodies somewhere), and somehow, from a philosophical debate about morals, the topic eventually went to Filbrick.

Ford frowned. “You...you should have seen him. He actually...seemed sorry…Xin, he cried . I have NEVER seen him do such a thing… Or express any emotion whatsoever. Except… y’know… anger.”

Xin grumbled. “So he finally realized Seb's his son, but it doesn't change what he did. What he felt justified doing. To a child who couldn’t even defend himself.”

Ford nodded. “I know that...it was unfair, it-it was so unfair that Sebas didn’t have the help I did…I know I was also wrong, I let myself be blinded by what my father said...but I was also a child, I didn’t know better...for me, fee-feeling like I was better than him made me feel better with myself ...if he had told Sebastian that he was good too, if...Seb hadn’t been treated like a freak…” He hugged Xin’s tail. “Maybe we would have stayed as best friends forever…” He sniffled.

Xin hugged Ford to his chest, patting her hair. “Woulda, couldda, shouldda, that's all it is. You know...even in Seb's old dimension, where he was Bill Cipher and never messed with Filbrick, and it was just you and Stan, Filbrick STILL threw Stan into the streets when he was 17.”

“But Stanley was going to college...he got accepted even before me...Why would Filbrick kick him out? He was impressed with Stanley.”
“Because that didn't happen in the other dimension. Without Seb there to take the abuse, it fell on Stan, because he was no good at schoolwork and no one urged him to play sports, Stan was considered a loser. Filbrick never let him find out what he was good at, Stan in that world didn't have it as bad as Seb did, but he and his Ford both had to take Filbrick's bullshit growing up.”

Ford was trying really hard not to cry, but he failed, eventually. Was Filbrick really so awful in every existing dimension?! He hated his brother for years! And that other Ford never helped Stanley! He was sure every other him was tricked by Bill though...and got saved by their brothers...even when they didn’t deserve it. “I-I’m sorry…” He choked down a sob. “I’m so stupid! I should have done something! But I was a coward!”

“You were a child. It's not your job to stand up to an abuser, that's victim blaming.” Xin sighed.

“B-But-!” Ford was a mess already, cuddled closer to the dragon, trying to seek comfort, and Xin gave hi/er a hug. “He’s my triplet! I’m the oldest! I was supposed to help! To notice a-at least! Xin...af-after I...I erased his memories, it took some time for him to-to recover them...he woke up screaming...crying because he said Filbrick wanted to hurt him, or that he was being hit, or whiped...he-he said...please, please don’t tell dad, Ford! --because I was that awful! I told Dad! I always tattled on him-- I’m horrible…!” He sobbed.

Xin pet Ford's hair as he gasped through his crying. “I won't deny you were a pretty vindictive child.” Ford sobbed “--but children are assholes. They don't know what empathy is until they learn it. Filbrick certainly never taught you that. I'm amazed Seb learned it at all. You're still so-so at human interaction, but you're learning. And better yet, you're learning from good role models now, not from your shitty father.”

Ford just cried, trying to muffle his sounds with Xin’s arm. When he calmed down enough, his sobs reduced to hiccups, he mumbled “I am not...I am an idiot…” He sniffled. “A genius wouldn’t hurt their triplets.” He wiped at his cheeks.

Xin stroked his hair. Ford had talked about this to a professional, but this was something that weighed on both him and Sebas, it wouldn't really stop making them feel upset or sad. Not for a while. “Let me tell you, you can be both, actually, so don’t feel too bad.” He kissed her forehead. “Sebastian has forgiven you, remember? Go from there, show him the affection you think you didn’t give him when you were kids.”

He held Ford until she finally settled down, sniffling slightly. Quietly, Ford commented in a whisper “One good thing about being a girl...it's fine for me to cry...” Xin scoffed. “Crying is for BOTH men and women, that's a bullshit manliness idea your father has, discard it.” Ford snorted, not sure if he should feel bad or not. “So, you think I should forget everything my father taught me?”

“I'm saying there are some values he impressed upon you that are problematic and toxic.” Xin's tail curled around Ford's leg. “And you're allowed to cry whenever you want, whether you're a handsome man or a pretty woman. It shouldn’t matter.”

Ford laughed. Xin nodded into her fluffy hair. “Yup. Super pretty. Seb is still the hottest one though.”

Ford burst out laughing. “Ahahaha! Really? So Seb's just the hot one in the family?” He started giggling at the idea. Xin rolled over onto his back, Ford cradled to his chest. “Yup. You're still 2nd, but again, really close.”

“So what does that make Stan?” Ford snorted. Xin hummed playfully “Well~now that he's a
“You know, I have to admit having smooth legs is really something.” Stan commented as they had lunch, a few days later after getting used to his transformation. “I haven’t had hairless legs since I was a child.” He spoke with his mouth full as he rubbed one of his legs.

“Ok. First of all, ew, we are eating. Second of all, we are eating!” Sab scowled. “I don’t want to hear about your leg hair!”

The family laughed. Walter looked around. “Where is Xin? He normally loves eating with us.” Come to think of it, Xin had been going out on his own a lot these past few days.

Markus grinned. “He must be meeting with his girlfriend!!”

Walter spat his food back on his plate as Sab started choking on her drink. “‘Girlfriend??’” They shouted and looked at Ford who was calmly cutting his steak instead of trying to tear it up like his savage triplets. The scientist rolled his eyes. “She’s not his girlfriend! Xin made a friend when we were at the pool a few days ago.” Ford explained. Markus pouted. “But she COULD become his
“And who is this girl?” Walter asked. Dipper spoke up “Her name's Amelie. She's here with her family.” Walter narrowed his eyes “Hold old is she?” Dipper shrugged. “Like...20?” Markus shook his head “Naw, I asked her, she's 22. Had her birthday last month.” Dipper shrugged. “Well Xin's somewhere in his 20s as well so it's fine right?”

Walter bit his lip. On one hand, he was glad Xin was finally reaching out to socialize, on the other, he worried. “Could you and Markus hang out with them too? Or Danna? I'm sorry, I just worry.” Sab patted his muscled arm.

“Xin will be fine. He's got his senses up and scanning for malicious intent.” Dipper shrugged. Walter sighed and Sab patted his shoulder. “It'll be fine. It's not like it was with Miz. Xin is an adult.”

Walter pouted but he knew they were right. Xin could take care of himself… (Should be able to…)

Markus looked at Ford. “Hey, and why did you quickly affirm they aren’t dating?” The boy raised an eyebrow.

Ford blushed a bit. “Because...Xin said they weren’t, he told me.” The other triplets and Shermie shared a look. Did they fight about that? Was Fordsie jealous about Xin befriending this Amelie, was that why Xin had to reassure him that they were only friends?

Was it so hard to just say that THEY were dating? (The adults still didn’t know why Xin and Ford were keeping their relationship a secret. Or maybe they were in an open relationship? Many of them were very confused about their asexual brother apparently having wild sex with another asexual...) Well, neither of them wanted to out their brother/sister so they remained silent. Shermie simply told Markus to shut his mouth and eat. In truth, Ford had expressed his worries of Xin accidentally leading the poor girl on. Xin had told him that he had stated to Amelie that they were just going to be friends, because he wasn't interested in her in that way. Amelie had looked a little sad but accepted it, thanking Xin for being upfront and honest about it.

Ford took another bite of meat and wondered where Xin and Amelie were now…

“-so then, he says to me ‘But I didn't know it was baking SODA that puts out fires! I thought they both worked!’ and that was how my roommate Tee- ah, Theseus burned down the kitchen.” Xin said. Amelie was snorting with laughter as she pounded the table. The two were out on the deck of the hotel's outdoor pool. Xin was glad the hotel allowed guests to take food out of the dining hall. There were bins all around for people to place their dirty dishes for pick up. Xin had been regaling Amelie with stories of his friends (changing their names to be more human friendly).

Amelie laughed. “Oh god! That’s so funny!” She wheezed. Xin nodded with a smile. “Yeah! My friends are super crazy, but I really love them.” The young woman nodded giggling. “I wish I had something as funny to tell you...the funniest thing I can think about is when I was little, I fell asleep in...the pool and my parents couldn’t find me.”

Xin snorted. “Well, I’m sure it was an exciting day for your parents. You have a pool at home?” The girl nodded “Ef, yes. We love water.” Amelie grinned. “Ever since I was a baby, I was taken to the beach and to the water.” Xin sipped his drink, a pineapple and strawberry mix “I used to go swimming a lot as a child...until my OCD and germ-phobia started getting worse and I couldn’t stand public changing rooms anymore.” He looked down at his hands. “I...feel kind of bad about Amelie patted his hand. “You don’t have to feel bad about that, you can’t help it, it’s ok.” She smiled. “I hate closed places, if I feel like I don’t have enough space to move around, I get really upset.” Xin nodded. “Relatable.” Both laughed.

‘Unaware’ to them, the Pines were all behind the wall, spying on the alien demon. Markus was sure it was a date, Dipper was sure people from different sexes could be talking and hanging out without it necessarily being a date. Sab smacked them both, sure they were making too much noise.

“She’s very cute.” Sab mused as she looked the girl up and down. Amelie had short black hair that curled and bounced as she moved. Her fair skin was healthy looking, there was some solid muscle tone in her legs and arms, a swimmer’s build. Sab narrowed her eyes at the girl. “Too cute…” Walter smacked her arm softly.

“So what do you do when you’re not swimming?” Xin asked as he took a bite of his sandwich, a turkey and cheese with plenty of spinach and tomatoes. Amelie shrugged. “I guess, I like people watching.” Xin snorted “Mweh too.”

Amelie laughed. “Don’t talk with your mouth full.” She picked up the napkin and reached over to wipe off some of the tomato juice dripping down Xin’s chin. The Pines all gasped. “Did you see that? They’re DEFINITELY dating!” Markus hissed. Sab rubbed her chin. “Her voice is really cute too. She MUST be doing that on purpose! Trying to seduce Xin!” Walter sighed. “You’re all ridiculous. I’m sure they’re just friends, like Xin said.”

Xin brushed his hair away from his face so he wouldn’t accidentally eat it. The wind blew softly and his hair fluttered into the air like long black ribbons. Amelie stared. “Beautiful…” she was entranced by his hair as it fluttered back down as the wind died. Xin blinked. “Oh, thanks?” Sab gasped. “See?! Right there! She’s definitely into him!” She didn’t know what she should be feeling. Xin was her little brother (son)! Sab wanted to be sure he was with someone safe, who wouldn’t take advantage of him! Besides, she was just a human girl! Xin was an all powerful and all knowing alien god! He had to tell her no! At least with Ford, he already knew that Xin was Bill Cipher! Ford rolled his eyes. “No, she isn’t. Besides, everyone says that Xin’s hair is beautiful.” The unicorns had certainly liked it.

“Yeah, but not like that!” Markus pointed at them. “Ah, this is going to kill me…” He dramatically fake-fainted over his Dad and Abraham rolled his eyes. Dramatic, just like Shermie.

“What are you planning to do today? I hope I’m not keeping you away from your family.” Amelie looked apologetic. Xin waved a hand. “It’s ok. We went to the beach in the morning, everyone is just eating lunch now. Besides, I’m sure my Dad will be happy that I made a friend.” Walter nodded to their group. “Super proud.”

“Right, Dad?” Xin turned to look at the wall where the Pines gasped and hid behind it a little more. “You guys are super loud, did you really think I wouldn’t have noticed you?” Xin laughed. Markus groaned. “Damn! Dipper! You were being too loud!” Dipper scoffed. “ME? You’re the one whisper screaming.”

“So, Amelie, this is my family.” Xin giggled. He was dressed in some of the clothes Danna and Markus had picked out for him. Walter and Seb winced a little, at least this one wasn’t all black, and the pants were stretchy instead of opened to expose skin. The shirt was not much more than a tank top though. Walter walked up with a polite smile. “Sorry, we heard that you were with a girl and your mother—” He jabbed his thumb back at Sabrina “—was convinced you were going to seduce our son away.”

“H-hey! I didn’t say it like that!” Sab pouted. “Well, regardless, it’s very nice to meet you, Amelie right?” Walter held out his hand. The girl blinked. “R-right! Yes! It’s very nice to meet you too. Are you Xin’s dad?”

“Um, yes, yes, I am his Dad.” Walter grinned and held back a giggle. Amelie shook his hand. He was a handsome man, married to a pretty woman. She extended a hand for Sabrina to shake. “Hi, it's a pleasure to meet you. I met your triplet sister a few days ago…” She giggled. “Not to sound impertinent, but you don’t really look that similar.” Sab grinned and pulled Stan to him. “Nope! This is our other sister.” Stan nodded. “Sup.”

Amelie smiled and looked at the rest of the group who happily waved at her. There were a lot of people spying on them. Xin was so lucky to have such a large family…

They all introduced themselves and then Walter dragged them away to leave the friends to their playdate. Xin laughed. “They’re so weird.” Amelie giggled too. “Humans are wonderful.” she said easily. They finished their food and went off to play with the amenities the hotel offered. The game room was filled with other young men and women hanging out. Amelie went a little closer to Xin who also pressed closer, worried about the crowd of strangers. He winced. Crowds made his head hurt. Even though he was layering now to filter out most of it, he really needed more practice. “It’s busier in here than I thought.”

“Should we go out to the beach instead?” Amelie asked. Xin nodded. “Might be better.” They turned to leave when Xin felt someone walk up to them. He dodged just in time to avoid having his butt slapped. Seriously?! Why did everyone try that? “Hey!” He growled at the guy who grinned at him. “Sorry, it was just begging to be slapped.” The guy laughed. His friends all laughed too. They were holding half empty bottles of beer. Xin groaned. Damn idiots getting drunk during the day.

“Seriously, I almost thought you were a woman, with hips like that.” The guy came up, Xin wrinkled his nose at the scent of alcohol. Seriously, were all the assholes in the city going to bother him when he was away from his family? The guy leaned closer “It’s a compliment babe.”

Xin pushed him away, using all his self-control not to punch him in his smug fuckboy face. “Well thank you, but compliments should be given with words, not hands.” He took Amelie’s hand when she seemed a little afraid and she squeezed his hand. “Come on, let's get outta here.” He and Amelie tried to get to the door but one of the guys blocked them. “Come on, it was just a joke.”

“Well it wasn’t funny. It wasn’t even hilarious.” Xin muttered. “Please excuse us.” He huffed when they refused to move. “I bet this beautiful lady here understood it was just a joke, right darling?” The guy wagged his eyebrows at Amelie. She frowned at him. Xin wanted to start punching but they were only idiots… and not scum. He felt he shouldn’t harm people who haven’t actually hurt anyone. These guys were all talk, which was good (for them). If they had done anything for real, he would have already torn them apart.

“Move, please. We wish to leave.” Xin pushed at the guy by the door, channeling some of his authority as a god, the way he normally addressed people as a dragon. He felt Amelie hold his hand tightly. The men scoffed. “Fine then. Think you’re too good to hang out with us?” Xin frowned. “Not at all, I just don’t think you’d be any fun to hang with.” He pushed his way past and got Amelie out the door before him, just in case. The guy’s friends all went “Oooh–he called you out!”

“I should clarify, you’re all being incredibly unfun right now. Come back when you’re sober and capable of polite conversation, if you’re just after meeting people to make friends, we can see about hanging out. If you continue to act like a child, then I will be forced to treat you like one.
Good day.” Xin scolded them before closing the door. He heard the guys all laughing at their friend before one commented “Wait...was he talkin’ ta us too?”

Xin sighed as they got to a more public area where staff from the hotel could be seen (and therefore, prevent incidents) and turned to Amelie. “Ok, beach then? I will change into swim trunks first.” Amelie nodded and smiled. “I-I’ll wait for you at reception then.” Xin nodded and he quickly trotted upstairs. The room he was supposed to share with the twins was still a mess, the hotel cleaners hadn’t come yet, that was fine (Xin liked tidying up himself), and it was empty.
Maybe the twins were playing somewhere else. He grabbed his stuff, changed, and then knocked on Wanda and Seb’s room. “Dad? You there?” He heard the, “Come in!” and entered. The kids were watching TV there while Walter was on his laptop and Sab was drawing. “Dad, Sab, I’m going to the beach with Amelie, is that ok?”

“Oh really?” Walter smiled and Sab grinned. “Have fun, but not too much fun.” Xin rolled his eyes. “We want to go too!” The twins pleaded. “Oh, um-” Xin looked at them. He would have to ask Amelie first…

Walter looked back at his laptop and continued working, worried about the long vacation he was taking. The office was going to fall to pieces without him. “Take your siblings with you or you aren’t going.” He said emotionlessly. Sab laughed. “HAHA! Yes!”

Xin rolled his eyes. “Kay-” He picked up the twins, “Come on squirts. Let’s go.” Zoe whined “Can we take Queen Flutter and Sir Bedazzle? They’ve been stuck on the balcony for days.” Xin sighed. “You know we can’t bring them. My perception filters can hide them from anyone who sees them from afar but up close is more difficult, especially if they try touching them.”

The plantimals had been given the balcony of the twin’s or their parent’s room. There was plenty of sunlight and room to run around. They watered them every morning but...the two DID look a little bored. The twins continued to give Xin sad looks. He sighed. “Alright. I’ll see about disguising them as real animals…” The twins cheered “Yay!”

“But they’ll need leashes, and you’re in charge of making sure they don’t escape and get lost. Ok?”
Xin told them. Walter and Sab nodded. “The plantimals are your responsibility.”

Zoe blinked. “But we’re just little kids. Kids don’t have responsibilities.” She said adorably, trying to get away from it. Sab shook her head. “Nope. You asked for a pet, and we help you, but those two are yours.” The twins groaned as Xin carried them back to their own hotel room and out to the balcony to see their pets. The two plantimals perked up, thrilled to see them.

Sir Bedazzle jumped up and down, excited as usual while Queen Flutter blinked at them, confused about what was happening, wary but unafraid. The twins and Xin looked at the plantimals. “This won’t hurt, ok little ones?” Xin murmured as he knelt down and picked up Sir Bedazzle. The acorn puppy whined as he felt...weird. Queen Flutter stared as the round acorn stretched until he had become a real dog. He looked like a brown Maltese puppy. Xin placed the puppy down and Sir Bedazzle’s eyes were wide as he wiggled around in confusion. What happened?!

Xin went to get Queen Flutter, who tried to flutter away but Xin managed to get a hold of her “Shh...it’s ok, this will only take a second…” She ‘mew’ed in distress as Xin shifted her form as well. Finally Xin dropped the siamese kitten to the ground. “There. All set.” Xin sighed. He materialized some leashes and animal vests. “Now, you two need to hold onto them ok? Don’t lose them.”
Zoe held Sir Bedazzle because he wanted to run around and she could keep up better with him, while Zach happily pulled the poor cat that didn’t want to walk. “Come Queen Flutter! We will show you the beach!” He giggled and they stopped by to wave at their parents before leaving. “I just hope they don’t get lost.” Sab sighed and went back to her new design. Thank god for tablets and laptops.

The siblings got downstairs, the twins holding their pets and Xin holding an armful of towels and a basket with beach supplies. He was in a red pair of swim trunks and a white t-shirt. He also brought jackets for when the twins got cold because of the windy ocean air. He waved at Amelie who was in a cute one piece swimsuit with seaweed patterns on it. “Hey, my brother and sister are coming too, is that alright?”

Amelie cooed. Twins~ “Of course! And...I didn’t know you had pets!” she knelt in front of the puppy and kitten. Sir Bedazzle pulled, wanting to see everything in this strange park. “He is Sir Bedazzle of the Forest, and she is Queen Fluttertail, Lady of the Feywilds! Xin made them for us!”

Amelie frowned and Xin laughed sheepishly. “She meant I brought them to the house!” He clarified quickly. Amelie giggled and knelt to pet Sir Bedazzle. He sniffed her hand before licking her. She cooed. “He’s so cute. I’ve never actually seen a dog up close before.” Zoe gasped. “What?! Really?” Amelie nodded. “I’ve only seen pictures of them.”

“But doggies are everywhere! It’s impossible you haven’t seen at least ONE!” Zach argued. Xin patted their heads. “Maybe she lives in a place with no dogs, don’t be rude.” Amelie nodded. “I actually live in a place where dogs...aren’t allowed.” The twins pouted. That was so sad. Zoe picked up Sir Bedazzle and lifted him up from the flower pot he was sniffling. “Well, we can share him so you can say you saw a puppy!” Amelie laughed. “Thank you. That’s very sweet.”

They set off for the beach, Zoe tugging on Sir Bedazzle’s leash to stop him from running off. He was delighted to be out and about, sniffing everything and everyone they passed. Oh. So this is like daddy/mommy pulling their leashes (Zoe realized) ...Queen Flutter refused to walk and Zach had to carry her. Xin and Amelie chatted about the different pets they’ve had. Amelie’s family kept a lot of fish.

“But fish don’t do much.” Zoe commented as they walked. “Oh, I can assure you they do, you just need to pay them some attention.” Amelie said with a mysterious smile. Finally they reached the beach. Xin settled the towel and the twins’ stuff. Everyone sat down. Zach hugged the little cat to his chest and Sir Bedazzle started digging in the sand, excited. “Come on, sunscreen.” Xin called out. The twins groaned but allowed Xin to rub them down with the cream. He quickly rubbed himself down and handed the bottle to Amelie.

“Oh, I already put some on earlier.” She said. Xin shrugged. He made sure their towels were secure before turning to the twins. “Ok, go have fun. But no going deeper than your knees in the water.” “Ok Xin.” the two chorused and ran off. Sir Bedazzle ran with them while Queen Flutter curled on top the towel and went to sleep. Amelie sighed wistfully. “It’s so nice here.” She commented.

Xin nodded. Tourism in the area had picked up ever since he magically cleaned the beach. No one knew who had gone through the entire area and removed all the trash during the triplet’s birthday party a few weeks back, but the hotels and other businesses in the area were quick to advertise the clean beaches. Xin remembered how everyone had been shocked to see Glass Shard Beach so swamped and bustling with activity.

Seb had commented that the nearby beaches had been so fucked up they had to drive further and further as they grew up. The beach was just the triplets’ space to search for adventure.
“Yeah, this place is awesome. Have you been here before?” Xin asked but the girl shook her head.
“No, this is my first time actually…” Xin nodded. “And when is your aunt’s wedding?”

“Around the end of the summer but dad and mom wanted to hang around with the family here...I haven't gotten used to being away from home yet.” She sighed. Xin pet Queen Flutter. “Are you far from home? Where are you from? My family’s from the west coast.”

“Oh...well, I’m not from this country.” She smiled. “I’m from up north.” Xin blinked. “Like, Canada?” Amelie laughed. “Nah, farther out at sea. Iceland.” Xin stared at her in surprise. “That’s cool. Hey, this might sound weird but, do you listen to Icelandic pop sensation BABBA?”

Amelie laughed. “Of course? Who doesn’t?” Xin giggled. “Oh man, you need to talk to Dipper, she’s a huge fan of them.”

“Oh really? That’s so cool!” Amelie laughed. “And, what about you? What music do you like?” She sat cross-legged on the towel and looked at Xin with a happy smile. It was fun spending time with this boy. Xin grinned “I’m a huge fan of Vocaloid music.” Amelie tilted her head “I don’t know what that is.”

“Well it’s this software program with a digital Diva with their own unique voice, you can buy the software and write your own songs, and make your Vocaloid sing it for you. The cool thing is that, since anyone can buy and use it, there are SO many different types of songs out there. Every genre, every subject matter, a whole range of different music made by people online around the world…” Xin gushed. “My favorite Divas are Rin and Len, they’re twins! Iroha’s great too, I love her voice...ah...there’s over 30 different Vocaloids by this point and I love finding new songs online!”

Amelie laughed. “You feel really passionate about this, huh?” Xin nodded “I love music so, so much!” He wilted slightly “So I’m kinda sad I’m not all that good at writing my OWN songs. I’ve only ever sang covers for other people’s songs… I like Kalafina and other Yuki Kajiura songs…”

“You sing?” Amelie gasped. “I like singing too, but I am not sure if I am good by human standards.” Xin chuckled. He liked how she said human instead of people. Reminded him of Seb. “Well, yeah, I sing a bit…” He petted the kitten’s fur. Queen Flutter purred loudly, this body had extra legs but she could feel the pets better. Xin hummed a little to himself.

“Kono sora no kagayaki~kimi no mune ni todoiteru~” He sang softly. “Yume miteta shirabe wa~shizukesa no you~ni~”

Amelie smiled as he sang. Eventually she started humming along. The two grinned as they began trading songs back and forth, Amelie sang a couple BABBA songs, laughing as she did. Xin made sure to keep an eye on the twins though. That’s how he saw when Zoe lost her grip on Sir Bedazzle and he ran into the ocean.

“Shit!” Xin jumped to his feet and ran towards them. The puppy was barking in distress as the waves swept him out deeper. The twins were panicking as they couldn’t use their powers in public. Xin was going to jump into the water when Amelie rushed past him and did a perfect dive into an oncoming wave. Xin gasped as she cut through the water expertly and scooped up Sir Bedazzle.

Amelie splashed back to shore to the cheers and applause of the other beach goers who had all watched the puppy getting swept away. “Wooo!” “That was awesome!” “Oh thank god the puppy is alright!”

“Sir Bedazzle!” Zoe wailed as she ran up to take the shivering puppy from Amelie’s arms. “I’m sorry! I should have held on tighter!” She sniffled. This was her responsibility! She was supposed to keep him safe. Xin knelt down and hugged both of them. “Sir Bedazzle! Don’t scare us like that! No running off!” He scolded as his vessel’s heart pounded with panic. “God, I was so scared…”

Zach ran towards Amelie who wasn’t even panting after swimming against the waves and hugged her tightly. “Thank you! Thank you! Thank you! You saved him! You’re the best!” He sobbed. He was so scared! He didn’t want to lose his puppy, never! Amelie crouched to hold him better. “It was nothing, don’t worry.” She stroked his hair, smiling at the gratitude of this little kid. Xin picked up Zoe who was still holding a whimpering, soaked Sir Bedazzle and he hugged the girl. “I own you a big one! Thank you.” Xin thanked his friend. “Really, it was nothing.” Amelie assured him.

They went back to the towel where Xin rubbed Sir Bedazzle down with a smaller towel. The puppy was still shivering. He wasn’t going to run into the ocean again. It tasted funny and he didn’t like it. “Poor Sir Bedazzle…” Zoe stroked his little brown head. “He is scared of water like mommy now…” Zach nodded. “At least he won’t do it again…” The poor puppy curled up next to Queen Flutter who looked at him up and down before lying down again, in a way saying ‘I told you so.’

“We will stay here making sand castles…” Zoe declared. Water mood was ruined for today, but they could still play in the sand. Amelie watched them. “How do you build one?” The twins frowned. What a weird girl! “Well you put in this bucket, a lot of sand, then water and then you turn it around and there! You have a castle!” They explained. She was very amazed as the twins showed her how that worked. Xin figured that if she was from up north, it must have been colder and didn’t have many places for beach activities. (Was that how it worked?)

Soon, they were building more than just a sandcastle. It was a sand kingdom. Some other children and families began coming by to admire it and asked if they could build with them. Xin grinned. “Sure, just grab a bucket.” They started making the largest sand kingdom ever, some of the parents were sent to run to the water for more wet sand. Sir Bedazzle barked and ran around the sand city, happy to play somewhere far from the scary salty water.

“Oh my god. What have you guys been doing?” Xin looked up to see Danna and Diego. “Hey~” He waved. His cousins gasped at the community built sand kingdom. “Dude, that’s amazing.”

“We all built it! Everyone helped!” Zoe informed the siblings. Diego pouted and punched Danna’s leg. “You see?! We missed it! All because you didn’t want to move!” He whined in accusation. “Ok, ok, sorry, kid.” Danna rolled her eyes, not really sorry. “Just make another one. Can you make another castle with Diego?” Danna asked the twins who nodded happily and told him they should build a rival kingdom for them to fight!

Danna sat down. “Hey and these animals?” She petted the puppy’s head. Xin smiled tense. “Sir Bedazzle and Queen Flutter, Danna! The animals Dad and Sab have ALWAYS had!” Danna blinked but quickly understood. Haha, even the plantimals went through changes this week. They watched the children play together, the other kids on the beach joining in to enact a great war between the sand kingdoms. The great dragon (puppy) would run around and destroy the villages so they eventually came to an alliance and teamed up to capture the dragon and bring peace to both kingdoms. Everyone cheered as Zoe and Diego shook hands, cementing their alliance and the future prosperity of the now united sand kingdoms.

Xin leaned back, watching the kids play. This was so adorable. His siblings were adorable, his little cousin was adorable. His family was adorable. He was so happy right now, he loved his family so much. Amelie was watching the kids play too, entranced by the story they were telling as they played. Xin laughed. Her expression was adorable too. Everything in the world seemed so great right now. Eventually the sun began to set and everyone returned to the hotel.

“Bye Amelie. See you tomorrow~” Xin waved. She laughed and waved back. “I had fun today, except for when your puppy almost drowned, but the rest of the day was really nice.” She rubbed her arm sheepishly. Xin gave her a hug. “Thank you again for saving him.” Amelie blushed. “I-it was nothing…” She pulled away from the hug and waved as she left. Xin and the twins returned the plantimals to the twins’ room and Xin de-transformed them. The spell was painless but you could see the little creatures were glad to be back in their real bodies.

Xin helped the twins bathe and they all went down for dinner. He noticed Amelie sitting at another table with an elder couple that Xin assumed must be her parents. They seemed nice. They were also all eating fish. Xin could approve of that. Markus poked him annoyingly and he huffed. “Can you stop it? I seriously don’t like her like that, she’s just a friend.” He hissed at the boy. Markus shrugged. “We will see, we will see.” Xin rolled his eyes. “Are you going to do this everytime I try to make a friend?”

“Maybee~” Markus giggled. “Any friend you make is a possibility for romance!” Danna rolled her eyes. Was her cousin that desperate to love someone or was he just needy? He leaned in to whisper something to Markus that made him blush. “Ew~ Danna!” He whined.

Xin hit it on the nose “Are you just projecting onto me since you can’t find romance for yourself?” Markus froze. “W-well…” Xin gave her a hug. “Look, how about this. Once the week is over and you’re YOU again, I’m going to go boy hunting with you. Ok?”

“Really?! Thank you! Thank you!” Mabel squealed and hugged the man super tight. As a girl, Mabel was strong, as a boy (with longer arms and more leverage) he left Xin breathless when he hugged him that way. Xin gasped “Ribs! My ribs!” Amelie noticed the large group of Pines sitting close to them and she waved at Xin when he looked in her direction. To her amusement, the group of 15 people waved at her back. She giggled. A large family sounded lots of fun. It seemed unusual for humans to have such large family units, but it felt right for them.

The next day Markus had a wonderful idea while everyone was hanging out in the lobby. “WE NEED TO SING HAMILTON!” He screeched loudly. Xin was immediately by his side. “Yes.” He grabbed Markus’s hands and practically sparkled. “I call dibs on Burr.” Xin whispered. Markus narrowed his eyes at Xin. “Only if I get to be John Laurens.” The two giggled as the rest of the family sighed. Markus paced in front of his family. “Alright, you all have heard about the musical right? If not, get out of my country.” Everyone nodded. They didn’t know ALL of it but they knew most of the songs just from how much Mabel sang it.

Xin and him started assigning roles to everyone, roles were decided by who they knew would match the role. Ford screamed when Xin told him he had to be Angelica. “No! But-but-!” He stuttered. Xin shook his head. “No other way...you’re the oldest, and the wittiest ...” He sang softly and the poor scientist groaned loudly. Sab blushed when Markus told her straight out she had to be Eliza. Then Walter was Alexander...to make things spicy, Markus grinned evilly and said his mom had to be Maria. Carlos, being a dick and making Stan fear for his life, said that the week was still Stan’s punishment to learn. So it was decided HE would be Maria and Shelly, as the youngest, would be safe and only be Peggy. (“Sweet! I’m only in one song!”)

Xin waved his hand to create the lyric sheets for the songs with their parts highlighted. “We should do a full performance~” He grinned.

⅔ of the group seemed excited, the other third just groaned. Kari was simply enjoying this too much. She was going to record all of this! It didn’t take them long to memorize their parts, and then they joked and practiced the choruses. They were planning to use the lobby of the hotel as their ‘stage’. Carlos was trying his best to coordinate things, but he worked with professionals, his family was just doing it for fun. He tried not to get stressed.

“Stania, for God’s sake...you’re supposed to be flirting!” Carlos, Xin and Markus groaned at the woman’s deadpanning glare. “Come on, Stania! Put some effort into this. We can’t do a musical without pazazz!” Xin whined.

“First of all, I ain’t flirting like a woman! Second, I ain’t flirting with my brother’s wife!” He hissed. Walter and Sab sighed. “We already said we don’t mind since this is just for a performance.
There will be no kisses, man, just...flirt how you would like a woman to flirt with you?” Walter tried.

“I’ll get you another golden chain.” Xin deadpanned. (“Stop bribing him with gold!”) Stan sighed loudly and put more effort into it. The things he did for money...

Carlos and Xin high-fived. They got through the rest of rehearsal without too much issue. Markus wondered what they would do about the music and Xin scoffed before waving his hand to summon a music bubble. “We can hide this inside someone’s phone and pretend we have really good speakers.”

The manager of the hotel, who had been watching the customers work and invade the lobby all morning, decided to offer them the empty room that companies sometimes used for meetings.
Markus, Carlos and Xin squealed loudly at the offer and immediately accepted. The man nodded, rubbing his ringing ears, he had never heard men screaming so high, and wondered if the hotel could let people know they were doing this. Stanley and Ford blushed and shook their heads, but Sab reasoned with them that they were women, no one will know who they really were so their ego and self-esteem wouldn’t be affected.

“Ok, Markus, quick question. Are we gonna do costumes?” Xin asked. The boy gasped.
“Definitely!” He squealed, imagining the sisters in pretty dresses. “But damn! We don’t have enough time to get them! Um…”

Carlos shook his head. The three of them were in charge of direction and as they decided everyone’s fates, everyone was eating and revising their lines. “We can’t do full costume. As this is not professional, not even amateur, it’s going to look forced...what we can do is get clothes that LOOK like the characters.”

Xin raised an eyebrow. “Ah hem?” He coughed. Markus sighed. “We’re not saying you can’t make the costumes but the homemade look is charming.” Xin considered his words. “Alright. That makes sense.”

Stan was rocking back and forth. “I can’t believe we’re doing this...how did we get dragged into this?!” Ford took a bite of his hamburger. “Because...Sabrina threatened to burn us alive if we didn’t do it...and then the kids begged us and we couldn’t resist them.”

“Fuck. You’re right…” Stan sighed. “I’ll die today.” Ford sighed. “Look...just accept it, Stan. We lost.” The triplets sighed. “Well, at least I’m getting some gold out of this…” Stan grumbled. Ford stared at him “You need to stop using Xin to get gold.” he turned to the dragon, “Don’t give Stanley any gold for this. He’s not a dog you can train like that.” (“Hey!”) But Xin laughed him off.

“Guys~We need to find clothes for you~” Markus, Sab and Xin purred. The Stans hugged each other. “AHHH!!” It took a while to search for the right clothes. They ended up looking on the internet for designs so Xin could create them, but at the end, it was perfect! They decided to go with short dresses (Sab was 100% sure the Stans and Shermie were going to trip if they wore long ones), and with a half modern and old style. They were cute dresses. Those dressing up as men were so much easier to dress and Markus was laughing hard as he dressed up Dipper. “I hate this. I didn’t think the crown would be so heaavyy!” He shrieked as he fell sideways. “But you get to be king~ or rather, queen in this case.” Markus grinned.

Dipper rolled his eyes and fixed up his robes. “Well, I’m all set for the lyrics at least.” Everyone got their costumes and were holding their lyrics to make sure they remember their lines. “So...are we all ready?”

Everyone nodded, determined. Even the kids had worked hard. This was fun! They had spent all day with their family and got to argue with the adults! They found out their little family play had called the attention of a large group who were giggling and asked if they could see their improvised play. They started shaking. Oh god they were actually doing this! It took them all day to rehearse and plan out.

Xin set the music bubble inside a cell phone hidden from view. It’ll know when it needed to change to the next song. It was magic after all. People were sitting down in front of the ‘stage’, laughing, wondering why a family suddenly decided to do this. Well, they wouldn’t complain. Among the crowd, Amelie was sitting with her parents, who agreed to come see the show with her. Xin spoke into a microphone. “Good evening, ladies and gentlemen! On this beautiful night, our family got bored and decided to perform a cover of a musical! Hamilton! So please enjoy our improvised act. Have your phones off during the play please, we have kids and adults who get distracted. Thank you.”

Everyone laughed and clapped, but fell totally silent when Xin started “How does a bastard, orphan, son of a whore and a scotsman…”

Now. There were quite a few things to recall from this wonderful family experience.

Number One. Wanda as Walter was hot, and in character even more. He wasn't a fan of singing, but was glad he could do his parts. A few women mentally orgasm'ed as the sight of the handsome blond. Especially when he trailed a hand down his chest teasingly in “My name is Alexander Hamilton…”

Number Two, and to many, the most important thing to point out...They weren't sure if Xin and Fania were just very good actors and getting into character or...

“There’s nothing rich folks like more than going downtown and slummin it with the poor! They pull up in their carriages and gawk at the students in the common just to watch them talk!”

Sab had been very concentrated on her role, swinging her dress side to side, and just loving the cheers they got from the amused crowd with their " Angelica, Peggy, Eliza! WORK!"’, raising their arms and everything, so it was really a shock to realize she got totally distracted watching the two…
"Angelica, remind me what we are looking for~" She had sung while Carlos and Abraham marched up to them. "She’s looking for me!" Fania rolled her eyes and pushed them apart to give her space, embarrassed as she was, but no one could deny her oldest sister had a great singing voice. "Eliza, I’m looking for a mind at work!" "Work work."

Xin made a marveled expression and bit his lip. "Oohh! There’s nothing like summer in the city…" He swaggered over to Fania and started circling her, gaining unimpressed looks from her. "Someone in a rush next to someone looking pretty…" Sab and Shelly gasped and looked offended behind Fania as she grinned and rolled her eyes.

"Excuse me, miss, I know it’s not funny but your perfume’s smell like your daddy’s got money!" Xin stood behind her with his hands spread out to frame her and looked down, while Fania looked up.

"Why you slummin’ in the city in your fancy heels, you searchin’ for an urchin who can give you ideals?" He wagged his eyebrows.
Fania looked away with a smile. “Burr, you disgust me…”

“Ah, so you distrust me?” Xin grinned with a raised eyebrow. Sab and Shelly gasped, and not in character this time. “I’m a trust fund baby, you can trust me…” He looked down at Fania’s chest with a smile. Fania grabbed his chin and forced him to look up at her eyes. There were a few cheers in the audience.

“I’ve been reading Common Sense, by Thomas Paine…” She let him go and walked around him as his eyes scanned her. “Some men say I’m intense or I’m insane!” She exclaimed. “You want a revolution, I want a revelation…” She got face to face with Xin, looking up at him. They were so close, their lips were almost touching…Then she turned away from him. “So listen to my declaration!”

She stood between her sisters and the younger woman stuttered to recover from that. “We hold these truths to be self-evident! That all men are created equal!” They all said at the same time, and Fania looked at Xin with a grin, not realizing he was blushing. “And when I meet Thomas Jefferson!”

“Huh!” The girls behind her put their hands on their hips in a challenging mode.

“I’m a compel him to INCLUDE WOMEN IN THE SEQUEL! WORK!!” Fania looked at the audience with a huge grin, making them all cheer and shout. She raised an arm and snapped her fingers (making Xin despair once more, that he still couldn’t figure out how to do that.)

Number three. Stan’s greediness transcended corporeal forms. In the break he negotiated with the staff to charge to 'support the artists'. Everyone sighed at that.

His ire also transcended. As vengeance, when his part came in, he decided to flirt with Walter as much as he could, just to get Sab jealous. Rubbing her body against his, trailing his jaw and chest with her hands. And it totally worked. Sab was behind the stage, biting her wrist and screaming internally.

“Really?! She’s doing this on purpose! Fez you bitch!”

Number four. Seb’s dramatic self transcended bodies and various lives. It also became very obvious that with some guidance and love, he would have made it high in this artistic branch as well.

Sab’s anger from seeing Walter with Stania made her eyes water and she made everyone in the crowd cry as she broke down singing. She was really good. In the changing of the scene, Walter hugged Sab and asked if she was really alright. Sab patted his chest. “I’m an actress, sweetheart.” The blond scoffed. Of course.

And number five. It was a very funny idea to have Walter being tackled to the floor by Stan at ‘HE AIMS HIS PISTOL AT THE SKY!’ "WAIT!” as a representation of the bullet. Their small audience seemed to like it.

“Who lives, or dies who tells your story~”

The audience cheered wildly, sobbing as well. The Pines family came up on stage and everyone bowed to thunderous applause.

“Thank you! We’ll be here all night!” Markus waved at the audience and Dipper smiled. “No we won’t!” Stan looked around and gasped when he saw the hotel staff selling snacks. The bastard was profiting off them by selling stuff! That wasn’t the deal! He had the need to fight right now! He would have gotten off the stage if Carlos hadn’t grabbed his hand. Danna was laughing loudly.
“Pines! Pines! Pines! Pines!” He started and soon enough, everyone was chanting with him, the audience was still clapping and cheering.

Amelie had loved this little performance. She ran towards them and stopped briefly when she saw Xin hugging one of Sabrina’s sisters really tight. "Damn!! That was so good! We need to have karaoke night together! You sing so well!!!" The asian man roared before spinning Fania, still in a Amelie sighed. That was so cute. They were so cute. She sighed again, miss Fania was a lucky woman. Xin put Ford down and noticed Amelie, so she still approached them. “Xin, that was amazing!! I didn’t understand much but it was amazing!!” Xin laughed. “Well, it’s a musical called Hamilton, about the life story of one of the founding fathers of the United States.”

Amelie blushed. “I don’t know who that is…” Xin laughed. “It’s the guy on the $10 bill.” The girl pulled out the wallet her parents gave her and searched for a 10. She found one and showed it to Xin. “This one?” Xin laughed. “Yup! Dad is IDENTICAL to him, right?” Both laughed. The kids layed down on the floor.

“Tired!!” They whined. This was fun, but now they were tired. Their parents happily picked them up and hugged them. “You three did an excellent job!” Sab giggled and Stan rubbed Diego’s nose Sab teased. She turned to look at him and sobered. “Bitch, touch Walter like that again and I will destroy you.”

“I was acting?” Stan tried. Seb was unimpressed. “I know you were doing it on purpose!”
Eventually, Stan and Danna went off to fight the manager for their right to the money. Why?
Because they could.

“I want food.” Xin commented. “Alright, let’s go eat dinner.” Walter laughed. “I can’t believe we spent all day on this…” Dipper groaned. Markus hugged him “I do! It was great! Thank you!”
Dipper patted his curls. Before they went to get dinner though, Kari begged to get a photo of all of them, so they got together on the stage, showing off their homemade costumes and smiled. “Say something stupid!” Markus said and everyone laughed. “Something stupid!!”

Stan reminded the guy of their deal and showed their earnings to everyone. “You see? When you don’t charge yourself, another clever idiot will do it for you and rob you.” He extended a hand towards Xin. “Kid, my gold.” Markus jumped over to him and hugged him. “Uncle Stan! We all had fun, didn’t we! Can’t you do this just for fun? Without money involved?”

“Is-Is that even possible?” Stan blinked. Ford patted his back. “Let’s just go eat dinner.” Stan was led away, still muttering about how doing things without getting money was incomprehensible.

They had a well deserved dinner before could), were allowed to eat nuggets and french they tiredly slumped back to their rooms and fell asleep, happy.

--.--

After their play, the family was starting to adjust to their current situation. There were a few complaints here and there, especially from Stan, but all in all, they seemed to be doing fine, in Xin's opinion.

Wanda, Carla and Shermie were sometimes called from work, but they wrote down that they were sick and couldn't speak. Only text. They unfortunately had a job to keep.
It was a weird experience to go out to amusement parks or to tourist sites looking like they did and getting photos to prove it happened even more so. Stania had to admit that being left alone by the paparazzi was very refreshing though. And she gotta admit, Seb was having fun, it made him happy to see that.

Eh. Being a woman wasn't the end of the world.

"Stania, be careful! I'm gonna call Xin!" A very unmanly whine escaped from her now husband.

"Shut the hell up, Carlos!" Stania was in the gym, already positioned on the bench to lift weights. She wasn't stupid!! It wasn't even the same weight he lifted as a man. She was going to test her muscles, see how much she could still do. She was wearing shorts and a sports bra. Those things were so cool and comfortable. Plus, she had to admit she looked pretty fucking hot. The few men in the hotel's gym tried looking at her, but with a scowl and an aggressive nod, inviting them to fucking test her, they left her alone.

Danna was ready to record this, Diego cheered for his (current)mom. Unfortunately for Danna, her now mom lifted them just fine with a smug laugh, even added a few extra weights to it. "Nothing-Stops-Stan-Pines!!!" Hah! Being a woman changed NOTHING! HAH! He was still as strong as ever!

Carlos just sat down with a huff. So hot…

Sab and Walter were on the beach with the twins and Kari, the two adults cheering and trying to convince Sab to take off her cover-up. She wanted to show off her bikini but couldn't!!

"But I look so bad!! Everyone will see my zodiac!"

"You're beautiful, sweetie!" "No one cares about it, honey! The strap covers part of it, I swear!" Wanda said. God, this was apparently something she never thought about. Seb was embarrassed about his body already, that wasn't anything new.

It wasn't working. She didn't want anyone to see the horrible zodiac tattooed on her back because of fucking Bill2. Not even the concealer worked on it. The damn thing didn't want to stay on.

"No~ Don't cry!" Walter patted his wife as Seb broke down. “It’s okay. I swear it isn’t bad. B-but you don’t have to take off your shirt if you really don’t want to.”

"But I waaaaant tooooo!" Sab sobbed. Walter looked at Kari, not knowing what to do.

As they struggled with that, Xin sat down with Fania on a picnic blanket they set up nearby. Fania had a book and her journal and he had the food! "NOW we can talk! We can't work with an empty stomach now, can we?" Xin nudged Fania’s shoulder.

"You know my answer is yes we can, but I'll humour you." The curly haired woman grinned and Xin sighed in pure exasperation before sitting close next to her with an arm around her. “Food and science is the BEST combination! Unless you’re working with toxic stuff.”

For them it was just like any other time MizBill visited him to do science, but for Markus and Dipper spying on them, it was totally something else.

“But they told me they weren’t dating…” Markus frowned in contemplation. Dipper sighed. “They probably lied. Not doing very good in hiding it, if they were. Besides, bro...You'd be annoying them constantly if they told you the truth."

"Well, now I'll be annoying them for not telling me!" Markus huffed.

"Marrkuus! Dipper!" The second pair of twins walked towards them. "Play!" Zach demanded. Zoe raised her arms to be picked up by Markus. "Aaw~ Come here~" As soon as he had her, Zoe hugged him and bit his arm. "OOOW!!"

Zoe giggled before trying to escape by kicking him. "Ow! No!!" "You're a dumb dumb! I'll eat you!"

"Nooo!!"

Dipper stroked her chin with a contemplative look. "You know, I think you ARE right, she has baby crushes...You happen to look like a more muscular me right now~"

"OOOWW!!" Markus shouted as a response as Zoe pulled at his curls. Dipper picked up Zach because he was an angel. "Look, Dipper, I found a tooth!" Zach squealed.

"Oh wow, that's weird and very gross." Dipper wondered why the hell there was such a pointy tooth around here. Maybe a shark? Didn't seem like it. She should investigate later.

"What are you guys doing?" The four cousins watched Amelie walk towards them. Markus finally fell to the sand from Zoe's kicks, and she ran over the young woman to hug her. "Amelie! Save me!!"

"Save YOU?!" Markus cried as he rubbed his bruised arm. He decided right there that being the baby crush of this baby was horrible.

The foreign girl looked confused. "What's going on?" Zoe peeked out from behind Amelie's legs and stuck her tongue out at Markus. "Markus being a no-fun~!"

"Gasp! How dare you call me a no-fun?! I'm the MOST fun!"

"No, you aren't!!" "Yes I am!" "Not you!" "Yes I am!!"

Amelie rolled her eyes and looked around for Xin, but she noticed he was with Fania. How he was holding her. Oh... Dipper saw her expression and quickly explained.

"Oh, don't worry, Xin is actually MUCH older than he looks, and you know, not actual blood or anything... I think it's an Asian thing to not look your age." She hummed. "So, it's weird, but they're not actually... um..." Dipper rubbed her hair. "You know what? I'm just gonna... shut up now..."

Amelie blinked. "So they're... together?" She'd strongly suspected it... but to have it confirmed...

"We're pretty sure, I mean, they deny it, but... look at them!" Markus waved his hands in the direction of the two. Xin was leaning over to rest his head on Fania's shoulder, peering down at the journal she was writing in.

"How can they NOT be together!" Markus wailed. It wasn't fair! Everyone had a partner except him! Auuuugh! He was horny (-ier, probably, as a guy) as fuck and wanted his summer romance dammit!

Amelie smiled. Well...they did look happy together... "So, are they just too shy to admit that they’re together?” She asked both sets of twins. Zach and Zoe shrugged. Didn't know, didn't care.
Dipper thought about it. “Maybe they’re worried about the whole, adopted family thing.”

“If Xin’s an adult, why was he adopted?” Amelie mused aloud before her eyes widened and she leaned closer to whisper, “Is it so he could immigrate to America? I heard all sorts of awful things about America’s immigration policies…” She was here on a travel visa herself, not staying long.

Markus and Dipper looked at each other. Well, that kinda worked as a cover story? “It’s… complicated.” Markus said at last, not exactly lying. Amelie nodded very seriously. “Must have been hard.”

"Aren't we being rude…? Too close to their date?" Amelie asked nervously, not sure about the habits around here.

Markus knew they were, but he wanted to see them! “Shh~ they’ll hear us. Come on, we can hide behind that rock.” He crawled in the sand to get closer, wanting to see how disgustingly sweet those two were being. Dipper shooed the little twins back to their parents while she and Amelie hid with Markus. And then Markus listened in on what sweet nothings the two were whispering at each other...

The boy had to hide a big roll of his eyes. Were they seriously just talking about SCIENCE on the beach???? When they could be massaging each other and applying sunscreen very leisurely?! What kind of humans they were!

...Oh. Right.

Dipper thought it was very appropriate, considering who they were talking about...It also made him think back when Stanford told him Bill was his muse and he learned and looked up to him...Was their relationship…like this? Dipper shuddered a little. Author, no!

(His only source of relief was that this Bill Cipher was nice (even if they were kinda… scary sometimes). But still, imagining his uncle fawning over that asshole triangle gave him goosebumps.)

“Boo~ this is so boring~” Markus complained. “I wanna see them do something more romantic!”

"What happened to 'Sh'?" Amelie mumbled.

“Like what?” Dipper deadpanned. Markus huffed. “Like going to the movies and kissing in the dark! Or a fancy candlelit dinner--”

“It’s 2 in the afternoon.” Dipper deadpanned again. Markus reached behind himself, without looking, to smack Dipper’s arm. “It’s 7PM somewhere on Earth!” He retorted.

"Markus, first of all, we don't even know if they're even dating---" "They are!" "And if they are!
They don't need to do all that, you read too much fanfiction. Me and Paz don't do all that stuff."

"You have a boyfriend?" Amelie looked at Dipper curiously, making him blush. "...Yes?" He squeaked.

"Dipper, you aren't normal either, what you do in your relationship is an exception, not a norm."
The boy crossed his arms.

"Well, I had a partner for years now, I think I know more than you!" Dipper didn’t even sound smug, s/he was just pointing it out.
Markus fumed though. "It's not my fault they don't like me!"

Amelie decided to intervene now. "Hey. It's ok, don't fight~" She smiled at them. "Let's all calm down, ok? I think couples can do the things they like the most, it's not a big deal if they do science, or math or reading as long as they're happy, right?" Amelie wouldn't say she wasn't a little disappointed, but she could see the clear feelings between them. It actually made her happy. "So, what's the game plan? Making them admit it?"

"No." "Yes!" The twins responded at the same time.

The girl sighed.

--.--

When they were called to eat lunch, The twins invited Amelie over to have lunch with them. She was the only other soul who knew about the plan and she must help him! They sat down in a nice seaside restaurant and the appetizer of fried calamari came out.

Markus took this chance. By the REIGNS! "You two should feed each other!" He practically screamed at them.

Shelly groaned after a long moment of silence. "God, why do you embarrass me like that…"

Fania thought about it. "If someone did so, then my hands would be free to write!" Sab nodded slowly, seemingly agreeing with her. "Yeah…Having a servant!" She turned to Shelly, "As the youngest sibling, you should feed us. Hop Hop." She grinned mischievously and clapped her hands.

Shelly deadpanned, "Fuck no. I did enough of doing stuff for you guys when I was a kid."

"I think you didn't do enough." Stania shrugged. Shelly turned red in anger. These bastards had the gall!! They bossed him around all his childhood already!

Markus watched it unfold, with the triplets bullying his dad/mom. "Dang it." These idiots weren’t getting the point! "No, I mean--" He tried to say, but they weren’t listening, arguing over all the ways the triplets (specifically the Stans) had used their youngest sibling.

"You made me get stuff for you!" "Get OVER it, Shelly!" "That's why I destroyed your homework, you meanie!" "AAH?! So it was YOU?! I thought it was Sab!" " Thanks , Sixer."

"Ugh… okay, plan D!"

"What were plans B through C?" Dipper deadpanned once more. Markus rolled his eyes. "I don’t have access to a goose right now, so we can’t do that."

Before Dipper could question how Markus had a plan (two in fact) that involved a goose, Markus picked up one of the fried calamari and turned to Xin. "Hey! If you open your mouth- I’ll throw food into it!"

Xin’s mouth fell open instantly. "PUT IT IN MY MOUTH!!!!"

Dipper buried his face in his hands. "I don’t know you people!"

“Hey un-aunt Fania! You should feed Xin too! Or else he’d start eating the kids!” Markus slapped the table. Fania and the others stopped their argument and looked over. “Markus, I’m sure that Xin wouldn’t eat the children no matter how hungry he is.” Fania adjusted her glasses. Xin hummed and looked down at Diego. “You look juicy.”

"HELP!" The freckled boy shrieked.

"See?! He's going to eat him! Save your nephew! Feed the hungry guy~"

Fania rolled her eyes and picked up the bowl of calamari. Markus was shaking with anticipation. But Fania just slid the bowl over. “Here, get some food before you eat the children.”

“Damn.” Markus muttered.

Dipper couldn't help but laugh loudly, and even Amelie giggled. They failed so epically!!

Markus tried fruitlessly to get Fania and Xin to do something romantic for the rest of the day. They ACTUALLY went to the cinema, and Markus wanted them to sit together, but unfortunately, Xin was sent to watch a children's movie with the kids because he was prohibited from watching horror movies. "Oh come on!" Markus complained. He’d even pushed Fania to go to a horror movie because he’d been hoping for Xin to get scared and hug her!

At dinner, he pushed Xin towards Fania, expecting them to trip and hold onto each other. It just ended up on Xin falling on top of Fania and both slamming against a glass. The staff panicked over them getting hurt, but it ended up with Fania BREAKING the glass with her metal plated skull.

"...Oops?” Markus winced when Dipper and Amelie glared at him. Ok. That was totally his bad. Sorry.

Dipper patted his back as they got ready for bed later at night. “I guess we’ll never get the epic summer romance between them.” Markus complained as he combed and untangled Dipper's long hair. He was still wearing an oversized t-shirt as pjs, but because he was taller, it fitted him better, so now he just wore his t-shirt of kitties and boxers.

“I guess.” Markus sighed and went to bed when Dipper's hair was ready.

Meanwhile, over in Ford’s room, Xin flopped onto the bed and groaned as his antlers and tail popped out. “It always feels so much nicer when I can let loose.” He purred, rubbing his face against the pillow. “My poor tail gets sore if it’s retracted for too long. And all the shit we went through today didn't help.” The dragon whined.

Markus didn't know, but he had indirectly accomplished his goals.

“Sore?” Fania looked at the lazily wagging appendage. “Would you like me to massage it?”

Xin looked over. He tensed at the word massage, almost instinctively. But he relaxed. “Sure, but just my tail, and don’t pull it.”

“Of course.” Fania smiled and sat down, laying the (surprisingly heavy) golden tail in her lap as she began to slowly squeeze and stroke it. Xin melted into the sheets, purring like a motor.

Fania was laughing at this, of course. It amused her to no end. "Are you enjoying it?"

"Y-Y-Y-ee-ee-ss~" Xin moaned softly. "I like your tail, the scales are so nice to touch. And I can feel all the muscles inside.” Fania squished the appendage with a smile. Xin hummed, rubbing his face against the pillow. “And I love your hands~”

Fania flushed a little. Everytime Xin said that, she felt all warm inside. “...I like my hands too.” She said at last, finally feeling that, yes, she was quite happy with her hands. Since they were able to make someone so happy. If Xin could love them so much, then, maybe they really were amazing. And if the way Xin moaned and arched back when Fania stroked along the smooth scales meant anything, her hands must have been quite amazing indeed.

She finished massaging Xin's tail and laid down next to him. Sleepily, the dragon held one of his hands, his five fingers fitting perfectly between her six. Fania felt her face heating up, but she couldn't pull away. She closed her eyes. And Xin smiled when Fania decided to stay close, because for some reason, it made him feel so relaxed.

The rest of the week flew by, until the day they had to change back. Xin decided to change them as they slept, so he wouldn't have to put a perception filter if someone saw them in the process of. He went to sleep with Ford, whose sleeping feminine face morphed into a sleeping masculine face. Xin curled up with him and fell asleep, only to be woken up by triumphant screams of, “IT'S BACK!!!” That was Stan.

(Bonus picture of Amelie)
She looks human... unless you look at her too fast or out the corner of your eyes, where her eyes seem almost impossibly dark and larger than a human's. A blue so deep and dark you could almost drown in them.

Chapter 33

-As it happens-

---

The family slowly woke up to find themselves in their real bodies and they sighed in relief. It had been a fun but crazy week! Miz yawned as she stretched. She cuddled her Pikachu doll in one arm as she hugged Ford with the other.

“Morning Fordsie.” She rubbed her eye. It was nice to be small and cute again. Miz’s form always felt the most comfortable when she wasn’t a triangle. Being Bill was still the most comfortable but Miz was a close second.

Ford blinked awake and scratched his chest sleepily, but he quickly realized it was flat! He smiled like a really happy owl. Miz laughed. “You all survived! You should have a prize! Do you want a head that’s always screaming?” She offered and Ford shook his head.

“No, thank you, I’m fine!” He laughed. Meanwhile, with Seb and Wanda, the two were curled up together in a funny way. Wanda was hugging Seb from behind, but as she was shorter now, she didn’t get to envelop him completely. When Wanda touched a flat chest in front of her, she knew they were back to normal. “Hey...Sebas…” She whispered.

Seb mumbled. “Yeah?” Wanda groped at his pecs “I kinda miss your boobs.” She giggled. The sleepy man looked down at his chest and blinked. He patted his chest and then went back to touch between his legs. Ok. He was male now… “Really?” He asked, still tired. He turned around so he could hug Wanda and he put his hands on her breasts this time. “Soft…” He slurred.

Wanda tried to look up at him. “Seb, would you have prefered staying as a woman…?” She asked again softly.

Seb mumbled, “I told you I don’t mind either way...and as long as I am with you, I couldn’t care less…” He said like a disgusting cheesy romantic before he passed out again, snoring softly. The blonde woman rolled her eyes and went back to sleep as well. They could just sleep in today.

Everyone else got up for the day, Dipper cheered as he pulled his shirt off and saw that it was flat again. “YEES!” and the rest started checking themselves to make sure everything was back in its proper place. Stan pulled Carla into his (still hairless) arms. “So... Mini-Stan is back~” He grinned. She laughed and trailed a finger around his chin. “And?” She teased. Stan leaned closer until their chests pressed together. “We should check if it works properly~” The two grinned at each other.

Seb and Wanda groaned when their rest was interrupted by more thumping sounds. “Goddamn how do they have this much energy?!” Seb complained. “It’s, like 10 am! I want to sleep!” He whined and covered his head with the pillows. Their rest was even MORE interrupted when the twins burst in, carrying the plantimals, and gasped. “Mommy is mommy again!” They squealed and jumped into their bed, throwing the poor plantimals into the air. Sir Bedazzle hit Seb in the face while Queen Flutter flew down elegantly to land on Wanda’s palms.

“Joy…” Seb groaned as Sir Bedazzle wiggled over him and licked his face with his little wet tongue. Stan was lucky Diego was a quiet kid. He wouldn’t survive a day taking care of his twins...

The twins curled up between them and declared they wanted to watch TV before having breakfast. The tired parents sighed and just stayed there, looking miserable, as cartoons played on. At least the cartoons muffled the sounds from the other rooms. Seriously, the walls were made of paper or something?!

Abi and Shermie were pretty much dead in their bed, unbothered and enjoying the joy of having teenage kids who were mostly self sufficient, while Miz took Ford with her to have breakfast. She was snuggling her doll with her, having been unable to take it around with her as Xin (she wanted to but Dipper and Markus said that it might get stolen by mean people who wanted to make fun of a grown man carrying a Pikachu around) and was glad she could carry it around now.

Ford looked around as they grabbed breakfast. “Hey…even if we had a perception filter last week, wouldn’t it be suspicious how we entered the hotel one day, then for a week completely different people used the room, and now we’re back?” Miz, who was getting pancakes, shrugged. “Who cares? No one got hurt did they? And no one noticed. They would have said something. My perception filter makes it so any human would feel like they didn't see anything odd and just ignore the inconsistencies.”

Ford nodded in understanding before he got coffee and a toast. Miz got more pancakes and scrambled eggs. When they sat down, she pushed the food towards him. “Seriously? Do I still need to feed you?” she grumbled. Ford laughed. “It’s fine. I’m just not a ravenous black hole like you are.” Miz still held up a forkful of eggs. “Open up.” She demanded. Ford sighed. “I can eat a third of that.” He bargained.

“Half.” Miz replied. Ford narrowed his eyes. The two stared at each other for a few seconds. “A third, but you can order me ONE meal when we go out for lunch later.” Ford decided. Miz tilted her head. “Deal.” She cut up the portions on his plate and ate the parts he wasn't going to.

Ford ate his food. He couldn’t believe Miz was ordering him around, telling him to eat. He felt like there had to be some reason why she always did that. No one worried so much about other people getting nourishment for nothing. Though...it felt nice to know she cared so much for him. He smiled at the demon devouring her own food. “Why do you insist on making me eat?” Ford asked. Miz shrugged. “Because food is important and toast doesn't have the nutrients you need to survive the day. I was starved as a kid, don’t want anyone else to go hungry.” She pushed a bowl of fruits toward him. It was one of those fruit cups with grapes, pineapples, blueberries and melon slices. There were only melons left. “Eggs for your protein, pancakes for your carbs and here's some fruit for the other stuff.”

Ford looked at the melons. “Are you just giving me the parts you're not eating?” He poked at the fruit.

“I'm allergic to melons.” Miz shrugged. Ford couldn't understand how that was possible. “You...can eat pretty much anything...but you're allergic...to melons ?!”

Miz sighed. “They make my throat all itchy. I don't like it.” Ford pulled out his journal to jot that down. “Why melons?” He mused. Miz groaned. “I have no idea! I just...AM.”

“Is it just honeydew melons and cantaloupes?” Ford questioned as he poked at the green and orange slices. Miz shook her head “Watermelons don’t make me itch but they're gross and make me feel a little nauseous. I'm fine with melon FLAVORED stuff though.” She said. “Like, juices that are watermelon flavored or winter melon flavored are fine.”

“So...something about the actual fruit...interesting.” Ford muttered as he wrote it down. “And what if you eat it in your triangle form?” The man asked curiously. The girl grabbed a forkful of food for Ford. “Open up~” The man opened his mouth with a roll of his eyes and Miz fed him. (If Mabel were here, she’d be having a stroke on how they were finally doing what she wanted, but not in the way she wanted.)

“Well, I haven't really tried eating it in my Bill form. Melons are an Earth fruit and while the ones out in space are similar, they don't seem to cause the same problem, I just don't like their taste.”

Ford nodded, chewing his food. Miz poked his mouth with the forkful of sliced pancake and syrup. Ford opened his mouth for it too (he liked sweet things). Miz continued feeding him as he jotted down his notes. This man, dammit. Why was he so fucking cute? Miz pouted as she cut up another piece of pancake.

The older twins eventually found them and sat down with them. “Look who’s the cutest girl again?!” Mabel squealed.

“Still me.” Miz smirked. Mabel gasped. “Dipper! She's barging in on MY shtick!”

“Well, you ARE technically an adult.” Dipper shrugged as he raised an eyebrow at how Miz was feeding Ford. The scientist didn't even seem aware of them, eyes locked onto his journal as he chewed and swallowed. Mabel squealed at that, very very loudly. “FINALLY!” The people around winced.

Miz paid her no mind and wondered if she could sneak more food into him while he was distracted. She cut up a piece of corned beef and held it up to his mouth. Ford ate it absently.

Dipper smirked. Well, Mabel was right, it WAS funny. It really must be a couple thing, he had seen his parents feeding each other before. He hadn’t done that kind of thing with Pacifica, though. Would she like that?

Miz was enjoying feeding Stanford. He hadn’t even noticed he was almost done with his plate!! She began sneaking more food onto his plate. Mwahaha! She also swiped some food from Dipper’s plate as well. She was still hungry after all. Dipper gasped. “Why is it always me?!” Mabel took one of his pancakes too. “Uuuugh!” Dipper groaned. He pushed his plate towards her and angrily stood up to get more food.

Miz and Mabel high fived. As sisters, they knew what it meant to pester their siblings! And Dipper made it too much fun NOT to.

“Yes! I’m totally ready for boy hunting today! It’ll be amazing!” After speaking with Mermando these past few days (kinda hard to explain she wasn’t Dipper last week), she felt more confident of her abilities. She needed to find the right boy! “You know, Miz...maybe I’m not destined to find human boys...” she popped a strawberry to her mouth. “Maybe I am a magnet for cute supernatural boys!” She gasped in revelation.
Miz raised an eyebrow. “So...no offense, but I doubt there would be any Vampires on the beach.” Mabel pouted. “What if they go to the beach at night?!” At that question, Miz gave her a deadpan look and Mabel sighed. “Ok, well...there’s got to be more cute supernaturals besides Vampires right? Uhh! How about a werewolf?” She was already drooling. Miz rolled her eyes. “Yeah, if you like the smell of wet dog and having fur EVERYWHERE.” Mabel groaned. “Ok...then...how about a...” Mabel frowned. “I don’t know many hot supernatural guys aside from mermen.”

Miz hummed. “Well...half elves?” she suggested. Mabel gasped. “Hot elves?!” Miz shook her head. “Half elves. Full blooded elves are kinda horrifying to look at.” Mabel groaned and slumped over the table. “Elves aren’t hot. Unicorns are assholes...what other fantasies are you going to ruin for me?”

“Druids fucked horses.” Miz deadpanned. “That’s where Centaurs came from.”

Mabel made a horrified face as Dipper came back. “What are you talking about?” Miz eyed his food and pouted. The asshole got melon on purpose. Dipper saw her glance and smirked. “I rubbed everything with it, it’s polluted, you can’t eat it now.” Dipper said smugly.

“We’re thinking about what supernatural creature I could date.” The girl informed her twin and he blinked. “What? Can’t you date...a normal person?” Mabel and Miz scoffed. “I doubt a human could handle pure, undiluted Mabel-ness. They wouldn’t survive.” Miz rolled her eyes as she swiped one of Dipper’s chicken nuggets. “Hey! You can’t even eat that!” Dipper complained. “But Fordsie can~” Miz sang as she poked the meat against Ford’s mouth. He did eat it, chewing absently. Mabel gasped. “A glorious loophole indeed!” She and Miz high fived again.

“Uncle Ford~!” Dipper whined, but the man wasn’t paying attention to them. Mabel looked at Dipper. “Concentrate, Dipper! Who could I date?!” At that moment they were invaded by the younger twins, followed by a tired Wanda and Seb. “A former demon.” The boy suggested with a grin. “Or just a demon.” He looked at Ford eating his food. Mabel groaned. “Where am I going to find a cute demon boy?”

Mabel blinked. “Isn’t the Jersey Devil just a made up story?”

Seb grabbed Zoe and sat her on a chair. “Tell that to my scars. Stan, Ford and I found him when we were kids! But the stupid Sibling Brothers had to ruin everything.” He sighed. “What do you want for breakfast, baby?” Zoe cheered. “Chocolate!” He frowned. He’ll get her fruit.

“The Sibling brothers?” Dipper gasped and Seb ignored him. “After breakfast we can chase the Jersey Devil once again? Sounds cool?” Dipper nodded eagerly. Mabel shook her head. “No! We’re supposed to be finding me a MAN!” Miz patted her back. “Don’t worry, the boys can have their dumb monster hunt, we’ve got our more important boy hunt!” Mabel gave the little girl a hug. “Right!”

Meanwhile, Seb was backing up from Dipper as the teen eagerly bounced up to him. “Oh my gosh! The Jersey Devil! The real Jersey Devil!” He gasped. “I should get a photo!”

“Will you bring thousands of cameras like you did with the Gobblewonker?” Seb asked. Dipper scoffed. “Duh? You can never be too prepared, plus my phone.” Seb rolled his eye but smiled. Alright. This adventure could be fun. He already knew where to find it after all. “Hey Fordsie~ Do you wanna capture the Jersey Devil for real this time?!” He snatched his glasses to call his attention.
“Gah! I don’t really know who you are but from the exaggerated amount of yellow, I will say you are Sebastian. Give me back my glasses!” He growled. Seb laughed. “Well at least you’re paying attention now. So, wanna come with Dipper and I to catch the Jersey Devil?”

Ford blinked. “Oh, that would be an interesting way to spend the afternoon.” Seb laughed and handed Ford his glasses. “Alright then! Monster hunt! Monster hunt!” He and Dipper chanted.

Mabel and Miz were planning what to do. "Monster boys are great and all, but we could also just look for any cute boys in general?" Miz suggested. Mabel nodded excitedly.

“Monster Hunt!” The little twins cheered as well. “No, no, this is a grown up expedition.” Seb told the kids. They whimpered. “But we wanna go too!” Zach looked at his mom for help. “No, sorry, that would be too dangerous for you. Hey, why don’t you help Mabel find a date? You might find a monster as well?”

“How can we go too?” Zoe sniffed and made huge puppy eyes at the girls. “Of course you can!” Miz pinched her sister’s cheeks. Wanda sighed. “Are you guys going to be ok?” Mabel nodded. “Don’t worry. I’ll look after them.” Wanda looked over at Miz, Zoe and Zach giggling and eating pancakes, her youngest children smearing syrup all over themselves. “…I’ll have to trust you on that…”

She looked at the boys. Dipper was giggling excitedly as Seb drank the syrup, getting his face all dirty… “Ford, take care of them…” She and Ford sighed. Right, since he was the adult here.

They finished breakfast and went to get ready. Ford had the sensation he ate more than normal. Stan wasn’t going to come, but Dillon volunteered. Diego went with the cousins his age. Mabel wondered if having so many children around would be demiterial for getting with a boy. Still, it would be nice to hang out with her cousins.

So, the two groups parted ways, the boys to one side, the girls and excited kids to another. Wanda was going back to her room to get some work done. The boy-hunt group went to the beach and settled down so Miz could locate any supernatural activity in the area. Even if this place wasn’t Gravity Falls, it had its dose of weirdness. Cool. It suited the place. She hummed and hugged her doll as she flickered around all the triangles in the area. She also tried to sense for magic. She blinked in surprise when she felt a twinge of magic.

“Huh?” She looked around but lost track of the signal. It was incredibly faint. As she looked around in confusion, a voice called out “Oh! Hey Dipper!”

The group turned to see Amelie coming over. Mabel’s eyes widened. Zach and Zoe cheered. “Amelie!” they squealed. Amelie laughed as she ruffled their hair. Mabel whispered to Miz “What do we do? I’m a girl now!” Miz shrugged. “Hey, Dipper, where is Xin?” Amelie asked kindly to Mabel. Miz waved. Amelie blinked. “Um...hi Amelie,” Miz waved. Amelie blinked. “Um...hello? I don’t think I’ve met you…” Mabel rubbed her arm. “Uh…” Mabel leaned up close to Miz “Wasn’t your perception thingie supposed to...I don’t know, make it so this kinda thing doesn’t happen?”

“Well, it ensures that humans wouldn’t question it…” Miz squinted at Amelie. “Which means…”

Amelie continued to look confused. Miz stretched out her senses. Yup. That faint magical trace was coming from her. “You’re not human, are you?” Miz asked, hugging her doll as she gazed up at her new friend. It was such a faint trace that she didn’t notice until she was actively searching for it.

“Yeah…and I’m an alien demon-dragon. What’re you?” Miz asked. Amelie still looked confused. “But...you were...and now you’re...what?” Mabel sighed and stood up to place a hand on Amelie’s shoulder. “Hi, I’m Mabel, but you knew me as Markus. It’s a long story…”

They explained the Curse that Miz had cast a week ago because she didn’t like listening to her aunt and uncle argue, and how they had all been sex swapped. Amelie nodded slowly as they explained. Finally she glanced down at Miz, kneeling in the sand and cuddling her doll. “So...that hot boy was really a small girl?” She flushed. “Now I feel kinda weird…”

“Don’t worry, I’m several billion years old.” Miz said cheerfully. Amelie laughed. “I’d find that hard to believe but...hey, magic space dragon, right?”

“So...you’re magic too, right? Since Miz’s perception thing only worked on humans…” Mabel asked. Amelie looked around nervously. “I’m not supposed to talk about it. I could get in so much trouble with my parents…”

“We won’t tell!” Zach said as he patted Amelie’s leg. “We’re really good at keeping secrets! Like, daddy is magic because he was an alien and we got magic from daddy and mommy says we can’t let anyone who’s not magic know about it!” Zoe nodded “And you’re magic and you’re nice and you saved Sir Bedazzle so you can know about it!”

“Your dad is magic? I-I guess you are talking about...Sabrina?” Amelie asked. This was so confusing, now she’ll have to learn more names! “Sebastian.” Miz grinned, feeling her confusion. “Yeah, sorry for dumping this all on you.”

“I’m not magic but I love magic and all our family knows about magic so it is safe to tell us what you are!” Mabel grinned. Amelie giggled. That was the same energy Markus had. Definitely him. “Well, first off, can you explain what exactly you are? Alien demon-dragon sounds like a made up creature.” Miz giggled. “Well I’m actually a triangle.”

“...and you’ve immediately lost me.”

“I’m an alien that looks like a triangle. I have shape shifting powers that go down into a genetic level. I’m considered a demon because of how my powers work and I’m currently shape shifted into a human-form dragon.” Miz explained.

“....still lost.”

“Certain dragons have a natural ability to change into a human form.” Miz shrugged. “I COULD turn myself into a human for real, but then I would need to deal with things like…” she shuddered “...waste production...ugh…”

“Pooping is perfectly natural!” Mabel protested. The twins and Diego let out a loud “EEWW!!” they didn’t want to hear about poop! Amelie nodded slowly. “Right...So alien. You two are kids from an alien…” She nodded. Ok she understood. And would make sense why they adopted Xin--er… Miz. She was an alien as well!

The twins felt the need to defend their daddy, but Miz put her hands on their shoulders. “So, what are you? Now that you know what I am.” Amelie rubbed her arm. “Promise you won’t laugh?” The Pines all nodded. Amelie blushed. “I’m a Selkie.”

Mabel and the others looked lost. Miz sat up with a grin “So THAT’S why I couldn’t tell you were Diego pulled at Miz’s shirt “What’s a Selkie?” Miz cleared her throat and prepared to go into ‘teacher’ mode. “A Selkie is a magical creature, generally a Seal, who can shed their animal skin to become completely human.” Miz nodded at Amelie. “And that’s why I couldn’t tell. Amelie as a human is pretty much a normal human, aside from the faint connection she has to her Skin.”

Amelie blinked. “Oh, wow, I’ve never heard someone explain it in such a way. But, yeah. I’m a Seal. Though I HAVE met other Selkie who were dolphins.” Mabel sparkled “That sounds so cool!” Zoe tilted her head. “Why did you think we would laugh? This is really cool.” Amelie blushed. “Well...it’s embarrassing right? Someone who can shed and put back on their skin...doesn’t that sound...gross?”

“Pfft~I start growing scales all over my body when I lose control over my human form.” Miz shrugged. “And my triangle form can mutate to sprout multiple arms, legs and mouths. If anything, I’m gross.”

Amelie rubbed her arm and smiled at how Miz tried to make her feel better. “Thanks...” She said and the twins, always so affectionate, hugged her. “We burst into flames when it is too hot.” Zach giggled. “Our daddy too. That’s embarrassing.” Amelie laughed some more, “Okay, I get it. We’re all weird and that’s fine?” Once they got that settled, Amelie asked what they were doing today.

Miz looked at Amelie. “We’re looking for a cute boy Mabel can date. Do you happen to know any cute selkie boys who would be interested in this adorable human?” Amelie laughed. “What is it with your family and supernaturals?”

Mabel scoffed. “Well I’ve been TRYING to date a human boy for YEARS but for some reason, they all run away from me!” Miz patted her back. “And the only guys who HAVE been interested in me were a bunch of Gnomes in a jacket, a merman and this creepy kid who tried to kill my brother with garden shears he was levitating with his stupid magic powers!”

“It’s ok, that was years ago.” Miz hugged her cousin. “Gideon was the worst. I haven’t really heard from him in a while, which is good, but he was a creepy kid.” Mabel pouted. “I saw him once a while back, but after he tried to creep on me again and I told him ‘no’, I haven’t heard from him at all. So...that’s good?” Amelie was wide eyed. “That’s...some horrible luck.” Mabel groaned. “Tell me about it. So by this point, I think I can only attract magical guys, so I figured, I may as well make the best of it and just find a cute magical boy.”

“Well...I have a few friends, but I don’t know if their human form would be handsome to you...and they are in Iceland.” She smiled apologetically. Mabel sighed. “I will start buying cats...” She hugged Diego to herself. Miz patted her head. “Don’t give up, Mabel. We have all summer to find you a nice boy. Human or not.”

“Yeah, and if they aren’t nice, we’ll bite them!” Zoe declared while she and her twin snapped their jaws, clicking their little sharp teeth. Mabel giggled. “You’re right! Come on guys! You too, Amelie! We’re gonna find cute boys!!” They all raised a hand into the air and cheered.

Meanwhile, the boys were walking along the beach. The sun hit their faces, trying to roast them alive, and they weren’t close yet.

“You know...I think we should give up. It’s ok to give up sometimes.” Seb said. Ford was walking in front of them. “I’m pretty sure it was around here. Remember? The lighthouse pointed to some caves, and we have to get to those caves.”
Dipper wiped the sweat from his face. “We should have brought an umbrella.” He said blearily. “Or water bottles…” His throat was so dry he felt like he was going to cough dust. Seb wasn’t doing much better. He was starting to catch fire. “I’m so hooooot…” He moaned.

Ford blinked as he watched his triplet scream. “I CAN’T TAKE IT ANYMORE!” Before he ran towards the cold water where he fell face first. “Sebastian we don’t have time for you to play.” The water sizzled as Seb sighed in relief and laid there on the wet sand, allowing the salty water to cool him. It got in his mouth sometimes, but desperate situations required desperate solutions.

Then he walked back to his group. “Done?” Ford rolled his eyes. “Well, I’m sorry for not wanting to spontaneously combust and burn everyone.” Seb pouted. “Regardless, let’s go, the lighthouse is right this way…” They finally got some blessed shade. Dipper took his hat off to let his head air out. “Ugh...I’m sweating everywhere…”

“Monster hunts don’t generally contain comforts and luxuries.” Ford stated. Dipper, Dillon and Seb stared at him “How the fuck are you still wearing long sleeves and not DYING?!”

Ford looked at his clothes and shrugged. “I don’t know. I don’t sweat as much as you do.” He said. Seb groaned and looked at his nephews. “Sixer has worn jackets and long-sleeved shirts since we were kids.” He sighed. “He’s just weird like that.”

“Are you really human?” Dillon wiped his forehead. Ford looked mildly offended. “A calm mind is a calm body. If I don’t think I’m hot, I won’t be.” Seb groaned, feeling the heat more than normal people “What kinda bullshit meditation thing is that?!”

“Regardless, we have found the cave. Perhaps this time we will have better luck.” Ford strode forward with purpose...and immediately slipped on the cave floor. He managed to catch himself before he fell but gasped when his glasses tumbled away.

“Haha, calm body and calm mind, am I right? Heyo!!” Seb laughed and his nephews high-fived him, laughing loudly.

“You were less annoying as a woman.” Ford mumbled as he patted the ground for his glasses. Seb huffed. “As a woman, you didn’t do stupid shit that deserved to be mocked. It’s pretty simple.” He grinned and grabbed the glasses. He put them on his brother’s face. “There!” Seb declared and Ford rolled his eyes. “Thanks.”

“Uh, did anyone bring a flashlight?” Dipper asked. Seb scoffed. He held up a hand and fire formed along his hand. “Ugh...still really hot…” At least the blue fire helped them see. Seb went in front with Ford and they walked forward, followed by the two teens. They looked to their feet, careful not to slip like their Uncle. “Why did you even try to find the Jersey devil anyway?” Dillon asked curiously.

“We were bored.” Seb laughed. “Also, kids do stupid things.” He bumped into Ford's back. “Oi? What's up, Sixer?” Ford was gazing down and frowning. “Was this hole always here?”

Everyone looked down. “We don't have any rope. How're we gonna get down?” Dillon asked. He wasn't really sure he wanted to be part of this anymore.

“We could go get ropes!” Dipper suggested. “Or deal to get ropes?” He looked at Seb, who glared. “Do you think I’m a dispenser or something? Though, that actually would work….”

“Well…” Ford dropped a rock down and waited. After a few minutes Dillon deadpanned “I don't hear a thunk.” he backed off. “Ok, monster hunt sounded cool but I think going into a super deep cave without any proper tools and supplies is reckless and dangerous.”

Dipper, Ford and Seb blinked at him. “But...adventure!” Dillon facepalmed. “No wonder you guys are all insane.”

The brothers and Dipper grinned widely, proud of themselves. Seb looked at Dillon and picked him up with his mind. “Well, why don’t you check if it’s dangerous, nephew?!?” Seb laughed madly as Dillon struggled to get down. “NO, NO, NO! UNCLE SEB! UNCLE SEB!!!” Then he was floating down the hole.

“Did you seriously throw our nephew down there?” Ford raised an eyebrow. “Yup! Better than staying here like idiots! Besides, we survived a fall to the cave with dinosaurs years ago!” Seb shrugged. Dillon continued screaming as he was lowered into the hole. “It's dark!”

Dipper shrugged. “Can you lower us down as well?” Seb frowned as he lifted Dipper and Ford as well. “Wait, Sebastian, you can't lift yourself right? How're you getting down?”

Seb put them down as he thought. His left hand was still glowing, holding his screaming nephew. “Hey...I can’t lift MYSELF, but I can lift you! And you could lift me!” Seb laughed and quickly climbed onto his brother’s back. Ford grunted at the extra weight which was surprisingly less than he expected. Then Seb lifted them into the air again. “Damn, it worked! In your face, limited powers!! Ford and Dipper yelped as they were roughly floated down the hole. “ADVENTURE!” (They’d been too boring recently. Too domestically human. They needed ADVENTURE!)

Dillon glared at them when they landed near him. “I’m telling dad you threw me in a hole.” He grumbled. Seb grinned sheepishly at Dillon's expression. “But we came down with you~” Dillon scoffed. “We have no supplies.”

“We have magic~” Seb sing-songed. Dillon rolled his eyes. “Well, where are we going now?” He asked. Ford was looking around. “We really should have brought a flashlight…”

“Hey! Aren't I good enough for you?” Seb whined. Dipper snorted and patted Seb's shoulder. “You're the best flashlight, Uncle Seb.”

The youngest triplet grinned. “Damn right! And nothing shines brighter than me!” His hands caught on fire. Ford rolled his eyes so hard only the white part was left. Why, why was he like this? “OK! Now let’s go! I have a good feeling about this!” He said happily just as Dillon grumbled “I have a bad feeling about this...

The male Pines walked deeper into the cave, not knowing what was awaiting for them. Seb had made his flames cover his whole arm, so they had more light to see. Ford was gasping at some carvings on the walls and pulled Seb closer to see.

“Is this...a language?” Ford traced the markings that spread across the cave wall. This was more than he thought he would find to be honest. What was this language?

“Er...Sixer?” Did the Jersey Devil have more intelligence than he thought? Did he write these words? Or were they written by some other people? What did they say? Could he translate them?

“Sixer!”

“What is it Sebastian?” Ford turned to his brother with a frown. He paused when he realized they were surrounded by large figures pointing spears at them. “Oh.”
Dillon groaned. “If we die, I am haunting all of you.”

“So...there's a signal from one of these buildings?” Mabel asked as their group walked through the markets, licking their snowcones and sipping slushies to keep cool. Miz nodded as she drank the bright blue liquid. So nice and cold—

“There seems to be some underground tunnels...plus a faint magical source, but I can't see much down there.” Miz shrugged. “I'm guessing whoever/whatever this is, they have a shop as a front, or to earn money. Either they own the shop, or have some hidden entrance near them.”

“So they live underground? I don't want to date a mole person!” Mabel sighed.

“Oh, don’t be racist, Mabel.” Miz scolded. “Yeah! Don’t be racist!” The kids snarled. “Wait. What is racist?”

“When a person doesn’t like others because they don’t look like them or they’re from a different culture. For example, some people are racist towards people with dark skin. Or if they speak a different language from them. There are some people who will be mean to people just because of something stupid like that.” (Miz frowned, speaking of… she needed to check up on that island she created before they came to Jersey. It was something she’d made as a starter experiment, to see if a set up like this could work…)

The kids, pure and innocent, gasped in horror at the idea. “But why does it matter what color their skin is?” They asked. “Because people are stupid.” Miz huffed, quite angry at it all. Mabel sighed. “Ok, I guess it's possible there are cute mole people…”

Amelie giggled. “You guys are so weird.” (“That’s a compliment!” Miz cheered.) She rubbed her arm self consciously. “Though to be fair, I think everyone’s a little racist, even if they don’t mean to be.” She blushed a little. “Like...I was told that humans are scary if they found out about supernatural creatures. That's why we're not supposed to let anyone find out what we are. I was told that humans would want to experiment on us or hunt us down if they knew what we were… and that's me being racist against humans.” She looked a little disappointed in herself.

“Well...you're not wrong.” Miz sighed. “Lots of humans are kinda stupid. They're already mean to their OWN kind, so they have even more trouble with other species. But not ALL humans are like that.”

The twins nodded. "Mommy is nice! And our aunts and uncles.” They looked a little sad. “But there's a mean lady we met. She...is she a racist? Because she doesn't like Zach being a boy?” Zoe asked.

Miz growled. “That's not racist but what she is , is also bad. Carol’s just mean and entitled and thinks she gets to decide what other people are allowed to do with their lives, and a bad person…” She paused. “Actually... I think she's a bit racist too...something about locking her doors when she's in certain neighborhoods…” her eyes flickered briefly. “Yeesh, how Amanda is so sweet, I don’t know.”

The kids didn’t understand, but right now wasn’t the moment to teach them about the real world, they could do that when they weren’t on vacation helping their crazy cousin date a supernatural boy.

Mabel looked around, trying to spot a cute boy working. If this mole boy’s family had a shop, he definitely had to work there too. “Um...do you see any cute boys?” They went through multiple shops, Miz was unable to pin down the source of the magic, but frankly, at this point she didn’t care. Mabel flirted with a bunch of different boys, scaring them all off as she went. Mabel was about to give up. The girl suddenly gasped when her brown eyes landed on a young man. He was behind the counter of a butcher store, and he was cutting something, probably meat, duh.

His apron had blood on it but that didn’t make him less hot. He was wearing a sleeveless shirt, showing off cool arm tattoos that looked like reptile scales, he was dark skinned, with darker hair that was really disheveled on the top of his head, but ended up in an adorable braid along the side, it seemed almost dark green, and he had very green eyes. He cleaned off his knife and looked up, noticing the girl staring at him. He smiled. “Hello?”

Mabel felt faint. “That’s it guys! My future husband!”

Zach giggled as Zoe and Diego made faces. Yucky. Getting married. “Is that a mole boy?” Zoe pulled at her sister’s hand. Miz frowned. “Not a mole...some kinda reptilian, he can't fully hide his scales.” Mabel didn’t hear any of this, since she was already bouncing over to attempt to flirt, like she’d done with all the other cute boys she’d seen today.

“Hello~I'm Mabel! But you can call me the girl of your dreams~” she batted her eyes at him. The young man blinked before laughing.
“Ah… okay? H-hello. I am not sleeping. I work.” He wiped off his hand. Mabel swooned at the very strong unknown accent he had. A foreigner~ “Hello. I-am Maxini. You call me Max, yes?” He shook her hand. Mabel squealed. His grip was firm and she saw how his muscles flexed in his arm. “If you… buy stuff, my manager--” He gestured behind him.

“You're really hot.” Mabel stared at him dreamily. Maxini laughed. “Yes? I am te-told I'm too cold? I do not understand?” And his first language was definitely not english. That was fine. Mabel would just have to try harder.

Mabel looked down at his hand. “Well, your hand is kinda cold but that feels really nice on a hot day like this.” The boy seemed a little flustered. “You think so?”

“I know so. And I didn't mean you're hot like your temperature. I'm saying that you're incredibly attractive.” Mabel grinned. The boy looked even more flustered “O-oh! Um… No one's ever said that to I…” he seemed flattered. ”Many girls think I'm…” He said softly before trailing off. “Do you...think I am good?” He rubbed his arm self consciously.
“Most girls are blind, is what they are.” The girl giggled. "OF COURSE YOU’RE ATTRACTIVE!! Boy, you sure are a good looking guy!” Mabel smiled. "If you think I'm nice too...maybe we could go out somewhere sometimes?! Like, right now would be awesome.”

Max smiled a little bit. Ooh~ cute sharp tooth smile! “Um, I think that...let-let me ask...ask...if...my- my sh-shift is-is-kauh!-t-that!!” He smiled, wiggling from side to side and turned around, bumping into a wall. He laughed sheepishly before going inside. Mabel fist punched the air. “Yeeees!”

Everyone approached Mabel. “Damn! You totally enchanted that reptile boy!” Miz laughed. “You know how hard it is for a reptilian species to even look flustered?!” Mabel hugged her arm. “I got a date!!” She squealed, the kids and Amelie laughed as they clapped. “Congrats. I guess you are a supernatural magnet.”

“Oh~I hope I don't mess this up!” Mabel pulled her hair. Miz patted her back. “You'll do fine. I think he appreciates your straightforward nature.” She and the others giggled and stepped back as Maxini came back out with clean clothes. “Ah...so...what... to do?” He looked rather shy, likely never getting asked out so directly before. “I... ah... I don’t know... how this... work?” He was somewhat nervous. He was fascinated by humans, and hadn’t gotten to talk to many beside his boss (the human male told him to send the clients over to him, as Max’s human language wasn’t good). He was excited for this, but he was nervous too.

“Just walk around I guess. Oh, these are my cousins and my friend Amelie.” Mabel introduced. Miz nodded at the boy. “Xocce. Ak’j loh daso ke mook oei.” She said. Maxini’s eyes went wide. “Oei sud foub mo cudwiuwo?”

“Yup. Hello. I'm Miz. I'm a dragon . And Amelie here is a Selkie. Don't worry about us. We know about the fact that you're not human.” The young man looked startled and looked over at Mabel. “But...you human?” Mabel nodded. “Yup.” Max found himself relaxing. A... a dragon? He’d heard the stories, but he never thought he’d actually meet one! And if there was a dragon here, he... sort of felt better. Not being alone with humans who he didn’t know.

“And...you want...want to talk with me? I’m not human?” Maxini asked. Mabel giggled and took his hand. “Of course I want to talk to you. Why should your species matter? I think you're attractive and even more interesting because you aren't human. I love learning meeting new people and learning about new cultures! I want to spend some more time with you.”

If Maxini was capable of blushing he would. Instead, he had a goofy smile on his face and wiggled back and forth, much like Miz would do when she wanted to wag her tail. “We-well you are... good too...” He stuttered, hoping he said it right. Mabel was...a pretty human.

Mabel squealed. Miz and Amelie gave her thumbs up. “You don't mind if my friend and cousins come with us, right? I'm actually supposed to babysit my little cousins today.” Mabel admitted. Maxini laughed. “There's no problem.” Mabel realized she might have a thing for accents. She also thought Mermando's accent was cute. But Max's? God, so hot. (Max was trying to figure out how this human was cousins with a dragon? That... was what Mabel said, right?)

The group went out with Mabel and Maxini holding hands as they chatted about their lives, their likes, dislikes, normal stuff. “This is rather nice. Are there any other magical beings here?” Amelie asked. Miz looked around. “A few minor blips here and there. I'm just hoping this works out for them. Of course, that'll depend on them.” Miz also placed a minor translation spell around (not on) Max so that he and Mabel could communicate better.

They walked around and the teens chatted happily. Mabel told him about where she lived, about her family, her twin brother, her parents, her uncles and the adventures they had. “Oh! And I have a pet pig named Waddles! He’s the most adorable baby! Max listened intently. He was amazed to find himself able to understand her.

“Pork is delicious.” He said and Mabel pouted. “You’re just like my uncle Seb! He wants to eat my pet!” She punched his muscled arm jokingly and the boy grinned. He never really talked about himself to someone before, and while he was a little hesitant at first, with how much Mabel was telling him all about herself and her family, he kinda felt like reciprocating.

“Well, my family is really big. We all live together. But...not here, we don't live in the human world among humans...It's scary.” Max shifted from side to side, wondering if it was safe for him to tell them about his tribe. He was told not to interact more than necessary after all...

Mabel grinned and he took a deep breath, working up his courage. "You see, our world is not here. You can only go in and out using magic points dispersed throughout the world…"

"That explains the magic blips I felt…" Miz mused. “Like mini-portals, like all the ones around Gravity Falls leading to the hidden market. Or the rifts that used to pop up."

"Ooh~~" Mabel nodded. "So all your species know magic and that kind of stuff? You do spells?!"

Max chuckled, a low rumbling sound deep in his chest, and Mabel swooned. "Actually no. There are a few tribes who have access to magic. From what the priestesses have told me, our tribe and our closest allies located close to this land are one of them, because the point of magic is located in a cave in this part of the territory. Some rifts are in the ocean too, so food travels to both realms without problem. And sea creatures that sometimes get lost or just visit. I met an old friend of mine that way. Down in the land of the south, there's no magic points, so the Eix Leel there have no way to access the human world. This is also why we ended up developing magic as part of our culture, if we didn't we wouldn't be able to create human illusions...Though, I don't understand why our human templates are this color, most humans I've seen around here are your color." Must be because they were based on the first humans they saw inhabiting the land, many hundreds of years ago.

"So~ You come to the human world from time to time?" Mabel asked.

"Not everybody. I'm a priest’s apprentice… I'm low class, but an aunt of mine was rewarded in the military by the Queen and because I...I wasn't going to help my family in any other way…” He rubbed his arm, looking a little uncomfortable at this. "I was allowed to become a priest apprentice. There, I started to learn everything I'll need for that, including magic. I come to get foreign meat. I work here and my boss lets me take some home. The royal family likes it."

"So...You can't date?" Mabel grumbled disappointed.

"Courtship? Oh, I can. But, I'm not sure if I'd have to stop my studies or not.. I'm not sure how that works with male priests…” He hummed in thought. Miz raised an eyebrow. "What do you mean by that?"

Max grimaced a bit. "Eh~ It's kinda new for males to be priests or...work for the queen, the idea was brought from other, more progressive, cities down in the south...So, I was lucky to be accepted."

"Well, girls are better at everything!" Zoe crossed her arms proudly before Zach kicked her shin.

"It's true.” Max nodded at the little human cub with complete sincerity. "But we males can do stuff too."
The adults in the group shared a few glances, feeling something off from what Max was telling them. They found an ice-cream shop and sat down together. Mabel offered to pay for Max, since she was the one who invited him out. Max didn't know what they were going to eat but he was willing to try as long as it wasn't plant based.

Mabel coughed. "So~ You like working as a butcher?"

Max grinned widely, wiggling his butt a little bit. "Yes Yes! Like, it's super new for us to be allowed out in the human world for so long! The military is allowed to go out, like the priestesses! I heard my ancestors used to steal this animal called...cow, or was it called beef, which is very yummy! We don't have that animal! Or chicken! But now, we can work as butchers to get as many meats as we want without getting in trouble with the humans.” It was so cute how he messed up some words. The spell had its limits. It was going for a base translation after all. Miz would need something for in depth to get all the nuances.

“So you really like meat?” Mabel asked. “I like some meat but I don't eat it very often. Especially not pork.” she would never eat pigs.

Maxini rubbed his head. “I'm a carnivore so yeah, I like it ...Especially pork…” he looked a little guilty. Mabel hugged his arm. “As long as you don't eat my pet I don't see a problem.” He looked relieved at that. “Well, I like chicken second best. My people normally eat fish. Our villages and cities are built around large lakes and oceans.” Max took this time to look at Miz and the others, who’d been giving them some space, but following them nonetheless.

“So...your cousin is a dragon? How that happened?” He asked Mabel. The group finished their ice cream (Max had tried a bit earlier but couldn’t stand how cold it was) and sat down for lunch with real (sorta) food at an outdoor cafe. Amelie, Zach and Miz were watching the date cheerfully. Zoe and Diego just wanted more ice cream. “Well she's actually an alien demon-dragon. It's a long story.” Mabel shrugged.

“Well, I think the lovebirds are doing well~let's give them some privacy.” Miz giggled as she and the others moved to a different table. Close enough to watch, far enough to let them chat without too blatantly eavesdropping. But they were eavesdropping. Miz bounced in her seat.

Amelie looked over at the two teenagers holding hands under the table. “I wonder if I could find a partner someday.” Miz tilted her head. “Oh? Are you having boy troubles too?” Amelie blushed. “Well, there are a few other seals who have asked me out, but they're all interested in mating and having pups.”

“And what do you want?"

“I don't rightfully know. I never really thought about it.” Amelie shrugged. “But being here, up on land has been more fun than I originally thought. I guess I'd like to spend more time exploring the world before settling down.” she blushed. “One of my relatives is marrying a human, you know? So I know such a thing isn't forbidden.”

Amelie glanced at Miz and sighed. “I'm kinda disappointed you're actually a little girl...even if you're thousands of years old.” (“Several billion actually.”) Amelie blushed. Miz looked confused. “So...did you like me?” She asked bluntly. Amelie blushed harder. “You were very handsome, yeah, but I know you weren’t interested, and you DID tell me straight out that you wanted to be just friends.” She almost added, ‘And you were with that other woman... man?’

“Oh…” Miz wiggled in her seat. "And you're still my friend right?"
“Of course!” Amelie grinned, Miz gave her a hug. The children hugged her too. “We're not gonna stop being friends.” Miz assured her. Amelie was thrilled by that. Human and dragon friends!

Mabel ordered a belgium waffle loaded with fruits and whipped cream, and she recommended for Max to try hot chocolate if he wanted something sweet and delicious but not cold. It got them weird looks from the waiters. It was hot as heck!

Max shook his head when Mabel asked if he'd be willing to try other cold stuff that wasn't frozen like ice cream. “I have cold blood, it can make me colder if I eat something cold, even when the weather's hot, I still feel kinda cold.” Mabel put a hand over his. “Poor thing...I will protect you from weird looks!” Max chuckled. She was such a strange human…but she was such a lady, powerful, assertive...His father would approve...if she was an Eix Leel.

“So...is this your real form? I am so sorry if I sound too blunt or this is too personal.” Mabel grimaced. Max smiled. “No. Not at all! Well, I don't even know how to begin to explain...This is an illusion actually."

Max pulled a collar out over the neck of his shirt. It was one of his teeth (yes, it was that serious) with runes he carved himself) and he showed it to Mabel. "It is used to make me look human to anyone, but my real body is untouched."

"Oohhhh~~~And how did you get a human...illusion body?" Mabel asked, intrigued.

“It takes a lot of work, carving the runes and crafting the illusion to myself, so it goes around me and can fool humans. It even makes me blurry to those... cam-raws that humans try to use to capture our image.” Max explained. “We look all... blur-shiny and don’t show up very well.”

(“Built in perception filter? Nice.” Miz commented. She made a note to check out Max’s spell necklace a little closer.)

“So, what do you really look like? I bet you look super awesome!” Mabel grinned. Max wiggled in his seat, it was flattering for her to say, but Max knew he wasn’t ‘awesome’ or anything. Still, with how eagerly Mabel was looking at him, he raised his hands to his chest and started trying to describe it.

“My real body is covered in scales for one, except my front part eh~ chest? My face doesn't look like this, we have a...how you say? Muzzle? I have a tail!” Max wiggled his butt a little more, his tail was lucked up close to his back, almost tied in place to keep it from knocking into people. "This is um, more long, and more thin, like a fin." He pointed at his ears. "Also, this~" He grabbed a strand of hair. "Is very weird. I have feathers. Sorry, english is hard." The translation spell only worked when he slipped in his native words for words he didn’t know in English, his attempts at English came through just the way he said them.

“No problem, I think I get it. That’s so pretty~” Mabel cooed. “How old are you? I’m 18! Gonna be 19 at the end of the summer.” (They were in 2018 now.)

“I turned 19 a few months ago along with my brothers and sisters!” Maxini said. “We're a pretty small clutch, only 4 eggs. I have a brother and two sisters.”

“So you're quadruplets? I'm part of a set of twins. My brother isn't here right now though. He and my uncles went on a monster hunt.”

Max paled. “Monster hunt?” he gasped. Mabel shook her head quickly and waved her hands. “Don't worry!! They're nice people. Uncle Ford and Dipper are just nerds who like to find magical creatures, it's not a REAL hunt. They said they were looking for the Jersey Devil.”

Maxini sighed in relief. “Well I hope they don't run into some of my relatives. They hate those paranormal investigator types. You know back when more of them came around searching for anything not human they almost found the magic entrance. My grandma told me about it.”

“That sounds awful.” Mabel gasped. Maxini nodded. “We were almost forced to move. They were all quite upset. It would have been awful if we had to leave our lives behind and move just because of humans.”

“Hey…” Diego piped up. “Does that mean uncle Ford is going to get in trouble if he finds your family?”

They all looked at each other before Miz face palmed. “Those idiots.”

“Ok, everyone, stay calm.” Ford said quietly. Seb growled. “What do you mean calm?! We've been captured!” He hissed “By LIZARD PEOPLE!”

“Quiet you!” One of their captors poked his back. “Keep walking.” They realized it was a she, all of them, but couldn't understand her very well. They were very, very tall and muscular 'shes'. Their bodies were covered in green scales, and had spines on their shoulders, tails and back part of their legs. Their dark head feathers were styled to the side and wore some sort of red bandana with various decorations as well as a red and brown tunic. Their teeth were incredibly sharp as well as their claws. And they looked very pissed with them.

They had tied the Pines up and led them through the underground tunnels. Dillon was crying “We're all gonna die! I'll never get married to Phillip and we’ll never adopt dogs and babies!” He wailed.

“Dillon, shut up! You are NOT helping!” Dipper glared and they continued walking. “Um, miss Lizard women? We are so sorry for trespassing, can we leave? We promise to never come back!”

The lizard woman with disheveled black feathers, kept back with her bandana, growled at them, and the four winced at her sharp teeth. “I said quiet, human! Bringer of destruction and death!” She huffed at the teen who whimpered when she growled her unknown words at his face.

One of them looked at the growling one. "We can’t put our city in danger, you already know our secrets…” The one holding Ford scoffed. “Now we cannot let them leave.” Dillon cried harder.

"I don't know what you're sayiiiiing!” The poor teen sobbed.

“What do you plan to do with us, crocodile?!” Seb growled, showing off his sharp teeth as well, but he was ignored. He was about to shout again when they suddenly stopped and stared in horror and awe at a glowing purple fissure in the middle of the rock.

The four Pines backpedaled as they were forced through. "No!! Nonononono!!" Dipper and Dillon screamed.

The other side was...suspiciously similar to their world, but to get out, they didn't go through many tunnels. The light of the sun blinded them for a second when they emerged out of the cave.

The four Pines gasped in horrified awe when they were pushed into the beach and were met not by humans on vacations playing on the sand, but by reptilians walking around on the beach.
Compared to the green females holding them down, these seemed to be male, and they came in many different colors. Their head feathers were styled in long braids and decorated with beads. They were vibrant colors, incredibly pretty to look at.

Some were entering the water, some were getting out, shaking themselves to get rid of the water while carrying a net of fish. And all while their little kids ran around them, pulling at their tails or rolling in the sand.

It was a very beautiful sight...If it weren't for the fact that they were tied up and led somewhere potentially dangerous. The guards holding them down told the males something they didn't understand, but it made the males gasp, hide their tails and mutter nervously among them.

Were they talking about eating them? It sure looked like it. The reptilian holding Dipper laughed and showed him her fangs. That was when Dipper lost it as well and started crying.

“I am nobody's snack, scale face!!” Seb’s hands caught on fire and started burning the ropes, but the female guard holding him was very big, big and muscular and strong enough to hold him still. "Let me go!!!!" He growled as his hands flickered with flames.

The female cried in pain and let him go momentarily. "The fire beast burned me!"

If Seb understood the reptilian calling him that, he'd be pissed.

“Wait! He isn’t human!” One of the guards whispered, looking at Seb, but of course, the humans didn't understand it. The one holding Seb was now threatening him to make his fire disappear.

"This one is clearly magical. Wouldn't this one be spared?"

"No! I don't care! He looks human and they invaded our territory!" The guard motioned them to continue walking and the humans were once again pushed forward. They were led through their city, the guards exposing the disgusting scale-less creatures to the rest of the community. The males carrying their kids on their backs and tending their homes, gagged, the females carrying wood, rocks or working on their metals or ceramics growled at them. Both males and females had spines on their backs that extended menacingly.

"Have you noticed the females are bigger than the males?" Ford whispered to a very stressed Seb and crying nephews. "And the jobs they're doing...it seems to be inversed to our own, rather, their society appears to be several centuries behind ours. It seems they're still in between the period of stone and metal."

"Do you think IT'S THE RIGHT TIME TO THINK ABOUT THAT?!" Seb screamed, fed up with Ford's bullshit. He struggled but the guard snapped at him and held firmly.

"Let US GO!!!" Seb shrieked. A big building came into view. Ford whispered it might be their leader's palace.

The lizardwomen continued hissing among them in a language none of them recognized. “Nxuk jxeict no te?” “Kubo kxom ke kxo sxoav!”

"Uncle Seb~ I think this is a great moment to go monster form, don't you think?! Dipper cried.

Seb remembered he did have powers and, despite still feeling weird about it, made his second pair of arms appear. He struggled out of the guard’s arms and charged at the guard holding his brother. "Take your claws off me and my family!"
The guard fell back to the ground, shouting and the crowd around gasped and started shouting. Seb pinned her down and Ford took that distraction to kick the reptilian holding him on her legs and free himself. It didn't last long though. More guards were called by the males watching and to Dipper and Dillon's terror, they threw their uncles to the floor. One of the females charged at Seb. One bit one of his arms, planning to tear it off, and almost succeeded, but when another one wanted to pierce him with her spear, a sudden force field around him threw both of them back.

Miz's spell. No deathly harm could be posed on them. It didn’t do much for normal injuries though.

The guards finally held down the rebellious humans. A young male offered a cloth to the strong and brave soldier so she could wipe off her blood. The female nodded at him, spat the fang the fire beast knocked from her mouth into the cloth and continued pushing him towards the Queen, so she could decide his fate.

"SEB! SEBASTIAN! Are you ok?!" Ford grimaced at the large amount of blood pouring out of his brother's shoulder. Dillon was still crying. Seb winced and retreated his arms. "I-I'm fine" He gritted his teeth. "Goddammit. At least she could have bitten me in the magical ones!"

"Will Daddy be ok?" Zach asked nervously. “Of course he will! Your Daddy is the best!” Mabel reassured, but scared as well. They got to a cave, where Miz floated everyone a little so they wouldn’t slip on the slick rocks.

Max's heart hammered against his chest as he took the group towards the portal-point. Gods, he was getting in so much trouble for this...Males weren't supposed to cause so much trouble! It'd only make his mother disapprove of him even more.

Still, he smelled traces of humans here, so it was very likely Mabel's family was in danger. He took off his shoes, shirt and pants, making Amelie and Miz cover the kids' eyes, before he recited a soft rune and changed back to his normal form.

Mabel didn't know if she was disappointed or not for not seeing anything in this form. (It was hidden away…) His reptilian form was so tall though! He was covered in green scales and he was very muscular too~ Nice~ He reached for some sort of skirt hidden away and told them to get inside.

"We must hurry. Today the soldiers were patrolling here. If they caught them, they are taking them to the Queen right now!" The humans, dragon, and Selkie crossed the fissure and followed Max.

"Not to scare, we don't eat humans, but all I know is trespassers are put to sacrifice to the protector god..."

"...Joy…” Miz winced as the kids' lips wobbled.

Miz Perception Filter’ed the shit outta their group as they passed some guards standing near the portal.

“Ah! Maxi! What-what are you doing here? I thought you were working.” A guard smiled and nudged his neck. One of his sisters. "Just came home earlier, ok, bye!" Max said quickly as he led his entourage past them.

Max led the entire group with him and ran on four legs towards the center of the city. "Come on!" He motioned for Mabel to get on his back. It made him a little embarrassed, but it was her family, and he didn't want them to get hurt. Mabel grinned and accepted the ride, almost shrieking at the speed he had, even with her on his back.

Miz hummed in thought, too slow! Humans are too slow! She sprouted her tail and antlers. Soon enough, she was in her full triangular dragon form and picked up everyone except Maxini.

"Oh Gods…" Max almost tripped on himself at the majestic sight.

Amelie gasped. "‘‘So THIS is what you mean by ALIEN dragon demon!’’"

Max shook his head before he continued running, trying not to get distracted by how warm Mabel was.

Miz grinned like the demon she was, and dropped the perception filter just because.

Immediate screams.

Both males and females shrieked and cried at the giant creature that appeared OUT OF NOWHERE!!! Chasing (or more like following) a young male.

Miz sighed. Aah~ Fear and admiration~ So refreshing. (And yes, she was filtering correctly! She just found it funny, is all.) Her smile was wiped off her face though when she heard the familiar English shouts of her humans.

"Oh no!! They're in the temple already!" There was a patio there for ceremonies. And for stuff like this.

They moved past the terrified reptilians who wanted to watch the show and Miz knocked down a wall of the temple. Max winced. Oh fuck…

The Pines were tied up on large wooden piles, for Seb, they had used metal, after seeing how strong he was. The Queen was with the priestesses, and a group of people cheered to kill the humans.

Sebastian and Stanford were screaming, pleading them to spare the children. It seemed they were going to be burned alive? Or stoned to death? Or maybe both who fucking knew in this place?!

Luckily for them, it didn't happen, because the fucking wall was knocked down and a large dragon appeared, growling.

The group who captured the humans stepped in front of the Queen and the priestesses, growling and pointing at them with their spears, while the Queen and her priestesses stared in fearful awe.

"A dragon! I thought they were extinct!"

Mabel jumped off Max's back and smiled at her family. "Guys! Don't worry, I came to save you a second time!" She sent them a smile, too bad they were too traumatized to answer.

"Now YOU let my family go!" Mabel faced the very angry reptilians. Max winced a bit, but he knew she would be fine, she was female, they'd listen to her.

Miz flipped a paw so they could all understand the reptilian's language. She didn't like everyone not understanding things when trying to communicate.

"What the hell is going on here?!" The Queen screamed.

"There are more humans, your Majesty!" "How is that possible! There were guards at the entrance!” "I knew we shouldn't have left amateurs there!"

"Let go of the humans, and then we’ll all leave.” Miz grumbled. Zach and Zoe jumped off her and growled at the reptiles with their little pointy teeth. "LET DADDY GO NOW!" Their arms set on fire.

"MIZ, STOP THEM!" Seb and Ford cried.

“The children! They are the fire beast’s pups!” Another pointed at them.

“Fire beast?” Mabel repeated out loud before looking at her friend. "Max! Please talk to them!”

What?

Max looked at the kids, at the dragon, at the terrified-looking tied up humans, at the Queen, priestesses and finally, at the head of that group of soldiers. His thin ears dropped and his tail was tucked between his legs before he bowed.

"Please, your Majesty. This was just a misunderstanding, they're travellers with no vile intentions…"

Without really questioning why they could understand them now, the Pines nodded. "YES! WE'RE SO SORRY!"

"How dare you speak up to your Queen? Know your place!” The Queen snarled at the male.

Max flinched, but looked at the soldiers, especially at his aunt Laxki, who was unfortunately sighing and covering her face in embarrassment. "Aunt Laxki, please." "Oh, Max...why are you always getting in trouble? Is it so difficult to be a proper male and just do as you're told?"

Miz growled at the way they spoke at the reptile boy. "That young boy is right!" She defended Max. "I am Miz, a great and powerful dragon, and I demand you free the humans. They're mine."

The soldiers looked at each other while the Queen looked lost for words. She looked at her main priestess. "But...great dragon...They trespassed! They represent a very dangerous threat to our world! They are humans! Vile and destructive creatures! What if they tell people about us?” She whimpered.

Miz snarled. “Well they're with ME and it's not like they haven't seen non humans before. So let my family go before I start ridding you of yours…” Miz snarled in a low, demonic rumble as the skies began to darken above them. Mabel, Diego and the twins stared. They'd never seen her dragon form before. In terms of dragons, she wasn't all that big, but she was large enough to tower over them, her jaws large enough to swallow them whole if she wanted. Her scales were like bricks and her arms and legs were smoothly pitch black, looking more like clawed tentacles. A giant, singular eye glared down at the trembling lizardwomen.

It was so cool.

“Ple-Please, excuse us, great dragon. We are so sorry! We-we will let you take your property back!” The Queen's tail was tensed up. Everyone was pointing at the storm clouds blocking out the sun. They’d heard that some dragons could control nature, in fact, dragons WERE forces of nature, but they’d never seen it in real life. She ordered the soldiers to free them, and to the crowd's shock, the humans hugged each other! But humans were monsters! They only killed and tortured!

Zach and Zoe squealed “DADDY!” before hugging Seb. Seb contained a wail of pain from his still bleeding arm and hugged them back. “W-what are you all doing here?”

Dillon, Dipper and Ford all ran towards Miz to hide between her paws. Ford couldn’t help but notice Miz’s dragon form looked more like Bill than Xin’s dragon form. Once Miz was sure her humans were all here and safe, the skies cleared and it was sunny once more.

“We came to save you!” The twins sniffled and hugged their Dad’s legs. Seb sniffled and hugged them back. “Aww, thank you.”

Max remained on the ground, looking down as he stood in front of the highest authorities “You’re one of the male apprentices, aren’t you? The abnormal one!” Max flinched and Miz’s interest perked up at that. “You were allowed the opportunity to become a Priest, to restore the disgrace brought upon your family with your unnatural being, you were allowed to brave the outside world, and you bring back disgusting humans into our sacred world? You ungrateful, unworthy—”

"Wait, your honor." Mabel stepped behind him, and everyone moved forward, determined to pull her away. "It’s my fault! I was worried about my family, Max was just trying to help. A-and stop anything bad from happening!"

“Exactly.” Miz practically purred, staring down at the Queen. “If any of my humans had been killed, I would have razed your entire city to the ground and eaten all of you…” except the children, she would have simply dropped them off in the nearest tribe.

Everyone tensed at that. Ford frowned. It didn’t sound like she was lying. That… was problematic. No matter the reason, Miz shouldn’t be allowed to do such a thing. He tapped her tail, “No, no eating people.” (Some of the villagers stared at him aghast, that was the thing he had an issue with???)

One of the guards protested, “But we were simply doing our jobs! The humans had come too close! We had to--”

“You could have easily knocked them out and let them go somewhere else! Humans tend to assume they were dreaming!” Miz practically snarled at them. “And it’s more suspicious for people to go missing! The other humans would search for them! Especially if they have families outside.”

“Miz, even if we did get killed, you shouldn’t raze an entire city to the ground.” Ford scolded her next (making some of the villagers heave a sigh of relief, ok, so it wasn’t just the eating). Miz deadpanned, “They were going to kill you.” Ford nodded, “Yes, and that would have sucked. But your Deal would have protected us. We were never in danger of actually being killed.”

“Loopholes exist. Self defense against you all is something I allowed. If they truly believed that you were a danger to them, then it might count enough for them to bypass my Deal and kill you.” Miz pointed out. Everyone shivered. Shit, really?! But Ford didn’t back down. “You still shouldn’t kill all the innocent people here for the actions of a few.”

“I wouldn’t have killed everyone,” Miz started, which reassured the people listening. That was quickly dashed when she continued, “-have to leave a few survivors to pass on the message of ‘Don’t fuck with me or those who belong to me’ after all.”

She wanted to complain more, but her head turned around when she heard the twins' scared shouts.
Seb had fallen to the floor, dizzy from the blood loss. "Daddy!"

Miz gasped and nudged him with her snout. Fuck, his arm was all fucked up!! "Dude, you’re bleeding.” Miz narrowed her eye. Her tail flicked around as she turned slowly to glare at the guard who bit him.

"Yeah, no shit…" Seb gasped in pain. "One of those ladies had a bite of me…”

“Oh yes. I know… should I take a bite outta her for you?” The dragon growled at the scared guards. They trained hard to be fearless against enemies, but a dragon?! That wasn't part of the deal.

"Please, honorable dragon, let us heal your human, we do not wish to suffer your wrath." The priestesses spoke up. "We offer you the best of our physicians" They weren't even considering negotiating with the humans an option, everyone knew they were irrational beings.

“Hm…” Miz peered down at them, they couldn’t sweat, but their feathers bristled to show their nerves. “Fine– but you better pamper him properly!” Seb rolled his eye. “I don’t need pampering, I just want to stop bleeding…”

Zach and Zoe refused to let any reptilian hold Seb, so it was up to Ford and Dillon to help him walk. They were invited--well, Miz was invited into the palace, which was just next to the temple, and the humans were allowed inside as well.

They'd have to purify the place later though.

Miz shrank back into her human form, but let her tail and antlers out, just to show her power and don't let them forget who was boss here!

Max had no idea how he ended up going into the PALACE. OF THE ROYAL FAMILY, with the humans, walking next to Mabel. He must be dreaming, absolutely dreaming. Miz was demanding food (“I heard you guys have fish, I WANT fish!”) while the Healers treated Seb’s arm.

Seb screamed in pain as they treated it, and thought it would have been a better idea to just go home and see a normal doctor! These reptile ladies were going to break it even more!

Miz was offered a large amount of delicious fish and she started to devour it, easily ignoring her soul brother’s whimpers, he was fine . And he needed to learn to defend himself! Really Sebastian, you’re much stronger than this! Ford was standing in the middle, torn between watching Miz, Amelie (who he was told was actually a Selkie and he should ask more about that), Seb or Mabel, who was talking to a green reptile boy for some reason (?). Dipper felt as uncomfortable as he could be and was standing next to his oldest uncle, while Dillon clung to his arm, shivering. “I wanna go back, I don’t wanna adventure…” The oldest cousin whispered.

Dipper sighed, then twitched when Miz grew back into her dragon form so she could demand the reptilians to scrub her scales. Was she abusing her authority on them? Probably. Did they deserve it? He wasn’t really sure. They did try to eat them/murder them, but they didn’t know any better.

“No offense, thanks for saving us, but you're kinda terrifying,” Dipper told Miz at last.

Miz's tail dropped sadly and she whined. Ford scoffed and finally spoke up. “That's not true! She's wonderful!” He went up and brushed a hand along her scales. “Even more fascinating than Xin's more traditional dragon form.” He brushed a hand down Miz's smooth arm. “No scales here, it feels almost like rubber or silicon...but it's so smooth...soft…” Miz turned bright orange. “O-Oh…”
“Dammit Sixer! Quit feeling up my daughter!” Seb spat before yowling in pain as he was rubbed with something that burned like hell itself!! The Queen and the priestess shared a shocked look. One of the reptile women guards fainted. The dragon was the child of the fire beast?!

Mabel was sitting on a corner on a seat crafted from stone. Max was standing, still nervous to be in the castle and going over in his head about the things he was going to tell his family once Aunt Laxki told them about this. She’d already gone off. Just to tell them...

“Max?” Mabel called him, bringing him out of his thoughts. “Hey, sorry for all this mess...I didn’t know my family would end up here in your city.” She bit her lip, sure that this was going to be the dealbreaker, another failed romance. After all, if his people almost killed her family, and then her cousin threatened to eat his people, that was definitely reason enough for Max to want nothing to do with her.

Max rubbed his neck as his tail twitched madly. “It’s ok...I’m sorry my people almost killed your family…” Now she wouldn’t want to continue seeing him, the first girl who’s ever seemed to like him... But this whole thing went even further than simply a failed friendship. His family was going to be so angry at him! He had a hell of a storm coming to him, Mabel felt terrible when she saw his nervous expression, she knew it was their fault. “You’re getting in trouble for this, aren’t you?” She asked in a whisper, holding his clawed paw.

The reptilian boy winced. “Well, yeah...I shouldn’t even be standing here…” He rubbed his feathers nervously. “I-I’m low class, we aren’t allowed here...I think I just got in because I was with you...One of those soldiers was my aunt, she’s going to tell my parents.”

Mabel winced and rubbed her arm. “I’m sorry, Max…” The two looked away from each other, not knowing what to say.

“Oh, don’t be sad! You’re a dragon’s spokesman!” Miz lifted her head to tell the reptilian after feeling his sadness, and immediately went back to eating her food. “Think of yourself as an ambassador between your tribe and the hungry dragon who might eat them all.” Ford flicked Miz’s snout, getting a yelp out of her. “Bad Miz! No eating people! Even if they’re not human.”

“Well, I would only do it if they tried anything against you all.”

Max frowned in thought, considering the dragon’s words. He...He couldn’t be that important though, he only spoke up when he wasn’t given permission. But that was the same thing the dragon told the Queen though and it did save his butt from the priestesses’ wrath. He shook himself from head to tail before turning to look at his new friend. “Hey...I feel very uncomfortable here, how about I show you around my part of the town? It’s on me this time.” He said instead.

Mabel gasped, vaguely realizing that because of the spell, Max was speaking more clearly, so she’d be able to fully converse with him. “You...You still want to hang out with me? Even when my family caused all of this?” They could still become friends? And maybe even more than friends?!

Max grinned, showing off his sharp fangs. “I think you’re a nice human...and...my tribe tried to sacrifice your family, but I think your cousin threatened to eat us all, so I think we’re fair.”

The brunette girl squealed and, taking advantage of the fact that everyone was super busy with Uncle Seb and Miz, she followed Max outside to finally see his village properly. She didn’t get a good look around back when they were rushing here. The beach was beautiful, especially since this beach had much less trash well, no trash at all. Even with Miz cleaning the beach of all the glass shards and trash, it was summer and there were (nasty) tourists in New Jersey, there was litter everywhere. But the sand here was soft and white and pretty. Mabel laughed as she dropped into the sand and rolled around.

Max wagged his tail at how happy she seemed and laughed. “You’re like a hatchling!” He cooed at her. “Rolling in the sand like that.”

“Oh yeah? You don’t do this? But it’s so softttt and niceeeeee!” Mabel pouted. Max looked around, noticing the people were staying away from them, (that was good, he already didn’t have the best reputation due to his appearance and he’d be kinda embarrassed to be seen playing like a kid) and dropped next to her, shaking and throwing sand everywhere. Mabel shrieked and shielded herself. She laughed as she saw him playing in the sand with her now.

“Do you make sandcastles here? Do you know what a sandcastle is? Do you play in the water? Can you BREATHE underwater?!” Mabel poured some sand she cupped in her hands over Max’s pretty feathers.

“No. I don’t know what a sandcastle is? We have sand sculptures though. Yes, we play in the water, I love playing in the water, and no we can’t breathe underwater, we aren’t fish, but we can hold our breath for a lot of time!” Max shook his head and Mabel covered her face when the sand was thrown everywhere.

“Well~ I can teach you to make one, but we’d need a bucket” Mabel pouted. “We could go find one and then come back? And you can show me around your home while we’re at it!” Mabel suggested. Max nodded, albeit his never-ending fear of seeing his family on the way. He didn’t doubt Father would have a heart attack after seeing him with a human.

They walked in the direction of the houses and workshops, where the common folk lived. Mabel really liked this place. It was like visiting an old city from the past, but in the present! And with reptilian people living on it! “My mother works with wood, she usually makes things for the higher class families, building new houses and furniture. The best things she carves are totems though.”

“Woooah~So a carpenter...Nevermind, that’s a human word I think...Well, my mom is a nurse! She heals people, like the guys “healing” my Uncle.” Max seemed very impressed. He knew humans were classified by the papers they used as money, but being a physician’s daughter here would make Mabel pretty high class.

“And well, my dad works with computers, which I don’t know if you know about that, so when we’re on my side, I’ll show you.” She promised. “It’s pretty hard, he had to read lots of tiny words and numbers and fix programs that his clients send him.”

“...Uh...That sounds pretty hard...and your dad really does that?”

“Yup! All on his own!” Max nodded at that. Oh wow. Mabel had very cool parents. And her father could read! That meant he must have been from a high class family as well. Max was lucky to be able to read, his aunt really helped him a lot there, getting him that priest-in-training position so he could learn. “Hey Max! I was meaning to ask you! All males come in different colors, right?” Mabel asked, completely changing the topic because she was like that. “I saw a guy with red scales just screaming after seeing me. That was pretty rude. But you’re the only green one I’ve seen so far! Do colors come from families? Is it genetic?”

Among his people, Mabel noticed that all the males had colorful vibrant scales ranging from bright blues to oranges to purples... while all the women were the same dulled green. Maxini was green too. They were beautiful scales, but compared to the other men, he wasn’t as ‘pretty’. Mabel thought he was very pretty regardless, but she was curious.
Max’s spines dropped and his tail tucked a little. He was hoping she wouldn’t ask about that. “Um...No, colors are just good luck...Only females are green though, when males are green they’re considered a mistake and no one would ever want to marry them.” Max rubbed his arm softly. “They’re called unnatural, abnormal...You...must have heard the priestess…”

His explanation sunk into Mabel harder than it should. She took her hands to her mouth. Shit. She fucked up. “Max…” DAMMIT! “I-I didn’t mean to make you think that! I don’t think you’re a mistake! Your scales are really pretty!” She glared. “And screw anyone who says otherwise! You’re really pretty! In both your forms!”

Max managed a small smile, but he wasn’t buying it. She was just saying that so he wouldn’t feel sad. He already accepted it, most people wouldn’t like him, but as a priest he could get more respect, apologize to his parents for getting saddled with him. “Max…” Mabel insisted, but a loud booming voice interrupted her.

“MAXINI!!!”

“Oh dear gods…”

-- --

The Queen was a nervous wreck right now. She wanted to please the dragon, only an idiot would want to be on the bad side of a dragon (especially a noble female one), but she wanted the humans as far away from her palace and her city as possible! Her hatchlings had to be kept with guards in their rooms because they were trying to come in here to see the humans. She thought it was over when the human(?) fire beast was healed (the dragon did praise them for their magical abilities in healing), but they realized ONE OF THEIR KIND WAS GONE!! One of the guards said the human girl left with the priest’s apprentice.

The unnatural boy sure was taking this opportunity to be a pain in her tail today.

“Your dragoness, is it possible for you to leave with the humans you have at your power right now?” The Queen asked softly.

Miz licked her paw and yawned. “Nah, I can’t leave without Mabel.” She changed back to her human form and patted her full belly. “How about we go look for her, I’ll keep my humans close so they don’t mess with anything, we find Mabel, and leave? I’m curious about this place and most of my humans want to see around.” She glanced up at everyone. Dillon, Dipper and Seb, (holding his patched up arm with tears in his eye) shook their heads erratically. Ford, the twins, Diego and Amelie nodded eagerly.

Miz didn’t like how the Queen thought of Max, so getting on her nerves just for today sounded fun too.

The Queen’s eye twitched.

“Look, you can even send an escort, to make sure our tour doesn’t extend longer than necessary. We look around, get Mabel and get out. How about that? I’m feeling very generous today so I won’t walk around in my dragon form, to keep your architecture and people away from any danger.” Miz purred, sweet as can be. The Queen could see some guards making frustrated hisses and her priestesses were nodding at her, albeit reluctantly. But none of them wanted to face a dragon. “Fine, but please find your human and leave, we wish to be left alone.” She massaged her temples.
Dillon’s eyes filled with tears. No. No more of this. His heart couldn’t take all the adventuring!

...He hugged his godfather tightly, and Seb winced a bit. To be fair, he didn’t want to be here either, but Mabel gotta be found, he guessed. Shermie would finish tearing his arm off if he didn’t.

The twins took Amelie’s hands as they jumped up and down, eager to learn new things. Dipper was sticking close to Ford, also curious but scared of the creatures whose hostility towards them hadn’t changed. Meanwhile, Ford’s excitement wasn’t hidden, he was prepared to talk about everything and anything so he could write it down later. "Miz~ Is part of the tour being able to ask questions?"

The dragon sweetly turned to look at the Queen, as well as the guards who were escorting them, and the queen tiredly waved a paw and shooed them away. “Yes, yes, leave now.” Ford and Miz thanked her profusely while the guards groaned. The Queen turned to look at her servants when the humans stepped out. “I want this place cleaned, and you--” She looked at the priestesses. “Pray to the gods so they won’t take offense on this unholy presence in our city.”

The tourists of the city of the reptilians, or Heeyatl Pak, as it was the real name of their tribe, had to admit that seeing a society of supernatural creatures was amazing. Even Dillon’s eyes were dragged towards a few things.

“Hey! Don’t touch that!” “Stop! Don’t go too far!” The poor reptilian women babysitting the humans and the dragon were wishing they had continued their mother’s businesses instead of joining the military. But noooo! They wanted to be different and catch the attention of the maleees! They wouldn’t be dealing with these hideous looking humans if they had listened. (Too their relief, the dragon did herd the humans up so they couldn’t bother the citizens.)

Just like they were staring around, the family was an attraction itself. Many reptilians were staring at them with morbid curiosity, pointing at them and whispering. “Look, those are the humans!” “They’re...shorter than I thought.” “Where are their body equipment that shoots metal and kills you instantly? Will they use it against us?” “Are the smaller ones human cubs? They’re so weird and round.” “Eww~ They’re all bald and have no scales!”

Ok, their comments weren’t really nice, but they were just seeing a completely different species walking around their city, they had the right to be surprised.

A few stupidly brave hatchlings caught up to their group and stared at the twins and Diego. They wagged their tails at the sight, SO WEIRD! Zoe growled at them, making fire appear on her arms, and it immediately made the hatchlings shriek in terror, trip over their tails and ran away.

Seb rolled his eye at that. “Don’t terrify the reptiles, they already don’t like us.”

“Call them Heeyatl Pak. Don’t be rude.” Miz told them all. Dillon grinned at his uncle cheekily, and Seb answered by hitting his head with his uninjured arm. Ford was bouncing in place. He went up to a Heeyatl Pak male who was weaving a net out of thick seaweed. “Excuse me, sir. Can I ask you a few hundred questions about you, your people, your culture and your biology?

Everyone groaned at that, including the KIDS. How did Ford manage to write three books of incredible supernatural creatures...being like this...

The man squeaked in terror of the human and his spines expanded as he growled and showed off his teeth. Miz went over to save Ford before he got killed or something as one of the females escorting them all reassured the male that they had everything under control. “Wow, they’re spines are extendable when they feel threatened.” Was the only thing Ford said. Miz shook her head fondly while Amelie frowned. She couldn’t see why Miz liked him… scientists like him were the stuff of horror stories in her family. She understood the Heeyatl Pak being so terrified of that man.

Ford looked at Seb. His arm wasn’t bleeding anymore, but it still hurt. “So...Is it time for me to give you my observations about their culture?” Seb raised an eyebrow at him, unimpressed.

“...Yes, brother. It is time…” Seb whispered, just as unimpressed.

“Females are bigger than males.” Ford repeated again. “And it seems it has an influence on their social organization.”

“You just love being a know-it-all and pointing out the obvious, don’t you?” Seb hissed. Ford grumbled something because he wasn’t going to fight with Seb, and turned to look at the pissed guard.

"Is work divided by gender? Are there male soldiers?"

The guard scoffed. "Males are too small and pretty for that stuff. And who would take care of the eggs and hatchlings if they went to war?"

"This is sexism...inversed…” Dillon frowned, confused. Miz elbowed him. “Pretty sure all sexism is sexism, no matter who’s the one on top.” “Ok. fine…”

“Why are all females green? Or better yet, why are males so different?” Ford asked the guard again. She groaned. “Do I look like a physician to ya? I don’t know! Males are different colors just because they have to look pretty!”

“Maybe it’s similar to male peacocks…” Ford muttered. “Do the colors of your feathers have any special intent as well?”

“No? Feathers come in a dark shade of your scales. You’re green, feathers are dark green. You blue, feathers are dark blue. It’s not that difficult, human.” Another guard spat.

Ford wasn’t going to get intimidated, and Dipper was actually glad he was asking all these questions, Dipper was just as curious, but too polite to actually ask such questions. “Do your...featherstyles hold any significance?”

They thought about it. “Eh...Kinda? Males wear small braids when single, females wear their feathers to one side when single. Braids are long when married, females let their feathers grow when married. The Queen styles it in a bun. We use bandanas to keep it off our eyes”

“Are you descended from dinosaurs? Since you have feathers.” Ford asked next.

“What’s a dinosaur?” They asked in a ‘duh’ tone.

Miz had already Seen into this place, but she would allow her Fordsie to have his fun and play anthropologist today.

“Do you have many wars?”

“A lot. Other cities tryin’ to take over here. Allies exist though. Sometimes we’re at peace, sometimes not.”
“And do you use weapons or your claws to fight?” “Both.”

“Currency?” “Quahog shells or channelled shells, there are three standardized sizes for the region, value depends on size. There is also bartering.”

“This is incredible…” Ford was speechless. A complete society just…hiding here!! With rules, social organization, hierarchy, economy!! All of it hidden away from humanity! The reminder felt just as good as the first time he discovered it. Miz cooed at his enchanted expression. Seriously though, Ford should know there were hidden alcoves of supernatural creatures and beings all around the planet.

Dipper shooed a little heeyatl pak away from his leg because he was prodding and poking him with his little sharp claws, (it was also to protect him from Zoe’s anger if she saw someone else other than her wausing him bruises and cuts), before he spotted a small group raising their voices.

“MABEL!!” He recognized the quick familiar blur of pink he saw. She was with the reptilian from before, and was surrounded by an older couple, a male and female around the age of Mabel’s friend, and the soldier that had led them to their almost doom.

“How could you be so irresponsible?! What was the first thing we told you?!”

“…Not talk to them more than necessary?”

“And what did you do?!”

“…Talk to them more than necessary…But, mother, not all humans are horrible! Mabel’s nice!”

His brother was speechless and his sister, who had been working with their mother in the workshop when their aunt informed them what happened, scoffed. “That’s what IT wants you to think!”

“Hey! I’m a she! Not an it! And I’m nice! And I think Max’s nice too! Unlike some girls here~!” Mabel pouted at the tall growling female.

She gasped. “How DARE you?!”

“Maxini, we put our trust in you…We didn’t allow you to go out to disobey the Queen’s laws…You spoke up to her, in favor of some humans… ” His father seemed more hurt than angry.

“…It…I was an ambassador…Between-between a dragon and us…” Max whispered. And even if it wasn’t technically the truth at the time…it was HIS decision, something he decided for HIMSELF…which didn’t happen often. And it SAVED someone! Several someones! He didn’t think the Gods would be angry at him or frown upon their family because of this.

“Oh-Oh my heart can’t take this.” His brother massaged his temples.

“What kind of bullshit is that?!” His mom cried. His aunt Laxki was about to speak because in FACT--

“Eh hem~” The family (and Mabel) turned around to see Mabel’s family! Seb scowled at her. “Bad Shooting Star! BAD!” He scolded her. “How could you have run away like that?! Your dad would have murdered us!”

“Oh no. More of them!” Max’s mom grimaced. The two families scowled at each other.

“Seriously, Max?! You talked to THIS many?!” His sister scolded him again.
“I haven’t even talked to the other ones, I only really met some of them, like Mabel.” Max defended himself. “Yeah! And it was me who talked to him and wanted to be friends, so technically it’s not his fault!” Mabel added.

Amelie meekly raised her hand “Also...If it helps, I'm not human? I'm a Selkie.” She let go of Diego when the child ran to be with his brother. Dillon sighed. “So Amelie isn't human. I'm not even surprised anymore.” He groaned.

“I don’t care! The Queen shouldn’t have allowed you all to stay for so long! Humans are dangerous!” Laxki pointed at the twins who blinked innocently. Zoe was even sucking her finger.

Maxini sighed. “We just met, but Mabel's nice and I like hanging out with her.”

“Silence, freak boy!” One of the guards who escorted them here finally snapped. She didn’t care if he was the nephew of their coworker or whatever. It was completely natural to insult and belittle a male for his appearance, especially someone with a color as horribly dull as his. Max and his family flinched as Mabel growled. "HEY!!"

“This is over. The humans leave now! Move it!” She pointed with her spear at Ford, prompting a “OW!~” from him. She did step back when Miz glared at her.

“Ok. Fine ~” Miz tugged on Ford’s hands. “Come on, everyone. A promise is a promise.” Miz walked over to Max, patted his paw and smiled. “It was nice meeting you, kid. Very good ambassador.” Dipper meanwhile, grabbed Mabel’s hand and put another hand on her shoulder. “Come on, Mabel. They’re already on the brink of their patience, let’s not anger them more.” He pleaded in a whisper.

“But-But-” How was she going to see him again?! She didn’t want to lose Max! She didn’t want to… Not when she finally felt the same fuzzy feeling in her chest after so many years. Not...when she finally realized she hadn’t felt this way since she first met Mermando all those years ago. Her eyes welled up with tears (“Huh, humans cry, who knew?” Commented Max’s brother). “Max…"

Max looked at her wide-eyed before lowering his head, spines dropping and tail tucked. He couldn’t do anything, the guards took them all in the direction of the cave. Miz waved a hand and fixed the hole she made in their temple. Would be rude not to after all the delicious fish she was given. Might as well send a blessing around the region so they’d get a minor boost to delicious fresh fish or good crops for clothes and snacks. Yes, they were carnivores, but higher classes got vegetables as dietary complements and snacks. “As thanks for the food, I will Bless your lands with a year of good harvest.”

She held onto Ford’s hand, but looked up at Mabel with a pout. All this sadness and...guiltiness, anger....She didn’t want this, not from Mabel…

“Are we leaving now?” Zach and Diego complained innocently as they were taken yet somewhere else. The reptile women huffed and led them out of the cave. This time the male Pines didn’t have to go up through the hole on the floor, apparently this place was much more complex than they originally thought. The guards growled before looking at the group of invaders. “We will let you live this time, as you were accompanied by your dragon master. But we will not be so forgiving if you come down once again!” The guards glared and the Pines nodded quickly. Ford did complain, “Miz isn’t our master.” to which Dillon shushed him. “Don’t make the scary lizard ladies mad!”

They came out of the cave and Dillon fell to his knees on the sand. “Holy Moses....We’re back, AAAHH! YAHWE I’M SORRY, PLEASE DON’T ABANDON ME!” He bowed, and the kids, who had no idea how in danger their dad and family had been, threw themselves over the sobbing Miz turned to look at Mabel, who was rubbing her eyes with her forearm. “So~ Shooting Star, I’d like to know why the HELL did you leave with that boy without telling us?!” “How did you even-Why?!” Seb wailed. Mabel’s fists tightened just as Seb gasped.

“Wait. Don’t tell me you’re dating him now? OH Ax, how am I supposed to explain that to Sherman now?!” Seb shouted at Ford, who shrugged helplessly.

Mabel had enough. “No! No you don’t have to tell dad anything because we aren’t dating and we never will now!” She shouted at both her uncles, who froze scared. “Because you guys had to go MONSTER HUNTING and invading their land-and-and now I will never see him again!” She sobbed.

Dillon looked at her with a grimace. “Dude...THEY ALMOST KILLED US!!” He screamed and Mabel screamed back “Well that’s on YOU! You didn’t have to go around messing with them! And-And now I-I lost my chance with him, like I always do…” The girl sobbed silently and quickly wiped her eyes. Dipper, Seb and Ford felt terrible. “We didn’t know.”

“I liked him, ok?! I really liked him, for real, and-and I think he liked me too, but now I can’t be sure because he’ll never be allowed to come out again!” Mabel sniffled and started walking back to their hotel. “Shooting Star...I’m sorry.” Seb called, but he was ignored. Ford was completely at a loss, but worried for his niece, while Diego was confused and the twins whined in distress, feeling Mabel’s sadness all the way in their chest.

They all returned to the hotel in a terrible mood, exhausted and sad. And they still had to explain to Mabel’s family what had happened. Ugh.

Max kept his hand clenched until his family finished scolding him and left him alone. Only then, did he open his hand, to see what the dragon had slipped into it earlier. A small triangle pendant. The shape appeared to be gold, the pendant had an eye in the middle. It was hollow, he wasn’t sure what the significance of this was.

He didn't think it mattered though...His mother had prohibited him from going back to his human job if he wanted to continue his studies...

They found their family lazing around the hotel and Mabel quickly avoided them all to go to her room. She wanted to go to sweater town and never come back ever again.

Kari gasped when she saw their clothes covered in dirt, mud and scratches. Wanda screamed after seeing Seb's t-shirt and the twins' chest covered in dried blood. "What the heck happened??!" The two women screamed.

Everyone looked at each other. "Well, we went monster hunting? Seb got hurt." Ford explained sheepishly.

Amelie grimaced sheepishly as the Pines were lectured by the old woman, who was the queen of lies herself, did they really think they could pull one over on her?! Wanda scolded Seb for being so irresponsible and letting them get so messed up.

"What happened?" She demanded.
"...Mabel found a supernatural boy who is some kind of reptilian. They hit it off, but we accidentally got into the hidden magical world and they all had to save us. The boy's family is very angry at him now for bringing humans and now Mabel hates us for ruining her chances with the boy she likes." Seb said with a pout.

"Excuse me...what?" Shermie and Abigail frowned confused.

Wanda blinked and decided to just take the children upstairs for a bath, they were filthy and if she guessed right, had Seb's blood on them...

"Where's Mabel then...?" Abi looked around for her daughter. Did she go through a Romeo and Juliet kind of thing right now? She must be so devastated...She ordered Shermie to give Dipper a bath as well before going upstairs to find her baby.

“I don’t need you to bathe me! I’m almost an adult!!!” Dipper complained. Shermie shook his head. “You’ve been wearing that same shirt for 2 days. Take a bath right now!” Dipper grumbled as Shermie held him up by the back of his shirt and carried him to his hotel room.

“This goes against my integrity! I’m 18! Release me!” Dipper shrieked as his Dad carried him out of sight. Shermie huffed. The ungrateful brat. He changed his diapers to keep him clean every day for 2 years. He was getting worried for his hygiene and this little shit didn't want to!

"Where did I go wrong with youuu!"

Seb managed to smile, despite the horrible crushing feeling of guilt. "He’s a very dirty child. You know that summer he stayed with me, he refused to bathe for a week? I almost sent him to sleep with the wolves.” Everyone gasped in horror.

Miz giggled. “Maybe you need to give him a bubble bath or little duckies to play with. Pinetree is just a tall child.” Her smile was wiped off though, feeling Seb and Ford's guilt. "Hey... It'll be ok." She totally shipped them, she wouldn't let Shooting Star get separated from Max, she was her cousin and Mabel liked her. So Miz was gonna try and help her out.

Stan and Carla finally made an appearance. “Well, so, how did you get all dirty?” Carla asked her kids. Their youngest baby ran towards them. "Mom! Dad! We met some reptile people!! They're called...heeyak! And-And it was so cool!"

"No it wasn't! Uncle Seb threw me into a hole and we got captured and-and they were going to kill us!" Dillon broke down as he hugged his dad.

“Seb did WHAT?!” Stan roared. “Where is he?! I’m gonna throw HIM in a hole!” He growled as he hugged his poor, smol sons. He carried Diego easily and it took him more strength but he managed to lift the teen as well, just like he did when he was 13. “Pops, I saved him from the heeyak!” Diego informed him proudly. Stan was going to kill his triplet.

Seb quickly got out of there and went to his room to help Wanda bathe their kids. Before Stan could confront Ford about it, Miz pulled at his hand so they could bath as well. He smelled like mud, sweat and scared human. “You need to take a bath too.” She told him. He sighed. “But I need to fill in my journal about what I learned today with the liz-” Miz grabbed his hand and dragged him behind her to the elevators. “Looks like you’re getting the Dipper treatment.” She huffed. Ford gasped. “You can’t bathe me! I’m a grown man!” As the elevator doors closed everyone heard Miz respond with “It’s not like you’ve got anything I haven't seen before-”

Inside the elevator, Ford went quiet, holding Miz’s hand, finally thinking about how he and everyone could have died today, and he wouldn’t have been able to protect them. "Thank you for saving me…" He told her.

"You're welcome."

Once they were in the safety of the room, Stanford looked at Miz, troubled. "Is Mabel really angry at us? I seriously didn't mean to ruin her...attempt at romance." He rubbed his neck.

"Yeah, she is kinda angry, but she won’t be angry forever… and it wasn't your fault you got kidnapped...You should have been more careful though." She reminded him with a pat on his arm.

"Is it bad that I want to write everything I learnt about them despite what happened?" Miz smiled a little and poked his nose. “Nah, you just love learning, I think that’s very cute.” She stretched and let her tail and antlers grow back. “If you feel bad for Mabel too you can always go talk to her, but AFTER YOUR BATH!” She pulled his sweater up and Ford groaned when she left it half way up. She wasn’t tall enough to get it up over his head.

“Miz!” She stood on the bed to pull up the rest of the sweater. “Ok, you big baby.”

“What the fuck are you doing?!” Miz and Ford turned towards the source of the voice and saw Seb in the window. Behind the window.

“What the FUCK are YOU doing?!” Ford grimaced, confused and a little offended for Seb...being here.

“Wanda wanted me to go bring the kids’ clothes, but Stan was in the hallway so I climbed out the window into the balcony and was going to hide here.” Seb said matter-of-factly, as if it was pretty normal to jump from balcony to balcony in a hotel to a room you weren’t using. While being so high up. He pushed the window and slid inside.

“Well. Get out. I’m taking a shower.” “It’s not like I’m getting in the shower with you!” Was Seb’s reply.

“GET OUT!” Ford shouted at his younger brother. “GEEZ!! Calm yourself, Sixer. I’m leaving when I hear Stan’s gone...I’ll turn around if you worry I can somehow look through the door of the bathroom??” Seb grimaced and turned around, facing the opposite wall.

Miz couldn’t help the smile that appeared on her lips when Ford took a very deep breath. PATIENCE. He went into the bathroom and closed the door after himself. “By the way-” He called out through the door. “Miz, do you mind if I ask you about your triangle dragon form? I’ve never seen anything like it before.”

“Yes.” Miz pulled a chair over to sit beside the bathroom door. The sound of the shower turned on. “Are you sure you can hear me?” Miz called out. There were some shuffling sounds and Ford responded, “You’re right, can you open some sort of communications between us?” Miz raised a finger in the air and drew a circle, the glowing light hung in the air and suddenly Ford’s face appeared in it. He startled back. “Miz! I’m showering!” He cried. “It’s only pointed at your face.” Miz responded. “But if you’re uncomfortable, I can make the call ‘audio’ only.”

“Please do so.”

Miz flicked her fingers again and the image faded away to a cartoon image of a set of speakers. “Can you hear me now?” Miz grinned. “Good.”

Seb grimaced. What was even going on? Ford started asking some boring science questions about... what Miz’s arms were made of. “Well I don’t have bones, for one thing.” She shifted into her dragon form as she spoke, so she could inspect herself. “Oh, so… like an octopus?” Ford asked.

“I DO have tentacles.” Miz noted.

“But why is it so rubbery? Is it actually rubber?” Ford mused. Miz huffed, “Don’t ask a girl about her chemical composition!”

“Yeah, Sixer, that’s rude!” Seb glared.

"Sorry? And SHUT UP, SEBASTIAN!"

"Wash behind your ears and stop shouting at me!" Seb chastised him. “Yeah Fordsie– don’t want your ears smelling like cheese now do you?” Miz cackled. Ford grumbled about how the demons were teaming up on him. Seb and Miz high fived. Or rather, high six and high four. Well, they had an average of five between them so that counted??

"And shave with a normal razor please." Seb added.

"I don't have gasoline, of course I'd need to waste my time with a normal razor." Was the scientist's response. Seb turned to look at Miz. "Seriously. What do you like so much about this guy?"

Miz thought about what her brother had said, about how this Stanford wouldn’t like her anymore eventually, but… she didn’t want to believe that. He was nice.

Before Ford came out of the bathroom, Seb left, he was going to check on Shooting Star and see if she didn't hate him forever. He wouldn't be able to live with that thought.

Dragon Miz continued answering Ford's questions while he took his time to wash everything off his fluffy hair, but eventually, the human stopped hearing Miz over the call. When he came out, he saw the dragon deeply asleep on his bed.

He grinned and took this chance to study her anatomy some more.

The arms and legs were much like Bill’s noodle limbs in his triangle form, but much larger and with claws. Frankly, this form looked like someone took Bill’s triangle form and stretched it out until it was dragon shaped. Ford wondered how Miz created these different forms she wore. He combed his fingers through her hair. Was it hair? It didn’t feel like hair…

The long black strands coiled around his fingers and Ford’s eyes widened. Were these...thousands of thin tentacles? He felt them curl around his hand and wrists. Ford tugged but they didn’t seem to want to let go. “Um…Miz?” He tried to free his hand but the tentacles that made up her ‘mane’ continued slithering up his arm and pulled him down. Miz rumbled sleepily. Ford tugged.

“Um...Miz??”

He braced his other arm against the side of Miz’s flank and pushed to try and free himself. The tentacles gripped tight and Ford had to wiggle a lot to finally free himself. He sighed. Miz was breathing softly, snuggling against the pillow.

“Alright, here we go…” Ford muttered as he decided to cover her with the blankets. This was luckily a smaller version than the one she grew into at the Heeyatl Pak's tribe. So she could alter her size, that was interesting. Miz hadn't moved an inch. He watched her chest rise and fall. Was she visiting her space family? Ford knew she did that while she slept, sometimes.
He put on pants and sat on the bed with the dragon. The tentacles that made up her mane seemed to be limp until he reached his hand near them, at which point they would grab at his fingers and try to pull him in. Ford figured this was some sort of unconscious effect but wasn't sure what it was for. Perhaps her tentacles were attempting to capture prey?

He was getting quite obsessed with MizBill's different anatomies...it was simply fascinating. He wished he could know more, but the demon was really shy about it and he wouldn't do anything to upset her...what would it take for him to know all about her forms? For her to fully trust him and realize he cared and wouldn't hurt her?

Ford sighed and absently stroked her bricks. Part of him wondered if she could feel it. Probably not. He wanted to know more, but didn't want to do a full inspection without permission. That sort of thing was frowned upon in the scientific community. But he figured she enjoyed the petting. He leaned against her flank and reached to grab his journal. He wrote about the reptilian people they met today with an entry ‘Reptilians are among us!’ and then when he finished writing everything and sketching a male and female, he started sketching Dragon Miz. She was so amazing...

Ford glanced over at Miz, having finished the sketch of her snout and head. He pulled back the blankets so he could sketch the rest of her, but her front legs were gripping the sheets. “...if it’s just her legs, that should be fine? She was okay with me petting them before.” He lifted one of her front legs to pull the blanket from her grip, and took this chance to inspect the limb again. How WAS it moving without bones? With Miz asleep, the limb was limp and floppy, he easily twisted it this way and that. It felt rubbery, but it was nearly frictionless (in fact he had to grip very carefully to not have the limb slip out from between his hands) when he rubbed a hand along it. It felt smooth but it wasn't slimy like an octopus arm would be despite reminding him of one. Slick feeling, but not oily. A deep black color all the way around. Soft, but with a bit of firmness that allowed it to stay in shape. Elastic and very bendy, able to be bent 360 degrees all around without any sign of discomfort.

Ford wrote down his observations. He inspected her claws, she had 4 fingers, each one topped with a hard claw that Ford knew was sharp enough to tear through ropes. He poked them, rubbed them, pulled at them and held onto her hand so he could sketch them. What were they made of? Keratin? No, it had to be something much stronger.

Heck, what was Bill made of? Ford had never been able to run real tests on Bill due to him not having a physical body. And even when he GOT a physical body they didn't really have much of a time for inspections. Ford wondered if he could get Miz to agree to giving up a tissue sample...for science.

Ford wasn't sure what prompted it, but his inspection of her arm had included his observations on what it looked like, what it felt like, what it sounded like (he held it up to his ear as he bent it around), what it smelled like (didn't smell like much of anything) and finally, what it tasted like. What? It's simply scientific observation using his five senses!

Ford licked the black arm, not really expecting much, and coughed at the bitter taste. It was like...licking charcoal. Wait, didn't Miz mention something about separating her food into the elements when she ate? So was this her body expelling the carbon? Or were her limbs actually made of giant carbon chains? That didn’t seem exactly right...

(Curse you https://archiveofourown.org/works/12230157 for putting the idea in my head of Ford scientifically licking things!!)

As Ford stuck his tongue out, prepared to taste the limb again, he heard a rather incredulous voice ask “Um...what are you doing?” Ford froze with his tongue outstretched mere centimeters from the black arm. He darted his eyes to the side and found Miz staring at him.

“Um…”

“I'm going to give you the benefit of the doubt and assume you were attempting something stupidly scieny…” Miz glared.

Ford nodded stupidly and tucked his tongue back to his mouth. “Y-Yes!” Urgh!! How stupid! “I was...I was just...trying to learn about this form...you-you look really fascinating and...and I...five senses?” He said intelligently.

Miz took a deep breath before commenting. “You’re so lucky you’re cute and I like you because I would have pulled your tongue out of your mouth if it wasn’t you.” She said and Ford paled. “R-right...sorry…”

Miz curled up again to go back to sleep. “Ok, but seriously, don’t lick me, I don’t want your mouth germs on any part of my body. You humans are gross. At least brush your teeth and stuff first.” she huffed “Wake me up when it's dinnertime.” and went back to sleep. Ford felt quite relieved that she had forgiven him. He was still blushing though. He must have looked so dumb!

He went back to drawing the reptile men and women to distract himself.

Back with the Heeyatl Pak, the Queen was informed, by some very surprised fisherwomen and farmers, that their harvests had mysteriously doubled. The fisherwomen reported large fish leaping into their nets while the farmers reported their crops were filled to bursting, ripe and full.

The priestesses then told the Queen that the dragon had apparently blessed them with a year of good harvests as thanks for their offerings of food and pampering. The Queen shook at this revelation. Was this all the work of the dragon? If so, what would happen once that year was up? She turned to a guard. “How many people know of the dragon’s claim of blessing?”

“Ah…” The guard looked nervous. “At first it was only us and the ambassador male’s family. But after the farmers and fishers came back and started a commotion in the city square, the news has spread.” The woman winced. “There are already sculptors carving a statue to erect a place of worship for the dragon.”

The Queen twitched. “T-they can’t worship the dragon! What would the gods think if our people turned their backs on them!?”

"Do you want us to stop them?" "Immediately!" "But what if we anger the dragon, majesty?!"

"I want to see the dragon!!" The princess whined at her mother. The King listened to his wife and the priestesses panic about what to do. "It would be a good idea to keep a good relationship with the dragon. Maybe not worship her as a god, but as a protector. You could send the unnatural boy to continue his job as ambassador." The King suggested softly.

"I have an idea! "What if we send the freak boy as ambassador to keep good relationships with the dragon.” The Queen exclaimed. The king sighed, not even bothering to call his wife out on stealing his idea.

"That's an excellent idea, ma'am!" "Such great leadership." the other women praised.

The King scowled harder when his wife turned to him and demanded, "Go bring us drinks to celebrate! You have nothing more important to do anyway.” The king sighed. “Yes, your majesty.” as he walked off, he heard the women celebrating, “This will be a historic moment for our city! The power we’d get to lift us to greater heights!”

The King was so glad the ambassador was male… Might as well help that poor cursed boy out.

"Hi... There was a cute boy yesterday, dark skin, tattoos, green eyes."

"Sorry he hasn't come to work today. Not even a call!” The butcher sighed. He was worried, actually. That Maxini boy was very polite and kind. Obedient and earnest about doing his tasks properly. Which was better than some other workers he had who didn’t really give a shit half the time.

"... Oh…” Mabel hung her head and left the shop.

"Hey, it's me again…” The butcher stared at Mabel for the 3rd time. "No, he hasn't come back, kid.” He gave her a sympathetic look. “I don’t know what’s going on, but his aunt came by and said there was a family emergency.” He hoped the boy and his family were alright. The butcher gave Mabel some turkey jerky, for free, since she looked so down. Wow, Max had really charmed this girl, hadn’t he. The man secretly hoped the two could meet again, she seemed nice. Max deserved a nice girl.

Mabel hugged her legs. It was official. She was never seeing Maxini again. Amelie sat next to her under the sun umbrella and let her sniffle on her shoulder. "Oh, come on, Mabel. I'm sure he's fine."

"Or maybe not! They’ll never let him out again! And I'll never teach him about phones or laptops because his poopy city with his poopy sister won't let him!"

"Hey, Mabs, don't you wanna play? Diego is offering to play with you.” Dipper approached her carrying Diego.

"Not in the mood, heeyatl pak's scarer. "

Miz walked towards her as well, soaking wet from the way the sea threw her around, but she had a wide grin. "Hey, Shooting Star! Quit the long face! Max is doing fine, more than fine I'd say!"

"Why? Is his city not sexist anymore? Is he treated like the awesome guy he is?” She grumbled.

"MABEL!!!"

The girl's eyes widened and her head spun around madly. There, a couple meters away, a dark-skinned boy with dark hair with a small braid came running towards them.

Everyone watched as Mabel stood up and practically flew towards the boy. When she was close to him, Max tripped over his own feet (because his gravity always shifted when he turned human) and fell face first into the sand.

Dipper blinked. "They're definitely made for each other…”

Mabel lifted him up and gave him the tightest hug in existence. Max gasped, thinking she was trying to kill him, but remembered humans wrapped their arms on your body to show...affection. He tried repeating the gesture.

"Oh, Max, I thought I'd never see you again!!" Mabel wailed.

"Me too! My family didn't let me come back here for two days! But then, the Queen herself showed up at our house with her guards and the 3 main priestesses! I was so scared because I thought I was going to be killed! But-But in front of everyone she-she said that I am NEEDED in the city!" He pulled out a cloak with beautiful patterns and showed it to Mabel before pulling out a little necklace he was wearing. "I was ACTUALLY named ambassador! They-They want me to make sure the dragon receives our prayers and offerings so she blesses us and I'm the ambassador so she sees we're good to all her humans and that we hold no mean sentiment towards them!"

"And that means?!

"That I get to be here all the time! I get to work here!" Max's accent was strong in his excitement, but because of the Translation Curse Miz had placed on them all, she was hearing him fluently.

"Max, THAT'S AMAZING!!" Mabel squealed and hugged him again.

The two laughed as they spun around in the sand, collapsing back into it. Miz had the widest grin. “Shiiiiiiip~”

Back on the sand, Mabel sat up, pushing her hair out of her face. "I...I missed you a lot, Maxi" She leaned in (feeling bold) and kissed his cheek.

Max gasped softly. "What-What was that?"

Mabel giggled. "That's a kiss. We humans do many kinds of kisses, this one is a happy kiss." She explained to the shocked reptile boy.

Max touched his cheek. Wow...Humans were so amazing...Now he understood why the great dragon liked them so much and protected them…

“I need to talk to the great dragon! Thank her for everything she's done for me!” Max wiggled his butt, missing his tail.

"Thank Miz?" Mabel asked confused. Sure, Miz spoke up about Max being an ambassador to her interests, but did she make the Queen name him a real ambassador?

Max pulled out the triangular piece he got from Miz days ago. "The dragon gave me a pendant, I-I thought it was some sort of...choosing from her." Max admitted, holding up the triangle. Mabel laughed. “So Miz was keeping an eye on you! I guess she also wanted to be sure you were okay.”

"Hello, kid!" Miz finally decided that was her cue and skipped towards her new ship. Max quickly bowed down. "Great dragon Miz! I don't have words to tell you how blessed I feel for being chosen by you to convey your desires! I-I promise I'll do my best to ensure my people are honoring you rightly, so your blessing remains on our lands."

“Eh… sure.” Miz made a note to extend her Blessing upon his home, gonna have to set up a proper weather cycle system and boost the fertility of the fish in the area… make sure the fish’s food sources were boosted too… introduce more nutrients into the soil, there was a lot that went into being a harvest god. Would be cool to get worshippers here on a version of Earth.

The Pines finally approached the boy, finally able to talk without fearing to be killed. Shermie and Abi stared in confusion, because that boy didn't look like a reptile?? And Ford was just very surprised and curious to know what kind of magic they used to create human forms.

"So...We're ok?" Dipper smiled sheepishly at Max. He grinned back. “Xhu! Everything is amazing!” Mabel just squeezed him a little more.

Shermie had a feeling he should be threatening or something? But Mabel had actually cried days ago for 'losing' this guy, it didn't feel right. Besides, he had gone through Mabel bringing home different boys a lot, so he just didn't have the energy to protest her taste in men anymore. He was old.

Seb laughed at the HUGE smile Max was giving all of them, despite being like, former enemies of his species just maybe hours ago. He was so excited for this. "You had something to do with this?" He leaned closer to Miz.

"Nah. Just gave him a pendant to keep an eye on him and be sure he was safe in there. If they had hurt him or locked him up I'd have saved him though. My ship was in danger!"

Seb rolled his eye. "Of course you do..." Well, Max didn't look like a bad kid. In fact, he felt he was too good for his own good, too innocent. Not good to be in the human world which would chew him up and spit out someone this earnest. Would they need to teach them how to act? Mabel did tell him Max had only been here for a few months… His thoughts were interrupted when he had to pull Ford away from Max, who was being protected by Mabel. "Get your own hot cryptid, Uncle Ford! Max is under MY protection now!"

Ford stepped back, because Mabel's glare was almost as scary as the reptilian females glaring down at them, but still looked at Max. "May I ask you a few million questions later on?"

Max wiggled in Mabel's hug. "I'd love to help you, sir!"

The Pines really had a fun time in New Jersey. The rest of the summer was spent relaxing and simply enjoying each other's company. They went to amusement parks (they were careful NOT to be chased out this time), and they took lots of photos. Everywhere, at every second. When July came, they had 2 birthdays to celebrate. First it was Shermie’s, the baby of the Pines brothers, who was turning 33, yet his mother and brothers all mock-babied him.

The day for the adults was pretty fun. At night they went to party HARD, leaving the teens in charge of the kids.

Miz had to pick THEM up after the bar hopping because they were fucked up, especially Seb and Ford, as the light weights they were. Ford was babbling the periodic table somewhere and Seb was practically pole dancing for the women who were all cheering loudly…

Oh Ax, she wished she had brought a camera…she simply made one and snapped a few photos before taking them back to the hotel. It was fun seeing their hungover faces the next morning, along with their horrified ones at the blackmail Miz got...

A week later, it was Dillon’s turn. He turned 19 and everyone went nuts as if it was his first birthday ever. To no one’s surprise, Phillip was the first person to congratulate the love of his life by calling him at midnight. Dillon couldn’t even be angry, he really missed his boyfriend.

They took him to a nice restaurant to eat and everyone gasped when Stan gave him money as a present! They didn’t see that coming. Stan dragged Dillon out to a bar. He tried to sneak some alcohol for Dillon but Ford refused to let him. “You can give him drinks when you’re at home. But we’re in public right now! And 19 isn’t 21!” Dipper was there as well, sipping his fruit juice and groaning. Meanwhile, everyone who stayed at the hotel received Phillip who had come just to see his babe. “Rainbow is here, over! Rainbow is here!” Mabel talked to her twin over the triangle pendants Miz gave everyone, and Dipper told his uncles and Dad to return to the hotel. Shermie hugged him. “The smell of alcohol is too much for him!”

Dillon was kind of disappointed but the surprise at the hotel was MORE than worth it. “PHILLIP!!” He cried and ran towards the ginger young man. Everyone cooed at the love birds who hugged each other after a passionate kiss. “You are closer to being fully adult now~” Phillip purred in his ear and Dillon grinned mischievously.

Suddenly, Stan lifted Phillip by the hem of his shirt and separated them. “You aren’t doing anything, you’re so lucky I have a kind heart and rented you your OWN room! Separated from Dillon’s. Which I’ll be guarding…” Phillip paled and nodded. Dillon groaned loudly. Damn it.

Well, whatever, he had his boyfriend with him for the rest of the summer!

Mizuuma: Sorry it took so long, I got distracted writing IiR
Chapter 34: A date?

Chapter Notes

Miz: The Island is something MizBill created before they went to Jersey, it was in IiR. If you haven't read it, MizBill didn't like the child internment camps and decided to teleport all the children to safety onto an Island that she created. It's in a hidden glade-like area behind the waterfall in Gravity Falls.

Slices of Life and Family

Chapter 34: A date?

Miz commented to Ford that she wanted to check up on the Island. She wanted to use some of what she’d learned from observing the Heeyatl Pak’s (that was the name of Max's tribe, while his species were called the Eix Leel) hidden ocean-side territory. A whole magical realm, in another sub-dimension, with all the space needed to nurture and breed the wild animals (fish) in the huge ocean beyond their lands. So… she wanted to do that with the Island. It was a hidden Glade, much like the unicorns had, in that it was grounded in place, a separate dimension that was perfectly stable. And, well… the size wasn’t an issue. Miz could expand it as much as she needed.

Miz had given Ownership to Stan, Ford, Fiddleford and Sebastian. So she needed their permission to do any changes. The triplets agreed easily enough, but she had to ask Fiddleford for the last one. So Stanford would accompany her on a teleport back to Gravity Falls after a long day of Miz (as Xin) going to all the restaurants and eating their food challenges, stockpiling his energy stores (and thoroughly enjoying himself.)

It was just after dinner now, and Xin was rubbing his full stomach, sighing at the burning under his skin. Even with how quick he digested… he ate way too much in one sitting and his physical form was having trouble handling it. Ford noticed the discomfort in his expression as he finished his own meal. “Are you alright? Do you have a stomach ache?”

“...a little…” Xin groaned, rubbing his stomach. “I can feel things churning around inside, tearing apart and releasing so much… heat.” This wasn’t like that one lunch visit to a buffet, this was an entire day of gorging himself on high calorie foods. Ford watched Xin groaned softly and reached out to pull Xin’s chair closer to his own. “Here, I can rub your belly for you.”

Xin blinked. “Um… okay?” Ford quickly explained, “I know some stomach massages to help with digestion and bloating? I ah… looked it up.” He shrugged sheepishly. “I just thought, well, even if you digest things differently from humans, you still only have so much room in your physical stomach. So…”

“Alright, sure. Get over here and start soothing me!” Xin chuckled before groaning and placing a hand on his stomach. Ford rolled his eyes fondly as he moved his chair behind Xin’s, reaching around quite easily with his arms and placing his hands on Xin’s stomach. The dragon groaned softly as Ford rubbed around, pressing here and there. The dragon relaxed, leaning back in his chair as Ford caressed his swollen stomach. Slowly, his stomach broke apart all the physical aspects of the food back into its atomic elements and Xin leaned his head back into Ford’s shoulder, eyes closed and relaxed.

“Enjoying yourself?” Ford asked, the grin in his tone quite clear. Xin mumbled, feeling the energy fill up his reservoirs until full. The excess could be forced into his stores (which was a little painful, what with the burning) or converted back into mass and spread through his physical vessel into his fat stores, and (not wanting to feel that itchy burning) Xin groaned softly as he felt his clothes tighten around his body as the excess was all dumped into his vessel. Ford’s brows creased as the belly he was touching seemed to shift, the painfully tight swell of the stomach all but vanishing as Xin’s lower abdomen began to swell up. “What’s…” Ford moved his hands lower and pressed his fingers into the soft skin. He felt around, confused about the change in mass, at the new tightness in Xin’s pants as the creases were all smoothed out by his growing thighs. “Did you just…” Ford glanced down at how tightly Xin’s pants were clinging to his butt, the poor fabric straining. “Turn all your food into fat?”

“D-don’t point it out!” Xin wailed, pulling his shirt down to cover his round belly. “It-- I needed to store it somewhere!” He was bright red, slapping Ford’s hands away. “Do-don’t you dare laugh!”

Ford blinked owlishly and peered around Xin’s shoulder to look down at what his hands had felt. “…did you just gain ten pounds?” He sputtered incredulously.

Face entirely red now, Xin mumbled, “…twelve…”

“…That must have been a lot of energy, if the conversion into actual physical matter ended up being so much…” Ford marveled. Xin deadpanned, “I just ate a ten pound burger challenge and then you ordered some cake just so you could eat it in front of me! So I ordered some fries and a few subs to make myself feel better over not being allowed to have any dessert-- and then the owner of the shop gave me a free smoothie-- which you said didn’t count as dessert so I drank that too-- And this was after I spent today eating the food challenges at five other locations.” Only gaining twelve pounds after all that only showed how much his internal storage had grown. Though… it appeared he still needed more. Things were so much harder in this Set than his own, where he could simply toss off his physical vessel at any time if he wanted the room to stretch out. Well, no biggie. More Deals shouldn’t be hard. (He also could, technically, expand his Mindscape, and turn more of the energy into parts of himself, but he didn’t feel like doing that, since he was planning on using up this energy, he didn’t want it to be part of himself. That’d result in the same issue as back home, where he could feel everything that was made from him. It was the reason why he stored excess energy inside vessels here, because he wanted the energy to be seperated from his Self) “Look, can we just go already?” Xin huffed, still pulling his shirt down in some futile effort to hide his belly. Ford chuckled. “Alright, lets go so you can work off everything you ate today.” He teased, patting Xin’s belly.

“…don’t think I won’t eat you for pushing your luck Fordsie.” Xin huffed, crossing his arms. Ford laughed, getting up and taking a few steps away, pausing when he realized Xin wasn’t following. “What’s wrong?”

Xin wasn’t looking at him, but his embarrassment had apparently gotten so bad that his scales were beginning to peek through, Ford could see them spreading along the sides of the dragon’s neck. “…uck…” Xin whined, pushing at the arms of the chair and wiggling. His thighs were firmly lodged into the sides of the chair. Ford burst out laughing, and didn’t stop even when Xin whined harder and started trying to kick him, “DAMMIT FORDSIE IT’S NOT FUNNY!!!”
Fiddleford checked his phone to see the time. Stanford said that he and Xin were coming over soon. He frowned. They were late, but then again, apparently they were gonna be heading over from Jersey, so maybe Stanford had forgotten to take into account the time difference between the east and west coast…

Then he heard a… soft noise and there was his best friend. “Ah, Stanford, you’re here.” Fiddleford smiled. The brunet man grinned back, his smile twitching oddly. “Yes, sorry for being late F, there was a bit of an issue with… ah…”

“Shut up shut up shut up~!” Xin whined, slapping Ford’s shoulder as the taller man held back his laughter.

Fiddleford nodded at the other man. “Ah, right, so you’re here for the… permission from me, to modify the Island?” Xin stopped his ineffectual ‘punishment’ on Ford to address the mechanic. “Yup. I’m gonna expand the space, more ocean for more habitat for the fish to breed, need to make sure there’s enough to properly sustain a population. Also wanted to get an update from you about what’s been happening there.”

“Right, well, you have my permission to add these upgrades to the Island.” Fiddleford nodded.

“Thank you.” Xin said gratefully. “Oh right, I meant to ask, have you gotten sanitary pads and stuff for the women on the island? And birth control?”

“...wh-what?” Fiddleford blinked and then nodded. “Y-yes we did. Dr. Wexler pointed those out to me.” Xin slumped against Ford, relieved at this. “Thank you. I realized I didn’t create any for them-- stupid me, should have remembered.” He straightened up and patted Ford’s shoulder. “Well, let’s go. I have a lot of redecorating to do!”

“And some weight to lose.” Ford couldn’t help but tease, which earned him a slap from Xin’s tail (which was suddenly out and writhing behind the annoyed dragon.) “It’s not funny!” Xin stormed off, not even bothering to hide his antlers and scales as they seeped out past his human form. As he passed the edge of the unicorn barrier, Xin threw off the clasps around his wrists and the items turned to dust as they hit the ground. Stupid barrier, so much trouble.

Ford winced and jogged to catch up to his friend. “I’m sorry if I took it too far. I didn’t mean it like that!” He caught up to Xin and took his hand. “Xin? I’m sorry.” He said clearly, not realizing Xin was so upset by his teasing. The dragon sniffled. “It’s embarrassing, ok?!” He rubbed his belly with one hand. “I keep--” He paused, unsure how to explain himself. “I was underweight for most of my life. A-and once I finally put on some weight to get up to something healthier--” He tightened his grip on Ford’s hand, even as they left the Center and walked into the woods. “--mom called me fat…"

Ford was very taken aback. “Wanda--”

“No, not Wanda. My other mom.” Xin shook his head. He wiped at his eyes. “A-and I don’t think she meant it like she was criticizing me-- but it-- I didn’t like it. I didn’t like that she thought I was healthier when I was--” Xin had to stop and breathe. “…I was 88 pounds for the longest time, all through high school and college… it’s… it’s not healthy to be that underweight.” He sniffled. “And when I finally got myself up-- and she made me feel bad about it…” He tightened his grip on Ford’s hand, even as they left the Center and walked into the woods. “...all of society strove to make her feel bad about it--"

“Oh Xin…” Ford wrapped his arms around the dragon and rested his chin on his shoulder, rubbing

“Yes, well, I mean-- th-that is to say--” Ford stuttered. Xin leveled a stare at him. Ford sweated as he tried to backtrack. “What I mean is you’re always cute-- no-- that’s-- ah-- wait, lemme try that again--” Ford covered his face with a hand to hide his blush. “You’re--” He felt like his tongue wasn’t listening to him, Ford worked his jaw, trying to get his thoughts (and words) in order.

“It’s fine.” Xin rolled his eyes at the flustered owl. “I think I get it?” He patted Ford’s cheek and smiled. “Quit trying to talk before you end up choking on your tongue.” He laughed, wiping the rest of the half formed tears from his eyes.

Ford sighed in relief. “Oh, yea-yeah…” his relief was short lived.

“So you think I’m cuuuuute~?” Xin giggled, skipping ahead of him down the path.

Ford started sputtering again, and even worse now. ”Xiiiin!” Ford complained with a groan, making the dragon laugh.

Back at the Center, in the security room, Fiddleford and a few of Ford’s other scientist friends were watching the interaction on the cameras that Fiddleford had set up around the forests of Gravity Falls, a precaution after Tyler got lost in there a few summers ago. They couldn’t hear what was being said but they could see the way their boss enfolded the shorter man in a hug from behind and rocked him gently. Dr. Poddar smacked the table. “I knew they were dating!”

“That isn’t proof!” Dr. Jerald complained. “You just don’t wanna pay up!” was the indignant response. Dr. Wexler hummed as she and Fiddleford peered at the screen. The mechanic turned to glance at the chemist. “Dating or not, there’s definitely something there.”

“They have to be! I mean, they were having S&M in the BREAKROOM!”

“I still think you were seeing things, dude.”

Fiddleford rubbed his chin. “Stanford always did have a thing for cryptids…”

The other scientists stopped squabbling to gawk at their co-boss. “REALLY?!”

“Ask him about Sirens sometime.” Fiddleford shrugged. Dr. Clark looked like he was choking. “Sirens… and a dragon?!”

“Damn, the guy likes them dangerous, huh?” Dr. Wexler looked almost impressed. “Didn’t take mister ‘too shy to even find a place to sit in the cafeteria he owns’ for such a thing.”

Fiddleford could have corrected them, but he found this all too funny. If Xin were there, he’d have given Fiddles a high five.

“Well let’s leave ‘em alone to their privacy, now?” Fiddleford shut off the camera feed. “Come on everyone, back to work.”

“So he’s Ace for humans but horny for cryptids.” Dr. Clark folded his arms and nodded solemnly. “I can respect that.”

“......” Everyone stared at him.
“You’re weird, dude.” Dr. Poddar deadpanned.

The Islanders had gotten used to people coming and going, but when the Care Units all bowed their heads to Xin and called him “Creator.” they sank to their knees as well before the man—no, before their savior! Xin looked a little uncomfortable, and it wasn’t from the fact that the Islanders were worshiping him, it was because their worship of him was sending him even MORE energy that he couldn’t hold onto. Not in this tiny human-sized vessel.

Long story short, Xin was forcibly shifted back into his dragon form from the force of the worship, which only awed the Islanders even MORE to realize their savior was a DRAGON (long, serpentine and feathered! Just like the legends said!) and Xin was incredibly flustered when they all started calling him Quetzalcoatl--

“What the heck?! I thought you guys were Catholic?!” Xin sputtered as his new worshipers cheered and thanked him. “Fordsie~! Help~!”

Ford was no help whatsoever. “Well.” The scientist calmly cleaned his glasses. “Your father IS the Axolotl after all--”

“I’M CHINESE FOR FUCK’S SAKE!!” Xin wailed.

"I wouldn't be surprised they still have that legend in mind," Ford grinned. "And you ARE a God, and you DID save them… oh lord Quetzalcoatl~" He whispered teasingly.

“You all suuuuuuuuck~!” Xin whined.

He set to work fixing up the Island quickly after that, wanting to be done and out and away from their worshiping gazes (which only made their awe of him all the greater as they watched the majestic dragon expand the very ocean and fill it with fish and other bounty with merely a gesture). The care units also gave Xin an update of what was needed here in terms of supplies and such, which Xin also handled. The poor dragon had his tail down, flustered to hell and back as the people continued chanting “Quetzalcoatl!” at him. “Mi nombre es Xin!” He wailed.

That only made them chant, “Xin! Xin! Gracias, nuestro salvador Xin!”

“….at least they’re getting my name right now…” The dragon complained as he nuzzled the fruit trees that Blue had grown, taking comfort in them. His large body was trailing all across the island as he picked his way around carefully to reach the spots he had to work on.

Ford jumped onto his back with ease that came from practice, and laid down there to watch him work, amused. So amazing~

“Stop being so smug up there! Don’t think I can’t feel it!” Xin growled up at him. Then the dragon squeaked. “The children are climbing on my tail!!!!” He held very still, praying for the parents to get the kids off.

“Gran dragón, ¿por qué dejas que el gringo te monte?” One of the adults asked. Xin huffed. And then, just to get back at Ford for laughing at his predicament, answered, “Él limpia mis escamas, es mi sirviente.”

The Islanders nodded at that, a few of them snickering behind their hands.

Xin finished asking them about what else they needed and made the necessary adjustments and upgrades to the island. Finally, he bid them farewell and winced at the surge of worship. At this rate, he wouldn’t need to eat tomorrow! And then Xin ducked down and squeezed his way through the tunnel to leave the Island. He sighed once they were back in Gravity Falls. “Well, I’m sure brother’s Sixer would be so angry with me over what just happened, never mind the fact that I derived no joy in it.”

“...that other me IS a paranoid son of a bitch.” Ford admitted, petting Xin’s antler absently. “...and seems to hate the fact that you’re a god.”

“More like ‘refuses to believe it could be in any way benevolent’.” Xin rolled his eyes as he picked his way through the trees, his magic making his paws float a tiny bit off the ground, as they had been back on the island, so as not to crush anything beneath his massive weight. He was churning with too much energy, he didn’t want to shrink back down. It was more comfortable to be big like this. But he couldn’t go back to the hotel like this! He wouldn’t fit!

Xin rumbled low in his throat and decided to just spend the night in Gravity Falls. He’d go to sleep, head home to his own set to drop off all this excess energy, and then come back tomorrow morning. Plan made, Xin made his way back to the Center. Ford blinked. “Oh, are we going to tell Fiddleford that we’re done?” Xin re-materialized his Seal again, clasping it around an antler this time.

“I’m going to bed.” Xin huffed as he slithered past the barrier and ducked his head to get in the doorway. Ford peered down from where he was perched between the dragon’s antlers. “...here?”

“Well I can’t calm down enough to go back into a human form. So I’m going to sleep here.” Xin snorted, stopping to scratch himself, damn tree leaves brushing along his belly tickled! It’d been bothering him for the past few minutes. “We’ll head back tomorrow morning.” And with that, they were in the Center again, with some workers leaving for the night (and staring, jaws dropped, at the LITERAL dragon). Ford waved at them. “Good evening, and thank you for your work today.” He told them all. The staff nodded dumbly. Right… cryptids were real. Dragons were real. What was so surprising anyway? They walked away quickly, careful to steer clear of those large paws, and sharp claws.

(Xin kept quiet about how being so much bigger than other people made him feel smug inside. This was his own guilty pleasure.)

Xin bent down and slithered inside the Center, his bulk filled the hallways, but he could fit just fine. He easily made his way to Ford’s lab, it was large enough to fit him, and he was curling up to sleep anyway. Xin wiggled his head through the door, this part was a tighter fit, he turned his head to get his antlers in as Ford slid down his body like a particularly bumpy slide. Ford waved at Fiddleford as the other man passed by in the hallways. “Good evening F. We’re spending the night here. Xin can’t change back at the moment.”

Fiddleford blinked slowly up at his friend. Then at Xin’s lower half as he wiggled around, trying to fit through the door. He opened his mouth, paused. Closed it and paused again. “Well, try not to bring the building down.” Fiddleford finally said, his tone like a desert in the peak of drought.

“Ah, right.” Ford turned back and pulled on Xin’s tail. “Xin! Stop wiggling like that before you break something!”

“...I think I’m stuck.” Was the muffled response. And looking at the doorway to Ford’s lab, you could clearly see that Xin’s larger hind legs and hips were not fitting through the doorway. Not without some help at least. Ford sighed. “Ok, hang on while I push. I think you can make it, you just need to rotate your hips this way…”
And Fiddleford turned to walk away because he was too tired to deal with this. Let Ford handle his dragon friend on his own.

“Come on, I’m going to push, just stretch your left leg back and twist your hips!” Ford placed his hands on the dragon’s underside and pushed. Xin squawked, “Where are you touching?!” as his tail writhed around. “Sorry, I’m just trying to--” He pushed again, heading towards the middle, underneath the arch of Xin’s tail. The dragon squealed, “Quit pushing between my legs!!!”

“Where am I supposed to push?!”

The two struggled a bit more, both idiots missing the obvious answer of ‘make the doorway bigger’, before Xin laid down in the hallway, still half in and out of the lab. “I’m just going to sleep here. Good night.” The pout was so clear in his tone that Ford could practically see it. “Then where am I supposed to sleep?” Ford whined, leaning against Xin’s (warm) tail. “Just sleep on the floor.” was Xin’s unhelpful answer. “That’s what I’m doing.”

“Nah, I’m going to the break room.” Ford got up to begin walking away, but paused when he heard the whimpering. “Nooo! Don’t leave me here alone!!!” Xin thrashed again. Ford patted his tail. “Ok, I won’t leave. I’m right here.”

Right, Xin didn’t like sleeping alone. Ford should have remembered. He winced at the distressed whine. He patted Xin’s tail again, “I’m here, I’m right here. I’m not going to leave you alone.” He soothed.

“...Really?” Came the quiet, almost subdued question. Ford nodded, before realizing Xin probably couldn’t see it. (The Center was shielded against Scrying now.) “Yes, I’m going to be right here.” Ford looked around and pulled at Xin’s tail, dragging the long appendage around to make a makeshift bed for himself. “See? I’m going to sleep right here.”

“Really, really?” Xin asked, curling his tail around where he could feel Ford. Ford patted the tail, smoothing down the feathers on the end (and marveling at how soft they were), “Yes. Really.” He nudged the tail around, laying down on top and pulling the tip and it’s feathers over himself like a warm blanket.

“...promise you won’t leave me alone?”

Ford yawned, feeling rather tired from the long day. He nodded, wiggling around to get more comfortable. “Yeah, promise...” He relaxed on the (surprisingly) comfortable scales, nodding sleepily. Xin didn’t respond for a while, and Ford figured he must have fallen asleep. Then, even quieter, so much so that Ford wasn’t sure if he was imagining it, Xin asked, “You really mean that?”

“Yes, I’m staying right here to sleep.” Ford rolled over snuggling into the soft feathers.

“G’night Xin...” Ford slurped, drifting away comfortably.

---

There was a bit of a small problem the next day. Or rather, a big problem.

“What do you mean you can’t change back?” Ford rubbed his face.

Xin had wiggled out of Ford’s lab and was currently in the huge cafeteria, curled around an entire table and attracting all sorts of stares from the other employees. The dragon huffed. “Well, the Islanders seem to be praying to me. They’ve collectively decided it would be their daily routine from now on.” He grumbled. The dragon shook his head, ruffling his feathers. “And human worship is so much more… potent, than the flavor I get from other species. I can’t risk changing back into a smaller form until I can adjust to the difference.” Xin laid his head on the table, blinking at Ford. “Can’t have me suddenly transforming into my dragon form out of nowhere, right?”

Ford groaned. “Well, what am I supposed to do with you like this?! You barely fit anywhere and we can’t have people seeing you!”

Xin stared at Ford and then slid his gaze over to the many, many people pointing and gawking at him. “Riiiiight, no letting people see me.” The dragon gave one of the nearby scientists a raised feather and the guy almost dropped his tray. (“Holy shit! A real dragon?!”)

Ford looked around at his co-workers and shrugged. "Oh, that's completely different and you know it~" He poked Xin’s side with a half formed pout. The dragon wiggled. “Can your perception filter block… all this?” Ford waved his arms at Xin helplessly. The dragon scoffed. “Of course! But I won’t be able to fit back into the hotel…” He sighed. The one upside was that he wasn’t hungry… even if he still wanted to eat, just to taste stuff.

“Well, I guess you’ll have to sleep outside for a while.” Ford chuckled. “And don't worry. I'll be there...so you won't be alone. Like I promised.” The scientist told the pouting dragon. This made him relax.

Xin purred and nudged Ford. “Hm… pet me?” He batted his eyelashes and Ford rolled his eyes. But he did reach out his hand to begin stroking Xin’s snout. The dragon continued purring, closing his eyes in bliss.

The scientists watched the interaction, gaping. So the rumors were true...the dragon nudged closer to Ford, who in return hugged the warm, soft snout. “You’re like some giant kitty.” Ford cooed as he scratched along Xin’s feathers, trailing a hand down one of Xin’s antlers. The purring did remind Ford of a cat, and the slit pupils. But weren't dragons reptiles? No, Xin was warm blooded, despite the snake-like appearance. Ford kept making his observations as he began to climb up Xin’s head to continue scratching him.

Ford laughed when Xin helped him get on top and he continued rubbing and scratching. This was so nice. His hands felt nice and warm and the dragon's heat was making his face go red. He was imagining doing this after working with Xin on a new project, or after exploring an unknown mystery with him, after a session, just curling up together every day and stroking his mane--

The purring rumble of the dragon was sending pleasant sensation all over Ford as he straddled Xin’s head, to pet him properly. Then Ford froze, catching his thoughts, clamping his legs up and together and losing his grip as another sensation made itself known.

--and fell the 2 meters back to the floor with a thud. The people around winced at the sound. They wanted to check on their boss, but...dragon.

“Fordsie? You okay?” Xin nudged him with his snout. Ford nodded, trying very hard to hide his face, he could feel how warm it was, he was blushing so hard. “I-I’m fine! Yes! Perfectly fine!” He tried not to think about the warmth tingling around him. Damn his body reacting to the vibrating sensation! Ford told himself it was merely a physical reaction to vibrations being applied between his legs. It was his own fault for sitting right on top--
“Are you sure you’re alright? That fall looked pretty bad?” Xin nudged him again and Ford waved a hand. “I’m fine! But I think I should pet you from the safety of the floor, from now on.”

"As long as you don't stop doing that wonderful thing with your fingers, I'm okay with that.” Xin purred, lying his head down on top of Ford’s legs, careful not to crush him, “Wouldn’t want you to break your wittle fragile human meatsack~” He nuzzled against Ford’s chest as the scientist rolled his eyes. “Yes well, when there’s a difference in size to this extent--"

“I could make you bigger?” Xin teased. “Or you could borrow Dipper’s grow-shrink flashlight?”

“No, we can just use the flashlight to shrink you!” Ford grinned, like that would solve everything. Xin groaned. “Not… really… I mean… you could shrink me, but I’d just have less room to hold energy and we’d be back to the original problem.”

Ford slumped over, lifting his glasses to massage his eyes. "Fuck." Xin laughed. “Sooo~ giant sized you? Yes or no?”

“We SHOULD be getting back to Jersey is what we should be doing.” Ford groaned, scratching Xin’s nose. "But you're dragon-sized and can't...What easy ways can you burn your energy, my dear dragon?" It's not like he wanted to go back exactly, he’d love to go to his lab for a while, but one, he couldn't do that because Xin, and two, Seb and Stan would claim he cheated doing work and be angry at him and he didn't have the energy to deal with those two right now.

“I could make you giant.” Xin repeated. Ford groaned. “What is it with you and transforming me?”

"Hm. Being a giant isn't really in my top list of wishes."

“Then, what DO you wanna be? I’m open to requests?” Xin swished his tail back and forth, making some people scream and duck. (“Watch it!”)

"Can't you burn energy like, running around? Like Seb and his kids do?"

"Our powers don't work the saame~" Xin whined. "His weirdness energy is not independent... And he'd cry like a baby if his energy was stored in his body like mine!" In fact, he used to go through awful agony because of that.

"Then burn little things." Ford passed him a napkin to incinerate. Xin whined again. “Burning it that way would take aaggeesss!” His tail continued swinging around, knocking the least coordinated scientists down. (“Sir! Please take him out of the Center~!”) “And that’s a huge waste of resources! Burning things that don’t need to be burnt is a waste and contributes to air pollution!”

“I'm sure it's not quite that bad.” Ford rubbed his face, at least this talk gave him time to regain his composure. Though… Ford looked over at Xin again, watching the way the dragon wiggled his butt back and forth, sweeping his tail across the room. “But perhaps we should move this outside…”

(“Dude, where’s his dick? I can’t see anything underneath--” “What the fuck man?!” “What? It’s a freaking dragon! Why wouldn’t I try to examine his anatomy?! It's the biologist in me!”)

Xin whined loudly when he heard them and Ford smiled sheepishly before patting the dragon. "You know, let's go outside."
They stayed in the backyard of the center with a perception filter on. The tourists WERE still around after all. Though judging by Dipper's comments, tourists couldn't tell the fakes from anything real.

Xin was pouting, still feeling the energy inside him. Ford was pouting as he tried to think of a solution. They were still here and no progress...

He...was going to have to take one for the team...wasn't he? He thought with despair. “Fine, if... if you made me a giant, and then shrank me back to normal, would that use up your energy?”

Xin pawed at the ground. “Well, yes. But I’ll have a surge of energy from their morning prayers tomorrow and then this’ll happen again.”

“Can’t you just tell them to... not pray to you?”

“Worship is an internal thing. If they think about me, and hold me in their thoughts as a god to devote themselves to, I’m gonna feel it. Heck, I’ve been feeling short bursts from them all day.” Xin grumbled.

"It's hard to be a god, huh?" Ford paced as he thought on what to do!

“...yeah, kinda? I mean, it feels kinda good, at first. But it’s like eating too much ice cream, I end up feeling kinda sick if I can't process it all. And full.” Xin huffed. “But at least worship isn’t lust energy, yeesh, that stuff SUCKS!”

Ford raised an eyebrow. “Lust energy?”

“Yeah, it makes me super horny and stuff. Like, hornier than usual. It seriously sucks.” Xin grumbled. “Bad enough whenever I have dumb physical stuff on my own, I don’t... mind them, but I like to deal with them in my own time, ya know?”

Ford couldn’t believe he was having this conversation. “R-right...”

“I mean, don’t you get pent up and need to let off some steam sometimes?” Xin asked, tilting his head. Ford coughed, face red. “W-well, my body, unfortunately, does experience certain urges...in...rare occasional situations. But I merely... ah, as you put it, let off some steam, and then go back to my work.” Ford pulled at his shirt, right, it was summer, that’s why it was so warm in here.

“Your know, I never even thought about what would happen if I had a worshipper who also lusted for me?” Xin realized. “You think that’d double the sensational output? What should I do if something like that happened?”

“...I wouldn’t know.” Ford answered honestly. Xin lounged on the grass, his tail swishing around absently. “I guess, Jan’s fans would be considered that type, wouldn’t they? I don’t normally have to deal with them directly, so it's not that much of an issue. Unless I’m having a concert, then the lust is just... everywhere!” He shook his head. “One good thing about being here, being outside my Set makes it so I don’t have to feel the tiny blips of worship and lust from my fans.” He could probably just send them into a bubble so he didn’t have to deal with it, but power was power and it’d be a waste to not take what they freely gave, right? Xin huffed. Fordsie was right. Life as a god was hard. “Hey Fordsie...” Xin rumbled, nudging Ford with his snout. “Can I drain the carbon from the sky and terraform the earth to heal the messed up climate?”

“That’s way too intense.” Ford deadpanned. “I’d love to let you do that, but it has to occur slower or it can mess up the climate even worse and cause other consequences...Besides...” He nudged
Xin’s snout softly. “You already said you were going to help me on that, it was already my plan to fix the climate~” He smiled softly.

The dragon pouted, and Ford was surprised to see that he managed such an expression with his muzzle. “I know, I’m just impatient.” He wiggled his butt back and forth. (And also decided he would just go and do that, slowly pull the carbon from the atmosphere, that is.) A few scientists from the center were sneaking out to try and examine the dragon. (“So, eastern and western dragons look different in mythology, and Xin is clearly asian, so they really don’t have wings.”)

“Hey~Go back to work you fools! Shoo!” Ford waved his arms around and the scientists grumbled at being ordered to leave. Xin couldn’t help but wiggle his butt even more at how Fordsie was protecting him from those scientists' curious eyes and grabby hands. Ford sighed. “You look like you’re about to pounce.” Ford noted. Xin lidded his eyes at him. “I just might~” He sang. Ford sighed. “You’re feeling hyperactive, aren’t you?”

“No rampaging.” Ford said instantly. “Look, how about we go back to Jersey, you can swim in the ocean, maybe make me g-giant… only for a few minutes--”

“I could turn you into a dragon too~” Xin’s feathers flexed, the dragon leaning in and pressing his snout against Ford’s chest. “I’m sure you’d make quite the handsome one~”

“A dragon?”

“You’d help me even more with my energy problem. And I wouldn’t even have to mess with your actual body, could just take you out and put you in a vessel, building a neeeew vessel would take even more energy than to simply make you bigger~” The dragon purred, nuzzling him. Then to sweeten the pot, he whispered, “For science ~”

Ford’s face morphed into a distressed expression. (Even as another part of him also whispered -For science~)

They had gone deeper into the woods, much to the scientists’ disappointment. Ford’s hands were fidgeting nervously as Xin wiggled and practically jumped up and down like a very excited puppy.

“William, I’m not very sure about this anymore…” Ford bit his lip.

“I’m sure!” Xin purred. “I’ll teleport your body somewhere safe, like maybe back in the hotel room, and then I build a dragon vessel for you!”

“Why do I have to be in the vessel?!~”

“Because it’s more fun that way! Who would play with me otherwise?? Don’t you wanna be a draaaaaagon~? You’d have your own scales to analyze~ and tail~ and snout~”

Ford’s face was bright red. But..He had been outside his body before (in a much more embarrassing form), and Xin...he trusted him with his body. Well, within reason. Ahem. But… being a dragon?? Ford wasn’t sure if--

“Come on Fordsie~please~”

“Don’t worry~” Xin purred against Ford. “I’ll be gentle~”

That didn’t reassure Ford at all.

---

“….oh. Wow… I’m… I’m a dragon…” Ford held himself very still, oh Tesla he was so big! And… Ford glanced behind himself, marvelling at how his neck was so… long. He was also very different from Xin! For one, he had WINGS! And he didn’t have those long whisker-like things Xin had. Oh science~!! Be still his heart!

Xin lounged on some rocks nearby, the two dragons were on a rocky mass in the middle of the ocean, so as not to cause trouble for the people at the beach. Xin was admiring how handsome Ford’s dragon form turned out. A western styled dragon, yes. With deep blue scales and dark brown spines all along his back.

“Why-Why do I look...like this?”

“’Cuz you’re not Asian and it’s fitting.” Xin shrugged, trailing his gaze up and down, all along Ford’s large form. Those majestically curved horns… that wing span~ oh my~ He walked over to Ford and nudged him under his own snout. He felt so tingly~ Xin purred, rubbing himself along Ford’s flank, to the scientist’s confusion. “X-Xin?!”

“Mmm~ such a handsome boi~” Xin’s tongue lolled out and he gave Ford a grooming lick. Ford squeaked. “Come on~ you’re a dragon~ isn’t that cool~?” Xin whined. He was burning with heat and just wanted to snuggle really badly~

Wait, the way Xin was behaving, and panting… Ford frowned. “....are you in heat?” Ford deadpanned. Xin continued whining, nuzzling against Ford insistently. Ford groaned. This… was super weird. “...your vessels are really accurate, aren’t they?” he wondered aloud. Xin whined again, pawing at the ground and leaning against Ford’s side. “I-I’m a professional!” The demon-dragon wrapped his tail around Ford’s. “But I… haven’t gone into heat before?” he panted, leaning into Ford’s side.

“I’ve read that some species only have a mating response triggered when in the presence of another of their kind.” Ford noted, wishing he had his journal so he could write this down. “Fascinating, I count as another dragon for your vessel to begin displaying--”

“Sure, great! Whatever! Dammit Fordsie~ I’m burning!” Xin groaned, curling his much longer, serpentine body around Ford. The blue dragon blinked. “I’m not going to mate with you!” He sputtered. “I don’t want you to!” Xin shot back, flushing. “I just… really need to cuddle right now.” he whined.

“....if it’s just cuddling, I can do that.” Ford agreed. Then he wheezed when Xin contracted around him, like a snake squeezing its prey. “N-not sssssso tight…” Ford gasped, and Xin loosened his hold. “Sorry.”

“Y-yeah. No problem.” Ford was suddenly very worried about what would happen if Xin wrapped a human up like that? They probably wouldn’t survive, if he was being honest with himself. So Ford let Xin continue coiling/cuddling up with him, purring like a motor and radiating heat, until he eventually relaxed, loosening his hold and sliding off Ford’s body. “Xin?” Ford nudged him with his snout.

The golden dragon was still half wrapped around him, eyes closed and… appeared to be sleeping peacefully? Ford sighed. Well, from what the sky looked like, it appeared the two of them had been here for hours. The sun was going to be setting soon. Yeesh, they really had spent the whole day as dragons together… and Ford didn’t even get to try out his new wings for any flying yet!

Well, no matter. Ford glanced over at Xin and licked his mane absently. This day had been quite… interesting… and Ford had learned more than…he actually wanted to know about dragons and… mating instincts.

As he groomed Xin’s mane, the snake-like dragon hummed, “…ove you Fordsie…” sleepily as he twitched and shuffled closer to press against him. Ford huffed. “I don’t know what you just said, but sure.” He yawned himself, rather exhausted, and hungry. Dear lord, he was hungry. Were dragons naturally hungry? Or was it because this body hadn’t eaten all day? But he didn’t trust himself to try and hunt or fly or swim without supervision, plus, Xin was sleeping and he couldn’t just leave him alone here. So Ford laid his head down over Xin, draping an arm around the slender dragon and pulling him closer before going to sleep himself.

Ford woke up and his first instinct was reaching for his glasses, before realizing he didn't have them on, and he was SEEING. Then he remembered he was a dragon. Right. Xin had oversaturated himself with energy. And then something about using up his energy and insisting on turning Ford into a dragon to do so.

His stomach grumbled and he nudged the golden dragon curled up next to him. "Xin...Xin, can we go back? I want to eat...as surprising as that sounds." Instinctively, he licked him a few times.

Xin opened his eyes and yawned as he stretched. "Wow...Did we fall asleep here?" He smiled as he nuzzled Ford and started licking his beautiful curly mane. Xin waited for him to say something, But Ford just sighed, “Okay, quit that. I’m hungry and I need food.”

Xin swooned, “Gasp! The Stanford Pines wants to eat something?! The world must be ending~!”

“Hah, hah.” Ford rolled his eyes. He got up, getting himself oriented to the whole… four legged thing. The water from the sea around them had risen while they slept and half his body was wet. Blegh. He shook his head and his new tail to get some water off him. Xin was laughing and running around him, looking very excited for some reason and nuzzling his side from time to time. “Haha! Hahaha!”

“So~ Can we go back to the hotel now?” Ford complained.

“I’m still full of energy!” Xin whined.

“...Are-Are you kidding me?!”

Xin laughed and nuzzled him again. Why-Why wasn’t he saying anything though? Xin had… he’d… told him yesterday… told Ford… “I love you Fordsie.” and it had been so nerve wracking to say it, he probably shouldn’t have, but he just felt so good and they had been together, and he remembered what happened, it felt so nice (and neither of them had crossed the lines of comfort for each other, even during all that), and-and he didn’t leave ... Ford had… had promised to not leave him alone-- and-- and--

But Ford wasn’t… saying anything about that! So… did he… Xin had thought… Ford had… (he must have read him wrong, oh, that’s… that’s f-fine… Xin wouldn’t… let this… stop them from being friends... )
“Xin~” Ford groaned and nudged his head. “We can discuss this later. Can we go back to normal so we can eat?”

Xin felt so confused. Why was he still nuzzling him if he didn’t…? “I could turn you back and send you back to your body. I could just…chill here until I get the hang of being worshipped here in a physical form.” The golden dragon sighed heavily.

“…No. I said I wouldn’t leave you.” Ford sighed.

???? Xin was sure he was reading all this wrong… If he wasn’t saying anything about yesterday…but he was still saying all this…Oh Ax, how dumb, he was so dumb… Xin huffed and tried not to feel down on himself. He… probably made a move too soon. Xin whined a little, his tail and ears drooping down. “…” But… Xin wanted to make sure, he wasn’t going to let this be some stupid misunderstanding! If Ford was just too unsure-- well… Xin sighed. “Um… Fordsie?”

Ford was staring down at the ocean, at the fish swimming by. His stomach growled and he was salivating.

Xin took a deep breath, gathering his nerve. “Did you um...hear what I said? Yesterday… After… that stuff we… um, did together?” Xin turned orange. Oh, yeah, he and Fordsie… did… did that mean that Xin was finally giving up his V card? Eh, not that virginity was even all that important. Screw it, he wasn’t a virgin anymore! Hah! Suck on that Pyronica! She didn’t get to tease him about that anymore!

Ford blinked and looked up from the food swimming past him. “Um...You didn’t really speak much yesterday...Um, you mean when you fell asleep? The ‘Blughbuh Fordsie?’” The former human asked in a mocking tone, ears dropping and eyes closing to imitate Xin. His tail was wagging on its own, amused at himself at how FUNNY he was.

Xin blinked....OH. So… Fordsie didn’t hear him. Well. Xin was relieved, and also annoyed as shit. Cause there was no way he was gonna be telling the idiot that again! Auuugh! Xin sighed, it… it wasn’t like he even knew if he really did like Fordsie in that way. What if he’d only felt that way at that moment because of the day they spent together? Auuuughhh! Xin flopped down onto the rocks with a splash. Fuck it. Don’t think about this anymore. It was fine to be friends and only friends. Romance? Who needed that?!

….and he DIDN’T have a crush dammit! Xin rolled around, whining. He was probably wrong. What did he even know about romance? He was just… making things more complicated for himself. Xin sighed. Ford was still staring at the water, head down near the water and his tail waving around as he salivated.

Damn Ford for being so cute.

“Come on dummy, lemme teach you how to hunt for food.” Xin walked over, smacking Ford’s flank with his tail to get his attention. Then, as Ford watched, Xin dove into the ocean, easily swimming by ribboning his long slender body around. Ford watched him chase after a school of fish and then Ford groaned.

“I’M NOT A SWIMMING TYPE DRAGOOOOOOON!!!”

Well, seeing as his dragon body wasn't made to swim much, Xin had to find new ways to teach Ford how to hunt. "Have you ever played that game of catching apples with your mouth?"
Yeah. Xin basically taught him to dive half his body into the water, open up his mouth, catch some fish, and come back out.

It worked. It...actually worked.

Xin, curled up in a pile, watched the blue western dragon stare at the waters with full concentration and when you least expected it, SPLASH! He was in and out with a mouthful of fish. He snapped his jaws to kill the fish before placing his hunt between him and Xin. Xin wondered how much of this was Ford, and how much was just dragon instincts...He didn't like to brag~ But he was darn good making bodies biologically correct, instincts and hormones perfectly integrated. (If not...yesterday's...thing, wouldn't have happened. Xin was very sure his big brother would be having a conniption if he ever found out about that... but Com hadn't actually known that having another dragon nearby would cause that sort of reaction!)

Ford sat down in front of him and shook himself to get rid of the water. His curly mane was everywhere now. He silently stared at the golden dragon then at his food and softly nudged some to him.

Xin purred at the gesture and walked closer. He didn't eat anything though (he was trying to get rid of energy, not get more) and curled up against Ford's chest before lowering his head. That was a no thank you, you eat this. So the other dragon obeyed and started eating.

Ford found it so weird he wasn't...chewing anything, just lifting it into his mouth, biting it in two parts before swallowing. It was weird, eating fish without cleaning it, but he had eaten worse in space, and got used to it. And the scales didn’t seem to be an issue here. His throat felt warm, and when Ford concentrated a little, he could feel some sort of burning deep inside his throat. Did he have fire?! Was his internal fire cooking the fish as it went down? Well… that was good, he was a little afraid of parasites, but if his body produced fire then the heat should kill off the bacteria and other harmful add ons.

Ford was so hungry, he wasn’t used to being this hungry. Sure, he and Stan had gone hungry before out in space, but Ford didn’t eat much to begin with and managed to bear with it. But this body was ravenous. He was kind of glad that Xin didn’t seem to be hungry, probably full on ‘worship’, Ford dove into his fish pile, chomping them up, using his long forked tongue to wrap around the weakly flopping animals to pull them into his mouth. He kept trying to grab at the fish with his paws but his manual dexterity wasn’t very good and he found it much easier to use his tongue.

Xin grinned a bit and snuggled as he purred. Yes~ Eat it all~Oh wow, the dexterity Ford had with that long tongue~ He was glad Ford wasn't weirded out by this. Sure he said it felt weird, but it didn't really disturb him and made him feel horrible, like their genderswap weeks ago had. He was too curious for his own good.

"Ah~" Ford's voice brought him back as he sighed with content, his belly now full. "Well. That was a thing." He commented, coughing some fish' spines.

Xin was about to say something, but Ford burped and a stream of flame came out. Ford’s eye went wide. “Did I just--?!” His spines were sticking up straight and he flapped his wings in excitement. “I’m really spitting fire!” He was so giddy about this. He was a DRAGON and he could spit FIRE!

Xin giggled, nuzzling against Ford’s side. “You sure did~” He also took this time to check on Ford’s body, Flickering to see him still ‘sleeping’ in his hotel room. Well, Xin took this chance to teleport some food into him, can’t have his body starving while it’s owner was out. At least, that’s what he’d been planning to do, but he saw Seb kick the door open, “Sixer! Where’s Miz? We haven’t seen her in a while and I'm obvs not worried, but Wanda’s obvs worries about everything and she's getting worried--" He stopped and stared at the comatose Ford. "Ah come on! Are you two doing some out of body experience thing again?!" Seb groaned, long suffering, and stomped over to pull off Ford’s blankets, looking for Miz. She wasn’t there. He sighed.

"How long have you been out?! Have you eaten?!" He shouted at Ford’s unconscious body. Xin snorted. Silly.

Seb pulled his hair. What could he do??

As Ford tried spitting more fire, Xin giggled as Seb called Stan and both cursed at Ford's body. Then, apparently his brother thought Xin was an irresponsible dragon to leave Ford's body without attention and Sebastian left his own body to GO IN FORD’S BODY! Hahaha!

"Well I'll be ⅔ of our triplet union until Sixer's back!" Seb in Ford's body announced. "Look! I'm here!" He went back to his body. "And I'm here!"

Xin watched Stanley massage his temples and walk out of the room. 'Ford' with glowing yellow eyes, picked up Seb's now limp body like a sack of potatoes and followed him out, laughing madly (sounding very weird in Ford's voice.)

Xin blinked back to reality. Ok. He'd let Seb have his fun being tall and muscular for a while~

Now that he knew Fordsie’s body was going to be well looked after, Xin turned his attention back to the dragon beside him. Ford was huffing and spewing out embers, licking his mouth with a long tongue as he frowned at the taste in his mouth. “Bleh, it’s all burning. But… it’s not as disgusting as I thought.”

"Well~" Xin yawned and stretched and he floated a little bit. "It's time for flying lessons~"

Ford wagged his tail.

--.--

Ford hid his tail between his legs. Xin had taken them to an uninhabited mass of land with a very high cliff. Couldn't he learn from somewhere less...life threatening??

"Xin...I'm not very sure about this...It's too high and I really haven't had much time to get used to all these muscles." Ford looked behind him and wiggled his wings.

"Trust me, Fordsie. It'll be alright ok? I'll be right here for you. Besides, flying can’t be that hard, you actually have wings! I have to do all sorts of magic to get into the air!" Xin nuzzled him before stepping behind Ford. "Ok. I want you to extend your wings."

"Like this?" Ford flexed his shoulder muscles, feeling his wings spread out, ok, that wasn’t too hard, at least.

"Uh huh." Xin nodded. "Now, lean a bit more forward, yes, excellent, good boy!" Xin turned around, his back facing Ford.

"Now this is the hardest part ok? Close your mouth as you fall, wouldn't want insects getting in, now would ya?"

"What?"

“YEET!!!!!!”
With a hard kick from his hind legs, Xin kicked the blue dragon off the cliff.

"AAAAAAAAAAAAHHHHHHHHHHHHHHHHH!!!!!!!!!!" Ford screamed in panic. Xin hung over the side of the cliff, lazily watching him plummet. “Just open your wings and hold them open!” He called down.

“-HHHHHHHHHHHHHHHHH!!!!!!!”

“Yeesh, still screaming?” Xin rolled his eyes. Wow. He was still falling. Eh, he was fine. Xin put a cushioning spell on him earlier in case he--

WHUMP!

--hit the ground. Xin got up, leasurily stretching his back and tail out with a low purr. Welp, time to go down and check on him. He flew down easily, ribboning through the air gracefully. He landed beside Ford, who was on his back, eyes wide and his legs all sticking up in the air. “Sooo~” Xin sauntered over to raise a paw and close Ford’s mouth, really, all that screaming, he bet the idiot swallowed a whole lot of bugs. “Care to try and figure out what you did wrong?”

“.....” Ford said.

“What was that?” Xin leaned closer.

“...can’t believe you PUSHED me!” Ford wailed. Xin rolled his eyes. “You’re fine. Not even hurt. Besides, how else did you think dragons taught their young how to fly?” (Though, if he were a real dragon, Ford would have been one of those cubs who didn’t make it, what with how poorly his first try went.) Xin nudged Ford, pushing him over onto his legs. “Now come on, let’s try that again.”

“I think I’m going to just stay right here on the ground, thanks.” Ford sounded a little strained, eyes still wide and movements stiff. That… had been… terrifying. No wonder Stanley was afraid of heights.

“Come oooon Fordsie~” Xin whined. “Don’t you wanna learn to fly?”

“Not your way, no.” Ford sniffed. “I’m going to do this the SCIENCE way!”

“...the wha?”

“...this is soooo boooring~!” Xin moaned, lying on the ground. Five hours! They’ve spent the past FIVE HOURS with Ford measuring wind speeds and doing flapping exercises. “It’s taking foreeeeever~!” Xin complained again.

“Hang on, I think I’ve got it this time.” Ford turned around again, having walked around the field multiple times, changing the way he was facing, as if that would make his take off chances any better. It was funny watching him jump into the air and then fall on his face… the first 20 times. After that, it just became kinda sad.

"Weren't you the one who wanted to go home?" Xin groaned, pulling at the grass absently.

"Well, not if I can't do this!" Ford huffed. "Besides, you still can't go back to normal yet either, can you?"

"..."
"That's what I thought."

"But we could be doing something fun!! Just try jumping again! Even baby birds are kicked out of their nests!" Xin groaned loudly and slammed his tail against the ground. Then he hummed. "You aren't being a proper dragon... They would just jump. Doing it the 'science way' is straying you further from being a good cryptid...Which means you aren't really an anomalist expert if you can't even do something baby dragons do~" Going for his ego-

“Well, I’m still a scientist on the inside.” Ford responded and jumped into the air again, wavering before landing. “Hm… not enough speed…”

“A BORING scientist!” Xin wailed, "You're less than a baby dragon, Fordsie~ a scardy boring BORE man!"

“...you really want to see me jump off a cliff?” Ford didn’t have eyebrows to raise but his expression was pretty obvious.

"Yes please!" Xin wagged his tail. Ford sighed. “I can find a smaller cliff.” He finally said. It wasn’t like he was actually getting bored himself or anything!

They found a smaller cliff for the wittle scared dragon. Ford had a determined look on his face, knowing he was at a lesser risk of dying here than when he was in space, or when he went into the woods, assured him a little, but he felt unsure with his new anatomy and fell clumsy as hell!

He didn't want to be a scared baby dragon though…

"Need help~"

"...Yes." And Xin, out of nowhere, sent him flying off the cliff again (but this time Ford was ready for it, and had asked him for this). Ford screamed on the way down again. But this time, he remembered to open his wings and hold them open as he went.

Xin sighed in relief when the idiot started flapping his wings. Fuckin' finally. Well, no, he wasn’t flapping, he was gliding, there’s a difference. “Good job Fordsie~!” Xin called out. Ford was laughing as he ‘flew’ around. “I’m FLYING!” He roared, shooting off some fire.

“No, you’re falling with style.” Xin called back. At least now that he could do that, it was easier for him to actually fly. He looked so cute. Like an excited little cub. “Hey Fordsie~” Xin purred, nudging him. “Now that you can fly…”

“Yes? What is it?"

“Let’s go have some fuuuun~!”

Ford had a bad feeling about this.

---

The pilot was just having a normal day, flying the plane, getting them onto a good spot where he didn’t really have to think much, this was a flight like any other, no problems what so ever. He yawned and glanced to the side, taking this time to admire the view.

It was so peaceful out there… up until it wasn't.

He started screaming at his copilot to LOOK UP!!!
The co-pilot, who was looking down at his phone, glanced up, but saw nothing more than clouds. "...what’s wrong sir?"

"YOU-YOU DIDN'T SEE IT!!! HOLY SHIT!!!" The pilot took his hands to his forehead, wide-eyed and gasping for breath.

"What was it?"

"It-It was yellow!! And-And LONG! And it had huge teeth!!! And yellow eyes-- and the thing looked at me!!"

The copilot grimaced a bit. "Are you feeling ok? Would you like me to take it from here?"

"I swear I-THERE!! HOLY SH-I-I-T!!" The pilot sobbed.

“Look, you’ve obviously been flying too long. Here, let me take over. Take a nap dude.

They changed places, but instead, the pilot searched for his phone and got ready to snap a picture. "It's impossible you didn't see it!!" He looked deeply into the front and side windows. "Where the hell is it?! It was huge!!"

The copilot sighed. Would he need to report this? The plane shook a little bit, sudden turbulence surely, and then the copilot heard his partner SHRIEK.

He looked fast towards what he was pointing and in the side window, he saw two big brown eyes staring at him, from a scaley blue face.

Now both men were screaming and trying to get help from the base, but to no avail, it suddenly stopped working. The FREAKING DRAGON moved his head a little bit to stare at them from the front window and blinked at them, almost looking… sheepish?! Then it let go of the side of the plane and glided away. The pilots were still screaming.

Wrong thing to do. They activated the microphone by accident and their passengers started panicking as their pilots sounded like they were being murdered. Things got more chaotic when dark shadows blocked out the light from outside the windows now and then. Also the turbulence. Someone looked out the window and screamed. “What are those?!” Everyone was freaking out, except the children, who were delightedly screaming, “A DRAGON!!”

The plane kept swinging from side to side as the giant creatures shifted places to look at them. The long yellow one blinked at one window and nudged it with its head. The woman at that window screamed bloody murder, but Xin and Ford couldn't hear anything since it was sound proofed.

Ford lifted his head up to look at Xin. "If the pilots get too scared, the plane could crash and they could get hurt, we should stop. This counts as terrorizing." He pouted. Xin sighed heavily. "Fine~~ But...come 'ere, we gotta show them we are wittle dragons curious of this human contraption and that we came in peace~"

The passengers all leaned to the opposite side of where the dragons were, fearing they'd tear the side of the plane. The flight attendants were trying to get them on their seats. Both were wrong. In any case they'd still die.

"The dragons are kissing!" A kid pointed excitedly. The people trying to activate their cameras were screaming because for some reason they didn't work!! But in fact, the blue and yellow dragon left the side of the plane, and flew away just enough to be seen. The yellow one nuzzled the blue one, licking at the other’s mane. With a muted roar, the two plunged down.
Now everyone was on the other side of the plane, pressed against the windows, trying to see them. But they were gone. Out below the clouds and gone. Everyone sighed, the adrenaline pumping through their veins making them hype as shit. And... of course, only NOW were their phones working!

Xin was looking at Ford as both dove down back into the ocean. "Come on. You gotta admit that was fun." Ford sighed, but he was grinning. "Well, a little. But it was still rather dangerous. What if something happened to that plane?"

"Don’t worry. I blessed it. They'll land safely with no issue. Look, a boat!! Come on~" They reached the water and sunk like cannon balls. That is to say, Xin dove into the water and swam easily, while Ford flopped around and sank beneath the water while struggling.

They didn't lose time at all. Xin rose from the water and landed on the ship, making the men on board scream their lungs out. He growled at them for being rude, don't scream so loud! Xin waited for Ford to climb on. Ford shook himself and stared at the poor men. He bared his teeth and growled.

Oh dear. One fainted.

The Xin happily went over the crates of ice with freshly caught fish. Yuuuum~ he shouldn’t be indulging, since he was supposed to be wasting energy... Xin quickly turned away and focused on the net that the men had just pulled up. It was filled to bursting with live fish. Xin began scooping them up into his mouth. But he wasn’t eating them, oh no. These fish were being teleported to the Island. Xin needed to give them more fish after all. A larger population to live in the oceans all around them. There were already plenty of sea creatures there, having been teleported along with the landmass when Xin had first sent it to it’s hidden spot in Gravity Falls, but with the recent expansion Xin had made to their ‘ocean’ area, well, he needed to fill it with food for the people.

While the yellow creature (many of them thought it was some sort of sea serpent) ate their fish, the fishermen stared at the blue one (that looked more like a dragon), it was looking around the boat with what seemed like curiosity. His nose twitched as he smelled everything and them. Their faces were very funny looking, Ford had to admit.

"It-It's ok boy...Just...Don't eat us..." The one who was being smelled by the large blue creature whispered, terrified. Ford snorted. Geez. That was the first thing he decided to tell a dragon?

"Why -Why isn’t my phone working, goddammit!!" Another man complained.

Xin finished taking half the fish to the island before walking over to Ford, slapping his head with a paw. The men watched the blue one nudge the paw back with its head. Oh no, were they going to fight?? But the blue dragon simply went over to the pile of fish and began eating his fill. And the yellow one nuzzled him, purring loudly. The fishermen stared, with their bodies trembling in fear, as the blue one sat back, licking around his mouth with a long tongue, cleaning himself off. And then the two creatures simply flew back up into the sky.

A couple fell to their knees as others finally felt safe enough to faint.

Meanwhile, Xin and Ford landed back on their rocky island and Xin laughed loudly. “Did you see the looks on their faces?! HILARIOUS!” He rolled around on the ground. Ford chuckled. “Yes, it was quite funny. But I think we should go back now. It’s been two days. I’m sure everyone’s worried. I know you’ve probably figured out a fix for your storage issue by now. I’ve seen how deeply asleep you’ve been.” (Ford wasn’t stupid, even if he was a bit oblivious. He knew that Xin must have gone back to his own side of the Door, and that meant he must have been working on his energy storage issue.)

Xin sighed. “Yeah, fine.” He licked at his paw and rubbed it against his feathers. “I’m gonna miss being a dragon with you though.” He told Ford. “You’re very handsome.”

Ford wagged his tail nervously, and looked away. "I...thank you...Um...It's always quite the experience to be with you as well...Even...fun sometimes." He gave him a tiny smile.

“Sometimes??”

“Most times.” Ford corrected. “But that’s still not all time.”

Xin made offended sounds. “Well! Well!” He scoffed. “Then I’m going to have to try harder to make it fun ALL times mister!” He bumped Ford’s side with his butt and Ford laughed. "Looking forward to that then."

Xin took both of them back to New Jersey. They were back in the mindscape, no dragon forms. He went to Ford's bedroom but...His body wasn't there.

Right. Seb was borrowing it…

He Flickered and winced at what he Saw.

"Where's my body?" Ford groaned.

"Do you really want to know?"

"...Yes."

So Xin took Ford to where the family was. Everyone seemed uncomfortable or pissed off. Shermie was about to throw hands.

"Well, and then I did this nerd thing that exploded in my face!" Ford's body said proudly before slumping in the chair. Seb gasped. "Oh Ax~ Ford, you should be more careful!"

'Ford' opened his eyes. "Hah! Surviving is the greatest reward, yes, I love it when I do that!"

Wanda was covering her face. "He went insane...Help."

When Seb was back in his body, Ford quickly dove into his own to stop this one-one conversation.

"Seb-"

"GOD, STOP IT SEBASTIAN!!!" Sherman screamed before swinging at 'Ford's stomach. The hit was caught, just in time. Ford's reflexes had kicked in. Seb, in his own body, widened his eye as Ford's body, now controlled by probably Ford himself, wheezed a little bit, he caught the blow, but Shermie punched HARD. "That...wasn't very good timing, Sherman."

"Holy Moses, you're back." Stan gasped.

Sherman punched Ford again, much to their mom's complaints of being civil. "That's for leaving us alone with Seb while he DOES this for the past two days!!"

Ford coughed. “Right, well, that was entirely Xin’s fault.”

“Gasp!” Xin placed his hands on his chest. “You would leave me all alone in my time of NEED?!!"
“Of course not.” Ford rolled his eyes. “But you didn’t have to put me in a vessel. We could have just hung out on the ocean for a while normally.”

"...What were you two doing?” Wanda and Carla asked suspiciously.

Ford coughed. "Oh well...Just...cryptid investigation…” His family didn't seem too convinced but they decided to drop it.

--- ---

“FORD! What the hell were you and Xin doing?! The sailors are all claiming they saw DRAGONS stealing their fish!” Wanda glared. To Ford’s relief, Xin raised his hand. “That was entirely my idea. Sorry. I just thought it would be fun.”

Ford knew about this. He had gotten messages from Fiddleford about how lots of people have sent messages and letters to the Research Center telling them about dragons and to do something about it.

Wanda groaned. “Unless you have a really good excuse, you’re gonna be grounded for an extra week.”

Xin wiggled, looking chastised. Amelie was giggling behind her hand, along with the teens. It was funny watching Xin, a grown man, get scolded. “I wanted to teach Ford how to fly and swim… and I needed some more fish for the people on the Island…”

“...you could grab fish from the ocean directly, and you KNOW it.” Wanda wasn’t backing down. Xin’s feathers drooped. “…I thought it was funny? And no one got hurt-”

“Those sailors are screaming at everyone they can see along the pier and beach to beware of the dragons. The cops were called, last I checked.” Wanda deadpanned. Xin winced.

"You could have told him no, you know that." Stan deadpanned at his older triplet. Ford grinned, hands behind his back. "Well yes...But it was fun...And Xin getting scolded is a hilarious thing to watch.”

Xin sent him a glare and Ford smirked. Xin’s eyes narrowed. Oh, so it was gonna be like that huh? Well, challenge accepted.

--- ---

Xin was hyped up on energy for a whole week before he apparently raised his energy storage well enough that he could eat again. Xin was floored by this revelation. How intense human worship was. (Though, perhaps it was more potent here, with humanity that weren’t just extensions of himself? Everything in his own dimension was made out of pieces of himself after all, so maybe getting worshipped by them just didn’t have as much of a kick to it.) He hadn’t messed with that too much in his own Earth. There were a few people here and there-- but he never went out of his way to be seen as a deity to people. He was fine with being a muse. Well, there was being a cat in Egypt, which was great- but it wasn’t quite the same? And Xin found himself wondering if he should actually go for it or not. Probably not. Too much. Being a god only meant more responsibilities. And he hated having responsibilities.

He was fine with the people self governing. Micromanaging his farmlands was enough work!

After his punishment for scaring the humans passed, Mabel had the idea to go to the beach and play something. Of course, her intention was TOTALLY spending time with family, and not because she wanted to see Max and show him all kinds of human things and admiring his pretty face lighting up at everything. Not At all.

They also invited Amelie, because she was just very nice to hang out with. Her parents didn't like her spending so much time with 'humans', but after telling them that the Pines were chill with magic (and in fact, were magic themselves, to a point), they were more comfortable to let their daughter play with them.

At some point a volleyball match started. The triplets and Shermie formed teams and everything. The only funny thing about it was how seriously they took it. As if their lives depended on it.

"You knucklehead!! Catch the ball!" "You idiot!! Don't hit me!" Stan and Shermie fought each other as they played.

Mabel and the others were playing less boisterously (though Mabel sometimes lost herself and started spiking the ball at high speeds). And Max loved the game, he got the hang of it pretty fast and didn't usually have trouble passing the ball to the other side (Mabel had to reassure the tall wittle reptile boy that no one would get angry the few times he missed) Amelie was quite good at it. Xin… on the other hand…

"Oof!!" The dragon face planted into the sand once again. He laid there, face in the sand and butt in the air.

Then the ball hit his butt. Hard. Again. Xin whined.

"Fez don't be a dick!" Seb called as Stan laughed his ass off. “It’s so BOUNCY!” Seb was smirking though, so his worry wasn't too sincere. Stanford was deadpanning at both of them for bullying the poor dragon. Dillon crouched beside Xin, “Wow. You’re really bad at this.”

“Mmph mm hmmmm!” Xin complained. He sat back up and wiped the sand from his face. “Gimme something to kick and I’ll take his head off…” He glowered in Stan’s direction. Amelie patted his head. “There, there. Everyone has things they’re good or bad at. There’s nothing wrong with that.”

They took a break from the game, it was obvious the Pines couldn't take it without fighting. Max was sitting next to Mabel, questioning her about the metal in her mouth. "It's a retainer, to hold your teeth still so they won't move and get all twisted."

"I don't get it, but cool!" Max smiled brightly. He pulled a little at his cloth belt's hem. He had been researching in the scrolls and clay tablets for information, but he had managed to transmute his cape into a long piece of cloth all by himself. He just wrapped it around his waist. He was just too proud of his new position, he felt useful, and needed and his parents felt proud of him for once in his life...It meant the world for him and he wanted to wear it.

"Oh!! I just realized I haven't shown you my phone! Here take a look! You can communicate with people even if you're far away!! And you get access to the internet, where you can learn anything you need." Mabel typed in clothes as an example and Max thought his brain was going to burst with how many things suddenly appeared in the box thing.

"Also, I got a tv in my hotel room, after this we can go watch stuff together~"

"Absolutely not!" Was Shermie's shout from somewhere.

"We're just friends!" Mabel smiled and glanced at Max. For now...
Shermie folded his arms. "Mabel Pines, as your father, I am telling you that you need to have your brother and cousins with you for any movie nights." Mabel rolled her eyes. "Sure dad~Not fun." Dipper and Dillon groaned loudly. As if they didn't have stuff to do! Max just looked adorably confused.

Xin raised his hand. "I can chaperone." He glanced down at the children. "And I can take the twins and Diego with us." Dipper jumped on this, "Yeah, the kids can go with Mabel. So me and Dillon don't have to." Dillon nodded, holding hands with Phillip. Stan grumbled a little. "Dillon needs supervision too. Diego, you go with him."

"Yay! I get to hang out with Phillip!" Diego cheered and ran towards the ginger boy who picked him up with a smile.

"Why does the Great Dragon want to come with us?" Max asked Mabel softly. "Does...Does your father not like me? I wouldn't hurt you if that's what he thinks."

"Eh... so he can spend time with us... It's not that dad thinks I'll get hurt, he's just afraid I'm gonna have too much fun," Mabel pouted at the chaperone. But she couldn't turn down the twins, who were chanting "'Movie! Movie!'"

"I thought humans liked to have fun too." Max was so confused. Mabel blushed a little and giggled. "Don't worry about that."

Xin followed the human and eix leel couple, with the twins holding each of the dragon’s hands as they made their way back to the hotel. As the twins were sharing a room, Mabel stole Dipper's tablet and settled in with Max on her bed while the twins climbed next to them, innocently unaware of the huge 'ruining of the mood' they were creating. For Zach and Zoe it was just hanging out with their cousin and a new friend. Xin sat on Dipper's bed to watch them.

"What do you want to watch? A movie is a...is a picture, a bunch of pictures that move so fast together that the images move and they tell a nice story you can watch!"

Max rubbed his (now hair-looking) feathers, confused. "Um...You can choose?" He wasn't sure if he understood the concept of a movie yet. Or a moving picture? He knew what drawings were, but how did they move?

She passed the tablet to the five year olds and told them to choose wisely. "It's Maxi's first movie ever, it has to be a good one." The twins gasped and nodded solemnly. They couldn’t believe Mabel was trusting them with such an important task.

As the twins searched and debated, Mabel leaned against Max's shoulder. She could sense the faint feeling of the pointed spines he had in his reptilian form. Magic was weird. She could feel them but...not actually grab them, nor his tail. His tail was hitting the pillow (very very softly, it was barely noticeable because of the spell) but when she waved her hand around it...she felt like a very dense mist? Without really hitting anything. Amazing~

"What sorts of stories do you like?" Mabel asked him, to see if there was a way to narrow down what sort of genre they could find for the movie.

"It's ok, we can um, watch a story you like." Max insisted but Mabel poked his cheek. "Nou~ It's YOUR choice! And your first movie! I wanna know what YOU like! I know what I like. But this is about you right now."

Max shifted awkwardly in place and glanced at the twins who were deadpanning at him like saying 'come on man, choose already'. He sighed and after glancing at the encouraging smile of the Great Dragon, he thought about it. "Well, when I was a pup...I loved hearing from the storyteller about the stories of the Gods, their adventures and all the things they've done for us...Also, stories of great adventurers and the...exciting things they've done. I have a friend, he's a merman, and he has been around the world a lot, he used to tell me what he saw...I'd love a story with, um, these moving pictures, about an adventurer's stories...or...A hero too. There's a story of a legendary hero in my town, that is known because she defeated an entire army with just a few other females! And she saved everyone and became a hero and everyone loved her! I liked it too because...it was rumoured that she had a few blue scales mixed in with the usual green, which, made eix leel not believe in her at first...But she did it, and, and the storyteller was great telling us about her story..."

Zoe blinked. "Isn't that Mulan?"

"What's a moo-land?"

“Hang on, Disney time!” Mabel grinned, setting up the movie. Xin giggled. “There’s a tiny little baby dragon in this movie.” He said in delight. Max stared. “They had pictures of dragons?”

“They’re drawings. Humans have such wonderful imaginations~” Xin told him with a big proud smile. Max frowned. Was he being too dumb to understand what was going on? The twins patted his arms. “You’ll see when we start watching.” Zach told him cheerfully.

Mabel hummed as the movie loaded. "You see, movies can be very different. One type can be moving pictures, you see real people and objects in there, but nothing happening there is actually happening, and the other one has moving drawings! A lot of different drawings put together to make it seem they're moving"

"Look, Max! The movie is starting!! Listen!!" Zoe hit his arm to call his attention.

The music started and Max's eyes widened as everything moved on its own. "Woah…"

"Welcome to post industrial technology, Maxi." Xin waved his hands around dramatically. Everyone gathered around the tablet to watch the movie, and Max found himself rather confused about what was happening. Why was the girl being dressed up all pretty to go see the matchmaker? That was something that men did. Max remembered when he was put before the village matchmaker, and was told that there was no way any woman would want someone like him. Even if he was great at everything a male should be good at, (he could even cook better than his brother, he liked finding new things to make fish taste different), no woman would want to mate with him, for fear of their children turning out so hideous.

"-fool of me. And bring honor to my family tree. Keep my father's standing tall~ " Well, he could relate a lot to that… and also to how the main character nearly missed the event altogether. Max was sure that even if his scales were decent looking, he'd still find some way to be rejected.

Max was feeling terrible after the girl's terrible mess with the matchmaker. She fucked it all up and now no one was going to marry her either. " Why is my reflection someone I don't know~? Somehow I cannot hide. Who I am Though I've tried~ " Max sobbed.

"I don't like this story, Mabel…" He sniffed, wiping his tears rapidly. "Is it ending already?" His father told stories like this to make his brother and him behave. Fuck up and you'll end up single and ugly, though Max is already ugly, so he needs to work extra hard if he ever wants a mate.

“Oh Max! Nooo, it gets better!” Mabel reached out to hug the sweet baby. “Lots of human stories have sad circumstances in the beginning, and they’re about the main character overcoming them and getting a happy ending.” She patted his hand as she wrapped her arm around him.

The story continued and the dense mist hitting the pillow got harder as his tail moved faster at the dragon's appearance. It made him smile and everyone was glad to see that.

"So...Human males go to war." "Yeah, biologically they're prone to be stronger than females so a long time ago only males could fight. Now though, many girls are part of the military and they're amazing!" Mabel explained with her hands on his shoulder. Xin wanted to correct her on the historical accuracy, but decided against it. No need to confuse Max even more.

"And...She is going to act like a human male to be accepted...But that's so easy! Human males and females look a lot more alike!" Max complained with a pout until his eyes widened. Oh~

The girl managed to do it and she became a good soldier throughout the movie. Mabel was right, the story DID get better! Which only made Max think harder about this brilliant idea he just had. All his life, everyone had told him he was such an ugly shade of green. Well, females were green, though theirs was a slightly different color, but Max was sure that with a little work he might be able to pass himself off as a small female?

The military had always been a great way to socially ascend, like his aunt and his sister. He could do that too! Like the mooland girl or the legend of the great female!

Xin sent him a raised eyebrow at the incredibly loud thoughts the eix leel boy was making and then watching him gasp loudly when Mulan was discovered to be a woman and everyone in the movie gasped, with the annoying advisor man sneering at her. "He-He can't kill her! Right?!!"

"No spoilers." Zach shrugged innocently.

Mulan's life was spared and Max fell backwards onto the pillow. Mabel patted his shoulder gently. Was the movie too much for someone seeing a movie for the first time? And a tablet? And a screen?

"You're not posing as a female in another village, Maxini." Were Xin next words at his apparent relief. "No one would spare your life like this and you know it."

"Great Dragon!" Max's green eyes widened. "Can you--" Mabel stared at Max incredulously. "Max no!! Movies are not so you go around imitating them!! Besides, I like you male!" she shook him by his shoulders. “You’re really handsome as a man!”

Zach and Zoe stared at Max with very judging looks and had to pause the movie at this. "No. Just no." Zoe shook her head. “If Max wanted to be a girl, you can’t tell him he can’t!” Zoe huffed, somehow managing to convey this controversial idea so simply despite only being 5 years old.

Zach on the other hand felt somehow offended. "But Max isn't a girl. Right? Mulan isn't a boy just because she dresses like one. She could be a boy but she even says that she isn’t. And even if she’s strong and good at fighting, that doesn’t make her a boy, she wants to be a daughter, not a son.” Zach huffed. He didn’t go out of his way to be all ‘manly’ like uncle Stan, he didn’t need to. He was still a boy! Zach asked Max carefully. “Do you feel like you’re a girl? Do you want to be a girl?”

Max blinked, not used to such intensity from children. “I...I suppose I don’t...No. I'm a male. I just...If Mooland could find a way to do it, maybe I could do it too. She also couldn't get married, but she...she didn't want to. I wish I could get married, that's what I...what I've always wanted in my Max liked his apprenticeship, and learning magic, because he liked learning, but his dream had always been being able to get married, like any male. If he couldn't do that… well, then his life was pointless, wasn’t it? But here. He was SEEING how someone actually managed to make it work in the military!

"Do you actually want to join your army?" Mabel grimaced. "Again. Movies are not to be imitated! And you MUST have other things you want to do! Right? Not just...get married… Which, is fine for some people but...That can't be the only dream you have...right?"

Max shifted awkwardly. To be fair, he had always wanted to travel like merchants did, or visit places, like his merman friend did, swimming around, but that was inappropriate. "No. It is. That’s all it is.” He lied.

"But...weren't you practicing? For-For priesthood? You told me!" Mabel insisted. "Yeah, my family and I were hoping that it'd make me more valuable for someone to finally marry me…” Zoe stuck her tongue out. Ew. Marry.

Mabel pulled at her hair. This physically burned her inside. It was so horrible!! Max wouldn't ACTUALLY believe he would only be worth something when he gets married right?? And seeing how his poop village was, being married felt like he'd be owned by someone! And she didn't want that! Women and men shouldn't be thinking that was the only worth they had!

The tablet beeped and Mabel noticed it was low on battery. "Hey kiddos, why don't you bring a charger...um, Dipper forgot the charger, but any of our uncles might have one. And you could take Max around the hotel!"

Max nodded as he followed the twins to walk around the...shared...palace place Mabel was staying at. (They had to explain that they didn't own the hotel.)

Then Mabel grabbed the kittie pillow she brought with her and screamed into it.

Xin sighed and looked at Mabel. "I think you gotta understand, Shooting Star...That Maxini comes from an entirely different culture than this yours. As well as a different species. It's sexist, yes, but it’s not quite comparable to what humans have nowadays." He told the distressed teen. "Max's world is centuries of progress behind, using magic only for ritual or religious purposes. And unlike humans, who needed to develop more technology to survive, they rely a lot more on their natural instincts and physical strength than humans do..."

Mabel wiped her tears with her sleeve. "I don't want him to think that way…"

"Give him time." Xin told her. "He'll learn while he's here, he's very intelligent, even if he doesn't believe it."

---

One day Amelie couldn't make it to hang out with the Pines, Mabel quickly decided to invite Max for dinner with them after his job. Xin helped teleport the daily pay of meat Max always got from his job back to his village. (The butcher thought Max's aunt asked for a very strange contract. )

Mabel ordered him a soup, he had never had soup before and observed the utensils deep in thought. Max knew those existed, but he only used big knives at his job and he had never used 'spoons' or 'forks'. The toddlers were more than glad to teach him how to hold them and after a few attempts, he weakly held it to eat his warm soup.
Mabel sighed dreamily as her twin narrowed his eyes at her. "Mabel...He's like a caveman...from a different species. Are you sure you really want to date a cryptid?" He whispered at her. Mabel scoffed (even as she told him, "Rude. He’s not a caveman!")

"Of course I do! I was so ready to date Mermando back then!" "How would that even work--"

Max coughed a little. "You-You said Mermando?"

"Um, yeah! He's a merman! He's king now! And married to a beautiful manatee queen. We met as kids!"

Max licked his spoon and gaped. "N-No way!! I-I KNOW him! He-he's the merman friend I told you about days ago! We've known each other since we were pups!"

Mabel shrieked and Stan gaped when the glass he was going to grab fuckin exploded.

"NO WAY!! OH MY GOSH!!! DIPPER DID YOU HEAR THAT?!" Mabel grabbed her twin by his shoulders to shake him. "I NEED to tell Mermando!!"

"First eat." Abigail sighed.

"Wait, Mermando? The fish man whose wife kidnapped you?" Shermie gasped. Small world!

"Yup! Dipper and I's first kiss!" Mabel waved a hand. Shermie spat his food, making Seb burst out into laughter as everyone grimaced. "For the last time, Mabel, I didn't kiss him!! I did inversed CPR!"

"Sure bro, anyway! GASP! I could tell Mermando and we could have double dates! I mean..I know we aren't dating dating yet but we could...work on that, right?"

Max had no idea what a date was, or a double one. He lifted his bowl to lick at the rests of food, and surprisingly, it was Zoe who lowered his arms. "Nono. No licking the plate. We only lick it at home."

"Woo! That's my baby!" Seb congratulated as Wanda smiled a little. "She's got the spirit."

"It'd be fun to see Mermando again with you." The boy nodded finally. Mabel cheered again.

"UM. Are we just going to iģnore the fact that Mabel's mabelness just made my glass explode??" Stan deadpanned and everyone in unison said "Yes."

--.--

Mabel used the magic mirror to contact Mermando after dinner. The merman was rightfully shocked when he saw his friend. He didn't recognize his human form, Max had to drop the spell for a second. "Maxini! You-You were allowed to get out!"

"I was! There's so much that has happened in the last year! You haven't visited!" Max laughed, wagging his now free tail. Mabel thought it was the most adorable thing ever.

"I'm afraid ruling takes much more time, my old friend. But with Mabel's family's help we can talk through these mirrors! Also, how did you meet my dear friend Mabel?? That’s such a coincidence?" The merman smiled widely.

The three talked animatedly for a few hours before it was getting late. The Pines told Mabel it was time to say bye to her friend and she could see him tomorrow. Mabel kissed his cheek. "Good by...You...can give me a kiss if you want to try." Mabel bit her lip in a smile.

Max nodded and after taking a second to think about the dynamics of a kiss, he pressed his lips against her cheek for 2 seconds before letting go. It was close enough and he did it with the best intention so Mabel melted under it.

The Great Dragon accompanied his 'embassador' to the rift and Max bowed as he changed back. "Was I good today, Great Dragon? I...I’m afraid I’m not good at human habits yet."

"You were amazing. And don’t worry so much, most humans don’t even know how to be human. You'll get used to it." Xin winked. "And Mabel enjoyed your company a hell lot. She really appreciates you." Max wagged his tail. "I...I enjoy her company too...She-She listens to what I say and has never told me to be silent, because I didn’t know what anything was or meant."

"We wouldn't do that." Xin assured as he purred at him. "Now go to your house and straight to your nest! It’s late and you need to sleep." He scolded softly. Max crossed the rift and Xin Blinked back to Ford's room.

Max grinned as he ran back to his house. He moved the door aside in the darkness of his village and was going to find his pile of sisters when suddenly he was forced to back up by a dangerous growl. His Dad had his spines extended as his mom stepped in front. "M-Max?!"

"It's me! Don't attack me!"

His Dad sniffed the air. "The heck are you smelling like?!!"

Max sniffed himself. He didn't know? "What-What is it?"

"Ugh! You stink of human, Maxini, get out, get the hell out!" Mis mom grabbed him by the neck.

"Mother no please, I don't want to sleep outside! Its cold!" Max whimpered as he was dropped outside the house. "Do you think we want you stinking like that inside the house?"

Max tucked his tail. "What if someone comes, please. Im scared."

"You should feel relieved if someone actually used you Maxini, we know your chances are very low." His mother rolled her eyes and Max ear fins dropped.

"Yes, mother." Max was left alone outside, feeling his body's temperature dropping. He also sniffed his arms and back again and started licking himself, trying to wash away the smell that bothered his parents so much. He curled up and sniffed.

His dad did come out with a warm stone for him though, he couldn't leave his own pup outside in the cold, and Max quickly wrapped his body around it. He would request the great dragon to help him clean up his human smell the next time he went to the outside.

"Geesh, man, are you ok?" Dipper winced at Max's exhausted look. "I know a thing or two about exhaustion and eyebags and you look terrible."

Max yawned and rubbed his eyes. "I-I'm sorry, Dipper. I couldn't sleep well last night. I wasn't allowed inside our nest because I had your human smell all over me... but that's my fault, I should have washed myself off first.
"They didn't allow you into your house?" Seb gasped and jumped up to look at the kid. "You ok?!" He pressed his cheeks together.

"Yes, Mr. Sebastian," Max said in a muffled voice. "My mom does that sometimes."

Dipper rubbed his neck as his uncle gasped even louder. Geez. Now that he knew what his uncle went through, it disturbed him even more. "Don't let Mabel know, ok? Shed get pretty upset on your behalf and would want to return to your village and fight them."

"...Mabel would try to fight my family? Why?" Max asked, confused.

"Um, yeah," Dipper left his hand on his neck. "You know, for leaving you outside and the neglect, I guess?" Max looked so clueless it scared him a little. “Look, we don’t like the idea of people being mistreated by others. Even if it’s your own family-- ESPECIALLY if it’s your own family.” Dipper looked uncomfortable, having to explain this.

"I'm sorry for upsetting you…” Max looked down, ashamed. "No, you didn't...It's more like, actually, I’m pretty sure uncle Seb wants to fight your family too as well.” Dipper glanced at the angry fire on his very angry uncle's arms.

“If Miz finds out, she might eat your family.” Seb deadpanned. Max gasped. “I don’t want that to happen!” Dipper winced. “Yeah… um… so don’t let her know.”

“Don’t let me know what?” Miz asked, popping up beside Dipper, who jumped away with a scream. Dipper and Seb thought as fast as they could to come up with an excuse. “Don’t… let you know… that there’s a new food contest opening up on the other side of town--” Seb lied terribly. Still, Miz’s eyes lit up and she ran over to pull on Wanda’s sleeve. “Mommy! I wanna go!”

Wanda sighed. She was pretty sure Sebastian was pulling her leg, but she patted Miz’s head with a, “After breakfast, alright? We can take a walk through the town after that.” Miz nodded eagerly, full distracted now.

Mabel got to breakfast then, having fixed up her hair and make up before this, since she knew Max was coming today. They were going to have a double date with Mermando after all! She gasped when she saw Max. "Maxi! What happened?! Are you sick?" She squeezed his cheeks with her hands as she got closer to her face. "Gosh, why do you look so awful and tired? Your eyebags are huge! You look like Dipper!"

"Hey!"

Max would have blushed if he could and looked down, tucking his illusioned away tail between his legs. "I'm sorry. I had a...bad night and didn't sleep well, I didn't mean to look awful." He had even gotten fresh water to clean his human face. It did look terrible.

Mabel pulled him for a hug. Max was a very tall teen as a human, Mabel's head barely reached his nose. "No, it's ok, I'm sorry for being so blunt and mean asking it like that. Are you tired? Do you want to rest today? Do you still want to go on a double date later? We could just stay so you can rest if you want to."

"But… But you wanted to go...you even put on your...face...paint, boss's wife does that too…” Max rubbed his arm.

“Your health is more important than some silly date!” Mabel told him. “I care more about you being okay, than about my makeup.”
"I...don't get to decide...do I?" A good man didn't bother his partner with what they wanted… Dad always listened to mom and his brother listened to his mate for everything… And Mabel… wanted to date (which had been explained to him was to become partners later-- courtship--) which meant he--

"Hey, of course you get to choose, you get to choose whatever you want, Maxi…" Mabel took a deep breath. Remember what Xin said. He had to see how things worked here. "I want to be more than friends with you, Max. And I wanted a date so we can get to know each other even more and have fun while we work on that, but you have EVERY right to say no if you don't want to. Heck, you aren't obligated to hang out with me either if you don't want to. I will never force you to do anything. If you have something to say, or something you want, I want to hear it! You got it?!" She pointed at him as her other hand rested on her hip.

Max gaped a little, his tail was twitching madly. Finally, he rubbed his eyes. "I...I'm cold, Mabel." The hotel restaurant had an air conditioner, making it fresh for a human, but freezing for a cold blooded species. He didn't want to bother her before, but...she said she would listen to him. That she wanted to listen to him--

"O-Oh. I can go ask them to turn down the power a little." She smiled at him a little. Max nodded and smiled too. "And, I'd rather nap…" Mabel tiptoed to boop his nose. "Ok! Then let's get this air conditioner turned down, have some breakfast and then we can go nap!"

Max held the offered hand, sooo warm, and let the human girl lead him to the table. He had a big smile on his face and he could hear his heart hammering rapidly against his chest. With his free hand he tucked his loose hair strands away. He really, really liked this human...didn't he? (Well, no one had ever told him that they wanted to hear what he had to say before…)

---

They ended up going back to Mabel’s hotel room to cuddle. Max liked how soft the beds here were, and how warm Mabel was. She stroked her fingers through his hair until he was relaxed and content. She had even turned on the heater and warmed up a blanket on it. He could hear her giggling, she said he looked funny, but he couldn't help rubbing his face on the warm cloth. Everything was so soft and warm, like napping on a warm rock on the beach but better because this was SOFT...

Max was knocked out cold/warm (?) and started thrumming loudly. Mabel was going to record it but got a message from Dipper, saying he wanted his room! Mabel huffed and typed back 'You owe me your first kiss with Paz, scram DippinDot!!'

Dipper groaned. “Fine, whatever. I’ll go hang out in Dillon’s room instead…” But Dillon was with Phillip in there, so Dipper groaned again and went to ask if he could hang out in Miz, Zach and Zoe’s room. They were out with Wanda, walking through town to the "Eating contest!" (Uncle Seb saved his ass from Miz's rage, saying he had plans with his triplets), so at least their room was free. So Dipper went to hang out there with his phone. He was happy Mabel was having fun, but with all the other times she’s dated, or had failed summer romances… well, Dipper didn’t want to be a pessimist, but he wasn’t sure if this would work out or not.

And Dipper didn’t want to see how she’d feel when her heart was broken once again. Dipper tugged at his hat, sighing. Max seemed like a nice boy, a heck of a lot nicer than some of the human boyfriends Mabel had in high school, but... still. They were different species, from different cultures. And while Dipper didn’t see a problem with the idea of dating a cryptid, he was worried about her.
He looked at the ceiling, and then curled up on his side, thinking. Did Max really like his sister? Or maybe he was happy with the attention he was receiving from a group of humans. That would be valid, but he didn't like that for Mabel. Maybe dating would bring them closer, dating existed for that reason after all! Learning about each other. Dipper himself didn't like Pacifica right away...So maybe Mabel and Max could really actually start liking each other for real during this time--

Dipper started coughing as he choked on the collar of his shirt he was chewing and trying to swallow. "Gah!!" He pulled at his wet shirt in disgust. "Urgh...darn it." He never outgrew this.

Max felt like he was in heaven when he woke up a couple hours later. Mabel had not moved and she was still asleep, but he did notice her face paint (make...up?) was darker under her eyes now. He chuckled and nuzzled her side.

Mabel didn't take long to wake up herself. She stretched and was ready to speak to Mermando and his wife. Unfortunately, they were busy for the meeting so Mabel decided to spend the day another way! She grabbed some snacks from her bag and cuddled into Max's chest. "Ok! These are called snacks! We have salty ones like chips, pretzels and doritos here! You've had any of these ones before?"

Max shook his head. "I've never eaten human food before eating with your family." Mabel hummed. "Ok, we'll take it easy, ok? I don't want you getting sick or anything."

"Do you think I could get sick?" Max asked sincerely and Mabel hummed. "Well~ I am not really sure...I'm not the cryptid expert...But Miz gets drunk on chocolate and I don't want anything making you feel bad later. I'll text Dip for good measure."

"Ok! Dipper says we can go for it but not go so crazy!" Mabel opened a bag and held it for Max. Max opened his mouth and put the chip in it. He chewed and blinked a little bit. "It...has salt."

"Yeah, that's why it's a salty snack. Do you like it?" "It leaves my mouth dry...but it's good!" Max laughed.

Mabel found out a lot of things. Max's favorite color was red because he'd love having that color of scales ("I love all colors, but green is being my favorite these couple of days~" was her eloquent response that made the eix leel squirm, flustered) He loved going to the beach ("Me TOO!") He enjoyed cooking fish ("Why, I'm a cooking expert myself~") and liked watching this sport in his village that was about teams hitting a ball with some sticks or hitting the opponents. It was only played by upper classes between villages but unofficial games were done among the townsfolk too, especially between the pups. ("That sounds like Lacrosse! I'm taking ya to a game sometime!")

And "Do you wanna have kids?" Mabel absolutely melted under those bright green eyes and his soft look. GOSH HE DIDN'T HAVE TO MAKE HIMSELF SO SEXY!!! HER POOR HEART!

"I'd love to have kids, my brother has his kids already as well as my old friends and I'd love to be a father..."

She snuggled closer to Max. What would she need to do to marry this guy? Maybe fight a female eix leel? Would the Queen send her warriors at her? Were marriages between humans prohibited unlike Selkies like with Amelie’s aunt? It probably prohibited, seeing how the eix leel reacted to her family...

With Mabel cuddling into Max's chest, the boy grabbed his arms around her from behind to hug her, almost afraid to do so. But Mabel was soft. And she didn’t seem to mind being enclosed like this, even though it was a 'trapping' type of grip, for catching prey or wrestling an opponent to the ground. "I like this..." Max confessed. Humans had so many interesting ways of expressing themselves. What he saw as a potential dangerous grip had a potential to be beautiful, something Mabel loved ...and Mabel trusted him to do it.

"Me too! You're so tall and you have really strong arms for hugs~" Mabel caught his arm and hugged it tightly.

Max chuckled when he realized it was once again a 'hug', and she wasn't trying to pull off his arm.
"Is...this what human courtship is about? Wrapping your arms around the other but not in a dangerous way, but to show you appreciate them?"

"Yes!" Mabel cheered.

"I don't know anything about human courtship...If-If we are going to court before becoming mates..." Max nuzzled Mabel, who giggled when he tickled her neck. "What else do you do? I want to do it correctly."

Mabel put a finger on her lips as she thought about it. "Well, dating has a lot of options...Some people go out to eat in a restaurant and chat! Others do activities together, like going to a party or dancing or some cool games or the cinema! And what we are doing...cuddling, eating chips...talking about what we like and don't...That's also a really good way of dating. In fact, I think I prefer this..." She sunk into his chest and sighed contentedly.

"Huh..." Max thought hard. "I like making my clothes look human...Most were just given to me by the priestesses, but I make my own human shoes, they're weird and I like it." He stared at his handmade boots, which were taken off and left beside the bed. You didn’t wear your shoes onto beds, Mabel had explained to him (and the great dragon had vehemently agreed with.)

Mabel laughed. "Well, I love making sweaters! So that's a plus! I can make sweaters for when you're cold!" Max laughed at that. "Great!" Then he thought in the rest of her words.

"I don't like working with my boss...I...I’m bored. I clean fish at home everyday too. And I do the same here, but with exotic meat and I don't get to eat it, just with you, the meat goes home to the priestesses and the queen. I don't like my job, I don’t hate it, but I wish I could do more...” He’d had dreams as a pup, dreams that he’d discarded, given up on, as he grew up and realized those would never come to fruition.

“Yeah that sounds boring.Reminds me of my old job” Mabel agreed. “What would you want to do instead?”

“I... I don’t know.” Max said. Could he tell her about the silly dreams he had as a pup? Would she laugh? No, Mabel wanted to hear what he had to say.

"Well, you've got all the time in the world to decide whatcha wanna do! It's not like you're dying at ten..." Mabel paled. "How long do you live?? Is 19 still a teen for you?"

"I...am an adult?? Should have had pups years ago...A neighbor reached 90 years old a few days ago?" Mabel sighed in relief loudly, melting on his chest. "Ok...you've got time...for your dreams..." She said quite breathlessly. “And whatever they are, I wanna help support you for them!”

"Huh...I..guess so.” Max wrinkled his nose in thought. Then he blinked. “You would really want to support me?” Mabel nodded. “Duh! You’re my friend Maxi. And friends support each other! Even more if we were dating to be more than friends, eh?”

Max grinned, he really liked Mabel's directness, to tell him directly that she was interested in courting. It really made him feel...less of a freak. "Thanks."

"Oh, it's nothing, Maxi~" Mabel sighed happily. "So when you know what you wanna do, I'll be here to listen and help!"

Max couldn't believe he finally found someone who liked him and wanted to court him... someone he actually felt comfortable with, made him feel pretty and heard...and it was from a completely different species…

(And Max realized he didn’t care if they were different species. Mabel was Mabel, and she was the kindest person he’d ever met.)

---

"Great Dragon, Mabel." Max welcomed them as they approached the meat stand.

“Hey Max~” Mabel waved. Max was packing up some of the exotic meats to send back to his Queen and Priestess right now. “I’ll be done soon.” He told them. Mabel grinned. “It’s fine. I don’t mind waiting.” And if she could just watch the ways his muscles flexed as he worked, well~

Once Max was done, and Xin poked the wrapped bundles of meat to teleport them (saves time waiting for Max to take them home and then come back) the three headed off to the beach.

That was where the kids were spending today playing, and Mabel liked playing on the beach too, so she had no issue with it. Dipper sighed in relief once they showed up, Zoe and Diego hanging off his arms. “Finally! Backup!”

Zach was quietly playing by himself, though Xin quickly went to join him.

Diego ran up to Max and tugged on his pant leg. “Help me make a sand castle!” He grinned.

“Ah… ok?” Max let himself be pulled away by the excited child.

Max was quietly helping Diego build his sand castle when his big brother, Dillon approached and sat down with the human with bright red hair. "Oh~ Nice sandcastle." Phillip congratulated the toddler (and Max), both smiled, equally excited. "It's Max's first sandcastle!"

"Oh, nice." Phillip wasn't aware of Max's status as 'non human', he just knew from Dillon that he was Mabel's summer romance and that Max’s family was scary and tried to kill them, which really disturbed the ginger boy. He was pretty handsome though. Good job, girl. "How's everything man?"

"It's--" Dillon interrupted him "Sorry, sorry, Dad's calling me. You ok staying with them right, sweetie?" "Yes yes, just go." Dillon lowered his head and kissed his boyfriend before trotting away.

Max gaped. He looked at Diego and then back at the boy with bright hair. "You...Mabel said kisses were for affection...A-Anyone can kiss?"

"Yeah, anyone can kiss…” Phillip narrowed his eyes confused, though he had a weird accent… "-though you kiss your partner on the lips, it's even better~" Phillip said and laughed easily when Diego stuck his tongue out, he poked his belly.

"You...Are you saying you are...partners?" How was that even possible?!!

"Yup! For years now! Dillon's ma boyfriend."

"But, both of you are male! Why would-how do you--What?!" Max was grimacing and hard. It was literally incomprehensible. Diego pulled his hand. "People love each other, it doesn't matter who!" He said like a good boy.

"But it matters, why would you be together? You can't give each other babies! I don't understand what-why would you do this?...You-You should go with a female, that's how things work…Or do you go with...other males when females dont like you…?” Phillip frowned and narrowed his eyes a little.

"Woah. Thats like, super homophobic of you man."

"What? I just don't understand…"

"I think you got pretty sure I shouldn't be with my boyfriend, but guess what? We’re getting married and we don't care what people like you say!" Phillip poked him in his bare chest. Max stepped back flinching and Diego watched, very confused.

"Hey! Phillip what are you doing?" Mabel caught up to them and stepped between them.

"How can you be dating him? I thought you were better than this...Come on, he's being an asshole!"

Mabel grabbed Phillip by his shirt and pulled the tall teen down to her eye level. "The FUCK did you just say about Max??"

"He-" Phillip cowered. "He just said I'm dating Dillon...because I don't have 'females' that like me, what kind of guy you're dating??"

"Um, maybe a guy who isn't human?!” Mabel roared at him. Then she turned at Max with a completely different look. "Maxi, do you know about relationships like this? A boy who loves a boy? Or a girl who loves a girl?"

Max, in shock at the way Mabel came over to defend him, blinked to focus and shook his head. "I-I ve never heard of something like that…"

Mabel dragged her cousin's boyfriend closer to herself and whispered "Are you calling a boy an asshole, when he’s only been in the human world for a few months?! A guy that lives in a world completely different from ours where he's only seen as useful for the sole purpose of giving the females eggs?? And who hasn’t even seen a gay guy in his life before?!"

"I-I didn't know…” Phillip squeaked and was let go. "I-I'm sorry...I thought you were attacking me, I-I didn't know you weren't human." Phillip sheepishly apologized to Max.

Max blinked. "Ok...but I still think you're wrong." he pouted. (“Yeah, sorry, that still offends me.” Phillip deadpanned.) Mabel let Phillip fall to the sand with an 'oof!' and grinned sheepishly at him. "We'll work on it. Adding sexuality to the list of things Max gotta learn about~"

“Seriously though,” Phillip grumbled. “Even if he’s from a different culture, I don’t like him telling me to my face that I’m wrong for loving who I love. That’s still rude, no matter what.”

Mabel sighed. "I apologize for him, Philly, he's still learning a lot of stuff, I'll make him a good ally."

Phillip crossed his arms. "You better. Or start forgetting about the plans for a triple wedding."

"Nooouuuu!!" Mabel dramatically moaned. "I promise!" She solemnly put a hand on her chest. Phillip took Diego with him and Max and Mabel stayed together (Zoe had gone over to play with Zach and Xin). Mabel knelt next to Max, who was sitting and staring at the water, and she put her face in front of him, giving him a tense smile. "We gotta talk, baby." He nodded, still looking confused.
"Ok so, you said you've never heard of that kind of relationship? Or is it kind of prohibited where you live?" Max shook his head. "I've never heard of something like that...In the priestesses's notes I haven't seen anything related to it...so it's not prohibited? But I don't get WHY they'd do it and not produce eggs...If they can't fulfill their role with a female."

"Ya, ok. So, humans don't get together just to have kids, ok? People love different kinds of people and get together just so they can spend their lives together with the person they love, like Dillon and Phillip, they really love each other, no matter if they can make kids or not. Humans sometimes love someone from the same gender and that's totally ok, got it?" Mabel stroked his chin.

Xin approached them and Max bowed his head a little. "Hey, I saw what happened with Phillip." Xin stroked Max's hair. "I know a lot of human things are surprising and confusing, but not everything's about reproduction, despite what you were taught. In fact, don't tell anyone but the 8th priestesses is seeing a merchant female in secret, so this exists in your world too, though is very hidden and severely regulated because of the rigid gender roles you're given."

Max was still gasping a little. This happened back home too?! He never realized that. "But… what about the eggs?"

"Not everyone wants to produce eggs. Some people care more about loving the person they want to love." Xin told him gently. Then he leaned closer and whispered, "After all, you like Mabel, don't you? She can't lay eggs."

Max blinked. "T-that's different. She's a human, and humans don't lay eggs." He looked flustered. Mabel only heard what Max said aloud, missing the thing that Xin whispered to Max. "Well, humans have eggs, but they're different. They don't lay them out like your people do. We carry babies inside our bellies."

Max shivered. That still sounded so scary to him. "And that's why human females weren't allowed to be soldiers for a long time, because they didn't want the babies inside them to get killed in combat?" Mabel nodded, "That's one of the reasons."

"With my people, the females lay the eggs and then they can just leave the eggs with her mate when she goes to war." Max told them. "It's easier, and even if she died in combat, the children are safe at home." And then the surviving male will be given as a mate to the next available female, with the deceased female's family having priority and then passing him on as need be.

"...that doesn't seem much better." Mabel pointed out. "Can't they just send the people who don't have eggs or children? Wait, do you guys have a draft?" She gasped. When Max asked what a draft was, and they explained it, he nodded. "Well, they do have the females tested to see how large and strong they are." No point sending someone weak to get killed needlessly.

"Also, since the other tribes also have mating season around the same time, we generally don't go to war at that time. So it's not that bad."

Xin frowned. "What do your people even go to war for? Resources?"

"Yes." Max nodded. "If we need supplies that we can't get, we send raids on the other tribes. Well, first we attempt to trade, but if they refuse, even after we tried a few times, we take them by force." Xin winced at that. It came down to resources in the end, didn't it? At least something like that could be fixed, by just making more and giving it to them, which… fair's fair, only worked when they had a powerful god behind them that could just create stuff out of energy. Still, it was still better than attacking just 'cause they didn't like each other.
"...Yikes". Mabel whispered. "That still sounds kinda awful." Like, fighting and killing each other was bad to begin with. And wars were like super fights. She was older now, less naive, and she knew that sometimes you had to fight. But the idea of people being drafted and sent to fight even if they didn't want to was... still upsetting.

Xin patted Max's head. "Well. Humans are different. But even now, there are some issues with acceptance and the reason Phillip got so mad at you was because the things you said really hurt his feelings. Because they're the type of things people have said to him, to try and tell him that he's wrong for loving who he loves. And he thinks that such a thing is unfair and wrong, because other people aren't allowed to decide his preferences for him."

Max nodded slowly. When it was put this way, he thought he could understand. "But what about matchmakers? They decide who you marry?"

"Which is also unfair." Xin huffed. "The point of a matchmaker is to help you find someone you'll work with as partners, but if you don't like the person they choose for you, you shouldn't be forced to marry them."

"But... it's the orders from the Queen--" Max said quietly. "Screw that. People should get a choice. It's not fair otherwise!" Xin huffed again, almost looking like he would spit fire. "I mean, sometimes, people can choose to go along with it. Because they're passively accepting it, or too afraid to go against people... but... That doesn't make it right." He muttered, clutching his arms together.

Mabel reached out to hug Max to herself. "What we're trying to say is, we believe people should get to choose who they want to be with. But currently in the human world, there are people who claim that they have a right to choose for other people. And we think that's stupid. And Phillip and Dillon have people objecting to them being together, and Phillip thought that you were trying to tell him he's not allowed to love Dillon."

Max nodded. Yeah, he understood how that would offend and upset the red haired man. "Should I apologise?" He asked. Mabel nodded. "Apologise and tell him how you feel, after learning a bit more about the subject."

Max nodded and walked towards them. He was barefeet and Mabel winced a little, thinking how the burning hot sand would hurt his feet...and then she felt silly after she remembered Max's body was actually a physical illusion. She and Xin followed him to make sure everything went fine.

Phillip stared at the younger man bowing his head at him. "I'm sorry, fire hair man... Mabel and the Great Dragon, um, explained that humans don't always care about making babies when they choose their mates...I didn't mean to offend your human relationship with Mabel's cousin...or...tell you who you should marry or court...You should be able to love whoever you want...Like how...I like Mabel."

Xin nudged Mabel and she squirmed happily.

"Oh, well, It's good you understand that now." Phillip managed to give him a small smile. "And stop bowing, it's not something humans do, man, just sit down..." Dillon rolled his eyes. "I'm glad you're going to understand more stuff...but I kiiinda get it. Your city was very shitty, trying to murder us and shouting at ya for being male. Wouldn't be surprised if you thought marriage and dating was only for the sake of making kids." He rolled his eyes.

Max smiled and sat in front of them, hugging his long legs. "The Great Dragon told me the same...Bout...regulating with our roles... I always thought...having babies came after courting. All the couples make eggs during mating season...But I guess it doesn't work like that...After all, Mabel's courting me to marry me and we can't have babies even we both want them."

Mabel choked with her tongue and had to lean on an amused Xin to cough. Ma-Marry??!! Right nOw?!

Dillon and Phillip blinked. "Uh...Marrying?"

Max nodded excitedly, not realizing Mabel was close. "She said she's courting me to be more than friends and courting or how you humans call it, 'dating', is to know each other before marrying!!"

"...Guess you didn't explain this to him very well, Shooting Star." Xin giggled as Mabel pulled at her hair. Nooouuuu! She liked Max but she didn't want to marry yeeeettt~!!

And-- she liked Max a lot. But marriage was a big deal! "A-ah... marriage is still a thing we don't know for sure yet!" Mabel said quickly. "I mean, I have to really get to know someone first before I decide that they're the one I want to spend my life with--"

Xin grinned slyly as he said, far too casually, "As a god of the Harvests, I'm perfectly capable of fertility Blessings. And I HAVE in fact Blessed a wedded pair from different species so they could conceive children together~" he purred. Mabel was bright red. "I'm too young to have kids! I'm still in college! I don't plan to get married until I'm at LEAST a full adult with a career!" Nevermind children! Mabel wanted kids someday. But not right now! She still had so much to do with her life, to grow as a person-- she wasn't experienced enough for kids!

"That's very mature of you, Shooting Star." Xin nodded solemnly. "Marriage and children are a lot of responsibility. Most people rush into it, because they think they're supposed to, and they end up miserable."

"Yeah, Phillip and I aren't getting married until we're both done with school," Dillon told them. "And... we're planning on adopting a kid, but not until we have enough financial stability and time to be able to raise them properly."

Max rather thought this was all incredibly complicated. Why didn't one of them just stay home to care for their pups? But apparently for humans, both partners had to work. That sounded awful. How would the children get the attention they needed?

Then his eyes widened. "Wait. Mabel, you-you aren't--" he glanced at the Great Dragon and then at Mabel. He really liked her, he really really liked Mabel, she was so nice and sweet... He wanted to be good enough for her, the best. He wanted to be able to take care of her and satisfy her needs. He could learn. He learnt the priestesses' stuff when no one thought he could, he could work on this too.

He walked over towards Mabel, towering over her as he grasped her hands into his. His hold was gentle and his bright green eyes were sparkling. "I'd never want to lose you, Mabel. I want to work on it so that we're both good for the other, so you would want to marry me when it's a good time for you." He paused before lifting her hands gently to press against his cheek. "And more than that, I want to be someone whom you would want to marry." Because Max already wanted her. It might be him being naive, but Mabel was the most positive affection and care that Max had ever known. And he... liked it. Liked her. He didn't know if this was what 'love' was, and this wasn't something that his family would ever approve of, but Max had a taste for what being respected and acknowledged felt like now, and he didn't want to lose that.

Mabel sniffled and threw herself over him to hug tightly. (Xin cheered silently at the Social Link UP that popped up over both their heads. Yes! His shipping was coming to fruition!) Max slowly hugged her back and Mabel sent her cousin and his boyfriend a teary smile and pointed at the tall hot guy she got for herself.

Phillip snorted as Dillon gave her 2 thumbs up. Xin was way too smug. But Mabel didn't care. She was feeling so overwhelmed with fluffy feelings right now. And she loved it. Hadn't felt this in years! Frankly, she thought that joyous fluttery feeling was something she'd outgrown, but she was glad she hadn't, it felt so nice.

"Do you wanna be more than friends already? We have an in between phase, called being boyfriend and girlfriend." Mabel told him. "And it's um… a step forward to reaching the point where marriage is an option…" she twirled a lock of hair around her finger as she giggled, the fluffy feelings were everywhere!

Max had managed to get flustered again, something that amazed Xin to no end (because HOW?! This species couldn't even blush), and Max rested his forehead on Mabel's own before letting a soft grumbling sound with his eyes closed. Mabel giggled excitedly when he gently nuzzled one side of her face. "I like the idea…" He whispered and Mabel swooned at the deep voice that was produced. Even Phillip and Dillon had shivers.

"Can I teach you a new kind of kiss?" Mabel waited for the nod and tiptoed to kiss him on the lips. Max's eyes widened incredibly big.

"That's a bf-gf type of kiss~"

"Bee eff? Gee?" Max asked. "Boyfriend and Girlfriend." Mabel explained. Max wondered how those words were anything alike, but just shrugged and went with it. He also licked his lips, wondering at that feeling. Having something press against his mouth felt sort of weird. It was almost like a food response, since 'stuff against mouth' was usually for eating. But it wasn't food, it was Mabel. So it left Max feeling a little confused. Food response was good, it made him happy to eat, but this wasn't eating. But it still felt good, a rush of endorphins (not that Max knew what those were) going through him at the feeling of something pressed against his lips for a short while.

The reason humans like kissing is because human lips contain a lot of nerves, so having the mouth stimulated sets off all sorts of signals to their brain. Max's people weren't quite the same, but the resulting endorphin spike created the same effect. So Max beant his head down, and kissed Mabel again, trying to pinpoint his feelings, to figure out what this sensation was.

And Mabel full on blushed as Max kissed her, ok it wasn't kissing. He was just nudging his lips against hers, rather unevenly, as he had no idea what he was doing, and it was a rather sloppy sort of 'kiss' but Mabel shivered anyway. Ooooh~ how forward~ she hadn't expected that.

So Mabel held Max's head in her hands and moved it a little so she could sort of teach him, via touch, how a kiss worked. Phillip and Dillon had to look away to give them some privacy. Xin on the other hand, was staring at them, enraptured by it all. Dillon gave him a little smack. "Dude."

"What? I'm just looking." Xin pouted. He did finally look away, to check on the kids, they were still quietly playing in the sand. And by quietly, he meant that Zoe had stolen the flip flops from another child and was using them to make a fortification for her sand arches. He sighed. "Hang on, I need to go deal with this." And the dragon went off to convince Zoe to give them back as the other child cried loudly. Geez this girl!

After several very long seconds, Mabel had to pull away to breathe. "Gosh! Maxi, that was the...longest kiss I've had! You don't even have to breathe?" She laughed, obviously breathless.
Max didn't even look a bit winded as he smiled.

"We can hold our breath for 2 hours...I didn't know 'kissing' was tiring for humans." And they still liked to do it...Huh. It felt pretty nice though, he could see why they'd do it even if they could die. Humans were pretty hardcore.

Mabel's eyes widened a little. "Well, humans can't hold their breath very long, I can only manage like...35 seconds."

"...You must have really small lungs. How sad~" Max chuckled, sounding almost teasing. Mabel pouted and playfully punched his arm. "You're the worst~"

Max flinched and shut up, before Mabel quickly waved her hands. "It's an expression!!! A human expression! It's meant as a joke. You're not actually bad!! It means-uh-ugh. I gotta remember you're not going to get it..."

Mabel was gonna have a lot more to do with teaching Max about human stuff.

--.--

The Pines had the privilege to be informed about Mabel and Max's current relationship status...after Mermando. Of course friends came first duh! Mermando was very happy for them and knew his old time friend was going to be fine, Mabel was so sweet and kind. He was glad Max had found someone who would love and care for him. Mermando had heard a lot about female Eix Leel and he didn't think Max would do well with that kind of partner.

"Hey family! I'm officially introducing you to~ Max! He's my new boyfriend now! Isn't he the sweetest--" She put a finger on her cheek.

The family was at the pool of the hotel this time, and blinked in perfect unison (except for the kids who didn't care and Dillon who already knew).

"Well...you do you, shooting Star!" Seb gave her thumbs up.

"It's been 2 weeks." Shermie deadpanned. Stan threw him a pool noodle from the other side. "Ah! Let the pumpkin be, you party killer! Carla and me dated from day one and look at us!!" Carla squirmed to be let go when he caught her. ("It’s Carla and I. “ Ford corrected absently. “Bitch you’ve never dated Carla!” Stan protested. Ford rolled his eyes, “That’s not what I meant--")

"Also, am I hearing teen dad talking??" Seb put a hand behind his ear and Stan let out a loud "WOOOOOO!!" before fist bumping him.

Shermie threw a beach ball at Seb's head. "I'm not the only one here with unexpected parenthood!" He told Seb with a huff.

"Sure! Your wife! HAHA!" Stan and Seb laughed loudly. "We. ARE on FIRE!" Seb raised his hand and fire flickered to life on his palms. This time, Abigail threw her flip flops at both triplets, hitting both perfectly (from perfected rolled sock throwing at twins because damn them for being just as sassy as her husband.)

"EH HEM! Can we stop making this about dad and focus on us?" Mabel grumbled.

Xin giggled as Ford, leaning against his shoulder, blinked confused. Bothering Shermie about what happened almost 20 years ago was so immature. "Well congratulations on your boyfriend ...(?)" He smiled at his niece.
"Why THANK YOU Uncle Ford! The only one who actually cares~" She sent Dipper a glare, who shrugged helplessly. "Congrats? I mean it was kinda obvious you'd start dating for real."

Mabel huffed. Her family just wasn't as excited about this as they should be. "We should have a couples party." She grinned. Maybe that would make things more exciting for people.

Xin perked up, "Party?"

"Absolutely none of you can drink." Stan waved a dismissed hand. "Well, Philly boy can, but I say no, and he can't drink."

"Yessir, absolutely sir." Phillip nodded quickly.

"We don't have to drriiiink~" Mabel dramatically leaned against Max, who easily caught her with his...big...muscle arms… oh~ Mabel traced a finger over it. "Uhh~"

"Max, I totally forgot to ask you, your family isn't going to like, come kill us for dating right?"

Max's smile was wiped off his face. Well, he wasn't planning to TELL them, so it didn't matter if they liked it or not. "I dont care." He said, defiantly. Xin clapped and let out a "Whoo! Fight da POWAH!"

"Well, as long as you're both happy, then I don't see any issue." Abi told her daughter. "But if he ever hurts you or anything…” Abi gave Max a stern look.

"I'd never hurt Mabel, I already want to marry her--" Max shamelessly said, making everyone turn to look at him. "We are doing this...bee-eff-gee-eff, to see if we're both the best for each other."

Mabel giggled sheepishly with her face completely red. Abigail looked rather impressed. Dipper just rolled his eyes. "So… that’s three people who just straight up wanna marry you after knowing you for like, a couple weeks,” he joked. “Well, Jeff only knew you for a few days, but I think my point still stands.”

“What can I say? I’m just irresistible~” Mabel winked at her brother while Max just smiled. Yes she was. Max gave her another one of those ‘hugs’ that humans liked so much, and that he found himself falling in love with. Normally, grabbing someone like this was for catching prey or capturing an opponent. And normally it meant that someone died. But with humans, no one died and you get to just keep holding the person! And Mabel was warm so Max liked holding her. So Max got to indulge in his hunter instincts by ‘catching’ Mabel and then he could just hold her! IT was great!

Mabel looked at her family smugly. "This guy learns fast!"

And then Max gave Mabel a kiss and it was much better this time.

“......he really does learn fast.” Abigail deadpanned.

Shermie was torn between being happy for her and his need to be an overprotective dad. His eye twitched and Seb poured water over his head and turned him around. "There. There. Steam's coming out."

Phillip scoffed, putting on a false-snooty air. "Well~ Dillon and I had been dating longer and we said before that we're getting married someday~ So I ain't losing my privileges of being welcomed into the family first." (‘Hey, you know about me, so that already means you’re welcome here.” Xin cheered.)
"You're a dork." Dillon rolled his eyes and kissed his nose.

"Well, Max knows about you too, so, hey! I guess he's welcomed here too!" Seb exclaimed. "Great way for bursting my boyfriend's bubble, Uncle Seb."

"Hey! Paz and I have been together longer!! Is meeting Xin the requirement?! Does this mean she isn't welcomed yet?" Dipper exclaimed, offended.

“Um… doesn’t Mabel need to breathe at some point?” Stan pointed out, and everyone turned to see Mabel swooning over and gasping for air, loudly, filling her empty lungs.

She leaned against Max, dizzy (with the euphoria of oxygen deprivation) but with a huge smile. "Woah…That's...better than smile dip..." She didn't see a problem of kissing someone who didn't need to breathe for 2 hours at all!! This was the best thing ever!!

The family was now a little worried.
Chapter 35: Summer ends

And then, at the end of the summer, the twins turned 19 themselves. And it was time for Shermie and Abi to cheer.

To no one’s surprise, Max was at the hotel lobby early in the morning, wiggling his butt excitedly as he waited for his girlfriend to come down. He held a box in his hands, having learned that humans wrapped their gifts and tore them apart to satisfy their primal apex hunter instincts. He could appreciate this human tradition. It sounded so fun!

After Mabel was crushed with hugs and kisses along with Dipper by her family, she ran towards the boy and threw herself over him, laughing.

“Max! Oh my god! You got this for me?!” She gasped as her eyes welled up with tears a little bit. She opened the box and there was a bright pink pig stuffed toy with chocolate with sprinkles. “I didn’t find glitter...the human selling the candies told me they didn't sell it in food places, but sprinkles are close enough, right?” Max asked sheepishly. Mabel giggled, “I love sprinkles!” She wanted to share the chocolate with Max but Miz told her straight out that chocolate would kill him (though hot chocolate was apparently fine, as long as it was heated up, Miz explained something about heat denaturing the enzymes, but Mabel didn’t really understand all the science talk), so Mabel quickly ate the chocolate herself. And then had to go brush her teeth and wash her face because it was still dangerous to Max if he wanted to kiss her. Miz did tell her that it would take an entire bar of chocolate to kill Max, but she should still probably refrain from the treat in the future.

Still~ He was so brave~ Buying her something that was so dangerous for him~

While they were having breakfast, Stan teasingly asked Dipper when HIS girlfriend was going to give him his birthday hug. The boy shrugged, looking a little sad. Paz hadn’t even written to him today… well, Dipper knew there was a large time difference between the East and West coasts, but still-- “I’m sure it’s nothing, she will call you, Pinetree.” Seb patted his shoulder. The Pines, Max and Amelie (who was invited by Miz) stayed at the table talking animatedly about different things and eventually, the other customers left, leaving them there only because the waiters were scared of kicking them out. Crazy family followed by crazy things.

When they were finishing their food, someone tapped Dipper's shoulder, who was being distracted by his cousin, and he jumped out of his skin when he saw the covered person behind him. His scowl turned into a huge grin though when the person, a young woman took off her head scarf revealing a grinning blonde. “Happy birthday, nerd~”

Everyone cooed and laughed when Dipper gasped and hugged his girlfriend. “You came…” Dipper whispered in surprise and Pacifica rolled her blue eyes. “Of course dummy...do you really think I forgot!?”

The two laughed and hugged each other. Dipper shyly kissed her cheek. Mabel made a sheepish Max stand up. “Look Paz!! This is Max!!” Pacifica looked him up and down before giving Mabel a thumbs up. “I’d give him a solid 7.5. Good job Mabel.”

Max seemed confused and Mabel rolled her eyes. Max was a 10000/10! Paz was just cray-cray.
“And what is Dipper?” She asked, just to bother her twin. The blonde looked at Dipper and hummed. “9.5.” She declared and Dipper looked hurt. “What am I missing then?”

“Me~” She purred and kissed his lips softly, making the boy turn red.

Everyone went nuts, cooed and squealed loudly. “Wait, so how do the rest of us rate?” Stan muttered. Pacifica scoffed. She pointed at Stan “6. You’re a slob.” She pointed at Seb “8. Takes good care of his skin and hair. I approve.” She pointed at Ford “7.5 because he doesn’t try hard enough, but if he ever bothered to take better care of himself, an 8.” She looked around and pointed at Shermie “Solid 7.5. His muscles are nice, needs to work on his tidiness.” The Pines brothers gaped as their wives laughed loudly. Stan almost fainted as Seb cheered and Ford looked confused.
“I love you too, Pacifica.” Shermie grumbled.

She grinned proudly and waved at the little twins and Diego. They were bigger than she remembered. She saw a girl sitting next to Mabel, probably a friend, and then saw an Asian girl patting Ford’s arm. “Who is she?” Pacifica asked. Seb blinked. “Oh. Right. This is Miz. Me and Wanda adopted her a few months ago.” Pacifica nodded in understanding and smiled at her. “Well, I am Pacifica Northwest, nice to meet you. I’m Dipper’s girlfriend!” She declared proudly. Dipper felt so proud.

“Nice to meet you in person as well! Dipper talks a lot about you!” She smiled and Dipper groaned in embarrassment. Miz grinned up at her. “Nice to see you’ve been doing well for yourself, Llama.” Ford sighed tiredly. Miz why...why was she like this? He knew she loved chaos...but still.

Pacifica frowned at the little girl. “Um...thanks?” She poked Dipper. “Who’s this kid?” Dipper sighed. “She’s...not...really...human...” Pacifica raised an eyebrow. “Well, leave it to the Pines to adopt a magic kid...”

be rude.”

“Well, they’re fine, I guess. Dad's investing in other stuff...and mom’s also working right now.
She’s training kids for beauty pageants or something. She hates to work but she has to.”

The Pines shared a look and then nodded. Right. Oh their poor multimillionaire life was harshly taken away from them. Now they are just millionaires! Poor them!

Miz frowned. “Child beauty pageants are awful. I'm sure she could find ANYTHING else to do with her time.” Pacifica shrugged, she couldn’t do anything about it, and hugged Dipper’s arm.
They only had a day together before summer ended. Then they would all be off to college.

They let the teens spend time together while the adults were packing and checking in for their flights. The kids were watching TV in Stan’s room. Finally they all sat down for dinner together.
The whole Pines family plus Amelie and Maxini. “I can’t believe summer is done. It felt way too Who’s in charge of hosting this year?”
“Fordsie!” Seb pointed dramatically at his older triplet. “An excuse to clean the house and try to make Question Mark give me a new nephew!” He grinned. Ford smiled slightly. “Right…” he would have to pick up around the shack…beg Abuelita and Melody to help make food for everyone…

He was glad he had made the extension of the house as the center was built as well.

He should build a food machine that would just cook things if he threw in the ingredients! Brilliant! As Ford scienced in his head, Miz pulled on Wanda's hand. “There's MY birthday in October!” She reminded everyone. Mabel gasped. “I need to get you a BIRTHDAY SWEATER!”

“So…it’s at Seb’s place next?” Stan asked. Wanda hugged her daughter tightly. “Yes~” She was excited, she would have to start figuring out what to do with the party. Miz didn't go to school and didn't have any friends in the neighborhood. They could invite her alien friends? But would they be…able to be hidden? Wanda frowned. These were questions that normal mothers wouldn't have…

“What do you want for your birthday, Miz?” Zoe asked. Miz hummed. “I wonder if my friends would agree to be shoved into human constructs? Or would I get away with them being here almost as themselves, since… Halloween?” Wanda hummed. That was exactly what she was thinking. “Well, if they do, it would be nice to have them in our…dimension to celebrate with you.”

Miz snuggled with her mom and clung to her. “Thanks.” Ford was relieved he wouldn’t have to clean for a while. Of course, this lack of preparation would later result in him spending multiple sleepless nights trying to dust the rooms and nearly suffocating but that's pretty much what happened when Ford procrastinated.

Which happened, not surprisingly, most of the time.

The next day, after packing and after being kicked out of their rooms, they visited the beach one last time. Miz wanted to walk along the beach and picked out pretty rocks and seashells. Amelie went with her, wanting to spend her last moments with her friend before they would be leaving. Mabel and Maxini went off for a little date together. Pacifica wanted to make it a double date and the girls squealed about it together. Dipper turned to Dillon and Phillip with begging eyes. (Max was just learning about human's courting rituals, so he was just happy to have more humans around to study!) Phillip laughed. “Sure, we can make this a triple date.” Now Dillon and the girls were squealing together.

They had a good day, they walked around town, went in places like cafes and restaurants where the twins claimed it was their birthday to get stuff for free. It worked. In all of them. It was amazing! After walking around, they ended up at the beach and walked along the shore. Max looked at Mabel, and then back at her hand he was holding. She was leaving...he was going to miss her so much… “Mabel...can we talk for a second?” He nodded to his left, begging that she understood he wanted to talk just to her. It took her a second, but Mabel nodded and they walked away, leaving her twin and cousin kissing their respective partners.

“What’s up, Max?” Mabel asked. He shuffled his feet into the sand. “I've loved out time together” Mabel smiled. "Me too!!"

Maxini smiled at her. "I love how open you are…" He muttered before getting serious. "What will we do now? you're going to leave...How am I supposed to prove I'm a good boyfriend and worthy of marrying if you aren't here?" The boy asked, terrified of losing his partner.
Mabel paused as she realized she was going back to the other side of the country.

“I think we can try and see how things work! We can talk or video chat, right? There’s that mirror-thing I have with Mermando, I can get one for you as well.” She smiled widely and Max happily wiggled his butt before hugging her. “I don't know what that is, but anything will be fine!” He pressed his cool skin against her.

Mabel made a mental note to ask Miz for help, give her another mirror. Mabel could give Miz a brand new Mabel sweater in return. She blushed before leaning forward and giving him a small peck on his lips. "Don't worry, baby. Don't think you can't get rid of me so easily. We'll make it work."

The new couple laughed and held each other close. “I’m going to miss your hugs.” Maxini sighed. “You give the best hugs.” Mabel brushed her hands down his back. “Oh course! I’m the most hug-tastic!” They finally pulled away, Maxini gave her a smile. “When will I see you again? In person?"

Mabel bit her lip in thought. “I’m...gonna have to ask my parents. And...I’m starting college soon, so it might not be for a while...I'll ask Miz for help, don't worry your pretty head with that~In fact, let's go now!” She dragged Maxini with her as they ran around the beach searching for Miz and Amelie.

----.---

“So you’re going to go back to Greenland?” Miz asked as she bent down to pick up another intact seashell. Amelie nodded. “It’s back to the ocean with me. It’s not bad, I’ve missed my home. But it would be lonely without you guys. You’re fun.”

Miz went up to hug Amelie. “I can give you a frame so you can still talk to me. And to everyone else.” Amelie smiled softly. “I would like that.” She sighed and gazed out at the ocean. The breeze was cool. Miz shifted into Xin, stretching out with a sigh. “I could always fly over to hang out- if you want~?” he joked.

Amelie giggled at that before her expression sombered and she sighed. “I won’t deny, I kinda liked you when you were a guy. Still do.” When Xin paused to look at her, Amelie looked away “It was nice to hang out with a really hot guy who was nice and fun to talk to.” She rubbed her arm. “Most of the boys I know are all about starting a relationship and that sort of thing. So the fact that you outright said you just wanted to hang out as friends was so fresh and...it put me at ease.” She smiled at him. “It was nice to know that you wanted to be my friend, no strings attached about wanting to get together with me or anything. You wanted to get to know me for ME and not because you wanted something from me.”

Xin blinked. “Eh...so what’s the problem?” Amelie laughed. “The problem is that I started falling for you.” At Xin’s startled look, Amelie giggled. “That look on your face is hilarious. But yeah...I found myself liking you. I know I shouldn't have.” With him dating Mr. Stanford and all that.

Xin looked guilty. “I’m sorry.”

“Oh no, don’t be. I really loved hanging out with you and your family.” Amelie assured him. “Besides, it was just a small crush that first week...and then I found out you were a little girl.” She ran a hand through her hair. “But even when you had changed forms so drastically, you didn’t change. You were the same friendly sweet person who talked to me. With your funny stories and crazy antics pulling me and everyone into wacky adventures.”
“Like when we found that buried treasure a few weeks back!” Xin grinned. “Or when we had that swimming contest and Dipper got trapped on that island turtle.” Amelie laughed. The two reminisced fondly over the misadventures they had this summer. “This has been the most fun I’ve ever had, I never thought going out to hang out with land dwellers would be so much fun.” Amelie went up and hugged Xin. “So, thank you. For being my friend and bringing me with you on all these adventures. I have plenty of friends now. You, Mabel, Dipper, Zach, Zoe, Diego, Dillon...even your uncles and aunts. You’ve all been so good to me.”

Xin hugged her back. “I’m glad you had fun. I...don’t actually have many friends outside my family in this dimension. All my other friends are out in space.” Amelie laughed. “Alien, right?” Xin nodded. “I’m going to try and bring them here eventually but, it’s lonely without them. Even when I have my family.” Amelie nodded “I can understand that.”

“It’s gonna be sad saying goodbye. We can still keep in touch, though it won't be the same.” Well, Xin could set up teleporters.

“There’s always next summer?” Amelie asked hopefully. Xin smiled. “I dunno where our family is going next summer but...well...if...you wanted, you can come with us?” He offered. The selkie grinned. “I’d love that. I would need to ask my parents for permission though...”

“I can assure them that you'll be safe with us! I mean, I kept you and everyone else alive all summer, after all.” Xin cackled. The two friends laughed and held each other close. A loud voice squealed, “AHHH YOU’RE BOTH SO CUUUTE!!!”

“‘Ugh...Mabel...’” Xin and Amelie groaned.

“‘You’re even groaning in synch with each other!’” Mabel laughed. Maxini looked embarrassed. “Sorry, we didn’t mean to eavesdrop, great dragon. Mabel had a question for you to help us with your great wisdom and powers, so we came to find you.” Mabel would need to get used to Max honoring the dragon so much. He now knew the dragon could shapeshift and almost fainted from awe at the greatness he was experiencing. It took all the magic he had just to take a human form, Max had to work so hard on that, but the dragon had more than one human form! And changed between them so easily!

“Xin, can I get a new mirror to talk to Max? And also, what can you give us so we can keep in touch? Pleaseee! I would be depriving him of the best hugs in the universe!” She hugged the flustered boy.

The demon laughed. “I can give you a mirror because I SHIP you, but what’ll you give me in return if I help you more than that?” He might love his cousin, but he’s already given out too many freebies this summer. Mabel considered it. She looked around and made sure no one else was nearby. She whispered “I still have a secret stash of Smile Dip, but I may be willing to part with them in exchange for a way to see my boyfriend face to face.”

Xin’s eyes widened and he grinned toothily. “Ooh~you have my interest~” Mabel and him leaned in to whisper back and forth while Amelie snorted when she saw Maxini bowing to the dragon. Aaww.

Finally Xin straightened up and held out a hand. “So, a method of near instant transport to each other’s locations and back again, in exchange for a week’s supply of Smile Dip.” He smirked. “And extra if I request it.” Mabel nodded. “It may take a little time, my supplier’s got a busy schedule.” The two gripped hands and shook while Maxini and Amelie shifted uneasily. The reptile boy leaned over to whisper “Did we just watch a drug deal go down?” Amelie shrugged.
“Pleasure doing business with you.” Xin laughed. He held up two pendants. They were triangles with a little heart shape inside. “There’s one for both of you. If you squeeze it and whisper into it, the other can hear. So you can ask each other if you want to hang out. Once you both decide if Mabel’s going to where Max is, or vice versa, just squeeze it again and you’ll teleport to near the other. And when you want to go home, repeat. Simple.”

Mabel hugged her cousin. “Thankyouthankyouthankyou!” She went over to Maxini and handed him one of them as she slipped her own on. “I wanna test it!” Maxini laughed and the two started teleporting beside each other and back again. Xin glanced around. “You guys are so lucky I’ve had this Perception Filter going all summer.”

Amelie laughed. “Should we get those pendants too?” She teased. Xin scoffed. “Mabel would never stop teasing me if we did.” Said girl snorted with laughter. “YES! GET YOUR OWN MATCHING COUPLE PENDANTS!”

“We will get matching friendship pendants.” Xin rolled his eyes. He looked at Amelie. “If you want to. Do you want to get a pendant to talk as well?” she laughed. “I would love that.” Xin formed them, triangles with a teardrop shape inside. Mabel pouted. “How come SHE gets a freebie?”

“Because I’m doing it to spite you.” Xin stuck his tongue out at her. Mabel pouted but held onto Maxini’s arm. “Let’s go Max!” Maxini grinned widely and the two teens walked away, not before Max shouted “THANK YOU GREAT DRAGON!”

Xin shook his head with an amused grin. He turned around and gave Amelie the pendant. “Here.” The selkie girl smiled and hugged her friend, who reciprocated.

Eventually, it was time to go. After saying bye to Max and Amelie one last time, the Pines went to the airport and hugged each other, as they were returning to their respective homes and wouldn’t see each other until Miz’s birthday. Ford wondered if the portal gun idea really would be something worth looking into, at least to cut down on travel costs.

The little twins were back on their leashes and Zoe, sitting on a chair and kicking her legs, saw some men with funny hats and little luggages. “Look! Pilots!” She pulled at Uncle Ford’s sleeve. Ford looked up and nodded. "You're correct. Zoe leaned on him. “Is it hard to ride a plane?” Ford chuckled. “Fly a plane, Zoe. And yes, pilots have to do a lot of studying and training.”

“Oh, but that’s only 2 things.” The little girl shrugged and turned around to poke Queen Flutter in her cage. Ford hummed. Well. He...had never thought of things that way. It was an oversimplification but he found Zoe's naivety refreshing. When they boarded the plane, Zach fell asleep almost immediately, but Zoe managed to stay awake to feel how the plane took off. It felt so weird and cool! As the rumbling settled down into a background roar as the plane soared through the sky, Zoe declared “I wanna fly a plane too when I grow up!”

Seb, who was trying to sleep, nodded at his daughter with a tired smile. “That’s awesome, pumpkin…” He slurred before he conked out, not really paying attention to her announcement. Zoe grinned widely and settled down to watch a video on the mini screen in front of her. Miz was once again next to Ford and she was passed out on his lap as he read. He petted her hair absentmindedly from time to time and the demon let out a purr. The plane ride was blessedly quiet.

Hours later, Seb was saying bye to his brother who had another trip by bus to Gravity Falls. (Ford didn't want to admit the portal gun idea was looking pretty good right about now. He was rather tired and travel took a lot out of him.) “Don’t forget to eat and to sleep a few hours, Fordsie!” Miz waved with her free hand as she held Zach’s one. Zoe was still sleeping (having passed out eventually) and her mommy was carrying her.

“I’ll try to…” Ford nodded. He waved goodbye and went to the bus area. With the end of summer came the chill winds of the early morning and the coming fall. It was dark out and there weren’t all that many people at the bus stop. Ford shivered while waiting there. Good thing he had his turtlenecks. He pulled one on and sighed. It was colder than he thought it would be. Ford placed his hands under his armpits to warm them. It was quiet, the other travellers sitting with their luggage without paying any attention to each other. Ford opened his journal and filled in a...less scientific entry.

He wrote about the summer, not the anomalies and discoveries though. Ford had a faint smile as he wrote about how much fun he’d had with his family. He sketched a little picture and jumped when the woman beside him commented “That’s lovely. Is that your family?” Ford narrowed his eyes at her. The woman laughed. “Sorry for being nosy, you just...looked so happy while you were drawing that I had to see what it was.”

Ford looked down at his sketch. He was standing beside his triplets. Seb was holding Zach and Zoe in his arms while Stan had Diego on his shoulders. Miz was clinging to him, one hand wrapped in Ford’s and the other curled around Seb’s shirt. Ford traced the lines where the drawings held hands. “Yes. My family.”

When the bus came and Ford dozed lightly, he was still holding the journal that William had given him all those years before.

The twins started school and Wanda thought this was the best time to finally get Miz to sit down for therapy.

Linda told them that they really should get someone who specialized in traumatized children, that she could do what she could, but Linda wasn’t trained for this. She wasn’t qualified for this. And yes, she admitted that demons weren’t in her studies either, but that was an entirely separate issue.

So Miz was there, in Linda's office. And Linda tried very hard not to stare at her long tail as it curled around at her feet. Or the antlers. 'Ok, my newest client is a dragon (demon alien) who's older than Lucifer...and is also a child. Who's apparently suffered a lot of trauma. What is my life?'

Linda gave the dragon a smile. "Hello again, Miz. Do you… know what we're doing here?"

Miz nodded, swinging her legs as she leaned back on the couch. "I tell you about all the terrible things I went through, and you tell me what's a healthy way to handle it all."

Linda nodded. "Not quite, but that is a good approximation of what we'll do."

The girl gave Linda a long look. "Will you be able to handle what I tell you? It won't… make you so upset that it'd traumatize you?"

Linda thought back to hearing about Sebastian's childhood and Lucifer's deranged rants about his own father. "I'm sure I can handle it. Or at the very least, if it gets too much for me. I'll tell you to stop."

Miz nodded. "Good."
She didn't start speaking right away. She was looking down at her lap, flicking her nails, cleaning them. "I… am a reincarnation." She said finally. Linda's first thought was, 'Again?'

"I was human once… And then I was reborn as a triangle. Until I died again, and I'm a demon now. Bill Cipher." Miz told her. (Not Miz? So… her demon name was Bill Cipher?) Linda held up a hand. "So, are there… Three things I need to keep track of here?"

"Maybe. I figured that if I'm going to get you up to speed on who and what I am, I was going to need to start from the beginning."

Linda rubbed her head. "Alright. Let's do this."

"So the earliest memory I have of my human life, was when my great grandmother stepped on my pet chick and I saw it crushed to death…"

Linda twitched. Oh, she was going to be in for a ride, wasn't she?

((((((((((((((Warning for child abuse among other things)))))))))))))))))))

"-nd he threw the tray at mom. I don't even remember what that argument had been about…"

"-took us to the beach, never realized how strange that was until years later, taking me and my sister out to a beach in the middle of the night without telling mom. But he took us home after and nothing happened, so I guess it was nothing…"

"-don't remember what I did wrong, but she had the coat hanger, and I didn't have anywhere to run so I just curled up and covered my head the best I could--"

"-as my own fault really, shouldn't have been playing near the stairwell. But shouldn't they have realized my leg was broken? Or at the very least, that I was hurt and might need to go to the hospital?"

"-ever listened to me. Ever! I got in so many arguments because he didn't understand English and I didn't know enough Cantonese to fully explain what I was feeling--"

"-they had me strip naked and examined me all over, even left me to lie there on that cold metal bed with nothing but a thin sheet, but still couldn't figure out what was wrong with me… or tell me anything at all--"

"-and then we lost the house! Like, Uuugh!"

"-then he asked me to give him my money, my savings, because he wanted to buy a new car--!!"

Linda was holding her head at the ache that had started around the 3rd 'story' Miz told her. Wow. She was really… laying it all out. No hesitation, just telling her every last thing that had ever…

And the other part of Linda was belatedly realizing…

'Oh, she had daddy issues too…'

---

"-nd that's when I died." Miz sighed. Linda jumped, sitting up in her chair where she'd been slumped over after her back began hurting from sitting up so long. She had no other appointments today, and Miz had straight up hissed at Lucifer when he'd tried to barge in earlier, so Linda had spent the entire day listening to the abridged life story of Miz Cipher, part 1, the human years (as she called it.)

"R-right." Linda shook off her lethargy. "Well… that… is a lot to unpack, probably too much for one day…"

"I haven't even told you about my triangle life." Miz sighed. Linda wanted to sigh too. "One thing at a time. Once I've worked through your human life, as it appears a lot of who you are is based on that as a foundation, I can see about your other two lives."

"Okay." Miz agreed easily.

"For now… I think I can begin putting together a psychological profile, would help when I find someone who can help you better than I can."

Miz nodded. "Okay." She agreed again. Linda sighed. "It's not that I don't want to talk to you, I don't think I'm qualified to do so."

"But how would I even know if I can trust anyone else." Miz muttered. Linda sighed. "Yes, that will be the problem won't it? But I will try my best to find someone for you. And if all else fails…"

Linda sighed. "I could start reading up on child development…" She muttered, "Wouldn't be the first time I had to speed learn something that isn't part of my job…"

(Miz’s brother came back and they hung out for a while, stressing everyone else out. But that’s another story.)

---

One of the things Miz's other Bill Cipher brother (Blue) influenced on this side of the multiverse, was making Ford host a dinner for his niblings and their partners, which ended up in him offering to teach Maxini more about human life and culture. So a few weeks later, in the last week of September, when Ford had his portal device fixed up (with him, Miz and Fiddleford working on it together to make sure it was safe to use) so he could get to a meeting spot to pick up Max, and bring him over for ‘human’ lessons, the mentorship officially began. (Ford wasn’t going to just make handheld portal devices for people, that was too dangerous. But Miz had mentioned setting up Teleport Spots, where people could travel to, and use, to get to other Teleport Spots. Which sounded amazing. Ford was going to work on that, but he would need to make sure they were non-hackable.)

He was looking forward to making this a commercial thing. All the time and energy saved, as well as money and resources. Without mentioning the less impact on the environment~

The boy was dressed in a jacket this time, a jacket styled a lot like Native American ones. As well as boots. The clothes, while helping keep him a little warm, probably didn't do much for him with the weather dropping it’s temperature into single digits.

"Hello, Maxini. Let's go inside so you can warm up." Ford quickly guided the excited boy inside. It was unsettling how cold he was, his lips were blue, but he was smiling and not shivering at all. Right, they didn’t really shiver, did they? That… was… Ford blinked. “Should you be hibernating right now?”
Max should his head. "Not yet. The snow hasn't fallen, which means the god hasn't arrived yet to cover the ground with his icy blanket."

"Uh huh. Well, weather is a good first lesson, I believe!" Ford clapped his hands and grinned.
"You'll learn scientifically why the weather changes without relying on archaic beliefs."

"Scientific means...Seeing it the human way?" Max followed his new mentor as Ford paced.
“Scientific meaning the correct way!” Ford said proudly (being of the opinion that science was better than any silly religious beliefs. And no, he didn’t realize how silly that was, considering he was friends with a literal god.)

"Oh…” Max shook himself as the warm enveloped him and his hair puffed. "I guess you're right...Mabel says you're the most intelligent human."

Ford waved a hand with false humbleness (already unconsciously knowing he was going to LOVE doing this and get Max's admiration). "Oh, I just know things, which I'm going to help you learn.
Do you read in English?"

"...No...I know the characters and the numeric symbols though..."

"...Oh." Ford blinked. “Well then. Let’s start with learning the human English alphabet…”

Ford couldn’t believe he spent the next half hour in his lab singing the ABCs to Max.

He was also pretty sure his friends were behind the door listening. He sighed again. He made Max repeat the letters again and again, drawing them in a notebook as similar as Ford drew them. (Ford was kind enough not to use his cute extravagant handwriting, just a normal one).

"So...How do I write my name?"

Ford helped him sound it out, to get a spelling. He was quite sure it wasn’t a direct 1-1 transliteration of his name, but it was close enough.

Max seemed to like it though. When he wrote it next to it in his own language, it looked...similarish which excited him a lot.

"Ok, you know how to speak, so forming sentences shouldn't be hard. I want you to write 5 sentences, yes? Whatever you want."

It took another half an hour for Max to finish them...Ford grimaced a bit, he was having a lot more respect for kindergarten teachers now, teaching english was hard.

How was he supposed to make him understand 'like' for 3rd person actually was with an s and wasn't written like it sounded but rather like, which didn't sound at all like the alphabet they just revised??

And… "Ok, hold on, I'll fix your hand...there." He fixed Max's position holding the pencil, so now instead of his fist, he was holding it the correct way, with his fingers. The pen shook even more when Max tried to write again. It seemed like his manual dexterity wasn’t used to it. Ford frowned at that. “Ok, just... um… practice holding it… whichever way feels most comfortable?”

Max nodded, motivated by sheer positiveness which actually impressed the scientist a little. "Do I need to learn to write the words so you can teach me the scientific way of how the god brings ice and snow?"
"Of course. You need to take notes! You'll need them to revise when I evaluate you."

"Evaluate me?"

"After some lessons, I'll measure on a scale of 1 to 100 how well you learned the things I'm teaching you. That will give you an idea of your progress and I'll know if I need to change some method or explain a subject better."

"That sounds scary…" Max muttered.

"Well, I'm fairly certain you want to live in the human world with Mabel, and one of the things you'll need is to prove you know the 12 basic years of schooling and education human children go through."

"...I need to study 12 years to know everything humans know?!"

"Oh no, I said BASIC." Ford clarified, making the eix leel boy melt in his chair, NOW looking fairly less unmotivated than before. "Human learning is hard…” Max groaned.

They went through very basic sentences and words (making Ford feel like a kindergarten teacher, writing words like mom, dad, house, girlfriend, colors etc), before Max confessed he was hungry. He took his newest pupil to the cafeteria to get something to eat and sat with him, far away from the curious looks.

Too bad his friends didn't care about privacy. Max smiled as he chewed his meat and the other scientists slid over. They'd gotten a brief summary from their boss about how he was going to have another guest over. One who didn't know a lot of English, or American culture. "Where are you from kid?" "Are you from a very traditional society distanced from western influence?"

"Uh...Yes?"

"Aaww~ And why're you here? Can we know?" Dr. Wexler looked at the boy with the cutest braid ever and then at Ford. The scientist had given up on trying to stop his friends from just being here and talking. They were too curious for their own good sometimes.

"I want to learn about humans, so that I'm the best option for my girlfriend to marry."

"No, Max. Learning is not for someone else! It's for YOU to grow and educate yourself, cultivate your intellect." Ford exclaimed. Max nodded. "It's for me to grow!"

"Uh...What?" Dr. Poddar blinked

Ford rubbed his forehead. "Maxini's a different species and wishes to be closer to human culture. I'll teach him. But keep it to yourself, I don't want the entire staff knowing about him. He can't handle the attention as well as Xin can."

“Ooooh~ another supernatural? Hello there Maxini. It’s very nice to meet you. You can call me Dr. Wexler.” the ginger grinned at him. Max was looking at her hair. “Are you and Phillip related?” Max asked. Because Mabel and her family all had fluffy brown hair, aside from some who had black or yellow, but they looked similar enough. But Phillip had red hair, and so did this woman.

"I don't know who Phillip is, but I can almost say with certainty that we're not." Dr. Wexler raised an eyebrow. Ford patted Max's shoulder. "They aren't. While genetically, being red haired is less likely, not every red haired person is directly related." he paused. “Though they could be very distantly related? Many, many generations ago.”
"What's genetically?" Max asked curiously and Ford pulled at his hair. DAMNIT! "Do you know what...DNA is?"

"It's the letters of the alphabet!" Max said brightly. "Dee is the fourth letter. En comes after Em! And Ey is the first one!"

The group of scientists giggled behind their hands as their boss took a deep breath. Ford was the least patient person they knew when it came to others, why did he volunteer for this?? Haha!

"Ok, let's make a note to explain this for biology..." He handed Max a paper. "Write red and hair and DNA." Max nodded, pulling his pencil out of his pocket and stuck his tongue out as he concentrated.

Fiddleford looked at Ford. "You'd be a terrible kindergarten teacher." he deadpanned.

"Yes. That's why I studied science and not kindergarten education. " Ford stressed, making the others laugh a little more, amused and worried about how high the standards were going to be set for Maxini.

The poor supernatural boy.

It took the rest of September for Max to get used to writing a little more fluently and with less mistakes. Ford, shamelessly, gave the eix leel homework, which Maxini dutifully brought back the next day. He did it at night, curled up in his nest with his sisters. His parents didn't even warm him when they asked the Queen if he was allowed to and Max excused this homework to his queen by saying that, "As the human ambassador, I have to pass human tests, it is the will of the Great Dragon."

She begrudgingly had to agree and Max was allowed to continue. The priestesses told her it was better this way, because he wasn't attending much to the apprenticeship and they were more than glad to not have the freak boy around. "He did cook well though."

A lower-ranked priestesses complained, "Kind of a shame we can’t have him here, working for us anymore."

Ford tried teaching Max basic mathematical operations, and to his immense pleasure, Max knew how to add, subtract, multiply and even divide. "You see Max, the exact same thing you did with your symbols, you’ll do with these ones, called arabic numbers. That's the wonder of math and science! It's completely universal anywhere you see it!"

Max nodded slowly. Ok…(?!)

Math was the easiest subject Ford was teaching him. Max seemed horrified as to WHY more math existed for humans. Why would you mix letters and numbers?? Why are drawing lines and curves on a graph paper so important? ax+b. You don't go around measuring or weighting fish with ax+b!

"...what's this for? Why do humans learn this? What do we use it for, in human society?" Max was very confused about what the practical applications of this were. Did humans really need to know the degrees of a triangle in day to day life? Humans were so incredibly complex...

"Math is elementary for day to day life." Ford said solemnly. And triangles were important! (Ford fought down a blush at the memory of how he’d used a protractor to make sure all his drawings and paintings of Bill had been perfect--)

"You haven't even taught me the human way of seeing the weather. You say it's not the Gods, but you haven't told me who does it.” Max crossed his arms, a bit petulantly. “I know that the Great Dragon can do it. So, is it her? Does she make the human weather too?”

"Alright. fine. We'll take a break from quadratic functions for ecology.” Max happily turned the page in his notebook and searched for an appropriate pen. Mabel had gifted him a box with colorful pens and pencils! They were so colorful and had even more colors than the rainbow and he absolutely loved it. He grabbed green, because it sounded appropriate (it was a shiny pen, which also smelled of fruits) and looked up at Dr. Pines with a raised eyebrow. (Mabel had told him that if he was confused, he could use different colors for different bits of information, to help him sort them for easier understanding later.)

Ford grabbed a globe and showed it to Max. "This is the Earth. you are in this continent called North America, in the country United States in the state of Oregon. These are the other continents, which are big pieces of land. This is South America, Europe, Asia, Africa and Oceania."

"...I don't know about those other continents… and that's not how they taught me about how the territory is laid out…"

"The Earth's not flat. Get over it." Ford deadpanned. "Anyway! This is a planet." He drew in the whiteboard the Earth and the Sun next to it. "The planet Earth orbits around a giant Star called the Sun, which is millions and millions of kilometers away from the planet, but it's rays of light enter the atmosphere-- a gaseous layer around the Earth, and warms it."

"Orbits...What?" Max frowned.

"When the planet makes an entire cycle around the sun, it takes 365 days, it makes a year. However! The earth also spins along its own axis, and that makes day and night. The side of the planet facing the Sun is the day, while the other one is the night, when it turns over like this--" Ford spun his globe. "--now this other side is in the day."

"What's an axis?"

"The Earth also has a natural satellite called the moon-" Ford searched in his drawer for the moon that came with the globe and stuck it to it with a metal stick. “What’s a satellite?!” Max asked, only to be ignored as Ford continued speaking.

Max was so incredibly confused right now. And mister Ford wasn’t stopping to clarify any of his questions.

"The moon, unlike the planet, doesn't spin, it stays the same, and it appears at night, reflected by the Sun's light. It has phases depending on how direct the Sun's hitting it. That's why you get full moons or half moons." Ford finished. Max thought this meant he could finally ask a question, but Ford continued.

"SO! Weather! Depending on the position of the planet during its orbit around the Sun, it'll give different weather to different parts of the planet. While the planet is for example in July, the northern hemisphere is in summer, while the south has winter, due to the inclination of the planet, and while we're in December, the northern hemisphere is in winter, that's when you go hibernate, and the south is in summer. The in between periods create fall and spring."

Max was sobbing softly.

“Heeeey Fordsie!” a voice called out. A voice of salvation.

“Great Dragon!” Max sobbed as he ran over to fall to his knees before Xin, who blinked at this.
"I'm so sorry!! I don't understand! I don't understand what Mr. Pines is teaching me!" Max sobbed, ashamed of himself. "I can't learn!"

Xin blinked down at him, and then gave Ford a very unimpressed look. “It’s not your fault Maxini. Ford’s just shit at teaching basic level things. It’s why he was never able to help Sebastian or Stan with their homework as kids.” (“Hey!”) Xin knelt down to brush the tears from Max’s eyes. “Oh, sweetie…” Xin coo’ed at him. “Let's sit down and lemme see what the issue is.”

Max sniffled, rising to his feet, holding the Great Dragon’s hand as he led them back to the desk. “Now Fordsie, what were you trying to explain to him?” Xin asked, crossing one leg over the other elegantly.

"How weather originated...in...the real way and not with his god myths…"

"I don't get it… I don't even know why Mr. Pines says the territory is a circle." Max sniffled. Xin sighed. “Ok, let's start from the very beginning.” He gently pulled Max down until the eix leel was lying with his head on Xin’s lap, moving his legs to rest them both on the ground so that his lep would be level.

Xin took a deep breath and started with, “Once upon a time, a planet called Earth was formed.” Ford frowned. “It’s not some story. And it didn’t just take one moment, the Earth took billions of years to--” and then Xin reached out a hand, and even though he was sitting so far away, Ford could feel a finger press against his lips. “Shush Fordsie. It’s story time.”

So Ford grumbled and sat back as Xin continued. He'd fill up his paperwork then! While Xin preferred doing storytelling instead of actually teaching him. He thought, very etnocentristic of him and allowing Xin to see why he chose science instead of any social studies.

“The Earth is like a really, really big rock. But it also has water pooled within the uneven surface of it. Have you seen rocks like that before?” Xin asked Max, stroking his hair gently. Max sniffled, but nodded. Xin smiled at him, and continued, “Now, because that rock is so big and bumpy, it collected water into all it’s little dips and cracks. But this rock is also round. So it rolls.” Xin giggled. “But here’s the thing, the rock really likes the water that it collected. So the water stays on it, even as it rolls around.” Max gasped. “Is it a magic rock?” (Ford rolled his eyes, magic may be real, but gravity wasn’t magic!) Xin shrugged. “Some people say it’s magic. You see, the thing that makes the water stick to the rock is called ‘gravity’. Gravity is an invisible power, a force, that pulls things towards other things. And the bigger something is, the bigger that pull will be. So, since this rock is suuuuuper big--” Xin opened his arms wide and MAx laughed a little. “--it was able to keep all that water pulled toward itself, so that it didn’t splash away as the rock rolled around.”

Here, Xin stopped to do a status check, “Do you understand so far?” Max nodded. Xin continued. “Now, the rock isn’t rolling along the ground, no, this rock rolls through the air, like it’s floating.” Max gasped. “So it IS magic!” Xin giggled. “Nope. It’s still gravity.” he poked Max’s nose. “You know the sun?” Max nodded. Everyone knew what the sun was. The great ball of light in the sky that warmed their bodies and brought them life. “Well, where is the sun?” Xin asked. “In the sky--” Max’s eyes widened. The sun floated in the sky. Max was told it was because the gods placed fire into the sky, to create the sun. But from what Xin was saying… “So… the sun floats in the sky… because of gravity?”

Xin nodded. Max frowned. “But… wouldn’t the sun be pulled towards us, because of gravity?”

Xin grinned and patted his head. “You’re close, but it’s the other way around. You see, the sun is actually much, much bigger than us. Our planet, our Earth, the big rock I was telling you about?
It’s much smaller than the sun.”

“...that doesn’t make sense. The sun is the size of a pup’s fist.” Max frowned. Xin continued petting him. “If I was standing very far away, how big would I be?” he prompted. Max blinked. “You’d look smaller, but you’re not actually smaller, just farther away...” and then Max connected this information on his own to, “So the sun is actually very, very far away?”

“Exactly!” Xin nodded. "And it is huuuuge!" He pointed at the globe. "If the Earth is this size, the sun is the size of this entire building!" Max’s eyes went wide. “That’s... that’s really big...” like... unthinkably big. “And that... Earth is... Earth is here.” Max opened his own arms to gesture around them. “Where we are living, and standing on. And...” he frowned as he connected all the previous points together. “And... the Earth is round, and the reason we can stand on it, even though it’s round, is because of gravity?”

Xin clapped. “Yes! Exactly! You’re doing great! See? It’s not that hard, now is it?” He cheered, making Max very proud of himself. "That actually makes much more sense..." Max rubbed his arm, sitting up and off Xin’s lap now. The dragon gave him a gentle look, "Do you need a break to get a snack? Melody's in the house making cookies, you can eat those. They don’t have chocolate in them, and I’ve run a bio-test of your body through all known foods, so you’re gonna be fine with shortbread cookies." Xin told him.

"Ok! I'll be right back." Max nodded before running away.

"Aren't you babying him?" Ford asked immediately. "You're acting like he's stupid: the rock loves having water!" Ford said in a mocking higher pitched voice. "He isn't."

Xin deadpanned. "Aren't you the one treating him like someone who knows what a hemisphere even is? You’re not even giving him any of the basics to build on."

"Any child can learn concepts, Xin. Do you think they need to learn like that?"

"Maybe they should! And I’m not treating him like he’s stupid, Max’s really intelligent, especially taking into consideration how you’ve shoved writing and grammar down his throat over the last 2 weeks." Xin shook his head. "I'm teaching him in a way he understands! Do you think their pups are sat down to write down 20 times their vocabulary list? they learn through oral tradition, storytelling~ and it's so rude for you to tell him to his face that his gods are not real, especially KNOWING Maxini is NOT going to fight you on it, or defend his beliefs. You just don't do that." Xin felt a little pang in his chest, hurt at the slight disappointment he was feeling at Fordsie. “I mean, I’m a god. Are you gonna tell me I’m not real?”

“But he thinks his gods control the weather---”

“ I can control the weather.” Xin deadpanned.

"Ok, but not on the entire planet, no. It's natural science working, it doesn't come from a God's job. I'd KNOW if there were seasonal spirits flying around bringing an icy blanket all around the land~" He batted his eyelashes “Just ‘cause you can’t see them, doesn’t mean they’re not there.” Xin deadpanned. “And just because their ‘magic’ works via manipulating the temperature and air pressure in order to produce the effects in a way science can understand, doesn’t mean that they weren’t using their powers in conjunction with the sunlight, and the rotational spin of the planet.” Xin huffed. The gods worked WITH the planet. That’s... kinda the point! It was only aberrations like himself that went against the natural order of things. Because Bill Cipher was a rule breaker! "I don't like how you're trying to force Max to ignore his own beliefs to shove down yours. You could easily explain things to him, but you don't. Just leave, I'm teaching him today. If you're not going to fully be into it, don’t do it, because it’s not fair for Max to feel ‘stupid’ because the 'most intelligent human' is teaching him and he doesn’t understand him." Xin pointed towards the door.

"...This is my lab…"

"Fiddleford needs help. Now go." Xin glared. “You don’t have the care and patience needed for teaching children, nor respecting someone’s religious beliefs. If you wanna teach him how to read and write, that’s fine, because at least then, you’re not making him feel like an idiot for not ‘magically’ understanding everything you’re saying.” Xin pointed at the door. “Until you can learn to respect someone else’s beliefs, especially if they in no way cause you any harm, or cause anyone any harm, for them to hold those beliefs, you are not allowed to teach Max about science.”

Max returned with a few more cookies and sat down next to Xin for the next lesson. Ford sighed, looking a little miffed and left. Max blinked. “...is mister Ford okay?”

“He’ll be fine. I’m just stomping on his pride as a teacher.” Xin shrugged. “Now, where were we… oh right. So the Earth is a big rock with water, and the sun is a super massive ball of gas that is so hot it caught on fire…”

---

Fiddleford watched his friend drag himself into his lab, dodge a flying drone without a care in the world and went to sulk on his table. "Uh...hi. How's tutoring going?"

"Xin is angry at me and just kicked me out of my lab because I don't like the idea of babying Maxini in his lessons."

Fiddleford blinked. "He told you, you suck, didn't he?" The blond deadpanned. Ford groaned. Fiddleford chuckled. “Well, what were you doing in the lesson?”

So Ford explained what he tried to teach Max. And Fiddleford’s eyes narrowed. “...you tried ta tell this boy to disregard all his religious beliefs because they weren’t ‘real’???”

“But they’re not!” Ford waved a hand. “The world runs on science. Not the gods. Even if they are real. They don’t create science. It’ll exist even without them! So why shouldn’t I tell Max he doesn’t have to put his faith into appeasing them, or thanking them for making the sun rise or the rain fall?”

“Ford, listen.” Fiddleford put his hands on Ford’s shoulders. “I am a religious man. I’m a good Christian man and I love God. And while I might be a man of science, I still hold my faith inside me, I don’t have to choose between ‘em.” He tightened his grip on Ford’s shoulders. “Now, I ain’t one ta tell anyone what they can or can’t believe in, so long as those beliefs ain’t hurtin’ anyone. And you--” He leaned in, glaring at Ford, “--are being very hurtful right now. You’re being incredibly rude and disrespectful of mine, and Max’s beliefs and values.”

Ford blinked. “But--”

“No buts. Ford, I can't believe I have to explain this to you. YOU of all people should know what it means for people to decide FOR you what is or isn’t an acceptable religion!” Fiddleford's eye twitched and waited for Ford to realize what he was talking about, and the horrified look of realization on Ford’s face. “Yeah. That.” Fiddleford deadpanned. “Just 'cause you’ve turned your back on your god, don’t mean that you have to force everyone else to do the same.”

Ford tucked his metaphorical tail between his legs. He looked down at the floor. He wasn't trying to be rude or disrespectful… but he clearly has been. Damn he already had this conversation with Fiddleford as a teen back in college… He was being as bad as...

"I’m sorry, F. You're right… And I should apologize to the boy as well…”

Fiddleford nodded, satisfied. "Good. Also, I don't think you should be teachin’ him until you get this sort of thing settled. It makes for a very toxic learning environment.”

Ford had to sit down. “...am I a bad person?” He wondered aloud. “Nope, you’re just an idiot sometimes.” Fiddleford rolled his eyes and went back to screwdriving something.

"Also, I think you just aren't very good at teaching, and that’s a problem too. Your interns learn stuff because they're on the same page as you are. And they're here because they passed all sorts of tests to get accepted into the program in the first place." F chuckled. "And ya wanted to teach Dipper, huh?"

Ford grumbled and blushed a little. "I can learn teaching techniques...I WANT Max to learn...But I only know how I learn…” He mused.

“Yeah, yeah. Well, you know there are plenty of books on teaching and child learning? You could read up on a few of them.” Fiddleford shrugged. “The internet is a thing, there are even online courses. Also, maybe ask Ashton about how to be more respectful to other people’s beliefs. That should help a lot.”

Ford nodded, he would do so. No matter how long this would end up taking him to do.

It took a while, as he scoured the internet and devoured the town's library (not literally of course, that would be very unappetizing). He even found a complete elementary through high school curriculum and the subjects and topics that Max should be able to do. So distracted with learning how to do this, Ford almost forgot that Miz’s birthday was coming up.

---

Wanda bustled around the house. She absolutely refused to let Miz work today. It was her birthday after all. Her 13th birthday. Technically. Wanda sighed. She was a little worried about how Miz was going to pretend to grow older. Apparently Blue (Miz’s older demon brother) had taught her how, but Wanda still worried.

The way Miz explained it was that if she kept the same Vessel, and edited that, without dispersing it and making a new vessel, then it would be able to keep the changes she gave it. So essentially, Miz would have to keep her vessel here, all the time, as Miz, in order for Miz to ‘grow up’. She mentioned an older version of herself that Blue had made for her and claimed she was going to set a slow transformation between her current form and that older form, to take place over the course of 10 years. After that… she had another few older forms that Blue had helped her make, so she would be able to continue aging it past that.

Well, it shouldn’t be too much of a problem even if Miz didn’t grow all that quickly. Wanda checked on the oven to see how the cake was going. She asked Seb to take the children out for the day so she could get all the preparation done and make this a surprise. (Not much of a surprise, everyone knew it was Miz’s birthday, but it was the principle of the thing.)
Since Miz wanted her birthday in October, specifically Halloween, Wanda had a lot of work to do. Miz had said “October 26 would be more accurate but having a Halloween birthday seems more appropriate,” which Seb had found hilarious. So the kids were out Trick or Treating during the day (their neighborhood decided to do this in the mornings) and Wanda was trying to get the food done. There was a knock on the door and Wanda found Carla, Stan, his mom, and their kids. “Hi Wanda! We came early so I could help you get things done in time.”

“Thanks Carla.” The friends hugged and she invited them inside. “Sebastian's out trick or treating with the kids. You can get Diego changed so he can go too.” Diego gasped. “You're trick or treating in the morning?”

“Well it's a weekend. Our neighborhood does it during the day instead. Some of the other parents were afraid of letting the children walk around at night.” Wanda explained. Diego immediately pulled on Stan's hand. “I wanna go trick or treating!”

“Ok, lets get your costume on…” Stan laughed as he led Diego into the magical wing of the house. Carla looked at Dillon “Do you wanna go trick or treating too?” Her eldest son shook his head. “Nah. I can help you and aunt Wanda prepare for Miz’s birthday party.” Carla gave him a hug for being such a good boy. Dillon rolled his eyes. He didn't trick or treat anymore. He only did until he was around 15 because he wanted to know how trick or treating with his dad felt. But he was 19 now, too old for this sort of thing.

They worked until Shermie and Abigail arrived with their own children. To Dillon’s surprise, his cousins seemed sad they couldn't trick or treat.

“Aren’t we a little too old for it already?” He asked, to which Mabel, with a new piercing in her ear (college changed people), said. “Well, after almost dying, Dip Dop and I realized the point isn’t candy per se, but going with your twin and spending time together~” She dragged her brother to her and hugged him by his neck.

Dillon chuckled, kind of wishing he had a twin too. Uncle Seb and Uncle Shermie had twin children! He didn't know about Uncle Ford because he was never gonna give him cousins. Stupid Dad not making twins as well!

Wanda, Carla and Kari worked to cook everything while Shermie and the twins got the decorations set up. Abigail asked “Are any guests beside family coming?” Wanda sighed. “Well, the only friends Miz has outside of us are her alien friends and Amelie. I’m worried that she’s not bothering to make friends with humans around her apparent age.”

“Well, Miz isn’t really 13. Perhaps she can’t connect with the other children in the neighborhood because they aren’t mentally on her level?” Carla asked. Wanda sighed. “Well, I don’t know. I think Miz is unsure how to handle them. I’ve tried to get her to have some play dates with the other preteens in the neighborhood but she says they were all nosy and annoying.” She sighed. “They ask her all sorts of personal questions and it made her very upset.”

“Poor Miz.” Abigail shook her head. “Children can be insensitive.” She looked around. “So, are Miz’s alien friends going to be coming tonight?” Wanda nodded. “It’s Halloween, her friends would be able to walk around the neighborhood. I almost feel like Miz chose Halloween as her birthday just for that reason.” Wanda smiled “That’s how she is, she has plenty of hidden reasons for everything she does.”

Wanda wondered if she really should be pushing Miz to make human friends. If Miz didn't like the kids here, she shouldn’t be forcing her to hang out with them. Still, Miz seemed happy enough even without human friends in the neighborhood. That should be fine. “Well, Miz will be bringing her friends over later. She and the twins are out trick or treating right now.”

“Oh, I can’t wait to see their costumes!” Carla squealed. “They must look adorable!” Wanda laughed. “Yeah. Miz is going as a dragon, Zach is a knight and Zoe is the kidnapped princess.” The women laughed. Dillon rolled his eyes. But dragons didn’t kidnap princesses.

They worked to get all the food ready. The doorbell rang. “That must be Ford.” Dillon went to get him. “Naw, it’s just trick or treaters.” He passed them their candy. Halloween in the morning? How weird. What would they think of next? Halloween in the summer? HAH! Only in Gravity Falls. Still, he understood the reason. Everything was more dangerous nowadays and anyone could hurt a child, especially at night.

Wanda looked at her nephew and smiled. “How’s college going, Dillon? I know you three made a great effort to come.” She thanked the college-aged kids.

“Pfft! Family is always first!” Mabel said with a smile. Dipper nodded. “Besides, it’s been only like, 2 months, we don’t have tests yet.” The usually stressed boy said. He wasn’t stressed...yet. The women and Shermie chuckled. “What were you studying, Dillon?” The green-eyed man asked.

“Business management. I’m continuing with the leadership of my future company…” Dillon rubbed his hands greedily. Carla smacked the back of his curly head. So much like his father. Mabel giggled. “Well...I decided to go with art for now at a community college and go from there…” She said, kind of sheepish, but her family just smiled.

“That’s great, sweetie!” Carla ruffled her hair. Dipper opened his mouth to speak but Shermie cut him off. “We ALL know what you are studying, kid. You have known and tormented us with that since you were 12.”

“You’re mean.” Dipper crossed his arms with mock annoyance. They all laughed. Shermie gave his son a hug. “It's fine. It's good that you know what you want. Makes it easier for you.”

“Speaking of which, do you know what Miz plans to do? She has technically graduated from high school. I heard she took the exams to get her diplomas?” Carla asked Wanda. The blonde sighed. “Miz isn't sure. She's legally 13 years old so she can't actually work anyway. I think she mentioned making jewelry and starting her own business for custom origami art?”

“Origami? Oh, those little paper things you've texted us photos of?” Carla asked. Wanda grinned. “Oh, you should see them in person! She makes the most beautiful things! Hang on...Seb and I have been collecting the things she makes in a box…”

She went off to get the box. She and Seb had been amazed to see her folding them one day. Seb was especially impressed because there was no magic involved, this was pure skill. When Wanda had collected them in a box, Miz had been quite confused. “You’re not throwing them away?” she had asked. When Wanda told her that she wouldn’t throw away something that Miz spent time making, the girl seemed...blown away by that very idea. That they would willingly keep the things she made. (It was almost heartbreakingly to see her confusion at the idea that they would keep her work.)

Wanda brought out the box and showed them the paper animals that Miz had made.

“Awww!” Mabel cooed. Her body screamed to touch them but her mind shouted not to because she could ruin them. “Aaahh!!” She squealed instead, trying to fight her impulsive side.
Dillon and Dipper grinned at the stuff. “That’s cool! I knew how to make a paper boat but I already forgot.” Dipper shrugged, making Shermie gasp offended. “But I taught you that~” He whined. Carla blinked at the origami pieces and then back at Wanda, who was grinning proudly. She loved showing off her kid’s stuff. No matter what it was that they made. Even if they had blood on them like in Zoe’s case...her crazy baby...

“Girl, tell Miz to start doing something! Talent is being wasted!” Carla gasped finally. Wanda laughed. “Yeah, she’s thinking of making them into jewelry. I was going to take her shopping for jewelry supplies tomorrow. And I have a few starter set tools for her birthday gift today.”

Mabel gasped when she found an origami pig. “Can I have this?!” Wanda shrugged. “Miz likes giving them away so, sure?”

The teen squealed loudly and cradled the delicate animal to her chest. Then she went to stick it in her mom’s purse. She didn’t bring her own purse (she had a backpack, but it didn’t have a safe place to put something so delicate), so she knew her beautiful mother would take care of it for her. Abi rolled her eyes at her daughter.

The doorbell rang a few more times, all trick or treaters, and everyone wondered when Ford would get here. Wanda sighed. “I’m gonna call him.” She went off to do so, tapping her foot impatiently. Finally the line picked up. “H-hello?” A groggy voice said. Wanda held back a snarl. “Stanford Pines! Where the fuck are you?”

“Oh, hello Wanda...um...I’m in my lab? Oh-- if you mean-- w-well I was working on Miz’s birthday present and-- I lost track of time--” There was some shuffling sounds. “I’m heading out now! I’ll be there-- soon--” and then the phone clicked and Wanda got the dial tone. She sighed. “Well, he was apparently making Miz’s birthday present and lost track of time.” She told everyone. She hoped he made it here on time.

“Hey doctor Pines. Where are you off to in such a hurry?” The new intern, Jake (he wasn’t in Ford’s section so he didn’t really know this boy very well yet) asked him. Ford didn’t turn around to look at him as he continued walking to his house. “I’ll be out for the rest of the day. My lab is locked down, no one gets in, DON’T let anyone touch anything.” He warned the young man before rushing off to his house. In his hands was a large box. He searched for his car keys. If he drove fast, he was sure he would get there in less than 3 hours! Of course, he was also going to drive carefully, rushing shouldn’t get in the way of safety. (And yes, he COULD portal over to Seb’s place, but there was another stop he had to go to between the Shack and Seb’s house, and he was still worried about people finding out about his portal watch.)

“I’ll be gone for the day, Soos! Good bye!” He waved at the man in the Gift Shop before running to his car. AAH!! Wanda was going to murder him!

He did hope Miz liked his presents though.

Seb laughed as he ran his hands through the heavy sacks of candy. “Twin costumes always get the most candy!” He cheered. Zoe whined as she pulled on her father's costume. “That's OUR candy! Not yours!” She complained. Seb, dressed as a jester, made his eye water and his lips wobble. “So you're not gonna share any candy with your poor, hungry daddy?”

“Like you can't buy your own candy?” Miz rolled her eyes, making sure to keep her tail motionless.
(They’d gone with a fantasy theme. Zach was a knight, with a sword. Zoe was a princess, with a sword. Seb was a jester, with a sword. And Miz was the dragon, who also had a sword.) Seb turned his watery gaze upon her but the demon-dragon was unmoved. Left with only one last hope, Seb turned to look at his son. Zach bit his lip and looked like he might give in but Miz patted his arm “He's got a secret stash of Choco-chews hidden in his sock drawer.”

“How did you find out?!” Seb gasped. Zach giggled, knowing it was ok to say no, and refused to share with his dad.

“Seb, I know lots of things~You should know this by now.” Miz batted her eyelashes at him. The man huffed and crossed his arms. “Well, if it wasn’t for me, you wouldn’t have costumes and you wouldn’t have come to ask for candies anyway! You still have to share with me!” Seb whined.

The twins pouted. “Ok...but just a little bit…” Zoe grumbled and Seb ruffled her hair. “That’s all I ask for.” He grinned. The group passed some neighbors and the kids greeted each other. Seb gave the other parents a polite nod.

“How has your day been? Got plenty of candy?” Heather from down the block asked. Seb grinned. “So much candy.” The adults all laughed. “Well, we're having a Halloween party later tonight. Would your kids like to come?” Heather asked. The children were all comparing their bags of candy and making trades.

“Two Giggles minis for...a Twox bar?” “I don't like licorice. Anyone got milk malts?” “I don't even know what this is?” “Ooh! You have Jimmy Jammers? I'll trade you a Waffer Cream for it!”

Seb shook his head. “Sorry, we're going to be celebrating Miz's 13th birthday tonight.” The other adults gasped. “Her birthday is today? Why didn't you tell anyone?” Kyle (a single father from a few streets down) asked. Seb rubbed his head “Well, we figured everyone else had their own parties and didn't want to get in the way of that. Besides, it's Miz's first birthday with us...as a family...so...we wanted it to be a more personal affair. Maybe next year, once Miz is more comfortable with making friends around the neighborhood?”

The other parents nodded, looking sympathetic. “Understandable. The poor dear, is she still shy around people?” Seb nodded. “She doesn't like large crowds. And I suppose she's unsure how to make friends? She hasn't really interacted much with other children.”

“Well, she is quite the smart girl. Aced her graduation exams, right?” Heather asked. Ellie (a parent from a few houses down) frowned. “Shouldn't you have let her go to school? To make friends?”

“Well, going to a school wouldn't have taught her much, she's smart enough and already knows the subject matter.” Seb shrugged. “And making her sit through classes that bored her wouldn't have helped. Wanda and I discussed this with her and she said she wanted to take her exams and get her diploma.”

“So, will Miz be going to college?” Kyle asked. Seb shrugged. “Wanda and I both think she's too young to go so far away. Wanda has been looking for online courses she can try. Miz wants to go into Art.”

“The art program?” Heather frowned. “Wouldn't that be a waste? She's so smart...” Ellie nudged the fellow mother. “There's nothing wrong with art. Why, Sebastian is a professional artist!”

Seb blushed slightly at the praise but he had learned to accept his own talents. “I'm a designer. Though, I think Miz mentioned wanting to get into Illustration or Fashion, like me?” she seemed a little unsure, mentioned how she didn't really want to do homework again. Seb lit up “You should see the things she makes. Miz loves origami. I think Wanda said she and Miz were going to get some supplies for her so Miz can make handmade jewelry.”

Heather and Ellie gasped. “Really? Jewelry making? That sounds wonderful.” Ellie cooed “Make sure you show me some of her work soon. I'm sure it would be lovely.”

Seb nodded and bid the other parents farewell as he herded his kids back to their own street. “Come on, one last round and then we're heading home.” The kids nodded. As they turned to leave, one of the other kids pulled on Miz’s tail. “Eep!” she squeaked.

“Cool. It feels so real!” The boy grinned as he tugged on it again. Miz whimpered. Seb quickly stepped in. “Hey! Hands off!”

“Jeffery!” Ellie scolded her son. “That’s very rude! Let go of her costume!” She pulled her 10 year old son away and looked at Seb apologetically. “I’m so sorry. He didn’t break her costume right?” Miz was rubbing the base of her tail. “I-it’s fine…” She mumbled as her siblings went to stand protectively around her. Zoe glared at Jeffery. She didn't care if he was twice her size, if he touched her big sister again...

Seb cleared his throat. “Well, let’s head off now.” He frowned at Jeffery and placed a protective hand on Miz’s shoulder as they left. Ellie was still scolding her son about proper manners and how he shouldn’t touch a girl or her clothes without asking first and getting her ‘ok’ on the matter.

“You ok, Miz?” Seb asked as they walked. Miz whimpered as she massaged the base of her spine. “I think he was trying to pull it off…” She complained. It felt really weird, having her tail pulled. Kinda painful.

“He won’t touch you again, don’t worry. Do you feel like going to one more house or do you want to go home already?” He asked and Miz hummed. “I think one more house is fine.” She gave her friend a smile and the man nodded. “Ok let’s go…” this next house was...oh. Seb frowned. He wasn't sure he wanted to go.

“Maybe we should go back after all…” Seb put his hands on the kids’ shoulders, but unfortunately, the door was opened. Carol stepped out and immediately scrunched her face at them. “Oh. It’s you.” Her head was covered with a hat and... her wig. Sebastian couldn’t stop the snort that escaped him. Carol glanced down at Zach and sneered. She looked to be about to say something when Amanda ran down the street. “I’m back mommy!” She said.

The girl, dressed as a...ninja fairy(?) saw the Pines group and smiled shyly. “Hi Zoe. Hi Zu-Zach.” She waved. Zach smiled back. Even if her mom was mean, Amanda was still his best friend, even if they hadn’t been able to play together recently. “Hi Amanda.” He waved. Carol frowned and reached out to grab her daughter’s hand before dragging her back inside the house. “Come on Amanda. Where is your father?”

“Daddy is slow.” Amanda said before the door shut. She managed to give Zach another wave before the door blocked them from seeing each other. Seb sighed. “I guess we won’t be getting candy from this house.”

“I’m tired of walking anyway.” Zoe shrugged. She reached to be picked up and Seb sighed. “You are old enough to walk on your own now. And we LITERALLY live across the street from here.”

“Pwease~” The little girl pouted and Seb picked her up. “Ok, let’s go home, then.” Miz snorted and walked behind Seb with Zach. “You are weak.” She taunted and Seb pulled out his phone. “Yes, yes I am.” He managed to send Wanda a message. ‘We’re coming back now!!’
Wanda almost didn’t see the message. And when she did, she screamed and started barking orders to everyone. “We need to get this done NOW! They’re coming back early!” Everyone screamed and ran around. Sir Bedazzle was running between their legs, barking. Dipper almost dropped a plate of food. They managed to get everything set up in the backyard and Wanda wiped her forehead as she surveyed it all. “Ok. We’ve got it!”

Just in time too as the front door opened and she heard Seb call out, “We’re home!” She went back inside the house to hug her husband and children. “Welcome back, honey. Did you guys get a lot of candy?” Zach nodded and opened his bag to show her. “I got a lot! People liked our family costumes!” Wanda laughed and ruffled his hair. “Well, go greet everyone who’s waiting outside and then clean yourself up and put your candy away. We have Miz’s birthday party now.”

The children nodded and tossed their shoes off. They had flip flops they could wear when going out to the backyard.

Seb went to the kitchen to get water and Wanda crossed her arms. “Will you take off your costume?” Seb, with his cheek puffed because of the water, smiled and gulped it down. “Nah, I like it. I want everyone to see it!”

“Well after you show them, can you please channgeee~? You look like the Prankster’s boyfriend.” Wanda whined. Seb laughed loudly. “Comic edition, or Suicide Squad’s edition?”

“Comic. Now go say hi and put on normal clothes.” Seb went to the backyard and greeted his dear mom, Carla, Dillon, Shermie, Abi and the older twins. “You look like Harvey Quinn!” Shermie teased so Seb took off his hat and shoved a point in his brother’s mouth, making the twins laugh.

“I think you look really good, Sebas.” Kari gave him thumbs up, Seb grinned gratefully and hugged her again. “Where’s Stan and Diego?”

“They went trick or treating. Should be back in a while.” Dillon informed him. “Uncle Ford is late.”

“Doesn’t surprise me.” Seb sighed. He surveyed the tables with food and grinned. They took his suggestion to make the food look creepy and spooky. Meatballs made to look like eyeballs. A whole roasted chicken with ‘organs’ spilling out made of ground up vegetables combined together into a mashed potato-like paste. Jello hands (made from pouring the jello mix into a rubber glove and letting it firm up in the fridge) and ground beef shaped into brains. Pasta intestines with sausages. Fish steaks with red sauces. Broccoli fungus growing out of the meatloaf. Plenty of actual mushrooms as well. Everything also had vegetables that had been shredded or ground up into tiny pieces and mixed in with the rest of the meat to trick the children into eating vegetables.

Seb grinned at the cake. It was shaped like Time Baby. He snorted. It would be so satisfying to cut into it later.

“This looks great.” Seb grinned. He turned to see where Miz had to be held back from the food. “Dillon, let go.” Seb laughed. His nephew had gripped the girl by the back of her dress. “But she’s going to eat all of it before dad gets back.” Dillon sighed. Miz drooled as she reached for the table. “Foooood~”

“Miz, you need to wait for everyone else to get here.” Wanda laughed as she walked over to pick her daughter up. Miz whined but nodded. “But only because I’m willing to wait for Diego. The second he’s back, I’m digging in…” She pouted.

“Well, while you’re waiting, want to go get your friends?” Wanda asked. Miz nodded before slumping in her arms, fast asleep. Wanda adjusted her hold on the girl and went to sit down. “Well, hopefully this will give Stan some time to get back.”

“And Ford some time to get here. I can't believe he forgot about Miz's birthday.” Seb groaned. He sat down and decided to see where Ford was now…

---

Halfway to Seb’s house, Ford made a quick stop to get the other gift for Miz. He realized that his gift, while Ford thought it was nice, didn’t include any food. And if there was one thing Ford understood about Miz, she liked food. And while he knew there was going to be food at her birthday party, he knew for a fact that there was a certain dish that wasn’t going to be there. Because Wanda wouldn’t know how to make it.

Ford had heard about this dish from Xin after one of their sessions once, when the dragon was half asleep and rambling about stuff he loved. And Ford had asked again for more clarification later, to confirm that William really did like it that much.

So Ford strode into the Chinese restaurant and asked for a Yi Mein to go. When Ford told them that he was bringing these noodles for someone’s birthday, they nodded and got it cooked quickly.

Ford left them a nice tip for getting the food made so fast.

“Sixer, where are you~?” Seb whined over the phone. “Everyone is here already!” Ford sighed. “I’m almost there. Give me 20 minutes?” Apparently that wasn’t good enough “You have 19, bring your ass over here! What’s taking you so long?” Ford understood why Wanda and Seb were together.

“I drove nonstop for hours, Sebastian. It was the fastest I could do. And I made a stop to buy something else for Miz.” He tried. That made Seb’s annoyance decrease. “Aaww, that’s nice. Ok, you will be fully forgiven once you are here. It better be a good gift.”

“It will! See you there.” Ford hung up and started the car. He had 19 minutes to get there.

Miz laid on the couch in Wanda's lap. Rather, her vessel was. If she was checked by a doctor right this moment, they would declare her to be in a Coma. But luckily, she wasn’t actually comatose and eventually stirred. There was also a lot of matter swirling around in the air above where she laid. Wanda and the others stared in awe. No matter how many times they saw it, it was still amazing.

Slowly, multiple figures appeared. They floated gently to the ground and swayed before shaking themselves. “Whoa! That feels so weird!” Keyhole groaned. All of Bill's friends had been given constructs that look essentially like their real forms but smaller. More… human sized.

If any nosy neighbors tried to peek over the fence they would just look like people in elaborate costumes or decorations. Miz opened her eyes and gasped. Oh. She definitely needed food now. She reached up a hand to tug on her adoptive mother's shirt. “Food? Please?”

Wanda laughed. “Well Stan and Diego are back. Ford should be arriving soon as well.” She picked up her daughter (Miz squealed with laughter) and carried her outside. The aliens were looking around the house in wonder. Xanthar (shrunken to the size of a mastiff) and Sir Bedazzle shuffled around each other questioningly.
“What a lovely house!” Pyronica (now 6 feet tall and NOT on fire), exclaimed. Krytos wiped imaginary dust off his plane and looked around with a scowl. He knew he should feel happy for Bill...but he couldn’t help but feel upset knowing Stanford would be here as well. He saw one of the triplets, that was Stanley, and Sebastian was nowhere to be seen yet.

Amorphous Shape was already touching everything and even slipped the TV remote into one of his blocks. Miz waved her hand and pulled it back out absently. “Come on guys! I wanna eat the food already!” She steered the multi-segment organism outside before he stole anything else.

Dipper smiled when he saw his alien friends. “Hey! Teeth! Keyhole!” The aliens ran towards the teen, who was slightly taller than the last time they saw him (Dipper was glad he was still growing, Pines genes and tall men WOO!). It didn’t help that they were smaller. Keyhole gasped. “Dipper, your antlers! What happened to them? Do humans shed them?”

Teeth snorted. “Well, if the Atelatioan Deer shed their antlers after mating then maybe it works the same?” Teeth turned to Dipper “Congrats on getting laid dude.”

Dipper looked horrified. “Wha-What?! No! Guys, I haven’t had-had... sex, with anyone!” He hissed, blushing. “Those were just from the vessel Miz created…” He covered his face. The two aliens looked confused but shrugged it off.

Hectorgon was already looking at the level of technology available here. “Ah, this touch screen is so flat. Where are your 3D interactive holograms?” He asked Dillon as he fiddled with a tablet. The teen shrugged. “We don't have those yet?” the Polysphere (who looked almost like some kind of Halloween decoration) twirled his mustache in thought.

8-Ball was giving Stan a hug. The two were the same height now. Stan laughed. “You really do look like a guy in a costume! It's cool.” the ogre grinned back. “I don't know if that was a compliment but thanks?” Stan looked at the alien and grinned. “Hey, arm wrestle rematch? Since we're the same size now?”

Over by the food table, Miz was already digging in. She had a plate piled high with food and was slurping up the noodles. She had told Wanda a few weeks ago that she needed noodles. Because you have to eat noodles on your birthday. That was tradition. Miz also said that she wasn't supposed to take a shower on her birthday, which Wanda had shrugged and didn't question her on.

“Hweh Kwuptos! Yoo haaf to twy dis!” Miz said before handing the Compass a plate with much less food on it. It was mainly the mashed vegetables and ground meat, something easy for him to eat.

Kryptos gave her a small smile before receiving the plate. “Thank you, Miz.” The demon nodded before focusing on her food. Even here, he was in a bubble, but... at least everyone had relaxed their 'punishment' of him to allow him to be close to Bill and all. As Wanda led Miz’s friends outside to eat, Seb and the blond twins went to the yard, already wearing normal clothes, and greeted everyone.

“Pyronica!” Zoe ran towards her and hugged her legs. She patted the woman’s legs and gasped. “Where’s your fire?! Do you want to borrow mine?” She made her little hand catch on fire and looked up at her big eye. Pyronica laughed. “Aw~look at how much you've grown~” she picked the girl up. “I don't think you can give me your fire though.” She giggled and hugged the girl.

“Why not? You can just catch on fire, like you were before!” The blonde girl tilted her head adorably. The Cyclopian grinned. “Well, Bill said this vessel was going to be non-flammable. Something about safety regulations?” She shrugged. “So. This is Earth huh? Bill talks about it
“I wanna see what the theaters are like here!” Teeth chattered. “Can we go to one?” Wanda looked the Mouth up and down. “Well...you'd have to wear a very different form...you stand out too much.
It's ok because it's Halloween right now, but…”

“What's Halloween?” Ammy asked. He was picking up the meatballs and squishing them a little before putting them back. Miz quickly put the ones he touched onto her plate. “Ammy! What did I say about touching food?”

Ammy blinked his many eyes. “It's rude to place it back on the serving plates afterward.” He nodded. “I forgot. I am sorry.”

Mabel giggled. “You're like a real mom.” Miz scoffed and placed a hand on her hip, the other still holding her plate of food. “I AM his mother thank-you-very much.” Carla leaned over to nudge Wanda. “You're already a grandmother. Ever thought about that?” Wanda rolled her eyes at her friend.

“Right, right.” The blonde chuckled. It was weird to think about it, she tried not to, and it was SO unfair she was the only one who got to feel old while Seb got away with it! And he was older!

He was lucky Miz already had her own father, he was like her brother and he was more than happy with that.

“You like theatre?” Dillon looked at the mouth. “My Ma is a director and producer! She performs sometimes too!” The teen grinned proudly and his mom ruffled his dark curls.

Teeth gasped. “I've been performing for years! I wanna be in movies someday.” He held his hands to the sides of his jaws. “Currently I'm in musical theater. Though, people tell me my voice is only good for comedic characters.” Miz ran over to hug him. “That's your strength! You always make the audience laugh!”

Teeth wiggled bashfully. “Geez Bill…” the Mouth smiled though. It felt nice hearing that. Miz pulled on his arm. “Come on. The food is delicious!” She whined as she tried to get her friends to try some of the meal. Miz grinned. “My mom cooked it!”

“And if you don’t eat, I’ll feel really sad~” Seb grinned widely and floated Keyhole, Teeth and Kryptos over to the table. Kryptos protested that he already ate some of the food.

Ammy picked up some of the meatloaf and placed it into his stomach block. He turned to Wanda with a deadpan expression. “I will preemptively say this is delicious. It will take a few minutes for my digestion to tell me whether or not this is true.” He looked down at his stomach block where the meatloaf was breaking apart. “And if it is not delicious, then I apologise for the lie.”

Wanda blinked before nodding slowly. “It...it’s ok, don’t worry, Ammy.” She nodded and picked up Zach. “Please, serve yourself.”

“Don't mind if I do~” Pyronica laughed as she strode over to grab the chicken. “Hm~it looks delicious~” she opened her mouth and ate the chicken whole. “Om nom nom.” Xanthar shuffled into the yard with Sir Bedazzle and Queen Flutter on his back and rubbed his face against Miz's side. She giggled and began pouring some iced tea and punch over him.

The Pines laughed at their antics and Wanda hugged Seb. She was so glad Miz was having fun with her friends. She had been worried about this, but everything was going so fine! Even Miz’s blue friend, Kryptos, was smiling!
She scooped some food on Zach’s plate as Seb did the same for Zoe and sat down to eat as well.

Kryptos kept sliding his chair closer to Miz as she was distracted. He didn't see that weird human with the glasses. Good. Maybe he wasn't going to be here. Kryptos was stopped from getting any closer by the bubble, but he was right next to her now. “Are you worried about being in another dimension?” Miz asked him. Kryptos paused. Well, he was. A little. “It's kinda weird knowing that the me now is nothing more than a constructed shell you have placed my soul into.” He answered.

Miz laughed. “Don't worry! I exist like this all the time. It's perfectly safe.” She patted his bubble. “I won't let you come to harm Kryptos.”

The compass smiled widely. “Thank you, Miz. I know you wouldn’t…and, being here with you...is-is pretty nice--”

“Sorry I'm late!” a voice that grated on Kryptos's audio sensory organs rang out. The compass scowled as everyone turned to see Ford coming into the yard. Stan had gone to open the door for him. The eldest Pines triplet grinned as he walked up to Miz with a huge bouquet of flowers, no, not a bouquet, several pots.

Kryptos snapped his fork in half.

“Fordsie! You're super late!” Miz complained. Ford laughed sheepishly. “I was...getting your birthday present! The flowers needed to be fresh after all.” He excused as he handed her the basket filled with flower pots. “Happy birthday Miz.”

Seb, Carla, Mabel and Wanda cooed loudly as the man presented her the flowers. The rest of the humans gaped in shock and Bill’s friends looked confused.

Miz gasped at the basket and grabbed it to her chest. “Oh, Fordsie...they’re so pretty...” She whispered. She looked around at the yard. “I could plant them next to the tulips. It would look so nice there!” she was slowly trying to make a garden in the back yard. Wanda had no skill for gardening and Seb didn't care enough so Miz essentially got free reign of the yard to herself.

Ford hid his relief, glad that she liked the flowers. “Oh, and these too.” He handed her the wrapped gifts. And the takeout box of Yi Mein. Miz’s eyes widened at the smell. “Is that--” She was salivating. “Mine!” She declared, pointing at the noodle box. “That’s my birthday gift, so it’s mine! I don’t have to share!” Everyone else nodded, not wanting to compete with her for her food. They would lose.

Miz hugged Ford’s arm. “Thanks Fordsie~” she ran to put his wrapped gifts onto the present table where everyone else had put theirs. She went back to hug the scientist. “I’m glad you’re finally here. I’ll get you some food! Mommy made it and it’s actually great!”

Wanda narrowed her green eyes as Miz dragged Ford to the table. She wasn’t that bad cooking! She could feel Seb suppressing laughter right beside her and elbowed him.

Miz got Ford his own plate, and then proceeded to devour her birthday gift. Everyone stared. “So… between sushi and… whatever that is, what’s better?” Seb asked. Miz hummed. “Tough choice...” Ford was not seated beside Miz, on her other side.

Kryptos had his hands balled and trembling lightly. Stupid weird chinned human...looking so smug! He caught Keyhole looking at him worriedly and sighed. The compass allowed himself to relax. It's fine. The human was just a human. A mortal. Even if he somehow managed to charm Bill with his adorable incompetence (because why else would Bill like him?!) that meant nothing.
In the end, the human was mortal. He would die and Bill would be sad. And Kryptos would be there to comfort her. The compass relaxed, assured in his position.

They all had lunch. Kryptos on Miz’s right and Ford on her left. She wanted to spend time with him, but she wanted to spend time with everyone else as well. The demon girl jumped from place to place. She talked to her friends first. She explained to them about human food (which she’d made modified versions of, on their own side of the Door), answered Hectorgon’s questions about human technology to which Kryptos mumbled to himself “Not advanced, primitive, dumb...” and the concept of Halloween.

“There’s a lot of history to the holiday back when it was a pagan celebration but nowadays it’s the one night out of the year where it is considered acceptable to dress up super suspiciously and go to people’s homes demanding stuff without having the cops called on you immediately.”

Dipper heard the weird explanation and chimed in. “You demand candies though...you can’t go around asking for personal stuff.” He glared at the dark-haired girl. “And it’s kids who dress up, some teens also do it. When adults do it, it's weird and they don't get anything.”

8-Ball blinked his weird eyes and grabbed a distracted Diego to hug. “So...it’s a holiday for human cubs?”

“Eh, yeah, sort of.” Dipper agreed and Miz rolled her eyes. “You're NO fun.”

“I don’t get it. Why would people want to give stuff to strangers? Even if they are human children.” Ammy asked confused.

Miz laughed evilly. “Because It's trick or treating! If they don't give us a treat...we get to play a prank on them!” Dipper groaned. “Stop teaching them awful things about our holidays!”

“Human holidays sound pretty weird.” Hectorgon nodded as Pyronica grinned and crossed her arms. “I think they sound amazing! What other stuff do you humans do, cutie?” The boy blushed but stayed sitting with the aliens.

Miz took that time to check on her other cousins. She asked Dillon and Mabel about their romantic lives and wanted everything in full detail. Dillon was doing great with Phillip and was upset to admit they hadn’t used their now legally adults status for more exciting stuff. Miz patted his knee. “I’m sure you’ll find a moment to make your first time special~”

“And how is everything with Maxi, Shooting Star? Have you used your teleportation amulet yet~?” Miz asked. She had spoken with Amelie a few times since the summer ended but they hadn't found a good time to hang out in person. The Selkie apologized for being unable to make it for Miz's birthday, some undersea issue came up. (Miz was worried, the warming of the planet and the oceans had disrupted a lot of the sealife. As a mammal, Amelie was technically ok, but her people’s food and habitat was being... )

Mabel blushed. “Well~” she laughed. “We've gone out on a few dates, lots of snuggling as the weather got colder...and I knitted him a sweater with a built in battery powered electric blanket!”

“Isn't it dangerous to hook up electrical appliances to sweaters?” Dillon asked. Mabel snorted. “Naaaah~” there's no danger to having an electric blanket woven into an incredibly flammable article of clothing.

“Besides, my poor Maxi is always cold. His quadruplets handle cold much better than he does. By the way, his sisters are SO pretty! And his brother is really cute too, but Maxini is the cutest~" (Cute as they were, Mabel didn’t know much about them. They didn’t seem to like her much, because she was human. She knew Maxini was trying to hide that from her, but Mabel wasn’t stupid, she knew that his people didn’t like her.)

Miz and Dillon cooed and poked their blushing cousin. “And...have you...you know, yee-haw yet?” Dillon started and Mabel covered her face with a squeak. “Oh god, Dillon! We’ve only been seeing each other for a few months!” (Though, Mabel had considered it... look, she was a woman with NEEDS!)

Miz and Dillon laughed. “So I’ll take that as a not yet. It’s fine. You don't have to rush.” Miz assured her. “After all, Dillon's been dating Phillip for....how long has it been?” She turned to the tall boy.

“Around 2 years.” He said proudly. “And it’s not that we didn’t want to. Oh, we wanted to do it SO bad! There were some times we were just there, touching and-”

“Ok, we get it. No need to describe it.” Mabel laughed nervously. “Yes, describe it.” Miz grinned wickedly.

“We just wanted to be 18 for it. And now we’re more than old enough. So we did. No problems and all.” Dillon shrugged and looked at Miz. “You naughty girl~ What are you turning? 12? I’ll keep your apparent kid mind safe.” He grinned mockingly, much like Stan usually did.

“I'm turning 13! Thank you very much! I'm a teenager now!” Miz huffed. “And beyond that, I'm almost 700 billion years old!” She kicked her legs with a frown. Mabel sighed. “13 doesn’t feel that different from 12. Trust me.” She realized that after their crazy summer with Uncle Seb.

“Nah. You’re practically a fetus.” Dillon teased. “Stop it!!” Miz growled as her eyes flashed red.

Dillon paled and raised his hands. “Ok! Ok! Phillip was on top of me, kissing my chest, we-we dr-dry humped too! Not saying anything more than that!” He said quickly. Miz pressed her hands to her cheeks and squealed, her eyes going back to normal. Oh~that sounded pretty hot. “Well I'm happy for you. Both of you.” She said sincerely. “I ship you with your partners SO hard!”

The cousins grinned and blushed a bit. They were glad they had the support of a powerful demon.
They wouldn’t let their partners leave now, mwhaha.

“If Mabs get married to Max, will he be protected as well?” Dillon asked and the demon smiled.
“Of course! Anyone married to those of Pines blood!” she thought that was good enough to protect their immediate families. “You know, I’ve asked Seb and Wanda about a Deal to be my family forever...so that they would be immortal...but they said no.” She pouted. “Mom doesn’t like the concept...and Seb doesn't want to be immortal again...”

Mabel and Dillon looked at each other. Oh boy. They knew what this was about but they weren't sure how to handle it. “Miz. It's...just how they feel. I know you feel upset about that but...their mortality is their choice.”

Miz sighed and reached out to hug her cousins. “But why? Who doesn't want immortality? Seb is scared of being mortal! I know it...but he still doesn't want to live forever...” She sighed into Mabel’s sweater. ”If he's afraid of losing people he cares for, I can make them immortal too! I can make all of you immortal!” She looked up at Mabel. “Wouldn't you like that?”

“Um...I don’t know, Miz.” She stroked her head. “Living is nice but...”
“Living forever sounds exhausting…” Dillon bit his inner cheek. “You’re really brave for doing it…”

“I don’t have a fucking CHOICE.” Miz snarled into Mabel's stomach, gripping the soft sweater in her little fists. “I can't die. I just keep coming back. Over and over and over…” her shoulders started to shake. “So why can't I take the people I love and keep them with me?”

Mabel pet Miz's hair. “I'm sorry. But...we just...can't. It doesn't mean we don't love you. We just...have things here that we have to do and being immortal isn't...part of that.” She winced, wishing she was smart like Dipper and could say something more intelligent to comfort her little cousin.

Miz remained quiet and took a few deep breaths before her shoulders loosened and she pulled away. “I know. Sorry. I'm just...selfish is all.” She wiped her eyes. “Well, enough about that. I know there's a piñata around here and I want to destroy it.”

Dillon crouched in front of her. “Are you ok? You understand we love you really much, right? Even if we’re mortals.” Miz looked at the floor for a second before smiling. “Yup.” Dillon nodded and ruffled her hair. “Ok! Then I’ll tell aunt Wanda you are ready for the piñata!” he trotted away and Miz excused herself a second to go see how Ford was doing.

The scientist was sitting in the middle of his two youngest brothers who were arguing about a television series. “You just think I’m wrong because you never saw it!” Seb frowned. “House Full was a great series that showed the love family can have for each other! They went to live with him to help him raise kids!” Shermie stuck his tongue out. “It sucked! It was boring, the laugh track was too loud and nothing plot relevant ever happened! In fact there WAS no plot!”

Ford looked at Miz and grimaced. He didn’t watch any of those shows his brothers were talking about, and they kept asking him to be the tie breaker. “Help me…” He mouthed. She grinned and wagged her eyebrows. “What's in it for me?” She mouthed back. Ford held back a groan. He made a serious expression. “A session.” He mouthed. Miz grinned. Oooh~

“Hey Seb~” Miz singsonged as she leaned over to hug him. “I wanna steal Ford for a piggyback ride.” the man nodded absently, more focused on his argument. “Sure.”

“Okie dokie~” Miz grabbed Ford's hand and dragged him away from the escalating discussion about the merits of a show with no plot. Ford heaved a sigh of relief. “What's so important about some tv show?”

“People have strong feelings for shows they like.” Miz responded wryly. “Now get on your knees.”

“What?!” Ford sputtered. Miz pulled on him. “I want my piggy back ride! Now get down here you stupidly tall person!” Ford didn't appreciate the insult, but agreed and got on his knees, feeling a little incredulous. Miz climbed on and grabbed chunks of his hair to hold herself, making him grunt softly. It didn’t hurt, she wasn’t pulling, it just tickled somewhat. That caught Pyronica’s attention and she laughed loudly. “Yes! Go Bill! Ride that human! Show him who’s boss!”

Stan spat his beer as everyone who ‘knew’ about their ‘relation’ coughed uncomfortably. Miz giggled and kicked her little legs. “Go Fordsie! Fordsie the horsie!”

“That sounds stupid.” Ford grumbled before holding onto her legs and walking forward. Kryptos stared at the two of them. He wasn't sure if he should feel jealous or not. On one hand, Bill was pressed close to the human, on the other, the human was being humiliated. Kryptos chose to just appreciate the annoyed look on his stupid face. Hah! (Not to insult Sebastian’s or Stanley’s faces, they were cool and not stupid like Stanford).

“The piñata is ready!” Wanda called out. Miz squealed and tugged on Ford’s hair. “Come on! Go go go!” The scientist wondered if he would have been better off sitting with Seb and Shermie. He glanced over.

“I do admit PALS was a better show. But that's not the point of this argument.” “Yeah well, if you just wanted a show about a family doing boring, everyday stuff, Grady Group was much better. They had the interesting and damn iconic theme song as well.”

Nope. Being a horse was still better.

To his relief, Miz asked to be put down so she could play with the piñata. It was shaped like a baby with an hourglass symbol on the forehead. Miz’s friends and those who lived through Weirdmageddon grinned, they knew about her dislike towards the baby. Meanwhile, the rest of the Pines were shocked at the shape of the piñata. Why did Miz want to hit a baby?

Miz wanted her siblings and Diego to try to hit the piñata as well, so they took turns to try to destroy the baby. None of them were managing to do it so Miz gave the bat to Kryptos. “Come on! Give it a try!”

The compass had a very vicious grin on his face. This would be practice for the real thing. (He didn’t need to kill Time Baby anymore, but one could hope and dream.) He was blindfolded and he sent out his electromagnetic senses. He had been working on that for centuries. He could feel it. The energy within all living things. Bill shone brightly. Glorious, beautiful and radiant to his senses. He nearly gasped, once again beyond grateful for whatever luck it was that made such a powerful god take an interest in him.

Compared to Bill's supernova, everyone else, everyTHING else, were barely more than candle flames, flickering weakly. The humans barely even showed up, their own energies lost in the presence of Bill's all consuming glow. Kryptos shook his head. No need to be distracted. Even if Bill was the most powerful being he had ever felt, he had a baby to destroy.

With his senses stretched out, the compass felt the shape of the person (Wanda) holding the long stick with the baby shaped paper sculpture hanging by a string. She would move it around or pull it up to make it so people couldn't hit it. Kryptos tightened his hold on the bat. He was going to do this. He would destroy the baby, impress Bill and then...

Well, this was just a practice round. He had a long way to go before he would be able to actually kill Time Baby. Kryptos swung and managed to hit the paper baby square in his face. He heard the children cheer and grinned in triumph. Kryptos pulled the blindfold off and yelped when Bill hugged his bubble close. “You did it Kryptos!” She squealed. “You got us candy!”

Kryptos slowly hugged her back. “Yes...I-I got-

“Now MOVE outta my way, man! Zoe’s gonna take everything for herself!” Miz pushed the compass to the side and she threw herself to the ground to get the delicious candies. This was one of the few times she was allowed to have chocolate after all!

Kryptos hit someone lightly and he grumbled as he fell to the floor. “I-I am so-” He looked up and Ford nodded, tilting his head to the side. “It’s quite alright. Are you ok?” He offered a six-fingered hand to help him stand up, completely oblivious to how much Kryptos hated him. The compass averted his eye and got up by himself, dusting his plane off. He ignored Ford's hand and walked over to where Miz was fighting off her little sister for a chocolate bar.

Zoe blinked and nodded. Right. She always fought for stuff, but she couldn’t fight Miz! It was her birthday so she had to make her happy. “Ok! Have it! I’ll get you more!” The little girl declared before she ran away giggling. She snatched her twin’s chocolate bar and then stole Dipper and Dillon’s. She would collect all the bars she could for Miz!

Her parents laughed but no one was getting actually hurt so they allowed it. Miz’s friends watched as Zoe collected (stole) candies for their friend and smiled. That was so adorable. Pyronica was liking this girl even more! She was cute, strong and a fighter. Reminded her of herself when she was young.

Zach and Diego were now laying down with Xanthar and Sir Bedazzle, petting their bodies. Xanthar loved their pets. Their hands were so small and so soft~ he liked how gentle they were.

Keyhole was holding up a chocolate bar in confusion. “What IS this stuff?” He asked. Miz practically purred. “It’s chocolate~ I haven’t had chocolate in...like forever!” She got a bunch during trick or treating but she hadn't eaten any of her Halloween candy yet. Her alien friends stared at the chocolate. They had something similar out in space but it wasn't actually chocolate, this would be their first experience with the substance.

Teeth chopped down and chewed. He hummed. “Oh. It's sweet....with a faint bitterness...” that was when he began coughing and toppled over. Miz immediately went to his side to check on him. “TEETH!” She cried in panic.

She scanned her friend and paled. “Hang on...I can fix this...” She held out her hands and pulled. The particles of chocolate left the Mouth's body and he wheezed as she pulled it all out of him. “Ok. Mouths are deathly allergic to chocolate...that's good to know.” Miz sighed in relief when Teeth's breathing got better.

The humans frowned in worry but knew Miz had solved the problem. Diego walked over to him and patted his hand. “Poor Teeth...he will never eat chocolate cake or chocolate milk, or chocolate-” Stan frowned. “Diego, enough. I think we understood.”

“You humans have a lot of chocolate things.” Pyronica frowned. “Is it as dangerous for you as it is for Teeth?” She looked at Miz. If it was, it reminded her of those lunatics asking for pineapple on pizza. Eating something capable of killing you. Actually, no wonder Bill loved this chocolate stuff, it seemed dangerous.

“Um...chocolate is actually incredibly toxic to most animals even here on Earth.” Ford pointed out “It might be dangerous for them to eat it.” Pyronica blinked. Incredibly toxic? Yup, definitely something Bill would love to eat. “Humans have a ‘thing’ where they find things that probably shouldn’t be eaten, and then eat them anyway.” Miz pointed out. “It’s part of what I admire about them.”

Miz looked sad that her friends couldn't try any of the chocolate. Ammy pet her shoulder. “It's fine mother. This just means there's more for you.” That made Miz brighten up. ”'Yay!’” she munched on a chocolate Wafer.
Everyone rolled their eyes. After everyone was done, they were called to sing for Miz. Everyone crowded around the table, with her, Seb, Wanda and the twins 2.0 in the center. Then the other Pines and her friends at the front.

Miz stared at her cake the entire song, wiping happy tears from time to time. It’s been so long since she’s had a birthday...with the people she cared most next to her... “Thank you, guys...thank you for accepting me and being my family...thank you for being my friends...I don’t know where I would be without all of you...” She grabbed Seb’s hand and squeezed. She was so glad she disobeyed Ax. She met one of her best friends on that adventure, and met her big brother, and it led her to this. She was grateful for that. The children and Seb were drawing little post-it note spells to make dancing lights around the yard. It was all so beautiful. She was sad that Blue wasn’t here. But he tended to bring down the mood for everyone else, so she didn’t want him here to make her birthday... difficult for the humans.

Wanda squeezed her shoulder gently and smiled. “Make a wish, Miz.”

Miz stared into the flickering candles and closed her eyes. A wish. As a demon who granted Deals, she had been begged often for Wishes. But she couldn't grant True Wishes. It was beyond her power. This birthday ritual was just a fun thing humans created. There was no god behind it. No real deity who could grant the wishes of those who blew out the candles. Still, with enough belief, power could be generated. She knew this from her creation of Hauntfest and other such rituals. So...maybe...

‘I wish...I can stay with my family. That I will be a true part of this family. That...I can stay with them for as long as I possibly can.’

She breathed out and blew out the candles.

The rest of the party went smoothly until everyone realized that Miz was drunk.

Despite the insanity that followed, the night ended with everyone in high spirits and Bill's friends spending the night (since drunk Door’ing was apparently dangerous), they decided that the vessels Miz built would be turned into dolls for easier storage for next year's Halloween.

Miz opened the gifts, mainly anime DVDs, dolls and such. Ford had built Miz a tea maker, with sections for making infused flavors. She loved it.

The entire family banned her from eating all the chocolates from her trick or treating. “You can barely stand straight.” Wanda sighed. Miz managed to sneak the truffle and half the box Ford gave her before they caught her. Ford actually didn't end up giving Miz another session after she passed out from her chocolate high. Everyone agreed that she was only allowed one chocolate bar a week at most . And only if she had supervision.

With Miz in her arms mumbling in a delirious daze, Wanda and Seb said bye to everyone and thanked them for coming, they could confirm that the all powerful god’s first birthday was a huge success. “We’re awesome.” Seb grinned and Wanda laughed. “Hell yeah!” Miz snuggled into her chest happily. “Mmm wwhhezzz…”

Chapter 36

-What it means to learn-

---

(Therapist) Linda looked down at the test results from the information she’d gotten out of some of the things Miz had told her. She frowned. But she couldn’t make a diagnosis yet. She would give Miz a few more tests the next time she came in for a session. There was something Linda was beginning to notice, really notice.

She knew that Miz wasn’t human. But she… was still somewhat human.

And after Linda had discovered how Sebastian had ADHD… well… she didn’t want to say anything yet, with Miz, not until she was more sure. She didn’t want to worry them if she was wrong. But she would still have to ask Miz (and her parents) to be able to run the tests. Filling out a questionnaire was one thing, more intensive tests were… well, she would need proper consent for those.

But that could be handled later, after she spoke with Miz a few more times. It wasn’t that much of an issue right now anyway. Hopefully.

November rolled by. Xin or sometimes Yun, when Miz felt like it, had been teaching Max a few things. He now knew the weather, the natural regions of the world (something Max quite enjoyed), the continents and most countries with the main important capitals, all with songs the Great Dragon taught him.

Max just laughed. He felt like a pup again…when the storyteller would sing and describe historical events. She even sang him the multiplications tables, mentioning something about Schoolhouse Rock, whatever that was.

Miz also took advantage of the fact that Ford’s shy, unassertive ass was teaching Max a few classes to describe the different animals and species that habited the world, their classification drawn out into a big tree that she pasted onto the side of Ford’s lab. Then she would give Max all the drawings they made of the different animals to place onto the tree on the right branches based on the main characteristics You know, fish, amphibians, reptiles, mammals,
"Ok, a human's a mammal." Max dramatically pasted the drawing next to other animals. "They have all the things you said. Not eggs, yes fur, and...milk…(Do they really make milk?) I didn't know they were animals."

"Yes, they do, and that's to feed their babies because they can't eat on their own immediately after being born. Humans need to be fed at least for 6 months. And yes, humans are animals too."

"That's dangerous, and demanding." Max deadpanned to which Yun nodded solemnly. "It is. Humans are kinda super vulnerable for very long time periods."

"And in humans...their feeding...is the...big...chest thing…" Max looked away, flustered. Yun grinned. "Yup~ If you're curious, I'm pretty sure Mabel would be glad to show you."

Max squeaked and Yun clapped her hands. "Also~ Everyone is technically an animal, at some point." Yun shrugged. "Humans descend from this big fella." she showed him a materialized picture of an ape and laughed at Max's disturbed face.

"Ugh! Humans don't look like that!" He complained and Yun showed him other reptile pictures, a crocodile, a gecko and an iguana. "And you dont look like these guys, but here we are~ That's called evolution. Species lose or gain different traits to adapt better to where they live so they can survive. You are bipedal like humans, but can also walk on 4 legs, because such a thing was useful for your lifestyle and survival."

"Then… where do Mermando’s people go?” Max blinked up at the wall. "Is HE a mammal? But from the sea? Like a lion seal or a dolphin?”

"That’s actually a good question, you see…” Yun reached up to hold up a picture of a very strange looking animal. “Sometimes, there are animals who exhibit traits that aren’t normally found in their branch of life. Like this Platypus for example. It’s a mammal but it lays eggs.”

“Whoa…” Max stared at the picture. It looked so fake.

“So here’s the thing. Mermando can’t breath air directly. He can only filter it out from water.” Yun looked up at the wall. “And he’s cold blooded, like you, and like other fish.” then Yun placed the picture of Mermando on the branch that was Fish, but with an arrow beside it pointing to Mammal. “So, by all accounts, he is a fish more than a mammal. And yet, he’s capable of breeding with aquatic mammals. And even humans.” Yun made a bit of a face at that. “Which doesn’t make much sense, but there’s a common ancestor somewhere down here,” she pointed at the area close to the ‘trunk’ of the tree near where the branches split, “That kept a bunch of unique traits even as it moved out and up…”

"And he feeds babies with milk too…” Max made a thinking face. "It's so cool, knowing all this...I would have never known about science knowledge if...if I had a different scale color." Max gasped at his epiphany. "Because then, I’d already be married and I would never have met Mabel or Mr. Pines or you, Great Dragon."

"I'm pretty sure you would have learned a lot of stuff anyway, how you look doesn't change your abilities and how clever you are. And curious!" Yun poked his nose with one of her hands. She felt it colder again so she increased the room's temperature to make Max more comfortable.

“I d-don’t know about that.” Max looked down at his feet. “I would have been nesting with eggs and pups. I wouldn't even have time to want to learn stuff.” Yun reached over to ruffle his hair.
"You would have been unsatisfied all your life." Yun told him sadly, "But you have the chance to learn anything you want here with me." She said seriously and Max hugged the alien tightly, nuzzling into her side. “Thank you Great Dragon!”

“You're welcome, pup~”

There was a knocking sound and Max glanced at Dr. Pines who looked over at him with a smile. "Max. I'm sorry for being underskilled in my ability to teach you, I volunteered to teach you but I didn't respect you, your beliefs or the ways you learn." He put 4 diplomas of his online courses on the table. "I...I'd love to share my knowledge with you, to expand your own knowledge in the best way that suits you."

Max smiled easily. "Ok Mr. Pines!” He didn’t mind really. The fact that Mr. Pines was even wanting to teach him was already amazing. Yun coo’ed at the adorable smile. “Ohhh~” She ran up to hug Max to her chest. “I wanna adopt you~” she purred. Max blinked. Ford sighed and buried his face in his hands. “Max is an adult.”

“So am I,” Yun huffed.

"But I...have my parents." They were busy with the new batch of eggs they were having, but he HAD them.

"I don't care~" Yun nuzzled against him. “Oh you’re so cuuuuuute~” she had a void inside her that only CHILDREN could fill. Was that wrong? “Baaaaaby~!!!!”

Ford shook his head and helped Max free himself from Yun’s grip. "I want to hear about you and your culture Max, everything you like and the things you've learned." He had his own teaching method now. He wasn't going to explain it from zero, he'd use what Max already knew (almost what Yun had been doing these past few weeks but Ford didn't need his self esteem broken) as a base to build up the rest of his learning.

Yun sat down on the side and watched Ford with a tiny smile. He was a fuckin idiot, but she loved this about him, when he cared about something, he was capable of being his best. It was the passion with which he did things, it was quite attractive.

Ford worked hard with Max for the rest of the month and there was a clear improvement. From a daily topic it would derive in many other things, it wasn't divided rigidly in school subjects. Like, if Max talked about the Queen's laws and way of ruling with the priestesses, Ford would begin explaining how human also had monarchies before and they compare the characteristics with Max's city and way of life, it would also turn into a discussion about what a good ruler should be like and Max would learn about humans called 'philosophers' whose job was THINKING. It was so strange and awesome! And Ford found himself...actually having fun, teaching Max. It even made more sense to him, to teach a different species how humans worked. It was entirely different from teaching the interns.

Ford blinked when he felt four sets of hands wrapping around him. “Yun?” she purred against him. “You’re doing a good job, so I’m giving you affection as a way to let you know how proud I am of you~”

"That's... very specific, but thank you." Ford laughed. He was glad to get to teach and mentor Max again, properly this time.

Max ended up spending Thanksgiving with Ford, Soos, Melody and Abuelita, much to Mabel’s complete anger. (You're stealing my boyfriend!!!(}
And as for how Yun/Miz spent her Thanksgiving, well…

The fall air was nippy and Seb sneezed when a cold breeze went by. Ugh. He sniffled and continued raking the leaves. He WOULD use his powers but this was the front yard and the whole neighborhood could see him. The former demon sighed as he moved the rake. Stupid trees and their whole, dropping leaves thing. Why were there so many oak and maple trees here anyway? Why weren't there more evergreens? At least those don't need to be raked up, right?

“Weee!” Zoe squealed before she leapt right into the pile of leaves Seb had worked so hard to make. She scattered the crunchy, dead plant material as she waved her arms around. Seb felt like crying. He worked so hard on that. In fact, his eye welled up with angry tears.

“ZOE PINES! YOU-YOU DEMON!” He sobbed angrily as the girl continued to throw the leaves carelessly into the air so the wind could blow them around the yard.

“You know what, kid?” Seb growled. He made her stand up, pulled her out of the leaf pile with a scowl. “I was working on that, and you ruined it. Now YOU have to do it.” He gave the rake to her and sat down. Zoe looked at the instrument and frowned. “But...but I’m little. I can’t work.”

“Is this your house?” Seb sneered and Zoe nodded slowly. “Then you are contributing. Now start sweeping.” Zoe pouted but her father didn’t let up so she grumbled and began raking the leaves.

Seb watched with a satisfied smirk as his demon daughter worked. She deserved that, and he was teaching them how to rake leaves. Everyone won. When Zoe was almost done, after she moaned and complained loudly, sometimes even sobbed as if she was being hit (that kid didn’t know what being hit was.), Wanda came out of the house to check on them. She was wearing a light blue turtleneck and she looked so pretty…

“Mommy! I’m being tortured! Help!” Zoe sniffled. It was getting a bit colder. She was dressed in long sleeves for that reason. Seb snorted. “You're doing chores is what you're doing.” Wanda crossed her arms with a grin as Zoe sobbed and continued working. “Zach should work too!” She complained.

“Your brother isn’t a nightmare child like you~” Seb poked her nose. “Don't worry. You’re almost done anyway.” he turned to look at his wife and Wanda smiled before kissing his chilly nose. “Sebas, are we going to spend Thanksgiving with your family or at my mom’s?” It was two weeks away after all.

“Well, I wanted to bother Shermie this year with our presence, you know how he never sets up his house for any of our family get-togethers? I think that’s pretty dumb because that means he has to drive or pay for pla-Sorry. I got distracted. What were ya saying?” Wanda rolled her eyes. “Where we will stay for this holiday.”

“Um…I don’t mind going to your parent’s house! Your niblings love me!” Seb grinned. Wanda rolled her eyes. “Because you give them money!”

“Does that take away from the fact that they love me?” Seb raised an eyebrow and the blonde laughed. “Alright…” he got her there. Her family loved Seb, they thought he was a nice hot boy back when they were teenagers and now that he was a successful designer, they liked him even more. Her uncles were forced to eat their words!

“Oh right. I haven't introduced Miz to my family yet.” they heard about the adopted daughter but didn't know the details.

Zach and Miz came out of the house as well, upon which, Zach noticed the pile of leaves. “Weeee!” The other twin squealed before running towards the pile, and of course, destroyed it.

Zoe’s eyes turned bright red as Seb shook his head. “That’s how it feels, kid.”

“AHHHHHHHHHHH!”

---

A little bruise on the cheek and an ice bag for a certain blond boy later, Wanda informed the twins and Miz about the plans for next week. She was pretty happy to see her family again.

“Cool! I’ll meet my other grandparents!” Miz cheered. Wanda was really happy for that as well. Her parents had been sad they couldn't meet Miz immediately after her adoption.

Their plans to go back to Pennsylvania for the holidays were totally cancelled when, 2 days later, Seb and Wanda were awoken by a strange noise coming from downstairs. “Seb…” Wanda whispered nervously but the man put a comforting hand on her shoulder. He mentally locked the kids’ door and jumped out of bed before looking under it. He grabbed his gun and grinned. “This is why, despite all the shit I hate about it, I like this country’s love for guns.”

He instructed Wanda to stay there and slowly walked downstairs, growling. That bastard was going to pay for interrupting his sleep. He crept down the stairs and, with his gun held steady, he flicked on the lights. “You have 5 seconds to get out of my house or-!” he paused when he saw who it was.

“Rico?!” Seb gaped and lowered his gun. “What?! ¿Qué mierda haces en mi casa?!” He demanded in Spanish.

The tall, bulky Colombian man grinned and closed the front door. He even had the stupidity to enter from the front door! Was he insane?! Well, Seb wasn’t one to judge anyone’s sanity...but still!!

“Hello, gringo. Can’t I just pay a visit to an old pal?” Rico casually looked around. Nice place. Clean but with plenty of things lying around to give it a very comfortable, lived in feel. There was a corner of the room with a shelf filled with art supplies around a desk with many drawers that was covered in paper scraps and tiny paper animals. Another desk next to it had plastic animals and dinosaur toys that had been cut into pieces and hot glued back together in different combinations. A third desk had tiny model airplanes and jets that seemed to be from one of those Make-it-Yourself toy sets. Rico figured those must be the work desks for Seb's children. It was incredibly adorable.

“At 3 am?” Seb asked unimpressed. “By breaking in?! I know you're a criminal and all...but... why like this?!” he lowered his gun but didn't put it away. “I could have shot you.”

“Bah, I’ve survived worse…” Rico waved a hand and set a duffle bag on the floor. “Hey, you lost an eye, awesome. You don’t have that healing power anymore? That was pretty awesome too. I still remember when you had that knife in your stomach. Gross, your guts were almost trying to come out.”

“Why are you in my house?” Seb asked tiredly and massaged his eye. He didn’t bother to cover his empty, scarred eye socket. The Colombian man had never come here, they always met away from here. Away from Seb's new life with his loving, innocent family. “Thanks for the visual memory...I-I love remembering my near death experiences.” He healed small stuff faster than normal, but if he died now, he would die for real.

Rico laughed. “Lo siento. Anyway. I'm gonna be staying here for a while.” He looked around. “You have a guest bedroom? I don't mind the couch but…” he looked over at the children sized desks in the corner of the living room. “I don't know if your wife would appreciate me being so close to your kids.” He grinned. “How ARE your kids by the way? Still can't believe you got hitched. You were always a lucky Bastard.”

“What?!” Seb frowned. “M-My kids?” He said intelligently and utterly confused. “Yes, your kids. you know, the ones that came after you had sex. Your woman is hot.” Rico nodded solemnly.

Seb finally recovered from his shock enough to process the important part of Rico's words. “S-Stay?! You can’t stay! Whatever you did, it's not my problem. I worked for you a long time ago and I'm fine with helping you with little things occasionally. Keeping you here is HUGE!” He hissed.

“I don’t have another choice, kid. I’m being followed by our rivals. They are bastards! They make our job look like a nice legal job! And we are saints compared to those pieces of shits! Their leader changed recently and he wants me dead.” Rico frowned. “I am starting to think you don’t want me here.”

“No! I don’t!” Seb pushed the man with all his might but didn't move him an inch. “ I have a wife and three children that YOU will put in danger! Go hide somewhere else! Urghh!” Seb continued pushing him.

Rico blinked in amusement. “We can make a deal for that?” he held out his hand. “You like those, right?” Seb groaned and rubbed his forehead. “Look Rico, I owe you a lot. Don't think I'm not grateful for everything you've done for me-”

“Like being willing to make those fake adoption papers for your newest daughter before your wife came up with a legal way to do it instead. She's quite cute by the way. Don't know where you found her but hey, I know you aren't the type to hurt a child-”

“I didn't kidnap Miz.” Seb growled. Rico placed a hand on Seb's shoulder. “The point is, you owe me for more stuff- I keep protectin’ ya, you know? Your business is growing, some people aren't happy ‘bout that.”

He had rivals? Seb had no idea. "...Really?"

"None of my enemies know I am here and I will not be leaving the house or drawing attention to you. I had 5 other fake trails to throw them on a, what's the phrase, wild duck chase.”

"It's a goose.” Seb corrected. Rico nodded. “I haven't drawn any of them here, your family is safe. I just need a place to stay for a week...or two.” Seb groaned. “We were going to head to Pennsylvania for Thanksgiving…”

“Ah! Yes. Thanksgiving! The holiday for being kind to your fellow man and repaying them for favors past.” Rico slung an arm around Seb's shoulders. “You can't throw me out to the streets before Thanksgiving! Why, that would be cruel.” Rico hugged Seb close to him. “You wouldn't want me to live on the streets, cold and hungry would you?”

Seb groaned again. “I can't make a decision like that without my wife…” He had to talk to Wanda. Helping Rico couldn't be that hard? It was just 7 days? “Quédate. Aquí.” Seb ordered the man and Rico laughed. “Wouldn’t want to go anywhere else.”
“I’ll talk to Wanda, don’t touch or steal anything…” Rico looked offended. “We don’t steal from our gente.”

Seb went back upstairs where he found Wanda pacing nervously holding her phone with 911 typed in. She just needed to press call. “Seb! Oh thank goodness! What happened?!” She hugged him tightly and Seb smiled sheepishly. “Ok...let’s just say...it’s an old friend…” He grabbed the phone from her and erased the number. No need to get the cops involved.

“A friend?! At this hour?!” Wanda hissed.

“Do you promise not to panic or scream or wake up the kids if I show you?” Seb grimaced and after taking a deep breath, Wanda accepted. “Ok…”

The couple walked downstairs, Wanda was trembling with fear and anticipation, but when they got downstairs, she saw nothing. “Urgh, that bastard, I told him to stay here!” Seb hissed. There was a shuffling noise. They followed the noise to the kitchen and Wanda gasped as Seb scowled at Rico who was assaulting the fridge.

“What the fuck did I tell you?!” Seb snarled and the criminal looked up with a grin. “Sorry, got hungry.” He shrugged, not looking sorry at all. Wanda held onto Seb's arm. “Seb, who is this?” the man certainly looked suspicious, she didn't want to judge but he was a man who broke into their house at 3 in the morning so she wasn’t feeling very charitable at the moment.

“Ugh, this is Rico. The guy who helped me forge documents and fake Ford's death years ago.” Seb said, squeezing Wanda’s hand gently. The lawyer immediately understood. This was the man who Seb wanted help with to forge Miz's birth certificates and other paperwork for the adoption. She narrowed her eyes.

“Well, hello, preciosa~” Rico grinned. “Let me say you look much more beautiful in person~” Seb groaned as Wanda continued glaring. “Pines....” (Oh no, last name!) “What is your delinquent friend doing in our house?” she was trying very hard to be civil. As a person who cared a lot about the law...

“He needs a place to stay for a week…” Sebastian sighed. “Or two.” Rico added but Seb glared at him. “Don’t push me.” he looked back at his wife. “And he wants to stay...here?”

“What?! No! Are you insane?!”

“A little, yeah.” Seb nodded but Wanda looked angrier. “What are you thinking ?! You can’t keep a delinquent here! What if the police find him?! Do you want to go to prison?! I certainly don’t! I send people to prison!” She hissed angrily. (“Hah. Delinquent. Not feeling up to calling me a criminal?”) “Think of the twins, Sebastian!” She was mostly worried for them. She loved Miz, and she knew the dragon would be totally fine if something happened, she wasn’t really a kid. But the twins were just 5! They were barely out of babyhood! And the idiot she had for a husband wanted to keep a multiple mafia leader here?!

“I'm not happy with this either but I can't throw him out! I owe Rico a lot. And he won't be going outside or anything.”

The two looked at the latino who was happily eating their food. Wanda scowled. “Sebastian, no...please...what about my family? You said we could go! We always spend holidays with your family…”

Seb raised an eyebrow. “But you never said you didn’t like it...I thought you liked my family.” He pouted. Wanda sighed and pulled her hair. “I like them, they’re all pretty weird and crazy and—!
And that’s not even the point, Sebastian William Pines!” She cried exasperatedly. “I don’t want him in my house!”

“...Please?” Seb pouted hard. “He helped me too...?” Rico nodded and pouted at the blonde too. “Please? I can assure you no one will find me here during this time. I just need to hide while my men work on everything. I will not do anything to your kids. I love these babies as if they were my own sobrinos!” Rico grinned.

Wanda groaned even louder and bit her hand. What to do?! What to do?! “If you stay, you will follow my conditions!” she hissed and the two men nodded quickly. “No going outside! No mafia shit here! You can’t use the phone! Wear gloves, I don’t want your fingerprints everywhere! And do not approach my kids if we aren’t nearby!” She listed off. She knew what could lead the police to someone, that was her job, so she wanted to keep Rico as invisible as possible.

“He can stay then?” Seb smiled softly and Wanda sighed heavily. “I’ll tell my mom we can’t go…” Seb hugged her tightly and kissed her lips. “Thank you, Wands...I promise I’ll repay you for this...”

“Sex is a good way to repay her. Must have done it well, no? You got twins.” Rico said usefully.

Seb’s hand caught on flames. “I’ll keep you hidden from view for 20 days at most, away from everyone except us and our family, and you will stay inside the house during the entire time, in return, you'll follow everything we said and-and you'll still help us if we need it because we're taking a huge risk right now...deal?” Rico shook his hand happily, sealing the deal. Seb raised a hand and an invisible barrier was cast. It worked like Miz’s perception filter but it also served to keep Rico inside. He nodded. This was fine.

“So~ guest room?” Rico asked. Seb grumbled. “We have a guest wing of the house. Most of the rooms are claimed but there are a few empty ones...” He led Rico to the magic door and opened it. The hallway it led to was lined with doors. They had little plaques on them with peoples names. Stan/Carla. Shermie/Abigail. Diego/Dillon. So on and on.

Rico was staring at the hallway. He stepped out and looked to the side of where the door was located. He glanced back at the long hallway. Back out. Back in. “How?” He cried. The area made no sense. From the outside it looked like the door would lead to a closet. How was there so much space inside?!

Was this more of Sebastian's black magic? The immortality was amazing enough but THIS? Rico grinned. If he could get Sebastian to make more of these spaces for him...oh the possibilities.

“Now, this room hasn't been claimed yet. You can use this for now.” Seb told him as he opened the door to a plaque-less room. “It's got it's own bathroom so you won't have to share with us.” He turned to stare at Rico firmly. “Breakfast is at seven. My children have school and I have work to do. Please don't cause problems for my family.”

“No problem, gringo. I will be on my best behavior.” Rico placed a hand on his chest. He looked in to see his temporary place of residence and couldn't hold back a gasp. It was a simple room but it was big and the bed looked incredibly soft. He could see the door to the bathroom inside as well. There were no windows, a plus.

There was one thing though...
“Why is the wallpaper images of birds choking on food?” Rico asked as he squinted at what looked like a sparrow attempting to swallow an entire watermelon. Seb snorted. “Miz has a weird sense of humor.”

“Your new daughter?”

“Yeah. She...was in charge of decorating.” Seb shrugged. “Well, good night.” Seb yawned. “See you in...like...3 hours...damn I am going to be exhausted tomorrow…” Seb turned and left.

“Please your wife! She deserves it for being so nice!” The man smiled and Seb groaned in embarrassment.

----.----

Seb had to wake up earlier than he expected. Wanda seemed to be still upset when she was getting ready for work (she didn’t talk to him like she usually did) and Seb sighed tiredly. Now he had to solve this. All thanks to Rico.

Seb went to wake up the twins and Miz, who had been visiting her friends and was so deeply asleep she didn’t hear a single thing that happened last night. “Zach...Zoe, wake up, you have school.”

“Urgmmm…” Zoe moaned into her pillow. “A plane will crash and burn everyone...especially Mackenzie...She’s a bi-”

“Wow, wow. Ok, no, no one’s dying. Wake up.” Seb forcibly made the three kids stand up. Miz rubbed her eyes as she blinked her sleep away. “Hey, Seb~ Good morning.” she yawned.

“Ok, listen up you three. An...old friend paid me an...unexpected visit yesterday. He is...unpredictable and even if he is my friend, I haven’t seen him for a while so, don't invite him to your room, don't stay alone with him, and we will be there when you are with him.” Seb listed off in paranoia. He didn't want Rico anywhere near his children.

The twins blinked sleepily and shrugged. “Ok.” They went off to get ready for the day. Miz started making her way downstairs to make breakfast. She hadn't bothered to change her clothes, still in her pajamas (an oversized long sleeve shirt made of cotton and bamboo that was incredibly soft). She yawned as she got downstairs and began pulling out eggs, bread and other things needed to make toasted sandwiches. She reached up to try and get the non-stick spray but couldn't quite reach it.

“Here.” A large hand grabbed the item from the shelf and handed it to the girl. Miz stared in surprise at the large man for a few seconds before shrieking. Seb heard the scream from upstairs and ran down as fast as he could. “Dammit Rico! What did you do?!?” He growled. If that Bastard hurt Miz he was gonna-Seb stared at the scene before him. Miz was huddled behind the counter while looking up at…

Seb snorted. Rico was stuck to the ceiling. The crime boss's eyes were wide and confused. “Eh...she's got powers too?!”

Seb laughed. Miz saw him and ran over to cling to his side, half hiding behind him. Seb continued laughing. “This is Rico. The friend I mentioned, kid.” Miz blinked before her eyes Flickered. “Oh. Should I put him down?”

“Nah. Leave him there until the twins go to school.”
“Pines!! ¡¡Bájame, idiota!!” Rico insulted in Spanish, making Miz groan softly. Not Spanish again! Looks like she was going to have to do a refresher on that language.

“You know, it’s not nice to insult the person putting a roof over your head.” Seb replied in Spanish as well before turning to look at Miz. “Wanda already left. Can you make breakfast while I check on the twins?” Miz nodded and the man trotted upstairs.

Rico, still on the ceiling, rolled his eyes. Who knew ‘Bill’ would end up in such a domestic life? What a softie. Though…he tugged on his arms but found that he was quite stuck. Interesting. The little girl was glancing up at him now and then but ultimately ran off back upstairs, probably to get changed.

Rico watched her go. So that was Miz. A mysterious girl that came out of nowhere and had no identification papers of any kind. Rico knew the cover story of how she was from a small village in China that kept all their records on physical documents, which were destroyed in a fire, but the fact that she didn't even have immigration papers meant she was either an illegal immigrant or there was something bigger going on. Rico grinned even as he remained stuck to the ceiling. This was interesting.

The man sighed and looked at the floor. This was getting stupid. “Can you please let me down?!?” He called but no one came. Eventually, Seb came down with Miz and his twins. The kids were tiny little blonds and they were so cute~

“Where is your friend?” The girl twin, Zoe, asked Seb. Her dad snorted and pointed up. The twins looked up at the ceiling and gasped when they saw a man there. “Is he a balloon?!?”

“I am not a balloon.” Rico narrowed his eyes. “Can you tell your dad to let me down?”

Miz (now properly dressed) quickly popped some bread into the toaster, set up the coffee maker and cracked some eggs into the frying pan after spraying the non-stick. As Seb went to help the twins make sure their backpacks were fully stocked, Miz cut up some avocados and put some turkey slices onto the frying pan as well. The toast popped up and Miz smeared avocado onto them to set the toast on plates next to the stovetop so she could put the eggs and turkey onto them once they were done cooking.

Rico could smell it from up here and his stomach growled. It looked delicious.

Miz got some lettuce out for the sandwiches as well before putting the eggs (lightly sprinkled with garlic salt) and turkey onto the toasted bread with avocado and placing the lettuce on top before putting the other slice of bread on to finish the sandwiches.

Rico's mouth was watering.

Miz set the table and got out cups filled with milk for the kids, a coffee for Seb and some non-lactose milk for herself. She considered the plates of food before putting a ruffled slice of lettuce leaf to the side of the sandwich with some cherry tomatoes just to make them look nice.

Rico quietly sobbed when Seb and the twins came back in to eat without giving him any of the food or letting him down.

“Pinnenes!” The colombian man cried. “Comee onnn! You can’t leave me here! YOU agreed I could stay!” Seb snorted. “And you ARE staying...staying on the ceiling that is!”
“You will regret this!” Rico whined.

Zach looked up at the poor man and pouted, his noble heart aching. “Daddy, why is he on the ceiling? He must be hungry and his belly must be hurting.”

“He startled me.” Miz replied. She took a bite of her sandwich. “Though, I guess he DID help me get something from a shelf…” she looked over at Seb. “Should I let him down?”

Seb stroked his chin, looking at the begging man. “Well...I guess I did warn you he was here...it’s not totally his fault you got scared…” He looked at Zach's pout, and he sighed. “Ok, ok. Put him down.”

Miz waved her hand and lowered the man gently to the ground. She even materialized another sandwich, a perfect copy of one of the others, under the table and pulled it out to hand to Rico. “Here. You're lucky I only stuck you to the ceiling. Most of the time I end up tearing off limbs when I'm startled.”

“Hahaha, awesome.” Zoe grinned just as Zach complained “I’m eating!”

“Thanks, kid...” Rico looked between Zach and Zoe as he chewed his sandwich. “So...twins, huh? How does that feel?” the twins glanced at each other before shrugging. “I beat up people who are mean to Zach.” Zoe said proudly. Seb sighed. “Yes, that’s true. Literally beat them up.”

“I think I like your kids more and more.” Rico grinned. Magic, strong kids. How cool was that!?

“And why don’t you beat them up yourself?” Rico asked Zach, who looked at his food. “It scares me...but I tell them not to bother me.”

“Yeah, you see, speaking is useless. If you want someone to listen to you, you have to knock at least one tooth out of their mouths.” Rico laughed.

“I’d appreciate you didn't teach that to the kids.” Seb smiled. He also thought that, but he agreed with Wanda that they’d teach the kids to resolve problems in a pacifist way. Violence would just get them in trouble.

Rico scoffed. “Are you a man? You need to stand up for yourself. You can’t let your sister fight for you.” He told Zach. Miz kicked him under the table while glaring. Rico stared at her, astonished at her gall. He was really beginning to like her.

“I-I am a boy! And I can fight!” Zach nodded in his direction. Seb groaned softly. “No, no, don’t fight. Ok, did you finish eating? I’ll take you to school.” He ushered the twins to stand up and led them to the living room to get their tiny backpacks. They were forced to take lots of things though, maybe it would be better to get them those backpacks with wheels.

“'Bye, Miz!'” The little kids hugged the black-haired girl before facing the tall man. “'Bye, Uncle Rico!'” They waved before walking towards the door to their dad. The mafia leader blinked at the friendly treatment. Huh.

“I’ll clean all this!” Miz called to Seb, who sent her a grateful smile before closing the door. “I’ll be right back, ok? Feel free to stick him on the ceiling again if he’s annoying you!” Rico leaned on his chair and finished eating his food. “That bastard…” Rico huffed before facing the girl. “So what? You don’t go to school or something?”

“I graduated. Took my exams, aced them. So I’m taking a ‘break’ before college.” She shrugged. “I like not being forced to sit at a desk listening to someone talk about things I know more about than they do.”

Rico nodded slowly. “School is stupid.” He agreed. “And, you got powers because you live here now? Pines’ powers are like, transmitted? Will I get them if I stay here longer?”

Miz laughed. “Nope. I have my own powers. And nope, definitely nope. Seb’s powers aren’t transmitted by contact, I think his are genetic.” She waved her hands to get the plates into the sink to wash. Rico settled in his chair and watched her work. “Your own powers huh? Is that why he adopted you?”

Miz shrugged. “I was already living with them. I guess mommy wanted to make it official.” She finished cleaning the dishes and went about her daily chores.

Rico watched the girl bring down baskets of dirty clothes and walk off to the laundry room. He blinked at how domestic it all was despite the...powers he knew the girl had. He let her work and went to the couch to watch TV. He hadn’t watched TV in a while. It didn’t take long before the always active man groaned loudly. “I’m bored!!”

Miz shrugged. “Read?” The man stared at her as if she grew a second head. She sighed and sat down in front of him on another couch. “Why are you here anyway?” she asked.

“Someone wants my head.” Rico said easily but Miz laughed. “Fun, but why here? At this house?” Rico leaned back lazily. “Because it’s the last place they’d look. A boring little suburban neighborhood with charming little civilian families, white picket fences and just the furthest from the criminal underworld as anything.”

“Nah.” Miz grinned. “You came here because Seb is someone you actually trust. And because a boring neighborhood like this is free from anyone who might be after you. Isn’t it?”

Rico sighed and stared at the ceiling. “Well...Pines was like my right hand man when he was younger... I guess I...trust him...which is really stupid for someone like me. Trusting is lowering your guard, you know? But Wil-er, Sebastian proved to be a good ally.”

Miz nodded slowly. “Seb’s a good kid. A better man than we deserve.” she laid down on another couch. “...I'll tear you apart limb by limb and eat them.”

“...I completely understood!”

Miz smiled brightly, looking like a normal child again. “Great! So, would you mind accompanying me to the entrance for a second?” Rico was confused at the weird questions but agreed anyway. Miz led him to the back door and skipped into the backyard. She watched in amusement as Rico stepped out, or rather, tried to. The Colombian cried as an electric shock suddenly ran down his spine and he was forced to step back.

“What the fuck!”

Miz laughed. “Oh, so that’s what it does! Seb hasn’t lost his touch!” She had felt a trace of magical weirdness when she woke up, but she wasn’t really sure what it was exactly and wanted to test it out. Seb had made deal then. Interesting. His powers worked so differently from her own. “I guess you made a Deal to not leave the house. I wonder why it's electrified though?"

She came back inside the house where Rico was grumbling. “Well, I’m gonna go work on my stuff.” She nodded to him before walking off to her personal work desk. Rico watched as she pulled out some paper and began folding. She had a pretty sizable collection of origami animals by this point. The twins loved them and would play with the larger ones she made.

She got the supplies needed for making them into jewelry and was going to get a decent stock of wares made before she tried to start her own online store. Wanda helped her make a Betsy account and Miz was hoping to be able to make money off selling handmade wares. Like she had tried to do back in her first life.

“Are you making origami?” Rico raised an eyebrow. Miz nodded without looking up at him. “I love it. Have you ever tried?” She asked curiously, and to her surprise, the man nodded slowly.

“Yes…At a, how you say, juvenile correctional as a boy…” He admitted softly. “It was entertaining, and I never forgot how to make them.” Miz wordlessly handed him a piece of colorful paper. Rico fiddled with it and there were a few minutes of quiet broken only by the sounds of paper being pressed and folded.

“Look. A bird.” Rico held up a crane. Miz smiled. “That's pretty good. I tried to teach Seb but he's awful at it. He can sew expertly but paper? Nope.” She folded a corner and hummed. “Which is really weird. He’s usually pretty good at handicrafts. He paints, and knits and sews like a professional. Origami is his weakness, I guess. My mom is really bad at art in general, her mind is her strength basically. Zoe doesn’t pay attention to follow the steps. Zach is the only one who can actually finish one animal.” She laughed.

Rico chuckled softly and grabbed another piece of paper to make another animal. He didn't really know a lot of folds. He made a turtle, a boat and a frog. Miz placed them up in a row on her desk next to her own work. Rico squinted at them. “Why are you making them so small?” He asked.

Miz pulled open a drawer to reveal some wires and beads, jewelry making supplies. “I'm gonna turn them into earrings. So they're supposed to be small.”

“Well, I have nothing else to do, so why not?” Miz taught him how to make some more stuff in a tiny version before they started working. That was how Seb found them. Sitting around the table folding origami. And he couldn’t believe his eye. Rico was cursing quietly everytime he dropped the paper or accidentally tore it. “It's so small! My fingers are too big!” He grumbled. Miz giggled as the large man struggled. Seeing him hunched over the desk was a weird scene, Rico was nearly twice Miz's size.

Seb couldn’t hold it anymore and snorted loudly. He covered his mouth with his hands and managed to muffle his laughter. The two people on the table heard him though and Rico immediately let go of the paper. “Whatcha starin’ at?”

“Nothing! Definitely not you doing origami.” Seb laughed and Rico growled. “Don’t you have work to do, Pines?”

“Oh yes.” Seb nodded. “I work at home. I would have taken less time to get back but there was an accident so the cops and the ambulance were blocking the road.” He rolled his eye. “Miz, it’s your turn to make lunch, I’ll go clean the rooms, is that ok?” The man asked and the demon gave him a thumbs up.

“Come on. I’m gonna make some egg fried rice.” Miz told Rico as she put down her supplies and skipped off to the kitchen. Rico wasn’t sure what to do now. He would have offered to help but his cooking was...basic. “Oi. Tall man. Hand me the garlic salt. It’s in the spice shelf over there.” Miz called out and Rico moved to grab the items on tall shelves for her.

The man still wasn’t sure what to think of the girl. She looked like a normal little girl but he knew she was actually kinda scary and controlled...dark magic? Yeah, that must be it. He wondered when he had accepted that dark magic and supernatural stuff was real. He had never heard of it until he met Pines. “I guess I won’t be able to meet my other grandma and grandpa this year...” Miz said as she searched for every ingredient. “So, I'm assuming you’re staying with us for Thanksgiving? Have you ever celebrated it?”

Rico raised a hairy eyebrow and huffed. “No? I’m not from this country, remember? Besides, I don’t get it.”

“What’s not to get? The country takes a moment in history that was originally about how their ancestors leched off the native people in this land for their own gain and spin it to make it seem like a good thing by teaching people an altered version of the events. Then capitalism takes over to push sales of specific food products around this time of year so all the big businesses can profit.” She shrugged. “But it's also an excuse to have family reunions, eat food until you faint and awkwardly try to avoid talking about politics.”

“Yes. That’s what I don’t get. It is pretty hypocritical, but-” He shrugged. “Who cares? This country is weird and full of weird traditions.”

Miz laughed. “Welcome to America. The land of the hypocrites!”

Rico fake cheered as well and the two laughed. “But you know what're holidays I can REALLY get behind?” Miz asked. “Halloween! When people get a free pass to run around at night, screaming like lunatics. That's why I chose it as my birthday! Though I am kinda upset at how modern society ruined it.” She sighed. “It used to be about the whole ‘protect ourselves from being eaten by demons by pretending to be one of them’ and now I see people dressed as Sexy Hotdogs and other shit. How’s that supposed to stop demons from eating them? Dressing up to look like attractive FOOD?!”

Rico cackled loudly, hitting the table as he wheezed. “Can’t breathe!”

“Shut up!” Seb shouted from upstairs and the latino wiped a tear from his eye. “It’s true...Halloween is just another way to make money.” Miz looked at him and nodded. “Yeah... you’re smarter than you look, dude.”

Rico huffed annoyed. “I’m the mastermind behind a professional traffic network of multiple criminal gangs. I don’t think I can be classified as ‘dumb’. “ Miz rolled her eyes. “Never called you dumb, just smarter than you look.” She looked him up and down. “No offence, you look like a thug.”

“Ah, well, thank you~” Rico bowed dramatically and Miz laughed. Ok, she definitely liked this man. He was actually pretty fun!

Rico accompanied Miz as she cooked and talked about different topics, the origins of holidays, traditions and culture. Rico wasn’t sure at first if he should share stories about his work, but the girl made him feel like he could trust her, tell her whatever she wanted to know. Besides, he promised not to say anything about her powers as well so it would be a mutual understanding of keeping each other's secrets. They barely realized it was midday when Seb poked his head into the kitchen.

“I’ll pick up the twins! Be right back.” He raised a curious eyebrow at them who barely paid attention to him as they talked animatedly. He shrugged and went to his car, and he couldn’t help but think Wanda wasn’t going to like Miz getting along with Rico.

The food was done and Miz was just making the side dish and dessert by this point. Rico’s mouth watered. Pines got to eat food like this every day? Lucky Bastard. A hot wife, adorable kids, nice house, job…and Rico found himself feeling…happy. Happy for him. Happy that the crazy, broken kid he'd met all those years ago had found a life for himself.

He settled down in a chair to watch Miz put on the finishing touches on lunch. Fried rice with eggs, chicken, diced vegetables and cheese sprinkled on top to melt into the rice as she stirred and flipped it. Another plate with pineapple shrimp and walnuts dribbled with a sweet sauce. Then she put in some cookies to bake in the oven. Rico stared. “Cookies too?”

“Zoe ate the last of our cookies. I need to refill the cookie jar.”

“This is a lot of food. More people live here?” Rico asked confused and Miz laughed. “You’d be surprised how much Seb and my siblings eat, especially Zoe. Mom only eats dinner on a weekday. There’s more food on the weekends.” The man sighed and ran a hand through his hair. “Wow, ok, ok…so, we have to wait for them to eat or?”

“Yes.” Miz rolled her eyes. She was hungry too but she had to wait for her family. The plates had been cursed to keep the food warm until they were eaten so she didn't have to worry about that. Still, she was hungry~

“If they don't get back soon I'm gonna teleport them.” Miz grumbled. Rico's head shot up. “You can teleport people?” He said with interest. He could see so many ways to use such a power for his...work. Miz nodded, staring at the food longingly. “But mommy says I'm not supposed to do that. She gets upset when I break physics.”

Rico laughed. “Can you teleport people and things to anywhere? How far is your range?” He asked. Miz hummed. “As long as I can use my powers to See the location, I can teleport there. I can See most of the world but there are places in the ocean or stuff like that where I have less Eyes.” She shrugged, seeing no issue with answering. (She answered questions if asked, that’s just how she was. And she didn’t dislike this man, since he was Seb’s ‘friend’.)

Rico allowed a grin to appear on his face. “Hey. I sometimes have packages I need to deliver. Do you think you could help me out with that?” The little girl gave him a considering look. “What's in it for me?”

The two bartered back and forth, Rico even got a Deal out of it. He doesn't cause harm to her family and she would listen to his requests, but she didn't have to do them if she didn't want to. And if she DID do something for him, he would need to give her something in exchange. Rico felt like he had scored the jackpot since all this child wanted were things like a new doll or a pretty jacket she saw online. Things that would be easily procured once he was freed from his Deal with Sebastian and could leave the house.

They had just finished shaking hands when the front door opened and the two partners in crime pretended to be talking about something else. “So that's why you can't eat chicken eggs raw.”
“Miz!!” The twins ran up to hug their big sister. Miz giggled and picked them up “Welcome home, nuggets!” The siblings giggled. Seb rolled his eye. “Come on, kids. Lunch and then homework. Remember to wash your hands first.”

“You're such a father, gringo.” Rico grinned at him. Seb stuck his tongue out. “Shut up, you’re just jealous.”

“Nah~Los mocosos are not my thing.” The older man shook his head with a grin. The twins came back, having washed their hands as soon as possible because they also were hungry, and ran back to the kitchen. Miz put the warm plates and utensils on the table so everyone could sit down to eat.

“Are you going to be on the ceiling again?” Zoe asked Rico with a grin, and the man huffed with half-heartedly annoyance. “You know I leave people hanging from the ceiling too?”

“Like balloons?” Zach asked innocently and Rico stuffed his mouth with food before answering. “Definitely. They even have the ropes and all~” Seb coughed as he choked with his food, while Miz and Zoe just laughed. That was disturbing and so hilarious~ “Ok, we don’t need to hear that on the table.” Seb coughed. He didn’t want his kids getting the wrong message on what is and isn’t ok. Sure, he thought morbid humor was hilarious, but he needed to set a good example, right?

Rico shut up, obeying the orders of his temporary boss, but he and the little girl shared a maniac grin. Hours later, Seb screamed when he came out of his office and saw stuffed toys and dolls hanging from the ceiling with ropes around their necks, nicely decorating the living room.

“ZZOOOOEEE!!!”

He had a lot of explaining to do when his wife came back, catching him pulling down the toys with a very grounded Zoe and Rico. Miz only got out of being grounded as well because she cited the fact that she was helping Zach with his homework as her alibi for not being involved with it.

--.--

Wanda was pissed. She didn’t like having the man at the house. He was a bad influence for their already (kinda) crazy kids! The rest of the week she showed her discomfort, but Rico wasn’t leaving until the deal was done.

“I don’t want him here for Thanksgiving!” She whined at Seb, who blinked. “But...that’s the whole point of it, isn’t it?” Wanda groaned softly and buried her face into his chest. “Bad enough I couldn’t introduce our new daughter to my family...but we have to house this CRIMINAL in our house?!”

“Look, I owe him a lot. He also been keeping an eye on us for our protection.” Competition in the fashion industry seems very dangerous apparently. “It’s only a little more. He’s in hiding from some worse men who want him dead. I can’t just...toss him to the street.” Wanda sighed, hugging her husband. He was too kind for his own good. “Fine. But I’m going to set the house rules for him from now on.”

Wanda was mainly annoyed that she couldn’t go see her family. She wanted to introduce her new daughter but this had to happen and it was put off for another few months all over again. “I just don’t want him being a bad influence on the kids.”

“I'll keep an eye on them. Don't worry.” Seb assured her. “And I promise we’ll visit your family next, I’m awesome, but my family can surely live a day without me...” He said dramatically and the blonde laughed before kissing his nose.
Seb sighed. “I want to buy turkey already!”

He liked making turkey, it was delicious, mom taught him how to do it…

And he loved leaving it to thaw out in the twins’ room to make them scream. Ah~ a classic.

...forget Rico, SEB was probably the worst influence…

--

To Seb's despair, Rico and Miz actually got along very well. He once caught Rico bent over Miz, brushing and braiding her long hair before she repaid the favor. Seb just watched Miz twisting ribbons into Rico's hair and wondered what was happening. Miz glanced over and waved. “Hey Seb~”

“…” Seb turned and walked back to the kitchen. Miz scoffed. “He acts like he's never seen socializing before.”

“Is that what this is?” Rico wondered, holding still so Miz could tie the end of his braid shut. She hummed. “By the way, I delivered the shipment.” She said casually, as if she had just run a package to the mailbox instead of teleporting crates of illegal imports past the border. Rico grinned wide. This child was a gold mine.

Her only real limit was that she wouldn't do anything that would hurt people. No human trafficking. Nothing that could be considered sexual slavery. No drugs that would hurt people. She also mentioned she refused to kill for him. “Did enough of that to last multiple lifetimes.”

Rico had paused at that. She's killed for someone before? He shivered. How deadly were this child's powers? Who had used her? Was that why Sebastian adopted her? So that she wouldn't be used like that again? (And Rico found himself angry at whoever it was that had done that to her. He'd gotten to know Miz over the past week, and she was a delightful child. The idea of someone making her do something so horrible was--)

So Rico made requests from her to transport supplies and medicine instead, so that his gang could send it out to sell to the unlicensed doctors. She kept a little notebook with a list of what Rico owed her once he was freed from Seb's house arrest. She had stared at Rico seriously and stated quite simply that if he didn't deliver, she was magically contract-ly obligated to make him suffer. Rico shivered again. Miz was a cool kid, but she terrified him half the time.

She continued stroking his hair with a smile. Weird girl. But he liked her, she was great for making deals with.

The twins eventually joined them, taking their toys and playing quietly to not feel excluded.

Miz asked to play and soon her and Dad’s friend were playing with them. Daddy said he couldn't be invited to their rooms but this was the living room!

As they played, Seb was preparing everything for lunch. He needed to buy turkey, now that he thought about it…He was glad all of his brothers were going to their in-laws this year. Ford was portaling over to their mother’s place and she had agreed excitedly. She liked spending time with her oldest son.

Sir Bedazzle begged for treats under his feet and Seb sighed before pulling out a bit of sugar and pouring it on the floor. The acorn puppy yipped happily and started licking the brown sugar.
“Refrigerator, refrigerator...Yes, papa? Do you have sauces~? No, papa...Telling lies, no, papa...open your door~” Seb sang to himself softly. The twins watched weird videos and he couldn't help but learn the songs from them.

Wanda would be home soon (she was so cute! Getting off work earlier because she was worried for their safety!) and he wanted to make sure there was plenty of delicious food for his family.

And his guest. He would make delicious food for everyone in the house...

He worked silently, with Sir Bedazzle loyally watching him work, his plant tail wagging lazily. It was moments like this, when everything was too quiet in his mind...that he kinda missed Bill2. He had lived more time with him making snarky comments in his mind than not...

Did he miss getting bullied by a voice in his head? No, it would mean the stupidly expensive therapy he had when the twins were babies didn’t help him shit. At least he didn't hurt himself anymore, he was better...just not completely fixed, and he was ok with that. Where would the fun be if he was completely normal?

He shook his head. Lunch. He was going to do lunch, Wanda’s favorite because she deserved it...In a few days, he would have a turkey, then he would stuff it with delicious stuff, maybe make rice too, mashed potatoes, uuhh arabic rice! Pie, a cake, what should he put there? He found a cool recipe with N&Ns, and fudge~

Seb fantasized distractedly with food, not making said food. When he realized he spaced out, he jumped back to his feet to take out the ingredients. “Sir Bedazzle, bite me if I get distracted again!”

The acorn dog barked happily. His attempts at biting were more adorable than painful since he didn't have teeth but he was going to try his best!

As Seb worked in the kitchen, Zach was moving his toys around as the three kids and one adult crafted a story about how the polar bear mailman were fighting off the monsters that lived around the world so they could deliver the packages. As they played, Rico found himself feeling...happy. This domestic life was boring and mundane but he was enjoying himself. Rico wondered about that. Him? The crime lord? Playing with some kids?

He shook his head. Bah. This was simply an escape from work, a...vacation-al prison arrest. He didn't really want this for himself (ew), but he was fond of the kids because their father was his old partner.

Even if Thanksgiving was still next week, Wanda was coming back from work sooner. For the day after Thanksgiving, she was taking a day off. The twins and Miz loved when she was home all day, they missed her.

The door’s lock was opened and the blonde came into the room, deadpanning at the sight. Rico was with the kids in the living room, alone. And Seb said he would keep an eye on him, huh? She smelled food though, so she guessed he needed to make lunch. Was it pasta with pesto sauce and grilled salmon that she smelled?!

“Mommy!!” Zach squealed and ran towards her.

“Hey baby--did you have fun today?” Wanda picked up her son to cuddle. He squealed when she tickled his belly. Zoe and Miz ran over for hugs as well. “Welcome home mommy!” “Did you kick a bad guy to jail today?” Zoe asked.

“Well, we still need to get the papers processed. But there is a bad man who's going to be put away for a very long time.” Wanda glanced over at Rico and narrowed her eyes. Rico shivered. Why had Bill married a freaking lawyer anyway?!

“Hello to you too, cariño.” Rico nodded.

“We killed monsters today.” Zoe grinned. Wanda looked over to see cotton stuffing scattered around the floor. She sighed. Zoe ripped up her dolls again. She wished her daughter wasn't so violent when she played. She wasn’t sure why she bought them toys anymore, if Zoe was going to destroy them. It was like dog toys being destroyed. That’s what this carnage looked like. “That’s wonderful dear.” She kissed Zoe's head anyway. As long as it was only her dolls and not real animals it should be fine.

“Ahah! The food is done!” Seb cried from the kitchen. “FOOD!!” The children cheered before stampeding into the kitchen. Wanda called out “Wash your hands first!”

“Okay mommy!”

Rico stood up as well, groaning as his spine creaked from bending over the ground for hours. He glanced over at Wanda who was watching him warily. “Why the hostility? I have not done anything to deserve this?”

“You're a murderer and criminal.” Wanda said formally. “I’m a lawyer, and I could be a judge if I wanted. We are natural enemies.”

Rico scoffed. “Your husband’s killed before. And your daughter as well. How is all this any different?” He raised an eyebrow. Wanda sneered. “They didn't kill because they wanted to. And they don’t do that anymore.” she twitched. She didn't like thinking about it. But Miz had been on good behavior here. That had to count for something. Besides, a gang leader like Rico hurt others all the time. Miz… she wasn’t like that.

Rico shrugged. “They still did it. I thought that’s what the law cared about? Actions?” (“Actions yes, but the intentions are important too.” Wanda shot back.) He raised an eyebrow. “What if I told you I don’t want to do everything I do, would you stop scowling at me and look pretty?”

The blonde woman growled loudly and stomped towards the kitchen. Seriously! She just couldn’t!! She should tell Sebastian she couldn’t stand having him in the house. Maybe the twins were not in danger, but she was uncomfortable...Maybe...she should go with her mom...just for the time he was here, take the kids. Seb could stay with his delinquent friend all he wanted!

Seb smiled widely when he saw her, his brown eye lighting up. “Wands!” He squealed and ran towards her to kiss her lips. “I made your favorite!” He pointed at the table. “And I am working on the rest of the food for tomorrow! It’ll be all by me! No help from Miz!” Wanda laughed. “You're trying to get your territory in the kitchen back, huh?” She teased him.

“Miz keeps kicking me out~” Seb whined. “And she always cheats with magic when baking!” He liked how delicious her cakes and cookies were but he always caught her using magic to fix them up to ‘look’ more pretty, since her baked stuff normally came out lopsided. “It's not fair~” Wanda laughed and hugged her husband. “It's fine. She just needs to practice baking more. I've noticed she doesn't really measure ingredients when cooking. Like it doesn't even occur to her. And for anything else she cooks, it's fine. But baking requires precise amounts and she can't seem to wrap her head around that.”

“I think she thinks she knows better than the people writing the recipes.” Seb pouted. “But cheating is still cheating!” And he missed cooking. Having to share the kitchen with her was fun but he liked having full reign.

“Actually, there was something I wanted to talk to you about.” Wanda sighed. “I want to take the kids with me to my parent's place.”

Seb blinked. “But Rico can't be out and about.” Wanda sighed. “He would stay here.” Seb paused. Well, they could stock up the pantry. He was sure Rico could take care of himself if they left for a few days but…

“I don't want to leave him alone during Thanksgiving.” Seb sighed. He'd spent many years all alone. He didn't want anyone else to go through that. Wanda hugged him. “You're too kind for your own good.”

“Which is stupid, I know, but I really can’t help it!” The man sighed and Wanda hugged. “You know...it’s not wrong to be good, right?”

“Yeah, but I don’t like it.” Seb scoffed. Being good was so stupid. “You really want to leave?” He asked softly.

“I just want to see my parents…” Wanda loved her family, but she had realized she didn’t spend much time with them. She barely visited her cousin before seeing Seb again. They went to see her family now, but Seb’s family was SO close it made her feel she was lacking interaction.

Maybe it was for her work as her mom used to say. ‘Not seeing your family and not meeting a man’. She felt like Stanford, god.

“Hey...My brain is having an eggcellent idea!” Wanda sighed at the pun. Seb grinned wide. “Tell your parents to come here! Or your cousins or whoever you want! Whatcha say?”

“There’s a delinquent in our house.” Wanda spat and Seb hugged her laughing like crazy. “Do your parents know about that?! Nope! They don't! They spend the holiday here! You are happy! They meet Miz AND we don’t leave said delinquent alone in our house.”

“And who are we supposed to say that man is?” Wanda hissed. Seb shrugged. “Ah...he can pretend to be...Miz's tutor? Since she's not going to college because she's too young to be on her own...and we hired a guy to keep up her education.”

Wanda gave Seb the most bland look. “A tutor? Really?”

“We can clean him up, give him a nice suit…” Wanda didn’t look reassured. “…

“And why would he be spending Thanksgiving with us?!” Wanda exclaimed and Seb pouted, glancing in the direction of the plates. Food... “Because...We are grateful for him teaching Miz about business and life? Don’t you wanna eat? Look~ This delicious salmon is begging you to eat it~” Seb waved a plate in her face.

Wanda groaned. “This is never going to work.” Seb took her hand. “Please? I don't want to stop you from seeing your family. We can make this work.” He gazed at her with his lips wobbling. Wanda sighed. “Look, maybe.” She said finally. She yelped when Seb picked her up in a hug. “Don't worry! We'll make this work!”

Wanda sighed. “I'll call my parents…” She pinched Seb's cheek. “So you BETTER make sure this doesn't go wrong.”
“Of course! I'll make everything perfect!” He scoffed and Wanda shook her head fondly. He was an idiot, but he was her idiot.

Wanda called the kids to eat and Seb didn’t allow Rico to eat until he washed his hands as well. As the kids sat down, (the twins were sitting on their legs, but they allowed it because they were still short), Wanda passed them their plates. “My parents are going to come for Thanksgiving.” She informed them.

“Yeah! If you can't go, force them to come!” Seb sat down.

“Grandma and grandpa?” Zach asked. He hadn't seen them in so long. Wanda nodded. “So you all have to be on good behavior, ok?” she glared at Rico as she said this.

The twins nodded. “Only grandma and grandpa will come?” They wanted some cousins to play with. They always had Diego when meeting Dad’s family, and the older twins and Dillon liked to play with them. They didn’t remember many cousins from mom’s side.

“I don’t know, maybe. It'll depend if they can come.” Wanda explained as she glanced down at his food, avoiding looking at Rico. Seb looked at him though. “You’ll be Miz’s tutor, ok? Of business or some shit like that.”

Miz looked up “Ooh? He CAN teach me how to run a long reaching criminal empire, right?” Wanda groaned. “That isn't something you should be learning to do.”

Miz gave Rico a thumbs up under the table. The crime lord held back an amused snort. He really liked this girl.

Everyone started eating, Rico couldn’t believe how good Bill was at cooking. This was so good~ “Ah! This is really good!”

The twins giggled. “Daddy is the best chef! He always makes yummy food!” Zoe slurped her pasta, getting green sauce all over her face. Miz laughed. “Well, my cooking is better.”

“Because you are a cheater!” Seb stuck his tongue out. Miz chewed her salmon, muffling a moan, this was pretty good though. “You’re just jealous of my infinite powers.” she said smugly.

“I had infinite powers...for like, 3 days, I think. Then I died! So excuse you!” Seb replied and Wanda choked on her water.

---

Wanda called her mom later that day to tell her about the invitation. “Hey mom…”

“Wanda! What a surprise!” Her mom, Linda (momLinda, not TherapistLinda), exclaimed. The blonde chuckled sheepishly. “Yeah...I’m sorry...Well, I was wondering if you-” Seb took the phone from her. “Hey, Missus Friedman!”

“SEBASTIAN! My dear!” Linda squealed and Wanda couldn’t help but roll her green eyes. Her mom ADORED Sebastian TOO MUCH. “Heya Missus! How are ya? How’s the mister? Treating ya right, I expect.”

“Oh, we are doing fine, sweetie, don’t worry, we are just sad you aren’t coming for Thanksgiving...we wanted to see you and the kids...and Wanda too, of course!” Her mom added as an afterthought.
Wanda made a face while Seb snorted. “Like, mom, I am right here listening in on you.” Wanda complained.

“Well, that’s what we wanted to talk about! We thought it would be great if YOU came to spend time with us! You’ve only come once when the kids were babies! The house looks great now!”

“Oh I bet! You must be the only one taking care of it!” Linda sighed. “Do you still cook? Or has my daughter finally learned how to be a proper wife?” She asked half teasingly, half meaning it.

The blonde made a choked sound, offended. Ok, she was starting to remember why she didn’t see her parents very often. Her mom was sometimes...really something...to her!

“Nah, I like her just like she is, don’t worry, I love to cook for everyone!” Seb exclaimed, leaning against Wanda to hug her. She blushed even as she heard her mom squeal over the line.

“Aww~well, we would LOVE to go to your place! Oh, I bet the twins have gotten so much bigger~” Linda cooed. “And your new daughter? What was her name? Miz?”

“It's Miz.” Seb said cheerfully. “You'll love her! She's adorable and she likes to try and take over my kitchen.”

“Oh how precious! It's so good of you two to adopt her.” Linda sighed. “The poor dear. You didn't really tell me much about her circumstances aside from how she lost her parents in an accident?”

Seb quieted a little. It wasn't a lie. Miz HAD lost her triangle parents when her dimension was destroyed, and that WAS an accident. Wanda bit her lip, thinking about how Miz had lost her human family by dying and reforming a whole life after. They sighed. “It's complicated.” They both said.

“But she's doing much better!” Seb smiled. “And she loves Wanda soooo much! Calls her 'mommy' already!” Wanda laughed. “Miz is so good with Zach and Zoe too.”

“Zach? Not Zu?” Linda asked. Wanda winced. Right. She had forgotten. “He says he wants to be called Zach from now on.” there was quiet on the other line for a bit before Linda sighed. “As long as my grandchildren are happy.”

Wanda and Seb heaved a sigh of relief.

“Well, see you in a week, missus!”

“Oh, we’ll be looking forward to it!” Linda sighed contently and hung up. Seb hung up as well and returned the phone to Wanda. “There. You see?”

“If my mom could, she would adopt you.”

Seb simply laughed loudly.

---

“Zoe! Stop putting stuff in the cart!” Seb glared at his daughter when she tried to sneak in a bag of candies.

“But I like this!”

Wanda was at work, but she would be home soon, and Rico had stayed alone at the house. Of course Seb was keeping an Eye on him so he didn’t try anything, but he just wanted to finish shopping. They were 2 days away from Thanksgiving and he needed his turkey.

Wanda’s cousin decided to tag along apparently. She couldn’t believe Wanda was inviting people to her house! She was coming with her husband Frank and kid, Daniel, who was 6 years older than the twins (so, a little younger than Miz was pretending to be). Wanda’s cousin’s twin sisters couldn’t come unfortunately, they would have loved to see Seb, and Regina was out of the country. They were all upset that they couldn’t come over too.

Wanda’s family REALLY liked Seb.

He sighed when Zach started eating cookie samples and Miz looked around for the food, actually being helpful. Seb sighed and hummed in thought. “Hey, kids!? Who can bring me butter the fastest!??”

The three of them gasped before taking off down the aisle. Miz was more cautious, glancing around herself and keeping an eye on the twins as she went. They found the dairy section and the twins grabbed a few boxes of butter sticks while Miz picked up some more lactaid milk. She also grabbed some shredded mozzarella cheese.

The kids made their way back, Miz told them not to run or they might drop the butter and be disqualified. Seb laughed when he saw the twins holding their butter carefully, staring at them to make sure they had a good grip.

“Here!” Zoe put the butter on the cart. “I won!”

“Not fair!” Zach shrieked and Seb patted his head. “You can still help me with other stuff! You see those bags over there, get me potatoes, and Zoe, get me tomatoes! Who can bring them the fastest? Go!”

The little innocent children ran away to bring the food while Miz put her food in the cart. “Turning everything into a competition so they behave AND help. Good job.” She giggled.

“My mom did that with the Stans and me as kids. It was fun and I see why she did it.” Seb snickered. Miz was keeping watch on the twins as they ran around. They were close enough to be within sight, which reassured her.

Miz paused when they passed the Ramen section. Seb rolled his eyes when he saw her attempting to sneak a few boxes into the cart. “Miz. No.”

“Awww…” she sadly put them back. Seb saw her sad face and sighed. “Ok, but just one.”

“YAY!” She put the box in. Zoe gasped. “How come she gets to have a thing?”

“Because it's not candy,” Seb rolled his eye. “If you guys want a thing, you can, it just can’t be candy. We’ve got plenty of sweets at home already.” Zoe put her bag of tomatoes in the cart, pouting hard. “What else can I bring?!?”

“Lettuce and peas.”

With the twins actually helping and not causing chaos around the store (except with the apples falling, but that was the employee’s fault. Zach asked her for help and SHE dropped everything) they finished their shopping fairly quickly.

Seb grabbed a huge turkey at the end and gave it to Zoe. “Put it in the cart!” He grinned wickedly. “NOOOO!” The girl screamed, disgusted at the naked squishy looking thing.
Miz rolled her eyes and picked up the turkey. “What's wrong with touching them?” She asked Zoe.

“It’s horribleee!!!” Zoe moaned dramatically. Miz scoffed. “It's just flesh.” She squished it a little. “You wouldn't even have to touch it directly.” Miz was used to handling raw meat. She butchered her own kills for cooking pretty often out in space.

“Ugh, just grab it, girl.” Seb put the turkey in her arms and the little girl screamed loudly, making her twin laugh at her while the people shopping glared at them.

“Sorry…” Seb said sheepishly and watched Zoe throw the poor turkey into the cart, her eyes flickering red and with tears. “THERE!” She sniffed.

Miz and Zach clapped, which made Zoe glare at them. Her siblings just gave her innocent looks. Zoe resolved to get her VENGEANCE later. Seb was checking his list. “Still need...some bread to make the stuffing and…”

Miz spoke up “Could we get a turducken?” She's never tried a turducken before. Seb stared at her. “I have no idea how to make one of those.” It was way too labor intensive. “We can try for a turducken some other time.”

The demon girl sighed and agreed, making Seb promise to cook with her, and then they went to pay when they had everything.

“You shop much faster than Mommy.” Zach said as they waited in line. “She never finds anything and we get bored.” Seb nodded. “I know, mommy doesn’t know about food, but we still wuv her!” the 3 kids nodded. If Wanda were there she would have groaned at the lack of faith her kids had in her.

“Grandma says it's bad if mommy can't cook.” Zach pointed out. Seb sighed. “It's not. Mommy is fine whether she can cook or not. And she CAN cook. Just not as much. She's busy with work. And she doesn’t enjoy cooking like Miz and I do, which isn’t her fault and isn’t an issue. People have things they like or don’t like. And Wanda doesn’t like cooking, but that’s fine because we do.”

The kids nodded as they followed Seb to the checkout line. A few of the other customers looked over to coo at the twins holding hands with Miz. The cashier smiled at them politely. “Getting stuff for thanksgiving?” He asked. Seb nodded. “Yeah, my in-laws are coming over and I'm gonna wow them!”

The cashier laughed softly. “Ah...that’s great…”

Zoe poked her head up. “Daddy’s the best at cooking!”

The man started passing the objects through the scanner while another worker was putting them in bags. “Oh...are you a chef?”

“You could say so~” Seb grinned smugly.

“Daddy's an ARTIST!” Zach said proudly. “He makes pretty clothes. And he also makes food! And...and he takes care of us!” The boy hugged his dad's leg. “Because daddy's the best dad!” Seb blushed.

“Thanks, squirt…” Seb stroked his hair.

“Oh that's amazing.” the cashier grinned at the tiny children. He glanced up at Miz and blinked. “Your daughter?” He asked Seb. The one eyed man nodded. “My wife and I adopted her. This'll be the first time my wife's family gets to meet her.” Seb reached over to hug Miz gently.

“Well, good luck with your dinner!” The man smiled politely. He passed the last of the items and Seb handed him his card. “Would you like to get a promotion of 3 chocolates for 2?” He asked automatically and pointed at the sign. The cashier held back a laugh at the way the children's eyes lit up.

“PLEASE!!” Zoe moaned and pulled on his pants. “We behaavveddd!!” Zach wasn't as vocal but he also stared up at Seb with pleading eyes while Miz did so as well. Seb groaned. “Ok, fine. But you don't eat them until we get home.” He didn't want Miz getting drunk in the store.

The man handed the chocolate to Seb, and the other worker accompanied them to their car with the cart full of bags. The twins wanted to hold their chocolate bars, but Seb kept it in a bag, knowing they would find a way to cheat. He did it as a kid and he knew his twins and Miz well enough.

Wanda’s car was at home when they arrived and Seb parked to start getting the bags out. “Kids! Help carry the bags inside!!” He cried as the 3 got out and ran inside. Miz paused and went back to help Seb with his bags. Because she was a good girl.

Sir Bedazzle received Seb, barking and wiggling excitedly. He was back!! Once they were inside the house, Miz and Seb levitated the bags. Screw gravity!

They also made everything float to the cabinets, drawers and fridge. Rico poked his head into the kitchen. “Oohh~ You brought food!”

“Hello to you too.” Seb shook his head. “Where’s Wands?”

“Eh, your room? She’s been there since she got here.” Rico had avoided her and she, him. The two just didn't get along. Seb sighed. “I'm going to start cooking, Wand's parents will be here tomorrow and will be sleeping over. So you...go get cleaned up. Alright?”

Rico scoffed. “I bathed.” He said, almost offended. “Yeah, but you need to look...presentable...you're supposed to be a tutor.” Seb went back to putting the ingredients along the countertop so he could start working. “It'll be fine.” Rico grumbled. Miz appeared and dragged him away. “I'll cut your hair! Come on.”

Seb shook his head and started working. First leaving the turkey to unfreeze. He should take it to the twins’ room~

As he chuckled maliciously to himself, Wanda came downstairs, looking around before coming into the kitchen. “Hi! Look, I’m starting to cook! And I’ll make lunch as well. We also bought the other stuff we were missing!”

“You are the expert…” Wanda smiled. Seb smirked. “How was work?”

“Paperwork, boring. I’ll have my court case in a few weeks… It will be a relatively easy case, domestic violence…” She liked her job, but the cases were heartbreaking. “You’ll do fine.” Seb reassured her. “You’re the best!”

“How about the store? You don’t tell me how you’re going with that.” Wanda hugged him from behind, snuggling against his back. “Yeah, I’m not the best businessman…” Seb chuckled. “I have my manager watch everything for me and the designs we produce and that stuff.” He still prefered personal customized works though. That was way more fun.

“Well, it's good you've got your manager.” Wanda grinned. “You get so distracted~” she teased as she ‘distracted’ him from cooking, running her hands along his chest. Seb blushed. “W-Wanda! Not right now~I have to make food~”

“Hm...you could let Miz make lunch?” Wanda nuzzled the side of his face. Seb’s face got even redder. “Wanda~ Come on...What’s up with you today?”

“Why? Can’t I hug my adorable husband? Do I need a motive to hug my husband while he’s cooking?” She stuck her hands under his t-shirt.

“Wa-Wanda~” Seb whined but he didn’t push her away, a small smile forming on his face. “I haven't had the time to just... be with you in weeks ~” Wanda pouted. Her hands traced little circles along his chest. Seb moaned softly. “A-at least let me get the groceries unpacked first~”

The couple giggled as they pressed close to each other.

They quickly unpacked, both of them blushing and giggling, and Seb left the ingredients on the table. “Miiiiiz!! You’re in charge of lunch!” He called loudly as he was dragged into his room. The door was locked, blocked with a chair and then the sound of the shower running could be heard faintly.

Miz, about to cut Rico's hair in a guest bathroom, groaned. She had to do everything! She Flickered to see the kitchen and just made an Auto-Cook curse on the counter for now. She'll take over once she was done with Rico. She hummed as she snipped his hair so it was neater and straighter.

She braided it nicely and then considered his beard. “Don't shave it.” Rico said simply. Miz pouted before her eyes lit up and she started cackling. Rico wasn't sure why he was getting this foreboding feeling…

“Mommy! Seb! Lunch is ready~” Miz's voice was muffled by the door but her adoptive parents still heard. Wanda was towel drying her hair, a spring to her step and a wide, satisfied smile on her face. Seb was lying on his bed, towel wrapped around his head and waist.

The two got dressed and made their way downstairs. They stepped into the kitchen and froze. “Don't you dare laugh.” Rico ground out. Seb snorted and had to lean against a wall as he shook with unsuppressed laughter. Wanda was much the same. “AHAAAAAHAAAHHH! What happened to your FACE?!” Seb gasped.

Rico's hair and beard had been meticulously styled into super curls up and around his face.

“Your magic daughter happened.” The man spat and Wanda wheezed, hitting Seb’s chest with her fist. “We-Well! At least you look slightly more presentable!”

“I’ll think of another thing for tonight!” Miz said. “But for now! Food!” they all ate happily except Rico who just glared at anyone who laughed. “Can we not have this for tonight?” He ground out.
Miz giggled. “I have a few other designs I wanna try out…”

Rico groaned. “At least make it less weird looking…” Miz scoffed. “Naw, I can tell them that you're a contestant in the national beard competition.” She heard Rico and Seb both mutter “That’s an actual thing?!?”

Wanda just continued laughing into her lunch.

“And there you are! So cute!” Seb fixed Zach’s little collar and Zoe put on her bow. They were bathed, their hair combed, and dressed up nicely for the dinner. It was still a few hours more to it, but their grandparents and aunt were arriving in the evening.

“Sebastian, they will get dirty by the time the actual dinner is held.” Wanda stared at the twins. So adorable~. She wasn’t even changed yet, or Miz, or even Seb! Why was he even dressing them already?

“But they look so cuuuuute!” Seb hugged the twins to his chest as he kissed them both. They protested angrily. Miz was still messing with Rico's beard, to his frustration. She finally decided to braid it neatly, to his relief. Wanda glanced over and sighed. “That's good enough.”

“Should I get changed too now?” Miz asked. Wanda pet her hair and smiled. “I think Seb finished that dress he was working on for you.” She glanced over at Seb as his eye went wide.

“THE DRESS! FUCK!” Seb ran to his office. “Gimme five seconds!” He shouted as he left the room. Wanda sighed defeatedly. “I can't believe him sometimes…”

The twins were pulling at their fancy clothes already. “Can I take the bow tie off?” Zach complained. Wanda rolled her eyes before she loosened it. “Seb and his bow ties.” She muttered fondly. “Bow ties are awesome!” Miz said. “My bow tie in my triangle form spins!” Wanda laughed. “Alright, I get it. Bow ties are great for...demon fashion…”

She told Miz to go bother Seb with her dress as she changed the twins back to normal clothes. She took off their outer shirts but left them with their pants. They were going to get dirty. Heck, Sebastian couldn’t keep a shirt clean sometimes and he expected 5 year olds to?!

Rico was staring off at where Miz ran to. “...demon?” He asked quietly. Wanda frowned at him. “Yes.” She stared him down, ready in case he reacted poorly to the reveal of Miz's technical species.

“Well, both she and Bill are crazy.” Rico laughed. “And with their powers they could be demons!” He walked away and Wanda sighed. “You won’t tell uncle Rico?” Zach asked. “No...It’s not really important, anyway…” Wanda smiled.

Seb flinched as Miz continued glaring at him. “Are you done yet?!”

“I’m working! This dress is for the dinner party anyway! You don’t need to wear it to meet Wanda’s parents!”

“But I want to! I want to give a good impression…” She pouted and Seb smiled. “Hey, they'll love you! Really! If they like me, how could they not like you?!” He ruffled her dark hair just to annoy her. Miz grumbled and brushed her hair back in place. “Still, I’m not used to...having grandparents.” She brushed her fingers through her hair self consciously. Her human grandparents had been all the way in China and she hadn’t seen them often. And Granny Kari was different, she was aware of magic. But Wanda’s parents weren’t.

“Well I’m almost...done...here!” Seb tied off the last thread and showed Miz the finished product. She “Ooh”ed at it. As her request, it was a lolita style dress, simple but cute. Yellow and black with a nice brick pattern and a back ribbon around the waist like a little bow. There were some frills and ribbons for accent but overall it was a simple and modest dress. Seb even got her matching black socks and a little petticoat to be worn underneath.

“Thank you!” Miz squealed as she hugged her other big brother. Seb crushed her in a hug and she shrieked. “You’re welcome kid! Now go wear it!”

As if on cue, the doorbell rang and the two heard Wanda screaming. “My in-laws are here.” Seb grinned. “I’ll go open the door all sweaty and with wrinkled clothes. Thank you.” Miz scoffed and flicked her fingers to freshen him up. (“Oh, that’s useful.”) She hugged him one last time before running to her room to get dressed.

Seb walked to the front door and frowned as Sir Bedazzle wiggled out from under the table. “Oh, I’m sorry, bud, but you are staying in my room.” He floated the whimpering acorn puppy to his room. “Don’t give me that look, just take a nap or something.”

He took a deep breath, adjusted his eyepatch and opened the door, smiling at the 5 people behind it. “Yellow~!” He said cheerfully.

“Ahhh! Sebastian sweetie!” Linda squealed as she leaned forward to hug the sweetest boy she had ever met. She held him for a few seconds before pulling away and looking him up and down. “Oh look at you! You’ve grown into such a fine man.” She never stopped repeating that, even though it’d only been a few years since the last time she saw him.

Seb blushed. “Aw thanks missus.” Linda peered around him. “Now where are my darling grandchildren? I haven’t seen them since they were babies!” Wanda came out, holding the twins by their hands after she fixed their clothes from where they had immediately rumpled them once they were freed from her sight. She had finally managed to get them presentable. “Hi mom, dad, Frank, Magda and my little Daniel that has grown up so much!” She exclaimed and the boy actually looked up from his phone to smile at her. “Hi, Aunt Wanda!”

Linda squealed as she stepped inside. Wanda raised her arms for a hug but her mom went right past her and hugged the two children. “Ahhhh! You two have gotten so biiiiig!” she squealed. Wanda deadpanned “Missed you too mother.”

Linda pulled away. “Now! Where is that mysterious third child you have?” She looked around. There were soft footsteps on the stairway and everyone went inside the house and looked up to see a little girl descending elegantly, her dress fluttering and bouncing with each step. Daniel’s eyes went wide. The girl gave them all a polite curtsy when she reached the bottom. “Hello. It’s very nice to meet you all.” She said.

“.....oh my god!!!!” Linda ran over and swept the girl up in a hug. Miz squeaked and went shock still, trying very hard to stay calm. This was grandma! Grandma was safe! Linda squeezed her before placing the girl back on her feet. “You. Are so adorable!!!” Linda pinched Miz’s chubby cheeks. The demon was in a daze. “U-um...” she was shivering with small panicked gasps. “Mom! Give Miz some space! She’s still a little shy around new people.” Wanda scolded as she walked over and Miz immediately clung to her side, shaking.

The older woman gasped. “Oh! Oh my god! I’m so sorry, Miz! I was just really excited to finally meet you…” She crouched in front of Miz and offered her a hand to shake. “I’m Linda.” Miz peeked out from behind Wanda and slowly calmed down. “’’Hi granny Linda.’’ She said before shyly holding out her hand. Linda smiled at her. ‘’Sorry for scaring you. Some old lady just grabbing you out of nowhere.’’ She joked.

“You’re not old. You’re pretty.” Miz said simply. Linda cooed “Awww~you’re just as sweet as the other stray Wanda adopted~”

“Mom!!!” Wanda groaned while Seb blinked “Does she mean me ?” Seb stared at Elijah incredulously. The twins were just relieved their grandma wasn’t pinching them. Zach was tugging at his collar again while Zoe pulled at her dress.

Magda snickered loudly as her husband chuckled. Daniel remained silent, watching the girl in the yellow dress. His phone lay forgotten in his hand.

“Yes. She means you,” Mr. Friedman nodded solemnly. “You did look like a stray kid.”

“Daadd~” Wanda moaned and Seb looked down, blushing, when Magda agreed. “Yup. But he was a cute stray.” she hugged her husband just in case he felt jealous. Wanda blushed and pushed her family away from the door so she could close it. “Yeah, well, welcome to our house, I guess. Please take off your shoes and leave them by the door.”

“Why?” Magda asked. Wanda smiled softly. “It makes Miz feel more comfortable.” She pet Miz’s head and the girl made a content sound, relaxing enough she didn’t have to cling to Wanda’s side anymore.

Everyone obeyed and went to the living room. Wanda rubbed her arm awkwardly, only her dad hugged her, her mom went straight for Seb and the kids...Kari showed her more interest than her own mother...

Seb paused “Oh right, we have someone else here too. Ah, you heard about how Miz has already passed her high school graduation exams right?” Linda nodded, incredibly proud of her granddaughter. Magda gasped, only finding this out now. “Really?” She looked down at the little girl who blushed and buried her face against Wanda’s side again. Seb scratched his cheek “Well, since she’s obviously too young to go away to college, and we didn’t want to prevent her from continuing her education if she wanted, we hired a home tutor who would come and give her assignments.”

“A home tutor? Aren’t those expensive?” Elijah gasped. Seb nodded. “Well, he gets free room and board while he’s here so it’s not as expensive as it could be. Still costs less than actual college.” Everyone laughed at that.

“So where is this man?” Magda asked. Wanda tried hard not to wince. “Oh, he’s in the kitchen right now.” taking that as his cue, Sebastian went in to get Rico. “Everyone, this is Rico. Despite the way he looks, he’s actually a very good tutor.” Seb bullshitted. He had no idea what his last name actually was. “He-He teaches me about business and all that, I want to open a store someday…” Miz said awkwardly, and Daniel nodded slowly. So the pretty girl was a business woman?

Mr. Friedmann blinked. “You!”

Rico blinked. “Elijah?!”

“Excuse me, what the hell?!” Seb exclaimed. Daniel scoffed at the man. “Why are you always cursing?!” He huffed. He didn’t like his favorite aunt’s husband. He was too crazy. His cousins were ok he guessed, albeit a bit crazy like him.

“Because I FEEL like it!” Seb glared slightly at his nephew.

Elijah Friedmann and Rico were staring at each other. Linda looked between her husband and the...rather large and intimidating looking man. Was he REALLY a tutor?! “Do you know him, honey?” The old man glared at Rico. “Yes! I met him a long time ago! And I thought he was my friend!”

Rico groaned. “Get OVER it!” He scoffed at the old man, but Elijah growled. “Give me my 20 dollars back you colombian fuck!”

“...Dad...??” Wanda had NEVER seen him like this. Linda hit his arm. “Control yourself! The kids are-”

“Oh my fucking circles! You know my in-law??!” Seb screamed while Rico ran a hand across his face. “And of course you are his in-law...” Magda laughed uproariously. “Oh my god. I need to hear this story. What’s this about?”

Everyone leaned in, the two oldest men glaring daggers at each other. Elijah sighed. “Back when I was younger, I took a trip down to Colombia for a vacation trip with some friends. We were just going to have fun, for the summer after we graduated college.” He glared at Rico. “I met this...MAN in a bar.” Rico scoffed, offended. “Why the harsh words Elijah? I thought we were friends.” Wanda’s father growled. “So did I! Until you borrowed $20 from me and NEVER paid me back!”

“It was 20 dollars! I needed it!”

“For what?! Drugs?! ”

“None of your business! Get over it!”

“If it’s so unimportant, then give them back!”

“Over my dead body, Friedmann!”

The two argued at each other back and forth, and the other people present blinked, looking at each other. Zoe stretched. “Well, I got bored.” She smiled at her older cousin and older sister. “Wanna come play?”

The boy was going to say no, but Miz nodded, so he agreed quickly. His eyes were drawn to the way her dress bounced as she walked. She looked really pretty in it. “A-ah- Hi! I’m Daniel!” He said quickly. Miz blinked before smiling “Hi Daniel. I’m Miz.”

“How old are you?” He asked as they went upstairs. “Miz is 13! Her birthday was on Halloween! There was lots of spooky but yummy food!” Zach informed his cousin. “O-Oh! I’m 11 but I’ll turn 12 soon!” He laughed nervously. Miz sat down on a little playmat in the living room as Zoe and Zach pulled out their legos so they could all play together. Daniel played with them, stacking the tiny blocks together to build spaceships. He glanced at Miz and blurted out “You’re pretty!”

Miz blinked. “Ah? Thank you?” She paused. Was he just being polite or? She examined the flavor of his emotions, making sure to filter them out properly first before perusal. Agitation, giddiness, nervous...oh. A crush. She turned to Daniel and told him clearly “You’re too young for me.” Daniel stopped and looked up at her. “Wha-What?”
“I appreciate what you feel, but I’m too old for you, we don’t know each other… and besides, we’re cousins…” She frowned. “But we aren’t real, real cousins…” He muttered. “And when you’re 20, I’ll be 18!”

The twins looked back and forth between them and shrugged. Big kids were weird.

---

The adults finally quieted down when everyone sat down for dinner. Seb was so proud of himself as he laid out the food and preened under Linda’s praise.

“Oof! Sebastian, sweetie, this smells amazing!” The woman sighed and her husband nodded. “It looks pretty good.” he caught Rico’s eyes and both huffed.

“You have always had talent for this! You could be a chef if you wanted!” Linda continued, making Seb’s face go even redder. So many compliments at the same time! Overwhelmed! Wanda commented “I can cook too! I cooked for Miz's birthday!” Magda playfully nudged her husband. “Ya see? I’d love it if you cooked for us…” She whispered and Frank snickered. “I’ll make waffles.”

“Oh but then I wouldn’t have time for the kids.” Seb waved off bashfully. “Daddy takes us to school every day! And he picks us up because he’s the best daddy.” Zach happily informed his family before taking a sip of his drink.

Linda seemed about to faint. Oh my god~ soo cute~

Daniel was glaring at Rico sitting next to Miz. She said she liked older men...and this guy was apparently her private tutor... Rico noticed Daniel’s glare. “Yes?” He asked. Daniel responded “I won’t lose to you!” which left Rico incredibly confused. Miz was busy eating her food, oblivious to this misunderstanding.

“So how’ve you been?” Wanda asked her family. She spent more time with Seb’s huge crazy family and felt sort of bad for neglecting her own. She didn’t really keep in touch with her parents and cousins as much as she’d like to, being too busy with work most of the time.

“Well, cousin, we’ve been fine.” Magda giggled. “Working, relaxing on weekends~” “Seeing Daniel’s eyes turn square from how much he stares at his phone…” Frank laughed. Daniel looked at his dad and angrily shoved food into his mouth.

“The twins aren’t allowed any device like that though. Not until they’re older.” Wanda commented easily and her mom nodded. “Oh! I see! Seb is always taking care of my grandbabies! He’s such a good father~” Wanda nodded. “Yeah...but we both decided that.. “ Seb getting all the credit.

Zoe pouted and tried to stand in her chair “It’s not fair! Everyone else gets a phone.” Wanda sighed. “You can have a phone when you're...12 years old.” she pulled Zoe back into her seat. “There’s no reason for you to have one before then. Now eat, Zoe.”

“Oi, how harsh you are with the children!” Linda gasped. “You should try being more gentle, sweetie.”

“What? Harsh? But I-” Wanda trailed off and looked at Seb for help, but he shrugged helplessly with a grimace. Sorry... he didn’t know how to respond to that.
“But don’t worry, it doesn’t surprise me, you’ve always been kinda bossy. I really hope you don’t order Seb around...” Linda smiled while Elijah, Frank and Rico looked awkward. Miz looked between Linda and Wanda with an odd expression.

“Mommy's really nice. And we ALL boss Seb around.” Miz pointed out. Zach and Zoe nodded. “Daddy's easy to boss around.”

“Hey!” The brunet complained and huffed. “Wanda’s a natural leader, missus. You should see her at work! She’s just...wow.” He held Wanda’s hand under the table and Wands smiled a little. At least her husband and children supported her. She squeezed his hand, glad to have some of her family supporting her.

Linda blinked and really took a step back to look at her daughter. Seb and Wanda had peaceful smiles as they leaned against each other while the children all seemed perfectly happy as well. Linda sighed. “Right, I’m sorry. They’re all obviously happy. I shouldn’t criticize you so much.” She was finally realizing something.

Wanda blinked. “Mom?”

“You’re a great professional, and I admire how much you’ve grown...You have a lovely family and...” She sighed. “Well, you aren’t the daughter I sometimes imagined you would be, you are you, Wanda, and I love you just like you are...” She grabbed her hands. “I shouldn’t try to make you something you aren’t...” The older woman admitted.

“Mom...” Wanda blinked to clean her blurry sight. “Can you forgive me?” Linda asked.

“Mom, of course I forgive you...I love you, and it’s just the close-minded sexist environment you grew up in that makes you say that, but I still love you...”

“Ah, all these ‘modern’ ideas you have.” Linda laughed. “Well, as long as you’re all happy then it’s fine.” She looked over at her grandchildren. “So...Zu-Zach wants to be a boy? I admit I don’t understand it, but...” She smiled “He looks adorable in that little suit. And as long as he’s happy and you’re all happy, then I suppose there’s nothing wrong with it.”

Everyone cheered and Elijah hugged Linda softly. He was glad she was being more accepting. Rico rolled his eyes at the family happiness and continued eating. This was too lovey dovey for him.

They finished their dinner, moaning. It had been so delicious they ate until they could burst. Even Daniel had to admit his crazy uncle cooked really good. “Now Dessert!” Zoe squealed, not seemingly as full as everyone else. Miz was also ready for more food. The two sisters cheered “Dessert! Dessert!”

Seb groaned in his chair, too full to get up. And they still had leftovers! “You can get the pies out, sweetie.” He leaned back, patting his belly. Zoe and Miz went to the kitchen. Seb had made a cheesecake pumpkin pie, butter pecan and apple pie that was keeping warm in the oven. Miz carried two while Zoe grabbed the hot pie right out of the oven, not harmed by the heat.

They placed them down on the table and Miz expertly calculated the best way to cut the pies so everyone would get two slices of each, just in case. Magda cooed at the girls passing them plates with three small slices of pie on it. “Aww...thank you.”

“‘You’re welcome!’” Miz and Zoe said at unison. As they passed the plates around, Zoe was already eating her own slices, unable to wait until everyone had one. No one minded though, she was helping and that was great, besides, she was just a child yet.

They were really full...but pie~

“Seriously, gringo, how do you make all this SO GOOD?!” Rico moaned. “You must use magic.”

“Hahaha! Nah, magic cooking is not my thing.” Seb side glanced at Miz and smirked smugly. “I do my own cooking.” The demon girl huffed. “Well then maybe you should just teach me your secrets already…” She stared her brother down. The two had identical stubborn looks on their faces. “Well maybe if someone would just follow the recipe…” Seb started. “I will not be confined by the limitations of society!” Miz retorted.

“Limitations of society my eye! It’s just a recipe so we don’t die from being poisoned by whatever ingredient you put it because ‘it feels right’!”

Zach flinched as Zoe laughed. Awesome! Debates!

“I don’t put weird stuff in my baking! They just end up soggy or too dry…” Miz mumbled. Like the cookies she shaped into cute little triangles that all melted into one big cookie. It all tasted fine! Just needed her powers to get the shapes right. And sometimes to make them hold together...

“Well, then practice.” Seb patted her head before taking a mouthful of pie to his mouth. “We’ll practice tomorrow ok?”

Miz sighed. “Ok, Seb...” Linda and the other adults coo’ed. He was such a good father~

Everyone went to the living room to play a board game after dinner. Zoe and Miz wanted to play Settlers of Gangang and a rather intense war on Sheep and Wood broke out. “You built a road through my square!!” Zoe whined. Seb stuck his tongue out at her. “Sorry, all’s fair in love and getting a supply line into the sheep territory!”

“Daadd~” Zoe whined as her dad got to harvest some Sheep on the next dice roll. Nooo she needed those to build another settlement! “Mwahahaha!” Seb cackled like the overlord he was.

Zach, unlike his screaming sister, was lying on his mom, reading his picture book like a good boy. Wanda stroked his curls absentmindedly as she talked to her family. Daniel was back on his phone, mostly because Miz was busy and he didn’t feel like socializing with his 5 year old cousins, or sharing his phone with them.

Rico was the 4th player in the game, steadily building his empire of Wheat and Bricks. He even took this time to ‘tutor’ Miz about resource management and how to haggle to get more. He was supposedly her business tutor after all. He and Miz decided to team up, an alliance if you will, Rico controlled the Wheat while Miz got Stone and the two were making it difficult for Seb to continue building his Roads.

“This...isn’t fair! You’re not allowed to team up!” Seb cried. Miz and Rico fist bumped. “It’s called an Alliance.” Rico said smugly.

“Come on, Zoe, we are making an alliance as well!” He dragged her closer to him and high-sixed. “Yeah!” The little girl shouted. “Let-Let’s destroy theeem!” She giggled excitedly and stood up to jump. With Seb sitting on the floor cross legged, she ended up leaning on his back, playing with his hair.

The rest of the family chuckled softly. While Seb’s family was loud and most meetings were noisy and crazy, Wanda’s family was way calmer and quiet, which used to drive her insane as a kid. She appreciated it now though, liking how different it was and bringing a different type of peace.

Magda pointed at her lap where Zach had fallen asleep, biting his finger. “People say twins aren’t usually the complete opposite but I beg to differ.” She chuckled. Her younger sisters were polar opposites, just like these pair of twins.

Wanda cooed at her baby and hugged him, blocking the screams from his dad and sister so he could sleep. “Seb’s niblings are also twins and they are super different.”

Elijah shook his head, amused. “That family is full of twins!”

“HAHAHA! Take that, Rico!! Yes, sir?” Seb looked up adorably. “One of your brothers is a scientist, right? I read an article the other day on the internet.” Elijah liked reading a little bit of everything. “Ah, yes! That’s my oldest triplet, Sixer, you can call him Stanford too.” Wanda snorted at Seb’s grin. Elijah nodded “Well, has he done any research about this?”

“About what?” Seb asked distractedly, he whispered something to Zoe before she rolled the dice. “About twins.” Elijah prompted. “Um, nah, Ford’s work was mostly about the supernatural and recently, he has moved onto eco friendly research. Things for fixing the environment and such.”

“Oh, that’s incredible!”

“Yeah, he still has his own supernatural or weird projects though! And my other triplet is coach of a football team, but he has his own company...he-Zoe, that’s not gonna work, wait-does many things there, actually. And my younger brother works somewhere doing computed related stuff. I think he’s a hacker, but Shermie always denies it.” Seb concluded adorably.

Everyone nodded in understanding. “That’s great!” The man grinned proudly. Wanda smiled. “And you’re a great artist.”

“Yeah, I guess that’s true too.” Seb shrugged bashfully. Wanda laughed. “You’re brilliant and you make beautiful work. Always have.” Seb blinked. “Ah...I don’t believe it...Can you give me a reassuring kiss?” Wanda motioned at the sleeping kid on her lap. “Zoe, give Dad a kiss from me.”

The girl kissed his cheek before licking him. “There!”

“Eew! Zoe~!” Seb complained and wiped his cheek on his shoulder as everyone laughed.

Night arrived, and they were guided to the guest rooms that were cleaned for them. If they noticed something in the weird extension of the house, they didn’t comment on it. Seb crawled into bed with Wanda and gave her a hug. “So...it wasn’t bad right? We were normal?” he asked her quietly. Wanda sighed. “You don’t HAVE to be normal. I love you just as weird as you are...I just...worry, you know?”

“We did fine though!” Seb made a ‘whoosh!’ sound as he threw his eyepatch away. “Why do you worry? Your family doesn’t need to get involved in weirdness...We were lucky Phillip was just crazy enough to accept it…”

Wanda chuckled. “Yeah...but I don’t know...the kids should be able to use their powers…” Seb snuggled closer to her. “They can go a day without using them, it won’t kill them, and they have to do it with people who fully understand…” He nibbled on her hair and Wanda whined. “Explaining all my past and powers is just too long for any Mortal to understand!” He laughed. “So, what’re
Wanda sighed. “I just...want to be a good mother for them. Accept them for who and what they are.” She pouted. “And I still think Rico’s a bad influence on Miz.” Seb snickered. “So that’s what’s bothering you? The guy’s behaved all week! One week more, and then he’s gone...besides, the twins are fine with him, Miz likes him, I think this turned out better than expected.” He poked Wanda’s cheek. “And your Dad LOVES him!” Seb grinned, making Wanda roll her eyes.

“Fine, I guess. I just don’t like having a criminal in the house.”

Seb groaned. “Wands, I’ve done terrible things in the past. Miz has too. But you’re ok with us. And Rico’s—”

“But you and Miz aren’t doing any terrible things anymore, you’re trying to change and be better than that. He won’t. He’s not going to stop being a crime lord once he leaves. He’s going to get right back to his old ways of violence and law breaking and...”

Seb hugged Wanda close. “What if he doesn’t have any other way to get by? He can’t just leave. He’s got a group, an organization with a bunch of other criminals. At least he keeps them under control, so they aren’t running free causing trouble everywhere.”

“And even if what he does is bad, he isn’t bad...He helped me, I wouldn’t have survived after prison if I hadn’t been with him...And when I wanted to leave, he let me, that usually doesn’t happen...” Wanda made a humming sound and Seb buried his face into her hair. “You won’t see him again later, I promise.”

“I just… laws are important to me, you know? The ones that exist to help protect people.” Wanda turned to snuggle into Seb’s chest. She felt her husband nod. “I know that Wands, but for me, the person is more important than the law.” He shuddered as he thought back to Flatland and their terribly unfair, stupid laws. “Legality isn’t morality and all that.”

Wanda sighed. “I know...” She kissed his nose. “I’ll...try to tolerate him if you like him so much.”

“Good, that’s all I want.” He grinned. Seb hugged her close, ignoring the plantimal curled up on their legs, and sighed. “Good night...”

Wanda’s parents and cousin left with no further incident, Elijah shook hands with Rico, both glaring at each other. “You better educate my granddaughter about how it’s not ok to steal.”

“I’ll teach her that sometimes you have to let it go and that it’s not healthy to hold a grudge forever.” Rico grinned.

And so, Rico’s second week with the Pines started. A few days into it, Miz had an idea. “Dude, I could stop the people who want you dead.”

“I dunno. Catch them and put them in a jail cell. Leave the police clues and evidence needed to put them away?” Miz tilted her head. “You’ll probably know better than me what it would take to get people behind bars.”
Rico blinked, considering the offer. “Can you make them silent though? I don’t want them telling on us to the cops.” Miz nodded. “Yeah, that sounds easy. Though I’m gonna need to do more than just block their speech, there’s other methods of communication after all.” The man grinned maliciously and chuckled deeply. “Let’s do it…”

“Hey daddy, where’s Miz?” Zach asked after Seb picked them up from school. Seb blinked and looked around. She wasn’t working in the living room or watching tv. Come to think of it, the house had been quiet all day...

“Eh...I don’t know...Maybe she’s with her friends.”

“I’ll check in our room!” Zoe threw her backpack and ran upstairs, followed by Zach and Sir Bedazzle. As Seb picked up their bags and shoes, he heard a “She’s not heereee~”

Seb hummed. This was weird. “Rico?!” He called. “Riicooo!! Where are you?!”

Silence.

Seb looked for them through the triangles around the house.

Nope. They weren’t here- Seb froze. Oh no. All sorts of horrible ideas raced through his head. Maybe Rico had kidnapped Miz? No, Rico wouldn’t do that. Maybe Rico’s enemies had found him? No, Miz would have protected them. What if they used sleeping gas?! Seb was gasping for air as he collapsed to the ground in a panic.

What about the barrier? He wasn’t supposed to be able to leave!

Oh no! Fuck! Fuck! Fuck!

“Seb?”

“Not now! I’m panicking!”

“Sebastian…” the familiar voice said emotionlessly and Seb looked up. “M-Miz?!” And she was with Rico, who was snorting at his pain.

“Where were you?!” He cried angrily.

“Colombia.” the two shrugged. Miz gave Seb a thumbs up. “Good news. Rico’s enemies won’t be able to come after him anymore.”

“Oh...Really?” Seb blinked. Rico ruffled the demon girl’s hair and laughed. “Yup! They’re all dead meat!”

“I didn’t kill them. They might get killed in prison, but that’s beyond my control,” Miz shrugged (not really caring, since these were bad people anyway) and walked over to Seb to pat his arm. “Good thing is! Rico’s free! And he can go back to his friends!”

“Not friends. Employees.” The man corrected.

“That’s great!!” Seb laughed. “I’m so glad you’re free and leaving!” He didn’t want Wanda feeling uncomfortable anymore. Rico paused. “Oh. You’re...kicking me out just like that?” Seb froze. “Wait, no, I didn’t mean it like that. Just...Wanda doesn’t feel comfortable with you here.”
“I already knew that.” Rico rolled his eyes. Bill’s wife was scary.

“You can stay for the rest of the week, that was our deal after all, I don’t break my deals.” Seb sighed. Rico nodded. “Cool!” He threw himself onto the couch and turned on the TV. “What are we eating for lunch, gringo?”

Seb sighed. Damn it. He fell for it! He could have told him to leave! But no~ Stupid emotions made him think he couldn’t kick him out, because ‘it wasn’t a nice thing to do’. Fuck this body.

Miz laughed at Seb. What a softie. Still, she noticed the set of Rico’s shoulders were much more relaxed now. He had been tense this last week despite his assurances that his enemies wouldn’t be able to track him here. He had still been worried, not for his own life, but for Seb’s family. Miz grinned. Seb had a good friend.

Even if he was a crime boss.

“Hey Bill.” Rico grunted the night before he was set to leave. Seb looked up from the dishes he was washing. They’d all just finished dinner and the kids were watching cartoons in the other room. “What?”

Rico was quiet for a bit, looking around and frowning in thought. “So I was thinking about becoming Miz’s godfather.” He finally said bluntly. Seb dropped the cup back into the sink with a splash, glad it didn’t break. He looked up at him. “¿Disculpa?”

“Accepted.” Rico grinned. “I wanna be her godfather.” He repeated.

“Like in that movie?” The shorter man asked, confused and the older man chuckled. “Great movie...Anyway, can I?”

“But...why?”

“I like her, she’s cool and we do business.” Rico shrugged. “Also, I owe her like...8 dresses and a mountain of stuffed animals by this point so I’m pretty much already going to be sending her gifts. Figured I might as well make it official.”

“Oh. Right...Sure? I guess? I don’t know what godfathers are there for except for that cartoon the twins see, but you don’t have magic and you’re not a fairy, so gifts are close enough...Yeah, sure.” Seb shrugged. “Ask Miz though.” She wasn’t really a kid, she was billions or something years old and could make her own decisions.

Rico shrugged. “Asked her, she laughed for a few minutes and then said it was fine as long as her parents were ok with it.” Seb groaned. Which meant they had to ask Wanda.

“Ask her.” Rico looked at him and Seb shook his head. “No thank you, YOU are the one who wants to be her godfather!!”

“Come on! Do it!” Rico shouted. “What do you expect me to do?!” Seb shouted back.

---

When Wanda arrived home after work, coffee in hand and tired after a long day of work, she noticed that the entrance was covered in flower petals...
One of them did something...

She followed the trail and the kids received her. “Hi mommy! Look! We are already bathed and clean because Uncle Rico reminded us how important it is to be clean!” Zach smiled widely.

Zoe gave her a chocolate. “For you! Uncle Rico says he is grapeful you allowed him to stay!”

“Grateful.” Wanda corrected absently. She stared at the chocolate, and the rose petals, and the wide smiles on her twin children’s faces. “Ok, what did Rico do?” She asked wryly. “What does he want?” Because there was no way he was going out of his way to do this unless he wanted to ask a favor from her.

“Whaaaatt?? Noo! He’s good!! You can see it for yourself!” The twins exclaimed before running away. Wanda got into the rest of the house, taking a bite of the chocolate bar. The living room was nicely decorated and there were candles that smelled glorious.

Seb and Miz came out dressed like a butler and maid. “Milady~” Seb welcomed her and kissed her lips. “Table for two?”

“Did I...forget our anniversary or something?” She asked sheepishly.

“No, dear, and this dinner isn’t for us, it's for someone who wishes to talk to you about something really important.” Seb said seriously.

Wanda raised an eyebrow as Rico came out, dressed to the nines with his hair and beard neatly combed. Her expression became even blanker as he bowed to her. “Milady, may we have a nice dinner and discussion tonight?” Wanda turned slowly to stare at Seb. “Sebastian Pines~” She drawled, Seb winced. “Please just hear him out?”

“Fine, I’ll listen.” Wanda folded her arms as Sebastian led her to sit down, massaging her shoulders a little.

Elegant food was served by Miz in a maid outfit. Wanda looked at Rico. “So, what’s so important you have to tell me?”

Rico took a deep breath. “Well, first of all...I respect you, you must be a kick ass woman in your job...Second, I love your family. Bill~”

“His name is Sebastian.”

Miz and Seb winced “Sebastian, the kids and Miz, who I deeply appreciate and enjoy spending time with,” Rico continued without missing a beat. “So I would like to ask you…” Rico kneeled on the ground. Wanda’s heart stopped beating for a second.

“Can I be Miz’s godfather?”

The blonde’s heart started working again. She took a deep breath and shouted. “AAAAHHH!! YOU SCARED ME!!” She shrieked loudly. “I thought he was asking for Miz’s hand! Are you insane!?!” She turned to look at Seb and Miz who grinned widely. “Haha! Yeah!”

Wanda, with a hand over her chest, turned to look at the older man. “Ye-Yeah...Whatever...As long as you aren’t marrying her...”

Seb high-sixed Miz softly. They knew this would work.
“But you better be good to her and not put her in danger or I’ll put you in jail!” The lawyer warned. Rico laughed. “No worries Milady. I actually like her.” Rico scratched his chin. Hm, he didn’t have any children of his own, but a god daughter would be nice.

With this matter settled, the family cleaned up and Wanda ate dinner before taking a bath and relaxing from a long day at work. Seb went up to give her a massage, grinning at her. “You seriously thought Rico was gonna propose? To Miz? She’s too small for that.” He laughed.

“What was I supposed to think!? Roses?! What on earth were you all thinking?!” Wanda grumbled. Seb kept laughing. “It was fun to set up though.” Wanda snorted and relaxed as Seb’s hands worked down her back. “…what’ll we do when Miz DOES get proposed to someday?” She asked.

Seb blinked. “Wha?”

“Miz is staying with us, as our daughter, long term.” Wanda pointed out. “Which means she’s going to have to grow up eventually. And she’s adorable. There are bound to be boys who’ll try to ask her out.” Seb paused. “Oh.” He hadn’t even thought about that. He shook his head. “I doubt Miz would have any interest in CHILDREN.” He was quite sure of that. Miz wasn’t actually a child after all.

Wanda shrugged. “Still, that doesn’t mean some boy, or girl, isn’t going to try someday.”

“She doesn’t have to agree. She can say no.” Seb said. “Right? And if she wants to get with someone, she will.” He shrugged. It wasn’t such a big deal for him. “Besides... Wasn’t she, you know...sessioning with Ford?”

Wanda groaned softly. “…Right…” She closed her eyes though, the massages felt so good~

“Your brother has facets I never thought he’d have…” Wanda noted. Seb shivered. “Well…” He made a face “I didn’t realize he was into that sort of thing either...” Wanda sighed. “Can we not talk about how your brother is doing kinky things with our adopted child when they’re in an adult form?”

“R-right.” Seb shivered as they quickly changed the subject.

It was late in the night when a black van that had been driving around the neighborhood, parked in front of the Pines’ household. The lights had been coincidentally turned off so the security cameras weren’t working.

The twins were sleeping already, but Miz, Seb and Wanda were saying bye to Rico. “See ya tío Rico! I’ll be waiting for my gifts!” The demon girl smiled.

Seb awkwardly shook hands before he was pulled close for a quick hug and a back pat. “Be good, kid. You’re a good friend.” Rico said, before looking at Wanda. “Thank you, preciosa.” He extended a hand to shake and Wanda shook it after a bit of hesitation.

Rico handed her a 20 dollar bill, winked, and got out of the house.

As the black van drove away, Wanda sighed. “Well. THAT happened.”

“Can we go to sleep?” Seb asked as the lights in the street returned, just when the van left. “‘‘Totally’’” The women nodded with a yawn.
Miz was delighted at the shipment of clothes and dolls a few weeks later. Seb was glad Miz extended the house to be able to fit them all. She was building an incredibly elaborate nest in the twin’s room, in the alcove she’s created inside the wall. Seb wondered why no one had wondered about the impossible dimensions of their house yet.
Chapter 37

Slices of Life and Family

Chapter 37

-What makes a lab assistant-

------

Something major happened. Ford had noticed because he wasn't that blind but he didn’t say anything because he wasn’t sure if he was correct, or if Melody had simply gained weight over the summer. And if he was wrong, he really didn't want Melody or Soos or Abuelita angry at him. They were very scary.

But if he was correct in his assumptions, Melody was pregnant.

And Soos was walking on air, almost literally, as he somehow got a hold of some float-shrooms and was beside himself with both excited glee and nervous anticipation. Sebastian was actually the one to tell Ford the good news, as Ford had been too afraid to ask Melody in case he was wrong.

“I’m getting another NIBLING! Soos says it'll be a baby girl!!! A NIECE!!!!” Seb screamed over the phone. Ford twitched as his poor eardrum was abused by Seb's shrill scream. “Why didn’t you tell me, bitch?!”

Ford rubbed his ear. "Because...I wasn't sure? And...it's not my place to tell you…?"

Seb huffed. "You've replaced me as Question Mark's best friend...even Stan hangs out with him more because he invests in the Shack as a pet project… Stan liked the Shack a lot…” He grumbled. Ford raised an eyebrow.

"Are...Are you jealous that I spend more time with them? I'll remind you it was your idea for them to move in here..."

"Maaaaybe! I'll go visit them but not you!!" Seb cackled. Ford rolled his eyes. “I’m sure Soos would love that.” he said sincerely, despite the mirth in his voice. “Maybe I will! Hey Miz! Get the twins! We’re gonna visit Soos!”

“Yay!” Miz cheered. Question Mark and Cadenza were going to be parents! Babies! Baaaabies!!! (Miz felt a pang inside. Babies… she just couldn't get over it. Even now. There was definitely something wrong with her.)

Ford sighed when the phone call ended. Well, he was glad everyone was so excited for this. He was looking forward to this too. He was so happy for Soos and Melody. Children...
Ford coughed. He supposed it was going to get more crowded around the Shack in the future. Maybe he’d use this as an excuse to get the house expanded again?

---

Ford entered his lab early in the morning of late November, early December, coffee mug in hand, a yawn on his lips and ready to trudge through more calculations to figure out why his newest version of the perpetual motion machine wasn't working. Well, it wasn’t a perpetual motion machine. It was a gravity battery, but he couldn’t help calling it that anyway. He closed his eyes as he yawned and opened them to see a person lounging on top of his work bench.

“Ah!” He startled and nearly spilled his coffee. The person on his desk burst out laughing.

“AHAAAAH! THE LOOK ON YOUR FACE!”

Ford placed a hand over his pounding heart. “Mi-William! What the heck?!” He scowled at the friendly version of Bill Cipher who was currently in that adorable cyclops form of his (hers? Ford still had trouble with that). Judging by the...lingerie (?) she was wearing, Ford tentatively decided she must be female right now. (The fact that she was teasing him again actually made him relieved. After what had happened with her brother, well… Ford was relieved to see her somewhat getting back to normal.)

“What are you wearing?” Ford was a little embarrassed by the sheer white fabric. Sure, he’d seen her naked before, but somehow… the half dressed look was more… enticing. And Ford realized he was tracing the edges of the ribbons with his eyes. William was blushing faintly at Ford's suddenly interested gaze. “W-well I originally wore this because I thought it would be funny because I thought it would be funny…” she covered her half exposed chest bricks with a thin arm self consciously. “But I suppose I didn't realize it would feel so embarrassing…” her attempt at flustering Ford to see the funny look on his face appeared to have backfired! Uwu… she was fine being naked around him, but somehow this felt different...

“You know, I never got to ask last time, but, are those bricks growing out of your chest? Or are they only on the surface? I didn’t get to check that before.” Ford reached forward and felt William's eye staring intently at his hand as it moved closer to her. Ford paused, remembering the rules they had agreed on. “Can I...touch?” He asked. William bit her lips and considered it. This was meant to be a joke but a small part of her couldn't help but...enjoy the feeling of Ford's eyes on her near naked form. With all her body image issues, it felt nice to see the positive interest in his eyes. He wasn't disgusted with her. This was a fact that still blew her mind, and made her feel all warm inside.

This was safe too. Ford had no interest in her body for any sort of sexual pleasure so she wouldn't have to worry about that. And he was nice, unlike that younger Ford she'd met so long ago. “Same rules apply. Touching is surface only. And if I say stop, you stop.” Her ears wiggled, the only outward show of her nerves, because being touched while wearing ‘clothes’ was different from being touched naked. “Also, it’s still a ‘no’ on needles.”

Ford nodded. “Of course.” He always felt so uncomfortable during his doctor's checkups as a child when his body was measured and inspected. It always made him feel...unnatural when the doctor simply took his hand to inspect. The doctor never told him what he was looking for, what he was writing down in his clipboard. It wasn't an experience he wanted to inflict on another. He placed his fingertips along the bricks jutting out of William's chest. She squeaked and Ford looked up to meet her eye. “What's wrong?”

“Your hands are cold!” William pouted. Ford laughed. “Sorry. It's a cold morning.” It was winter now. The air was chilly and the leaves had almost all fallen from the trees. The snow hasn't started yet, but it was a matter of time. Ford blew on his hands and placed them behind his neck to try and warm them up. William shifted to sit on the edge of the table, her long, thin legs dangling over the side. Her legs were pressed together and her hands were folded in her lap.

“You know, even if you warm up your hands, they'll still feel cool.” William pointed out as she reached out to take Ford's hands, wincing at how cold they felt. “Since my base temperature is higher than yours, heat transfer would always make you feel cooler than I am.”

“True. But once I warm up it would feel less uncomfortable for you. I know that’s true because you don’t complain like this the other times I’ve touched you.” Ford allowed William to take his hands, wrapping her long fingers around his and he sighed at how nice it felt. Like pressing his hands against a hot water bottle. William pressed Ford's hand to her cheek, smiling at him. “You need to get mittens or something. More fingers means more chances for frostbite. Imagine if you lose your fingers?”

Ford laughed lightly. “Well I forgot to grab my gloves. Though if it would make you feel better, I did hear Mabel was knitting mittens for everyone this year.”

“Ooh~do you know if I would be getting a pair too?” William asked him, bouncing in place at the thought. It would be her first winter holidays with the Pines. Ford laughed. “I believe I overheard her agonizing over how to make one size fit all mittens since your hands change sizes.”

William giggled. “Well I'm looking forward to what she comes up with.” She trailed her fingers along Ford's palm. “Hm...try now.” She let go and Ford moved his hands down to her brick covered chest. She hummed a little but otherwise didn't protest so his hands probably felt much nicer on her skin now. Ford pressed down on the bricks, noting their firm, smooth texture. Fascinating. He touched the 'skin’ around the bricks and noted that aside from the unusual yellow color, it felt much like real human skin. Just much softer. The delightful softness that felt so delicate he worried about scratching it.

William panted softly with each caress. Especially when Ford traced her bricks. It sent tingles across her skin and she wasn't quite sure how she felt about it. She let out a soft sound when Ford began running his thumbs up and down to press from brick to skin and back, checking for the differences. “Mm...” she whined. It was...almost ticklish but not? She wasn't sure how to describe this sensation. Still, she tried to hold still as Ford's hands began pressing harder. “I'm going to pick at the edges, to see if these bricks are surface level only, or if they go much deeper.”

“A-ah… just don't try to peel off my bricks okay? That hurts…”

Ford glanced up at that. "I remember, yes-- I'll be careful." He told her firmly.

William shivered as Ford pressed his nail gently against the spot where brick became skin and scraped at it. Lightly, as if afraid of hurting her. It felt really weird and William whined. “Stop.” Ford pulled his hands away. “Sorry. Did that hurt?” William rubbed at the spot where Ford had been scratching. “A little? No. It didn't hurt but it felt…” She tried to think of how to explain it. “Like when you're about to cough because your throat itches…but on my skin instead of in my throat.”

Ford frowned. “That sounds very odd. I know you didn't like the feeling of it, but I'm curious as to why it feels like that for you.” William knew what he was getting at. Ford wanted to try and deliberately cause that sensation again so he could try and see why William felt the sensation manifest in such a way. She pouted. Well...it DID feel a little uncomfortable but she couldn't deny being curious about it too.
“Fine. But if I say to stop we're not gonna try this again today.” She finally agreed. Ford nodded and reached out to once again slide his nail along the edge of the bricks. William shifted in place and whimpered. That itchy feeling was growing. She couldn't hold still, crying out with each scrape of Ford's nail. “I...I don't think you should...” she managed to gasp before her bricks twitched and split open. Ford froze in surprise as William's chest opened up to reveal a gaping black maw, filled with teeth.

William moaned in relief and trembled, panting as the new mouth on her chest coughed. Three long tendrils came out, wiggling like a mix between a tongue and a tentacle. Ford stared. “So...
I'm pretty sure you can eat from that, but do you breathe from there too? Is that why you don’t have a nose?” William squeaked and covered her chest, trying to shove the tentacles back inside herself. “D-don't look at it!” She whimpered. She tried to turn away and hide this disgusting orifice. She was actually kind of self conscious about it. Ford placed a hand on her shoulder. “Why can't I look? It's amazing.”

William turned back to look at him. Amazing? He thought her gross mouth was...amazing? She flushed. Most people found her extra mouths disgusting...

“How is this connected to the rest of you? Is there a stomach? There must be...” Ford asked gently. William made a shy sound. “If...if you're sure you want to see it...it's really gross…”

“It's not gross. It's interesting. It's weird and different and I want to see how it works.” Ford insisted. William wiggled a bit as she debated with herself. Finally, she took her hands away from her chest where the mouth was 'breathing' softly. The tentacle/tongues slipped back out from between the brick lips to wiggle bonelessly. Ford picked up one of the tongues first. “It's dry.” He noted.

“I don't really have saliva. At most I can produce water sometimes, almost like drool but not quite.
The mouth in my head makes more, so that I can taste things, but I have to secrete it manually.”
William explained as Ford gently pulled on the tongue to see how stretchy it was. He squeezed the dry but smooth appendage. “It...feels slick, even though there's no drool or slime.” He said in wonder, stroking the tongue and marvelling over the lack of friction. William wiggled and made some grunting sounds. Ooh...it felt so weird when Ford stroked him (mentally flip-flopping between male and female with each stroke). Why were his tongues so sensitive? William decided it may have been because her tongues were filled with nerves of some kind. She gasped when Ford reached out to pull the edges of the mouth open. “F-Ford?!”

“How is this connected to the rest of you? Is there a stomach? There must be...” Ford asked as he widened the chest mouth some more (“A-ahhh~”) so he could peer inside. William was moaning and shaking all over. “Ford! Le-let go!” She tugged at his hands, trying to get him off. “It feels too strange! Stop!”

Ford let go, the chest mouth snapping shut. The tongues had retreated back inside and Ford watched the bricks fold back into place neatly. There was no indication this section of bricks could turn into a mouth. William panted with a deep blush on her face. “N-no more. Don't touch my chest mouth anymore!”

“What's wrong William?” Ford asked, worried about her trembling. She shook her head.
“I...felt...like I was going to split apart...” she patted her chest bricks. When Ford had tried to pull her open and look inside her...for a second...she'd nearly been overcome with the desire to eat him.
Pull him inside with her tongues and swallow him whole. She panted in both relief and stress from holding back her instincts. Anymore than that...if Ford had pulled her mouth any wider she wouldn't have been able to hold back. She would have eaten Ford. How awful. Awful because even now she could feel her teeth itching to bite down on him. Bite down and tear him apart. Chew him up. Eat him.

William shook her head. Stupid demon urges. They were always much more prominent in her Bill or William forms. At least when she was Xin, Jan or Miz, the fact that her bodies were physically a different species would dampen the instances from her more demonic forms. She was an eldritch horror that devoured everything. She ate/destroyed her homeworld and she'd eaten other planets too. Putting something so delicious looking so close to one of her mouths only made her hungry. She shook her head again. Nope. Not happening. Not with Ford.

She also made a note to keep this information away from him. She didn't want him to be afraid and disgusted with her if he knew just how close she'd come to killing and eating him. She felt Ford pat her head and she nuzzled into his palm. Ah...headpats always made her feel better. She rumbled as Ford scratched at her scalp, brushing carefully through her golden hair. “So, no touching your chest?” Ford asked. William nodded. “My open chest is gonna be a look but no touch area while I'm in this form.” she confirmed and clarified. “Touching normally is fine, but not when my mouth is open.”

The man seemed a bit disappointed but nodded anyway, he didn’t want to break William’s trust. No matter which form she was in. William let a sly smile spread across her face. “Though~ If you really like touching my ‘chest’ so much~that hasn't been decided yet for my other forms~” she couldn't help but tease.

Ford sputtered and tried to change the subject, he looked down at the rest of William's body. “So...lingerie huh?” He blushed a little but William's body didn't have anything resembling human sexual characteristics so it wasn't as embarrassing to look at as Xin's more voluptuous form was. And yet… something about the outfit made it all seem a little more erotic.

William shrugged. “Me and Pyronica were shopping and I just HAD to get this.” She tugged at one of the silk-like straps. “Isn't it pretty though?” She looked up at Ford, eagerly awaiting his critique while the man froze. Should he go for honest or…?

“It looks nice on you.” He said at last, going for something more neutral. It was fine, he supposed, but he thought that maid dress William wore all those years ago was much cuter. Lingerie was… well, it didn’t really match her. William was much too cute for ‘sexy’ clothing, in his opinion. William rolled her eye. “I know you don’t actually think it looks good.” She deadpanned. Ford winced, “I’m sorry. It’s very nice, but I think something cute with a fluttery-ness to it, looks better on you.” She poked Ford's nose. “Ok, I can concede that point. But I’m still gonna wear this. Maybe I should show this to Stan or Seb. Wonder what they would think…” Seb would definitely know what to say and she knew that, due to Stan’s nature, he was going to like it as well. Whether or not the two would ALSO be embarrassed as fuck was a different story.

“Did you come just to show off your new underwear?” Ford groaned. William shook her head. “I was actually hoping for another session. But if you're busy…”

“It's fine. I was actually going to ask you for help with something.” Ford smiled. “So if we had another session, would you like to hang around the lab and assist me afterward?”

William smiled. “Ok.” Within a few minutes, Ford had pinned William to the table, grunting with effort as William fought back much more efficiently. All her sessions as Xin had taught her how to break his holds and grapples so Ford would need to start getting creative to keep the upper hand in these play fights they had.

As William managed to twist out of his grip once again, Ford sighed. “You're getting too good at this.” William laughed as she wrapped her legs around his waist. Their most recent exchange had consisted of William attempting to turn the grapple hold back on Ford and pin HIM down instead. Her ears wiggled with her excitement at their little game. Numerous bruises decorated her pale yellow skin. Ford noted that since her blood was black in this form, the bruises stood out more starkly. He wasn’t sure how to feel about the bruising. He would have to practice more, so he could grapple her without injury. Even if she didn’t mind them, he did.

“Maybe you’re just losing your touch~” William teased. Ford narrowed his eyes in competitive determination. “Oh really? Well...what if I do...THIS?” He heaved William away from the table and spun the smaller woman before dropping her back onto the table, easily gripping her thin wrists together with one hand while grabbing at her ankles with the other.

“Ah!” William cried out, if Ford hadn't been so oblivious to this sort of thing, he might have realized her cry was more pleased than pained. He quickly pulled William's arms and legs together and looked around for something to hogtie her with. As she writhed on the table, Ford looked around for that rope he’d invented just for this. When he finally found a roll of it (there were practical applications for this invention besides JUST tying down Bill Cipher), the door to his lab opened as Fiddleford bounced inside.

“Sorry I'm late, Stanford, I nearly fergot 'bout my shoes this mornin’!” He chuckled. He still had a few memory problems, luckily he was getting a lot better. “So what were we…” The man trailed off as his eyes widened. Ford turned to his old friend. “Ah. Fiddleford! No worry, I actually forgot you were dropping by to help me out today.” He was wrapping the rope around William's arms and legs, pulling tight and making sure it would be more difficult to break out of the uncomfortable position. “Oooh~” William moaned pleasantly. She wiggled, rubbing her cheek along the table. “Tighter please~” she begged breathlessly. Being bound was only scary if she couldn’t break out, but she could easily tear this if she actually wanted, so she felt safe enough to just enjoy it.

Ford did as she asked and pulled at the rope. Her moans came out louder and while Ford had long since learned to tune out the pleasure in her tone, Fiddleford didn’t have that experience. Fiddleford blinked in shock at the half naked creature Ford was tying up. He blushed a bit at the lingerie and their pleased moans. What was happening right now?! “A-am I interrupting somethin’?” Fiddleford took a step back. Ford smiled at him, perfectly at ease while those sweet sounds continued to come from the tied up creature. “No. Not at all. I was just having another session with my friend here.” He gave William's leg a little slap, she enjoyed that for some reason. She cried out again, arching up on the table.

“A-ah~”

“And no, I'm not having kinky sex. If that’s what you were thinking.” Ford explained. In case that was the issue here.

Fiddleford looked behind him and then at Ford. He-He was kidding right? What the heck was he doing?! He had a moaning cyclops in lingerie tied up on his desk! It should surely mean what he was thinking! Right?! “I…” his voice cracked and the poor man blushed bright red when the Cyclops moaned out “Fordsie~don't stop yet~ You...promised at LEAST a half hour…”

Sweet banjo polish, they've been at this for nearly half an hour?!

“Oh, I can surely make it last longer than that!” Ford grinned and looked at his friend. “Can we work on the updated gravity battery next week?” He asked innocently. Fiddleford nodded. “R-right...well...I can just…”

Ford blinked, then smacked himself in the face. “Right, I haven’t introduced you. This is William, she’s one of Xin’s other forms.” That made Fiddleford blink slowly and relax. Oh. Okay then. “But why are you two doing this right now?” Fiddleford deadpanned. Ford blinked. “Oh. Right, ah… I keep forgetting that people think what we’re doing is sexual…” he groaned. (“It’s HILARIOUS!” was William’s cheerful addition.) “The only reason I haven’t stopped you from continuing this prank of yours is because no one’s actually treating me any different for it, and it’s relatively harmless.” Ford rolled his eyes. “Anyway,” he turned back to address Fiddleford. “We are not having kinky sex. William wanted to get more comfortable with being bound without being afraid, so I’ve been helping her with that in a safe environment where she knows she’s not in any real danger. So she’d be more level headed if such a thing were to happen for real, and not panic, so she’d be able to get herself out of such a situation without hurting anyone.”

Fiddleford relaxed. Well, once it was explained, it made perfect sense. But… “You realize she’s getting off on it?” Fiddleford deadpanned. Ford blinked, turned back to William. “...are you?” he asked rather incredulously.

“...a little?” William admitted, still rather flushed. “But only because it’s you who’s doing this with me.” And Ford wasn’t really sure how to react to that. “Oh. Um. Well. I’m… glad you’re enjoying it?” he said slowly. He wasn’t really against the idea of William ‘enjoying’ this. Since it didn’t really involve anything he was uncomfortable with doing. But it was really… weird.

Fiddleford sighed. “Be that as it may… I am uncomfortable with working with Ford while you’re… like that.” He still couldn’t really look directly at her. William nodded, “Alright, hang on.” and she easily unravelled the ropes and sat up. Then she flicked her fingers to materialize a lab coat and cute singular glasses on herself. “Ok! Science time!” She cheered. “Lab assistant William, ready for action!” Fiddleford chuckled. If William was Xin, and Xin was a Bill Cipher from another dimension, then she was much too intelligent to be a lab assistant, but she seemed to be enjoying herself so he didn’t point that out.

Ford smiled, glad this was settled. They went back to work, William pointing out the corrections but mainly just watching them work. When Fiddleford asked about why she wasn’t doing more, Ford rolled his eyes “She likes to see us figure it out for ourselves. She’ll give hints but otherwise, we're on our own.”

“Watching humans think is incredibly adorable!” William smiled. “I remember when I gave the twins a puzzle and they had to figure out how to put the 35 pieces together by themselves! It was so cute!”

“Are you comparing us building an incredibly complex nearly-perpetual motion machine to children solving a puzzle?” Fiddleford raised an eyebrow but William smiled even more. “Yup!” It was almost the same anyway, she thought to herself. “Or like when I taught humanity how to harness fire! That was great. They learned how to build a fire and the rest were easily figured out on their own.” She sighed at the nostalgic memories. Ford stared at her. “You...taught your humanity how to use fire?”

She nodded, not noticing his awed look “To be fair, they'd already figured out that fire was useful.
But they originally got fire from natural bushfires that happen during hot, dry days, or lightning strikes that cause fires. I simply taught them how to make their own fire with wood, friction and intent.”

“That's incredible!” Ford laughed, amazed and pulled his friend’s arm. “Did you hear that?”
Fiddleford nodded. “So you’ve been observing humanity since the beginning?” At her nod, Fiddleford asked, “And you’re another Bill Cipher?” another nod, “But you’ve got no interest in the destruction of humanity and such?” Fiddleford was pretty sure of this point, by now, with how long Xin’s stuck around them and the whole ‘creating a hidden island where the children could live safe’ thing. But he wanted to hear it from her directly.

William grinned. “Of course not! If any of you humans died, who would make those shows I want to watch?” The two men shared a look. Ford was grinning and Fiddleford was deadpanning. His friend must be really in love…he was actually a little happy for him, even if his partner was…Bill Cipher in a nicer version. (Well, apparently Ford had a ‘type’.) William sat down behind them and the two continued working on the machine, absentmindedly asking each other about their lives and families, how they were doing since last they talked about them. And then the conversation shifted to William.

“May I ask why you are a…she?” Fiddleford asked awkwardly, unsure if this was a rude question. But her name was William, she didn’t change it when she went female?

“Well, I'm a hermaphrodite and I identify as both male and female, I just switch between them depending on my mood. I've found that the humans here see females as the less dangerous option for some silly reason. I'm making identification for all my different forms so I can do more. I’m already listed as Seb and Wanda's daughter, most of the time, and he seems to love to have me as a little sister. Fordsie doesn't mind either way.”

Fiddleford looked at Ford who adjusted his glasses and nodded. Alright, alright...He thought he got it. “So… Miz and Xin… are the same person. And they’re also you.” another nod. Fiddleford sighed. This was rather complex, what was Ford getting himself into.

“So why's yer name William? Ain't that a boy’s name?”

William rolled her eye. “Why do you humans make such a big deal out of gender divisions anyway?” She felt as confused (and frustrated) as Seb did, even after he's been living so long inside human society and dealing with its silly roles.

Fiddleford shrugged. “I just heard that most folks change their names when they change out if they’re male or female.”

William nodded. “I already do that. Xin’s a boy. And Jan’s a boy. Miz and Yun are their female counterparts. But William is still William no matter if I’m a boy or girl.” she shrugged. “Zach wanted to change his name to something masculine but that's due to his own preference.” she placed a hand on her chest “Me though, I have different names for different forms I'm wearing. Bill, Miz, Xin, Jan, Yun and William. Most of those names are pretty much short, simple and easy to remember. That was more important to me than what gender those names conformed to. It just makes more sense to me.”

“Alright, I’ll make sure I remember that.” Fiddleford said. Ford patted his shoulder in gratitude for understanding.

Ford raised an eyebrow at William. “So you’ve got any more forms that I haven't seen yet?” The cyclops shrugged. “As I’ve said, Miz and Xin are the most human looking forms I have so I normally use them. My true form as Bill and this one as William are comfortable for me to wear. Jan and Yun are just for fun. And there are a bunch of miscellaneous forms that you haven't seen.”

Speaking of, William took a few steps back and shifted into Jan, his clothes changing to accommodate the different body shape.

“Well…it’s got 4 arms, so there’s that…” Jan commented, his clothes shifting again into his usual belly dancer outfit since a lab coat really detracted from seeing Jan-Jan’s full appearance. He looked up and flicked his hair. “It’s not THAT weird right?”

“It's just as amazing as last time!” Ford smiled, staring at one of Jan's dark-skinned arms. He gently trailed one of his hands along the black patterns. “You really like this form that much?” Jan asked with a roll of his eyes and the brunet nodded excitedly. “I find it quite fascinating that you can make forms that look different despite being face blind.” Ford commented as Jan shifted into Yun, his/her form filling out with delicate curves. She blinked as she tugged on the shirt over her chest, which now had the distinct (if slight) swell of breasts. “Well I know WHAT faces look like. I just...have trouble explaining them. Or connecting them to names. Or telling apart people if they have the same sort of outline to each other. It’s like looking at a photo of someone upside down and trying to figure out who they are I guess?”

“Fascinating. What do you think F?” Ford turned to Fiddleford who was blushing profusely and averting his eyes. “Ah, yes. Very interesting...um...can you put on the labcoat again?” Yun shrugged and did so, adjusting the labcoat to accommodate 4 arms. “You are really picky about clothing choices.” She grumbled.

“Yeah, F, I think those clothes were very fitting for Jan’s...sorry, Yun’s body.” Ford shrugged. Yun smiled at the compliment and hugged Ford's arm with a pair of arms. Fiddleford mumbled under his breath. ‘Too fitting to be exact...’ She definitely made herself attractive on purpose.
The three went back to work but Fiddleford found himself distracted by Yun essentially looking the part of the sexy lab assistant, with her form fitting lab coat, glasses and that cute way she tilted her head when she inspected their work. Not to mention the way she leaned against the lab bench like…

Fiddleford slapped himself. He was married for God’s sake! He glanced over at Ford who seemed perfectly at ease. How did he manage to maintain his composure like this? Fiddleford couldn’t help but request “Can you turn back into a boy? Or something less...distractin’?”

“How is Yun distracting you, F?” Ford asked, not even raising his head from his notes. “She isn’t making noise this time? I don’t find anything wrong with her clothes either? And I’m not even distracted with those hypnotic swirls on her skin this time.” He hummed “Okay, well, I am a little distracted. Aside from the scientific interest in knowing how a humanoid form with 4 arms worked, I notice her arms are slightly thinner than what a human of her comparable size would be. Not by much but…”

Ford continued to ramble as Fiddleford gaped at him. Did he not notice the obvious problem here? Yun was gorgeous (and that had to be some sort of magical effect to make her seem so, it couldn't possibly be natural) and even the lab coat couldn’t hide that fact. How much self control did Stanford have? Fiddleford shook his head. You know what? It was fine. He would prove to himself he was loyal to his wife by NOT being distracted! Yeah! “Nevermind Ford, I’m fine. Let’s continue working.”

They went on and Fiddleford, to his relief, found that once he stopped caring so much about what she looked like, Yun was actually quite nice to talk to. Her suggestions and insight were intellectually stimulating and he found himself begrudgingly understanding what had Ford so enamoured by Bill Cipher. Crazy demon that he was, if Yun’s intelligence was anywhere close to his, he would understand why Ford loved talking to the triangle. It felt so nice to have someone around who understood so much of what they were doing, who understood MORE than they did. Rather humbling to think about.

They worked and scienced for hours, the two men listening and learning everything they could from Yun, until the girl declared she was hungry. Ford blinked and looked at the clock on the wall. Huh. He didn’t realize they had been working for so long...

“Alright, I guess we can go to the house and find something…” Ford mumbled. Did he remember to buy something? Soos and Melody had their own food in the shared fridge, but Ford didn’t want to take their stuff. “No…” Yun whined. “I don’t want boring food from the Shack!” She hummed until she smiled. “Oh! I got it! I wanna go to Greasy’s Diner!” It had been SO long since she'd gone there with her big brother. “Seb never took me there! Pleaseee!” Her two pairs of arms put their hands together in a pleading gesture.

Stanford rolled his eyes. Going to the Diner would waste time they could spend working, but if it would make Yun happy… “Very well, we can go…” besides, they could still discuss their work while at the diner.

“Eh…” Fiddleford decided to intervene. “You can’t go into town looking...like this!” He gestured to her arms. Yun rolled her eyes. “Don’t you have that ‘Nevermind all that’ law? They should just nevermind me!” She had one pair folded under her chest and the other two on her hips.

“It means the town is very set on forgetting about weirdness.” Fiddleford clarified. Yun pouted. “Well they should still just learn to not point out other people’s body shapes!” She waved her hand to change into a different outfit. A large, poofy jacket with wide sleeves she could put both arms into. She adjusted the jacket with a frown. “There. Now they can’t see it.”

“It looks fine.” Ford patted her head, smiling slightly at her upset pout. “Do you want to go now?” The incredibly poofy jacket looked quite ridiculous on her.

“YES!” Her expression changed immediately and she ran out of the lab. Fiddleford and Stanford shared a look before grabbing their jackets and following her out to the hallway. When Dr. Pines and Dr. McGucket came out of the room, following a skipping dark-skinned woman, the scientists trying to peek inside jumped out of the way, and started doing anything and looking at everything but the men.

“We will come back in an hour.” Ford told one of them and the men nodded quickly. Many of them tried to get a better look at the girl. Her large hood fell back for an instant and it was like sparkles were filling their vision. The beautiful young woman giggled and the scientists all swooned. She was a stranger to most of them, but a couple had glimpsed her before around the boss. How did their boss know so many attractive people?! “Walk faster, Fordsie!” The girl demanded before walking through the main entrance of the research center. The blond and the brunet disappeared behind her.

The scientists looked at each other before running towards the break room to start gossiping. “Oh
“for Tesla!” Dr. Jerald sighed. “Did you see that girl?!” He waved his arms. “Why was she wearing such an ugly jacket? It didn’t match her at all!”

“I just want to know who she is.” Dr. Wexler said with a faint blush. She felt her heart flutter when that woman’s sweet voice rang out. Dammit girl, no. You’ve already got a girlfriend!

Unknown to all the scientists, and even Yun herself, when they had originally created Jan’s form he was merely a physical body but over the years and years of performing for the multiverse, being worshiped by his fans, Jan (and Yun by default) had become something much like a Divine Siren (a Diva, as they were known in some parts of the multiverse, and a Deva in others), whose voice and appearance would entrance any who looked upon them. Completely unintentionally. And the effect had been minor, but with Yun’s delighted mood, and the thrumming power that practically seeped out of her from the concert Jan had back in his own ‘set before coming over here, the effect had been temporarily super charged.) Only those who knew him personally could somewhat stave off the effects. Or in the case of Ford, be entirely oblivious to them. Yun happily ran through the town, gazing in wonder at the world around her, kicking at leaf piles and laughing with delight. She didn’t really get to actually play around in the town much, spending most of her time in the forest or the Center. There were lots of pine trees that didn’t drop all their leaves but enough other trees existed here to make huge leaf piles! She didn’t notice the way she charmed everyone she ran past.

The chilly air hit the two men in the nose and they grumbled before stuffing their hands in their pockets and faces into their jackets. Even when Ford was wearing a turtleneck sweater, he still wished he took a scarf with him. “Why didn’t we take yer car, Stanford?” Fiddleford complained. Ford shrugged. “Yun already ran off, not like I can make her walk all the way back to my car now.” The two shivered when the chilly wind blew past them. Yun seemed to notice their discomfort and ran back to them. “Do you want to be less cold?” She asked. Ford responded “That would be nice.” while Fiddleford nodded, without really thinking about it and then gasped when Yun held his hand. A warmth flooded Fiddleford’s body and he gasped. It felt SO nice~ He turned to the girl, still wary but...she had come to help him, and had asked first and waited for him to agree before she did… whatever magic this was. “T-thank you.”

“No problem. Stay close, I have trouble keeping up the heat effect without having to enchant your clothes and I don’t know if you’re comfortable with that.” Yun told him before leaning over to snuggle against Ford’s side. She had one hand holding Fiddleford and her other around Ford’s. The brown haired man didn’t mind, didn’t even notice actually, and continued walking. He was interested in this ‘heat effect’ though. It felt nice. He wondered how Yun did it. They eventually reached the Diner and Ford almost fell over when Yun pulled him with extraordinary strength for someone her size. “Come on!” she squealed as she dragged the men inside the establishment.

“Welcome to the Greasy’s Diner.” The hostess trailed off and stared, slack jawed at the girl giving her the lovely smile. “Hi! A booth for three please!” She said in a sweet voice. The hostess blinked and shook her head, finally noticing Dr. Pines and McGucket standing behind her. “Ah, yes. Right this way.” She led them to a booth seat and handed them a stack of menus. “Take your time, dears.” The woman smiled at them and felt her heart flutter when the girl grinned back. “Thank you very much, ma’am!”

Yun sat down next to Ford and Fiddleford sat down in front of them. The girl grabbed a menu and hummed as she scanned the food. “I want pancakes! With ice cream! Can I please get that?” She looked at Ford, fluttering her eyelashes. She hadn’t taken off her jacket so she looked like a poofy sheep, floofing against the sides of the booth. “And also the hashbrowns! And Corned beef hash! And an omelette! With mushrooms!” Ford laughed. He heard Seb complain about Miz’s appetite constantly, but Ford found it adorable. “Anything else?” he teased.
“Hm...I want chocolate chips on my pancakes.” Yun decided. “Are you sure that’s safe?” Ford asked, which made Yun sigh. “Fine. Strawberries instead.”

Fiddleford shook his head with a faint smile. These two were too cute together. He decided on a turkey sandwich and a cup of coffee for himself. The waitress came over, a faint blush on her cheeks and asked for their orders. Fiddleford gave her his and she wrote that down before looking over at Ford and Yun. “And you?”

“I’ll just have a coffee please.” Ford said before Yun tilted her head. “Are you sure just coffee is enough? You missed breakfast this morning.” Ford blinked. Of course Yun knew about that. Ford thought about it, then turned to the waitress and said, “And a spinach omelette too, please.” Ford had been too excited to get to work this morning, hadn’t even realized he was hungry until Yun brought it up.

Fiddleford grinned. He had often told Ford to take better care of himself. Ever since he started therapy with Ashton, he did much better. Ford never overcame his food or workaholic bad habits though. He was glad this Bill was also looking out for him. The waitress smiled as well, guessing Dr. Pines had finally found himself a good girl to take care of him. About time. The man had been a bachelor for far too long...although poor Susan would be disappointed to find out her crush had finally started seeing someone. She had the vague idea they had a date but… Dr. Pines had jumped out of the window?

The waitress shook her head and revised her notes “Are ya sure you can eat all of that, sweetie?” Yun nodded. “We’ve been working all day and I’m hungry!” She pouted. “I missed breakfast two.” she said, with a twitch of her lips at the Homophone. She ate breakfast. But she missed 2nd breakfast. Which also counted as breakfast.

“Aawww~” The woman cooed at her sad expression. “Don’t worry, I’ll make sure they prepare everything as soon as possible.” She squealed internally when the girl gave her a grateful smile. “Thank you!” the pretty girl said. The waitress nodded, trying to ignore the heat on her cheeks, and walked away.

“Man, this place looks awesome! Look, the Manliness Tester that Dipper used! It’s still here!” She gasped, pointing at the machine. She didn’t get to play with that last time, in the other dimension. Ford frowned when he looked at the game. He guessed that happened when Stan and him weren’t back yet. How did Yun know about it? He was about to ask but she slipped out of the booth and sauntered over to the machine, subtly altering her vessel’s parameters as she went. “Hey Fordsie, want free pancakes?”

Ford raised an eyebrow. What did she mean by-

WHUMP!

Yun slammed a fist into the machine and it blared loudly as the bar rose to the very top. After Manly Dan broke the control the last time he was here, they replaced the squeeze handle with a pillow sensor you had to punch. They thought it would prevent the machine from breaking. They thought wrong. Yun blinked sheepishly as the machine whined and fell apart. “Oops.”

There was silence in the diner before Manly Dan stood up and walked over to Yun, his large form towering over her. “You…” he said roughly. Yun blinked at him innocently. Ford stood up and got ready to step between them, in case something happened.

Manly Dan got down on one knee. “Marry me.”
“EH?!?” Yun cried as she flushed. Ford slipped and nearly fell over. Manly Dan stared down at Yun, even on his knee, he was still much taller than her. “When mah wife died, I swore to myself I would never marry again unless it was to a woman who could beat mah record.”

“EH?!” Yun continued to squeak as Dan gently took one of her hands. “Ah...um...F-Fordsie?! Help?”

Ford froze to his seat.

Fiddleford kicked Ford’s leg. “Go do something, you dumb fool!” He hissed. Why was Ford doing nothing when someone propositioned his partner?! Ford shakily stood up and marched towards the huge red-headed man. “HEY!” Manly Dan turned to look at the scientist with a growl. Every other customer also turned to stare in shock at Sebastian’s brother. “What’s the problem Mr. Pines?” Dan asked. Ford frowned. “It’s Doctor. Dr. Pines.” He adjusted his glasses. He had 12 PHD’s. He deserved that title. “I believe Yun is uncomfortable with the sudden proposal.” As was Ford, but he wasn’t going to say that.

“Fordsie...” Yun sighed in relief. Then she turned to Dan, feeling a little less afraid with Ford nearby. “Listen, Dan, I-I thank you for the offer but I am NOT interested... I’m sorry but I’ll have to decline.”

“But...but you beat my record!” Dan cried. Yun shook her head. “I don’t really know you, and anyway, free pancakes for everyone!” She stepped around Dan and tried to get back to the booth. Dan protested and grabbed at her jacket. “Wait. Can we be friends at least?!” He tugged a bit harder than he meant to and Yun yelped when her jacket tore open and everyone gasped at the extra arms.

Oh fuck. Ford and Fiddleford grimaced. The townsfolk gaped in shock at the petrified girl, and then, in an extraordinary obedience to their law, slowly turned around and muttered “Never mind all that...”

Dan blinked at Yun’s extra arms before grinning. “So...do you lift? You don't look it.”

Yun facepalmed. “Friends is ok, but it’ll never be anything more. You’re very sweet, but I’m kinda already with someone right now.” Dan looked over at Ford who was standing there stupidly with his mouth open. “What do ya see in a nerd like that?” He grumbled without any real malice. Dan was a kind man and if a girl said ‘no’ then she meant ‘no’. He felt bad about ripping her jacket. He sometimes forgot his own strength.

Yun looked at the man with glasses and laughed. If she was honest, she just liked nerds. She just so happened to have chosen an oblivious one. But she liked him. Especially since this Ford obviously wasn't interested in anything sexual. “Eh, his hair is all fluffy and I like his chin dimple. But he’s also really kind to me. He makes me happy.” She smiled. All Pines were handsome as hell though. “And if I wasn’t here to keep that dummy in line, he’s bound to think coffee for each meal is a good idea.”

(Ford didn’t hear all this, as Dan’s bulk was blocking Yun from his view. He was still uncomfortable with how the other man had just outright proposed to Yun-- he didn’t even know her! Ford wasn’t-- he wasn’t saying that he got to decide who Yun wanted to go with-- but... well... she was clearly uncomfortable with Dan’s advance.)

Fiddleford hit him. "Ow." Ford complained. "Now this is your chance!"

"Uh?"
"You like Yun! Tell her. You still haven’t told her yet, have you?" Ford's face turned dark red and he quickly shook his head. Nope! "Yun’s just my friend… I-it wouldn’t--" Fiddleford sighed.

"Ford, it’s clear to anyone looking at you two that you’re wild for each other. And you’ve pretty much all but admitted it outright. Why haven’t you told her yet?"

"It’s not going to work--" Ford said softly, then Fiddleford poked him, "Ow!" "Tell her!" This time Fiddleford slapped Ford with a napkin."Hey! Quit that!" Fiddleford didn’t let go of the napkin. "You frickity dumbass! What do you mean it’s not gonna work? I mean, yeah, she’s a demon, but aren’t ya happy together?"

"Well, I guess but-oww!!" "Ya dated a frickin siren that tried eatin’ ya! THIS is an improvement!"

Back on the other side of the diner, Dan sighed and nodded. He picked up the jacket and handed it to the girl. "I apologize for this." Yun smiled brightly and patted his huge muscled arm. "Don’t worry, man, it’s ok!" She considered it a bit. “Have you tried going to the National Arm wrestling championships? They have a women’s division?” She materialized a small card with the information about the event behind her back before handing it to him. Maybe he could try his luck there.

Manly Dan took the tiny paper from her hand and his eyes lit up. “I WILL! Thank you!” He left the Diner with a smile. Yun smiled at the huge man and returned to the booth with Ford and Fiddleford, who were hitting each other. “Stop hitting me, Stanford!” “Stop hitting ME then!”

Yun came back over and the two quieted, Yun laughed nervously. “So, ah… that happened.” she rubbed her arms, looking down at the table and glancing at Ford now and then. He was glaring at Fiddleford. Yun looked back and forth between the two. “Um…?” Fiddleford kicked Ford under the table and gestured at Yun. Ford shrank in on himself.

"Hey Yun. What would ya say to someone who's been crazy for you for a while now--" "F, wait!!"

"--but it's too much of an idiot to do anything ‘bout it?"

Yun frowned a bit. "Um...do I know them?"

"Oh yes, you spend a lot of time together sciening, taking care of each other and making each other very happy." Fiddleford patted Ford’s head. Yun's blue eyes widened a little.

"This someone also thinks you’re the best. Thinks your forms are very cute, thinks you’re intelligent and sweet and appreciates your company, would LOVE sciening with you every day." Fiddleford listed.

Ford’s face couldn't be redder. "...I said her forms are fascinating…"

Yun blinked (blushing a little from the compliments, second hand as they were), almost wanting to believe-- but that wasn’t possible that Fiddleford meant it in the way she thought it was. “O-oh…” She twirled a lock of her hair nervously. “I mean, yeah, I know that. I’m awesome after all. That’s what Linda says I need to keep saying.” Yun/Jan and Xin were awesome. That was how it worked. Even if Miz/Bill/William weren’t. (She felt a twinge of depression come on and pushed past it. No, be happy. Maybe if she was happy, her brother would…) Fiddleford kicked Ford again.

"My friend--" He leaned closer to Yun to ‘whisper’ but he stole spoke loudly "Reaaaally likes you. His name starts with S and finishes in -anford. Pines. S- and then -tanford Pines. Please, I'll pull my hair out if you two continue doing this to me." The blond pleaded. Yun blinked slowly. “Um, yeah. Fordsie’s my friend, of course he likes me.” Fiddleford turned slowly to face Ford, his eye twitching. “If you don’t just tell her, I’m going to eat your glasses.” Fiddleford threatened.
“What? You’d choke.” Ford deadpanned. But Fiddleford just kicked him again. Ford slapped his arm. “I can’t-- there’s no point--” in confessing, just to have Yun turn him down like she did Dan. Because Yun wasn’t interested in ‘dating’, why would she be?

He waved a mental hand. And he already tried the dating thing, and he failed. He wasn’t good at it so there was no point in trying it with Yun, disappointing her, and having Yun leave him for that! What if she was so disappointed and put off by his pathetic attempts at romance that she gets all awkward around him?

Fiddleford started slamming his head against the table. He stood up and walked to a random table where a family with a young teen were eating. "I’ll give you a hundred dollars if you tell that lady something."

"COOL!!" the kid grinned. Easy money! And he’d get to talk to the pretty lady? Fiddleford told him what to say, and the boy strode towards them with a written napkin, with his parents gaping. "Hey, so Miss Yun, Dr. Stanford likes you and wants to be your boyfriend because he thinks you're amazing but he's an...an owl (?) and won't say it because he's too shy." The kid shrugged and went back to his seat. Fiddleford slammed the money on his table for him and strode back to his own table smugly, when Yun FINALLY gasped and stared at Ford who was trying to disappear into sweater town.

“...this… isn’t a joke, is it?” Yun said, glaring at Fiddleford. “If you’re pranking me-- this sort of thing isn’t funny.”

“No joke, no prank. That idiot is clearly head over heels for you.” Fiddleford patted Ford’s shoulder. "And I’m done with him being such a dumbass so I said it for him. So, what do you say to that?” Fiddleford asked.

And Yun looked over at Ford, who looked resigned and withdrawn. “...I want to hear him say it.” she said softly. “Because I think I want him to be my partner too, but I don’t know if such a thing’s possible. I was quite sure he wasn’t interested in me romantically.”

Ford poked his head out of his sweater with his eyes wide. "...You'd...want to be…?” He rubbed his neck.

Yun blushed faintly. “Well, I like you. Emotionally, aesthetically, and… um, well…” She played with a lock of her hair nervously. “B-but I’m... really high maintenance. Like, I’m so much trouble, I doubt anyone could really handle me…” she looked away. “So... I didn’t bother asking, didn’t... want to put that on you. Too much work, for you and…” she shrugged.

"I...I like you too...Erm, I mean, yeah, I think you're intelligent and just...being with you is fun...And your forms are very unique and I like them all...I...I don’t think you're trouble, I've never seen it that way..." He rubbed his arm.

Fiddleford leaned back. "Besides, you two spend so much time together already and you watch out for, and care for each other already. You'd just make it official." He waved a smug hand. And Yun gave Ford a shy look. “Are you really sure you want to date me?” she asked quietly. “E-even though I’m not human, and I’m awful and I’m also horny half the time?” (Fiddleford choked at that.)

Ford paused at the ‘horny’ part, but shook it off. “Yes. I... I really like you. And I want to get to know everything about you-- erm, within reason. You’re hundreds of billions of years old, there’s no feasible way for me to know all of you without having my brain explode, but you get what I mean?”
Yun giggled. “Yes. I get it.”

The two smiled at each other and Yun shyly reached to hold his hand and Fiddleford sighed with so much relief. Finally. No more pain. No more bets from the gang. "Hey, congrats! You big boy! Doing it all by himself!” F playfully ruffled Ford's hair, making him chuckle. "Ok, ok! Thank you, F…”

Yun hugged Glasses then. "I'll help with any crazy robots you want! And give you subspaces to add your raccoons!!" She squealed, she was so happy! Fiddleford’s eyes widened and Ford quickly shot down, “Nope. You can help him with a couple, but not whichever ones he wants. That’s too much.”

Yun leaned towards Fiddleford "...subspaces~" before giggling and clinging to Ford for a hug, wrapping her 4 arms around him. “Well, I’ve never dated before, so this’ll be a new experience! Don’t worry about giving me gifts of flowers, jewelry or kissing in the dark of a movie theater dates, I don’t need most of the stuff that people seem to think dating is about.” Ford took a deep breath of relief and hugged her back. “That’s good, because I’m terrible at romance.” This was fine...This was going to be fine. This was Yun. And nothing changed. They were just… dating now. Yup. That’s a thing.

...........Ford had no idea what the fuck he was doing.

---

They finished their food and left the Diner, Yun left a generous tip. She was prancing around, looking at the town, seeing how it changed and hadn’t changed in the time since. She also demanded Ford to give her a piggyback ride. He agreed to it, so she was cashing in on all her high maintenance needs. It wasn't half bad though. She had demanded more off him while being friends. Ford rolled his eyes fondly and let her climb onto his back. This was a good workout anyway.

As they walked through the town, Yun pouted, growing bored despite her enjoyment of the town and grinned mischievously. With one of her lower arms, she poked Ford on his side. He made a strangled noise. “Yun!” He cried. She giggled. “Sorry, couldn’t help myself.” She looked down again as Ford grumbled annoyed and embarrassed at his ticklishness. Stanley and Shermie had always taken advantage of him by- “Poke!” The young woman tickled his side again.

Ford nearly fell over. “Stop that!” He cried. “I WILL drop you!”

“You wouldn’t dare.” Yun challenged.

Ford grinned. His hands started to let go of her legs. “Oops! What have you done, Yun? You suddenly feel more slippery! I think I am losing my grip!” He laughed before choking when all four arms wrapped around him tightly. “Gahck!”

"If you drop me Stanford Filbrick Pines, I swear I will turn you inside out.” Yun hissed.

Ford gulped and adjusted his grip once again. “Hey, look at that, you’re back to normal…” He joked. Yun’s arms were still around his neck but he wasn’t choking anymore. “Can you let go of my neck now?”

“Nope~ It’s to remind you not to drop me!” Yun said cheerfully. Ford rolled his eyes. Even if she was a nice Bill Cipher, she was still Bill Cipher. Was he insane for liking a demon god? He preferred putting it like he had very high standa-

No, who was he kidding? He had gone insane, dating the cryptid who just transformed him into a dragon months ago… and a woman before that. And wanted to turn him into a giant for some reason. (She just like transforming him, didn’t she? Was that her ‘thing’? Ford didn’t really mind, but it was a little annoying.)

He wanted to do it right though. He knew Yun enough to actually know she was pleased easily (despite her claims of being high maintenance), but...he didn't want to hurt or offend her accidentally with his lack of experience. He really needed to talk to Stanley. And Sebastian. They must have some advice for him. For the whole… dating thing.

----

Yun stayed to help Ford with a few minor projects, falling asleep on his workbench at one point, to Ford’s confusion. She woke up a few hours later and told Ford that she had to leave. “The twins will be home from school soon.” She explained. Ford nodded. “Right, it was nice working with you today.” She explained. Ford nodded. “Right, it was nice working with you today.” He wasn’t sure what to do now. What did one do to say farewell to their partner? Yun, thankfully, made the decision for him, she gave him a soft hug and shyly kissed his chin. “I’ll see you next week then?” She asked.

“See you next week!” Ford nodded and smiled a bit. The woman waved before she disappeared.

Ford waited a few minutes before immediately getting on his phone and calling Stanley. He rested his cheek on the desk as he waited. The phone rang for a while before finally picking up to Stan’s gruff voice shouting, “DIEGO! You said you did your homework!” Ford almost jumped. “I forgot! My football practice was much better anyway!” Diego complained.

“-URGH YOU LITTLE-”

“Stanley?” Ford tried. “Did I call in a bad moment?” The other voice stopped, he heard Stan saying “This isn’t over--” and addressed him. “Hey! What’s the word, Sixer! Don’t worry, it’s just Diego being a little shit sometimes.”

“Hello, Stanley...why is that?” Ford asked politely. Learning about his family and how they were. See? He was a good brother. “Cuz despite being a huge nerd like you, he’s incredibly intelligent but he just doesn’t want to do what we tell him and he never does his homework! The teacher called us today…”

“Hm, I wonder why he’s such a free spirit…” Ford joked and Stan made an offended sound. “Well...anyway...how are you, why did you call?”

Ford hesitated before taking a deep breath. “So...William and I are dating now!” He couldn’t say ‘Miz’ since she was.... Well, no. Ford couldn’t say he was dating Miz.

“Yeah? What’s up?” Stan asked. He already knew Ford was dating the triangle. Still super weird to think about but, she was a nice girl, boy, chaos demon god, whatever, and Stan hoped they were happy together. He heard Ford make a whimpering sound. “How do I talk to a woman without offending her?”

Stan groaned and rubbed his face. “Did you piss ‘em off?” Ford immediately denied it. “No? I don’t think so? But she did threaten to turn me inside out if I dropped her.” Stan twitched, a little worried about his brother’s safety. “Dropped...as in?” He really hoped Ford wasn’t talking about ‘dropped’ as in ‘breaking up’ because if so...yeesh, he had no idea how to handle that. He didn’t think attempting to break up with a demon god was going to end well for any of the people involved.

“Well, I was giving her a piggyback ride and joked about dropping her.” Ford said sheepishly. “I think she thought I was being serious.”

Stan gave a loud relieved sigh. “Ok. That is way better than I thought…” He nodded. Also, Stanford giving Miz piggyback rides? That was cute, weird, but cute. “I think she was joking too? I don’t think she would actually do that, she loves us! But she likes you even more so I can bet my money she was joking and didn’t get angry for real.”

“Ah. I see. This is great news.” Ford wrote this down in a new notebook. “Well...what does one generally do when they date someone?”

“Why’re you askin’ me? You and Bill have been together for months now.” Stan grumbled into the phone.

“W-we have ?!” Ford gasped. Were they? Well...he thought back to the past months hanging out with Miz/Xin/Yun/William once a week. It sure felt longer. The lunches and dinners she sometimes cooked for him. The way she hung around his lab, lazily pointing out mistakes in his blueprints, the adventures they had in space...did that count as dating? He sat down heavily. Oh. OH. Oh...

“Poindexter?” Stan asked from the other side of the line.

Ford groaned and buried his head in his arms. “Sixer? Are you ok?” Stan asked, a little worried now.

“I...actually hadn’t realized I was dating Yun until, well, we kinda asked each other today? Fiddleford helped...and a boy who called me and owl?" Why did people CONTINUE calling him that?!

“Oh God, you know what? It-It actually doesn’t surprise me that much, Sixer. You know why?”

"Why?"

“Because you are fucking stupid!!” Stan laughed loudly. “You have spent all these months with her and you didn’t know?! HAHAHAHAHA! CARLA! CARLA COME! YOU HAVE TO HEAR THIS!"

“Stanley, stop!” Ford cried from the other side, blushing bright. “I’ll never talk to you again if you tell her!”

Stan wiped a tear from his eyes and took a deep breath to calm himself. “Alright...alright...I’m sorry, Sixer, it was just too funny!” Ford growled. “Why did you call again?” Stan snickered. He was so telling this to Carla when Ford hung up...

Ford grumbled into his phone. “Well I WAS going to ask you for advice on what to do when I’m dating someone but apparently I’ve already been doing it?” He wasn’t sure why Miz/William/Yun (he needed to decide on a name to refer to them as, probably William) liked him. He had never really done anything romantic with her... that he knew of? He blinked. Now that he thought about it...dating William was probably for the best. Ford had no interest in the physical side of relationships. He knew what sexual intercourse was and found the idea unappealing.
And William wasn’t into it either, which made him feel relieved. Win win! And he did find very how intelligent she was to be very attractive, and the vast knowledge she possessed. Though, she also said she was ‘horny’ and, to be fair, Ford wasn’t going to hold that against her. One could be Ace and have a libido at the same time. And from Ford’s experience, all it meant was that she wanted a very thorough ‘petting’, which was fine.

William was intelligent, engaging, helpful, fascinating and didn’t demand for Ford to give her sexual gratification (Though she was very demanding for sensual petting and affection). Which Ford didn’t mind, he found himself quite enjoying touching her. Not like that, of course-- but--well-- she was soft and warm and-- Ford blushed. So dating her was… well… Ford had caught onto the idea of it, but hadn’t said anything because he’d been afraid expressing this want for her wouldn’t work out. But it seemed she was happy with the idea. And was probably going to use their new ‘couple’ status to get more touching out of him in the future.

Well, it was a good thing she liked being caressed, because Ford liked touching her. He was glad he wasn’t on a video call with Stan.

“You know, Stanley? I-I think I'm good now…” Ford nodded. He should call Seb though, to ask him more about Miz/Yun/William and learn what NOT to do to avoid actually getting turned inside out. “Thank you!”

“Er, you’re welcome? I guess?” Stan scratched the back of his neck. “Be a good boyfriend.”

“Eh…? I will, I guess.” Ford nodded, rubbing his warm face. “Oh, and maybe Diego needs something more challenging at school, I know he is quite clever, and that he was attending a more specialized school, but still, he could need more. I got bored at school too, try talking with the teachers or something.”

“Oh…OH! You're a genius, Poindexter! Haha! You still have it! Thanks!” Stan hung up and Ford leaned back on his chair. Boyfriend...It was so weird. William was a girl half the time anyway so...Partner should be more than sufficient. He wondered if he should tell his mother about this.

The two had talked and he had finally told her he wasn't interested (but not opposed) in really settling down, but giving her...grandchildren wasn’t something that would happen, on account of him being asexual. But...if he told her now (about dating, NOT the grandchildren thing. He might be curious about William’s different forms and their reproductive abilities and all, but he had no intention to find that out on a personal level! Sure, Xin wanted babies, but wanting kids without the actual child-making itself was very different, and Ford was actually a little interested in seeing how that would work), she’d feel very happy that Ford had someone he was happy with...

Ma had more than enough grandchildren from his other brothers anyway! She could be satisfied with them! Stanford pinched his nose. He wouldn’t mind helping William adopt kids (or… asexually reproduce? Like with Ammy?), and...maybe he’d help raise them? He wasn’t sure entirely what dating her would entail. Ah, he should have sat her down to talk this out.

He dialed Sebastian to talk. He wanted to talk about anything but this right now! “Yellow? Why are you calling my Dad?” Zoe asked the stranger. Stanford sighed. “Greetings, Zoe, it’s your Uncle Stanford.”

“Uncle Sixer!!” Zoe squealed and kept the phone floating next to her ear as she searched for what clothes she should wear tomorrow. Oh! She was definitely taking Zach’s t-rex blue and green t-shirt tomorrow! “Why are you calling?”

“I...I wanted to know how you were! Yeah! Haha!” Ford said.
“OH! I’m fine! School is fun, except when it's not, bleh, but I love recess and we play lots of things there. A kid lost a baby tooth because she fell from the swings! It was so gross, blood was everywhere!” The girl laughed excitedly, not actually grossed out. “Is it true that if I lose a tooth, a magical fairy will come to give me money for it?! Everyone was saying that!”

Ford frowned. “The fey are not known to do so but if one does get into your house, it is dangerous. Never invite them in. The fey often kidnap children.”

“Really? But mommy said the fairies are nice...I guess you know more though...you open monsters in your lab, no?”

“What?”

“Zoe! What are you doing with my phone?” Ford heard his brother coming closer. “It’s uncle Sixer! I even said ‘yellow’ to him!” Zoe exclaimed proudly. “Haha! Classic, now go play somewhere else.” Seb took the phone from his daughter and grinned. “HI, SIXER!”

“Hello? Sebastian?” Ford winced a little at the volume. “Is Miz there?” They had gotten used to calling them by their different names but whenever they weren’t exactly sure which form the demon was currently in, they went to Miz as a default.

“Eh, I am not sure, wait. HAS SOMEONE SEEN MIZ??!” Seb shouted and Ford winced. Damn! Why was Seb always screaming?! “SHE’S WITH ME!” Zach screamed back. “SHE’S HELPING ME WITH HOMEWORKKK!” Even his kids were so loud Ford could hear them on the phone!

“THANK YOU!!” Seb screamed and then addressed his brother. “Yeah, she’s with Zachary.” He asked teasingly. “I heard.” Ford rubbed his ear. Seb laughed "Want to talk to her?

“Right, your weekly sessions. Geez Sixer, I don't know how you manage to keep up with her. Even Wanda and I don't go at it so often...and now that the twins are older...”

Ford blinked. Well, yes, with Wanda busy at her job he supposed it did make it difficult for Sebastian and her to go out on dates together. But hanging out with William was no trouble at all. They would wrestle for a bit, Ford got back into shape from all the exercise and then they would have a quiet day at the lab (until something exploded at least). He shook his head “It's not all that difficult. Once I learned how to use my longer reach to leverage my weight against hers, it was quite simple to subdue her.”

“TOO MUCH INFORMATION!”

“Yeah! Let’s go burn books and the internet!” Zoe popped out from behind the couch and Sebastian screamed. “Little pest, didn’t I tell you to go bother someone else?” He growled playfully and the girl ran away, laughing. Half demon kids...

“So, did you just call me to tell me about your...rough techniques during your sessions, brother?”

“No, actually...” Ford wavered. “I simply wanted to inform you that William and I are officially dating now. Well, officially dating Yun. Have you met that identity of Miz’s yet?”

Sebastian raised an eyebrow. “Wait. You've been together...for almost a year and you've only JUST started dating officially?” He groaned. “Seriously, Sixer?” And he thought Ford was slow, this was like...a snail!
“Yes. I am very aware.”

Seb laughed loudly. Ford was an idiot. Ok. Moving on. “You said she showed you a new human form? Not Miz, Xin, Jan or William?” Seb looked at the couch and found the head of a beheaded doll. Fuck, his kids were even worse than him.

“Yes. She called her Yun, I’ve actually met her a few times before. Quite the amazing specimen. A female version of Jan, though the markings along her body are different.”

“That’s so cool, why hasn’t she shown us that one yet?!” The man pouted. “I feel offended, Sixer, really offended, but I guess you have a little more right to see her various forms…” Seb pouted as he examined Zoe's doll head. Why was it bald?! “Was this new form cute? She always made her adult forms handsome to mess with people. I’m guessing a female adult form would be gorgeous.”

“Well Jan is a masculine form, as you know, but he’s still quite delicate. Very slender. Yun is female and much the same aside from having breasts and wider hips.” Ford explained. “Actually, when I took Yun out to the diner for lunch, Manly Dan proposed to her and—” Seb was about to tease him with Susan, something like “Haha, that’s your problem now!” when he finished hearing the rest. “WHAT?!” He shrieked. “PROPOSED?!”

“Yes. It was the oddest thing. That’s when we made it official. Both of us felt…quite uncomfortable with the sudden proposal.”

Seb’s eye twitched. “Of course she was! If you had been official before, that wouldn’t have happened!” He scolded in his ‘dad voice’

“Yes.” Ford rubbed his head sheepishly. “I know… though I don’t want to seem possessive—"

“Possessive nothing, I can assure you, that Miz is ten times more possessive than you could ever be.” Seb shook his head as he laid down on the couch. Sir Bedazzle jumped over him and curled up on his chest. “But seriously, can’t believe you waited until someone tried to propose to her, to actually ask her out! How-how come I feel more of these—these lovey dovey human emotions than you?! Do you think that if someone proposed to MY wife I would have let them see the light of day ever again?!”

Ford pouted slightly. “I-I suppose not…” And he felt terrible during the exchange, quite an uncomfortable experience. "I just lack experience and information. Hadn't considered this since… ya know, the reunion and… Kathy…” Ford coughed. "And even then...I’d say I haven’t done such a thing since high school."

“Dad, have you seen the head of my doll?” Zoe asked innocently. “Her punishment isn’t ready yet.” Seb threw the head and she caught it with her mind. “Dispose of a body correctly! I don’t want more body parts around the house!” Seb scolded her.

He turned his attention back to Ford when Zoe left, ready to set some dolls on fire. “Well…” Seb had to admit that he hadn’t considered it either since he stupidly left Wanda as a teen… “Ok, I get it, you know? But...you're really intelligent… shouldn’t you have… noticed?”

“...honestly, I was afraid to scare her away, or make her uncomfortable, if she didn’t feel the same.”

“...fine, yeah, I can see that. Still, it’s kinda obvious to everyone that she adores you.”

“Well, yeah? We’re friends.” Ford told Seb patiently. “Of course she loves me. But loving me and being in love with me are two different things.” he sighed. “I still don’t… really know what I’m meant to do… about this whole dating thing. I love her. But I don’t know what I’m supposed to do.
But… I mean… I guess I… will figure it out?” He didn’t want to bore Yun so much she broke up with him. She was still his friend first and a partner second. Even if they broke up, Ford hoped he didn’t lose her as a friend. Then again, considering she’d chosen him for her Zodiac, he supposed that was a reassurance that he wouldn’t lose her, even if they were no longer romantically together.

“Yeah, yeah…” The younger man pinched the bridge of his nose. “Ok… The important thing is that you’re official now, right?” He smiled, but Ford of course couldn’t see it. “Yes.” Ford said and Seb grinned. “Good! When can I start making you a suit?!”

“A suit? For what?”

“Your weeediiinggg~” Seb teased his brother who started choking on the other side. He burst out into laughter as Ford (figuratively) died. “Sixer?? You with me?” Sebastian heard gasping from the other side of the line and cackled. “But seriously dude, what are you gonna do with the whole dating thing?”

Ford groaned. “Yun said she didn’t need gifts or special dates but I’m not sure if that’s really alright. Do you think I should do something special for her anyway? What can I even do?”

Sebastian rolled his eye. “Well, Miz is a girl of simple tastes. I think she’s just happy spending time with people. Which is good for you since I doubt you’ll be able to pull off anything romantic-”

“Hey!”

“-and aside from that, I know she loves chocolate. Well, duh, who doesn’t? And almost any other food as well. But if you’re looking for gifts, nice chocolate is always a safe choice.” Sebastian paused and considered something. “You know, you’re really fucking lucky Miz isn’t a human girl.”

“Why is that?”

“Cause you don’t have to deal with Miz on her period. I know how to treat my wife fine, but you… yeesh, I seriously doubt it! If such a thing ever happened…” Sebastian shuddered. “She would eat you alive.”

Ford blanched. “T-that… is very fortunate for me indeed.” The thought of a demon god going through unstable, hormone induced mood swings was totally terrifying. Miz already had mood swings, being on a menstrual cycle would make everything worse. “…and now I have the image of being devoured whole by my partner, thank you for that.” He drawled sarcastically. Sebastian laughed loudly, kicking his legs in the air and almost making the puppy on his chest fall. “You are very welcome! Aaahh~ Love, eh, Sixer?”

“Um…yes.” Ford said, unsure. He didn’t know what love was, but he knew that he cared for MizBill a lot, and wanted to be with her.

“What do you think the twins will think about this?” Seb wondered aloud. “What if everyone knows?! Did you tell Mom?! Can I tell her our favorite bachelor has finally been taken?!” Ford shook his head, despite Seb being unable to see it. “No, I don’t want mother to know yet. I… still have to figure out how to tell her myself. But I also don’t want to get her hopes up, if Yun gets bored with me--”

“Bitch, she wouldn’t do that to you.” Seb told him firmly. “And even if you do break up, she’d still be your friend, she wouldn’t just drop you or get ‘bored’ with you.”
“I… suppose you’re right.” Ford said with a sigh. “But, mother met Miz, she knows Miz is your adopted alien child. I can’t tell her I’m dating your adopted daughter!”

Seb started biting his finger in thought. Right! He had totally forgotten about that! “But if you present her as Yun? I mean, they’re the same person, but Yun is an adult, right? So it’s fine.” Ford frowned, only understanding half of it because his brother’s finger muffled his voice, but he understood the idea. Yes…he COULD introduce his mother to Yun. “Yes…she looks like an adult woman. It would be less strange than trying to explain that I'm dating a child. Which, I’m not. Miz… she’s not a child, even if she takes the form of one.”

Sebastian suddenly laughed. “I…I just realized! If you marry Miz, does that make me your dad?!”

“I will stop you right there, Sebastian….” Stanford shuddered. Weird, too weird, even for him. “You aren’t her real dad! And I wouldn't marry ‘Miz’ if such a thing ever happened.”

“Tell that to our official adoption papers! Hah! In your face!” Seb replied childishly. “Anyway, it wouldn’t change the fact that I am your older brother and I am NOT marrying Miz!” Ford growled. "Nor am I dating her. I can date Yun, or Xin, but I cannot, in good conscience, officially date Miz.”

“Hey son, speak with a little more respect!” Seb made his voice deeper to sound more serious and Stanford groaned, exasperated. Why hasn’t he grown up yet?! “Wait, you’re not marrying them? So…you’re just gonna date forever?” Sebastian asked. Ford paused. When Sebatian put it like that, it did sound rather odd. “Not every couple HAS to get married right?”

“No…” Seb agreed. “But humans do this…and…I like it… the whole concept of it. And the fancy party!” He blushed a bit. He remembered when he was against it. How silly of him. His wedding was the best party of his mundane human life. “I like being with Wanda this way, it’s a way to say ‘Hey fucker! This is MY wife and you can’t have her because she's mine!’ and I can fight people who offend her. Wanda socked a woman in the chin the other day for me, it was so awesome!”

Ford considered that. “I see what you mean. But what if MizBill isn’t interested in marriage? I doubt she would appreciate you planning this out when she doesn’t actually feel like it.”

“Of course you don’t plan it out by yourself, idiot! You have to talk about it with her! If Miz doesn’t want to, don’t do it, if you don’t want to, don’t do it, if both of you want to…meh, you could, who cares! Marriages are fun! You get to party, wear beautiful clothes, and eat cake and drink until you're a drunk ass!” Seb laughed maniacally.

“But of course you just want to have a party.” Ford rolled his eyes. He sighed. “I don’t think I’m ready for things like marriage. I’ve only JUST started dating…” Even now he wasn’t quite sure if this had been a mistake. He DID like MizBill. But was that enough for marriage? Ford didn’t know. He groaned when he realized that despite being fully human, he was somehow lacking in this part of the human experience. Even Seb understood romance, and he used to be a demon.

Actually.

“Does MizBill even understand romance?” He asked suddenly. “Did YOU understand romance back when you were a being of pure energy? I know Miz used to be human, and some of her Self still registers more towards the human side of emotional feelings, but...” Seb was taken aback by the sudden question. He sat up and frowned. “Miz...seems to know about it...and understand it...she’s a special Bill, she feels stuff most of them don’t…” He said softly. Was it because she was raised by the Axolotl? Or from the time she was human? Seb learned about human emotions from being human, so maybe Miz did too?
“And...what about you?” Ford asked and Seb pouted. He flickered a flame to life and watched it dance on his palm. “I…”

Make it worth something!

“I don’t know…” Seb said at last. “My past life was a little too fucked up, man...I-I'm not sure…” He hugged his knees to his chest. He didn’t want to think about Nora. About how he failed her. “I think the Bill that I used to be...might have known how to love...a long time ago.” He shook his head. “It doesn’t matter now. The past me was nothing like Miz. She’s filled with TOO much love.” He smiled fondly at the thought of his spiritual little sister, legal daughter and personal best friend.

‘So it’s just me who doesn’t understand…” Ford thought sourly.

“I’m sure she actually likes you, Sixer! I mean, she called you the second most handsome! No one can beat me of course! But being second is a great honor too! The highest of flattery! Hehe flattery, you get it?! Cuz, flat! And Bill is a triangle! HAHA!” Seb smiled and waited for his brother’s reply.

“But why does she like me?” Ford sounded somewhat lost. He really couldn’t understand. She claimed it was because she liked his fluffy hair and thought his chin looked funny. And thought his hands were sexy. And liked how creative he was-- But was that really all it took? There had to be something more. It was impossible for her to choose him merely for his love for science (there were plenty of more intelligent scientists out there, probably?) and outward appearance, she was face blind after all. Even if she could see him and find him attractive, she could just as easily find others with similar features that would also catch her fancy (Like, literally, his near identical triplets) It wasn’t as if she couldn’t see what people looked like, she clearly COULD, she simply had trouble telling people apart if they shared enough exterior traits that they ‘looked’ similar. But what made Ford so special? Aside from being her Zodiac. He wasn’t sure if that was even a factor here or not, since he very much doubted she’d be romantically inclined towards any of her other Zodiac members.

Sebastian held his phone and bit his lip. “Why are you so worried about this? Miz likes you and you like her too right? So why should it matter why?”

“But it makes no sense!” Ford cried. “I’m a mortal human! If she gets intimate with me… and then I die--” what would that do to her? Oh no, Ford hadn’t thought of this at the time, and he couldn’t just… break things off with her over this-- that would be awful! He… was going to have to talk to her about this.

“I-I don’t know, Sixer… I don’t know…” Seb whimpered. He just wanted them to be happy, and Ford sounded really upset about all this, which wasn’t good for him or Miz. “Look,” Seb sighed. “Human stuff doesn’t make sense… why did Carla choose Stanley? He’s a dumb flirt! Why did Abi stay with Shermie when she could easily have left him after he got her pregnant so young? Why does Wanda like me! That’s the biggest question! And she fell for a really, REALLY beaten up, young version of me! Miz just, just likes you! It's how it is! No science, no magic… just...poof! It happened! Well, not poof, I guess, it probably happened over time or something--” He was getting upset himself. Explaining human things to his brother, who should know this by instinct, unlike him who had to learn it, was hard!

Ford was silent on the other side of the line. He was quiet for so long that Seb almost thought he’d hung up. Finally though, Ford’s deep voice came through the phone. “And what about when I pass away? Will I tear out her heart and take it with me to the grave?” And she said that she would search for his reincarnation, but… that wasn’t fair to her, or to his reincarnated self, who probably wouldn’t even remember her.

Sebastian bit his finger harder this time until he drew blood. He didn’t know! He didn’t know! He wasn’t the love god! He didn’t know how to help Ford! “Ok, that sounds terrifying. But... I-- I don’t know. I don’t know what you can do about that besides tell her straight out that you might die someday and she needs to just... accept that?? ”

Ford buried his face in his hand. “I...I don’t know. I thought it would be an amazing opportunity to get to know her more personally. There’s still so many things I don’t know about Miz Cipher and I just really wanted to find out. And I really do care about her-- I don’t know what to do.”

Seb wanted to cry. For what, he didn’t know at the moment, but he felt the feeling build up in his chest. “I...can only tell you to try this...official dating thing carefully, don’t do stupid shit, ‘cuz I know you are stupid and will fuck it up!” Seb wiped his eye angrily. Stupid bodily fluids! “And if you see it isn’t working, just end it...I did it once with a boyfriend I had...it didn’t last of course, but at least we tried.” Of course, it was him ending it and then he tried to kill himself, but Stanford didn’t need to know that. Augh, this was so frustrating. Why couldn’t Ford just...not have fallen for an immortal demon-god? “Look, do you love Miz?”

“Oh course. I want to stay by her side, and keep her safe and make her happy and cheer her up when she’s sad!”

“Well, if someone else tried to take her away from you, would you get...I don’t know, upset? If someone hurt her, would you step up to punch them? If she smiles at you, do you just feel like everything is just...better?”

Ford paused. Then he clutched his phone tighter. “Yes. I want-- I want her to be happy.”

“Well, then I think that’s the best you can do for now.” Seb sighed. “But seriously, if you’re really worried about the whole, dating an immortal thing? Just... talk to her about it. Work this out between yourselves--”

“AH! FIRE!” He heard a voice screaming from the street, followed by crazy little girl laughter. “BURN THE CORPSE! BURN THE CORPSE!”

“ZOE!!!” Seb screamed, “Sorry Sixer, I need to go. But seriously, talk to Miz. And I’m gonna talk to her too.” he clicked off his phone and ran to the front yard. Ok, change of plans. Teach his daughter she couldn’t sacrifice dolls out in the open (she should have told him and they could have made a firepit to sacrifice the doll properly with marshmallows and not get in trouble with the neighbors!) and THEN talk to Miz about Fordsie.

He ran out with a fire extinguisher and had to apologise profusely to Rachel from down the street. She had been walking her dog and spotted the little bonfire Zoe had built on the sidewalk. “Sorry. She’s been...ah...trying to practice cooking on her own.” He bullshit sheepishly. Rachel stared at him. “But she was clearly chanting ‘burn the corpse’ as she poked the doll with a stick.”

Seb glared at Zoe who looked entirely unapologetic. “She snitched on the group, so she deserved to die.” The girl shrugged. Seb laughed nervously and pushed Zoe back inside. “You little demon! What have I told you?! You can play with fire only when I’m watching you! Do you want to burn down the house?”

“Yes!” her pyromaniac nature shone in her heterochromatic eyes. Seb would be proud...but he would burn other people’s houses, not their own. “Ok, go to the corner and think about what you did.”
“Or what?!?” The girl challenged. “Or I am telling Mom!” Seb laughed at her scared expression. “No!” “Then go! 30 minutes to think!”

While Zoe was sulking in the corner, biting the charcoaled arm of her doll, Seb walked upstairs where Miz was with Zach doing homework, suddenly wondering WHY Zoe wasn’t doing her own homework. He found Zach diligently doing his work. Miz sat beside him, pointing out mistakes and very much being a supplemental teacher, letting Zach do what he can on his own before stepping in when he asked for help. “Am I using the word correctly?” Zach asked. Miz examined the sentence. “Yes! Very good, Zachy!” She pinched his cheeks and the boy whined. “Hey, Miz.” He called and the two turned around. “Hey, Seb!”

“Ah...can I talk to you for a second?” Seb gestured for Miz to come with him. She raised an eyebrow but got up and followed Seb to his room. “What's up?”

“Look, I know I haven't really...spoken to you about this but...how do you feel about Ford, huh?” Seb said bluntly. He wasn't in the mood to be sneaky. Miz blinked. “I love him.” She shrugged. Figures Ford immediately called his brothers for help. “If you're asking if I’m in love with him, I am. Or at least, I think these feelings I have are ‘love’. ” she paused. “I mean, I feel all fluttery and happy around him. Less of a squirmy feeling, it’s more...comfortable?” she blushed.

“Oh.” Seb blinked. “Well that was easier than I thought…”

Miz shrugged. “I mean… I’ve never dated before. So I have no idea what I’m doing.”

Seb sighed and gave Miz a lopsided smile. “So...what's happening between you and my brother?”

“Well, I've known Ford for awhile now and I've found myself...attracted to him. I like being around him, teasing him, talking to him, taking care of him and he's very nice to look at. And he’s good at making me happy, and cheering me up, and thinking about me.” Miz blushed. “So I decided I might as well go for it. If it doesn't work out...then at least I tried.”

"Just don't go too hard on him. And don’t get too angry at the poor guy. He has no idea how to date someone, but I’m sure he'll try his best. He always does.” Seb smiled.

Miz laughed. “I already know that.” She gave Seb a wry smile “I understand very well how hopeless he is with anything romantic. I'm not going to start expecting anything grand from him. Maybe little dates here and there if he feels like it.”

Seb was struck with the thought of 'Sixer's a lucky bastard that his partner is so understanding of his social inadequacy.'

“Of course, I do hope he would learn to know when I'm trying to flirt with him…” Miz sighed. Not that she was any good at flirting, but she wanted to try. It sounded fun. She also wanted to try and fluster Ford even half as hard as he managed with her. She wanted to see him flustered! He was cute when he was!

Seb laughed. “Well good luck with that.” He paused “Sixer sounds excited, but also pretty confused and doubting himself.” Relatable. "Make sure you still like him despite how useless he is~”

Miz rolled her eyes and nodded. “I'll make sure. Don't worry. And he’s not useless. He’s very useful! Don’t call him useless.” Not that she only wanted him for his uses, she just wanted him.

Seb groaned. “I wish my relationships had been this easy.” Wanda was incredible, but they both had been young, she couldn’t help him at that time. His ex boyfriend hadn’t been as serious as he promised, he left him because he couldn’t take how broken Seb was.

“No relationships are easy Seb.” Miz scolded him lightly. “But Ford and I are adults. You and mom were teenagers. It's very different. Plus, you were going through a very stressful time in your life.” (And so was Miz, not that she liked admitting it.)

“Gah, don’t remind me…” He mumbled with a pout. Miz continued “Plus you and mom had all those hormones and teenage horniness…not to mention the drama from your fragile egos and insecurities…”

Seb blushed. “I just cried more than normal as a teen. It was your mom who started everything.” Miz grinned and poked his side. “And you gladly accepted, didn’t you? Mom told me stuff.”

“Your mom’s a liar.” Seb stuck his tongue out. Miz cackled “But regardless, what I've seen from watching others start relationships is that people tend to be under this misconception that once you start dating someone, you have to invest everything you are into it. Which is frankly, stupid. Any relationship that requires you to give up parts of yourself in a negative way cannot possibly be healthy. There's being vulnerable and open to your partner, and then there's being stupid.” she wasn't going to make Ford her entire world, that would be the pinnacle of selfishness. And if she invested that much into Ford, it would be worse for her once he passed away.

“...are you basing this off the romance movies and novels you read?” Seb deadpanned. Miz huffed “They're Shoujo manga! And my point still stands! I've seen the problems that happen in stories often enough that I refuse to conform to them just because everyone has been brainwashed by the media to think relationships are SUPPOSED to be like that.”

Seb wasn't sure how accurate a cartoon could be about romance, but found himself asking “What sorts of problems are you avoiding?”

“Ugh. Don't even get me started, the fact that people will completely fall to pieces once they're in a relationship and their partner breaks up with them, like geez, emotional investment is a thing but your partner isn't your only reason for living, right?” and she certainly didn’t want that. Emotional support wasn’t the same as emotional pillar. She wasn’t going to let Fordsie be a pillar for her. She wasn’t going to rely on him for her happiness. Sure, he could be her support, and give her happiness, but he wasn’t going to be everything to her. That was too dangerous.

Seb opened his mouth to tell her that for some people, especially the lonely and depressed type like he had been, their partners WERE the most precious and valuable thing. But then he realized what Miz meant. And how she was in fact, suicidal and yes, he could see why she didn’t want to invest everything in Ford. He sighed. “Look, I kinda get where you’re coming from, but Ford's…delicate. And aren’t you the one who falls to pieces when you lose the people you love?”

“Well my friends and my children are different. They're my family.” Miz protested before she paused. “And yes, I know Fordsie is technically family now, but...” Seb sat down beside her on the bed. “And for some people, their partner is like that. So if they lose them, it's really hard for them to move on.”

Miz bit her lip. It made sense when he put it like that. “But I still can't understand those dumb teenagers who ask out their crush and get super depressed when they get turned down. Like...they didn't love them. They lusted for them, or they were infatuated, but they didn't love them. So why do they still feel so strongly?” She didn’t want to be like that, and had never felt that way about someone before. “Heck, most of the time in stories, they’ve never even spoken to their crush!”

“Because humans are dumb, emotional creatures.” Seb pet Miz's head. “I hurt a lot when a girl rejected me, it was just like that. Maybe you don't get it because you've never been rejected by a crush.”

“But I have.” Miz said. “I had a crush on her for over a year and we were good friends, hung out all the time together. Didn't realize I liked her until she started dating someone else. And even then, I didn't get jealous or sad that she was with someone. I was just like ‘Oh. She's dating someone. That's cool. I kinda wonder what that would be like’ and after she broke up with her girlfriend, I tried asking her out.” Miz thought back to it. “Though, I told her straight out that I wasn't interested in anything physical. I just wanted to see if we could try being together.” She looked down at her hands. “She turned me down. I wasn't upset. It was just an, ok that's cool, and then I never brought it up again. In retrospect, I probably shouldn’t have asked her right after her break up. That probably didn't help.”

Seb hummed in thought. “I’m glad love doesn’t affect you like that…” He told her honestly. But Miz was a little worried now. “But what if how I feel is...wrong? What if that's not how people are supposed to react to being rejected?” Miz asked “What if there's just something wrong with me?”

“Well...how did you feel when you asked Ford out?” Seb wondered. Miz thought back. “I… I was very happy. I’ve liked him for a while now. And he keeps doing things that make me like him more.” She blushed. “Also he kinda, sorta asked me out? When I asked. Because Fiddles paid some kid to tell me. I did ask him out too, it was the 2nd time in my life I’ve ever asked someone out.”

“Wait. Seriously? You've never asked anyone aside from that one girl who said no?” Seb gasped.

Miz shrugged. “Well I've never liked anyone else in this way since then.”

“Aaww~ So my brother is special for wittle Miz?” He teased. Miz blushed slightly. “A-A little, yeah! Fuck you.”

The man laughed and held her close in a hug. “I think you two worry for nothing! I know there’s something special between you...and I think you should just see how it goes!” Seb nodded. “Ford isn’t going to get upset if you don’t know what you’re doing, he’s very practical, you will still be friends and do...projects together.” And sessions. Seb shuddered before shaking that off.

Miz leaned against Sebastian’s chest and smiled. “Have you considered being the love god? You do a great job.” She joked. Seb sighed dramatically. “I applied, but didn’t get the job.” Both laughed easily, trying to ignore the screams from startled people outside at the drone looking like a monster the twins were controlling from the window. “Should we hide before they know it’s us?” Seb asked.

“Absolutely.” Miz agreed quickly. They ran to grab the twins and put a stop to the monster rampage before someone called the cops (again).

-----

Ford found William in his lab the next weekend. He/she(?) was shuffling from foot to foot, looking almost shy. "Hi, Fordsie. Um… I think we need to have a talk about our relationship.”

Ford winced. Ah. "Y-yes. So… what do you want to talk about?"

William was dressed in a colorful t-shirt and pants. He fiddled with his shirt. "So. We've been hanging out and getting to know each other. I don't expect you to go out of your way and do anything different. You're someone I like, and enjoy hanging out with. And I do find you attractive...Now we're officially a couple and I’m pretty excited, I just want to hang out with you," talk and cuddle, so don't think you have to go on extremes for me for anything."

Ford blinked. "That... Was a very reasonable way to put it. "So... I don't have to...take you to dances or movies every time?"

William chuckled. "No, Fordsie, you don't have to. I wouldn't mind the occasional dinner together and such, but I'm just happy doing what you want to do." Ford nodded. "Well, I also want to do what you want sometimes too. Equality is a thing. And we can find things that both of us want to do together." William nodded, "That sounds pretty fair."

Ford raised an eyebrow. "So... nothing has to change, now that we're officially together?"

"Not if you don't want it to. I mean, I can claim you as mine now. Unless you don't like that?" William blinked up at him. Ford shrugged. "You've always been possessive, I've accepted that part of you. So long as you continue to not hurt or kill anyone unless in self defense, or to protect someone else, I don't mind if you're a little possessive. As in, don't go biting off anyone's head if they try to flirt with me."

"Anything else to add?" William asked next. Ford thought about it. "Well, the 'no sex' is already established. Though you do require some sensual touching, yes?" William nodded. "And I get horny sometimes, so... um... I don't like any sort of penetrative play, but if you don't feel too uncomfortable with it, I have a need to masturbate."

"That's fine, if you have 'needs' and I'm not expected to take part, I see no issue." Ford nodded with a faint blush.

"But, like..." William's cheeks went a faint orange. "I have some really weird kinks, and sometimes you do it for me... and I should tell you this straight out."

Ford blinked. "Excuse me?"

William flushed darker. "L-like sometimes, I just get really turned on by something you do, and sometimes that happens when you touch me a certain way, and I should tell you, if you're uncomfortable with such a thing, so you'd know to stop doing that." William told him. Ford blinked. "Well, I mean..." Ford rubbed his hand along William's cheek. "It's just touching you? Along your body? The way I'm already doing?" William shivered at the feeling of Ford's skin against his own. "S-something like that?"

"Well, if it's already the stuff I've been doing with you, which you like, and I don't mind, then it shouldn't be an issue, even if it... um, turns you on?" Ford said carefully. "I DO want to help you feel good, if you like that sort of thing."

William leaned against Ford's hand. "Well, yes. And I also want to help you feel good." he said softly. Ford blushed. "You don't have to." William pouted, "I'm not going to go jerkin' you off, if that's what you were thinking." he rolled his eye. "But if there's any touching that you would like, and any kinks you might have that you'd like to have satisfied, I am willing to hear them out."

Ford choked. "I-I don't have--" and William gave him a deadpanned look as he brought his hands up to curl around Ford's. And then... William caressed Ford's hand with an almost worshipful sensuality, trailing soft touches and strokes along every curve and point, across every wrinkle and crease, and Ford let out a full body shiver as an odd sensation spread through him. “U-um…” Ford blushed.

“Do you want me to stop?” William asked softly, stilling the movement of his fingers and staring up at Ford. The scientist felt his face heat up. “Um… no.” he finally said. “That… um… feels very good.” He coughed and looked away. William gave him a sly grin. “And? This sort of touching, on other parts of your body? Non-penetrative, of course.” he said quickly, “But… if you need touching anywhere else?”

Ford’s face was definitely burning now. “Not my genitals, but um… I g-guess touching along my body is f-fine too. On a case by case basis. You can tell me where you want to touch, and I’ll tell you if I’m comfortable with it.” William smiled, placing Ford’s hand back on his cheek. “Alright.” he practically purred. “I like touching you. You have such a wonderful texture.”

Ford rubbed a hand over his face, lifting his glasses to rub at his eyes, trying to make his blush go away. “So… um, what kinks do you have? That… that you might want me to help you indulge in?” Ford asked carefully.

William’s ears perked up. “It felt really good when you complimented me.” he said quickly. “And as long as we can do that somewhere safe, fireproof and large, it shouldn’t be an issue.”

“Actually, I’m wondering if we could somehow take that energy you put out during the process and store it?” Ford responded. “I mean, I’m all about the ‘clean’ energy sources and you…” he put both hands on William’s cheeks, rubbing his thumbs across his chin, “…are amazing for that.” and William’s face heated up. “Yes. Just like that.” Ford grinned. “We could make batteries, large industrial ones, and I’ve got my Weirdness to Electricity converter up and running. We would be able to build our own power plant that converts the excess you generate into good clean energy that humans can use-- we could cut down on fossil fuels!” Ford was getting really excited about this now.

And William let out a soft little moan, thrumming at Ford’s praise. “I’d love to help.” he breathed softly. “Just probably don’t tell people that this energy is coming from a horny alien demon-god.” he joked. Ford laughed, “Yes that… that would be problematic. Well, I’ve already published my papers about ‘Weirdness’ being a real source of energy that exists, and like I said, I already have a Weirdness to Electricity converter, so it wouldn’t be so far-fetched to say I just took it to the next level.”

William purred against his hand. “Well, should we discuss more kinks we each have?”

Ford blinked. “You’ve got more?”

“Oh pleeeeease Fordsie~” William purred, pressing himself right up against Ford’s chest. “I’m over 700 billion years old~” he rubbed himself against the other man, “The praise thing is new ~ I’ve got plenty others I’ve picked up over time~”

Ford coughed. “Well, I… think we can discuss those another time. You’re getting rather worked up and I don’t want you destroying my lab.” He could certainly feel the temperature of William’s body heat up.

“….fine~” William huffed, taking a step back and trying to calm himself.

“But thank you for telling me.” Ford smiled. “I will try to see to your needs, so long as they don’t cause me discomfort.” William nodded, managing to get his riled up energy to settle.
"Well, now that that's out of the way~" William draped himself over Ford's desk and pressed a finger against his calculations. "You have a few miscalculations here and here. So you should rework your math before attempting to build this. You're not gonna like the results if you do."

Ford rolled his eyes and sat down, glad this was settled. He was also glad that William’s idea of a date was working on SCIENCE with him. That was pretty much the greatest part about this whole dating thing!

It wasn't always science in the lab. Or teaching Max his weekly lessons.

Sometimes Yun wanted to go out for a walk around the lake. But she also showed Ford the Gobblewonker! The REAL one! Which Ford didn't have any luck finding before now! But Yun had taken Ford below the water in a magical air bubble and Ford could investigate as much as he wanted.

Yun was dressed in a modified hoodie and had little hair clips pulling her bangs back for this date, but Ford didn't really comment or notice her outfit. Yun didn't really mind though, he was clearly distracted by the sea monster they were floating closer to. She held Ford close as the two floated through the water and secretly grinned at how there weren't a lot of people out at the lake this time of year. It was just them two, and she watched Ford's cute eager expression as he sketched the gobblewonker.

And then Ford proceeded to, like an idiot, poke the sleeping lake monster with a stick. Ford was snapping photos even as Yun pulled him away from the beast's snapping jaws and swam madly for the surface of the lake. "FASCINATING!" He squealed.

"I'm glad you like it~" Yun rolled her eyes. "But I don't want you to get eaten! We just started this relationship and you're not allowed to die on me!"

They broke the surface of the water and tumbled along the shoreline, waves crashing over them and covering them in water and sand. The gobblewonker hissed at them before going back below the surface and disappearing from view.

The two looked at each other, smiling widely and ended up laughing. They were both soaked with lake water and despite the cold weather, Ford felt warm. He didn't think it was just from Yun's magical heat either.

The next thing Ford's friends and colleagues knew was that their boss was dripping wet as he walked back into the Center, laughing madly as a dark skinned woman hugged him. "I can't believe you poked the damn thing with a stick!!" The woman in the oversized hoodie punched Ford's arm lightly as she grinned.

"Well how else was I supposed to get photos of it awake?" Ford complained through the smile on his face. The woman snickered and leaned against him. "You're nuts!" She placed a hand along his cheek and stroked his face with her thumb. "I think I like this crazy side of you. But--" and here she pulled Ford down to press their foreheads together. "--don't try to do something as stupid as that without me nearby to keep you from getting your ass killed. Okay? I don’t want to lose my boyfriend when I finally got one!"

"Yes, yes, I promise." He rolled his eyes. "Can we go change? I’m freezing, my toes will fall off." Yun burst out laughing before the two used a side door towards the house. When the door was closed, Dr. Wexler, Poddar, Jerald and Clark poked their heads out from their hiding spot.
"Oh my god~" Dr. Clark squealed. Dr. Pines had a girlfriend! That woman they saw him with a while ago was his girlfriend! Confirmed!

Dr. Poddar scowled and handed Clark a 10 dollar bill. “I need to stop betting against you…” he groaned.

--- ---

The next week, MizBill came to him in his Xin form and asked to go out for lunch after working at the lab for a few hours. Ford agreed because well, he had to eat at some point and this was one of those spontaneous decisions they were going to do as partners. Xin snuggled close to him as they walked into town.

Ford noticed people were staring but didn't think much of it. They got lunch and Xin stopped off at the grocery store on the way back because he wanted to try baking cookies for Ford.

Ford, with his 'secret' (it wasn't really that secret) sweet tooth, was all for this idea.

...and that was the day he saw with his own eyes that while MizBill was a very good cook for things that didn’t use a recipe, he couldn't bake things that ‘looked’ right without magic. And as Ford had requested no-magic for the cookies, well...

Ah. William had said that dating was about getting to know your partner and learning new things about them. This too, counted. Right?

The cookies still tasted good, even if their texture was on the ‘too melty’ side. He still ate them because they DID taste good and despite the way they looked, were fully cooked. Ford just had to eat them with a spoon. As they were inside the house, Xin allowed his antlers, scales and tail to be shown and he tucked his tail between his legs in embarrassment at how the cookies turned out.

"I'm sorry...I wanted to make them look good! Stupid Seb can bake really good and he doesn't have to use magic for it!"

Ford, munching his cookie with his eyes wide like an owl, blinked. "But they're good, I like them, really!" he reached over to hug Xin when the other man pouted at him. “I’m not just saying this to make you feel better. Though, perhaps you should actually follow the recipe in the future. Just because you think substituting something is a ‘good’ idea, doesn’t mean it’ll turn out the right way.”

Xin huffed. But he was smiling. "You only like them because it was sugary…” he said as he poked at one of the cookies, it squished under his finger and he drew a little smiley face on it, grimacing at the texture.

"Look. If you think I'm lying, then we can try again." Ford shrugged. He grabbed the dragon’s hand and squeezed softly to make him look up, and it worked, Xin looked up with his face bright red. "Yes?" Ford drew out. Xin rolled his eyes with a smile, "...ok…"
"So, dudes...how did you set the oven on fire?" Soos asked curiously. Good thing he was used to keeping fire extinguishers everywhere when Seb would spontaneously combust. Aaw, that seemed like so long ago...

Xin and Ford shared a look and...

"I'll buy a new one." Ford declared. That thing was definitely old and not working right anyway! Ford nodded to himself. That must have been it. He measured out the ingredients perfectly! Even if he changed out a few ingredients. There was no other way for the cookies to have caught fire and burn the inside of the oven!

So he got a new oven, replacing the old (and obviously defective) oven.

The townsfolk and the scientists all saw Ford shopping together with an attractive Asian man. The two were holding hands as they walked through town, paying no attention to the staring and whispers.

Needless to say, Dr. Poddar wanted his money back! Clark had been wrong!!

And Dr. Jerald handed Dr. Wexler a 20 dollar bill. “So the doc really is Biromantic?? Or Panromantic?”

“Wait, so did he break up with that other girl?”

“I don’t think so, I still see her around? Um… I think her name’s Yun?”

“Oh god, what if he’s dating both of them!”

“The… the doc wouldn’t cheat… would he?” “Of course not! He’s not that kind of man!”

“But he’s… dating Yun, we hear her call Dr. Pines her boyfriend, right? But the doc’s with Xin too?”
The scientists all gossiped long into the night. Dr. Wexler pointed out that Xin was a shapeshifting dragon and Yun might just be him in another form. Dr. Jerald countered that with the fact that Xin was male. Dr. Poddar reminded them all that such a thing meant nothing for a magically shapeshifting creature. More bets were made.

---

One day though, a very cold day in December, when Ford went to search for his pupil, he wasn't there. "Max?" He called out.

Max was always on time, which was amazing, considering he didn't have a watch on him. "Max!! Are you here?" He looked around the system of caves. NOT the one taking him to the rift, but another one where they agreed to meet in.

"...M-Mr. Pines…"

Ford followed the voice and his eyes widened at the curled up boy between some rocks. "Max! What the hell? Why are you here? Are you ok?!!"

"...Yesterday...couldn't...go in...Rift...blocked...Hibernation...Tired…" Max closed his eyes, finally feeling safe to die. Death was a common thing his species lived, especially during winter. Ford took off his jacket and wrapped it around the freezing cold boy. He was pale and his lips and fingers were turning blue.

"No, you're not sleeping here, if you die, your girlfriend’s going to murder me painfully." Ford picked him up and quickly opened a portal home. He had to get Max warmed up ASAP.

"NOOO!!! MY SON!!!" Yun pushed Ford away as soon as he carefully tucked Max into bed, with the thermostat at maximum. Ford laid on the ground with a very put upon expression as Yun fussed over the eix leel.

"If he knew the rift was going to get blocked, he should have told us!" Yun pulled Max’s collar away so his body did not take the extra strain from keeping the human illusion. 30 seconds later, Max's real form was seen. And Yun was wrapping all four of her arms around him, purring and vibrating heat directly into him. "Did he really think he could pull this off? Why didn't I think about it?!" The alien complained, stroking his feathers and his near frozen face. “I’m gonna give you a heating effect on your communication charm.” she said simply. She cursed herself for this oversight.

"Vichun...Am I welcomed in the underworld yet…?" Max mumbled tiredly (somewhat deliriously) as he stirred.

"No. No you aren't. You're still alive and not freezing to death!" Yun patted him, “Also, Vichun will have to pry you from my cold dead grasp if that asshole wants to take you before your time!"

"God Vichun...I didn't want...to miss my lessons...Dr. Pines...would be upset…"

“Fuck that, your health is more important!” Yun was glad to feel his body temperature rising. “Fordsie~! Bring more blankets!”

Ford, still lying on the ground where Yun shoved him, let out a tired sigh. “I would, but it appears I am unable to move.” he deadpanned. (“Stop being such a dramatic bitch! I didn’t even hurt you!”)
The two warmed up the eix leel, who tiredly tried reaching for his necklace that he couldn't grasp from his neck. And he wouldn't because it was on a nightstand. "Can't... show scales... humans... hunt... human form..."

"You're safe here." Yun assured him. "If any human tries to hunt you, I'll eviscerate them. You're my son now."

"No you will not." Ford mussed up Yun's hair.

"I...am...a dragon?" Max slurred tiredly. Yun wrapped another blanket around him. "Yes, Max. Definitely~" she patted his snout. "And what a handsome widdle dragon you are~"

"I'm...a dragon...?" Max said in a content sigh as the warmth in the environment finally raised his temperature.

"No you're not. Yun, don't confuse him." Ford groaned. Yun pushed him back with her lower hands. "Fordsie, hush, also you're my son and I'll always protect you." She pressed her cheek against Max's, petting him gently.

It took a couple hours for Max to fully wake up again. He didn't remember his delirious state and Ford guessed it was for the best. "Thank you for saving me... I didn't even see Mabel recently, she'd double kill me if I froze to death..."

Yun frowned at him. "Seriously, take better care of yourself. And go see Mabel after this, ask if you can stay the night. It's not safe to be waiting out in the cold like that."

Max sighed. "I know... But last night I couldn't go back into the town--" "You've been out there the entire night?!" --I didn't expect the rift to get blocked so early in the winter... I wanted to go with Mabel but-but she was busy with her school and I didn't want to bother her."

"And you preferred freezing to death?? You are perfect for the Pines family." Yun put her lower hands on her hips as she crossed the upper ones. "Hey! Your self preservation is worse than ours!"

Ford complained slightly, but, eh. Accurate.

"Anyway, since it's gonna be like this, today's lesson will be 'how to find shelter to stay warm in cold weather'." Yun told him. "Fordsie, you help out too!"

Ford learned a lot more of Max's species after this episode. Eix leel prepared themselves for winter in different ways. The main one, the rift. They couldn't eliminate it, because they didn't create it, but they've found a way to contain it and stop it from working for a couple months and they used that during their most vulnerable time. Second, he found they didn't really hibernate, it was a 'semi-hibernation' as he classified it in his unofficial paper about Max's species. They slept a lot, but were awake enough to eat a bit more before going back to sleep. They needed a decent stash of food to pass the winters in their homes, or those who didn't eat enough wouldn't have enough strength and would pass away. Many prepared fires too and used that to warm up clothes and rocks they could curl up against until they woke up.

It sounded like a very harsh time of the year. Even worse, the males were nesting their eggs during that time and if their 'nesting heat' wasn't good enough, not many eggs wouldn't develop properly and they'd end up with slug eggs. Winter was a dangerous time for them.

Still, with the rift closed, it meant Max couldn't actually get home for a few months. And Yun wanted to take him home with her, but Wanda had put her foot down. "Too many strays! I got Seb first--" "HEY!!" --and then his delinquent friend! I want to help, but this is ridiculous!" and Ford offered to house Max for the time being.

Mabel also wanted to house her baby in her home because "HELLO?? Are you all forgetting he’s my boyfriend? Uncle Ford has spent more time with him than me!!" the poor girl complained, but Shermie and Abi also put their foot down. Who knew what they would do if they were alone together! The former teenage parents only shook their heads. “Not until you’re at least graduated.”

"I like learning from your uncle though," Max told Mabel who coo’ed. "Then you can stay with him as long as you want~~"

Max got a room in the Shack and was welcomed by Soos and Melody. Yun just couldn't take how ADORABLE Max was.

"He's a young adult, and probably considered a fully grown one in his village.” Ford reminded Yun as she screamed into his chest about how much of an absolute baby Max was.

"Baby!" Yun declared as she wrapped her arms around her unamused partner. "I want a baby…” She whispered. That was for herself, but she ended up saying it aloud.

Ford turned red.

“Ah… adoption is a thing…” Ford said slowly.

“I want ALL the babies!” Yun insisted, squeezing her partner harder.

"I’m sure you'll figure it out."

“Well.” Yun said, hands on her hips. “That thing I’m working on with Stanley should be finished soon. And then I can have all the babies!” Ford’s eyes bugged out, “WHAT?!"

What thing with Stanley?! Babies?! What?!?!?

Yun blinked. “Oh, you see, Tio Rico can make me as many fake IDs as I want. So I’ve made a proper legal identity for Yun now. And since I now legally exist, I can get a job, or rather, I can start my own business! And who better for business deals and partnerships, than the CEO of StanCo himself?”

Oh. "...Why wasn't I aware?" Ford asked his girlfriend with a raised eyebrow.

Yun raised an eyebrow right back. “...you didn’t ask?” She shrugged. “I have stuff I do outside of hanging out here, you know.” Ford blushed. “Yes, I know, I just… I didn’t realize you…” making her own business? That was… a big deal.

Yun nodded. “The world is shit right now. And Forest’s CEO is a fucking ass. So, I figured I’m going to beat him at his own game by starting my OWN delivery service, which is better, faster, and pays its workers actual living wages.”

Ford had to take a mental step back. “...a delivery service??” He wasn’t expecting that. Yun nodded. “Online shipping is huge nowadays, and with how I’m just gonna be teleporting the packages to the several thousand locations that Stan helped me find and purchase…” she shrugged. “I’m gonna make so much money! And then I can buy out the orphanages, and then I can have ALL the babies!” She said simply. Ford was left feeling faint. “...I don’t think you can do that?"

"Why not?" Yun pouted. “I’ll take good care of them, and if people wanna adopt a kid, they can still do so. I’m just going to ensure that they’ll actually get the attention and care that they need.
I’ve been perfecting my Care Units from the experience they’ve learned on the Island. They can raise children. They’re meant for that.”

"So you want control of the orphanages around the world?" Ford asked slowly. "Only to keep the kids safe! And if I can’t buy them out, I can just open my own orphanages! Once I get the money.” Yun nodded. “And the easiest way to make money is to own a business where I can hire workers to do the work for me.”

...well she wasn’t wrong?

Ford shook his head with a smile and hugged her softly. "That's actually a good idea, and it's good you want to confront a huge monopoly and use this to help others.” Yun purred in delight at his approval.

"Come on, Max, I'll teach you about economic models other than straight trades!!" Ford pulled away from Yun and went to search for his pupil.

Yun hugged herself and smiled. Babies~~

---

Ford was wrapped in his long coat and scarf, riding his partner's back as Xin (in his dragon form) carried Max (in his eix leel form) in his mouth. "Are you sure this is a good idea?"

"Pfft! Anything I bring will be loved by the Islanders, especially this little cutie wittle baby~" Xin rumbled lovingly.

"Thank you, Great Dragon...but I'm not a baby?" Max kicked his hanging legs uselessly. He would blush if he could. This was so embarrassing...He didn't want to be treated like a pup, carried around by his neck scruff, but it was the Great Dragon...he had to indulge him.

Ford was just confused at why Xin was acting like this. Sure, he liked kids, but Max wasn't really a child. But he'd been babying him and essentially treating Max as if he were his own pup. (It was much later, that Ford realized that with Xin’s mating season in the summer, it meant the winter was for pampering the babies that had been born in the fall. Ford would smack himself for being an idiot and not noticing. Xin’s biological instincts were strong.)

Max was wearing a modified coat and was swinging from side to side, with his tail curled up. He didn't know what this Island was about, he just hoped it wasn't too cold. The Great Dragon said it wouldn't be.

They crossed the barrier and Ford jumped off The Great Dragon's back. Max wiggled to be put down and when his paws touched the ground, Xin stopped him with a huge paw.

“Behold!” Xin told his worshippers as they came out to greet him, “My pup!” he nudged Max forward gently.

The children and adults of the Island gasped loudly before clapping and cheering.

Though one of them looked between their god and that man who always came with him. Then she looked over at Max, who was clearly reptilian, but stood on two legs, and had fingers instead of paws and…

“...your child… with that man?” she asked hesitantly.
“Yes!” Xin said proudly. “We are raising him together!”

Ford stared at the blank space in front of him before looking at Xin. "What?"

"What?" Max also muttered, extremely confused. "Great Dragon…"

"Shh, shh it's ok~" Xin nuzzled his side and Max yelped when he was forced onto the ground for the god to lick him, grooming his feathers back. "Hmmpphh!!" He cried for help at Mr. Pines as the paws downed and trapped him. Xin was rumbling blissfully. Ford was still stuck on the previous point. “Xin, Max is not our child, he’s too old.”

“Adoption is valid!” Xin declared. And the people cheered, because hooray adoption! Though they were still rather confused at Max looking like some half human half dragon creature.

After struggling and wiggling his way out from Xin’s paws, Max spat out a few loose feathers that got into his mouth. He poked his head out and realized time had passed, because the humans were gone and Xin was asleep. He was so warm but that was not the point. He looked around and spotted Ford reading close to them. "Mr. Pines! Help!"

"I'm sorry Maxini, but I wish to keep my hands."

"I'm not a pup, do I look like a pup right now? I’m 19, I don’t want to...be treated like a baby." He sniffled. "I never had my ceremony to signalize I was old enough at 15...Maybe the Great Dragon doesn't know? Should I tell him I'm grown already? Mabel and I have-"

"Woah!!! Woah there buddy! I do not wish to hear what you do with my niece!!" Ford flushed. Then he sighed, taking pity on Max and went over to lift Xin’s paw and free him.

Ford sighed. “I don’t think this is a you thing, Xin just… really wants babies. And you’re just unfortunate enough to be here and ‘register’ as a child to him.” Huh. So THAT must be it!!

Max quickly scrambled away and sighed in relief when he got away. "Oh...And he can’t have babies? I guess you are in a similar situation to Mabel and I?"

Ford blushed. “It’s… different for us… ah…” Ford wasn’t sure how to talk about this. “We… erm… don’t like the… act of creating babies.” He said simply.

Max blinked slowly "That’s weird." Ford blushed harder but this wasn't going to be a lesson! He was not up for explaining his own sexuality right now.

The eix leel laughed, shook himself and told his mentor he was going to explore around. Ford waved at him, still blushing slightly.

Max barely disappeared from his sight when Xin's black/yellow eyes shot open and his pupils slitted. "Baby…” he rumbled deep in his throat.

Ford screamed into the air. "RUN, MAX, RUN!"

The boy's sensitive ears twitched when he heard both the shout and the dragon waking up, and yelped as Xin dashed off at him. “AHHHHHHHHH!!!!!” He knew the Great Dragon wouldn’t hurt him, but this was still scary as shit!
The Islanders watched the chase go. The green reptilian screamed as he dodged and slipped between small creases, running on all fours, while the God dragon slithered through the air.

"MMMIIIssssteeer FoooRRDDD!" Max cried as he ran across and then went again. Ford dodged Xin's massive form. "Sorry, boy!!"

---

Max deadpanned and grumbled. The huge tongue made his head tilt back as he was licked. This felt so nice, he couldn't lie to himself about that part, but it'd be nicer if he had asked for it...or if it was with a partner...not like a baby! “You know I’m not a baby, great dragon?” Max said with a sigh. Xin nodded, “But you’re also still a baby.”

“But, I don’t like it.” Max said. And Xin froze. “…you… don’t?” Xin looked down at Max. The eix leel winced. “Look, great dragon, I appreciate it, but I’m… an adult. I’m not your pup. If you want a pup, you can just ask mister Ford.”

Xin's ears dropped sadly and he whined. Max smiled and patted his snout. “I understand.” And he did. “I want pups too. But I don’t know if that’s even possible for me and Mabel. And… I guess you and mister Ford are going to have the same issue.” Max understood how the great dragon felt. So he wasn’t mad, a little annoyed and embarrassed, but not mad.

"I'm sorry…"

"It's alright, Great Dragon." Max nuzzled his huge snout. "I still like how warm you are though and...If you allow it, I still think nuzzling is fine."

Xin snifflled and nodded. "O-Ok…" Ba-Baby...Not baby...
Babies though… Xin thought about it. Babies… ask… Ford…?
Xin blushed. Was such a thing even possible?
Max left him again, taking advantage of the dragon being distracted to free himself, and ran away laughing. It's been SO long since he was in his original form and could run freely! A few children ran after him and Max wagged his tail as they tried catching him.
Ford walked over to Xin to pat his leg, not knowing what his partner was thinking about. "Come on. Don't worry, I'm sure he's still sleeping with you in your nest. He seems to like having that familiarity."
“I want babies.” Xin told Ford. He nodded, “Yes, that’s why you’re going to buy up all the orphanages.”
“No, I mean…” Xin lowered his head to stare at Ford. “I want babies .”
Ford blinked before letting out a high pitched nervous laugh. "W-What?" He squeaked.
But Xin kept staring at him. “Gimme babies, without all the baby making stuff.” he demanded.
"...How the FUCK am I even supposed to do that???" The brunette scientist cried.
“You’re the genius here.” Xin reminded him. The golden dragon leaned closer and narrowed his eyes, as he bared his teeth. "So. Gimme. Babies."
"...Y-Yo-...B-But-uh…" Ford scratched his head, blushing madly "I...I guess...Um… I’ll figure something out?" Xin squealed and purred down at him, nudging him with his snout.
Seb and Wanda would kill him...Ford searched for Max with his sight and found the boy rolling on the ground with the children petting him.
This was all his fault… sigh .

Chapter 38

-Oh the season to be thankful-

---

The winter holidays were coming up. While they were all fine with just having a quiet Hanukkah celebration, Mabel wanted to have Christmas as well, not for religious reasons but because she wanted any excuse for more bedazzlement and decorations.

They all agreed to meet up for Christmas together after Hanukkah was finished on the 10th. This year, 2018, Hanukkah began on the 2nd. The twins were excited to show their big sister all about Hanukkah, since she’d never celebrated it before.

“This is the menorah!” Zoe explained proudly, pointing at the candle stick holder. “It’s really pretty, and we light the candles every night, one everynight and so on, until Hanukkah ends. Also! Hanukkah starts when the sun goes down tonight.”

“We also play with the dreidels.” Zach added, holding up the tops. “And we put stuff into a pot and if you spin the dreidel and it lands on this squiggle,” he showed Miz one of the sides of the top displaying ג, “Then you win all the items in the pot!”

The twins looked at each other and shrugged. “I mean, I guess so?” Zoe tilted her head. “What’d you wanna put in it?”

“And more food!”” Miz grinned, making the twins groan. “We’re already getting food though.” Zach told her. “We make donuts with jelly. And potato pancakes!” “Yeah! And fried dough! And french fries! And other fried stuff!” Zoe cackled. Because apparently you have to fry the food, or at least, that’s what daddy said. Mommy said you didn’t have to fry all the food, but daddy liked to play with the deep fryer.

“We can also decorate the house. But mommy says that’s too much trouble, especially since we’re not having a big party with everyone coming over.” Zach shrugged. He didn’t personally mind, because cleaning up the decorations was a lot of work. “But we can make some decorations if you want?” he asked Miz.
“Hm… parties need decorations… though we don’t need too many…” Miz tilted her head in thought. “Oh! What if we make origami star of davids?” The twins gasped. “‘Yes!’” they cheered. And the three of them sat down with plenty of paper as Miz walked them through the steps to fold them. The twins were getting better with their manual dexterity, since Miz was slowly teaching them simple origami designs. They could already make (somewhat lopsided) cranes, pigs, turtles and goldfish.

Zach really enjoyed it. It felt familiar for some reason, how he sort of ‘knew’ sometimes, where a fold should go. Yeah, Phillip had showed them some of this before, but something about folding paper, sitting beside Miz, felt… right. He shrugged it off, just enjoying the peaceful time with his sisters. At least it was peaceful until Zoe set the paper on fire, cackling madly.

“Should we invite Amanda?” Zach asked that night during dinner. His parents raised their eyebrows. “What do you mean?” Seb asked.

“I mean…” Zach wiggled in his seat. “Missus Carol doesn’t let us play with Amanda anymore. And I miss her.” Zoe nodded. “Yeah! It’s not fair that Amanda can’t come over to play with us anymore!”

Miz hummed. “Yeah, that’s not fair at all.” she decided. Wanda sighed as she filled their cups with more milk. “I know it’s not fair, but we can’t really force Carol to let Amanda play with you. We can ask, but if she says no, we… technically can’t do anything about it.”

“I still want to sue Carol.” Seb muttered. Wanda sighed. “As do I, but that would only cause problems for Amanda too.”

“That’s why I just cursed Carol.” Miz said brightly. Wanda groaned. “Still not a good way of dealing with this problem. You shouldn’t go around cursing people just because you think they deserve it.”

“What if they do deserve it?” Miz mumbled. Wanda sighed. “And how would you decide what is or isn’t something deserving?”

“I’ll ask other people next time, and get their opinion.” Miz shrugged. Wanda sighed. “Has cursing her made her any more pleasant? Has it fixed anything?”

Miz looked down, rather frustrated. “No.” she looked back up at Wanda. “How do I get Carol to stop being a meanie?”

“That’s…” Wanda rubbed her face. “You can try talking to her? I don’t know how much good it would do, but… sometimes, people are mean because they don’t know better.”

“Doesn’t matter how little she knows, making a child cry on their birthday is wrong. And continuing to insult and belittle him is also wrong.” Miz grumbled. Hard to believe that was almost a year ago. Hard to believe she’d been with the Pines for almost a year. “You cursed her because you were angry,” Wanda told Miz simply. “And that’s wrong. Lashing out because you’re angry isn’t good.”

“I don’t like her.” Miz glared. “It doesn’t matter. It’s very rude to curse someone just because you don’t like them. She’s a horrible person, yes. But she wasn’t attacking you--”

“She was MENTALLY ATTACKING Zach!” Miz snarled. Wanda had to pause at that. Well, yes. Carol was. “And has your curse done anything to make Carol stop being mean? Has it done anything other than spite her for your own satisfaction?"

"Well then what should I do? Why can’t we just sue her?" Miz complained.

"We don’t have anything for a real case. She was rude and mean but she hasn’t… physically attacked us." Wanda sighed. “Can’t we start a case about her mistreating Amanda?"

“Domestic cases like that are difficult.” Wanda explained. “And it would distress Amanda if we went after her family in such a way.” After all, Carol was still her mother. Wanda was sure that Amanda still loved her mother.

Miz sat back, thinking, then she gave Zach and Zoe a ‘look’ which they nodded at once they understood. Wanda narrowed her eyes at them. “You’re planning something, aren’t you?”

“Whaaa? Nooo~” Miz gave her an ‘innocent’ smile. Wanda didn’t let up her suspicious stare. Miz wiggled in her seat. “I was gonna contact Amanda and see about helping her sneak out of her house to come over to hang out!”

Wanda blinked. “Well. As long as you’re not kidnapping her. If she agrees to come over, in secret.” Because Wanda really didn’t like the idea of Amanda being ‘trapped’ over there. So… well, kids snuck out all the time, sure, they were kindergarteners, but still!

“One day you’ll get caught.” was what Wanda finally told them. Miz cackled. "See? This was why she loved Wanda so much. She and the twins grinned at each other, they would work on battle strategies later. Seb blinked. Whaaat just happened? He lost them at cursing Carol. "Are we cursing Carol more?"

The twins groaned. "Pay attention to the plans!" Zach scolded him and Seb flinched back a little. "Geez!!"

---

Miz, Zach and Zoe were crouched outside Amanda's window. Were they trespassing on private property? Fuck yeah! But there weren't any cops around so it was totally legal.

Miz was staring into the house as her eyes flickered. "Carol's in her room, other side of the house. Not asleep yet. So we need to do this quietly." She whispered to the twins.

Zoe nodded and was gonna float Zach up until Miz stopped her. "No magic! Remember? We’re not supposed to show off magic in front of non-family or non-cryptids. Use your thief skills!" she whispered.

Zoe rolled her eyes and crouched to get Zach on her shoulders. "Get up dummy!"

Zach pouted, but obeyed his twin and, with a bit of trouble, managed to put a knee on the window frame. (Miz was spot checking them the whole time.) From there it was easy for him to get inside. Miz and Zoe waited for the signal.

Meanwhile, Amanda blinked at the blond on her floor. "Zach? Wha..What?" He shushed her. "My family is celebrating Hanukkah, and I know you're not Jewish, but its just games and food, and um…" Zach gave her a shy smile. "We miss you, missus Carol never lets you play with us anymore. And that's not fair. So… do you wanna sneak out to come over?"

Amanda didn't even hesitate. "Yes!" She whisper shouted. Zach grinned right back. Amanda and Zach piled some of Amanda’s dolls on her bed and threw the blankets over it, like they saw in movies. Amanda got her shoes on (since she kept hers beside her bed instead of out near the front doors, like a heretic) and the two crawled out the window, where Miz caught them and put them on the ground. It was rather chilly, and Miz took out the spare jacket from Zoe that she brought and wrapped Amanda in it. The four giggled quietly and ran off.

(And if Miz placed a Perception Filter over Amanda’s bed in case Carol came to check on her, well… not like anyone was here to tell her ‘no’.)

Amanda’s heart was racing. She was disobeying her mom, but she didn’t care. She missed hanging out with her best friends.

She still didn’t really get why her mom was so angry. If Zach wanted to be a boy, what was wrong with that? Missus Honey at school said they could be whatever they wanted after all.

She took off her shoes at the door at the Pines’s house, they explained about how it made Miz feel more comfortable, and Amanda didn’t mind.

"Well, well well well! Look who just escaped her prison." Seb grinned down at the little girl.

Amanda laughed. "It's not a prison, Mr. Seb!"

Sebastian waved a hand. "Yeah, yeah, whatever, kid. You want some food?"

"What is?" She pouted. Seb rolled his eye. Right. Little kid. "We have rice and yummy meat!"

"Umm, ok!"

So they all sat down for a late night snack. Technically, Amanda was supposed to be in bed already and not eating, but mommy didn’t give her dinner tonight, because today was one of those ‘partial fasting’ days for a ‘diet’. Amanda didn’t really get it, she was hungry. But mommy said that sometimes you shouldn’t eat, or else you would get fat and ugly. Amanda didn’t like it when mommy talked about things like that. She wasn’t sure it was correct, but mommy made her and daddy go along with her diets. Mommy tried out all sorts of different diets. Amanda didn’t like them much.

When the plate of rice, veggies and sliced meat was placed in front of her, Amanda’s mouth watered. She was ‘cheating’ mommy’s diet, but she didn’t care. She was hungry.

As the child ate, Miz leaned against Seb. “See? I told you we needed to get her some food.”

"Ok fine." Seb huffed, not liking admitting defeat. But at least Amanda was eating, she was leaving the veggies, like he expected from a 5 year old, but she was a guest and he wouldn't force her to eat them.

The three kids then went to the twin’s room to play and have fun like little kids should do, without hate in between. "Did you leave a perception filter." Seb asked Miz absently.

"Yup!" "Good demon girl." Seb ruffled her hair affectionately.

They had to sneak Amanda back to her own bed after she and the twins got too sleepy, but they promised they would continue to meet up in secret, because they wouldn't allow Carol to stop them from being friends.

They couldn't take Amanda with them to Gravity Falls for the Christmukkah with the rest of the Pines though. Which was sad. But the twins gave her lots of hugs on their last day before they had
This time, it was Ford’s turn to receive everybody. He managed to convince the other residents of his house to help him clean everything and set up the extra rooms he had added as their tradition of meeting for holidays and birthdays suddenly became a thing. (Miz insisted vehemently on it.) Of course, Seb and his family were the first to arrive, they lived a few hours away from Gravity Falls after all. The town looked so different in winter. It was really cold, and the forest looked even creepier than normal without all the green leaves.

Seb jumped out of the car and excitedly ran towards the house as the twins, Miz and Wanda got their bags out of the trunk. “Sixer! We’re here!” He shouted and Soos opened the door.

“Sebastian, dude!”

“SOOS!!” Seb laughed and threw himself over the big man for a hug. The two friends squeezed each other before Soos looked over at the rest of the family. “Hey dudes. Little dudes.” He laughed. Miz waved “Hi Question Mark!” She looked around before shrugging and levitating the luggage. They were spending a week in Gravity Falls for the holidays.

Wanda gave Soos a hug and the twins ran towards him to hug him as well. He was really huggable! Seb dragged Miz closer to him. “Question Mark, Miz. Miz, Question Mark, aka Soos. She’s our adopted daughter. She also has powers, cool, huh?” He introduced, not knowing Soos had met her already.

“Of course! Hello.” He didn’t realize Sebastian adopted the other Bill. It made sense that he would adopt her. That’s good. Soos knew that Seb was a good guy. He’ll take care of this little triangle dudette. “Nice to see you again.” He held out his hand for a shake, his large palm easily covering her entire hand. “Soos! Get everyone inside, it’s freezing!” Melody called from the door with her hands on her hips. Her belly was showing clearly already and Sebastian made adorable little jumps after seeing her, he was so excited.

“Coming!” Soos called before addressing the Pines. “Come on, dudes! We made hot chocolate!”

“YEAH!” The twins and Miz roared before running inside. "Miz! No chocolate!” Wanda called after her. As they got in the house with Soos helping them carry their bags, Seb looked around. “Where’s Ford?” Soos shrugged. “Haven’t seen Dr. Pines since this morning. He mentioned something about how the weirdness levels always seem to elevate around this time of year and has been in his lab all day.”

Seb rolled his eyes. Working on his passion, Seb couldn’t blame him, but still. He should have at least come out to receive them. How rude.

“Come on, kids! Let’s go to your temporary rooms to put your stuff in there.” Wanda called to the twins, who skipped after her, laughing excitedly. Their Pines family meetings were always the best. Mom’s family was cool too...but their big sister wasn’t allowed to be all weird and magical around them.

Seb turned to Melody and hugged her. “How’s life with Mr. Mystery going, kid?” The woman chuckled. “Really good, Mr. Pines. It’s lots of fun.”

“Soop~ how's it feel to be a father soon~?” Seb teased. "I'm so happy I'm getting niblings!" Soos blushed even as he rubbed his head. "I'm just worried I won't be a good dad, dude."
“Shush. You’re the greatest man in the world.” Melody kissed him. “And you’ll be a good father. I know you will. You helped take care of kids all the time.” She hugged his arm “And I know you would love our children more than anything in the world.”

Seb squealed loudly. SHIP, SHIP, SHIP! He knew they would make a great couple~ “Having kids is really weird, but you’ll love them! Even if they’re little monsters, HAH!” As if on cue, the two little demons came running down the stairs and threw themselves over their dad, each one of them hugging his legs. “We unpacked!” They informed Seb who congratulated them. “Can we go see the monsters in Uncle Sixer’s lab?” Zoe asked excitedly.

“Uncle Ford doesn’t work with monsters...anymore.” Seb mumbled the last part. “But we can go bother him!” “Yay!” the twins squealed before they ran for the research center, (Miz and Wanda were putting the bags away), leaving Soos and Melody shaking their heads. Pines...

Seb took the kids to his brother’s lab, walking around the center as if he owned the place (after getting their visitor's badges) or had any right to be in a restricted research center of the state, but had the decency to knock on the door. Max was there ("Hiiii Maxini!" “Hello, great dragon.”), looking too shy to do so himself despite coming over to try and tell Ford his family was here. “Foorddsieee~ Your dear family came to viissiittt!” Seb called. There was a shuffling sound before a frazzled Ford opened the door. Seb blinked and reared back. “Yeesh! When was the last time you slept?!” Max gasped, "Were you there all night?"

“AAh!! Zombie uncle!” Zach screamed and the two blonds hid behind their dad. Ford rubbed his eyes and blinked at Seb. “Seb? Wha-what are you doing here?” He'd been working since last night, and Max hadn't realized his teacher had stayed overnight in his lab.

“Um, I don’t know, maybe visiting for Christianukkah? I don’t know, MAYBE. Because then I don’t know why all our family is coming between today and tomorrow...” Seb exclaimed sarcastically. Ford groaned loudly. “Fuck....” he lost track of time. Miz came by on the weekends, so he tended to get absorbed in his work over the week and lose track of time without her here to remind him. And Max had put their lessons on hold to spend more time with Mabel, who was complaining about her uncle stealing her boyfriend. (“Besides, I can teach him human stuff too!”)

“Yeah. Fuck. Come on. You have to sleep. Kids, help me.” He grabbed Ford and picked him up to make it look like he was actually holding him, but the kids were keeping him floating with their minds. “Wait...but, my research...” Ford pouted as his journals and notes stayed unattended on his desk. Seb closed the door and they walked back to the house. “It can wait. You gotta sleep. Remember what happens when you don’t sleep?” Ford sighed. “Yes. I know.” he rubbed his eyes.

Seb shook his head. He should have asked Miz to go check on Ford. She had been too busy with the holidays. She wanted to get the decorations and presents together. Christmas was just a bonus holiday for them but Mabel and Miz seemed to have the same idea about it.

“Why don’t you sleep, Uncle Ford?” Zach asked. “I like sleeping because my mommy and dad tuck me in and I’m really warm. You don’t sleep because you don’t have anyone to tuck you in?”

Seb laughed. “You know, kid? I think that might be the problem...besides, your uncle is kinda dumb.” He made a show of looking Ford up and down. “That’s it. I’m sending Miz to tuck you in for bed, young man.”

“Hey... I’m older...Don’t need...” Ford mumbled sleepily and the twins laughed at him. They carried him back to the house and everyone stared at the Pines carrying a half-unconscious Ford inside. “Happy holidays. We brought a dumb genius.” Seb announced.
“And he comes with extra detachable fingers!” Zoe exclaimed mirthfully. “No, no he doesn’t.” Seb lifted his brother’s hands away from his daughter in case she tried something. Miz shook her head in fond exasperation. Ford must have gotten hyper focused on something again. “I’ll tuck him into bed.” She said and blinked in confusion when Seb and the twins laughed. Ford protested sleepily as Miz floated him to his bedroom. “Come on, sleepytime.”

The three Pines waved at Ford who floated away. He bumped his head against a wall, but barely protested. “Daddy, when is Diego coming?” Zach asked excitedly and Seb hummed in thought. “Well...I think Diego and his family are coming today afternoon, or tomorrow morning.”

"And Mabel should be here by the afternoon as well." Max grinned, already anticipating it.

("I'm inviting Amelie as well. But she won't be here until tomorrow." Miz reminded them, her voice somehow reaching them despite the fact that she wasn't in the room. And Seb also realized Miz was using her powers even under the unicorn barrier. Huh, did she figure out a way around it?)

“What?! But why are they taking so long?!” Zoe moaned and threw herself to the floor, hitting her head against the wood and not even protesting. Seb winced. “They live further away.”

“They should move closer…” Zoe complained. Wanda made her stand up and told them Melody was serving hot chocolate, which made the kids quickly run to the kitchen. “So...Miz will tuck Ford in from now on, huh?” She asked as she walked over to Seb. He pulled her closer and hugged her. “Apparently…”

“This...is...ridiculous…” Ford protested as he was manhandled around with magic. “Let me go!” He whined tiredly. Miz giggled as she dropped him onto his bed. “Obviously, you need a nap. You’ve been working too hard.” She took his glasses off and placed them neatly on the desk. “Come on. Do you want me to sing you to sleep?” Ford mumbled “I’m not...baby…” he was half asleep already. Woe, he really overdid it, didn't he? Ashton would be worried.

“Suuuure~you’re not. Ugh. You need to brush your teeth...but you need sleep more.” Miz frowned at his rank breath. "Can I clean you with magic?" She asked. Ford blinked. "Oh, sure."

“Boom! You’re clean now.” She flicked her fingers and Ford shivered as he felt a burning heat rush through his whole body, leaving him feeling fresh and...cleaned. “Huh, that's useful.” he wondered how he could recreate such a thing. Some sort of ring he could pass through that could clean him off near instantly. It would be super convenient and helpful--

“Shh...no talk, no work, sleep now.” Miz pulled the covers over him and Ford nodded off. Miz waited to hear him begin to breathe evenly before nodding to herself and going back to the rest of the family.

The twins were sadly staring at the christmas tree, which only had some presents. They had brought gifts for the family, but they were just five, they still believed in Santa and were waiting for HIS extra presents..

(Ok, Santa WAS actually real, but that wasn't the point.)

“What’s up with the sad faces, kiddos?” She asked her siblings and they sighed. “We want Santa to come already…” Zoe pouted and rested her head on Sir Bedazzle’s tummy.

“Oh yes- Santa will deliver the presents, right?” She smiled and the little kids nodded. Miz looked over at Seb and raised an eyebrow. Seb shook his head with a pleading look. He didn’t want to spoil the twin’s belief in Santa. They will realize it on their own when they were older but he didn’t want them to find out so soon.

(And that’s when Miz realized that Sebastian didn’t believe in Santa. Well, fair’s fair. Santa never visited anyone anymore so it’s no wonder people didn’t believe in him anymore.)

Miz nodded and ruffled their curls. “Well, we can’t forget to leave him cookies and milk, right?” She asked and the twins shook their heads quickly. “He needs them to have energy to continue handing out gifts to every kid in the world!” Zoe exclaimed. Zach nodded his head. “That’s why he’s so fat, so he can stay warm, and that’s how he is.”

The adults and Miz rolled their eyes and continued chilling around. At some point, while Seb helped make lunch (Wanda wanted to help but her dear husband kissed her forehead and kicked her out of the kitchen. She felt offended. Her cooking skills had improved during the years! But Seb wanted to have the kitchen right now), the kids asked to go play in the snow so Wanda and Miz accompanied them outside. Miz started rolling a snowball as the twins had their snowball fight. Miz hummed to herself as she rolled the ball larger and larger. Wanda tried to keep an eye on all her kids. “Are you making a snowman?” She asked.

Miz nodded. She missed the snow, it reminded her of when she first met Hectorgon. “It’s fun!” The demon smiled. “I like playing in the snow, sometimes I take my friends to cold planets with snow so we can have a snow day.” She casually mentioned. Wanda couldn’t help but feel a little off balance by Miz’s casual space travel.

It was still jarring to really think about how her daughter was an alien. She could pass for human most of the time.

Zoe threw her snowball so hard it knocked her brother backwards, and she ran towards him, giggling softly. Giggling because it was funny, but softly because if Zach got hurt and accused her, she could be in trouble. “I’m sorry.” She apologized and helped the boy stand up. Zach shook himself and grinned. “I’m fine!”

The twins giggled but frowned when they heard a noise, like a trashcan falling. They shared a look and rounded the corner to see what caused the noise. A little head with a beard and a red pointy hat poked out of the trashcan, making Zoe scream loudly. Wanda and Miz heard the girl screaming and ran after them to check, but found Zach pummeling something with snowballs he scooped up with his mind. “Die, little man!” (The twins had been practicing with their powers.)

“I think so…” Wanda said in awe. From the times she had come to Gravity Falls, she had been (un)lucky not to encounter any supernatural creatures. “Zach, leave the gnome alone, he’s just stealing food to survive.” Miz ordered and the kid pouted but obeyed. The gnome shook himself like a dog and glared at them. “What’s your problem?” He sniffed the air. “Hey, your energy is familiar…” He mused to himself as he looked at the human kids. “Do I know you?”

“No, but you scared me.” Zoe pouted. “You’re weird.” She said and Wanda frowned. “Zoe! That’s not nice!” The gnome scoffed. “Look in a mirror, kid. You’re a real weirdo yourself.” He turned and ran back into the forest. “That was unnecessarily rude.” Miz said. Zoe’s lower lip wobbled. Zach stuck his tongue at the direction the gnome ran to and hugged his sniffling sister. “Don’t listen to that ugly, little man.” He comforted her.

“Come on, help me make the snowman.” Miz gently steered her siblings away from the trashcan and back to her forming snowball. “I think a three stack snowman would be cool right?” She suggested. The twins nodded. “I want to make the head!” Zoe said.
Wanda sat on the porch as her kids played. She was freezing~ But they were having fun, so she could deal with a little bit of cold. Seb watched them from the window and grinned. Aaw, he wanted to play too~ Why did they have to make food? Stupid bodies needing food!

Miz finished the largest snowball for the base and helped Zach lift his torso onto it. Then she placed Zoe’s head piece on top and carefully packed more snow in place to make it stay together. “Alright. Who wants to find sticks and rocks?”

“We want!” The twins giggled and ran into the forest to find some sticks. Wanda stood up and went after them. “Kids, don’t go too deep into the forest, remember?”

“’”Ok’”’” They said at unison as they looked at the floor, picking the stuff they considered appropriate. “Miz, can we find a hat for the snowman too?” Zach asked adorably and his older sister squeezed his cheeks. “Sure! But first sticks.” She giggled. They gathered a lot of sticks and began picking out which ones were best. This one had too many tiny branches coming off it, that one still had some pine leaves. Finally they found two nice sized sticks that they all agreed on. Miz carefully inserted the sticks and sent the kids to go find rocks or anything else to make the face with.

They found rocks and soon enough, their snowman was done! “Mommy! Look! We finished!” Zoe exclaimed proudly as she pulled at her mom’s hand. Wanda chuckled. “I can see it. How about going inside now?” Zach examined the snowman, humming. “He is still missing his hat!” He gasped. “What if he needs it to be alive?!” He went over to Miz and tugged on her jacket. “You have a top hat right?”

Miz blinked. “Oh. I guess so.” She materialized her top hat and handed it to her brother. Zach ran over to place the final accessory onto their snowman. They all admired it. They used a pinecone for the nose. Zoe giggled. “The nose looks like uncle Stan’s.” They all laughed. “Or uncle Ford. Or Daddy. They have the same nose.” Zach pointed out. Miz grinned and materialized a pair of glasses. “There. Now it looks like Ford.” She placed the glasses on the snowman and the three devolved into laughter.

“Let’s get more stuff from Uncle Ford!” Zoe squealed. Miz hummed and materialized a red journal with a six-fingered hand on it. It was empty but the cover was just like his old journal they threw into the bottomless pit years ago. She grinned as she moved the stick until it could hold the false journal. The three laughed at the snowFord. Miz grinned. “Hey, I just thought of something.” The twins leaned in, eager to hear about their big sister’s fun idea. “Ok, since Ford is tucked away in his room, when everyone else gets here, we tell them that Ford messed with some weirdness and got turned into a snowman!”

The twins gasped before bursting into loud giggles. “Yes! Let’s do it! Let’s do it!” The blond kids chanted. Wanda was checking her phone, unaware of the evil deeds her children were planning. Miz got a coat and put it on the snowman as the twins carefully put more snow over the snowFord’s head to make hair.

“There! Mom, we’re done, can we get back inside now?” Miz asked and the blonde nodded distractedly. “Ok, take off your wet boots before entering though.”

The siblings giggled madly as they ran inside, eager to put their plan into action. They went to the living room, and after a few christmas movies were played, Mabel announced her presence. “LOOK WHO’S BACK INTO TOWN?!” She roared followed by a loud “Oink!”

“’”Waddles!”’” the kids squealed as they ran to hug the pig. Mabel pouted. “Wha?? You guys love Waddles more than me?!” the three grinned at her as they hugged the pig. “Yup!”
Mabel made a dramatic show of being offended and hurt. “Well, I can see when I'm unwanted!” She gasped and fell to the ground with a loud “No one loves me!!!” The twins went over to pet her head and back. “No! We were kidding! We do love you!” Waddles walked over to Mabel and snorted softly, nudging her with his snout. The teen dragged her cousins closer and hugged them.

Dipper entered the living room carrying his and Mabel’s bags with a pout. “Ugh. Mabel! You can't keep sticking me with your stuff!” He complained. Pacifica, who was invited over for the holidays, snorted. “It’s that, or you leave it in the snow outside.” Dipper rolled his eyes. “She’s lucky I’m such a nice brother.”

“Mabel!” Max heard her voice and bounded into the room, wiggling with utter joy. He was going to celebrate Christmukkah, or Hannumas with her. Max and her had been seeing each other a few days every few weeks, as both were busy. But now he was going to get a whole week with her! He leaned towards her and kissed her lips in greeting. He even counted the seconds so Mabel could breathe again.

"This is the first winter I'm not sleeping!" Max laughed loudly, practically bouncing up and down. "I'm so excited to do another human tradition!"

"And I'm excited to have a partner for a human tradition!" Mabel exclaimed back.

"I want to show you my notes!! Math smells like pineapple, English like apple, science like mint!" Max dragged a jumping Mabel away. "Also, I've tried these fruits! And they're the best!!"

Dipper and Pacifica blinked before laughing sheepishly. "Totally made for each other."

"Has the kid been drinking coffee?" Shermie watched them go. It seemed like it… "Eh, whatever, I'm getting some eggnog." And Shermie went off to the kitchen.

Speaking of coffee... “Where’s uncle Ford?” Dipper looked around. Miz and the twins glanced at each other before putting on sad expressions. “He had an...accident…” Miz said sadly.

“What?!” Dipper and Mabel gasped (Pacifica raised an eyebrow, easily seeing the lie). The blonde twins nodded. “H-he was playing with us in the snow and then...said that...there was a...a...” Zoe mumbled. “A magic snowflake!” Zach said. The three nodded. “And he said that he HAD to study it…” the three sniffled. “So he messed with it and then...and then…” Zach's lips trembled as he couldn't continue (because he had to hold back his laughter). Miz took over “And then he got turned into a snowman.” She sighed. She wasn't good at lying, but she could bullshit up a story quite easily. All that remained was for people to be so invested in the story that they believed her.

And THIS Dipper and Mabel were pretty naïve (they fell for Seb's terrible lies after all). Hm. Might be a problem, should probably have Stan sit them down and teach them how to tell when she was bullshitting...

And Pacifica quickly caught onto what Miz was doing. And she rolled her eyes, please. That was SO fake. Who would ever fall for something like-- Dipper gasped. “Noo!!! What-?! Where is he?!” He demanded. (And Pacifica face palmed at her gullible boyfriend.) The kids took his hand and led him over to the back door and pointed at the very Ford-looking snowman in the backyard. “I think it'll wear off on its own. I didn't want to mess with it.” Miz shrugged. The teen covered his mouth with his hands in shock. “Oh man...how long do you think it will last?!” The kids and Miz shrugged. Miz was hoping Ford slept the entire day. “Probably until tomorrow, most basic curses and spells wear off unless some kinda trigger is set.” (And Max was confused, because he just saw Ford earlier… and Miz poked his side and whispered, “I’m playing a prank.” to him. Max didn’t really get it, but when Miz asked him to keep quiet for now, he agreed. Because the great dragon asked him to.)

Dipper walked over to the snowFord and knelt in front of it. “Uncle Ford, I told you, you have to be careful with weirdness! Don’t worry, we’ll make sure nothing happens to you!” He cried. The blond twins and Miz snorted with muffled laughter. Pranks!

Mabel was tugging on her hair. “This is awful.” she turned to Miz (who immediately put on a sad expression) “Does uncle Seb know?” Miz shook her head. “Everyone else thinks that Ford is asleep in his room. I don't want them to know because what if Seb decides it's too dangerous to have the winter holidays here?” Mabel and Dipper nodded. Seb WAS over protective of them.

“So we can’t let the grown ups know.” Zoe said. Miz sniffed and patted snowFord’s cheek. “I even got him a fake journal...that way...at least it still looks like him so we wouldn't mistake him for some other snowman…”

The older twins had downcast expressions as well. They hoped their uncle would be alright. Mabel stroked his coat. “Don’t worry, after this, we will keep you super warm so you aren’t cold as ice ever again.” The little twins and Miz were doing everything in their power to not cry with laughter and ruin everything. Pacifica had her head thrown back with a silent groan. Ok, she was gonna see how long it took for them to figure out they were being pranked.

“Mabel! Mason! You left your bags everywhere!” Abigail scolded her twins from the door with a serious look. Dipper groaned as his mom said his name, but he and Mabel said some reassuring words to the snowman before they all went inside.

The blond twins and Miz high-fived. This was going to be fun.

(They were really awful, all three of them.)

“Ahaha! That snowman looks like Ford!” Stan laughed uproariously when he arrived and spotted the snowman. The older twins sweated while the younger twins grinned innocently. “Yup. We built it.” Zoe said. “So you better not touch it.” Miz placed her hands on her hips and glared at Stan. He ruffled her hair and chuckled. “No worries, kids. I ain’t the kinda guy to destroy someone’s snowman.”

“You better! This snowman is very special to us!” Mabel shouted and Stan rolled his eyes. Weird kid. Dillon and Diego ran towards their cousins after saying hi to everyone. “It really looks like Uncle Ford!” The older teen mentioned and Dillon giggled. “Let’s make more!” He said as he picked up snow with his gloved hands.

The little twins gave a pained sigh as Miz motioned the brothers to come closer. “There’s...something we should tell you.” She said as Dipper and Mabel sniffled. Diego gasped when he heard about what had happened to 'uncle Ford'. Dillon easily saw through the ruse but decided to play along for shits and giggles. If Mabel and Dipper were naive enough to fall for it, he wanted to see how this went down.

(The awful squad now consisted of four people. Pacifica sighed.)

“We should stay outside, to watch him in case something happens…” Dipper suggested while Mabel and Diego nodded quickly. Dillon groaned a bit. “He’ll be fine~ It’s cold outside!” Majority won though, the little twins and Miz also agreed to stay outside (to keep up the act), and they stayed on the porch, wrapped up in a blanket and drinking the hot chocolate Melody and her kind soul decided to bring them.

Stan and Shermie were ordered to help and were washing the dirty pans and pots as Seb cooked. Wanda, who wasn't watching over their children anymore, helped. “Why isn’t Ford helping as well? I know he doesn’t know how to cook...but he should be doing something!” Shermie whined.

“He was sleep-deprived so I sent him to sleep for a bit. A sleep-deprived Ford is a weird in a bad way Ford. If we hadn’t come, he wouldn’t have slept until Christmas, and that is a whole week away.” Seb huffed. Abigail and Carla entered the kitchen carrying more plates. They were a larger group now so more of them were needed. “Does someone know why the kids outside on the porch? They’re gonna freeze out there.” Carla frowned.

“I think they’re making snowmen?” Stan suggested. The adults decided this wasn’t all that important and started talking about their kids. They proudly talked about their kids at college or at kindergarten and laughed at the age difference. Wanda said Zoe had started athletic classes seriously on weekends which was supposed to help her control her energy. She didn’t like gymnastics as much as Zach did, so they went to different classes at the gym. Miz didn’t much like the fun, but she loved the rock climbing wall just as much as Seb did. (The only problem was that she’d climb up and then get too scared to come back down without using her powers. Seb had to go up and rescue her multiple times.)

Diego wanted nothing to do with boxing, but Stan had insisted he had to practice a sport so he was trying swimming, much to Stan’s sadness who wanted him to choose football or baseball.

“He ‘doesn’t want to get hurt’! Can you believe this child?” Stan grumbled. Seb rolled his eye. “Diego is a sweet child who’s not a muscle nut like you.” He turned to Wanda “And then there’s Zoe, who will pick a fight with anyone if given the chance.” Wanda sighed. “Where does she get it from?” Everyone gave Seb a flat look. He frowned. “I didn’t pick fights! I just defended myself or Ford when we got bullied...I wouldn’t have if I knew how to give a good left hook…” Seb muttered to himself.

“Miz is trying karate classes in her free time. She’s doing fine. She likes it better than Judo for self defense because they don’t learn grapple holds or that sort of thing. Those still scare her a little.”

Everyone hummed, not really thinking too deep into it. “She’ll get used to it.” Stan finally declared with a reassuring smile. “There, I finished my part.” He put the last plate away just as more dirty pans and utensils were put in the sink. “That’s yours, Shermie!” Stan quickly said as he ran out of the room.

“Oh, what!?” The youngest brother groaned in despair at more work.

Eventually, lunch was ready and the adults set the table in the living room for them, having in mind to send the kids to the kitchen. Kari, who had been helping and watching them interact with an amused grin, went to get the cousins camping in the cold. “Kids, lunch is ready, get inside before you get frostbite!” She scolded lightly. “Food!” Miz pulled her siblings along as she ran back inside. Mabel, Dipper and Diego looked worried about leaving ‘Ford’ alone but Dillon rolled his eyes and steered them indoors. “Come on, my fingers are gonna freeze off.”

“Do you think he’s hungry?” Diego pouted and Dillon ruffled his hair. Aww, why was Diego so kind? He didn’t deserve to be lied to like this! “I’m sure he isn’t, and if he is, when he’s back to normal we’ll give him a lot of food, ok?” Diego trusted his older brother’s words and went inside the house.
Mabel ran into the living room to look for Max. He was curled up on the couch, huddled in a blanket someone wrapped around him, and she carefully woke him up. The caffeine crash had knocked him out.

Seb grinned at them before pointing at the kitchen. “You nine, kitchen. Kids' table is there.”

Pacifica and Max blinked. The what now? The brunet twins and Dillon crossed their arms. “Nah-ah! We deserve to be in the adult’s table now!” Dipper complained. “Yeah! We finished school and we’re studying in college!” Seb narrowed his eye. “Do you do taxes?” The teens sighed. “No.”

“When you pay your own taxes and stuff, call me. Now, you have your own table and we made dinosaur nuggets for you~” Mabel pushed the two boys away as she ran to the kitchen. “DINO NUGGETS!” She squealed. The boys sighed. Well, at least one of them was happy to be at the kids' table.

Miz was squeezing out the ketchup for the kids. Zoe was biting off a dinosaur’s head and laughing as the ketchup dripped down the sides of her mouth. “Mwahaha!” She laughed. Miz wiped her face off. “Don’t eat with your mouth open, that’s gross.” She scolded. Zach was more neat, nibbling off the dinosaur's limbs in a little circle before finally eating their body. Everything with his eyes closed. He could sometimes blink them open for a few seconds, but he was just more comfortable eating with his eyes closed.

Miz also ate her nuggets in this way, biting off the limbs and nibbling around them until only the torso was left. She then popped the torso in her mouth. Neither Zach nor Miz noticed the similarity.

Mabel sat next to Diego and the child froze, staring at Dillon for help. Luckily, Mabel was distracted adding ketchup to her own nuggets. The two boys sat down as well with their cousins. Well, the kids’ table wasn’t that bad. Even when they wanted to feel mature and stuff, they always got delicious food at this table. The adults were probably eating just vegetables. Dipper searched around for a juice box and opened it to serve everybody.

As everyone ate, he looked at the window and sighed. “I feel bad for eating when Uncle Ford can’t…” He poked a dinosaur with a small pout.

The blond twins giggled behind their hands, accidentally smearing ketchup and mayo over their faces. Miz sighed and cleaned them off again. Dillon simply rolled his eyes. “He’s fine, Dipper! He’s snow, not dead. Calm down.” Pacifica stared at them all with an unimpressed look. “He’s fine.” she deadpanned.

“Well, magic is weird.” Mabel shoved a mouthful of nuggets, rice and mashed potatoes into her mouth. “Once we thought him and Uncle Seb would stay as kids forever, so-” She shrugged. “We better be careful.”

Dillon rolled his eyes again. He was almost sure magic couldn’t affect them anymore. Not in a way that would really harm them, at least. Magic and weirdness loved their family anyway. “So~ How’re things with Max going?” He changed the topic to something more interesting. Mabel giggled and wiggled her arms. “Well~” She flushed and looked away. Max wiggled. Dipper groaned. “Nope. I don’t want to hear about it.”

The oldest teen grinned widely. “Tell~ Wait. Is it something you can't say in front of kids?” He asked first, glancing at his brother and little cousins. He wiggled his eyebrows. “Mabel~” He teased and both Dipper and Mabel blushed a bit. She giggled and brushed her hair behind her ears. “We can gossip later, once the kids are all asleep...” Dillion gave her a wicked grin while Dipper covered his ears. “Lalala! I’m not hearing this!” Max blinked. “We’ve compulated, is that something humans don’t talk to their pups about?” Miz snorted. “Yeah, it’s fine. Seb and Wanda already explained reproduction to the twins.”

“Still, not everyone likes listening to it!” Dipper pulled on his hat. Pacifica chuckled and ruffled the hair on the back of his head. “It’s alright, you’re shy. It’s cute.” Dipper flushed.

Dillon and Mabel laughed. “Mabs, now I want to send Diego to bed! You’re so bad~” He pouted and the girl laughed again. Dipper tried to cover his ears and eat at the same time. He was failing, and looking quite funny. Great, now he was imagining things he shouldn’t be doing and now he couldn’t look at anyone. Dillon and Mabel were giving each other funny looks and wagging their eyebrows at each other. Dipper looked like he was going to die. The children didn’t seem to pay attention as they ate their food.

Big kids talked about boring things anyway~

ey all finished their food, washed and then went to hang out with the adults in the living room. They were talking loudly and laughing even louder, like every adult does when there’s a family meeting, so they went upstairs to play something. Mabel and Dipper went to the attic and smiled. Waddles sniffed around, he remembered the house! This was his first house!

They looked for a board game or something to play, but they couldn’t agree on anything. Miz suggested another round of Dungeons, dungeons and more dungeons. Dipper and the others looked sad at the reminder of Ford. Still, they had a few rounds of the game, did a quest in a small dungeon with a pack of squid-men who had been stealing farm animals from a nearby village. Diego’s Sorcerer managed to electrocute the squid boss and everyone cheered when they finished the dungeon.

“I want snacks.” Zoe declared and Dipper looked at her with a smile. “But we just ate, Zoe. Hungry already?” The little girl nodded and raised her arms to be picked up. Of course, her older cousin agreed and carried her. “Let’s go downstairs and see what everyone is doing. Hold on, Zoe!” Dipper trotted downstairs, making the girl squeal. Everyone but Miz followed them downstairs, she said she needed to do something first.

Miz snuck up to Ford’s room without anyone seeing her and checked on the sleeping man. He was breathing? Yes, yes he was. What a relief. She pet his curls and shook her head, Ford must have been completely exhausted if he was still sleeping. “You know...your dumb niblings think you’re a snowman.” She giggled. “So, stay here like a good boy so I can continue messing with them!”

She closed the door slowly and skipped downstairs.

What? It was a prank! Just harmless fun.

They probably should have expected something like this would happen.

Diego and Mabel were sobbing. Paz and Max were hugging their respective partner. Dipper was screaming. Dillon was glaring at Miz and her siblings. “Are you gonna come clean? Or should I tell them?” Seb’s kids all winced.

So, Soos had to drive into town to get some stuff and everyone was forced to move their cars. During the confusion of shuffling the cars around, Stan has accidentally hit the Snow-Ford. Poor snow Ford was toppled over, his face broken in half and his arms snapped. The three kids who believed the lie were panicking and grieving.
“UNCLE FORD’S DEEEEEEAAAAAD!!” Mabel and Diego wailed.

“OH MY GOD! OH MY GOD!” Dipper had a horrible thought! What if he turned back to normal dismembered?! He gagged loudly and covered his mouth.

Mabel knelt on the snow and tried piling it up together as she sobbed. “Ma-Maybe we can fix it! We have to tryyy!!” Max tucked his tail between his legs. He didn't like Mabel feeling so sad!

The adults were watching them from a window with grimaces on their faces. Stan had apologized for it already, but they were still heart broken. “What’s going on with them?” Seb wondered. Wanda sighed. “They must have worked really hard on it.”

Zach and Zoe weren't sure if they should laugh or not. Miz was helping Mabel fix snow Ford. “Don't worry! There's plenty of snow for recovery! He's gonna be fine!” Diego ran over to help. They reassembled a lopsided snow Ford. Dipper was pulling on his hat and breathing wildly in panic. “B-but what if this doesn't work?!” He wailed.

“I'm sure uncle Ford will be fine.” Dillon glared at the blond twins. “Unless there’s something that you’d all like to say?” Zach and Zoe tried to look innocent but Dillon was Stan's son, more than that, he was good at seeing through lies. As funny as it was, their little joke was making Diego cry which wasn't nice, and he hated seeing his little brother cry. (Only Dillon got to make Diego cry!)

Diego rubbed his eyes and sniffled with a red nose. Dillon picked him up and cradled him to his chest like a baby. “It’s ok, Diego, I promise he will be fine.” He blew a raspberry on his cheek. “Let’s go inside, ok?” Diego clung to his neck, scared for their uncle’s safety. The blond twins sat down on the snow with a sad pout. Dillon was angry with them now.

Miz and Mabel put the finishing touches on Snow Ford. “That...that looks ok? Right?” Mabel bit her lip in worry. Miz nodded. “He'll be fine. Come on, it's getting dark, we should go to bed.” she tugged on Mabel and Dipper to pull them back inside. Zach and Zoe glanced at each other. “Miz? Should we tell them?” They asked.

Miz sighed. “You can tell Diego. He's too little to have to worry about this. But Twins 1.0 are free game. They should have caught on that this was a joke.” It was kind of mean but she liked seeing the looks on their faces. ‘Oh wow I really am an asshole.’ she twitched. But she actually felt a little bad, since Dipper and Mabel weren’t supposed to actually be SAD about all this. That made it less funny.

Twins 1.0 went to curl up on the couch, sad and worried. Shermie and Abi had no idea what was going on with them but decided it wasn't important. They were sulking about a snowman after all!

Paz patted Dipper's head with a bland look on her blue eyes. "There. There." as Max nuzzled Mabel's neck and rumbled against her.

Dillon was taking Diego to their room and twins 2.0 ran after them. “Diego! Dillon! We have to tell you something.” Zoe started sheepishly. Dillon crossed his arms and sighed. Diego blinked. “What?”

“Uncle Sixer isn’t a snowman...it was a joke, but we didn’t want you to be sad so now we are telling you.” Zach pouted and Zoe nodded. “Yeah, we’re sorry, but Miz said not to tell Mabel and Dip because it is funny!” Diego blinked. “That was mean! I was really scared! It’s not funny!”

“It was Miz’s idea!” The twins said quickly and Dillon grumbled. “Don’t just blame Miz, you also agreed to go along with it so you’re at fault as well. And I guess I did too, but that’s because I’m kind of a jerk like that.” The two little blonds pouted and glanced at their feet. Dillon sighed. “But Miz is the most to blame, since I’m pretty sure this was her idea to begin with.” he knew that pranks were a thing, and frankly, he heard about some pretty messed up pranks the triplets played on each other and the rest of their family.

“I don’t want Mabel and Dipper to be worried.” Diego said and Dillon leaned back. “Well~ If they are gullible enough to still believe it, I think they deserve it.” the younger kids laughed. “Besides, I’ll distract them later with grown up conversation so they will forget about snowFord in no time.”

They promised to keep quiet and went downstairs to have dinner with the family. Miz was quietly informed of the update and she nodded (feeling a little bad about the prank, but sort of afraid to come clean now, especially with how Dillon and Pacifica were glaring at her). The older twins were sad and Dillon couldn’t help but roll his eyes. He loved them but they were kinda gullible. They really fought a demon and stopped the apocalypse? And they couldn’t tell that Miz was pranking them? If Ford had REALLY been turned into a snowman, even as a snowman, the car would never have hit him. They were protected from harm like that.

And besides, if Ford had really been turned into a snowman, there was no way Miz wouldn’t have changed him back, or possessively protected the snowman. So the fact that Miz didn’t seem worried at all about all this, should have told them that there was nothing to worry about.

Zoe, Zach and Diego were eventually put to sleep by their parents at 8:30pm. They got warm milk and they dropped like dead flies. Dillon and his adopted demon cousin made their way towards their cousins’ bedroom, the attic they always shared when they came to Gravity Falls, and found them staring at the ceiling. He sat down next to Mabel and Max while Miz sat next to Dipper and Pacifica. Pacifica was still glaring at Miz with an annoyed look. But she wasn’t clearing things up for the twins either, so she and Dillon were both of the thought, ‘Dipper and Mabel need to learn to be more observant.’

Dillon nudged Mabel. “So. You and Max have ‘copulated’ ehhh~?”

“Oh god! No!” Dipper grabbed a pillow and covered his face. Dillon, Mabel and Miz all laughed like the little perverts they were. Though Mabel still didn't seem like her usual self, worried about the snow Ford. Miz sighed. She wasn't gonna be any fun until she knew her uncle was ok.

“Hey. Ah...I have a confession.” Miz said quietly. Dillon raised his eyebrow at her. Miz wiggled in her seat. “Ford's fine. He's not actually snow. I just thought it would be funny to prank you guys.” Dipper and Mabel gasped at her. “Why would you do that?!” Mabel folded her arms with an angry look. Miz winced. “It was supposed to be a harmless prank. Ford wouldn't get hurt for real and I would be able to watch Dipper talk to a snowman. But then the snowman got knocked over and you two were so worried and…”

Dipper groaned. “You shouldn't have lied to us like that.” Dillon snorted. “I can't believe you two fell for it. Miz is terrible at lying.” The twins pouted hard. They couldn’t believe how their OWN cousins fucked with them like that. Miz did look guilty though. “It was supposed to be harmless fun.” She fiddled with her fingers. “I'm sorry. I didn't mean to actually worry you two.”

Dipper crossed his arms as Mabel sighed. She pulled the demon closer and hugged her. “Aww...Yeah, it worried us...but I would have lied to Dipper as well, it’s fun watching him panic…”

“Hey!” The teenage boy scoffed and hit her shoulder softly. Pacifica leaned her head against his shoulder fondly. “Your high pitched screaming is pretty cute.”
“So Uncle Ford is really sleeping, right?” Mabel let her go. “Wow, never thought I would say that.”

“Yup. He was so sleep deprived that we all grounded him in his room. He’s been overworking himself. And stressed from… a lot of things.” she grimaced.

Everyone nodded in agreement. Miz poked Mabel’s arm. “So...can we know how things are going with you and Max?” She asked sheepishly, hoping she would agree. Mabel laughed, a lot more light hearted now that she wasn't worried over Ford's well-being. She glanced up at Max. “Do you mind talking about what we do?” Max blinked. “I do not mind.” and then he grinned. “In fact, we should boast about how wonderful it’s been, together!” Mabel cackled and turned back to her cousins. “Well, funny story...” Mabel leaned against Max’s chest. “Max’s more comfortable in his true form, so we actually have been--”

Pacifica and Dillon’s eyes went wide. Max shrugged, not seeing the fuss (Mabel had been really excited about it for some reason.)

“AND I’M OUT!” Dipper got up and stiffly walked out of the room as Dillon, Pacifica and Miz burst out laughing. The perverts talked about all sorts of juicy, sinful things long into the night. Max was just happy to be allowed to boast about his and Mabel’s relationship. This wasn't something a male should be talking about, so this all was very exciting!

Dillon wiped his eye from when he’d laughed while talking about a funny date he and Phillip had together. “I’m surprised you're so interested in this kinda thing.” He told Miz. The demon shrugged. “Just 'cause I have no interest doing stuff like that personally, doesn't mean it's not entertaining. Nor does it stop me from being a horny little bastard.” Mabel laughed. “You are SO bad~!” She punched her shoulder and Miz just chuckled. “I’ve been told.”

The lights were suddenly turned off and the group shouted, startled. Seb and Stan poked their heads into the room and frowned at them. “It’s late. Sleep.” Stan said simply. Seb looked down at the floor in the hallway and gently kicked a passed out Dipper on the floor. What was Pinetree even doing, sleeping outside the room?!

Dillon, Mabel and Miz groaned as Seb floated Dipper onto his bed. “Noo~” Dipper grumbled and fell back asleep.

“You can talk tomorrow.” Stan rolled his eyes. Miz and Dillon sighed but got up and waved bye to Mabel. “See you tomorrow.” Pacifica kissed Dipper’s cheek before she left to head back to her own house. Miz offered to teleport her, but she waved it off. She had a car.

Dillon went to the room he was sharing with Diego and his parents while Miz went off to Seb and Wanda's room before stopping and going to Ford’s. She had left her partner alone for too long already.

He had changed position and kicked his blankets off to spread out on the bed. She smirked. Did she accidentally curse him to sleep? This must be the longest he had slept in his entire life! Miz pushed him aside and laid down next to her human. He had been alone for too long…

She pulled the blanket over them and snuggled against him. It was too cold to sleep alone anyway. “Night Fordsie~” she yawned before summoning the Pikachu doll he bought her and wrapped her arms around it. Ford's expression gained a small smile at the warm figure pressed against his side.

Still asleep, his body instinctively pulled the source of warmth closer.

They all prepared for the Christmas holidays. As the weird family they were, they would celebrate both Hanukkah and Christmas (because Mabel wanted any excuse to have more celebrations) so they were all busy preparing the food and decorating the house. Hanukkah was long since over, but Mabel still wanted to call it that.

Ford was told about how he had fainted for an entire day and the kids made a snowman of him and were speaking to it all day. When he asked about it, they just said they missed him..

Well...he wouldn’t question them about it. (Though he noticed the guilty look on Miz’s face and made a note to ask about that later.)

Amelie arrived, to much fanfare and hugs from Miz and her siblings. Pacifica took this time to look Amelie up and down and nodded approvingly. She seemed nice, Pacifica had learned to sort of ‘tell’ what type of person someone was at a glance. It’s how she knew that Mabel and Dipper were just that type of ‘nice’ that would make them easy pickings for people that weren’t as kind. Though, they surprised her by how well they could actually stand up to her, it was something she had begrudgingly admired as a kid, and loved about them as the years went on.

Amelie didn’t really know what Christmas would be like here, she knew about the holiday, because it was something very important to humans and cultural osmosis told her the basics. Zach, Zoe and Diego were quite happy to explain it to her.

“So… a large man will go into your house and leave gifts? And eat your food?” Amelie said slowly. Max shrugged. “I do not understand why this is desirable either. Humans are quite odd.”

“Eh, Santa’s essentially retired from the whole breaking and entering thing by now anyway. Modern houses have too many cameras and also people seem to get upset nowadays when a stranger gets into their house. So… yeah.”

The children looked upset at this so Mabel quickly told them, “B-but we don’t mind if Santa comes here, so maybe he’ll show up?” (While Dipper took Miz aside and asked her to not ruin the magic of Christmas for the kids.)

“Do you think we can catch Santa?!” Zach jumped up and down as the older twins turned on the tv to show them a bad Christmas movie. Zoe rubbed her palms together. “We can make a plan to catch him!” She swore she saw bear traps somewhere...

Diego stared. “I don't think we should catch Santa. Doesn't he have an important job for the other houses that won’t mind if he comes over?” Zoe looked at him. “Well...yeah...but, wouldn’t it be so nice to meet him?! We can know where we are on his list!” She knew she wasn't the most behaved kid in the world...but she tried her best, and daddy said that was the most important.

Zoe turned to tug on her older sister's shirt. “Miz! Can you help us catch Santa?” The demon blinked slowly before shaking her head. “I'm not gonna mess with another god. I'm trying NOT to cause TOO much trouble in this dimension.”

"What a great job you're doing~" Seb sarcastic voice called from somewhere in the house and Miz fumed. Bitch. “I will mess with anything I don’t agree with! I got no problem with Christmas or Santa in and of themselves.”

Dillon groaned at this whole topic (since he was still under the impression that Santa was not real and Miz was messing with them), when Dipper, gasping, interrupted him. “Woah, woah. Did you say God?!”
Miz raised an eyebrow. “Not God, god. Yahweh is gonna get fired as soon as uncle-Ax finds a replacement anyway.” she huffed, “You shouldn’t be so surprised. You’ve met gods before, heck, I’M a god. You’ve met the Love god too, right?” She shrugged. “Santa is a god of the coming dawn, he who takes during the winter nights and then allows the spring to come.” She didn't see what the issue was. “Also, he’s apparently the forever president of America? Still don’t know what that was about, and he doesn’t actually have anyone who acknowledges him as such anyway, so it’s a moot point...”

Dipper and Dillon blinked. Well, yeah, Dipper met the Love god...but SANTA? “Are you telling me Santa isn’t that chubby man dressed in red that flies around the world delivering presents but instead is-is like a winter spirit?” Dillon felt so betrayed. One. Santa was real. Two. If he didn’t give presents, that would explain why all his letters as a little kid never brought him back Dad…

But he was a god! He could have brought him back from the portal for Christmas right?! What an assho-ho-hole!

Miz shrugged. “In the old days he would leave small gifts to those in need who gave him offerings. But the whole...toys and presents thing? Nope. That's not his thing. He attempted to give stuff before, simple things like supplies and such? But toys for children were just small things like stuff made from wood and straw. Toys like the things people actually ask for? Nope. Especially now that people are asking for things like ePads and video games...he can't give people those kinda things.”

The twins and Diego sniffled sadly. “So...We won’t get presents from Santa…?” Miz scoffed. “Why would you need gifts from him? Mom and Seb already got you stuff. And Stan, and Ford and Shermie…” she laid back on the couch. “Frankly, if people are giving each other gifts anyway, there's no point in Santa giving people stuff. He's busy enough gathering the energy needed to end winter so the spring can come…” which was getting difficult, controlling the seasons was difficult. His worship energy was tainted by commercialism so he wasn't getting as much power as he used to. And with how much the humans fucked up the environment, it was getting harder for the nature spirits to do their jobs.

The kids huffed. Rude. They were five. They liked presents. Zoe stroked her chin dramatically in thought. “Dipper! Do you wanna catch Santa~? Miz won’t, but we can!” Dipper groaned. “I don't think we should capture a god...but-” he looked up with a notebook in hand. “I do want to meet him.” he had a determined expression. Mabel and Dillon nodded as well. Mabel was bouncing in place, because meeting SANTA? Who wouldn't want to?!

“I WANNA PET A REINDEER!!” Mabel screamed. The children all cheered. “Come on! Let's ask uncle Ford and uncle Fiddle to build a Santa catching machine!” They all raced off, leaving Miz lounging on the couch. “Wait, no~” she drawled lazily. Santa, or rather, Wodanaz, the god of winter cold, the death and renewal of the earth for the coming Spring, was gonna be annoyed if he actually gets caught...but from what she's Seen, he's mellowed out over the centuries so they probably wouldn't get cursed for this… (also, he was pretty much retired. Being president of the United States didn’t really count, since he didn’t actually have real authority.)

"What?" Max asked, rather confused as to why 'Santa' was relevant for the human tradition. He wasn't mentioned by Dr. Pines in the lessons he got about human religious festivities! Not Christmas or Hand-u-kah! Dr. Pines just talked a little about the history and about the commercialism of holidays nowadays and brushed over the details. Apparently Hand-u-kah was about how people tried to kill Dr. Pines’s ancestors while Christ-mas was about a human baby who was born but was actually a god and was then painfully killed as an adult to save humans...Human religions were scary.
Though the great dragon said that the baby was, “God’s humansona.” and Max didn’t really know what that meant. Amelie thought this was all fascinating. But there was something she was worried about, “What’s with humans and wanting to capture non-humans?” she asked Miz. The dragon shrugged. “Humans are weird.” the other two cryptids nodded, that was very true.

They spent a nice Christmas together, watching movies and eating lots of food, and then prepared to capture Santa on Christmas. And for that, they needed help.

Fiddleford didn’t appreciate getting assaulted in his own house (Tate, Tate’s wife and Fiddleford’s wife gaping as Ford and some other Pines burst in, grabbed him in a sudden kidnapping while shouting “We’ll borrow him for a few hours!” and being separated from his adorable baby granddaughter, the most adorable child in the world.) “Ford! I was havin’ a nice Christmas with ma family, you darn corn cobb!!”

Though he had to admit he was also kinda excited to meet Santa. Ford mentioned how he never bothered putting out milk and cookies and thus, never had Santa show up. (Miz was still rolling her eyes in the background, not really stopping them since she was sort of curious, in a morbid way, how this’ll all end up.)

So they got some cookies and milk together and Fiddleford built a contraption that was designed to close a cage around whoever stepped in to eat the cookies. Miz and Stan set off the trap a few times when they tried to sneak some cookies. “‘Uncle Stan!’” Zoe and Mabel pouted angrily at the trapped family members, Miz was stretching her arm to try and grab the plate of cookies despite the metal cage around her. “Nuuuuoo~” Miz whined. “Why’s the table so far awaaaaay~?”

“It was this demon’s fault!” Stan wailed as they were freed. Miz punched his arm as they were released from the cage. “You suggested it!”

“Stan, don’t ruin this trap.” Ford glared at his brother. “We are leaving this for Santa.” (Miz was not going to point out that a physical cage wouldn’t really keep in most nature spirits, but Ford knew better than to have any sort of binding circle anywhere near her.)

“There are cookies in the kitchen though!” Zach commented, and Stan and Miz ran away to gorge themselves. Ford and Dipper sighed.

Everyone went to their hiding places at night. The house was empty, and the cookies and milk were lit by the soft light of a lamp. The twins and Diego took a nap in the evening to be able to stay awake at night, and now they were buzzing with energy, excited to see Santa. “When is he coming?!” Zoe whispered loudly and Seb put a hand over her mouth. “Kid, shh!”

Zoe, being her dad’s daughter, entertained herself by biting his fingers, making Wanda roll her eyes. She still couldn't believe they had all managed to talk her into this. “What are you even planning to do when you capture Santa?”

“Ransom him for more presents!” Zoe cheered. “Pet his reindeer!” Mabel said at the same time. “Reindeer petting sounds reasonable, you will not ransom Santa though.” Wanda exclaimed and the three were shushed by Ford and Shermie. (Shermie was surprisingly into this, having secretly always believed Santa was real and he wanted to get this validation.)

The hours passed (during which Miz realized the barrier around the Shack was preventing Santa from coming in, ‘hacked’ into the barrier, and opened it up temporarily) and they were starting to get bored when, finally, something happened. There was a shimmering light around the room that zeroed in on the plate of cookies. A figure began to form and as soon as it gained physicality, the trap was sprung. The metal bars extended and the large person-shaped figure was sealed within a cage of steel.

“Aha! We caught Santa!” Zoe cheered as she ran up to stare at the person they had captured. Everyone else came out to get a closer look. The figure resembled an elderly human male with a full, thick white beard, heavy coat of furs and glowing yellow eyes.

The little blonde gaped in awe before she smiled widely and opened her arms. “Santa!” She squealed. Everyone stared in shock, except for Miz, who looked unbothered, at the serious figure in front of them. The barrier was back up, so he couldn’t attack them, even if he tried.

“Holy sleigh…” Stan exclaimed with his eyes wide as Dipper and Ford gaped. New spirit! Must! Investigate! Said spirit glanced around. “I can't believe you seriously set a high tech trap for me? Most kids just do things like snares or such nonsense… and you’ve even got an anti-magic barrier?” the old man sighed. “How are you all awake? Could have sworn I placed a sleep spell on…” He trailed off as his eyes fell on Miz lounging on the sofa. “Oh. You had a dragon.” He sighed.

“Well-” Santa reached for the plate and ate some cookies. “Since I'm here anyway, what do you want?” he sat down on a chair nearby, still inside the cage and not really looking all that worried regardless.

Zoe stepped forward and smiled adorably at the unimpressed old man. “Hi, Santa! My name is Zoe! I’m 5! I wanted to meet you! Miz told us how you used to give presents to those who didn’t have much, and also make it spring again, and I think that’s very nice.” She grinned. She wouldn’t ransom… mommy said not to.

“He is my twin Zach, and they are my family! They also wanted to really, really meet you because you are really cool! And you have yellow eyes! Daddy said he used to have a yellow eye too!”

“Zoe…” Seb whined. “Don’t embarrass me in front of Santa~!”

The winter god raised a thick bushy eyebrow. “Ah. That's very nice, Zoe...but it doesn't quite make up for you being on the naughty list.” He munched on another cookie. “Also, you captured me and that’s very irritating.” He looked around. “It's a good thing I'm not on a schedule anymore, what with the mess of human timezones and the death of Time Baby...so I can afford to kill some time here.”

“Ah….what?” Mabel scratched her head. Santa turned to her and smiled. “Ah, Mabel Pines. Long standing top spot on my nice list. It's very nice to meet you.” Mabel looked thrilled.

Zoe's heterochromatic eyes widened in shock. But...why on the naughty list…? She always tried to be good...She tried really hard to keep her mischievous side in control because there was always a bad Zoe in her mind saying to do bad!

Zoe went over to her Dad and buried her face into his legs, whimpering softly. “Twying my best isn't good enough…” She whispered, devastated. Seb glared at Santa. “Hey! I'll have you know that Zoe has been on REALLY good behavior this year. How dare you!”

Santa sighed. Of course it was Seb Pines' daughter. He reached into his coat and pulled out a scroll of paper. It unfurled out and rolled between the bars of the cage. “Bit a classmate. Broke the pencil sharpener. On purpose. Ate the slice of cheesecake that her mother had been saving in the back of the fridge for special occasions…” He read off the list. Zoe's eyes went wide. “I didn't know that was mommy's!” she ran over to Wanda and hugged her tightly. “I'm so sorry mommy!” She wailed. Wanda twitched. Ah. So it was Zoe who ate it. She thought Seb had done it.

Santa sighed. “Frankly, Zoe HAS been much nicer this year. She is doing much better. So, please don't feel bad. I can tell you're trying your best.” He held up a finger and pulled the list up to the bottom to point at the last note. “However, she DID want to ransom me. That's definitely naughty.” he said matter of factly.

“It-It was a joke!” Zoe sobbed her eyes out. Zach frowned and hugged her tightly, worried for her. “My sister is the best!” He defended and stuck his tongue out. “I don’t care 'bout your dumb list!”

Zoe slowly pulled away from him to be picked up by her dad, who held her tightly and wanted to cry as well. Just his luck that his chaotic tendencies for violence were inherited. No normal kid does what Zoe did, she was like him, and he was no normal kid. Oh, fuck, he was so sorry. “Noo!!” He cried and then everyone stared at Zoe and Seb crying together.

Santa watched them cry, unimpressed, and pulled back his list. “I would have expected it, she is your daughter after all, but anyone can do better and improve themselves.” Mabel glared. “Are you doing some pure of heart thing like the unicorns do?”

Santa scoffed. “Heck, no. Those overly fancy horses are a bunch of jerks.” He shook his head. “You all seem to be misunderstanding something here.” He reached up to his back and pulled open a furred sack that no one had noticed since it looked like the rest of his coat. “Being on the naughty list does not mean they are a bad person.”

Zoe blinked up at Santa with teary eyes. The old man continued “It simply means they can do better. And she has been doing much better.” He reached inside his sack and pulled out a stress doll. The type who's head could be pulled off and put back on via some Velcro. This one was shaped like an elephant. “And even naughty kids deserve a present if they're trying to be better. I haven't actually given a real gift in a long time, this is a first. Looks like my sewing practice wasn’t in vain.”

Zoe's eyes were wide as she stared at the doll Santa handed her through the bars of the cage. She shakily took it from him and hugged it. “So...so I'm not a bad girl?” She asked quietly. Santa chuckled. “Of course not. You're just naughty. I happen to have a third list that no one mentions, the blacklist, for children who do not deserve presents. But even they will get something, not a toy but a ‘moment’. A small little Charm of Luck, both good and bad, to try and teach them what they’ve done wrong. Because I want them to try and be better.” He shrugged before straightening back up. “Regardless. You all already have plenty of presents from your family, you all already receive all the love you could want from your family. There are some children who don't even get that much.” he grimaced. “And I don’t have the power I need to be able to help them. Nothing beyond leaving a toy I can make somewhere for them to find on their own.”

Max finally got the courage to raise his hand. Santa looked him up and down before making a little grin. "Yes?"

"Mr. Santa, I still don't understand what you have to do with the human religion of the birth of that god baby." He asked, completely serious. "Why are you mentioned so much? Why is bringing gifts for kids so important if the holiday is for that baby."

"Well, it's the time, dear Maxini. My main job is to maintain winter and bring spring, the present activity is a secondary thing I acquired, to bring wonder and hope.” Santa explained. “And any connections that this holiday has to the birth of Christ is due to the Christians melding their own religion with the pagan celebrations that existed around the winter as a way to appropriate and combine their beliefs with those of the people around them.”

Max and Amelie both nodded in understanding. Humans, eh?

Dillon blinked. "Wow wow, wait. Hold on. How do you know Max's name? You do know he's a reptile guy, right Santa?" The winter god raised an eyebrow. “Reptile guy? Really? He’s an Eix Leel, please be respectful. His people are some of the few who still worship me as I was meant to be.”

Max blinked. “You…” his eyes widened. “You’re the spirit of the coming spring!” he finally put together what Miz had said earlier. “The god who brings the end of winter and warmth of the new year!” His green eyes widened incredibly wide. Amelie looked at her cryptid counterpart with a raised eyebrow.

Santa let out a hearty ‘Ho ho ho!’ at that. “Oh yes, that I am my boy.”

Max bounced in place. “I can’t believe I’m getting to meet Iliaqun in person!” he squealed loudly, rivaling Mabel’s own. Ford stared. One of Max’s gods was a real god-- oh. He flushed. No wonder Miz had been so angry about that. Max was all but falling over himself in excitement. He always worshipped his many gods, but he never thought he would actually meet one! Now he was bowing, he HAD to!

“So…” Amelie said slowly, looking Santa up and down. “This isn’t your true form, is it?” Max looked up. Right! That was not how he imagined a god to look like. Just suggesting a god would look human would cause you to be thrown out of town for insulting them in such a way.

“That it is not, my dear.” Santa chuckled again. “My name and form changes, as I am known under different ones.” he patted his round belly. “I will say, this particular one is quite enjoyable to be in.”

Ford, meanwhile, was staring at Miz. So… it was normal for gods to have different names and forms? Well, yes, Miz/Bill Cipher was a god after all. But Ford hadn’t really thought about it from this angle before.

“C-can I see your form as Iliaqun?” Max asked hesitantly/hopefully. Mabel rubbed his back. Santa laughed again, “Of course, little one.” and then, Santa glanced up and around him. He raised an eyebrow. Miz realized the issue and hacked into the unicorn barrier again to adjust the parameters to allow Santa to be an exception. Sanda noticed this, gave Miz a knowing smile. A fellow god recognizing one another. Santa wasn’t sure which god this dragon was, but she was quite powerful. And old. Unfathomably old. Almost reminded him of Cipher. All the big named powers knew of Cipher, the self proclaimed lord of Nightmares. They also knew of his downfall, within this very town in fact.

And everyone stared as Santa’s form shifted, he grew much larger, his heavy coat morphed into feathers, pure white as the freshly fallen snow. His face elongated into a large beak as his neck stretched out. A huge creature that seemed like a mix between a Gyrufalcon and an Adder, if the long scaled tail and reptilian eyes meant anything. He was huge, even taller than a full grown Eix Leel, imposing and powerful with wicked looking talons. The feathers around his head were much longer, looking like a beard.

(Miz was secretly disappointed that he didn’t look like a Delibird.)

Max stared at his god, the majestic form the totems and the paintings depicted since he was a little hatching. He was really in front of Iliaqun, a god so important to them for bringing life after the harsh winters… Max’s eyes rolled backwards and he toppled.

Mabel yipped when Max’s tall us form fell over her and threw them both to the ground. “Wow. He really fainted from that.” Seb commented, scratching his head. Iliaqun chuckled. “That tends to happen when a devout meets their god. Well, most of the time at least.” He ruffled his feathers and shrank back into Santa. He much preferred his humanoid form. It was less scary (and had fingers) so he liked it better. Still, he wasn’t going to tell Max that. The Eix Leel admired this form.

“So,” Santa looked around. “Am I free to go now?” Mabel gasped. “Right, you’ve got more presents to deliver and stuff, right?” She called from under Max’s passed out form.

Santa paused at that. “Technically… no. I don't have it in me to be able to do all that anymore. Not for everyone. My power wanes each passing year. Heck, I only came here because I felt your dragon there,” he gestured at Miz, “Calling for me.” (Miz coughed and looked away. Well, if her sweet little siblings wanted to meet Santa, she wanted to help them do so.)

Santa sighed, sitting down heavily. “I’m pretty much retired. I can't keep up anymore. The human population grows, people keep wanting MORE than is in my power to give and I just don't have the strength to keep going anymore. Humanity doesn't need me, commercialism has already taken my job. And not enough people still follow the old ways of worship, I’m barely able to keep bringing spring as is. Sometimes I’m late, and winter goes on for longer than it should.”

Mabel and Zoe cried. “Noo~!” The little girl walked over to her Uncle Ford, listening in shock, and pulled his arm with a strength no 5 year old has. “Free him!” she demanded, not liking the fact that he was in a cage anymore, “...Please, Uncle Sixer?”

Ford nodded and deactivated the trap, freeing the spirit who remained sitting on the chair, looking sad. “But you are important, Santa!” Mabel exclaimed. “You bring magic and illusion and wonder!”

Diego and Zach nodded, even the adults nodded. “Yeah! Your list isn’t dumb…Sorry.” Zach sheepishly rubbed his arm and Diego looked up at Santa. “Everyone loves you, Santa! What will happen to Christmas if you don’t bring wonder and hope?”

The winter spirit sighed. “I don't think I'm really needed anymore for the whole ‘Christmas’ thing. Nowadays, people get suspicious when presents show up and no one knows who sent it.” he ate the last of the cookies before gulping down the glass of milk. “Frankly, it's been difficult even giving gifts to the children whose families can't afford to buy any. They end up throwing them away or contacting the police. It's all very distressing.” everyone watched as the god seemed to wilt in exhaustion.

“Right now, I just fly around to make mild adjustments to gifts, eat cookies to build my strength for the coming spring, which is much harder than you’d think, considering spring in the northern hemisphere means fall in the south, it’s very hard to keep it all working…” Santa sighed sadly. He was so sad about the world. It had improved in some things of course, but the hate and intolerance was still present, people were selfish, and just wanted more and more material things. A lot of the other gods were losing their place in this new world. He heard the Love God had all but retired from matchmaking. Something about getting into the music career now?

The Pines stared at the sad spirit with long faces. They felt bad for him, but how could they help?

Mabel managed to get off under Max (used to his weight), leaped up in the air and screamed “WE “NEED TO SAVE CHRISTMAS!” which got her an odd look from the two gods in the room. “Christmas isn't gone, the holiday at least.” Miz pointed out. “People are still gonna celebrate it.”

“No, I mean...people should...should...” Mabel slumped. “I have no idea how to save Christmas.” Santa got up to pat her on the head. “I appreciate the thought, Mabel, but it's fine. I still donate toys to various charities that accept anonymous handmade gifts. It's...something.”

He looked around. “And I’m still managing to do my duties to the planet, even if it’s harder. I will be fine.” he didn’t really look like he fully believed it, but he didn’t want to worry them.

He looked at his sack sadly and sighed. But before he could leave, Dillon came up to the front, “There really isn’t anything we can do? I’m not an expert, but my family has saved the world from a demon!” Dillon pulled the older twins towards him for a hug. “I’m sure there’s something!” He insisted, but Santa just sighed. “No, Dillon, there isn’t…” He frowned a bit, the world was messed up and all this made him want a drink. “But...” All the Pines leaned closer.

“I could use some time to rest.” Santa gave them a small smile. “These cookies are quite good.” he gestured to the now empty plate.

Zoe snatched the plate from him and, with her twin, they both went to bring more. Seb blushed. “I made the cookies.” he partially boasted. Santa chuckled. “They’re wonderful. Thank you Sebastian.” Seb grinned, feeling giddy and nudged Shermie. "Santa thanked me..." He grinned and his younger brother rolled his eyes.

Miz, who was quiet this whole time, suddenly said, “I could take you to the Island.” when Santa stared at her, she continued, “Speaking of, I have been meaning to ask you about what to do about the situation in the world nowadays. With the children around the world suffering. If it’s not the camps they’re being kidnapped and shoved into, there’s the kids being shot and killed, there’s the kids being trafficked, the kids being raped--” Miz made a frustrated sound. “And I want to help them, but I don’t know what I’m allowed to do. I took the children in the Shlump camps and keep them safe on my Island, but I don’t know if it’s a good idea to keep on doing that with all the other kids. I just... I don’t know what to do.”

Santa watched the dragon calmly. “I don’t know. Frankly, if I had my way, all children would be protected from any and all harm. But I don’t have the power for that.”

“I could give you the power for that.” Miz said outright. Santa blinked. Then he looked her up and down. “You are powerful, no doubt you have enough for it. But your powers are...” he tried to find a nice way to put this. “...too destructive?” Miz wilted at that. “I can filter out all the resonances...”

Santa shook his head. “I’m sorry. It just wouldn’t work.”

Miz sighed. “But... can I still bring you to the Island? So that the children there can celebrate and receive gifts? I can make them as many toys as they’d want, but it’s not quite the same when I do so.”

"CAN I GO?!” Max pleaded, suddenly sitting up and scaring the life out of Stan and Kari who were just standing next to his body. "I'm going with Maxi!" Mabel smiled.

Santa sighed defeatedly. "Alright."

Abigail and Carla blinked. "Alright...have fun...I'm too tired for adventuring..." They waved half heartedly at Santa who nodded in understanding, and walked to their rooms.

Ford volunteered to go, you know, to watch Max and Mabel of course, he only cared about their safety. Amelie joined on the adventure as well and after seeing that Dipper was going, Dillon agreed to come too. This adventure at least wouldn't end on anyone trying to eat him. It'd also be cool to talk more with Santa.

Stan and Seb eventually realized they couldn't go, because they needed to put their little kids to sleep. Curse you parenthood! Miz gave them a cheeky wave as she went off. Frankly, the children wanted to go, but they were too sleepy. The kids on the Island were probably going to be asleep by now too, but Miz, who’d shifted into Xin by the time they left the house, was sure that there would be a few still awake, that tended to happen, with some of the kids taking advantage of the fact that Xin had Blessed the Island with free Wi-Fi and full internet access.

Max had shifted into his eix leel form and after putting on the coat modified to fit his original form, he skipped and walked on four legs behind the two gods, with his girlfriend lazily riding his back. "I can't actually believe I'm in front of one of my gods! My brother and sisters will never believe it when I tell them!" He shivered when he stepped on some snow. Brr! Cold!

Santa chuckled. “I don’t think it’s really that impressive.” Xin huffed, in dragon form now, with Ford, Amelie, Dipper, Shermie, Kari and Dillon on his back, rolled his eyes. “I’m a real ass god that you’re in front of.” the dragon grumbled. Ford laughed and patted his boyfriend’s head. “Are you jealous?” he teased.

Xin huffed. “Of course I am! My pride is wounded! I’m a little annoyed is all. Max is my baby, and I’m a god.” Ford pet Xin’s head, chuckling as he went. “You poor dragon~” Xin snorted. “Do not patronize me! I am a god too! A space dragon demon god, sure, but I am!”

Ford cooed and Xin snorted at him, blowing air at him. "Argh!" Ford’s glasses fogged up from the heat. Xin snickered at that. Dillon groaned. “Do you two have to flirt so openly?” Amelie raised her eyebrows. "Oh, have they finally admitted that they like each other?"

Dillon cackled. He was so proud of this newest relationship in the family, uncle Ford seemed happy, but Miz/Xin/Yun also liked teasing the scientist, which Dillon was all for. His uncle was dating a sex/gender shifting alien demon god! This was the most LGBT thing ever, while both were ace and he loved this! "Yeah, finally. They're a thing now, and Xin’s our uncle now." Dipper nodded slowly. "Yes, this all is very confusing."

"Love is confusing!" Mabel cried from Max's back. Amelie rolled her eyes at them. “Well, love is certainly confusing, but I think the issue here is the fact that Xin has different identities for his different forms. And the fact that Xin is technically supposed to be Miz’s brother.”

“And that’s not even going into the fact that uncle Ford is officially dating Yun.” Dipper added. Amelie blinked. “Who?”

“Another one of my forms.” Xin shrugged, gliding his way through the trees. Santa looked up at that. “Ah, how many different variations do you have?” the god asked the fellow god.

“Hm…” Bill, Miz, William, Xin, Yun, Jan… “Like, six?” Xin grinned. “One for each of my daaaaarling’s fingers~” Ford choked. “Don’t say it like that! It sounds very odd!” Kari laughed uproariously. “Oh, don’t be like that dear, I think it’s adorable~” she slapped Ford’s shoulder.

“It sounds kinky, is what you mean.” Dillon cackled. Dipper was burying his face in his hands. “GuYS...You're All a bUnch of pErverts.” his voice cracked multiple times. Everyone laughed. Amelie giggled, these guys were always so amusing to hang out with. “I haven’t met any of the gods that my people worship. Are they really too?” she asked.
"Technically speaking, all gods are real, so long as someone truly believes they're real. And even if they lose all belief, if they have enough power, or move and change into becoming another god, they can stay in existence.” Xin twisted his long neck around and grinned at the people on his back. “So… yes. Cliodna is technically real, though not exactly the same as the legends.”

Amelie squealed at the news.

They finally reached the rift taking to the Island. Max licked Mabel's cheek and she 'whooped' as Max ran through it. Santa looked impressed as he looked at the magic around the area. “It’s based on a unicorn glade, isn’t it?” he raised his eyebrows. Xin made a proud sound. “Fully functional ecosystem inside, I’m still working on expanding the ocean, need more space for some of the larger fish after all.” and with certain fishes being overfished by humans out in the rest of the world, Xin liked the idea of having a safe breeding place for rebuilding populations. Like Tuna. They required an insane amount of space to grow. And needed lots of food too. Xin was working hard to build the ecosystem around the Island. Perhaps… someday… he could even expand the space enough to add another Island, for more people to escape to, to get away from the outside world… (Xin pushed down the pang of sorrow over the idea of what Blue would have said about it.)

"That's very impressive," Santa nodded with a grin. The Care Units approached the group and bowed. “Hello Creator.” Care Unit 1 said. Xin nodded at them all. “How’re the children?” he asked softly as he lowered himself so everyone could get off his back. “They have been doing well. The adults have adapted to leaving and re-entering the Island. Sometimes they take some of the children with them. We keep close track of which children leave, and do not rest until they have been returned.”

Xin nodded. He knew that everyone was wearing the pendants so they’d be able to teleport to safety if anything happened. Still, he worried. And the Care Units knew to keep track of the children carefully. There were a few adults and teenagers still awake and they came out to greet their dragon god.

Xin rumbled as he nuzzled them. “Heeey~ why aren’t you in bed? You need to rest.” he told the children. They giggled and petted Xin’s snout. “We’ll go to bed soon. We wanted to finish a few games.” Xin scoffed. “Alright~ but I’m actually gonna need you all to stay awake for a little while longer.”

"Hello, Max! Mr. Pines!” they waved at the people they knew. The dragon's 'pup' as Xin always called him, grinned and wagged his tail in greetings.

"This is my partner, Mabel!” Max proudly showed her off. Mabel looked around the island, amazed before grinning at the islanders. "Yup! My boyfriend!"

And that’s when one of the kids saw Santa. She stopped dead and stared. The other kids noticed too and they all gasped. They weren’t sure if this was real. Xin grinned at them all. “This is Santa. I realized the Island isn’t somewhere he can reach normally, so I thought I should bring him here.” Xin bent down to nuzzle Santa. “I know they’ve got cookies and milk here too.”

Santa chuckled. The adults were sort of confused, thinking that this was someone hired to pretend to be Santa for the holidays. That was… until Santa whistled and a sleigh flew through the air, pulled by reindeer.

And Xin sent the Care Units to wake the other children, so they could all meet Santa. The elemental spirit was gesturing for his reindeer to land on the beach. The children were all squealing in excitement. Because Santa was REAL! Just like in the movies! Only this was COOLER!
All the children were woken up and when they went outside and saw what was happening on the beach, they ran towards Santa squealing. The spirit’s eyes widened a little at the surge of energy. "They have very intense beliefs." He looked at Xin, who nodded solemnly. "Had to get used to it. They’re sweet kids, and they love deeply, if cautiously. As long as you treat them with love in return, they’ll be your steadfast faithful."

Santa had a contemplative look on his face. He turned back to the children. “They’re… happy.” he relaxed a little. “I’m glad you saved them.” he waved to let his reindeer loose from their harness and the kids squealed as they pet the animals. Mabel was also petting them, looking like this was the greatest day of her life.

“There are more children I want to save. But I don’t know how to go about doing it.” Xin admitted. Santa sighed. “Simply taking them would be considered kidnapping.”

“I prefer the term ‘spirited away’.” Xin snickered. Santa rolled his eyes.”Well, so long as you ask them, and their parents, if parents are available, and they agree…”

“And if the parents are no good?” Xin narrowed his eyes. Santa sighed. “Even so, to take a child from their parents, even if for their own good, it’s a delicate situation all around.”

“I know.” Xin grimaced. “I will figure something out. I don’t know yet, but I realized I need to ask other people for their own thoughts on the matter.” he tilted his head at Santa. “...why won’t you take over as the president of the united states? You’re the current and forever president, aren’t you?”

Dipper perked his head at that. Wait, he kind of remembered seeing that somewhere?! He looked at his uncle, his source of valid information, and the scientist nodded solemnly. Dillon just looked lost.

Santa groaned. “Kind of hard to really do that when most people don’t even believe I’m real.”

“You’re right here. Can’t you just… reveal yourself to the world?” Xin asked gently. The old winter spirit shook his head. “I tried, a long time ago. Things didn’t work out. Heck, when I was not so graciously ignored to the point of being kicked out, they did a whole coverup. To make it seem even MORE that I didn’t exist.” He actually sneered. “Even hired that soda company to make me their mascot for the sake of capitalism, to further soil the flavor of my worship into something twisted that I could no longer use for sustenance.”

"That's so sad." Mabel pouted. "Those dummies suck ass." Max snorted. Dipper hummed and crossed his arms. "Yeah, the whole thing about Trembley was only allowed to be known by the town after Weirdmageddon and the Northwest lost a lot of their fortune…Before that, a lot of government information was hidden." And even now, a lot of government information was still hidden.

“...what?” Dillon and Kari deadpanned. Because, seriously, what the actual fuck?

"Ughh too long to explaaaaaaain~" Mabel groaned. "Bla bla bla, the Northwest founder of Gravity Falls was a fraud, bla bla, Ben Franklin was a woman, bla Quentin Trembley threw himself off a cliff on his horse, yadayada, Time Baby will return once the polar ice caps melt, and encasing yourself in peanut brittle can make you immortal or something."

Max, Amelie and Kari blinked. Dillon slowly shook his head from side to side. “None of what you just said makes any sense.”

Xin and Santa were with the children, Santa offered to let the kids ride his sleigh and Xin wanted to give the kids a ride on his back. The adults who were here and awake were somewhat worried, but they couldn’t really stop the children from doing what they wanted. Ford was trying to assure the parents that the kids wouldn’t fall off the dragon.

The kids had a fun time flying through the air. While up in the air, one of the kids asked Santa, almost hesitantly (and with an underlying of bitterness) “Why didn’t you save us?”

Santa’s expression dropped. He sighed. “I didn’t have the power to,” he glanced over at the other children. “It’s not an excuse. And I failed you all. I’m sorry I didn’t help you all before.”

The kids considered that. And also how sad Santa looked. “So you’re not as strong as Xin?” One girl asked. Santa chuckled, “Yeah, that dragon’s something special.”

“Why didn’t Xin save us earlier?” another kid asked. Xin, flying nearby, sighed. “I didn’t come to this planet until the beginning of this year. And I’m sorry I didn’t help you all sooner.”

Dillon (also riding in the sleigh) glanced at Santa as he tucked his hands under his armpits. "So...that's why you couldn't bring back my dad sooner..."

Santa nodded ashamed. "I tried locating him, but it was so hard, multiple dimensions is not really my thing. And I barely have power here on Earth, much less out there in space." Dillon smiled at the god. Well, at least he tried. That reassured him that he wasn't been ignored him as a kid.

“It’s hard.” Santa admitted. “Knowing what all children want and ask for, and being unable to give them what they needed.” The pain of being a god with no real power, really. Xin nudged him gently. This poor guy, so good and barely keeping up because of some ASSHOLES. Well, he was going to help, because he was so awesome!

(And her pup was amazed by him.)

Xin still needed to ask more people for their opinion on what to do to help. But frankly, it was getting to the point where hostile takeover might just be the best option by this point.

They spent a few more hours, Dillon and Dipper, against their hard resistance, ended up falling asleep, leaned against their grandma like babies. Kari held said babies against each shoulder and Mabel took a photo. Max always slept early too, which she thought was adorable, and he was curled up with some very not sleepy kids, trying to listen to them and not fall asleep on them. The Care Units and the other adults helped get all the kids back to bed. Xin even went human form to help tuck a few of them in. Then Santa left some more handmade dolls for the kids, tucking one under the blankets for each child. He also thanked Xin for showing him the Island.

“Can we keep in touch? If I need someone to talk to about being the new president when I finally find a way to get rid of the current administration?” Xin asked. Santa snorted. “I don’t know much about politics and governing.”

“That’s fine. The current president doesn’t know anything about governing either. Or much of anything at all.” Xin scoffed. “Seriously though, keep in touch dude.” Xin handed Santa a triangle pendant. “As fellow gods, if you ever need help with anything, just ask.”

“...thank you.” Santa bowed his head. And then he was up in his sleigh and flying away to gather more energy needed for the coming spring.

Xin yawned and looked around for his charges. Kari woke up her grandsons and they both groaned before climbing up to Xin's back. Amelie yawned and did the same. Mabel rubbed her eyes and followed suit because her passed out boyfriend was picked up by Xin's giant jaws and carried by his waist. He hung limply. Ford patted Xin's head. “So… getting more people for your second, third and fourth opinions?”

“It’s what I’m supposed to do.” Xin managed to answer despite holding Max in his mouth. Ford sighed. “Following your brother’s advice, when it is actually good advice, isn’t a ‘supposed to do’ type of thing.” He told Xin gently. “You don’t have to think of things as stuff you’re ‘supposed to do’ just because someone told you to.”

Xin snorted. “Like you’re telling me right now?” Ford flushed. “You know what I mean.”

Xin sobered, looking away as his feathers drooped. “…yeah…” Ford sighed. Even now, MizBill still valued what their brother said. Ford couldn’t help but be a little angry about that. At how Blue could so easily effect MizBill’s mood. “Come on, lets get the kids to bed.”

“Mmmnot a kid…” Dipper mumbled in his sleep. The adults all chuckled quietly.

When they got back, Xin shrank down both into human form and sex to Miz. She proceeded to yawn and sway on her feet until Ford picked her up (after kneeling down and opening his arms for her to choose to come to him). “Tired?” Ford asked. Miz nodded sleepily. Ford hugged her against his chest and carried her inside.

The rest of the teenagers were put to bed and the adults all went to settle into the livingroom to talk about what had happened today. Stan, Seb, Wanda and the others were still awake, having been waiting for their older kids to return.

“Well.” Kari sipped her hot chocolate. “Santa is supposed to be our president instead of that monster currently in office. Anyone else vote to let Miz take Shlump out and put Santa in charge?” she said halfway seriously. Wanda sighed. “I’m almost tempted to agree.”

Seb blinked. “Seriously?” Wanda rolled her eyes. “If things don’t get any better, and if people are going to continue being hurt and oppressed and killed, I think it might be ok to sic an alien demon dragon god on him.”

“Are we really going to let Miz go full demon-god on humanity?” Shermie twitched. He was still rather weirded out by this entire subject. “I mean, I’m all for getting rid of Shlump, but… can Santa even run a government?”

"Well, movies have already predicted alien takeovers." Seb stroked his beard. "After all, the US is the only one attacked in movies and it's perfect!" He grinned. Stan shrugged. "I don't really care. As long as she doesn't mess with us, I don't see why we can't have Santa running America."

"I need something stronger than this." Wanda looked down at her eggnog. "I'm going to need to talk to Santa Claus and ask him how much he knows about administration and delegation and knowledge on human laws and... everything." she sighed. "My real complaint against Miz taking out Shlump was that there would be no one to take over after, and now that she's found someone... well, I don't want to rush into this without checking thoroughly. And in any case, Santa would have to actually agree to do it in the first place."

"Well, this is too weird, good night." Seb waved lazily. Wanda rolled her eyes at his utter disinterest. And she still remembered with amusement how he told Blue 'Oh yes, yes, I'll do something, definitely.' Just to make him shut up. Oh, her husband. Lying to that demon to his face.

Miz twitched in her sleep, frowning slightly where she was resting her head against Ford’s shoulder.

Speaking of Miz…

Ford was still carrying her as she slept. She refused to let go of his jacket after all. Everyone made weird, almost teasing, sounds at him when Miz shifted a little with a soft hum, and Ford just shook his head at his family. Really, what was so funny about it? Seb carried Zach all the time, and Wanda often carried Zoe. Heck, Stan held Diego when the boy fell asleep and no one made a fuss over it. How was him holding Miz any different?

Besides...Miz was his partner and they were all exhausted. They all checked the time and decided to retire for the night. Ford cuddled Miz as he fell asleep, already used to having her by his side as he slept.

Max was a little unsure what to do with himself. There were no classes to keep his head distracted, and he couldn't just go have a walk. It was way too cold.

It'd be so amazing to just...sleep until spring came, but Max doubted he could do that, he felt this time awake had messed up his schedules. Despite that, he felt sleepy and his need to cuddle was going overboard. There would be nothing better to just curl up against the heater, with the electric blanket the Great Dragon had gotten for him (he should really talk to the priestesses to allow everyone to have these for next winter!) and have his beautiful girlfriend by his side.

But that couldn't be it.

Mabel was a bubbly active person, she was jumping from here to there, helping with someone, squeezing her pet pig's cheeks, bothering the human pups, playing outside (something Max refused to do), and Max didn't want to stop her, it was her family, though it made him feel lonely. He only knew Dr. Pines, but he also had to be with his family, and while he knew Mr. Shermie and Mrs. Abi, talking to them wasn't something he felt comfortable with.

So the young Eix Leel just wrapped the blanket around himself even more and sighed. He should nap…

"Yellow~ Mind if I sit here?" Max looked up. Oh. "Hello, Mr. Pines. Ah, I do not mind if you sit."

Sebastian smiled and sat down besides Max. “So, I’m guessing you’re super cold. Do you want Miz to put some sort of heating charm on you or something?”

“No, it’s alright. The great dragon has already helped me enough.” Max shook his head. And even if he was warmer, it still felt super weird to be out in the snow. Sebastian shrugged, “If you’re sure. So… you just gonna huddle here all day?”

“Well, I don’t know what else to do? I don’t want to go outside.” Max admitted.

“There’s plenty of stuff you can do indoors. In fact, come on kid.” Seb gestured for Max to get up and follow him. Max did, still hugging his blanket and the two went to the kitchen. “So… since Santa ate all the cookies, I thought I would bake more. And I could use some help.”
Max blinked. "I...don't know how to do that." He confessed, ashamed.

"Well, help me then." Seb shrugged. "I really want to use this new oven~ It's much better than the one I had when living here. In fact, lots of things have been repaired, I wouldn't expect anything less from Miz."

"You...You lived here?"

"Yup! Thirteen years! I bet you already saw the Mystery Shack, aye? That was my creation!" Seb opened his arms wide. "And Soos, but I won't count it as he didn't put money in it, well, not at first anyway." He waved a six-fingered hand dismissively.

Max giggled and stood closer to the funny human, towering over him. "Why are you covering one eye?" he wondered about this since neither mister Ford or Stan covered their eye.

Seb grinned and lifted the eyepatch. Max made a choking gasp and the blanket on his shoulders fell. "Holy Gods!!!" Max covered his mouth. There was NO EYE! "It looks horrible!" The Eix Leel without a filtered mouth, exclaimed.

"Thanks! I know, that's why I use the eyepatch." Seb laughed and covered his scarred eye socket once again.

Max felt a little bad for blurting that out so bluntly. Seb noticed his discomfort and laughed it off. "It’s fine kid, really." He patted Max’s shoulder and the two made it to the kitchen. It was bigger than it was when Seb owned it. Not hugely bigger, but he could see new equipment and the room had been expanded. He was glad to see that the items were more or less organized the same. He easily found the flour and butter and other ingredients.

“I have eaten cookies before, Miss Melody gave me some, but I can’t eat chocolate ones, the great dragon says I’d die.”

“I feel EXTREMELY SORRY for that. But it’s good to know. I will avoid using any chocolate.” Seb nodded. “Hm... how about... some shortbread cookies? With rosemary?” Max nodded, not having a real opinion one way or another. Seb began directing him to help with measuring things out, once Seb looked up a recipe on his phone and began reading off it.

As they started working (Max handing materials or ingredients to him or getting stuff on taller shelves “Why are you so damn tall, kid?!”), Max asked. “Why did you move from the house if you lived here? Is it because of your eye?”

“Nah, I got together with Wanda so we kinda moved to our own place, this IS Sixer’s house originally, not mine.”

“And then why were you living here?” Max was very confused at this, but Seb waved it off. “Too long too explain. People just move houses sometimes.” he paused. “Is that something your people don’t do?”

Max nodded and stared at his hands. “We only move out of our parents house when we get married. And even then, we still live in the same village...Unless you’re male, you’d then move to your wife’s family if she was from a different one.”

“Sticking close knit? That’s pretty cool.” Seb didn’t really like how annoying the people in Max’s village were (what with the whole, almost sacrificing, or eating them all thing), it was even worse than humans. It sounded as if someone took the worst of the worst of xenophobic, sexist and he’d be tempted to say racist human culture and just put it on high. But the Eix Leel weren’t human, so
Seb couldn’t really say anything about it.

When the cookies were in the oven, and the two admired their hard work, Max looked up (or down, actually, Seb is still small). “Mr. Seb, how are humans assigned their jobs?”

“How?”

“I mean...How are you chosen to be a scientist like Dr. Pines, or a merchant, like my boss in town?”

“You aren’t chosen, you just do it, like you decide to do it yourself.” Seb explained. “You study sometimes for it.” he shrugged. “I wanted to get into clothing design. So I worked really hard for it.”

“So… it doesn’t matter...uh…” Max rubbed his arm. “What have YOU chosen then? You said clothing design, but what does that mean?”

“I make clothes! FANCY clothes. I create cool looking clothes people wear!” Seb grinned as Max thought in silence. “Why would you make clothes people can do themselves?”

“Cuz humans don’t make their own clothes anymore. Well, most people don’t.” Max hummed, pulling at his jacket. He made it himself.

“That sounds amazing. Being able to choose.” he smiled. Seb shrugged again. “Ehh, well, I got lucky. Not everyone can get the job they want. There are plenty of people who work really hard but still can’t get a job in the field they want. Which sucks. Life isn't nice, or easy. You just gotta get over it and keep working as best you can with what you can.”

Max looked down, scared. Wow. That sounded horrible. “What happens to the people who can’t get the job they want?”

“It depends on the person. Some give up. Some find something else that they want more, which fits them better. Some just work on something else because there’s not much they can do. I mean, it sucks, but people need money to live. There’s paying for rent, and food and medicine… it’s hard. And most people aren’t as fortunate as I am, to be able to actually reach their dreams.” He shook his head. “Sorry for being a downer, let’s check on the cookies…” Seb bent down to stare into the oven, the cookies were looking great.

Max was still thinking. Even if there was the high possibility that he would fail, the idea of being able to try was... it was an amazing idea.

“I think they’re done!” Seb cheered as he brought the tray of cookies out. Max’s nose twitched. The smell was amazing~

In fact…

“‘‘‘COOKIES!!!’’’” Many voices screamed as Zach, Zoe, Miz, Diego and Mabel thundered into the kitchen. Seb screamed and held the tray high above his head as the children swarmed and jumped, reaching for the cookies with wild looks in their eyes. “No! You have to wait for them to cool first!” Seb scolded, even as he hid his proud smirk.

“Also, say thanks to us! Max and I made them.” He put the tray on the table and pulled Max in for a hug. The kindergarteners chorused “Thank you!” as Mabel grabbed Max’s cheek and kissed his lips. “OH YOU LIFE SAVIOR!” Max wiggled with a flex of his feathers (though because of the illusion no one could see it). He made Mabel happy! With the cookies!
“I’m sorry for abandoning you~ I’ll stay here with you now!” Mabel grinned before jumping into his arms without warning. Max easily caught her and they walked into the living room. He did glance back at Sebastian though, as if asking if it was ok to leave, and the man just shooed him off, and floated his blanket at him. When it was above him, it covered both Mabel’s and Max’s heads.

Melody huffed as she made her way over to the couch. She was excited to be a mother, but she did wish it was a little easier on her body. Carrying another person inside her was a lot of work.

She looked up from rubbing her belly to see Miz staring. Melody chuckled good naturedly. “Do you want to feel?” she asked, having gotten used to people wanting to touch her belly. Miz looked hesitant. “U-um…” the dragon was half hidden behind the edge of the couch, crouching behind the arm. Melody patted the cushion next to her. “Come on, I don’t mind, really.”

Miz slowly made her way over. Sitting on the couch and scooting over to be closer to Melody. She didn’t reach out to touch her belly though, just staring at it. Melody reached out to place her hand gently on Miz’s head. “What’s on your mind?”

“...I’ve seen people pregnant many times. And it’s always… so cool, and also scary.” Miz admitted. “But I can’t help but… be interested in it.” she reached out, but stopped before actually touching Melody. And then Miz pulled her hand back and laid them in her lap, still staring. Melody was a little unnerved by the intensity. “What are you looking for?”

“For when they gain a Soul.” Miz said. Melody blinked. “O-oh?” she looked down at her belly. “There’s no Soul right now?” she asked. Miz tilted her head. “There is. I’m just trying to figure out when they gained it.”

“How do you call her a ‘they’?” Melody asked, as she and Soos found out the baby was female. Miz shrugged. “They’re genetically female, but I don’t know if they’re mentally female yet. The Mind isn’t fully formed.”

Melody blinked before nodding. Oh. Alright. She rubbed her belly lovingly. “We can’t wait to meet them.” Soos was also incredibly excited, as well as incredibly nervous. But she expected that.

“How does it feel?” Miz asked, finally looking away from the belly and up to Melody’s face, sort of attempting to do eye contact before her gaze slid off down to her chin instead.

“Um...I don’t know...it’s weird, not gonna lie, but exciting.” Melody chuckled. “I guess it’s also a bit of a pain? My insides feel like they’re being shoved around. I have to pee constantly, my feet hurt if I stand or walk for too long…” she listed off. Miz nodded, “Pyronica complained sometimes about how cold she felt, since her internal temperature was colder while she was pregnant.”

Melody raised an eyebrow. “Well, I do get hot and cold sometimes, I’m sure it’s because of my changing hormonal levels.” Miz slowly reached out her hand again, but hesitated and withdrew once more. Melody sighed. “Are you afraid?”

Miz shrugged. “I... maybe? I dunno. I mean, there’s some ambient Weirdness around all the time, but I’m pretty much made of it, dunno what I might do to a human embryo--” she rambled off. Melody wasn’t buying it. “What are you really afraid of?”

Miz paused. “...I’m afraid I’d get attached to yet another person who’ll someday die and leave me.”

Melody flinched. “Ah, no offense Miz, but once the baby’s born, you’re going to--”
“I know.” Miz sighed. “But when they’re…,” she gestured to Melody’s belly, “...like this? Not even fully formed, infinite possibilities, well, near infinite. I worry about what I might do…”

Melody frowned faintly. “What might you do?”

And Miz shivered. “I want a baby,” she said softly. Melody felt a bit of a chill go down her spine. “Well, you’re still a little young for that.” She didn’t bring up what she was really thinking, that being that Miz might want to take her baby, in her want to have one. She didn’t want Miz to have to admit to it, if that really was what she was thinking.

“I’m not a child.” Miz turned her head away. Melody sighed. “I feel like there’s a very long story behind this.” She said more to herself than anyone else. “I know you’re some sort of immortal alien space dragon, but right now, you’re… um… no offense…”

Miz huffed, leaning back and shifting into Yun. “I’m not a kid.” She repeated, stretching out and looking quite affronted. Melody sighed. “You have a complex about this, don’t you?” she asked gently. Yun paused. “...a little.” she said finally. “I… I’m an adult. I am! Just ‘cause I’m in child-mode most of the time doesn’t mean…” she trailed off. “I’m still trying to figure out what I want to be.” She played with her fingers, flexing them and watching the black markings swirl around along her skin. “I wanted to be a little sister, a daughter, a child who could be protected and cared for. Who doesn’t have to stress about the consequences of their own decisions, just doing what they wanted. Just having fun.” She leaned back against the couch. “But all that ended up doing was making problems that I have to deal with, because foisting my problems off on other people isn’t right.” She folded her hands in her lap again. She just couldn’t be what she wanted. She couldn’t be what other people wanted. And she ended up hurting people with her attitude and actions. (Like her brother. She hurt Blue deeply, and she still hated herself for that.)

“So, if I can’t be a child. Then… I might as well grow up and be an adult.” Yun sighed. “But even so, Miz is Wanda’s daughter. I’m still a kid part of the time. But what do I actually want to be? I don’t know.”

“Well, I think that actual age means nothing in terms of maturity, if that’s what you’re worried about.” Melody smiled reassuringly. “Maturity comes from experience. The things you learn from the things you’ve gone through.”

Yun blinked. “So… I need more life experience, with being an adult?”

“With everything, essentially. It’s not all about adulthood.” Melody chuckled. “There’s always more to learn, and experience. And you use those things to grow and change and, well… mature. And frankly, being an adult sucks. Don’t throw away your childhood. Ride tiny trains. Be weird. Have fun. There’s nothing wrong with doing that. If you’re immortal, you’ve got pretty much forever to be an adult eventually. So there’s nothing wrong with taking it slow and getting experience from everything as you go.”

Yun considered that. “...There’s a lot that I need to think about. Things I need to do.,” she ran a hand through her hair, pinching the end of her bangs and playing with it absently. “Thank you for the talk.”

Melody snorted as she laughed. “It’s no problem. I hope you figure out what you want to do.”

Yun smiled, then reached out her hand until it was hovering above Melody’s belly, not touching yet. “Can I?” she asked shyly. Melody laughed. “Sure. Just be gentle, I swear I’m gonna pee my pants if anymore pressure is applied to my bladder.”
Yun laughed as she very gently put her hand down and let it lie there, feeling the growing life inside.
